Violence continues to rock cities in Britain

LONDON (AP) — Riots broke out again in London and eight provincial cities Saturday, and political sources said Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher is prepared to ask that special riot courts be set up to clamp down on the urban violence that has rocked Britain for the past week.

The new round of violence started only hours after overnight rioting died down in a dozen London districts and 11 other cities. Police said the latest disturbances were on a lower key than those of the previous night.

The political sources, who requested anonymity, said Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher is determined to nip in the bud what she sees as "copycat" outbreaks of violence among young hoodlums.

The prime minister and Home Secretary William Whitelaw are ready to announce Monday in the House of Commons the plan to establish riot courts to deal swiftly and severely with those arrested, the sources said.

Scotland Yard reported fresh outbreaks of violence in Battersea and Brixton in south London and disturbances in Walthamstow in northeast London where hundreds of Asian youths screaming "We Want Skinheads!" raced through the streets.

A spokesman said police in Brixton were using new tactics to split up groups before they can grow larger. He said as a result clashes were confined and short-lived.

"We are adopting a non-confrontation policy, and it seems to be paying off," a police officer told reporters at the scene in Brixton.

The Scotland Yard spokesman said a crowd of mainly black West Indians threw bricks and bottles at police in Brixton and three arrests were made. Thirty people were arrested in Battersea, where youths threw gasoline bombs, police said.

Police in Birmingham, Wolverhampton, Stockport, Crewe, Leicester, Nottingham and Derby, all in the English Midlands, and Hull in the northeast reported outbreaks of violence by gangs of black and white youths who rampaged through central shopping districts, breaking windows.

Birmingham police sealed off the shopping district and said "some arrests" were made. Eleven were detained in Stockport and five arrested in Wolverhampton.

Most police leaves in London were canceled and reinforcements were on standby in cities in the Midlands, northwest and northeast of England which have high concentrations of immigrants.

Several hundred youths, whites and non-whites, appeared in London courts Saturday charged with riotous behavior, looting and other offenses. Some received sentences of up to three months in jail, some were remanded in custody until Monday and others, including a boy of 12, were released into the custody of their parents.

Renewed violence erupted Saturday afternoon in London's northeast Walthamstow district when some 350 Asian youths rampaged through the main shopping street, smashing windows and screaming abuse about the young right-wing whites called "skinheads" because of their hairstyles. It was the second straight day of daylight disturbances.

Police reported 14 arrests and one policeman slightly injured as the youths, after arguments with older Asians urging calm, set off down the main street, screaming, "We Want Skinheads!"

The family dog can, and sometimes does, bite

By SUE FAHLGREN
Staff Writer

If rabies isn't enough to worry about during the summer, maybe dog bites themselves are. Midland plastic surgeon Dr. Terry Tubb said Midland is experiencing an epidemic of serious dog bites and he's not exactly sure why.

"We've got a little epidemic now," Tubb said recently. "Large dogs have mutilated three children in a month, from age 14 months to six years. People just don't believe that the family dog or a neighbor's dog can hurt them," he said. "In the last case, the child could have died very easily. I just sit here thinking every minute that that child could have been killed."

Tubb said the most recent of the three cases he's seen in the past month involved a 14-month-old child who tried to pet the family dog while the dog was eating. The husky, also 14 months old, turned and attacked the child.

"It (the dog) fractured the child's palate and ripped open his eyelid," the doctor said. "That old wives' tale about growing up together is not true," Tubb said.

"I've been working in Midland three years," he continued, "and in that time, I've probably seen 20 dog bites. It seems to be worse right now than ever. I don't know why. There are just more children bitten in the face right now."

Tubb has an array of color slides of children he's treated who have been mauled and mutilated by dogs and cats. "When I see them, it's too late," he said. "I can't make it all better. I can irrigate the bites and spend a lot of time putting in a lot of loose stitches and maybe in a year they'll have something that is not a good scar, but an acceptable scar."

Tubb said the possibility of a severe dog bite cannot be taken too seriously. "I spent some time in Kentucky and saw a lot of horse kicks to the face," he explained. "Scars from a dog bite are really as bad as a horse kick to the face."

Although situations vary, he said, there are some common similarities in the severe bite cases. For instance, he said, the cases usually result from bites of larger dogs. "It's usually larger dogs because smaller dogs don't have the force," Tubb said. "To fracture a palate it takes some 40-100 Gs. That's got to be a lot of force." He added smaller dogs do bite, "but a lot of those (cases) I'll never see," since a lighter bite would be less severe.

In addition, children are the more common victim of severe bites. "They're head-level with the dogs — right in front of them," he said. Further, "if it's an older dog, it could be jealous (of the child)."

Another common hazard is a lack of fear in the child. "Usually, they (the children) are not afraid of the family dogs and two out of three times, he is the one who does it," Tubb said. "Training doesn't matter, either. It's an animal instinct (to bite), a natural reflex.

"Bites occur most commonly when the animal is feeding or drinking and the child will waddle up to it and grab it," Tubb continued. "That's what I think happened to two of these. And it's worse when it's hot and the animal's uncomfortable.

"No child is safe with any dog," Tubb said flatly. "I don't think there's any dog — especially when it's feeding — that won't attack a child. The child is a little bit of a competition for attention and can't defend himself."

In another case, a 6-year-old Odessa boy was attacked when he fell within the reach of a neighbor's guard dog. Linda Wadsworth of Odessa said her son Zack got "17 stitches right below his eye" when a friend's Labrador retriever tore at the child's face.

"It was supposed to be a real mild mannered dog," Ms. Wadsworth said. Visiting his father, "Zack was climbing the tree in the backyard and the dog next door went out on his chain. Nobody had pre-warned him there was a dog back there."

When Zack was attacked, she said, "I was shocked. He was mangled."

Two and a half months after the attack, Ms. Wadsworth said, "I'm real paranoid of dogs now. We had a doberman that I got rid of immediately," she said. "A pet should come second to a child and should be taken out of the home if it's a hazard."

As for Zack, "He's real paranoid now," Ms. Wadsworth said. "I've got to get him over that, but I've got to get over it first. He's healed up great. He'll have a real bad scar for the rest of his life, though," she said, indicating a jagged scar that runs up the right side of his face.

"I just keep thinking, 'what if it happens to a little girl?' " she continued. "She'll have to carry that scar

HEARST

NEW YORK — In this space a few weeks ago, I ran a commencement address suggested by Professor Jacob Neusner of Brown University which was rough on college students and, in its way, derisive of their faculties as well.

However, mail has indicated the students are generally outraged and feel that perhaps the major fault with education in America has considerably more to do with faculty short comings than was indicated by the professor. There is certainly enough blame to be spread around, and far be it from me to stick one side or the other with the whole burden of our sliding educational system.

U.S.-based commandos captured in Cuba

MIAMI (AP) — Five commandos trained in the United States and intent on assassinating Cuban President Fidel Castro and sabotaging industrial plants were captured after landing east of Havana, Havana radio reported Saturday.

A Miami-based group of anti-Castro Cuban exiles claimed the five as members and said their capture would not deter the group from its goal of overthrowing the communist dictator.

"We know the men are ours," said Humberto Perez, who identified himself as chief of military operations for Alpha 66. "But this isn't going to stop us."

Perez said he could not identify the five men Havana radio said were captured on July 5 because Alpha 66 has sent more than 40 commandos to Cuba in recent months. He said Alpha 66 sent six men to Cuba on July 4.

He said he discussed the reported capture Saturday with Alpha 66 members who are training for clandestine missions in Cuba.

"Everyone said they want to continue, they want to go to Cuba," he said in a telephone interview.

Alpha 66 claims thousands of members throughout the United States. It has long been one of the most influential of the dozens of splinter exile grou0s that have tried to keep alive the 22-year dream of ousting Castro.

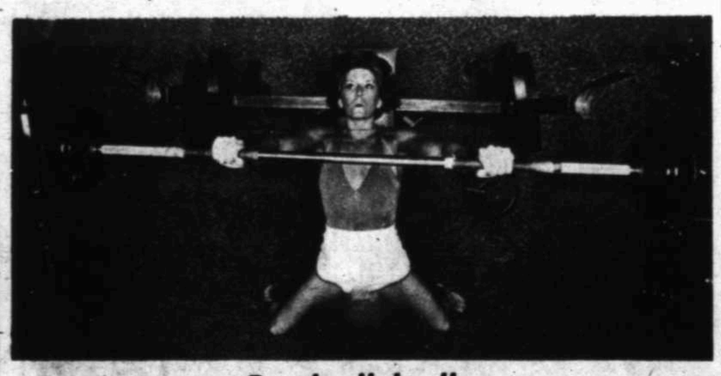

The radio report, monitored in Miami, said the five "counterrevolutionary elements" carried North American-made weapons and explosives and had left the United States "in a speedy craft with the purpose of infiltrating Cuba."

The broadcast said the five were captured by combined forces of the Cuban Interior Ministry and the Cuban Armed Forces Ministry on the northern coast of Matanzas province.

The commandos, carrying provisions and propaganda, planned an assassination attempt against Castro on July 26, the radio report said. The date marks the 28th anniversary of a strategic victory by Castro's revolutionary forces and will be celebrated in the eastern Cuban city of Las Tunas.

A spokesman for the FBI in Miami said he had no information about the report.

Snelson, Craddick ready for special session

By DORIAN MARTIN
Staff Writer

The Texas Legislature will reconvene Monday in a special session called by Gov. Bill Clements, and Midland's congressmen will be present and are expected to play a large part in the proceedings.

"I anticipate it will last the full 30 days," said Sen. W.E. "Pete" Snelson.

Special sessions are not that unusual. "We have them every couple of years," Snelson said. In fact, Snelson thinks the exception is when special sessions are not called since the legislature is in regular session only during odd numbered years.

This special session will involve five issues.

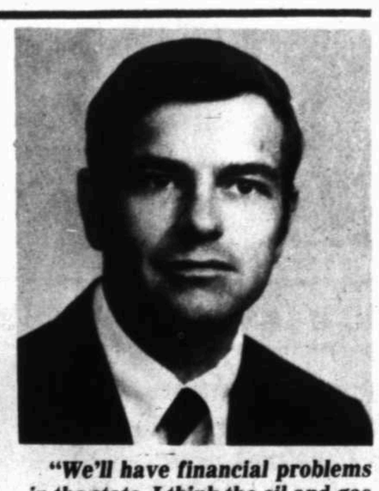

"One of the most important issues is redistricting," said Rep. Tom Craddick. He explained that the House redistricting plan had passed both legislative bodies and had received Gov. Clements' approval. However, a lawsuit has been filed against the plan.

THE SENATE redistricting plan also received the legislators' support, but did not make it past the governor's desk. The plan has been returned for further study to the redistricting board, on which Snelson serves.

Two different versions of the third redistricting plan, involving Texas congressional seats, passed the legislative houses. "There were quite a number of differences," said Snelson. The strife is due to the positioning of district lines.

"I'm happy that my service is recognized and I'm also pleased for the constituents who have elected me to the Senate."
— Sen. W.E. "Pete" Snelson

"We'll have financial problems in the state. I think the oil and gas industry will be in the forefront to take the brunt."
— Rep. Tom Craddick

This redistricting problem will be given to a joint committee composed of five senators and five representatives in order to adjust the differences.

Midland could be affected by the redistricting. One plan would switch Midland from the 19th district and Kent Hance to the 21st district and Tom Loeffler.

"My opinion is that we'll be in Congressman Loeffler's district," said Craddick.

ALSO ON THE special session's agenda will be a "constitutional amendment that will reinstate the ad valorem tax," said Craddick. The money from the tax receipts will be used for college construction on campuses other than those in the UT and A&M systems.

The issue, according to Snelson, will be whether to eliminate the tax, which is the governor's wish, or to lower the tax from the original 10 cents to three cents and continue funding colleges. Another option would be to eliminate funding college construction completely.

The Texas Medical Practice Act also will be considered. "Under the Sunset Law, every agency comes up for periodic review," said the senator. The Texas Medical Examiners Board is currently up for reinstatement. A disagreement between the House and the Senate kept the act from passing during the regular session. However, this act will be completed during the special session, said Snelson, because "otherwise, there will be no laws governing the practice of medicine in Texas." The current Medical Practice Act expires Sept. 1.

Two other topics will be considered — a water trust fund and a property tax reform.

The water trust fund, which is being pushed by House Speaker Billy Clayton, will "save and set aside part of the trust fund to solve Texas water problems in the future," said Snelson.

REVISION OF the property tax code will be to help clean up the original code that was adopted two years ago.

Inmates rebel in New York, Florida

By The Associated Press

Prison inmates rebelled Saturday in correctional facilities in Florida and New York, vandalizing buildings and setting fires. No guards or staff members were injured, but 11 inmates were injured.

Family visits were canceled and officials prepared to transfer some inmates of the DeSoto Correctional Institution at Arcadia, Fla., after inmates went on a 2½-hour spree, burning three buildings and vandalizing three others. Eight inmates were hurt, two seriously enough to be hospitalized, said prison superintendent Harry Singletary.

Maximum security prisoners protesting their treatment by guards and courts went on a 12-hour rampage in the Westchester County jail at Valhalla, N.Y., bashing in doors and walls, breaking water pipes to make weapons and raiding the commissary before returning to their cells at dawn. No hostages were taken and no one was seriously hurt, but authorities estimated damage to the overcrowded jail at $4 million.

DeSoto guards had rounded up all 720 prisoners in the recreation yard after the early morning violence, Singletary said.

"We're in the process right now of dealing with the inmate population ...," he said. "We have to decide who we need to deal with and how."

The disturbance, which started at 1 a.m. EDT and was under control by 3:20 a.m., apparently began when guards ordered televisions turned off, said Department of Corrections spokesman H.F. Rayner.

"When they turned off the TVs and started the regular count, one dorm refused to cooperate with the count. The inmates left the dorm and started to run amuck," Rayner said.

There was damage to the kitchen, one dormitory, several offices, a classroom and the hospital, but Singletary said all the buildings would be repaired.

The disturbance at the 51-year-old Westchester facility began late Friday afternoon and ended just before dawn Saturday when inmates returned to their cells.

Westchester Count Correction Dpartment officials said inmates crashed through steel and concrete partitions, broke lighting and toilet fixtures and smashed furniture. Water covered the floors after pipes were ripped out.

A man who identified himself as inmate John Bibasco, 28, of Yonkers, told The Associated Press by telephone that inmates also had stripped the commissary.

Three inmates were hurt but at least two of these injuries were accidentally self-inflicted, officials said.

Prison officials met with inmate leaders for two hours Saturday morning. But in a telephone interview with the AP, inmate spokesman Marvin Smith said the inmates and correction officials had not agreed on how to resolve jail problems.

Another disturbance could happen at any time, "and it could be worse," Smith said. "So far, this has been a peaceful protest. We don't want to hurt anyone or get hurt."

At the meeting inmates complained that county courts are too slow and that they lack adequate legal aid. Smith added that they demanded a review what he termed excessive bail.

Inmates also demanded a review of jury selection procedures and investigation of alleged attacks on inmates by corrections officers, he said.

Deputy administrative criminal court judge Isaac Rubin denied charges of excessive court delays and said Westchester "has the highest disposition rate" in the state. No one is held in jail for more than seven months before trial, he said.

And, he said, "the defendants delay trials themselves. They have able lawyers or act as their own lawyers and they delay the proceedings themselves."

The takeover came one day after Westchester County executive Alfred Del Bello appointed a task force to look into overcrowding at the jail. Officials said it has a capacity of 263, but estimated it now holds 440 inmates.

Violence erupts after shooting of black man

The two white men were attacked several blocks from the shooting in the Culmer district, one of Miami's oldest black neighborhoods. They were hospitalized.

Culmer was among areas devastated in May 1980 race riots that left 18 people dead and caused more than $100 million damage. Some of those killed were white motorists who were pulled from cars by blacks and then fatally beaten.

Police cordoned off the district after the violence broke out early Saturday, warning motorists to stay away.

Police Sgt. Robert Hill said Saturday afternoon that the district was "very quiet." He added: "There has been no trouble today and we're not taking any special precautions."

The disturbances began after 26-year-old Thaddis Johnson was killed by a white plainclothes policeman, officials said. Police refused to identify any of the officers involved in the shooting.

The death occurred after two officers responded to reports of sniper fire, and found themselves caught in an exchange of gunfire between Johnson and two Latins, police said.

The officers jumped from their car and shouted "Halt, police," said Sgt. John Speisman.

Johnson then fired one shot at the policemen with a .32-caliber pistol, missing them, the sergeant said. One of the officers returned fire with a shotgun, hitting Johnson in the chest and killing him instantly, Speisman said.

The two Latins fled on foot. Police said they were being sought.

As backup units arrived after the shooting, an angry crowd of about 200 blacks gathered and shouted obscenities and insults at police, said Assistant Police Chief Herbert Breslow. The crowd tossed rocks and bottles, he said.

Speisman said that during the trouble, a group of blacks beat up two white men several blocks from the shooting scene.

Police said Michael Stip, 23, and George Grayfeather, 39, were hospitalized in good condition with multiple facial cuts and bruises.

"They were beaten to hell," said officer Gus Clemente. "There was blood on their arms, legs and coming out of one man's eye."

Clemente said that when police arrived to aid Stip and Grayfeather, they were taunted by about 50 to 100 blacks. He said one person shouted: "Where are your witnesses now?"

The 1980 riots broke out after four white former Dade County policemen were acquitted in the beating death of black Miami insurance man Arthur McDuffie. Trouble flared again last July in the Liberty City district after police tried to stop a robbery.

Man slapped with citation for whistling at woman

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Scott Marks may think twice before he whistles at another woman. Last time, he got slapped — with a citation.

Marks, 18, was accused of "offensive whistling" and violating the city's noise ordinance after he whistled at a woman who was walking down the street.

Officer Len Wells, who issued the ticket Monday night, said a wolf whistle "could offend the dignity of women.

"There was a lady walking from the intersection and a car went by," Wells recalled. "Someone inside made this horrendous whistle ... loud, the kind made with your fingers between your teeth."

The subject of the incident disppeared before Wells and his partner could catch up with her, but they did latch on to the whistler.

Anti-Klan protesters break up KKK rally attempt

MERIDEN, Conn. (AP) — Counter-demonstrators hurled bottles, rocks and cans at about 30 Ku Klux Klan members Saturday, scuttling a Klan rally. At least two anti-Klan protesters were arrested, authorities said.

Police quickly quelled the disturbance, which was watched by several hundred area residents. No injuries were reported.

At a Klan rally in March, police were unable to contain counter-demonstrators, and some two dozen people — mostly police and Klansmen — were injured. On Saturday, Klansmen were guarded by a stepped up force of local officers and state police with dogs.

The Klansmen tried to gather for a rally at a barricaded traffic island in the center of the city, but took shelter behind a nearby building after being confronted by about 30 people from the International Committee Against Racism.

Bill Wilkinson, national leader of the Invisible Empire of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, said in a telephone interview Friday that he was confident police would protect the Klansmen.

"The state police will be there. Rest assured they will be much more aggressive than they were last time and we have been assured they will prevent any recurrence of what happened last March."

Wilkinson took part in the March 21 rally, but did not plan to attend Saturday's rally.

Molasses fumes kill three workers

NORTON, Kan. (AP) — Three grain company workers died Saturday when they were overcome by fumes from molasses in a storage pit at a grain elevator complex, authorities said.

The dead included Don Stutterheim, manager of the Reich Grain Co. elevator, officials said.

Dr. Roger Hartman, Norton County Coroner, said autopsies showed the men suffocated from a lack of oxygen and the toxic fumes.

In addition to Stutterheim, the dead were identified as Phillip Poage and Darrell Kieswetter. All were in their 50s and from Norton.

Hospitals call for volunteers as strike continues

BOSTON (AP) — National Guardsmen washed clothes and cooked meals at state hospitals Saturday as legislators tried to end a public employees strike by resolving a budget stalemate that has frozen paychecks.

The state Department of Mental Health called for volunteers — especially nurses — to fill in for striking workers at eight state hospitals and eight state schools.

"We expect an escalation (of the strike) as the day proceeds," said Brooke Pope of the state Department of Mental Health. "A lot of the staff have been working double or triple shifts and they're beginning to burn out."

Members of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees walked off their jobs Friday after missing two paychecks due to the budget battle in the legislature.

Massachusetts entered the 1982 fiscal year on July 1 without a budget in place, halting all state spending, including benefits for more than 100,000 welfare families.

Senate President William Bulger said he was optimistic the entire state budget package would be ready for a floor vote by Sunday. However, the House made no immediate move to reconvene.

Progress toward a budget settlement was reported late in the week, but the state Senate opposes passage of a stopgap measure that would provide some funds until the $6.3 billion budget is finished.

Even then, it could be another week or two before state agencies can issue checks. Once the budget is enacted, it goes to the governor, who has up to 10 days to veto particular items.

House and Senate leaders have been arguing for weeks over which state workers would be dismissed to free more money for cities and towns. The communities face the loss of $480 million in local tax because of Proposition 2½, the state's new property tax-cutting measure.

Civil Defense spokesman Richard Beaver said 140 support troops from various National Guard units took the place of cooks, laundry workers and guards at the Worcester, Danvers, Cushing and Taunton state hospitals, the Glavin and Hogan regional centers and the Paul Dever state school in Taunton. Another 450 Guardsmen were stationed at barracks in case the strike spread.

Janice Dolnick, acting regional services administrator at Taunton State Hospital, said that facility's 218 in-patients were supervised Saturday morning by 50 people, many of them administrators or community out-patient workers called in to help.

They were joined by 10 National Guardsmen who prepared food and performed maintenance tasks.

"I think we'll be adequately staffed if the strike just lasts for the weekend," she said. "But if it's any longer, there will be a serious problem."

John Harvey, a union spokesman for AFSCME's Council 93, said "serious escalation is in progress right now."

Writers have tentative settlement

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The Writers Guild of America reached a tentative agreement with major film and TV producers Saturday after a 13-week walkout, the third union strike here in 12 months.

Ratification of the pact, which gives writers substantial boosts in minimum pay as well as their first share of home video profits, is required by the union board of directors and the general membership.

It was not immediately known if the 8,500 writers would return to work in the interim.

The WGA board was scheduled to meet today, with a general membership meeting set for later this week, said union spokeswoman Shannon Boyd.

The settlement was expected to avert a serious delay in fall TV programming. Some delay was expected because few scripts were written before the strike began April 11.

Last year's 10-week strike by actors shoved the 1980-81 fall season well into winter.

The writers had reached agreement earlier with a group of independent producers of such shows as NBC's "Tonight Show" and "Saturday Night Live" for a package that included 2.75 percent of the gross on shows made for pay TV after producers recouped certain costs.

The tenative settlement with major producers came at 3 a.m. PDT Saturday after a marathon bargaining session that began at 10 a.m. Friday, Ms. Boyd said.

One of the key arrangements worked out in the four-year-contract was over pay TV residuals for writers. That issue was at the center of strikes by actors and musicians last year and of the threatened directors strike this year.

Ms. Boyd said the contract would give writers 2 percent of the gross of shows made for pay TV after the producer recouped his investment at a set rate of $1 million per hour for videotaped shows and $1.25 million per hour for filmed shows.

Earlier in negotiations, the writers had asked for 4.5 percent while producers offered what the actors got — 1.5 percent when a pay TV show had played 10 days on each system within a year, and the same percent after 100,000 cassette or discs had been sold.

The Directors Guild of America, which made an 11th-hour contract settlement with producers late last month, agreed on a 2 percent share in profits. Musicians, who struck for nearly six months over pay TV last year, failed to achieve residuals.

No rain forecast

Today's high temperature is expected to be in the mid-90s — not even close to the record of 106 set in 1964.

But with no rain and only 10 to 15 mph winds in today's forecast from the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, the mid-90s will be hot enough.

The record low for this date, set in 1936, was 55 degrees. The low tonight should be in the upper 60s. Sunset tonight will be at 8:57, with sunrise Monday at 6:52.

Extended forecasts

West Texas: Tuesday through Thursday — chance of afternoon and evening thunderstorms extreme south west Tuesday through Thursday and panhandle Thursday. Otherwise fair and rather warm. Highs in the 90s except near 102 Big Bend lowlands. Lows in the 60s and low 70s.

North Texas: Tuesday through Thursday — partly cloudy and hot. Highs in the upper 90s. Lows in the mid 70s.

South Texas: Tuesday through Thursday — partly cloudy with a chance of thundershowers. Little more likely southeast Texas. Overnight lows in the 70s except near 80 along the coast.

Child snatchings tough to police

By MACK SISK
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — It happens 100,000 times a year. A child is grabbed, hustled into a getaway car and secreted away.

It happened to the four children of Eunice Munford of Austin, Texas.

She said police would have shown more concern if her purse — instead of her children — had been snatched.

She said police viewed the snatching of her children as a "domestic squabble" because they had been taken away by her ex-husband, the father of the children.

"I found in my own experience that it would have been much easier (to get help from the police) if my ex-husband had taken my car — much easier."

Mrs. Munford works for the Texas Department of Human Resources and is Texas coordinator for Children's Rights, Inc., a Washington, D.C.-based organization made up of child-snatching victims.

The American Bar Association says 100,000 children are snatched from their mothers or fathers each year by ex-spouses who refuse to abide by legal custody orders.

Only 10 percent of the children — most of them taken after a divorce — are ever returned to the parent who was granted legal custody, the ABA estimated in its September 1980 Journal.

IF A NON-PARENT took a child under similar circumstances, it would be a violation of the "Little Lindbergh" federal kidnapping law and the full resources of the FBI would be used to track the culprit down.

However, several officials said, most law enforcement agencies have treated child snatchings as domestic quarrels, unsure how much time, resources and money the taxpayers were willing to expend to help distraught parents track down and seize custody of their children.

But as one of his last acts, President Jimmy Carter signed a child snatching law — effective July 1 — that put the federal government on record for the first time as frowning on the practice.

The law does three things — it standardizes child custody orders throughout the 50 states; allows the Federal Child Locator Service, set up to locate parents who skip out on child support payments, to also locate child snatchers; and it empowers the FBI to handle unlawful flight to avoid prosecution warrants issued by states in such cases.

MRS. MUNFORD said the law still leaves the parent mostly to his own resources to track down and retake custody of their children.

"It doesn't have much teeth," she said. "Even if the Parent Locator Service can assist these people, there's nothing they can do as far as enforcement..."

The new law empowers the FBI to act when state felony warrants are issued, but Texas is only one of six states having felony child snatching laws, and local prosecutors often are reluctant to act.

"There's not a hell of a lot you can do if you're dealing with someone who doesn't have any roots, any close ties to anywhere. It's awfully easy to take a small child and get on Greyhound and say bye, and how in the hell are you going to find them," said Charles Conaway, first assistant district attorney in San Antonio.

Conaway said the burden of proof is placed on the complaining parent to find the children before the state felony law is invoked.

JOHN WARREN, 29, a San Antonian who works for the state welfare department, said it took him $20,000 to hire a lawyer and private detective and six months to finally gain physical custody of his 5-year-old daughter in June.

"Everybody has a lot of sympathy for you, but nobody will enforce the law," Warren said after seeking help from police, the district attorney's office, the Dallas court that granted him custody, the sheriff's department in Corpus Christi and the FBI.

Warren obtained a "writ of attachment" for arrest of his ex-wife and return of his child, but he said none of the law enforcement agencies would help him track her down.

Warren won custody of his daughter last Dec. 8 in Dallas, but he never saw the child again until last month when the girl's mother voluntarily surrendered her to him in front of a Dallas church.

"She told me she gave up, that she couldn't run any more, that she didn't have any money," said Warren.

Mrs. Munford said she hired a lawyer in California and the police went along in an unofficial capacity while she took her four children from school and her ex-husband's home a year after she gained custody.

"It's just a helpless situation," she said. "I couldn't believe something like this could happen and the law wouldn't help me and protect me. The children are the real victims of this. My children were the victims. The kids love their father and their mother. They don't want to be pulled between one and the other."

CRAIG C. HATCHETT, head of the Child Locator Service in Austin, said it's difficult for his office to enforce the new federal law.

Hatchett said because of lack of manpower and state funds to locate victims of child snatchings, persons using the service will be charged a fee. He said he's not sure how far the state can go to validate custody orders, and that sometimes both parents have obtained custody of their children in different states.

"The Parent Locator Service is not worth very much, anyway," Warren said. "It's very unsuccessful in finding even fathers who don't pay child support..."

Legislators prepare for session

many more items, if any, in the session," said Craddick. He explained that these five items need to be considered immediately whereas other pieces of legislation would be able to wait for the next session.

In looking back at the past session, Craddick said, "The session was a lot slower than before." There were 5,471 pieces of legislation in the form of bills and resolutions introduced into both houses. Craddick estimated that approximately 600 of these were bills.

Craddick cited the governor's crime package, especially the drug laws.

The legislature also passed the initial part of a constitutional amendment that will increase the welfare ceiling from $80 million a year to one percent of the state tax revenue, Craddick remembered. The measure still must be voted on by the Texas public.

HE ALSO mentioned the state interest rate hike toward national levels. "I think this bill stirred less interest than last time because of the high interest rates around the country," he said. "And people are concerned whether they can afford to borrow money at all."

Another law that pleases Craddick is one that originated in the Natural Resources Committee, of which he is chairman. The legislation gives the Railroad Commission authorization over the injection of hydrocarbon storage. Without this law, the federal government would have taken over the program.

Craddick also sponsored a bill giving discounts on homeowner insurance policy rates and premiums if the homeowner has his property checked by police officers for safety from theft. He hopes the bill will decrease the crime rate which, in turn, will keep the rates down.

"It was a very busy session for me because I was involved in many important issues," said Snelson.

Snelson's top legislation included bilingual education, curriculum regulation, public school financing, college construction and Senate redistricting.

SNELSON ALSO sponsored a successful bill that set up an early childhood intervention program. This statewide search program will benefit handicapped children from birth to 3 years old. Snelson hopes this program will help prevent institutionalizing these children.

For his efforts throughout the session, Snelson was recognized by "Texas Monthly" magazine as one of the top ten Texas legislators. "One is always pleased when their efforts are recognized by someone," Snelson said.

"I'm happy that my service is recognized and I'm also pleased for the constituents who have elected me to the Senate," he added. Attributing his success to a good staff, he also noted that he handled several assignments "that put me on the front row."

Although their attention is now focused on the special session, both legislators are able to forecast issues that will be in the forefront in the legislature's future.

"There's a possibility there'll be another special session later," Snelson anticipated. The legislature may be reconvened after federal funds from Washington are announced to adjust the Texas budget and allocated the money.

HE DOES NOT foresee any new taxes. "Economic good times are still ahead for our state," he said.

However, his counterpart in the House of Representatives was not as optimistic.

"We'll have financial problems in the state," predicted Craddick, due to the need to continue funding government programs that have recently been started.

Therefore, Craddick says the government will need more money, which will come in the form of more taxes.

"I think the oil and gas industry will be in the forefront to take the brunt," he said.

Craddick predicted that the money will be raised in three ways — a refinery tax, a personal income tax and an increase in the oil and gas severance tax.

Despite Craddick's warning, neither legislator is anxious to levy new taxes and Snelson pointed out that Texas taxes have not been raised for several years.

Four inmates attack guard, escape

GROESBECK, Texas (AP) — Four inmates overpowered a guard, knocked him unconscious and escaped from the Limestone County jail Saturday, the sheriff said.

Officers began a search for the men on foot shortly after deputies found a cell open with guard David Gillum lying nearby, said Sheriff Dennis Walker.

The incident began about 7 p.m. Saturday, Walker said, when Gillum opened the door to a cell containing six prisoners.

"Whether he was putting someone in or out, we don't know," Walker said.

Judge strikes down plan to redistrict Texas House

By KEN HERMAN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A state district judge Saturday voided a plan to redistrict the Texas House, saying the plan passed by the Legislature and approved by Gov. Bill Clements violated the state constitution.

State District Judge Harley Clark ruled that the plan violated a provision of the Texas Constitution which says county lines should be crossed by legislative district lines only when necessary.

The redistricting for the 150 state House members was challenged by three Mexican-American legislators.

CLARK FOUND 12 instances of county lines being crossed unnecessarily, involving El Paso, Tarrant, Bexar, Dallas, Harris and other counties.

"I'm going to strike the whole thing down and give a chance for somebody to redo the whole thing," said Clark.

The judge said Rep. Tim Von Dohlen, chairman of the House Committee on Regions, Compacts and Districts, testified the committee did not try to avoid crossing county lines.

Assistant Attorney General Richard Gray told Clark the ruling would be appealed to the state Supreme Court.

Rep. Robert Valles, one of the plaintiffs, said the decision gives Hispanics a "fresh shot" at the representation they deserve.

Unless Clark's decision is overturned, a new House redistricting plan would have to be drawn by a board made up of top state officials. Redistricting of the Senate is already on the board's agenda because Clements vetoed the Senate plan approved by the Legislature.

Miss A&M wins pageant

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Sheri Ryman, Miss Texas A&M University, was named Miss Texas for 1981 at the conclusion of a televised Saturday night beauty pageant.

Miss Ryman will represent Texas at the Miss America pageant at Atlantic City in September. She was crowned Miss Texas 1981 by Terri Eoff, her predecessor who helped has the television pageant.

Finishing behind Miss Ryman were Gloria Gilbert, Miss Mineral Wells; Alice Kindle, Miss Duncanville; Belinda Moreland, Miss Lubbock, and Monique Woody Zummo, Miss Beaumont.

If Miss Ryman is unable to complete her term as Miss Texas, Miss Gilbert, as first runner-up, will be asked to fulfill her obligations.

Also among the 10 finalists were Lucy Fryman, Miss Round Rock; Gina Pounders, Miss Oak Cliff; Lolly Hatcher, Miss Wichita County; Linda Davis, Miss Panola County, and Kim Acker, Miss Blackland Area.

Editor's Report

school district in San Diego County administered a literacy test, scaled at the eighth-grade level, to prospective teachers and teachers' aides. It must be assumed that the results proved a shocker to trustees and parents alike, for 55 percent of the aides and 35 percent of the prospective teachers failed one or more parts."

The district tried again by downgrading the tests to the seventh-grade level in reading and writing and to the sixth-grade level in arithmetic. The results, as again reported by the Examiner:

"Given such gracious latitude, only 35 percent of the aides failed this time, as did 20 percent of the proud teachers, possessors of bachelor of arts degrees and owners of state teaching credentials."

Such woes have not been restricted to San Diego. In Los Angeles, 13 percent of a group of teacher applicants failed a basic English test. And this, believe it or not, after they had undergone a fifth year of academic studies and practice teaching.

We also have been having our share of school problems here in New York. Just last week two high schools, Benjamin Franklin and Charles Evans Hughes, announced they would close temporarily at the end of 1982 and 1983 respectively. Both have records of low attendance, low academic achievement, and less than high-quality teaching. They have the lowest graduation rates in Manhattan.

This is the second time in a decade that school officials in this great city have had to shut classroom doors for a period and start all over again in order to raise standards.

Pupil violence played a tragic part in these decisions. Dozens of teachers picketed the Hughes school last fall when rampant rowdyism made the place unsafe for teaching. So while we are going about deploring the presence of unqualified teachers in some of our schools, in these cases the ball is again in the students' court.

Back in 1897, my grandmother, Phoebe Apperson Hearst, was cofounder of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers -- the PTA. For many decades that organization has contributed heavily to harmony between students and faculty, particularly at the elementary and high school levels.

Today in the suburbs the PTA still has great value, but because of shifting populations it has lost some of its effectiveness in the larger industrial cities and among the urban poor. In fact, there are 27,000 local PTA chapters working today, but few are in major cities. Something as innovative as the PTA is needed now, and the best thinking we can muster should be aimed toward solving the educational problems eating at our foundations.

School officials tell us that academic programs will be revised and administrative procedures restructured. All well and good, but if it doesn't capture the students' imagination and the parents' cooperation, what good will come of it?

The point is, we've been slipping and, if the United States is to continue to be known as the best-educated country in the world, it's up to all of us to become more involved in restoring the efficiency and dignity of our American educational system.

for the rest of her life. I just have two boys, but a girl...," her voice trailed.

"Zack didn't go to school for the last few weeks," she explained. "He was embarrassed and didn't want people to see him. He wouldn't go out of the house. He's not embarrassed now, but he's still scared."

Both Tubb and Ms. Wadsworth agree parents and pet owners need to take precautions.

"Anybody with large dogs with children in the neighborhood is liable," Dr. Tubb pointed out. "There seem to be more large dogs running free in neighborhoods. Most large dogs ought to be able to be put in a pen. Owners have to have them in a pen the child can't get into," he continued. "Even if it seems their family dog is tame, there's a chance they'll do it (bite) given the right set of circumstances. A child should never be left alone with it."

Ms. Wadsworth said, "Something should be done about the trained attack dogs. Children can't read 'Beware of Dog' (signs)," she said.

Advising parents to be cautious, she said, "if you're visiting a friend, I wouldn't take it on their word that the dog won't bite."

Tubb advised parents whose family dog has bitten a child to get rid of it. Although it may be heartbreaking at first, he said, "if something can be done to prevent one of these, it's worth it."

However, Tubb is somewhat skeptical about his own advice. "I'll see another one (case) — this weekend," Tubb said. "I just don't think people are aware that Spot can bite Jane."

Reagan advisers find they don't come cheap

WASHINGTON (AP) — Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige lives in a simple, white frame house on a busy street in Georgetown. The place sure doesn't look fancy, yet it cost Baldrige $250,000.

That's a lot of money, but some of President Reagan's other advisers have paid a few pretty pennies more in the hyper-priced Washington real estate market.

——White House chief of staff James A. Baker III paid $715,000 for a house on one of the most fashionable streets in Northwest Washington.

——William H. Draper III, who awaits conformation as chairman of the Export-Import Bank, paid $775,000 for his federal-style house in Georgetown.

Records kept by Rufus S. Lusk and Son, a private real estate research company, show also that five other Reagan advisers paid between $265,000 and $460,000.

Lusk's records, which are compiled from publicly recorded real estate deeds, show also that Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. paid $415,000 for his new, orange brick house in Maryland, just over the District line; that Agriculture Secretary John R. Block paid $317,500 for his District residence, and White House counselor Edwin Meese III paid $265,000 for his red brick house in suburban McLean, Va.

Edwin L. Harper, deputy director of the Office of Management and Budget, paid $302,500 for his District home, according to Lusk.

The folks in the Reagan administration are not the only ones to live in expensive homes. Lusk records show that Draper puchased his home from Howard M. Williams, who was chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission under President Carter; that Block bought his house from Carter's deputy secretary of state, Warren Christopher.

Peter McCoy, top aide to first lady Nancy Reagan, bought his house for $460,000 from Charles Duncan Jr., Carter's energy secretary, according to Lusk.

And certainly not all of Reagan's advisers have exclusive addresses. Secretary of Housing and Urban Development Samuel R. Pierce Jr., for example, lives in a standard high-rise apartment building on a crowded shopping strip near the University of the District of Columbia.

While the price of what other folks pay for houses is a hot topic on the cocktail circuit, it's not one that buyers generally like to talk about. Reagan's advisers are no exception.

"He does not want to talk about his own real estate situation," said Leslie Edmunds, an aide to Labor's Ray Donovan. "He bought a beautiful house overlooking the Potomac, and he enjoys it."

At the Commerce Department, Baldrige aide Mary Nimmo said her boss doesn't want to discuss his Washington house "because people back in Connecticut might get the wrong idea about it."

At the Defense Department, Lt. Col. Michael Burch, an aide to Weinberger, said that Weinberger's Washington residence is smaller and probably less expensive than the one he sold in San Francisco.

And in the White House, Baker aide Margaret Glasscock, said neither Baker nor his wife want to discuss their Washington home, a handsome brick colonial with a circular driveway on fashionable Foxhall Road.

Jared Artho, 4, is comforted by rescue workers after being trapped in a water well 210 feet below the ground. Artho fell into the well Friday and spent two hours at the bottom before being pulled out with a rope.

Mother rejoices at son's rescue

MILO CENTER, Texas (AP) — Virginia Artho rejoiced Saturday and gave thanks that her 4-year-old son had both the courage and the strength to hang on to a rope while rescue workers hauled him from the depths of an abandoned irrigation well.

"This is just the best day of my life," Mrs. Artho said Saturday after she was reunited with her son Jared, who was not seriously injured when he toppled 260 feet to the sandy bottom of the well Friday morning. "We are planning a thanksgiving mass, but I don't know when it will be."

Mrs. Artho, who gave birth to a daughter on Thursday, said she was in her hospital room watching television with her husband when she saw a news report about the rescue attempt on her father-in-law's farm.

"Soon as we heard, we called my father-in-law's house. My father-in-law said the boy was OK and was coming to the hospital in an ambulance," said Mrs. Artho. "I insisted on being taken to the emergency room."

Jared was examined and released from the Hereford hospital Friday, but Mrs. Artho had to remain in the hospital overnight.

The boy and his two brothers were watching their uncle fill the well with sand when he fell, said Mrs. Artho.

"He wanted to see the hole. He slipped on the sand (around the mouth of the well) and fell in," said Mrs. Artho.

Carey Black, one of 15 volunteer firemen who responded to the rescue call, said he could see the boy lodged against the side of the well about 75 feet down when he first arrived.

Judge rescues kidnapped wife

VIDOR, Texas (AP) — A quick-thinking municipal judge enabled his wife to escape from a man holding her hostage by ramming his luxury sedan into the rear of her compact car, police said.

Sandra Price and family friend Bob Merrill were abducted at knifepoint from her home about 10 a.m. Friday by a man demanding that authorities release an Orange County jail inmate, said Vidor Police Chief J.L. "Butch" Reynolds.

Merrill was released unharmed about two hours later, but Mrs. Price remained a captive while her abductor, driving her car, drove through two southeast Texas counties, stopping to negotiate with her husband by phone for the release of inmate Andy Carroll Simmons, said Reynolds.

Mrs. Price escaped when her husband, Vidor Municipal Judge Rodney Price, used his Lincoln Continental to ram his wife's Toyota on a rural road where the judge had agreed to exchange the prisoner for his wife, said Reynolds.

The impact knocked the man forward and allowed Mrs. Price to escape unharmed, said Reynolds, one of the officers who accompanied Price.

"It worked better than in the movies," said Orange County Chief Deputy Jim Adams.

Frank Mikeska, 21, of Houston, was arrested and arraigned before State District Judge Pat Clark on two counts of aggravated kidnapping, and single counts of aggravated robbery and unauthorized use of a motor vehicle.

Clark set bond for Mikeska, who remained in Orange County jail Saturday, at $275,000.

Price declined to comment on the abduction or rescue, saying his wife endured a bad ordeal and that it involved pending legal procedures.

Reynolds said police had no idea why the kidnapper demanded the release of Simmons. "That is the mystery of the day," he said, adding that authorities knew of no connection between Mikeska and Simmons other than they served time together in the Orange County jail.

Judge to distribute Hughes fortune

By SHARON HERBAUGH
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Pat Gregory was a small child growing up here when another Houston resident, Howard Robard Hughes Jr., was carving a financial and industrial empire out of the Hughes Tool Co.

"About all I knew of Mr. Hughes was that he was a rich and famous aviator who owned an oil tool company that was built next to the old brewery," Gregory said.

But beginning Monday, Gregory, who is now the judge presiding in Harris County Probate Court No. 2, will decide whether the fabled billionaire fathered a daughter, adopted a son, secretly married two women or was related to any of the 500 people who have staked claims to his estate.

He will also determine who gets how much of Hughes' estate, valued anywhere from $180 million to $2 billion.

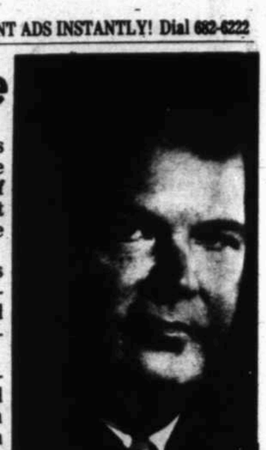

Gregory, 47, says TV cameras will be permitted in the courtroom.

Since 1976, when that burden was filed with his court, Gregory says he has been exposed to bizarre tales of Hughes' behavior, introduced to a horde of would-be heirs and made privy to some of the most private and intimate chapters in the life of the eccentric recluse.

"I've heard some of the most interesting vignettes and fascinating stories about that man ... the round-the-world trips, excitement of the homecomings and his relationships with Hollywood starlets," said Gregory.

Gregory presided over the jury trial that determined Hughes was a Texas resident when he died April 5, 1976. California and Nevada also claim Hughes was a legal resident, and the jury's decision has been appealed.

Gregory also oversaw the Texas trial that found the "Mormon will" to be a forgery — the same conclusion reached by a Nevada court — and later denied the existence of the so-called "Lost Will" that left the vast fortune to the Howard Hughes Medical Institute in Miami.

Innocent plant destroyed

BAYTOWN, Texas (AP) — U.S. probation officer Mike Williams says he is "really embarrassed" after informing on an "innocent" plant that he thought was marijuana.

The weed lost its life after Williams called the Baytown police and told them marijuana was growing outside his office in the federal building. Williams' picture appeared on the front page of a Baytown newspaper, along with the remnants of the supposedly illicit weed.

Williams said for more than a year he has casually observed the plant growing along a sidewalk. But on Thursday, he said, he noticed its leaves had been meticulously trimmed back, leaving only a five-foot stalk.

Class action suit represents mental patients

TYLER, Texas (AP) — Every patient or would-be patient at three state mental institutions has been certified as a plaintiff in a lawsuit seeking a complete re-evaluation of Texas' mental health care system.

U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice certified the lawsuit as a class-action, naming all patients at the Denton, Fort Worth and Austin state schools since 1974 as plaintiffs, as well as all those on a waiting list for treatment at the institutions.

The suit, originally filed in 1974, claims patients at the state facilities regress, do not get sufficient care and would be better-served by community programs. It seeks a complete phasing out of the large treatment centers.

Attorney David Ferleger, representing the plaintiffs, said the real tragedies at the institutions are not "sensational horror stories" that occasionally surface, but the "day-to-day lack of treatment" at the state schools.

"It's boredom, day-in and day-out boredom, that is so terrible," he told the court at a hearing Friday.

Among the "horror stories" Ferleger mentioned were the deaths last week of two patients at the Fort Worth institution, Mark Jones, 18, and David Roberts, 31.

The Tarrant County Medical Examiner said Jones drowned in about two inches of water in a bathtub, while a preliminary autopsy was unable to determine the cause of Roberts' death. Roberts was found slumped dead in his wheel chair.

Further tests are under way in each case. The director of the facility said he has found no evidence of negligence on the part of the staff.

Films available for review

Films and other audio-visual materials available to public schools through Region 18 Education Service Center may be requested for preview by parents and other interested adults during a one-day review session July 31 from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at the Center, LaForce Boulevard, Terminal.

Parents and other citizens interested in requesting preview of particular films from the collection maintained at the Service Center should notify the Center at least ten days in advance so the staff will have time to check on the availability of the films and and set up preview rooms. In the event a film is not available on the date requested, the person making the request will be given a date on which it may be seen.

Persons wishing to request preview of films may call Vera Smith, staff member of the Education Service Center, at 563-2380. The name of the film desired and the approximate time the person will arrive at the Center should be given to Mrs. Smith.

Officials say man was informant

HOUSTON (AP) — Government officials have confirmed that a man who was shot to death, then dumped in front of a hospital here last week was a former government informant who had been dropped from a witness protection program.

David Capuano was fatally shot in the neck before being dumped out of a Cadillac in front of Memorial City Hospital, officials said. Investigators said Capuano is a Massachusetts native with a lengthy criminal record who had testified against organized crime figures.

U.S. Secretary of State Alexander Haig laughs as he delivers the punch line of a joke before the opening of the four-nation Caribbean conference Saturday in Nassau. Foreign ministers from the U.S., Canada, Mexico and Venezuela attended the one-day meeting.

Officials discuss Caribbean aid

NASSAU, Bahamas (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. met Saturday with his counterparts from Canada, Mexico and Venezuela to hammer out the framework for a joint development plan for the Caribbean.

However, diplomats from all four delegations cautioned that no detailed plan was expected from the meeting, which will have to deal with the economic, political, cultural and social disparities of a region that includes 31 countries speaking four major languages and numerous minor dialects.

A senior State Department official called the meeting "a first stage effort to achieve a higher level of cooperation in dealing with the problems of the Caribbean basin."

"We're attempting to lay the basis for a long-term partnership among those countries most interested in assuring the economic success of the area," he said.

After the current meeting of donor countries, the official said, there would be a meeting of the Caribbean recipient nations.

He noted that while no country could be automatically excluded from aid, neither could any donor nation be forced to assist any particular country against its own policies. The official asked not to be identified.

The United States has security concerns about the region, which it is pursuing separately, the official said, adding that the joint effort will be limited to the economic and social conditions of the region.

Haig told reporters on his aircraft while flying down from Washington Friday night that he brought ideas but no definitive plan. "We want it to be a regional plan under which donors and recipients can coordinate together."

Haig's counterparts present were Merk Macguigan, Canadian minister of state for foreign afairs, and Foreign Ministers Jorge Castaneda of Mexico and Jose Alberto Zambrano Velasco of Venezuela.

Any multinational development program must also overcome differences in approach and philosophy among the four nations present in Nassau. The United States initially wanted any development program to serve also as a means of containing communism and Cuban adventurism in the area, an approach opposed strongly by Mexico.

Diplomats aid Mexico, in particular, attended the conference with reluctance. But one official said Mexico's attendance indicated the United States had at least moderated its position on what has become known as the security issue.

El Salvador army claims it killed 100 leftist guerrillas

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The army claimed Saturday it killed about 100 leftist guerrillas during a four-day offensive in the northeastern part of the country.

About 1,500 troops backed by planes, tanks and artillery were involved in the continuing campaign to break up leftist strongholds in the districts of Cabanas and Cuscatlan, the army said.

The army admitted three soldiers were wounded, but morning papers carried death notices of six soldiers and a military truck driver. The notices did not say when or where they were killed.

The army, meanwhile, accused leftists of being responsible for the massacre of 46 peasants found late last week in shallow graves in the northern region of Chalatenango.

Many of the victims, mostly young men, showed signs of torture and had their thumbs tied behind their backs, tactics used more by the right than by the left.

The army said most of the victims were "Patrulleros," civilian militia often accused of taking part in rightist death squads. There was no independent confirmation of the army's claims.

In the capital, rumors mounted that Nicaraguan revolutionary hero Eden Pastora, who resigned his post as Nicaragua's vice defense minister "to fight in other wars," has joined the Salvadoran guerrillas.

A military spokesman who asked that his name not be used said, "It could be that he may come here and if that is the case we are ready for him."

Pope working while hospitalized

ROME (AP) — Pope John Paul II is "working fairly intensely" despite a lingering fever that sent him back to the hospital last month but he may not be able to return to the Vatican for several more weeks, his doctors said Saturday.

The 61-year-old pontiff was active, resting well and receiving visitors while recovering from the virus that sent his temperature soaring to almost 100.4 degrees this past week, doctors said.

"He will certainly not be able to go home until he has overcome the infection," Dr. Emilio Tresalti, chief medical officer at Gemelli Hospital, told reporters.

"This morning the pope seemed fairly well and he rested well during the night," Tresalti said. "He is working fairly intensely, and receiving visits not only from his closest aides."

Tresalti said infections of this kind normally last three to six weeks. The pope entered Gemelli Hospital three weeks ago with cytomegalovirus, an ailment with symptoms similar to those of mononucleosis. He was also treated for pleurisy, an inflamation of the membrane surrounding the lung.

A medical bulletin issued Saturday said the number of antibodies in the pope's blood has risen. Antibodies fight infection.

Tresalti said the pope met this week with the archibishop of Krakow, Cardinal Franciszek Macharski, and the newly appointed primate of Poland, Bishop Jozef Glemp. The pope also wrote a letter to be read in all of Poland's churches Sunday, Tresalti said.

Tresalti did not predict when the pope would undergo a second operation to reverse the intestinal bypass made during emergency surgery after he was shot May 13.

The pope's traditional Sunday blessing will probably be recorded in his hospital room and then broadcast to the faithful and tourists in St. Peter's Square, Vatican sources said.

Polish congress to start with secret vote

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Communist Party leaders announced Saturday that the party's special congress convening Tuesday will start with a secret ballot vote on the top party post, an unprecedented procedure in the Soviet bloc.

The decision appeared aimed at settling any challenge to the leadership of party chief Stanislaw Kania at the outset of the open-ended and controversial gathering Tuesday. It was announced by a working group headed by Kania that is setting the agenda for the congress.

The Polish congress is an emergency meeting, called four years early in an effort to resolve the country's economic and political crises.

Under the protocol followed at most congresses, held every five years in the Soviet bloc, selection of party leaders is the last order of business.

The announcement from the working group did not make clear whether the party chief, officially called the first secretary, would be elected directly by the 1,964 delegates or by the party's 140-member, policy-making Central Committee. The Central Committee usually chooses the leaders.

Kania's leadership has been attacked by more hardline Communists in Poland and elsewhere in the Soviet bloc as too lenient and inactive in controlling alleged enemies of the state.

One gathering of critics was officially reported Saturday to have announced it would demand an explanation at the congress for the "press and political witch-hunt" against the so-called Katowice Forum.

The forum, a recently-emerged and strongly pro-Kremlin group in southern Poland, hosted a meeting of critics in Katowice where the demand was approved.

The official Polish news agency PAP said delegates from Katowice, Warsaw and 11 other cities also approved an open letter to be sent to the party congress.

Critics in the Soviet bloc have charged that Poland's independent labor movement, Solidarity, and other groups will try to misuse the Warsaw congress to cripple or destroy the party.

Solidarity itself represents a dramatic break with Soviet-styled communism. Formed after last summer's labor unrest, Solidarity became the first labor federation in the Soviet bloc to be officially declared free of party or government control.

Not since 1968 has such criticism been heaped on a Soviet bloc party congress by allies. Then, the attacks were directed at the scheduled Czechoslovakian party congress, which was expected to ratify liberalizations. In August, the Soviets led a Warsaw Pact military intervention.

Czechoslovakia's party daily Rude Pravo on Saturday likened developments in Poland to the situation in Czechoslovakia before the invasion, and warned that "revisionists" were trying to introduce "would-be Christian socialism and clerical ideology into the party."

"Like the rightist forces within the Czechoslovak Communist Party in 1968, the Polish revisionists too describe themselves as renovators of socialism," the paper said.

Solidarity members with party memberships make up 21 percent of the delegates to the congress, which critics contend will be attended by too few real workers and without many veteran Polish Communists.

Japanese-Americans to be heard

WASHINGTON (AP) — After four decades, the order has lost none of its ugliness:

"Instructions to All Japanese:

"All Japanese persons, both alien and non-alien, will be evacuated. Each family and individual living alone will be furnished transportation to the reception center."

The notice, in bold black type, was tacked on street corners and buildings on the West Coast in early 1942 while the nation still reeled from the shock of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor. It was addressed "to all persons of Japanese ancestry."

It didn't matter whether the person was infant or elder, citizen of Japan or of the United States, loyal to the Rising Sun or the Stars and Stripes. All Japanese were carted away.

Now, nearly 40 years after Pearl Harbor, America is going to decide what injustice was committed and whether to compensate its victims.

Franklin D. Roosevelt, presiding over a nation at war, had few doubts and his own justificiation at the time.

"The successful prosecution of the war requires every possible protection against espionage and against sabotage," he said as he set the Japanese evacuation in motion.

Without any action by any court, the Army uprooted and imprisoned 120,000 people. They had committed no crime, their only offense was that their ancestors were Japanese.

They were allowed to bring bedding and linens, toilet articles, some extra clothing, eating utensils and "essential personal effects." They were told: "the size and number of packages is limited to that which can be carried."

They had little time to dispose of other property. Much of it went at distress prices; some was simply stolen outright.

Another president, Jimmy Carter, called that wholesale violation of civil rights "one of the disappointing and sometimes embarrassing occurrences in the history of the nation" and created the commission that begins its inquiry on Tuesday. Carter charged the group to "reconfirm our nation's commitment to basic human rights."

After two days of hearings in Washington, the panel moves later to Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle, Anchorage, the Aleutian Islands, the Pribilof Islands and Chicago.

"Few governments ever acknowledge mistakes, much less authorize serious examinations of them," said Joan Z. Bernstein, who heads the nine-member panel. "In the course of our work, the commission will take care to listen to those who have not been listened to before," she said

Former Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass.; former Supreme Court Justice Arthur J. Goldberg; Father Robert F. Drinan, a former Massachusetts congressman who heads Americans for Democratic Action; Rep. Daniel E. Lungren, R-Calif.; Father I. V. Gromoff, a Russian Orthodox priest from Unalaska, Aleutian Islands; former Sen. Hugh B. Mitchell of Washington; Dr. Arthur S. Flemming, chairman of the U.S. Civil Rights commission; Common Pleas Judge William M. Marutani of Philadelphia.

Ronald Ikejiri, Washington representative of the National Committee for Redress, an organ of the Japanese American Citizens League, says the organization has advocated no set amount of compensation, although a flat $25,000 for each person has been talked about.

"It's difficult to put a monetary value on life chances and lost opportunity," says Ikejiri, whose parents, both native-born American parents, met in an internment camp.

"I think there are certain psychological types of wounds that are difficult to overcome," said Ikejiri. His sister Pamelz was born in a camp. He and his brother were born after the war.

Ikejiri said the league does not know how many of the internees still are alive. Their median age, he said, is thought to be about 65..

Leaders will gather next week for economic summit

By The Associated Press

President Reagan and the leaders of the six other richest industrial democracies gather in the serenity of the Canadian woods next Sunday to try to put some harmony back into the off-key economic policies of the Western nations and Japan.

Few expect their seventh annual economic summit, convening in a log "chateau" outside Ottawa, to produce broad agreement on how best to boost the lagging economies of Europe, Japan and the United States.

One factor alone — the resentment of America's economic partners over high U.S. interest rates — should prevent it.

But the host, Canada's Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau, indicates he hopes the two-day conference will be an important "get-acquainted" session for the leaders.

Several are strangers to each other. Besides Trudeau, only West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher were in power for last year's summit in Venice, Italy.

For Reagan, this is his first major multilateral conference and only his second presidential trip abroad — the previous also was to Canada, March 9-10.

The other newcomers are President Francois Mitterrand of France, Japanese Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki, Italian Premier Giovanni Spadolini and the president of the European Common Market, Gaston Thorn of Luxembourg.

The setting could hardly be more peaceful — the Chateau Montebello, a sprawling resort along the Ottawa River 40 miles east of the Canadian capital.

Trudeau says the secluded hotel was selected to give the leaders an opportunity for a relatively informal conference. Most of the news media, any protesters and the curious will be miles away.

On Tuesday, July 21, the leaders will fly by helicopter upriver to Ottawa for the final hours of the talks.

Reagan met with Trudeau Friday in Washington and noted afterward that the summit participants face the tasks of "reducing inflation, increasing employment and improving long-term economic prospects for our people."

These challenges are unchanged from the first summit in Rambouillet, France, in 1975, when then-President Gerald R. Ford declared that as a result of the meeting the "people of our countries can look forward to more jobs, less inflation, and a greater sense of economic security."

In 1975, there were 15.2 million unemployed people in the seven countries; today there are almost 18 million. And the double-digit inflation of the mid-1970s lingers on in many places.

But one perennial problem, energy, will recede into the background this time because oil supplies are plentiful and prices have declined.

Many believe the summiteers have never been farther out of synchronization in their economic policies.

While Reagan and Thatcher pursue get-tough austerity policies to fight inflation, France's new Socialist government, and to a lesser extent the Japanese, have embarked on programs to stimulate their domestic economies and create jobs.

The high interest rates accompanying the tight control of U.S. money supply anger some of America's economic partners.

The lofty rates attract more foreign investment into dollars and U.S. financial instruments, driving down the value of the French franc and other non-U.S. currencies. Since many imports are paid for in these increasingly expensive dollars, this drives up prices in France and elsewhere.

In addition, the high interest rates pressure other countries, in defense, to raise their own rates closer to the American level, something the expansionists oppose.

"It discourages investment and invites recession and, as a result, dooms a growing number of workers to unemployment," French Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson complained last month.

He called the rates a "third oil shock of our own making," alluding to the sharp oil-price rises of 1973-74 and 1978-79 that undermined the Western and Japanese economies.

Reagan's defenders counter that Western Europe's problems in part are rooted in heavy budget deficits of governments that spend too much on social welfare.

Reagan and Mitterrand can be expected to discuss these differences at a private meeting at Chateau Montebello, their first.

Canada and West Germany indicate they will be patient with Reagan's economic strategy. But Trudeau says he will ask the U.S. chief executive: "We're trusting you, but when do you think it's going to work?"

Reagan will not be the only participant put on the defensive. As they have for years, the West Europeans are expected at Montebello to again press Japan to rein in its exports and give their industries a better chance to compete.

Ruling regime in Iran executes five more leftists

BEIRUT, Lebanon (ap) — Iran's Islamic revolutionary regime announced Saturday it had executed five more opponents and arrested the brother of Iran's missing ex-president, Abolhassan Bani-Sadr.

Tehran Radio said the five men put to death late Friday and early Saturday were members of Peykar and the Mujahedeen Khalq, leftist guerrilla groups fighting the fundamentalist Moslem clergy who dominate Iran's government.

Fifteen other leftists were arrested in a series of pre-dawn police raids on guerrilla hide-outs in Tehran, the state-run radio said.

The latest deaths brought to 153 the number of people executed for politics-related activities since members of the ruling Islamic Republican Party engineered Bani-Sadr's removal from office June 22.

Tehran Radio also said revolutionary guards arrested 70 "prominent members and supporters" of the Majahedeen Khalq in Zanjan, northwest of Tehran. The guards rounded up the group from 28 homes, many of which contained Molotov cocktails and pictures of Bani-Sadr, the report said.

The fundamentalist government, in a Tehran Radio report, said groups opposing the regime are considered "wagers of war against God" and they "will be dealt with according to the holy Koran," the sacred book of Moslems.

The radio report said that people who surrender will be handled more leniently and repeated its call for people to report any suspicious acts to the security forces.

Mummering Madness

'Fighting a duel for a fair maiden is more than just another sworded affair'

Those on the track of a rib-tickling, hair-letting-down good time can catch a little mummering madness this summer. But be forewarned — it's contagious. Even the most timid of souls are deeply immersed in throwing popcorn, booing, hissing, and otherwise conducting themselves in the most gregarious manner by the end of the evening.

The 33rd annual Summer Mummers is playing the downtown Yucca Theatre Thursday through Saturday, closing Sept. 5. It's an experience in stepping back in time.

"Treachery on the Thames," or "A Duel for a Fair Maiden is not Just Another Sworded Affair," written by Randal Hicks, Esq. Directed by A. Weller Cole, the melodrama is set in the mid-evil days of merry ole' England. The script's lines range from excellent to rotten. But it doesn't matter. The worst of lines give the audience an opportunity to boo and hiss as does the notorious villain, Cyrano de Cesspool, and his evil sorcerer companion, Nerdin the Magician.

Alas, will the heroine, Princess Guenevere Goodgams of Gabalot Castle, fall victim to his satanic plans? Ohhh, will the hero, Gregory G. Gallantlad, aided by his trusty squire, Clarence Crossbow, be able to rescue her, reform Charlotta Alotta, proprietress of the Comeon Inn, and her two girls, Elsa Easymark and Patricia Pushover, and save the kingdom of Godfrey? The outcome looks dim, very dim.

However, who cares. This is, after all, a melodrama and in the tradition of its genre — all's well that ends well. It's the getting there that counts. As King Arthur of Godfrey, Guenevere's beloved father, says when he gives Gallantlad his quest to fulfill the legend of Exhalibut, "This show would be incredibly boring if we just hung around in here and shot the breeze." Amen.

The questing takes the better part of the evening and carries the laughing, hissing audience from one absurd scene to another.

When the final curtain closes on the melodrama, the evening's entertainment is only two-thirds over. Next comes the Olio, directed by Bill Shaner, choreographed by Cherry Jones. Filled to capacity with talent, real and imagined, the Olio is a mind-boggling sequence of short skits, the main ingredient of which is its lack of purpose, direction and sense. It is what it appears to be — nonsense, the sum total of which is fun.

This year's production is being held in the Mummers' new home: the Yucca Theatre. Built by T.S. Hogan in 1929, the 1200-seat theater — with its Assyrian decor — staged vaudeville, melodrama, local dance recitals, theater productions, and later motion pictures. It closed in 1974.

It is most appropriate that the stage which once housed the first community theater productions in Midland, now houses the summer melodrama put on by Midland Community Theatre.

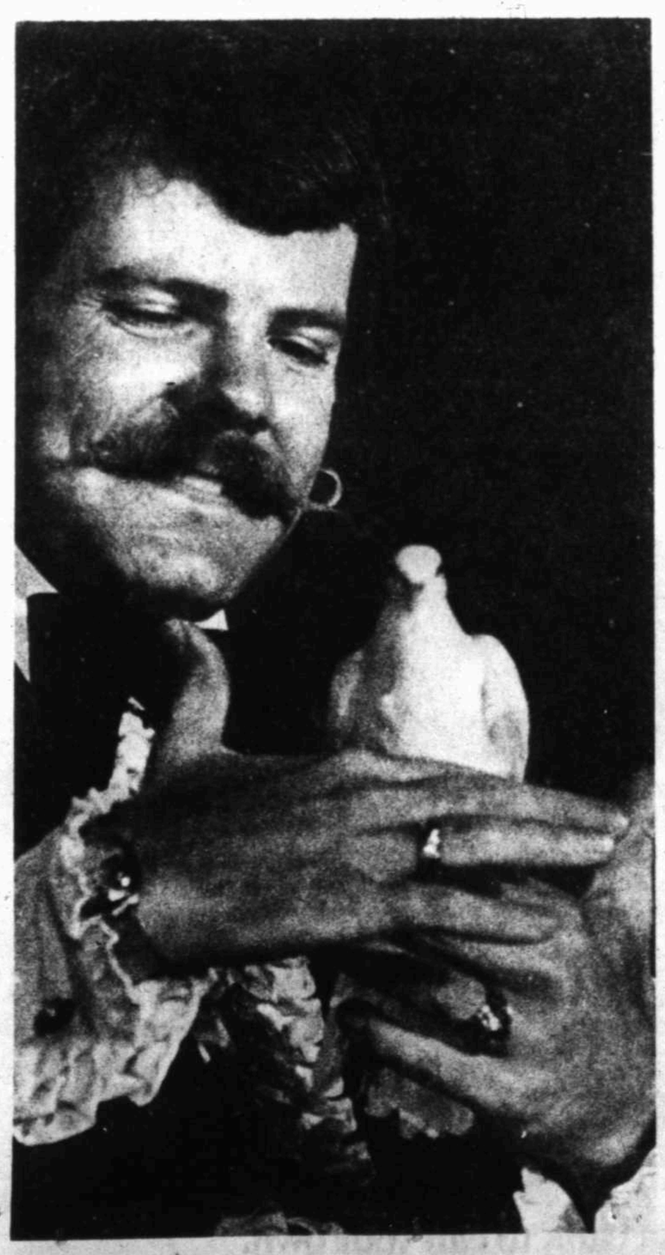

Volunteers as well as professional technicians have spent hours refurbishing the theater for its opening. It is a major undertaking which is not yet completed. Those who have attended previous productions at the Yucca will be pleased to note that, except for the change in the floor and the seating arrangement, the actual theater is the same. It's a pleasure to see the Yucca being used as a theater once again.

And once more, the Summer Mummers provides an uninhibited lets-be-kids-again time for its patrons. It's a definite case of mummering summer madness.

Spit-off determines winner

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

day, sending a long brown stream skyward. He was out spit, however, by 13 year old Jerry Deatherage, who took first place in a four-way chaw-off.

STANTON — It don't near beat anything a feller ever stepped in.

Cowchips sailed along a downtown street, ricochet-ing off cars and buildings and unlucky persons. Youngsters and adults strained, heaved, followed through, as sweat rolled off faces like a cow on a flat rock. And the end result was Todd Smith oozing to triumph in the 18 and over group, his 50 yard drop-ping catching the attention of the pile of judges in rear.

It was called Martin County Old Settlers Reunion here Saturday, and contestants seemed content scouring the cowchips provided by Reunion officials for one to spit their needs. No one brought his own.

Carlos Ortiz proved to be the winner of the 18 and udder... uh, under divison, his chip chunk of 45 yards topping those which went before. His winning effort came moments after an errant sample went off course, almost beheading a photographer.

When the event was finished, broken chips, some mushy, others firm, lined the street like brown puddles of freshly spat tobacco juice. And there was plenty of that, as well, as a dozen boys and men — but no women — chawed down on wads of Red Man and sought the range defined by a dixie cup 30 feet away.

Jaws seemed deformed, swollen beyond recognition. Juice dribbled down chins in dark, earthern like streams. Entrants ran to the starting line, necks whiplashing forward like chickens pecking corn. Saliva and tobacco sprayed into the air, sometimes even in the right direction. The initial heat saw four persons tied for the longest stream, including one youth no more than 11.

A woman came out of the crowd, took the boy by the shoulders. "He sure is!" she cried, turning to her son. "Now git that outa yo' mouth right now!"

Messiest event in the fun and games, however, came in the egg toss, where folks and yolks covered the street. Guidelines called for teams of two persons, one of whom would serve as thrower and the unlucky party as receiver.

"Don't fire until you see the whites of their eyes," goes the old rule of warfare. Here, it was more a matter of, "Let fire and THEN see whites in their eyes." They snagged them on arms and shoulders and legs and face, and sometimes even intact in hands.

Those who sought safety by forsaking entering the event often must have felt as if they'd jumped out of the frying pan and into the fire. One innocent bystander, a little boy of six, felt safely harbored until an overthrow scrambled his head.

But talent was displayed as well. There were shoestring catches, forward dives, juggling acts, a dozen people yelling and falling away from a mis-throw like defensive backs dropping back for a jump pass.

Mark Gonzales and Luis Gonzales fried the competition in the junior division while a Willie Mays catch at 30 yards by Adolph Garza laid to rest the cackling of the crowd in taking a victory for his partner, Lee Byrd.

But the real heat of competition fell on the shoulders — or more correctly, the palate — of Tommy Romous, who braved a half dozen fiery opponents and exploded to victory in the jalapeno pepper eating contest. The chunky resident downed eight peppers in one minute's time — and six cups of water in less than that — to come out a winner.

It remained to be seen, however, how he came out later in the day. Suffice it to say that cheeks remained puffy and reddened long after competition was completed.

Indictment says sheriff wanted 'happy' girlfiend

TYLER, Texas (AP) — Smith County Sheriff J.B. Smith was indicted early Saturday morning on one count of attempted arson and 18 counts of official misconduct, allegedly committed to get a "happy girlfriend."

Smith used a county car and gasoline "with the intent to get benefits for himself, namely a happy girlfriend, to wit, Treva Loynell Sandell, also known as 'Toy'," the indictment said.

Miss Sandell, Smith's former secretary, is now his fiancee, Smith has said.

She, Smith, several current and former law enforcement officials and three journalists testified before the grand jury that handed down the indictments after 3 a.m. Smith, sheriff since 1977, would not comment.

In the 18-count indictment alleging official misconduct, grand jurors said Smith used a county patrol car and county-owned gasoline to pick up his girlfriend on several occasions, used a county telephone to make 49 personal long-distance telephone calls to Louisiana where Miss Sandell lived at one time and drove a county car on 14 personal trips to Louisiana from August 1979 to November 1980.

He is also accused of getting a free apartment in the Casa de Oro complex in Tyler in exchange for patroling the complex in a county car.

The first indictment, alleging attempted arson, said Smith intended to set fire to a vehicle owned by Charles Everett Wintters. Wintters had been accused earlier of burning a sheriff deputy's patrol car.

The indictment also alleges that Smith used $138 of county money to repay a former deputy for "services rendered," and used a county patrol car for personal trips and unofficial business.

Smith is also charged with using a county vehicle for transportation on personal business to Dallas-Fort Worth airport on June 15, 1979.

Officials say Smith will be served with a warrant for his arrest at 9 a.m. Monday by Texas Ranger Stuart Dowell.

THIS WEEK IN GOVERNMENT

Midland City Council to discuss Midland Draw

The end apparently will never be in sight for the Midland City Council as the group takes up items on its Tuesday agenda that have been continued from previous meetings.

The mayor and five councilmen will begin another day-long session at 10 a.m. in the City Hall Council Chambers.

The muddied situation with effluent overflowing into Midland Draw may clear up somewhat with a report from Black & Veatch and Ed Reed & Associates on how to dispose of effluent in the city's holding ponds. At the May 26 meeting, the two engineering firms presented a rough idea for piping the effluent to a salt lake in south Midland County. Estimated cost for the entire project was $20 million.

The two firms were instructed by the council at that session to proceed with further, more precise, investigation into the project's feasibility.

The council will look again at expanding the parking lot at Midland Regional Airport. It also will discuss the Airport Master Plan and its adoption, which had been deferred pending updated figures.

Making another regular appearance on the agenda is a discussion of regulating helicopter operations within the city limits. The council began looking at regulation of helicopters and the need for helipads on tall office buildings after Carlton Beal requested a landing pad on his building at 104 S. Pecos St. His request will be studied again at 3 p.m. The Airport Planning Board has been researching how other cities have treated the subject and what rules would fit Midland's needs.

Another repeat item on the agenda is a 3:30 p.m. session on a zone change requested by Margaret Wade for an area in South Midland. At the first public hearing, numerous residents in the area opposed the move to change the zoning from single family and multiple family to light commercial, allowing for construction of small warehouses.

The council decided to study a mobile home park situated in Odessa to see if it could be adapted to this area in Midland.

A report on one-way streets, something the city has tried to effect for two years, will be heard at 4 p.m. The report was prepared by a professional consultant specializing in traffic.

At 5 p.m., the council will hold a public hearing on the proposed Revenue Sharing Budget.

The council also will consider a resolution to purchase Heath Furniture Store on Main Street — directly east of the city's Midland Center — and appropriating the funds.

The council will consider throwing in their two-cents' worth of opinion on Southwestern Bell's proposed rate hike by appropriating funds to pay Midland's share of the expenses. Other cities apparently are banding together for the hearing before the Public Utilities Commission.

In other action, the council will consider advertising for bids for a new fire truck to replace one that was destroyed in a recent accident, authorizing a contract with the Midland County Tax Appraisal District to assess and collect taxes for the city, initiating the second phase of lighting in the downtown area and authorizing a firm to audit the productivity program in the Street Division.

County to consider tax increase

Two matters of major interest to county residents are on the agenda for Monday's meeting of the Commissioners Court.

The first item centers on redistricting of the four commissioners' districts, as required by new census figures. The second involves a vote on intentions to increase the tax rate.

Other items include problems relating to common septic systems in county subdivisions; county employee cost of living raises; mosquito control measures; and the hiring of a personnel officer for the county.

The meeting gets under way at 10 a.m. in the commissioners courtroom at the courthouse. The public is welcome.

Answer Line

By Franchelle Moore

P.O. Box 1650, Midland 79702

I would like verification of what I have been told numerous times.

Is it true that the Midland Police Department has a fleet of patrol cars for each 8-hour shift?

Are the officers permitted to take the patrol cars home with them, free to use the cars on any off-duty security work?

ANSWER: A spokesman in the office of Chief of Police Harold Wallace provides the answers to your questions.

Yes, there are patrol cars for the 8-hour shifts, with 19 men assigned to each shift. There always is 60 percent of the 19 officers on duty at all times.

The patrolmen are permitted to take the patrol cars home when they are not on duty. The cars may be used for personal activities, but may not be taken out of the city limits. The officers also are on call by the department.

The department believes that the presence of patrol cars in various parts of the city is a good deterrent to crime.

A friend told me that there are a lot of special features that can be added to an existing life insurance policy for free. What are they? — D.L.

ANSWER: One is a common disaster clause that specifies how benefits will be paid if both the policyholder and beneficiary, such as husband and wife, should die at or near the same time, says the American Council of Life Insurance.

Other "free" features, according to the council, include: Designating a contingent beneficiary, in case the original beneficiary dies before the policyholder does; a special plan for benefit payments is another feature; an arrangement for regular retirement income, using policy cash values.

Also there are joint and survivor plans for retirement benefits, with continuing benefits as long as either lives; a provision for withdrawing a portion of the policy proceeds that have been set up as an income plan; an automatic premium loan clause, and the use of policy dividends to purchase paid-up additions to the policy.

The council suggests you consult your agent on how these various features work and add them to your policy, if you wish.

In the larger cities there are blood pressure machines for public use located in the shopping malls. I think it is a good idea and wonder if the malls in Midland would do the same. — Mrs. F.G.

ANSWER: A spokesman for one the Midland shopping malls said the mall she is associated with has no immediate plans for installing the machines, but added that she thought the mall would consider such a project.

I would like to complain about the weeds at the intersection of West Nobles and North A Streets.

The weeds are so bad at the corner, drivers on Nobles Street have to get halfway onto A Street to see any on-coming cars. — Mrs. V.B.

ANSWER: The Sanitation Department of the city of Midland has received numerous calls about this problem at many of the city's intersections, and are working as fast as possible to remove the weeds. Incidentally, the intersection you point out already is on the "list."

Chairman of Midland's planning and zoning commission cares about quality

By DORIAN MARTIN
Staff Writer

Look into Mary Jane Young's crystal ball and you'll see plats, zones, arterials and curb cuts.

Through her crystal ball Mrs. Young, chairman of Midland's planning and zoning commission, conjures, with knowledge and hard work, the atmosphere that the physical city of Midland projects.

To plan a city is to become a magician. Almost instantly the fruits of the commission's labor can be seen in the constant construction boom in Midland.

"We're so busy. Midland is growing so fast," exclaimed Mrs. Young. Her job is to "make judgments as to how you want the city to grow."

"I know it (the growth) is going to be hard on Midland citizens." She has heard estimates that Midland will gain 40,000 new residents in the next 10 years.

TO PREPARE FOR the influx of people, as well as business, Mrs. Young thinks Midland will have to have a strong city plan. "You can't keep all the mistakes from happening, but you can help maintain the quality of life."

Although Midland may have other faults, in the area of city planning it is the equal of other cities. "Of cities its size, I imagine it compares very favorably," she commented.

Planning a city requires a lot of foresight, Mrs. Young explained. "You try your best to judge the short term financial benefits to the city against any long-term financial burdens that might occur."

The process involved in the planning is slow, but she added, "It's slow for a purpose." Although frustrating to the builder, the turtle's pace gives the residents protection from mistakes as well as a chance to deal with the growth.

The slow pace also gives the city staff a chance to keep up with the flood. "The town is booming and the staff is so overworked," Mrs. Young commented. "I'm so impressed by the amount of work they can turn out in two weeks time."

THE CITY STAFF currently is developing a master plan for the city's lay-out. According to Mrs. Young, the plan "is still in its formative stages. Hopefully, there will be a lot of help from Midland citizens to get it into the final form."

The plan will emcompass all aspects of city planning — deciding which streets will be major thoroughfares, locating sewer lines, figuring out capital expenditure, listening to reports from land committees.

Currently, Mrs. Young and the commission follow a pyramid plan topped by single-family residential areas. Industrial areas form the bottom of the pyramid. Those who wish to get a zone change can move from the bottom to the top; however, zone changes cannot move down the pyramid. For example, light industrial can be rezoned for commercial use, but not vice versa.

The chairman also follows her own private zoning theory. She thinks the city should be planned where high density areas, such as shopping malls, are surrounded by buffer zones decreasing systematically in density to the lower density areas, such as the single-family residence. She is very opposed to two areas of clashing densities being placed next to each other.

SHE PUTS HER theory to work during the Planning and Zoning Commission which meets bi-weekly to consider changes. The commission's membership is appointed by the City Council and serves a three-year term. This term is Mrs. Young's third and final year on the commission.

The work is strictly volunteer — there is no pay involved. But that doesn't bother Mrs. Young.

"I've always been interested in volunteer work. I grew up in Brownfield. I was raised to believe you take a lot from your city and the people you live with, and you have an obligation to repay.

"I felt that it would be a good experience for me to use my past volunteer experience to help this city plan for its future.

"I think because the Planning and Zoning Committee is appointed, and not an elected office, (the city council) perhaps looks for people familiar with the city, who are willing to spend the time reading the material and understanding all sides of the issues, and fair-minded people," she explained.

TO LEARN THE tricks of the trade, Mrs. Young attended conferences. Her two years of experience on the board also has helped.

Mrs. Young has learned to base her decisions on several factors.

"If possible, if I'm not familar with the area, I like to see the area," she said.

She added, "What you want as a commissioner is to get as much information as possible from as many people as possible.

"We listen to people in the neighborhood. I think very few people understand the weight a neighborhood can give to an issue," Mrs. Young commented.

"I've become very impressed by how much commissioners listen to people in the neighborhood."

She noted, "Most of the time, the neighborhood can sway the opinion (of the commission)."

PEOPLE OFTEN do not understand the reasoning behind the commission's decisions. Mrs. Young explained that people often cannot see the impact, whether good or bad, that the change being proposed will make.

"You want to encourage growth for the financial base of the city," the chairman said, "but you want to encourage it to be orderly and organized."

Despite the rapid rate of growth, she doubts Midland's growth will ever extend to neighboring Odessa. "You have a lot of barriers — county line barriers, topographical (there is a rock formation west of Midland)."

Other factors also will determine the direction of Midland's growth. Mrs. Young questions whether Midland will ever grow to the south because crossing Interstate 20 would be a psychological leap. And growth to the north will be hampered by the Martin County line.

In her opinion, the Tall City will keep moving to the northwest for two reasons — the prime residential land in that area and sewer lines which naturally run from the northwest to the southeast.

SEWER LINES and residential land are just two of the facets Mrs. Young considers in her job.

"I would like to see the city continue an aggressive policy to develop parks and green areas," she said. Noting that Midland's growth would make it easy for these oases to be forgotten, she admits to being especially appreciative of the green acreage. "It makes a difference in the quality of life," she explained.

"The most exciting thing I've seen in the last couple of years is the cooperation between the schools and the city to coordinate their systems," Mrs. Young added.

She is pleased with the layout of schools and parks in neighborhood areas because they provide neighborhood children with a safe place to play. Her concern had its roots from two good reasons — sons Michael, 10, and Robert, 16.

With two sons and her husband, Bob, who is an executive vice president for Water Technologist, Inc., as well as what amounts to a full-time job, Mrs. Young leads what any person would consider an active life.

Yet she still finds time to devote some time to other pastimes. Part of her spare time is spent taking classes at Midland College.

MRS. YOUNG ALSO offers her services as a docent for the Museum of the Southwest. She has been involved in the Junior League, but now she is serving in an advisory capacity because of her age (41).

And if that's not enough, Mrs. Young also is the vice chairman of finance at St. Luke's Methodist Church.

But, for the next year, the planning commission's chairmanship will take up most of her time and effort.

She sees good times ahead for Midland.

"I think that, no doubt, there will be major growth. I think citizens can say how they want that growth to be," Mrs. Young said. "The nicest thing about Midland is the quality of life we have. It's not Houston, not Dallas — it has a personality of its own. And I think we can work together to keep that personality."

Mary Jane Young, chairman of Midland's planning and zoning commission, thinks Midland's growth will continue to boom, but hopes the growth will be well-planned "to maintain the current quality of life."

OC has early registration

ODESSA — Students planning to attend Odessa College in the fall may sign up early beginning Thursday. Early registration will continue Mondays through Thursdays through Aug. 20.

The sign-up will be from 8 to 11 a.m. and 2 to 4:30 p.m. in the Registrar's Office on the second floor of the Student Union Building.

Evening enrollment will be from 6 to 7:45 p.m. on July 20-21, 27-28 and Aug. 3-4, 10-11 and 17-18.

New students should report to the Counseling Center, also on the second floor of the Student Union Building, before registering. Other students who need help in selecting courses should consult with a faculty advisor or a counselor before going through the registration process, Blair explained.

Classes will begin Aug. 27.

Kelleher to address PBRPC

The regular monthly meeting of the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission board of directors will immediately follow its Semi-Annual General Membership luncheon meeting Wednesday at the Odessa Country Club.

Guest speaker at the luncheon will be Herbert D. Kelleher, chairman of the board and founder of Southwest Airlines.

Among agenda items for the meeting will be a review of a grant application for a community food and nutrition program; review for approval of a grant application for the Permian Basin Community Centers for Mental Health/Mental Retardation for Pecos and Odessa; and reviews from the Regional Development Review Committee on four housing projects in Midland and one in Big Spring.

Jerry Lee battling for his life

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Flamboyant rock'n'roll star Jerry Lee Lewis lay in a hospital intensive care unit Saturday, fighting for his life after a second emergency stomach operation in 10 days.

Hospital spokeswoman Dot Work said Lewis was in critical condition. Mrs. Work said Lewis's physicians would not be available to talk to reporters, but family members quoted doctors earlier as saying his chances of survival were 50-50.

"He hasn't given up," his ex-wife, Myra Lewis, said after visiting the entertainer at Methodist Hospital South. "He's fighting. I think he's going to make it."

Mobile ready for election

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — Voters in this port city go to the polls Tuesday for the first City Commission election in eight years, one that eventually may mean greater government participation for blacks.

Twelve candidates are on the ballot, including the three incumbents — Robert Doyle, Lambert Mims and Gary Greenough.

But the major ballot question is a referendum asking voters whether they want to keep the current form of government, a commission elected at large. That system is under court attack by civil rights groups who contend it keeps blacks out of office.

If the voters decide to change the form of government, the winners of the election will serve only until the new form is instituted.

If the commission is preserved, the winners of Tuesday's election will serve four-year terms.

Little has been said during the campaign about the lack of black participation in city government, but the race question has lingered beneath the surface. No black has ever been elected to the commission, which was created in 1911.

Blacks constitute at least 35 percent of Mobile's 200,000 residents.

A scheduled election in 1977 was canceled by a federal court during the legal challenge of the at-large method.

If the referendum is passed, a 10-member charter commission with no fewer than four blacks will recommend two alternative forms of government to the county's legislative delegation.

"The ... delegation shall see that legislation is introduced and passed in the next regular session of the Legislature which provides for a referendum on the two forms of government recommended by the charter commission," the referendum act says.

In the second referendum, voters would select the form of government. In that event, the winners of Tuesday's election would have to run again.

Spraying prompts evacuation

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Some officials in an area stricken by Mediterranean fruit flies urged residents to leave as officials prepared to battle the bugs from the air with a controversial pesticide.

Barring a court injunction Monday, helicopters loaded with malathion will take off early Tuesday for an aerial spraying program ordered by Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. after the U.S. Department of Agriculture threatened a quarantine on California produce.

The 97-square-mile heart of the infestation will be hit with malathion at least six times, with the applications coming seven to 10 days apart, officials said.

The first application is expected to take a week and the rest two to three days each, officials said. The first "target area" is a 15-square mile section near Stanford University.

However, U.S. Agriculture Secretary John Block warned spraying might not be enough to halt the pests and said he still might have to impose a quarantine on 200 fruits and vegetables grown in California.

That could mean short supplies and high prices nationwide. The crops were valued at $4.1 billion last year.

State agriculture officials, while insisting the chemical posed no health threat, urged residents to stay inside, cover their cars and bring children's toys inside during the 2 a.m. to 6 a.m. sprayings.

Some local officials went so far as to urge residents to flee rather than face the possible danger of malathion.

Mary Ann Kirtley

Kirtley to sing Saturday

Haley Park will be the site at 6 p.m. Saturday for "Saturday Nights Alive," sponsored by the Single Christian Adults of Midland. The evening's entertainment will feature recording artists Mary Ann Kirtley and Jamie Owens-Collins.

Singles minister Mark Fowler also will speak.

Miss Kirtley, a graduate of the University of Houston with a bachelor's degrees in music, sang for the World Evanglism Foundation Crusade in Taiwan during the summer of 1978. She also has performed in England, Scotland and Wales.

She has been a featured speaker and singer for adult and youth groups at Bible studies, youth camps, retreats, conventions, banquets and young life meetings.

All singles are invited to attend this night of fellowship and entertainment. All attending are urged to bring a blanket and picnic.

For more information contact the First Baptist Church at 682-1646 or 682-7669. The program is non-denominational.

Llewellyn weds designer

MARLOW, England (AP) — Roddy Llewellyn, former close companion of Princess Margaret, was married Saturday to Tanya Soskin, a fashion designer and travel writer.

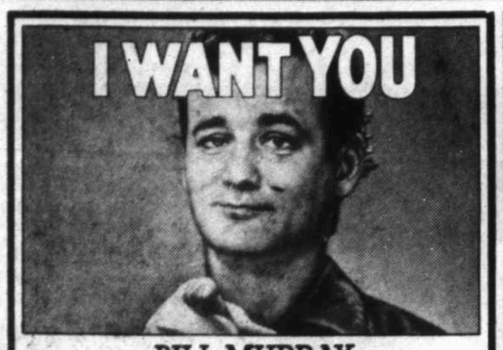

Llewellyn, 33, is a former commune dweller who earns a living landscaping gardens for wealthy Londoners. He had a controversial relationship for eight years with Margaret, 51, the divorced younger sister of Queen Elizabeth II, until his engagement to Miss Soskin, 32, was announced in April.

The widely photographed friendship between Llewellyn and the princess irked many legislators in the House of Commons who complained that Margaret, who receives a state income as a member of the royal family, was spending too much time with her companion and too little on official duties.

More than 1,000 spectators crammed into All Saints churchyard and surrounding streets Saturday to catch a glimpse of Margaret's former friend and his bride.

The wedding was attended by Bianca Jagger, former wife of pop singer Mick Jagger, and other members of the international jet set.

Midland students win contest

Ronnie Finley

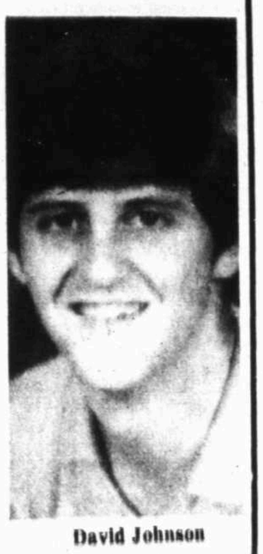

Two students from Midland were recent winners in the Student Affiliate State Vocal Contest at the Texas Music Teachers' Association 80th Convention held in Lubbock.

Ronnie Finley, the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Finley, was the first place winner in the vocal competition. Finley graduated from Midland High School this year.

David Johnson, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Johnson, was the second place winner in vocal competition. Johnson graduated from Lee High School this year.

Both students were presented cash awards and trophies. Following the awards luncheon, Finley performed a variety of songs including an Italian aria, "Danza, Danza Fanciulla" by Durante, "I, Don Quixote" by Darion Leigh, and "Go, Lovely Rose" by Quilter. His performance was part of the State Competition Winners Program.

Finley and Johnson are the vocal students of Ruth Ann Griffin. Both were previously first division winners in their respective auditions for the University Interscholastic League and each was the recepient of a choir scholarship at his high school.

Fort Stockton Water Carnival to feature various ballets

FORT STOCKTON — The annual Fort Stockton Water Carnival will be presented there Thursday through Saturday beginning at 8 p.m.

The show features swimmers of all ages performing synchronized water ballets as tropical fish, lobsters and sharks. The show will be held at the Commanche Springs' olympic-sized pool.

First held in 1934, the show is a traditional affair which involves more than 400 Fort Stockton residents each year. A parade will begin at 10 a.m. Saturday.

More information may be obtained by calling 1-336-2964.

Free medical screening given

Free medical screening services will be provided through the Community Services Mobile Medical-Dental Clinic from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday at Midland Park Mall.

Tests will include blood pressure, blood sugar (diabetes), vision and oral cancer. Acute findings will be referred to the individual's personal physician.

Sponsoring the tests as a public service will be the Midland Seventh day Adventist Church and Midland Park Mall.

Local doctors and nurses will conduct the screening services and Rex Frost, pastor of the church, will serve as host.

Purpose of the clinic is to help other agencies in bringing health, healing and happiness to those from disadvantaged and low income areas in the cities of the southwestern states including Texas, Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma and New Mexico.

Britain's rioting taking a back seat to wedding

By WILLIAM TUOHY
The Los Angeles Times

LONDON — Violence swept the streets of some of Britain's principal cities last week, but the British press still managed to find space for a wedding story.

The rioting, attributed in large measure to rising unemployment, was by no means ignored by the press, but newspapers, magazines and television all seem to have unlimited space and time for the forthcoming marriage of Prince Charles and Lady Diane Spencer.

Although the wedding will not take place until July 29, the press has been preoccupied for weeks with virtually every aspect of the wedding.

Some stories have been fawning and some have been critical. Above all, they have been numerous, so numerous as to leave the impression that interest in the wedding is without limit. Much of the coverage has focused on Lady Diana. The following example appeared in a recent issue of the Sunday Times magazine:

"The world agrees that Diana Spencer has the hallmarks of the perfect girl — serious but not boring; sweet but not too sweet, funny, not silly, sporty, not horsey; and sexy without being bossy. In short, an English rose, bred for marriage to the Prince of Wales."

In the press, at least, Lady Diana's hair and wardrobe have rivaled the activities of Lord Carrington, the foreign secretary, on behalf of Afghanistan.

Half of the models in Britain have affected her style of dressing and her short-clipped hair. A wig done in her style is selling for about $600. The press calls her "Lady Di," reflecting the British penchant for the diminutive and the editors' interest in a short name that will fit in headlines.

Her mother, Frances Shand Kydd, complained recently that "no one in her life has ever called her 'Di,' " but the practice continues.

The press has also disclosed that silkworms are munching their way through mulberry leaves in Dorset to provide the material for the wedding dress. There is much emphasis on the fact that Diana has chosen to have a British designer provide her with a dress of British silk.

EVEN THE RACE meeting at Ascot and the Wimbledon tennis matches played second fiddle to stories about the wedding.

Bartenders in the most exclusive London clubs are concocting special drinks for the wedding, many of them containing red, white and blue ingredients.

Gossip columnists vie with one another for the latest item about Diana and Charles. Will they go to Yugoslavia for their honeymoon, or will it be the West Indies? They advise their readers that the wedding license will cost about $3; that the wedding bed is 6 1-2 feet long and 5 1-2 feet wide.

A brewer has turned out a special beer for the occasion; 20 or more countries are issuing special wedding stamps.

In all, the wedding is expected to produce about $500 million in profits for enterpreneuers of all kinds. Tourism will account for much of that, and every shop in London seems to be generously stocked with souvenirs — and not just beer mugs. They include a limited-edition Wedgewood vase, at about $700 and glass decanters that go for about $80.

There is even a Bible from the Oxford University Press, in imitation leather and bearing the Prince of Wales' crest in a gift frame. Cost: $15.

STILL, MUCH OF the stuff is junk. T-shirts and tea towels display such distorted portraits of the couple that, as an editorial writer put it, one might get the idea that Bo Derrick was marrying the late Count Dracula.

Scholarships awarded

John Campbell of Midland and Mickey C. Seal of Andrews have been selected as recipients of Permian Honors Scholarships at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Co-sponsors of the scholarships were William C. Thomas, president and publisher of The Midland Reporter-Telegram, and John C. Dunagan, president of the Permian Coca-Cola Bottling Co., Monahans.

UTPB forming chapter

ODESSA — The University of Texas of the Permian Basin is forming an alumni chapter of Phi Theta Kappa, the national honorary society of junior college students.

Woody Kupper, director of student activities at UTPB, said membership in the alumni chapter is open to any member of Phi Theta Kappa who left their junior college in good standing.

"The original membership to UTPB's chapter will involve itself with gaining a charter from the national offices," he added.

Kupper noted that in order to form an alumni chapter, the original student membership at UTPB this fall will have to create an executive committee, choose a sponsor, prepare a constitution, establish a purpose, set goals and submit the charter petition to the national office.

Homers guide Cubs to slow win over Mets

It took a foot-dragging three hours and 32 minutes to play, but the Midland Cubs retained a two-game edge in the Texas League West by defeating Jackson's Mets, 10-6, before 2,010 First National Bank Night fans at Cubs Stadium Saturday.

Mel Hall and Carmelo Martinez blasted home runs to pace the Cubs, who made a five-run fourth inning runs stand up for their 12th second half win in 19 starts.

Lefthander Mike King, although unsteady at times, but enjoyed superb fielding support and stayed around for six innings, giving up 11 hits and six runs, to notch his fourth win without a setback this season. Another southpaw, Phil Nastu, finished up with three scoreless innings of relief to pick up his first save. Between them, they had nine strikeouts.

WHIFFWISE, three Mets' pitchers did even better, mowing down 10 Cubs via strikeouts, but it's what happened in between that was damaging.

Hall, who had just missed a three-run homer in the first when Left-fielder Shake Moore retreated to the fence to take his fly in front of the scoreboard, rode the wind down the left field line for a two-run homer in the third that tied it at two. It was Mel's 15th homer of the season.

Martinez powered a three-run homer to left, the big blow in the five run fourth that gave Midland a lead, 7-2, that it never relinquished.

THE METS got close when Mike Davis hit a two-run homer in the fifth, but the Cubs got one in the sixth when Hall walked, stole his second base of the night and scored on a double by Jack Upton. The Mets got two more in the seventh, but the Cubs got them back with the help of a run scoring wild pitch, an error and singles by Martinez, David Pagel and Javier Fierro.

Mets' manager Dave Johnson must wonder what it takes to win at Cubs Stadium. Davis hit a double, homer and two singles to lead a 15-hit attack, the most hits the Mets have had in one game this season, but it fell four runs short.

Scott Holman, 2-6, took the loss, although he started out impressively with four successive strikeouts over the first and second innings.

Soviet women crush U.S. to pace win

LENINGRAD, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Russian women overwhelmed their American rivals Saturday, pacing the Soviet national team to a 204-178 victory over the United States in their first dual track and field meet since 1978.

It was the Soviets' 13th victory in the series that began in 1958. The Americans have won three times and one meet ended in a tie.

The 1981 meet in this northern Russian city was close for the first day. The Russians led 97-93 after Friday's opening 18 events.

But Saturday, the powerful Russian women's team won seven of nine events, including the first two places in the 200-meter dash, 1,500-meter run, long jump, 400-meter intermediate hurdles and 3,000-meter race, breaking open the competition.

The Russian women have won 16 of the 17 meetings.

Anatoly Yefimenko, a leading Soviet track official, said at the news conference that the result of the two-day meet — the first major athletic competition between the two countries since the United States led a boycott of the 1980 Moscow Olympics — was "proof once more that our athletes are better."

The Americans registered only six victories in the 18 events Saturday after splitting the first 18 events Friday. The Soviets finished with 21 victories in 36 events.

The U.S. team fared best Saturday in the 3,000-meter steeplechase and the men's 10,000-meter run, taking the top two places in each event.

Mark Nenow of Lexington, Ky., and Jim Stintzi of Franklin, Wis., broke away from their Russian rivals with three laps to go in the 10,000 and ran the last lap side-by-side, crossing the finish line together. Nenow was awarded the victory in 28 minutes, 45.86 seconds. Stintzi's time was .01 slower.

John Gregorek of Northport, N.Y. led a somewhat surprising sweep in the steeplechase. He was timed in 8:22.88, finishing about 10 meters ahead of Ken Martin of Eugene, Ore.

Other American winners Saturday were: Karin Smith of Venice, Calif., with a toss of 207 feet, 2½ inches (63.16 meters) in the women's javelin; Jeff Phillips of Whitehall, Ohio, 20.50 in the 200 meters, and Louise Ritter of Denton, Texas, who cleared 6-4½ (1.94 meters) in the high jump for a meet record.

Phillips had won the 100 in 10.21 Friday and was named the most valuable men's athlete on the American team by the Soviet meet organizers. Ritter won the honor for the American women.

Lutz, Smith team for doubles win

NEW YORK (AP) — Stan Smith and Bob Lutz crushed Czechoslovakia's Ivan Lendl and Tomas Smid Saturday to give the United States a 2-1 advantage in their Davis Cup tennis series.

Smith and Lutz, the U.S. Open doubles champions and runners-up in the doubles at Wimbledon last week, posted a 9-7, 6-3, 6-2 victory.

The decisive singles matches in the best-of-five Davis Cup format will send John McEnroe against Smid and Jimmy Connors against Lendl on Sunday.

"It ain't over yet," U.S. Captain Arthur Ashe said after the doubles victory.

The U.S. jumped out to a quick 2-0 lead to start the match, breaking Smid in the second game. But the Czechoslovakians broke Smith to stay on serve.

The two teams, mixing exciting tennis with some sloppy points, held serve until the 16th game when Smith put away a forehand volley to pull the Americans to deuce. Lendl's long forehand gave the United States the advantage, then Smith closed out the first set with a backhand volley down the middle — a classic doubles move.

Smith and Lutz broke Lendl in the eighth game, then Lutz held serve as the Americans captured the middle set and moved into high gear. The third set took only 17 minutes.

"We didn't know what to expect from them, even after the Nation's Cup," said Smith, referring to the Czechoslovakians' victory in Dusseldorf, West Germany, in May. "I was worried that they would be blasting returns. It was also unknown whether Lendl could serve and volley.

"Fortunately he didn't do as well as I dreamed he would about 5 in the morning," Smith said."

Lendl, ranked fourth in the world in singles, had given Czechoslovakia a 1-0 lead Friday when he demolished McEnroe 6-4, 14-12, 7-5 just six days after the American lefthander had defeated Sweden's Bjorn Borg to capture the singles title at Wimbledon. Connors then evened the Davis Cup at 1-1 by stopping Smid 6-3, 6-1, 6-2.

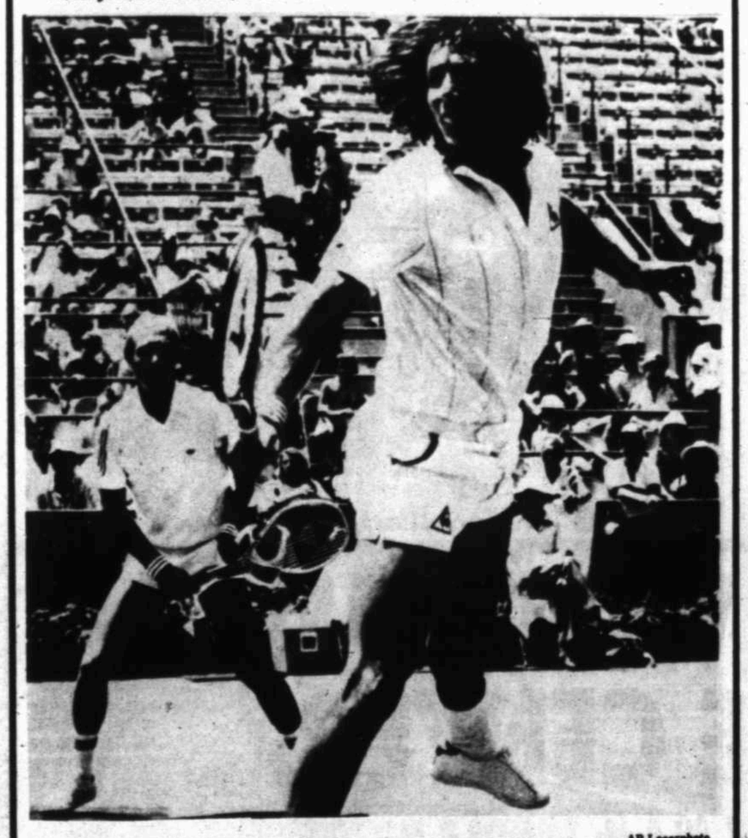

Asked if McEnroe and his doubles partner, Peter Fleming, who were sitting in the stands watching Saturday's match, had passed along any suggestions, Smith said: "McEnroe passed a great sigh after we won the match. That was about all."

Smid said he and Lendl tried to change their strategy, "but they didn't miss many volleys. They were going for corners and making them."

"They just served and volleyed better than we did," Lendl said.

Smith said he felt the Czechoslovakians "really weren't into it (the match) as a team." The reason, Smith felt, was Lendl.

"It seems to me that he thinks of himself more as an individual than as a part of a team," said Smith, who has been playing doubles with Lutz for 17 years — since they both were in high school.

Moffett's proposal strikes out

Owners reject latest compensation plan

NEW YORK (AP) — Negotiations in the 30-day-old baseball strike broke down again Saturday after management rejected a settlement proposal presented by federal mediator Kenneth Moffett.

The two sides met for about two hours Saturday morning and for about the same period of time Saturday afternoon before talks were recessed.

"We're temporarily stalemated — broke down," said Moffett, whose proposal which had been presented Thursday had seemed to signal the first sign of progress in the strike which has canceled 377 games since June 12.

Miller said that after rejecting the mediator's proposal, which the union had previously accepted, management sent word through Moffett that unless the players had a new proposal, "they did not care to meet."

"Consider that," said Miller. "It was an exercise in futility, the whole afternoon."

There were reports that management bargainers believed that Moffett had not offered the compromise proposal, but that it had come instead from union sources. Miller bristled at that suggestion.

"I don't appreciate people casting doubt on the mediator's impartiality," he said. "That is a low, scurrilous tactic."

"He said it to a reporter," Miller said. "I labeled it the biggest lie in a period of willful lies."

Moffett denied that his proposal had come from either side.

"ONE OF the things a mediator does is gather information trying to work out the best road to reach a settlement in bargaining," Mofffett said. "The owners had a hangup on a couple of hangups, but it was our work.

"We did what we could. If something is unacceptable or the other, it's unacceptable."

Moffett said he thought his plan appeared dead after Saturday's sessions.

"I hope someone gets a bright idea to get this thing solved," he said. "I think there have been moves, serious moves, by both sides."

Grebey repeated management's position that it could not accept "word for word, line by line," Moffett's proposal.

"There were elements of it that were unsatisfactory," he said.

Specifically, management has voiced objections to two parts of Moffett's plan — the formula for determining free agent compensation and a price tag ranging from $150,000 to $200,000 for each compensation claim.

THE OWNERS' latest proposal would limit to 10 the number of free agents requiring compensation in any one season.

"What you have is a strike being run for the individual negotiating rights of 10 players a year for the next three years," Grebey said. "It's unfair to fans, other players and the owners to conduct a 10-man strike."

Miller said Grebey's characterization was incorrect.

"The whole impact cannot be measured in terms of number of free agents effected negatively in any particular year," the union chief said. "Direct compensation ruins the bargaining power of potential free agents, not just the ones who elect free agency. Direct compensation on 10 free agents a year is closely related and impacts on 70 to 80 potential free agents and reverberates on those eligible for salary arbitration. It is pure sophistry to say only 10 players. It is absolute nonsense. It is a whole row of dominoes."

Moffett said he would probably be back in touch with the two sides Monday.

Asked about the tone of the negotiations, Moffett said, "It's getting nasty."

Haas feels Milwaukee Open title not locked up

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Even with a five-shot lead, equaling the largest margin on the PGA Tour this year, Jay Haas says he does not have the Greater Milwaukee Open title locked up.

"There's such a long way to go. A lot of things can happen between now and the 72nd hole. I'll try not to look ahead. But it's hard to do," he said.

Haas predicts he cannot be conservative over the final 18 holes Sunday.

"NOBODY HAS made a move yet except for Dave Stockton's opening 65," he said, hinting one of his challengers might do it yet. Rex Caldwell, one of his closest pursurer, agreed.

"He's got a big lead, but it could be done," said Caldwell Saturday after shooting a 5-under-par 67 for a 54-hole total of 206, 10 under at the Tuckaway Country Club.

Caldwell shared the runner-up spot with another nonwinner, 30-year-old rookie Mike Smith. Smith posted his second straight 69 for his 206.

"There are a lot of good players on that leader board. He's got to pay attention. I'm not playing for cash. I'm playing to win," said Caldwell.

Haas, bidding for his second victory in his fifth season, fired a 5-under-par 67 and assembled a total of 201, 15 under for three trips over this wide-open, 7,010-yard course.

HIS THIRD-round margin was the widest of 1981 along with the 5-shot leads for Bruce Lietzke in the Bob Hope and Hale Irwin in the Hawaii Open.

Haas, 27, a former collegiate champion at Wake Forest and winner of the 1978 Andy Williams-San Diego Open, had missed the cuts in his last two tournaments.

Smith was amazed he was so far behind after playing so consistently well.

"It feels funny to be five back after three good rounds," he said. "I may be more back than that if Jay keeps playing like that. I'm going to make a run at it. Sure, I'm going to try for birdies, try to catch him.

"I'm sure I'll feel the pressure, but I love the big galleries," said Smith, the winner of just $508 last fall after earning his PGA Tour card.

LYN LOTT, after shooting a 68, was alone in fourth place at 207, 9 under. Another shot came colorful veteran Chi Chi Rodriguez with 71-208.

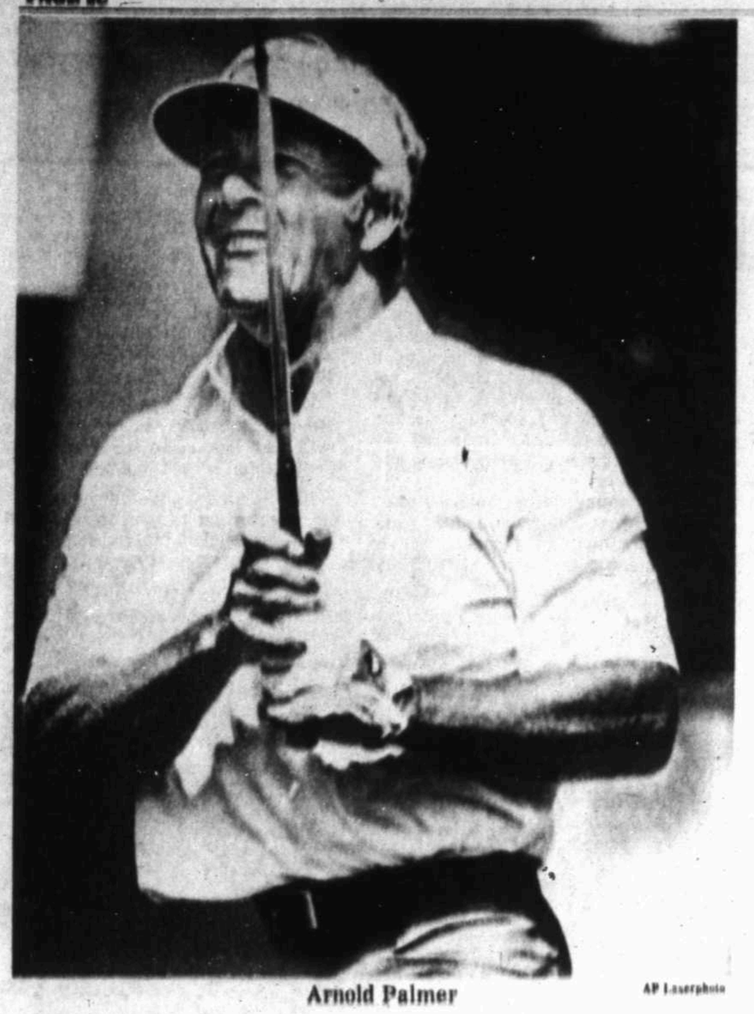

Among those at 208, 7 under, was former U.S. Open champion Andy North. Also at that figure were Tim Simpson, Rod Curl, Roger Maltbie, Jim Colbert and Bobby Cole.

Palmer turns back time; stages old fashion rally

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (AP) — Arnold Palmer turned back the hands of time with one of his patented charges Saturday, firing a splendid 2-under 68 to grab a share of the third-round lead in the U.S. Senior Open at historic Oakland Hills.

Palmer's charge, the only sub-par round this week over the 6,798-yard course which has hosted many major championships over the years, vaulted him from six stokes off the pace into a three-way tie for the lead with Billy Casper and Art Wall at 216.

When it was over, the 51-year-old Palmer, one of the youngest players in the tournament, called it his best competitive round in some time.

"I said after the first round that I was hitting the ball solid and I was encouraged by that," Palmer explained. "Then, after a practice session (following the second round), I had that same good feeling. I felt I would play well, even if I didn't score that well.

"I was so unhappy with my game (before coming here) that I was considering pulling out of the British Open (scheduled for next week). But, I definitely go to England now!"

As always, Palmer was followed by a tremendous army of fans who cheered every swing, putt and hitch of the pants.

"The galery was tremendous," Palmer noted. "The folks were very enthusiastic. I could almost feel what they were thinking. They were nervous, as I was, hoping I could make a couple more."

Palmer's round included five birdies and three bogeys despite playing with what he described as a "dull pain" in his left knee which nagged him through the first four holes before going away as suddenly and mysteriously as it came.

Casper, 50, who has a pair of U.S. Opens and a Masters title to his credit, called himself "totally under control" following a 1-over 71 Saturday.

"It feels neat," said Casper, the youngest player in the $150,000 tournament for players 50 and over. "I don't know when I've enjoyed a round more."

Wall, the 1959 Masters champion, said he was pleased with his solid 216, but felt he was going to have to put on a charge of his own in order to stay up with Palmer and Casper in Sunday's final round.

"I'm going to have to make a couple of birdies," Wall said. "I've been out here a lot of years and a realize Billy and Arnold are better players than I am. I don't sell myself short, I just respect them."

Saturday's biggest disappointment had to be Bob Goalby. After taking the 36-hole lead with a 2-over 142, Goalby soared to a 6-over 76 in the third round to drop back to 218 for the tournament.

"I'm still not out of this thing," said Goalby, whose biggest mistake was a triple-bogey on the par-4 14th where he four-putted. "I played a lot better out there than the score indicates."

Pearson through?

DALLAS (AP) — Veteran running back Preston Pearson, a Dallas Cowboy for six years and a National Football League player for 14, said he is through with professional football.

The Cowboys have officially notified Pearson he will not be invited to training camp this summer and Pearson said flatly he would not consider returning to the team on any other basis, such as a temporary replacement in case of injury.

"Absolutely, positively not," said Pearson. "I would like to be treated just like any other individual who is competing for a job. Otherwise, I will go about my life as I normally do."

Pearson, 36, used mainly as a pass receiver the last two years, has joined several other Cowboys in outside business ventures, which he said would now occupy his time.

"I have done for myself what any smart businessman would do," he said. "I am prepared for the ups and downs of everyday life. Once I get into that, I should stay there."

Dallas coach Tom Landry said Pearson was not invited to camp because he did not figure in the team's plans and deserved better treatment than being cut during the preseason.

"Of course, we hate to lose him because of his great contributions in the past," said the coach. "We would rather face it this way than have him come to camp with intentions to play.

Holmes, Cooney on tap

CHICAGO (AP) — Boxing promoter Don King said Saturday he hopes to arrange a fight this fall between World Boxing Council heavyweight champion Larry Holmes and heavyweight contender Gerry Cooney as a prelude to a bout with the World Boxing Association champion.

However, King said he has yet to reach an agreement with Cooney's managers, who have said the undefeated heavyweight will meet the winner of a match this fall between WBA heavyweight champion Mike Weaver and top contender James "Quick" Tillis.

King and Holmes appeared at a press conference conference Saturday after attending the 10th annual convention of Operation PUSH, the civil rights group headed by the Rev. Jesse Jackson.

The aim of a Cooney-Holmes fight, King said, would be to set up a match between the holders of the WBA and WBC heavyweight titles, which have been split since after Leon Spinks defeated Muhammad Ali in 1978.

"If in fact we could consummate a Cooney deal, then (Holmes and Cooney) would be fighting around the same time as Weaver is fighting Tillis," King said. "That would set up a match between the two winners to unify the titles."

Holmes brushed aside suggestions that Weaver or Tillis might prove a tougher opponent than Cooney — "They're all the same," he said — but added that a bout with Cooney would attract the greatest attention.

"I think a lot of questions would be answered," Holmes said. "I think a lot of doubt will leave a lot of people's minds after I defeat Cooney."

An important aspect of the bout's appeal, King said, would be the potential for rivalry between supporters of Holmes, who is black, and Cooney, who is white.

"Cooney is the first fighter since (Rocky) Marciano who is a viable contender and who is white," Kin said. "We don't want to put a lot of emphasis on the white-black fight, but it is a white-black fight."

World records highlight Oslo meet

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Sebastian Coe, Britain's great middle distance runner, smashed more than a second off his world record in the 1,000 meters, with a time of 2 minutes, 12.18 seconds Saturday night in the Oslo Games international track and field meet at lightning-fast Bislett Stadium.

Coe's mark was one of two world records broken during the early events. The other mark came in the women's 5,000 as Ingrid Christensen of Norway was clocked in 15:28.43.

Coe, the Olympic 1,500-meter champion, bettered the world 1,000 mark of 2:13.40 he had set July 1, 1980 at Bislett.

It was the sixth outdoor world record he has established during his brilliant career. Last month, at Milan, Italy, he lowered his 800-meter world record from 1:42.80 at Bislett in 1979 to 1:41.72.

Hurdler James King of the United States set the early pace in the 1,000, running the opening 400 meters in 51.14. Then, Rob Harrison of Britain took the lead up to 600 meters.

At that point, Coe surged to the front. He passed 800 meters in 1:44.56, which was faster than the winning time of American James Robinson in the 800 only a short time earlier, and raced on to the record.

Coe said he was very tired after setting the record. He sat down, held his hands around his head and mumbled: "I need a doctor for this blister."

"But I'm very satisfied with my performance," he said. "I felt good except for that blister ... I had excellent help by King and Harrison.

"I guess it was as fast as I could have run tonight. But it was very hard for the last 50 meters," he added.

"There is something special with this stadium. The crowd is wonderful and lifts you beyond belief," Coe said.

He now has set 1,000-meter records twice at Bislett and 800, 1,500 and mile records once each.

"My goal for this season was to establish world records in all the four middle distances. Now I have the 800- and 1,000-meter records. There will be new opportunities later in the 1,5000-meter and the mile," Coe said.

In the women's 5,000, Christensen, a former cross country skier for Norway's national team, broke the world mark of 15:30.6, set by Jan Merrill of the United States at Palo Alto, Calif. March 22, 1980.

The 5,000 favorite, Grete Waitz of Norway, was leading when she was forced to drop out at the 4,000-meter mark. At that stage, Christensen, who has concentrated on cross country running and the marathon since giving up skiing, was in second place.

Ellen Wessinghage of West Germany and Cathy Toomey of the United States finished second and third, respectively. Merrill wound up a distant 13th.

Earlier, world record holder Edwin Moses of the United States extended his winning streak to 71, including 65 in finals, leading a 1-2-3 American sweep in the 400-meter intermediate hurdles.

Moses was timed in 47.99 seconds, somewhat slower than his world mark of 47.13, set last year at Milan, Italy. His compatriots, Bart Williams and King, were far behind in 49.93 and 50.37 seconds, respectively.

Carl Lewis, the sensational 20-year-old sophomore from the University of Houston, won the 100-meter dash in 10.19 seconds, but limped off the track after suffering a strained muscle at the finish line.

Lewis, the NCAA and national champion in both the 100 and the long jump, and James Sanford of the University of Southern California both beat Olympic champion Allan Wells of Scotland in the dash.

Three British women dominated the women's 400-meter hurdles event. Yvette Wray won, lowering the Bislett Stadium record to 56.56 seconds. Chris Warden and Debbie Skerritt placed second and third. Mary Appleby of Ireland had set the stadium record of 58.10 in 1979.

Sanford's time was 10.21. Wells was clocked in 10.39, with Ernest Obeng of Ghana fourth in 10.44 and Herschel Walker of the United States fifth in 10.68.

Robinson won the 800 in 1:44.95. West German hurdler Harald Schmid, who shunned a duel with Moses, was second, and Gerry Cook of Britain third.

The first big disappointent for the 15,000 fans came when 1980 Olympic champion Wladyslaw Kozakiewicz of Poland failed to clear his opening height of 17 feet, 8½ inches (5.40 meters) in the pole vault. e won theOlympic gold medal in Moscow last year by clearing 18-11½ (5.78 meters).

Computer picks squads

NEW YORK (AP) — A computer projection has selected National and American League All-Star squads based on player performances before the baseball strike began June 12.

The annual All-Star Game, which had been scheduled for Tuesday night at Cleveland Stadium, has been canceled by the walkout.

The computer, used for the Seagram Seven Crowns of Sports program, monitors individual play in the areas of consistency, productivity and statistical achievement.

Based purely on mathematical evaluations, the computer selections included three Montreal players — outfielders Tim Raines and Andre Dawson and catcher Gary Carter — for the NL team. Joining that trio were St.Louis teammates Keith Hernandez at first base and Tom Herr at second, Mike Schmidt of Philadelphia at third and Dave Concepcion at shortstop. Cincinnati's George Foster joined Dawson and Raines in the outfield and Houston's Bob Knepper was named the top pitcher.

For the American League, Dave Winfield of the New York Yankees, Boston's Dwight Evans and Baltimore's Ken Singleton were named to the outfield. The starting infield selected was Kansas City's Willie Aikens at first base, Bobby Grich of California at second, Chicago shortstop Bill Almon and third baseman Buddy Bell of Texas. The catcher was Cleveland's Bo Diaz and Ken Forsch of California was named the pitcher.

Based on 100 as the perfect efficiency score, New York reliever Rich Gossage had the top AL computer rating of 82.51. The top NL rating of 75.00 went to Raines.

Lentine leads Waukegan

WAUKEGAN, Ill. (AP) — Gip Lentine rolled a pair of 262 games Saturday to take a 64-pin opening round lead over Pete Couture in the $90,000 Waukegan Open pro bowling tournament.

Lentine, of Rowland Heights, Calif., fired 1,422 for six games, a 237 average, as he shoots for his first career Professional Bowlers Association title.

Fin & Feather

Costa Rica offers anglers everything

In our last Fin and Feather column, we boasted about the fine fishing for snook and tarpon in Costa Rica. Today, we'll see what in the way of tackle you need to fish in this beautiful foreign country, introduce the camp and its owners and other pertinent information about Costa Rica fishing.

Most of the fishing takes place in freshwater lagoons and at river mouths. One need not worry about rough water lagoons or sea sickness. Spinning, plug casting, fly fishing and trolling can all be used effectively.

Since most tarpon run between 50 and 90-pounds, fairly light tackle can be used. Lines testing 20 to 25 pounds are ideal for beginners to tarpon fishing; the more expert anglers may prefer to use lighter lines. For snook, 15 to 20-pound test lines are best and much lighter gear for the machaca, guapote and mojarra. A complete tackle list will be provided upon booking or on request from the camp.

THE SEASONS on the east coast of Costa Rica are fall and spring. The fall season starts in mid-August and runs through October. Many guests come to Costa Rica to take some of those giant snook. It is a good time for tarpon also — especially since the seas are often calm.

The main season is mid-January to mid-May. Tarpon should be in the lagoons in good quanities and generally there are enough big snook around also. The small fish, guapote, machaca, etc., are found year round.

Now for the camp. It's named Parismina Tarpon Rancho. Don't look for a swimming pool, air conditioning, cocktail lounge or glaring neon signs here. These comforts simply don't exist. Parismina Tapron Rancho is a comfortable fishing camp, consisting of a main lodge, seperate cottages with private bathrooms, an exotic garden, refrigeration, power plant and other necessities. Parismina can now accomadate up to 20 guests. The meals are excellent and inlcude lobster, steaks, roasts, chicken, snook, etc., cooked American style. The water is safe to drink. Beer, soft drinks an ice-cold water are provided daily in a cooler for your boat.

OUTDOORS

MR. AND Mrs. Jerry Tricomi own the camp. They bring more than 30 years of fishing camp experience into the neat, little fishing camp. They had previously operated one of the most successful Canadian camps.

There is excellent service to San Jose, Cost Rica, by a number of U.S. gateways such as Miami, New Orleans, Los Angeles, Houston, or New York. However, we would suggest taking Sahsa Airlines out of New Orleans or Air Florida out of Houston. Normally most clients fly to San Jose airport the evening before the scheduled arrival in camp, and stay overnight there at one of the hotels.

Parismina's representative will meet you at the airport and assist you to the hotel. The following morning, he will transfer you for your flight to Parismain. Parismina Tarpon Rancho uses modern twin engine aircraft to transport its guests from San Jose to camp. Nine-passenger Piper Navajo or Islanders are generally used. The flight is approximately 30 minutes long, and guests land on the new 3,000 foot hard surface air strip next to camp.

Another advantage is that a modern medical clinic is available less than an hour and a half from camp by boat. It there is any serious illness, you are not at the mercy of charter plane service and weather conditions. In case of emergency, your host maintains a small aircraft that can take you there in about 15 minutes.

COSTA RICA is one of Central America's best developed and most democratic countries. It is bordered by Nicaragua, to the north, Panama to the south, the Pacific Ocean to the west and the Caribbean on the east. The reason for fishing this unique country side is well-worth the trip. But the sights and sounds are simply out of this world.

For more information about Costa Rica fishing at Parismina Tarpon Rancho you may contact: The U.S. Representative, Tom Uragami, 1717 Carmen Drive, Elk Grove Village, Illinois 60007.

WEST TEXAS OUTDOORS

San Angelo to host bass championships

By ROD N. REELE

Over $12,000 in cash and prizes will be awarded at the Central Texas Bass championship July 18-19 at all three San Angelo lakes. The top 50 fishermen will be awarded cash prizes, boats, and motors. Entry fee is $30 and deadline is July 14 at Plaza Tower, Suite 412, San Angelo...

AT OAK Creek Lake, the Larry Norris family of Odessa took 34 white bass while trolling while Truman Armstrong, Midland, took a 16-pound cat on a trotline plus a dozen channel cats to 3-4 1/2 pounds. Charley Buys, Robert Prientis and Jane Barns, Odessa, teamed up to take more than enough fish for a fry, a catch that included a 19-pound yellow...

STRIPERS are back at Lake Spence with Joyce and Bob Dawson, Lubbock, landing a 16-pounder, but the largest catch was a 32-pound yellow catfish by James and Dennis Counts, Robert Lee.

Edith Rowe, Lubbock, caught nine stripers to 13 pounds while Odessan Tommy McCann caught 28 channel catfish to 2 1/2 pounds and Larry Knappich had three stripers to seven.

LAKE AMISTAD will be the site of the Lone Star Bass Association's pro tournament Aug. 1-2. Applications are available at Amistad Ldoge, Fishermen's Headquarters. Lake Amistad will be off limits July 20-29 and practice time is July 30 until 4 p.m. July 31. Drawing for partners will be 7:30 p.m. July 31 at Amistad Lodge.

Baseball Today

Sunday, July 12

On this date in baseball in 1966:

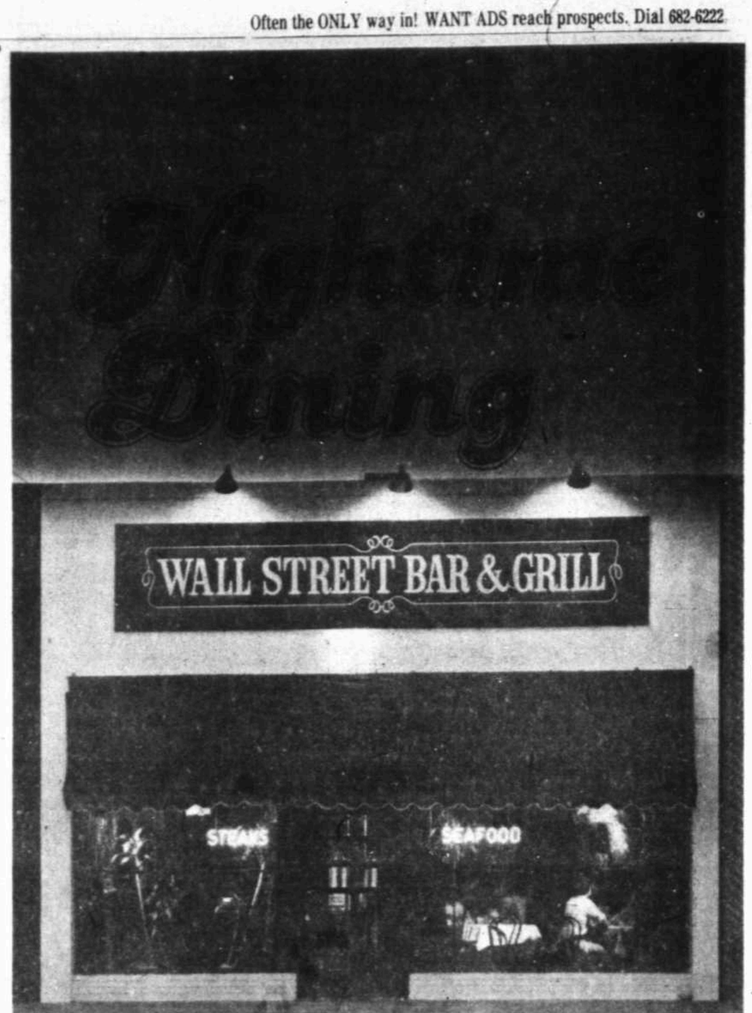

Maury Wills' run-scoring single in the 10th inning gave the National League a 2-1 All-Star Game victory in the searing 105-degree heat at St.Louis' new Busch Memorial Stadium.

On this date in 1955:

Stan Musial's 11th-inning homer off Frank Sullivan lifted the National League to a 6-5 victory in the All-Star Game at Milwaukee's County Stadium.

Holbert wins at Watkins Glen

Holbert, 34, of Warrington, Pa., went in front on the 48th lap of the 55-lap, 185-mile race over the Glen's twisting 3.377-mile circuit after leader Danny Sullivan broke a wheel and had to make a pitstop for repairs.

Holbert, driving a CRC-2, finished about 14 seconds in front of Sullivan, who drove a Lola T530. Sullivan, who has never won a Can Am race, finished second here last year, too.

Holbert, who averaged 112.05 mph, started the race in position six.

Fabi, 26, a former ski racer from Milan, Italy, and winner of the first two Can-Am races of the season, was in the pole position for the race and seemed a good shot to win his third.

He and Australian Brabham, 29, dueled for the lead early in the contest. Brabham was in front until Fabi overtook him on the 13th lap, but Brabham shot ahead again on the 19th lap and moved well ahead after Fabi's car broke down.

Then Brabham fell out of the race with engine proxlems of his own and Sullivan took the lead and held it until the busted wheel forced him into the pits on lap 50. Holbert then went by him and stayed in front.

Sullivan said he thinks the wheel broke because he was forced to go off course to get around a slower moving car a lap or two earlier.

Rocky Moran of Arcadia, Calif., was third; David Kennedy of Sacramento, Calif., came in fourth; and Randy Lewis of Hillsborough, Calif., was fifth.

Al Unser, three-time winner of the Indianapolis 500, crashed into a guard rail on the 18th lap after his suspension broke, but he wasn't injured.

Barizon, Brittain in Denver meet

Pete Barizon, Midland High School varsity tennis coach, and Dennis Brittain of Midland will participate in the United States Tennis Association Men's 40 Hardcourt Championships at Gates Tennis Center in Denver July 13-19.

Barizon, recent winner of the Andrews and Big Spring Highway 80 tournaments, was ranked No. 19 nationally in the men's 35 singls in 1977. He will play Mike Makaroff of Denver in the first round.

Brittain will be facing Jim Garcia of Aspen in the opening round of the tournament.

Glover D. upset in Peter Hurd

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. (AP) — Ruidoso patrons jumped all over Glover D. and made the gelding a commanding one-to-five favorite in the Peter Hurd spin which offered a total purse of $11,015.

But Glover D. ran into a buzzsaw in the form of Mr. Powder River, a speedburner who tore out of the gate and fought off the people's choice all the way Saturday.

As they turned for home, it was apparent Glover D. had more than he bargained for. As the favorite began to weaken, Jockey Leroy Coombs finally applied leather to Mr. Powder River. The 3-1 shot poured on the coals and put a half-length between himself and the favorite. He was much in control when he crossed the finish.

The gelding, who'd won his previous spin by nearly six lengths, packed 119 pounds in the Peter Hurd and picked up a victory paycheck for $6,743. The mutuel payoffs: $8, $2.20, $2.20.

Glover D. earned $2,472. The gelding paid $2.20 both to place and show.

The combination of Mr. Powder River and Glover D. produced a quiniela payoff of $3 even - a seasonal low.

Austin takes 9-stroke lead in Mayflower

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Debbie Austin shot a 3-under par 33 on the front nine Saturday and had an eagle on the 426-yard, par-5 16th hole to open a commanding 9-stroke lead over Myra Van Hoose and Louise Parks after three rounds of the $150,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association Mayflower Classic.

Austin, a veteran of 13 years on the tour who hasn't won since 1978, finished her third round with a 4-under-par 68. Her third consecutive below-par round on the 6,101-yard Country Club of Indianapolis course gave the leader a 54-hole score of 205.

The 33-year-old Austin, who ranks 21st on this year's money list, pulled away from the pack with four birdies and a bogey on the front nine. That gave her a 6-stroke lead over Beth Daniel as the leaders made the turn.

Daniel's dreams of catching Austin died when she scored a triple-bogey 6 on the 160-yard No.13 hole. Daniel hooked her tee shot left and it landed under a tree on a slope. Her second shot flew up the slope and over the green, and her third shot went over the green to a position near where her first shot landed.

The nightmare continued as last year's LPGA Player of the Year sent her fourth shot past the green before she lifted the ball 10 feet from the cup and sank the putt for her six.

Cathy Reynolds, who shot a career-best 66 in the second round to move to within one stroke of Austin, never got her game going. The 23-year-old Springfield, Mo., resident had four bogeys on the front nine. She had only one birdie all day and had three more bogeys and a double-bogey on the back side.

Van Hoose and Parks both shot even par to move into second place in the battle for the $22,500 winner's prize at 214.

Kriek, Pfister win at Hall of Fame

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Second-seeded Johan Kriek and unseeded Hank Pfister won semifinal matches Saturday in the $100,000 Miller Hall of Fame Tennis Championships.

Kriek, a South African who lives in Naples, Fla., beat Erik van Dillen of Burlingame, Calif., 6-4, 7-5.

Kriek and Pfister will play for the championship Sunday.

He notched the only service break of the first set in the third game. Kriek broke van Dillen's service three times in the second set, and only some sloppy play on Kriek's part kept van Dillen in the match.

ASA Deadline is 6 p.m. Monday

Deadline for entry in the District 26 Amateur Softball Association is 6 p.m. Monday. The $75 entry fee must be submitted to District Commissioner Freddie Ezell, 3306 West Ohio. Checks should be made payable to the Midland Softball Association.

The tournament will be held July 18-19 at Hogan Park and qualifiers will go to the Men's Open Slow Pitch Tournament at Waco Aug. 7-9. Bill Williams Tire Center, Gold Life and Odessa's Mitchell Enterprise already have earned berths to state.

Lofton, Pack miles apart

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Green Bay Packers and dissatisfied star receiver James Lofton appeared no closer to settling their contract dispute Saturday after exchanging their latest proposals.

Jerry Argovitz of Houston, Lofton's agent, said the Packers' offer, which reportedly would pay Lofton nearly $250,000 a year, did not provide sufficient security because of its reliance on incentive provisions rather than raises in the base salary.

He said that, after hearing the Packers' terms, he responded with another proposal.

"We were willing to accept those incentive clauses, but, in return, we wanted to have some guarantee of financial security," Argovitz said.

Bob Harlan, corporate general manager for the Packers, said the National Football League club, having consistently refused Lofton's demand for renegotiation of his contract, similarly could not guarantee a contract.

"I'm not happy with guaranteed contracts and we don't give them," Harlan said. "Nobody does in the league ... We don't renegotiate contrats and we dont guarantee contracts."

He said that, if Lofton's contract was guaranteed, "I'd have a line of players coming in asking for guarantees, and I couldn't blame them."

Lofton, who skipped the Packers' mini-training camp earlier this year, has threatened to sit out the season if his salary situation is not improved.

He signed a six-year contract as a first-round draft choice of the Packers in 1978, and his current contract reportedly would pay him a salary of $82,000 this year, plus incentive clauses nearly doubling that amount and a $40,000 annual payment that was part of his original signing bonus.

Real Estate Today

By DON HARVEY REALTOR
Owner, DON HARVEY REALTORS

THE COMING REAL ESTATE BOOM

If you think home prices are high now, just wait. A new upsurge is coming-possibly as early as next year. Housing shortages could develop as demand exceeds supply. The bullish housing forecasts are based on sound reasoning:

1) Government and private sources commonly project that 1.5 million to 1.6 million new households will be formed annually during the decade of the 80's, compared with a yearly average of about 1.4 million in the 1970's.

2) Home buying by singles will increase.

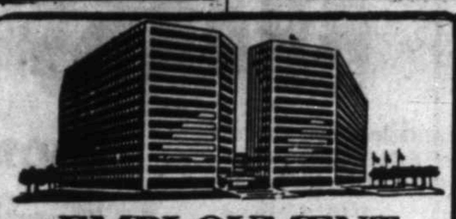

3) More older people are expected to continue living in their homes after their children grow up and leave, a trend that will result in fewer resales.

4) The numbers of dwelling units that must be replaced because of demolition, condemnation or conversion to non-residential uses is expected to increase.

All of this presages strong housing demand, perhaps stronger than that of the post-recession 1970's, when prices rose to record highs.

If you have any questions on this subject or any other aspect of real estate, feel free to phone or drop in at DON HARVEY Realtors 702 Andrews Hwy. Phone 683-5333. We're here to help! Come in for your free copy of "Home or Living" magazine.

SR. JOINT VENTURE AUDITOR

How would you like the challenges, responsibilities and the friendliness associated with a smaller company yet have all of the great benefits of a major company too?

Nortex Gas & Oil Company is a fast growing exploration and production subsidiary of InterNorth, Inc. We have just moved near the beautiful Memorial Park area into the brand new InterNorth Building located at Woodway and Post Oak Lane. We have occupied only half the total space in anticipation of our plans for fast growth.

Due to recent promotion within our company, the position of Sr. Join Venture Auditor is now available. Responsibilities include traveling approximately 35-40% of the time, performing joint venture audit activities including aiding the supervisor in planning audit schedules, preparing necessary work papers, assisting with presentations to operators, as well as recommendations to management and participating in settlements as assigned.

You need sufficient experience in oil & gas joint venture auditing to be able to perform audits on your own with little or no supervision; offshore joint venture audit experience is a real plus.

We invite you to call (713) 940-5508 or write to: Mr. Fred Barksdale, Nortex Gas & Oil Company, P.O. Box 4420, Houston, Texas 77210 (no agencies please). An equal opportunity employer, m/f/h.

Meet our new sports machine that's powered by the amazing NAPS-Z hemi engine. A modern wonder of power and efficiency.

Datsun Sports Truck works like a truck. Moves like a car. And looks like a winner.

A super graphic S/T stripe treatment and black sport mirror set it apart. Inside, there are bucket seats with special new upholstery design and door trim to match. And there's a sports 3-spoke wrapped steering wheel.

Choose 2-wheel drive or 4x4. Dress it up any way you like, then get going in the new Datsun Sports Truck.

Selective Offering from Permian Real Estate

Weeping Willow Lane (off Solomon Lane)

This unusual home has lots of extra features. A vaulted ceiling and Austin stone fireplace accent the main living area. French doors provide access to the living area and high gloss red brick floors are throughout the residence.

The master bedroom is carpeted in beige, and has double walk-in closets and full bath. A spiral staircase in the bedroom leads to a loft sitting room above, with an attractive hardwood floor. An upstairs studio above the garage has a southern skylight -- perfect for the family artist.

The kitchen features built-in appliances, including a wet bar, and has a dining and sitting area. Three carpeted bedrooms and two baths are in a separate wing. Zoned gas heating and air conditioning provides comfort control.

Open House

This Weekend

See how Capp Homes beats the high cost of housing.

Come see an open house that's totally unique ... a Capp Homes Open House. What makes this open house so unusual? The house isn't even finished yet. The exterior is erected, but the interior is not yet complete. Why? Because we want you to see for yourself all the benefits of the "Finish-It-Yourself House" program.

You'll see the excellent quality of Capp construction materials and workmanship. Capp Homes are custom built from your plans or ours. Nothing is pre-fab or modular.

At the open house, you'll learn that by finishing it yourself, or by acting as your own general contractor, you'll save a bundle—thousands of dollars, compared to having an ordinary builder construct the same house on your lot.

And Capp Homes, through Evans Financial Corp., a subsidiary of Evans Products Co., has various financing programs available for qualified buyers.
Find out more this weekend.

Come to the Open House ... rain or shine!

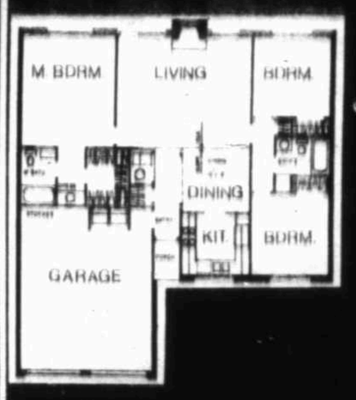

CAPP HOMES

Robin Franklin, above, a professional body builder and fitness director for an Odessa racquetball club, starts out her daily routine by hoisting heavy weights before moving on to pulldown machinery, right. Repeated exercises here allow her to keep her swimmer's back in shape and to develop her upper back muscles. Below, Diana Boykin shows the strain of a two-hour workout.

BARBELL BELLES

Delicately sculptured pink fingernails grip 85-pound barbells and balance them in mid-air. At the count of three, the weights rise shakily, now steadily as outstretched arms become taut. Wall-to-wall mirrors throw back a hundred reflections of strained, swollen muscles.

With a concentrated release of breath — or sigh of relief — the barbells come down slowly and the four women who have gathered to work out at a health spa, stop to rest their deltoids. As professional bodybuilders and competitors in last night's Mr. and Ms. Permian Basin Bodybuilding championships held in Odessa, they have one thing in common: 5'3" to 5'5" 100-pound brawny bodies consisting only of highly-developed biceps, triceps, quadraceps and pectorals.

Incredible hulks? Yes, but only in the most subtle, feminine sense. These women's petite frames can be misleading when they can lift almost one and a half times their weight in iron.

"When we're wearing street clothes, you can't tell who we are. We look like normal people," says 23-year-old Diana Boykin of Odessa, who is fairly new to the professional bodybuilding circuit.

"A lot of people say I don't look like a bodybuilder," says broad-shouldered 22-year-old Robin Franklin, last year's winner of the Ms. Permian Basin contest. "That's fine. I don't want to look like one until I go on stage. When you get pumped up, you can look like a completely different person."

Robin, who appears more like a high school cheerleader until she flexes a 12½-inch bicep, is a veteran of bodybuilding competitions; in the last year and a half, she has entered seven statewide meets and has placed in all of them. She most recently won fifth place in the Mid-America Bodybuilding match last month in Dallas where she lost out to "a tiny little gorilla who had a set of abdomens that would knock you dead."

After a friend introduced her to basic bodybuilding techniques about a year ago, Robin became interested in the sport and began to take it seriously by transforming her daily exercises into a more disciplined routine. "I've always liked physiques, not necessarily bodybuilders, but nice bodies," she says. "I've always been a very physical person."

Robin's small stature (5'4", 104 pounds) is the single most important factor in women's competitions. "The shorter you are the easier you get cut up (or develop muscle definition)," she says. "You have less muscle to work with, so it's easier to get bulky. You look better faster."

Although a well-defined bicep will score favorable points, judges will frown upon the muscle bound "Amazon woman." "This is where a lot of women go wrong," Robin says. "They try to go real heavy on the weights. They get their size up but they have no cuts. Bodybuilding is your form, your execution of the exercise. When you get out on stage, the judge isn't going to know if you can bench press 200 pounds or 30 pounds. He just knows what you look like and that's what counts."

In addition to muscle lines and definition, judges also scan the contestants for symmetry and proportion. "You may have huge calves but crummy shoulders," Robin says. "This is what the judges look for. They look for what is not being developed. Presentation is another aspect. There's a lot of women who look great, but cannot pose. They go out there and flub up."

Because female bodybuidling is relatively new, judges have not really devised a consistent code of standards by which to rate competitors, Robin says. "There's still a lot of them who want us to go out there and act like guys. The thing about bodybuilding is that you're at the mercy of the judges. If they don't like the way you have your hair, your bathing suit or your smile, they'll place you a little farther down. Bodybuilding isn't like swimming where you either beat the clock or you don't and that's why it's very stressful and emotional."

To be successful, a bodybuilder is required to lead a Spartan existence — no junk food frenzies or midnight indulgences are acceptable. Robin works out 12 hours a week and maintains a strict diet of vegetables and fruits to keep her cholesterol levels at bare miniumum.

"Fatty foods really slow your body down," she says. "You defeat yourself if you're working out and not watching your diet. What I do after a contest, though, is overeat for two days and make myself practically sick. I get all the craving out of my system. It's different from football players who go and work out for two hours and grunt and groan and then go home and eat anything they want. Bodybuilding affects your life all day long."

Robin has a natural advantage over her competitors because she has a higher level of testosterone than the average female. "Which means I'll be a better bodybuilder than the normal person because I have a little more male hormones," she says. "I'll get cut up more."

Still, according to Robin, innate abilities or qualities are giving way to artificial shortcuts in contemporary bodybuilding contests — mainly through the use of steroids; large quantities of male hormones which can be injected into the muscle to pump up its size.

"If you see a woman who has got large abs, you know she's either worked her butt off and dieted like crazy or she's on drugs," Robin says. "All the men do this, there's not a one who doesn't. They all have to keep up with each other. Realistically, they can't get that big from working out, their size is through drugs. In some of the bigger contests, they take blood tests and will kick them out for using steroids. But, it really isn't enforced in the smaller competitions."

Steroids or not, Robin chooses to turn her back on her male counterparts. "Personally, I don't care for male bodybuilders. They're too big, it's too much," she says. "Too much of a good thing is bad. Women will never have the same size men do. We're not going to get real massive, but we can get definition and lines."

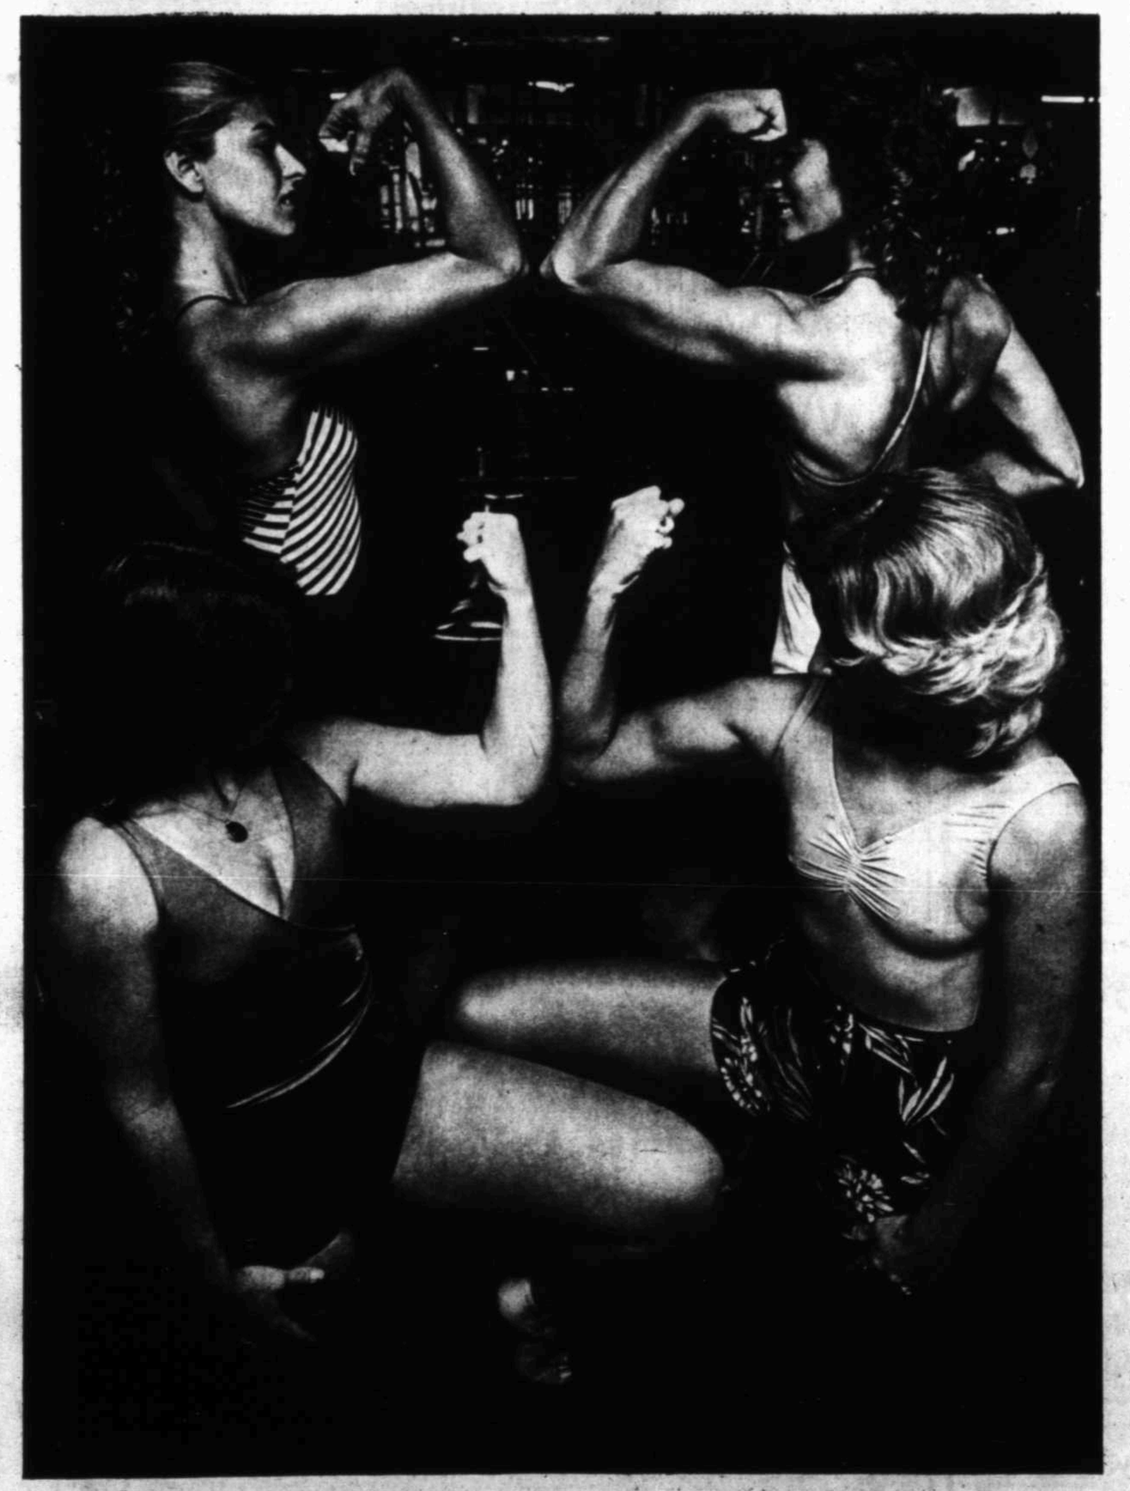

For Robin, developing femininity to its extreme requires constant exercise repetitions and a great deal of time in front of the mirror. "Yes, maybe some people think this is conceited," she says. "In golfing, you work on your swing and your stroke. In bodybuilding, the sport is your body and instrument, so of course we're going to do a lot of looking in the mirror. The great, great bodybuilders have been doing it for years."

The sport is more than a fulltime preoccupation with primping. "The better I look, the better I feel," Robin says, denouncing the critics who claim her interest is purely for the sake of vanity. "Bodybuilding builds your character. I have more confidence in myself now as a person."

Despite her rugged exterior, Robin believes femininity goes only skin deep. "Femininity to me is the way you act, the way you present yourself. It's a psychological thing," she says. "You could have a real muscle bound physical person that's feminine deep down."

However, Robin believes other women outside of the sport are yet to accept muscularity as ladylike. "They appear turned off by it, but really they feel threatened," she says. "The way society brings us up, we're not supposed to do anything physical like this. But, I think deep down, women admire this. They're wishing they could do it too. They'll go to these meets and you'll hear them say to their husbands, 'You don't really like this, do you?'"

It is the male audience that is more receptive to female bodybuilding, Robin feels. "Men used to look toward the little girl that is helpless. I think that's different now. Oh, I'm sure there are men who still like the girl who can't open her car door. But, times are changing and most men think it's really great I'm doing this."

Local district hosts state meet

Stokes-Parker District, presided over by Dr. Ruby Morris of Midland, was host district for the event. The district is composed of clubs in Abilene, Big Lake, Big Spring, Lubbock, Midland, McCamey, Odessa, San Angelo and Sweetwater.

Convention was highlighted by a banquet, in which keynote speaker was Dr. Viola Coleman of Midland. Awards were also presented to the Shining Belles Girls Club of Tyler, high point winner in its division; Dacia Newsome of Fort Worth, who captured the talent award; and Dr. Ruby Morris, outstanding district president.

Theme of the event was "Human Needs and Cultural Awareness."

Special speakers at the opening meeting included Steve Davidson, city councilman; Mrs. Acquilla Watson, chairperson, Citizens for Representative Government; Rev. C.S. Johnson, president of Ministerial Alliance; Dr. Joe Baressi, deputy superintendent for Midland Independent School District; James Bradford, representative from the Greek sorority/fraternity organizations; Mrs. Betty Merritt, president of Midland Federation of City Clubs; Mrs. N.W. Stokes of San Angelo, president emeritus of Stokes-Parker district; Mrs. Callie Pink of Richmond, state president; and Youth Choir from Greater Ideal Church in Midland, who presented entertainment throughout the convention.

Second day of convention was devoted to activities by district presidents, including reports made at meeting and presentation of the presidents at noon luncheon.

Presidents and their districts represented included Dorothy Loftin of Marlin, Carrie Adams district; Florida Jackson of Port Arthur, Mary Alphin district; Frances Anderson of Terrell, Urissa Christian district; Dr. Morris; Johnnie Y. Rice of Austin, Mary Church Terrell district; Ethel Williams of Ennis, Isabel Smith district; Alma Delley of Tyler, Olivia Williams district; and Emeola Mills of Houston, Olivia Washington district.

Convention culminated in a panel discussion on "Involved Action in Education and Human Needs is Our Goal." Moderator was Dr. Morris. Subjects under discussion included involved action in education, in family relation-human rights; in job opportunities and employment and in economic leadership for this decade. Panel members included Mrs. Delley of Tyler, Joyce Williams of Fort Worth and Velma Jeter of Orange.

Have a bulge here or there? Then be careful of what you wear!

By KARREN MILLS
Associated Press Writer

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — If you can't leave the strawberry shortcake alone and have tried all those diets but haven't had much luck keeping the pounds off, Bonnie August may have the answer for you.

"Even if you can't seem to muster the willpower to follow a tough diet and exercise regimen — or even if your bone structure just wasn't built thin — you'll find you can still dress thin," Ms. August says.

She explains how in her newly published book, "The Complete Bonnie August's Dress Thin System," which outlines 642 ways to correct figure faults with clothing.

"All those people you think have the perfect figure are working very hard to look the way they do," Ms. August said in an interview in Minneapolis.

While Ms. August said she doesn't believe a "perfect figure" exists, she said every body type can be improved on with the proper choice of clothing.

"People should get the idea of 'perfect' out of their minds and learn about how they can look much better," said Ms. August, director of Women's Design for Danskin.

Vertical, diagonal and V-lines are the key to looking thin, says Ms. August.

"If you have a stomach problem, never wear a belt. That just draws attention to it. It's like arrows screaming out, 'Look how wide I am.' Draw attention away from the waist area to the face by choosing a V-neckline, for instance," she said.

And never wear underwear that's too tight, because it emphasizes bulges and creates new ones.

Ms. August also says beige underwear is the best choice, because it is less noticeable than white, even under white clothing. And the lines underwear creates are horizontal, so they're not slimming.

Dressing well need not be more expensive, Ms. August said.

"One of my aims in the book (which includes about 1,000 illustrations) is to help people spend less and not make expensive mistakes when they select clothing," she said.

"My dressing system is like a cookbook. Once you learn the basics of cooking — how to saute, for instance — you can make almost any recipe.

let's go ahead and use it.

Volumes of bureaucratic regulations restrict our use of coal at a time when its use needs to be encouraged.

We Americans have always been forward-looking people. We've always kept our eyes — and our options — open.

An energy option we need to exercise is the use of coal to generate electricity. It makes sense: Coal is our most abundant fuel with known reserves that will last more than 300 years at present rates of consumption; its cost is rising slower than that of other fuels; and using it helps reduce our petroleum imports.

The largest obstacle to our continued development of this necessary resource is over-zealous government regulation. By imposing unnecessary measures this unrealistic over-regulation slows our progress, increases the cost of your electricity, and does little or nothing to protect the environment. For example:

- Present standards for coal plants require more stringent emission limits on a plant using low-sulfur coal than a plant using high-sulfur coal, which, in effect, provides an incentive to use "dirtier" coal and penalizes plants that use low-sulfur or "cleaner" coal.
- Regulatory documentation for a permit to mine coal in Texas in 1975 consisted of a single report about one-half inch thick. Obtaining permits for the same area in 1980 required volumes of reports.

We have the technology today to use coal cleanly and safely. It's plentiful and relatively inexpensive, if its use is not over-regulated. And we need the energy now.

Design for a perfect sewing room

By BETTY W. KINSER
Copley News Service

If you could have the ideal sewing room, how would you put it together?

How much storage would you have? Would it be open or closed storage?

Would you have a permanent cutting table or one that disappeared when not in use?

Would you have your sewing machine on an island table or against the wall?

What about lighting? Windows? Outlets?

All these things become important when you think about the "ideal sewing room."

Dear Betty: Have always read your column in the Desert Sun and thought you might be able to help me.

I have just built a new house and am going to finally have a sewing room. But I do not know how to design it for maximum efficiency.

I would like to have the storage set up in a way that I can store bolts of fabric, laces, threads, buttons, shoe boxes, sewing books, accessories, etc. Would like to have a pull-down cutting surface.

My husband is ready to start making this as soon as I come up with the design. — Arlyne Chalker, Palm Desert, Calif.

A. Not a minute to lose, Arlyne! We must think fast.

The most convenient storage for bolts of fabric are shelves deep enough for the length of the bolt. Stand the bolts on the side edge with the bolt-end information toward you. Easy reach, easy see.

Machine accessories should be in a divided drawer, each compartment labeled so that each accessory goes back into the right spot.

There should be a special spot for your ironing board and iron. You should have one or two full-length mirrors, a folding screen and a comfortable rocker (for resting while doing handwork, of course).

Gas tank funnel

By AL CARRELL

Whenever I take a trip in the car and expect to be driving at highway speeds, I like to add a gasoline additive. This despite the fact that some auto experts say that gasoline already has all the additives your car needs. I still like to use it though. With the last several cars we've had, however, the gas tank is set far enough back in so that when you try to pour the additive, you end up spilling part of it before you get the can into the opening. At the price of the stuff, you don't want to waste a drop. Use the previous empty container as a funnel for the next dose. Cut out an opening on one side of the plastic bottle. Then poke the spout into the tank opening, leaving the hole facing up. Now you can pour into your funnel without dripping and dribbling.

+ + +

Dear Al: You're always coming up with weird ways to remove white water spots from furniture. I've found that you can smear a little peanut butter over the spot, and then rub with a rag wrapped around your index finger. The abrasive action plus the peanut oil will remove the ring. When the white spot is gone, wipe away the peanut butter and polish the furniture. — F.W.

Weird, but it works.

Dear Al: Once when you talked about ceiling fans, you pointed out that the blades opposite each other should be perfectly balanced or you could have wobbling and vibration. I found that one pair of my blades were slightly out of balance. I only needed to add a slight amount of weight to the lighter blade. I did this by merely sticking tabs of electrician's tape to the top side of the blade. The tape on the top never shows, and it's easy to cut off just the right amount of tape when only a small change is needed. — P.S.N.

Another way is to pour melted wax into the top cavity of the iron (the metal piece that holds the blade).

+ + +

A SUPER HINT — When a home center had a special cheap price on particle board stacking cubes, I bought several. They're handy for lots of things. I just found a new use for a pair. I wished for taller sawhorses during a recent project. I quickly made my sawhorses grow a bit by adding the height of a stacking cube to each horse. The cubes were held firmly to the top by C-clamps, and the extra height meant I didn't have to bend over. After the project was done, the cubes were still on hand as catchalls.

DEAR ABBY

No gifts policy can be polite

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I will celebrate our 40th wedding anniversary soon. Our children plan a party for us in the social hall of our church.

A few years ago you ran a sample invitation in your column that I liked very much. It was a nice way of saying, "No gifts, please."

Will you please run it again? I'm sure others will find it helpful, too. Thank you. — ABBY FAN

DEAR FAN: Here it is:

DEAR READERS: I have stated many times that any mention whatsoever of gifts was improper on an invitation. This includes the forthright "No gifts, please," as well as the tasteless (in my view) suggestion that cash is preferred to any other type of gift.

Many sent sample invitations in which gifts were mentioned. Below are two that changed my mind:

"Jane and Bob Smith invite you to dine with us on the evening of June 1 at our home at 7 p.m.

"It is in celebration of our 20th wedding anniversary. Your friendship is a cherished gift. We respectfully request no other."

"The children of Iver and Helen Dahl invite you to celebrate with them the 50th wedding anniversary of their parents. A reception will be held May 7, at 2 p.m., at the Elmhurst Country Club.

"We request your help in compiling a book which recalls memories from our parents' first 50 years of marriage. On the enclosed sheet, we ask that you write one memory or experience that you have shared with them and return it to us by April 26. We believe that the loving memories they have shared with you, their friends, would be the most treasured gift they could receive; therefore, we request that no other gift be sent."

DEAR ABBY: I would like to pass on some very valuable experience to women who might find themselves in the same situation I was in 10 years ago.

As an attractive 55-year-old widow, I was wined, dined and courted by a very desirable widower in his early 60s. He proposed marriage to me on the condition that his children approved of me.

Well, I passed their inspection with flying colors, but now I wish I hadn't. When he was well, his children came first. Now that he's sick, he's all mine. — STUCK

DEAR STUCK: Nobody gets a lifetime guarantee of good health. YOU could have become sick and been all HIS.

DEAR ABBY: I would like to know if I am living with a talented poet or an incurable woman-chaser.

My husband and I are in our middle years, and I thought him faithful until I found in his desk several hundred love poems he admits he composed himself. Some are as bland as unsalted popcorn, but most are more like enchiladas!

These impassioned paeans of pleading, praise and ecstacy contain the names of more than a dozen women — Ginny, Julie, Linda, Jackie, Edna, Florence, etc. All, he insists, are casual encounters about whom he has fantasized.

Is it possible that there is no foundation whatsoever for all these torrid "love affairs" he so vividly described in his poems? Just how much "poetic license" should one be permitted? — POET'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Poets have vivid imaginations, but the only way you can determine whether your husband is fantasizing or philandering is to catch him in the latter. Meanwhile, renew his license and forget it.

Start your oven recycling movement

By PATRICK DENTON
Copley News Service

It seems to me that a few years back the average family was hard-pressed to fill two garbage cans a week but today, with all the frills of the packaging industry that must be disposed of, our garbage cans runneth over.

Around our place, we try to cope by using our own recycling methods. The most basic involves disposing of any kitchen vegetable waste by either composting it or digging it directly into the garden soil and none finds its way into our garbage cans.

There are other means of making good use of items that would otherwise be destined for the dump. For example, that square biscuit tin in which you received some tasty treatslast Christmas can prove most handy. The lid can be used for a plant tray, to catch any water overflow from small plants, while the tin itself will make an excellent seed box after you punch holes in the bottom to provide drainage.

You'll save on potting soil as well as aid drainage by placing a thin layer of stones or broken crockery in the bottom of the tin before filling with potting soil The container can be seeded with houseplant seed, herb seeds or even used for small cuttings.

Small round candy or biscuit tins are handy for storing balls of garden twine. Place the ball of twine inside the tin and punch a hole in the lid, threading the twine up through the hole in the lid, making an ideal twine dispenser.

Coffee tins with plastic tops can be useful for cuttings. Ater punching holes in the base of the tin, place crockery or stones on the bottom for better drainage. Fill only about half with rather sandy potting soil and space the cuttings around the base of the tin. Water well and replace the lid to provide a moist atmosphere that is especially desirable for rooting.

Plastic cups often used for picnics or office and factory coffee breaks can be very useful for inverting over cuttings to keep them moist. They're also great for spring indoor seeding.

Place the plastic cups five at a time inside each other and thrust a kniife up through the bottoms for drainage. This assembly line approach makes the job go faster than if you did them one at a time but mind what you're doing lest you stab your other hand. This drainage provision is vital with plastic cups as the material allows no evaporation of water from its sides and the water will tend to collect in the soil if a drainage hole isn't provided.

Large plastic bags, such as those used by dry cleaners, can be used as a protective covering around tomato plants placed out in the garden. Bend wire, or a coat hanger, into a circle, straighten the handle to stick in the ground, and place the plastic bag over the hoop. This will fit over the plant and provide a miniature greenhouse to get the young plants started well in the outdoor garden.

A variation of this is to make the small greenhouses for seed trays. If short sticks are stuck into the corners of a seedling container, the plastic bag may be slipped sidewaysover the container and held above the seedlings by the sticks, possibly discarded ones from the children's ice cream confections.

600 species

PALMDALE, Fla. (AP) — There are some 600 species of eucalyptus trees in the world. Some grow 300 feet tall, others less than six feet.

Native to Australia, eucalyptus trees are currently grown in the United States on an experimental basis, reports Georgia-Pacific, which grows eucalyptus here.

A pacemaker for Victor Ayala, age 6

Victor Ayala, 6, is recovering from heart surgery.

By CAROLYN COIL
Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — Victor Emanuel Ayala, 6, has a new grandmother, a new uncle and a new chance at life.

His new relatives are Rosario and Efren Pienado of suburban Torrance. Victor's been living with the Pienados since January when he came here from Baja California for a life-extending operation on his heart.

Victor's new chance at life is being made possible by a pacemaker that keeps his damaged heart pumping regularly.

Because he is so young, there's a possibility Victor won't need the pacemaker permanently, says Pienado while he watches the slender boy chasing a red balloon under the coffee table in the Pienado living room.

Victor's been fighting for his life since he was born 25 miles from the Flying Samaritan clinic at El Alamo in Baja. His mother took him there for a newborn checkup that indicated Victor's heart might not be functioning properly.

The blood in Victor's heart was exchanging when it shouldn't and only one-third of his blood was actually being oxygenated, explains Fernando Pienado, vice president of the South Bay chapter of Flying Sams and Efren's brother. During surgery in February, the lower chamber of his heart was repaired.

Project Concern had scheduled surgery for Victor when he was 3. However, a death in the family prevented him from keeping that appointment.

For the next three years, he played with his three brothers and two sisters on his parents' small ranch while they worked 12 to 16 hours a day trying to raise enough corn and alfalfa to support their family.

"We assumed Victor had had his surgery," says Nancy Callison, president of the South Bay chapter. "But last year, when we saw his mother at the clinic, we learned that he hadn't.He was pale, short of breath and tired quickly."

Without surgery, doctors gave Victor little chance of living more than six months.

"We moved quickly," says Callison.

In January, Fernando Pienado and pilot Dick Levy flew to Baja to bring Victor to the United States.

Within a month Victor had his surgery. Although doctors say his survival is a miracle, says Efren Pienado, his heart is not functioning 100 percent.

"His heart didn't want to work after he came off the heart-lung machine," says Victor's adopted uncle. "One portion still is not working too well. That's why he has the pacemaker. But the doctors think his heart eventually will take over."

The day of the surgery, the Pienados and Flying Sam members were given little hope that Victor would survive the involved operation.

"We were told he would not live, that there was no hope," says Efren, rumpling Victor's hair and giving him an affectionate hug.

Recently, however, Victor's doctors told him he could begin to choose his own activities and to make his own decisions about which ones are too tiring.

Flying Samaritans is a non-profit health care organization that provides medical and dental care for people like Victor.

Friends and co-workers of Flying Sams have helped Victor by donating clothing, toys and other necessities, and 26 people gave blood for him.

People who meet Victor are captivated by his soft brown eyes and impressed by his matter-of-fact attitude about his heart condition.

"He's very philosophical," says Efren Pienado. "He was preparing his father for the operation in a very factual way. And when he was in the hospital, the nurses and doctors were impressed because he never complained about anything, not even the pain."

Instead of his parents offering reassurance to Victor, it is the child with wisdom beyond his 6 years who understands what his parents must be feeling, separated both by distance and by lack of communication.

"Tell them (his parents) not to worry, I'm all right," Victor told Fernando Pienado when the Flying Sams were making the trip to El Alamo. "You go and visit my mother and father. If I go, I will want to stay."

HINTS FROM HELOISE

More nylon net magic

DEAR HELOISE:
You always talk about ways of working with nylon net, especially in the kitchen. Now, where, oh where, do you buy this magic net?

I went to a major fabric store and they showed me some but nothing that looked like the sturdy stuff which could be used for all the things you and your readers have suggested.

Please let me into the magic circle of the nylon net admirers too. — Rose Stearn

+ + +

Dear heart, consider yourself one of our most beloved members of that magic circle. Just go back to the store and purchase a few yards of that fragile looking net and discover for yourself just how deceptive appearances can be.

Actually, the stuff is pretty tough, though granted the quality has deteriorated somewhat since the material was first introduced.

It still makes nice scrubbers, cleaning squares, laundry bags (double thickness), strainers or can pitch in for 101 other household uses mentioned in the column from time to time.

As a precaution, if you are going to use the net around food, purchase white only, just in case any color should leach out.

Keep an extra yard or two around the house and you'll probably discover uses for it the rest of us haven't even thought of yet.

DEFROSTING TRICK
Dear Heloise: If you dislike defrosting your refrigerator-freezer because of the hassle involved, I have a hint for you.

My mom defrosted ours and afterwards sprayed the inside walls with non-stick cooking spray.

Now when that defrosting chore has to be done, the ice falls off the sides much faster. — Julia DeLand

KEEPING TOAST WARM
Dear Heloise: To keep toast warm while more bread is in the toaster, place several layers of napkins or paper towels on a plate.

Then, as soon as the bread is toasted, place it on the plate and cover it with a domed pot cover, bowl, etc. As each slice is done, place it under the cover.

Your family never had toast so good — and so hot! — Mrs. John R.

PATTERN HOLDER
Dear Heloise: I have a sewing tip I would like to share...

I purchased cork letters, an "S," an "E," and a "W," which are about a foot high and one-fourth inch thick, then put them up on the wall behind my sewing machine, just about eye level when I am sitting.

Now, with the aid of two thumbtacks, my pattern instructions are where they can be easily read without having to put down my work.

BAGGING IT
Dear Heloise: For large cleaning jobs requiring the use of plastic garbage bags, place the bags over the legs of open TV snack tables. (Turn the tables upside down.)

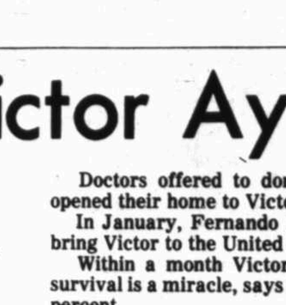

Less bending — easier to use. — Mrs. Mary Hobson

FOIL PIE TINS
Dear Heloise: I seem to accumulate many of those little foil pot pie tins, so I take them to picnic gatherings to use for runny salads, etc.

Eliminates having juices you don't want mixed with your other foods. As they are disposable, simply toss them in the trash if you don't care to save them. — Mrs. I.R.

AT WIT'S END

Sick and skinny

By ERMA BOMBECK

I have ambivalent feelings about being under the weather.

On one hand, I hate feeling lousy. On the other hand I know that I am dwindling down to a mere skeleton of myself. I can feel it as I lie there in a loose nightgown, my stomach flat, barely making a ripple under the mounds of blankets and sheets.

There is no doubt in my mind that when I stand up after a day or two, my skin will look like it was made for someone else, I will have to puncture new holes in all my belts, and I will fulfill my lifetime wish of being able to cross my legs and lock the ankles behind them without manual assistance.

You'd think I'd know better. How many times have I had to learn the painful way that water, drunk while you have a fever, contains 8,000 calories a glass — or a piece of dry toast contains active cellulite.

I do not know which parent passed on to me the metabolism that caused me to gain weight during the delivery of all three children, but when I find out, I am not going to be a sport about it.

All I know is when I subtracted an 8.4-ounce baby and another ten pounds of water, I came up with a three-pound weight gain.

No matter how bad I look or how crummy I feel, I am one of those patients who can always force a little food down. So what's a little nausea? Bring on the bacon. A sore throat? How about a little popcorn? A raging fever? Let's bake something!

I ran into a friend the other day who looked like a bas-relief map of Asia. "What happened?" I asked. "You look like you've dropped ten pounds."

"Only five," she said. "I had my teeth cleaned and I didn't feel like eating last night."

It's not fair. If we're supposed to be created equal, let's get some standards going here. I knew last week when I crawled out of bed after a bout with a cold that I had lost another person. I could feel it. I stepped on the scale.

I should never have had seconds on the I.V.'s.

Lifestyle guidelines

The following are suggested guidelines for publication of stories in the Lifestyle Department of The Midland Reporter-Telegram:

Information for our Sunday pages must be in our office by 5 p.m. the preceding Tuesday; or two days before publication in a daily paper.

Engagement announcements must appear at least four weeks before the wedding date. Wedding stories must be submitted within a week of the event.

Engagements, weddings, anniversaries and club notices must be submitted in writing. All materials should include the name and telephone number of the person submitting them. The Reporter-Telegram has forms for engagement and wedding announcement stories.

We cannot mail pictures or forms to persons living within Midland. Pictures must be picked up in the Lifestyle office within one month after publication.

Only the bride's picture will be used with both the engagement and wedding announcement.

Pictures should be black and white, preferably glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but they may reproduce poorly. Good reproduction cannot be assured when color prints are used. In general, snapshots are not acceptable.

There is no charge for publication of pictures and stories.

Leading ladies listed

NEW YORK — Over the years, many women have broken new ground by becoming the first female in an all-male field. From a recent issue of "Seventeen" magazine, here are some women who took the lead in areas dominated by men, appearing in author Joan McCullough's book, "First of All."

— The first female police detective was Isabella Goodwin. After 16 years as a matron with the New York City Police Department, she was promoted to acting detective sergeant first grade. She served for 12 more years without further promotion, retiring in 1924.

— The first elected female senator was Hattie Ophelia Wyatt Caraway. When her husband, Sen. Thaddeus Caraway of Arkansas died in 1931, Hattie was appointed to serve out his term. Later, she successfully ran for re-election, serving another six years.

— The first female astronomer was Maria Mitchell, a Nantucket schoolteacher and librarian who became an expert in astronomy. In October 1847, she sighted a new comet, which was later named after her.

Beauty pageant producers say they aim to entertain audiences

By STEVE BREWER
Associated Press Writer

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — And here she is, ladies and gentlemen, Miss Texas USA 1982 — Richard Guy and Rex Holt.

"The real Miss Texas is me and Rex because we will be here in 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984, 1985," Guy said. "1981 belongs to Diana (Durnford, the current Miss Texas), but we're behind it every year."

Guy and Holt are Guyrex Associates of El Paso and they are the engineers of what they say is the biggest state beauty pageant in the country.

Together with secretary-executive assistant Carolyn Mitchell — "She's the 'Associates,'" says Guy — they direct, produce, orchestrate, design and costume a pageant like this year's — with 102 contestants, dancers, showgirls and elaborate sets that include a battleship with firing cannon that shoots confetti.

"A beauty pageant is the most boring thing in the world," Guy said. "But everybody loves to be entertained. We try to entertain people."

Securing commitments from stations to televise the pageant, and planning the television production is foremost in Guy and Holt's minds.

"We're a profit-making organization," Guy said. "But the profit is not going to come from the girls, it's going to come from TV. There is money to be made in advertising."

Holt said that, so far, the pageant hasn't made money in the seven years that they've been associated with it.

"If we break even, we're lucky," he said.

"It's all been an accident," said Guy. "Everything we do is by accident."

Even their meeting was an accident. Both were dance instructors at an Arthur Murray studio when they decided to combine forces.

With Guy's imagination and Holt's artistic flair, the pair soon were making money by decorating businesses for Christmas. That venture led, accidentally, of course, to designing floats for parades, including El Paso's Sun Carnival parade.

Meanwhile, they opened a successful Mexican restaurant in a town where Mexican restaurants abound.

Floats and costumes led to beauty pageants and evening gown design — probably the pair's most profitable venture.

Guy and Holt believe that the days of "cute and sweet" beauty pageants have ended and that the public expects more out of beauty queens.

This $7-million deep-drilling oilfield rig, made in Tulsa and Houston, was assembled in Midland in six weeks by Tri-Service Drilling, a subsidiary of Midland Southwest Corp. The rig is designed to drill down to 25,000 feet and beyond, is powered by three 1,070-horsepower diesel-electric engines, and boasts a 30-foot substructure and a 142-foot derrick for a 172-foot height. The rig is to be transported to Comanche County, Oklahoma, where it is to be operated by Tri-Service crews for Kerr-McGee Corp. of Oklahoma City. The substructure was manufactured by Pyramid Manufacturing Co. in Houston, and the derrick and platform were made by Unit Rig & Equipment Co., a subsidiary of Mid-Continent Supply Co. of Tulsa. On hand for the dedication of the Tri-Service Rig II were, at bottom from the left, Cliff Harris, former Dallas Cowboys defensive safety who is into oil; Don Hughes, president of Equipment Inc. of Houston; Craig Johnson, president of Tri-Service Drilling, and Hamilton McRae, a director of Midland Southwest; second row, L.O. "Cotton" Pulliam, vice president of Tri-Service's Oklahoma Division, ArDee Morgan, vice president of Tri-Service's Texas Division, and Lowell Branum, vice president of Tri-Service; third row, M.W. "Buddy" Branum, chairman of the board of Tri-Service, and G.A. "Art" Donnelly III, president of Midland Southwest.

Osage chief says oil wells bring prosperity, problems

PAWHUSKA, Okla. (AP) — To unfamiliar ears, the words rustle like summer leaves as Ed Red Eagle offers up quiet thanks to a supreme being his people know as "Waconda."

But amid the rhythmic sounds of the prayer is heard a recurring phrase, modern words for which there is no Osage equivalent — "oil people."

The oil people, probing beneath the lake-laced hills of the Osage Nation homeland, have brought prosperity and some problems to the tribe that once dominated parts of Kansas, Missouri, Arkansas and Oklahoma.

The Osages own the mineral rights beneath the 1.5 million acres of Osage County, which stretches from Tulsa to the Kansas border. The Osages bought the land from the Cherokees in 1883 after they were forced out of southern Kansas.

Their expulsion has proved to be a blessing in disguise.

For the last five years, Osage County has ranked among the nation's top three counties in oil well completions. Almost 3,000 wells have been drilled since 1976; an estimated 10,000 are in production. Average daily crude oil output is 30,000 barrels.

The prayer of Assistant Chief Red Eagle sanctified an Osage Tribal Council meeting called to accept $4 million in bids from a June 17 tribal oil and gas lease auction. About 300 oilmen had crowded into the Osage museum and, beneath the painted gazes of tribal royalty from generations past, bid up to $140,000 for a 160-acre tract.

A similar auction in February brought in a modern record bid of $6.8 million. Another auction is scheduled in October.

The mineral income from bids and royalties, which this year could bring each holder of an Osage "headright" more than $35,000, has "been a curse to the Osages," said Chief Sylvester Tinker, 78.

"When you have plenty of money, you get idle and fat," Tinker said. "The sweat of your brow, you know, is what makes the world go. When people get more than that, they just sit and look and think.

"Wherever you have money, you have jealousy... Money is an evil thing," said Tinker, chief for 12 years.

But Ralph Adkisson, a Tulsa attorney and one of the eight members of the council, said: "The Osage people don't mind carrying this burden. Some people go ahead and fulfill active lives and work and are educated in spite of having an income like this."

The first well was drilled on Osage land in 1897, but the first highly publicized bonanzas to the Osages came in the 1920s. Adkisson said tribe members were preyed upon by the unscrupulous, and non-Osages married into the tribe only to gain shares of the oil and gas income.

Osages may not sell or give away their headrights, allotted according to a tribal roll completed in 1906. The Osages are unique in this individual disbursement of tribal income. Other tribes have long since sold mineral rights along with surface land. Still others use tribal income to develop industrial parks or build clinics.

There are about 10,000 Osages, but the 2,229 headrights are held by 2,210 people who were either on the 1906 list or had ancestors by blood or marriage named on the list. Some own fractions of headrights, while others have inherited more than one.

About 500 people who are non-Osage own about 300 headrights through marriage or inheritance. A 1978 law mandates that headrights must revert to Osage relatives upon the death of non-Osage owners.

About 200 original headright owners are living, including Tinker, who was 3 years old when the list was drawn up.

"We're about like the Mohegans," Tinker said of the original owners. "The youngest one is 74 and the oldest one is 92. We're all standing in line waiting for the undertaker."

Each quarter of the year, the mineral rights income is divided into 2,229 parcels and paid out. Money comes from the lease auctions and from a percentage of the income from producing wells. The percentage negotiated by the council ranges from about 16 percent up to 30 percent.

"When an oil company drills in the Osage he doesn't have any bookkeeping," Tinker said. "There's just one royalty owner and that's us. This is the cheapest place in my opinion for an oilman to drill."

Being on the Osage roll was worth about $8,000 a year in 1920. In 1979, a headright brought its owner about $20,000. This year, payments to owners of headrights have already totalled $18,000 for the first two quarters and are expected to exceed $35,000.

Some of the money finds its way into the economy of this community of 5,500 via new auto purchases and other expenditures, Adkisson said. But he said the Osages don't spend their money any differently from anyone else with similar income.

"Everyone likes to drive a nice car," he said.

Graduate Center slates lease accounting course

The Permian Basin Graduate Center will offer "Accounting for Leases" Thursday, July 16, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the PBGC building, 105 W. Illinois.

Drs. Paul Munter and Thomas A. Ratcliffe, associate professors of accounting, Texas Tech University will instruct.

This seminar is for individuals who must account for leases from eighter the perspective of the lessee or the lessor. Topics include: introduction, definition of terms, lease classification criteria, financial acounting and reporting by lessees and lessors, accounting for subleases, real estate leases, related party leases, sale-leaseback transactions, other FASB lese pronouncements, and leases and the SEC.

Registration fee is $135. For registration or futher information, call 563-2311.

Geological Society to meet Wednesday

The West Texas Geological Society will hold an evening dinner meeting Wednesday at the Petroleum Club of Midland.

The program is titled "The Culture, People and Oil Industry of China".

Harry A. Miller Jr., independent oil operator of Midland will serve as moderator of the evening's program.

This presentation is based on the collective experiences of a group of permian Basin representatives that journeyed to China earlier this year a part of the Citizen Ambassador Program.

Speakers for the program include Larry and Dorothy Melzer of Midland, George and Shirley Sherrill of San Angelo, David Grimes, Doug Masten and Frank Constant, all of Midland.

Each of the participants will discuss the culture and industry in separate geographical areas of the country.

The meeting begins with a cocktail hour sponsored by several local service companies at 6:30 p.m.

A buffet dinner will be served at 7:30 and the program will start at 8:30.

Reservations are required and should be made with the W.T.G.S. office (683-1573) by 4:30 p.m. Monday.

438 rigs counted at work

Oil companies prepare for Gulf Coast boom

FAIRFIELD, Texas (AP) — Several of the nation's largest oil and energy companies have quietly — almost secretly — acquired leases on millions of acres of farm and ranchlands in six Gulf Coast states in anticipation of a coal boom that could forever ehange the energy consumption patterns of this oil-rich region.

The heavy investments by companies such as Phillips Coal Co., a subsidiary of Phillips Petroleum, Exxon, and ten other energy concerns have come in an area better known for crude oil production than strip mining.

Lignite — soft brown coal — underlies a vast section of the area. With the long-term availability of natural gas in question and prices for domestic and imported gas on the rise, the region's estimated 35 billion tons of lignite reserves have become a key element in several proposals for the development of synthetic fuels, state and industry officials say.

In East Texas, where the historically famous oil fields are slowly being invaded by salt water, the state's 23.4 million-ton lignite reserves are already being exploited at three strip mines operated by a consortium of Texas electric utilities. Eight mine-mouth generating plants operated by the consortium last year produced enough electricty to meet the needs of a city of 2 million people.

Phillips Coal, founded just six years ago, now holds leases on more than a million acres, while a dozen other major oil and coal companies own lignite rights on an additional 3.4 million acres in Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas, Tennessee, Missippi and Alabama.

A recent study by the the Texas Bureau of Economic Geology estimated that the region's shallow lignite reserves are equivalent in energy content to more than double the region's proven oil and natural gas reserves combined.

As a result, lignite production along the burgeoning Gulf Coast is expected to soar from 30 million tons last year to as much as 138 million tons by 1990. Barely a decade ago, only two million tons a year were being mined in the six-state region, the bureau said.

James Van Reenan, vice president for marketing of the Dallas-based Phillips Coal Co., said lignite is fast becoming the fuel of choice for the region's utility companies and heavy industries.

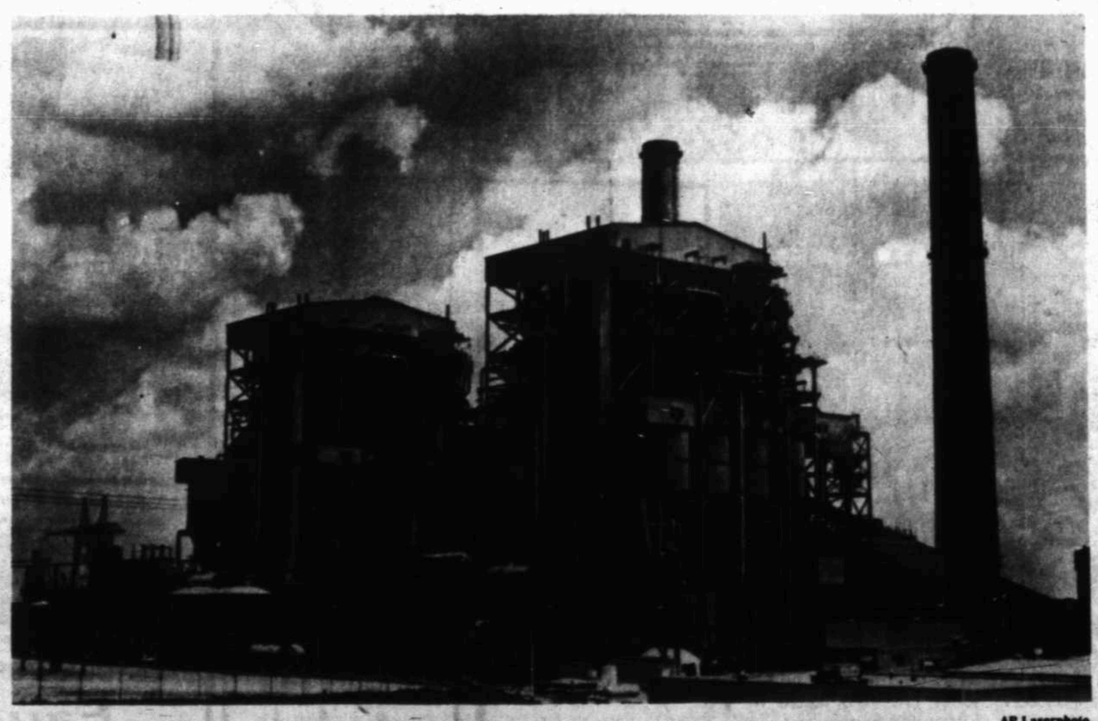

Gulf Coast lignite is only slightly less efficient as a thermal fuel than Western coals. Transportation costs for mine-mouth power plants are minimal, and land reclamation along the flat, verdant Gulf Coast is less difficult than in the arid coal fields of Wyoming and North Dakota, he said.

The soft, chunky lignite resembles topsoil in appearance and texture and owes its existence to the same geological process that produced the East Texas oilfield. The process began 70 million years ago when a thick layer of plant matter along the Gulf Coast was covered with silt.

The fossilized remains of the vegetable matter is now lignite, a giant black blanket of which lies 15 to 200 feet below the surface. Older deposits of organic materials became pockets of oil and natural gas.

The brown coal deposit extends from the Texas-Mexico border to Alabama and Kentucky and "means there's still hope for us folks in the oil business," said Exxon spokesman Carey Ziter.

Exxon is in the design stages of a proposd $4 billon synthetic fuels plant where Texas lignite would be processed to produce a chemical feedstock, a synthetic crude petroleum. The feedstock, in turn, could be used to produce synthetic gas.

AP Laserphoto

Texas Utilities Generating Company's twin coal-fired power plants at their Big Brown Strip mine near Fairfield burned 5.8 million tons of lignite coal in 1980. The plants are among eight coal-fired generating units jointly owned by the Dallas Power & Light, Texas Electric Service and Texas Power & Light companies.

Midland Lock and Safe Service at 1408 N. Big Spring is your security center. Let L. G. Simmons, locksmith and owner, use his 32 years of experience to help you increase the security of your home or office.

Increase your home security before leaving on vacation

Are the valuables in your home or office protected from theft and fire? Is the security lock system on your home or office adequate protection? Do you feel secure about leaving your office at night, or leaving your home for several weeks while you are on vacation?

L. G. Simmons, locksmith and owner of Midland Lock and Safe Service, can advise you on how to increase the security of your home or office. And Simmons' advice is backed by his 32 years of experience as a locksmith.

Simmons can help you choose what is right for your security needs. And Midland Lock and Safe certainly carries a wide variety of safes, security locks, and warning systems to choose from.

Midland Lock and Safe carries Major, Star, Meilink, and Gardall safes. Sizes range from inexpensive portable fire-proof safes for important papers and small items to in-the-floor safes, money chests, and large vaults.

Midland Lock and Safe carries a complete line of Medico locks. These locks are known for their high security. Also available are deadbolt lock systems; a wide range of padlocks, combination locks, and key locks; and locks specially designed for bicycles and for school book and gym lockers.

A special kind of lock, one that uses a magnetic card instead of a key, can be installed to secure a tennis court, clubroom, swimming pool, or other facility where you wish to control the number of people who have access. These locks can be changed whenever necessary.

Midland Lock and Safe also does extensive commercial and building keying and master keying.

Intruders in your home or office can be detected by the master home alarm system. This system detects movement and sets off an alarm. If you are going on vacation, you can put a satellite in your neighbor's house. If an intruder enters your home, an alarm will sound at your neighbor's house as well as in your home. This system is easy to install--you just plug it in wherever you need it.

Midland Lock and Safe is a good place to find gift items. A gift of a safe, a security lock, or a warning system is also a gift of year-round security and peace of mind. Other items include small hand and power tools, hardware, extra keys, pocket knives, and a whole assortment of other items.

Stop by Midland Lock and Safe Service at 1408 N. Big Spring, or call 682-4202. L. G. Simmons can help you protect your possessions, and by doing so, help you feel more secure.

If you can't tell, we're not going to Travel should be an exciting adventure not accompanied with worries. Whether you go on a short or long trip, you want to look your best, feel your best and have a fantastic time. you want to dress beautifully and wear your favorite jewelry without worry or theft. If you wear valuable diamonds, theft or loss is a valid concern.

Many with priceless gems have found a way to wear their exquisite jewelry without concern for its safety. They have replaced the diamonds in their jewelry with Diamontrigue stones. They wear and enjoy their jewelry as always and leave their diamonds in their bank safety deposit box. This switching of stones not only relieves their worry, but it also relieves high insurance payments to protect their diamonds. That is why Diamongrigues are your best insurance.

Diamontrigue of Odessa is located inside the courtyard at The Market Place on the corner of East University and Parkway. They have velvet jewel travel cases available which will fit in your purse. Their Diamontrigue stones are beautifully set in 14K gold mountings and many purchase the jewelry with the intention of later replacing the Diamontrigues with real diamonds. Now there is a switch.

The stones are so perfect and beautiful that many jewelers are fooled. Diamontrigues are quality controlled simulated stones of the highest beauty. Diamontrigue individually selects each stone and piece of jewelry in their store. Only the very best will do.

If someone asks if your diamonds are real, Diamontrigue suggests you reply, "Well my insurance company certainly hopes so." or "Have you seen anything this beautiful that wasn't?" Since the 14K gold mountings are so gorgeous, this adds to their credibility. Diamontrigue estimates that 75 percent of their customes can afford genuine diamonds and choose Diamontrigues for insurance reasons and the fear of losing favorite valuable diamonds.

Diamontrigues quality is consistent and they will exchage their stones, when you decide to "trade up". They do custom design work and invite you to come in to see their brilliant stones. Their Diamontrigue stones are the highest quality simuated stones maufactures. And Diamontrigue will not tell! They faithfully stand by their motto, "If you don't tell, we won't!" Stop by the Market Place in Odessa or their showroom in Time Square, 2811 E. Loop 289 in Lubbock.

"Shhhh!" If you don't tell, we won't! Our showroom windows are smoked glass so passers by cannot easily see in. We protect your confidence. That is part of the service we consider important

Increase behind decision

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. (AP) — A "great increase" in anticipated costs is behind the decision by the United States, Japan and West Germany to scuttle their giant SRC-II synthetic fuels plant near here.

The demonstration plant, originally scheduled to begin production in late 1984, was the flagship of the Carter administration's synthetic fuels policy. The three countries were partners in the project envisioned as the first of perhaps 20 to 50 coal liquefaction plants.

Fishermen apprehensive of drilling

BOSTON (AP) — Many fishermen remain apprehensive about the oil and gas drilling that now seems inevitable in the waters of the Georges Bank — one of the world's richest fishing grounds.

"We have very mixed feelings about it," said Douglas Foy, head of the Conservation Law Foundation, which led the unsuccesful fight against offshore drilling.

The Zapata Saratoga, a 260-foot drilling rig, was pulled into the waters Friday, 175 miles off Cape Cod.

It was met by three ships that will help anchor a platform in 460 feet of water that will become a base for Shell Oil Co.'s search for oil and natural gas, company officials said.

OIL INDUSTRY NOTES

DENVER — Harvey L. Baker has been named executive vice president and chief operating officer of Cram Exploration Corporation of Denver.

Ira H. Cram Jr., president of Cram Exploration, said Baker also has ben elected a director of the company. He will assume his new responsibilities as soon as possible.

Cram also announced that the company has begun receiving revenue from five wells in the Batavia gas area of western New York. The gas wells, in which Cram Exploration owns a 20 percent working interest, were put on production June 12.

****

Michael R. Onderick has joined Koch Industries as a project manager in the product and gas liquids projects group.

Onderick received a bachelor of engineering degree from Dartmount University in 1974 and a masters degree in business administration from Harvard in 1979.

He is a native of Minnesota and was previously employed by Raychem Corporation in their Houston office.

****

LA PRYOR — Sunrise Industries, a division of Sundown Drilling Company of Eagle Pass, has announced that it has completed construction and sale of its No. 4 drilling rig in La Pryor.

The event, market by official festivities and a barbeque, was set to showcase equipment to businessmen statewide. The rig, known as Sunrise 4, was sold to White River Drilling Company, a unit of Lewis Energy Company of Denver.

The Sunrise Rig 4 has been custom designed by Sunrise Industries to meet the specific needs and requirements of White River Drilling. It is designed for ease of assembly ad disassembly in three sections; thereby acquiring the name, Sunrise E-Z Move. The rig minimizes downtime and maximizes speed in transportation to drilling sites. The E-Z Move Rig will definitely be a boon to the drilling industry and will help meet the ever increasing demand for drilling rig supply. The White River drilling operation actively growing in southwest Texas and Colorado, sees the addition of the Sunrise Rig as beneficial in future drilling plans for Lewis Energy Company.

HOUMA, La. — Vocational training for the Marine segment of the Offshore Oil & Gas Industry is being offered by the Louisiana Marine & Petroleum Institute in Houma, La. An orientation class starts July 20, 1981 at 8 a.m.

The Institute is a state-operated vocational-technical school and offeres training in marine operations, vessel engineering and offshore operations. Each program totals two years but approximately one year of this is spent in on-the-job training while employed aboard vessels, rigs or platforms.

Tuition for non-Louisiana trainees is $30 per month. There is no charge for Louisiana residents. Room and board, books and school supplies must be obtained by the trainee.

The marine operations program is Coast Guard approved and the vessel engineering program is undergoing Coast Guard revies at present. Coast Guard approved training has the result of shortening the time required to obtain a license.

Persons desiring further information should write Louisiana Marine & Petroleum Institute, P.O. Box 10251, Houma, La. 70360 and request an application for admission.

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. — A comprehensive report analyzing the effects of inflation, taxation and market factors on five different enhanced oil recovery techniques had been released by the Department of Energy's Bartlesville (Okla.) Technology Center (BETC).

The report, "Economics of Enhanced Oil Recovery", produced for DOE by Lewin and Associates Inc. is available from BETC — attention Bill Linville, P.O. Box 1398, Bartlesville, Okla. 74003.

The costs of EOR techniques were last estimated on a consistent basis in 1978.

Although the market price for the tertiary oil has more than doubled in rectent year, inflation has increased investment and operating costs; therefore, the economics of EOR technology is of much interest to oil producers.

The report features up-to-date cost data, based on mid-1980 oil prices of $30 a barrel, for oil recovery by steam drive, in situ combustion, carbon dioxide flooding, surfactant-polymer flooding and polymer waterflooding.

The $30-per-barrel oil price was also used to determine cost components that depend on the selling price of crude, the Windfall Profit Tax, royalties and severance taxes.

Because EOR costs vary significantly between geographical region, a cost breakdown is given to correspond to the 11 petroleum provinces outlined by the National Petroleum Council.

Tipperary Corporation has announced a gas discovery at its No. 1 Wardlaw well in Caddo Parish, La.

The wil flowed 3,865,000 cubic feet of gas per day on a 13/64 inch choke with 2,476 pounds of tubing pressure.

The well also flowed six barrels of 58 gravity condensate per million cubic feet of gas produced during the test.

Tipperary owns 52.5 percent of the well, its limited partners in the Tipperary 80-B Ltd. own 22.5 percent and several independents own the balance of the interest.

The well was drilled on a 2,900 acre lease block on which Tipperary owns an average 31.5 percent interest.

HOUSTON — Blocker Drilling Company, a subsidiary of Blocker Energy Corporation, has announced the acquisition of Steve Jernigan Drilling Company of Oklahoma City.

Jernigan Drilling consists of three 10,000- and 15,000-foot land drilling rigs, each less than one year oil, currently operating in central Oklahoma.

As part of the agreement, each of the rigs has been contracted for a minumum of two years. They presently are working in Garvin, McClain and Canadian counties south and west of Oklahoma City.

Under terms of an additional agreement, Steve Jernigan, Inc., the parent of Jernigan Drilling, and Blocker Exploration Company, another Blocker Energy subsidiary, will participate jointly in future exploratory projects. Jernigan explores throughout Oklahoma, whereas Blocker Exploration operates in Texas, Louisiana, the Rocky Mountains and Michigan.

Prior to the purchase, Blocker Drilling operated 45 rigs in the United States, Canada, Latin America and Africa.

DALLAS — Dorchester Gas Corporation has announced that it has been granted three Federal coal leases in Colorado. The leases cover approximately 14,700 acres in the Book Cliffs coal field near Fruita, Colo. and contain in excess of 200 million tons of recoverable high BTU, compliance steam coal in the Cameo and Anchor coal seams. Present plans call for development of an underground mine with production capacity of up to four million tons per year.

Dorchester acquired interests in the original Federal Preference Right Leases in 1978. Applications for prospecting rights were applied for by predecessor concerns in 1966, and lease applications were requested in 1970. In 1971, the Federal Government imposed a moratorium on leasing of Federal lands for coal production and the granting of the coal leases has been denied since that time.

The company's subsidiary, Dorchester Coal Company, will immediately begin additional drilling on the acreage in order to develop the data required to apply for mining permit. It is expected that the mining permit will be granted by the Office of Surface of Mining and the Colorado Mined Land Reclamation Board during the first half of 1982.

SALT LAKE CITY — Northwest Energy Company has announced its subsidiary, Northwest Exploration Company, has obtained a favorable shore of oil on a drill stem test in the Railroad Valley No. 8 well about 70 miles southwest of Ely, Nevada.

The initial drill stem test was made in the Paleozoics at depth between 5,315 and 5,346 feet, according to John G. McMillian, Northwest chairman and chief executive officer. The test recovered 1,550 feet of free oil (27 gravity - API) and 3,280 feet of oil cut mud. Core samples are currently being taken at depths below the tested interval.

The discovery is the second for Northwest Exploration Company and its partners in the Nevada venture.

Dean recommends completing plants

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Against federal advice, the new chairman of the Tennessee Valley Authority said Friday that four mothballed nuclear reactors should be completed to reduce American dependence on foreign oil.

"The department of defense is about to spend $120 billion for new ships for the Navy," Chairman Charles Dean told Tennessee's municipal distributors of TVA power. "If we can spend $120 billion for new ships, we can afford to spend roughly $8 billion to $10 billion to build four nuclear units and have them belong to the people of the United States."

The power could be sent to other areas of the nation to help reduce dependence on foreign oil, Dean said.

Dean, who until 22 days ago was general manager of Knoxville Utilities Board, spoke to the power distributors for the first time since he was confirmed as TVA chairman.

TVA has the nation's largest commitment to nuclear generation of electricity with four reactors operating, a fifth ready to operate and eight others under construction. Construction of the four to which Dean referred, three in Tennessee and one in Mississippi, was postponed two years ago by the TVA board.

The board decided the units would not be needed before the 1990s. Since TVA floats bonds backed by the electric bills of its 2.8 million customers in seven states, borrowing to finance nuclear plants has helped boost power rates sharply.

TVA sells surplus power outside its system at rates that more than cover the cost of generation. But no costs can be recovered until the plants are operating, with TVA customers footing the construction bill.

State department backs Angola loan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration confirmed Friday its approval of an $85 million loan for an oil field venture in Angola even though it has no diplomatic relations with the southern African nation and sharply disapproves of the presence of Cuban troops there.

A State Department spokesman said a delegation from the Angolan government signed a loan agreement Wednesday with the U.S. Export-Import Bank for the partial financing of a $168 million gas injection project.

The project is located in the Angolan off shore oil field operated jointly by Gulf Oil and Sonagol, the Angolan state oil company.

The loan was initiated during the Carter administration but Alan Romberg, the deputy State Department spokesman, said that after a review, the Reagan adminisration decided to allow the loan to proceed "as part of the administration's overall policy toward Angola."

"Trade relations between the two countries are significant as most of Angola's oil production is exported to the United States and we have not sought to curtail commercial relations with Angola," Romberg said.

He added that the adminisration continues to be "gravely concerned about the prolonged presence" of Cuban troops in Angola, some of which are reportedly being used to guard Angolan oil facilities at Cabinda.

Under those circumstances, Romberg said, the United States "cannot have diplomatic relations with Angola."

Nonetheless, he said U.S. diplomts do have contact with the Angolan government in the search for an internationally acceptable solution leading to the independence of Namibia, immediately to Angola's south.

"While we continue to work with Angola, there are obviously things which are of great concern to us," Romberg said.

The Reagan administration has said it will refuse to recognize the Angolan government as long as an estimated 20,000 Cuban troops sent there in 1976 remain in the country.

Tippary Corporation closes Australia sale

Tipperary Corporation reported it had received $29 million, including interest, for the sale of its bauxite interest in Queensland, Australia.

The proceeds will be used to restructure dept and payoff short-term, high cost loans.

Shareholder equity increased 58 percent to $49 million and $9.21 per share as a result of the bauxite sale.

The company is in the middle of a $40 million capital expenditure program for 1981. The budget is allocated between oil and gas exploration and development and the expansion of its gas processing business.

FIERY GEM OF PASSION
Different colors seem to correspond with various feelings and emotions. Blue, for instance, is a calm, cool color, and a blue environment tends to have a calming effect. Black is a stately, somber color which has been associated with mourning, and, to a lesser extreme, with dignity. Red, on the other hand, calls up all the fiery passions within us.
Red has come to signify warmth and love. That's why it's tied in with the spirit of Christmas and the celebration of Valentine's Day. That's also why the fiery red ruby is such a favorite gift for these occasions. It is also tyhe birthstone for those born during the hot summer swells of July.
Because of the connotations ruby carries with it, the romantic at heart often choose ruby gifts for their loved ones. Some choose ruby to express their own strong feelings. Others, however, choose them in an attempt to arouse feelings of passion in the person of their affections. Now that colored stones have found acceptance in engagement rings, rubies are a popular choice for the center stone.
Rubies can be found in many delicate romantic jewelry styles. When combined with a heart motif, they are especially significant. They often float in ethereal settings in the company of diamonds. And they're as popular in men's jewelry as they are in women's pieces.
Rubies are one of our favorite gemstones. There is nothing like a ruby with truly fine color. If you would like to see some fine examples of ruby, visit our store. We think you'll find this gemstone will work its love charms on you as it has on us.

Haig will support U.S. plan amid skepticism

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. is flying to the Bahamas to meet with foreign ministers from Canada, Mexico and Venezuela to forge a joint development program for Central America and the Caribbean.

But there is widespread skepticism that the four officials, when they meet Saturday, can overcome their differing political objectives in the region and approaches to development to form an effective program.

The United States and Mexico, for example, have an interest in promoting political stability and economic development in the region, but there is broad disagreement between them on security issues.

President Reagan said in a speech in Chicago this week that he is intent on attacking the "root causes of instability" in the region while making it clear "the United States will not tolerate interference by Cuba with the lives and freedom of other nations."

Mexico, although agreeing to explore the possibility of a coordinated approach to the area's development, has insisted it will not take part in any plan whose purpose is to "fight against the Soviet Union or communism."

Mexico has close ties with Cuba and strongly supports the Sandinista government in Nicaragua. The Reagan administration has suspended economic aid to Nicaragua, alleging it is supporting leftist guerrillas in El Salvador.

Haig, after leaving Washington today, will be joined at the meeting by Foreign Ministers Jorge Castaneda of Mexico, Jose A. Zambrano of Venezuela and Mark MacGuigan of Canada.

There are problems other than political differences. The contribution of Mexico and Venezuela — the area's two major oil producers — centers almost exclusively on selling oil to its poorer neighbors at cheaper rates.

Canada is emphasizing development assistance and has announced plans for a sharp aid increase to Commonwealth countries in the Caribbean and Central America.

The Reagan administration is focusing its attention on easing trade restrictions, as long as they would have no serious effect on U.S. producers, and promoting private investment rather than development aid.

Report says wildcat drilling on the upswing

DENVER (AP) — Wildcat drilling, the exploration for new oil and natural gas reserves, is growing with unprecedented speed this year in the United States, according to a leading oil industry data firm.

Petroleum Information Inc. of Denver said wildcat drilling had increased 30.1 percent in the first half of 1981, compared with the same period the previous year.

All types of drilling in the nation jumped 21.6 percent throughout 1980 with 35,581 wells, even though the rate of discovery dropped by about 3 percent, the firm said. And according to Petroleum Information analysts, the United States is expected to set another record of 74,000 wells drilled this year.

"Last year's drilling resulted in an all-time industry high for wells completed," a Petroleum spokesman said. "And this year's total in every category at the midyear mark are even higher."

Statisticians have said the continuing rise in the wellhead price of crude oil and natural gas has resulted in the largest number of drilling rigs ever and fueled the most active drilling in the history of the nation's oil industry.

Wildcat drilling is executed a substantial distance from any existing oil or gas production and is the most risky — and often the most expensive — form of drilling in the industry.

Petroleum Information said of the 4,296 wildcat wells drilled during the first half of 1981, only 18.7 percent yielded new oil or gas fields. However the number of wells drilled in this period was up 30.1 percent over last year, which PI spokesmen called the "most significant increase" in recent history.

Midland an investors oasis, with energy shield

By BILL MODISETT
Staff Writer

A typical Texas investor might be a gangly rancher-oilman, decked out in a Stetson and Tony Lama boots. This imaginary individual probably would stand a foot taller than New Yorkers gracing the Big Apple's famed Wall Street.

He would move in the world's top financial circles, drink straight whiskey and be viewed as a wheeler-dealer of the first class.

That might or might not be an accurate composite of a Texas investor. But when you're talking about Midland and the investment community nestled among her ever-blooming glass and steel towers that reach for the sky, only parts of the picture would apply, some of the city's investment experts say.

That's because sheltered in Midland is one of the strongest investment communities in the nation. It has been that way a number of years and appears to be growing stronger.

And whether one is talking about stocks, bonds, gold or silver, the statement seems to apply.

Midland is a thriving oasis for investors, shielded — to a large extent — by the vitality of the oil industry that gave the investment community here its birthright and keeps it growing.

To a large extent, Liberty says, the typical Midland investor bears the characteristics of the oil industry. He, or she as the case may be, is of above average education and income, financially aggressive, usually in a high income tax bracket and possessing the "entrepreneurial spirit of the oilman."

HIS PAST MOLDED his present. Oilmen who made their fortunes in the industry now are moving to the formalized securities market and insurance companies to diversify their assets.

Liberty says the oilmen are more daring investors who are not afraid of risks. "I think they know how to evaluate risks. I think it's more of a judgment thing," he noted.

Staff Photo by Brian Hendershot

Troy ounces of silver and South African Krugerrands are only two examples of what Midlanders are currently investing in. Midland investors can find what they're interested in here — and the trading can be fast and furious.

More business news, Page 8F

Midland's extremely vigorous investment community has developed largely because of the capital needs of the oil and gas industry. As a result, Liberty said, the city has a highly developed legal and accounting field. The other reason for the city's financial development is "the level of sophistication of the people here."

"The typical investor who used to buy just stocks and some bonds is buying a lot more sophisticated things nowadays — money-market funds, annuities, options, tax shelters," Liberty explained.

Contributing to that trend are the inflationary pressures being experienced today. "People have realized that capital mo[illegible]ash — just can't lay [illegible] bank; it's eroding away," Liberty added.

GLENN LITTLE OF Little & Co., noting the vast amount of "discretionary income" here, says Midland has "virtually had a bull market in oil stocks" since 1974. Oil stocks, he says, are the primary investment medium he deals with via his clientele.

There is some investment action on tax-free bonds, but those investments are secondary to oil stocks, Little says. "After they've made their fortunes and they're going to get killed on taxes, they move over and put it into tax-free bonds," Little noted.

There also is a lot of speculative buying of oil wells, Little noted. But that primarily is because of the "information flow" among Midland's oilmen. "Everybody knows everybody in the oil industry," Little noted.

But oil stocks and tax-free bonds are only two levels of Midland's investment community. Investors here also keep the gold and silver rivers flowing, according to Kim Culver, co-owner of Tejas Coin and Stamp Co.

"Midland pretty much follows the trend of the rest of the country although we have a little more money here," she says.

The coin shop recently has been selling an average of 2,000 ounces of silver every three days, she said. And the shop also sells a lot of bag silver (silver coins weighing 72 pounds) and bar silver.

In fact, she says, the silver market currently is active in Midland, primarily because the price — less than $10 an ounce — is stimulating investors.

Despite the fact that gold prices have fallen considerably from the market's peak several months ago, Mrs. Culver said the market remains promising. "Oddly enough, it's still active. I'd say I'm doing as much trading now as I did 18 months ago when the market was at its peak," she remarked.

In fact, Mrs. Culver speculated that trading in precious metals in Midland is on a par with that experienced in Dallas or Houston.

But that's another testimonial to the strength of Midland's investment community. Markets may be slow elsewhere in the nation, but in Midland the name of the game is investing. And it doesn't look as if that will change anytime soon.

Altering a philosophy

The philosophical change embraced by Midland city officials last week paid off late this week when more than $1 million in Community Development Block Grant funds was approved for 1981-82 by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The importance of that change will be realized in future years by Midlanders in the form of more public housing for the city's low-income residents, along with the elderly and the handicapped.

City officials almost waited too long. The CDBG funds were in jeopardy, city officials were told, because the city failed to seek funds for "new construction" of public housing in certain target areas, specifically the city's east and south sections.

But city leaders moved toward a compromise. Eventually a deal was struck which, in laymen's terms, meant the city would agree to request funds for 280 rental units of "new contruction" and would receive, in turn, the $1 million-plus in federal funds this year for paving streets and rehabilitating housing in those areas.

That's all well and good. It goes without saying that the additional housing in those sections of the city will be a vast improvement over some of the existing housing and virtually a God-send for many of the city's elderly and handicapped residents.

This apparent change in philosophy is important not only for Midland's present, but also for its future. By agreeing to change the CDBG request to include new construction for low-income residents in Midland, the officials acknowledged — officially — that the housing picture in Midland apparently is more than low-income residents or the city indivdually can deal with.

We agree with the premise of that acknowledgement. As we've been saying for some time, in fact, the Tall City's phenomenal growth has made housing our Number 1 problem. The solution to the situation won't be quick in coming. Nor will it be inexpensive. It's going to take the diligent efforts of many to see Midland through the near future without neglecting any segment of our population.

City officials have recognized the need to help at least some of the city's residents with their housing needs.

A skeptic's reward

Chalk up a new "Disproved" on the premise that shoveling out bigger amounts of money guarantees better workers who will do a better job.

One congressman who last year was skeptical about President Carter's policy decision to set up a "reward for excellence" program in the federal bureaucracy now says a report of a General Accounting Office investigation "has confirmed my worst fears."

Instead of making the Senior Executive Service awards for excellence to their underlings, high level Civil Service workers too frequently use the money to line their own pockets and those of their office friends, the study found.

"We're not talking about a few misplaced dollars here, but a multi-million dollar sham being implemented by some of the government's highest officials," said the congressman, Rep. Edward Roybal (D-Cal.)

The GAO said awards went to 54 percent of officials in the top ranks, 26 percent in the middle ranks and only 13 percent in the lower ranks. Is anyone really surprised?

Roybal plans hearings before his House Appropriations subcommittee, which oversees the program. He pledged to "wipe the dirty slate clean."

Good! And the next time a crackbrain scheme like this surfaces our elected lawmakers should listen to Roybal and colleagues who, like him, continue to challenge the notion that shoveling out bigger amounts of money guarantees better workers who will do a better job.

ART BUCHWALD

Confessions of a gypsy moth killer

There are TV talk shows and there are TV talk shows. The celebrity talk show deals with such heavy topics as what type of pajamas an actress sleeps in at night, and what it is like to make a movie with Mel Brooks.

Art Buchwald

And then there is the other talk show which deals with such taboo subjects as wife-beating, child abuse, incest, homosexuality, and nymphomania.

The second category, popularized by Phil Donahue, who I must say does it very well, has brought on a string of imitators. The problem is that there are just so many subjects that can be discussed openly on TV, five times a week, and then you run out of taboos.

"Hello, everyone, this is Hal Dorfman and today we're going to take up the subject of one of the last taboos in the country — gypsy-moth-beating. With us today is Roderick Crawford, who has just written a book titled, "Confessions of a Gypsy Moth Sickie."

"First, Mr. Crawford, why have you come out of the closet at this time and decided to admit you were a gypsy-moth killer?"

"Because I believe there are more moth killers in this country than anyone will admit. No one talks about it, and I felt I could help other people who had the same problem."

"In your book, Mr. Crawford, you say you are responsible for killing over 10,000 gypsy moth caterpillars."

"That is correct. Once I killed one, I couldn't stop myself and just kept going. Every time I saw a caterpillar I had this urge to squash it before it became a moth."

"Did anyone in your family know about your compulsion?"

"My wife did, but she couldn't stop me. No one could stop me."

"When did you realize you needed psychiatric help?"

"When I quit my job and decided to devote my entire time to killing caterpillars and gypsy moths. I couldn't keep my mind on anything else. I was full of hate for the little buggers, and all I could think about day and night was smashing them to pieces."

"And when you went into therapy, what did you find out?"

"It all went back to my childhood. I once saw a bunch of gypsy moths destroy a whole woods behind my house, and I had developed a hatred for them I never was able to overcome."

"Was it then that you discovered that there were many people like yourself who couldn't stand gypsy moths?"

"Yes, I found out I was not alone. My doctor told me he personally knew of many people who had the same terrible secret, and caterpillar-squashing was much more prevalent in this country than anyone would dare to admit. It was only recently that enough people were willing to talk about it, so that what had been considered an isolated case was really a national social problem that had been ignored."

"Let's take some questions from the audience. This lady here."

"Mr. Crawford, when your wife saw you killing caterpillars, why didn't she leave you?"

"She threatened to several times, but I think she was afraid to. I was in such a state that I told her if she left I would do to her what I was doing to the caterpillars."

"This lady over here."

"My husband has the same phobia about gypsy moths, but he won't go for help. How do I get him to a doctor?"

"You can't drag him if he doesn't want treatment. He has to realize that no matter how many caterpillars and gypsy moths he kills, he cannot prevent the blight. Once he acknowledges he is only hurting himself and his loved ones he will then seek professional advice."

"One more question from this lady up here."

"What do you do now when you see a gypsy moth on your property?"

"I pretend it's a butterfly and say to myself 'God loves all creatures great and small.'"

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

A.G. planning war on violence, street crime

WASHINGTON — William French Smith, the nation's top law enforcement official, had never dealt with the criminal side of the law until he became attorney general. That helps to explain the law profile he has maintained since he took office: He has been boning up on the criminal side of the Justice Department.

Jack Anderson

Like his longtime personal friend and former client, Ronald Reagan, Smith is a quick study. And like the president, he has a sure political instinct that adds hardheaded pragmatism to his basically conservative outlook.

Perhaps most important of all, Smith can get the president's ear whenever he needs to. He has direct access to Reagan that is second only Ed Meese. This means that when Smith charts the Justice Department's course for the next four years, he can count on the full support of the man in the oval office.

Although his legal background has been almost exclusively in the arcane intricacies of corporate and estate law, Smith has quietly charted the federal government's fight against crime.

In Smith's judgment, the five major crime areas that must be addressed by the Justice Department and its chief investigative arm, the FBI, are violent crime, the drug traffic, organized crime, white-collar crime and official corruption.

It's no accident that he lists violent crime first. Smith is determined to make street crime the No. 1 priority of federal law enforcement. He wants to produce a climate in which the American people need "no longer be fearful of walking their own streets," he has told associates.

To achieve this, Smith intends to develop a closer working relationship between federal and local police forces, and to standardize crime prevention and detection methods. He has appointed a Task Force on Violent Crime, made up of experienced law-enforcement officials and headed by former Attorney General Griffin Bell and Illinois Gov. James Thompson.

Smith intends to bring his federal prosecutors down to gritty reality. Too often, he believes, U.S. attorneys and other officials have taken "an elitist approach" to their jobs. They have had a tendency to leave the mundane, less glamorous cases to local prosecutors, who are greatly overburdened, Smith feels.

The attorney general also plans to strengthen local law enforcement officials by providing them with the resources they cannot afford themselves.

As for his second priority — the multibillion-dollar traffic in illicit drugs — Smith is most concerned with the dope pushers' impact on young people. To combat this, Smith plans a broad program to inform and educate students in the nation's high schools and colleges about the perils of drug addiction.

There are nearly 7,000 schools across the country, Smith notes, that are seriously affected by crime, much of it drug-related. In a typical month, more than 250,000 students and 5,000 teachers are the victims of assault. This, Smith has said, is "unacceptable and intolerable."

The attorney general has a surprise for those who have been predicting the breakup of the Drug Enforcement Administration and the turnover of its functions to the FBI, the Customs Service and the Immigration and Naturalization Service. The report of DEA's complete demise, he says, has been greatly exaggerated.

To the contrary, Smith wants to expand the drug agency's duties. While he professes to have no quarrel with DEA's past performance, he wants to make the agency leaner and meaner. The attorney general will be proposing legislation to Congress designed to give DEA more authority than it now has — even though such a move would be contrary to advice he has received from narcotics experts.

Smith is also concerned about the huge number of illegal aliens in the country. He lays a good part of the blame on what he considers mishandling of the visa program by both the State Department and the Immigration Service. Smith wants to tighten up visa controls.

On other points, Smith is known to have definite plans for his department. They include:

— Constant surveillance of the Ku Klux Klan and similar radical groups that pose a threat to the rights of others. Minorities suffer needlessly from intimidation by such groups, Smith believes, and he will expect the Justice Department to pay the price of eternal vigilance to safeguard individual freedom.

— An important tool in the fight against organized crime is the proposed Interstate Identification Index, which Smith wants the FBI to establish as a means of improving the exchange of information between the states on criminals and criminal activities. Here again, Smith will make violent crime the No. 1 target. He has noted that nearly one-fourth of the more than 180,000 outstanding fugitive warrants are for offenders involved in violent crimes.

— Smith is deeply concerned about drug abuse in the armed services. He will see that Justice works more closely with the Defense, State and Treasury Departments to cut off supplies of narcotics at the source, to detect and prevent drug shipments and to seize drugs at the border. He considers quick prosecution of drug dealers to be particularly important.

— News reports that Smith wants to get rid of the Freedom of Information Act are "totally false." What the attorney general wants is some revisions that will bring it under better control. He has noted that when the act was being passed, Congress was told its administration would cost about $100,000; instead, it has cost more than $10 million since its inception a decade ago. Smith feels it has gotten out of hand and has often been misused.

GEORGE F. WILL

Block grant debate sparked some 'honorable disagreements'

WASHINGTON — A haze of incomprehension hangs over the country as Congress argues about "block grants" and other mysteries. But consider a recent controversy that illuminates the craft of government in the first Reagan summer.

George F. Will

In May, the Senate Finance Committee voted to change a 45-year-old section of the Social Security Act that entitles children in foster care to federal assistance. The committee put money for this and related adoption services into a large block grant composed of money consolidated from many social programs that have until now been dictated in detail from Washington. This change from a "categorical" program meant that lump sums would be given to state governments to allocate with substantial latitude among many social services.

Pat Moynihan (D-N.Y.) complained that it is radical, not conservative, to rewrite long-standing commitments without any hearings about probable consequences. He argued that although entitlements have been extended too liberally, surely foster children and orphans are proper recipients because they will lose if competing with other claimants in the scramble to carve up block grants.

"Where do they go?" asked Moynihan. "They are just three or four years old, most of them. Do they just go out to the streets and find a place for themselves and learn the work ethic? It is hard to explain it to a three-year-old."

Sen. Max Baucus (D-Mont.): "I think the senator makes a good point. . . ."

Moynihan: "You don't think they will come to town on their tractors?"

Baucus: "It is unlikely."

"The lobbies are empty. The distinguished visitors' gallery has no distinguished visitors. There are but few members in the press gallery. . . . The children have not sent us telegrams. They have no law firms representing them. Later today, we are taking up tax legislation. A quarter of the bar of Washington is outside the Senate Finance Committee room right now, attending, with the most meticulous concern, to the slightest change in the financial advantages of their clients. There is not a person in that lobby thinking of these children."

Moynihan ended his aria and yielded, operatically, to a supporter — "one of the more distinguished governors to grace this body in our time . . . the young and irresistibly magnetic former governor of Oklahoma," David Boren. Well, literary senators indulge in literary license. Senators who could resist Boren's magnetism could contemplate Moynihan's point:

Some especially vulnerable groups should not be left to the tender mercies of social Darwinism — political nature red in tooth and claw — in the state capitols.

But senators might think Moynihan's description of the empty galleries and lobbies worked against Moynihan's point. Would — could — the children have fewer friends at lower levels of government? Moynihan might better have cited the words of President Reagan, as reported by a ranking Republican: "It's far easier for people to come to Washington to get their social programs. It would be a hell of a lot tougher if we defuse them, and send them out to the states. All their friends and connections are in Washington."

Sen. Jennings Randolph (D-W.Va.), who was a rookie congressman when FDR was a rookie President, in 1933, supported Moynihan, recalling that his wife of 48 years had worked at placing children in foster homes in the 1920s. Then, he said, "there were not as many bridges over streams as we would have liked. Mary would leave her little two-door Ford, put on her swimsuit and walk waist deep or swim across those rivers in the hill country, to help a mother. . . ." He recalled his wife receiving, late in life, a letter from someone she had helped — "a frightened little girl who grew up to be a fine woman."

Randolph's remarks provided a marvelous human moment, but were not germane, unless you believe that Washington is now the nation's only reservoir of compassion. Randolph, 79, is a child of the New Deal and of a needy state, and may believe that. Sen. Jack Danforth (R-Mo.), 44, believes compassion is more broadly distributed. He said we express demoralizing distrust when we reduce state and local governments to mere implementers of decisions made in Washington.

Danforth's side won the vote. But Moynihan's resistance had already got the money for the foster care and adoption programs categorized as "appropriated entitlement," a thing of talmudic complexity that binds states a bit and entitles children somewhat.

This argument about the substance and process of government is only one of many such arguments now raging. But government policies usually are things about which honorable people can honorably disagree, as in this case they did.

KINGSBURY-SMITH

Mexico aiding Cuban oil search

By JOSEPH KINGSBURY-SMITH
National Editor
The Hearst Newspapers

WASHINGTON — Mexico is now helping Cuba explore and develop offshore oil resources in the hope of weaning Fidel Castro away from dependence on the Soviet Union.

It is doing so, according to a top ranking Mexican diplomatic source, with the knowledge and understanding of President Reagan.

Mexican President Lopez Portillo informed President Reagan of this development during their meetings in Washington and at Camp David last month, the source said, adding that neither the president nor Secretary of State Alexander Haig raised any objections.

The Mexican leader told President Reagan that during his visit to Havana in July, 1980, he had informed Castro that the initial surveys indicated the off-shore oil resources might be great enough to make Cuba not only self-sufficient in oil but enable it to export it. To which, according to the diplomatic source, Castro responded with gusto:

"The day that happens we will celebrate our second independence."

The Mexican visitors interpreted this remark as a clear reference to the Soviet Union, which is subsidizing Cuba at an estimated rate of $3 billion annually. This is the price the Soviet government is paying for the presence of 40,000 Cuban troops in Africa and elsewhere to support the spread of Soviet influence and control. Cuban troops also have been reported in Afghanistan and South Yemen. The communist-ruled latter state has become the spearhead of Soviet intrusion in the Persian Gulf area.

Cuban refugees have reported that the use of Cuban soldiers as Soviet mercenaries in Angola, Ethiopia and elsewhere in Africa has become very unpopular in Cuba. The Cuban forces are said to have suffered thousands of casualties. This has led the Mexican government to believe Castro would like to be able to bring them home and end his dependence on Moscow.

President Lopez Portillo, the diplomatic source said, told President Reagan and his advisers during a meeting at Camp David that if Cuba can be helped to survive economically without Soviet aid, he believes Castro can be persuaded to stop exporting revolution to Central America. The Mexicans, the source added, have stressed to Castro in strong terms that if he hopes to restore normal relations with the United States, he must abandon that policy and join with North and Latin American nations in trying to solve the problem of Central American poverty with economic aid.

Secretary Haig, the diplomatic source continued, told the Mexican delegation at Camp David that the Reagan administration was not demanding that Castro give up his communist form of government as the price for normalization of relations with the United States, but it did intend to insist that he stop supplying weapons to the leftist revolutionaries in Central America.

The Canadian government has proposed that North and Latin American countries should join in promoting a Marshall Plan type program of economic aid to the Central American republics.

President Reagan was said to have given his support to this idea at the meeting with President Lopez Portillo. However, it was agreed, according to the Mexican source, that the aid would be extended by each country on a bi-lateral basis. Mexico, for example, will take the lead in extending such aid to Nicaragua, since President Lopez Portillo understands, it would be politically difficult for President Reagan to join in aiding the leftist regime in that country. The Mexican president expects the United States to continue giving economic aid to the military junta in El Salvador, but he appealed to President Reagan to curtail military aid to that regime.

Castro, the Mexican source said, has been told that if he continues to provide military aid to the leftist revolutionaries in Central America, he cannot expect the United States to stop sending weapons to the anti-communist forces. Furthermore, if the United States agrees to stop sending weapons and Cuba does not, Castro was informed he could not expect to continue to receive Mexican government assistance in developing Cuba's off-shore resources.

With its own vast oil reserves, 70 million people and a strong indigenous culture, Mexico is emerging as a new power in the western hemisphere, and President Lopez Portillo hopes to use that power to influence a solution of the Central American problem through economic rather than military means.

Highway Department monitoring proposals

By BILL KIDD

AUSTIN — For years, Texas' highway system has been a matter of pride for Texans, who tend to rank fairly high on the scale in their continuing love affair with the automobile.

So it comes as no surprise to find that the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation is monitoring closely the impact of the Reagan Administration's proposals on highways and public transportation.

"What we have determined," reports Marcus L. Yancey, Jr., deputy engineer for the agency, "is that from the standpoint of total funding, the various proposals from the administration and the Senate do no change the total amount of money, but rather reduce the number of categories."

According to the latest reports to the department, the funding in the third year of the proposed program would start to phase out direct grants to political subdivisions of the state.

There will be, it appears, six major areas of funding, Yancey says: completion of the interstate system, increased funding for the primary Federal aid highway system, a heavy emphasis on ridge replacement and rehabilitation, rehabilitation of the interstate system, and reduced funding in the urban category, and for the secondary road systems.

It also appears, Yancey reports, that the proposals would use the full amount of the money available each year in the highway trust fund for allocation to the states.

Public transportation, however, is a somewhat different picture — although it seems Texas may be affected less than other states under the anticipated changes.

In public transit, Yancey says, the major shift "is to put more money in the program into capital investment, and to reduce operating subsidies from the Federal level" — with those subsidies to be eliminated at the end of three years.

And, he adds, "the total amount of money for capital improvements will be larger than we presently get."

"We do not see a cut for transportation, in other words," Yancey comments.

"Transportation happens to be part of the general administration philosophy that it will do those things that will bolster the economy."

That view that highways are vital to the economy is shared by Federal Highway Administration head Ray Barnhart, former legislator from Pasadena, past chairman of the Texas Republican Party and erstwhile member of the Highways and Public Transporation Commission.

The program being proposed by the Reagan Administration seems to bear Barnhart's imprint, considering that earlier this year, prior to his confirmation, he argued that work on the interstate system, including rehabilitation, and repair of deficient bridges were of "utmost importance."

But Barnhart also promised that he would be looking to determine that Federal programs were meeting functions that are indeed of a national scope, and not for "curbing and guttering city streets."

While on the Highways and Public Transportation Commission, Barnhart called for an increase in the State's five-cents-a-gallon gasoline tax, which he argued was needed to end the drain on the General Revenue Fund for highway construction.

State law provides that highway construction gets $750 million annually — in 1977 dollars.

Since that $750 million figure (set by the Legislature) must be adjusted for inflation, the amount now runs to the $1 billion level, and continues rising.

Moreover, the law provides that if monies from the gasoline tax aren't sufficient, then the amount must be drawn from the General Revenue Fund.

With decreasing gasoline use, and increasing construction prices, the taping of the General Revenue Fund is running into the hundreds of millions of dollars — and continues rising.

Also rising are highway construction needs, as Yancey points out.

Houston, Dallas-Fort Worth, San Antonio, Bryan-College Station, Temple-Belton-Killeen and El Paso are particularly in need of more work, Yancey says — and, Austin, too, is starting to call for more work.

"And then there's the other problem which does't get enough mention — the cost of maintaining the existing capital plant," he adds.

Those problems aren't going to be solved by Washington, obviously — but at least it seems to DHPT that Washington isn't going to make things worse, and that has to come as a relief.

Sarcastic 'prayer' jabs bigots

So be it for now.

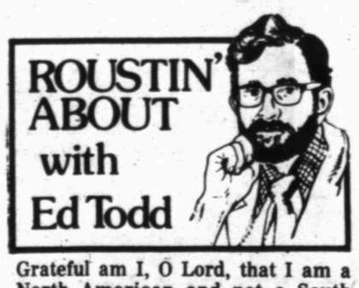

In the meantime, a humorous soul has cranked out a mildly sarcastic piece which jabs the bigots in the imperfect church world.

The article, presumably penned by a Methodist who must have delighted in assaulting the self-righteous hypocrites of his own ilk, appeared on back of a church bulletin. It was then reprinted in 1949 and again in 1955 in W.J. Hooten's "Everyday Events" column in the El Paso Times.

It's an innocuous piece that's worth discussing in Sunday School classes the world over, by social studies groups and, of course, by the bigots across the earth. It goes thusly, we pray, without offense:

"The Prayer of a Modern Pharisee

"I thank Thee, O Lord, that I am a Texan and not from Florida or California. Especially, Lord, I thank Thee that I am a Southerner and not a Yankee, for there are many things that one might endure, but not that!

Grateful am I, O Lord, that I am a North American and not a South American, for there is a vast difference, as everyone knows; and that I was born in these United States.

"Thankful, too, am I to be Occidental and not an Oriental — one of those 'lesser breeds without law.' (It's) true that Confucius and Buddha and Abraham and Moses were great men, but I never like slanting eyes or the wrong shape of nose.

"I thank Thee, Lord, that I am Gentile and not a Jew. Yes, of course, Jesus was a Jew and many others were princes in Israel when my ancestors were Nordic barbarians, but why bring that up now?

"I thank, Thee, that I am white; not yellow or red or brown or black. The Bible does teach that 'While man looketh upon outward appearance, God looketh on the heart,' but the outward appearance counts for a lot around here.

"I thank, Thee, O God, that I am civilized and not a savage, though it is the civilized countries which threaten war today, while the 'uncivilized' nations are at peace.

"I thank, Thee, O Lord, that I am a Protestant and not a Roman Catholic. Yes, it is a fact that for hundreds of years — long before anyone had ever thought of a Protestant Church — the Catholics kept alive the light of the Christian faith, but, anyway, put it to credit that I am a Protestant.

"And, Lord, I thank Thee that I am a Methodist, and not — well, one hesitates to be too specific — but, after all, we do feel that it is nice to be 'just right'; not 'high hat' like the Episcopalians, nor yet so, well, shall we say, provincial or narrow as the Baptists?

"Yes, naturally, there are some Methodists who are not what they ought to be, but they are mostly in the North.

"I thank, Thee, Lord that I am a Southern Methodist; yes, a Texan, North American, Occidental, Gentile, white, civilized, Protestant Southern Methodist."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Airport explained

To The Editor:

Mr. Smith's two days at the airport did not give him the overall picture of the situation. He needs to be there eight to eleven hours a day, five days a week over a long period of time.

I work at the airport but neither for the management nor the maintainence. There are twenty-six arrivals and twenty-six departures daily. Each plane has over a hundred passengers and each passenger has from three to four people to greet them or see them off. That is over 20,000 people plus the over four hundred that work there. Does Mr. Smith think he can keep a floor clean under that many feet. Also, about half of them have hands and noses pressed to the windows watching the planes land and take off.

There is also a labor shortage. If more people wanted to work, they would have someone at the information booth at all times.

The restaurant opens at 6 a.m. If they raised prices so they could afford more help to stay open longer, just look how the public would complain.

There are also a lot of coffee and coke machines that don't work sometime. They can't make a machine to stand up under the abuse those machines take during the day. People play the game machines all day. They get mad at them, kick them and pound on them. People also put slugs in the machines. There are undesireables in all groups of people.

I think all the worker's at the airport are doing a good job and I would like to see more people appreciate them.

Ma Bell blasted

To The Editor:

I would like to appeal to your readers to write the Public Utility Commission, 7800 Shoal Creek Blvd., Austin, Texas 78757 if they object to Southwestern Bell's proposed rate increase.

My phone went out of order the first part of June — as instructed in my phone book I called 1-954-4102 and reported the trouble. This number reaches San Antonio, and those folks couldn't care less whether I had a usable phone and they will tell you that (only not in so many words). From San Antonio my phone trouble is reported to Odessa, then McCamey, then to the repairman who one day will venture out to fix my phone — maybe. This time the venture took 3 weeks! For 3 entire weeks I had to drive to Rankin or Midkiff (40 miles round trip) to use the telephone. And they want a rate increase? I should be reimbursed for travel time! After three weeks my phone could be used for 5½ days before it went out again. After 2½ days of silent phones, my telephone was again restored to a usable condition — WHOOPEE — but not for long — exactly 6 days. As I am writing this letter I have been without the use of my phone for 2 days.

That number in San Antonio should be renamed Dial-an-Excuse, believe me, we have heard them all. And they want a rate increase? That is similar to an employee asking for a pay raise after he has been inefficient time after time, tells lies, and has excuse after excuse for not getting the job done. They may be the only phone company in town, but they don't have to act like it!

Instead of dialing the San Antonio number for service problems, look in the phone book (Ma Bell's, of course) and get the number for Dail-a-Prayer. You will come a whole lot closer to getting your phone repaired.

Bridge flooded

To The Editor:

Wish the city fathers had all driven across the Garfield Street bridge after last night's rain (July 4th). They'd have found fully six inches (or more) of runoff trapped on the bridge. Not only that, water was backed up northwards nearly to Haynes Street.

Said phenomena did not occur because the drainage ditch is full. They occurred because the bridge is so poorly designed it cannot drain itself.

MidTran thanked

To The Editor:

I want to publicly thank MidTran for providing the transportation for our Camp Fire Day Camps these past two weeks.

Doris Carter and her staff made it possible for 18 youths to attend Day Camp at Hogan Park who because of transportation problems would not have been able to attend. The fares were reasonable and the service good.

I am pleased that Midland has a transportation service which is available to youth organizations such a ours and hope that the citizens of Midland realize MidTran's worth.

Safety urged

To The Editor:

The recent accident involving the Confederate Air Force AT-6 (Navy SNJ) at the air show in San Angelo was a tragic thing and I'm sure everyone extends their deepest sympathy to the families of the two men who died in the crash.

No one can know what happened to cause the crash and this lack of knowledge is typical of nearly all fatal aircraft accidents. The wreckage usually does a pretty good job of hiding the defects. Forty years ago it was the same — the smashups were often a mystery. But as an ex-pilot and instructor in the AT-6, I can say that it was and still is an un-forgiving airplane.

If you make a mistake in one you'd better have the altitude to correct it, or else. I firmly believe that the colonels of the Confederate Air Force are taking a great risk in performing acrobatics so close to the ground. I am guessing of course, but I believe that the accident in San Angelo was caused by either a high-speed stall or loss of elevator or rudder control. Remember fellows, these machines are nearing the age of forty! I remarked at the time of the show in Pyote a couple of weeks ago that I thought they were doing the loops, immelmanns and power dives at too low an altitude. The minimum safe height for this type of acrobatics is 5000' which is what we used years ago; this allowed time to get out if something happened.

We had an old saying then: There are old pilots and there are bold pilots, but there are no old bold pilots. So, take it from an OLD pilot, fellows. Don't try to be a BOLD pilot. Believe me, it ain't worth it!

Use guns properly

To The Editor:

In reply to the letter in Sunday, July 5th issue regarding the picture of the revolver, I'm sorry that Mrs. Weir was offended by the picture, but the letter seems more to address itself to Mrs. Weir's fears than to a real issue.

A gun is an instrument which is used for good or evil purpose according to the hand that holds it. May I call attention to the fact that the children killed in Atlanta were smothered to death. Should we then outlaw pillows? I think Mrs. Weir and I both desire a climate of peace and trust but doing away with pictures of guns or guns will not do much to accomplish that.

I think the issue can be dealt with as a greater and greater number of people assume the responsibility of facing up to the proper uses of dangerous or potentially dangerous things such as guns, drugs, automobiles or whatever — if we got rid of "dangerous" things we would eventually have to sleep on bare floors and eat only with spoons.

Hospital praised

To The Editor:

Having just spent a month in Midland Memorial Hospital, I want to say that the nurses and assistants deserve far more praise than they receive and believe me they earn every cent they are paid — and then some.

I feel I can never repay them for being so kind and good to me when I needed them.

Abortion opposed

To The Editor:

I am writing in response to a letter printed in the July 5, 1981 edition of your paper entitled "Soul of the Issue." Since Mr. Wileczek speaks of a soul, I assume that he has taken a religious stand within his beliefs and statement. Yet, if that is true, where did he obtain his information?

In the Bible, Psalm 139:13-15, there is a very strong implication that we do, indeed, have a soul even from the very moment of conception. It would then seem that it is Mr. Wileczek who suffers from a misconception, not those whom he accuses of the same.

I would further like to state my opposition to abortion. Today there are many effective varieties of contraceptives which are available in most drugstores with such variety, effectiveness and availability, there is no substancial excuse for the "accidental" pregnancy. Further, if one should become pregnant and not wish to have a child, what is wrong with putting it up for adoption?

Has our society come to a point where even life has no value? If so, I think society needs a change, and in a hurry.

INVESTORS GUIDE

Part of utility dividends exempt

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I recall reading, quite some time ago, that a certain percentage of the dividends received from stocks of utility companies are exempt from federal income tax. If my memory is correct, 40 percent of such dividends are non-taxable.

I asked someone who is well informed about taxes. He said he never heard of anything like this. Am I right or is he.?

Doyle

A. You're right — to a point. Part of the dividends paid by some — not all — utilities is not subject to federal income tax. Also, the tax-free portion can vary from one year to the next.

The tax-free part of the dividend paid on a utility's stock is counted as a "return of capital" for tax purposes. When you own stock of a utility company making return of capital contributions, the company sends you a statement each year telling you how much of your dividend is taxable and how much is tax-free.

The statement will also tell you to reduce your "basis" — your cost price of your stock — by the amount of the tax-free dividends. When you sell stock, the difference between your basis and the proceeds from the sale is either a capital gain or capital loss and must be reported on your income tax return for the year in which you sell.

Tax-free return of capital dividends always reduce your basis. If your basis ever drops to zero, you are then supposed to report all subsequent return of capital dividends as long-term capital gains on your federal income tax returns.

Q. During the past few years, I have purchased several municipal bonds. Because I am in the 40 percent income tax bracket, I like the tax-free interest "municipals" pay. I insist that all my bonds be in registered form. But my broker gives me an argument for coupon type bonds. Is there any good reason that registered bonds are not OK?

A. Nope — they're fine — if you can get them in that form.

Like you, many investors prefer bonds in registered form — with the owner's name on both the bond and the issuer's books. Interest checks come in the mail. Owners are notified, if their bonds are called for early redemption.

When a bond is in "bearer" form, you have to clip a coupon each time an interest payment is due. The issuer has no record of your ownership.

The problem is that most municipals — bonds issued by states and their political subdivisions — come only in bearer form. States, cities, school districts and such seldom issue bonds in registered form. Even when your broker can get a registered municipal bond for you, you might have to pay a "premium" over the going market price when you buy and accept a "discount" below the prevailing price when you sell — because of the extra work in transferring registered bonds.

Q. I now have $5,000 in a regular savings account and know it should be somewhere else, to earn more income. I can put $1,000 away for a year and $2,500 away for six months. But I might need the rest of the money in less than two months. Where can I get the most on my money, under these circumstances?

A. Because you can't put your money into anything resembling a "long-term" commitment and aren't sure exactly when you might use some or all of it, the natural advice to you is to put the $5,000 into a money market mutual fund.

As I put this through the typewriter, the average yield on money market funds is better than 16 percent. You can get your money out at any time, without penalty. With most money market funds, you can do that by writing a check.

Third date set on auto rate hearing

BY BILL KIDD

AUSTIN — Figures compiled by the State Board of Insurance from the annual premium and losses reports by insurers operating in Texas show over $5.9 billion earned premium and $3.6 billion in losses for all regulated property and casualty lines last year.

SBI's calculations show the earned premium for 1980 reached $5,908,530,364, while incurred losses came to $3,641,487,414.

For worker's compensation, the figures were $1,351,380,801 in earned premium and $883,475,434 in incurred losses.

Comparable figures for homeowners' fire coverage were $670,022,635 and $432,484,693. For homeowners' casualty coverage, the figures were $63,391,136 and $35,643,131.

SBI has come up with a third set of dates on the annual automobile rate hearing, which has been further subdivided this year.

At present, it's planned to hold the hearing on rules and regulations July 28-29 in Austin, with auto insurance rates to be considered Aug. 20.

July 24 was set for hearing rules and rates on mobile homes.

Insurance industry officials reportedly told SBI some witnesses would be unable to appear at the originally scheduled times on the private passenger rates, and problems also appeared regarding the mobile homes hearing — resulting in the three-part hearing.

Texas Energy and Natural Resources Advisory Council has outlined a proposed program for development of Texas' lignite resources, commenting that those deposits "deserve immediate aggressive attention as the most readily accessible energy resource in the transition from almost complete dependence on petroleum-based energy."

TENRAC's recommendation is likely to get more attention in view of the U.S. Supreme Court ruling upholding Montana's 30 per cent severance tax on its coal — which has been sought by a number of Texas utilities as an alternative to other fuels, such as natural gas.

Some utilities already have indicated they will be looking more to lignite in the future.

TENRAC's Advisory Committee on Coal and Lignite has recommended the following program, which it says is flexible enough to be halted at any stage of implementation.

First, study of existing permitting and related regulatory requirements on surface mining and in situ gasification of lignite, with a view to changes for expedited permitting "with reasonable environmental protection."

Second, developing a "workable and effective framework" for cooperation of Federal, State, local and industry efforts on "evaluation and mitigation of socioeconomic impacts" of lignite development.

Third, review of policy issues related to deep lignite and recommendations on State policy positions and needed legislation.

Fourth, "step-by-step" deep basin lignite development programs with "appropriate public sector-private sector coordination," with protection of "legitimate private sector proprietary information" while promoting optimal development.

The last proposal includes a number of specific suggestions:

—"Two-hole tests"with air and oxygen of gasification techniques, followed by multiple-hole field testing.

—A pilot-to-commercial scale production facility "funded and operated by private industry with monitoring and evaluation of environmental impacts with State and Federal cooperation."

Texas Industrial Commission meets July 23 in Amarillo for its quarterly session, with amendments to rules and regulations on industrial revenue bond issues among the items on its agenda.

Changes made by the Legislature this year have necessitated the changes, which are to make it clear that such projects, certain truck terminals, distribution centers and sewage treatment facilities — but exclude medical research projects and commercial projects (except in economically distressed areas).

TIC also is looking at rules and regulations related to incorporation of a small business development corporation, which would be used to issue bonds for small business projects to be backed by Small Business Administration guarantees.

SBA reportedly has approved the plan.

These regulations, however, aren't likely to go to the TIC for action before October, and the program isn't expected to be ready to operate before next January.

TIC also will consider an industrial revenue bond application for Sweetwater at its July 23 session.

The seminar is for personnel managers or anyone directly supervising others. During the past decade, a great deal has been discovered about how the human brain processes information. Along with these discoveries we have found that most people give off certain observable signals that reveal how they are processing information. The EEG, polygraph, and voice stress analyzer are examples of how machinery can be designed to read these signals. However, the trained observer has access to much more information than any given machine.

For instance, a polygraph cannot see the color variation of skin tones, nor analyze the sentence structure of spoken words. Neither can it interpret the frequent use of such words as "try" or "you know." All of these messages are clues to predictable behavior.

E. F. Hutton opens new Midland office

Frank Maggio, manager, said the office will be operated by himself and a staff of six brokers, including Craig Campbell, Mike Minces, Gerald C. Nobles Jr., Phil Rogers, Wade Wise and Steve Hamrick.

A number of support personnel also will be employed at the facility, he said, and another broker may be added to the staff at a later date.

The new firm will be a full-service E.F. Hutton branch office which will offer clients in Midland all the services presently available from E.F. Hutton. That will include as broad and complete a line of financial services as the firm presently offers.

Those services will run the gamut from conventional brokerage services to investment management, including a number of specialized services such as tax shelter capability and gold and silver accumulation programs.

E.F. Hutton also offers insurance products such as life insurance plans and fixed and variable annuities. Additionally, services will be offered in account management and "a very sophisticated financial planning program," according to E.F. Hutton's New York offices.

Maggio came to Midland a year ago from Merrill Lynch's offices in Puerto Rico. He was affiliated with Merrill Lynch for a year prior to joining E.F. Hutton recently.

The other six brokers in the Midland office also have prior investment experience with Merrill Lynch.

According to Maggio, the offices are now in the process of being remodeled and temporary quarters have been established in back of the offices being remodeled. He said that a grand opening is planned later for the firm.

Ortloff employees take part in seminar

Representatives of The Ortloff Corporation were guest speakers at Ector High School in Odessa for part of a summer seminar sponsored by the Texas Association for Minorities in Engineering (TAME).

Mike Farris and Bob Grace, both of Ortloff's civil and structural engineering department with approximately 20 students to present a brief history of civil engineering as it has evolved into a professional engineering discipline encompassing many areas of practice.

Grace outlined the history of civil engineering from its conception to present-day technology and how it relates to everyday life.

Farris gave examples of different disciplines in civil engineering, such as structural, environmental and transportation engineering; hydrology and surveying as they relate to Municipal, State and Federal government agencies; and private practice, and industrial application.

Both Ortloff engineers illustrated situations where attention or lack of attention in civil engineering affected people, especially in the area of ... and flood control, and community and environmental planning.

The students were told to prepare for a career in engineering along with selecting their specific areas of interest in order to arrange their course work for specialization in future practice.

The Midland/Odessa Chapter of TAME, established in 1979, seeks to bring the minority population into the mainstream of technical careers. Area industry representatives seek to achieve this by identifying minority students with engineering potential.

The Ortloff Corporation, a fully integrated engineer - construction firm, has been a Participating member of the local TAME Chapter alone since 1979.

Joys of exploring Davis Mountains last forever

JEFF DAVIS COUNTY — The gnarled ridgebacks and jutting peaks of the Davis Mountains which reach upward to touch sky sometimes reach deep within souls as well, stirring notes of spirituality and self-discovery that last a lifetime.

For hundreds of youngsters from Midland and the Permian Basin who live, learn and share at Buffalo Trail Council Scout Ranch for boys and Camp Mitre Peak for girls, the Great Outdoors performs that miracle, as it did for 10 years for former Midlander Pam Whatley of Dallas, who now finds in her charge 119 girls in the shadows of 6,100-foot Mitre Peak.

Experiences gained in a summer camp seem to be retained a lifetime. As a girl Ms. Whatley "virtually grew up" at Camp Mitre, and in her job as director she looks upon the camp as "something special."

"Here, because we're not locked in by restrictions of home and school, you're allowed to grow," she says, walking alongside the battlement of palisades which oversee the camp from the north. "Camp allowed me to discover some of the qualities inside me. I learned how to work together, become self-dependent. It's a great place to learn the value of the outdoors."

"CAMPERS ARE usually living in a completely different community," than that which they're accustomed to, explained Gerald Petty of Midland, director of Buffalo Trail Council Scout Ranch. "They've got to learn to live with lots of other people, sometimes under very adverse conditions. And we feel a boy grows a lot during a week of camp, in terms of character building and maturity."

Petty said some boys want to call their parents to come after them by the second day, but by later in the week they usually are wishing they could remain longer. "A lot of it is just growing up and learning to become self-dependent," he noted.

Joe Gallagher of Midland, serving as acquatics director for Buffalo Trail Ranch, amplified. "This week I remember one kid, who because of bad problems at home, carried them over as problems in his troop," he said. "He came here tense and didn't get along with other kids. He was hitting and cursing. In the last three days I have not observed any of that. He's more friendly and cooperative with peers."

DEEP-ROOTED FEARS sometimes can be resolved in an outdoor setting, he added.

"Another kid had been involved in a near drowning," he explained. "This week he got into deep water for the first time, without displaying any fear."

"(Camp Mitre Peak) is a very special place to a lot of people," said Ms. Whatley. "I have little girls coming up saying, 'Radar (her nickname), my mommy was at this camp, and she had so much fun she wanted me to go.'"

Often, she noted, the divine order of things becomes more apparent when gasoline fumes are abandoned for fresh air and skyscrapers for the panorama of mountain peaks rising against the sky.

"I never feel as close to God as I do when I'm here," she said. She recalled that at age 8 she climbed neighboring Kokernaut Mountain, and sprawled on top in reflection of her environment and her relationship to it. "I appreciated the beauty around me. It was a very spiritual experience. We as adults don't realize that kids think like this, but they are just as aware as we are."

IN THIS, HER first return to Camp Mitre as an adult, Ms. Whatley hopes to repay the camp for the beneficial impact it had on her as an impressionistic girl.

"It's a very special summer for me personally because I grew up here and camp did so much for me," she said. "I feel this is my chance to give back to the camp. This is our goal for the summer."

The 110-acre Camp Mitre Peak is located at the end of FM 1837 14 miles south of Fort Davis off Texas 118. Approximately 120 girls ages 6-16 attend the camp in one- or two-week sessions at a cost of $56 per girl. It remains open until July 22.

"If you would have dinner with a little girl and ask her what she did, she would say swim and ride," noted Ms. Whatley. "But we do a lot more than that."

AREA RANCHES ARE obliging, and girls have access to thousands of acres of surrounding land for supervised hikes. Additional activities include photography workshops, theater and performing arts, hand crafts, rapelling and singing.

The camp is set in a beautiful location, at 4,500 feet elevation in the mouth of cottonwood-shaded Fern Canyon near the base of a towering mass of dirt and rock known as Mitre Peak, whose summit is sought by the older girls each summer. As the cliffs of the canyon close in against the cottages, the world drifts back to a simpler, more elemental era. Deep within its confines, quiet, still pools of water await hikers, and the soul-searching becomes most intense.

Buffalo Trail Scout Ranch is comprised of 63,000 acres of mountains, canyons, gullies and ridges northwest of Fort Davis off FM 1832. The majority of the ranch is accessible only by horseback or on foot, and 75 miles of marked trails cover the area from one end to the other, said Petty. Wildlife is seen frequently, some of it indigenous to the land, some imported. White Spanish goats hug cliffsides abqve the main headquarters. Deer amble through quiet canyons. Mountain lions occasionally frequent the area, and a large one was slain recently. And abundant backcountry water provides sanctuary for rare fish.

THE CAMP'S SUMMER session for scouts already has passed, although it remains open weekends for troops from throughout the council. Campfire Girls and Explorers also make use of facilities, while a winter scout camp is held each year between Christmas and New Year's Day.

Despite the brevity of time a youth attends a wilderness camp, the intensity of everyday life is likely to have a lasting impact, one that may help shape his or her basic character. For, say scouting leaders, hikers, fishermen, mountaineers, to commune with nature is to probe deep inside self, discover those qualities which otherwise might remain forever submerged.

The "Sleeping Maiden," a formation on the eastern slope of 6,100-foot Mitre Peak, sentinels Camp Mitre Peak and the girl scouts who are drawn here from throughout the state. "The legend says the Sleeping Maiden looks out for the camp," says director Pam Whatley. "As long as girls have been coming here, there's never been a single one injured seriously."

Scout Ranch honored

FORT DAVIS — Buffalo Trail Council Scout Ranch recently was granted a National Standard Rating by the Region Office of the South Central Region, National Council, Boy Scouts of America, according to council president K.D. Van Horn.

The rating came after an inspection headed by Bill Tucker of Roswell, N.M., a member of the Region Executive Committee, and Pete Cook of Lubbock, area director of the South Central Region.

Van Horn said the rating is the highest attainable and is based on several qualities, including health and safety; menus, food and handling; program; and adult supervision of program.

POSITIVE THINKING

These thirteen words will help make you a new person

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

His name was Jim. He was a big man, but shy. He was a salesman. His company employed a large sales force and Jim's record was just about the worst of all. It seemed only a question of time before the company would have to let Jim go.

Yet, only a year after his superiors had decided to give Jim one last chance, he passed every other salesman of his company to become its top producer. At the annual sales meeting, the sales manager called Jim up to the platform to give him the prize for being top man for the year. As the manager handed him a check he said: "Jim, you're a mystery to us. You've never been anywhere near the top in sales before, but suddenly you've reached it. Besides, you came up from the bottom of the salesman's list. How did you do it? I want you to tell the boys here how come."

Jim was embarrassed. Shifting from one foot to the other his face turned red. "There's really nothing I can tell the boys," he said. "I just got hold of something that changed me and made me a new man."

"What was that?" the manager asked curiously.

"Well, it's this: I simply found thirteen lucky words — and they've been worth a lot to me. You see, when I was told you were going to fire me if I didn't improve, I got to thinking. I went home that night, gave my wife some money and told her to take the kids to the movies because I wanted to be alone. I sat in my chair thinking, and believe me, boss, I was pretty honest with myself.

"While pacing up and down in our living room, I happened to see an old Bible my mother had given me but which I hadn't looked at for years. She told me if I ever got into trouble I'd find an answer to it in that Book. Well, I was in real trouble now and no fooling. Maybe this was the time. Anyway, I took it from the shelf, blew the dust off it, and began to leaf through it, reading here and there. There were lots of good things in it, but it wasn't until I was almost going to close it in discouragement that I found exactly what I must have been looking for."

He hesitated in some embarrassment. Talking religion wasn't his line, but he continued doggedly. "I found these thirteen words? 'Behold, I make all things new...He that overcometh, shall inherit all things.'

"Well, those words hit me like a ton of bricks. If anyone needed to be made new it was me."

I closed the book, sat awhile thinking and finally I prayed to God to make me a new man: to help me stop being such a flop. I meant that too, and I felt much better. Then my wife and kids came home and we went to bed. I had the best sleep in weeks. I felt more peaceful and confident.

"The very next morning, I repeated those thirteen words several times. And because I was determined to change everything about me and make it all new like the words said, I went downtown and bought a complete new outfit and took it home. Then I undressed, got into the tub and scrubbed myself and hard as I could. It seemed like I wanted to wash all the failure off of me. Then I dressed and, before going out, asked for God's help and guidance. I looked in the mirror on my way out and, believe it or not, I actually looked like a new man. I know that sounds crazy, but it's the way it seemed.

"I said, I'm going out now to make my calls and do the best I can, with heaven's help. I found myself taking a lot more interest in the people I called on. I was more enthusiastic. I began to sell, and I realized I was enjoying myself. Everything perked up because I was perked up. I guess that's all there is to it."

The man who told me about this incident said that at this point you could hear a pin drop. Then, suddenly, there was cheering such as had never been heard before at any sales meeting. Jim's friends had seen actual proof that a man can make himself over, despite past failures and start a new record. There are always new beginnings for anyone — positively.

Study shows man's evolution gradual

NEW YORK (AP) — The human species evolved gradually through a process of natural selection, not through sudden changes in environment or behavior, four anthropologists say.

Their assertion, published in the current issue of the British scientific journal Nature, challenges a recent theory favored by some others in the field and by some believers in the biblical version of creation.

According to the challenged view, evolution occurred as a succession of rapid changes, following long periods when no new species appeared.

The rapid-change theory is attractive to some creationists — believers in the biblical theory of creation — because it is compatible with their view that all manner of animal species appeared suddenly through divine intervention.

Most scientists agree that both kinds of evolution — rapid and gradual — can occur. Proponents of the rapid-change theory, however, say that most species evolved through distinct, sudden changes. Their opponents, who support the view first advanced by Charles Darwin, say most species developed gradually.

The rapid-change theory, called "punctuated equilibrium," was developed in the early 1970s by Stephen Jay Gould of Harvard University and Niles Eldredge of the American Museum of Natural History in New York.

Gould would not comment directly on the paper appearing in Nature, but he said that even if the paper is correct, it shows only that early human species developed gradually.

"Our contention has never been more than that the vast majority of cases occur by this punctuated model," Gould said in a telephone interview. If the finding of the four anthropologists is correct, Gould said, it would simply represent a "counter case" to the theory.

John Cronin, an anthropologist at Harvard and one of the authors of the paper in Nature, says he and his associates used new evidence to show that human evolution occurred gradually.

The authors said each of the four species of early man that came before Homo Sapiens was on Earth for about 750,000 years.

That would seem to suggest gradual evolution, the authors said, rather than the quick, unexpected development of new species propounded in the rapid-change theory.

"We feel pretty comfortable that we document gradual change in human evolution," said Cronin, now on sabbatical at the University of California at Berkeley. "I think they (the proponents of the rapid-change theory) have overstated their case."

The scientists acknowledge that it is difficult to resolve their disagreement, because of gaps in the record of fossils used to determine when various species appeared.

They also do not agree on the meaning of "rapid" changes. To scientists who study the 4.6 billion-year history of the Earth, a rapid change could be one that takes 500,000 years.

"It's been a key question through evolution for a hundred years," said Cronin. "How fast do things occur?"

By JEANE DIXON

Monday, July 13, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Actress Sudie Bond, who plays "Mama" on the TV series "Flo," shares this birthday with you. She is co-founder of the Paper Bag Players, a children's theater group. Also born on this date: New York Congressman and former professional football star Jack Kemp. Romance will be a dominant theme in the year ahead. Be careful not to risk a meaningful, lasting love relationship for a temporary infatuation! Partnerships will produce better results and greater profits than in the past. Look for marked improvement in an employment situation. Your active mind leads you to continually seek new and bigger challenges. The financial outlook is excellent.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Taking the initiative could lead to a misunderstanding with co-workers. Do not fret. Progress is more important than popularity right now. Partnerships may assume greater significance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Get together with influential individuals who can send business your way. Make a special effort to settle your differences with mate or partner. Otherwise, there could be a blow-up.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): New romantic vistas could open up today for those who are unattached. You are unlikely to see eye-to-eye with partner on a money matter. Be sure you are on firm ground.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Social events give you a chance to make promising career, business contacts. Influential people are supportive. Self-improvement activities will enhance your image.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Pace yourself to keep up with increased demands. Your instincts are constructive and work in your favor. Member of opposite sex holds the key to greater financial or emotional security.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Highlight your creative, artistic talents to boost profits. You will be vindicated because of the way you handle yourself in a crisis situation. Travel will give you a new outlook.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Treat an authority figure as a friend, not a foe. Your goals and ambitions could shift dramatically, giving you new freedom. Religion and philosophy become more important to you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your earnings will increase soon. Friendships, contacts are the key to greater success. The mail brings welcome news. Member of opposite sex deserves a prompt answer.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A friend points out your need to brush up on certain skills. Do not take offense. Realise this person has your best interests at heart.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Concentrate on settling your financial affairs early in the day so that money is not on your mind during later business negotiations. You may be involved in romantic entanglement.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You might endanger your future prospects if you push too hard for immediate gains. Avoid becoming antagonistic around higher-ups. The romantic outlook is bright for those who are eligible.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Idealism is at the center of a business decision. Those who work behind the scenes may hold the trump card. Proceed at your own risk! Motives of a member of opposite sex may be questioned.

United States Secretary of Agriculture John Block laughs it up as he checkes the likeness of him and his wife Suzanne on a copy of the famous painting "American Gothic" presented to him at a farm outside Greensburg, Ind., while on the Indiana Farm Management Tour recently. The Block's faces were substituted for the familiar old couple in the original painting by Purdue University illustrator Edward M. Blackwell.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Vaginitis most common complaint

Dear Dr. Solomon: My gynecologist has diagnosed a condition that has been troubling me as vaginitis, and has suggested I stop using oral contraceptives for a while. How can oral contraceptives cause vaginitis? I am not married, but neither am I sexually promiscuous. Anything you can tell me about this disorder will be appreciated. — Ms. C.L.

Dear Ms. L.: Vaginitis is a condition characterized by inflammation, irritation, or infection of the vagina. It is probably the most common complaint now heard by gynecologists. Possible causes include increased sexual activity, multiple sexual partners, and use of the Pill.

The symptoms of vaginitis include itching, burning, an unpleasant odor, and an unusual vaginal discharge. However, as Dr. Anthony C. Quartell of the College of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey points out, vaginal discharge ordinarily is not a cause for concern; healthy women experience a certain amount of discharge as a normal secretion.

Your gynecologist probably suggested that you refrain from using oral contraceptives for a while because some contain high levels of the hormone progesterone. Progesterone encourages the growth of Candida, a fungus infection. For this reason a doctor may recommend either that a patient switch to a pill containing less progesterone or, as an alternative, use another method of birth control.

Women with diabetes are particularly susceptible to this infection. Therefore, a woman with chronic Candida and a family history of diabetes should be checked for high blood sugar.

Women with Candida should be careful not to scratch the infection. Relief for the discomfort associated with the disorder is available through the use of creams which are applied externally, or with tablets or creams that are inserted into the vagina.

Another form of vaginitis — one that is considered more serious than Candida because it can cause cystitis (inflammation of the bladder) — is Trichomonas. Since men are also subject to infection by this organism, both partners must be treated in order to prevent reinfection.

The treatment for Trichomonas is a drug called metronidazole, which is taken orally. Incidentally, the use of this drug illustrates something I've warned about on other occasions — the importance to know how one drug a patient may be taking is affected by other drugs. Metronidazole when combined with alcohol causes abdominal pain, and the two should never be mixed. In addition, metronidazole should always be taken with meals since it tends to irritate the mouth and throat.

Prevention, of course, is always better than treatment. To reduce the possibility of vaginal infection, women should make certain to dry themselves thoroughly after bathing. Panties with cotton crotches are preferable to other fabrics which do not absorb as well and provide poor ventilation. In addition, a person susceptible to infection should try to avoid perfumed douches, sprays, and deodorant tampons.

If despite these precautions a vaginal infection does occur, the woman should either abstain from sex or have her partner use a condom until the infection responds to treatment. Otherwise, irritation and reinfection may result.

Oklahomans imbibe liquor by the wink

By TIM TUMLIN
Associated Press Writer

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Oklahoma's bootlegging business dried up when the state's Prohibition ended in 1959, but drinkers in Oklahoma — from businessmen sipping lunch to diners with a premeal cocktail — tipple in the speakeasy spirit that the next crowd of charcoal gray suits coming in the door could be a police raid.

After 22 years, getting around the state's unique law banning the sale of liquor by the drink is a way of life wryly called liquor by the wink by a coping population of imbibers.

And there's a long call for wry winking in some quarters. In a frontier state where the Bible Belt can act more like a harness, legislating sobriety has left its mark in many ways:

— Television stations can't air wine commercials, even those from the networks. Studio technicians stand by with a substitite. If they're caught unaware, they blot them out.

— A recent state Supreme Court opinion was needed to officially allow the Catholic Church to buy sacramental wine from its makers. The controversy began before statehood under territorial law in 1918 when a priest had wine delivered directly to him.

— Liquor stores can't lure customers indoors by allowing them to use their restrooms or telephones, and the shops are advertised only with a small sign that says "Retail Liquor Store."

— The state constitution is a beer drinker's delight, however. It flatly proclaims that beer with 3.2 percent alcohol is not intoxicating. It's sold at all hours, but store owners can't be sure whom to sell it to. In 1976 the U.S. Supreme Curt struc down a state law that called men under 21 minors but let women 18 drink beer. Since then, the Legislature hasn't acted to replace it.

BUT THE jewel, or thorn, in the crown of Oklahoma's liquor laws is the 1959 constitutional change that ended Prohibition but conceded drinking only in private clubs by members who bring their own bottles. Nowhere else is liquor by the drink banned statewide.

If a political hot potato could smolder for decades, that is it.

Oklahoma Gov. George Nigh would not discuss the liquor laws, and almost every official interviewed talked off the record about th dilemma of pleasing the substantial "dry" forces, mostly in rural areas, while yielding to the state's drinkers and tourism interests.

The state's voters rejected attempts to liberalize the laws twice — in 1972 and 1976 — and Oklahomans kept right on drinking in their clubs — without bringing their bottles.

Alcoholic Beverage Control Board director Richard Crisp says his men have arrested nearly 1,500 people since he took the job in May 1978, but none has gone to jail.

Owners of the state's most prominent clubs and restaurants routinely plead guilty and pay their fines.

Drinkers in Oklahoma usually join private clubs the way other people tip the bartender — with a dollar. Crisp says the membership cards aren't legal if they're handed out to just anyone.

One of the biggest winkers in the state, though, is the Oklahoma Tourism Department. Abe Hesser, its executive director, says guests who check into one of the state's lodges can get a free membership to the lounge privately leased at the resort. Crisp says he's raided those, too.

"THE HYPOCRISY of the statutes is just incredible," says attorney David Hood, who represents liquor licensees. "I've taken waitresses out of jail who were reduced to tears after the experience. Whether you drink from one bottle or another is not a moral issue."

But it is a moral issue to Ross McLennan, director of an anti-liquor group called Sooner Alcohol-Narcotics Education (SANE) since Oklahoma's Prohibition ended.

McLennan, who says he discovered the dangers of liquor back in the 1930s while playing the drums in Detroit's bars, agrees that enforcement of the law is spotty, at best. He says the game ought to get tough, with stiffer fines, license suspensions and jail terms.

RINGING THE BELL

Now is the time to declare an economic emancipation

With BOB TIEUEL

President Reagan and the NAACP — A little while before President Reagan arrived recently to address the 72nd annual convention of the nation's oldest black civil rights organization, the NAACP, Theola Nelms of Fort Worth and Blanche Turner of Gilmer were sitting in front of Currigan Hall Convention Center in Denver, speaking of the possible reception the president would get in Denver from the NAACP delegates.

"I hope it will be warm and friendly" said Mrs. Turner, a retired 5th grade teacher in the East Texas town near Tyler. "Even though he's not our choice, he's our president. I respect the office, if not the man."

"But I sure hope he doesn't mess with by Social Security," declared Mrs. Nelms, a spry, part-time domestic worker who is 72 but looks years younger.

According to newsman C. P. Leubsdorf of the Dallas a.m. News, these two comments summed up the ambivalent attitude among many of the audience of some six or seven thousand delegates and visitors at the convention that Reagan bypassed last year because of what he said was faulty work by his staff.

Reagan said that, 118 years after the Emancipation Proclamation freed black slaves, it is time to declare "an economic emancipation that will move us toward black economic freedom because it is aimed at lifting an entire country and not just parts of it."

Dr. F. L. Loving, a black physician of Lubbock, said, "I can't be disappointed until I see what happens. I like what the man is trying to do in getting the budget balanced and back in helping get opportunities for jobs instead of just relief."

CHIMES: The Moral Majority has little support among most churches because it is too right-wing and too political, believes one of our bellringers who is a Presbyterian minister. Conservative groups are trying to return to an old age in their view of social issues such as abortion, women's rights and foreign policy. "That age was an age of racial prejudice, injustice and poverty. Anybody who takes Jesus seriously has got to take human rights seriously," believes Bill Tiemann, pastor of St. Mark Presbyterian Church of Dallas.

Roscoe Dunjee, founder of the Black Dispatch in 1915 in Oklahoma City, was born to a Baptist minister and his wife, both escaped slaves. He was born June 21, 1883 at Storer College in Harpers Ferry, W.Va. The Black Dispatch is one of the nation's leading periodicals and Worth J. Hadley writes, "Often described as a lawyer without portfolio, few people would actually have believed that a small boy; a third grade drop-out from all formal education would help shape the history of this, the greatest nation on the globe today...After 40 years of public service, Dunjee retired as publisher-editor of the Black Dispatch in November 1955. Dunjee died on Monday, March 1, 1965." This correspondent exchanged ideas with Dunjee for some 12 years or more before his retirement. As Hadley added, "There will never be another Dunjee."

Rev. Drinan Returns to Politics: Rev. Bob Drinan recently won election to the presidency of Americans for Democratic Action, returning to the political arena with a charge that Moral Majority conservatives are "enemies of the country." The Roman Catholic priest, who gave up his seat in Congress last year when Pope John Paul II ordered priests to stay out of politics, told ADA members they are "battling for the soul of America" when they fight Reagan administration cuts in social programs."

By 1990, the U.S. will have 536,000—70,000 more than needed, according to a survey by a medical committee. We wonder how many black doctors will be in that number, one bellringer asked.

At the present time, there is a serious shortage of doctors in the black communities of the nation as well as dentists, it is reported.

Highest court doesn't approve of nude dancing

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Supreme Court Justice Harry A. Blackmun says you wouldn't know it from the headlines, but the nation's highest court doesn't approve of nude dancing.

Blackmun said Thursday at the 8th Circuit Judicial Conference that too often the public misconstrues decisions as far more sweeping than they really are.

He told the judges and lawyers attending the conference that one headline said "The Supreme Court Approved Nude Dancing" in a case in which club operators challenged a municipality's right to restrict club activities. He said the court merely decided that the particular ordinance "would have banned the high school play."

Shark repellent remains secret

MIAMI (AP) — Scientists knew for years that a rare Red Sea fish oozes a substance that can stop a shark in mid-bite and make it curl up on the ocean floor, but they didn't know that it sells for less than 5 cents a pound.

Sam Gruber of the University of Miami's Rosenstiel School of Marine and Atmospheric Science said Thursday that a chemical used in photography has been found to cause sharks to go into convulsions.

Gruber said American and Israeli scientists discovered that the photographic substance is chemically equal to the milky secretion of the Moses sole fish. The photographic chemical instantly repelled every shark tested, he said.

"Without a doubt, this material has the best promise of anything we have ever seen come along," Gruber said.

He did not identify the compound, saying his work was done under contract with the U.S. Navy. But he said preliminary tests indicate that the photo chemical is so effective that small quantities are capable of stopping an attack even as a shark is in mid-bite.

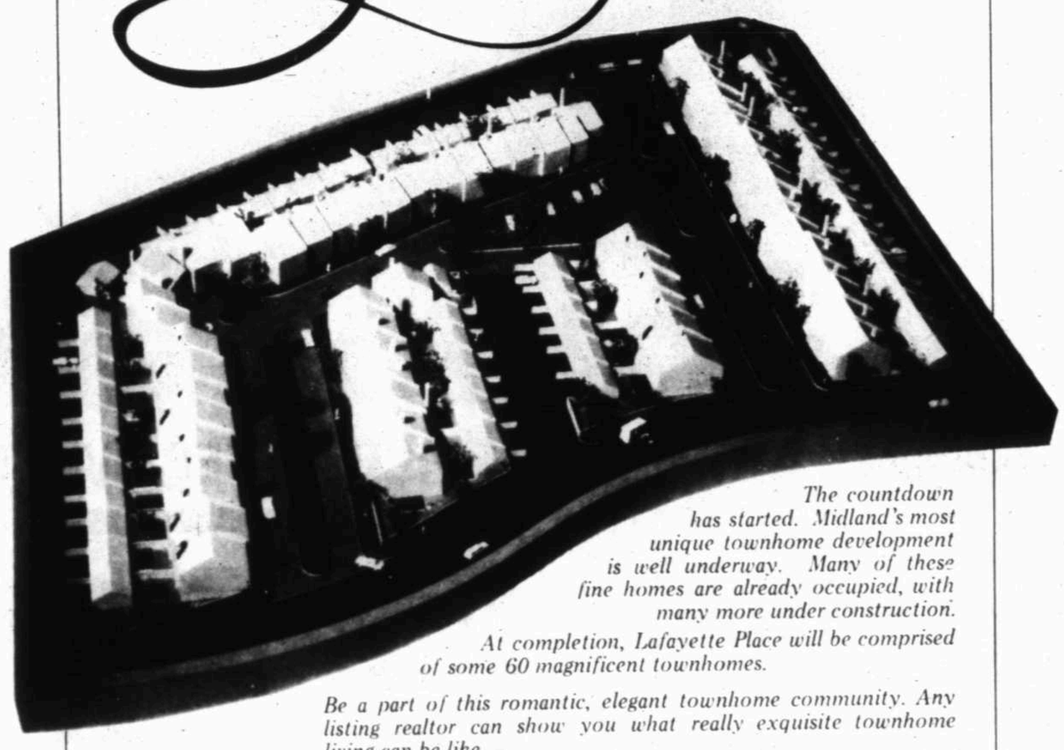

Sharks tested in waters containing minute amounts of gland secretions from the flat fish would stop their attack in less than half a second, Gruber said.

The sharks would be so stunned that they would "curl up on the bottom and go into writhing convulsions," he said.

But the cost of extracting the compound from the fish for wide use would be prohibitive, he said.

One death definition suggested by commision

WASHINGTON (AP) — As Congress considers when life begins, a presidential commission says it ends with the "irreversable cessation" of all brain or circulatory and respiratory functions — even if a person can be kept alive artificially.

The commission, chartered by Congress in 1978, is urging states to adopt its definition of death to help cope with situations in which peple are beingkept alive on respirators.

Brain-dead people are "people who have expired whose hearts and lungs are kept working, though the function of the brain isn't there," said Alexander Capron, the commission's executive director.

"When there is no clear definition, the physician faces a difficult choice," he said. "There are the old vital signs of life: a heartbeat, a heaving chest, a warm skin. But he knows that if he weren't giving respiration, there would be a corpse."

Commission members said Thursday that a uniform definition of death would prevent problems that might result by a person being declared dead in one state and alive in another.

Also Thursday, a Senate Judiciary subcommittee approved a bill defining life as beginning at conception. The proposal to give all unborn fetuses full constitutional rights is a step toward reversing legalized abortions.

A vote by the full Judiciary Committee on the so-called human life bill has been put off until fall or winter while conservatives debate what kind of anti-abortion legislation they want. Some say a constitutional amendment would be preferable.

Sen. John East, R-N.C., the subcommittee chairman, said the bill is designed to reverse a 1973 Supreme Court ruling that legalized abortion but failed to resolve a key issue: "Namely, when does life begin?"

Although Congress is considering a federal law defining life, the commission said a definition of death would be better left to the states. It recommended that they adopt its proposed Uniform Determination of Death Act.

Medical advances that can keep a body functioning after severe injury and disease make definitions of death based on a heart stoppage or cessation of breathing obsolete, the commission said.

"We have concluded that, in light of the ever-increasing powers of biomedical science and practice, a statute is needed to provide a clear and socially accepted basis for making determinations of death," Abram said.

Artists plan statement

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — They prefer to call it a "creative political statement" instead of a protest, but a dozen local artists will be marching Monday because they are upset with President Reagan's budget cuts.

The demonstration planned for noon in front of the new San Antonio Museum of Art could be the most unusual ever staged in this city which has had its share of political protests.

Glenna Park, an artist who has exhibited her works nationally, organized the so-called "Texas Art Band" because, she alleges, the administration's budget is trying to make "marching" the national art form at the expense of painting, music, dancing, poetry, writing, museums, theaters and other art groups.

SHE SAID the group would don toy soldier uniforms — comprised of painted sandwich boards in the front and impressionstic nude paintings in the back symbolizing the plight of artists — then march up and down playing kazoos and chanting "we can march and we kazoo, but we can paint, we can act, we can dance and we want a chance."

Ms. Park said the Texas Art Band objects to the National Endowment of the Arts budget being cut from $169 million to 88 million while $98 million has been approved for military marching bands.

"Considering that NEA funds are shared by poets, musicians, artists, dancers, museuems, theaters and other art groups, this establishes marching as the National Art Form," Ms. Park said.

MS. PARK, who recently helped sponsor the first exhibit of U.S. women artists' work in the Museu de Arte Contemporarea de Sao Paulo, Brazil, said she had never marched in her life so she sought guidance from two helpful members of the 5th Army Band stationed at Fort Sam Houston here.

"A LOT OF the people in the band did not want to bring it up as a protest against the military. We know military bands are expensive. We did not want to present the idea that military bands stink. Reagan's policy stinks."

Rumor heard that merger fever sweeping oil industry

By FLOYD NORRIS
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The Reagan administration gave its go-ahead, and merger fever swept the oil industry.

The swirl of rumors that have been sweeping Wall Street was launched by Du Pont Co.'s mammonth $6.9 billion bid for Conoco Inc. That would be the biggest acquisition in corporate history.

It also would create the seventh-largest industrial company in the United States. In the Carter administration, it is doubtful that such a deal would even have been considered, since it would almost certainly have faced an antitrust challenge.

But the Reagan administration this past week dismissed two antitrust cases, and William Baxter, the assistant attorney general in charge of antitrust enforcement, said that "there is a more favorable atmosphere for mergers."

The Justice Department has not decided whether to challenge the Du Pont-Conoco deal, but its actions were taken by oil company officials as a clear signal that the antitrust cops had put away their nightsticks.

TEXACO INC., the No. 3 oil company, began negotiations with a group of banks to arrange a $5.5 billion line of credit, the largest such banking deal ever, according to banking industry sources. Despite its size, Texaco's proven reserves of oil and gas have been declining, and its management apparently is considering trying to take over another oil company that has been more successful in finding new reserves.

Conoco raised its own line of credit from $1 billion to $3 billion, stirring speculation it was building a defense fund in case an unwanted suitor outbids Du Pont.

If Texaco does go after an oil company, the leading candidates seem to be Conoco and Cities Service Co. The first deal would move Texaco from No. 4 to No. 2 on the Fortune 500 list of industrial companies, while the second would leave it third. The top three now are Exxon, Mobil and General Motors.

Keeping up with the merger possibilities gets a little dizzying. Texaco says it has discussed a merger with Conoco, but will not say whether it is considering an offer. Cities Service, which saw a merger deal with Conoco fall apart when Seagram Co. Ltd. made a bid for a large interest in Conoco, says it has no merger talks going. Seagram, the big Canadian distiller, says it has not decided whether to fight the Du Pont offer for Conoco.

Another possible player is Pennzoil, a medium-sized oil company. It mortgaged a part of its oil, gas and sulfur reserves for a $2.5 billion line of credit and indicated it was looking for something to buy in energy or minerals. Other rumors had Pennzoil as a takeover candidate.

ELF ACQUITAINE, the French government-controlled oil company, boosted its bid for Texasgulf Inc., a major minerals company, to $2.74 billion and got Texasgulf's management to agree not to buck the offer. Texasgulf's Canadian operations will be spun off to Canada Development Corp., which is controlled by that country's government.

One reason some oil companies look like takeover candidates is that stock prices have dropped as the world oil glut has pushed prices lower. Pennzoil Chairman J. Hugh Liedtke noted the $2.5 billion commitment "approximates the entire market value of Pennzoil's outstanding equity securities," a fact he said shows oil stocks are undervalued.

One reason some oil companies look like takeover candidates is that stock prices have dropped as the world oil glut has pushed prices lower. Pennzoil Chairman J. Hugh Liedtke noted the $2.5 billion commitment "approximates the entire market value of Pennzoil's outstanding equity securities," a fact he said shows oil stocks are undervalued.

A Wall Street belief that may have died forever is that high interest rates are an antidote for merger fever. The prime lending rate is now 20.5 percent, but Texaco agreed to pay it and Pennzoil promised to pay even more.

There is plenty of money available for those willing to pay the price. The Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, a group of major industrial nations, commented that "investment funds, emanating largely from the surpluses of oil-exporting countries, continued to be amply available" in the first half of this year, and predicted that borrowing will increase.

STOCKHOLDERS typically love to have their companies acquired, since a premium price is paid. Executives are less enthusiastic, fearing they may lose their independence and maybe their jobs. Conoco solved that problem by having its board guarantee the salaries of nine executives for up to eight years. Chairman Ralph Bailey was assured of getting $5 million and told he could get it all immediately if he quit or was forced out following a merger.

In other business and economic news this past week:

—The government said producer prices rose 0.6 percent in June, up from 0.4 percent in May. Some economists saw evidence that inflation was again growing, but Treasury Secretary Donald Regan said he thinks the inflation rate will stay under 10 percent a year.

—Pan American World Airways Inc., having suffered indigestion and a $114.5 million quarterly loss after it acquired National Airlines, said Chairman William Seawell will retire a year early and tabbed William Waltrip to run the airline part of the business. Waltrip, 43, had been an executive vice president and has extensive airline operating experience.

—Gold prices closed below $400 an ounce in Europe for the first time since November 1979 before rebounding to finish the week well above that level. Gold has been hurt by high interest rates and hopes for lower inflation in the United States and by the strong dollar, which hit a record high against the French franc.

—The nation's major retail chains reported strong sales in June, with Sears Roebuck up 17.8 percent from the previous June and K mart showing a gain of 17.1 percent. Last June's sales were depressed by the government's credit controls.

No apple apple juice not popular with apple growers

YAKIMA, Wash. (AP) — Apple growers have a sour taste in their mouths from the test marketing of a new soft drink mix called SunApple — which features two imitation flavorings and none of the real thing.

The package illustrates a cold, fresh, red apple underneath a bright yellow "SunApple" name. Smaller type elsewhere on the cover concedes the mix contains artificial flavor and no apple juice.

SunApple hasn't made a bright debut with growers and processors in the Yakima Valley, heart of the nation's leading apple-growing region, where it is being sold as part of a test marketing program in Washington state, Dallas, Pittsburgh and Memphis.

"We have seen a variety of substitute products with apple flavor come on the market," says Larry Davenport, executive director of the Processed Apple Institute.

"WE'RE WILLING TO accept people using apple essence or small amounts of juice to make their products. Naturally we are concerned here that a product that is not an apple product in any way, totally synthetic, is being marketed and has the ability to supplant (processors and growers) in a serious way."

The institute has complained to both the Food and Drug Administration and the Federal Trade Commission about the labeling and promotion of SunApple.

However, the FDA plans no action.

"The labeling says it contains no juice," said Jim Green, an FDA spokesman in Washington, D.C. "It also says the flavor is artificial. Both of these are in fairly big type ... the fact that it's got those two disclaimers (means) we felt no need to take any regulatory action.

DAVENPORT DISAGREES, saying General Foods is "inducing the consumer to buy an apple flavored drink. I don't think the FDA will deny it. If a consumer picks it up and tries it, he's going to assume it's an apple drink."

Benjamin Fisherow, who heads the FTC advertising practices division, confirmed the apple institute has complained about SunApple but would not say whether the case was under investigation.

"It's fair to say we've gotten correspondence from more than just the processed apple people," he said.

General Foods spokesman Terry Fassburg said the marketing of SunApple in Washington state was not an attempt to test the product in a natural fruit juice market.

"Those cities are traditional General Foods test markets," he said. "The area also has a heavily developed beverage usage.

He also said it was too early to tell how SunApple was faring.

THE INTERNATIONAL APPLE Institute also plans to complain to regulatory agencies, and the organization's leader, Fred Burrows, said he wrote to senators in apple-producing states alerting them to the problem.

"Personally, I don't think that (SunApple) is a big factor," Burrows said. "But General Foods has the money to promote it. We just want to protect the apple growers around the country."

SunApple's ingredients' panel lists sugar as the main ingredient. The mix also includes citric and malic acid, potassium citrate, monocalcium phosphate, sodium citrate, magnesium oxide, caramel color and Vitamin C.

30,000 bicycles being recalled

WASHINGTON (AP) — About 30,000 Viscount 10-speed bicycles are being recalled because the front wheel might come off unexpectedly, the Consumer Product Safety Commission and a company said Friday.

The Yamaha International Corporation of Buena Park, Calif., and the commission said the problem is in cast aluminum forks that may break and allow the wheel to come off.

Yamaha said it has received about 30 reports of failure since the bikes were distributed in 1974. Twelve of the cases involved injuries, such as multiple skin abrasions, dental injuries and one reported case of paralysis, according to a joint statement anno7ncing the recall.

The recall covers the front forks on the Viscount 10-speed bicycle models GPM, PRC and PRT. The safety agency and company urged owners of the bicycles not to use them until the fork has been replaced.

The bikes were distributed nationwide from September, 1974, through October, 1977, and retail prices ranged from $189 to $269.

GAS GRILLING
. . . it will turn you into a cook-out connoisseur

Nothing beats the smoked flavored taste of something from the grill . . . and no grill can beat the fun, convenience and economy of a versatile gas grill.

Gas Grilling is versatile
You can sizzle a steak, grill a burger, smoke a ham, barbecue a bird, roast an ear, even bake a potato. You can cook many different foods a variety of ways, many at the same time on a versatile gas grill.

Gas Grilling is delicious

Gas Grilling is economical
You can cook a full family meal for just pennies. Gas grilling costs less than a third of what it would cost on an electric grill and less than a tenth of the cost for charcoaling. A national survey proved it.

Gas Grilling is cooler
It keeps the heat out of the kitchen so your air conditioning won't have to work so hard. That's important during the summer . . . plus a gas grill is the perfect meal-maker for any season of the year.

And, Gas Grilling is now 20% off
Buy now and you'll save 20%. The purchase price has been reduced 20% but only until August 1 1981 . . . and you have eight styles and sizes to choose from with all the features to make grilling fun, convenient and economical.

CONSUMER TIPS

Beware bait and switch trap

By LINDA TRUITT
Better Business Bureau
of the Permian Basin, Inc.

You have decided a ceiling fan would cut down on your heating and cooling bills, so when a local store advertises a 52-inch fan for $149 you rush to the store to take advantage of the price. Upon arriving the salesman tells you the store has "sold out" of that brand, but they are selling a higher quality fan for only 50 extra dollars. Believing the sales pitch you spend $199; you also have been the victim of bait and switch advertising.

The FTC's definition of bait advertising is "an alluring but insincere offer to sell a product or service which the advertiser in truth does not intend or want to sell. Its purpose is to switch consumers from buying the advertised merchandise, in order to sell something else, usually at a higher price or on a basis more advantageous to the advertiser." First comes the alluring offer which lures the customer, then comes...

THE SWITCH involves two steps. Step No. 1 is to discourage the customer from buying or wanting the advertised article. Step No. 2 is to encourage the customer to buy the other, higher priced article. Sometimes, the switch is obvious; but most of the time, the salesman is very subtle in the switching.

There are various statements used by the "baiter" to discourage the customer from buying or wanting the advertised article. Some of them are:

1. The advertised article is inferior.
2. The advertised article has one or two features which have caused dissatisfaction.
3. The advertised article has a very limited warranty.
4. The advertised article is not available for prompt delivery or installation.

SUCH STATEMENTS, none of which appear in the advertising and all of which are contrary to the impressions created by the advertisement, kill the customer's desire to buy the advertised article.

Some of the techniques used are so subtle as to be difficult for the average person to detect. For example, one technique is to actually "sell" and take an order or deposit on the advertised article and then to "unsell" later on with disparaging remarks. Sometimes when the customer does not fall for the "switch" after the initial sale, he will cancel the sale because of delays in delivery or installation.

There are very few earmarks of the "bait" advertiser until after responding to his advertising. Then, in one way or another, the scheme is revealed to prevent you from buying and having the advertised article.

ONE CLUE THAT you are in a "bait and switch" situation is when the statements of the salesman regarding the quality, desirability and availability of the advertised article are contrary to the impressions or representations in the advertisment.

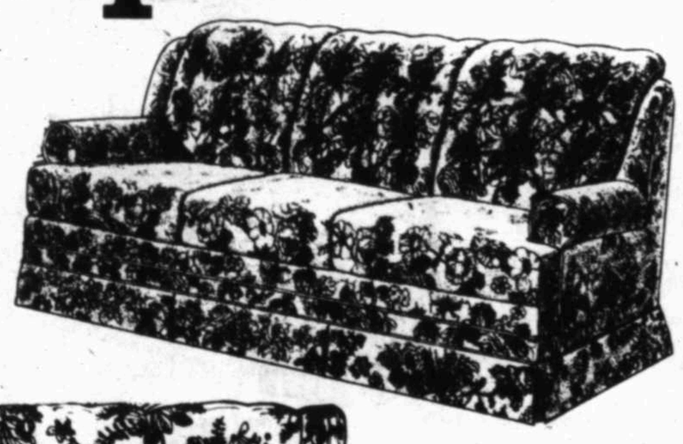

According to the Texas Consumer Protection Act it is unlawful to — "advertise goods or services with intent not to sell them as advertised," and — "advertise goods or services with intent not to supply a reasonable expectable public demand."

Critics want Guatemalan coup

By WILLIAM GIANDONI
Copley News Service

Critics of President Reagan's policy in Central America are saying that "a progressive military coup" would be the best hope for Guatemala.

While such an event may seem unlikely, it appears that the best recommendation of those who object to U.S. military aid to Latin America is for military action against a duly constituted government.

The progressive military coup thesis ignores Latin American and world history. Virtually without exception, revolutionary movements that the United States has supported have brought to power regimes more objectionable than the ones they replaced.

In Latin America, Cuba is probably the prime proof. Gen. Fulgencio Batista may well have been something less than a perfect democrat. Yet his three periods in office, totaling nine out of the 18 years between 1940 and 1958, were times of relatively enlightened government, at least when compared to the Marxist dictatorship that Fidel Castro has imposed on the Caribbean island since 1959.

Much more recently, Latin America watched the United States first help destabilize the Somoza dynasty in Nicaragua, and then react in surprise at the discovery that the leaders of the Sandinista movement really were Marxists.

As if that were not enough, three months later, in October, 1979, the United States encouraged young military officers to break with what was called "the old repressive order" and topple Gen. Carlos Humberto Romero from the presidency of El Salvador.

It is something of that sort that Richard E. Feinberg, writing in the current issue of the pestigious quarterly FOREIGN AFFAIRS prefers for Guatemala.

Feinberg's article, entitled "Central America: No Easy Answers," discusses the current turbulence in the five-nation region from the perspective of a member of the State Department's Policy Planning Staff from 1977 through 1979.

Baylor prof aids inventors

By MARK IVEY
Dallas Times Herald

WACO, Texas — Modern day inventors often find the road between their "labs" and the marketplace lined with unexpected roadblocks and frustrations. Now, however, a Baylor University professor of management has a short cut that may save the inventors both time and money — and, more importantly, tell them whether their product is marketable.

For a fee of $50, Dr. Donald L. Sexton will tell you if your invention is feasible in today's marketplace. He works with veterans in the marketing, manufacturing and financial community who first study the invention and then rate its potential.

The evaluations, based on 33 different criteria ranging from production to general investment costs, are plugged into a computer. They are then averaged and turned into three different types of scores — one which measures certain "critical" characteristics, one which gives an aggragate average on the criteria and one which produces an "estimate of success."

"We don't really make a decision for them, but we do look at other similar type inventions and see what their ratings were and then how well they did in the marketplace," Sexton said.

"The estimate of success will tell them what chance their product has in the marketplace: it may have a 50-50 chance, or it may not be even worth introducing; if, for instance, there's already another item just like it on the market, it's going to create problems.

This is where the "Innovation and Evaluation Program" can get touchy.

If the inventor decides to press on, it will cost him. Acquiring a patent can run between $1,000 and $2,000 when all the different costs are tallied. Distribution and manufacturing costs could also be a heavy initial burden; meanwhile, he economy seems determined to throw its own shadow on the market for new products.

"With the current economic conditions, people who would normally be adding new lines of products to their existing lines are taking long, hard looks," Sexton said. "When the cost of money is high it has to really look good before you can put it on the market."

Overall, Sexton is satisfied with the response to his program, which is offered as part of the Hankamer School of Business's entrepreneurship program, of which Sexton is director. The evaluation program was originally developed by the University of Oregon which later dropped it.

Sexton introduced the program last September and has since drawn about 30 to 40 responses per month. He admits he gets his share of "crackpots" — for instance, the ones who are eagerly ready to solve the energy problem with various solar and windmill contraptions. In general, though, the first year of the program has proved to be a rewarding experience.

"Often it just boils down to price," Sexton said. "We have one guy who has come up with an oil additive which reduces friction so much it increases engine efficiency. But the problem we're having is that it will have to sell for $10 a can. STP sells for less than half that, and so that makes commercialization difficult. Our advice was to go after the industrial market, because these are the big users."
