Veterans' Wives In Nursing Homes Get Support

By RHONA SCHWARTZ

THE LIVES of women whose husbands are in nursing homes and whose families are not there to give daily support often are lonely, frustrating and filled with guilt.

To give these women an emotional and supportive outlet, two Social Work Service staff members from the Veterans Administration's Outpatient Clinic have organized a group of veterans' wives who meet each Tuesday to share nursing home experiences and friendships.

Social work associate Sara Griffin and staff worker Susan Verdone agree that "as difficult an adjustment as it is for the veterans (in nursing homes), it is just as difficult for the family."

"Nobody wants to put her husband in a nursing home," Miss Verdone said, "but it gives medical care they (the veterans) can't get in their own home, no matter how devoted the family is."

Getting the proper care in a private home is too expensive, she said, and because the wives cannot get their husbands' Medicare or Medicaid subsidies unless they are indigent, the women are faced with financial as well as emotional burdens.

"We're trying for women whose husbands have just entered nursing homes," Mrs. Griffin said. "Our objectives are to give ways of coping financially and emotionally and to give information on what nursing homes are all about."

So far five women, the youngest about 55 years old, regularly attend the meetings, which are held in a local nursing home. The women are from different economic and cultural backgrounds, bound together by the fact that their spouses are in nursing homes.

The meetings are supportive, helping sessions, not therapy sessions, Mrs. Griffin said.

"We are trying to work on a feeling level," she explained. "We give minimal guidance, and, if they have a good time, that's okay, too."

One of the group's goals, Miss Verdone said, is to have the women make new friends and to have someone with whom they can share "feelings of isolation."

"One woman comes to the meetings because she lives alone, another said she wants to do right by her husband," Miss Verdone said. "All of the women live alone except one (and) there isn't anyone they can share all this with. They (the women) have their own physical problems and are having to suddenly bear the burden of their husbands in a nursing home."

Mrs. Griffin added, "Guilt is a major problem for these women, and one of the initial reasons is most of them have nice homes and haven't worked outside the home. They can stay home and enjoy everything while their husbands are in nursing homes.

"One woman says she watches their favorite program every night and her husband doesn't even have a television," Mrs. Griffin continued. "They think, 'He worked all his life for these nice things and is responsible for everything here.'"

The women talk of these feelings, of gardening and grandchildren, good times and bad, and of the decisions they make regarding their husbands' care.

"Each has done different things in the care of her husband, which is helpful to the others," Miss Verdone said. "One switched her husband's doctor, one brings her husband home for the day once a month."

'Reasonable' Decisions Reached

Israeli Cabinet Meets All Night

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin said early today the Israeli Cabinet, meeting in an extrordinary session, made many "reasonable" decisions about Egyptian terms for a peace treaty and he expects "a positive response" from President Anwar Sadat.

Begin spoke to reporters at the end of the 6½-hour meeting. He said he hoped President Carter would be told about the decisions by Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance. Begin said Vance was kept informed about the deliberations throughout the nighttime session.

The prime minister said he expected Vance to carry the decisions to Sadat in Cairo. Begin refused to reveal them, saying he wanted the Egyptians to learn about them from Vance and not from news reporters.

"I am hopeful, always," Begin said. "I expect a positive reply from Egypt."

But he said he couldn't be sure whether he would get it.

"I think we took very reasonable decisions," the prime minister said, adding that some were by majority vote, others by consensus of the Cabinet members.

Meeting Called "Crucial"

He called the Cabinet meeting "unique, crucial."

Carter will attend a second meeting of the Cabinet, that one delayed for two hours until 10 a.m., Israeli time. (2 a.m. CST).

If Vance has not informed Carter of the decisions by then — an unlikely possibility — "we shall inform our American friend of the decisions we took," Begin declared. He described the Cabinet discussion as "very interesting ... a very serious debate."

Earlier, Begin Grim

U.S. and Israeli officials said Carter was likely to extend his visit to Israel by at least one day — until Tuesday.

Begin summoned his ministers for the special Cabinet meeting, which started at 11 p.m., after a state banquet at which he told the president: "We want a real peace treaty. It cannot last a few months or even years."

Begin said the Cabinet meeting lasted until nearly 5:30 a.m., Israeli time.

Issues Listed

An Israeli source, who asked to remain anonymous, said the sticking points were Israel's demand that Egypt settle for limited self-rule for Palestinians to begin at an unspecified date and Egypt's refusal to make concrete moves toward peace, such as exchanging ambassadors, until self-rule begins.

Even if the Cabinet accepts all the suggestions put on the table, it was understood that no final agreement could be reached without more U.S. talks with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

Should Begin and his Cabinet react positively, it was learned that U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance would fly to Cairo today to get Sadat's response.

Vance To See Sadat

An Israeli foreign ministry official predicted the Cabinet decisions would be positive enough to lead to a Vance mission to Cairo to keep the talks going.

If everything went smoothly in Jerusalem and Cairo, U.S. officials said, it was possible Carter might remain in the Middle East for the initialing of a treaty.

"If we can resolve the few remaining differences, and I am still hopeful that

MOROCCO BOUND — Crown Prince Reza Pahlavi boarded this U.S. Air Force DC-9 jet Sunday afternoon along with his two dogs and numerous pieces of luggage for the long flight to Morocco and an apparently permanent stay with his family. The prince, who has been in Lubbock since July 1978 for pilot training at Reese Air Force Base, was given a private farewell party at the base by Reese personnel and a few close Lubbock friends. It is not known what will happen to the prince's southwest Lubbock home, which he used as a weekend retreat during his stay. (Staff Photo by Milton Adams)

Reza Pahlavi Ends Stay In City

By Avalanche-Journal Staff

A COMPOSED and smiling Crown Prince Reza Pahlavi boarded an Air Force DC-9 jet with numerous pieces of luggage Sunday at Reese Air Force Base to join his father, deposed Iranian ruler Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi, and family in Morocco.

The prince first was given a private farewell party at the base by Reese personnel and a few close Lubbock friends and neighbors. Dressed in civilian clothes, the 18-year-old prince chatted with his friends and boarded the plane at 12:27 p.m., accompanied by his pets, a collie and a cocker spaniel.

State Department and Reese officials Sunday declined comment "for security reasons" on where the jet was to land for refueling, but speculation was the jet was to stop at an East Coast Air Force base.

The prince's westside Lubbock home was quiet late Saturday and Sunday, and it was understood Prince Reza spent his last night in Lubbock at his apartment at Reese.

The crown prince evidently had planned his departure from Lubbock a week ago. He originally was scheduled to leave Friday but the trip was postponed until Sunday. Movers began carrying loaded cartons from his off-base residence Thursday.

His last days in Lubbock were passed quietly. Thursday night he partied with friends at a downtown Lubbock restaurant. On Friday he received his flight training wings in private ceremony at Reese after completing a 50-week flight training course four months early.

He arrived in Lubbock in July 1978 and quickly made the city his home.

He kept a low profile in Lubbock, but managed to visit local nightspots, participate in soccer matches and drive around town in his Jaguar.

A camera buff, Prince Reza photographed media photographers and reporters who camped outside his weekend home in early January when his two sisters and brother paid him an 11-day visit.

Princess Leila, 8, and Prince Alireza, 12, and their grandmother, Farideh Diba, arrived in Lubbock Jan. 18 from Iran, while the prince's elder sister, Princess Farahnaz, 15, arrived in December.

by followers of Islamic leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini in December, and later moved to Morocco in mid-January.

Meanwhile, the Associated Press Sunday quoted Sen. Henry M. Jackson as saying the United States is heading into a deep recession because of skykrocketing oil prices and short supplies engineered by the oil producing nations of the Mideast, including Iran.

Jackson, chairman of the Senate Energy Committee, predicted that decisions abroad will result in gasoline prices in America reaching $1 a gallon within a year. That will cause the American inflation rate and bank interest rates to shoot up, he said, causing a severe economic slowdown.

Border City Crossings Stay Quiet

EL PASO (AP) — Border officials looked uneasily Sunday at the "normal" vehicle and pedestrian traffic on the four bridges connecting El Paso and Juarez and hoped the trend would hold.

Rumors persisted, however, that dissident Mexicans would jam the bridges again Sunday afternoon — for the third straight day — in traffic-stopping demonstrations on the bridges to protest deportation of Mexican citizens working illegally in El Paso.

"It's been very, very light. Absolutely nothing is going on, and there's nothing to indicate a resumption of the demonstration, but what may happen is anybody's guess," an immigration official at one bridge said Sunday morning.

The only clue to the protests of Friday and Saturday were that only the Mexican flag was flying over the four bridges. Angry Mexicans tore down the U.S. flags Saturday and threw them into the Rio Grande.

No additional security personnel was obvious.

The protest against the immigration service Friday and Saturday fueled further on Saturday afternoon when a woman, an American citizen living in Juarez, plowed into the demonstrators on the Bridge of the Americas, killing a 10-year-old Mexican girl and critically injuring a 9-year-old boy who fell in front of her car.

A mob, part of the 650 protestors scattered over the four bridges, pulled the 25-old woman woman from her car and beat her until police came to her rescue. The woman was held in Juarez pending negligent homicide charges.

Customs officials, INS guards, and tactical El Paso police units converged on the American side of the border Saturday night, but angry El Paso Mayor Ray Salazar ordered local police to stay off the bridges, which are federal territory.

Salazar complained to INS director Leonel Castillo in Washington about the border guards' actions that set off the demonstrations.

Charles Perez, district director of immigration, directed an American guard operation Saturday night on the Texas side of the river at the Paso del Norte Bridge, where three unmarked American cars on the bridge drew some of the protesters across the international border at one time, and someone broke a windshield in one of the U.S. cars with a board. No one was hurt. The U.S. vehicles retreated.

"We don't want a war," Perez said.

Hanoi, Peking Trade Accusations, Insults

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — China said Sunday its advisers have been kicked out of Laos under Soviet-Vietnamese pressure and accused Hanoi of tightening its grip on its small and weak western neighbor as part of a drive to dominate all of Indochina.

Vietnam fired a propaganda barrage back at Peking, accusing Chinese Vice Premier Deng Xiaoping (Teng Hsiaoping) of forging a "devilish alliance" with Washington and saying the cowboy hat Deng donned in Texas showed his "real nature."

Vietnam claimed fierce fighting continued Sunday against the Chinese invasion force near their common border and accused China of firing more than 3,000 rounds of artillery into the coastal province of Quang Ninh, destroying homes and a ceramics factory.

Hanoi again insisted that the Chinese were not withdrawing, as Peking had announced last Monday. It said in some areas Chinese troops were actually advancing.

But Western analysts in Thailand said China apparently was continuing a slow pull-out of its forces.

They said they could not substantiate Vietnamese claims that Chinese troops were shooting wounded Vietnamese soldiers and civilians and had fired on a Red Cross vehicle.

Vietnam has repeatedly accused the Chinese of mass atrocities in the three-week-old war.

The official Soviet news agency Tass said in a dispatch from Hanoi Sunday that the Vietnamese Red Cross accused the Chinese of "massacres, killing hundreds of civilians—children, women and old people." It also accused Chinese soldiers of plundering, blowing up apartment buildings and a hospital and killing two doctors and the driver in an attack on an ambulance marked with a red cross.

Xinhua (Hsinhua), the official Chinese news agency, said the withdrawal was continuing but when Vietnamese artillery shelled Chinese units pulling back "Chinese forces responded with an immediate counterattack on enemy positions." It added, "In every instance Chinese troops inflicted heavy losses on the ... Vietnamese."

In another dispatch from Hanoi, Tass said the Chinese have been moving frontier marking posts deep into Vietnamese territory in Lang Son province and were resettling ethnic Chinese there who had "fled" from the area earlier. It said in one instance 1,000 ethnic Chinese had been resettled.

"Another angle of Deng's real nature was revealed when Deng, dressed in a cowboy suit, jumped around in the United States," the paper said, referring to a 10-gallon hat the Chinese leader sported at a Texas rodeo during his February tour of America.

Area Man Dies When Pickup Strikes Pole

By ESTHER LONGORIA

LON D. PIERCE, 22, of Route 10 in Lubbock was killed Sunday morning when he apparently lost control of his pickup and struck a utility pole one mile east of the city on Farm Road 835.

Justice of the Peace Charles Smith pronounced Pierce dead at the scene at 7 a.m. and said the man probably had been dead since about 3 a.m. Department of Public Safety officers were notified of the accident at 6:43 a.m.

DPS reports indicate Pierce was headed east on FM 835 when he apparently lost control of the pickup and struck a utility pole broadside, shearing it in half. Pierce was pinned in his vehicle.

As a safety precaution, DPS officers called South Plains Electric Cooperative workers to the site to turn off power so that rescue workers could remove Pierce's body from the pickup truck.

W.D. Cox, maintenance foreman for the co-op, said the power shutoff left 15 customers were without electricity from about 8:30 a.m. to 10:10 a.m.

Services for Pierce are pending with Rix Funeral Directors.

He was a Lubbock native and was employed by Wayne Cobb Sheet Metal Works.

Prince Expresses Thanks To Lubbock

BEFORE LEAVING Lubbock for Morocco Sunday, Crown Prince Reza Pahlavi personally handed The Avalanche-Journal a letter addressed to the citizens of Lubbock, expressing his thanks for the manner in which he has been welcomed and treated while training at Reese Air Force Base.

The letter follows:

"An Open Letter To The Citizens Of Lubbock:

"On behalf of my family, friends and myself, I wish to thank the people of Lubbock and West Texas for the welcome and continued hospitality extended to all of us.

"We who come from abroad get our picture of Texas mainly from Western films. Now that I have lived here, my future memories will not be primarily of cowboys, cattle, and oil but rather of the people who were so supportive and friendly.

"We were made to feel at home by neighbors, school children, officials and countless others who opened their hearts to us as well as your city.

"Even though our stay with you has been brief, you have made a lasting impression on us because of your warmth and friendliness. Thank you for your many notes of welcome, encouragement and support. You are a great city and a great people.

Yours, truly,
REZA PAHLAVI

Weicker To Reveal 1980 GOP Race

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Republican Sen. Lowell Weicker, whose star shone brightest during his party's Watergate trauma, has done little in recent years to conceal his presidential aspirations.

Now, the liberal Connecticut legislator is ready to go after the dream directly. If he were to succeed, he would become America's first foreign-born president.

The 6-foot-6 millionaire, born in Paris and raised on Park Avenue in New York, has scheduled a Monday news conference at the historic Old State House in Hartford to announce his candidacy and become the fifth man to make a formal bid for the GOP presidential nomination.

Revolutionary Council Holding Iran Together

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Its membership is a mystery, but its powers are immense. As Iran's revolution gropes for stability and a new order to bring peace, the authority wielded by the Islamic Revolutionary Council is the real glue holding the nation together.

Its members authorize arrests, set up revolutionary courts, confirm death sentences, organize security and oversee food distribution through hundreds of revolutionary committees operating throughout Iran.

Since the bloody weekend of street battles in Tehran one month ago finally toppled Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, the Revolutionary Council has been the true center of power here despite the appointment of a provisional government by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

The stern-faced religious leader almost certainly heads the council. And the council's apparent determination to maintain supreme power during an increasingly uncertain stage of the revolution has brought the provisional government of Prime Minister Mehdi Bazargan into confrontation with Khomeini — who appointed him in the first place.

Bazargan's efforts to establish the authority of the provisional government have been undermined by the revolutionary committees to the extent that he has now reportedly offered his resignation to Khomeini, who is said to have rejected it.

"The committees and radical groups with their interference and disturbances have made it impossible for the government to operate," the 70-year-old Bazargan said recently. "They persecute people, they arrest people, they issue orders, they oppose us, they are against our appointments. Our day has been turned into night."

The council's control of day-to-day life in Iran — through the revolutionary committees — is amply demonstrated by the situation in the capital.

A network of 14 revolutionary committees is operating throughout Tehran under the direction of Mohammad Reza Mahdavi-Kani, a 47-year-old white-turbaned mullah who says he was appointed directly by Khomeini but with the approval of Bazargan.

His overall command of the hundreds of committees all over the country also makes him one of the most powerful people in Iran.

Each of the Tehran committees, he says, is divided into subcommittees "responsible for such activities as security, intelligence, distribution and control of arms and ammunition and relief operations such as the provision of food and clothing."

To maintain law and order in the absence of effective police and while a national guard is being created, he says he has the cooperation of both Islamic and Marxist guerrillas.

Meanwhile, he says, "We are quite confident we can maintain security." Even after the national guard is operating, he said, the revolutionary committees will still maintain overall responsibility for their supervision.

The running of the national guard is expected to be the responsibility of a close Khomeini aide, Dr. Ibrahim Yazdi, who is also a deputy prime minister in the Bazargan government.

Yazdi said recently that "competent" armed guards maintaining security for the committees will "gradually become part of the national guard."

Mahdavi-Khani says existing security arrangements in the capital have brought about a dramatic fall in the amount of crime. He was unable to say exactly how many political and other prisoners are being held in Tehran, but he believed it was less than the 4,000 reported.

Self-proclaimed human rights activist Ralph Schoenman, who is an American, recently named seven religious leaders headed by Khomeini, he claimed make up the Revolutionary Council.

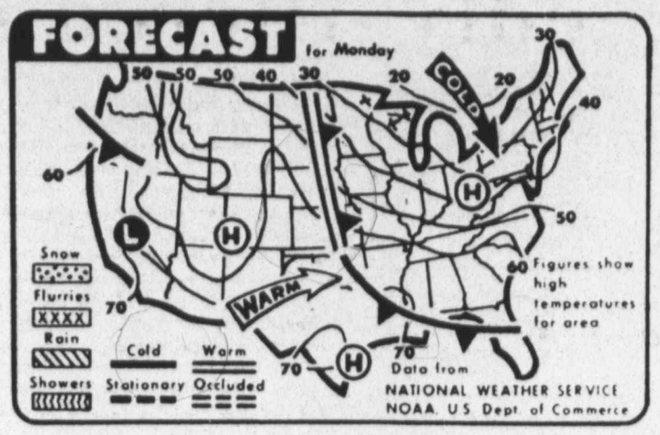

But there has been no confirmation that his information is accurate and it is the secrecy surrounding both the council and committees and the powers that they wield that are creating growing resentment among an increasing number of Iranians.

There is a growing polarization between those who support Khomeini and his wish to establish an Islamic republic and those demanding an open, democratic society in which all political factions have a chance to participate.

Columnist Fariborz Atapour, in a recent article pointing out the dangers of what he described as a "religious coup d'etat," painted this picture of the prospects he sees for Iran:

"Now the imam (Khomeini) can choose the path of polarization and challenge the masses to take to the streets again to support his Islamic theocracy against the democratic pluralism which everyone else wants," he said.

"The result will be civil war and terrible bloodshed and we are certain the imam will not choose this path."

Warmer Weather, Gusty Winds Invade Plains

Gusty winds and warm temperatures will dominate South Plains area weather today.

The warm weather is caused by a widespread high-pressure system covering Texas, Oklahoma, New Mexico and Arkansas since early Sunday.

Today's high should be in the mid-70s, with the low tonight in the low 40s. Winds will be southwesterly at 15 to 20 mph.

The warm, springlike weather will continue through Thursday, with highs predicted in the 80s and lows expected in the 40s or 50s.

Relative humidity through Thursday is expected to be about 55 percent in the mornings and 30 percent in the afternoons. Sunshine of 10 to 12 hours per day is forecast through Thursday.

Drying conditions for area farmers should be excellent today and Tuesday, according to the National Weather Service.

Elsewhere across Texas, temperatures today are expected to be generally warm, with temperatures in the 70s and 80s. Some sections of south and central Texas will have cloudy skies.

Winter still is making its mark in the eastern and far western portions of the country with cold temperatures.

Snow flurries are predicted for the upper Ohio valley and northern New England, and rainsbowers are forecast for widely scattered parts of northwestern Montana.

The rest of the nation is expected to be sunny with mild temperatures from the Pacific coast to the central plains and warm temperatures in the south.

Arab Criticism Aired

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Why are so many Arabs so angry about the prospect of peace between Egypt and Israel?

At first glance, the heavy flow of criticism from Arab capitals toward President Carter's current peace mission suggests that the majority of Arabs simply prefer a state of war and will not be satisfied until Israel disappears.

But this conclusion does not seem to accurately reflect the views of the vast majority of Arabs all along the political spectrum. The prevalent feeling on streets and in government buildings throughout the Arab world appears to be that peace is preferable to the status of the past three decades and that Israel is here to stay, for better or for worse.

The frustration over an Egyptian-Israeli conciliation basically stems from the opinion that there is nothing in it for the other Arabs. These are their arguments:

The proposed treaty does little to satisfy the Palestinian problem, which in recent years has become the prime irritant in the Arab-Israeli conflict. The plan for Palestinian self-autonomy on the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip involves the one million current residents but ignores more than 3 million other Palestinians who live in refugee camps and elsewhere as the result of the establishment of Israel in 1948. The plan also denies the Palestinians an independent state, to which Arab regimes have pledged themselves, and leaves Israel in fundamental control of the occupied regions.

– The plan keeps Israel in control of the Arab sector of Jerusalem, which contains Islam's third holiest shrine, and of Syria's strategic Golan Heights. Both areas were wrested from Arab control in the 1967 Mideast War.

– A separate Egyptian-Israeli peace deprives the Arab world of its largest army, Egypt's, thus weakening the overall Arab bargaining position for extracting concessions from Israel and checking any future bolsterng of the Israeli position in occupied lands — or what some fear could be new Israeli expansion.

This is the main reason other Arab leaders have spurned President Anwar Sadat's call to join him in making peace with Israel. Convinced that Sadat has only his and Egypt's interests at heart, they believe they would be dealing with their traditional enemy primarily on Israel's terms and against their interests.

An Arab sense of pride and face-saving is also at the heart of the anger. Sadat is resented because he did not consult with fellow Arabs about his one-man peace project before launching it in November 1977. He is also mistrusted, especially by the Syrians and Palestinians who bitterly recall the Egyptian's unilateral agreement for a military withdrawal from the Sinai Peninsula at American urging two years after the 1973 Middle East War.

The potential loss of Egypt, which has traditionally been the seat of Arab and Islamic culture, from the Arab fold has deep psychological effects as well.

Although a semblance of unity has emerged among Arab regimes opposed to the U.S.-sponsored peace plan, there is fear that a separate peace would foster more bickering and suspicion in Arab ranks.

After the loss of the southern front against Israel, radical Arabs are likely to fear that the moderates would give up and join the peace process. Some diplomatic observers believe this is one reason Iraq is cementing ties with its old nemisis, Syria: to help keep the Syrians from slipping toward the American camp on the heels of Egypt.

The same fear applies to Jordan, where King Hussein is managing to keep militant nerves quiet by taking an increasingly hard line against the Camp David accord worked out last September by Carter, Sadat and Prime Minister Menachem Begin of Israel.

The Iranian experience also has had a profound effect on Arab political considerations, mostly toughening their opposition to a separate Egyptian-Israeli peace. The oil-wealthy conservatives now question the value of America's support in light of the downfall of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi in Iran. Leftists predict Sadat may suffer the same fate.

The Arab left views Camp David as part of an overall U.S. plan to protect American oil interests. The conservatives are not so sure any more that politically isolating the Soviet Union is the wisest way of keeping Moscow at bay. The Soviets are now making overtures to Saudi Arabia, overtures observers here believe have been met with some Saudi encouragement.

Some evidence that the Arabs in general are not opposed in a basic sense to peace with Israel is the increased talk about a peace conference under United Nations auspices. The shock of Egypt's initiative seems to have made other Arabs more willing to take part in an overall settlement.

Republicans Preparing For Presidential Run

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — "Republican issues" like balanced budgets and limited government have come of age and the GOP has an excellent chance of recapturing the White House in 1980, delegates to a weekend conference were told.

That theme was repeatedly sounded by potential presidential contenders and by Midwestern governors and senators at the two-day Midwest Republican Leadership conference.

"The country is singing our song," said Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee, who has said he will be a GOP presidential contender but has not formally announced. "The issues are coming our way."

That opinion was shared by Sen. Roger Jepson of Iowa, who told the conference Saturday, "The Republican ideals are coming of age. The people are demanding what we have always stood for."

One of the conference hosts, Sen. Richard G. Lugar of Indiana, is sponsoring a constitutional amendment to require a balanced federal budget, an idea which had widespread support at the conference.

"Historically, Republicans have stood for fiscal responsibility, including balanced budgets," said co-host Gov. Otis R. Bowen of Indiana. "Let's not permit any Johnny-come-lately Democrats to steal that issue from us." California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., a Democrat, has in recent months been calling for a constitutional convention to enact such an amendment.

Ronald Reagan, whom the Gallup poll said is the national front-runner among Republican voters, did not attend.

Pope Announces Publication Of First Encyclical Thursday

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II announced Sunday that the first encyclical of his pontificate will be published Thursday and will deal with "relation between Christ's redemption and man's dignity."

Addressing a crowd of 30,000 gathered in St. Peter's Square, the pope said the encyclical, a formal worldwide message to the Roman Catholic Church, will express ideas that "have been maturing in my mind during the years of my priestly and episcopal work."

He said the subject "is the central task of my new ecclesial service" as a pontiff. He indicated the encyclical has been named "Redemptor Hominis" (Man's Redeemer), after the first two words of its text.

John Paul II, speaking in Italian, also told the Vatican throng he was following with "great attention the new effort being carried out aimed at bringing on a peaceful solution to the many-year-old Middle East conflict."

He did not specifically mention President Carter's current Mideast mission, but he said:

"I know the different and contrasting positions which manifest regarding the conflict. But because of the love the pope has for peace I fervently wish that such a peace can be assured everywhere in the just consideration of the rights and legitimate aspirations of all the interested peoples."

When the pontiff announced the imminent publication of the encyclical, the crowd broke into applause. But he parried, smiling: "First you must read it. We will see after that."

He said he has "tried expressing in it what has animated and still animates my thoughts since the start of my pontificate," last Oct. 16.

"The encyclical contains those thoughts that since then, at the start of my pontificate, have been pressing and that, without any doubt, have been maturing in my mind during the years of my priestly and episcopal work."

The words of the new Polish pope indicated that, as with past pontiffs, his encyclical can be expected to outline basic policies he will pursue as spiritual leader of the world's 700 million Roman Catholics. Encyclicals, generally lengthy documents, are the most authoritative form of papal pronouncements and in recent times have frequently dealt with social and church issues of the day.

The pope did not elaborate on the subject matter, but Vatican sources said a considerable section is devoted to human rights.

"Because I feel there is a relation between ... Christ's redemption and man's dignity," the pope said, "so I will want so much to unite the church's mission with the service of man. I saw in that the central task of my new ecclesial service."

South Yemen Minister Cites U.S. Arms Policy

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Marxist South Yemen said Sunday it might reconsider the truce in its border war with pro-Western North Yemen unless the United States ends military aid to the North Yemenis, a Kuwaiti newspaper reported. The Kuwait Times said the warning came from South Yemeni Foreign Minister Mohammed Saleh Motei in talks with Kuwaiti officials. It quoted Motei as saying his government "will reconsider the cease-fire agreement if the United States continues to send military aid to North Yemen."

President Carter last week ordered the Pentagon to speed up arms shipments to North Yemen under provisions that did not call for prior congressional approval.

Carter also ordered the aircraft carrier Constellation and support vessels to the region in a move to ease fears in Saudi Arabia that the unrest on its southwestern flank might spread north to threaten the oil wealth of the Arabian peninsula.

The Saudi newspaper Arab News said Sunday, however, it feared the U.S. show of strength might prompt similar action by the Soviets, who back the South Yemenis.

"Every day that passes witnesses increased military movement by the United States," the newspaper said. "So does each day witness a move by the Soviet Union in favor of South Yemen."

A DAILY MESSAGE FROM The Newspaper Bible
Luke 11: 42-51, The Living Bible

42 But woe to you, Pharisees! For though you are careful to tithe even the smallest part of your income, you completely forget about justice and the love of God. You should tithe, yes, but you should not leave these other things undone!

43 Woe to you, Pharisees! For how you love the seats of honor in the synagogues and respectful greetings from everyone as you walk through the markets!

44 Yes, awesome judgment is resting upon you! For you are like hidden graves in a field. Men pass by you with no knowledge of the corruption nearby."

45 "Sir," said an expert in religious law who was standing there, "You have insulted my profession, too, in what You just said."

46 "Yes," said Jesus, "the same horrors await you! For you crush men beneath impossible religious demands — demands that you yourselves would never think of trying to keep!

47 Woe to you! For you are exactly like your ancestors who killed the prophets long ago.

48 Murderers! You agree with your fathers that what they did was right — you would have done the same yourselves.

49 This is what God says about you: 'I will send prophets and apostles to you, and you will kill some of them and chase away the others';

50 And you of this generation will be held responsible for the murder of God's servants from the founding of the world —

51 From the murder of Abel to the murder of Zechariah who perished between the altar and the sanctuary. Yes, it will surely be charged against you.

Billy Allegedly Altered Records

WASHINGTON (AP) — A man hired to keep track of peanuts used as collateral for a loan to the Carter Warehouse in Plains, Ga., says he and Billy Carter altered records and pledged the same collateral twice to hide deficits in loan payments, The Washington Post reports.

Jimmy Hayes said he felt uneasy about some of his actions concerning the collateral in 1976 but went ahead because the president's brother told him to, and "I always felt that I owed more to Billy than to the company," the Post reported in Sunday editions.

He also was quoted as saying there was "absolutely no doubt in my mind" that his efforts failed to fool officers at the National Bank of Georgia, then headed by Bert Lance who was later President Carter's budget director.

The president's holdings in the family peanut business are now in a blind trust, put there after he was elected in November 1976. He was outside Georgia campaigning during most of the time Hayes is quoted as saying the NBG loan — based on a $3 million line of credit — was in trouble.

Two NBG directors, acting on orders from the Securities and Exchange Commission, investigated loans to the warehouse that eventually reached $5.8 million, and they reported earlier this year that the bank told Billy Carter in June 1977 the warehouse was $500,000 short of having enough peanuts to back up the loans.

The report did not say what action was taken next, but it noted that the entire $5.8 million had been repaid by March 1978.

The Post quoted Hayes as saying he was making $350 a week at the warehouse — from Billy Carter — at the same time he was being paid $150 a week by the New York Terminal Co., which was employing him to keep track of the collateral.

Hayes said he was to send a check to the bank every time any of the peanuts which had been pledged as collateral were taken from the warehouse.

But then Billy Carter stopped signing the checks, he said, adding, "He would assure me we wouldn't go to jail. I don't think that Billy knew the seriousness of it."

So Hayes didn't tell the bank when some unshelled peanuts left the warehouse. And he was quoted as saying Billy sent some through the sheller, then repledged the same peanuts — now shelled — for another loan from NBG.

The payments eventually got $500,000 in arrears before Hayes could begin catching up by sending $50,000 checks, he was quoted as saying.

The Post quoted a Justice Department source as saying Hayes had not been questioned in a current investigation of warehouse finances.

There was no immediate White House comment.

Billy Carter, who has said there has been no wrongdoing with warehouse finances, last week entered the Long Beach Naval Hospital in California for treatment of alcohol-related problems.

Billy Takes Cure To Stop Drinking

ATLANTA (AP) — Seeking treatment for alcohol abuse was Billy Carter's idea, said Dr. Paul Broun, who arranged for the president's brother to be admitted to California's Long Beach Naval Hospital.

"We discussed health in general and, as a kind of evolving process, it came out of our discussion," said Broun, Carter's personal friend and physician. He commented Sunday in a telephone interview from his Americus, Ga., home.

Carter developed a serious case of bronchitis last month and Broun decided to hospitalize him. "I've been concerned about his smoking and drinking for a long time, quite concerned about it," he said.

While Carter was in the hospital, Broun said, "he was consequently in a better frame of mind to talk about health in general. He had recognized that he was beginning to have health problems, that what I had been telling him was not a bunch of malarkey."

Last month, there were several cases of bronchitis in the Americus area. But when Carter contracted the respiratory ailment, he never got enough rest to shake it, Broun said.

"I'm sure what happened is that he just got a case that a lot of people have been having. But with smoking and running and Sybil (Carter's wife) being in the hospital and he having to be with her, he just didn't get better."

Mrs. Carter was briefly hospitalized in Atlanta for phlebitis last month after she complained of pain and swelling in her right leg.

Carter's fondness for beer and vodka-and-fruit juice has become well-known, but Broun said earlier "I'm not sure I'd describe him as an alcoholic. ... As to whether he can or should stay away from drinking completely, I couldn't tell you now. It's just too soon."

"He's really tired. He's gotten a lot of undeserved bad press lately," Broun said Sunday. "Billy's one of the biggest-hearted people I know."

"I think the fact that the press has gotten so down on him has caused him to get a lot of anxiety and concern as most anyone would," the physician said. "It caused him to get sick. It most definitely did."

Third Party Presidential Aspirant Looks To 1980

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Only about 30 people showed up at the Libertarian Party's state convention here, but would-be presidential candidate Bill Hunscher told them he's optimistic about the party's chances.

"The people of the United States are exhibiting a mammoth sense of frustration, puzzlement and bewilderment about the electoral process," Hunscher said Saturday. "Not much is going right these days — and the Libertarian Party is the only alternative."

Hunscher said 66 percent of the voters are staying away from the polls and the Libertarians hope to appeal to this group.

"A California survey showed that 62 percent of those who voted Libertarian had not voted in the previous election. We showed that we can get out those who consider themselves disenfranchised," he said.

The Libertarian Party favors virtually total freedom, both in human rights and in business.

"Everyone should lead life in any way he or she chooses, if force or fraud is not used and if no one is harmed," said Hunscher.

He cited oil and gas pricing regulations as unnecessary, harmful rules.

"Government has kept artificially low prices in existence in this country when the price of gasoline worldwide is near $2 a gallon," he said. "As a result, oil has stayed in the ground, and industries haven't converted to energy-saving devices."

Hunscher said the Libertarian Party is not trying to change either major party. "Our goal is to win elections."

Grand Jury Probe Calls Four Back

AUSTIN (AP) — Four former and present employees of Comptroller Bob Bullock return to the Travis County grand jury Monday for the third time.

The employees appeared Thursday and Friday but the grand jury took longer than expected with other witnesses and asked them to return at 1 p.m. Monday.

The four were Ed White, head of manpower services; Paul Wehrle, research director of legal services; Leslie Vilas, Bullock's personal secretary; and Randall B. Wood, former chief clerk and now an Austin attorney.

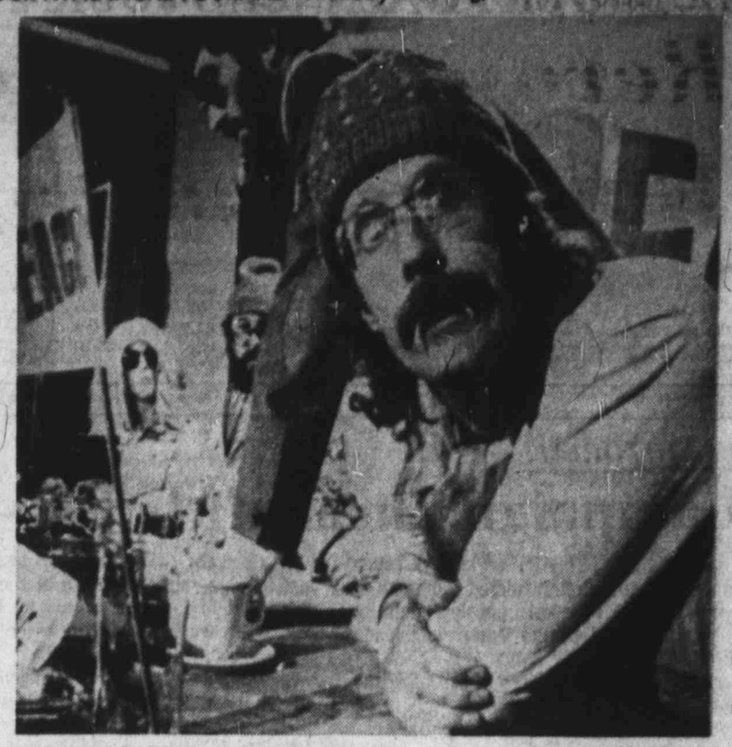

A previous grand jury criticized Bullock's record-keeping, expense vouchers and use of state airplanes, but returned no indictments.

The present grand jury reportedly is investigating if travel vouchers were turned in for hotel rooms provided at no cost.

But an investigation source said that allegation apparently is mistaken.

"The secretary does the travel vouchers and she might not have been aware it was a complimentary room. It looks like that's what happened," the source said.

Bullock declined a grand jury invitation to testify on advice of his lawyer Roy Minton. The attorney said the district attorney's office would not agree to limit its questions to allegations of possible criminal activities.

Seal Protest Ship Returns

SYDNEY, Nova Scotia (AP) — With the help of a Texas constable, a New York ASPCA photographer and a newsman handling docking hawsers, the crew-short protest ship Sea Shepherd made port here Sunday.

Her electronic navigational and communication gear were inoperative as the ship ended nine days at sea protesting sealing in the Gulf of St. Lawrence. A final gale buffeted the 192-foot former British trawler after she had rammed through 4-foot ice in a foray that saw eight of her crew arrested.

Meanwhile, about a dozen reporters and photographers arrived from the ship by helicopter Saturday in Cap-aux-Meules, Quebec, where the arrested seal hunt protesters were being held in jail.

Some of those arriving, including Associated Press photographer Gene Puskar, said they were beaten up and sprayed with green paint by a group of Cap-aux-Meules residents late Saturday after being taken to a parking lot outside their motel.

Cpl. Gaetan Gagnon of the Quebec Provincial Police said the demonstration was based on a misunderstanding. Local residents, he said, thought the journalists were protesters. He said no arrests were made.

Caroline Thompson of the Fund for Animals said, however, "the police warned us to leave the island because they couldn't guarantee our safety." She complained that the group received little help from airport officials who "just stood around."

One of the reporters, Larry Manning of Los Angeles Herald Examiner said there were "truckloads of people pouring in" at the airport as his group prepared to leave Sunday.

After a week in the ice, the ship broke into open water early Sunday morning. Just before her radios quit, the Canadian Coast Guard advised the Sea Sepherd to make port in Newfoundland.

AN EDITORIAL:

Campaign Checkoff Is Rip-off

ANOTHER ATTEMPT to legalize repeated raids on the deficit-riddled federal treasury to finance their own political ambitions is being planned by the Democratic leadership in Congress.

They want the taxpayers to subsidize their re-election campaign expenses.

Public financing of Presidential campaigns, which enabled more than a dozen unlikely candidates to go on ego trips at taxpayer expense in 1976, will be used as the precedent for "justifying" similar financing of Congressional campaigns.

HAVING GOTTEN into the habit of buying votes through federal give-aways and handouts of one sort or another, Congressional Big Spenders see nothing wrong in extending the practice to their own campaigns.

In fact, with the backing of such self-styled "citizens lobbies" as Common Cause, many Congressmen profess or pretend to believe that public financing of political campaigns will "clean up" politics.

Taxpayers will be taken to the cleaners, okay, but it's a dirty way to treat them.

Paying campaign workers, buying advertising, putting out self-serving brochures and traveling to political rallies at taxpayer expense more properly should be a penitentiary offense than a legalized form of misappropriation of funds.

Yet, the House Administration Committee is going full speed ahead with attempts to get public financing of campaigns approved before Congress recesses for Easter on April 12.

"IF WE CAN GET this bill on the floor while people (incumbents) still remember how much the challenger spent against them last fall, we might get a lot of them to say, 'Hey, public financing would be better for me'," the Washington Post recently quoted a Democratic staffer as saying.

Big Labor bosses also are heavily behind the concept, knowing that this would give their candidates an extra advantage.

Public financing would further limit the amount of private contributions a candidate could receive but would leave union members free to donate all the time and "volunteer" service their union bosses might deem necessary.

AS DRAFTED, the House proposal (HR 1) would promise tax dollars to match private contributions a candidate might receive, in amounts of $100 or less, up to a maximum of $60,000 in tax funds.

A candidate for a House seat would have to agree to hold his campaign spending to $195,000 unless he qualified for squeezing through one of several loopholes in the proposed law.

This would enable incumbents to enjoy an even greater advantage then they already have over challengers.

PROPONENTS ARGUE that the Congressional campaigns would be financed from a surplus of tax funds in the Presidential campaign kitty, which is derived from a $1 checkoff on income tax returns.

In point of fact, however, only 28 percent of the taxpayers allow the checkoff. This suggests that at least 72 percent of the taxpayers want no part of public financing of anybody's political hopes.

To have your tax dollars spent to promote the candidacies of persons you don't support is an injustice even the Big Spenders ought to be ashamed of inflicting on the taxpayers.

AN EDITORIAL:

Tax Bill Spells Relief--Maybe

FLOOR DEBATE on legislation to implement the Tax Relief Amendment approved by Texas voters in November hopefully will result in tightly written legislation.

As approved by the House Ways and Means Committee for floor action this week, the bill would reward school districts such as Lubbock where a good job of tax assessment is done.

School districts would receive dollar-for-dollar state reimbursement in 1979-80 for revenue losses suffered by virtue of implementing the legislation.

In the next fiscal year, though, districts that are above average in the accuracy of their tax appraisals would receive more state revenue than they lose in local revenue.

THIS ATTEMPT TO encourage better assessment practices across the state is well-founded.

Likewise, the bill is good in that it would exempt two cars or light trucks from property taxes starting in 1980. It also would exempt intangibles such as stocks and bank accounts, at long last recognizing the impossibility of administering such a tax.

State appropriations each year would be limited in growth to the projected growth rate of total personal income in the state.

The key provisions of the bill also would exempt $10,000 of market value of homes owned by the disabled and persons over 65 from school taxes.

THIS WOULD BE on top of a $5,000 exemption for all homeowners and also in addition to any other exemptions a school district might grant on its own.

Still the most controversial and potentially troublesome in its impact is a provision taxing agricultural and timber land—including that owned by corporations—on productive value rather than on market value.

Unless tightly written, this could result in a bonanza for land speculators, particularly those who buy and hold onto land toward which a major city is growing rapidly.

It needs more thought.

HENRY J. TAYLOR:

Russian's Spy System Of 'COSMIC' Import

THE WEST GERMAN Bundesnachrichteniest (BND) secret police's arrest of Frederick Cremer, 58, again reveals how Communist agents working for the Soviet Union infest Western Europe and the BND. This is the 15th case in less than a month involving East Germany—the key—with Soviet espionage.

Cremer, a physician, is mayor of Lengfurt. He was also a member from Bavaria to parliament's lower house, one of the Social Democratic Party's directors and chairman of the state's association of physicians.

Bonn's Federal Prosecutor Franz Huebl claims that Cremer met in Stockholm with East German Staatssicherheitsdienst (SSD) secret police chief Gen. Markus Wolf. There Cremer allegedly supplied Wolf with secret data regarding nuclear power, chemical, electronic and pharmaceutical developments.

CREMER'S ARREST, however, was unrelated to information supplied by East German agent Werner Stiller, 31, who defected to West Germany January 20. Stiller turned over to the BND the names of 14 SSD spies working for the Kremlin. Of the 14, three have not been arrested. They skipped to Poland.

Also, Interatom, working on fast-breeder reactor developments, reported staff scientist Klaus Schmidt, 44, missing since Dec. 25. Interatom suspected that Schmidt turned secret documents over to East Germany.

In fact, those arrested include a physicist in the Messerschmitt-Boelkow Blohm Aerospace Company, an East German-born physicist employed by the French Atomic Energy Agency, an engineer of Siemens Electronics, the chairman of Gottingen University's organic chemistry's department and a reporter specializing in politics and economics for BILD, a tabloid.

FORMER WEST German Chancellor Willy Brandt unwittingly laid the foundation for the BND's current penetration.

The East German SSD, and the whole Soviet KGB secret police, rely heavily on the "sleeper" (waiting to be activated as spies) technique.

The SSD forwarded Gunther Guillaume and his wife Crystal into West Germany from Dresden, East Germany. They arrived more than 20 years ago disguised as refugees fleeing communism. But both were SSD agents.

In September 1957, the SSD placed "sleeper" Guillaume in Brandt's Social Democratic Party. By 1964 he became party secretary at Frankfurt. After Brandt became Chancellor, the SSD contrived to have Brandt take Guillaume into his office. And Guillaume became an intimate friend and confidant of Brandt.

Feb. 1, 1973, Brandt named Guillaume one of his three personal assistants. But Guillaume was at last revealed to be an East German army officer working for the SSD and reporting to the Kremlin.

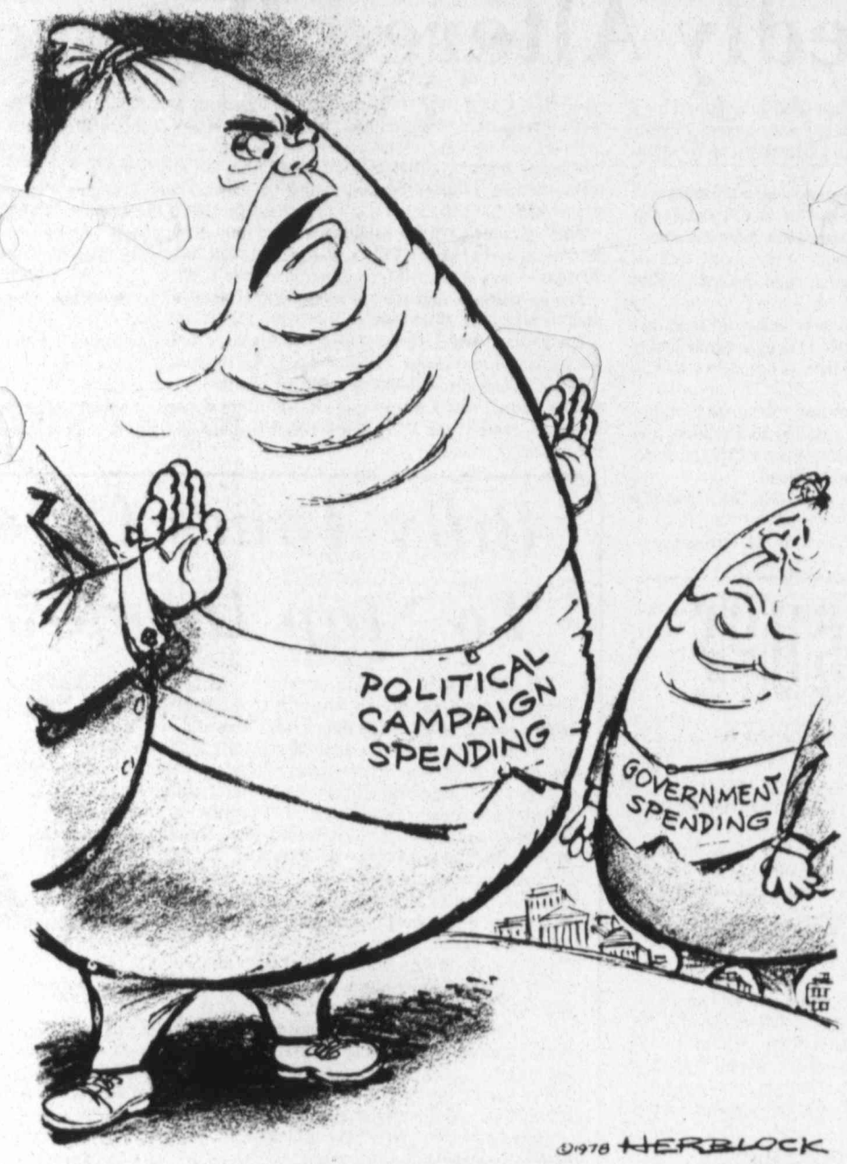

NATO's TOP-secret security clearance is a COSMIC—an acronym for Coordination of Security Measures in the International Command.

A NATO financial expert named Nahit Imre, a Turk, was arrested in Istanbul for relaying to two KGB agents (a Romanian and Yugoslav) classified NATO military secrets.

These included 20 NATO film containers Imre had in his briefcase. As a result, NATO codes were changed and NATO communications put in turmoil.

Today's penetration of the BND is of great importance to the U.S.Our Central Intelligence Agency has close and confidential relationships with the BND, exchanging information daily. Undercover, the BND maintains a high-ranking official in Washington. But the BND is a sieve.

ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK:

Top Unsecret Memo

EVANS

WASHINGTON—Without apparent success so far at this writing, Secretary of Defense Harold Brown has privately warned President Carter of "disastrous consequences" if he pursues his present course of abandoning the nation's land-based intercontinental ballistic missile (ICBM) capability.

Brown's warning echoes the position that Carter's defense critics have been derided for: if the Soviets "are structuring" their forces to fight an extended nuclear war and know that the U.S. is not, there is deep trouble ahead.

The blunt warning, so out of character for the low-keyed Brown as to be passionate, was provoked by Jimmy Carter himself. Meeting with senior officials on the defense budget last Sept. 29, the President asked: "Why do we need the Triad?"

In other words, why can't the U.S. dispense with land-based ICBMs, and rely on the other two legs of the Triad—manned bombers and missile-firing submarines?

Over a month elapsed before Brown completed an answer for the President's eyes. Brown's "top secret" memorandum of Dec. 1 contained this chilling message:

"The effect of the U.S. giving up, under successful Soviet pressure, a military capability of considerable value which the Soviet Union retains would, in my view, have disastrous consequences both internationally and domestically."

While State Department policymakers flatly disagree, even Brown himself does not talk that way in public.

NUCLEAR PHYSICIST Brown is a private man, a cool scientist who avoids cold war rhetoric. Unlike predecessors Melvin Laird and James Schlesinger, Brown has shunned the Cassandra role of pointing to the Soviet menace. He has, in the process, become one of Carter's favorite cabinet members.

Yet, there is no sign of presidential response to Brown's warning. Nothing in writing from Carter has been received at the Pentagon. The gloomy consensus there is that he is determined, for arms control's sake, to reject the Defense Department's proposals to preserve the land-based ICBM and the Triad.

Specifically at issue is whether the President will approve a mobile-basing system on land for the new MX missile to replace the fixed-base Minuteman, which is becoming vulnerable to Soviet attack.

BUT MOBILE basing is viewed by arms controllers as destabilizing on grounds it would force Moscow to respond (while also violating the new SALT II arms control treaty).

Consequently, presidential science adviser Frank Press and other White House aides want to base the MX aboard aircraft. Carter leans this way, an inclination signalled by him while still President-elect on Jan. 12, 1977, when he suggested reducing the U.S. arsenal to 200-250 ICBMs.

Nearly two years in office did not change his mindset. That was shown at the Sept. 29 meeting, when Carter again questioned the need for the ICBM.

The Dec. 1 response, personally written by Brown, after its warning of "disaster" discussed why a land-based missile is needed. Brown insisted on retaliatory capability "come what may, in the face of new and unexpected Soviet developments."

He further stressed the need "to maintain some capability after an initial (nuclear) exchange—perhaps for days, or weeks, or even a few months."

THIS NOTION of a nuclear war that would not be completed in one apocalyptic spasm has been rejected by arms control advocates rampant in the administration. It also has been publicly rejected by Harold Brown, who returned to this position in the Dec. 1 memo:

"I should note that I doubt that a strategic war of this kind is at all likely, or that it could be fought without rapid escalation to an unlimited spasm." Then, however, Brown tells his President what arms controllers will not admit:

"But there are many indications that the Soviets are structuring the forces to fight such a war. Their plans and exercises point the same way. If they think they have such a capability, and we both know that the U.S. does not, adverse military consequences are possible, and adverse political consequences very likely."

WHILE BROWN'S memo has been safeguarded as though it were a secret weapon, there is no mystery about the Air Force's position. Its chief of staff, Gen. Lew Allen, champions a mobile land-basing system in a Dec. 29 letter to the House Armed Services Committee which was cleared by Brown without a word changed.

Here is a weapons decision where the President cannot claim support by the military or where his apologists cannot plead lack of outside advice.

In this case, Carter needs no warnings about unilateral concessions under Soviet pressure from Scoop Jackson, Paul Nitze or Mel Laird. What they would say is duplicated by his trusted secretary of defense, who seems to be going unheeded.

ANDREW TULLY:

Standby To Fly

WASHINGTON—My friend Mike, who is big in both physique and oil, was flown home from Iran because he had been knocked around by a mob. Mike is also a former Marine who earned a chestful of medals in Vietnam, so I was not surprised when he shrugged off the beating he's taken.

"I'll heal," he said from the hospital bed. "But I guess there's no cure for a guy who's scared to fly. There wasn't a bump all the way, but I hated every minute of that flight."

That's the way it is. Some people like to fly. Some don't, but fly anyway because they feel they have to. Businessmen are a majority in this category (time is money).

MILLIONS OF people in the U.S. are so scared of flying they wouldn't take a jumbo jet three blocks.

The number of people who dislike flying depends on who's doing the counting. Assorted studies put the figure at between 25 and 30 million Americans.

Baloney, say the airlines, maybe there's about 10 million scaredy-cats. But either estimate is impressive when one adds those who are scared to fly but fly anyway—like Mike—and those who are scared but won't admit it.

It's probably significant that one must descend to the sixth definition of flying in Webster's Collegiate before finding: "To traverse the air in an aircraft; to fly aircraft."

PRUDENTLY, AS if fearful that TWA some day will be exposed as a hoax, Collegiate's No. 1 definition is: "To move in or pass through the air with wings, as a bird."

I agree with the late playwright George S. Kaufman, whose fear of flying led him to found the Newton Was Right Club. Columnist Bill Buckley was right when he described flying as "en egregious affront upon the laws of nature."

Still, I'm not scared to fly. Although I avoid anything higher than a kitchen-type stepladder, I don't mind being locked into a jet airliner which shortly will climb to 35,000 feet. Somehow, being inside makes everything all right.

YES, I DO have a feeling I shouldn't be up there, that I am breaking one of Nature's laws and that some day Nature will strike.

In short, like so many airline passengers, I am mostly bored when in flight.

Of course, there are exceptions. I was not enchanted when a bush pilot flying me over the frozen Alaskan tundra in mid-January kept swigging from a bottle of bourbon.

Nobody had told me how bad the flack could be on a bombing mission over Germany.

And then there is Mike. He is surely one of the five or six bravest men I've ever known. Does he know something I don't about flying machines? I hope not. I'll just not think about it. Not till tomorrow, anyway.

JAY HARRIS:

Of Crime, Traffic...

IT REMAINS to be seen what happens to Dist. Atty. John Montford's all-out attack on crime in Lubbock.

Thus far, the aggressive and outspoken DA has been doing all right, both in the court room and in "getting the attention" of the public, law enforcement agencies and apparently some hoods.

The new Enforcer has wasted no time in 1. Obtaining some pretty stiff sentences; 2. Enlisting the aid of a Lubbock County crime prevention task force, and 3. Stirring up a lot of talk.

Not all of the latter, unfortunately, is of the Hip, Hip, Hooray type. No doubt the aforesaid lawbreakers are watching the DA closely.

And apparently Montford has stepped on a few toes here and there among some in the legal and law enforcement fraternity as well as perhaps one or two city officials.

IT'S TOO bad, especially the latter.

To a certain point, so did some others, including Mayor Dirk West.

The Mayor has launched an all-out drive on what he regards as flagrant traffic offenders, which some of his critics say is anything that moves. In so doing, he cites facts and figures to show the campaign is paying off, by cutting down on deaths and injuries.

And while this is true, it is also costing the average Lubbock motorist plenty in fines and insurance penalties.

There are those who argue that the Mayor should exert the same zeal in combatting armed robberies, rapes and burglaries as he does on traffic. The Mayor's response is that he is, has, and does.

WE WERE happy to see Hizzoner finally come out and admit that Lubbock indeed does need a major freeway system and that something should be done about it.

At one time, Duh Dirk argued that Lubbock would just have to live with its traffic system for the time being and learn to drive slower and more carefully. Let the next mayor or Council with the intestinal fortitude tackle the problem, it was argued.

We think it is the responsibility of a Mayor and Council to be concerned with all problems facing a city. Certainly, the city's crime headache, the need for a new major water supply and a horrible traffic death toll begged immediate attention.

But, unless some Mayor and City Council "with guts" at least thinks about alleviating clogged streets here, at some point in time the city will start strangling on its own traffic.

THE ALLEGATION may be open to challenge, but we feel Lubbock is probably one of the largest cities in the nation without some sort of internal freeway system.

True, we have Loop 289, which gradually is serving the purpose for which it was intended, more than 20 years ago when work got underway on it.

But, the city's so-called "grid system," which was supposed to have major thoroughfares crisscrossing about every mile and threading their way all across town, even unto the Loop, got only partially off the ground.

Such thoroughfares as University, Indiana, Quaker, Slide Road, Avenue Q and the planned one-ways of Avenues H and Texas do serve the purpose intended, to a point.

But, there are few really adequate East-West streets to carry the heavy incoming and outgoing business and shopping traffic into the Downtown core.

THE BIG problem, of course, now is lack of money for such programs.

At last reports, Interstate 27, when and if, is supposed to skirt the Eastern fringes of the business district and will not, in our opinion, as now planned serve the city as adequately as it could if it were located several blocks further west.

There are those who argue that to move the proposed project at this point would delay it further. Perhaps, but it is odd to us that most such freeways do move through the most heavily travelled portions of the metropolises they serve.

Of course, it may be that by the time we get around to meeting all the rules, effects on birds, trees, bees and what-have-you in connection with such a project, the gasoline shortage, plus spiraling prices, will make the thing obsolete.

But, even a jogging path—six lanes yet—or bicycle corridor needs to be in the spot "where the population is at" to adequately serve that population.

IN REGARD TO the Loop, we will repeat a story the late Mayor Roy Bass used to tell.

Seems when Amarillo was designated to get its first Interstate route—it has two—there was much arguing, wailing and gnashing of teeth over just which route it should take.

Some wanted it to skirt the main business and residential area. Others wanted it straight through. Others didn't want either. Finally, the first route did direct much of the traffic into or near the downtown section.

Mayor Bass said he would sometimes go to Amarillo on business, tool down the freeway to very near his destination, and while recalling Lubbock laughing about Amarillo's feud, would say to himself as he locked his car: "Could the so and so's putting this thing through town, have been right after all?"

Turns out they were. Amarillo has one of the best interstate and medium city freeway systems to be found anywhere. They got it by planning for it. It's fast, safe, which Loop 289 sometimes isn't, and it's there!

L.M. BOYD:

...Pass It On

Q. "IS IT TRUE that the first woman to swim the English Channel was not permitted to come ashore because she didn't have a passport?"

A. No, but it is true that in 1926 when Gertrude Ederle, stark naked and covered with grease, crawled up on the sand, a British immigration official walked up to her, stuck out his hand, and said, "Your passport, please."

"You quote experts as saying a good way to keep your shoes smelling fresh is to put slices of potato in them," writes a gamester in Austin, Texas. "If they're children's shoes, we should use tater tots, right? Golf shoes, potato chips? Slippers, home fries? For a stripper's heels, just the peeling? Clogs, German potatoes? For the shoes of Army surgeons, M*A*S*H potatoes. And for Indian moccasins, scalloped, no doubt.

Nationwide Manhunt Begins For Suspected Killer

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A nationwide manhunt was underway Sunday for a drifter described by police as a "prime suspect" in last summer's mass murders of six steakhouse workers here and three members of a Texas family near Purcell.

Roger Dale Stafford, 27, was charged Sunday with first-degree murder in the death of one of the steakhouse workers, said Detective Sgt. Mike Heath. Heath said eight more murder charges would be filed against Stafford Monday. The additional charges were not filed Sunday only because court offices were closed and officers wanted to minimize paperwork, Heath said.

"We don't know where he (Stafford) is right now," Heath said Sunday. He said authorities have received several tips on Stafford's whereabouts, but none have been confirmed.

"We're going to have sightings from Maine to California," many of them inaccurate, Heath said, as a result of the announcement by officials late Saturday night that Stafford was being sought in the killings.

Officers believe robbery was the only motive in all nine murders, Heath said.

Brousil said Stafford was born in Sheffield, Ala., and still has relatives in the area. He said Stafford has drifted around the country for the last few years, apparently supporting himself with odd jobs and aid from organizations like the Salvation Army.

Stafford's only known felony conviction came in 1978 in Baker, Ore., when he pleaded guilty to first-degree theft and was sentenced to several days in jail and a work-release program, Brousil said.

Heath said Stafford's estranged wife, interviewed by Oklahoma officers in Chicago Wednesday and then brought here, provided evidence leading to the filing of the murder charge against Stafford.

But the detective said officers also have other evidence, which he refused to disclose, linking Stafford to the killings.

Mrs. Stafford is being held in protective custody in a location police refuse to reveal in Oklahoma City.

Police said she was the driver of the getwawy vehicle in both sets of murders, but did not directly take part in the killings.

At this time, officers are not planning to file any charges against the woman, Heath said.

The detective said the police agencies around the nation alerted to be on the lookout for Stafford have been told to consider him armed and very dangerous.

Police Chief Tom Heggy said officers believe Stafford's brother, Harold Ray Stafford, 29, also took part in the two sets of murders. The chief said Harold Stafford died in a motorcycle accident in Tulsa six days after the steakhouse killings.

The execution-style murders of six employess at a Sirloin Stockade steakhouse in Oklahoma City last July 16 was the worst mass killing in Oklahoma history.

About $1,500 was stolen by the killers of Louis Zacharias, 43; David Lindsey, 17; Terri M. Horst, 15; Anthony Tew, 17; David Salsman, 16; and Isaac Freeman, 56.

Before the steakhouse murders made headlines, three members of a San Antonio family were killed near Purcell, about 35 miles south of Oklahoma City, on June 22.

Air Force Sgt. Melvin Lorenz, 38, his wife, Air Force Sgt. Linda Lorenz, 31, and his son Richard, 12, were found shot to death along Interstate 35. The family was enroute to a relative' funeral in North Dakota.

Authorities later determined through ballistics tests that a gun used in the Lorenz killings and a gun stolen from Lorenz were used in the steakhouse murders.

Heath said police believe Stafford may also be linked to other crimes.

"We've got to take care of our case first, before we can look at others," he said.

Stafford, his wife and brother apparently drifted around the country together for a long time before last summer's murders, Heath said.

Tom Kennedy, head of the Oklahoma State Bureau of Investigation, said the case-breaking lead came after three composite sketches of possible suspects in the Lorenz killings were released to the news media on Jan. 4, and widely published and broadcast.

Lt. Dennis Berglan, Oklahoma City detective homicide commander, said the OSBI received an anonymous phone call from a trucker "within the first 10 minutes" after the composites were broadcast.

"The truck driver gave us the names," Berglan said. "He picked them up after they got rid of the Lorenz truck."

Berglan said the names were then connected with the getaway vehicle from the steakhouse murders.

Eventually, Stafford's estranged wife was tracked down in Chicago, and agreed "to help us out all she could," said Arthur Linville, OSBI special agent.

Police interviewed the woman and were given information "only the killers would know," Berglan said.

Police and OSBI agents, who had formed a joint task force to investigate the two sets of murders, were overjoyed at their finding of a prime suspect.

"I'm tickled," Linville said. "It's been an emotionaf roller coaster."

"We've spent close to a half million dollars and we've used every innovative technique avialable in this investigation," Chief Heggy said. "The officers stayed in there and never gave up."

Bhutto Appeal Case Postponed Again

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Pakistan's Supreme Court postponed until next Saturday a hearing on efforts to overturn the death sentence imposed against former Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto.

The postponement was ordered Sunday because of the death Friday of one of Bhutto's defense attorneys. The lawyer, Ghulam Ali Memon, died of a heart attack. The hearing was to have been held Sunday.

Bhutto has been convicted on charges he ordered the murder of a political opponent in 1974. The man escaped an ambush in which his father died. The high court is reviewing its own ruling on the case for possible legal errors.

In the previous review on Feb. 6, the seven-judge court ruled 4-3 to uphold the death sentence imposed by a lower court. Bhutto is being held in the Rawalpindi jail near the capital of Islamabad.

ELEPHANT ON RAMPAGE

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — One person was killed and 13 were injured when an elephant ran amok on the grounds of a Hindu temple during an annual elephant race, the United News of India reported. The elephant, named Ravindran, turned violent Friday in the third round of the round-robin race at Gurubayur, near Madras.

'Pentagon Tax' Favors Western Cities

WASHINGTON (AP) — An analysis of military spending and tax payments in the nation's 40 largest urban areas indicates that dozens of urban communities underwrite a flood of Pentagon money headed for Western cities.

The study, released Sunday by Employment Research Associates, bolsters recent congressional charges that federal spending priorities are hurting many of the nation's big, older cities.

"The Pentagon is spearheading a massive relocation of wealth at a time that many cities can least afford it," says Marion Anderson, an economic historian who co-authored the "Pentagon Tax" study.

Mrs. Anderson and her husband, Professor James Anderson of Michigan State University, examined 1977 budget data to determine how much tax money collected in the nation's 40 largest metropolitan areas is earmarked for military spending, and how much of that money comes back from the Pentagon in salaries and contracts.

Of the 40 urban areas, 15 receive more in military expenditures than they pay out in "military" taxes. About half the "winners" are Western cities, six of them in California alone.

By contrast, 25 of the 40 urban areas were net losers — including 10 of 11 cities in the Midwest, six of nine in the Northeast and seven of the nine largest Southern or Southwestern cities.

Employment Research Associates is a Lansing, Mich., research and consulting firm that conducts studies relating to the impact of military spending on employment.

The firm's urban study, a byproduct of an ongoing effort to trace Pentagon dollars by congressional district, provides little surprise; it has long been known that Pentagon money was spent primarily in the Sun Belt states. But the figures provide new ammunition to the Northeast-Midwest Congressional Coalition, which seeks to adjust the imbalance.

The coalition released a study of its own on Sunday, indicating that efforts to boost federal procurement and employment in declining central cities are lagging.

Rep. Robert Edgar, D-Pa., chairman of the coalition, said longtime federal policies have "actually hastened the exodus of government jobs from the nation's central cities."

Mrs. Anderson said military spending — 24 cents out of every federal dollar — is a prime example of these policies.

According to Employment Research Associates, the Washington, D.C., area, home of the Pentagon, had the largest net gain from military spending in 1977, receiving $3.1 billion more than residents paid in military taxes.

But on a per-family basis, San Jose fared nearly as well, and San Diego was not far behind. In California, the Los Angeles, Anaheim, Riverside-San Bernardino and Sacramento areas also showed net gains.

The aerospace centers of Seattle, St. Louis and Long Island all showed large net gains, along with a northeastern naval city — Providence, R.I., and San Antonio, Texas, home of huge nearby military bases. Dallas and Baltimore also fared well.

On a per-family basis, the people in the Miami area got the least return from its Pentagon tax dollar. Miami lost $747 million in the tax-spending trade-off. That means a family of four sent $2,100 more to the Pentagon than it got back.

The net loss in Chicago was $1,900 per family, and in New York, Cleveland, Newark and Rochester it came to $1,800.

In the West, San Francisco-Oakland was a net loser, along with Portland, Ore.

Though it is obvious that billions of military dollars will go to less populated areas where most bases are located, Mrs. Anderson believes the regional disparity in procurement can be avoided.

"It's not inevitable that all these contracts have to go to companies in California," she says. "In places like Detroit, or Pittsburgh or Newark — strong industrial cities — the inequality in military spending is a major cause in the decline of economic health."

Mrs. Anderson said Congress has tinkered with many federal spending formulas — employment and public works funds, for example — to remove the most inequitable effects. "Yet there are massive imbalances in military spending.

"You cannot take billions of dollars out of a city or a state for year after year without seeing an impact," says Mrs. Anderson. "Many of the older cities are struggling economically, and the Pentagon tax drain leaves less money for local investment."

TRAPPED IN BOOTH

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — A man who stayed in an outdoor telephone booth for more than one hour wasn't long-winded; he just couldn't get out. His struggle to free himself from the close quarters drew a crowd of amused spectators Saturday. But after a while the joke wore off and the Fire Department was called. "At first we thought it was a fat man," sad Capt. Gary King. But the man, who never identified himself, was only a little larger than normal, King said, and was trapped by a faulty door. Firefighters used a screwdriver to free the man. When he was out, no one asked for his name, King said.

Prison Ending Shakedown

PONTIAC, Ill. (AP) — As prosecutors prepare to try 31 inmates on riot charges, the state's new prison chief is winding up the most extensive shakedown for weapons and contraband ever conducted in Illinois.

Since taking over the troubled prison system two months ago, Gayle Franzen has moved quickly to end the eight-month deadlock at the Pontiac Correctional Center, and to take the Stateville prison in Joliet back from inmate gangs he said controlled it.

Lawyers representing inmates accused the state of violating their clients' constitutional rights. Franzen, however, believes that U.S. District Judge John Powers Crowley will approve his plan to restore all inmate privileges at Pontiac by mid-April and will also agree that the dramatic, unannounced search at Stateville was warranted.

Inmates at Pontiac were locked in their cells after the July 22 riot, in which three guards were stabbed to death, three were wounded and $4 million in damage was done to the century-old institution.

The men were kept in their cells 24 hours a day for three months while guards searched living quarters. They found hundreds of homemade knives, other weapons and drugs.

"We're not on deadlock at Pontiac now, but there is a lot less mass movement of prisoners," said Franzen. He said 1,200 men were out of their cells when the riot began. Now half that many are allowed out at one time. Many have returned to educational programs and prison jobs.

After the riot, corrections commissioner Charles Rowe fired warden Thaddeus Pinkney, then Gov. James R. Thompson fired Rowe and hired Franzen.

Franzen said construction of new observation towers to give guards more protection will begin in about a week. Television monitoring equipment will be installed, and cell locks will be changed because keys are missing.

Franzen said those security improvements should satisfy the guards' union, which he said "wants to see very little given back because of the three deaths."

He said lawyers for the inmates "want everything the way it was prior to July 22, including mass movements ... My problem is that I'm right smack dab in the middle."

The indictments issued March 5 charged 17 inmates with murdering the guards and accused 14 other of riot-related crimes.

Franzen's second court test involves the lockup and search at Stateville, which he calls "a true deadlock. We're not just shaking down the cell houses, we're shaking down the entire institution."

The search team, aided by dogs, has found about 400 weapons, drugs, gasoline and alcohol. Franzen said he believes Crowley will see from the results that the action was necessary.

The 2,200 inmates are being taken to an empty cell house while the search is conducted in their living quarters. Until the operation is over in about two weeks, they will not be allowed out of their cells except for a shower and a visit with their lawyers.

"We've not had any resistance at all from any inmates," said Franzen. "A lot of them are saying to me under their breath, because they don't want other inmates to hear them, 'Hey, thanks. This place was kill or be killed.'"

Franzen said gang leaders, mostly from the streets of Chicago, controlled Stateville by intimidating guards or by working with guards who also were gang members, he said.

Attack On Angola Leaves Six Dead

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — South African planes and helicopter gunships killed six persons and wounded three others in attacks on villages in Angola over the past week, Radio Angola said Sunday.

An Angolan Defense Ministry communique, quoted by the radio in a broadcast monitored here, accused South Africa of increasing attacks on Angola under the pretext of striking against guerrillas of the South-West African People's Organization.

The South African government last Monday said it had launched a "limited" attack on guerrilla bases in Angola.

The Angolan radio claimed, however, that the attacks were aimed at sabotaging United Nations efforts to establish peaceful conditions for a transition to independence in neighboring South-West Africa, where SWAPO guerrillas based in Angola are fighting to end South African rule.

The Angolan Embassy in Brussels, Belgium, said more than a dozen villages were attacked in the reported raids, which it said began last Monday and ended Thursday.

South Africa and SWAPO are disputing the terms of a U.N. plan to station international peacekeeping troops in South-West Africa, also known as Namibia, to oversee independence elections later this year.

In Nairobi, Kenya, SWAPO leader Sam Nujoma said in an interview published Sunday that he does not want Western troops in the U.N. force.

"We object to participation of any non-African country," he was quoted as saying in the Sunday Nation newspaper.

South-West Africa has been controlled by South Africa under a 1920 League of Nations mandate that the United Nations revoked in 1966.

Rhodesian jets also have attacked Angola recently to hit camps that train guerrillas for the six-year-old black nationalist war against the Salisbury government.

West Virginia Solons Discuss Medical Pot

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Marijuana would be legalized for some medical uses under a bill passed by the state House of Delegates in the closing hours of the legislative session. The bill goes to Gov. Jay Rockefeller for action.

The House, by a vote of 52-48, approved the bill Saturday after rejecting it just two hours earlier. The bill, previously passed by the Senate, would make marijuana available to glaucoma victims and persons undergoing chemotherapy for cancer. In each case, a three-physician board would have to authorize use of marijuana.

Proposed Trade Agreement Will Reduce Tariffs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States can expect to reap "significant rewards" from a new world trade agreement being negotiated in Geneva, a congressional report said Saturday.

However, the Congressional Budget Office report cautioned that the agreement would result in lost jobs in urban manufacturing areas of the Northeast.

The agreement, which has been under negotiation in Geneva for five years, calls for widescale reductions in tariffs as well as in nontariff barriers to trade between countries. A final agreement is expected soon, and debate in Congress over supporting legislation is scheduled to begin in April.

Among benefits coming from the trade talks would be reduced inflationary pressures, more efficient U.S. production and wider export markets, the report said. It said states gaining jobs would be in the South, West and Midwest with especially large increases in the agricultural regions of Kansas, Minnesota and the Dakotas.

For American consumers, the budget office estimated that the price of imports would fall "only some 2 or 3 percent on average over the course of the next eight to 10 years" under the proposed agreement.

The largest number of layoffs would occur in four New England states — Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont and Massachusetts, the report said, adding that other states also hurt would be Illinois, Michigan, New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania.

Those states would be hurt because of the concentration of industries that make use of simple technology where import competition is the greatest. Those industries were identified as textile, footwear, leather products other than shoes, pottery, steel products, radio and television sets and jewelry.

The layoffs would especially hit semiskilled workers, primarily machine operators, assembly line workers and nonfarm laborers, the report said.

But Dick Neu, author of the study, cautioned that the findings could be substantially altered depending on what exceptions are written into the new tariff language.

Robert S. Strauss, President Carter's special trade representative, has already made a series of arrangements to appease certain industries, notably textiles, shoes and televisions.

The report gave no figures on how many jobs would be created or lost under the pending trade agreement. However, it noted that some projections have said 1 percent or 2 percent of the workforce in certain industries could be affected.

The report said those benefiting from liberalized trade would be American industries which use recently developed technology such as semiconductors, office machines, electronic components and aircraft manufacturers. Also gaining would be American farmers, the report said, particularly if liberalization includes not only tariff reductions but a lowering of agricultural nontariff barriers by the European Common Market and Japan. This has been a major American demand at Geneva.

Alumnae Try To Reverse Close Order

CHAMBERSBURG, Pa. (AP) — Alumnae of Wilson College were assessing their next move Sunday in a drive to keep the 110-year-old women's school open after trustees refused to reverse a decision to close it.

The alumnae group has sent 7,000 letters soliciting money for a court fight to keep their alma mater alive.

The board of trustees voted Saturday to reaffirm a Feb. 17 decision to close the liberal arts college permanently June 30. The vote came after a one-hour meeting in New York in which alumnae representatives urged the board to consider alternatives such as improved recruitment and expanded curriculum to attract more students.

Declining enrollment and financial restraints were cited by the board as reasons to shut the school. Board chairman Martha B. Walker said a Wilson College Foundation will be set up to handle assets of the college and administer a program for scholarships, educational grants and loans.

The senior class of about 50 will be allowed to graduate, and the college is assisting about 150 other students in transfers to new schools. Some 50 faculty members will face unemployment.

"The thing that really upset us is that this was done in such a high-handed way — and so quickly without consulting the faculty, parents, alumnae or students," said alumna Carolyn Trembly Shaffer of Baltimore.

"We were told in June — the alumnae were told — that there was not any (financial) problem," she said. "They usually tap us first."

But Mrs. Walker, a 32-year-old lawyer and Wilson alumna, said the budget will run into a deficit this spring, and the board was faced with an inevitable judgment.

"Intelligent and good and honest people will differ with that judgment," she said.

Chinese Television Advertising Debuts

TOKYO (AP) — China has broadcast its first television commercial, one boosting a soft drink called "Happiness Cola," Radio Peking said Sunday. It said the cola was plugged by members of a popular men's basketball team.

Advertising has been revived in China recently. Radio commercials resumed in late January, beginning in Shanghai, and ads began appearing in magazines, newspapers, shop windows and theaters at about the same time, Radio Peking said.

It represents the first advertising in China in more than a decade. Advertising was banned during the Cultural Revolution of the 1960s.

The broadcast said the cola commercial was aired during a women's basketball game televised live in Shanghai Friday.

The product plugged Friday is of local manufacture, though the brand name Coca-Cola, the American soft drink that went on sale in China early this year, is translated to something close to "Happiness Cola" by the Chinese.

TELLER GASES THIEF

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — A woman bank teller sprayed tear gas in the face of a pistol-toting would-be bank robber and sent the sobbing desperado running out the front door, a newspaper reported Saturday. The daily newspaper Zemedelske Noviny said the stocking the gunman had over his head did little to stop the gas. The man had asked the 40-year-old teller for all the cash in the savings bank.

Claims Deadline Nears For Syphilis 'Guinea Pigs'

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Time runs out this week for the last 23 of some 600 black men who stand to collect thousands of dollars because they were tricked into taking part in the government's infamous Tuskegee syphilis study.

During the U.S. Public Health Service experiment, which began in 1932 and ended 40 years later, treatment was withheld from 400 syphilis victims so doctors could study the effects of the untreated disease on the human body. The 200 other participants did not have syphilis and were used as a control group.

After disclosure of the experiment in 1972 produced a public outcry, the study was discontinued and the Health Service began the following year notifying participants that they had been used as guinea pigs.

The participants, all poor, uneducated black men, were never told the purpose of the study, nor that they had syphilis. They were persuaded to participate by promises of free medical treatment for illnesses other than syphilis, free meals and free burials.

At least 28 men died as a direct result of the untreated syphilis, and officials estimate that the actual number of deaths attributable to the experiment could exceed 100.

A $1.8 billion class-action lawsuit arising from the experiment was settled in 1974 when the U.S. government agreed to pay $9 million to 116 known surviving participants and to relatives of those who died.

In approving the settlement, U.S. District Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr. set a deadline of March 18, 1979, for the participants or their heirs to claim compensation. All but 23 have been found.

Johnson said the government had "callously experimented with and risked the very lives of a large number of unknowing black citizens."

The settlement called for payments of $37,500 to each living syphilitic participant, $15,000 to each living participant who did not have the disease, $15,000 to the estates of each deceased syphilitic participant, and $5,000 to the estates of each deceased participant who did not have the disease.

The lawsuit was filed by Fred Gray, a Tuskegee attorney and former member of the Alabama Legislature. Gray, who received more than $1 million in legal fees from the settlement, has had the responsibility for tracking down the survivors or their heirs.

Many were still in the Tuskegee area, Gray said, and those for the most part already have received their share of the settlement. But the ones who left Tuskegee over the years have been much more difficult to trace.

Starting with community leaders in "places where we thought these people might have lived," Gray said he and his staff also checked telephone directories, the rolls of the tax assessors and tax collectors in various places, marriage records and other courthouse documents.

Listed below are the names of the 23 participants who have not been found and the last places they were known to have lived. Anyone with information about any of the 23 or their relatives should contact Gray in Tuskegee.

McGovern Critical Of Schlesinger's Policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. George S. McGovern called on President Carter Sunday to fire Energy Secretary James Schlesinger who, McGovern said, has offended Mexico, increased U.S. dependence on imported oil, delayed coal development and deliberately caused oil prices to rise.

Schlesinger, who was brought into government by the Nixon administration, has advocated policies that have been "a disaster," McGovern said in a television interview on CBS' "Face the Nation."

"If I had any one word recommendation for President Carter today, it would be to get rid of Mr. Schlesinger and start off with an energy chief who could look at the whole problem of energy in this country with more imagination and more intelligence," McGovern said.

He added:

"We have an energy policy today that's increasing our dependence on overseas oil. We used to talk about Project Independence a couple of years ago, but we've doubled our dependence on foreign oil. One of the reasons is that under the leadership of Mr. Schlesinger we have no alternative-source-of-energy program.

"After committing ourselves to increase the use of coal in this country, we've cut down, on Mr. Schlesinger's recommendation, on funds for coal development and coal conservation. We have no strategic oil reserve worthy of the name and never really tried to build one up.

"Under the clumsy diplomacy of Mr. Schlesinger, we've soured relations with Mexico in 1977. What he has done is to try to build a program of energy conservation by raising oil prices here at home, which is obviously inflationary."

McGovern said Schlesinger's policies "enriched the oil companies" but "impoverished the American people."

His reference to Schlesinger's diplomacy concerned the energy secretary's reluctance to meet Mexico's price for natural gas last year and reports that Schlesinger kept a delegation of Mexican negotiators waiting several hours before meeting with them.

School Reopens After Racial Difficulties

OPELOUSAS, La. (AP) — A high school closed last month because of racial trouble will reopen Monday with new administrators and faculty, and St. Landry Parish Superintendent John Dupre says, "We look forward to a smooth opening." Principal John Kurt Soileau and Assistant Principal Clifton Lemelle were the last two people reassigned under a federal court consent decree ordering officials to reopen Washington High School with a new staff. Dupre said Friday. The school was closed Feb. 22 because of fistfights and other troubles in the wake of Soileau's appointment as principal over Lemelle, who had been acting principal since D.L. Vidrine's retirement.

Soileau is white; Lemelle, who had served many years as assistant principal, is black.

When he announced the school's closing, Dupre said the staff and students would be assigned to other schools. But parents went to court and U.S. District Court Judge Nauman Scott approved their compromise proposal.

The consent decree was approved 10-3 Thursday by the school board.

John Bradley, supervisor of health, physical education and athletics for the school system, and John Vallien, supervisor of libraries and mathematics, have been named co-supervisors at Washington for the rest of the term.

Bradley is white and Vallien is black. Both are former school principals.

Dupre said he hopes the school board can appoint a principal for Washington during its first meeting in June. The central office would then work with the new principal to choose an assistant principal.

Dupre said he has been too busy to look at a $5 million educational malpractice suit filed by Aaron Harris, a black attorney, on behalf of his three children who attend Washington.

Prince To Tour Rural Areas Of Australia

PERTH, Australia (AP) — Prince Charles leaves today on the first leg of a tour of rural areas, following a busy weekend of official and recreational engagements.

He arrived here Thursday for Western Australia's 150th anniversary celebrations.

The prince kept up his routine of early morning swims at his favorite beach, went sailing on the Swan River and spoke to and shook hands with hundreds of West Australians.

Saturday night, he attended a state reception at Government House. And on Sunday he was driven to Fairbridge Farm, a center for migrant children, at Pinjarra, south of Perth, where he attended a church service and chatted with children and parents.

He later returned to Perth and went sailing with yachtsman Rolly Tasker in his 23-meter yacht Siska, the fastest yacht in Australia.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: At least four years ago you printed a letter from a young woman who was having an affair with a married man. He had a serious heart condition and she was writing to ask what to do if he should have a heart attack when they were in a hotel room together.

I remember your advice and it was excellent. You didn't moralize. You responded in a practical, nonjudgmental manner to the woman's question. Will you please repeat your advice? It could make a big difference in the lives of a great many people. — Committee Of One In Behalf Of Thinking Ahead

Dear Committee: I do recall the letter. The advice I gave was as follows: The woman should carry the telephone number of her friend's physician in her purse at all times. If her companion should become ill, she should phone his doctor at once, wait until he arrives and leave immediately.

• • •

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 49-year-old housewife who has recently overcome a 25-year chronic depression. Since your column is a vehicle for enlightenment, I'd like to spread the word about depression to the hundreds of thousands of people who need educating.

Depression is one of the most misunderstood ailments of our time. Dr. Nathan S. Kline, director of the Rockland State Hospital Research Center at Orangeburg, N.Y., calls depression the "leading untreated illness" in our country. It is estimated that twenty million adults suffer from serious depressive symptoms each year.

Since I have long battled depression (with help from therapists) I can tell you that the shame and contempt laid on mental depressives by uninformed people is worse than the disease itself. Heart disease, cancer, arthritis, almost any physical disease is considered socially acceptable — even other ailments, often emotionally induced, such as ulcers and migraine headaches, are granted respectability, but mental illness carries a silent stigma.

It is not possible for a person who has never suffered a serious depression to know how depression feels, but, in the name of compassion, he can stick to these do's and don'ts:

1. Please don't tell me to "snap out of it." There is no relationship between will power and depression.

2. Don't tell me to "keep busy and forget about yourself" when I am overwhelmed by fatigue, anxiety and contemplating suicide as an alternate to my misery.

3. Don't call me lazy. I enjoy the satisfaction of a good day's work, but depression saps my energy and there are days when I can barely drag myself out of bed.

4. When I reach out to you for support, don't reject me because you don't understand me. The major reason I am suffering from depression is because I have had a short supply of love in my life. If you do respond, let your love be genuine. If you are only pretending to care, I will know it. Depressed people can be very perceptive. — Getting Well In Indiana

Dear Getting Well: Thanks for the insight your letter will give millions of readers. No one can describe depression as well as a person who has experienced it. Understanding what the depressed person is going through can be enormously helpful.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

I saw a neat idea in a magazine the other day where someone gave a shower for an expectant grandmother who was awaiting the birth of a grandchild.

A group of contemporaries got together and brought used cribs, rockers, and toys to provide a home-away-from-home for the new offspring.

What a wonderful idea. I know when my children were small, I did the best I could to furnish Mother with all sorts of wonderful diversions for the children when they visited.

I left the drum set at her house. The one she so thoughtfully got the children for Christmas . . . the one that sounded like the footsteps of a thousand camels on your eyelids.

I gave her the live rabbit to keep . . . the one that made such a hit when she gave it to the children at Easter tucked away in a little yellow basket, lined with green ribboned grass and little pebbles that clogged your sinuses.

From the moment she gave them the trampoline, I knew it was definitely a Grandma's house toy. Better to clear all the furniture out of a room in her house and pad the walls and ceilings . . . than mine.

The moment I saw the train with 630 miles of track that Granddad bought for their birthday I said, Wouldn't that be just the thing to set up at Grandma's house?

I don't think I'll ever forget the look on Mother's face the day I dropped off my daughter and her taffy machine. I left it there, of course. Since Grandma bought it, I knew she'd want to share the enjoyment of picking taffy off the ceilings and out of the carpet.

Somehow, I couldn't be selfish about the noisemaker that Grandma gave them from a New Year's eve party, or the tricycle with the siren on it that she got for their graduation from nursery school, or the saber that she brought to them from her vacation.

I occasionally got a twinge about all the toys at Grandma's, but when she bought them their first phonograph with a volume knob, I knew I was doing the right thing.

The children used to love going to Grandma's house — they still do. They say her home has happy memories and is so lived in.

GOREN ON BRIDGE

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠954 ♡A84 ◇K963 ♣AJ7
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Don't let your 12 high-card points and fine heart support go to your head. You have a perfectly balanced hand, and you should deduct one point for that flaw. Also, your hand is almost devoid of intermediate cards. Three hearts is quite adequate—if partner can't bid on, you probably haven't missed a game.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ1074 ♡A ◇962 ♣AQ104
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	2 ♡	Pass

What action do you take?

A.—What are your options? Partner has virtually denied three-card spade support by failing to take a preference to two spades. And he didn't have the values for a two-over-one response. In view of the misfit, pass and hope you have enough to enable partner to make his contract.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q1072 ♡84 ◇9 ♣KJ10762
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 NT	Dble.	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—Your side has the balance of power, so it is very tempting to pass and hope to collect a penalty. Indeed, we would endorse that action if we were sure partner would lead a black suit. More likely, however, he will lead a red suit, giving declarer the tempo and a probable trick. To avoid this fate, we suggest a jump to three clubs. That can't show a good hand, for we would have passed with strength. At the same time it suggests more power than a weak takeout of two clubs, and partner should convert to three no-trump with a club fit and stoppers in the other suits.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A1054 ♡Q1083 ◇7 ♣8752
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
2 NT	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—By inviting game, partner has shown a better than minimum opening bid—at least 16 points. In support of hearts your hand is worth 10 points, so you should accept. Bid four hearts.

Q.5—North-South vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠6 ♡AJ95 ◇862 ♣AK1053
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
1 NT	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Partner's failure to rebid three no-trump indicates that he may not have spades and diamonds adequately guarded to make the no-trump game a secure contract. However, four hearts on a 4-3 fit (partner cannot have four-card support) might be no better. For the moment, all you can do is bid four clubs and allow partner to select the final contract.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠752 ♡KQJ8 ◇KQ74 ♣83
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
3 ♠	Dble.	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—If partner has full values for his vulnerable takeout double at the three-level, your side could easily have a slam. Unfortunately, there is no safe way to investigate the possibilities. Settle for four hearts, and if it turns out that you did miss a slam, write it off as another victory for preemptive tactics.

Q.7—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A7 ♡A109865 ◇Q7 ♣AK3
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—With 17 points in high cards and a six-card suit, some jump rebid is needed to show your values. Your only reasonable choice is three hearts, despite the fact that you would prefer to have a better suit for this action.

Q.8—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KJ52 ♡AJ8 ◇763 ♣952
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
3 ◇	Pass	3 NT	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—From his bidding, partner has shown a very powerful minor two-suiter and is making an effort to get to slam. With an ace and a king, you should be ready to cooperate, even though your holdings in his suits are far from robust. We suggest a cue-bid of four hearts to show the ace and a willingness to play slam if that's the control he needs.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Alan: "What are we showing today's hand for? South is in a very normal and very unlucky three-notrump contract that goes down one because West gets off to the perfectly normal lead of the fourth-best diamond from a suit headed by ace-queen and East holds the king of clubs."

Oswald: "It is the first hand in a new and delightful book called 'Play of the Hand With Blackwood.' Easley is crowning his distinguished career with a great book."

Alan: "I suppose that he gives this hand to show the effectiveness of the normal fourth-best lead against notrump."

Oswald: "That is part. The main thrust of this hand is to point out that only a low diamond lead will hurt three notrump, but that in case South plays at five clubs then only a diamond lead will give him his contract."

Alan: "All this has to be obvious to any experienced player, but I can see where it is a good start on the general principles of the opening lead."

Carter May Stay Longer For Treaty

we can, our meeting tonight will be just a prelude for an occasion of joyous celebration, the signing of the first treaty between Israel and an Arab nation," he declared.

As he left the state dinner, Carter was asked by reporters how serious the differences were.

"We'll See What Happens"

"From my point of view, they don't seem to be too serious, but from the Israeli point of view, they are serious," he replied. As for the outcome, the president added: "We'll see what happens."

A U.S. official said Carter told Begin that Vance would be available to the Israeli Cabinet all night should it have questions about Sadat's attitude toward the points in dispute.

Earlier, as he emerged from Begin's office following five hours of talks, Carter said: "Important issues remain to be resolved. All of us are dedicated to continue with our best efforts to reach success."

Anti-Carter Demonstration

Meanwhile, Israeli police said they arrested several demonstrators along Carter's motorcade route. Though a limousine was pelted with eggs, it apparently was not Carter's, according to a White House spokesman.

It was understood the American delegation was concerned about the situation and feels that prospects for a treaty are still very much up in the air.

In an Israeli television interview, Deputy Prime Minister Yigael Yadin said, "We are at a very decisive stage and in a week or two we will know if and when the peace treaty will be signed."

He said Carter had made important progress on his visit to Israel "even if he has not achieved everything yet. The rest can be dealt with."

Carter Prays At Monument

Carter visited a Scottish church and a monument to Holocaust victims before his second round of talks with Begin. Their first session was held after a private dinner Saturday night, shortly after Carter arrived in Israel.

The main obstacle to completing the treaty appeared to be the issue of self-rule for the 1.1 million Palestinians on the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

The question is whether the treaty terms should specify when Palestinian self-rule should be implemented.

American Plan Explained

The American compromise, which Carter brought to Egypt last week and now to Israel, is known to skirt Sadat's demand for a timetable for autonomy.

The compromise would set a one-year goal for completing negotiations to meet Israeli reservations about tying the treaty to a specific plan for autonomy. So far, Palestinian leaders and Jordan have boycotted all negotiations.

Sadat is known to be insisting on concrete evidence that Israel intends to set up a plan for self-rule. He is reported to have suggested that a formula be considered for Gaza, if not the West Bank, since the territory formerly was under Egyptian control and Cairo's influence there remains strong.

Sadat Agrees to Compromise

In Cairo, Egyptian officials who did not want to be identified said Sadat accepted two of the U.S. compromise terms during his talks with Carter. Israel did the same last week.

Sadat and Carter have reportedly reached a compromise on Egypt's objection to having the treaty take precedence over it's defense pacts with other Arabs. They also agreed on a formula to allow security measures in the Sinai peninsula to be reviewed after Israel evacuates the occupied territory.

The two sides reportedly still disagree on when to exchange ambassadors and on the sale of oil from the Sinai to Israel.

Innovative Reform Seen For Courts

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federally funded study released Sunday proposed that European alternatives to criminal trials, such as on-the-spot fines and administrative courts, be tried on an experimental basis in the United States.

But any attempt should be strictly limited, the study concluded, because "we cannot predict the effect of culture on transplanted reforms."

William L. F. Felstiner, the University of Southern California professor who headed the project, gave his strongest support to the European procedure of using administrative courts to handle violations in the area of land use, health, and safety.

Felstiner said such a procedure would do a lot to unclutter U.S. court calendars.

"If you decriminalize some of the relatively minor violations that are treated as crimes in the United States, you solve a lot of problems," Felstiner said.

"Because the offender will now be dealt with by an administrative board, and will not be in criminal jeopardy, you take away some of the procedures that often clog up the machinery," he said.

While the report prepared by USC's Social Science Research Institute and Law Center said some of the European methods might work here, it would be impossible to predict their chances without controlled experimentation.

"We cannot predict the effect of culture on transplanted reforms," the report said. "... Thus we favor small-scale experimentation rather than wholesale innovation."

The study concluded that many of the approaches identified in Europe would require radical changes in existing U.S. practices, but it also said some of them probably ought to receive a tryout here.

"... We will never be able to assess the systematic value of such innovations unless we give them a trial on a small scale and under experimentally controlled conditions," the report said.

The two-year study was financed by a $269,181 grant from the National Institute of Law Enforcement and Criminal Justice, the research arm of the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration.

Research was done in West Germany, Sweden, Yugoslavia, Denmark, Norway, Belgium, Hungary, Austria, Poland, Switzerland and France.

Among the techniques studied were on-the-spot fines by police officers, prosecutorial fines for petty crimes and the use of lay judges and lay courts in civil and minor criminal cases.

The on-the-spot fines are used in Switzerland with fixed schedules of fines. Officials there estimate about 50 percent of their traffic cases are handled this way.

The "strafbefehl" used in Austria and West Germany was another example cited. These are negotiated pleas prepared by a prosecutor and approved by a judge. However, in West Germany they maybe used only for misdemeanors, and no jail sentence can be imposed.

Some Iranian Rockets Missing; More Trials, Deaths Reported

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — The Iranian Air Force disclosed Sunday that "certain people" seized rockets, apparently during the revolutionary takeover of Iran last month, and warned the weapons could explode spontaneously, killing across an area of two square miles.

Islamic revolutionaries reported six men were executed Sunday after summary trials on mass murder, sex and drugs charges. Other persons were flogged for gambling and promiscuity and two youths were sentenced to die — one by stoning, for raping an 11-year-old girl.

At the same time, Ayatollah Kazem Shariatmadari, the second most important Moslem leader in Iran, spoke out against Ayatollah Ruhollah Kohomeini's planned March 30 referendum on an Islamic republic.

An air force communique said "certain persons" carried away rockets from military arsenals. It said, "These rockets, if wrongly handled, could explode at any time as a result of atmospheric conditions, causing irreparable damage."

Such an explosion would affect an area of about two square miles and result in serious damage to life and property, the air force warned. It asked those holding them to return the weapons "as soon as possible and with the utmost care."

The communique did not identify the "certain persons" or the type of rockets involved.

The latest deaths brought to 50 the number of announced executions by revolutionary courts headed by turbaned mullahs acting on behalf of the 78-year-old Khomeini.

The executions were carried out in defiance of Prime Minister Mehdi Bazargan's provisional government. Bazargan has called for an end to the summary trials.

An estimated 1,000 women, protesting Khomeini's demands they stop wearing Western dress and return to the traditional head-to-toe black veil, demonstrated outside the foreign ministry Sunday. But male revolutionaries, who called the women "whores," "American agents" and "Pahlavi (shah) dolls" Saturday, stayed away.

Revolutionaries fired over the heads of Saturday's demonstrators and beat up some women marchers. The attacks stopped after a sharp order from the central revolutionary committee.

Shariatmadari, respected widely for his moderate views, led the movement against the shah's regime while Khomeini was in exile in Iraq and later in France.

He said "instead of asking people to say 'yes' or 'no' to an Islamic republic or constitutional government or either of the two, we must ask them: what kind of government do you want?" said Shariatmadari, 73, in the most outspoken criticism of Khomeini's referendum.

He said the majority of Iranians were "Moslems and will not vote for anything except an Islamic republic."

But he said the referendum had to give Iranians a free choice of the future form of government so that "everyone in Iran and outside the country may know that there is no coercion or pressure at work."

Observers said the latest trials indicated Bazargan still was having to share his authority after bargaining with Khomeini in the holy city of Qom, south of Tehran.

Bazargan, 71, handpicked by Khomeini at the time of the mid-February takeover from Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi, threatened to resign unless he received powers to control marauding armed revolutionaries.

After the talks, Ibrahim Yazdi, assistant to the prime minister for revolutionary affairs, said all revolutionary committees would be gradually disbanded.

But revolutionaries in Tehran divided the city into 14 committees working on law enforcement duties, indicating they had no intention of abandoning their role. A communique from a supervisory body communique, however, limited militiamen's operations within set areas by forbidding arrests without written warrant.

At present, the revolutionaries work on behalf of Khomeini and, quite often, carry out arrests and executions on their own.

A Tehran revolutionary court executed two men, Ahmad Bahar-Doust and Mostafa Pour-Atai, accused of raping boys and drug trafficking.

Others executed were Soltan Rezai in Mashad, Mahmoud Safai in Abadan, police officer Ahmad Bahadori in Hamedan and gendarme officer Mohammadjan Bahreman in Yazd.

The Mashad court ruled Rezai organized attacks on anti-shah protestors, causing several deaths and heavy damage to property. The others were accused of mass murder, torture and arrest of innocent demonstrators.

Another revolutionary court in Astara, on the Soviet border, sentenced to death two youths found guilty of raping an 11-year-old girl. One of the youths was condemned to be stoned to death according to Islamic law, the Persian-language Kayhan newspaper reported.

Seven men accused of gambling received five lashes each and a man and a woman accused of promiscuity received 20 lashes each in Shahre Kord, west Iran.

Bazargan's problems have been compounded by the disintegration of police and army authority following the shah's ouster.

The armed forces command has ordered all absent officers, cadets and conscripts to present themselves at military bases by March 25, the end of a five-day new year feast.

The chief of general staff also named four colonels as "provisional supervisors" of the army in an attempt to reorganize the forces.

Senate Starts Probe Of Energy Problems

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senators begin an "A to Z" examination of the energy crunch this week as Congress trys to find Americans some relief from soaring oil prices and expected summer gasoline shortages.

"There are a lot of rumors and allegations flying around and we need to get all the facts," Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., said in announcing that his Senate Energy Committee will begin hearings into the energy situation.

"We are facing some real energy problems in this country and they must be addressed. This will be the first real examination, from A to Z, of the entire situation."

In session nearly three months, Congress has been moving at a leisurely pace and work on only two bills have been completed — one eases the sale of historic "Carson City" silver dollars to coin collectors and the other makes technical changes in the notice requirements of the Financial Privacy Act.

But the pace appears about to pick up, with Senate and House action due this week on legislation creating a new framework for relations with Taiwan and a bill to increase the national debt ceiling.

Both houses resume debate Tuesday on the Taiwan legislation, which would establish an American Institute in Taiwan to handle U.S. relations with that country on an unofficial basis.

The prospect is that the bill finally sent to President Carter will emerge pretty much to the administration's liking.

Both chambers beat back efforts to incorporate language virtually guaranteeing U.S. defense of Taiwan in the event of an attack by China.

The last major hurdle is expected to be an attempt in the Senate to amend the bill so that Taiwan would retain ownership of its diplomatic buildings and economic assets in the United States. The administration opposes the amendment but it is already in the House bill.

The House Thursday plans to act on legislation increasing the national debt ceiling from $798 billion to $830 billion through Sept. 30.

In a typical political show-struggle, a bill raising the ceiling to $836 billion was beaten two weeks ago. The Senate may take up the measure as early as Friday.

The House also plans to act on a two-year extension of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, which oversees Carter's voluntary wage-price guidelines. There are no substantive changes in the program but the budget is greatly increased in order to accomodate a staff that has grown from about 40 to more than 230.

In the Senate, Birch Bayh, D-Ind., chairman of a Senate Judiciary subcommittee, will hold hearings starting today on various proposals for adding an amendment to the Constitution requiring a balanced federal budget. Though a number of governors, including Edmund G. Brown Jr. of California, have publicly called for such an amendment, only senators have been asked to appear thus far.

'80 Census Cost Guess Criticized

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Uncle Sam is getting ready to count heads again — and, not surprisingly, he's running into his share of criticism.

In the past, the Census Bureau has been chided for asking an assortment of sensitive questions about babies, family income and bathroom fixtures.

But critics of the 1980 census — apparently reflecting the cost-cutting times — are asking whether America's once-a-decade head count is worth all the money, $4.50 for every man, woman and child in the country.

The critics are complaining that the 1980 census will cost $1 billion — more than four times the $220 million cost of the 1970 census.

Much of the increase, according to the Census Bureau, is to correct 1970 census errors that led to short-counting the entire population by 2.5 percent — 1.9 percent for whites and 7.7 percent for blacks.

Associate Census Director Daniel B. Levine told a House subcommittee last week the bureau will rely chiefly on mail returns next year as it did a decade ago. The returns are now ready for the printer.

But instead of getting addresses solely from postal information, the bureau will now search through commercial mailing lists, driver license data and utility records.

He said the bureau expects 80 percent of the returns to be mailed back. It will telephone households that fail to mail them back or answer all the questsions.

In addition, a multi-lingual crew of 265,000 census takers will swarm into minority residential areas, check vagrants on the street and even search for occupants of "abandoned" buildings.

But the General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress, says it doubts the results will be worth the $1 billion cost.

And Rep. Robert Garcia, DN.Y., chairman of the House census subcommittee, says he doubts there'll be much improvement in accuracy despite the increased cost.

Getting back to the reason for it all, how many people does the Census Bureau expect to find when the 1980 questionnaires are sent out, filled in, returned and compiled?

About 222 million, a spokesman said.

Church Commends Carter Peace Trip

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, said in an interview published Sunday President Carter has put "his own personal prestige on the line" with his mission to the Middle East to secure a peace between Israel and Egypt.

"He assumed the political risk of failure then, and has lived with that risk ever since," the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee said in an interview with U.S. News and World Report.

Church said Carter should be credited with any success that may evolve from his trip. "He will have deserved it by having put his own personal prestige on the line," he said.

Hanoi, Peking Trade Insults, Debate Laos

Xinhua quoted Vice Foreign Minister Han Nianlong (Han Nien-lung) as saying: "On March 7 the Lao government unilaterally tore up an agreement between the two countries and compelled us to stop the construction of highways in northern Laos and withdraw Chinese experts."

China accused Vietnam and the Soviet Union of "enslaving the Lao people." The commentary added: "To clamp down on the Lao people's resistance and step up their control of Laos, the Vietnamese authorities deliberately spread the lie of the so-called Chinese preparations for a 'war of aggression' against Laos in order to find a pretext for themselves to take action."

It reiterated Chinese charges that Vietnam wants a "greater Indochina federation" in which it would control Laos and Cambodia. A pro-Vietnamese government took over Cambodia in early January.

Laos' Vietnamese-dominated government has little control over northern Laos, where Chinese influence is strong and where the road projects were concentrated. This undoubtedly has raised new concerns among the Vietnamese and the pro-Vietnamese Laotian government in light of China's recent invasion of Vietnam.

China lodged a protest with Laos Saturday, accusing it of following the Soviet and Vietnamese line in intensifying anti-China activities.

Vietnam reportedly has about 40,000 troops in Laos helping the government fight rebellious Meo mountain tribesmen. Many of the tribesmen helped the United States in the Indochina War and are continuing their fight against the communist government of Laos.

Wives Of War Veterans In Nursing Homes Aided

veal more of their hidden fears and frustrations, Mrs. Griffin said. Each case is unique, and it "takes awhile as a group" for each member to open up completely.

Both Miss Verdone and Mrs. Griffin agree "the ice has certainly been broken."

"One woman already said we could meet in her house and others have talked about baking for the group," Miss Verdone said.

One subject the women have yet to discuss but which Mrs. Griffin believes inevitably will arise is the possibility of a spouse's death.

"This will be an experience for us all," she said. "I can see it as a very supporting thing and (can see) that the wife would want to come back to the group afterward."

One or two women have skirted the subject, Mrs. Griffin said, and both she and Miss Verdone are confident the members can help one another work through the trauma of death.

Both women say they are confident the group will succeed, although they have been able to locate only seven veterans' wives in Lubbock.

"We need more people and are exploring ways to enlarge the group," Mrs. Griffin said. "We have flyers to send to senior centers and hospitals and are hoping for new placements and referrals."

Miss Verdone added, "If they (the wives) can get out to the nursing home meeting once a week, perhaps they can get out to a senior citizens center. The more well-rounded they become the more they will have to offer their husbands."

U.S., Australia To Study Hurricanes

WASHINGTON (AP) — American scientists are launching a cooperative experiment with their Australian colleagues to study the greatest storms on earth: hurricanes.

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administrtion's Orion aircraft, normally based in Miami, is being flown to Australia to participate in the study.

The month-long project now under way will mark the first research flights into hurricanes south of the equator.

People may have flown into these cyclones inadvertently before, but this will be the first time anyone has flown into them with an instrumented research airplane," commented Dr. Robert C. Sheets of NOAA's National Hurricane and Experimental Meteorology Laboratory.

Hurricanes are called cyclones or willy-willys in Australia, and NOAA officials say the aim of the current project is to obtain information on these storms for comparison with similar ones affecting the United States.

"The Australians don't have an equivalent of our hurricane reconnaisance flights by Air Force and NOAA aircraft, and depend mainly on satellite information to warn them of approaching storms. This will be an opportunity for Australian meteorologists to use data collected in these storms for real time forecasts and warnings as well as demonstrating their potential for research purposes," added Sheets.

He said no cloud seeding will be attempted in the current effort, but it could serve as a precursor to a future work under Project Stormfury. NOAA's attempt to reduce hurricane winds through seeding.

Such an experiment has been discussed, he said. It would give the Americans an opportunity to continue their experiments during the northern winter, which coincides with the Australian hurricane season.

Hurricanes are neither the largest nor most violent storm systems in our atmosphere, but they combine these qualities as no other phenomenon does. It is, NOAA says, "as if they were designed to be engines of death and destruction."

Australian cyclones turn in a clockwise fashion, the opposite of Atlantic hurricanes, and scientists hope in the current studies to learn if there are any other, more subtle, differences between the two types of storms.

The NOAA aircraft will operate from Townsville, on Australia's northeast coast, with secondary bases at Brisbane, Darwin and Learmonth. It will fly into storms approaching within 700 miles, and Australian Air Force crews will ride as observers.

Funds for the project come fom a variety of sources including the Environmental Research Laboratories in Boulder, Colo. Exact cost figures were not immediately available.

A variety of other research also is planned by the scientists as they wait for hurricanes, including investigations into:

•The Morning Glory, a long roll cloud over the Gulf of Carpenteria.

•The North Australia Dry Line, a sharp change in atmospheric moisture that may be similar to the dry line in the American southwest.

New Orleans Workers Veto Garbage Contract

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Apparently afraid of losing their jobs to private contractors, Teamsters-affiliated sanitation workers on Sunday voted to reject a proposed three-year contract with the city.

But Bill Cole, business agent of the Teamsters Local 270 said a strike was not likely despite the 113-17 vote. City sanitation workers have been without a contract since Jan. 3.

"A host of things caused them to reject the contract," Cole said. "I think the primary thing was regarding contracting garbage collection. The men want to be assured that they don't get bid out of their jobs."

The city plans to hire private companies to collect garbage in parts of New Orleans. Officials have promised there will be no layoffs, but the sanitation workers want guarantees in their contract, he said.

Cole said too the union also wanted benefits the workers have enjoyed for as long as 10 years written into the contract. They were not specified in the last contract.

One involved pay for time spent waiting for repairs on trucks. The other is a four-day work week instituted as a fuel-saving measure five years ago, Cole said.

Cole said a recent police strike was not mentioned during a stormy meeting attended by about 150 members of the 600-member local. Police returned to work last Sunday after a 16-day walkout.

Teachers' Strike Ends In St. Louis

ST. LOUIS AP) — Negotiators reached tentative settlement Sunday on a contract proposal that would end the 56-day-old teachers strike that has kept 74,000 students away from classes.

Union officials said their executive board would meet later Sunday to determine whether to recommend the proposal, agreed upon after a marathon bargaining session.

They said they hoped to take a ratification vote Monday, so that schools could reopen by Wednesday.

No details of the tentative pact were available.

"It was a compromise, of course," said Evelyn Battle, president of St. Louis Teachers Union Local 420, which represents about 4,000 teachers in the city's public schools. "We are pleased with the results and we hope our executive board will find it acceptable."

Mrs. Battle said that if the proposal were approved, teachers could report to work by Tuesday morning, one day in advance of a court-imposed deadline set by St. Louis Circuit Court Judge Ivan Lee Holt Jr.

Holt, in response to a suit filed by the school board and a parents' group, issued a temporary injunction Friday ordering an end to the strike no later than Wednesday morning. Teachers who refused to obey the court order would have been subject to jail terms and fines.

But the union president denied that the court order was a factor in the timing of the agreement.

"It had nothing to do with any kind of pressure," Mrs. Battle said. "We did not need the motivation of any kind of punitive action."

The primary snag in contract talks which had continued sporadically before federal mediators since teachers walked out Jan. 16 was a union demand for a $3,150 pay increase over a two-year period. The school board had contended that there was enough in its budget for no more than a $2,150 increase over the same period.

The latest round of talks was triggered by the intervention of Missouri Gov. Joseph P. Teasdale. Both sides in the dispute were called to separate meetings in Teasdale's St. Louis office more than a week ago and were urged to reach a settlement as quickly as possible. The governor had indicated that the state might be able to release as much as $1.4 million to aid in meeting teachers' demands.

Even if the strike ends this week, school officials have said the district's students would have to attend classes well into late July in order to meet federal and state guidelines for funding. The school year normally ends in early June.

YOUR PERSONAL BIORHYTHMS

By Bernard Gittelson, Author of "Biorhythm: A Personal Science"

The personal science of biorhythm can tell you how your day will go. Now you can judge the highs and lows of not only yourself, but loved ones and friends, and celebrities and stars. Biorhythm, our newest scientific discipline, is the study of the built-in natural cycles that powerfully influence our behavior.

BIORHYTHMS FOR MAR. 12, 1979

PHYSICAL
Criticals: 4, 16, 27, 39, 50, 62, 73		Try to keep safe
Highs: 1-3, 17-26, 40-49, 63-72		Plunge into it, tiger
Lows: 5-15, 28-38, 51-61, 74-75		Weary and lethargic day
EMOTIONAL
Criticals: 2, 16, 30, 44, 58, 72		Over sensitive today
Highs: 3-15, 31-43, 59-71		A joyous time
Lows: 1, 17-29, 45-57, 73-85		Don't snap at people
INTELLECTUAL
Criticals: 14, 30, 47, 63, 80		Be guarded
Highs: 15-29, 48-62, 81-95		Intellectual peak time

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Step 2: Now find the corresponding number for the month you were born. If your month is February, and your year numbers were preceded by a B, your month numbers would be 8 for Physical, 3 for Emotional and 31 for Intellectual. Enter your own numbers in the figure chart for Step 2.

Add the three columns to derive your permanent biorhythm numbers for your Physical, Emotional and Intellectual cycles. Now you can refer to today's rhythms.

Abducted Italian Politico Released In Shoot-Out

POTENZA, Italy (AP) — Police blasted their way into a mountain cave early Sunday and freed a Christian Democrat Party official kidnapped Thursday on the outskirts of Rome, a police spokesman said.

The spokesman said the raiders exchanged gunfire with two men who were holding Emilio Francesco Falco, 39, in a cave 25 miles east of this southern Italian provincial capital.

Falco, who was found in chains, was unharmed, but the spokesman said one of Falco's captors and a policeman were injured in the shootout.

The Red Brigades, Italy's most feared urban guerrilla gang, claimed responsibility for Falco's kidnapping in an anonymous telephone call one day after the abduction. But police said the two men who were guarding Falco were known underworld figures with criminal records for kidnapping and robbery.

A police official, who asked not to be quoted by name said, "We do not exclude a link between the kidnappers and the Red Brigades." Authorities speculated the terrorists may have contracted with the underworld for the kidnapping. Police also said the kidnappers had not demanded a ransom to free Falco.

Falco was seized by three men as he was about to enter his car in a parking lot near his office in southern Rome. It was the first kidnapping in the Italian capital this year.

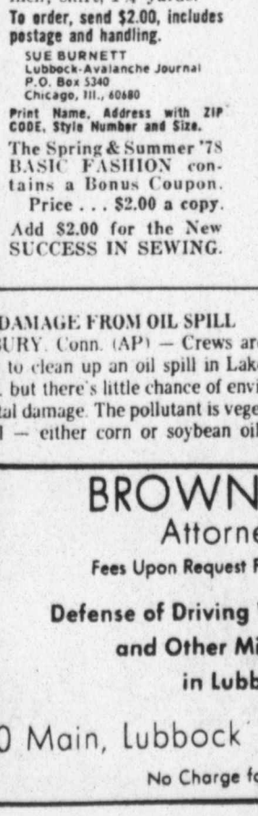

Falco is on the managing committee of the Rome office of Premier Giulio Andreotti's Christian Democrati Party. He also runs a party-controlled association of housing cooperatives.

His kidnapping was followed by the killing in Palermo, Sicily, Friday night of Michele Reina, 47, provincial secretary of the Christian Democrat Party. A terrorist group known as the Front Line claimed responsibility for Reina's slaying.

Jury Selection Continues In Hart Murder Trial

PRYOR, Okla. (AP) — A young factory worker bounded down the Mayes County courthouse stairs two at a time and emitted a whoop as he emerged into the bright winter sunshine.

"Boy, it sure feels good," he said.

A middle-aged woman, flushed and shaken, held one hand to her throat and the other to the stair railing as she descended. She was smiling weakly.

Both had just emerged from being excused as jurors in what is expected to be the lengthy and sensational murder trial of Gene Leroy Hart. He is charged with first-degree murder in the sex-slayings of three Girl Scouts at a northeastern Oklahoma summer camp in June 1977. Jurors will be sequestered at a hotel throughout the trial.

After a sixth day of questioning prospective panelists ended Saturday, the jury still was incomplete with seven women and four men tentatively seated. District Judge William Whistler said selection would continue Monday.

Whistler originally drew a pool of 900 prospective jurors from the county, which has a population of about 18,000. The judge and attorneys have questioned at length 57 persons drawn from that group.

Each side may, without explaining why, remove up to nine jurors after they are tentatively seated. Attorneys still had four of their challenges after Saturday.

Some prospective panelists have taken the stand for questioning and have begged Whistler to excuse them from jury duty, although they had no statutory exclusion.

"I have to work to buy groceries," one woman tearfully told Whistler. The judge conferred with attorneys and later found a reason to excuse her.

Many of those excused from serving said they had their minds firmly made up as to Hart's guilt or innocence. Others said they could not, under any circumstances, vote for a death penalty.

Dog Lovers Crusade Against Controls

LONDON (AP) — When they jailed Mavis Thornton for walking Bobbie, Heidi and Smoky in the park, little did they suspect that English dog lovers would rise up in a canine crusade reaching the very doorstep of 10 Downing St.

The object of the protest is the borough council in Burnley, which has banned pooches from three of the five municipal parks in the northern industrial town on grounds that their litter is a menace to health.

Some 3,500 dog owners in Burnley are growling with anger and are determined that their case get a hearing from the rest of this animal-loving nation. Today's ban in Burnley could become a nationwide trend tomorrow, they warn.

"It's not the dogs, it's the dictatorship we're protesting about," said Frank Clifford, chairman of the Burnley Dog Owners Action Committee, as he took part in a vigil of dogs and their owners Saturday at the entrance to Prime Minister James Callaghan's official residence on London's Downing Street.

The 43-year-old Mrs. Thornton isn't the only crusader to have been jailed — three other Burnleyites were similarly separated from their beloved pets — but her incarceration Friday was the immediate cause for the protest vigil.

The Burnley Council had obtained a court injunction banning her from taking her terrier Bobbie, her dachsund Heidi and her whippet Smoky into a municipal park. It later applied to London's High Court to have the mother of six children jailed.

Boat Folk Make Desperate Bid; Try To Swim Chinese Harbor

HONG KONG (AP) — About 100 Vietnamese "boat people" jumped overboard into Hong Kong harbor Sunday and dozens of others ran their old junks aground in nearby Macao in desperate and dangerous bids for freedom.

Those in Hong Kong had been stranded with about 3,000 other Vietnamese aboard the rusting freighter Skyluck for 33 days.

After leaping into the harbor's waters, they faced a one-mile swim to shore. About 50 made it to the British colony's outlying Lamma Island, two were admitted to a hospital to be treated for exhaustion and the rest were picked up by launches and sent back to the freighter, the government said.

Those who made it to shore also were returned to the Skyluck.

A government official said he was not sure whether all the refugees had been accounted for because he did not know how many jumped from the ship.

The refugees who made it to shore handed police a petition asking for permission to land. Conditions on the ship are not known because the government has blocked communications and barred reporters from going aboard.

The Vietnamese on the Skyluck, the latest of an estimated half-million who have fled Vietnam since the 1975 communist victory, put up banners that said: "Thank you for food and give us shelter too," and "Run for life. Run for freedom."

In the nearby Portuguese colony of Macao, a total of 61 refugees drove their two boats onto rocks near the islet of Coloane after being refused permission to land.

Officials said they may put the 61 in new boats and send them back to sea. Late last year, Macao stopped allowing refugees to land, saying its camps were filled with 1,300 Vietnamese.

Eleven refugees aboard a Vietnamese lighter — a large open barge chiefly used for unloading cargo ships — sailed into Hong Kong Saturday. Government sources said the group, which included two Vietnamese military officers, hijacked the boat and five crewmen.

The Skyluck arrived in Hong Kong Feb. 7 but authorities have refused it landing rights until it is determined whether those aboard are shipwreck victims, as they claim, or bribed their way out of Vietnam. Officials also say it is "more humanitarian" for them to stay on the ship because Hong Kong's refugee camps are packed.

It apparently took the Skyluck 27 days to make a normal four-day run from Singapore to Hong Kong. Skyluck Capt. Hsiao Hung-din said the ship's engine broke down repeatedly and the refugees threw his logbook overboard, but some officials suspect the extra time was spent in picking up refugees in Vietnam.

Hong Kong authorities suspect Vietnamese officials are involved with organized syndicates in smuggling refugees to Southeast Asian countries for huge profits. In January, investigators found $316,000 in gold in the possession of six refugees aboard the freighter Huey Fong.

Rep. Elizabeth Holtzman, D-N.Y., who visited Vietnam last month, estimates refugees have paid about $20 million to minor Vietnamese government officials to leave the country since 1975.

Officials representing the U.N. high commissioner for refugees are negotiating with Vietnamese officials to make the emigration more orderly. Many of the refugees who have reached Hong Kong and other ports are Vietnamese of Chinese descent, members of the merchant class who have not adjusted well since the communist victory.

The passengers of the Skyluck are among 475,000 refugees U.S. officials estimate have emigrated from Vietnam since 1975. Those who escaped in freighters like the Skyluck or in small boats have been resettled in Western nations or are living in temporary camps in Southeast Asian countries.

A Hong Kong government spokesman said an average of 169 Vietnamese refugees have arrived here daily since the beginning of this year. Since 1975, 23,260 refugees have arrived in Hong Kong, and 15,633 are still in the colony, the spokesman said.

The Skyluck is the second freighter carrying large numbers of Vietnamese refugees to arrive at Hong Kong this year. The Taiwanese freighter Huey Fong, with about 3,500 refugees aboard, tied up in Hong Kong Jan. 19 after being forced to remain in international waters for four weeks.

Authorities refused to allow the ship to enter Hong Kong waters because its first scheduled port was Taiwan. They later relented for humanitarian reasons and the refugees were allowed to come ashore and await resettlement.

Rifts Show In Anti-Amin Front

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Tribal antagonisms and old political rivalries are coming to surface again among Ugandan exile leaders as their combined forces, aided by Tanzanian troops, grow more confident of victory over Ugandan President Idi Amin.

On Sunday, an invasion force of Tanzanian units and their Ugandan-rebel allies was believed camped about 70 miles south of Uganda's capital, Kampala, reliable reports here said.

The exiles claim the invaders are making steady though slow progress northward, but Amin, survivor of many crises, is receiving Libyan arms and says the decisive battle has not yet been fought.

They disagree about who should take credit for what, and about who is more in the favor of Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere, who launched the invasion in retaliation for a Ugandan invasion of northwestern Tanzania last October.

Since their recent successes in Uganda, exile leaders have emerged from their backroom offices in Nairobi and the cafes of Dar es Salaam, the Tanzanian capital 500 miles to the south.

Former Ugandan President Milton Obote is by far the best-known exile. "If I had the guns, I would have an army bigger than Amin's tomorrow," Obote recently boasted.

But he has problems with his old rivals, the 2 million-strong Baganda tribe. They control a coalition of exile groups called the Uganda Nationalist Organization, which is led by Nairobi-based intellectuals and professionals.

The Bagandas also have a problem, however: they readily admit that their leader, Robert Serumaga, is no household name among Uganda's 13 million citizens. But they will not accept Obote.

"The chances of Obote's returning as president are very slim," says a member of the organization's six-man executive committee in Nairobi. "He has no arms. And he's not popular with the Baganda."

The same rift was causing political problems for Obote even before Amin seized power from him in 1971.

Obote can count on support only from his own Langi tribe and another northern group, the Acholi. Together they add up to little more than one million Ugandans.

Obote's aides, speaking to reporters, imply the Uganda Nationalist Organization is phony. They scoff at the organization's claims that it has 2,000 fighting men in Uganda. Obote's men say the organization has only about 30 fighting men, compared with almost 3,000 Obote fighters in Uganda.

Obote also is reported to have a large number of political agents of his Uganda People's Congress in Uganda. While not identifying themselves with Obote, they are said to be organizing the 2 million Ugandans in territory overrun by the invasion force.

The former president has not said he would like to return to power, but he broke six years of silence in January by urging Ugandans to rebel gainst Amin. He says leadership problems can be worked out after Amin is vanquished. The Tanzanians also are reliably reported to hold this position.

Obote, abandoning his favorite pastime of playing Scrabble, recently has given interviews at his suburban Dar es Salaam home, near the Indian Ocean. Visitors say he works from dawn to nearly midnight, sending telegrams to political leaders around the world, conferring with aides and listening to foreign news broadcasts on the fighting.

Serumaga, an economist and playwright once popular among Ugandan intellectuals, is said to be commanding exile forces near Masaka, the southern provincial center Amin lost late in February.

The Uganda Nationalist Organization says its 2,000 men near Masaka are the only uniformed force of Ugandan exiles. They began training late last year at Musoma, a Tanzanian port on Lake Victoria, after receiving weapons from Nyerere, a spokesman said.

"We are aiming at a broad Ugandan government including all anti-Amin forces," says a spokesman. "We intend to take over the administration machinery, bring back peace, start reconstruction and hold elections at the appropriate time."

The organization says it has established contacts with the United States, Britain and Israel and plans to seek aid from those countries after defeating Amin.

"We shall need aid immediately," the spokesman said. "Even if it takes South African aid to help our country, we'll get it."

Uganda's economy has been decimated under Amin. Exports have shrunk. Military expenses have soared. The currency has sunk to one-tenth its former value against Kenya's and is worthless internationally.

There rarely are eggs, meat, milk, bread, soap, fuel and matches in Uganda's stores. Middle-level African managers have been purged, Asian businessmen expelled. European engineers have left Uganda, which became indpendent of Britain in 1962.

"We would be starting all over again, back at the levels of colonial days," said an exile leader. "We would need tremendous amounts of foreign help."

Farmworkers End March To Austin

AUSTIN (AP) — Antonio Orendain, president of the Texas Farmworkers Union, says he will stay near the Capitol until the Legislature winds up its work in May if necessary to make his point about collective bargaining.

"With a law, you're a worker who has a signed contract," he told a crowd of about 100 supporters Saturday.

The rally marked the end of a six-week, 600-mile trek from the West Texas town of Muleshoe. A handful of marchers made the whole trip.

Orendain said it was "only the beginning."

Union members will start visiting legislators today on behalf of a bill that would give collective bargaining rights to agricultural workers.

The bill, which failed in past legislative sessions, has been referred to the House Committee on Agriculture and Livestock. The committee's chairman, Rep. Forrest Green, D-Corsicana, has said the measure has "an uphill battle to even get out of committee."

The march started with about 250 people but harsher than expected winter weather quickly drove away supporters, Orendain said.

A meeting with Gov. Bill Clements is scheduled for Tuesday afternon, Orendain said. "That's something of a positive step for us. He's going to see us."

Rep. Paul Moreno, D-El Paso, said not much progress has been made since the farmworkers first marched to the Capitol in 1966.

"It is a disgrace that we are still asking the state of Texas to give the farmworker what is only fair, what is only just, and that is the right to earn a decent living," said Moreno, the bill's co-sponsor.

Campaign Financier Linked To Gas Deal

LOS ANGELES (AP) — One of Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.'s campaign financiers reportedly stands to make a substantial profit from an energy program which the governor has proposed to Mexico. But a top Brown aide denies any wrongdoing by the administration.

The New York Times reported Sunday that Carlos Bustamante, the Mexican owner of gas utility companies, loaned $20,000 to Brown's 1974 gubernatorial campaign.

Brown's top aide, Gray Davis, confirmed that Bustamante had participated in "possibly two meetings" between California and Mexico officials over natural gas. But he said, "It was our assumption he was there at the request of Mexican officials."

"To my knowledge, there has been no wrongdoing by California officials," he said.

Parimutuel Bill Goes In State Senate Hopper

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The bangtails will be running again Monday in the staid corridors of the old pink granite Capitol.

But the odds against a horse racing bill this session are as long as ever and the crowd will be smaller than usual.

Sen. Ike Harris, R-Dallas, will offer the Senate State Affairs Committee Monday afternoon a pari-mutuel wagering bill that would let the voters of a county decide if there is to be horse race betting within that county.

If approved by the Legislature, a statewide commission would oversee all tracks in the state.

A majority of the county commissioners in a county could call a local option election on the issue or petitions signed by 5 percent of the voters for governor in the last general election could force an election.

In the past, legislative hearings on horse race bill have been some of the largest and loudest of a session. There have been famous jockeys and horse owners, such as operators of the King Ranch, to testify.

Church groups have turned out in force to fight the proposal.

Democrats said horse racing failed by a vote of 720,012 to 685,012. Those in the Republican primary voted it down 74,281 to 69,638.

They promised to be back in 1979, pointing out that Bexar County voted for pari-mutuel betting by 67 percent; Cameron, Hidalgo and Webb counties by 69 percent; Travis by 57 percent; Gavleston by 64 percent and Harris by 54 percent.

Things won't be much quieter Tuesday afternoon. Three different plans to give Texans the right of initiative and referendum come before the Senate Jurisprudence Committee. Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby has urged Austin lobbyists to fight the move. This was one of Gov. Bill Clements' campaign vows, and he says he still thinks Texas voters want the right to initiate legislation and vote on it.

The measure could be the first big test of Clements' strength.

This time there will be "just a few" witnesses for horse racing, Harris' office says.

The last big moment for horse racing came in the 1978 primaries when the Texas Horseracing Association spent $325,000 for a non-binding poll on both the Democratic and Republican ballots.

Tribe Wants Gambling

FIFE, Wash. (AP) — Members of the Puyallup Indian Tribe approved casino-type gambling on the reservation Saturday, a move that could clear the way for gambling on Indian lands around the nation, federal officials said.

The unofficial tally was 134 in favor of the referendum and 89 opposed, said Silas Cross Jr., newly-elected to the tribal council. More than 400 tribal members were eligible to vote, he said.

The tribe already has submitted a proposed Nevada-style gaming code to the Department of the Interior for review.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Chris McKenna has said department approval of the code could set a precedent allowing nationwide gambling operations on tribal trust land, despite local laws to the contrary.

The proposed gaming code would become the first to be approved for Indians, Miss McKenna said.

Under the proposed code, gambling licenses would be issued to gambling operations owned by the tribe. Gambling could begin later this summer.

"It's going to be a while" before gambling can begin, said Cross, who has been chairman of the tribe's gambling commission. "This stuff does take quite a bit of time."

In the past, tribal members have set up casinos in defiance of what federal attorneys told them was the law. That approach has resulted in raids, fines, convictions and legal bills.

The Justice Department has already filed suit in federal court to test the legality of the gambling operation.

News Association Protests Subpoenas

WASHINGTON (AP) — A newsmen's association says the attorney general's personal approval should be required before subpoenas can be issued for the records of long distance telephone calls made by reporters.

Paul Davis, president of the Radio Television News Directors Association, called for the change of Justice Department procedures and also asked that the administration draft legislation to restrict the obtaining of newsmen's long distance records by prosecutors and investigators.

The association contends that giving investigators access to reporters' long distance records will enable them to identify the reporters' confidential sources.

The Supreme Court refused last Monday to overturn a lower court decision upholding the practice of subpoenaing long distance records without first informing telephone subscribers.

ACLU Asks Wrong Attorney For Case

OLD BRIDGE, N.J. (AP) — The American Civil Liberties Union asked the wrong attorney to challenge a municipal loitering ordinance.

Louis Alfonso said Friday he received a telephone call from the ACLU, asking him to take a public interest case.

"Where is the case?" Alfonso asked. "Old Bridge in Middlesex County" was the reply.

"Sorry," Alfonso told the ACLU. "I won't be able to take the case. But I'll see you in court. I'm the township attorney."

Alfonso will defend the township against the legal challenge.

New University Pines Homes Commended For Plus Features

Shouldn't a new home in University Pines be yours?

(And especially when so many advantages are standard in these energy-efficient homes.)

As first step in consideration of one of these modern residences, likely you would enjoy attendance at open house of a model home at 9310 Detroit, open every day from 2 p.m. until 6 p.m., with appointments available at other hours, seven days a week.

Located adjacent to 91st Street and University Avenue in far south Lubbock, the University Pines development provides new and economical possibilities for new-home acquisition and enjoyment.

Henry Huneke, prominently connected with the Lubbock building community for more than two decades, is the president of First Manufactured Homes, Inc., builder of each University Pines home, and developer of that area. Norman Dowdy is sales manager and each invite inquiry at the 9602 University Ave. offices, phone 745-1533.

Of a projected 500-residence capacity in University Pines, 330 single-family homes already have been sold and occupied, with some 170 to go!

Small wonder the acceptance has been so enthusiastic.

Affordable Price

Consider that the price range for standard-built three-bedroom homes in the development is a modest $33,300 to $33,800, with options available. (Standard features include full carpeting, kitchen appliances, refrigerated air, smoke detectors, two baths, and numerous construction innovations lending to comfort, energy saving and convenience, with quality foremost.)

And it can be so easy to move in, with a most inviting 9 1/2 per cent interest rate available, FHA financing with around $1,600 move-in cost, and VA financing with 100 per cent loan and no move-in cost.

Energy-Efficient

Factors "built in" to enhance the value of each University Pines residence include energy efficient construction, with a large amount of insulation enabling R-30 attic and R-22 rated walls; storm sashes on windows, styrofoam sheeting on the outside, built-in vapor barrier on exterior walls, and with all openings into ceiling, windows and doors sealed with foam. Actually there are 14 specific energy-saving factors in the building program of each of the homes. These must be seen to be fully appreciated.

Isn't it refreshing to find homes available in today's economy and life style that are within a reasonable price range, yet affording comforts to be appreciated and even envied? Henry Huneke and his staff and co-workers understand Lubbock and South Plains preferences and recognition of quality, and they build accordingly, as would one good neighbor for another.

"Come on out, to the open house at 9310 Detroit, or to the offices at 9602 University, and learn full details too numerous to pinpoint in a written story. Learn of the more-than-adequate standard features of each three-bedroom home and of the options available at modest cost. But foremost, note the quality of workmanship, the consideration of today's needs, and the sensible pricing structure. It is all part of the First Manufactured Homes way of serving, and being a good member of the growing community.

Daisy's Collectibles Affords Gallery Of Veritable Treasures

"Have you discovered Daisy's Collectibles, 2002 34th St. phone 763-2973, Lubbock's only collectors gallery?

"Then don't delay, for if we don't have it, we're working on getting it!"

Yes, for quality porcelain and limited editions, collectibles and gifts, Daisy's Collectibles is in a class by itself.

Featured are lines including M.I. Hummel, Sebastian Miniatures, Lladro, Cappe, Kaiser, Borsato, Norman Rockwell, Roger Brown, Capodimonte and even many more.

The "most sought after" Hummel and Norman Rockwell plates, figurines and bells are currently attracting much deserved attention; see Daisy's Collectibles, of course.

Owned by John and Daisy Yugovich and daughter, Gerry Bowman, this shop addition to the Lubbock community was opened back in August of last year. Stocking "top of the line" merchandise, appreciation and increasing trade have been the story since.

Daisy's Collectibles is open from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m., six days a week, and Visa and Master Charge purchases are welcomed.

Very Unusual

As this is the Year of the Children, one likely will be especially interested in the Roger Brown Allison bells, limited to 15,000 and first in a series of four bells. See the Borsato Christmas and annual first edition bells.

Also the shop has miniature Grossman-designed Rockwell figures and Toby mugs.

Etched Crystal

And pewter figurines, the Sascha Brastoff abstracts in porcelain, and many lovely pieces of Beyer etched crystal and limoge boxes.

You must see the Kaiser and Coppe figures, magnificent pieces you'll be proud to own.

Also added is the ever-beautiful Sabino irridescent figures that are truly collectibles. Each is styled and signed by hand.

Carved Stone

Incolay (carved stone) jewel boxes are here in all colors and sizes, priced from $20 to $220.

The Lladro figurines from Spain, Goebel Red Heads and the Co-Boys are coming soon.

On order are curio cabinets for one's collection, and these will be at a cost one can afford (Daisy's has a divided payment plan to further ease purchasing).

"Come in and see the limited bronze pieces by Collection Francaise. Some are limited to 850 pieces world-wide.

There are porcelain flowers, bells and figurines by Capodimonte, and paper weights by Grant Randolph; and crystal decanters in many styles and colors. Beer steins, too, in large and miniature sizes. We have the beautiful Metlach steins in four seasons, two per year until your set is complete. These retail at $250 each.

Also stocked are the Carl and Carol Burgues, Chun Li and June Dream plates, Birds of Fancy and Floral Fantasies plates and the lovely three-plate Trytich by Anne Perenna.

"See why Daisy's is different; see why Daisy's Collectibles should be a favorite shop for you, too? Come in soon, please, to Daisy's Collectibles, at 2002 34th St. in Lubbock."

'Tis the season of the year to seriously arrange for protection during windstorms or tornadoes.

"In Lubbock and area, the Stormaster underground shelter protection can be speedily and easily secured by consulting with the Stormaster specialists at 3406 62nd St., phone 792-5977, who season after season have served most admirably, and who have been proven time after time.

Stormaster shelters are built right; they serve a definite need in the unsettled spring weather conditions of the South Plains; and they are backed with the professional understanding and integrity of their builder, Homer Ries.

Rainbo Salutes, Introduces Key Personnel In Operations

Congratulations, Jesse!

It has long been recognized at Rainbo that acceptance and recognition of the firm and its products is not the mere result of "luck"; but rather the fact that the good product line and the service to match is made possible by a knowledgeable staff devoted to the job at hand, with the customer as ultimate and intended beneficiary.

Harry Hoopes, manager of the Lubbock firm, time and again has stressed that among the factors contributing to a smooth-running and successful operation are the people who make up the staff.

Meet Jesse Zamarripa

In connection with this pride in a job well done by a dedicated group, introduction of these staffmembers is made on regular basis on these pages of the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal.

Jesse Zamarripa Jr. has been with Rainbo for some six years, coming to the firm after mechanical studies in the Neighborhood Youth Corps.

Starting with Rainbo as a mechanic, he has worked up to his present position in charge of maintaining a fleet of 60 units for Rainbo!

This certainly speaks well of the 25-year-old lifelong Lubbock resident. Jesse attended Matthews Jr. Hi and he and his wife, Margie, have two children, Jesse III, age 5, and Larie Ann, age 3. They attend St. Joseph's Catholic Church.

"Rainbo is a great place to work," Jesse points out without hesitation. "All one needs to get along and advance in this organization is ambition and some horse sense!"

Jesse tells how he has enjoyed mechanical work since a very early age, and this aptitude, drive and training has resulted in a most responsible position with Rainbo, a leading area firm.

Inquiries Invited

(Rainbo from time to time has openings in its mechanical department, with another member presently needed. Those interested are invited to check with Jesse Zamarripa now for details. It could be a real opportunity.)

All is not work for Jesse, as he is an avid sports enthusiast and especially enjoys fishing, whether at White River or salt water fishing on the Gulf.

With ambitions, capable staffmembers such as Zamarripa, it is understandable that Rainbo Baking Co. of Lubbock serves superbly!

Business & Industrial Review

EFFICIENCY, CAPABILITIES, STOCK EMPHASIZED — Shown at top is Modern Chevrolet's parts manager, Doretta Kitten, with Jimmie Snook, an assistant parts manager. Another capable assistant, Bob Findley, was not present when picture was made. Note the long aisles within the department, and the fact that roller skates are worn by all countermen. Read the accompanying story for the intriguing explanations.

Modern Chevrolet's Multiple Departments 'Tops In Service'

Modern Chevrolet, at 41st Street and Avenue Q, is more than just a business, as important as that must be. Modern Chevrolet is people, also; people whose knowledge of the firm's products and services is equalled by their desire to serve, people whose devotion to their customers' interests is recognized in every transaction.

Nowhere is this situation more evident than in the Parts Department, Service Department and Body Shop of the firm.

The firm was founded back in 1955 with present owner Gordon Rose as one of the founders. The growth since that date "has been possible only through ethical business practices and a continuous effort to improve customer service," Rose emphasizes.

Exceptional Volume

As evidence of this growth, in 1978 over $1 1/2 million was chalked in mechanical sales and body shop, with $1 3/4 million in parts sales!

Some 100 cars are serviced daily.

And speaking of parts . . . and service:

The efficiency in that department is something to behold!

Doretta Kitten, reared in Slaton, and most, most knowledgeable in the parts business, heads the department where seven countermen are on the job, representing 110 years of combined parts experience.

Innovative Approach

All countermen are on roller skates throughout the day, to speed their work! Really.

The countermen report that they are not nearly as tired at end of day, the customer is served more promptly, and no complaints from staff or customers have been voiced. In fact, quite the opposite.

"I believe the efficiency of the department is increased probably 15 per cent or 20 per cent by the use of the skates," Doretta emphasizes. Special high-quality skates were purchased some four months ago and are "just part of the job" now, with the countermen putting the skates on the first thing on the job, and wearing them throughout the day.

Greg Boyd heads the service department where 19 technicians, seven body shop personnel and three service writers are on the job five days a week.

It all is a part of Modern Chevrolet's continuous effort to improve customer service, a dedicated effort of the ownership and management throughout the years.

"After all, we've been friends a long time . . . at Modern Chevrolet!"

Beck's Warp 'n Weave, Unique In All Southwest, Schedules Added Classes

For example, a Harness Loom class will start March 29, with Tom Beck (owner of the shop) instructing.

Tatting classes also begin April 3, taught by Betty Bradford.

And on April 21-22, an advanced Loom Workshop on use of color will be conducted at the shop by Charlotte Funk, internationally-known weaver.

'Hard-To-Find' Items

Looking for a tatting shuttle, an umbrella swift, a beautiful handcarved crochet hook, beautiful space-dyed wool, the new soft cotton chenille yarn, or even intrested in an incredible rope machine enabling you to make your own rope, rug or belt?

Or the great yarns not found elsewhere in the region? See the beautiful slubby yarn for fashioning a spring sweater, soft luxurious cotton for a bedspread to be cherished for generations, or finest wool in hand-dyed colors for a disco scarf, as example.

Business & Industrial Review

MBFA-Operated Nursing Homes Working Hard At 'Excellence'

A tremendous service is afforded throughout the region by the MBFA Foundation, and in no area of service is this more evident than in the nursing homes operated by the Associated Memorial Homes Division of that not-for-profit foundation.

Commencing its operation of nursing homes just over a year ago, MBFA now operates 12 in West Texas, with more scheduled for announcement shortly.

Stressing "vision with a task" and "love without regard," two of these nursing homes in Lubbock are singled out this week for special recognition and introduction. Their operation, concerns, methods and achievements correspond closely with others of the MBFA nursing homes in Lubbock and area. You'll enjoy knowing and appreciating each one better upon understanding the concepts involved, and with the care exerted by management in providing a home in which you would be glad to have a near relative.

(Visits at all MBFA nursing homes are invited, and these are heartily encouraged as part of the resident welfare and community relations aspect of the homes.)

First, let's take a glance at the over-all programs of each MBFA nursing facility, with full recognition of superior nursing services, dietary departments that consider the individual, spiritual programs, special consultants in the several areas of operation, full attention to activities within the homes, with activity directors on the job; physical and speech therapy and Medicaid participation.

On Sixth Street

The Memorial Convalescent Center at 2418 6th St. in Lubbock is one of these MBFA homes.

Key personnel include Sarah Rice, administrator; Ellen Phillips, activities director; and Carol Anderson, director of nursing, each with unique qualifications and a track record of achievement.

Special effort is made at this center, Sarah emphasizes, to help each resident keep his or her pride and identity, with the considerate dietary program very much in the picture in this achievement.

In-service training of all staffmembers is a "must" and has paid off in resident comfort and welfare. The "ordinary" is unacceptable on the staff at MBFA homes; only those with special aptitudes and dedication are involved.

MBFA has operated the 6th Street facility, just east of University, for one year, and long-time residents have been profuse in their appreciation of the current type operation. An intimate atmosphere is evident even upon a few minutes visit here . . . a situation that "is like home" in as many ways as possible. The building is clean and inviting, and housekeeping services excel.

AT SKYVIEW MEMORIAL HOME — Seated is William Goldstein, well known in Lubbock and a new resident at the distinctive Skyview home, with Wanda Barclay, administrator, also seated, and Dolores Teneyuque, medication aide.

Inquiries regarding residency is invited at both this home and at another one coming in for attention this week, the Skyview Memorial Home at 114 Cherry in Lubbock.

No extended contract is involved at either, with fees on a daily-rate basis. The service and environment is great; the cost, economical. May we give full details?

At 114 Cherry

Wanda came to this facility last July, after achievement records in San Antonio and elsewhere. She is most dedicated and has assembled a staff reflecting this concern for each resident.

A really spacious and attractive reception and activities room greets one upon entry at Skyview. A profusion of growing plants hints of the homelike atmosphere and interests of the residents. There is even a back yard area with roses, other plants and with a barbeque pit, all conducive to events including ice cream suppers, etc.

Opportunities Afforded

Both visitors and volunteer workers are invited; a great service can be in the form of assisting residents write letters, participate in arts and crafts, or just to be a friend. All contributes to motivation and happiness of the resident. (There were about 200 visitors at a recent Christmas party.)

Skyview most certainly appears a cheery place to live. Won't you visit and learn for yourself?

(Attention is called at this time to a "Rock 'n Roll Jamboree," benefitting the Heart Association, to be held at Skyview from 1:30 until 4 p.m., this Saturday, March 17. Coffee and cake will be served. Residents will rock in rocking chairs and roll in wheel chairs in the Rock 'n Roll event, and visitors are invited to join in the fun, cheering the residents, and benefitting the Heart Association.)

Now, doesn't all this hint of reasons for knowing better the programs, opportunities and service scope of MBFA? We hope so. For full details, inquiry is invited regarding other phases of operation including home health services, homemaker services, services for the mentally retarded, and the soon-to-be-constructed memorial home in the Lubbock area. The corporate offices of MBFA are at No. 4, Briercroft Office Park, Lubbock, phone 747-3447.

(Visits are also invited, with inquiry welcomed, at the other MBFA-operated nursing home in Lubbock, the Lakeside Memorial Home, 4306 24th St. It is outstanding.)

Conveniences, Savings Seen At Guys & Gals Hairstyling

"We're hearing some mighty good things about the Guys & Gals Hairstyling, featuring 'anytime appointments' at its 2605 Canton Ave. location."

"If you already are a customer, you know of the expert attention there; and if you are new, a delightful experience awaits, as only the finest in hairstyling is afforded.

"Actually, a lot of people are glad that Marjorie (Barrett) Flowers is affording this type establishment. As owner of the shop since February, Marjorie has devoted full attention to 'the things that count' in a hairstyling salon.

Some of these plus-factors are:

Haircut and blow dry for either guys or gals is a sensible $6.50 on the Tuesday evening special.

Senior Citizens prices, on Thursday included shampoo and set. $4: permanents, $18; cut, wash and set. $7: frost, $18; and color. $8.

And no kidding, as a special convenience, appointments can be made any day from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. Guys and Gals Hairstyling is open Mondays through Saturdays, with Sundays appointments by request. The phone: 793-9167.

Thursdays are special days for senior citizen consideration. Savings on shampoo and sets, permanents, etc. are arranged for senior citizens on Thursdays.

Now, isn't this offer of "anytime appointments" refreshing? Marjorie hopes to build her business on the old-fashioned idea of service, together with a staff that knows its business and keeps up to date via study and special attendance at seminars, etc.

Marjorie Flowers, as owner, is on the job every working day. She is a lifelong Lubbock resident and is a graduate of Lubbock High School. She has two daughters, Denise, 17; a student at Mickie's Beauty Academy; and Zelma, 15, a student at Heritage Hall.

On hand at the shop is Beth Caffey, a Jessie Lee graduate and an operator who has long had an extremely good following in the city area where she still serves at Guys and Gals; Kelly Etherton, assistant manager; Linda Meletti, a Cinderella graduate and a most proficient hair-care specialist.

Also Linda Head, hair stylist, on the job part time.

Each invite friends and new and old customers alike to come in, make or renew acquaintance, and learn of this "service-oriented" firm.

(Though very much in business at this time, a Grand Opening is planned soon, with gifts and special features. Watch for it . . . but come on in for the best in hairstyling!

We're at 2605 Canton Ave., remember; phone 793-9167.

NEW IN LUBBOCK, AND WITH SPECIAL DEMONSTRATIONS ANNOUNCED

Southwest TV & Appliance All New, Offers 'Name' Lines

Opening in spacious, convenient, modern quarters in January, the business has been heartily received.

"Names to trust" have been one of the key factors in the firm's popularity, with a really huge stock on the floor, and with selection enabled from RCA television and video tape recorders, Litton microwave ovens, Frigidaire kitchen and laundry equipment, Sony stereos, Sanyo Stereos, and Harwick gas ranges.

Where is all this? At 3415 82nd St., just west of 82nd and Indiana, clearly marked on the south side of 82nd, with ample off-street parking. One can't miss the attractive building and its outstanding displays.

'Folks You Know'

Lifelong Lubbock resident Dave Abbott is owner and founder of the firm, actively operating it. Assisting is Sam Griffith, store manager, who has been in the appliance field here for many years and is no stranger to the area. Both Abbott and Griffith invite old friends and new ones alike to visit the new 3,100 sq. ft. store and note the effort to afford a really outstanding appliance source for south Lubbock and the entire area.

Microwave Demonstrations

As a special service, (and a great way to become acquainted), in-store Litton microwave demonstrations are now being conducted each Saturday, from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m., by a factory home economist.

"Come on out to this limited-time program; there is no obligation, no fees, no advance registration necessary. Just come on out and discover how really much the firm has to offer!"

The complete line of Litton family-size microwave ovens is stocked, with features "just right for your particular lifestyle". Versatility, warranty, ease of operation and built-in quality are unmistakeable in Litton.

"Any microwave oven can cook one food at a time. But it took Litton innovation to develop a microwave oven that can prepare one, two or three foods — even a complete meal — all at once! A unique cooking system allows microwaves to enter the oven cavity from both sides, completely surrounding the foods and providing more even cooking."

See all this for yourself at Southwest TV & Appliance, all new at 3415 82nd St., open from 8:30 a.m. until 6:30 p.m., Mondays through Saturdays. Finance plans are available, Visa and Master Charge are honored, and free delivery in Lubbock and area is featured.

("Watch our ads for specific price advantages on the quality lines we stock; you just might be amazed at the economy-quality combo we have provided at Southwest TV & Appliance.")

New-Season Auto Performance Given Assist From Johnie Johnson Exxon

"For getting the auto ready for change of seasons, for making sure it is ready for spring and summer enjoyment, a tune-up now at Johnie Johnson's Exxon (34th at Knoxville) is recommended.

And the price . . . just $29.95!

Before opening his own business just over a year ago, Johnson marked over two decades of related experience, including a 17-year stint as front end specialist and more recently as service manager of a downtown Lubbock firm. He knows front end work as probably few in the area.

Yes, front end work is another of the services at Johnie Johnson's Exxon, 34th and Knoxville, as is brake work and expert wheel alignment (the latter at a modest $10.50 price).

Progress Recognized

Thanks to a very good customer response to the service and products at this well-marked corner, Johnson has been most successful. In fact, he and Mrs. Johnson have been recent recipients of a Las Vegas trip for his operation being in the top 2 per cent in the district sales for Exxon. Congratulations!

"If you haven't become acquainted with this modern, convenient firm and its staff, then why not come in now for a changeover to spring and summer driving efficiency?"

Shocks, mufflers, tail pipes;

Open Every Day

Really large access and parking aprons makes "pulling in to Johnie's" most convenient, and not only is this convenience to be appreciated, but the entire facility is attractive, clean and thoroughly geared to efficiency in customer service.

Whether it is for gasoline, or mechanical service, or for accessories, one can be assured that this veteran in the field sincerely appreciates the trade and confidence.

"Johnie Johnson has been around a long time, and likely already has served you. He welcomes old friends and new ones alike to come in, visit, and form the habit of depending upon the Johnie Johnson Exxon, at the 34th and Knoxville corner."

SUGGESTS, OFFERS SPECIAL SPRING CARE — Johnie Johnson, long-recognized front-end specialist, serves at the 34th Street Johnie's Exxon that he owns and actively operates. He cites advisability of spring tune-ups, alignment and brake attention before trips sure to come with balmier weather, Easter and later vacations.

DATSUN 210 HATCHBACK GETS 35 MPG*

THAT'S THE BEST EPA ESTIMATED GASOLINE MILEAGE

This year, Datsun's 210 Hatchback with optional 5-speed got a superlative 35 MPG* in the Environmental Protection Agency estimated gasoline ratings. And that's better than any 1979 gasoline car tested. So come on down and see for yourself how we are driven to improve your economy by stretching your mileage.

Standard equipment: ●Split fold-down rear seat to carry possengers and cargo in equal comfort ●Fully reclining bucket seats ●Cut-pile carpeting ●Walk-in seat back release (slides forward to allow easy access to rear) ●Electric rear window defroster ●Side window defogger ●And many other standard features!

*1979 EPA estimate for comparisons Optional 5-speed. Your mileage may differ, depending on how and where you drive, condition of your car and optional equipment.

New 210 Hatchback $4961.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA
FEDERAL ENERGY REGULATORY COMMISSION

Central Power & Light Company — Docket No. EL79-8
Public Service Company of Oklahoma
Southwestern Electric Power Company
West Texas Utilities Company

NOTICE OF APPLICATION
(February 22, 1979)

Take notice that on February 9, 1979, the above captioned affiliated companies tendered for filing, pursuant to Section 210 of the Public Utilities Regulatory Policies Act of 1978, an application for exemption from three orders of the Public Utility Commission of Texas which allegedly prevent Central Power and Light Company and West Texas Utilities Company from voluntarily establishing or maintaining an electrical interconnection with any utility other than those comprising the Electric Reliability Council of Texas. Applicants also request an order of this Commission requiring interconnection, wheeling and related relief under Sections 202(b), 210, 211, and 212 of the Federal Power Act (as amended). Applicants state that the relief they seek would involve interconnections between their respective utility systems, with the Electric Reliability Council of Texas and with the Southwest Power Pool.

Section 210(a)(1) of the Federal Power Act, as promulgated in Title II of the Public Utility Regulatory Policies Act of 1978, provided the Commission with authority to issue orders requiring

(A) the physical connection of any cogeneration facility, any small power production facility, or the transmission facilities of any electric utility, with the facilities of such applicant,

(B) such action as may be necessary to make effective any physical connection described in sub-paragraph (A), which physical connection is ineffective for any reason, such as inadequate size, poor maintenance, or physical unreliability

(C) such sale or exchange of electric energy, or other coordination, as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of any order under subparagraph (A) or (B), or

(D) such increase in transmission capacity as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of any order under subparagraph (A) or (B).

Section 210 (b) (1) of the Act provides that upon receipt of an application the Commission shall issue notice to each affected electric utility, each affective Federal power marketing agency, each affective owner or operator of a cogeneration facility or small power production facility, and to the public.

Any person desiring to be heard or to protest said application should file a petition to intervene or protest with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, 825 North Capitol Street N.E., Washington, D.C. 20426, in accordance with Sections 1.8 and 1.10 of the Commission's Rules of Practice and Procedure (18 CFR 1.8, 1.10). All such petitions or protests should be filed on or before March 30, 1979. Protests will be considered by the Commission in determining the appropriate action to be taken, but will not serve to make protestants parties to the proceeding. Any person wishing to become a party must file a petition to intervene. Copies of this application are on file with the Commission and are available for public inspection.

Suspect Sought In Murder Case

Police late Sunday still were seeking a suspect in connection with the shooting death of Felipe Vega, who died early Saturday at West Texas Hospital after suffering two gunshot wounds to the chest.

Vega, 18, of 2636 E. Bates St. was found lying face up on a sidewalk in the 1700-block of E. Auburn St. at 12:49 a.m. Saturday, according to police reports.

Witnesses told police Sunday a party was in progress at the Auburn Street residence when a fight involving several people began outside the house. Witnesses said the fight later erupted into gunfire, with Vega, Albert Gomez and David Gomez suffering gunshot wounds.

Albert Gomez of 215 Beech St. was in serious condition late Sunday at St. Mary's Hospital, with gunshot wounds to the stomach and right side, and David Gomez of 215 Beech St. was in satisfactory condition at St. Mary's, recovering from gunshot wounds to the chest and side.

In other activity, two Lubbock men, one 29-years-old and the other 25-years-old, were booked into Lubbock County Jail Sunday morning for possession of a controlled substance.

Drug Enforcement Agency Task Force officers arrested the men about 10 a.m. Sunday at an apartment in the 400-block of Idalou Road after receiving a tip that the men had drugs in their possession.

Detective Gary Satterfield said officers confiscated 317 amphetamines, which have an estimated street value of $3,000, during the arrests. He saidmost of the drugs were found in a 1969 green Ford Thunderbird, being driven by one of the men.

In a reported assault, a 21-year-old sales clerk told police a man grabbed her and exposed himself to her outside a convenience store at 2420 Ninth St. early Sunday.

The woman said the man grabbed her, dragged her to the west side of the store and began pulling at her pants. She said she scratched her assailant and that the man exposed himself to her.

Reports indicate the woman broke free and drove away from the scene, and that the suspect fled north towards Eighth Street.

The victim described the man as 18 to 25, of thin build and medium height with black hair and wearing a navy blue coat and blue jeans.

In an aggravated robbery Saturday morning, a Fort Carson, Colo., soldier told police two black men pulled a knife on him and took $292 from him after he accepted a ride with them.

Richard A. Frodel, 22, told officers he was hitchhiding on the Idalou Road when a black man and a black female gave him a ride. He said the man told Frodel he had to do some errands and drove to the Cherry Point area, where he picked up another black man and a black woman.

Frodel reported they then went to the grocery store and later took the groceries to the Canyon View Apartments, where the females got out of the car.

When the suspects drove off, Frodel said one of the men pulled a knife on him and demanded his money. Reports indicate the robbers also forced the soldier to disrobe and threw him out of the car at 26th Street and Fir Avenue.

Frodel said he grabbed his jeans as he got out of the car and called police from a nearby church.

FRENCH EVACUATE CHAD

N'DJAMENA, Chad (AP) — France has ordered the evacuation from Chad of all military dependents and advised all French civilians to leave the country, torn by a month-long civil war between supporters of Premier Hissene Habre and troops backing President Felix Malloum. A 2,000-man French military force has been stationed for several years in this former French central African colony, and recently has been protecting the European quarter of N'Djamena.

Protests Mar Visit Of Carter

JERUSALEM (AP) — Police arrested 35 right-wing demonstrators who planned to lie down in the street in front of President Carter's motorcade Sunday night, authorities reported.

Tear gas later was used to disperse a group of rightist protesters who gathered outside Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin's office and chanted anti-Carter slogans, Israeli Radio announced.

In the Israeli-occupied West Bank of the Jordan River, young Palestinians blocked roads and chanted "PLO! PLO! PLO!" at Israeli troops in a half-dozen towns. They were cheering the Palestine Liberation Organization, which Israel calls a terrorist organization dedicated to Israel's destruction. In the West Bank city of Ramallah, a hotbed of Palestinian dissent seven miles north of Jerusalem, an Israeli armored car smashed through a barrier of stones and oil drums set up by young Palestinian women.

"Yasser Arafat represents us, not Sadat!" shouted one woman. Her support of PLO chieftain Arafat reflected the feeling of most of the West Bank's 700,000 Palestinians that Egyptian President Anwar Sadat cannot negotiate a true Mideast peace for them.

Gush Emunim, an Israeli right-wing group devoted to establishing Jewish settlements in occupied Arab territories, sent 300-400 of its members into Jerusalem streets to disrupt traffic, according to Rivka Weintraub, a spokeswoman at police headquarters.

She denied reports that eggs and rocks were thrown at a limousine in Carter's motorcade but not the car in which the president was riding.

She said the Gush Emunim members were arrested in two groups of 15 and 20. The group of 15 was part of a larger crowd that had gathered near a point where Carter's car would pass en route from his hotel to the Knesset, Israel's parliament, where he attended a state dinner after a day of peace talks.

The group of 20 was rounded up an hour later, said Mrs. Weintraub.

The White House press office said there had been no sign of an attack on the presidential motorcade.

A report from a news-pool cameramen riding in the motorcade said rocks and eggs landed on the hood and windshield of one auto, but it was far ahead of the president's limousine.

Before Carter arrived Saturday, nine Gush Emunim members were arrested. Police said they had planned to spread tacks in front of Carter's motorcade to protest his peace policies.

Palestinian youths, in one of their anti-Carter protests, stoned a bus carrying Jewish settlers though the West Bank, and an Israeli woman was cut by glass, a spokesman for the West Bank military government said.

A CBS television film crew was roughed up by soldiers who wanted them to stop filming a demonstration at a Ramallah high school. A CBS spokesman said a cameraman was detained briefly but the film was kept intact.

An Israeli soldier muttered the Arabic word for "whore" as a Palestinian woman walked past. Young women at Ramallah's Teacher Training Institute, who had been building barricades and shouting slogans, said Israeli soldiers around an armored car lowered their trousers, apparently hoping to drive the women back into their classes.

Even some West Bank Arabs denounced as Israeli stooges by other Palestinians said they support the PLO. "They are our representatives," Mustafa Didin of Hebron said in a telephone interview.

Dudin was criticized by West Bank nationalists six months ago for heading an Israeli-backed council of Hebron-area villages seen as a possible starting point for the limited self-rule that Israel proposes for the Palestinians.

The 1.1 million Palestinians under Israeli occupation have become more radical as the peace process has crept forward. A mayor once regarded as a moderate, Elias Freij of Bethlehem, said, "If Carter is really seeking a just peace, why doesn't he talk to Yasser Arafat?"

The Israel-Egypt negotiations, said Freij, are aimed at a separate peace. "It will mean isolating Egypt from the rest of the Arab world, greater enmity toward the Americans, more confrontation between Arabs and Israelis in the West Bank — in other words, no peace."

Testimony Reveals Gory Details In Burglary Ring Murder Case

WEST CHESTER, Pa. (AP) — Testimony resumes Monday in an already week-long preliminary hearing for three brothers accused of murdering loose-tongued confederates involved in a burglary ring.

Testimony in the case against David, Bruce Sr. and Norman Johnston has come from their former associates, who have told in grisly detail of threats and six killings.

"One time ... Dave came over and he said Ricky Mitchell was a 'sicky' and I should be aware of him," James Griffin, a one-time pal of David Johnston, testified Saturday. "He said he saw Mitchell kill (James) Sampson." "Dave said Ricky Mitchell cut off Sampson's head with a Bowie knife, held it by the hair and spit in his face," Griffin said.

A lawyer asked: "Did Dave grab you by the hair?"

"Yes sir," replied Griffin. "And that scared the hell out of me."

The body of Sampson, 24, is believed buried deep in a sanitary landfill in this region along the Maryland state line. The body of his brother, Wayne Sampson, 18, and those of Duane Lincoln, 17, and James Johnston, 18, — Bruce Johnston Sr.'s stepson — were found in a common grave last December. They had been shot in the head.

The Johnston brothers and Mitchell, who is testifying for the prosecution in a plea bargaining arrangment, are accused of murdering the four men because they had "snitched" or were about to. They also are accused of killing Robin Miller, 15, who planned to marry Bruce Sr.'s son, Bruce Jr., 20.

In addition, Bruce Johnston Sr. and Leslie Dale are accused of killing Gary Crouch, of Elkton, Md., who police have described as an informant. Dale has also become a prosecution witness in a plea bargaining arrangement.

Bruce Johnston Jr. testified betore a federal grand jury about the supposed "clan of thieves" because he believed his girlfriend had been assaulted. Later, while sitting in a car with Miss Miller, he was shot eight times, but survived. Miss Miller, who "got in the way," died of a shot in the face.

Griffin, 27, testified that he had committed burglaries and armed robberies with the Johnstons — "everything except murder."

He said he fled to Florida after David Johnston "put his nine millimeter gun to my head and said, 'That's a hell of a feeling, isn't it?'"

Earlier, an admitted killer testified he was offered $8,000 to assassinate James Sampson, but got out of the deal.

"Bruce (Sr.) was trying to convince me that Jimmy was going to snitch on me and that I should get rid of him," Dale testified. "I played along with him in order to get some front money."

Dale said James Sampson was a friend, that they had worked on burglary jobs during 1977.

"He said he wanted to be a gangster," Dale said. "But the closest thing he got to that was to make an exit from this earth like one."

Upsets Highlight NCAA Tourney

By FRANK BROWN

Penn and St. John's, two unranked Eastern colleges, shocked two of the best in the Atlantic Coast Conference Sunday and gained the East regional semifinals of the NCAA basketball tournament.

Penn's Quakers, the Ivy League champions, got 25 points from Tony Price and ousted third-ranked North Carolina 72-71 in the first game of the East double-header at Raleigh, N.C.

Independent St. John's, which accepted an at-large bid to the nation's most prestigious tournament, followed the lead of their east coast neighbors and nipped sixth-ranked Duke in an 80-78 nail biter.

"I think the Ivy League — the so-called weak league — deserves some respect ... and we got it," said Price, whose led the Quakers to triumph in a weekend which saw eight ranked teams fall.

"We absolutely fear no one," said Penn Coach Bob Weinhauer. "Other people have to prepare for us and try to stop what we do best."

The next team in that position is 10th-ranked Syracuse, which trimmed Connecticut 89-81 Saturday and will meet the Quakers next Friday night in the East semifinal at Greensboro, N.C.

The other game on that twinbill will feature St. John's and unranked Rutgers, which toppled 11th-ranked Georgetown 64-58 Saturday.

Meanwhile Sunday, the top-rated Sycamores from Indiana State got 22 points and 13 rebounds from injured star Larry Bird to rout Virginia Tech 86-69 and gain a Midwest semifinal match against Oklahoma at Cincinnati Thursday night. Oklahoma shot better than 62 percent Saturday in blasting No. 15 Texas, 90-76.

Second-ranked UCLA got 18 points from David Greenwood, 12 of them in the second half, to nip stubborn Pepperdine 76-71 and move into a West semifinal against San Francisco. The 19th-ranked Dons downed Brigham Young 86-63 Saturday.

Michigan State, ranked No. 4, had no trouble at all with Lamar. The Spartans cruised to a 95-64 triumph behind 31 points from Greg Kelser and moving into the Mideast regional semifinal against Louisiana State at Indianapolis Friday night. The ninth-ranked Tigers humbled Appalachian State 71-57 Saturday.

The other Mideast semifinal pits fifth-ranked Notre Dame, a 73-67 victor over 20th-ranked Tennessee, against Toledo, which started the surprising weekend Saturday with a 74-72 upset of 14th-ranked Iowa.

In other Sunday games, seventh-ranked Arkansas beat Weber State 74-63 to move into the Midwest semi against No. 18 Louisville, and eighth-ranked DePaul downed Southern Cal 89-78, thus gaining the right to meet 12th-ranked Marquette Thursday night in the other West semifinal.

And Now.. The NIT

By The Associated Press

Next, please.

The college basketball weekend belonged to the NCAA tournament but now it's the National Invitation Tournament's turn to swing back into action. Having survived the first round of the 42nd NIT, a dozen college basketball teams move into the second round Monday night.

Six games are scheduled with unbeaten Alcorn State, 28-0, playing at Indiana, 19-12; Dayton, 19-9, at No. 16 Purdue, 24-7; Ohio State, 18-10, at Maryland, 19-10; Old Dominion, 22-6, at Clemson, 19-9; Virginia, 19-9 at Alabama, 20-10; and Texas AM, 23-8, at Nevada-Reno, 21-6.

Four of the winners advance to the tournament quarter-finals March 15 or 16 with two others, selected through a blind draw, zip directly into the semifinals scheduled for March 19 at New York's Madison Square Garden. The finals are set for March 21 at the Garden.

With Wagner, the only metropolitan area team named to the original field of 24 NIT clubs, eliminated the "home" team from the host Garden's point of view becomes Maryland, one of three Atlantic Coach Conference teams still alive. Not only are the Terrapins the closest survivor geographically to New York City, but also one of the team's key players is Albert King, a native of Brooklyn, N.Y.

The Terps will be at home in Maryland Monday night and the Aggies of Texas AM only wish they could say the same thing for themselves. After winning its tournament opener on the road in New Mexico, AM's reward was another road game, this time at Nevada-Reno.

"Reno will be our 20th road game," said Coach Shelby Metcalf. "They shouldn't be doing this to us."

The schedule hasn't seemed to bother the Aggies so far. They've prospered with it and have one of the tournament's flashiest records. There also is no shortage of confidence on the team.

Rynn Wright, the other Aggie forward, and also a sophomore, agreed.

Wright and Smith scored 23 points apiece for the Aggies in their 79-68 victory over New Mexico. Wright hit 10 of 11 from the field and Smith went 11-for-15. Freshman center Rudy Woods added 15 points including 5-for-7 from the field as AM's front line accounted for 61 points and hit a torrid 26 of 33 field goal tries.

Besides Maryland, the ACC teams still alive in the tournament are Clemson and Virginia. Three Big Ten teams, Ohio State, Indiana and Purdue, also survived the first round intact. Of the other NIT teams, Alabama comes from the Southeast Conference, Nevada-Reno is from the West Coast Athletic Conference, Texas AM comes from the Southwest Conference, Alcorn State is from the Southwestern Athletic Conference. Dayton and Old Dominion are independents.

Nelson Wins First Title At Inverrary

LAUDERHILL, Fla. (AP) — Larry Nelson, undisturbed by gusty winds, protected his lead with a front-running 71 and scored the first victory of his pro career by a comfortable 3 strokes Sunday in the Inverrary Golf Classic.

It took the late-starting Nelson six years to achieve his initial pro title, but when it came, it came with relative ease.

The slightly-built Nelson, a one-time illustrator who didn't take up golf until age 21, started the windy final round with a 4-stroke advantage and led by that margin or more most of the way. Birdies on the eighth and ninth holes gave him a 6-shot lead at the turn. From that point on, it was a matter of avoiding a major disaster.

Nelson, 31, claimed the $54,000 first prize and a spot in the Masters and Tournament of Champions with a 72-hole total of 274, 14 shots under par on the windraked, 7,127-yard Inverrary Country Club course.

Jack Nicklaus, who had won three consecutive times on this course, failed badly this time. He shot a closing 75 and finished the tournament at 294, 6 over par. The poor performance prompted him to enter next week's Doral Open, which he had planned to skip. "My game needs more work," he said.

Nicklaus won this tournament last year on a closing string of 5 consecutive birdies that lifted him over stunned Grier Jones. Jones finished second again. But this time he was closing the gap.

Lee Elder and Tommy Aaron were next at 281. Elder shot a 70 and Aaron, a former Masters champ who is fighting his way out of a protracted slump, matched par 72.

They were followed by Ray Floyd, 74-282, and U.S. Open champ Andy North, 72-283.

Nelson's victory continued a trend this season in which new faces are moving into dominant positions on the tour. In nine tournaments this year, one-third of them have been won by men scoring their first pro victories. Fuzzy Zoeller and Bob Byman are the others.

Nelson's story, however, is more unusual than theirs. Despite his small size, he played baseball and basketball as a teenager and had some aspirations to become a professional baseball player.

"I think I could have been a major league second baseman," the soft-spoken Nelson said and smiled. "But what I thought and what the scouts thought was something else."

He attended Kennesaw (Ga.) Junior College on a basketball scholarship and later went to work as an illustrator for an aircraft manufacturer.

It was at that time, when he was 21,

Lopez Nabs First Win In '79

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Nancy Lopez sank a 10-foot birdie putt on the 18th green to give her a one-stroke victory in $100,000 Sunstar Classic Sunday, her first Ladies Professional Golf Association triumph of 1979.

Lopez, who won nine LPGA tournaments last year and earned a record $189,814, finished the final round with 69 to defeat third-round leader Hollis Stacy by one stroke.

The 22-year-old Lopez finished with a 72-hole total of 280, 8-under par over the 6,268-yard par-72 Rancho Park Golf Course. She shot earlier rounds of 70, 71 and 70.

Stacy, who missed an 18-foot putt for a birdie on the par-4 18th hole in a bid to force a playoff, carded a 72 in the final round for a 281 total.

Lopez started the day two strokes behind Stacy but caught her with birdies on the eighth and ninth holes, both par 5s. Stacy went ahead with a birdie on No. 10, fell even with a bogey on 11, went ahead again with a birdie on 14 but then bogeyed 15. Lopez had eight pars on the final nine before finishing with a birdie.

The victory was worth $15,000 for Lopez, who also won this tournament last year. She has played in just three of the four LPGA tournaments this year but is first on the money-list with $27,300.

Susie Berning and Peggy Conley tied for third with 283 totals. Berning had a 71 Sunday, Conley a 69.

Next at 284 were Laura Baugh and Pat Bradley, both of whom finished with 71s.

Lopez now has 10 victories and six seond-place finishes in the 36 tournaments she has played since turning professional in July 1977. The first thing she did following an award ceremony after Sunday's victory was telephone her husband, LTim Melton, a sportscaster in Harrisburg, Pa.

"I dedicated this to you and daddy since your birthdays are so close," Lopez told her husband, whom she married on Jan. 6, also her 22nd birthday. "I felt like I worked my tail off out there today. I played well, real steady. I didn't slop it around.

After the conversation, Lopez told reporters she was pleased with her consistency in Sunday's final round, which was played under nearly ideal weather.

"I knew the back side would be the key," said Lopez. "I made just one bogey all day."

Lopez will take a week off, missing this week's LPGA tournament near San Diego. She'll return to the tour to play in the Sahara National P.o-Am in Las Vegas, Nev., March 22-25.

Stacy had three birdies and three bogeys in her final round. She had either held or shared the lead following her 66 Friday until the tournament's final hole.

"The par-3s got me in trouble," Stacy said. "When you're playing head-to-head with Nancy, you have to play damn good golf."

One of the keys to Lopez's victory was her play on the par-5 holes, where she had a total of 10 birdies and 6 pars in the tournament.

Sparky (The Reporter) Talks To Reds

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Former Cincinnati Manager Spary Anderson was back in the Reds' spring training camp Sunday, but this time as a television sports interviewer talking with his former players and his successor, John McNamara.

"I want to wish you the best of luck," Anderson told McNamara during their filmed conversation. Later, Sparky said he and McNamara have been friends for several years, and although he was fired from the Reds' job last November, he was happy that it was McNamara who replaced him.

"He's a very nice person and we've been friends for a long time," Sparky said of McNamara. "If (a ballplayer) can't play for John McNamara, he can't play for anybody."

Sparky said he had some reservations about visiting the Reds' camp, one of nearly a dozen where he's filming interviews this month.

"I was very nervous this morning — more excited than nervous, really. I woke up about quarter to four, which is early for me," Sparky said. "My guys (camera crew) said, 'We'd better give him something to slow him down.' They were taking their time getting ready, but I was all set to go."

"I'm glad for both me and Mac that we did it," Sparky said. He was careful not to upstage McNamara by showing up at the Reds' game Sunday, which they lost 6-1 to Pittsburgh.

"I would never go over to the stadium with those fans," Sparky explained. "It's not right for me to be there."

After the two had finished the interview, Sparky put his arm around McNamara's shoulder and took him aside for a private conversation. Then he went into a lengthy closed-door meeting with Reds' President Dick Wagner, the man who fired him.

Sparky's reports from training camps are being shown three times a day on a Los Angeles television station where "management loves them and I assume the public does," the series producer said.

"I don't ask any tough questions," Sparky said, explaining how he gets players to talk so readily. "I learned when I was on the other end not to ask stupid questions."

Anderson, who managed the Reds for nine years, is still collecting a paycheck from Cincinnati this season. He said he enjoys doing television work and making public appearances, but he fully intends to be managing again by next season.

The most recent speculation concerns the New York Yankees, where former manager Billy Martin is said to be having trouble again with owner George Steinbrenner. But Anderson has said the Yankees have not contacted him about the field manager's job that will open up after this season when Bob Lemon steps up to the front office.

How long will Sparky's television career last?

"I hope just '79," he said without hesitation.

Villanova Mentor Pleased With Victory

DETROIT (AP) — During his 45 years as Villanova's track and field coach, Jumbo Jim Elliott has experienced the joy of victory and the agony of defeat.

Saturday was a time of joy ... unexpected joy.

He did not expect his Wildcats to dethrone Texas-El Paso as team titleholders in the NCAA Championships. But they did.

And they did it exactly the way they had lost last year's championship — with the help of a disqualification.

"I really thought that UTEP would win the meet by 15 or 20 points conservatively," the venerable Elliott said with some exaggeration. "I really felt they were that good."

No one else, particularly the Villanova runners, felt that way. Prior to the meet, which began Friday, it was expected to be a close battle between Villanova and Texas-El Paso — and that's the way it wound up.

The Wildcats, on the strength of victories by Don Paige in the 1,000, Anthony Tufariello in the 600 and in the dramatic final race, the mile relay, accumulated 52 points, one point more than the Miners.

Texas-El Paso, which led Villanova 27-2 after Friday's opening program, lost the meet in the two-mile relay when its team was disqualified after Jan Boogman, the No. 3 runner, was charged with knocking down Notre Dame's Chuck Aragon.

The Miners went on to finish second in the race, but lost the eight points awarded to a runner-up when meet officials ruled that Boogman was guilty of the infraction.

"I couldn't see (what happened) from where I was," said Texas-El Paso Coach Ted Banks. "My runner almost went off the track and we probably wouldn't have won the race. He (Boogman) said someone hit him from behind."

The incident brought back memories of last year's NCAA indoor championships, when Villanova was disqualified during the heat of a mile relay for an improper exchange. The Wildcats had been favored in the race — and the 10 points they didn't get cost them the title. They finished third, nine points behind Texas-El Paso's winning total of 44.

Did Elliott think this victory was tainted?

"You've got to say it was, but how many championships did we lose on disqualifications — five? I can think of three in the last four years — all in relays."

"Sometimes you feel you'r getting the shaft and that's the case this time," lamented Banks. "It's been a bad two days. I'm disappointed."

Then he added, "I know deep down we're the best team and I guess that's what really counts."

Whether he had the best team was debatable, but there was no question that he had the best athlete — distance runner Suleiman Nyambui.

The 25-year-old Tanzanian, a freshman, became the third runner in the meet's 15-year history to win the mile and the two-mile in the same year. The others were Jim Ryun of Kansas in 1968 and Marty Liquori of Villanova in 1971.

Nyambui took the two-mile in a leisurely 8:37.87, then about an hour later won the mile in 3:57.89, breaking the meet record of 3:58.6, set by Ryun in 1967.

"I didn't get a real challenge in the two-mile, so I feel good when I come back and run the mile," said the soft-spoken Nyambui.

Paige was timed in 2:07.27 in the 1,000, clipping two-hundredths off the old mark set in 1976 by his former teammate, Mark Belger, in winning for the second straight year. And Nehemiah took his second straight 60-yard hurdles title in 6.90 seconds, four-hundredths faster than the record he set in Friday night's quarter-finals and only one-hundredths off his world indoor best, which he ran earlier this year.

Texas AM football star Curtis Dickey also won his second straight NCAA indoor title, capturing the 60-yard dash in 6.15 — his exact clocking of a year ago.

The biggest surprise, however, was Tufariello's triumph in the 600 in 1:09.41.

"I had a cold for the past couple of days, and I knew I had to run a lot harder because of that," he said. "The past two nights I stayed up late and it was hard to breath."

Other winners Saturday were Geoffrey Stiles of Harvard in the pole vault at 17 feet, 3 inches, Jim Pringle of Florida in the high jump at 7-2¾, Nebraska in the two-mile relay in 7:31.3 and Tennessee in the distance medley relay in 9:47.1.

The most important victory, however, was Villanova's in the mile relay. They needed it to edge Texas-El Paso for the team title, and they got it when Keith Brown, Derrek Harbour, Tufariello and Tim Dale were timed in 3:15.52.

Redmen Wanted And Got Instant Replay

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — St. John's forward Rudy Wright says the Redmen's 80-78 upset Sunday of sixth-ranked Duke in the NCAA East Regional was a rematch he had wanted for a long time.

"We played them earlier and they were talking consolation and that they weren't up for it," Wright said. "I'm glad we got another chance."

St. John's shocked the Blue Devils, then ranked No. 1, 69-66 in the consolation game of the Holiday Festival tournament at Madison Square Garden in December.

Center Wayne McKoy, who scored 18 points in Sunday's contest, said he was surprised that Duke's 6-foot-11 center, Mike Gminski, gave him opportunities for several jump shots.

"If he was going to give them to me, I was going to take them," McKoy said.

Duke Coach Bill Foster said after the game that Gminski played with a stomach virus.

McKoy, who was benched with three fouls early in the first half, said he played more intelligently, but not any less agressively.

"I felt kind of low," McKoy said of his foul situation. "I said to myself 'if I can just get a chance to come back I'm going to.'" He said Duke was rattled by St. John's changing defense.

"They weren't ready for it," he said. "The half-court zone really threw them."

St. John's Coach Lou Carnesecca said the Redmen weren't intimidated by Duke's national rank.

Duke tried a futile last-gasp play on an inbounds pass, and Gminski's half-court jump shot bounced off the rim, the glass and then over the side.

"I felt a little dagger prick my skin," Carnesecca said. "But it didn't go in."

Foster said the last play was a good effort, but it wasn't exactly what he had planned.

"I thought that we would get the ball a little lower — between the half court and the top of the circle," Foster said.

Convict Wants Bout

WOODBRIDGE, N.J. (AP) — Light-heavyweight James Scott passed his day of reckoning as a professional fighter this weekend and now has set his sights on a championship match.

"I want Mike Rossman," Scott bellowed through the halls of Rahway State Prison Saturday after he stopped Richie Kates in a nationally televised bout at 1:32 of the 10th and last round.

"I am the Joe Frazier and Muhammad Ali of the light-heavyweight division," said the 31-year-old Scott. "Kates has had two title shots and it's guys like him that keep guys like me from getting a title shot."

Scott, however, is not operating under ordinary circumstances. The 176-pound fighter is a maximum security inmate at Rahway and is not allowed off the prison grounds.

Eddie Gregory risked his No. 1 ranking to come to Rahway to fight Scott last fall and lost. The boxing ring at Rahway is located in a small auditorium and Scott has a definite home court advantage fighting there.

Murad Muhammad, the promoter who has backed Scott's ring comeback following his return to prison in 1975 as a parole violator, claims a title shot for Scott is near.

"Bob Arum (Top Rank promoter) told me if Scott beats Lopez he can have Rossman, but not inside the auditorium," Muhammad said. "Fine, we'll take the fight outside into the courtyard, which is still on the prison grounds."

Scott showed a lot of courage in defeating Kates. A cut atop his bald head, suffered in training a month ago, was reopened by what he called "a butt by Kates," in the second round. The blood poured steadily from Scott's head down his face during fight.

"It's an impossible cut to close, there's no tissue there, it's all skin and bones," he said. "The blood didn't get into his eyes, that's what eyebrows and eyelids are for. It takes an awful lot of bleeding to get in the eye.

Kates, who fought and was beaten twice by former champion Victor Galindez, says Scott still needs to improve.

"He needs to work more on his defense," said Kates, whose career record dropped to 34-5. "He's not the best I fought, Galindez was. But he's a determined fighter."

Former Football Great Dies Of Apparent Heart Attack

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — A University of Tennessee great and one of the nation's all-time athletes, Beattie Feathers, is dead after a brief illness. Feathers had suffered an apparent heart attack Thursday and was admitted to a Winston-Salem hospital where he died Saturday night. He was 69.

The legendary running back, a member of the national Football Hall of Fame, was an All-America at Tennessee from 1931 to 1933. He was named to the All-Southeastern Conference team twice and was the conference player of the year in 1933.

Feathers, who held head football coaching posts at North Carolina State University and Appalachian State University, played professional football for the Chicago Bears from 1934 to 1937 and was an all-pro player his rookie year.

He was the NFL's leading ground gainer in 1934 with 1,052 yards for a rushing average of 9.8 yards per carry, a record that still stands. He also played pro baseball for the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1938-39. He finished his football playing career with the Green Bay Packers in 1940.

In 1941, Feathers became assistant football coach and head baseball coach at Appalachian State University, and the following year he was named head football coach.

In 1943, he became assistant football coach at N. C. State and assumed the head coaching positions for football and baseball in 1944, posts he held for nine seasons while compiling a football record of 36 victories, 38 losses and three ties.

His 1946 football team won eight and lost two, dropping a 34-13 decision to Oklahoma in the Gator Bowl.

After leaving N. C. State, Feathers became an assistant football coach at Texas Tech, where he served for six years. Returning to North Carolina, he became head freshman football coach at Wake Forest in 1961 and was named an assistant on the varsity staff in 1964.

He was baseball coach at Wake Forest in 1972, a post a held until 1976.

He is survived by his wife, Inez, and three daughters.

Bennett Takes Decathalon

PORTALES (Special)—Jeff Bennett, a 30 year old former Olympic performer from Oklahoma City, set a new meet record scoring 7,003 points to capture the U.S. Track and Field Southwest Decathalon Championship here Sunday.

Bennet, who finished fourth in the Munich Olympics, set a new meet record in the pole vault with a leap of 15-6. Nine athletes competed in the event, including Texas Tech's David Wood.

Wood finished fourth with a score of 6,018 points.

South Plains Teams Dominate Girls Meet

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — They didn't invent girls' basketball in the Texas Panhandle or South Plains, but three teams from those areas played like it at the state tournament.

Nazareth, Hale Center and Slaton captured championships in Class B, A and 2A over the weekend, and when they weren't playing, they were cheering for each other.

Georgetown, playing before what was, in effect, a large hometown crowd, upset Sweeny, 51-49, for the 3A title, and Victoria stunned Dallas South Oak Cliff, 43-41, for the 4A crown.

The championships were historic in that they were the first in the 29-year history of the tournament by five-player teams. Girls' teams had six players who played half-court games of defense and offense until this season.

South Oak Cliff, champions in 1977 and 1978, had a 43-0 record this season, including a 11-point victory over Victoria, and had won 65 in a row since last year.

"I'd say the Man upstairs definitely had to be with us," commented Coach Jan Lohodny, who used large cards to flash signals to her team from the bench.

"About the middle of district, we were nowhere near a state caliber team," she said, "but the girls put their nose to the grindstone. It's the old American dream. The harder you work, the more successful you are."

Joe's Nazareth team pulled away from Weatherford Brock, 46-43, on sophomore Lori Gerber's three-foot jump shot and two free throws late in the fourth quarter for the B championship. Bab's Hale Center team scorched Bogata Rivercrest with 18 unanswered points in the second quarter for an easy 46-29 title victory in Class A.

It was the third consecutive title for Nazareth, which has had a different coach each year — another firstin girls' basketball.

"We had dreamed of two state titles as long ago as last September," said Babs. "I guess one thing we have to do next year is beat Nazareth." Nazareth won this season, 33-32.

Slaton captured its second straight 2A championship by whipping Pflugerville, 68-54, although Pflugerville's 6-foot-2 Karen Thompson popped in 42 points. A devastating defensive press that forced 32 turnovers was the key to Slaton's victory.

Sweeny missed a three throw opportunity and two follow shots as the buzzer sounded as Georgetown escaped with its first 3A title before the largest crowd of the tournament — 5,280.

"We were lucky at the end," said Coach Tanya Toles.

Hoosiers Meet Unheralded Alcorn

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Indiana University is coming off the best shooting performance in the school's history, and the Hoosiers' chief marksman, junior Mike Woodson, is looking forward to Monday night's second-round National Invitational tournament matchup against unbeaten Alcorn State.

"We're hungry," the 6-foot-5 forward said. "We have something to prove to everyone and to ourselves."

A mid-season slump knocked the Hoosiers out of contention for the Big Ten Conference championship, but a fast finish gave them an 18-12 record and their second NIT bid under Coach Bobby Knight.

Indiana added another victory last Thursday in a 78-59 romp over Texas Tech in the first round of the tournament. In that game, Woodson hit 11 of 14 field goal attempts and finished with 30 points, and as a team the Hoosiers shot a record 71 percent from the field.

Center Ray Tolbert hit eight of 10 and had 18 points, and guard Butch Carter canned four of seven and added 11 points.

"We're lucky to be here," Carter said of the Hoosiers' post-season tourney appearance. "They could have overlooked us."

But, despite the near flawless performance against Texas Tech, Carter said, "We can play better."

That would be bad news for Alcorn State, which barely got by Mississippi State 80-78 Thursday night to remain one of only two unbeaten major college teams.

Alcorn, a predominantly black school in Lorman, Miss., got a basket by Larry Smith just ahead of the buzzer to raise its record to 28-0 and earn the second-round spot at Indiana's Assembly Hall.

"This game has a special meaning for a lot of small schools, not just black colleges, but all small schools," said Alcorn coach Dave Whitney.

Foyt Wins At Aggieland

A frustrating series of spinouts and mechanical problems resulted in 39 laps being run under eight separate yellow flags. Only 14 cars in the 34-car field were still running at the end of the race.

Foyt, the defending USAC stock car champion, finished 2.6 seconds ahead of runner-up Freddy Fryar of Beaumont, Texas. Bay Darnell, Deerfield, Ill., was third.

Gary Bowsher, Springfield, Ohio, finished third in the race but was penalized one lap for dragging a gas can onto the track with the spout stuck in his gas tank. The penalty dropped Bowsher to a fourth place finish.

Wachs crashed through a concrete retaining wall and flipped down a 15-foot embankment near a tunnel entrance. Wachs was not seriously hurt, but went to a hospital for observation.

Foyt, the defending Aggieland 250 champion, led for 40 of the first 41 laps of the race in a 2-car duel with Terry Ryan, Davenport, Iowa. But Ryan fell one lap down when he was slow leaving the pit and Foyt took sole control of the race.

"Anytime that you get down like I did, you're lucky," Foyt said, referring to the 42nd lap, when he went down one lap to Bonnett. "I couldn't seem to catch the yellow flags right.

"But it was a great way to start out the year, especially in your home town."

It is estimated that in an average lifetime a person walks 70,000 miles, nearly three times the distance around the world.

Yarborough Captures Richmond

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Cale Yarborough gunned his Oldsmobile past Bobby Allison into the lead on the 225th lap Sunday and slowly pulled away to win the Richmond 400 Grand National stock car race at Fairgrounds Raceway.

Yarborough, who started from the ninth position, picked up $12,825 for his first victory on the Grand National circuit this season, increasing his earnings in four races to $67,595.

His average speed was 83.608 mph. The track, slick from morning rains, slowed the speed of the race, but there were only two caution flags when Dale Earnhardt spun into the rail on the first lap and when Baxter Price spun into the infield on the 215th lap.

Allison, who started on the pole, had led the race for the first 156 laps and, after a pit stop, picked up the lead on the 161st lap and held it until Yarborough sneaked past him on the inside to go in front for good.

Yarborough and Donnie Allison, involved in much publicized crashes at the Feb. 18 Daytona 500 and last week at the Carolina 500, barely kissed bumpers in this race despite the close quartering on the half-mile local oval.

Yarborough passed Donnie Allison three times without incident and once it appeared Donnie let off to allow Yarborough's faster car go by him on the outside of a turn.

Bobby Allison won $6,150 for his second-place finish in a Thunderbird, Darrell Waltrip was third in a Chevrolet, followed by outside pole-winner Benny Parsons in a Chevrolet and Richard Petty, also in a Chevrolet.

"I wanted to make sure everything went right today. I've had too much of the other stuff (feud with the Allisons). I just took my time," Yarborough said.

He said his car sustained only one scratch, "and Darrell (Waltrip) put it in with just three laps to go. I think everybody drove cautiously."

Asked why he felt the race was so clean, Yarborough said "I don't know. It was just one of those races."

Yarborough also disclosed that he and Donnie Allison met Saturday to talk about their differences.

"We talked about what friends we've been in the past and that we want to be friends again. We talked about bird-hunting and coon-hunting."

Yarborough said they met for about half an hour and shook hands during the course of the session.

Yarborough said he felt Donnie let off several times Sunday to allow his (Yarborough's) faster car to get by.

Turnbull Whips Wade

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Fourth-seeded Wendy Turnbull, a fleet-footed Australian, won her second tournament of the season Sunday by scoring a 5-7, 6-3, 6-2 triumph over sixth-seeded Virginia Wade of Britain in the final of the $125,000 Women's pro tennis championships.

The court action ended on the second match point when Miss Turnbull's strong drive was volleyed into the net by Miss Wade's forehand. Miss Wade had saved the first match point with a shot to Miss Turnbull's feet that the Australian lowvolleyed into the net.

Miss Turnbull, winner of the Detroit tournament a few weeks ago, picked up the $24,000 first prize, bringing her prize money for the season to $81,175. Miss Wade, who took the $12,000 second-prize, now has earned $55,225.

Miss Wade, 1977 Wimbledon champion, played the match scarcely 12 hours after combining with Renee Richards and winning a semi-final round of three-set doubles.

Miss Wade recovered to win the first set after she was down by 4-1 and had two set points against her at 5-4. She escaped both set points by smashing two successful overheads. She followed them with a service ace and won the game with low backhand volleying and recovery shots when Miss Turnbull tried to trap her with lobs.

In the third-place playoff game, Sue Barker of England beat Rosie Casals by 6-3 in a one-set match.

Miss Barker, who won $6,700 for her finish, won the first two games, breaking through Miss Casals' service in the second game at love. She won the match from 5-3 by serving a love game, with Miss Casals, who received $6,000, losing with two successive returns over the baseline.

Weaver Mad At Sick Ump

MIAMI (AP) — Manager Earl Weaver of the Baltimore Orioles says if he has anything to do with it, umpire Ron Luciano never will work another Baltimore game.

"He's sick," Weaver said Sunday. "With his actions and his remarks, he has proven that he would have a hard time not being prejudiced.

"On a close call, he could hurt us. We're requesting Lee MacPhail (American League president) to keep him off our schedule."

The umpire reopened old wounds recently in a speech at Rochester, N.Y., at which he reportedly said:

"I hate Earl Weaver with a passion. I met Weaver in my second year in baseball. I threw him out that first night and three nights after that. Our relationship has gone downhill ever since. He's about 3-foot-1. I tell him to get his nose off my kneecap. I call him Mickey Rooney."

Weaver said bad blood existed ever since Luciano threw him out of a game three years ago in Anaheim and the umpire was forced to make a public apology.

"He didn't work another Baltimore game the rest of the season," the Baltimore manager added. "I would suggest that the league prescribe medical help. Luciano stumbles and almost falls sometimes. Once I saw him show up late at second base with a Coke in his hand.

"We send ball players to doctors with sprains and aches. Why not treat umpires when they don't perform properly?"

U.S. Netters Crush Aussies

NEW HAVEN (AP) — Dick Stockton and Stan Smith completed U.S. domination of Australia Sunday in the World Cup tennis competition, posting a 7-6, 6-1 triumph over Geoff Masters and Allan Stone.

Earlier in the day, Brian Gottfried defeated John Alexander 6-2, 6-4.

The U.S. team won every match in the best-of-seven series and did not yield a set to the Aussies. The 1979 victory evens the series between the two nations at 5-5.

The MVP award of the tourney went to Arthur Ashe, who won his two matches handily. Ashe also won the award in 1976.

The U.S. team has now won four World Cups in a row. The event's format was changed for this year, placing more emphasis on doubles in the hope of lessening American domination.

Hobbs Nips Clovis 105-102

CLOVIS (Special)–The Hobbs Eagles jumped out to an early lead here Saturday night and then fought of a late rally by to Clovis to take a 105-102 victory in the regular season finale.

However both teams are headed for the state tourney in Las Cruces later this week. Clovis will meet Albuqurque Sandia at 3:30 p.m. Thursday and Hobbs will face Mayfield at 7. All games will be played at the PamAm Center.

The loss broke the Wildcats undefeated streak at 25, but Clovis' 25-1 record is still the best in the state meet. Hobbs, which avenged two earlier season losses to Clovis, takes a 21-4 slate to the tourney.

Hobbs led by as much as 15 points in the early going and commanded a 57-47 lead at the intermission. But the Cats came back to tie it up midway through the final period before Hobbs could finally pull it out.

The Eagles had five players score in double figures and were led by Wallace Williams (18) and Mike Smith (17). Nelson France, led all scorers with 31 points and Bubba Jennings added 24 for Clovis.

Chaps Crush Jarvis

In back-to-back innings the Lubbock Christian College batters really hauled out the lumber and the result were two LCC victories in games shortened by the 10-run rule. The Chaps won the first one 14-4 in the fifth inning and took the nightcap 20-3.

Bobby Doe and Steve Brigante lashed homers to key a nine run fifth inning in the opener and then Tim Leslie and Brigante hit a couple of more round-trippers in the first frame of the second game to pace an 11 run explosion. The wins lift the Chaps to 11-2 for the season while Jarvis fell to 3-10.

that his wife gave him a set of golf clubs as a present. He started hitting balls during his lunch break, found he had a natural talent at it and went to work as an assistant pro.

He joined the tour six years ago, has shown steady improvement and now is a member of the PGA Tour's Policy Board.

Nelson had to scramble off the front nine. He made three bogeys, but everyone else was having their troubles in the 20-mile-per hour winds, too, and his lead was never lower than four shots.

Birdies on the eighth and ninth lifted him to six shots and, at that point, only Jones had him in sight.

Nelson had a 4-stroke lead, but missed the green on that hole. He chipped to about six feet and watched while Jones ran in a birdie putt that cut his margin to 3. He had the 6-footer to preserve it.

The Quakers, 23-5, pulled ahead for good at 55-50 with nine minutes remaining and survived a North Carolina rally which pulled the Tar Heels within 66-65 with 1:26 to play.

Penn's James Salters added a three-point play for a 69-65 lead. Then, after North Carolina's Dave Colescott sank a 25-foot shot, Ken Hall made two free throws and Salters one for insurance.

"I felt we could win," said Coach Dean Smith of the Tar Heels, 23-6, who played without injured starters forward Kenny Dennard and guard Bob Bender. "We still had a chance at the end, except they sank their foul shots."

And Reggie Carter made his shot with six seconds remaining to give upstart St. John's its upset triumph.

"The thing I like best about a short tournament like this is, every team has a chance," said Coach Lou Carnesecca of the Redmen, 20-10, before the game. Then St. John's proved it, though a 45-foot heave by Duke's Mike Gminski bounced off the rim at the buzzer.

Gminski, in and out of the contest because of a stomach virus, had 16 points, as did teammate Jim Spanarkle. Gene Banks led the Tar Heels with 24, including eight of their last 10 points.

But Duke suffered its second tournament loss of the season to St. John's, which upended them 69-66 in the ECAC Holiday Festival consolation game at Madison Square Garden.

Unbeaten Indiana State scored 20 consecutive points in a 6:26 span of the first half and breezed to its 30th triumph this season. Carl Nicks added 22 points to the total of Bird, the 6-foot-9 star who played with his broken left thumb tightly bandaged.

"I knew he was okay because he didn't protect it (the injury) at all and he didn't shy away from the ball except on one pass," said Indiana State's rookie coach, Bill Hodges.

UCLA, 24-4, recovered from a 38-36 halftime deficit with a 20-6 spurt early in the second half and shrugged off a late spurt by Pepperdine to move into the West semifinal.

The Waves, who got 27 points from guard Ricardo Brown, pulled to within three points with nine seconds remaining. But Brad Holland made two free throws to end Pepperdine's season at 22-10.

Pepperdine deserves a tremendous amount of credit," said Coach Gary Cunningham of UCLA, whose campus is just 15 miles from Pepperdine's. "They are an oustanding team, but they do not get the publicity that we do."

Michigan State, the Big Ten champion, got double-figure scoring from five players and raced to a 48-27 halftime lead in improving its record to 22-6. Lamar, the little known Southland Conference champion, got 11 points from Clarence Kea, who scored 33 points Friday against Detroit.

Kelly Tripucka scored 21 points and helped Notre Dame, 23-5, unlock a 32-all halftime tie with a 14-4 burst just after intermission. Tennessee, 21-12, the Southeastern Conference champions, came no closer than five points after the second-half Irish rampage.

Lack of concentration cost the Volunteers, said Coach Don DeVoe. "This is the poorest game of the year for us in terms of concentration," he said.

Arkansas, 24-4, concentrated on getting the ball to Sidney Moncrief, who tallied 19 points and raised his career total to 2,009 in becoming the first player in school history to pass that barrier.

"I'm not out to score points," said Moncrief. "I'm just out to win a national championship and I'll do whatever I have to do."

The weekend began with eight games Friday. St. John's gained its meeting with Duke by beating 13th-ranked Temple 75-70. Penn bested Iona 73-69 on the way to its battle with North Carolina. Lamar downed No. 17 Detroit 95-87, Southern Cal downed Utah State 86-67, Pepperdine scored a 92-88 overtime triumph over Utah, Weber State topped New Mexico State 81-78 in overtime and Virginia Tech pasted Jacksonville 70-53.

CHS '9' Host Big Spring

Coronado will be riding a 3-game winning streak today when the Mustangs host Big Spring in a nondistrict baseball game at the Chaparral Field. The action is slated to begin at 4 p.m.

The Mustangs will enter the game with a 5-2 record, including a doubleheder sweep of the Hobbs Eagles Saturday afternoon. Coronado won the first game 9-3, and then took the second contest 20-6.

"I don't think that playing at Chaparral Field is much of an advantage to us," said Coronado coach John Dudley. "Since we haven't practiced very much on that field, it's going to be like playing on the road."

Other Mustang starters will be Allen Harp (Soph) at catcher, Jim Wells (Sr.) will be the first baseman, Donald Ewing (Soph) will be at second, Gene Segrest (Sr) will be the shortstop, with Bryan Brock (Soph) at third. The outfield will consist of Donny Arterburn (Sr.) in left, Robert Ledbetter (Sr) in centerfield, and Kelly Howell (Sr) in right. Ted Crass (Sr.) will be the designated hitter for Howell.

Wells, who went 7-8 in the twinbill with Hobbs, continues to lead the Mustangs in batting. The 6-1 first baseman sports a .615 average.

"Gene is hitting everything that comes up there," said Dudley. "You can see his confidence everytime he stands up at the plate."

Dudley admits that he doesn't know that much about Big Spring. In fact, when it comes right down to it, the Mustang baseball coach doesn't have any idea of what Big Spring plans to try.

"All I know is that they have won a tournament down in El Paso this year," said Dudley. "That and Monterey has played them this year."

However, Dudley will probably have more to say about them after today's contest.

Boy Producer Gets Two Shows On Boards, Lawsuit Pending

NEW YORK (AP) — Would you give a teen-ager $10,000 to produce a show? No? Then how about $125,000 for another show? Such actually happened to David Silberg, 19, for two off-Broadway shows.

"My ambition was to be on Broadway by the time I'm 20," grinned the apprentice mogul, who turns 20 on March 26. "It doesn't look like I'll make it, now. But that's okay. I like producing."

Silberg, who thinks he should have produced their show there, too, says he's filed a suit against them, alleging breach of contract. Their barrister, Monte Morris, says the suit is pending.

week summer show last year with two unknowns, the comedy team of Monteith and Rand. They've since gone on to click

Two shows and a lawsuit. Quite a start for a kid whose family isn't in show biz, whose only other credits are office work for Arthur Cantor, a producer, and driving a cab after dropping out of college.

"I always wanted to produce," Silberg said, explaining that he got hooked on theater as as kid, when his grandmother took him to see "Hello, Dolly." "I was just driving a cab to survive."

OK, he had the desire. But the way he made his dream come true sounds almost too simple. While cab-driving, he said, "I always kept an ear open, read all the columns, the reviews, and went to shows.

"Then I got turned on to Monteith and Rand. I found them doing the opening act for Holly Woodlawn, the famous drag queen, at Reno Sweeney." He had reference to a showcase club here.

The next step, he said, was to scrape up $10,000 from five backers, family friends, then present himself to Monteith and Rand's manager, Mal Braverman, and start talking. It led to his first show.

Silberg was mighty convincing, Braveman said, "and his age didn't enter into it. He seemed quite competent. So we negotiated a price and it was accepted. That's how it worked out."

It wasn't that much of a risk, he added. The project "was virgin territory for all of us" and the show was simple to produce.

"Sterling Silver" isn't simple. It has five players, four musicians and costs $125,000. Silberg says the money comes from 15 backers, many of them investors in his debut as a boy producer.

He concedes his youth was a hassle — but not in contract matters — until his first show clicked: "It established me as a producer. Not only was it critically successful, it made it financially. And as long as you can make money, you can be 10 years old.

"My backers didn't give me carte blanche and say, 'OK, David, play around.' They wanted to make money. And they did."

Alfred Hitchcock Fete Televised Tonight

NEW YORK (AP) — The man who put Cary Grant on Mt. Rushmore, Tallulah Bankhead in a lifeboat, James Stewart in a rear window and Janet Leigh in a shower has finally been put where he belongs — in the movie industry's own Hall of Fame.

Alfred Hitchcock, the British-born master of murder and mayhem, is this year's recipient of the American Film Institute's Life Achievement Award. The award was presented at a Hollywood dinner last week and is the basis for a 90-minute program on CBS tonight starting at 8:30 on Channel 13.

The 79-year-old director, who has lost none of the rounded profile that endeared him to television audiences during the 1950s and '60s, accepted the award in typically wry fashion.

He said it was "meaningful because it comes from my fellow dealers in celluloid."

"After all, when a man is found guilty of murder and condemned to death, it always makes him feel much better to know it was done by a jury of his friends and neighbors ... with the help of an inadequate attorney."

AFI Director George Stevens Jr., who produced the TV show, promised a "real banquet of film clips," and said, "We kept the speeches short in line with Hitchcock's dictum that pictures should not be photographs of people talking."

Hitchcock is the seventh recipient of the award, and the first who did a large part of his work in films outside the United States. He directed such classics as "The Lady Vanishes" and "The 39 Steps" in England before coming to the United States, where his first effort was "Rebecca" in 1940.

Ironically, that movie won the Academy Award as Best Picture, but Hitchcock, now about to start production on his 54th movie, has never won a directing Oscar. Until recent years, when he was championed by intellectuals like French director Francois Truffaut, many regarded him as just a popular entertainer with nothing serious to say.

"That's like saying that Edgar Allen Poe is not an artist," said Stevens in a telephone interview. "When someone creates work that continually engages the interest and imagination of people, there has to be something to it."

Stevens goes so far as to rank Hitchcock with the very greatest directors.

"After (D.W.) Griffith and (Sergei) Eisenstein, who gave form to film language, I think he's the next major innovator because of the visual nature of his work," Stevens said. "He tells stories with pictures."

For example, Stevens said, where many directors would stage a confrontation between two characters in "an unimaginative setting like an eastside Manhattan apartment, in Hitchcock you see it done on a crop-dusting field ("North By Northwest") in a carousel ("Strangers on a Train") or perhaps most memorably on Mt. Rushmore ("North By Northwest" again)."

Stevens said his own favorite Hitchcock movie is "Notorious," the Cary Grant-Ingrid Bergman thriller about a woman who marries a Nazi living in South America so she can help an American agent uncover a plot. A climactic scene takes place in her husband's wine cellar when she and the agent discover the bottles are filled with uranium ore instead of wine.

"It's a perfectly told story, beautifully filmed, and it's such an intriguing idea," Stevens said. "The woman who gives herself as a spy."

He said Miss Bergman, who acts a hostess for the awards evening, brought along one surprise when she reported for the assignment.

"We were sitting in her hotel room and she opened her purse, took out a key and said, 'You know what this is?'" Stevens recalled.

"It was the key to the wine cellar. She said Cary took it for good luck when they finished filming, and gave it to her when she returned to Hollywood many years later.

"Now she's giving it back to Hitchcock," Stevens said. "Maybe it'll open some new doors for him."

Real Estate School Probe

AUSTIN (AP) —The former head of the Houston field office of the State Real Estate Commission testified Friday before the Travis County grand jury in a probe of the alleged certificate selling by a Houston real estate school.

Fred Shaw, who was fired from his job Tuesday, told reporters outside the grand jury room that he had informed superiors of the alleged scheme since 1977 but no action was taken.

"I went to audit the class to see about its quality and what I found was what I considered poor quality of instruction," Shaw said of the school run by Carl and Kenneth Ahrens.

The real estate school operators were indicted earlier by the Travis County grand jury for allegedly selling certificates to persons who had not completed the necessary course requirements.

A certificate is necessary before a person can take the real estate licensing exam. Shaw said that at the time he investigated the school a person needed 90 hours of course instruction before taking the test. Such course work would cost $375, he added.

Shaw told Mark Mosely, chief of the real estate commission enforcement division, of the school's alleged improprieties beginning in August 1977 and followed up with documentary evidence in January 1978. He said the evidence consisted of attendance audits that allegedly showed persons enrolled in the course not showing up for class but still still receiving a certificate.

Shaw said that Moseley fired him for allegedly lying to a co-worker about his part in the investigation. He said Moseley drove to Houston and interrupted a luncheon engagement of Shaw's to fire him.

During a recess, District Attorney Ronald Earle, said he was concerned that a grand jury witness had been fired in connection with his cooperation in the investigation.

WHITE ONLY — A small group of blacks tried unsuccessfully to enter this coin-operated laundry in Star City, Ark., Saturday. The "wash-in" was prompted by a suit filed against the owner. The suit claims the blacks are denied their rights under the U. S. Constitution and the Civil Rights Act. (AP Laserphoto)

'Wash-In' Begins New Cycle

STAR CITY, Ark. (AP) — The city council in this tiny Arkansas town is to consider an anti-discrimination ordinance at its meeting Monday night following a "wash-in" at a coin-operated laundry whose owner refuses to admit blacks.

Nineteen black adults and children, carrying laundry baskets, demonstrated on Saturday outside the laundry, which has a sign on its doors reading "white only."

The owner, W.L. Goodwin, locked the doors of the one-room concrete block building and refused to talk with protesters or reporters. However, he did admit white customers.

The protest was prompted by a federal civil suit filed against Goodwin last May by the North Lincoln County Chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The protesters said they were members of the local chapter of Arkansas Community Organizations for Reform Now, a statewide citizens action group affiliated with the national ACORN organization.

Ruth T. Teel, local NAACP president, said the wash-in was organized because the court action was "taking so long."

In a deposition filed last August in connection with the suit, Goodwin said he would not let blacks use his washing machines "because they would mess the place up," according to Philip Kaplan of Little Rock, an attorney for Mrs. Teel.

Goodwin owns two coin-operated laundries in Star City and both have "white only" signs on their doors. The protest was held at the laundry where Goodwin was working.

"If a court orders him to keep it open, then by gum we'll enforce it," Mayor Robert Morrison told reporters after the demonstration.

He said he had been advised by the city attorney that he could not do anything because the matter is pending in court.

But he promised the protesters he would check the possibility of enacting an ordinance to prohibit racial discrimination in businesses, and said it would be brought up at the council meeting.

"I don't worry about color myself. If it weren't for them, I wouldn't be able to keep going," Morrison said. He owns the Dollar General Store in this community of about 2,000 persons, about 60 miles southeast of Little Rock.

The suit against Goodwin, filed in federal court in Pine Bluff, claims that by denying blacks the use of his laundries, he is depriving them of their rights under the Constitution and the 1964 Civil Rights Act.

Goodwin contends that since his businesses are not among the types of establishments listed in the federal Civil Rights Act, and since he is not engaged in interstate commerce, he is not required to adhere to its restrictions.

The suit claims the act applies since most of the machines in the businesses were purchased outside the state.

Kaplan acknowledged that "the issue now is whether the federal court has jurisdiction in the case."

Sophia Loren Sets Hearts A-Flutter

NEW YORK (AP) — When Nick Belmonte met actress Sophia Loren, the effect on the 21-year-old commercial artist was literally breathtaking.

"She almost gave me an asthma attack," said Belmonte. "I said 'Your personality is just as beautiful as your looks are.' And she looked me straight in the eyes, and I was scared, petrified. But I could have stayed there all day. My heart is still pounding."

Belmonte was one of many who waited in the rain at a bookstore here Saturday to get Miss Loren's autograph on copies of her book, "Sophia: Living and Loving."

"I told her she was my favorite lady in the world," said Ralph Perillo, 22. "And she said she was surprised. And I kissed her hand. I thought my heart was going to stop. I almost died."

But Miss Loren's male admirers had to yield to 60-year-old Polly Hayes when it came to compliments.

Advisors Urge Drug Curbs

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government advisory panel recommended Sunday that curbs be imposed on sales of some vitamins and minerals as non-prescription drugs and that labels mentioning "super potency," "natural" or "stress" be banned.

The Food and Drug Administration panel said only nine vitamins and three minerals should be sold as single ingredient, non-prescription drugs. The vitamins are C, B-12, folic acid, niacin, B-6, riboflavin, thiamine, A and D. The minerals are calcium, iron and zinc.

Among the vitamins the panel said should not be sold as a single ingredient, non-prescription drug is Vitamin E. The panel said there was no evidence Vitamin E increases fertility or protects against cardiovascular and other diseases.

The panel's recommendations, if accepted by the FDA, would not restrict sales of these same vitamins and minerals as food supplements.

According to industry estimates, about three-quarters of the $520 million in vitamins and minerals that Americans buy each year are labelled as food supplements.

If any therapeutic claims are made on the bottle, then the FDA classifies it as a non-prescription drug.

The panel, headed by Dr. Irwin H. Rosenberg of the University of Chicago Medical School said vitamins sold as non-prescription drugs should be labelled only for the prevention or treatment of deficiencies, and should make clear they are to be used "only when the need for such therapy has been determined by a physician."

The panel said deficiencies requiring drug treatment with minerals and vitamins usually occur among "special" groups, such as pregnant or lactating women, alcoholics or persons with diseases or taking drugs that interfere with their ability to absorb vitamins and minerals from food.

The panel recommended dose limits for the various vitamins and minerals. It warned that large doses of Vitamin C — more than a gram a day — "may cause kidney and bladder problems." It said manufacturers should not claim Vitamin C can cure the common cold.

The panel said terms such as "stress," "super potency" and "geriatric" should not be allowed on the labels, and products should not be called "natural" because there is no evidence that natural vitamins and minerals are better than synthetic ones.

The study is part of an FDA review of all non-prescription drugs. After getting public comments, the agency will draw up a monograph or "recipe book" of ingredients it considers safe and effective in non-prescription vitamins and minerals.

Eventually, that monograph will be issued as a regulation, and manufacturers will have to make their products conform to its restrictions.

The panel's report will appear in the Federal Register on Friday. Public comments can be sent within 90 days to the Hearing Clerk, FDA, Room 4-65, 5600 Fishers Lane, Rockville, Md. 20857.

Avalanche Victims' Bodies Recovered

SEATTLE (AP) — The bodies of veteran mountaineer Willi Unsoeld and a student have been recovered from Mount Rainier, a week after the two were killed by an avalanche.

The bodies of Unsoeld, 52, one of the first five Americans to climb Mount Everest in 1963, and Janie Diepenbrock, 21, of Sacramento, Calif., were brought down Saturday from Cadaver Gap at the 11,000-foot level of Mount Rainier's south side.

Unsoeld, a mountain climbing instructor at The Evergreen State College in Olympia, was leading a party of 21 students down the mountain March 4 when the slide hit.

Another student was dug out alive, but Miss Diepenbrock and Unsoeld did not respond to live-saving techniques after they were dug out. The survivors had to wait out a storm at the 10,000-foot level and arrived at the town of Paradise two days later.

Two students remained behind to guide rangers back to the site. But when the searchers attempted several times during the week to locate the bodies, they found additional avalanches had altered landmarks and covered the bodies. Poor weather also hampered recovery efforts.

Chief Ranger Robert Dunnagan, who led a 24-man search party, said that on Saturday searchers were able to locate the bodies, buried under 4 feet of snow, after probing the snow with long aluminum poles.

It took the team more than four hours to get the bodies back to Paradise on sleds.

HEARTLINE

Heartline is a service for senior citizens. Its purpose is to answer questions and solve problems — fast. If you have a question or a problem not answered in these columns, write Heartline, 114 East Dayton Street, West Alexandria, Ohio 45381. You will receive a prompt reply, but you must include a stamped, self-addressed envelope. The most useful replies will be printed in this column.

HEARTLINE: I have to go to the foot doctor to have some calluses removed. Will Medicare help cover this treatment? — O.M.

No, Medicare Medical Insurance (Part B) will not pay for routine foot care. The definition of routine foot care is treatment for flat feet or other structural misalignments of the feet; and removal of corns, warts (including plantars warts) and calluses.

Medicare will help pay for any covered services of a podiatrist, or provide coverage for routine foot care if you have a medical condition affecting the lower limbs (such as diabetes) which requires that such care be performed by a podiatrist, a medical doctor or osteopath.

Yes, but only two. We recommend the National Association of Older Americans and the National Council of Senior Citizens. For information on either of these, write to Heartline-National Associations, 114 East Dayton St., West Alexandria, Ohio 45381. Heartline does not receive any advertising moneys, fees or commissions of any kind for its recommendation of these organizations.

HEARTLINE: We are moving to Arizona soon. We have lived in the same place for 50 years. Can you give us some tips on moving? — L.O.

Yes, just happen to have a list of such tips!

1. Complete all property arrangements — selling, renting, buying, transferring, etc. — before you move.

2. Receive bids on moving costs from at least three reliable companies and have a written understanding regarding all insurance, packing, transferring, insulating and re-arranging services.

3. Write the various utility services in the town to which you are moving for necessary arrangements, fees or deposits required for installation services and remit deposits as requested.

4. Notify your local gas, electric, telephone, garbage, laundry, newspaper, food and other deliveries to discontinue their services.

5. Provide your forwarding address to the post office and your mailman. You can pick up a change of address kit at your post office, which provides cards to be sent to your creditors, magazines, insurance companies, etc. Be sure if you are receiving Social Security or other retirement checks to notify those offices of your new address also.

6. Transfer your household and other protective insurances to the new location so everything will be covered.

7. Ask your banker, broker, and credit bureau for credit references to establish accounts in the new location.

8. Inspect your belongings carefully before they are packed or moved and make notes of any scratches or damages. Inspect them once again as they are unpacked for any new damages before you pay the movers.

9. After you have moved, ask your new postman for accumulated mail and advise the new post office of your arrival.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. In a number of columns you have stated that it is possible to get yields of better than 10 percent on federally-insured six-month savings certificates by "shopping around." Believe me, I have shopped. But the highest yields I can find on those certificates in the area in which I live are around 9.6 or 9.7 percent. I must conclude that yields are higher in other parts of the country.

I realize you can't name individual banks and savings and loan associations. But can you tell me in what parts of the country those higher yields prevail?

A. Many parts — where there is hot competition among banks and savings and loan associations for savers' dollars. This applies to most big cities, their suburbs and some other areas. It's impossible to come up with a complete list. And it would be wrong to mention some but not others.

And remember that the yields on newly-issued six-month certificates can change each week. This is because those yields are pegged to the yields on the weekly auction of 26-week U.S. Treasury Bills.

Each Thursday through the following Wednesday, commercial banks are allowed to issue six-month certificates with annual interest exactly the same as the 26-week "T bill" yield. Savings banks and savings and loan associations are allowed to pay 0.25 of 1 percent more. And, if the interest is compounded on either a continuous or daily basis, the yield can be increased by better than 0.6 of 1 percent.

Some institutions — not feeling the hot breath of competition — do not pay the top yields. So, to all the readers who write in about this, I can only suggest extending your "shopping for yields" greater distances.

It should be no surprise to learn that many banks and S&Ls suddenly became competitive, after depositors started withdrawing money and sending it elsewhere for higher yields.

Q. I will soon receive a $5,000 check from the profit-sharing plan at my previous place of employment. I elected to take the cash, instead of a deferred annuity. I am 51 and have no nest egg. I am buying E bonds through the payroll savings plan and stock of the company where I now work through its profit-sharing plan.

I hope to retire at 62. What should I do with the $5,000 to get the most return?

A. Put it in an individual retirement account (IRA) "special rollover account." You won't have to pay income taxes on the $5,000 until you start withdrawing the money — normally after retirement when you should be in a lower tax bracket. Nor will you have to pay income taxes on the money the $5,000 earns while it's in the IRA account.

IRA special rollover accounts can be used by people who receive a total lump-sum distribution of money an employer contributed to a qualified retirement plan. From your letter, the $5,000 seems to qualify. Go the IRA route.

What kind of IRA? You have lots of choices. The two I feel you should consider are 8 percent insured savings certificates at banks or savings and loan associations and mutual funds.

The certificates would be sure things, as far as numbers of dollars are concerned. But inflation could make them unattractive in the years ahead. A mutual fund might or might not do better. If you decide on a fund, look at the "no-load" funds on which no commissions are charged.

Q. I bought a corporate bond in 1970 at "76" — paying $760 for a $1,000 par value bond. That bond matured last year and I received $1,000 for it. Is the $240 a capital gain for tax purposes?

A. Yes, indeed. The difference between the price you pay for a security and the proceeds when you sell or redeem is a capital gain or loss. In your case, it was a long-term gain because you held the bonds more than a year.
