ELECTION TO SELL CITY PARK SATURDAY

Citizens of McLean will have a chance to vote on the question of selling half the city park Saturday.

No action of any kind has been taken by the city council, but it is understood that in the event the election is favorable the proposition is to sell the east half of the park to the school board as a site for the new school building. However, it has been pointed out that it is not compulsory for the city to sell, in the event the vote is favorable.

The park was donated by the townsite owner for a public park and site for county seat buildings many years ago, and has been considered public property ever since. And while there has been little need for a park heretofore, times are changing until there will probably be a real need for a public park.

Quite a bit of opposition to the sale of the park has developed, due mainly to the question of title involved, and it is expected that a record vote will be polled on the question Saturday.

The election will be held at the present high school building, and will be in charge of A. T. Young, J. F. Heasley, J. A. Sparks and Luther Willis.

LIONS CLUB LUNCHEON TALKS FEATURED

Second Vice President O. G. Stokely, in the absence of President R. R. Rives and First Vice President Geo. Tummins, presided at the regular weekly luncheon of the Lions Club Tuesday.

Entertainment features began with a piano solo by Miss Floye Landers. The chairman then called upon A. B. Chancey, a guest, to speak. Mr. Chancey remarked the great improvement in residence building in McLean and said we need better public buildings. He also said that no oil boom is needed to build any town.

W. W. Shadid spoke on the idea of service rendered by the dry goods firms of the town, and C. C. Bogan gave instances whereby the banks render community service. Mr. Bogan said that Monday of this week $124 in cream checks passed through his bank, comparing this condition with 10 years ago when a cream check was practically unknown here. This condition has been brought about largely by the banks preaching diversification, was the opinion of the speaker.

Jesse J. Cobb spoke of community service as exemplified by the variety store, and said that he subscribed fully to the idea that no business should be allowed to exist that had no thought of service outside of making money for the owner.

Ralph Randall spoke from the car dealer's standpoint and said that transportation is wrapped up with all lines of activity, both business and social.

M. D. Bentley stated that the tail twister wanted to resign at the first opportunity, and made a motion that Ralph Randall act in that capacity. Motion was carried and adjournment taken.

Those present were: L. Sligar, M. D. Bentley, B. F. Gray, H. S. Williams, E. L. Sitter, O. G. Stokely, F. H. Bourland, R. Randall, A. B. Chancey, T. A. Landers, D. N. Massay, C. C. Bogan, J. J. Cobb, W. W. Shadid and Miss Floye Landers.

One of the most pleasant social affairs of the season was a pot luck dinner given at the W. Sherman White home Wednesday in honor of Mrs. Reuel Shell of Dallas, who is visiting in McLean this week.

HIGHWAY 66 MAY BE GRADED SOON

The following letter is self explanatory: Job 91-A, Gray County.

Austin, Texas, July 21, 1928. Mr. M. M. Newman, County Commissioner, McLean, Texas.

Dear Mr. Newman: Mr. Hasie has been in the office this morning in the interest of plans on State Highway No. 75 in Gray county. These plans are among some 35 or 40 sets which we have on hand for grading and structures and which could not be made ready for the letting on August 1st.

This is due to no fault of Mr. Hasie's, as he submitted the plans in the latter part of May, and the delay, if there has been any that was not necessary, has not been due to Mr. Hasie, but to the fact that we have only a limited force under our appropriation to check these plans and have just not been able to get them out.

It might interest you to know that during the summer months we have been concentrating our efforts largely to what we call Unit II construction, that is, surfacing. But now that the summer season is nearing an end, we expect to give primary attention to Unit I work, or grading and structures.

I had occasion last week to drive through your county on Highway No. 75 and believe it has wonderful possibilities. You may be sure that we will give every attention to your plans and get them finished at the earliest possible date.

We appreciate your co-operation and kindness in every respect.

Yours very truly, GIBB GILCHRIST, State Highway Engineer.

There were nine bidders, including one local bidder, on the building, ranging from $66,785 to $71,292, the low bid being accepted. There were five bidders on the heating and plumbing, with $10,800 being the low bid.

The new building will be two stories in height, T-shaped, of light brick trimmed with white stone, and will have a large auditorium with balcony, moving picture booth, stage, orchestra pit, etc.

The auditorium and stage will be larger than the present one, the floor of the auditorium being inclined and having a seating capacity of 650.

This building is made possible by the bond issue of $74,000 recently voted by the district.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Jim Stanley, wealthy young New York business man, unable to concentrate in his dictation to his desk audiphone, has the machine taken to his home, intending to finish his work there. Rollin Waterman, his business partner and closest friend, comes in. Both men are avowedly in love with Doris Colby. Stanley proposes they toss a coin to determine which of them shall, that evening, first ask her to marry him. Waterman wins.

CHAPTER II.—Nina Morgan, Waterman's secretary, also his mistress, has overheard his conversation with Stanley and resents Waterman's plan to desert her. Waterman tells her he is practically penniless and must make a rich marriage. He urges Nina to go to Doris and tell her she (Nina) has been wronged—but by Stanley. The girl consents, on Waterman's promise to take care of her.

CHAPTER III.—Doris admits to her father her interest in both Stanley and Waterman, and is sure they are both in love with her, but she is unable to make up her mind which to marry.

CHAPTER IV.—Nina goes to Doris with her story, securing a promise that Doris will not reveal the source of her information. She convinces Doris of Stanley's duplicity, and leaves her broken hearted, and realizing that it is Stanley she really has loved.

"Go on," said Doris briefly. "After what I have already told you," continued Nina, "the mention of his name almost completes my story. He has wrecked my life—that is the long and the short of it."

"In the—usual—way?" murmured Doris.

"Oh, yes," cried Nina passionately. "I know, I know. It is the oldest story in the world, but I suppose it will be told and told and told again as long as the world stands and men are what they are."

"Of course I don't believe it," said Doris quietly.

"Why not?" said Nina.

"Because I know Jim Stanley."

"Then perhaps," said Nina, "perhaps you will tell me what you think my motive could possibly be in doing a thing like this? Do you think any girl but a sense of desperation would have driven me to it?"

"The shot went home, and Nina saw it."

"I can't believe it. I can't believe it," murmured Doris. "Jim Stanley, of all men in the world?"

"Oh, yes, I know," said Nina. "I know well enough how you must feel about him. I've been through it all. I hadn't had any too square a deal from life when I first met Jim Stanley and when he came into my life I felt as you do, that here at last was a man I could tie to. Oh, he has a way with him."

"Why didn't he marry you?" said Doris.

"Of course he promised to," said Nina, "not once but a hundred times. If he hadn't I shouldn't be here. But now he only laughs at me. Oh, you'll say I've been a fool."

"I'm afraid," said Doris gently. "I wasn't thinking of you for the moment."

"Yes, and a fool I have been. I ought to have known that Jim Stanley could have only one use for a woman like me. But women like me gain knowledge only at the cost of hard experience. And I was in love—you can understand that, you who know Jim Stanley so well. You know how charming he can be, and I sometimes think that a woman in love is always a fool. Well, that's the story—part of it."

"What—more yet?" demanded Doris.

"More yet," said Nina. "I have a child to think of. Will you come and see him?"

"God forbid," replied the other. She grew suddenly cold. Little shivers ran up and down her spine. She wanted to go away and be alone. She hated the sight of this dark woman sitting there implacably before her. She hated the sound of her voice, and the glance of those Spanish black eyes.

Something of this feeling Nina must have sensed, for she went on quickly: "Try and think what it cost me to come and tell you this. Try and put yourself for a moment in my position. I needn't have come at all; I could have held my tongue. I could have done well for myself from one point of view. He has offered to buy me off, to buy my silence. I could have lived in comfort for the rest of my life. Jim's got plenty of money, and I had him where I wanted him. All this I've thrown away by coming here tonight. At least, I've risked it. And now if I haven't convinced you that I'm telling you the truth, I cannot see how it can be done."

Doris rose. She shivered a little as she said: "Perhaps I ought to thank you, but somehow I can't."

"Don't thank me," answered Nina, "believe me—that's all I want." And suddenly, silently, as ever, she was gone.

Doris rang the bell. "Light the fire."

Barker," she said. "It's cold."

Directly across the Avenue a young man had been pacing nervously up and down for twenty minutes, with his eyes constantly upon the Colby house. As he saw the door swing upon its hinges and close upon the emerging figure, he hurried across the Avenue, nimbly dodging a bus and a flock of hurrying motors, and approaching Nina from the rear, seized her by the elbow.

"Well," he said, "well, what did you tell her?"

Nina looked at him with mocking eyes. "Find out for yourself," she said.

CHAPTER V

The Strollers club was an institution so old and exclusive that if you wished to become a member of it before you were too old to use it you had to be proposed about the time you were born. Waterman's father had, in fact, proposed him for membership three years before he came of age. It was the kind of a club that contains many ancient members who have favorite easy chairs which they regard as their personal property and which can be occupied by others only at the risk of their severe displeasure.

It may be imagined, therefore, that the Strollers was not Waterman's favorite club. He went there only when he wished to be alone. Tonight was one of those occasions. Thus far he had not been disturbed by any acquaintance, but at this moment an attendant arrived at his elbow with a slip from the telephone operator. Waterman glanced at it and read: "Mr. Roundfield." He ground his teeth.

"Told him I'm not in," he said, but as the attendant turned away he added: "No d—n it, I'll speak to him." And as he found his way to the telephone booth he muttered: "What the devil does he want now?" But he knew what Roundfield wanted—alteration too well.

Mr. Roundfield was a burly gentleman who operated games of chance in a side street just off the Avenue, next door to one of the famous restaurants of the world. He was a genial person, geniality was part of his stock in trade. He knew how to make it pay, and he was presentable, in a way. Yet he never allowed his geniality to interfere materially with his bank account, on the contrary.

Consequently, though his conversation with Waterman on the telephone was most polite, Waterman had no doubt as to its meaning. Reduced to its essentials, it meant that if certain notes made by Waterman and now in the possession of the sporting man, were not taken up within a reasonable time, steps would be taken—steps not agreeable to contemplation. The reflections induced by this knowledge were not conducive to good digestion.

Nor, aside from this, was Waterman's mind entirely at ease. In the first place he really hadn't the slightest idea what Nina Morgan was going to say to Doris Colby. No knowing which way that cat would jump, he reflected.

And even if she jumped his way, he was by that very act placed unpleasantly in her hands. But he couldn't see any escape from it. Unless he married Doris Colby it appeared to him that his goose was cooked. If this marriage came off, it would at least give him time to turn around. The settlement of his most pressing obligations could be deferred upon the announcement of this brilliant engagement. Just how generous with her money the fair Doris would turn out to be with regard to a needy husband remained to be seen. But that was for the future.

It would not be fair to say that Waterman had no suspicions regarding his treatment of Jim Stanley. He had been deceiving Jim for a long time. Stanley, for example, had no idea that Waterman had been playing the market "on his own," a thing explicitly forbidden to each of them when the partnership was formed. Waterman, having begun a course of dissimulation in this matter, was obliged, or so he thought to keep it up, and as little lies lead to bigger ones, and small dishonesties beget great treacheries, so now the tide of deceit on which Waterman had long ago embarked had finally brought him to this crest of treachery. Five years ago he would have been appalled at the mere suggestion of it. Yet, such is the effect of slow but cumulative moral degeneration that now it merely made him uneasy.

And uneasy, increasingly so, he now became as he left the club and turned northward. Nor was this uneasiness at all allayed by his brief colloquy with Nina outside the Colby house. Even after he had been alone with Doris in the Colby drawing-room a quarter of an hour, he still had not the slightest notion as to what had passed between the two women. He had found Doris strange, cold, aloof. He had come there to ask her to marry him, but the moment seemed hardly propitious, despite his agreement with Stanley. Somehow, his suspense must be ended—and quickly. Time was passing—in fifteen minutes more Jim Stanley would be at the door. He must know, and he must know at once. And so he made a plunge. After a long silence, he said abruptly:

"Doris, what's the matter with you? Somewhat to his surprise she did not fence.

"I have just heard the most painful thing in the world," she said.

"Now for it!" he thought, and aloud he said, squaring his shoulders to meet the blow. "About whom?"

"About Jim."

The relief that he felt was overwhelming. Guiltily he felt that she must be conscious of it, but almost simultaneously he saw that she was not thinking of him at all and inwardly he gave three cheers. "About Jim?" he said.

"A certain person has just been here and told me an awful thing about him."

"What?"

"I cannot tell you. I gave my word of honor."

"Surely you don't believe it?"

"I'm afraid I do."

"Was this talebearer some one you know?"

"No, it was some one I never saw or heard of before."

Instinctively Waterman hit upon the sound course to follow.

"But surely, Doris, you don't mean to say that you believe this scandalous tale told by an utter stranger, and about one of your very best friends?"

She feebly shrugged her shoulders.

"But," he went on, "you can't do it. At least you must give Jim a chance to explain—to defend himself."

"Impossible—I gave my word of honor."

"Before you heard it?"

"Yes."

"Why on earth did you do that?"

"Because I took it so lightly I couldn't imagine that it could possibly be anything of the slightest consequence."

"And it is?"

"Yes, it is. It is a thing that no one but a man with a cruel, cruel heart could do. Oh, he might in the first place have done it upon impulse. That I could forgive. But, after that, nothing but cold, cold cruelty could explain it."

"And you can't tell me what it is?"

"No, I can't tell anyone—I've promised."

"But I cannot understand," said Waterman, warmly, his confidence rising with the overwhelmingly welcome knowledge that he himself was not in danger. "I cannot understand. I don't care who he was, came to me with a scandalous story about old Jim. I should refuse to credit it until Jim had had a chance to defend himself—especially if, as you say, his accuser was a person whom I did not know at all."

"I can't go into it," said the girl sadly and abruptly, "but I am certain that if you had heard the story as I heard it, you would have to believe it too, no matter how much it hurt you."

"I don't believe it, whatever it is. Why, we've known Jim all our lives—his one of the very best."

"So I've always thought," she sighed, "until tonight."

"But not any more?"

"Not any more."

Sublimely she put out her hand to him appealingly like a frightened child. "Oh, Doris, Doris," she said, "I've lost my friend. He's gone. I've lost him. And it hurts."

Swiftly he was at her side. His time was come. He took the cold little hand in both of his own, and drew it to his breast.

"Doris, dear," he said, "let me help you."

"You can't. You can't."

"I do so want to help you, because—"

"You see—I love you."

The long lashes rose above the violet eyes and then they flickered and fell again. Quietly he drew her to her feet, and with a little sob she slipped into his arms.

"Dearest," he murmured, "don't cry—please don't cry."

"But she only murmured brokenly: "I've lost my friend—I've lost him."

"Yes, yes, I know. But I must try and make it up to you if I can."

And thus it happened. Desperately she needed comfort and—the comfort she needed—came. A moment later she freed herself—"

Saunders' Enjoy Family Reunion

For the first time in fourteen years, and the second time in life, the entire family of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Saunders were together when their children and grandchildren attended a family reunion at the Saunders home two miles northeast of McLean, July 21 and 22.

Saturday and Sunday were gala days for the kinspeople who gathered together to talk over "old times," take pictures and enjoy the delicious "cater" prepared in anticipation of their arrival. Sunday morning the entire family attended church in a body.

Celebrate Birthday

Yester Lee Smith celebrated his birthday on last Friday afternoon with a jolly party for the folks. Kiddie games were played for several hours, after which the children posed for pictures. The young man received appropriate presents in honor of the occasion.

Mr. Smith, assisted by Mrs. Y. B. Lee, Roy McCracken, Le, Ruel Smith and Blake, Misses Tribby, McEach, Alta Lee, supervised the party and served lollypops, chewing gum and cake—every child's heart could desire—following: Pauline and McCracken, Lulu, Jessie, Lucille Lester, Pauline, Leo, Le, Lebetter, Billie Tom and Hazel and S. J. Dyer, and J. B. Gerard, J. D. Back, Hershel, Joe and Copell, Gaines and James Poley, David and Virginia Dora Smith, Lottie Marrow, Margaret Kramer, Lamb, Janey Barnes, Stan, Boone Noel Davidson, Edges, Junior Coffey, Joan, Haine Noel Edger, Lato, and Sarah Smith.

A Surprise Party

At the bidding of Mrs. E. E. Filer, a group of friends met at Tuesday evening and in left for the Graham where they gave Mrs. Ray surprise on her life, the day the lady's birthday. The hour was spent in when time a guess, in the age of the non-aged in Miss May and Mrs. Jim Back, each naming her. Mr. Filer was awarded Mrs. Davis because of.

A Fishing Trip

To rest in the cool shadows of the pines and inhale the exhilarating odor of these towering trees, to sleep under blankets over which Jack Frost painted his fairy pictures, and to have all the trout they could eat, was the wonderful experience of the following McLean people who returned last Friday from a trip to Cammaron Canyon, N. M.: W. E. Bogan and family, J. M. Noel and family, John Harris and family, C. M. Carpenter and family, F. E. Robinson and family.

Like all other fishermen, they say the longest fish caught was as long as the longest arm there, but all agree that Charlie Carpenter did catch the largest one, and that W. E. Bogan proved himself ingenious when he caught trout the first time he ever fished for them.

The party report a most unusually good time, and besides their fishing trip, they toured through Taos, N. M., visited the Indian pueblos and artist colonies, which have become nationally famous because they are preserving and displaying the real Indian handicraft. They arrived at one home just in time to buy some Indian bread, fresh and hot from the oven, which the children enjoyed very much.

Tourists Return

After touring New Mexico, visiting at Rattan, and fishing at Crede, a party of pleasure seekers drove on into Colorado. The capital at Denver, with its parks and museums, Colorado Springs, with that famous Cave of the Winds, and the lovely scenery of Colorado's winding driveways, all added enjoyment to the trip. The following: Mr. and Mrs. Harold Rippey, Mr. and Mrs. W. Sherman White and son, Billie Grant Mr. and Mrs. Roy Campbell and daughter, Joan.

Bird-Archer Nuptials

A wedding of interest to many of our readers is that of Miss Tommie Mae Bird of Shamrock and Mr. Merle Archer of McLean, which was solemnized Saturday afternoon at four o'clock at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Martin Dwyer. Rev. B. W. Wilkins, pastor of the First Methodist church, officiated.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Bird, is well known here and is popular among a large number of friends, having lived here with her parents for several years.

The groom, a last year's student in McLean high school, has been associated with the Meador Cafe for some time.

Mr. and Mrs. Archer left immediately after the ceremony for Elk City, Okla., and other points where they will spend their honeymoon. They will be at home to their friends in McLean after Saturday, July 28.

At a late hour refreshments were served to the following: Misses Thelma and Clara Pearl Gatlin, Loyce and Bonnie Miller, Jewel Shaw, Mildred Rogers, Lucille Harlan, Jane Campbell, Fern Upham, Dorothy Cantrell and Gwendolyn Miller, of Wichita Falls; Messrs. Voters of the 84th Judicial District

Read the following letter from Governor Moody regarding Curtis Douglass, and note what he has to say in regard to the voters electing "someone else District Attorney to correct the mistake he made."

Executive Department,
Austin, Texas.

May 19, 1928.

Dan Moody, Governor.

Mr. James Spiller, Attorney,
Panhandle, Texas.

Dear Mr. Spiller:

Your letter enclosing the clipping from the Denver paper has been received. I suppose I received at least a half dozen copies of that clipping.

As you know, I called upon Mr. Douglass for his resignation and he declined to give it. He has been a bitter disappointment to me. He was recommended to me by citizens of the Panhandle section, and especially by some of my friends in Waco who knew him when he lived there. When he declined to resign, I asked the Attorney General to institute ouster proceedings against him, and while I have repeatedly taken this matter up with the Attorney General, so far nothing has been done. If the Attorney General does not oust him I hope that the people will elect someone else District Attorney at the next election and correct the mistake I made in appointing him.

With regards, I am.

Very truly yours,

Dan Moody.

Let us hope that everyone will be in a good humor after the elections are over.

The voter should have the same right to bolt the nominee that the nominee has to bolt the platform.

It is the opinion of many people that the new school house could be built on the present grounds, as a matter of economy and efficiency.

The man who is willing for the other fellow to have his own opinion has learned an important lesson. One may know that he is right in his opinions, yet at the same time others have just as much right to a different opinion.

"Business is sensitive—it goes only where it is wanted, and where it is well treated." The best way to tell your prospective customers that their business is wanted is to use the advertising columns of the home paper. It is also the cheapest way, results considered.

Typhoid fever is twice as prevalent in the rural sections of the United States as in cities, statistics show. The number of tuberculosis sufferers has also been smaller in the cities than in the country, the past four or five years. Purification of the water supply and proper sewage disposal is the answer.

Twenty-nine new Chevrolets were delivered in the McLean trade territory during the month of June, breaking all records in new car deliveries for this length of time. Some twenty new Fords have been delivered here also, besides other makes of cars, making an enviable showing for the prosperity of the community.

Mayor C. J. Cash visited the state penitentiary in New Mexico while on a vacation trip, and says he found Lindsay Nunn in the institution. However, he hastened to explain that Mr. Nunn was a visitor also. According to statistics, that is about the only way you will find an editor in such a place, despite what his subscribers may think of his just deserts.

AROUND THE CORNER

Around the corner I have a friend
In this great city that has no end
Yet days go by and weeks rush on,
And before I know it a year is gone
And I never see my old friend's face
For life is a swift and terrible race.
He knows I like him just as well
As in the days when I rang his bell
And he rang mine. We were younger then;
And now we are busy, tired men—
Tired with playing a foolish game,

Tired with trying to make a name
"Tomorrow," I say, "I will call on Jim,
Just to show him that I'm thinking of him."
But tomorrow comes and tomorrow
goes;
And the distance between us grows and grows.
Around the corner!—yet miles away
"Here's a telegram, sir."
"Jim died today!"
And that's what we get—and deserve in the end—
Around the corner, a vanished friend.

TO THE CITIZENS OF McLEAN AND GRAY COUNTY

You will, on Saturday, July 28, make your choice for county judge for the next two years, and I have entered myself for that position. If I am your choice, I want you to know that I appreciate the confidence you have in me and will endeavor to merit it. I have no made a personal campaign for this office, for I believe the man that is going to sit as a fair judge should enter his office without any sense of obligation to any individual, but should be able to adjudicate such matters that come before him fairly and impartially, without fear or favor to either party litigant or member of the bar practicing before him, and this is what you may expect from me. It is also my desire to speed up the business of the county court as well as raise its dignity to a higher plane than I think it presently enjoys.

Yours very truly,

CHRYSLER Plymouth

Plymouth 4-Door Sedan $725

AMERICA ACCEPTS AND ACCLAIMS THE NEW PLYMOUTH

The sales record of the new Plymouth, established in two weeks' time, is without parallel or precedent for a car in this field—not in a few retail centers but all over the whole country.

Hundreds upon hundreds of thousands—yes, millions—eager to see the new Plymouth, built by Chrysler to compete in the lowest-priced field, through Chrysler salesrooms everywhere.

They compare it with the three or four other cars catering to the same great market.

They see contrast in size, style, performance and safety so sharply in favor of Plymouth that curiosity bursts into enthusiasm, enthusiasm is transformed into sales.

In fine, the millions seeking a low first cost now discover in the new Plymouth the one car in the lowest-priced field which is and does everything that they have long hoped a low-priced car would be and do.

You, too, owe it to yourself to see it, ride in it, drive it. All doubt as to the highest dollar-for-dollar value in the lowest-priced field ends right there.

KITCHEN-KOOK

THE WORLD'S FASTEST COOK STOVE

Cook With Gas

—beyond the Gas Service limits

Kitchenkook brings to rural and suburban homes and city homes outside the gas limits, every convenience of city gas. In fact, it is a gas stove, with its own gas plant built right into it. Makes and burns its own gas from common gasoline, producing the fastest known cooking fire. Kitchenkook is different from any stove you have ever used. It has all the fine features of gas with none of the objectionable features of common liquid fuel stoves; no wicks or chimneys; no smoke, soot or kerosene odor. Takes less than a minute to light; then all burners are ready at once. Turn them on or off as wanted, just like gas. Kitchenkook is the biggest improvement in fine cook stoves in the past quarter century. It's the sensation of the industry. Don't fail to ask for a demonstration of this wonder cook stove. Made in 16 attractive models.

MONTGOMERY FOR CLERK

In speaking of his candidacy for district clerk, Winston C. Montgomery stated that in an interview with several parties interested in the court matters in Gray county it was believed advisable to divide the offices of county and district clerk into two separate offices, because of the sudden influx of people in our country for the last two years, and the more or less congestion of matters pertaining to that work. So, after viewing the condition which existed and receiving encouragement that it would be a possibility, he undertook to seek the office through the voters of Gray county.

Mr. Montgomery is a native of the Panhandle of Texas, having been born in Memphis in the year of 1895, and was connected with the bank there in an official ca-capacity for several years after finishing his education in college.

Abstracting appealed to Mr. Montgomery early in his career, and in seeking a place to make his home, moved to Pampa in July, 1926, and built an abstract plant here, and has been active in that business ever since.

He stated that he felt himself well qualified for the position sought because he understands the detailed workings of court matters thru having searched the records and abstracting instruments therefrom, and he stated that if elected to the office he would serve the people and the court with the best of his ability and courtesy.

This is the first public office Mr. Montgomery has ever sought, but he says that it is more than a pleasure to get out and meet the people, and that he is sorry that his duties will not permit him to shake the hands of every voter in the county.

Luther Harlan of Canadian was a McLean visitor Saturday.

Richard Henderson returned Friday from Groom.

Warren T. Fox, candidate for county surveyor, says that The News was in error in stating that he is assistant county surveyor at Canadian, as he is county surveyor. Mr. Fox's experience dates back to 1917. He has also done work with the government reclamation service.

O. H. Foster, former McLean resident, has accepted a position as manager of a bus station at Pampa.

This Is what the Friends of District Attorney Curtis Douglass Say:

"District Attorney Douglass is a Stayer. Voters of this district will recall the recent cowardly political frame-up that was perpetrated upon this fearless young attorney for purely political reasons—how even the Governor of the State was induced to believe their stories for a short time. Douglass did not Quit nor dodge the issue—he met it squarely face to face and openly defeated the Political Demagogues who sought to displace him.

"Time after time Attorney Douglass has taken the stump in this district to protect his honor, his name, and the office of District Attorney of the 84th Judicial District, and over time he has been cheered for his honest, straightforwardness in meeting every issue fairly and squarely without qualification or misrepresentation.

"The office of District Attorney of the 84th Judicial District is one that requires a 'Stayer'—not a Quitter always on the lookout for a fat fee or an easy promotion. Attorney Douglass has served this district faithfully and efficiently and desires nothing more than to be returned to this office in order to continue this service."

TO THE VOTERS OF THE 31ST JUDICIAL DISTRICT

For the past fourteen months I have served you by appointment as your District Attorney of 31st Judicial District (Judge Ewing's Court), and am now a candidate to succeed myself.

My experience as District Attorney, and familiarity with criminal business now pending in the district, will, I believe, enable me to render you even better service in the future.

Most respectfully,

DEFEATED CANDIDATE

When the future doesn't have a rosy tint and things seem so badly out of joint that we are nearing a season of despond, we usually try to think of the speech of an old fellow who was defeated for office in Tennessee many years ago. He said:

Fellow citizens, On the money question I am in favor of gold and silver and green backs, and national bank notes, and nickel and copper, and if necessary, a leedie more counterfeits."

An old fellow covered too much territory in his money platform, and he was defeated. Feeling that the country would go to the dogs and that he was ruined world without end, the old fellow determined to commit suicide. He went to the store and bought a rope, a can of matches, a dose of arsenic and a revolver. He went to the river, pushed his boat from the shore and waded down to where a limb hung over. Then he got up in the bow of the boat and tied one end of the rope around the limb and the other around his neck. He saturated his clothing with the coal oil, lighted a match and set his clothing afire, took the dose of arsenic, put the muzzle of the revolver to his temple, pushed the boat from under him and pulled the trigger. But the bullet glanced out and cut the rope above him and he fell kerwallow into the river. The water put out the fire; the old fellow got strangled and coughed up the arsenic, then he arose and waded out. Safe again, he declared himself a candidate for the legislature on the reform ticket and was elected.

The moral of this is easy to find. There are ways out of the worst muddles, and all the ways for killing or ruining a fellow sometimes fail.—Honey Grove Signal.

BOOMS ARE UNDESIRABLE

When we long for our home towns to "boom." When we long for a rapid influx of population. When we envy the towns which have received the pulsating life and impetus such as the oil field boom brings on. It is a good time for us to analyze these booms.

Nothing hurts a town more in the long run than a boom.

Borger, six years ago a mere spot on the prairie, is a town of quick growth. Only in the past year or two has it become a fit place for a man with family to live, and it yet suffers in comparison with many of the other towns of its size.

Saturday marked the removal from Borger of the last remnants of what was two years ago the mecca for oil field workers who came to Borger, the "49" dances, the only entertainment except wild west picture shows offered in those days.

The town with a good sturdy, refined population has an asset which any of the boom towns cannot have, and which the best element in all of the boom towns envy most. For the time being there are more dollars in boom towns, but in the final analysis, what are dollars?—Plainview Herald.
