Judges' Meet Here Urges Change in State Insanity Code

SMOOT ASSAILS TEXAS METHOD AS U. S. WORST

Noted Authority Describes Lone Star System as 'Crazy Quilt'

Marrs Predicts Attack Would Blow Present Laws 'Sky High'

Appointment of a committee to draft a new Texas sanity code for proposal to the legislature was unanimously authorized at a lightly attended meeting of the County Judges and Commissioners association of the 13th congressional district, held here Saturday.

George Smoot, local attorney and author of the recently publishd law volume, "Laws of Insanity," Dr. C. W. Castner, superintendent of the Wichita Falls state hospital, and John P. Marrs, Wichita county judge and student of the economic costs of caring for public dependents, were named as members of the committee by H. N. Dearmore, Montague county judge and president of the association. T. K. Howard, county judge of Clay county, made the motion that the committee be appointed.

> The County Judges and Commissioners association of the 13th congressional district probably will be expanded to embrace 50 or 60 counties in Northwest Texas, including the Panhandle, according to the announcement of Judge Dearmore, president.
> Judge Dearmore announced that invitations would be extended to judges and commissioners in a territory yet to be definitely fixed, to attend the meeting in September. Roughly, the territory as planned would extend southward to the Texas and Pacific railway and westward into the Panhandle so as to embrace a fourth of Texas' area.

The committee was requested to report its recommendations to the next district convention to be held in September at a place yet to be designated. The report was requested with the announced intention of appealing to the legislature to amend the present code.

The decision to appoint the committee followed an address by Judge Smoot, who had declared that "Texas has the poorest and

LINDY SMILES AND IT WINS

NORTH BERGEN, N. J., June 22. (INS)—Some people get bawled out, some get fined and some go to jail for violating traffic laws—but hardly a Lindbergh.

Charles A.—The famous colonel of the clouds—drove past a detour sign on Palisade avenue, en route for the home of his parents-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow at Englewood.

"Hey, you—" began Patrolman William Rainer.

Then Lindbergh emerged from his automobile and smiled like he never does for pursuing cameramen.

Heavy Damage Reported to Property and Crops in Scattered Areas

HAIL AND RAIN FALL IN ARCHER CITY SATURDAY

Several Farm Homes Blown From Foundations in Baylor County

Wind, rain and hail storms caused damage to crops and property in scattered sections of Northwest Texas Friday night and Saturday. Wheat harvesting, which is under way in most of this section, was temporarily halted by the rains and in some sections the crops were reported damaged by the hail.

Archer City was the closest point to Wichita Falls at which rain was reported. While the rest of this immediate section sweltered late Saturday afternoon, that place was enjoying a cooling shower, accompanied by some hail.

Probably the heaviest damage to property and farm crops was reported in Baylor county, in the Bomarton vicinity. A number of farm homes were damaged and crops suffered some in the high wind and hail.

FARM LEADERS TO FEEL PULSE OF HOME FOLK

Will Sound Out Opinion Regarding Debenture And Tariff Bill

FORCES ORGANIZED FOR BATTLE ON RECONVENING

Brookhart Believes Progressives Have Votes to Carry Out Plan

By PAUL R. MALLON
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, June 22. (UP)—The farm bloc is going back home over the week-end to sound out opinion among men in the field regarding the debenture and the proposed tariff bill.

After organizing forces here, this independent group which wielded the balance of power during the first two months of President Hoover's special session, is breaking up for a two-months study of conditions and political sentiment in the hinterland.

Senator Norris is returning to Nebraska, Brookhart to Iowa by way of Texas, Nye to North Dakota, Welsh to Montana, while Wheeler, Frazier and La Follette are making a trip through the northwest farm territory with the Indian investigating committee. They will reassemble here before the special session resumes August 19 to plan their program for the tariff fight.

Meanwhile, individual members of the group have been assigned as "home work" individual investigations of particular tariff schedules in order that they may be armed for the debate in the fall.

Plans Not Perfected

Just how the group will attack the tariff problem is not yet decided.

They have agreed they will hammer at the sugar and shoe schedules particularly, those being two items which affect every man, woman and child in the country. Before their program is definitely outlined, however, they wish to see the people back home, and also find out what the Democrats are going to do.

Their position in the senate situation at present is not as strong as their formidable numerical strength would indicate. They can function as a majority only in concert with the Democrats and no one is certain how closely the Democrats will work with them.

For instance, when the debenture

BANDITS ROB TRAIN AND WOUND ENGINEER LOOT TOTALS $20,000

PITTSBURGH, Calif., June 22. (UP)—Train bandits who wounded the engineer and robbed the mail car of a Southern Pacific local near here here today of $20,000 were sought tonight throughout Northern and Central California.

Armed with a machine gun and automatic pistols, five men succeeded in stopping the train, holding the train crew at bay and looting the mail car of registered mail.

Passengers aboard the train were driven from the coaches and lined up on the right of way. They were prevented from interfering by a bandit who threatened them with machine gun fire if they should make a false move.

The bandits made their escape in two automobiles, one of which was found burning several hours later near Concord, in the Berkeley Hills.

Pittsburgh and Contra Costa county officers believed they had the robbers surrounded and that they would arrest them within a few hours.

J. H. Barnes, the engineer, of Oakland, was shot through the left shoulder by one of the men when he refused to back up the train to a point where one of the automobiles was stationed.

Physicians at the Martinez hospital said that Barnes' condition at present was not serious and would not be so unless complications set in.

The robbery was carried out with precision. Two of the men boarded the train at Bay Point. At a prearranged signal they sauntered to the rear of the train and forced the brakeman to pull the emergency stop signal.

The train drew to a stop several

WHEREABOUTS OF SPANISH AVIATORS REMAINS MYSTERY

RUMORED PLANE HEADED NEWFOUNDLAND COAST

All Day Effort to Confirm Unverified Messages Without Avail

(By United Press)

Two continents awaited anxiously tonight for word of the progress of the projected one-stop flight across the Atlantic of Commander Ramon Franco and three companions in a sturdy Hydroplane.

When they left Cartagena, Spain, Friday afternoon, it was indicated they would fly directly to Horta in the Azores Islands, refuel there, and continue to New York. At midnight tonight (Eastern daylight time) they were 27 hours overdue.

This gave rise to the possibility that the fliers, favored by clear skies, excellent visibility and a moonlit sky last night, might have attempted to continue on to Newfoundland. Officials of the Shell Oil company there said they had received advices that the fliers planned to refuel at Placentia Bay, just outside of St. John's.

Reports they may have landed at some inaccessible spot in the Azores Islands could not be confirmed. Inability of official and semi-official agencies to gain contact with the radio equipped airplane added to the doubtfulness of such reports.

MADRID, Spain, June 22. (UP)—The head of the Italian cable company at Horta, in the Azores Islands, cabled the United Press at Madrid at 10 p. m., Horta time (8

CHICAGO, June 22. (INS)—Five hundred and fifty-eight men, the largest number ever seized here in one place, were in cells and were to be examined at the bureau of identification today after they were seized in a raid conducted upon an alleged gambling house early today in Cicero.

So great was the number that they were distributed over outlying police stations until wagons can be summoned today to convey them to central police headquarters.

Two men, George Kelly and Alfred Orlando, were booked by police as keepers.

The judges indicated, however, that the lawyers' desire to attend the convention would cause the courts to grant continuances where possible.

OFFICERS EXPECT GUN BATTLE WITH ESCAPED CONVICTS

Rangers Join County Officers and Prison Guards In Manhunt

BAY CITY, Texas, June 22. (AP)—A gun battle is believed imminent between posses and three convicts, believed to have engineered the break at Clemens state prison farm near here in which 43 men escaped.

The three men last night held up a Mexican in an automobile near Cedar Lane and forced him to drive them north.

The men, all heavily armed, kept the Mexican covered until they reached a point near Magnet, 13 miles north of here, where they ran out of gas and had a flat tire.

"This is as far as we can go," the Mexican said he told the convicts.

The trio swore at him, he said, and told him:

"You fix the damned tire, and we'll get some damned gasoline."

The Mexican said he watched his chance and jumped a fence into a corn field.

"They shot at me several times," he said.

He was not hit. When the men held him up, though, he said, they fired one shot through the car.

Posses from Matagorda and Wharton county, joined the prison guard manhunters under the direction of state rangers Wheatley and Moore and trailed the men to a string of work cars on a railway siding near Lane City, seven miles south of Wharton.

One of the men was seen to enter the work cars, and posses

YOUTH KILLED AT SAN ANTONIO AS PARTY STARTS FISHING TRIP CHARGES KILLER STOOL PIGEON

SAN ANTONIO, June 22. (AP)—Before he died today, George Hale, wounded last night, described his killer as a "government stool pigeon." Otto Gahwiler, 11, and John Gill, who had started on a fishing trip with Hale, also were shot.

Mrs. Otto Gahwiler, mother of the boy, was in the machine with the victims, but she was unhurt.

Officers said Gill told them that Hale had declared one of the men who drove up in a "stripped down" automobile and opened fire on the party was a "government stool pigeon" with whom he had had trouble a few hours before.

The motor car carrying the woman, her son, Hale and Gill, had started to leave from in front of Hale's gasoline station when the shooting occurred.

HOUSTON DETECTIVE KILLED AND SLAYER FATALLY WOUNDED

HOUSTON, June 22. (AP) — Oscar Hope, veteran city vice squad raider, was killed instantly and Henry Charles, 26, a negro he had undertaken to arrest died 10 minutes after a gun battle between the negro and Hope and Hope's partner, Ira Nex at a Bayou street house tonight.

Hope was shot as he entered the house to place the negro under arrest. Nix, who had gone to the back door, forced his way in and shot the negro twice in the chest.

Mrs. Hope, who had gone to the station to take Hope home, drove the car that carried her husband to his death. She waited in the machine for the officers to make the arrest and during the firing remained only a few feet away.

Police began a search for two negro women who had occupied the house for the past three weeks.

Hope and Nix went to the house on complaint of a negro, who had reported Charles was in the house and threatening to kill anyone who came near him. The negro told Officer Hope just before he entered the house that the negro had sworn not to submit to arrest.

LEGISLATURE GOES INTO FINAL WEEK SPECIAL SESSION

Major Legislation Ready For Disposition in Next Eight Days

SCHOOL APPROPRIATION BILL CHIEF OBSTACLE

Extra Session Next Fall On Prison Relocation Almost Certain

AUSTIN, June 22. —Everything is ship-shape with the legislature. With eight days to go, practically all the important legislation is in favorable position for disposition during this special session.

Conference committees have agreed to all appropriation bills except the educational and rural school aid measures. The main contention will come up over the education bill, the senate measure being virtually $5,000,000 in excess of the house draft, but it is believed the comparative tranquility will not be disturbed and the membership will continue its peaceful attitude.

Some believe that the bringing of charges against J. T. Robison, land commissioner, had a "quieting" effect on the heretofore rather restless legislature.

The house has sent the two chief revenue producing bills—gasoline tax and motor vehicle registration fee measures—over to the senate. The two bodies practically are agreed on the creation of a commission to study the penitentiary concentration proposal, there being only minor details to be worked out. The senate has the measure strengthening "blue sky" restrictions to the house. The two bodies have entered into a rather practical swapping match if not a systematic method of dispatching business.

It is a foregone conclusion there will be a special session next fall or winter to consider recommenda-

Oklahoma Woman Wounds Estranged Husband After Announcing to Crowd That She Had Shot Parents of Rival

AFTON, Okla., June 22. (UP)—Calmly announcing to a crowd of people standing nearby that she had just shot a Mr. and Mrs. Williams at Armstrong's Ferry, 15 miles south of here, Mrs. Phil Green, Miami rooming house keeper, drove to the garage of her estranged husband here, called him out and shot him twice in the abdomen and once in the chest near the heart about 6 o'clock Saturday night. Green was in a serious condition late Saturday night and was not expected to live.

According to the few words Mrs. Green told the few that heard her just before she shot her husband, she had gone to Armstrong's Ferry about 5:30 to kill the daughter of Williams, with whom she said her husband had been keeping company. Not finding the girl at home, she told the crowd, she shot the parents, wounding both only slightly in the arm. She then came back to Afton and fired three shots into her husband's body.

Prosecution Plans To Counteract Plea Insanity Dr. Snook

COLUMBUS, O., June 22. (UP)—Determined to counteract a plea of insanity, the state late today had three alienists examine Dr. James H. Snook, confessed slayer of Theora Hix, Ohio state university co-ed.

The alienists, Dr. E. E. Gaver, Dr. William Pritchard and Dr. Robert Tarbell, all of Columbus, examined Snook as the bespectacled professor's attorneys prepared for his arraignment Monday on a charge of first degree murder.

Snook, admitted lover of the girl, who he says he killed "to protect his family," has intimated he will plead guilty if his attorneys will permit.

On the other hand, the state, expecting a plea of insanity, seized upon the opportunity to have Snook examined by state alienists before the defense called in their own alienists.

Prosecutor Chester said he would seek an early trial for the deposed professor, "who wants to get it over quickly," and would attempt to prove Snook was sane when he inflicted seventeen punctures in his victim's head with a hammer and then cut her throat with his pocket knife.

Snook confessed he slashed the girl's throat because he "hated to see her suffer."

The state will contend the cutting of Miss Hix's jugular vein was done with premeditation.

The body of Miss Hix was removed from its sealed casket late today and again examined by physicians. It will be left unsealed, pending word from Chester, then will be shipped to Binghamton, N. Y., for burial. Miss Hix attended private school at Binghamton.

Farmers of Wheat Belt Smile as They "Listen In" and Hear Reports That Will Mean Millions to Them

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 22. (UP)—Wheat farmers are smiling, for as they tuned their radios for the market reports today they heard news which will mean millions to the men and women who help fill the world's bread basket.

Wheat was on the uptrend. That was the topic of conservation at every hamlet and town in the wheat belt as farmers and their families purchased last minute supplies before launching one of the greatest harvests in the history of Kansas.

What was good news for Kansas, Oklahoma and Nebraska wheat growers was bad news for wheat growers of the north as reports of cold weather and lack of rain in North Dakota and Canada reached the world's markets.

For more than a month midwest wheat growers have been faced with the prospect of a bumper crop and a slumping market. Today market reports showed the market on an uptrend, making a gain of 2 and 2½ cents at Chicago.

The harvest already is underway in Oklahoma and Monday will see giant threshers and combines creeping over Kansas prairies.

While the wheat outlook was optimistic today, considerable concern was epressed over the corn crop. Floods and cool weather delayed corn and much of the planting has just been completed, long after schedule time.

Oats, which were on an uptrend, are good and will bring considerable revenue to the grain belts.

SMOOT ASSAILS INSANITY LAWS

most incomplete code with reference to the trying of insanity cases of any state in the United States."

Texas Code "Crazy Quilt"

"The Texas code is a crazy quilt," he declared, as he related that persons charged with being insane are tried before six jurors who make no pretense of being experts on mental questions, and usually are tried without being represented by counsel of their own.

"The law leaves opportunity for unscrupulous persons to bring to unfair trial those whom they desire to be rid of," the attorney continued.

Judge Smoot expressed the opinion that at least one, and desirably more, of those who pass upon questions of sanity should be an expert.

"As it now stands," he continued, "six men who are 'picked up' casually by an officer are called into court to pass as jurors upon mental questions which, in frequent cases, specialists cannot decide."

Judge Smoot made two recommendations. One was that a commission should be appointed by the legislature to design a new sanity code. The other was that something should be done to 'get around' the law which virtually eliminates the expert from passing on questions of sanity.

Another address, delivered by Dr. Castner, contrasted the care of insanity patients today with that of a few years ago.

No More Padded Cells

"You will look in vain in the hospital of today for such things as the padded cell, the straight jacket, anchor chains and similar contrivances," he continued. "Instead, we have the closed sleeve dress and the restraining sheet, both of which leave the patient freedom of movement."

One great handicap faced by such state institutions, he continued, is a financial one. He asserted that only 80 cents per day per patient is available for all costs, excepting that of construction and maintenance of plants. There is little prospect, he added, that the amount will be increased in the near future.

Insanity cases, he explained, may be divided into three general classes—the defectives; those resulting from 'mental decay', of which senility is the most frequent type; and the mental cases, which are those resulting from such things as physical illness, pellegra, social diseases, alcoholism and drugs.

The fact that long strides are being made is emphasized, he said, by the fact that from 58 to 60 per cent of patients are eventually discharged as cured, as compared with a percentage of about 12 a few years ago.

One crying need of the state, he declared, is for a psycopathic hospital where certain types of curable cases may be reached.

Need Buildings Here

The great needs of the Wichita Falls state hospital, he said, are for a surgical building and for a building where tuberculosis patients may be isolated. There is no immediate prospects of getting those buildings, in his opinion.

Miss Katherine Henricle, superintendent of the Children's Aid Society of West Texas, another speaker, told the convention that delinquency and dependency usually walk hand in hand. She cited several individual cases in which, she declared, the lack of opportunities was the sole cause for girls taking a downward path.

"If we give the proper attention to the high chair, there will be cobwebs on the electric chair," she asserted as she closed her talk.

Judge Marrs, Judge Dearmore and Judge Howard were others who took part in the discussion, and they agreed that the cost of public dependents is constantly increasing despite more efficient methods of selection and of care.

Judge Marrs, in particular, criticised present laws relating to insanity. Under those laws, he asserted, those officials and jurors participating in a trial receive compensation only in the event of conviction.

"I believe that if anyone should ever test the present laws of insanity in the supreme court, they would be knocked sky high," Judge Marrs declared.

Most of the remainder of the convention was devoted to routine questions, such as the proper method of taxing oil properties and the best system of purchasing county supplies.

Entertainment features on the day's program included a luncheon at the Kemp hotel tendered by the chamber of commerce and an inspection of the Wichita Falls state hospital.

MILK AND ICE FUND BENEFICIARY SHOWN BEFORE AND AFTER USING COLD MILK DIET

Eloquent appeals are not always verbal ones, say welfare workers of the city, and sometimes the most plaintive hard luck story of all is that of an individual whose whole vocabulary may be a feeble wail. Such was the case not long ago when a pitiful waif was brought to the office of Mrs. Effie McHam, Family Relief secretary. With the face of an old man, hollow cheeks, and dull, hopeless eyes, the infant looked as if it might live only a few hours.

Supplied with milk and ice through The Times-Record News Milk and Ice Fund and cared for through the supervision of the Children's Aid society of West Texas, the child underwent an almost miraculous change in a few short months. The happy, rosy cheeked, chubby boy who laughs from the top picture is the same persons as the starved child below, and the difference in age is only seven months.

hundred feet beyond where the two men's accomplices were waiting in the automobile. The robbers then commanded Barnes to back the train. When he refused he was shot and one of the men jumped into the locomotive cab and backed the train to the spot desired.

The five men then fired shots in the air to warn the mail clerk and then forced G. A. Tyler of Oakland, who was stationed in the mail car, to open the compartment where registered mail was kept.

Two bundles known to have contained $16,000 were taken and six small pouches containing an undetermined amount of loot.

The men then dumped the water from the locomotive tender to encumber the crew in giving an alarm, tossed the mail bags into an automoble and sped away.

It is presumed that the bandits were after the $150,000 payroll of the Columbia Steel company of this city. The payroll, however, was received by company officials yesterday.

ILLINOIS CHURCH WILL CELEBRATE CENTENNIAL

GALENA, Ill., June 22. (AP)—Harking back 100 years to the precarious days when white settlers fought the devil with faith and the Indians with powder, the First Methodist Episcopal church of Galena tomorrow begins a week's celebration of its centennial.

Not least in the lore of the church is a silver plate fixed to one of its pews, bearing the inscription: "U. S. Grant, 1859-1863."

The exact date of the little church's founding is not known, but historians place its birth at some time during 1828 or 1829.

General Grant and his family attended the church regularly during the pastorate of Bishop John H. Vincent, who achieved fame as a founder of the national chautauqua movement.

MYSTERY SHROUDS SPANISH AVIATORS

p. m., Eastern Standard time), tonight, declaring that no news of the arrival of Commander Ramon Franco and his three Spanish air companions had been received at Horta or at San Miguel Island, most easterly of the Azores group, or at any of the Azores Islands.

Madrid Rejoices

MADRID, June 22. (AP)—All Spain tonight, after a day of uncertainties and conflicting reports, rejoiced over a radio message from Major Ramon Franco that he had arrived safely with his three fellow aviators at the isolated island of San Miguel, the Azores.

Not only were the fliers and their plane safe but it was reported that they would resume their flight toward New York tomorrow afternoon. No explanation was received why they chose to land at the easternmost point of the island group instead of at Horta, where supplies would have been available readily and their safe arrival immediately flashed to the world.

It was understood here that the fliers tomorrow would make an effort to reach New York without a stop.

Planned Surprise

NEW YORK, June 22. (UP)—The possibility that the Spanish fliers, unreported since last night on their flight from Spain to the United States via the Azores, may have continued on towards Newfoundland gained attention tonight.

The United Press correspondent at St. Johns, Newfoundland, learned today that the Shell Oil company had notified its agent at Placentia, on Placentia Bay, near St. Johns, that Capt. Ramon Franco and his three companions intended to land there for refueling.

The suggestion that Franco and his companions had determined to startle the world by making the first leg of the one-stop flight from Cartagena, Spain, to New York, to Newfoundland instead of to the Azores as he had announced, found support in the fact that they carried a full load of gasoline at the take-off—more than sufficient to reach the Azores, and enough to have reached Newfoundland.

The fact that the Shell Oil company knew Franco intended landing at Placentia, although the Spaniards had made no mention of touching any place in the vicinity except possibly Halifax, Nova Scotia, seemed to indicate to many that Franco and his aides had planned to surprise the world by disapperaing in mid-Atlantic and reapperaing more than 1,300 miles from where he had been expected. Extreme secrecy also marked their take-off.

Officials and others at Horta, in the Azores, according to cable reports from there, expressed the opinion that it was unlikely that the fliers would have landed anywhere in the Azores without having been reported at some time throughout the day.

If the fliers maintained the slow speed of 60 miles an hour which they were making when last sighted near Gibraltar they would not arrive at Placentia before sometime well after midnight. Officials on the Newfoundland coast were keeping a lookout throughout the night for them. Cable advices from Madrid indicated that although the fliers were some 16 hours overdue at the Azores at midnight (7 p. m. E. S. T.). Neither the officials nor the populace seemed concerned. The officials asserted they had been unable to confirm reports that the fliers had landed at the Azores at 8 a. m. (6 a. m. E. S. T.), but the populace continued to believe the reports without confirmation. Officials assert that the Dolrner 16 is a sturdily built machine and that even though forced to alight at sea it is most probable that they are safe.

Hawks After New Record

NEW YORK, June 22. (UP)—Breakfast in Los Angeles Monday morning, dinner here that night, then back to the west coast Tuesday, is pilot Frank M. Hawks' schedule for the next few days.

The flier, holder of the present non-stop trans-continental record of 18 hours, 22 minutes, believes that with fair weather he has an excellent chance of holding to his ambitious program. He set his previous record despite storms and adverse winds.

Captain Hawks, flying alone, expects to leave Los Angeles at 1 a. m. Monday, Pacific Coast time. His schedule calls for arrival at Roosevelt field, near here at 10 p. m. Eastern daylight time, without a stop en route. Then, after a few hours rest, he will start back west at 4 a. m. Tuesday.

The veteran aviator, now aeronautical adviser to the Texas Oil company, will use a Lockheed-Vega plane similar to the one in which he set the trans-continental record. It is powered with a single 420 horse-power Pratt and Whitney motor and has a maximum speed of more than 180 miles an hour.

Christening Plane Postponed

KANSAS CITY, June 22. (UP)—Christening of a trans-continental air transport plane as the "Kansas City," was postponed here today when the plane was unable to continue its flight from St. Louis.

The ceremonies were to have marked the breaking of ground for the new transcontinental station at Richards airport. The plane left Columbus, O., on schedule time. From St. Louis it was rerouted to Oklahoma City and to Wichita.

PRINCE OF WALES CELEBRATES 35TH BIRTHDAY SUNDAY

Will Be Spent Mostly At Country House at Sunningdale

HEIR TO THRONE PASSES HIS MOST CROWDED YEAR

Many Affairs of State Fall Upon Shoulders on Account Illness

LONDON, June 22. (UP)—The Prince of Wales tomorrow will celebrate his 35th birthday, still the world's most eligible bachelor.

The day will be spent mostly at the prince's country house at Sunningdale, but late in the day he is expected to motor to Windsor castle to visit the king and queen.

The 35th year of the prince's life has been his most crowded year. The illness of his father resulted in many of the affairs of state falling heavily upon his shoulders.

As the prince came nearer to the stage where he must take over the rule of the 400,000,000 subjects he has had to limit his play time and the last year has seen him give up two of his favorite diversions, hunting and dancing.

The sale of the prince's stable of hunters last winter was one of the sensations of his career. He rarely is seen in the dance clubs and restaurants and has attended only a few public dances during the year. His presence at these was more in the nature of duty than pleasure.

The dawn of the prince's 36th year finds him with a pronounced horror of getting fat and to offset this inclination he takes a "daily dozen" regularly every morning. He plays golf considerably and pays heed to his need for exercise. Recently he was partnered with Walter Hagen in a golf foursome and drew favorable comment for his fame from one of the world's greatest golfers.

The royal match makers have all but given up in despair over the prince. Numerous rumors as to his likely mate on the throne of Great Britain have continued during his 35th year, but with less zest than before. Princess Ingrid of Sweden has been the latest to have her name coupled with that of the Prince of Wales in matrimonial gossip but the gossip was short lived when it was authoritatively announced that no alliance of the sort was contemplated.

Another of the big features of the prince's last year was his spectacular dash from the interior of Africa to the bedside of his father when the king was believed to be near the point of death. Every means of communication and travel from the most primitive to the most modern was called into service to get the heir apparent to the monarch's side.

WANTED TO BE HAPPY AND BECOME AN ARTIST

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 22. (UP)—Five years ago a bright-eyed girl came to Kansas City with the dream of becoming an artist. Today she was found dead in a cheap rooming house. She had taken poison because her dream had proved a dream only.

She was Miss Margaret Hutchison, who came here from a farm home near Savannah, Mo.

"If I could only be happy and have become an artist," was her last message, scribbled over a pencil sketch of several children.

Wichitan Suffered Since a Child Makes Statement

"Orgatone Is the First Medicine I Have Found to Give Me Relief, I Am Proud to Tell About It," He Says

"Yes, ever since I was 10 years old, I have suffered from stomach trouble. Anything I ate soured on my stomach, and I would suffer from acute indigestion," said H. P. Clements, living on rural route 6, Wichita Falls, Texas, while talking with the Orgatone representative.

"I got to where every time I would bend over, my head would swim and I'd turn blind from biliousness, and would have to hold to something to keep from falling. I had severe headaches, and was very nervous. Gas formed on my stomach, and would cause misery for me, for hours, after every meal. I had attacks of indigestion so bad I would cramp and suffer something terrible. Twice I had to be carried off my job, for I wasn't able to walk. I was very restless and at times, wouldn't get but two or three hours of sleep. I guess I had taken about enough of soda to load a freight car, and every other kind of medicine I heard of.

"A friend of mine advised me to try Orgatone. I got a bottle and right from the very first few doses, noticed a great change in my condition. Since taking two bottles, I am feeling just fine. I'm not bothered at all now, with those gas and bilious spells, and I eat anything I want and it digests perfectly. My constipation has been relieved, and those terrible headaches are gone. I haven't had a real bad spell of indigestion since the first dose of Orgatone. Orgatone is the first medicine I have ever found to give me relief, and I want others to know about what it has done for me."

Genuine Orgatone is not a so-called secret or patent remedy but a new scientific preparation and, is sold in Wichita Falls, exclusively by Allison's Drug Store, under the personal direction of a special Orgatone representative.—Adv.

SHORTEN TOTAL TERM SINCLAIR

Court Permits Sentences to Run Concurrently

WASHINGTON, June 22. (AP)—The nine months Harry F. Sinclair was sentenced to serve in jail was cut short by one month today, the District of Columbia supreme court permitting the two sentences imposed on the millionaire oil man to run concurrently.

Chief Justice McCoy, imposing contempt sentence on Sinclair for jury shadowing in the Fall-Sinclair oil conspiracy trial, failed to order that the six month term begin at the expiration in late July, of the three month sentence Sinclair now is serving for refusal to answer questions asked by a senate committee.

Simultaneously with imposing the new sentence the court sentenced H. Mason Day, vice president in one of Sinclair's oil companies, to four months for conviction in the jury shadowing case, and also imposed a fine of $1,000 on W. Sherman Burns, head of the Burns detective agency.

William J. Burns, father of Sherman and a former head of the agency, recently had removed by the supreme court of the United States a sentence of 15 days imposed by lower courts.

The two sentences running concurrently Sinclair, with time off for good behavior, will complete his jail sentences about Nov. 22. Had the court ordered the sentence in the jury shadowing case to run after the expiration of the sentence in the senate contempt case, Sinclair with time off for good behavior would have remained in jail until about Dec. 22.

SEMINOLE FIELD SHOWS GAIN IN OIL PRODUCTION

(Special to The Times)

TULSA, Okla., June 22. — The Seminole field produced 380,030 barrels from 1,953 wells, showing a gain of 3,503 barrels over the previous week's output.

Magnolia Petroleum company's and Pierce Petroleum corporation's No. 1 Hubanks in 17-7-4, in the northeast extension to the Pearson pool in the St. Louis area, suddenly went dead Friday afternoon after producing 1,521 barrels and Saturday morning, the well had 1,000 feet of water and no oil in the hole.

The two oil wells in the Oklahoma City area produced 4,959 barrels of oil during the past 24 hours. The discovery well made 2,425 barrels of oil and 862 barrels of water.

The output of the Texas Panhandle field was 95,070 barrels a day from 1,570 wells for the past fiscal week. Showing a gain of 8,665 barrels a day over the preceding week.

Col. Henry Rogers To Get Divorce In Dutch Court

UTRECHT, Holland, June 22. (US)—The judicial decree divorcing Col. Henry H. Rogers, Standard Oil multimillionaire, and Mrs. Mary Benjamin Rogers, of New York, will be pronounced in the district court here next Wednesday, June 26, it was learned in official circles today.

Colonel Rogers is living here in the strictest retirement, following his return from a trip to Germany, and refuses himself to all callers except his most intimate friends. Mrs. Rogers is believed to be in Paris, where she has established a residence. They are the parents of Mrs. Millicent Rogers Ramos, former wife of Count Salm von Hoogstraeten.

The divorce code in Holland is built upon the celebrated code of Napoleon, which fostered many American divorces in Paris until the rigid investigation into the divorce laws not long ago.

ENGINEER HAS PLAN FOR AVOIDING CROSSINGS

MORE DIRECT AND LESS DANGEROUS ROUTE SUBMITTED

A plan for avoiding the dangerous grade crossings of the Fort Worth and Denver and the M-K-T railways east of the city on the Fort Worth highway, for shortening the time required in reaching the business district and for providing a more direct route to the bridges over the Big Wichita and north and west highway has been submitted to The Times by W. E. Bernhard, civil engineer.

His plan, a drawing of which printed herewith, calls for the continuation of the highway westward paralleling for a part of the distance the Fort Worth and Denver tracks to a connection with Seventh street between Lee and Adams streets, and an underpass of the railroad tracks on Seventh street.

Mr. Bernhard in submitting his plan, sent a letter with it outlining some of its advantages. His letter follows:

Editor The Times:

Realizing the integral part that your good paper plays in the progress of our fair city and the cooperative spirit you exhibit in all matters promoting the welfare of the citizens, I am submitting a plan for correcting a traffic problem that confronts us with the hope that you will find space for its publication.

Though I had conceived this idea many years ago its real value was not sufficiently significant to me to construct the accompanying map and request its publication had not my procrastination been forcibly and vividly been brought to my attention by a personal experience on a return motor trip from Fort Worth recently at one of our railroad crossings just east of town.

Though my experience was at a given point on the present route from the Ray Sheet Metal works on the Henrietta road to the business section, the point was only one of a dozen that could produce unfortunate and serious results. One's memory is not greatly taxed to recall the many regrettable accidents along this route, not to mention the aggravating and unnecessary delays that constantly confront the traveler of this stretch.

There has in the past been suggested a correction for these conditions by the construction of an underpass at the Fort Worth and Denver and the M-K-T railroad highway crossings. While this, of course, will eliminate hazards at these two crossings it is merely "a cold patch on a worn out inner tube." I cannot see the reason for such an undertaking, and if the action of our more mature close neighbors, both Fort Worth and Dallas, be criterion, anything but a modification of the plan that I am submitting would be merely a relief and not corrective; for both these cities have approaches, in principle, closely resembling my plan.

Timidity cannot be practiced in creating major civic improvements, and usually such undertakings call for harsh and apparently rash expenditures, due to the improvement taking in generally the most valuable property in a city; however, in this instance and in strict contrast this project would call for the acquiring of the cheapest land in the city and as I see it would create little basis for claim for damages, but would create considerable amount of enhancement in property valuations by opening up a stagnant area and creating new districts desirable to commercial interests.

This, of course, is but economic reasoning. The humanitarian side of an argument in its favor is self evident, for the eliminating of three main line track grade crossings, the doing away with a dozen turns and many switch tracks are more compelling. With inter-city motor travel having increased several hundred per cent in the past few years, the peak of the increase curve not nearly approached and the safe travel speed ever increasing, I cannot but feel that such a civic improvement both warranted and justified.

A recapitulation of facts concerning this plan are given below, over a route from the point marked with a cross at the highway crossing over the Denver tracks at the Ray Sheet Metal works to the intersection of Seventh street with Ohio avenue.

Present Scott street route: Has 10 turns; crosses four railroad tracks (three main line and 1 switch track); traverses street occupied by trolley traffic; length of this route 2.7 miles.

Present Indiana avenue route: Has 12 turns; crosses six railroad tracks (three main line and three switch tracks); traverses street with trolley traffic; length 2.6 miles.

Ohio avenue route: Has 10 turns; crosses nine railroad tracks (three main line and six switch tracks); length 2.5 miles.

Proposed inter-cities boulevard: Eliminates 10 or 12 dangerous turns; has but one high speed, long radius curve; has but one imperceptible turn; crosses no main line track at grade; crosses but one spur track at grade which might be eliminated; total length between same points, 2 miles; shortens distance between same points 0.7 miles or 26 per cent.

Possible to travel between same points in one-sixth the time required to negotiate either of the existing routes and this estimate, without even considering many possible tieups at a dozen points, namely, main line tracks, switch tracks, trolley tracks, congested traffic streets and signal lights.

Segregates slow and high speed traffic.

Properly routes through traffic and opens interstate lanes.

Forms a direct connecting link with traffic lane across new Scott street bridge.

Opens up a neglected territory east of the ball park which will be enhanced in valuation and the city enriched by additional taxes.

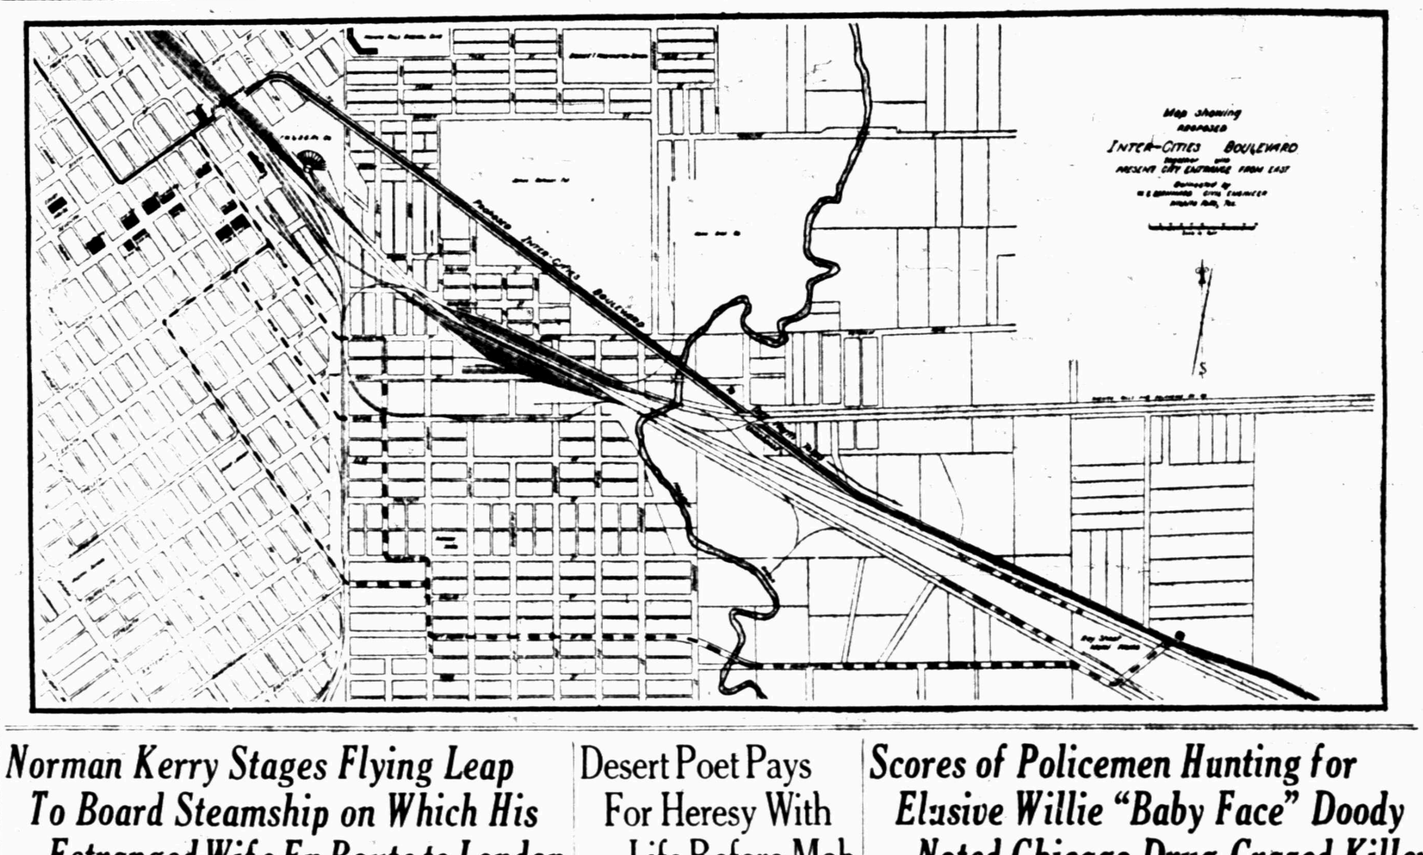

The right of way passes through the cheapest land territory in the vicinity of Wichita Falls so that this major improvement can be created at a minimum expense.

It would eliminate traffic congestion after ball games, fairs and circuses at the ball park.

It would for all time eliminate the most hazardous entrance to any progressive city the writer has had the opportunity to vis-

Thanking you for your valuable space and looking forward in the near future to seeing the "City that Faith Built," take this important step toward the protection of the motoring public, and the advancement toward civic perfection, which each citizen's pride demands for his city, I am,

Sincerely yours,
W. E. BERNHARD.

Glasgow Stops "Sweeps"

Sweepstakes on horse racing have been discontinued in Glasgow, Scotland, as the result of the intervention of city officials who declared them to be lotteries and therefore illegal. The decision came just before the recent English Derby at Epsom downs after large sums had been paid into the pools, and presented a problem of refunding the money to those who had bought tickets. Among the largest "sweeps" were those of the stock exchange, the royal exchange, and the Glasgow Fish Trade association.

Norman Kerry Stages Flying Leap To Board Steamship on Which His Estranged Wife En Route to London

NEW YORK, June 22. (INS)—Norman Kerry is on the Majestic today, quite far at sea, but how he got on that liner is a story that smacks of the movies in which he ranks as a star.

Furthermore, he got on without a ticket or a passport. The Majestic was full—every cabin full. Also aboard was Mrs. Kerry, his estranged wife. The missus has only a single room. She's on her way to see their daughter in a London school.

And Mr. Kerry, it is said, is trying to effect a re-conciliation.

But here's how Mr. Kerry entered without paying. The actor fought to board the steamer by way of the gangplank two minutes before the boat sailed. Lacking ticket, passport or other credentials, he was thrust off the plank. Immediately he ran forward, scaled the fence in front of the baggage compartment on pier 59 and leaped on the escalator which conveys passengers' trunks into the hold of the ship.

Several of the crew sought to seize Kerry but he evaded them.

"Mr. Kerry did not come to see me off and I certainly did not expect him," Mrs. Kerry said. "I read the story this morning in which he said that he expected a reconciliation but I do not expect any such development. It is possible, but only possible, I might be willing to accept reconciliation, but there is really nothing for me to say."

The screen star will not require a passport unless he attempts to land in England. But the steamer is filled to capacity and Mrs. Kerry's suite consists of a single room. The couple are divorced but the decree is not effective for a year.

10,000 Cyclists Honor Dead

Nearly 10,000 cyclists, many of whom had ridden all night from the extremes of England and Wales gathered on a recent Sunday morning before the National Cyclists' memorial at Meriden, believed to be the exact center of England. About 3,000 of the cyclists were girls, and most of them wore cycling breeches. A brief service was held at the memorial, which was erected seven years ago to commemorate cyclists killed in the world war.

Desert Poet Pays For Heresy With Life Before Mob

SAMARKAND, Turkestan, June 22. (INS)—Hakim Zade, beloved "desert poet," who several years ago renounced Mohammed and became an atheist, paid his "heresy" with his life. Hakim fell victim to one of the most ghastly ritual murders recorded in Turkestan in more than a decade.

Hakim volunteered to spread anti-Moslem teachings in the stronghold of the Moslem faith at Shachimardan, Turkestan and worked among the people for several months. He read his atheist poems to crowds in the market place. Recently a mob, alleged to have been led by a dozen priests, grabbed the pleading poet on the stone platform in the market place. They tied his arms and legs to the yolks of four oxen and then whipped up the animals so that his body literally was torn limb from limb. The crowd, cowed by the chanting of the priests, failed to protest.

Soviet authorities arrested nearly 100 participants in the crime. The prosecutor has demanded the death penalty for 54 of them, mostly priests and sheiks.

Rent, Two Cents a Year, Unpaid

An estate manager in Scotland has a problem in connection with a "peppercorn rent," a custom dating from the Middle Ages, of paying a small amount, usually a pound of peppercorn or the equivalent, to keep alive the title of an estate. One tenant paid two cents a year rent, it costing the agent three cents in postage to notify him that rent day had arrived. Last year the tenant failed to pay, and recently died two cents in arrears.

NEW YORK, June 22. (AP)—News of the death in Paris of Edna McCauley, known a generation ago as "the prettiest actress on Broadway," was received by friends today.

Scores of Policemen Hunting for Elusive Willie "Baby Face" Doody Noted Chicago Drug-Crazed Killer

CHICAGO, June 22. (UP)—Elusive Willie "Baby Face" Doody, drug-crazed killer, tonight was the object of the biggest manhunt staged here since the escape of "Terrible" Tommy O'Connor from a death cell in the county jail.

With a price of $7,000 on his head federal, county and city sleuths deployed to hunt down the man who for several weeks has ranged the metropolitan area, more banditry and murders being chalked up against him daily.

While county highway police watched the roads leading out of Chicago, 25 detective squads, armed with shotguns, cooperated with 35 postal inspectors to comb the city's badlands.

The third murder victim attributed to Doody died today. He was Milton Vausouopolis, resturanteur. Vausouopolis was fatally wounded Thursday when a gunman, identified as Doody, dashed into his place and leveled two guns across the counter. The killer emptied both guns into Vausouopolis' abdomen.

Doody's other two alleged murder victims were Chief of Police Charles Levy of Berwyn, slain when he tried to arrest the bandit on an automobile theft charge, and Leon Raymond, druggist, shot to death after he testified before a grand jury that Doody was the man who had robbed the postoffice substation in his store.

In addition to the three murders he is charged with, Doody also is suspected of having shot and wounded United States Postal Inspector Evan L. Jackson several months ago when the federal officer laid a trap for him, and then shot Sergeant Clarence Falk of the Forest Preserve police, when the latter tried to place him under arrest.

Doody bobbed up today to stage his 13th holdup of the morning. Earl Bent, a taxicab driver, was the victim.

"Hand over your cash and be fast about it," Doody said. "You're the 13th guy I've got this morning and I've a hunch you're unlucky. I guess I'll kill you just for luck."

Bent pleaded with the killer to spare his life, and he did.

Police are ordered to shoot to kill when they sight Doody. It is reported he carries a can of nitroglycerin to "blow to smithereens any cops that get close enough to him." Doody, it was said, is determined to destroy as many policemen as possible before he is killed.

Doody, according to the police, is a drug addict.

"He is also 'stir crazy'," said Deputy Commissioner of Police John Stege. "'Stir' means prison and after a fellow has served time as a convict he becomes stir crazy. Those kind of fellows take to drugs quickly and are liable to do almost anything."

FEARING MOB THREATS PRISONER IS REMOVED TO AN UNKNOWN JAIL

TEXARKANA, Texas, June 22. (UP)—Fearing mob threats, officers held Osie Nix, 23, in seclusion tonight after he had alleged to have confessed to fatally poisoning his 16-year-old wife in an effort to secure $1,000 in insurance.

Nix was spirited away from his home community of Rock Creek to an unannounced destination.

American Singer Praised by Paris Musical Critics

PARIS, June 22. (UP)—Parisian music critics were enthusiastic today in their praise of Miss Hope Hampton, the American film star who abandoned the pictures for an operatic career and who scored a brilliant success in the title role of Manon at the opera comique.

Miss Hampton made her European debut last night before a distinguished audience which included General Pershing and Norman Armour, American charge d' affaires. The critics hailed her as the finest acting manon ever seen in the French state theater, attributing her excellent acting to the training she had received in Hollywood.

The American singer received seven curtain calls at the end of the last act.

ELIZABETH MURRAY TO FEDERAL REFORMATORY

DALLAS, Texas, June 22. (UP)—Elizabeth Murray, listed in "who's who" as an author and lecturer and descendant of the famous revolutionary family for whom Murray Hill in New York was named, was taken from the Dallas county jail today to enter the Woman's Federal Reformatory at Alderson, W. Va.

Mrs. Murray was sentenced to 15 months in prison after conviction on a charge of using the mails to defraud in connection with a "Literary Society" she was organizing, the membership in which was $1,000 yearly.

Mrs. Murray was one of a party of 10 men and women being taken to the Federal prison by B. W. Yeager, deputy United States Marshal, and Mrs. Yeager.

ADMISSION FEE TO LAKESIDE PARK TO BE DISCONTINUED

Discontinuance of the 10-cent gate fee at Lakeside Park is announced to the public by Walter W. Peltier, general manager, beginning Monday, June 24. This step will throw the park open to patrons without any admission charge whatever.

Public opinion, which has apparently failed to favor the charge at the gate, receipts from which were to be used for the booking of high class vaudeville attractions at the park, has led to the elimination of the fee, the park manager states.

It was the intention of park officials, he said, to make Lakeside park modern in every respect as far as possible, and to this end the 10-cent fee was decided upon, which was to be devoted in its entirety to staging vaudeville acts of the highest type. Several Majestic acts, booked for Saturday night and the ensuing week, have been cancelled and no further vaudeville performances will be presented at the park.

"We regret that the public of Wichita Falls has not seen fit to support our plan," Mr. Peltier said, "but if park patrons prefer to eliminate the vaudeville attractions which have depended upon gate receipts, we are glad to conduct the park during the remainder of the summer in accordance with their sentiment. The park belongs to the public, and it is our desire to make the park desirable to the public in every way."

STIMSON REPORTS PROGRESS TOWARD PLAN TO DISARM

Admits Negotiations on Both Sides Atlantic in 'Laborious' Stage

SCANT CONCERN GIVEN FREEDOM OF THE SEAS

Declines to Discuss Divergence of Views Over Terms of Plan

WASHINGTON, June 22. (US)—Progress toward an eventful conference on disarmament was announced by Secretary of State Stimson today. The secretary admitted that negotiations on both sides of the Atlantic are now in what he termed the "laborious" stage.

Scant concern is being given the freedom of the seas thesis of Senator Borah in these international preliminaries, it was learned. While Secretary Stimson declined to discuss the divergence of views existing between the administration's conception of disarmament and the senator's, it is known that the Borah plan is not being seriously considered at this stage of the negotiations.

It also developed today that Ambassador Dawes had informally presented the text of his Pilgrims society speech to several important diplomats in London for advance consideration. Special significance was attached to the admission of Secretary Stimson that the Japanese ambassador, Mr. Matsudaira, was one of those diplomats so favored. The subsequent statement of the Japanese prime minister, Tanaka, of the readiness of his country to subscribe to any movement towards effective arms reduction was a direct result of this gesture of Ambassador Dawes, it is believed here.

Secret diplomacy will have no part in the preparation of the next conference, official circles assured correspondents. Every step in the negotiations has been made in the light of publicity and all further negotiations will be conducted in the same fashion, it was stated.

Whether or not the next meeting will be held under the auspices of the League of Nations or of the United States was not disclosed by Secretary Stimson. He did make it plain, however, that the United States "recognized the existence of machinery" for reducing armaments is already contained in the functions of the League of Nations. He declared that so far as is contemplated at this present time, the United States has no determination to call a conference separate and distinct from the league.

The visit of Premier MacDonald will precede any announcement of a conference, it is confidently felt.

SUCCESSFUL OPERATION TRANSFUSION OF BLOOD DEAD PERSON TO LIVING

CLUJ, Rumania, June 22. (AP)—Transfusion of blood from a dead person to one on the point of death was accomplished here yesterday, effecting what is believed to be the first successful operation of its kind.

The doctors at a local hospital joined the arm of a girl, Rosa Jancu, at the moment she had died of injuries sustained in an automobile accident, to the arm of a man, George Morar, who had stabbed himself in his breast and lost most of his blood.

Morar, considered as dying, it is now believed will recover.

EDISON AND FORD USE HAMMERS NOT "KNOCKING" BUT TO WRECK GLASS FOUNDRY INVENTOR USED

PARSIPPANY, N. J., June 22. (US)—Thomas A. Edison and Henry Ford got out their hammers today. They started to wreck the original glass foundry here in which Edison blew his first incandescent lamp.

But this was no act of destruction. Edison had just presented the building to Ford and it is to be removed to the latter's museum at Dearborn. After the two famous inventors had pulled off the first board they turned the job over to a wrecking company.

Edison then gave Ford a wax impression of his famous right hand which has pried into so many secrets of nature and it will be used as the mold for a cast to be placed in the Dearborn museum.

George C. Osborn, director of the General Electric company; W. S. Barstow, president of the Edison pioneer; and John W. Lieb, first vice president of the New York Edison company, took part in the brief ceremony which was attended by about 400 persons.

Ford was highly pleased over the acquisition of Edison trophies for his museum. He said:

"Thomas A. Edison is about the most nearly perfect human being on earth."

That is a Henry Ford opinion. Ford says that to find a man who isn't deeply indebted to Edison it would be necessary to go into the jungle. Edison has made the civilized world a better place for mankind.

After escaping a flashlight explosion at the steamship pier on Friday night Ford went to the Robert Treat hotel in Newark. He left there this morning to attend a ceremony at the creation center of the General Electric company here.

While resting at Newark, Ford discussed the day's news.

Church peace proclaimed in Mexico.

Ford—It's about time. The Lord has to tolerate all these creeds—why not the people and the governments?

Border patrol fires on boat.

Ford—After a few of the old soaks died off the world will not be thinking so much about prohibition. More fuss is made over one prohibition shot than over 50,000 cannon balls fired in a war. The people who are making money in the liquor traffic are hanging on. The shooting scare is part of a propaganda.

Taxi company seeks court action.

Ford—We must have more and cheaper taxis. They are the next step in the evolution of transportation. First the horse-vehicle, then the street car, and now the taxicab. Taxicab transportation will relieve traffic congestion. We are increasing our output from 8,000 to 10,000 a day.

Spanish fliers en route to N. Y.

Ford—Aviation is one of the big fields of future development. It is not in competition with the automobile business. Every man who flies expects to find an automobile waiting for him on the landing field.

Garment workers vote on strike.

Ford—Industry needs a few adjustments here and there. The world needs a few more well-organized industries here and there. Otherwise there is a noticeable improvement in conditions everywhere. We are all better off today than ever before.

Ford is returning immediately to Detroit.

PROHIBIT ARREST RESULT OPENING THEATER SUNDAY

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., June 22. (UP)—Warwick T. Boles, owner of an Independence theater, today was granted a temporary restraining order to prohibit his arrest for operating his picture show on Sundays.

Boles was arrested and fined last week after he operated his show Sunday.

WIND AND FLOODS RESULT IN DAMAGE THROUGH MIDWEST

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 22. (UP)—Rain, assuming almost cloudburst proportions, today swept eastern Kansas, western Missouri and portions of Nebraska, causing thousands of dollars in damage and delaying air, motor and train traffic for several hours.

At Kansas City 3.8 inches of rain fell in less than four hours, flooding the streets and delaying air traffic from Fairfax airport. Water reached a depth of from two to four feet in several down town streets, stalling motor and street cars. Several persons were marooned in motor cars, unable to leave them because of the swift current.

Passenger planes were unable to take off from Fairfax airport when a foot of mud and water covered the airport. No planes left there after 9 a. m.

Topeka had .47 of an inch of rain in 37 minutes, which lowered the temperature 10 degrees in less than a half hour. Damage was reported as nominal.

Eastern and northeastern Nebraska experienced a heavy rain and winds which in some sections assumed twister proportions.

Streams were forced out of their banks in that state by a heavy rain that fell early today over Richardson county. Fear was felt that the Nemaha and Muddy rivers would flood hundreds of acres of newly planted corn land which was washed away by the flood of June 1.

Several farm buildings were destroyed in Kansas and Nebraska when struck by lightning. Lightning struck four Kansas City Traction company cars. No casualties were reported.

At Reserve, Kan., the greatest flood since 1883 was being experienced. Walnut creek was on a rampage and had spread to within a few feet of the depot.

FUNERAL SERVICES FOR ANTHONY CHILD WILL BE HELD SUNDAY AFTERNOON

Funeral services for T. C. Anthony Jr., 2-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Anthony, 2111 Bell street, will be conducted from the First Methodist church Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Rev. E. F. Bohmfalk will conduct the services.

Pallbearers will be L. W. Fritz, J. E. Hill, Fulcher Armstrong and J. C. Wynne. Burial will be in Riverside. Arrangements are in charge of the Merkle Undertaking company.

James Earl Prothro has returned from Virginia Military Institute at Lexington, Va.

Mrs. J. B. Nail and son, J. B., have returned from a week's visit with Mrs. Nail's brother, Dr. J. B. Williams, at Wink. She was accompanied home by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Williams of Austin, for a visit here.

Mr. and Mrs. John F. Pinson and daughter, Josephine, of Stamford, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Allen, 2314 Talunar lane.

MEXICAN CATHOLICS LEAVE SAN ANTONIO FOR RETURN HOME

End Three-Year Exile Result Controversy Over Church Affairs

MAKING ARRANGEMENTS FOR RETURN OF PRIESTS

Special Train Placed at Their Disposal by Missouri Pacific Railroad

SAN ANTONIO, June 22. (US)—Two hundred priests and laymen of the Roman Catholic church were preparing tonight to end a three-year exile in San Antonio and return to their parishes in Mexico. A special train, placed at their disposal by the Missouri Pacific railroad, will carry the church men back to the country from which they were banished for violation of the religious laws.

Bishop Gerardo Arraya, who has been in charge of the exiles here since the death last year of Archbishop Mora Del Rio, senior prelate of the Catholic church in Mexico, is making arrangements for the return of the priests and laymen.

One of the first acts, upon receiving word that President Portes Gil and Archbishop Flores had reached a settlement of the church controversy, was to instruct all exiles in New Mexico, Arizona, Oklahoma and Texas to proceed to San Antonio, preparatory to being reassigned to their old parishes. Bishop Arraya had barely sent out his last telegram when wires began to pour into his office at San Fernando cathedral. They said: "We are leaving at once."

San Antonio's historic cathedrals and missions will care for the exiles during their short stay here.

It was three years ago that the first churchmen to be exiled from Mexico arrived in San Antonio. They were received by Archbishop Artaur J. Drossaerts, then a bishop, and assigned to peaceful havens in the various missions in and near San Antonio.

Later when the Mexican government started to exile nuns, a refuge for them also was prepared here. There are approximately 1,500 nuns in exile here. Whether they will be allowed to return to Mexico with the priests, Bishop Arraya did not know. He said his instructions from Archbishop Flores, apostolic delegate, did not mention the nuns.

He believes, however, that they will return within a few weeks.

Settlement of the church problem was based upon terms agreed to at a conference of Mexican bishops and a special envoy of the assassinated former president, Gen. Alvaro Obregon. General Obregon, at the time of the conference here in May, 1928, was a candidate for the presidency of Mexico and planks in his platform promised a speedy settlement of the church controversy. Archbishop Moro Del Rio represented the vatican in that conference. A few days later he died of what his brother exiles said was a "broken heart."

Archbishop Ruiz y Flores succeeded Archbishop Del Rio as reigning prelate of the Roman church in Mexico and continued the negotiations with the Mexican government. Throughout the entire negotiations he kept in close contact with the San Antonio exile colony which acted as a liaison with friends of the church in Mexico City.

Lord Tennyson, Cricketer

The present Lord Tennyson, grandson of the famous poet, is becoming one of the most popular cricket players in England. Since he has ceased to be known as the Hon. Lionel Tennyson he has had many reminders of his distinguished grandparent. He recently received the following letter from a woman: "In honor of your visit and your vigorous batting I have purchased a volume of your poems, which I think are exceedingly good, but I'd like to meet you personally and point out one or two parts that I think you could really improve."

MEMBERS OF ELECTRA CLUB GARBED AS THUGS AT ANNUAL PARTY

ELECTRA, Texas, June 22.—The above picture is a reproduction of the annual costume banquet staged by the T. G. F. club of this city recently. This is the third costume banquet presented and was called the "Thug Banquet." The others were the hobo and cowboy banquets.

The affair was staged in the Marriott hotel, and the furnishings of the dining room were plain deal tables set with barroom paraphernalia. Thug costumes were featured, with Tangle Eye George winning the prize for the most original costume. Everett Daleshaw won the prize in the yo-yo contest. Favors were glasses of wine and cotton rolls. The menu consisted of large steaks, string beans and potatoes. A feature of the banquet was the burlesque on the Apache dance, staged by Howard Harris and Ralph Delashaw, who were in charge of the entertainment. Buddy Wilcoxen was master of ceremonies. Visitors on the occasion were Neil Sparks, J. H. Harris and W. M. Austin.

The T. G. F. club was organized five years ago and received its charter Feb. 21, 1927. Marvin Wilcoxen is president of the organization and Jack Parr is secretary. The charter roll contained 26 names of Electra's most prominent young men, and the club now boasts of 23 active and 12 associate members. Meetings are held once each week and ceremonial initiation with robes and lighting effects held quarterly. The club was highly honored recently at a dinner dance given at the country club by Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Harris of this city. The club rooms were elaborately decorated in the club colors of purple and gold.

Ann Tells How Hardinge Wooed Wants $250,000

CHICAGO, June 22. (INS)—"He made love to me. He put his arms around me very tightly, and told me I was beautiful and charming, and had a marvelous personality; that he was lonely and that he was much in love with me.

"He kissed me many times—and I let him because I loved him."

Such was the testimony in the $250,000 breach of promise suit here of beautiful Ann Livingston, Tulsa divorcee, who claims Frank In Hardinge, 61-year-old oil burner manufacturer, left her "waiting at the church."

Then there were letters, and there were to be more letters today, her attorney said.

"There are much better things to come," he said when court adjourned for the day.

Hardinge's attorney, in his opening address, said he would attempt to prove that Miss Livington had her eyes only on the millionaire's pocketbook and that she did all the wooing.

DUBLIN, June 22. (UP)—A trial during which most of the 30 witnesses testified in the native Irish language, ended with convictions and death sentences for Annie Walsh and Martin Joyce, charged with murder.

July 18 was set as the date for the executions.

Paid $10,000 for Lessons to Win Five Dollar Bet

CHICAGO, June 22. (AP)—The pet peeve of Alfred S. Austrian, Chicago attorney, has been his inability to play a round of golf with a dignified score. Day after day his score card was in the nineties, and perhaps occasionally even in three figures.

Austrian went to George A. Neil, professional at the Lake Shore Country club and said:

"I will give you $10,000 if you will teach me to break 80."

Neil told him to take off his coat, and the training began. It was no overnight miracle; it was months of toil. The attorney seemed to have some vital reason for wishing to attain this golfing ambition.

There came a day when the professional said to his pupil:

"Go out and play; return and pay."

The attorney came back with a score of 78. He came back a second time with a 79. And the third time his score was 77. He paid.

Austrian was asked why he was willing to pay $10,000 to shoot under 80.

"To win a five dollar bet," he said.

Mexicans Rejoice Over Settlement Of Disturbing Church Controversy Meet at Churches to Give Thanks

MEXICO CITY, June 22. (AP)—Mexicans, moved to happiness as three years ago they watched with boreboding, crowded to their churches today to give thanks for settlement of the acute phase of the nation's bitter religious strife.

Flowers—Mexico's own, sempoazuchil and maravillas—were heaped high around the altar at the church of Nuestra Senora de la Guadalupe near the capital, the thank offering of a now smiling people to their patron saint. Some of the blossoms were brought from as far as the floating gardens at Xochimilco.

While the government moved fast to permit return of churches and church property to the clergy for first masses June 29, the bishops themselves announced arrangements to bring the country's priests back to their parishes.

Archbishops Ruiz y Flores of Michoacan, who with Bishop Pascual Dias of Tabasco, yesterday completed the religious accord with President Portes Gil, said they had accepted the offer of the Missouri Pacific for a special train in which the priests might return together to Mexico. Bishop Gerardo Anaya of San Antonio, where the train probably would be made up, will have charge of preliminary details.

Plans were already afoot today for a monster nation-wide demonstration July 6 to President Portes Gil for having effected the settlement which without destroying the structure of Mexico's revolutionary social laws, will permit the priests to return to their flocks.

REGENTS SERVING AS OIL ATTORNEYS ASKED TO RESIGN

AUSTIN, June 22. (AP)—Declaring that they cannot serve "two masters," Rep. S. E. Barnett of Greenville, Monday will introduce a resolution in the house calling on members of the board of regents who are attorneys for oil companies to resign, he said today.

"Attorneys who are drawing money to represent oil companies have no business on the board of regents where they are charged with the duty of protecting the interests of the university in dealing with oil and gas leases," Representative Barnett said.

R. L. Batts of Austin, vice chairman of the board of regents, had testified before the joint committee that investigated the general land office, and his testimony was read into the record of the inquiry into charges against J. T. Robison, land commissioner, today that he was interested as an attorney for several oil companies in pending litigation and also that he drew a regular salary as an employe of the Gulf Oil corporation.

Barnett said he understood also that other members of the board were attorneys for oil companies.

Electrical Storm

BENJAMIN, Texas, June 22. — One-quarter inch of rain fell in this section, early Saturday morning. The rain was accompanied by a high wind and a brilliant electrical display.

Farm Homes Wrecked

BOMARTON, Texas, June 22.—Several homes were torn from their foundations, a number of windmills were blown down, and a number of garages and outhouses were wrecked in a wind storm that struck this section Friday night. The windstorm was accompanied by about one-quarter inch of rain.

The farm home of W. R. Caldwell, about two miles south of Bomarton was badly damaged by the storm. It was reported that a wagon on the Caldwell farm was picked up by the wind and lodged in the top of a tree.

Hail Near Spur

SPUR, Texas, June 22. — One-third inch of rain was reported at the government experiment station here Saturday morning. Heavy hail fell in some sections of Dickens county resulting in serious damage to crops. Much of the cotton in the area struck by the hail will have to be replanted.

LEGISLATURE GOES INTO FINAL WEEK

tions of the prison centralization committee. At this time, Governor Moody is likely to re-submit his proposed regulation of public utilities, in the meantime having gone out on the stump to advocate his methods and to "arouse the people" to the necessity of protecting the state's interests, as he stated to the legislature in an address.

While he is on the stump he may decide to take up the income tax as a substitute to the ad valorem levy. He is not in favor of "more taxes," some are predicting that Governor Moody will become a candidate for a third term with the chief issues regulation of public utilities and adoption of an income tax as a means of lifting the burden of taxation.

Considerable interest centers in the senate's attitude toward a four-cent gasoline tax. House advocates of a three-cent tax were outnumbered. There is much talk of the senate refusing to go as high as four cents. In fact, there is apprehension that the bill may be lost for the session because of disagreement between the two houses over amendments the senate may attach.

The senate may decide to cut the registration fees to 50 per cent, the present schedule, the house having slashed them only 30 per cent. Stickers in the house for a three-cent gasoline tax would be willing to compromise on a four-cent gasoline tax and a 50 per cent reduction in registration fees, they have indicated.

(AP)—Ten carlots of Wisconsin near beer advertised as the largest single shipment ever made to any state in the middle west tonight reposed on a railroad siding in Des Moines under guard pending a court decision as to whether beer is a malt beverage and therefore barred for sale in Iowa.

California Aviator Who Attempts Flight Los Angeles to New York Tells Why He Was Forced to Land

By LEE SCHOENHAIR
California aviator who attempted solo flight from Los Angeles to New York
(Copyright, 1929, by N. Y. American, Inc., and Universal Service, Inc.)

CLEVELAND, June 22.—Two things brought me down at Cleveland tonight and kept me from breaking Frank Hawks' record for a non-stop flight from coast to coast.

The first was a weather report that a friend of mine relayed to me as I circled over the Cincinnati airport that I could look for nasty going over the Appalachian mountains to New York.

The second was the knowledge that my oil supply was becoming dangerously low.

If I hadn't received that weather report I would have taken a chance on the oil and headed straight for Roosevelt field. It would have been foolhardy, however, to attempt to complete the flight in the face of two adverse conditions—bad weather and low oil.

So I did the next best thing. I headed for Cleveland municipal airport, which I knew to be one of the best lighted in that section of the country.

And I didn't land any too soon. The old oil was smoking when I brought the ship to earth and the oil supply was below the five degree mark.

I landed in Cleveland after 13 hours and 20 minutes in the air. I am confident that if conditions had been a little better, I could have made the flight from Cleveland to New York in less than three hours. I would have landed at Roosevelt field in something more than 16 hours, breaking Brother Hawks' record by two hours or more.

When I crawled out of the Silvertown cockpit here I was so tired that I could have gone to sleep standing up. This is the first time, I believe, that a solo coast-to-coast flight has been attempted, and let me tell you it's no easy job to take care of a ship all alone for 13 or 14 hours a day.

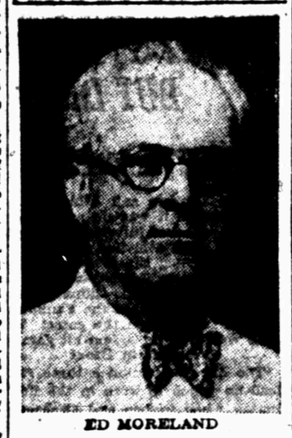

When I wasn't at the stick, I was busy pumping gas from my reserve tanks into the motor tank. And when I wasn't busy pumping gas, I was plotting my course.

The wing that had been damaged in the collision before I took off from Los Angeles, did not give me a bit of trouble.

I was welcomed at Cleveland by Major Barry, commandant of the Municipal airport there. From there, I went to the Cleveland hotel and when I finish with this little story, bed is going to look very sweet to me.

Tomorrow, bright and early, I'm going to continue my flight to New York. I hope to hop from Cleveland by 7 o'clock tomorrow morning and I expect to land at Roosevelt field by 10:30 at the latest.

Wilkerson Captured

HOUSTON, Texas, June 22. (INS)—W. A. Wilkerson, under sentence of 50 years from Dallas county, believed to have been one of the ringleaders in the Clemens prison farm break, was captured by three Houston fisherman this afternoon as he struggled along Matagorda Bay, near here. Wilkerson was too weakened from hunger and the days spent traveling through the heat and brush to offer resistance.

He said that he broke from the group when they tried to force him to remain behind to "fool the dogs." He refused to become "dog bait," he said, and veered off from the main group of escaping prisoners.

The intensive search for the remaining 14 of the 43 convicts who early Thursday made their escape from the Clemens prison farm after kidnapping three guards, continued this afternoon, with their capture expected hourly. Near Sweeney, a group of heavily armed guards and posemen were closing in on what is thought to be the last of the fugitives. They are reported to be in a dense thicket in the Brazos river bottoms.

CREAGER CONDEMNS BROOKHART'S PROBE PATRONAGE IN TEXAS

DALLAS, June 22. (AP)—Condemnation of U. S. Senator Smith W. Brookhart's investigation of patronage in Texas as a "waste of public money and a catering to Brookhart's "personal animosity" to R. B. Creager, Republican national committeeman for Texas, was voiced here today by Eugene S. Nolte, Sequin, chairman of the state Republican executive committee.

Nolte said that Brookhart, who will open a hearing in San Antonio Thursday, has declared that the previous investigation showed the Republican organization in Texas under Creager to be free from justified criticism. "His continuance of the investigation," Nolte said, "seemed to be inspired by a personal animosity toward Mr. Creager. To cater to this is to waste public funds."

GUGGENHEIM HAS SEVEN PRINCIPLES FOR SAFE FLYING

NEW YORK, June 22. (UP)—Harry F. Guggenheim, president of the Guggenheim fund for the promotion of aeronautics, in a radio speech tonight laid down seven cardinal principles for safety in travel by air.

When a private citizen undertakes air travel, he said, he should check up on these points before starting:

1.—Multi-engined planes capable of flying with one engine disabled.
2.—Two pilots licensed by the federal government.
3.—Planes and engines licensed by the government.
4.—Adequate landing facilities over the route flown.
5.—Intensive weather reporting service over the route.
6.—Wireless, or at least a visual communication system between the plane and the airway.
7.—Responsibility of the operators of the air service.

In the United States there has been only one fatal accident in the history of regular passenger services using multi-motored planes over organized airways, Guggenheim said, while 2,200,000 miles have been flown and 44,650 passengers carried.

Guggenheim said that at least two of the points he set out were involved in the recent fatal wreck of an Imperial Airways plane flying across the English channel. It was not so powered that it could maintain flight with only one motor functioning and although it flew over water, it had no equipment for making a water landing.

KANSAS CITY, June 22. (UP)—The day is rapidly ending when a husband can say "I would like to fly but my wife will not let me," according to Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt.

"Women are interesting themselves in flying more than ever. What we need is more women's flying clubs," she said.

Mrs. Willebrandt is now attorney for a large aviation corporation.

POLITICAL EYES TURNED TO REVAMPING PLATFORM FOR KANSAS CAMPAIGN

TOPEKA, Kan., June 22. (UP)—With the return to Kansas, two senators and the several members of the house from Washington, political eyes of the state will be turned to the revamping of platforms for the next campaign.

Outstanding, however, is the appointment of a new federal judge which faces Senators Arthur Capper and Henry J. Allen, for solution.

Both, it was said, feel that the appointment will have a direct hearing on their chances for re-election. They each are faced with new outbreaks of agricultural unrest, bearing directly on their attitude toward the farm relief legislation in congress which they must resume in early fall.

Meantime candidates for the governorship in 1931 are being heard of daily. Included among those are mentioned to make Reed a one-termer are Ralph Snyder, of Manhattan, Roy Bailey, of Salina, John Hamilton, of Topeka, and Will J. French, of St. Johns.

FARM LEADERS TO QUIZ HOME FOLK

plan is brought up as a tariff amendment, the independent bloc may be expected to lose the votes of some Southern Democrats who, to protect their home industries have indicated they do not desire to complicate the desired tariff bill with the debenture plan.

Southern Vote Needed

If they get the schedules they want in the tariff bill, they would vote against the debenture. Without those three or four Southerners, the debenturettes would not be able to get a majority.

Brookhart today issued a pre-departure statement in which he said he believes "the progressives have the votes" for the Norris debenture amendment, revised so that the tariff bounty certificates would be paid to the federal farm board and kept out of the hands of exporters and speculators.

"Of course, the original debenture proposition would have issued many of the certificates to the stabilization corporations but through the farm board they should all go to these corporations and perform all the functions of the equalization fee," Brookhart stated. In this form the debenture proposition should not be offensive to the house, and I believe it can command a good majority of support."

The arrest was made on information secured by Dick Morris, deputy sheriff, officers here said.

FINAL HEARING MONDAY ON RURAL SCHOOL BILLS

AUSTIN, June 22. (AP)—A final hearing of the senate house committee appointed to smooth out differences on rural school aid bills passed by the two branches will be held Monday to adjust provisions which the committee did not agree on today because of the absence of members.

There are indications that the measure will carry an appropriation of $5,500,000 for 1930-31, representative W. T. Graves, Stephenville, coauthor of the house bill appropriating $5,000,000 to aid financially weak schools, said. The senate bill called for an expenditure of $6,000,000.

The committee today agreed on a term of six and one-half months provided for in the original house bill. The senate's bill called for a seven-month term.

SPUDDERS CLOUT CUB PITCHING FOR EASY VICTORY, 12 TO 2

PAYNE TOSSES SEVENTH WIN IN ROW IN SEVEN-HIT TILT; BARGAIN BILL SLATED SUNDAY

The Spudders fired their second barrel at the Waco Cubs Saturday at Athletic park, riddled the Bruins with holes and came off with a 12 to 2 victory, their 15th in the last 17 starts and their eighth in nine played this season with Del Pratt's young men.

The boys did a lot of running and much timely clouting to roll up that hefty total. In fact, they exerted much more energy than was necessary in clicking off 18 hits, for Ol' Rubber Arm was at his best and tossed one of the finest games a Spudder moundster has had this year. He limited the hard swinging Cubs to seven hits and in only one inning gave up more than one. It was Payne's seventh successive victory and his ninth of the season.

Two games are on the program for Sunday afternoon, the first starting at 3 o'clock, and a couple of right-handers, Milt Steengrafe and Cy Smith, will get the call for pitching chores. Nick Dumovich and Earl Caldwell or Virgil Cheeves are the prospective enemy hurlers.

On Real Spree

In the two contests of the home stand thus far, the Galloway clouters have scored an even 30 runs and have hit safely 38 times. The latest victims are Lefty Stein, who went out in the third, and Preacher Thurman, who finished up the day under difficulties. The principal offenders were Benton, with four whacks; Fitzgerald, with three, and Turgeon, Bennett, Sullivan and Payne, two each. Every Spudder hit safely at least one and all but Payne registered one or more runs.

As contests go, the Cubs again failed to offer much in the way of opposition and the hopefuls once more were at their best, adding to the hitting and pitching laurels by fielding perfectly.

Mellano's triple gave the Cubs a run in the first. He smacked Payne's first pitch against the right field boards and made third while Sullivan was chasing the rebound. Sanguinet's fly scored him and Blackerby and Johnson went out on ground balls. The Spudders quickly retrieved the run. Benton doubled to right center and moved up as Windle robbed Turgeon of a hit with a great stop close to the bag. Fitzgerald singled to right, scoring Benton. Bennett forced Fitzgerald and Stapleton walked, Lapan rolling out for the third one.

Trouble Starts

The second was uneventful except for a pass to Warwick and a wonderful fielding play by Vigare. He took Andrews' smash over third in a back-handed catch that was, to say the least, miraculous.

Waco went to the fore again in the third. With one away Mellano dropped a Texas leaguer over second and stole after Sanguinet had flied to Bennett, scoring on Blackerby's single to left. Payne slipped a curve ball past Johnson to end it. The bottom fell out in the home half and five perfectly good runs were strong-armed across the plate. Again Benton started it, this time with a single. Turgeon lined out to right. Fitzgerald hit the longest single ever when he rode one to the top of the green batting screen. The ball bounced straight into Sanguinet's hands and the long poke was good for one base only, Benton going to third. A pass to Bennett filled the bases and Stapleton drove in two with a smash past first. Thurman relieved Stein and Lapan sent in Bennett with a single to center. Sullivan delivered a double to left for Nos. 4 and 5 of the inning.

Pile Up Lead

In the fourth and fifth the Cubs went out in order and the hopefuls continued to make merry. They scored two in the fourth in the orthodox manner of three singles with a sacrifice mixed in. Benton and Turgeon got the first two, Fitzgerald the sacrifice and Bennett the third one. In the Fifth Sullivan and Andrews singled and Payne bunted into right field for a single and a run. Benton beat out a bunt for his fourth straight hit, filling the bases. Turgeon's sacrifice fly chased in Andrews with Wichita Falls tenth run of the afternoon.

Payne had retired nine successive Cubs when Johnson singled with two out in the sixth to break the spell, but it was harmless when Fitzgerald went to the fence for Vigare's long drive. For a change, or something, the Spudders went away in order.

Battle opened the seventh with a double to right, but progressed no further than third. Again in the Spudder half only three Spudders faced Thurman, but it was different in the eighth. Turgeon, Fitzgerald and Bennett clouted successive doubles for a couple of runs to top off the day's labors.

Johnson's double in the eighth and Battle's single in the ninth proved harmless.

Back in 1927 Pete Turgeon cut into a birthday cake and won the dime. Pete's wish was that the Spudders win the pennant. What happened to that wish is ancient history. At the same birthday party in 1928 Pete failed to get the dime. And the Spudders didn't win the pennant. This year Pete cut the dime again, and it goes without saying that he repeated the wish of 1927, and just as he did in 1927, he's carrying that dime in the hip pocket of his "monkey suit" every day. So, those who believe strongly enough in such things may now make their Dixie series reservations.

Some folks may think that such little things as the welcome party given the Spudders Friday don't mean anything—that the athletes simply take these affairs as so much hooey and forget about them as soon as they are over. But such is not the case. At least, it is not with such events as that luncheon Friday at the Kemp. A dandy crowd turned out for it, and it was a snappy, peppy affair that didn't fail to impress the Spudder stalwarts. Players new to these parts were surprised at the size of the turnout and the enthusiasm displayed by Wichita Falls fans and business men. It'll be some time before the Spudders forget that little affair, and you may take it for granted that it played its part in providing inspiration for the pennant cause.

Judging from the manner in which the South Texas clubs' invasion of the northern end has started, this thing is going to look more like a split season when July 4 rolls around than it did a few days ago. If the Steers, Spudders, Sports and Panthers continue to roll up their advantage over the Cubs, Exporters, Indians and Buffs, a few of the South Texas teams that have been for straight through play are liable to switch to the other side. Of course, it's no cinch that North Texas clubs are going to continue to embarrass the visting teams. The four visitors might do an about face and follow the example the Spudders set in South Texas. The league as a whole is so evenly balanced that such a thing as far from impossible.

The two stronger South Texas teams, San Antonio and Beaumont, have been weak sisters on the road so far, neither being able to travel at the pace it has at home. Waco and Houston, of course, have done little of late, either at home or abroad. Beaumont's road trip this time shouldn't be as bad as the one before it, for the Exporters are a better club than when they first hit the North Texas trail. Beaumont should win some games on this trip. San Antonio is one outfit that can't be doped for anything. They may win every game, or lose them all.

At the present time the weakest club in the league seems to be Waco. The Cubs still have their heads above water as a result of their great start, but they have been the most consistent losers in the league for the last few weeks. Waco may beat out Houston, but right now that seems the best that might be hoped for Del Pratt's team. This Cub outfit is a hard hitting combination, but that's the extent of it. It doesn't have the defensive power either in the pitching box or in fielding.

Bob Sanguinet and George Blackerby make up a pair of troublesome knockers in the Waco lineup. Sanguinet started the season at a great clip, slumped off a bit and again is hitting the ball. Apparently, he has the stuff and will continue to hit. Of Blackerby's ability, there is no question. This youngster has proved in two previous seasons that he can sock Texas league pitching handsomely. The two together form one of the league's most proficient run producing combinations. Both should finish high in all offensive departments at the end of the season.

Jim Galloway made his debut as an umpire Saturday morning, but as far as can be learned, he hasn't yet made application for a job on Doak Roberts' staff. The occasion was the first game of the district eliminations in the American legion boys' competition. Aside from the fact that Jim arrived on the scene a bit late and departed before it was over, he turned out to be a pretty good "blind man." Almost any of the Texas league umpirical staff might have blushed with envy to have seen James miss 'em right and left and retain his dignity to the 'nth degree. Incidentally, the members of the visiting Vernon team, eliminated in the morning game, were guests of the skipper at Saturday's Spudder-Cub contest.

Knight-Whippets Defeat Vernon and Olney in Legion Race

The Knight-Whippet team of Pat Carrigan post won the district championship of the American legion's national junior baseball tournament by defeating the Olney Mustangs 14 to 6 Saturday afternoon. The Wichita Falls teams went into the district finals by virtue of a 32 to 11 victory over the Vernon team here Saturday morning.

Seitz started for Wichita Falls in the afternoon game and gave up a triple, three doubles and a single in the first inning to give Olney a start of four runs. Eldon Williams, a Southpaw, went into the box for the Knight-Whippets at the start of the second stanza and yielded exactly four hits and two tallies in the remaining eight innings. Williams fanned nine.

Wright, starting pitcher for Olney, held the local team hitless for three innings A walk, four singles and two late throws to the plate on fielder's choices gave Wichita Falls six counters in the fourth inning.

Patrick replaced Wright in the fifth but the Knight-Whippets drove in four more tallies in that inning and a similar number in the seventh. Wright whiffed eight batsmen and Patrick seven.

The first basemen on both teams turned in good games, McHam handling 11 chances and Tinker eight without a bobble.

Wichita Falls won the morning game in a walk, hitting the ball hard all the way and taking advantage of Vernon's fielding lapses. Though the visitors were charged with fewer errors, it was in the fielding department that they fell down. Many of the Knight Whippets' hits should have been turned into easy outs.

Danny Seitz toiled the first five innings and was removed after the fifth only to save his arm for the afternoon game. He had yielded only three hits and fanned 10 in five innings.

Hap Costello, with a home run, triple, two doubles and two singles was the batting leader, closely followed by Paul Robertson, who collected six hits that included two triples. Hodges, Wood and Grogan led Vernon's attack, with Christian getting a clean home run.

Hermann, New Third Baseman, to Arrive in Time to Play Sunday

J. Alvin Gardner,
President Wichita Falls Baseball Club.

Due to slowness of traveling by auto am leaving St. Louis by train and will arrive Wichita Falls 2 p. m. Sunday. Stop. O'Neal will bring car through. Stop. Am hurrying along as I am anxious to get in lineup. Stop. Regards.

(Signed) A. H. Hermann.

That is the word received by telegram late Saturday afternoon from St. Louis from Al Hermann, the third baseman recently obtained from Bridgeport, Conn., along with Pitcher Orin O'Neal, in a trade that sent Wally Swenson and Ed Taber to the Eastern league club.

Manager Jim Galloway said Saturday night it was likely he would use Hermann in Sunday's double-header, if the player showed no ill effects from the long journey from Connecticut.

Both Hermann and O'Neal departed from Bridgeport via automobile and, according to the telegram from the former, O'Neal is to continue overland. He should arrive late Monday or early Tuesday.

TRANS-MISSISSIPPI TOURNEY THIS WEEK

OMAHA, June 22. (UP)—"Old Man Par" is in for an awful session at the Trans-Mississippi golf tournament which will be played at Omaha Field club next week if practice rounds turned in Saturday can be taken as a criterion.

Half a dozen of the players turned in practice cards better than 73—par for the course.

Arthur Bartlett, Ottumwa, Iowa, present champion was "plenty hot," turning in a 71, after wasting his first two shots by slicing on the first tee.

First Tennis Competition of Season Offered Players in City-Wide Event

A city-wide tennis tournament to start early next week on municipal courts was announced Saturday from the offices of the city recreation department. Probably one of the most interesting features of the competition is the fact that no entrance fee is to be charged.

Entries now are open and players may get their names into the draw by registering at the sporting goods department of Noble-Little Hardware company. Entries will close at 6 o'clock Monday afternoon and drawings made Monday night.

Competition is offered in eight classes, men's singles and doubles, women's singles and doubles, junior singles and doubles and girls' singles and doubles. The junior division is for all boys under 18 years of age.

The tournament, open to all residents of Wichita Falls, regardless of club affiliations, is a warm-up event preparatory to the all-city championship.

The only requisite, other than that of residence, is that players furnish their own balls.

O'Doul Lifts His Batting Average Above .400 Mark

Bill Terry Has Big Week And Threatens to Overtake Leader

NEW YORK, June 22. (AP)—The four-hundred hitter has returned to the National league in the person of Frank O'Doul, the hard-hitting Philadelphian, who did himself no harm on his home field last Wednesday when his team was engaged in the serious business of losing two to the Giants. O'Doul's run of six hits in 10 times at bat in those two games lifted his average to an even .400 for the period ending Wednesday, the last date included in the figures.

Bill Terry of New York, who himself did quite a good job with the bat in the week ending Wednesday, stands second to O'Doul with .393. Terry leads in total hits with 90.

Babe Herman of Brooklyn and Frank Frisch of St. Louis share the lead in doubles, each having 20, while Frisch stands alone in triples with 10. Chuck Klein of the Phillies and Chick Hafey of the Cardinals are joint holders of the top in home runs, each with 18.

Melvin Ott of the Giants has 17. Hafey leads the league in runs batted in with 69 and his teammate, Taylor Douthit, in runs scored with 57. Kiki Cuyler of the Cubs is the best base stealer with 17 to his credit.

Although Burleigh Grimes suffered his first defeat of the season last Sunday when the Reds became unruly, he still heads the pitching procession with 10 victories and one defeat for a percentage of .909. Grimes also shows the way in total innings with 120, but Red Lucas of Cincinnati shades him in complete games, 11 to 10.

Guy Bush of Chicago is second to Grimes in percentage with seven victories and one defeat for .875. Sylvester Johnson of St. Louis is third with five games won and one lost for .857.

Regular batsmen following the two top men in the individual list are: Herman, Brooklyn, .387; Frisch, St. Louis, .376; Klein, Philadelphia, .373; Roush, New York, .370; Stephenson, Chicago, .369; Traynor, Pittsburgh, .352; Hafey, St. Louis, .351, and Cuyler, Chicago, .345.

The Phillies lead in team batting with .316, followed by the Giants with .306. The Pirates have .296. The Giants and the Cubs are tied for the top in team fielding, each with .974, three points above the third-place Reds.

LEAGUE LEADERS BLAST WAY TO 7-3 TRIUMPH IN OPENER BUT DROP 14-INNING SCRAP

NEW YORK, June 22. (UP)—That famous jinx, the hope of New York Yankee fans, seems to have lost its charm over the Philadelphia Athletics.

The Yankees and Athletics split another double-header Saturday and although it was no more than an even break it definitely proved that the so-called inferiority complex of the Athletics of 1928 now is nonexistent. The Athletics now battle the Yanks on even terms—or better.

After losing the first game, 7 to 3, the Yankees came back to win the second, 4 to 3, but the victory carried none too much of glory.

Ancient John Picus Quinn, who celebrates his 44th birth on the fifth of next month, forced the Yanks to go 14 innings to convert 18 hits into enough runs to win the game. This despite the fact that George Pipgras was pitching a four-hit game for the world champions.

A's Start in Front

The A's gave Quinn a three run lead on which to work in the first inning when Bishop and Cochrane walked and Simmons booted his seventeenth home-run into the right field bleachers.

That ended the Philadelphia scoring, but it took New York 14 long innings to overcome the lead.

In the third, three hits gave New York their first run and two hits and a sacrifice fly in the fifth gave New York their first run and two hits and a sacrifice fly in the fifth gave the Yanks their second. In the eighth Combs doubled, went to third and Ruth bunted to bring him home with the tying run.

New York had two fine chances to win the game before the winning run finally crossed the plate. In the tenth, with the bases filled and one out, Ruth popped to Bishop and Lazzeri fanned.

In the 12th, with Combs on third and Ruth on second, Lazzeri again failed, sending a long fly to Simmons to end the inning.

The law of averages was with Lazzeri, however, in the 14th when he came to the plate for the third time with the winning run on third and singled to right.

First One Easy

Quinn was almost invincible in the pinches and seven Yankees died on base. He held Ruth to three hits, only one of which resulted in a run.

It was Pipgras who decided the issue in favor of the Yankees. He refused to let the A's hit with the exception of the first inning, and they waited in vain for him to crack.

The first game was all Philadelphia. New York made its only bid in the ninth inning when home runs by Byrd and Lary, and a single by Meusel resulted in a three run rally that was soon quenched.

Rube Walberg held the Yankees to five hits in the first eight innings, easing up only when the victory was assured.

Heimach started for New York, but was removed in the fifth after the last of the seven Philadelphia runs had crossed the plate. He was relieved by Sherid who allowed only two hits in the last four innings, and held the Athletics generally helpless.

The teams meet here Sunday in the fifth and final game of the series. Should New York win it will mean that the Yanks have gained one game on the league leaders, while a Philadelphia victory would increase the A's margin just that much.

Turn those old tires into cash they're worth money in a trade-in

WE'RE going to let you in on a secret—on the majority of the tires turned in towards the purchase of new Firestones, we make money. Not a lot—most of the time it's pretty close to the amount we allowed you. However, we don't lose.

That solves the answer to your question, "how can you afford to make such generous allowances for old tires when we buy a new set of Firestones?"

Combine this trade-in allowance with the PRESENT low prices and there is no reason under the sun why you, too, shouldn't be driving on new Firestones, the world's greatest tires. Come in and look them over.

Sports Outfielder Takes Over Lead In Biff Marathon

Langford Goes to Front With Blackerby Ahead Of Regulars

The consistent road hitting of Langford, Shreveport outfielder, has displaced his team-mate, Starr, in the leadership of Texas league clouters. With a .385 average, Langford holds a four-point lead over Starr, and eight over the closest figure of a player in all of the games, Blackerby, Waco. Crossing the century mark early in the batting week, Randy Moore, Dallas, tops the hit-makers with a total of 106 to 93 each for Bennett, Wichita Falls, and Blackerby, Waco, and 92 for Jeffries, Dallas. In run scoring, Whelan, Shreveport, continues to lead, but is challenged at 62 by the 61 of W[illegible], and the 57 each of Bennett, Wichita Falls; Sanguinet, Waco, and Ballew, San Antonio. Larman Cox, Fort Worth, has regained the lead in doubles with 21 from Dick Cox, Shreveport, 20. Nason, San Antonio heads the triple hitters with eight. Home run leaders are concentrated in the short fence park clubs and are Sanguinet, Waco, 18; Blackerby, Waco, 17; Johnson, Waco, and Easterling, Beaumont, 11. Stewart, Shreveport, has taken the front in base stealing and with 16 heads E. Moore, Fort Worth; Flaskamper, Dallas, and Whelan, Shreveport, all 15, and Martin, Houston, 13.

Headed by Waco's .302, four ball clubs trail each other in team hitting with only a point separating each. Dallas leads in runs and hits, Shreveport in doubles and pilfers, Houston in triples and Waco in home runs. Barnabe, Dallas, has the best pitching average with .846, and leads in games won with 11, closely pushed by Whitworth, Fort Worth, and Caldwell, Waco, 10 each. Walkup finally gave way to a relief pitcher last week, but has finished 16 of 17 starts and issued but 16 walks in 147 innings. Lindsey, Houston leads in strikeouts, with 59, to 57 for Messenger, San Antonio.

Players hitting .300 or better in 50 or more times at bat, club batting, and pitchers credited with win or loss through Thursday, June 20, follow:

Qualifying Play In All-City This Week

Preliminary Rounds to Be Played Any Day Between June 29 and July 4; Entry Charge of $1.50; No Greens Fee

Six days will be allowed for qualifying play in the all-city championship golf tournament to be held on the course of the Weeks Park Golf club, it was announced Saturday by Phil Hesler, Weeks park pro. Players may register their qualifying scores any time between Saturday, June 29, and Thursday, July 4, inclusive.

The all-city championship has become one of Wichita Falls' most important annual competitions, and a record number of entries is expected this year. The option of qualifying on any oneof six days is expected to prove popular with the players, according to Hesler, especially when it is considered that one week-end and one holiday are included in the time available.

Must Register

However, Hesler points out that players must register and signify their intention of qualifying at the time of starting their preliminary rounds. This is necessary to prevent the possibility of entries playing more than round and selecting the most desirable scores.

The qualifying round will be over 18 holes and the low 16 scores will earn places in the championship flight. At least three other flights will be played, depending upon the number of entries.

As has been customary in the past, an entry fee of $1.50 will be charged, the entire receipts being used to purchase prizes for winners and runnersup in each flight. The entry fee entitles the players to continue through the tournament without the payment of greens fees.

All Are Eligible

The all-city tournament had its inception four years ago and its purpose was to offer a "scratch" competition for all residents of Wichita Falls. In selecting a true city champion, it has fulfilled its aim, for few of the Muny club or Country club stars have failed to enter in the past. The tourney is open to all players who have resided in Wichita Falls one year or longer, and membership in either club is not necessary.

The muny course is to be given a thorough grooming this week, according to Hesler, and will be in the best possible condition for the big tournament.

Eddie Held Makes Fast Climb Among Amateur Linksman

Low Qualifying Score in Metropolitan Gains Several Rungs

With only amateur events being decided, there was little change in the golf medal standings during the past week.

The most notable advance was that of Eddie Held, whose 143 in winning the qualifying round of the Metropolitan amateur championship advanced him several laps in the standing, and gave him fifth place among the amateur medalists.

Foxx Slumps but Remains in Lead Of Swat Parade

Fothergill Above .400 but Has Played in Few Contests

CHICAGO, June 22. (AP)—Jimmy Foxx, the Athletic's first baseman, slipped out of the .400 batting average class during the ninth week of the American league campaign, but remained at the top of regular workmen with a mark of .396, unofficial averages reveal.

Foxx was topped by Big Robert Fothergill of Detroit, who became the league's only .400 batsman, by increasing his average 22 points to .406 during the week. Fothergill, however, had been to bat less than half as many times as the Philadelphia Jack-of-all-trades. Right behind Foxx was Tony Lazzeri of New York, who hammered the ball hard enough to raise his average from .377 to .394. Other leaders: Cochrane, Philadelphia, .386; Manush, St. Louis, .378; Simmons, Philadelphia, .362; Miller, Philadelphia, .353; Gehringer, Detroit, .352; Combs, New York, .345; Fonseca, Cleveland, .345; E. Rice, Washington, .343.

Six men, led by Foxx, all batting better than .300, kept the Athletics in the team batting lead with an average of .319, three points better than a week ago. The A's had scored 367 runs since the beginning of the campaign, and had held all opponents to 207, the best marks in the league. Bucky Harris' Detroit Tigers speeded up batting during the week and added eight points to bring their average to .306. The Yankees had a mark of .300 even, reaching that figure for the first time this season.

The Athletics' domination of the league extended into the pitching department, with Bob Groves, southpaw ace, rated as the most efficient hurler. Grove had a record of 10 victories and one defeat while Eddie Rommel, his teammate, was credited with five triumphs and no defeats. George Uhle of Detroit was next to Grove with 10 victories and three beatings. Grove continued also to set the pace in strikeouts with 74.

As in other departments, Connie Mack's team headed the list with a team average of .976. The Yankees and Washington were tied for second position at .975. Other leaders: Home runs, Gehrig, New York, 19; triples, Manush, St. Louis, Combs, New York, Scarritt, Boston, 7 each; doubles, R. Johnson, Detroit, 24; stolen bases, Miller, Philadelphia, and Cissell, Chicago, 8 each; runs batted in, Simmons, Philadelphia, 68; double plays, Cleveland, 63; triple plays, New York and Chicago, 1 each.

MUCH OIL ACTIVITY IN AREA DURING WEEK DESPITE WEATHER

Extension of Field in Cooke County And Completion of Three Producers Wilbarger Important Developments

By JIMMIE MAXWELL

Torrid weather failed to halt operations throughout the Wichita Falls district during the past week and development of the various fields went ahead in a spirited manner. Many wells were completed, practically all pools sharing in the contribution. New locations for the entire group of counties totaled between 75 and 80, each pool being favored by one or more sites. In addition to these happenings, wells in actual drilling showed a big increase when compared to the number during the previous week. Taken as a whole the past week was one of the most active that the district's petroleum industry had enjoyed for some time.

DEEPER PAY IS FOUND HOWARD WILDCAT WELL

Gibson-Johnson Test Gives Promise of Developing New Proven Area

OIL BEARING LIME FOUND BY HOWARD COUNTY WELL

Oil Development Continues In Northern Glasscock County Field

(Special to The Times)

BIG SPRING, Texas, June 22.—Exploration of a second pay in the Gibson & Johnson No. 1 Read, eastern Howard county wildcat, topping of oil bearing lime in the Howard County Oil corporation's No. 2 Kloh, Rumsey and Abrams, together with continued development in northern Glasscock county, held oil development in this area throughout the past week on an even keel.

Gibson & Johnson's No. 1 Read, 660 feet north and west of the southeast corner of section 47, block 30, township one north, T-P Ry. Co., survey encountered a second pay at 2905-2945 feet following a first pay from 2698-2707 feet, presents possibilities of developing a commercial producing well in a territory previously explored, but in which no more than "good showings" had been reached.

Late in the week the bottom pay was shot with 120 quarts and the upper pay was jolted with 60 quarts in hopes of converting the well into a commercial producer. Cleaning out will likely consume most of another week operators believed and until then, true value of the discoveries will be largely problematical.

In an older Howard county producing territory discovered by the Plymouth Oil company and the Howard County Oil corporation, the latter company's No. 2 Kloh, Rumsey and Abrams, 330 feet from the north and west lines of section 5, block 32, township 2 south, T-P Ry. Co. survey, topped saturated lime pay at 2262 feet and was cored to a total depth of 2300 feet. Coring will continue for another 35 or 40 feet, operators intimated and if the well is not converted into a commercial producer a shot may be attempted. Top of pay in No. 2 Kloh is 65 feet below that topped in the same company's No. 1 Kloh, Rumsey and Abrams, which is still capable of producing more than 1,000 barrels daily at full capacity.

Lonnie and Gus Glasscock who are drilling a well on the Turner property in northern Glasscock county had reacehd a total depth of 1415 feet, according to information from the interest's office. The test is being drilled approximately one and one-quarter miles from the World Oil company's No. 1-C McDowell, discovery well in the area and is located 2310 feet from the north line and 330 feet from the east line of section 19, block 33, township 2 south, T-P Ry. Co. survey.

Overcomes Mud Trouble

In the same general area, but two or three miles east, Houston Oil corporation's No. 1 McDowell, 330 feet from the north line and 2310 feet from the east line of section 30, block 33, township 2 south, T-P Ry. Co. survey, has successfully overcome its drilling trouble caused by mud leaking through a fissure in the earth and had progressed to a total depth of 750 feet through the week. Cottonseed hulls, leaves and other absorbent substances which will conglomerate with moisture and form paste with mud were used in plugging the crack in the earth.

Texas State Oil corporation's (carried by some as the Murchison Oil company) No. 1 Coffey, 330 feet from the south line and 990 feet from the east line of section 19, block 34, township 2 south, T-P Ry. Co. survey, is drilling below 960 feet, it was said.

World Oil company's No. 1-C McDowell, the discovery well, which has been idle for several days attempting to pull large casing and run a string of six-inch with a wall packer in an effort to shut off what appears to be water seeping from behind eight-inch casing, was reported again pumping this weekend, but no full 24-hour gauge on its production or the water and basic sediment percentage had been revealed.

Water and basic sediment appearing with oil production several weeks ago brought the World Oil company to its decision to run six-inch pipe. Operators know that water was shut off behind eight-inch pipe and that the pipe was never cemented.

Although company officials had made no definite announcement, it was understood the Landreth Production company is building a rig over its location approximately one-quarter mile north of the World Oil company's discovery well.

The Kirby Petroleum company-Atlantic Production company and Black Arrow Oil company's No. 1 Phillips, 330 feet from the north line and 2310 feet from the west line of section 23, block 32, township 2 south, T-P Ry. Co. survey, is rigging up preparatory to immediate drilling, according to information from company offices in Big Spring.

Wilbarger county activity resulted in the bringing in of a number of good wells. W. T. Knight and associates' F-1, W. T. Waggoner in south part of section 21, block 4, H. & T. C., swabbed 500 barrels from the 1856 pay and was the premier well. Other wells were the George W. Packham and others' No. 1 W. T. Waggoner in the same section and block swabbing 375 barrels and Fain-McGaha's No. W-4 W. T. Waggoner in section 32, block 4, H. T. C. survey, completed in the 2300-foot pay as a 250 barreler. L. G. Bradstreet also finished his No. C-1 Waggoner in section 32, block 4 in the 2370 pay, making 150 barrels.

A review of the field finds approximately 45 wells going down in different sections of the Waggoner pasture, while new locations are being staked out almost daily. In this field both wildcat and proved tracts received the operators' attention.

The Bryson pool in Jack county, at present one of the most active areas in the district, added another nice well to its number, the F. H. E. Oil company's No. 2 Mrs. Leffel in the Isaac Hughson survey, flowing at the rate of 400 barrels from the sand at 3060 feet. East of this producer the Prairie Oil and Gas company's No. 4 Mary Bryson in the same survey has set casing on the oil sand at 3066 feet and should complete the first of the week. New locations were made and with 20 wells drilling, all indications point to a busy summer in the county's pools.

Extension in Cooke

Cooke county, which of late is showing signs of returning to its former condition as an active oil producing area, last week extended its productive area in the Bulcher pool some distance to the southeast when Fain & McGaha completed a nice little 100 barreler on the J. F. Huggins land in abstract 982, S. P. R. R. survey. The well, which is an absolute wildcat three miles southeast of production, topped the sand at 1181-89 feet. The oil shows a gravity of 40 Baume and is one of the best in the county. West of the Bulcher pool and a short distance southwest, the Humble Oil and Refining company brought in its No. 2 Poteet in the Stephens survey as a 250-barrel producer from the sand at 1360 to 1380 feet. Completions were also made by the Kewanee Oil and Gas company on its A. Hyman lease, which boosted the county's runs approximately 200 barrels per day.

With numerous tests drilling, scattered throughout all sections, Archer county vied with other pools of the district in the amount and importance of the development under way. Some nice wells were brought in and a few dry holes or failures were completed.

Between Archer City and Anarene, hopes for the opening up of a new field by the Coleman test on the Longley farm, in block 98, Jefferson county school lands ebbed when, after testing two sands that showed oil at 1138 and at 1176-80 feet, the well failed to make a producer and drilling continued in an effort to pick up a deeper horizon.

Good wells were completed by Fain-McGaha, in the United pool, and in the south portion of the county the Humble Oil finished its No. 3 Kunkle in B. B. B. survey, swabbing at the rate of 350 barrels from 1163-85 feet. P. F. Gywnn and associates finished No. 3 A. D. Thompson in block 16, A. T. N. C. L. survey, swabbing 200 barrels from the pay at 1589 feet.

Shallow Wells Finished

While considerable work is under way in the northeast portion, and in the Markley area, nothing of importance happened during the week in that part of Young county. A few shallow producers were finished and the usual staking out of many new locations was noticed. In the section south of Graham, the Pandem Oil corporation's No. 1 Rhodes in the Eddleman survey northeast of the old Bunger pool is giving evidence of making a producer. This well, a wildcat which is in a semi-completed stage, is estimated at 150 barrels from the sand at 3998-4004 feet and when a few feet more sand is drilled the owners are of the opinion that it will greatly increase the output.

As in the other pools of the district, Wichita county showed more activity than it has for the past several weeks. New locations were made, a few wells brought in and several wells spudded. While the greater part of the county's development is along the banks of the Wichita river and in the territory South and West of Iowa Park, a few other interesting tests have been started in other sections. In the old Northwest field, the American Refining properties are drilling at 1580 feet on their No. 1 Mrs. Lillis Morgan in the Meadows survey and expect to hit the pay in the next day or two. While the well is of no importance from a productive standpoint, it will go on record as the first to be drilled here for some time and the result will be watched with interest.

The district's deepest drilling test, the Gulf Production company's No. A-43, T. L. Burnett, located in section 4, H. & T. B. survey southeast of Electra, is drilling ahead at 3780 feet. This well created plenty of excitement in the oil fraternity on account of its picking up a deep sand showing oil at 3616 feet that after drilling six feet bailed one barrel per hour, the deepest oil yet encountered in the county. It will drill to its original depth of 4500 feet.

TEST MAY OPEN NEW FIELD IN CALLAHAN AREA

Good Showing of Oil and Gas Found in Campbell Test

NEW PRODUCER ADDED TO REYNOLDS RANCH POOL

Two New Locations Made In Jones County Sections

(Special to The Times)

ABILENE, Texas, June 22.—A showing of free live oil and gas enough to spray the crude out of the top of the hole from a sand topped at 920 feet encountered in north central Callahan county in E. P. Campbell and company's No. 1 I. N. Jackson, wildcat operation eight miles north of Baird, early this week may lead to a three-mile south extension of the Dyer pool, a shallow producing area in south Callahan county, or to the development of an entirely new pool.

A new producer was added to the Reynolds ranch pool in southeast Haskell county during the week when Superior Oil corporation's No. 4 Reynolds was completed for an initial production of 150 barrels of oil and 4,000,000 cubic feet of gas from a sand encountered at 1794 feet.

A show of oil was picked up in southeast Fisher county at midweek in White Eagle Oil and Refining company's No. 1 Neva Hughes, at 2559 feet, in the top of the Noodle creek lime. The test is to be drilled deeper into the formation for better shows that usually come below the top of the stratum.

Two new locations have been reported in Jones county. One in the northeast part of the county is already drilling and the other on the north side of the Shaheen-Bickley pool, in the southwest part of the area, is to be started at once.

E. P. Campbell and company has announced locations for five new tests in north central Callahan county on the 12,000 acre block owned by Humble Oil and Refining company, and on which the No. 1 Jackson this week showing for production, is located.

Rigs Up for Tests

Rigging up is underway on two wildcat tests in south Jones county to be drilled by W. G. Clark to test the Noodle creek lime around 2500 feet. Both operations will start drilling within the next ten days.

At mid-week the drilling crew was engaged in cleaning out E. P. Campbell and company's out E. P. N. Jackson in north central Callahan county. During that work the gas from the 920 foot sand was spraying oil over the rig.

This test is located 1320 feet south and 150 feet west of the northeast corner of section 21, B. B. B. & C. R. R. survey. It is three miles south of the Dyer pool in south Shackelford county, where profitable production, running as high as 100 barrels a day settled, is coming from around 900 feet in about 15 wells. Midwest Exploration company, Southern Petroleum Exploration company and Simms Petroleum company own the production and most of the acreage in the Dyer area.

The show in No. 1 Jackson is from the same horizon as the Dyer pool production, the Cook sand, local geologists say.

The hole was drilled without running any pipe and when the saturated formation was encountered the gas caused the hole to cave considerably. Pipe has been run in and set at 88-feet, 40 feet above the top of the pay, and when the cleaning out is finished the sand will be tested.

The Jackson test is the first of six operations recently contracted for in a deal between Humble Oil & Refining company and E. P. Campbell and company, on the 12,000 acre block along the Callahan-Shackelford county line, owned by the former company for sometime, to be started.

Select Five Locations

Locations for the other five have been announced this week following the showings found in the Jackson operation. The new tests will all be within six miles of the new well and will be northwest, west and southwest of it.

Several tests, drilled in recent years in the vicinity of the Jackson operation, have shown some oil and gas. A test was drilled a number of years ago on section 72, B. B. B. & C. R. R. survey, about seven miles southwest of the Jackson well, to a depth of 4600 feet. That operation was abandoned as dry, even though people who watched it say it had a considerable production of high gravity sweet oil in the King sand around 1700 feet.

That oil showing was passed up by the concern drilling the hole for the test was drilled back in the days, not so long ago, when gushers were all the rage, and unless a test showed for more than 1,000 barrels a day natural, it was not considered of commercial value.

The five new operations announced for the Callahan-Shackelford county block, to be drilled by E. P. Campbell and company, are E. P. Campbell and company's No. 1 Mrs. Maggie Alexander, to be 660 feet west and 3500 feet south of the northeast corner of section 23, B. B. B. & C. R. R. survey. A machine is to be put on this location within the next week.

E. P. Campbell and company's No. 2 Maggie Alexander will be 2,400 feet east and 2,000 feet north of the southwest corner of section 24, B. B. B. & C. R. R. survey.

E. P. Campbell and company's No. 1 Robert Hennesay will be at the center of the north line of the northeast quarter of the southwest quarter of section 72, B. B. B. & C. R. R. survey and about a half mile southeast of the 4600 foot dry hole drilled several years ago, which is reported to have shown considerable production in the 1,700 foot horizon.

E. P. Campbell and company's No. 1 Kennard will be located 1,500

Production Gain of 1043 Barrels Is Due to Archer and Jack Completions

Pipeline runs from the various pools in the Wichita Falls district for the week ending June 18, 1929, registered a gain of approximately 1,043 barrels per day as compared with the runs of the previous week. The entire district averaged 95,826 barrels per day.

Gains in Jack and Archer counties, on account of the completion of a number of good wells, were reflected in the figures from these pools, both showing substantial increases. Below are the runs by pools:

Mid-Continent Oil Activities

(By United Press)

While the Sinclair No. 1 Stamper, south of Oklahoma City, was flowing 2,391 barrels of oil during the 24 hours ending Friday morning, 31 new locations south of the city were approved by operators and a picture of a gigantic oil pool was in view. The discovery well, I. T. L. O. Foster No. 1, is holding up well and gauged 2,523 barrels. Sinclair and Amerada No. 1 Kinter continues to throw wet gas into the air and has suffered a slump in production with the back pressure increased to 2,050 pounds and the gas volume decreased.

Independent Oil & Gas No. 1 Barrow, north of St. Louis production, was drilling at 4253 feet in lime at about one foot below the base of the Wilcox sand and swabbed and flowed 302 barrels in nine hours.

With the Empire and Phillips No. 1 Bullock flowing 700 barrels a day, a townsite play has started at Earlsboro, which has chances of speedy development.

After declining three days in succession, the Greater Seminole produced 2467 more barrels Friday than the previous day, showing a total of 376,527 barrels from 1952 wells.

The output declined in the Bowlegs, East Seminole City, Maud and the St. Louis pools, but increased in the others. One well was completed in the Carr City pool and one abandoned in the Seminole City pool.

The St. Louis pool produced 84,706 barrels from 365 wells.

Production of pools Friday follows: Little River, 79,151; Bowlegs, 33,964; Earlsboro, 65,245; Seminole City, 34,346; East Seminole City, 5,255; Searight, 11,866; Carr City, 14,165; Maud, 12,898; Mission, 35,241.

ROAD BUILT IN CRANE COUNTY ACROSS SAND

(Special to The Times)

MIDLAND, Texas, June 22.—Deep sand on the approach to Crane City and the oil field area in Crane county, which has delayed and stopped many an oil man, has been conquered. The people of Crane county have covered all of the worst sand, a stretch of three miles, with caliche, which makes an admirable road. Leading citizens of Crane City hope to have the entire 26 miles through the county hard surfaced.

Crop-Share Saps Soil

AMES, Iowa. (AP)—The crop-share system of farm leasing is eating away the richness of Iowa soil, a survey of 150 tenant farms by Iowa State college reveals. It encourages an extreme form of grain farming for quick returns whereas cash renters give more attention to hay and pasture, conserving fertility and producing livestock.

INCREASE IN OIL ACTIVITY PECOS COUNTY

Extensions to North and South Probable in Ward Pool

NEW UNIVERSITY WELL GOOD FOR 200 BARRELS

New Producer Opens Up Fourth Pool in Pecos Oil District

(Special to The Times)

SAN ANGELO, Texas, June 22.—Opening of Pecos county's fourth oil pool and the second in lime pay, indicated by Taylor-Link Oil company's No. 1 University, flowing by heads from 1625 feet, and imminence of both north and south extensions of the pool opened in northern Ward county in April by Gulf Production company's No. 4 O'Brien were principal oil developments this week in the West Texas Permian basin. A half dozen producers were added in the Yates field, three of them broadening the south boundary of the pool.

Wildcats in the limelight the week before either had shown nothing new or had made slow progress. This number included Buell & Hagan's No. 1 University and Phillips Petroleum company's No. 1 Courtney in Pecos county, Phillips' No. 1 J. V. Stokes in Midland county, Gibson & Johnson's No. 1 Reed in Howard county, Jones & Liner's No. 1 Jones in Concho county and C. E. Miller and others' No. 1 Tootles estate in Presidio county.

Taylor-Link's No. 1 University in Pecos county, 18 to 20 miles west of the Yates field, made two heads estimated at 15 barrels each late Tuesday and six heads during the next 12 hours while 6⅝-inch casing with a packer was being run to 1555 feet, 70 feet off bottom. No gauges were taken, but the consensus seemed to be that the well would be good from 200 barrels a day up. Oil was struck late Saturday, June 15, at 1613 feet, 236 feet in the lime and 887 feet above sea level, and in drilling to 1625 feet the hole filled up 800 feet with oil in three hours. Heading for five minutes every five hours, the wildcat produced an estimated 100 to 150 barrels until shut in Sunday night. Gravity was reported to be 27.9 corrected, which is only about two degrees below the average in the Yates field.

Six-inch pipe with the packer was intended to shut off 2½ bailers of sulphur water encountered from 1378-80 feet, which did not increase upon deepening. There was not believed to be any bottom hole water, but only testing after the pipe was run would reveal this. The well is 330 feet from the south and east lines of section 30, block 16, on a 160-acre tract. It is Taylor-Link Oil company's second strike within two weeks, paralleling the case last summer of another San Angelo oil firm, Henshaw Oil corporation, which within a fortnight made discoveries in Brown and Howard counties. The first of Taylor-Link's two strikes was in No. 1 Mollie C. Barker in Coleman county, opening a new pool 13 miles southwest of Santa Anna and 3½ miles north of Shield. It topped the Burkett sand June 2 at 683 feet and has rated 200 barrels of 42 gravity, sweet oil daily on the pump.

Will Validate Leases

Production in the Taylor-Link well will validate leases on a large block of University of Texas land and if a sizeable field is developed royalty will further swell the coffers of the university, already bulging from revenues in Reagan and Crane counties. Sub-surface and magnetometer work indicate to some a high extending from the Yates pool through Gibson & Johnson's No. 1 Gray, in section 3, block 179; Geo. Anderson's No. 1 University in section 11, block 17, a completed gasser, the Taylor-Link well and the Tidal well. Data on which the Taylor-Link test was based was worked out by F. Park Geyer and O. M. Edwards of San Angelo, and they and Phil Maverick did similar work on the Tidal block.

Geyer & Frates hold the lease to the northwest quarter of the southwest quarter of section 31, block 16, and a half interest in the southeast quarter of section 13, block 18, a half mile south of the Taylor-Link well. World Oil Co., which has drilled in discovery wells in Crockett and Glasscock counties, has 80 acres offsetting Taylor-Link's 160 diagonally on the southwest. Farther southwest the acreage is split up in 40-acre tracts, many of which were sold in various parts of the country by C. W. Webster of Fort Worth. Taylor-Link holds acreage north and east of its No. 1 University and Shell has much of the acreage to the east. Marland owns sections 5 and 6, block 17, a mile south of the Taylor-Link well. The California Co. owns sections 1, 2, 11 and 12, block 18, between the Taylor-Link and Tidal tests. Humble has sections 19 and 20, block 16, north of the Tidal, around which Phil Maverick, W. M. Holland, F. Park Geyer and Earl Frates hold both leases and university permits.

Tidal No. 1 University, about 3½ miles northwest of Taylor-Link No. 1 University and 1320 feet from the south and west lines of section 16, block 20, held close attention this week. It showed a quarter-million cubic feet of gas from 1185-75 feet in lime and was credited by some with topping the lime at 1270 feet, 1212 feet above sea level. There was 2½ bailers of sulphur water hourly at 1273 feet, which increased at 1315 feet to 13 bailers hourly, to 1100 feet of water at 1345 feet and to a reported hole full at a slightly greater depth. Drilling stopped to land casing. The sulphur water lessened the Tidal test's chances of getting production, although the Taylor-Link well, contrary to the rule, struck oil below sulphur water.

Two miles east of the Taylor-Link well, Shell Petroleum corporation's No. 1 University, 990 feet from the south line and 330 feet from the east line of section 20, block 16, was credited with topping the lime at 1496 feet, 1006 feet above sea level. From 1523-30 feet it struck four bailers of sulphur water hourly, which soon decreased to one bailer hourly, and had drilled to 1650 feet in lime. When the water was drilled through, 8¼-inch casing was to be straight-reamed from 1400.

To Be Tested Again

Buell & Hagan's No. 1 University, four miles south and slightly west of the Taylor-Link well and in section 36, block 18, was standing at 1335 feet with over 1200 feet of oil in the hole and was to be tested again late in the week. The plan to underream 8¼-inch casing from 1317 feet to the bottom to shut off the pay from 1314-20 feet and deepen had been abandoned, at least temporarily. After being swabbed the last time, the well refilled 300 feet with oil overnight, repeating previous performances. Adams Drilling Co. No. 1 University, in section 12, block 17, about six miles south and east of the Taylor-Link and Tidal tests, topped the salt low at 910 feet, 1867 feet above sea level.

Gulf No. 5 O'Brien, in the northwest corner of the southwest quarter of section 18, block F, G. M. M. B. & A. survey, and one mile north of Gulf No. 4 O'Brien, which in April opened a new pool in the northern Ward county, was full of oil Wednesday at 2650 feet, 150 feet in the lime, and preparing to test. After cleansing out to 2610 feet, where heaving sand buried the tools twice, No. 5 O'Brien in drilling to 2640 feet made three heads Sunday, estimated at 25 barrels each. In 12 hours ending at 7 o'clock Monday morning, the well produced 22¼ barrels of oil from 2650 feet.

Gulf No. 2 Hutchins, in the northeast corner of section 7, block 0, and two miles south of Gulf No. 4 O'Brien, was cleaning out Wednesday at 2490 feet, 205 feet in the lime, with 700 feet of oil in the hole and rising. Oil was struck shortly after recovering tools which were blown 300 to 400 feet up the hole by an increase in gas in drilling from 2482 feet. The first gas, estimated from a quarter to a half-million feet, was struck at 2460 feet. Increased between 2478 and 2482 feet and blew the tools up in the hole, snapped the line and caused a fishing job. No. 2 Hutchins topped the lime 63 feet higher than No. 4 O'Brien, while No. 5 O'Brien got the lime 86 feet lower than the discovery well.

Prospects of a 2½ mile northwestern extension of Gulf's pool in northern Crane county appeared fading as Gulf No. 7 Waddell drilled to 3318 feet, 346 feet in the lime, without showing oil. An estimated six million cubic feet of gas from 3115-25 feet, which blew tools up in the hole, had dwindled to around one million cubic feet. The first gas, estimated at one million cubic feet, was encountered at 2973 feet, one foot in the brown lime, and there was a slight showing of oil at 3104 feet.

An average daily flow of 180 barrels of oil by Atlantic-Delmar's No. 2 Hayzlett during the first four days following its shooting stamped it as the equal of the same companies' No. 1 Hayzlett, heretofore the best producer in the Ward county discovery pool, in section 17, block 8, H. & T. C. Ry. Co. survey. The well was shot with 90 quarts from 270, top of the pay, to 2500 feet. Pipe has been strung for Atlantic Pipe Line company's 6-inch line from Monahans to the Hayzlett area. The carrier will connect with Independent's 6-inch line, which Atlantic recently purchased. Announcement was made several weeks ago by W. B. Hassett of Tulsa and associates interested in the Wickett Refining Co. that they would lay a pipe line from Wickett to the Hayzlett pool to take the oil from the Shipley discovery well and J. H. L. Oil company's two producers.

Biggest New One

The biggest initially of six new producers in the Yates pool was Mid-Kansas and Transcontinental's No. 28-A Yates, estimated good for 800 to 1,000 barrels hourly at 1195 feet in hard, black lime, after it had flowed 2,323 barrels in four hours through two 4-inch lines, with the bleeder open part of the time. The line was out, leaving the tools in the hole. No. 29-A Yates, by the same companies, produced 845 barrels of oil through a cracked 4-inch line while drilling from 1,200 to 1,220 feet, where it shut down. Both wells are in section 32½ (vacancy strip), in which the discovery producer is located. No. 9-H Yates, in section 32, block 194, G. C. & S. F. Ry. Co. survey, was to be completed at 1381 feet, where it made initial production of 167 barrels in one hour through two 4-inch lines.

Along the farthest southwest line of the Yates pool, Gulf No. 17-B Yates topped the lime at 1485 feet, 1194 feet above sea level, made its first flow at 1508 feet and got an increase from 1555-58 feet to 100 barrels of pipe line oil hourly. Gulf No. 18-B Yates, one location to the west, made 10-barrel heads every three hours in drilling to 1496 feet in brown lime. First oil encountered at 1425 feet. Both wells are in section 22, block 194, G. C. & S. F. Ry. Co. survey. Phillips Petroleum Co., No. 2 Ramsey, 990 feet from the north line and 1980 feet from the east line of section 17, block 194, G. C. & S. F. Ry. Co. survey, struck oil at 1507 feet and in drilling to 1720 feet developed production of 30 barrels hourly, without water.

John W. Magee's No. 1 Pecos Valley Oil Co., offered possibilities of extending the Pecos valley pool, 20 miles northwest of Fort Stockton, a quarter mile to the northeast by encountering a showing of oil at 1535 feet and gas variously estimated from four to eight million cubic feet from 1540-42 feet. The test shut down at 1542 feet in oil saturated sand to mud off the gas before deepening. It is 150 feet southeast of the northwest line and 150 feet northeast of the southwest line of section 34, block 2, H. H. & T. C. Ry. Co. survey. Phillips' No. 1 Courtney, which several weeks ago struck pay from 1345-67 feet and opened Pecos county's third pool, 11 miles northwest of Fort Stockton, had drilled to 1640 feet with a hole full of fresh water from 1570-85 feet. Reaming of 10-inch casing to 1533 feet shut off the oil and a deep test will be made, as originally intended.

Bradley Wildcat Well in Southwest Wichita County Opens Up Another Producing Area at 1690-Foot Depth

Drilling four feet into a rich oil sand encountered at 1689 feet in his No. 2 R. J. Bradley test in the section south of Electra, was the means of opening up another distinct producing area in southwest Wichita county.

The well, a rank wildcat, is estimated at 125 barrels and is located 2700 feet from the northwest corner and 150 feet south of the north line of the R. J. Bradley farm. The completion of the producer, which is two miles northwest of the K. M. A. pool and one and a half miles south of the Ryan Petroleum corporation's wells on the Nance farm, will be the means of uncovering a big scope of undrilled land in that part of the county.

EIGHTEEN NEW OIL WELLS COMPLETED OKLAHOMA IN WEEK

(Special to The Times)

TULSA, Okla., June 22.—Eighteen of the 26 wells completed in Oklahoma oil areas during the fiscal week ended June 17, were oil wells, having an initial output of 6,527 barrels a day. The one gas well did 14,000,000 feet and the other seven were failures.

The largest well was that of Tom Slick Oil company and Amerada Petroleum corporation's No. 1 Walker, in the northeast of the southeast of 19-6-4, the Asher pool of southern Pottawatomie county, for 4,000 barrels at 3608 to 3682 feet in the Viola lime.

It was a small week in Oklahoma producing affairs, and most of the wells were small. Second largest well was by the Houston Oil company of Texas, its No. 1 Wyatt, in the northeast of the northwest of the southwest of 17-7-4, the St. Louis pool, and also in Pottawatomie, for 1,410 barrels at 4145 to 4233 feet in the Wilcox series.

Oil wells were in Carter, one for 15 barrels; two in Creek for 40 barrels; one in Okmulgee for 25 barrels; four in Osage for 72 barrels; one in Pawnee for 530 barrels; one in Payne for 50 barrels, and three in Stephens for 335 barrels. Okmulgee had the solitary gasser.

Failures were in Carter, Garvin, Jefferson, Kiowa, Okfuskee, Pottawatomie and Seminole counties.

A slowing up of first reports was noted the past fiscal week in Oklahoma and Kansas. Only 67 were reported, with 56 in Oklahoma and 11 in the Sunflower state. The increasing depth to which one must go nowadays for oil is slowing up wildcatters.

Out in the Panhandle of Texas, recent discoveries have stimulated a new development program. Some 23 new wells have been started there with Gray county leading with 16. In West Texas reports come of 13 new tests starting.

MATRIMONIAL CLIMAX CASE MRS. MABEL COREY

PARIS, June 22. (UP)—Mrs. Mabel Gilman Corey's matrimonial misfortunes reached an anti-climax today when her fiance, Don Luis de Bourbon, a prince of the Spanish royal house, returned unsigned the marriage contract which had been sent to him.

"I will not marry Mabel Corey." Mrs. Corey, former wife of the American steel king, William E. Corey, insisted, however, that he would marry her.

The trouble continues to center over the failure of the prospective couple to agree on the financial arrangement of the marriage. Don Luis insists that Mrs. Corey deposit in an Italian bank 5,000,000 French francs in cash, to furnish him an income of 250,000 francs a year, plus pocket money from Mrs. Corey of about 50,000 francs a year.

LIQUIDATION BRINGS FURTHER DECLINES IN COTTON PRICES

NEW YORK, June 22. (AP)—There were further declines in cotton today under continued near month liquidation while there appeared some local and commission house selling of later months on the favorable view of recent weather and crop advices. October contracts sold off to 18.38 or 12 points net lower and closed at that figure, with the general market closing barely steady at net declines of 8 to 16 points.

The market opened easy at a decline of 5 to 12 points under a renewal of July liquidation and selling of later deliveries on the reports of favorable overnight weather in the South.

Private cables reported further continental liquidation in the Liverpool market and said sales of cotton cloths and yarns were unimportant. Cotton shipboard awaiting clearance estimated 83,000 against 84,000 last year.

NEW ORLEANS, June 22. (AP)—Cotton was fairly active for a short session today and the course of prices generally was downward, although resistance to the decline developed from trade buying on the scale down. The market mainly was under the influence of liquidation of the July position claiming the bulk of traders' attention due to the fact that Tuesday will be the first notice day for July deliveries, both here and in New York. October after opening at 18.41, declined to 18.30 and closed at that price or 13 points net lower for the day. The general market closed steady at net declines of 9 to 13 points.

Liverpool came in as due to 2 points better than due.

STRONG FLOURISH STRENGTH FEATURE TRADING ON CURB

NEW YORK, June 22. (AP)—The curb market finished the week with a strong flourish, after opening today's short session lower under a wave of profit-taking. Resumption of buying in public utilities, which carried a half a dozen of the leaders into new high ground, checked the selling throughout the list and most of the issues closed at the day's best levels.

Widest gains were in holding companies possessing stocks of some of the recent leaders in the public utility group on the New York stock exchange. American Super Power new, created recently by a five for one split up of old stocks closed at 48⅜ for a net gain of 1½. American cities "A" and "B", Central states electric issues, middle west utilities.

Niagara Hudson Power, the new company, sold down to 22⅝ and closed at 23⅝ for a net gain of ⅝ of a point. Persistent profit-taking carried Allied Power and Light, American Traction, down 1 to 5⅜ points.

Radio shares were well supported.

TransAmerica, which advanced yesterday on rumors of a merger of its subsidairy, Bank of America, and Chatham bank, yielded nearly two points.

Reports of new mergers within the avaition industry brought support to the air stocks, with Keystone mounting 3¼.

The oils were mixed. Gulf gained 1¼, while Illinois Pipe line which reported increased May deliveries dropped three.

RAIL SHARES LEAD UPWARD MOVEMENT IN STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, June 22. (AP)—A brisk demand for railroad shares, half a dozen of which mounted to record high levels, featured the resumption of the upward price movements in today's brief session of the market. Industrials and public utilities also presented several points of strength, but there was a greater tendency to take profit in those groups.

Except for the generally favorable character of the week-end mercantile and trade reviews, there was no news to influence the price movement. Traders were pleased that the call money rate was maintained at 7 per cent this week and while they look for a higher rate next week, no such flurry as characterised the March month-end market is expected.

Auburn Auto, closely held today soared 27½ points to a new high record at 307, which contrasts with the year's low of 221.

The peak prices for the year, or longer, were established in the railroad group by Atchison, New York Central, Norfolk and Western, New Haven and Union Pacific.

Boston Wool Market

BOSTON, June 22. (AP)—Only a few wool houses transacted what is considered more than a small volume of business during the past week. Texas 12 months and French combing 64's and fines, both original bag and graded, comprise the bulk of sales. Prices on these are slightly lower to about steady. Few sales were closed on Ohio 64's and finer strictly combing wool with prices off a little from the level for previous week. Inquiries were received on medium, but sales scattered and small, with prices slightly easier on some offerings.

GENERAL RUSH TO BUY BOOSTS PRICE IN WHEAT MARKET

CHICAGO, June 22. (AP)—In a general rush to buy wheat today, prices jumped 4¼ a bushel to more than 13c above the level at the beginning of June. The main incentive to purchase was from reports that the Kansas Oklahoma crop outlook bordered on calamity. Serious deterioration of the wheat crop in Nebraska, with urgent need of rain northward into Canada was also attracting widespread attention.

Closing quotations on wheat were greatly unsettled at 1⅜ to 2⅛c above yesterday's finish. Corn closed ⅛c to ⅛c up, oats ⅛c to ⅛@⅜c advanced, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 10 cents.

The maximum jump in wheat prices today, 4¼c, came suddenly after the market had undergone an early drop on account of reports of some rain in Canada and because of Liverpool quotations lower than looked for. Liverpool dispatches explained that Argentine offerings of wheat had increased and were cheaper."

TELEPHONE SHARES FEATURE IN DEALS N. Y. BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, June 22. (AP)—Led by American Telephone 4½s, which accounted for nearly 50 per cent of the trading in the entire list, convertible bonds ran away from the rest of the market today.

The telephone issue in the two hours of trading pushed beyond its previous high turnover, established a few days ago in a full session, reaching the unusual volume of $2,800,000, par value, on a net advance of 2¼ points to 131⅛ in sympathy with the rise in the shares. The International Telephone 4½ per cent convertible equalled its high of 133¼.

Railroad obligations which can be exchanged for stock again were prominent. Atchison 4½s mounted ¾ to 131; Missouri Pacific 5½s closed at a new high of 110⅝, a gain of 1 point; New Haven 6s equalled the year's best price of 126 on an advance of 1¼ and Southern Pacific 4½s with warrants were up ¼ to 92⅛. No important soft spots appeared.

New York Chicago & St. Louis debenture 4s, New Haven debenture 4s, Reading General 4½s and Union Pacific 4½s, Rio Grande Western first 4s, Missouri Kansas & Texas first 4s and New York Central consolidated 4s lost ground, mostly on small turnovers.

Industrials and utilities moved slowly. Liberty bonds and treasury issues eased slightly in a narrow market.

COURT PROCEEDINGS HALTED WHEN FIREMAN FALLS THROUGH CEILING

EVANSTON, Ill., June 22. (UP)—Proceedings in Magistrate Chas. G. Franklin's court were interrupted when Fireman Ronald Ford crashed through the ceiling. Ford, playing handball in the firemen's gymnasium, had pursued an elusive ball into an unfinished and unfloored room over the court.

TEST MAY OPEN CALLAHAN AREA

Four in Callahan

The four above mentioned tests are to be in North Callahan county. The fifth of the new operations to be started by the Campbell concern will be in south Shackleford county, just over the line, and will be E. P. Campbell and company's No. 1 W. E. and C. A. Bowman and it will be located 2,300 feet south and 3,200 feet west of the northeast corner of section 90, T. & P. survey 12.

All the new locations will be drilled within the next 60 days. Each of them will test both the Cook and King sands, the first usually found around 900 to 1,000 feet and the second from 1,400 to 1,750 feet.

Superior Oil corporation's No. 4 Reynolds, located 1,450 feet south and 50 feet west of the northeast corner of the Antonio Roderquiz survey and in the Reynolds ranch pool of southeast Haskell county, topped the producing horizon, a sand, at 1,794 feet, early in the week and is reported to be good for 150 barrels of crude and 4,000,000 cubic feet of gas per day.

The initial production of the new well is double that shown by any of the other three producers completed in that pool so far and the gas pressure is also about twice as great as shown by either of the other wells. The new well is 400 feet west of No. 3 Reynolds, a producer, good for about 50 barrels a day.

White Eagle Oil and Refining company's No. 1 Neva Hughes, 4,942 feet south and 560 feet west of the northeast corner of the Thomas Cosby survey 220, southeast Fisher county, had a small show of oil in the top of the Noodle creek lime at 2,559 feet. The owners were preparing to drill deeper into the formation at mid-week.

Oil Showing Encourages

Finding the small show of crude in the top of the Noodle creek lime is an encouraging sign for encountering production deeper in that horizon. Practically all the producers from that formation in the Noodle creek field of southwest Jones county, about five miles southeast, had similar shows when they topped the lime and then after going into it about 20 feet picked up the pay from which they produce. Very few tests that have failed to get shows in the top of the lime have shown production lower down and the majority of those that have had the top showing have made wells.

Production has been found about a mile and a half northeast of the Hughes test and a good show was discovered about two years ago a half mile west. This is a very interesting operation.

Texas Pacific Coal and Oil company has announced its first development operation in Jones county. It will be on the W. S. and C. C. Smith fee in section 51, T. & P. survey 18, and will be 1,822 feet south and 2,043 feet east of the most western northwest corner of the section. That puts it about three-quarters of a mile north of the farthest north portion in the Shaheen-Bickley pool. Drilling will be started at once.

J. H. Adsit et al are drilling around 600 feet on their No. 1 O. D. Swenson, located about three miles north of Avoca in northeast Jones county. This is a rank wildcat and will be at the center of the northeast quarter of the southeast quarter of section 1803, B. B. B. & C. R. R. survey.

Barnsdall Oil corporation has reported the location for a new wildcat to be drilled in Haskell county. It will be 200 feet north and west of the southeast corner of section 170 in the P. Mass survey 321 and about the middle of the northeast quarter of the county, and on the J. D. Roberts fee.

W. G. Clark will spud both his No. 1 Newman, located 330 feet from the south and west of the northwest 100 acres in section 52, T. & P. survey 18, west Jones county, and his No. G. L. Miller, 330 feet south and east of the northwest corner of section 20 in the same survey, during the next 10 days.

Both operations will test the Noodle creek lime and may go deeper if production is not found in that horizon around 2,800 feet.

NEW DETROIT ROOKIE NO-HIT, NO-RUN HURLER

LEXINGTON, Ky., June 22. (AP)—One student at the University of Kentucky has contracted to step into a "big time" job after his graduation in 1930.

He is Raymond Rhoads, star pitcher of the university baseball team, who will join the Detroit Tigers of the American league.

At the beginning of the present season, Rhoads gave scouts a nerve thrill by pitching a no-hit no-run game against Louisville, which doesn't look so much like a fluke when compared to his previous pitching records. He was signed up by the Tigers for 1930 after protesting that he intended to finish school next year.

Feminine lovers of sports in Europe are carrying handbags to show their favorite recreation this season. The most popular bags are of natural wool or tussore. Tennis enthusiasts have tennis rackets embroidered in bright colors on the flaps. Golf followers carry these adorned with crossed niblicks in brown and silver, and fishermaidens show their preference with trout leaping from a fisherman's basket.

RABBIT FALLS 2,000 FEET HERE—AND LIVES

Dropped from an airplane at an altitude of 2,000 feet during the program which marked the formal opening of the Petrolia gardens, June 15, a fine rabbit broke loose from the parachute immediately after leaving the plane but was unharmed by the long drop.

A sandbag had been tied to the animal to help open the parachute. When the chute opened the combined weight of the rabbit and the sandbag broke the harness and the lightened chute drifted away on the wind while bunny hurtled to earth.

By a freak coincidence the sandbag caught in a tree and hung there for a moment to break the fall before slowly slipping to the ground.

More than 3,000 persons attended the opening of the Petrolia gardens which are located about two miles out on the Petrolia road. They are being opened by the Gilliam Realty company and have been divided into one-acre rabbit ranches. A model farm has already been completed.

The above picture, taken after the rabbit had fallen, shows the following men: Reading left to right—Dudley Rider, chief pilot of the Wichita Falls Air Transport company who piloted the Eaglerock OX-5 plane from which the rabbit was dropped; Fulcher Armstrong, president of the Wichita Falls Air Transport company; N. A. Normand, chief mechanic for the transport company who is holding the parachute which failed to hold the rabbit; J. M. Gilliam, manager of the Gilliam Realty company who is holding the rabbit which made the fall; J. E. McKee Jr.; and J. E. McKee Sr., manager of the Rabbit Products company.

Mr. Rider suffered a broken ankle when the Hisso Eaglerock plane in which he was giving a flying lesson to Joe Staley crashed from an altitude of 2,000 feet last Wednesday afternoon. Mr. Staley escaped uninjured; Mr. Rider was resting well at the Wichita Falls Clinic hospital late Friday.

MERCURY HITS 105 HERE FOR SEASON'S MARK

Saturday was not only the second longest day in the year, but was the hottest thus far, according to figures furnished by the United States cooperative weather bureau, operated by the Texas Electric Service company, which showed that the temperature reached 105 degrees during the afternoon.

Accompanied by one of the lowest barometer readings of the season, 28.69, the sweltering heat followed a 24-hour period of the hottest weather of the week. The temperature had dropped to 103 degrees at 5 p. m. Saturday and an east wind was blowing at an average velocity of three miles an hour.

The high temperature proved a continuation of a heat wave which had held Northwest Texas in its grip for a week. Despite high winds and an electrical display Friday night, the temperature never fell below 80 degrees during the 24 hours ending at 5 p. m. Saturday. The temperature averaged the highest for any 24-hour period this season.

Despite the temperature and the unusually low barometer, which made for unusually "sultry" weather for this part of this country, not a single prostration was reported here.

Extraordinary Efforts Fail to Check Expansion Crude Oil Output But Gas Consumption Increases

WASHINGTON, June 22. (AP)—Though extraordinary efforts in the petroleum industry set up this year have failed to check expansion of crude oil output, it is now growing apparent that current huge consumption of petroleum products, chiefly gasoline, is closely matching the demand to the supply.

The crude oil coming to the surface at the record-shattering rate of 2,700,000 barrels a day, it would be normal expectation to have storage facilities swamped, but G. R. Hopkins, petroleum economist for the Bureau of Mines, after some study of the available records expressed the opinion that even this tremendous flow is not operating at the moment to increase oil stocks.

Gasoline consumption is running at the rate of more than 1,000,000 barrels a day in the United States, Mr. Hopkins estimates, while exports of gasoline closly balance supply obtainable from imports of crude. Fuel oil consumption is figured at close to 1,000,000 barrels additional. With 29,000,000 automobiles operating in the country, the rough approximation of figures indicates that possibly two gallons of gas is daily needed by each machine, and with 600,000 new machines being turned out monthly by factories, it is confidently anticipated that summer month gas consumption will reach new high levels. The tendency of gas consumption figures to increase is now well established.

GOVERNOR DISQUALIFIED COW KICKS OVER BUCKET AND COL. WALSH WINS

TYLER, Texas, June 22. (AP)—Governor Dan Moody participated in a milking contest here today, but was disqualified when the cow kicked over the bucket and Col. C. C. Walsh, governor of the eleventh federal reserve bank district, captured first honors.

The contest was a part of the celebration incident to the opening of a new milk product plant here. Governor Moody told the guests that he had been reared in the dairy business and that he was 18 years old before he knew what it was to sleep after 4 o'clock in the morning.

COMMISSION DISMISSES RATE COMPLAINT FILED BY STAR DRILLING CO.

WASHINGTON, June 22.—The Interstate Commerce Commission today ordered dismissed a complaint filed with it by the Star Drilling company of Akron, Ohio, over rates charged it on shipment of a carload of oil drilling machinery from Akron to Wichita Falls. It is held that the rate charged was not unreasonable or excessive.

ROBISON HEARING WILL BE RESUMED TUESDAY MORNING

AUSTIN, June 22. (AP)—The movement to get J. T. Robison, state land commissioner, to postpone sale of mineral leases in Texas university lands last January was instigated by the "big oil companies," the house sitting as a committee of the whole to investigate charges against Mr. Robison, was told today.

Lloyd Price, an attorney for the commissioner, was a witness and declared, in the face of vehement objection of house counsel, that "big oil companies which owned thousands of acres out there would have moved heaven and earth to prevent the sale."

Price and Dr. J. M. Robison of Houston, the commissioner's son, were the only witnesses and Price did not complete his testimony.

A bare quorum at the start dwindled until after the noon recess there hardly were more than 50 members in attendance. It was decided to recess the hearing until Tuesday to give the house opportunity to work on its suspension calendar Monday.

Dayton Moses, attorney for Mr. Robison, announced that Price would be followed on the witness stand by J. H. Walker, chief clerk of the land office, and Mr. Robison.

Doctor Robison explained his disbursement of $1,000 during the illness of his father in San Antonio in 1925. The check was drawn by the land commissioner on a special fund contributed by purchasers of state lands to pay expenses of reappraising their holdings after the 1921 act.

Paid Doctor Bills

Doctor Robison testified that his father had drawn the check while he was a "very sick man" and just before he submitted to a major operation, in order that members of the family could pay expenses incident to his illness.

"I received no personal benefit from one cent of the money," Doctor Robison testified.

"Your father did not pay you for your services as a physician?"

"No, sir; I never heard of a doctor charging his father for medical services."

He stated that his father had been stricken with what is regarded as "an ordinarily fatal," illness while revaluing lands near Del Rio, and that he (the doctor) went to him from Houston.

Introducing the cancelled checks which Doctor Robison had drawn on the $1,000 account he opened in a San Antonio bank, he explained they were issued to doctors and nurses and for hospital and incidental expenses. A balance of $81 which remained in the bank was checked back to Mr. Robison's special fund from whence it came, Doctor Robison testified.

Testimony of R. L. Batts, vice chairman of the board of regents of Texas university given before the joint committee that investigated the land office, was read into the record. Mr. Batts had given a list of the oil companies he represented in litigation and told the committee he was an employee of the Gulf Oil corporation, drawing a salary.

Price reviewed incidents surrounding the controversy last December when an effort was made to get Commissioner Robison to postpone sales of oil and gas leases advertised for January. He opposed the sales and made a concerted effort against them.

He said the bill, passed a few days after it convened withdrawing the land from the market, "was literally hurled through the legislature."

It Looks Like Kid Wales Is Going To Settle Down

By WILL ROGERS

Well all I know is what I read in the papers. What do you know about the Prince of Wales getting married? Looks like the Kid is going to settle down. You remember a couple of lessons back I was telling you about old Henry the 8th doing all his rough and tumble marrying.

Well you know these Titled Birds seem to have one tradition that they are pretty jealous of, and that is that it is bred into them to try and cop off a Princess if possible. Course some times the Boys go out among the plebians and take a spouse to wife, but they just practically ruin themselves with the rest of their family.

We had a lot of Gals over here that went practically haywire when the Prince was over here, and they would practically cut off a leg to dance with him, and if he had been out strictly for money I expect he could have picked up more over here than anywhere else in the world. So it does go to their credit that they don't always go out for a monetary consideration. It's just as I tell you, it's this "Grab off a Princess" idea that is so deeply rooted in them, that they are always out for that first. Now take two or more Princesses, and let one of them possess a little more of the World's goods than the other. I am not saying that that would make any difference in his choice, but she would be the one that he would pick. Course that may be accidental, but it always happens, so there is a chance that it is premeditated.

20 Pages Gone

Here is the way the whole thing is done. King George and Queen Mary have one of the Privy council bring in a Directory of all the living royal families, that are really operating now. When Russia and Germany dropped out that almost ruined the Directory; they had to tear out 20 pages. I don't care how royal your blood is, and how far your breeding goes back, if you are not at the present time employed in the business of ruling, why there is no more thought of marrying into your family than we have if all the members of a family happen to be at the time incarcerated in a jail.

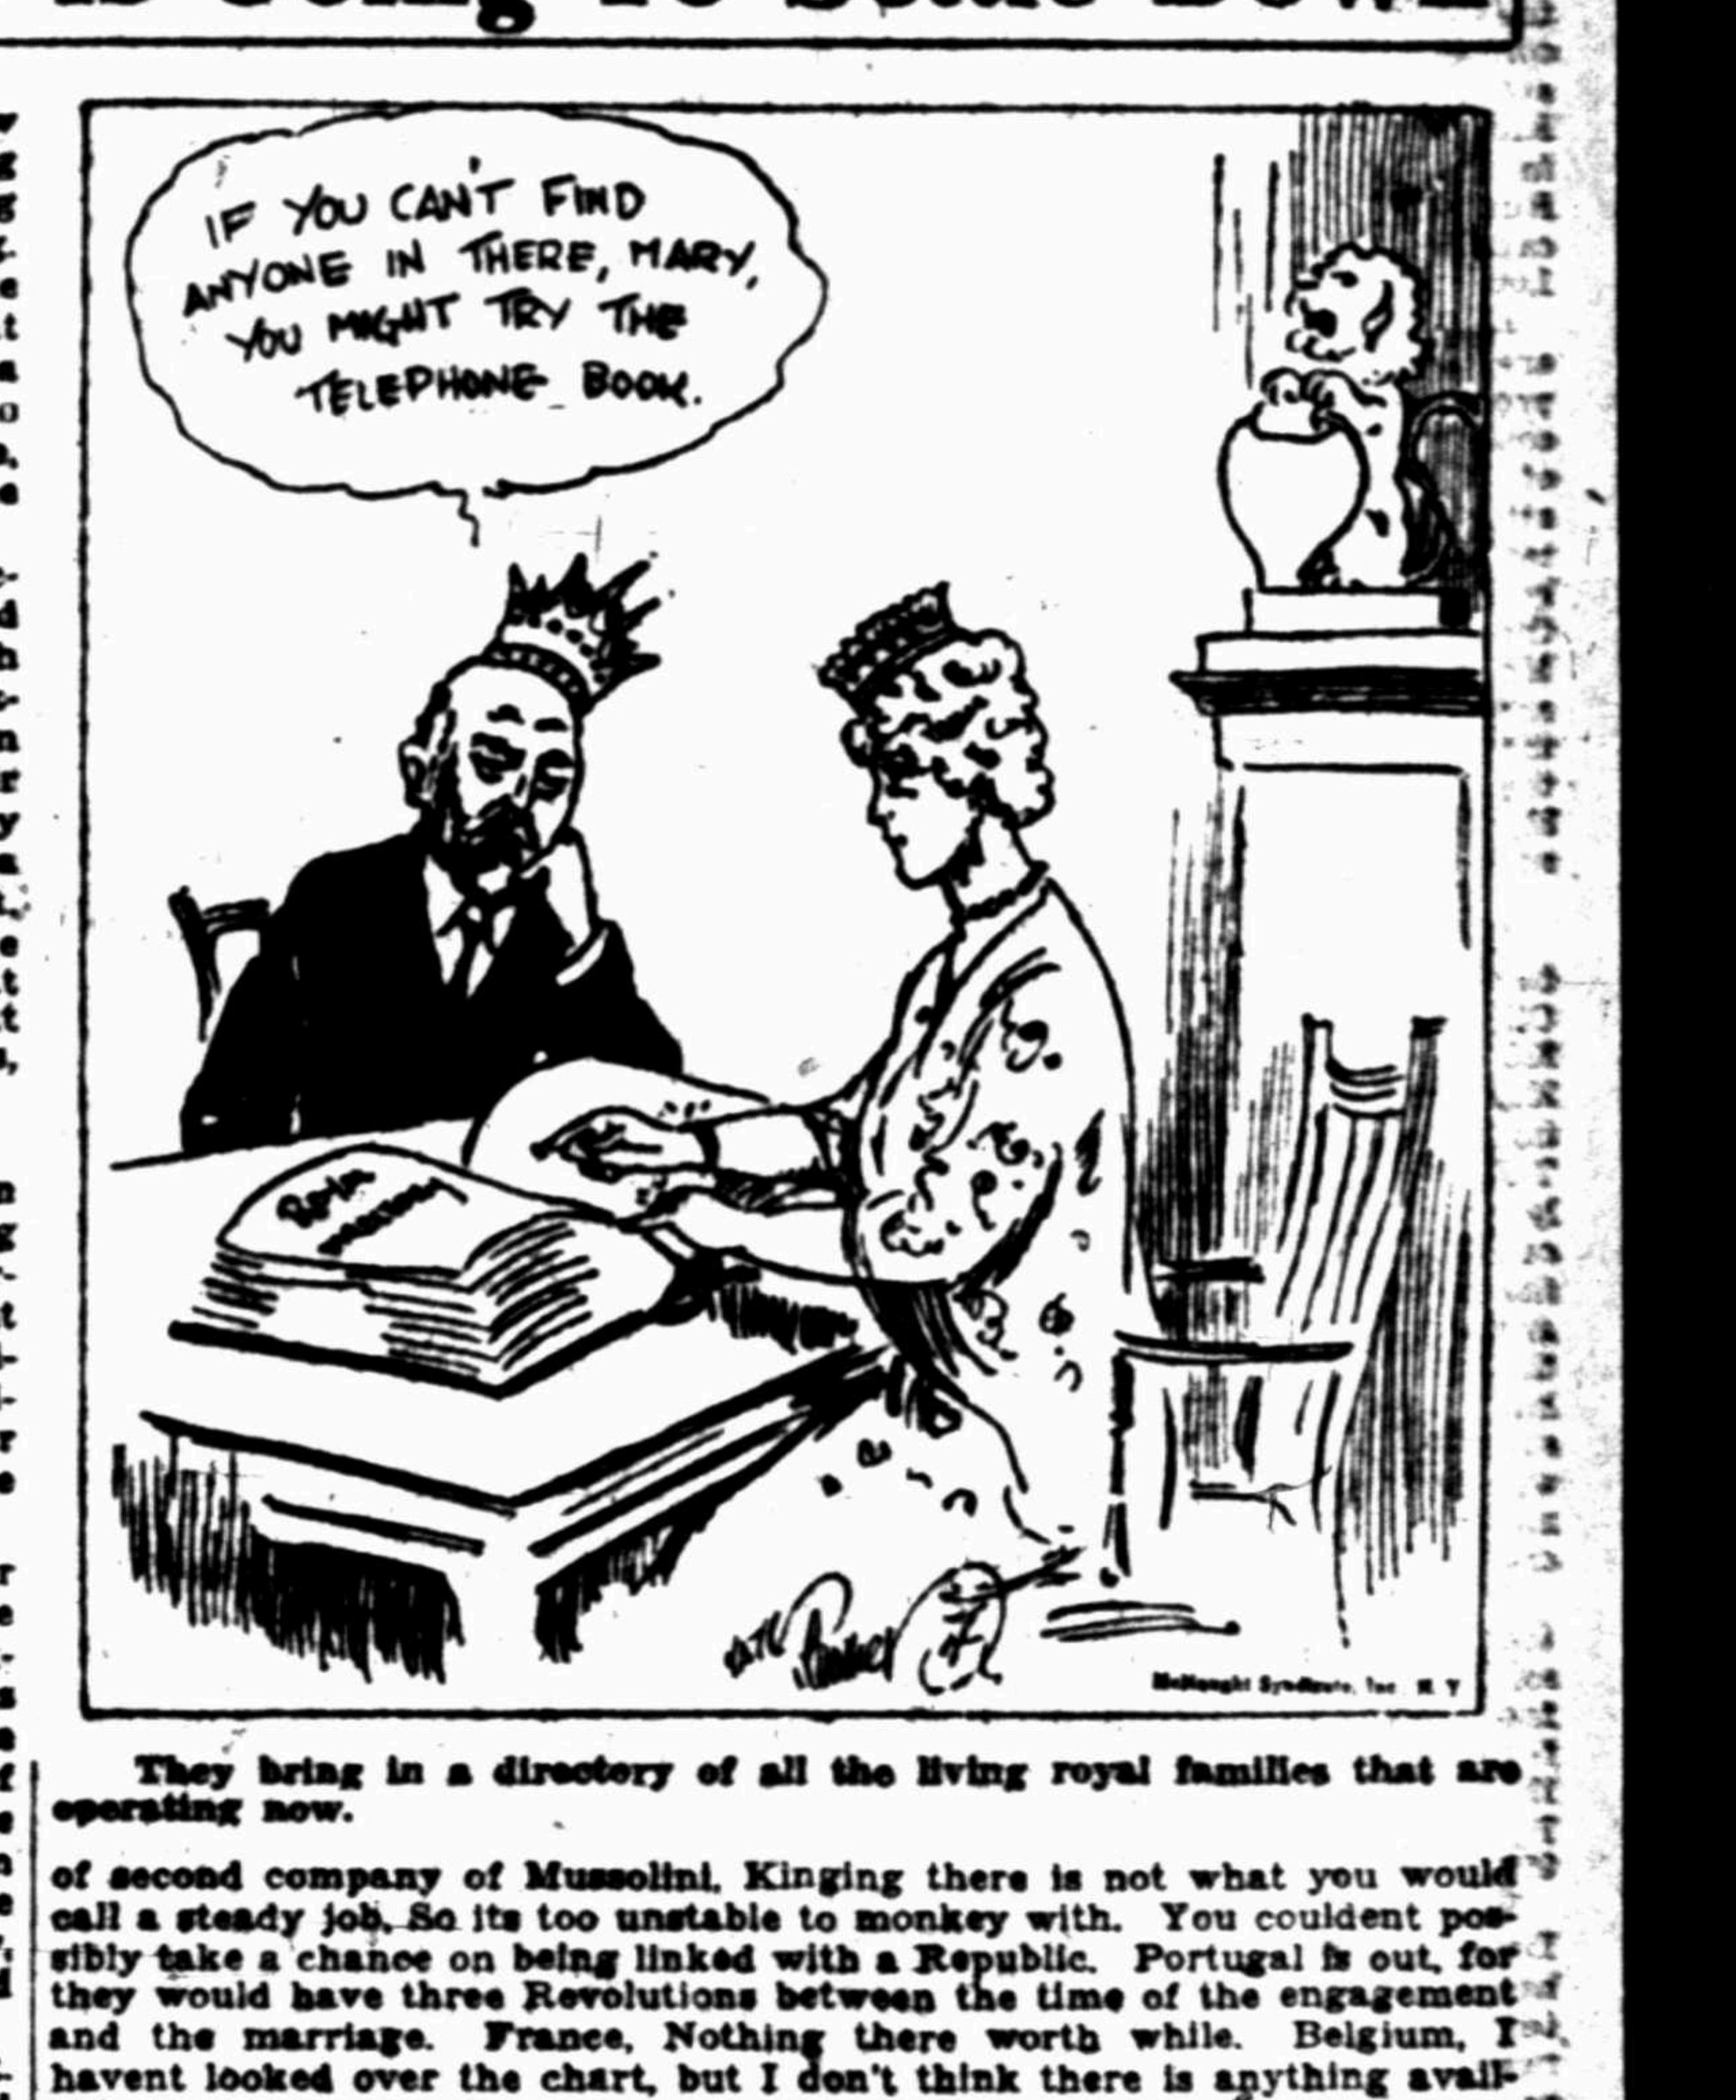

Now there is just thousands of Russians that are eligible and their breeding is as about as it ever was, but as far as matrimony with some reigning family they are just wht you might call null and void. England is especially handicapped in this present crisis, as they have always used Germany as a mating ground, in fact the English family have just learned to speak what little English they do in the last couple of generations. They was all kin, and they just kept their marriages in the family, a little thing like being a cousin, or an Aunt, dident stop them in the least. Well you see all that available talent is now out of the question. The late big war not only showed that civilization don't pay, but it just eliminated over 70 per cent of crop of available wives and husbands that a self respecting Prince had to pick from.

Well now we have them eliminated, lets get back to the ones left. The King and Queen take the list and go over it carefully. You would think they was looking for a telephone number. Instead of taking the numbers alphabetically, they start down in Italy; thats about as far south as you can safely pick up a wife and not take a chance on her being a little "off color." You get any further south than that and you are liable to find that the hair grows out, turns around and grows back in again.

Mussolini Might Get Peeved

Now take Italy. They have an awfully nice breed of Princesses. Their Mother was a Monte-negroian, and their Farther an Italian. But they can't consider them. Why? On account of a Gentleman named Mussolini, they never know when he is liable to get peeved at them and declare the whole shebang a Republic. Well that would do away with any standing that the Royal family had. Now suppose the Prince was betrothed to an Italian Princess, and Mussolini went on a rampage. Well, see, she would lose her Amateur standing, and become just a professional commoner. Well that would mean that he would have the right to annul the engagement, or even if they was already married, it would give him the right to be divorced, for he could prove that she obtained him by false pretenses. So that lets Italy out, and he lost a fine girl just really on account of Mussolini.

Now that brings us to Spain. They have two fine Girls there. But there again we have Primo Revira, the Amateur Dictator. He is a kind of second company of Mussolini. Kinging there is not what you would call a steady job. So its too unstable to monkey with. You couldent possibly take a chance on being linked with a Republic. Portugal is out, for they would have three Revolutions between the time of the engagement and the marriage. France, Nothing there worth while. Belgium, I havent looked over the chart, but I don't think there is anything available there.

They bring in a directory of all the living royal families that are operating now.

Scandinavian Countries

Holland, They and the English don't mix so much. When an Englishman is having his tea out he don't want to be interrupted by a clattering of wooden shoes clattering through the house. So that dident leave him anything but the Scandinavian Countries. There is three of them, Sweden, Norway and Denmark. Well there was "Something queer in Denmark" so he dident go there. Norway sounded too cold, so that leaves Sweden, and a beautiful lovely Girl 19 years old, who perhaps is in love with some nice young man of her own age and country, but the old heads must keep up the "Prestige" of this marrying business, and find somebody that will do Royalty the most good. Its just like Queen Isabella told all her children, when she was doleing them out to Henry the 8th and King Charles. "Its not a Princess place to love, its a Princess place to breed." She sent em out to marry for their Country.

A Thoroughbred race horse breeding establishment is more in line with royal marriages than anything I know of, only they are careful to never inbreed, but as far as the Love thats a lot of Hooey. They think it brings Nations closer to each other to have the heads marry to each other. Well it dident do so much for Germany and England, but anyhow lets get him married off and let the Girls all over the world get their minds on somebody else. Its wonderful I reckon to be a Prince or Princess, but they pay for it.

Five Buildings Damaged by Fire On Elizabeth St.

Five buildings were damaged by flames which broke out in a double garage at 1714 Elizabeth street about 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon. This garage was burned to the ground and two small servant houses on the same lot were seriously damaged by the blaze. Garages at 1712 and 1716 Elizabeth street were slightly damaged.

The flames spread quickly and a pumper was called into use in order to give firemen additional water pressure to prevent the blaze from reaching any of the nearby residences. Fire Chief J. L. McClure estimated the total damage at less than $1,500.

PIONEERS!

Do you remember way back in the "horseless carriage" days—when the first automobiles had just made their appearance? It was an awe-inspiring sight to see a "buggy" come chugging down the street, with a hardy soul guiding it as best he could.

Then a little later when automobiles were used to a greater degree—you started out feeling that you were taking your life in your hands—and with no assurance of returning without assistance.

Those were pioneer days in the automobile industry—but mighty interesting ones. Each year saw many improvements—and progress was continuous!

Next the use of autos tended to become universal, their real value began to be recognized.

Those were the days when it was said of buyers of used cars that "they were buying some other fellow's troubles."

AND

. . . So the Marvels of Yesterday Become the Servants of Today!

Comparison of those first models with the ones of today bring home to us the wonderful strides this industry has made. Today the automobile is a necessity—our "twentieth century" could not get along without it.

Times have changed, too, in the used car market. Today good used automobiles are in the market—and in DEMAND. Yesterday, we took a chance—today we buy from reputable dealers—while cars are as represented.

So this phase of the industry has kept pace with developments in the automotive field.

TOMORROW—but who knows? TODAY in Wichita Falls our dealers are reliable—they offer a selection of every make and model—prices were never better—terms can be arranged.

COLORADO CALLS WITH MOUNTAINS AND COOL STREAMS

(Special to The Times)

DENVER, Colo., June 22.—Cool Colorado's call is not only being heard, but answered. That is apparent here in Denver as one notes motor cars bearing licenses from all the states east and south of the state lines to the Great Lakes and the Gulf of Mexico.

One naturally wonders how many of the thousands of the summer visitors from these regions are fleeing from heat. There is an estimate that I have heard that possibly 80 out of 100 would be the answer to this question.

Theodore Roosevelt was right when he asserted upon a return from a hunting trip that "Colorado is the playground of the nation," and likewise Arthur Chapman was correct when he fixed Colorado as the place where the West begins. With splendid highways leading to the state, and with railroads making special rates, there are indications that all records for summer tourists in the state will be broken this season.

The popularity of Colorado in summer has been growing steadily for a number of years, the visitors knowing full well that in elevations above the level of the sea ranging from one mile at Denver to two and three miles there is assurance of cool days and colder nights. As allurements there are the Rockies, of course, but there are 6,000 miles of trout streams to entice the fisherman; seventeen National forests offering every opportunity for the camper and climber, and more than 9,000 miles of improved highway for the motorist to ramble over.

There is another point about Colorado that is important; one here can live exactly as one desires, with accommodations to fit the fat and the lean purse. Here we find hotels, resorts, cottage camps, auto camps, fishing camps, and, of course, dude ranches. The absolute freedom of movement and the welcome that is typically Western and enjoyments of every conceivable character are found in the state.

The real joy of living in a climate unsurpassed is another of the many charms of Colorado.

Scenically, of course, Colorado by the very nature of its topography is outstanding among the states. The government has recognized this in two national parks, Rocky Mountain for its unsurpassed mountain grandeur, and Mesa Verde for the ruins of a people who lived under the cliffs a thousand years before Columbus sailed, and in four national monuments: Wheeler for a startling exhibit of lava flow when the world was in the making, Colorado for its fantastic rock formations caused by erosion in ages past, Hovenweep for its mysterious round towers and partly buried city, and Yucca house, probably the first of the communal buildings now so familiar in the Southwest.

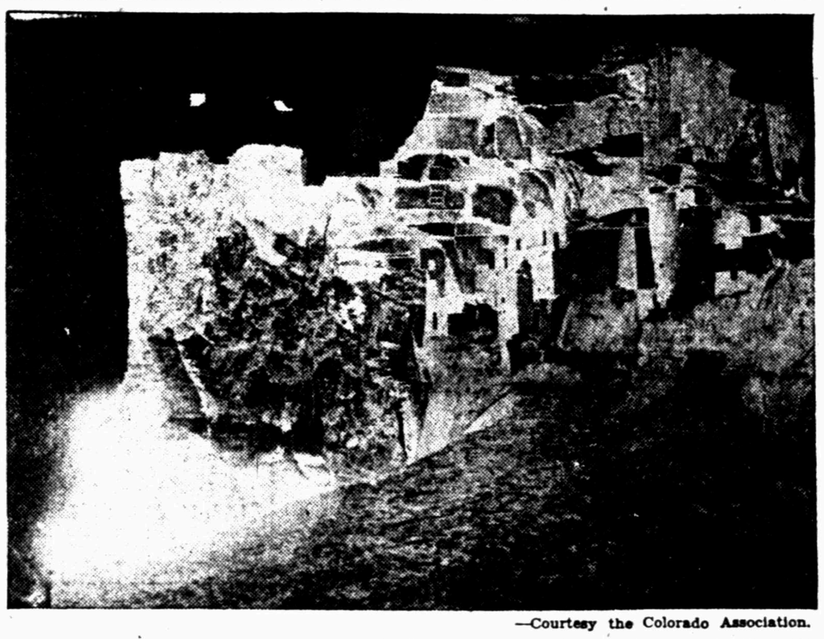

Colorado has been honored recently by the government in the proclamation by President Hoover creating the Holy Cross National Shrine. It includes the Mount of the Holy Cross upon the face of which the Christian symbol is presented in two deep canyons, eternally filled with snow.

Rest and recreation are the two dominant words in Colorado. The fisherman here finds his Eden, the golfer his links, the horseman countless rides and the motorist highways that will take him above the clouds. There is boating and bathing, too, and time never can hang heavy. There is, also, the invigorating atmosphere of a land over which drifts the wind from snow clad heights.

Model Answers Critics

Monna Lils, who sat for Van Dongen's painting, "Femme du Monde" (Society Woman), which is the sensation of the Paris salon, has answered the critics who declare that it emphasizes the sitter's legs more than her face. Mlle. Lils says that as a cinema artist she has a right to show her legs, to which nature has given the classic proportions, without offending public modesty. Van Dongen, noted also for his wonderful beard and his monster studio receptions, is mute on the subject, and evidently is enjoying the tiny tempest his work has aroused.

RUINS OF CLIFF RACE IN MESA VERDE NATIONAL PARK, COLORADO

—Courtesy the Colorado Association.

The enigma of the ages. The photograph is of the ruin of the Cliff Palace, in the Mesa Verde National park, in Colorado. The structure is 300 feet in length, with arches from 50 to 1 feet from the floor, and contains 200 rooms. Scientists have studied this and the other ruins of the cliff dwellers in Mesa Verde and never reached a conclusion as to the identity of the builders—where they came from, whither they went. The scientist has, however, learned the cliffs were occupied possibly a thousand years before Columbus sailed. These people left no signs or writing to give a clue to their history.

'Battle of the Clouds' To Be Staged at Lake Wichita Night July 3

Inaugurating a gigantic two-day celebration at Lakeside park, Walter W. Peltier, general manager, through the courtesy of the Pan-American Producing company of Iowa, will stage the shooting of a specially constructed fireworks piece, "Battle of the Clouds," on the night of July 3 at the park. This event is a forerunner of the July 4 program which will culminate in a similar illuminated spectacle, "Eruption of Mount Etna."

After seeing the spectacular "Battle of the Clouds" staged last year at Coney Island, which resort shoots a shell of this kind each month, Mr. Peltier obtained its reproduction from William Engelke, general manager of the Pan-American company, who sends the piece, the first of its kind to be shot this side of Nebraska, as a gift to Lakeside park patrons through its manager. The value of this single shell is several hundred dollars and its shooting the night of July 3 will be accompanied by 100 other pieces. "The Battle of the Clouds," together with equipment for the Fourth of July program, has already arrived at the Wichita Falls amusement park, and a special shooter from the Iowa company, Charles S. Wisdom, has been at Lakeside park for some time supervising the construction of special sets and docks in midlake for the staging of the two shows.

The bombing of airplanes in true battle style is depicted in the July 3 show, the climax of the celebration coming with the plunging of the illuminated airplanes into the waters of Lake Wichita. The specially built dock, from which the July 3 show will be staged, will crumble into the water with the final bomb explosion. Preceding the bombing, the huge shell will be paraded down the board walk in a mortar constructed for the purpose, in order that celebrants may see its proportions.

Two-hundred foot docks are being built for the July 4 celebration, which will remain permanent and be used for the future staging of fireworks and docks for speedboats. "The Eruption of Mount Etna" will reproduce in illuminated detail the historical incident, as a part of the Fourth of July program which will include many other interesting events to be announced later.

Wichita Officer Follows Nose to 17 Half Gallons

Dick Morris, deputy sheriff, followed his nose into a thick hedge in a residential section here Saturday, and as a result the sheriff's department held 17 half-gallons of liquor they might not otherwise have seized, according to a report of officers.

Morris, Charles Gant and Warren Belcher, all deputies, raided the place and, after seizing a small quantity of liquor, had arrested a man, they reported. Then they prepared to drive away with their prisoner.

"Wait a minute," called Morris. "Something smells funny here."

He dived into a hedge and found two cartons containing the 17 half-gallons, he said.

The prisoner was charged in federal court with possession.

MORROW PRAISED FOR AID SETTLING MEXICAN QUARREL

MEXICO CITY, June 22. (INS)—The American ambassador, Dwight W. Morrow, was today hailed as one of the most popular men in Mexico, due to his indefatigable efforts in bringing about peace between the Roman Catholic church and the Mexican government.

While celebrating the settlement of the three-year controversy, which was concluded yesterday, Mexicans of all classes, creeds and factions, in an unanimity most singular in this country, joined wholeheartedly in showering praise upon Ambassador Morrow and his colleagues, Dr. Miguel Cruchaga and Dr. Edmund Walsh, for the major roles they played in bringing about the settlement. Dr. Cruchaga formerly was Chilean ambassador to the United States, and now is arbiter of the Mexican-German mixed claims commission. Dr. Walsh is vice president of Georgetown university.

Mr. Morrow today was confined to his room with a cold, which prevented his well-wishers from giving a demonstration of their thanks to him.

Reports that the ambassador had received threatening letters as a result of his prominence in bringing about the church-state settlement were dismissed here as "sheer bunk."

The ambassador is exceedingly tired as the result of his unceasing application to Mexico's most pressing problems, and owing to the fact the rainy season is on, it was thought advisable he remain in his room rather than risk aggravating his cold. He planned to leave this afternoon for Cuernavaca, where he has a country home, and which has a lower altitude.

It was stated at the United States embassy today that the ambassador would be joined by his wife before the 4th of July, and that Col. and Mrs. Charles Lindbergh might join the Morrows a little later.

New Concho Lake Will Obliterate Three Old Dams

ABILENE, Texas, June 22. (AP)—Three dams will be obliterated in a lake to be formed by the construction of the new Nasworthy dam across the Concho river six miles southwest of San Angelo. The contract for the dam has been let to a Dallas and Chicago firm and construction is to start as soon as possible.

The new dam will be 45 feet high, 6,000 feet long, 225 feet thick at the base and 20 feet wide at the top. It will impound 10,500 acre feet of water and extend 3.2 miles up thee middle Concho and 2.3 miles up the South Concho at an average depth of 7.6 feet.

Sharks Battle Huge Whale

A fierce battle between a 60-foot whale and two large thresher sharks was recently reported off San Juan, Porto Rico. The sharks attacked their enemy from both sides, crashing their flail-like tails into the body of the plunging giant. At times the harassed whale would hurl its bulk almost entirely out of the water in a vain effort to escape its assailants. After a battle of more than an hour, during which the water was whitened by the conflict, the three disappeared still fighting.

"This is what HAPPENED to a friend of mine"

"GOT the story straight from the family. On the second of January this year he placed his insurance in trust and made the bank his trustee.

"On Lincoln's Birthday, his car was run into by a truck, and the poor chap died the next day.

"Within three weeks the insurance companies paid the claims to the bank, and in another week every cent of the insurance had been safely and soundly invested—and had started earning income for his family.

"He left a little house and a little cash, but the bulk of his estate was this $40,000 insurance."

This true incident shows you how a life insurance trust works—how quickly the money is put safely to work. You can draw your own conclusions as to the value of this modern method of protetting your life insurance—and in so doing, of protecting your family.

PEGGY PIEDMONT Says

YOU'LL never question June being called the month of brides and roses when you take into consideration, Kitty, the many brides that choose this month to seal their marital vows.

Why just think of two couples even selecting the cemetery for a wedding ceremony and married by a justice of the peace who also is a funeral director. Can you beat that? Such was the beginning of the married life of two Tennessee couples. The double wedding took place in Cedar Grove cemetery at Lebanon about two weeks ago and the young brides and grooms, who gave their names as Miss Lilly Kelly and James Thorn and Miss Willie Bell Hoover and Shubie West, did not say why they chose the cemetery for the scene of their nuptials. One of the brides had the same name as our president. Wonder if she can claim him as a kinsman.

Truly, there's no accounting for taste, and I'd as soon be the old woman who kissed the cow as to be married in a graveyard. Wouldn't you?

AND EVEN in far-off Havana is wafted to us news of a June wedding, as Wichita Falls friends received news Friday of the marriage of one of our prominent oil men, Cliff Mooers, to a Miss Magdalene Dolores Navarrete, daughter of the late Gustavo Navarrete, former consul general of Cuba at Genoa, which took place June 6 in the chapen of the Augustinian Fathers in the Reparto La Sierra, with the Rev. Father Moynihan, officiating.

The Havana Evening Telegram report of the wedding says: "The bride was beautiful in an extremely simple gown of white satin, with long tight sleeves and a long, shimmering peacock train. Her veil was of delicate tulle, forming a tight little cap over her black hair, and making a long cloudy train through which shone the satin. The bridal bouquet was of the most exquisite callas, tied with white satin ribbon.

"Padrinos were Mrs. Louisa Ortega de Machado and Enrique Navarrete y Romay.

"Witnesses for the bride were Dr. Luis Machado y Ortego, recently elected president of the Rotary club; Dr. Adolfo Poey and the well known architect, Horacio Navarrete.

"Witnesses for the groom were Conrad Elsner of the National City bank of New York; Abraham Ortego y Maury and Enrique Navarrete y Ortego, brother of the bride.

"After a brief stay at the Sevilla Biltmore, Mr. and Mrs. Mooers will leave for Texas."

A LETTER from Mr. Mooers, dated June 13, says: "We left Havana June 10, after spending a few days at the beautiful city of Matanzas, about 50 miles from Havana. We will reach Cristobal in the morning and spend the day going through the canal. We will visit Cristobal, Colon, Balboa and see the ruins of Old Panama before turning north for Los Angeles, Calif., where we are due June 23. We have our car with us and will drive north through California, Oregon and Washington, where we will visit my parents at Seattle. Then drive east to Yellowstone park, Estes park and spend a few weeks at Antonito, Colo., returning to Wichita Falls about Sept. 1."

Other weddings of interest claiming attention at present include that of Virginia Creath, who was married Saturday afternoon at Canyon City, to Frank Higginbotham, a member of one of Amarillo's prominent families, at the home of her grandmother, and the announcement of the approaching

Glassware and candlesticks were also in shades of the color scheme. Cupids on dainty place cards announced the names of the bridal couple elect, and the date of the wedding.

The two hostesses presented a beautiful lingerie gift to Miss Hackbusch, who will be the honoree of numerous parties within the week.

Plainview Girl and Wichitan United in Beautiful Ceremony

Of interest to numerous Wichita Falls friends is the following account of the marriage of O. L. Beach of this city to a prominent Plainview girl, taken from this week's issue of a Plainview paper.

"Miss Harriet Vanderpoel and Mr. O. L. Beach of Wichita Falls were married last evening at the First Baptist church at an impressive and beautiful ceremony.

"Masses of blue and pink larkspur were used, with tall baskets of the graceful sprays marking the aisle down which the bridal procession came. The altar was banked in larkspur and pink gladiola.

"Prior to the entrance of the bridal party Mrs Guy Gibbs, at the organ, played the prelude from Chopin, followed by a solo, "O Promise Me" by Miss Virginia Phipps. To the strains of the bridal chorus from Lohengrin the procession came slowly down the flower banked aisle. The ushers were Messrs. Ed Brasleton, Ted Flack, L. T. Wood and Sherman Vencil. They were followed by the bridesmaids, Miss Lona Dean of Claude and Miss Katherine Reinken of this city. Miss Dean was dressed in orchid taffeta, and carried an arm bouquet of bronze roses. The small ringbearer, little Miss Lois Beach of Wichita Falls, followed the bridesmaids, carrying the ring in the heart of a lily. Preceding the bride walked her maid of honor, Miss Bessie Wood of Floydada, wearing rose taffeta and carrying an arm bouquet of deep cream roses. The little flower girls, Anne Allen in blue chiffon and Effie Jean Day, in pink chiffon, followed her, scattering rose petals before the bride.

"Miss Vanderpoel entered with her brother, Mr. Charles Vanderpoel. She was exquisite in white satin with lace. Her wedding veil was worn in coronet effect, caught back by a simple band of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of white Killarney roses and lillies of the valley.

"They were met at the altar by the Rev. J. Pat Horton, the groom and his best man, Mr. Leslie Carter, and the small ring-bearer, Master Glenn Lattimore of Lubbock.

"The beautifully impressive double ring ceremony was read by Mr. Horton, while the strains of the Liebestraume by Liszt, played softly by Mrs. Gibbs, echoed through the church.

"The recessional was the wedding march from Mendelssohn, played as the bridal party left the church.

"Immediately after the service, a reception was held at the Vanderpoel home on Houston street, honoring the members of the bridal party and out of town guests.

"Mrs. Vanderpoel was assisted in receiving the guests by Mrs. Homer Beach Sr., of Wichita Falls, the mother of the groom.

"Shortly thereafter, Mr. and Mrs. Beach left for a two weeks' wedding trip to the mountains of Colorado and New Mexico. Upon their return they will be at home in Wichita Falls.

"Mrs. Beach's going away costume was a smart semi-sport ensemble in black and white georgette with accessories to match.

"Mrs. Beach is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Vanderpoel of this city and has lived in Plainview a number of years. After completing her college work at Baylor Belton she taught at Olton one year, and this last year was a member of the Plainview faculty.

"Mr. Beach is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Homer Beach Sr., who formerly lived in Olton, and now reside in Wichita Falls.

"Out of town guests who were here for the wedding included Mr. and Mrs. Homer Beach Sr., Wichita Falls; Mr. and Mrs. Homer Beach Jr., Olton; Dr. J. T. Lattimore, Lubbock; Mrs. M. Hall, Misses Margaret and Elizabeth Conner, Miss Grace Padley and Master Glenn Lattimore, all of Lubbock; Mr. Leslie Carter, Mr. Cecil Beach and little Miss Lois Beach, all of Wichita Falls; Miss Lona Dean of Claude, and Miss Bessie Wood of Floydada."

CELEBRATE GOLDEN WEDDING HERE

MR. AND MRS. J. L. MOORE

Fifty years ago, at Delaplaine, Ark., a young man of 24 and a sweet-faced, 18-year-old girl were married. J. L. Moore, the bridegroom, had lived in Arkansas most of his life, having moved there from Resaka, Ga., his birthplace, at the age of 2. The bride, however, had only recently moved to the state from Iowa. As Lenora Garlinghouse, she was born in Watson, Effingham county, Ill., Oct. 4, 1861, but lived in Iowa most of her early life.

Saturday, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Moore were honored by scores of relatives and friends at a golden anniversary dinner in Weeks park. Better known as "Daddy" Moore, Mr. Moore has been employed by the city for several years, and he and his sons constitute probably the largest family group of the plumbers in this section of the country. The couple, now 74 and 68 years old, respectively, are as young as their youngest great grandchild and are "ready for another 50."

Eight of the 10 children born to Mr. and Mrs. Moore are living today, seven of them in Wichita Falls. J. P., B. A. (Jack), Manny O., G. Ernest, John L. and Roy A. are the sons who are in business here. Talbert E. Moore of San Angelo and Mrs. W. S. Gullahorn of Wichita Falls complete the list. There are also 16 grand children and three great grandchildren.

The Moores have lived in Wichita Falls for 29 years.

marriage of Catherine Michaelias and Seldon Hale Jr., and that of Evelyn Bailey of this city and Nathan Harris of Fort Worth.

Bridge parties and luncheons for these three June brides-elect have occupied prominent places on the social calendar of each day for several weeks.

BUT LEAVING the brides for a moment, I wonder if you have heard as much talk about sun-tan powder, seamless stockings and sun-back dresses in your part of the country as we do down here. A girl who has suddenly reached the would-like-to-be grown-up stage, arrived in Wichita Falls recently from a distant city, for a visit with her sister. Before she had hardly had time to remove her hat, she rushed to her sister's vanity to tidy up a bit.

"Oh, you have some sun-tan powder, haven't you?" she questioned. "No, I have some rachel. That's the nearest thing to it," the sister replied. "You mean to say you haven't any sun-tan powder which is all the rage just now?"

"Surely though, you have some seamless stockings. You don't wear that old-fashioned kind like you have on now, except around the house, do you?"

Upon being told that she did not have any seamless stockings, there was a note of astonishment in the little sister's voice.

"Well, surely you have one of those sun-backed dresses? I have the cutest new one."

This query brought another answer, "No." The little girl carried an expression of disgust for her sister, whom she considered far behind the times.

WHISTLING a tune she walked to the victrola to turn on a record. "Oh, where is 'Dream House?' Surely, sis, you have that new record," but the answer to this inquiry brought another reply of "No" from the older sister.

The younger sister settled herself back onto the divan. "Give me a cigaret then. Surely your husband, John, smokes, doesn't he?" Soon the younger sister was puffing away.

"You know, you ought to take this up. I think you are getting too fat. Why you must weigh at least 130 pounds, don't you?

"All the New York women have gone grapefruit. They have taken up the Hollywood diet. It's an 18-day endurance test, in which the victim is supposed to lose a pound a day."

Some one wonders how the little sister will turn out when she grows up with her rather small scale of values and that one is—

Foreign Teacher Secured for Fine Arts Academy Here

For the teaching of foreign languages, the Wichita Falls Academy of Fine Arts has secured the services of August O. Weill, who has been a student of Spanish, Dutch, French, German, English and Italian for many years. He is qualified to teach these languages to beginners as well as to advanced pupils. The Italian will be taught for beginners, with special emphasis on punctuation for singers.

Mr. Weill was born in Holland, of French parents, and was educated there; he received a college education and obtained the degree of "Literarisch-Mathematisch," a Dutch degree, equivalent to a college degree in this country.

As a Frenchman he served his time in the army and was stationed in Algeria and after completing his service he came to America.

In 1898, when the war with Spain broke out, he enlisted in the American army, from which he was honorably discharged after cessation of hostilities. During the time of his service he taught Spanish to American officers.

After being mustered out of the American army he went to Old Mexico, where he lived and traveled for some time, going to Cuba and Central America, Guatemala, Honduras, Salvador, Nicaragua, Costa Rica and Panama.

For 25 years he has lived and traveled in countries where Spanish was the official language and where most of the business was in the hands of Frenchmen, Germans and Americans, with whom he had dealings in their own languages. For four years he was associated in business with the French consul in Camaquey, Cuba, where he was acting French consul during his partner's eventual absences.

Mr. Weill is also prepared to teach bookkeeping and commercial correspondence and business forms in any language that he teaches.

Although the formal opening of the academy is not until September, Mr. Weill will conduct classes during the summer months.

Morrow Receives Threats for Part In Settling Row

MEXICO CITY, June 22. (AP)—Ambassador Morrow, ill and in bed, has received letters threatening harm to him as a result of his activity in bringing to a successful climax negotiations for settlement of the Mexican religious controversy.

The ambassador considers the letters only the work of cranks. Questions of newspaper men as to whether they worried him he dismissed with only a smile.

Mr. Morrow's illness developed Thursday in the form of a mild indigestion which sent him to his bed. He got up from bed for an hour and a half Thursday night to confer with President Portes Gil and was so tired yesterday he remained abed, canceling his engagement to deliver the commencement address at the American school.

Inexpensive Refrigeration.....

THERE are three outstanding reasons why I think the Wichita Ice Company is such an important thing for you to know about, and why I keep telling you again and again.

First there is their friendly ice service that covers the city day in and day out. The red and white and blue wagons full of clear, sparkling ice all ready for you. Then the neighborhood ice service station at Ninth and Brook is so convenient for business people. Pick up 50 pounds of ice on your way home.

The emergency delivery service of the Wichita Ice Company is a convenience not to be passed lightly. Many and many a housewife in a pinch has dialed 3101 for emergency ice service. Ice delivered with courteous service was sent dashing to her rescue. If you do not know the friendly ice service of the Wichita Ice Company, get acquainted with it today.

NOW that all the glorious outdoor sports are calling you, don't stay inside cooking and spend all your time going to the grocery. Buy up a good supply of green things and let a GE keep them fresh for you. Plan your meals and prepare them while it is cool early in the morning, put them in your GE, then get out and get your suntan.

Mr. McSweaney, GE demonstrator at Noble-Little Hardware Co., 713 Indiana, tells me that GE keeps your food safe as the temperature is always well below 50 degrees. Have a GE for family health . . . for appealing menus . . . because it reduces food spoilage.

GE is simple to install, economical to operate, as beautiful as it is useful. GE cabinets are all steel, non warping and as strong as a safe. The hermetically sealed motor that requires no oiling, runs and runs and runs so quietly and so efficiently that it seems to never need repairs. There are now more than a quarter of a million homes enjoying GE and there has never yet been a dollar spent in repairs.

Call Noble-Little's and ask to have the GE demonstrated.

36 . . . 36 . . . 36 . . . 36

That certainly is a queer message but it is all I can tell you right now. Don't fail to tune in KGKO Tuesday night 8 to 8:30 and hear what the 36 means. See center section of Wednesday Times.

FAITH OPTICAL COMPANY, 910 Scott, says good glasses pay. "See us and see better."

JUST what the fisherman needs in the way of new tackle.

You'll find it in the sporting goods department at Bailey-Moline's, 810 Ohio.

AND after the swim turn on the portable. There's nothing that adds to your outings and trips to the lake like turning on the portable and playing a few good ole Columbia records. Nunn Electric Company, 909 Scott, have all the new Columbia releases. Hear them over KGKO and dial 8118 and have them delivered. Their most popular Columbia record just now is:

Columbia 1825D:
"Takes You"
"The Land of Sleepy Water."
Guy Lombardo and his Royal Canadians.

"WHERE do I want to go? Why to the Desert Song, of course.

It's at the Majestic now and I've simply been dying to see it. It is Warner Brothers' spectacular singing success.

The rest of the girls feel the same way about The Desert Song. Its throbbing romance sung to magic rhythm sets your pulse tingling.

You hear it as well as see it. There is no increase in price but because of the unusual popularity of this play you will be wise to go to early matinees. Feature showing at 12:15, 2:30, 4:45, 7:15, 9:30.

ZOE BECKLEY'S CORNER

Why Be a Dead One?

"Dear Zoe: I am a young man of 22. Have a good-paying job but have always turned over all my earnings to my widowed mother, worked around her home and kept it in A-1 shape. She was recently married and they are touring the country. On their return they expect to find a diary of my activities and whatever I have earned and saved above living costs. I crave companionship but have no friends. I wouldn't know what to do or say or how to act. I repair and wash my stepfather's car but he never lets me drive it. If I leave home I lose all I have put in. If I stay it will come to me.

—DEAD ONE."

Stop thinking of yourself as a dead one and come alive! Mother has taken on a new lease of life, love and adventure; do thou likewise. That is so often the trouble with the widowed mother of one boy—she ties him to her apron string and puts a ball and chain around his think-tank.

The fact that you have a good paying job, old son, and are considered an A-1 financial asset to the family proves you are no "dead one." All you need is to realize it yourself, formulate a new plan of living, skip right out and discover the world.

My suggestion would be that you continue living at home but pay your board and only that. Ma has a husband now to support her and before long you'll have a wife. So save what you can against that happy day. Be friendly with stepdad but don't let him dictate or use you for a meal ticket. You're getting to be a big boy now.

You owe it to yourself to have friends and companions of both sexes, plenty of good times and the mental exercise of beating your own problems as they come along. Don't talk of "not knowing how to act or what to do or say." Tommy rot! Unless you look like the one-eyed cyclops or Mrs. Murphy, the late hippopotamus of the New York zoo, the girls will soon show you what to do and how to do it. Just be yourself. Now quit puttering in the radish beds and spending all your leisure washing stepdad's car, and get ready to show the Newlyweds on their return that they have a grownup son and not a kid in rompers.

Mother Wants New Job

"Dear Zoe: I am a married woman and have a few children. I am tired of my housework and being alone so much. Am greatly interested in another position. Should I make the change, or not? —ANXIOUS."

If a home and the keeping thereof, a bunch of youngsters and presumably a husband constitute a "job" which you don't like and want to swap for another job, I should say do it. But somehow, although wife-and-motherhood and housekeeping make up what can be the most important job on earth, they never seem one you can calmly chuck any time it palls on you. There is a moral aspect to the home-maker's job which is more or less absent in that of a clerk or paid housekeeper.

You have to consider, therefore, the welfare of your kids and husband, and the responsibility of your home, not just your own personal interest. I know only too well the boresomeness of eternal housework and the nag of loneliness. But would you have more excitement and less solitude if you took this other position? Your letter gives no details and I cannot advise you sensibly. I can only urge you to weigh the obligations you undertook when you married, and to remember that all things considered, the humdrum of married life is no worse than that of the factory or somebody else's kitchen.

Well, Ask Him

"Dear Zoe: Why are all the gold diggers invited out and the companionate kind hardly ever? Gee, Zoe, I could get some swell fellows, money, cars and good looks, and won't take them, but am going crazy over this man who makes a small salary and won't even ask me for a car ride. I'd be grateful if he only asked me for a walk.—MARIE."

Why doesn't a live little wire like you walk right up to him and tell him you'd rather go limping down the highway with him than whiz out in Tom Ritzenberger's black-and-fawn Rolls-Royce? Why don't you? I'll bet a million to a stale doughnut he would fall dead with delight if you did it. Let's go!

Bullheaded "Corky"

"Dear Zoe: I am nearly 18 and when I talk of boys to mother she says I'm crazy. So don't give a rip if I get in on time or not, or who I go riding with. I'm high tempered and bull-headed. How can I remedy all this?

—CORKY."

Do you suppose if mother had any idea her strictness was driving you to raise cain and go ski-hooting over the country in almost anybody's car she would go on using the wrong method with you? She just wouldn't, Corky. She means well but doesn't understand today's girl.

Your remedy is clear, make her understand. Even if at first you don't know how to put it in words she will understand, try to get it over. She'll think about it anyhow and I believe will give you more liberty, more instruction and more trust. As I am always dinning into you girls: If mother won't understand; try father.

He's Coming, Girls!

"Dear Zoe: I am 25 and belong to the Elks, Eagles, etc., am superintendent of a large jewelry concern and make good money—but can't get a girl. Am going to buy a nice car soon and want to know some girl who is not too smart. How can I get wise to myself?—E. G."

Why not ask some of the Elks and Eagles to introduce you to their sisters, cousins and aunts? It should be easy. A young man with a job, a car and a sociable nature is welcome anywhere. Look yourself over carefully and see if the grooming is O. K., the clothes pressed to a sharp edge, the linen immaculate and the tie one that Lindbergh would wear.

Learn to dance; it's easy and gives you confidence nothing else does. There were a few quaint spellings in your letter and it was not exactly copperplate. But a little special attention and practice will fix that. As a last resort if you don't meet the girls you want, drag some Elk or Eagle aside and put the question straight to him: "What's wrong with me, if any?" Man to man, he'll tip you off.

INJUNCTION PLEA AGAINST BOTTLING PLANT IS GRANTED

A temporary injunction to restrain the Uncle Jo Bottling works management from permitting its motor vehicles to be operated along the sidewalk fronting the barber shop operated by I. V. Martin was granted by Judge P. A. Martin after a hearing in the 89th district court here Saturday.

The two establishments are adjoining in the 1700 block on Holliday street.

Mr. Martin charged that trucks belonging to the bottling works had been operated along the sidewalk fronting his place of business, and had been parked for long periods of time in front of the place. Witnesses for the bottling company said that not more than three occasions, small trucks had been driven along the sidewalk contrary to rules laid down by the management.

Martin also is suing for $3,000 damages, alleging his business has been injured.

THE NEW SAINT AND SINNER

(Copyright, 1929, NEA Service, Inc.)

At half past one Crystal met Tony in a quiet tearoom. She had made "deadline" with her Christmas cheer story for the day, and was free for an hour, before she would have to go out on another assignment. She had not seen Colin Grant, but her heart sang with the knowledge that she was to meet him at Charlie's Coffee House after the home edition was on the press—about half past four.

She found Tony waiting for her, an unmistakable light of triumph in the blue-diamond eyes. As soon as the luncheon order had been given and the waitress dismissed, Tony began to pour out her story:

"I found Mr. Talbot in his private office at the bank. It was 'My dear' this and 'My dear' that till I shut him up by saying, 'Mr. Talbot, I've come to have a frank talk with you about Callie Barrett.' Well, if I'd had a feather, I'd have had the pleasure of seeing him knocked out cold."

"Didn't you tell him first that you're not going to marry Dick?" Crystal demanded.

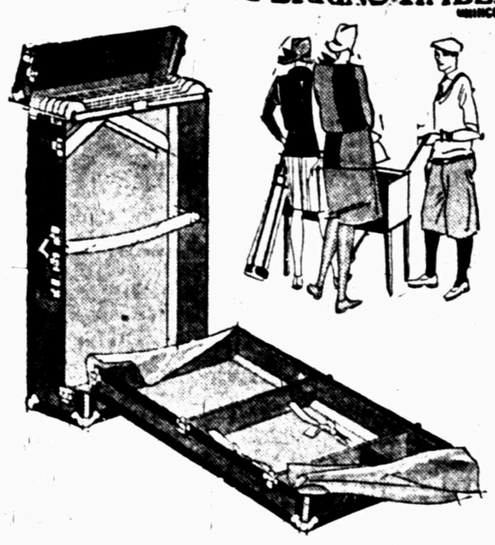

"Of course not, idiot! I was too clever for that," Tony gibed. "Don't you see?—All the time I was making my demands for Callie, he was telling himself that he'd better do what I said, so I'd not break the engagement! . . . Well, I told him he had to give Callie Barrett three thousand dollars. I told him what a fool I think she is not to take more, but I repeated what she said—that she wouldn't touch a penny more than enough to see her through the birth of the baby and 10 months of nursing it; that she intended to support herself and the baby after that, and be damned to the Talbots! Of course he wouldn't believe at first that she wasn't trying to hold him up for a lot more, now or later, and wanted her to sign some other silly, lying paper. I told him flatly she wouldn't and that if he didn't do the right thing by her—or the little that she would consent to accept—I'd make her sue for support of the child. Of course I knew I couldn't make her do it, but he didn't. I told him he could give me the three thousand in cash, so there'd be no legal evidence that he or his precious son had ever had anything to do with a girl named Callie Barrett."

She was interrupted by the arrival of the luncheon, but was too excited to eat. When the waitress had gone, she began again:

"Well, I was just pocketing the three thousand—makes an awful wad, by the way—when in came Dick. He tried to kiss me, and I—well, I slapped him, which was the first time I really lost my temper," she confessed, flushing at the memory. "But I do wish you could have heard me, Crys. It was grand, being able to tell him and his father exactly what I thought of them—making me 'pay my debt' for a few kisses by marrying a man who owed the biggest debt in the world to another girl! Oh, I didn't mince words, darling! I blistered 'em both. It would have taken a two-ton tractor to stop me. . . . But—it's all settled. I'm going to put the poor old grandmother in an old ladies' home, and see Callie settled with her sister in Chicago. . . . And I'm free, Crys! Free!"

A Financial Partnership Essential to Domestic Happiness

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

MRS. NORRIS

Looking the whole situation over, it seems to me that money is at the very source of the modern problem of marriage.

A divorce lawyer told me the other day that he handled a hundred divorces every year that, in his own words, "could be prevented by some dear old aunt somewhere leaving husband or wife ten thousand dollars!"

This is a horrible thought, and yet the thousands of letters that I get from disillusioned, discontented husbands and wives seem to bear it out. When either partner to a marriage has no experience, knowledge or interest in the family expenditures, trouble is sure to follow.

Take the girls and boys who are madly in love with each other today, and going to be married in a few months time. How many of them know just what the mate-to-be expects or plans in regard to the family finances?

A man who signs himself merely "Disgusted," wrote me his phase of the problem, a few weeks ago. Disgusted has been married for 12 years, and he wants to get free.

His income is $75 a week, and a good income, too, for the teller in a country bank. He and his wife ought to have everything in the world to make them happy; they have a boy and a girl, their own home and their own car, a garden and fruit trees—all the things that make living in a prosperous American village so happy and so worth while.

But Lina, the wife, is no manager. She spends all the money she has on the first thing that she fancies, and when the money gives out she charges. They are over nine thousand dollars in debt to grocer and doctor and garage, they owe small bills everywhere. Lina does not worry; she asks her husband for pity's sake to stop talking money; everything will get paid someday. Everything always does.

The disgusted husband kept some books on the matter last year and some of the statistics amazed him, although they didn't even interest his wife.

Interest on house and mortgage, table supplies at $15 a week, gas, telephone, laundry, insurance and service, automobile and cleaner come to $140 per month. The man takes $5 weekly for his personal expenses. This leaves at least $140, and some months more than $200 over. Lina spends that, and as much more—on nothing.

She is the kind of woman who "falls in love" with an expensive hat, who buys sets of books that nobody reads, who spends mornings in beauty parlors and invests in expensive creams, whose bedroom is littered with heavy, illustrated magazines, who taxis everywhere, who sits transfixed before a picture, wishing she had the money to buy it, or wastes whole mornings studying dresses in the shops—usually ending by impulsively charging some costume perfectly adapted to Buckingham palace or Palm Beach.

"It makes me mad," writes "Disgusted," "to think that if I had a thrifty, sensible wife, I would have several thousand dollars invested by this time instead of being that much behind. I could borrow money on the house and pay up all my bills tomorrow, but what good would it do? Lina would go right downtown and order home a complete dinner service in amber glass!"

And it does seem strange that there is no way in which a man can find out, before his marriage, whether his bride has had any training at all in domestic economy, or has even been taught to see that such a thing exists.

Often the shoe is on the other foot. Thousands of wives work hard, at that thankless, unending domestic household work that is like pouring water into sand, thousands of them save money, watch expenses, look forward toward a day when life will be prettier and easier, with comfort and dignity assured for old age. And all the time the husband is cheating; keeping money back, buying $3 cravats at the same hour that the wife is bargaining for a fifteen cent cauliflower.

Most women can stand poverty, a real fight from bad times to better times. But it takes an extraordinary woman to bear in patience and silence the utter injustice of doing all the work, carrying all the burden of a small income, only to discover that the man of the family is entertaining his friends at hotels, buying theater tickets, sitting in poker games, and spending, on the unnecessary new overcoat, three times the money she has managed to save on laundry, service and table.

Money is an accursed thing anyway, and we shall never have the Kingdom Come until we manage to do without it. Too much of it is as bad as too little; anxiety about it, pondering about it, resenting the situation it creates, causes a sort of madness in the brain.

When a woman's thoughts are running upon tapioca pudding because it is cheaper than chocolate; splitting and re-sewing the old sheets to double their wear; walking four blocks to Factory street to take advantage of the canned groceries sale, it exasperates her beyond bearing to hear her husband say breezily:

"I need some more of that shaving cream,—tell the kid to get two tubes. By the way, I'm short this week, that fender is going to cost me twenty. I sent some roses up to the Jenkins with our compliments. Happened to meet her, and she said it was their anniversary. Did I tell you I got stung last night? I drew to kings and eights, and filled—"

This sort of thing embitters the wife—and with reason. How can she possibly take any satisfaction in her carefully balanced budget, when the other half of the family is wasting the dollars she saves in cents?

If some of the young couples who are pulling at the bit of marriage today, some of the men who are vaguely discontented, some of the wives who are burning with resentment all the time, would sit down quietly with a pencil and paper, and estimate in cold figures just where their income goes, and just what extravagances in each one most distresses the other, they would take a long step toward dispelling the divorce cloud that has been hanging over the household.

When a men refuses to give his wife a regular sum for household and personal expenses, when he shies away from any talk of budget like a scared horse, when he promises a lot next month, and forgets this month completely, then the wife is struggling with a situation out of which she cannot possibly emerge successfully.

Years ago that was the customary thing.

Times have changed. Any girl who has been recently married, or who is going to get married this year, has a perfect right today to face this situation with her young man.

It may sound very practical and cold-blooded to the ecstatic lovers. But it is one of these things, like a good digestion, that makes a difference of one hundred per cent in the happiness of married life.

On the other hand, when a man refuses to give his wife a regular sum for household and personal expenses, when he shies away from any talk of budget like a scared horse, when he promises a lot next month, and forgets this month completely, then the wife is struggling with a situation out of which she cannot possibly emerge successfully.

Years ago that was the customary thing. Mama waited, every morning, or every other morning, until Papa had had his coffee, and felt good-natured, and then asked in a timid rush for Annie's wages, money for Willie's shoes and Edith's hair-ribbons, and something for the grocer.

Papa, in those simple days, had no more idea of a budget than Mama did. He immediately said, "Good Heavens!" or even something stronger, in a tone of annoyance.

"Will ten do you?" he then asked ungraciously. Ten dollars, for shoes, servant, dry goods shopping and household supplies. Sometimes Mama timidly suggested that she had only had a little money that week—

Papa then took two more dollars out of his pocket, and shoved them across the table with the greenback, asking in a martyred tone, "Make that go as far as you can, won't you, dear?"

Times have changed. Any girl who has been recently married, or who is going to get married this year, has a perfect right today to face this situation with her young man. She can tell from conversation exactly how seriously he is going to take it; she ought to know then whether he is going to regard the whole money question as a joke, or whether he is going to cooperate with her in a sensible adjustment and outlay.

It may sound very practical and cold-blooded to the ecstatic lovers. But it is one of those things, like a good digestion, that makes a difference of one hundred per cent, in the happiness of married life.

And if we are ever to slay the dragons that destroy marriage, we have to begin with the most terrible of them all—the money question.

Mirror Vear in Cooling

After taking nearly a year to cool, a huge mirror has been made in Europe for a large reflecting telescope. Weighing more than a ton and a half, it is 69 inches in diameter and 10 inches thick. Discs of glass of this size are difficult to obtain free from flaws, and after the molten glass is poured into the mould it must be kept warm by electric heaters, and cooled down gradually over a period of many months.

CAMP FIRE GIRLS

Camp Fire News

The Camp Fire Girls will prepare and serve the picnic supper for the all-Kiwanis night on the Municipal Golf club grounds Monday night. The afternoon's program opened with signaling, lesson No. 1 of the Wigwag system. They learned to make paper belts and also a new kind of leather belt. Some exploration was made in the line of wild wood material available for articles in handicraft. Some of the girls are working for their the girls who are working for their torchbearer's rank planned to go Saturday to make an article of natural material. Some of the girls played games, such as Chinese get-up stick pull, and Indian wrestle. After the games the girls ate a picnic lunch. Edith McClure, Clarice Clark, Amy Louise Meredith, Veneta Seals, Devol, Okla., Thelma Bridges and Miss Mary McIlheran, the executive, attended.

Wednesday afternoon the group met at headquarters and finished checking up on their ranks. Next week Edith McClure will teach batik work at the Camp Fire meeting at headquarters. All those who would like to learn how are invited to attend. The lesson will be demonstrated with Gypsy dyes.

Bluebird Meeting

The Bluebonnet Bluebird group met at the home of Mrs. Osteen. The girls finished up their count books. The Bluebird group is an organization of girls who are not quite old enough to belong to Camp Fire. The program leads up to the older girls' work.

BOY SCOUT NEWS

Troop Thirteen

Troop 13, the Pathfinders, John H. Kauffman, scoutmaster, met Wednesday night at the First Methodist church with Johnnie Wilson presiding due to the absence of the scoutmaster, who is attending the scout camp. The meeting opened with the Scout oath, followed by the flag raising ceremony. Dues were collected and patrol reports were read. The patrol contest was checked with the Panther patrol winning first place. A knot tying contest was held which included the new knots. Camp and matters conerning the troop's welfare were discussed. The meeting closed with the lowering of the flags and with "taps."

Honor Campers Elected

Each year at the scout camp a limited number of boys are elected "honor campers," judging from their behavior in camp, their assistance to younger or more inexperienced scouts, and their general attitude toward camp discipline. Heretofore these boys have been chosen strictly by the other boys but this year a new rule was set. The boys in camp elected a number of boys and the camp leaders selected from this number the three boys they thought were really honor campers. At each of the next two periods three boys will be selected and after camp is over with a trip to Carlsbad caverns will be made for the benefit of the members of the Order of the Arrow, the honor campers' fraternity, of which a boy automatically becomes a member when he is elected honor camper. The trip will only cost $12.50, which will include all expenses except spending money.

Vernon McDaniel of troop two of this city, Sam B. Householder Jr. of troop one of Byers, and T. B. Wilson Jr. of troop one of Archer City, were elected honor campers for this, the first, period of camp and will be allowed the privilege of making this trip to Carlsbad. No honor camper of previous years will be allowed to make the trip unless he attends at least one period of this year's camp.

Troop Twenty

Troop 20, C. McFayden, scoutmaster, met at the First Southern Presbyterian church Friday night. The meeting was opened by the troop bugler, Eugene Fletcher. Travis Whitlow and Ralph Dickson gave the scout oath and laws, followed by the flag raising ceremony. The Wolf patrol won the contest for the meeting and will be permitted the honor or furnishing the color bearers for the American flag at the next meeting. Following a short business session, "capture the flag" and "tug of war" were played. The flag lowering ceremony was followed by echo "taps," blown by Woody McFayden and Eugene Fletcher.

Scout Exhibit at Camp

Scouts who are attending camp this week declare with enthusiasm that this is the "best camp we ever had." Every minute of every day has been filled with some kind of scout activity and much has been accomplished in the way of test passing and the makjng of exhibit boards. Especially are the boys interested in the mounting of specimens of butterflies, dragon flies, and tarantulas. An exhibit of all these mounts will be held at Camp Ephriam Griffin this afternoon for the benefit of the visitors who are present. After the camp the exhibit will be transferred to the local scout office, where the mounts will be on display.

Troop Sixteen

Troop 16, the Straight Shooters, held their regular meeting Friday night at the First Baptist church with Kenneth Erwin, scoutmaster, in charge. The scoutmaster read the bulletin and made several important announcements. Forty-five minute patrol meetings were followed by patrol inspection and contests in knot tying and in test of tests. An airplane contest was won by "Squeaky" Creecy, with Karl ten Brink winning second place. Albert Moller won the knot tying contest and Clark Moody won the test of tests quiz. Standings in the interpatrol contest were announced as follows: Armadillo patrol, 709 points. Cobra patrol, 566 points; Flying Eggle patrol, 551 points. After several games, Mr. Erwin dismissed the troop.

Main Events of Camp

Each day of camp there has been a special event, a surprise, to add variety to the daily routine. Wednesday a motto hike, a "Be Prepared" hike, was given and points were given the patrols who were prepared for any emergency. Thursday night a swimming tournament was held. Saturday afternoon a field meet was held. Saturday night after the camp fire program an initiation of the Order of Tong was held and 10 new boys were initiated into the royal order. This afternoon a treasure hunt will be held. Great interest is being displayed daily in the baseball, horseshoe pitching, and volley ball tournaments.

Troop Fourteen

Troop 14, J. B. Cissell, scoutmaster, opened its meeting Friday night at the Sibley-Taylor Methodist church with the scout oath and laws. Roll was called and dues collected. The bulletin was read by J. B. Cissell, scoutmaster. Mr. Clark, troop committeeman, talked to the boys about getting more merit badges. The meeting closed with the scout benediction, after which the troop went swimming.

Judging from the reservations that have been turned in at the scout office, there will be 60 boys in camp next week. There is still room for 25 or 30 more. Boys who wish to go to camp must be at the scout office at 9 o'clock Monday morning.

Board of Review

Board of review will be held at scout headquarters Monday evening, July 1, at 5:30 o'clock.

Makes Her Own Skin Bleach

Known for having one of the most beautiful skins in New York, Miss Mildred Ball, favorite artists' and photographers' model, recently made the statement that most of the New York models use a skin bleach of their own making.

According to Miss Ball, "we get three ounces of Orchard White from the druggist and add to it the juice of two lemons. This makes a full quarter pint of a perfectly harmless yet marvelously effective bleach. Applied to face, neck and arms, it bleaches any dark or discolored skin a beautiful rosy white. It also makes any rough or coarse skin soft and smooth. Many of the girls use it, too, for a tan and freckle bleach. Nothing like this wonderful mixture can be bought ready to use because it acts best when freshly prepared. The cost for several weeks' supply is only a few cents."—Adv.

JUDGE REFUSES INJUNCTION ON SCOTLAND ROAD

Condemning of Right of Way Across Coleman Ranch Upheld

RULING FOLLOWS HEARING IN DISTRICT COURT HERE

Plea for Permanent Order Set for August 5 in Archer City

The application of W. M. Coleman for an injunction to restrain the Archer county commissioners court from proceeding with the building of a highway along a condemned right of way across the Coleman ranch property on the Wichita Falls-Windthorst-Scotland road in Archer county was denied by Judge Allan D. Montgomery after a hearing in the 30th district court here Saturday.

Judge Montgomery set Aug. 5 as the date for a hearing at Archer City on Mr. Coleman's application for a permanent injunction.

Saturday's hearing was the newest development in a court fight which already has lasted for several months. On a previous occasion Mr. Coleman's application for an injunction was denied, but the court of civil appeals upheld the contention of John C. Kay, local attorney, that the Archer county commissioners court had proceeded illegally in condemning the right of way. The Archer county commission then brought new condemnation proceedings and Mr. Coleman sought the injunction which was denied Saturday.

Mr. Coleman also is suing for damages of approximately $100,000, alleging that the road as proposed would cut his property in half and materially reduce its value for ranching purposes. The right of way across the property, which is situated south of Scotland, is a little more than seven miles in length.

At Saturday's hearing Guy R. Johnston, Archer county engineer, and J. H. Pearston, Archer county judge, testified that in their opinion the proposed right of way is the best available for the road. The Archer county commissioners court was represented at the hearing by Leslie Humphrey, local attorney, and R. S. Morrison, Archer county attorney.

Mr. Coleman contended that an alternative right of way for the road would be more desirable.

"If you like him you can have him," said the mother, placing the baby in the negro woman's arms. "I've got too many to take care of now."

Not until the negro woman arrived home with the child did she become doubtful. Then she called police and requested permission to keep the baby. The police objected.

SUMMER NOVELTIES FOR THE MATRON AND MAID

Right—Georgette with tiered skirt of fine pleating. Bernard et Cie.

So foreign to the skirt with an undulating flare from waist to hem is the tiered model that the latter brings an entirely new silhouette to the summer and fall mode. Tiers occupy a most important place and are used without discrimination as to texture of material, although this factor frequently influences the designer as to the type of pleats or whatever turn the tier is to take.

Georgette is more likely than not to be developed in a model having a skirt of exquisitely fine permanent pleating. Slightly heavier silks o fthe crepe de chine quality are pleated in more generous widths. And the laces are manipulated into pleatings suggestive of the shaped godet, achieving thus a flare.

Milestones in the trend of fashions are illustrated by the three models shown, smart examples of Parisian expressions of the new form of skirt treatment.

The superlatively simple afternoon dress is interpreted by Bernard et Ole in black georgette trimmed with green. The blouse portion of the model is molded to the figure with a slight nip in toward the waist and forming a swathed hip. The top tier of fine pleating follows a swaying curved line while the lower tier maintains an even hem. Pleatings of the green georgette and a lengthened vestee lighten the tone of the frock.

Wider pleatings are concentrated at the sides of the three tiered frock of black crepe de chine from Martial et Armand shown in rear view, which presents an entirely different type of skirt. The body line is molded toward the waist which is emphasized by stitchings. The back closing with buttons is one of the interesting dress notes of the season.

The tailored treatment now accorded lace for day wear is illustrated in the model of black lace from Lucile Parsay, with quaint box pleats set down the front below a tailored yoke to lend severity in contrast to the circular pleated insets in the skirt. A unique collar of white ermine takes the cravat form.

Paris Mirror of Fashions

Lace seemingly goes on forever. Black leads as yet but colors have an important place with pink lace growing constantly more prominent.

Narrow flouncings and more ruffling widths form the newest development. Among novelties are Worth's knickers, politely termed culottes. These are worn under lace or chiffon dresses and really made of chiffon with just a seductive lace finish at the knees.

Narrow lace is used for tiers in a dress from Worth. The narrower laces of necessity, emphasize this popular tier note. Lanvin for example designs a peplum in narrow tiers of taffeta on an evening dress of shot taffeta, the peplum tiers notched in an unusual manner and the flat tiered collar notched to match, a series of four at the hips and four at the neck. The total absence of sleeves and the uncompromising height of the round throat fitting neck is rather new in evening wear.

Boutonniers more or less stick to lapels in tailored and sports clothes but occasionally a novelty creeps in. One is an arrangement of two flowers at the center front of a V neck dress, the blossoms reinforcing the effect of a self tie.

There is a certain amount of new jewelry being shown to indicate which way the wind blows. Very distinctive is Patou's selection of rhinistones—a sort of reaction apparently against the bizarre ideas that have dominated for so long. A double-headed rhinestone pin triangular in form sparkles effectively at the neck of certain satin blouses in white and flesh color from Patou. And again in evening dress this flashing note enhances the treatment of the decolletage.

The rhinestone bracelet shown by Patou for afternoon and evening wear has all the effectiveness of diamonds. Of entirely different classification is his wooden jewelry. Among other items are chokers of large wooden beads studded with small silver balls.

What a Window Shopper Sees

Hats for Sports

The informal straw chapeau for sports wear with summer frocks is of very rough weave, shaped to a shallow crown and with a medium wide brim, sufficient to protect the eyes from the glare of sun, and turned under at the back for comfort against the neck. Grosgrain ribbon makes an attractive facing and forms the band trim. Hats of this type are shown in white, black, natural and the pastels.

Chiffons for Dinner Wear

Dressy enough to suit the requirements of the dinner hour are handsome chiffon frocks in plain colors, namely, blue, maize, green, orchid, nasturtium, and eggshell. Solid color chiffon is increasing in fashion value with the summer.

Shawl Colors

Evening shawls for summer, whether in metal brocade or transparent velvet, are shown in such gorgeous colors as water green, flame, nasturtium, rose petal, citron, Lyon blue, champagne, as well as black and white, any one of which is striking over the white gown. Silver or gold brightens the colors of brocades, whether the shades are delicate or dark.

Fadeless Bathing Suits

Moire and tricot swimming suits are very summery and lustrous in silks of synthetic origin. These are in one, two and three color combinations and are proof against fading due to sun and salt water.

Taffeta Coats

Since woolen coats are unlined for the warm season, evening coats that may do duty with afternoon dresses as well are made of taffeta without linings. Cut on flaring lines with draped collars they are very smart in black or colors.

Pullman Ensembles

Pullman robes that used to be in dark, lustrous silks are very gay this summer in polka dots, small in size, and in white on blue, green or red backgrounds. These are accompanied by the usual flat cases in which to carry them in the traveling bag.

Imported Sandals

The summer sandal of leather woven in the French manner and designed very much like the low shank strap slipper is presented in Cuban and high heels as desired, and usually in two-color combination. This is sponsored as the cool shoe of the season, and may be worn with clothes of sports or tailored genre.

Black Tricorn

A paillasson straw, in black, makes a low tricorn, with flaring corners. An embroidered veil hanging from it, adds to the chic.

Fashion Hints

New Collar

A golden beige summer tweed suit has its raglan sleeved jacket finished in a new way. A little rounding yoke takes the place of a collar and ties in front, like a bow tie.

Three Blues

Chic and attractive is a little sports suit of silk, flannel and georgette in three blues. Medium dark blue silk pleats to make the skirt, the jacket is of flannel in a lighter, smoky blue and the tuckin blouse is of georgette in powder blue, banded in dark.

Cloth Buttons

Button molds, covered with goods are very good now. A pink beige flat crepe has houble dows of self-covered buttons up and down the front and back of its fitted waist and skirt yokes. The sleeves have double rows of the same.

Bridesmaids' Frocks

Pastel colored silk net, over flowered taffeta makes stunning bridesmaids' frocks for a formal wedding. Hats of horsehair braid match the silk net.

Unusual Blouse

The egg-shell crepe blouse that tucks into a midnight blue suit has its batteau neck finished in a one-inch standing collar of the satin side of the crepe and four one-inch bands of the satin appliqued around the cuff puff of the sleeve.

Knee Flounces

Tiers and flounces are posed lower on skirts than they were. A leaf print in beige, navy blue and orange has its circular flounce from the knee. The frock has severe princess lines, with flaring cuffs and collar.

Novel Hat

A French hat of sheer, shiny straw, has one half of its crown of straw, the other half open, so Milady's golden hair can show through. On the straw side there is a brim, on the open side merely a bandeau so the side curls can show too.

Beach Parasols

Glazed chintz makes some of the most colorful little beach parasols one has seen in years. They are small, individual versions of protection from the sun, since one can never, nowadays, assume one's friends want to be protected from the stylish burn.

Organdy-Taffeta

A yelow organdy frock, made over matching taffeta, has a tiny white organdy yoke that runs down the shoulders to make tiny caps over bare arms. White organdy also ties like a child's sash in the back, after girdling the frock.

Smart Frocks for Short Figures

Like unto a haven this side of Paradise for the woman with a short figure is the shop where dresses are offered in sizes designed especially to accommodate her proportions. Sleeves the proper length, waistlines which fall at the natural position, and skirts requiring no shortening are a few of the details considered in frocks built to measurements corresponding with the shorter-than-average figure.

The various phases of the mode, such as pleated ruffles, tiers and jackets, are possible for the short figure when employed in the proper proportion and in true alignment.

Three distinct types of the summer fashions are shown in these dresses of silk crepe, georgette and chiffon.

The short woman will discover that small dotted patterns are becoming to her if the design of a frock retains the slimness of her figure. This model having white dots of conservative size on a dark background, is in two-piece style, the blouse terminating in a finely pleated hip section. The cleverly wrapped skirt likewise is finished by pleated rufflings. Sleeves and bodice maintain the slender body line.

Georgette is particularly smart and comfortable for street and utility wear when it follows such lines as pictured in the solid colored dress making use of double breasted tiers for the skirt and tucks to define the waistline, its severity softened by self ties and a narrow insert of white georgette for the lingerie touch.

A very plain jacket of chiffon tops the sleeveless frock shown in a floral chiffon print. Owing to its soft texture of material, the three-tier skirt does not shorten the figure appreciably.

Favorites for Summer

Last minute additions to vacation wardrobes include the unlined coat of light weight wool and at least one dress of printed chiffon.

The most popular form the latter takes is the sleeveless model cut with a shoulder cape which partially covers the upper arm, or a wide frill of pleating which simulates a cape effect. Small and minor details of hip and skirt treatments add diversity to the distinct youthful summer dress.

Designed to the measurements of the junior and small woman is the model shown of printed chiffon emphasising a note of blue, brown, green or red. Circular godets lend sufficient fullness to the skirt to give it a slight flare and narrow pleatings finish the edge of the shoulder cape and hemline. This is one from among many inexpensive models copied from successful originals. It is priced in the vicinity of $16.

Self fringe of narrow width is the trimming motif on this slim coat of white or pastel basket weave cut with a tuxedo front and standing collar. Patch pockets and exceedingly wide cuffs add to its swagger air.

Golf Costumes

Golfers with a desire to protect the arms from too long exposure to the sun are wearing over sleeveless or cap sleeve frocks pull-ons of lisle in white or color in the form of little shirts which may be slipped off when the temperature rises. In this way the tennis dress may serve for golf merely by the addition of the lisle pull-on.

Cottons for Warm Weather

Smart cottons for warm weather are now being shown in very lightweight construction. The interest focused a short time ago on piques, broadcloths, calicos and the like, is now directed to organdies, lawns, batistes and fine handkerchief linen.

Plain colors, novelty designs, such as plaids, and floral prints are modish in the realm of organdies, the solid colors being pastels and black used for formal gowns of much distinction.

Soft finished lawns are made up into very clever sports and afternoon costumes, as, for example, a jacket suit of small floral printed lawn worn with a tuck-in blouse of white handkerchief linen, its tie and the buttons which trim the coat and skirt emphasizing one color in the print.

Fine hankerchief linens in rather dark colors are quite handsome. A summer ensemble illustrates this trend toward plain colors, the dress of sheer brown linen and the full length coat of white linen patterned in brown and orange dots.

Hints on Making Curtains

If you are contemplating new curtains for certain rooms this spring, these few hints may be worth remembering.

In general, overcurtains should hang to the floor, undercurtains to the window sill and straight draperies should be weighted to keep them from billowing out into the room.

Bands of self material finished with a tailored rosette are always appropriate for the tie backs. Usually, when a valance is used, it is best to have it only slightly shaped, not cut out in sharp points or scallops. Full curtains are very effective when simply French pleated at the top and used without a valance or cornice treatment.

Curtains for French doors should be shirred at both top and bottom and stretched tightly on round or flat rods. Opaque glass curtains hung on a traverse cord eliminate the need for window shades.

Jackets, Many and Varied

Right—Double-breasted collar model of silk crepe.

You may be fashionably and thriftily attired for summer with fewer dresses if several jackets increase the wardrobe possibilities. Two, three, or even four types will make a limited number of dresses seem like many more with an interchange of jackets and colors.

There are varieties of jackets, but very snappy types include the flannel one in solid color, the silk cardigan or the double-breasted model, the reversible quilted cotton type, and a slipover of silk and wool in delicate color.

The wardrobe economically planned on the packet basis is much more wearable and less expensive than buying complete costumes or ensembles which include a coat.

Popular colors in the flannel type are first of all navy blue since fashion is turning to the nautical this season. Then brown for sports, or red, if you can wear it nicely. There are lighter toned colors should you prefer less intensity for summer.

A collarless cardigan of flannel is shown in contrast to the almost prevailing double-breasted, brass buttoned type. And this is in finger tip length.

Cardigans of silk are a charming addition to the wardrobe, many of them being in solid color such as Basque brown, royal blue, or one of the nasturtium shades. Then there are the attractive prints such as white shantung with polka dots in color.

The reversible calico jacket continues to be in good style and is shown in maize and red, or maize and blue as a smart combination.

After the manner of Vionnet is a charming slipover that should be included in the jacket supply. This in silk and wool jersey is very light in weight and in such colors as flesh, maize, or green. It is cut with a deep V neck, belted, and has one small pocket on the hip.

Taffeta for Evening

Pajamas the Garb for Many Occasions

It is now correct, since every one has come to accept the edict, to wear pajama ensembles on the beach and for certain informal entertaining such as bridge and tea parties, while they serve admirably in lieu of a breakfast coat, not to mention the intimate uses for which they were intended originally.

The surprising success of this trousered vogue for women perhaps is due to a subconscious desire on the part of many to retain a hold on the untrammeled fashions of man as a relief from the excessively feminine and at times less comfortable clothes forced upon them by the current mode.

This tendency to adapt some part of the masculine in dress to their own types of garments for hours of ease is noticeable as well in the realm of undergarments, where mannish shorts in various materials such as silk and cotton are proving extremely popular since they are practical and comfortable.

A new adaptation of the pajamas for beach wear is the model done in fine jersey, its two pieces to be donned over the swimming suit. At the very left is a charming suit made in a soft shade of yellow with band trimmings in black.

The reversible jacket makes the pajama ensemble a versatile costume. Black and green satin are used as a stunning combination for the model shown at left center, the green being used for the trousers and the jacket of the two colors. The blouse of white satin tucks in and is appliqued in black and green.

Wide trousers are shown in the majority of pajamas of the season, and are very conspicuous in the shantung model pictured, both plain and polka dotted silk being effectively combined, the figured silk making the tuck-in blouse and jacket.

Exceptionally attractive is the fourth ensemble that follows the vogue for prints. The trousers are of black satin and the jacket of printed crepe in the nasturtium shades of an eggshell background, while the top portion is of eggshell satin, a nice use of lustrous fabric in contrast to one of dull sheen.

PASTOR OF NAZARENE CHURCH RECALLED FOR ENSUING 12 MONTHS

Rev. W. B. Walker, who concluded his first year as pastor of the First Church of the Nazarene on June 16, has been recalled for another year by unanimous action of the congregation, it was stated Saturday.

During Rev. Mr. Walker's period of service the membership of the church has been increased by many conversions and additions, while the finances of the church have been kept in good condition, it was said.

Included in the plans for the ensuing 12 months are two revival campaigns and the building of the second unit of the church building at Fifth and Burnett streets. Ceiling fans have been installed recently in the basement auditorium.

ELECTRA MAN ACCUSED OF OPERATING TRACTOR IN VIOLATION OF LAW

A warning that laws prohibiting the operation of tractors with "lugged" wheels on paved highways is being disregarded too frequently was issued by J. B. Fitts, county highway officer, as he filed a complaint of that nature against an Electra man in the county court at law here Saturday.

Such operation, he said, is destructive to pavement.

TIMES BOOK REVIEW AND LITERARY LANTERN

Readers Can Do a Lot of Traveling Between Covers of the Latest Books

By HORTENSE SAUNDERS
NEA Service Writer

This is the season when steamship and railway companies put forth their most alluring challenges to the almost universal desire to travel and see the world. But since an almost lack of money or time keeps most of us from accepting, we must see the world's wonders through the eyes of others.

China, for instance, is a long trip by way of the Pacific ocean, but it is very near if you read Charles Pettit's new "The Woman Who Commanded 500,000,000 Men" (Liveright). Those who read his "Son of the Grand Eunuch" and the "Elegant Infidelities of Mme. Li Pei Fou" know what to expect and get it—irreproachable style, subtlety, wit, and a gorgeous time.

The story of the beautiful and accomplished concubine who becomes the ruler of the Celestial Empire is based on the real life of the famous dowager empress of China, who died in 1908, after half a century of intrigues, brilliant strokes of political genius, a few feminine frailties, and much breaking of hard-shelled traditions.

It has the smooth, hard finish of red lacquer, a pattern as intricate as a Chinese carving, and the ceremonial politeness of the formal court which sometimes graciously allows the high official whose presence is no longer desirable to wrap himself in yellow silk and commit suicide in an elegant and gentlemanly manner, instead of merely slicing off his head. Extremely sophisticated and full of worldly cynicism, it is scarcely a tour to be recommended for innocents abroad.

You could go to both of the expositions that are being held in Spain this year, and know much less about the Andulusians and the Catalonians than if you curled up in an armchair or a hammock with Martin Nexo's "Days in the Sun" (Cowar—McCann). Here is a book written some years ago, but only recently translated into English. A Dane himself, Nexo probably has little in common emotionally and temperamentally with the Spaniard, and possibly for that very reason he understands him so well. It is more than a travel book; it is wise, philosophical and beautifully written. The author is much less concerned with the cities and the regular tourist spots than he is with the people and their peculiar approach to life and death. I advise all porch tourists to make this stop.

A trip to Austira, with Franz Werfel as the guide, will not be a gay or pleasant jaunt, but it is something you should not miss. "Class Reunion" (Simon and Schuster) is a small volume but it is highly concentrated. You practically attend a clinic in which a man's mind and his soul are laid bare before you. You cannot read more than a dozen pages until you realize how deeply under the surface of emotions and events Werfel can go. You see a group of mittle-aged men at a school reunion, most of them undistinguished, trying to eat a bad dinner, listening to dull speeches, and feign a semblance of interest in each other a quarter of a century after they have gone their several ways from school.

To one Sebastain, the reunion and the examination of a man held for murder that afternoon, bring back the vivid story of one Adler, who is not present, and who was the sole genius of the class. Moved by the double circumstance which recalls the odd boy, Sebastain spends the night feverishly writing the history of his relations with Adler, and the seduction of a fine intellect by a mediocre one, told without sparing either author or reader. When you are tired of looking at scenery and of reading wayside advertisements, this book will give you something to think about.

There is always a lure in our rugged western country, and the primitive, brawny men who conquered it. "Thurman Lucas (MacMillan) by Harlan Eugene Read, takes you into the Nevada desert with an ignorant miner. You meet gold miners, theives, prisoners and Viola Baird. And you find love, loyalty, adventure, disaster, and the elements mold the men and women you meet—a dramatic, sincere book.

Read himself is a middle westerner, who lives in St. Louis, Mo. However, he knows his western country thoroughly, and has done much exploration and research west of the Rockies.

Alaska's snow-capped mountains, her gay life, her colorful background appeal mightily to the imagination at any time, but particularly when the mercury rises and the torrid days are upon us.

Some night when you can't sleep, curl up in your easy chair with a copy of "The Trail Eater" (Putnam's) and let mind prevail over material discomfort.

Here is a good, cool adventure story by an Alaskan blonde. Barrett Willoughby, who is not only easy to look at, judging by her photographs, but easy to read, and who manages to capture an amazing amount of Arctic atmosphere.

Instead of dog days, you will find Siberian malmutes, and you will hear the north wind whistle through the pages.

Miss Willoughby is Alaskan born and bread, and, according to her own statement, she loves to write. I believe she does. She has a convincing enthusiasm for the northern scenery, the roistering, rugged Klondike tradition, and she understands the men and women who compose the social strata of Nome, that curious combination of hothouses and snow huts.

You know that she has raced in dog sleds, hunted and skiied—and when she mentions various articles of Arctic attire, you just know she wears them.

The Vagabond in New York

IRENE DAVIDSON

I have a feeling a Vagabond's information ought to be vague; designed more to intrigue the imagination than satisfy any desire for information.

Anyway, the Wichita Falls colony in New York seems to be settled and happy. That is, it is settled unless Alzada Jane Knickerbocker has moved since I talked to her this morning. She was at the Westover on 72nd and Fifth avenue then; yesterday she was at the Park Central; last week she and Doctor Hyman had a pretty little apartment on the East side, and the week of their arrival they were nicely established for two and a half days in another hotel.

Ethel Anderson, formerly of Wichita Falls, is here, and leaves in a few days for a three month's stay in Europe.

Florence Jackson may be directing Broadway plays next year. Her boss, Leslie Fulenwider of the Fulenwider Stock Production Co. (plays, not cattle) is on the way home from Atlanta and all set for producing a Broadway play next fall.

The terrors of traffic in New York are over rated. Any person with smalltown training can make any of the jammed intersections with ease. By smalltown training I mean a few years in the average town where there are plenty autos and all bets off on traffic regulation—like Wichita Falls, or most any other place. The only really interesting place for the traffic adept is Columbus circle, where the game is to run you down if possible.

I passed the Church of the Ascension (Presbyterian) this morning on my way home or somewhere else, and noted its cornerstone inscription. Maybe it was doorway inscription. Anyway, it read: "The gift of self to any good cause always gives more life in return." Sometimes we say a bigger mouthful than we mean; anyway, the feeling that any orthodox church can step up and say "Any good cause" in this period of the inquisitional hang-over is a lamp to the soul.

The first thing I read when I got home was the story of New York's "Grand Little Old Lady"—Ann Gibson Alliss, of the Andrew Freedman home. Seventy-three years ago Ann Gibson saw one of her father's horses die in agony. . . . Because of that remembrance, there won't be any thirsty or suffering horses on Brooklyn bridge or in Prospect park this summer. There haven't been for a score of years—despite the fact that Ann Gibson Alliss hasn't a nickle of her own. They say there isn't "a horse in heaven or New York who doesn't neigh a soft prayer for her every night—." She's 80 years old. . . . "Any good cause—."

Reck'n everybody knows Ethel Barrymore is going to play the title role in "Scarlet Sister Mary" next season. She has been very ill, and her obvious carrying-on courage in "The Love Duel," her second play this winter, hurt the heart a little. It will be the first time a player of the first order of the modern theater has undertaken a negro characterization. By the way—read "Scarlet Sister Mary."

Zoe Beckley, who writes her "corner" for the Times among other papers, is at her summer cottage in Tolland, Conn., for a few weeks. The "corner" lady, perhaps the most famous woman interviewer in the world, "gets you". . . . By the way, I'm writing this on her typewriter. While she's in Tolland I have the privilege of turning thumbs down on my pent-house room above stairs for her apartment. Drop around and have tea—if you'll bring some cakes and fix the tea yourself. I'm awfully busy getting nothing done—.

'THE WAVE' IS LITERARY GUILD BOOK FOR JULY.

What has been described as the great novel of the civil war is Evelyn Scott's newest book, "The Wave," which has been selected by the Literary guild as its choice for July. The Wave is the first publication of the new publishing firm of Jonathan Cape and Harrison Smith, who have printed a first edition of 100,000 copies. The comment of literary critics and the advance orders for the book indicate that it will be among the most widely read and discussed books of the year.

Joseph Wood Krutch, noted critic and writer, calls The Wave one of the most impressive novels written in the 20th century America. "In choosing the civil war," says Dr. Krutch, "Mrs. Scott has chosen the largest subject which the history of her country affords. And she has given this mighty theme the most adequate treatment which it has ever received in fiction.

Mrs. Scott gives the following explanation of The Wave as the title of her book. "Whatever the philosophy of an actor in a war, he must constantly be convinced of his feebleness when attempting to move in an emotional direction contrary to that of the mass. The propulsion of the individual by a power that is not accountable to reason is very obviously like the action of a wave."

Evelyn Scott is a Southerner, born in New Orleans 36 years ago. Already she has produced an extraordinary variety of work which although limited in audience, has been accepted as among the outstanding contributions to American literature. She began to write at the age of 20 and since that time she has created a book of poems, "Precipitations," three novels, "The Narrow House," "Narcissus," and "The Golden Door"; "Escapade," the powerful record of three harrowing years in the tropics of Brazil; "Migrations," which she calls "an arabesque in histories"; "Ideals," a book of farce and comedy, and "In the Endless Sands," a Christmas story for juveniles, which she wrote with her former husband, Cyril Kay Scott.

She is at present living at Long Beach, L. I., Life for her has been a series of startling experiences in many places, and since leaving New Orleans at the age of 20, she has lived in Brazil, Bermuda, France, England, Portugal, Spain, Algeria and Canada, returning in between times to New York.

GROUP OF LITERARY EXPERIMENTERS TO GO TO MAINE FOR SUMMER

Grace Hazard Conkling will direct the activities of the Surry School of Creative Writing this summer. "Hampur Farm," at Ellsworth, Maine, will house this interesting group of literary experimentors during July and August. The purpose of the school is "to offer training toward fuller self-expression and power in the use of language." A strict daily routine testifies to the seriousness of the students. Visiting celebrities will visit the farm to confer with the group and Mrs. Conkling will conduct daily classes.

She hopes to finish work on her new book of poems, "Witch," which Alfred A. Knopf will publish on Oct. 11.

BOTH WINNERS OF WAR NOVEL PRIZE AMERICANS

Although manuscripts were received from all over the world—from places as widely separated as Australia and Germany—the winners of the $25,000 war novel prize given by Houghton Mifflin company and The American Legion monthly are both Americans. The prize is equally divided between Mary Lee of Westport, New York, for her novel, "It's a Great War," and William T. Scanlon of Fontana, Wisconsin, for his novel, "God Have Mercy on Us." Miss Lee's book presents a panoramic picture of war behind the lines, whereas Mr. Scanlon graphically describes life at the front. The authors' respective backgrounds are as dissimilar as the books they have written: Miss Lee is a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Radcliffe; Mr. Scalon a former stockyard laborer in Chicago.

GAMALIEL BRADFORD BACK AT WORK AGAIN

Gamaliel Bradford, having watched through the press his portraits of some 19th century Americans, "As God Made Them," is now engaged on a group of sketches of famous women. "Sarah Bernhardt" appeared in the June issue of Harper's Magazine and will be followed in July by "Ninon de Lenclos." Houghton Mifflin company expect to issue the volume, when completed, under the title, "Daughters of Eve." According to Harry Hansen, Bradford is "the man who has done most to honor biographical writing in the United States."

PLAYING CARD HISTORY

What is probably the most comprehensive book on playing cards ever written will be published this fall by Houghton Mifflin company. Their story begins with the story of paper making in China, and the century following Marco Polo's return from his wanderings, finds them established as an accepted diversion in Europe, probably introduced into Spain by the Saracens. "The History of Playing Cards," is written by Catherine P. Hargrave and will be illustrated from the largest collection in the world, in possession of the United States Playing Card company of Cincinnati.

THE LITERARY LANTERN

The Literary Lantern burns weekly in the Sunday Times and is intended to throw light on writing around and about the South. Communications for this column should be addressed to the Editor of the Literary Lantern.

The reconstruction of the history of the South is proceeding at so rapid a rate that soon it will be no longer possible to say that its past is not known and its ideas and ideals not understood. Not only are there a number of vigorous studies of the life of the old South, but the period of reconstruction is falling into true perspective. Indeed, the movement has gone so far that there is some danger of shifting emphasis too much; and the tendency to paint northern military operations in the civil war in terms of its blunders is marked in one or two recent biographies of southern heroes, just as the tendency to envision the South in terms of a militant idealism has had the unfortunate effect in some studies of reducing the abolitionists to mere hysterical fanatics and of creating a North merely materialistic, industrial and unlovely. In avoiding the prejudices and passions of historians writing too near the sixties and seventies of the last century to escape contagion, it is not necessary to read northern leaders in terms of utter folly and fanaticism. It is sufficient to point out errors; it is not necessary to make a counter-attack.

Andrew Johnson

The occasion of these not very profound remarks is my reading of Lloyd Paul Stryker's monumental book, "Andrew Johnson: A Study in Courage," (MacMillan, $6). It is a work of untiring industry and aggressive scholarship. There are 824 pages devoted to Johnson's life, the greater bulk of which describes the troubled events of his administration. There are almost 30 pages of closely printed references to authorities, and a list of 162 titles in the bibliography, ranging from the "Encyclopedia Britannica" to unpublished letters. Obviously Mr. Stryker is an erudite and exhaustive student.

Mr. Stryker writes a good deal like Lord Macaulay. Andrew Johnson's cause is the good cause, and those who oppose the good cause are evil and wicked men. Mr. Johnson sought to put into effect the reconstruction program outlined by Mr. Lincoln; and when checked by the radical majority in congress, he fell back on the constitution, and became the stalwart defender of constitutional prerogative. He is pictured as a great statesman, and his messages and state papers are repeatedly referred to as masterly documents.

Now Mr. Stryker is not the first to attempt a vindication of Mr. Johnson. Mr. Robert Winston, whose volume is somewhat excessively ignored in the present work (the only reference to it is to a review of it), had already gone over a great deal of ground and reached a good many analogous conclusions. But Mr. Winston, though he has not written as exhaustive a treatment, has written a better book, one which keeps the author's—and the reader's—mental balance to a nicer degree than does Mr. Stryker's. Mr. Winston is willing to concede something to the radicals. Mr. Winston keeps the total career of Andrew Johnson in focus, pointing to manifold mistakes in Johnson's political life, which Mr. Stryker is inclined to hurry over.

Paints a Martyr

Johnson's earlier career in congress was not a distinguished one. The speeches he delivered while "swinging round the circle" were not statesmanlike speeches, nor does the fact that Johnson was essentially right make them any better speeches. The conduct of his campaign while in the White House was not always tactful and it contained many strategic errors. But while Mr. Stryker points out some of the errors, he is so determined we shall see the grim, strong, misunderstood and silent man in the White House that he ends by painting a figure very like a Christian martyr surrounded by lions.

The program of the radicals for reconstruction in the South is in almost any view indefensible, and it is true that men like Thad Stevens and Ben Butler richly deserve the excoriation which Mr. Stryker visits upon them. But not all of those opposed to the Johnson policies were bad and wicked men, not all of them were Puritan fanatics, not all of them were time-serving politicians. Many sincerely believed that Johnson was usurping dictorial powers; many of them, sincerely interested in peace and acting in the light of such reports of Southern conditions as they could get, were sincerely convinced that the Johnson policy would not result in the crushing out of the heresy of secession. They were frequently deceived, it is true, and the results of their mistake were years of fearful misery for the South, but it does not do to attribute to them the simple desires of a villian in a melodrama for a bold and bloody revenge. It seems to me that Mr. Stryker has vitiated a powerful and a exhaustive treatment by giving us, instead of impartial history, a bowery melodrama in which suffering virtue, tardily rewarded, shines in contrast to a group of black-hearted and incredible masters of villiany.

Phillips Prize Winner

In marked contrast in tone, but even more original in its source material is Ulrich B. Phillips' "Life and Labor in the Old South" (Little, Brown, $4.00), a book which received a prize of $2,500 in 1928 as the best unpublished work on American history. Mr. Phillips is not greatly interested in what people ought to have done, he is curious to find out what they did; and beginning with a sketch of the geography of the South, he shows how the peculiar life of this region was built up by the topographical, social, and economic forces at work in it. A master of the subject of slavery, he has given glimpses into the actual working of the slavery system in Southern agriculture which are invaluable. His chapter on the overseers of the Southern plantations is perhaps the first adequate treatment of that important subject. He tells in one chapter (alas, too short) how the plain people lived; and in two others he investigates the economy of cotton raising. Based almost wholly on original, and in many instances, unpublished material, Mr. Phillips' work is of prime importance for an understanding of Southern history.

Certain matters he has naturally had to omit. He has little to say on the life in Southern cities and towns. The important question of intermarriage between the North and South; the formation in the books of travel by Northern visitors of a picture of Southern life not wholly wrong and not wholly right, with the inevitable repercussion of such views upon the South as differences waxed bitter; the whole cultural aspect of that life—plays, music, books, dancing, manners; the status of women (except as wives of plantation owners)—these are matters he has left out or treated only in passing. We do not point to these omissions except to define what he has done; and that is to trace the foundations, economic and agricultural, which lay beneath the structure of Southern culture. This he has done temporarily, thoroughly, and well.

C. S. A. Postal Service

The third title before us is quite as exhaustive as the other two, and if its field is limited and peculiar, it, too, must long remain the standard work on the subject. This is "The Postal Service of The Confederate States of America" (Dietz Printing Co., Richmond, $10.00) by August Dietz, who has devoted years to the study of his hobby, and whose book, delightfully enough, is printed at his own printing house, even the color-inserts being printed by the firm. Mr. Dietz's interest has been a two-fold one. On the one hand he traces the history of the Confederate postal service, placing before the reader official documents in justification of what he says. On the other hand he gives a minute, a masterly, and an exhaustive treatment of Confederate postage stamps, provisional stamps, cancellation marks and prisoners' letters, for which all collectors of Confederate stamps must be grateful. If there is anything about the Confederate postal system, from the manner of its organization to the names of the printers and engravers who made the stamps, which Mr. Dietz has omitted from his book, they must be very minor matters indeed. Mr. Dietz has served two masters—the philatelist and the historian—with more success than usually accompanies such service; and he has written, moreover, a book which is at once competent and delightful.

After the Apple

(By Isabel McLennan McMeeking)

She is the patron of the bargain sale;
Black satin suit (eleven ninety nine),
Red velvet hat, complexion powder-pale
To emphasize the lip's bright crayoned line;
"O Boy!"—she rolls her eyes and chews her gum,
A waiter passes with a toppling tray,
The maudlin violin pursues the drum
In rhymed play and patterned interplay.

"This dance is mine?"—his pertness matches hers,
They rise and join a hundred other such,
Some subtler cadence in the music stirs
Beneath hard surfaces a gentler touch.
The race sweeps on its panoramic way,
An Eve and Adam in their Eden play.

Hope They All Do

LONDON.—The long-suffering tippers, the gentlemen who enrich the already overloaded pockets of public caterers, have received a pleasant surprise at the Empire theater, one of London's largest. On proffering tips to theater workers, they are refused, all because the management recently passed a rule against accepting them. "The offering of a gratuity will be mutually embarrassing because it will be politely refused," the program says.

America, Cupid Win Nurses

America and Cupid are combining in playing havoc with the nursing force of hospitals of Belfast, Ireland. This was one of the reasons given by Mrs. L. Coleman, a member of the Belfast board of guardians, at a recent meeting called to discuss the shortage of nurses. She said that staffs were not full "because many were marrying and others had trained only to be able to emigrate.

Few Water Conveniences

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP)—Studies of Miss Grace Fernandes, home economist of Oklahoma A. & M. college, have revealed that one farm home in 12 has water in the house. She studied facilities of 519 representative Oklahoma farm homes, and found less than one per cent with private electric power plants.

Scanning New Books

By RICHARD MASSOCK

NEW YORK—Scaramouche is getting on in life and Captain Blood now waits for the "accommodation ladder" instead of clambering up the fore-chains.

Such in the impression remaining from Rafael Sabatini's latest, "The Romantic Prince." But, for that matter, many if not most of the horde of Sabatini's followers, who greeted "Scaramouche," "Fortune's Fool," "The Sea Hawk" and others have been growing older with their author.

Prince Anthony d'Egmont, duke of Guelders, who has the hero role in "The Romantic Prince," has been left high and dry by the receding waters of chivalry—that is to say, he attempts to preserve all the high ideals of the vanishing social system despite their abandonment by most of his imperial, regal and knightly associates.

Betrothed to the beautiful but slightly unstable Catherine de Bourbon, he refuses to marry her, dares the anger of her brother-in-law, Charles the Bold, and goes into voluntary exile (incognito of course) to Flanders. Enter Johanna, daughter of a Flemish merchant and the complete answer to a knightly prayer. His love is returned but things intervene, including the villain, Provincial Governor Rhynsault, aided and abetted by his whimsatirical jester, Kuoni.

Be it entered in Sabatini's record: Here is one romance in which the hero fails to arrive in the nick of time!

But in the end Rhynsault "gets his" and Anthony finds a satisfactory answer to his soul-query.

Soldier of Strong Will

Marshal Foch of France was a man of action, a disciple of work, whose strength of character was built upon an indomitable will, in the estimation of Maj Charles Bugnet, his aide-de-camp in the last eight years of the warrior's life.

In "Foch Speaks," Major Bugnet repeats conversations with his superior to show the character of the man.

By continued glorification of work and knowledge the French soldier "shows how inextricably, in his opinion, they are bound up together, how indispensable they are, and how fruitful in results."

The result of the marshal's clear thinking and devotion to work—efficient work—was a terseness of style evident in the quotations from his conversations.

"Work; set stone upon stone; keep on building," he said. "You must do something, you must act, you must obtain results. Results!—that is all I consider."

In the war, too, his principle was: "Know what you will, and do it . . . It is enough to know what one wills, and that is half the battle."

He never lost heart "because he willed not to lose heart." His words were:

"When beaten I said to myself: I shall be beaten for four days or five days if necessary, but I shall always remain in being'."

Total Disappointment

Marguerite E. Baldwin's "Dark Weather" is the story of a smalltown girl of easy morals who, disappointed, kills herself by the now convenient trick of wrecking an automobile.

Two of June Fawley's lovers, Jules and Lyle, match coins to see who will marry her and Lyle "wins." Told how they decided the issue, June, who expected Jules to marry her, drives off with a third man and runs the car into a ditch.

'KITTY' FIRST ENGLISH SOUND PICTURE TO COME TO AMERICAN THEATERS

The first English sound picture to invade America is Warwick Deeping's "Kitty" and reports from abroad indicate that it will surpass both "Sorrel and Son" and "Doomsday" in popularity. At the same time comes the announcement that Thompson Buchanan is dramatizing "Sorrel and Son" for fall presentation in London—thus elevating Deeping to both sound screen and stage simultaneously.

Deeping's popularity has increased steadily since 1926, when Mr. Knopf published this powerful novel. His new book "Roper's Row," due on August 2, is already being considered for the screen.

In the filming of "Kitty," great care has been exercised by Victor Saville, the director, in production details. The silent version was made in London and at Henley on the Thames in the actual localities which Deeping had in mind as he wrote the story. To insure greater realism in the dialogue sequences a special troupe of English players was brought to this country and installed in the R. C. A. studios. Estelle Brody and John Stuart, prominent British screen stars, have the leading roles.

Following its premiere at the Cameo theater in New York City, "Kitty" will be shown throughout the country.

Author Psychoanalyzes Louis XIV in Most Recent Biography of Sun King

Reviewed by
GENEVIEVE S. HAMLETT

The fervor of the reading public for the biography which has been so pronounced in the last two years seems constantly to increase. With the growth in the number of biographies we note a distinct change in the type: From the purely narrative and descriptive has grown the interpretive or psychological. Conspicuous among the latter class is Sisley Huddleston's recently published book, "Louis XIV in Love and War."

Mr. Huddleston appropriately dedicates his book to Dr. Alfred Adler, the psychologist who emphasizes the improtance of the inferiority complex in the development of character. In his dedication the author discloses the fundamental basis on which he builds his conception of Louis' life: "To Dr. Alfred Adler, whose researches into the springs of human conduct, whose revelations of the causes and consequences of what he has called the 'inferiority complex' have made possible this book, which endeavors to give not only a narrative of the amatory, political and military experiences of Louis the Sun King, but to indicate the psychological reasons of his transformation from a dull, oppressed boy into a resplendent monarch, defying Europe, yet secretly suffering from incurable misgivings."

Mr. Huddleston then proceeds to develop his theme logically and plausibly. He pictures the little boy, growing up oppressed and neglected, though a king, under the complete domination of his mother, Anne of Austria, and her cardinal, Mazarin. So, when at last he is crowned, he determines to control absolutely—and there follows the doctrine of divine right of kings and a most distressing reign for France.

Louis' court became magnificent. He insisted on the most formal court etiquette; his arising and retiring took on the aspect of veritable functions. Every hour of his day was carefully planned. He, himself, did an immense amount of work, apparently feeling that if he left anything at all to others, his dignity was lost.

Unattractive Mistresses

Louis' affairs with women, Mr. Huddleston points out, make another proof that he was suffering from an inferiority complex. Where men were concerned, he could vaunt his pride to the limit, but with women he was helpless. his mistresses were frequently unattractive: Louise de La Vallière was lame and entirely undistinguished; La Montespan became enormously obese before she was displaced by Madam Maintenon, the governess of the king's illegitimate children and a religious fanatic, whom Louis secretly married. Yet Louis could deny them nothing. The magnificent buildings which Louis left behind, the most ostentatious of which was the palace at Versailles, were built merely to house these mistresses and to reflect his own splendor.

"Just as Louis wore high heels to increase his stature, so he mounted on the stilts of militarism to conceal his moral dwarfishness." In his many wars Louis fought from vanity at all times, rather than from any preconceived belief that political advancement would follow for his country. He never seemed to follow up his victories nor benefit from them.

Turns to Religion

Louis' religious life is quite significant in view of the author's theory. Throughout life he attended mass regularly, he had an almost superstitious regard for the holy offices. Was not this because of secret fear? As he became older he began to repent his misdeeds, his self-indulgencies, his many mistresses. So he turned to religion—and to Madame de Maintenon—and revoked the Edict of Nantes—the crowning folly of his reign. The Edict of Nantes, granted by Henry IV, had given the Huguenots the privilege of their own religion. With its revocation there followed in France a period of unutterable persecution. Mr. Huddleston describes the torture of the Protestants by the Catholics with remarkable vigor and clarity. "Public worship (by the Huguenots) was prohibited and recalcitrants were sent to the terrible galleys. The children were terrorized and stolen from their parents. Soldiers beat and burned their victims, threw ice cold water upon them, and even blew them up with bellows. The officers urged on their men and laughed at the most indescribable excesses. The hospitals, the prisons, the galleys . . . were equally frightful. There were no sanitary conveniences. The filth of the time can hardly be realized, and in this filthiness disease was quickly propagated."

The author gives an excellent chapter to the discussion of the development of the arts during Louis' reign. On the whole, he thinks that though Louis encouraged all the arts, that beaux exprits owe little to the king personally. Their genius was presented and would have flourished under any monarch. Nor did the wars and sufferings of the time deter the growth of the arts, for they furnished fresh inspiration and subject matter for the artists.

It is small wonder that Louis' long reign, beset as it was with wars and persecutions, should bring him grief at its close. Here, again, the author's clear cut style draws for us a vivid picture. "If Louis was the Rio Soleil, his latter years were those of a sad sun-setting. He was abandoned, an isolated old man, sitting with a priest-ridden old woman, who was muffled up, afraid of catching cold, nursing her rheumatism, afraid of losing her influence over the king . . . . The famous warriors of Louis had gone—the Turennes, the Condes, the Crequis, the Luxembourgs. The famous seamen—the Duquesnes and the Tourvilles—had gone. The literary stars in the Ludovician firmament—Corneille, Racine, Moliere, La Fontaine, Pascal, Madame de Sevigne, had gone. Louis was alone at the end of the century, endeavoring to govern a country which was weary, gloomy, impoverished."

JOHN COWPER POWYS COMPARED TO DOZEN LITERARY IMMORTALS

This business of comparing the author of Wolf Solent, John Cowper Powys, to the immortals of literature was begun by Ernest Sutherland Bates in the Saturday Review of Literature.

"He is by turns an Emily Bronte, a wild creature of the heath; a subtle, introspective Proust; a nature enthralled Wordsworth; a Poe, journeying in deliberate search of horror; a Dostoievsky, shaking with mystic fever; even at rare moments, a Shakespeare, hurling the ultimate dramatic word."

Other writers to whom Mr. Powys has been compared are: Thomas Hardy, Joseph Conrad, W. Somerset Maugham, John Galsworthy, William Wordsworth, Anatole France, James Joyce, Sophocles.

Wolf Solent was published by Simon and Schuster on May 16, 1929. It is already ranked third in the fiction best-seller list by Brentanos, New York.

Age-Old Battle

WINNIPEG, Canada.—Neighbor's chickens and tin cans in other people's back yards have started many a grudge fight. And that's what ruined a perfectly good friendship between Jeter Jankowski and his neighbor Snicack—at least the cans did. Jankowski saw Snicack throwing cans in his yard and went out to stop him. "I'll kill you even if it costs me $50," Snicack wound up the argument. He then hit Jankowski with a rake. In court Snicack was fined $50.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

A little that the righteous man hath is better than the riches of the many wicked.—Psalms 37:16.

If men would only take the chances of doing right because it is right, instead of the immediate certainty of the advantage of doing wrong, how much happier would their lives be.—B. R. Haydon.

NEW YORK CITY'S POLITICAL HELPLESSNESS

The Citizens Union, an aggressive non-partisan organization which is trying to mold and unite sentiment for better government in New York City, recently issued a long and severe criticism of Mayor Walker and his administration. The document refers to the Honorable Jimmie as "a mayor with whom the claims of personal and political friends come first. Only after, and subject to, their satisfaction is the public good considered."

"The Citizens Union believes," the report adds, "that the city of New York is entitled to something better than this—that a government commensurate with the needs of this city requires courage and leadership, militant honesty and wholehearted devotion to the interests of the entire city without fear, favor or discrimination."

Probably most of the thoughtful and observant citizens of New York agree with what the Union says. But apparently there isn't anything that can be done about it. Walker has treated Tammany right; and Tammany is for him. Democrats considered as mayoralty possibilities, outside of the Tammany organization, include John F. Hylan and Congressman LaGuardia. To elect either of these would be merely trading one set of faults and weakness for a different set. The Republican organization in New York City has been, considering its opportunities, fully as bad as Tammany in many respects and worse in some respects. It offers no relief whatever.

It is a most unhappy commentary upon American municipal politics that the country's two largest cities should have mayors whose unworthiness is recognized, yet are unable to get rid of them for fear of getting something worse.

The real trouble is, of course, that there aren't enough New Yorkers who care. Nor enough Chicagoans. Conditions such as these two cities must endure have their roots in civic indifference. Whenever and wherever such indifference exists, there will be found men like Walker and Thompson, to take full advantage of it.

COMPOUND INTEREST

The Indianapolis attorney who left a $50,000 bequest, to be held and the interest compounded for 200 years, figured that a total of about $160,000,000 would be available in 2129. Evidently he was expecting a low rate of interest. At five per cent, compounded annually, $50,000 would grow to over $400,000,000 in 200 years, according to our banker's figures. At that rate, a sum of money will double itself in 14 years, which means that it will double itself seven times in a century and 14 times in two centuries.

Schools, libraries, art associations, community centers and the like are to be established with the money, at the end of the two centuries. The testator takes it for granted that there will be need, in 2129, for such institutions. Probably there will be. But two centuries can bring many changes.

Benjamin Franklin left a sum of money, $1,000, we believe, to the city of Philadelphia, to be held and the interest compounded for 100 years and then used to help ambitious apprentices set themselves up in business. Long before the bequest had reached maturity, the apprentice system had vanished from the economic scheme. In St. Louis, nearly a century ago, a fund was established to aid the west-bound travelers who, at that time, were using St. Louis as a stepping off place when they headed toward the Pacific in their ox-drawn wagons. There are no more covered wagons trekking westward from St. Louis, but the proceeds of the bequest are used today in keeping with the spirit that prompted the gift.

It takes a wise man to look ahead 200 years; or even 100.

Compound interest can make a modest bequest look munificent, as in the Indianapolis case. Someone has figured it out that if a penny had been deposited in the year 1 A. D. and the interest compounded at five per cent, it would now amount to a sum so large that the annual interest thereon would be sufficient to pay the existing debts of all the nations of the world, and perhaps leave something over for farm relief and prohibition enforcement. We haven't figured it out ourselves.

NO OCCASION FOR APPLAUSE

If editorial comment in this country accurately reflects public opinion, the young man who stowed away on the Lotti plane will not profit much by his act. In a spirit of reckless adventure, he endangered the lives of the two fliers, and marred the success of the exploit. It may have been courageous, but courage with so much of selfishness and thoughtlessness in it doesn't inspire any waving of flags or any band-music. Those who applaud such an exploit overlook the impudence of it and its utter lack of sportsmanship. The public can express its disapproval by seeing to it that the "hero" does not profit by his performance when he returns.

THE MEMORY OF TEXAS' HEROES

The Texas senate's action in appropriating funds for a memorial to David Crockett, Texas revolutionary hero, prompts the Dallas News to wonder why nothing of the sort was done long ago. The same question might be raised as to a number of others who helped free Texas from Mexico. The memories of Crockett, Travis, Bowie, Fannin and others of 1836 have been honored by naming counties, schools, streets and the like, for them, but formal memorial works are few and far between in Texas. Indeed, it has not been any too easy to protect the Alamo and the San Jacinto battlefield from the encroachments of business interests and the ravages of time. Texas has been far too lax in this respect. As the 100th anniversary of Texas independence approaches, Texans should give thought to its debt to its early warriors and statesmen.

FOR FREE TRADE BETWEEN CITIES

Free trade between cities has been judicially upheld, no matter how unpopular it may be between nations. Bakers at Borger tried to prevent Amarillo bakers from selling bread in that community. They obtained passage of an ordinance requiring that all loaves of bread sold in Borger must have individual wrappers, and that they must be wrapped in Borger. One Amarillo baker got around this by sending bread to Borger, unwrapping it, wrapping it again and then offering it for sale. Other Amarillo bakers attacked the ordinance in the courts, and on Wednesday the court of civil appeals decided that they had as much right to sell bread in Borger as anybody else. Borger's plan for protection of home industries was knocked glimmering.

Every community's trade is invaded, to a greater or less degree, by other communities. If ordinances could protect the home merchant or the home manufacturer, every community would have them on its books.

EITHER CORRUPT OR INEFFICIENT

The wholesale escape of Texas convicts from the Clemens state farm last Thursday is noteworthy only because so many escaped at once. There is, on the average, one escape per day from the Texas penitentiaries and prison farm. The Clemens farm affair merely serves to emphasize the laxness and incompetence of the prison administration.

The escape was stage-managed by a convict who had obtained a pistol. With that weapon, he captured and disarmed a guard. Soon it was possible for two score convicts to get away. Many more might have joined them, but did not. Convicts do not come into possession of firearms unless someone is either grossly corrupt or woefully careless.

The need of a thorough working-over of the Texas prison system becomes more and more apparent with each week that passes. That need was manifest before this wholesale escape was staged. It certainly should be sufficiently apparent, by now, to bring remedial action by the legislature.

Politics and Steel

By GLENN FRANK
President of University of Wisconsin and Former Editor of the Century Magazine
(Copyright, McClure Newspaper Syndicate)

Yesterday I referred to Donn Byrne, the Irish novelist, as having said that politics meant nothing to him because he had never seen a government that "brought heavier apples to the trees or heavier salmon in the rivers or a more purple heather."

Today we are coming to think that maybe, after all, it is not the business of government to attend to these things, that government should deal with such large issues as war and peace, while the sweaty issues of bread and toil should be allocated to the areas of private enterprise.

But we are likely to overlook the fact that even such large issues as war and peace may, after all, be determined more by the way the work of the world is carried on than by the way foreign offices negotiate.

The other evening I sat with two thousand executives of the iron and steel industry of the United States as they came together for the mid-year meeting of the American Iron and Steel Institute.

Here were men like Charles M. Schwab, James A. Farrell, and the other leaders of the basic industry. I should have been thinking about iron and steel as I sat with them, but I found myself thinking of international relations instead.

I remembered that the basic resources of the iron and steel industry are concentrated primarily in three North Atlantic areas, viz:

The greatest concentration in the United States.

The next greatest concentration in continental Europe.

The third concentration in the British Isles.

There are forces of integration at work pulling the iron and steel industry of the United States together in counsel and action.

The Continental Steel Pact indicates the forces of integration that are pulling the iron and steel industry of continental Europe together.

England will, of course, have to throw in her lot, in one way or another, with the continent of Europe.

The big question is this: Will these forces of integration at work in the United States, on the one hand, and in continental Europe, on the other hand, finally cross the Atlantic and bind the administration of the iron and steel resources of the world into something like a unified and statesmanlike control, or will these two huge steel aggregates sooner or later clash?

On this, far more than on multilateral treaties or the studied amiability of state paper, the peace of the world for the next hundred years will depend.

The line that separates private business from public affairs is now a very thin line, and when we are looking for the great statesmen of our time we never know quite where to look for them—whether in political headquarters or in industrial centers.

The Love Song

Over the air there came an old-time lay,
A tender, wistful song that once had thrilled,
A song bound up with memories of the day
When love's young dream had seemed to her fulfilled.

She turned to watch him, wonder if he, too,
Had found the tune to touch fond memory's chord,
But while the singer sang the verses through,
He lolled beside the radio—and snored.

The Republican party is now 75 years old. The good die young.

Random Thoughts While Air-Traveling

The pilot acts entirely too nonchalant to suit us . . . this is no time to be smoking cigarets and indulging in genial conversation . . . It's a serious business . . . we want him to get his mind on it . . . not that we're scared . . . still, we did think they furnished parachutes . . . here we go . . . our liver and lights want to ascend faster than the rest of us . . . he's banking now . . . is it absolutely necessary to turn it so catawampus like that? . . . and there's Wichita Falls, off to the southward . . . we never appreciated it as much as we do now.

The dull gold of uncut wheat fields . . . the brownish-gold of the harvested wheat fields . . . the dim green of cotton fields . . . the orderly, precise orchards . . . some men and women chopping cotton . . . they don't even look up . . . here we are, feeling like a combination of Columbus sighting San Salvador, Balboa discovering the Pacific and Washington crossing the Delaware, but they don't even look up . . . the view is a crazy quilt of fields . . . Petrolia, Byers, Burkburnett, Walters, all in sight at once . . . how peaceful they look!

This plane's speed is deceptive . . . there's the impression that we're making about five miles an hour . . . until you watch something down below and see how rapidly it drops back . . .

Thank you, we wouldn't care for a cigaret . . . been smoking too much lately, anyhow . . . we never knew before that the air had thank-ye-marms in it like this . . . it isn't so much the sensation of dropping helplessly . . . it's the fact that our giblets won't drop with us . . . we're glad now that the pilot is nonchalant . . . it helps a little.

Red river . . . hope he gets across safely . . . Oklahoma, here we come . . . more trees now . . . is the air getting rougher or do we just imagine? . . . there are Wichita mountains off to the northwest . . . anything with the name Wichita looks good to us right now . . . No, really, we don't want to smoke just now . . . Waurika . . . Duncan . . . nosing down into the airport . . . some of these days they'll perfect a way to take off and land on a 50-foot lot . . . and a lot of good pasture land will be restored to the cows . . . One passenger at Duncan . . . he must weigh 300 pounds at least . . . hope the engine is equal to the added load.

Everything looks so pretty from up here . . . you'd think it was all one big park . . . down on the ground, it wouldn't look so charming . . . so few things look ugly at a distance . . . still fewer look pretty at close range . . . there's a thought for a sermon in that . . . perspective . . . being too close to things to appreciate them . . . Dr. Grafton could do wonders with it.

Amusing ourself now like we used to, when very young, when we rode on the train . . . making a tune fit the cadence of the wheels . . . only, now we're making one fit the cadence of the motor . . . this is no time for that tune . . . but it seems to chime in perfectly with the drone of the motor . . . glorious, glorious, one keg of beer for the four of us . . . our thoughts really should be on a higher plane . . . but they are perverse things.

A thought for another sermon . . . Rev. Pat Moreland can use this one . . . we are being supported and moved forward by a propeller . . . but we can't see it . . . it's revolving too fast . . . the power of unseen things . . . invisible forces that lift us up and carry us forward . . . if the motor would quit humming that beer song we might help out some more preachers.

The fat man from Duncan gives a sort of gurgle every time we hit one of those entry places in the air . . . no wonder, if his liver protests as much, in proportion to its size, as ours does . . . more pretty country-side . . . even Oklahoma is beautiful from this altitude . . . long straight roads that don't seem to go anywhere . . . cornfields that look like velvety green carpets . . . harvest hands at work . . . and they don't look up . . . well, the task of feeding the world can't stop just because a newspaper man has a pass from Mr. Braniff . . . the pilot is still more nonchalant now . . . turns around and talks to the front seat passengers . . . wish he wouldn't do that . . . dark, dark clouds ahead . . . what if it should rain? . . . we'd have to do like they do in Arkansas when it rains . . . let it rain.

A circular tells about serving meals on Mr. Braniff's Tulsa-Oklahoma City line . . . the thought of food depresses us, somehow . . . we don't feel that we would even relish a piece of blackberry pie . . . and when blackberry pie doesn't appeal to us, we are not ourself . . . the same circular has a picture of folks playing bridge on a transport plane . . . we couldn't do that . . . it's hard enough to keep track of trumps on the ground . . . but it would solve the problem of what to do with a partner who doesn't take out on an informative double.

What is that rasping, metallic noise? . . . Oh, nothing, nothing . . . just our teeth unclenching.

And coming back, we were sorry we didn't have a magazine to read.

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON.—Foreign nations sometimes think of good old Uncle Sam as tight-fisted, and so do some of good old Uncle Sam's employes.

The government worker getting $2,500 a year who has to put up a bond of $100,000 and who, in addition to carrying responsibility for large sums of money, has to pay for the bond from his own pocket, probably is one of those who does. The bonding charge may deprive him of his vacation money and he has to keep his bond renewed.

Many federal employes are not bonded, but perhaps as many as 150,000 are, and although a few have to put up a bond of $100,000 each one has to shell out money for a bond which benefits only the government and the surety companies. There's a bill in congress which would make Uncle Sam pay the fee, but no one ever does anything about it.

Some Bonds Run High

The government has about 500,000 bonds in force, a majority of them to insure the performance of contracts. The principal of these bonds runs all the way from $50 to $10,000,000 and the navy department, on a ship building job, has exacted a bond as high as $15,000,000.

Fidelity bonds, covering employes, run as high as $200,000. About 100,000 persons in the postal service are bonded, including postmasters whose bonds run all the way from $5,000 to $100,000, in accordance with the amount of money they handle, and mail carriers and clerks, whose sureties range from $500 to $2,000 or $3,000.

Until 1894 the government had to accept bonds from individual guarantors instead of from corporations and in that year there was about $50,000,000 in accumulated claims against individuals who had gone bond for public servants, and had disappeared or been found to be insolvent. Congress gave the business to surety companies and today competition between them is so keen that several keep girls hanging around the White House to get each new list of nominations as fast as they come from the presidential offices, so the companies may go after the appointee for his bond business.

All government bonding is handled through the section of surety bonds in the treasury, the chief of which is Thomas L. Lawrence. This section is a clearing house for all bonds and it is Lawrence's job to see that all surey companies doing government bond business are financially strong. He has an approved list of 94 companies from which the treasury will accept bonds. Last year Lawrence made four companies refinance, under penalty of losing all business with federal appointees.

About 200,000 bonds a year are taken. The largest one was for $7,000,000, covering construction work on the new department of commerce building. The government customarily takes a 50 per cent bond on all its contract work. Contractors, of course, make the government pay the bonding costs, by including them in the original bid under one heading or another. Naturally so. The contractor on the commerce building, for example, had to pay more than $160,000 for his bond.

The underpaid federal employe, of course, can't get out of paying his.

Except in a very few cases where it runs up to $2.50, it costs a dollar per $1,000 of surety to be bonded. Those affected include all persons disbursing money or having the custody of money or property. None of the cabinet members has to give bond, but all under them are held accountable for whatever money or property they handle.

The highest bonded custodian is the allen property custodian, who is bonded for $200,000. The U. S. treasurer, who is really accountable for billions of dollars, has his care and honesty insured for the same sum. Disbursing officers are bonded for as high as $100,000.

Tax Collector Pays, Too

Bonds for collectors of internal revenue run from $25,000 to $200,000. These men take in hundreds of millions in taxes and must also give bonds as disbursing agents.

Everybody working in and around a mint has to be bonded, from the superintendent, who puts up surety of $25,000, to minor employes for whom the figure is between $2,000 and $5,000. Foreign service officers are bonded for from $2,000 to $25,000.

It is not on record that any federal appointee ever lost his new job because he couldn't provide a bond. If any employe defaults either through dishonesty, carelessness or other cause, the government sues both him and the surety company. The surety company has to pay, but it usually collects from the bondee.

Song
by Edgar A. Guest

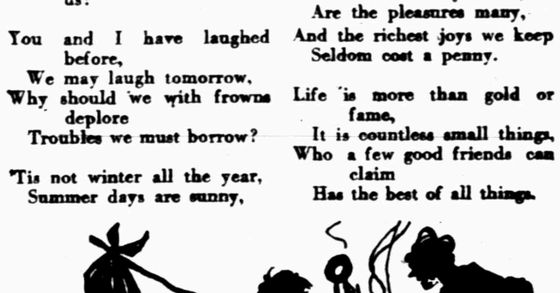

While we've life and friendships true
How can care destroy us?
While we've strength our tasks to do,
Why should doubts annoy us?

You and I have laughed before,
We may laugh tomorrow,
Why should we with frowns deplore
Troubles we must borrow?

'Tis not winter all the year,
Summer days are sunny,
There are countless pleasures here
Never bought with money.

Blended with the sorrows deep
Are the pleasures many,
And the richest joys we keep
Seldom cost a penny.

Life is more than gold or fame,
It is countless small things,
Who a few good friends can claim
Has the best of all things.

DAILY HEALTH TALK

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

It is a commonly recognized fact that doctors do not practice what they preach and that the absent-minded professor with a tremendous knowledge of calculus and logarithm is frequently unable to foot up the grocery bill.

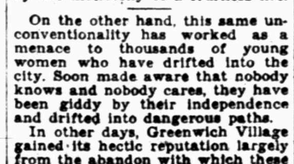

This, of course, is a part of human nature. Physicians who constantly teach other people the importance of eating slowly are driven by the amount of their practice to a hasty gulping of a sandwich and a glass of milk at lunch.

Largely because the professor of the past was a shut-in type, the cartoonists have come to depict him of tiny body and tremendous head, wearing thick lenses because of his near-sightedness and eye strain, and utterly incapable of anything in the way of physical performance. There has, however, come about a considerable change in recent years.

In the first place, the nation's sport has changed from the strenuous activities of the past, such as baseball and tennis, to the milder golf and there has come a general recognition of the value of mild exercise and outdoor life for happiness and longevity. There is hardly a college or university in the country today that has not its golf course adjacent.

Recently Hrdlicka, in order to determine the condition of professors, measured one hundred members of the National Academy of Sciences, all of whom are recognized as high class brain workers. He found that these men were not inferiors, but in general superior in physique, strength, health and longevity to old American types.

Moreover, the heads of these men did actually exceed in size not only the heads of the public at large, but even those of well educated and professional persons of old American classes. In other ways, the highly talented men of science conformed physically to the races from which they were descended, such as German, Russian, Italian or other groups.

NEW YORK—The casualness with which New York looks upon any form of unconventionality has led to innumerable successful ventures on the part of its women residents. And men, too, for that matter!

In smaller communities women of social position and wealth still hesitate before attempting any unusual exploit. There remains that latent fear of opinion and station.

Thus in New York, a daughter of the Goulds becomes a dancing teacher and operator of a theater; three wealthy society women become clerks in a department store; a Mackay marries a song writer and Mrs. Caruso opens a shop catering to the current vogue for recording of the voice on phonograph records; for years Mrs. Hoyt has been upon the stage and Cornelius Vanderbilt writes confessions and sits on a jury of beauty judges; a social registerite is the leading lady of "Holiday," and any number have gone upon the stage. Art and antique shops by the score have been opened by women who grew tired of the social whirl and bored by the monotony of a fruitless life.

On the other hand, this same unconventionality has worked as a menace to thousands of young women who have drifted into the city. Soon made aware that nobody knows and nobody cares, they have been giddy by their independence and drifted into dangerous paths.

In other days, Greenwich Village gained its hectic reputation largely from the abandon with which these released individuals threw themselves into what they considered a Bohemian life.

While those individuals who lent name and color to the Village of yesteryear have become the most domesticated of Manhattan dwellers.

Thus Edna Millay, who headed the poets' group, lives in the quiet retirement of a farm whenever possible. Floyd Dell, who was an outstanding Bohemian figure, lives prosperously and well in a cabin up the Hudson, surrounded by a growing family. Last season he was co-author of one of the most successful plays, "Little Accident."

Max Eastman, who with Dell headed "The Masses" group, makes speeches about the country and writes articles for magazines. He has practically disappeared from the public picture in which he was once so prominent. Mary Heaton Vorse is one of the most popular of magazine contributors. Susan Glaspell, who pioneered the Provincetown players in the old Eugene O'Neill days, lives a retired life on a little farm near Provincetown with her husband, Norman Matson, once a firebrand of the younger radical movement.

Thus life drifts back and forth—conservatism coming to hundreds of the old guard and obliteration coming to those who ran amuck. Obliteration—and tragedy as well—for between the lines of scores of the "garret suicides" may be read the story of pleasure gluttony that ended in disillusion and death.

Being Ashamed of Parents

What a job a parent has! All night watching, nursing, working and sacrificing to raise a baby.

Then hours of answering questions, providing between meal lunches, mending toys, reading aloud, showing pictures, washing and mending to bring baby to the stage beyond toddlerhood.

Then comes the adjustments of going to school and associating with the neighbors' children, the drag of the smaller youngsters not yet in school, the petty quarrels, little youthful heartaches, the dentist and the doctor and what not.

Then the hours of trial in the adolescent period which follows of holding the boy or girl in and at the same time giving freedom and of attempting to keep up with all the 'isms and 'ologies of early adolescence.

And finally, after 14 years of this to be told you are "old fashioned," or "I am ashamed of you," or "Why don't you eat like other folks." Pretty tough!

"My dear Professor Dean:

"There is, to a certain degree, tragedy right here in my home. A lack on the part of my parents—such as incorrect English, poor table manners, wrong methods of preparing and serving food, the light in which topics are discussed and the small fund of information back of them, and oh, so many more!

"I do what I can to remedy the situation, professor, but I daresay you can imagine what I meet with. An old dog and new tricks, you know."—"YOUTH VS. AGE."

Well, my dear, I am grateful that you added, "I truly love my parents, actively, not passively. They have done everything for me. Who dares to say they are not doing their share to make this world a better place in which to live?"

There isn't a newspaper, magazine or loudspeaker that isn't dinging into our ears or flashing before our eyes every proposition under the sun on ways to improve ourselves in everything for our housework to our table manners. We are flooded with devices for self culture. It would seem as though there were no excuse for the poor preparation or serving of food, and surely the daily newspapers have enough in them to afford hours of discussion. For some of our failings there is no excuse.

We may not know much about algebra, theorems and parlez-vousing nor a whole lot on how to get, most politely, all the meat off a poor little chop bone at 30 cents per mouthful without holding the chopiet in our dainty fingers, nor just how to eat a stuffed snail. But we are able to eat round peas without the aid of a shovel, the soup without a sponge, and a raw tomato without having it stewed.

We will try, my young friend, to use better English and you'll forgive us if we are not up on all the latest slang which you brought from college. We will endeavor not to speak until we are spoken to. We'll go to bed before 9 o'clock so that you may entertain until 2 in the morning.

We are nothing but plain folks who worked for every advantage we had and did the best we could for ourselves—and you. We gave you your advantages at our sacrifice and not because of your sacrifice. We might say a few things, to repeat your words, "about the light in which topics are discussed" by you. We might say that you have a small fund of experience behind a big bunch of notions. But we'll refrain.

Thank you for telling us so frankly our faults. Honestly, we'll try to correct them. But one thing we will never attempt to correct—and from the bottom of our hearts we thank you for what you said about us—our spirt of upbringing which you now recognize as being worth while.

OUR CONVERSATION CORNER

Saving to Spend

We come of thrifty people but our boy of 12 has no idea of saving money and there is no limit to his desires. How can we get him to save?—WORRIED MOTHER.

Answer—By having an objective for his saving and a regularity in obeying the objective. A boy of 12 cannot look far enough ahead to save for a house or marriage or perhaps even for a college education. His needs are immediate. Let him save up for a 1930 Christmas fund—that's about as far away as the average boy can look.

Are you still in favor of dutch treats, or have you in your larger wisdom changed your foolish point of view?—COLLEGE GIRL.

Answer—My theory was sound, I thought, and I haven't changed. But I will confess that I find few among the girls agreeing with me. My theory was that a Dutch treat made a girl more independent of the "kiss me because I took you" business. But I haven't seen any great line forming on the right to congratulate me on my theory. Evidently I am too advanced in my thinking, I ought to be more old fashioned.

Well Divorced

ST. LOUIS—Marriage never did take with William H. Bice. He was divorced three times before he married his last wife, Dorothy Bice last November. Then Mrs. Bice decided that William was too old for her, told him so and smokes cigarets in front of him. "This is the end," William thought, so he went and got another divorce. His wife did not contest.

THE WICHITA VALLEY FARMER

WHEAT HARVEST IS NOW IN FULL SWING, WITH LIGHT YIELD

Most Fields Showing Up Better Than Had Been Expected

MANY MORE COMBINES IN USE THIS YEAR

County Average Thought To Be Nine to Ten Bushels

With wheat and oats harvest well under way, the small grain crop in Wichita county apparently is going to be abnormally small, but even so, will be better than appeared likely 30 days ago. Few fields are producing more than 12 to 15 bushels, and the county's average is probably 9 or 10 bushels.

In some fields the stand is considered too poor to justify cutting, and will be used for pasture. Some farmers are cutting and baling the oats without threshing.

The number of combine harvesters in use in the county increased greatly this year. In the Burkburnett section, about three-fourths of the crop is being harvested by combines.

Observations

By the Desk Farmer

This is a very busy time for Northwest Texas farmers. Dry weather is giving the opportunity to do a number of things that wet weather had interrupted. Wheat harvest is in full swing and panning out a little better, at least, than had been expected. Cotton is up with a fair to good stand, and the choppers are busy in the fields everywhere. The county council of agriculture has decided that it won't try to meet until things slack up a bit.

We are somewhat puzzled over the failure of truck-growers and orchardists to take advantage of the offer this paper made, to give them a little free advertising. There are hundreds of city folks who would buy large amounts of fruit and vegetables and produce at the farms if they knew where to go, and The Times thought it might help the marketing along if it gave a little space to tell of those who have stuff to sell at the farms. But only six farmers availed themselves of the offer. We'll try it again some time, and see if the response isn't better.

Some have been using a little paid advertising space, with good results. Tom Fields, on the lake road, sold his entire crop of blackberries at 60 cents a gallon. The Tweedy orchard, in the Ray-Massie subdivision, sold its plums as fast as they could be gathered. Rigsby brothers, who have a big orchard near Thornberry, ran a little ad that sold all the peaches that were ripe and that kept them busy for several days afterward telling callers that there weren't any more ready to be picked.

Town folks are always glad of an excuse to get out into the country and if, in addition, they think they can save a little money on groceries by buying at the farms, they are ready to do so. The farmer who takes advantage of this habit by letting it be known that he has something to sell may find that his marketing problem is thereby solved. While Mr. Fields was selling his blackberries for 60 cents a gallon, berries were being sold at lower prices in town. But advertising enabled Mr. Fields to get the better price. Everything else being equal, folks would rather buy at the farms.

A friend of ours at Electra has called attention to the fact that the bull circle is Electra's bull circle. We have been referring to it as a Wichita county circle, and the Electra man thinks the credit should belong to the community rather than to the county. We have figured it out that he is two-thirds right about it, and shall be governed accordingly. He is one-third wrong, and we shall be governed by that, too. We're going to see that Electra gets full credit for the progressive spirit that resulted in the bull circle being organized. At the same time, we're going to refer to that circle, now and then, as a Wichita county circle, because by so doing we may help just a little to stimulate the formation of like circles in other parts of the county. We're going to use Electra's achievements to encourage dairying in the county as a whole.

There are no immediate plans for additional bull circles in the county, but we shall be disagreeably surprised if, a year from now, Wichita county does not have one or two more of them. The experience of other counties encourages the belief that the Iowa Park and Wichita Falls groups of dairymen will now get busy. Forming bull circles reminds us of the old conundrum, about why is kissing a girl like getting olives out of a bottle? Answer, because after you get the first one, the rest are comparatively easy. Probably we shall find that, in organizing bull circles, getting the first one makes the others much easier to start.

The article on this page about the cow-testing reports contains some food for the thoughtful dairyman. The primary purpose of cow-testing is to enable the dairyman to distinguish between the profitable cow and the one who isn't earning her keep. Just how valuable this information is to the dairyman depends on the manner in which he uses it. If he knows what it is costing him to feed and shelter and tend his cows, the cow-testing figures tell him plainly enough which of the animals are making money for him and which are not. If he finds that he has a "boarder" cow, the only thing to do is to sell her to the butcher.

WICHITA COUNTY WILL FURNISH SOME THANKSGIVING DINNERS

Scenes on the J. M. McFall turkey ranch on the Diversion lake road. The upper picture shows what a delivery truck body will eventually come to. Truck bodies are used as shelters on the McFall ranch, and they make good ones. The other picture shows poults at various stages of development. In the lower right picture, D. C. Hendrickson, ranch manager, is feeding a hundred or so promising young birds.

At the ranch of Mr. and Mrs. N. Randolph, southwest of Wichita Falls, there are over 1,200 young turks. The three pictures show groups of poults at various stages. In the bottom picture Mrs. Randolph is helping a young visitor get acquainted with the littlest ones.

A good many thousand Thanksgiving and Christmas dinners throughout the country will have Wichita county turkey as the chief dish, judging from present indications. This county's turkey production will be far greater than ever before.

Mr. and Mrs. N. Randolph, formerly of Minnesota, who established a turkey ranch southwest of Wichita Falls this year, have been having notable success with their undertaking. They already have more than 1,200 poults from the 50 hens with which they started, and they aren't through hatching yet. Losses from wet weather and other causes have been very, very light. Most turkey-raisers consider that they are doing well to raise an average of 10 poults per hen. Mrs. Randolph will probably raise 25 to 30 poults for each of the 50 hens in her breeding pens.

On the J. M. McFall farm on the Diversion lake road, about 1,600 poults are coming right along. They are under the care of Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Hendrickson.

FIRST LOAD OF WHEAT ARRIVES IN HEREFORD

HEREFORD, Texas, June 22.—Hereford's first load of 1929 wheat was received here Friday by the E. W. Harrison elevator, who paid 88 cents per bushel and a 35 premium on it, according to Harold Hicks, manager.

The wheat was raised by Earl Lance, who lives about five miles southwest of Hereford, and was of good test. Wheat harvesting in Deaf Smith county will get under way during the next week, and with the continued dry weather, the grain which has filled well, promises to be of excellent quality. Preparations are being made by local elevators and grain men to handle the crop at this point as rapidly as possible.

Efforts to teach natives of British Malaya to apply for medical attention when necessary are reported to be only partially successful.

Nearly 5,000,000 tons of raw sugar were imported into the United States in the last 12 months.

FOUR-CENT TAX GASOLINE SALES

New Oklahoma Law Goes Into Effect Saturday

OKLAHOMA CITY, June 22. (UP)—The four-cent a gallon gasoline tax law became operative at 10:05 a. m. today, when Governor Holloway signed the bill.

The governor also signed the "state bar bill," which authorizes disbarment of attorneys by others than the state supreme court.

A legislative investigation of conditions at the Granite reformatory was ordered today by the house of representatives when a resolution providing for the investigation was adopted. The resolution was by W. P. Hoover.

A committee of seven was appointed by Speaker Nance to make the investigation. Members of the committee are Joe M. Whitaker, Herman Phillips, W. R. Mauk, R. O. Allen, James Babb, Frank Carmichael and Hoover.

The investigation was ordered as a result of charges made to Roy St. Lewis, United States district attorney, by Riley Turner, a former inmate at the reformatory.

Turner charged that moral conditions at the institution are bad and that many of the prisoners are armed with knives with the knowledge and consent of some of the guards.

Mrs. E. A. Waters, warden, and Gus C. Wollard, member of the board of affairs which acts as a board of prison control, both denied Turner's charges.

Supervised Play Periods in Parks Draw Big Crowds

Attendance at the supervised play periods in city parks has been growing steadily in the past few weeks, according to C. C. Bunnenberg, city park superintendent, with a total of 1,160 children at Bellevue park since May 15. Mrs. Maude Bartholomew, city playground supervisor, was in charge of Bellevue park until June 1, when Miss Charlotte Kennedy took charge. Miss Kennedy is on duty every morning from 8:30 to 11:30 and every afternoon from 4 to 5:30 Monday, Wednesdays and Fridays.

One of the projects being sponsored by the supervisors in Bellevue and Scotland parks, the Carrigan school playground and the Northside Community house is the making of nature notebooks. Each week the children are given a picture of an animal, a bird and a flower to color and a legend is told them. The animals are chosen from those in the zoo and the birds and flowers are local ones. Blueprints made of leaves are discussed to familiarize the children with local trees, and the nature study is carried out in other ways.

Indian belts are also a part of the handcraft being taught, and doll furniture and airplanes will be made next week.

INTERESTING FACTS ARE DEVELOPED BY COW-TESTING HERE

Show Some Animals Much More Profitable Than Others

VALUE OF FIGURES IS BEING DEMONSTRATED

Tests Show Quality of Milk Counts More Than Quantity

The local cow-testing association is now entering upon its second month, and the members are learning rapidly what it means to have exact figures on the quantity and quality of the milk their cows produce.

The association's reports give the name and number of each, the weight of its morning and evening production, the total per day, the percentage of butter fat and the number of pounds of butter-fat produced during the month. A partial report from one of the sections best herds follows:

Cow No.	Lbs. Milk Per Day	Test	Lbs. Fat 30 Days
2	26	2.8	20.3
6	15	6.0	27.0
9	12	5.8	20.9

Cow No. 1 produced 42.2 pounds of butter-fat in 30 days. At 70 cents a pound, she brings $29.40 in the 30-day period. If her food and care cost nine dollars a month, she is earning about $20 a month for him, and is a profitable animal.

Cow No. 2 produces almost as much milk as No. 1. To look at the contents of the milk pail, she would appear to be nearly as profitable an animal, but the butter-fat test shows her up. She produces only 20.3 pounds of butter-fat in 30 days, worth $14.21 at the creamery. The dairyman is making about $5 a month out of her. Five-sixths as much milk, but only one-fourth as much profit.

Cow No. 6 produces only about two-thirds as much milk as No. 2. Judged on the basis of quality, No. 2 is the better cow, but the testing association's figures show what a poor guess that is. No. 6 produces milk that tests 5 per cent butter-fat, the total being 27 pounds for 30 days. That is worth $18.90 at the station, so that the profit on this cow is close to $10 a month, or nearly twice as much as on No. 2.

The comparison between cow No. 2 and cow No. 9 is even more interesting. Cow Now. 9 yields only 12 pounds of milk a day, as compared with No. 2's 26 pounds, less than half as much. But No. 9's milk tests 5.8 per cent, and, and she produces 20.9 pounds of butter-fat in 30 days, about half a pound more than No. 2. Neither No. 2 nor No. 9 is really a profitable cow.

In the older dairying sections, a cow that doesn't produce 20 pounds a day and test 5 per cent is very apt to be turned into beef. At local prices, such a cow would bring in $31.50 a month.

In another local herd, the test showed that a cow was producing daily 17 pounds of milk testing 2.4. Her butter-fat production in 30 days was 12.7 pounds, worth $8.89. Obviously, such a cow isn't paying her way. In the same herd is a cow producing only 14 pounds of milk, but her test was 4.4. That means a monthly production of 18.5 pounds butter-fat, worth $12.95. Not a very profitable cow, but much more than the other.

Of three herds on which reports have been inspected, one had an average butter-fat test of 4.839 per cent; by eliminating two or three low-test cows, the average would be above 5 per cent. Another herd's average was 4.216 per cent and the third, 3.7 per cent.

COTTON PROSPECTS PLEASING, CHOPPING IS WELL UNDER WAY

Cotton prospects in Wichita and neighboring counties are considered excellent at present, in spite of late planting and in spite of too wet weather that made re-planting necessary in a number of fields. It is up to a good stand and a week of relatively dry weather has brought it out handsomely.

Chopping has been in progress in most fields for the past 10 days. There is no evidence as yet of any pests.

The high winds of the past week have sucked much moisture from the soil, and it will not be long before more rain will be welcome. On the irrigated tracts, some cotton is being watered.

'King of Kings' Olympic Feature Starting Sunday

In response to many requests from patrons, the management of the Olympic theater has booked Cecil B. De Mille's production, "The King of Kings," for a three days' showing beginning on Sunday. This is the picture that was presented to crowded audiences for six months at the Gaiety theater, New York. It enjoyed exceedingly successful runs in Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, Los Angeles and many other cities in this country and abroad.

Praised by Reviewers

In filming this wonderful story of Christ, Mr. De Mille displayed daring, the work being even more venturesome than his "The Ten Commandments," and the pitfalls many. The unanimous praise of the reviewers in all the metropolitan centers indicates that his effort proved successful. He employed all his own personal resources and exhausted the new and old technic of the screen. He was aided in the work by representatives of many faiths and research scholars of authority. Miss Jeanie Macpherson, the scenarist, is said to have wrought a more finely constructed story than that of "The Ten Commandments."

Favorites in Cast

Among the 18 stars of the production are such favorites as H. B. Warner, Jacqueline Logan, Rudolph and Joseph Schildkraut, Victor Varconi, William Boyd, Montagu Love, George Siegmann, Theodore Kosloff, Julia Faye, Robert Edeson, Sam De Grasse. In fact, the cast of principals is a roster of eminent names in picture... Approximately $2,500,000 is said to have been expended on the production. As the actors embody the cherished characters of the New Testament narrative, no the hundred great sets faithfully realize the scenes in the life of Jesus.

SYNCHRONIZED MUSIC on Our DUOTONE

Majestic Playing 'The Desert Song' Big Film Success

"The Desert Song," a complete screen operetta, with music, songs, choruses, dances, dialog—scored a magnificent success upon its first presentation in this city at the Majestic theater. It is a novelty, but an enchanting one, and points the way to still greater triumphs for talking and singing pictures—the production of entire grand operas upon the screen.

"The Desert Song" retains all the charm, color, action, romance and tropic love of the stage production, but greatly enhanced by the motion picture camera's power of motion. The desert scenes were made in a desert and not in front of painted backdrops. The desert castle of the Caid, with the splendors of its Oriental architecture, would fill several stages. The story gains in dramatic power and picturesqueness because of the natural backgrounds.

John Boles, tenor lead, sang the same role in the stage presentation of "The Desert Song" and has been a screen leading man for several years. Carlotta King, lyric soprano, is a concert and radio artist of note. Their voices register perfectly on Vitaphone, are true in tone and sweet in quality. Marie Wells, Robert E. Guzman also gives splendid singing performances. Others in the excellent cast are John Miljan, Edward Martindel, Myrna Loy, Jack Pratt, Otto Hoffman and Del Elliot. The large chorus is well trained and possess fine singing voices.

The story is that of a Frenchman who becomes a sort of Robin Hood of the desert, helping to right injustices to the natives. Disguised as the Red Shadow, he leads a band of tribesmen. His father, commander of the French garrison, seeks to capture him. He loves Margot, his father's ward, and makes love to her in his own person and as the Red Shadow. In the latter character, he kidnaps her and, refusing to fight a duel with his own father for her possession, is deposed by the tribesmen and sent out in the desert to perish. He returns as the heroic vanquisher of the Red Shadow and Margot discovers that her two lovers are the same person.

"The Desert Song" is one of the best entertainments the screen has ever offered. Fast action and colorful drama are supplemented with all of Sigmund Romberg's delightful music and the vocal solos, duos and choruses that helped the stage version to its great success.

Boyd Has Best Roll in Strand New Sound Film

Not since "The Volga Boatman" has William Boyd had as fine a stellar vehicle as he has in "The Leatherneck," a Pathe picture in dialogue and sound in which he is starred at the Strand theater this week. As a U. S. marine private who is court-martialed for desertion in this new Pathe picture, he has a role that will vastly enhance his vogue with fans.

There is considerable romance and adventure suggested by the United States marines and in "The Leatherneck" the producers have centered their drama on the human adventures of three "Devil Dogs." The result is screen entertainment that grips because of its drama, thrills because of the adventures through which its characters are carried and holds unusual interest because of its romance and the humorous situations woven into its plot.

Alan Hale has been seen with William Boyd so often that the friendship of the two on the screen is most convincing. They make a great duo and when you add Robert Armstrong you have a trio that carries something of the appeal of both "The Three Musketeers" and "Beau Geste." Diane Ellis, a newcomer to the films, plays opposite the star. Boyd, Hale and Armstrong, "devil-dogs," are three of the most interesting characters ever seen on the screen. They are devoted to one another, and when Boyd's bride is stolen from him, his comrades go to her rescue with tragic results.

MACDONALD WILL FIND AMERICAN VIEW ON FLEETS DIFFICULT

Will Find on Forthcoming Visit Naval Parity and Arms Reduction Interest Us Above All Problems

By FRANK H. SIMONDS

WASHINGTON, June 22.—News of a projected visit by Ramsay MacDonald, new Labor prime minister, to America has served to set in motion again discussion of the naval issue between the United States and Great Britain. Beyond any question, the return of MacDonald to Downing street does insure that the naval dispute will be treated on the British side in an entirely different spirit from that disclosed by the Baldwin cabinet. Nor it is to be questioned that British disgust with the blunders of the Tory government contributed to their complete disaster in the election of May 30.

MacDonald is credited with the belief that the transformation of Anglo-American relations is one of the chief labors before him. Although nominally Arthur Henderson, as foreign secretary—the "Uncle Arthur" of Labor circles—must conduct any negotiations, in this as in all other matters of foreign policy, MacDonald is bound to be the dominating influence. And he is at once a pacifist, an internationalist and one of the rare British public men who know their United States well.

Certain difficulties, however, do manifestly lie in the way of any real adjustment. Not the least arises from the fact that MacDonald has publicly and frequently indicated that he believes that the question of physical equality between the fleets is relatively minor and must be subordinated to the far greater question of the freedom of the seas. But in the present state of America public opinion and particularly in view of the situation in congress there is manifest danger that such a programme might lead not to agreement but to still further chaos.

Matter of Interpretation

Freedom of the seas, like all similar phrases, can be interpreted in any number of ways. What Mr. MacDonald has in mind is an effort to relate the traditional view of the United States to the existing system of Europe as expressed in the League of Nations. And between these two points he desires to employ the Kellogg pact as a bridge.

Like all other Britons, MacDonald starts with the assumption that the only possible war for Britain in the future is a war either directly forced by deliberate aggression or brought about by British participation in some action authorized by the League of Nations against a nation which, in violation alike of the league covenant and the Kellogg pact, has resorted to violence.

On this assumption, MacDonald seeks to bring the United States to agree that it will not seek to invoke its rights as a neutral to trade with any country that shall have been guilty of an overt violation of the peace of the world. He thus leaves it open for us to insist upon and maintain our rights in all cases, save in the event that any nation shall violate and defy the solemn agreements entered upon by all civilized countries.

But the obvious difficulty in obtaining American consent to any such proposal lies in the question of who shall decide as to the fact of aggression. For all other great powers, save Russia, the matter is simple, because they are all members of the League of Nations. If and when the council decides that a nation has been guilty of a wanton disturbance of peace, automatically these member nations are bound, not merely not to insist upon their own rights of intercourse with such a nation, but to concert together to determine the sanctions or constraint to be exerted against it.

Choice Would Not Be Free

Since the United States is not a member of the league, it would find itself in the position of having the decision made for it by a body in whose deliberation it had not taken part. If it agreed to advance to accept such a decision, it would be henceforth not a member of the league and a partner in its enterprises, but actually bound willy-nilly to abandon its rights when the league had spoken.

On the other hand, if it were left for the United States to decide of and for itself whether a nation had been guilty or not, then the British could have no security in advance that their decision to support a league decision would not involve them in a controversy with an American government which might presently decide that the league verdict was inequitable.

In the nature of things, the United States is not in a position to determine instantly what European nation is the aggressor in any quarrel, nor do the vast majority of the American people desire to take part in any new European conflict, because they believe that, whatever may be the actual precipitating cause of a new war, it will almost certainly be, like the world war, the consequence of a whole host of circumstances born of the peculiar European conditions.

In case of a new European struggle, we should instantly be assailed by a flood of propaganda coming from both sides. Beyond much doubt, both the so-called aggressor and the opponent would be represented by large groups in our population. The desire to keep out of a new mess would be accentuated by all that has happened as a consequence of our participation in the world war. In fact, our demand for an equal fleet with Britain is primarily conditioned upon our desire to be insured against being dragged in by any interference with our rights.

But Mr. MacDonald's proposal whatever form it may take, assumes that we shall be at once concerned officially in any European clash, that our decision as to the aggressor will, in every case, coincide with Britain's and that, if Britain again comes to war, we shall never seek to employ our fleet to maintain our right as a neutral. But obviously in any such case we do not need a fleet equal to the British; parity becomes an empty but expensive amusement if it is to be indulged in not to insure our own rights against the most likely interference, but merely to gratify national prestige.

Equivalent Naval Values

The essence of the American demand for parity now is an insistence on parity pure and simple. Mr. Hoover has suggested that, in the fixation of equality, there shall be a new yardstick, namely equivalent naval values. While this involves an enormous amount of further technical advice and calculation, it does offer a way of escaping from the present deadlock precipitated by the insistence upon tonnage alone as the sole means of calculation. In the end a rough and ready equality could be found without too much difficulty, given an equally controlling desire to agree on both sides of the Atlantic.

The time may come when the majority of the American people will believe that it is just as important for us as for Europeans to keep peace in Europe and that we have an equal interest, therefore, in preserving tranquility and disciplining any offender. But that time certainly has not yet arrived and meantime the demand for equality in fleets has gained nationwide acceptance.

Thus, in my judgment, Mr. MacDonald will get into grave trouble with congress if, either in London or in Washington, he seeks to put the question of the freedom of the seas ahead of that of equality of fleets or for any reason agrees to postpone a discussion of reduction of existing programmes. Mr. Hoover has declared for immediate and substantial reduction in naval strengths existing or proposed. The country has apparently endorsed this demand. He has also proposed a new formula for estimating strength. To put all this aside and start a discussion of the freedom of the seas would certainly postpone reduction, involve us in vast expenses for the new cruisers already authorized and steadily being laid down. And the chances are that in the end agreement about the freedom of the seas would be lacking.

Prices Aren't Antique

NEW YORK.—In these days of modern tastes in art, dance, music and other things, one wonders why some people still take to antique furniture. Charles Arthur recently paid $7,500 for a mahogany lyre-shaped card table, and $2,000 for a Connecticut seventeenth century oak chest. A mahogany banjo-clock made in 1815 sold for $2,700 and a miniature tall-case clock of 1800 went for $2,350 at a recent sale.

LAKE PAULINE TO OPEN TO PUBLIC WITHIN 10 DAYS

CHILLICOTHE, Texas, June 22.—Improvements being made at Lake Pauline, about six miles west of Chillicothe, will make the lake one of the most modern pleasure resorts in Northwest Texas. The lake covers about 1,500 acres and in former years was limited to swimming, boating and fishing. The West Texas Utilities company, present owners of the property, have built a super-power plant, erected several bungalows for employes, a community house for entertainments, and landscaped the grounds.

A bathing pool, beach and bath houses will be erected. The bath house will be 66 feet long by 10 feet in width, equipped for both men and women, with towel and suit and check room in the center. A 90-foot pier is to be constructed. The high diving tower of the former equipment, will be left standing. It is expected the lake will be open to the public within the next 10 days.

Deaths this year have reduced the number of titled Canadians to 47, and there are now only five hereditary titles in the Dominion.

NOCONA'S WHITE WAY NEARING COMPLETION

NOCONA, Texas, June 22.—The new "white way system" for Nocona, including electric lights in the entire residence district, is about completed. This lighting system was installed by the Texas-Louisiana Power company, which has a power and ice plant here. It is understood that the lighting system for Nocona cost approximately $15,000 and is equaled by few towns of this size.

Lights in the business section rest on ornamental posts and the wiring is all underground. Three of the main business streets have this white way system which makes ample light and puts on quite a metropolitan appearance. The Texas-Louisiana Power company has made extensive improvements at their local plant. It furnishes power and lights from here to nine surrounding towns in a radius of 75 miles.

WHAT IS CHRYSLER ENGINEERING?

It is a matter of opinion as to who did most in creating the automobile, but it is a matter of fact that Chrysler has done most in modernizing it. Some of the most vital and thrilling chapters in the history of the motor car have been written by Chrysler engineers.

Chrysler engineering, analyzed in simple terms, is a combination of far-sighted vision and resourceful genius that succeed in accomplishing inspired improvements. In one word, Chrysler engineering is . . . Progress.

This is not a vainglorious gesture—it is a statement of plain, hard-shell fact fully borne out by the following partial list of advancements which Chrysler has pioneered or developed:

Hydraulic Four-Wheel Brakes
Rubber Shock Insulators
"Silver-Dome" and "Red Head" High-compression Engines
High Turbulence Offset Combustion Chamber
Fully Counter-weighted 7-Bearing Crankshaft
Iso-therm Invar Strut Pistons with Tungtite Rings
Non-wearing Chilled Cast-Iron Face Tappets
Rubber Engine Mountings
Modern Plain Tube Carburetion—with Positive Pressure Pump Acceleration and Semi-Automatic Choke Valve
Indirect Lighting of Instrument Panel
Light Controls on Steering Wheel

COLLECTING OLD POSTAGE STAMPS

Perils and Pleasures of a Passionate Lif

By ELLIS PARKER BUTLER

The trouble with these smarties who go around knocking us collectors of aged and decrepit postage stamps is that they do not know what collecting postage stamps means. They are always saying "Why don't you collect alligators or codfish?"

My answer to that is that I like to collect something that gives me a little healthful exercise. All you can do with a lot of alligators or codfish when you have collected them is put them in a tank or an aquarium and look at them, and if anybody asks me, I will say that I think a lot of alligators is about the poorest thing to look at that I can think of.

I have one postage-stamp in my collection that has a portrait of the queen of Holland on it, only slightly socked on the nose by the cancellation. On this stamp the queen of Holland is green—grass-green. It is a beautiful color for a queen. And I have another stamp on which she is brick-red. And on another she is purple. And who ever heard of a purple alligator or a grass-green codfish? These people who scoff at postage-stamp collectors don't know what they are talking about.

I defy any alligator collector to show me even an ordinary sky-blue alligator, but I can produce Queens of Holland in all the colors of the rainbow. You can come to me and say, "Show me a Queen of Holland the color of tomato soup," and I'll show her to you. I can show you an olive queen. And yet some people utter two scoffs and a hoot every time stamp-collecting is mentioned.

Do you know that some old postage-stamps are worth $5,000, and some worth $10,000? I have in my own collection some that are worth $42 per bale, if the bale is big enough. I have some others that are worth $68 per bale, but it has to be a bigger bale. I can show you one stamp in my collection that would be worth 32 cents if the corner was not torn off, and a dealer told me it would be worth all of 33 cents by 1935 if I could find the corner and glue it on nicely.

In collecting postage-stamps out here on Long Island, it is best to let them have fresh air now and then so that they will not get mildewed. Usually I take the whole album out in a baby-carriage, and I have walked many happy miles in this way, strengthening the muscles of my calves and filling my lungs with pure sweet air when the wind from the garbage dump on the meadow is blowing the other way. When the wind from the garbage dump is blowing this way, I don't fill my lungs with such pure sweet air.

A Great Britain 2d, 1901, catalogued at 3 cents, blew out of the window. My wife said, "Let it go."

At other times I take out a single stamp and run up and down with it in front of the house to give it an airing. For an ordinary stamp any piece of rope will do, but in the case of very valuable stamps like my Luxemburg No. 301 or my Belgium No. 604, it is better to have a stout leather leash. With a good leather leash held firmly in the hand, it is almost impossible for a stamp to dash away after a cat or climb a tree to worry a squirrel.

Accidents, of course, will happen. In the spring of 1897 I received a large consignment of postage-stamps from my favorite dealer, and I had opened the parcel on my desk. It was a fascinating lot, three thousand stamps for which he was asking 25 cents, and I bent over them eagerly and just then I sneezed. I still find those stamps when I open a grocer's or butcher's bill that was lying on my desk at that time. Incidentally the dealer told me a couple of days ago that if I had kept that lot intact it would be worth almost 30 cents by now.

I do not regret the monetary loss, however. Money is not everything. Health is more. I credit my present robust health to that day in 1897 when I began crawling around the room on my hands and knees. Since that day in May, 1897, I have spent one hour every morning in this way and the effect has been most beneficial. Once or twice, of course, my head got caught under the bookcase, stretching the neck to rather greater length than I really prefer and scraping the left ear up toward the top of the head, but it is just these little mischances that make stamp-collecting so much like lion-hunting and mountaineering.

I remember one day when a Great Britain 2d 1901, catalogued at 3 cents, blew out of the window. My wife said, "Let it go." In fact, my whole family said, "Let it go!" As I remember it, two or three neighbors came in when they saw me climbing out on the roof and begged me to let it go. The iceman happened to come around the house as I began pulling the shingles off the roof.

"Whata da mat'?" he asked in his musical native tongue.

"I've lost a postage-stamp and I think it blew in under one of these shingles," I told him.

"Don't you a bother, boss," he said. "Gimme da let' and I putta da stamp on da let'."

I explained that it was not a matter of posting a letter, but that it was a Great Britain 2d of 1901 that had got away from me, and he went on into the house. By the time he came out I had removed all the shingles and had begun taking off the rest of the roof. He stood awhile watching me and then he shrugged his shoulders and went away.

His name was Mike. It was his brother Seppi who went back to Italy two years later and was put in jail for sticking out his tongue at Mussolini. Mike is still in the ice business here.

One of the most laughable experiences I ever had in connection with stamp-collecting was in connection with a Ukrania No. 169,200 gr. This is a stamp that is normally worth only 2 cents in the market, and the design has a border of three hundred and fifty-two small dots. The specimen I had interested me considerably and I began counting the dots in the border and to my surprise I made them three hundred and fifty-three. This, of course, would make this particular stamp an "error" or "variation" and increase its value enormously, probably making it worth as much as 3 cents, or even 4 cents. My excitement was intense.

I instantly took passage for Naples, flew to Ukrania by airplane, and showed the stamp to Prof. Okestoff Burdovitch, the world's greatest authority on Ukranian postage stamps. For fully a minute he studied the stamp through a powerful microscope, and then he looked at me and laughed heartily.

"Tzokmolf-gutch!" he laughed, using the Ukranian word for "fly-speck" and the South Ukranian laugh for "laugh."

At first I was deeply disappointed, but presently I joined in his laughter. It must have seemed most ridiculous to him.

Thus it will be seen that while second-hand postage-stamps may not have done much to win the war, they are doing a great deal to preserve the peace. With the citizens of one country collecting the stamps of another and sending over vast sums of money for stamps—fifty cents at one time and seventy-five cents at another—the comity of nations is strengthened or something, and war becomes impossible.

In my own case, I am collecting mostly the deceased postage-stamps of Luxemburg, and in my last letter to my dealer there I ask him frankly if he thought the United States and Luxemburg would have war. His reply deserves publicity. "As long as you collect Luxemburg stamps," he wrote me, "Luxemburg will not attack the United States."

Let me hear what the alligator collectors have to say to that!

HILO, Hawaii—Keoki P. K. Kalawaianuiaimoku Kaiaikai, 99-year-old Hawaiian farmer, shakes the meanest shimmy of anyone around these parts. He is classed as Hawaii's best versed native in the art of "animal hulas," which are danced in a sitting posture to the music of a moaning flute. He sits himself down on the bench, and with the aid of a nose flute, goes through sinuous motions that would throw Gilda Gray into spasms of envy.

Rule of Three Guards Against Ivy Poisoning

"Leaflets three, let it be," is good advice for avoiding the misery caused by poison ivy. It may lead to avoidance of some innocent plants, but it expresses a simple rule of safety and bears the indorsement of botanists in the United States Department of Agriculture. In autumn, poison ivy may be recognized by its white, bony, berry-like fruits, in connection with its three leaflets.

Botanists know several kinds of poison-ivy plants and a wide variety of local names such as poison oak, three-leaved ivy, poison creeper, oakleaf poison ivy, climbing sumac, markweed, picry, and mercury. The poison oak of the western states is also called poison ivy. These plants, and their close relative, poison sumac, are similar in their poisonous properties. "The poisonous principle," says Farmers' Bulletin 1166-F, "is a nonvolatile oily substance known as toxicodendrol which has such violently irritant properties that the slightest trace deposited on the skin is capable of producing severe inflammation. All parts of the plant contain the poison, even after long drying, but growth in which the sap is abundant is the most dangerous."

All these toxicodendrol-bearing plants, with the exception of poison sumac, are three leaved, and all have white fruits. The red-berried sumacs are harmless. The Farmers' Bulletin gives a more detailed description of the several kinds of poison bulletins for free distribution to those who apply for them, and it recommends that the bulletin be preserved as an aid in identifying the plants, for advice as to treatment in cases of poisoning, and for the directions regarding eradication of the plants.

Poison ivy grows both as a vine and as a trailing shrub, and it is found on both high and low ground. There is a variety in the South and the Southwest, the oakleaf poison ivy, with leaves having three leaflets which resemble oak leaves. Poison-ivy vines are sometimes confused with Virginia creeper. The "three-leaf" test distinguishes them, for the Virginia creeper is five-leaved. Moreover, it has blue berries, while those of poison ivy are white.

Poisoning usually results from touching or brushing against poison-ivy plants, or from handling clothing or other articles that have been in contact with them. Smoke from plants that are burned may cause serious injury. Some persons believe they are poisoned when passing the plants without direct contact. "The symptoms of poison-ivy," says the bulletin, "are produced as the irritant poison penetrates the outer surface of the skin, and they may appear within a few hours or be delayed until five days or longer after exposure.

"After exposure to poison-ivy, measures to insure the removal of the poison are of primary importance. It should be remembered that at first the poison is on the surface of the skin and can be removed by thorough washing and rinsing repeated several times. Careless washing, however, may serve to spread the poison. Ordinary kitchen or laundry soap which has an excess of alkali is best for the purpose, and hot water should be used. The soap should be applied freely, so as to produce an abundant heavy lather on the exposed surfaces, and then rinsed off completely. The operation should be repeated not less than three or four times. Running water is preferable, or if a basin is used, the water should be changed frequently. The hands, especially the finger nails, should receive particular attention."

For prevention, the bulletin recommends solutions of iron salts applied freely to exposed parts of the body and allowed to dry before going into areas infested with poison ivy, or applied immediately after exposure. A solution of five parts of ferric chloride in 95 parts of a half-and-half mixture of water and glycerin, or a solution of one part of ferrous sulphate in five parts of water, is recommended.

Even when the poison has started to work, careful washing with alkaline soap is helpful. In severe cases it is necessary to call a physician. The irritation and annoyance usually increases for the first few days, and then subsides. Victimes often try several remedies and may give unearned credit to the one they happen to apply when the poison has run its course.

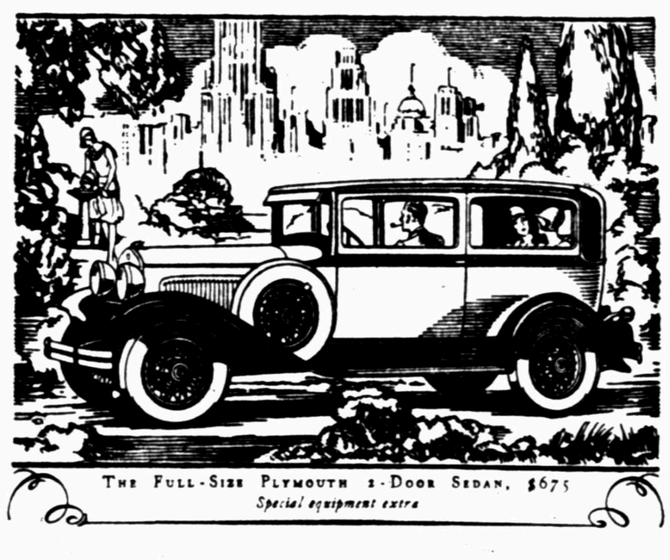

A five per cent solution of potassium permanganate applied locally is a good remedy. The stain will gradually wash off, but its removal may be hastened with lemon juice. Local applications of solutions of cooking soda or epsom salt, one or two teaspoons to a cup of water, are ordinarily as helpful as any. Fluid extract of grindelia, diluted with four to eight parts of water is often used. These solutions may be applied with light bandages or clean cloths which should be kept moist and changed often to avoid infection. During the night, or when moist applications can not be used, the poisoned surfaces should be carefully cleaned and dried and left exposed to the air. Do not bandage them tight. Immersing the poisoned parts for several minutes in water as hot as can be borne increases the discomfort for the moment, but a period of great relief follows.

In the early stages do not use oily ointments. The oils tend to dissolve and spread the poison. After the poison has exhausted itself a mild dressing, such as zinc-oxide ointment hastens healing.

Treatment for sumac poisoning is similar. The plant is much different and is the exception to the "three-leaved rule." It is a shrub, and often grows in clumps, and only in swamps or wet ground. Sumacs on high and dry ground are harmless.

Farmers' Bulletin 1166-F, which also includes directions for eradicating poison-ivy and poison sumac, has just been issued in a revised edition, and may be obtained free by applying to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

MANY ASPECTS TO CONGRESSIONAL REAPPORTIONMENT

Drift From Farms to Cities, Alien Populations, Non-Voting Negroes in South Among Factors Be Considered

By MARK SULLIVAN
Political Correspondent Wichita Daily Times and New York Herald Tribune
(Copyright, 1929, by New York Herald Tribune)

Sometimes an event in the day's news is so clearly related to a long vista of history that it is a pleasure to recognize the kinship. Sometimes, too, a group of recent events in the newspaper have such a relation to each other that it is interesting to observe their unity. Both these kinds of satisfaction are illustrated by the present session of congress.

SULLIVAN

To understand the session in these respects one should begin, not with the two bills it was called to pass—farm relief and the tariff—but rather with the measure that was forced upon it by necessity, the reapportionment of the lower house of congress. Starting with that, one can recognize in this session of congress such a unity as one rarely sees in a group of current events which superficially seem only casually related.

The constitution requires that a census of the United States shall be taken every 10 years, and that members of the lower house shall be reallotted to the states in proportion to population, as revealed by each census.

These constitutional provisions were duly followed every 10 years—until 1920. Since 1910 there has been no reapportionment. In 1920 a census was duly taken; but no reapportionment was made. As respects reapportionment, congress has been in default for nearly 10 years.

For this default various reasons have been given. It was said—and this was true—that when the census of 1920 was taken, many soldiers were still away from home; that, therefore, the census did not truly disclose the distribution of population, and hence that a reapportionment made on the basis of the 1920 census would be unfair.

But the deeper thing that the 1920 census revealed—and the true reason no reapportionment was made—was that farm states had been steadily losing population to states having big cities. States having a prevailing farm population (which means practically all the states in the South and West, except California) had been growing very slowly. As it was put by Senator Sackett, of Kentucky, who deplored the fact that he was compelled to recognize:

"We find that there is being drawn from the country districts their representation in congress and it is being piled up in the urban districts and in the cities of this land."

States in the North and East having big cities had been growing very rapidly. This fact was clear in the census of 1920. From this fact it resulted that a reapportionment made upon the basis of the census of 1920 would take about 23 members of the lower house of representatives away from Western and Southern states (excepting California) and add them to Northern and Eastern states having big cities.

Speaking roughly, this would mean 23 fewer dry members of congress, 23 more wet ones. It meant a shift of 23 votes on all the issues that arise between farm and city.

This was the deep reason for the reluctance of congress to make a reapportionment after the 1920 census. Congressmen from the South and West disliked a reapportionment which would deprive 23 of them of their seats and would give those seats to cities. One can sympathize with their attitude.

One can sympathize with 23 of them who as individuals would actually lose their seats. One can sympathize even more with their impersonal reluctance to see a considerable fraction of political power pass away from the farms and villages and go to the cities.

But the congressmen who were resisting the plain index of the census were resisting, so to speak, the barometer. What they ought to resist, obviously, is the condition or conditions that had caused the barometer to change.

We come now to the first illustration of the curious and engaging unity of the present session of congress. The session was called for two purposes—to enact farm relief and to revise the tariff. To these two subjects the shift in population from farm to city is directly related. The cities have been growing at the expense of farms, partly because farming has been a less remunerative and less attractive occupation compared to city occupations, compared to non-agricultural industries. The purpose of farm relief, as stated explicitly in the campaign last year and as stated explicitly in the present farm relief bill, is to "bring agriculture to equality with other industries."

A concrete result of farm relief, if it is properly carried out and if it is successful, should be to arrest the drift of population from farm to city.

(One wonders whether a historian many years from now, reading this article in the yellowed files of this newspaper, will observe that this farm relief bill really was successful—that it really did arrest or reverse the draft from country to city. Has this congress really grasped the fundamental social purpose of farm relief? And has this congress taken the right and intelligent steps to achieve the purpose?)

We come now to the intimately related subject—the tariff.

One must carefully refrain from saying that the protective tariff, as carried out for some 60 to 70 years past, has been the sole cause, or even the main cause, of the drift from farm to city. Other causes have been in operation. The same drift has taken place in countries other than the United States.

But it is a fact that when the protective tariff was adopted, America was more than one-half agricultural—and is now only a little over one-quarter agricultural. And it is a fact that the protective tariff system was adopted for the purpose of stimulating manufacture — "infant industries"—as they were then called. And it must be clear that we could not stimulate the growth of manufacturing without taking some population from the farms to man the factories.

One refrains from going further into an argument which year after year has filled literally hundreds of thousands of pages of the Congressional Record—including, already, more than a thousand pages of the current volume. The aim of the present article is confined to calling attention to the unity of the items of business which compose the work of the present congress.

After nearly 10 years of failure to obey the mandate of the constitution, congress began last month the work of reapportionment. They started by conceding that it is not desirable to increase the present membership of the lower house, which is 435. That was a wholesome decision. The fact that it was made at all is proof of its essential appeal—because it ran counter to ordinary political motives.

Out of that decision to keep the house at its present membership of 435, trouble was sure to be born—and it was. Every preceding reapportionment in our history began with the assumption that the membership should be increased. Thus the size of the house grew from 65 members in 1792 to 435 members in 1911.

The essential starting point of all the preceding reapportionments was that no state should lose a member of congress. The principle upon which preceding reapportionments were carried out was concisely stated last month by Senator Gillett of Massachusetts:

"Mr. President, the real objection which has been made to every decennial reapportionment has been the dissatisfaction of some states because they were going to lose membership. If there is a state which has ten representatives, and a new apportionment leaves it but nine, then one of the ten is bound to be left at home and none of them know which it is going to be. Therefore, every one of those ten is earnest and active to see that the bill shall be changed so that he shall not be dropped."

Formerly, as I have stated, this harmful condition was overcome by enlarging the house to just that point where no state would lose a member. But this reapportionment started with the basic assumption that the membership shall remain what it now is. Consequently the grief over loss of seats had to express itself.

There was this motive that Senator Gillett mentioned for resistance to the reapportionment carried out last month—the motive of individual members whose seats were endangered and the reluctance of all the members from a state to see any one of their group deprived of a seat.

But the far stronger motive was reluctance to see a large fraction of political power pass from farm to city; pass from South and West to North and East (including California, which profits by the growth of Los Angeles.)

That a considerable number of seats in the lower house should pass to states having large cities was unavoidable. The plain figures of population dictated it.

But something could be salvaged, the transfer of political power could be overcome in part by excluding unnaturalized aliens from the enumeration of population (for purposes of reapportionment.) In all preceding reapportionments, aliens had been counted. The idea of excluding aliens from the count was generated out of the emotions attending the present reapportionment, under the present conditions.

The constitution uses the word "persons":

"Representatives shall be apportioned among the several states according to their respective numbers, counting the whole number of persons in each state."

About the word "persons," hour after hour of debate revolved—whether "persons" is the equivalent of "inhabitants" or of "citizens" or of "voters." The most elaborate constitutional argument was made by Congressman Henry St. George Tucker, of Virginia, who concluded that aliens could be excluded. On the other side, much weight attached to a brief speech by Senator David Reed of Pennsylvania. He said, with a sincerity plain to everybody, that he favored the principle of excluding aliens from the count; but he felt oathbound in the other direction by his interpretation of the constitution.

The concrete situation involved was put in words by the exceptionally able Congressman Losier, of Missouri:

"By not excluding aliens, you are taking from the native and naturalized population, 31 representatives and 31 electoral votes and giving these 31 representatives and 31 electoral votes to our alien population. I do not think this is fair to our native-born or to our naturalized foreign-born population.

With the concreteness of one specific application, the case was put by Congressman Ayres, of Kansas:

"The state of Connecticut, which state is about as large as a good-sized Kansas county, has a population of 1,380,631, of which 233,634 were not naturalized. . . . While the state of Kansas had 1,769,257, of which there were only 48,509 not naturalized. Connecticut stands to gain one representative, while Kansas, with practically the same population . . . stands to lose one, if unnaturalized aliens are counted."

Again, the present article, in so narrow a scope, does not pretend to recite all the arguments on both sides, nor to make any arguments of its own. The present article has no greater purpose than the whimsical one of pointing out the unity of the subjects treated by this session of congress.

Immigration has been a main cause of the growth of eastern states having big cities. Immigration has been restricted by a series of statutes, beginning in 1921. And the last phase of immigration restriction was treated at great length in the present session of congress, the question whether "national origins" should be the basis of quotas.

Likewise, immigration is related to the protective tariff on manufacturing. Most of the aliens in the cities of the East were brought to America by the direct action of heads of industries, who wanted them for cheap labor.

Nor does this end the historical unity of the session, the historical sequence of which it is a part.

When the South and West, in order to keep out representation of the East, proposed that aliens should not be counted, the East thrust back. Congressman Tinkham of Massachusetts proposed there should be excluded from the count the southern negroes who do not vote—which would have reduced the representation of the South very seriously.

Introduction of the negro was picturesque, indeed. It is some three hundred years since the first slaves were brought to America, and more than a hundred years since the last ones were brought. Yet the presence of those slaves and their descendants in America has determined or influenced more presidential elections and more politics than any other one factor in American life.

To complete the link between the present session of congress and the history of the past, one should visualize as a refrain running through the whole session, Senator Heflin's speeches dealing with a question going back to the religious controversies of the sixteenth century.

Meantime reapportionment was enacted with both the non-voting negroes and unnaturalized aliens counted. How many seats in the lower house will be changed we cannot know exactly until after the census of 1930. An estimate often made is 23. Whatever the number is, that many members will be taken away from the rural states and given to states having large cities.

The political consequences by no means end with the shift in the lower house of congress. The consequences only begin there. The number of presidential electors allotted to each state, the weight of each state in the selection of president and vice president is determined by the number of members it has in the lower house. That is, rural states will lose a certain amount of electors and states having large cities will gain them.

DRY HOT WINDS PLAY HAVOC WITH GROWING CROPS IN HASKELL CO.

HASKELL, Texas, June 22.—According to reliable information from various sections of the county, the past week has been disastrous to the growing crops of Haskell county. High winds and scorching sun have caused much of the cotton and feed crops to be planted over. The destruction began with the monstrous sandstorm extending over the western section of the county, Tuesday afternoon, June 11. The continued high winds have dried out the moisture and parched the tender crops and in many instances killing young feed and cotton until the fine prospects of a few weeks ago have been almost obliterated.

TWO HASKELL COUNTY MAIL ROUTES EXTENDED

HASKELL, Texas, June 22.—Two rural mail routes of Haskell county are to be extended beginning July 1. Weinert route one, which is carried by W. O. Lewis will be extended 10 miles, coming south on highway 30 to the city limits of Haskell. Rule route one, carried by C. O. Davis, will be extended six miles and will connect with both the Haskell and the Rochester routes.

ABE MARTIN ON THE COUNTRY NEWSPAPER

Friend After Friend Depart

"Well, well, Lile Kite's cow died last evenin' after a brief illness. Suppose you run over after you git your work out an' see if ther hain't somethin' you kin do," said Lester Plum to his wife, as he laid the local family newspaper down. If ther's one thing more'n another that's essential to a good, well-ordered country town it's a live, gossipy newspaper, an' I hope I never live to see the day when it's crowded out of existence or takes on any city airs. The big city dailies, filled with all the news o' the outlyin' world, Lloyd George speeches, highbrow scandals, gangland feuds, Washington gossip, school bus horrors, demoralizin' divorces, rum plots, an' women's views, are all right fer big, noisy, bustlin', squirmin' centers o' population, where ever'buddy's all right till he's put in jail, but in the decent, quieter, an' more resigned settlements, fer removed from th' disturbin' influence an' artificiality o' the mob, the country newspaper, with its pages crowded with wholesome, homey news, is the thing. Ther's enough goin' on right under the very nose o' the general run o' humanity to keep it upset without it havin' to read about all the unhappy an' disquietin' things which are continually bettin' on. She still has the same pair o' andirons she lugged across the Allegheny mountains on her way to make a home among us. We read with pleasure that Wesley Plum has decided not to make the race fer township clerk, an' we're really glad. He's too fine a feller to mix in politics, an' we feel good all evenin' over his decision. An' here's a full account of a council meetin' to consider doin' away with the town pump. All the speeches are printed word fer word, an' here's our name printed right in with the rest. The town pump rumpus promises to make good readin' fer the rest o' the summer. "Avery Moots is holdin' a fine heifer fer the owner, who may have the same by provin' ownership an' payin' fer this ad." This item'll catch the eye o' somebuddy that's lost the heifer an' 'll be the means o' unitin' 'em. But ther's not a word in the whole newspaper about the arrest o' Art Lark. I reckon the editur thinks poor ole Mrs. Lark has had her share o' trials an' tribulations an' that ther's nothin' to be gained by addin' to the worries that are already breakin' her heart. Country editurs are nearly allus human. Hello, here's the weddin' notice o' Bib Kite an' Hester Bentley, givin' the names of all the guests, what they had on, what the presents wuz an' ever'thing. O' course the editur knows this weddin' hain't goin' to hold, but he's been fair, an' started the young couple off the best he knowed how. An' here's a blunder: "Miss Edith Purviance has accepted a lucrative position in one of the largest millinery establishments in the east." Jest wait till she sees how they've spelled Edith.

BUILDING PERMITS IN WICHITA FALLS PAST WEEK $27,500

An increase of $26,350 in building permits in Wichita Falls was made during the week ended Saturday as compared with the preceding week, according to records at the city engineer's office.

Tessault's Day

The Story of a Twilight That Atoned for the Years

By... Fannie Hurst

Highest Paid Short Story Writer in the World

THE manner in which Anna Tessault entered into what was practically to be her life-work, was typical of the way in which the average life finds its major activity. Anna Tessault just drifted into the business which was ultimately to take on quite important proportions in the community.

In the days when Hollywood was little more than a bit of garden coaxed out of the edge of the desert, Anna Tessault was a dressmaker.

Her father had been a gold-rusher, who had left a family stranded on a mortgaged ten acres of orange grove.

It was Anna Tessault's boast that she had made dresses for the first handful of motion picture stars, back in the days when the vast industry was an infant in swaddling clothes.

That was probably true. There was a signed photograph of Mary Pickford hanging on Anna Tessault's walls, and one of a great robust clown of a fellow, named "Bunny".

ANNA TESSAULT had been in at the birth of the industry, all right. Her mind was an archive for annals. She could tell you the births, the marriages, the scandals, the deaths, the successes, the catastrophes, the ups and the downs, throughout the history of the film colony.

"Ask Tessault", if you are in doubt about the birthday of a film star—if any one, in this day and age, can be in doubt of anything concerning the public and private life of a film star.

"Ask Tessault", if you want to know who, back in 1909, had married whom, and in what picture it was that Norma Talmadge made her first outstanding success, and what has become of Pearl White.

Ask Tessault.

To ask Tessault, you were obliged to visit her beautiful and exclusive wide-frontage gown-shop on Hollywood Boulevard. The rugs in the sumptuous interiors of Anna Tessault's three-shops-in-one, almost tripped you by the highness of their nap. Mirrors sent you walking into yourself on all sides, and nothing so mundane as a gown or a fur scarf or a bit of hat was permitted to strike the eye, until you had waddled across the many feet of expensive frontage into the softly lighted French gray showrooms, where mannequins paraded in an octagon room of mirrors, and displayed the latest skillful wares of Tessault.

TESSAULT was a character. And strangely enough, in a land where the mere suggestion of old age is a badge of ignominy, Tessault had allowed herself to grow old furiously. She was full of lines, deep ones that furrowed her face, and her hair, which it is true she had tinted as it struggled to become gray, fitted her head like a grim wig of fluted copper—hard—unrelenting.

There was a fierce look of bird about old Tessault. She reminded you of a weather-beaten eagle. There was a certain grandeur to her big, bony figure; a certain power to her hooked, aquiline profile. You respected her for the arduous story of her accomplishments, the long, hard road from the early days of her struggle to keep over the heads of herself and frightened mother and sisters the tiny house set in the ten acres of mortgaged orange grove.

Anna Tessault had won out in a big, fine fashion. Her shop was one of the most exclusive on the West Coast. A corporation had offered to buy her out at an astonishing figure. She was to be reckoned with industrially. The entire motion picture colony claimed her, affectionately, as its own. The most brilliant, the most feted, the best dressed of its satellites, rolled up to the triple frontage of her shops. For twenty years, the life of old Tessault had been devoted to helping create beautiful woman, and in that period there had been little time to devote to beautifying herself.

The old eagle was a gaunt, grim figure, full of years, full of fatigues. And she had one major weakness.

If in her powerful make-up there was the soft spot of an Achilles's Heel, it lay in her secret irrepressible, dominating love of personal adornment.

TESSAULT loved finery! Love of it had first prompted her to hang out the little dressmaker shingle in those days when the community was in its infancy. True, the years had given her precious little time to indulge that predilection. People said of her, with amusement, that she was the worst dressed woman in Hollywood. She had no time. The quick times of affairs were too fast for her. Sometimes, late at night, Tessault would find time to wind a bit of gauze around her grim old hair, or to hold up against her square and bony chest a bouffant frock designed for some one young and lovely. But, in the main, Tessault stumbled into her clothes of a morning, too rushed to give them thought, and out of them of an evening, too tired to care.

AND so the years marched by, and the lifetime of Tessault, who so loved finery herself, was irrevocably given over to bedecking others. Not without pride, mind you. The clothes designed by Tessault and hung on to the beautiful young bodies of the motion picture girls were gazed upon, not by thousands, but by millions.

What designer in the history of the world, old Tessault used proudly to challenge, could boast so large a public as hers? For every frock that left her work-rooms, millions were to gape and admire. Nightly, as Tessault laid her weary head upon her pillow, whole firmaments of eyes were feasting on the creative machinations of one Tessault. The lean rack of Tessault's body had denied the caress of the sheer things she loved, but on the other hand it had been granted her to create them for others.

There was consolation in that, and there was a sense of service. Tessault had given happiness to countless thousands, appeasing their eyes, counteracting the daily drabness of life, illuminating the screen with the genius of her desires.

AND yet in the end that was not sufficient. The suppressed, inhibitive cravings of this bony, capable, grim-faced woman were to battle their way to the surface.

When old Tessault was sixty-four, to the stupefaction and hilarity of a young and rollicking Hollywood, the incredible happened. An old man named Renning Wyland, who had made an enormous fortune in a brand of chewing tobacco, moved to the West Coast, built himself a big marshmallow Moorish palace on a crag overlooking the Pacific, stocked his garage with sixteen motor cars of an imported make, bought up twenty city blocks surrounding his estate, maneuvered to have a street named for him, met, fell in love with, and married, all within a week, Anna Tessault.

It was a ten-day wonder. It was a newspaper headline wonder. It was a West Coast wonder.

And, strangely enough, they were mated with a rightness that was impeccable.

A maid and a bachelor, both of them a result of barren, hard-working lives, had come together in the twilight.

The girls for whom Tessault had sewed throughout the years, lavished her with gifts. The press of the West Coast celebrated the nuptials of the grim old pioneer.

Late, but not too late, Tessault found herself confronted with the precious assignment, of designing and creating her own trousseau and no June bride ever went to her wedding filmier or finer. .

She was married in ivory satin, old lace, and the beautiful children of the beautiful people of the screen cast California poppies before her long, narrow feet as she strode up the aisle to the altar that had been erected in a rose garden.

The scent of orange blossoms drenched the summer scene in sweetness; bridesmaids with famous screen names formed a semi-circle in pastel colorings as the ceremony was intoned.

Tessault was living a reality that far surpassed her years of dreams.

THE Renning Wylands are living out that twilight in the superb seclusion of an estate that runs parallel to Wyland Avenue. Old Tessault has sold the business, although it still bears her name.

There are those who say she has gone rather "queer". She dresses so outlandishly. Day after day, as she and her husband drive along the shining boulevards, or dine in the chic public restaurants, Tessault appears in toilettes and costumes that snag the eye, challenge the attention. More than ever, she is one of the local sights of the community. Instead of the drab old eagle, Tessault, still with the old eagle face, appears now in costumes thirty years too young for her. Bouffant frocks of the type she, herself, would design for sweet-eighteen. Pastel little hats, audacious furs. Old Tessault, at almost seventy, dressed after the fashion of eighteen. Bizarre, exotic and almost ridiculous.

Yes, people say that old Tessault has gone a little "queer". Renning Wyland, who loves her, knows better. Secretly, he deplores her public appearances in toilettes that make them both seem ridiculous, and yet, neither by word nor manner, would he have her know it.

Old Tessault is having her day. More than anything else in the world, Renning Wyland wants her to have it.
