Investigators probe second apartment fire

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Busy Midland fire investigators continued their look today into a fire late Tuesday which destroyed an apartment, the second local apartment fire within the past two weeks. Inspectors also revealed two boys who set an alley grass fire which raced through a backyard and heavily damaged a house on Monday had been found and would be charged.

No injuries were reported in Tuesday's fire at the Wildflower Apartments, 4301 Raleigh Ct., which was reported at about 9 p.m. When firefighters arrived, they found flames erupting from the roof of a second-floor unit in Building Nine, near the south end of the complex.

The apartment, occupied by Gwen McLarty, was a total loss, investigators said.

Ms. McLarty told fire investigators that her two grandchildren were visiting her Tuesday, and one of the children apparently discovered the fire in a bedroom closet, Assistant Fire Marshal Lon Dominguez said.

"The little girl apparently found it, but right now I don't know the cause," Dominguez said. "There is no electrical outlet in there, no natural gas. It could have been a lot of things, any number of things. We will talk to the kids again today and to the grandmother."

The parking lot at the complex, located on Loop 250 near the intersection with Midland Drive, was jammed with emergency equipment and personnel, who sprayed water on the fire in sub-freezing temperatures. Hot coffee was provided in the apartment office after the fire was extinguished.

Neighborhood streets were also clogged with traffic as onlookers strained to get a look at the fire, but operations at the scene were not hampered, according to police.

Water and light smoke damage was reported in five other apartments, according to fire reports.

Earlier this month, on March 10, a fire broke out at the Trinity Place Apartments. In that fire eight units were damaged.

Meanwhile, two eighth-grade students at San Jacinto Junior High School apparently were just "playing around" with matches when they lit a grass fire in an alley between Douglas Avenue and Community Lane Monday afternoon, Dominguez said.

The fire, fanned by blustery winds, spread quickly from the alley to a fence at 1506 Douglas Ave., then to the backyard of the residence. By the time firefighters arrived, the patio of the home, which was draped with a bamboo covering, had gone up in smoke.

The roof and one wall of the home was also damaged, but there were no injuries reported.

A check of the attendance rolls at San Jacinto, and interviews with witnesses in the area of the alley, led to the identification of the two boys. When they were questioned by investigators, they admitted starting the fire.

The boys would not be charged with arson, since they apparently had no intent to damage property, Dominguez said.

County Attorney Mark Dettman said the duo likely would be charged in municipal court with reckless damage of property, a class "C" misdemeanor.

Wildflower Apartments, 4301 Raleigh Court, which broke out about 9 p.m. Investigators believe the fire started in a closet.

MISD plans hearing on 'detachment'

By BRIAN PEARSON

Midland school officials could face hundreds of parents wanting their children to attend Greenwood Independent School District schools south-east of the city, according to a resident near Greenwood who addressed trustees Tuesday.

Frank Pannell said his petition to have his 560 acres of property detached from Midland Independent School District will only be the beginning.

Pannell, who has no children attending school in either district, said no one will buy his land because the children would attend MISD instead of GISD schools, which are about 10 miles closer. The land has been for sale for two years, he said.

School trustees set a hearing on the request for April 11. Pannell suggested the hearing be held in a gymnasium because "I think you're going to have your hands full."

MISD administrators and trustees said they would not comment on the matter until after the hearing.

Superintendent Joe Baressi said allowing the detachment would mean a loss of approximately $1.2 million in taxable property.

Pannell added that many property owners near Greenwood are expected to make similar requests.

Court supports TRC in 'white oil' case

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court today issued a long-awaited decision in the "white oil" case, upholding a Railroad Commission order prohibiting the reporting of the clear liquid for oil well classification purposes.

The dispute between oil and gas producers in the Texas Panhandle Field was appealed to the Supreme Court after white oil producers lost an intermediate round in August 1986.

At stake in the case are oil and gas revenues estimated at $10 billion to $27 billion in the 1.5-million acre Panhandle Field in Hartley, Moore, Hutchinson, Potter, Carson, Gray, Wheeler and Collingsworth counties.

The controversy arose in the late 1970s after some independent operators began using refrigeration, or LTX, units to chill vapors as low as minus-20 degrees to convert the vapors to liquid. The operators have counted the water-white liquid as crude oil to meet the gas-oil ratio required by the Railroad Commission.

Sniper wounds officer before surrendering

BALCONES HEIGHTS (AP) — A man armed with a semiautomatic pistol opened fire on police at an apartment complex in this San Antonio suburb early today, wounding one officer before he surrendered, authorities say.

An apartment security guard told officers that the man, believed to be a Vietnam veteran, had allegedly been holding his wife hostage in an apartment.

Apartment residents reported shots being fired at 5:38 a.m. While two Balcones Heights police officers met with residents, a man emerged from his apartment and began firing the pistol, said Sgt. Paul Buske, a San Antonio police spokesman.

"He fired two shots. The officers got down between the cars," Buske said. "One of the officers was hit once below the jaw. The suspect went inside and that's when police converged on the area."

Paying back — with interest, of course — a $450,000 Revolutionary War loan could cost Uncle Sam $141.6 billion.

Family has 'Revolutionary' request

By TOM MORAN
Hearst News Service

STAFFORD, Texas — Descendants of a man who put up $450,000 to help finance the Revolutionary War are suing the federal government for repayment of the loan plus interest — a bill that could run as high as $141.6 billion.

In the winter of 1777, the Continental Army, starved, freezing, short on supplies, was suffering through the bitter cold at Valley Forge.

Congress sent out the word to patriots: Send money to keep Gen. George Washington's army in the field. The young government promised to repay the loans plus interest. One patriot responding was Jacob DeHaven, a wealthy Philadelphia merchant. DeHaven lent the government almost everything he had, gold and supplies worth about $450,000, an incredible fortune in those days.

Washington's army pulled through the winter. DeHaven died childless and in poverty in 1812, and was buried in an unmarked grave in Swedeland, Penn., said Peter Murphy, the family's lawyer.

Murphy, a professor at South Texas College of Law, and one of his former students, Jo Beth Kloecker of Stafford, Friday filed a class action lawsuit in the U.S. Claims Court for the $450,000 — plus 212 years of the 6 percent compound interest the Continental Congress promised.

Loan officers at Texas Commerce Bank calculated last week that the principal and interest on the loan would be $98.3 billion if the interest is compounded annually or $141.6 billion if it is compounded daily.

The lawsuit was filed on behalf of a Stafford woman, Thelma Weasensforth Lunaas, and the other descendants of DeHaven's nine brothers and sisters and two half-brothers.

Jacob DeHaven loaned the government what today would be the Pentagon budget, Murphy claims, stating "He virtually underwrote the war at Valley Forge."

Without DeHaven's loan, the Continental Army might have collapsed and the United States would have been stillborn, Murphy said.

"Lunaas and other DeHaven family members aren't interested in taking the government for a ride," Murphy said. "They just feel that Jacob DeHaven made a significant contribution to the war effort, then died in poverty after being one of the richest men in America. It (the loan) wiped him out."

Building owners upset by TU Electric's rate hike proposal

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

Building owners hanging on by a financial thread could see their properties slip away if Texas Utilities Electric Co.'s proposed 10 percent rate hike next year becomes reality, a Midland real estate company president said this morning.

"It's going to have a catastrophic effect," said Mike Lewis of Mike Lewis and Associates. "As far as the office buildings and the commercial properties are concerned, the proposed rate increase couldn't come at a worse time."

Dick Ramsey, director of public communications in TU Electric's Dallas office, said Monday that the company in October would file for a 10 percent, $400 million, rate hike with the Public Utility Commission.

The rate increase could go into effect in late 1990, after a reactor unit of the $9 billion Comanche Peak nuclear facility begins operating, Ramsey said. TU Electric would seek another 10 percent hike when a second unit goes on line possibly by the summer of 1992, Ramsey said, adding that the increased revenue from the hikes is needed to pay for the facility.

It would be the company's first rate increase since December 1983.

The Military and Jesus: An arrest ordered

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first story in a three-part Easter series, "The Military and Jesus," about Jesus and his involvement with the Roman rulers of the time, based on the Bible and historical and ancient non-canonical Christian writings.

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

"Fall in!" The Roman troops, roused from their barracks in the second watch of night, sleepily formed ranks in the compound alongside the towering Fortress Antonia in the military-ruled colony of Judea.

Orders for the covert midnight arrest of the Galilean agitator, Jesus, had come directly from the Roman procurator, Pontius Pilate. The company centurion slapped his "vitus" staff of command against his leg. Lanterns on the wall cast flickering streaks on the cobblestones and the helmets and bucklers worn by scores of men.

It seemed an unnecessarily heavy force to deploy for seizing this single hinterlands rabbi. One biblical account says an entire Roman "cohort," 600-strong, was involved, although such designations were commonly applied to units short of a full complement. Some scholars believe a smaller contingent, perhaps reduced by the centurion's assessment of the situation, assembled that night.

The officer certainly didn't want a massed parade through the incendiary city of Jerusalem. "Column of twos!" he ordered. The men shuffled into a thinner line for the road.

Then he waited. Leaders of the adjoining Jewish temple had agreed to provide an informant to lead the troops to the Galilean's nighttime camp.

Cooperation of these Sadducean oligarchs served handily in controlling this unruly Judean province. Their collaboration was assured by the appointive authority Pilate wielded over them.

Rome had ousted four high priests before finding a sufficiently compliant one in the current officeholder, Caiaphas.

Ancient, non-canonical Christian writings describe a flow of messages between him and Pilate. But their liaison had to be kept secret to avoid inflaming the populace.

Once, when word slipped out that Caiaphas was supplying funds to Pilate from the temple treasury to build an aqueduct, an angry throng jammed the plaza beside the fort and temple.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Associated Press

Some sleet and light snow fell across portions of the Texas Hill Country early today, but the National Weather Service called off a snow advisory for the Hill Country.

The freezing precipitation was caused by an upper level disturbance over Central Texas that also produced scattered areas of rain from the central Brazos Valley to South Central Texas and Southeast Texas.

Forecasters called for decreasing cloudiness across East Texas tonight and clear skies statewide by early Thursday.

Clearing skies and sunshine should put a quick end to the snow that fell across portions of West Texas and Central Texas Tuesday.

Dalhousie recorded one inch of snowfall, while four inches fell in Amarillo. Lubbock had three inches, Big Spring one inch, and trace amounts were recorded in Midland and San Angelo, according to the National Weather Service.

Lows tonight will be in the 30s and 40s except lower 50s in the far south. Highs Thursday will be in the 70s over most of West Texas except in the Big Bend area where readings will climb into the lower 80s, in the 60s and 70s across North Texas and in the 70s and 80s across South Texas.

Early morning temperatures around the state were mostly in the 20s and 30s in West Texas, the 30s in North Texas and in the 40s over most of South Texas. Extremes ranged from 18 at Marfa in the Davis Mountains to 46 at Corpus Christi.

Other early morning temperatures around the state included 25 at Amarillo, 29 at Wichita Falls, 35 at Fort Worth, 44 at Waco, 43 at Austin, 43 at San Antonio, 42 at Houston, 39 at Brownsville, 29 at San Angelo, 30 at Lubbock, 23 at Midland and 34 at El Paso.

NATION

Rain pounded the eastern and central Gulf Coast today, but much of the central and northeastern parts of the nation enjoyed fair weather.

A cold front extending from North Carolina to the central Gulf Coast continued to produce showers and thunderstorms. More than 2 inches of rain fell in parts of southern Alabama, with Cordova reporting more than 2 1/2 inches.

Elsewhere, a mixture of sleet and snow fell over the hill country of central Texas and light snow fell over the Idaho Panhandle.

A high pressure system over the upper Great Lakes provided pleasant weather for much of the central and northeastern portions of the nation.

Today's forecast called for rain along the Carolina coast and showers and thunderstorms from Georgia across the eastern Gulf Coast; scattered showers over the northern Pacific Coast and Montana; and strong winds over the northern Rockies.

Highs were predicted in the 20s and 30s from the upper Mississippi Valley across the Great Lakes, New York state and northern Pennsylvania to New England; 40s and 50s from the middle and southern Atlantic Coast across the Ohio and Tennessee valleys and the middle Mississippi Valley, Arkansas, parts of the central and northern Plains, the northern and central Rockies and the northern and central intermountain region to the Pacific Northwest; 80s in central and southern Florida and the desert Southwest; and 60s to 70s elsewhere.

Temperatures around the nation at 2 a.m. EST ranged from 6 degrees below zero at Marquette, Mich., to 76 degrees at Key West, Fla.

Bush to seek changes in FSX agreement

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush is trying to counter complaints that a joint U.S.-Japanese fighter plane project is a high-tech giveaway by promising tight restrictions on the computer technology involved.

Bush said Tuesday that he has decided to endorse the joint venture to produce the "FSX" fighter plane, but with changes in the agreement to safeguard U.S. technology.

Bush said he will send Congress a modified version of the agreement struck last year by the Reagan administration with Japan to build the plane, a new version of the American-made F-16.

The project has come under fire on Capitol Hill, and even with the administration assurances, some lawmakers remain skeptical.

Efforts to keep a lid on sensitive U.S. technology could prove almost impossible once the project gets under way, said Charles Smith, an aide to Sen. Alan Dixon, D-Ill., a chief opponent of the FSX project.

"How do you keep data away from them? We would like to see how the deal is structured," he said.

Among the changes being sought by Bush, according to administration and congressional sources, are tight restrictions on computer "source codes" for the software used to fly and control the plane and a requirement that some of the fighters be made in the United States.

A formal decision by Bush was expected within the next few days, White House aides said, but the president announced his general support for the project on Tuesday.

"We've pretty much finished our deliberations here inside the administration," he said. "I've made my decision to go forward with certain clarifications on the (1988 agreement)."

The changes would also give the Commerce Department an expanded role to monitor the project and keep track of Japanese compliance, said the sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Although the modifications will include a requirement that a proportion of the planes be built in the United States, they will not go as far as the 40 percent level reportedly proposed by Commerce Secretary Robert Moshbacher, sources said.

Japan, however, still wants the original agreement to stand.

"The Japanese government strongly hopes this agreement would be implemented," said Shingo Yamagami, a spokesman for the Japanese Embassy.

Marlin Fitzwater, Bush's press secretary, said "aspects of the decision" to seek changes already had been discussed with the Japanese government.

"We're interested in their review of some of the suggestions we've made and some of the options we've laid out," Fitzwater said.

The Reagan administration negotiated the arrangement after Japan refused to buy F-16s and indicated it would build its own jet fighters. The new FSX plane would be built jointly by General Dynamics and Japan's Mitsubishi Heavy Industries.

Backers of the project within the administration argued that it should go ahead to avoid damaging U.S.-Japanese relations. But skeptics, including Moshbacher, argued that the technology transfer could work to the disadvantage of U.S. industry, particularly if the Japanese used the advanced technology in building other aircraft.

The operators first lost in state district court in Travis County when Judge Harley Clark agreed with the Railroad Commission that white oil is not crude oil and cannot be counted as such in classifying wells.

That ruling was affirmed by the 3rd Court of Appeals in Austin.

The Supreme Court today affirmed lower court judgments without writing on the case.

Report: Pollution worsens despite standards

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 100 million Americans live in areas where they breathe unhealthy air with pollutants exceeding federal standards, despite general improvements over the last decade, the government reported today.

The Environmental Protection Agency's annual report on air quality singled out ozone pollution and carbon monoxide emissions, both largely caused by automobiles, as being of particular concern in urban areas where air pollution problems are greatest.

Ozone levels increased 5 percent between 1986 and 1987 and, largely because of the unusual heat last summer, jumped another 14 percent in 1988, according to the EPA statistics.

Despite a decade-long campaign for cleaner air and a long-term reduction of all six of the major pollutants examined, the EPA report reiterated that many urban areas continue to be in violation of federal air quality standards.

The statistics covered air quality from 1978 to 1987 for five pollutants and through 1988 for ozone.

The pollutants examined by the report were sulfur dioxide, a source of acid rain which also can cause lung damage; carbon monoxide, which can seriously affect the heart and brain; nitrogen dioxide, which contributes to bronchitis and pneumonia; ambient lead, which can cause brain and nervous system damage; ozone, which can damage eyes, mucous membranes and respiratory systems; and suspended particulates that cause breathing problems.

NATION

The EPA report called ozone pollution "clearly...the most pervasive air pollution problem in 1987 for the United States" with 88.6 million people living in counties where the pollutant exceeded federal standards.

Ozone is a prime component of smog.

Here are the EPA assessments covering the five other pollutants:

■ Carbon monoxide: Levels in the air were cut by 32 percent since 1978 and 6 percent from 1986 to 1987, but actual emissions were slightly higher in 1987 than the previous year.

■ Sulfur dioxide: Levels in the air were cut 35 percent since 1978 and 3 percent in 1987 from the previous year.

■ Nitrogen dioxide: Levels have been reduced by 12 percent since 1978, but ambient levels showed no change during the last year of the study period.

■ Lead: This showed the greatest improvement, largely because of the gradual switch since 1978 to use of unleaded gasoline. Ambient lead levels fell 88 percent from 1978, including a 19 percent reduction from 1986 to 1987.

■ Suspended particulates: These include dirt, dust and soot. Levels have been reduced by 21 percent since 1978, but ambient levels increased by 3 percent in 1987 over the previous year.

A three-photo sequence of Tuesday's failed launch of a Trident 2 nuclear missile shows the 44-foot rocket as it veers out of control and self destructs in waters 50 miles off the coast of Cape Canaveral, Fla.

Experts seeking clues in missile explosion

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Investigators are analyzing wreckage and four seconds of flight data to learn why a $23.7 million Trident 2 missile spun like a burning pinwheel and exploded on its first test-firing from a submarine.

The Navy's newest and most powerful weapon was launched Tuesday from the nuclear submarine USS Tennessee as it cruised submerged in the Atlantic, several miles off Cape Canaveral.

The unarmed missile's first stage ignited above the ocean surface and the 44-foot missile immediately cartwheeled out of control, spewing a shower of fiery debris over the ocean.

A Navy statement said an unknown malfunction caused it to veer off course and self-destruct after four seconds of flight. It said no damage was done to the submarine or nearby support ships.

Divers recovered the nose section and other parts, wreckage that could help in the investigation of what went wrong, authorities said.

Navy officials at the Pentagon who spoke on condition of anonymity said the failure appeared to involve a malfunction in the first-stage rocket motor.

"But we have no idea at this point just what went wrong," said one official. "It will take awhile to sort through the data."

The three-stage Trident 2 is a new, more lethal version of the weapon that's the heart of America's naval nuclear deterrent. It can deliver three to 12 nuclear warheads to individual targets up to 6,000 miles away.

The Navy plans to have the intercontinental range Trident 2 operational in time to send the Tennessee on patrol late this year with 24 of the weapons.

In a statement from the Pentagon, the Navy said it was still planning to conduct eight more undersea test launches and that it was premature to suggest the missile wouldn't be ready for its scheduled first deployment this December.

The Navy said it was disappointed with the failure, but added, "It is through this type of developmental test program that you iron out problems."

The Trident 2's predecessor, the Trident 1, experienced similar test failures but still was deployed on schedule, the Navy said.

The Navy says the new weapon is much more accurate than its undersea predecessors — Polaris, Poseidon and Trident 1 — and can match the targeting ability of land-based missiles even though it is launched from a submerged, moving submarine.

Published reports have said Trident 2 warheads can strike within 400 feet of their targets, compared with about 1,500 feet for the Trident 1. That, the reports said, matches the predicted accuracy of the new land-based MX missile.

Tuesday's launch from the Tennessee was preceded by what the Navy called a highly successful series of test firings from a land launch pad at Cape Canaveral, dating to January 1987.

Fifteen of those tests were rated successes and two were failures.

Bush expected to sign bill protecting whistle-blowers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal employees who blow the whistle on government waste, fraud and abuse would get added job protection under legislation passed by Congress and sent to President Bush.

"We have a bill that provides strong protection for those who expose wrong occurring in the federal domain," Rep. Frank Horton, R-N.Y., said Tuesday as the House approved the Senate-passed measure on a voice vote.

Bush is expected to sign the bill, a revamped version of legislation vetoed by President Reagan last fall. It won 97-0 Senate approval on Thursday.

The bill would provide increased protection from firing and demotion for federal employees who disclose mismanagement and waste in the agencies where they work.

Employees fighting for their jobs would face less stringent standards of proof that their firing or demotion came as the result of whistle-blowing.

The Office of the Special Counsel, established eight years ago to investigate civil service abuses, would become an independent agency. It now is an arm of the Merit Systems Protection Board and has come under criticism in Congress on grounds that it has done little to assist whistle-blowers.

GOP elects Gingrich for minority whip

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Republicans today elected conservative Rep. Newt Gingrich to the job of minority whip, signaling a willingness to embrace the politics of confrontation that the Georgia congressman represents.

"It's more a commentary that the party is ready to be aggressive and dynamic and reach out, and (that) they wanted a new definition," Gingrich said after his election over veteran Rep. Edward Madigan of Illinois.

Even in victory, Gingrich could not resist a shot at the moderate voices that have ruled the GOP in its decades of minority status in the House. "Ed Madigan would have been a perfect traditional whip. He's a tremendous legislative craftsman. I think the party wanted a new job description," Gingrich said.

The vote in a closed caucus at the Capitol Hill Club, attended by all but one of the 174 GOP members, was not announced.

Gingrich replaces Dick Cheney of Wyoming, who resigned his House seat and the No. 2 post in the House GOP leadership to become secretary of defense.

Cheney addressed the meeting briefly before Rep. Henry Hyde of Illinois, who had been the subject of a draft attempt, asked that he not be considered because he had not announced for the post.

Before the vote, the Madigan-Gingrich race had been viewed as an indicator of whether the party would seek the cooperative relations that President Bush espouses or declare war on the Democrats, who greatly outnumber them in the House.

Gingrich, 45, appealed to the Republican House members with a pitch that he's a "national Republican" who will lead them from the desert of more than three decades in the minority.

Gingrich's strident attacks on House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, which led to an ethics committee investigation, gained him backing among Republicans of all ideological stripes who sought to lash out in frustration.

But Gingrich was also personally controversial, and as the election approached, he was fighting off questions about an unusual deal where he got political supporters to help finance publicity for a book he had published.

Madigan, 53, was the favorite of what one member called "the institutional Republicans," and he ran with the quiet support of Minority Leader Bob Michel, R-Ill.

He insisted that within the House, Republicans needed to make themselves players in the legislative game, sometimes working with the Democrats. He said Republicans' best shot at taking over the House is with redistricting, candidate recruitment and financing — not trying to bring down the House.

President declares drug abuse 'national problem'

LANCASTER, Pa. (AP) — President Bush came to the Pennsylvania Dutch country today to declare drug abuse "a national problem" that leaves no communities immune from the death and destruction of narcotics.

Bush resumed a traveling campaign to tout his more than $5 billion drug fighting effort and to urge community leaders to help educate young Americans to the dangers of drug abuse.

The president was accompanied here by his drug control policy director, William J. Bennett, who has been weighing strategies for combating rampant drug-related violence in the nation's capital.

Bush traveled here by helicopter from Washington and was to go on later in the day to Wilmington, Del., to meet with community organizations fighting drug abuse in that industrial city.

"We often think of drug abuse as an urban, inner-city phenomenon," the president told some 3,500 students, faculty and parents at Conestoga Valley High School, in the heart of Amish and Mennonite farm country near Lancaster.

"When drugs come here to the Conestoga Valley, that's proof the drug epidemic is a national problem," Bush said. "The rising problem here simply shows how vulnerable every American city and town is to the menace of drug abuse."

Bush noted an acceleration of drug abuse in the past two years in the historically staid Pennsylvania Dutch region.

"Most Americans want to see their towns restored to a time when drugs came from the local M.D. where crack was something you jumped over to avoid bad luck," the president said.

"Twenty-three million Americans used illegal drugs last year," Bush said. "Countless thousands died. The fact is that none of us is immune to the problems drug abuse can cause. "We've learned a hard lesson. Unless we join together and fight, it can happen here. But if we do work as a team and as a community, it won't," he said.

The good news is, you are fighting back," he said. "Your community is too proud, your traditions here too deeply rooted, for an invader to threaten your safety and well-being without a fight."

He praised local programs that target for special attention high-risk youths in area elementary and high schools as "doing something to stop drug problems before they begin."

But, the president said, "the war on drugs will ultimately be won one day, one battle at a time — the battles each and every one of us wage to keep our families and communities free from drug abuse."

The outing was his second drug-related appearance away from Washington, D.C.; he traveled to New York on March 10, telling Drug Enforcement Administration agents "the hunting season is over" for cop-killing drug-runners.

Bush had planned to kick off his anti-drug abuse crusade at the Pennsylvania and Delaware sites on March 7, but that was postponed because of a late-winter storm.

The Bush White House also arranged a meeting with Amish leaders — an event that has caused some curiosity among the Amish, a quiet, religious people who shun publicity and such modern-day conveniences as televisions and telephones.

Southeastern Pennsylvania is the site of the nation's second-largest Amish community.

They were outraged that sacrificial tithes of shekels would be diverted to the heathen Roman oppressor. Bad enough were the empire's commercial levies, paid in Roman money. But diverting holy funds to pagan purposes seemed utter profanation.

To quell the upheaval, Pilate had ordered 400 soldiers, four centuries, to mingle among the demonstrators disguised as Jewish civilians but armed with swords and clubs hidden under their cloaks.

At his signal, they laid on. Amid cries and moans, a "great number" were slain, many "trodden to death," while "others ran away wounded," recounts the ancient historian Josephus.

Another time, Pilate had a 120-horse wing of cavalry ambush a procession of singing Samaritans at their holy mountain, slaying and scattering them wantonly.

Because of such ruthlessness, Jews customarily spat whenever a Roman soldier passed. However, this peculiarly crowd-rousing Jesus apparently didn't hate the military, something the waiting centurion had learned from fellow officers.

The story had come from Capernaum in Galilee where a fellow centurion was stationed with a small garrison.

As the account went, the Capernaum centurion's sergeant had become critically ill. Having heard how the roving Galilean teacher strengthened the sick, the centurion sought him out.

"Lord, I am not worthy to have you come under my roof," the centurion says in Matthew 8. "But only say the word, and my servant will be healed. For I am a man under authority, with soldiers under me."

Jesus marveled, telling his men, "Truly, I say to you, not even in Israel have I found such faith." He added something about sustaining people of all kinds, east and west, and told the centurion, "Go. Be it done for you as you have believed."

The centurion found his sergeant suddenly well again.

It was an odd case, a Jew powerfully befriending a Gentile, a Roman devotee to the imperial gods and part of a foreign military occupation force in a conquered land. A strange beneficence.

The centurion assigned to arrest Jesus drew his red-tinged cloak tighter about his shoulders, still waiting for the temple crew. He had heard another story indicating Jesus even understood the rudiments of arms.

As recorded in Luke 14, Jesus observed: "And what king, going to encounter another king in war, will not sit down first and take counsel whether he is able with 10,000 to meet him who comes against him with 20,000?"

While likely referring to the costs of serving his cause, as Bible scholars say, it nevertheless showed his practical awareness of military operations.

Also, some of his own men bore arms, a puzzling aspect brought out at his last supper with them. Luke 22 relates that when one of his men said, "Look, Lord, here are two swords," he said, "It is enough."

One apostle was a Zealot, member of an anti-Roman revolutionary faction that vowed, "No ruler but God!" Romans called them "Sicarii" for the concealed daggers they carried.

At the iron-grilled gate, the temple functionaries appeared, clamorous, blustering, a mob. A priest gestured toward a dour-faced civilian, "He'll show you the place."

The centurion wanted no hubbub, no unnecessary noise, no calling cadence by his men. "Route step and keep it quiet." They filed through the gate and circled around the temple as the city slept.

Its temporary calm was a relief in this turbulent time of Passover. Disorders had flared like scattered brushfires across the city, keeping troops double-timing to put down one outbreak after another.

Several troublemakers and brigands had been imprisoned, including an insurrectionist ringleader, Barrabas, captured in a melee involving fatalities.

The centurion's detachment moved through the Sheep Gate and down the trail into the Kidron Valley, overspread with tents of pilgrims, smoldering camp fires and knots of squatting peasants in low talk.

The soldiers tracked up the Mount of Olives, their way lit by flaring torches. At a clearing near an abandoned oil press they spotted the prey. The informant slouched forward and kissed the wanted man on the cheek, the agreed signal.

Temple minions lunged toward Jesus, and one of his men bravely whipped out a sword, slashing off one man's ear. But Jesus sternly intervened. "Put your sword back in its place. For all who take the sword will perish by the sword."

He said he could summon 12 "legions of angels" to defend him if he wanted, but didn't. Amazingly, he restored the dangling ear lobe and, under the glare of torches, calmly regarded the arresting band.

"Have you come out as against a robber with swords and clubs to capture me? Day after day I was with you in the temple teaching, and you did not seize me. But let the Scriptures be fulfilled."

The centurion had the man bound and led back across the valley, another Passover prisoner. It seemed a questionable case, but orders were orders.

Pentagon's 'deal' needs second look

President Bush is expected to announce before long whether Washington will accept the military fighter deal which the Pentagon made with Japan. The president indicates he may tighten the pact's proposed transfer of U.S. technology to the Japanese which would be a good step — if he's not going to scrap the deal outright.

Bush really ought to consider taking that drastic step because more could be lost in the deal than would be gained in the $7 billion package.

He should scuttle the pact because the Japanese simply refuse to buy the advanced U.S. F-16 fighter off the shelf for $15 million each — half the cost of developing the new fighter which the Japanese want. Furthermore the heavy costs of the new aircraft will eat into what Tokyo would spend for other defense outlays.

The deal gives the Japanese not only sophisticated computer and systems-integration technology, which they have consistently failed to develop in their aircraft industry, but also could help them start a civilian aircraft industry in competition with U.S. companies. The accord offers the Americans second best — only a part of the development work and 40 percent of production. The Pentagon and State Department admit they accepted the deal because they don't want to ruffle Japanese feathers. That isn't the way to do business and should signal Bush and Congress that the deal may not be worth the effort.

Yet another reason the president should kill the deal is that despite long bargaining between the two countries and pleas from Washington, the Japanese refuse to take a major step that would help reduce America's annual $50 billion deficit with them. The Pentagon and State Department say the Japanese are hard bargainers. Well, it's time for this country to get tough, too.

If Bush goes along with most of what the Japanese want, the Congress should step in to protect the nation's commercial interests and balance of trade. This deal looks half-baked.

Another View:

Food turns to terror

Suddenly it seems that America is beset with fears about its own food supply. But there's a vast difference between the ongoing debate over the use of pesticides and the terrorist threats that persuaded the U.S. Food and Drug Administration to warn the public against eating any fresh produce grown in Chile.

As a result of the government's action, thousands of tons of fruit and vegetables have been pulled from grocery shelves, thousands more have been embargoed in Japan and most of Europe, and Chile's entire agricultural export industry (which brings in $850 million a year from fruit alone) has been thrown into confusion. That's a lot of damage considering the fact that the FDA's tests only turned up two grapes that had been laced with barely enough cyanide to make someone sick.

Understandably, the government has to err on the side of caution. In this instance, the U.S. embassy in Santiago had received an anonymous threat, the government checked the grapes coming into this country, and the tests showed that someone had followed through on that threat. Under those circumstances, FDA officials concluded that they should warn the public.

It's hard to tell from the evidence whether that warning was premature. But there's no question that the government's action sets a precedent that makes all food subject to the same kind of terrorist threats — indeed, even runs the risk of inviting them. And unlike pesticides, whose use can be regulated by government and growers, there's little that can be done to prevent these threats from being carried out. Although Chilean officials have announced that they are stepping up security at the packing plants and shipping docks, there really isn't any way of ensuring that some fanatic with a hypodermic loaded with cyanide won't be able to get at these foodstuffs, or California's, or anybody else's somewhere in their long journey from the field to the grocery shelf.

Of course, government agencies like the FDA have to investigate these threats, and to determine on a case by case basis the best way of reducing the risk to the public. Broadside warnings, embargoes and quarantines won't always be the best solution. Such extreme measures create a dangerous potential for massive disruption, not just of the food supply but of entire national economies. The public needs to be protected — both from poison and from terrorists.

Arrest of 'Godfather' spells trouble

WASHINGTON — The recent arrest of the powerful godfather of Mexico's oil workers' union may lead to unprecedented violence against the new government of President Carlos Salinas de Gortari and anyone who tries to clean up the corrupt union.

Salinas put Joaquin Hernandez Galicia behind bars in January for murder and weapons charges. No other single act could have persuaded

Jack Anderson

De la Madrid was elected in 1982 on promises of "moral renovation." La Quina did the new president a favor by throwing him a sacrificial lamb, Hector Garcia Hernandez, an aide to the union leader. Garcia was charged with stealing millions of dollars from the union, and decided he didn't want to be the fall guy. He fled to Texas, but armed thugs hauled him back to La Quina's house in Mexico, from which he was whisked into a Mexico City prison.

Garcia turned the tables, blaming La Quina for skimming money from the union. Garcia also wrote to President de la Madrid claiming that La Quina had resorted to assassination to retain control of the union.

While La Quina was letting Garcia take the fall, he was busy shoring up his power base. De la Madrid began to notice that critics of La Quina kept dying. One, Oscar Torres Pardo, was killed in 1983 when a truck crossed the road and struck the car in which he was riding. The driver of Torres' car was shot to death during the bizarre incident.

A few weeks after the car accident, the leader of one union local was forced out of his post at gunpoint by 50 of La Quina's thugs. The local leader had been an outspoken critic of La Quina and his buddies.

In November 1983, three people who were distributing anti-La Quina pamphlets were dragged into the office of a local union leader, robbed and threatened with death by "car accident."

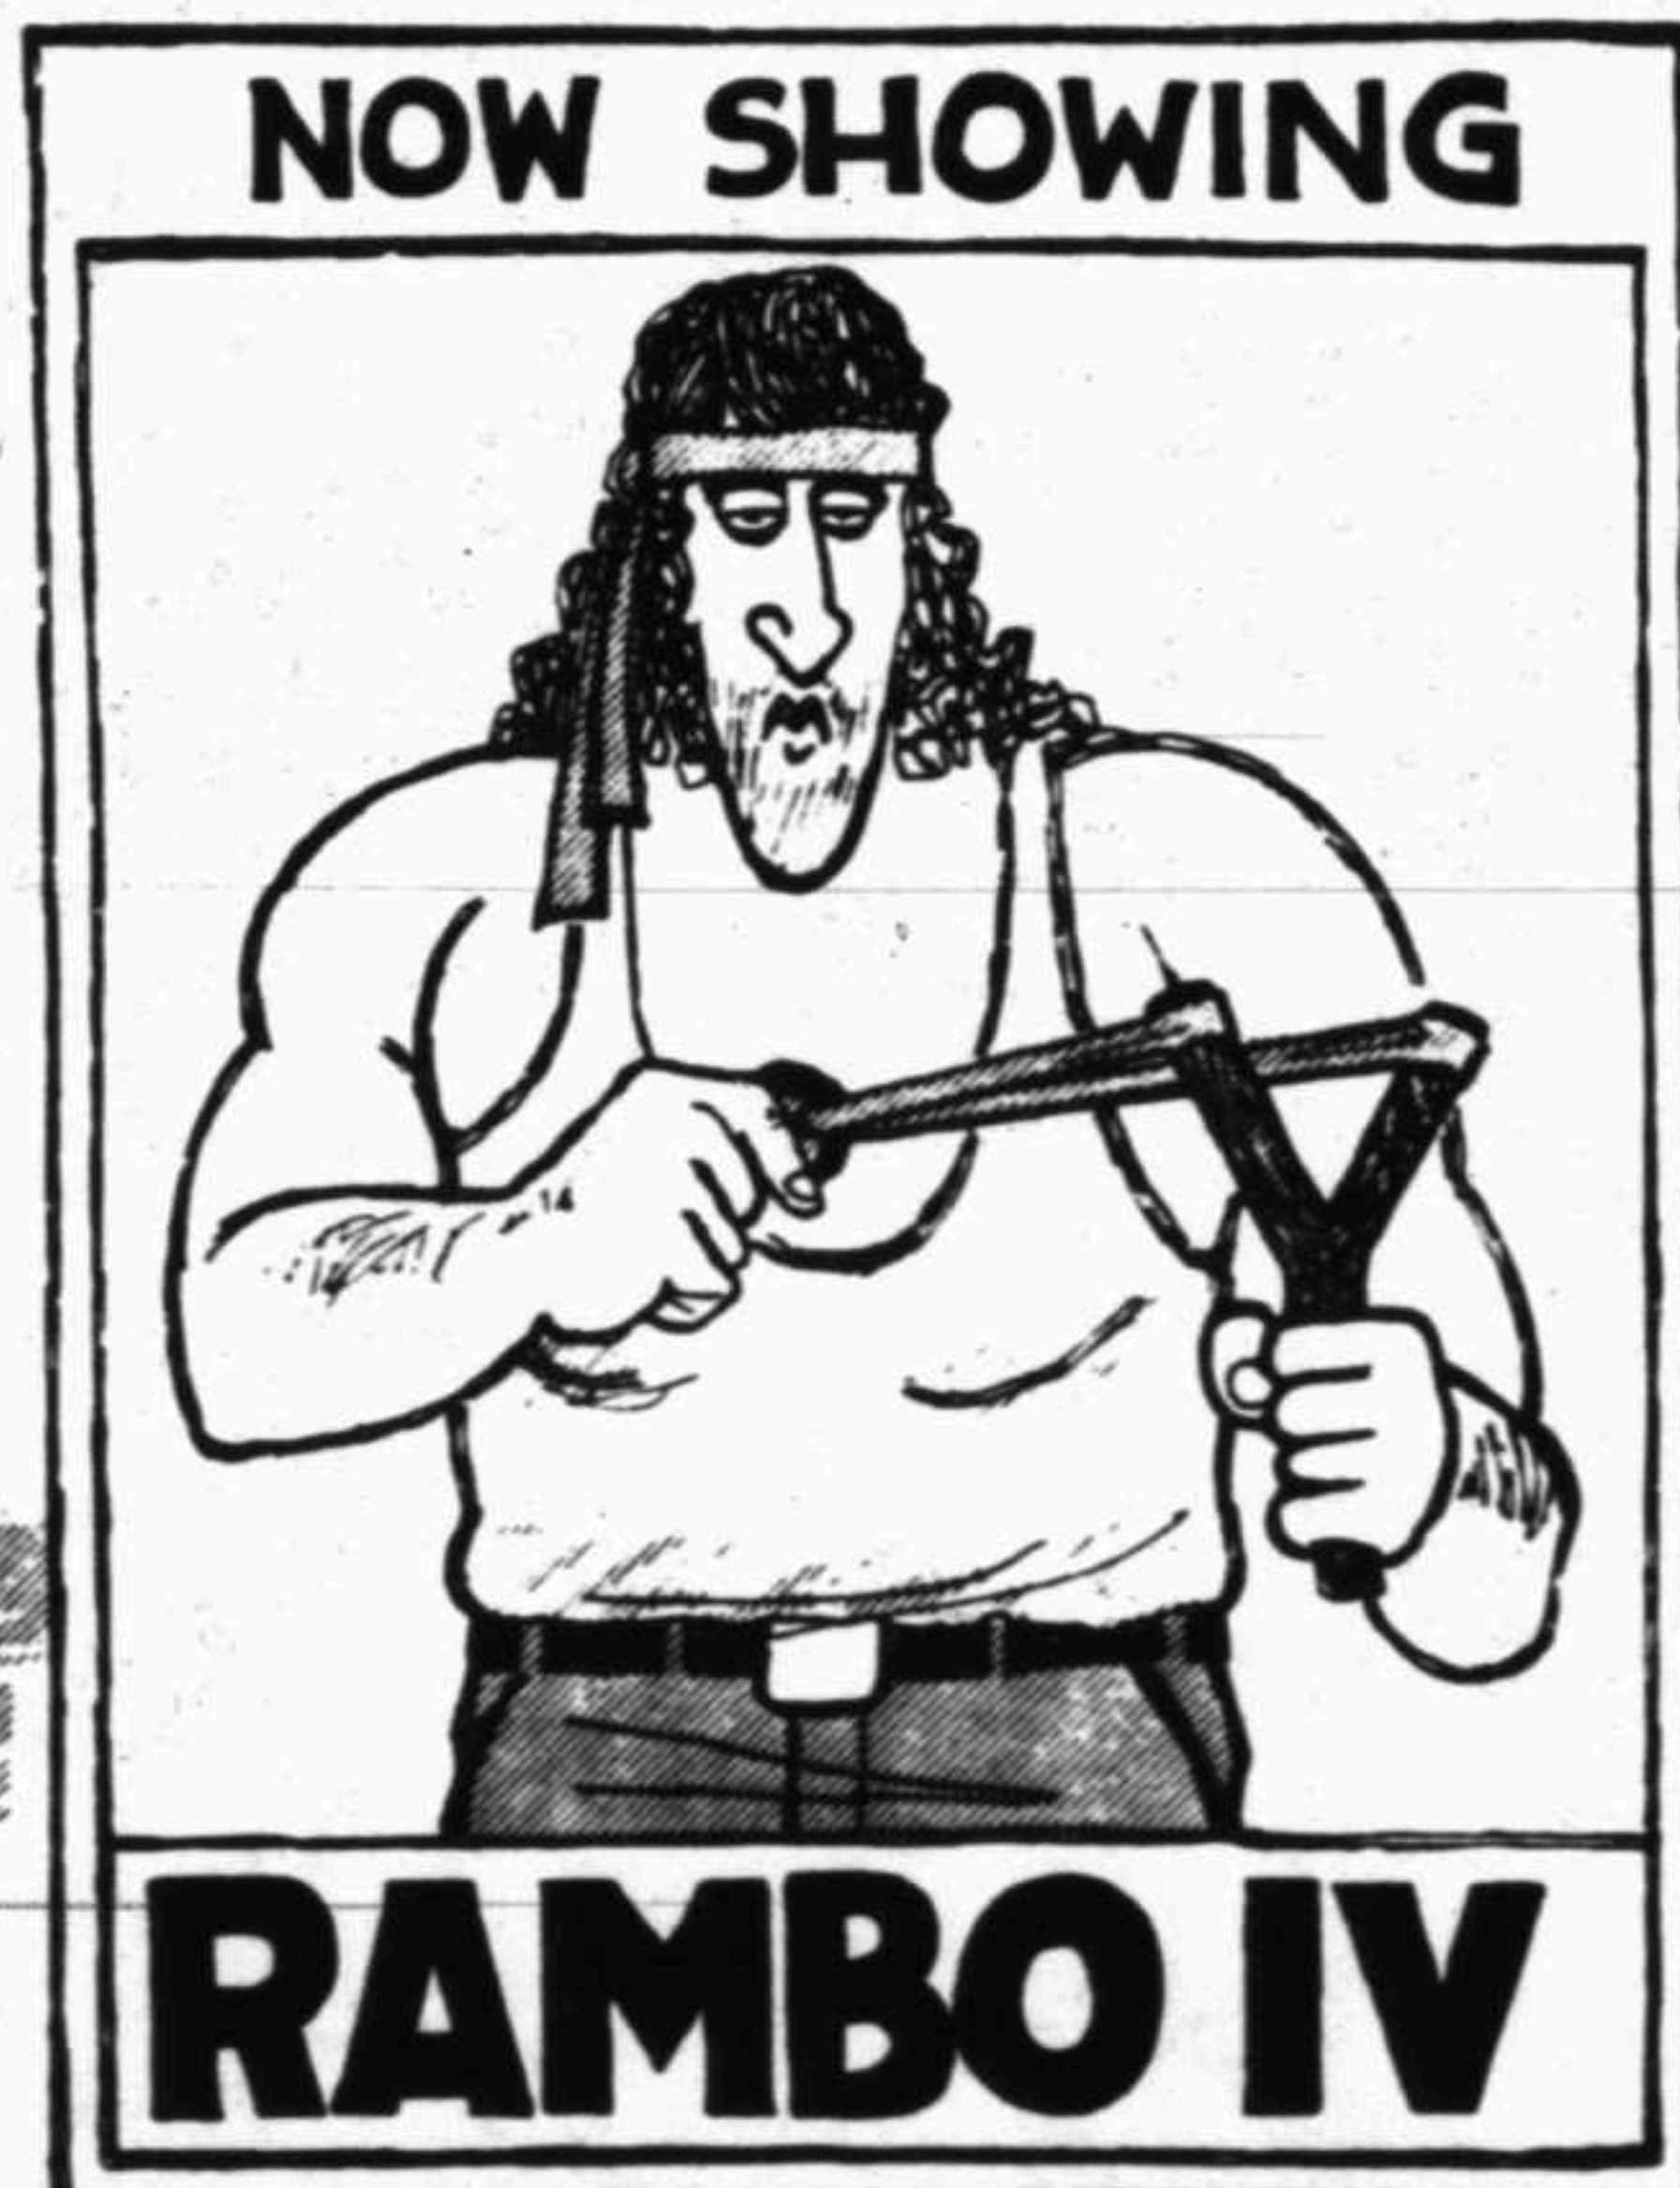

In the spring of 1984, three union members were killed in Salamanca during a power struggle between pro- and anti-La Quina factions.

Finally, on May 31, 1984, the chief media critic of La Quina was murdered. Manuel Buendia, one of Mexico's best-known journalists who had been dubbed the "Jack Anderson of Mexico," was expertly assassinated by a lone gunman near his office in Mexico City.

De la Madrid threw in the towel. He flew to La Quina's hometown and made a speech, praising the union for making the oil industry "a model of honesty." La Quina began calling de la Madrid "our good friend," and the violence ended.

Salinas was well aware of that history before he arrested La Quina, and he knows it will take more than justice to make the charges against La Quina stick.

SKILL COPY AND PASTE TO CLIPPER SERVICE

MINI-EDITORIAL — Rep. Kweisi Mfume, D-Md., wants a national law banning the sale of electronic paging devices to minors. The beepers are becoming standard tools of the trade for teen-age drug dealers. At first blush, it sounds like a silly notion — like stopping drunk drivers by taking away their cocktail napkins. But, we can think of few legitimate reasons that a teen-ager would need a personal beeper. At this point, Congress should try any legal means to put a dent in drug trafficking. The pager industry is already protesting and it's only a matter of time before the bumper stickers appear: "When beepers are outlawed, only outlaws will have beepers."

Bush should stop deforestation of America

NEW YORK — President Bush could extend his promising environmental record by abandoning an ill-conceived scheme to speed the deforestation of the United States — already far advanced — was first estimated to trim the federal deficit by an estimated $833 million by 1994; more rigorous congressional examination has reduced that estimate to about $222 million.

Tom Wicker

Under budget restrictions in effect for 21 years, foreign buyers may not bid on timber grown in U.S. national forests. The Reagan proposal to drop this ban — which has to be renewed annually — was first estimated to trim the federal deficit by an estimated $833 million by 1994; more rigorous congressional examination has reduced that estimate to about $222 million.

Even at the original figure, the savings — plus a favorable but minor effect on the trade deficit — would be obtained only at high cost to American timber workers, old-growth forests, recreation, wildlife and efforts to slow global warming. Not only environmentalists but American sawmill interests (already disadvantaged by timber exports) oppose the Reagan proposal, which Bush unwisely carried over to his revised budget.

Now the Office of Management and Budget is reported to be reconsidering. For the president, the political cost of axing the Reagan proposal could come only from major timber exporters, if from anyone, since the Japanese don't yet vote here.

The environmental gain to the nation would be considerable. Already the national forests are under heavy pressure from big lumber interests. As these companies mow down trees on their own lands and on state tracts to feed the hungry export market, they naturally look with covetous eyes on timber — often of higher quality — remaining in the national forests.

Smaller American milling companies, meanwhile, find themselves unable to match the bids of foreign buyers for U.S. logs. That means mill closings throughout the Northwest, for example, since export logs typically move directly from the forest to foreign ports, never having been touched by American sawmill workers. This adds to high rates of unemployment in some areas that are heavily dependent upon the forest industry.

The log shortage for American mills also produces new pressures from them for greater access to timber in the national forests. They don't want to ship logs overseas; they want to keep their own mills humming. National forest timber, these loggers say, is all that's available to undo the domestic log shortage caused by exports.

Already, government-owned timber — trees on national forest land supposedly belonging to the American people — is being logged at record rates. Timothy Egan reported Monday in The New York Times that in the Northwest alone, 5.5 billion board feet were cut from 19 national forests in 1988 — 20 percent more than 10 years ago. In 1987, 12.7 billion board feet were stripped from the 156 national forests across the country.

Earlier, Ronald Smothers reported in The Times that the U.S. Forest Service planned to double allowable timber sales in six national forests in the Southern Appalachians. An annual average of just under 100 million board feet was cut from 1977 through 1986; under the Forest Service plan, by 1996 over 200 million board feet would be harvested yearly.

That increased cutting is bound to be caused at least in part by vast timber shipments moving abroad. These exports mean that the domestic market must rely more and more on logs cut from Pisgah and Nantahala and all the other national timberlands, particularly the great old forests of the Northwest. Why open these national treasures directly to foreign buyers?

Stay tuned for more on the deforestation of America.

'Wings of Man' clipped by selfish greed

Larry Ayers went to work for Eastern Airlines as soon as he graduated from high school in Atlanta.

He was 18. The first thing Eastern did was transfer him to Melbourne, Fla., where he worked six years as a customer services agent.

Lewis Grizzard

That means I did everything that needed doing," he said.

Then he was transferred back to Atlanta where he put on a red coat and helped Eastern passengers find their airplane. His last assignment was in sales.

But January 1, after 26 years with Eastern, Larry Ayers retired at age 45.

Currently he is working for himself, restoring furniture.

"I loved my job with Eastern," he said. "But I couldn't afford to work there anymore."

Larry was not a member of any union. When hard times hit the airline, he agreed, with other non-union employees, to give up 20 percent of his salary to help keep Eastern in the air. He received no raise his last 10 years.

In his final days with Eastern, he also lost free parking at work and was going to be asked to contribute to his own insurance plan.

So, he walked. And he might as well have. The mechanics' strike against Eastern has virtually shut down the airline, and many think it may have been shut down for good.

After 26 years with the company, Larry Ayers has some ideas about what went wrong with Eastern. He offered the following points:

Eddie Rickenbacker, who guided Eastern during its early years, didn't think jets were Eastern's future and initially stuck with Lockheed Electras. That set the company back as air travel entered its boom years.

Frank Borman, Eastern's president for 17 years, expanded the company beyond its resources.

Frank Lorenzo, the current owner, doesn't give a damn about his employees.

Members of the pilots' and flight attendants' unions also joined non-union employees in giving back part of their wages to save the company. But members of the mechanics' union didn't. How that must have affected company spirit.

"They members of the mechanics' union never gave up anything," Larry Ayers said. "In fact, they even flaunted their raises to other Eastern employees."

But Larry says he isn't so bitter about the mechanics and their strike. It's the other members of the same union — baggage handlers, fuelers, cleaners and stock clerks — who irk him.

"The mechanics did their jobs, but not the others. They were hated," he explained.

"You couldn't get them to work. They just didn't give a damn."

"I saw it a lot when I was in a Red Coat. A plane would come in and need unloading and cleaning and refueling, but the people who were supposed to do that were watching television or playing cards."

"The rest of us were giving up so much but these people were the ones getting the raises."

Five thousand non-union Eastern workers, the soul of the company, were laid off with nothing because, if you listen to Larry Ayers, a good many do-nothings and foot-draggers who haven't been mistreated nearly as badly as on strike.

Eastern's fall is a story of greed and complacency. But those who tried the hardest seem to be the ones who now are suffering the most.

The Wings of Man. What a joke.

Today is Wednesday, March 22, the 81st day of 1989. There are 284 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On March 22, 1765, Britain enacted the Stamp Act to raise money from the American colonies. The Act set off such a strong protest that it was repealed the following year.

On this date: In 1638, religious dissident Anne Hutchinson was expelled from the Massachusetts Bay Colony.

In 1794, Congress passed a law prohibiting American vessels from supplying slaves to other countries.

In 1820, U.S. naval hero Stephen Decatur was killed in a duel with Commodore James Barron near Washington, D.C.

In 1882, Congress outlawed polygamy.

In 1894, hockey's first Stanley Cup game was played. Montreal, the home team, defeated Ottawa, 3-1.

In 1929, a U.S. Coast Guard vessel sank the Im Alone, a Canadian-registered schooner, in the Gulf of Mexico. The schooner was suspected of carrying bootleg liquor.

The Constitution to the states for ratification. It would fall short of the two-thirds approval needed.

In 1978, Karl Wallenda, patriarch of the Flying Wallendas high-wire act, fell to his death while attempting to walk a cable strung between two hotels in San Juan, Puerto Rico. He was 73.

In 1982, the space shuttle Columbia, carrying astronauts Col. Jack R. Lousma and Col. C. Gordon Fullerton, lifted off on a week-long mission from Cape Canaveral, Fla.

In 1987, a garbage barge carrying 3,200 tons of refuse left Islip, N.Y., on a six-month journey in search of a place to unload. The barge was turned away by several states and three foreign countries until space was found back in Islip.

Ten years ago: Following two days of debate, the Israeli Knesset endorsed a U.S.-mediated peace treaty with Egypt by a vote of 95-18, paving the way to the signing of the agreement.

Five years ago: A jury in Fall River, Mass., convicted two men of aggravated rape and acquitted two others of all charges in the case of a woman who was gang-raped on a barroom pool table while spectators cheered. Two other men had also been convicted in the case in a separate trial.

Human rights activist Andrei D. Sakharov, right, speaks with Academy of Sciences President Gury Marchuk Wednesday in Moscow about a program for electing members to a new legislative body.

Soviet academy rejects most of official slate

MOSCOW (AP) — Andrei D. Sakharov's bid for a seat in the new Soviet legislature may be revived now that the Soviet Academy of Sciences has rejected most of the candidates on the officially backed slate.

The outcome means the academy will have to vote again, giving Sakharov another chance for election to the 2,250-seat Congress of People's Deputies. Academy members had left the human rights activist off the official slate.

But members of the prestigious academy Tuesday approved just eight of the 23 candidates nominated for the 20 legislative seats allotted to the academy, the official Tass news agency reported.

Sakharov, a physicist, and other reform-minded academicians had called for rejection of the old-guard candidates.

Sakharov, meeting with other academy members today, said the outcome of Tuesday's vote is a victory for those seeking greater democracy. Sakharov, a Nobel Peace Prize laureate, spent almost seven years in internal exile for criticizing the Kremlin's military drive into Afghanistan.

The rejection of most of the official slate means a new vote will have to be held to fill the final 12 seats, Tass said. It did not say what process would be followed but said a new election would be held after two weeks.

In the new Soviet election system, people become candidates when they are nominated by others, not by simply announcing their intentions. There are many people — who want to nominate Sakharov — who said Tuesday that he would feel obligated to serve if elected.

Several academy members gathering at Moscow State University today called for Sakharov's nomination to the legislature. But academy President Gury Marchuk said the gathering did not have authority to select candidates.

He said whatever group is formed by the academy to put a new slate of candidates before the membership must also be approved by the National Electoral Commission.

Tass said 1,279 academy members and delegates from top Soviet research institutes voted by secret ballot for three hours in Moscow's Palace of Youth Tuesday. It gave no breakdown of the vote.

Efforts to get Sakharov on the initial academy slate were rejected by the academy leadership on Jan. 18, although he had been nominated by 55 scientific institutions for a seat in the new legislature.

Tass noted the controversy in reporting the results: "There was a clash of opinions as to whether the procedure of candidates' nomination was democratic."

It quoted Vladimir Kudryavtsev, academy vice president, as saying the elections "showed the growth of democratization in the academy and made for more profound understanding between the leadership of the (academy) and broad scientific public."

Philippines to sell $14 million of Imelda Marcos' jewels

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Corazon Aquino's government plans to sell $14 million in jewels that Imelda Marcos left behind in 1986, when she and former President Ferdinand Marcos fled the country, officials said today.

Officials also plan to sell three vacation houses they allege were built illegally by the couple with government money.

Chairman Mateo Caparas of the Presidential Commission on Good Government said the money from the sale of the gems and houses will be used to finance the government's land reform program.

Caparas told reporters he would ask an anti-graft court to allow his commission to sell the gems, appraised in 1986 at about $14 million, as well as the houses.

"It's better that we sell the jewelry because firstly, the comprehensive agrarian reform program needs this and secondly, it's difficult to keep jewels. They might even get lost, so it's better that we sell them now," Caparas said.

Officials said at least two boxes of jewelry, left behind by Mrs. Marcos at the presidential palace during the February 1986 uprising that toppled Marcos' 20-year regime, are now kept in a Central Bank vault.

Commission member Rosalio de Leon said the agency plans to sell at least three vacation homes belonging to the Marcoses, which they allegedly built with public funds.

"We will try to determine which houses are already deteriorating. The ones which are expensive to maintain and are not income-producing will be sold through public bidding," de Leon said in a telephone interview.

U.S. resumes talks with PLO

TUNIS, Tunisia (AP) — The United States resumed talks today with the PLO, saying it planned to ask that steps be taken to ease tensions in the occupied lands but not demand an end to the Palestinian uprising.

The meeting, the second between United States and PLO officials since Washington lifted its 13-year embargo on official contacts with the group in December, began shortly after noon at a Tunisian government guesthouse in the northern suburb of Carthage.

Sources in Washington have said Secretary of State James A. Baker III's strategy is to seek reciprocal gestures from the PLO and Israel to calm the occupied lands.

"We will not be asking for an end to the intifadeh (uprising), but for practical steps that can be taken to reduce the tension and reduce the suffering," said a U.S. Embassy official, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Asked if Washington would be making similar demands on Israel, the American source said: "We understand the need for mutual aid and reciprocity."

Washington has designated its ambassador in Tunis, Robert H. Pelletreau, as its representative in talks with the PLO.

Fifteen months of clashes between Israeli troops and Palestinians in the occupied Gaza Strip and West Bank has left more than 400 Palestinians and 17 Israelis dead, with no sign of an end to the violence.

Farouk Kaddoumi, head of the PLO's political department, said in an interview that he agrees the violence should be brought to an end, but said it should be done by putting the territories under U.N. supervision.

"Quelling the intifadeh or asking us to stop the intifadeh is a taboo, it should not be asked," Kaddoumi said.

Israel says the Palestine Liberation Organization is a terrorist group and refuses to negotiate with it about its demands for an independent state.

The United States refused to deal officially with the PLO until December, when PLO chairman Yasser Arafat's renounced terrorism and recognized Israel's right to exist.

"We don't expect too much," Kaddoumi said of the talks. "Things are in slow motion." He characterized the initial Dec. 16 meeting as a get-acquainted session.

Blacks quit embassy after South African pledges

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The four detainees who escaped in pajamas from their guards at a hospital walked out of their refuge at the West German Embassy today after the government guaranteed their freedom.

"We emerge feeling victorious," said Ephraim Nkoe, 28, one of the four black activists who fled to the embassy Monday from Johannesburg's Hillbrow Hospital, where they were admitted after joining a widespread hunger strike.

Nkoe said the four "just marched out of the hospital" in pajamas when their guards were not looking, walked along a busy downtown street and took a mini-bus taxi to the embassy in Pretoria. The men pressed the buzzer at the embassy's locked gate. Nkoe said, and were allowed in after saying they had an urgent message for one of the diplomats.

The men, accompanied by two lawyers, emerged from the embassy at midmorning today, then returned to Johannesburg for a news conference.

They said the government guaranteed their unconditional freedom, but they called for release of the estimated 300 activists still detained without charge.

The escapees specifically urged the release of Sandile Thusi, a detainee hospitalized in critical condition in Durban who has not eaten for 33 days. Nkoe said Law and Order Minister Adriaan Vlok sent a police general to Durban today to determine if Thusi should be released.

The four escapees had been held for periods of 10 months to 23 months. In addition to Nkoe, they are Job Sithole, 21, Mpho Lekgoro, 24, and Clive Radebe, 28 — all leaders of youth organizations affiliated to the banned United Democratic Front anti-apartheid coalition.

Many detainees freed since the hunger strike began in January have been placed under tough restrictions limiting their movements and involvement in anti-apartheid groups. The Law and Order Ministry imposed no restrictions on the four escapees and said release orders were being prepared for three of them at the time of their getaway.

The detainees, in a statement, said this claim was "difficult to believe." Their skepticism was shared by Business Day, a Johannesburg newspaper, which said Vlok was "trying to conceal both the shame of detention without trial and the embarrassment of release without notice."

More than 600 detainees have joined in hunger strikes for varying periods since January.

At least 18 killed in cargo jet's crash

GUARULHOS, Brazil (AP) — A Boeing 707 cargo jet crashed near an airport and exploded, sending flaming debris tumbling through a hillside slum. Officials said 18 people died, including all three on board, and about 200 were injured.

Doctors tried to save an infant born moments after his mother was killed in Tuesday's crash, but the boy died, a doctor said.

Rescuers said they believed at least 20 people were still trapped in the enormous wreckage left by the aircraft, which virtually leveled the small shantytown of Jardim Sentilha outside Guarulhos, 15 miles from Sao Paulo.

The Transbrasil cargo plane, flying from the northwestern jungle city of Manaus, was approaching the international airport at Guarulhos when it crashed about a mile short of the runways, the airline said.

The jet slammed into the ground and blew up and its flaming fuselage slid through the hillside slum, crushing or setting fire to 30 fragile wood-and-brick huts that housed more than 80 people, authorities said.

All three crew members of the Transbrasil jet and 15 people on the ground were killed, a morgue said today.

A morgue official, who gave just her first name, Cida, told The Associated Press only 10 of the fatalities had been identified so far.

Unconfirmed television reports Tuesday evening put the death toll at 20.

Guarulhos Health Department officials said more than 200 people were treated for shock and burns in local hospitals.

"Rescue teams are still out at the site and are trying to see if there are more victims under the wreckage," said a Fire Department official today. He spoke on condition of anonymity.

Tuesday night, firefighter Cesar Barros said authorities believed "there could be more than 20 people still trapped out there."

The airline office in Sao Paulo said the weather was cloudy but airline and government aviation officials said the cause of the crash was not known.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Thatcher defends official linked to Flight 103 mess

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher is defending her embattled transport secretary against allegations he was slow to warn airlines of a new type of Palestinian terrorist bomb prior to the blast that downed Flight 103.

But newspapers today kept up the attack on Paul Channon, accusing him of bungling the warnings and of leaking incorrect information to journalists.

The Sun, Britain's largest circulation newspaper, called for Channon's resignation and The Independent predicted he would be forced out.

Mrs. Thatcher told the House of Commons during an emergency debate called Tuesday by the opposition Labor Party that "totally unfair accusations have been made against him by lesser men."

Channon denied in an angry exchange that he had bungled the warnings and that after the attack he had concealed from Parliament the international alert about the discovery of a bomb concealed in a radio-cassette player.

A similar bomb blew up Pan Am Flight 103 up over Scotland on Dec. 21, killing all 259 people on board and 11 on the ground. The flight originated in Frankfurt, West Germany, with a change of planes at London's Heathrow airport.

Tanker truck explodes

PETERBOROUGH, England (AP) — A tanker truck carrying explosives and detonators to a fireworks factory caught fire and exploded today, killing a fireman and sending 67 people to the hospital, officials said.

Workers at nearby factories said they dived for cover as the powerful explosion ripped roofs from buildings, smashed windows and tore down power lines in an industrial park in Peterborough, 75 miles north of London.

The Cambridgeshire Fire and Rescue Service said it received a telephone call at 9:30 a.m. reporting a tanker on fire outside Vibroplant PLC, an industrial rental company at the Fengate Industrial Park. Soon after firefighters arrived, and before the park could be evacuated, the truck blew up. Witnesses said it was "torn to shreds" and the wreckage strewn over at least 300 yards.

Pub system to be changed

LONDON (AP) — The government plans unsettling changes in Britain's centuries-old pub system after a commission found that a "complex monopoly situation" exists in the supply of beer.

The key measure announced Tuesday would limit to 2,000 the number of public houses any single brewery could own. That would mean the biggest pub-owning breweries would have to sell thousands of retail outlets.

Another measure would bar breweries from issuing low-interest loans to independent pubs in exchange for an exclusive contract to supply them.

The Monopolies and Mergers Commission conducted a 2½-year investigation into Britain's 239-year-old "tied house" system.

Tied pubs are owned by individual breweries and represent about 55 percent of Britain's 82,000 public houses. They sell only the beers supplied by the owner.

PUBLIC NOTICE

Texas Utilities Electric Company ("TU Electric") hereby publishes NOTICE that, pursuant to the provisions of the Public Utility Regulatory Act and the Public Utility Commission's Substantive Rule 23.23(b)(2), it has filed an application on March 17, 1989, with the Public Utility Commission of Texas seeking authority to refund to its customers a prior over-recovery of fuel cost revenues in the amount of $46,654,438 as of January 31, 1989, including applicable interest.

TU Electric has proposed that the refund be made effective with customer billings beginning in the first billing month following five days after entry of a Commission Order authorizing such refund. All customers and classes of customers whose electric service rates include charges for fuel cost pursuant to TU Electric Rider FC, entitled "Base Rate Fuel Component," and all territories in which TU Electric provides electric service will be affected if the application is granted.

A complete copy of said application is on file with the Public Utility Commission of Texas.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Public Utility Commission of Texas as soon as possible. A request to intervene, participate, or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information may also be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0227, or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

Abilene High trips MHS in District 3 soccer playoff

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

SAN ANGELO — If not for Derek Hailey, Tuesday's District 3 soccer tiebreaker between Midland High and Abilene High might have gone along indefinitely — in temperatures below freezing, coupled with blowing snow.

But Hailey, a senior midfielder, saved both teams from such a fate with three goals off direct free kicks in the last 20 minutes of the game to key a 5-2 Eagle win here Tuesday.

Midland High, 9-5-1 overall, will face District 3 champion Wichita Falls Rider in bi-district playoff action Tuesday at either Lubbock or Abilene. Site and hour will be decided sometime this week, MHS Coach Tom Esikhathi said. Abilene, now 11-5-1, squares off against District 3 runner-up Wichita Falls High Tuesday in Fort Worth.

The MHS kickers just couldn't get it going despite the momentum of a five-match winning streak, Esikhathi said.

"The kids did not play to my expectations," he said. "It was a day that we were all off."

In particular, the Bulldogs' play at midfield left much to be desired.

"We left the midfield completely open," Esikhathi said. "We let their offense control the game."

Esikhathi's assessment notwithstanding, the Eagles didn't have much success around the Bulldog goal. All five Eagle goals resulted from either penalty kicks — where the offensive player is one-on-one against the goalkeeper from 10 yards out — and direct free kicks from near midfield, which aren't normally thought of as high-percentage shots.

Then again, Hailey may have a different opinion. All three of his direct kicks went over or through the hands of beleaguered MHS keeper Bryant Mueller, who was facing 30-degree temperatures, gusty winds and blowing snow throughout the half.

"He was cold — really cold," Esikhathi said. "He had some good saves, but we just let them control things too much."

The Dogs got an early break when AHS sweeper Ryker Hall fouled Shaun Savas within the penalty area. Savas banged the ensuing penalty kick past Eagle keeper Thomas Cotton with only 6:25 gone in the first half.

But MHS didn't get much of a chance to enjoy that lead, because it evaporated when AHS center forward Joe Barrientos got his own penalty kick past Mueller with 11:32 gone in the half.

The Eagles continued to press the Dogs defense throughout the half, but either Mueller or sweeper Sikes Johnson would foil the attempt.

The Eagles took the lead for good on a penalty kick by Hall with about 10 minutes gone in the second half. Hall got his chance when MHS' Joe Dominguez slid into AHS' Aaron Roberts to prevent a point-blank goal.

Hailey's first direct kick goal followed about 10 minutes later. Abilene coach Randy Allen said the first Hailey comet seemed to spark an MHS letdown.

"That kick had to have been demoralizing," the Eagle mentor said. "After that, everybody on our team was able to move where they were supposed to go."

Hailey had scored off a direct free kick once earlier this season, but wasn't really sure he could take advantage of Mueller Tuesday.

But he was sure going to try. "I said to myself, 'Derek, concentrate. You know you can do it.'"

"Then I prayed."

Hailey's other two goals came with 25:54 and 37:30 gone in the half. Savas tried to keep MHS in the hunt with a shot off a muff by Cotton in the 33rd minute of the second half, but it was just too late.

"We had some mistakes that gave them easy points, but don't underestimate my team right now," Esikhathi said.

Abilene succeeded despite some last-minute lineup switching. Regular sweeper Stephen Myers was benched after picking up his third yellow card of the season against Midland Lee last Saturday. Hall was moved from right forward to sweeper, where he excelled throughout the match.

JUST FOR KICKS: In addition to providing some unexpected scoring punch, Hailey excelled at midfield as did Eagle teammate Koy Roberts. Both controlled their areas so effectively that Midland High had trouble getting the ball to their front line of Savas, Dominguez and David Allen.

Redmen, Lobos hit quarterfinals

Associated Press

NEW YORK — The St. John's University basketball team, which saw its hopes for an NCAA bid end on a sour note with a loss to last-place Boston College in the Big East tournament, is playing for a cause in the NIT.

The Redmen have dedicated the tournament to sports information director Katha Quinn, who died last Friday, one day before her 35th birthday, after a long battle with liver cancer.

They wore black bands on their uniform shoulders in defeating Oklahoma State 76-64 in a second-round game Tuesday night and captain Matt Brust said:

"We've taken it upon ourselves to dedicate this tournament to her and to try to win for her. We know she's with us in spirit, and we felt her presence tonight."

The team attended Quinn's wake over the weekend and Brust said:

"Personally, it was gut-wrenching for me. She was like a mother and a sister to a lot of us. That was one hell of a lady, what she fought. I'm just a grain of sand on the beach compared to what she went through."

Quinn was diagnosed as having liver cancer in January 1987. She continued working full-time and underwent experimental chemotherapy treatment for 18 months.

Jayson Williams led St. John's with 27 points and shared rebounding honors with teammate Malik Sealy, each with eight. Darwyn Alexander scored 15 points for Oklahoma State.

The quarterfinals begin tonight with Alabama-Birmingham at Connecticut and Michigan State at Villanova. On Thursday night, St. John's plays at Ohio State and St. Louis visits New Mexico.

tional champions (of the NIT), and that inspired me tonight," Williams said.

New Mexico 86, Pepperdine 69.

At Albuquerque, Luc Longley scored 18 points and blocked seven shots and Charlie Thomas added 17 points as New Mexico advanced to the NIT quarterfinal round for the second straight year.

The Lobos dominated from the start, taking a 15-5 lead. Pepperdine got within 30-26, but New Mexico led 46-37 at halftime. It was 61-54 with 13:45 remaining, but the Lobos responded with a 12-2 run and put the game out of reach.

Thomas scored 10 points in the second half when Longley got into foul trouble. Marvin McBurrows added 15 points, Darrell McGee 13 — plus nine assists — and Rob Robbins 10. Craig Davis led Pepperdine with 21 points and Tom Lewis had 18.

Robbins and Pepperdine's Marty Wilson were ejected for fighting with five seconds left in the first half. The fight started when Wilson ran into Robbins as the New Mexico guard was taking a shot from 3-point range.

New Mexico coach Dave Bliss said he didn't want Pepperdine to get off to a quick start, so he started the game with a press.

"We just wanted to get our team going," Bliss said. "I think it worked. I thought our team was emotional right from the start, and I think that's what helped us get off to a quick start."

Pepperdine coach Tom Asbury said New Mexico's press "didn't hurt us. We didn't turn it over. They just shot the ball well."

Cincinnati Reds' Eric Davis holds a towel in game with St. Louis Tuesday. Rose is under investigation for "serious gambling allegations."

Not a good week for Pete

Associated Press

Pete Rose's reputation is in tatters, his place in the game he loves in doubt.

In two days since major league baseball announced he's under investigation, the Cincinnati Reds' manager has become the eye of a storm of allegations about his gambling, his finances and his parenting.

Rose took refuge behind an armed guard in the team's clubhouse on Tuesday before a spring training game in Florida, declining comment on an array of reports.

The most serious allegations, contained in this week's Sports Illustrated, could drive Rose from the game if proven accurate. The magazine reported in this week's issue that Rose is accused of betting on baseball and could be banned from the game if the charge is proven during an investigation being conducted by the office of baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberoth.

THE DAYTON Daily News reported today that Rose is selling off his baseball memorabilia, and is under investigation by federal authorities in Cincinnati looking into his gambling and taxes.

And Gentlemen's Quarterly printed an article in which Rose's children say he was a poor parent, and his former wife is quoted as saying Rose didn't pay his gambling debts — a statement she later denied.

Although Rose was ducking the allegations, his players and team owner Marge Schott were publicly hoping the storm would die out before Opening Day.

"I don't know what's going on," third baseman Chris Sabo said. "We just go out and play and hope it all works out very soon. It's very unfortunate. Let's hope it's not serious."

Schott, in Washington for a luncheon, indicated she could fire Rose if he's found guilty of the allegations. "We don't need this," she said. "Opening Day is coming up. This is a big concern. It could be a complete disruption. I hope this is all nothing serious."

How serious is something being weighed by Ueberoth and Commissioner-elect A. Bartlett Giamatti, who issued the statement Monday saying Rose was the subject of "serious allegations." The nature of the allegations hasn't been confirmed.

While the storm swirled around him, Rose went to the Reds' exhibition game Tuesday afternoon against St. Louis in St. Petersburg, Fla. He walked past reporters and into the clubhouse, which was blocked by a uniformed, armed guard. The clubhouse usually is open to reporters.

Rose agreed to meet after the game with writers who regularly cover the Reds, but would only discuss the game. His only comment on the allegations came in his daily pre-game interview with Reds broadcaster Marty Brennaman.

"Well, Marty, all I can tell you is we are cooperating with the commissioner's office, and we hope that it gets taken care of real fast, before Opening Day, so we can get down to business. And business is winning the National League West. That's all I'd like to say about that," Rose said.

THE ALLEGATIONS dogging Rose revolve around gambling. Rose's affinity for horse and dog tracks is no secret; he has denied a report that he places bets on college basketball.

Sports Illustrated quoted an unidentified source as saying that Rose allegedly "exchanged signals somehow relating to baseball betting" from the dugout at Riverfront Stadium. SI also reported allegations that baseball's all-time hits leader placed bets on baseball through friends.

Under Major League Rule 21-d, if Rose bet on games in which his team was not involved, he would be suspended for one year. If Rose bet on games involving the Reds, he would be banned for life.

Sports Illustrated said Ron Peters, a restaurant owner in southwest Ohio, has been linked to possible baseball betting involving Rose. The magazine said Peters' lawyer, Alan Statman, described his client as Rose's "principle bookmaker" and approached the magazine in hopes of selling Peters' story. The magazine said it declined to pay. The Cincinnati Enquirer said it, too, declined an overture from Statman to buy the story.

Sports Illustrated said Statman told two of its reporters that he and his client had been asked by Kevin Hallinan, baseball's security chief, "if we had information on Pete Rose betting on baseball. We said we can supply that information."

Children say Rose poor father figure

NEW YORK (AP) — Cincinnati Reds manager Pete Rose was a poor father and husband who rarely showed affection, flaunted his affairs and rarely saw his first two children, according to a magazine article.

"My father is the world's worst father," Rose's daughter, Fawn, says in the April issue of Gentlemen's Quarterly.

"I will never understand why he never had any time for us. We didn't expect anything from him, except to just like us. All we ever did was love him and want him to love us back."

Pete Rose Jr., a minor league third baseman, says he rarely talks to his father, who has remarried and had another son since divorcing his first wife.

"Even if I wanted to call him, I don't have his telephone number," Rose Jr. says. "I have to call his agent, and he tells my dad I want to talk to him. We don't get in touch unless my dad wants to. Still, I love him. He's my dad."

The article, written by Pat Jordan, portrays Rose as a selfish person who "devoted his life to one thing — baseball — at the exclusion of almost everything else."

"Most of the money he has made, it seems, he has spent on himself," Jordan writes. "He buys expensive clothes and even more expensive cars. He owns three Porsches, a Rolls-Royce and several other fine machines. He has also been known to indulge his gambling appetite at dog and horse tracks around the country."

ROSE, WHO broke Ty Cobb's record for most hits in a career, is under investigation by the Commissioner's office for alleged involvement in gambling. He declined to even entertain questions about the investigation or the GQ story Tuesday, saying he would only talk about baseball.

In the article, Rose's ex-wife Carolyn says he once received a dead fish in the mail after refusing to acknowledge a gambling debt.

"He said he was Pete Rose, and he didn't have to pay no gambling debts," she says. The article also cites rumors that Rose once lost $13,000 in a single day at the racetrack.

Pete Jr., who plays in the Baltimore Orioles organization, said his father is not affectionate.

"I never hugged or kissed my dad," he says. "If I did, he'd think I was a sissy. You know, queer. My relationship with him is more player-manager. Sometimes he gives me a high-five."

Fawn Rose thinks her father is jealous of his eldest son. "He doesn't want another Pete Rose in baseball," she says. "Besides, dad's not playing anymore and Pete is. Pete has the only thing dad doesn't have now. Youth."

Karolyn Rose said she filed for divorce in 1979 because Rose "was flaunting his women and I had to protect the kids, not because I didn't love him anymore."

In fact, Rose's former wife said she hasn't dated since the divorce and still sets an extra plate at the dinner table every January 25 on their wedding anniversary.

JIMMY PATTERSON

Weather says winter, but 'sleaze factor' says spring

Normally at this time of year, you can tell that baseball is right around the corner by the spring in the air. The flowers begin to bloom, the days become longer, the nights shorter. The air is warmer and more people are sneezing.

Not this year. While baseball is indeed right around the corner, spring is goofing off and taking its time getting here. The first day of spring looked more like the first day of winter.

So, with the weather failing us, how best to tell that the major leaguers are warming up?

Simple. The sleaze factor. The sleaze factor was a term made common by the media after Ronald R. Reagan lost plenty of his hired hands due to questionable behaviors.

The sleaze factor can now be applied to those who pull on the spandex uniforms and provide for us plenty of escapism during the summer.

It's easy to tell that baseball is here. Just turn on Geraldo. Even he and his side-show journalism devoted a program to baseball wives and baseball mistresses last week.

Wade Boggs and Margo Adams. Steve Garvey and bachelorettes Nos. 1 and 2. Ahh! Baseball is back. Spring has sprung. Seems as every year goes by, baseball's integrity continues to slide.

But hey, it never gets so bad that you can't joke about it, right? After all, when it concerns certain things, nothing's sacred.

Nothing. And no one.

Steve Garvey. A few weeks ago news leaked out that Steve reportedly had fathered a couple of kiddos with a couple of different ladies. This news broke during the same week that Garvey was supposed to have wed a third lady. Talk about your rotten luck.

First, there's no truth to the rumor that Steve will do a guest spot on "All My Children." OK, low blow. But we're talking about a former upstanding citizen in what has been called "The City of Angels." As one newspaperman called him, a "former future senator." I mean Steve Garvey was a pillar of the community. The guy even has an elementary school named after him in L.A. What's next, a maternity ward?

Wade Boggs and Margo Adams. What a pair. I mean, Wade had it made, huh? A wife at home, a girl in every port. And something went awry to the point where Margo got sick of Wade and she decided to file suit claiming Wade cost her a pile of money that she could've been making had she not been messin' around with him.

So after the nightie hits the fan, Margo takes off on the talk show circuit, heaping accusations here, accusations there. Sort of the sports world's own Jessica Hahn.

And then Tuesday, Margo is charged with shoplifting a rather high-dollar overcoat.

"It's ridiculous," Margo said to reporters. "I've never done anything wrong."

(For a more precise meaning of Margo's definition of right and wrong, see next month's Penthouse, an issue that will hit store shelves the first week of the baseball season. An issue where "Margo tells all and bares all.")

Had enough? Of course not: Boggs will be featured in an upcoming interview on ABC's "20/20" with Barbara Walters. No air date has been set for the sure-fire ratings bonanza.

I can already hear the scene in living rooms across the country:

"Git in here, honey! That baseball player who had sex with that girl in my magazine's fixin' to be on the TV."

Hey, who needs Mike Tyson and Robin Givens? We've got Wade and Margo this season.

And no, there's no truth to another rumor: Wade Boggs, Steve Garvey and Gary Hart will not make a movie called "Three Men and Some Babes."

Jimmy Patterson is a sports writer for the Reporter-Telegram.

Athletics score seven in ninth

Associated Press

The Oakland Athletics seem to have the San Francisco Giants' number — and that number is the ninth inning.

On March 12, the A's scored 14 runs in the ninth inning and crushed the Giants 20-7. On Tuesday, they were at it again with a seven-run ninth and a 9-7 exhibition victory.

Rookie Felix Jose, whose two-run single in the sixth began Oakland's comeback from a 7-0 deficit, hit a three-run double to cap the big ninth.

Ron Hassey started the rally with a single off Mike LaCoss, who faced six batters in the inning and didn't retire any. Tony Phillips walked, Glenn Hubbard singled to load the bases and rookie Dick Scott's two-run single started the scoring.

After former Midland Angel Doug Jennings walked and Luis Polonia singled a run home, Craig Lefferts relieved. A walk to Billy Beane forced another run across and Jose's double concluded the scoring.

Rangers 8, White Sox 0

Pete Incaviglia hit a two-run homer and four Texas pitchers combined on a four-hitter as the Rangers won for the ninth straight time. Kevin Brown allowed three hits and struck out five in five innings and Ed Vande Berg, Paul Wilmet and Dwayne Henry held the White Sox to one single over the last four innings.

Royals 9, Astros 1

Pat Tabler and Bob Boone drove in two runs each. Two errors in the sixth inning by Houston third baseman Ken Caminiti led to four Kansas City runs off Danny Darwin after Mike Scott pitched four scoreless innings. Astros rookie Anthony Kelley faced six batters without retiring any in the Royals five-run seventh.

Mets 8, Yankees (ss) 6

Two fielding errors by third baseman Jamie Quirk keyed a six-run seventh inning against Jimmy Jones, which included Len Dykstra's two-run single and Darryl Strawberry's two-run triple.

Orioles 8, Yankees (ss) 5

Cal Ripken and Randy Milligan hit consecutive homers in Baltimore's four-run first inning and Phil Bradley added a two-run shot in the second as the Orioles pounded sore-kneed John Candelaria.

Pirates 8, Red Sox (ss) 5

Sid Bream had four consecutive singles and drove in two runs, including one in a five-run ninth inning. Benny Distefano had a double and two singles in helping Pittsburgh offset solo homers by Boston's Mike Greenwell and Sam Horn.

Tigers 6, Red Sox (ss) 3

Gary Pettis drove in two runs and Eric King allowed two runs and three hits in six innings. Detroit broke a 2-2 tie with two runs off Steve Curry in the fourth on Pettis' two-run single.

Dodgers 7, Expos 2

Jeff Hamilton and Tracy Woodson had two hits and two RBI apiece. The Dodgers scored five runs in the third off Randy Johnson, who walked four batters in the inning, one with the bases loaded.

Reds 7, Cardinals 2

Cincinnati roughed up rookie Kris Carpenter with 10 hits and all its runs in the first four innings. Eric Davis hit a two-run triple to highlight a four-run third inning.

Padres 7, Brewers 4

John Kruk and Mark Parent hit two-run homers off Chris Bosio. Kruk's two-run shot in the fifth inning followed a two-out triple by Roberto Alomar and put the Padres ahead 5-4. Parent's homer in the sixth followed a single by Randall Byers.

Twins 7, Blue Jays 6

John Christensen won the game with a 12th-inning homer off Mark Eichhorn, capping a four-hit day. Minnesota's Jeff Calhoun blew a 6-1 lead in the top of the ninth on Sal Butera's two-run homer and a three-run shot by Junior Felix.

Angels 7, Indians 6

Lance Parrish's seventh-inning double off Neil Allen snapped a 6-6 tie. Parrish also hit a solo homer to cap a four-run first inning against Tom Candiotti. Cory Snyder hit a grand slam for Cleveland off Chuck Finley.

Mariners 9, Cubs 2

Greg Briley and Dave Valle drove in two runs apiece as Seattle rapped Rick Sutcliffe for six runs and nine hits in six innings. Mariners starter Billy Swift pitched six innings, allowing two runs and four hits, including Ryne Sandberg's solo homer.

Phillies 7, Braves 2

Ken Howell, Alex Madrid and Greg Harris combined on a three-hitter as Philadelphia won its seventh straight game. Howell allowed all Atlanta's hits and runs in six innings.

Bichette lights inferno during spring show

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — The sun-basking bleacher bums in right field have, for the moment, abandoned their chants of "Beef! Beef! Beef!"

Now it's "Dante's Gonna Stay! Dante's Gonna Stay!"

Dante Bichette, who already has developed a loyal following in the right field bleachers at the Angels' park in Palm Springs, may stay up with the California Angels or he may be dispatched back to their farm club at Edmonton.

But, building a strong case for the Angels to include him on their roster, the muscular outfielder is providing a sort of Dante's hitting inferno this spring.

Bichette, a former Midland Angel, is one of the hottest hitters in the California camp. His four homers is a club high, and he has 13 RBI and a .375 batting average.

The brawny 6-foot-3, 212-pound outfielder tagged with the nickname "Beef," hit a couple of booming homers while the Angels were training in Arizona earlier, and he's kept the power on since the club switched to Palm Springs last week.

He smashed a grand slam homer Saturday against Seattle, then went 3-for-5 on Sunday against San Francisco.

"I kinda go along with what Bob Lemon used to say," Angel manager Doug Rader said of Bichette's hitting tear. "I guess you can't get too excited that he's getting all those hits since it's spring training."

Swank says Switzer will clean up program

AUSTIN (AP) — The University of Oklahoma's interim president is confident that Coach Barry Switzer can shake up a program rocked recently by probation and player arrests.

However, David Swank added: "If he cannot, then we will have to find someone who can."

Society's emphasis on sports is an underlying cause of problems plaguing the OU football team, Swank said Monday in a speech to the Texas Daily Newspaper Association. Switzer must implement stricter discipline and a recruiting system that emphasizes academic as well as athletic achievement.

"I think actually within this next year we have to see signs of major changes in the program, or changes will have to be made," Swank said.

"I believe that because of Barry's reputation, he can actually be a guide for improvements, not only at the University of Oklahoma, but across the nation," Swank said. "If he can't, then we're going to have to do something else."

Problems began for the Sooners in December, when the NCAA placed the football program on three years probation for recruiting violations.

"But all those other guys are going against the same pitching."

Bichette, sporting a boyish grin, said of his hitting tear, "It's about time."

"I've been in the minors for five years," he said. "It better be happening for me."

Bichette's big spring has created a dilemma for the Angels.

He figured to still be a year away from the majors, and the California Angel outfielder seems set with Chili Davis in left, Devon White in center and the newly arrived Claudell Washington, who signed a rich free agent contract, in right. Backing them is Tony Armas, who had 13 homers in a reserve role last season.

Indications still are that Bichette will be sent back to Edmonton, although Rader did say, "I don't care what decision we make, so long as it's the right one."

"Nothing would please me more than to keep him and have him have a productive season, the same as we hope for everybody."

Bichette, who hit .267 and 14 homers with 81 runs batted in at Edmonton in 132 games last year, credits a fresh approach at the plate, a refreshed outlook, and working with weights for his improved hitting this spring.

"Since the start of spring training, I've been working with (coach) Deron Johnson. He's changed my whole approach to hitting," Bichette explained.

Swank said the easiest reaction would have been firing Switzer, whose teams have won three national championships and 12 Big Eight titles in 16 seasons.

"There are changes that will need to be made, but that does not include Coach Switzer at this time," Swank said.

Swank said the blame also should fall on himself and other administrators. "There has been a lack of discipline in our football program off the field."

Swank said he initially refused to read a book by former Oklahoma linebacker Brian Bosworth, which detailed accounts of wrongdoing by football players while coaches looked the other way.

"I thought it was a book of fiction," Swank said. "Now I know that I should have read it."

Red Sox trying to trade Boggs

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. (AP) — Once again, the Boston Red Sox appear to be trying to trade Wade Boggs, the five-time American League batting champion and the center of swirling controversy.

"I can't name any players, but we've talked to four clubs, in both leagues, the last couple of days," Boston general manager Lou Gorman said. "There is plenty of conversation, but whether we'll get something going, I don't know."

One rumor, denied a few weeks ago, would send the third baseman to the Seattle Mariners for left-hander Mark Langston and third baseman Jim Presley. Both Boggs and Langston are in the last year of their contracts, eligible for free agency in the fall. Boggs will make $1.75 million this year and Langston $1.3 million.

However, Arn Tellum, Langston's agent, said Tuesday that he had not heard of any recent trade discussions involving the pitcher. Any team trading for Langston would probably attempt to sign him to a multiyear contract before making a deal.

Gorman this week called the New York Mets and offered Boggs for third baseman Howard Johnson and left-hander Sid Fernandez.

"It's hard to say no to a player like Boggs," said Joe McIlvaine, the Mets' vice president for baseball operations. "But I told Lou 'I don't think it would work too well for us.' The deal just wouldn't fit."

The Mets have too many infielders already on their roster. Kevin Elster, Tim Lincecum, Greg Jefferies, Dave Magadan, Keith Miller and Johnson.

Lakers hit rock bottom at home

Associated Press

The Los Angeles Lakers are struggling at home after five years of nearly uninterrupted success, and Michael Jordan continues to thrive as a point guard.

Jordan tied a career high with 16 assists and scored 21 points, including two free throws with 48 seconds left that gave the Chicago Bulls a 104-103 victory over the Lakers on Tuesday night.

Despite having just five home losses this season, it was the second time the Lakers lost two straight at home. They went into 1988-89 with no back-to-back home losses since the 1983-84 season.

"We're dying in the fourth quarter when we should be enthusiastic," Lakers coach Pat Riley said. "We're just not getting the job done. I don't have an explanation. We were 4-1 on our road trip and blowing out people."

Pistons 110, Hawks 95
Detroit also had a big road victory.

winning at Atlanta as Isiah Thomas scored 18 of his 28 points in the first quarter as the Pistons built an 18-point lead.

Detroit stretched its lead to 21 points twice in the second quarter before former Midland College star Spud Webb, who finished with a season-high 21 points on 10-for-11 shooting from the field, sparked a rally. Webb helped Atlanta cut the deficit to 72-66 in the third quarter before the Pistons took control again with a 17-4 run.

Nuggets 112, Rockets 110
Alex English scored 29 of his 37 points in the second half, including 18 in the third quarter as Denver won at Houston.

Michael Adams added 20 points for the Nuggets and hit two 3-point shots at critical times in the fourth period.

Akeem Oluajunwa had 36 points and 23 rebounds for the Rockets, while Otis Thorpe followed with 21 points.

Sonics 101, Jazz 96
Seattle welcomed Coach Bernie Bickerstaff back to bench as Dale Ellis scored 31 points against Utah, including three free throws with nine seconds left.

Bickerstaff missed six games, five of them losses, after being hospitalized for a bleeding ulcer.

Warriors 151, Trail Blazers 127
Golden State scored 50 points in the fourth quarter, its third 50-point quarter of the season after playing 42 seasons without one.

Bucks 98, Celtics 86
The Bucks beat Boston for the eighth consecutive time in Milwaukee as Terry Cummings scored 21 points, including 13 in the third quarter.

Pacers 92, Nets 89
Indiana handed New Jersey its eighth straight loss, with Detlef Schrempf's off-balance 10-footer with 53 seconds remaining, putting Indiana ahead for good.

Yankees expect Thrift(y) deals

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — For the first time in three days, the New York Yankees didn't make a trade. Instead, they hired someone to make them.

After acquiring former Midland Cub outfielder Mel Hall from Cleveland on Sunday and pitcher Balvano Galez from Minnesota on Monday, the Yankees on Tuesday named former Pittsburgh Pirates general manager Syd Thrift as senior vice president of baseball operations.

Thrift indicated it wouldn't take him long to start wheeling and dealing. "I've had information on a lot of players," he said. "I've had information on a lot of players."

"My first priority is to get to know all of our players, what their strengths are and what their weaknesses are. The biggest thing is to get to know what you have."

The Yankee said that Thrift, fired by the Pirates in a power struggle following the 1988 season, will direct baseball operations along with vice president and general manager Bob Quinn and George Bradley, vice president for player development.

"We are tremendously happy to be able to have Syd Thrift join the Yankees," owner George Steinbrenner said. "The job he did with the Pittsburgh Pirates is one of the best I've seen since I've been in baseball."

"He and (Manager) Dallas Green both turned losing situations into artistic and business successes in Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and Chicago. I think the baseball team that has been put together including Thrift, Green, Quinn and Bradley certainly augurs well for the future of the Yankee organization."

Steinbrenner said Thrift was hired because "the job of running a team is too much for one man today. The game has gotten so complex, especially in a media capital like New York, one man can't do it all."

On possible trades, Steinbrenner said, "I ask them to run it by me so I don't read it in the papers."

Thrift, who was out of baseball for a decade, took over the Pirates after the 1985 season when they finished 57-104. He traded veterans for young players such as Andy Van Slyke, Bobby Bonilla, Mike LaValliere, Doug Drabek, Mike Dunne, Brian Fisher, Jeff Robinson and Jim Goff and turned the team into a contender.

The Pirates were 65-98 in 1986, 80-82 in 1987 and 85-75 in 1988, when they drew a franchise-record 1,865,713 fans, more than twice the attendance the year before Thrift took over.

Tennessee coach gives resignation

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Don DeVoe says he was prompted to quit as Tennessee basketball coach when speculation about his job security reached a point where he couldn't do his job. "I'm just really tired of all the speculation on my status," he said Tuesday after his resignation was announced by athletic director Doug Dickey. "You get to a point where enough is enough. It was to the point where it would affect my staff, my ability to manage the program, my family," DeVoe said. "I just felt it was time to resign and take a new direction."

It was widely reported that Dickey was prepared to fire DeVoe, whose teams were 204-137 in 11 seasons. Both men said their discussions over the past several days did not get to the quit-or-be-fired stage.

"We talked about the program and the direction we wanted it to take," DeVoe said.

Dickey announced the acceptance of DeVoe's "negotiated resignation," and said the university will honor the remaining 27 months of the contract, which carries a base salary of $72,345 a year.

"Don and I have been talking for several days now," Dickey said. "We've discussed the various possibilities of where we might go with our program, and he came to the conclusion that he would submit his resignation today, and we have accepted it."

Although the Vols were 19-11 this season, the school's best since 1985, and appeared in the NCAA tournament, Dickey said he had to consider "the circumstances that surround the program over a longer period of time than one season."

Dickey said the team — which loses five starters to graduation — could be facing "a downside that might be detrimental to coach DeVoe, his family and the university."

That possibility, he said, led DeVoe and him to the conclusion that it would be best if DeVoe resigned.

"I think there are no particular incidents or circumstances I would point out," Dickey said. "Rather, the general climate surrounding the entire program is such that what we've come to an agreement on is in the best interests of both of us."

Steeb, ranked 98th in the world, knocked the third-seeded American out of the $2.1 million tournament Tuesday and was hardly bothered when he learned Agassi claimed to have never heard of the West German who beat Mats Wilander in last year's Davis Cup finals.

"It's his fault," said Steeb, who used a big serve and hard forehand to dominate Agassi 6-4, 7-5, 6-0. "I've heard of him and know who he was. Maybe he knows Steeb's name now."

The West German won the last eight games of the one-hour, 45-minute match and frustrated 18-year-old Las Vegas with six aces and eight service breaks.

"He started to hit the ball too hard and stayed very close to the baseline," Steeb said. "After he realized I can keep up with him, he started trying to hit winners from there, and that makes him a little shaky."

While Agassi didn't play particularly well, he didn't feel he played that poorly either.

"He was just a little stronger," Agassi said, adding he had no prior knowledge of his opponent despite Steeb's success against Wilander in Davis Cup competition.

"I had no idea whether he was left-handed or right-handed," Agassi said. "I didn't know his name ... In the future, I'm going to have to dig a little deeper to pull matches like this out."

AUSTIN (AP) — Abilene Cooper first baseman Scott Pugh says he will sign with the Texas Longhorns next month to play baseball.

Pugh's recruiting commitment is the second for Texas, which also has received a commitment from Pugh's teammate, Lance Grider, a right-handed pitcher.

Pugh, 6-foot and 185 pounds, is a two-time all-state selection who hit .474 last year with 11 home runs.

Football writers honor Landry

PALM DESERT, Calif. (AP) — Tom Landry, deposed as coach of the Dallas Cowboys last month in what became known as "the Saturday night" massacre, was honored Tuesday by the Professional Football Writers of America for his unstinting cooperation with the media in his 30 years as the Cowboys' coach.

In an unprecedented move, the PFWA unanimously voted to present Landry with the Jack Horrigan Award, given annually to the player or league or club official who demonstrates "a high quality of professionalism in style in helping the pro football writer do his or her job."

The award is normally given in the summer in a mailed vote after nominees are selected.

But PFWA members meeting at the NFL owners' meetings felt the circumstances of Landry's dismissal and his cooperation over the years merited presenting the award immediately.

No. 98 Steeb upsets Agassi in first round

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (AP) — Carl-Uwe Steeb can't speak for Andre Agassi, but figures the rising star of men's tennis should have done a little more homework before the first round of the International Players Championships.

Steeb, ranked 98th in the world, knocked the third-seeded American out of the $2.1 million tournament Tuesday and was hardly bothered when he learned Agassi claimed to have never heard of the West German who beat Mats Wilander in last year's Davis Cup finals.

"He started to hit the ball too hard and stayed very close to the baseline," Steeb said. "After he realized I can keep up with him, he started trying to hit winners from there, and that makes him a little shaky."

While Agassi didn't play particularly well, he didn't feel he played that poorly either.

"He was just a little stronger," Agassi said, adding he had no prior knowledge of his opponent despite Steeb's success against Wilander in Davis Cup competition.

"I had no idea whether he was left-handed or right-handed," Agassi said. "I didn't know his name ... In the future, I'm going to have to dig a little deeper to pull matches like this out."

Cooper's Pugh picks Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — Abilene Cooper first baseman Scott Pugh says he will sign with the Texas Longhorns next month to play baseball.

Pugh's recruiting commitment is the second for Texas, which also has received a commitment from Pugh's teammate, Lance Grider, a right-handed pitcher.

Pugh, 6-foot and 185 pounds, is a two-time all-state selection who hit .474 last year with 11 home runs.

Steeb, ranked 98th in the world, knocked the third-seeded American out of the $2.1 million tournament Tuesday and was hardly bothered when he learned Agassi claimed to have never heard of the West German who beat Mats Wilander in last year's Davis Cup finals.

"It's his fault," said Steeb, who used a big serve and hard forehand to dominate Agassi 6-4, 7-5, 6-0. "I've heard of him and know who he was. Maybe he knows Steeb's name now."

The West German won the last eight games of the one-hour, 45-minute match and frustrated 18-year-old Las Vegas with six aces and eight service breaks.

"He started to hit the ball too hard and stayed very close to the baseline," Steeb said. "After he realized I can keep up with him, he started trying to hit winners from there, and that makes him a little shaky."

Adams says he will be vindicated with new trial

DALLAS (AP) — Even as Randall Dale Adams walks as a free man today, his supporters say his more than 12 years' behind bars remains a "miscarriage of justice."

But Adams himself says his vindication will come only with a new trial — one that finds him legally innocent of the 1976 shooting death of a Dallas police officer.

Adams, whose 1977 conviction was dismissed earlier this month, was released from jail Tuesday, after two days of last-minute legal wranglings. While his mother, Mildred Adams, decorated her trailer in Grove City, Ohio, with yellow ribbons for his return, Adams traveled to Houston with his attorney to lay groundwork for a new trial.

He was scheduled to talk with reporters at a 1:30 p.m. news conference today at defense attorney Randy Schaffer's office.

But on Tuesday, Adams had little to say to reporters, except that he was glad to be freed.

"It's been an experience," Adams said Tuesday as he left Lew Sterrett Justice Center in Dallas.

Adams, whose story became the focus of the documentary "Thin Blue Line," was convicted of killing Robert Wood when the officer stopped a car on a traffic violation. But the documentary questioned the testimony of then-16-year-old David Harris of Vidor, Texas, who had picked up Adams the day of the shooting after Adams' car had run out of gas.

Harris was the state's key witness against Adams. But the film showed Harris recanting his accusations, as well as other witnesses reporting information that conflicted with their testimony.

In an interview today on NBC-TV's "Today" show, Adams said he hopes questions raised by the film will be answered in a new trial.

"I would like to have some answers from" the prosecutors, Adams said. "I don't know if we can receive all the answers I'd like to have but I would like to receive some of them."

Filmmaker Errol Morris said he felt "privileged to have been involved in this whole case."

"I met Randall Adams now nearly four years ago, and in the course of making an entirely different movie," Morris said.

"Randall Adams told me a story and at first I didn't believe him, but I became caught up into a three-year investigation into this case, and it's my hope that the film has helped, and that I have in part been instrumental in what's happened (Tuesday) in Texas."

"I'm very very happy for him and for his family. This is a day that we've been waiting for for so many years. I'm just delighted that he has another chance at life," Morris said.

"But the whole story of what he did to Randall Dale Adams has yet to be told. There is still a lot of stuff that has yet to be made public."

Morris said he was "proud, very proud" to have prompted renewed interest in Adams' case that led to his release from prison.

"This is not a story of how someone uses legal wrangling to get out of jail," Morris said. "This is the story of a miscarriage of justice. This is the story of a man who came within three days of a lethal injection in Huntsville."

"It's a terrible story," he said. "It's a story of manipulation of evidence, suppression of evidence."

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals ruled March 1 that Adams did not receive a fair trial, based on the witnesses lying on the stand and suppressed evidence from the Dallas County district attorney's office.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals has said that (former Dallas County District Attorney) Doug Mulder put perjured testimony on the stand and himself suppressed evidence," said Morris of Cambridge, Mass.

Adams steadfastly has maintained his innocence in the case, saying Harris dropped him off at home before the shooting occurred.

"I am 40 years old and have no violence anywhere," Adams told reporters Tuesday. "The state wants you to think that for five minutes, I went crazy. That's stupid."

"They want you to think that for five minutes, I can execute a man and turn around and let David Harris run off," he said. "Now, they can't have it both ways. If I'm crazy, you would have found Harris somewhere out in the middle of the road."

Adams said, "I am still here today because I am non-violent. And being non-violent, I cannot even cause violence on myself and commit suicide, which the state probably wished I had done a long time ago."

Adams originally was sentenced to death, but in 1980, the sentence was commuted to life in prison.

"I have often wondered what would happen if the evening ever came when they came to my cell to take me out to my death," Adams said on ABC's "Nightline" Tuesday. "I often wondered if I could just walk out and go to my death as a man. Thankfully, I never had to answer that."

Adams still faces the possibility of a retrial.

"It ain't over," Schaffer said Tuesday after hours of wrangling over whether a judge in the case should be dismissed.

Adams said he welcomed a new trial and was confident he would not be convicted again.

"I'm not afraid of that now," he told "Nightline." "I believe we're going to win and I believe we can prove it."

Randall Dale Adams

Adams said he wants to get home to see his family as soon as possible. "I've been looking forward to going home — going home to live with the family, my mother, my two sisters, aunts, uncles, cousins," Adams said on "Nightline."

"My family has stood behind me and supported me from the very beginning," he said. "Yes, I want to go home."

Mrs. Adams said she would be equally pleased to see her son again. "There'll be a bunch of people to meet him at the airport," she told the Associated Press. "Then the family's just going to bring him home and order pizza and talk and cry for a while and just be glad he's home. And then a lot of church people are wanting to have a coming home party, probably a potluck."

Adams said he was not sure what he will be doing once he gets back to Ohio, however.

"This is something that I have been planning on for several months, but I don't even know what to do," he said with a shrug.

"He adjusted to prison life for 12 years, but I think he'll be able to come back here and adjust," his mother said confidently. "There's so many calling up and offering him a job."

Clements says he doesn't consider TDA partisan issue

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements says he won't consider partisan or political factors in deciding whether to veto Sunset legislation continuing the elective post of Texas agriculture commissioner.

Clements, whose veto would make the post appointive, said the issue "must not be cast simply as a question over an elective or an appointive commissioner."

"The only questions we must answer are: What's in the best interest of Texas agriculture? What's in the best interest of our farmers and ranchers? What's absolutely best for our state?" Clements said.

The Republican governor said he wanted to avoid partisan and political fights over the issue, which centers on elected Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower, a Democrat.

"I will not allow this topic to digress into a political fight," Clements said Tuesday in a speech to the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association.

"Well, that's certainly good news," Hightower responded when told of Clements' comments. "I hope it won't be a partisan issue...We do hope for and expect to have Republican support."

"Ultimately, I hope to have the support of the chief Republican in the state of Texas, Mr. Bill Clements," Hightower said.

In his speech Clements also said he wants advice from farmers and ranchers before deciding.

"I'd like to hear what your thoughts are on this. So, grassroots Texas must be heard and believe me, I'm all ears," Clements said.

The Senate on Monday passed to the House a Sunset bill that would continue operations of the Texas Department of Agriculture the next 12 years and would continue the commissioner's job as elective.

The House has not voted on the legislation.

After his speech, Clements told reporters he was undecided about action on the legislation, but was "listening very carefully" to farmers and ranchers on the subject.

"Just like the cattlemen's association right here...they're on record that they unanimously want" an appointed commissioner, Clements said.

"I'm listening to Lt. Gov. (Bill) Hobby. I'm listening to (House) Speaker (Gib) Lewis, and I'm listening to the committee members and the committee chairmen, and we'll see what comes out of the House and then I'll make my decision," Clements said.

Asked if he felt Hightower was qualified, Clements said, "I wouldn't comment on that."

State senator observer at Salvadoran election

Hearst News Service

AUSTIN — As a veteran politician, Sen. Frank Tejeda has seen plenty of elections. As a Vietnam veteran, he has seen plenty of combat.

As an election observer in El Salvador last weekend, he saw plenty of both.

Tejeda, D-San Antonio, visited six polling places during Sunday's presidential election.

"Five of the six places had been attacked by guerrillas that morning," he said. "In San Vicente, the firefight had just ended about an hour before we arrived."

At night at their San Salvador hotel, observers from the United States could hear gunfire and see flashes of light where Salvadoran army units were clashing with left-wing guerrillas in the latest round of the country's 9-year-old civil war.

The guerrillas' attempts to disrupt the voting lowered the turnout in the election, which was won by the right-wing ARENA party with about 54 percent of the vote.

The centrist Christian Democrat Party, under current president Jose Napoleon Duarte, finished a distant second with 37 percent of the vote.

The voting process was conducted properly, Tejeda said.

"It was fair and open and free," he said. "There were a lot of checks and balances to prevent fraud."

Tejeda was selected by the White House last week to join about 20 U.S. officials and private citizens to observe the elections.

Basses buying Time?

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The stock of Time Inc. surged Tuesday on reports that the Robert M. Bass Group held a small stake in the media company, which has agreed to merge with Warner Communications Inc.

After moving as high as $122.25, Time's stock ended at $119, up $7.75 on the day, with slightly more than a million shares traded. Warner rose 75 cents, to $48.125, with more than 1.3 million shares changing hands.

The Bass group has had a history of acquiring stock in media companies but has generally avoided hostile takeovers.

Its most widely publicized battle was for Macmillan Inc. In that case, it dropped out of a bidding contest and made a healthy profit on its stock when the company was acquired by Robert Maxwell.

In the industry, there was widespread debate on whether reports that the Bass group owned about 2 percent of Time's 56.6 million shares indicated either that it would bid for the company or that other bidders would necessarily emerge.

A source close to the Bass brothers declined to comment on the company's intentions at Time Inc.

It was not clear when, or over how long a period, the Bass group had acquired its stake.

A source close to Time said the Bass group did not plan to make a hostile bid.

Echoing the views of others, David Londoner, a media analyst at Wertheim Schroder & Co., said he thought the Bass group might be trying to smoke out another, higher bid.

"If anyone wants to make an offer, presumably they would come to the Bases," Londoner said. "If nobody shows up, the group would sell its stock."

A person close to the Bass group acknowledged that it believed the breakup value of Time was much higher than the stock is valued in the current deal with Warner.

Bad thrifts: Texas problem

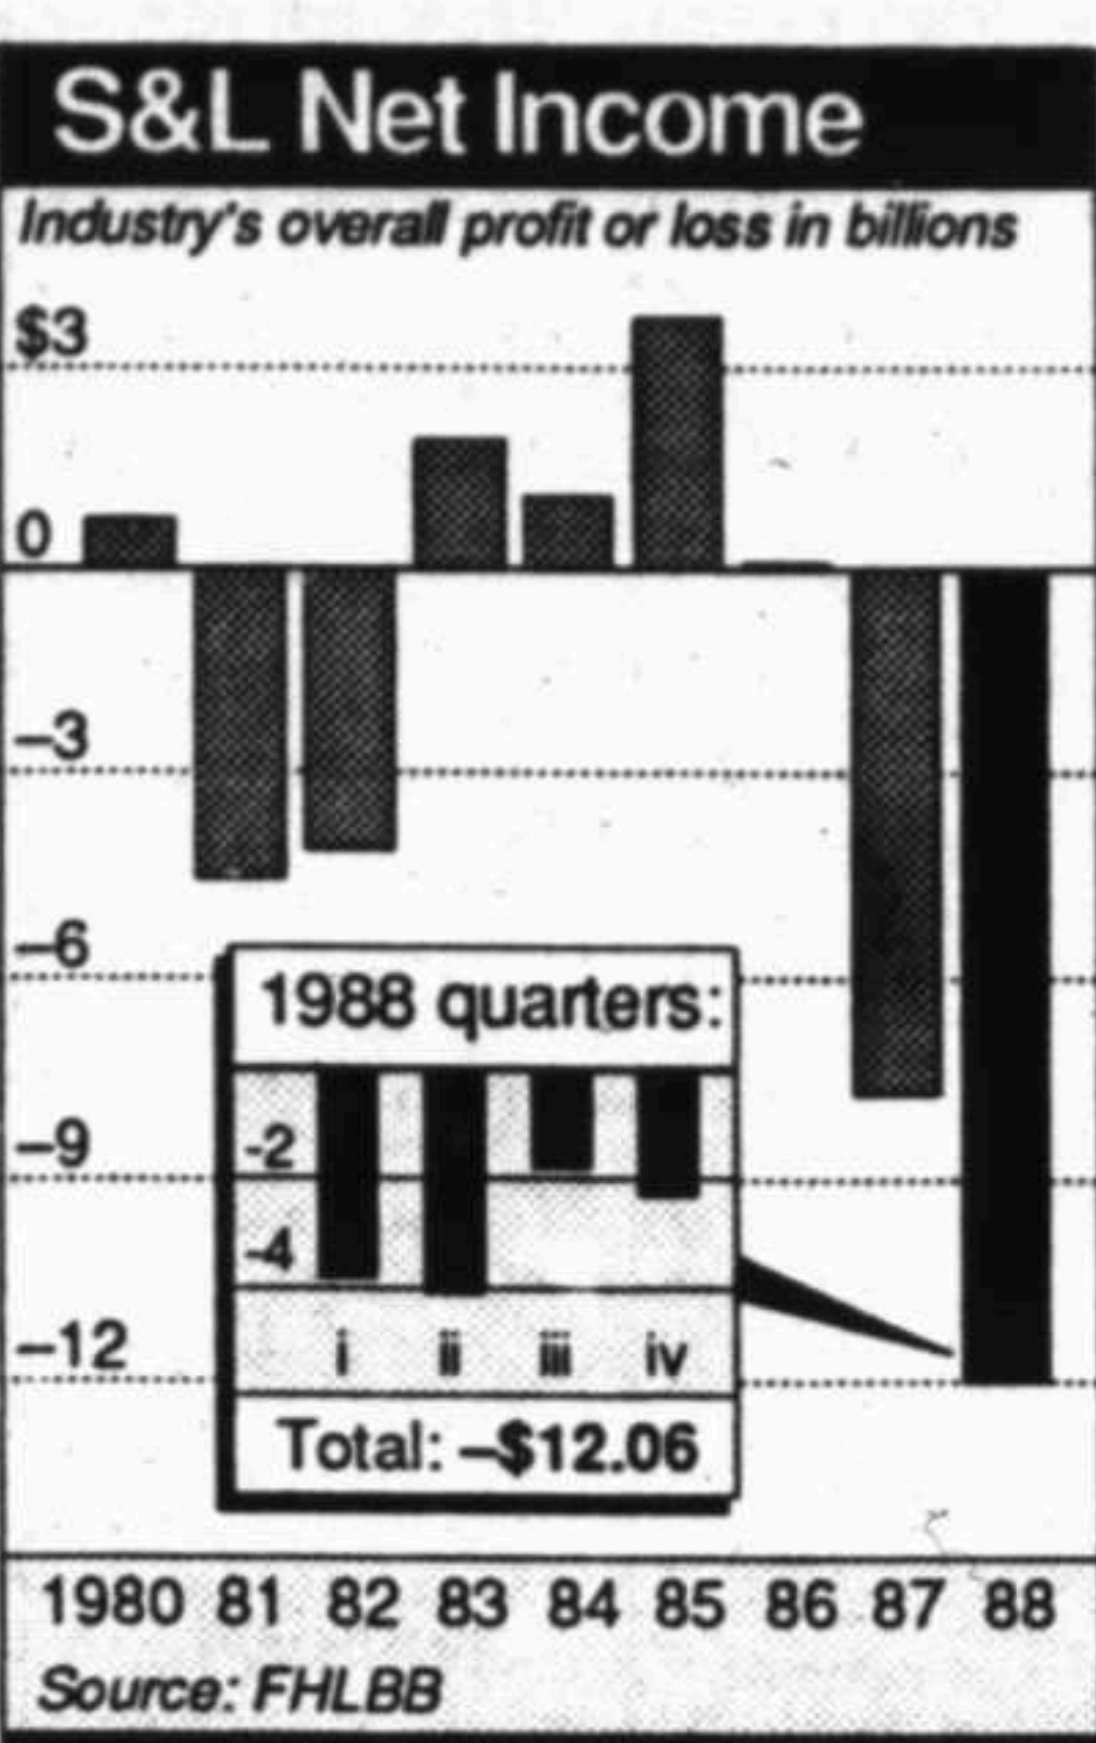

DALLAS (AP) — Texas thrifts accounted for more than 83 percent of all industry losses last year, according to figures released by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, which show the few troubled institutions more than eat up earnings at the larger number of healthy savings and loans.

James Barth, chief economist of the bank board, said from Washington that losses in Texas amounted to $10.1 billion last year, while nationally losses were $12.1 billion, a post-Depression record.

In the fourth quarter, Barth said losses at 77 insolvent Texas thrifts more than offset the earnings at 127 healthy institutions. The FHLBB said the insolvent institutions lost $1.29 billion while the healthy ones had profits of $92.9 million.

The numbers mean "there are a lot of good savings and loans out there that unfortunately are overwhelmed," said Robert D. Reike, who follows the industry for Rauscher Pierce Refsnes Inc. in Dallas.

Nationally, the bank board said 2,949 S&Ls lost $2.3 billion in the fourth quarter. For the year the industry lost a post-Depression record $12.1 billion, up from $7.8 billion in 1987.

The financial results released Tuesday reflect the attention paid to the Texas thrifts during 1988. The Dallas branch of the bank board said there were 75 fewer Texas thrifts on Dec. 31, 1988 than a year earlier.

Assets at the remaining thrifts were higher, however, up from $99.61 billion to $111.08 billion, reflecting the infusion of capital through federal assistance and the Southwest Plan, under which 87 Texas thrifts were rescued through the infusion of non-industry capital.

Liabilities also increased, from $106.29 billion at the end of 1987 to $113.88 billion at the end of 1988.

The capitalization ratio of the thrifts improved from a minus 6.28 percent to a minus 2.46 percent, but remained well below FHLBB standards, which vary from institution to institution but generally range between 3 percent and 10 percent.

"It shows that there is some health in the remaining savings and loans," Rieke said. "The 127 (solvent institutions) would certainly like to have the other 77 out of the industry so that their real performance would show through."

"Some of them are making money," he said.

INFLATION Interest may not soar

New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — When the government's report on producer prices hit the news wires last Friday morning, many economists figured that the Federal Reserve would have no alternative but to slam the economy with much higher interest rates to stop inflation.

But Fed officials themselves are not yet inclined to prescribe such medicine. The reason, they say, is that the environment now is quite different from the one of 1979, when the Fed and its chairman then, Paul A. Volcker, orchestrated the brutal rise of interest rates that produced the pain of two recessions.

In this view, the need to push interest rates higher to check inflation may not be as pressing as the two consecutive 1 percent monthly rises in the Producer Price Index might have implied.

One sign was Tuesday's report that the Consumer Price Index for February rose only 0.4 percent, which was consistent with its recent trend.

Indeed, the reason Fed officials can hold their fire is that they say they see evidence the economy has begun to slow down — largely because of the Fed-induced increase of three percentage points in short-term interest rates over the last year.

A slowing economy means unemployment will rise a bit, easing the pressure for higher wages, while spending and borrowing will decline, making it harder for business to raise prices. Pushing rates higher in such an environment could push the economy from a pause into a recession.

Fed officials tend to equivocate in their comments on such matters, but the impression they leave is one of vigilance but not a move toward sharply higher rates.

"We are beginning to see some evidence of a slowdown, but it is too early to say it is going to continue," said Roger Guffey, president of the Federal Reserve Bank of Kansas City, one of the 12 in the system.

Robert Parry, president of the San Francisco Fed, said the rise of interest rates the last year "may be setting the stage for a slowdown in the economy," but he added that he still was not convinced.

The view of Lee H. Hoskins, president of the Cleveland Fed, is noteworthy because he, like Parry, is a prominent hawk on inflation among the institution's top policy makers — the 12 presidents and the seven governors of the Fed.

He hints that the Fed need not necessarily tighten further. "The inflation now is the result of Fed policies two years ago, and I don't think policy should continuously tighten until you see inflation decline," he said.

Inflation fears ease

New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Consumer prices climbed a moderate 0.4 percent in February, reducing fears of surging inflation that might have brought harsh and risky countermeasures by the Federal Reserve.

The latest rise in the Consumer Price Index was somewhat less than most analysts expected. Tuesday's Labor Department report brought some relief to many participants in the financial markets, where prices were battered recently by the report of a second straight 1 percent jump in the prices received by domestic producers.

Many analysts said the moderate rise in the price index, after a climb of 0.6 percent in January that was the biggest in two years, would probably allow the Federal Reserve more time to evaluate the effect of the credit-tightening actions it has already taken. A poor February result, on the other hand, might have forced the central bank to raise interest rates to curb inflation by restraining the economy.

"Fears of inflation accelerating out of control have proven premature," the National Association of Manufacturers said in a statement.

IMF prepares loan help for Venezuela, Mexico bad debts

New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The International Monetary Fund and the World Bank are preparing multibillion-dollar loan packages to help Mexico and Venezuela, which are likely to be the first countries to benefit from a new plan for coping with the global debt crisis.

A general endorsement of the strategy, which calls for debt reduction as well as new money for countries willing to accept market-oriented economic reforms, is expected on April 1, when the finance ministers of the United States and its major allies meet here.

But many questions arise about whether the plan, which must be honed in international negotiations, can be put into effect before these countries face a cash crunch that could lead them to suspend payments to creditors.

Shaken by recent rioting that left nearly 300 people dead, Venezuela is already warning that it may have to defer payments if it does not get help soon.

Its new president, Carlos Andres Perez, is expected in Washington about the end of the month.

Similar warnings have come from Mexico as cash is drained from its central bank reserves.

The IMF board is considering a $4.5 billion loan to Venezuela and a similar loan to Mexico.

The Venezuelan loan is closer to approval and could be arranged as early as next month, officials of the monetary fund said.

The Mexican loan may not be completed until early summer.

By June 30 the World Bank board is expected to take up six loans to Mexico totaling $2 billion, and two loans to Venezuela totaling $700 million, officials of the bank said.

Under the new debt strategy, the two international agencies (each with 151 governments as stockholders) are to provide new money and loan guarantees and other support for the debt reduction efforts proposed by Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady on March 10.

Additional financial help is expected from Japan, which would get a larger voice in IMF affairs.

An attendant's strike at New York Airport has been called a 'fizzle' by airline officials.

Strike called 'fizzle'

HOUSTON (AP) — Striking Continental Airlines flight attendants claimed an increasing disruption of the carrier's operations as the walk-out entered its third day, but airline officials described the action as a "complete fizzle" that drew little support.

"The so-called strike has had absolutely no effect on our operations," said Continental Chairman D. Joseph Corr, who described the action as an attempt to help striking Machinists at sister carrier Eastern Airlines. "Not a single flight cancellation has resulted from UFA activity," Corr said. "The vast preponderance of Continental's flight attendants continue to provide warm, friendly and professional service to our passengers."

"It's looking very positive for us today," union spokesman Charlie Sampson said Tuesday. "We did have quite a few flight attendants yesterday. There are a lot more that need to be replaced — about 1,075. These are people who were scheduled to fly but didn't."

Continental said only 2 percent, or 130, of its 6,500 flight attendants had joined picket lines Tuesday.

Just opened at Midland Park Mall is TRENDY TS, located in the former Women's World location.

Owned by Midlanders Ruben and Polly Vargas, the store offers T-shirts, tops, T-shirt dresses and swimsuit coverups. The apparel can be bought plain or customers can have a transfer, lettering or computer portrait added.

The Vargases are the owners of Design by Computer and decided to expand their clothing line into a permanent store, according to Polly.

Also opening at Midland Park Mall in the former Brooks location is the annual Student Art Festival, sponsored by the Museum of the Southwest.

According to Enid Davis, administrative assistant for the museum, the exhibit starts off with the elementary school entries from March 28 through April 16. Secondary school entries will be displayed from April 22 through May 14.

The mall is hosting the exhibit this year, Davis explained, because the Children's Museum is not quite ready yet.

KEN'S PLACE has just opened at 117 E. Wall, next to Wall Street Bar & Grill.

Owner Kenneth Confer's establishment serves breakfast, lunch and dinner. He expects to have his liquor license by the end of the week, he adds.

Plans to are to add domino and bridge tables to the two standard-size pool tables already in place as well as live music so the place will be busy 24 hours a day. "This is going to be a working man's bar," Confer promises, "but it's going to be a real nice bar."

WTI posted price goes to $19

From Staff and Wire Reports

Fina Oil & Chemical today became the first crude oil purchaser to raise the posted price of West Texas Intermediate to $19.

The move came after oil prices surged past $20 a barrel Tuesday, and fell back below that level today. Contracts for May delivery of West Texas Intermediate were off 18 cents to stand at $19.87 at midmorning on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

The contract had soared 71 cents Tuesday, closing at $20.05 a barrel in relatively heavy trading, driven partly by optimism that OPEC is continuing to reduce production.

On Monday, the April contract for WTI dropped 82 cents to $19.51 a barrel after a sharp rally the previous week in which prices rose nearly $2. Analysts attributed the decline to a sell-off on the last day of the contract.

Dollar mostly higher overseas

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was mostly higher in quiet early European trading today. Gold prices also rose.

Foreign currency dealers said the market is calm as activity winds down before the four-day Easter weekend.

They said the dollar was not particularly affected by comments earlier today by Japanese Finance Minister Tatsuo Murayama that the current dollar-yen exchange rate is "acceptable."

Nor has the dollar been affected by recent uncertainty in the U.S. stock market, they said.

In Tokyo, the dollar fell 0.52 yen to a closing 131.40. Later, in London, it was quoted at 131.62 yen.

In London, one British pound cost $1.7193, cheaper for buyers than $1.7245 late Tuesday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $392.75 a troy ounce, down from $393.00 bid late Tuesday. At midmorning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $393.40.

Silver was quoted in London at a bid price of $6.06 a troy ounce, down from Tuesday's $6.17.

Stocks post modest 3 point gain

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market posted a modest recovery Tuesday after the latest government economic report calmed its nagging inflation fears.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks edged up 3.75 points to 2,266.25. The blue-chip barometer had jumped 14.64 points in the first half-hour of trading but retreated.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 9 to 5 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 895 issues up, 545 down and 505 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board totaled 142.01 million shares, down from 151.26 million Monday.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

AOI Coal reports quarterly earnings

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — AOI Coal Co. reported Tuesday net income of $657,000, or 4 cents per share, on revenues of $18.83 million for the quarter ended Dec. 31, 1988.

That compares to $821,000, or 6 cents per share, on $15.07 million in revenues for the same quarter of 1987.

For the year, AOI said earnings were $287,000, or 2 cents per share, on revenues of $56.67 million, compared to 1987 earnings of $2.62 million, or 18 cents per share, on $57.27 million in revenue.

Elcor Corp. declares cash dividend

From Staff Reports

DALLAS — Elcor Corp., formerly based in Midland, has declared a .055 cent per share quarterly cash dividend payable May 11 to shareholders of record April 14.

The current declaration represents the company's 54th consecutive quarterly cash dividend paid on its common stock.

Sun E&P explains name change

DALLAS (AP) — Officials for Sun Exploration and Production Co., an oil and gas producer spun off last year from parent Sun Co. Inc., say a new name might help establish the company's new identity.

The company on Tuesday announced plans to change its name to Oryx Energy Co., selecting a species of antelope to project a new image.

The name change, adopted by the board of directors, still must be approved by the shareholders.

Sun E&P has been damaged by "continued misunderstanding about our affiliation," said Chairman Robert P. Hauptfuhrer.

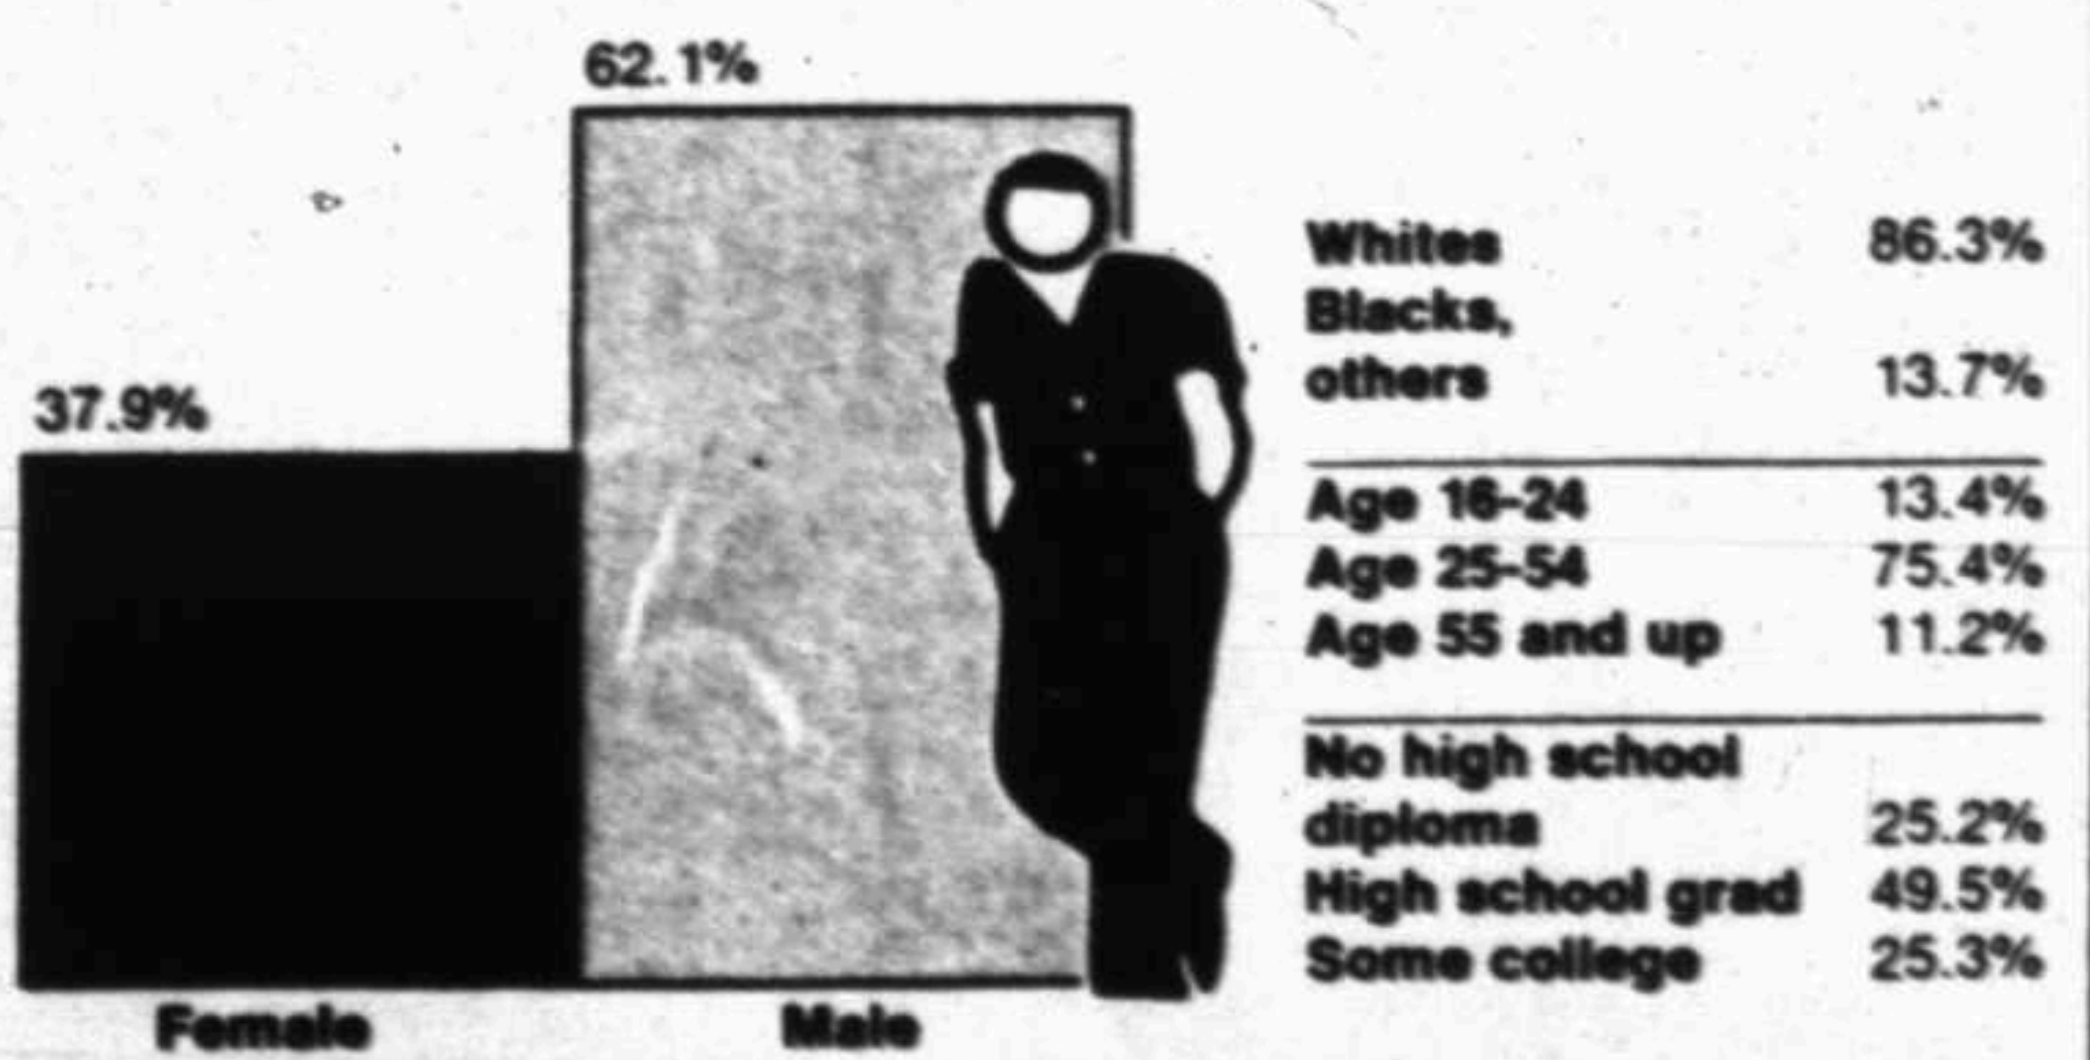

"For example, since Sun markets branded gasoline in the District of Columbia, we have often encountered confusion amidst legislators on Capitol Hill," he said. "We are mistakenly linked with major integrated companies, whose policy views could be different from ours."

North trial focusing on funds cover-up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prosecutors in Oliver North's trial are moving into the final phase of their case, focusing on his alleged cover-up as millions of dollars were diverted in the Iran-Contra affair.

Willard Zucker, a lawyer and accountant who moved money for Iran-Contra co-defendant Albert Hakim, will testify about diverting profits from the Reagan administration's secret weapons sales to Iran. One of the charges against North, a former National Security Council aide, is that he lied to the attorney general by saying the NSC had no involvement in the diversion of money to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels. Zucker funneled money from the arms sales into accounts controlled by Hakim and co-defendant Richard Secord. North had secretly enlisted Secord to run arms to the Contras.

Former Attorney General Edwin Meese III also will testify at North's trial in the next week and a half as the prosecution wraps up its case. North lawyer Brendan Sullivan said he expects the defense case to last four to eight weeks.

One of Meese's ex-aides, Charles Cooper, will testify how North suggested that Congress be told that no one in the U.S. government knew at the time that a November 1985 shipment to Iran contained weapons.

The CIA assisted on the shipment of missiles, which was made without a required presidential finding.

North's former secretary, Fawn Hall, also is scheduled to testify.

During congressional testimony and depositions, Hall described how documents were shredded, altered and removed from the NSC in mid-November 1986 at North's direction.

Bakkers' possible move draws mixed reactions

LAKE HELEN, Fla. (AP) — Some officials are worried about a loss in tax revenue, the only restaurant owner in town wonders if he should add more tables, and an astrologer in a nearby spiritualist community foresees profit.

But all agree that this tiny central Florida village will get a jolt like a lightning bolt from the heavens if evangelists Jim and Tammy Bakker move their television ministry here.

"It could be great for business or turn this town inside out," said Chamber of Commerce President Jerry Peters. "Either way, if the Bakkers come, this place will not be the same."

"I'm not going to put myself in a position of judging a man by his past deeds," said Mayor John Smart, a retired Air Force chaplain who last week led Bakker on a tour of this area 20 miles northeast of Orlando. "What did Jesus say? 'He who is without sin cast the first stone.' There are some strong feelings in town, no doubt. But I think we should wait and see."

Bakker, the former Assemblies of God minister who was stripped of the PTL television ministry over his tryst with a church secretary and questions about finances, visited a 28-acre television studio complex here on Friday. It was built in 1982 by Nautilus exercise equipment creator Arthur Jones and bought in 1986 by Dallas investor Travis Ward.

Evan Keesling, one of four people challenging Smart in an April 4 election, believes many of the 2,500 residents are troubled by the secrecy surrounding the negotiations.

"I realize that it's a private deal, but many people would have liked Bakker to come to them first," said Keesling, who built the first Nautilus machines with Jones in the early 1970s. "I'd say the mood in town is nervous to jump."

Peters and others are concerned about the possible loss of $13,900 a year in property taxes because the ministry is tax-exempt.

Views were mixed in Cassadaga, less than three miles from town, where most residents claim psychic powers and an ability to communicate with the dead.

"I see real estate values going up and money pouring in," said astrologer Hanan Leeds. "It will be good for everyone, get the idea?"

But Joe Stupar, owner of the 62-year-old Cassadaga Hotel, wonders how the zeal of the Bakkers' fundamentalist followers will mesh with Cassadaga mysticism.

"I'm not so sure how Bakkers' people will relate to this," he said. "I'm hoping for harmony, but you never know."

Bakker said he'd like to relocate the couple's Jim and Tammy Ministry from Pineville, N.C., to Lake Helen and construct other facilities similar to PTL's Heritage USA theme park in Fort Mill, S.C. He said a decision on a new location likely will be made in two months.

But Orlando television station WESH reported Tuesday night that Bakker has all but turned down the site because of the $5.5 million asking price. The station, quoting unnamed sources, said Bakker plans to look at other central Florida sites.

State to close charity hospital system

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Gov. Ray Mabus has vetoed bills to pay for one of the nation's two remaining charity hospital systems, but supporters of the 73-year-old system vowed to keep fighting to keep it running.

The state Senate sustained the veto by adjourning Tuesday without taking any action on it, and Mabus said he was willing to take the "political heat" for his action to cut funds to the three hospitals and their governing board.

"This has been an emotional issue on both sides," he said. "People on both sides have made passionate, good-faith arguments. People of good will have disagreed on what is the right thing to do."

The governor has urged lawmakers to take the money for the hospitals and use it to expand Medicaid, a federal-state program that helps pay for health care for the needy, aged, blind and disabled, and for low-income families with children.

The bills he vetoed would have provided for operation in the next fiscal year of Kuhn Memorial Hospital in Vicksburg, Matty Hersee Hospital in Meridian and South Mississippi State Hospital in Laurel. Now they're slated to close July 1.

The system, set up in 1916, maintains 199 of the state's 15,800 hospital beds on a budget of $6.8 million. They served 77,500 patients in fiscal 1988, providing free medical care to the needy.

Louisiana maintains the nation's only other charity hospital system.

The Mississippi hospitals' backers, who have held frequent rallies at the Capitol to protest the closings, criticized Mabus's veto.

"The governor is saying that people won't be turned away from other hospitals...but how will we pay the bill?" asked Marzell Clayton, 54, who said he has used the Laurel hospital during the past 16 years.

Clayton said his lawyer was preparing to file a lawsuit against Mabus and was trying to get a restraining order to keep the hospitals open.

"It's no problem getting a community hospital to see you, but you can't pay the bill," Clayton said, adding that he preferred to use the free hospital rather than use his Medicaid benefits.

"I think the governor has made a very serious political mistake," said Eva Farrish Ford, an activist. "The poor people will remember that service was taken away from them."

"I hope (the Legislature) will come together and see that these hospitals are needed and that the people who use them are good people, working people," said Omeria Scott, another activist.

In vetoing the package of three appropriations bills, the reformist governor said officials had to decide, "How can we best use our limited money to reach the most people with the best care?"

It would have taken a two-thirds majority of both houses of the Legislature to override the veto.

metropolis — (noun) Detroit is a "metropolis" of the auto industry. In the Detroit area, car companies such as General Motors, Ford and Chrysler are headquartered and manufacture vehicles. A "metropolis" is a chief town or city of an area or the center of a certain trade or industry. The word "metropolis" dates back to the ancient Greeks where a "metropolis" was the mother city or parent state of a Greek colony.

Endeavor most liked name for shuttle among students

WASHINGTON (AP) — Names of the ships of 18th-century British explorer Capt. James Cook were the most popular choices among America's school children in NASA's name-the-shuttle contest.

The space agency said that 31 of the 111 state-level winners in a national student competition chose the name Endeavour, though many of the entries used the American spelling of Endeavor. Second most popular among the state winners, with 12 selections, was Resolution.

Both Endeavour and Resolution are names Cook used for his ships of exploration.

A close third in popularity, with 11 choices, was Victoria, the name of the ship used by Ferdinand Magellan, the 16th century Portuguese navigator.

State-level winners in the shuttle-naming competition were selected by committees in each of the states, the District of Columbia and four U.S. territories, and from the schools of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, the Defense Department and the State Department. NASA announced the selections Monday.

Defense secretary sworn in WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Dick Cheney will play a pivotal role in keeping America strong, secure and at peace, President Bush said as the new Pentagon chief was sworn in.

Bush welcomed Cheney to his administration on Tuesday amid military pomp and circumstance. The president said the nation is facing some tough choices in maintaining its security and Cheney had the ability "to sort out those priorities."

"I am confident that Dick Cheney will play a pivotal part in keeping America strong and secure, free and at peace," Bush said.

Cheney responded that he would "do my best to justify your trust." Nominated by Bush the day after the Senate rejected John Tower on March 9, Cheney was confirmed for the job Friday and assumed the post immediately after a private oath-taking ceremony in his Capitol Hill office.

Parents tape child abuse

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — A baby sitter was sentenced to a year in jail after the parents of a 6-month-old boy secretly videotaped her slapping the child.

Kip and Susan Ridley turned the video camera on 27-year-old Donna Waterhouse in January after the infant's 3-year-old sister mentioned previous incidents of abuse to her parents in January, authorities said.

Waterhouse pleaded guilty to misdemeanor child abuse charges, and Judge Joe DiRisio sentenced her to the maximum Thursday after watching the tape.

The infant was not seriously hurt.

Shuttle moved to pad

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Space shuttle Atlantis was moved to the launch pad today for liftoff next month on a mission to send the Magellan space probe to Venus.

Perched vertically on a giant caterpillar-track transporter, the shuttle began the four-mile trip at 12:01 a.m., reaching the pad nearly eight hours later, traveling at maximum speed of 1 mph.

At the launch pad, Atlantis will be prepared for liftoff April 28. The 7,600-pound Magellan spacecraft will be loaded into the shuttle's cargo bay Friday.

Decor conveys warmth, hospitality

The home of Mr. and Mrs. T.D. Tubb, at No. 4 Keensland Drive in Melody Acres in northwest Midland, with its exterior white stucco walls and red-tile roof, conveys all the warmth and hospitality of Mediterranean-style architecture.

The three bedroom, three-and-a-half bath home has 3,500 square feet and is surrounded by four acres, where the Tubbs raise horses. "We're in the breeding business," Mrs. Tubb said. "Right now I have about 12 horses (Arabians) of my own."

Two years ago the Tubb family donated their old house to Teen Challenge, had it moved to a new location and began construction of their new home on the same site. Mrs. Tubb said, "The actual design took a couple of months, but I had in mind for several years what I wanted." She took her preliminary sketch to M.R. Lary, architect and builder of the home, who "did the architectural design for me."

The home, decorated by Mrs. Tubb with assistance from James Van Stavern of Van Stavern Interiors, is "more a blend of Southwestern and Mediterranean" design, said Mrs. Tubb. Solid oak beams are used throughout the home.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. T.D. Tubbs, No. 4 Keensland Drive, has white stucco walls and a red tile roof with Cantera stone columns to support the front porch.

The 20th Annual Parade of Homes will be presented by the Midland Junior Woman's Club 1:30-5:30 p.m. April 16. Proceeds from the event will benefit the Developmental Disabilities Center, Palmer Drug Abuse Program, Problem Pregnancy Center and Special Care Infants. The homes of four Midland families will be open for the public to see. Tickets are $7.50 and can be obtained from any Junior Woman's Club member. For tickets or more information call 684-6152, 699-1219 or 682-2037.

The Tubb's entry-way table was hand-carved in Mexico City. "I had it made according to my specifications," Mrs. Tubb said. The wall above the table is decorated with an "authentic Saudi Arabian horse blanket." Other furniture in the home, such as a sofa table and a bench in the living room, were made by the Tubbs' son.

Mrs. Tubb said the living room mantle, the patio fountain, the columns on the porch and the pedestals supporting the glass-topped dining room table were hand-carved from Mexican Cantera stone. "The dining room chairs are covered with pigskin," she said, "... very Middle Eastern."

In the guest bedroom, sunlight streams in the large south-facing window.

The bath next to the guest room features a brass sink from Mexico.

In the library, the fireplace opens into the living room fireplace, with an opening big enough to move a couch through, if necessary.

Pastel blue makes the child's room a little girl's delight.

The master bedroom features a "bed made in Santa Fe," Mrs. Tubb said. The aqua, terra cotta and peach color scheme in the master bedroom were chosen because "it's like looking at the ocean," she said.

Please see HOME, Page 2C

The master bedroom has a Southwestern decor featuring a color scheme of aqua, peach and terra cotta.

Handpainted tiles are featured above the master tub.

Museum of the Southwest will present "A Trip Back in Time" during spring break Tuesday-Saturday. Children 6-12 may participate in learning about customs and crafts of Midland's early inhabitants.

Activities, planned in conjunction with the exhibit "Early Plainsmen: Archaeology of Midland/Ector Counties," will include making pictographs, war bonnets, performing Indian dances, and a mini-dig.

Emily Ulmschneider will teach children 6-8 1-2 p.m. Tuesday-Saturday and Sally Gillespy will teach children 9-12 from 2:30-4 p.m. on the same days.

Ms. Ulmschneider has masters degrees in geology and biology. She is a former exploration geologist, scientific illustrator and photographer, and has taught at the Sibley Nature Center.

Ms. Gillespy has a degree in anthropology from the University of Texas at Dallas. She is a member of the Texas Archaeological Society.

Registration for classes is due by Thursday. Cost is $18 per child for Museum members and $20 for non-members. Scholarships are available. For information call 683-2882.

Substitute items while shopping

New York Times News Service

Sunday shopping ought to be relaxed and Sunday shoppers should be prepared to make last-minute substitutions.

Chances are that at least one item on your shopping list won't be available at your market.

Here is a menu that does as nicely for a hearty Sunday lunch as for Sunday supper, and it could not be more flexible.

If you cannot find garlic sausage, use Italian hot or sweet sausage, bratwurst or any other flavorful sausage. If the market is short of red peppers, use yellow peppers. If neither is available, use green peppers.

Finding tiny new potatoes is often a chore at this time of year.

If you're not lucky, use large new potatoes instead. The only reason the tiny ones are recommended is that they do not have to be cut and cutting potatoes before boiling them robs them of their vitamin C.

Larger potatoes have to be cut in order to cook quickly and if you want to execute this meal in 20 minutes the vitamin C will have to be sacrificed for speed.

There are only two dishes in this menu, one of which calls for nothing more than boiling the sausages. The hot potato-pepper salad contains the starch and the vegetables to give you a well-rounded meal.

If this meal has less meat than you prefer, use more sausages.

GARLIC SAUSAGES

1/4 pound garlic sausages like kielbasa, or Italian sweet or hot sausages or bratwurst
German-style mustard or grainy mustard

Bring to a boil enough water to cover the sausages when added.

Add sausages, cover and cook about 15 minutes, depending on style of sausage. Drain.
Serve with mustard.

WARM PEPPERED POTATOES

10 ounces tiny new potatoes
1 large red bell pepper
1 large yellow bell pepper
1 large onion
2 tablespoons olive oil
1/4 pound mushrooms
1 tablespoon white-wine vinegar
Salt and freshly ground black pepper to taste
2 tablespoons minced parsley.

Scrub potatoes; do not peel. If large potatoes are used instead of small ones, cut up potatoes. Put in a saucepan and cover with water; cover pot and bring to boil. Cook until potatoes are tender, 15 to 18 minutes.

Wash and seed peppers and slice on thin slicing blade of food processor.

Peel and quarter onion and slice on thin slicing blade of food processor.

Heat 1 tablespoon oil in skillet large enough to hold peppers, onion and mushrooms.

Saute peppers and onions over medium-high heat. Meanwhile wash, trim and slice mushrooms on thin slicing blade. Stir pepper mixture often and add mushrooms and continue cooking until onions are tender.

Combine remaining oil and vinegar in bowl large enough to hold vegetables.

When pepper mixture is cooked, add to bowl; when potatoes are tender, drain and add to bowl: Season with salt and pepper, sprinkle with parsley and serve.

Yield: 2 servings.

gherkins and melons.

Pumpkins are not vegetables; they are fruit — berries, to be precise, members of Cucurbitaceae family, which also includes cucumbers, pumpkins, like blueberries, raspberries or tomatoes, have the distinguishing characteristic of being formed from the pistil of a single flower.

HOME

"In summer, I have tons of plants on the patio," which can be seen from the master bedroom.

The patio also features a fountain made from Mexican Cantera stone.

Over the bathtub in the master bathroom is a tile mural Mrs. Tubb acquired in Santa Fe. "I had it a long time before we got the house," she said.

Other handpainted tile pieces from Santa Fe, which add to the Tubb's Southwestern decor, can be found in the kitchen, where the wooden cabinets and doors are made from ash, and "the skylight is lined with aspen," said Mrs. Tubb.

The home was a labor of love for Mrs. Tubb.

"Building the house took five months," she said, "and we did not have one headache."

"It's basically my dream house," she added. "I'd like to stay here forever."

Wine served as complement to appetizers

By ROBIN KLEVEN
Copley News Service

Food and wine go beautifully together. On that much, everyone agrees.

But when it comes to finding the perfect match, things aren't so simple. Do red wines only go with beef? What goes with Chardonnay? What do you serve with pizza? Chinese? Hors d'oeuvres?

Before you throw up your hands and order a keg of beer, consider this: There is no real right and wrong. You can experiment with different pairings, a method that has led to some of my favorite combinations. You can use the classic affinities, developed over the centuries. And you can sample some intriguing pairings devised by professional chefs. Below, we offer all three.

My favorite combinations often involve easy-to-fix or takeout foods coupled with high-quality, reasonably priced wines. A good wine, chosen to complement a specific food, always makes a simple meal special.

Appetizers: A dry sparkling wine is a great complement to most hors d'oeuvres, especially a flaky phyllo tiropita or some tangy stuffed grape leaves. Serve these Greek appetizers with inexpensive Spanish bubbly such as Paul Cheneau or Codorniu; premium California sparkling wines (Culbertson, Schramsberg or Chandon) or high quality French Champagnes (Bollinger, Ayala, Roederer, Piper-Heidsieck). Let your budget be your guide.

PIZZA: A sausage-and-pepperoni pizza pairs remarkably well with a peppery red Cotes-du-Rhone, especially those produced by E. Guigal, Paul Jaboulet Aine and Chateau D'Aiguesville. If you want to drink Italian, choose a Chianti Classico Riserva. Powerful California Syrahs, such as those from McDowell Valley or Preston, make another great match.

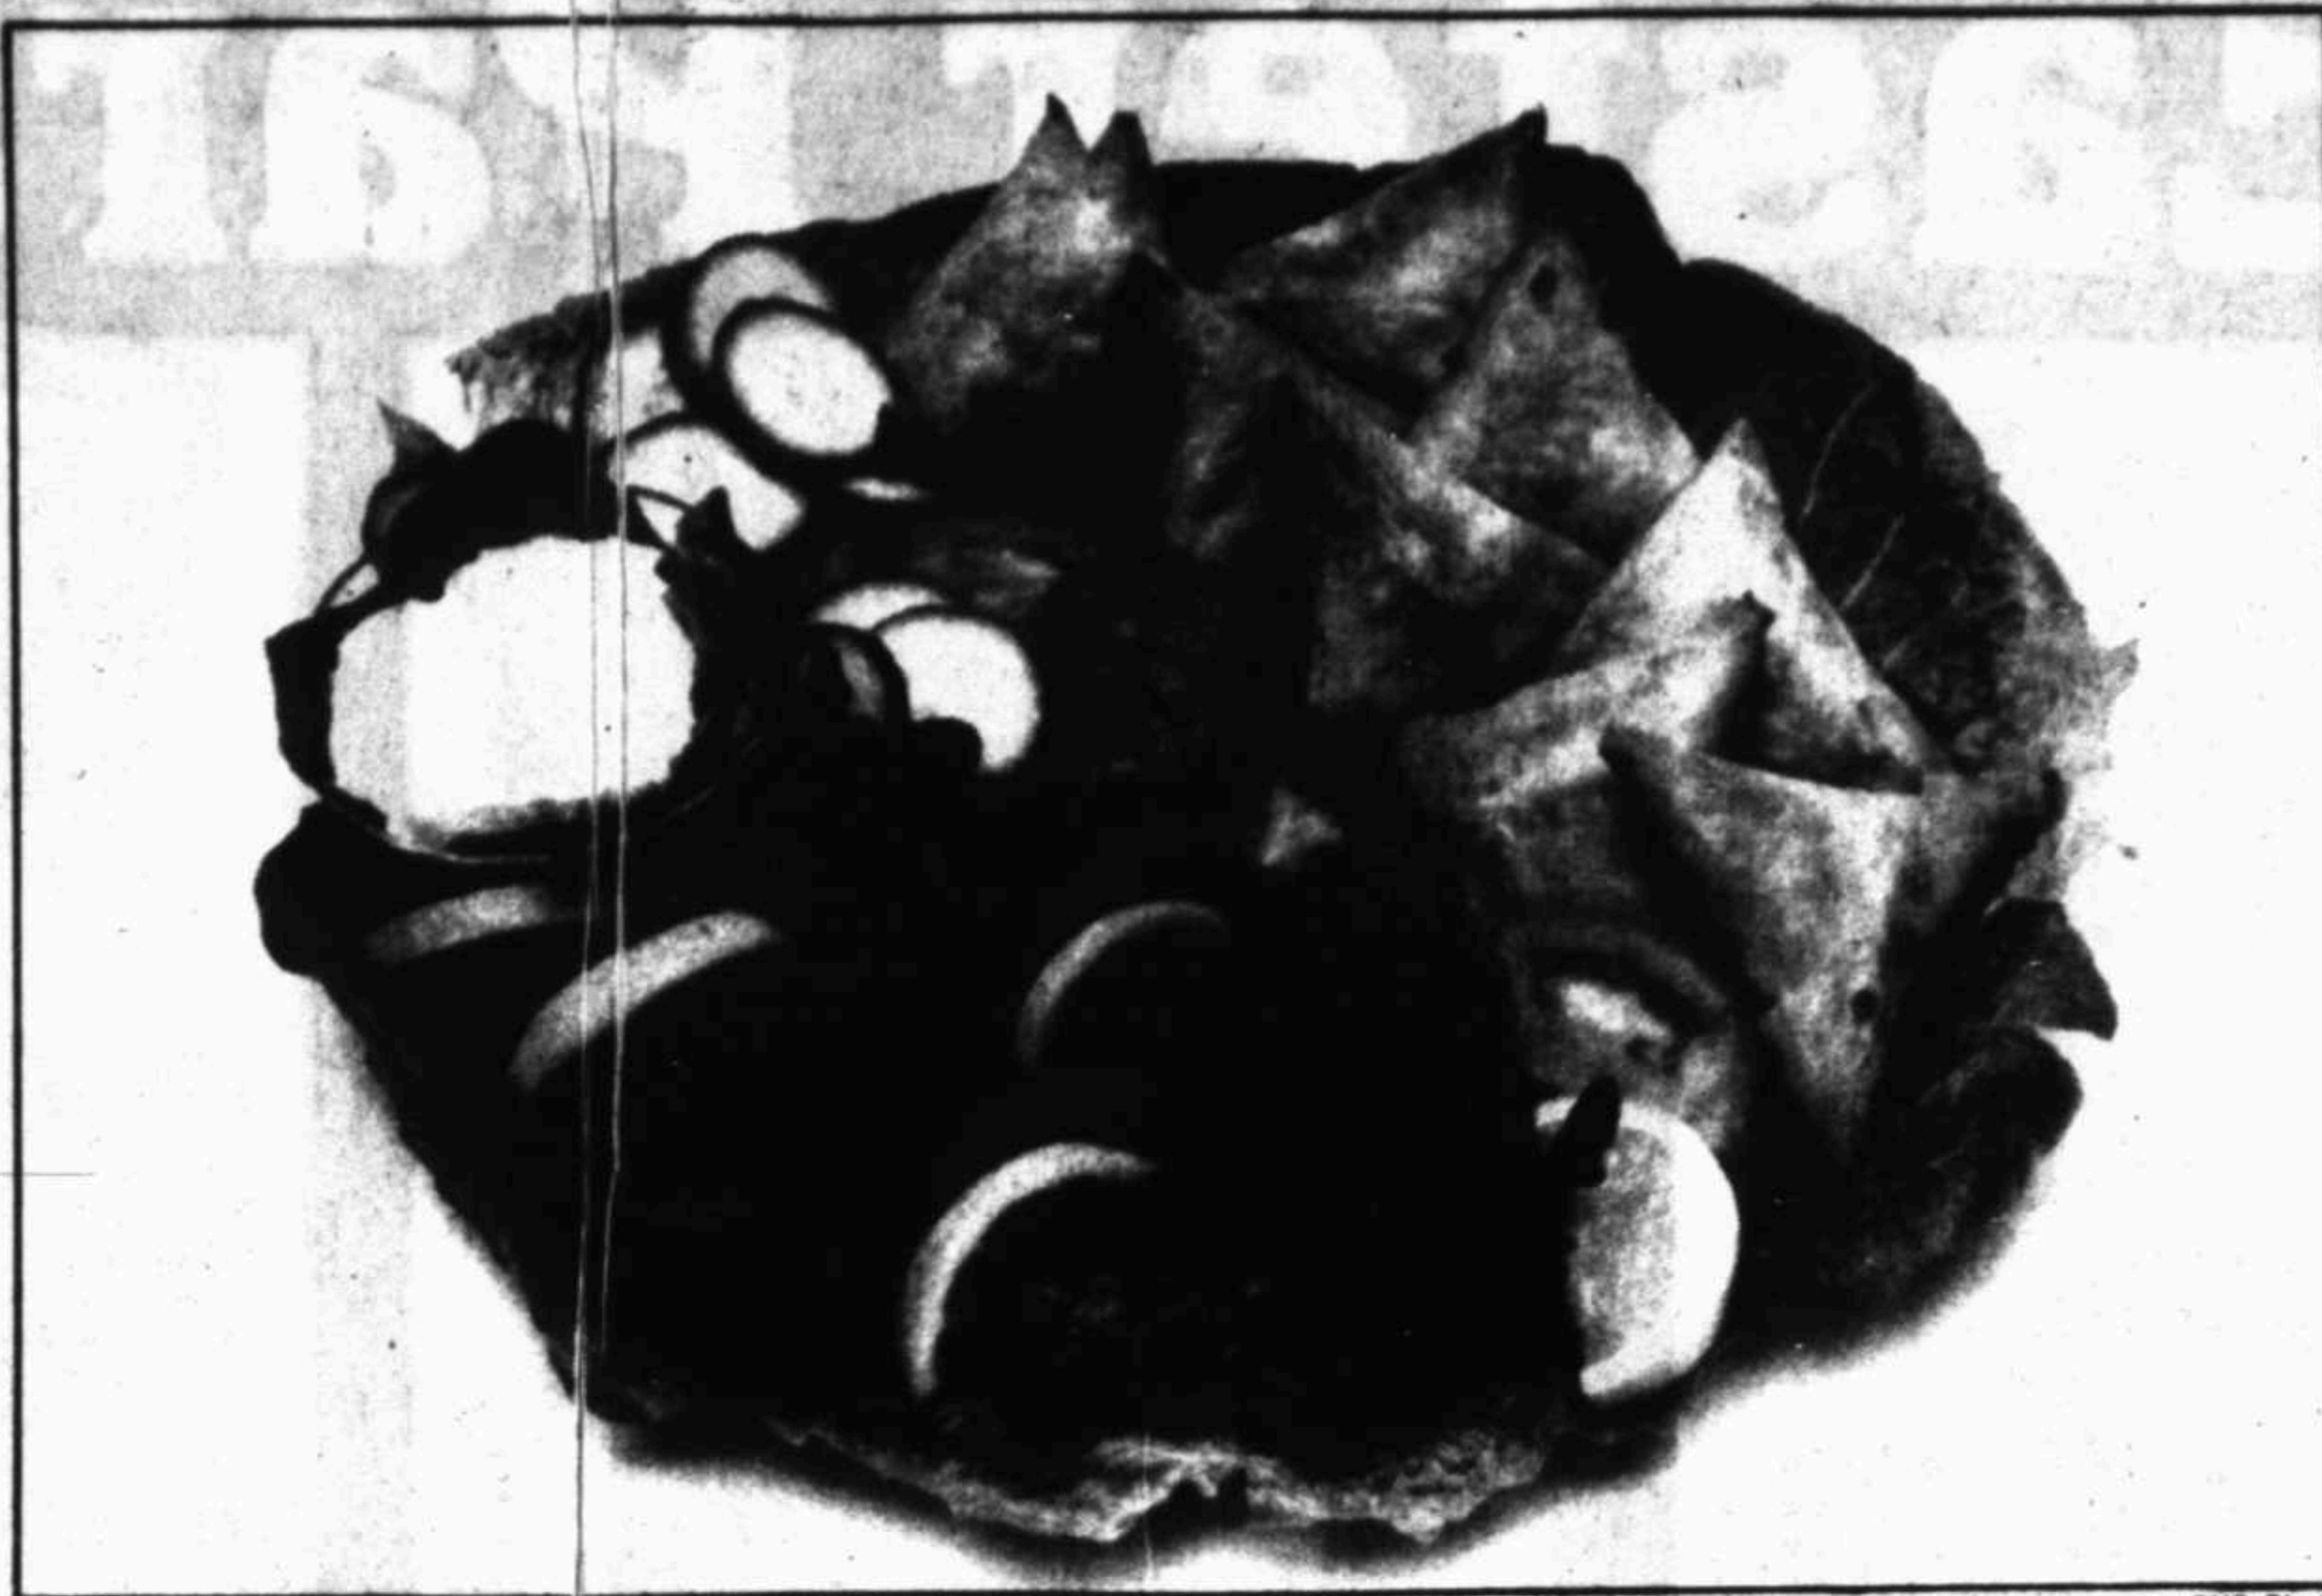

Roast chicken: A plain roasted chicken becomes a work of art when matched with a lush California Chardonnay (Simi, Hanna and Kistler are a few choices) or a fine white Burgundy, such as a Meursault or Premier Cru Chablis. The same chicken, prepared with garlic and rosemary or filled with a spicy stuffing, should be paired with a flavorful Rhone red, such as Chateaufort-du-Pape or Cote Rotie; or a Merlot produced by Cuvaision, Clos du Bois or Duckhorn.

Chinese food: Chicken and pork dishes and smoky pan-fried noodles shine with dry Gewurztraminers from Alsace. Trimbach is an especially good producer. A California Gewurztraminer from Monticello, Hacienda or Joseph Phelps would be another fine choice. Don't serve these wines with extremely fiery Szechwan fare, though, or the subtleties of the wine will be lost.

At a recent food and wine pairing seminar at the Ritz-Carlton in Laguna Niguel, Calif., there were as many opinions as there were participants. By the end of the meeting, the panelists were still arguing about whether wine goes with chocolate and which kind of cheese belongs with Cabernet.

Moderator Gerald Boyd, beverage editor of Restaurant Hospitality magazine, summed up the situation. "There has been a lot written about wine and food, to the point of people being tired of it," he said. "There has to be an infinite number of opinions."

"I thought it would be interesting if we went to the source — and had some winery chefs talk to us about food and wine. It's their job as the executive chef or culinary director to come up with different dishes that work very well with their particular wines."

A dry sparkling wine would complement these tangy stuffed grape leaves and flaky phyllo tiropita appetizers.

THE SIX PANELISTS — five executive chefs and one vineyard owner, all from California wine country — offered a lively perspective on the art of matching.

Patricia Windisch, executive chef, Beringer Vineyards in Napa.

Windisch started with the basics of matching, using a lemon, a sugar cube and a glass of '86 Beringer Sauvignon Blanc to show the inverse relationship of acids in wine and acid flavors in foods. Taste an acidic food, and the tart acid flavors in your wine are reduced and softened. Taste a sweet food, and the wine's acidity will return.

"This is a key to food and wine pairing," Windisch explained. "If you have a wine that's high in acid, that you don't want to be high in acid (such as a young Sauvignon Blanc, a dry Gewurztraminer or a citrusy young Chardonnay), add some acid to your food. Add a squeeze of lemon or a little shot of vinegar to a sauce. It will bring that sauce up to the level of the acid in the wine."

"If you have a wine you feel is a little too sweet, you can bring the sweetness of the food up and lower the level of sugar in the wine. You can use fruits, parsnips, carrots, to add a very subtle sweetness to foods (such as a stew, a sauce or a meat dish)."

THE PALATE is affected by what you eat and drink while cooking. Windisch added. "If you've had Nutrasweet, it has an ingredient called aspartame which coats the palate tremendously," she cautioned. "It should be kept out of any food and wine pairing or any cooking. If you drink diet soda while you're cooking your meals, you can't taste your wine as well."

Elaine Bell, culinary director, Sterling Vineyards in Napa; president, Elaine Bell Catering Co. in Sonoma, Calif.

Like most winery chefs, Bell starts out with a wine that she wants to serve, and matches the food to that.

"I taste the wine, and I try to get a vision of what comes to mind," she said. "Does this wine make me think of prawns, veal, lentils? From there, I might just think of one ingredient, like prawns. I taste it in my mind. Do I want to balance flavors of the food and the wine, or contrast them? I either find harmony or contrast."

Bell went for harmony in her inspired pairing, a prawn baked in a garlicky pesto sauce matched with an '86 Sterling Napa Chardonnay that had a hint of citrus flavor.

Carolyn Wentz, executive chef, Wentz Sparkling Wine Cellars in Livermore.

Wentz is another fan of the "choose a wine, then a food" theory. "I think of the wine I want, then what food will go with that," she said. "You can complement or contrast."

"For fish, with a buttery sauce over the fish, use a rich buttery Chardonnay. With grilled fish, try a smokier, more aggressive Sauvignon Blanc."

"Sauvignon Blanc is one of the best wines to pair with foods, because of the nice acids they have in them which go well with a lot of different dishes, particularly something creamy and rich like cheese."

HER MATCH featured a dried pear stuffed with blue cheese and a 1986 Wentz Bros. Sauvignon Blanc. The pear, with its slight sweetness and strong, tangy cheese flavor, brought to the fruity, grassy-tasting wine a pleasing roundness.

Richard Alexei, culinary director, Monticello Cellars in Napa.

Like Bell, Alexei thinks about his wine first, and then his food.

"I'm amused when I see these lists and charts that say, 'this wine with chicken, this with beef.' Probably the most ridiculous thing in the world is to say, 'This wine goes with pasta.' Anyone who knows Italian cooking knows you can have a pasta with a strong sauce made with tomato, some extremely strong game, some heady wild brown mushrooms from the forest. Would you pair that with a very delicate white wine?"

One of Alexei's favorite combinations is that of a fresh, spicy white wine with slow-cooked onions, in the form of onion soup or onion pie. For the seminar, he paired a lively Monticello Gewurztraminer, very fruity and aromatic, with an onion tart.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You will have the support of someone both wealthy and influential. Travel will boost your spirits while enhancing your career. Consistency is the key to success. Hang in there even when things move at a snail's pace. In November, look for an opportunity to get in on the ground floor of a wonderful financial arrangement. Reserving more time for romance will help you build a lasting relationship.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: catcher Bo Diaz, actress Joan Crawford, psychoanalyst Erich Fromm, basketball star Moses Malone, scientist Wernher von Braun, director Mark Rydell.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Stick to routine matters and postpone starting a creative project. Bring new ideas to the attention of higher-ups. Children offer some valuable suggestions; try them. Fresh approaches enjoy favorable influences.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Cut yourself loose from negative people and unproductive methods. A young person needs more of your time. Stop dwelling on past mistakes. Forgive and forget. A new corner enriches your social life. GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A relationship will be tested in a unique way. Work alone at least part of the day and you will accomplish more. Limit spending on business entertaining. Romance is jolly. Share good news.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A change of attitude salvages a domestic relationship. Forget past grievances. Pursue romance with zeal and you could end up finding the perfect mate. A phone call delights you. Be appreciative.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your stubbornness could work to your advantage today in spite of mate's or partner's reaction. Romance deserves a second chance. Assert yourself. Do not say "yes" when you mean "no."

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Contact someone influential about developing an original idea. A secret romance could have you walking on air. Watch your step! Make a special effort to get to social events on time.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Arm yourself with the latest facts and figures before going into important meetings. Share the compliments and you will get wonderful assistance. A good time to launch your own business. SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Some unusual, intriguing people want to be your friends. You are gratified by their attention, even if their habits seem extravagant or wasteful. Improved communication at work lightens your load.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Not a good time to force issues. Although you feel there is a crisis, you could be wrong. Look at things from a new angle and your understanding will increase tremendously.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Someone who means a great deal to you is very touchy now. Tread gently. Work is demanding but there is no running away from it. Return phone calls and answer letters promptly.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Giving things away, often unexpectedly, exalts you. Your work on someone else's behalf is rewarded. You have a strong sense of purpose and can expect to make steady progress.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): An understanding with someone who means a lot to you firms up your sense of purpose. Your inquiring mind leads to a serious revelation. Romance looks rosy!

Things were good at the bridge club—Trump Coup Tommy was back and everybody's wallet was benefitting. So what if, when the trumps didn't break, he played like a genius. The rest of the time he was donating to all and sundry, and no one complained about the occasional setback. The regulars had learned never to double Tommy when trumps weren't breaking; but silence didn't save East on this hand.

Trump Coup Tommy wasted no time in cue-bidding the enemy suit once his partner showed a powerhouse with a good heart fit. North could hardly do less than bid six hearts.

West led the king of clubs, and it did not take Tommy long to play the hand. He won the opening lead in dummy and cashed the ace of trumps, and the moment he saw West stuff a club, he was a man transformed. His eyes took on a steely glint, and he played swiftly and surely.

After cashing the table's two diamonds, Tommy ruffed a club. Back to the ace of spades for another club ruff, then a diamond ruff. Lastly, the queen of spades was taken, followed by a spade to the king. When East followed helplessly to all these tricks, Tommy was ready to claim the balance but one.

Everyone was down to three cards. East held three trumps, dummy two trumps and a spade and Tommy two trumps and a diamond. Tommy simply led the board's last spade, and East was a goner. If he ruffed low, Tommy would overruff and cash the king of trumps for his 12th trick, so East was forced to split his honors. Now Tommy discarded his diamond, and East had to lead away from his Q 8 of hearts into Tommy's combined K 10 ten-ace. Making six-odd.

Dear Tom,
Thanks for the change bond!
I see Bonds now pay high market...and interest...and that will really help me when I set up my own

Can't wait till school's out to see you all again!

Love,
Nancy

Dick Clark hands over baton, spins out of 'Bandstand' after 33 years

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Dick Clark, the ageless rock 'n' roll emcee whose "American Bandstand" gave teen-agers everything from the jitterbug to Madonna, says he is leaving the show after 33 years as host.

"American Bandstand," syndicated nationwide, will move to USA Network on April 8 with David Hirsch as host.

"This is actually an exciting day for me," Clark said Tuesday. "Like David, I was 26 when I started hosting Bandstand. After 33 years, I finally decided it was time to give someone else a chance."

Hirsch, a Detroit native, was discovered by filling in for Clark on the show. He was a producer for "USA's CAMP MIDNITE," a late-night talk show on USA Network, which is seen in more than 46 million homes through 10,000 cable affiliates.

Hirsch had to audition for "American Bandstand." Clark's age, 59, had nothing to do with the decision, said an associate who spoke on condition of anonymity. In the past, Clark has indicated he wanted to relinquish his host role by 1990.

"Bandstand," as it was first titled, hit the TV air waves in September 1952 on WFIL-TV in Philadelphia with Bob Horn and Lee Stewart as hosts. But it was Clark, who took over in 1956, that became the show's symbol, even as it made him a multimillionaire.

On Aug. 5, 1957, "American Bandstand" debuted on the ABC network, quickly becoming a national success.

Generations of teen-agers saw the clean-cut, carefully suited and coiffed Clark preside over a studio full of equally clean-cut teens, dancing and posing for the cameras.

Clark, who never danced on the show, became the butt of some jokes for maintaining his boyish looks over the years. He once compared the burden to that of female sex symbols.

"They're constantly told how wonderful they look, but it gets to be a drag after a while, because someday the looks have gotta go," he said. "It would be nice to be allowed to age gracefully."

Off screen, Clark has acknowledged that he has a temper and is intolerant of mistakes by subordinates. But in his "Bandstand" persona, teens saw him as a friendly, hip father figure.

The show was a must for many performers. During its three decades, it has provided the first national exposure to scores of performers, including Madonna, the Beach Boys, Linda Ronstadt, Jerry Lee Lewis, James Brown, Stevie Wonder and Neil Diamond.

Others making nationwide debuts on the show included Chubby Checker, Buddy Holly, Sonny & Cher, The Doors, Barry Manilow, Prince, Pat Benatar, Sheena Easton, Cyndi Lauper and Billy Idol. "American Bandstand" also launched songs onto the best-seller charts and introduced America to such dances as the Twist, Jerk, Bunny Hop, Hustle and Break Dancing.

In 1987, "American Bandstand" was entered into the Guinness Book of World Records as television's longest-running variety program. It has earned five Emmy awards.

The show has been on the air 37 years, through more than 6,000 hours, played more than 65,000 records and been host to more than 600,000 dancing teen-agers.

In a 1986 interview with USA Today, Clark said he helped in "keeping the music alive" in the early days of televised rock, but described himself as a fortunate man of limited abilities.

"I don't have any basic talents myself," he said. "I have the ability to work on television and feel comfortable with it. That's probably some sort of a mild form of talent. Beyond that, I don't get too serious about it."

NEW YORK (AP) — Rudolf Nureyev's great leaps will replace the Rockettes' high kicking at Radio City Music Hall in May when he dances seven performances in five days with the Paris Opera Ballet.

It will be the first full-length ballet program at the 6,000-seat hall known for its vaudeville shows, movies and pop music.

"Until you have performed at Radio City Music Hall, you have not performed in New York," said Nureyev, the Soviet-born dancer and artistic director of the French troupe.

Nureyev, who at 51 is far from hanging up his ballet slippers, will dance two works in the company's May 17-21 engagement — "Petrushka" and "The Afternoon of a Faun."

The dancer, who defected to the West in 1961, said he hoped to dance again in the Soviet Union. "There might be a possibility, nothing definite, yet ... but there's something in the air," he said.

Nureyev

CHICAGO (AP) — Natalya Negoda, who thinks her latest exposure may be a bit much for her comrades in the Soviet Union, says she became an actress because she was lazy and wasn't good in foreign languages and math.

"But, of course, I have a big ego and a lot of pride," she said. "I'd love to be famous all over."

The 25-year-old actress appears in a 10-page pictorial in May's Playboy magazine and talks about her film, "Little Vera," for which she was named best actress at Chicago's 24th International Film Festival last year.

"Playboy is pretty fast for us in Russia," she said.

The film, directed by Vasily Pichul, also won as best picture at the festival. Ms. Negoda stars as a working-class girl in the film, which features nudity, promiscuity, domestic violence and alcohol and drug use.

Ms. Negoda said the film's Moscow premiere provoked some angry reactions.

"At the Moscow premiere, during the sexual scene, they were yelling, 'How dare you?' Don't forget, we are a hypocritical society," she said.

NOME, Alaska (AP) — Musher Bob Hoyte has won the uncoveted Red Lantern Award, a trophy given the last person to complete the 1,168-mile Iditarod Trail Sled Dog Race.

Hoyte of Ithaca, N.Y., reached the end of the trail Tuesday evening to take 39th place in the contest that began March 4 in Anchorage. He drove his team along the community's downtown street with a police escort as cheering observers looked on.

The race began March 4 with 49 mushers at the starting line in Anchorage. Ten dropped out.

DEAR ABBY

Telemarketer defends his right to 'reach out and touch' people

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: You recently ran a series of scathing letters condemning telemarketing. It was discussed at length on one of our local radio call-in talk shows, and telemarketers took a verbal beating that made telemarketing in this area very difficult.

Van Buren

I have been in sales all my life, and for years I listened to people gripe about our door-to-door salespeople. "They are too persistent," "They always come at the wrong time." Then when we tried mail-outs, people complained about all the junk mail they were getting. We tried radio and television advertising, but people griped that we were aired too often and came across like used-car salespeople (my apology to used-car salespeople; however, that stigma persists). Even newspaper advertisements drew fire.

So, we turned to calling people on the telephone in order to sell our product, and never has there been a more economical way to reach people in the history of America — and what happens? People complain, and you add fuel to the flame!

Who in all of God's creation ever said that we would go through life without interruptions? What makes people think that they possess an unalienable right never to be approached by anyone at any time for any reason that they feel to be an improper interruption?

So, Abby, please remember: Peeking in your window while you are taking a shower is a direct violation of your privacy; telemarketing is only one of life's interruptions, but whose efficiency and effectiveness to this economically struggling nation far outweigh its inconvenience.

— TELECHIEF IN BLOOMINGTON, ILL.

DEAR TELECHIEF: You rattled the wrong cage. I am still of the opinion that one's telephone is for the convenience of the person who pays for it, and that solicitors and market researchers should find some other way to sell their products or gather information.

Some people sleep at odd hours; others may be ill, or otherwise occupied. Why should we accept a salesperson's telephone call as "one of life's interruptions" as though it were an act of God?

The late Supreme Court Justice Louis Brandeis said, "One of our most cherished rights is the right to be left alone." (I'm with Louie!)

DEAR ABBY: I was amused to read the letter from Wallace A. Krapf, who stated unequivocally that a friendship cannot survive where there is a business relationship. (He specifically deplored relatives in business.) Mr. Krapf may be interested in our story:

My husband and I met in 1974 when I took a job as his secretary. We worked together for four years, then we both moved to another company in the same department.

In 1979 he moved in with me, and in 1982 we were married (a second marriage for both of us). He left the company I was with for a short time, but returned to become the manager of my department.

We still work for the same company and I am his assistant. We ride to work together every morning and go home the same way. And whenever it's possible, we go to lunch together. We have never taken separate vacations because we enjoy being together and are each other's best friend.

We both feel that we have an ideal, enduring relationship and wouldn't trade it for the world.

I know this probably sounds like I made it up, but you may sign me ... WOULDN'T HAVE BELIEVED IT EITHER, BUT IT'S TRUE

DEAR WOULDN'T, ETC.: Now that's what I call "togetherness." Siamese twins could not be closer. If it works for you, bravo and congratulations. May it ever be thus.

DEAR ABBY: Here is another reason why the hostess should tell her guests who else she's invited to her party: Many times I've arrived at a party and I see my next-door neighbor there! Then I think, wouldn't it have been nice if I had known in advance that she had been invited so we could have ridden together and visited on the way? — DENNY

DEAR DENNY: "Riding together" can be very nice — unless your neighbor wants to go home earlier or later than you.

(Problems? Write to Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069.)

Torte flavored with raspberry

Associated Press

Special occasion coming up? This lavish torte will be the perfect dessert. It's a hassle-free choice because you bake the cake and assemble the layers a day ahead.

ALMOND RASPBERRY TORTE

2¼ teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
¾ cup margarine or butter
1 cup sugar
1½ teaspoons vanilla
3 eggs
¾ cup milk
½ cup seedless red raspberry jam
Almond Filling (recipe follows)
1½ cups whipping cream
Toasted sliced almonds
¼ cup seedless red raspberry jam

Grease and lightly flour two 9-inch round cake pans; set aside. Stir together flour, baking powder and salt. In large mixer bowl beat margarine on medium speed about 30 seconds. Add sugar and vanilla; beat until well combined.

Add eggs, one at a time, beating after each addition. Add dry ingredients and milk alternately to beaten mixture. (Batter may appear curdled.) Spread batter in prepared pans. Bake in 375-degree oven for 20 to 25 minutes or until a wooden toothpick inserted in the center comes out clean. Cool 10 minutes in pans on wire racks. Remove from pans; cool completely.

Cut cake layers in half horizontally. Stir the ½ cup jam. To assemble, spread one cake layer with one-third of Almond Filling, then with 2 rounded tablespoons jam. Repeat layering 2 more times. Top with final cake layer. Cover cake tightly and refrigerate at least 6 hours or overnight.

No more than 1 hour before serving, beat cream to stiff peaks; spread over cake. Press almonds around base of cake. Just before serving, stir remaining jam. Drizzle on top of cake. Serve at once.

ALMOND FILLING:

In a small mixer bowl crumble one 8-ounce can almond paste. With an electric mixer beat in 1-3rd cup softened margarine or butter. Add 2 tablespoons milk; beat until smooth.

Forecasters say worst of winter over

By JULIE HILLRICHES
Staff Writer

Despite a new record low of 22 degrees set in Midland this morning, National Weather Service forecasters say the worst of the winter weather is over.

Approximately 3 inches of snow blanketed the Tall City Tuesday, equating to .09 of an inch of actual precipitation, according to the NWS headquarters at Midland International Airport.

Tuesday's high only reached 34 degrees; this morning's record low erased a previous record of 24 degrees, set on this date in 1952.

The high Tuesday fell 53 degrees short of breaking the record of 87, set on that date in 1934.

The spring snowstorm wreaked havoc among some Midland motorists. Cpl. Jim White, public information officer for the Midland Police Department, said in reference to the 24 minor automobile accidents reported.

However, the Texas Department of Public Safety had no weather-related accidents to report this morning.

Meanwhile, Midland International Airport escaped the storm without any serious complications, according to spokesman Ken Day.

Elsewhere across the state, some sleet and light snow continued to fall in portions of the Texas Hill Country early today, but the National Weather Service called off a snow advisory for the area.

The freezing precipitation was caused by an upper level disturbance over Central Texas that also produced scattered areas of rain from the central Brazos Valley to South Central Texas and Southeast Texas.

In addition, Dalhart recorded one inch of snowfall, while four inches fell in Amarillo. Lubbock had three inches, Big Spring one inch, and a trace was recorded in San Angelo.

NWS forecasters say clearing skies and sunshine should put a quick end to the snow that fell on the Midland-Odessa area. The warming trend should continue for the next four to five days.

Forecasters say temperatures will warm up tonight under fair skies. A low in near 40 degrees is expected and winds will be light and variable.

The forecast for Thursday calls for mostly sunny skies and a high in the mid-70s. Winds will be out of the south at 10 to 20 mph.

Robbery motive ruled out in deputy's death

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Robbery was not a motive in the shooting death Monday night of an Ector County Sheriff's Department deputy reserve, a Ward County lawman says.

Meanwhile, results from an autopsy performed Tuesday night on the 35-year-old man have not been received by Ward County Peace Justice Ronald Ray, he said this morning.

Terry Gene Molder, an eight-year veteran of the department, was found shot to death in an Interstate 20 ditch one mile east of Monahans shortly after the 1988 GMC pickup he was driving rolled over, reports said.

Investigators at the scene found Molder's wallet, badge and other identification on his body. Ward County Chief Deputy Lynn Holland said today.

"There was no robbery," Holland confirmed today.

In addition, a Colt .45-caliber automatic pistol was found at the scene. Lawmen have not determined if the gun was Molder's or if it was the pistol used in the shooting, the chief deputy said.

"No definite conclusion is being made or suggested," Holland said.

The autopsy was performed by Midland pathologist David Shneidman at Odessa's Medical Center Hospital. Present were two deputies from Ward County, a Pecos-based Department of Public Safety Trooper and an Ector County Sheriff's Department deputy, Holland said.

Ray said this morning he would not release any information about the cause of death until he received the written report.

Molder, off duty at the time, was shot once in the chest Monday evening around 6 p.m.

Witnesses at the scene who had stopped to render aid to Molder after the rollover said he was "uninjured and walking around."

Between the time they left to call traffic authorities and the time a DPS trooper arrived at the scene, Molder was shot to death, reports said.

MISD will go ahead with inoculations against measles

From Staff Reports

The Midland Independent School District is going ahead with Thursday's plan to inoculate hundreds of students for measles despite a delay in confirming one diagnosed case at Midland High School.

Doctors Friday diagnosed an MHS junior and an Emerson Elementary School fifth-grader as having rubeola.

The Emerson case was ruled out Tuesday, and the results of a blood test to confirm the MHS case won't be ready until Thursday. Gretchen Parsley, a Midland County Health Department spokeswoman, said this morning.

Charges expected in narcotics case

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

An Abilene woman who stumbled into a Midland police narcotics operation at Midland International Airport was jailed Tuesday after officers allegedly found her illegally carrying hundreds of pills.

Tamara Lynn Hunter, 24, 802 Plum St. in Abilene, was expected to be charged today with two counts of possession of a controlled substance with intent to deliver, narcotics division Sgt. David Garcia said. She is also wanted in Abilene on a warrant for possession of cocaine, Garcia said. Garcia said officers received a tip from the Ontario, Calif., Police Department that persons carrying narcotics might be arriving on a Southwest Airlines flight Tuesday, so surveillance was set up.

"The information had been correct in the past, so we thought we would act on it," Garcia said, referring to a similar tip from the Ontario department last month which resulted in the arrest of two men on cocaine trafficking charges.

When a Southwest Airlines flight arrived at 4:55 p.m. Tuesday, officers noticed a group of individuals and a woman, later identified as Ms. Hunter.

"They were acting real nervous, and were looking to see if anyone was watching them," Garcia said. "Then the one group got into a car, and she got into a cab and took off."

The group of passengers in the car were stopped and searched. "They came up clean," he said.

The cab was followed into Midland, and stopped in front of an automobile dealership on U.S. Highway 80. In the woman's baggage, officers found 132 tablets of Dilaudid, which was described as "pharmaceutical heroin." No prescription was found.

Local lawmen encouraged by program to reduce drinking

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Midland law enforcement officers say they are encouraged by a just-released study that credits a piece of thin cardboard with a reduced drunken driving rate.

A Vermont town's rate of driving with hazardous blood-alcohol levels was only about half that of a similar community without the gadget — a card which allows drinkers to figure their blood-alcohol levels — according to a study published in this month's American Journal of Public Health.

Midland County Attorney Mark Dettman, who prosecutes misdemeanor DWI offenders, said study results illustrate a facet of human nature.

"I think a lot of people go out and they have some drinks, but they don't think they are drunk enough that they shouldn't be driving," Dettman said. "But if they would take the test, they might re-evaluate their situation."

The study involved three Vermont communities, two with populations of about 5,000 and a third approaching 12,000. They were similar in terms of education level, household income and the proportion of males among residents aged 16 to 29.

In one community, an education program featured wallet-size card and small cardboard dials for estimating blood-alcohol concentration according to body weight and the number of drinks consumed. About 3,000 dials were handed out in bars, stores, restaurants and gas stations.

Customers were trained to use the dials at those outlets and in television announcements. A second town was exposed only to the TV announcements, and the third town received no portion of the program.

Six months after the program began, police stopped all traffic on six weekend nights in the three communities. Blood alcohol concentrations were measured in hundreds of drivers.

Oilfield equipment recovered

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Oilfield equipment believed stolen in Midland County turned up in Tuesday's search of a Cisco well service company owned by two men jailed on theft charges, law officers said today.

The equipment, including a welder believed stolen in December, was found at the Tri-Con Well Service Co. in Cisco, Texas Ranger Capt. Gene Powell said today. The search was part of the widening investigation into a ring of thieves investigators say operated in three states and stole equipment valued at hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Jimmy Greenway and Wesley Dixon, both of Cisco, remained jailed in the Shackelford County Jail in Albany, on theft charges, Powell said. Their bond amount was not available.

Other arrests in the case are "possible, maybe today," the officer said. He did not elaborate, he said "because of the ongoing investigation."

The two men, who were arrested early Tuesday near Albany, were expected to be moved to jails in Haskell or Jones counties, Powell said.

Investigators became aware more than a year ago of an extensive oilfield theft operation, which concentrated on pump jack engines, when dozens of the engines began disappearing from Permian Basin counties, and from oil leases in New Mexico and Oklahoma. A month ago, Texas Ranger Calvin Cox of Abilene identified two suspects and an "extensive" surveillance operation began, according to investigators.

That surveillance culminated with Tuesday's arrest, Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter said today.

"Now the major portion of the work really begins," said Painter, whose oilfield theft investigator, Butch Brazell, worked with Midland Texas Ranger C.J. Havard on the case. "Now they have to backtrack and find out who they sold the stuff to. They have to check a bunch of records."

Charges may be filed in all three states against the men, who were "familiar" with law enforcement, Painter said.

"They were so sophisticated in their business, they had police scanners for each state," the sheriff said. "They were monitoring law enforcement agencies everywhere."

The arrest also turned up a humorous note. The name of the business — "Tri-Con" — was so named because Greenway and Dixon, and a third man who officers have not identified, have all served time in state prison.

Israelis try to dispell myths about homeland

By BRIAN PEARSON

Dana Grober and Gil Yerushalmy want to clear up a few misconceptions about Israel.

First, desert and camels make up only part of their country. Second, terrorists have not overrun Israel, although they certainly would like to. And third, few differences exist between students there and here.

The two 16-year-olds stopped in Midland this week as part of their country's youth diplomacy program, which sent 30 couples traveling around the United States. Throughout the week they will speak to students at Lee and Midland high schools, discussing the facts and myths about their homeland.

"At the moment the general opinion of Israel is not very positive," Miss Grober said. "What is exposed in the media is not all that objective. They usually concentrate on dramatic things."

7 people have filed for local council seats

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

As today's 5 p.m. filing deadline draws near, Midland has tallied almost twice as many candidates for open City Council seats as Odessa.

Seven candidates had filed to run for the four open Midland City Council spots as of this morning, City Secretary Bill Clanton said.

To the west, four men will run for the three open seats on Odessa's six-member City Council, City Secretary Jerri Sullivan said Tuesday.

Historically, there are some last minute entries in the local races. One incumbent, District 1 Midland

City Councilman Bill Williams, a longtime Midland businessman, is seeking another term and is unopposed so far.

In Odessa, incumbents Jim Perkins, a retired banker, and Dub Kennedy, owner of an oil field service firm, are running unopposed for reelection to their District 3 and District 4 seats.

Midland's most popular race appears to be the District 2 spot currently held by Oralia Corrales. The Midland woman decided earlier this month she will not seek another term. As of this morning, three candidates have filed for Ms. Corrales' seat.

Architectural drawings for student center OK'd

By JULIE HILLRICHES
Staff Writer

Midland College trustees in approving architectural drawings for an expanded student center Tuesday brought construction of the building one step closer to reality.

Trustees last summer commissioned a feasibility study that suggested the need to add almost 20,000 square feet to the center and encouraged the board to proceed with preliminary construction plans.

On Tuesday, those plans were presented to a room full of spectators and received the preliminary go-ahead from seven of nine trustees present during the regular monthly meeting.

The drawings, submitted by design/build coordinators Walter Pate and David Messersmith, includes the addition of multi-purpose meeting rooms, greatly expanded kitchen and dining facilities, student lounge and game rooms, and widened corridors to accommodate students during early registration.

MC President Dr. Jess Parrish also envisions an extensive renovation that would include more office space for students, counselors, dean of students and registrar as well as a testing center, faculty lounge and bookstore.

Space left available by the exodus of some student services from the administration building might house the offices of continuing education and community services, he said.

Lawmaker worried about INS detention center

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Solomon Ortiz, a former sheriff, says all the elements are present for an "explosive" and life-threatening uprising of Central American refugees being held at a South Texas detention center.

Ortiz said he is afraid the Central Americans could fashion crude weapons from tent poles at the "tent city" on the Bayview detention center grounds, and could use the wooden tent flooring to start a fire.

"After personally inspecting the Bayview detention facility, it is alarming to see the serious potential for such a catastrophe to occur," Ortiz wrote Immigration and Naturalization Service Commissioner Alan Nelson on Tuesday.

The Corpus Christi Democrat is appealing to Nelson and Attorney General Richard Thornburgh to consider housing the aliens at another facility, such as an old military installation, with permanent structures, while their applications for political asylum are decided.

A former Nueces County sheriff, Ortiz said he is concerned a fire-shaking disturbance at the center last week "is a warning to us that things are not right" and a dangerous demonstration is possible that could endanger the lives of officers assigned to the facility.

"The weather is going to get hot very soon. Tempers are going to flare, people want to get out, and it worries me," said Ortiz, whose district includes the INS detention center where more than 2,000 refugees are being held.

"I'm afraid the poles on the tents can be used as weapons, against officers and against each other," Ortiz said. "And the (tent) floor is made of wood. It's very easy to start a fire. I used to be a sheriff. These are the kind of things you look out after, for potential weapons for a disturbance."

INS spokesman Duke Austin acknowledges tensions at the facility, but says the agency has never had a population of strictly illegal aliens attack federal officers, take hostages, or burn down a facility. It is not a normal reaction" for aliens whose only crime is crossing the border illegally.

INS spokesman Verne Jervis said the Central American detainees are "not hardened criminals."

The spokesman said the agency has the capability to quickly dispatch trained law officers to the center, outside Port Isabel, and is also working to keep tensions down. While there were 1,622 men in the immediate area of last week's disturbance, they said only 200 participated.

"We do have a crisis," Ortiz said. "The facility was built to house 680 detainees and now it's gearing to house 5,000."

DEATHS

Modrell McDaniel

Funeral services will be at 3 p.m. Thursday for Modrell McDaniel, 86, of Midland at the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with B.C. Stapleton, minister of the Lubbock Church of Christ, officiating, assisted by Claude Cravens, pastor of Trinity Baptist Church in Big Spring.

Interment will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park.

Mrs. McDaniel died Tuesday at a local hospital.

Born March 20, 1900 in Eastland, she was reared in Eastland County where her parents farmed and she attended school. She married Thomas Buel McDaniel in Abilene, July 24, 1920.

The couple lived in Cross Plains until moving to Spur in 1925. They moved to Flagstaff, Ariz., in 1942 and returned to Texas in 1943. They lived in Monahans where they owned and operated the West Sealy Chevron station.

The moved to Midland in 1968, the same year, McDaniel died.

Mrs. McDaniel had been a member of the Church of Christ since 1921 and was a member of the Dwight & A' Church of Christ in Monahans.

Survivors include, three sons, Wade McDaniel of Levelland, and Glen and C.L. "Dink" McDaniel, both of Abilene; one daughter, Helen (Mrs. O.A.) Boling of Midland; one brother, L.D. Bond of Monahans; seven grandchildren and 10 great-grandchildren.

Debbie Tidwell

Funeral services will be at 11 a.m. Thursday at the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel for Debbie Ann Tidwell, 37, of Irving, a former Midland resident.

Services, officiated by the Rev. James Aldridge, pastor of North-western Baptist Church, will be followed by interment at Resthaven Memorial Park.

Mrs. Tidwell died Sunday at a Dallas hospital of injuries sustained in a Feb. 10 automobile accident.

Born in Windsor, Ontario, on Dec. 31, 1951, she was reared in Royal Oak Mich., and moved to Midland in 1979.

She married Larry Don Tidwell May 15, 1981 and they moved to Irving in 1987. She was a member of Crestview Baptist Church.

Survivors include her husband, Larry Don Tidwell of Irving; a daughter and a son, Tiffany and Michael Joe Reed both of Irving; and one brother Jack Murphy of Royal Oak, Mich.

Services are pending with Thomas Funeral Home.

Evelyn Valentine, 70, of Midland died Tuesday at a local hospital following a brief illness.

She is survived by her husband, Odis Valentine of Midland.

Analysis found that 11.1 percent of drivers from the town with no interment had concentrations of at least .05 percent, the level at which the dial warned that driving becomes impaired.

In the television-only community, 10.1 percent of drivers also reached that level. But only 5.8 percent of drivers from the full-time program community scored that high.

The legal driving limit of .10 percent blood alcohol was reached by 3 percent of drivers from the no-program community and 4.7 percent from the television-only community, but only 0.6 percent from the full-program community.

"I think it is an idea that is worth a try," Dettman said. "Because I honestly don't think most people, if they knew they would be in violation, would do it (drink too much) and then drive."

Midland police Cpl. Jim White said the study results make sense.

"I am of the opinion that most people don't realize how it (alcohol) affects their body," White said. "If they had some sort of barometer, I think it would make a difference. I also think it is just another form of public education on drinking and driving, and that's what we need."

White discounted the chance the cards might be harmful, encouraging persons to drink to just below the legal intoxication level of .10. He cautioned bar patrons against trying to outsmart the police.

"No, because we have some leeway as to what (charges) we file and don't file," he said. "If we see someone driving erratically, we can file charges even if the number (blood alcohol level) is below .10."

Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter was less enthusiastic about the study.

"If it will help people reduce their drinking, and reduce drinking and driving, it doesn't sound like a bad deal," Painter said. "But the fact people are still drinking is still cause for alarm. They don't need to be drinking and driving, period."

Other experts said the results were promising, but that some questions about effectiveness remain to be answered. They also said such a program should be considered only in combination with other strategies to reduce drunken driving.

Philip Graitcer, of the federal Centers for Disease Control's division of injury epidemiology and control, cautioned that questions remain about how effective such a program would be over a longer period, whether it would work in other settings, and whether it would in fact reduce accidents.

Still, the relatively inexpensive program offers "a strategy that may work," he said.

James F. Mosher, program director at the Marin Institute for the Prevention of Alcohol and Other Drug Problems in San Rafael, Calif., said the program would be best used in combination with other efforts, such as training bartenders and waiters to regulate drinking among patrons.

ISRAEL

Before coming to Midland, the two spent five days in New York City, two weeks in Atlanta, a week in Nashville, Tenn., and a week in New Orleans. Their next stop is Washington, D.C.

The two, who are staying with local families, said the question is not why come to Midland, but why not. A diverse culture, business activities and relative isolation compared to other cities also factored in their government's decision to send them here, they said.

"We've met many people who are very interesting and know a lot," Miss Grober said of their travels.

Speaking Tuesday before a world history class of about 30 Lee High School students, the couple talked of student life, Israel's history and what it's like to be a New Jersey-sized country amongst 20 hostile Arab nations.

The latter means that in 1½ years, Miss Grober and Yerushalmi will enter the military, where women stay two years and men three. A strong defense, Yerushalmi said, hopefully means keeping the 41-year-old country out of its seventh war.

"It shapes your personality abruptly," Yerushalmi said of serving in the army. "It makes you become an adult."

The couple emphasizes that terrorist incidents are rare and the country is not war-torn. Both said they have never witnessed terrorist violence in Israel.

Yerushalmi said other than the army requirement, Israeli students live a life similar to American high schoolers and have grown accustomed to Western ways.

But he said that because America is strategically safe, its students tend to be less concerned with worldly matters than with local problems, such as alcohol and drugs, which are not a severe problem in Israel.

"The kids here are very interesting and very enjoyable," Miss Grober said. "They're very polite, but on the other hand they're a bit isolated. They get the idea that the U.S. is the whole world."

For example, some students in the world history class, where the couple visited Tuesday, guessed that Israel was the size of Texas or California. Yerushalmi said that for Israelis, understanding the events around them is crucial to their existence, and that's why school there is so much harder.

Learning English is a requirement beginning in elementary school, and Israeli students must take a battery of exams before leaving high school and also before entering college after the army.

Trudy Lewis, who was the Midland teacher, said having the two speak to her class was a great opportunity.

"We're always anxious to introduce students to other cultures," she said. "It's good for kids to have the opportunity to be introduced and talk to kids from another country and see that they're pretty much the same."

Junior League donates funds for heart monitors

By ED TODD

Staff Writer

The Junior League of Midland has donated to the Midland Fire Department $30,000 in potential life-saving equipment "instead of building a fountain," Junior League President Shari Kozlowski said today.

The women's social-service organization donated funds for the purchase of three Lifepak-5 Cardiac Monitors and one Lifepak 200 Cardiac Monitor-Defibrillator for use on heart patients.

The Lifepak 200 or "heart-smart defibrillator" to be used on people's hearts that are in crisis and threatening to stop will be placed at the Midland Fire Department's Crash-Fire-Rescue Station at Midland International Airport.

"This monitor will be utilized by the CFR crew on a first-responder basis after the paramedic unit is dispatched from the city," according to Ray Sprague, chief of the Fire Department's Emergency Medical Services.

"We feel like we have the best trained people (paramedics) in the state of Texas," Sprague said, "and were are only limited by the type of equipment" available.

More than 1 million people board and deplane annually at Midland International Airport.

"We do have some emergencies out there," Sprague said.

Sprague noted that "ventricular fibrillation" — heart spasms — is the leading cause of death in America.

"This concept of first-responder cardiac care to the victims of sudden cardiac arrest has shown to be beneficial — not to mention life-saving," Sprague said.

The Lifepak-5 Monitors will replace similar units that are more than 10 years old and are in ambulances, noted Fire Chief James Roberts. At least one of the older monitors will be donated to the Midkiff Volunteer Fire Department, Roberts said.

"We are not going to sell them. They were donated to us, and we thought we ought to share the wealth with other people," Roberts said.

Jo Douglas, who is on the Junior League's project-research development committee and who worked with Sprague on selecting the equipment, said that the League "could not think of a better way to help our community than to save lives."

"We had this excess amount of money," she said, "and we wanted to make a significant contribution to the community."

Midland Mayor Carroll Thomas noted that the Junior League has been "very generous with the community before" by helping in the development of Windlands Park.

MEASLES

MISD officials have yet to determine whether there is a need to immunize the 555 Emerson pupils, school district spokesman Ted Miller said.

Monette Burke, Midland County Health Department administrator, said Tuesday that health officials have the shots ready to go for about 500 MHS students and some faculty.

Since the February outbreak began, Midland County has had five confirmed cases, three at Jones Elementary School, one at Goddard Junior High School, and a 17-year-old girl who is not enrolled in school.

Blood test results Monday confirmed that a 4-year-old and a 5-year-old didn't have the illness, leaving one pending case reported at Midland Memorial Hospital.

In addition, 11 cases diagnosed among Goddard pupils have yet to be confirmed. Two other Goddard cases were ruled out last Thursday by blood tests.

So far, Midland health officials have made inoculation visits to two MISD schools.

On March 10, they immunized a third of Goddard's 1,000 students. About 35 Jones pupils were inoculated Feb. 24.

COUNCIL

Businesswoman Robynne Fuller, the Rev. Bill Palmer and restaurant owner Jose Cuevas Jr. will seek election to the District 2 spot, records indicate.

Midlanders Leslie Hinds, John Castro and J.D. Faircloth are seeking election to the two open at-large council seats to be vacated this May by council members Katie Heck and Gordon Marcum.

The two receiving the most votes will win the seats.

Odessa's one at-large councilmember Craig Heap will not seek reelection, Ms. Sullivan said.

Seeking his position are Odessans Gerald Perry, employed with an oil field service firm, and John Tatum, a college student.

There aren't any major campaign issues in Odessa crying out for recognition, Ms. Sullivan explained.

In Midland this year, the city's economy and a pending minority rights lawsuit against the city should be campaign issues, Clanton said.

Here, city councilmembers are paid $25 a month, while in Odessa they are paid $10 a meeting but no more than $50 a month.

Both city secretaries expected at least one more candidate on their lists by this afternoon.

Big Spring man wanted in wife's murder surrenders in Odessa

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A Big Spring man indicted for murder in the drowning death of his wife, surrendered to Ector County authorities earlier this week.

Travis Dale Gray, 30, turned himself in to the Ector County Sheriff's Department after the Mitchell County grand jury on Friday filed the capital murder indictment alleging that Gray "intentionally caused the death of Tammy L. Gray, by asphyxiation, manual strangulation and drowning," on or about June 23, 1988.

In addition, the 32nd Judicial District Court's indictment alleges that Gray's actions were for monetary gain, namely the proceeds from a life insurance policy.

Gray appeared at the sheriff's department Monday, with his attorney and bondsman. "He said there was a warrant for his arrest," said Capt. Gene Kloss of the sheriff's office.

When the warrant was confirmed, "we had no choice but to process and release him," Kloss said.

The $50,000 bond was stipulated in the grand jury's indictment.

The 27-year-old Mrs. Gray was pulled from Lake Colorado City about 2 a.m. on June 23, by her husband, who drove her to Mitchell County Hospital where doctors' efforts to revive her failed.

Gray was hospitalized in Colorado City for shock following the incident, records indicate.

STATE IN BRIEF

A&M student jailed
in dormitory shooting

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — A Texas A&M University student was being held in the Brazos County Jail today in connection with a shooting incident in a college dormitory, authorities say.

Two charges of attempted murder, two charges of aggravated assault and a charge of burglary of a habitation with the intent to commit aggravated assault were filed Tuesday against Harry Lewis Horak, 20, of Corpus Christi.

Investigators believe that Horak entered the dormitory room of a former girlfriend about 3 a.m. Tuesday and fired seven shots, according to Bob Wiatt, campus police director. Wiatt said Horak had two rifles, a hunting knife, a rope, some cloth gags and about 150 rounds of ammunition.

He said the former girlfriend and her roommate suffered powder burns when they grabbed the rifle as the shots were fired. No one, however, was hit by the bullets.

Authorities would not identify the women, but said one is a sophomore nuclear engineering major from Newport, N.C., and the other is a freshman biomedical science major from El Paso.

Horak was being held in lieu of $100,000 bond.

Lawmaker to be honored

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Association of Black Owned Broadcasters will honor Rep. John Bryant, a Dallas Democrat, and two other congressmen at its fifth annual communication awards dinner Thursday.

Bryant, Reps. John Dingell of Michigan and Al Swift of Washington state, both Democrats, will be given the group's Outstanding Leadership in Communications Awards for their significant contributions to advancing the cause of black Americans in the communications industry.

Each congressman is a member of the House Energy and Commerce subcommittee on telecommunications and finance, which has primary responsibility for establishing telecommunications policy.

The broadcasters' association said the three Democrats have been instrumental in shaping policies designed to increase ownership opportunities for black Americans in the broadcast industry.

Tim Reid and Daphne Maxwell-Reid, producers and co-stars of the CBS series "Frank's Place," also will be given Outstanding Leadership Awards, the association said.

The awards dinner will be held at a Washington hotel.

Senate OKs helmet law

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate voted Tuesday to require all motorcycle operators and passengers to wear helmets and approved a bill aimed at "kids helping kids" to stay in school.

Current state motorcycle regulations require only those under 18 to wear helmets for protection.

The bill, presented as a lifesaver by Sen. Ted Lyon, D-Rockwall, was sent to the House, 17-13, after being brought up without a vote to spare.

A two-thirds vote was needed to debate the bill, and that vote was 20-10.

Sen. Gonzalo Barrientos, D-Austin, sponsored the proposal to require full school credit for the Texas Peer Assistance and Leadership, or PAL, program.

PAL is a dropout prevention program that trains high school juniors and seniors in communication, problem-solving, tutoring and others areas so they can help make school better for younger students.

Barrientos' bill was sent to the House 30-0.

Officer to be reinstated

AUSTIN (AP) — James "Jamie" Balagia, who was fired last year from the Austin police department after he was connected to a federal drug investigation, has been ordered reinstated to the force.

Conditions of his reinstatement include that he submit to drug testing, the Austin American-Statesman reported Tuesday.

The independent arbitrator's decision requires the former vice squad officer to present a plan for maintaining sobriety, sign a statement agreeing not to associate with anyone involved in illegal drugs, and help in police drug rehabilitation projects.

Police Chief Jim Everett said Balagia will return to work Monday. He will not be paid for the nine months since his dismissal.

An officer since 1979, Balagia joined the vice detail in February, 1986. Everett fired him June 20 after Drug Enforcement Administration agents said he and another former vice officer visited a house under surveillance. No charges have been filed against them.

Balagia was dismissed for not taking action against illegal narcotics activity, not obeying orders to cooperate with a police investigation into drug allegations against him, using and possessing illegal drugs, and using a city-owned vehicle for personal business.

Teen killed in car accident

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — A 17-year-old boy was killed and three others were critically injured when their car skidded on rain-slicked U.S. Highway 77, hit a guard rail and rolled over three times, authorities said.

About 6:40 a.m. Tuesday, the 1984 Nissan carrying the four failed to negotiate a curve near the Farm Road 511 overpass, said David Wells, spokesman for the state's Department of Public Safety.

Michael Esparza, 17, of Corpus Christi, a passenger, was pronounced dead at the scene, Wells said.

The driver, Keith Deatley, 20, of Corpus Christi was transported to Valley Regional Hospital in Brownsville and was listed in critical condition with head wounds.

Andrew Reyna, 17, of Corpus Christi also was transported to Valley Regional Hospital, and Jaymie Delapaz, 19, of Chapman Ranch, was taken to Brownsville Medical Center. Both had head injuries and were listed as critical.

None was wearing seatbelts and all were thrown from the car, Wells said.

Panel OKs A&M regents

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate Nominations Committee on Tuesday approved the appointments of three Texas A&M University regent nominees, including former House Speaker Billy Clayton of Springlake.

Clayton and Raul Fernandez of San Antonio were approved 5-0, but Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, voted "present" on Houston lawyer Ross Margraves' appointment, which was approved 4-0.

Brooks at two previous committee meetings questioned Margraves' role on two state contracts. Margraves is chairman of the State Purchasing and General Services Commission.

The appointments now go to the Senate for a confirmation vote.

Teens support teaching sexual abstinence

AUSTIN (AP) — Several teen-agers told a cheering crowd of about 100 of their peers that sex education classes in school should instruct students on abstinence rather than how to use various methods of contraception.

"We didn't have trouble with teen sex and abortion until we started teaching promiscuous sex. We need to teach abstinence," Heather Hottel, 16, a student at Town East Christian School in San Antonio, said Tuesday.

The teen-agers rallying in the State Capitol rotunda cheered legislators who have proposed bills that would make teaching sexual abstinence part of any public school course on sex education and requiring minors to gain parental consent before getting an abortion.

"Young people do support the right way," Sen. Ken Armbrister, D-Victoria, said. "Whether it be saying no to drugs or saying no to other pressures that are part of your peer group, I pledge my support to you," he said.

Armbrister's bill would require that abstinence be taught in sex education classes as the most effective way to prevent pregnancy, AIDS and other sexually transmitted diseases. The bill is pending in a subcommittee of the Senate Education Committee. Katrina Gonzalez, 17, of Taft High School, said, "I think that abstinence should be taught. If it's taught I know that all abortions will stop, sexually transmitted diseases will stop, and we're just going to have a world that is just going to be so great."

John Kearns, 16, also a student at Town East, said, "I'm really upset that all legislators think that all teens are promiscuous. I'm 16 years old and I've never had sex and I plan to wait until I'm married."

Children need guidelines on sexual abstinence, said Marlene S. McMichael, legislative liaison for the Concerned Women for America of Texas.

She said too much emphasis in sex education classes is placed on how to use various forms of contraception.

State Rep. Dan Shelley's bill requiring minors to have consent from parental or legal guardians before getting abortions has been referred to the House State Affairs Committee.

The Crosby Republican said his proposal would help "open up lines of communications between young people and their parents."

Ottwell blasts government regulations

AUSTIN (AP) — The Rev. W.N. Ottwell, who has fought the state for years over his homes for troubled youth, blasted state government for placing too many regulations on the public.

"It's time the Legislature got their head out of the sand," Ottwell said Tuesday during a chilly rain at a rally outside the Capitol.

Ottwell, pastor of the Church at Fort Worth, who has said he is seeking the Republican Party's nomination for governor, was flanked during the rally by about 35 homeless people from Fort Worth.

The homeless people carried signs saying, "I am a political casualty of the streets," and "Big Brother government put me on the streets."

Ottwell said bureaucratic red tape and high taxes are putting thousands of Texans out on the street.

The maverick, fundamentalist preacher proposed the state give poor people free driver's licenses, license plates and basic auto insurance.

He also said rock, country and western, and gospel rock singers should be required to pass a drug test before being allowed to perform.

Ottwell also complained about tickets he has received from the City of Fort Worth for allegedly violating the city's health codes.

"That is the height of stupidity," he said. The city has been ticketing Ottwell nearly every Sunday since last fall when he began feeding street people at the Water Gardens.

City officials say Ottwell has refused to obtain the necessary permits to serve food to the public.

Ottwell has confronted law officials often in the past. He fought the Texas Attorney General's Office for years over his unlicensed homes for troubled youth outside Fort Worth.

The homes eventually were closed under a court order.

Another pastor, the Rev. Aubrey Vaughan of Houston, protested a bill by state Rep. Patricia Hill, R-Dallas, that would require clergy, when they become aware of instances of child abuse, to report the incident.

Vaughan, pastor of the Grace Baptist Church, said the law would jeopardize a pastor's ability to counsel people within the congregation. "Now the preacher is becoming the watchdog of the state," Vaughan said.

Railey unable to pay
judgment, lawyer says

DALLAS (AP) — Former minister Walker Railey has nowhere the wealth to pay an almost $18-million judgment for a brutal attack that left his wife comatose almost two years ago, Peggy Railey's family attorney said.

No criminal charges have been brought against Railey, but his wife's parents, William and Billie Jo Nicolai, won a civil default judgment of nearly $18 million against him last year.

But Railey never responded to the lawsuit and has never paid any part of the judgment.

When authorities said he was their only suspect in the attack, Railey surrendered his church credentials, gave guardianship of the couple's two children to friends in Dallas and moved to California, citing increasing stress from the attack and investigation.

He was served with a subpoena to meet with Bill Arnold, the attorney representing the Nicolais, when he visited Dallas last weekend to celebrate his children's birthdays.

Railey underwent a three-hour deposition at Arnold's Dallas law office Tuesday to review his financial standing.

Railey produced financial records indicating he has a full-time job as a "glorified secretary" for an aerospace firm but doesn't have enough income beyond living expenses to pay for his wife's care, Arnold said.

"From what it looks like today, it doesn't look like under the law that he has any assets and money that she can execute on at this time," Arnold said at a news conference after the deposition.

The judgment remains for 10 years by law.

"I am still hoping that he come up some income in the future that will help pay Peggy's medical expenses," Arnold said.

Railey was represented by Dallas attorneys Michael F. Pezzulli and Doug Mulder, who said he acted as an adviser, when he answered the subpoena.

The Dallas County district attorney's office, which earlier had expressed interest in Railey's questioning, did not attend his deposition.

"He (Railey) produced everything he had that was in accordance with the subpoena that was served upon him," said Pezzulli. "Essentially, what income and expenses he has had over the past two years."

Railey has a net worth of $15,000, including a car and some household furniture, Arnold said.

Arnold said that Railey traveled previously on funds from a $25,000 pension fund he received as a Methodist minister and a trust set up at First United Methodist Church of Dallas. Other expenses included attorney's fees.

"He has exhausted all of his savings," Arnold said.

Pezzulli said filing for bankruptcy is an option available to Railey. Judgments generally are dischargeable in such filings.

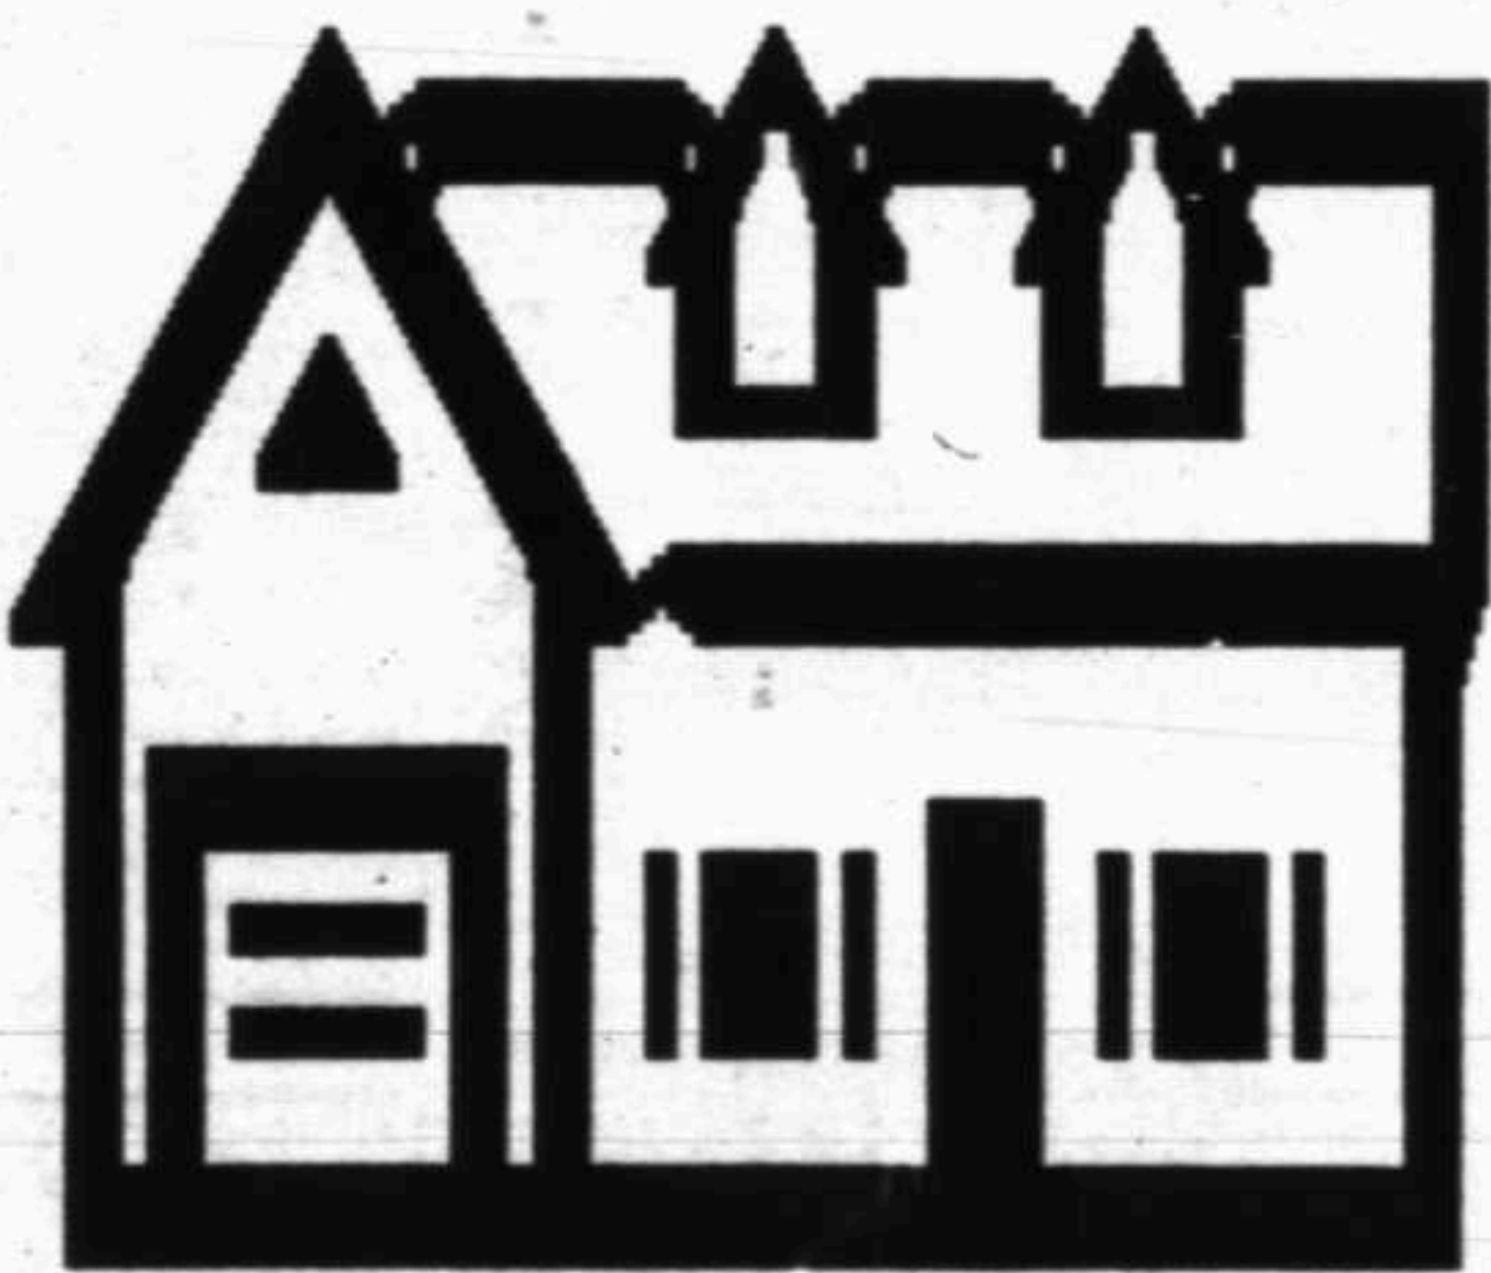

Mrs. Railey has not gained full consciousness since the attack April 21, 1987 at her home. Her parents care for her daily at a Tyler nursing home but Mrs. Railey's insurance payments run out Sept. 2.

Arnold declined to name a threshold of money that would be worth seizing from Railey, but said he will continue to monitor Railey's finances.

Railey got a job in Long Beach, Calif., within the last five months, attorneys said. Arnold said Railey told him he was making about $2,000 monthly as a "glorified secretary" for a company that did aerospace testing.

Judge John Whittington ruled on Dec. 5 that Railey was financially responsible for his wife's condition. Railey did not attend the trial.
