Military heeds gay order

Officers: Implementing policy will take time

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The military is beginning to carry out President Clinton's new order governing homosexuals in the armed forces although leaders caution implementation is likely to be spotty at first.

With a formal lifting of the 50-year ban on homosexuals still six months away, military leaders are focusing their immediate efforts on ending their policy of questioning recruits about their sexual orientation.

"It used to be, 'Don't tell me you're homosexual;' now it will be, 'Don't show me you're homosexual,'" one senior Pentagon officer said, summarizing the feeling among military leaders.

Following a week of controversy over his pledge to end the ban, Clinton on Friday directed recruiters to stop asking new enlistees to answer question No. 27 — Are you a homosexual or a bisexual? — on the form called the "Record of Military Processing" for the armed services.

The president also suspended the discharge of homosexuals from the military solely because of their sexual orientation.

Word of the decision spread informally throughout the armed services on Friday. "We are trying to tell people don't press the issue now," one Pentagon official said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Sometime this week, Defense Secretary Les Aspin will issue a formal directive to the appropriate department

Proactive replacing reactive.

That's at the heart of Problem-Oriented Policing (POP), a philosophy that involves community involvement and crime prevention rather than merely reacting to recurring problems.

"In a nutshell, the POP philosophy says that any incidents or problems that are similar to each other and occur two or more times should be indentified and then analyzed to find out what is causing the problem," said Lt. Jim Reynolds of the Midland Police Department.

Unit hopes program will reduce number of traffic-related wrecks

By Katherine Poteet

The Midland Police Department's traffic division has implemented a new program under the department's Problem-Oriented Policing umbrella that it hopes will cut down on the number of traffic-related accidents in Midland this year.

The program, which Sgt. Brian Bogart calls "selective enforcement," involves targeting problem areas in the city and then stepping up police coverage of those areas.

Super Bowl: An American sports ritual

By Richard Sandomir
N.Y. Times News Service

When Super Bowl XXVII, between the Dallas Cowboys and the Buffalo Bills, kicks off this evening, it will renew an American rite of sports and marketing that was born in relative modesty but has grown to be the undisputed champion of sports extravaganzas and a testament to American cash and cachet.

"It's almost anti-American not to be a viewer of the Super Bowl," said Dick Enberg, who will announce the game for NBC-TV.

At least 100 million viewers across the country (worldwide estimate: 750 million) will tune in the Super Bowl,

Judge calls for review of election ruling

■ Appellate judge challenges decision that found the method of electing judges unconstitutional.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — A federal appellate judge is challenging a ruling that found district court elections in eight Texas counties discriminatory, according to a published report.

Judge Patrick Higginbotham of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans has called for the entire panel to review the case, the Austin American-Statesman reported Saturday.

The decision Wednesday said at-large judicial elections in several of the state's largest counties were unconstitutional because they discriminated against minorities. A three-judge panel of the 5th Circuit gave Texas 180 days to

Fast church

PENSACOLA, Fla. — A Baptist minister is trying to do for church what McDonald's did for food. Fast church debuts at First American Baptist Church on Sunday. The Rev. Thaine E. Ford says his "Compact Mini 22-Minute Worship Service" will challenge an outdated tradition. "Why does a church service have to start at 11 a.m. and last for an hour or more?" he asked recently. In 22 minutes starting at 8 a.m., Ford plans to deliver a sermon, lead hymn singing, read Scriptures, say prayers and have his congregation out the door. To squeeze it all in, only two hymns will be sung and he will limit his sermon to eight minutes. "There's no room in this service for a long-winded preacher," Ford said. But plenty of time will be allotted for passing the collection plate.

Nelson concert

HILLSBORO — Country music star Willie Nelson will headline a March 28 concert to benefit the restoration of a 102-year-old courthouse that was destroyed by fire. Nelson was born in Hill County, where the landmark county courthouse was ravaged on New Year's Day. Jim Showers, a Hillsboro attorney who is coordinating the event, said the goal is $200,000. Nelson, who has put together several Farm Aid concerts to benefit American farmers, is expected to perform about two hours. Showers said Nelson plans to bring in other entertainers for the event. Ticket prices are expected to range from $20 to $100.

RITUAL: Ads are $28,000 a second with an expected kickoff at 5:18 p.m., CST. Diehard fans will start the ritual with what amounts to a 2½-hour television tailgate party.

Between commercials, NBC's pre-game host Bob Costas (estimated salary: $2 million) will entertain viewers with features, interviews and endless reasons why this Super Bowl can't be missed.

After the 150-minute appetizer, Costas will hand off to Enberg (estimate: $1.5 million) and Bob Trumpy (estimate: $300,000), at the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, Calif., and after two weeks of hyped-up anticipation, the game, which has rarely lived up to its billing, will begin.

"I've never been more nervous than at the Super Bowl, what with the size of the audience," said Enberg. "The great bulk of the audience doesn't watch football all season."

It is that audience that induces television networks to bring out their heavy technical artillery, compels advertisers to spend millions of dollars to court consumers with splashy commercials, often to unveil new products, and motivates cities to grant sweetheart deals to pro football in order to bring tens of thousands of visitors to their environs.

The Super Bowl is expected to be a small, much-needed profit center for the network, which is paying $752 million to the National Football League for its share of a four-year contract.

Making it worthwhile for NBC, which has lost about $80 million on its pro football investment in the first three years of the pact, will be such advertisers as Pepsi-Cola, Subaru of America, Frito-Lay, Nike, Anheuser-Busch and Gillette willingly spending $850,000 for 30-second commercials, up $50,000 from 1992.

A rare chance to tap into the nexus of 100 million beer-drinking, soda-sipping, chip-munching, car-buying consumers — a World Series game draws about half the viewership — means paying a price that dwarfs the second- highest amount paid for prime-time advertising, $310,000 for 30 seconds on CBS's "Murphy Brown".

Put another way, it will cost $28,333.33 per second — and hundreds of thousands of dollars in production costs — to introduce Crystal Pepsi, Subaru's Imprenza line and Nike's new Michael Jordan-Bugs Bunny commercial.

Advertisers cannot reach a critical mass of 100 million in any other programming, and to divide their expenditures into several shows over the course of a month would distill their message. How sure an investment is it? Of the 25 top-rated programs in television history, 12 have been Super Bowls.

Bringing a Super Bowl to a city (this is the fifth visit to Pasadena) is big-time politics. And money. The Super Bowl XXVII Host Committee in Pasadena spent an estimated $250,000 in beating out other cities to be the host.

Why? Cash pouring into the southern California economy is expected to top $83 million — including $58.4 million by visitors — 66 percent greater than the spending at last year's site, the Minneapolis-St. Paul area, where winter limited Super Bowl tourism to the great indoors.

"The message of the Super Bowl being in the Los Angeles area?" said Rich Perelman, the host committee's director of communcations. "With the Michael Jackson halftime show and the associated Heal L.A. project, and all the attention on this area, it says we're still here, it's still sunny, it's still fun."

So prestigious is the Super Bowl's presence that the Rose Bowl, owned by the city of Pasadena, will get no rent, a largess that has become de rigueur for Super Bowl hosts. With 103,000 seats sold at $175 apiece (one price fits all), the NFL will realize $17-$18 million in gate receipts.

In and around the Rose Bowl, about 100,000 20-ounce cups of beers will sell for $6 apiece, 55,000 hot dogs will go for $2 and 6,000 slices of pizza will be consumed for $2.50 apiece. Commemorative T-shirts will sell for up to $28, sweatshirts for $65 and leather jackets for $1,000.

The NFL is spending between $12 million and $15 million on its big Pasadena adventure. It pays the winning team expenses of $1.2 million and the losing team $960,000. Each of the 90 rings for players and staff of the champion team cost $4,000; the losers' rings cost $2,000.

A replica of the Vince Lombardi Trophy for the winning team to tote home to Buffalo or Dallas costs $20,000 to $23,000, depending on the price of silver.

Members of the champion team will get 90 winner's shares worth $36,000, while losers will get 90 shares of $18,000. The shares have been unchanged since 1982, frozen because of the absence of a labor agreement between the owners and players.

Although shares should increase significantly now that labor peace has been achieved, the football figures for this year compare badly with those of the World Series champion Toronto Blue Jays, who received $114,962 for a full share, and the runner-up Atlanta Braves, who got $73,323.

The league is spending $2 million to stage the NFL Experience, a pigskin theme park adjacent to the Rose Bowl that is offering free attractions — once you pay an admission fee of $10 at the door ($5 for children). The amusements include games to test fans' football skills, chances to pose in authentic uniforms, player autographs and a trading card show.

Firm petitions for increased storage cavern

BRENHAM (AP) — Seminole Pipeline Co. has petitioned the state for permission to lay new gas pipelines and expand an underground storage cavern where a series of deadly explosions occurred last year.

Three people died and 21 others were injured in the April 7 blasts, which also caused about $5 million in damage.

The National Transportation Safety Board, which is investigating the case, has issued no final report on the blast and no blame has been assigned.

The explosions occurred after Seminole's underground storage facility overfilled with liquefied gas. The Tulsa, Okla., company has contended it responded properly after learning an hour before the first explosion that the cavern was overfilling.

In October, Seminole asked the Texas Railroad Commission for permission to expand the capacity of the cavern, a converted salt dome 3,000 feet underground, from 150,000 barrels of liquefied petroleum gas to 300,000.

And this month, Seminole has filed 20 condemnation suits against residents to lay more pipelines beneath their properties, The Houston Post reported Saturday.

But a group of Brenham residents wants Seminole's permit to operate the pipelines revoked, and the Texas Railroad Commission is expected to decide on that request by the end of February.

"They weren't able to monitor 150,000; how are they going to manage (300,000)," said Regina O'Donnell.

Mrs. O'Donnell and her husband, William, sustained more than $100,000 in property damage, and they also lost a donkey and a cat in the explosions. Now Seminole wants to put another 14-inch gas pipeline under their land and has issued a condemnation suit against them.

The O'Donnells and a neighbor filed a temporary injunction request last week in an attempt to prevent Seminole and several other pipelines companies from transporting extra-hazardous materials through the pipelines to the dome and from reopening the salt dome.

"I just don't understand how insensitive they can be after all the fatalities and (property) damage," Mrs. O'Donnell said.

Attorneys question review of Erdmann's reports

■ Lubbock County district attorney collects autopsy documents from area justices of the peace.

Associated Press

LUBBOCK — Two attorneys have asked Lubbock County Criminal District Attorney Travis Ware why he has begun a review of several autopsy reports from controversial pathologist Ralph Erdmann.

The attorneys represent families who have filed lawsuits because of autopsies Erdmann was accused of conducting improperly. They suggested Ware, who has consistently defended Erdmann, may have turned over documents to him.

Lubbock County justices of the peace reported last week that an investigator from Ware's office collected certain autopsy reports from their offices.

Ware's chief administrator, Steve Holmes, said prosecutors are merely making a routine and periodic review of their cases.

The attorneys asked for access to the documents under the Texas Open Records Act.

Attorney Carlton McLarty, who represents James Hobbs in a lawsuit against Erdmann for taking his daughter's brain after an autopsy and turning it over to a neuropathologist, has requested "equal access to any information (Ware) may have gained and furnished to Dr. Erdmann or his attorney."

Attorney Rod Hobson, who has been retained by the mother of a murder victim whose autopsy report was collected by Ware's office, demanded an explanation.

The woman, according to Hobson's letter, assumed the investigation of her son's murder was complete when the killer pleaded guilty, but now fears Erdmann may have made a mistake that allowed the real killer to go free.

"The issue raised by Travis Ware's office by requesting the autopsy reports is 'Why?' " Hobson said. "They all died violent unexpected deaths and suffered head injuries. It's possible Erdmann took brains for dissection by Dr. Hannes Vogel without permission."

Vogel had been a neuropathologist at Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center.

Hobson surmised that Ware either was looking for more mistakes by Erdmann or helping Erdmann in his civil litigation, particularly in the Hobbs case.

"It's hard to believe it's standard medical practice to take brains. He didn't do it in the deaths of Hilton Merriman or Darlene Hall. And then Travis starts a comprehensive search?" Hobson said.

"I don't believe it's routine review . . . maybe on an ad hoc and individual basis, but for dozens of cases? There hasn't been this much scientific research on brains since Joseph Mengele."

Hobson said that if Erdmann had turned over the victims' brains to the neuropathologist for scientific forensic purposes, neuropathologist reports should have been attached to the autopsy reports. There were none, Hobson said.

Ware did not return a telephone call from The Avalanche-Journal Friday night, but Holmes called the claims of McLarty and Hobson preposterous and "beyond the realm of ridiculous."

Holmes noted that the man who was convicted in the killing of the son of Hobson's client confessed to the crime.

Justice of the Peace Jim Hansen said Tom Loper, one of Ware's investigators, requested autopsy reports on the 1991 deaths of Lin Hodges, Robert Doll, Malcolm Limbaugh, Sarah Hobbs and Kathleen Smyrl and the 1992 death of Emmer Ola Lawrence.

REVIEW: Judge disagrees with panel's ruling

develop a new system.

But Higginbotham, the dissenter in the 2-1 ruling, has asked that the decision be reviewed by all 13 active judges on the panel.

Higginbotham even wrote a proposed ruling for adoption by the full court that would uphold the state's at-large election system.

In the proposed ruling he concluded, "There was no evidence that minority candidates could not be elected in any county. In all counties, minority candidates were elected with support from the white community."

The court's ruling struck down judicial elections in Bexar, Dallas, Ector, Harris, Jefferson, Lubbock, Midland and Tarrant counties. It upheld the Travis County system, saying it found no clear pattern of voting along racial lines.

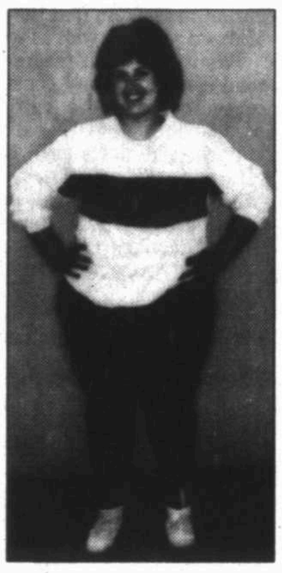

Rolando Rios, a San Antonio attorney representing the League of United Latin American Citizens, the plaintiff in the case, said the Travis County decision would be appealed.

He also said he hopes the 5th Circuit leaves its other decisions intact.

But he added that since the court "is a Republican court, I suppose they could play politics with it by killing the case."

Of the 13 active judges, 11 were appointed by Republican presidents and two were Democratic picks. There are four vacancies on the court.

Today's high to hit 60

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies early and partly cloudy by noon, a high near 60 and south to southwest winds 5 to 15 mph, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight will be partly cloudy with a low in the upper 30s.

Monday is expected to be partly cloudy with a high near 60.

After an overnight low of 32, Saturday's high was 40 compared with the record high for that date of 80 set in 1971. The record low for today's date was 8 in 1985.

STATE

Clouds gave way to sunshine in much of Texas on Saturday afternoon and temperatures reached normal levels for this time of year.

The last precipitation ended around noon in the Brownsville area. Some cloudiness remained over western portions of the state and fog was reported in the Concho Valley.

High pressure, entrenched in the southern part of the state, helped bring drier air in the north.

The sunshine brought warmer temperatures to the eastern part of Texas. High temperature readings at 3 p.m. ranged from 61 in Kingsville to 33 at Guadalupe Pass.

Winds were light and variable across much of Texas. The strongest readings were along the coast, where northerly breezes reached 15 to 25 mph.

The National Weather Service forecast sunny skies and warmer temperatures for today in north and south Texas with highs in the mid-60s. The clear conditions should remain through Monday night.

It should be partly cloudy over the Texas Panhandles through tonight and partly to mostly cloudy in the rest of West Texas through tonight. Highs today are expected in the 50s over southern areas and low 60s elsewhere.

NATION

Frigid wind chills lashed northern New England on Saturday. Heavy snow fell in the Southwest and snow dusted New York state.

Rain dampened the Southeast and other parts of the Southwest, in Arizona and Southern California. Sunshine prevailed over the rest of the nation.

A weather system stalled over the Southwest dumped heavy snow across parts of Southern California, northern Arizona and southern Utah.

Grand Canyon National Park in Arizona was blanketed with up to 16 inches of new snow Saturday. Up to 4 inches of snow was reported in Southern California.

Snow also blanketed much of upstate New York. Three inches were reported in Rochester.

Frigid wind chills were reported across Maine. The wind chill index included 58 degrees below zero at Presque Isle and 56 degrees below zero at Limestone.

By midday Saturday, winds on top of Mount Washington in New Hampshire were gusting to 92 mph and the wind chill index was reported at 100 degrees below zero.

Rain showers and thunderstorms were scattered over central and northwest Arizona and Southern California and showers and thunderstorms were over Florida and southern Georgia.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

MPD: Officers try to analyze problems

that it isn't just interested in maintaining the status quo.

"An example of a traditional police response is, say there was a call on excessive noise from a bar," Reynolds said. "Officers would go down and ask the owner to turn the music down. It would happen again and we would go down again and again. That did nothing to solve the problem. It did nothing to prevent the problem."

The other half of POP involves police and the community working together to prevent problems.

"It has gotten to where it was 'us and them' as far as the police and the community were concerned," Sgt. David Garcia said. "We want to make it all 'us,' to become more people-oriented. Who better to tell us how to prevent crimes and what the problems are than the community?"

Garcia was among several officers, including Police Chief Richard Czech and Deputy Chief John Urby, who helped bring POP to the Midland Police Department just over a year ago.

The philosophy has been around about 15 years, in some of the nation's bigger cities. But, the whole idea was highly experimental until a few years ago.

"You are talking about changing a whole industry," said Officer Frank Bartlett. "Changing the whole philosophy of policemen nationwide."

When the Midland department decided to implement POP, it called in officers from Denton, San Diego and New York to assist in training.

"We brought in people who had already set up the program," Reynolds said. "We specifically looked at Denton as a model for our department."

The training involved seminars designed to teach officers how to analyze rather than just react to problems.

"It was hard on some officers, especially on the younger ones who had just come in and thought the whole idea was to kick butt and take names," Garcia said. "They had to learn to listen and learn the problem, to hear both sides."

As part of the POP program, the city was divided into three divisions so officers were responsible for their own divisions.

Within the divisions, officers work with the community through informal talks, as well as in more formal community meetings, to find out what Midlanders' concerns are.

"Open communication with the community works," Reynolds said. "For some reason, officers, when they got cars, locked themselves away from the public. They worked from their cars with their radios."

"POP is essentially blending technology with the old walking-the-beat cop," Bartlett said.

Once the officers have heard the community's concerns, it is up to them to analyze the problems and figure out ways to head them off or eliminate them completely. In the past year, several programs such as selective traffic enforcment and a driver's license tutorial for Hispanic residents have been started by officers in response to the city's problems.

However, the officers are quick to acknowledge that implementing the POP philosophy has not been all smooth sailing this past year.

"We just kind of jumped in last year without knowing what would happen," Reynolds said. "We just opened it up and let everyone start thinking critically. We started and finished some programs and then some didn't work. And, some are so long-range, we won't see the end result. It was up and down with success and failure. Hopefully, this coming year, we will fine-tune the program, capitalizing on the successes and learning from the failures. It's a team thing, everyone has to work together for it to succeed."

WRECKS: Unit to use voice mail

ports and determine if the problem is speeding, running red lights, or whatever," Bogart said. "We will then concentrate on that, trying to solve the problem."

"Of course, we may determine that the problem is engineering, then we will get with traffic engineering and try to find a solution," he added. "The goal is to determine the problem and solve it."

Selective enforcement has been in place since December, when officers concentrated on the intersection at Midkiff and Loop 250.

"That is possibly the worst intersection in this city," Bogart said. "People were just running red lights and flying through there."

At the beginning of this month, Andrews Highway was targeted as a problem zone. Most recently, officers concentrated on the intersection of Midland Drive and Andrews Highway, where several lanes were closed due to utility construction.

Bogart said it is too early to tell if the program has been successful in dropping last year's accident numbers, which included 2,400 accidents for the year involving 7,000 residents.

"We really won't know for about a year," he said. "It is way too early."

The program will expand in about a month when a new voice mail system is set up at the police department. A number will be set up as a part of the system that the public can call and get general information on Midland roads as well as what area of town traffic officers are targeting.

"We will make a recording at the beginning of the week that will tell road conditions, any construction that will be done and where we are concentrating as the traffic division," he said. "We will update the recording during the week if it is necessary. It will be kind of like time and temperature only it will be traffic information."

Bogart said he does not believe that informing the public where officers will be during the week defeats the purpose of selective enforcement.

"We aren't just out trying to write tickets on people," he said. "We want to decrease the number of accidents in Midland by having motorists voluntarily slow down and follow the law. It's not just how many people we can catch."

Iran ski resort adheres to Muslim rules

DIZIN, Iran (AP) — Majestic peaks, dazzling sunshine and deep powder snow could make this a hot ski resort anywhere, but a few unmistakable signs put Dizin in the heart of the Islamic Republic.

Men and women ski on separate slopes. The ban on alcohol and most music means no end-of-the-run bar serving mulled wine to a disco beat. A mosque blasts the call to prayer across the mountains five times a day.

And instead of billboards featuring the near-naked pushing suntan lotion, the walls bear slogans like: "All Muslims revere the athlete."

The resort is an archetype of everything that both inspires and throttles Iran as the Islamic revolution enters its 15th year.

The mullahs who helped the late Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini topple the Shah over the first 11 days of February 1979 are firmly entrenched in power.

The number of novices tumbling downhill attests to the fact that the revolution has made skiing available to more people.

But the paralysis brought on by internal political wrangling has left the spirits of Iran's 60 million people sagging under rising prices, economic stagnation and curbs on personal freedom.

"I come because there is so little to do in Iran — no dancing, no casinos, nothing," said Yousef, a 25-year-old medical student. Like most Iranians, he said he feared reprisals and would not give his full name.

Iranians, especially those returning from abroad who flock to Dizin on the weekends, see the resort as a potentially lucrative tourist attraction — if and when the country opens up to tourists.

But there has been no investment in Dizin, 60 miles north of Tehran in the Alborz mountains, since it was a playground for the rich under the Shah.

Skis in the rental shops are often worn down to the wooden core, and boots are held together with wire.

"I think the lifts are safe, but I don't want to look too closely," said a European ski instructor brought in by Iran's Ski Federation, a private organization, to work with Iranian teachers. He did not want to give his name to avoid possible problems with the government, which runs the resort.

But even if it were fixed, the resort would remain a strange place for most skiers. Like the rest of Iran, it is policed by Revolutionary Guards who enforce strict Islamic laws.

The European instructor stands out in his electric red, white and purple ski suit. Most Iranian ski outfits are in the drab earth tones that dominate wardrobes to such an extent that even President Hashemi Rafsanjani recently told people to lighten up.

Islamic law requires women to cover their hair and bodies. The ski version of the chador is a baggy, knee-length nylon jacket over trousers. Women also must wear a cap or scarf.

The slopes are segregated, an Islamic convention not all are pleased with.

"I don't like it. I want to ski with my husband," said Ziba, a 30-year-old schoolteacher.

Ropes also divide the restaurant. If the Revolutionary Guards feel lenient, they may let husbands and wives eat together, or they may penalize a male ski instructor caught teaching women by suspending his credential for a few hours.

If they are in a dour mood, transgressors face jail terms.

Although more Iranians can hit the slopes than before, skiers said rising prices are thinning the crowds. Lift tickets rose from less than $2 last year to more than $4 this year. The basic government salary is $138 a month.

"Life for us just seems to get harder and harder," Ziba said.

GAYS: Recruiters must stop asking question within the Pentagon — known as Force Management and Personnel — instructing the various branches of the armed services to follow the president's order.

Until then, some recruiters and officers will "sense the president's intentions" and immediately cease asking the question while others are likely to "insist they see it in black and white" before making the change, said one general, speaking on condition he not be named.

"It will probably take a few days to get the message out," the general said.

In the meantime, the Pentagon's current policy deeming homosexuality "incompatible with military service" still stands.

Clinton ordered Aspin to draft by July 15 an executive order formally ending the 50-year ban on gays in the military.

The order would establish strict standards of sexual conduct for all members of the military — and it could, for instance, bar gays from certain kinds of duties involving close quarters.

Senior Pentagon officials welcomed the six-month delay.

"It was a very excellent discussion," said Gen. Colin Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. "We believe that the six-month period of time that we have been given to work this issue ... will give us the time to do this without the press of the current situation on us."

In the meantime, the Pentagon is devising an interim policy to deal with questions raised about homosexuals.

The major features of Clinton's policy are:

- New recruits will be told in some detail when they enter the service about the U.S. Code of Military Justice, which bars sodomy.
- Cases involving actual homosexual conduct — not just status — will be processed through "actual separation and discharge" from the military, as under current policy.
- Gay soldiers in the process of being discharged will be removed from active duty and placed in the standby reserve. That means they will receive no pay, no benefits, and are not attached to any military unit.
- Commanding officers will be given the right to change the assignment of people during the course of their separation proceedings.

One officer, speaking on condition of anonymity, said a "get ready to get ready" instruction had been sent to the field to alert units that they will have to adjust.

But as with many things in a bureaucracy as large as the one that oversees the nation's 1,793,000 men and women in uniform, the change may take time, officers cautioned.

The form that new recruits must fill out which asks them to state whether they are homosexual or bisexual is a standard form issued by DOD and must be changed by the department. That, too, will take some time to amend.

One service's spokesman said their recruiters located around the country might be telephoned about the change in order to help alleviate any confusion.

Danger at crippled dam lessens; peace efforts stop

PERUCA, Croatia (AP) — Danger to 20,000 Croatians living down river from a dynamited dam eased Saturday after emergency crews worked through the night to plug holes and keep the structure from bursting.

Croat and Serb forces declared a cease-fire Saturday in their battle for the Peruca dam. But clashes raged elsewhere in Croatia and in neighboring Bosnia-Herzegovina, where mortars reportedly killed two and wounded 50 in the capital, Sarajevo.

The new bloodletting in Croatia also killed efforts to bring peace to Bosnia. Mediators threw in the towel and handed the problem to the U.N. Security Council after warring Muslims and Serbs rejected a peace plan.

Fighting in Croatia broke out again last week as Croats launched an offensive to retake territory captured by Serbs in the 1991 civil war. Serb troops in retreat detonated mines in the dam on Thursday, touching off panic in towns and villages downstream.

On Friday, emergency workers prevented a major floodwave by opening the main sluice at the base of the dam, which provided most of eastern Croatia's electricity.

The violence in the Balkans has killed more than 28,000 people since Serb-dominated Yugoslavia began unraveling in 1991. Until last week, a January 1992 cease-fire quelled hostilities in Croatia, but Serbs held on to most of the territory they had occupied.

The war in Bosnia has continued without pause since Serbs, backed by Yugoslavia, took up arms to crush the secession declared by Muslims and Croats in February.

Mediators Cyrus Vance and Lord Owen acknowledged the intractability of the conflict Saturday. After five months of talks, they asked the U.N. Security Council to try to break the deadlock.

"It's because we feel that we have reached the end of the negotiating process here that we are bringing these things quite deliberately to a head and going to ... the Security Council," said Owen, the European Community mediator.

He said he and Vance, a U.N. envoy, will ask the council to use "political, economic or military" measures to impose a settlement if needed.

The State Department said Saturday that Secretary of State Warren Christopher will meet Vance and Owen in New York on Monday. Christopher also is to confer with U.N. Secretary General Boutros Boutros-Ghali.

Fierce fighting was reported in Sarajevo and other cities in Bosnia.

In Sarajevo, a mortar shell landed in front of the presidency building, and witnesses and hospital officials said 12 people were injured. Mortar shells continued to rain on the city, and by evening casualty figures stood at three dead and 81 wounded.

Two Bosnian Serb journalists were killed when a shell fired by Muslim-led government forces exploded in the center of Ilidza, a western suburb of Sarajevo, and another journalist was seriously injured, Tanjug said.

In the north, Bosnian radio reported heavy shelling in Bihac and artillery and infantry attacks in Gradacac, where it alleged Serbs were bringing in new equipment from Serbia.

In the east, Bosnian Serb forces said they recaptured the area of the Jezero hill overlooking the Drina River, which forms the Bosnia-Serbia border, and the village of Skelani, 15 miles southeast of Srebrenica, an embattled Muslim-held town.

India appeals for relief to clean up spill

NEW DELHI, India (NYT) — India Saturday called for international assistance to fight large oil slicks from a leaking Danish supertanker that threaten a rich reserve of marine life in the Bay of Bengal.

"I needed a response yesterday and I need it urgently in the next hours and days," said Environment Minister Kamal Nath, who surveyed the slicks on Friday. He said Coast Guard planes were spraying dispersants.

India has little expertise with large spills. One slick from the tanker, the Maersk Navigator, is 10 miles long, Nath said. The vessel, with a cargo of 84 million gallons that burned for six days before the fire was put out on Jan. 26, has emptied more than 30,000 tons of crude oil into the bay. The 24 crew members who abandoned her were rescued by a passing ship.

The disaster occurred after the supertanker had crashed into an empty Japanese tanker last week near an entrance to the Strait of Malacca in northwestern Indonesia. There are three major oil slicks. The 10-mile-long one is barely 10 miles from the southernmost tip of the Andaman and Nicobar archipelago.

Nath said that although the spraying had had some effects on the slick, which is four miles wide, it remained a threat.

The minister said the slick could hit Indira Point, the southernmost tip of the island chain, in a week.

Nuclear inspectors finish tour

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — U.N. nuclear inspectors completed their weeklong mission Saturday and said Iraq was cooperating with efforts to enforce Persian Gulf War disarmament accords.

Meanwhile, a missile inspection team visited a research base about 20 miles north of Baghdad.

The teams resumed their work earlier this month after Iraq dropped demands to have inspectors use Iraqi planes and limit their travels. The dispute was part of a showdown that prompted U.S.-led attacks on Iraq.

Maurizio Zifferero, leader of the nuclear team, said inspectors visited sites that previously were reviewed, but he refused to name the areas.

"It was completely satisfactory," he said. "The Iraqis have provided all the necessary assistance and have been efficient and effective."

Zifferero said teams would continue missions.

"There is still a lot of work to do," he said. "We are going to be in Iraq for quite some time."

He said the current team had not sought a complete list of foreign suppliers to Iraq's nuclear weapons program. But he said the team was preparing detailed questions "about what we would like to know" that would be submitted to Iraq in the next few weeks.

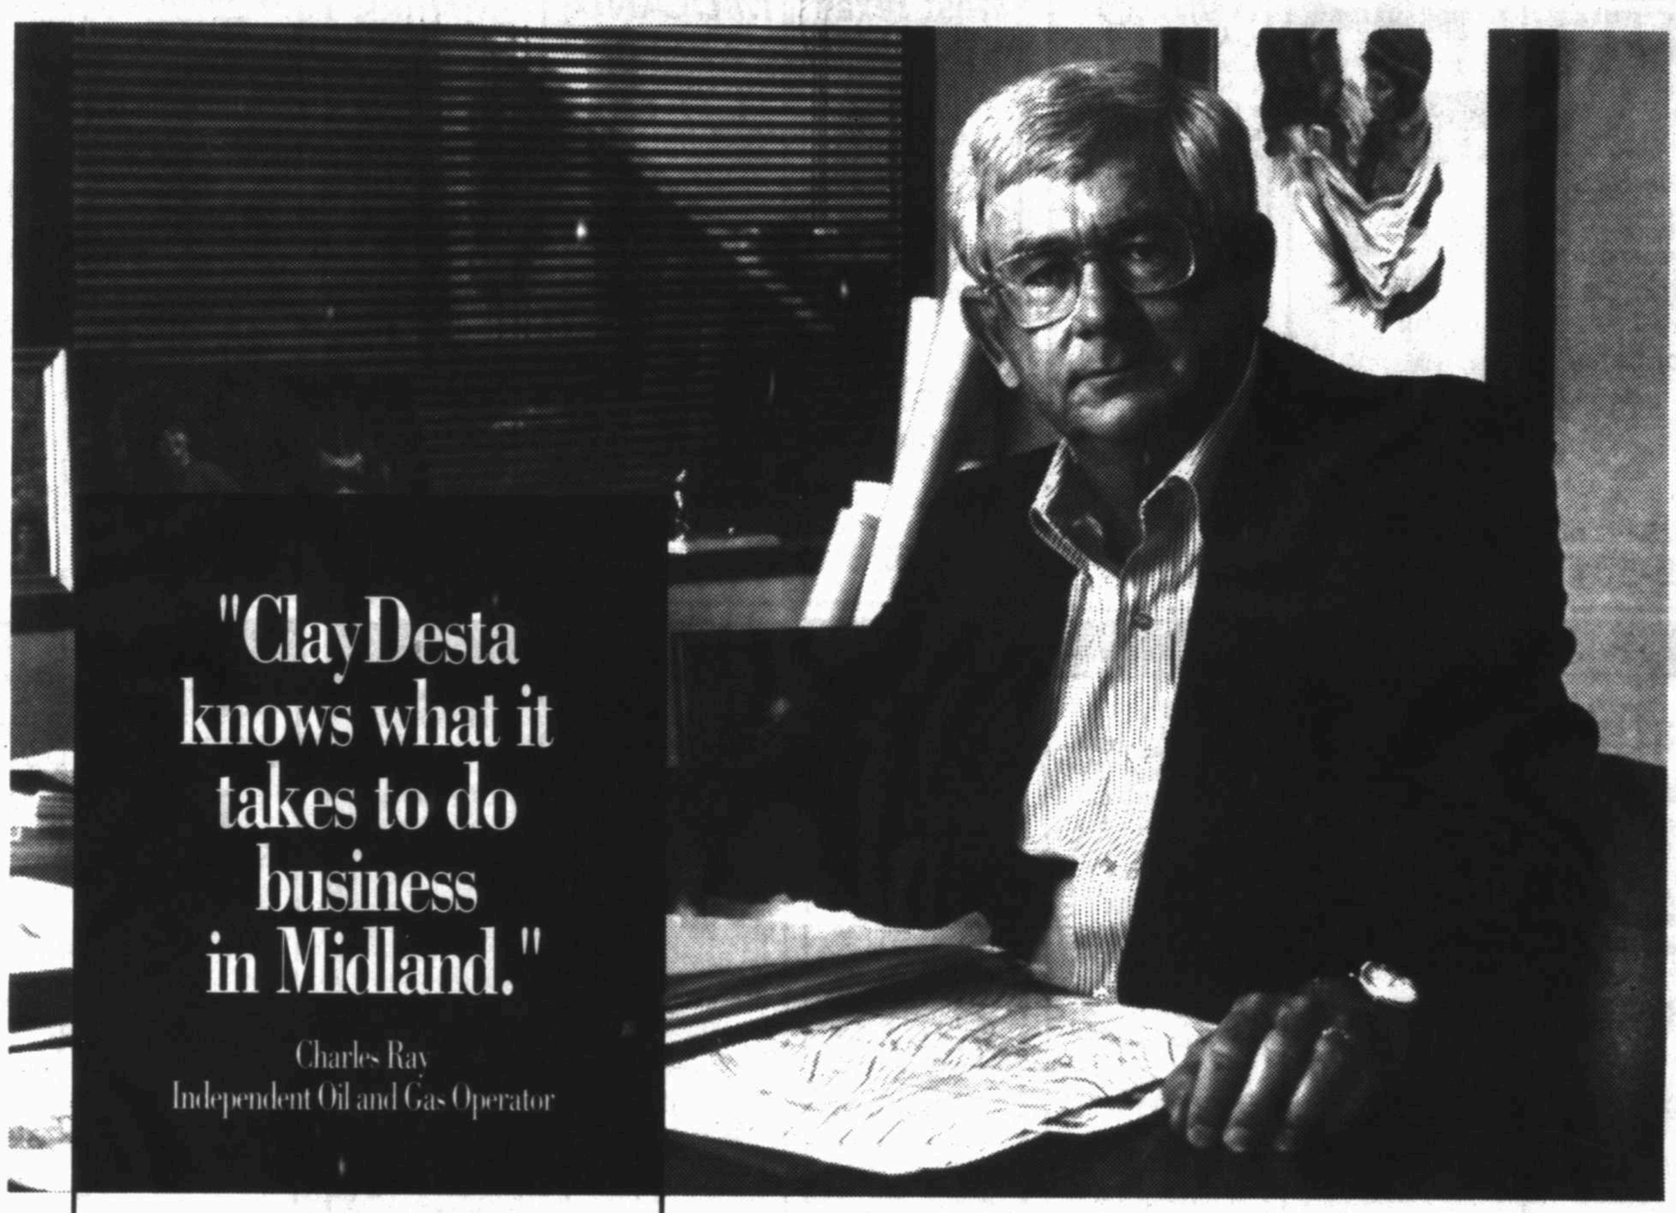

Iraq claims the United Nations already knows about 90 percent of its foreign suppliers, or about 80 companies, and has said it would supply information about the remainder.

Zifferero said again he was considering posting an inspector permanently to Baghdad, but had not raised the issue with the Iraqis.

The cease-fire resolutions require Iraq destroy its weapons of mass destruction, including ballistic missiles and nuclear facilities.

Nikita Smidovich, the leader of a U.N. ballistic team that left Baghdad on Friday, left behind four experts to observe the research base outside Baghdad. He refused to name the base; but said the Iraqis established the center last year for research and development of non-prohibited missiles and that it was still under construction.

U.S. troops make final sweep through Somali town

AFGOI, Somalia (NYT) — The U.S. Army 10th Mountain Division set out to plant a "big foot" in this farming village outside Mogadishu, launching an air assault to empty the town of the weapons that had terrorized it.

But leaflets and announcements blanketed the village the day before the division arrived, and the operation turned into an object lesson on good intentions gone awry.

Descending in 17 Blackhawk helicopters, 200 soldiers from Fort Drum, N.Y., fanned out over the dirt streets. A second contingent of 500 cordoned off the village. By evening's end, the fields of weapons that military spokesmen had said they would dig up proved barren. One rifle was seized.

The operation unfolded as the commander of the U.S. forces in Somalia, Marine Lt. Gen. Robert B. Johnston, said more than 1,000 troops would leave Somalia over the next 10 days, mostly support troops.

Speaking to The Associated Press, Johnston also said the United States could leave 1,000 logistical troops and a rapid deployment force of fewer than 2,000 troops after the relief operation had been completed.

Speaking as the first soldiers touched down in Afgoi, Army Maj. Martin Stanton said the operation was intended to secure the first section of the road from Mogadishu to Baidoa, the 15-mile stretch to Afgoi.

"This is a progressive-type of involvement," Stanton, of Orlando, Fla., said. "We are not looking for confrontation, but to maintain a secure environment for the Somali people and for the delivery of relief supplies."

He added that the object of the deployment, which landed 200 men in a minute or so, was to intimidate looters and bandits. American psychological specialists had entered the village in the last two weeks to interview residents and said they expected that the operation would last two or three days.

Farmers greeted the overwhelming American presence with indulgence, happy that their difficulty with the bandits had brought in the military but doubtful that the very public display, with 28 journalists' tagging along, would accomplish much.

"We work in the day and take our food to market," said a farmer who covered his head in a white hood as he pointed out places that he suspected hid weapons. "And every night they come to our houses and steal whatever we make."

"At night nobody can walk on this street," he added, crouching along the walls of Hawataka Street, named for a heroine of Somali independence.

Many farmers said they felt that the operation would be unsuccessful if it did not include house-to-house searches and if it were cut short too soon. "If the Americans leave here," one said, "the bandits will start all over again."

Abubakar Mohammed Ali and his wife, Mehobo Yussif Ali, were coming in from their fields when the American deployment blocked them from crossing the road to go home. The farmer carried an ax that was a blade stuck in a branch, along with a saber.

EC devalues Irish pound

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The Irish pound was devalued by 10 percent on Saturday in the latest move by the European Community to stabilize its battered monetary system.

The Irish government had vigorously defended the pound, or punt, against speculative pressures for months, partly by raising interest rates.

Turmoil in the European Monetary System has cast doubts on EC plans for an economic and monetary union.

The new punt rate takes effect on Monday. The realignment does not alter the pound's value against dollar. No other EC currency were changed during the emergency weekend meeting.

Devaluation makes a country's exports cheaper and tends to boost the economy, but imports become more expensive and can fuel inflation. Ireland, one of the poorest EC nations, is already beleaguered by an unemployment rate that could approach 20 percent by the end of the year.

The devaluation was the fourth reshuffling of the European Monetary System since September. Last fall, the British pound and the Italian lira were forced out of the system, which sets limits currency exchange rates.

Give Yourself the Gift...Of Independence!

JCPenney Life's Long Term Care Insurance provides just the right touch of additional protection to your health care program, whenever you or a loved one needs a little extra help recovering from an injury or illness. Without that help your lifestyle and financial independence could be threatened.

And when you consider the average nursing home stay is between $25,000 to $30,000 per year,[1] and that Medicare pays less than 2 percent of your costs,[2] it's reassuring to know there's a remedy that relieves you from paying these bills out of your pocket. Plus, this plan is from JCPenney Life, a company who's name you already know and trust for quality and value. JCPenney Life is rated A (Excellent) by A.M. Best Company, an independent analyst of insurance companies nationwide.

Accidental discovery may end obesity

WASHINGTON --Researchers may have discovered a way to end obesity----- by accident!

In a study with a potential cholesterol lowering agent, scientists noted an unusual side effect. Instead of lower cholesterol levels, patients receiving a natural plant colloid lost weight while body weight in a control group remained constant.

The scientists say the mechanism behind the weight loss is not clear, but suggest it is partially due to a decrease in the intestinal absorption of calories. Scientists in another study published in the British Journal of Nutrition, found that patients consuming the same colloid lost weight in spite of being instructed not to alter normal eating patterns. Despite this evidence, other scientists may not agree on the weight loss benefits of colloids. Someday, pending further study, there could be universal agreement that colloids are helpful in confronting the problem of obesity.

National Dietary Research, whose research topics have been the subject of articles published in recent medical and nutritional journals, has successfully incorporated a series of colloids into a chewable food tablet called FS-1. When used as directed, FS-1 replaces high calorie fats with lower calorie nutrients, thus providing optimum nutrition with a minimum number of fat calories. According to an article published in the American Journal of Clinical Nutrition, consciously limiting the amount of food one consumes is not necessary to lose weight, provided you limit the fat

A Florida company has obtained exclusive distribution rights to FS-1, which is available through pharmacies and other health care professionals.

Your Clinique Bonus: Fresh Approaches

It's Clinique Bonus Week!

It always works. The pure lift skin gets from Clinique's simple three-step, three-minute system. And now is the best time to start up (or stock up)--because any Clinique purchase of 13.50 or more gets you these seven "Fresh Approaches": Honey Ginger Different Lipstick -- a good glistener. Oil-free Rinse-off Eye Makeup Solvent. Dramatically Different Moisturing Lotion, the famous "drink" all skins love. Suede-soft Honey Bare Beyond Blusher (with special Eye Applicator) for cheeks, lids, lips. Plus--Non-Aerosol Hairspray/Pump and a portable styling hair brush -- all in a smart plaid zip-case.

ONE BONUS TO A CUSTOMER

For a fast, free skin analysis, come and meet the CLINIQUE COMPUTER
Clinique is a total system of skin care. And the very heart of the system is the Clinique Computer. Programmed by a group of leading dermatologists, it asks eight essential questions and analyzes the answers to determine skin type and the proper Clinique products and procedures. The World in brief

■ Pope gets clean bill of health; prefers pizza

ROME — Pope John Paul II was given a clean bill of health at his latest checkup, and he's sticking to his grueling pace and his favorite diet of pasta and pizza, his spokesman was quoted Saturday as saying.

Joaquin Navarro reportedly dismissed as "irresponsible journalism" recent reports that the pope was in failing health.

John Paul, 72, underwent surgery on July 15 to remove an intestinal tumor that doctors described as benign. He had a complete checkup on Jan. 18, and all the laboratory tests came back normal, Navarro told the Italian news weekly Panorama.

"The health of the pope is excellent," Navarro was quoted saying. "I'd say better than before. He had gallstones that were removed along with the tumor. Now his digestion is better."

Since the surgery, the pope has sometimes looked tired.

The pope is to depart Wednesday on an eight-day trip to Benin, Uganda and Sudan. The African visit is one of five foreign trips John Paul plans this year.

■ Germans light candles to mark Hilter's rise

BERLIN — More than 300,000 Germans carried candles symbolizing peace to mark the 60th anniversary Saturday of Hitler's rise to power and ask the eternal question of how the tragedy of Nazism could happen.

There were rallies in a score of cities, and more were to be held on Sunday.

About 100,000 people carrying candles in sub-freezing weather formed a glittering river through the center of Berlin.

At 6 p.m. the candles were extinguished and lights on the Brandenburg Gate turned off. It was a symbolic counter to the torchlight parade of 25,000 Nazis after Adolf Hitler was sworn in as chancellor on Jan. 30, 1933.

"Sixty years ago, jackboots pounded on the street here and went into barbarism. That's why we are here, to prevent it from happening again," said Ulrich Roloff-Momin, the head of Berlin's culture department.

About 120,000 demonstrators joined "chains of light" in Duesseldorf, and about 80,000 in Dortmund. Smaller crowds were reported in other cities.

■ Rebels wage attacks in Eastern Angola

LUANDA, Angola — Rebels were reported closing in on northeastern Angola on Saturday in a bid to tighten their grip on the country's diamond-mining region.

Government military sources said rebels appeared to be gaining ground near Saurimo. The town, 500 miles east of Luanda, the capital, is the gateway to diamond mines in northern Lunda Norte province.

It was not possible to independently verify the reports of rebel troop movements.

Guerrillas have advanced on various parts of the country since peace accords fell apart in October, and they are believed to control more than 75 percent of the vast southern African nation.

The rebels appear to be dedicated to seizing the rest of the country rather than mounting an attack on heavily fortified Luanda.

Three days of U.N.-sponsored peace talks in Ethiopia ended in deadlock Saturday. But a statement issued by the government and rebel representatives said both sides were committed to seeking ways to restore peace.

■ Report: Russian major tried to kill Yeltsin

MOSCOW — A Russian army major said to have made two cluster bombs in an attempt to assassinate Russian President Boris Yeltsin has been arrested in Moscow, the ITAR-Tass news agency said Saturday.

The major, who was not identified, was detained in Moscow on Wednesday after he was caught hiding inside the Russian government complex. ITAR-Tass said the suspect never managed to attack Yeltsin.

It was the first reported assassination attempt against Yeltsin since he was elected president of Russia in June 1991.

Bomb explodes in Bogota, kills at least 16

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — A powerful car bomb blamed on cocaine traffickers exploded Saturday in a commercial district, killing at least 16 people and injuring 33, radio reported.

Police said at least four children were killed when the 220-pound bomb went off in an area crowded with shoppers looking for school supplies. At least 100 buildings were damaged.

RCN radio quoted prosecutors in its report on the casualties.

Bodies were strewn about in streets covered with debris and broken glass. A police officer told the Caracol radio network that passers-by took off their jackets to cover the dead.

There was no claim of responsible for the bombing, but suspicion fell on the leader of the Medellin drug cartel, Pablo Escobar, who escaped from prison in July and later announced plans to commit terrorist acts.

The car bomb was typical of attacks waged the cartel, which rarely claims credit for terrorist acts. During a 1989-90 terrorist campaign, the cartel set off about 300 bombs.

The bombing was the third explosion in the capital in the past 10 days. On Jan. 21, two bombs went off in northern Bogota, injuring 17 people.

After Saturday's attack, President Cesar Gaviria called an emergency meeting of the national security council to discuss ways to combat terrorist attacks.

Belgians leave Zaire after deadly riots

BRAZZAVILLE, Congo (AP) — Zairian presidential guards evacuated nearly 400 Belgians on President Mobutu Sese Seko's yacht Saturday after telling Belgian commandos not to intervene following two days of deadly rioting.

Extra soldiers at the French Embassy in Zaire's capital, Kinshasa, and the arrival of Belgian troops in neighboring Congo appeared to have helped restore calm on Saturday.

The rioting began over pay, and pitted troops loyal to Mobutu against soldiers who support an opposition movement that demands the president make good on his promise to give power to a democratic government.

Mobutu's presidential guard took control of much of the capital. Businessmen reached by telephone said many people returned to work. The city's international airport closed during the rioting.

Nation in brief

■ L.A. opens city's first modern subway

LOS ANGELES — Mayor Tom Bradley blew a whistle and said "All aboard" on Saturday at a ceremony inaugurating the Metro Red Line, the first modern subway to open in the nation's second largest city.

"This day is here," Bradley told about 300 people gathered in a downtown station beneath Pershing Square. "We have our first Metro Line system that will take us into the 21st Century."

The first segment of the Red Line, which took six years and $1.45 billion to build, connects the downtown Union Station with MacArthur Park.

Passengers will buy $1.10 tickets from automatic machines and ride on the honor system without turnstiles.

The Red Line is part of a $5.3 billion effort to wean Southern Californians from their cars and into public transportation.

Transit officials call the subway the backbone of a Southern California rail system that when completed by 2010 will carry an estimated 500,000 passengers a day on 400 miles of track.

Two above-ground lines, running 22 miles from Long Beach to Los Angeles and to three suburbs, are already open.

The city's last major public transportation system, the Pacific Electric Railway "Red Cars," stopped rolling in 1955 as freeways took over.

■ Beers begins new life with foster parents

MINEOLA, N.Y. — Free after more than two weeks held captive in an underground bunker, 10-year-old Katie Beers is enjoying her new life as a child.

Living with a foster parents, the girl whose kidnapping gained national attention has enjoyed new school friends, classmates' birthday parties and dinner at a Chinese restaurant.

"She is having a ball," said a friend of the foster family, who agreed to speak about Katie on condition of anonymity.

Katie even has a new look after having her hair permed. She was less enthusiastic about having her teeth checked.

"She balked at going to the dentist," the source said.

Katie, reported missing in late December, was found Jan. 13 in the bizarre subterranean prison where she allegedly was chained by the neck and sexually abused by a man described as a family friend.

Katie is living on Long Island with experienced foster parents in their 40s who have four children of their own. News media are generally withholding the family's name and hometown to protect her privacy.

■ Insurance agent charged in boy's death

SAN FRANCISCO — An insurance agent who investigators said had five life-insurance policies on a 9-year-old boy has been arrested in the child's death.

Thaun Wu, 44, was arrested Friday for allegedly hiring three men to kill Michael Nguyen, whose beaten body was found Sept. 2 in Golden Gate Park. Michael was the son of Wu's former girlfriend.

Wu had written policies worth $750,000 on the boy and named himself and his wife as beneficiaries, police said. The boy's mother was not aware the policies had been written, said homicide Inspectors Jim Bergstrom and Tony Camilleri. Wu was charged with kidnapping, robbery, insurance fraud, conspiracy to murder and murder for financial gain.

He also was charged with conspiracy to commit murder and conspiracy to commit insurance fraud in connection with the near-fatal shooting ambush last year of a longtime friend.

Wu had taken out a $150,000 policy on Phuoc Huyhn, who survived being shot five times.

The San Francisco Examiner reported Friday that investigators believe Wu may have written policies on as many 100 friends, relatives and acquaintances without their knowledge.

■ Couple adopts set of infant quadruplets

NEW ORLEANS — Infant quadruplets put up for adoption by their young mother will be raised together by a generous couple taking the babies home over the weekend.

"Thank goodness this isn't my first time around," said Gina, a mother of two children who didn't want her full name used because of privacy concerns.

She and her husband went to Baton Rouge, about 70 miles northwest of New Orleans, on Saturday to pick up the babies.

Gina, a special education teacher, and her husband, a government employee, are black. So are the babies. Adoption agency officials were thrilled to find black household willing to take all four girls.

The children were born prematurely on Sept. 16 in Baton Rouge. Each weighed just 2 pounds at birth. They already had been offered for adoption by the unmarried, 20-year-old mother, who was unaware she carried quadruplets until late in her pregnancy.

The couple were looking to adopt a daughter, but heard about the quadruplets and decided to adopt them all.

The baby girls have been living at a foster home. Each now weighs between 8 pounds and 9 pounds.

For many gays, lifting ban won't end worries

By David Foster
Associated Press writer

While President Clinton's plan to lift the military's ban on homosexuals would make coming out of the closet legally safe, many gays in the service say legality is far from their only worry.

"Even if they lift the ban, that's not the end of the prejudice," said "Mary," a lesbian reservist and Vietnam veteran who has no intention of going public with her sexual orientation.

Mary is a pseudonym. She didn't want her real name used in a story that her superiors might see. The same goes for her rank, age, location — or even the branch of service she's in.

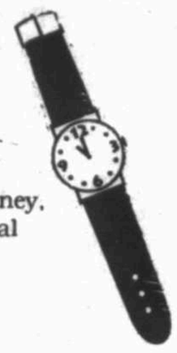

Fearful? You bet, Mary says. She and other homosexuals in the military say anti-gay sentiments are deeply ingrained in the service and cannot be swept away by the stroke of a president's pen.

They predict no rush of gays to enlist, nor a widespread coming-out of those already serving.

Clinton on Friday ordered Defense Secretary Les Aspin to draft an executive order by July 15 to lift the military's ban on homosexuals.

Until then, recruits won't be asked about their sexual orientation. But those already in the service who declare their homosexuality could face transfer into the standby reserves, in which they would receive no pay or benefits.

Computer age starts fear of eavesdropping

BOSTON (AP) — Computer lore is filled with tales of hackers worming their way into databanks from the outside, but companies may face bigger security threats within their own walls.

From the embarrassment of a private memo made public to financial harm caused by an employee stealing company secrets, computer security in the information age can be vital to corporate health.

"Historically, in the paper system, nice people didn't go looking inside my desk," said William Hugh Murray, a computer security expert for the Deloitte & Touche consulting firm.

"The rules for computers appear to be different," he said. "Whatever I can see on a computer, it's OK for me to look at."

The latest computer networks allow employees to communicate with each other and store and recall data from central information hubs. Broader information access has opened the door for more internal snooping at businesses.

Experts say it's difficult to gauge how much eavesdropping occurs, since companies generally don't want to acknowledge publicly if they've suffered a security breach.

Robinson steps down as American Express chairman

By Stefan Fatsis
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Unable to reverse waves of pressure from angry shareholders and directors who wanted him ousted, James D. Robinson III resigned as chairman of struggling American Express Co., the company confirmed Saturday.

Robinson, 57, who led the nation's second-biggest financial services company for nearly 16 years, submitted a resignation letter late Friday. The move came just four days after Robinson mounted a successful countercoup against the 19-member board to retain power.

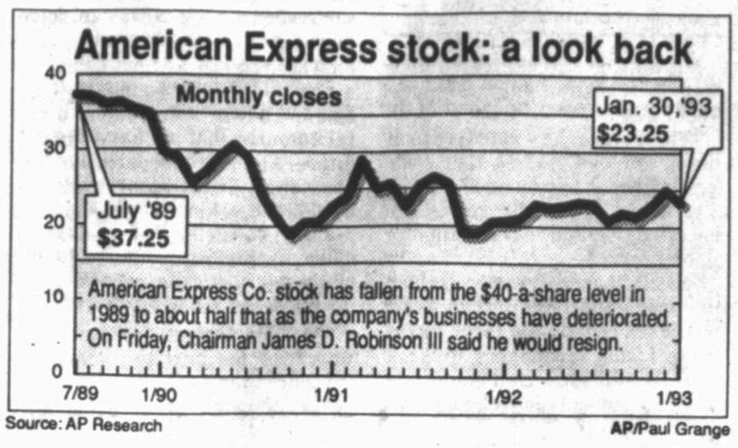

He became the third CEO of a major company to resign in the last week under intense pressure. The heads of IBM and Westinghouse Electric Corp. also stepped down in the latest turmoil in Fortune 500 boardrooms.

Robinson's resignation was first reported by The Associated Press.

"In this environment, I think I drew an unnecessary amount of criticism," Robinson said in a telephone interview. "But perception is reality and I decided to to deal with it.'"

On Monday, American Express' board voted 15-4 to keep Robinson as chairman and promote his hand-picked successor, Harvey Golub, to chief executive. The board last September had asked Robinson to lead a search for his successor, after he told them he planned to step down before the company's mandatory retirement age of 60.

The directors even increased Robinson's authority by appointing him chairman and chief executive of the company's Shearson Lehman Brothers brokerage unit, which has performed far weaker than other Wall Street firms despite several restructurings.

Source: AP Research AP/Paul Grange

But three board members resigned in protest, the company's stock price fell nearly 13 percent in four days and institutional shareholders were outraged. About a dozen institutional investors, owning about 20 percent of American Express common stock, met with Golub on Thursday to express their displeasure with Robinson's retention.

Robinson said in a statement he was resigning because "the good of the company has always been and continues to be my primary and overriding concern."

He said that since the board moves, "concerns have risen as to whether, by continuing as chairman, I would impinge on Harvey's ability to fully act on his own as CEO."

"This is a big misperception," Robinson said. "We made what we thought was the best decision, the right decision. However, it led to unnecessary confusion in the minds of some investors and the press. It is clear to me that the misperception could have an adverse impact on American Express."

Under Robinson, an urbane Atlanta-bred banking family scion who joined American Express in December 1970, the company enhanced its standing as the world's premier charge card company. He expanded its franchise worldwide, making the familiar green, gold and platinum cards a status symbol.

But Robinson also was responsible for American Express' largely failed attempt to become a "financial supermarket," offering services for a range of audiences. A glaring mistake was the purchase of the ailing E.F. Hutton & Co. brokerage shortly after the 1987 stock market crash, and the subsequent turmoil it caused within Shearson.

In the last three years, American Express' dominance of the card business has been eroded by other companies offering similar cards with cheaper fees.

Dying man loses fight with tobacco road

BELLEVILLE, Ill. (AP) — A dying man lost his fight to hold the tobacco industry responsible for smoking's ills, but anti-smoking forces say the war has just begun.

"I think the emphasis is on breaking the ground and planting the seeds," said Richard Daynard, who runs the Tobacco Products Liability Project at Northeastern University Law School in Boston. "Reaping the harvest will be up to the next case."

St. Clair County jurors late Friday rejected Charles Kueper's claims that R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. and the Tobacco Institute conspired to conceal the dangers of smoking and thereby helped cause his lung cancer.

Tobacco attorneys argued Kueper, 51, chose to smoke almost two packs of Winstons a day even though he knew about warning labels on cigarette packages that began appearing in 1966. They also contended that the type of cancer Kueper has is not directly linked to smoking.

"The jury placed the responsibility in the right hands," said Dave Brenton, president of Smokers Rights Alliance and editor of American Smokers Journal in Frankfort, Ky. "We live in a world full of choices. Nobody makes us do anything, thank goodness."

The 10-week trial gained national attention because it was the first of its type since the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that warning labels do not protect cigarette makers from lawsuits.

Several jurors said after the verdict that Kueper's admission that he continued smoking for more than two decades even though he knew about the warnings hurt his case.

The jury rejected the suggestion of his attorney that he get as much as $48 million in damages.

Joe Longinotti, an independent consultant watching the trial for the Salomon Bros. investment house, called it a "total, complete, victory" for the tobacco industry.

Kueper's attorney, Bruce Cook, did not return a telephone message Saturday.

Lieutenant governor addresses newspaper group

By Jay Jorden
Associated Press writer

DALLAS — A Feb. 20 deadline looms for Texas lawmakers to pass a constitutional amendment on school finance that voters can consider by a court-mandated June deadline, Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock said Saturday.

"I want to impress upon you something," he told newspaper executives and others. "Your schools are about to close."

The state Supreme Court has given the Legislature until June 1 to come up with a constitutional plan to equalize funding among rich and poor school districts. The ruling last January was the court's third scrapping of a school funding plan.

The February deadline would allow enough time for the proposed amendment to be placed on the May 1 ballot and voted upon.

"Think of the humiliation. What in the world are the other 49 states in this great country of ours going to think about Texas letting its public schools close?" Bullock asked Texas Press Association members.

"It is a very real possibility, considering the lateness of the day. Check your watch," he said.

But Bullock still expressed hope that a constitutional proposal would pass.

"The Senate has acted responsibly," he said, adding that senators last week approved 27-4 a bill that would effectively retain the so-called "Robin Hood" finance plan.

School finance, greater budgetary needs and the effort to avoid new taxes remain the three major issues facing lawmakers, Bullock said. He still supported equalizing funds for students in rich and poor school districts as a way to solve the first.

"These children do not belong to a school district's boundary," he said. "They're the greatest natural resource that we have for the future. And we're jeopardizing the good of all Texas school children by merely looking to see whether my school district gets more money or gets less money than looking at the big picture of what's good for all Texas school children."

The state budget proposal submitted for the next two years totals more than $67 billion, he said.

Other thorny issues, including a telecommunications industry proposal, face lawmakers as their 140-day regular session continues.

Bullock said the proposal is hard for him to understand. "But you know what? Not many members of the Legislature do, either," he said.

But Jim Lydon of Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. in Dallas, a member of the audience for Bullock's luncheon speech, praised Bullock for trying to negotiate an understanding with lawmakers.

"To the lieutenant governor's credit, he is trying to get the parties together," he said. "As long as the two sides continue to talk, we have progress."

Lydon said the industry's proposal is attempting to address increased competition, particularly among long-distance carriers and providers of equipment and other services.

Ed Sterling, TPA director of member services, said 130 people attended the luncheon at the 46th annual Midwinter Convention and 1993 Texas Newspaper Industry Trade Show. A total of 275 registered for the three-day event.

Coastal Corp. exec may take energy post

HOUSTON (AP) — Michael Beatty, executive vice president and general counsel at Coastal Corp., is expected to be named to the No. 2 post at the Energy Department, the Houston Chronicle reports, quoting government and industry sources.

Beatty, 45, organized oil and gas industry support for the Clinton-Gore ticket during the 1992 campaign.

As executive vice president and general counsel at Coastal, he is well-versed in the natural gas business, a qualification that fits well with the Clinton administration's policy of encouraging natural gas use.

Even with President Bush's roots in the oil business, Beatty courted support for Clinton by arguing that the industry suffered under the last administration.

Beatty was interviewed Wednesday by Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary, sources said.

Former speaker defends DFW lobbying fee

DALLAS (AP) — Former Texas House Speaker Gib Lewis is becoming a lobbyist for the Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, which will pay him $9,000 a month.

Some elected officials are questioning whether the fee is exorbitant. But airport officials and Lewis defended the fee.

Lewis agreed to represent the airport this month, hours after he stepped down as one of the state's most powerful lawmakers, The Dallas Morning News reported Saturday. He went to work Jan. 15.

Lewis was hired to persuade his former colleagues to pass legislation that will allow the airport to expand without approval of nearby cities.

His contract comes up for formal approval Tuesday by the DFW Airport Board. Its chairman, William Cooper, said he expects no trouble.

"I don't think there's any question that he has relationships down there that cannot be duplicated," Cooper said. "When you are facing the opposition we'll be facing, you can't settle for second best."

Not everyone is happy about paying Lewis $110,000 a year.

"The way I figure it, that's about $10,000 for booze, $10,000 for other entertainment, $20,000 for political contributions and $1,000 an hour for Mr. Lewis," Dallas City Councilman Jerry Bartos said.

"That's just an outrageous misuse of public money and an insult to the people of this area," Bartos said.

Lewis said his fees are fair. He will receive less than half of the money after paying salaries of four employees, he said.

"I'd be a happy camper if it was all mine. It sounds real sexy to say ol' Gib is pocketing a hundred grand, but in reality I'm running a business down here," Lewis told The Morning News.

Grapevine, Euless and Irving have disputed the airport's $3.5 billion expansion proposal.

The Grapevine City Council agreed last year to pay Bill Clayton, who preceded Gibson as Speaker, $4,000 a month to lobby in its behalf. Clayton was speaker for eight years, from 1975 to 1983, longer than any other speaker until Lewis, who then held the job for the next 10 years.

The amount of Lewis' contract with the airport board was contained on page 85 of the airport board's operations committee agenda. On the cover sheet, the contract was wrapped in with more than $2 million in professional services, supplies and equipment purchases.

Officials hear finance plans

AUSTIN (AP) — If lawmakers dawdle on adopting a school finance plan, Texas schools may be forced to shut their doors, an education panel chairwoman said Saturday.

The House Public Education Committee heard testimony Saturday on several proposals, as lawmakers try to develop a constitutional school funding system by a June 1 court deadline.

Rep. Libby Linebarger called the committee meeting just minutes after being named chairwoman on Friday.

Bills try to break NFC jinx

■ Buffalo, loser of two straight NFL title games, and Dallas, absent from the Super Bowl for 14 years, battle for the league championship.

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

PASADENA, Calif. — Something has to give today. Two teams of destiny, one trying to avoid the unforgivable and the other trying to complete the unimaginable, could make this a Super Bowl that's unforgettable.

The Buffalo Bills are only the second team to make it to three straight Super Bowls. But if they fall to the Dallas Cowboys they become the only team to lose three straight.

■ Related stories, 2B-4B

That's the kind of losers' label that can haunt a franchise for years.

Dallas, once America's Team and participants in five Super Bowls in nine years, is back to the NFL championship game for the first time since 1979. The stunning return is only three seasons since they were 1-15 and less than four years after a housecleaning that ousted the only president, coach and player personnel director the team had in its nearly 30-year history.

Certainly Buffalo has the most to lose — a third straight Super Bowl.

"A must-win?" Bills coach Marv Levy said.

"World War II was a must-win."

Yes, it may be only a football game, but it is THE football game and 106,000 fans will fill the Rose Bowl and more than 200 million around the world will watch on television.

If Dallas wins, it would become the third straight NFC East team to win — the New York Giants and Washington Redskins beat the Bills the past two years.

That would be a record for one division and also would give the NFC its ninth straight Super Bowl victory. There are millions of kids who weren't born when the Los Angeles Raiders

Emmitt Smith, here carrying the ball last season, is a hit with both the NFL and MTV crowds.

■ Emmitt Smith exudes confidence on and off field.

By Thomas George
N.Y. Times News Service

IRVING — For the funky, the hip-hop and the proper slant on all that really matters in Super Bowl XXVII, MTV host Bill Bellamy last week turned to the spot where youth reigns in the National Football League: the Dallas Cowboys' locker room.

The Cowboys are the youngest team in the NFL. Twenty-three players on Dallas' 47-man roster are 26 or younger. Bellamy worked the locker room as if he were at a swank nightclub schmoozing with the stars, and the Cowboys simply ate it up.

Bellamy got with running back Emmitt Smith and together, in front of his locker, they introduced a music video called "Rumpshaker." It was an appropriate selection, given the way that Smith runs with the football.

By early afternoon, Bellamy, 23, had introduced a video with each of nearly all the Cowboys. But one person stood out.

"Emmitt Smith was very confident," Bellamy said. "He shook my hand and looked me directly in the eyes. You can tell they are a young, hip team because most everyone in there seemed to know a lot about MTV. But Smith, he had the personality. He had the confidence. It seems to make him a natural leader."

It is not the first time that Emmitt Smith had loomed so large, standing out in a crowd.

He enters this Super Bowl, against the Buffalo Bills on Sunday in the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, Calif., as the only league rushing champion to make the big show. As a matter of fact, the 23-year-old Smith has two straight NFL rushing titles, and is the first player to accomplish that feat since Eric Dickerson did it in 1983 and 1984.

After gaining 1,713 rushing yards during the 1992 regular season and 228 more in the playoffs, Smith is 59 yards short of totaling 2,000 for the entire season.

Star Bill defender plays through pain

By Hal Bock
AP Sports Writer

PASADENA, Calif. — The pain is like a hot poker stabbing him every so often, reminding Bruce Smith to sleep on his other side and to avoid sneezing.

That's what life's like with sore ribs. The ache won't go away until he can get some rest and that won't happen until after the Super Bowl.

Because opposing offensive linemen know Smith is hurting, they try to exploit the problem. He would expect nothing less and chuckles when he thinks about their tactics.

"They stick their hands in your chest," he said. "Sometimes, they put their helmets on your ribs." You can almost feel the pain as Smith talks about it. You want to wince, until you see him smile broadly.

"The strong shall survive," he said. "I wouldn't have it any other way."

Smith has done more than survive. He has become the cornerstone of Buffalo's defense and perhaps the team itself. He led the Bills with 14 sacks this season and has 92 for his career.

It was a comeback season for him after he was limited to five games because of a bad left knee last season. He overcame suggestions that he might be malingering and suggestions that, after seven seasons and at age 29, Smith might be done.

The nastiest part were the whispers by Buffalo fans, who suspected that he wasn't anxious to play hurt. Smith became the center of a classic Super Bowl Week flap when, in the days before last year's game against Washington, he said he had received racially-tinted Cowboys truly return as 'America's Team'

Patterson

There are those poor, unfortunate souls around the newsroom who simply roll their eyes, clear their throats and say "Puh-leez!" when it is mentioned — the Dallas Cowboys are once again "America's Team."

But those given to sudden eyeball twitches are mostly Bronco fans, so who cares what they think anyway. (Unless, of course, the subject is how to lose Super Bowls. If that's the subject, then our ears should perk right up.)

Fact is, simply because people are debating whether the Cowboys are to be bestowed once again with that title means they are indeed "America's Team."

Any proof that is needed comes from a wide range of so-called experts. Baseball style.

A baseball instructor from Miami, a minor league manager with roots in the Pacific Northwest, a minor leaguer from Cajun country, a part-time Canadian, and a future Hall of Fame pitcher from Holland all like the Cowboys, the job Jerry Jones and Jimmy

Before we met she was a mere sports observer, but now she is schooled in the art of sports study ("I taught her everything she knows," he said while once again brandishing his ever misguided male ego).

But then there is the occasional moment when a query of hers leads to, shall we say, a Discussion.

Like the other night. The Discussion centered on whether the Super Bowl champions had the right to call themselves World Champions. Now, since I really have no strong feelings one way or the other on the subject, I decided to play Devil's Advocate when she said the NFL champs are not World Champs. Mistake No. 1 on my part.

LOS ANGELES — Coach Jimmy Johnson knows a slip of the lip can sink his ship. So he's taking no chances with visitors to the Dallas Cowboys' Super Bowl training camp.

On Friday, former Dallas linebacker Lee Roy Jordan, a member of the Cowboys' Ring of Fame who played on three Super Bowl teams, was asked to leave the team's practice along with some of team owner Jerry Jones' friends.

"Nothing against any of them," Johnson said. "But this is for the Super Bowl. People want to be in the know and they might see a play, brag to someone and then that guy will tell someone else and before you know it, someone on the other team hears what we're doing."

Wannstedt on defenders' minds

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES — Win one for Wannstedt.

That's what some of the Dallas Cowboys are saying about their defensive coordinator Dave Wannstedt, who will take over the head coaching job of the Chicago Bears after the Super Bowl.

"He's been a great coach for us and a great inspiration," linebacker Ken Norton Jr. said. "He came in my second year, and my play has elevated. He's been one of the best coaches I've ever had.

"We want to go out with a big bang and send him off with a spark. We want him to know that in Chicago he won't have the luxury of all these good players on defense."

Tackle Russell Maryland agreed.

"We'd like to give Dave a big sendoff," Maryland said of Wannstedt. "He's meant a lot to my career."

Wannstedt fashioned the NFL's top-ranked defense, and it had the Bears and the New York Giants bidding for his services.

Wannstedt developed his defensive philosophy under coach Jimmy Johnson.

"It goes back to Pittsburgh back in the 1970s with Hugh Green and Rickey Jackson as the two ends," Wannstedt said. "Then we went to Oklahoma State.

"We were undersized and didn't have enough people, so the only way we could be competitive was to attack the line of scrimmage with our quickness. From there we just kept adding to it."

Johnson doesn't think it has been a distraction for Wannstedt to take the Bears' job in the midst of playoff preparations.

"The players have strong feelings for Dave as I do," Johnson said. "I see everything as a positive."

Wannstedt calls his style "react and attack."

He just hopes his defense can handle the Bills' no-huddle offense.

"We can't afford to give up a cheap play or big plays," Wannstedt said. "We'll have to win the turnover battle."

It will be a special day for Wannstedt.

"When I look back and see what we've accomplished in four years, it is pretty amazing," he said. "There were a lot of guys who helped pull us through after we started 1-15 like the Nortons and James Washingtons and Jim Jeffcoats.

"When you have guys that make that type of committment and then at some point down the road, in our case four years down the road, you do have success. From a coaching standpoint, it's a great feeling."

Wannstedt's top-ranked defense is without big-name players.

Aikman pedistal nears height of Staubach's

By Thomas George
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Madison Avenue looks at Troy Aikman and sees stars.

Chiseled features, bright smile. Articulate with a winning personality.

If the nation's advertisers had their way, Aikman right now would be pushing everything from jackets to jeans to jeeps.

Hold everything, Aikman says. There is a matter to take care of first: Super Bowl XXVII this afternoon, when Aikman and the Dallas Cowboys battle the Buffalo Bills in the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, Calif.

"I'm not here to propel myself into the limelight," said Aikman, the Dallas quarterback who is one huge victory away from the Cowboys' fans pushing him near the plateau of their all-time hero, Roger Staubach. "I'm here to win a football game. If I am propelled into the limelight, I want it to be because of what I do on the football field, not because of some grand marketing strategy."

"Don't get me wrong," he added. "I'm happy to do some endorsements if I believe in the product. You're only in this game a short time, and you want to collect the money while you can."

And he wants to collect at least one Super Bowl trophy to boot.

It is right there for Aikman to grab.

He enters the biggest game of his four-year professional career with envious youth and a hot hand. He turned 26 last November, and in this season's playoffs outdueled Philadelphia's Randall Cunningham and San Francisco's Steve Young to reach this exciting stage. He has not thrown an interception in 65 post-season passes. He has connected on 66.1 percent of his throws and has four touchdown passes. He accomplished all this after a regular season in which he helped lead Dallas to a 13-3 record, its most victories ever in a regular season.

Aikman has simply been splendid.

AP/Ed De Gasero

He knows, however, he is only as good as his last pass, his last game, and that if he loses this Super Bowl, he will join the pack of other quarterbacks who are remembered primarily for losing the Big One.

"It's not fair, but that's the way it is," Aikman said. "Kelly, Marino, Elway: those are three of the best ever to play the game. But they're remembered for not winning the Super Bowl. That's the way it's going to be, and there's nothing I can do to change it. So, I'm not going to worry about it."

Aikman handled the huge news-media glare at Super Bowl XXVII as deftly as he has stood up to a vicious rush by staying in the pocket. He has come a long way in a very short time.

He was born in Henryetta, Okla., and moved to Cerritos, Calif., when he was 12. He spent two years at the University of Oklahoma and then transferred to the University of California at Los Angeles. After two seasons there, he entered the 1989 National Football League draft and was the Cowboys' and the league's first pick.

In his first season, Dallas went 1-15 and Aikman threw nine touchdown passes and 18 interceptions. Since that rookie season, his touchdown/interception differential has gone from 11/18 in 1990 to 11/10 in 1991 to 23/14 in 1992. As he has steadily improved, so have the Cowboys.

It appears his toughest growing pains were dealing with Dallas Coach Jimmy Johnson's decision to draft both him and University of Miami quarterback Steve Walsh in the supplemental draft in the first pro season for both Johnson and Aikman. Walsh had won a national championship for Johnson at Miami. Johnson distanced himself from both quarterbacks that first year and let them battle for playing time.

"I thought Jimmy had a natural allegiance to Steve, but the fact that he didn't make that clear or who he wanted for the future made the situation very tense," Aikman said. "I wasn't close to Jimmy at all that first year and I was not happy. Something had to give."

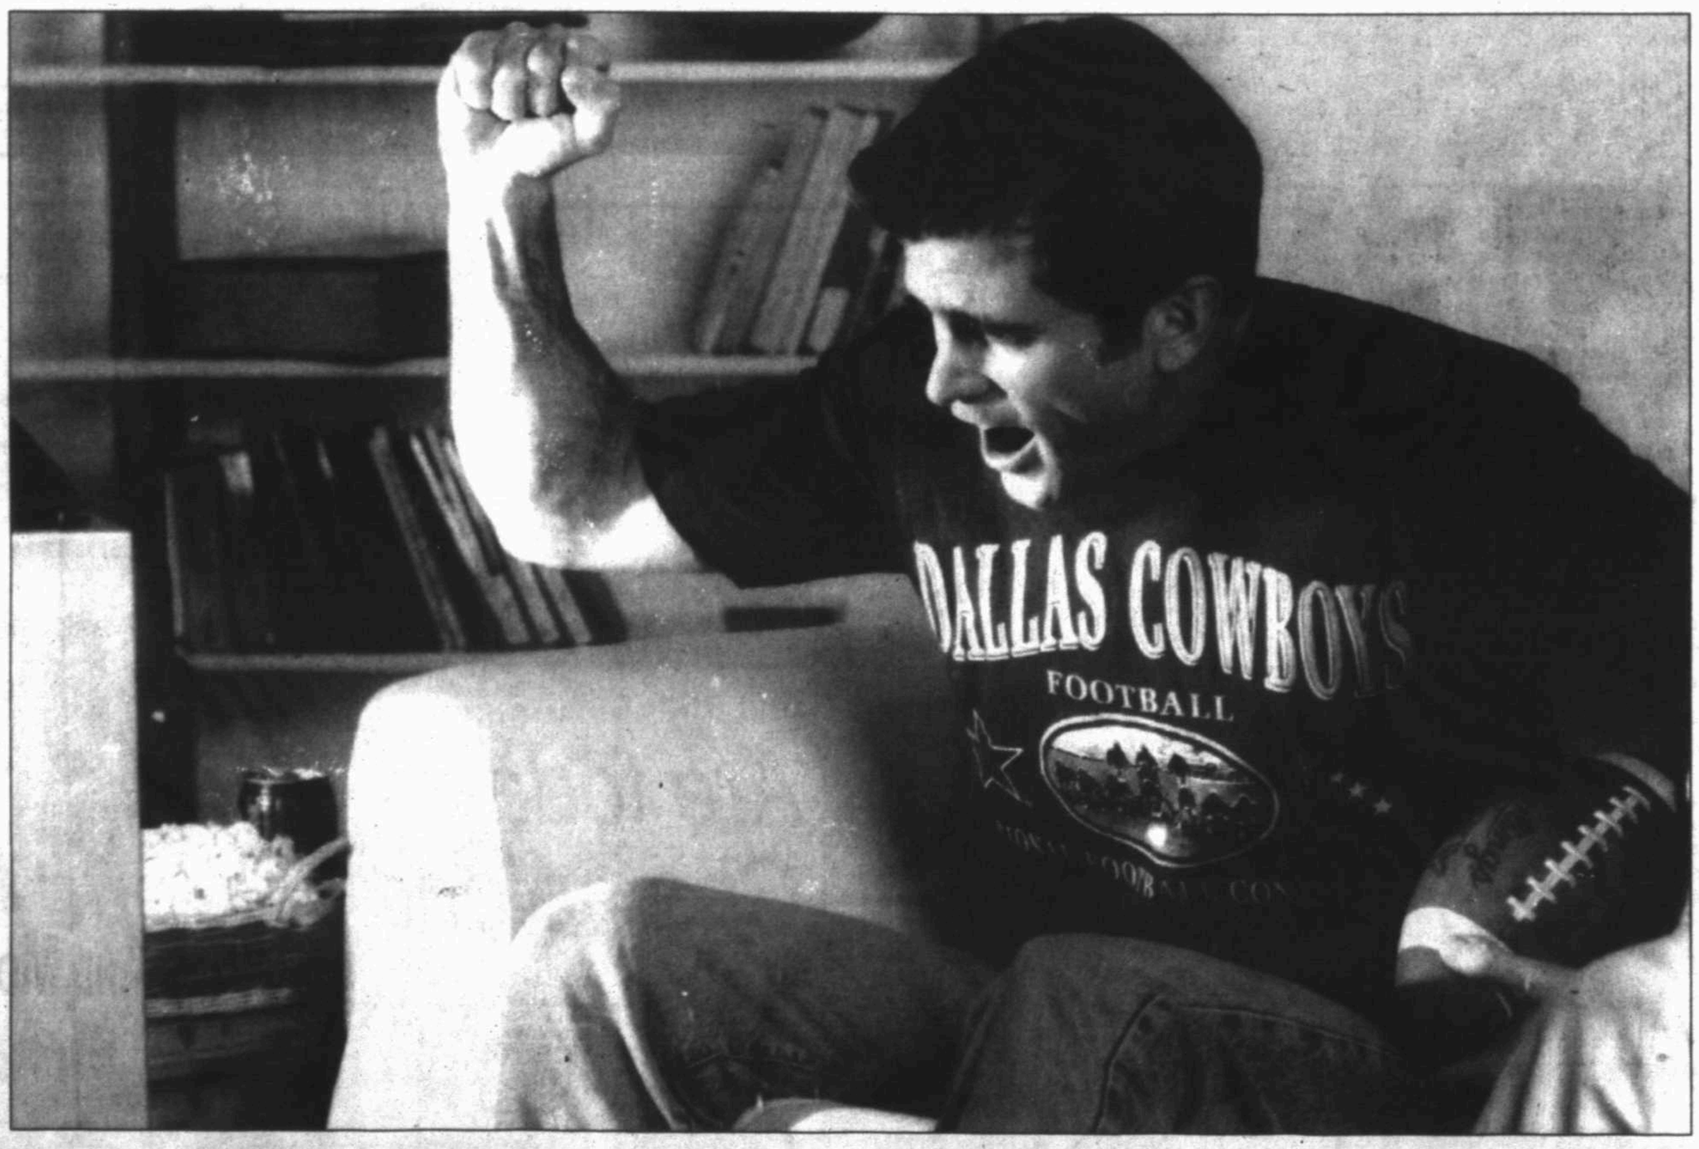

It did. Walsh was traded after one season to the New Orleans Saints for draft choices. Aikman was the man.

A year later, everything continued falling into place when Johnson brought in Norv Turner as the offensive coordinator.

"In some ways we simplified some of the protection schemes and the way protections were being called," Turner said. "We sped up Troy, his motion, his footwork. Obviously, when you do that, you've got to speed up everything else."

Bills try to shake gorrilla on their backs

By Dave Anderson
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — For all the X's and O's in the game plans, the Super Bowl invariably boils down to the A-B-C's of football.

"The idea of football," Vince Lombardi once proclaimed, "is to knock down the players on the other team."

That physical premise invariably prevails, but the blocking and tackling sometimes is influenced by psychology. As it might be today when the Buffalo Bills, who lost the two previous Super Bowl games, will be motivated to exorcise their demons against the Dallas Cowboys.

For a pro football player, it's as if a conference championship ring is more a symbol of failure and frustration.

"Every now and then," Bills linebacker Cornelius Bennett said, "I put my AFC championship rings on, but I don't leave them on for too long. It just reminds me of how close but yet so far we were. This is one more chance to change all that."

An unprecedented chance.

Two other teams have lost two consecutive Super Bowl games: the 1986 and 1987 Denver Broncos, the 1973 and 1974 Minnesota Vikings. But the Bills are the first to be confronted with the dreaded risk of losing three in three years.

"If we lose," quarterback Jim Kelly said, "everybody will be talking about three Super Bowl losses in a row."

In the pre-Super Bowl years, the 1961-62-63 New York Giants and the 1951-52-53 Cleveland Browns lost three consecutive National Football League championship games.

But the Super Bowl stage has added to the embarrassment. Surely these Bills don't want to waste what could be their last chance for a Super Bowl ring.

"Realistically," linebacker Shane Conlan said, "it will be very tough to make four in a row, so it would be great to get the monkey off our back."

That monkey is still perched on the backs of the Viking and Bronco franchises, each 0-4 in Super Bowl games. But those Vikings and Broncos were never the better team. Over four games, the Vikings were outscored, 95-34; the Broncos, 163-50.

Two years ago, the Bills would have beaten the Giants, 22-20, if Scott Norwood's 47-yard field-goal attempt hadn't sailed wide right as time expired.

"I'll always remember that play," offensive tackle Will Wolford said. "The ball was kicked, but Lawrence Taylor and Leonard Marshall were still rushing and I was trying to block them. I was laying on the ground when I looked up and saw the kick was no good."

Not that the Bills blamed Norwood, then or now. "I was disappointed for Scott," said cornerback Nate Odomes, "because I knew he'd go through life being remembered for that kick."

Last year, the Bills were hammered by the Redskins, 37-24. "The fact that you lose makes all the memories somewhat miserable," defensive end Bruce Smith said. "When you lose the last game, you just go down as losers."

In their third appearance on the Super Bowl stage, the Bills seem to be more comfortable. "The last couple of years," said wide receiver Andre Reed, "we came here and our engine was revving too early. There's a lot of pressure, including the AFC-NFC thing, but we're better prepared to handle it."

Another motivation for the Bills: preventing the Cowboys from being the ninth consecutive National Conference team to win. But all these Cowboys except defensive end Charles Haley, who earned two rings with the 49ers, and safety Ray Horton, who in 1989 was with the Cincinnati Bengal team that lost to San Francisco, will be playing in the Super Bowl for the first time. To the Bills nose tackle, Jeff Wright, that could be a factor.

"My first Super Bowl," Wright said, "I couldn't feel my legs, they were shaking so hard."

If the Cowboys' legs shake on defense early, the Bills' no-huddle offense might score quickly.

"They are going to use a lot of energy in that first possession," Haley said. "They're going to be trying to kick the image of losing, so they are going to be all fired up."

But even if the Bills fall behind, they won't quit. They will remember trailing the Houston Oilers four weeks ago, 35-3, before generating their historic 41-38 comeback victory. "In that game," Conlan said, "we proved that anything can happen."

Now the Bills have an unprecedented opportunity to prove they can turn the dreaded thought of losing a third straight Super Bowl game into a psychological scenario to win this time. I think they will, 31-28.

Third championship berth not viewed as last by Levy

By Timothy W. Smith
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — With roughly 48 hours to go before Buffalo plays Dallas in Super Bowl XXVII, Coach Marv Levy said that the Bills were focused, prepared and not looking in their rearview mirrors at what happened in Super Bowls XXV and XXVI.

A lot of people have been asking Levy and the Bills players this week if they have any dread going into the game, considering they are faced with the prospect of becoming the first team to lose a third straight Super Bowl. Levy and his players have constantly fought off the notion that their chances of returning dwindle each year.

"I don't view it as a last chance," Levy said. "I view it as this chance. If we hadn't been involved in Super Bowl XXV or Super Bowl XXVI, I'd still view it as this is the chance.

"We're not sending our team into the game with any caution or inhibition."

One of the more interesting matchups for the game will be the Bills' offense, which finished ranked No. 2 over all in the league, against the Cowboys' defense, which is ranked No. 1 over all and which relies heavily on situational substitutions, particularly on the defensive line.

Levy was asked how Dallas might defend against the Bills' no-huddle offense, the no-time-wasted attack run by quarterback Jim Kelly.

"What's the best way to defend the no-huddle?" Levy said, repeating the question for emphasis. "That's their problem."

Levy made a few changes in the way the team approached this Super Bowl. First, he asked the players to control their tongues so that they wouldn't make any controversial statements that would distract from the team's preparation.

Then he took the team through a more strenuous practice on Monday — the day after the Bills arrived. Also, the team moved into a different hotel Friday — a day earlier than it did last year and a day earlier than the Cowboys.

"It isn't a great deal of difference," Levy said. "We're better prepared to cope with the unexpected, the brightness and glare of the media spotlight.

"The preparation has been very sharp, very focused. This is the second year that we've had two weeks to prepare. We came in with more of the game plan done than in the past and we prepared to present it to the players."

The Bills will go through a light 45-minute workout at the Rose Bowl on Saturday. Levy said it would be more of a walk-through than an actual practice because the players won't be executing drills or plays at full speed. Buffalo has only one injury of note: linebacker Cornelius Bennett, who has had a pulled hamstring.

Bennett missed Buffalo's first postseason game, against Houston, but played in the victories over Pittsburgh and Miami. After aggravating the injury against the Dolphins, he missed several days of practice. He returned to practice Wednesday and said he expected to be about 90 percent on Sunday.

There has been just one glitch in Levy's plan for a quiet week. Linebacker Darryl Talley was involved in a scuffle at a nightclub on Sunday night. The report and the follow-up occupied a day and a half of attention, but it doesn't look as if it will have any impact on the team's preparation for the game.

When asked about the Talley incident Friday, Levy dismissed it by saying he would rather concentrate on Sunday's game.

Kelly said the Bills' practices have gone off without a hitch this week. He said Wednesday's workout focused on defense, Thursday's on offense.

"Every coach, when you come out of a practice, you want your team to look good," he said.

Bills' running could be difference

By John F. Bonfatti
AP Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES — Just because it's the Super Bowl, don't expect Buffalo Bills coach Marv Levy to change his approach to winning.

Levy has lived with two precepts: run and stop the run. In this game, that means spring Thurman Thomas and stuff Emmitt Smith.

The Bills will look to get Thomas going early. The plan will be to use the 30-pound-per-man size advantage the Bills' offensive line has over the Cowboys' defensive line.

The Cowboys may be quicker along the line, but the edge isn't that great and the Bills feel they'll be able to control the line.

"The key for any team winning is to run the ball and that's Thomas and that's Kenny Davis and that's the offensive line," tackle Will Wolford said. "It's everybody's job to get together and run the ball, because if we don't, we're going to be in trouble."

As has been the case throughout Buffalo's recent success, Thomas will be the focal point of that running attack. The Bills are 27-2 in non-playoff games when Thomas has at least 100 yards rushing.

"I don't think we'll be successful every time we try to run," Thomas said. "We'll need a series to get a feel for their defense."

Just as the Bills need production from Thomas, the Cowboys are looking toward Emmitt Smith. Limiting the elusive Smith to a reasonable amount of yardage will be a primary goal of the Bills.

"You can stop him for three quarters and he can still break one on you," Buffalo linebacker Shane Conlan said.

Added defensive end Phil Hansen, "If they can run the ball, then they can control the clock. If we can stop their running game, then they will have to pass more than they want to, which would greatly increase our chances of winning."

Even if they Bills are able to get Thomas going and keep Smith in check, turnovers could kill them.

The Bills had three more turnovers than takeaways in the regular season, but is plus-7 in the three playoff games, including five takeaways in the AFC title game against Miami.

"Turnovers are going to be a main factor," quarterback Jim Kelly said. "You look at most of the teams that do well in the playoffs, they're the teams that don't turn the ball over much."

Those are the Bills' tactical keys to winning. They will mean nothing if, as was the case in last year's Super Bowl loss to Washington, the Bills don't play with desire.

"If soldiers lack heart and courage and dedication, they will not be able to put into effect tactics and stragegy," Levy said. "How we execute is the important element. We're not counting on beating anybody with mirrors."

Slight chance of showers at Bowl

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — A slight chance of showers was forecast for the Super Bowl as a storm moved slowly into Southern California, the National Weather Service said Saturday.

Forecasters said temperatures during Sunday's game would be in the 60s under partly cloudy skies with winds averaging 10 mph to 15 mph. The chance of rain was 20 percent.

"If there is a shower it should not last too long or be heavy enough to disrupt the game," the NWS said.

Super Bowl XXVII

The building of a Super Bowl team

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

IRVING — Talk all you will about the 46 deals the Dallas Cowboys have made in the four years since Jerry Jones and Jimmy Johnson took over.

It comes down to this:

When the Cowboys meet Buffalo for the NFL title today, 11 of their most valuable players will have been acquired in trades involving Herschel Walker, Steve Walsh, Dave Widell, two second-round draft choices, a third, a fourth, two fifths and an eighth.

Not a bad four years' work, especially when it gets you from 1-15 to the Super Bowl in a league where rebuilding through trades is not that common.

"When you're at the bottom, you have to be aggressive, take risks," Johnson said. "We took risks and it worked out."

Actually, the risks were minimal given where the Cowboys were when Johnson and Jones took over. And the rewards were the result of what usually wins in the NFL — first-rate scouting and drafting.

Example: Right tackle Erik Williams, who may be the Anthony Munoz of the '90s, was taken with a third-round pick obtained from New Orleans for Walsh, now a third-string quarterback. And Leon Lett, an impact inside pass rusher, was chosen with a second-round choice obtained from Denver for Widell, a backup guard.

But the key was the Walker trade in 1989, when the Cowboys were able to market their one commodity — a name running back with some miles on him — for 12 players and draft choices. They also were lucky they had a taker — Mike Lynn, then the Minnesota general manager, who decided without consulting his coaching staff or any other football people that Walker was the one ingredient to get the Vikings to the Super Bowl.

Lynn, of course, was wrong and the Cowboys had a no-lose deal.

After all the various clauses and deals within the deal were concluded, Dallas ended up with:

— Emmitt Smith, whose 1,713 rushing yards this season make him the first NFL rushing leader going into the Super Bowl.

— Rookie Kevin Smith, who will start at left cornerback in the Super Bowl and could be one of the league's better defensive backs for years.

— Russell Maryland, the No. 1 overall pick in the 1991 draft and one of the NFL's quickest defensive linemen.

— Issiac Holt, a starter in the secondary until being replaced by Smith this season and one of the team's few veteran leaders. Holt also has four blocked punts since coming to Dallas, three of which resulted in touchdowns and the fourth in a safety.

Beyond that?

Many of the 46 deals were of the arcane draft-day type, like the one on April 22, 1990, in which Dallas sent a third-round pick obtained from Denver, a fifth-round pick obtained from Miami and its own seventh-round choice to New England for a third-rounder, a sixth-rounder and an eighth-rounder. New England then traded the seventh-round choice to Buffalo and Dallas traded the sixth-rounder to San Diego for a pick the following year.

Got it? Probably not. But all you need to know is that the players left from the deal are two backup defensive players, defensive linemen Jimmie Jones and linebacker Godfrey Myles plus New England wide receiver Greg McMurtry.

But the Cowboys also benefitted by what Jones and Johnson consider their greatest risks — picking up players other teams found flawed.

Half the starting defensive line came that way — Tony Casillas from Atlanta, where he loathed coach Jerry Glanville, and Charles Haley from San Francisco, where he was at odds with coach George Seifert and most of his teammates. Haley was a three-time Pro Bowler and Casillas the second overall pick of the 1986 draft, so the risk was minimal.

Ditto backup quarterback Steve Beuerlein, who came from the Raiders last season and got Dallas into the playoffs when Troy Aikman injured a knee. Beuerlein's antagonist in Los Angeles was the one man you don't want to antagonize there — Al Davis, who probably could use him at quarterback now.

Add starting strong safety Thomas Everett, a holdout in Pittsburgh this season and starting guard John Gesek from the Raiders.

Total price for those four: second- and eighth-round picks (Casillas); second- and third (Haley); fourth (Beuerlein, a free agent this year, who'd probably now be worth a No. 1 under the old system), and a fifth (Everett and Gesek).

When you have as many picks as the Cowboys got for Walker and Walsh, dealing them doesn't hurt much.

Mistakes?

There were a couple, both involving players who'd been with Johnson in college at Miami. "I may have let my heart get involved," he said.

One was surrendering second- and fifth-rounders to Houston for running back Alonzo Highsmith, who was released because of knee problems and is still trying to come back.

The other was giving second- and third-round choices to San Francisco for running back Terence Flagler and defensive lineman Daniel Stubbs. Both are now gone although Johnson maintains he got some productive games from Stubbs, another of his Miami players.

Other failures?

You have to reach.

One was not really a trade but is listed as one.

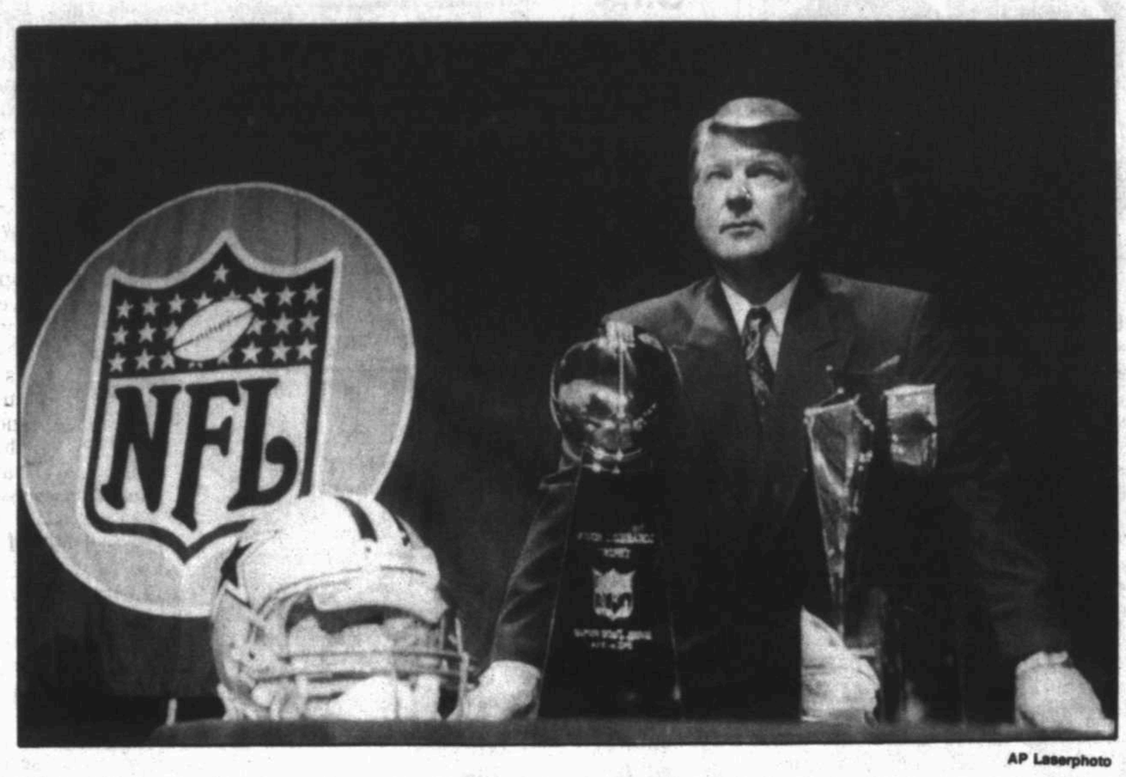

It essentially sent Steve Wisniewski, now an All-Pro guard, to the Raiders for Daryl Johnston, the Cowboys' starting fullback. That was really an exchange of draft picks but wasn't consummated in the 10-minute deadline during the draft, so the Raiders told the Cowboys to take Wisniewski and the trade was finalized a few minutes later when Dallas drafted Johnston.

The others?

A couple of deals which provided other teams with middle-to-low draft picks with which they made good picks — Detroit (wide receiver Willie Green); Minnesota (safety Todd Scott), and the Raiders (defensive lineman Nolan Harrison.)

But those were less bad deals than good drafting by the teams involved.

That's something the Cowboys know a lot about.

JJs' trade history

A look at the 46 trades made by the Dallas Cowboys since Jerry Jones purchased the team Feb. 25, 1989:

April 23, 1989 — A second-round (Steve Wisniewski) and a sixth-round (Jeff Francis) draft choice in 1989 to the Los Angeles Raiders for a second-round (Daryl Johnston), a third-round (Rhondy Weston) and a fifth-round (Willis Crokett) choice in 1989.

June 2, 1989 — Steve DeOssie to the New York Giants for a sixth-round choice in 1990 (traded to San Diego April 22, 1990).

July 10, 1989 — Kevin Brooks and a fourth-round choice in 1990 (Jeroy Robinson) to Denver for a third-round choice in 1990 (traded to New England April 22, 1990).

July 30, 1989 — Daryle Smith to Seattle for a ninth-round choice in 1990 (traded to the Los Angeles Raiders April 22, 1990).

Aug. 6, 1989 — Scott Secules to Miami for a fifth-round choice in 1990 (traded to New England April 22, 1990).

Aug. 22, 1989 — A conditional choice to Indianapolis for Chuck Ehin (Ehin released, Cowboys retain choice).

Aug. 22, 1989 — Zefross Moss to Indianapolis for a 10th-round choice in 1990 (traded to the Los Angeles Raiders April 22, 1990).

Aug. 29, 1989 — A fifth-round choice in 1990 (traded to New England — Junior Robinson) to Washington for Dean Hamel.

Oct. 12, 1989 — Herschel Walker to Minnesota for Jesse Solomon, David Howard, Alex Stewart, Darrin Nelson, Issiac Holt, a first-round choice in 1992 (Kevin Smith), conditional first-round choices in 1990 and 1991, conditional second-round choices in 1990, 1991 and 1992, and a conditional third-round choice in 1992.

Oct. 17, 1989 — Darrin Nelson to San Diego for a fifth-round choice in 1990 that went to Minnesota (Reggie Thornton). Dallas received Minnesota's sixth-round choice in 1990 (traded to the Los Angeles Raiders April 22, 1990) and kept the second-round choice in 1991 (traded to Houston Sept. 3, 1990) tied to Nelson as part of the Herschel Walker trade.

Oct. 17, 1989 — An eighth-round choice in 1990 (Willie Green) to Detroit for Paul Palmer.

Oct. 17, 1989 — Steve Pelluer to Kansas City for a third-round choice in 1990 (traded to San Francisco April 19, 1990) and a fourth-round choice in 1991 (Bill Musgrave).

Feb. 1, 1990 — A third-round (Mike Jones) and a 10th-round choice (Pat Newman) in 1990 and a third-round choice in 1991 (Jake Reed) to Minnesota in order to retain Issiac Holt, David Howard, Jesse Solomon, the first-round choice in 1990 (traded to Pittsburgh April 22, 1990), the first-round choice in 1991 (traded to New England April 19, 1991), and the second round choice (traded to Kansas City April 26, 1992) and third-round choice (traded to New England April 26, 1992) in 1992 that were tied to them as part of the Herschel Walker trade.

April 19, 1990 — A second-round choice from Minnesota (Dennis Brown) and a third-round choice from Kansas City (Ronald Lewis) in 1990 to San Francisco for Terrence Flagler, Daniel Stubbs, a third-round choice (traded to Pittsburgh April 22, 1990) and a 11th-round choice (traded to the Los Angeles Raiders April 22, 1990) in 1990.

April 22, 1990 — A first-round choice from Minnesota (Eric Green) and a third-round choice from San Francisco (Craig Veasey) in 1990 to Pittsburgh for a first-round choice in 1990 (Emmitt Smith).

April 22, 1990 — A third-round choice from Denver (Greg McMurtry), a fifth-round choice from Miami (James Gray), and a seventh-round choice (traded to Buffalo — Brent Griffin) in 1990 to New England for a third-round (Jimmie Jones), a sixth-round (traded to San Diego later the same day) and an eighth-round (traded to the Los Angeles Raiders later the same day) choice in 1990.

April 22, 1990 — A sixth-round choice from Minnesota (traded to New Orleans — James Williams), an eighth-round choice from New England (Arthur Jimerson), a ninth-round choice from Seattle (Leon Perry), a 10th-round choice from Indianapolis (traded to Denver — James Szymanski), and an 11th-round choice from San Francisco (Myron Jones) in 1990 to the Los Angeles Raiders for a fifth-round choice in 1990 (Stan Smagala).

April 22, 1990 — A sixth-round choice (John Friesz), a sixth-round choice from New England (Frank Cornish), and a sixth-round choice from the New York Giants (Derrick Walker) in 1990 to San Diego for a third-round choice (Godfrey Myles) in 1991.

July 27, 1990 — A conditional draft choice in 1991 to Denver for Lorenzo Hampton (Hampton released, Cowboys retain choice).

Aug. 20, 1990 — A seventh-round choice in 1991 (traded to Minnesota — Tripp Welborne) to the Los Angeles Raiders for Dale Hellestrae.

Aug. 24, 1990 — Dave Widell to Denver for a seventh-round choice in 1991 (Leon Lett) and an eighth-round choice in 1992 (traded to Tampa Bay April 25, 1992).

Aug. 29, 1990 — An eighth-round choice in 1991 (Scott Evans) to Phoenix for Rob Awalt.

Sept. 3, 1990 — A second-round choice from Minnesota in 1991 (Darryl Lewis) and a fifth-round choice in 1992 (Tim Roberts) to Houston for Alonzo Highsmith.

Sept. 3, 1990 — A fifth-round choice in 1991 (traded to New England — Ben Coates) to the Los Angeles Raiders for John Gesek.

Sept. 25, 1990 — Steve Walsh to New Orleans for a first-round (traded to New England April 21, 1991) and a third-round (Erik Williams) choice in 1991 and a second-round choice in 1992 (traded to Cleveland April 25, 1992).

April 19, 1991 — A first-round choice from Minnesota (Pat Harlow) and a second-round choice (Jerome Henderson) in 1991 plus future considerations (Ron Francis, David Howard, Eugene Lockhart) to New England for a first-round choice in 1991 (Russell Maryland).

April 21, 1991 — A first-round choice from New Orleans in 1991 (Leonard Russell) to New England for a first-round choice in 1991 (traded to Washington later the same day) and a fourth-round choice from Buffalo in 1991 (Kevin Harris).

April 21, 1991 — A first-round choice from New England in 1991 (Bobby Wilson) to Washington for a first-round (traded to Detroit later the same day) and a fifth-round (Darrick Brownlow) choice in 1991.

April 21, 1991 — A first-round choice from Washington in 1991 (Kelvin Pritchett) to Detroit for a second-round (Dixon Edwards) and a third-round (James Richards) choice in 1991 and a fourth-round choice from Washington in 1991 (Tony Hill).

June 27, 1991 — Rich Gicewicz to New England for a 12th-round choice in 1992 (Donald Harris).

July 22, 1991 — A second-round (Chuck Smith) and an eighth-round (Reggie Dwight) choice in 1992 to Atlanta for Tony Casillas.

Aug. 25, 1991 — A fourth-round choice in 1992 (traded to Indianapolis — Tony McCoy) to the Los Angeles Raiders for Steve Beuerlein.

Sept. 16, 1991 — Jesse Solomon to New England for a sixth-round choice in 1992 (Fallon Wacasey).

Jan. 31, 1992 — A seventh-round choice in 1992 (traded to Green Bay — Christopher Holder) to the Los Angeles Raiders for Garry Lewis.

April 26, 1992 — A first-round choice from Minnesota (Eugene Chung) and a third-round choice from Minnesota (Kevin Turner) in 1992 to New England for a first-round choice from Atlanta (traded to Atlanta later the same day), a second-round choice (Darren Woodson) and a fourth-round choice from Atlanta (traded to Atlanta later the same day) in 1992.

April 26, 1992 — A first-round choice from New England (Tony Smith) and a fourth-round choice from New England (Frankie Smith) in 1992 to Atlanta for a first-round hoice from Green Bay (Kevin Smith) and a fifth-round choice from New England (Greg Briggs) in 1992.

April 26, 1992 — A second-round choice from Minnesota in 1992 (Matt Blundin) to Kansas City for a second-round (traded to Washington later the same day) and a third-round (traded to Washington later the same day) choice in 1992.

Aug. 26, 1992 — Undisclosed draft choices to San Francisco for Charles Haley.

Sept. 19, 1992 — An undisclosed draft choice to Pittsburgh for Thomas Everett.

Oct. 12, 1992 — Alexander Wright to the Los Angeles Raiders for an undisclosed draft choice in 1993.

Buffalo owner turns from heel to hero

By Bucky Gleason
Associated Press Writer

BUFFALO, N.Y. — It was only seven years ago when Ralph C. Wilson Jr. was having game programs thrown at him by irate Buffalo Bills fans watching their team go 2-14 for the second straight season.

Now, they're begging for his autograph. Don't ask Wilson to figure it out.

"If you take this game seriously, you've got to get out," Wilson said. "Sometimes you pick up the paper and you can't believe how bad you are. Anybody that's thin-skinned better not be in the public domain."

Wilson lives far away from Buffalo, in the plush Detroit suburb of Grosse Point.

It doesn't seem to bother anybody in Buffalo now that Wilson is an owner who is not directly involved in his team's preparation for today's matchup against the Dallas Cowboys.

"I'm a behind-the-scenes guy," Wilson said. "I'm not one who dances in front of the camera."

Wilson also was living out of town seven years ago, when the Bills had numerous losing streaks. At that time, it was a problem.

He was accused of being a cheapskate by fans who thought he wasn't shelling out enough money for good players during Buffalo's consecutive 2-14 seasons in the mid-1980s.

"For some reason, when we weren't winning, I was cheap," Wilson said. "If you're not winning, you have the wrong coach, or you're cheap or you're from out of town. I've heard them all."

Wilson, 74, is a member of the Foolish Club, a name given to the eight original owners in the American Football League. Wilson said he had friends who wouldn't even acknowledge him after he bought an AFL franchise.

Buying the Bills was one of the many business risks he has taken over the past three decades. He also owned an automobile-transport business, television stations, construction companies and racehorses.

"I'm a risk-taker," Wilson said. "If you want to be successful, in anything, not just football, you have to take some risks."

He has endured the bad years with his team and now, with the Bills winning four straight AFC East titles and three AFC championships, he's reveling in the good years.

The Bills lost the last two Super Bowls, a 20-19 heartbreaker to the New York Giants two years ago and 37-24 to the Washington Redskins last year. Still, fans in Buffalo haven't had much to complain about lately.

"The team means so much to the people from Buffalo," Wilson said. "The rest of America thinks Buffalo is a place to avoid. That's not true at all."

But this Mr. Wilson has 80,000 Dennis the Menaces to contend with when the Bills lose. When Buffalo was down 35-3 to Houston in the AFC wild-card game three weeks ago, a fan sitting in front of his private box started yelling at him about ticket prices.

Buffalo then engineered the biggest comeback in NFL history and won the game, 41-38.

"If I ever see him again I'm going to double the price of HIS ticket," Wilson said with a laugh.

Wilson calls Bills coach Marv Levy each Tuesday and the two talk about player performances and injuries. The conversation never is about how the Bills should run their offense or what they can do more effectively on defense.

"I'm not into X's and O's," Wilson said. "I get the same answers as you do. You know, 'We'd like to run 50 percent of the time and pass 50. We hope to stop the run.' Whatever they told you, you can put down for me."

The last time Wilson got involved with a game-day decision was in Buffalo's first AFL regular-season game in 1960. It turned into a disaster.

Buffalo had lost three of its four preseason games and was losing 10-3 to New York at the end of the first half. Wilson, sitting with friends at Buffalo's War Memorial Stadium, was talked into going into the Bills locker room at halftime and delivering a motivational speech.

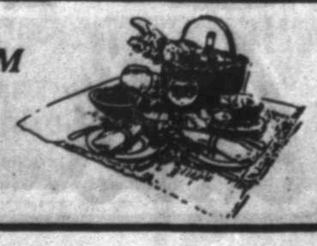

"I gave them about five minutes of the most inspirational Knute Rockne-Vince Lombardi speech you've ever heard," Wilson said sarcastically. "Then we lost 27-3. Someone said Wilson, 'You talked to the wrong team.' I haven't made a speech to them since."

Wilson sold two of his four family-owned television stations, a machine-parts company, an oil- and gas-drilling company and an insurance agency in the past three years.

He remains busy with a highway construction company, two television stations, five mares and the Bills. He rarely reflects on where the last 33 years have taken him.

"I'm not sitting in a swing thinking about 1965," Wilson said. "I'm thinking about whether we can win next Sunday."

Super Bowl XXVII

EMMITT: Opportunity understood

fore the season had figured to be their Achilles' heel in the grueling NFC East and the playoff run, has become the basis of their success. Who doubts that Dallas is an NFL force of the 1990s?

It is easier to find those who are certain that the Cowboys are making the first of several Super Bowl appearances over the next few years, what with their youth, aggressiveness, speed and sheer skill.

Smith, however, is not one of them.

"I know of all the great players who have never played in a Super Bowl," Smith said softly. "It is one reason this game is very important to me. I know this could be a one-shot deal. With free agency and all of the changes coming in the NFL, we don't know if we'll have the same team next year. We've already lost our defensive coordinator, Dave Wannstedt, and we will probably lose more coaches and players. This is a very pivotal game in all of our careers."

Smith may only be 23, but he runs on and off the field with his head up. Always has.

He grew up in Pensacola, Fla., the eldest of four boys after two girls. His grandparents and a host of other relatives lived nearby. His sense of family and of right and wrong, the lessons he learned about how to love, how to act, how to treat people and how to expect to be treated — all come from home.

Home truly is where Smith's heart is. Back there are his boyhood friends Antonio Dale, Carl Watson and Wayne Hill.

Why him instead of his pals? Why is he at such an exciting and remarkable stage in pro football, on the edge of something special and enduring?

"You know, I don't think about that too much," Smith said. "All I can say to try and explain it is that the Lord has made a master plan for me. My life is already mapped out. I just try and stay close to the center of it. Every day, I take a step. I have little control over what happens, except to work hard and to live right. If I do that, I believe that success is the biggest part of the master plan."

He says his house is built on a solid foundation, on a rock. He says he is the first to realize this: No one is promised tomorrow.

This mixture of wisdom and youth is one of the key traits that helps keep Smith's ego in balance. He knows better than some how egos run rampant among the Cowboys and in the NFL in general. Since he entered the league in 1990 from the University of Florida, he has been consistently rated a close third over all among running backs behind the Detroit Lions' Barry Sanders and Buffalo's Thurman Thomas.

Smith takes the comparisons and rankings in stride, but undoubtedly it bothers him to be third, just as it does that the focal point of the Cowboys in some arenas is quickly becoming quarterback Troy Aikman. Quarterbacks supposedly color the nature of their teams, and Aikman is rising to that stature.

But Dallas is 28-1 when Smith carries 20 or more times and is 20-1 when he rushes for 100 or more yards. He has started a team-high 51 straight games. His versatility is clear: This season, he rushed for 174 yards in a victory at Atlanta, caught 12 passes in a victory over Phoenix, ran for a 68-yard touchdown in a home victory over the Giants and had 30 carries in a defeat of Philadelphia at home.

He becomes a free agent after this season.

He is modest, but he wants his due.

And he goes about claiming it with distinctive class.

"Hey, I understand what this is all about," Smith said. "I understand what is going on.

"I have the opportunity to win the MVP in the Super Bowl, to break the Super Bowl rushing record, for us to win the title and for me to put myself in a win-win situation from the business aspects of this sport. I understand the opportunity."

He understands business. His Emmitt Incorporated, a souvenir shop that his family runs back home, is doing booming business. Cowboys owner Jerry Jones describes Smith as "a young man with elf eyes," someone very alert and ambitious about reaching pay dirt in the end zone and beyond.

When the Cowboys drafted Smith, they were concerned about his speed. Soon they saw that he was faster than he looked, that he bounced off tackles like the ball in a pinball machine, that he had vision in the backfield the envy of most backs and that his production in many ways was unmatched around the league. But Smith has given Dallas more. He sets a shining example. He has become a rallying point.

"You got to be focused in whatever you do," Smith said. "And though you set individual goals, you have to put the team first. This is something Jimmy Johnson not only preaches but he demands. He will not tolerate our youth and egos getting out of hand.

"That makes it easier to play here. It makes everything work. If we go out and play the game the way we can and utilize everything we have, there is nobody that can beat us. We have a very good team."

With an outstanding running back.

BOWL: Comeback cements Bills

(From 1B)

beat Washington in 1984 for the AFC's last victory.

If Buffalo wins, it would become only the second wild-card team to win a Super Bowl. The Raiders, then in Oakland, did it in 1981. The last wild-card to make it, the New England Patriots, were beaten 46-10 by Chicago in 1986 and still haven't recovered.

The Cowboys, the league's youngest team with an average age of 26, had the NFL's second best regular-season record at 13-3, then beat the San Francisco 49ers, the best at 14-2, in the NFC championship game. In an era when there seems to be a demand for designating "teams of the decade," they are the consensus choice for "team of the '90s," succeeding the 49ers, the team of the '80s.

Nothing seems to faze the Cowboys, certainly not the circus atmosphere surrounding the game, certainly not the fact that they have only two players who have been in a Super Bowl to 37 for the Bills.

"Experience? No factor," said Emmitt Smith, the first NFL rushing champion ever to play in a Super Bowl. "The 49ers had all the experience in the world, probably more than us and Buffalo combined. They didn't play well, they got beat."

Quarterback Troy Aikman said: "We're still too young to realize what we're caught up in."

The Bills know exactly what they're caught up in, and they handled this week in a much more mature manner than the past two years. At least until Wednesday, when a story surfaced that linebacker Darryl Talley had engaged in an altercation the previous Sunday with one "Anthony," a bodyguard for Magic Johnson.

"It never happened," the Bills insisted in unison, then went on about their business.

Maybe they're more relaxed this season because of how they got here.

For the past two seasons, they cruised through the AFC. This year, they stumbled in. They started 4-0 but finished 11-5, losing a tiebreaker to Miami in the AFC East.

Then they fell behind 35-3 early in the second half of their wild-card game against Houston, which had beaten them 27-3 the previous week.

No problem. "This team never gives up. Never, never, never," Levy said.

It didn't that week.

In the greatest comeback in NFL history, the Bills went ahead 38-35, then won 41-38 in overtime. They went on to win easily at Pittsburgh and Miami to get back to the Super Bowl for the third straight time.

"I still can't believe we won that game," said defensive coordinator Walt Corey, who's been in pro football as player and coach for 33 years. "I never saw anything like it. Everything just seemed to fall into place and it's been working since."

"That comeback finally created an atmosphere where we knew we had to be together," backup running back Kenneth Davis said.

That hasn't only been the case with the Bills, who in 1989 were called "the bickering Bills."

The Cowboys have rarely bickered, not since since Jerry Jones bought the team in February 1989, fired Tom Landry and installed his old college buddy, Jimmy Johnson, as coach.

Johnson went 1-15 his first year, 7-9 in 1990, 11-5 in 1991, and now he's trying to become the first coach ever to win a national college championship and the Super Bowl.

In those four years, Johnson and Jones made 46 trades, the most important of which sent Herschel Walker to Minnesota in 1989 for 12 players and draft choices. One of those picks turned out to be Emmitt Smith, another defensive tackle Russell Maryland, another cornerback Kevin Smith. All will have key roles Sunday.

They've also had luck, which Jones calls "serendipity" because Johnson says he doesn't believe in luck.

One such bit of serendipity was the arrival of Norv Turner as offensive coordinator last season to tutor Aikman, the No. 1 overall pick in 1989.

Turner, who came from the Rams, was Johnson's second choice for the job and one of the few assistants he's ever hired that he didn't know personally. "He's made my career," Aikman said.

It also was serendipity that brought the Cowboys three-time Pro Bowl pass rusher Charles Haley, whose disputes with teammates and coaches made him expendable in San Francisco. He was obtained for two draft choices just before the season in trade No. 46, and helped solidify a defense that has no Pro Bowlers but allowed the fewest yards in the NFL.

That record has had a serendipitous result for Dave Wannstedt, the defensive coordinator who has been with Johnson for the past 15 years and is his closest friend. Wannstedt has been named coach of the Chicago Bears, the first time an assistant at the Super Bowl has already been publicly hired by another team.

Wannstedt will have the chore of trying to stop Buffalo's no-huddle offense, which features Thurman Thomas, perhaps the game's best all-around running back. He'll also try to stop quarterback Jim Kelly from throwing to Andre Reed, James Lofton and Don Beebe. Dallas matches that with Smith, Aikman and wide receivers Michael Irvin, Alvin Harper and Kelvin Martin.

Defensively, it's Dallas' no-names against Buffalo's all-stars, Bruce Smith, Cornelius Bennett, Shane Conlan.

But what makes this Bills defense different from the one that allowed the Giants to keep the ball for more than 40 minutes two years ago is the ability to stop the run.

PRICE: Boxing proves poor analogy league and since no other country is really represented in the Super Bowl, no world championship is involved. I would assume she feels similarly about the World Series, but the Discussion never got that far.

"But do you really think any team outside the NFL can beat whoever wins the Super Bowl, be it either the Bills or Cowboys? Until football in Canada, Britain, Germany and Russia becomes vastly improved, the Super Bowl winner is the best team in the world," I countered.

The Darling Wife was not swayed by my logic. I decided on another tack. "There are 156 weight divisions in each of the 54 sanctioning bodies for boxing, and each has a World Champion. There is only one top-notch professional football league on the face of the Earth (the Canadian Football League doesn't count because the field is too big and they don't play with enough downs. It's not really football). Ergo, the Super Bowl Champs must be World Champions."

She stood her ground. My advances were being rebuked. To add insult to injury, I was informed that I never used the word "Ergo" in daily conversation until I started reading William Buckley (mental note: cut out the Buckleyisms).

I was told that I just didn't understand the logic of the situation (sound familiar guys?), and then she added that she thought the source of my parentage was in serious dispute.

"Well, there's really no reason to become argumentative. But you know, this topic might make a good column. That way a good part of Midland can see how well we get along," I innocently offered.

From there the Discussion deteriorated from "heated" to a "rapid boil." It was then suggested that I perform an act of acrobatic proportions. Suffice it to say that while today's Super Bowl Championship is still in question, the Winner and Still Champion of the Price Household is The Darling Wife, who now has defended her Undisclosedweight Championship for the 687th time.

And while I concede that she may know her football, I still believe that she has much to learn about the human anatomy.

BRUCE: Bills expect double team

hate mail.

The controversy was ugly but, in retospect, Smith said he had grown from it. "I haven't forgotten last year," he said. "I have put it out of my mind. I don't think about it. It was a terrible year, but it helped me mature. Seeing how people reacted to me hurt and how I responded to it made me work harder. It's not an issue now. People treat me good now."

Unless they're offensive linemen.

The sore ribs forced Smith to sit out the next-to-last game of the regular season at New Orleans. He returned with extra padding in the playoffs and has flourished with four tackles, 2½ sacks and a couple of forced fumbles.

But when some big guy — 303-pound Nate Newton and 298-pound Mark Tuinei will work Smith's side for Dallas on Sunday — is hammering his head into your chest, no padding absorbs all the blows. Twice, Smith was forced to the sidelines against Pittsburgh, gingerly holding his ribs. Each time, though, he returned.

Smith prefers to downplay the issue of his health. "Nobody is 100 percent at this stage in the season," he said. "The last game, the Super Bowl, everybody has nicks and bruises, aches and pains. I'm just one of those people."

He is, however, much more than that to the Bills. He is a defensive coordinator's dream, a guy who often requires double coverage.

Can Dallas get away using only one man to handle him? "Let's hope they don't leave me single-blocked," Smith said. "I'll just leave it at that."

Buffalo defensive coach Walt Corey doesn't think the Cowboys would try that. "He's going to take two guys in the offensive attack to control him and that gives me an extra man," Corey said. Coaches love little edges like that.

Corey was sympathetic with the plight of his star a year ago.

"Last year, he had no lateral movement," the coach said. "This year he does. But you know nobody is Superman all the time. Wayne Gretzky doesn't score a goal everytime he's on the ice. Barry Bonds struck out four times in a playoff game and got $42 million the next day."

Smith had arthroscopic surgery on the knee twice, once before the 1991 season, then again last March. He went through a tortuous rehabilitation, punishing himself to regain his strength and mobility. The effort paid off.

Now, the operative word from Smith is maturity — his own and his team's. The Super Bowl failures of the past two years, first against the Giants, then against the Redskins, have helped, he said.

"We've learned from our past mistakes and we want to prosper from that experience," he said. "We can take criticism and hopefully learn from it."

Corey thinks there's one more factor in the recovery of his Pro Bowl defensive end.

"His contract is up," the coach said, "and he's negotiating."

PATTERSON: Odds in Dallas' favor

(From 1B)

Johnson have done, and the 'Boys' chances of winning the big 'un with Buffalo today.

"I'm a big fan of Jimmy Johnson," California Angels roving instructor Eddie Rodriguez said. "Nothing against Buffalo, but look at all the good thing's Jimmy's done. He had a five-year plan to turn the Cowboys around and he's done it in four."

As for former California pitcher Bert Blyleven, a native of Holland, the sure-to-be eventual Cooperstown resident played things safe.

"Being in Texas," Blyleven said, "I'll have to take the Cowboys. My plane leaves tomorrow and since this will be in print ...

"No, really, I'm a big fan of the Cowboys. What they've done and the way they've turned that program around is pretty impressive."

Those who possess a little poise — ala Troy Aikman, who is so unemotional he makes Mr. Spock look downright nervous — appreciate the job Dallas' No. 8 is doing.

"Jim Kelly's a good quarterback, and Frank Reich's done a helluva job, but if Aikman keeps his confidence, he'll do well and the Cowboy's will be fine," said Midlander Mike Timlin, who should know something about poise after recording the final out for the Toronto Blue Jays in last year's World Series.

So these Cowboys fans, see, come from pretty much all points. Not just inside America, either. But just for the sake of arguement, their are some fans come from closer to Dallas, too.

"Being a southern boy," former Midland Angel favorite and Baton Rouge, La., native Mark Howie said, "I've got to pull for Dallas. Really, I was for New Orleans, but when you can't win the big one, you've got to pull for the closest one who can. My dad's a Cowboy fan and I grew up being a Cowboy fan, but the Saints are really my favorite team."

Close enough.

So with all this pro-Cowboy talk, is there anybody associated with the world of baseball who thinks Dallas won't win the Super Bowl?

"I think San Francisco will win it," California senior vice president/director of player personnel Whitey Herzog said. "Nah, seriously, Buffalo's gonna win it. People always talk about how Buffalo has lost two Super Bowls in a row. But they didn't lose like Denver. Buffalo got beat on a 30 yard field goal when time ran out. Plus, I think they've got their defense intact again with (Cornelius) Bennett and Bruce Smith.

"I don't see where people can say you're a loser if you make it to the final game. With the Cardinals we made it to the seventh game of the World Series twice and lost (against the Royals and Twins). I'd much rather get there and lose than not get there."

Five Cowboy votes, one for Buffalo, and one for San Francisco. Plus, Sports Illustrated famed prognosticator Dr. Z has picked Buffalo again, which can be counted as a vote for Dallas. So there's little question regarding who the winner will be.

Prediction? America's Team 27, Bills 17.

Payton leads quintet into pro football HOF

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Chuck Noll and Bill Walsh, the most dominant coaches in Super Bowl history, and Walter Payton, who rushed for more yards than any player in the NFL, are the newest members of pro football's Hall of Fame.

Noll, who won four Super Bowls, and Walsh, who won three were elected Saturday along with Payton.

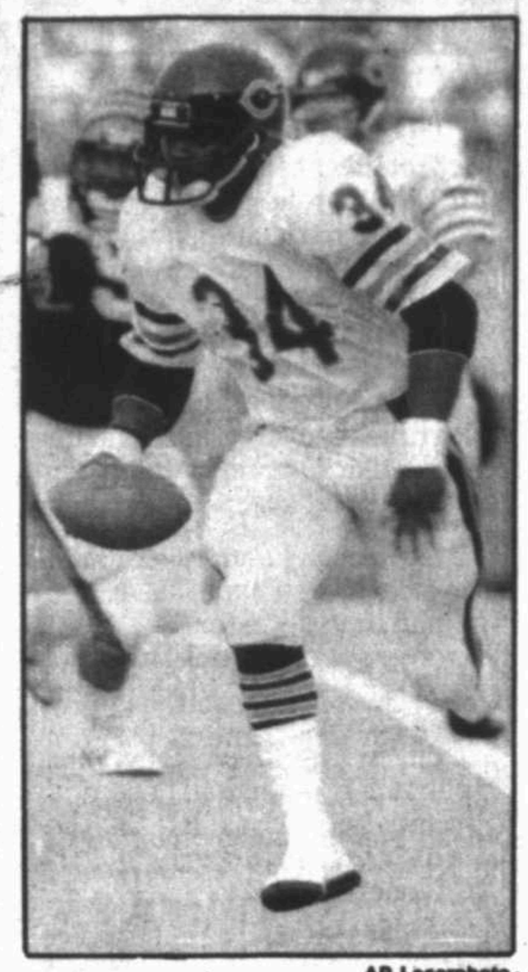

They will be joined in the Class of 1993 by Dan Fouts, one of just three passers to throw for more than 40,000 yards, and guard Larry Little, one of the premier offensive linemen of his time.

The five were chosen by a a 34-member media panel from a group of 15 finalists, and will be inducted July 31 in Canton, Ohio.

Payton had 10 seasons of 1,000 yards or more rushing for the Chicago Bears and finished his career with 16,726 yards. He had 77 games with more than 100 yards rushing and scored 110 rushing touchdowns. He was elected in his first year of eligibility.

With all his records, Payton didn't think his election was a sure thing. "You don't expect anything except death and taxes," he said. "It's always good to get recognition.

"I played a kids' game and got paid for it. I tried to play the way I was taught and I owe a debt of gratitude to the coaches I played for — in high school, in college and with the Bears. You are an extension of these people."

Payton

Payton called the Hall of Fame honor a nice one, but not the crowning achievement of his career.

"When I was able to walk off the field for the last time in 1987, that was the crowning moment," he said. "To hear the fans cheer and call my name and see a lot of them cry along with me, that stands out."

Noll and Walsh took over struggling franchises and turned them into powerhouses.

Bobcats nip Rebels in District 5 match

Staff report

SAN ANGELO — Midland Lee suffered its first loss of the District 5 soccer season here Saturday, losing 3-2 to San Angelo's Bobcats on a penalty kick by Kyle Doty with 4:16 left in the game.

Lee falls to 1-1 in district play and is now 5-3 on the season. It was the district opener for the Bobcats, who own a 5-2 season mark.

San Angelo threatened to bury Lee early, taking a 2-0 lead in the first five minutes of the match. Doty scored the Bobcats' first point 28 seconds into the match and Vince Meza made it 2-0 less than four minutes later.

However, Lee struck back to trail 2-1 at the half when Justin Gotcher scored on a header off a throw-in by Matthew Lawrence with 19:29 left in the half. Lee tied the score with 27:18 left in the game on a breakaway goal by Jeremy Keener.

The biggest news in the district, however, came from Odessa where Odessa High defeated Abilene Cooper by a 4-3 margin. It was the first district win ever recorded by OHS, who had gone three full seasons and one game without a win in boys soccer.

Lee will host OHS Tuesday at 4 p.m. on the Lee field. Midland High, which was idle Saturday, will travel to Odessa Permian Tuesday for a 5:30 p.m. game.

In the other District 5 game Saturday, Abilene High took over sole possession of first place with a 7-2 win over Odessa Permian. AHS is unbeaten at 2-0 and 8-0. Permian fell to 1-1 and 4-4.

Wrenn takes lead into final round

Associated Press

■ Phoenix Open

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — It's been a while since Robert Wrenn had anything to celebrate on the golf course.

A non-winner since 1987, Wrenn showed killer instinct during the third round of the Phoenix Open. The 33-year-old Richmond, Va., golfer gave the $1 million event an undisputed leader Saturday with an eagle-3 and a birdie in the closing holes which left him at 11-under-par 202.

"There wasn't a lot of major jockeying around out there," Wrenn said of his second straight 3-under 68, shot in conditions which gave the 6,992-yard TPC of Scottsdale course a split personality — short but tricky downwind; tough upwind.

Wrenn, one of seven first-round leaders, said he hadn't led a tournament after 54 holes since his lone title — the Buick Open nearly six years ago.

"I get to this position about once a year," he joked, adding that he had nothing to lose today.

"I think the nicest part of a one-shot lead is that you're another shot ahead of a lot of people," he said.

The lone exception to the conservatism of the day was Andrew Magee, who started seven shots behind 36-hole leaders David Frost and Lee Janzen. Magee overcame a double bogey and a bogey with a 10-birdie round of 64 which left him a shot behind Wrenn and tied with Frost at 203.

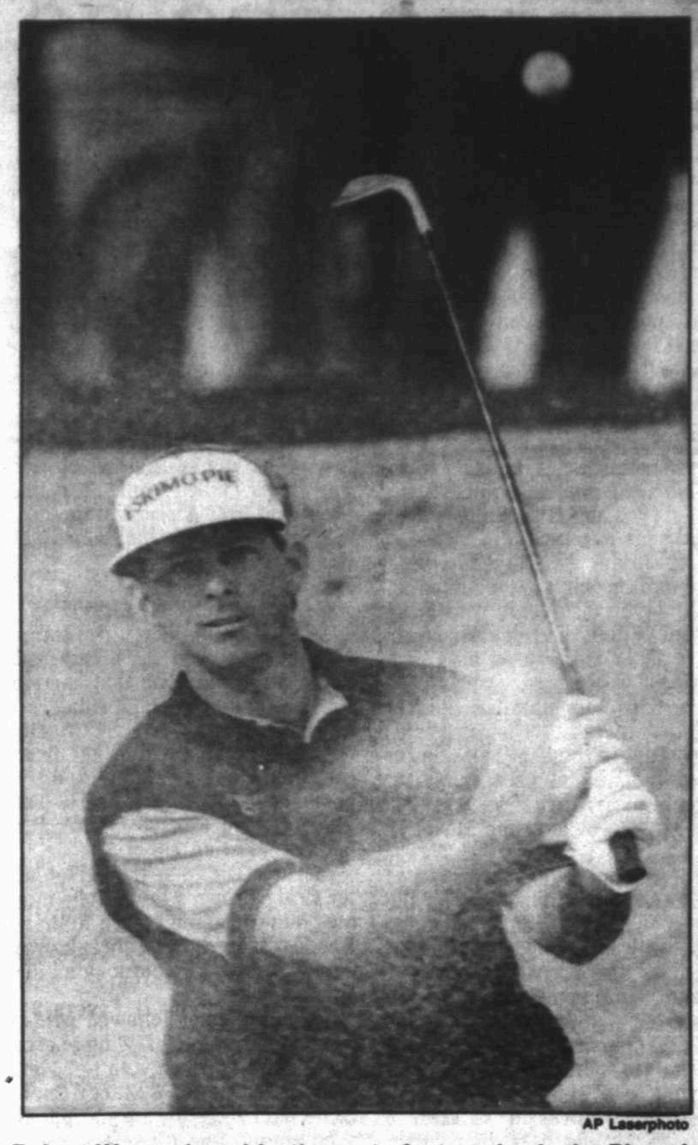

"I didn't have anything special going," said Magee, 30, a Scottsdale resident who won two of his three championships in 1991 but never got closer than seventh last year and missed the cut last week in his first 1993 event.

"I was just happy to make the cut, my first cut of the year to make. It was nice to get on the board and make $2,000 check. I didn't have any expectations, which is probably one reason why I did come out and have a good day," Magee added.

Steve Lowery was all alone in fourth at 204.

Wrenn played the third round with Frost and Lee Janzen, who managed respective rounds of 71 and 2-over 73, underlining Magee's accomplishment in beating the next-best score of the day by three strokes.

Janzen and Kirk Triplett were joined at 205, while the group at 206 included R.W. Eaks, Michael Allen and Gary Hallberg, who had the second-best round of Saturday with a 67.

MFHS Gold wins tourney crown

Midland Freshman Gold upset ninth grade conference champion Lee Grey, 45-39, Saturday to win the ninth grade Midland-Odessa post season basketball tournament at the MFHS gym.

MFHS was led by James Whitfield's 10 points while Clay Johnston and Terry Johnson each had nine points and Marcus Carlisle eight.

Lee's Mark Holly and Israel Boyd, averaging 30 and 24 points on the year, were helt to 16 and eight points by Gold.

Lee won the regular season conference title with a 5-0 record and finished with a 13-2 record, with both losses coming at the hands of the Gold team. Gold finished conference with a 3-2 record, but own a 13-2 season mark with losses to Odessa Hood and Grey.

Grey reached the finals with a 20-point victory over Nimitz while Gold got to the finals with a 46-44 win over Hood on a shot at the buzzer by Johnston.

The final order of finish for the tournament was 1. Gold, 2. Grey, 3. Hood, 4. Nimitz, 5. Bowie, 6. Bonham, 7. Lee Maroon, 8. Midland Purple, 9. Crockett and 10. Ector. Lee Maroon was the consolation winner.

Arnie wins $50,000 skin

Senior Skins Game

MAUNA LANI, Hawaii — With a fine sense of drama, Arnold Palmer saved the best until the last Saturday over the first nine holes of the Senior Skins Game.

With a fine sense of humor, Chi Chi Rodriguez explained how and why he let Arnold escape with a 10-foot birdie putt worth $50,000.

Palmer, at 63 the oldest of the four legends from the over-50 circuit competing in the two-day, 18-hole, made-for-television event, was facing a shutout until his breaktrough on the last hole of the day.

"I'm very fortunate to have had the opportunity, and fortunate I was able to do something with it," he said.

Palmer's good fortune came on a bad break for Rodriguez, the irrepressable Puerto Rican whose quick wit and on-course commentary on subjects ranging from politics to pantyhose served as a highlight of the proceedings.

Rodriguez's 35-foot chip shot for a birdie-4 — which would have eliminated Palmer from any chance of winning the final hole — hit the back of the cup and spun out.

"I should have left the pin in," Rodriguez said. "If I leave the pin in, the ball stays in.

"It was a mistake, but it was the right mistake, because Arnie won the hole," Rodriguez said.

The final nine holes, with another $285,000 up for grabs, is scheduled Sunday .

Nunn retains middleweight title in WBA

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — WBA super middleweight champion Michael Nunn held on to his title Saturday night with a unanimous 12-round decision over former champ Victor Cordoba.

Nunn (39-1, 25 knockouts) took the title from Cordoba at Las Vegas in September on a 2-1 decision.

Cordoba (18-5-2, 14 knockouts) complained about that decision and the WBA ordered an immediate rematch.

He floored Cordoba twice in the second round and had him pinned against the ropes under a flurry of punches when the round ended.

Cordoba drew boos throughout the fight because of low punches and was penalized by referee Ernesto Magana of Mexico in the first, fifth and 11th rounds.

In the second round, Nunn set Cordoba up with a left-right combination then floored him with a right as he staggered. Nunn used two quick lefts to put him down the second time.

Judge Guy Jucras of Canada scored the fight 115-107, judge Roberto Ramires of Puerto Rico scored it 117-106 and judge Justo Vasquez of Spain put it 120-106.

Nunn, 29, of Davenport, Iowa, moved up to the 168-pound class following the loss of his IBF middleweight title to James Toney in 1991. Toney stopped Nunn with a right hand in the 10th round of that fight.

Cordoba, 30, of Panama, won the super middleweight title by stopping Chris Tiozzo in the ninth round in a 1991 fight in France.

The Nunn-Cordoba fight topped a six-bout card at The Pyramid, a new riverfront arena in Memphis.

Kansas has no trouble with Division II Rollins

Associated Press

LAWRENCE, Kan. — Top-ranked Kansas, upset at home by Long Beach State in its previous game, had no trouble with Division II Rollins, rolling to a 103-56 rout Saturday night.

Adonis Jordan hit a 3-pointer that put the Jayhawks (17-2) ahead for good at 20-17 with 15 minutes left. Kansas closed the first half with a 15-0 run for a 55-30 lead.

Eric Pauley scored 21 points and Jordan and Richard Scott each had 15 points. Scott made all seven of his field goal attempts. Steve Woodberry and Rex Walters each had 12 for Kansas.

The Jayhawks played without Darrin Hancock, the top junior college player last year, who is expected to miss a week after undergoing laser surgery on both eyes this past week.

Kansas, the nation's leading shooting team at 55 percent, shot 73 percent in the first half and finished the game at a season-high 67 percent. The Jayhawks had shot just 42 percent in losing Monday.

No. 2 Indiana 93, Northwestern 71

EVANSTON, Ill. — Eyeing the top spot, second-ranked Indiana got 22 points from Calbert Cheaney and 21 from Greg Graham to remain unbeaten in the Big Ten.

Graham scored 13 of his points as the Hoosiers (19-2, 8-0) were moving to a 41-29 halftime lead. Cheaney took over in the final 20 minutes, getting 19 of his points.

Indiana moved into line for the top spot in the poll with No. 1 Kansas losing to Long Beach State last week and No. 3 North Carolina being routed by Wake Forest earlier Saturday.

Northwestern (5-10, 0-6) held several early leads, but a 13-0 run over a six-minute span gave Indiana a 37-27 advantage.

Cedric Neloms led Northwestern with 20 points, and Pat Baldwin had 19.

Indiana — with only nine players on the roster — lost Alan Henderson to an eye injury with 6:03 left in the first half.

Wake Forest 88, No. 3 North Carolina 62

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. — Third-ranked North Carolina had its nine-game winning streak snapped by Wake Forest when Randolph Childress put on a second-half shooting exhibition and scored 27 points in a rout.

Wake Forest (13-3, 5-2 Atlantic Coast Conference) had lost 11 straight games to the Tar Heels (17-2, 6-1) and 23 of the last 24. It was the first time the Demon Deacons defeated North Carolina in Winston-Salem since 1979.

Childress hit his first seven shots to start the second half, the last six of them 3-pointers. He took the Demon Deacons from a 33-30 halftime lead to a 59-36 advantage with 13:26 to play. Childress is the team's leading scorer at 20.7 points per game.

Last year, Wake Forest blew a 22-point lead to North Carolina and lost at the buzzer. Last week, the Tar Heels rallied from 21 points down and beat Florida State.

There would be no comeback this time.

No. 4 Kentucky 71, Florida 48

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Jamal Mashburn scored 22 points and keyed a first-half run that carried No. 4 Kentucky past Florida.

Kentucky (15-1, 6-1 SEC) shot only 33.3 percent (20 of 60) from the field, but it dominated rebounding by a 54-36 margin. The Wildcats held Florida to only 31.6 percent shooting (18 of 57).

Florida (11-6, 4-3) trailed 8-6 after Craig Brown's layup four minutes into the game before Rodrick Rhodes scored on a breakaway dunk to spark Kentucky's 16-4 spurt.

Gimel Martinez followed with a 3-pointer from the left wing to give Kentucky a 13-6 lead with 14:35 left in the half. Florida's Stacey Poole came back with a lane jumper to slice the margin to five points.

Martinez then hit two free throws and Mashburn sank a 3-pointer after a Florida turnover to widen Kentucky's advantage to 18-8. Hosie Grimsley hit a 15-footer to keep Florida within eight points.

No. 6 Cincinnati 80, DePaul 54

CINCINNATI — No. 6 Cincinnati won its 12th straight by forcing DePaul into a season-high 31 turnovers for a Great Midwest Conference victory.

Cincinnati (15-1, 4-0 Great Midwest) rattled DePaul with its defense, ranked second nationally. The Bearcats took control with a 14-2 first-half run, then wrapped it up with a 20-3 spurt after intermission.

The Bearcats' 12-game winning streak is the longest in Division I. DePaul (10-9, 1-3 Great Midwest) has lost five of its last seven.

Cincinnati's offense didn't have to work very hard for points, thanks to the intense defense. Four players hit double figures, led by LaZelle's Durden's 14. Thirty-six of Cincinnati's points came off turnovers.

No. 7 Duke 78, Maryland 62

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Bobby Hurley sparked an early second-half run that helped No. 7 Duke build an 18-point lead, and the Blue Devils went on to beat Maryland.

Hurley made a 3-pointer and a jumper during a 14-2 spurt that enabled the Blue Devils to turn a six-point halftime lead into a 55-37 advantage. The Terrapins closed within eight but got no closer and lost to their Atlantic Coast Conference rival for a 12th straight time.

Hurley led Duke (15-3, 4-3) with 17 points, including 12 in the second half, and Grant Hill had 15. Kevin McLinton scored 18 — just four after halftime — for Maryland (10-7, 1-6).

No. 8 Arizona 57, Oregon St. 54

CORVALLIS, Ore. — Damon Stoudamire wrapped up a triumphant return to his home state by sinking four free throws in the final 39 seconds as No. 8 Arizona held off Oregon State to remain unbeaten in the Pac-10.

Khalid Reeves, playing despite a sore right shoulder, scored 12 of his 14 points in the second half for the Wildcats (13-2, 7-0), who won their 11th straight.

Oregon State (9-8, 5-3) scored the first 10 points of the game, led by five at halftime and was up 31-24 in the early minutes of the second half. But the Wildcats rallied behind the play of Reeves to build a nine-point lead, then survived a final Oregon State surge to beat the Beavers for the 17th time in their last 18 meetings.

No. 12 Vanderbilt 73, Auburn 70

AUBURN, Ala. — No. 12 Vanderbilt extended its winning streak to five games, using two key three-point plays by Chris Lawson and Kevin Anglin in the final 1:30 to defeat Auburn.

Auburn (8-7 overall, 3-5 Southeastern Conference) led 61-58 with five minutes to go. But Vandy (16-3, 6-1) scored 11 of the next 13 points, capped by Lawson's basket and free throw with 1:30 remaining to put the Commodores ahead 69-63.

After Reggie Gallon scored off a steal for the Tigers with 1:01 left to close the gap to 69-65, Anglin sealed the victory. A loose ball was recovered by Bruce Elder, who found Anglin alone under the basket for a layin despite a foul by Gallon. Anglin added the free throw to put the Commodores up by seven with 42 seconds to go.

Michigan St. 72, No. 14 Purdue 64

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. — Shawn Respert scored 23 points and sparked a decisive spurt as Michigan State bounced back from a tough loss and beat No. 14 Purdue.

On Thursday, the Spartans blew a 15-point lead with 3½ minutes left in regulation and lost in overtime to Iowa 96-90. That was Iowa's first game since the death of starter Chris Street.

Michigan State (11-5, 3-4 Big Ten) trailed Purdue 27-24 when Mike Peplowski's layup with 2:01 left in the first half started a 21-4 surge. Respert, who had seven points in the run, then hit an 18-footer with 28 seconds remaining to put the Spartans ahead.

Virginia Tech 59, No. 15 Virginia 53

RICHMOND, Va. — Shawn Smith and Virginia Tech overcame a 16-point deficit in the final 17 minutes and upset No. 15 Virginia.

Smith scored 10 points in the last 5:36. He wound up with 15 points as the Hokies (7-7) broke a three-game losing streak.

Virginia (12-4) made just five field-goal attempts in the second half and lost for the fourth time in five games.

No. 16 Arkansas 97, Georgia 79

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — Roger Crawford scored a career-high 25 points, including six during an early 19-point run, and No. 16 Arkansas beat Georgia to end a three-game losing streak.

Dwight Stewart opened the run with a basket after a nice move inside, and Darrell Hawkins finished it with two free throws that made it 28-8 with 10:58 left. During the first 8½ minutes, Arkansas made 10 of 13 shots while Georgia made 3 of 16.

Colorado St. 78, No. 17 Utah 69

FORT COLLINS, Colo. — Keith Bonds scored 19 points to lead four Rams in double figures as Colorado State upset 17th-ranked Western Athletic Conference rival Utah.

The Rams (13-6, 5-4) handed Utah (15-3) its first WAC loss of the year against eight victories, and broke the Utes' 10-game winning streak.

No. 20 Oklahoma 94, Colorado 70

NORMAN, Okla. — Bryatt Vann scored a career-high 40 points in leading No. 20 Oklahoma over Colorado, handing the Buffaloes their 14th straight road loss.

Oklahoma (14-5 overall, 2-2 Big Eight) beat Colorado for the 13th consecutive time in Norman. The Sooners forced 25 turnovers and held Colorado (8-9, 0-5) to 42-percent shooting.

Boston College 71, No. 21 Georgetown 61

BOSTON — The only thing less efficient than the scoreboard at Boston College was the Georgetown offense.

The No. 21 Hoyas shot 37 percent and committed 14 turnovers in a 71-61 loss to Boston College. Georgetown made 8 of 31 shots in the second half.

St. John's 72, No. 22 Connecticut 59

NEW YORK — Derek Brown tied the school record for 3-pointers in a game and had 19 of his 24 points in the first half as St. John's continued to surprise in the Big East, taking a victory over No. 22 Connecticut.

The Redmen (11-5, 6-2) are alone in first place in the conference.

No. 23 Tulane 65, Southern Miss. 52

NEW ORLEANS — A tough defense helped 23rd-ranked Tulane over Southern Mississippi, the fewest points by a Green Wave opponent in 41 years.

No. 24 Marquette 65, St. Louis 62

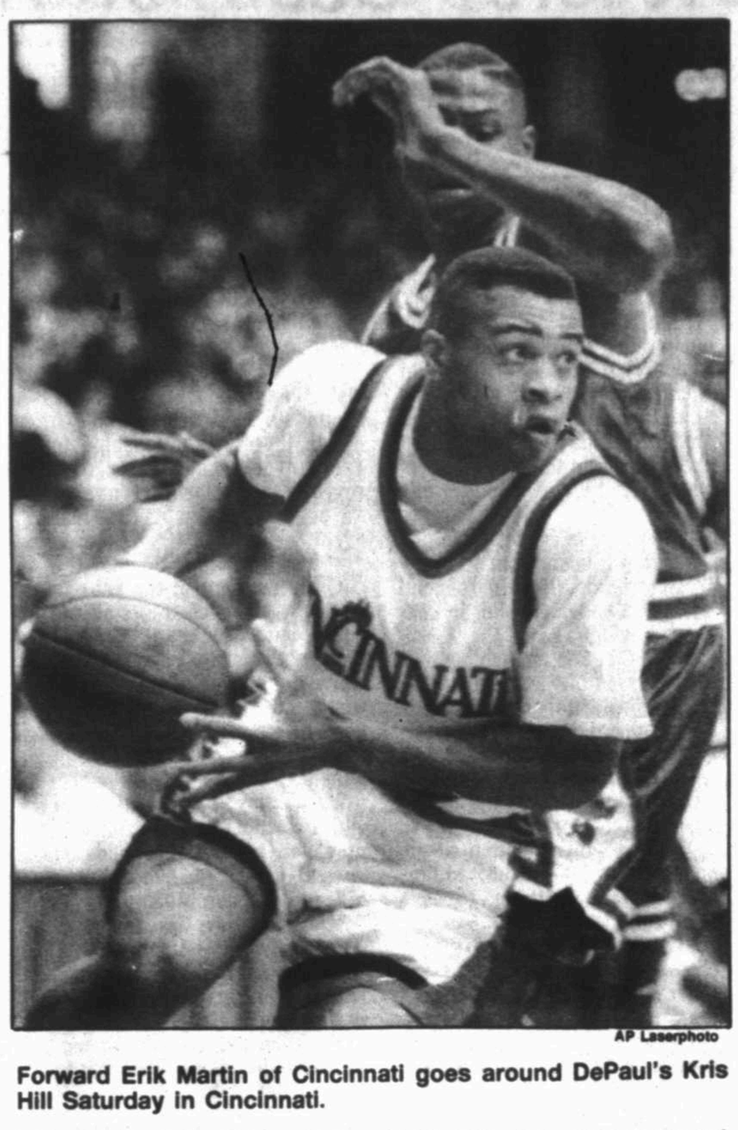

ST. LOUIS — Damon Key scored 21 points, Ron Curry added 19 and No. 24 Marquette withstood a late St. Louis rally for a Great Midwest Conference victory.

No.10 UNLV 87, Utah St. 78

LOGAN, Utah — J.R. Rider scored 21 of his 29 points in the first half as the Runnin' Rebels' recorded their 22nd straight win over the Aggies.

UNLV (13-1, 6-1 Big West), used a 12-2 run in the final two minutes to pull away from Utah State, which led 45-37 at halftime. Evric Gray scored five of his 20 points during the run.

Mustangs take over first place

Associated Press

DALLAS — Tim Mason's two 3-pointers sparked a second half rally to give Southern Methodist a 70-60 victory over 25th-ranked Houston Saturday night and put the Mustangs in first place in the Southwest Conference.

The loss was the second in a week for Houston (11-4 overall, 4-2 SWC) after leading the league.

Mike Wilson led SMU (12-5, 5-1) with 14 points and brought in 8 rebounds. Greg Kinzer added 13 points, Mason had 12 and Chad Allen 11.

Gerald Lewis had 4 points but led the Mustangs with nine rebounds.

Charles Outlaw led the Cougars with 22 points, followed by David Diaz with 12. No other Houston players scored more than eight.

Mason's 3-pointers gave SMU a 46-42 lead with 10:30 to play. Wilson and Matt Timme then hit field goals to stretch it to 50-42 at 9:31.

Both teams began the game cold, hitting only one in three shots from the field and faring worse from the free throw line in the first half. At the intermission, the teams were tied 24-24.

Outlaw had scored 11 for the Cougars at halftime while Kinzer had 10 for the Mustangs.

Texas Tech 89, Texas Christian 83

LUBBOCK — Lance Hughes scored a season-high 30 points and Texas Tech held off a late 18-7 scoring run by Texas Christian for a victory.

The Red Raiders (10-6 overall, 2-3 in the Southwest Conference) hit seven of 10 free throws over the last 2 minutes to give the Horned Frogs (3-13, 0-5) their fourth straight loss.

TCU was down 75-57 with 7:20 to play when Brent Atwater began the Horned Frogs' comeback attempt with a 3-pointer.

Allen Tolley then scored nine of his 16 points over the next five minutes as TCU moved to within 82-75 with 2:23 to play.

Atwater led the Horned Frogs with 18 points. Eric Dailey added 16 points and Myron Gordon had 15 points and 10 rebounds.

Will Flemons scored 16 points for Tech and Lenny Holly had 12 points. Each grabbed six rebounds.

Hughes hit all six of his first-half shots, including four 3-pointers, to lead Tech to a 52-37 halftime lead.

He hit a short jumper early in the second half to give the Red Raiders a 54-37 lead, their largest of the game.

Rice 101, Texas 83

HOUSTON — Brent Scott scored 27 points and the Rice Owls used a 16-4 run to start the second half to charge past the Texas Longhorns for their eighth straight home victory.

The Owls (11-5, 5-1 in Southwest Conference) remained tied for the lead in the SWC with Southern Methodist, which beat the Houston Cougars 70-60.

Rice beat the Longhorns (7-8, 1-5) for the third straight game. The Owls hadn't beaten Texas three in a row since the 1957-58 season.

Rice led 44-39 at the half, but 3-point baskets by David Holmes and Scott Tynes and a 3-point play by Torry Andrews started the second half runaway.

After Rice's quick second half start, Texas answered with a 10-2 run.

Rice substitutes played the final minutes of the game.

Texas A&M 80, Baylor 71

COLLEGE STATION — Tony McGinnis had 18 points and four other Aggies scored in double figures, leading Texas A&M over Baylor.

The Aggies started the game with a 7-0 run and never trailed while improving to 7-10 overall and 2-3 in Southwest Conference play. The Bears dropped to 11-5 and 3-2.

Baylor tied the game twice in the first half, including once at 30-30 just before halftime. But David Edwards sank a basket with 48 seconds remaining that put Texas A&M ahead for good at 32-30.

Rose Bowl still going strong

Associated Press

PASADENA, Calif. — Seventy years ago on a hilltop overlooking the Arroyo Seco, William Leishman held a plywood board with a small circle cut out of it and asked his colleagues to peer through the circle and share his vision of a beautiful stadium.

If Leishman and those other Tournament of Roses officials could look down into the arroyo today, they would be very proud.

The Rose Bowl, suitably attired for America's single biggest sporting event, will host its fifth Super Bowl.

Construction on the stadium began in 1922. As a sign of times long gone, it was finished on time and under budget — in less than a year and at a cost of $272,198.26.

By comparison, the press box was recently renovated, with the Super Bowl and the 1994 World Cup coming to town, at a cost of $10.6 million.

Lay Leishman, who was 18 when his father led the drive to have the Rose Bowl built, recalled the days of construction.

"They used donkeys and wagons and hauled the dirt out to form an embankment; it was something to see," said the 89-year-old Leishman, whose father died in 1972.

William Leishman was formerly a tailor in New Haven, Conn., and he wanted the design to resemble the Yale Bowl, which was completed in 1914 and still is in use. The Rose Bowl architect, Myron Hunt, made the design close.

The Rose Bowl has had more than its share of memorable moments over the years. It's where Roy Riegels of California ran the wrong way for 64 yards in 1929, and where John Riggins plugged through the Miami defense on a Super Bowl-record 38 carries for 166 yards in Washington's 27-17 victory 10 years ago. It's where Bear Bryant once layed, where Knute Rockne coached a game, where the Four Horsemen played.

On Sunday, it's where Troy Aikman, Emmitt Smith, Jim Kelly and Thurman Thomas will be in the spotlight, with more than 101,000 people in the seats and some 750 million in the television audience.

Lay Leishman remembers the Arroyo Seco's humble past.

"It was a dump. Everybody took their trash there in those days. That's why there are so many bumps in the parking lot; the trash underneath the ground was covered up," he said.

Associated Press

ATLANTA — Former Midland College star Mookie Blaylock scored a career-high 30 points and the Atlanta Hawks broke their Omni scoring record in Saturday night's 149-123 victory over Philadelphia.

The previous team record was 148 by the Hawks against Orlando in 1989.

Blaylock, bettering his previous career high by three points, made 12 of 15 shots — including his first nine — and also had 12 assists. Kevin Willis, who made 15 of 21 shots and scored 19 points in the third quarter, finished with 33 points and 21 rebounds for the Hawks.

Hersey Hawkins led the Sixers with 29 points, and Johnny Dawkins had 20.

Dominique Wilkins scored 25 points for Atlanta, the first time in 10 games he was not Atlanta's leading scorer.

Spurs 129, Kings 124

SAN ANTONIO — Avery Johnson matched his career high with 22 points, including 12 in the fourth quarter as San Antonio won for the 11th time in 12 games with him at point guard.

Dale Ellis led the Spurs with 27 points and David Robinson scored 25.

Wayman Tisdale scored 29 points, Mitch Richmond 27 and Lionel Simmons 25 for the Kings, who lost despite shooting 60 percent from the field.

Houston 108, New Jersey 105

HOUSTON — Houston's Hakeem Olajuwon fouled out after a 22-point, 14-rebound performance and the Rockets held on in the final 35 seconds for a victory over New Jersey.

Houston had to overcome 57 points supplied by New Jersey's starting guards Drazen Petrovic and Kenny Anderson, who had 32 and 25 points, respectively. Anderson also had 11 assists and six rebounds.

Suns 126, Mavericks 105

PHOENIX — Dan Majerle hit eight 3-point goals — one shy of the NBA record — and scored 30 points, leading Phoenix to a rout of Dallas.

The Suns, who have the NBA's best record at 31-8, nearly let the Mavericks, with the league's worst record at 3-36, back into the game after taking a 92-68 lead into the fourth quarter.

Hornets 127, Bullets 121

LANDOVER, Md. — Dell Curry had a career-high 33 points, including a 3-pointer that forced overtime, as Charlotte rallied to beat Washington.

Curry scored the Hornets' last nine points in regulation, including a 25-footer with 9.3 seconds left that tied it 113-113. He then converted a three-point play early in overtime, when Charlotte started with a 7-0 run.

The Bullets closed to 123-121 with 19 seconds left in overtime, but Muggsy Bogues made two free throws to cement the decision.

Curry made 14 of 25 shots to eclipse his previous high of 31 points. Larry Johnson had 27 points and 19 rebounds for Charlotte.

Heat 98, Cavaliers 95

MIAMI — Steve Smith, making his first start of the season, scored 21 points, including a tip-in of Rony Seikaly's miss with 38 seconds remaining, lifting Miami over Cleveland.

The Heat led 96-95 when Seikaly tried an off-balance 10-footer that bounced off the rim, and Smith tipped it in.

At the other end, the Cavs' Mark Price missed a 3-pointer and Smith grabbed his seventh rebound, giving Miami a 55-38 advantage on the boards. After Miami's Brian Shaw missed a shot, another 3-point effort by Price fell short at the buzzer.

Pacers 110, Pistons 106

INDIANAPOLIS — Reggie Miller scored 29 points, including five technical free throws and a 3-point goal in a span of 14 seconds in the fourth quarter, leading Indiana past Detroit.

Timberwolves 91, Bucks 82

MINNEAPOLIS — Doug West scored four of his 24 points during a 12-1 run to open the fourth quarter as Minnesota snapped a six-game losing streak.

Jazz 113, Clippers 105

SALT LAKE CITY — Karl Malone scored nine of his 38 points during a fourth-quarter surge, and Utah beat the Los Angeles Clippers.

Nuggets 109, Bulls 102

DENVER — Dikembe Mutombo had 29 points and tied a career-high with 22 rebounds, Reggie Williams scored 28 points and LaPhonso Ellis 22 Saturday night, leading the Denver Nuggets to a 109-102 victory over the struggling Chicago Bulls.

SuperSonics 108, Trail Blazers 86

SEATTLE — Seattle bounced back from back-to-back losses for only the second time this season to break a six-game Portland winning streak.

Courier victorious in 4 sets

Associated Press

MELBOURNE, Australia — In steamy 150-degree courtside heat that made Jim Courier feel right at home, he bullied Stefan Edberg for two sets as few men ever have and survived a stirring comeback Sunday to capture a second straight Australian Open championship.

Courier, as fierce as he was in his four-set victory over Edberg in the final a year ago, won his fourth Grand Slam title 6-2, 6-1, 2-6, 7-5 and further entrenched himself as No. 1.

Courier, who won nearly $280,000 to give him $5.2 million in career prize money at age 22, dug the Swede into a big hole with serves he could barely touch in the first two sets and almost buried him with sizzling returns and groundstrokes.

Edberg didn't seem stiff or slowed by the lower back spasms that nearly caused him to withdraw a week ago. Rather, after recovering and improving with each match through the semis, Edberg simply couldn't handle the heat and Courier's blazing shots.

Surface temperatures on the rubberized hard courts rose to a blistering 153 degrees during the match, while air temperatures outside the stadium were a stifling 104 degrees — harsh conditions for Edberg but perfect for Florida-native Courier.

Seles eyes sweep of Grand Slams

Associated Press

MELBOURNE, Australia — Monica Seles is looking mighty scary on the court these days, even if she's still all giggles off it, and a Grand Slam sweep this year looms as a real possibility.

Groundstrokes and grunts got her to No. 1, and now she's stretching the gap between herself and the rest of the intimidated women in tennis with frightening new skills.

Her serves, faster and livelier than ever, whizzed by Steffi Graf seven times for aces Saturday in Seles' 4-6, 6-3, 6-2 victory in the Australian Open final.

Her volleys, assured and accurate when she tried them, accounted for four winners in 14 approaches to the net, two more of each than the generally more aggressive Graf.

Not long ago, Seles wouldn't serve seven aces in a tournament, volley four times in a month or approach the net 14 times in year. She couldn't remember ever serving so many aces against a player of Graf's stature.

At 19, Seles still has an Olive Oyl physique — none of the rippling muscles of Martina Navratilova, none of the athletic grace of Graf. But in a sport in which mental toughness is perhaps more important than physical strength, Seles is in a class of her own.

Malone released on bond

Associated Press

GALVESTON — Milwaukee Bucks center Moses Malone has been released on bond after his arrest here on a complaint issued by his ex-wife, who claims Malone threatened to kill her.

Malone, who previously played for the Houston Rockets, was arrested Friday and later released from the Galveston County Jail after posting a $5,000 bond.

A peace bond warrant had been issued for Malone after Alfreda Malone alleged in a Jan. 22 affidavit that her ex-husband had threatened to kill her.

Ms. Malone told a justice of the peace that Malone had damaged her property, stalked her and illegally entered her home. She lives in League City with the couple's two children, Moses II, 12, and Michael, 8.

Divorced from the basketball star in October, Ms. Malone asked the justice to issue a peace bond to keep her former husband from bothering her and her children. A hearing will be held in early February to decide on setting a peace bond.

Donn Fullenweider, Malone's attorney in Houston, did not immediately return a telephone calls Saturday from The Associated Press.

Under a peace bond arrangement, Malone would have to post a cash bond as a guarantee that he will observe the court's rules about contacting his ex-wife.

Bowe-Dokes breaks MSG record

NEW YORK (AP) — Riddick Bowe's heavyweight title defense against Michael Dokes, still a week away, was assured of being the largest grossing event ever held at Madison Square Garden.

As of noon Saturday, the fight had grossed $1,375,960, with a little more than 14,000 tickets sold, a Garden spokesman said.

The arena holds 19,275 for boxing.

The previous record for the Garden was $1,362,305 for a Bob Dylan benefit concert last Oct. 16. The highest previous gross for a fight at the Garden was $1,352,951 for Joe Frazier's decision victory over Muhammad Ali on March 8, 1971.

Rangers mired in 21-year history of futility

By Murray Chass
N.Y. Times News Service

Three years after they staggered to a 1-15 record, the Dallas Cowboys play in the Super Bowl today. They are in the Super Bowl for a sixth time. The Texas Rangers have never played in the World Series.

One problem is that the Rangers have never fulfilled the first prerequisite for reaching the World Series: winning a division championship. In the 21 years the Rangers have played in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, the Cowboys have won seven division championships.

"We have never contended," said George W. Bush, managing partner of the group that bought the Rangers four years ago, the same year the Cowboys won one game under their new ownership. "We would like to contend. We would like to compete with high school football one time. It never has happened in franchise history."

The Rangers, who began as the expansion Washington Senators in 1961 before moving in 1972, have never finished a full season better than five games from first place. The closest they actually came to qualifying for post-season play was in the strike-split 1981 season, when they finished the pre-strike part only a game and a half from first. They were in first place four days before the strike began, but Oakland passed them.

In 1977, the season they had four managers, the Rangers were in first place as late as Aug. 18 and were only two and a half games behind on Aug. 30. But the next day the Kansas City Royals began a 16-game winning streak, crushing any hopes the Rangers had of winning the championship.

In 1979, they were one game from the top on July 15, then lost 31 of their next 41 games. In 1986, they held the American League West lead for 32 consecutive days, from May 24 through June 24, then were first again the first six days of July. But California went on a 23-7 spree late in the season, and the Rangers couldn't maintain the pace.

In the six seasons since, the best the Rangers could do was finish 10 games out. Their average distance from first in that span has been 18 games. Last season they limped to the end 19 behind.

"We haven't done a good enough job," said Tom Grieve, who is approaching his ninth season as Texas's general manager. "Anytime you get the opportunity to be involved with a franchise and have seven or eight years you should've come a lot closer to winning a championship than we have. That's a major disappointment within the organization for all of us who have been here all that time."

Bobby Valentine had been there virtually all of that time, but he was dismissed as the Rangers' manager last July. Kevin Kennedy is the new manager, and he has a primarily new coaching staff: Claude Osteen for the pitchers, Willie Upshaw for the hitters, Mickey Hatcher for first base and Jackie Moore for help on the bench.

Grieve also added some players, including Charlie Leibrandt and Craig Lefferts for the starting pitching rotation, Tom Henke for the closing relief role, Bob Patterson for a left-handed relief spot, Manny Lee for shortstop, Doug Dascenzo for a platoon role in center field and Gary Redus for his bat off the bench. They join the stars of the team: Nolan Ryan, Juan Gonzalez, Jose Canseco, Rafael Palmeiro, Julio Franco and Ivan Rodriguez.

The Rangers lost a popular player, Jose Guzman, who left as a free agent after continuing his impressive comeback from extensive shoulder problems by winning 16 games. Bush put Guzman's departure in perspective when he was asked if the Cowboys' stunning success had placed greater pressure on the Rangers.

"The people who are frustrated with us for not winning, not contending, have been that way regardless of the Cowboys," he said. "Our team couldn't have felt any more pressure than when we didn't sign Guzman. The talk show hosts killed us. The columnists assailed us. He was a popular player. Then the Cowboys wiped us off the face of the sports pages, so when we made moves we didn't get credit for them. We have a much better team than last year."

Grieve noted that in the past, the Rangers have had exciting individual players and achievements. "What we haven't been able to do," he added, "is put together the final pieces, the intangibles that you need to win, filling our roster with a key middle reliever, a key pinch-hitter, the depth you need to counteract injuries."

What Grieve himself has had is an ownership group willing to give him more time to produce a winner. In these expensive times in baseball, general managers who don't win in a few years often are replaced. Grieve is No. 4 on the seniority list of major league general managers.

Texas tries to sign O's' Billy Ripken

ARLINGTON — The Texas Rangers are pursuing free agent Billy Ripken after second baseman Jeff Frye suffered a serious knee injury that is expected to keep him out next season.

Frye injured his right knee Tuesday night while jogging. He will have surgery in about two weeks and be out for six months.

Texas turned to Frye last season when starter Julio Franco was able to play in only 10 games at second base because of an injury to his right knee.

Team officials on Friday contacted Ripken's agent, Ron Shapiro, to express their interest in the former Baltimore Oriole.

"We need to help our depth at second base," said Rangers general manager Tom Grieve. "We've contacted Billy. We should know by the end of the weekend what we're going to be able to do. We are depleted at that position."

Texas also is without shortstop Jeff Huson, who played 47 games at second base last season. Huson has a torn rotator cuff in his left shoulder and probably will miss much of this year.

Ripken, 28, was released by Baltimore after free agent Harold Reynolds signed a deal with the team. Ripken hit .230 with four homers and 36 RBIs last year.

Tomba says fewer wins are because of competition

Associated Press

MILAN, Italy — There's been a lot written and whispered about why Alberto Tomba has won only one race this season. Hardly anyone offers the reason that is most obvious.

"The competition is getting stronger and stronger in the World Cup," Tomba said from Val Di Fassa, where he's been training in privacy for the World Alpine Ski Championships which open Wednesday at Morioka, Japan.

"I missed a few wins for bad luck, and my results so far this season are less than disappointing."

Although he has only the one victory, he has seven other top three finishes and ranks second to four-time champion Marc Girardelli of Luxembourg in the overall standings.

"There is no crisis for Tomba with all the good results he achieved this season," Italian team coach Helmuth Schmalzl said. "He's facing new and stronger opponents in each race.

"Tomba is as good as before. Perhaps he's more cautious in the first runs and takes all the risks in the second."

Some have wondered whether Tomba is wilting under the pressure of his multimillion-dollar contracts and others speculate that his concentration is divided between racing and former beauty queen Martina Colombari.

Tomba has a chance to silence the criticism, and fulfill a career goal, in the world championships. Although he's been a standout Olympic racer — two golds at Calgary in 1988, a gold and a silver last year at Albertville — he's been a dissappointment in world championship races.

It was a third-place finish in the giant slalom of the 1987 world championships that signalled Tomba's breakthrough from promising youngster to star. But that's the only medal he's won in the championships.

"My season priority is a medal in the world championships at Morioka," Tomba said.

OT makes Tasker record special

Associated Press

HOBBS, N.M. — Ralph Tasker came within eight seconds of missing out on a national record, but Tyrone Haynes' 15-foot jumper left sent Hobbs into overtime — and overdrive.

With an 87-77 victory Friday night over Alamogordo, the Eagles made Tasker the winningest high school boys basketball coach ever.

Tasker, 73, now has 1,027 victories and 252 defeats, one win better than previous record holder Leslie Gaudet of Louisiana's Pine Prairie High School. Gaudet had 1,026 victories and 353 losses in a career that ended in 1970.

Tasker tied the record Jan. 22 with a 61-51 victory over Roswell and moved into sole possession of the mark Friday night.

"The past 10 days have been the longest of my life," Tasker said afterward. "I don't know how my boys could have won if they were as tired as their coach. I knew the record was on the line, and my boys worked so hard to get it."

Of overtime, he said: "It made it special, didn't it?"

"Tonight I'm the happiest guy, not just in New Mexico but the entire Southwest. This win ranks right at the top. It meant a lot to us. Everybody in Hobbs has been pointing toward it. As time goes on, it will mean more and more to me. Right now, I'm going home, sit down and let it sink in."

Typically, the Eagles used their patented full-court press the whole game, and the press forced four crucial Tiger turnovers in overtime.

In regulation, Hobbs had been ahead 68-62 with 3:20 left, but tentative play by the Eagles on offense allowed the Tigers to catch up, and then Hobbs fell behind 70-68 with 48 seconds left.

Haynes tied it for the Eagles with eight seconds left in regulation. Alamogordo tried an 18-footer that missed at the buzzer. And the score was 70-70 at the end of regulation.

Overtime stayed close for about 3½ minutes. But with 1:45 remaining, the Eagles turned on their offense and began an 8-0 run that put them up 81-74 with 41 seconds remaining.

The Tigers' Jeffrey St. Julien scored a 3-pointer with 33 seconds left to get Alamogordo within 81-77.

The Tigers then began fouling to stop the clock, but the Eagles made four of six free throws down the line to clinch it.

Tasker began his career at Sulphur Springs, Ohio, in 1941, losing the first game he coached, 72-38.

"I didn't speak to my wife for days," he said in a recent interview.

World War II limited him to one season at Sulphur Springs, where he compiled a 5-11 record, then joined the Army Air Corps. He finished his tour of duty at Kirtland Air Force Base in Albuquerque in 1945 and took a job coaching basketball at Lovington, about 25 miles northwest of Hobbs.

Lovington had three straight winning seasons capped by a state championship in 1949.

Hobbs hired Tasker in 1950, and he's been here ever since, winning 11 more state championships. He installed a full-court press in 1956, and it has been the hallmark of Tasker's defense ever since.

Through every season and in every game, the sideline refrain from the Hobbs bench has been a constant "press, press, run."

Longhorn baseball team defeats alum All-Stars

AUSTIN (AP) — A Texas alumni team, including Roger Clemens, Greg Swindell, Spike Owen and Keith Moreland, lost to the varsity 9-3 on Saturday.

"This game means a lot to me because I don't think I'd be in the position I'm in today without this organization or the university," Swindell said. "I think every player out here can attest to that."

Moreland, who starred for Texas from 1973-75 before playing 11 seasons in the majors, said the players feel an obligation to keep the Longhorns program at the top of the college game.

The hitting star for the varsity was Peter Gardere, the Texas quarterback the last four years who is playing baseball for the first time.

Gardere, a star baseball player in high school, went 3-for-3 with an RBI and three runs scored.

Another quarterback also got in the game for the varsity — highly touted Shea Morenz, who was redshirted in football after breaking his leg. Morenz went 1-for-3 with an RBI.

The game's only home run was hit by the alumni's Chris Abbe.

Proceeds from the game go to the university's general baseball fund.

Clemens' jersey retired by school

AUSTIN (AP) — Former Texas Longhorns pitcher Roger Clemens will become the first baseball alumnus to have his jersey number retired by the school.

Coach Cliff Gustafson made the announcement Saturday as Clemens took the mound to begin the Texas varsity-alumni game at Disch-Falk Field. The ceremony is scheduled for Feb. 12, when the Longhorns are host to California State-Fullerton.

Clemens, who wore No. 21 for Texas in 1982 and 1983, is a three-time American League Cy Young Award winner with the Boston Red Sox. After the announcement, he tipped his cap as the crowd gave him a standing ovation.

Fredric W. Poe, who has helped lead the city through trials, tribulations and triumphs for over three decades, steps down today with few regrets, no reservations and a hint of sadness.

"The city of Midland is fortunate to have working for it, the most capable and dedicated group of 850 employees you will find anywhere," he said. "That is one of the things that has made this job so enjoyable."

On Thursday, city employees honored Poe — who is retiring after 32 1/2 years with the city — at a reception at Midland Center. He has been Midland's city manager since 1987. On Monday, Poe's Deputy City Manger Mike McGregor, will become the city's sixth city manager.

Poe and his wife, Truma — his high school sweetheart whom he married in 1946 — moved to Midland in August of 1960 with their three children. Poe was hired by the city as supervisor of customer service, with an agreement with city manager Alex Bul that he would move into the city administration at the first opening.

Four years later, Bul kept his promise and Poe became an administrative assistant to the city manager. The following year he became the assistant city manager. In 1983, Poe was promoted to the newly created deputy city manager position.

A native West Texan, Poe was born Sept. 14, 1927, and grew up in Winters, a farming community about 40 miles south of Abilene. He received a bachelor's degree in agricultural education in 1949 from Texas A&M.

Poe served stateside in the U.S. Army for two years during World War II and in Korea in 1950 and began his career teaching the basics of farming to war veterans.

"I was raised on a farm and that's what I knew, so I taught vocational education at a veteran's school," he said.

But his hopes of a career in ranching and farming dried up during the infamous drought of the 1950s.

Poe then went to work as hospital administrator and city secretary in Winters before taking Midland's customer service supervisor job in 1960 for $500 a month.

Twenty-seven years later, Poe became Midland's city manager following the retirement of James W. Brown.

"Midland has been good for us and to us. We plan to continue to make this our home, and it is my prayer that I have in the past and can continue to give something back to the community of which I am very proud to be part of," Poe said.

And Poe, noted for his "exemplary" budgetary work, is optimistic about the city's future.

"During every decade since I have been in Midland we have had a period of economic downs as well as a period of economic boon," he said. "It just seems they have been in 10-year cycles, and the next boom is due."

During Poe's tenure, he has worked with seven mayors and nearly 60 council members.

"Midland has historically had one of the best and most progressive governing bodies of any city in the state," he said. "This has been one of the reasons Midland has always been known as one of the best places in the state to serve as city manager."

"Our citizens as a whole have been one of the best educated and most progressive group of people," he said. "This has made the manager's job more challenging but also more rewarding. It has indeed been my privilege to have served the people of Midland during these years."

Poe has watched the city grow from a town of 60,000 to 100,000 while doubling in size geographically. He has overseen a plethora of public and community improvement programs and said he would like to think he had a "small

CAF names chief of staff

James J. Kaster is "kind of a hero worshiper" who is deeply impressed by America's air power during those World War II years and who today respects the dedication, patriotism, skill and bravery of the war's aviators.

Kaster

But many people, born since that 1939-1945 war, may "have no idea of what was involved and the gallantry and the heroism of all nations involved," said Kaster, the newly-elected chief of the Confederate Air Force's governing General Staff.

"They were putting their best people up there (in the war's aerial combat): the Germans, the Japanese, us (the United States)," Kaster said. "We won it (the war). And we won it through the production of these airplanes."

GARY OTT

For some, Friday nights will always be the same

Yogi Berra once said, "It's deja vu all over again."

I now know what he meant. I just experienced the same thing.

It was a week ago Friday and I was seated in a high school gymnasium watching the Midland High basketball team go through its pregame drills. The crowd was slowly beginning to filter in and kids of all ages were running about, shouting friendly insults and slapping each other on the back. A handful of people, mostly older men, were standing outside in the cold smoking cigarettes and discussing the opposing team's top scorer. They all, it seemed, had an opinion on how best to shut him down.

Ott

The cheerleaders were huddled together, giggling and occasionally waving to fellow students seated in the bleachers. I couldn't be sure, but I assumed they were talking about boys. That's not meant to be chauvinistic. I'm equally certain that the guys were talking about girls. As I recall, that's all high school students ever talk about — members of the opposite sex.

As for me, I was focused on the players. They were taking turns shooting lay-ups and short jumpers, though occasionally one of the taller players would rattle the rim with a slam dunk. That would bring a smattering of oohs and aahs from the crowd.

Not knowing any of the players, I tried to determine who I thought would be the five starters, basing my decisions on intangible qualities such as moving without the ball and knowing when and how to make a proper bounce pass. Then I would study their mannerisms. Most "stars," even at the high school level, possess a certain cockiness that sets them apart. It's hard to describe, but there's an arrogance about them that says, "I'm good and I can back it up on the court."

The seats around me were beginning to fill up, mostly with parents of the players. They laughed a lot and exchanged small talk as they nervously awaited the tipoff. Most expressed optimism about the night's outcome, though they were careful not to sound over-confident. All agreed it was a "critical" game as far as their team's playoff chances were concerned.

Again, I glanced around the gymnasium . . . the fans, the cheerleaders, the players, the coaches, the trainers, the sportswriters, the photographers, the referees, the parents. They were all there.

I had to smile. For indeed it was deja vu all over again.

Time, at least for a few fleeting seconds, had somehow managed to go in reverse. Suddenly it was 1970, and I was no longer seated in the stands. Instead, I was down on the court, directing traffic, slapping fannies, giving high-fives, casting a wary eye at the opposition.

It was like an old black-and-white movie with me cast in the starring role. Nothing had changed from 23 years ago.

The mind does funny things if you allow it to roam freely. It likes to take journeys into the past. That's what mine was doing, drifting back to a time when I was one of the so-called "stars."

I've always believed people who didn't participate in high school sports missed out on an important aspect of growing up. There is something special about being part of "the team." It creates a togetherness, a sense of belonging.

I felt it when I played for my high school team and I could see it in the eyes of these current players. Call it pride or self-esteem or whatever. The bottom line is, when you are a part of a group you want to succeed, not only for yourself, but for your teammates. You don't want to let them down.

People talk a lot about the "good old days," and how young people today don't possess the character we had years ago. There is tendency to ridicule them and to make fun of their strange behavior and ugly hairstyles.

Lord knows I've made my share of jokes. And a lot of it I don't take back. They are weird.

But on this particular Friday night, as I soaked in the atmosphere, I realized that some things never change. A high school game is a high school game. It doesn't matter if it was played in 1957, 1970 or 1993. The cheering, the exuberance, the excitement. It all the stays the same.

And I hope it always does.

DEATHS

Joseph Wolfe

Services for Joseph M. Wolfe of Midland have been set for 10 a.m. Tuesday at Our Lady of Guadalupe Church with Father Domingo Estrada and Deacon Jesse Guajardo officiating. Funeral arrangements are under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Wolfe died Friday at his residence.

Wolfe was born April 18, 1923, in Williamsport, Penn., where he was raised and educated.

After graduating from high school, he attended John Hopkins University in Baltimore, Md., where he earned a degree in geology in 1947, and a master's degree a year later.

Wolfe went to work for Standard Oil in 1948, and worked in Midland, Snyder and Houston. He later joined Tenneco Gas Transmission Co., working in Houston, Wichita Falls, Sisterville, W.Va., Casper, Wyo. and Denver, Colo.

He was most currently a consulting geologist with MWJ Production Co.

Wolfe was a member of AAPG and WTGS.

In 1941, he received his Eagle Scout award from the Boy Scouts of America.

Wolfe married Norma Adelhardt in 1947 in Baltimore, Md.

Survivors include his wife, Norma Wolfe of Midland; two daughters, Cynthia Ann Wolfe and Deborah Ann Wolfe, both of Midland; and his father, Clarence J. Wolfe of Palm Beach Shores, Fla.

The family requests memorials be directed to Hospice of Midland.

Russell Faulkenberry

Services for Russell Faulkenberry of Midland have been set for 2 p.m. Monday at Plains Memorial Cemetery in Plains, with Rev. Glen Harlin, First Baptist Church of Odessa, officiating. Masonic services will also be conducted by Alton E. McGinty. Visitation will be at Ellis Funeral Home.

Faulkenberry

Faulkenberry was born May 2, 1914, in Comanche County. He married Olive Jones on Aug. 26, 1939, in Santa Ana, Calif.

They owned a fish market in California before moving to Lamesa to farm in 1949. He farmed in Yoakum County for 32 years.

While Faulkenberry was mayor of Plains in 1958-59, he was part owner of Wood Butane and on the board of directors at Yoakum County Co-op Gin. He later owned the Shamrock Station in Plains before moving to Midland in 1984. Faulkenberry was employed with Fuel Distributors at the time of his death.

Faulkenberry was a member of the Baptist church, a past member of Plains Masonic Lodge No. 1261 and was past grand master of the International Order of Odd Fellows Lodge No. 61.

Faulkenberry was preceded in death by a brother, Herbert Faulkenberry and a sister, Bill McNeil.

Survivors include his wife, Olive Faulkenberry of Midland; a daughter, Karen Anderson of Sonora; four brothers, Alivie Faulkenberry of Colorado City, Jim Faulkenberry of Lamesa, Terry Faulkenberry of Tucson, Ariz., and Brooks Faulkenberry of San Antonio; a sister, Delene Jenkins of Santa Monica, Calif.; and two grandchildren.

The family requests memorials be made to the charity of one's choice.

Violet Sparks

Services for Violet W. Sparks of Midland have been set for 2 p.m. today at Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. James Denison, pastor of First Baptist Church, officiating.

Mrs. Sparks died Friday at a local hospital.

Estanislado Granado

Services for Estanislado Granado are set for 2 p.m. Monday at Emanuel Baptist Church with Rev. Joe Chavez officiating. Burial will be at Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Granado

Granado died Friday at his residence.

He was born Nov. 3, 1911, in Terlingua and later lived in Marathon, Fort Stockton and the Sanderson area. He and his family moved to Midland in 1950.

Granado was employed with the City of Midland for 18 years. He retired in 1973.

He was a member of Emanuel Baptist Church.

Survivors include his wife, Maria T. Granado of Midland; two sons, Raul T. Granado of Midland and Manuel T. Granado of Dallas; a daughter, Marcella G. Diaz of Odessa; two brothers, Narciso Granado of Alpine and Auturo Granado of Midland; seven sisters, Dolores Garcia of Marathon, Fransica Sotelo of California, Luz Sanchez and Ramona Ortiz, both of of Midland, Maria Soleto of Abilene, Jesusita Barella of Nogales, Mexico, and Tomasa Romero of St. Luis, Potosi, Mexico; 16 grandchildren, 37 great-grandchildren and two great-great-grandchildren.

Walter Keener

Services for Walter W. Keener of Midland have been set for 2 p.m. Monday at Scotts Funeral Home Chapel in Gatesville with the Rev. Jim Fields of Cotton Flat Baptist Church in Midland officiating. Interment will follow at Restland Cemetery in Gatesville. Ellis Funeral Home is in charge of local arrangements.

Kenner died Friday in Midland.

He was born Sept. 24, 1909, in Rock Island and was raised in Coryell County. He married Allene Logan on Nov. 28, 1934, in Gatesville.

He worked in the oilfields of Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas and New Mexico. He moved to Midland in 1954, where worked in the oilfield and construction industry. He retired in 1980.

NEW: CAF names chief of general staff

(From 1C)

Kaster, the 59-year-old chairman of the Texas Employment Commission, a pilot and former Texas legislator, is succeeding Midland's Joe Mabee as chief of the 11-member CAF General Staff.

"I feel very comfortable with Jim Kaster as chief of staff," said Mabee, a Midland rancher, pilot, oilman, aircraft restorer and philanthropist who was instrumental in the 1989-91 campaign to move the CAF headquarters and American Airpower Heritage Museum to West Texas from South Texas. "He's an excellent choice. The CAF is in safe hands. We've got faith in the future."

Bob Rice, executive director of the American Airpower Heritage Group, which includes the CAF and the American Airpower Heritage Museum, Flying Museum and Foundation, said Kaster is "well informed . . . and well respected in the aviation community."

"One of his objectives is to continue good relationships with the other organizations (including the Experimental Aircraft Association), which have warbirds as a significant area of emphasis" in aircraft restoration, Rice said.

The General Staff is the policy-making arm of the 8,000-member, all-volunteer CAF, which is based at Midland International Airport.

The CAF, which was founded in 1957 by a group of Rio Grande Valley farmers and crop-dusters, is dedicated to locating, restoring, maintaining and flying those rare remnants of World War II aircraft. The CAF, which maintains more than 140 warbirds in its Ghost Squadron, is the world's largest "flying museum."

Kaster, who grew up in El Paso, was 8 years old in 1941 when the United States was catapulted into the war. And like many children who were fascinated with flight before, during and after the war, he built model airplanes out of balsa wood.

Since the war, his interest in airplanes and aviation gained momentum.

"I love those airplanes," Kaster said of vintage World War II aircraft.

Kaster started flying after his service in the Korean War aboard a U.S. Navy destroyer. He is aligned with the Quiet Birdmen and the Tin Can Sailors Association.

Since he joined the CAF in the 1970s, Kaster said he has been impressed by the positive attitudes of the CAF volunteers, by the camaraderie within the ranks (all CAF member-volunteers are commissioned "colonels"), by the mutual respect that erstwhile enemy pilots and air-crew members have toward each other and by their passion for aviation.

"We wouldn't exist (without volunteers)," Kaster said of the CAF. Volunteers, in giving of their time and resources, restore, maintain, service, preserve and fly the old warbirds. "It's an honor to spend money on them."

The CAF volunteers are intent on "keeping these airplanes flying" out of "the love of the heritage" of the airplanes and in celebrating the resolve of the American people in fighting — at home and abroad — the Axis powers that would enslave the world, Kaster said. "The nation was unified."

During the war, U.S. industry turned out almost 300,000 warbirds — from trainers and gilders to fighters and bombers. Relatively few remain today. Thousands of aircraft not destroyed in war missions or in training programs were, after the war, chopped up, smelted and turned into peacetime pots and pans. Others went into museums, such as the Smithsonian Institution's Air and Space Museum and the U.S. Air Force's and Navy's museums.

As World War II fades more into history, the surviving and aging aviators, including aces, from both the Allied forces and the Axis powers often engage in dialogue and demonstrate their mutual respect.

"From their point of view," Kaster said of former enemy pilots, "they were doing what they thought was right. They were just as brave as our guys."

And in the CAF, Kaster said that he has met some great guys who were World War II legends.

Among those heroes were the U.S. Army Air Corps' Jimmy Doolittle, the pre-war race pilot and instrument pilot who commanded the 1942 Tokyo Raid by carrier-launched B-25 bombers; Joe Foss, a Marine Corps ace and "the most positive guy I've ever met"; George Gay, a Navy aviator who was the sole survivor of Torpedo Squadron Eight in the Battle of Midway; Gregory "Pappy" Boyington, a maverick Marine Corps ace and a member of the Flying Tigers; Tex Hill, an American ace and a Flying Tigers pilot; Saburo Sakai, a Japanese ace; Adolf Galland, a German ace who commanded the Luftwaffe's fighter force; Erich Hartmann, a Luftwaffe pilot who was the war's leading ace with more than 350 aerial victories, and Robert Stanford Tuck, a British Royal Air Force ace and RAF wing leader.

"Those guys respect each other, because they all know what they went through during the war," Kaster said. "There's no animosity by these guys. They loved flying."

part" in seeing them happen.

"Midland was one of, if not the first city, in the state to go to a full containerized sanitation system," he said. "It was a mechanized pick-up. A lot of people came to look at that system at the time. Now almost every city has it. At the time, we were looking at ways to speed up the process and indeed we cut labor costs in half after that."

Other major changes involving public works programs include:

■ The city acquired three new sources of water since 1960. First, the T-Bar well field in Winkler and Loving counties. (Which remain undeveloped but are held as reserve sources.) Second, the city negotiated a contract with the Colorado River Municipal Water District for an average of about 15 million gallons of water per day — which today accounts for about 60 percent of Midland's water usage. Third, the city agreed to participate in the Lake Ivie project, which will supply about 13 million gallons of water per day starting in 1995.

"This will be the best quality of water in the system and will probably furnish approximately half of our usage beginning in 1995," Poe said. "A city can not and will not grow without adequate water."

■ In the late 1960s, the city constructed a 15-million-gallon-a-day water treatment plant to handle water from the Colorado River Municipal Water District. An expansion was recently completed to double the size in order to handle the additional water expected from Lake Ivie.

■ In the late 1970s, the city completed an expansion doubling the capacity of the sewer treatment plant.

■ A master plan was finished for the "orderly development of the city" and has been updated twice to adjust to the city's growth.

■ Midland International Airport has undergone two major expansions.

■ The city continues to do in-house seal-coating to improve city streets.

"This has allowed us to do the same amount of work for half the dollars it costs to contract it out," Poe said. "Even today, less than half the cities of comparable size do their own seal-coating because it requires a dedicated and willing crew to do it."

■ The city built a new central fire station and three new sub-stations and combined all emergency services in the county at a central dispatch center.

Poe believes the future of Midland is in good hands.

"I have no fears whatsoever about leaving as the city manager at this time. Mike McGregor is very capable to lead the city in this capacity and he has, without exception, a very capable and dedicated staff to support him," Poe said.

At Thursday's retirement reception, Poe was honored with several gifts, including a set of golf clubs.

"Everyone was very wonderful. There was a lot more support than I anticipated. I am grateful," he said.

150 volunteers.

Companies sponsoring teams this year to date are ARCO Oil and Gas, Texaco, Penny-Quick Printing, Parker & Parsley, Team Bank, Oxy USA, Claydesta Corporation, Marathon Oil, Exxon and Midland College, which is sponsored by the Reporter-Telegram.

Entry fee for each team is $500 that includes lunch for the three team members and official Bee for Literacy t-shirts.

The bee, which always attracts a crowd of team supporters, will be held at Midland Center beginning at 11:30 a.m. and concluding at 1 p.m.

"The corporate spelling bee, modeled after those held in a number of other U.S. cities, continues to increase awareness and support of literacy as well as help fund the local program," Ms. Groce said. "At present 150 students are involved in one-on-one instruction with small classes at Casa de Amigos, the Baptist Crisis Center and the south campus of Midland College. As more students enroll, more materials are needed for students and volunteer tutors, and the bee is a big help in financing this growth."

Registration of teams continues and representatives of firms interested in fielding a team of spellers should contact the Need to Read office at 685-4572. Number of teams is limited due to the time constraints involved in conducting a spelling bee.

Police arrest two men

Staff report

Two Midland men posted bond and were free Saturday after being arrested the night before for possession of a pound of marijuana, according to police and jail officials.

Stephan Richard Pyles, 20, and Steven Joseph Davenport, 21, in a white 1976 Mercury Marquis, were arrested about 9:30 p.m. in the 4300 block of Lockheed Avenue and charged with possession of the drug with intent to distribute, police said.

The arrest was the result of an undercover investigation, police said.

Both men were released from jail after each posted a $10,000 bond, jail officials said.

Midland boy receives his Eagle Scout Award

Staff report

Andrew Maier, age 14, son of Don and Siglinda Maier of Midland, has received his Eagle Scout Award.

Maier started his scouting career in Las Vegas, Nev., in 1986 as a Tiger Cub, then advanced to Bobcat and Wolf in 1987 and earned his Bear Cub in 1988. As a Bear Cub he completed the "God and Family" Program, the only Cub Scout Knot that can be worn on the Boy Scout uniform.

Maier

In 1989 he earned his Webelos Badge and later that year he received his Arrow of Light. A fifth grader at that time, his leadership was emerging as he served as a Yellow Cap for his school where he monitored the safety of the younger students before and after school.

Moving to Midland in 1990, he joined Troop 19. The first meeting was at Lee Youth Center where he promptly earned his first Merit Badge and soon after that he reached Tenderfoot which was in April, 2nd Class in October, and 1st Class in November and in between all that he received six more Merit Badges.

In May of 1991 he earned his Star Rank and seven more Merit Badges.

In 1992 he earned a total of 13 Merit Badges, a record seven at Summer Camp, and he reached Life Rank in July. Serving his second term as Troop Scribe he proceeded to plan and complete his Eagle Project.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

MC kicks off Black History Month with video conference

By H.A. Tuck

Midland College is hosting a live, two-hour video conference on Wednesday from 12-2 p.m. and the public is invited. The interactive satellite-link presentation from Washington, D.C., is entitled "Beyond The Dream V: The Writers, The Stories, The Legacy". It serves as the national kick-off for Black History Month.

Tuck

Featured on the program will be a panel of award-winning African-American novelists: Terry McMillan, Nicki Giovanni, Charles Johnson, Marita Golden and Houston Baker.

The college's Fine Arts and Communications Division and Social and Behavioral Sciences Divisions are sponsoring the teleconference. It will be held in the college's Health Science Building Lecture Hall, Room 203. If you'd like more information, call Larry Griffin, 685-4626, or Will Morris, 685-4641.

If ever there was a critical week for the Chaparral basketball team this season, this could be it. The top two teams in the conference are coming to Chaparral Center for games with MC. Both teams won at home so the Chaps need at least one win this week if they are to have a realistic shot at post-season play.

The Chaparrals have been undefeated on the Chap Center parquet this season and, with your help, they can continue their winning ways.

So, you are urged to come out and support the Chaparrals. Odessa College will be the opponent on Monday. Howard College comes over from Big Spring on Thursday. Both games start at 7:30 p.m. With such natural, neighborhood rivals, a good crowd should do a lot to help the Chaps.

Not so critical, but no less intense, is the planned halftime basketball game Thursday at the intermission of the MC-Howard game. The faculty and staff is going to play the Student Senate in a coed game. It should be great fun ... at least until Friday when some of the faculty members try getting out of bed and realize they aren't as young as they once were.

However, a Wellness Program for college employees has done a lot to trim some fat and increase stamina this year.

Larry Griffin, mentioned earlier, is joining with Linda Thorsen Bond and Bruce Partain to conduct a Writers Retreat in the Davis Mountains on April 3-4, a Saturday and Sunday. If you are interested in knowing more, call 684-6459. Cost is $35 for the workshop.

Golf action begins next weekend for the Chaparrals, who are ranked first in the nation among community colleges. Midland College is among a number of collegiate teams playing in the Sun Tree Invitational at Cocoa, Florida, Feb. 7-9.

Coach Delnor Poss has a strong group, most of whom played for the Chaps in the fall. That was when MC compiled a record of five first places and a third place in six tournaments, with the medalist or co-medalist in every single tournament. The Chaparrals are the defending Division I NJCAA champions and strong favorites to repeat this year.

A workshop on "Personnel Management: Essential Elements" takes place at Midland College Wednesday from 9 a.m.-4:30 p.m. Although it's sponsored by the Texas State Library, about 90 percent of the material is that which would be of interest to administrators of all businesses. Topics include Americans With Disabilities Act, performance evaluation and motivation. Site is the Chaparral Hall, located in the Student Center. Registration fee is $5. Registration may be paid at the door. Advance reservations should be made by calling Barbara Crosby at the TSL, 512 463-5465. John Deats, director of the Murray Fasken Learning Resource Center at MC, is serving as local program coordinator and host.

There's only one more week to register for Session I of College Classics, the extra-special four-week classes designed especially for those at least 50 years of age. This is the first of three sessions and, if you qualify, registration fee is just $25 for as many classes as you wish to take in all three sessions. The folks who arranged the schedule worked hard so it is possible to attend every class in every session without an overlap. There are ten classes in Session I, which runs from Feb. 8-March 5; 11 classes in Session II, which is March 15-April 8; and nine in Session III, which is April 13-May 7. All the classes meet in the afternoon, so you don't have to worry about darkness or bad weather so much.

Last week we listed the classes, but a comma was omitted, so it read as if Annie would be cooking Birds of Midland. Not so. The classes for Session I are: Annie's Cooking, Birds of Midland, Community Outreach, Economics, Piano, Power of Imagery, Reasoning About Ethics, Religious Figures, Sociology, and World History.

Sign up in the Continuing Education Office in the Administration Building. If you need other information, call 685-4518. When you get into the classes, give a word of thanks to the instructors. All of them are volunteers, drawn from among the faculty and the community.

The interesting courses starting this week through the Continuing Education Department include: How Does Your Garden Grow?, Assertiveness Training, Bass Fishing Techniques, Financial Strategies For Retirement, Financing Your Small Business, Self-Defense For Women, and Bangles and Bows.

Register in the Continuing Education Department or phone 685-4518 for other information.

H.A. Tuck is public relations director at Midland College.

National debt must see action

When Bill Clinton was elected in November 1992 as the 42nd president of the United States, Americans literally embraced him as their hope for change from a course bound for economic disaster. Clinton captured their hope through talk about welfare reform, concern for the economy, even talk of deficit reduction.

Even before taking office earlier this month, after holding an "economic summit" in Little Rock and talking with congressional leaders about the true economic state of the nation, Clinton began showing considerably less enthusiasm for what he had perceived as the nation economic dilemma. Two facts hit the new president squarely in the face — the federal deficit and the debt. Our free spending ways have caught up with us.

Suddenly the Bill Clinton who had been promising a tax cut for middle-class Americans and a reduction by half of the federal deficit began backtracking from that agenda and instead started couching his plans for action on what the federal debt will allow. During Clinton's term, figures recently released show, the deficit and the federal debt, which is growing faster than the economy, will exert considerable influence on what government CAN do. The debt, which stood at $735 billion in January 1981, has quadrupled to more than $3 trillion today.

The danger posed by the debt also was the subject of a recently released book by Harry E. Figgie Jr. called "Bankruptcy 1995: The Coming Collapse of America and How to Stop it."

In the book Figgie, chairman and founder of Figgie International Inc. in Cleveland, Ohio, asserts that, "By 1995, the United States won't even be able to afford the annual interest payment on this debt. Even if interest rates remain steady and don't head up (as they undoubtedly will), the interest expense alone on the national debt will climb to a sickening $619 billion by 1995. Sixteen hundred nineteen billion dollars will absorb almost all of the projected total personal and corporate income tax receipts that the government will collect that year. To be exact, it will absorb 85 percent of these revenues."

Figgie, who served as co-chairman of President Reagan's Private Sector Survey on Cost Control also known as the Grace Commission, also points out that if the U.S. government defaults on its debt, it will be unable to borrow internationally to continue its operations. Or if it can borrow, it will be at the mercy of the lenders and subject to their influence.

He asserts that the way around the impending economic calamity lies with "ordinary citizens who are the key to halting America's slide into economic oblivion. We're victims only if we let ourselves be victimized."

Figgie is correct. The problem is ominous, but judging from his reaction to what he was told prior to taking office, President Clinton realizes the gravity of the situation. The debt problem must be controlled above all other issues facing his administration.

The American people are the ones who must tirelessly and continually call for action on the debt from Clinton and the Congress. It will take concerted action to reverse the course of the ship of state.

Rabin pushes for peace with Syria

TEL FAHR, Israeli-occupied Golan Heights — The man who helped take some of the world's most highly coveted real estate might end up as the man who gives it back for peace.

Anderson

When the Israeli army captured the Syrian-held Golan Heights in the Six-Day War in 1967, Israel's troops were led by none other than Gen. Yitzhak Rabin. Today, Rabin is Israel's newly elected leader, the man who many here believe can settle the conflict that has kept Syria and Israel on war-footing for decades.

Standing next to a windswept clump of trees and bunkers on a 2,500-foot plateau overlooking the Sea of Galilee, 57-year-old veteran Moshe Miller reflects on the change in Israeli thinking during an impromptu, impassioned speech one recent sunny afternoon.

Miller was a young lieutenant in the armored brigade that was sent to battle against the Syrians in these sloping, partly volcanic heights. It was an emotional moment for Miller. As a boy, he had feared the scattered groves of trees on these heights. They identified the Syrian military posts, planted by the officers to provide shade during an expected military presence that stretched into decades.

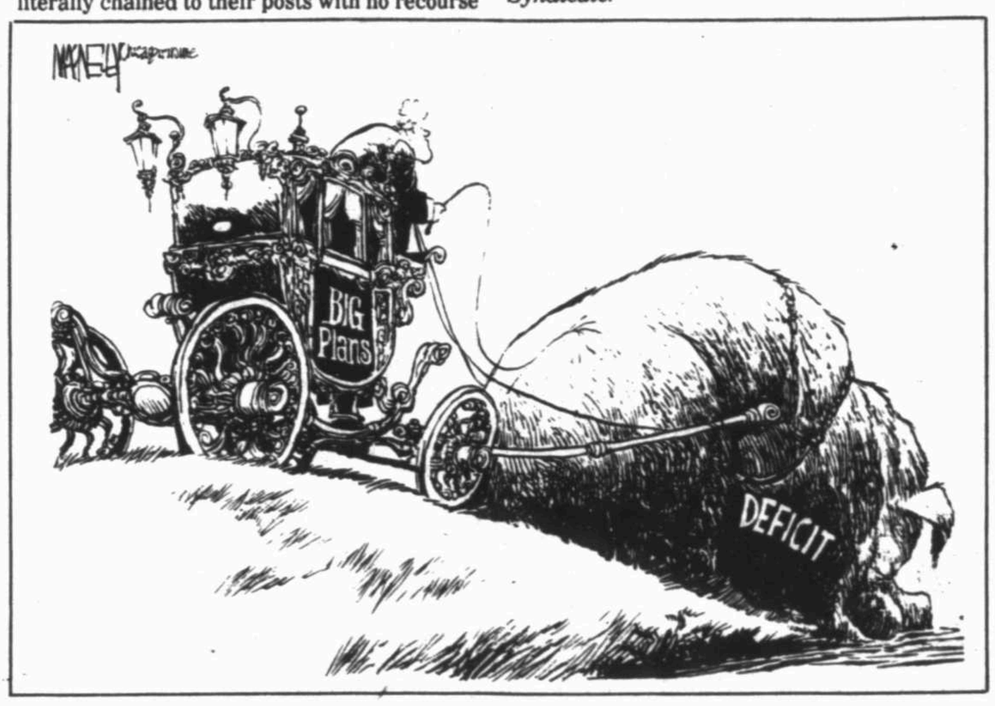

It was from these heights that the Syrians constantly shelled the kibbutzim and farms in the Israeli valley below, sometimes coming close to young Miller as he worked at rectangular fish ponds in the valley. Miller was one of the lucky ones. Dozens of young men and women died under the intermittent, two-decade Syrian mortar and machine-gun barrage on civilians. Miller was excited at the possibility of settling accounts.

"Still, in that war, we did not intend to take these heights," he told our associate Dale Van Atta. "We did not want to open up another frontier, Most of our units, in fact, were in the south. But the Syrians were opportunistically shelling our settlements there in a round-the-clock attack." So his units and others in the Golani Infantry Brigade were rushed north to attack the Syrians on the fifth day of the Six-Day War.

The battle was costly, but decisive. It might have been shorter, Miller recalls, had a number of Syrian soldiers not been left behind in an underground network of bunkers and tunnels, literally chained to their posts with no recourse but to fight.

The two sides still have miles to travel. Under instructions from Syrian strongman Hafez Assad, who was defense minister during the 1967 war, the Syrians still privately insist that they want the heights returned before any peace treaty is signed. But behind the scenes, Assad has used the $3 billion he received from Saudi Arabia and Kuwait for participation in the war against Iraq to build a stronger army. The buildup urges on the peace talks before another war breaks out.

Military institute should tolerate diversity

LEXINGTON, Va.— The last time the federal government tangled with Virginia Military Institute the government's forces got cuffed around at the battle of New Market by a Confederate contingent leavened by 247 VMI cadets ages 15 to 17. This event is celebrated in a large painting in VMI's chapel, Jackson Memorial Hall, which is named after Stonewall, who for 10 years taught "natural philosophy," meaning science, and artillery here.

Will

Today the federal government, which always has been a slow learner, is engaged in an utterly optional fight with VMI. This time, unlike last time, it would serve the national interest for the national government to lose.

Founded in 1839, VMI is one of this state's 15 publicly supported colleges and universities. Although its most distinguished graduate was a military man — George Marshall — most graduates pursue civilian careers. However, all its graduates are men and this, given the Zeitgeist, is the rub.

VMI's enrollment is just 1,300 of the 160,000 students — a majority of them female — in Virginia's state-supported, four-year institutions. But in March 1990, the inscrutable Bush administration's Justice Department, egged on by the American Civil Liberties Union and kindred spirits, filed a suit charging that VMI's single-sex admission policy violates the constitutional guarantee (in the 14th Amendment) of "equal protection of the laws."

The district court had to decide whether VMI's policy is "substantially related" to the achievement of "important government objectives." The court ruled that the six-day trial had produced a record "replete" with convincing testimony that single-sex undergraduate education can be beneficial to both males and females. It also held that VMI's "adversative" educational system would be "fundamentally altered" and its distinctive ends "thwarted" if VMI were forced to accommodate the needs and interests of women.

The "adversative" system strives to mold and motivate students by stressing (in the court's words) "physical rigor, mental stress, absolute equality of treatment, absence of privacy, minute regulation of behavior, and indoctrination in desirable values." First-year cadets are called "rats" because the rat is considered "the lowest animal on earth." This system is, the court found, well-tailored to the developmental characteristics of some adolescent males.

A three-judge panel unanimously agreed that VMI's system is appropriate and successful and justifies its admissions policy. But the judges, while adhering to the principle that the 14th Amendment does not per se proscribe single-gender education, also held that VMI's all-male policy is an unconstitutional denial of "equal protection" unless and until Virginia either stops supporting VMI or provides an identical program for females.

The court did not explain how to square this circle: What is, for females, identical to a system suited only for adolescent males? (By the way, women so inclined can participate in the corps of cadets at Virginia Polytechnic Institute.)

Now VMI is asking the Supreme Court to review this ruling which, if allowed to stand, will sow uncertainty, and hence litigation, about such questions as:

Can a public school operate a single-sex sports team — say, a football team — without providing an identical opportunity for the other sex to participate in the same sport?

Can Virginia continue to give substantial state assistance, through tuition subsidy programs, to five private women's colleges as long as there are not comparable and comparably assisted men's colleges?

Can government provide facilities for one sex (for example, for battered wives) merely because the policy is based on actual differences between the needs of the sexes?

Are state-run "boot camp" penal programs for young men impermissible unless there are identical programs for young women?

Funding for artists, arts should continue

One of the most flagellated federal agencies the past two years has been the National Endowment for the Arts, or NEA, which issues federal grants to promote the arts and artists.

Average Americans — not just ultraconservatives and religious rightists — were bothered not so much by the "art" as by the revelations that their tax dollars subsidized those works.

Undoubtedly, the agency will be targeted by some in the new, reform-minded 103rd Congress for a funding cut this year. President Clinton's budget for fiscal 1994, to be released soon, will indicate his feelings about NEA.

While we've joined its detractors in the past, we recognize the NEA's positive role in a society where arts funding is an ongoing problem.

The NEA serves a vital role — promoting arts and artists, the markings of a great culture. Neither Congress nor a few soreheads should attempt to kill this golden goose.

Voters should push for term limitation bill

Polls consistently show that a majority of Texans favor a term limitation play for the lawmakers they send to Austin and Washington.

And yet the Texas Legislature has opened another session with only a fleeting possibility that a term limitation bill will make it to the floor for a vote. While the people have said they are ready for change, our legislators are clinging to the status quo.

That simply won't do.

Voters who are disgusted with this endless cycle must speak up. You can make a difference. If enough constituents let their lawmakers know that a term limitations bill is high on their priority list, change will come.

Self-concept requires proper perspective

Diversity:

I am a European-American.

I am a male European-American.

I am a Depression-generation, male European-American.

I am a hearing-impaired, Depression-generation, male European-American.

Baker

I am a college-educated, hearing-impaired, Depression-generation, male European-American.

Because I have not lost significant amounts of hair I am not a bald, college-educated, hearing-impaired, Depression-generation, male European-American. Instead, I am a comb-carrying, college-educated, hearing-impaired, Depression-generation, male European-American.

I am a heterosexual, comb-carrying, college-educated, hearing-impaired, Depression-generation, male European-American.

Because I am married I am not a single, heterosexual, comb-carrying, college-educated, hearing-impaired, Depression-generation, male European-American, and therefore I do not go to singles bars.

Instead, I am a married, heterosexual, comb-carrying, college-educated, hearing-impaired, Depression-generation, male European-American, and go to doubles bars in which homosexual, bald, educationally disadvantaged, hearing-advantaged, pre- as well as post-Depression-generation, male European-Americans, Asian-Americans, African-Americans, Antarctic-Americans, Native Americans, Australian-Americans and Pacific-Island Americans, though not unwelcome, are made to feel peculiar.

Being unable to understand the vocalists who sing rock music, I shun it like a bog. Therefore, I am a square, married, heterosexual, comb-carrying, college-educated, hearing-impaired, Depression-generation, male European-American.

Though I am not resident below the official government poverty line, when pondering David Letterman's $14 million salary and the $1 million salary of the average journeyman baseball player, I realize that neither am I doing so well in the money department.

In short, I am a comparatively financially disadvantaged, square, married, heterosexual, comb-carrying, college-educated, hearing-impaired, Depression-generation, male European-American.

Politically, I am not kind and generous enough to be a liberal nor heartless and tightfisted enough to be a conservative nor dull enough — I insist! — to be a moderate. Therefore, the only doubles bars I frequent are those for politically unpredictable, comparatively financially disadvantaged, square, married, heterosexual, comb-carrying, college-educated, hearing-impaired, Depression-generation, male European-Americans.

I am married to a Celtic-American.

She is a Celtic-American of the female gender. Don't try telling Celt jokes around me. I am a Celt-sensitive, politically unpredictable, comparatively financially disadvantaged, square, married, heterosexual, comb-carrying, college-educated, hearing-impaired, Depression-generation, male European-American.

I no longer twit this Celtic-American helpmeet about being of the female gender, as I did in the old days when I was a gender-twitting, though already Celt-sensitive, politically unpredictable, comparatively financially disadvantaged, square, married, heterosexual, comb-carrying, college-educated, hearing-impaired, Depression-generation, male European-American.

[illegible] of gender, a number of representatives of that splendid gender urged me to give up my swinish male-gender chauvinism and free my mind of outmoded male-female stereotypes.

This was sound advice. I am now a genderly enlightened, Celt-sensitive, politically unpredictable, comparatively financially disadvantaged, square, married, heterosexual, comb-carrying, college-educated, hearing-impaired, Depression-generation, male European-American. In short, a gender-twitter no more.

The Celtic-American of female gender to whom I am married is a high school dropout and, therefore, not unwelcome, but made to feel peculiar in doubles bars for genderly enlightened, Celt-sensitive, politically unpredictable, comparatively financially disadvantaged, square, married, heterosexual, comb-carrying, college-educated, hearing-impaired, Depression-generation, male European-Americans. In short, we stay home a lot.

Readers' views on: Military gay issue

We need to work on things we can change

Enough already! With the national debt increasing so rapidly even a "Rhodes Scholar" cannot keep track, health care costs, skyrocketing unemployment guaranteed to increase by 50,000 in six months, and crime rampant in the streets, the executive branch and the congress are knit-picking about gays in the military. We have always had gays in the military, what are we trying to change?

In my opinion this is a great argument for term limitation of elected officials, say 2 to 4 weeks.

Enough already boys, let's work on something we can change!

Gay ban issue to hurt military morale

As a 23-year Army veteran, which included a tour in Vietnam, I am exceedingly dismayed with our new president. I was disturbed with Bill Clinton's belated admission that he organized anti-U.S. activities in England and the U.S.S.R. while my friends and I were getting shot in Vietnam.

Now President Clinton is assaulting the military once more with his plan to sanction homosexuals in the armed services. There more than likely have always been homosexuals in the military. I personally have known several homosexuals in and out of the Army. If homosexuals are allowed to "come out of the closet" in the military, it will adversely effect moral. There will be same sex "come ons," contentions and sexual harassment suits, and third sex bathrooms will be required.

The military is not an instrument of "social experimentation." I well remember the last time the U.S. used the military as a social test tube during the Carter administration. What a demoralizing mess that was, it took 10 years to get over it.

The whole "gays in the military" matter is just another assault on decency and morality. The militant homosexuals are attempting to further their agenda, thinking only of their own interest, not of the United States. It's another example of the declining morals of America; it makes me sad.

SPEAKING OUT

Information on hangars is inaccurate

By Charles R. Perry
Charles T. "Tom" Perry

Charles R. Perry is chairman of the board of directors for Avion Flight Centre, Inc. Charles T. "Tom" Perry is president and chief executive officer of the company.

We at Avion Flight Centre, Inc. are quite concerned that entirely too much incorrect information has been circulated about the proposed sale of our hangars to the City of Midland. As an example, the allegation that the hangars will all revert to the city in a few years is completely inaccurate. Avion holds five separate leases with the city, with three expiring in 2005, one in 2013, and one in 2020. Only the lease expiring in 2020 covering 10 hangars specifies that the city will gain title (subject to any mortgages) to the facilities. The bottom line is that the city will gain title only to these 10 hangars in 2020, but they will undoubtedly also owe a lot of money due to a mortgage on them at that time. The remainder of the leases clearly state the title to the hangars remains in Avion when the leases expire. We suspect that anyone who suggests that title to these hangars will soon revert to the city has not read these complex leases.

We are certain that the council will thoroughly research this matter before making a decision; however, we would like for every citizen to be fully informed about the particulars of this transaction in order that an intelligent conclusion can be reached. Unfortunately, news media interviews do not fully disclose all of the particulars since they have limited space and time to report each news story. For that reason, we are employing this means to be able to discuss all of the particulars, which are as follows:

1. The transaction is not a "done deal." The city approached Avion first about this proposed transaction; however, certain criteria must be met before both parties will agree to complete the transaction. Obviously, the city cannot and will not pay more than the appraised value for the facilities. However, there is also a minimum figure that Avion will accept for these facilities, and if the price offered by the city does not equal or exceed Avion's minimum price, there will be no transaction.

2. No tax dollars are involved: The purchase, as well as other expenditures at Midland International Airport (MAF) have always been financed by airport fees and revenue bonds. As far as we know, there has never been a tax dollar invested in the airport, and we know of no plans to use tax dollars at the airport now, or any time in the future. (We sometimes marvel at the asset Midland, and the entire area, has in this airport, and at no cost to the taxpayers!)

3. The proposed transaction will be quite profitable to the city. If the transaction occurs, rental rates will not only cover debt services, but will also yield the city or airport approximately $2,000,000 more income over the next 20 years than what the airport will receive under the present leases.

4. Most airports own all of the facilities located on the airport. For many years, the city has owned all of the facilities at Midland Airpark. The proposed transaction would make property title on the airport similar to typical airports throughout the country, and thus would allow MAF to compete better with other airports.

5. The city would have the right to cancel portions of the lease when facilities are needed for industrial development prospects. At present, if a need arises for the city to lease a facility direct to, for example, a major aircraft maintenance organization, there is no provision for any short term cancellation of any of our leases, and it would be necessary for the city to first attempt to negotiate a short term cancellation with Avion in order to be able to offer such facilities direct. (Based on our experience, all major maintenance organizations will deal only direct with the owner of the airport, and thus Midland is at a competitive disadvantage.)

6. The city will receive clear title to all of the facilities at the time of purchase. This will eliminate any question about the ownership of the facilities upon expiration of the lease; the city will own them free and clear of all encumbrances.

We also would like to point out that Midland International Airport is a well managed airport. In the last three months, Avion has had its operations reviewed by a national airport consulting firm, and has been visited, interviewed, and written up in a national trade journal for Avion's outstanding service. Both of these groups noted that Midland International works very well in teaming with its tenants to improve the airport and attract more business. According to both groups who looked over our operations, this is not only highly desirable, but also is unusual; all too often, an airport authority and its tenants have an adversarial relationship. This atmosphere at Midland International not only makes life more pleasant, but it also makes Midland International more competitive, and it is paying off! Look at the results of 1992: the airport attracted two new airlines to stop here, and generated an all-time record amount of military traffic, among other things. (Keep in mind that the military planes pay the same fuel flow fees to the city as do corporate aircraft — not a bad income stream.) And these accomplishments occurred through a team effort of everyone concerned working together. We are confident that as long as this atmosphere continues, good things will continue to happen at Midland International.

All too often, we get hung up in trivial things (such as parking), and fail to see the big picture. We believe that overall, the council and administration are doing an excellent job in managing the airport, and should be supported and commended. We can assure anyone that based on our dealings with the city and airport, all matters are handled very businesslike; we find them to be tough but fair to deal with, and they do not give anything away.

People should think about what abortion is

I heard an interesting phrase the other day, "Window on the Womb," and it got me to thinking. What if you could see into every pregnant woman's womb? What would you see? You would see a growing, developing BABY not a "blob of tissue" or a "product of conception." You would see the heart beating at 24 days, the complete skeleton at 42 days, complete fingers, toes and ears at 49 days, and all organs functioning at 56 days.

I think it's time that Americans put some real thought into what an abortion is all about. It's about pulling apart piece by piece or burning with a salt solution a real, live, moving, growing human being. It's about death and dismemberment.

It's so easy for most of us to just not think about what actually happens in an abortion and to say its the woman's choice. But what about the baby's choice? Don't you think he/she would choose to live? The time for the mother to choose is before the sexual act occurs, not once a baby is conceived.

It's about time we educate ourselves on the facts and then get involved! This is literally a "life or death" matter! Let your voice be heard. Speak out to your elected officials. Call your church or local Pro-Life group (561-8606) to see what you can do. Let's find ways to help mothers keep their babies or find good homes for them. Let's give our babies a future.

The next time you see a pregnant woman think about what you would see if there really was a "Window on the Womb!"

Controlled choice will give students stability

I am writing to register my support for the proposed Controlled Choice option before the Midland Independent School District board.

I strongly believe that the school board's initial objective should be to educate all children to achieve his/her maximum potential.

Our current cluster system is not achieving this goal. Look at the TAAS results published in the Reporter-Telegram in January. The results clearly show that at the third grade level, before clustering, the north side schools score above the state average. The results at the seventh grade level, post clustering, show a drop in all schools compared to the state with some areas like Alamo scoring seriously below the average. David Adams, principal of Alamo, stated, "It's hard to say what happened. We get students who went to fourth grade one place, fifth grade one place and sixth grade another place." Obviously the results of our clustering is a move on the educational scale to mediocrity. This is not our goal.

The controlled choice option will integrate children while providing integrity and emotional stability to the students by allowing them to remain on the same campus for fourth through sixth grade. When the TAAS scores come out, we will know which campuses have a problem and where our attention needs to be directed.

Controlled choice needs to be taken one step further. Classes should not be balanced by student ability indexes, one of the criteria offered by Larry Lusby, MISD executive director of Computer and Special Services, stated in an article on Jan. 13. This theory does not benefit either the Chapter One or the advanced child. Remember our main objective. Our children do not enter our schools with the same educational background. We are asking our teachers to handle multi-levels of scholastic needs at the same time. The results are that children's needs are not being met.

Chapter One children need the special intensive instruction that will foster their quick and steady education growth, not the juxtaposition of their skills to that of the more advanced student which only leads to discouragement.

Each of us needs to look past the color of our skin, past old beliefs, past the old sides of our school issues and concentrate on what will meet our obejective: Educating all children to achieve their maximum potential.

That is the issue that really matters. I strongly believe controlled choice along with classes comprised of students of similiar scholastic aptitudes best meets these needs at the time.

Clinton should listen to mainstream America

There is a great deal of talk these days about what Mr. Clinton's presidency will mean for this nation. He has claimed to be the harbinger of change — but I ask will it be for good or for bad? As a Christian husband and father I hope for the good.

I hope that Mr. Clinton will realize that we need spiritual wholeness more than we need economic wholeness for this nation to remain great. I hope he will submit to the truths found in his Bible, those upon which this nation was founded; truths that have woven a national fabric of self sacrifice and tolerance and the unshakeable belief that there is One who is greater than self.

I hope that Mr. Clinton will listen to the voice of mainstream America and not follow a course set by Washington fringe interests; yet, when the national media and groups such as Queer Nation celebrate his election, you have to be concerned. Are the irrational few to be embraced and encouraged during this administration — or restrained by moral leadership as they historically have been. I hope for the latter.

I hope that Mr. Clinton will not continue to succumb to the ethos of the few, those who exhault the rights of self at the expense of the unborn. Yet I fear that our President has already emboldened these merchants of death and turned them loose to tear and slash at the very fabric of our nation.

And so, I am concerned that in this way, our local Planned Parenthood has been encouraged as rumored, in their plans to provide the damnable deed of abortion itself, here in Midland. Is this really what Mr. Clinton will mean for our nation? Is this the change we should expect?

Mayor, city government are out of touch, control

As I recall, Mayor Faircloth was swept into office in last year's city election with claims of knowledge, experience and ability and with promises of fiscal responsibility and efficiency in running our city government for the benefit of all citizens.

Three of his recent proposals, however, have shown that he may have overlooked or forgotten his admirable and popular campaign promises.

The idea of the city purchasing the assets of Avion Flight Centre, Inc. at the airport is particularly foolhardy. To do so will remove a viable business from the tax rolls and require the city to be responsible for the administration, maintenance, and management of the facility as well as assuming a huge liability potential. It will require putting many more employees on the city payroll, and undoubtedly the airport manager, Ken Day will require additional staffing of his department to provide overall supervision.

The proposed purchase of the Atrium Centre Building for a new city hall is preposterous because we simply don't need it! The present city hall is more than adequate for our city. Any government will continuously tell us that they need more — more money, more people, more room, more everything and, of course, more TAXES!

Finally, the mayor's even mentioning another election to increase the city sales tax for "economic development" is lunacy. This time he's suggesting an increase of ½ of 1% in order to raise $20,000,000 which will require additional taxation of an average of about $200 per resident of the city — enough said? Remember that Mayor Faircloth was one of the staunchest proponents supporting the last attempt to increase our city sales tax. We all know how that election turned out.

Frankly, I feel that these ill-conceived ideas of the mayor and his recent squabbles with members of the city council show not only that he is out of touch with reality, but that our city government is virtually out of control. I shudder to think of what they will come up with next!

Female scientist should receive highest respect

It was with considerable dismay that I read Brian Foley's letter in the Jan. 24th edition of the Reporter-Telegram. Since Foley considers himself a balanced individual I wonder why he failed to mention that Margaret Maxey holds a Ph.D. with several added degrees in ethics, religion and science, and that she has the distinct honor of being director of the Clint Murchison Sr. Chair of Free Enterprise and professor of Bioethnics in the Biomedical Engineering Program of Engineering at The University of Texas at Austin.

She previously served as assistant director of the Energy Research Institute in Columbia, S.C. I also wonder why Foley failed to mention that Dr. Maxey was honored by standing ovations both times she spoke before the Permian Basin Petroleum Association. By the way, her audiences were exceptionally large and were made up of earth scientists, outdoors folks, environmentalists and business people — not wackos.

Dr. Maxey insulted no one with her premise that the "Earth is not a fragile thing about to be destroyed by humankind." She did not defend destructive activity, but only said don't panic, the power of mankind cannot begin to match the power of the Earth let alone the Universe. Foley might read his Bible a bit more closely to learn that indeed humankind was given dominion over the earth. There is much to be said for conservation and protection of the environment. At no time did Maxey suggest otherwise.

I want to publicly congratulate Dr. Maxey as a feminine scientist, ethicist and author of highest repute.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland 79702.

We should pressure Legislature to consider Hillary's plan

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.

NEW YORK — A revolutionary crusade to slay with the sword of sacrifice the dragon of exorbitant health care costs appears to have been launched by a woman who may become among the most influential in American history.

With a virtually free hand to head the impressive task force to curb health care costs, Hillary Clinton has the most powerful official post ever assigned to a First Lady.

It is gratifying to know that in addition to her widely recognized expertise on family, health and educational issues, she was twice named one of the 100 top lawyers in the United States.

The latest Wall Street Journal-NBC poll shows a positive rating of 57 percent for her, up from 46 percent in December. On whether she is or isn't a positive role model, 74 percent say she is.

It was encouraging to learn that the First Lady's health care reform plans could lead to what President Clinton described as "massive savings" over a five-to-eight-year period.

Following is a report to me from Joe Kingsbury Smith, our national editor in Washington, on the dramatic move by the Clinton presidency to reduce the enormous cost of health care:

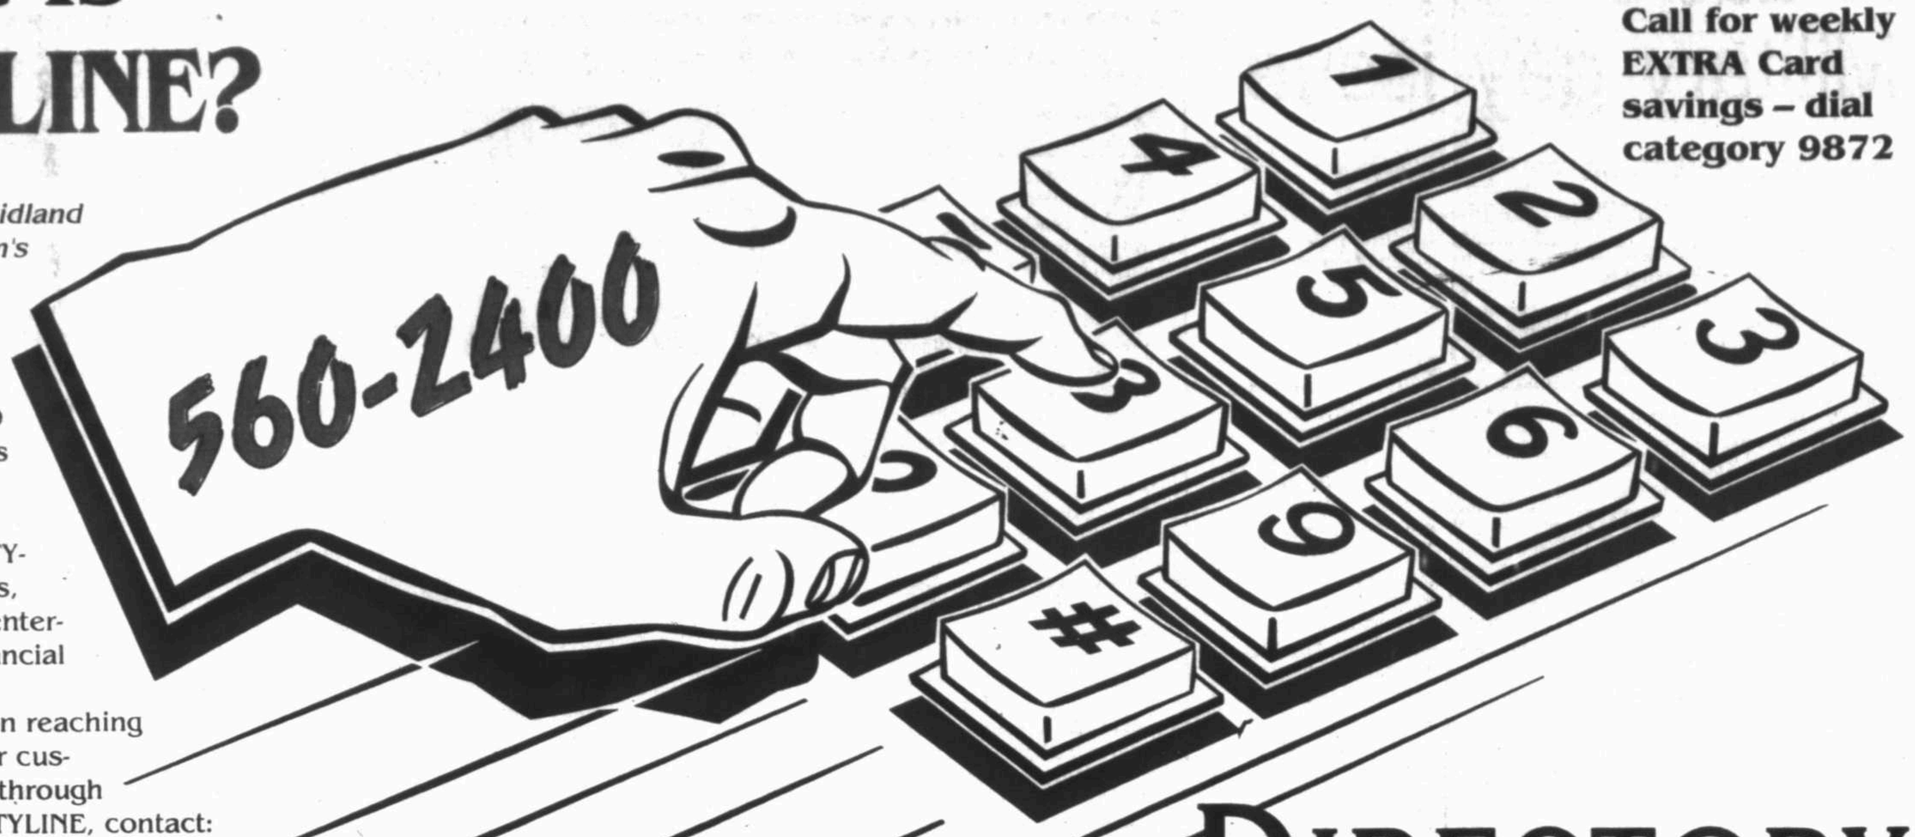

The medical profession will be hit hard by financial sacrifices if Congress approves the reform plans that President and Mrs. Clinton have in mind. They advocate "managed competition" that calls for employers and individuals to join in large insurance-purchasing networks that would force hospitals, doctors and other providers to compete for business. There would be less expensive fees by doctors and a curb on the now limitless issuance of prescriptions. Corporate employers might not be able to deduct all health premiums they pay for employees. Auto manufacturers, steelmakers, and other employers that provide generous benefits for retirees are feeling the heat from bankers who loan money to the benefit funds and who are upset by enormously rising costs. AT&T and Bell telephone companies have already persuaded their unions to accept specified amounts for retiree benefits, replacing open-ended commitments to cover illnesses regardless of costs.

It is estimated that $939 billion will be spent this year on hospitals, doctors, insurance and drug companies. Health spending is expected to soar to $1.7 trillion by the year 2000 at the present rate of increase. It was $74.4 billion in 1970. We spend more per capita on health care than any other country. In fact, we spend 40 percent more of our income than people any other country in the world on health care, but we are the only advanced nation that does not provide basic health care for all of its citizens. We have 36 million uninsured. And our infant mortality rate is among the highest in the industrialized world.

President and Mrs. Clinton are determined to provide coverage for all American people who cannot afford health insurance. They hope to cut the skyrocketing care costs sufficiently to gradually reduce the deficit and at the same time stimulate the economy with funds to finance new businesses, equipment, highway construction and reinvestment in education and training of our young people.

When the Hillary Clinton task force, which includes six cabinet members and a handful of senior White House advisers, submits the completed plan to Congress, hopefully in 100 days, the American people should pressure the legislative body strongly for careful — and constructive — consideration.

THE FAMILY OF "CHUCK" MADRID

We would like to Thank the many friends that gathered to comfort us in our hour of sorrow. Thank You for the flowers, food and comforting words. Especially the Parishioners of St. Joseph's Church of Stanton, who made us feel "at home" with their thoughtfulness in all they did.....Father Tom Barley, Deacon Sanchez, Frances Valles and Texas Tech Faculty, who with their caring words and actions helped us get through our difficult days. We, the Flora Madrid Family are most appreciative of your kindness.
May God Bless You.

HOMES & CLASSIFIED

TRADITIONAL WARMTH

Text by Sherry Freeman

Open beveled glass doors to a magnificent open living area that draws the home together into a central gathering place. Envision fireside chats by the brass-trimmed fireplace nestled between the warmth of natural wood shelves.

A glimpse through an open doorway reveals an adjoining den, adding to the extensive coziness of the living room. The real wood paneling reflects the natural texturing found throughout this traditional 4-bedroom, 3-bath home in the Greentree Country Club Estates.

The dramatic drive-up appeal of a circular driveway brings the beauty of professionally landscaped lawns into full view. The solid brick exterior reveals a home built in the tradition of quality and design.

The use of natural wood throughout the home's interior is a reflection of traditional quality. A trail of wood doors off the living room reveals a wet bar in one corner, while off to the left, a formal dining room overlooks the beautiful landscaping of the front lawn. The quiet charm of a separate dining room is perfect for evening meals.

Families enjoy a more comfortable setting in the dine-in kitchen. High ceilings and a skylight add openness and light, while bountiful wood cabinets provide lots of storage. Sliding glass doors provide optional entry from the side driveway.

Hidden from view behind natural wood doors, a laundry room is conveniently located in the kitchen, easing the burden of laundry day.

Another door provides dual-entry to a sequestered bedroom with attached bath. A built-in entertainment center gives this room versatility for a multitude of uses.

The master bedroom is adjacent to the additional bedrooms for family appeal, but has maintained an atmosphere of privacy. The brick fireplace with built-in shelves gives the master bedroom a personal ambience.

An adjoining master bath is designed for today's lifestyle, without losing its traditional appeal -- a separation of tub and shower allows for an added skylight over the tub.

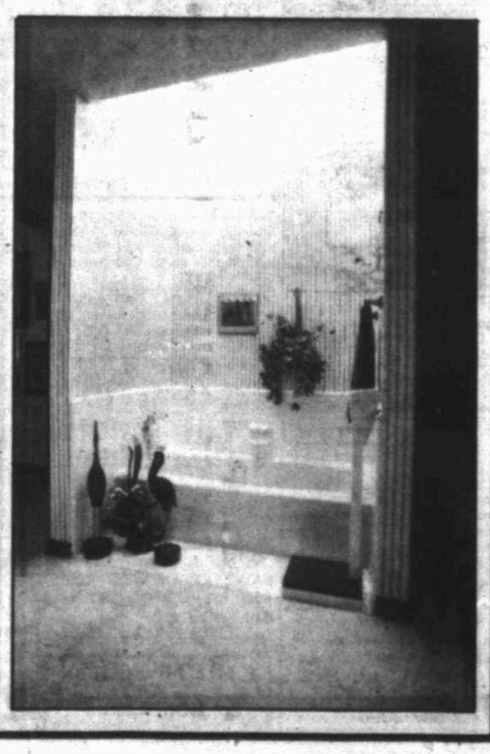

Across the hallway, additional bedrooms share a hallway bath. Both bedrooms are traditionally large, and one bedroom even has a private entry into the bath.

This home comes with many extras, including six ceiling fans that are economical for cooling; a reverse-osmosis and water softner system, a three-car garage for larger families; automatic landscape lighting and a fenced in backyard that is ideal for families.

Dan Chandler of the Carriage Co. Realtors is offering this home built with traditional quality for $133,000. Call 684-5881 or 694-0532 for a personal showing.

WHAT?!?
NEWSPAPER ROUTES?

That's right...one of the best part-time income supplements around. Doesn't conflict with your "day job." Doesn't require day care. And it's dependable income.

Fact: 95% of our Distributors NOW are ADULTS supplementing their income with Route Distributorships!

Fact: Our Distributors make from $400 to $800 monthly AFTER expenses. Some earn even MORE!

The catch? You've got to be able to handle early mornings and weekends! And when you take a few days off, you'll need to find a substitute for yourself.

So...are you serious about MOONLIGHTING or what? If you are, and you have dependable transportation and can put up a $100 deposit...

CALL 688-2700 and start making that extra car payment today!

Young company needs you, full or part time. New patented product. (915) 694-4572.

OIL REPORT

Namedropping/2E
Activity Indicators/4E
Oil & Gas Activity/5-7E

Serving 54 counties in West Texas and New Mexico

BRIEFING

Strong prices

A Ram Well Service crew works on a Texaco well near Lovington.

The crude that wells produce became more valuable this week, with oil prices posting a $1.50 increase during the week.

The initial surge in prices came Monday in response to reports Saudi Arabia was spearheading an effort to have OPEC members cut a million barrels of production.

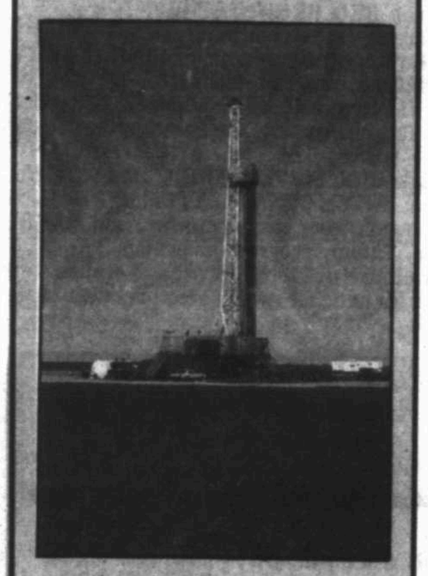

A second surge came late in the week as traders became convinced that, through production cutbacks and/or an energy tax imposed by the Clinton administration, oil prices were going to be forced higher.

Natural gas prices were steady most of the week, hovering between $1.55 and $1.60 per thousand cubic feet.

Firm fined

AUSTIN — The Texas Railroad Commission has fined B&R Oil Inc. of Odessa $2,500 for a saltwater spill on the Cowden B lease in Andrews County.

The fine was part of $50,000 in administrative penalties issued this week to seven oil and gas operators for pollution and well-plugging violations.

Falling count

A JSM rig, with Schlumberger logging a Primero Operating Co. well.

The rig count this week continued to show signs of weakness, according to Baker Hughes Inc.

In the Permian Basin, the rig count slipped two to 106 but remained above the year-ago level of 91.

The national rig count dived a second week, posting a 44-rig drop for the week ended January 22. The national tally was 794, down 44 from 834 the previous week. A year ago the count was 686.

Among the nation's major oil producing states, Texas showed the sharpest drop, 15 rigs, followed by Wyoming with 10 and New Mexico and Pennsylvania with eight each. The only states to show increases were Lousiana and North Dakota, one each.

Gas company

MERRILLVILLE, Ind. — A subsidiary of NIPSCO Industries will purchase the controlling shares of a Texas natural gas company, officials say.

NIPSCO Energy Services will buy the major interest in Triumph Natural Gas of Dallas, NIPSCO spokesman Patrick Mulchay said Wednesday.

Triumph, a gas marketing company, operates in the Midwest and owns gas gathering facilities in Oklahoma.

UT Lands readying lease sale

■ The University Lands system seeks nominations for its summer oiland gas lease sale.

By Mella McEwen
Staff writer

The Board for Lease of University Lands has issued a call for nominations for its 83rd Oil and Gas Lease Sale.

The lease sale is scheduled for June 23 at 10 a.m. in the Midland Hilton.

Wallie Gravitt, director of the Midland office, said that because the call for nominations has just gone out, it won't be known for three to four weeks what the response will actually be.

However, he said, "We have had a surprising amount of interest already expressed for the sale prior to the call for nominations. This doesn't guarantee anything, but it gives us a good feeling. The interest encountered in the last two to three months has been more than we anticipated, given the way the economy and the industry have been going."

All nominations should be received at the Midland office of the Board for Lease of University Lands by 5 p.m. March 19. Nominations can be mailed to Manager of University Lands, Oil, Gas and Mineral Interests, P.O. Drawer 553, Midland Texas 79702-0553; or hand-delivered to 808 W. Wall, Midland.

Gravitt said plans are to have a sale list and brochures available around March 31.

All available Permanent University Fund Lands may be nominated for inclusion in the list of the lease sale tracts. The selection for lease sale consideration will be based on designation of preference as far as practicable. Nominators are asked to nominate only those tracts for which they have an actual interest in leasing and will be expected to bid on each tract they nominate.

Gravitt said the University system has 2.1 million acres of land in West Texas, and approximately 1.4 million acres are still available. "They cover good areas to remote areas where there is no oil and gas activity. We cover the gamut, anything anyone wants to look

The sun is setting on more and more wells each year, as stripper well additions keep pace with abandonments.

Stripper well survey shows little change

■ Total stripper wells and abandonments stabilize as average-per-well production continues to decline.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil editor

Wholesale plugging of stripper wells in the U.S. may have stabilized, at least for the time being.

The National Stripper Well Survey has just been published, and according to the report, 1991 was amost a carbon copy of 1990.

"Never in the 50-year history, since we have been taking the National Stripper Well Association, have two years been so similar," said Timothy Dowd, executive director of the Interstate Oil & Gas Compact Commission.

The three main components of the survey are total number of stripper wells, which measure the new wells being added to the pool; abandonments that measures the number being plugged and abandoned each year; and the per well average production and total production.

The total number of wells producing in the United States declined by only 1,031 in 1991 to 462,823, which indicates that about as many new stripper wells were added as abandoned.

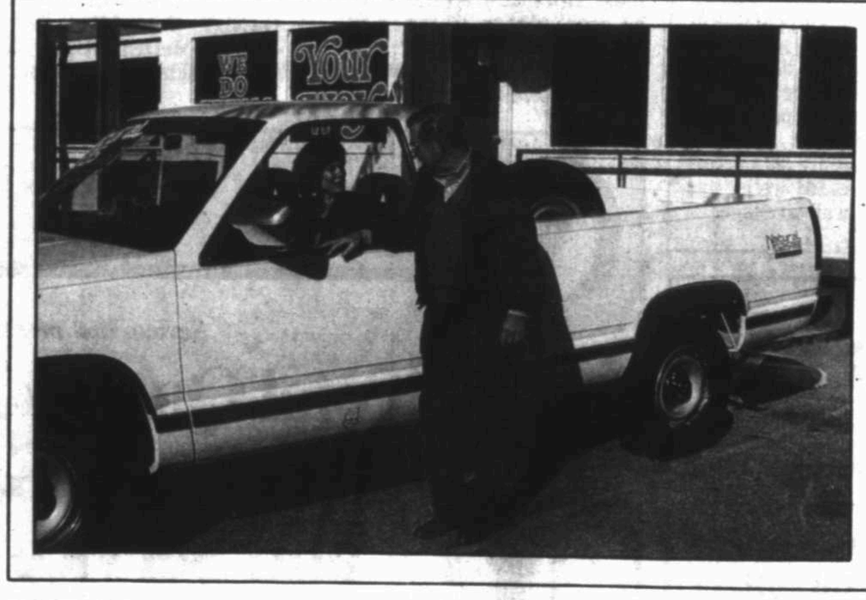

This 1,031-barrel shift is a far departure from the period between 1982 and 1990 when the average change in abandonments was 8,433 wells, during a period, when oil prices crashed, the number of abandonments each year went from 9,426 to as high as 19,233 in 1986.

Abandonments in 1991 were almost flat, with the year before up from 17,235 in 1990 to 17,548 in 1991, indicating a stabilizing trend.

While abandonments have shown some stability, the average production of stripper wells in the U.S. has declined steadily. A stripper well is any well that produces under 10 barrels per day, but the average stripper well in America has gone from 2.90 barrels per day in 1982 to 2.23 barrels per day in 1991.

"No other nation in the world produces it marginal wells on a significant basis, so this survey is not repeated anywhere but in the U.S.," said Dowd.

Factory CNG

Jack Sherman Chevrolet this week took delivery of the first factory dedicated compressed natural-gas (CNG) truck to be sold in the Permian Basin.

Sherman, above, demonstrating the vehicle to Lezlie Forster, of CNG Services of Midland, said, "We are convinced that CNG is the fuel of the future and we wanted to have this truck in inventory for our potential customers."

He said oil-field fleets and other fleet operators throughout the Permian Basin are now showing strong interest in compressed natural gas as a fuel.

Odessa firm wins first safety award

■ Alice electric is first to earn state award.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil editor

Alice Electric Co., a Permian Basin oil-field electrical maintenance company, with facilities in Odessa and Colorado City, has become the first company in the state to be awarded the Texas Workers' Compensation Commission, Safety Award.

In notifying Robert Younger Sr., president of Alice Electric Co., of the award, Todd K. Brown, executive director of Texas Worker's Compensation Commission said: "You should be proud of being the first company to receive the certification of achievement under the Safety Award Program. This is a distinct honor and your program sets a high standard for others."

Robert Younger said the award was for a safety manual and program drafted by his son Robert Jr. for their 60 employees. "The Commission reviewed the program thought it was excellent and asked to apply for the award," said Brown.

The TWCC Safety Program Award was started by the commission as a means to overcome some of the high costs of workmen's compensation insurance in Texas.

Robert Helpzel, OSHCON consultant for TWCC, said that Alice Electric was the first in a Texas tradition. He said the Safety Program Awards would be presented quarterly in each of the four regions of TWCC.

"Alice was more than qualified to receive the award. We reviewed documentation of their program, interviewed employees, and looked at their safety record. They had

What will it take to make them care?

Pitts

It is one of the best-kept secrets in America. Ask 10 people in New Jersey, Chicago or Boston if they knew that 420 million jobs have been lost from the American oil industry over the past decade and chances are 10 will tell you "no."

Ask them if they know that government policy is responsible for axing many of those petroleum jobs that were sent overseas or eliminated by government restrictions that prohibit drilling in this country, and it is certain the answer will be "no."

It is a wonder that an economic event of such tragic proportions as the loss of over 400,000 could go virtually unnoticed in this country. It is an greater wonder that the government of the United States has not come up with any meaningful solution.

The "Great Depression" may have happened in the '20s for America, but it happened in the '80s for the oil industry. From 1982 through 1992, the industry has gone through a downturn, unmatched in its severity by any other industry. According to the Department of Labor, oil and gas extraction lost 51.3 percent of the jobs between 1982 and 1992, while 28.3 percent of the jobs in petroleum refining were lost.

During the same time, autombile manufacturing was up 13.7 percent and homebuilding was up 18.1 percent.

How could half of the nation's most vital industry disappear, without anyone noticing?

This is not to say there hasn't been some news exposure of this event. There have been articles here and there over the years — and last summer, when the numbers were compared to the loss of automobile jobs, there was a flurry of news stories about the devastation of the oil industry.

The news accounts were vivid in their description of the shrinking domestic oil industry:

"In the last 12 months, the U.S. has lost 63,000 jobs and has suffered more layoffs than any industry during the recession. Recent cuts by major oil companies are boggling," said the Investor's Business Daily.

"By some measures, activity in the domestic oil and gas industry is at its lowest ebb since the administration of Franklin D. Rossevelt," wrote The New York Times.

"The piece-by-piece dismantling of the U.S. energy industry is one of the largely unnoticed stories of the age, except perhaps in Houston and across Texas. The U.S. energy industry is having its life sucked out without anybody outside of the industry and its environs seeming to much care," said the Houston Chronicle.

But such editorial warnings went unheeded. Today, jobs are still disappearing at the rate of thousands a month, but no one notices and no one cares. The extend of damage done to the domestic oil and gas industry has still not registered either with the public nor the politicans. And those in the industry are scratching their heads in wonderment, wondering what it would take for the nation of automobile drivers to understand what is happening and to care.

Some have said a massive education program is needed to inform the public about oil industry problems. Will it work? Maybe. But, when the media lay it out as graphically as it has done, and it still doesn't make it a dent in public perception, it's doubtful any type of thought-out public relations or education program will make

Three oil firms post higher earnings

N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Three major California energy companies — Unocal Corp., Chevron Corp. and Atlantic Richfield Co. — reported big earnings increases in the fourth quarter.

Officials at all three credited the improvement in part to aggressive cost-cutting programs and stronger natural gas prices.

Analysts agreed and said that the results were a mild surprise. Soft oil prices during the quarter were offset by the strengthening natural gas market, where prices rose sharply after Gulf Coast production facilities were damaged by Hurricane Andrew.

"On balance it looked like a better-than-expected quarter. It looks like those cost savings took effect in the fourth quarter and natural gas prices were a little better than expected," said Ron Londe, an analyst at A.G. Edwards & Sons in St. Louis.

"There were some pleasant surprises. Many of the companies had good income streams and for the most part were above expectations," said George Gaspar, an analyst at Robert W. Baird & Co. in Milwaukee. "We're likely to see a fairly good cash flow stream coming out of (oil companies) even in the first quarter.

Here is a look at the balance sheets:

■ San Francisco-based Chevron led the way, recording its best quarter ever, earning $1.088 billion, or $3.30 per share. That compares with earnings of $39 million (11 cents) for the comparable period in 1991. Revenue totaled $11.4 billion, up 10 percent from $10.4 billion.

Fourth-quarter 1992 results were driven by $546 million in gains from special items, mostly asset sales, the company said.

But chairman Kenneth Derr said that even without the special items, the 1992 quarterly earnings nearly doubled comparable figures for 1991's fourth quarter. The results also reflect Chevron's reducing its work force by 6,200 during the year and slashing operating expenses.

"We're not through yet, but these changes have positioned us to be more efficient, more competitive and more profitable in the future," Derr said in a statement.

For the year, Chevron earned $1.569 billion, up 21 percent from the $1.293 billion reported for 1991. Per share earnings increased 25 percent, from $3.69 to $4.63, because of fewer outstanding shares in 1992. Revenue for 1992 totaled $42.9 billion, up 5 percent from 1991's $40.9 billion.

■ At Los Angeles-based Arco, fourth-quarter earnings soared 39 percent to $372 million ($2.30) from $268 million ($1.67) in the year-ago period. Revenue totaled $5.01 billion, compared with $4.84 billion. For the year, Arco earned $801 million ($4.96), up from $709 million ($4.39). Sales were $18.7 billion, up from $18.2 billion in 1991.

The company said that its quarterly results reflect a net benefit of about $75 million related primarily to a gain from settling a dispute with Iran over nationalization of offshore fields following the 1979 revolution.

Arco chairman Lodwrick M. Cook said that the company benefited from a "strong" performance in West Coast operations. Arco is the No. 1 gasoline retailer in Southern California.

"This improvement was achieved in spite of continued weakness in the U.S. economy. We also realized the benefits from cost reductions and still made substantial progress with development projects for the future," Cook said in a statement.

Arco also said Monday that it would spend $2.5 billion on capital projects in 1993, up from $2.3 billion this year. This includes $450 million to meet the 1995 requirements of the Clean Air Act.

■ Los Angeles-based Unocal Corp. said that it earned $103 million (39 cents) during the quarter, recovering from a loss of $16 million (7 cents) in the 1991 period.

Fourth-quarter revenues totaled $2.46 billion, down from $2.77 billion in 1991. For 1992, Unocal's earnings jumped 200 percent to $220 million (85 cents), up from $73 million (31 cents) in 1991. Revenues were $10.06 billion, down from $10.9 billion a year ago.

"This quarter begins to reflect the major changes we've made in our operating structure over the past few years, as well as a significant improvement in earnings from continuing operations," chairman Richard J. Stegemeier said in a statement.

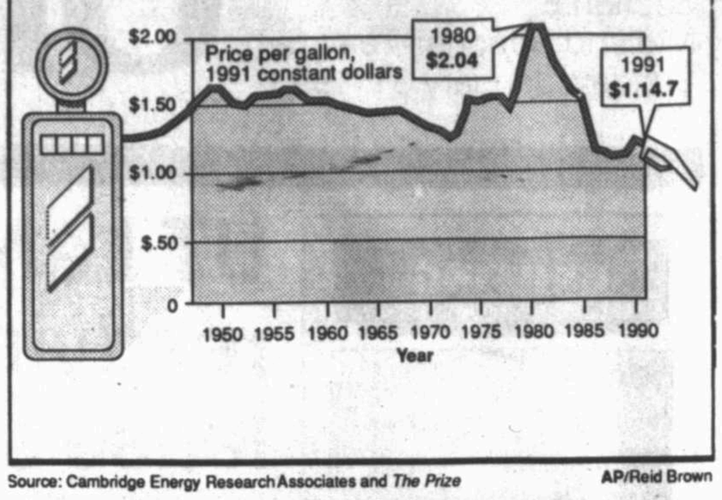

He said Unocal made significant progress on cutting expenses, asset sales and debt reduction.

Unocal earned $29 million on asset sales during 1992.

The company also pared debt acquired fighting a takeover battle in the mid-1980s by more than $1 billion in 1992 to $3.7 billion.

Pennzoil earnings up 84 percent in 1992

HOUSTON (AP) — Pennzoil Co., citing a $16.6 million one-time charge for early debt retirement, posted a loss for the fourth quarter of last year, but an 84 percent gain for the year.

Pennzoil reported earnings of $1.8 million, or 4 cents a share, for the three-month period that ended Dec. 31. That compares to earnings of $4.4 million, or 11 cents a share, for the same quarter a year ago.

Company officials said the most recent quarter includes a $16.6 million charge for the early repayment of $273 million of Pennzoil debentures.

For the year, however, the Houston-based petroleum company posted earnings of $128.2 million, or $3.16 a share. For 1991, Pennzoil reported earnings of $21 million, or 52 cents a share.

The 1992 earnings came on revenues of $2.4 billion compared with revenues of $2.3 billion in 1991. Revenues for the most recent quarter were $620 million compared to $572 million for the fourth quarter of 1991.

"During 1992, we focused intensely on our business strategy, which is to become a global oil and gas company, a worldwide marketer of premium motor oil, and a low-cost, efficient producer of refined petroleum products," Pennzoil president James L. Pate said.

at," he said. The University's holdings cover 19 West Texas counties, from El Paso County in the west to Schleicher County in the east, from Andrews County in the north to Terrell County in the south.

Lease terms, as approved by the board, are:

■ Five-year primary term;

■ Advance rentals of $5 per acre per year for years two and three and $10 per acre per year for years four and five;

■ A 25 percent royalty on oil and gas.

This royalty may be reduced to 20 percent if production of oil or gas in paying quantities is established within the first 18 months of the lease term. Or it can be reduced to 22.5 percent if production in paying quantities is established within the second 18 months of the lease. Once established, the reduced royalty will be in effect for the life of the lease.

A dry hole and extension provision is also in effect. If one or more dry holes are completed on the lease, a 20 percent royalty can be earned if an additional well or wells are commenced within the first 18 months, or through a 90-day extension to 21 months, and commercial production is established by the end of that time.

A 22.5 percent royalty can be earned if an additional well or wells are commenced within the second 18 months or with a 90-day extension, and commercial production is established.

zero lost time for accidents in 1992. You can't do much better than that," said Helpzel, who noted that the program was in response to Senate Bill 1 or Worker's Compensation Reform Act, which was passed Jan. 1, 1991.

As a result of the safety award, Alice Electric becomes part of exemption program that allows the company to be exempted from general scheduled OSHA inspections.

Helpzel said four criteria were used in making the first award to Alice Electric and will be used in all future choices. They are: 1. management committment to planning; 2. work site analysis or hazard identification; 3. hazard prevention and control; 4. employee involvement and training. He said Alice Electric excelled in all four points.

Robert Younger said the award was for a safety manual and program drafted by his son Robert Jr. for their 60 employees. "The Commission reviewed the program, thought it was excellent and asked to apply for the award," said Brown.

SURVEY: Strippers on decline

(From 1E)

Total stripper production in the U.S. declined from 383,196,892 barrels to 377,288,235 barrels in 1991. Not surprisingly, the state with the highest number of stripper wells and highest production is Texas. In the latest survey, Texas had 129,332 wells and total stripper production of 137,226,658 barrels, with average production per well of 2.9 barrels.

Virginia was on the bottom of the totem pole with only 34 stripper wells, producing .98 barrels per day and a total production of 12,161.

Alabama with 7.69 barrels for each of its 507 stripper wells has the highest average production per well, and West Virginia, which produces only .33 barrels for each of its 15,935 wells, has the lowest per-well average.

PITTS: Will U.S. care about oil?

(From 1E)

Americans care about the plight of an industry that keeps their cars, busses, trucks, planes and trains moving.

When the last major oil company in America sells its last well and moves its last employee to Russia, Venezuela or Kuwait, will anyone care? When the the percent of crude oil imports goes from 50 percent to 90 percent, will they care? When 400,000 more oil jobs are eliminated will they care? Probably not!

We Americans live in a world so full of suffering, grief and problems, and we get so much exposure to it in the news, that most of us can only respond to our own problems. Fact is: The problem with oil will not be a problem for most Americans until the price of oil goes up at the pump.

B-Line, Growing With The Permian Basin

Constant expansion to meet the needs of the trucking industry and fleet operator along with those of the general public has been the rule with B-Line Filter and Supply, Inc., since 1973.

As a Texaco wholesaler from 1964 to 1973, Omer Bishop, founder and owner of B-Line, saw the need for a one-stop supply house for the parts both for his gasoline trucks and company cars. Along with his son Gary and one sales representative, B-Line was opened at the corner of 9th Street and Grant Avenue in Odessa. As the sales volume and inventory grew, moves were made to new and larger locations in 1975 and again in 1983 to its present location at 1509 W. 2nd Street in Odessa.

With the largest inventory of truck and auto parts at any retail location in the Permian Basin and staffed by both Omer and Gary along with nine sales representatives combining a vast knowledge of auto and truck needs with years of experience, B-Line can fill all of your needs. Filters for your automobiles, trucks, off-road equipment and industrial needs are in stock. Also, B-Line will see to your specific needs with custom manufactured liquid and air filters for both the field and the plant. Oil, both packaged and in drums, along with antifreeze, hydraulic oil, transdraulic fluid, cutting oil and diesel/gas additives are available.

B-Line's latest expansion is now in the works. Having acquired the old Dunnigan Tool Building across the street from their current location, B-Line will soon open a quick lube and oil change facility designed to meet the needs of the 18 wheeler and fleet trucks. Providing quick and economical service this facility will meet all EPA and Texas Water Commission requirements while greatly reducing down time for your fleet. Watch for the grand opening soon.

With plenty of truck parking, large inventory, experienced staff and a helpful atmosphere, is there any reason not to come by and see for yourself how B-Line can meet your needs?

As Omer likes to say, "We can talk all day but one trip to B-Line tells the story!"

JIMSCO Offers Complete Field Repair Service To The Permian Basin

JIMSCO, INC. was incorporated in November 1977. The company was founded by Jim Scott who has been in oilfield sales since 1955, primarily in the Permian Basin.

JIMSCO was formed originally to market and distribute an all new fiberglass repair coupling for use on low-pressure oilfield pipe. Since that time, the company has grown to twelve employees and is headquartered at 11020 W. Highway 80, Midland, one mile west of Midland International Airport.

A master distributor for Smith Fiberglass Products, Inc., JIMSCO stocks a complete line of low and high-pressure fiberglass fittings in sizes two through sixteen inches. Smith Fiberglass Products Inc. is one of the leading manufacturers of fiberglass pipe and fittings in the oil, chemical and industrial markets in the U.S.A.

In addition to fiberglass pipe and fittings, JIMSCO has a complete line of both stainless and internally coated high-pressure fittings. These fittings are used on adapters for all fiberglass high-pressure pipe currently being manufactured.

JIMSCO offers complete field repair service on both low and high-pressure pipe in the oilfield. JIMSCO's primary area is the Permian Basin which covers all of West Texas and Southeastern New Mexico. JIMSCO also serves many customers throughout the United States because of their large inventory.

JIMSCO customers are primarily in the oilfield. However, they also sell to other indsutries throughout the entire area. JIMSCO serves nearly all the major operators in the area and many of the independents plus all the major oilfield supply companies who operate in the area. In fact, it is many of these companies that really are an aid to JIMSCO's overall business.

JIMSCO provides special fabrication work per the customer's specifications in their own shop. These fabrications include, but are not limited to, waterlegs, waterboots, spreaders and different types of headers which are used in the oilfield.

JIMSCO is beginning their sixteenth year in business and wants to take this opportunity to thank all the people who have helped in the past. We look forward to working with anyone, anywhere -- who has a fiberglass requirement or repair job in the oilpatch. We are here to assist you -- THE CUSTOMER.

SMITH ENERGY SERVICES

The Spraberry Experts

Over the last 36 months, Smith Energy Services has completed more than 400 Spraberry stimulation treatments.

We lead the industry in this area.

The reason we've been selected to do nearly all of the frac jobs in this area is because we save the operator time and money.

Time, because we often do two- or three-stage treatments in one morning.

Money, because we gel "on-the-fly" with our patented CMG unit eliminating wasted tank bottoms and avoiding environmental clean-up problems.

Let us contribute to your saving of time, money and the environment.

Smith Energy Services. We work best under pressure.

ACTIVITY HIGHLIGHTS

Crockett yields 8-barrel discovery

Staff report

A Strawn discovery has been completed in Crockett County, 17 miles northwest of Ozona.

BRIDGE OIL CO. L.P. potentialed the No. 1 Todd Estate "31" to pump eight barrels of 35.6 gravity crude and 26 barrels of water from perforations 6,328 to 6,332 ft., which had been acidized with 987 gallons of 10 percent acid.

Permitted as a 7,000 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 6,550 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged back to 6,470 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,419 ft., include the San Andres at 1,238 ft., Spraberry at 3,720, Wolfcamp at 4,904, Strawn at 6,153 and Simpson at 6,454 ft.

Location is 1,980 ft. from south and 990 ft. from east lines of Section 31, Block WX, GC&SF survey.

Yoakum field gets second producer

ENERGY DEVELOPMENT CORP. has added a second well to the Kristen field of Yoakum County, 10 miles southwest of Plains.

On potential test, the No. 2 Cleveland flowed 209 barrels of 39.7 gravity crude and 13 Mcfd on an 18/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 185 psi. The well flowed from Devonian perforations 11,730 to 11,752 ft., no treatment reported.

Permitted as a 12,000 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 11,752 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 11,660 ft.

On kelly bushing elevation of 3,732 ft., formation tops include the San Andres at 4,589 ft., Glorieta at 6,040, Clearfork at 6,680, Tubb at 7,238, Wichita Albany at 7,961, Wolfcamp Porosity at 9,952, Pennsylvanian at 11,026, Lower Mississippian at 11,624, and Devonian at 11,703 ft.

Location is 1,591 ft. from south and 796 ft. from west lines of Section 600, Block D, John H. Gibson survey, Abst. 504.

Lea plugback nets Wolfcamp producer

A plugback operation has yielded Wolfcamp/Bone Spring production in an undesignated field in Lea County, N.M.

ENRON OIL & GAS CO. reentered the No. 2 Warren "3" a former Morrow gas producer in the Pitchfork Ranch field, testing it to flow 164 barrels of 30 gravity crude, 856 Mcfd and 18 barrels of water on a 64/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 350 psi. The well flowed from perforations 13,498 to 13,511 ft., which had been acidized with 4,000 gallons NeFeHCL acid.

Originally drilled to 15,347 ft., the well was plugged back to 14,415 ft. A 4 1/2 inch liner was hung from 12,970 to 15,347 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 3,357 ft., include the Delaware Sandstone at 5,309 ft., Cherry Canyon at 6,298, Cherry Canyon Marker at 6,542, Leonard at 9,084, Bone Spring Limestone at 9,244, First Bone Spring Sandstone at 10,258, Second Bone Spring Sandstone at 10,766, Bone Spring Carbonate at 11,422, Third Bone Spring Sandstone at 11,888, Wolfcamp Limestone at 12,206, Base Wolfcamp Limestone Marker at 12,800, Wolfcamp Carbonate Limestone at 13,496, Pennsylvanian Limestone at 13,656, Strawn Limestone at 13,680, Atoka Shale at 13,772, Atoka Carbonate Reef at 13,800, Base Atoka Carbonate Reef at 14,052, Atoka Sandstone at 14,054, Morrow Limestone at 14,314, Morrow Clastic at 14,578, Morrow "A" at 14,592, Morrow Warren Sandstone at 14,682, Upper Sinatra Sandstone at 14,816, Lower Sinatra Sandstone at 14,826, Morrow "B" at 14,906, Middle Morrow Shale at 15,076, Morrow "C" Sandstone at 15,140, and Base Morrow Sandstone at 15,224 ft.

Location is 1,980 ft. from south and west lines of Section 3, T25s, R34e.

The well was originally tested to flow 630 Mcfd on a 32/64 inch choke from Sinatra perforations 14,818 to 14,838 ft.

Santa Fe sells assets

Staff report

Santa Fe Energy Resources has sold its Appalachian region assets to Eastern America Energy Corp. for approximately $7.4 million.

Included in the transaction was a 50 percent interest in the Eastern Pipeline as well as varied interests in regional natural gas producing properties.

Santa Fe gained its ownership in the 400 mile natural gas gathering and distribution system along with the producing properties as part of its merger with Adobe Resources in 1992. The transaction is a continuation of Santa Fe Energy's strategy to concentrate its domestic activities into core areas.

The Eastern Pipeline, which is now owned and operated by Eastern America Energy Corp., has throughput capacity of 10 million cubic feet per day and is currently to some 375 producing wells which supply industrial customers in the north central portion of West Virginia.

The producing properties also sold with the pipeline include some 250 wells in three states with combined gross natural gas production of approximately 3 million cubic feet per day.

Coastal plans gas service group

Staff report

HOUSTON — The Coastal Corp. has announced the planned formation of Coastal Gas Services Co., which is expected to become one of the largest unregulated natural gas service organizations in North America.

The resulting organization will handle natural gas volumes in excess of 1.2 trillion cubic feet (tcf) and 226 million gallons of natural gas liquids annually.

Headed by Charles M. Oglesby, president and chief executive officer, Coastal Gas Services will combine the existing operations of Coastal Gas Marketing Co. with Coastal's natural gas gathering and processing and international and domestic natural gas project development activities. There will also be a newly created division responsible for utility services.

"With this new organization, Coastal will be better aligned to capture opportunities created by the continued deregulation of the natural gas industry in North America," said James R. Paul, president and chief executive officer of The Coastal Corp.

"Our customers have said they need these services, and we have created a comprehensive natural gas organization which provides that focus."

Coastal Gas Services Co. will join ANR Pipeline Co. (ANR), Colorado Interstate Gas Co. (CIG) and Coastal's 50 percent interest in Great Lakes Gas Transmission Co. as the major units making up The Coastal Corp.'s Natural Gas Group.

Merchant activities of ANR and CIG will be separated from their parent pipelines in compliance with Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) Orders 497 and 636. However, the pipeline merchant activities will continue to offer marketing and gas supply services to existing customers and producers.

Meanwhile, ANR and CIG will continue to provide regulated transportation, gathering and storage services to customers in new as well as established areas.

Coastal Gas Marketing Co. will continue as a separate subsidiary headed by its president, Clark C. Smith. Coastal Gas Marketing will also expand its commercial operations to provide expanded natural gas pricing options and transportation related services to utilities.

Coastal Gas Services Company will combine Coastal's natural gas gathering and gas processing assets into a new unit, which will operate existing facilities as well as acquire additional gathering and processing assets. Natural gas processing operations previously resided with Coastal's exploration and production group.

So...You think you know everything there is to know about oil and gas in the Permian Basin, huh???

Then play OILPATCH TRIVIA!!!

To play Oilpatch Trivia simply call Cityline at 560-2400, ext. 5555 before 5 p.m. every Wednesday. Record your answer along with your name, address, and phone number.

The first caller to correctly answer the question will be the weekly winner and his or her name will be published along with the correct answer in the following Sunday's Permian Basin Oil Report Classified Section. The weekly winners will be entered into our monthly drawing and our monthly winner will receive a $78.00 certificate to be used toward advertising in the Permian Basin Oil Report or a year long subscription of that publication. Show us what you know and good luck!!!

Sponsored by THE PETROLEUM MUSEUM

The Winner of the Jan. 17. "Oilpatch Trivia" question is Ken Magness of Wolfforth, Texas! What year did Texas become the leading crude oil producing state never to relinquish that distinction? Answer: 1928

QUESTION FOR JANUARY 31, 1993: ON JAN. 10, 1901 WHERE DID CAPTAIN ANTHONY F. LUCAS BRING IN THE "WORLD'S GREATEST GUSHER"?

Call 560-2400 EXT. 5555

Next to the Permian Basin's most widely read oil and gas news columns is a great place to advertise your oil and gas-related product or service.

For further information contact your PERMIAN BASIN OIL REPORT advertising representative:

Score big with Super Bowls of Snacks

Today is the Big Day, the day football fans have been waiting for all year ... The Super Bowl. And with the Dallas Cowboys winning the NFC championship, it makes this year's event just a little bit closer to home, not to mention more exciting, for the numerous Texans — and others — who support " 'Da Boys.' "

For fans of the AFC champions — the Buffalo Bills — this year is particularly important. This is the third year the Bills have made it to the Super Bowl, but in their two previous appearances, they have failed to take home the trophy. They are hoping the third time will be the charm.

As the competition-craving, sports-starved fans park themselves in front of the television set to watch Super Bowl XXVII, along with all its pre-game and post-game activities, only one other thing in the world will matter — food. To help you tackle the munchies these enthusiasts are bound to have, here are a few ideas for snacks that will help you fill super bowls with super snacks. Who knows, maybe you'll score big and be declared the real winner by the end of the game.

Popcorn is always a good standby for quick snacks. Air-popped, with butter or coated with cheese, it is a a no-fuss, no-frills snack that is easily made. The following two recipes were created by popcorn experts at Jolly Time Popcorn.

ARMCHAIR QUARTERBACK CRUNCH

3 quarts popped popcorn
2 cups mini pretzels
⅓ cup roasted pepitas or hulled pumpkin seeds (optional)
¼ cup regular or light margarine
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
1 teaspoon Mexican seasoning

Place popped popcorn, pretzels and pepitas in large bowl. Melt margarine in a small pan. Add Parmesan and Mexican seasoning. Drizzle over popcorn and toss lightly. Makes about 3½ quarts.

COACH'S CHEESE CORN

4 quarts popped, unsalted popcorn
¼ cup butter or margarine
1 package (1⅞- to 1½-ounces) cheese sauce mix
1½ teaspoons dried basil leaves, crumbled

Place popped popcorn in large bowl. Melt butter in small pan; drizzle over popped popcorn. Toss to mix. Sprinkle cheese sauce mix and basil over popcorn mixture. Stir to mix well. Makes about 4 quarts.

REDUCED CALORIE: Substitute ¼ cup light margarine for butter and use ¼ cup natural cheese flavor topping for sauce mix.

WHITE CHEDDAR: Substitute 1 envelope (¼ cup) mild white cheddar sauce from macaroni and cheese dinner mix for sauce mix.

For snacks that have a little more stick-to-ribs power, the culinary professionals at Bryan Foods have developed a number of flavorful recipes in honor of the big NFL match up. These recipes are ideal for serving buffet-style and are easy to prepare.

SMOKIE KABOBS

1 16 ounce package cocktail smokies
1 pound cooked shrimp (medium count)
1 15½-ounce can pineapple slices
2 tablespoons margarine
½ cup chopped onion
½ cup chopped green pepper
1 beef bouillon cube
2 tablespoons cornstarch
3 tablespoons brown sugar
3 tablespoons vinegar
1 tablespoon soy sauce
Dash of salt
Skewers

Drain pineapple and reserve syrup. Cut slices into approximately 50 chunks. Saute onions in margarine. Dissolve bouillon in 1 cup boiling water. Mix cornstarch, brown sugar and a dash of salt with the bouillon broth. Add pineapple syrup, vinegar and soy sauce to bouillon. Pour over onions and stir well. Alternate shrimp, pineapple, green peppers and cocktail smokies on skewers and place kabobs in a casserole dish. Pour thickened sauce over kabobs. Bake at 350 degrees for 15 minutes.

HOT SMOKIES IN A BLANKET

1 16 ounce package cocktail smokies
12 ounces sharp Cheddar cheese, grated
1 small jar sliced jalapeno peppers
4 8 ounce packages of crescent rolls

Remove crescent dough from package. Cut each of the 8 triangles in half lengthwise. You should have 16 pieces of dough per package. At the widest end of dough, place one slice of jalapeno pepper, a small amount of cheese and one cocktail smokie on the dough. Roll dough from widest end to the most narrow end. Place on greased cookie sheet and bake at 350 degrees for 11-13 minutes or until golden brown. Serve with picante sauce as dip.

PIZZA DOGS

2 packages jumbo hot dogs
8 hot dog buns
½ pound sliced Mozzarella cheese
1 8-ounce can pizza or spaghetti sauce

Please see SNACKS/2F

WTJS hosts jazz session, meeting

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

Sounds reminiscent of New Orleans emanated from Bayou Wadley last weekend when the West Texas Jazz Society sponsored "Jazz on a Sunday Afternoon" in conjunction with its annual meeting.

McKnight-Harrison

There was Standing Room Only in the restaurant, as jazz lovers gathered to hear the Odessa College Jazz Band, The Societies Jazz Combo, and a blues group composed of local musicians.

Jere (Mrs. W.C.) Hubbard, retiring president, recapped the jazz society's activities and accomplishments during the past year and introduced Camille (Mrs. Bill) Leifeste, who is succeeding her as president.

The three young men, Welsey Korner, Tommy McCoy and Jimmy Morgan, who received scholarships to a Jazz Clinic at the University of Texas-Arlington last summer, were introduced and shared their experiences at the camp. It is good to see this art form is appreciated by the younger generation, as was evidenced not only by the aforementioned musicians, but the number of other young people in the audience.

Bobby Crues' announcement that the Midland Jazz Classic will resume this year was greeted with enthusiasm. It is scheduled for Sept. 30 through Oct. 3 at the Midland Hilton. In addition, the crowd was told the annual Odessa Jazz Party will be held May 18-23 at the Holiday Inn Center in Odessa.

Next up on the WTJS's schedule is a concert by the prestigious One O'Clock Lab Band from the University of North Texas. The group will perform on Feb. 19 at the Yucca Theatre.

Among the jazz aficionados present were Enid and John Phillips, Mim and Ish Curry, Pat Paxton, Jayne and Fred Kester, Leonore Chambers, Jane Burgess, Betsy Kelley and Wayne Weekes, all of Midland, and from Odessa, Margaret Gillham, Jerre Sullivan and Mary Harrington.

THE MIDLAND ALUMNAE Chapter of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Inc., presented its annual Esquire Ball Saturday evening in the Holiday Inn Ballroom.

The following young men were presented: Claydell Caston, Anthony Flunder, Jared Lamont Hall, Lennis Hill, Martin Lattibeaudiere, William Merritt IV, Kevin Nelson, Garland Niblett, Quincy Nolly, Marcus Pertile, Juan Prince, Roderick Strambler and Jeremy White.

The honorees, who attend both Midland and Lee High Schools, were chosen for their outstanding contributions to their schools, churches and community.

The theme for the ball was "Toward the Year 2000: Challenges, Choices, Changes."

Ushers for the event were James Archie and Jason Hunter. Pages were Blake Black and Mikai Williams-Collings.

Music was furnished by Danny Sherman of D-Rock Productions. Other entertainment was provided by the Esquires, who modeled fashions from their own wardrobes or gave talent presentations.

A delicious buffet dinner was served.

Iris Hall was chairperson of the ball. Chapter president is Mae Beth Tryon.

JUST BECAUSE the holiday party season is but a fond memory does not mean the social scene has quieted down in Midland.

The winter months have been filled with a number of events to benefit various worthy causes.

Coming up this Saturday night is the Junior League of Midland's 42nd annual Charity Ball. Proceeds are returned to the community through various projects.

The event will take place at Midland Country Club and will feature the theme: "Hollywood: Celebrate a Star-studded Evening."

On Feb. 8, the Junior Woman's Association will present a fashion show and luncheon at the Holiday Inn Convention Center. The spring collection of Alfred Fiandaca will be featured.

This marks the group's 23rd year of dedication to the health of Midland youngsters. Benefitting will be Memorial Hospital and Medical Center's Pediatric Equipment Fund and The Clinic of the Community Children's Ministry.

Act IX, auxiliary to Midland Community Theatre, presented the second annual Beaux Arts Ball at the Midland Hilton Ballroom Saturday evening.

The ball celebrated the start of the theatre's 1993 season, which opens with the long-running Broadway musical, "My Fair Lady," and also raised funds for theatre operations.

Last weekend, Heart Beat '93 was held at Midland Center as a fund-raiser for the American Heart Association.

The dance's purpose is to raise money to aid in AHA research and to educate the public on ways to reduce the risk of heart disease.

Marilyn McKnight-Harrison is social columnist for the Reporter-Telegram.

SNACKS: Tackle hunger with treats

(From 1F)

1 16-ounce container of combined grated Romano and Parmesan cheese
1 cup onion, chopped
1 cup green pepper, chopped
Butter

Split buns and spread with butter. Place strip of Mozzarella over each half bun. Spread one tablespoon of pizza sauce over cheese. Split hot dogs lengthwise and arrange on half buns. Top with one tablespoon of pizza sauce, onion and green pepper, and short strip of Mozzarella cheese. Sprinkle generously with Romano and Parmesan cheese combination. Broil until hot dogs are brown and cheese melts.

If you are one of those cooks who would rather open a can than fret with all the fresh ingredients, the Canned Food Information Council offered the following recipes to help you out.

SUMPTUOUS SHRIMP AND CRAB DIP

2 3-ounce packaged light cream cheese, softened
¼ cup crumpled feta cheese
½ cup low-fat plain yogurt
1 10-ounce can whole tomatoes, drained, chopped
2 tablespoons sliced ripe olives
1 clove garlic, minced
½ teaspoon dried basil leaves
1 6-ounce can all-white crab meat, drained
1 4½-ounce can medium shrimp, rinsed, drained
Parsley sprigs
Carrot and celery sticks
Bread sticks

Beat cream cheese in small bowl until fluffy. Beat in feta cheese and yogurt. Mix in tomatoes, olives, garlic and basil. Gently mix in crab meat and shrimp. Spoon into serving bowl. Serve with vegetables and bread sticks for dipping. Makes about 2¼ cups.

TIPS: Sumptuous Shrimp and Crab Dip is also delicious served hot. Microwave in glass dish at high power until hot, about 2 minutes, stirring every 45 seconds. Or heat in a small saucepan over medium-low heat, stirring gently occasionally.

This dip can be made on day in advance then refrigerated, covered.

MEXICAN BEAN DIP

1 16-ounce can kidney beans, drained; reserve bean liquid
2 teaspoons chili powder
Dash of cayenne pepper or hot pepper sauce
2 teaspoons ground cumin
Tortilla chips

Put one teaspoon of bean liquid in blender or food processor. Add beans to blender with seasonings, blend until smooth, adding bean liquid as needed. Season to taste with additional salt, chili powder, cayenne or hot pepper sauce, if desired. Serve with chips.

TIPS: Spice up your Mexican Bean Dip using hot peppers as a garnish.

And for all the couch potatoes, the National Potato Board has a few suggestions for snacks as well.

SNACKERBOWL

1 pound cooked lean ground beef
1 chopped tomato
3 cups shredded Cheddar or Monterey Jack
1 diced green onion
6 ounce dairy sour cream
½ cup sliced black olives
6 ounces guacamole
¼ teaspoon pepper
6 ounces hot salsa
¼ teaspoon salt
16 ounces refried beans
½ teaspoon garlic powder

Add salsa, beans, salt, garlic and pepper to cooked beef. Mix thoroughly and spread over 12-inch platter evenly. Sprinkle cheese over meat mixture until completely covered. Microwave on medium for 10 minutes. Cheese should be completely melted. Add tomatoes, onions and olives in center. Spread guacamole and sour cream around border. Serve with tortilla or corn chips. Makes 10-12 servings.

FIREWORKS CRUNCH

24 ounces mixed nuts
4 cups broken pretzel twists
2 packages Ranch dressing mix
1 cup butter
6 cups broken rippled potato chips

In a large mixing bowl, microwave butter on high for 1½ minutes. Stir in salad dressing mix. Add remaining ingredients. Toss to coat. Microwave on high for 5 minutes. Stir. Spread on paper towel-lined baking sheet and cool. Place in air-tight plastic bags and you are ready to go.

For something sweet:

SWEET REVENGE

1 6-ounce package milk chocolate chips
1 11-ounce package butterscotch chips
1½ cups dry roasted peanuts (salted or unsalted)
1 cup crushed rippled potato chips

Combine butterscotch and chocolate chips in a bowl. Microwave on medium for 2 minutes or until softened. Mix until smooth, then add in peanuts and potato chips. Mix thoroughly. Place spoonfuls on wax paper on in small shells. Refrigerate.

For some, Sunday is not so super

By Brett Pauly
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — It's a pattern that battered women's shelters and hot-line counselors are all too familiar with on Super Bowl Sunday.

A frightened voice on the other end of the phone describes how her husband or boyfriend beat her because his team lost. Or because she refused his orders to make more sandwiches for his buddies. Or the supply of beer ran short. Or she walked in front of the television screen during a big play. Or the kids made too much noise.

At a time when spousal abuse has reached epidemic proportions — one beating every 15 seconds, according to national reports — experts have said there are more such incidents on Super Sunday than any other day of the year.

"Hot lines for battered women around the country ring off the hook. There is a major influx of calls," said Marissa Ghez, spokeswoman for the Family Violence Prevention Fund, a nonprofit education and lobby group in San Francisco. "There is significant anecdotal evidence that Super Bowl Sunday is the biggest day of the year for domestic violence."

The Monday after the Super Bowl and New Year's Day are the next two busiest days for battered women's centers and shelters, Ghez said.

To help curb the violence, a coalition of domestic violence groups under the umbrella of Fairness and Accuracy in Reporting (FAIR), has asked the NBC network to air a public service announcement about domestic violence during the Super Bowl broadcast.

"There is no better time to address this epidemic of violence than during an event that millions and millions of people will watch on TV," said Becky McSpadden, coordinator of the Malibu/Santa Monica Mountains National Organization for Women. "It might make somebody stop and think. It might prevent some batterings. And it might save a life."

ON TUESDAY, NBC director of sports publicity Ed Markey said he was unsure if a decision to air the spot had been made.

McSpadden is coordinating a Thursday morning press conference to address the issue at the Rose Bowl, site of this year's Super Bowl between the Buffalo Bills and the Dallas Cowboys. Kickoff time is 3:18 p.m. Sunday.

"It's not up to women to stop the battering," she said. "It has to be up to men, and men have to take on that burden."

The Los Angeles County Domestic Violence Council, established by the County Board of Supervisors in 1979 to study the issue of domestic and family abuse and curb the violence, is helping spread the same message. Council coordinator Carol Arnett said it is considering adopting the slogan, "Real men don't batter."

She suggested that the National Football League pick up the ball and adopt the same platform.

The NFL has no plans of publicizing the problems of spousal abuse on Super Sunday, said NFL spokesman Greg Aiello. Its 60-second allotment of public service time during the Super Bowl broadcast will be dedicated to thanking groups and individuals who have supported the United Way.

The United Way provided $61 million last year to nearly 1,000 agencies dealing with domestic violence, Aiello said.

"In our support of the United Way, we are addressing the issue in our way," Aiello said.

He said the league is not aware of any links between the hard-hitting action on the field and spousal abuse in the homes of those watching the game.

Many women's shelters report as much as a 40 percent increase in calls for help on Super Bowl Sunday and the following Monday, according to FAIR, a national watchdog organization.

The Los Angeles Police Department also has reported an increase in felony domestic violence arrests on the past two Super Sundays. The daily average of arrests is about 20. But on the day of the big game last year, there were 34 arrests, along with 27 arrests on Super Sunday 1991. Arrests on the Mondays following the game were slightly higher than average.

ALL THE elements will be in place by kickoff Sunday to make it a volatile afternoon and evening, Arnett said.

"It's got all the worst attributes rolled into one day," Arnett said. "It's an annual male ritual, and you get this really heavy male bonding. There is the presence of alcohol. Spouses are home together. And it's one big game with a lot of high stakes riding on it.

"You take that, add in the competitive aggression that is built up during the game, and the next thing you get is the beating of women."

Arnett, who describes herself as a major sports fan, a survivor of domestic violence and the ex-wife of a former professional football player, believes the fact that pro football's championship is determined in one game contributes to the high incidence of spousal abuse on Super Sunday.

The other major American sports championships — pro baseball, basketball and hockey — occur during a series of games. And many of the games are scheduled on weekdays, when spousal abuse occurs less frequently, Arnett said. Sunday traditionally is the worst day of the week for domestic violence because spouses often are home together, experts have said.

"It builds up to one big day, and all the festivities ride on one game," Arnett said. "You look forward to Super Bowl parties all year long. And you know exactly what time the game is going to be played, so you can plan for weeks."

She said there are numerous potential flash points for spousal abuse. For example, she said, a man may want to show his dominance in front of his buddies and order his wife to bring food or beer. When the woman questions his authority or says, "Do it yourself," she gets punched.

If there is money riding on the game and the woman expresses concerns over the fate of family income, she also may get beaten, Arnett said.

And if the children misbehave or interrupt a crucial play, the wife might get smacked because she often is held accountable for the kids' actions, she added.

COUNSELORS AT the Domestic Abuse Center, a privately funded domestic violence prevention group in suburban Northridge, are coordinating a special meeting Sunday before the Super Bowl to warn male clients about potential consequences of partying and drinking with the guys. The men's group usually meets Sunday nights to help curb spouse battering.

"If that's your tendency, then you're setting yourself up for an abusive situation," center director Gail Pincus said.

The switch in meeting times on Super Sunday ensures a higher turnout, Pincus said. "When we have the meetings after the game, most guys don't come in or they come in buzzed and we send them away," she said.

Although commission executive director Patricia Giggans acknowledges that Super Sunday is a busy day for the center, she is quick to point out that spousal abuse is part of a cycle of violence.

"There is this focus on Super Bowl Sunday, but it's not the only time that it happens," Giggans said. "In most relationships that involve battering, it's happening over time.

"We love to hear simple answers, like 'He hit his wife for the first time on Super Bowl Sunday,' but it's more complicated than that. It's just another day, another excuse and another part of the cycle."

AT WIT'S END

Sex kitten may find suburban life for dogs

By Erma Bombeck

I had my head in the dryer the other night when I heard Madonna being interviewed on "Entertainment Tonight." She whispered huskily that she had a lot of fantasies, but her real one was to live in the suburbs and raise a family.

Bombeck

The idea of Madonna pushing a cart through K-mart, straining to hear the shopper's special of smoke alarms on aisle three, nearly made me drop the lint trap.

What is it that Madonna sees as a great career move in the lives of women who make the same beds day after day, fill up the same plates with the same food year after year, and launder the same clothes week after week?

I wanted to tell her that living gets as daily as it gets out here. It's not a job for the fainthearted. We see a limo possibly twice in our lifetime: When we go to the prom and when we make a trip to the cemetery. We draw no salaries and have no agents. If we were to take off our clothes when we felt like it, we'd get arrested and the authorities would probably take our children away from us.

I remember when Elizabeth Taylor chucked her career to become the suburban wife of Sen. John Warner. Her idea of the good life she had missed in Hollywood was dishing with the girls, eating lunch over the sink, and whipping up and down buffet tables working her fingers like scissors. Within months, she became a member of the caftan crowd. It was no place for a legend.

Our reality is that we plod along making payments on the braces of a kid who hasn't smiled in 10 years. We take dogs to the vet who don't want to go. We have relentless critics. Every week of our lives, we buy two pounds of hamburger and try to get creative.

We're so desperate for attention, we actually believe we're finalists in the Publishers Clearinghouse sweepstakes and that Ed McMahon is going to appear at our front door with a check. We covet the celebritydom of the person on TV who pushes the button for the lottery balls to drop into place.

Yes, Madonna, we may look like busy, vital madcaps in the soap commercials for soft hands. We may appear to be independent women who can break for coffee any time we like, put on weight and tool around in station wagons with wood on them. But I'm telling you this as a friend: Until you've checked out the suburbs — don't give up your day job.

SEEDS FOR THOUGHT

Pruning method destructive

By Deborah A. Benge

Just when we finally learn leaving stubs and removing the bark ridge collar is bad, up crops another destructive trend in pruning trees — stripping all of the lower limbs.

Benge

This pruning trend involves the excessive removal of all lower side limbs from the major branches of the tree. Many times one-half to three-fourths of the canopy is removed with this type of pruning, which leads to problems. The problems include:

- Weakening of the tree due to the reduced leaf surface needed for food production.
- Suddenly leaving shaded limbs unprotected to strong sun rays resulting in sunscald.
- The weakening and sunscald can then lead to the invasion of insects, namely borers, and diseases.
- And destroying the natural beauty of the tree.

It's true that many times trees are pruned to allow more sunlight to the turf growing under the tree. We've all encountered situations where a mature tree is casting a dense shade, leaving the grass thin or nonexistent. Removing some of the canopy through pruning can increase the sunlight getting to the turf, improving the health and vigor of the turf, but this can weaken the tree if done excessively.

If you find yourself in this situation, consider your priorities. Is the grass more important than the tree? There are alternatives to this severe type of pruning. Trees can have their canopies thinned gradually. Selectively remove branches to open up the canopy so more sunlight gets to the ground. This can be done over a two- or three-year period so as not to weaken your tree.

And there are still other alternatives to managing shaded-out grass. You can use more shade tolerant grasses; or better yet, you can turn the shaded area into a landscaped bed. When this bed is incorporated with existing landscaped area, it can turn into an excellent solution. In these shady beds you would then need to establish shade tolerant ground covers, dwarf shrubs and annual or perennial color.

So have a firm plan in mind when it comes to pruning trees. Remember excessive pruning weakens trees and that can lead to the decline of your valuable shade tree.

One more seasonal note: Don't put wood ashes from the fireplace or wood-burning stove in your garden soil. This is a common and useful practice in high rainfall acid soils, but in our low rainfall alkaline soils it can cause our alkaline soil pH to increase. Highly alkaline soils lead to plant growth problems and zinc and iron deficiencies.

So don't cause your alkaline soil to become more alkaline. Dispose of cold wood ashes somewhere other than your soil.

Two Spring Vegetable Schools will be presented in February, one Odessa and one in Stanton. These schools will provide information about vegetable gardening in the Permian Basin, such as planting dates, soil improvement, varieties for West Texas, beating the bugs and best-kept gardening secrets. More information next week.

Deborah Benge is the extension horticulture agent for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in Midland and Ector counties.

DEAR ABBY

Forgiving others is act of bravery

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: Did you know there is an International Forgiveness Week? Well, neither did I until five years ago when Alice Parenti of Fresno, Calif., wrote to tell me about it. And this is the week.

Van Buren

If you are a card-carrying member of the human race, there is at least one person in your life who needs your forgiveness. Or perhaps it's you who needs to be forgiven, so hop aboard the mea culpa bandwagon, let go of those grudges and give your ulcer a chance to heal.

Robert Muller, former assistant secretary-general of the United Nations, wrote this lovely piece especially for International Forgiveness Week:

DECIDE TO FORGIVE

Decide to forgive
For resentment is negative
Resentment is poisonous
Resentment diminishes and devours the self.
Be the first to forgive,
To smile and to take the first step.
And you will see happiness bloom
On the face of your human brother or sister.
Be always the first
Do not wait for others to forgive
For by forgiving
You become the master of fate
The fashioner of life
The doer of miracles.
To forgive is the highest,
Most beautiful form of love.
In return, you will receive
Untold peace and happiness.

Here is the program for achieving a truly forgiving heart:

Sunday: Forgive yourself.
Monday: Forgive your family.
Tuesday: Forgive your friends and associates.
Wednesday: Forgive across economic lines within your own nation.
Thursday: Forgive across cultural lines within your own nation.
Friday: Forgive across political lines within your own nation.
Saturday: Forgive other nations.

Only the brave know how to forgive. A coward never forgives. It is not in his nature.

Now, Dear Readers, if you will forgive me for repeating a portion of the lovely poem titled "Forgiveness," by George Roemisch, here it is:

"Forgiveness is the fragrance of the violet that clings fast to the heel that crushed it."

So, if perchance you are the "heel" that crushed a violet, this is the week to seek forgiveness.

Black History Month events planned at Fort Davis

FORT DAVIS — In recognition of February as Black History Month, a new video entitled "The Buffalo Soldiers" will be shown daily throughout the month at Fort Davis National Historic Site.

The 47-minute video, produced in 1992 by Bill Armstrong Productions, traces the history of the Buffalo Soldiers from the Indian Wars period to the Spanish American War. Featuring Gen. Colin Powell, commander of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and Dr. William Leckie, noted Indian Wars historian, the documentary describes the achievements of the Buffalo Soldiers and the prejudices they had to endure.

Numerous photos, many of which have never before been published, combined with footage shot at Fort Leavenworth, Fort Davis and Fort Bayard, N.M., tell the story of the 9th and 10th U.S. Infantry units. In the video, Fort Davis resident Fred Moore describes the events surrounding the Battle of Tinaja de Las Palmas. This battle, one of the major confrontations between Apaches and U.S. troops during the Victorio Campaign, was fought on land owned by the Moore family.

For more information about Black History Month or activities planned at Fort Davis National Historic Site to observe the month, contact the Fort at (915) 426-3224.

McBride & The Ride comes to Midland

Music is way of life for group's guitarist

Guitarist Ray Herndon of McBride & The Ride could read music before he could read the alphabet.

"Music's sort of been bred into me," Herndon said in a recent telephone interview. "My father was a musician and played music all his life. I had a lot of brothers; they all played. My oldest brother, Rick, he is a drummer. He's played music all his life, but he choose the CPA route. My middle brother, Ron, is a piano player, and he still plays out here.

"We all learned (music) when we were young kids. I started singing when I was about 3 years old. My mom taught me to sing. My first instrument was an accordion that I picked up when I was 4 or 5 years old.

"I went on to play guitar when I was about 7 years old. I've just been playing music all my life, so for me there's been no other way to make a living or have fun."

HERNDON, A native of Arizona, will find himself having fun at Midland's Chaparral Center Feb. 12. when McBride & The Ride opens for Wynonna Judd. Tickets, priced at $20, may be purchased at the center or at Endless Horizons. The show begins at 8 p.m.

McBride & The Ride had its first No. 1 song, "Sacred Ground," in 1992, making that year the group's "most successful year yet," said Herndon, who found success "feels great.

"When you can get to the top of the charts with a song, it's an incredible thing," Herndon said, adding that "Sacred Ground" was the song that took 'Achy Breaky Heart' out of its No. 1 slot on the charts.

Promoters become more inclined to book live dates for a group with a No. 1 single, Herndon said.

"This year, we're looking forward to a really busy season out there touring. We've got a lot of dates booked already, and we continue to book them."

THE GROUP also is in the preliminaries for the Academy of County Music's Vocal Group of the Year award. In 1992, McBride & The Ride was nominated by the Academy of Country Music for new vocal group.

"This year we'll have a better chance of taking that little thing home with us than we did last year," Herndon said.

Being a part of the show represents the achievement of a lifetime dream for Herndon and McBride & The Ride vocalist Terry McBride, a native Texan.

"Those awards shows are great even if we don't win. Terry and I grew up watching those country award shows a lot hoping and wishing some day that we would at least get to go to the show."

Herndon pointed out that the other partner in McBride & The Ride, drummer Billy Thomas, grew up "more with rock 'n' roll."

HERNDON, WHO studied music in college, has played all styles of music, but he grew up with country.

"It sort of got embedded in me," he said.

For the past 17 years, his family has owned "a real popular place," the Handlebar J, a country western bar and restaurant in Scottsdale, Ariz.

"Scottsdale is the western most western town." said Herndon, who played around Scottsdale in a band with his brothers and later joined a group named J. David Sloan and the Rogues. Lyle Lovett met the band when they were performing in Europe. Lovett flew to Scottsdale and used J. David Sloan and the Rogues on his demos that led to his MCA deal. The band then became Lovett's Large Band.

Herndon, McBride and Thomas were brought together by Tony Brown, MCA Records executive vice president.

"He decided to form a group for MCA Records," Herndon said. "They hadn't had a band since Desert Rose Band and what they had been doing had peaked at that time."

MCBRIDE HAD spent three years performing with his father, Dale McBride, who had spent years on the Lone Star circuit and had 11 chart records on an independent label. He then performed two years with Delbert McClinton before pur-

■ City salutes Broadway

GALVESTON — The stage is set for the premiere of "Mardi Gras! Galveston 1993" as Galveston Island raises the velvet curtain for its salute to Broadway Feb. 12-23.

For 12 festive days, the island city will take its ninth curtain call as host of the mid-winter carnival that has focused national attention on the Island since its revival in 1985.

The 1993 "Broadway Bound!" Mardi Gras celebration honors an American tradition of theatrical artistry. From the footlights to the marquees, the chorus line to the Tony Award winners, the Great White Way will be commemorated on Galveston Island with two full weekends of entertainment.

Honoring the showstoppers of 42nd Street will be seven colorful parades and processions; 20 masked balls; 12 art exhibits; a rugby tournament; two fun runs; a stairclimb; and a golf tournament; along with maskmaking workshops; costume contests; and a performance of Tommy Tune's "Grand Hotel"

Festival stages featuring the sounds of rock, zydeco, World Beat and the best of Broadway will provide entertainment on Seawall Boulevard Fev. 13 and in the historic Strand District Feb. 20.

For more information on all Mardi Gras events and hotels, call the Galveston Convention and Visitors Bureau, (800)351-4236.

■ New attraction to open

SAN ANTONIO — San Antonio visitors will see a new face on Alamo Plaza in early 1994 when Classic Attractions Inc. opens a new attraction across from the Alamo.

Entitled "The American Celebration" the attraction will present visitors with a stirring, patriotic, state of the art production through the magic of audio animatronic robotic figures and the latest in film techniques on the foundation of the United States.

Visitors will be able to celebrate Independence Day with former president Ronald Reagan; endure the American Revolutionary War with Benjamin Franklin; become one of the freedom fighters at the battle fo the Alamo with William Barret travis, Davy Crockett and Jim Bowie; see the struggle of Abraham Lincoln to hold the Union together in the early days of the Civil War; or be present at inspirational speeches given by Frederick Douglas, Sojourner Truth, Susan B. Anthony, Martin Luther King Jr. and John F. Kennedy. All will be presented through animatronic robotic figures.

"The American Celebration" will be more than a who's who of American history. It will utilize high-tech special effects technology such as the latest in realistic Audio-Animatronic human and character figures, highly detailed and historically accurate animated settings, an original digitally recorded musical score, fiber optic effects, high-definition television and front and rear film projection, digital surround sound, computer controlled lighting, glass reflection and scrim effects. "The American Celebration" also weill offer an interactive exhibit area.

The attraction will be located at 301 Alamo Plaza in the same building as the Plaza Theatre of Wax and Ripley's Believe It or Not! It is estimated to cost between $3.5-4 million to build. Anticipated annual attendance is 200,000.

Label puts western back in country music

By Jim Patterson
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Michael Martin Murphy and Jim Ed Norman are trying to put the Western back into country and western music.

Murphy, known primarily for his 1975 No. 3 pop hit "Wildfire," hit a commercial peak with his 1990 album, "Cowboy Songs."

As the head of Warner Bros. Records in Nashville, Norman sensed an untapped market behind the success of "Cowboy Songs."

Norman also had a personal stake. He says his life was changed by a classic cowboy poem by Wallace McCrae, called "Reincarnation."

So he's putting up Warner money to start the Warner Western record label to bring cowboy lovers into record stores.

"This is a culture that is truly American, like jazz and African-American gospel, and it has been overlooked to some extent," Norman said in an interview.

The three initial releases in the series are all linked by cover portraits by western artist Willie Matthews and Murphy's involvement as executive producer.

Norman said that cowboy poet Waddie Mitchell might be a tough sell.

Mitchell, who's 42 and a genuine cowboy, can silence a noisy bar with his tales. He uses a strict meter and rhyme scheme to suck the listener in to his alternately sentimental and comical tales — which always deliver a twist, and sometimes even a full-blown moral.

An example is "Cat-tastrophy," the story of a cowboy plotting to murder an unwanted pet cat. It turns into an warning for cowpokes to take care when dealing with women, because they always win in the end.

Mitchell has proved successful. He did a string of "Tonight" show appearances during Johnny Carson's reign, and draws 2,000 people every year to his own Elko Cowboy Poetry Gathering in his home of Elko, Nev.

City opera to feature 'Marilyn'

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York City Opera will present a musical account of Marilyn Monroe's life as one of the three world premieres during the company's 50th season, which also will feature six revivals and three repertory works.

The season, which opens July 28 and ends Nov. 21, will offer 97 performances of 14 productions, General Director Christopher Keene announced Tuesday.

The World Premiere Festival, to be presented Oct. 6-12, will introduce Ezra Laderman's "Marilyn," a new version of Lukas Foss' "Griffelkin" and Hugo Weisgall's "Esther."

"Marilyn," with a libretto by Norman Rosten, will premiere Oct. 6. Commissioned by the City Opera in 1991, it details the life and death of the film icon, as well as her impact on society. With Kathryn Gamberoni in the title role, the work is to be conducted by Hal France and directed by Jerome Sirlin.

The company's other new productions are "The Midsummer Marriage" by Sir Michael Tippett and "Cinderella" by Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein II.

Works by composer Giacomo Puccini will dominate the revivals, including the New York premiere of his original 1904 version of "Madame Butterfly," as well as his "Tosca" and "La Rondine."

'Bridges' turns professor into best-selling novelist

By Greg Smith
Associated Press Writer

CEDAR FALLS, Iowa — Robert James Waller finds it difficult to call himself a writer, even though his novel is selling better than books by Stephen King, John Grisham and James Michener.

"Where I came from, people didn't turn out to be writers. Writing was unconventional," he said. "It was something other people did — wild people, unstable people, people you wouldn't want your daughter going out with."

It's now something the 53-year-old Waller does, and apparently does well.

His book "The Bridges of Madison County" is No. 1 on the hardcover fiction list in the Jan. 31 issue of The New York Times Book Review. It also tops the Publishers Weekly list.

The book tells the story of a National Geographic photographer, Robert Kincaid, who falls in love with an Italian war bride, Francesca Johnson, after stopping at her farmhouse to ask for directions.

By the time her husband and two children return from the Illinois State Fair, Francesca has decided against running away with Kincaid, but they never forget each other. Their story is told in flashbacks by her children, who discover the love affair after her death.

"Bridges" took off without publicity. It is what booksellers call a "hand sell," which means bookstore clerks put it in customers' hands, saying, "You've got to read this book."

The public responded.

"They seem so moved by this. ... The mail keeps coming in," Waller said. "More than once people have written, 'Thank you for being.' That's about as nice a compliment a writer or anyone could receive."

Sherri Ellis, executive vice president for the Winterset Area Chamber of Commerce, lives in the real Madison County, Iowa. She said about 150 copies of Waller's book have been sold out of chamber offices.

When Waller was in Winterset during last October's covered bridge festival to autograph books, 650 were sold. "It is the talk of the town," Ellis said.

Waller has been on leave this year from the University of Northern Iowa, where he was the school's first dean of the College of Business Administration. He specializes in applied mathematics, economics and social policy, and has written three other books.

He was in Madison County in the summer of 1990 shooting pictures of its covered bridges, which are listed on the National Register of Historic Places, when the idea for "Bridges" first struck him.

It worked on him during his three-hour drive home to Cedar Falls, during which a snippet from a song came to him: "I knew you had your own dreams, too, Francesca."

"I got home, threw my bags on the floor and wrote the outline in two weeks. I slept something like three hours a night. I sat here writing with a towel around my neck and cried — just bawled."

"It was a magical experience. It's a special book," he said.

Waller showed the novel to his editor at Iowa State University Press, who insisted on forwarding it to a literary agent in New York. "Five days later, it was sold to Warner Books. It was that fast," he said.

Hollywood now is interested in the book. Ron Bass, who wrote the screenplay for "Rain Main," is writing a screenplay, Waller said.

The character of Kincaid is "85 percent me," Waller said. The other 15 percent is based on a real-life National Geographic photographer Waller knows.

"Kincaid is a man who feels out of sync with his time, ill-designed for the world in which he lives," he said. "I increasingly feel that way."

People in the Madison County insist the story is real.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Three of ♡

Follow the bidding and play of this hand. Then decide who, if anyone, made an error.

Once North could respond, South, with 20 points in high cards, insisted on game by making a jump shift. Four spades was a perfectly normal contract.

West led the singleton heart. East grabbed the ace and returned the suit, West ruffing. Declarer won the diamond return, drew trumps and forced out the ace of clubs. Making four spades on the nose.

It might seem that nothing untoward happened. Not so. A grievous error was committed and at the very first trick. West's poor choice of opening lead presented declarer with the contract.

It is dangerous, especially on opening lead, to attack with a singleton in declarer's second suit. That could easily kill a trick in partner's hand. Even if it does not, more often than not it will cost a tempo.

It is doubly wrong when you have length in the opponents' trump suit. A four-card holding always suggests a forcing game could be more profitable. Look what would have happened had West led the queen of diamonds. Declarer can win and draw trumps in four rounds, then go after hearts. When the defenders win the ace of hearts, they can force declarer's last trump with a diamond. As long as the defenders are careful to win the first club, declarer will be held to nine tricks.

Horoscope

SUNDAY, JANUARY 31, 1993

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You will be a great asset to any cause you choose to champion. Welcome an opportunity to become more deeply involved, both in work and love. A carefully chosen community project brings you favorable publicity. Beginning in May, creative endeavors will pay off handsomely. Your finances improve throughout the summer. September finds you trying to be more unselfish in your personal relationships. A stable domestic life is important to your well-being.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: baseball legend Jackie Robinson, actress Carol Channing, author Zane Grey, singer-songwriter Phil Collins.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The creative juices flow freely today — you feel ready for almost anything! Say "no" to invitations that cut into the time you and your mate want to spend alone.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You would be wise to postpone a business errand or special project; confusion is in the wind. Wait until all traces of trouble have blown over. A sermon brings home a message of hope.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Taking a calculated risk could pay big dividends now. You are able to accomplish something that no one else could do. Drive defensively if you must venture out this evening. Avoid drinking.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A creative or speculative venture can be launched in great style. Look forward to a splendid day for romance and heart-to-heart talks. Kindred souls meet and merge.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A fabulous day for getting together with family members and close friends. Group activities prove even more fun than anticipated. You resolve to do more entertaining at home.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Spending a carefree day with those you love will deepen your rapport. Mate is supportive. Tend to personal matters in the late afternoon. A creative project could result in additional income.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Many hands will lighten the workload today. Be appreciative. Evening is the best time for a heart-to-heart talk with your mate. You arrive at a new understanding.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A shared spiritual experience will bring you and a loved one closer together. Remain true to your high ideals. Stay within your budget if you dine out tonight.

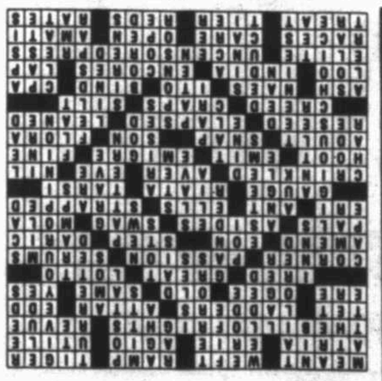

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A quiet private meeting could have a rejuvenating effect on a troubled relationship. Emphasize areas of agreement. Arriving at a more realistic budget is essential.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Draw close to your friends and voice your concerns. You could find that they share your secret desires. Avoid sounding arrogant in your dealings with low-level employees.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Get on the phone and arrange meetings with people who share your goals. Voicing controversial ideas publicly is risky. Emphasize your desire for calm discussion and analysis.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Prosperity can be found in new faces and places. Make sure you do things with style! A stormy encounter could leave you a wreck. Be conciliatory. Avoid rash acts and verbal battles.

Eddie Murphy's career 'Boomerangs' for the worse

By John Horn
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES — Eddie Murphy's Hollywood nickname is "Money." But these days he's sorting through a pile of problems, not riches.

Murphy hawked his latest movie, "The Distinguished Gentleman," on the syndicated television show "Regis & Kathy Lee" — a publicity ploy to which he didn't have to resort in the '80s when he starred in such blockbusters as "Trading Places," "Beverly Hills Cop" and "Coming to America."

To boot, his guest spot failed to help.

When counting is complete, "The Distinguished Gentleman" probably will gross less than Murphy's 1989 creative and commercial washout "Harlem Nights."

And now the 31-year-old actor-comedian finds his trademark vehicle on hold. In early January, Paramount Pictures suspended "Beverly Hills Cop III" on the eve of the sequel's filming, citing worries over a rushed schedule and huge budget.

Two of Murphy's three films before "The Distinguished Gentleman" — "Another 48 HRS." and "Harlem Nights" — delivered undistinguished returns. "Boomerang" was a modest success.

Some suggest Murphy's descent hinges on his abandonment of sassy jokes and his popular, foul-mouthed rebel image.

"What he's doing in ('The Distinguished Gentleman') and 'Boomerang' is to try to set himself up as a romantic lead and matinee idol," said Peter Rainer, a film reviewer for the Los Angeles Times and chairman of the National Society of Film Critics. "He's sort of in a bind. Because what's best about him as a performer is his early funny stuff. . . . He's trying to do it all, and it just gives a lie to everything."

Reginald Hudlin, who directed "Boomerang," said Murphy could prove the naysayers wrong.

"Eddie is as funny as he ever was," Hudlin said. "He's a guy with an incredible amount of depth," said Hudlin, who pointed out that Murphy hasn't relied on his "Saturday Night Live" characters during his film career. "I look forward to a second decade of Eddie Murphy."

Certainly, Murphy's first decade was relentlessly fruitful. He established himself early, when at age 15 Murphy showcased an Al Green impersonation at a talent night at the Roosevelt Youth Center in New York.

The Brooklyn native captured national attention in 1981 on NBC's "Saturday Night Live," making $750 a week in his first season.

He set himself apart with a broad range of comic characters, including unctuous pitchman Velvet Jones, ghetto hood Mister Robinson, "Our Gang" veteran Buckwheat and a hateful Gumby.

By 1984, he was the show's top star, collecting $30,000 an appearance.

His first feature film, 1982's "48 HRS.," cast him as a fast-talking con who helps capture a ruthless criminal and grossed $75.9 million. His talents were on better display in 1983's "Trading Places" as a street hustler turned Wall Street insider. The movie grossed $90.4 million at domestic theaters.

Quickly, Murphy surpassed Richard Pryor as both the country's top comedian and top black actor.

He enjoyed enormous "crossover appeal," a Hollywood euphemism meaning his films attracted white patrons.

The first "Beverly Hills Cop," released in 1984, grossed $234.7 million. The 1987 sequel brought in $153.6 million. In both films, Murphy starred as Axel Foley, a wisecracking, no-rules cop from Detroit.

His concert appearances, featured in the 1987 movie "Eddie Murphy Raw," were misogynist, vulgar, homophobic — and a complete smash. The film grossed $50.5 million after being made in several days with minimal production costs.

With the fame came a hurricane-sized ego. He visited nightclubs with contingents of bodyguards and got into barroom brawls. He moved into an $8 million home. He wrote, directed, produced and starred in "Harlem Nights," an outright artistic disaster.

Murphy branched into popular music with limited results. His first albums, "How Could it Be" and "So Happy,' drew mixed reviews and modest sales. Early this year, Motown will release a music album from Murphy titled "Love's Alright," including the single "I Was a King."

As a producer, Murphy made the 1991 situation comedy "The Royal Family." Less than a month after its debut on CBS, the series' star, Redd Foxx, died of a heart attack. The show lasted from September 1991 to May 1992.

Murphy's ego and erratic work habits have galvanized Hollywood sentiment against him, various industry executives say. Others say his smart-mouthed hustler routine just isn't funny anymore and he has failed to grow as an actor.

On the "Boomerang" set, for example, he rarely showed up on time during the 13-week shoot and kept director Hudlin waiting outside his trailer, said sources who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Others, including director Spike Lee, report he assigned family, friends and even a bodyguard nicknamed Fruity to key positions in his production company, bringing business meetings to a standstill because the staff had scant Hollywood experience.

"I haven't been around him for five years," said one senior executive who worked with Murphy on three hit films. "And God knows I'd like to keep it that way."

Lee, speaking not too long ago about Murphy's production company, said: "Everyone he's got working there is related to him!"

Murphy himself has admitted making bad choices.

"The movies that the media dumped on deserved to be dumped on," he said in a group interview last year. "'Another 48 HRS.' is not a good movie. 'Harlem Nights' is not a good movie. I wasn't true to who I was as an artist. I was walking through a movie while my head was in another place, or I was doing a movie for the wrong reason."

The decline in Murphy's popularity couldn't come at a worse time for Paramount, where Murphy has made all but one of his movies and is in the middle of a multifilm contract. Paramount had a 10.1 percent share of the 1992 movie market — next-to-last among major studios.

After years of false starts, Paramount hoped to begin filming on Murphy's "Beverly Hills Cop III" so the film could be ready by summer. (The first "Beverly Hills Cop" ranks as the eighth-highest grossing film of all time. The sequel is in the Top 30.)

But the latest film's hurried shooting schedule and its $65 million preliminary budget — including $15 million for Murphy — forced Paramount to put the project on hold for at least two months. About 100 people were laid off.

The movie is to be directed by the once-hot "Coming to America" maker John Landis, also reeling from a series of flops like "Innocent Blood," and "Sinbad."

COUNTRY: Group to play in Midland

suing a songwriting career.

Thomas, who is from Fort Myers, Fla., began his career playing in local rock bands. In 1973, he moved to Los Angeles where he landed work with a variety of artists including Mac Davis, Rick Nelson and The Hudson Brothers. Then, in 1987, he moved to Nashville. Less than a week after arriving in Music City, he met Vince Gill. The next two years he spent working for Gill. Thomas was playing with Emmylou Harris when he received the call from Brown to put together a band.

"We all met face to face at Fanfare about four years ago," Herndon said. "We were off and running from that point on. We rehearsed the next day. This is definitely a sound. Tony Brown told us, 'I had no idea you would have the harmonies you have.'"

Herndon pointed out that McBride & The Ride has three strong individuals leading the group.

"I've had my own groups out here in Arizona," he said. "Terry and Billy are also leaders. A lot of people sort of look at us as one guy and couple of side men. We really have a three way partnership. We are all leaders. We all have a lot of input about what goes into our records.

"A lot of people also think, 'These guys don't really play on their own records,' and we do. All of us play and sing on the records. What they hear live is pretty much what's out there on the records."

Side-men with McBride & The Ride are Joe Rogers, steel guitar, and the newest member, pianist Jeffrey Roach.

McBride is established as a singer, steel guitar player and songwriter and Herndon has been the vocalist in numbers previously released by McBride & The Ride. The next album, "Hurry Sundown," will feature Thomas's debut as a singer. He will sing "Hangin' In And Hangin' On," co-written by Herndon, McBride and Thomas.

"It's a big step for us, sort of getting in the door there with our own material," Herndon said. "It's very important.

"These days you really have to create your own music in order to stand out. You've got to have something that says something.

"There are artists that don't write their own material. George Strait, I don't know that he's written anything and I love the things he's chosen to record. You can do it that way.

"I'd like to be able to go the other route. I know I have it in me. I've gotten a lot of inspiration from Terry. He inspired me to write more, and I knew he has inspired Billy.

"We've all inspired each other in a lot of different areas — musically we've been an inspiration to him. It's a real equal thing. That's the beauty of this group."

An Arizona resident when he's not on the road, Herndon feels he is lucky to be able to do what he loves for a living.

Herndon, who lost his father some years ago, said life has taught him a couple of important lessons.

"Always make the best of what you've got and be happy with it. Don't take your health for granted because one day you're here and the next day you're not. Stay happy because that's really all we have in this life. It's not how many things you own. It's the life that you lead and how happy you are leading it I've come to find out."

'Ghostwriter' stars are old hands at reading

By Frazier Moore
Associated Press Writer

Set in a gritty inner-city neighborhood, this TV-based literacy project throws up mysteries for its young cast to solve — with the help of a secret, invisible ghost who communicates only through the written word. To get the clues . . . these junior sleuths must read them.

NEW YORK — Is reading fun?

"It depends on the book," says Sheldon Turnipseed.

"Certain books are good," Blaze Berdahl agrees — "and certain books are bad."

Well, of course. But it's the sort of distinction only committed readers would be hip enough to make.

Fifteen-year-old Sheldon and Blaze, 12, are among the half-dozen young stars of PBS' "Ghostwriter" who are firing up other kids to read.

Airing every Sunday (check local listings), "Ghostwriter" is produced by Children's Television Workshop, which bills this new $21 million effort its largest since "Sesame Street" came down the pike more than two decades ago.

Set in a gritty inner-city neighborhood, this TV-based literacy project throws up mysteries for its young cast to solve — with the help of a secret, invisible ghost who communicates only through the written word. To get the clues, which might appear anywhere from the pages of notebooks to a computer screen, these junior sleuths must read them.

And to play along, the targeted audience — 7- to 10-year-olds — must read the clues, too. That's the show's charm and strategy.

Besides 42 half-hour episodes, the "Ghostwriter" campaign includes a magazine with teacher's guide distributed free to schools, low-priced "Ghostwriter" paperbacks and even tie-ins with youth clubs for further activities.

It's all a pretty big deal, and Sheldon and Blaze are happy to meet recently after school (he is in 10th grade, she is in 7th) to fire up a reporter.

The site: Planet Hollywood, where, over cheeseburgers, the pair gamely holler their responses to the throbbing accompaniment of Olivia Newton-John and Queen.

"I like school," says Sheldon, who is wearing a T-shirt and a first try at a mustache. "My friends are really happy to have me back."

But after his absence doing "Ghostwriter," in production full time during much of 1992, do his schoolmates treat him differently?

"Oh, no. For them, the show is just another thing to kid me about."

Blaze, a bright-eyed charmer with long brown hair and hoop earrings, reports her favorite class is music, where she is taking up the French horn.

Her professional background reaches all the way back to baby modeling, she says. She has done lots of commercials and even appeared in the 1989 film "Pet Sematary."

She also skis and collects perfume bottles, 16 so far.

They both watch TV, of course. Blaze singles out "Mystery Science Theater 3000" on Comedy Central, and Sheldon likes "Star Trek: The Next Generation." Which figures.

"For a long time — a long time in my lifetime is about 8 years — I've wanted to be an astronaut," he says. "Maybe when I grow up I'll work for NASA, since I'm good in math and science."

Like Sheldon, Blaze isn't set on a show biz career.

"I keep switching back and forth about what I want to be," she says. "At the moment, maybe a podiatrist. It's an OK-paying job, and I think it would be fun. It's good to have a real job."

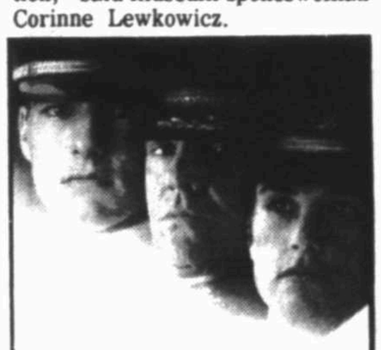

But the talk inevitably comes back to the skill and pastime "Ghostwriter" champions.

Original Jumbo makes big splash at museum

NEW YORK (AP) — He's big, he's bony, and he's back — Jumbo the elephant, once the toast of P.T. Barnum's greatest show on Earth, made his skeletal return for an appreciative crowd at a museum.

Jumbo's towering skeleton, which was donated to the American Museum of Natural History by Barnum in 1887, was back on display there for the first time since 1975. Jumbo will be standing tall through Oct. 31.

"We're bringing him out because, first of all, Jumbo is a special and unique part of our collection," said museum spokeswoman Corinne Lewkowicz.
