AN ILL WIND(MILL) — Patrick McLaughlin holds wooden blades of an energy-saving windmill he wants to erect in the back yard of his Mechanicsville, Pa., home. Neighbors say it will be an eyesore. (AP Laserphoto)

Surly Neighbors Foil Windmill Project

MECHANICSBURG, Pa. (AP) — Patrick McLoughlin says he was just trying to do his bit. A windmill in the backyard, he figured, would help save energy and could cut his electric bills in half.

But his 50-foot, $3,500 wind machine is still in crates. The town zoning board has refused a permit for its assembly, and McLoughlin's neighbors have banded against him, complaining the contraption will be noisy, dangerous and ugly.

"People are scared that windmills are going to be built all over, and Mechanicsburg will look like a little Holland," said McLoughlin, a 36-year-old electrician.

"I really didn't think they'd object so much, because of the energy crisis and the idea that everybody should do their part," he said.

McLoughlin appealed the permit ruling because the zoning ordinance in this Harrisburg suburb specifically exempts windmills from height restrictions. The board is to rule on the appeal July 31.

McLoughlin, his wife, Kathleen, and their three children are not newcomers to energy conservation. They already use the sun instead of the stove to make tea, keep time clocks on their hot water heaters, live in an insulated frame house and cook on a woodstove.

McLoughlin made up his mind to erect the windmill on March 28. He lives about 10 miles from the Three Mile Island nuclear plant that leaked radioactivity that day.

"I figured this was really the time," he said, noting that it was worry about the cost of electricity that made up his mind, rather than any fear about nuclear danger. His home is electrically heated and McLoughlin says the monthly power bill is about $80 for 10 months out of the year.

When McLoughlin first announced his plans, formerly amiable neighbors grew surly. They began a campaign against him, he said, objecting to a microwave oven repair business he has run out of his home for nine years, protesting an addition to his house already approved by the zoning board and circulating a petition against the windmill.

Between the windmill and the wood stove, McLoughlin doesn't plan to buy heat for his home at all. He thinks the structure is "really pretty" and will be as quiet as a car passing by.

McLoughlin says he already has spent $1,000 on legal fees. "I don't want this to be a $20,000 windmill," he said. "That wouldn't save me any money. I never realized that I would have to go through so much hassle to do something like this."

Suggested Carter 'Breakdown' Flayed

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's cabinet shakeup brought charges from a Senate Republican leader Friday that Carter "might be having some kind of breakdown" and needs a rest from his job.

Sen. Ted Stevens of Alaska, the Senate's assistant GOP leader, said Carter "may be approaching some mental problem."

White House press secretary Jody Powell dismissed the statement as "not worthy of comment," and two Democratic Senate leaders took Stevens to task for his remark.

Stevens raised his charges during meetings with reporters and on the floor of the Senate. At one point he accused Carter of acting "in a very erratic manner" by firing cabinet members in a way that will require Congress to hold confirmation hearings on successors at the same time he wants quick passage of a "windfall profits" tax and other energy legislation.

"I don't think he's crazy but the pressures are so great that I'm worried that he might be having some sort of breakdown," Stevens told reporters.

When the Senate convened, Stevens took the floor and said, "I said to the press just prior to convening this morning that some of us are worried that he may be approaching some sort of mental problem — seriously — because of the pressures he has taken on in the Middle East, in Tokyo and generally with the world's problems and those of our own." He urged Carter to take a vacation.

But Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., Democratic Whip, said Stevens's remarks were "out of line, out of order and should not have been expressed. "Some people in Congress are losing their sense of proportion," he said.

Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., told reporters "I take friendly umbrage at this caustic comment ... I do not think the president needs a vacation on the basis of the implications that are made."

Changes 'Please' Carter

Adams, Schlesinger End Cabinet Shakeup

By HELEN THOMAS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter dismissed Energy Secretary James Schlesinger and Transportation Secretary Brock Adams Friday and said he is "well pleased" with the lightning purge that sacked five of his 12 cabinet officers.

"There is absolutely no doub in my mind that I and my administration will now be better able to serve this country and to resolve those problems and meet those challenges which I described to the American people in my address Sunday," he said.

Looking grim, Carter made a brief appearance in the White House prss room to ring down the curtain on the two-day cabinet house-cleaning that shocked and angered many members of Congress.

In the finale of the purge, Carter fired Adams less than 24 hours after the transport chief publicly defied the authority of the new White House chief of staff, Hamilton Jordan, and questioned Carter's own commitment to energy-saving transportation policies.

Carter also accepted the resignation of Schlesinger, who has take the brunt of public fury over gasoline shortages, and nominated Deputy Defense Secretary Charles Duncan, a Houston millionaire, to succeed him.

Planting his feet wide apart at the press room lectern and speaking in a slightly trembling voice, Carter said the "major changes" he has made in the cabinet "are all constructive and the transition from one leader to another in each case will be orderly and properly conducted.

"I do not expert any further resignations from the cabinet," he said, pledging to fill vacancies left by the shakeup — at the Transportation and Housing and Urban Development departments — "without delay."

"I am well pleased with all the changes," he said. "Every single change has been a positive change."

He expressed his "thanks" to the five officers turned loose, appealed for "the full support of the American people" and walked out staring straight ahead and ignoring reporters' questions.

—Schlesinger, 50, out as energy secretary in favor of Duncan, 52, a former president of Coca Cola. Duncan told reporters "I think the American public is coming to realize that we do have an energy crisis." While gasoline lines are easing, he said, "there is always the possibility they will return." He said he has "friends" in the Texas oil industry but "no business ties of consequence" with them.

—Adams, 52, ousted one day after announcing he might quit even though Carter wanted him to stay. He set conditions that infuriated the White House and one administration source told UPI, "nobody gives orders to the president." Officials said Navy Secretary W. Graham Claytor will fill in as interim transportation secretary until a permanent successor is named. Claytor will then succeed Duncan in the No. 2 Defense post.

—HEW Secretary Joseph Califano fired and slated to be replaced by HUD Secretary Patricia Harris, chiefly because of "frictions" between Califano and the Jordan-led senior White House staff. His account of the ouster led Friday to caustic rebuttals from presidential press secretary Jody Powel.

—Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal dismissed in favor of G. William Miller, a like-minded conservative economist who heads the Federal Reserve Board. Although Blumenthal insisted he asked to be released, his departure was widely interpreted as a firing motivated by the same "frictions" as the Califano ouster.

—Attorney General Griffin Bell allowed to resign and be replaced by the man of his choice, Deputy Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti. Bell, a close Carter confidant, had long since asked permission to return to Georgia and seemed nettled that his departure was lumped with the rest.

Of all those turned loose, Schlesinger

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

THE LUBBOCK Property Owners Association claims a state tax reform bill didn't pass the legislature, but Mayor Dirk West says someone better tell that to Gov. Bill Clements — he signed the legislation into law last month.

Property owners attorney Warren Goss said at a general meeting of the organization Thursday night that the tax reform bill sponsored by Rep. Wayne Peveto of Orange has no effect on three charter amendments proposed by association because the bill has not yet passed the legislature.

Passage of the bill, he said, was tied to a constitutional amendment Texans will vote on in November 1980.

But, West says the constitutional amendment only will affect the participation of Texas county governments in single appraisal districts as mandated by the bill and will have no effect at all on other taxing entities,which must begin complying with the law's provisions this fall.

The Peveto bill became a subject of controversy after West said the tax reform law negates the effect of the three property owner charter amendments.

The tax revolt organization has petitioned the city council to call an election on the three amendments which would freeze the tax rate at the present $1.12 per $100 valuation, limit the assessment ratio to the present 60 percent of market value and require voter approval for any increase in the tax rate or assessment ratio.

But the Peveto bill prohibits the use of assessment ratios after Jan. 1, 1981, and requires taxes to be levied on 100 percent of market value, West said.

If the property owner amendments were submitted to voters at a cost of about $20,000 and approved, they would have an effect for only one tax year before that portion of the state legislation must be implemented, the mayor said.

West said his discussion of the Peveto bill and its effect on the proposed charter amendments "was not my interpretation, but the law."

The constitutional amendment election in 1980 "applies only to counties. The city, school district, water districts and hospital districts are now completely covered by this state law which will require 100 percent valuation from a single taxing authority," West said.

"As for the state legislature redojng this law in special session," mentioned as a possibility by Goss, West said "that's just not going to happen."

Peveto has been "working on the bill and revising the bill for many, many years" before getting it through the legislature "by a large margin" earlier this year, West said.

Gov. Clements, who sets the agenda for any special session, "heartily endorses the Peveto bill," West said, which "eliminates any likelihood of it being changed."

Members of the city staff have attended a briefing session in Austin on the bill, West said, and he talked with state legislators from this area "to make sure I had a good understanding of the legislation before I made any statements."

"We don't make state laws, but we dang sure have to follow them," he emphasized.

South Plains Drying Out

SOUTH PLAINS residents enjoyed a mild but humid Friday while the greater part of the state was hit by another round of showers and thunderstorms that drenched an already soggy Southwest Texas and set off flash flood warnings.

Lubbock's humidity reading hovered around 60 percent most of the day and the mercury topped out at 79 degrees.

National Weather Service forecasters call for a high today in the mid-80s, dropping to the mid-60s tonight, with a chance of scattered showers early this morning.

Heavy thunderstorms Friday pounded the Houston area, South Texas from San Antonio to Kerrville to Cotulla, Southwest Texas from Ozona to El Paso and East Texas from Lufkin to Dallas.

Friday afternoon 24-hour rainfall totals included 4.06 inches at Austin, 3.27 at Waco, 1.00 at Presidio, .77 at Alice and .70 and .65 at San Angelo and College Station.

Presidential Aspirant Confident

By RUTHANNE BROCKWAY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

BEN FERNANDEZ, who is seeking the Republican nomination for president, admits the Hispanic vote alone won't put him in the White House, but claims it is the base of the voting strength that will make him the first Spanish-surnamed president of the United States.

FERNANDEZ

It was his second appearance in Lubbock within two months and again he heavily emphasized his personal rags-to-riches experience.

Fernandez says he identifies with migrant workers and farm laborers because of his own poverty beginnings. He was born in a railroad boxcar in Kansas to illiterate Mexicans who were in the country illegally.

Today, he estimates his personal worth at $1.2 million and preaches the gospel of free enterprise. He attributes his success to his parents, whom he said "pounded into our heads" the American work ethic.

Fernandez, who claims the country needs an economist as president, says he can get America back on the right track by providing strong leadership, fighting Communist aggression in other countries and depending on the private sector and the free enterprise system to rebuild the inner cities and solve energy problems.

He blamed the federal government for inflation and vowed to stop it by vetoing deficit-creating legislation and by balancing the federal budget by cutting "silly programs."

Fernandez said cost overruns in the government are due to poor planning, inefficiency and waste. His background in marketing, finance, management and economics, he said, will enable him to solve those problems.

"Lord knows we need an economist in the White House," he said. "I'm the best qualified man to lead the United States."

Fernandez called Carter "a nice man but he's in over his head" and said Carter bungled relations with Mexico by insulting the Mexican president and making jokes about Montezuma's Revenge.

Encouraging solar energy industry is important, he said, but added, "The bottom line is Mexico" because of its vast oil reserves.

"They have gas and oil and we need it," he said. "We have jobs and they need them."

Fernandez says he has good rapport with the Mexican government and would take advantage of "a marvelous opportunity to develop relations with our neighbor to the south."

He said he would invite the president of Mexico to join him in establishing a bilateral commission to study problems that affect both nations and find solutions mutually beneficial.

Fernandez described Mexico as a free enterprise country with "heavy overtones of socialism."

While he said, "I'm an advocate of human rights," he also said, "It's none of our business to tell another country what to do."

A Republican who described himself as closer to the Ronald Reagan right wing of the party than the left wing, Fernandez said "I wouldn't be afraid to press the button to fight Communist aggression."

He said it wouldn't require involving the U.S. in a war to fight communism. Instead, he proposes a three-part technical assistance program.

"At the invitation of a government, we would help the country help itself," he said, explaining that assistance would be given to develop raw materials, provide housing and employment.

The three-part plan would develop the country's economy, provide mass housing and develop education systems "so they could develop a middle class."

He described himself as a friend of the farmer, but opposes 100 percent parity.

"You can't have it both ways," he said. "The free enterprise system involves risk. The farmer rolls the dice with the hope of making a profit. You

Man, Woman Dead In Club Shooting

A MAN AND a woman were fatally shot and another man was injured about 10 p.m. Friday at the Dos Amigos night club in the 400 block of Quirt Avenue.

Names of the dead were unavailable at a late hour. Justice of the Peace Charles Smith ruled homicide in both deaths.

Candido Rodriquez, 45, of 2102 10th St. suffered a gunshot wound in the left shoulder. He was taken by EMS to Health Sciences Center Hospital, where he was listed in satisfactory conditon late Friday.

Texan To Leave Board Post As Educational Coordinator

AUSTIN (AP) — Chairman Harry Provence of the Texas College Coordinating Board announced Friday he will resign Sept. 1 after 14 years on the panel that oversees state public higher education.

Provence will retire Oct. 1 as editor-in-chief of the Waco Tribune-Herald. He will be 65 on Sept. 9 and plans to travel overseas for a year.

"It's (the board) been the highlight of my 64 years on this earth and I wouldn't take a jillion dollars for it," Provence told the board at its quarterly meeting.

He was a charter member of the board, created in 1965 and first appointed by Gov. John Connally. Provence was reappointed by Gov. Preston Smith and named chairman by Gov. Dolph Briscoe.

The departing chairman said he talked with Gov. Bill Clements on Thursday and told him he wanted to step down. Provence said he suggested Clements replace him with someone "not overly biased toward any one" state university or college.

Provence said the board made overall progress in higher education but constantly suffered one irritant.

"The main blister in this whole business is the Legislature keeps the salary of the commissioner of education as a line item in the budget," he said. "We have to keep passing the hat to hire and keep a qualified commissioner."

Any salary increase for Commissioner Kenneth Ashworth must be appropriated by the Legislature. Board members have raised additional funds from private individuals and foundations to supplement it.

For the 1979-1980 fiscal year, the commissioner's salary is $47,500. The board Friday approved a 5.1 percent increase, or $2,422 above that figure.

State colleges and universities frequently supplement their administrative officials' salaries, but Provence said they can rely on alumni and football revenues to raise money.

Provence's announcement came at the end of a three-hour board meeting.

Among major construction items approved were:

— Two, four-story dormitories at Texas A&M University costing a total of $7.3 million.

— An $18.6 million medical science building at Texas A&M.

— Renovation of a chemistrybuilding t the University of Houston, costing $1 million.

Harold Herndon, chairman of the board's planning committee, cautioned universities against hasty submission of new construction projects. He said of the 13 projects submitted this year as emergency items, the projected total cost was $38 million. Cost overruns brought the final figure to $52 million.

Herndon also said architects and engineers should pay special attention to energy-saving designs, especially movable windows.

During discussion of new degree programs, the board applauded efforts at both Midwestern State University in Wichita Falls and Texas A&I University in Kingsville to reduce course offerings and faculty positions due to declining enrollments.

Welfare Department Begins Job Eliminations

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Board of Human Resources voted Friday to eliminate more than 1,300 jobs from its massive agency over the next two years to satisfy the Legislature.

Board members established a new lay-off policy based on productivity instead of seniority and gave their OK to a 1980 operating budget that cuts its staff by 5 percent.

Another 5 percent reduction will be made in 1981 — dropping the number of authorized jobs from 13,800 to 12,455 by Aug. 31, 1981.

The 1980-81 general appropriation bill states the Legislature's intent that agencies "attempt to" reduce jobs by 5 percent a year.

A senior staff member said refusal to make the cuts could cause retaliation when the human resources budget goes before the 1981 Legislature.

The job-cutting will be made somewhat easier by the fact that the Legislature increased the number of authorized positions by 268 before mandating the cutback.

The operating plan by the board makes most of the initial cuts in administrative and support jobs.

At least 159 job reductions must come from increasing productivity and eliminating the "least needed" functions of the department.

When some 2,000 jobs were eliminated two years ago after the Legislature reduced funding, seniority was the chief factor that determined who was laid off and who stayed.

Assistant commissioner D.W. Bond said this resulted in "bumping" and caused front-line workers, who often have low seniority compared with those in administrative jobs, to "take the brunt" of the lay-offs.

This time, he said, persons in jobs that are "red-lined" for elimination will be evaluated and ranked by their supervisors.

Board Approves Loan Interest Change

By DAVID HURLBUT
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Texas college and university Coordinating Board Friday approved a change in the Hinson-Hazelwood Student Loan Program which may ease the pinch of rising interest rates for students in the program.

Coordinating Board division head Mac Adams said the Taxas Legislature approved a bill last spring which gave the board the authority to change interest rates on Hinson-HazelWood loans whenever it deemed necessary. Previously, the Coordinating Board could set the interest rates at the beginning of a school year, but those rates remained fixed throughout the year.

Adams said greater flexibility in setting interest ratas will enable the Coordinating Board to take advantage of a favorable market when the time comes to sell bonds to finance the loan program.

The state sells market bonds to obtain tthe money it loans to students in the program, Adams said. FoF a financier, the interest from these bonds is tax-free as long as the terms of the bond are met, Adams said.

One requirement is that the interest paid to the bond holder cannot be 1 1/2 points less than the interest on the loans charged to students, Adams said. In other words, if a bond is sold at an interest rate of 4 percent, students who receive loans from the sale of that bond will pay a maximum interest of 5 1/2 percent on their HInson-Hazelwood loans.

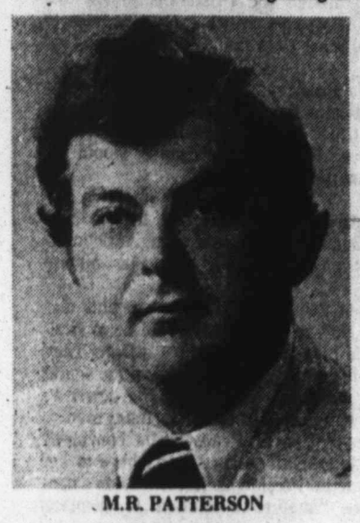

Adams said that if the state can take advantage of lower interest rates on the market, students will pay less interest on their loans. "February seems to be the best time for the sale of bonds, because the interest rates are generally lower," he said.

Currently, students are paying 7 percent interest on Hinson-Hazelwood loans. Adams said about 25,000 students will attend school this fall under the program, and about 135,000 loâns have been given since the program began 13 years ago.

Adams said the Coordinating Board is anticipating a demand for $10 million to $12 million in Hinson-Hazelwood loans for this academic year. Students who receive loans pay no interest on the money until nine months after they leave school.

At its meeting Friday, the Coordinating Board also changed requirements for educational institutions to qualify for the Hinson-Hazelwood program.

Adams said that schools which seek to award Hinson-Hazelwood loans to its students must be accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools. The board alao reqire requires now that the school's main campus be located in Texas.

Lad Discovers Dinosaur Bones, Confounds Dad

SIOUX FALLS, S.D. (UPI) — Nine-year-old Warren jhofmann, who knows his bones, told his dad the neck fragments he brought home in a sack were from a dinosaur. But Walter Hofmann Jr. disagreed, saying they were probably from a cow.

The boy was right.

At a construction site'b$i8,-z5outheastern Rapid City, Warren Hofmann found bones of a 110-million-year-old sea creature called a plesiosaur, which is similar in appearance to descriptions of the Loch Ness Monster.

"I'm proud of that boy — he certainly knows his bones," said grandmother Rubie Eddy of Rapid City.

"When he told us about the bones we went over and looked at them," Mrs. Eddy said. "Warren just loves stones and bones. And he reads books on dinosaurs. Isn't it funny that he knew what they were and his dad didn't?"

Mrs. Eddy said the boy was scouting for rocks with his 6-year-old sister, Elsie Marie. "He took that special hammer he has for digging up stones, along with his little bag, and they hauled the bones home to dad.

"Now he wants to be a professional bone hunter when he grows up," she added. "We're taking him to Hot Springs, where they have an ancient mammoth site. He'll enjoy that."

Dr. Phil Bjork, director of the Tech Museum of Geology, said the plesiosaur is an extinct sea creature which lived in a Cretaceous Sea covering South Dakota 110 million years ago.

Warren, who will be a fourth grader this fall, told Bjork he will donate the find to the museum.

"We're delighted about that," Bjorj said. "Although the specimen is not complete, it is the first record of a plesiosaur from Rapid City," which is in western South Dakota and the state's second largest community.

"The portions of the neck and possibly the skull will be in our referece collection where specimens are used for study and expanding knowledge about He said the museum already has bones of short-necked plesiosaurs from other areas of western South Dakota. They are similar to the specimen with a 30-foot-long neck, now on display.

AN EDITORIAL:

Tax Petitions 'Say Something'

ALTHOUGH A final, legal decision may still be out on the validity of the Lubbock Property Owners Association petitions for an election on three City Charter amendments, the whole scenario "says something" if City Hall is listening.

The LPOA submitted petitions, bearing the names of some 12,000 to 15,000 persons, last week calling for an election that in effect would put the citizen-taxpayer in the saddle on how and under what circumstances he is taxed.

The amendments, as proposed by the LPOA, would limit the tax rate to the current $1.12 per $100 valuation, freeze the current 60 percent of market value assessment ratio and require voter approval for any increases in the tax rate or ratio.

MAYOR DIRK West and the City legal department say that legislation passed at the recent session of the Legislature makes the petitions meaningless.

Mayor West refers to "tax reform" legislation sponsored by Rep. Wayne Peveto of Orange which will require all taxing entities in Texas to abolish assessment ratios and begin taxing on 100 percent of market value by Jan. 1, 1981.

"That takes us out of the business of setting percentages," the Mayor noted.

"It is mandated by law that schools, cities and all taxing entities in the county must be at 100 percent of valuation, whether we like it or not," West said. "Whether we call an election or not is immaterial when you look at what the state tax legislation sets forth clearly and plainly."

NOT BEING legal beagles or practitioners of the art of mumbo-jumbo, we bow to the Mayor's analysis.

But, being realists who know a tax hike when we see it, and being suspicious of almost any legislation designed to "aid the peepul," we have some thoughts on the LPOA request and the Mayor's comments.

In the first place, as Mayor West noted later in his summation on the petitions, he supports efforts to hold down taxes, saying he has "no argument with the 12,000 to 15,000 people who signed the petitions..."

The Mayor then took note of the fact that if the current $1.12 rate was maintained when valuations went to 100 percent, then the new law automatically would result in a 40 percent increase in city taxes.

"Certainly that's not what they want to do and certainly that's not what I want to do," he added.

THE MAYOR, saying he planned to stick to his one-term pledge, then went on to say that to even things out as they now stand, the City tax rate would have to be reduced to 67 cents at 100 percent of value.

If the Council doesn't adjust the tax rate downward, Hizzoner said, then "I'll form an association and be down here myself protesting."

We can buy that. And we can add a few amendments.

One, we would like to see Mayor West and his colleagues on the Council offer a "resolution of intent," saying that the rate will be adjusted to even out the ratio to match what it is when the new law takes effect.

REALIZING THAT this Council cannot commit its successor, we have another suggestion.

That is, when those who may seek the Mayor's post, or the two Council seats, which also come up, such candidates be pressed to state their firm position on the tax question.

Hopefully, the issue should not be an issue in a City election. But, if it is, then the people, including those thousands who signed the LPOA petitions have a right to know ahead of time "just where everybody stands."

Also for the record, we haven't always agreed with the LPOA leaders, in their tactics or aims. But, when "12,000 to 15,000 people" sign petitions asking City Hall for something, even in a city the size of Lubbock, that's a sizable voice which should not be ignored.

We long have advocated responsible and informed citizens—we emphasize those two qualifying words—getting involved in how their public affairs are handled.

Even if there is no election, the mere number of names alone "says something" to City Hall. We hope someone is listening.

AN EDITORIAL:

Crime In Decline?

A REDUCTION in crime rates should become apparent somewhere in the early 1980s because by then the bulk of Americans born during the postwar baby boom will be in their 30s, sayeth the gospel according to John Manson.

Manson, Connecticut's corrections commissioner, reasons thusly:

Statistics indicate that most crimes are committed by individuals under 30. With the lower birth rates of the '60s, the age groups reaching maturity in the wake of the baby boomers will be much smaller. Consequently, there will be fewer people around to commit crimes.

Therefore, the ebb/flow of population growth may accomplish what has been beyond the powers of law enforcement officers, the courts, sociologists and politicians.

Manson isn't the only one who thinks so.

The U.S. Bureau of the Budget, in a surprisingly contemplative segment of the overpoweringly statistical fiscal forecast for 1980, saw the coming decline of the high crime age group (ages 13 to 29) as one of the significant consequences of the aging baby boom.

VIRGINIA PAYETTE:

President For Six?

JIMMY CARTER may not realize it, but when he suggested that a single six-year term for Presidents might be a good idea, he was on pretty safe ground. A lot of the Founding Fathers thought so, too.

In fact, most of them wanted to stretch it to seven.

None of them, of course, ever dreamed that, had FDR lived out his fourth term, he would have held the job for an unprecedented 16 years. They would have been shocked right down to their shoe buckles by the 13 he did serve.

But Roosevelt's belief that only he could guide the nation through the Great Depression and World War II was partly what the delegates to the Constitutional Convention were afraid of all along.

Allowing a President to succeed himself, they thought, was almost as bad as electing him king. A popular Chief Executive could get re-elected over and over and there the country would be, stuck with another monarchy!

AS FAR AS history is concerned, there's nothing sacred about the four-year term. Anticlimactic though it may seem, it was even a last-minute choice.

When the 55 delegates met in Philadelphia that summer of 1787, it was all they could do to swallow the idea of a single executive officer. They had been thinking that maybe a committee would be nice, or maybe a council, with the power to run the new nation divvied up among many men.

But James Wilson of Pennsylvania convinced them a single executive figure didn't have to become an imperial President, that it wouldn't necessarily take "another revolution to displace him."

The debates heated up when the delegates got around to "the duration in office" part.

As James Madison later wrote to Jefferson, "a few would have preferred tenure only during good behavior. It was much agitated whether a long term with a subsequent and perpetual ineligibility, or a short term with a capacity to be re-elected should be fixed."

ON AN EARLY vote, the delegates chose a six-year term, with re-election. Later on, they voted again to keep it that way. But somewhere between that vote and the final draft, they "agitated much" and settled on four years, with re-election.

The fact that Benjamin Franklin wanted it swayed a lot of delegates. So did the revered figure of General Washington in the presiding officer's chair, although historians record he kept pretty quiet during the debate on how long the chief executive should serve and what his power should be.

Maybe he suspected that what the delegates had in mind was making him the country's first President. He was right. Everyone at the Convention considered him above suspicion and "not unseemly ambitious." They reminded each other that only a modest fellow would win a revolution and then go quietly back to his planting chores.

SO IT WAS practically taken for granted that, once they got the Constitution ratified, Washington would be everybody's choice.

Many of the delegates, in fact, would have been quite happy to have the general as President for the rest of his life. They trusted him the way every President since has wished for himself.

After it was all over, one of the more candid delegates, Pierce Butler of South Carolina, admitted that "the powers vested in the office would not have been so great had not many of the members cast their eyes towards General Washington as President and shaped their ideas by his virtue."

The concept of a six-year term, without re-election, continues to crop up every now and then. Usually from an incumbent.

IN 1805, THOMAS Jefferson suggested in a letter to his friend, John Taylor, that a single eight-year term was, to his mind, "more suitable." He was President at the time.

The reasoning behind everybody's endorsement of a six-year term seems to be that it takes longer nowadays to get the hang of the job and that no mere mortal can begin to get his desk cleared in just four years.

Not when he has to start campaigning for the next four a week after he takes the oath of office. Or when, no matter what he does, his political enemies suspect him of angling for future votes.

Once everybody knows it's a one-shot deal, the argument goes, a President can put politicking behind him and make the decisions he feels are the right ones, without worrying about how many votes they'll cost him in the next go-around.

The big disadvantage, as Rosalynn Carter pointed out after Jimmy's suggestion, is a fairly basic one: What do you do about a lousy President who still has three or four more years to go?

We've been down that road more than once. And it does, indeed, call up "much agitation."

GEORGE F. WILL:

West Bank Badlands

JERUSALEM—The stability of the western world, and therefore the fate of freedom, is linked to the fragile order in the Persian Gulf. Yet the subject that preoccupies diplomats is a small plot of land that resembles, in parts, the section of South Dakota called the Badlands.

The plot of land is the West Bank. It is a preoccupation the region and the world can ill afford.

Several Gulf states are ruled by families similar to the Pahlavi family, formerly of Iran.

Those states as well as Jordan, Saudi Arabia, Egypt and Israel have a common interest in resisting radicalism from the Soviet Union, Libya, Iraq and Iran.

And Jordan is still primarily to blame for the fact that the West Bank is a distraction from pressing dangers in the Gulf and an obstacle to collaboration against radicalism.

Of course Israelis argue incessantly about the West Bank, as about everything else. Political argument is to Israel what baseball is to America, a pastime that expresses national character.

Israeli democracy confirms the axiom, "Two Israelis, three factions." But there is a core consensus: No conceivable Israeli government could ban all Jewish settlements or remove all Israeli troops from the West Bank.

The Carter administration believes that Menachem Begin in power is no bargain, but the alternative, which is Begin in opposition, might produce a paralyzed government.

THE BEGINNING of wisdom about Israeli politics is this: Begin did not start the West Bank settlements, a Labor government did. And a Labor government did not yield the Sinai, Begin did. But this past is not a simple prologue.

Anwar Sadat has been charming in public and tough at the negotiating table. Begin has been the opposite. Sadat has stayed in the peace process because he got, almost immediately, a pledge of complete return of the Sinai.

But the Sinai transaction is no model for dealing with the West Bank. The problems are: Begin is Begin; King Hussein is not Sadat; and the West Bank is not the Sinai in military or ideological significance.

To Begin, the Sinai concerns strategy, but the West Bank concerns the integrity of the nation. The Sinai settlement may expose Israel to risk; a West Bank settlement might diminish Israel.

SADAT ARDENTLY wanted the Sinai back. Jordan's Hussein, a non-Palestinian king of a Palestinian state (a state with the Palestinian majority) may be of two minds about bringing into his kingdom 1.1 million West Bank and Gaza Strip Palestinians who feel little attachment to him.

Hussein's base of support is among east Jordanians, whose coolness toward Palestinians is reciprocated.

There is, today, a kind of de facto peace between Israel and Jordan. Tourists and trade flow across the open bridges over the Jordan river.

Jordanian forces police the border to prevent terrorist attacks on Israel that might provoke retaliation against Jordan. The Jordanian government administers some social services on the West Bank.

THE MOST likely solution to the West Bank problem is, at the moment, unlikely, and would look a lot like a problem. It would be a "two borders" policy for Israel.

There would be a "security border" along the Jordan River and a political border along the 1967 border, somewhat altered.

That is, put Jordan's flag on Israel's 1967 borders and put a thin line of Israeli soldiers on the river and on the line of high points between the river and the 1967 borders.

Begin's "autonomy" plan—"autonomy" for "people" but not "territory"—is a jerry-built, trouble-sowing administrative and political nightmare. To borrow a phrase from the folks on the West Bank of the Mississippi, "That dog won't hunt."

BUT THE Camp David accords require some plan, and no plan will accomplish much until Hussein comes to the table.

It has been said that the art of diplomacy is to stay "five minutes ahead of the storm." Serious storms in this region are apt to rise, without warning, around the Persian Gulf.

The storms could engulf the region, so Jordan is a potential victim of its own refusal to help remove the distraction of the West Bank issue.

Until Jordan joins the peace process, Israel's policy can be expressed in Arthur Koestler's words: Pray for time and play for time.

ANDREW TULLY:

We The People

WASHINGTON—The day after President Carter's televised speech on the energy crisis, an aide had this to say about his boss:

"I hope Jimmy is right about this country. He really believes that basically we are a good and moral people." He shook his head. "But I don't know. Morally, we are in pretty bad shape. We've managed to make the word me infamous."

So the question may be whether Jimmy Carter is fooling himself in depending upon us the people to rescue the country from crisis.

It seems safe to say that most of us want to be decent, moral people. But, alas, that is not what America is today. We are, in fact, a dirty-shirt country, beset by the gutter philosophy of every man for himself.

GIVEN THE atmosphere, the cheating and profiteering that were the fruits of those long gasoline lines were inevitable.

Still, there is Jimmy Carter, a believer in the people. And, give or take Carter's occasional political ploys, I would count him a moral man.

It was vintage Jimmy Carter when he appealed to us: "Let your voice be heard. Whenever you have a chance, say something good about our country."

If ever a nation needed the injection of a little corn from its President, this is that time, because in fact all he offered in that extraordinary speech was hard work and sacrifice, and that will take a lot of decency, a lot of morality.

Of his tour, he said, "I tried to emphasize everywhere I went the concepts of morality and decency and goodness and friendship...The trip symbolized what America is, what America wants to be."

Jimmy Carter, of course, has always looked on our bright side. But his energy speech showed that he has lost a lot of his innocence about himself. In an unprecedented performance, he pleaded guilty to flunking leadership.

He was admitting in effect that thinking wholesome thoughts and saying your prayers every night are no substitutes for getting down on the battlefield and fighting for what you think is right.

HE MIGHT also have confessed that he has done a lousy job of establishing a comfortable working relationship with Congress.

Instead he cast Congress in the role of whipping boy for Main Street, a Congress he described as "twisted and pulled in every direction by hundreds of well-financed and powerful special interests...Often you see paralysis, stagnation and drift. You don't like it, and neither do I."

Of course we don't like it. But Congress will not like it if Jimmy Carter continues to hold it up for ridicule. He's got to work with those men and women on Capitol Hill, and he cannot do so if he suggests that they aren't quite as moral as he is.

ART BUCHWALD:

Patient Doesn't Mind Needling By Doctors

KUNMING, China—There are many ways to see China. If you are a tourist you get to go to museums, palaces and theaters.

If you travel with the Secretary of HEW, Joe Califano, you get to see a lot of brain operations.

The Chinese are very proud of performing brain operations with acupuncture. That and Peking Duck are their main specialties, and each hospital wanted to prove they could do it better than the one we had just visited.

In Kunming, the doctors permitted Califano to talk to a man while he was being worked on. It's hard to believe but the patient was wide awake and in control of all his faculties as he conversed with the secretary.

As I watched, I couldn't help thinking what the man would say when he got back to his commune that evening for dinner, with his head in bandages.

"WELL, WU LING, what did you do in Kunming today?"

"I had a brain operation."

"What a great honor. How were you selected?"

"I was walking past the hospital on the way to the Chinese Herb Pharmacy, and two doctors came out and said, 'If you have nothing better to do would you like to stop in for a brain operation? It won't take long and it will help Chinese-American friendship.'

"I explained that I had several errands to make and suggested they find someone else, but they told me this wasn't an ordinary brain operation.

"It was to be performed for a visiting delegation of important Americans, headed by their Minister of Health.

"THEY TOLD me it was also going to be covered by ABC and NBC television as well as correspondents from the New York Times, the Washington Post, and the Wall Street Journal.

"Well, that changed the picture as far as I was concerned and I said, 'Count me in.'

"They took me inside, gave me a glass of hot tea and before I knew it I was lying on the operating table.

"Peering at me through glass windows in the ceiling were at least two dozen Americans, including their Minister of Health."

"You're making all this up, Wu Ling."

"May Chairman Mao strike me dead if I'm lying. The doctors started sticking needles into me, and before you knew it I could feel nothing. Then one of them started to cut off the top of my head."

"IT DIDN'T hurt?"

"Of course not. My head felt a little cool for a few moments, but I wasn't uncomfortable. But I haven't told you the best part. While they were sawing away, the doctors invited the Minister into the operating room to talk to me."

"I thought we weren't supposed to talk to foreigners after the March 1 edict."

"They told me it was perfectly all right. Patients having brain operations are not covered by the new law."

"What did the Minister ask you?"

"He asked me how I was feeling, and I told him 'fine.'"

"Then he asked me if I would like to visit the United States. I told him I'd like to very much because I knew the Americans were true friends of the People's Republic, and it was important for our Four Modernizations' Plan to have trade and technical assistance from the United States to further normalization between the two great nations. The doctors liked that."

"DID THE Minister say anything else?"

"Yes. He told me a brain operation such as I was having would cost at least $3,000 in the United States, which is over 4,000 yuan, but he hoped to cut it down to $2,900 in his new health bill.

"Then he asked me if I had gotten a second opinion before I agreed to the operation?"

"And what did you say to that, Wu Ling?"

"I said, 'You've got to be kidding.'"

Q. NAME THE prize fighter who knocked himself out with a right to his own jaw?

A. Believe you refer to C. D. "Bigboy" Blalock of Louisiana State University. In the early 1930s, this was. Bigboy at 6-foot-6 was taking on a stocky fellow from Mississippi State.

In the second round, Bigboy let loose a roundhouse. The Mississippi man stepped in. His head caught Bigboy's arm inside the elbow. Like a lever, the head nudge popped the haymaker. Bigboy's arm completely encircled the other's head and connected full force on Bigboy's own chin.

He staggered, grabbed the rope, walked almost all the way around the ring, let go of the rope, and fell flat. It was over.

Every answer is a rhyming pair of words (like FAT CAT and DOUBLE TROUBLE), and they will fit in the letter squares. The number after the definition tells you how many syllables in each word. Governor Reviews Energy Proposals

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements said Friday the odd-even system has "taken the pressure off" gasoline sales in metropolitan areas but 78-degree thermostat settings might do more harm than good.

"It's going to work hardships on some," Clements told a news conference about President Carter's decree of 78 degrees in government and public buildings. 'It's going to make work efficiency go down. ... Some people may just not be physically able to do it."

Clements said reports of gasoline availability shows "our crunch on the gasoline situation has eased in the metropolitan areas and the 17 counties where the odd-even system is in effect."

Clements said he had not transferred any gasoline from rural counties to metropolitan areas as he once said he might.

"Our studies showed there is an amount that could be moved from rural areas, but the distributors were reluctant to do it and bucked the problem back to me, and I find that I am reluctant to do so also," Clements told his weekly news conference. "As a result there has been no gasoline or diesel moved from rural to urban areas and no action in that regard."

Clements said he was still convinced that Texas oil producers are producing 100 percent of their capacity and "I am convinced some of our oil fields are being overproduced."

He said he based his statement on his personal knowledge of the oil business and his contacts in the industry. He said oil firms do not report the potential output of their wells and the Texas Railroad Commission does not have such data.

"I think we may have a right to demand such figures but there are some in our group that disagree," he said of the Texas Energy Advisory Council, which includes most major statewide officials.

"We are trying to determine if we want to go to the companies and try to force them to reveal their production figures ... If we are overproducing there could be a loss of pressure in the reservoirs that would leave oil in place that never could be recovered."

On other subjects, Clements said:

— He is glad President Carter fired Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger — "he was miscast in that role."

— He is waiting for a report from a special task force on Texas public school education but he personally does not think the State Board of Education system is the best way to handle Texas schools. He said it might be better to have an appointed board rather than one elected from each congressional district.

Clements Elated By Resignation

AUSTIN (AP) — "Good Lord, let's have a party,' Gov. Bill Clements said today when informed Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger had resigned.

"He was miscast in the role and I'm sympathetic with him in that sense," said Clements, who was deputy secretary of defense when Schlesinger was secretary of that department.

"I am glad Mr. Carter replaced him and I think I know who it will be — Charles Duncan of Houston (deputy secretary of defense)," Clements told a news conference.

"Duncan is an outstanding individual and probably will do a good job. He has my confidence."

Texan Awaits Nod For Mexican Post

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bob Krueger, waiting for Senate confirmation of his nomination as ambassador-at-large for Mexico, says he is not worried about announced opposition to his appointment.

"I've seldom had 100 percent," the former Texas congressman said in an interview in his temporary State Department quarters.

Krueger lost a tight and bitter Senate race last fall to incumbent Republican John Tower, said he has no doubt he will be able to show the Senate Foreign Relations Committee the new position is necessary.

Two committee members have objected to the addition of an ambassadorial position, saying U.S.-Mexican relationship needs streamlining instead.

"The government needs one more ambassador-at-large about the same way the Senate needs a new office building. The fact is that there are already too many people working on our relations with Mexico and this as much as anything else probably accounts for the sad state of the relationship at this time," Sen. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., said.

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., said naming an ambassador-at-large is not the way to smooth the bumps in the U.S.-Mexican relationship.

Krueger, 43, of New Braunfels, said he has been told the confirmation hearing tentatively will be held Friday. The date depends on the committee's completion of its Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty hearings.

"I'm certainly looking forward to the position," Krueger said. "The expectation from the start was this was someone who was to be a coordinator of U.S. policy."

Krueger said a coordinator is necessary because issues concerning Mexico crop up in almost every federal agency. No other country presents the breadth of foreign policy issues that Mexico does, from river salinity to narcotics, immigration and energy, he said.

"I think the appointment reflects the key importance of U.S.-Mexico relations, not only now but for the future," Krueger said. He insisted that the appointmet is not a gesture to the importance of Mexico's new energy resources.

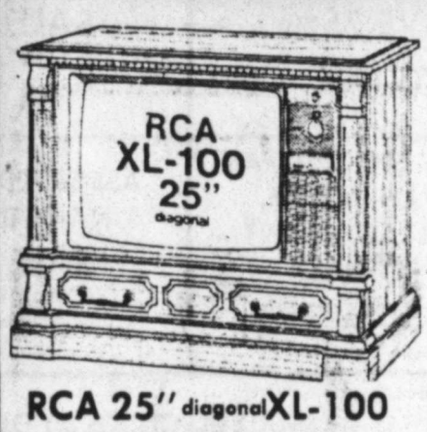

The new ambassador-at-large also will be working with the increasingly vocal Mexican-American community.

Krueger met Thursday with national leaders of Mexican-American organizations and said he was "very pleased" with the results.

Palace Guard Remains Intact During Purge

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — This was going to be an administration with no White House palace guard looking over the shoulders of Cabinet members. President Carter apparently has changed his mind about that.

For those government chieftains who have survived or emerged in Carter's Cabinet purge, there seems to be a message: If you like your job, it would be wise to get along with the inner circle of the White House staff.

"I would not form a secret White House palace guard," Carter said during his 1976 presidential campaign. "I would not have anyone within the White House try to administer the affairs of the executive branch."

At least part of that remains operative. Carter hasn't kept his palace guard a secret. His closest aides are the real power center of the administration. Hamilton Jordan is chief of staff. Press secretary Jody Powell and congressional liaison man Frank Moore are secure. Nearly half the Cabinet is gone.

Two of the casualties, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Joseph A. Califano Jr. and Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal, were marked for ouster because of friction with top Carter aides.

Califano said the president told him that was one of the reasons he was to go, and that another was to get the administration ready for the 1980 campaign. He also said Carter described him as the best HEW secretary in history.

Califano said he wasn't told just how his departure served the campaign goal. "I cannot divine their motivation," he said.

One theory is that the liberal Califano, who had waged an ardent campaign against cigarette smoking, had become a liability in the South, where Carter's home base does not appear nearly as secure now as it was in the last election.

Analysis

But it is hard to see how Patricia Roberts Harris, who will become the first black ever to head HEW, and who is at least as outspoken a liberal as Califano, will be any more of an asset among conservative southerners. Her promotion certainly should help Carter's standing with blacks and with women.

Whatever the political reasoning, Mrs. Harris is regarded as a team player. Califano wasn't. There were repeated reports of friction with the Carter staff at the White House. Califano didn't hit it off with Jordan. And Jordan, the new chief of staff, is not a good man to cross these days.

So, too, with Blumenthal. He'd been feuding with the White House inner circle for a long time. Sources close to Blumenthal said his troubles stemmed in large part from the fact that an arm of the Treasury pursued one of the most vigorous investigations into the financial dealings of Bert Lance, the Carter confidante who resigned as budget chief after his personal banking practices were challenged.

Lance now is under indictment on charges of bank fraud, conspiracy and misapplying bank funds.

Carter also called in the promised resignation of Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger Jr., who had said he knew he was a political liability and would get out before the 1980 campaign. He also had his troubles with some Carter aides and with Congress.

Attorney General Griffin B. Bell resigned, too, but he had announced earlier that he wanted out.

Transportation Secretary Brock Adams put a reverse spin on the process. Adams, a former Washington congressman with Senate ambitions, virtually invited the president to fire him by declaring his independence in the middle of the shakeup.

While he had done some wrangling with Jordan and other Carter aides, he's kept quiet about it. He said Thursday he had been told he could stay in the Cabinet. But he also was told he'd have to get rid of his top aides.

Adams then went public, announcing that he might resign unless he got administration commitments on transportation policy and an assurance of direct access to the president by members of the Cabinet. He made the same request of Carter personally on Friday.

Adams said that when he couldn't get the assurances he sought, he quit.

His demand runs afoul of the new system in which chief of staff Jordan is to decide which officials and which issues get to the president.

And when it was suggested that Adams would be answering to Jordan, he bristled. "I work for the president," he said.

Not any more.

For a man with political ambitions, a forced resignation from Carter's Cabinet may prove to have its advantages.

It isn't yet clear how the Cabinet upheaval is going to play politically, but it has drawn a chorus of adverse comments in Congress. And it hardly seems to buttress the presidential campaign for a revival of confidence.

Clements Studies Cabinet Shuffle

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Gov. Bill Clements says President Carter cabinet shuffle is a "planned political scenario."

"Carter is engaged in political strategy for the 1980 presidential campaign," said the Republican governor, a former deputy secretary of defense under Presidents Nixon and Ford.

"All his moves prove the point: (Patricia Roberts) Harris to HEW to help with the black population. (G. William) Miller to Treasury to help Carter on Wall Street."

Continued Self-Help Course Urged For Mexican-Americans

Texas Southwestern Bell Vice President Doyle Rogers urged Mexican-American businessmen to teach young people the value of productivity in spawning economic growth when he addressed the Texas Association of Mexican-American Chambers of Commerce convention here Friday.

"I urge you to continue on the course of self-help that you are on now," Rogers told the delegates and other visitors to the fourth annual convention, being hosted at the Lubbock Civic Center in conjunction with the first national meeting of the U.S. Hispanic Chamber of Commerce.

Rogers said the key to expanding Mexican-American entry into the business world is to provide young people with education, jobs and a realization of their purpose in life.

The number of Mexican-American entrepreneurs is small, Rogers said, partly because of barriers in the past. These barriers include the fact that many Mexican-Americans must start from scratch, are undercapitalized and suffer language barriers and bias, he said.

Although the Mexican-American business community probably will not gain everything it wants to right away, Rogers told convention participants that people are paying attention to their successes.

"You've cut your own portion of the economy," he said, adding that Mexican-American business is expected to generate about half a billion dollars in Texas alone this year.

Rogers congratulated the chambers of commerce on on their leadership and for the major role they have played in expanding economic growth.

Rogers said this period of world unrest, political problems, inflation and an energy crisis have caused the respectability of American institutions to be constantly under fire. But the small-business man must realize that profit is not a dirty word, he said.

Businessmen must look at profit as a reward for taking a risk into a business venture, even though profit sometimes contributes to a feeling of hostility toward business, Rogers said.

Rogers also urged conventioneers to actively involve themselves in the political process for the good of business growth and the Mexican-American race.

"Seek the fulfillment of your own special interest, but also work for the good of the entire system," he said.

Also present at the luncheon meeting at which Rogers spoke was Ernest Camacho, presidential appointee to the White House Commission on Small Business.

Camacho, who started off his remarks by joking that he hadn't been to Washington in a few days and was not sure he was still part of the White House, said legislators are looking toward minority communities more often for help in troubled situations.

Camacho said Mexican-American businesses must fight for the independence they need now and not for what they achieved in the past.

Restraining Order Nixed For Medical Documents

By KAY BELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Judge William Shaver dissolved a temporary restraining order against Dr. Milton Rowley after a brief hearing Friday afternoon in Shaver's 140th District Court.

Friday's hearing had been requested by Texas Tech University assistant football coach Sam Robertson, whose attorney filed a petition asking Shaver to issue a temporary injunction against Rowley to prevent him from "altering, changing or destroying" the medical records of Robertson's wife, Linda.

Mrs. Robertson, 35, died July 14 at Methodist Hospital, where she was taken following complications that arose during elective plastic surgery at Rowley's office on July 10, according to the petition.

The petition states that Robertson's attorney, Dicky Grigg of Austin, went to Rowley's office Monday to obtain copies of Mrs. Robertson's medical records but was told, "The medical records were not complete yet, and would not be complete until the autopsy report was returned."

Following the filing of Robertson's petition, Shaver issued a temporary restraining order against Rowley to prevent any changes in the medical records pending Friday's hearing.

During the 25-minute court session, Rowley took the stand and told Shaver that when Grigg asked for the records Monday, all the doctor had available was a dictated rough draft of the surgery he performed on Mrs. Robertson.

The transcript of that dictation was presented to the court and Grigg Friday, but Rowley added that all the records were not complete. A medication sheet which should show the type of medicine administered to Mrs. Robertson during the surgery when the "emergency situation" arose, Rowley testified, has not been completed because of the restraining order.

Under questioning from his attorney, Mike Worley, Rowley also said that the only changes made in Mrs. Robertson's medical records after Grigg's Monday request were "to make the report more complete and accurate."

Worley asked Shaver to deny the injunction request and dissolve the restraining order so that additional information may be added to Mrs. Robertson's records "so they can speak the truth."

Grigg, who was given copies of Rowley's medical records to date as well as Methodist Hospital records on Mrs. Robertson's treatment following the surgery, did not object to Worley's request.

Grigg also told the court, in response to a question by Worley, that neither Rowley nor any of his employees told the attorney they planned to alter or destroy Mrs. Robertson's records.

Scientists Expanding Knowlege Of Chlorophyll

By DONALD J. FREDERICK
National Geographic News Service

WASHINGTON — Chlorophyll — that ubiquitous green pigment so vital to life — has a new family tree.

Scientists have discovered several new and chemically different chlorophylls, a finding that could have profound effects on the world's future food supply, says the National Geographic News Service.

Perhaps the most remarkable of all chemicals, chlorophyll utilizes the sun's energy in a process called photsynthesis, which enables green plants to convert carbon dioxide and water into food and energy with oxygen as a byproduct. Chlorophyll is essential to almost all life on earth.

Plant scientists have long assumed that two chemically distinct chlorophylls simply designated "a" and "b" accounted for nature's miracle. It was believed the two were combined in a lipoprotein plant-cell membrane.

The lipoprotein membrane with its integrated chlorophylls is the fundamental structure that turns energy from the sun into chemical energy. Plant cells then convert the chemical energy into the foodstuff necessary for growth.

Recent findings have revised the thinking about this vital process. Scientists at the University of Illinois, for instance, have found three separate variations of a's and two b's involved in photosynthesis. Each is chemically distinct.

Further evidence indicates that as many as five more chlorophylls may also be present, three other a's and two other b's. Many experts now believe that both the a and b chlorophylls collect light, but only the a's transform it into chemical energy.

"All of these chlorophylls have a different role in photosynthesis," explained Dr. Constantin A. Rebeiz, a professor of plant physiology at the University of Illinois. "Now we're trying to find out preciously what each does." The research is funded by the National Science Foundation and the Illinois Agricultural Experiment Station.

The work under way may someday enable farmers to increase food production significantly.

Rebeiz believes that some of the newly discovered chlorophylls may be more beneficial than others in the food conversion process. Plant breeds might be able to emphasize a certain chlorophyll in the development of a hybrid corn, for instance, and the result could be a plant that makes greater use of light, water, and carbon dioxide, thereby increasing yields.

Until recently chlorophyll was thought to be the only thing capable of photosynthesis. Dr. Walther Stoeckenius, of the University of California, San Francisco, shattered this belief by find in the Dead Sea a salt-loving microorganism called Halobacterium halobium.

It yields a purple pigment that is the only other known biological substance that can turn sunlight directly into energy.

Village Troubled By Pigeon Problem

SCOTIA, N.Y. (AP) — This village outside Schenectady is considering hiring a marksman to shoot up to 400 unwanted pigeons.

Mayor John F. Ryan Jr. said Friday that the village board would consider the proposal at its meeting Wednesday night.

"I have already talked with a college professor who is willing to kill them as a public service project," Ryan said. "We will ask the owners of homes where the pigeons are roosting if they want them destroyed; otherwise we will not be able to shoot them."

Concern over the spread of pigeons and their droppings was caused by the recent demolition of the vacant Lincoln School, where most of them roosted. The pigeons have moved to other rooftops in this village of 8,200 residents.

The mayor said he was aware that bird lovers might protest any mass killings.

"But we have to think of our citizens," he said. "There are pigeons dying in the streets. They may be diseased and I would hate to see a car or a dog pick one up and spread any disease."

Shy Aussie Youth Takes Skylab Recovery Check

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A shy Australian teen-ager on Friday collected the $10,000 bounty offered by the San Francisco Examiner to the first person who turned in pieces of the wayward Skylab space station.

The money went to Stan Thornton, a 17-year-old trucker's helper, after a federal laboratory determined the handful of black nuggets he scooped up in his backyard was indeed Skylab debris.

Thornton turned the $10,000 check nervously in his shaking hand and stared with frightened blue eyes at the gaggle of reporters in the Examiner offices who pressed him for comment on his fortune.

"I'm glad it landed in my backyard," managed the youth from the tiny town of Esperance in sparsely populated western Australia.

Scientists from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration laboratories in Huntsville, Ala., spent nearly a week testing the charcoal-like bits found near Thornton's home.

On Friday they told the Examiner that they had determined the pieces were probably souvenirs of Skylab.

"Although there is no scientific proof that the materials came form Skylab, neither is there scientific proof that they did not come from Skylab," the experts concluded, according to Examiner columnist Jeff Jarvis.

And for Jarvis and his paper's promotion department, that verdict was "good enough for us."

They declared Thornton the winner of the $10,000 prize since he was the first person with Skylab fragments to reach the Examiner office within 72 hours after craft crashed on July 11.

Just as NASA could not predict exactly where or when the doomed Skylab would plummet to the earth, the space agency had a tough time making a precise analysis of the fragments found by Thornton.

"The examination of some of the pieces did strongly suggest that the remnants could have come from elements of the Skylab that were made from wood. Both hard and softwoods were used in Skylab as thermal insulators and cushioning materials," said NASA's W.R. Lucas.

"Other debris from entry 0021 (NASA's tag for Thornton's nuggets) give indications that they are pyrolized electrical insulating material."

Thornton said he'd most likely use his windfall for a "caravan (trailer) or for a down payment on a house" near his parent's home. His parents and girlfriend were en route to San Francisco.

While waiting for his find to be analyzed, Thornton had been seeing the city from cable cars — when he wasn't being besieged by autograph hounds. The visitor from the Australian backlands was clearly overwhelmed.

"I'd heard of San Francisco, but it's a little bit bigger than I thought," Thornton said.

Carter Bill Support Not Politics, Official Says

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Justice Department official denied Friday a suggestion that President Carter decided for political reasons to support Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's bill to curb oil company mergers.

"We strongly support this as a matter of anti-competitive policy," Assistant Attorney General John H. Shenefield told the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Sen. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, the ranking Republican on the committee, had asked whether Carter might have been attempting to deprive Kennedy of a possible issue in the event the Massachusetts Democrat decides to run for president.

"I am wondering if there was some desire on the part of the White House to come in and back the Kennedy bill so there would be no issue," Thurmond said.

"If so, I don't think they would have sent an antitrust lawyer to do it," said Shenefield, who heads the antitrust division of the Justice Department. "It is a matter beyond my ken."

Later, he said, "I don't want to leave any possible inference that this is a political decision and we were just dragged along."

He said both the Department of Justice and the White House contributed to the decision. He said the department had favored such legislation for some time and the president made his decision within the last 10 days.

Kennedy, chairman of the committee, treated the exchange between Thurmond and Shenefield with levity, saying Thurmond appeared to be "looking after my interests."

Kennedy has said that he expects President Carter to be renominated and he expects to support him, but he has not flatly ruled out the possibility of seeking the presidential nomination next year.

Kennedy's bill would bar major oil companies from acquiring firms with more than $100 million in sales or assets. It would apply to 16 companies.

Shenefield announced on Thursday the administration's suppport of the main outlines of this legislation. He said the administration favors an exception, however, for those acquisitions which the oil companies could show would benefit competition.

Lubbock Woman Shot In Mobile Home

Lubbock County sheriff's deputies say they are close to identifying suspects in the Thursday night shooting of a 21-year-old woman in her trailer home east of Lubbock.

Sheriff's Capt. Alton Hobbs said his office believes Margaret Elaine Sherrill of Route 7, Box 565F, was shot as the result of an extensive "squabble."

Mrs. Sherrill was listed in fair condition in Health Sciences Center Hospital Friday after being shot once in the back about 10:45 p.m. Thursday when someone riddled her residence with bullets.

The victim's husband, Michael Royce Sherrill, 23, said someone shot through the couple's mobile home and that one bullet hit his wife. When deputies arrived, they found the woman lying on the floor next to a couch.

Five shots apparently were fired in rapid succession from the north, investigation revealed. Three bullets reportedly traveled through the house and struck a trailer south of the Sherrill residence.

Sherrill said that after the shooting he grabbed his shotgun and ran outside in time to see a car and truck drive away.

Deputies suspect a high-powered rifle was used.

Also Friday, a 23-year-old man and 27-year-old woman, both of Lubbock, were charged with possession of a controlled substance after state laboratory technicians confirmed a substance confiscated Wednesday was an amphetamine.

Police detectives arrested Frederick Michael Myers and April Cindy McDannell Wednesday morning at Myers' 16th Street residence and confiscated several grams of methamphetamine and five possibly stolen weapons.

One of the weapons, a pistol, was later confirmed as having been taken in an April burglary. However, detective Doyle Nelson said police are waiting on reports on the others before considering charges for possession of stolen goods.

Robert Johnson, manager of the Broadview Gin on the Clovis Road told police someone forced his way into the gin work area and left with $700 in tools Thursday night or early Friday morning.

In another burglary report, Robert Johnson told police someone stole lawn equipment totaling $537 from his Yellow House Canyon residence between 8 and 9:30 a.m. Friday.

In other activity Thursday, a pistol-wielding man held up the Poco Taco restaurant at 120 N. University Ave. shortly before midnight and made off with $30 cash, police said.

The restaurant's 17-year-old cashier, Becky Castillo Remirez, said she had locked the business when a short man tapped on the front glass window and pointed a stainless steel pistol at her.

Reports indicate the teen-ager let the bandit in and handed him $30 from the cash register. Miss Remirez said the man then fled the business, running north and then west down an alley, where he got into a car.

The bandit did not speak during the robbery, police were told. He was described as a short, muscular Mexican-American clad in a black hat, white T-shirt and faded blue pants.

Police continued to look for a suspect early today.

In other activity, an 18-year-old Lubbock man was questioned by police early Friday after he, along with another man, allegedly burglarized the A&B Muffler Shop at 4111 19th St. and then attempted to retreive his vehicle, which he left at the shop.

The more than $700 in property taken from the business was recovered, according to reports.

Police patrolman John E. Blythe said he was on routine patrol about 2:40 a.m. when he noticed two men kneeling behind the muffler shop.

Blythe stated in his report that he shined a spotlight on the subjects and the two men ran across Brownfield Highway and hid behind a motel. The officer said he pursued the suspects but could not find them.

The patrolman went back to the business and discovered it had been burglarized and saw a 1979 El Camino parked nearby with several "muffler-related articles" in its bed.

Meanwhile, police Sgt. Frank Barnhill was dispatched to Brownfield Highway and Salem Avenue and met with the teen-age burglary suspect who had reported as stolen a vehicle matching the description of the one parked near the shop.

The man was taken to the burglary scene where he reportedly admitted that he and an 18-year-companion broke into the business. However, after questioning, police released the man pending further investigation.

Police are skeptical of a report that a 17-year-old Lubbock woman was kidnapped from a pool hall at 13th Street and Avenue F and raped Thursday afternoon, according to reports.

The woman said a man at the pool hall bought her a beer about 3:30 p.m. and then displayed a knife and instructed her to go with him or he would "cut her guts out."

The woman alleges that the suspect, described as a 32-year-old, short black man, drove her to a dirt road east of Loop 289 and sexually assaulted her.

Police were first told that after the attack the suspect made the woman lie face down in the dirt while he drove off. However, officers questioned that part of the story because it had been raining that day and the woman had no mud on her clothes, according to reports.

Police said the teen-ager then told them she had been driven to North Quirt Avenue — where the road is paved — and made to get out.

The woman also said she could not tell officers where she was raped because she had only lived in Lubbock six months and did not know the area well. However, the woman's sister told police the complainant was a life-long Lubbock resident.

In another report, Don Crow, owner of Don Crow Chevrolet at 5211 Loop 289, said $3,700 in tools were stolen from his dealership between April and 3 p.m. Thursday.

$2 Million Suit Filed After Pool Accident

The mother of a 6-year-old boy, who fell into an apartment complex swimming pool in April and reportedly suffered extensive brain damage, Friday filed suit in U.S. District Court seeking more than $2 million in damages from the apartment owners.

The civil suit filed by Janie Morales of Idaho, mother of Raymond Morales, names Suzann Apartments owners Alan B. White and Jack Richard Thompson as defendants.

On April 13, the youngster, who was then 5 years old, fell into the apartment pool at 301 Ave. U and was resuscitated by Emergency Medical Service technicians who took him to Health Sciences Center Hospital.

The child was living with his grandparents at 305 Ave. U at the time of the accident.

Mrs. Morales's suit alleges that the apartment owners did not provide adequate safety precautions at the pool, which the suit claims "constituted an attractive allurement" to neighborhood children.

Although the child survived the accident, the suit alleges, he suffered permanent brain damage which will require him being institutionalized.

Mrs. Morales is seeking $1 million from White and Thompson for her son's "pain and mental anguish."

Another $1 million is asked to defray the medical costs and cost of institutionalization of the boy. And Mrs. Morales asks for another $50,000 "for the loss of Raymond Morales's future services."

In addition to the law suit, a request that the case be heard by a jury also was filed by Mrs. Morales's attorney, Mike Millsap.

Process Server Went Too Far According To Woman's Suit

DENVER (UPI) — A 41-year-old computer operator says the process server who tried to present her with divorce papers went too far: he allegedly shoved the papers into her blouse and brushed his hand against her breast.

Beverly J. Weigner said in a complaint filed in district court that the experience was so traumatic she tried to commit suicide and will suffer "severe emotional trauma for the rest of her life."

Because of the incident, Miss Weigner Thursday filed a $126,500 damage suit against the process server and his company.

Although process server Thomas R. Guitheinz refused to elaborate on the case, he said the charges were "a bunch of baloney" and said he "definitely didn't" push the papers down the woman's blouse.

Miss Weigner said the incident occurred May 2 in the Lincoln Tower where she works as a computer operator. Guitheinz was sent to the building by his firm, Checkmate Inc., to serve divorce papers.

The lawsuit said Miss Weigner tried to refuse the divorce papers, which were being served after only six weeks of marriage. She said the "unprivileged, willful, malicious" act by the process server so unnerved her that she tried to commit suicide.

The suit against the process server and Checkmate Inc. asks for $50,000 damages to date; $25,000 for damages to be suffered in the future; $1,500 for medical payments as a result of the suicide attempt, and $50,000 in punitive damages.

Three Charged With Forgery

Three persons, a Slaton woman and two Lubbock men, were charged Friday with forgery in connection with three separate incidents.

Valeta Janenne Hubert, 20, of Slaton is accused of cashing a $74.85 forged check June 26 at a Slaton grocery store. The criminal district attorney's office recommended a $1,500 bond for her.

James D. Crittenden, 24, of 2503-D Weber Drive was charged with forgery in connection with a Thursday incident at First National Bank of Lubbock. Crittenden allegedly tried to open a new account at the bank with a $1,500 forged check. Bond was recommended at $25,000.

Willie Calvin Thomas of 2410 East Seventh St. was charged with cashing a forged check July 11 at a 19th Street grocery store. Bond for the 28-year-old Thomas was recommended at $25,000.

Also Friday, Simon Ochoa Jr., 18, of 1806 E. First Place was charged with theft in the reported theft of four radar detectors June 15 from Rip Griffin's Truck Center, 46th Street and Avenue A.

Bond for Ochoa was recommended at $10,000.

Littlefield Man Charged In City

A 41-year-old man, recently hired as assistant school superintendent of the Littlefield Independent School District, was arrested early Friday by Lubbock police for alleged public intoxication, according to reports.

The charge against Dale Littlesoldier, who gave his address as Route 8, Box 14H, Lubbock, was filed in Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy's court.

A county jailer said the Dakota native was released on a temporary bond between 7:30 a.m. and 8 a.m. Friday. The charge filed against him is a misdemeanor.

A spokesman with the Littlefield school superintendent's office said Littlesoldier took office July 1. "He's been at work everyday until today," she said.

A Lubbock police offense report shows Littlesoldier was taken into custody about 2:20 a.m. today outside the Red Raider Night Club at 6025 Ave. A.

The first call to the club was in reference to someone attempting to burglarize a car in the parking lot.

However, police said that when they arrived on the scene they found that Littlesoldier was not intentionally trying to break into a car. "He was so intoxicated, he was mistaking the vehicle for his own," the report states.

Bubbling Volcano Erupts Small Stones, Hot Sand

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — The Krakatau volcano, which last erupted in 1883 at the cost of 36,000 lives, has been rumbling for the past five days, spewing small stones and hot sand 100 feet into the air above its crater, officials reported Friday.

The 2,667-foot-high volcanic island is situated in the Straits of Sunda, between west Java and south Sumatra, about 100 miles west of Jakarta.

Cocaine Hearings Scheduled August 3 In District Court

U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward Friday set Aug. 3 hearings on motions filed Monday by two defendants accused of participating in cocaine-trafficking conspiracies.

A 9:30 a.m. hearing in Woodward's federal courtroom is scheduled for three discovery motions filed by Travis Shelton, attorney for Steven Moss.

The motions ask the court to order the U.S. attorney's office to hand over all material concerning Moss's alleged participation in the conspiracy, a list of specific information concerning the alleged conspiracy and any information prosecutors may have that is favorable to Moss.

Shelton filed similar motions in connection with a second federal grand jury indictment involving cocaine-trafficking and which also named Moss as a conspirator.

Another defendant in that second indictment is Joe Leonard Jr. of Austin, whose attorney also filed a discovery of prosecution evidence motion and a motion seeking a trial for Leonard separate from that of the other persons named in the indictment.

Leonard's attorney, Anthony Nicholas of San Antonio, filed a third motion asking that if the court does not grant Leonard a separate trial, he be given six additional peremptory jury selection strikes.

Woodward will hear arguments on the motions filed in connection with the second indictment at 1:30 p.m. Aug. 3.

In his order concerning the indictment which names both Moss, of 3102 40th St., and Leonard, Woodward also instructed the U.S. District Clerk to make available to the defendants's attorneys "all records or papers used during the selection and impanelment of the grand jury which returned the indictment in this case and in the selection of the panel . . .from which a trial jury is to be selected."

The judge, however, noted in his order that this information is to be used by the attorneys for the sole purpose of preparing for the defendants's Aug. 6 trial.

Top Officials Affected By Carter's Purge

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here are sketches of top Carter administration officials affected by the president's overhaul of his staff:

• • •

Secretary of Housing and Urban Development Patricia Roberts Harris, 55, who overcame complaints about her scanty experience in housing, was named to replace HEW Secretary Joseph Califano.

A candidate to replace her at HUD was to be named later.

Mrs. Harris came to Washington with a reputation as a bright, articulate lawyer. The daughter of a Pullman car porter and the first black woman ever to hold a Cabinet seat, Mrs. Harris once served as a U.S. diplomat and an official of the Democratic National Committee. Long an activist in the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, she had been a teacher and administrator at Howard University law school.

• • •

Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr., 48, whose resignation was accepted, is an archtypical Washington "insider."

A former aide to Lyndon Johnson and a powerful Washington lawyer, his bold leadership of HEW earned him the enmity of some White House staff. Hamilton Jordan is said to detest him. And his anti-smoking crusade and battle with North Carolina and other southern states over college desegregation brought the administration unneeded problems in the South.

Califano achieved visible results by shaking up HEW's 145,000-employee bureaucracy and putting in work-weeks of 70 hours or more. He dunned college student-loan defaulters and reduced defaults by millions of dollars. The amount of waste in welfare programs also declined under his jurisdiction.

• • •

G. William Miller, 54, President Carter's choice to replace W. Michael Blumenthal as secretary of the treasury, owes his current prominence to Blumenthal.

The former secretary recommended him for chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, where Miller combined a record for accurate economic forecasting with a reputation for resisting proposals that could worsen inflation or initiate a deep recession.

Miller rejected recommendations from Blumenthal earlier this year to sharply increase interest rates, arguing the move would plunge the economy into a more serious downturn than was necessary. The fact that Miller turned out to be correct about the recession outlook enhanced his reputation at the White House and diminished Blumenthal's.

• • •

Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal, 53, was considered abrasive by the White House staff but he usually prevailed on economic matters. In fact, Carter recently designated him the administration's chief economic spokesman.

Blumenthal was born in Germany and arrived in the United States as an impoverished immigrant. He served as trade negotiator in the administrations of John F. Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson and headed the Bendix Corp. before being named to Carter's cabinet.

He got off to a bad start at the White House, developing a reputation as a loner. White House insiders felt Blumenthal was too willing to show disapproval of Carter policies he didn't like, such as comprehensive tax reform and a go-slow approach on oil price decontrol.

• • •

Attorney General Griffin Boyette Bell, 60, is a longtime Carter friend and had been saying for some time he wanted to leave his post.

The president said he would nominate Deputy Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti to replace Bell.

Formerly a partner in Atlanta's King and Spaulding law firm, Bell began his stint in Washington as the administration's most controversial appointee but gradually won over most of his detractors.

Most of the problems arose from early charges that Bell was playing politics with prosecutorial and judicial appointments. Liberal critics accused him of not being tough enough with the intelligence community and some conservatives said he had damaged the FBI by pressing charges against former officials accused of civil rights violations.

• • •

Deputy Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti, hand-picked by Griffin Bell to succeed him as attorney general, says he would not fill his boss' shoes as one of the capital's most flamoyant Georgians.

Studious, self-confident and diffident, Civiletti said Thursday with a rare smile that he is a man "of no flamboyance at all and little humor."

If confirmed, the 44-year-old Civiletti likely will run the Justice Department like an enormous law firm, with special attention to courtroom performance. He served as assistant U.S. attorney in Maryland for two years after his graduation from Maryland law school and then joined Baltimore's biggest law firm.

• • •

He was rumored to have fallen into disfavor with Carter after he named several close associates to key posts and opposed the president's airline deregulation actions. But he indicated he was back in the good graces of the White House after a "little philosophical chat" wth Carter last Christmas.

A year ago, Adams called a news conference to deny a report that he would resign before the end of 1978. But one year later to the day, he and 33 other high administration officials offered their resignations to the president.

Adams' impressive list of legislative accomplishments includes airline deregulation, the biggest mass transit program in U.S. history, a bill that makes barge operators pay for the use of American waterways, air cargo deregulation, tanker safety and important railroad measures.

But some White House advisers believe him to be a political opportunist because he has said he plans to run for the Senate in Washington state when a seat becomes vacant.

Before being elected to Congress in 1964, Adams had been a U.S. attorney and a lawyer in private practice. In 1966, during his second congressional term, he set his sights on becoming secretary of transportation.

Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger, 50, has held more government posts covering more subjects than almost anybody — and he's been well thought of by both parties.

The Carter administration virtually guaranteed him the hot seat when it named him to head the nation's new Energy Department, however. He had to pull together a new 20,000-person agency and battle an energy crisis that permitted no easy victories.

The former Rand Corp. scholar previously served the administrations of Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford. Schlesinger was head of the Office of Budget and Management, the Atomic Energy Commission and the CIA. Ford fired him as defense secretary.

Schlesinger began his term with the current administration as Carter's energy adviser and became the first secretary of energy after Congress created the department in October 1977.

Carter had relied heavily on Schlesinger to bring his energy package home safely. But in Congress, Schlesinger is widely described as "arrogant." He has little patience with those less intelligent than himself and that attitude made it difficult for him to court public and political support for his programs.

• • •

• Multimillionaire businessman Charles William Duncan Jr. managed to maintain a low profile as Carter's deputy secretary of Defense. As the president's choice to replace former Energy Secretary James Schlesinger, however, he'll feel the glare of the limelight.

Duncan, 52, was a president of the Coca-Cola Co. for three years and in 1974, joined the Houston investment firm of Rotan, Mosle Financial Corp. as chairman of the board. He went to the Pentagon in 1977 with $14 million in Coca-Cola stock and at least $2.8 million in various other investments.

Duncan reportedly was well thought of by the White House and was rumored to be a possible successor to various other top administration officials.

As deputy defense secretary, Duncan has been the Pentagon's second-ranking civilian, wielding more power than some Cabinet officers directing smaller departments.

Navy Secretary W. Graham Claytor Jr. will be in familiar territory when he takes over temporarily for former Transportation Secretary Brock Adams.

The 67-year-old Virginia lawyer was board chairman of the Southern Railway and a longtime railroad buff when he was tapped by the Carter administration to head the Navy.

After his stint with Transportation, which is to last up to 30 days, Claytor will become deputy secretary of Defense, taking over from Charles Duncan who has been tapped by Carter to replace James Schlesinger as Energy secretary.

Navy associates say Claytor is tough and he proved it by driving through final settlements of years-long disputes between the Navy and several shipbuilders involving billions of dollars in contract claims.

Claytor joined the Southern Railway System in 1963 as a vice president in charge of law matters and became president four years later, rising to board chairman in 1976. Most associates expect him to return eventually to railroading.

SO LONG — Secretary of Transportation Brock Adams waves goodbye and leaves a news conference Friday in Washington. The news conference followed the announcement that President Carter had fired Adams. (AP Laserphoto)

Mission Director To Speak Here

The Rev. Charles Lee Williams, director of the Missions Division of the Baptist General Convention of Texas, will be the guest speaker for the Fellowship Meeting of the Lubbock Baptist Association which will begin at 7 p.m. Monday at the First Baptist Church in Ralls.

The Abbeville, La. native served as pastor of the Highlands Baptist Church in LaMarque and the Magnolia Avenue Baptist Church in Beaumont.

He also was director of Missions in Southeast Texas Association, Golden Triangle Association and Waco Association before his current position as Director of Missions for the Baptist General Convention of Texas.

Williams is a member of the Board of Trustees of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary and has served as guest professor there. He also is a consultant for the Association Strategy Planning for the Home Mission Board.

The doctrinal message will be given by the Rev. Jose Rodriguez, pastor of the First Baptist Church Mission of Abernathy since 1966. He is a Texas City native.

The Fellowship Meeting will be followed by the Executive Board meeting and a time of fellowship and refreshments.

FBC Sets Guest Pulpit Talk

Dr. William G. Tanner, executive director and treasurer of the Southern Baptist Home Mission Board, will be the pulpit guest at the 8:15 a.m., 10:45 a.m. and 7 p.m. services Sunday in the First Baptist Church, Broadway and Avenue V.

The Tulsa, Okla. native provides leadership for the board's finances and programs of work including Administrative Services, Metropolitan Missions, Chaplaincy, Christian Social Ministries, Church Estension, Evangelism, church loans and various other services.

The Home Mision Board ministers in all fifty states, Puerto Rico and American Somoa.

Tanner was the President of Oklahoma Baptist University in Shawnee, Okla., president of Mary Harden-Baylor College prior to his current position, which he took in 1977.

He has pastored churches in Wheelock, Houston, Cleburne and Gulfport, Miss.

Tanner received his B.A. from Baylor University in Waco, a doctorate from the University of Houston and a bachelor of divinity and a doctorate from Southwestern Theological Seminary in Ft. Worth. Baylor University awarded him a doctorate of laws degree in 1975. He has been on preaching missions to the Far East and South America.

He is also listed in Who's Who in America, the Directory of American Scholars, Personalities of the South, Outstanding Educators in America, Community Leaders and Noteworthy Americans and Who's Who in Religion.

Convocation Set By Church Group

The 23rd annual Holy Convocation of the Northwest Texas District of the Church of God Christ will be held Monday through Saturday in the Calvary Baptist Church at 1921 18th St.

Bishop J.E. Alexander will be presiding and will give an address at 8 p.m. Saturday.

The guest speaker for Monday's pre-musical opening will be Dale Cain, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church.

The official opening on Tuesday will feature Juanita Sapp, a Dallas evangelist.

Bishop H. Jenkins Bell of South Carolina will be the guest speaker Wednesday and Bishop J.N. Haynes of the Northeast Texas District will speak Thursday.

Speakers for Friday's Women's Day include Mattie McGlothin, national and international supervisor of women's groups, and Horace Ross, evangelist from Los Angeles, Calif.

Dallas District Superintendant T.L. Young will join Alexander to speak on Saturday, the official day of the convocation. The public is invited.

Sudan Minister To Speak

The Rev. Kerry Hurst, pastor of the First United Methodist Church in Sudan, will speak at 10:30 a.m. Sunday in the Oakwood United Methodist Church, 2215 58th St.

Hurst is a Lorenzo High School graduate, a former Texas Tech student and a graduate of McMurry College in Abilene and the Asbury Theological Seminary in Wimore, Ky.

Church Accepting Day Care Requests

Monterey Church of Christ is now taking applications for its upcoming mother's day out program, open to children between 6 months and 5 years old.

Callihg it the "Sugar and Spice Tuesday School," church volunteers will run the child-sitting service every Tuesday starting in September. The first session is scheduled for Sept. 4.

Registration for the program is $3, with a $3.50 charge added for each visit. Interested persons may contact the church office at 795-5201 for more information.

Visit To America By Pope Possible

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — The Vatican won't say a word about it, but it's looking more and more as if Pope John Paul II Will visit America this fall.

There have been widespread reports that the pope will make a whirlwind tour of the country, meet President Carter at the White House and address a session of the United Nations.

Vatican press spokesman Rev. Romeo Panciroli said Friday the church would neither confirm nor deny the trip.

"We intend to maintain strict silence and that silence prevails in the entire Vatican," Panciroli said.

Vatican sources speculate that the absence of a formal denial amounts to a tacit confirmation the trip is at least under consideration.

The Vatican usually denies rumors outright when they are baseless. Observers point out Panciroli also maintained "srict silence" before the pope's Mexican trip in January and his triumphant June return to his Polish homeland.

U.S. church officials have said they believe the pontiff will make the trip, but lack official notification from the Vatican.

"We have no formal announcement to make at this time" said a spokesman for the National Conference of Catholic Bishops in Washington.

The pope has privately expressed interest in visiting the United States. Twice in recent weeks he told crowds at his weekly general audiences that the church's largest contingents were Americans. But Panciroli said nothing could be inferred from the pope's words.

"Up to now there is nothing at all to say on this matter and should there be something we will announce it at the appropriate time," he said.

"The pope has a sense of drama, and this is just another example," said a veteran Vatican watcher, who is among many who believe John Paul will indeed make the trip.

"What appears to be happening is that U.S. officials have begun pressing for exact details and the Vatican, as usual, is trapped until the pope gives a go ahead," said another longtime Vatican watcher.

John Paul would be the second pontiff to visit the United States.

Pope Paul VI addressed the United Nations during a 14-hour visit in October, 1965. He also visited the Vatican pavilion a the New York World's Fair and celebrated a mass at packed Yankee Stadium, an event that became known as the "Sermon on the Mound."

Pope John Paul Bound For U.N. Speech Date

By United Press International

Pope John Paul II will visit America in early October, and he will address a session of the United Nations, an official U.N. Spokesman announced Friday.

There had been widespread reports that the pope would make a whirlwind tour of the country, meet President Carter at the White House and address a session of the United Nations.

Earlier Friday, Vatican press spokesman Rev. Romeo Ranciroli said the church would neither confirm nor deny the trip.

"We intend to maintain strict silence and that silence prevails in the entire Vatican," Panciroli said.

The U.N. spokesman said Secretary General Kurt Waldheim had invited the pontiff to visit U.N. headquarters and to address the U.N. General Assembly.

He said the pope "has accepted the secretary general's invitation and aill come to U.N. headquarters at the beginning of October."

In Washington, a spoke man for the National Conference of Catholic Bishops said he understood the Vatican would announce the visit on Saturday, and that his speech to the General Assembly on Oct. 2 would be followed by a "pastoral visit" to the United States.

But the officials stressed that the Vatican made it clear that it would announce no other ciies or dates of the pope's itinerary than the U.N. visit.

Earlier speculation said that the visit would be for 10 dayss but Catholic sources said Friday it would probably be "for about a week."

Vatican sources had speculated that the absence of a formal denial amounted to a tacit confirnation that the trip was at least under consideration.

Church Group Seeks Exec

The Texas Conference of Churches is looking for a new associate director and recommendations and applications are due today, according to the Rev. Dr. James C. Suggs, TCC executive director.

Suggs said the job responsiblities include staffing the agency's divisions of Church and Society and Education.

For more information contact Dr. Suggs at 2704 Rio Grande No. 9, Austin, Texas, 78705.

Ex-Atheist Slated In Bible Workshop

Former atheist John Clayton and his series "Does God Exist?" will highlight the Bible Teachers Workshop to be held Sunday through Wednesday at Abilene Christian University.

Clayton will be featured in the afternoons from 2 until 4:30.

The workshop will open at 7 p.m. Sunday with a keynote address by Dale Smith. Other guest speakers include David Roper, Johnny Jackson and Harold Hazelip.

More than 20 specialized classes will be available for participants at 8:30 a.m., 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. daily.

Some of the instructors and their topics are June Hill, creative use of puppets in teaching; Bobby Hill, children's Bible hour; Mary Lois Meggs, visual aids in the classroom; Dale Smith, dynamic church leadership; Ron Bailey, creative ideas for teaching; David Roper, filing and organizing visual aids; Don Kleppe, the teaching of Romans in an adult classroom; and Ann Halford, teaching Bible classes for women.

Interested Lubbockites wanting more information on registration fees should contact Bob Mathews, minister of education at the Vandalia Church of Christ, 744-8439.

Moslem Aid Saves Christian

NEW YORK (AP) — Moslem leaders were the kidnapped Christian's only hope. Church people couldn't help. Nor could the Philippine government or its troops. A military intervention likely would have brought his immediate death.

His fate was in the hands of Moslems, and they came through.

"That was the most gratifying aspect of it all," says the Rev. Lloyd G. Van Vactor, a United Church of Christ missionary in the Philippines who was held prisoner for 20 days by Moslem guerrillas.

"The Christians wouldn't have had a chance. They'd have just been lost. Nor could they turn to the military or the government. It was really up to the local Moslems.

"The way they responded is extremely significant and opens up the possibility of better cooperative relationships of Moslems and Christians than there have ever been before."

That element of interreligious brotherhood, of Moslems rescuing a Christian, was described by Van Vactor on a trip to the United States following his harrowing captivity in March in the mountains of Mindanao, the mostly Moslem, battle-torn southern island of the Philippines.

"Physically, I was unharmed but psychologically, it was a little different," says Van Vactor, 50. He said he burst into tears when he finally learned he was to be released rather than shot.

His abductors had demanded $60,000 ransom to spare him — but he knew no ransom would be paid.

"But local Moslem leaders were working very hard to help me," he says, the details of which he learned later.

Do You Seek Bible Truth?

Current prophetic trends clearly show that the end of the age is near.

If you are concerned about having a closer walk with the Most High, you are cordially invited to a regional meeting of the Assemblies of Yahweh. It will be on Sunday, July 22, 1979, at 3 p.m. in the Seminar Room of the Quality Inn, Amarillo, Texas, 2915 Interstate Rte. 40 East. Speaking will be Jacob O. Meyer of the Sacred Name Broadcast, Bethel, Pa.

Don't miss the informative, Bible-based lecture by this noted radio speaker. For further information telephone (806) 364-1786.

The lookout tower was scarcely visible, and five miles ahead, straight up the mountain. With the whole afternoon ahead of me, I began the climb. It was a hot day, and the dry, winding road made the climb twice as difficult.

Then something wonderful happened. Sitting by the roadside in the shade of some friendly pine trees were an older couple and their grandchildren. They, too, were on the way to the lookout and were resting. I joined the group and continued the hike, chatting the whole way about families, places we had been, our home towns.

Before we knew it the fatigue was forgotten and two hours had flown by. We had arrived at the tower.

Life, too, sometimes feels like a different climb on a hot, dry day. Its demands and burdens can drain us of energy and the will to continue. God knows this, so He gave us His Church, a fellowship of believers to strengthen and encourage us along life's road.

ranked first on advance speculation lists — because of the politically volatile energy situation — and was the last to be announced.

He had the honor on ending the public suspense himself and did it in a manner befitting his cool, laconic style — after long, business-as-usual testimony on energy issues before the House Ways and jmeans Committee.

Rep. Andy Jacobs, D-Ind., finally popped the question: "Are you in or out?"

"I will be around until the fall, I expect," Schlesinger replied.

Besieged by reporters as he left the building, he added:

"My job status right now is that I will contiue to provide the major support for the president's program until such time as Mr. Duncan may be confirmed and, consequently, at that time, sometime in the fall, I shall depart."

He told the committee he expected his controversial energy policies would outlive him, saying, "It will be precisely the same game with different players."

White House sources said he infuriated Jordan Thursday when announced he might quit even though asked to stay and added, as the price of remaining, a greater administration commitment to mass transit and fuel-efficient auto prodiction, plus "direct accessibility to the president.".

The latter remark was an obvious challenge to the new doorkeeper authority delegated to Jordan.

"I strongly believe there must be direct cabinet access to the president," he said. "A cabinet officer must work directly for the president — not for the White House staff."

He also said he had bridled at White House directives to fire his deputy, Alan Butchman, and to send Assistant Secretary Terrence Bracy to the White House "to be talked to."

He said both men were submitting resignations.

As for the "report cards" Jordan has asked all cabinet officers to fill out on their top aides, Adams said contemptuously, "I'm going to throw them away."

He said he visited Carter Friday morning to submit his resignation letter and added that, so far as he is concerned, he quit and was not fired.

The letter included the line, "I hope you find happiness in your job."

Unlike the other deposed cabinet members, Adams apparently will not stay on until his successor is confirmed. Navy Secretary Graham Claytor will fill in as acting secretary in the interim.

Some sources said White House aide Jack Watson, part of the inner circle of Georgians, had the inside track to succeed Adams permanently.

Powell also got into a postmortem squabble with Califano, who told reporters Thursday that Carter had told him he had to go because of "frictions" with Jordan and Powell and because he "had to get the cabinet and the administration ready for the 1980 election."

"That is not true," Powell told reporters Friday. "The president never mentioned 1980 in his conversation nor did the President or Califano mention any friction" with the aides Califano named.

Added Powell: "The president did not say he was the best secretary of HEW in history."

HEW Busing Curbs Voted By Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted Friday to keep tight busing restraints on the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, rejecting Sen. Jacob Javits's complaint that "the Senate is interfering with the process of integration."

"Senators shouldn't kid themselves into thinking they're just restraining bureaucrats," said Javits, R-N.Y.

In another development, the Carter administration formally announced its opposition to a proposed constitutional amendment banning busing as a desegregation tool. The House is due to vote on the amendment next week.

Javits was arguing for an amendment proposed by Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., to weaken anti-busing provisions in the $73 billion Fiscal 1980 appropriations bill for HEW and the Labor Department.

The Senate voted 58-35 to table, and thus kill, the amendment that would have allowed HEW to spend money for busing school children to "paired" or "clustered" schools.

Tsongas called such arrangements "a moderate, realistic solution" to racial imbalances in schools.

The House-passed version of the bill forbids such spending as does the appropriation bill for this fiscal year.

Tsongas, who called pairing "a moderate, realistic solution" to racial imbalances in schools, repeated several times that his measure still would bar HEW from spending money "to require, directly or indirectly, the transportation of any student to a school other than the school which is nearest the student's home and which offers the courses of study pursued by such student."

However, Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., noted that HEW officials have held that busing for paired or clustered school arrangements merely constitutes busing for transportation, not busing for raciam integration.

If the Tsongas amendment passes, Biden said, "the buses will roll and HEW will say when."

A number of school districts have paired or clustered schools with racial integration as an aim. One version of the technique would have a predominantly white and a predominantly black school paired, with a certain number of grades assigned to each.

White and black pupils of certain ages would attend one school, then transfer to the other when promoted to a certain grade, thereby mixing the racial composition of both schools.

In another vote on the bill Friday, the Senate rejected a move that would have chopped $500 million out of the HEW appropriation while demanding that the huge agency make up the loss by reducing fraud and waste in Medicaid and welfare programs.

The Senate voted to table that amendment, introduced by Sen. William Roth, R-Del., after Javits argued the money would not be made up from reducing fraud and waste but would "come out of the backs of the very people you don't want to hurt," legitimate recipients of federal aid.

A similar provision was included in the bill by the House, and that difference — along with dozens of others — will have to be decided in a conference committee of Senate and House members.

The administration's position on the constitutional amendment was announced by Attorney General Griffin B. Bell.

Bell described the amendment as one which would withdraw a remedy for violation of basic, constitutionally-guaranteed rights, resegregate many school districts, annul the progress in civil rights made during the last two decades and "without justification, invade the autonomy of states and local school districts.

Disturbed Man Held Following Attempt To Hijack Airliner

OMAHA (AP) — A depressed biochemist pretending to have explosives and saying he wanted to go to Cuba hijacked a United Airlines 727 jet carrying 126 persons from Denver to Omaha Friday, authorities said. He was arrested about 2½ hours after the plane landed in Omaha, and passengers and crew were freed unharmed.

The hijacking ended abruptly at 4:30 p.m. CDT when two FBI agents boarded the plane through a passenger ramp and forcibly subdued the 36-year-old hijacker, who was wearing blue jeans, tennis shoes and a plaid shirt.

The FBI said the man had claimed to have plastic explosives but was actually unarmed.

Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Fred Farrar said in Washington that the hijacker was tentatively identified as Ronald Allan Rimerman. The FBI said he was a biochemist at the University of Oregon Health Sciences Center in Portland.

Farrar said Rimerman had been undergoing mental treatment for depression, but "he appeared to be getting better and was going to Omaha to see his parents." Farrar said when the plane was seized, the hijacker demanded to be taken to Cuba.

"We tried to be as patient with the thing as we could and take just as much time as was necessary to minimize the danger to everyone, including Mr. Rimerman," said agent Richard Held of the Omaha FBI. "We just waited for the best moment."

U.S. Attorney Edward J. Warin of Omaha said Rimerman would either be held in jail or in a psychiatric facility pending arraignment before a federal magistrate, possibly on an air piracy charge, Monday.

The 118 passengers and four flight attendants had been released as soon as Flight 320 landed at Eppley Field in Omaha at 2 p.m. CDT. The hijacker remained aboard with the captain, first officer and second officer, the FBI said. The flight had originated in Boise.

Throughout the 2½-hour stand-off, FBI agents were in radio contact with the plane and police SWAT units were on the scene.

The FAA said it got first word of the hijacking at 1:17 p.m. as the plane neared McCook, Neb.

One of the freed passengers, Phil Steffen of Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, said he had no indication anything was wrong until the pilot addressed the passengers from the cockpit.

"The pilot said there was an unwanted person in the cockpit," Steffen said.

He said he sounded "low key," but added, "He must have been pretty nervous the way he put that plane down in Omaha and the way we bounced."

The last domestic hijacking was on June 20, when Serbian nationalist Nikola Kavaja seized a New York-to-Chicago American Airlines jet, held the plane on the ground in Chicago, and eventually secured a flight to Shannon, Ireland, where he surrendered. Kavaja was seeking freedom from jail for a Serbian Orthodox priest.

Brush Fire Plague Oregon, Arizona

By The Associated Press

More than 500 firefighters backed by bulldozers, pumper trucks and aircraft struggled through dense smoke Friday to contain a blaze that has blackened some $3 million worth of Oregon timber.

In Arizona, heavy afternoon rains drenched a 20,000-acre fire in desert grassland north of the Grand Canyon, prompting hopes for bringing it under control by Saturday.

Oregon's largest forest fire of the season had burned 9,700 acres by Friday, including 970 acres in Northern California where the blaze was carried by a sudden wind shift Wednesday night, officials said.

Fernandez

Fernandez said he would support business programs to help farmers borrow money and expand their businesses and he advocated the merger of small farms.

In 1972, Fernandez set up the National Hispanic Finance Committee to reelect the President (Nixon) and at that time expressed an interest in being appointed to a cabinet post.

This time, he says, "The supposition is unthinkable" that he will not win his party's presidential nomination.

But, he added, should that happen, "I'm not interested in being vice president or a cabinet post. I want no other job (except president) in the next administration."

And after the 1980 campaign, he said, even if he isn't elected, "I will be one of the best known Americans in the United States" — an asset when he campaigns again in 1984.

Major Spill Feared In Tanker Collision

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad (AP) — The blazing hulks of two abandoned supertankers drifted within sight of Tobago Friday and a huge spreading oil slick threatened to foul the resort island's glistening white beaches.

The tankers — reported fully laden, one with crude oil and the other with refinery products — collided during the night and 34 crewmen were reported missing. Officials said one tanker was listing badly and in danger of sinking.

Police said coast guard boats from Trinidad and Tobago, joined by a number of private craft, saved 41 crewmen — all 36 from the Aegean Captain and five of the 39 from the Atlantic Empress.

The survivors were taken to a hospital on Tobago.

Coast Guard Petty Officer Austin Pratt said in Miami that reports were "circulating that 1.6 millions barrels of oil spilled." He said the Coast Guard had no firm figure, but if both tankers were loaded such a huge spill would be possible.

A spill of 1.6 million barrels — 67.2 million gallons — would make it the largest ever involving ships.

A spokesman for the insurance group Lloyd's of London said the collision also could be the most costly accident in marine history, with claims that could reach $150 million. He said that was based on $50 million for the ships and $100 million for their cargoes, although Lloyd's did not know how much oil the ships were carrying.

He said claims in most previous marine disasters did not exceed $50 million.

The Dutch-based salvage firm, Smit International Americas Inc., is sending tugs to the scene, according to Roger Wilson, Smit spokesman in London. "We're working with the German salvage company Bugsier," he said.

Lloyd's Register of Ships and the American Bureau of Shipping Record list both tankers as Liberian-registered. But Lloyd's Shipping Service in London said registration of the Atlantic Empress recently was transferred from Liberia to Chios, Greece. Sources in the United States said Greek intrests own both tankers.

Many oil tankers are registered under Liberia's "flag of convenience" system, under which noncitizens can operate ships under the Liberian flag and aoid their own nations' taxes and inspections.

Liberian-registered ships have been involved in a number of oil spills,including the worst previous involving the Amoco Cadiz, which broke in two off the French Coast last year and spilled 54.6 million gallons.

The Torrey Canyon, which ran aground off the English Channel in 1967 and spilled 29.4 milion gallons, and the Argo Merchant, which went aground, sank and spread a 7.7 million-gallon oil slick over 215 miles of water near Massachusetts in 1976, also were of Liberian registry.

The U.S. Coast Guard said the two ships, each longer than three football fields, collided Thursday night about 20 miles east of Tobago.

They burst into flames and their crews abandoned them, the Coast Guard said.

"There is a possibility that the Aegean Captain may sink," Coast Guard spokesman John Hollis said in Puerto Rico. He said the tanker was listing 40 degrees, "and anytime there is fire, there is a possibility of an explosion."

Residents of Roxborough, a fishing village on Tobago's east coast, could see thick columns of black smoke billowing thousands of feet into the sky.

Liberia's admiralty counsel in the United States, Frank Wiswall, said at his office in Reston, Va., that Liberian investigators had been told the Atlantic Empress was carrying a full load of crude oil, although it was unclear where it was headed, or from where. He said the Aegean Captain had left a refinery at Curacao, a Dutch island 500 miles to the west, with a full load of refined oil products.

The Coast Guard in San Juan, P.R., about 500 miles northwest of the accident and the closest U.S. monitoring point, said oil was pouring out of both ships into the ocean and had covered a 25-square-mile area by late afternoon. The spokesman there was unable to describe it further, but authorities here said it was moving toward Tobago.

According to the American Bureau of Shipping Record, the Aegean Captain is owned by the Quadrant Shipping Co. of Monrovia, Liberia, was built by Hitachi Shipbuilding of Japan in 1968, is 206,396 deadweight tons, and 1,066 feet in length. The Atlantic Empress is listed as owned by Branco Shipping co. of Monrovia, was built in Denmark in 1974 by Odense Staalskibvaerft, and is 1,139 feet long with deadweight tonnage of 288,045.

Kidnappers Grab Wife Of Banker

PATERSON, N.J. (AP) — The wife of a bank executive was kidnapped from her home Friday as she was watching television, federal agents said. Her husband paid $100,000 ransom, but the woman was not immediately released, authorities said.

Authorities were searching for Joan Dedrick of West Milford, whose husband, William, earlier paid a ransom through an elaborate series of phone calls and drop-offs in Paterson.

Both federal and local law enforcement authorities requested anonymity in discussing the case.

Mrs. Dedrick, who is in her 50s, was watching television about 11 a.m. when the intruders abducted her, authorities said.

The Dedricks have two children.

Dedrick discovered the plot when the kidnappers telephoned his office, police said. The ransom money was given to Dedrick by the bank, authorities said.

North Korean Troop Buildup Halts U.S. Force Withdrawal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter halted the withdrawal of American combat troops from South Korea Friday in the face of a reported buildup in North Korean infantry, tanks and artillery.

The president said "further reductions of our combat elements in Korea should await credible indications that a satisfactory military balance has been restored and a reduction in tension is underway."

"Recent studies by the intelligence community have confirmed that the size of North Korea's ground forces, armor, firepower and mobility are larger than previously estimated," he said.

Carter — in a statement read by national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski — said "holding further withdrawals of U.S. ground combat units in abeyance will help reinforce deterrence."

The president said the halt in the U.S. pullout would also "avoid conveying misleading signals to the North and provide additional time for South Korea to put its ground defenses in order."

Brzezinski told reporters at the White House that the timing and pace of future American withdrawals would be examined again in 1981.

Earlier this year, Carter had ordered a temporary delay in the withdrawal of the remaining 38,700 American troops in South Korea pending further study of the situation.

As a result of the study, administration officials said, U.S. intelligence agencies concluded that North Korea had at least 100,000 more troops than originally estimated.

Intelligence analysts said the North Korean buildup was apparently the result of the Communists organizing small reserve units into active regulr divisions.

The pullout about-face appeared a belated vindication of former Maj. Gen. John Singlaub, the highly decorated combat veteran who lost his job as chief of staff in South Korea in 1977 after insisting the withdrawal "will lead to war."

Faced with the new intelligence reports, even such "dovish" congressmen as Rep. Les Aspen, D-Wis., had urged the president to drop the idea of troop withdrawals for the time being.

Only 3,670 U.S. ground forces — including just one combat unit of 674 men — have been withdrawn from South Korea since July 1977. The departing troops included transportation, signal corps and air defense personnel.

Last month, Carter and South Korean President Park Chung Hee discussed ways to reduce tensions in the region. Carter offered to help arrange trilateral peace talks involving America, South Korea and North Korea.

Managua Frenzied As Nicaraguans Welcome Victors

MANAGUA (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of jubilant Nicaraguans welcomed their new five-member ruling junta to Managua Friday in a joyous explosion of cheering, flag-waving and wild firing of guns into the air.

Junta member Sergio Ramirez Mercado proclaimed: "We have buried the Somoza government forever."

The five leaders — two Marxist guerrillas, a writer, an industrialist and an opposition leader's widow — rode triumphantly down city streets to the main plaza, where they were greeted and hugged by Sandinista guerrilla commanders Tomas Borges and Eden Pastora.

The new government said it would repulse any foreign military intervention as it labored to reconstruct the war-shattered nation.

"We don't want foreign intervention because it has already cost a lot of blood," said Borges, the country's new minister of the interior.

More than 10,000 persons died in the Sandinista's final seven-week offensive to topple now-exiled President Anastasio Somoza and end his family's rule, which began following a U.S. Marine occupation of Nicaragua in 1930. The rebels completed their takeover of Nicaragua early Thursday when hundreds of guerrillas swarmed into this capital city.

The junta members flew or drove in from the south or from the northern city of Leon, then assembled for the victory ride to the old Plaza of the Republic, renamed Plaza of the Revolution, past huge crowds and red-and black Sandinista flags lining the streets.

Borges told the plaza throng estimated at 250,000 that although the civil war had ended, "Now comes a more difficult war — the reconstruction of Nicaragua."

At the plaza ceremony Ramirez announced decrees expropriating all Somoza family property and abolishing the national guard. He said the Sandinistas are now the Nicaraguan military, and said that signified the end of Somoza's regime.

Pastora, known as "Commander Zero," declared, "The revolution will not be betrayed!"

Earlier Friday, Ramirez, a 36-year-old writer who describes himself as a democratic socialist, said there would be "no executions" by the victorious rebels.

Ramirez, who was meeting here with U.S. envoy William Bowdler, also said the United States had made an official offer of aid and the new government would accept it. He gave no details.

U.S. Economic Growth Shows Sharp Decline

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The recession of 1979 began during the second quarter as economic growth fell at the steepest rate in four years, new government statistics indicated Friday.

The dismal economic picture, however, did not deter the Federal Reserve Board — which acts as the United States central bank — from boosting one of its key interest rates to the highest level in history in order to support the weakening dollar abroad.

The decision to increase the Federal Reserve discount rate from 9.5 percent to the new level of 10 percent was made despite the danger that tighter credit may delay a recovery from the recession and could make the recession even deeper.

The Fed indicated it was a chance worth taking in order to insure that the dollar does not go into a tailspin, as it did for much of 1978.

"The United States will not permit a renewal of depreciation of the dollar to undermine its efforts" to tame inflation and energy problems in the United States, said outgoing Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal.

Blumenthal said he "strongly endorsed" the move, which was also approved by G. William Miller, the Fed chairman who will replace Blumenthal.

The Commerce Department said the U.S. economic growth rate plunged at a 3.3 percent annual rate during the April-June quarter — mainly due to a sharp falloff in automobile and truck sales.

The decline was sharper than anticipated by government economists and was the largest drop since the first quarter of 1975, when the Gross National Product fell 9.1 percent.

The decline was "centered to a very large extent in the automotive sector, underscoring the sensitivity of our economy to changes in petroleum prices and availability," said Courtenay Slater, the Commerce Department's chief econonist.

Mrs. Slater said she expected another drop in the July-September quarter, but the recession will be "of limited magnitude and fairly short duration."

The administration has already said the nation will be in recession for the remainder of this year, with growth declining by 0.5 percent over the entire four quarters.

The Gross National Product, the truest measure of economic performance, is the value of all goods and services produced in the United States, adjusted for inflation.

Two consecutive quarterly declines in GNP is considered an official recession.

The only remaining question is whether the negative growth will be mild and last only two quarters or stretch into 1980, as many private economists and other branches of government believe it might.

Tooth Pattern Not Uncommon, Expert Testifies At Trial

MIAMI (AP) — An orthodontist testified Friday that the jagged, crooked tooth pattern of Theodore R. Bundy is not uncommon and that his teeth cannot be positively linked to a mark on the body of one of two sorority sisters he allegedly murdered.

"It's a relatively common dental pattern. It's not that unusual," said Dr. John Grewe as the opening witness in the defense's attempt to convince jurors that someone other than Bundy could have bitten 20-year-old Lisa Levy on Jan 15, 1978.

Two dental experts have testified for the prosecution that Bundy's teeth match a bite mark found on the buttocks of Miss Levy. She and Chi Omega sorority sister Margaret Bowman, 21, were clubbed in their sleep and strangled at the sorority house at Florida State University in Tallahassee. Three other women were attacked the same morning.

Grewe, of the University of Maryland, displayed models of Bundy's teeth and said they had a pattern that might be found in 20 percent of the population.

On cross-examination he conceded that under microscopic inspection no two sets of teeth are exactly alike. He said that on Bundy's teeth, "I did find certain characteristics that are unique," among them, a central incisor with a crack.

Before court could begin Friday morning, the 32-year-old Bundy rose to renew his longstanding complaint that he is not being defended by the lawyer of his choice. He wants Millard Farmer of Atlanta, a specialist in death penalty cases who is known for flamboyant courtroom displays. Farmer is not licensed in Florida, and Judge Edward D. Cowart has refused to allow him into the Bundy case.

Four public defenders and one court-appointed private attorney are defending Bundy. But Bundy said they are avoiding him and are trying to shut him up in court.

"I feel closed out," he said. "What we see going on here today in court I have no responsibility for — but is something obviously I will bear the consequences for."

Cowart said: "There have been five separate counsels here representing you. It's unheard of. I've never seen it done before."

He said the lawyers had held at least 100 conferences with Bundy and barraged the judge with legal memos.

Thumping the bench, Cowart added: "This court is finding clearly, unequivocally, you've had the most excellent counsel I've ever seen ... any defendant in the state of Florida ever have."

He told Bundy to stick with his attorneys or defend himself. Bundy declined.

Then Cowart rejected a defense effort to introduce testimony by psychologist Robert Buckhout of Brooklyn College, who has been critical of Nita Neary's eyewitness identification of Bundy as the man who carried a club out of the sorority shortly after the murders.

Man Buys Nixon Rubble

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (AP) — With thousands of chunks of pipe, plumbing fixtures, concrete, wood and dirt, Neil Mergler is hoping to cash in on Nixon rubble.

One of the two ocean-front houses on the compound Richard Nixon used as a winter White House was bulldozed by its new owner recently. And Mergler says he bought what was left for an undisclosed price that he put at "10 times what I expected."

Mergler says he plans to turn the rubble into paperweights, plaques and pen and pencil sets. He hopes there are those who'll pay $5.95 to $9.95 for the "memorabilia."

Inmates Win Money

ALDERSON, W.Va. (AP) — With an eye for history — and irony — some inmates at the federal women's prison here have made $75 for their Inmate Emergency Fund.

A prison newsletter says the prisoners won the money by entering a flower-bedecked float in Alderson's Fourth of July parade.

Texan Buys Into '21'

NEW YORK (AP) — Manhattan's swank "21" Club has a new partner — Texas oilman Baron Enrico di Portanova.

Di Portanova reportedly paid more than $10 million to buy into the club run by Paul Kriendler and Jerry Burns.

Sheldon Tannen, the club's executive vice president, said he probably would become di Portanova's partner after a complicated exchange of stock.

Tannen, who will become corporation president under the new partnership, said: "No matter what deal is consummated, the present management will stay. Paul and Jerry will certainly remain. '21' is their life."

'Tonto' Blazes New Trail

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Jay Silverheels rode into fame as Tonto, the Lone Ranger's companion in fighting the bad guys of the West. Now he's blazed another trail as the first American Indian to be honored with a star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame.

The 59-year-old Silverheels, with tears streaking his cheeks, was joined by 200 people as his star — the 1,707th to be dedicated — was unveiled Thursday in a ceremony that included traditional Indian songs and dances.

"I am pleased and honored. Thank you all," the actor said softly in a voice faltering with emotion and the apparent effects of a stroke suffered several years ago.

He also received an award from the Los Angeles City Council for "his contributions to the contry, the community and the entertainment field."

Letters To Be Published

HEMINGWAY

NEW YORK (AP) — About 800 letters written by author Ernest Hemingway to family, friends, critics and other writers will be published next year, it was announced Friday.

Charles Scribner's Sons, the publisher that was granted publication rights by the Ernest Hemingway Foundation, said it plans to release "The Letters of Hemingway" in the fall of 1980.

The book will be edited by Carlos Baker, author of a best-seller biography of Hemingway, who said the letters published would "represent major turning points" in Hemingway's career.

Charles Scribner Jr., chairman of the company which has been Hemingway's publisher since 1926, said the volume will create an image of the late author that is "widely different from his public image."

Inflationary Items Tagged

The company tags any item that has gone up by more than 7 percent from the previous week and thus exceeds President Carter's wage-price guidelines. The tag says:

"In our opinion, the price the manufacturer charged us for this item is inflationary."

Predictably, the tagged items are not moving well. "After we ticket them, they shouldn't," said one store manager.

Passengers Pay Fine

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — J.M. Bronkhorst was more than just a bus driver to his regular passengers this week — he was a friend in need.

Known as "Uncle Bronkie" to his passengers, Bronkhorst said that Thursday turned into a day of surprises on his regular route.

First, he glanced at a speed sign and was surprised to find the limit had been reduced overnight from 70 kilometers an hour to 60. Then, a traffic officer pulled him over and gave him a $12 ticket.

But the biggest surprise came when his passengers immediately passed the hat around the bus to collect the money for the fine.

"What wonderful people," Bronkhorst said.

'Free' Coffin Unwanted

Springer built the box for a Halloween coffin race and designed it to match his measurements. He's used it for catnaps on occasion and found it to be really quite comfortable.

"I kind of liked it, but it was taking up too much space," he said.

So, out with the other trash it went, along with a "Free" sign to entice passersby. There were no takers.

"I put it out there as a joke," Springer said. "I don't really think the garbageman wants to take the thing."

Helicopter Jump Victim Identified

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Although no body has ben found, authorities said Friday they have tenatively identified a woman who leaped to her death from a helicopter as the 24-year-old mother of two young children.

San Diego sheriff's investigators said the victim of the bizarre incident Wednesday was believed to be Elaine LaSpina, a former New York resident who had been living in Ocean Beach with her two pre-school children.

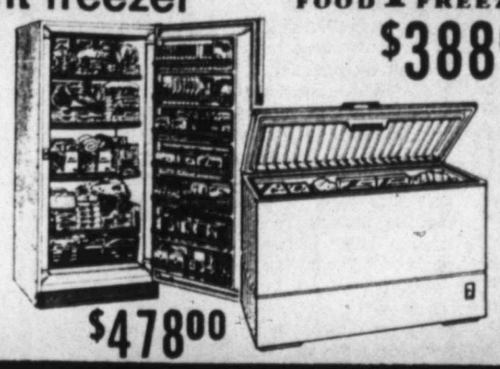

"We have information from Mrs. LaSpina's neighbors and friends that she left her house Wednesday with a large amount of money and did not return," Lt. Jack Drown, a sheriff's spokesman, said. "When we searched the house, we found notes with the names, phone numbers and rates of several helicopter charter services."

A young woman paid $270 in cash to charter a helicopter at National Air College for a flight over land she said she wanted to buy, then smiled at the pilot and jumped out while the craft was hovering at an altitude of 2,000 feet.

The only things left behind were a faded denim jacket and a pair of sandals. No reason was given for the jump.

Cullen Davis Denies Shooting Spree Under Oath

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Millionaire Cullen Davis has said under oath he was in bed with his blonde girl friend at her house during a 1976 shooting spree at his hilltop Fort Worth mansion.

The Texas industrial czar said he attended the movie "The Bad News Bears" alone the night of Aug. 2 and returned to the home of his girl friend at 12:15 a.m.

When he first learned he was being sought for the shootings, Davis said, "He asked Karen Master, now his wife, "I wonder what Priscilla's up to now?"

The reference was to his ex-wife Priscilla, 37, one of two wounded in the attack and one of three who identified Davis as the gunman dressed in black.

Priscilla's lover, Stan Farr, 30, and her daughter, Andrea Wilborn, 12, were killed by the intruder and Gus "Bubba" Gavrel Jr., then 21, was crippled by a bullet lodged in his spine.

Details of Davis' activities that night were included in a sworn deposition taken in connection with a $13 million civil suit filed by Gavrel.

The deposition, filed Friday, represents the first time Davis has told his story under oath.

He was arrested at Mrs. Master's home within hours of the shooting and charged with two counts of capital murder and two counts of attempted murder.

An Amarillo jury acquitted him in 1977 of the murder of his stepdaughter, but he did not testify at the trial.

However, Mrs. Master testified that she awakened at 12:40 a.m. within minutes of the shooting, and that Davis was in bed beside her.

The related charges are still pending but the district attorney's office has indicated that legal technicalities and other considerations preclude further criminal prosecution.

Nine months after his acquittal, Davis, 45, was arrested in Fort Worth and charged with solicitation of capital murder.

He was accused of plotting the contract killing of his divorce judge, Joe Eidson. The judge was not harmed.

A Houston jury failed last January to reach a verdict, deadlocking 8-4, in favor of conviction. A mistrial was declared.

Davis said in his civil deposition he learned in early afternoon of a ruling by Judge Eidson ordering him to increase monthly support payments to Priscilla from $3,500 to $5,000.

The judge also instructed him to pay Priscilla's attorneys $25,000 and her an additional $27,000 for personal expenses.

Davis said he left his office that evening at 5:30 in a company pickup truck and drove to the office of his chiropractor.

He returned to his office and worked until 8 p.m., he said.

He said he drove the pickup to a Kip's restaurant on the West Side where he had a hamburger and a chocolate malt. He then preceded a short distance to the Western Hills theater.

He said he spoke only to a waitress at the restaurant and the cashier at the theater and saw no one whom he knew or who might identify him during that time.

Davis said he emerged from the theater at 11:30 p.m. and recalled that a middle-aged man he did not know spoke to him. He said no subsequent attempt was made to identify this person.

"I got in the pickup and came back to town and parked the truck on the street near the Mid-Continent Building," he said. The building is headquarters for the billion-dollar family empire.

Davis said he had encountered trouble with the pickup and that was why he left it parked on the street and did not return it to the parking garage.

"I walked into the Houston Street garage and got my car and drove out of the garage and drove to Karen's house."

He recalled that it was 12:15 a.m. when he telephoned a friend named Jim Mabe to discuss a trip they were planning to Mexico. He said he went to bed at 12:30 a.m. and did not talk to Karen before he went to sleep.

Mabe testified at Amarillo he talked by telephone with Davis at 12:15 a.m. and said he assumed Davis was calling from Karen's home.

At one point in the deposition, attorney Grover Swift asked Davis, "Did you shoot Gus Gavrel Jr?"

"No, I didn't" Davis replied.

He said also he did not see Beverly Bass that evening. Miss Bass, then 18, and Gavrel's date, was one of the three Amarillo witnesses who named Davis as the intruder.

Davis said on his instructions Karen subsequentiy moved the pickup from a downtown street and parked it in a garage across the street from where he normally kept it.

"I didn't tell her which garage to drive it into and naturally she drove it into the wrong one..." Davis said.

Until Davis' deposition, there had been no indication as to who moved the pickup and when.

It was about 4 a.m., Davis recalled, that he was awakened by a telephone call from his brother Ken.

"He said there had been a shooting out at 4200 Mockingbird Lane and ... I asked him who had been shot and he told me."

Asked what else he was told, Davis replied:

'Well, he said, 'the police are looking for you.' I said what for — I made some comment, I don't know — he even had a couple of other statements and he said, 'what are you going to do?' 'I guess I'm going back to bed.'"

A short time later, he said, police telephoned and ordered him outside, saying the house was surrounded.

Asked if he told Karen anything, Davis said, "Well, I think I said, 'I wonder what Priscilla's up to now.'

"I don't know. They were out there arresting me and that's (why) I was wondering what she was up to."

Catching Thief Is Easy, Justice Is Hard Part

ROCKVILLE, Md. (NEA) — What follows is a personal story. I wish I could say it is also unique, but there is nothing extraordinary about crime in America. Neither is there anything novel about victim distress, police paralysis, judicial ineptitude and the triumph of malefaction over propriety.

It began for me a year ago. I had been away on a news assignment and when I returned to my home in the Washington suburbs I found it had been broken into and robbed. Thugs had entered through a window on the first floor; they apparently stayed about 30 minutes and took $2,000 in property.

Their loot was a curiously mixed lot. They took a valuable antique clock, and some cash, but they passed up gold and jewelry to fill their pockets with an assortment of trinkets. This indicated they were not professional thieves, and the suspicion from the first day was that they were juveniles.

The suspicion was based on statistics as well as evidence. Half of all serious crimes in the nation are now committed by people under the age of 18. The FBI reports that four of 10 thefts are occasioned by children; the figure for burglaries is almost 60 percent.

But age apart, the young crooks are no easier to nab. Police who investigated the crime in my home frankly admitted the chances of an arrest were not good. On the average, arrests are made in less than 20 percent of all juvenile crimes, which means about eight in 10 young felons operate with impunity.

In my case the police did have strong suspicions. And they also had a palmprint that had been deposited in my home by one of the burglars. But they were forbidden by law from pursuing the leads by questioning suspects; police may not question juveniles — and rightly so — on suspicion alone.

Therefore, I was forced to use other measures to get to the thieves. I posted a $200 reward in my neighborhood. Shortly thereafter a lad contacted me for collection. He was a decided rogue himself, a chronic delinquent, and, in effect, he turned in a colleague for a handful of silver.

I was of course delighted. So was the law. Police matched the palmprint with the suspect and a boy of 17 was booked. In time it was learned that the boy was part of a ring; police said he and his companions were probably responsible for at least 12 home burglaries in my neighborhood.

The boy did not go straight to jail, however. Although he confessed to four robberies, he could not be held without a court order, and he was released to await a juvenile hearing. While waiting he reportedly got a steady job; ironically, the rumor was that it was in a burglar alarm company.

The hearings were held six months later. From a victim's point of view they were far from satisfactory. There were numerous delays, for one thing. And too, neither court officers nor state attorneys bothered much with the victims; the latter were left to fend for themselves in the confusion.

But, dutifully, four victims arrived for each hearing, which is more than can be said for the prosecuting attorneys. For reasons never explained, there was a different prosecutor for each hearing. And, quite unfortunately, the second one did not know what the first one had done, etc.

Defense, however, was not so careless. The thief's lawyer brought a parade of witnesses to the stand to testify as to the boy's character. That seemed

Horned Jackrabbits Inhabit Wyoming

By TOM TIEDE

DOUGLAS, Wyo. (NEA) — The natives like to think Wyoming is unique among the 50 states. Fabled, as they put it. The grasshoppers here are so big, for example, they have to duck under the clotheslines. The land is so flat that when beer cans are tossed from trucks they roll all the way into Utah.

TOM TIEDE

And weather? In March the wind blows some days right off the calendar. In winter the telephone lines have to be thawed so people know what they've said to each other. Last August a severe heat wave caused field corn to pop so much that some folks thought it was a blizzard and suffered frostbite.

But of all the singular attractions and phenomena, residents of Douglas claim there is nothing so strange in the state as the Jackalope. The Jackalope? It's a curious, secretive creature, which no one has ever seen, but which holds a place of awe in the imagination of the population.

Some say it's as big as trees in the Tetons. Others believe it comes into the roadhouse conversations, like dust, through cracks in the clapboards. In any event, everyone agrees on its appearance: the Jackalope looks like a rabbit with antlers, a cross between a jumping hare and an antelope.

And, oh my, what stories they tell of the varmit. They say it lives near the lakes where the grunion run, feeds on fur-bearing trout, and, for sport, chases greyhound buses the length of Interstate 25. Moreover, according to the Douglas Chamber of Commerce, the Jackalope may also be able to talk.

Chamber literature describes the creature's speech as imitative by nature. Like the mockingbird, it mimics: "Coyboys singing to their herds at night have been startled to hear their lonesome melodies repeated faithfully from nearby hillsides. The echo cos from the throat of a Jackalope."

One old cowboy here, the bar in the La Bonte Hotel, says the 'Lope's chatter can be unsettling. He recalls an evening on the trail when he left his campfire to pursue the cackling Jackalope voice. Before he knew it, he says, he was caught in a blind canyon and encircled by Jackalopes in the dark:

"I couldn't see nothing, nothing at all, but I heard them growling and scratching the ground. So when they started to close in on me I emptied my Colt at them. Then I emptied my Winchester and my Browning. But nothing stopped them, don't y'know, and they kept getting closer and closer."

What happened?

Well, the cowboy says he eventually heard the animals cut a deck of cards, presumably to see which one would strike first. Afterward, one of the beasts grabbed the victim from behind, hogtied him, and put him in a pot of hot water. "Then they ate me," the old-timer says, "with beans, as I remember."

It should be said there are some in Wyoming who don't believe the cowboy's tale. The idea of the Jackalope has been suspect for some years. A few residents, mostly newcomers to the West, say the beast is in fact mythical, and was invented following the Great Depression in order to stimulate business.

The skeptics believe the 'Lope originated with a Douglas taxidermist named Ralph Herrick. He is said to have mounted a pair of antlers on a stuffed rabbit, in 1934, just for the kick of it, and his mothr gav it the crossbreed name. The thing was then removed to the La Bonte, for suitable display.

LEGENDARY HORNED JACKRABBIT — Douglas legend has it that the Jackalope looks like a cross between the jumping hare and an antelope, except that it is as big as the trees in the tetons. Skeptics say the beast was invented after the Depression to stimulate local business. (NEA Photo)

One thing led to another, reportedly, which is to say a legend was born. The people of Douglas raised a statue to the Jackalope, and placed it in the middle of their primary thoroughfare. Soon the Chamber of Commerce was printing Jackalope hunting licenses, and giving them free to visitors.

Happily, the visitors responded with trade. And over the years tourists have purchased Jackalope postcards, Jackalope bumper stickers, canned Jackalope milk, and big blocks of Jackalope salt lick. In addition, Herrick has mounted 3,500 more of the beasts; they now sell for up to $70 each.

Commercialization apart, however, the Douglas establishment insists its Jackalope is not fiction. Officials say it lives here in profusion, west of the wind. The statue still stands on Center Street, and a prominent billboard advises motorists on the Interstate to "Watch out for the Jackalopes."

True, the animals continue to keep out of sight. But the old cowboy at La Bonte says its because they like to pounce with the element of surprise. "I'll never forget the time they ate me," he sighs. "It was chomp, chomp, chomp, I tell you. The only thing they left was my suspenders and a wart."

French Thieves Remove $1 Million In Jewels

AIX-EN-PROVENCE, France (AP) — A gang of thieves relying on deception rather than force stole almost $1 million worth of jewelry from one of this southern French city's largest jewelry stores, police reported Friday. Three suspects were arrested.

As some of the group asked to be shown expensive jewelry Thursday evening, one stirred up a commotion, distracting store employees, police said. The thieves then scooped up items valued at about $952,000 and fled, but three of the decoys were caught, police said.

They were not identified. The total number of persons involved and other details were not revealed.

DEATH SETTLEMENT

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The deaths of 12 illegal aliens and the injuring of six others in the wreck of an Immigration and Naturalization Service van five years ago has resulted in a settlement by the U.S. government of more than $900,000. The families of the aliens who were killed in the March 8, 1974 accident will get a sum of money plus a lifetime income, Sullivan said. Each injured person will get lifetime medical care, a lifetime pension, and either a sum of money or a five-acre parcel of land in Mexico bought by the United States, he added.

BARBADOS FOUND UNINHABITED

Although both Arwak and Carib Indians inhabited Barbados at one time, the island was uninhabited in 1627 when the first settlers arrived from England. In less than a decade slaves were brought from Africa to work the sugar plantations.

Dating Service Matches Christians

By KEVIN GONZALEZ

MT. LAUREL, N.J. (NEA) — Priscilla Johnson was filling out a dating service application last November when she grew indignant at what she condidered the sexual implications of one of its questions.

"I thought, 'Lord, why can't there be something for people who don't like that kind of thing, something for Christians?' " she remembers.

"And that," she adds with a snap of her fingers, "is when I got the idea."

Miss Johnson's idea goes by the name of Christians Are Preferred. She describes it as a "Christ-centered dating service where each couple is prayerfully matched."

She sees her agency as an alternative for Christians who don't want to go to bars and what she calls "disco dens" to find partners.

Miss Johnson responds to the well over 1,000 inquires she has received about her southern New Jersey agency with an applicatoon form of her own design. In addition to routine queries like name, age, address, occupation and hobbies, there are several theologically related questions.

For example, applicants must rate the importance of Christianity to them on a scale from one to 10.

the best definition of Jesus: prophet, moral man or Savior and Lord?

Other quesitons ask for favorite Christian activities as well as testimony about how the person became a Christian in the first place.

At the bottom of the form's second page is a pledge. It reads: "I will treat each Christian date with respect and honor that is due any brother/sister in Christ."

Fees are $10 for a three month period during which anywhere from three to 10 dates will be arranged. Prices are $15 for six months' membership with six to 20 dates and $30 for a year's membership with 12 to 35 dates.

Prices are scheduled to rise about 30 percent soon to enable Miss Johnson to hire an assistant.

Miss Johnson arranges the dates based on five factors: religious orientation; education; occupation; age, marital status and racial preferences, and number of miles the party will travel to meet a date.

After culling her lists and making the selections, she then sends each person the name, address, telephone number, age and occupation of the other.

Miss Johnson explains that her college degree in psychology gives her an advantage in her new enterprise. She previously was as a social worker for a local cerebral-palsy center.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. PAUL E. RUBLE

Dear Dr. Ruble: Please explain low sodium in the body. What is the cause and is there a treatment? My husband has it. — Mrs. G.C.J.

Sodium (salt to most) is one of many elements (substances found in nature) that the body needs to remain healthy. Most behave the same way. Too much or too little can cause problems. You tell me little, so I can only generalize.

Sodium is found in the blood fluid that bathes the cells of the body. The usual problem is too much of it, which leads to increased blood volume, lung congestion, and other forms of edema (eh-DEE-muh) throughout the body. For high blood pressure, doctors recommend limiting salt in all forms, chiefly through abandoning the salt shaker.

A severe sodium lack causes weakness, confusion, even loss of consciousness. Some people pass out if they engage too long in activity that causes much sweating and sudden salt loss.

Medical causes of low sodium include severe diarrhea or vomiting, also kidney disease or pituitary or adrenal gland problems. Those are the glands that control levels. Diuretics (water pills) may cause excess loss of sodium from the body, as it may with potassium, another of those vital elements. Extreme edema (excess fluid) may cause a low sodium reading, since the substance is diluted, so to speak.

An ordinary diet provides the sodium most people need (three to seven grams a day). Treatment for low sodium depends on the specific cause among those mentioned. For some, additional salt may be needed. For others, restriction of fluids may help. The doctor should advise.

Dear Dr. Ruble: My surgeon has told me I have a hiatal hernia. What I don't understand is his statement that I need surgery for it. He said he would go through my upper stomach. Is this a common type of surgery? — Mrs.H.A.

Most hiatal hernias do not require surgery. Some (about 15 percent) do. The hernia is a bulging of a bit of the stomach upward into the gullet through the hiatus. The hiatus is the small opening provided for passage of the gullet tube (esophagus) to the stomach. It may be too large or weakened, causing the hernia.

Surgery is recommended when conservative treatment, such as antacids and elevation of the head of the bed at night, do not help relieve pain. The surgeon can reach the hernia area by way of the abdomen (not through the stomach) or through the upper chest. If you want to study further, see the booklet, "Hiatal Hernia: Eight Ways to Combat It." For a copy, send 35 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Ruble, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

CONFIDENTIAL FOR T.O. — ARTERITIS is inflammation of an artery (blood vessel). ARTHRITIS is inflammation of a joint. No connection between the two words, but there may be between the two conditions. You can have one with the other. You may have misunderstood your doctor's words. Go back and get clarification.

Dear Dr. Ruble: I have a problem with the sun. I get little welts. Am I allergic to it, and if so what can be done? — M.F.

Use the word "sensitive" rather than "allergic." You probably are sensitive. All I can suggest is very gradual exposure if you must sun at all. Too, there are good sun screen lotions that block out the ultraviolet rays. Some medicines can increase one's sensitivity to the sun. Ask your doctor about any you are taking.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: What are Beau's lines? What causes them? — M.M.

They are transverse (crosswise) grooves in fingernails. They may be from poor manicuring technique or may appear after any serious illness. Once the cause is removed new nails grow in, minus the lines. Nutritional disturbance, drugs, flu, or other general body disturbances may cause Beau's lines. They disappear when the cause is removed and new nails grow.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: Can sunning have any bad effects on varicose veins? — M.Z.

It won't aggravate the vein problem, but it may cause a local pigmentation of the skin and some swelling.

DEADLINES

Any information for a daily edition must be in our office two days in advance of publication.

Sunday edition deadlines are 5 p.m. the preceding Tuesday for articles with pictures and noon the preceding Wednesday for articles only. Only Friday and Saturday weddings will appear on Sunday; wedding announcements must run within five days of the event.

Engagement announcements must be submitted at least five weeks prior to the wedding date.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

I got a pair of corduroy pants for a present and recently they were washed with a red sweatshirt.

I now have red spots scattered all over the pants. They are much too good to throw away and I would love to be able to wear them again next fall.

Would you please tell me how to get this stain out. — L. Haber

Oh, dear! This has happened to all of us at one time or another, and it's not an easy problem to solve.

But since the pants are obviously ruined (other than being able to wear them around the house), what have you got to lose, right?

So you might try using the solution of automatic dishwasher detergent (½ cup), bleach (¼ cup) along with your regular laundry detergent.

Add this to your machine, run only your slacks through the normal wash cycle using the "warm" setting rather than "hot."

Hope this helps and have a happy day. — Hugs, Heloise

• • •

DEAR HELOISE:

If any of your erasers leave a smudge on the paper that is worse than the mistake you are trying to eliminate, and if sandpaper is not available, just use an emery board. — G.O.V.

• • •

DEAR HELOISE:

Recall how slippery the handles are on fingernail clippers? The large toenail clippers are even worse.

This will provide a nearly non-slip surface on the handle. — Fred Nudell

You sure are a smart gent! — Heloise

• • •

DEAR HELOISE:

I read your hints everyday. They are just wonderful. Would you please run the hint about making granulated sugar into powdered sugar?

I have misplaced my copy somewhere. — Mrs. Williams

Boy, because of food prices soaring, or just to substitute — making granulated sugar into powdered sugar is a practical and simple task — if you have a blender.

A half cup of granulated sugar makes about a cup of powdered sugar, so measure accordingly. — Hugs, Heloise

• • •

DEAR HELOISE:

Cut up your old nylon panty hose into strips about one inch wide and whatever length you desire.

These make perfect wicks for your plants to obtain the correct amount of water they need.

They don't get slimy like the wicks you purchase, and they are free. — Elsie Dobard

• • •

DEAR HELOISE:

Keep the small rectangular nylon brush that comes on the top of spray cans of upholstery cleaner.

Pry it off the can with a knife or screwdriver and wash well.

It can be used for a nailbrush in the bathroom, "ring around the collar" in the laundry room and it's great in the kitchen to clean the grater, beaters and pastry blender. — Florenoe Spensley

• • •

DEAR HELOISE:

Rinse out a vitamin bottle, the kind that has a "squeeze-dropper top," and fill with baby shampoo.

Just the right amount comes out, and no worrying about knocking over that big bottle of shampoo, or pouring it into baby's eyes. — Barry's Mommy

Weddings

MRS. GARY D. TIDWELL

A reception honoring Mr. and Mrs. Gary Don Tidwell will be given at 8 p.m. today in the Lubbock Club. Hosts will be Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Brunken, parents of the bride.

The couple was married recently in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Keith Crocker of Cleburne.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann: I am writing in response to the letter about the newborn infant found in the trash can of a filling station restroom. As a registered nurse who has worked in a hospital nursery, I can inform these mothers that they have alternatives.

If you are pregnant and don't know what you are going to do when your time comes, go to the nearest hospital or medical facility and present yourself to the emergency room staff. They will take it from there. If you don't have any money, there is no need to worry. Nobody expects you to pay if you can't. If you are embarrassed or ashamed, don't be. The nurses and doctors aren't there to judge you. They are there to help.

Do you want to remain anonymous? Fine. Give a false name and address or simply refuse to give a name. You'll be listed as "Jane Doe." If you don't care about the baby, that's your business. No one will make you feel ashamed or guilty. Your baby will be taken to the nursery and later placed with an adoption agency. You don't have to see it or even know what sex it is.

If you are pregnant now, present yourself to the emergency room of any hospital for a check-up. If you can't pay, it's free and it could make a lot of difference in the way you feel. This might be critical to the health of the innocent life you carry. Every pregnant woman (especially the teenager) should be under medical observation. Please follow these instructions. You deserve a break. — I Am Concerned

Dear Concerned: Your advice is good, but it doesn't hold for every hospital. Private hospitals can refuse some patients, and they do. A woman in early stages of pregnancy should go to a public hospital.

Any hospital will try to determine a patient's identity for a medical history, so it's best to tell them. They will, however, respect a request for secrecy.

• • •

Dear Ann: I would like to post the following on my front door but I don't have the nerve. Please print it, Ann. Perhaps it will make someone, somewhere, more considerate when visiting in the home of a friend or relative.

1. Don't come over unless you have been invited. If you'd like to come, please phone ahead to make sure the visit is convenient for me. (I love your company, but I don't appreciate being caught in my bathrobe with dirty dishes in the sink and nothing to offer in the way of refreshments.)

2. If your shoes are wet or dirty, please don't make me ask you to remove them. I'd prefer you did it on your own.

3. If you don't know where to put your coats and purses, just ask me. Please don't put them on my dining room table. Purse hardware, zippers, buttons and clasps are hard on natural wood surfaces.

4. If you don't see an ashtray or a coaster, please don't put your glasses on my tables — or your ashes on my rug.

5. If you bring your kids, keep them under control. Ask me where I would like them to play, and then be sure they go there. When I give them something to eat or drink, see that they go to the kitchen. It should be YOUR suggestion, not mine.

6. If you aren't willing to adhere to these common-sense rules, please do us both a favor and stay home. — No City, No State, Please

Dear No State: Every one of your rules is reasonable. No person should resent being asked to adhere to them. In fact, individuals who have good judgment shouldn't have to be asked. They know.

• • •

Are your parents too strict? Hard to reach? Ann Landers' booklet, "Bugged By Parents? How to Get More Freedom," could help you bridge the generation gap. Send 50 cents with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Clip 'n' Cook

PORTABLE PICNIC CAKE

Crunch Topping:
- 1¼ cups quick oats, uncooked
- 2/3 cup firmly packed brown sugar
- ¼ cup chunk style peanut butter, melted
- ¼ cup butter or margarine, melted

Cake:
- ½ cup chunk style peanut butter
- ½ cup butter or margarine
- ½ cup firmly packed brown sugar
- 1½ cups Ground Oat Flour
- 1¼ cups all-purpose flour
- 1 tbsp. baking powder
- ¾ tsp. salt
- 3 eggs, beaten
- 2/3 cup milk
- ½ cup honey

For crunch topping, combine all ingredients; mix well.

For cake, beat together peanut butter, butter and sugar until creamy. Gradually add combined dry ingredients alternately with combined eggs, milk and honey, mixing well after each addition. Spread batter into greased 15x9-inch baking pan; sprinkle crunch topping evenly over batter. Bake at 350 degrees F. for 30 to 35 minutes or until wooden pick inserted in center comes out clean. Cool. Note: to substitute old fashioned oats for quick oats, for crunch topping, increase oats to 1½ cups.

For Ground Oat Flour, place 1¼ cups quick or old fashioned oats, uncooked, in blender, cover and blend about 60 seconds.

BABY NEEDS

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

There is a special bridge astigmatism that causes the declarer to look so hard at part of a hand that he fails to consider all possibilities.

South studied the spade and diamond suits very carefully. He finally concluded that he should play two rounds of trumps before going after diamonds.

He discarded one diamond on dummy's ace of clubs, played dummy's queen of trumps, led a second trump to his 10 and relaxed when both opponents followed. Then he led a diamond to dummy's king and a second diamond to his ace. East showed out and South's grand slam had been sunk without a trace.

It had been an unnecessary loss. South had failed to see the extra chance that dummy's fifth heart gave him.

Once trumps broke, South should have played ace, king and then ruff a small heart from dummy. Back to dummy with the king of diamonds, another heart ruff and the grand slam would make. South's 13 tricks would be six trumps, ace-king of hearts, dummy's fifth heart, ace-king of diamonds, a diamond ruff and the ace of clubs.

Had hearts broken 5-2 South would still have been able to try for a 3-2 diamond break.

GROWING FEET NEED LEATHER SHOES.

Sneakers are OK some of the time, but your child should wear leather shoes, too. Leather shoes offer many advantages.
Leather breathes and holds its shape while absorbing and dissipating moisture. This creates a healthier environment for feet by preventing moisture build-up.
Leather is sturdier and provides more shock-absorbing protection for running and jumping.
Leather supports the foot while it's growing and gives more comfort by conforming to the upper foot.
Leather shoes also come in more sizes and widths than sneakers do, so your child's feet can be more properly fitted.
There is a proper time for sneakers, but be sure your child gets the protection necessary for growing feet in Child Life leather shoes.
When you buy Child Life shoes, you can be sure you're getting not only the finest shoe made but also the finest fit possible.

Lorrain Masterpiece Bought 'Cheaply'

NEW YORK (AP) — Pulling off an art dealer's fondest dream, Richard L. Feigen was the only expert at an auction to recognize a mislabeled canvas as a 17th century painting worth $375,000. He bought it for $2,500.

The Manhattan art dealer said Thursday that he was the only one at last week's sale at Christie's in London who realized the romantic landscape was the work of the French old master Claude Lorrain. Christie's had attributed the work to another artist.

Feigen eyed the 28-by-37-inch painting for a week before Friday's auction, extended his business trip, hoping nobody else would recognize the work of "one of the greatest artists in history."

His "hopes were greatly diminished" when some of the sharpest eyes in the art business showed up at the relatively unimportant sale of "Fine Old Masters."

"I thought they were there for this painting," he said, adding that at that point he resigned himself to bidding up to $300,000 for it. But nobody bid against him.

"All the biggest dealers and experts were there. They didn't know," Feigen gloated.

He arranged for shippers to rush the painting out of the auction house and to New York, lest someone at Christie's should discover a "mistake" and want it back.

"I wanted this thing picked up right away. They could say, 'You didn't buy it,'" he explained.

Feigen said he also wanted the romantic landscape in New York in time for a visit from Marcel Roethlisberger, a professor at the University of Geneva in Switzerland and a leading authority on Claude Lorrain.

The word from Roethlisberger made the dream complete.

"This is a great Claude," the professor reportedly said. The artist's paintings are referred to by his first name because that is how he signed them.

Feigen said Roethlisberger dated the landscape as having been painted in Rome in 1632, when the artist was 32 years old.

The art dealer said the painting was in "wonderful, unusual condition."

Its true value as a Claude was acknowledged by Christie's in New York and the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

"Paintings are reattributed from time to time," said Christie's spokeswoman Elizabeth Shaw. "You can make a very lucky buy that way. It's wonderful when it happens."

CONVICTION IN DEATH

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — A 15-year-old male prostitute has been convicted of manslaughter and assault in the death of one of his clients who was beaten and run down with a car. Tracy Kimball, 14 years old at the time of the crime, faces up to 10 years in prison. The Onondaga County Court jury convicted him Thursday of first-degree manslaughter, first-degree assault and unauthorized use of a motor vehicle.

Trespassing Elk Freed In Russia

MOSCOW (AP) — One night an elk came out of the forest park surrounding the Ural town of Asbest and picked its way along the quiet streets. When it reached Pobeda Street in the city center, it went into an apartment house and started climbing up the stairs. But when it wanted to get down it couldn't, as its hoofs slipped on the stairs. The animal went up to the fifth floor, and tried to jump over the railing to get down but was stranded between the floors.

The tenants all ran out to see what the commotion was and telephoned the militia. The elk's feet were bound with linen cords and it was carefully lowered, loaded into a truck and taken to the forest park near the town. There the hunting inspector smeared the animal's bruises with a green ointment and unfastened the bindings.

The animal immediately jumped to its feet and disappeared into the forest.

WHAT'S UP?

What's up in the water?

Hush those excuses about it being too hot for exercise. Just move your workout from land to water.

Here are five water exercises — called "hydrocalisthenics" — to tone your entire body. The exercises come from George Haines, Olympic swim coach and consultant to Phillips Petroleum, national sponsor of the AAU senior swimming program.

1. Bobs: Limber up by bobbing in the water. (Chest-deep water is best for most of these exercises.)
2. Kicks: Grasp the side of the pool. Extend your legs behind you. Lift them up and down slowly. Intersperse with rapid, vigorous kicks for 30-second intervals.
3. Water Jacks: Stand up in the water at the side of the pool. Extend your left arm to the ledge for support. Place your right arm at your side. Lift your right leg up from the side of your body in a scissor-like motion as you swing your right arm in a circle from your side up and over your head. Return to starting position. Repeat 20 times. Then turn around to exercise your other side.
4. Leg Swings: Grasp the edge of the pool. Thrust your right leg forward as if kicking a ball. Then swing it down and back behind your body. Return to starting position. Perform the pendulum-like motion 20 times. Repeat with the left leg.
5. Arm Swings: Stand in neck-deep water with your arms at your sides and your palms flat against your legs. Like a bird flapping its wings, raise your arms to shoulder height and return them to your sides. Repeat 20 times. Move the arm from the shoulder; don't bend it at the elbow.

What's up in puzzlers?

Bored with contemplating the meaning of life? Then try these winners of a recent Omni magazine contest to select the questions most likely to lead to prolonged head scratching.

1. Why can't you tickle yourself?
2. A spring is compressed, tied and dropped into acid. Where does the potential energy go?
3. Why are so many more people right-handed than left-handed?
4. When a person shaves the hair on his forearm, why will it grow back just to its original length and no longer?
5. A compass rests on a table. A magnetized ball rolls around it, the compass needle pointing to the ball at all times. When the ball has traveled completely around the compass, has it gone around the big needle?
6. Light travels at different speeds in different media. It slows down when it leaves air and goes into water; it speeds up when it leaves water and goes back into air. But where does the energy come from to speed it up again? (In contrast, a hockey puck slows down when it enters rough ice but does not speed back up when it reaches a smooth region.)
7. If the tides are caused by the moon's gravitational pull, why are there two high tides in 24 hours?
8. Why does the shower curtain insist on blowing up against the force of the water shooting down and out?
9. Where does the light go when turned on in a sealed, mirror-lined room?
10. What color does a chameleon turn when placed on a mirror?

What's up in roads?

Charles Kuralt spends a lot of time on the road as correspondent for CBS News. Now he has compiled this list of the nation's 10 most beautiful roads for Family Circle magazine.

1. U.S. 212 from Red Lodge, Mont., up 11,000-foot Beartooth Pass and down to the northeast entrance of Yellowstone Park.
2. California Route 1 along the Pacific coast from Morro Bay to Monterey.
3. The Going to the Sun Highway across Glacier Park in Montana.
4. U.S. 550 in Colorado from Montrose to Durango.
5. Hawaii Route 56 from Lihue to Haena on the island of Kauai.
6. The Blue Ridge Parkway south from Front Royal, Va., in spring.
7. Vermont Route 100 in autumn.
8. U.S. 61 though the historic Mississippi towns of Vicksburg and Natchez to New Orleans.
9. North Carolina Route 12 down the Outer Banks from Nags Head to Hatteras and by ferry to Ocracoke Island.
10. Route 101 around Washington's Olympic Peninsula.

Kirk's first comic fling

YOUR MONEY OR YOUR VIRTUE — Ann-Margret, as Charming Jones, a lusty lass who'd rather be chased than chaste, has an obvious answer to that demand as she prepares to protect her holdings from the dastardly Kirk Douglas in "The Villain."

It has taken nearly 35 years, more than 50 movies and three Academy Award nominations. But Kirk Douglas is finally starring in a straight-out comedy.

Douglas plays Cactus Jack Slade, the most inept outlaw who ever tried to rob the heroine and ravish the stagecoach, in Columbia Pictures "The Villain."

"Cactus Jack is one of those people who simply aren't cut out for their jobs," says Douglas. "He's rotten enough to be a villain. And he certainly looks the part. But the nastier he gets, the more things go wrong."

The biggest insult comes when he jumps on his horse to make a getaway, the animal sits on his haunches with a whinnying laugh. The producers hope viewers will react similarly.

"Looking back over my career," says Douglas, "I doubt that many producers or directors would have pictured me in the role. I'm not even sure that I would have thought of me.

"I've had my share of ups and downs, and I've been very lucky. Invariably, when things weren't going well, the right part came along just in time.

"If there's one thing this business teaches you it's humility ... be grateful for the acclaim and prepared that it won't last ... the public is justifiably fickle."

Florida's flying dolphins

Moving to a new home is always an adventure, but it was particularly so for Bud and Mich.

Like many travelers this summer, the pair was experiencing its first airplane ride. But, since Bud and Mich are bottle-nosed dolphins, the seating arrangement wasn't the normal three abreast.

Instead, they lifted off from their native North Carolina secured in flannel "shirts" that covered most of their bodies. Suspended in canvas slings, the air-breathing mammals were continuously sprayed with water to moisten their delicate skin.

In Florida's Busch Gardens' Dark Continent two hours later, they were reunited with trainers Ron and Joan Blalock. Bud and Mich will be headlining their own show, to be performed in the Dark Continent's Timbuktu section.

There aren't many dolphins who board their first flight and land in Timbuktu.

What's up in silliness?

LONDON (UPI) — Britain is a country where the term "silly season" has real meaning, and we're smack in the middle of it.

For instance:

Six armed raiders planned a perfect ambush of a security firm truck in a London suburb Thursday, and the elaborate plan went off perfectly.

With perfect timing the masked men forced the truck to halt, dealt with its guards and wrenched open the truck's locked doors. It was entirely empty.

Firemen raced to an overturned tank truck at Elton, and then the racing stopped. The truck had spilled 2,000 gallons of glue.

A librarian at Dudley said "Thank you" in a choked and baffled voice and accepted a children's book being returned slightly more than 40 years overdue.

BIRTHDAY ALMANAC

Refugee Official Working To Aid Boat People

By MURRAY OLDERMAN

GENEVA, Switzerland (NEA) — The plight of the boat people of Vietnam came to the attention of the world through the help of Rajagopalan Sampatkumar.

He is known as Sampat — or Sam, for short. Two months ago, he learned of an alleged incident in which Malaysia towed a boat loaded with Chinese refugees out to the open sea. The boat capsized and 104 people drowned. Sampat made it known to the world — over Malaysian denials.

An Indian, he heads the Malaysia office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees based here on the shores of Lake Geneva. There are 30 people in the Malaysia office.

With totals mounting rapidly, it is currently estimated that more than 250,000 refugees from Communist Indochina are housed in Asian camps. Many are Vietnamese boat people who flee — at the rate of about 15,000 per month — by sea to Malaysia and other East Asia countries.

Among the accomplishments of the HCR office is taking the once-uninhabited island of Pulau Bidong in the South China Sea just off the Malaysian coast and creating an overnight colony of 42,000 Vietnamese refugees.

Because of its hopeless, crowded conditions, Pulau Bidong has become a cesspool of human misery. But it is life-sustaining for those cast-offs who have no place to go until other nations open their borders.

"We've been maintaining them" says an HCR spokesman, "with water barges two and three times a week and supplying them with food. We've even air-lifted food in during the monsoons. This has been going on since last August."

The Haut Commissariat des Nations Unies pour les Refugies (French version of HCR), as the complex off the Rue de Lausanne is inscribed, was established in 1951 to erase the last vestiges of the displaced persons camps of World War Ii. It had a $200,000 budget and was expected to last five years.

"Here we are in 1979," says Dale de Haan, the deputy high commissioner and a former aide to President Kennedy, "taking care of 10 million refugees." And with an operating budget of from $150 million to $170 million, donated by the United Nations, member governments and voluntary agencies.

HCR prides itself on being out there where it's happening. Most of its 800 people are spread around 35 worldwide offices, two-thirds in crucial places such as Kuala Lumpur, Manila and Bangkok.

Malaysia and Thailand, for instance, are members of the United Nations. To get help, they have to come forward with request for assistance on the plight of refugees, which the nations have done in limited form.

Then HCR sends out its representatives with bags full of money. They put up tents, airlift food, bring in doctors — and create instant communities such as Pulau Bidong. Squalid, perhaps. Fetid, too.

"The fact we've had no major epidemic on an island like Pulau Bidong is a tribute to us," says an HCR spokesman.

Yet with all the humanitarianism emanating from these corridors, there's also a deep sense of frustration. HCR can't anticipate and fend off refugee problems. "What does a fire department do," asks one HCR employee, "to prevent a fire?"

Last December, the HCR, anticipating the flood of boat people, convened 40 countries — Geneva is great for convening nations — to discuss the world refugee situation. Three issues were paramount.

One, the Vietnamese were asked to slow down the deportation of Chinese. Dale de Haan went to Hanoi twice and was promised an orderly refugee departure. It was only lip service.

Two, contributors were asked to step up their financial support of HCR. The budget for 1979 didn't reflect 40,000 people showing up suddenly in Malaysia during May.

Three, more resettlement places were sought. This has been the major disappointment in the HCR program. The United States has taken up to 84,000 refugees per year and will increase that number. Australia has taken more per capita than any other nation. But other countries, with the exception of France, have virtually ignored the desperate refugees.

Ironically, Southeast Asia does not represent the biggest numbers in the refugee field. There are 5 million refugees on the continent of Africa — most accepted by the hospitable neighboring countries. Subsistence has been the main problem there; that's where the HRC comes in.

The scandal of Asia creates the biggest headlines, though. And the presence of the HCR remains vital — not just for sustenance but to make the world aware of injustices.

Summer Break Eyed By House Speaker

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill has been asked to consider canceling the chamber's August recess.

Citing President Carter's new energy initiatives, Rep. Ike Skelton, D-Mo., sent O'Neill a letter suggesting this is not the time for lawmakers to take an extended break.

"With the mood of the American people wanting to join in solving our problems, and realizing the need for immediate action on our part, I urge you to cancel the August recesss ... so we can do our part in taking immediate legislative steps" toward solving energy problems, Skelton said in the letter.

Skelton had traveled to Kansas City and Detroit with President Carter earlier this week.

EXECUTION STAYED

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — The execution of convicted murderer David Alan Osborn, who was scheduled to become the first U.S criminal to die by injection, has been stayed by the state Supreme Court. Osborn, at his June 29 sentencing, told District Judge Arthur Oliver he didn't want to appeal, but the Supreme Court decided to go ahead with a review, which is automatic under Idaho law. Osborn, 30, was sentenced to die for the murder last year of his girlfriend, Pocatello waitress Charlotte Carl. He was the first person sentenced under a new Idaho law calling for death by injection instead of hanging.

German Casino Favorite For Swiss High Rollers

By Murray Olderman

KONSTANZ, West Germany (NEA)- Gunter Liegmann goes to work dressed in a tuxedo and black tie six days a week. Gunter has a pretty special job.

No, he's not a headwaiter or a mortician.

Gunter spins a little white ball around a big wooden ring and waits for it to nestle after several fast revolutions in a numbered slot. With the other hand and a special rake, he moves around 5, 10 and 50 Deutsch mark (German currency) chips.

Gunter is a croupier, sitting in the No. 1 position, in the gambling casino at Konstanz (or Constance in the French version).

The casino, which once was a Nazi party headquarters, sits handsomely on the German side of the Bodensee (or Lake Constance). On the other side is Switzerland.

Gambling is big here because it's accessible to the Swiss high rollers, who have virtually no action at home. (They can only play a game called "boule" with a 5-franc, or $3, limit, a watered-down version of roulette played with a big black rubber ball.)

Casinos in Europe are far different in atmosphere than those in Las Vegas and Reno. Decorum is the mode. Gambling is done in a mostly hushed atmosphere.

That's why Gunter is so natty-it's obligaory. And the clientele must wear coats and ties (in summertime, they relax it a little, and you can doff the tie).

Gunter once thought he'd try the American gambling scene. "It was-how do you say it?-a rat race," he shakes his head. "Too much noise and people rushing around."

Besides, the United States had no need for a croupier who specialized in French roulette.

Originally, Gunter migrated south in Germany from the island of Sylt in the North Sea close to Denmark. He found he could make a lot more money working in a casino than in a lumberyard, learned the gambling trade and got a job in Konstanz. That was 17 years ago.

A couple of years later, he married Judy Rinehart, an El Cerrito, Calif., native who was visiting Germany. They now have two children Mark, 14, and Kirsten, 11 and live comfortably in their own condominium.

The average Konstanz casino croupier makes $33,000 a year (5,000 D-marks a month). None of it is salary. All the money derives from tips, which go into a central pot to be divided among the croupiers-there are 80-according to job and seniority.

The pot is a whopping average of $440,000 a month because European rollers are used to tipping their entire original bet when they hit a number.

Tips from the eight roulette tables and two blackjack tables not only support the employees but are used to maintain the casino and its grounds as well. And the croupiers are currently unhappy because the state government of Baden-Wuerttemberg dug up an old law instituted by Heinrich Himmler, head of the SS during the Nazi regime, which calls for 15 percent of all tips to be siphoned off the top as a tax.

The casino manager-or technische Leiter (technical leader)-is Robert Kind, a former U-boat officer whose submarine sank the first aircraft carrier, the British ship Courageous, in World War II. His income comes from the tip pot, too.

Herr Kind is thinking about installing slot machines next year to appease the local residents. You see, they're not allowed to gamble in the casino-it's only for outsiders-and neither are the croupiers.

Talking about the slot machines, Kind says: "They'll be electronic. We don't want the noise to get the environmentalists aroused."

Slots so far are verboten in the 26 casinos now spotted around West Germany.

In Germany, they don't maintain the frenetic pace of Nevada. Casino Konstanz, for instance, doesn't open till 2 p.m. and closes at 2 a.m. Eight times a year, it shuts down for religious or national holidays.

The combine that owns the Konstanz emporium also owns the plush casino at Baden Baden in the Black Forest and others in Berlin and near Cologne. The corporation takes a 20 percent cut of the action; the state gets 80 percent.

YOUR PERSONAL BIORHYTHMS

By Bernard Gittelson, Author of "Biorhythm: A Personal Science"

The personal science of biorhythm can tell you how your day will go. Now you can judge the highs and lows of not only yourself, but loved ones and friends, and celebrities and stars. Biorhythm, our newest scientific discipline, is the study of the built-in natural cycles that powerfully influence our behavior.

BIORHYTHMS FOR JULY 21, 1979

PHYSICAL
Criticals: 9, 20, 32, 43, 55, 66 ..... Fatigue highlights day
Highs: 10-19, 33-42, 56-65 ..... You have strength today

EMOTIONAL
Criticals: 7, 21, 35, 49, 63, 77 ..... Watch out, don't blow up
Highs: 1-6, 22-34, 50-62, 78-85 ..... Trust your instincts

INTELLECTUAL
Criticals: 13, 29, 45, 62, 79, 95 ..... Dangerous day mentally
Highs: 14-28, 47-61, 80-94 ..... Brain operating well
Lows: 1-12, 30-45, 63-78 ..... Rapid thought off

Enter your own permanent numbers in the chart in the bottom right-hand corner. To figure your own permanent numbers, follow these three steps:

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Step 2: Now find the corresponding number for the month you were born. If your month is February, and your year numbers were preceded by a B, your month numbers would be 8 for Physical, 3 for Emotional and 31 for Intellectual. Enter your own numbers in the figure chart for Step 2.

Step 3: In the figure chart, enter your day of birth three times, one each for Physical (P), Emotional (E) and Intellectual (I). (If you were born on April 3, for instance, place a 3 in each column.)

Add the three columns to derive your permanent biorhythm numbers for your Physical, Emotional and Intellectual cycles. Now you can refer to today's rhythms.

These numbers are yours permanently. Check them each day for your biorhythm reading.

Actress Escapes Shoving Match

NEW YORK (UPI) — Broadway actress Stephanie Mills went to a Queens record shop to promote her latest album when a shoving match broke out in a crowd of 2,000 fans at the store and 30 people were pushed through the store's windows.

Miss Mills, who starred in "The Wiz," was forced to flee the scene — disguised as an injured fan — in an ambulance. She was not hurt.

Deputy Inspector John Kelly said the fracas began when a mounted police officer tried to herd people off the street and onto the sidewalk. Crowd members said the cop rode through them.

The 30, including a 3-year-old girl who needed two stitches in her thigh, were treated for cuts at Queens Hospital Center and later released.

The petite entertainer was appearing to promote her latest album and sign autographs.

A crowd of 2,000 fans gathered, but only 200 were able to get inside. The rest massed outside on the sidewalk and spilled over into the street.

Kelly said the mounted cop, whom he would not identify, was on routine patrol when he saw the crowd and tried to get people off the street because they were blocking traffic.

Dallas Policemen Begin Pedal Patrols

DALLAS (AP) — The newest police squad cruising the streets of Dallas may have difficulty in running down speeding motorists. But despite that, officers say there are many advantages to having policemen riding bicycles.

For one thing, "People have to have second thoughts now about continuing their illegal operations if someone on a bike drives by," said officer Ray Ball. "It may be an officer."

Pedaling among the populace, the officers are hard-pressed to conceal their handguns and walkie-talkies beneath their shorts and polo shirts. The "Pedal Patrol" is an experimental unit whose members concentrate on problem areas like shopping centers, and there's usually a regular squad car with uniformed officers nearby in case things get out of hand.

"If we see something going on, we can call a patrol unit to the scene so that we don't have to get involved," said officer Brian Faulkner. "We'd rather do that."

Lt. J.L. Williams said the fledgling program has been under way for about three weeks, and only about 20 arrests have been made by the pedalers.

PEDAL PATROL — Brian Faulkner, left, and Ray Ball, right, are two members of an experimental unit of the Dallas police who are patroling problem areas on bikes. They have a hare time concealing their handguns and walkie-talkie units uncer their shorts and polo shirts, but there is usually a police squad car nearby to aid them in case things get hairy. 'Muleskinner' Plans To Aid Befuddled U.S. Politicians

OSWEGO, Ill. (UPI) — V.A. Kelley says the man who sits in the Oval Office needs a "little common mule sense."

So, Kelley, who bills himself as a muleskinner, hitched two mules to a wagon Friday and headed off in quest of the 3,000 petition signatures he needs to get on the Republican ballot in Illinois's 1980 presidential primary.

"I don't have a platform," said Kelley, a 64-year-old retired feed-and-grain dealer and carpenter. "The only thing I have is my wagon and I more or less am going to be speaking on it."

Kelley, however, has cited inflation and the energy crisis as the top concerns in his gasoline-saving, mule-team campaign.

He said his campaign trek will take him from the northern Illinois community of Oswego to the riverfront town of Cairo at the southern tip of the state.

"We'll be reading and listening and then speaking each night," he said. "I'll be driving my mules adout 24 miles a day. I Could drive them 30 but I don't want to use my mules that much." 8

"My wife's not going," he said. "She's not overly enthused about it. But she realizes we need a change, too."

He refused to be discouraged by the crowded field.

"I think I can win if I can get enough people to listen," Kelley said. "I'm really not out to win. If ji do it'll be sort of a miracle. But we need something like a miracle to get this country back in the right direction.

"I think Ronald Reagan is the best and I picked him to be my vice president. If I can get him as my vice president we can straighten this country out."

INDIAN PROTESTERS

BEMIDJI, Minn. (AP) — Bond has been set at $20,000 for Harry Hanson, a leader of protesting Indians on the Red Lake Reservation, after his arrest on charges of damaging a Bureau of Indian Affairs police car. Hanson, who remained in jail Friday, and four other Chippewa Indians were convicted last Friday night of conspiracy and assault on federal officers in the May 19 takeover of the reservation jail. They were released on bail while awaiting sentencing. Officers said Hanson rammed the police car with his pickup truck on Sunday.

Farmers Greeting Higher Wheat Prices

By PAUL STEVENS

BENTLEY, Kan. (AP) — Temptation overcame Richard Basore when he drove a truckload of newly harvested wheat to the Mt. Hope grain elevator and saw the cash price: $4.08 a bushel.

"I wanted to be able to say I sold some for $4," said the 35-year-old farmer. So he sold 1,000 bushels — about one-tenth of his 1979 crop — and used the money to pay off a bank loan taken out this spring for fertilizer and herbicide.

But the rest of his wheat crop sits safely inside the elevator, eight miles from the family farm in south-central Kansas, awaiting a higher price.

Across the nation's wheat belt, farmers are seeing prices over the $4-a-bushel mark for the first time in four years — despite an increase in U.S. wheat production, which normally would drive down prices.

Prospects of larger grain purchases by the Soviet Union, poor export conditions in other wheat-growing nations and U.S. farmers' restraint in selling their grain are prime factors behind the jump in prices.

In states like Kansas, where wheat is a major economic force, the bullish market is a billion-dollar transfusion. Combined with the improved cattle economy, it has sent optimism flowing up and down Main Street businesses from Liberal to Leavenworth.

Basore's farm is in the Wichita trade area, where some 100 million of the state's expected 385-million bushel crop is produced. Wheat price jumps of 10 cents a bushel on some days this summer meant $10 million added to the Wichita area's income.

Basore said his 1979 wheat crop was the best ever and it apparently will be the same for other Kansas producers. The state's 1979 harvest will yield a record 385.2 million bushels by the time it's completed later this month, according to a recent forecast.

The improved prices will make life more comfortable for Basore, his wife and their three young children. They could mean a vacation that hasn't been possible the last few years, a dishwasher or garbage disposal in their home, maybe trading in the 1974 family car on a new model.

"You can go out and not feel so guilty about eating a meal out or buying a new dress," Basore said, tending to the children one morning while waiting for the last acres of his wheat to dry out enough to harvest. "It'll give us some spending money for a change."

Baking industry officials say the rising prices, along with increases in energy costs and wages, already have caused the price of bread to rise.

A jump in the futures prices during June of about $1 a bushel increased flour costs more than 2 cents per pound and added 2 cents to the cost of a one-pound loaf of bread, said George Rosenthal of the Independent Bakers Association. If the trend continues, it could add another 2 cents to bread costs by December, he said.

"We don't want to see the farmer go out of business, but present prices will add about $513 million to consumer food bills each year," Rosenthal said.

That averages out to about $2.31 a person, less than what taxpayers have paid in price supports to grain growers in lean years.

Basore said the bakers complaints have a familiar ring: "No one cares when we take a windfall loss. Farmers spend the money they make and that means jobs for those people in town complaining about the bread prices."

Basore's elevator paid about $2.80 a bushel a year ago and no one could predict then that the price would improve so rapidly in a year's time.

Normally, the U.S. wheat price drops during the harvest because of the increased supply of grain it brings to the world market. The United States exports two-thirds of its harvest and uses one-third domestically. The nation's 1979 wheat production is forecast at 2.1 billion bushels as of June 11, a 17 percent increase over 1978. That rise, too, would normally depress prices.

But difficulties with labor, transportation and weather have plagued other major wheat exporting nations such as Canada, Argentina and Australia, leaving the United States as the only major exporter able to provide wheat to the international market for the next few months.

The Soviet Union is expected to show a 22 percent drop in its total grain output, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, raising speculation from the Chicago Board of Trade to the smallest Kansas farm that Russia will need more U.S. wheat it now is buying under a five-year contract.

The contract calls for a minimum purchase of 6 million metric tons of wheat and corn combined each year, but the Soviets have received U.S. approval to buy up to 15 million tons in each of the last two years.

"There's nothing like one word — Russia — to kick off the wheat market," said Roy Frederick, a Kansas State University economist. He predicts that if Soviet producers experience further weather problems, U.S. wheat prices could top $5.

And how has the U.S. wheat producer reacted to all this? Instead of selling his wheat, he has held on to drive up the price.

On the Kansas City Board of Trade, futures prices for hard red winter wheat have jumped about $1.30 a bushel over 1978 prices. How much further they might increase is an "iffy" question, says spokesman Rod Turnbull.

"If something bad were to happen to the world crop (now predicted to be 3-8 percent less than last year) and make it even worse, then the price could go to $5," he said. "But suppose the spring crop is much larger than expected.... We could be down to $3.50."

Government predictions of a bumper crop, for example, sent the futures market tumbling recently, and in some cases contracts closed 20 cents lower. But the market rebounded the next day, and both cash and futures wheat prices lately have remained above $4 a bushel.

Basore's forehead wrinkles at the mention of $5 wheat. He still cannot forget the last time that price was reached, following the large Soviet wheat purchases of the early 1970s.

"The last time around, 90 percent of the farmers had already sold out at prices like $2.25," he said. "By the time it hit $5, very little wheat was in the hands of farmers. People at the Chicago Board of Trade and the big grain companies had it."

Russian purchases have a psychological effect on U. S. prices and what he himself might do with his stored wheat, Basore conceded. "Anymore, the weather in the Ukraine has more influence on my price than what the weather here does," he said.

Hectic Trading Sparks Cattle Futures Market

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 150 points lower to 27 points higher on 27,079 cars Friday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

August was down the limit, with distant August at the best gain. Earlier, June was up 85 points.

The hectic trade stemmed from spreading operations following the U. S. Department of Agriculture's cattle on feed report, released after the close Thursday. Traders unwound previous bull spreads and initiated bear spreads at various times.

Although beef was up sharply Friday morning, traders feared increasing competition from pork and poultry. Prices fell to the lowest level since January, basis October.

Wholesale beef was unchanged at 100.72 to 101 1/2 cents a pound, f.o.b. river. The six markets expect 17,700 head Monday.

Cash cattle were steady to up 50 cents with the best steer top at $68 at Illinois direct. Slaughter totaled 111,000 head.

Feeder cattle futures closed unchanged to off 145 points, led by August, on 5,133 cars. The limit loss was the fourth in a row and was the sixth limit move. The nearby tumbled on aggressive spread selling following the cattle on feed report.

Later months gained 95 points on spread buying before late selling trimmed all of the gain. Cash feeder cattle arrivals were lighter but there was no price direction on thin trade.

Hog futures closed 105 points lower to 20 points higher on 7,929 cars. July expired at the day's low, with only June ranging higher. The contract was up 90 points for a time.

The nearby ran into hectic selling on weakness in nearby cattle futures after an early gain on light hog runs and higher cash prices along with an improved pork trade at noon. Later months attracted support on back spreading.

Deliveries total seven thus far. Wholesale hams were unchanged to up two cents at 60 to 62 cents a pound, f.o.b. river. The six markets expect 33,500 head Monday.

Cash hogs were steady to up $1.50, with the best top at $42.50 at Peoria. Slaughter totaled 307,000 head.

Pork belly (bacon) futures closed 70 points lower to 30 points higher on 7,433 cars. Distant July and August were off the most, with nearby August up the most. Prices were down 130 to up 35 points in erratic trade.

New season lows were posted in 1980 contracts again on the continued pessimistic outlook for pork trade in the coming months.

There also was selling on the less than expected reduction in belly stocks during June, as reported by the USDA after the close Thursday. Support followed light hog runs and higher prices as well as firmer cash bellies.

Deliveries total 79 thus far. Wholesale bacon was unchanged to up one cent at 40 1/2 to 42 1/2 cents a pound, f.o.b. river.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

AN INCREASING SHORTFALL BELOW minimum levels of middle distillate stocks by middle or late autumn likely will create shortages of both diesel fuel and heating oil, Texas Farmers Union president Jay Naman of Waco said here this week.

Naman told a press conference that farmers on the High Plains, where cotton is harvested later than elsewhere in the belt, could be hardest hit by any conflict between agricultural use of diesel and the demand for home heating oil.

He predicted that "severe shortages" of diesel could occur at the peak of the cotton harvest if more attention is not paid to the "worsening problem."

"When Special Rule No. 9 was recently revoked and agriculture's priority ended, we were told that there were adequate supplies and that the rule was no longer needed," Naman said.

"PROJECTIONS OBTAINED BY OFFICIALS of the Farmers Union from Department of Energy offices now indicate otherwise," he added.

"Distillate stocks held at refineries, in pipelines and at major bulk terminals will be running between 15 and 20 percent short of 1978 levels, and the gap will widen as the winter continues. Users of diesel fuel and consumers of home heating oil will be in direct conflict of interest, and both will likely experience shortages."

The Farmers Union leader called on the DOE to reimpose price controls on diesel, a move opposed in some quarters on the contention that it would only worsen the supply problem in the long run, and to "end price gouging that is increasingly prevalent in most areas of the state."

Naman said he had reports from farmers of diesel prices fluctuating "as much as 50 cents a gallon," particularly in areas "where distributors are being forced onto spot markets to obtain fuel."

THE TFU PRESIDENT ALSO URGED that government officials be ready to re-issue Rule 9 during the harvest season and to be prepared to divert diesel fuel from military uses such as cross-country caravans during peak demand periods on middle distillates.

"After heavy winter consumption of middle distillates for home heating and farm and commercial diesel fuel use, there will be an even worse problem next spring," Naman said.

"If projections are accurate, we could begin 1980 with distillate stocks more than 30 percent below January 1979 levels. Shortages experienced this spring could be much worse and more widespread next year."

Naman repeated a TFU contention that "the state is giving away its natural resources by imposing low severance taxes on oil and gas and levying no severance tax at all on coal and uranium."

SAYING THAT "PRESIDENT CARTER has made the charge toward synthetic fuel production and increased nuclear power," Naman added:

"Coal and uranium deposits in the state will be stripped away without any return to the people of Texas. A minimum 10 percent severance tax on coal and uranium, where none exists now, could generate an additional $40 million in revenue for public education and meaningful tax relief.

"We urge Gov. Clements, should he decide to call a sp ecial session in the name of tax relief, to include consideration of reasonable severance taxes on natural resources.

"Otherwise, we are only providing energy materials for other states with no consideration of their irreplaceable loss as a valuable asset to the people of Texas."

COTTON FUTURES RALLIED LATE on technical and stop-loss buying to close with gains of around 76 points in nearbys Friday.

Floor brokers said commission house stop-loss buying was triggered at around 63.60 to 63.75 cents, basis new-crop December. Moreover, market-on-close buy orders led to heavy late trading and highs on the close.

Brokers said early trade buying continued to support the market, as did a report from Moscow of Soviet crop problems and Thursday's reported U. S. sales to West Germany and China.

An article in Exonomicheskaya Gazeta was said to have reported that Soviet cotton farmers have not yet managed to overcome problems caused by unfavorable weather earlier in the year.

THE SURVEY GAVE FEW CONCRETE examples but said in some areas the Soviet crop was developing late after having been replanted, and needed extra attention.

The article said farmers in the six cotton growing republics had pledged themselves to harvest a total of 8.849 million metric tons of cotton this year, but the tone of the report suggested extra efforts would be needed to reach this target. The Soviet crop in 1977 was a record 8.76 million metric tons and last year it was 8.5 million.

Volume at New York was estimated at a light 3,550 lots, with the bulk done on short covering late in the day.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Grain and soybean futures rose Friday on the Chicago Board of Trade, partly in response to forecasts of hot, dry weather in important grain-growing regions.

A prediction that the next several days will bring higher-than-normal temperatures and little rain to parts of the corn and soybean belt encouraged some buying in corn, which is entering a critical development stage.

Soybean futures rallied, partly on reports that Brazilian officials had reduced their estimate of the size of this year's Brazilian soybean crop to 10 million metric tons from an earlier estimate of 10.8 million tons.

HIGH PLAINS COTTON U. S. Department of Agriculture

Trading was slow to moderate Friday in the Lubbock cotton market.

Supplies of cotton for sale were moderate and demand was moderate. The Lubbock Cotton Exchange's spot quotations rose 25 points. The base price of grade 41, staple 34, micronaire 3.5-4.9 was quoted at 59.35 cents, up 75 points from a week earlier. Grade 42, staple 31, micronaire 3.5-4.9, was quoted at 53.75 cents.

Economic Impact Felt From Pheasants, Hunters

Texas High Plains pheasants bring tens of thousands of dollars into the area's economy every year, and that's not just birdseed to the restaurant, hotel and motel, and service station owners who benefit.

Dr. Fred S. Guthery of the Texas Tech University Range and Wildlife Management faculty says pheasants need prompters and lobbyists to protect their interests.

Guthery, who has just completed a paper on the history, habitat needs and habitat development opportunities of pheasants on the Texas High Plains, says the conflict between land owners and fowl hunters restricts appropriate habitats and results in fewer pheasants.

Farmers who have become wary of damage to their property caused by careless hunters will plane off stubble left in fields after crops are harvested. That stubble is prime habitat for pheasants, said Guthery.

Farmers could generate extra income from pheasants on their land, he said. No tradition exists in the High Plains for selling hunting leases, but the opportunity is there to sell either day or season leases, he said. The lessee would then help the landowner control trespassing and protect his interests. The landowner would know exactly who was using his land and how it was being used.

Guthery said he is encouraged by the formation of a group started in Plainview called "Pheasants Unlimited, Inc." The group is working to provide free seed and pay farmers and landowners for costs of planting and growing cover and food crops for pheasants on set aside land.

"Winter wheat would be the best possible crop to plant on the set aside lands to benefit pheasants," said Guthery.

However, federal regulations prohibit the planning of wheat on set aside lands. If that regulation could be changed to prohbit only the harvesting of the wheat rather than the planting of it, those set aside acres could provide a superior habitat for the birds, he said.

Pheasants are not native to this country, but were imported from Asia in the 1880s. They range from the Gulf Coast of Texas to the southern provinces of Canada, and from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean.

Mart Rises In Trading

NEW YORK (AP) — Shaking off news of a larger-than-expected drop in the Gross National Product and continued confusion over the shake-up of the Carter administration, the stock market rose slightly Friday.

Analysts said traders drew some optimism from the improvement of the dollar on foreign exchange markets and from an increase in the discount rate voted by the Federal Reserve Board.

The Dow Jones industrial average continued its meandering course of recent days, moving within a narrow range all day and closing with an increase of just .77 to 828.07, giving it a net loss for the week of 5.46 points.

Study: Adolescents Not Rebels Or In Turmoil, But Coping

By the Editors of Psychology Today

"Adolescents, as a whole, are not in turmoil, not deeply disturbed, not at the mercy of their impulses, not resistant to parental values, not politically active, and not rebellious."

Through it runs counter to most American stereotypes about the young, that placid image of adolescents who are coping well with life is emerging from current research, according to psychologist Joseph Adelson.

A professor at the University of Michigan, Adelson is now assembling a scholarly handbook of research on adolescent psychology. The stereotypes, he says, have been based on research that looked at untypical groups.

Take the so-called generation gap. In the '60s "there was, in fact, no generation gap," Adelson says, or at least it was no greater than it has been in any other historical period. "The important divisions in American society were and are not really generational; they have far more to do with social class, education, race and religious background than with age."

A common human process underlies the tendency of researchers to concentrate on a typical adolescents-we all yield easily to the "tyranny of the visible." Like most citizens, researchers tend to notice "those youngsters who are most like us, and hence, more easily seen, those who clamor for our attention because they are in distress, or those we find exotic or interesting for some reason."

The sad side-effect of such skewed attention, Adelson says is that fundamental aspects of adolescence are still virtually unknown. Though adolescents make great forward leaps in their ability to think, researchers know almost nothing about the thinking processes adolescents use.

Similarly, though researchers know a good deal about disturbed adolescents, they know almost nothing about the processes of coping and adaptation that enable the vast majority of teenagers not to be disturbed.

"Most surprising of all," Adelson says, despite the resurgence of females in the last decade, "our knowledge of female development is virtually nonexistent."

Adelson reports that things are slowly beginning to change among researchers, betokening an eventual new clarity in the way parents, citizens, and adolescents themselves see the adolescent years.

"We may be giving up the illusion that there is one single adolescent psychology, timeless and universal," Adelson says.

It's common knowledge, of course, that for the past century, the age at which the average girl begins to menstruate has declined about four months per decade.

If the trend were to continue, by the year 2250 toddlers would display all the features of puberty. Three-year-old girls would have fully-developed breasts, or boys just slightly older would have deep male voices.

Now, however, researcher Anne C. Petersen of Chicago's Michael Reese Hospital and Medical Center says there is evidence that growing up faster has gone about as far as it can, at least in industrialized countries. (Since the trend is related to improved nutrition, it is likely to continue in less developed nations.)

In the future, the trend that modern societies will have to cope with is an overall lengthening of the reproductive years, Petersen says. Along with the earlier onset of puberty, the age when fertility ends is getting later and later.

Longer periods of reproduction, says Peterson, have implications that researchers are just beginning to explore. They may affect not only biological processes, but the relationships of children and parents.

Dating Service Offers Christian Matchmaking

But that doesn't mean she can help everybody.

One inquiry about her service came from an interested but non-Christian man who claimed to be a part time model who posed in the nude.

"I'm going to write him a nice letter," says Miss Johnson carefully, "and tell him that I don't think I can appropriately match him."

Miss Johnson's reputation as a professional "cupid for Christ" has spread practically from coast to coast. People from as far away as California, Florida and Texas have contacted her seeking to establish affiliates.

"What's my reaction to all this?" asks Miss Johnson with a giggle. "Praise the Lord!"

But there is one note of irony in this success: Miss Johnson does not use the service herself. She says it is because she is "old-fashioned."

"I feel that men are more comfortable if they take the initiative in things like this," she explains. "Some men might feel pressured because I'm the president of the organization.

"But I'm not anxious about it at all. The Lord knows the right timing for things like this and I trust him."

amusing, since the boy had pleaded guilty, but, then again, defense explained that his client never really meant to rob all the houses.

The character testimonials apparently moved Judge Roslynn Bell. She declined to sentence the burglar. However, she did indicate that he should make some kind of restitution. That naturally delayed matters further, because defense believed it was grossly unfair.

In the end defense triumphed completely. The boy went scot-free. Two of his victims became so disgusted they dropped out of the proceedings. The thief was ordered to pay restitution to one victim, which he has not, and he was told to write letters of apology to the others, which he did not.

So much for justice, then. No one wanted the boy's blood, certainly, but neither was it felt he should escape penalty in total. I believe he should have worked off his debt behind a lawn mower in the community. As it is, the only lesson he learned was that thieves should wear gloves when they work.

But that's not the end of the story. The other day, exactly 12 months from the date of the burglary, my home was broken into and robbed again. Same way. Same hour. Only this year there was no palmprint. I'm not sure I'll try to catch the thief this time; my experience is it's not worth it. — Tom Tiede

Implant Interval Record Set

BOSTON (AP) — Four fingers severed by a paper cutter were reattached to a man's hand 28 hours later in what doctors said was the longest interval ever recorded in the United States between an accidental amputation and successful restorative surgery.

Dr. James W. May Jr., who directed the 23-hour operation, said the surgery shows that there is enough time to assemble teams of experts competent to perform such tricky, exacting work.

"If somebody amputates something, they don't need to race to the closest hospital and let the first person they see — who is possibly inexperienced — give it a go," said May. "They have the time to go to a replant center, where a careful approach to the problem can be exercised."

The fingers were found, packed in ice and transported with the patient to Massachusetts General Hospital, where the first successful replantation in history was performed in 1962.

May assembled a team of surgeons familiar with the tedious work that involves the use of microscopes to reconnect severed blood vessels, nerves and muscles.

"We started out all together," said May. "All the work was done that could be performed separately. Only two people can work on the hand at once after we start putting the fingers back on. Then we spelled each other off."

Pot-Smoking Divers Get Proxmire Fleece Award

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. William Proxmire on Friday chose a study of marijuana-smoking scuba divers for his first Golden Fleece award since the Supreme Court ruled that he could be sued for libel for the tongue-in-cheek citations.

"I intend to continue to issue the Fleece of the Month, to criticize vigorously the wasteful spending of public money, and to strive to be just as emphatic, vivid and, if possible, as humorous in the denunciation of waste as I can," said the Wisconsin Democrat.

Proxmire said "the taxpayers should get high" over a project in which the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration spent $6,000 to find out that marijuana and diving don't mix.

The Supreme Court, ruling on a suit against Proxmire by one of his award winners, held on June 26 that the constitutional immunity for speech and debate of lawmakers does not extend to press releases and newsletters.

In his latest barb, Proxmire said the marijuana experiment was "part of an otherwise useful appearing $726,000 grant, matched by $625,000 from the University of Hawaii, into 'Human Performance in the Sea.'"

Ten male students, all marijuana smokers, were recruited from a class at the university. They went diving and, on a separate occasion, spent two hours in a cold room after smoking marijuana and after not smoking marijuana.

"In my view, the government was at sea on this one," said Proxmire. "What the study tells us is that if you smoke pot, don't go swimming, scuba diving or mountain climbing.

"If there were an unlimited budget, perhaps it might be undertaken. But on the scale of national needs, this experiment seems to have a very low priority."

Consumer Education Added To Classroom Basics

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

A growing number of children are learning the ins and outs of the marketplace along with traditional classroom basics like reading, writing and arithmetic.

A federally-funded report, prepared by the Education Commission of the States in Denver, showed that, as of January, 35 states and the District of Columbia had adopted policies endorsing consumer education. Thirty-one of the states have specific requirements for some type of consumer education.

The programs vary. Some begin at the elementary level; others are part of the high school curriculum. The topics also vary; for the purposes of its study, the commission defined consumer education in terms of four general areas: decision making, economics, personal finance and rights and responsibilities.

Most courses emphasize the importance of thinking before you buy. "We have a very broad way of looking at consumer education," said Linda Riekes of the St. Louis public school system.

"You can never teach all the frauds," Miss Riekes said. "What you can teach is critical decision making. We are training people to be wise consumers."

Consumer education has been a part of the curriculum in St. Louis since 1970. At first, the students were introduced to consumerism in the eighth grade. Now, the subject is included in fifth grade social studies. "The earlier the better," said Miss Riekes, describing the teaching as "preventive consumer education."

The program draws on local experts — from business, government and consumer groups. The students are encouraged to use their knowledge in their local communities, working with their parents to inform others.

Miss Riekes said it is important to tailor consumer education programs to student interests. Fifth graders, for example, have trouble relating to information about automobile warranties; they are more likely to understand if you talk about bicycles.

Miss Riekes was a consultant on a recent study on how much 17-year-old high school students know about their rights and responsibilities as consumers. The study, conducted by the National Assessment of Educational Progress, showed that the youngsters had a good understanding of such things as checking accounts, advertising and warranties. But they had trouble with math skills and many of them were unfamiliar with consumer laws.

Miss Riekes said students often do not know where they can go for help; they tend to think they are powerless. Bruce Carney of the Greater Lowell Regional Vocational and Technical School District in Massachusetts agreed. "A lot of the students are unaware of resources and how to find things," he said. "Other kids can't believe the legal rights they have."

Consumer education is a required subject at the Lowell school. The half-year course, for juniors, includes such things as product testing and product evaluation reports available to the public, how to complain, small claims court, Massachusetts consumer law, shopping for services and fraud. There is even a section on how to use the telephone. "A lot of these students never made a long-distance call in their lives," said Carney.

Students in Saginaw, Mich., start learning about consumerism in elementary school. The curriculum covers everything from the value of money to how to report dishonest business practices.

Diane Umstattd, a district spokeswoman, said that consumer education is interwoven with other subjects, throughout the day. The youngsters learn to examine price tags and read labels. They visit banks and open accounts. They learn about the workplace in classroom employment agencies where they apply for jobs. "Who gets to wash the board and that kind of thing," said Miss Umstattd. "Describe the skills involved in being in charge of the milk money."

Judge Warns Sunbathers On Lake Michigan

It's bad news for the sunbathers, one of whom said naked sunbathers like himself have decorated the beaches for 30 years.

Nevertheless, an assistant district attorney Thursday warned four men, ranging in age from 24 to 59, not to do it again or face charges of lewd and lascivious behavior. He also ordered them not to trespass on property in the area.

One of those arrested, a 41-year-old man, said the property owners had a right to complain, but "as far as parts of the human body being considered obscene, to me that sounds a little ridiculous."

Richard Bacon, 47, a former Mr. Nude America, a spokesman for the four, criticized the arrests, saying nude sunbathing had been tolerated in the area for 30 years.

"I've many times fallen asleep there just listening to the waves," Bacon said.

Irwin Retains British Lead Despite 75

LYTHAM ST. ANNES, England (AP) — Although the wind, rain, cold and his own mistakes sent Hale Irwin reeling to a 75, the 4-over-par effort was good enough to retain a 2-stroke lead Friday after the third round of the 108th British Open Golf Championship.

But Irwin, seeking to add this ancient title to the U.S. Open crown he won a month ago, knew he'd let slip a great opportunity to put the tournament out of reach.

"It's still a wide open game going into tomorrow (today)," he said. "Nothing has changed.

"No one ran off and hid from the rest of the field. No one disappeared. Everyone who was there before is still there. It's still up for grabs. And I have to play accordingly."

Although his score was, by far, the poorest he's had in the foul playing conditions that have plagued the tournament — but failed to discourage record crowds of 30,000 -- all the would-be contenders had equal, or even greater, problems.

Irwin finished 54 holes in 2-over-par 211 over the 6,822 yards of thistles and thickets, gorse, mounds and hillocks that make up the Royal Lytham and St. Annes Club course. That's the only score under par in the tournament and is 2 strokes better than Severiano Ballesteros of Spain, who also shot a 75 Friday.

And he held that position despite his continued troubles over the difficult back nine, which plays into the teeth of the prevailing wind off the Irish Sea. He's play that par 36 homecoming side in 40, 39 and 39.

"I'm in striking position," said Nicklaus, who owns a record collection of 15 major professional titles. "I still have not played a back nine. I have yet to do that. If I can play a decent front side tomorrow, get it out in shape and then get it home without playing 39 or 40, maybe I have a chance.

"But I'll have to play better than I did today."

He shared the No. 3 spot with England's Mark James, who shot a 69 in the relative warmth and calm of the morning, before rain punished the other leaders.

Ben Crenshaw and Bob Byman, both winners on the American tour this season, and Rodger Davis of Australia were next at 215, four strokes behind Irwin. Davis, another early starter, got in with a 70, while Crenshaw and Byman had hard-won 72s.

Tom Watson, twice a British Open champion and the outstanding player in the game for the past 2½ seasons, hit one out of bounds on the second hole and finished bogey-bogey-bogey for a 76 that put him 5 shots back at 216.

But, Watson insisted, he was not a casualty.

"I still feel I have a chance to win the golf tournament," Watson said. "A good score tomorrow can do it for me.

"The golf course can yield some birdies. It will take some good golf from me to do it. But I think I have it in me. It's there. I hope it's just waiting to jump out of the box."

Irwin was never headed and, at times, appeared ready to move into the realm of the unreachable as his pursuers encountered varied difficulties and minor tragedies.

In fact, early in the round he held a 4-shot lead.

Six-Man Coaching All-Star Tilts Set

STEPHENVILLE (Special) — Cotton Center will supply the entire offensive backfield for the West squad in tonight's second annual East-West Six-Man football all-star game set for 8 p.m. on the campus of Tarleton State University.

The all-star basketball game, also part of the annual coaching clinic for Class B schools, will get underway today at 4 p.m., with a pair of Whitharral standouts opening for the West.

A total of 62 athletes and 59 coaches reported for the week-long affair, which included lectures for coaches and several social activities for players, coaches and their wives.

The West defense will have Kerry Tomerlin and Bryon Sawyer of Christoval along the front line, with Dwayne Shaefer of Paint Rock and Joey Pierce of Benjamin at the linebacker spots.

Cory Soloman of Christoval and Allan Berryhill of Wellman will be the deep backs.

In the basketball game, the East will go with Kenneth Dodd of Krum and Myron Cole of Brock at the guard positions, Tommy Blevins of Gordon at forward, and Bryan Deaver of Brock at one inside spot. Mark Scott of Blum and Keith Regel of Grafford are expected to alternate at the other post position.

Guess What? Astros Lose Again To Pirates 9-3

By The Associated Press

Phil Garner drove in three runs with a homer and a single and John Candelaria pitched an eight-hitter to lead the surging Pittsburgh Pirates to a 9-3 victory over the slumping Houston Astros Friday night.

It was the fifth victory in a row for the Pirates and their ninth in 10 games. The Astros lost their fourth straight game and 11th in the last 12.

Ed Ott's two-run double capped Pittsburgh's three-run first inning against J.R. Richard, 7-11, who also yielded a two-run single by Garner in the third inning that gave Pittsburgh a 5-1 lead.

CUBS 10, BRAVES 2

Rick Reuschel scattered five hits in six innings and drove in three runs with a single and a bases-loaded walk as the Chicago Cubs routed the Atlanta Braves 10-2.

Reuschel, 9-6, gave up two runs before leaving the game in the sixth inning with a blister. Dick Tidrow pitched two innings and Donnie Moore relieved in the ninth and got the last three outs.

Leading 3-1, Chicago broke the game open with five runs in the fifth inning. Scot Thompson led off with a single to chase starter Tony Brizzolara, 5-4. Craig Skok wild pitched Thompson to second and then walked Bill Buckner.

MARINERS 8, BOSOX 0

Mike Parrott pitched his first major league shutout, scattering five hits as the Seattle Mariners routed Boston 8-0 and ended the Red Sox' five-game winning streak.

REDS 3, CARDS 0

Johnny Bench's solo homer and Dave Collins' two-run inside-the-park shot, both in the second inning, backed the six-hit pitching of Tom Seaver and carried the Cincinnnati Reds to a 3-0 triumph over the St. Louis Cardinals.

The victory cut Houston's National League West lead to three games over the Reds. Seaver, 10-5, who walked none and struck out one, notched his eighth straight win and his 50th career shutout.

TWINS 14, TIGERS 6

Consecutive home runs by Ken Landreaux and Glenn Adams highlighted a nine-run fifth inning that rallied the Minnesota Twins to a 14-6 triumph over the Detroit Tigers in a 28-hit slugfest.

The Twins trailed 5-0 after three innings but scored four runs in the fourth and sent 13 men to the plate in the decisive fifth.

The game featured six home runs. Detroit's John Wockenfuss slammed a three-run shot in the second inning and Steve Kemp hit the first of his two homers in the third with a man aboard.

ORIOLES 2, ANGELS 1

Rich Dauer's looping single scored Gary Roenicke with the tie-breaking run in the seventh inning, giving the Baltimore Orioles a 2-1 victory over the California Angels.

Roenicke singled for Baltimore's fourth hit of the game after Jim Barr, 7-5, had retired the first two batters in the inning. After Lee May walked, Dauer singled over shortstop Jim Anderson's head on a 2-0 pitch.

Scott McGregor, 4-3, was hit hard by the Angels but allowed only five hits, including a fourth-inning home run by Carney Lansfor. Ken Sigleton homered in the bottom of the inning for Baltimore.

A's 5, YANKEES 1

Rookie Brian Kingman recorded his first major league victory, scattering eight hits in seven innings-plus as the Oakland A's snapped a five-game losing streak by defeating Tommy John and the New York Yankees 5-1.

Kingman, 1-2, fell behind 1-0 in the fifth when Bobby Brown doubled with two out and Thurman Munson singled him home.

BREWERS 2, JAYS 0

Jim Slaton, 10-4, scattered seven hits for his seventh victory in his last eight decisions.

CHISOX 2, RANGERS 1

Chet Lemon lashed a tie-breaking home run in the sixth inning to give the Chicago White Sox a 2-1 victory over the Texas Rangers and a sweep of the three-game series.

Richard Wortham, 10-9, overcame early wildness for the victory. He gave up six hits, including a fourth-inning homer to Richie Zisk, before giving way to Ed Farmer with one out in the seventh. Farmer, who came to Chicago from Texas earlier in the season, extended his string of scoreless string to 13 before needing help from Guy Hoffman with two outs to go.

ROYALS 9, INDIANS 1

Rich Gale allowed three hits in eight innings and Amos Otis, Willie Wilson and Darrell Porter combined to drive in seven runs as the Kansas City Royals cruised to a 9-1 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

Before yielding to Dan Quisenberry in the ninth, Gale, 7-8, surrendered a double to Jim Norris in the third inning, a home run to Cliff Johnson in the seventh and a single to Ted Cox in the eighth.

Cooper Captures Area IV Tourney

It took all week, but Cooper Little League all-stars finally qualified for next week's district tournament.

Cooper won the Area IV Tournament by tripping Slaton 3-1 Friday night. In the third-place game, Tahoka won over Post 2-0.

The tournament began Monday but rains forced it to extend two days longer than originally scheduled.

Now, Cooper will take on Lubbock Dixie all-stars at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the semifinals of the district toiurnament at Buster Long Park north of South Plains Mall. In the 5:30 p.m. contest, Lubbock Northwest will take on Shallowater.

The championship and third-place games will be at the same park Tuesday.

Future Raider Gains Weight Pumping Iron

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Matt Harlien seems to pump iron in the same manner that most Americans pump "petro into their big mochines" — in rather large quanities. But unlike the latter, no one is preaching conservation at Harlien.

On the contrary.

While a high school senior at Corpus Christi King, the 6-4, 280-pounder bench-pressed 550 pounds, which equals a little over a quarter of a ton — which equals to a bunch. So even before two-a-days at Texas Tech start, Harlien already has established himself as the strongest Raider of them all, a title held last year by then senior Curtis Reed.

"I lifted 500 (pounds) the other day," commented Harlien, who will take part in next week's Texas High School Coaches Association All-Star football game in Fort Worth. "I really feel like I'm in great shape."

Size-wise, and probably strength-wise, Harlien will be the largest and strongest player on the Dick Stafford-coached South team at the All-Star show. Harlien owns that distinct honor by, oh, 25 or 30 pounds. But the Tech freshman pointed out he'll be down to a fiesty 270 pounds before the contact work begins for the Raiders.

"Lifting weights has really put it (the extra pounds) on me," admitted Harlien, who is spending some time in Lubbock before heading for Fort Worth. "The more I lift, the more I gain. I plan on 'maxing' out on the weights before I go to Fort Worth. When I get there, I just plan on running quite a bit. I want to be in even better shape when I come back to start two-a-days."

At the All-Star game (next Saturday night), Harlien will be used as an offensive tackle. He is expected to challenge for a starting role at the same position during fall workouts at Tech.

"I don't know if I'll be starting (at the all-star game) or not," said Harlien. "We won't know that until we work out a few days, I guess. I figure everybody will get to play quite a bit, though, if they start or not."

Not knowing whether he'll start certainly hasn't taken any of the enthusiam out of Harlien's voice when he talks about the upcoming contest.

"I'm really excited about going down there. It should really be great. I hear it's a great place to meet and associate with some really great people. It should be great experience."

But having a few nights out on the town with the boys isn't the only thing that excites Harlien about the camp. He also likes the idea of getting in a little contact work before heading back to the Hub.

"It will be nice to get in some hitting before I come back," said Harlien. "I don't know how important it is, but it's certainly not going to hurt any, I know that."

Although it's supposed to be a game of fun, Harlien knows full well that Raider coach Rex Dockery and his staff will be in the stands watching. So, Harlien said, that gives him a little bit more incentive to "put out".

"I think it's important that I play well," said Harlien. "That's always important, though. I don't think Coach Dockery will decide anything on how I play there. He'll wait and see what I can do against other college players, that's because there's so much difference between the two games (high school and college)."

Recruited heavily by Baylor, SMU, Texas A&M and Texas, Harlien chose Tech because "I really liked the coaching staff. . .the way they worked together." And, according to Harlien, it's that coaching staff he is trying to please by spending so many hours in the weight room during the off season.

"They (the coaching staff) showed a lot of faith in me by recruiting me," said Harlien, who was a three-year starter at King and garnered all-district and all-South Texas as both a junior and senior. And I don't think it's right for someone to flab out on them. That's why I've worked so hard.

"Anyway, it's a lot more fun to come into two-a-days in condition. Because if you don't you'll just end up hurting yourself."

Americans Nip Bulls In 14th

Catcher Rodney Smith's solo homer in the top of the 14th inning lifted the Abilene Americans to a 5-4 victory over the Abilene Salta Bulls Friday in the West Region Texas NBC Baseball Tournament.

The Lubbock Raiders and Lubbock Brewers played the late game, with that victor due to play the Americans at 6 p.m. today. The Lubbock Hubbers and Lubbock Starz will play in a winners' bracket contest at 8 p.m. today.

Losing pitcher Don Lawson retired 21 straight batters from the third through the tenth inning and hurled all 14 frames, allowing only eight hits, walking two and striking out seven.

American starter Larry Martindale struck out ten and walked five in his ten innings with Ken Norton going the final four frames allowing only one hit and striking out two while facing just 12 batters.

Byron Roberts collected a third of the Bulls' nine hits and drove in their first run in the first inning.

Tigers Deal Staub To Montreal

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit Tiger designated hitter Rusty Staub has been sold to the Montreal Expos of the National League, a club spokesman said Friday.

Tigers' spokesman Lou Matland said Staub's move would take effect immediately. That would mean Staub was not expected to appear in Friday night's game against the Minnesota Twins, Matland said.

In exchange, Montreal will give Detroit a player to be named by Dec. 31. If the teams cannot agree on a player by that time, Matland said there would be a cash consideration.

"They've (Montreal) expressed a great deal of interest in me," Staub said when contacted Friday night. "I'm pleased to be part of something that wants me very much.

"It's been a great three years (at Detroit)," Staub said. "This year was a crazy one, but with the things Sparky (Anderson) wants to do, it's understandable," he added.

Staub said he had received word of the contract sale from Tigers general manager Jim Campbell at about 4:15 p.m. in Minneapolis. He did not indicate whether he had asked to be traded or if the deal was made without his knowledge. Nor would the Tigers give any explanation for the decision to let Staub go to Montreal.

He had been embroiled in a contract dispute with the club early in the year and did not return to the Tigers until the season was under way.

During the current campaign, "Trusty Rusty," as was called by fans, had plenty of critics in the stadium, who said he was not living up to expectations.

In 243 trips to the plate this season, Staub had a batting average of .235, with 57 hits, nine home runs and 38 RBIs. In addition, he had hit 12 doubles and one triple.

In 1978, he contributed 121 RBIs, hitting an average of .273 and has a major league lifetime average of .280.

The move to Montreal is a return for Staub, who played there in the 1969-71 seasons, after being traded from Houston for first baseman Donn Clendenon and outfielder Jesus Alou. At that time, Clendenon refused to report to Houston, and the deal was completed by sending pitchers Skip Guinn and Jack Billingham to Houston.

Ex-Tech Golfer Trails Leaders By Stroke

COAL VALLEY, Ill. (AP) — Defending champion Victor Regalado blamed slow play Friday for his four bogeys on the final seven holes that dropped him from a temproary lead to 2 strokes off the pace in the second round of the $200,000 Quad Cities Open.

"It took four hours and 20 minutes to play 18 holes and I lost my concentration out there," said Regalado, whose 70 left him at 6 under par 134.

"I had to wait on every shot. I hope the PGA does something to speed up play. It's just too long a time to go around on a course like this and it's ridiculous," Regalado said.

Pushing into the midway lead with 65s and 132 were Rod Curl, a 10-year veteran, and the D.A. Weibring, who joined the circuit in 1977 and tied for third in this tournament the following year.

Curl hasn't won since the 1974 Colonial. Weibring, former Illinois State University golfing star, has failed to make the cut nine times this year and his best finish was a tie for ninth in the Canadian Open.

George Cadle, the first-round leader with a 7-under par 63 that matched the course record on the 6,514 Oak Wood Country Club links, skidded to a 74.

Still with the champs for the $36,000 first prize was Sam Snead, who was grouped at 137 after shooting his age, 67. He became the first man to shoot his age on a tour tournament, veteran PGA officials said.

Regalado started on the 10th hole. He fired a 32, getting three birdies in a row with a pair of 30-foot putts and a 10-footer. He birdied the long No. 1 hole starting his final 9 and that put him 10 under and the temporary lead. Then the bottom dropped out.

The field was slashed to the low 70 scorers and ties. The cutoff point was 141, leading 88 golfers for the final 36 holes.

STABLER RETURNS — Quarterback Ken Stabler — who has told the Oakland Raiders he wants to be traded — puts a hand on the shoulder of Charlie Sumner, the defensive backfield coach, as Stabler arrives for Friday's Raiderworkout at Santa Rosa, Calif. Stabler reported in Thursday night. (AP Laserphoto)

Springs Shines In Dallas Drills

Springs rushed for 71 yards and a touchdown, and completed a 43-yard halfback pass in a rookie scrimmage.

Springs came to the Cowboys in the fifth round of the draft from Ohio State, where he saw a sparkling career go flat last season after a knee cartilage problem. Cowboy coaches reason that if Springs' knee is still a problem, the rigors of training camp would have uncovered it by this time.

"Obviously, we didn't rate him as good a runner as he is," Coach Tom Landry said. "He is big and strong (6-1, 200 pounds), which is awful important in an NFL back."

"Ohio State didn't have an outstanding year. Springs gets hurt against Baylor. The guy sits out two weeks; he's not in shape when he comes back; he doesn't play as well as expected. You wind up making a bargain in the draft. It's a combination of things that causes a player to be down-rated."

Coaches say Springs has the speed, mental capacity and pass-receiving ability to make it. Springs agrees, without bragging.

"I think my chances are pretty good," he said. "I feel I can do a little of everything. I can catch and I'm working on my blocking because I didn't have to do much of that in college. Plus, I'm bigger than most backs."

Insiders say Springs already has eliminated all other newcomers from halfback contention and is fighting for a backup role behind Tony Dorsett with Preston Pearson, Doug Dennison and Alois Blackwell.

Landry singled out other performances for praise after Friday's workouts. Gaining the precious mention were fullback Wayne Russell of Cheyney State, offensive linemen Robert Shaw of Tennessee and Brad Hendrix of North Alabama, wide receiver Chris DeFrance of Arizona State, tight end Doug Cosbie of Santa Clara, defensive linemen Bruce Thornton of Illinois, Ralph DeLoach of California and Mike Calhoun of Notre Dame and defensive backs Aaron Mitchell of Nevada-Las Vegas and Wade Manning of Ohio State.

Seeded Players Win Net Matches

The top-seeded player in Men's championship singles, Bill Matvastik of Trinity University, advanced Friday into the second round of the Lubbock Open Tennis Tournament with a 6-4, 6-1 victory against Thad Bartles.

Kathy Kuhne, top-seeded in women's singles action, advanced to the third round with 6-2, 6-1 victory against Melody Edwards. Miss Kuhne drew a bye into the second round.

Morton Cited For DWI

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (AP) — Denver Bronco veteran quarterback Craig Morton was cited for driving under the influence of alcohol and running a stop sign shortly after midnight Friday, authorities said.

"What he did is an infraction of our rules. We've taken proper disciplinary action. He has been fined. It's a very unfortunate situation," said Bronco Coach Red Miller.

Morton, a professed Born Again Christian, was released on a personal recognizance bond signed by Miller at Colorado State University campus police headquarters. He declined to take a chemical sobriety test, police said.

Campus police reports said Morton was first warned about 12:13 a.m. for making an improper turn into a parking lot near the Broncos training camp dorm on campus. The club's curfew is 11 p.m.

The report said the same campus policeman observed the car leaving the parking lot about 30 minutes later and saw it run a stop sign.

The officer then pulled the car over, gave Morton a roadside sobriety test and took him to campus headquarters where he was cited for the two violations.

Campus police said Morton would appear in Larimer County Court within four weeks on the citations.

Steelers Aware Of Competition

LATROBE, Pa. (AP) — They've got three Super Bowl titles under their belts, but the Pittsburgh Steelers talked about staying hungry as the full squad of veterans arrived at training camp Friday.

"There are probably four or five teams that have the talent we have. The competition is there," said defensive captain Joe Greene, a 260-pounder who arrived with the same slim waist he brought here from North Texas State 11 seasons ago. "But, the better the competition, the better the Pittsburgh Steelers," Greene added with a relaxed smile. "We're not going to run around the corner and hide."

Rookies and a few veterans opened camp last Sunday. The balance of the veterans at camp Friday included placekicker Roy Gerela, who earlier in the day signed a new contract and ended speculation that he would take the free-agent route to another team.

"I was ready for this two weeks ago. I'm glad its here," said defensive lineman John Banaszak, the ex-Marine who made the club as a free agent after Pittsburgh's first Super Bowl title in 1974.

"From the guys I've talked to so far, they seem excited and anxious to get going," said linebacker Jack Lambert, showing no ill effects from his much publicized brawl in a Pittsburgh disco during the offseason.

"You come here, it seems like nothing changes, it seems like you never left," said fullback Franco Harris, fifth leading rusher in National Football League history with 7,377 yards. "Sometimes it's pretty tough, but, hey, I'm looking forward to it. It's time to go ahead and start playing."

Swann is involved in a suit against the City of San Francisco stemming from an incident that occurred prior to his rookie season with Pittsburgh in 1974. Swann's suit alleges that he and his brothers were harrassed and falsely arrested by police during a massive manhunt for California's "Zodiac" killer.

Meanwhile, the rest of the veterans reported to camp, posed for press and fan photographers, then ran through an afternoon workout in shorts at the St. Vincent College training site.

"It felt good being back to king of the hill. I missed it," Greene said of the offseason months he spent at his home in Duncanville, a suburb of Dallas.

The Steelers' 35-31 victory over Dallas in Super Bowl XIII was a prime topic of conversation in the Dallas area, especially the pass interference call that led to a Steeler touchdown.

"The fans were crying, and the media were crying a little bit," said Greene. "But the football players, the Cowboys, they were working. They want some Pittsburgh Steelers. I'll guarantee you that."

But Greene stressed that the Steelers must concentrate on each step along the way if they are to defend their Super Bowl title.

Moscow Games Begin

MOSCOW (AP) — Moscow's big rehearsal for next year's Olympic Games starts seriously today with the official opening of the Spartacade sports festival, and some 2,500 athletes from 80 nations are here to check things out.

Few of the visiting teams will have their strongest athletes in action. Some have sent only token squads. But they are all interested in discovering how conditions will be for the Olympic Games, which start almost exactly one year from today's opening ceremony.

The opening parade and the eight-day track and field program are scheduled for Lenin Stadium in Luzhniki Park, which will be the main area for the Olympics. It is a 20-year-old stadium that has been partly rebuilt for 1980.

Olympic Facilities

Olympic facilities are being used also for gymnastics, fencing, cycling, shooting, rowing and soccer. Other Olympic sites are not ready yet, and swimming and some other sports are being held in old arenas.

This is the seventh Spartacade, which is usually an all-Soviet festival but has been widened for the first time to include competitors from other countries.

Mikhail Yefimov, a former journalist who heads the Spartacade press services division, said, "This is not really planned as an Olympic warmup. You will witness only the finals of this competition, which began two years ago and involved 100 million people."

Invited Guests

The 2,500 foreign athletes are invited guests, Yefimov explained, because of the Olympics a year ahead. They have found the same moderate summer temperatures they can expect when the Olympics open July 19, 1980.

The teams from abroad, including those from the United States and all the European countries, go into action today when track and field and basketball start.

Since so many overseas stars are missing from their countries' lineups, many events are expected to be dominated by the Russians.

The Spartacade is being run by the Sports Council of the Soviet Union, which will have nothing to do with the 1980 Olympics. The Olympics have their own organizing committee, answerable to the International Olympic Committee.

But a lot of questions will be answered in the next two weeks. Sports officials of many nations want to find out how they will be housed and fed and how the Russians conduct sports events. It may not be a warmup for the Olympics, but it's a look-ahead.

Television, Too

A syndicated television network has been put together to bring parts of the games to 75 nations on a delayed basis. The TV rights were acquired by Lothar Bock Associates of West Germany and Syndicast Services, Inc., of the United States.

Thirty-two hours of programming were scheduled for 75 independent stations in the United States.

Erxleben Set To Play Despite Back Pains

VERO BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — The New Orleans Saints' top draft choice, Russell Erxleben, hampered by a mysterious lower back pain, failed to practice Friday for the second consecutive day but will start today in a rookie scrimmage against the Miami Dolphins.

The all-America placekicker-punter from the University of Texas rested Friday after complaining about "knifing" pain in his back. But head coach Dick Nolan said Erxleben would handle both punting and kickoff duties in today's scrimmage against Miami.

"If he had something serious enough to need surgery," said Saints' spokesman Greg Suit, "most of the time it shows up in your ambulatory movement. There's a high probability he wouldn't be able to lift his leg."

Nolan said Erxleben was examined this week in camp by Saints' physician Dr. Ken Saer, who diagnosed the problem as a "lower back pain."

"Erxleben does not have a ruptured disc," Nolan said. "I'm not saying he might not get one in the future, and I'm not saying he isn't feeling pain. But if he had a ruptured disc, he wouldn't be able to lift that leg at all."

Nolan coached the South team in the Senior Bowl this year when Erxleben suffered a reoccurrence of the back problems he had throughout his collegiate career. Even with the pain, Erxleben booted a 56-yard field goal.

"I think I can kick with it," Erxleben said, "but the doctors said that if the pain is still bad by the time we go to New Orleans for the exhibition game against Chicago (Aug. 11), they might put me in the hospital for more tests.

"At Texas, I kicked only two or three times a week," Erxleben said. "Here I've been kicking a lot more — say 40 times a day — and each day it's gotten worse."

Nolan said he would continue to keep veteran placekicker Rich Szaro and punter Tom Blanchard on the roster until Erxleben's medical future is decided.

All veterans reported to camp Friday, swelling the team's roster to 92. But Nolan said several rookies and free agents would be released shortly after the test scrimmage at 2 p.m. against the Dolphins.

Cornerback Maurice Spencer turned in the best time in the 1.5-mile endurance run, covering the distance in 8:09. Joe Campbell's 9:10 clocking was the best for a lineman.

The veterans will remain at the Dodgertown training facility today for a morning workout. The squad will resume two-a-day practices Sunday.

Ima Gates Gal Heads List At Ruidoso

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. (Special) — Ima Gates Gal established the fastest qualfying time for the World's Championship Quarterhorse Classic in trails held at Ruidoso Downs Friday. The sorrel mare covered the 440-yard dash in 21.93 and on a muddy track.

The first division also qualified three other based on time. Ruby's Girl, Magic Injun and High Bid Man will all advance to the July 29 finale.

Contracts, Accidents Slow Giants' Camp

PLEASANTVILLE, N.Y. (AP) — All-Pro linebacker Brad Van Pelt reported to Giants training camp Friday and revealed he was involved in a near-fatal auto accident about one month ago.

Van Pelt said the accident occurred a few days after the June 22 crash that claimed the life of Giants defensive tackle Troy Archer. The 6-foot-5, 235-pound Van Pelt said he was driving to his Owosso, Mich., home after a softball game when his Datsun flipped three times into a ditch.

He said he was out cold for 30 minutes and suffered shoulder and back injuries and a cut under his eye which required seven stitches.

Van Pelt, reporting with the Giants veterans, has often asked to be traded to the Detroit Lions, enabling him to play close to home. He was joking about that with reporters Friday and said the Giants "have to get me healthy," before he could be traded.

Meanwhile, veterans Brian Kelly, Jim Clack and George Martin joined Ron Mikolajczyk as no-shows at the Giants training camp at Pace University. Mikolajczyk, a starting offensive tackle, was required under the collective bargaining agreement to report last Friday with the rookies and free agents because he finished the 1978 season on the injured reserve list.

It was revealed Thursday that Mikolajczyk, entering the option year of his contract, doesn't plan to attend camp until a new contract is signed. The Giants are fining him between $300 and $500 a day.

Kelly played out his option last season and has not been able to come to terms with the Giants. General Manager George Young said he thought an agreement was reached last Saturday but it fell through. Kelly faces stiff competition from Dan Lloyd to hold onto his starting job.

AL ROSEN

GEORGE STEINBRENNER

Rosen Admits To Lack Of Authority

NEW YORK (AP) — "George could make his wife the president and it wouldn't change a thing. George is still the bottom line."

That quote from an unidentified member of the New York Yankees, referring to owner George Steinbrenner, may sum up the feelings of the team about the resignation of president Al Rosen and his successor.

Rosen's resignation Thursday night, rumored for several days, apparently was triggered by his declining influence in baseball-related decisions and by outside opportunities.

"George is the boss and I was the employee, and I never questioned the fact my boss had the right to tell me to handle the business affairs of the club full time," Rosen said. "The fact I wanted to be more prominent in the baseball regard, I guess, was just a dream of mine."

Rosen's role shifted recently, with general manager Cedric Tallis becoming Steinbrenner's baseball adviser and Rosen handling the business end. The flip-flop of roles coincided with Billy Martin's takeover as manager from Bob Lemon, a former Cleveland Indians teammate of Rosen's and a close friend and favorite.

"I think it was coincidental my role changed at that time," said Rosen, and Martin agreed.

"It was my choice to leave and this decision was tempered by the fact that I have great opportunities ahead of me," said Rosen, who is rumored to be joining a corporation that is opening a gambling casino in Atlantic City, N.J.

Rosen said Thursday night he also has a number of job offers from other baseball teams, but he did not elaborate.

"He's gone because he didn't want to be subservient," Jackson said of Rosen. "All he asked was to be respected and he wasn't. And given that, he had to leave."

FUNERAL HELD

SUN CITY, Ariz. (AP) — Memorial services will be held Saturday for George Korval, a member of the U.S. Olympic bobsled team in the 1932 Olympics who died at his home Tuesday. He was 67.

Sugar Ray Looking Only To Next Fight

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Sugar Ray Leonard said Friday he doesn't view his Aug. 12 fight with Pete Ranzany as a tuneup for his bout with Wilfredo Benitez for the World Boxing Council welterweight title in December.

"I'm not looking forward to Benitez, I'm looking forward to Ranzany," Leonard said at a news conference here in Ranzany's home town.

The nationally televised bout at the Caesars Palace Sports Pavilion in Las Vegas, Nev., will be the second meeting between Leonard and Ranzany.

Leonard, from Palmer Park, Md., won a split decision in a four-round amateur bout with Ranzany in 1973. Ranzany's manager, Joey Lopes, said it was because Ranzany had trouble making the necessary weight for the junior welterweight bout.

"I barely remember the fight," Ranzany said. "I've been hit a lot of times since then."

The Las Vegas bout, scheduled for 12 rounds, will be Leonard's first shot at a professional championship. Since winning a gold medal at the 1976 Montreal Olympics, he is undefeated in 23 professional fights with 14 knockouts.

Ranzany, who has a 44-3-1 record with 27 knockouts, holds the North American Boxing Federation title. Although Ranzany has more pro fights, Leonard had about 200 amateur bouts to Ranzany's 40.

"I think it's going to be a dynamite fight, but it won't go over two," Leonard said.

"I'm not an underdog," said Ranzany. "I've been fighting much longer and meeting tougher fighters."

Ranzany said that while Leonard is not a champion, "he's got a bigger name than any of the champions. If I beat him it will make me a lot of money. I hope this will pay off the house I just bought."

Leonard figures to make $200,000. Ranzany will earn $75,000, his biggest payday, in his first nationally televised fight.

Leonard said there was no use talking about his amateur victory over Ranzany. "It's a different story now. We're in the ring for big bucks."

He said he has been training for three weeks and has his weight down from 151 to 146.

"I know for a fact I'm going to be the welterweight champion," he said.

He said he expects eventually to fight "for millions," and that he was doing it to "give my family the material things I never had."

Castillo Risks Unbeaten Mark In 10-Rounder

HOUSTON (AP) — It will be youth against experience, with surprising knockout power on both sides, when the world's top featherweights meet tonight for the World Boxing Association title.

Preceding the match will be a ten-round, non-title bout sending Lubbock's Ruben Castillo, No. 2-ranked featherweight, against fourth-rated Hector Carrasquilla of Panama. Castillo will bring a shiny 34-0 record into the fight.

Olivares, 32, has also held the bantamweight title twice. The challenger's record stands at 83-9-2. In 75 of those victories, his opponents found themselves on the canvas for the count.

Pedroza takes a 22-3 record into the bout. He won the title before a hometown crowd in Panama City April 16, 1978, when he knocked out Spain's Cecilio Lastra in the 13th round.

Tonight's fight will be his second title defense since then. Pedroza successfully defended his crown three months after the Lastra fight with a win over Mexico's Ernest Herrera.

The championship fight will highlight a 45-round card at the Sam Houston Coliseum starting at 8 p.m. CST.

In another 10-rounder, top-ranked bantamweights Juan Escobar of Mexico and Enrique Soliz of San Juan, Puerto Rico, will slug it out. The fourth match of the evening will be another 10-round bantamweight affair between Calvin Shepherd of Port Arthur and Gustavo Martinez of Mexico.

The title fight is to be carried via closed-circuit television to eight cities in the United States as well as Venezuela, Mexico, Panama and the Phillipines, organizers said.

Borg Awesome At Net Event

BAASTAD, Sweden (AP) — Bjorn Borg of Sweden crushed his training partner, Billy Martin of the United States, 6-0, 6-3 Friday in another dazzling display of power and speed and gained the semifinals of the $110,000 Swedish Open Tennis Championships.

Martin was the only American in the clay court tournament at this south Swedish seaside resort.

Borg, who has just dropped four games in his last two matches here, will face fellow-Swede Kjell Johansson in the semis Saturday.

Meter To Tell Dollar Costs Of Energy Use

DALLAS (AP) — Gas and electric utilities demonstrated a new kind of meter Friday that tells residents exactly how much energy they are using in terms of dollars and cents.

The device is being tested by the Department of Energy, and if the tests show it promotes energy conservation and it can be sold at retail for $50 to $100, DOE officials say they will endorse it and encourage its use.

"You push one button and it tells you how much money you have spent on gas and electricity since midnight," said Ray Ward of Dallas Power and Light Co.

"You push another button and it tells you how much the next hour would cost you if everything you are using stays in use. A third button tells you how much gas and electricity have cost you so far during the month."

"It's about the size of a radio," said Ward. "If you see you're using energy at the rate of $1.50 an hour and you want to reduce it, then you go around your house and adjust your thermostat and turn things off and then go back and see how much you've accomplished."

He said some models are already on the market, but they are too expensive for general use. "One company is selling them for $300," he said.

Ward said the DOE will install the new meters in 100 residences chosen to represent a cross section of the Dallas market. He said utilities consumed by three other groups of 100 families each will be used for comparison.

Two of the control groups will receive various amounts of conservation literature from the government during the year and the third group will not receive any.

Solons Reject Jane Fonda's Appointment

SACRAMENTO, Calif (AP) — The California Senate Friday overwhelmingly rejected actress Jane Fonda's appointment to the state Arts Council after one senator accused her of treason.

The 28-5 vote against Miss Fonda broke a blockade forged by Senate Democratic leaders to keep the appointment in committee and avoid an embarrassing defeat for Gov. Edmund Brown Jr.

"Any person in the time of a war effort who gives aid and comfort to the enemy waives the right to serve in any appointive position of state government," said Democratic Sen. Ruben Ayala.

Sen. Robert Nimmo, a Republican, said that by his standards Miss Fonda was "guilty of having committed an act of treason."

Opponents were sharply critical of Miss Fonda's visit to North Vietnam during the war.

Supporters argued that Miss Fonda, two-time winner of the Academy Award for best actress, was fully qualified to sit on the commission and accused critics of unfairly labeling her a traitor.

Rejection by the full Senate of the appointment will force Miss Fonda to leave office within 60 days. If the appointment had remained in committee she could have stayed on the commission until the end of the year and been reappointed by Brown.

The Arts Council, one of Brown's pet projects, issues grants for development of the arts in California.

'Had Bats In His Belfry' Says Critic Of 'Nightwing' Mastermind

(Filmeter is compiled by Dick Kleiner in Hollywood and the NEA staff in both Hollywood and New York)

NEW RELEASES

NIGHTWING (PG) — Nick Mancuso, David Warner, Kathryn Harrold. Thriller. Whoever thought of this had bats in his belfrey. It's a silly amalgamation of a horror story (with vampire bats as the scary ingredient) and some nonsense about American Indians and their tribal customs. The horror stuff is handled with nice restraint, but the other aspect weighs it down, and it is badly written, edited and acted. GRADE: C-plus.

BLOODLINE (R) — Audrey Hepburn, Ben Gazzara, James Mason, Omar Sharif. Romantic mystery. This is further proof that big best sellers are tough to turn into movies. Sidney Sheldon's book becomes a fuzzy mess here, despite lavish production and a fine cast. It is compressed and emerges with more holes than a yard of screening. And a sub-plot (including sex and nudity) has absolutely no connection with the rest of it. GRADE: C

GENERAL RELEASES

ALIEN (R) — Tom Skerrittr, Sigourney Weaver, John Hurt. Science fiction-horror. This part-"Star Wars," part-"Jaws," as it tries to scare you to death futuristically. A plodding old space ship inadvertently takes aboard a monster, which does terrible things to the people it catches. The crew tries to kill it and definitely vice versa. If you like the type, this is GRADE: A, but avoid it if you scare easily.

GOLDENGIRL (PG) — Susan Anton, James Coburn, Curt Jurgens. Sports drama. A mad scientist tries to turn his tall, beautiful daughter into the greatest runner ever, eyeing three gold medals at the Moscow Olympics. In the process, he doesn't mind wrecking her, mentally and physically. Contrived, foolish and implausible affair, but Susan is nice to look at. (CAUTION: Some gratuitous nudity that should have earned it an R rating). GRADE: C-minus.

IN-LAWS, THE (PG) — Peter Falk, Alan Arkin. Comedy adventure. Feel like a good laugh? This is it — a wild and crazy film about a man (Falk) who may be a crook or a hero and another man (Arkin) who is only a poor, suffering dentist. United by the coming marriage of their children, the one drags the other into a complicated mess that isn't very logical — but great fun for everybody. GRADE: A.

KIDS ARE ALRIGHT, THE (PG) — The Who. Documentary. The story of one of rock's finest bands in a few words and a lot of music from concerts, TV shows and films throughout the career of The Who. A straight-ahead documentary that works through the power of the music and the four compelling personalities that ade up The Who. A must for rock fans. GRADE: B. (Patterson).

Moon Landing Almost Aborted Due To Computer

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Christopher Columbus Kraft, the man millions know as an efficient Mission Control troubleshooter, said Friday an order to abort Apollo 11's historic lunar landing would have been no great surprise.

Kraft, peeling off his coat after dedicating a rocket park under a hot Texas sun, recalled on the landing's 10th anniversary that a computer problem posed a serious threat during the Eagle's descent to its touchdown on the Sea of Tranquillity.

"We all became very nervous in Mission Control," said Kraft, director of flight operations at the time and now director of this astronaut training base.

"The day was very uneventful up until the time we got ready to land," Kraft said.

"We had figured out pretty well how to go about it from the previous flights and we felt reasonably comfortable about it."

He said the computer trouble developed when the Eagle, with astronauts Neil Armstrong and Edwin "Buzz" Aldrin aboard, was about halfway down to the moon after leaving the command module Columbia, piloted by Michael Collins.

Kraft said he particularly became nervous because he, along with the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, had held the responsibility of developing the computer's programming.

"And I knew the computer was being overloaded," he said. "That had us all very worried."

Kraft said telemetry to Mission Control, however, indicated the computer, because of the overload, was not doing some of the computations expected of it but was doing enough of those necessary to keep the Eagle on course.

"Even so, we were sitting on tenterhooks wondering whether the next cycle of the computer was going to become so overloaded it could not carry out its computations and that indeed could have created an abort situation for use," he said.

Kraft added: "I think the thought that went through everybody's mind, even all during Apollo 11, was the possibility we might indeed have to abort."

"And so it would not have come as a great surprise to us to have gotten that far and to have had to try again the next time," Kraft said.

Kraft dedicated the park to the memory of Virgil Grissom, Ed White, and Roger Chaffee, the three astronauts who died in the Apollo 1 fire while training at Cape Kennedy.

Later, while reminiscing about the Eagle's landing, Kraft again referred to the Apollo 1 fire that caused months of delay for the start of Apollo flights.

"I think the whole Apollo program from the very beginning of Apollo 7, after we had gotten back from the tragedy of the deaths of three men, really seemed to have the right things going for us, sort of like the momentum of the program carried us all, as it does in some sports," he said.

"And it just seemed like everything we did from that point on turned out to be pretty good for us. We had some problems. We never had a space flight to my knowledge in which we didn't have some problems that bothered us as did the computer problem on Apollo 11, which turned out well for us in the end."

Tranquility Park Dedicated In Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — Dramatic words marked Neil Armstrong's first step on the moon, and those same words dedicated a three-acre park Friday to honor the 10th anniversary of the landing.

Dr. Christopher Kraft, director of Johnson Space Center, repeated Armstrong's words:

Kraft said Tranquillity Park, a delayed Bicentennial project named for Apollo 11's landing site, should be dedicated to all who explored the unknown, who dared to go where no man had gone before.

The "dramatic words" of Armstrong, Kraft said, touched all humanity with its message of peace. A plaque on the spacecraft reads, "We came in peace for all mankind."

Then Kraft, a veteran flight director who became director of the space center in 1972, began a countdown that signaled:

•And an Air Force band to play "Stars and Stripes Forever."

Astronaut Donald Slayton thanked the crowd — estimated at 8,000 to 10,000 — for Houston's support and hospitality for the astronaut corps since the manned space training base came here 20 years ago.

"We're unhappy the Apollo 11 crew couldn't be here," said Slayton, who manages orbital test flights for the space shuttle, the next manned space project.

Armstrong and his Apollo 11 crewmates, Edwin "Buzz" Aldrin and Michael Collins, were in Washington for a news conference and White House ceremonies.

About 10 other astronauts were at the Tranquillity Park dedication, along with state and local politicians.
