No tax rate hike planned for city

Snyder City Council members have begun work on the city's 1997-98 budget and if they follow the recommendation of the administration, citizens will not see an increase in water, sewer or sanitation rates for 1997-98.

The administration is also not recommending an increase in the city's current tax rate of $0.4021 per $100 valuation. The proposed budget is $8,178,114 — up slightly from last year's budget of $7,979,190.

A four percent increase in pay is being recommended for city employees.

The council met Monday night in a three-hour budget work session that focused primarily on capital expenditures for the various city departments.

Expenditures for departments providing major services to citizens showed the largest expenditures as the landfill department proposes expenditures of $404,500 and the water production department proposes capital expenditures in the amount of $145,500. The water distribution department has proposed expenditures of $198,700.

The police department is asking for expenditures of $71,930 while the fire department proposes spending $26,820 in the coming fiscal year.

Expenditures at the landfill include the purchase of a motor grader for $134,000 and a dozer for $240,000.

A major expenditure proposed for the water treatment plant is $110,000 for equipment to insure the old plant can treat two million gallons of water daily when the new plant goes on-line.

By far the largest proposed expenditure for the water distribution department is $183,000 for new water lines. The administration is also proposing two additional personnel in this department to replace water lines six inches in diamater and under.

The police department is proposing to purchase two new police cars for an estimated $46,900 to replace vehicles which have more than 140,000 miles on them.

A major expenditure proposed for the fire department is for a training "smoke house" for $10,000. The building will have movable walls so that several floor plans can be used by firemen as they train in a building that has smoke pumped into it for more realistic training.

Mayor David Holt presided at the workshop. All council members were in attendance, to include Dayton Robertson, Vernest Tippens, Jerry Webb, I.E. Martin, Kerry Bredemeyer and Terry Martin.

The council is scheduled to meet Thursday evening at 6 to continue budget talks for the coming year. Topics expected to be discussed Thursday include personnel and the water department.

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Yes and no are two of the shortest words in the English language, but they often are the ones that require the most thought before they're used."

Word has it that the European Union head honchos think it's bloody time to take the English language a little more seriously.

They announced recently that since English is one of the most universal languages, it is important that all European countries adopt it in some form or another, but certainly as a second language.

German was the other language being considered, but it came up short in comparison to English.

But English, it seems, is not without room for improvement. This will not be sudden and abrupt. Europeans are planning a subtle implementation of English over a five-year period in which they will "modify" the language to make it conform more to the European version of what they perceive is appropriate.

It's called Euro English.

In the first year, "s" will be used instead of the soft "c."

Sertainly, sivil servants will resieve the news with joy.

Also, the hard "c" will be replaced with "k." Not only will this klear up konfusion, but keyboards kan have one less letter.

Shelton top candidate for chief of staff

President Clinton may delay announcement for several days though

WASHINGTON (AP) — Green Beret commander Army Gen. Henry Shelton is almost certain to be President Clinton's choice for chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, administration officials said today.

Defense Secretary William Cohen was formally recommending Shelton in a meeting with the president, who has known for days that the general was Cohen's top candidate, the aides said. A military official said Shelton, who is based in Florida, was at the Pentagon today.

The officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Clinton may move slowly because he wants to give any unknown problems with Shelton's background time to surface.

His reason for caution is obvious: Cohen's first choice to succeed Army Gen. John Shalikashvili was Air Force Gen. Joseph Ralston, who withdrew from contention last month after disclosure of an adulterous affair several years ago. Ralston remains as vice chairman of the Joint Chiefs.

The Ralston episode embarrassed the administration, but the damage would have been worse if Clinton had already announced the choice. The administration officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said that even if Clinton settles on Shelton today, he may keep it quiet until Friday.

In the past week, Cohen said he'd settled on three or four candidates, and had discussed the short list with Clinton.

Pentagon sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said likely top candidates included: NATO Commander Wesley Clark, Marine Commandant Charles Krulak, Army Chief of Staff Dennis Reimer and Shelton, head of the Special Operations Command at MacDill Air Force Base, Fla. All are generals.

The Special Operations Command is popularly known as the Green Berets.

Shelton, a graduate of North Carolina State University and a former commander of the 18th Airborne Corps and Fort Bragg, N.C., won praise for his role as the ground commander of the 1994 U.S. military operation in Haiti.

At the last minute, with paratroopers already in the air, the mission was switched from a full-scale airborne invasion of the Caribbean nation to a less-confrontational insertion of American troops in an effort to restore democracy.

And it was the crimson-bereted Shelton who dwarfed Raoul Cedras in October 1994, when Haiti's military leader appeared at the clapboard army headquarters to resign.

Shelton also is a favorite of Cohen, who took a liking to the Green Berets during his service on the Senate Armed Services Committee.

Shelton's emphasis on a multi-service military is welcomed by others in the leadership of the U.S. armed forces.

Starr: Foster killed himself

Conclusion probably won't silence critics, however

WASHINGTON (AP) — They combed a park for days looking for a missing bullet. They hired the same forensic expert who worked on the O.J. Simpson murder trial. They endured endless criticism from a host of skeptics.

In the end, Whitewater prosecutors looking into Vincent Foster's death came to the same conclusion that three other investigations had: the former White House deputy counsel shot himself in the head on a summer day in 1993.

"Based on investigation, analysis and review of evidence by experts and experienced investigators and prosecutors, this office concluded that Mr. Foster committed suicide by gunshot in Fort Marcy Park, Va., on July 20, 1993," Whitewater independent counsel Kenneth Starr said in a brief statement.

Starr's conclusion was bolstered by the work of Dr. Henry Lee, the highly regarded chief of Connecticut's forensics lab whose expertise has been sought worldwide from China to the Simpson case.

Foster's friends said they hoped the report, filed Tuesday in a U.S. Court of Appeals here but not yet made public, would lay the case to rest once and for all.

"Hopefully, all the scurrilous gossip will now cease," said Jim Fitzpatrick, a Washington lawyer who represented Foster's boss and frequent defender, former White House counsel Bernard Nussbaum.

White House press secretary Mike McCurry said of the report today, "I think the general reaction around here is that's consistent with what everybody has known for a long time."

Starr's critics said the report came out just as they expected and will not end speculation that Foster, a close friend of the Clinton's and a key figure in the Whitewater investigation, was murdered and his death covered up.

"Starr created the process that would come to this conclusion," said Christopher Ruddy, a reporter who has written stories raising questions about Starr's investigation. He said Starr blocked his investigators from looking at the homicide theory.

Starr's report won't be released until the court reviews it and seeks comments from interested parties.

A cottage industry of Foster murder theories has sprung up, with books, newspapers stories, Web sites and videos even though the U.S. Park Police, Starr's predecessor as special prosecutor, Robert Fiske, and congressional committees all concluded that Foster took his own life with a handgun.

Gail cowpoke ropes stockholder's crown

A Borden County cowboy took home the saddle and buckle at the Stockholder's Roping here Monday, an event which precedes the annual Scurry County Rodeo.

Jess Stone of Gail posted times that placed him first in the average with partner Kevin Holt and second with Trey Wilson, both of Snyder.

Bob May and Jeff Miner, also of Snyder, were winners of the first go-round, with May and Holt placing third in the average.

The stockholder's roping is just one of the many festivities scheduled throughout the week in conjunction with the rodeo.

The town square will be the place to be Thursday evening at 5 o'clock as the annual rodeo parade takes place. Floats, vehicles of all types, carriages and horses will make their way through the downtown area.

The parade is only the beginning, though. The rodeo officially gets underway with the grand entry for the first performance Thursday night at 8. Performances will continue nightly at the Scurry County Rodeo Association Arena, ending with the finals Saturday night.

Providing the stock for this year's competition is TNT Rodeo Company out of Anson. The scheduled events are bareback riding, saddle bronc riding, calf roping, barrel racing, girl's breakaway roping, bull riding and team roping.

After each night's competition, patrons will be able to kick up their heels to the music of Terry Sneed and Up the Creek, performing at the rodeo grounds.

Tickets for each night's performance are $5 at the gate or can be purchased in advance from one of the rodeo queen contestants.

The four girls vying for the title of 1997 Miss Scurry County Rodeo Association Queen are Veronica Williams, Monica Roberson, Shelly York and Darcee Purcell.

The new queen will be crowned by the 1996 title holder, Riley Tatum, at the rodeo's final performance.

CMH reschedules Thursday meeting

Cogdell Memorial Hospital board's called meeting, originally scheduled for Thursday, has been rescheduled.

Notice of the meeting was posted with an incorrect date, leading administrators to reschedule it Monday.

Items on the agenda are a budget workshop and a public statement from the board concerning the proposed lease of Cogdell Hospital to Community Health Systems.

Monday's meeting will be held at 8 a.m. in the hospital board room.

Bronze sculpture remembers victims

HOUSTON (AP) — A year to the day after he last saw his wife and two daughters alive, Joe Lychner says he had no regrets.

"We were lucky to have them when we did," Lychner said Tuesday night at ceremonies dedicating a life-size bronze sculpture depicting his wife, Pam, embracing their daughters, Shannon and Katie, who were among the 230 victims in the explosion and crash of TWA Flight 800 a year ago this week.

Mrs. Lychner, 37, a former TWA flight attendant prominent in Texas for her efforts in crime victims' rights, and her daughters, Shannon, 10, and Katie, 8, were remembered amid harp music from the children's babysitter, a flag presentation by Katie's Brownie troop, and a video tribute watched by several hundred of their relatives, friends and neighbors.

Joe Lychner told of his final conversation with his wife on the telephone July 17, 1996 as she and the children were about to board the jumbo jet in New York for a brief vacation in Paris. Lychner said he initially was too busy at work in Houston and was reluctant to take the call.

"The moral of this story is to make time for your family," he said. "The truth is one day they may be here and the next day they may be gone. We all get caught up in daily life. And in the rush of life, we forget why we are doing it."

The bronze of Mrs. Lychner, a founding member of the Houston victims' rights group Justice For All, with her arms around her daughters, is the centerpiece of a pink granite circular plaza at Town Hall Park near the Lychner home in Spring Valley, an enclave of Houston.

Local officials described the sculpture as a perpetual remembrance of Mrs. Lychner, the family values she embodied and her work for their community.

"It's not tough today. this is a tribute and hopefully a tribute that will last forever," Joe Lychner said. "Certainly it will last long after I'm around. The most important thing for me is that people look at my loss and then look at what they have and consider how lucky they are."

Sculptor Patrick McGuire said he hoped the sculpture, in a park that includes new playground equipment, would be a magnet for families and their children. He also said he hoped Lychner would be able to visit the site and find comfort in meditation on his family.

"I was trying to give something back to Joe," he said.

Justice For All was founded in mid-1993 after a man with a history of sexual assaults attacked Mrs. Lychner, who was working as a real estate agent, while she was showing a house.

Under her leadership, the group attracted several thousand members to become Texas' largest victims' rights group, campaigning against early release of prisoners and expansion of privileges for Texas prison inmates. The group also pushed legislative programs to aid crime victims and opposed repeated delays in executions of Texas death row inmates.

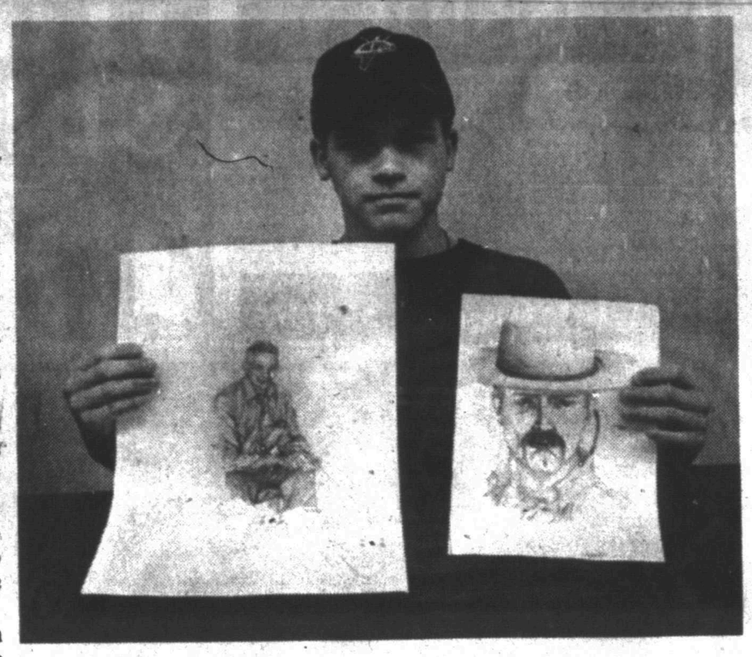

Texas honored Mrs. Lychner late last year by naming a Houston-area state jail after her.

"I'm still not over it today and probably never will be," state District Judge Michael McSpadden, who worked with Mrs. Lychner, said of her death. "Pam Lychner was a true hero, sacrificing so much of her life to provide true service to our community."

The 747 jumbo jet's crash remains a mystery. Investigators this week are using a rented similar jet outfitted with electronic sensors in hopes of finding a cause.

Joe Lychner said he was heading to New York today to participate in other memorial services and perhaps get an update on the crash investigation.

He dismisses theories that a missile hit the plane and notes that federal authorities have found no evidence of a bomb.

Treatment options for incontinence

DEAR DR. GOTT: I read your column regularly and have seen some very helpful advice in it. Here's hoping you can solve an embarrassing problem I have, which I suspect is commonplace.

I am 69 years old and healthy, energetic and physically active with all minor complaints taken care of, save one. Just in the past year I have what my GP calls urge incontinence — with a vengeance! Despite, using panty inserts, practicing the Kegel maneuvers and visiting the bathroom every one to two hours, there are dreadful accidents no grown woman should endure.

I understand there is a fairly simple surgery that could solve my problem, but having had several cancer surgeries recently, I am AVOIDING surgeons if at all possible.

DEAR READER: I understand your reluctance to have further surgery; yet you have tried many non-surgical options, to no avail.

I believe you would be best served by seeing a urologist. If you have something as common as a chronic urinary infection causing your incontinence, a solution (antibiotics) is close at hand. If, however, your problem is associated with a dropped bladder or other physical abnormality, surgery may be your best choice. See what the urologist recommends.

If I am on the money and you have a simple problem, you might be helped by the report I am sending you entitled "Bladder and Urinary Tract Infections." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: After having been happily married for 30 years, my wife and I tried anal intercourse. We were both surprised because we liked it. As long as it isn't painful, is there any harm in this practice?

DEAR READER: It is not my job — in a family-oriented newspaper — to discuss intimate sexual details. Also, it would not be appropriate for me to pass judgment on sexual practices between consenting adults.

However, speaking from a purely medical standpoint, anal intercourse is not harmful, providing it is not painful and it is not followed by vaginal intercourse.

To other readers: Before you write me indignant letters of moral protest, let me repeat that I am neither condoning nor condemning anal sex. This practice is not detrimental, as long as both adult participants agree to the act and do not experience emotional or physical discomfort. Whether these acts are perverse is a pervious issue that is outside the purview of a column on health matters.

Letters to the Editor

We know

To the Editor,

Let's set the record straight. There is only one person who knows absolutely, positively for certain what happened in the center field on the last night of the Senior Little League Tournament.

And that person is Matthew Grimmett. He is the one who was there in the outfield. He says he caught the ball and we believe him. Because you see, we also saw that happen, we the parents and fans who were there to support our kids — win, lose or whatever.

Our frustration is not so much in losing the game but in how the game was lost. We did not expect special treatment from the umpires since they were also from Snyder. But we did expect fair treatment. We want to be able to trust in the judgement of the umpires or any officials who are working our kids' games. But when we are witness to an episode like this, how can we not feel cheated?

I don't know if any of the umpires from that game will ever tell the whole story or even if they truly know what the whole story is. We have heard so many versions of what they said happened and no two stories have been the same. I fear they don't know for sure what happened that night.

But we know, the fans and parents and kids who played their hearts out that night. We all know. And it doesn't really matter what any of the umps come out and say in their defense.

We that were there — we know.

Tina Gordon

Dear Editor:

The chamber of commerce would like to thank each of you who helped us in any way with the Western Swing Festival or the July 4th celebration.

Both required many hours of exhausting hard work, lots of hands and backs to set up and take down, lots of workers at doors and entries and exits and ticket booths during the actual events, endless meetings of volunteers who serve on the committees who plan these huge events all year long and in the case of the fireworks display we all enjoy, lots of donations to make it possible each year. Then there are vendors to get organized, bathrooms to keep stocked and operating traffic to control, security to think about, parades to organize, advertising to be done, lots of supplies to be purchased, the weather to be considered and then you pray that everyone will have a great time with spectacular memories.

Thank you for helping us to make it all happen! We have received dozens of cards and letters from guests who visited our town during Western Swing for a week or more. Each of them praised our merchants and their employees, our restaurant owners and especially the waitresses, and even the people they met in the grocery stores and on the street as they shopped, who stopped them to welcome them to Snyder and ask where they were from, etc. Their memories of Snyder are of friendly, caring people, and they can't wait to return next year during the third week of June!

July 4th was truly a picture of "Americana" as the parade wound its way through the park and record crowds enjoyed the arts, crafts and antique booths, a huge variety of delicious food, and the Lions Club beautiful carnival. The prayer breakfast truly made us all grateful to be free and to live and worship together in public, in America, and especially right her in Snyder, Texas!

As the parade passed by me, and I watched mothers pushing baby carriages and pulling wagons and little ones riding bikes they had so proudly decorated, and saw the beautiful floats topped with laughing friends and waving children and saw the soldiers who were reminding us of the pain and suffering of those who died that we could enjoy this day, I wiped my eyes and thanked God for blessing Snyder and each of us who enjoy living here!

I hope that maybe you shared some of these same feelings and reflections, and just maybe — you added a special memory to your collection!

Thank you for your help and support of all our efforts and events. We couldn't have added to the quality of life here in Snyder without each of you.

Sincerely,
Donna Fowler

Singer recuperates from broken wrist

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Red Hot Chili Peppers are cooling off for a couple of weeks while lead singer Anthony Kiedis recovers from a badly broken wrist.

Kiedis, who shattered the wrist in a motorcycle accident, was listed in good condition Tuesday at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center. He underwent five hours of surgery, spokeswoman Karen Moss said.

Police said Kiedis' motorcycle collided Sunday with a car that made a U-turn in front of him. The car was apparently trying to secure a parking spot.

Computer firms to offer protective software

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House is urging the computer industry and parents' groups to take voluntary steps to make the Internet safe for youngsters. The effort comes shortly after the Supreme Court struck down a law designed to keep cyberspace's seedy side away from children.

President Clinton's "preference at this point is to use the energy and enthusiasm of the industry to develop these voluntary approaches that might accomplish our purposes," White House spokesman Mike McCurry said today.

"We'll look at the prospects for legislation after we see how this voluntary effort goes," he said.

Hoping to avoid a v-chip for the Internet, computer industry representatives were announcing at the White House today that they will provide greater access to anti-smut software and work to flag Internet sites that are clean enough for kids.

"We have tools out there which are 100 percent available," said Jerry Berman of the Center for Democracy and Technology, a group that works to protect computer users' civil liberties. They just need to be more widely used and understood, he said.

Vice President Al Gore was hosting a private meeting of industry representatives and child advocates before this afternoon's splashy announcement ceremony in the East Room.

About 30 to 40 people were expected, including representatives from America Online, Netscape Communications Corp., Microsoft Corp., Yahoo! Inc., the National Parent Teacher Association and the American Library Association, plus makers of screening technology and electronic civil liberties groups.

The White House has said it wants a solution "as powerful for the computer as the v-chip will be for the television that protects children in ways that are consistent with America's free-speech values." Next year new TV sets are expected to have a computer chip that would allow parents to block unwanted programs.

Instead of seeking new legislation to force the computer industry to shield children from Internet smut, the Clinton administration is pushing a system of voluntary restraints.

That's welcome news for the industry and electronic civil liberties groups, which fought to overturn anti-smut provisions in the 1996 telecommunications law.

"The message is there's technology out there now that works. It's a much better alternative to legislation that won't," said Andrew Schwartzman, president of the Media Access Project, a media watchdog group in Washington.

No final industry-wide voluntary plan was expected to be announced today, but some companies were expected to unveil plans. The industry was expected to hold a summit on the issue this fall.

For instance, Netscape Communications was expected to announce it would back a software standard allowing people, using a Web browser, either to block or select certain Web sites based on electronic labels on the sites. The company's next browser product would use the technology, the company said.

Microsoft's Explorer browser already uses the standard, dubbed PICS, which can work with more than one labeling or ratings system. Parents using a browser with the PICS technology could, for example, call up Web sites designated to be "family friendly" or they could block sites labeled as violent or sex-filled.

"We can look at this as a glass half-empty proposition where we have to prevent kids from getting the bad content, or we can look at is as the glass half-full, where we can entice them to come to good content," said Peter Harter, Netscape's global public policy counsel.

Fallen former congressman sent to prison for loan lies

CHICAGO (AP) — Already serving a prison term for having sex with an underage campaign worker, former Rep. Mel Reynolds was sentenced to 6½ years behind bars for bank fraud and campaign violations.

In court Tuesday, Reynolds said he feels "unbearable pain" and shame for his conduct. He apologized to his mother and pleaded for leniency from the judge, saying his family barely survives on a $600 monthly welfare check.

"Who will take care of my babies?" asked Reynolds, who for the first time acknowledged he had not "followed the law." He said the "pain that I have every day is almost unbearable because I have caused my children to suffer."

U.S. District Judge Charles Norgle sentenced Reynolds to the minimum term under federal sentencing guidelines. He said Reynolds has not taken responsibility for his actions.

"There is no remorse," Norgle said. "There is regret and there is dissatisfaction with having gotten caught."

Reynolds, a 45-year-old Democrat from Chicago, was convicted in April of bank fraud, wire fraud, making false statements to banks, conspiring to defraud the Federal Election Commission and making false statements to the commission.

He resigned from Congress after being convicted in 1995 of having sex with the teen-ager and was sentenced to five years in prison.

The federal sentence will overlap with his state term, which is expected to end in January. Reynolds will then be taken to a federal prison.

Cards fill vacant lots

By Phillip Alder

Ambrose Bierce had a particularly wicked sense of humor. For example, his "Devil's Dictionary" includes this definition for erudition: Dust shaken out of a book into an empty skull.

Keeping track of empty spaces sometimes points toward the right line of play at the bridge table. Today's deal is an example. How should South plan the play in three no-trump? West leads the diamond seven: two, three, jack. (East's three showed an odd number of cards in the suit.)

South saw that there were no problems if clubs were 2-1. And a 3-0 break wouldn't be fatal if he could guess which opponent held all three.

Declarer decided that if West was long in diamonds, East might be long in clubs. So, at trick two, he led a club to dummy's king. When East discarded a spade, though, the contract was dead. Forlornly, South gave West his club trick, but the defense was remorseless. West cashed the diamond ace, then played the diamond four to his partner's nine. A switch to the heart queen netted four tricks in that suit, resulting in five down!

North gave South a dusting down for his impulsive play. "Before committing yourself in clubs," North said, "you should have cashed your spade tricks. Here, you learn nine of East's cards (six spades and three diamonds) to six of West's (one spade and five diamonds). So West has seven empty spaces for the club queen, whereas East has only four. This tells you to start by cashing the club ace."

"Sorry, partner. That was empty-headed of me."

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

Kids' Eyes as Well as Skin Need Protection From Sun

DEAR ABBY: While strolling on the beach recently, my wife and I noticed a young woman and her son wading. The boy was probably 3 or 4 years old. The mother was wearing sunglasses, but the child had none, and was squinting from the sun's glare.

On another occasion, we observed a mother pushing a stroller as she jogged. The infant in the stroller did not have his eyes protected from the sun and was squinting.

Abby, please urge parents to protect their children's eyesight with good sunglasses that block the UV rays.

BILL FROM CORRALITOS, CALIF.

DEAR BILL: With pleasure. Almost all parents are aware that exposure to sunlight can damage a child's delicate skin. However, the danger of the sun's rays to the eyes has only recently been established. Studies have shown that permanent damage to the eyes can result from prolonged exposure without adequate protection.

According to Michael H. Marmor, M.D., professor of ophthalmology at Stanford University Medical Center: "Of greater concern than the acute damage caused by a day in the sun is the cumulative damage of repeated exposure that may contribute to chronic eye disease."

Long-term exposure affects not only the surface of the eye — the cornea and conjunctiva — but also the internal structures, the lens and the retina, resulting in cataracts and other conditions that may harm the child's vision later in life.

The most dangerous time for sun exposure is between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. (or even longer in areas close to the equator). High altitudes, beaches, snow fields and bodies of water significantly increase ultraviolet (UV) exposure.

Parents should teach children to never look directly at the sun, even when they are wearing sunglasses. Sunglasses cannot protect a child's eyes from potentially serious injury caused by gazing directly at the sun.

The American Academy of Ophthalmology recommends sunglasses that screen out 99 percent to 100 percent of ultraviolet light (both UV-A and UV-B). They should carry one of the following labels: "Blocks 99 percent of ultraviolet rays," "UV absorption up to 40nm," "Special purpose," or "Meets ANSI UV requirements."

A common myth about sunglasses is that they have to be expensive to give adequate protection. Many $10 glasses may provide equal or greater protection than those costing $100.

Even infants' eyes should be protected. If necessary, the sunglasses can be secured with an elastic band.

DEAR ABBY: I always like to tell a joke to every new person I meet or correspond with. A wise man once said that a good laugh does a body as much good as five tablespoons of bran flakes.

I'd like to offer this one:

An old Texas farmer climbed into his pickup truck and went to town to buy groceries. There was a stop sign at the main highway, but he just slowed down, looked both ways, then took off like a shot. Unfortunately for him, one day the sheriff saw him and pulled him over.

"Sir," said the sheriff, "that is a full-stop sign."

"Son," said the farmer, "I've been doing this for 20 years and have yet to have an accident. There's not a bit of difference between 'stop' and 'slow down.'"

"Well, sir," said the sheriff, "I'm going to show you the difference." He hauled out his nightstick and began beating the poor farmer on both shoulders.

"Now, sir," said the sheriff, "do you want me to STOP or SLOW DOWN?"

God loves you, Abby, and so do I.

LONGTIME READER, JOHN J. TUOHY

DEAR JOHN: I always thought "STOP" meant "slowly tap on pedal." (Just kidding.)

Spiers' late home run lifts Astros to 5-3 win

CHICAGO (AP) — Chris Spiers helped the Houston Astros accomplish something they've failed to do 37 previous times this season — win a game when trailing after eight innings.

Spiers hit a three-run homer in the ninth inning Tuesday to give the Astros a 5-3 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

"For us, it was an inspiring game because we haven't been able to come from behind at all this year," Astros manager Larry Dierker said. "This is the kind of game that might break some ground for us and give us some confidence in late-inning situations."

Darryl Kile (12-3) allowed three runs on seven hits over eight innings for the win. He struck out six and walked two. Kile has pitched at least seven innings in 20 of 21 starts and has allowed three earned runs or less in 19 of those starts.

Trailing 3-2, Houston's Sean Berry led off the ninth with an infield single against Mel Rojas (0-3). Craig Biggio walked with one out and Spiers, batting for Kile, sent an 0-2 fastball into the left-center field bleachers, giving Rojas his fifth blown save in 14 chances.

Kevin Orie led off the bottom of the ninth with a single off Jose Carbrera, making his major-league debut. Mike Magnante got the final two outs for his first career save.

The Cubs led 3-0 after Shawon Dunston's three-run homer in the fourth inning. But the Astros came back.

"It doesn't get much better than that," Dierker said. "He made a mistake to Dunston but when you have a curve ball as good as his, sometimes you hang it and they still don't hit it out. Dunston capitalized on a mistake. A lot of guys don't. You give him credit and go on."

Cubs starter Kevin Foster retired his first 14 batters and allowed two runs and seven hits in 7 1-3 innings with no walks and 10 strikeouts.

"We have a saying here," said Cubs manager Jim Riggleman after his team dropped to 1-5 on its homestand. "Your character as a man is judged in bad times, not good times. Our character has been tested. These guys have been through a lot. These players feel horrible about the situation, but they are trying to get out of it."

Dunston's homer, his sixth of the season, followed singles by Doug Glanville and Sammy Sosa in the fourth.

Houston got its first two runs in the seventh. Jeff Bagwell singled, took third on Derek Bell's double and scored on Berry's single. Tony Eusebio's RBI single pulled Houston within a run, but Foster struck out Biggio and Kile to end the inning.

Baseball fans mourn Passe

HOUSTON (AP) — Longtime baseball broadcaster Loel Passe, whose homey exclamation of "Hot ziggity dog and sassafras tea!" was known to two generations of Houston Astros fans, has died of cancer. He was 82.

The Alabama native, who spent almost a half-century in Houston, died Tuesday at his home.

Passe was working at a Birmingham, Ala., radio station owned by Harris County Judge Roy Hofheinz when he was hired in 1950 to broadcast the minor league Houston Buffs games for Hofheinz's station KTHT.

In 1962, Passe joined Gene Elston and Al Helfer as the original broadcast team for Houston when the then-Colt .45s joined the National League. He remained with the Colts and the renamed Astros through 1975 but left the air after Hofheinz lost control of the Astrodomain empire.

Passe gained notoriety among Astros fans for his folksy sayings — "Now you chunkin' in there" or "He breezed him one more time" for a successful pitcher. "How you like them apples?" or "Hold me boys, chain me to my chair!" for a Houston rally.

But his most famous phrase dated from his days in Alabama, where he rubbed elbows with the likes of broadcasters Mel Allen and Dizzy Dean and with Sam Phillips, who later discovered Elvis Presley.

"During 1950, my first year here, the Buffs finished in last place," Passe wrote in 1983. "Somehow we won four in a row up in Fort Worth, and I said something I had picked up back in my sandlot baseball days: 'Hot ziggity dog and sassafras tea, now you're going in there, gang.'"

Second inning proves costly for Hill and Rangers in loss

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Jason Dickson, halfway to becoming the American League's first rookie 20-game winner in 43 years, scattered eight hits in seven innings as the Anaheim Angels beat the Texas Rangers 6-2 Tuesday night for their eighth straight victory.

The victory tied the third-longest streak in the Angels' 37-year history. They had an 11-game run in June 1964, and won 10 in a row in April 1979 en route to the first of their three AL West titles.

Under new manager Terry Collins, the Angels also have come out of the All-Star break with a 6-0 mark for the first time ever. They were 5-0 in 1995, when they tied for first with Seattle and lost a one-game playoff.

Tuesday night's victory, coupled with Seattle's loss at Oakland, put the second-place Angels within 1½ games of the Mariners.

Dickson (10-4) retired the side in order only once and stranded runners at third base in the fourth and fifth innings. The Canadian-born right-hander, Anaheim's only All-Star representative, allowed his only run on Will Clark's 10th homer leading off the sixth. He struck out three and did not walk a batter for the fifth time in his last eight outings.

"He concentrates a lot more with runners in scoring position and he bears down," Angels catcher Jim Leyritz said. "He made a couple of mistakes, like that 0-2 pitch to Clark right down the middle. That was one of those situations where he loses his concentration when there's nobody on."

A sixth-round draft pick in June 1994, Dickson pitched only 18 games at the Triple-A level before making seven starts for the Angels last September. He cemented a spot in the rotation just after his 24th birthday, partly on merit and partly because of injuries to Chuck Finley and Mark Gubicza.

"He's been a good find and he's eaten up some innings for us," said Angels left-hander Chuck Finley, whose spring training injury kept him off the opening day roster and opened the door for Dickson to pitch a shutout against Boston in the Angels' second game of the season.

"I don't think anybody really knew much about him, at least at this level," Finley added. "They were just going to stick him in the fifth spot and just kind of let him get his feet wet. But he got thrust right in there.

"He had some good games quick, built some confidence and took off from there. And if he can continue that in the second half, he'll be a big plus for this team."

The Angels scored their first five runs in the second inning. Ken Hill (5-7) surrendered hits to seven of the eight batters he faced in the inning after giving up 10 earned runs over 4 1-3 innings Thursday at Oakland.

The right-hander lasted only 1 2-3 innings, his second-shortest appearance in 17 starts this season. He left his start on April 30 after 1 1-3 innings because of a strained right shoulder.

Jim Leyritz hit a bases-loaded two-run single, Gary DiSarcina had an RBI double and Tony Phillips added a run-scoring single. Darin Erstad's single chased Hill and Dave Hollins greeted right-hander Matt Whiteside with an RBI single, the first of his three hits.

Tim Salmon made it 6-1 with an RBI single in the seventh.

Warren Newson hit his sixth homer, and second in two nights, off Angels reliever Shigetoshi Hasegawa in the ninth.

Neighbors, family don't believe Cherry involved

MALAKOFF (AP) — Neighbors saw the 67-year-old man with an American flag in his front yard as a sturdy man full of hints about fishing and lawn work. The FBI has a different picture of Bobby Frank Cherry.

It repeatedly questioned but never charged the former Ku Klux Klansman in the 1963 church bombing that killed four black girls and helped expose the depth of racial hatred in the South. More than three decades later, the FBI reopened its investigation into the Sixteenth Street Baptist Church bombing in Birmingham, Ala., and authorities are questioning him anew.

Cherry's family and neighbors say that whether he was involved or not, the new investigation is a sad tale of a man's past returning to torment him.

At a news conference this morning in Athens, Texas, about 10 miles west of the lakeside hamlet where he lives, Cherry again denied involvement in the bombing.

He said the night before, he was home with his sick wife, who had cancer, and two other women who were caring for her.

Foale may be approved for spacewalk

MOSCOW (AP) — NASA tentatively agreed to have a U.S. astronaut train for a delicate repair mission on the troubled Mir space station, Russian officials said today. But NASA officials said no such agreement had been reached.

The Russian officials said astronaut Michael Foale might be needed for the repair mission because the Russian cosmonaut who complained of heart trouble was not fit to do the repairs.

"We have tentatively agreed that the American astronaut and the Russian flight engineer (Alexander Lazutkin) will have a practice run on Monday, July 21," said mission control chief Vladimir Solovyov. "Then, we'll make a final decision with our NASA colleagues on whether to carry out the spacewalk."

Repairs designed to restore full power to the Mir, a mission twice delayed, are scheduled to begin July 24.

NASA officials in Moscow and at the Johnson Space Center in Houston said they had not yet assented to Foale taking part in the mission, and were still evaluating what would be expected of him.

For now, NASA spokeswoman Catherine Watson said in Moscow, "He can do some basic things, but no official simulations or the actual spacewalk — none of that's been approved by NASA yet."

Earlier today, another NASA spokeswoman in Russia, Kathleen Maliga, confirmed Solovyov's account. There was no explanation for the discrepancy.

Even if NASA does decide to let Foale participate in the mission, Solovyov said Russian space officials would not decide until next week whether he would actually take part.

Foale began making routine preparations today, which included checking his spacesuit and studying documents, Solovyov said.

The two Russian cosmonauts on the Mir, Lazutkin and mission commander Vasily Tsibliyev, were to carry out repairs this weekend to return the spacecraft to full power after a June 25 collision with a cargo ship.

Tsibliyev has an irregular heartbeat, and Russian space controllers pronounced him unfit for the repair job, expected to take four to five hours, Solovyov said.

"As the commander has medical problems, we have decided that he shouldn't take part in the trip into the Spektr," he said.

Foale underwent training in a Russian spacesuit before he left for the Mir and was "clearly delighted" by the proposal to take part in the repairs, Solovyov added.

Watson, the NASA spokeswoman, said Foale would use a Russian spacesuit rather than an American one "because he's on a Russian spaceship."

More than three decades later, the FBI reopened its investigation into the Sixteenth Street Baptist Church bombing in Birmingham, Ala., and authorities are questioning him anew.

Cherry's family and neighbors say that whether he was involved or not, the new investigation is a sad tale of a man's past returning to torment him.

At a news conference this morning in Athens, Texas, about 10 miles west of the lakeside hamlet where he lives, Cherry again denied involvement in the bombing.

He said the night before, he was home with his sick wife, who had cancer, and two other women who were caring for her.
