Reagan to meet with NSC panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has a date to be interviewed by the panel he named to review operations of the National Security Council, a spokesman for the panel says.

Spokesman Herbert E. Hetu said the White House proposed a date for such a meeting on Tuesday and the three-member panel accepted. Neither Hetu nor White House spokesman Albert R. Brashear would disclose the date.

The White House counsellor on the Iran-Contra issue, David Abshire, said the interview with Reagan would be "in the very near future" but not until after the president's State of the Union message to Congress on Jan. 27.

Abshire, speaking to reporters as he emerged from a Senate hearing on the affairs of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, where he is winding up his service as ambassador, said "there is absolutely no stonewalling" by the White House on the Iran-Contra issue.

Three hearings on the Iran controversy were scheduled in Congress today.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz was to appear before the House Foreign Affairs Committee to testify about the administration's Iran policy. The Senate Foreign Relations Committee was meeting across Capitol Hill at the same time and on the same subject. And later in the day, the House Select Committee on Iran was holding a closed-door organizational meeting.

Meanwhile, former National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane said he was told by the White House last May that a deal had been worked out, with Reagan's approval, to release all four U.S. hostages in Lebanon before McFarlane made his May 1986 trip to Iran with a planeload of weapons for the Iranians. He said the White House had instructed him not to negotiate while in Iran.

McFarlane, in an interview that lasted into the early morning on ABC's "Nightline," said if any laws were broken in the affair, the president "certainly didn't do it and didn't authorize anyone else to."

A White House official, who declined to be identified, confirmed Tuesday that Reagan was briefed in the Oval Office on Dec. 19 by Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., then chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee which had been investigating the Iran affair.

Pledge to 'create new Texas' begins Clements' second term

AUSTIN — Saying "the status quo is no longer acceptable" and "Texans are demanding change," William Perry Clements Jr. became Texas' 43rd governor Tuesday, pledging to "create a new Texas."

A cold wind and noontime clouds rolled in to obscure the morning's sunny skies as Clements took the oath of office from Supreme Court Chief Justice John Hill, the Democrat Clements defeated in 1978 when he became the state's first Republican governor since Reconstruction.

The new governor offered few specifics in his 10-minute inaugural address, interrupted four times by applause from the estimated crowd of 3,000. He promised to deliver the details during his state of the state address to the Legislature, which aides said should come late next week.

With the state's economy in tatters and the Treasury facing a $6 billion shortfall, Clements inherits a Texas far different from the booming, robust state he found in 1979. He characterized 1987 as "the worst of times" for some Texans, but also an opportunity.

"This is indeed a time of testing," he said. "Now is the season and time for us in Texas to take advantage of our opportunity and create a new Texas."

Republican National Committeeman Ernest Angelo of Midland, who watched the ceremony from the dias, said he was "very pleased" with the GOP's recovery of the governor's office. "He's the right man for the job," Angelo said of Clements.

"The fact that he considers this a great challenge rather than a time to dread is an indication of the kind of man he is," Angelo said.

The new administration's first initiative should come today when Clements will offer a proposal "so that we can keep the prison doors open without a policy of early release."

Faced with overcrowding and a federal court-ordered cap on its inmate population, the Texas Department of Corrections temporarily closed its doors to new prisoners over the weekend.

Permian Basin ends year with improved job rates

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Business/Oil Writer

Midland and Odessa both ended 1986 with continued improvement in unemployment. In Midland, the jobless rate stood at 10.5 percent in December, below the yearly average of 11.8 percent, according to Midland Texas Employment Commission office manager Joe Hatcher.

Odessa's December rate of 14.9 percent closed the year just above its 1986 average of 14.5 percent.

Both cities saw growth in the size of their available labor forces in December, but increased total employment as well, which pushed the rates down from November to December.

Hatcher attributed the movements to traditional seasonal forces — housewives, students and others who enter the holiday work force on a temporary basis and an increase in temporary hiring, particularly in the retail sector.

"Traditionally, December rates are among the year's lowest and despite Midland's peak of 14.1 percent in June, we've seen steady improvement since," Hatcher notes.

During December, Midland had a total workforce of 52,600 with total employment of 47,100 — leaving 5,500, or 10.5 percent, out of work.

Those figures compare with 52,400 available workers in November, when total employment stood at 46,600, resulting in 11.1 percent unemployment with 5,800 unsuccessful job seekers.

More probation, parole likely

By RAMONA NYE

The problems at the Texas Department of Corrections likely will mean more people reporting to both probation and parole officers in Midland County, regional law enforcement officials agree.

"I feel there are going to be more people placed on probation, because of the prison's inability to house people," said G.W. Thompson, Midland County's chief adult probation officer.

More parolees probably also will be flushed into local areas as the TDC attempts to maintain a 95 percent of capacity prison population that was mandated by a Tyler federal judge in 1983, said Jay Sides, regional supervisor with the Texas Board of Pardon and Parolees in Lubbock.

Thompson added that many people confuse parolees with probationers.

Unlike probationers, parolees have been convicted of a felony and served time in prison, Thompson said.

Electronic monitoring may relieve prison ills

By RAMONA NYE

While officials with the Midland County Jail and the Texas Department of Corrections struggle with overflowing cells, a local probation office is investigating ways to hold jail populations down with electronic monitoring systems.

"We're looking at a program to reduce the jail population by doing pre-trial release and electronic surveillance," said G.W. Thompson, chief adult probation officer in Midland County.

The use of electronic bracelets and anklets are the methods that Thompson and a group of local law enforcement officials and criminal justice professors are looking into for supervising some probationers.

The group will present its study to the district judges by March.

"In general I'm in support of the concept, but I think it has to be cautiously approached," said Paul Cromwell, a criminal justice associate professor at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Cromwell assisted in a pilot electronic surveillance program conducted by the state of Florida from 1985 to 1986.

There is a wide range of surveillance devices ranging from ones that can track a person for 24 hours to ones that require the probationer to call the probation office periodically, Cromwell said.

Fire at plastics plant will be allowed to burn out

LEAGUE CITY (AP) — Firefighters contained a fire early today at a League City plastic plant but were letting the flames burn out, authorities said.

"It's under control but it will probably be a couple of days before it's put out," Dickinson Fire Chief Jasper Liggio said. "We're going to let it burn itself out."

Two types of non-toxic plastics, polystyrene and polyethylene, caught fire at Reliance International at this Galveston County town about 30 miles southeast of Houston, said a League City police dispatcher who refused to give her name.

Louis West, a firefighter from the Dickinson Fire Department, twisted an ankle while trying to contain the fire, which was reported about 5 a.m., Liggio said.

There were no other reports of injuries.

A few nearby residents who were evacuated as a precaution might be allowed to return to their homes today at about noon, Liggio said.

Flames shot several hundred feet high after a series of small explosions at the plant, he said.

The company makes plastic pellets used in manufacture of various plastic products.

Company says quit smoking or quit working

CHICAGO (AP) — A manufacturing company trying to cut down on sick days has ordered its nearly 2,000 employees in eight states to quit smoking at work and at home, saying those who refuse will be fired.

But some workers say USG Acoustical Products' at-home ban and planned on-the-job lung testing has gone too far.

"What's next? You can't drink at home? You can't have sex with your wife at home? That's the feeling some people have," said Bill Matten, a non-smoking shipping department worker at the Cloquet, Minn., plant.

Cloquet warehouseman Bob Schilling, who smokes a pack of cigarettes a day, said Tuesday that some workers were angry about the order.

"I guess the company has a right to say you can't smoke on their property," he said. "I don't know for sure whether it's OK to say you can't smoke at home."

Paul Colitti, spokesman for Chicago-based USG Corp., said there was no history of lung ailments among workers at the nine USG plants that use mineral fiber and rock wool to make thermal insulation and acoustical tiles. USG is implementing the policy because statistics show nonsmokers have fewer sick days, he said.

In addition to the plant in Cloquet, Minn., the smoking ban will take effect in several months at plants in Gypsum, Ohio; Wabash, Ind.; Walworth, Wis.; Red Wing, Minn.; Tacoma, Wash.; Greenville, Miss.; Birmingham, Ala.; and Corsicana, Texas.

Colitti said smokers would be encourged to participate in kick-the-habit programs in May or June. They will be allowed to choose a company-sponsored clinic held on company time or be reimbursed for programs recommended by their physicians.

After the six- to eight-week company clinic, USG will give workers a one-week grace period before starting tests of lung capacity, Colitti said. "We'll know then if they are still smoking. If they are, we'll have no choice but to let them go."

The Tobacco Institute, an industry group, called the ban on at-home smoking an invasion of privacy.

U.S. Vice President George Bush addresses a conference on terrorism.

Bush says Buckley was killed

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Vice President George Bush said Tuesday night that an American kidnapped by terrorists in Lebanon had been killed.

It has been widely assumed that the American, William Buckley, who was thought to be the Central Intelligence Agency station chief in Lebanon, was dead. But Bush's remarks were the first explicit public acknowledgement by a senior administration official that Buckley had been killed by his captors. The vice president did not identify Buckley as an agent of the CIA.

In remarks prepared for delivery Tuesday night at a conference on terrorism, Bush was apparently trying to explain some of the motivation behind the shipment of arms to Iran by the Reagan administration.

He said the president did not intend to send the arms as a trade for American hostages held in Lebanon. But he added, "At the same time you should know the concern that the president feels, that we all feel, when an American in terrorist hands is tortured, and in the case of William Buckley, killed."

U.S. won't surrender frozen Iranian assets

By JOHN P. WALLACH
Foreign Affairs Editor
The Hearst Newspapers

WASHINGTON — Defying an international court ruling, the Reagan administration has refused to return $506 million in frozen Iranian assets because it alleges Iran is trying to extort the money by linking it to the fate of the five remaining U.S. hostages in Lebanon.

A senior State Department official disclosed Tuesday that the United States filed a legal brief in the Iran-U.S. Claims Tribunal in the Hague last week charging that the linkage constitutes grounds to withhold the money.

The official accused the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's regime, in making the linkage, of "a form of extortion in the middle of a legal case." He added: "We had to do the responsible thing. We had to divorce our conduct from these threats."

Politics may also have influenced the action. In the wake of the controversy over secret U.S. arms sales to Iran, the Reagan administration has apparently concluded that to pay Iran a substantial sum at this time would expose it to congressional charges that it was making another attempt to ransom the five hostages.

One day after the U.S. brief was entered, Iran filed papers with the international court accusing the United States of acting in bad faith. It cited the court's ruling last year that Iran was entitled to the funds, which are desposited in the Federal Reserve Bank of New York.

The U.S. official said the back-to-back court filings could delay for several months a final settlement, which had only recently appeared close at hand.

The threats he mentioned were five statements in the last two months by Hashemi Rafsanjani, the speaker of the Iranian Parliament, declaring that his nation would try to help free the hostages only if Washington released the frozen assets.

Rafsanjani was identified by former National Security Council adviser Robert C. McFarlane in Senate testimony as the leading Iranian "moderate" encouraging the sale of U.S. arms to Iran.

It now appears that the fiscal claims may have become intertwined in the power struggle inside Iran.

The State Department official noted, for example, that Iranian Prime Minister Mir Hussein Mousavi, an Iranian hardliner, vowed last week "there will be no reconciliation on our side with the United States." Mousavi told Iran's parliament he wholeheartedly backed the hostage linkage made by Rafsanjani.

But the State Department official, who asked not to be identified, conceded that politics is playing a role in the U.S. also. Some cabinet officials do not want to return the $506 million because of the ransom issue.

Treasury Secretary James Baker III last week told NBC News that "the Iranians to some extent have changed the reference of the debate...by suggesting somehow that if these funds are returned, hostages will be released. Hostages have absolutely nothing to do with this."

However, the State Department official said, the international court ultimately will order the United States to return the funds.

If the Reagan administration still balks, Iran could then sue in federal court to recover the money, according to a 1981 agreement that paved the way for the release of 52 American hostages then held in Iran. That accord also created machinery for resolving outstanding U.S.-Iranian claims.

The official added that the agreement, signed in Algiers by Carter administration officials in January, 1981, contained unusual provisions under which Iran could easily obtain a summary judgment enforcing the Hague decision.

The official said that Iran has lived up to its agreements under the Algiers accord and has paid some $800 million in claims by U.S. corporations and American citizens out of a special account which has a permanent $1 billion balance.

He said Iran has also shown good faith in replenishing that account three times.

In fact, the official disclosed, so much progress was made at the last negotiating session in the Hague Dec. 29-31 that both sides agreed to return to Washington and Teheran to prepare separate drafts of a final agreement. The head of the U.S. negotiating team is Judge Abraham Sofaer, the State Department's legal adviser.

In January 1981, $3.7 billion in Iranian assets was first deposited into a Federal Reserve Bank account in New York. That represented the total amount frozen after Iran seized the 52 American hostages in 1979. It has been used to pay off U.S. bank loans to Iran made during the rule of U.S.-backed Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi, who died in 1980.

Second West German kidnapped

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — An anonymous caller said today a West German was kidnapped overnight, the second German adbucted in Beirut since the arrest in Frankfurt of a Lebanese on charges of hijacking a TWA jetliner in 1985.

Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite met with pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem extremists in what was apparently an all-night negotiating session aimed at freeing U.S. hostages Terry Anderson and Thomas Sutherland, who were kidnapped in 1985.

Jihad Zohairi, a spokesman for the Druse militia that has escorted Waite in Beirut, told reporters: "Mr. Waite is having a meeting with the hostage-holders. We're waiting for a phone call from him to go and pick him up."

The anonymous caller to a Western news agency office in west Beirut said, "We kidnapped yesterday night German national Alfred Schmidt in the vicinity of the Summerland hotel." The caller, who spoke Arabic, hung up without saying what group he represented.

The claim, if genuine, would bring to 19 the number of foreigners missing and believed kidnapped in Lebanon.

Schmidt, 46, is an engineer with the Siemens company and was in charge of installing equipment for the new 9-story Middle East Hospital, about half a mile from the hotel.

The hospital manager, Dr. Adel Alyeh, said Schmidt "was kidnapped from his hotel room," but did not elaborate.

A Summerland hotel spokesman, however, said Schmidt left the hotel Tuesday morning "and has not returned." The spokesman said Schmidt checked into the seaside hotel in the Jnah district on Thursday.

Another Summerland employee denied Schmidt was kidnapped from his room.

"I saw him Tuesday morning. He told me 'bye' and left the hotel," said the employee, who also spoke on condition of anonymity.

A Siemens company source in Christian east Beirut, who also spoke on condition of anonymity, said, "We have no information about Mr. Schmidt."

In Bonn, West German government spokesman Juergen Findeisen refused to comment, saying officials did not have any information on Schmidt.

West German businessman Rudolf Cordes was kidnapped Saturday shortly after arriving at Beirut airport. No group has claimed responsibility for his abduction, but West German security sources said he was being held by Hezbollah, a Shiite group loyal to Iran.

The West German government said Tuesday that Cordes' kidnapping was linked to the arrest in Frankfurt on Jan. 13 of Mohammed Ali Hamadi, a Lebanese wanted in the United States on charges of hijacking a TWA jetliner. During the 1985 hijacking, a U.S. Navy diver was shot to death. Thirty-nine passengers were held hostage in Beirut for 17 days before being released.

Waite, on his fifth visit to Beirut in an effort to free foreign hostages, was seen leaving his hotel in Moslem west Beirut at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

The official called the meeting "a very brief update on what happened, a discussion of (the fact that) we wanted to get the story out but that there were problems" due to the refusal of fired National Security Adviser Adviser Vice Adm. John Poindexter and staff member Lt. Col. Oliver North to testify.

"In our minds, it was not highly irregular," said the official, adding that Durenberger also briefed Vice President George Bush the next day.

Brashear said that Reagan has met twice with Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan for lengthy discussions touching on the president's recollection of events chronicling the clandestine sales of U.S. arms to Iran.

Brashear told reporters in the White House briefing room that the president's orders from his doctors to take it easy for awhile impeded his ability "to come down here, or in any other forum, and take individual questions" on the issue.

The president has been spending part of each day in the Oval Office, and Brashear said his work time in the office will be gradually increased this week. No public appearances have been scheduled, however.

In other developments:

— Two federal inmates said they flew arms to the Nicaraguan rebels and drugs back to the United States with the knowledge of the CIA and the Drug Enforcement Administration. One of the two, Jorge Morales Garcia, goes on trial Monday on charges of smuggling cocaine from Costa Rica to the Bahamas. The other, Gary Betzner, flew two missions for Morales and is serving a sentence for cocaine smuggling and facing attempted escape charges. The CIA, DEA and a spokesman for the rebels have all denied the allegations.

— Former Sen. Gary Hart, considered a certain 1988 Democratic presidential candidate, criticized the handling of what he called "Iran-gate" by the administration during an appearance on the campus of the University of Florida in Gainesville.

CLEMENTS

Clements called on all Texans to help solve the state's problems and said he would appoint blue-ribbon task forces to study issues ranging from illegal drug trafficking to the separation of church and state.

"I promise we will leave no one behind as we move Texas forward," he said. "Our efforts will always be guided by a strong sense of compassion."

In the last shot of the second bitter battle between two political enemies, former Gov. Mark White's aides claimed the new governor snubbed White by not showing up for a short meeting between the two that White's staff said had been arranged for shortly before the inauguration. Clements' press secretary Reggie Bashur said the meeting had never been scheduled.

As per tradition, White marked a scriptural passage for Clements in former Gov. Pat Neff's Bible in the governor's private office. White circled Proverbs 22:6, a passage he quoted last summer in defense of public school spending: "Train up a child in the way he would go; and when he is old, he will not depart from it."

Lt. Gov. William P. Hobby Jr., who took the oath Tuesday for his fifth term as president of the Senate, spoke of the importance of education throughout his eight-minute inaugural address. "We must provide an education that lets every Texan grow just as much as he or she can," Hobby said.

Quoting figures that show the correlation between high school dropouts and prison inmates, welfare recipients and the poverty stricken, Hobby said, "We are not yet doing well enough."

"The state is not doing its job if it promises smaller classes for elementary school children and pre-kindergarten classes for the disadvantaged and then goes back on that promise," Hobby said, defending elements of the 1984 school reforms that some critics say the state can no longer afford. "It is not doing its job if it shortchanges minority children who need more help, not less."

Clements touched little on education or other specifics during his speech, concentrating instead on a call for unity, hard work and action. "It can be done and it must be done," he said.

"We must act today so that future generations of Texans look back at us and say, 'They met the challenge.'"

MONITOR

While there are a number of people in prison that should never be put back on the streets, Cromwell said, the electronic surveillance would be useful in monitoring burglars and other "property offenders."

"If you could use it on people who are strictly property criminals, you could use it to reduce the local jail populations," Cromwell predicted.

However, electronic surveillance will never solve prison overcrowding problems, just help alleviate them, he said.

Midland College Criminal Justice Coordinator Bob Peetz said electronic surveillance would free probation officers to spend more time with probationers requiring personal supervision.

"It certainly doesn't replace the probation officer. It will assist the probation officer in monitoring the whereabouts of non-violent offenders so he can spend (his time more productively)," Peetz said.

Florida, which began using the system statewide in 1984, has worked out the kinks in the program, Peetz said.

"I don't see Midland being a guinea pig because the experience is already there," he said.

Only Florida uses the program statewide, and Midland County would be the first county in Texas to go with electronic surveillance if local criminal justice officials approve of a program, Cromwell said.

In Florida, the state uses "community control" or house arrest on people who would have otherwise served up to three years in prison.

"They have people working, paying taxes and taking care of their families, but they are being punished because they're not leaving their home for at least a year," Cromwell said.

The devices, controlled by computers, "tell on" a probationer if they are taken off, Cromwell said.

But to be a success the program also must be accepted by the community, the two professors said.

If given the cost-saving facts about the program, Midlanders probably would support it, Peetz said.

"It's probably a good town to do a pilot project in. It's a law-and-order town. It's an educated town," he said.

About $20,000 keeps a prisoner in jail for a year, while the surveillance program could cost as little as $3,000 per year per prisoner, Cromwell said.

JOBS

Odessa had a total labor force of 59,700 in December, up by 200 from the previous month. Total employment registered 50,800 in December, 700 more than the month before. Total unemployment stood at 8,900, 14.9 percent of the workforce, in December compared to 15.8 percent, 9,400 out of work, in November.

If oil prices are sustained in the $18 to $20 per barrel range, Hatcher expects Midland's jobless rate to drop below the double-digit barrier early this year.

Comparing December's figures with year-end 1985 shows Midland and Odessa moving in slightly different directions, although the overall unemployment rate in both cities slightly more than doubled in 1986.

The total number of available workers in Midland rose over the year, from 52,100 in December 1985 to 52,600. Over the same period, Odessa saw its total work force shrink by 500, from 60,200. Total employment in Midland fell by 2,600 over the year, while Odessa saw a decline of 6,300 during the same period.

The seasonally adjusted statewide unemployment rate inched up a tenth of a percent in December to 9.6 percent at year-end, its peak for the year, Hatcher says.

McAllen and Dallas continue to have the state's highest and lowest jobless rates, respectively. McAllen's 20.3 percent December figure was up 0.3 percent from November, while Dallas continued at 5.8 percent unemployment.

Surrounding counties in the Permian Basin mirrored the improvement of Midland and Odessa, with the exception of Pecos County. Unemployment in the Fort Stockton area rose from 11.3 percent in November to 12.2 percent in December.

PAROLE

Probationers, sometimes first offenders, usually have not served any time in prison, he said.

Sides said Midland County's parole population of about 200 probably will increase, but he pointed out that the population has been increasing over the past 20 years. However, the oil bust could deter many parolees from choosing the Permian Basin, he said.

Unlike six years ago, when parolees across the nation were requesting transfer to the job-rich Permian Basin, many parolees now avoid the area, he said.

As a result, "There might be a slight increase (in the number of area parolees), but I don't look for it to be anything dramatic. It's not like they are going to open the gates and turn people out that aren't eligible," Sides said.

Thompson said that as the state struggles to solve it's prison overcrowding problem, more judges are likely to deliver a probation sentence instead of a jail sentence.

"Probation is an alternative punishment to being locked up. More people (meaning judges) will look at probation as a means of controlling prisoners instead of building stupendous edifices to put them in," Thompson said.

While an increase in probationers is likely, Thompson said he didn't think violent criminals would get off without an actual prison term.

"I don't think that violent people are going to be running in the streets. Those people are going to be locked up," he said.

Still, with the expected increase in probationers if judges start using the sentence more often, Thompson worries his officers may not have the resources to handle an increased caseload.

Sixteen Midland County probation officers currently work about 2,900 cases.

Of these, about 1,400 probationers have to report directly to their officers twice a month. About 530 of the "direct probationers" are on probation for felonies and about 900 are on probation for misdemeanors, he said.

By adding two new probation officers, the department has been able to whittle down "direct" cases per officers from 160 to 102, a number that is ideal, according to the Legislature, Thompson said.

However, "With the present facilities that I have, my present staff can barely handle what I got," Thompson said.

Donald Cohen, co-chairman of the American Bar Association's committee on employee rights in the workplace, called the at-home ban questionable but not illegal.

Federal and state laws bar discrimination on the basis of a physical ailment if it doesn't hamper job performance, according to Cohen, who said the USG ban could be challenged.

U.S. cyclists midway in intercontinental trek

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Four young American bicyclists have passed the halfway mark in their attempt to set a world record by pedaling from Alaska to the tip of South America — about 16,000 miles.

The four from St. Paul, Minn., began the journey Aug. 8 with their rear wheels in the Arctic Ocean at Prudhoe Bay, Alaska. Dan Buettner, 26, and Martin Engel, Bret Andersen and Ann Knabe, all 24, are heading for Argentina's Tierra del Fuego.

They have traveled 8,700 miles so far, first crossing the Alaskan tundra on unpaved roads. The cyclists say they have drawn curious stares from people along the road.

"They are impressed with us the way you might be impressed with a person who bangs his head against the wall," Buettner said.

Buettner, a freelance writer, carries a letter written by an official from the Guinness Book of World Records. It says the group has a chance of setting a world record if it can traverse the two continents tip-to-tip on bicycles.

The letter, written in 1985, says the trip has been done on foot.

"To our knowledge, if we make it, it will be the first time anyone has crossed the entire length of both continents on bicycles," Buettner said.

Buettner, who is on his third set of tires, said they expect to complete the trip in July in the village of Ushuaia, Argentina.

In San Salvador, El Salvador, the group had to wait a day until leftist guerrillas lifted a threat that they would stop and burn any vehicle on the highways.

The rebels, fighting a seven-year-old war, periodically conduct such traffic stoppages in an effort to damage the economy.

Buettner said the group originally was concerned about traveling through Nicaragua because of the war between U.S.-backed rebels and the Sandinista government.

"Our preconception was that there would be great danger, but although we have seen lots of soldiers, we haven't seen guns or bombs going off," he said.

The war is limited largely to remote, mountainous areas of northern and central Nicaragua.

The four plan to carry their bicycles over a 180-mile stretch of jungle called the Darien Gap, a section of Panama where the Pan-American Highway has not been completed, Buettner said.

In addition to the adventure and possible record, the group wants to promote friendship between nations, he said.

"We all speak Spanish," he said. "You travel slowly by bike, so not only do you get to know the countryside, you get to know the people, too."

"We make it a point never to say whether we believe that what America is doing (in Latin America) is right or wrong," he said. "We ask questions and listen, and I think people appreciate that an American is standing there and listening to their impressions."

President says paratroop unit will be disbanded

QUITO, Ecuador (AP) — President Leon Febres Cordero said the military high command plans to disband the paratrooper unit whose members held him hostage for 11 hours, but denied the action violated his pledge to take no reprisals against the rebels.

The opposition-controlled Congress, meanwhile, began voting Tuesday on a motion urging Febres Cordero to resign. Balloting was suspended after three votes were cast — two in favor and one against — and was scheduled to resume late this afternoon.

Opposition lawmakers accuse the president of repeatedly violating the constitutional division of powers by ignoring or blocking measures approved by Congress. They have called for his impeachment if he refuses to step down voluntarily.

Febres Cordero, a strong-willed conservative leader who is one of Washington's closest allies in Latin America, has vowed he will not be forced from office before his four-year term ends in August 1988.

In announcing the dissolution of the air force paratrooper corps, Febres Cordero said it did not violate his pledge to the paratroopers because the decision was not his.

Fifty to 80 paratroopers kidnapped Febres Cordero for 11 hours last Friday and forced him to grant amnesty to the former commander of the air force, Gen. Frank Vargas Pazzos, who had been detained since he led a failed rebellion in March 1986.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Gunmen kill 12 blacks

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Unidentified gunmen threw gasoline bombs at a house south of Durban today and shot 12 blacks to death as they tried to escape the flames, police said. The victims included seven children.

Police said two other people were wounded in the early morning attack in Kwamakhuta township near the Indian Ocean resort town of Amanzimtoti, 15 miles from Durban.

Police said the motive for the attack on the home of Willie Ntuli, was not immediately clear.

Ntuli and 11 others who were in the house were killed, including two brothers, Mavoko Ntuzhini, 5, and Bashi Ntuzhini, 3, and their sisters, Savile Ntuzhini, 4, and Phumsele Ntuzhini, 7, according to a polie statement, as well as two 50-year-old women, Mbusu Ndwalani and Isabel Khubeka. The others were Nunu Ntuli, 7, Jabu Ndlovu, 17, Phumale Ndlovu, 22, and two unidentified people.

Residents said Kwamakhuta has been torn in recent weeks by fighting between supporters of the multiracial United Democratic Front, South Africa's largest anti-apartheid alliance, and members of Inkhata, the Zulu organization loyal to Chief Mangosuthu Buthelezi, chief minister of the KwaZulu tribal homeland.

Buthelezi, a harsh foe of apartheid, long has been at odds with the United Democratic Front over methods of bringing about an end to white domination. The conflict often has resulted in violence in Natal, the homeland of the Zulus.

Quake strikes Japan

TOKYO (AP) — A moderate earthquake shook the Pacific coast of northern Japan Wednesday morning, the Central Meteorological Agency reported.

The National Police Agency said there were no immediate reports of injuries or damage from the quake, which registered 5.5 on the Richter scale.

The epicenter of the earthquake, which occurred at 8:36 a.m. (6:36 p.m. EST Tuesday), was about 35 miles under the sea off the coast of northern Miyagi prefecture, the meteorlogical agency said.

Strong earthquakes measuring 6.9 on the Richter scale hit northern Japan Jan. 9 and 14, and another quake registering 5.5 hit the region Jan. 17. The earthquake on Jan. 14 injured six people, police said.

Jail may separate smokers

LONDON (AP) — Inmates in British prisons soon may have a choice of smoking or non-smoking cells.

Home Office Minister David Mellor told the House of Commons on Tuesday that the prisons are overcrowded and usually two or three inmates have to share a cell designed for one.

Official predicts interest rates to fall slightly

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The indebted countries of Latin America can expect interest rates charged by foreign banks to fall no more than 2.5 percent, the head of a regional economic group said Tuesday.

Norberto Gonzalez, executive secretary of the U.N. Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean, noted that interest rates paid by the region's debtors had fallen last year by an average 2.5 percent.

"It would be difficult for the interest rates to fall by a greater percentage because the causes that determine (the rates) are the same" now as a year ago, Gonzalez said.

He spoke at a news conference during a break in a meeting on the economy sponsored by the U.N. commission. Delegates to the meeting, which ends Friday, are discussing ways to reduce inflation, promote internal savings and modernize production.

Gonzalez did not specify what a 2.5 percent drop in interest rates could mean for the region's debtor countries this year, but noted that a drop of that size last year resulted in an 8 percent rise in imports to Latin America.

Non-violence training planned before weekend march in Georgia

CUMMING, Ga. (AP) — Civil rights leaders plan training sessions in nonviolence for participants in this weekend's march in a largely white county, the scene of a violent confrontation last week that the FBI will investigate.

Officials in Forsyth County, meanwhile, say they will greet the marchers with coffee and doughnuts.

Coretta Scott King said Tuesday that Saturday's planned march in this tiny community of about 2,100 people would be "a great coming together of the family, the movement and the followers of Martin Luther King Jr."

Mrs. King is expected to be joined in the march by former U.S. Sen. Gary Hart, the Rev. Jesse Jackson and activist Dick Gregory. Gov. Joe Frank Harris also has been invited, but has not decided whether to participate, according to press secretary Barbara Morgan.

"It's been a long time since we've had something to move the nation," Mrs. King said.

Klu Klux Klan organizers have said they will be here Saturday to speak and distribute leaflets.

Law enforcement officials expect up to 2,000 people to walk nearly two miles from a shopping plaza to the county courthouse square. Last Saturday, 75 civil rights marchers participated and were jeered by about 400 counterdemonstrators, many of whom threw rocks and debris. Several people suffered minor injuries, and authorities made eight arrests.

The attacks were being investigated by the FBI to see if the marchers rights were violated, Assistant U.S. Attorney General William Bradford Reynolds announced Tuesday.

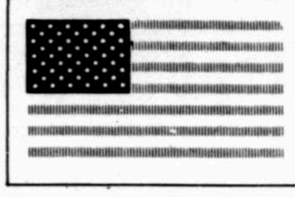
At least 1,200 counterdemonstrators are expected Saturday, said Fulton County Sheriff Richard Lankford, the only black among the state's 159 sheriffs.

"The numbers, every time we hear them, are growing," said Lankford, who met here Tuesday with authorities discussing police tactics for the demonstration and later in Atlanta with civil rights leaders planning the march.

Forsyth County businessman Chuck Blackburn proposed the first march in the town about 30 miles northeast of Atlanta as a way to prove that blacks were safe in the county, which had only one black among its 27,958 residents in the 1980 Census.

Bills suspending deportation of Salvadorans introduced

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Washington Correspondent



NATION

WASHINGTON — Sen. Dennis DeConcini and Rep. Joe Moakley Tuesday introduced bills that would temporarily suspend deportation from the U.S. of Salvadoran illegal aliens.

The congressmen said they were acting because of "a continuing threat of violence to displaced Salvadorans who return to their country." They said the bills would be placed on a "fast track" to passage.

The House bill also would halt deportation of illegal Nicaraguans. DeConcini (D-Ariz.) said a separate bill on behalf of Nicaraguan aliens will be introduced in the Senate.

Moakley's version of the legislation was passed by two votes as an amendment to the immigration reform bill approved by Congress last year. It was deleted by a House-Senate conference committee because President Reagan threatened to veto the measure, killing the immigration package.

Before dropping his amendment last year, Moakley (D-Mass.) said he first won "firm and strong commitments" from House and Senate leaders that "the protection of Salvadoran and Nicaraguan refugees would be a priority issue in the 100th Congress."

DeConcini, who has been trying to help displaced Salvadorans since 1981, introduced similar legislation in the last two sessions. He said they failed "principally because of opposition by the administration and its allies." This year, with Demcrats controlling the Senate, DeConcini said he hopes for passage.

The administration's position is that Salvadorans and Nicaraguans are "economic refugees," not political refugees.

If approved, the DeConcini version would delay deportation of Salvadorans for two years while the General Accounting Office and Congress investigate conditions in that country, torn by civil war since 1980.

At a press conference, both DeConcini and Moakley said the president could save the House and Senate many hours of debate by granting Salvadorans and Nicaraguans "extended voluntary departure" (EVD) status. Moakley said the president granted EVD status for Poles, Afghans, Ethiopians and Ugandans in the past.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service said it has no accurate estimates of the number of Salvadorans and Nicaraguans in the U.S. today. INS spokesman Verne Jervis said, however, he would not quarrel with DeConcini's statement that at least half a million Salvadorans are living in the U.S.

"I have never seen a number for Nicaraguans, but it would be fewer than for the Salvadorans," he added. Salvadorans, unlike Nicaraguans, "have a history of coming to the United States," Jervis said.

The Arizona senator quoted El Salvador President Napoleon Duarte as saying, "If all the Salvadorans in the U.S. were suddenly returned to El Salvador, the resulting effect on the economy would be disastrous."

A "sanctuary movement," conducted by churches, not-for-profit groups and even cities, and aimed at sheltering Salvadorans who are in the U.S. illegally, has spread to most parts of the country.

In 1984, three workers at Casa Oscar Romero, a sanctuary at San Benito, Texas, were convicted of transporting Salvadorans illegally into the U.S.

Jack Elder of San Antonio, the sanctuary director, served five months at a halfway house in San Antonio; the case of Stacy Merkt, a co-worker, is on appeal, and Lori Thomas, who succeeded Elder as director, recently was released from a federal prison.

The Austin city council last April considered, but dropped, a measure to prevent city police or other city workers from turning illegal aliens over to the INS.

Mark Hampton, a former aide to Austin Mayor Frank Cooksey, who is involved in the sanctuary movement, said it was "a divisive issue" that failed for lack of support.

DeConcini said the incident that spawned the sanctuary movement occurred in July, 1980 when 26 Salvadorans were abandoned by a coyote, or smuggler of illegal aliens, in the Arizona desert. Thirteen died of thirst and exposure.

Amtrak drug allegations create stir

WASHINGTON (AP) — The alleged involvement of drugs in the Amtrak-Conrail collision is prompting calls for better detection of drug abusers on railroads, including possible random testing of train operators.

During a Senate hearing Tuesday, Amtrak Chairman W. Graham Claytor said he is convinced the Conrail engineer and brakeman involved in the Jan. 4 accident "must have been impaired" by drug use. "To have done the things they did, I think, can hardly be explained any other way."

Disclosures coming out of the Amtrak accident "clearly calls" for Congress to require new drug detection measures in the railroad industry," said Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y.

"There is no doubt in this senator's mind that the engineer was absolutely impaired," declared D'Amato, although investigators have said they have yet to determine that.

Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., chairman of the Senate Transportation appropriations subcommittee, also called for expanded testing programs in the railroad industry and said train engineers ought to be licensed like airline pilots and truck drivers.

The railroads long have sought the right to randomly test certain employees for drugs and alcohol, but federal regulations imposed less than a year ago allow workers to be tested only when impairment is suspected or after an accident.

The rail unions have strongly opposed random drug testing.

Investigators last week disclosed that both the engineer and brakeman operating the three Conrail locomotives had marijuana in their systems at the time of the crash near Baltimore. However, authorities have not determined whether the two men's performances were actually impaired.

The accident, the worst in Amtrak's history, killed 16 people and injured 175 others when the locomotives skidded into the path of the high-speed Amtrak passenger train.

In his testimony, Claytor said the Conrail crew violated six operating rules and did not slow down despite four properly functioning signals directing them to do so short of the track intersection where the collision occurred.

"The evidence is overwhelming that the sole cause of the accident ... was the outrageous conduct of the Conrail crew in violating not one but a whole series of important operating rules," Claytor said.

In separate testimony, Richard B. Hasselman, vice president for operators at Conrail, said existing measures aimed at detecting drug use among employees are inadequate "and some additional procedures are probably necessary."

Hasselman said a trainmaster talked to both the engineer, Richard Gates, and the brakeman, Edward Cromwell, at the train yard in Baltimore on the morning of the accident and "took no exception to their condition."

Grissom's widow says NASA, contractors uncaring, negligent

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The widow of an astronaut who died in a spacecraft fire says NASA and the space contractors are uncaring and negligent and urges the families of those killed in the Challenger explosion to file suits.

"I'd file a lawsuit because I know right now that they don't care anything about you," said Betty Grissom, widow of astronaut Virgil I. "Gus" Grissom. "They don't care about me, financially or morally."

Grissom and astronauts Edward White and Roger Chaffee died on Jan. 27, 1967 when a fire erupted inside their Apollo 1 spacecraft while they conducted tests on a Kennedy Space Center launch pad.

In a copyright story Tuesday in the Houston Chronicle, Mrs. Grissom she would have received no money from her husband's death if Houston attorney Ronald D. Krist had not filed a last-minute lawsuit for her in 1972 against North American Aviation, the Apollo's prime contractor.

The suit was filed just three days before the Florida statute of limitations expired. Mrs. Grissom received $350,000 on the grounds that her husband endured conscious pain and suffering for 17 seconds.

Krist is now representing Cheryl McNair, widow of Challenger astronaut Ronald E. McNair, in a suit filed last fall against Morton Thiokol, Inc., the manufacturer of the solid rocket booster blamed for the Challenger explosion.

The lawyer also represents the parents of two other Challenger crew members. Jane Smith, widow of Challenger pilot Michael Smith, has filed a $15.1 million claim against the government, but is represented by another attorney.

Four Challenger families recently settled with the government for about $1 million apiece.

Mrs. Grissom said she believes the settlement, which she called "still kind of cheap," would not have been made except for the McNair suit.

"The federal government would never have paid a dime to any of them," she said. "I don't want to give the Challenger families advice, but they might learn something from my experience...I didn't know anything about the statute of limitations and all of that."

Mrs. Grissom said after her husband died, she was living on about $500 a month for herself and her two teen-age sons.

"I think that's what happened to Mrs. Smith," said Mrs. Grissom. "She looked at her paycheck and her children and thought maybe she ought to do something. I admire her guts for doing it."

Grissom was a graduate of Purdue University and Mrs. Grissom said the school gave her two sons scholarships.

She said Purdue "probably did more for my two boys than NASA or the federal government did."

The widows of White and Chaffee received payments of $125,000 each from North American as a result of the Grissom suit.

"I think the general public has gotten behind the Challenger tragedy, in sympathy and understanding that it may not have had for Apollo 1 fire, because Christa McAuliffe the schoolteacher was aboard," Mrs. Grissom said.

Hobby urges support for education

Hobby

AUSTIN (AP) — Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby began his fifth term the way he ended his fourth — championing higher education.

In his inaugural address Tuesday, Hobby pleaded with legislators and the new governor to devote more money to the state's colleges and universities.

"We need to reaffirm our commitment to educational opportunity for every Texan. Our goal should continue to be a higher education for every qualified student," he said.

Hobby said the commitment is needed regardless of the fortunes of the oil economy.

"If we join hands, if we make the right decisions now, if we make them on the shores of the Gulf of Mexico and don't let them be made in the Persian Gulf, we can take Texas proudly into the next century," Hobby said in his inaugural address.

Throughout his speech, Hobby, who also is the presiding officer of the Texas Senate, stressed the need to improve education to meet future challenges.

"Education is as much a tool for the high-technology frontier of the 1980s as those things (cattle and oil) were tools for an earlier Texas," Hobby said.

However, modern Texas is far from having an educated workforce to handle the complex problems of the future.

"More than one-third of our adults don't finish high school. Nearly one-fifth don't finish the eighth grade," he said.

"The state is not doing its job if Texans cannot compete in the new economy."

Higher education is the key, Hobby said.

"It is time to send a different message to the nation, one that says Texas intends to have a world-class system of higher education," Hobby said.

"We need to support our public colleges and universities in a way that does not fluctuate with the price of oil. It doesn't make sense to let an Arab sheik decide the quality of education in Texas. It doesn't make sense to balance our budget at the expense of higher education.

"We need to give our universities the flexibility they need to manage their budgets and people. And the universities must make the best uses of the resources provided. They must react quickly and responsibly, directing those resources to the needs of the future rather than the needs of the past," Hobby said.

White gives Clements advice

AUSTIN (AP) — Following tradition established by past governors, Mark White on Tuesday left a bit of advice behind for his successor when he left the governor's office for the last time.

White selected a passage from the Bible which he said reflected his concern for public education, a keystone of his four-year term.

The passage was Proverbs 22:6.

"Train up a child in the way he should go; and when he is old, he will not depart from it."

Clements attends church service

AUSTIN (AP) — One of the last things Gov. Bill Clements did before taking office Tuesday was attend a church service.

Clements and his wife, Rita, spent about an hour in a private prayer service at Austin's First United Methodist Church, not far from the Capitol.

When the service ended, Clements was asked what he prayed for.

"I prayed for good health. I prayed for good judgment. I prayed for the grace of the Lord," he replied.

Rita Clements predicts four years of fun

AUSTIN (AP) — It was a festive evening of felicitations, festivities and fashion, and first lady Rita Clements forecast further fun for the next four years.

At each of the four inaugural balls Tuesday night, Mrs. Clements told the crowds of her plans.

"For the next four years, my priority is to have fun," she said at the Clements' first stop at the Hyatt Regency Hotel.

By the time the governor heard his wife's comments for the third time, his curiousity was piqued.

"The next four years for me is going to be a fun four years. I'm going to have fun," Mrs. Clements said at the Frank Erwin Center.

"What are you going to be doing?" Clements inquired.

"Well that's a big secret," the first lady replied.

The four balls wrapped up Clements' return to office. The day began with a prayer service and continued with the inaugural ceremonies, a Capitol barbecue, a downtown parade and the balls.

"For the next four years, my priority is to have fun...The next four years for me is going to be a fun four years. I'm going to have fun."

— Rita Clements

Clements told the crowds at the balls that the next four years would not be easy for the state.

"We've got lots to do, and it's not going to be easy. But with your help we're going to get it done," he said at the Erwin Center.

At each of the four balls, the governor and his wife participated in "grand marches" that included other statewide officials, including Attorney General Jim Mattox, House Speaker Gib Lewis and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby.

In his brief remarks at the balls, Hobby also acknowledged the state's problems, but said they could be solved with the people's help.

Gov. and Mrs. Clements' first dance of the evening was at the Capitol Marriott Hotel, where the first couple became a trio when 9-year-old Christian Sharp of Austin joined in at the governor's invitation.

At each stop, Mrs. Clements said her husband also would have fun in the next four years, but she said his idea of fun differs from hers.

"Bill loves nothing more than a big challenge," she said at the Marriott.

"My fun and hers are going to be different, believe me," Clements said.

At the Four Seasons Hotel, the evening's final stop, Clements said his wife was his "Yellow Rose of Texas" because of the yellow dress she wore for the evening.

Three of the balls were keyed to specific areas of the state, one for Houston, one for Dallas and one for Austin-San Antonio.

Although the crowds were largely Republican, there was little partisanship in the greetings for the statewide officeholders on hand. All, except Clements, are Democrats.

The only partisanship was at the Four Seasons Hotel ball where Mattox, a Democrat, drew some boos.

Hospital program designed to give families 'a break'

By JIM BRADY

DALLAS (AP) — An elderly woman checked at Gaston Episcopal Hospital. She wasn't in need of medical treatment; she just wanted to give her family a break.

She was of the first to participate in the hospital's Respite Care program, an idea gaining popularity as hospitals around the country look to expand health-care services and make use of hospital beds that otherwise would remain empty.

"It's designed to give the caregiver a break from the duties of taking care of their loved ones," said hospital administrator Charles Cooper. "They need the relief."

For a fee of $175, the hospital takes in Respite Care "guests" for the weekend, from 6 p.m. Friday to 6 p.m. Sunday.

The respite program combines a hospital's watchful accommodations with the schedule of a get-away weekend. The "guest" — an elderly or disabled person — gets a private room with television and individual bathroom and is cared for by the nursing staff.

The family members who otherwise must stay home to provide their relative feeding, bathing and medical care are free to travel away from the home — or to stay and enjoy it all to themselves, program organizers said.

Cooper estimated that 60 percent of those dependent on others' care live in the homes of relatives. Most common, he said, are elderly parents staying in the homes of sons and daughters.

While families most often provide an elderly or disabled person with the most personal attention, the situation can be draining for family members who feel tied down with responsibilities.

"It can really wear you down," said Susan Early, who helped organize the Respite Care plan. "This can give the caretaker a break, a respite."

"It's designed to give the caregiver a break from the duties of taking care of their loved ones. They need the relief."

Charles Cooper, administrator
Gaston Episcopal Hopsital

In Gaston Episcopal, a four-story independent hospital tucked into the Baylor University Medical Center administrators have set aside 10 of the hospital's 100 beds for the program, said Early.

The staff will take care of any dependent person 16 or older, including those who have chronic disease or functional disabilities, hospital officials said. They are assisted with meals, bathing, dressing and in taking any medication they need. The staff also takes care of such minor procedures as changing bandages.

Early said officials at Gaston Episcopal decided to try the program after reading about similar ones at hospitals elsewhere in the nation. The hospital is advertising the service through newsletters to senior citizens groups, visiting nurses organizations and a brochure.

The program may catch on at other hospitals, Early said, because most institutions experience heavier vacancies over the weekend, when patients who have had elective surgery check out to finish recuperating at home.

STATE IN BRIEF

Appeals court orders new hearing

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A federal appeals court Tuesday ordered a new hearing on attorney's fees for two people who sued Fort Worth after being improperly arrested for violating the Texas failure to identify law.

John Heath and Joyce Thomas were, on separate ocassions in 1976 and 1977, arrested after failing to provide identification when requested by police. Both were acquitted in municipal court and sued the City of Fort Worth and others for federal civil rights violations and attorney's fees.

The district court declared the federal issues moot "because the Fort Worth Police Department changed" the way it made arrests under the failure to identify law and awarded attorney's fees under a complicated formula that the Fifth United States Court of Appeals termed "strange."

Both sides appealed to the Fifth Circuit, which ruled Tuesday that the district court had not "addressed the well-established standard in our circuit for determining the 'prevailing party' status of a plantiff whose claims are mooted by settlement or subsequent unilateral acts of the defendant."

"In this case the district court approached the issue closely but never made the crucial finding ... 'that a plaintiff who causes an entity to change its policy is the prevailing party,'" the appeals court ruled.

Judge may reduce offenders' bail

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Bexar County judges will consider reducing bail for 300 non-violent offenders in an effort to reduce crowding at the county jail, officials said.

Judge Tom Vickers announced the proposal Tuesday after a meeting with top county law enforcement officials.

Vickers said bond for 300 prisoners awaiting indictment or filing on non-violent minor offenses could be reduced or the inmates set free on personal bond.

Vickers emphasized that not all 300 inmates necessarily will be released.

Judges have also considered streamlining paperwork and using work-release programs to ease crowding at the jail.

The jail population reached 1,169 Tuesday morning, sheriff Harlon Copeland said. The largest number ever detained in the jail was about 1,220, he said.

Lobbyist says accusations wrong

AUSTIN (AP) — Accusations that insurance companies raised liability premiums to cover investment losses are inaccurate, an insurance industry lobbyist said Tuesday.

Dick Brown of the Insurance League of Texas issued a release in response to a Monday news conference called by the Texans for Civil Justice, which opposes changes in state laws concerning civil damage lawsuits.

Billy Rogers, director of Texans for Civil Justice, said Monday that insurance companies have made bad investments in downtown office buildings throughout Texas.

Those bad investments have caused the problems that have sparked the current liability insurance crisis, according to Rogers.

But Brown said Roger's comments were "the exact opposite of the factual record. The fact of the matter is that the liability insurance industry has realized a positive return on its investment each and every year since 1967," Brown said.

He said profitable investments have kept liability rates down in recent years.

Boy's assault trial postponed

FORT WORTH (AP) — The trial of a 10-year-old boy accused of assaulting a 101-year old woman was postponed for a week at the request of the defense, a prosecutor said.

Jury selection originally was to have begun Tuesday morning, but was delayed until Jan. 27, said Wes Ball, a Tarrant County assistant district attorney.

Ball said defense attorney Layne Harwell requested the continuance because some defense witnesses were not available.

The boy is accused of stabbing and beating Laura Bell Young, 101, in her Fort Worth home Dec. 28. He is charged with juvenile counts of attempted murder, injury to the elderly and aggravated assault with serious bodily harm.

Harwell requested the jury trial open to the public, a rarity in juvenile cases.

Capital murder charge may be dismissed

HOUSTON (AP) — A capital murder charge against a former Lamar University football coach may be dismissed because of a judge's refusal to allow the transcript of a key witness' testimony to be admitted in the man's retrial, prosecutors say.

Prosecutors said that without the testimony of Paula Cantrell Derese, charges against Vernon Eugene McManus, 43, probably would be dismissed during today's scheduled first day of the trial.

State District Judge Johnny Kolanda on Tuesday disallowed admission of the 1977 testimony of Ms. Derese, but did permit the transcript of pool hustler Ben Milton Tabor to be played.

Both Tabor and Ms. Derese, now serving prison sentences, have refused to repeat their testimony.

McManus was sentenced to die after his 1977 conviction of arranging the slayings of Ms. Derese's parents, Paul and Mary Cantrell, and killing Cantrell, an eletrical contractor.

A federal judge, citing an error in jury selection, overturned the conviction in 1983 and ordered a new trial.

Kolenda said he based his ruling on a conflict of interest between Don Smith, the attorney who represented McManus in his trial, and McManus' former wife, Regina.

Smith's representation was ineffective and was not in McManus' best interest because Smith was having an affair with McManus' wife at the time, the judge said. Smith and Regina McManus later married.

Prosecutor Ted Wilson went to the Harris County Jail after Tuesday's hearing to try and convince Ms. Derese to appear at today's scheduled trial.

"She has a life sentence, so we don't have any hammers to hold over her," Wilson said.

Wilson would not comment on whether he would attempt to arrange a deal to shorten Ms. Derese's sentence in exchange for her testimony.

Ms. Derese pleaded guilty to a lesser charge of murder and received a life sentence in return for her testimony against McManus, her former boss.

During the first trial, Tabor testified that he took $12,000 from McManus to kill the Cantrells and then failed to carry out the murder contract.

Ad campaign sizzles with meaty issues

By MIKE ROBINSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's beef industry is blanketing the nation with a $29 million advertising campaign designed to reverse a trend away from red meat among cholesterol-conscious consumers.

Bankrolled by a $1-a-head fee on cattle sent to market, the radio, television and newspaper ads launched last week by the Beef Industry Council extol beef as "real food for real people."

This time the Chicago-based council and its advertising agency, Ketchum Communications Co., aim to avoid any recurrence of a dispute two years ago that swirled around a similar campaign, "Beef Gives Strength."

Consumer and nutrition groups have thus far not fully digested the latest campaign. But already some critics chortle that revealing shots of actress Cybill Shepherd in one TV ad recall the Madison Avenue adage that "you sell the sizzle, not the steak."

Leggy shots of Miss Shepherd are backed by singers who swear off low-cholesterol nouvelle cuisine and don't care "what they eat in San Francisco" because they would "rather be in Amarillo," in the heart of cattle country.

While the message does smack slightly of "real men don't eat quiche," Jeanne Sowa, council director of advertising and promotion, says the ads echo a new yearning among Americans for a culinary "journey back to the heartland."

"This theme line captures the essence of beef," she says. "Beef truly is real food and we also are aware of a trend in the food world of back to basics. People are tired of looking at food as art. They want to see it as something that is good, something that will nourish us."

Two of the four television ads feature Miss Shepherd; the others feature actor James Garner. The council has budgeted $19.6 million for 28 weeks of network television, $6 million for print ads and $3.4 million for radio.

Consumer use of beef reached a record 94 pounds per capita in 1976 and then fell through 1980, when it hit 76 pounds. Since then it has shown a slight upturn and reached 86 pounds last year, the highest level since 1978, according to Agriculture Department figures.

Department economists have been skeptical, however, about fear of cholesterol as the reason for lower beef demand. Instead, they point to beef prices, which remain comparatively high while those of chicken have actually been falling.

The Beef Industry Council is a division of the National Livestock and Meat Board, the officially recognized body for promoting meat use. The $1-a-head checkoff was authorized under 1985 farm legislation and is collected by state beef councils from the nation's 1.3 million cattle raisers.

While television spots focus on the image of beef, full-page ads in newspapers last week zeroed in on health issues. One such a, in USA Today, offers consumers "the lowdown on cholesterol," the fatty substance that clogs veins and arteries and is blamed by doctors and nutritionists for heart attacks and strokes.

"Beef has only 76 milligrams of cholesterol in a three-ounce serving," said the ad. "That's only average. Wonderfully average."

The council acknowledges that maximum daily cholesterol for a healthy person should not top 300 milligrams and that government surveys place the average serving not at 3 ounces but 5. While the ad does not go into those details, neither does it include a council contention that a 3-ounce serving of chicken contains the same 76 milligrams of cholesterol.

The council says any fair comparison should stress that beef and chicken contain equal amounts of cholesterol. But that irks some nutritionists who note that beef far outstrips chicken in saturated fat, which the human body transforms into even more cholesterol.

"Over half the fat in beef," says the ad, "is actually mono-or polyunsaturated. That's why three ounces of tenderloin have only 3.1 grams of saturated fat out of 7.9 grams total."

"We consider that very highly saturated," says Bonnie Liebman, director of nutrition for the Washington-based Center for Science in the Public Interest. What's more, she says, the Agriculture Department derived the 76-milligram figure for cholesterol in tests on "surgically trimmed meat with every iota of fat removed."

Indeed, the ad urges consumers: "Take it off, take it all off."

"Trimming all the fat you can see (it's easy) cuts fat and calorie counts way down. It's even healthy therapy, so try it."

The Beef Industry Council and the Center for Science in the Public Interest have tangled before. The center responded to the $5 million "Beef Gives Strength" campaign with a 1984 statement that those who followed the campaign's advice "may be eating their way to an early death."

In a February 1985 agreement with New York State Attorney General Robert Abrams, the council added the disclaimer: "Beef alone won't make you strong. But beef does provide protein, iron and B vitamins. In a balanced diet with plenty of exercise it gives you a lot to go on."

Reasonable ruling

Men and women are not exactly alike. Yes, it's true.

One would think such obvious reality to be no shocking revelation. Yet some of the opposition expressed to a 1978 California law requiring employers to give women up to four months of unpaid pregnancy disability leave came from feminists who contended the law should recognize no differences between the sexes. The issue, so crucial to the American family and women's role in the work force, divided the feminist movement. While one side argued that pregnant women must be protected from discrimination, the other maintained that any special protection was itself discriminatory and that both men and women should be granted parental leave.

The National Organization for Women had opposed the California law, but then, after the recent 6-3 ruling by the U.S. Supreme Court to uphold the statute, NOW President Eleanor Smeal reversed ground, saying the decision constituted a victory for women. NOW was right the second time.

The ruling was a victory for women. And for men. Everyone wins in the triumphs against discrimination.

Although women are very much a part of the work force, at the same time, they have a special role: They bear the children. In 1985, 48 percent of women with children less than a year old were in the work force. Sixty percent of those with children between the ages of 3 and 5 were working. As feminist leader Betty Friedan noted after the decision: "There cannot be true equality without recognizing basic biological differences between workers."

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce opposed the California law, saying it was too hard on business. We don't believe it. Firing a woman because she dares to have a child is uncivilized, and no amount of argument to the contrary can nullify this basic truth. The Supreme Court has recognized the obvious. We applaud its common sense.

The American Civil Liberties Union joined in the challenge to the California law. This is no surprise from an organization whose arguments have strayed so far from reason that of late it fought for the right of confused, mentally ill New Yorkers to freeze to death on the streets rather than be taken to shelters by police.

Lilian Garland deserves congratulations. It was her suit against her employer that led to the ruling. The employer, California Federal Savings and Loan Association, had challenged the California statute and refused to give her back her job as a receptionist when she returned from maternity leave in Los Angeles.

At least eight other states have passed laws similar to California's. No doubt other states will follow suit as the United States now officially sanctions a parental-leave policy that already prevails in other Western nations.

The ruling was logical and realistic for a society that puts the values of home, family and fair play high on its list of priorities.

Anti-Khomeini forces gaining strength

WASHINGTON — Opposition to the Ayatollah Khomeini is bubbling inside Iran — but not from the "moderates" that President Reagan's eager emissaries went looking for. Unbeknownst to most Americans, a determined group of anti-Khomeini rebels is actually fighting the ayatollah's conscripts inside Iran and along the Iraqi border.

Jack Anderson

These unsung warriors are the People's Mojahedin, and they form the largest, most effective Khomeini opposition inside or outside Iran. Their charismatic leader, Massoud Rajavi, was anti-American during the days of U.S. support for the shah, but he proclaims himself neither for nor against the United States now. Rajavi's politics are best described as nationalistic at home and socialistic in his world view, with a Moslem cant.

Last June Rajavi was expelled from exile in France in a secret deal with Khomeini for the release of some French hostages. Rajavi found refuge in Iraq — a "defection" to the enemy that Khomeini carefully did not publicly exploit to discredit his most serious rival.

He had good reason: Khomeini was afraid that if Iranians knew Rajavi was just across the border, military deserters and others disillusioned with Khomeini's tyranny would rush to join the Mojahedin. In fact, according to sources in Iran and Iraq, Khomeini held a special session of his cabinet within days of Rajavi's expulsion from France to discuss its effects.

"I hope the day won't come when we regret asking France to kick Rajavi out," one minister reportedly said at the meeting. A direct result of the strategy session was to allocate six of the few operational Iranian aircraft for bombing missions against a Mojahedin base on the Iraqi border.

Recently Dale Van Atta flew to Baghdad to assess the People's Mojahedin efforts. He was the first journalist to meet with the organization's top officials inside Iraq.

Nader Rafinejad, the group's international secretary, gave a briefing on the situation as Iranian bombs dropped on the city. Rafinejad said the Iraqi government has been supportive, partly because Rajavi and Iraqi President Saddam Hussein have agreed to end the war (now in its seventh year) if Rajavi eventually takes power in Tehran.

"There are no Iraqi restrictions to our operations along the fronts," Rafinejad said. "Incursions into Iran are a daily affair for us. The principal aim is to go to the towns and cities, where our strategy is based on overthrowing the Khomeini regime through massive operations."

The main concentration of Mojahedin fighting forces is in Iranian cities, Rafinejad explained. Rajavi is leading the Mojahedin's military forces personally, operating mainly in Iranian Kurdistan. The Kurds have fought many battles against Khomeini's army, both on their own and in temporary alliance with the Mojahedin.

Rafinejad acknowledged that Rajavi is not pro-American but insisted that the Mojahedin are not Marxists.

Noting that Khomeini tries to discredit the Mojahedin as "American hypocrites" for seeking aid from the West, Rafinejad said: "But it is very important to realize what the Iranian people think. They have seen Khomeini, and they know how he acted when he came to power. In the first few days, 6 million people came out to cheer him. Now they are arresting people in movie lines to send them to the front."

Rajavi has promised elections within six months of Khomeini's overthrow. The Mojahedin executive committee felt it would take that long to stabilize the country. Acknowledging that power corrupted both the shah and Khomeini, Rafinejad said this couldn't happen with Rajavi — because the people wouldn't stand for it. "Really," he said, "the Iranian people cannot wait for democracy any longer. The glue that sticks us all together is this conviction for the freedom of Iran."

NERVOUS BLOODHOUND: One criticism of the administration's arms-for-hostages deal with Iran is that it puts Americans traveling abroad at greater risk of being targeted by terrorists. A congressional investigator touring U.S. military bases in West Germany confirmed this recently. German intelligence warned the Americans that an unidentified U.S. official had been targeted for some terrorist attack. Since the congressional investigator was the only American in that particular area who even remotely fit the description, extra security precautions were taken and his entire itinerary was changed. He got home safely.

HANGING IN THERE: The Air Force plans to retire its aging fleet of 167 B-52 bombers — but only after their advanced replacements go into service in the 1990s. The General Accounting Office told Congress it would save more than $6 billion if the planes were mothballed this year. But the Air Force knows it will take at least two years to change U.S. strategic plans to reflect the new nuclear arsenal. So the old warhorses will remain in harness.

MINI-EDITORIAL: Iranian war communiques aren't exactly reliable, but even the Ayatollah Khomeini's propagandists couldn't have made up the story that 105-year-old Yaqub Noruzi is a volunteer in a mostly teenage unit that defuses Iraqi mines on the battlefield. In fact, we hope the idea catches on at least to the point where a certain 86-year-old mullah with a long beard and a burning hatred for the United States volunteers for similar duty. Come on, ayatollah, ya wanna live forever?

IN THE GULAG BEFORE GORBACHEV

IN THE GULAG AFTER GORBACHEV

Another View:

Practice neutrality

The fierce upsurge of fighting in the six-year-old war between Iran and Iraq has caught American policy in disarray. The practical and principled position of neutrality, discouraging arms sales to either side, has been wrecked by news of the White House's covert policy, trading arms for hostages with Iran and supplying intelligence to both sides.

The policy of neutrality recognized that the United States could not much influence events in the region. It also pivoted on the sad truth that the Iranian regime would have to bleed itself through war before diplomacy could prove feasible.

Significant quantities of Israeli and American arms have been sold to Iran with apparently no thought of consequences, like a possible Iranian victory. The meddling has made Washington complicit in a remarkably bloody war, inviting the enmity of both sides. How did such misjudgments arise?

The regime of Ruhollah Khomeini is a police state, a medieval theocracy and a sponsor of terrorism. But because in Western eyes the ayatollah belongs so firmly to the past, Washington has persistently misunderstood his present role and the energies he taps in recasting Iranian society. The Carter administration failed to see how the mullahs' mobs could subvert the shah's well-equipped army. Reagan's is constantly surprised at Iran's resilience on the battlefield.

The Iranians are believed to be so "desperate" for weapons, Adm. John Poindexter told the president a year ago, that the provider would be able "to coercively influence near-term events." Aside from the fantastic misreading of Tehran politics, the Iranians were far from desperate; the next month they captured the oil terminal of Fao. As this week's offensive reemphasizes, Iran can win but not lose, Iraq can lose but not win. In stretching and probing Iraqi defenses, Iran may in this or a future campaign strike the decisive weak point.

Failure to understand the persistence of Ayatollah Khomeini's Iran made the White House vulnerable to manipulation by self-serving arms merchants. But the ayatollah, the first Iranian ruler in centuries to defy foreign powers rather than accommodate them, turned out to be the one doing the manipulating.

Despite the White House's best efforts, the American position in the gulf war is not a total disaster. Iraq still welcomes American help, and Iran may recognize the need for a counterweight to its predatory neighbor in the north. Iranian politicians refer less often to the United States as a Great Satan, though perhaps only in puzzlement at finding such extreme naivete in place of devilish duplicity.

What should the White House do now? Most important, recognize the merit of inaction. Iran's internal politics cannot be easily manipulated, nor Iraq readily helped. Washington needs to stop meddling and practice the neutrality it preached.

Second, the administration needs to prepare for the possibility of an Iranian victory, even the establishment of another fundamentalist Shiite state in Iraq. Should that be tolerated, or prevented at all costs? If the latter, how? Finally, diplomatic opportunities need to be searched out, like a deal at the U.N. to censure Iraq for starting the war, in return for an Iranian cease-fire. That probably won't deflect the Iranians from their demand that Saddam Hussein go, but it might reinject a diplomatic resolution to a dangerous, destructive, endless war.

Hart — the novelist — ready for another run

NEW YORK — Quick now, who was the last bona fide presidential candidate — one with a chance to win — to have written a novel? Did any president do so, before or after the White House?

Tom Wicker

Theodore Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson were prolific writers, but not of fiction. So Gary Hart, whose novel "Strategies of Zeus" is just being published, thinks he may be the only candidate who can bill himself as a novelist — and of course he hopes to be the first president to make that claim, too.

But Hart, who has just given up one of Colorado's Senate seats to make another bid for the White House, is running scared; he's having researchers check out a report that Franklin Roosevelt published a mystery story in his pre-presidential life.

Being as literate as Gary Hart — who's already the co-author of another novel with Sen. William Cohen of Maine — won't be enough to win the New Hampshire primary. But Hart is off to a particularly good start in his second run for the Rose Garden. He's already been to Moscow for long talks with Mikhail Gorbachev, Eduard Shevardnadze and Anatoly Dobrynin — giving him a lead on other Democrats in the presidential subject that matters most — foreign affairs expertise.

He won't try to predict the field for next year's primaries; anybody who's "mentioned" prominently, in his view, is likely at least to start the race. The darkest of horses should be able to raise the money to compete in Iowa and-or New Hampshire, hoping that lightning might strike — as it did for Gary Hart in 1984 — or for vice presidential consideration.

As one who's already been around the track, Hart thinks there may be no more than two survivors of those early tests. That's not because no one else would be able to do well in Iowa or New Hampshire; but because those contests will be followed on March 8 by "Super Tuesday," on which 13 states, 11 of them Southern or border, will choose their delegates.

Competing seriously on Super Tuesday, Hart estimates, will require at least $3 million to $5 million in a candidate's bank account, because of the need to buy television time, all at once, in all those states — particularly expensive markets like Florida, Texas and Massachusetts. There will be too little time after Iowa and New Hampshire to raise that kind of money, he believes, so Super Tuesday probably will be limited to those candidates who've collected it before the early tests.

As he sees things now, only two likely Democratic candidates — himself and Governor Cuomo of New York — have the ability to raise enough funds in advance to carry them through Super Tuesday.

Only two white candidates, that is; Hart fully expects the Rev. Jesse Jackson to be in the race and a formidable competitor on Super Tuesday. Jackson doesn't really need big campaign money. As the only black in the race, he gets press and television exposure without having to buy it; and the heavy concentration of black Democrats in the Southern states makes Super Tuesday a natural target for him.

In fact, if two — or perhaps more — white candidates do survive into Super Tuesday, Hart can imagine headlines the next day proclaiming "Jackson the Big Winner." That is, a solid black vote in such states as Georgia and Alabama, together with a divided white vote, could yield Jackson a bloc of delegates big enough to give him strong influence on the Democratic platform and ticket.

If that happens, it would be of profound importance to the Democrats' hopes. Winning the presidency will require them to carry at least five, perhaps more, Southern states, probably including either Texas or Florida; and that can hardly be done without a solid black vote to add to a respectable slice of the white vote.

A defection by Jesse Jackson — if he felt that he and his delegates had been spurned — could therefore be disastrous in the South. On the other hand, if he were seen there and elsewhere as having too much influence on the party and its ticket, that could be equally a problem.

But that's next year. Freed of his Senate duties, his novel in the bookstores, his experience in the bank — if not yet the necessary money — Gary Hart is ready to go. As for the pitfalls ahead, he says he'll fall back on any politician's greatest asset: "I'll rely on my instincts."

ART BUCHWALD

Speaking of wives and other women — duck!

We had a lively discussion at the Harcourts' dinner table the other night. It concerned lovers and what makes them different from other people.

Barbara Tommalee started it. "Why do biographers always devote six chapters to the 'other woman' and two paragraphs to the wife? And why do all the great legends of love have to do with people who have to sneak around alleys to give their hearts to another? How come women devote 30 to 40 years of their lives to their husbands and everyone remarks how beautiful the mistresses were?"

Art Buchwald

"Are you having trouble at home?" Sally Trimble asked her.

Barbara turned red. "No, I'm not having trouble at home. I'm just mad because the other women get such a good press and we wives get such a lousy one. What do mistresses have that we don't?"

Herman Wooten said, "Time — which is the most essential ingredient in a love affair. The other woman is always ready to do anything you want to do. She'll either dress to go out, or not dress and stay in, whichever suits you. She will dance all night, or throw logs on your fire, whichever comes first. But most important of all, she always has a lovely lilt in her voice."

Sally said, "Pigeon feathers. The reason the other woman is always ready to go out is that she doesn't have to get supper for the kids, feed the dog, put gas in the car or iron her dress at 7 o'clock at night."

"We must remember," Herman said, "when you put other women and wives together you are mixing apples with oranges."

Irma Wooten said, "I knew he would come up with something stupid like that." She smeared butter all over his hand.

Herman continued, "The wife has many roles to play in life, the mistress only one, maybe two, if she's a good listener. The reason the other woman is so honored in literature is she has a mystery about her which produces that mix of excitement and intrigue to keep the heart pounding and the blood boiling. People don't hold it against the wife that she comes in second in her zest for living. But let's face it, what is more romantic — two lovers having a bottle of wine in the park, or a wife and husband in bed watching Johnny Carson?"

"Why," asked Marta Ulane, "are we just discussing relationships between husbands and their mistresses and not wives and their lovers? It seems the lovers of wives are as interesting as mistresses of husbands."

"Not necessarily," said Elliot Gumbah. "A wife cannot devote as much attention to a passionate love affair because she is always worried that this could be the day the man will come to fix her dishwasher."

"A wife's time is not her own," I said.

"It's worse," he said, "if she has the school car pool."

Herman Wooten said, "I'll tell you what else sets the other woman apart from everybody else. She always looks spiffy and never tells you how much things cost. And she has a song in her heart."

I tried to win some brownie points for myself. "I can't understand the fuss over the other woman. Everyone knows her role is exaggerated and blown up by historians to make more titillating reading for breathless schoolgirls."

I could see my wife putting her hand around her soup plate.

"Wait," I said, "I believe if you have a choice, and I'm not saying you do, that you should always pay homage to the wife, because a lot of the time she is the woman behind the man."

If I hadn't ducked, the soup plate would have hit me right between the eyes.

IF YOU NEED $5,000 . . . $20,000 EVEN UP TO $500,000 TO START A NEW BUSINESS OR TO EXPAND AN EXISTING FIRM—THEN READ WHY YOU TOO WILL CALL THIS INCREDIBLE MONEY RAISING

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITY SEEKERS' LOANS MANUAL

"The Small Business Borrower's Bible"

Practically prepares the loan application for you line-by-line...the "proper" way.
All properly prepared applications are processed faster...no red tape!

EVERY LOAN DOLLAR YOU GET YOU KEEP AND USE TO OPERATE YOUR BUSINESS

Guaranteed Loans...Direct Loans...and Immediate Loans are available now!

Most men and women seriously interested in starting their own business are eligible to apply — including those who already own a business and need capital fast for expansion or to stay afloat even if they've been flatly refused by banks and turned down elsewhere! Yet, too many never qualify, simply because they do not know how to "properly" prepare the loan application

In order to help those people applying for these guaranteed and direct loans fill out their loan applications the "right way" our business researchers, with their diligent compilation and effective efforts, have successfully assembled and published a comprehensive, easy-to-follow seminar manual: The Business Opportunity Seekers' Loans Manual, that will quickly show you practically everything you'll need to know to prepare a loan application to get federally Guaranteed and Direct Loans.

Here are just some of the many important benefits the Business Opportunity Seekers' Loans Manual provides you with:

- a completely filled in sample set of actual SBA loan application forms, all properly filled in for you to easily follow—aids you in quickly preparing your own loan application the right way. Each line on the sample application forms is explained and illustrated in easy-to-understand language.
- fast application preparation procedures for getting loans for both new start up business ventures and established firms.
- advises you on how to properly answer key questions necessary for loan approval and in order to help avoid having your application turned down—gives you advice on what you should not do under any circumstances.
- what simple steps you take to guarantee eligibility —no matter if you do not presently qualify.
- where you can file your application for fastest processing.

At this point the most important question you want answered is. Just where is all this loan money coming from? Incredible as it may sound- these Guaranteed Loans.

Direct Loans and Immediate Loans are indeed available right now — from the best, and yet, the most overlooked and frequently the most ignored and sometimes outright ridiculed "made-fun-of" source of ready money fast capital. In America — THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT.

Of course there are those who upon hearing the words "UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT" will instantly freeze up and frown and say.

"...only minorities can get small business loan money from the government!"

Yet on the other hand (and most puzzling) others will rant on and on and on that "...don't evey try, it's just impossible — all those Business Loans Programs are strictly for the Chryslers, the Lockheeds, the big corporations, not for the little guy or small companies" etc.

Still there are those who declare: "...I need money right now... and small business government loans take too darn long. It's impossible to qualify. No one ever gets one of those loans."

Or you may hear these comments. "...My accountant's junior assistant says he thinks it might be a waste of my time!" "Heck, there's too much worrisome paperwork and red tape to wade through."

Frankly — such ranting and ravings are just a lot of "bull" without any real basis — and only serve to clearly show that lack of Knowledge....misinformation...and not quite fully understanding the UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT'S Small Business Administration's (SBA) Programs have unfortunately caused a lot of people to ignore what is without a doubt — not only the most important and generous source of financing for new business start ups and existing business expansions in this country — but of the entire world!

Now that you've heard the "bull" about the United States Government's SBA Loan Program — take a few more moments and read the following facts.

- Only 9.6% of approved loans were actually made to minorities last year,
- What SBA recognizes as a "small business" actually applies to 97% of all the companies in the nation.
- Red tape comes about only when the loan application is sent back due to applicant not providing the requested information...or providing the wrong information.
- The SBA is required by Congress to provide a minimum dollar amount in business loans each fiscal year in order to lawfully comply with strict quotas. (Almost 5 billion this year).

Yet, despite the millions who miss out — there are still literally thousands of ambitious men and women nationwide who are properly applying — being approved — and obtaining sufficient funds to either start a new business, a franchise, or buy out or expand an existing one. Mostly, they are all just typical Americans with no fancy titles, who used essentially the same effective know-how to fill out their applications that you'll find in the Business Opportunity Seekers' Loans Manual.

So don't you dare be shy about applying for and accepting these guaranteed and direct government loans. Curiously enough the government is actually very much interested in helping you start a business that will make a lot of money. It's to their advantage - the more money you make the more they stand to collect in taxes in fiscal 1986, our nation's good old generous "uncle" will either lend directly or guarantee billions of dollars in loan requests, along with technical assistance and even sales procurement assistance. Remember, if you don't apply for these available SBA funds somebody else certainly will.

Don't lose out - now is the best time to place your order for this comprehensive manual. It is not sold in stores. Available only by mail through this ad, directly from Financial Freedom Co., the exclusive publisher, at just a small fraction of what it would cost for the services of a private loan advisor or to attend a seminar.

For example:

Initially, this amazing Guaranteed and Direct Loans Manual was specially designed to be the basis of a Small Business Loan Seminar - where each registrant would pay an admission fee of $450. But our company felt that since the manual's quality instructions were so exceptionally crystal-clear that anyone who could read, could successfully use its techniques without having to attend a seminar or pay for costly private loan advisory assistance services

Therefore, for those purchasing the manual by mail, no 3 day class, no course and accommodations are required, And rather than $450 we could slash the price all the way down to just a mere $20 - a small portion of a typical seminar attendance fee - providing you promptly fill in and mail coupon below with fee while this special "seminar-in-print" manual offer is still available by mail at this relatively low price!

Remember, this most unique manual quickly provides you with actual sample copies of SBA Loan application and all other required forms-already properly filled in for you to easily use as reliably accurate step-by-step guides-thus offering you complete assurance that your application will be properly prepared and thereby immediately putting you on the right road to obtaining fast, no red tape loan approval.

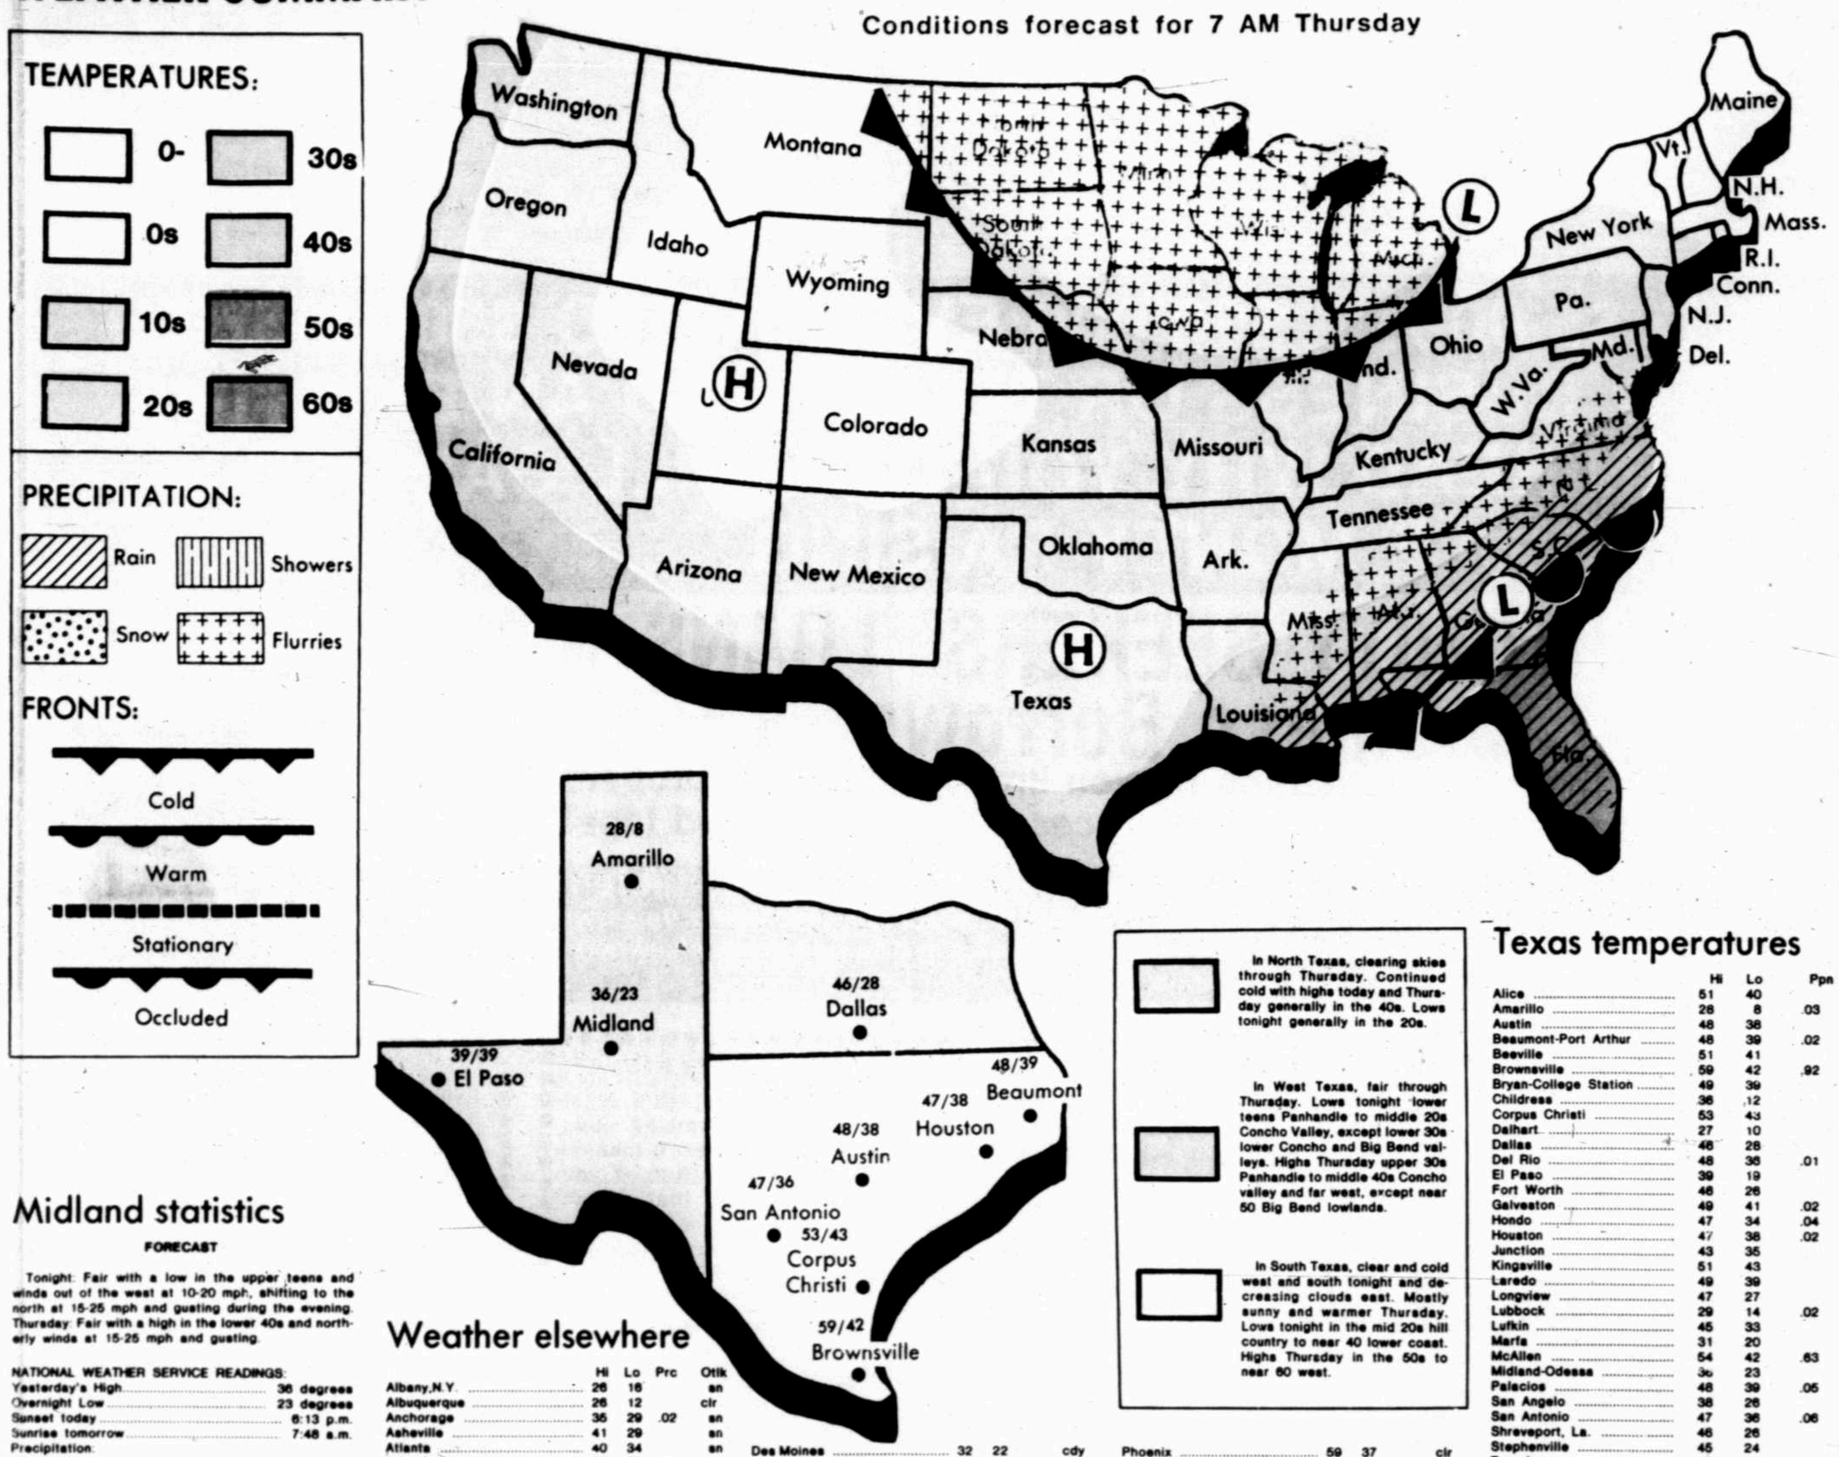
WEATHER SUMMARY



Fair skies anticipated

From Staff and Wire Reports

Fair skies will cover the Midland-Odessa area through Thursday, according to forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. Gusty winds are expected to accompany the fair weather. Westerly winds of 10-20 mph will shift to the north at 15-25 mph and gusting tonight, and will remain so through Thursday.

The overnight low will drop into the teens, according to the NWS. The mercury should rise to the upper 40s on Thursday.

Tuesday's low was 40 degrees below the balmy 76-degree record high set for that date in 1986. Today's low of 23 was 18 degrees above the record low set for this date in 1986.

STATE

Icy, slick roads were reported in the Texas hill country today because of light rain mixed with sleet that fell overnight.

Travelers' advisories were posted for the Concho Valley and the hill country as a result of the hazardous driving conditions. Light rain also fell in Southeast Texas, in the Rio Grande plains, over parts of Central Texas, and along the upper Texas coast, the National Weather Service said.

Meanwhile, a ridge of high pressure remained over the state as an upper level storm system tracked across Mexico toward Texas.

Skies were clear over parts of North Texas and West Texas, while partly to mostly cloudy skies covered the rest of the state.

South to southwest winds breezed across much of West Texas while north to northwest winds prevailed across the rest of the state. Wind speeds were generally in the 5 to 15 mph range.

Temperatures were in the 30s and 40s from the central Brazos River valley , across South Texas, and into the lower Rio Grande valley and the coastal plains. The rest of the state had readings in the teens and 20s. Overnight extremes ranged from 17 at Amarillo to 46 at Corpus Christi.

The weather service said afternoon highs would be in the 40s and 50s.

NATION

A new storm pushed snow and gusty winds into the northern Plains today while another storm plagued the southern Plains and aimed at the South.

The low pressure system over western Manitoba prompted travelers' advisories for up to 5 inches of snow for the northern sections of North Dakota and Minnesota.

Prosecutor discusses child abuse cases

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

The easiest way to blunt the ongoing investigation of a child abuse case is for authorities to arrest the person they think did it.

That piece of advice was one given by a veteran prosecutor Tuesday to a group of law enforcement officers, Department of Human Services workers, and other professionals assembled at a seminar on abused children and their abusers.

"The best source of information is the defendant," said Ralph Petty, assistant district attorney for Midland County. "The worst thing you can do is arrest someone in these cases; you want them to make these false statements."

Some of the explanations suspected abusers give to try and explain away injuries are "incredible," Petty said, such as "he fell off the toilet," or "he's allergic to the sun," and often come back to haunt suspects when they are tried. He said they also often make crucial and damning statements to neighbors or friends.

Petty, a prosecutor for 13 years who has successfully tried 11 child murder cases, said an abuse case is among the most exacting for prosecutors, because it is based on circumstantial evidence, there are few if any witnesses to the crime, the witnesses are likely to be tied to the defendant, and proof has to be given to a jury that a crime actually was committed.

"The function of the medical evidence is to prove the corpus delicti — that there has been a crime committed," he said. "This is the battleground on which most child abuse cases are won and lost."

While he was a prosecutor in Bell County, Petty said he handled the case of a 16-month-old girl that had died from hot water scalding. According to the mother, the child had burned herself, but Petty, with the aid of graphic, blown-up color photographs he used at the murder trial, showed how he proved the woman was lying.

He said specific parts of her body that were not burned, and some that were burned severely, indicated that she had been held down in the charring water, and burned over two-thirds of her body.

"Hot water cleans and it will punish the hell out of (children)," Petty said. "And that's what we're commonly seeing, more and more."

A child is most vulnerable to murder or serious injury up to the age of 4, Petty said. Older children tend to be more wary of possible abuse, and try and avoid it, and are more mobile.

Once an indictment has been handed down and a case gets to trial, the prosecutor has to prove, usually without any eyewitnesses, that the defendant committed the crime knowing the harm or injury it would cause. Petty said investigators and prosecutors must be the caretakers of justice for children whose injuries otherwise would be ignored.

"These (children) have no sponsors," he said. "The people that are defendants in these cases are the ones that are supposed to protect them.

"Most crimes have a victim who is mad and wants justice. If the victim is dead, the family of the victim takes his place and demands a conviction. In child injury cases, the victim cannot speak and the family of the victim does not speak for him.

"Unless there is someone to speak for the child, there is no one who will get upset if the case is written off as an accident or as unprovable for lack of evidence."

Federal rules hamper release of funds for Y

By RICK BROWN
Assistant City Editor

YMCA directors meeting Thursday may decide to just give up on federal funding that has held up construction of a northeast area sports complex for almost two years.

The directors are frustrated by a string of federal regulations tied to the approximately $363,000 in U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development community development funds, Durwood Owen, Central YMCA general director, said Tuesday.

Those regulations required the YMCA to hire an architect and would have forced the hiring of workers at a pay scale higher than the city average, among other provisions, he said.

But even with those provisions satisfied, the YMCA may not yet be eligible for the funds because of references to the Christian religion in the Midland organization's preamble, Owen said.

"There was not a real problem until HUD chose to reaffirm an old policy that had to do with the separation with church and state," Owen said. "If we had broken ground prior to November 1986, it would not have been an issue."

HUD officials after that date suggested that Midland YMCA, Inc. change the wording of its literature to remove the Christian references, he said. That proposal "certainly isn't going to fly," he predicted, adding that YMCA programs have no overtly Christian orientation.

HUD has yet to rule whether the wording makes the Y ineligible for funding, causing further delay which has led directors to consider renouncing the allocation all together, he said. "They just keep asking for more information," Owen said of HUD officials.

As a result, "There is a strong feeling (among directors) that if we're going to get anything built out there, we might as well go ahead and do it ourselves," he said.

The facility as planned, would cover about 28,000 square feet and would constitute a "traditional Y," said Owen, who added the complex probably would house a swimming pool, gymnasium, weight room and multipurpose area for meetings, aerobics classes or children's activities.

"We feel strongly that there's a need out there, and we intend to meet the need," he said, acknowledging that residents and civic leaders in the area have become frustrated by the delay.

"I'm sure our credibility has been affected, and yet we've little or no control over it," he said. "We've been trying to work with the federal guidelines, and it's been delayed almost two years."

Parrish: Four-year schools last hope for community colleges

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

The state's four-year institutions could be the last hope Texas community colleges have in persuading the 70th Legislature to reconsider cutting higher education budgets, Midland College President Dr. Jess Parrish said Tuesday.

"We're going to ride the skirts of the four-year institutions," Parrish told MC trustees during a scheduled monthly meeting. "We're all in the same boat."

The president said education lobbyists are joining forces in hopes of heading off drastic cuts.

"There's really no precedence for what's going to happen in the Legislature this session," Parrish said. "I don't think we're going to see any growth out of this, but I think we (community colleges) can hold our own."

Parrish said there is no way to predict what cuts the Legislative Budget Board will recommend to lawmakers.

He said sources within the LBB have rumored cuts in the overall state budget could amount to as much as 27 percent in the 1988-89 fiscal year.

Last summer legislators cut the total community college budget for the 1986-87 biennium by 9 percent. For Midland College, that meant a $435,000 reduction in state funds.

Parrish explained that most of the state's community colleges are operating on less money despite a greater demand for services.

He said the state's total community college enrollment increased from 261,000 students in 1981 to 307,000 in 1986.

Parrish also said 63 percent of all Texas freshmen and sophomores and 42 percent of all students in Texas attend community colleges.

"Local districts say they'll keep accepting the students and do it with what the state gives us. That puts us at an advantage and a disadvantage," he said.

"The story that needs to be told this year is that we can't do it in local districts anymore," he added.

Parrish told trustees that he expects the Legislature to approve "revenue enhancement" measures to trim the state's staggering $5.8 billion deficit.

"There's no way...I don't care what your governor or my governor, your legislator or my legislator says...there's no way to fund the budget of the state of Texas without additional revenue enhancement," Parrish said.

In other business, MC Board President Gloria Hinojosa appointed John Cooper, Fred Wright and Ken Peeler to the trustee Salary Committee.

Trustees also heard a presentation by the college's Business Studies Division on paralegal training.

District judge, Ector DA in dispute

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals has been asked to resolve a dispute between an Ector County district judge and the district attorney's office.

District Attorney Eric Augesen has petitioned the court to issue a writ of mandamus that would force 70th District Court Judge Gene Ater to hold a jury trial for a woman accused of the May 1985 burglary of a vehicle. Lucy Gardea Ocon was indicted for the offense July 29, 1985 by the Ector County grand jury.

Augesen contends that during a Dec. 23, 1986 pretrial hearing, Ater arbitrarily ignored the law and allowed Ms. Ocon to enter a plea of guilty to the charge without the consent of the State.

Her attorney, Tony Chavez, then asked the judge to set a date for a trial before the court without a jury. Ater did so over the objections of Assistant District Attorney Preston Stevens, who informed the court the State would not waive its right to a jury trial in the Ocon case.

Prior to that hearing the district attorney's office had offered a plea bargain arrangement under which Ms. Ocon would plead guilty to the charge and be sentenced to five years probation and fined $1,000.

According to Augesen, Chavez rejected the offer, contending the length of probation and fine were excessive. In view of this, Stevens announced at the Dec. 23 hearing the State was ready for trial.

According to Augesen's petition to the appeals court, when the judge started to ask Ms. Ocon whether she had accepted the State's offer, Chavez asked to approach the bench and an off-the-record conversation occurred between the judge and attorneys.

"After that dialogue," Augesen states in his petition, "the court asked the defendant if she would wish to plead to the court without benefit of a jury. At that point," the district attorney says, "Mr. Stevens told the court that the State would not waive its right to a jury."

Augesen said Chavez then asked the judge to set a trial date before Ms. Ocon "before the court, (and) the court then ordered a pre-sentence investigation" despite continued objections by Stevens that the State would not waive jury trial.

"The court then responded," Augesen says, quoting from the court record, " 'You can have guilt or innocence whenever you want to. I may have to cause you to mandamus me, but I am going to set this for a non-jury trial at 9:15 a.m., the 28th of January of 1987.' "

Ater said Tuesday he had not yet seen a copy of Augesen's petition to the appeals court.

Doctors lose Medicare battle

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Doctors lost a battle Tuesday to have Medicare put on hold new pricing restrictions doctors claimed created a "two-tiered system of medical care."

A suit filed Christmas Eve in Lubbock by the American Medical Association, the Texas Medical Association and other plaintiffs in Lubbock, sought to halt a U.S. Department of Health and Human Services ruling that placed ceilings on the amount doctors can charge Medicare patients.

Doctors were upset because they said they had no idea what the fee structure was and said they felt Medicare was forcing them into becoming a participating physician — one who takes Medicare patients unconditionally.

Two restraining orders later however, U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders ruled the case was of a legislative nature and not one for the courts to decide.

TMA spokesman Jon Hornaday said doctors now have until Jan. 30 to let Medicare officials in Baltimore, Md., know if they will agree to charge the present fees mandated in the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act signed by President Reagan on Oct. 21.

"We're very disappointed with the decision," Hornaday said, adding if the AMA decided to go on with an appeal, the TMA would probably follow suit.

A Lubbock attorney for the plaintiffs said he was not sure an appeal would be filed.

"This is a ruling only on a temporary injunction," attorney Tom Milam said.

Sanders ruled Tuesday the appropriate course of action would be for the doctors to take the matter to Congress.

"What he (Sanders) obviously meant is that it's a matter for a legislative body to consider," Milam said.

Both Milam and Hornaday agreed however, the AMA and the TMA would not make any immediate decisions on an appeal.

"What we're doing now is just getting the information out to our members," Hornaday said.

Anti-smoking campaign, exercise craze out in 1987?

Ott

There was an article in my hometown newspaper recently that listed what is "in" and what is "out" for 1987. The article just touched on the highlights from the complete version that was published in something called W magazine.

Among the people and things that are "out" include Bill Cosby, Harrison Ford, Rob Lowe, Sam Shepard, going to Paris in the springtime, living in the Napa Valley, dining at "chi-chi restaurants," piecing your ears and overspending on your apartment.

There was even a category recognizing the "outest of the out."

"Wheel of Fortune" hostess Vanna White topped the list. Here, here.

Also mentioned were Richard Gere, New York Mayor Edward Koch, New York Gov. Mario Cuomo and Frank Sinatra.

Other than that part about visiting Paris in the springtime, I have no problem with the list. I'm tired of all those people, too, and I never did think hanging out in chi-chi restaurants, whatever they are, was so great. Piercing your ears is weird, despite the fact some of my best friends have done it, and overspending on an apartment always made about as much sense to me as eating chicken without dumplings.

Since the newspaper article did not mention everything on the list and I didn't read the magazine's complete version, I have decided to make my own additions. Here are other things that are most definitely out in '87.

— Students who attend college basketball games and paint their faces with their school colors.

— The guy who goes to all those major sporting events and holds up a sign that says, "John 3: 16." Why can't they get rid of him?

— The anti-smoking crusade.

— The exercise craze.

— Movies about silly high school escapades that make growing up seem like a lot more fun than I remember.

— The three-day beard. Either grow one or shave.

— People who go to football games in sub-freezing weather and then take off their shirts and wave madly at the cameras. They are nuts and should be ignored.

— Governmental studies that determine another one of my favorite foods is bad for my health.

— TV newscasters who giggle and laugh a lot with one another and generally engage in what has become known as "happy talk." They should just give us the facts and save their socializing for after hours.

— Golfers who lose their balls and then spend 45 minutes looking for them while the rest of us fume because they won't let us play through. The death penalty is too mild for those people.

— People who insist on trying to legislate morality.

— Sylvester Stallone movies.

— William "The Refrigerator" Perry.

— Detailed press coverage of operations on private parts of the president's body that the rest of us have no business seeing.

— Celebrities who think that just because they are rich and famous the rest of us are waiting with bated breath for their political views on Nicaragua and South Africa.

— Presidential campaigns that begin three years before the actual election.

— Bigots who seem to take delight in setting back race relations by 50 years.

— Holier-than-thou liberals who quickly point out prejudice in the south but somehow overlook the same problems in the north.

— Oral Roberts, if he is still among the living after the end of March.

Corrales announces intention to seek re-election

From Staff Reports

Corrales

District 2 City Council member Oralia Corrales Tuesday announced her intention to seek re-election on April 4.

"The past 20 months have been a tremendous challenge for everyone who lives in our city," Ms. Corrales said in a prepared statement. "As your representative on the council, I have tried to save our citizens any unnecessary taxation with reductions in expenses in every area without reducing services to our citizens."

Ms. Corrales, 46, owns her own insurance company and is married to Jesus Corrales. She is active in the Hospice movement, a member of the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce and the Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs. She also serves on the Board of Directors of the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

She named among her continued goals making "our city a place where the quality of life is improved for all citizens of our community, to cut any unnecessary spending and to make our number one objective...economic diversification and crime prevention."

Among accomplishments since she took office two years ago, she counted citizen approval of a bond issue to allow Midland access to water from the proposed Stacy Reservoir. "Water is very important in our goal to diversify our economy and for the survival of our citizens. This project assures our citizens of adequate water for many years to come," she said.

Other accomplishments Ms. Corrales named included establishment of a bid research center — which assists businesses in learning how to obtain and bid for government contracts — the building of Martin Luther King Jr. Park, and the funding of the East Side Economic Development Task Force. "We saw this group take a very active role in our community."

City of Midland hiring of former task force executive director Nancy Vickrey will assure continuation of task force goals, including the continued search for financing for realignment of Lamesa Street and establishment of a revolving loan fund, Ms. Corrales said. "She (Ms. Vickrey) will work closely with all segments of the community to see the realization of these goals reached," Ms. Corrales added.

The incumbent council member also named City Council cooporation with other local governing bodies like the Midland County Commissioners Court and the Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees as a positive aspect of her term in office.

She added that "another area of accomplishment has been the establishment of a city streets commission, passing a water ordinance to protect our water and our streets and making sure that each (city) board...has representation from every area of our community.

"It is my desire to continue to serve the citizens of Midland for a second term and it is with great pleasure that I announce for the position of District 2 for re-election," she said.

Odessa bookkeeper pleads guilty to forgery

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

An Odessa bookkeeper who was accused of forging a $22,108 government check pleaded guilty in federal court to the offense.

And a 24-year-old Tennessee man on Tuesday was sentenced to five years in prison for violating probation.

The 32-year-old bookkeeper, Randy Cornell Howard, told U.S. District Court Judge Lucius D. Bunton that he was pleading guilty because of his "conscious, sir," and because the prosecution had agreed to dismiss a second count — of passing the U.S. Treasury check. Bunton is to sentence Howard at 12:15 p.m. on Jan. 27. He could receive a 10-year prison term and a fine of $250,000 for the offense.

Howard was indicted last Nov. 20 for the Oct. 9 forgery of the check, which was made out to Ella R. Rogge of Odessa. The check had been delivered to the house where Howard and his family were living; Ella R. Rogge previously had lived there.

In another case, Bunton sentenced Antonio Dwinal Hale to five years in prison for violating conditions of federal probation.

In late December 1985, the judge had placed Hale on probation for five years and sentenced him to six months in Odessa's Alternative House, a halfway house, after Hale had pleaded guilty to interstate transportation of a stolen tractor trailer. But Hale spent only two weeks in the halfway house, where he was to undergo treatment for abuse of alcohol and other drugs.

He walked away from treatment and ended up in the Texas Department of Corrections on a burglary conviction. He was convicted of burglary of a habitation in Big Spring in February 1986.

"You've got problems with stealing people's property," Bunton told Hale.

The judge said that he "kind of went against my better judgment" when he gave Hale the probated sentence for stealing the tractor trailer. Hale allegedly had driven the vehicle from Phoenix, Ariz., to Midland in May 1985.

Bunton suggested that Hale has "recognized the error" of his ways and said he hoped Hale can "say 'no' to drugs and you can say 'no' to alcohol."

Hale said he was drinking alcohol in Odessa in January 1986, "and the next thing I knew, I was in Big Spring." He said the burglary in Big Spring was vague to him and indicated that he was on the fringes of a blackout when he committed the burglary.

Before Bunton had sentenced Hale, he asked the man, "What do you think I ought to do?"

Hale requested "one more chance" in apparently seeking probation again.

His attorney, Mike Morgan of Midland, alluded to Hale's time in the state penitentiary.

"He spent a miserable 11 months in a rather miserable place," Morgan said.

"Whatever happened to you in Eastham (Prison Farm) couldn't have been pretty," Bunton told Hale. "But you brought it on yourself. Nobody is making you drink that hooch."

Wife on trial in husband's death

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Deborah Lynn Rohde's husband was murdered only days after he took away the keys to her Cadillac, said a prosecutor in the woman's federal firearms violation trial.

The 29-year-old mother, accused of plotting her husband's murder, is charged in federal court with possessing an illegal silencer. Opening arguments were heard Tuesday. The trial is expected to continue through the week.

Mrs. Rohde is facing capital murder charges in connection with her husband's death in January of 1986, but that trial will be heard in a state court.

The weapons charge stems from a homemade silencer authorities claim they found during a search of a home where Mrs. Rohde moved three months after her husband was shot to death in January 1986.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Wayne Speck told the jury that law officials found the illegal silencer and a pistol in her bedroom.

"This just wasn't any old gun and any old silencer picked up off the street," Speck said. "It was specifically the weapon used to terminate the life of her husband."

Defense attorney Ronald Guyer objected to Speck's comments concerning the murder, but was overruled by Senior U.S. District Judge D.W. Suttle.

"She (Mrs. Rohde) is not on trial for that offense," Guyer said. "That's not what we're here to decide."

Speck said Mrs. Rohde and her husband had their "ups and downs" and that only days before he was mysteriously shot to death, Rohde took away his wife's car.

Servicemen implicated in narcotics case

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Twenty-four people, including 19 who worked at a medical center at Lackland Air Force Base, have been implicated in the distribution and use of illegal narcotics, Air Force officials said.

Twenty-three servicemen and one civilian are suspected of distributing and using marijuana, LSD and cocaine, including 19 who worked at Wilford Hall U.S. Air Force Medical Center, Lackland spokesman Jim Sandefur said Tuesday.

The Wilford Hall employees include eight medical specialists, three dental specialists and seven support workers. The civilian worked in the dining hall, Sandefur said.

Police chief says shooting of officer accident

PALACIOS (AP) — The shooting of a man during his arrest will be investigated by a Texas Ranger and the Wharton-Matagorda County District Attorney's office, authorities say.

However, Palacios Police Chief Don Gullett said he is satisfied the shooting early Monday morning was an accident.

The shooting occurred when Palacios police stopped the man in his car to serve him a drug-related warrant, Gullett said.

Officials said the suspect suffered a gunshot wound to his right cheek and was listed in good condition Tuesday at John Sealy Hospital in Galveston.

Gullett said the man was shot after he was told to hold his hands over his head and kneel on the ground so he could be searched for weapons.

When the man tried to lower his hands, he hit the officer's .223-caliber semi-automatic rifle, causing it to "accidentally discharge," Gullett said. No weapons were found during the arrest, but a substance believed to be cocaine was found in the man's wallet.

Charges of possession of marijuana and a controlled substance are pending against the man. About 32 pounds of a substance believed to be marijuana was confiscated at the man's trailer house in Blessing, about 15 miles from Palacios, late Sunday afternoon, authorities said.

The officer, Emmett Greene, has been "given some time off to recover and will be working with the police department's computer the next three or four days," Gullett said.

The police chief said Greene, a 12-year veteran on the force, was not violating police policy by carrying the rifle because of the potential danger.

Hearing to consider concrete company application

From Staff Reports

A Texas Air Control Board prehearing tonight will address preliminary issues in a Midland concrete manufacturer's application to allow construction of a concrete batch plant about a mile west of the city limits.

The hearing is scheduled for 7 p.m. at Scharbauer Elementary School.

Troy Vines, Inc., the concrete company, has applied for a permit to build the plant near the intersection of State Highway 258 and County Road 1248 North.

Residents in the area have said they oppose the plant's construction because of dust emissions that they believe will adversely affect their health, livestock, vegetation and property values.

Also opposing construction are the City of Midland and the Midland Independent School District.

Without the federal funding, some downsizing of plans may be necessary, an issue that directors also will consider during Thursday's meeting, he said.

If directors decide to give up the grant, the money could go for other projects in the city's designated community development area, which basically includes the area east of Big Spring Street and south of U.S. Highway 80, Mike McGregor, assistant city manager, said Tuesday.

The money could be used for additional street paving, parks renovation or construction, or to demolish abandoned housing, he said.

DISPUTE

Asked about Augesen's allegation that he violated the Code of Criminal Procedure by setting a case for non-jury trial without consent of the district attorney's office, Ater said he acted only in the interest of saving money for the county.

"What sense does it make," he asked, "to go to the expense of seating a jury and then the defendant pleads guilty and opts for the judge to set punishment?"

Augesen contends Ater is shortcutting the judicial process, attempting to act as district attorney as well as judge, and denying the state the right to argue its case to an impartial jury.

The district attorney said Ms. Ocon's case is not the only case in which this has happened, which is why he has asked the State Court of Criminal Appeals to not only order Ater to set Ms. Ocon's case "for jury trial on the earliest available date," but "also to prohibit said Respondent (Ater) from conducting any bench trials in criminal cases when the State has not consented, in writing, to the waiver of a jury trial."

According to Augesen, Ater, in setting the Ocon case for a non-jury trial, specifically violated the Texas Code of Criminal Procedure which states: "The defendant in a criminal prosecution for any offense classified as a felony less than capital shall have the right, upon entering a plea, to waive the right of trial by jury, conditioned, however, that such waiver must be made in person by the defendant in writing in open court with the consent and approval of the court, and the attorney representing the State."

According to reports, a gold plated ladies' watch valued at $300, a gold ladies' wedding band valued at $300, a gold men's wedding band valued at $200, and a gold nugget men's ring valued at $200 were stolen from a residence at Rt. 2, Box 115, Space 17.

"When I found my daughter's birth control pills, I hit the ceiling."

"I COULDN'T BELIEVE SHE'D do something like that and I wouldn't even know it. We've always been pretty close. I always thought she could talk to me about what's going on in her life. That's the kind of father I've tried to be. I just want her to be happy.

Didn't she know that? Didn't she trust me?

I'll tell you, it's a lonely moment. It hurts. Like you've lost the daughter you thought you knew. She's grown up so fast. At least she's being careful.

I just hope I can show her that I still care.

Bush, Baker to meet with Canadian leader

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President George Bush and Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III are expected to carry to Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney a renewed U.S. pledge to press for trade liberalization and an easing of acid rain problems.

The high-level assurances, designed to lend Reagan administration support for the troubled Mulroney government, come at a time of increased friction on trade and environmental issues between the two nations.

Bush and Baker were to travel to Ottawa early today at the invitation of Mulroney for the hastily arranged session.

Baker was also to meet separately on monetary issues with Canadian Finance Minister Michael Wilson, before returning to Washington for another meeting on the U.S. dollar with Japanese Finance Minister Kiichi Miyazawa.

James and Darlene Hawkins show off the nursery they prepared for their quintuplets.

Quintuplets arrive early

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Quintuplets born three months early weighed less than 1½ pounds each and were in serious but stable condition early today, hospital officials said.

The three boys and two girls were born within 31 minutes Tuesday night to Darlene Hawkins, 25, said Vanderbilt University Medical Center spokeswoman Lynn Saunders.

Mrs. Hawkins, who had taken a powerful fertility drug, was hospitalized last week in an effort to prolong her 24-week pregnancy. Her full-term pregnancy would have lasted until May 10 and doctors had hoped to delay delivery for at least another four weeks, said Bill Hance, another hospital spokesman.

Retiree now with lobby

WASHINGTON (AP) — The woman who ran the Social Security Administration for the past three years is working for a private lobbying group that has raised millions of dollars, while angering some lawmakers with its fund-raising appeals.

Martha A. McSteen, who retired last month after a 39-year career with the huge retirement program, told The Associated Press that one of her goals as management consultant to the National Committee to Preserve Social Security and Medicare is to improve the tone of the group's mailings.

She also hopes to help "make this an organization that all Americans would be proud to be associated with."

Censorship to be debated

WASHINGTON (AP) — The right of public school students to publish uncensored school newspaper articles on subjects such as teen-age pregnancy and divorce will be tested in the Supreme Court.

The justices will examine the issue in a case from Hazelwood, Mo., in which a high school principal ordered two pages deleted from a student-produced newspaper published as part of the school's curriculum.

"School boards across this country need guidance as to the extent of their authority to control school curriculum, particularly newspapers operated as part of the curriculum," the National School Boards Association said in urging the court to take the case.

The justices are expected to hear arguments in the case next fall, with a decision likely in 1988.

Will village reach Climax?

CLIMAX, Mich. (AP) — The sign for this historic little village often draws double takes from motorists on Interstate 94. Some even try to steal it.

"It's tough keeping signs around here," said hardware store owner Al Hoover.

However, replacements might not be necessary soon, as residents vote Thursday whether the village of Climax should cease to exist.

Some residents say merging the one-stoplight village with rural Climax Township would lower the cost of local services. Others say it would mean a loss of control and identity.

"I had a great-great-grandfather who helped settle this land in 1836," said Maxine McNutt, who has lived in the village all of her 69 years. "It took 150 years to get this far and it'd be a shame if we got rid of the village."

Former village President Steve Johnson, who collected the 102 petition signatures to put the issue to a vote, said Tuesday that disincorporation would lower taxes and make services more efficient.

"I just think the village form of government is obsolete and the township form of government has the power," he said. "We have so many duplications."

The move to disincorporate must be approved by at least two-thirds of the village's 370 registered voters, or 247 people. The Kalamazoo County Board of Commissioners would have the final say at its annual meeting in October.

Climax is about 15 miles from both Kalamazoo and Battle Creek and almost midway between Detroit and Chicago.

The area encompassed by Climax Township was founded in 1835 and the population center within it was incorporated as a separate village in 1899. The township has 1,978 residents, while 1,619 live in the village.

In 1896, Congress singled out the area for an experiment with rural free delivery. Today, a monument stands in the village center, built with stones from each of the 300 farms on America's first RFD route.

The area also is known for its unusual name and the tongue-in-cheek comments it provokes.

Center's policy no smokescreen

EDITOR'S NOTE — Smoking has been banned for years in sections of airliners and restaurants, to comply with ordinances or people's tastes. Some medical institutions are banning smoking altogether, to keep from setting an unhealthy example. After one year with such a policy, one of the nation's largest smoke-free medical centers reports progress.

By KARREN MILLS

ST. LOUIS PARK, Minn. (AP) — The ashtrays have been gone from Park Nicollet Medical Center for a year.

Janitors still find cigarette butts in stairwells, but smokers and nonsmokers alike agree there are few violations of the center's policy banning smoking in buildings and on the grounds of its 19 clinic and office sites in the Minneapolis-St. Paul area.

Park Nicollet, whose 300 physicians and 1,500 other employees handle more than 23 million patient visits each year, instituted its total ban on smoking Jan. 1, 1986, after a two-year phase-in.

Violators get verbal warnings from their supervisors for first offenses, and written notices for second offenses with copies to their personnel files. A third violation is grounds for dismissal.

However, there have been no cases in which a doctor or other employee has been warned more than once, officials said.

"There's definitely a trend toward smoke-free places, and the trend is for medical facilities to lead the way," said Michele Kling, a spokeswoman for the American Lung Association in New York.

Pressure to do something about smoking at Park Nicollet, headquartered in St. Louis Park, began in late 1982 when the Board of Trustees was challenged to declare all center buildings smoke-free.

"I recognized that all the messages we gave patients were that you should not smoke," said president James Reinertsen, a physician. "They would then go down for a cup of coffee and see 50 people in white coats smoking cigarettes.

"My question was: Who did they listen to? I contended the cafeteria message was counteracting what we were saying in the doctors' offices."

Dr. A. Stuart Hanson, a lung specialist at the center and current president of the Minnesota Coalition for a Smoke-Free Society 2000, took up the gauntlet.

"I said this isn't just an issue of our cafeteria. It's an issue of a whole society. We felt the image of our facility was besmirched" by allowing smoking, said Hanson, a former pipe smoker.

The medical center already was in compliance with the 1975 Minnesota Clean Indoor Air Act, which allows smoking indoors only in designated areas used by the general public or serving as a place of work. Park Nicollet officials wanted to go further.

A task force of non-smokers and smokers surveyed employees, 55 percent of whom responded; of those, 62 percent said they favored a smoking ban.

Cardiologist Phillip Ranheim was against the ban and still is.

"I fought against it very actively. I wrote countless memos and said my piece. But my side lost so I shut up," Ranheim said. "I felt at the time they were ramming it down our throats. I'm addicted to smoking cigarettes. It's been very, very hard for me."

To help its employees quit smoking, the center offered smoking cessation classes and exercise classes, Hanson said.

Ranheim said he tried twice to quit smoking but suffered severe withdrawal symptoms including light headedness and dizziness.

Still, he said he has never violated the smoking ban. "Now I leave the building and drive around the block when I have to smoke."

Receptionist Sue Bixby goes to a nearby park for a cigarette during breaks.

"At first I was really upset. I don't think whatever anyone said would have made any difference" in the decision to ban smoking, she said. "I tried to quit, but the weight gain is not worth it."

She and Ranheim agreed few employees violate the ban, though some smoke in their cars in the parking lot.

Hanson noted that since the ban was instituted there had been a significant drop in the number of smokers at Park Nicollet, which gives preference to non-smokers when hiring people if other things are equal.

In 1983, before the phase-in of the smoking ban began, 27 percent of the center's employees said they were smokers. By the time the total ban went into effect, that number was down to 14.5 percent, Hanson said.

In addition to improving the health of its own employees, Hanson said the center considered itself a model of the value of going smoke-free and showing how it can be done.

"In Minnesota, we're trying to get the entire health care system to be smoke-free by 1990," he said. The center is working with the Minnesota Department of Health toward that goal.

The dollar also posted gains in Europe against all major currencies except the Canadian dollar.

Oil fee chances called bleak

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Prospects for an oil import fee are bleak and oil-producing states probably will have to settle for a partial solution at best during this Congressional session, U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen's energy advisor said Tuesday.

"We're skeptical about Congressional approval of an oil import fee," Van McMurtry told a conference of the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners. But Congress might agree to limit the United State's dependence on foreign imports and to give the oil industry more tax breaks to encourage domestic drilling, he said.

Bentsen will propose to limit imports to 50 percent of U.S. consumption, McMurtry said, although he acknowledged that it will do little immediately to help the sagging petroleum industry.

"We wanted to set it (the import limit) so high that we can't possibly be accused of favoritism toward the industry," McMurtry said. "No one could argue that it's a giveaway to the industry. It's also politically palatable."

Currently imports make up about 45 percent of oil consumed in the United States, compared to 27 percent this time last year. McMurtry couldn't project if imports would go above 50 percent in 1987.

Under Bentsen's plan — called the "peril point" bill — the president would have to devise a way to curb imports to bring the level under 50 percent if they exceeded that level. Bentsen and other peril-point supporters will argue that it is needed to avoid another energy crisis and to maintain national security needs.

Julian Martin, TIPRO's executive vice president, said his group still supports an oil import fee but is willing to lobby for peril-point legislation and tax breaks if the Reagan administration maintains its position and refuses to impose an oil import fee.

Also on the table this session will be oil-assistance packages offered by Sen. David Boren, D-Oklahoma, Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, and Rep. Bill Archer, R-Houston.

Ed Vetter, former energy advisor to Gov. Bill Clements, told TIPRO that heavy industry and oil interests nationwide shoud come together to avoid massive shutdowns in the U.S. industrial sector.

But Vetter warned that OPEC could fix prices to get around a variable oil import fee. Also, he said, if an oil import fee is imposed and prices rise significantly, congressmen from non-producing states might push for a return to price controls that could further hurt U.S. oil companies.

TIPRO postpones action on gas proration plan

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners on have postponed action on a proposal to change the way pipeline access is determined for gas producers.

Members of TIPRO, the state's largest oil and gas trade group, met in Austin Tuesday for an annual report of committees.

"We are not sure, but a change in these rules governed by the Texas Railroad Commission might require action from the state Legislature," said Rex White of Austin, chairman of the state petroleum issues committee.

White said that the committee must explore the effect of the change on the state and that members felt it was not timely to pursue the proration issue at this time.

The task force was established last year to study what the association viewed as an escalating problem with unfair gas prorationing from producer wells to pipelines.

The proposal calls for "withdrawal of gas from producing fields based on engineering studies, and not on allowables set by the first purchaser," said Forbes Gordon, chairman of the proration task force.

Also Tuesday, the association the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission for setting a rate structure for canadian natural gas over protests from the canadian government.

Midland cost of living declines

From Staff Reports

Following a slight increase in November, Midland's cost of living declined 0.3 percent in December, according to figures released by the ClayDesta National Bank.

Increases in costs for utilities, food away from home, transportation, clothing and medical expenses were offset by declines in the costs of housing and food at home. Midland's six month annualized deflation rate equals 3.9 percent. According to ClayDesta figures, the Tall City's living costs have fallen 2.6 percent over the last 12 months, with 2 percent of that coming in the last six months.

Odessa's cost of living rose for a second month, recording a 0.1 percent rise in December.

Midland utility costs rocketed 6.6 percent in December, reversing a November decline. Gas rates remained stable. And although rates rose only 0.1 percent, electric bills rose 20.3 percent as the rebate program was discontinued. Local water rates remained stable for the fifteenth month in a row. Although a 1.8 percent decrease has been seen in utility costs the last six months, utility expenses have risen 0.6 percent over the last year.

Higher prices for vegetable side dishes and non-alcoholic beverages were primarily responsible for a 3 percent rise in restaurant prices, assisted by a second month of slightly higher beef prices. This is the second month prices have increased. Over the past year, the cost of eating out in Midland has risen 7.1 percent, 6 percent of that coming in the last six months.

For the third month in a row, transportation costs rose, recording a 1.7 percent rise in December. Mixed trends, but generally higher prices for gasoline, were noticed for the sixth consecutive month. Higher costs for automobile insurance were also recorded during December. During the past year, Midland transportation costs have fallen 16.2 percent.

Clothing costs reversed a two-month trend and rose in December, showing a 0.8 percent increase. Mixed trends were shown for women's apparel this month. During the year, clothing costs have fallen 2.4 percent, with a 3 percent fall shown in the past six months.

Higher prices for non-prescription drugs pushed medical expenses 0.8 percent in December, reversing a two month trend. Although medical costs have risen 1.2 percent in the past year, they have fallen 1.9 percent over the past six months.

Texas banks announce fourth quarter results

The Associated Press

RepublicBank Corp. posted earnings for the fourth quarter of 1986 while its merger partner, InterFirst Corp., and Texas Commerce Bancshares reported fourth-quarter losses.

RepublicBank had fourth-quarter income of $9.1 million, company officials said Tuesday. The Dallas-based bank holding company announced Dec. 16 it plans a merger with InterFirst, also of Dallas, later this year.

InterFirst reported losses of $49.6 million during the last quarter of 1986 to bring yearly losses to $326.5 million, or $4.86 per share. The yearly losses compare with income of $61.1 million, 91 cents per share, in 1985.

Texas Commerce Bancshares of Houston, also planning a merger, suffered a net loss of $21 million, the company said.

Texas Commerce's performance prompted its board of directors to halve the quarterly dividend. The firm and its 70 banks are in the process of merging with Chemical New York Corp. in a cash and stock transaction valued at $1.1 billion.

RepublicBank's earnings of 26 cents per share compared with net income of $33.5 million, or $1.10 per share, during the same quarter of 1985, the company said. Its yearly income of $54 million, or $1.65 per share, compared with $140.2 million, $4.60 per share, in 1985.

InterFirst said its fourth-quarter loss of $49.6 million, 74 cents per share, compared with net income of $13.7 million, or 20 cents per share, during the fourth quarter of 1985.

The two banks' merger agreement, which would create the nation's 12th-largest bank holding company, is subject to regulatory and shareholder approval.

Japan reported ready to cut discount rate

TOKYO (AP) — Finance Minister Kiichi Miyazawa left Wednesday for talks in Washington on the yen's dramatic rise and news reports said he will offer to cut Japan's discount rate in return for U.S. action to stabilize the dollar.

The reports said Miyazawa will tell U.S. Treasury Secretary James Baker he is willing to cut Japan's official discount rate — the rate its central bank, the Bank of Japan, charges on loans to commercial banks — by 0.5 percentage points, to 2.5 percent.

Kyodo News Service reported Wednesday that the Bank of Japan already had decided to lower its discount rate unilaterally by the end of this month.

Quoting unidentified central bank sources, Kyodo said the bank will go ahead with a rate cut even if other countries do not join in easing credit conditions. West Germany also is reported to have been considering a discount rate reduction.

Bank of Japan Governor Satoshi Sumita on Tuesday denied plans to cut the discount rate in the near future. In the past, however, the bank's governors have denied reports of imminent rate changes until an official announcement was made.

The yen has risen dramatically against the dollar during the past week, reaching a post-1949 record-high close Monday of 150.45 yen per dollar on the Tokyo Foreign Exchange Market. The yen has risen by about 60 percent against the dollar in the last 16 months.

Prices rise only 1.1 percent in 1986

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans last year saw their biggest respite from inflation in 25 years, the government reported today, as consumer prices rose only 1.1 percent.

The annual increase in the Labor Department's consumer price index — the lowest since the 0.7 percent inflation of 1961 — was skewed by a 60 percent plunge in crude oil prices that followed last winter's collapse of the OPEC cartel.

As a result, retail prices for gasoline last month were 30.7 percent below their level of December 1985. Home heating oil prices were down 29.9 percent while natural gas and electric utility costs fell 3.3 percent over the year.

Except for energy, consumers found little relief from inflation. Prices rose 5.8 percent for new automobiles, 3.7 percent for food, 1.8 percent for housing, 0.9 percent for clothing and 3.4 percent for entertainment, the Labor Department said. Used car prices fell 5.1 percent.

The sum total of the price changes in the Labor Department's market basket survey of 184 goods and services left the overall CPI at the end of 1986 at 331.1. That means that consumers paid $33.11, or 37 cents more than they had paid in December 1985, for products that had cost them only $10 in 1967.

For this year, the White House is forecasting that consumer prices will rise at an annual rate of 3.8 percent, the same rate as in 1983 and 1985.

West Texans do a lot of driving, and West Texan businessmen have to keep track of their mileage for accounting and tax purposes.

A computer that was invented a couple of years ago to help keep track of car mileage is now available in the Midland-Odessa area. Offered by VRS CO., located at 1303 County Road, the computer keeps track of the mileage, date, day and time, according to Gerald Sparks. He added that the computer prints out a report every night at 11:58 p.m., the end of each week, the end of each month, and "at 11:58 on New Year's Eve, it prints out a report for the year," Sparks said.

VRS — which stands for Vehicle Records System, offers three models: the Executive Log, which has categories for business, medical, personal and charity; the Business Log, has business 1,2,3, and personal categorys, and the Service Log, which is the same as the Business Log but is designed more for delivery trucks, because it records idling time.

VRS, which has been selling the computers for two months, will sell and install the machines.

Eastern workers may have pay cut 60 percent

NEW YORK (AP) — Texas Air Corp. Chairman Frank Lorenzo will unveil a plan today to cut the pay of most of Eastern Airlines' 43,000 employees by up to 60 percent, according to a published report.

Eastern spokesman James Ashlock said the plan would not include any layoffs but would emphasize that if Eastern wants to grow it must bring its costs down, The New York Times reported in today's editions.

Ashlock told the newspaper that the plan would aim at saving a certain amount of money each year, but he would not disclose how much. Lorenzo is expected to reveal the amount at a news conference in Miami later today.

The plan would set wage targets for all Eastern jobs, necessitating discussions with all the major unions at the airline, Ashlock said.

Lorenzo bought the airline in November after a months-long effort by Eastern's unions to block the takeover.

The Times quoted unidentified sources as saying that should the unions fail to agree to the cost-cutting plans, Eastern might cut employment and move some of its aircraft to Continental Airlines, a non-unionized Texas Air subsidiary.

Under the plan, a baggage handler making an average of $43,000 in pay and benefits at Eastern would be offered $18,000, or the pay for such a post at Continental, Ashlock said.

RepublicBank is the country's 20th largest bank holding company with 41 member banks and total assets of $20.9 billion as of Dec. 31. InterFirst had assets of $18 billion at year's end.

Texas Commerce said lost $21 million in its fourth quarter, largely because it took a $125 million provision for bad loans.

The company recorded a loss of 64 cents per share in the fourth quarter, an $8 million improvement from the $29 million net loss, or 88 cents per share, for the same period in 1985.

Net income for the year declined more than 60 percent, from $53 million, or $1.62 per share, in 1985 to $20 million, or 61 cents per share, for 1986.

Texas Commerce spokesman Mike Cinelli attributed the loss in 1986's last quarter to the company's continuing to build a reserve against possible losses while also charging off non-performing loans.

Nevertheless, the board of directors voted Tuesday to cut the quarterly dividend to 19½ cents per share to build further capital. The dividend will be paid April 1 to shareholders of record as of March 13.

JAPAN

Japanese officials are concerned the high yen will hurt the country's export-oriented economy by increasing the cost of Japanese products overseas, thus making them less competitive.

On Tuesday, Miyazawa declined to reveal his agenda for the discussions in Washington but told reporters the currency market situation was serious enough to require a meeting with Baker in keeping with an agreement the two announced at the end of last October.

Baker and Miyazawa pledged then to cooperate to stabilize the yen-dollar exchange rate.

"We just can't sit here and waste time," Miyazawa said.

The mass-circulated newspaper Asahi Shimbun reported Tuesday that Japan, which cut its discount rate four times last year, was reluctant to reduce the rate again but felt currency stability would be difficult to achieve without U.S. help.

COST

Lower rents and slightly lower costs for home maintenance were responsible for a 3 percent decrease in housing costs for December, following a stable November. Midlanders have seen a 5.9 percent decline in housing costs over the past year, with a larger 8.2 percent fall being measured in the last six months.

The cost of buying food for home reversed a November rise and fell 1.8 percent in December, with higher alcohol prices being offset by lower prices for produce, meat and shelf items. Over the past year, food prices have risen 0.5 percent, with 0.3 percent coming in the last six months.

PRICES

Most private economists predict inflation will be closer to the 4 percent rate of 1984.

Indeed, the December figures indicated that inflation is creeping back up to the range of 3.5 percent to 4 percent. Overall consumer prices rose at a seasonally adjusted rate of 0.2 percent from November, equivalent to an annual inflation rate of 2.9 percent.

Economists maintain there is little chance of the double-digit inflation rates of 1974 and 1979-80 recurring this year. The respective annual price increases of 12.2 percent, 13.3 percent and 12.4 percent in 1974, 1979 and 1980 had their roots in first a doubling and then a trippling of crude oil prices by members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

As consumers suffered then, they benefitted in 1986 when crude prices fell from $28 per barrel in November 1985 to below $10 last July. As oil prices have climbed back up to $19 a barrel in recent months, the consumer price index likewise has resumed its upward spiral.

Meanwhile, retail food prices have been climbing at an annual rates of 2.7 percent over the last three months. Housing costs have risen 4.1 percent since September. Medical costs have been skyrocketing 7.1 percent.

"We are moving gradually into an inflation environment that at least for a while will be in the range of 3 to 4 percent and will top 4 percent for all of 1987," said Larry Chimerine, president of Chase Econometrics, a forecasting firm based in Bala Cynwd, Pa.

Donald Ratajczk, director of economic forecasting at Georgia State University in Atlanta, said gasoline prices are rising more rapidly this month than they did in December.

"We picked up about a penny increae on the gallon in December and we're seeing a 3.5 percent increase at the pumps so far this month," Ratajcak said.

In addition, the continuing decline of the U.S. dollar as valued against the Japanese yen and other foreign currencies could produce higher prices for clothing, automobiles and entertainment commodities such as stereos and television sets, he said.

Another development that could produce a higher inflation rate in 1987 is the manner in which the government calculates it.

Once every decade, the Labor Department alters the items and importance given to each in its market basket survey. For the '80s, that change will take place next month, when consumer price figures are released for January.

According to the government officials responsible for coming up with accurate measures of inflation, Americans are spending a smaller share of their incomes in the 1980s than they did a decade ago on food and clothing but more on housing, entertainment and education.

Contential Airlines two-for-one promotion confusing to consumers

NEW YORK (AP) — A two-for-one fare promotion by Continental Airlines has irritated a number of consumers and travel agents, who claim the carrier advertised deceptively and was ill-equipped to handle the enormous demand.

Continental executives acknowledge some mistakes and oversights, including an unprecedented volume of calls to the airline's reservations center in Jacksonville, Fla., that shut down the city's entire telephone system twice.

They also say several typographical errors about the deal appeared in newspaper ads, which the airline corrected. But overall, said James O'Donnell, vice president of Continental's marketing services, the promotion has been "more successful than any other we've done before."

The U.S. Transportation Department's office of consumer affairs normally monitors fare complaints, but it was not clear whether it had received any about Continental. Department officials referred all questions to spokesman Edward O'Hara, who was said to be out of the office Tuesday.

Houston-based Continental began the promotion Jan. 12 to publicize its absorption of discount carrier People Express and East Coast airline New York Air. All three airlines are owned by Texas Air Corp., which purchased struggling People Express late last month.

The expansion makes Continental the largest airline in the important New York market, with 183 daily departures.

Under the two-for-one deal, passengers who travel from New York and eight other cities to anywhere in Continental's domestic system during February get a second ticket free. Passengers on flights to London get a second ticket free during February and March.

Six other airlines have matched the promotion in markets where they compete. But Continental seems to be the only airline that has aroused confusion over the deal, mostly because its newspaper advertisements listed the lowest possible fares, which often are unavailable.

"You can't get it for the price as advertised," said Marvin Wallman, a food broker from Cranberry, N.J., who reserved a pair of New York-Los Angeles tickets for $109 as quoted in newspaper ads. When he purchased the tickets, the airline charged him $139.

"If this isn't deceptive advertising I'll eat the paper," said Wallman.

Others have expressed similar gripes about Continental's advertised $99 New York-Florida fare, for which they were charged $129. And one woman called the Hartford (Conn.) Courant newspaper to complain that the airline's local agents knew nothing about the entire promotion.

Asked why the cheapest fares were advertised, Continental spokesman Richard Scott said: "Typically in the business, you advertise your lowest available fare. It doesn't mean every seat on every plane is sold at that price."

O'Donnell acknowledged people have been unable to reach the reservations center because of what he called unprecedented demand. He also said that despite fare-restrictions mentioned in the ads, "there was some confusion relative to the lowest fare."

Nevertheless, he said, the ads did not deliberately attempt to mislead.

"If you compare our ads to any carrier in the country, you'll find we don't have any fine print," he said. "We put all our restrictions in the body of the text."

Jack Bloch, owner of JB's World Travel Consultants agency in New York, said the Continental ads contained other misleading information aside from fares. For example, the New York-Phoenix, Ariz., route shows 15 non-stop flights, but there is only one.

"There are many confusions about the promotion," Bloch said. "Continental itself is confused about it. They're very understaffed and underqualified to answer the questions."

H. Wayne Berens, president of the New Jersey chain Revere Travel Inc., said his agents have direct computer access to Continental's reservation system, making it easier to book tickets. But he said the promotion had multiplied the workload because previously ticketed clients now want the two-for-one deal.

Joel Wechsler, owner of Federal Travel Service in Boston, said that such promotions usually arouse confusion and that Continental's deal had thrown the airline "into a considerable state of chaos at the moment."

Zales moving distribution center to Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — Irving-based Zale Corp. will move its 100-employee distribution center to Dallas after closing operations in New York, company officials said.

Zale, acquired last month by a Canadian and Swiss consortium, is the world's largest retail jeweler.

Lynne Lewicki, manager of media relations, said the move will align the company more closely with its merchandising and marketing facilities in the Dallas area.

The move is also part of an effort toward a more totally focused retail business, she said.

Zale's owns 1,350 Zales, Bailey Banks & Biddle and Mission Jewelry stores in the United States.

The company said about 300 jobs in New York City will be eliminated. However, Zale will retain its New York diamond and precious stone purchasing office, Lewicki said.

Many of the New York employees will be asked to relocate in Dallas, Lewicki said.

The demise of the New York facility is another step in the restructuring of Zale, Lewicki said.

The company was acquired last month by Peoples Jewelers of Toronto and Swarovski Holdings of Switzerland for about $560 million. The buyout capped a takeover battle for Zale, which posted 1986 sales of $1.1 billion.

Dollar's plunge cuts confidence

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The drubbing the U.S. dollar has taken on global markets is eroding Western Europe's confidence in American economic leadership, according to business and financial analysts.

It deepens European doubts about the direction of the U.S. economy and the strength of the Reagan administration's commitment to cooperating with its trading partners to keep exchange rates stable, according to analysts interviewed Tuesday from several European capitals.

Travel the Orient for Lunar New Year Celebration

Thursday, January 29, marks the first day of the New Year of the Hare, the year 4685 in the ancient Oriental lunar calendar.

Most countries in the Far East many years ago changed to the Gregorian calendar—the one we use. But they continue to celebrate festivals based on their ancient moon calendar. According to this calendar, Chinese New Year (as it's known in this country) arrives with the second new moon after the winter solstice, the shortest day of the year. This second New Year celebration becomes more popular in the U.S. every year. In some major cities, this holiday is as popular as it is in the Far East.

The traditions and manner of celebrating the new year differ from one Far Eastern country to the other, but great feasting is common to all. While these countries use many of the same ingredients in their traditional dishes, each country's cuisine retains its own special character and charm.

In honor of the Year of the Hare, home economists at have developed the following menu ideas which will allow you to travel the Orient from your dining room table. With these entrees, your journey will take you from the vast countryside of China to the mystical islands of Japan, and finally to the lush farmlands of Thailand. All are easily prepared in your kitchen with products readily available at the supermarket.

Hop Sing Almond Chicken is as colorful as the Chinese New Year celebration itself. The attractive combination of chicken, pea pods, water chestnuts and carrots quick cooked with a delicate soy flavored sauce is reminiscent of the colorful dragons and fireworks which light up the new year sky.

Satay are Thai shish kebabs traditionally served with a delightful peanut sauce. The abundance, quality and variety of fresh food products on display in Thailand's floating outdoor markets is reflected in skewered Thai Pork Satay. Like all Thai food, this dish has three-way appeal, pleasing the sight, smell and taste buds.

The presentation of Teriyaki Flank Steak is typically Japanese, where appearance is as important as taste. Lush green pea pods arranged with the precision and order that the Japanese strive for in their lives serve as the perfect counterpoint to teriyaki marinated meat prepared in the traditional hibachi manner.

Celebrate the start of the Oriental Year of the Hare with Hop Sing Almond Chicken (bottom) and Thai Pork Satay (top).

4685 Year of the Hare

The Year of the Hare follows the Oriental tradition of naming the years after animals in 12-year cycles. Each year has specific personal traits and characteristics associated with it for those born in that year.

If you were born in the Year of the Hare (1927, 1939, 1951, 1963, 1975), you are said to be compassionate, romantic and sympathetic, devoted to harmony and peace of mind. A "social animal," friends admire the hare's positive attitude and ability to keep secrets. Hares are also forgiving in nature and have clever minds.

Hares dislike disorder in their lives, and cannot tolerate transiency. Wherever they decide to settle down, their first priority is to add their personal touches to make it feel like home.

Whatever the Hare produces in his or her life, be it artistic, financial or domestic, the tone will be conservative, tasteful and traditional. Usually, hares do not much care for applause and public acclaim. They enjoy their work and go about it calmly and with much self-discipline.

Included in the list of famous hares are Queen Victoria, James Beard, Albert Einstein, Harry Bellafonte, Neil Simon, Peter Falk, George C. Scott, George Plimpton, Judy Collins, Ali McGraw and David Frost.

Little birds with big flair

Copley News Service

In the rush to escape the nutritional perils of red meat, meal planners are flocking to poultry and seafood counters in ever-growing numbers. Sales of chicken, turkey and seafood products all have soared, while the number of cattle declined 22 million between 1975 and 1985. In the midst of the shift, however, buyers may be missing the best bet of all: Cornish hens.

Confusion as to just what kind of bird this fine-feathered fowl really is may be a large part of the problem, so here's a little culinary genealogy. The Cornish Hen — Rock Cornish Hen to be perfectly proper — is a cross between a particularly fine-flavored British bird: the Cornish Hen and the Plymouth Rock. The result is a high-quality miniature chicken.

Like chickens of other stripes, the Cornish Hen can be roasted, baked, fricasseed, grilled, barbecued, sauteed and stuffed.

Because of its size (it ranges from 14 to 32 ounces, although 22 is most common), it's highly versatile, serving small and large numbers of diners with equal ease.

Determining serving sizes depends largely on the size of the bird, the appetites and the type of meal involved. Hearty eaters have been known to wolf down a whole bird on their own, while less voracious diners can easily share. For entertaining, you'll probably want to plan on a whole bird per person as a matter of presentation, if nothing else. Another plus: Cornish Hens make an elegant entree — many times with very little effort.

A selection of recipes designed to show off this bird at its fine-feathered best follows.

HONEY BAKED CORNISH HENS

4 Cornish Hens (1 pound, 6 ounces each), giblets removed
Salt and pepper
1 cup honey
Two-thirds cup white wine vinegar
2 tablespoons whole green peppercorns
2 teaspoons finely minced shallots

Season hens with salt and pepper. Fold wing tips under hens, place in roastng pan and set aside.

Combine remaining ingredients in a heavy saucepan. Bring to a boil, reduce heat and cook until reduced by half and a glaze has formed, about 25 to 30 minutes. Preheat oven to 375 degrees.

With slotted spoon, remove peppercorns from glaze and crush. Place peppercorns into hen cavities; tie legs together. Quickly cool down glaze by placing the saucepan into ice water for 30 seconds. Coat hens with glaze and roast 30 minutes. Reheat glaze and brush on hens; roast 20 minutes more or until hens test done. If desired, julienne strips of carrot may be added to roasting pan the last 20 minutes and served with hens.

ROASTED CORNISH HENS WITH LEMON AND ROSEMARY

4 Cornish Hens (1 pound, 6 ounces each), giblets removed
Salt and pepper
1 large lemon
4 large cloves garlic, peeled and halved
4 sprigs parsley
2 teaspoons dried rosemary leaves
3 tablespoons olive oil
⅓ to ¾ cup chicken broth
One-third cup dry white wine
3 tablespoons butter
Chopped parsley or fresh rosemary (optional)

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Season cavities of hens with salt and pepper. Remove rind from lemon with a zester or vegetable peeler; cut into thin julienne strips. Squeeze juice from lemon; reserve. Cut remains of lemon into quarters and place in hen cavities, along with garlic, parsley, and rosemary, dividing equally.

Gently lift breast skin away from meat by slipping your fingers between the skin and meat of hens. Divide lemon strips among hens and place under skin. Fold wing tips under hens and tie legs together. Lightly grease bottom of heavy roasting pan. Place hens in pan breast side up; brush generously with olive oil on all sides. Salt and pepper, if desired. Roast, basting every 15 minutes with chicken broth, for about 50 minutes to 1 hour, or until done. Remove hens from pan; set aside on warm platter.

Skim fat from pan juices. Put roasting pan over medium heat; stir in any remaining broth and wine. Simmer, stirring up any browned bits from pan, 15 minutes or until liquid reduces to about ½ cup. Stir in reserved lemon juice and whisk in butter a little at a time. Salt and pepper if needed. Serve sauce over hens or seperately. Garnish with parsley or fresh rosemary.

CAJUN CORNISH HENS

4 Cornish hens (1 pound, 6 ounces each), giblets removed, split lengthwise
Salt and pepper
One-third cup all-purpose flour
1 clove garlic, halved
2 tablespoons each olive oil and vegetable oil
1½ pounds tomatoes (fresh or canned), chopped
2 large green or yellow sweet peppers, cut into strips
¼ pound fresh mushrooms, sliced
4 ounces smoked ham, diced
1 small fresh or dried red chili pepper
1 tablespoon chopped parsley (optional)

Season hen halves with salt and pepper. Dredge in flour and shake off excess. Rub a heavy, lidded casserole with garlic. Discard garlic. Heat oils in casserole until hot, then brown hens 3 minutes per side, starting with skin side up. Stir in remaining ingredients except parsley. Cover and simmer 20 minutes. Uncover and cook another 20 minutes or until hens test done and sauce has reduced and thickened slightly. Taste for seasoning and add parsley if desired.

FRICASSEED CORNISH HENS WITH COGNAC

4 Cornish hens (1 pound, 6 ounces each), giblets removed, split lengthwise
1¼ cups Cognac
5 ounces slab bacon, cut into ⅛-inch strips
4 tablespoons butter
24 pearl onions, peeled
Salt and pepper to taste
8 ounces mushrooms, quartered
Chopped parsley (optional)

Rinse hen halves and pat dry. Place skin side up in a single layer in a glass dish and pour Cognac over. Cover with plastic wrap and let marinate in refrigerator for at least 12 hours. If possible, halfway through marinating time, turn hens to marinate other side. When ready to cook, remove hens; reserve Cognac.

Blanch bacon strips in boiling water for 1 minute. Drain and set aside. Heat butter in a large skillet or heavy, lidded casserole. When melted, add bacon and hen halves, browning hens on all sides (may have to do in batches). When hens are browned, return all to skillet and add onions, reserved Cognac, salt and pepper. Stir and cook 2 minutes; add mushrooms. Cover and simmer about 30 minutes or until tender. Sprinkle with chopped parsley if desired.

WILD-RICE-STUFFED CORNISH HENS

4 Cornish Hens (1 pound, 6 ounces each), giblets removed, livers reserved
2 tablespoons butter
½ pound fresh mushrooms, sliced
4 green onions, chopped
3 ounces bulk pork sausage
1¾ cups chicken broth
1 cup wild rice, rinsed well
6 cups dry white wine
2 cups minced parsley
1 teaspoon dried basil, crumbled
Salt and pepper
2 cups butter, melted

Sauce:
Chicken broth
2 cups butter
3 tablespoons all-purpose flour
¾ cup heavy cream
⅛ cup chicken broth

Fold wing tips under hens; chop reserved livers; set aside.

In a large skilet, melt 2 tablespoons butter over medium heat. Saute mushrooms and green onions until soft, about 8 minutes. Add sausage, breaking apart. Cook until done. Remove mixture with slotted spoon, set aside. Reduce heat and add livers, 1¾ cups chicken broth, wild rice, wine, parsley, basil, salt and pepper to taste. Cook until all liquid is absorbed, about 40 minutes. Remove stuffing from heat, stir in half of reserved mushroom mixture; cool.

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Divide stuffing among hens, tie legs together and brush generously with melted butter. Roast 1 hour, 15 minutes, or until hens test done, basting occasionally with remaining melted butter. Remove hens to serving platter to keep warm.

To make sauce, discard fat from pan juices. Pour juices into measuring cup and add enough broth to make 1 cup; set aside. Melt ¼ cup butter in heavy saucepan. Add flour, stirring until foamy and smooth, about 3 to 4 minutes. Whisk in heavy cream, ⅛ cup chicken broth and reserved pan juices. Add remaining mushroom mixture. Cook, stirring, until smooth and thickened, about 4 minutes. Salt and pepper if needed. To serve, pour sauce over hens or serve sauce seperately.

Smoking habit gets big kick in Great American Smokeout

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR READERS: The Great American Smokeout of 1986 broke all records for participation, with an unprecedented 23.8 million smokers trying to kick the habit for 24 hours.

Through a Gallup survey, it was learned that 43.7 percent of the nation's 54.5 million smokers took part in the 10th annual Smokeout on Nov. 20, either by avoiding cigarettes completely or by cutting down.

Of the participants, 7 million smokers were able to make it through the day without lighting up, and another 16.8 million cut down. The survey findings confirm that smokers want to quit.

For smokers who need help quitting, the American Cancer Society offers the quit-smoking course, "FreshStart," through its local divisions and units. The course is also available on audio and videocassette, as well as in paperback. If you need help quitting but can't find the time to attend a course, the tapes and book give you the freedom to take advantage of FreshStart at your own leisure. The tapes, produced by Simon and Schuster, are sold at many bookstores and retail outlets.

For more information on FreshStart classes, call your local American Cancer Society. To order the FreshStart audio and videocassettes, call (800) 445-3800, operator 866.

Smoking is hell
Quitting is heaven
Yours for a healthier '87. — ABBY

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for printing the list of questions thoughtless and insensitive people should not ask the parents of internationally adopted children.

I, too, am the mother of two beautiful children (a boy and girl) adopted from Korea.

Please add one more question to that list: "Are your children sister and brother?"

I have been asked this question many times, and I always respond emphatically, "Yes, they are!" and would you believe that some people have had the nerve to continue probing further with "... but I mean, are they REAL brother and sister?" — LUCKY MOTHER IN CANADA

DEAR LUCKY: Read on. You may even want to clip it and carry the next letter with you. It speaks volumes:

DEAR ABBY: We have eight children, five domestically adopted. They don't look like us (there are four races among us), but some people do ask the cruelest questions.

Here are a few definitions for people who ask questions about adopted children who look Chinese, Korean or whatever:

Natural child: Any child who is not artificial.

Real parent: Any parent who is not imaginary.

Your own child: Any child who is not someone else's.

Adopted child: A natural child, whose parents are not imaginary, chosen by us and is now ours. — RITA LAWS, HARRAH, OKLA.

DEAR ABBY: My co-workers and I have a supervisor I'll call John Smith. To make a long story short, John got a college graduate degree by correspondence. It took only a short period of time, and to my knowledge the college (in California) is not accredited.

Anyway, there is now a diploma on the wall in John's office that says: Doctor of Philosophy in Small Business Management. He is beginning to introduce himself to new clients and in correspondence as "Dr. Smith." So far, he hasn't asked any of us to address him as "Doctor"; but what should we do if he requests it? — G.R. IN NORMANGEE, TEXAS

DEAR G.R.: Since he is your supervisor, should he ask you to call him "Doctor," though it may be a hard pill to swallow, call him "Doctor."

(Problems? Write to Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. All correspondence is confidential.)

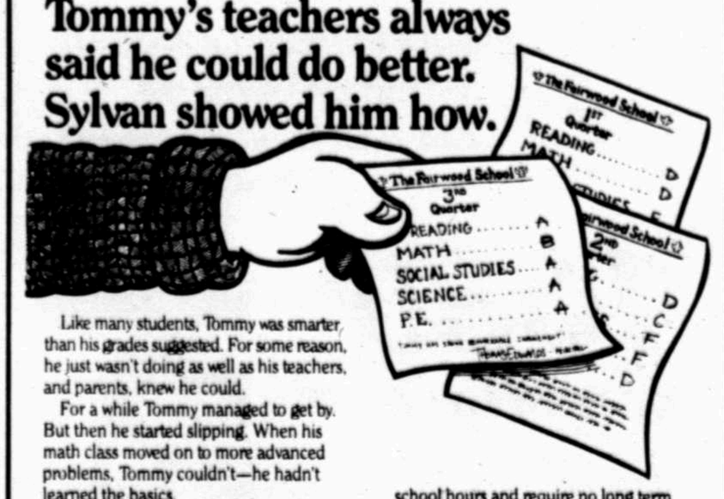
Tommy's teachers always said he could do better. Sylvan showed him how.



Like many students, Tommy was smarter than his grades suggested. For some reason, he just wasn't doing as well as his teachers, and parents, knew he could.

For a while Tommy managed to get by. But then he started slipping. When his math class moved on to more advanced problems, Tommy couldn't—he hadn't learned the basics.

At Sylvan we know how important those basic skills are. We've helped thousands of children master the basics of reading and math, and go on to fulfill their potential.

We can help your child. In fact, we guarantee it.

The Sylvan Guarantee
Your child will improve at least one full grade equivalent score in math or reading skills after 36 hours of instruction, or we will continue up to 12 additional hours of instruction, at no further cost.

Your child can begin to do better—today.

Learning problems don't go away by themselves. But they can be solved.

Lighter eating is latest trend

CNS Photo

The trend toward lighter eating is one of the better things that's happened in American culinary circles in recent years and this modest little book "Light Cuisine," by the editors of Sunset books and Sunset Magazine, offers many a good example why.

"Light" in the narrow sense refers to reduced calories, but the term has acquired a broader connotation and as Sunset editors interpret it, refers to a style of cooking consisting of dishes that look good, taste good and are good for you. Good for you, to take the definition a step further, means dishes that are lower in fat, cholesterol and sodium and deliver a generous amount of nutrients per calorie.

Those cursed with a recollection of the pallid and flavorless diet foods of yore needn't fear. What these dishes lack in fat and sodium, they make up in deftly combined herbs and spices and the result is definitely full flavor.

Far from being deprived, a perusal of this paperback's 112 pages and more than 150 recipes is likely to leave you with mouth-a-watering.

PARCHMENT-BAKED SHRIMP AND PESTO

¾ cup lightly packed fresh basil leaves, or 2 tablespoons dry basil and ¾ cup lightly packed parsley
⅓ cup grated Parmesan cheese
1 clove garlic, minced or pressed
3 tablespoons each olive oil and lemon juice
1½ pounds jumbo shrimp, shelled and deveined
Vegetable oil cooking spray
4 thin lemon slices
4 Nicoise or small ripe olives
Pepper

In food processor or blender, combine basil, cheese, garlic, olive oil and emon juice; whirl until smoothly pureed. Set pesto aside.

Divide shrimp into 4 equal rows, overlapping shrimp in each row slightly. Cut four sheets of cooking parchment, each about 6 inches longer than a portion of shrimp and four times as wide as narrow side. About 1 inch from edge of long side, spray each piece of parchment with cooking spray, covering an area about same size as a serving of shrimp. Arrange shrimp on sprayed area of each piece of parchment.

Top each serving with a fourth of the pesto, a lemon slice and an olive. Sprinkle lightly with pepper.

For each packet, fold edge of parchment closest to shrimp over them, then fold forward with shrimp to enclose; with cut edge of parchment down, make two folds in parchment at each open end, pressing to crease lightly and tucking ends under to hold in place. (At this point, you may refrigerate until next day.)

Place packets slightly apart, smooth side up, on a large baking sheet. Spray packets with cooking spray. Bake in a 500 degrees oven until shrimp are opaque in center (7 to 10 minutes); cut a tiny slit through parchment into shrimp to check.

Immediately transfer packets to dinner plates. To serve, cut packets down center of top with a sharp knife or scissors, then tear back parchment just enough to expose filling.

Makes 4 servings.

HERBED CARROTS AND WILD RICE

2 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 packages (12 ounces each) fresh baby carrots
⅓ cup wild rice, rinsed and drained
⅛ teaspoon white pepper
1 cup regular strength chicken broth
2 tablespoons finely chopped fresh oregano leaves or 2 teaspoons dry oregano leaves; or cup finely chopped fresh mint leaves or 2 tablespoons dry mint leaves
2 tablespoons lemon juice
Oregano, mint, or parsley sprigs

In wide frying pan, melt butter over medium-high heat. Add carrots, rice, ppper and broth. Reduce heat, cover and boil very gently until carrots and rice are tender to bite (about 30 minutes).

Add chopped oregano and lemon juice, stirring gently to blend. Transfer to a serving dish and garnish with oregano sprigs.

Makes 6 servings.

PEACH BRULEE

2 tablespoons butter or margarine, melted
2 tablespoons lemon juice
3 large ripe peaches, halved, pitted and peeled
⅓ cup blueberries
Vegetable oil cooking spray
6 tablespoons firmly packed brown sugar
Fresh mint sprigs

In a shallow bowl, mix butter and lemon juice. Turn peach halves in butter mixture, then transfer, cut side up, to large broiler pan. Fill each peach cavity with 1 tablespoon of the blueberries. Set aside.

Line large baking sheet with foil and generously spray with cooking spray. Push 1 tablespoon of brown sugar through wire sieve onto foil to make an even layer about 3 inches square; repeat, making a total of 6 squares. Broil about 6 inches below heat until sugar is melted (1 to 2 minutes); watch carefully to avoid scorching. Let cool until set but still pliable (about 30 seconds).

With a wide spatula, set a sugar square on top of each peach half. Broil about 6 inches below heat just until sugar crust drapes around peach (10 to 30 seconds). Transfer to small bowls. Garnish servings with mint and remaining berries. Serve immediately.

Makes 6 servings.

Many standard tax shelters eliminated, loony loopholes remain

Copley News Service

If you want a break on your taxes next year you may have to become a monk who sells fruitcakes by mail. So says financial reporter David Lanchner.

Writing in Money magazine, Lanchner says the new tax reform will eliminate many of the standard tax shelters — but some loony loopholes remain.

Fruitcake-baking monks will still get to claim depreciation on their baking pans. Alaskan reindeer herders who sell powdered reindeer horns as an aphrodisiac will get an automatic break because business is bad.

And finally, farmers have been given a real break. They get to claim depreciation on their pigpens and chicken coops.

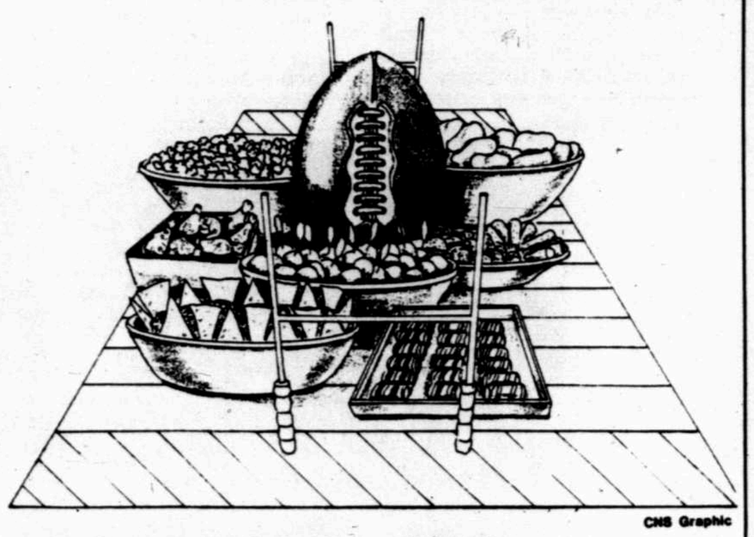
Super Bowl party snacks vary

By IRA BERKOW
New York Times News Service



CNS Graphic

NEW YORK — The question of what to serve for a Super Bowl party takes different forms. In Pasadena this Sunday, both the Giants and the Broncos will be hoping to serve the other their helmets on a platter, but that's another matter.

In homes around the country, the concern is what kinds of foods would be most appropriate and most practical for watching this pigskin encounter. The answers range from pigs-in-blankets to football-shaped tuna casseroles.

Dr. Keith Meyer, a cardiologist at Brookdale Hospital in Brooklyn, believes in Twinkies, Ring Dings, Yodels and cupcakes.

"Those are the foods you associate with being a kid," he said. "And that's what watching football is all about. Especially now, especially if you're a wild Giants fan like me, especially if you've suffered through all their bad times. Now you want to regress to childhood, to sitting on a sofa eating junk food with no table, no napkins, the food falling on the floor. It's great."

SOME GIVERS of Super Bowl parties feel that popcorn is perfect for the event, simple to prepare, easy to snatch from a bowl without missing a single tackle, fumble or end around.

"Not me; I hate to serve popcorn," said David Fisher, a writer living in Manhattan. "It gets on the rug, and people step on the kernels and you spend the rest of the week digging the stuff out."

Fisher says that besides Fritos, Cheetos and apples ("apples fill people up"), he will offer roast beef. Roast beef has no connection to football; it's just Fisher's specialty. "I make a terrific roast beef," he said. "Ask any of my friends. I'll give you their phone numbers."

Nancy Brindley says finger foods are in order — like a sliced-up five-foot hero sandwich. "So that you can pick and not have to look away from the television screen," she explained. For parties of this nature in the past, Wilda Lewis also served submarine sandwiches, but ones in which each gourmet could personally design his meal. "I keep onions on the side," she said. "Some won't eat onions because they can be offensive. Others will eat them because they can be defensive. It depends on the kind of crowd you have."

BUT LEWIS won't have a Super Bowl party this year. "Parties are supposed to be for celebration," she said. "And the pain of the last game is still too close." Lewis, alas, lives in Washington.

Meanwhile, in Chicago, a transplanted New Yorker, a psychotherapist named Howard Noel, has his own views of a gala Super Bowl party. "Proximity to food is essential, so that you can be diagramming a play and scooping up some potato salad without leaving your seat," he said.

Noel says he orders rugelach and poppy-seed cookies, and tongue, corned beef and chopped liver. "And Maalox," he said, "for a chaser."

On Super Bowl Sunday Francis Levy, a writer, will probably eat something like lamb chops. "Super Bowl? Who's playing?" he asked. "My whole philosophy is to do sports, not watch 'em. Besides that, I've never been invited to a Super Bowl party in my life. I'm on everyone's C list."

For fans, though, and those on other lists — those invited from columns A and B — Chinese food may be the order of the day. Jerry Della Femina and his wife, Judy Licht, are giving a party and having Chinese food catered.

Meyer, who watches the games with his wife, Sharon, approves. "We've often ordered Chinese food at half time," he said. "I make sure it's cold noodles with sesame sauce. The sesame sauce is very important. The spiciness helps keep you into the game."

SOME SUPER Bowls have needed an extra dollop of interest from the gustatory standpoint because the play on the field has often fallen as flat as a half-baked layer cake. It seems the game can't get close to matching the two-week hype, and then the pressure felt by both teams lends a conservative ennui to their play and their coaches' decisions.

For the fan at home there are also the commercials, at $1.2 million a minute, to contend with. Every year they seem to get longer and more numerous; and the half-time program, which generally combines a circus, a Broadway musical and scenes from World War II, to name just a few themes from years past, has a tendency to make everyone look around for food — and drink.

Preservatives still thought harmful

By VINOD CHHABRA
Hearst News Service

A few years ago a food scientist was taken to task for predicting that our enormous and growing concern over preservatives and additives in food would fizzle. The total evidence he relied on was as unscientific as you can get — the old Pendulum Principle: After all is said and done, we'll be back at the beginning.

Massive and sophisticated evidence pointed otherwise: Finally, we were informed about the perils of chemical preservatives, food dyes, red meat, sodium, caffeine. Tough new food laws were marching in. Fitness wasn't just "in," it was here to stay, drastically changing the way America ate. Surely, time would only make us more aware, more sophisticated, more concerned about what we ate and drank.

Or would it? Time has passed and it appears to have given us the slip again.

According to a recent survey by the Food Marketing Institute, people are less concerned than they were three years ago about the nutritional content of the food they and their families ate.

In 1983, 64 percent of those answering the survey were "very concerned" about that. This year, that number slipped to 58 percent. In '83, chemical preservatives were of paramount concern to 27 percent of those surveyed; this year, the figure fell to 16 percent. Concern over preservatives has dropped from 22 percent to 15 percent.

Of the eight categories — chemical additives, preservatives, freshness-purity, harmful ingredients, excess food coloring-dyes, fat content and cholesterol — concern today is down in the first six.

A 1985 study of food-consumption patterns by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Human Nutrition Information Service reveals our paradoxical eating habits. It reports: "We may eat fewer eggs and drink less whole milk, but consumption of cheese, which is high in fat and cholesterol, has never been higher. Weight concerns may have prompted Americans to eat fewer potatoes at home, but sales of frozen potatoes — primarily served fried in restaurants and fast-food outlets — have skyrocketed."

In a recent survey on food trends, Hill & Knowlton Inc., the multinational communications firm, observed: "Americans don't seem capable of being 'normal' about food. Food is more than sustenance — dieting is a way of life for millions, and quick-fix weight-loss clinics and diet products have almost irresistible appeal. Yet, sales of such 'fattening' products as croissants, chocolates, premium ice creams and frozen deserts continue to do well."

Girl Scout Cookie Sale begins Friday

From Staff Reports

About this time every year, Brownies and Girls Scouts begin ringing doorbells and this year is no exception. Begining Friday, orders will be taken for the Girl Scout Cookie Sale.

Sales will continue through Feb. 1. The cookies will be delivered in March.

The annual cookies sale is the major fund raising event of the Girl Scouts.

Proceeds are used to help operate Camp Mitre Peak, for council development, equipment, financial aid and services to the community.

The money raised also goes toward the scholarship money for camping, books and unifroms, to offer adult training and to offer the opportunity for girls to attend national events.

Varieties that will be offered this year include Shortbread, Chocolate Chip, Peanut Butter Patties, Caramel deLites, Thin Mints, Lemon Pastry Cremes and Peanut Butter Sandwiches.

WHAT'S COOKING

Prize-winning cook plans ahead

By LINDA ANDERSON
Lifestyle Writer

Hoyt Taggart, 13, is a forward-thinking young man of the '80s. A member of Midland County 4-H for about three years, Hoyt is learning to cook because "he says he will know how to take care of himself when he goes off to college," said his mother Helen Kauffman.

Though he does take some teasing about his cooking skills from adult men, most of his young friends are pleased to share in some of his culinary treats, she added.

Ms. Kauffman said her son is a very good cook who likes to grill steaks outdoors, such as, "On New Year's Eve he cooked steaks," she said.

Taggart is a seventh-grade student at Greenwood Junior High School. Inspite of his abillities in cooking skills, he said his favorite 4-H project is working with swine. "I buy them as babies and raise them for show."

The project can be profitable "if they place high enough" in the show, he said, but if the hogs aren't award winners, "you're lucky if you break even because you have to pay for all their feed" and upkeep.

Other 4-H projects Taggart participates in include leadership and citizenship. But his cooking project is his latest claim to fame.

During the recent Midland County 4-H Food Show, Taggart's recipe for Mincement Muffins with Green Tomato Mincement was named winner of the Nutritious Snacks and Desserts section, Junior II division.

Because of his local win, Taggart was able to participate in the District VI 4-H Food Show in El Paso.

The following is his prize-winning recipe:

Kent Porter/Reporter-Telegram

Hoyt Taggart

MINCEMEAT MUFFINS

2 eggs, beaten
¾ cup corn oil
¾ cup white sugar
¼ cup molasses
2 cups milk
1½ cups mincement (recipe follows)
1¼ cups white flour
1 cup whole wheat flour
1¼ cups bran
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon salt

Beat eggs with oil and sugar. Add molasses, milk and mincement; beat together. Blend in dry ingredients.

Bake in moderately hot oven (375 degrees) for 18-20 minutes, using batter as required.

Remaining batter will keep covered in refrigerator for about three weeks. Storing improves flavor.

GREEN TOMATO MINCEMEAT

1 quart green tomatoes, ground
3 pints tart apples, diced
6 cups sugar
½ cup vinegar
1 quart water
2 teaspoons salt
4 teaspoons cinnamon
2 teaspoons allspice
2 teaspoons cloves
2 pounds raisins

Mix together; bring to boil. Lower heat and cook slowly until thick. Seal in hot pint jars. Makes seven pints.

Cutlets tasty meal using any meat

By MERLE ELLIS

When I was a kid growing up in the Midwest, the word "cutlet" had a very special and specific meaning. Cutlets were always breaded with cracker crumbs, fried crisp and served with mashed potatoes and of gravy. They were also always little nuggets of pork meat that came from the temple of the pig's head or the cheek.

Cutlets of that kind are hard to find in today's marketplace, but cutlets of all other kinds are available everywhere. The term has come to mean (maybe it always did and it just took me a long time to learn) a thin slice from a solid muscle of almost any meat pounded even thinner so that it can be quickly cooked.

Certain cuts of veal, lamb, turkey, even wild game can be cut into cutlets; and they don't have to be breaded with cracker crumbs and fried crisp. Cutlets can be grilled and sauteed as well as fried, and they can be served very simply or gussied up with some simple or fancy garnish to make an endless array of different and delicious quick-to-fix dishes.

The cuts of pork that work best for cutlets and those most often found in today's meat markets are slices from the sirloin end of the pork loin. Slices from the individual muscles of the fresh leg of pork also work well. The important thing to look for in selecting meat for any cutlet is a single solid muscle with a minimum of connective tissue.

Veal top round is, in my opinion, the best cut of veal to use for cutlets. In many markets, you will find thin cuts labeled "escalopes" or "scaloppine."

In English cookery, a "lamb cutlet" is what we call a "lamb rib chop." Cut with a single rib in each, pounded so the meat is no thicker than the rib bone, then breaded with fine crumbs and quickly fried in butter, it makes a wonderful meat dish. Another cut of lamb that makes an excellent cutlet is the top round muscle from the leg.

Most cuts of wild game animals, deer, elk, antelope, etc., are a little too tough to make cutlets. Game animals get a lot of exercise and that toughens the meat. The only muscles of wild game animals that qualify for cutlets are the top loin and the tenderloin; all the rest really require moist heat cooking.

Turkey breast slices make great cutlets. As a matter of fact, according to a spokesman for a company that exports millions of turkeys to Italy annually, many of the traditional veal cutlet dishes served in Italy are made from turkey cutlets.

Cooking cutlets of any kind is simplicity itself. They are marvelously easy and fast. Indeed, if they are cooked too long they are not at their best. They can be grilled quickly over hot coals or on a gas or electric grill; they can be sauteed in butter or oil (again, quickly) and served very simply with nothing more than a simple salad, or they can be breaded and fried.

Here are a few cutlet cooking ideas named for the various garnishes with which they are cooked. Remember that the type of meat used is largely interchangeable, depending upon personal preference and the price of meat in the marketplace.

Unless stated to the contrary, the cutlets can be grilled, fried or sauteed acording to taste. Where the word "coat" occurs, it means that the cutlets are coated with crumbs of some type. To coat cutlets, dip the meat first in seasoned flour, then in beaten egg and finally in breadcrumbs, crackercrumbs, chopped nuts or whatever is appropriate:

■ Aux concombres — Saute cutlets in butter and serve with rings of peeled cucumber which have also been sauteed in butter. Use any cutlet.

■ Cordon bleu — Saute cutlets in butter, top with a thin slice of ham and one of Swiss cheese when nearly cooked and run under the broiler to melt the cheese. Good with veal, pork or turkey.

■ Financiere — Fry or grill cutlets and serve with sauteed onions and carrots, wonderful with lamb or game cutlets, but good with all.

■ Florentine — Coat cutlets with breadcrumbs mixed with a little grated Parmesan cheese. Fry and serve on a bed of creamed spinach. Use veal, pork or turkey cutlets.

■ Holstein — Coat cutlets with breadcrumbs, fry and garnish with slices of hard-cooked egg, anchovy fillets and capers.

Cookbook features foods from Bible

By JUDY SHEPARD

Pomegranate walnut duck, grilled cornish hens with mint garlic marinade, grilled breast of duck with rose vinegar, arugola rose salad.

These are exotic, luscious foods, but this is not the menu from the newest trendy restaurant. The foods listed here are ancient recipes from the best-selling book of all time — the Bible.

"The Good Book Cookbook," by Naomi Goodman, Robert Marcus and Susan Woolhandler, should itself be a bestseller. It is a work of impressive research and imagination.

The authors studied ancient scriptural passages, archeological sources, biblical commentaries, classical writing and the history of agriculture and food in the Middle East. They consulted biblical scholars and culinary experts. And what they have come up with is an informative, unusual cookbook with an international, ecumenical flavor: it includes Persian, Egyptian, Mesopotamian, Greek, Roman, Jewish and Christian feast menus and foods.

ROAST BEEF

3 leeks, chopped, or 1 bunch green onions, chopped
1 tablespoon whole or coarse-grained mustard
2 bay leaves, crumbled
⅛ teaspoon thyme
2 tablespoons sweet red wine or grape juice
1 3-pound roast beef

Mash leeks or onions, herbs, and wine or grape juice into paste and rub over meat. Place on rack in preheated 400 degree oven. Turn heat down to 350 degrees and roast 15 minutes per pound for rare, 17 for medium, 20 for well done.

RAISIN, BARLEY AND APRICOT PUDDING

1 cup barley
2 cups water
½ cup dried apricots
½ cup white raisins
½ cup dark raisins
¼ cup honey
½ teaspoon powdered ginger
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
Yogurt

Cook barley in 1 cup water for 30 minutes. Drain. In large bowl, cover apricots and raisins with 1 cup water and let sit for 10 minutes. Add partially cooked barley, honey and spices. Blend well. Pour mixture into oiled baking pan, dot with butter and bake at 350 degrees for 40 minutes. Serve warm or cold, topped with yogurt.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 ♠	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ten of ♡

When planning your play, take into account that your opponents are likely to come up with the most effective defense. Then see if you can put that fact to good use.

South's opening bid was artificial and forcing, and his rebid showed a balanced hand of 25-27 points. North was delighted to pass.

West's lead of the top of his sequence is better than a spade away from the queen, which might cost a trick. Declarer could count eight fast tricks and, although he could set up a ninth trick in diamonds, it was odds-against his ever being able to use it—as long as the defender with the ace in the suit had it guarded at least twice, a holdup play would thwart use of the extra trick.

However, the fact that the opponents would have to hold up the ace for one round meant that declarer could force an entry to dummy in diamonds. He could use that to cash a long spade if that suit split evenly. But declarer saw that playing on clubs offered a much better chance for the game-going trick.

After winning the opening lead, declarer immediately ducked a club. West's nine won and he did as well as he could by continuing with a heart, declarer continued with the ace of clubs and then overtook the jack of diamonds with the table's queen. East could not afford to win that trick, so declarer used his entry to dummy to lead a club toward the jack. The defenders had no recourse.

Observe that declarer's line would succeed not only as the cards lie, but also if clubs were 3-3 or if either defender held a doubleton K-Q. Or if the ace of diamonds were singleton or doubleton.

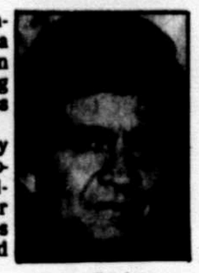
Cash to ride 'Freedom Train' in honor of nation's veterans



Cash

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Johnny Cash will participate in a "Freedom Train" traveling from Memphis to Baltimore honoring veterans, says the singer's business manager.

Cash will attend a rally Saturday in Memphis to announce the project, along with retired Gen. William C. Westmoreland, former commander of the United States forces in Vietnam, officials said Tuesday.

Henry Harrison of Jackson, an organizer, said the "Freedom Train," made up of a railroad locomotive and 15 cars, will leave Memphis on Memorial Day and wind up in Baltimore June 14, Flag Day.

Cash's business manager, Reba Hancock, said Cash hasn't decided whether he'll ride the train the entire two weeks.

LONDON (AP) — Princess Diana told a 15-year-old boy during a hospital visit that she wasn't clever enough to play Trivial Pursuit.

"I asked her if she wanted a question and she said 'No thanks, I'm as thick as a plank,'" Justian Miles said Tuesday. "She said William and Harry had lots of games at home and she spent most of her time reading the instructions. She found them harder than the games."

Prince William, 4, and Prince Harry, 2, are the sons of Diana and Prince Charles.

The princess met Justian, who suffers from cystic fibrosis, while visiting Tadworth Court, a hospital in Surrey.

Glenn

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (AP) — Sen. John Glenn, the Ohio Democrat who was the first American astronaut to orbit Earth, is to receive the Harry S. Truman Public Service Award.

The award will be presented May 8, the 103rd anniversary of the late president's birth, at the Truman Library and Museum as part of a celebration of Truman week in Truman's hometown, Mayor Barbara Potts said Tuesday.

"He was chosen primarily because of his vision toward the future, a quality which characterized Harry Truman," she said.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Singers Janie Frickie and Larry Gatlin are country music's newest duo, teaming up on the song "From Time to Time (It Feels Like Love Again)" on Gatlin's latest album, "Partners."

The song will be released as a single in the spring, said Terry O'Neill, a spokesman for a public relations agency representing Gatlin.

Gatlin normally sings with his brothers, Steve and Rudy.

Ms. Frickie was voted female vocalist of the year in 1982 and 1983 by the Country Music Association. Her hits include "Tell Me a Lie" and "He's a Heartache."

NEW YORK (AP) — Former NBC News President Reuven Frank has signed a new contract to produce two documentaries for the network.

"We have committed ourselves to producing at least 15 prime-time news specials this year and a comparable number next year, the largest number on prime-time television," NBC News President Lawrence K. Grossman said Tuesday in announcing Frank's contact.

Frank, who joined NBC in 1950, has twice been president of NBC News, from 1968 to 1973 and from 1982 to 1984. "I am pleased to be part of this renewed emphasis on prime-time news programs at NBC. It's an exciting challenge," he said.

Hedgecock

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Former Mayor Roger Hedgecock, free on appeal of conspiracy and perjury convictions, celebrated his first anniversary as a radio talk show host looking foward to a bright future on the air.

"For me, this has been an unexpectedly wonderful year," Hedgecock, 40, said on the anniversary Tuesday. "Not only am I getting more comfortable and personally enjoying the show more, but the feedback has been wonderful, both from public and the station."

KSDO-AM hired Hedgecock after he resigned as mayor. He was sentenced to a year in county custody and three years' probation on his felony convictions related to a plot to illegally finance his 1983 election.

He was initially signed to a one-year contract at an estimated $60,000 salary, with a two-year option. The option was picked up with what Hedgecock said was "a substantial increase in money," which he refused to disclose.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Three works from American composers will receive world premieres with the Philadelphia Orchestra to commemorate the 200th anniversary of the signing of the U.S. Constitution.

The Constitutional Commission works are Milton Babbitt's "Transfigured Notes," Steven Stucky's Concerto for Orchestra and a work by Nicholas Thorne, the orchestra said Tuesday.

It said also that conductor Ricardo Muti is taking a respite from concert operas during the orchestra's 1987-88 season.

Muti, in his eighth season with the orchestra, also is musical director at the La Scala opera house in Italy. He said he would conduct a program of three major choral works with soloists and the Westminster Choir next season.

PEKING (AP) — Robert Winter, an American expatriate who taught Shakespeare and the English language to young Chinese for more than 60 years, died last week at the age of 100, the China Daily said Wednesday.

The report said Winter, a Peking University professor, would be buried Wednesday at the Babaoshan Revolutionary Cemetery, where many well-known Chinese leaders are buried.

Winter grew up in rural Indiana and attended Wabash College, where he studied under poet Ezra Pound.

He later studied at the Sorbonne in Paris and in Italy, taught romance languages at Wabash, Northwestern and the University of Chicago and in 1923 moved to China to teach at Southeastern University in Nanjing.

Several years later he went to Peking to develop the first full-fledged English literature and language program in China at the new Qinghua University.

Winter was one of the few Western scholars to remain in Peking after 1937 when war started with Japan, and he said in interviews that he risked his life to prevent the Japanese from plundering the libraries and laboratories at Qinghua.

He was also said to be active in smuggling guns and radios to communist forces outside Peking.

Mojo steals Lee's Chap magic

Panthers ice Rebels, 66-53

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Ice Station Zebra, formerly known as Chaparral Center, proved not to be the friendly confines for the Midland Lee Rebels Tuesday night and Odessa Permian coach Charles Pattillo is certainly glad.

Going into Tuesday's game Pattillo's Mojo squads had won just two games in his eight years of coaching at Chap Center and that includes games with both Lee and Midland High.

But No. 3 was added to the books Tuesday as Permian won, 66-53, as Lee went into an Arctic deep freeze that may take until spring to thaw.

The Rebs took their shots — 77 of them to be exact, but only 20 found the hole the ball is supposed to go through. Folks, that's a meager 26 percent from the field.

Even worse was a 19 percent shooting eye in the first half, including a 2-of-17 effort in the first quarter. Strange enough, Permian only held a six-point, 27-21 lead at the half as the Panthers couldn't connect at the free throw line, hitting only 5-of-12 in the first half.

So, while Permian had a tough time putting the "I-can't-hit-a-thing' Rebels away, the job was finally done in the fourth quarter when Permian hit its first six shots from the field to forge a 16-point lead. Game. Set. Match.

"I'm really pleased," said Pattillo. "This place has been tough on us and it was tough again until the fourth quarter. I guess some of our kids decided they could shoot here. It's a beautiful place to play, but it hasn't been kind to us. We have to play again here in the second half and I hope we can do the same thing to Midland High."

AT LEAST Permian's Gregg Peacock likes playing at the Chap. Peacock went on a career tear with 21 points, hitting 10-of-14 shots from the field. Todd Evans contributed 17 points and Lance Watkins, Permian's leading scorer, added 17. In all, Pattillo used only six of his 14 players all night.

The week just wasn't kind to Lee. The Rebels tried everything in the world to get ready for the District 4-5A leader. They scheduled a game with Plainview last Saturday in order to play at Chaparral Center. Snow washed that one away. They practiced Monday at the Chap. However, nothing worked Tuesday night.

Even Broncos are praising Giant defense

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

PASADENA, Calif. — Like Marc Antony, everyone seems to have come to the Super Bowl to praise the New York Giants' defense. After all, it has buried just about everyone this season.

Even the Denver Broncos, who will play the Giants in Sunday's Super Bowl, have nothing but nice things to say about New York's overpowering defense.

Still, there is this little matter of the Giant secondary, which supposedly is the vulnerable part of a unit that ranked second in the National Football League in total defense and first against the run.

"They say we're the weak link?" cornerback Elvis Patterson said with a look filled with doubt. "If we're the weak link, then go ahead and expose us. Nobody has done it yet.

"We will scratch and claw and kick and fight and do whatever it takes to win. This is the biggest game of our careers."

Patterson clearly recalls that Denver quarterback John Elway threw for 336 yards against New York on Nov. 23. He also remembers that the Giants won the game 19-16.

"Elway presents every problem in the world," Patterson said. "He can do it all. He can even throw the ball 50 yards in the air when he is laying down. He's very mobile or he can sit in the pocket and he is a very accurate passer.

"When he is rolling or scrambling, he causes a problem. Their guys can get behind you. But we didn't let it happen last time. Their receivers know that they will be hit when he gets out of protection because the rules let us. They are live game when he is scrambling and we will be hitting them."

Lamesa's domination ends

Mustangs snap Tors' 61-game 2-4A streak

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

LAMESA — It had to end sometime, but when it did, no one expected it to end like this, certainly not Lamesa coach Wayne Roberts.

The Tornadoes' vaunted 61-game District 2-4A winning streak came to a sudden halt Tuesday night and it wasn't even close as Andrews, Roberts' alma mater, stunned the Tors, 74-56.

"That's the thing about winning streaks, they have to come to an end," Roberts said in the aftermath of his first home loss since taking over in the 1982-83 season. "Andrews is a great ball club, they played exceptionally well. They were a better team tonight."

ANDREWS, WHICH narrowly missed breaking Lamesa's string in a pair of one-point losses to the Tors last season, left plenty of room for error in this one, but they didn't need it.

The Mustangs, 8-0, 20-3, sprang out to first quarter leads of 6-0, 10-4 and 16-6 on the way to an 18-10 advantage after eight minutes. That early lead proved enough as Lamesa, playing without its leading scorer Cedric Mason, never drew closer than six points (45-39 midway into the third quarter), and fell behind by as much as 20 on two occasions.

Andrews (74): Mike Moisant 4-6 1-2 3 9, Gym Bice 3-5 0-0 3 6, Damon Clay 7-17 6-8 4 20, Bernard Williams 14-19 3-4 2 31, Louis Clay 1-5 0-2 5 2, Mark Burgen 3-3 0-1 4 6, Robert Reighter 0-0 0-0 0 0, Jeff Pino 0-0 0-0 0 0. Totals 32-55 10-17 21 74.

Lamesa (56): Dwight Mason 7-13 2-3 1 16, Carl Pennington 4-21 5-7 5 13, Mark Aldridge 3-10 1-4 2 7, Jimmy Scott 6-13 1-2 5 13, Charley Edwards 0-1 0-2 3 0, Lance Jarrett 1-4 1-3 0 3, Ilya Scott 2-3 0-0 1 4. Totals 23-65 10-21 17 56.

Score by quarters:

Andrews	18	19	16	21—74
Lamesa	10	15	16	15—56

JV Score: Lamesa 77, Andrews 75, 2OT

"I feel real good about this game, mainly because a lot of our young men are the same ones that were a part of those tough games last year," said Mustang coach Frank Bice. "It's fun to see all the hard work we've put in pay off in a big win like this."

Andrews' flashy scoring prodigy Bernard Williams led the way with 12 first quarter points in a flurry of 18-foot jump shots, power moves under the basket and coast-to-coast, one-on-one flourishes.

Williams, who finished with 31 points on a 14-of-19 shooting performance, was also a demon on the boards as he pulled down a game-high 14 rebounds. The 6-0 senior was simply too much for the Tors to handle.

"It feels great, this win means a whole lot for us," Williams said. "We haven't beaten them in the three years I've played varsity, but we just came out and played hard. We were ready."

ANDREWS NOW sits alone in District 2-4A for the first time since winning the district title in 1981-82. And for the first time since Roberts took over for O.W. Follis in 1982-83, the Tors aren't sitting at the top.

"The kids took it pretty hard, they hate to lose, and when you lose to Andrews, an arch rival, it's particularly bad," Roberts said. "We just weren't able to shut down Bernard Williams and Damon Clay, they were the two keys to the game."

Without Mason, the youngest of three Mason brothers to play for Roberts, the Tors never got untracked offensively. Through the first 22 games, Lamesa was shooting better than 50 percent from the floor. Against Andrews, the Tors misfired, hitting just 35 percent.

BOB BRUNDAGE

Why fix something that isn't broken?

Brundage

Governing bodies are going to ruin organized sports yet. They keep thinking they have to fix something that isn't broken.

Since this is basketball season, let's start there. The most obvious idiocy to hit the college courts isn't the three-point play, but the radius of the bonus shot — 19 feet, 9 inches. That, isn't a bonus, it's a charity.

The diameter of the collegiate three-pointer touches the top of the key, an oft-used spot to shoot from with or without the extra point. A lot of coaches have been quoted the past few months as saying "I like a three-point shot, but at 21 feet ..."

So much for one of the NCAA rules...

High schools aren't immune to the dumb calls of their governing bodies any more than their older brothers in college. Ask any coach about the new technical foul for standing up.

Ask Midland High's Jack Stephenson. I've noticed two Ts he's caught this year, which is more than I can remember the past two or three seasons. And, I haven't seen that many MHS box scores. Who knows how many others I've missed.

And, it isn't just the coaches who laugh at the UIL's new rule. One official has been heard to apologize to a coach after a recent game "I had no choice, coach. They're grading us and we have to call it."

There was real sorrow in his voice.

How about the eight-hour rule and No-Pass, No-Play? Both need a lot of adjustments. I may have overlooked some stories since the eight-hour rule was adopted, but I can't remember anyone being caught abusing its timetables. That is understandable. After all, we all know there is no bending of the rules in athletics.

Moving along ... How about pro football? The most recent change is the use of instant replay. I'm not so sure I like the rule, especially the way the NFL chooses to apply it ... slowly.

It's bad enough that the fan at home or in the stands has to sit through television timeouts. Now they have to watch players stand around several minutes while officials review the same play. Then, they give us the call: Play stands.

In something like 400 plays the replay officials have checked this season, they've reversed about 40 calls. That's only 10 percent.

Even then, the call isn't always right or is misunderstood. Remember the call that went against the Denver Broncos this year on a double pass. The field officials said it was an illegal double pass when, replay showed it was really a legal lateral-pass. However, the call from the booth was misunderstood and the penalty stood.

America's sport is also suspect for its rule changes, primarily the designated hitter in the American League. That one rule makes AL managers inferior strategists to their NL counterparts: Do you pinch hit for the pitcher or let him go?

The DH puts AL pitchers at a disadvantage in NL parks during the World Series. They hardly know what a bat looks like, much less how to use one.

These are but a few rules that I find laughable and there are many, many more I haven't mentioned. If you need further proof, sit down and read a Major League rule book some time. You'll find plenty of sections that bring a smile to your face.

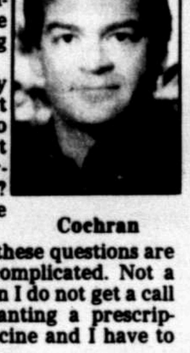
The winning edge of steroids can carry a 'grave' price



Cochran

It seems that everyday there is something on TV or in the newspapers about some athlete taking steroids.

What is really happening? What are steroids? Who takes them? What are the undesirable side effects? Why do people take them?

The answers to these questions are simple, and yet complicated. Not a week goes by when I do not get a call from someone wanting a prescription for this medicine and I have to disappoint them.

Steroids are naturally occurring substances inside of our bodies. They are hormones and can be divided into three basic classes. 1) The mineralocorticoids, 2) the corticosteroids and 3) the sex hormones.

THE TYPE of steroids athletes are interested in are the sex hormones, particularly the male hormone testosterone. This is the substance that is responsible for the development of secondary sexual characteristics in the male.

Contrast the build and appearance of a 10-year-old boy to an 18-year-old young man — that's what testerone does. It changes hair development, bulks muscle tissue, increases sexual drive and increases aggressiveness.

So who takes steroids?

1) Probably the majority of professional athletes who depend on raw strength in their sport.

2) A large number of collegiate athletes who depend on raw strength in their sport.

3) A number of high school athletes who depend on raw strength in their sport.

4) Serious amateur athletes who depend on raw strength in their sport.

GET THE picture? We have a full scale epidemic on our hands. The typical athlete takes steroids in doses ranging from 10-100 times the normal theraputic dose. No one knows the extent of the long term health implications.

Do not get the wrong idea. People taking steroids are different than people who use illicit drugs such as marijuana and cocaine. The athlete, no matter how misguided, is trying to improve himself.

STEROIDS HAVE some very undesirable side effects.

a) Baldness; b) Sterility; c) Premature closure of growth plates (young people who have not reached full growth stop growing); d) Lack of sexual interest; e) Liver damage; f) Development of breast tissue in men (atrophy in women); g) Testicular atrophy (the male's testicles shrink to almost nothing); h) Cancer (we think); and i) Death (we know).

I have seen, or know first hand, of patients with every one of the above complications. For completeness sake, I should mention that women who take steroids have the same complications in general, except they tend to acquire severe hormonal imbalances.

The question left to be answered is why do people expose themselves to such risk and danger? I think the answer resides in our expectations of athletes.

They are supposed to win. Each individual athlete wants to be stronger and better than the guy he is competing against. If the guard across the line has been taking steroids, then he is going to be stronger, you can bet on that.

If everyone else is taking them and you are not, then you are going to lose. This is the bain of athletics today.

I believe the solution lies in the coaches, the trainers, the team physicians and in the athletes themselves. We have to develop a drug-free sports environment.

If we can arouse the same kind of disgust for drugs as we have for errant acts of unsportsmanlike behavior, then we may have a chance. A competitive edge is one thing, death is another. I do not intend to turn a blind eye to athletes taking steroids, I am trying to understand.

That is the only way I can do my part in getting them to quit.

Bobcats alone in second place

From Staff Reports

District 4-5A

San Angelo's Bobcats took over sole possession of second place in the District 4-5A basketball race Tuesday night with a narrow 60-59 road victory over Abilene Cooper.

Cooper had beaten Midland Lee and Odessa Permian in back-to-back games to move into a challenging district role, but couldn't get over the hump Tuesday against San Angelo.

The Bobcats are now 3-1 in loop play while Cooper is 2-2, tied for third with both Lee and Midland High.

Cooper got the last shot of the game in an effort to win, but Jay Estes' shot missed with eight seconds left in the game. San Angelo got the margin of victory with 1:54 left in the game when Kirk Albright hit two free throws for the 60-59 margin.

Permian's 66-53 win over Lee leaves Permian alone in first place with a 4-1 league record.

San Angelo's Chris Lowry paved the way with 20 points while Scott Marshall had 19. Doug Starr of Cooper led all scorers with 22 while Scotty Pugh had 16 and Estes 11.

In the only other district game Tuesday, Abilene High got its first league win with a 64-61 overtime road win against Odessa High. The Eagles are now 1-3 in league play while OHS is 1-4.

Pat Garrett paced the AHS win with 17 points while OHS got 17 from Edward Rheams. The Eagles outscored the Bronchos by an 8-5 margin in the overtime period.

Midland High was open and the 2-2 Bulldogs will host Odessa High Friday while Lee travels to San Angelo and Abilene High and Cooper fight it out in Abilene. Permian is open Friday.

SB XXI —

New York's defensive record is built mainly on its sensational linebackers and strong front line, which applies extreme pressure on quarterbacks and shuts down rushing games. The Broncos don't run very well, anyway, which means Elway often will be testing Patterson, fellow cornerbacks Perry Williams and Mark Collins and safeties Kenny Hill and Herb Welch.

"We're confident in ourselves and in the guys surrounding us," Williams said. "We know if we are one step off of their receivers, we are in for a long day. When most quarterbacks start to scramble, the receivers cut off their routes and come back to help out. Denver's guys go deep. If we take a nap for even a second, they can hurt you."

Greenwood claims pair from Crane

By LANCE STEWART
MRT Correspondent

GREENWOOD — The Greenwood basketball program exploded Tuesday night as both the Rangers and Rangerettes blew the Crane Golden Cranes off the court, winning 52-42 and 56-27 respectively.

Neither game, by any definition was close, as Greenwood's ladies KO'd the Lady Cranes with an awesome display of teamwork and hustle, and more than doubled Crane's score.

The Rangerettes are working on all cylinders now as they threaten to cruise through the District 4-3A season without a loss.

Cheryl Martin, a starter since day one, is one of the jewels of this Rangerette team. She was the game's top scorer with 14 points, shooting 100 percent from the free throw line where she netted six of her points.

Stephanie Smith also had a hand in the victory, as she has throughout the season, coming only one point shy of Martin with a 13-point effort.

THROUGHOUT THE game the Rangerettes' defensive hustle dominated the court and led the way to a 4-0 district record, 17-3 overall. Crane fell to 1-2 in 4-3A play.

Crane's Jan Johnson came up with some big plays to finish with nine points, but it was like blowing into a hurricane as her occasional spurts of brilliance were too few and far between to turn the tide.

Sarita Hair also made a good effort with eight points, but was likewise overwhelmed by the Rangerettes' vicious defense of the net.

There was never any doubt as to who would go home with this one, as the Rangerettes exploded with a quick unanswered six to gain a lead they would never lose.

THE GREENWOOD boys found the going a little tougher on the way to their first district win, but the outcome was no less decisive as they beat the Cranes, 52-42.

This one was a teeth-grinder on occasion, as the Rangers led by as much as 10 at one time, only to be tied minutes later.

Crane's twin towers, Robert Morris and Leslie Harmon, guarded the net possessively, but were hurt by the shooting ability of the much smaller Rangers.

Harmon came up with 16 points as well as many rebounds, but this did not intimidate the Rangers, who fought for the baseline as well as any team of six-footers.

The majority of Greenwood's points came from Brian Morgan (16), Tommy Lawson (13), Randy Donnell (9), and Glen Teal (8), who saw most of the night's action at the boards. Mark Graham, who ironically ended up with no points on the evening, led this attack with his quick feet and constant inside feed, amounting to innumerable assists.

After gaining a 10-point lead in the middle of the fourth period, the Rangers had to stave off a last ditch attempt by the Cranes. Crane came within four before being put down for the count with the loss of Morris due to fouls and the time-consuming dribbling of Greenwood's Graham.

Crane's Ronnie Martindale ended the game with a swan-song toss for the basket in the final second which, like the Crane game plan, missed by some distance.

Greenwood, now 1-3 on the boys side in District 4-3A, hosts Alpine Friday night. Crane's boys fell to 1-3.

All-Star right fielder Keven Bass and two other players for the Houston Astros, the 1986 NL West champions, are seeking pay raises, salary arbitration figures show.

The Astros have offered Bass $560,000 for the 1987 season, up $250,000 from the $310,000 paid in 1986. But Bass, who finished fourth among NL batting leaders last year with a .311 average, is asking for $630,000.

Second baseman Bill Doran — who led the team in stolen bases and walks, 42 and 81 respectively — is seeking a raise from $550,000 to $825,000. The club is offering $625,000.

Third baseman Denny Walling has requested an increase from $366,667 to $595,000 after hitting .312 with 13 home runs and 58 RBI in a part-time role. The Astros have offered $450,000.

General Manager Dick Wagner said he plans to talk with agents for Bass, Doran and Walling within the next few days about the raises...

From Wire Reports

A survey of NFL franchises reveals 20 of 28 will oppose free agency during collective bargaining talks Thursday.

The NFLPA is expected to include free agency as one of eight objectives it expects to accomplish in the talks.

However, a Fort Worth Star-Telegram survey shows management remains vehemently opposed to surrendering the right of first refusal and allowing players to change teams without compensation.

The Miami Dolphins hired Cleveland Browns assistant coach Tom Olivadotti as defensive coach to help turn around the team's faltering defense, Coach Don Shula announced Tuesday.

Three-year defensive coordinator Chuck Studley was reassigned to coach the linebackers, working primarily on the defense against the run, Shula said.

In another move, Shula said that Bob Matheson, linebacker coach for the past four years, resigned after learning he would not get the top defensive coaching job...

Basketball

Texas A&M's Winston Crite and Texas' Andrea Lloyd were named Tuesday as SWC men's and women's Players of the Week.

Crite averaged 16.7 points, 7.3 rebounds and four blocked shots a game in helping the Aggies to a perfect 3-0 week. Texas A&M recorded victories over Texas, Texas Tech and Houston. Crite's best game of the three came against Texas Tech on Jan. 17 when he scored 23 points, grabbed five rebounds and blocked four shots in A&M's 62-60 victory.

Lloyd had two outstanding games. Against the Aggies, she tossed in 19 points and collected 15 rebounds, five steals and had two blocked shots to help Texas to a 94-60 triumph. Saturday, she contributed 20 points, 16 rebounds, five assists, a steal and two blocks in a 91-50 defeat of SMU.

Edberg, Lendl gain Australian Open semifinals

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Defending champion Stefan Edberg of Sweden and top-seeded Ivan Lendl powered their way Wednesday into the men's semifinals of the $1.65 million Australian Open tennis championships at Kooyong.

Edberg, 21, romped to a 6-1, 6-4, 6-4 victory over sixth-seeded Miloslav Mecir of Czechoslovakia in a match that was interrupted by rain for almost an hour early in the second set.

Lendl, seeking his first grass court Grand Slam title, posted a 7-6, 6-1, 6-3 triumph over No. 9 Anders Jarryd of Sweden.

Also advancing to the men's semifinals was giant-killer Wally Masur of Australia, who stopped New Zealand's Kelly Evernden 6-3, 7-5, 6-4 in a battle of unseeded players. On Tuesday, Masur shocked two-time Wimbledon champion Boris Becker of West Germany.

In the last quarterfinal pairing, 11th-seeded Pat Cash of Australia eliminated No. 3 Yannick Noah of France 6-4, 6-2, 2-6, 6-0. Cash next will meet Lendl.

With both Cash and Masur posting victories, it is the first time since 1980 that Australia has had two players reach the men's semifinals. In 1980, Kim Warwick and Peter McNamara were semifinalist, with Warwick advancing to the final where he lost to American Brian Teacher.

Lendl now has a 7-1 career record against Jarryd.

"I'm winning and not making too many errors, so I have to be satisfied," said the 26-year-old Lendl, who makes his home in Greenwich, Conn.

"I said at the start of the tournament that I had a good chance to win it, and nothing has changed my mind."

Edberg, who defeated fellow Swede Mats Wilander in the last Australian Open final, held in December 1985, combined power and placement in racing into the Final Four of the first Grand Slam event of the year. He dropped just two points on serve in the first set and only six in the second.

Edberg got an early break in third set, but Mecir, a finalist in the U.S. Open last September, came right back, breaking the champion to level the set 2-2.

The Swede, however, broke back in the next game and was never again under pressure.

Edberg's win seemed almost effortless. He has dropped only one set in four matches in reaching the semifinals.

The victory was his first in three meetings with Mecir on grass and his second in five career clashes.

"I played well and served particularly well, and that is the key to my game," Edberg said.

"At Wimbledon I tried to hit winners off his serves all the time. Here, I just tried to keep the ball in court and it worked.

"He hasn't got that great a serve."

Edberg will face Masur in the semifinals on Friday.

Tait's bucket saves Clemsons' record

College Roundup

Associated Press

Georgia Tech Coach Bobby Cremins knew what to expect, but 10th-ranked Clemson didn't follow the script.

"We triple-teamed (Horace) Grant," Cremins said. "We knew they were going to him."

The Tigers did go to Grant, who quickly whipped a pass to Michael Tait in the right corner, and Tait drilled an 18-footer with four seconds left to give unbeaten Clemson a 67-66 victory in an Atlantic Coast Conference basketball game Tuesday night.

The game was the only one involving a member of the AP Top-20.

It was the 17th consecutive victory this season for the unbeaten Tigers, who went to 4-0 in the ACC for the first time in their history.

"It's a win I'll cherish for a long time," Tigers Coach Cliff Ellis said. "This is early in the ACC season and it's still a long ways to go. We're not made up of a bunch of superstars, but I think the chemistry on this club is good."

Tait's game-winner on the pass from Grant came after Tech, 9-5 overall and 1-2 in the conference, had taken a 66-65 lead on Tom Hammonds' basket with 1:55 to play.

Clemson failed to score on its next possession and Tech had a chance to build a three-point lead, but Bruce Dalrymple was called for charging with 49 seconds to go.

The Tigers ran down the clock, hit Grant on the inside and the center found Tait alone in the right corner.

"The play was designed to go to me but three guys collapsed on me," Grant said. "I feel anybody with any basketball knowledge isn't going to take the shot with three guys on him. I saw Michael and kicked it out to him."

Other Games

Providence 92, Miami, Fla. 88

Providence set school records for 3-point field goals attempted and made as the visiting Friars canned 14 of 31 long jumpers to beat Miami. Billy Donovan, who scored a career-high 38 points, made six of 17 3-pointers as the Friars improved to 13-3. Eric Brown's 27 points led the Hurricanes, 8-9.

Boston College 79, Seton Hall 75

For the second time this season, the Pirates were unable to win after upending Georgetown. Last month, Seton Hall fell to Connecticut the game after beating Georgetown.

Dana Barros scored 30 points to lead Boston College, 8-7, which snapped a four-game losing streak and won its first Big East Conference game after losing four. James Major's 21 points led the Pirates, 11-5 and 2-5, in the game played at Brendan Byrne Arena.

Louisville 84, Virginia Tech 62

Herbert Crook scored 22 points and Pervis Ellison scored 16 points and grabbed a career-high 18 rebounds as Louisville registered the homecourt Metro Conference victory.

The Cardinals, 9-8 and 2-1, took an 18-4 lead with a 17-0 burst as Ellison and Crook scored 10 of the points. The closest Virginia Tech, 6-10 and 2-2, could get in the second half was 50-41. Wally Lancaster led the Hokies with 24 points.

Kansas 71, Missouri 70

At Lawrence, Chris Piper's foul shot with five seconds remaining gave the Jayhawks the Big Eight victory. Piper missed the second free throw but Danny Manning rebounded the miss.

Kansas, which fell from the Top Twenty this week for the first time this season, spoiled Missouri's chance at the school's 1,000th victory as well as Tigers' Coach Norm Stewart's 52nd birthday.

Iowa St. 91, Nebraska 75

Iowa State shot 75 percent from the field in the second half and 62 percent for the game as it cruised to the home Big Eight victory.

Jeff Grayer and Tom Schafer each scored 27 points for the Cyclones, 10-6 and 2-1. Iowa State led 43-32 at halftime and the Cornhuskers, 11-6 and 1-2, never got closer than eight the rest of the way. Brian Carr led Nebraska with 21 points.

S. Colorado 83, Panhandle St. 79

Southern Colorado's Guy Taylor won the night's one-man show award.

Taylor, who scored 30 points, tied the game in regulation to force overtime. He scored all eight of the Indians' points in the first overtime and then he hit two 3-pointers in the second overtime to give Southern Colorado the victory.

Minnesota goalie blanks Sabres, 5-0

NHL

Associated Press

Minnesota goalie Don Beaupre turned in the North Stars' first shutout since last March. Still, he wasn't satisfied.

"I don't think it was my best game of the season," Beaupre said after Minnesota crushed the Buffalo Sabres 5-0 Tuesday night. "I didn't feel real good going into the game. I felt sluggish."

Buffalo center Doug Smith disagreed. "He was hot and played a super game," Smith said.

Beaupre also was in net for Minnesota's last shutout, a 4-0 victory over the Edmonton Oilers on March 11, 1986. He now has three career shutouts.

"We did a great job against their power play," Beaupre said as the Sabres were 0-for-8 with the man advantage. "Killing those penalties off won us the game."

Bruins 5, Nordiques 3

Two power-play goals by Charlie Simmer led Boston to its third victory in as many visits this season to the Colisee in Quebec.

Simmer got his 16th goal at 7:46 of the first period. His second of the game, at 11:08 of the middle period, made it 3-1. Thomas Gradin's eighth goal, a shorthanded tally at 14:10, gave the Bruins a 4-1 lead.

Keith Crowder and Rick Middleton had Boston's other goals against Clint Malacrchuk, who faced only 17 shots.

Flames 3, Islanders 1

Al MacInnis and Joey Mullen scored from long range as Calgary broke a four-game losing streak by winning on Long Island.

MacInnis scored early in the first period and Mullen early in the third as the Flames dominated the ineffective Islanders from start to finish. Former Islander John Tonelli added a power-play goal late in the third period against goaltender Billy Smith.

Capitals 6, Devils 3

Mike Gartner's shorthanded goal snapped a 2-2 tie in the second period and Washington went on to defeat New Jersey.

The Caps, sixth and last in the Patrick Division just last Saturday, moved past the New York Rangers and took over third place by winning their fourth game in six days.

Thorpe still hot, leads Kings past Warriors, 123-114

NBA Roundup

Associated Press

Sacramento forward Otis Thorpe is on a roll as he nears the halfway point of his third NBA season.

On Monday, Thorpe won his first NBA Player of the Week award. He followed it up by scoring 19 points and grabbing 11 rebounds Tuesday night as the Kings beat the Golden State Warriors 123-114.

"It's a great feeling to be recognized by your peers and those who vote on the award," Thorpe said.

Guard Reggie Theus scored 31 points and guard Derek Smith added 27 as the Kings improved their record to 12-26.

Golden State, which fell to 23-18, was led by guard Eric "Sleepy" Floyd with 24 points and by center Joe Barry Carroll with 22.

Thorpe, the Kings' first-round pick in 1984, had double figures in both points and rebounds for the ninth time in 10 games.

"Things are definitely looking up for us now that we've finally three games in a row," Thorpe said.

Bulls 103, Bucks 90

Michael Jordan scored 31 points, 14 in the final quarter, as the NBA's leading scorer shook off some stitches in the mouth to lead the Bulls.

Jordan needed the medical attention after being elbowed in the first quarter by Bucks center Paul Mokeski.

"They gave me stitches and novocaine and told me it wouldn't hurt," Jordan said. "I was a little tentative getting back into the game, which is not unusual right after something like that happens."

Gene Banks wasn't tentative for Chicago, as the reserve forward scored a season-high 18 points.

With the Bulls leading 86-82 with 3:35 to play, Banks converted an offensive rebound and converted a free throw to set Chicago on its way to its sixth victory in eight games.
