Reagan could cut Energy, Education

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is proposing $16 billion in further spending cuts for 1982 that include delaying cost-of-living increases in Social Security and other benefit programs, phasing out the CETA job training program and revenue-sharing aid to local governments, and abolishing the departments of Education and Energy, government sources say.

Sources, who declined to be identified, said today that the package calls for phasing out the $3.5 billion job training program under CETA — the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act — by Sept. 30, 1982. The move would eliminate more than 500,000 training slots, mostly for poor, young unemployed people.

Sources also said the $6.4 billion-a-year federal revenue-sharing program for local governments would be phased out over three years under the new plan. A 5 percent reduction in federal aid — about $320 million — would be made in 1982.

The latest round of budget cuts was ordered by Reagan in response to new projections that the deficit for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 is ballooning beyond initial estimates. Reagan is expected to announce the package early next week.

Sources said the new cuts would defer the annual, automatic cost-of-living increase in monthly payments for Social Security recipients from July 1, 1982, until Oct. 1, 1982.

This step was proposed by the administration earlier this year. On Tuesday, White House spokesman David Gergen said Reagan was planning no further Social Security reductions for 1982 beyond those already proposed.

The sources said that automatic cost-of-living increases also would be delayed for such programs as food stamps, veterans benefits and civilian and military pensions. The moves would save an estimated $5 billion in 1982.

Meanwhile, Reagan planned to meet today with his Cabinet to review proposals prepared by budget director David A. Stockman, Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said.

Speakes said each Cabinet member would be given "some details on the department-by-department budget cuts recommended by Stockman."

Stockman briefed Senate Republican leaders on the new budget-cutting proposals Wednesday night and spoke separately with House Republican leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois.

According to the sources, the new package also calls for:

—A phase-out of about 75,000 federal jobs over the next three years.

—A 10 percent across-the-board cut in non-defense, non-entitlement programs. Entitlements are programs that provide legally mandated benefits to individuals.

Last spring, the president proposed cutting Social Security benefits to save $3.8 billion in 1982, but the plan produced such a political backlash in Congress that Reagan never pushed for its passage.

Sources said Reagan now has decided to try anew to defer the annual cost-of-living increase, which would save $2.8 billion next year, because it appears to have the best political chances among the earlier Social Security proposals. In March, they noted, a Democratic-controlled House subcommittee approved a similar measure.

Congressional sources, meanwhile, say they have received indications from administration officials that the president may not veto moves in the House and Senate to trim military spending for 1982 by more than the $2 billion Reagan announced last weekend.

One source said abolishing the Energy and Education departments would not produce significant savings because their key operations would be transferred to other departments but would symbolize Reagan's resolve to reduce the federal bureaucracy.

New maneuvers

A group of U.S. soldiers was withdrawn from current Reforger maneuvers Wednesday to help search for further bombs along the tracks leading to the U.S. Rhein-Main Airbase near Frankfurt. Two makeshift bombs were found earlier and defused by demolition experts.

West German police suspect known terrorist

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER
Associated Press Writer

BONN, West Germany (AP) — West German police put out a nationwide "woman wanted" alarm for a fugitive terrorist suspected of complicity in the three-week wave of anti-American attacks.

The police announced Wednesday night that Inge Viett, one of West Germany's 15 most-wanted terrorists, was reported seen in the Stuttgart area, 60 miles from Heidelberg, where terrorists fired grenades Tuesday at Gen. Frederick J. Kroesen, U.S. Army commander for Europe.

Inge Viett

The police said they received two reports that a woman fitting Miss Viett's description was in Stuttgart. One witness saw her driving a blue Volkswagen in a northern suburb, and another saw her — also in a blue car — attempting to enter a U.S. military base, they said.

Miss Viett, 37, is a member of the June 2 Movement, an offshoot of the Red Army Faction that claimed responsibility for the ambush attack on Kroesen's car and the bombing Aug. 31 of U.S. Air Force headquarters in Ramstein that injured 20 people.

The June 2 movement, whose name commemorates a 1968 riot, arranged the murder of Judge Guenter von Drenkmann and the kidnapping of politician Peter Lorenz in Berlin in 1974. Miss Viett was awaiting trial on charges connected with those two terrorist crimes when she broke out of a Berlin women's prison in the summer of 1976.

She was last seen in Paris in August, when she reportedly shot and injured a policeman who tried to stop her for riding a motorcycle without a helmet.

Authorities circulated photographs of the woman hours after two homemade time bombs planted by terrorists were defused outside the U.S. Rhein-Main Air Base near Frankfurt. The base is a main transit point for the 240,000 American troops in Europe.

The attempted bombing was the fifth incident aimed at Americans in West Germany in three weeks. Although the anarchists of the Red Army Faction are believed responsible, anti-American sentiment has been growing in West Germany as a result of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's plan to deploy medium-range American nuclear weapons in Germany and several other European countries and the Reagan administration's plans to go ahead with the neutron weapon.

Several cars with American license plates were set afire at a U.S. housing area in Wiesbaden four days after the Ramstein attack. Last Sunday, firebombs were thrown at the home of the U.S. consul in Frankfurt, and later that day 30,000 protesters marched in West Berlin during a visit there by Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr.

Party responds to Solidarity demands

WARSAW (AP) — The Polish Communist Party, in its first response to Solidarity's political demands at its national congress, accused the labor federation of embarking on the path toward "confrontation threatening bloodshed" and "a new national tragedy."

The party's ruling Politburo, in its strongest attack so far on the independent labor movement, charged that the congress in Gdansk last week began "building an opposition political organization which openly set itself the goal of changing the political system of Poland."

It warned that "the state will use for its defense such means as the situation requires."

The labor congress called for free parliamentary elections, a national referendum on workers' participation in the management of state-owned industries and businesses and sent a message of support to free trade union organizers elsewhere in the East bloc.

The Politburo accused the congress of breaking the agreements with the government under which the union was legalized. It said Solidarity was pursuing "a program of political opposition which hits at the vital interests of the Polish nation, and is tantamount to a direction toward confrontation threatening bloodshed."

"The party has warned time and again the members of Solidarity against elements of destruction and anarchy which exist within its ranks," it noted.

It said the entire union abandoned the interests of the workers in favor of "oppositional and counter-revolutionary groups," such as KOR, the dissident Committee for Social Self-Defense, and the anti-Communist Confederation of Independent Poland.

Tax Appraisal Board, officials to discuss board's makeup

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The six-member Midland County Tax Appraisal Board and elected officials of the six taxing bodies in the county are to meet jointly in an effort to resolve an apparent dilemma on makeup of the board at 2 p.m. Monday in City Hall.

The board, formed in 1979 and activated since early in 1980, is made up of a representative of each of the taxing entities in the county and is charged with governing the activities of the 25-member district appraisal staff headed up by Chief Appraiser Virgil Jones Jr.

Currently, the Midland and Greenwood Independent School Districts, the city of Midland, Midland County, Midland College and the Midland County Hospital District each have equal voice and vote on the board.

But, noted County Attorney Robert Rendall, that could change by the end of 1981 unless another election is held by the four (the two schools, the city and the county) governing bodies to permit the college and the hospital districts representation on the tax appraisal board in the next two years.

The "Three-Fourths Rule" would allow the board to bypass the statutory formula, which permits only five members on the board. And those five may by law come only from the city, county and schools. All other taxing entities are prohibited from representation on the board unless approval is granted by three of the Big Four — the two schools, the city and the county.

THE MIDLAND County Commissioners' Court already has passed a resolution to keep the board at six members and to include the college and hospital. At present, each has equal voting power on the board.

However, in determining the composition of the board, voting power by law is not equal and is determined by the relative revenue strength of each taxing body. Midland ISD, with a tax levy of $17.8 million, has 60 percent of the vote in determining tax board membership. The city of Midland, which has a $6.2 million tax levy, has 21 percent of the vote. Midland County, which has a $4.2 million tax levy, has 14 percent of the vote, and Greenwood ISD, with a $1.3 million tax levy, has 4 percent of the vote.

The Midland ISD, which dominates the vote, easily could defeat the resolution and any effort to keep the six-member board intact and to have all taxing entities equally represented on the appraisal board. In addition, the Midland ISD board of trustees could elect three members to the board if the Three-Fourths Rules fails and the statutory rule is abided by.

"The top five vote-getters are the ones who get elected," Rendall said Wednesday following a tax appraisal board meeting. Rendall, who has been giving legal advice to the tax board since 1980, is being succeeded as the board's in-house lawyer by Jimmie Oglesby. Rendall's role as county attorney might present a "conflict of interests," Rendall surmised of the change in lawyers.

THE BIG FOUR have 5,000 votes in deciding tax appraisal board membership: Midland ISD, 3,005 for 60 percent of the vote; city of Midland, 1,057 for 21 percent; Midland County, 720 for 14 percent; and Greenwood, 218 for 4 percent.

Probabilities suggest that if the statutory rule remains in effect here, the Midland ISD will dominate the board with three of the five members, and the county and the city each may have one representative on the board. Unless the Midland ISD somehow loses a place in the election, Greenwood ISD likely will be without representation on the board.

Election will be by the governing bodies of each of the Big Four taxing

Michener has a novel idea

Author plans book for Texas' birthday

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements says bestselling author James Michener thinks Texas is where the action is and will write a historical novel about the state in time for its 150th birthday.

"He (Michener) has a very strong feeling about Texas, that this is the right place to be, and Texas has a role to play in the destiny of our country — he believes this," Clements said Wednesday.

He told a news conference Michener had agreed to "weave a novel around historical facts" about Texas.

Clements said Michener, whose books include "Hawaii," "Centennial" and "Chesapeake," would move here in October 1982 and hoped to have the book published by Christmas 1985.

The book is expected to be a highlight of Texas' Sesquicentennial celebration in 1985.

"I have great confidence in Mr. Michener as a writer," Clements said. "His record speaks for itself. He is one of if not the outstanding writers in the United States today, in my opinion."

Clements said he and Michener had talked about the novel's plot, but the governor declined to "get into that, because he may change his mind a dozen times."

Before Michener left Austin after a brief summer visit, Clements said, "He had a 12-chapter book roughly outlined in his mind."

Asked if Michener had received any "financial inducements" to do the book, Clements said, "No, none at all. He feels Texas is an intriguing subject and has the basic background to provide all the excitment his novel would need."

Clements added that Michener feels "with Texas he has more to work with than any other state in the country."

The governor noted that the University of Texas at Austin owns the Michener art collection, and he said the university has extensive Hispanic and Texana research libraries.

Asked if he might take credit for the book as a campaign issue in 1982, Clements said, "It has nothing to do with partisan politics. We're not going to limit the reading to Republicans."

The governor was asked if Michener had selected a title, and he replied, "He may just call it 'Texas.'"

Michener's publisher, Random House of New York, will publish the book, Clements said.

Man recaptured in Oklahoma

Jail escapee James "Cowboy" Crosson of Odessa has been captured in Oklahoma.

Crosson, along with three other federal prisoners being held at the city jail, escaped June 10. He was picked up Tuesday in a Tulsa motel on an informant's tip, authorities said.

Also arrested with Crosson were two other men and a woman whose identities were not immediately known. Crosson was awaiting transfer to a federal penitentiary on a drug conviction when he and three others sawed their way out of the jail.

One of the escapees, Glenn Eugene Stewart, was captured Aug. 22 in Juarez, Mexico. The other two are still at large. Two women who aided in the escape are expected to be sentenced Monday in federal court.

It was not known when or if Crosson would be returned to Midland, where he now faces an escape charge.

Texas forecasts

West Texas — Widely scattered thunderstorms north and west, otherwise partly cloudy and warmer through Friday. Highs mid 60s north to upper 80s Big Bend. Lows upper 30s mountains to 50s elsewhere. Highs Friday 70s north to near 90 Big Bend.

North Texas — Fair and cooler through Friday. Highs 72 to 82. Lows 46 to 61. Highs Friday 76 to 83.

South Texas — Fair and mild through Friday. Highs 80s. Lows 50s north to 60s south.

Midland outlook fair skies

After a partly cloudy Thursday, Midlanders should see fair skies tonight through Friday. And, a blanket and a warm beverage could be on the top of the list to keep Midlanders comfortable in the chilly evenings.

According to the National Weather Service at the Midland Regional Airport, temperatures should be in the upper 70s through Friday with the low dipping in the low 50s tonight.

No rain is in the forecast, but "we're just an inch above the normal rainfall for this time of year," according to the weatherman.

Wednesday's comfortable 80-degrees fell short of the record high temperature of 99 set in 1965. The record overnight low of 46 set in 1951 was 11-degrees below this morning's low of 57.

Variable winds are predicted at 5-10 mph through Friday.

Testimony begins in arson trial

TYLER (AP) — The trial of two Tyler youths charged with setting fire to a high school got under way a day after jurors recommended a 10-year prison sentence for another youth who pleaded guilty for his part in the blaze.

Jurors handed down the sentence Wednesday for 16-year-old Kenneth Wayne Broadhurst, who pleaded guilty this week to helping two others set fire to John Tyler High School in February.

Broadhurst told the eight-man, four-woman jury he wrote co-defendants Martin Wingard, 18, and Arthur White, 17, that he didn't "care if I get life" for his part in the high school fire and threatened to kill anyone "if they point the finger at me."

He pleaded guilty Monday to arson and burglary charges and asked for a probated sentence.

Testimony was scheduled to began today in the trial for Wingard and White.

District Judge Glenn S. Phillips overruled a request by attorneys who asked that the two co-defendants be tried only on the burglary charge.

Officials to discuss makeup of board

entities and not by the public at large, as incorrectly reported earlier. A provision to allow board representatives to be elected by the voting public was defeated in the Texas Legislature.

In theory, up to 13 directors could serve on the tax appraisal board were the resolution amended to propose that number of directors and were the resolution to pass.

Even so, the Midland ISD will dominate the board unless the resolution is passed in toto.

"If a resolution is not received (by Oct. 1, 1981) from a taxing unit (Midland ISD) having a majority of the vote...under the normal election process," Rendall said in a memorandum to the six governing bodies, "then the voting strength of this unit may not be reduced to less than a majority (51 percent minimum)." However, that could change if, somehow, the election process is altered and the Midland ISD endorses the resolution to permit equal representation of the six taxing entities on the board. That seems unlikely.

MIDLAND COUNTY Commissioner Charlie Welch, a critic of the Texas Legislature's statutory formula which gives board representation by dollars rather than by people count, said the formula ignores the "one-man, one-vote" principle upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court.

"The Supreme Court says you should have representation according to people, not money," Welch said.

According to Welch's rule, the county would dominate and would be followed in people power by the Midland ISD, the city and then Greenwood ISD.

"But they (Texas legislators) gave an opportunity on the local level to acknowledge it," Welch said of the one-man, one-vote principle.

The resolution, passed by the commissioners and which, according to Welch, "has a lot of widsom to it," follows:

RESOLUTION

"Whereas, the Texas Legislature during the regular session and first called session of its 67th term has made certain changes in the Property Tax Code; and

"Whereas the Commissioners' Court of Midland County agrees that it is in the best interest of all taxing units within Midland County to avail themselves of the provisions of Section 6.03 of the Property Tax Code which allows for alternate selection of a board of directors and the number of directors for the Appraisal District by resolution of three-fourths of the voting tax entities; and

"Whereas, the Commissioners' Court of Midland County agrees each political subdivision which levies taxes in Midland County should be represented on the Appraisal District Board of Directors;

"Now, therefore, let it be resolved, the Commissioners' Court of Midland County, Texas, endorses and approves implementation of the 'three-fourths rule' to increase the Board of Directors of the Midland County Appraisal District to six (6) members and furthermore endorses and requests that the election process for directors be amended to provide that Midland County, the city of Midland, the Midland Independent School District, the Greenwood Independent School District, the Midland County Hospital District of Midland County, Texas, and the Midland Junior College District each elect one representative to serve as director on the Board of Directors of the Midland County Appraisal District."

THE RESOLUTION was signed by County Judge William B. "Bill" Ahders and by Commissioners Durward Wright, Charlie Welch, C. DeWayne Davis and Winfree Brown.

Currently making up the appraisal board, which initially was selected following a Three-Fourths Rule vote in 1979, are Board Chairman Gil Tompson, who represents the Midland ISD; Bud Lea, the Greenwood ISD; Joe Nuessle, the city; Charlie Welch, the county; Fred Wright, the college, and Walt Holton, the hospital.

Bailey says SAC head ratified offer

By ROBERT B. CULLEN
Associated Press Writer

ANDREWS AIR FORCE BASE, Md. (AP) — Defense attorney F. Lee Bailey says the former head of the Stategic Air Command ratified the immunity offer that prompted Air Force 2nd Lt. Christopher Cooke to reveal details about his contacts with the Soviets.

Bailey said Wednesday at Cooke's court-martial that retired Gen. Richard Ellis, SAC's former commander-in-chief, authorized the offer, which is a major point of dispute between the defense and the Air Force.

Cooke, former deputy commander of a Titan II missile crew, is charged with passing sensitive information to the Soviets and failing to tell superiors about his contacts with the Soviet Embassy.

THE DEFENSE IS trying to win dismissal of the charges on the grounds that Cooke was offered immunity from prosecution if he told the truth about his contacts with the Soviet Embassy.

Two Air Force officers have testified that Cooke was offered immunity if he passed a lie detector test. But SAC's general counsel, Brig. Gen. Claude Teagarden, testified that there was no immunity, only an offer to resign if the lie detector showed Cooke to be "a naive schoolboy."

Bailey said the information about Ellis came to light Wednesday morning when attorneys for both sides interviewed now-retired Lt. Gen. Lloyd Leavitt, the former vice commander-in-chief of SAC. Leavitt is scheduled to be a prosecution witness.

Bailey brought up the matter during his cross-examination of Teagarden. He asked the SAC counsel if Ellis ratified an immunity agreement, which the defense contends was offered by the Office of Special Investigations.

"NO, I DON'T know that," Teagarden responded.

Bailey asked him if he knew that Leavitt told Ellis on May 15 that "the OSI has given immunity to Lieutenant Cooke beyond what we said" and that Ellis responded "I know all about that."

Teagarden replied, "I don't believe that to be true."

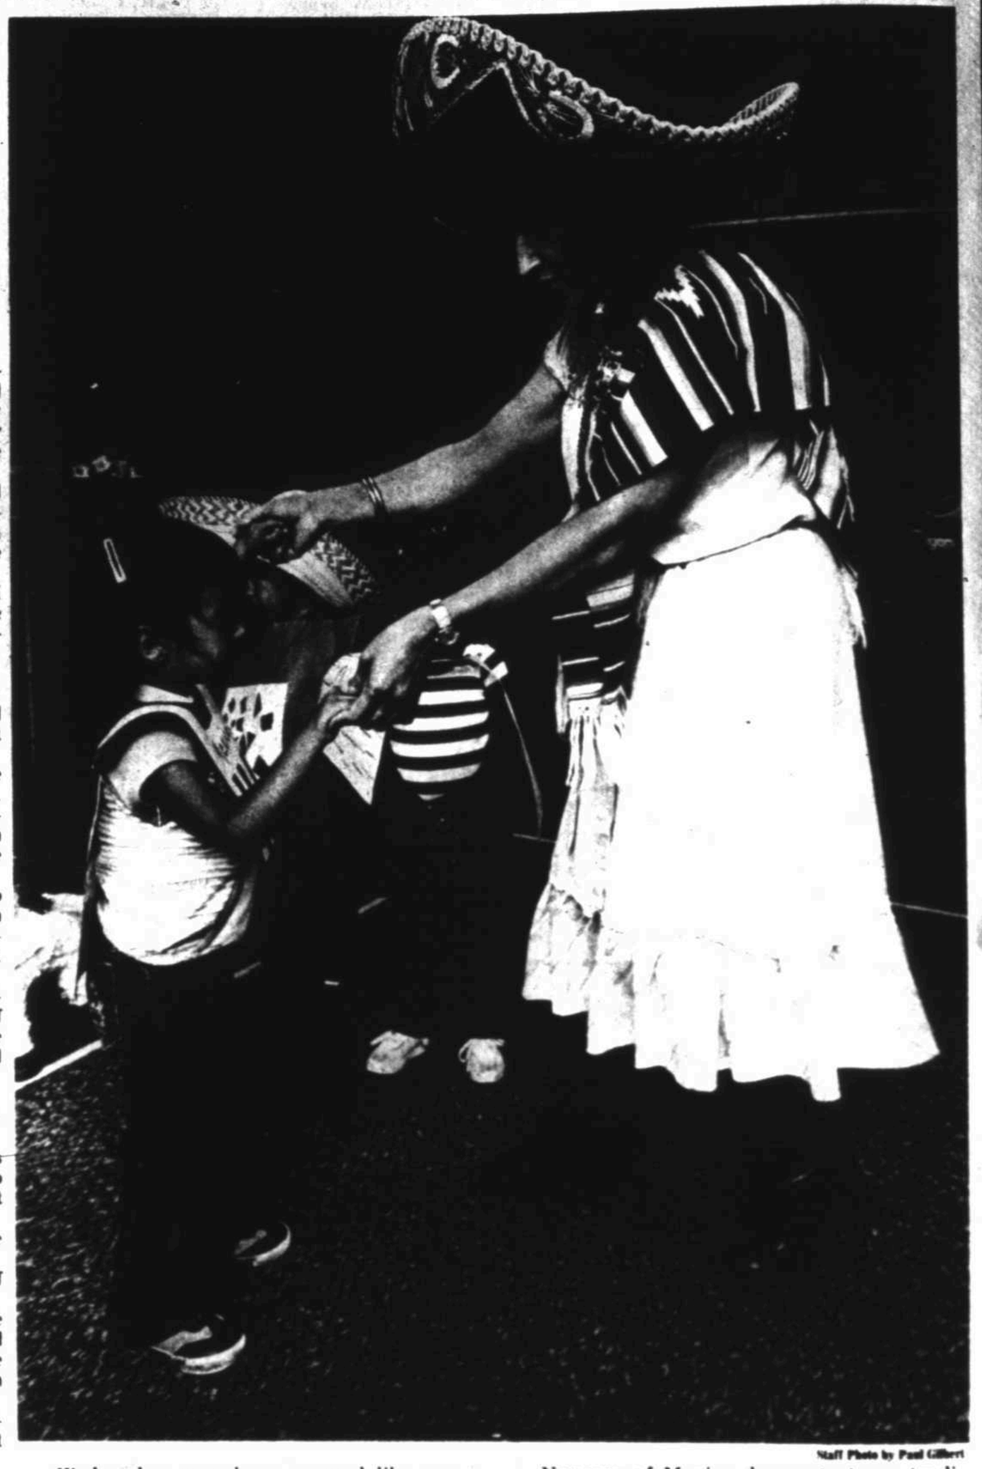

"General Leavitt said it today in the presence of three lawyers," Bailey responded.

Teagarden said his only offer was to let Cooke resign from the Air Force if a polygraph test proved that he told the truth when he said May 7 that he contacted the Soviet Embassy to get help on an academic paper.

However, two days later with the disputed immunity a key factor, Cooke gave a second statement that led to the charges against him.

Bailey reminded Teagarden that Cooke's Air Force lawyer, Capt. Francis Pedrotty, testified that Teagarden approved granting immunity to the defendant.

Bailey noted that Teagarden insisted that Cooke take a lie detector test and that Pedrotty voluntarily took and passed one.

Wednesday may have seemed like any other day for Midlanders, but to the people of Mexico, the "16 of Septembre" is a national independence holiday. Jeannette Perez, left, a student at the Community Day Care Nursery, watches intently as Maria Navarro of Mexico demonstrates a traditional Mexican dance performed in celebration of her country's freedom. Ms. Navarro also spoke to the children about other Mexican traditions and culture.

Atlanta couple granted custody of stolen baby

Blood tests provide conclusive evidence

By CAROLYN S. CARLSON
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Sandra Alexander says someday she'll write down for her daughter the story of how the child was taken from a hospital before she was a day old and found by police six weeks later.

But Mrs. Alexander, who held her baby Wednesday for the first time since the abduction, said for now she just plans to "hold her tight."

Mrs. Alexander, 28, and her husband were granted custody of the child in an order signed Wednesday afternoon by Superior Court Judge Isaac Jenrette. State Division of Family and Children Services officials had presented evidence establishing the baby's identity, hospital spokesman Mike Yelton said.

At a hastily called news conference at Grady Memorial Hospital, Shanta Yvette Alexander waved her arms and stared at the cameras.

Mrs. Alexander said she would explain it all when Shanta is old enough to understand. "I'm trying to write it down so she can read it when she grows up," she said.

Mrs. Alexander and her husband, Bobby, then took their daughter home to meet the baby's four brothers and "a house full of aunts and uncles and relatives."

The story began on the evening of Aug. 3 with the birth of Shanta, the Alexanders' first daughter. Mrs. Alexander gave her child her first feeding the next morning and placed her in the crib in the hospital room. A woman came into the room, admired the baby and then left.

"I went to the bathroom because I had to take my pain pills," Mrs. Alexander said. When she returned, "My baby was gone and her water bottle was gone."

Tearful, televised pleas for her child brought no results and Mrs. Alexander left the hospital with empty arms.

During the weeks that followed, Mrs. Alexander said she often lost hope of ever seeing her only daughter again, but was encouraged by her husband's faith and her family's support.

Then last week police notified the Alexanders that a baby girl was found at the Decatur home of Louise Lett, who said the baby was hers.

The child was identified as Shanta by footprints taken at birth, and blood tests on Monday and Tuesday proved conclusively that Mrs. Lett was not the mother, said Atlanta Police Lt. B.L. Neikirk.

Mrs. Lett has been charged with kidnapping and with forgery — she allegedly made a false birth certificate for the baby.

The baby had been well cared for, Mrs. Alexander reported.

Mrs. Alexander added she was "so relieved" when the baby was located that she wasn't concerned that she was not allowed to hold the child until positive identification had been made.

Health spa murder suspects flee state

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — A man and two women suspected of murdering two Korean women and wounding a third by slashing their throats have managed to elude authorities and apparently flee the state, authorities said.

Nueces County Sheriff Soloman Ortiz said Wednesday his department "doesn't have the slightest idea" where the trio has gone.

Justice of the Peace Ben Garza issued capital murder and attempted murder warrants Tuesday against Paul Kuck, Gertrude Small Virts and Cindy May, who are charged with slaying Yong Chi Clark, 25, and Pong Yon Forsgren, 34, at the Osaka Health Spa last Saturday.

Ortiz said other states have been alerted as to the suspects' identities and descriptions, but he refused to release additional information about the three.

Tammy Lynn Lee remained hospitalized under heavy guard at Memorial Medical Center. Her throat was cut and she was shot four times, Ortiz said. The charges state that Ms. Lee was able to identify Ms. Virts as her assailant.

The dead women were shot and their throats slashed "from ear to ear," authorities said.

Sheriff's officers found a pair of blood-stained nunchuks, an oriental martial arts weapon, at the health spa, according to charges filed by the Nueces County District Attorney's office. The nunchuks belonged to one of the women suspects, the complaints contend.

Garza recommended $250,000 bond for each of the suspects.

Ortiz said the two women suspects apparently knew the Korean women, but he said the three suspects were not from Nueces County.

A witness told sheriff's officers he heard two of the suspects planning the crime.

Matriculation, convocation now cost more

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — According to the survey of more than 1,000 universities and colleges conducted each year about this time by the College Scholarship Service, it costs 10 to 15 times as much to go to college as it did when I first went off with book bag, flask and raccoon coat in quest of higher education.

Yale, Harvard, MIT, Sarah Lawrence, Barnard College and Bryn Mawr, to name only a few, are all over $11,000 a year, for tuition, board and books. Bennington in Vermont tops the list at $12,030. Back in my day, in the first postwar flush of the G.I. Bill, you could matriculate at Harvard for $800 a year and still have a few bob left over for a pastrami on rye at the Wursthaus and the early matinee at the Old Howard.

Speaking of matriculating, I'm not sure what the word means anymore or how it got associated with higher education. While vacationing in Ireland this summer, I visited Cahir Castle in County Tipperary. The winsome wisp of a tour guide explained that the spouts in the crenelated towers of this 15th century castle which Essex stormed for Elizabeth were "used for matriculation: for pouring down offal, ordure and the slops of the night jars in the bed chambers on unwelcome visitors, who in extreme cases might merit boiling oil."

Like keeping golf tees in one's back pocket, this gives rise to some pointed remarks. Or at least it might have, because I was invited this year to give the convocation at Marlboro College in Vermont, which for all I know may now also be in the five-figure price tag category.

Unfortunately, another engagement prevented me from returning to the campus where I was the first and only graduate in 1948. My demurral was probably a dividend for the students and faculty, since I am not sure what the word convocation means either.

According to the Oxford English Dictionary, which I always cite when students are around to impress instead of my paperback Webster Collegiate, a convocation is "the action of calling together or assembling by summons." It sounds like a grand jury or the Manhattan night court. Anyhow, the meaning signifies that a captive audience would have been on hand at Marlboro to welcome or at least suffer the returning grad, and I still lie awake at nights wondering what I would have told them.

Colleges these days, I suppose, are a dozen times more expensive because the inmates learn 12 times more than we did. I mean in our day we didn't have nuclear reactors, giant telescopes, stereophonic total immersion language laboratory labs and resident poets and humanists on campus. We were lucky the dining hall held onto the same cook (no one ever called him a chef) for three weeks running.

I suppose I could have begun convoking by quoting from that classic commencement address which somebody named Lord Plume gave at Eton College in 1904. It contained the remarkable compliment, "We are often told that they taught us nothing at Eton. It may be so, but I think they taught it very well."

Quite right. After all, what could one expect to learn at Eton in Lord Plume's day, when matriculation or whatever probably cost 2 and 6 and a ha'penny a year, including cricket flannels and a stickproof wicket.

Most old grads, at least the famous ones, seem to suffer from rather nebulous nostalgia where their university years are concerned.

Robert Benchley, I seem to remember, wrote somewhere that among the most important things he learned at college were how to make a really dry martini and how to press a pair of trousers by stretching them neatly under the mattress while remembering not to remain out all night.

Recalling his days at Ohio State, James Thurber wrote charmingly of taking "a deferred pass," a gentleman's word for flunk, in botany because of his inability to see anything through a microscope. Thurber also vividly re-created the scene where a timid economics professor named Bassum tried unsuccessfully to coax Bolenciecwcz, the star tackle on the football team, into naming "one means of transportation," while helpful classmates stage-whispered "choo-choo" and "toot-toot."

The vignette smacked of Vladimir Nabokov at Cornell seducing the behemoths from the athletic department into reading "Jane Eyre" with the promise of a sizzling sensual experience.

But among the literati, my favorite scholastic memoir is Max Shulman's description of his first day at the University of Minnesota. If I had given the convocation at Marlboro, I would have shamelessly read the passage aloud and rested on Shulman's laurels:

"...The venerable white-haired professor entered the room. He advanced to the lectern at the head of the class. Putting on his pince-nez, he surveyed us for a moment. 'Jeez,' he said. 'They get crumbier every year.' We laughed appreciatively.

"'My name is Schultz' said the professor. 'Now get out paper and pencil and I'll give you a list of books you'll need for this course. Ready. Introduction to Sociology by Schultz. Sociology Made Simple by Schultz. Sociology for College Freshmen by Schultz. Survey of Freshmen Sociology by Schultz. Introductory Monograph to the Study of Freshmen Sociology by Schultz. Boarder Aspects of Sociology by Schultz. Bibliography of Schultz's Treatise on Sociology for College Freshmen by Schultz.

"'I'll let you out of class early today so you can run right over to the bookstore and buy these books. And don't try to get them secondhand because you can't. I just wrote them this summer. Don't try to sell them when you're through either. I'm writing a new set right now. You don't think I live on my salary here, do you? Why the third string fullback made more than I did last year.'"

Convokees, you may now stand unconvened.

Free diabetes screening offered

BIG SPRING — To increase community awareness and help detect early warning signs of diabetes, the Texas Nurses Association and The Medicine Shoppe are offering a free diabetes screening from 6 to 9:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday in The Medicine Shoppe booth at the Howard County Fair.

Last year, according to a spokesman for the Medicine Shoppe International Inc., 550 persons were tested at the fair, and three were found to be diabetic. Five percent showed positive results.

According to the Report of the National Commission, diabetes now affects 10 million Americans directly, and the incidence is increasing rapidly. Diabetes, with its complications, is now recognized as perhaps the third leading cause of death in the United States, claiming thousands of lives annually.

Symptoms of diabetes may include blurred vision, excessive weight or unusual weight loss, abnormal thirst, weakness, fatigue and nausea.

"Fortunately with early detection and prompt treatment, we can help these individuals to lead healthier lives," Clint Holloman, pharmacist for The Medicine Shoppe, said.

The testing method for diabetes is simple and takes only seconds. A small sample of blood is taken by a tiny finger prick and then placed on testing materials. By timing these ingredients accurately, professionals can determine if symptoms of diabetes are prevalent.

In order for the test to yield an accurate reading, persons must have eaten at least 100 grams of carbohydrates approximately two hours before testing. A meal consisting of a sandwich (two slices of bread, 30 grams), 20 french fries (34 grams), pie (one slice, 45 grams) and milk (one cup, 12 grams) would be adequate. Eggs, meat and cheese may be added without counting. Only water may be taken in the two hours prior to the test. After eating 100 grams of carbohydrates wait two hours, but no more than three hours for the test.

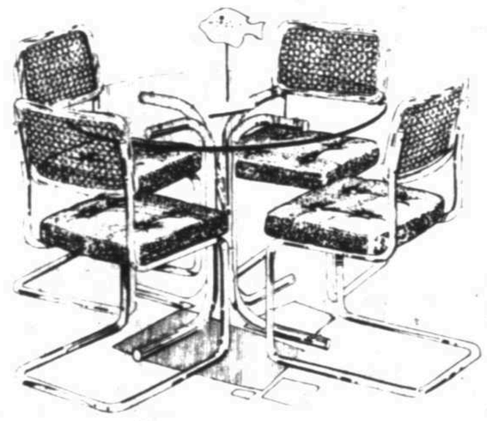

This preliminary test is strictly for persons who are not diagnosed diabetics. All individuals with an elevated sugar reading will be encouraged to visit their family physician.

A better behaved bear?

For many, perhaps, the first reaction to a U.S. report citing "highly favorable" Soviet energy prospects through the rest of the century is one of woe. What's good for them has got to be bad for us. It isn't necessarily so.

Clearly differing from earlier estimates by the CIA, the study by the Defense Intelligence Agency says the Soviets will be able to meet their oil production goals of 12.2 million barrels daily this year and 12.9 million by 1985. The CIA had said last May that Soviet oil production would begin to decline in one to three years.

We're not ready to treat the DIA conclusions as gospel, of course. It's always risky to put too much faith in any such estimates when the U.S. isn't really privy to Soviet production figures.

But even if the truth lies somewhere between the two estimates, we see some important advantages. If the Soviet Union has enough oil to satisfy its appetite and that of Soviet-bloc nations, the Kremlin may feel less tempted to reach for the oil-rich regions of the Middle East.

That is no small consideration. There has been a longstanding fear that the Soviet move in Afghanistan might be the start of a southward drive to Persian Gulf oil fields. Similar fears have been expressed regarding possible Soviet intrusion in Iran's domestic turmoil.

A more subtle advantage in an ample Soviet oil supply relates to the Warsaw Pact nations. One factor in keeping the year-long crisis in Poland reasonably cool has been Poland's dependence on Soviet oil. If the USSR can no longer provide this key resource, it may find itself having to resort to force to keep Poland or any other recalcitrant Eastern country in line.

We don't mean to suggest that there should be any less vigilance concerning Soviet aims in the Persian Gulf or anywhere else. But if, as the DIA study says, Russia's immediate oil picture is not bleak, the Soviets may be less inclined to make mischief. A well-fed bear is always less dangerous than a hungry one.

William Loeb's legend

As columnist William Buckley once observed, William Loeb liked a hot kitchen. He could take the heat of controversy without flinching and he expected the same of his liberal foes.

The death of Mr. Loeb at the age of 75 removes one of the most colorful and contentious figures in U.S. political and journalistic life.

For more than 40 years, he was the owner, editor and publisher of The Manchester Union-Leader, the principal newspaper in New Hampshire. Being completely independent permitted him to speak out without restraint. The result was a brand of personal journalism reminiscent of the 19th Century and all but unknown today.

There are those, of course, who would argue that Mr. Loeb's unbridled editorial positions would prove such rarity to be a good thing, and they make a good case. But the Loeb style also strove for fairness in news coverage along with hard-hitting opinions. And his newspaper always enjoyed one of the highest readerships anywhere.

This fighting arch-conservative, who was personally courtly and courteous, denounced John F. Kennedy as "a skunk's skunk." But neither did he spare the mightiest Republicans who ventured from what he thought to be the true path to national salvation. Dwight D. Eisenhower was "Dopey Dwight," Gerald R. Ford was "Jerry the Jerk," and Richard M. Nixon, a "crum-bum."

He defended such invective by saying "I want them (readers) to think." And: "If they (the presidents) can't take it from me what will they be able to take in times of real crisis?"

His bitter feuds and extreme tactics aside, William Loeb and his newspapers have given New Hampshire extraordinary political clout through its early presidential primary with a disproportionate influence on U.S. history. He had a lot of enemies. He had a lot of friends. And he stirred up a lot of action.

His widow, the former Nackey Scripps, now assumes control of the Loeb newspapers, along with a lively legend.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Ethics committee harassed senator's wife

WASHINGTON — The Senate Ethics Committee hasn't exactly covered itself with glory in its handling of Sen. Harrison Williams, D-N.J. As I've reported earlier, the committee's decision to recommend Williams' expulsion had the distinct aroma of a kangaroo court proceeding.

Jack Anderson

The committee allowed the Justice Department to lead it by the nose instead of conducting its own investigation, as the senator requested. Thus the misbehavior by FBI agents and prosecutors, who hounded, coached and finally entrapped Williams, was compounded by the Ethics Committee. The committee members refused to consider evidence of these improper actions, which was withheld at his trial.

Now I've discovered that the sanctimonious senators behaved in an even sleazier fashion than I had imagined. They stooped so low as to harass Williams' wife, Jeanette, prying into her premarital background and attempting to withhold some $1,600 of severance pay. She was fired from her Senate job after the Republican takeover this year.

With all the courage of a lynch mob, the committee members tried desperately to keep their plot against Mrs. Williams from leaking out.

"I am trying to keep as low a profile as possible, is what I'm trying to do," Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., acknowledged at a closed-door committee meeting. "If it ever hits the press, we are in trouble. I think we are sort of in trouble anyway."

My associates Indy Badhwar and Jack Mitchell obtained a transcript of this secret meeting, which was also attended by Sens. Mack Mattingly, R-Ga., Howell Heflin, D-Ala., and David Pryor, D-Ark. The purpose of the meeting was to figure out how to withhold Mrs. Williams' severance pay.

Jeanette Williams had been a Senate employee for 24 years. She was personal secretary to the late Hubert Humphrey; her last job was a senior staff member of the Labor and Human Resources Committee.

In marked contrast to its timorous reluctance to conduct its own investigation of the senator, the Ethics Committee was bold and brave when it decided to go after his wife. Their "investigation" of her began in February 1980, shortly after Williams' involvement with ABSCAM had been leaked to the press.

Committee investigators interviewed Mrs. Williams. "I wanted to know what the charges were against me," she said. "I wanted a full hearing. I wanted to lay out all my files." But no charges were ever filed.

Her assistant, Maureen Dollard, was questioned by committee counsel Donald Sanders. Dollard says Sanders wanted to know about Mrs. Williams' "personal relationships with men before she was married."

Last Jan. 17, Mrs. Williams got a letter from Sen. Ted Kennedy, D-Mass., informing her she was being laid off to make room for employees of the new Republican majority. Ten days later, the Ethics Committee met in closed session, where Wallop and Mattingly recommended withholding Mrs. Williams' severance pay. They charged that she was quitting to avoid an investigation.

"She is resigning as promised in order to keep us from subpoenaing her travel records," said Wallop, ignoring the fact that Senate employees' travel records are public information.

"Everybody here knows the reason why she resigned," Mattingly chimed in. "It is because she would be investigated."

When others suggested the committee might not have the authority to withhold Mrs. Williams' severance pay, Wallop expressed fear that the matter would become public if turned over to another committee.

"If it becomes a matter for public speculation, it will reflect on this committee, on the Senate, on every senator's wife," he said, adding piously: "I think that is an obligation this committee has implicitly, that we protect the reputation of the Senate from within and without."

In the end, the committee sent an eyes-only letter to Sens. Kennedy and Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, asking them to hold up Mrs. Williams' severance pay. Hatch refused, and OKed the payment.

Footnote: The senators have refused to answer my queries. Instead, they have hired a private detective to find out who leaked the secret transcript of their Star Chamber proceedings to my associates.

TRACKING THE TOSSPOTS: More than 50,000 Americans were killed in highway accidents last year, and many of these deaths were related to drunken driving. Yet there's no foolproof way to keep someone whose license has been suspended for drunken driving from getting a license in another state.

The National Drivers Register is an attempt to change all that. It makes information on license applicants available nationwide.

The big trouble is that the NDR isn't sufficiently automated to work properly. Legislation has been introduced to computerize the system, but the Transportation Department has nixed the idea in the name of fiscal austerity.

It's estimated that it will cost some $33 million over the next 11 years to computerize the NDR. A confidential report shows that nearly $2 million appropriated to upgrade the register has been diverted to other uses. Meanwhile, nobody knows how many unfit drivers are skipping off to other states to get new licenses.

HALF-EMPTY BOAST: The Chilean government is basking in the warm glow of the Reagan administration's relative friendliness — and is not above gilding the lily a bit. A recent Chilean Embassy release bragged that Vice President George Bush and former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger were going to visit Chile soon. Kissinger will indeed, but Bush's office denied any imminent visit by the vice president.

GEORGE F. WILL

'Course of government' hasn't really changed 180 degrees

WASHINGTON — Perhaps President Reagan should not be expected to offer a balanced assessment of his achievements so far. He certainly didn't when, in an interview with Fortune magazine, he was asked whether his administration might be "just a four-year blip off the long-term national direction." He responded:

George F. Will

"No, I feel that we did just about a 180-degree turn in the course of government, and I'd like to feel that it reflects what the people out there are thinking."

Leave aside the question of in what sense it can ever be said that the people "out there" are thinking about the course of government. But it should be said that Reagan's statement, like other persons' hyperbole about a "Reagan revolution," is notably unhistorical.

Nothing Reagan has done or aspires to do is comparable to what Franklin Roosevelt did in the mid-1930s. FDR altered, fundamentally and irrevocably, the relationship between the citizen and the central government. That government assumed responsibility for the nation's economic health — the aggregate economic output — and for a minimum material well-being of the individual.

If Reagan wants to repeal those federal responsibilities (a repeal that would constitute a real revolution), he has not said so. And he had better not. If Carter had succeeded in portraying Reagan as bent on repealing the New Deal and dismantling the welfare state, Carter might have carried 44 states.

Reagan's most "revolutionary" measure is said to be the cut in personal income taxes. But that cut is primarily a measure to enable people to run in place, a measure to counter the silent, unlegislated tax increases imposed by inflation. The National Journal calculates that "no category of taxpayer will have a significantly lower tax burden in 1984 than in 1977." This is a "revolution"? A "180-degree turn"?

Analysis of the 1980 election results does not reveal a call for a 180-degree turn. Reagan's 10 percentage-point margin of victory over his Democratic opponent was impressive, but it was only the ninth biggest margin in the 21 elections in this century. It was smaller than three Democratic victories (1932, 1936, 1964) and five Republican victories (1920, 1924, 1928, 1956, 1972). And Reagan's electoral margin should be seen primarily as Carter's electoral deficit.

Reagan has so improved the nation's mood that it is hard to recall how sour was the mood about Carter. In January 1980, Eisenhower's job-approval rating was 57 percent. Ford's was 45 percent in the summer of 1976. Truman's was 32 percent in June 1952. But Carter's record-smashing collapse put him at 21 percent in June 1980.

Not surprisingly, on Nov. 4, 1980, Carter lost four of 10 of his 1976 supporters. There was one dominating fact of 1980 and it was not a national conversion to conservative ideology. It was a desire to see Carter gone.

In a Yankelovich poll in January 1981, 63 percent said that the primary reason for Reagan's victory was dismay about Carter. Only 24 percent called it a mandate for conservatism. Even Republicans and self-described conservatives agreed (54-34 and 57-30 respectively).

William Schneider of the Hoover Institution at Stanford, writing in a volume published by American Enterprise Institute, says the electorate was not "convinced" about conservatism, but was tolerant about it, willing to give it a chance. Schneider says every election offers a "plebiscitary choice" (a chance to say how the government is being run) and an "ideological choice" (a chance to say which candidate or party comes closest to one's ideological beliefs). Carter's campaign strategy was to emphasize the ideological choice. Reagan struggled successfully to make the election turn on the plebiscitary choice.

That is, Reagan won because he kept the election from being a referendum on conservative ideology. Bear that in mind as Congress is asked to make more cuts in domestic spending — and as Congress instead turns against defense spending.

It is not true that Republicans won because they have "ideas," or that Democrats desperately need to originate some ideas. Certainly, they need Jacksonism — part Andrew, part Scoop: balanced-budget liberalism, laced with nationalism. But what they most need are Republican mistakes.

Mistakes by those in power make an opposition party seem intellectual. Democratic mistakes made the GOP seem intellectual, so it can happen to absolutely any party. Thus the Democratic Party can sit back and wait to see how sturdy is the basket of economic theories into which Republicans have put all their eggs.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, Sept. 17, the 260th day of 1981. There are 105 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Sept. 17, 1787, the United States Constitution was signed.

On this date:

In 1665, the Great Bubonic Plague broke out in London.

In 1949, more than 130 people were killed when fire destroyed the "Noronic," the largest Great Lakes passenger steamboat, at a pier in Toronto.

In 1967, a riot during a soccer match in Turkey killed 42 people and injured 600 others.

In 1978, Egypt's President Anwar Sadat and Israel's Prime Minister Menachem Begin signed the framework for a Middle East peace at Camp David, Md.

Ten years ago: Supreme Court justice Hugo Black retired after 34 years on the bench.

Writer proud of his job

To The Editor:

As a fireman-paramedic for the City of Midland, I couldn't help but be offended by the police patrolman's letter wondering what firemen, paramedics, and dog catchers received from this year's city budget.

The city budget is on display at City Hall, as most employees know, and if the patrolman would check, he'd find that everyone with the city received a proposed six percent pay raise hike!

Also, it seems to me that his complaint about the clerks raise and detective's clothing allowance raise is with the police administration and not City Hall. The council doesn't provide an increase in any department's budget unless requested by department heads.

I wonder what kind of situation or problem a citizen is in to be convinced which of the services the city offers is the most important! I am proud of my position and feel a great sense of pride when I can help someone who needs me! I don' think this makes me more important than other employees and therefore worth more money. But my opinion is that my job is as important as any with the city, and feel that public servants should conduct themselves as the professionals they are, and not get into an "I'm better than you are" argument.

It's common knowledge that most city employees have to work at two jobs to make ends meet. But I know that, as long as I am able, I'll continue to do my job with the city and be proud of it!

Justice prevails

To The Editor:

Rape is the most under-reported crime in America. After reading Ed Todd's article of Sept. 3, 1981 in The Midland Reporter-Telegram, I can certainly understand why. He tried the victim in the paper.

The charge to the jury states that "rape must be proven beyond a reasonable doubt," and I am convinced that the jury stood by that charge.

As responsible citizens we have a duty to support victims of crime and encourage prosecution, not condemn them.

Thank goodness twelve citizens of Midland proved justice prevails. My hat is off to them! I am a previous rape victim.

Fighting back

To The Editor:

It seems that everyone has a story of an apartment complex taking someone's deposit without legal cause. These complexes bluff the applicant into thinking that they have no legal rights.

However, you can take the complex to civil court for fifteen dollars and a little bit of your time. The complex cannot hold your deposit without showing how your deposit was used. I am willing to spend the extra money to protect my rights. I hope, however, that someone else will realize that they do have rights and that they can fight the system.

Saving the past?

To The Editor:

Mr. Phil Hocker looks out his studio window at the granduer of the Grand Tetons and wants all changes to stop. "Preserve the wilderness" so our descendents can see what was in the past.

That is the cry of the Sierra Club and others. But who will have the means to see the wild beauty if there is no energy to get there. Without energy, the money will dry up. Then, who will buy Mr. Hocker's designs? When his money supply runs out, he can gaze out his studio window and slowly starve to death.

Lights needed

To The Editor:

Not knowing whom to contact, perhaps the proper people will read this request.

We are in need of signal lights at G Street crossing Illinois, Texas and Wall Streets. There is none between A and the Andrews Hwy. and it is almost impossible to get across during the rush hours.

Texas International Airlines seeks representation

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas International Airlines has asked a federal judge to order Continental Airlines to hold a special shareholders' meeting so TIA can add six members to its board of directors.

Texas International gained majority control of Continental last week.

The Houston-based airline asked a Nevada U.S. District Court judge Tuesday to enforce the airline's rights as majority holder by ordering Continental to call the meeting for Oct. 19 for a vote on increasing the number of directors from 13 to 19, which TIA hopes to fill with its candidates.

Spokesman John Carlson of Texas International said in a statement the court documents emphasized that "in seeking some representation on Continental's board of directors as of Oct. 19, Texas International is taking its first available opportunity to exercise the property rights it acquired almost seven months ago.

"Continental should not be permitted to further delay the exercise of these property rights," he added, "by failing to perform its clear legal duty to call the requested stockholder meeting."

Texas International, a unit of Texas Air Corp., first called for the special meeting when it lifted its Continental stake to more than 50 percent last week. The control came after months of opposition by Continental, whose employees also tried to block TIA's bid with an ill-fated bid to buy a controlling interest themselves.

Despite substantial holdings of Continental's stock for several months, Carlson noted that TIA was unable to pursue adding its candidates to Continental's board because of the time involved in gaining federal regulatory approval for its bid to control Continental.

Continental spokesman John Clayton said the airline "at this point has not scheduled" a special meeting. He said Continental had not seen the court filing in Nevada and therefore would not comment on it until it could study it.

The Civil Aeronautics Board earlier approved TIA's proposal to buy up to 67 percent of Continental. The CAB also ruled any shareholder meeting forced by TIA to exercise control over Continental cannot be held until President Reagan acts on the CAB approval of TIA's takeover bid.

The president, who must rule on the merger because international routes are involved, has until Oct. 13 to act.

Lillie Saucier, 74, of 1412 S. Pratt St., died Tuesday in a Stanton hospital after a lengthy illness.

Services were to be at 3 p.m. today in the Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home chapel with the Rev. William Simpson, minister of Tall City Baptist Church, officiating. Burial was to be in Resthaven Memorial Park, directed by Ellis Funeral Home.

Pallbearers were to be Harold Glenn Arnold, Hugh Allen Arnold, Jay Ford, Tommy Ford, Rocky Pierson and Sam Moore.

AFL-CIO plans protest march on U.S. Capitol

By MERRILL HARTSON
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — AFL-CIO Secretary-Treasurer Thomas R. Donahue is cautioning the Reagan administration against ignoring workers and others who participate in this weekend's Solidarity Day march.

Donahue said Wednesday he has "no basis of predicting" the administration's reaction to Saturday's protest march, expected to attract more than 100,000 demonstrators from the ranks of labor, civil rights, women's rights, environmental and religious groups.

But the No. 2 man at the 15-million-member labor federation said he wouldn't be surprised if the White House seeks to designate the protesters as a minority within the Democratic Party — people who didn't support Ronald Reagan for president in the first place.

He said "that is a callous attitude that I find distressing."

Donahue said he was upset about comments attributed to an unidentified White House official who observed it wouldn't be anything major if a quarter million people turned out for the protest march.

"After all, you can get a few hundred thousand people here to listen to the Beach Boys" singing group, the Wall Street Journal quoted the administration official as saying.

Donahue told the Washington Press Club he hopes the administration isn't "bringing back the Nixon era of talking of our friends and enemies." But he also said he fears the administration's reaction to the protest march will be to accuse the AFL-CIO of political partisanship.

Record grain haul to cause cutbacks

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two consecutive record U.S. wheat crops have forced the administration to plan a 15 percent acreage cutback next year. But that's only part of the reason.

The world is producing a record grain crop, including wheat, rice and feed grains totaling more than 1.62 billion metric tons. The U.S. share of that total is 324.7 million tons, about 20 percent.

An analysis issued Tuesday by the department's Foreign Agricultural Service includes a look at the wheat situation and some of the factors that will bear on American producers as they look ahead to 1982.

WHEAT MAKES UP an estimated 458.7 million tons or approximately 28 percent of the world total of grain that is expected to be produced in 1981-82.

The U.S. wheat crop is currently estimated at 74.8 million tons.

Thus, while U.S. production is a huge factor, it is by no means the only one that has to be considered in terms of international trade and the availability of wheat from other countries, including Canada, Australia, Argentina and a few others.

Here are some observations included in the monthly report:

—Wheat prospects continue to be highly favorable in Canada and Australia, although some concern has developed in Argentina over prolonged dryness in some regions.

—In Common Market countries, the crop output is considerably below previous expectations. It is estimated at 52.1 million tons, almost 3 million below the record 1980-81 crop but still the second largest on record.

—The world wheat trade estimate now calls for a record of almost 102 million tons.

BASED ON THE estimates, total wheat exports are expected to include shipments by: the United States, 49.7 million metric tons; Canada, 17 million; Australia, 12.5 million; Argentina, 5 million; the Common Market countries, 14 million; the Soviet Union, 800,000; and others, 2.9 million.

Thus, wheat exports by the United States are expected to be about 49 percent of the total. In 1980-81, when total exports were 93.8 million tons, the U.S. share was 41.9 million tons, about 47 percent.

The Soviet Union, according to the analysis, is expected to import 17 million tons of wheat from all sources in 1981-82. Other major importers include: Common Market countries, 4.5 million tons; Japan, 5.7 million; Eastern Europe, 6.2 million; and China, 14 million.

But more than half of the wheat in world trade — 54.4 million tons — will be imported by other countries, about 80 nations that need to buy food to help make up for their own deficits.

After all the juggling with production, exports and imports, the figures wind up showing an estimated balance of wheat left over in mid-1982 of 79.8 million tons. Of that amount, U.S. stockpiles will be 28.2 million, the most in four years.

FARMERS AND FEEDLOT operators in the seven leading beef states had 6.29 million cattle being fed for the slaughter market on Sept. 1, down 11 percent from a year ago, the Agriculture Department says.

Officials said Tuesday that it was the smallest Sept. 1 feedlot inventory in six years. Only Nebraska among the major beef states showed an increase from a year ago.

High interest rates, relatively high feed costs and lagging consumer demand are factors in the feedlot situation.

The monthly report said marketings of feedlot cattle in August were about 1.53 million head, up 9 percent from a year earlier. But placements of new cattle on feed during the month — at 1.42 million — were down 12 percent from year-earlier levels.

Feedlot inventories in the seven states — which account for about three-fourths of the nation's beef — as of Sept. 1 and their percentages of a year earlier, included:

Arizona, 243,000, 79 percent of a year earlier; California, 561,000, 94 percent; Colorado, 595,000, 83 percent; Iowa, 980,000, 88 percent; Kansas, 1.12 million, 90 percent; Nebraska, 1.34 million, 103 percent; and Texas, 1.45 million, 82 percent.

THE AGRICULTURE Department says per capita cigarette smoking is expected to increase slightly this year for the first time since 1973.

The department's Economic Research Service said Tuesday that estimated consumption is expected to average 3,850 cigarettes or 192.5 packs. That would be five cigarettes or one-fourth of a pack more than in 1980.

According to department records, per capita smoking declined seven straight years after 1973 when the average rate was 4,148 cigarettes or 207.4 packs.

As determined by the agency, the per capita rate includes only people 18 years and older, smokers and nonsmokers alike. It is a statistical measure rather than a true gauge of American smoking habits..

JIMMY HANDY evangelist, gospel recording artist, husband father, and a dynamic man of God. After his mother fled from the south for four of her life and after many brutal beatings from Jimmy's father, their home became San Francisco, California. It was there Jimmy saw a different way of life and began to strive to overcome that oppression of his childhood. It wasn't too until he excelled as a musician and formed his own group. He worked his way up the ladder of success. The price of fame took its toll his life-the drugs, immorality and craze for fame led him on a down hill road. On his deathbed, after an overdose, he cried out to God his mother had told him about as a child. Jimmy has been a christian for eight years and is founder of Good News Outreach. He is in full time service for the Lord Jesus Christ.

JUDY HANDY'S life began with an unhappy childhood, being brought up in an ungodly home. It was these childhood experiences that molded Judy into a bitter and cold person. At age nineteen she became a prostitute and spent thirteen years as an experienced call girl in San Francisco. Judy learned well the path of the devil which leads to emptiness and destruction. Then, eight years ago in Honolulu, Hawaii, Judy's life took a dramatic turn for the better when she met Jesus Christ for the first time in her life.

Kidnap relatives using ads

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Anguished relatives of kidnap victims are turning to newspaper advertisements as a last resort to obtain release of loved ones — or at least get their bodies back.

The father of 30-year-old Augusto Rancilio, kidnapped two years ago, appealed in an ad for the kidnappers to return "at least the bones of my son so we can bury him and cry for him."

The appeals are seldom answered. But for many families the ads mark an end of hope. They also serve as a first step toward court action to declare the victim "presumed dead" so that the family can gain access to money and property.

Since 1972, at least 380 people have been abducted by ransom-seeking kidnappers in Italy. Many are released after payment of ransom, but 17 bodies have been recovered, at least 21 others are presumed dead and seven people are still being held, according to police sources.

The wave of kidnappings for ransom is not connected to the political terrorism in Italy or cases like the kidnap-murder of former Prime Minister Aldo Moro in 1978 by Red Brigades. Most kidnap victims are set free after a few weeks or months, as soon as bandits get money.

A Milan movie producer was held for a record of 16 months and released unharmed.

The family of Mario Ceschina, a 68-year-old industrialist abducted in Milan in October 1976, ran a newspaper ad recently, begging for "any information" about his fate.

Shortly after Ceschina was snatched his family paid a ransom reported to have amounted to several hundred thousand dollars. But the kidnappers did not release him and severed their contact with the family.

"Why can't they say at least he's dead, and we should stop hoping for his return," said a member of the Ceschina family who asked not to be further identified. "This way, we can sort things out and resume a normal life."

Italian authorities, in an effort to combat kidnappings by preventing ransom payments, often freeze the assets of an abducted person. Italian law also forbids access by relatives to the assets of any missing person until he is declared presumed dead.

A presumed dead petition can be filed two years after a person disappears.

"You resort to all possible channels to find out the fate of your loved one, and ads sometimes work," said Lorenzina Crosetto, wife of a kidnapped Turin industrialist, in a recent interview. She said she has also used newspaper ads to communicate with the kidnappers.

Japan to investigate Pacific 'Bermuda Triangle'

By JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — Rough seas being the sailor's fate, the 31 crewmen on the freighter Marcona Trader were not particularly concerned by the stormy weather as they steamed toward Japan with a load of iron ore.

But suddenly the ship lost speed, and its bow began to submerge. Seaman sent to investigate found a 30-foot-wide chunk of the bow missing, as if a giant shark had gnawed its way through the steel.

The Marcona Trader was the fifth large vessel to meet disaster last winter in a 1,000-by-670-mile oval-shaped stretch of the Pacific, off central Japan, that mariners have come to call the "Demon Sea."

The 39,586-ton ship — Liberian-registered and American-owned — was eventually towed to Japan, the only one of the five to see land again.

JAPAN'S Transport Ministry dismisses notions that supernatural forces, seaborne hobgoblins, are at work in the area, as some speculative writings suggest about the "Bermuda Triangle," a supposed danger zone off the southeast United States.

The official theory in the case of the Marcona Trader was that the pounding of heavy waves cracked and eventually broke away a piece of bow.

But the authorities are concerned enough to have launched a five-year investigation into what may be unusually powerful natural dangers — high winds and towering waves — in this swath of ocean.

Susumi Miki, of the Transport Ministry's Safety Control Department, said they are seeking $870,000 in next year's budget to build a "wave observation robot" to measure movements in the sea down to 16,400 feet. The 40-ton robot, when put in place in 1983, will send signals to Japan's communication satellite Himawari for relay to Tokyo.

THE MARITIME Safety Agency plans to buy a 6,000-ton patrol ship with helicopter pad to improve surveillance and rescue operations in the "Demon Sea."

"There is no question that the area becomes very dangerous in the winter months, particularly December and January," said Kiyoji Hamada of the Marine Accident Inquiry Agency.

He said rough waters are caused in part by the strong Kuroshio Current, which snakes northward along the coast of Japan.

Some scientists have speculated that cold Siberian winds, skimming over the relatively warm waters of the Kuroshio Current, help stir a cauldron of waves capable of chomping off large sections of ocean-going vessels.

It has been suggested that maritime dangers in the "Bermuda Triangle" also may result in part from deep and unpredictable ocean vortexes formed by currents and other natural forces.

HAMADA SAID "Demon Sea" waves more than 60 feet high battered the 33,833-ton Japanese ore-carrier Onomichi-Maru last Dec. 30, tearing off its bow and sinking the ship. The 29 crewmen were rescued.

As in the case of the Marcona Trader, the killer waves often strike unexpectedly, sometimes in stormy but not particularly dangerous weather.

Two days before the Onomichi-Maru went down, the 14,711-ton Yugoslav freighter Dunav radioed from a point 320 miles east of Nojimazaki Cape, near Tokyo, that it was taking on water and proceeding slowly toward Japan. No SOS was sent, however, and nothing more was heard from the ship and its crew of 35.

Another 35 crewmen were presumed drowned when the Greek freighter Antiparos disappeared Jan. 3. Its last message, sent from a point 760 miles east of Nojmazaki, said only that it was sailing in rough water. As with the Dunav, there was no SOS or other indication the ship and crew were in peril.

Other recent victims of the caprice of the Demon Sea were the 16,565-ton Greek cargo ship Agios Giorgis, which went down Jan. 8, 1980, with its crew of 29, and another Greek ship, the 15,695-ton Artemis, abandoned after its crew was rescued last Dec. 27.

SOME SCIENTISTS say human error may be the only demon at work in these cases.

The term "Ma-No-Kai" or "Demon Sea" was popularized here after large-sized ships began to ply this route between the Americas and Japan in great numbers, and one, a 34,000-ton Japanese freighter, was split in two by waves in 1969.

Guerrilla band linked to terrorism

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A maverick Palestinian guerrilla group has been linked to recent terrorist acts in Europe and some Western diplomats say the aim of the renegades is to discredit Yasser Arafat, chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

A PLO official in Damascus, who declined to be identified, said the group calling itself Al Asifa (storm) was led by one-time Jerusalem schoolteacher Sabri el-Banna, whose code name is Abu Nidal.

A founding member of Arafat's mainline Fatah guerrilla group in 1965, Abu Nidal was sentenced to death in abstentia by the PLO in 1972 for making threats against Arafat.

According to a source in Beirut who knows Abu Nidal personally, the guerrilla leader's goal is to eventually take over as chairman of the PLO.

Between the months of May and August Abu Nidal has been linked to several guerrilla actions in Europe, including attacks on two PLO representatives, and most recently the synagogue attack in Vienna which killed two people.

Abu Nidal, 50, was once a bitter enemy of the Syrian government. But a veteran senior diplomat in Damascus, who declined to be identified by name, said Abu Nidal has been based in the Syrian capital for the past year after falling out with President Saddam Hussein's regime in Iraq, which has improved relations with Arafat's PLO.

"The European operations have been an embarrasment for Arafat," said the diplomat.

Evidence that Abu Nidal was back in action again came after the May 1 killing of Heinz Nittel, head of the Austrian-Israeli friendship group in Vienna. According to leaflets issued in Damascus, Abu Nidal claimed responsibility for the attack.

Arafat aide Salah Khalaf, was quoted by the Lebanese press as saying that Abu Nidal was also behind the slaying of Naim Khader, the PLO representative in Belgium who was gunned down June 1.

On Aug. 1, a one-time Fatah executive committee member and a prominent figure of the now-defunct Black September group, Abu Daoud, was shot and wounded in a Warsaw cafe. Abu Iyad, Arafat's chief of security, suggested Abu Nidal might be responsible for the shooting.

On July 29, two Arabs were arrested at Vienna's Schwechat Airport after being met by PLO representative Dr. Ghazi Hussein. They were accused of trying to smuggle in machine pistols, Soviet-made assault rifles and hand grenades.

Reborn city to honor Ford

AP Laserphoto

Built in 1913 as the Pantlind Hotel, the newly renovated Amway Grand Plaza Hotel is the key feature of the rebirth of downtown Grand Rapids.

By BRIAN TUCKER
Associated Press Writer

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Chuck Stephens used to play a game with the patrons of his downtown restaurant.

On the handwritten menu, Stephens challenged them to pencil their way through a drawing of the downtown: a maze of blocked streets, choking dust and massive construction equipment.

Today is different. Most of the dust has settled to reveal more than $200 million worth of gleaming new buildings, art museums and hotels.

The city of 182,000 people on the Grand River in western Michigan is ready to strut its stuff as its most famous son comes home as guest of honor for the dedication of the Gerald Ford Presidential Museum on Friday.

PRESIDENT REAGAN ARRIVES today, as do Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo, Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and former French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing.

The dedication is Friday, the culmination of a week called the "Celebration on the Grand," which has seen the opening of a new art museum and a renovated 78-year-old hotel.

"When we first opened, all the 'in' people came in droves," says Stephens, 27, who began his Les Idees restaurant in 1977. "Then the 'in' people left, but we hung on. Now, more of the mom-and-dad types are coming. They feel safe again downtown."

Comedian Bob Hope is here to honor Ford, as are singers Sammy Davis Jr., Pearl Bailey, Tony Orlando and Glen Campbell, and political satirist Mark Russell. Hope is preparing for a TV special that will be taped inside the $7 million Ford museum and in Grand Center, the city's new $26 million convention and entertainment facility.

THE GRAND CENTER was financed by public and private dollars. Nearly half the money was spent on the arts center and two-thirds of that was contributed by more than 8,000 donors.

"We wanted to get as many people involved as we could, to make them actual investors," says Richard Gillette, Old Kent Bank chairman and a member of various committees that have designed the town's new look. "Not only will they care about the operation, but they'll take great amount of pride in the facility as well.

Another key element of Grand Rapids' rebirth is its economic diversity. General Motors Corp. has some factories in town, but the city's fiscal wellbeing is not tied to the slumping auto industry, unlike Detroit and many other Michigan cities. Unemployment is high at slightly less than 9 percent, but it's more than 2 percent lower than the state average.

Steelcase Corp., the country's largest office furniture manufacturer, employs 6,000 in suburban Grand Rapids. Amway Corp., the nation's second-largest direct sales concern, employs 4,500 at its nearby headquarters.

The conservative, religious nature of Grand Rapids' people also has played an important role in the revitalization. Its Dutch and Polish families are mostly members of the Christian Reformed and Roman Catholic churches.

"WHILE SOME PEOPLE think this is old-fashioned, I think there is still a very strong work ethic here," says William DeHaan, head of the convention bureau that drew more than $85 million so far in 1981. That conservativism also shows in government. Since 1958, Kent County officials have not occupied a building that was not paid for, according to county clerk Maury DeJonge.

"You know, 38 percent of our school students are in private schools, either Catholic or Christian, and yet people turn out continually to pass millage requests by the public school system," DeJonge said. "They know their responsibilities. Grand Rapids people have a quiet pride in their city."

Ford dedication provides for international summit

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is turning the dedication of the Gerald R. Ford presidential museum into a three-way international conference on such issues as troublesome Canadian energy policies and Mexican support for leftist rebels in El Salvador.

Reagan planned to meet today with Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau after his arrival in Grand Rapids, Mich. Reagan was scheduled to follow that meeting with a conference with Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo.

The three leaders, along with former French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing and Japanese Foreign Minister Sunao Sunoda, are gathering in Ford's hometown for the dedication Friday morning of the Ford museum.

White House aides took pains to play down the international aspects of the trip and to stress instead the amicable, ceremonial nature, despite the political strains that once marked Reagan's relations with Ford.

"IT IS important to remember the occasion of the visit to Grand Rapids is the opening of the museum," said one official. "The intention here is not to hold summit meetings of any type."

But the gathering offers an opportunity to deal, in a less-than-formal atmosphere, with a variety of topics in the U.S.-Canadian and U.S.-Mexican relationship.

The U.S. official, who asked not to be identified, said traditionally close U.S. ties with Canada were facing "very difficult, some would say intractable, problems."

"Our interest is in making progress," he said. "It just doesn't come as rapidly as some would like."

The official said that in addition to the Canadian energy policy, likely issues included Canadian concern over air pollution that originates in the United States and is carried north to Canada and the U.S.-Canadian pipeline being built to carry natural gas from Alaska to the lower 48 states.

CONSTRUCTION on the $30 billion pipeline has begun in Canada and the Canadian government is concerned that work has yet to get under way in Alaska.

The Canadian energy policy, intended to increase Canadian ownership of the domestic natural gas and oil industry from 30 percent now to 50 percent by 1990, was announced by Trudeau last Oct. 28.

Trudeau sought to accomplish the increased control through exploration and tax incentives aimed specifically at Canadian-dominated oil and natural gas companies. In the United States, complaints have been raised that this policy discriminates against U.S. interests and violates international trade agreements.

Oil lobbyists have been applying pressure in Congress, demanding retaliatory measures.

U.S. officials anticipated that the Lopez Portillo session would touch on a joint Mexican-French initiative recognizing the rebels in El Salvador as a legitimate political force.

The U.S. official who briefed reporters said the French and the Mexicans already have been told that "the United States didn't consider this to be helpful."

TRUDEAU AND Lopez Portillo both served as leaders of their nations while Ford was president of the United States. Giscard d'Estaing, defeated for re-election last spring, was president of France at the same time.

White House officials said that because the meetings with the foreign leaders would be brief — none was scheduled for more than 45 minutes — preparations were not as detailed as they would be for a formal state visit or summit conference.

Ford campaigned for Reagan's election last fall and has visited him at the White House this year.

Two plead guilty in kickback scheme

TEXARKANA, Texas (AP) — A county commissioner and a former county official charged in a wide-spread kickback scheme switched their pleas to guilty shortly after the onset of the commissioner's trial.

Titus County Commissioner Alvin Parrish Jr., who would have been the first of 10 Northeast Texas county commissioners to come to trial for allegedly accepting bribes in a kickback scam involving county road funds, changed his plea to guilty Wednesday on one count of extortion and one count of mail fraud.

Prosecutors agreed to drop the additional charges against Parrish, who had been indicted by a federal grand jury in Tyler on three counts of extortion, 11 counts of mail fraud and one of conspiracy.

Immediately after Parrish changed his plea, former Titus County Commissioner Carthel "Shorty" Reese pleaded guilty to one count of extortion and one count of mail fraud.

FBI source 'Solo' was really a duet

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Solo," once considered by the FBI as its best intelligence source about the Soviet Union, was a duet, The Washington Post reported today.

The newspaper said that a forthcoming book reveals that "Solo" was the cover name for two brothers, Morris and Jack Childs, who were paid to infiltrate the American Communist Party's upper ranks for more than 25 years.

Jack Childs died last year and his brother's whereabouts are not known, The Post said.

The Post quoted intelligence officials as saying the brothers traveled abroad and were accepted as confidants by communist leaders to the point that one of them was photographed with Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev.

These intelligence sources said that during the 1950s one of the brothers served as a Soviet courier, carrying as much as $1 million a year in funds to illegally subsidize the struggling American Communist Party, The Post said.

Although the FBI considered "Solo" its greatest intelligence coup, the Central Intelligence Agency thought it was possible "Solo" was being used by the Soviets to feed misinformation to the FBI, the sources were quoted as saying.

The brothers were identified by David J. Garrow, a University of North Carolina professor, in a book about the FBI and the late civil rights leader, Martin Luther King Jr. The Post said it independently verified the information.

Garrow said he made the discovery while trying to find why the FBI carried out its extensive campaign to discredit King. Garrow said FBI agents were told by Jack Childs that a King confidant was an active Communist Party member in the early 1950s.

Thatcher's husband may be investigated in real estate deal

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's husband Denis came under fire today for a letter he wrote on stationery from her official residence urging a Cabinet minister to authorize real estate development on a protected site in Wales.

The London Times reproduced the letter on its front page and reported an official investigation is likely into Denis Thatcher's "involvement in a controversial housing development."

Officials of the Welsh Office, a government department in Cardiff, confirmed that the letter was missing from their files and appeared to have been taken from a mail trolley in the building.

The letter on notepaper from 10 Downing Street, the prime minister's official residence, was sent to Nicholas Edwards, Secretary of State for Wales. A spokesman for the prime minister said Denis Thatcher had a right to use the stationery because he lives at the same residence as the prime minister.

Thatcher holds no government post. He identified himself in the letter as a consultant to Housing Development and Construction Ltd.

The company was denied permission by local authorities to build a motel and 63 houses in Snowdonia National Park, North Wales. The site is near Harlech Castle and local residents said construction there would obstruct the view of the Snowdon mountain range.

Thatcher's letter, which complained about an 11-month government delay in setting up an appeal, was addressed "Dear Nick," and signed "Yours, Denis."

A note on the bottom bearing Edwards' signature advised his staff to look into the matter, saying: "The explanation had better be good and quick — i.e. this week."

The letter was dated Dec. 11, 1980. Denis Thatcher's requested appeal was heard in March. In August, Edwards approved the development, overriding the objections of the local people, the Welsh Nationalist-dominated Gwynedd County Council and the Snowdonia National Park Planning Authority.

There was no immediate comment from either the Prime Minister or her husband, a 65-year-old retired oil executive. Denis Thatcher has made a practice of not giving interviews since his wife became Britain's first woman prime minister in May 1979.

EPA suit against Crystal Chemical Co. will continue

HOUSTON (AP) — Crystal Chemical Co.'s announced plans to file for bankruptcy will not affect a federal agency's suit over alleged pollution violations, an Environmental Protection Agency spokesman said Wednesday.

The Environmental Protection Agency's suit for $112,000 in civil penalties was filed last May when the government charged the firm had let two toxic chemical ponds overflow.

The spokesman said no date has been set for the case and is waiting assignment to a hearing officer.

In an unsigned letter, company officials said they had released most of their employees Tuesday but had retained a few "to discharge essential functions."

The letter said the company would file a bankruptcy petition "promptly." A court clerk said Wednesday that petition had not yet been filed.

The firm did not detail specific causes for the action. Officials could not be reached for comment.

In addition to the EPA suit, Crystal, which manufactured herbicides and other lawn and garden chemicals, was cited by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration in August following an accident which killed worker Jerry Davis.

Davis was fatally injured Aug. 5 when a vat containing caustic chemicals overflowed, said Ben Baird, OSHA acting area director. Baird said Davis died at a local hospital the next day.

The company was cited for not having a system to prevent such an accident and for not providing employees with protective equipment. Baird said each citation carries a $700 fine, but the firm contested them and the matter is still pending.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, September 18, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Greta Garbo shares this birthday with you. Also born on this date: the late Eddie Anderson, who played Jack Benny's beloved chauffeur "Rochester." In the months just ahead, stick to the "tried and true" in business. Family influence and new contacts bring exciting opportunities your way. Those between jobs will find themselves back on the right track again. Try to be more diplomatic when attempting to influence relatives. You need to divide your time more evenly between work and pleasure. Choose a spouse who understands and sympathizes with your urge to get ahead. The couple that grows together stays together.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Today's events should bring new financial gains in the near future. Have no illusions about the economic situation however. Special benefits begin to accrue as the result of a chance friendship.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Everything goes smoothly now for you and your loved ones. Take stock of where you stand and where you should be headed. Ask a trusted friend for advice. Some travel could prove beneficial.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You may find that you have more independence now. Court the favor of those who have influence and power but remain true to your principles. Otherwise, you will have lasting regrets.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Relative or friend may confide a problem. Avoid making accusations. Offer attractive alternatives. A free exchange of ideas is recommended. Aid may be received from unusual sources.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Friend or associate may be intent on creating a problem. Know it and protect yourself! Strive for greater control over business and financial affairs.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Family members deserve special consideration. Treat others as you wish to be treated! Cooperative efforts will help boost profits. A glamorous social event highlights your evening.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Become a "self starter" and take more initiative! Current circumstances favor your efforts to get ahead. Travel plans are subject to change. Make allowances for a partner who has problems.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): An aura of glamour or mystery surrounds today's events. Separate fact from fantasy; enlighten those who mean the most to you. Patience is an important asset when playing romantic games.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A long distance call could be very revealing. Rely on your leadership abilities to carry you through a difficult situation at place of employment. Trust in the good intentions of others.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You may be easily distracted today. Try to put any worries aside and concentrate on completing essential tasks. Member of opposite sex may be setting a trap. Keep your guard up!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Traveling could work against your best interests now. Consider the alternatives. You may experience a letdown after a verbal battle with someone you respect. Think carefully before you act.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Constructive thinking is essential now. See things as they really are and you will choose the right course. Romance may be clouding the real issue! Arrange to postpone an important meeting.

Spectators at the World Team Championship in Port Chester, N.Y. next month will have the pleasure of watching Britain's John Collings in action. A mercurial bidder, he is one of the world's fastest and most accurate card players. This hand is from Britain's match against Hungary during the recent European Championships.

The contract of six spades was reached at both tables. The Hungarian declarer won the club lead in dummy, cashed the ace and queen of trumps and then laid down the king of diamonds. That protected against a 5-1 diamond break. Unfortunately, diamonds were 6-0. West ruffed and cashed the ace of hearts for a one-trick set.

Unlucky! To find a 6-0 trump break is a rare occurrence. But Collings found the superior—and successful—line in less than 10 seconds!

He won the ace of clubs, cashed the ace of spades and led a low heart from dummy. When East followed with a low heart, Collings claimed the rest of the tricks!

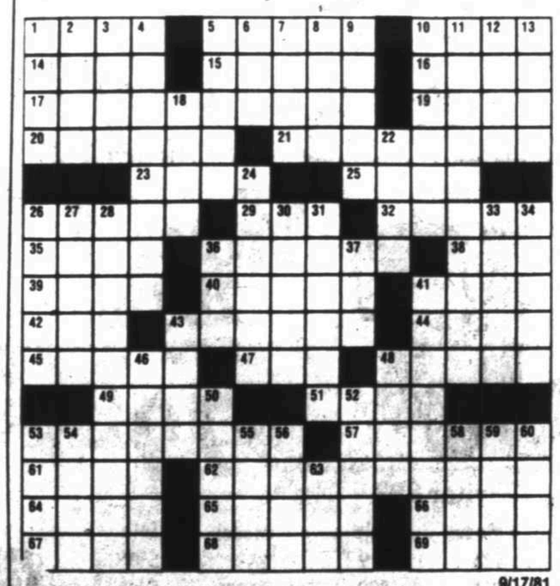

Assume that West returns a trump. Declarer wins in hand, ruffs a heart with the king of trumps and gets back to his hand with a club ruff. He draws the last trump and can then overtake the king of diamonds in dummy and cash three high diamonds to discard all of his remaining hearts.

Teammate Irving Rose confessed that he had a moment of worry as he watched Collings play the hand. Not that he ever doubted that Collings would make the contract. "I was simply wondering whether he (Collings) would find the winning play in less than 15 seconds!"

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Haig says AWACS deal is vital to Mid East peace

By JIM ADAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig, pressing for Congress to support the sale of AWACS radar planes to Saudi Arabia, says the deal is vital to Middle East peace and would help — not hurt — Israel.

On the eve of his appearance today before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Haig said rejection by Congress would undermine President Reagan's ability to "conduct an independent American foreign policy free of the restraints of overriding external vetoes."

Opponents contending the sale is a threat to Israel have until Oct. 30 to try to veto it. That would require rejection by both the House and Senate and has never been done.

The $8.5 billion sale includes five Airborne Warning and Control System radar planes plus missiles and extra fuel tanks to increase the range and firepower of 62 U.S.-built Saudi F-15 jet fighters.

In a speech Wednesday night at the World Bank, Haig said the administration recognizes "the very special obligation the United States has for the survival and future viability of the state of Israel."

But he denied that the Saudi deal "would make that obligation more difficult to fulfill" and said Reagan "must be driven by broader considerations."

The sale is crucial to hopes of building a Middle East peace structure that would both enhance Israel's security and ensure regional stability, Haig said.

A leading opponent of the AWACS sale, Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., scheduled a news conference this afternoon to announce how many senators co-sponsor his veto resolution. He has been saying 46, five short of a majority, but aides hinted in advance that he would announce additional names.

President Reagan's national security adviser, Richard V. Allen, said Wednesday that administraton briefings for congressmen are beginning to pick up support for the sale.

"Now that the administration is beginning to make its case — the members are hearing the arguments for the first time — we're making substantial headway," Allen said.

He gave no figures, however, on how many legislators support the sale.

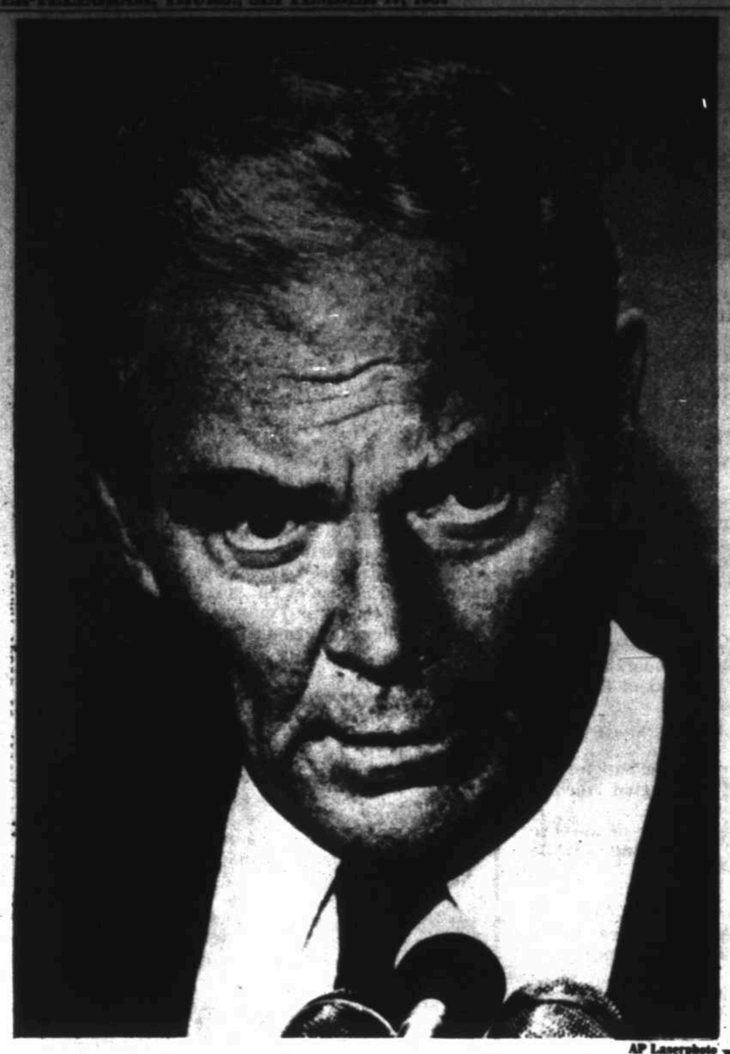

A Saudi prince joined the administration's campaign Wednesday.

Prince Bandar Bin Sultan, 35, commander of Saudi air forces defending the country's oil fields, lobbied congressmen including Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker and Rep. Clement J. Zablocki, D-Wis., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

"It was a very low-key approach," said a staff aide who asked not to be identified. "He gives an evaluation of why the Saudis chose the AWACS and how it will fit into an overall Saudi air defense system.

"He casts his case in terms of shared U.S.-Saudi views and objectives...and he says the planes will not be a threat to Israel."

At the request of congressional committees, the Air Force will station an AWACS plane at nearby Andrews Air Force Base in the next two weeks and give congressmen tours and briefings.

Secretary of State Alexander Haig addresses the Alliance to Save Energy at the World Bank headquarters in Washington Wednesday evening. He told the gathering the U.S. recognizes Israel's security interests, but must not seem subject to external vetoes in the sale of AWACS radar planes to Saudi Arabia.

Tentative accord averts hotel strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Maids, bellhops, bartenders and waiters were reporting to work as scheduled today after a tentative contract averted a strike against 24 major Washington hotels.

The tentative accord was reached Wednesday by negotiators for the Hotel Association of Washington and the Hotel and Restaurant Employees Union Local 25.

The contract between the Hotel Association and about 6,000 maids, bellhops, bartenders, waiters and other service workers expired at midnight Tuesday. Union members voted Sunday to strike when the pact expired if no progress was being made in the negotiations.

Details of the agreement were to be revealed formally at today's union ratification meeting.

The Washington Post, quoting unidentified sources, reported today that a major provision of the new contract includes a $60-a-week pay increase over the next three years for the average hotel employee.

The increase would raise the average hotel worker's hourly pay about $1.50, from $4.65 to $6.15 over the three-year period, the Post said.

The hotel association is slated to review the contract on Friday. Both sides were expected to ratify the pact.

"I am ecstatic," said Ronald Richardson, a union negotiator. "It's absolutely the best contract there has ever been in Washington for us."

Richardson said the union got "more than management wanted to give us."

Allen Siegel, chief negotiator for the Hotel Association said, "It's a fair contract."

The package also reportedly includes modifications in fringe benefits and some working conditions.

Local 25 had asked for salary increases of about 20 percent, greatly increased fringe benefits and a shorter work week.

Former state legislator seeks spot on Federal Election Commission

By CHARLES RICHARDS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Texas legislator Lyndon Olson Jr., now a member of the State Board of Insurance, visited with presidential adviser Max Friedersdorf at the White House Wednesday regarding his hopes for a spot on the Federal Election Commission.

"Our conversation was very amiable, and we just generally discussed the FEC. I had some questions about the commission and about the appointment generally, and they wanted to visit with me," Olson said in an interview.

Olson has not been formally nominated for one of two vacancies on the six-member FEC.

"I have been given no indication directly by the White House of anything other than that I am under serious consideration," he said.

President Reagan has indicated to Senate Democrats he'd like to appoint the 34-year-old Olson to the $52,700-a-year job despite the fact he wasn't on a list they submitted to him.

Reagan's move displeased three Democratic senators, who suggested the president broke a "gentleman's agreement" in accepting the recommendation of several Texas House members over the names they submitted.

The announced support Wednesday of Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, appeared to bolster Olson's chances. Bentsen said he has arranged for Olson to meet this week with members of the Senate leadership.

"My understanding is that Mr. Bentsen wants me to talk to several of the Democratic senators, and I want to do that," Olson said.

"I'm quite interested in the appointment. For the moment, I am trying to get a sense of — if it is offered — what all it will involve and the feel of the commission itself," Olson added.

The senators in immediate need of appeasement are Sen. Wendell Ford, D-Ky., ranking minority member of the Senate Rules Committee; Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., the Senate Minority Leader; and Sen. Alan Cranston, D-California. They are the trio that met and decided on two names for Reagan's consideration for the Democratic vacancy on the six-member FEC.

"It breaks with precedent. Every member of the FEC has been on some sort of Senate Democratic or Republican leadership list, and this is the first time anyone has been proposed that hasn't been on the list," said Dave Lieter, an aide to Ford.

Olson said he was aware of criticism from the Rules Committee staff also. Joseph E. diGenova, chief counsel and staff director of the Rules Committee, was quoted as saying Olson's credentials "as far as I can tell are non-existent." The official said the FEC post "is not some resting place for people who have no experience in the area of election law."

Olson said several people he's never met have been speaking with authority about his qualifications and the status of his appointment chances. Some of them may not be as knowledgeable as others, he added.

"I'm not sure what qualifications one needs to be an expert in election law, except to learn and be a devotee of the code, one who studies it," Olson said. "I don't know what the gentleman on the Rules Committee means by experience. I probably need to talk to him and ask him."

Olson, who is from Waco, is a graduate of Baylor University and the Baylor Law School. He served three terms in the Texas House of Representatives.

He was recommended to Reagan by several Texas House members, including Rep. Kent Hance, who won points with the president by sponsoring his bipartisan tax bill in the House.

Other Texas congressmen backing him, Olson said, are Marvin Leath of Marlin, Mickey Leland of Houston and Jim Mattox of Dallas.

Olson was in the Texas House while Hance was in the Texas Senate.

"We carried each other's legislation," Olson said. Both gave up their seats in 1978 to run for Congress.

Gulf States Utilities granted authority to increase rates

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gulf States Utilities Co. has been granted authority to increase rates about $60 million a year, or 12.7 percent, the Texas Public Utility Commission said Wednesday.

Specific rates will not be available for about two weeks but the commission said residential rates for the Beaumont and Southeast Texas region would go up about 11 percent. General rates will increase about 13.8 percent.

The commission adopted the examiner's recommended return on equity of 16.5 percent.

In other final orders the utility commission:

— Approved redused intrastate long distance rates for deaf users of telecommunications devices for the deaf. The reduction was proposed by Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., General Telephone and Continental Telephone Co.

— Granted General Telephone a rate increase of about $3.4 million resulting from a Federal Communications Commission order on accounting changes issued earlier this year.

France's National Assembly debates abolition of death sentence

By GREG MacARTHUR
Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) — The National Assembly starts the guillotine on its last mile today with the first round of a televised debate that appears certain to end in abolition of the death sentence.

In public opinion polls six months ago and again earlier this month, retention of the death penalty was favored nearly 2-to-1. But the voters in June elected a lower house of the French Parliament in which Socialists and Communists pledged to abolish capital punishment outnumber the anti-abolitionists nearly 2-to-1.

The 290 Socialists and 40 Communists in the 491-member assembly are expected to vote as a bloc to approve the Socialist government's abolition bill.

The conservative opposition announced its members could vote according to their consciences. It called for a national referendum on the question, but the government refused to hold one.

Under the government's proposal, the stiffest allowable punishment would be life in prison. In France, that usually means 20 years or less. The opposition criticized the bill because it does not replace the death penalty with a mandatory life sentence that could not be shortened by clemency.

The National Association of Prison Guards criticized the bill because it does not include some form of punishment for life-term prisoners who kill while in prison.

France's last execution occurred in 1977. There are six men now on Death Row, and their sentences would be automatically commuted to life imprisonment if the bill is adopted.

Greece, Belgium and Ireland are the only other countries in the 10-nation European Common Market that still have capital punishment laws, but no one has been sentenced to death in those countries in years.

The abolitionists claim there has been no increase in crime in the other six countries and condemn executions as a vengeful vestige of the past. Phillipe Marchand, a spokesman for the Socialist abolitionist group in the assembly, said the death of the guillotine is "a goal in the tradition of humanism and socialism and would be the end of a long march."

Four hours of debate today will be followed by four more hours Friday. Both will be televised live.

The guillotine, a heavy slanted blade that drops between two grooved uprights, became France's instrument of execution during the French Revolution. It has taken an estimated 4,600 lives in the 192 years since it was first employed. It was named for Dr. Joseph Ignace Guillotin, a member of the revolutionary National Assembly, who recommended it as a painless means of execution.

He's 'Rather' bemused by ratings game

NEW YORK (AP) — Anchorman Dan Rather says he's not oblivious to the ratings, "but I'm rather bemused by all the attention that goes with it."

His comments came after the CBS "Evening News," which he anchors, fell to last place in the ratings for the first time ever.

"If quality doesn't sell," Rather said Wednesday, "I don't know what we can do about that."

The latest A.C. Nielsen figures say CBS finished behind NBC and ABC in the ratings competition for nightly news in the week of Sept. 7-11, six months after Rather replaced Walter Cronkite.

CBS dominated the rival networks in the last 10 years that Cronkite had the job of anchorman. Since March 9, Cronkite has concentrated on his "Universe" science series and has taken a vacation.

In Rather's six months on the job, CBS's evening news program took first place in the ratings every week but three, and one of those times was when Rather was on vacation.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Judy Woodruff, NBC's White House correspondent, gave birth to a 6-pound, 3-ounce boy just eight hours after she appeared on the "Nightly News" with a report on President Reagan's budget cuts.

Jeffrey and his mother were doing fine after the Tuesday morning birth, NBC News spokesman Ron Najman said.

Ms. Woodruff is married to Al Hunt, political correspondent for the Wall Street Journal and commentator for PBS' "Washington Week in Review."

Najman said Ms. Woodruff is expected to take a leave of absence through the end of the year. She will be replaced by Emory King as White House correspondent.

●

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Universal Television has found a replacement for actress Lynn Redgrave, who was dropped from the TV series "House Calls" after a dispute that she claimed stemmed from her request to breast-feed her baby at work.

Universal Television President Robert A. Harris announced Wednesday that Sharon Gless, who previously starred in the NBC series "Turnabout" and was a regular on the CBS series "Switch," has been signed for "House Calls."

Miss Gless will create a new character on the CBS series — Jane Jeffries, a new administrative assistant at Kensington General Hospital. The series is scheduled to resume production Sept. 28.

Miss Redgrave has sued Universal Television for $10 million, claiming she was unfairly dropped from the show. Universal said the dispute with Miss Redgrave grew out of a demand to double her salary and had nothing to do with the breast-feeding request.

●

LOS ANGELES (AP) — TV producer Norman Lear says a coalition of the "new right" and some evangelical fundamentalists are "a new breed of robber barons who have organized to corner the market on morals."

The creator of the television series "All in the Family" and "Maude" said Wednesday at a meeting of the Hollywood Radio and Television Society that the principle of tolerance, "which allows us to live together as Americans," is threatened.

"To disagree with the conclusions of the new right and religious new right on numerous matters of morality and politics is to be labled a poor Christian, or unpatriotic or anti-family," he said.

●

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gary Coleman, the 13-year-old star of NBC's "Diff'rent Strokes" TV series, has asked a court to review his contract with Tandem Productions, his lawyer says.

Tandem countered Monday with a $1 million breach-of-contract suit against the actor and his parents, William and Edmonia Coleman.

Coleman was not due back on the set until Sept. 21, but Tandem sued because he "informed us he will not be here Sept. 21 or any time thereafter," said Tandem spokeswoman Barbara Brogliatti.

But one of Coleman's attorneys, Harry Evans Sloan, said Wednesday that Coleman only announced that he would not return to work after Tandem filed suit.

Coleman, who has been on the show three seasons, has a contract that calls for him to be given $30,000 an episode this year.

WASHINGTON (AP) — After a news photographer spotted CIA Director William J. Casey walking into the White House on crutches, the CIA disclosed that Casey broke his leg 11 days ago playing golf on New York's Long Island.

Agency spokesman Dale Peterson said Wednesday that Casey, 68, hasn't missed a day of work despite the injury.

Oldest mammal fossil unearthed

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of the oldest fossils of a North American mammal, a previously unknown type from the age of dinosaurs, has been unearthed in Arizona, scientists announced today.

The fossilized jawbone and teeth, estimated to be 180 million years old, belonged to an animal the size of a small mouse or shrew. It may represent one of the earliest stages of mammalian development, said the National Geographic Society, which sponsored the work.

Dr. Farish A. Jenkins Jr., a biology professor at Harvard University, said the discovery joins a few teeth found in the same area last fall as the oldest mammalian fossils ever recovered on the continent.

The expedition led by Jenkins found the tiny fossil, half as long as a human fingernail, on the next-to-last day of a six-week dig this summer at an Indian reservation in northeastern Arizona.

Jenkins had been searching the area, a quarry called the Kayenta Formation, for four years for the remains of the earliest mammals on Earth. Although he and colleagues found other fossils, the remains of these small mammals eluded him until now.

The jaw fossil, embedded in a rock, was found by Kathleen Smith, an assistant professor of anatomy at Duke University.

Jenkins said similar fossils were found previously in southwest England, Wales and China. But with the teeth and jaw found in Arizona, he said, "we have evidence that these earliest mammals existed in the New World, too."

No one knows what the animal looked like or how it lived during a time when dinosaurs, large and small, dominated the world.

Mammals are believed to have originated from extinct reptiles called therapsids more than 230 million years ago. The earliest ones are all thought to have been small creatures that probably were insect eaters.

Warm-blooded animals that nurse their young, mammals exist today as more than 4,000 species, including man. But thousands of other species have evolved and died out since mammals first appeared.

The teeth found last year at the discovery site, by Will Downs of the Museum of Northern Arizona, belonged to a Morganucodontid, one of two known varieties of very early mammals. The other is called Kuehneotheriid.

Jenkins said the new find has similarities to both those types, but is definitely different.

THE SILVA MIND CONTROL METHOD

Johanne Blodgett, over 11 years an instructor-lecturer of the Silva Mind Control Method, one of the largest mind expansion groups in the world, is now presenting the Silva Basic Lecture Series in Midland.

Briefly, "Silva Mind Control" is a system of expanding consciousness by lowering brain wave activity via relaxation methods and reaching what is commonly known as the "Alpha" state. Once at this level the student introduces techniques to program himself at this inner conscious level to achieve specific goals. Because he is at the creative, causative level of mind when these goals are introduced, the Phenomenon known as "Silva Mind Control" takes effect to a degree that is often startling to the initiate.

Coincidences begin to happen and the individual is pleasantly surprised at the upturn his life takes. Negative thinking, limiting and self-defeating thoughts are eliminated. The student, believing himself capable of anything, actually accomplishes things he previously believed beyond his capabilities. He seems to grow into a new, more relaxed, aware person. Relationships, and the way he deals with these relationships change. He is more understanding. Relating to all people differently, he views his family and himself as well from an entirely new perspective. With self realization he sees where the other person is coming from. He understands; he has evolved.

The first half of the "Silva Mind Control" lecture series, is directed primarily at relaxation techniques, sleep control (without drugs), dream control, awake control, overcoming pain, memory improvement, and the control of habits such as smoking and overeating. In addition to this, there are dynamic methods for solving problems; problems that appear to have no solution and problems where the solution is known but the approach to the solution is unclear. Instilling self confidence and the encouragement of positive thinking is a major part of this portion of the course.

The student learns to overcome fears, illness and failure through the fundamental understanding that we ourselves and our belief systems are the cause of all negative as well as positive experiences. Success comes easily when students discover the reasons for success and learn to program for positive results with direct and specific techniques.

For those interested in the ESP section of the program, the second half if an eye-opening experience. Johanne takes the mystery out of ESP, stating that we all have this ability deep within ourselves and only require instruction to bring it to the surface. The graduation exercise shows each student what he is actually capable of, turning even the most skeptical into believers. During this portion of the series, the lecturer elaborates on ESP, intuition, and psychic phenomena. More and more people are open to, and accept the fact that these abilities, lying dormant can be brought out and used to great advantage. The more these new found abilities are used, the more the person changes. He grows. He matures. He evolves.

Californian convicted of aggravated assault

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A California man who struck his cousin with a baseball bat in ending a continuing feud was found guilty of aggravated assault late Tuesday afternoon by a six-man, six-woman jury which deliberated more than six hours in the guilt-innocent phase of the trial in Judge Vann Culp's 238th State District Court.

And the jury, after hearing additional arguments by the prosecuting and defense attorneys in the voluntary manslaughter trial of 33-year-old Jerry Allen Mouser, returned to the jury room and exited 40 minutes later with recommended punishment: a 10-year prison sentence. But the jurors decided to suspend the sentence and place the man on probation for five years.

Mouser, a welder, was charged with voluntary manslaughter after his cousin, Pat Armstrong, 26, died six days after Mouser had struck him in the side and in the head with a aluminum baseball bat during a quarrel on Sept. 17 at Mouser's westside Midland house.

Evidence in the trial indicated that Mouser had resented working for Armstrong, who was construction job foreman; objected to Armstrong telling him what to do, and took offense to Armstrong's criticism of him and his wife, Elaine.

Prosecutor Rob Sutphen argued that Mouser in weeks previous to the Sept. 17 incident had made threats on Armstrong's life. The threats were not idle, he maintained.

"This defendant said someday 'He (Armstrong) is going to push me too far, and I'm going to kill him,' " Sutphen said.

He noted that pathologist Dr. Martha Madsen had determined that a "forceful blow" to the head had fractured Armstrong's skull. "The defendant knew what he was doing."

"The defendant did not use the kind of force Mr. Armstrong was using — mainly the fist," said the prosecutor. "We don't have Mr. Armstrong with a weapon."

Co-prosecutor Jim Rex countered defense attorney David Lashford's contention that the striking blow wasn't all that forceful. Lashford had speculated that Armstrong's skull may have been fractured in the fall.

"That blow wasn't a love tap to get somebody to leave you alone," Rex said.

However, he noted "This is not a murder case," as the blow apparently came in the flow of "sudden passion arising from an adequate cause."

The prosecutor outlined the haggling between Armstrong and Mouser and the build-up of animosity between the two.

"Finally on that night, he (Mouser) snapped. Something built up inside of him; he didn't let it out....

"If he (Armstrong) gives him enough trouble, he might kill him, and that's exactly what happened," Rex said.

Rex speculated that the initial baseball bat blow to Armstrong's midriff was a "devastating blow" and that the blow to the head was even more severe.

"The next time you hit, you're going to hit a little bit harder," he said.

Defense counsel Lashford said that the death was not intentional.

"No one is happy or proud of the fact that someone is dead," Lashford said.

He conjured up a parallel: of a child being accidentally struck and killed by an on-coming car.

"It's a terrible result," he said, "but that doesn't necessarily mean a crime has been committed."

In referring to the on-going quarrelling between Armstrong and Mouser, Lashford said that the defendant "was not out looking for trouble."

"He (Armstrong) was physically able to take care of himself. They had been in numerous arguments the whole time."

Lashford described Armstrong as "a little overbearing, a little pretentious."

In trying to prove self-defense, Lashford said Mouser was "in fear of his life" in that Sept. 17 incident at Mouser's house in the 4000 block of Anetta Drive.

After the jury convicted him, Mouser briefly testified in the punishment phase of his trial. Maximum punishment for aggravated assault is a 10-year prison sentence; maximum punishment for voluntary manslaughter is a 20-year prison term.

"I'm sorry that it all happened," Mouser said. "I'd just like to get it over with."

But prosecutor Rex said Mouser's regrets were not due to Armstrong's death.

"The reason he's sorry is that he's in quite a bit of trouble at this time."

Man given two years probation for 'borrowing' roommate's truck

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A 23-year-old Midlander who borrowed his roommate's pickup truck, disconnected the odometer cable, drove to San Angelo and wrecked the pickup was placed on a two-year probated term by a seven-man, five-woman jury in Midland's 142nd State District Court in a trial that began and ended on Wednesday.

The jury found the defendant, Kirk Walker, guilty of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle belonging to his friend, Timothy Charles Dube, a mechanic who was in Houston on a business trip when the incident occurred.

Dube, who said Walker was living at his house southeast of Midland, said that once he had allowed his friend to drive to the store in the pickup and that he had given him permission to use household items, but that he had not given him permission to drive the pickup on that day. He said he had left the vehicle's keys near the telephone and had made no attempt to conceal them.

Dube said he often had driven his friend to work and had picked him up afterward.

Defense attorney Bill Smith's ploy was to prove "apparent permission to use the vehicle and everything else out there" as a defense in the case. However, the disconnected odometer cable suggested that the defendant knew he did not have the right to drive Dube's 1981 Chevrolet pickup and hinted at an effort to cover up use of Dube's truck.

Dube said when he returned to Midland from Houston four days after he had left, he found his pickup missing from his yard, called the Midland County Sheriff's Office and soon located the vehicle in a San Angleo pound. The pickup's right side was "totally smashed up," Dube said, and beer cans were in the floor board.

Dube said he was upset and that he ignored his friend's pleas for him to dismiss the criminal charges.

Evidence indicated that Walker was arrested in San Angelo for driving 70 mph in a 30 mph speed zone, not signaling when changing traffic lanes, and for driving while intoxicated.

At time of the trial, Walker was on probation for a first (misdemeanor) offense of DWI.

Punishment range for the offense is from two years to 10 years in prison and the imposition of a $5,000 fine.

Prosecuting the case in Judge Pat Baskin's court were Assistant District Attorney's Mary Ann Oakley and Assistant County Attorney Woody Leverett.

Hayakawa understands position

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. S.I. Hayakawa says its "perfectly understandable" that his colleague, Sen. Barry Goldwater, wants him to retire and not run for reelection from California next year.

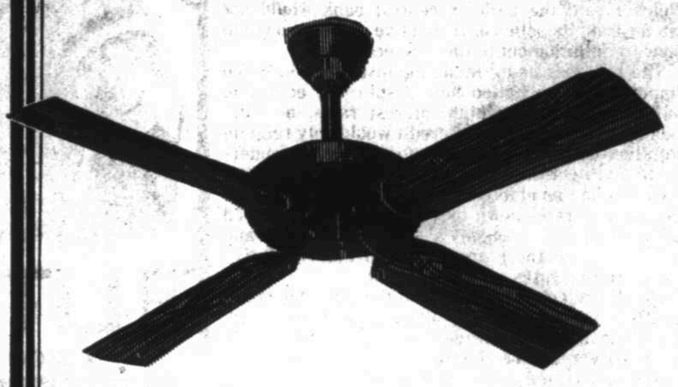

"What other position could a father possibly take?" Republican Hayakawa said Wednesday, referring to the fact that Rep. Barry Goldwater Jr., R-Calif., wants to run for the seat.

The elder Goldwater, an Arizona Republican, was quoted by the Los Angeles Times as saying that unless Hayakawa's popularity in polls improves, he should quit when his six-year term ends next year.

Hayakawa, 74, said he would reassees his reelection plans in December if his popularityrcontinues to fall. Polls have shown him falling behind a wide range of candidates from both parties, including the younger Goldwater.

The Times quoted Goldwater as telling his son: "I wouldn't campaign against Sam (Hayakawa). I like Sam. In fact, I made the first campaign speech for him when he ran for the Senate. But I will campaign for Barry."

Fed throws interest-rate ball back in Reagan's lap

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Reserve is tossing the politically volatile interest-rate problem back at President Reagan and Congress by claiming that growing budget deficits — not the Fed's tight-credit policy — are keeping rates so high.

Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker told the Senate Budget Committee Wednesday that the president and Congress have made only a "down payment" with the cuts made so far in federal spending.

Volcker said that the only way to lower interest rates without refueling inflation is for even deeper budget cuts over the next three years — perhaps as much as $100 billion 1984 alone.

His reassertion that the Fed would not alter its tight-money policies came as the government reported that the nation's industrial production in August declined 0.4 percent, the biggest drop in 13 months.

Analysts blamed the decline — coming after production had been crawling upward — on high interest rates.

Otto Eckstein, president of Data Resources Inc., a private forecasting firm, said the decline doesn't mean a recession has arrived, "but if interest rates stay high another few months, it's recession for sure."

Elsewhere on the economic front:

—The administration got some breathing room to make further budget cuts for fiscal 1982 when the House approved legislation to allow the government to continue operating for a month if work on spending bills is not completed by Oct. 1, the start of the new fiscal year.

Reagan is expected to seek additional fiscal 1982 reductions totaling $13 billion to $18 billion. Deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said the president was "zeroing in" on them but probably would not announce them until next week.

—Federal officials approved a profit-sharing plan worked out between the Chrysler Corp. and its union employes as part of an agreement designed to get the company back on its feet. Chrysler would pay the workers 15 percent of any U.S. and Canadian profits which total more than 10 percent of net worth. The agreement expires in 1983.

—American Telephone and Telegraph Co. said its third-quarter profit rose 22.3 percent to $1.95 billion, or $2.93 a share, from $1.58 billion, or $2.13 a share, in the same period last year. Third-quarter revenue rose 16 percent to $14.9 billion.

—Philip Caldwell, chairman of Ford Motor Co., predicted the auto industry will sell 13 million cars and trucks in the United States during the 1982 model year, up from 11.4 million the previous 12 months.

High used-car prices, lower fuel costs and "the prospect for some reduction in interest rates" would spur the increase, he said.

Volcker was not welcomed with open arms by the Senate Finance Committee.

"You're high on the hit list of any lynch group out there in the country," Sen. Mark Andrews, R-N.D., told him. Other senators said constituents are demanding his resignation and, in a few cases, his head.

"It may be easier to cut off the head of the Federal Reserve, but when you have the Federal Reserve running around headless, you'll still have the same problem you started with," the Fed chairman said.

Declaring there is no rapid solution to the problem, Volcker said the nation's central bank would not waver from its policy of restrictive money growth to squeeze inflation out of the U.S. economy.

The progress being made against inflation is too important to be halted now despite the economic suffering caused by high interest rates, he said, adding that a loosening of credit would only reignite inflation and send interest rates higher as lenders rush to protect their investments.

"If we had no objective in the world other than to get interest rates down by Christmas" and the Fed pumped up the economy's supply of money and credit, "the chances are very high that by Christmas, interest rates would be higher."

He also rejected some calls in Congress for credit controls, saying such remedies are arbitrary, unenforceable and cause market disruptions that "would likely only make the situation worse."

Volcker blamed government deficits for sustaining high interest rates by creating increased competition with private borrowers for a limited pool of credit that is being kept tight by the Fed.

Asked if he thought Congress would have to pare entitlement programs, such as Social Security, to achieve the needed budget cuts, Volcker said, "I think you are going to have to face some of those programs.... You have no alternative."

Reagan said on Tuesday, however, that he was not planning to propose any new cuts in Social Security for 1982.

Liberals out to stall conservatives' controversial busing legislation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Conservatives, finally successful in breaking a summer-long filibuster, are hoping to win final Senate approval next month of a sweeping rollback of court-ordered busing in school desegregation cases.

But liberals who held the anti-busing forces at bay for three months said they have not exhausted parliamentary maneuvers to stall the controversial legislation.

While four earlier attempts failed, the Senate mustered one more than the three-fifths majority needed to approve a cloture motion Wednesday ending the filibuster. The vote was 61-36.

But Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., who led the opposition to the anti-busing provision, vowed to continue the fight when the measure is recalled for further action, probably in October.

Without spelling out his tactics, Weicker said he intends to tie up the bill bearing the anti-busing amendment for at least three more months.

With the filibuster broken, the Senate wasted little time in approving the anti-busing amendment by a vote of 60-39, thereby attaching it to a Justice Department appropriations measure. The vote on the bill itself was postponed as the Senate turned to more pressing matters.

Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., said approval of his amendment demonstrated that most senators "have said we have had enough" of busing of school children.

"I do not wish to resegregate the schools or turn back the clock," he continued. But he said school busing has been "an abject failure" that has prompted whites to remove their children from public schools.

Johnston said his plan would eliminate most court-ordered busing. But he said in response to questions about its constitutionality that it would not automatically rule out all busing for racial balance.

Johnston's proposal would prohibit courts from ordering any student bused more than 5 miles or 15 minutes from home and is designed to apply retroactively.

Another provision of the same amendment, sponsored by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., would prevent the Justice Department from spending any money to seek court-ordered busing.

The Johnston proposal, which has yet to come up in the House, is tougher than any anti-busing legislation ever approved by Congress.

A measure similar to the Helms' plan was approved by both houses last year but was vetoed by then-President Carter.

"around town" is people, personal, local! It's who? what? where? when? And it's men, women, students, visitors, guests, awards, honors, activities. Trips, clubs, meetings... virtually anything that Midlanders are doing or planning to do, not normally constituting a formal news story.

The Midland Reporter-Telegram

As flamboyant as his designs are his prices—from $700 for a simple tunic to $14,000 for a bugle-beaded, leopard-print gown. The leaf design, above, was popularly received and featured colorful fall colors such as gold and orange on a black background. Despite his love for dressing women, however, Vollbracht says he is most comfortable in sport shirts and other casual styles. Below, he discusses a possible outfit for Vogue magazine over the phone with his staff members in New York.

Bold is the word here for Michaele Vollbracht's work. Many of his designs, such as the one above, are almost a signature. Most of the fashions at Monday's style show were floor-length evening gowns—some were whimsical, some were funwear and many were feminine. But all were eye-catching.

A show of shows

Over 300 Midland women showed their support for a worthy cause and their love of fashion by attending Monday's benefit fashion show at Greentree Country Club.

The annual event benefitted the Palmer Drug Abuse Program and featured Grace Jones of Salado and Michaele Vollbracht of New York, 1980 Coty award winner.

Vollbracht, unique among American designers in that he designs his own prints, didn't disappoint this crowd. His prints, dramatically colored graphic paintings which are translated onto silk, crepe de chine, cotton and other fabrics, were exciting and received continuous applause from the audience. The line was a bold, imaginative melange of strong silhouettes, sinuous fabrics and colorful graphics.

His collection was presented by Grace Jones, who owns an exclusive shop in Salado. She referred to Vollbracht as "New York's newest shining star."

Co-chairman of the event were Mrs. Ted Lacoff and Mrs. Giffert Alstrin. Making brief remarks were Bob Savage, Permian Basin PDAP director; and Janet Pollard, originator of the annual show.

Savage explained that PDAP, a chemical drug abuse program, covers a large area of the Permian Basin. "Each area of PDAP is in charge of its own funding and operates entirely through private donations," he said. "We are in our third year of operation and have achieved non-profit status. We believe we are a community program."

Mrs. Pollard said that everyone attending would be in some way touched by drugs and alcohol. "And we care very much that our children not be destroyed," she said.

Special guests were Mrs. Darrell Royal and Jackie Williamson of Austin, who are on PDAP's national board of directors; Elaine Coffman, formerly of Midland and now of Austin; and Mrs. Joe Green, a representative of the Rockwell Foundation which has provide much funding for the PDAP program and was the underwrite for Monday's luncheon.

Grace Jones, who is featured in the first issue of the exclusive ULTRA magazine this month, said that she and her group were pleased to make this third fashion trek to Midland to benefit the PDAP program.

She also introduced Vollbracht himself who made an appearance in culmination of the show.

—By WANDA MOUTON

Right is an example of Vollbracht's innovative designs coupled with intricate ensembles. This elaborate quilted outfit is embroidered with a bold swan design. This same print is repeated in many of his fashions, in numerous colors and in a variety of fabrics, from soft and flowing to heavy sequined to brightly quilted. He is famed for simple tunics that display his spectacular graphics. Many of his designs are symbolic of the jungle print style in vivid red, black and white. Striped designs were also a favorite at Monday's show. Some of his designs showed the "Bloomingdale shopping bag" touch, but his classic styles were beautifully done in colors of gray and soft mauve, and in fabrics of flannel and silk.

Stacey Poe

Stacey Poe, eight-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gary L. Poe, is getting a head start on learning how to cook. Among her favorite recipes are Grape Float and Bugs on a Log.

Stacey, who is a third-grader at Jane Long Elementary, also enjoys bike riding. She has been involved in gymnastics for several years and has been a member of Camp Fire for three years.

GRAPE FLOAT

WHAT YOU NEED:

2 cups grape juice
2 scoops vanilla ice cream
Frozen whipped topping
Maraschino cherries

HOW TO FIX:

1. Pour grape juice into two tall glasses
2. Add a scoop of ice cream to each glass
3. Top each float with a spoonful of whipped topping and a maraschino cherry
4. Serve each grape float with a straw and a long-handled spoon.

Makes two grape floats

BUGS ON A LOG

Serves: 10
Method: No cook
Approximate Time: 15 minutes

1 bunch celery
¾ cup peanut butter
½ cup raisins

Clean celery. Cut each stalk of celery into 2 pieces. Fill with peanut butter and top with raisins.

For delicacy, refinement, variety and complex flavor, it would be hard to surpass the Thai cuisine.

Dishes blend sweet, sour, salty and spicy flavors, with coconut milk to smooth them out and chiles — usually lots of them — to add zest. However, a Thai curry that sears the mouth also can enchant with subtle nuances of flavor.

Seasonings and ingredients differ from those used in European cookery. For example, many Thai dishes taste of lemon without the mouth-puckering acidity of the American citrus fruit. The aromatic taste comes from the peel of the makrut fruit (kaffir lime), the highly flavored makrut leaves and lemon grass.

Thai curries have nothing in common with American style curry powders. The list of ingredients for one meat curry includes dried chiles, green chiles, chopped coriander roots, coriander seeds, lemon grass, laos, grated makrut peel, makrut leaves, caraway seeds, peppercorns, salt, shallots, garlic, shrimp paste, basil, fish sauce, coconut cream, coconut milk and marble-sized green eggplants. It's no wonder that some Thai cooks resort to prepared curry pastes to shorten the cooking procedure.

In the book, "Modern Thai Cooking," published in Bangkok, M.L. Taw Kritakara and M.R. Pimasi Amranand write that the basic taste of Thai food "comes from a mixture of salt, pepper, garlic and coriander root pounded together."

A proper Thai meal, they say, should consist of steamed rice, a clear soup, a steamed dish, a fried dish, a salad, a hot sauce to use as a dip, a dry dessert, a liquid dessert and fruit.

Kritakara, the wife of a diplomat, taught cooking in Bangkok and founded the Rang Toa (Toll Gate) restaurant, where exquisite, classical Thai dishes are served.

At the Toll Gate and at other restaurants in Thailand, unusual combinations piqee the palate of a Westerner. Toll Gate specialties include a delicate mussel mousse placed on a bed of basil leaves and topped with shredded makrut leaves. A salad of shredded pomelo, green mango, water chestnuts and green beans is presented in a delicate nest of finely shredded potato. The salad is decorated with small pink flowers of a type that grow widely in hedges in Thailand.

Laos and lemon grass can be purchased dried if not fresh. Canned coconut milk, although not pleasing to a purist Thai cook, eliminates the task of cracking, peeling and grating coconuts. Coconut scrapers, straw baskets used to strain coconut milk, mortars for grinding curry pastes and other utensils are imported from Thailand.

The Krung Tep Tom Yam Kung starts the following selection of Thai dishes. The soup is seasoned with lemon grass and namprik pao, a sweet, hot condient available in jars in Thai markets.

KRUNG TEP'S
tom yam kung

3 cups chicken broth
½ cup canned straw mushrooms, cut in halves
½ cup shelled cleaned medium shrimp
1 stalk lemon grass
1½ teasp. bottled namprik pao
¼ teasp. MSG
1 tblsp. lemon juice
1½ tblsp. fish sauce
3 sprigs cilantro
1½ teasp. chopped green onions
2 serrano chiles

Place chicken broth in saucepan. Add mushrooms, shrimp and lemon grass. Cook until shrimp are pink. In large serving bowl, place namprik pao, MSG, Lemon juice and fish sauce. Stir until blended. Add cilantro and green onion. Pound chiles to crush slightly. Cut in halves and remove stems. Add 1 or more chile halves depending upon how hot a soup is desired. Fill bowl with hot broth mixture. Makes 3 to 4 servings.

KAENG MASAMAN
(Beef Curry)

1½ pounds round steak
Oil
½ teasp. minced onion
5 cloves garlic, minced
½ teasp. whole allspice
½ teasp. ground ginger
½ teasp. crushed dried red chiles
6 whole cloves
¼ teasp. ground cardamon
1 teasp. salt
2 sticks cinnamon
½ teasp. sugar
2 tblsp. cider vinegar
1 teasp. Worcestershire sauce
3 cups canned or homemade coconut milk
1 cup beef broth
½ cup roasted whole peanuts
¼ cup thinly sliced onion

Cut meat in thin slices. Divide meat in thirds and brown in oil, 1 batch at a time. Heat 2 tablespoons oil in large pot. Add onion and garlic and cook until onion is tender but not browned. Add meat and stir gently. Add allspice, ginger, chiles, cloves, cardamon, salt, cinnamon, sugar, vinegar, Worcestershire and coconut milk. Bring to boil, reduce heat and simmer gently 1 hour, adding beef broth as mixture cooks down. When curry is done, stir in peanuts. Curry is best if allowed to stand, then reheated before serving. Fry thinly sliced onion in oil until crisp. Sprinkle over curry when serving. Makes 8 servings.

KAMOLMAL'S YUM YAI
(Thai Salad)

2 bunches romaine
¾ pound pork, roasted in one piece
¼ pound dried shrimp or cooked, peeled fresh shrimp
6 hard-cooked eggs, quartered
⅓ cup vinegar
6 tblsp. sugar
2 teasp. salt
1 teasp. ground fresh hot chile

Wash lettuce and drain. Cut in 1-inch slices. Slice pork. Rinse dried shrimp. Arrange romaine in salad bowl. Top with pork, shrimp and eggs. Combine vinegar, sugar, salt and chile and stir until sugar is dissolved. Pour dressing over salad and mix well. Makes 6 servings.

PEAR HAM SLAW

6 to 8 ounces sliced ham, cut in thin strips
1 cup thinly shredded green cabbage
1 small cucumber, pared and thinly sliced
¼ cup thinly sliced celery
Vinaigrette, recipe follows
1 fresh Barlett pear, cored and sliced

Toss the ham, cabbage, cucumber and celery with enough of the Vinaigrette to suit your own taste. Arrange in a shallow bowl. Surround with the pear slices. Spoon the remaining Vinaigrette over the pears.

VINAIGRETTE

3 tblsp. vegetable oil
⅓ cup cider vinegar
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon sugar
¼ teaspoon celery seed
⅛ teaspoon pepper

Beat or shake together the oil, vinegar, salt, sugar, celery seed and pepper. Makes about ½ cup.

Consumers test varied fast-food chicken products

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (AP) — Dressed with casual elegance, the young woman in the back row daintily licked three manicured fingers and concentrated on a yellow questionnaire.

Ahead, ramrod straight, silver hair peeking from a white yachting cap, a professorial-looking man broke a chicken morsel in half. Popping a piece into his mouth and chewing slowly, he seemed oblivious to the giggling youngsters nearby.

"Your piece was great," one of them announced to a friend. "But mine doesn't taste like chicken."

"Why do you think they want our opinions?" asked another muncher, who admitted that, while the chicken tidbits weren't bad, he'd really come for the free ice cream cone.

Dr. Joseph H. MacNeil, professor of food science at The Pennsylvania State University, regarded with satisfaction the dwindling pile of questionnaires being handed to newcomers by a student.

"A successful trial," he said of the tasting by hundreds of consumers of a selection of a popular new fast food — the breaded, seasoned and fried chicken patties and fillets, sold by major fast-food chains and increasingly by supermarkets.

When it comes to food, MacNeil believes, the most sophisticated testing procedures must be supplemented by the human factor. So from time to time, he offers free ice cream cones to volunteers who will taste, and rate, foods he is testing at his Penn State lab.

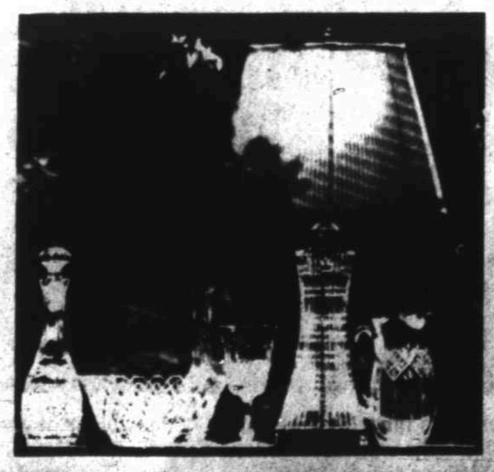

Their comments are crucial to MacNeil, who specializes in analyzing food quality and characteristics. His aim: to improve the palatability and nutritional value of many processed foods, especially meats.

An expert on chicken hot dogs and other types of mechanically deboned poultry meat, MacNeil got interested about two years ago in the new types of chicken products.

"The existing products vary greatly in composition, quality and taste," he explains. "Moreover, thanks to the growing popularity of what could be called a 'fast food chicken burger,' many more companies are making or planning to introduce similar products.

"While the fillets are basically similar, consisting of a chunk of chicken breast, there's some differences in tenderness and seasoning.

Pier 1's famous blinds on Sale Today

Five inexpensive window treatments that help you create a sense of casual elegance within your home.

Pier 1 offers a broad assortment of bamboo, wood and rice paper blinds in standard sizes, as small as 2'x6' to as large as 10'x6'. To create a clean, fresh, unpretentious look, modern designers often simply hang them inside the window casing completely unadorned. Mostly handmade, these blinds are so basic, so easy to work with, and so durable, that they've survived the age of clipper ships, the age of steamers and the age of the computer only to increase in popularity.

Natural matchstick bamboo
Bamboo split to matchstick size has a clean and natural look. The blinds provide restful patterns of light and shade.

Special Effects:

Weave bands of colorful ribbon or yarn through bamboo slat blinds — vertically, or, horizontally — picking up accent colors within the room.

Apply graphic designs to slat or rice paper blinds. Use acrylic paint, or tape, or fabric appliques in tones that carry out your color scheme.

Finish off the tailored look with cornice boards, painting them or covering them with fabric to unite your color scheme.

Rig blinds to cover the bottom half of your window, allowing eye-level privacy while sun streams in from above.

Using decorative fabric, drop a dazzling accent panel over the top two-thirds of the window, revealing the natural blinds beneath. This technique is especially effective when major pieces of furniture are neutral in tone and your room shouts for color relief.

MIDLAND GARDEN CLUB

Midland Garden Club's program "Attracting Purple Martins" was presented by Mrs. John Cys, noted naturalist and trip chairman for Midland Naturalist, Inc.

Mrs. Robert Patterson, 1605 W. Kansas, was the hostess and was assisted by Mrs. Todd Aaron and Mrs. Louis Bartha.

Mrs. Cys described the Purple Martin as an eight inch bird of steely blue-black color with a wing spread of 15 inches. The female is a duller shade with a grayish breast and collar around its neck.

Flying insects and eggshells are the bird's main diet. Purple Martins have been cherished for years by Indian tribes who put gourds up on high poles for nesting in open areas. Now, elaborate bird houses on high poles have been built for the colonies in Midland when they return for nesting year after year.

In closing, Mrs. Cys stressed the benefits of attracting Purple Martins to the community to rid of undesirable insects, including mosquitoes.

Guests attending the meeting were Mrs. Walter Diggs, Mrs. Dana Secor and Mrs. Robert McLellan.

Pilgrimage chairman, Mrs. Griffin, announced the club will meet at 9:30 a.m. Oct. 1 at the home of Mrs. Clark Matthews, 1704 North H. The pilgrimage will continue over to the Landscape Nursery and the Christmas Shop of Mrs. Gene Hurt in Odessa.

MORNING LITERATURE GROUP — AAUW

The Morning Literature Group of the American Association of University Women (AAUW) held its first meeting in the home of Nita Ivy with Sue Norris serving as co-hostess. They are co-chairman of the group.

The program plans for the year were announced. Dr. David Caffey of Midland College will present the program in October on writing a novel. A film on the life of Henry David Thoreau was shown. Several books read by members during the summer were reviewed.

Mary Bell Speed and Paula Beshears were introduced as new members of the group.

MIDLAND RETIRED TEACHERS ASSOCIATION

The Midland Retired Teachers Association began its year's activities with a seated tea in the parlor of the First Baptist Church.

Honored guests were the past president of the organization and the new members. Sen. Pete Snelson of Midland was also present.

The Sunshiners group of the First Baptist Church presented a musical program of selections they will sing on their upcoming trip to London. The door prize, a tea set painted by Mrs. Myrtle B. Shepherd, was won by Helene Mileg.

CHAPARRAL EXTENSION HOMEMAKERS

The Chaparral Extension Homemakers met in the home of Mrs. Jean Connor. New officers elected for 1982 were Mrs. Kathy Murphy, president; Mrs. Sylvia Warfield, vice president; Mrs. Valerie Waller, secretary; Mrs. Beverly Horst, treasurer; Mrs. Evelyn Witt, council delegate and Mrs. Jean Connor, alternate council delegate. The council report was given by Mrs. Valerie Waller.

The next meeting will be held in the home of Mrs. Teddy Stickney. For more information call Diane Bell at 694-6730.

Food safety

Author discusses chemical dangers

EDITOR'S NOTE: Food expert Beatrice Trum Hunter advises us to get back to the basics in buying and preparing our meals. In her book, "How Safe Is Food in Your Kitchen?" she describes the dangers of chemicals used in food processing. Hunter was interviewed by Hearst Feature Service writer Danielle Roter.

Question: How has technology affected our food?

Hunter: As food has become more and more sophisticated, there are more problems in terms of migration of unwanted substances during the food's processing — from the pots and pans, utensils and packages.

Q: Is non-stick cookware one of the hazards?

A: Non-stick material is very durable. It is used on the nose cones of planes and on plow blades. And non-stick cookware has become even more durable through the years.

But instead, I recommend old-fashioned iron cookware, which is relatively non-stick.

Q: What are the advantages of cooking with ironware?

A: Iron pots and pans are wonderful retainers of heat and the heat distributes evenly, so they're energy savers.

And you get some dietary iron from iron cookware. For example, if you scramble eggs in an iron skillet, the amount of iron in the eggs is tripled.

Q: Is smoked food safe?

A: As delicious as it may taste to some people, unfortunately it is a no-no. If you're going to try to keep down the number of cancer-inducing substances in your environment, then smoked food is out. Burnt food also is out — charcoal broiling and burnt toast.

Burnt substances develop what are called PAH's — polycyclic aromatic hydrocarbons. These are cancer-inducing substances very similar to the tar in tobacco that is so dangerous.

The difference between "toxic" and "cancer-inducing" is an important one. Up to a level, the body can throw off toxic materials — unless the level is very high. But with cancer-inducing substances, it's like putting something into the bank — every assault adds up. You never can get rid of them.

Q: But isn't lead an accumulative toxin?

A: Not only does lead accumulate, it's very hard to get rid of because it settles in the bones as well as circulating through the bloodstream.

The main problem with lead in the food supply comes from canning. There was a fairly high level of lead contamination through the soldering of the seams in the old canning technique. Now the industry has really cleaned up its act. New canning techniques have reduced the level of lead, especially in baby food.

Q: Would you recommend buying spaghetti sauce, for instance, in a glass jar as opposed to a can?

A: Glass is always preferable, and it is the consumer's first choice — but we're not always getting glass. We are getting more and more of other materials, such as plastic or metal or cardboard, because glass is heavy, expensive and it shatters. So although consumers like glass, the use of it has been sharply cut back.

Q: What about the little plastic bags and the wraps made for storing food? Are they safe?

A: For most of us who don't have any problem with plastics, there probably is no immediate danger. But we are all being exposed to more and more chemicals in the environment, and plastic wrap is a very large group of them. The cheaper plastics — the ones that are made to be thrown away quickly — are of a poorer quality. Anything that has a strong odor is outgassing a great deal.

Q: What does outgassing mean?

A: All plastics are made of gas originally, and then they are converted into a solid form. In this conversion, around 10 percent of the gas becomes trapped within the plastic, and very slowly this gas begins to go out. It's called outgassing. Some of it goes into the air, and the rest goes into the food or liquid. The longer the food or liquid is stored, the more plastic is picked up by it in a gaseous form.

The pliable quality of plastic — such as the clingy plastic wrappings — means that a great deal of phthalates have been added. These are plasticizing agents — they give plastics flexibility.

Several years back, hospitals began storing frozen blood for transfusions in plastic instead of glass. And then they began to find that people who had been given blood transfusions had phthalates circulating around in their bloodstream. Well, we don't know what the health problems are, but phthalates have no reason for being in the body.

Then we noticed what is called the "new car smell." The plastic upholstery in cars is treated with a lot of phthalates to make it very supple so that it doesn't crack in hot weather, and to make it resemble leather. The new car smell is from the phthalates, which means you're breathing them.

THE BUTCHER

Neva's motto: Save time, save money while cooking

By MERLE ELLIS

If you were to ask my wife, Neva: "Who does the cooking around your house?" she almost certainly would say, "Merle cooks (he used to do a lot more of it before he started talking so much about it), but I feed the family."

She's right! I cook, I enjoy cooking but, like most men, I have the advantage of cooking only when I feel like it. Neva does it day in and day out, three meals a day, and has for over 20 years, whether she feels like it or not. And she manages to do it well, without using nearly as many pots and pans as I, AND without spending a lot of time in the kitchen. There isn't a lot of extra time, what with two daughters to care for, a television series to help produce and a lot of spelling to correct. (I'm the writer, she's the speller.)

Over the years, Neva has come up with a lot of quick and easy recipes that have become standard family favorites around our house. They all require very little preparation time; some make use of the less expensive cuts of meat, some are made with leftovers and some call for no meat at all. (Even some butchers don't eat meat at every meal.)

Since many of you, like Neva, are as concerned with spending less time in the kitchen as you are with spending less money at the meat counter, we offer a few of "Neva's Quick Recipes" with the hope that your family will enjoy them as much as ours.

NEVA'S QUICK HAM AND SPAGHETTI CARBONARA

1/4 lb. bacon, diced
2 teaspoons olive oil
2 teaspoons butter
1 clove garlic, minced
2 cups of leftover ham (about 1/2 lb.), julienned
1 8-oz. package vermicelli spaghetti, cooked al dente, drained
1/2 cup grated Parmesan or Romano cheese
1/4 cup parsley, chopped
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
3 eggs, beaten
1/4 cup ripe olives, sliced

Brown the bacon in a heavy skillet over medium-high heat, until it is cooked but not crisp. Pour off fat and set bacon aside. To the same pan add oil, butter, garlic and ham and saute quickly over medium heat. Add the cooked spaghetti, bacon, cheese, half the parsley, salt and pepper; stir to mix well. Turn off the heat. Pour the eggs over and toss quickly to coat the spaghetti evenly with egg. Add the olives and toss to mix. Transfer to a warm serving platter and sprinkle on the remaining parsley. Serve immediately. Serves 4 to 6.

NEVA'S QUICK PORK POLYNESIA

8 pork cutlets
Peanut oil
Handful of raisins
Handful of coconut
1/2 cup chopped macadamia nuts
1 cup pineapple tidbits
1 cup orange juice
1/2 cup rum

Saute cutlets in oil. Add remaining ingredients: cover and simmer for 1 hour. Serve with rice. Serves 4 to 6.

NEVA'S QUICK VEAL WITH ALMONDS

4 1/2-inch thick veal rib chops
2 T. cooking oil
1 3-oz. can sliced mushrooms, drained (1/2 cup)
1/2 cup sliced celery
1/4 cup chopped onion
1/2 cup chicken broth
1 T. soy sauce
2 tsp. cornstarch
2 T. slivered almonds, toasted

Brown veal in oil in a large skillet. Add mushrooms, celery, onion, 1/4 cup of the chicken broth and the soy sauce. Cover and simmer 45 minutes, or until veal is tender. Remove chops. Stir remaining broth into the cornstarch; blend into the sauce mixture in the skillet. Cook, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens and bubbles. Stir in almonds. Drizzle a little sauce over meat and pass the rest at the table. Serves 4.

Cherries glamorize fall entertaining

Are you making entertaining plans for the fall season? It seems as leaves begin to drop and vacations end, friends seems to drop in more often. Entertaining at home needn't be budget-breaking.

For instance, you can serve a beautiful Cherry Cottage Cheese Mold for about 35 cents a portion. It's nutritious, too, packing a hefty portion of protein into eight servings. It's made with economical cottage cheese and yogurt. Red maraschino cherries enhances the mold with eye appeal and almondy flavor — an excellent example of cherries glamorizing inexpensive foods.

If dessert is on the agenda, try homemade applesauce cake. Homebaked cakes are special. They can be economical, too. You can impress your guests without making too much of an impression on your bank account. This cake is only 20 cents per serving and red maraschino cherries make it look like a pastry chef's creation.

Maraschino cherries make fall entertaining economical and glamorous.

CHEERY COTTAGE CHEESE MOLD

1 envelope unflavored gelatin
½ cup red maraschino cherry syrup
About ⅔ cup red maraschino cherries
1½ pounds creamed cottage cheese
1 cup vanilla yogurt
⅛ teaspoon nutmeg

In small saucepan, combine gelatine and cherry syrup. Cook and stir over low heat until gelatin dissolves. Cool to room temperature. Lightly oil a 6-cup ring mold; arrange cherries in a ring around bottom of mold. Pour 2 tablespoons gelatin mixture over cherries; refrigerate until lightly set. Stir cottage cheese, yogurt and nutmeg into remaining gelatin mixture. Carefully pour over cherry mixture. Refrigerate until firm. To serve, unmold onto serving plate. Fill center with orange sections and additional cherries, as desired.

Serves 8.

Cost per serving: approximately 35 cents (based on New York City prices.)

CHERRY APPLESAUCE CAKE

About 1 cup maraschino cherries
2½ cups flour
1½ cups sugar
1½ teaspoons baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon baking powder
¾ teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon cloves
½ teaspoon allspice
1 jar (15 ounces) applesauce
Water
½ cup vegetable shortening
2 eggs
½ cup finely chopped walnuts
Confectioners' sugar glaze, if desired
Stemmed red maraschino cherries, if desired

Lightly grease a 10-inch tube pan; arrange a ring of cherries around outer edge and center tube of pan. Set aside. In large electric mixer bowl, stir together flour, sugar, baking soda, salt, baking powder and spices until mixed.

Place applesauce in 2-cup measure; add water to make 2 cups. Pour into bowl with shortening and eggs. Blend ½ minute at low speed; scraping bowl occasionally. Carefully pour about 1 cup batter over cherries in pan. Stir walnuts into remaining batter; pour into pan.

Bake in 350 degrees Farenheit oven about one hour and 15 minutes or until done. Let stand in pan 5 minutes.

Remove from pan and cool on wire rack. Glaze with confectioners' sugar glaze if desired and garnish with stemmed red maraschino cherries.

Makes 12 servings.

Cost per serving: approximately 20 cents (based on New York City prices).

Herbs make restricted diets pleasurable

By BETSY BALSEY
(c) 1981, The Los Angeles Times

I am an avowed herb freak, possibly because aroma is as important to me, if not more so, than taste. And possibly because I enjoy growing fresh herbs almost as much as I do cooking with them.

Whatever the reason, I'm glad — in this day of emphasis on using less salt in the diet — that I do like the aromatic flavorings provided by herbs, for they certainly make life on a restricted diet infinitely more pleasurable.

If you are just beginning to cut bak on salt, you may find adding more herbs than the recipe calls for a help until your taste buds adjust to the new regime.

A delightful 10-year-old book called "Betty Crocker's Kitchen Gardens" by Mary Mason Campbell (Universal publishing Inc., N.Y.) offers these simple directions for drying herbs at home. Pointing out that in drying herbs one's goal is to retain as much of the fresh color, flavor and fragrance as possible, the book recommends processing the leaves quickly, before those qualities disappear.

To do this, wash and dry the branches or leaves of herbs to be dried and lay them out on clean dry window screens or frames to which clean cheesecloth has been tacked. Place the frames in a well-ventilated, dark, cool room and let them dry thoroughly before crumbling and storing in bottles or air-tight plastic bags.

To show how easy it is to substitute herbs for salt, here are some recipe suggestions that make low sodium dining enjoyable.

MINT-FRESH TABBOULEH

2 cups bulgur
1 cup chopped mint leaves
1 cup chopped green onions or chives
3 cloves garlic, minced
2-3 cup chopped green pepper
2 teaspoons minced basil
2 tomatoes, seeded and diced
Juice of 2 lemons
2 tablespoons red wine vinegar
1 cup olive oil
Salt
Pepper
1 head romaine lettuce
1 medium tomato, cut in wedges

Rinse bulgur several times, then combine with cold water. Let stand 1 hour, drain, squeezing out remaining liquid.

Combine bulgur with mint, green onions, garlic, green pepper, basil and tomatoes. Toss in lemon juice, vinegar, oil and season to taste with salt and pepper. Cover and chill until serving time. Mound in serving platter and surround with lettuce leaves and tomato wedges. Garnish with tomato wedges and sprig of mint. Makes 15 servings; about 5 mg sodium and 256 calories per serving.

SPICY FLAVOR BLEND

2 tablespoons savory, crushed
1 tablespoon powdered mustard
2 1-2 teaspoon onion powder
1 3-4 teaspoons curry powder
1 1-4 teaspoons white pepper
1 1-4 teaspoons ground cumin
1-2 teaspoon garlic powder

Combine savory, mustard, onion powder, curry powder, white pepper, cumin and garlic powder. Mix well. Spoon into shaker. Makes about 1-3 cup; about 0.59 mg sodium per teaspoon.

Note: To temporarily prevent caking, add a few grains of uncooked rice to mixture and shake well.

ALL-PURPOSE SPICE BLEND

5 teaspoons onion powder
2 1-2 teaspoons garlic powder
2 1-2 teaspoons paprika
2 1-2 teaspoons powdered mustard
1 1-4 teaspoons thyme leaves, crushed
1-2 teaspoon white pepper
1-4 teaspoon celery seeds.

Combine onion powder, garlic powder, paprika, mustard, thyme, white pepper and celery seeds. Mix well. Spoon into shaker. Makes about 1-3 cup; about 0.46 mg sodium per tea poon.

Note: To temporarily prevent caking, add a few grains of uncooked rice into mixture and shake well.

HERBED SEASONING BLEND

2 tablespoons dill weed or basil leaves, crushed
2 tablespoons onion powder
1 teaspoon oregano leaves, crushed
1 tespoon celery seeds
1-4 teaspoon grated lemon peel (dried)
1-16 teaspoon black pepper

Combine dill, onion powder, oregano, celery seeds, lemon peel and pepper. Mix well. Spoon into shaker. Makes about 1-3 cup; about 0.65 mg sodium per teaspoon.

Note: To temporarily prevent caking, add a few grains of uncooked rice to mixture and shake well.

ONION AND HERB SALAD DRESSING

1-2 cup oil
1-4 cup cider vinegar
1 tablespoon instant minced onion
3-4 teaspoon basil leaves, cru hed
1-4 teaspoon garlic powder
1-4 teaspoon black pepper

In a container with tight-fitting lid place oil, vinegar, onion, basil, garlic powder and pepper. Cover and shake well.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Laundry tip: Fold clothes right after drying

DEAR HELOISE:

The greatest help to me in folding clothes is to keep a low stool in the utility room. As soon as the dryer shuts off, I open the door, and pull up the stool, as bending over to take each piece out of the dryer is extremely hard on one's back.

Seated so, I fold each fresh, warm item as I take it out, laying the clothes in stacks on top of the dryer, or even on the clean floor.

The main idea is to be prompt — each load should be done while still warm. And never, never, carry the pile to a bed or couch "for later." Having piles of cold, wrinkled, jumbled-up clothes should be avoided whenever possible. Makes the job harder.

Any shirt or blouse, especially permanent press, should go immediately on a hanger, or a chair back while you attend to the flat pieces, etc.

I doubt if I could fold diapers efficiently in my lap, and of course, one must stand to fold sheets, but I find it rather pleasant sitting to do the routine folding.

A small portable rod for hangers would be helpful, but I haven't the space for one, and the temptation would be to leave things hanging there.

So hope these suggestions have been of some help to someone. — Hope Horton

+ + +

They have been to me. I'm sure you know by now, folding clothes is one of my least favorite chores so any tip to make it easier, or to get the job over with faster is right down my alley. Thanks a bunch! — Hugs, Heloise

BAKING POWDER POWER

Dear Heloise: Don't throw away that can of baking powder that has been sitting in your cupboard for some time because you're afraid it has lost its strength or leavening ability. At least, don't throw it away before you test it...

Just put about a teaspoonful of the powder into a fourth cup of hot water. If it bubbles up within a few seconds, the baking powder is still effective and usable.

I used to throw baking powder out after a certain length of time until I learned to do this. Now, I can be sure beforehand that whatever I am baking will rise, without risking expensive ingredients. — Lee Merris

Good to know! Thanks for sharing, 'luv. — Heloise

AT WIT'S END

Book writing phenomenon isn't applicable

By ERMA BOMBECK

Someone told me at a party awhile back that there was a man there who was not writing a book.

I didn't believe it at first. Everyone in the world is writing a book. Then I saw a small quiet man literally held captive by a group of people around him and figured it just might be true.

When the crowd had thinned out, I tested him. "Ever have a writer's block?" "Only a local anesthetic," he shouted back. "What's an agent?" I asked. "Someone who works for the FBI." "Ever heard of McGraw-Hill?" "Are they sex therapists?" he asked.

The man was obviously as clean as an 8 1/2-by-11 sheet of manuscript paper.

I could hardly wait to talk to him.

"What made you decide not to write a book?" I asked.

"When I realized I had nothing to say."

"How long have you been working at not writing?"

"Well," he said, "I got the idea about three years ago. All my friends talked about not writing a book, but no one ever really did it. They all warned me it would take a lot of discipline not to come home and sit down at a typewriter, but I was determined not to do it.

"They warned me when I would go out I'd have nothing to talk about with anyone. For a couple of years, they were right. People would say, 'How's your book coming?' and I'd say, 'I'm not writing one,' and they'd ask, 'You stuck on the title?' and I'd reply, 'I don't have a title,' and they'd move away."

I had to admire the sheer guts of the man.

"Isn't it a great temptation to write a book?"

"I fight it all the time," he said. "Especially when I run across a diet that works for me or I remember things from my childhood that I want to share."

I had to admit I had never known a man like him. In a world of cab drivers who had a manuscript in the glove compartment, 12-year-old children writing their memoirs, and Miss Piggy who was sitting comfortably on the N.Y. Times best-seller list, he was a breath of fresh air.

I hadn't thought about him at all until last week when I passed a row of paperbacks and saw, "I Am Not Writing a Book," by who else but my hero.

That devil. He had a title all the time.

Mushroom lasagne

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Tony Giles is a businessman — a tall bachelor who lives in a big-city apartment with the typical tiny kitchen. But he never lets a little matter like that keep him from inventing and preparing a dish that serves eight people.

Recently a friend of his asked him to "fix a dish" and bring it to a potluck supper she was giving. She warned him that her guests would include a number of vegetarians. Giles invented a Mushroom Lasagne and, judging from reports, it was a success. After testing his recipe in our own kitchen, we can understand why.

TONY GILES' MUSHROOM LASAGNE

4 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 pound fresh mushrooms, sliced (about 5½ cups)
1 cup chopped (medium-fine) onion
1 cup chopped (medium-fine) green pepper
2 large garlic cloves, minced or crushed
Two 6-ounce cans tomato paste
1½ cups water
1¼ teaspoons salt
1¼ teaspoons dried, crushed oregano
1 pound fresh spinach (cooked, well-drained and coarsely chopped)
One 16-ounce package lasagne noodles
¼ pound (1 generous cup) shredded sharp cheddar cheese
8 ounces mozzarella cheese, cut into 24 slices
3 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese

In a large skillet heat the oil; add the mushrooms, onion, green pepper and garlic; cook rapidly, stirring often, until wilted — 5 minutes. Add tomato paste, water, salt and oregano. Bring to a boil; simmer, covered, for 15 minutes. Stir in spinach.

Cook lasagne according to package directions; drain.

Spread a thin film of the sauce in the bottom of a 3-quart oblong baking dish (13½ by 8¾ by 1¾ inches). Cover with 1-3rd of the lasagne noodles, overlapping if necessary. Add 1-3rd of the remaining sauce, then 1-3rd of the cheddar cheese, 8 slices of the mozzarella and 1 tablespoon of the Parmesan. Repeat layering two more times. Cover with foil. Bake in a pre-heated 375-degree oven until hot — about 20 minutes. Uncover and bake until cheese is completely melted, about 5 minutes. If you like, you can use extra sauteed mushrooms as a garnish.

Makes 8 servings.

DEAR ABBY

Mother spoiling for fight with 'devoted' grandma

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of an adorable 2-year-old I'll call "Karla." Ever since her birth, the relationship between my mother-in-law and me has deteriorated until I can barely tolerate her.

"Gamma" bought Karla's entire layette, furnished her room and has clothed her from diapers to christening dress to snowsuits and swimsuits. Before I can save the money to buy something special for Karla, it is purchased, gift-wrapped and delivered! If I resist, I get the old "What are grandmothers for?" Every weekend Gamma calls and asks if she can baby-sit. When I let her come, she changes Karla's clothes every two hours, combs her hair a different way, and when Gamma leaves she is in near tears because she will miss "her" baby.

When Gamma is around, whatever Karla wants, Karla gets. Naturally, Karla loves having Gamma around.

All this makes me feel so inadequate and unneeded. When I complain to my husband, he refuses to "take sides." Next year he will graduate from college. (His mother is paying for his education, too.) He will have a degree, enabling him to relocate anywhere he wants to go. Do I have the right to give him an ultimatum — either we move at least 10 hours away from his mother, or I take Karla and move without him?

He is blind to the way his mother manipulates us. She has bought her way into our lives and I am sick of it! Please help me. — SMOTHERED IN MAINE

DEAR SMOTHERED: Don't issue any ultimatums unless you are prepared to leave your husband. Some firm ground rules must be established concerning the limits of what Gamma may and may not do, but you can't do it alone. This is a family affair that will require professional family counseling. Please get it. All of you! Your marriage depends on it.

DEAR ABBY: I am 12 years old. My grandfather died before I was born and my grandmother lived alone for 13 years. She got married again four years ago. Here is my problem. What shall I call her husband? Should I call him "Grandpa," or should I call him "Harold," which is his name?

I haven't been calling him anything so far because I'm not sure what to call him. — NOT SURE IN GEORGIA

DEAR NOT: Ask your grandmother's husband what he wants you to call him. Or ask your grandmother what she thinks he'd like to be called.

DEAR ABBY: Is there any help for a mother who shampoos and cuts her 30-year-old son's hair, and asks her women friends, all in their 50s, to take turns sitting on his patio so his neighbors will think there are "women" in his life?

This son of hers has never had a date in his life. She takes him on bus trips with her Farm Women's groups. He has no social life at all with people his age because his mother is always lining him up to chauffeur elderly, wealthy couples on trips to nearby points of interest.

He teaches school and is obedient to his mother, who keeps reminding him that she won't be around forever. Yes, he has a father, but he is spineless.

This young man is my nephew, a gentle, pleasant soul who is totally victimized by his neurotic mother. I have never interfered and do not intend to. I am just interested in knowing your thoughts. — PUZZLED IN VERMONT

DEAR PUZZLED: My thoughts: The mother appears to be loving, well-intentioned, though somewhat overprotective. The son appears to be obedient and content with his life. And as long as they're happy, the only puzzle I see is why you want my thoughts.

DEAR ABBY: Recently our 12-year-old son was grounded by his father for calling the police to report that our neighbors had marijuana growing in their garden.

I feel that this punishment was unjust since marijuana is illegal, and our son was only doing what he was instructed to do by the local police in lectures at his school.

These neighbors are not into drugs. They are good friends and don't even smoke the stuff, but they were given the plants and were growing them just for the fun and novelty of it. Since the police confiscated only two dying plants, no charges were filed against our neighbors. They admitted it was a silly but dangerous thing to do.

Regardless of the neighbors' intentions, I feel that our son's motives and his willingness to do what he thought was right were commendable, and he should not have been grounded. What do you say? — CONCERNED MOM

DEAR MOM: Knowing that these neighbors were "good friends" of yours, I'm wondering why your son didn't discuss his "marijuana find" with his parents before calling the police to report these friendly neighbors. Sorry, Mom, I can't agree that your son's motives were altogether commendable.

DEAR ABBY: You won't believe this, but I've been married only three months and I'm already halfway to the divorce court!

I married the sweetest, best-natured man in town. Everyone envied me because he was such a swell catch. He's 40 and I'm 34. Before we were married we lived together for two years and got along like a pair of lovebirds, but as soon as we made it legal, our relationship started to go downhill.

Now he finds fault with everything I do. He used to be a wonderful lover. Now he's snoring by the time I get into bed. He used to be tidy and neat. Now he's a slob.

I was the one who was pushing for marriage, so now he blames me for ruining a beautiful relationship. Abby, we're not the only couple this has happened to. What is there about marriage that destroys romance? — SORRY IN SACRAMENTO

DEAR SORRY: Marriage is a legal commitment that makes some people feel trapped and uncomfortable — especially those who have enjoyed all the benefits of marriage without any of the responsibilities. It doesn't destroy ALL romances. Some it enhances.

DEAR ABBY: My friend (I'll call her Alice) is a wonderful person. Her husband (let's call him Ray) works with my husband. Ray confides in my husband — man to man. My husband told me that Ray gets involved with the girls in the office on every job they're on. These affairs last the duration of the job. Then we're all transferred to another location and Ray starts up with the girls at his new job. This has been going on for 16 years.

Alice is a doll. Great personality, excellent hostess and nice-looking. Why Ray fools around I'll never understand. Abby, Alice asked me if Ray played around. She asked me to be honest with her and not let her be the last to know. Should I tell her? My husband says I shouldn't.

Ray is getting away with murder. His wife doesn't deserve this. Would you tell Alice the truth or not? — TEMPTED

DEAR TEMPTED: Judging from Alice's question, I would say she already knows. Your husband should tell Ray that his wife is suspicious of his philandering and has asked you questions, but you have remained mum. And let it go at that.

DEAR ABBY: Will you please tell me if a couple (both divorced) can be married in the Southern Baptist Church?

Are they allowed to shop for clothes on Sunday?

Are they allowed to hold a garage sale on Sunday?

Are they allowed to wear makeup and color their hair?

Is it true that a good Baptist carries his Bible at all times?

Please answer soon, as I have to know. Thank you. — NEEDS INFORMATION

DEAR NEEDS: A couple (both divorced) can be married in the Southern Baptist Church, but the clergyman will probably question them about their previous marriages first. They are allowed to shop for clothes on Sundays, and are permitted to wear makeup and color their hair as long as it's done in good taste.

A good Baptist does not carry a Bible with him at all times. He carries the words of the Scripture in his heart.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have two daughters, ages 15 and 13. We live down the street from my folks, and when the girls have stopped to see their grandmother, they have been greeted with such remarks as, "Gee, you sure have a lot of pimples," and "My, but you're getting fat!"

Last week when my 13-year-old stopped to visit, my mother said, right in front of some other relatives, "Gracious, but you're developing quite a bust!"

Now the girls don't want to go there any more, and I can't say as I blame them.

I told my mother the reason the girls stopped visiting her, and she said, "It's a darned shame they are so overly sensitive. They had better outgrow that."

Are my daughters, in your opinion, "overly sensitive" — or is there something wrong with my mother? — "HOT" IN HOT SPRINGS

DEAR HOT: It's your mother. She sounds hopeless, but try to educate her anyway.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the mother who didn't want her daughter-in-law in the family portrait prompts this letter. (The portrait, she said, should be only of Mother, Father and their children, excluding the spouses of their married children.)

Well, I don't blame her. Statistics show that one out of every three marriages today ends up in the divorce court. And if you live in California, it's one out of every two!

So who needs a family portrait with ex-daughters (or sons)-in-law? — BLOOD IS THICKER

DEAR BLOOD: Once married, the spouse becomes a part of family history, so regardless of how long the marriage lasts, that part of history can't be denied by simply omitting the spouse from the portrait.

CLUB NEWS

Benefits and projects scheduled by clubs, sororities

BETA ETA CHAPTER, EPSILON SIGMA ALPHA

Beta Eta Chapter of Epsilon Sigma Alpha began its new year with a meeting in the home of B. J. Wood, club president.

Billie Felts reported on the success of the annual campout at Davis Mountain State Park in August.

Beta Eta members have been working since late July on their sixth annual country and western dance to be held Oct. 3 at the American Legion Hall on Air Park Road.

This dance benefits St. Jude's Children's Research Hospital in Memphis, Tenn. The hospital studies catastrophic diseases of childhood and there is no charge to patients for treatment. In a new seven-story addition to the hospital, the fourth floor has been dedicated to Epsilon Sigma Alpha Women International for its fund raising efforts on behalf of the hospital.

Since 1972, the sorority has raised more than 4.2 million dollars for the research and treatment program. The sorority's goal for this year is $1 million. The two local chapters, Beta Eta and Beta Omega, share the responsibility each year of making the local fund raising event a success.

MIDLAND CITY COUNCIL PARENT-TEACHER ASSOCIATION

Midland City Council of Parent Teacher Association met for its first meeting of the year this week at Emerson Elementary.

Dr. James Mailey introduced the Midland Independent School District administrative staff while Kay Sowders presided.

Betty Sumner, guest speaker, presented a talk on "Texas Role on Drugs" and "PTA's Role on Drug Education and Prevention."

A short skit was presented to remind the group of PTA's membership drive now through Oct. 15.

MIDLAND JAYCEE-ETTES

Midland Jaycee-Ettes met in Tyler with other Jaycee-Ettes from across the Texas for the Summer Board/Five Outstanding Young Texans ceremony.

Cathy Murphy of Midland, president of the state organization, and Linda Hood of Maine, national president, welcomed over 100 delegates to the annual meeting.

At a special awards ceremony, the Midland group was recognized as the top chapter in its population division in the state for the first quarter. Karran Martin, president of the local chapter, was also named the oustanding local president in Texas for June.

More recenty, five local members joined 250 Jaycee-Ettes at the regional six meeting held in Irving. The region includes Texas, Oklahoma, Missouri, Kansas, Louisiana and Arkansas. Purpose was for competition, to provide training in leadership and management skills, and to exchange ideas and plans.

Featured speaker was Barbara Greeson, past national president of Smyrna, Ga. She indicated that today, more than ever, Jaycee-Ettes and young women need to become involved in their communities.

Ms. Martin won second in competition with approximately 20 other candidates from the six states in attendance as outstanding local president. She also won third in the the Speak-Up competition, a four to six minute prepared speech on any subject. Hers was on "Complacency."

Carla Grant, local member, entered leadership dynamics competition and placed second in this competition, which includes an oral interview on competency of knowledge about leadership.

Midland Jaycee-Ettes group is a member of the U.S. Jaycee-Ettes, whose purpose is to provide leadership training through community service and involvement. Members are active in 3,500 communities. There are 59,000 national members.

Persons interested in joining the organization should call Ms. Martin at 683-5677 or 683-2034.

Mitsuru Nakamaru, president of Asahi Koi Co. of Gardena, Calif., holds a koi valued at $15,000. It weighs 25 pounds and is about 30 inches long. Nakamaru believes koi have become popular because of the relaxing effect of watching the fish.

Koi edging out goldfish in popularity

GARDENA, Calif. (AP) — The koi may be edging out the goldfish as one of America's most popular domestic vertebrate. This colorful relative of the carp is populating backyard ponds more and more these days as Mitsuru Nakamaru well knows.

Nakamaru has been selling koi since 1968 when he became the first person outside of Japan to win the "Grand Champion" flag in the All-Japan Koi Competition.

Breeding and selling koi can be quite lucrative if you consider that the winner of last year's koi competition in Japan now bears a $90,000 price tag.

The value of a koi depends on its quality, the different patterns on the back of the fish and its size, Nakamaru said.

For those who don't have thousands of dollars to spend on fish, 50 baby koi sell for $10. It takes them four or five years to grow to about 18 to 20 inches. During the next five years they grow at a slower pace, eventually reaching 30 inches or more.

Nakamaru said some live to be hundreds of years old. "A koi just died a couple of years ago in Japan which had lived to be more than 200 years old," said the 61-year-old fish breeder.

Nakamaru believes koi have become more popular due to the relaxing effect of just watching them.

"After coming home from a hard day of work, I look at my pond and forget about work and my headache." Nakamaru's "pond" holds 40,000 gallons of water and 300 to 400 koi.

Roy Sudo, 12, a Hawaiian native, feeds koi in Gardena, Calif. Sudo is the nephew of Mitsuru Nakamaru, the 1968 winner of the "Grand Champion" flag in the All-Japan Koi Competition. The winning fish in last year's competition bears a $90,000 price tag.

War ships called 'significant finds'

NEWPORT NEWS, Va. (AP) — Divers have recovered the wreck of the Cumberland, the first union ship sunk by the Confederate ironclad Merrimack," and recovered several artifacts.

The divers also found the shipwreck of the Florida, a Confederate commerce-raider that had sunk or captured more than 60 ships before it was scuttled by the Union in 1862.

"They are the two most significant finds since the Monitor," said Clive Cussler, author of the best-selling novel, "Raise the Titanic".

Cussler announced the discovery of the wrecks in a Washington press conference on Wednesday. He was in Newport News earlier this week to look over the artifacts.

The divers, who explored the James River this summer, were working for the National Underwater Marine Agency, a non-profit organization formed by Cussler.

The Cumberland was rumored to have gone down with more than $40,000 of gold and has been a target for treasure hunters for years.

Diablo Canyon protest prolonged

By STEVE FOX
Associated Press Writer

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif. (AP) — Deputies drew their batons sweeping aside demonstrators blockading the Diablo Canyon atomic power plant and arrests topped 800, but protesters said they would persevere until there is no one left to arrest.

Hundreds of demonstrators were gathered in the hills around the plant early today, preparing to lay siege to the plant for a third day, protest organizers said. But their ranks were thinned as many of their colleagues remained in jail and the others were released on the condition that they stay away from the blockade.

The first 200 protesters arrested were to be arraigned today on charges of trespassing and failure to disperse.

More than 1,000 people took part in the protest Wednesday and demonstrators succeeded in delaying 14 busloads of workers at the front gate of the facility for almost five hours Wednesday before being swept aside in a stepped-up show of force by deputies with batons drawn for the first time.

Activists clad in wetsuits penetrated the two-mile-long safety zone set up by the Coast Guard on the plant's coastal side, with six-man motorized rubber rafts leading a Coast Guard cutter on a chase for 10 miles through the Pacific Ocean at speeds up to 30 knots. Swimmers clambered ashore from the rafts and were arrested.

Six people, one a reporter, were arrested on shore after being chased into Avila Beach, a small port about 12 miles from the plant.

Members of the Abalone Alliance, the umbrella group organizing the protest, said they were encouraged by the two-day blockade attempt and would persevere until there was no one left to arrest. The protesters oppose nuclear power in general and claim the plant, halfway between San Francisco and Los Angeles, is unsafe because it lies just three miles from an offshore earthquake fault.

"It's going to continue as long as we can hold out....Every person committed to this blockade is going to be arrested and in jail before this is over," said Larry Goldberg of Humboldt County, Calif.

On Tuesday, 563 protesters were arrested and 244 were booked on Wednesday, according to Lt. Jerry Dooley of the San Luis Obispo County Sheriff's Department.

Robert Thornberry, manager of the $2.3 billion Pacific Gas & Electric facility 12 miles south of San Luis Obispo, said delaying the workers would not affect plans to load uranium and begin low-power testing scheduled to start if a federal license is issued as expected Monday.

"I commend the Abalone Alliance," Thornberry said, saying the group "has been non-violent and there has been no significant destruction of property." He said the only damage was cause by some 200 news reporters who used the roof of a storage building as a vantage point and broke roofing tiles.

The main gate of the 735-acre facility is seven miles from the seaside reactor. It remained the focal point of action Wednesday.

At dawn, 16 women climbed over the gate and others gathered outside in the driveway. A tense confrontation began when buses full of workers drove up, scattering reporters and blockaders who massed again as the first bus stopped in front of the gate. No police were present, but PG&E workers cut chains put on the fence by demonstrators and forced it open, shoving protesters aside.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Obesity alone does not lead to labor problems

Dear Dr. Solomon: My daughter has always been quite heavy, and now she is pregnant. I tried to tell her to lose weight before she decided to have a child, but she wouldn't listen. How dangerous is it for a women who is very overweight to be pregnant? — Mrs. T.H., Philadelphia, Pa.

Dear Mrs. H.: A study by Dr. Thomas Gross, of Case Western Reserve University School of Medicine, may help put your mind at ease. He reports that obesity itself does not lead to increased labor complications for women during pregnancy. For example, he found that the duration of labor and the management of the delivery were the same for both obese and non-obese patients. However, the obese women did show an increase in medical complications such as high blood pressure and diabetes.

While I would certainly not minimize the fact that obesity is a risk factor for a number of ailments, many overweight women do give birth without any increase in labor complications.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have a 14-year-old daughter. She is in good health but her breasts have not started developing yet. Is this unusual? What I'm wondering about is whether I should just wait to see what happens, or whether I should ask a doctor about it? — Mrs. E.R., Dallas, Texas

Dear Mrs. R.: At least one doctor suggests that a physician be consulted in the kind of situation you describe. Dr. Paul G. McDonough, professor of obstetrics and gynecology at the Medical College of Georgia, recommends that a girl your daughter's age who shows no sign of breast development should be checked by a physician. Of course, different girls mature at different ages, and your daughter may simply bloom a little later than others. But it wouldn't hurt to have her seen by a competent, kindly gynecologist.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My son is asking if we can buy a dog, and I would very much like to do so. I had one when I was young, and I know what having a pet can mean to a child.

The problem is that my son has asthma, and I don't want to complicate the problem by exposing him to anything that will aggravate the allergy. Would getting a short-haired dog be one way of resolving this problem? — Dave, Milton, Pa.

Dear Dave: Whether or not you should buy a dog depends on whether your son has allergic symptoms to that particular animal. Animal dander, which may result in allergic conditions, is not related to the length of the animal's hair.

I have had asthmatic patients in my private practice who could not tolerate having a dog in the house, while others showed no ill effects.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My father, who is a heavy cigarette smoker, had a routine X-ray, and his doctor suspects he might have lung cancer. He is now going back for diagnosis. How is lung cancer diagnosed? — Miss E.A., New York City, N.Y.

Dear Miss E.A.: Lung cancer is diagnosed by X-ray examination and by bronchoscopic examination or surgical exploration of the chest with a removal of a portion of lung tissue which is examined under the microscope.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Speculators stake nine Basin 'cats.

Permian prospectors plan nine wildcats for Basin locations. One in District 8A, a pair in New Mexico, and six for districts seven B and C.

SCHLEICHER VENTURES

Caraway Operating Co., San Angelo, will drill a wildcat almost a mile deep, 10 miles northwest of Fort McKavett.

The 5,200-foot No. 1 Martin will be sunk 1,700 feet from the south, and 700 feet from the west line of section 32, block 8, TW&NG survey.

The site is 3/4 of a mile southwest of Skelly's No. 1 Martin, abandoned August 4, 1970 at 4,800 feet.

****

Indian Wells Oil Co., San Angelo, will drill their No. 1 Pogo Ranch "1," a 6,900-foot wildcat, 5 1/2 miles northwest of Eldorado.

The drillsite is a bout 1 1/5 miles west-northwest of the HGN No. 1 Page, abandoned in February 1980 at 8,328 feet.

It is staked 4,347 feet from the north, and 1,707 feet from the east line of league 2, Concho CSL.

RUNNELS WILDCATS

Wick Petroleum Corp., Dallas, will drill a 4,400-foot wildcat, the No. 1 McCord, 5 miles southeast of Crews.

The location is 4/5 of a mile southwest of the J.H. Deford No. 1 Fox, drilled to 3,940 feet, and abandoned December 12, 1955.

The stake is 1,361 feet from the south, and 2,001 feet from the west line of the ETRR survey, abstract 125.

****

Dome Oil, Inc., Denver, will sink the No. 4 Rufus Allen D, 6 miles southwest of Winters.

The location is approximately 1 mile northeast of the Wayne Petroleum No. 1 M.F. Hoch, drilled to 3,555 feet, and abandoned June 5, 1960.

The stake is 467 feet from the south, and 1,140 feet from the west line of section 55, block 63, HT&B survey.

****

TXO Production Corp., Midland, will drill the No. 1 D. Hardy, 6 miles west of Lamesa.

The location is 3/5 of a mile southeast of R.K. Petroleum's No. 1 Wilson, abandoned March 10, 1980 at 12,000 feet.

The location is 660 feet from the south, and 660 feet from the east line of section 85, block 277, Glasscock CSL survey.

EDDY PAIR

Dinero Operating Co., Midland, will sink a pair of 8,000-foot 'cats in the Malaga area.

The No. 1 Kenai Finley will go down 1,780 feet from the south, and 660 feet from the west line of section 5, township 26 south, range 29 east. That's 11 miles southeast of Malaga. There apparently are no wells of comparable depth in the vicinity.

The No. 1 Cotton Petroleum Co. will be drilled 3 miles northwest of Malaga, just a few steps from the dry hole HNG No. 1 Belcher, abandoned September 18, 1977 at 3,700 feet. The site is 430 feet from the north, and 550 feet from the east line of section 7, township 24 south, range 28 east.

STONEWALL PROBE

Delta-Gulf Inc., San Antonio, will cut a 6,500-foot wildcat, the No. 1 Robertson, 8 miles southwest of Aspermont.

The stake was driven 1,980 feet from the south, and 467 feet from the west line of section 177, block 1 H&TC survey.

The site s 4/5 mile north-northeast of Pan American's No. 1 Jean, abandoned April 18, 1947 at 6,341.

TERRELL ATTEMPT

Resources Investment Corp., Midland, will take a shot at wildcat production with the 10,500-foot No. 1-9 Allison, to be drilled 25 miles southwest of Sheffield.

The location is 4,620 feet from the north, and 2,800 feet from the west line of section 9, block A-4, Mrs. L. Martin's survey.

The drillsite is about a mile south-southeast of HyTech Energy's No. 1 Allision, a 10,420-footer abandoned April 7, 1975.

Encephalomyelitis found in Panhandle

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Mosquito-borne equine encephalomyelitis has been confirmed among horses in almost every county in the Texas Panhandle, officials of the Texas Veterinary Medical Association say.

"Although cooler weather is fast-approaching, there is still a danger to horses in the Panhandle, where cases of EE often are reported in late September and even early October," said Dr. Charles Graham, chairman of the association's equine committee.

"Once EE has been reported, all unvaccinated horses in the area should be vaccinated immediately as the disease spreads very rapidly," said Graham.

"If horses are left untreated, most of them will die," he said.

Unusually heavy spring and summer rains in the Panhandle produced conditions favorable for an increase in the mosquito population, he said.

Green cards' are like magic for Thais

By DENIS D. GRAY
Associated Press Writer

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — What can let you leap across oceans with a single flash of the hand? What fits easily into a wallet but can be more valuable than a fat Swiss bank account?

The answer, for thousands of Thais, might be a credit-card-size piece of paper dubbed "the green card."

Technically known as U.S. Department of Justice document I-551, the card entitles its bearer to work and live permanently in the United States. And should "green card" holders find themselves in a hot spot outside the United States, they would be afforded the same protection — and if neeessary, evacuation — as American citizens.

Tens of thousands of Thais have emigrated to the United States over the past decade. But a sizable although unknown number of others with "green cards" continue to reside in Thailand — which is, technically, illegal — and apparently regard the document as an insurance policy should serious trouble befall their homeland.

"A lot of Thai families, especially in the Thai-Chinese community, seem to want to have one foot in each place," says U.S. Consul Richard Milton.

Milton says often only one or two in a family will obtain permanent residence papers. Nevertheless, this facilitates residency for other family members should the need arise. It also makes business sense to have a pipeline to the United States through which assets can be transferred legally or otherwise.

Some American diplomats, who regard Thailand as a close ally, are disturbed that the "green card syndrome" reflects a lack of confidence in Thailand's future. One diplomat says: "You can make a good case for a guy with nowhere to go fighting much harder for his country than one with an easy escape hatch."

Despite being described as a "frontline state" vis-a-vis Communist Indochina, Thailand does not appear in imminent danger of having to struggle for its existence.

But a climate of uncertainty exists, worsened from time to time by events like the Vietnamese invasion of neighboring Cambodia or recurring coups d'etat. Knowledgeable Thais often debate whether political in-fighting, a festering communist insurgency and a grip on wealth and power by an elite minority might not one day force dramatic changes.

"Green card" holders cannot by regulation residence abroad, but Milton and the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization office (INS) here say that the massive INS bureaucracy makes it easy for Thais and others to get around this. In fact, the annual mini-migration to the United States for "green card" renewals is a frequent topic of conversation among Bangkok's elite.

Milton points out that anxiety about the future is not the only reason for seeking American residency.

The stationing of thousands of American troops in Thailand during the Vietnam War led to marriages which in turn leads to relatives of Thai brides seeking entry to the United States.

Some Thais, especially those educated abroad, are attracted by the far higher salaries, the egalitarian life and the fact that they can be kept abreast of the latest advancements in their particular field in the United States.

Space-age steed prowls border

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Every morning, a lone hunter mounts his space-age steed and stalks a frustratingly wily prey — illegal aliens crossing the Rio Grande into the El Paso area.

The hunter: a U.S. Border Patrol agent. The steed: a helicopter.

"Helicopters are a great assistance to us because they can observe a lot that the ground units can't see," said Ed Garcia, acting director of the Border Patrol office in El Paso.

The helicopters provide the "eyes in the sky" in the Border Patrol's chore of attempting to stop the tide of illegal aliens sweeping across the river, said copter pilot John Jennings.

"It's frightening," Jennings said. "The country's actually being invaded and there's not a thing we can do about it."

But it's the job of Jennings and fellow pilots Ed Nichols and Loren Nichols to try. So they spend their days in the air above El Paso and the surrounding countryside, watching from above as their counterparts on the ground try to stop the human deluge.

Garcia said the helicopter has been used in El Paso for nearly two years. The Border Patrol also uses copters at its office in Chula Vista, Calif., he said.

Garcia said manpower shortages have limited the ability of the Border Patrol to keep Mexicans from illegally crossing the border to immigrate, look for jobs or simply shop in El Paso stores.

"Sometimes, we can't respond because of a lack of ground units," Garcia said. "Consequently, the chopper does see a lot of things that we can't take care of."

The patrol still picks up large numbers of illegal aliens as they cross or after they are caught holding jobs on the United States side of the border, but many go uncaptured.

A Tokyo rocker combs his hair in a fifties hair style recently at Harajuku, a trendy Tokyo district where Japanese rockers worship another time.

Japanese Rockers

TOKYO (AP) — Elvis outranks Shogun at Harajuku, where leather jackets read "Lonely Boys," "Brentwood Bowl" and "Rock and Roll."

Japanese rockers with heavy shades and ducktail haircuts show up each Sunday in this trendy Tokyo district to dance and preen. They wear the best '50s gear Japan Inc. has to offer.

This mild rebellion is for the sabbath only. During the week most of the Amegura — the Japanese term comes from American grafitti — work in offices or factories. Some are students.

The jackets come from boutiques catering to Amegura, but decoration is left to rockers born three decades too late. Old editions of Life magazine are in demand as guides to proper dress.

The music is right — courtesy of Sha Na Na, Chuck Berry and Sony — but there is little cruisin'. Tokyo police close the streets to wheels — and open them to dancers.

A rocker shows off his jacket recently purchased in Tokyo. The jacket was inspired by the movie, American Graffiti.

This young Japanese is a potrait of the fifties in the United States.

Rockers pose for a picture in Harajuku where groups of dancers gather every Sunday.

Scientists sustaining food crops in Amazon jungle soils

By KERNAN TURNER
Associated Press Writer

YURIMAGUAS, Peru (AP) — A team of Peruvian and American scientists are sustaining high-yield food crops in Amazon jungle soils previously considered too acid and infertile for substantial farming.

Using techniques developed over 10 years at their agricultural experiment station here, they have harvested 23 consecutive crops from soils which would have been abandoned after two years if traditional slash-and-burn farming methods had been used.

The scientists said they believe the experiment has major significance for a hungry world which the U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization estimates will need 494 million acres of land cleared by the year 2000 just to maintain present per-capita food consumption.

The techniques involve crop rotation, improved seed varieties and the careful application of fertilizers and lime to the soil.

The results, according to the scientists, show that the Amazon soil can continuously produce annual yields of about three metric tons of soybeans from a hectare (2.4 acres) of land, more than three metric tons of dryland rice, four metric tons of corn and four metric tons of peanuts. A metric ton is 2,204.62 pounds.

BY HARVESTING THREE times a year, the scientists added, grain yields of 10 metric tons per hectare have been accomplished, which compares favorably with yields in the U.S. Southeast.

The traditional method of farming in the jungle involves the clearing of land by cutting down trees and burning undergrowth. The usually unfertilized land yields three crops before it is abandoned for 15 to 20 years while the forest grows back and builds up the soil again.

Most of the world's land available for clearing is in the tropics, where previous attempts to get sustained yields have failed.

"It's failed in every other attempt, but we've done it," said Dr. Dale Bandy, a soil scientist and professor who works shirtless and sometimes without shoes beside Peruvian field hands at the experimental station.

Bandy, originally from Alliance, Ohio, came here five years ago as head of the Tropical Soils Research Project undertaken by North Carolina State University in cooperation with the Peruvian government which along with the U.S. Agency for International Development funds the project.

YURIMAGUAS IS A small town of pastel-colored houses and shops on the banks of the Huallaga River, 435 miles northeast of Lima.

"Continuous cultivation of annual crops on a sustained basis is possible and profitable in the acid, infertile soils of the Amazon jungle basin," the university said in a recent report to the U.S. development agency.

"The ecological implications of these successful activities are that less land may be cleared to produce food, thereby potentially enabling preservation of the ecological integrity of much of the humid tropics," the report said.

The report added that economic studies of field research on farmers' fields near Yurimaguas suggest that the annual net income per family on a plot of about 3.5 acres could increase to more than $5,100 with a 612 percent return on capital.

Farm families now earn the equivalent of about $750 a year using traditional shifting cultivation. Families living in the slums of Lima, Peru's capital, earn about $1,500 a year.

THE REPORT CALLED the earnings potential "a strong possible encouragement for reverse migration from the slums to the rural areas."

"Probably within the next 10 years you'll see most of Peru's annual food crops — corn, rice, soybeans and peanuts — will be grown east of the Andes in the jungle instead of along the coast," Bandy said in an interview here with The Associated Press.

He said the biggest obstacle remaining is to convince local farmers to employ the new techniques. Other problems are the lack of roads and farm credit in the region.

Israeli, Egyptian officials try to normalize relations

By ARTHUR MAX
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli and Egyptian officials are working out hundreds of details to put life into general agreements to normalize communications, civil aviation, tourism and transportation between their once warring countries.

Four days of talks, ending Friday, are aimed at wearing down the hostile barriers built by a generation of wars and the distrust that remained after the March 1979 peace treaty.

A normal relationship with an Arab country was the prize for which the Israelis agreed to evacuate the Sinai Peninsula, occupied since the six-day Arab-Israeli War of 1967.

The framework for normal relations was built into the Camp David peace treaty, but Israel complained that the Egyptians refused to fill in all the open spaces. The normalization talks were scheduled after Prime Minister Menachem Begin took the complaints to his meeting last month with President Anwar Sadat in Alexandria, Egypt.

Both Egyptians and Israelis want to complete the normalization issues by next April to ensure a smooth Israeli evacuation of the final quarter of Sinai, completing a phased pullback to the 1967 border.

Among the details agreed on in the current talks, cited by the Israelis as indications of progress, are:

— Israeli trucks will travel through Sinai to Egypt after changing their license plates at the border checkpoint. Now goods have to be transferred to Egyptian trucks.

— Israeli truck drivers and tourist guides will be given multiple entry visas.

— Flights from Tel Aviv to Cairo will be increased from four to five weekly, and small aircraft will have landing rights at airstrips near Sinai tourist spots.

The complicated negotiations encompass only a few facets of normalization. Commercial ties and the details of Israel's withdrawal are to be discussed separately.

Sinai looms large in the talks. The Israelis are loath to lose access to the tropical wonderland on the Red Sea coast where they built flourishing tourist resorts during 14 years of occupation.

Haig won't press chemical warfare allegations with Gromyko

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. says he will not press allegations of chemical warfare in Cambodia when he meets with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko next week.

Instead, Haig said Wednesday night, arms control will be the primary topic of the talks and he hopes the two countries can agree on a date for formal commencement of negotiations on limiting medium-range nuclear weapons in Europe.

Haig was asked after a speech whether he planned to bring up the accusations he made this week that poisonous chemicals had been used, possibly by the Soviet Union, in Southeast Asia.

He said he did not anticipate that "being a major issue of discussion" since the United States has presented its evidence to United Nations, which he said was the proper forum to investigate the matter.

Haig first raised allegations of chemical warfare during a visit to West Germany on Sunday and the administration backed up the charges Monday, saying poisonous "mycotoxins" were found on a leaf sample found this March in Cambodia near the Thai border.

The Kremlin, through the official Soviet news agency Tass, denounced Haig's accusations as slander.

While maintaining that chemical warfare would not be major issue during the talks, Haig said Soviet aggressive actions in all parts of the world would be on the agenda.

Haig's remarks were made in a speech at the World Bank during a conference on aiding Third World countries develop energy resources.

Haig reiterated the administration's opposition to establishing a separate arm of the World Bank to finance energy projects in poor countries, maintaining that such an action would merely add an "additional bureaucracy." He said it was more important to encourage the flow of private investment into Third World energy projects rather than financing them through the World Bank.

'Sugar' is too sweet for 'Hit Man'

Leonard rallies for TKO win in 14th round

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Fighting half-blind and trailing on all three judges' cards, Sugar Ray Leonard reached into his resevoir of boxing know-how for the knockout of Thomas Hearns that made him the undisputed welterweight champion of the world.

"I brought this up from the bottom of my heart," said Leonard after Wednesday night's 14th-round victory. "There were many people around the world who didn't want me to win, who wanted me to lose. I had to do this for Ray Leonard."

LEONARD'S LFFT eye had been damaged in his training camp when a sparring partner's elbow bruised it. Hearns knew about the injury and beat a steady tatoo on Leonard's eye, swelling it closed.

"I would say between half and three-quarters of my vision was impaired," Leonard said. "Once the eye swelled, he had a better chance to land right hands."

Hearns, who had been rocked early by Leonard and was rolling on the ropes in the sixth round, seemed to get his second wind around the 10th. When he heard the fans in the capacity crowd of 24,382 who packed the temporary stadium outside Caesars Palaca chanting his name, he responded with a brilliant rally that seemed to turn the fight around.

"I had the fight completely under control until his left hand and right jabs began getting through," Leonard said. "I was conscious of my eye injury and he started throwing bombs."

Not only was Hearns throwing bombs, but plenty of them were landing. The fight, which seemed to be going his way, was suddenly moving away from Leonard. Hearns, almost out of the war earlier, was back in business and launching rockets.

"I definitely knew I was ahead," Hearns said.

The judges agreed. Going into the 13th round all three had Hearns in front. It was 116-112 on Judge Duane Ford's card. Judge Chuck Minker had it 117-111 and Judge Lou Tabat had it 117-112.

NOW, IN Round 13, Leonard turned into a tiger. He tore into Hearns, bullying his opponent into the ropes. Twice, Hearns was driven through the strands. The first time, Referee Davey Pearl ruled no knockdown. The second time, however, there was no question about it. Hearns had hit the ring apron for the manditory eight count. When the bell rang, Hearns was rocky and Leonard in charge once more.

Now it was Round 14. Even with his big 13th round — he won it by two points on the cards of all three officials — Leonard was still trailing. He could have won both the 14th and 15th rounds and still not captured the fight. He needed a knockout to win and he went out and got it.

"I didn't think I was behind, not really," Leonard said. "But I always felt the end result is what counts."

When the 14th round began, most ringside observers had Leonard ahead on their cards but the judges did not and Leonard fought as if he knew the real score.

Once again, he tore after Hearns, blasting away with haymakers. Hearns, still groggy from the going-over he had absorbed in the 13th, rolled on the ropes again. Leonard swarmed in after him, much like a lion stalking a wounded prey. At 1:15 of the round, Referee Pearl stepped in and stopped the bout. Leonard had won the only way he could — by a knockout.

"I wasn't hurt," Hearns said. "I was pretty much in control. I definitely knew I was ahead. I got hit a good shot and I was trying to get myself together. I thought I was under control."

REFEREE PEARL, however, did not. And his opinion was the one that mattered at that point.

"He took a lot of blows to the head and couldn't defend himself anymore," the referee said. "Points have nothing to do with it. If I think he's going to get seriously hurt, I'm going to stop the fight."

That's exactly what he did. Hearns was unhappy with the sudden turn of events. "Those are the breaks," he said. "Things like that happen."

Pearl said Hearns' reaction was predictable.

"I've never seen a fighter who lost who didn't think the fight should have gone on," he said.

Leonard's camp was stunned when it learned that their fighter was trailing on the official cards.

"I'm really disgusted at the way the judges saw the fight," said trainer Janks Morton.

Attorney Mike Trainer, who helped put together this spectacular with its record gross of some $35 million and paydays of $8 million for Leonard and $5 million for Hearns, shook his head in disbelief when he heard the official cards.

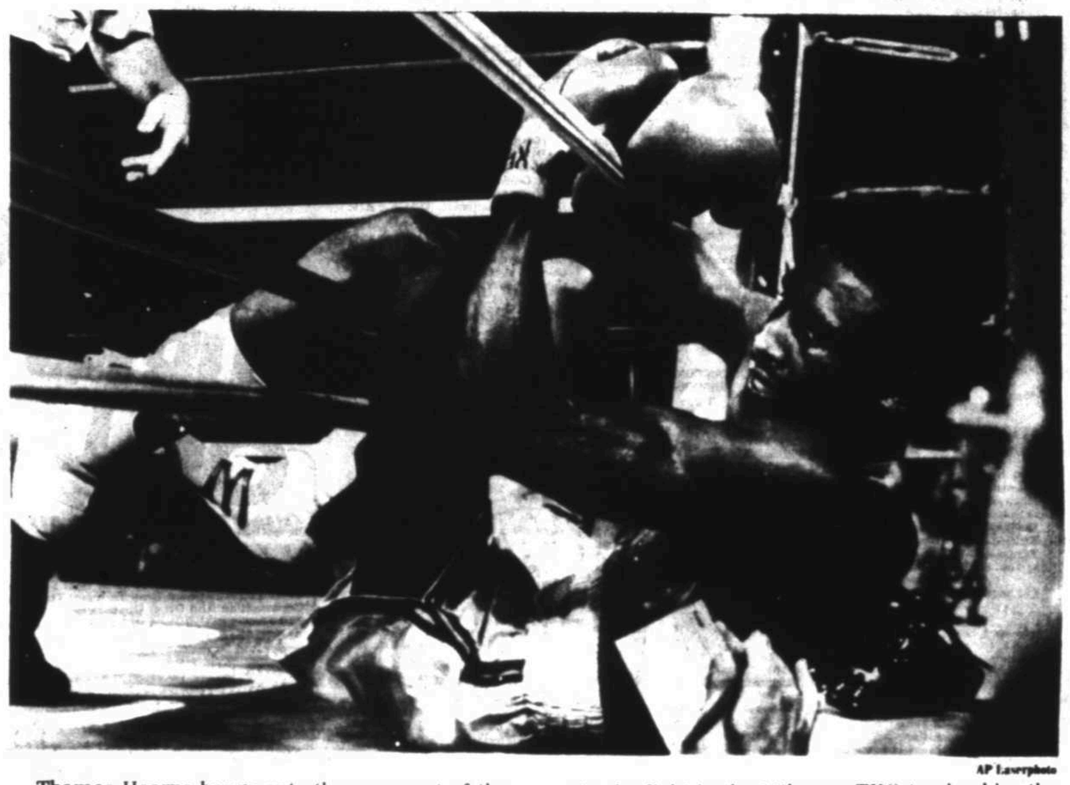

"If he had lost, I would have been sick about it. If Sugar Ray Leonard took the 13th, 14th and 15th rounds and still lost the fight, you'd be looking at a sick man."

Leonard, however, was more understanding.

"I was conscious of my injury and aware that each punch he landed was creatng more swelling," he said. "I laid back, hoping he'd make a mistake."

FIGHTING IN desert heat under television lights that pushed the ring temperature well over 100 degrees, Leonard tried to pace himself.

"I took breathers every chance I had," he said. "I had to. The lights and the heat were a factor."

Culpepper makes changes as Pack preps for Monterey

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

LUBBOCK — It's back to the drawing board for the Midland Bulldogs.

After Friday night's lackluster performance against the Andrews Mustangs, MHS head coach Pat Culpepper has installed a few changes in his lineup and has gone back to basics to prepare his team for Friday night's game against the Lubbock Monterey Plainsmen at 7:30.

A KEY change for Midland this week is the installation of halfback Wesley Williams in the fullback spot to create "more quickness" and the move of fullback Byron Campbell to defense to shore up the weakness caused at linebacker by the injury to Curt Holcomb in the scrimmage game against Brownwood three weeks ago. Culpepper has also returned offensive tackle Craig Bostick to last year's role of starter which he had lost to Steve Mauldin this season.

"Mauldin has been sick this week and Bostick has been playing better," said coach Culpepper about the changes. "We've moved Wesley Williams to fullback to get a quicker start off the ball and we are in desperate need of linebackers. Byron Campbell will be playing linebacker this week but not as a starter because he is still unfamiliar with the position."

GOING BACK to basics, according to Culpepper, means the best offensive and defensive units have been playing each other in practice sessions this week, giving each unit a chance to play against a Monterey-style formation to "try and reestablish the tempo on offense and defense because that's what we lacked against Andrews.

"Like any other coach, when you get humiliated in a game, you go back to the basics," continued Culpepper. "Our goal is still to win the district and to improve each week. I think we improved on defense last week, but stepped back on offense."

Polishing up the rough edges on offense and defense is going to be an important factor Friday against Monterey. The Bulldogs will be facing a team that has some good sized players. In fact, the Plainsmen have seven 200-plus players in their starting lineup and several more in the 190 range. That size has helped them become a tough defensive unit, their strong point according to Culpepper.

ANOTHER STRONG area to look at is the quarterback for the Plainsmen. Darron White, a 190-pound senior is, according to Culpepper, "a winner. He played against us last year and he engineered the team up and down the field against Rider.

Though Monterey was able to move the ball against Rider, the Plainsmen offense did show a weakness when it came to scoring. Three times the Plainsmen had first and goal situations inside the three-yard line, and three times they were turned away from the six-pointer.

"Monterey is an execution type team because they've been running the same plays for 10 years so they know what they are doing. They have a well-structured football program. I know Coach (James) Odoms and I have respect for him. If I had a son in Lubbock, I'd want him to go there because he'll teach the game the way it's supposed to be played."

While coach Culpepper has respect for the Monterey football program, coach Odoms feels the same way about Midland and that the Midland-Monterey football history is a great one for both schools.

"I know they are going to come ready to play after losing last week," said Odoms. "It'll be the second year in a row we've caught them right after Andrews who beat them when they probably shouldn't have. They're going to be madder than a wet hen.

Odoms feels that his team's "old tradition" will be a strong point against the Bulldogs, and that defense is going to "play a good game before it's over."

Both teams will be bringing a 1-1 record into the game and each team is coming off a loss. Midland was embarassed last week by Andrews, 27-6, while Monterey was blanked 14-0 by Wichita Falls Rider. The victories for each team came in the season openers. Midland defeated Amarillo Tascosa 31-13 while Monterey downed Canyon 17-7.

Ron Jaworski returns home

Bills are not planning on a warm reception

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) — Ron Jaworski is coming home tonight, but he might not like the welcome.

The quiet quarterback, who led the Philadelphia Eagles to the National Conference title and the Super Bowl last year, grew up a few miles from Rich Stadium. But Jaworski will have to depend on his receivers for a warm reception.

HE WON'T get one reception from the hometown crowd of about 80,000 when the Buffalo Bills host the Eagles at 8:30 p.m. in the nationally televised National Football League contest.

Philadelphia will be trying to square the regular-season series at 1-1. Buffalo won 27-26 when the teams met for the only time in 1973.

"I'd be rooting like hell for the Bills if I wasn't playing them," said Jaworski, who used to pay to watch Buffalo play. "The thing that really stands out is there's a lot of intensity and enthusiasm. As a player, I enjoy seeing that."

Off to a great start in their fourth year under Coach Chuck Knox, the Bills lead the NFL in defense and point margin after belting the New York Jets 31-0 and Baltimore 35-3, but the Eagles also are 2-0 with victories over the New York Giants and New England.

BUFFALO IS favored by the oddsmakers, possibly by virtue of weathering the first two weeks of the season with fewer injuries — a factor in a game only 4½ days after the last one. Many of the Buffalo regulars came out in the fourth quarter against Baltimore, and guard Conrad Dobler is the only questionable starter.

Philadelphia running back Wilbert Mongomery has a bruised hand but is working out, while reserve fullback Hubie Oliver and defensive end Dennis Harrison have missed practices this week because of injuries.

If the Eagles pull an upset, Knox could blame it on his teaching: he coached Jaworski for three years in Los Angeles and also had rival Coach Dick Vermeil on his staff for a year with the Rams.

"The job he's done there — his record speaks for itself," Knox said. "This is a superbly coached team with great athletes who make things happen. And players win the games."

BUFFALO CORNERBACK Mario Clark will have cover Eagle wide receiver Harold Carmichael, whose NFL record for consecutive games of at least one reception ended at 127 in the last contest of 1980. Clark, a 6-2, 190-pounder, will give away 35 pounds and six inches to Carmichael, who has six catches this year for 89 yards.

"Playing him is a matter of position. You have to keep your position and get the right relationship between him and the ball," said Clark. "But Jaworski makes them go. He has a very strong arm, reads coverages well and he's good looking you off and coming back to your man. He does that better than anybody else in the NFL"

Big volleyball tilts come early for Lee, MHS

By MIKE CRUVER
Sports Writer

Thursday's games will be only the second of the District 5-5A volleyball season but they shape up as important contests for the Tall City clubs.

Lee host San Angelo, the defending district champions, at 6 and 7 p.m. The Bobcats have gotten off to a fast start in 1981. Tuesday night, the Cats tripped Abilene Cooper 15-1, 15-10 to raise their season mark to 17-3.

San Angelo, who has captured three tournaments titles this year, are lead by Jeanne Bryant an Regina Cole. Cole and Bryant were named to the all-tournament team in the Arlington tournament last weekend.

The Bobcats' junior varsity also won its district opener by stopping the Cougars 15-4, 15-6.

Lee opened the district race on the right foot by dealing a 15-11, 15-7 loss on Odessa High on the Lee gym. Debra Quintela's serving and the frontline play of Suzanna McGaha, Rozena McCabe, Karen Carpenter and Pam Landers helped pave the way for the Rebels to even their season mark at 7-7.

Across town, the Midland High Bulldogs will be on the road for the second straight district tilt. Thursday, MHS travels to Big Spring to take on the Steers. The junior varsity clash is set to tip off at 6 p.m. with the varsity meeting to follow at 7 p.m.

The Steers slid by Abilene High 15-4 and 15-1 in Big Spring Tuesday for the first district game for both schools. The victory gives the Steers an 8-4 overall ledger.

Midland High opened the district race by nipping Odessa Permina 15-9, 0-15, 15-11 on the Mojo floor Tuesday. MHS' season record now stands at 8-6.

In the other District 5-5A games Thursday, Odessa High, Abilene Cooper, Odessa Permian, Abilene High.

Friday, both Lee and Midland High will be playing in the Denver City tournament. Lee opens the tournament against Seminole at 8 a.m. Friday while MHS plays later in the day againt an oppenent to be named.

McKinney turns into superman on gridiron

By The Associated Press

By Van Alstyne Coach Hugh Veale's assessment, local schoolboy Gregg McKinney would look like an ordinary person if you met him on the street.

But on Friday nights, McKinney dons his Panther football uniform and does some rather extraordinary things with a football such as last week when he rushed 303 yards on 20 carries and scored six touchdowns in a 48-29 victory over Caddo Mills.

"THESE KIND of players come along only once in a lifetime," Veale said. "He's the easiest person I've ever coached and also the best. You see him on the street and you'd think he was a ordinary person. If he was just a great athlete it wouldn't be as much of a pleasure to coach him but he's also a great person."

McKinney's performance, his second straight 200-yard plus performance this season, earns the 6-2, 180-pound junior mention in The Associated Press Schoolboy Honor Roll.

"He has that natural ability to be able to cut back and find the hole," assistant coach Roger Luttrell said. "He's able to completely reverse his field like Gayle Sayers used to do and run for a touchdown. He can just feel the seam and go to it."

MCKINNEY STUNG Caddo Mills for touchdown runs of 64, 70, 30, 55, 10 and 23 yards and returned a kickoff 65 yards that almost broke for a seventh score. He gained 210 yards two weeks ago against Gunter and now has 513 for the season, an average of 11 yards per carry.

Another highly talented tailback, Newton's Anthony Byerly, scored two touchdowns and ripped Orangefield for 273 yards on 34 carries en route to an 18-14 victory.

Trailing 14-12 with 2:13 to play, Byerly keyed a 96-yard drive gaining 60 yards on 6 carries. He scored the winning touchdown, breaking five tackles on his way to the end zone with nine seconds left in the game.

All of which was enough to impress Orangefield Coach Ed Peveto. "Byerly could play for any school in the state regardless of classification," Peveto said.

HUNTSVILLE KICKER Mark Shupak tied a state record for most field goals in a single game with boots of 37, 23, 18 and 35 yards against Jasper. "Anytime we get inside the 30 we're ready to try a field goal with Mark," Huntsville coach Joe Clements said. "His range is going to be about 50 yards but depending on the wind and weather, he may get a chance to try a 52 or 53 yarder."

In other outstanding performances last week:

--Craig Stump, quarterback for No. 1 state ranked Port Arthur Jefferson, completed 13 of 19 passes for 248 yards in a 41-7 victory over Baytown Lee with six completions going to Shea Walker for 105 yards.

--Quarterback Dale Gilbreath of Bovina, ranked No. 10 in Class 2A, hit 22 of 41 passes for 370 yards and six touchdowns in a 52-8 victory over Sudan. Receiver Joe Black caught four of Gilbreath's TD aerials.

Nixon quarterback Henry Benavides hit 11 of 12 passes for 151 yards and three touchdown passes in a 34-0 shutout of Falls City. Wide receiver Carlton McKinney, a 6-4 second team all-stater a year ago, caught TD passes for 13 and 10 yards.

--EL PASO Socorro's Julio Espinosa scored three touchdowns on a 12-yard run and kickoff returns of 75 and 80 yards.

--Andrews quarterback Keith Brooks ran for three touchdowns and passed for another in a 27-6 vbictory over Midland High. Brooks rushed 171 yards on 29 carries and scored on runs of 21, 66 and six yards.

Muscles on a mite

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — Tammy Stafford, at 9 years old, goes to school, plays with her dolls and lifts weights — big ones, like those that make Mr. Universe's muscles ripple.

Tammy is a strapping 46-pound, — she's lost three pounds since school started last month — 49-inch tower of power.

"Russia and the eastern European countries have their Nadia Comaneci's, and I feel that America finally has her own little girl," said her father, Wayne, also a weightlifter.

Tammy has hoisted 450 pounds during a Hack-squat, in which she lifts the weight from a sitting position, her father said. At 180 pounds, the 35-year-old Stafford said he can eke out 400 pounds.

Supergirl, a school sobriquet, has leg-pressed 500 pounds.

"I guess 400 pounds would be good lift for me," Stafford said.

On a full dead-lift from the floor, Tammy has lifted 132 pounds.

"I guess I could lift 300 pounds — but I'd be strained hard," Stafford said. "But the weight she is lifting at 46 pounds is much more."

Tammy's talent was evident early — "My mother used to babysit her when she was younger and she used to say that Tammy would turn her marble tables over," said Tammy's mother, Marsha.

Tammy started lifting weights in August 1980 after sneaking into her father's weight room.

"We didn't really find out about it until last year when she picked up those weights in her daddy's weight room at home," Mrs. Stafford said.

"The kids aren't allowed to go in there because they might hurt themselves," Mrs. Stafford said. "I walked by the door when I first saw her. She was picking up 100 pounds. That kind of shocked me.

"I got my husband and she was doing it so easy. My husband got her up to 220 pounds the first day doing a Hack-squat."

Tammy said she knew she could lift those hunks of iron. She said she just has to think about what she is going to lift, and lifts it.

"When I was little, I said a prayer, wishing that I could be the strongest little girl in the world, and look at me now," she said.

Hearns accepts loss

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Thomas Hearns waxed philosophical about his defeat at the hands of Sugar Ray Leonard Wednesday night, saying it was all in the game.

"I don't think that the fight should have been stopped," said Hearns, who was nearly knocked out of ring twice by Leonard as he lost his World Boxing Association title to the World Boxing Council champion, Leonard.

"I wasn't hurt, I was in control ... but that's the breaks."

But then, an obviously weary Hearns smiled and said, "Detroit, I shall return."

Hearns was leading on the card of all three judges when referee Davey Pearl stopped the fight at 1:45 of the 14th round.

Hearns said he was aware he was leading, but Leonard managed to score with a good shot.

"I knew I was ahead, but there was only one problem, " Hearns said. "I got hit with a good shot ...."

Hearns said he wanted a rematch and said boxing fans had seen one of the best fights ever.

Karate Saturday at Holidome

Second annual West Texas Karate Championship will be Saturday at the Midland Holidome.

Registration begins at 9 a.m., with eliminations to start at 10 a.m.

Finals are scheduled for 7:30 p.m., and will include the top two finalists in each category.

Over 200 competitors from ages six to 36 in the Permian Basin area will be attending, and among the officiating black belts will be Curtis Abernathy, Bill Kent, David Archer, Jym Mitchell, Mansell Taylor, Tracy Shipp and Cliff Goddard. Over 100 awards and trophies will be award.

Admission is $4 for adults and $2 for children. Food and drink will be available. Anyone needing more information should call Jan Mitchell at 682-3808 or 699-0625.

Lee junior varsity on road, sophs home against Lobos

A pair of junior varsity and sophomore games are scheduled today for the Midland Lee Stonewall Brigade while Midland High has an open date on its schedule.

The Lee junior varsity will be in Monahans today for its game at 7 p.m. while the sophomores play host to Monahans at 4 p.m.

Over at Midland High, the junior varsity is 0-1.

Mensing wins Triethelon

FT. DAVIS — James Mensing, 13th place finisher in this year's Hawaiian Triethelon, set the pace of the Prude Ranch Triathalon this weekend by winning the three events in a combined time of 2:34.32.

The three events are, swimming at Balmoahea State Park Pool over 800 meters, a 32-mile bicycle race through the mountains to Ft. Davis, and a six-mile run back to Prude Ranch.

John Franencht, a student a West Texas State, won the men's 17-30 division in 2:44.39 while Chip Cane of San Angelo won the high school division in 3:44.09.

Chris Robishaud, of Midland, won the women's division in 3:09.09 and finished sixth overall in the event.

Carlton pitches well but loses to Mets, 5-4

By Associated Press

The New York Mets were striking out left and right against Philadelphia's Steve Carlton — they had him just where they wanted him.

"That's not the first time that Carlton has pitched well against the Mets and lost," New York Manager Joe Torre said after his team beat Carlton 5-4 in the second game of a doubleheader Wednesday night despite 15 strikeouts by the superb left-hander. The Phillies won the opener 3-1.

"I remember when I was playing with him at St. Louis," added Torre, "that he had 19 strikeouts but Ron Swoboda hit a pair of two-run homers to beat us."

THAT WAS in 1969 — and, ironically, the team was also the Mets. Wednesday night, a home run also beat Carlton, this one a two-run shot by John Stearns in the eighth inning.

Making it even more unique was that the fact that it was the first homer for Stearns since Aug. 18, 1979. He had gone through 197 games without hitting one out of the park.

"I hit a breaking ball, a slider down and in," explained Stearns, who expected and received the silent treatment from his teammates after returning to the dugout.

"At the last second I lunged at the ball when I saw it breaking. Ironically, that's why I've lost my power. I'm going home during the winter and working on getting more wrist into the ball and stay back with my power. It's been so long since I hit a homer, that I forgot what it's like."

ELSEWHERE IN the National League, St. Louis defeated Montreal 7-1 in te first game of a doubleheader before the Expos came back to win the nightcap 4-3 in 11 innings, Houston trimmed San Diego 5-2, Los Angeles nipped Atlanta 3-2 and San Francisco crushed Cincinnati 12-7. Rain washed out the Pittsburgh-Chicago game.

Dave Kingman drew a walk leading off the eighth inning of the nightcap before Stearns hit his game-winning homer.

Carlton's strikeout total, incidentally, broke his own club record for a left-hander of 14, which he accomplished four times. His personal high for one game was the 19 he had for St. Louis in that game against the Mets in 1969.

Mike Marshall, 3-2, was the winner for the Mets in relief.

In the opener, Dick Ruthven, 11-5, fired a five-hitter and aided his own cause with an RBI single. Mike Schmidt, the Philadelphia third baseman, also added to his league-leading home run total with his 26th, a solo shot.

Pat Zachry, 7-12, was the loser.

Cardinals 7-3, Expos 1-4

Ken Oberkfell tripled home three runs and George Hendrick added a two-run double in support of Bob Forsch as St.Louis beat Montreal in the first game of their doubleheader.

Forsch, 9-5, gave up six hits, struck out one and walked none before giving way to reliever Doug Bair to start the eighth. Bair pitched hitless ball the last two innings to complete the six-hitter.

Larry Parrish's one-out RBI single in the 11th inning led the Expos' victory in the second game. Warren Cromartie opened the 11th with a single off reliever Jim Kaat, 6-5, and advanced to second on Gary Carter's sacrifice bunt. Cromartie took third on an infield hit by Rowland Office before Parrish slammed an 0-1 pitch from Bair over the head of center fielder Dave Green for the game-winning hit.

The blow made a winner of Jeff Reardon, 3-0, who had pitched the 11th for Montreal.

Astros 5, Padres 2

Art Howe keyed a three-run, sixth-inning rally with a run-scoring double to lead Houston over San Diego.

The victory was the third of the year for Don Sutton, 9-8, against San Diego and his 28th lifetime. The 36-year-old right-hander held the Padres to four hits, before being removed for a pinch-hitter in the eighth.

San Diego starter Tim Lollar, 1-8, lost his eighth consecutive decision, after holding the Astros scoreless for five innings.

"I don't think I have ever had better control since we have come back," said Sutton, who is 5-1 since the season resumed. "I worked out the whole time. I don't have the luxury of eight or 10 more years in my career."

Dodgers 3, Braves 2

Reggie Smith's bases-loaded pinch single in the bottom of the seventh broke a 1-1 tie and sent Los Angeles over Atlanta.

Jerry Reuss, 9-3, earned the victory with relief help from Dave Stewart and Steve Howe. Ruess, has won three straight decisions and five of his last six, gave up three hits in seven innings. Howe took over in the eighth and earned his eighth save.

Giants 12, Reds 7

Darrell Evans scored four runs and drove in two, leading San Francisco over Cincinnati. The Giants' 15 hits, including eight for extra bases, provided enough support for pitchers Mike Rowland, Fred Breining, 4-2, and Greg Minton.

Cincinnati starter Mario Soto, 8-9, retired only one of the six batters he faced in the first inning, when the Giants rallied for five runs.

Henredon draws best

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — Money may be the root of all evil, but it also is the object of some fierce competition in the first round of the inaugural Henredon Classic golf tournament.

Nine of the top 10 money winners in women's golf have arrived at the 6,106-yard Willow Creek Golf Course north of High Point to compete for the $65,000 purse, which includes $24,750 to the winner. The only member of that elite group not in the hunt this week is Nancy Lopez-Melton.

Lopez-Melton aggravated torn ligaments in her left hand during the Rail Charity Classic in Springfield, Ill., several weeks ago. She is currently sixth on the money list with more than $258,000 in winnings.

JoAnne Carner, who topped the $1 million mark in career earnings this year, is the 1981 leader at $196,733. If she can finish in the top 10 in this tournament, she will top the $200,000 mark.

Rankin, McCamey clash for Upton Co. title

By MIKE CRUVER
Sports Writer

It will be a speedy offense against a rugged defense when Rankin and McCamey collide Friday night at Badger Stadium to determine who owns bragging rights in Upton County.

Dwayne Turner's Red Devils, 2-0, bring a high-octane offense featuring Dennis Black and Terry Turner into the clash. The Red Devils have rang up 75 points in their first two games while surrendering eight.

Black's 351 rushing yards tops the squad while Turner has collected 200 yards on the ground.

If McCamey is to stop the Red Devils, Black and Turner must be muzzled. Stopping the "Dashing Duo" won't be an easy chore. Both have good quickness and speed plus they get good support from the rest of the backfield. Quarterback Bo Rose is a threat running or passing and Ronald Plegens has developed into a steady runner and receiver.

When McCamey has the ball, Rankin will have to contain the bullish running of fullback Don Mann and Robert Arana. Quarterback Jerry Stacy has displayed good running ability and isn't afraid to put the ball in the air. Sophomore fullback Robert Day and junior halfback David Ascota have provide valuable depth for coach Larry Nabors' option-type attack.

The Badgers opened with an easy 27-12 win over Iraan then struggled last week to get by Reagan County 7-0 in running their season record to 2-0.

Defensively, the Badgers are lead by Bucky Watson, Luis Montoya and Vance Tabb. Day and sophomore Mike Berryhill have surprised people with their strong defensive play.

Rankin's defensive strength lies in its secondary. Black and Turner have been terrors in the secondary with support coming from Plegens. Up front, the Red Devils look to Todd Ratliff, Jesse Hernandez and Quad Midkiff for stopping power.

Stanton (1-1) at Crane (0-2)

The burning question facing Ricky White is: Which effort best shows the character of his young, lightweight Golden Cranes?

Is it the team that displayed a gutty performance in scoring 22 points as they battled back from a 42-14 fourth-quarter deficit before losing 42-36 against Reagan County. Or, is it the team that was bombed 45-0 by Crane?

White hopes that somewhere in between lie the true talents of the Golden Cranes. Quarterback Jeff Pinkston and crew will get a good opportunity to show their real colors against the Buffaloes.

Stanton, running true to tradition, fields a good defensive club. Steve Park's Buffs have been troubled by nagging injuries to tailback Kevin Newman and quarterback Wally Hazelwood.

The Buffs were beaten in their opener 14-10 when Tahoka scored on a 70-yard bomb in the waning minutes. Last Friday, Stanton edged Coahoma on a fourth quarter field goal by Scott Church in the rain.

Stanton will be looking for a little more offense to go with a sturdy defense while Crane will trying rebound from the thrashing in Monahans.

Snyder (0-2) at Andrews (2-0)

District 2-AAAA warfare opens with this encounter and Keith Brooks looks to be the key to Mustang success.

Running from his quarterback slot, Brooks has rolled up 376 yards and seven touchdowns on the ground in two games. Plus, he has passed for one six-pointer and ran across a two-point conversion. For some players, that is already a year's work.

Add a salty defense to an offense featuring Brooks, Brent Petross and Adam Smith, who have a team that could be the best to come out of Andrews High. Midland High coach Pat Culpepper and his club think highly of Andrews following the Mustangs' 27-6 drubbing the Ponies inflicted on the Purple Pack.

Snyder has turned in two good defensive perfomances but have had trouble getting its offense in gear. Against Midland Lee Friday, the Tigers managed but 94 yards offensively as they fell 13-0.

Lamesa (0-2) at Monahans (2-0)

This is a game that pits a club that hasn't been able to get anything going against a team that seems to be rounding into the form that was predicted before the season.

Lamesa opened the season with a lackluster 7-0 defeat at the hands of Lubbock High and followed that up with a 27-12 loss to Brownfield.

A bright star in the Brownfield loss was the running of Steve Alexander. Alexander galloped for 101 yards on 31 carries and tallied once for the Golden Tors.

Monahans, on the other hand, had their best game of the young year. The Lobos passed for 272 yards and rushed for 245 as they romped past Crane 45-0. Monte McGuire accounted for 243 yards passing as he hit on 13 of 18 attempts. Ricky Boysaw added balance to the attacked by rushing for 117 yards.

Iraan (1-1) at Reagan County (1-1)

Reagan County, light-years improved over 1980, will be gunning for their second win of the year when they entertain the Braves. Last year the Owls won only one game and it took seven games for the Owls to score as many points (49) as they have in two this season.

Gregg Fisher is a big reason for the revitalized RC attack. In the Owls' two contests, he has notched 359 yards rushing. And, Fisher displayed a fine passing touch when the Owls went to the shotgun in an attempt to wrestle the win away from McCamey. Quarterback Michael Ortiz and fullback Torin Burleson have added their talents to a well-diversified Owl attack.

Despite the improved offense, a lot of the credit for the Owls improvement must go to the defense unit. Against Crane, RC tired noticeably in the fourth as Crane scored 22 fourth-quarter points. But, at McCamey the Owls played the entire 48 minutes at full speed.

Heading the tougher defense are ends Bradley Armstrong and Ortiz along with linebackers Fisher, Burleson and Thomas Baker.

Iraan played McCamey in the season opener and fell to the Badgers 27-12. Last week, the Braves nicked Eldorado 24-21 for their first win.

The District 6A Braves are expected to be mainly a ground attack unit. Highlighting the Brave attack is QB Joe Tom Hutchinson, halfback Ruben Ramirez and fullback Jesse Banner.

Greenwood (1-1) at Klondike (1-1)

After playing one and one-half games at home, the Rangers hit the road Friday.

Due to the heavy rain and lightening, the Greenwood-Whiteface was called at halftime last Friday with the Rangers in the driver's seat 28-0.

Greenwood coach Joe Longley was pleased with the balance the Rangers displayed.Three players hit paydirt with Kyle Longley tallying twice and Homer Lopez and Todd Brooks recording one each.

District 3A Klondike won its district in 1980 and was rated a preseason power for '81. One football magazine had the Cougars advancing into the second round of the state playoffs.

Of course, the Cougar glitter was tarnished in the season lidlifter when Wink rolled to a 53-0 verdict. Plains added to the Cougars misery last Friday by winning 27-12.

Despite the two loses, the Cougars should provide the Rangers with a stern test, especially in Klondike. Last year, the Cougars eked out a 20-14 win in Greenwood.

Midland Christian at Whitharral JV

The Mustangs will be looking for their second win in school history when they square off with Whitharral JV Saturday. Game time is set for 2 p.m.

The Whitharral varsity is the No. 1 ranked six-man team in the state after two weeks of action.

Dallas Tornado club runs out of wind

DALLAS (AP) — Lamar Hunt has decided to give up on his 13-year fight to keep the Dallas Tornado soccer club afloat after losing millions of dollars in an unsuccessful bid to make soccer a major sports attraction in Dallas.

Hunt, who tried to improve attendance with everything from ticket giveaways to skydivers bringing in the game ball, said Wednesday he had no choice but to "fold" the team.

"Through the years we made some bad decisions and perhaps the major shortcoming at this point is that the economics have simply run away with reality," Hunt said in a prepared statement.

Hunt and Bill McNutt, principle owners of the club, said they had not posted their North American Soccer League performance bond and termination of the Tornado would take effect Nov. 1.

"What it means is that there will be no Dallas Tornado. We have folded the club," Hunt said.

The two men announced they would invest in another existing NASL team, but Hunt declined Wednesday to specify which team.

Hunt said it was a "difficult" decision to fold the Dallas club, the only team operating in one city throughout the 15 years of the NASL.

The Tornado finished with the league's worst record at 5-27 and was drawing a crowd of only 4,000 or so during the outdoor season.

"This is one of the most sophisticated sports markets in the United States. The timing apparently was not right and various ingredients needed just didn't click," Hunt said.

Hunt declined to specify how much money he and co-owner Bill McNutt lost during the franchise's operation, but the Dallas Morning News reported the figure was believed to be at least $20 million.

Four other of the league's 21 franchises — Atlanta, California, Calgary and Washington — failed to post required $150,000 performance bonds by midnight Tuesday.

Friends of Animals, Inc. literature questioned

There is perhaps no better way to understand just how serious are the various anti-gun, anti-hunting groups around the country than to look at their own literature, what they say about themselves when trying to recruit new members and supporters.

One such group is the so-called Friends of Animals, Inc., a non-profit organization incorporated in 1957 in New York. Its president is the well-know Alice Herrington.

Among its literature is a pamphlet on light yellow paper with a picture of three racoons on the front and the words, "HELP WANTED' and "Friends of Animals".

According to the organization itself, "Friends of Animals are just that--we're friends to all animals. We're organized so we can better help our friends -- the unwanted litter of kittens doomed to a brief and brutal life, the hunted snow goose in a coastal swamp, the unwary raccoon in a forest laced with traps, the frightened rabbit in an experiementer's laboratory."

As the pamphlet indicates, some of Friend of Animals' activities are not of direct concern to sportsmen. However, other programs are a direct threat to hunters and trappers.

Under the heading "Trapping" the pamphlet declares, "The leghold trap has become an archetypal symbol of brutality and Friends of Animals is working to rid our countryside of this most inhumane device. The main drive of our effort is to usher legislation through Congress that would ban fur trade between states and foreign nations that haven't banned traps themselves.

"On more local levels, we've encouraged efforts to ban the traps in individuals states and municipalities."

The section on trapping concludes with the statement,"FOA activists are also invovled with the disruption of trapping in the wilderness, helping to give animals a better chance of survival until the trap itself is outlawed and removed."

The same attitude carries over into description which is headlined "Hunt Sabotage." Here the pamphlet states, "Since animals do not have all the legal protection they need, Friends of Animals also goes into the field to protect animals from those abuses now tolerated by law. Most of our member's efforts here are focused on separating wild animals from hunters and trappers.

"Friends of Animlas has developed a full program of hunting and trapping disrption that effectively protects many animals from shotguns, rifles, arrows and traps of those who would exploit them for profit or sport.

"We also take to the streets to picket furriers and others who have the legal right — but not the ethical right — to kill for 'fun furs', mutilate laboratory animals in the name of 'science' or slaughter deer and ducks in the name of sports."

"Hunt sabotage" has become one of the favorite terms of Friends of Animals since it issued a newsletter in December of 1979 declaring that American hunters "are more numerousand generally better equipped than the entire Nazi armies of the Second World War." At that time it urged "friends of animals" to become a "forest partisans" on behalf of wildlife and issued a list of "Tips for Hunt Saboteurs":

"1. Deny the hunter the land to hunt on...encourage your neighbors, especially those who own large tracts of land such as farms and ranches, to post their land and forbid hunting.

"2. Apply for those (special hunt) permits yourself. The permits are usually awarded by a simple lottery selection. If you're lucky, you'll win a permit and deny a hunter his kill.

"3. Got into the woods yourself the day befor the hunting season...try to drive wildlife away.

"4. Certain substances, such as rotten eggs, when rubbed into hunting blinds make those enclosures even more uncomfortable. Plastering the floor of a huntng blind with cow dung is another good idea.

"5. If you're fimiliar with wildlife habits in your neighborhood, try to encourage them to break these habits shortly before hunting season (the newsletter gives examples such as placing deer repellant and bags of human hair along deer tracks).

"6. If there is much hunting with dogs in your area, try to get hold of a female dog in heat and lead her, on a leash, through areas that is heavily hunted. Male dogs in the hunter's pack will 'get wind' of the female and lose their enthusiam for chasing rabbits or deer.

"7. Hunters frequently like to ambush their prey by setting out food and then hiding in blinds. To disrupt this, there are two alternatives. (Removing the foo or spraying it with repellant is suggested by the newsletter.)

"8. Encourage your municipality to pass an ordinance that bans, in the interest of public safety, the use of all weapons within its limits.

"9. Try to develop strong anti-hunting sentiment in your community by writing letters to the editor of your local newspaper, meeting with neighbors, getting o talk shows.

"10. If you have a protable tape recorder, get a cassette recording of wolf howls. Play this in the woods a few times before hunting season. It will make wildlife wary.

In the next Fin and Feather column, we'll evaluate these 13 anti-hunting tips and voice an opinion on what we think of the Friends of Animals.

U.S. Ryder Cup team looks awesome

WALTON HEATH, England (AP) — John Jacobs was standing by when the official team photograph was taken of the American Ryder Cup congregation.

There, leaning on their bags, were Jack Nicklaus, Tom Watson, Lee Trevino, Ray Floyd and eight more of the world's finest players.

"Why," Jacobs, the European captain, asked of an American visitor, "didn't you bring your first team?"

Then, he added, "It is probably the strongest American team in the history of the matches."

"It is so strong," he said, "that the Europeans are in a lovely underdog position.

"We are expected to lose," he said of the three-day matches that begin Friday on the Walton Heath Golf Club course.

"In that situation, facing a superteam, facing the legends, facing the great world players, there is no problem of motivation.

"They are professionals," he said of his team, made up of seven British players, two from Ireland, two from Spain and Bernard Langer of West Germany, probably Europe's best this year.

"They know that over 18 holes any good professional can beat another professional," Jacobs said.

"But the American team is so awesome, I have to keep them aware of the possibility of victory. Facing the team they do, its so easy to think of losing close, not being embarrased, keeping it 3 and 2 or 2 and 1 and not playing aggressively enough to win."

The problem for the heavily favored Americans, on the other hand, could be complacency, Trevino suggested.

"We have to convince ourselves not to take these guys too lightly," Trevino said. Nicklaus, however, didn't foresee the same problem.

"Complacent to the point that they could win the matches?" he asked. "No, that won't happen."

It hasn't happened in some time.

The Americans have a 19-3-1 overall record in these biennial matches that began in 1927. In the years since World War II, the United States has lost only once. The Americans were so heavily favored this time that Britain's legal bookies aren't even offering a price on the team outcome.

Ayala wins again

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Four unbeaten fighters, led by 18-year-old Tony Ayala, stretched their winning streaks during preliminaries to the Sugar Ray Leonard-Thomas Hearns welterweight championship fight.

Ayala, the youngster from San Antonio, knocked out Jose Baquedano of Merida, Mexico at 1:09 of the first round Wednesday night with a devasting left hand for his 14th professional victory and 12th knockout.

Heavyweight Marvis Frazier of Philadelphia, son of ex-champion Joe Frazier, stopped Guy Casale of Newark, N.J., who was unable to answer the bell for the fifth round of their scheduled eight-rounder.

In another heavyweight bout, Tony Tucker of Grand Rapids, Mich., scored his 10th straight knockout, finishing Harvey Steichen of Carson City, Nev., in 50 seconds of the third round.

In a junior lightweight match, Edwin Rosario of Puerto Rico scored a unanimous 10-round decision over James Martinez of Dallas. It was Rosario's 20th consecutive victory but the first time he has failed to score a knockout.

Fairway Oaks will be no cupcake for pros

ABILENE, Texas (AP) - The professional golf tourists who are used to ripping par except in the major tournaments may be surprised in the inaugural $350,000 LaJet Classic beginning today.

The 7,100-yard Par 71 Fairway Oaks is no cupcake course although it's only two years old.

Besides the length it has some tough four-inch deep Bermuda rough which makes wayward driving a sure road to bogeys.

Although such Texans as Lee Trevino, Ben Crenshaw, Tom Kite and Bill Rogers are on the Ryder Cup team which is playing in England this week, the $63,000 first place prize money has drawn a respectable field off the Tournament Players Association (TPA) tour.

Eleven current tour champions are among the 144-man field including John Mahaffey, Fuzzy Zoeller, Craig Stadler, John Cook, Keith Fergus, Ed Fiori, Dave Eichelberger, Dave Barr, Phil Hancock, and Mike Sullivan.

Andy North, the U.S. Open champion in 1978 who has two second place finishes this year was in the field.

Former PGA champions Dave Stockton and Lanny Wadkins, former Masters champions George Archer and Charles Coody, former British Open champion Tom Weiskopf and former U.S. Open champion Lou Graham were entered.

This is the first new Texas stop on the professional tour in 35 years.

The tournament idea was born last year when LaJet, Inc., a large independent oil company based in Abilene, brought 28 tour regulars to this city of 100,000 for a two-day affair won by Bill Kratzert, who earned $30,000 doing so.

"We learned that the PGA's 1981 fall schedule had an opening the week of the Ryder Cup matches, and Coody (Fairway Oaks pro) called the PGA and inquired," said Bill McGlothin, Fairway Oaks president and tournament director.

A visit by PGA Commissioner Deane Beman clinched the application in May. LaJet will now be a regular tour stop.

Any profits from the tournament are to be channeled to the West Texas Rehabilitation Center.

Besides the $350,000 in prize money, the pros will be shooting for four brand new automobiles which will be given away to the closest to the hole on the four par 3s.

Houk pleased with Boston's game

By The Associated Press

Manager Ralph Houk didn't set his sights too high before Boston took the field for a four-game series against the first-place Detroit Tigers, but so far the Red Sox have scored a direct hit.

"I certainly would have been happy to win three (out of four)," said Houk, whose team has beaten the Tigers in the first three games of the series to pull to within 1½ games of the lead in the American League East.

"YOU SURE couldn't have complained because they (the Tigers) were hot when they came in," Houk explained. "They had just won three over Cleveland."

Even two victories would have been acceptable to Houk, who got just that many when the Red Sox swept a double header from the Tigers Wednesday night.

"I figured even if we split with them they have a tough schedule and so do we. Any team that can win four or five in a row can win it," said Houk. "I think it's going to go right down to the wire. When you're playing each other like that things can change awfully fast."

The Red Sox won the first game 2-1 in 10 innings and the nightcap 5-4. The series opened Tuesday with a 5-2 Boston triumph and ends tonight.

In other AL games, Milwaukee edged New York 3-2, Oakland nipped Texas 2-1, Minnesota beat Toronto 5-2, Kansas City tripped California 3-1 and Chicago beat Seattle 3-1. Baltimore at Cleveland was postponed because of rain.

DETROIT NOW leads the East by one game over the Brewers, 1½ over Boston and two over Baltimore and the Yankees.

The big hit in the first game Wednesday was Carney Lansford's 10th-inning RBI single, and in the second game it was Dave Stapleton's two-run single in the seventh that put the Red Sox ahead 5-4.

The Red Sox got strong pitching performances of Dennis Eckersley, 8-6, who went the distance and scattered seven hits in the first game, and Tom Burgmeier, 4-5, who blanked the Tigers over the final 2⅓ innings in the nightcap.

Detroit had gone ahead 4-3 in the second game on Kirk Gibson's two-run single off Mark Clear in the top of the seventh. Burgmeier then came in and struck out Steve Kemp.

Boston had taken a 1-0 lead in the first on Carl Yastrzemski's RBI single and made it 3-0 in the third on Lansford's bases-loaded double.

BUT THE Tigers cut the margin when John Wockenfuss led off the fifth with his fifth homer and Ron Jackson doubled in another run in the sixth.

In the opener, Remy walked to lead off the 10th inning and went to second on Dwight Evans' deep fly to center. After Jim Rice flied out, Yastrzemski was walked intentionally and Lansford ripped a single to left off Detroit starter and loser Jack Morris, 12-5.

Brewers 3, Yankees 2

Gorman Thomas hit his 19th homer and doubled home the winning run in the sixth inning, while Rollie Fingers continued his spectacular relief pitching for Milwaukee.

After Thomas' double gave the Brewers a 3-1 lead, Rick Cerone cut the margin to one in the seventh with a sacrifice fly for New York, but Fingers shackled the Yankees the final two innings for his 26th save. He has 14 saves and two victories in Milwaukee's 22 triumphs in the second half.

Twins 5, Blue Jays 2

Minnesota won its eighth game in nine decisions as Hosken Powell hit a three-run double and John Castino slugged a two-run homer.

Winner Al Williams, 5-8, had an eight-hitter through eighth innings, but he failed to register his first major-league shutout after he gave up two more hits in the ninth. Reliever Doug Corbett gave up a sacrifice fly to Otto Velez and a run-scoring single to George Wells to account for Toronto's runs.

Royals 3, Angels 1

Dennis Leonard beat California for the ninth consecutive time to lead Kansas City to its fifth straight triumph.

Leonard, 10-10, pitched an eight-hitter to hand the Angels their 11th loss in the last 12 games.

The game was tied 1-1 in the eighth inning as California's Darryl Motley and the Angels' Brian Downing homered, before a throwing error by shortstop Rick Burleson on Hal McRae's infield hit sent George Brett home with the winning run.

A's 2, Rangers 1

Dwayne Murphy hit a two-run homer in the eighth inning to support Mike Norris' five-hitter for Oakland.

Four of Texas' hits off Norris, 11-7, were by Mickey Rivers and the fifth was a double by Jim Sundberg that led to Mark Wagner's successful suicide squeeze in the third inning.

Loser Danny Darwin, 8-8, had a four-hit shutout through seven innings, but a single by Rickey Henderson and Murphy's homer ruined the outing.

Darwin left the game in the eighth inning after a bench-clearing fight that started when Oakland's Cliff Johnson charged the mound. Johnson, who was ejected for starting the fight, had been hit on the hip with a Darwin fastball two innings earlier.

White Sox 3, Mariners 1

Britt Burns pitched a three-hitter and Chet Lemon played a part in all of Chicago's runs in the victory over Seattle.

Burns, 9-4, making only his second start since his father's funeral Sept. 9, struck out nine.

Lemon, who had knocked in Chicago's first run with an RBI groundout in the sixth, broke a 1-1 tie in the ninth with a run-scoring double and came home on Lamar Johnson's single.

Tom Paciorek homered for the Mariners' only run in the sixth.

Celts lose court edge in battle

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Celtics of the National Basketball Association have lost their "homecourt advantage" in their legal battle with the Toronto Blue Jays of the American League over the future of Danny Ainge.

Judge Rya Zobel, ruling Wednesday in U.S. District Court in Boston, transferred full jurisdiction in the case to the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York. Judge Lee Gagliardi has scheduled a hearing in the case there for 9:30 a.m. Friday.

Ruling marks end to Hughes battle

By SHARON HERBAUGH
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — A bitter five-year feud to determine the legitimate heirs of billionaire Howard Hughes has ended, but attorneys say distribution of the enormous fortune could be delayed for years by appeals and a spat between two states seeking to tax the estate.

Harris County Probate Judge Pat Gregory approved the last claims to the late tycoon's estate Wednesday when he awarded 9.5 percent of the fortune to two stepchildren of Hughes' paternal uncle Rupert.

The ruling marked an end to five years of litigation on the probate level, but about 500 distant relatives whose estate claims were denied have vowed to appeal and Texas and California also would delay distribution of the wealth — estimated at up to $2 billion when Hughes died — with a fight to determine which state can claim Hughes a resident for tax purposes.

"There are still several appeals and the tax suits. But we're now down to dealing with very specific, narrow issues," said attorney Wayne Fisher, who represents Rupert's two stepchildren. "When you think of what's left compared to the number of claims that have been ruled on, we've just taken one giant step."

GREGORY EARLIER SAID 17 maternal relatives of Hughes were entitled to share the estate and a six-member jury decided that three paternal first cousins of the late tycoon also were legitimate heirs.

The judge's ruling Wednesday meant that all 22 Hughes relatives who signed a family settlement agreement just months after Hughes' death have been declared heirs to the fortune.

That agreement designates 25 percent of the estate will be donated to charity. The maternal heirs will split 71.5 percent of the remainder, and the five paternal first cousins will divide 28.5 percent.

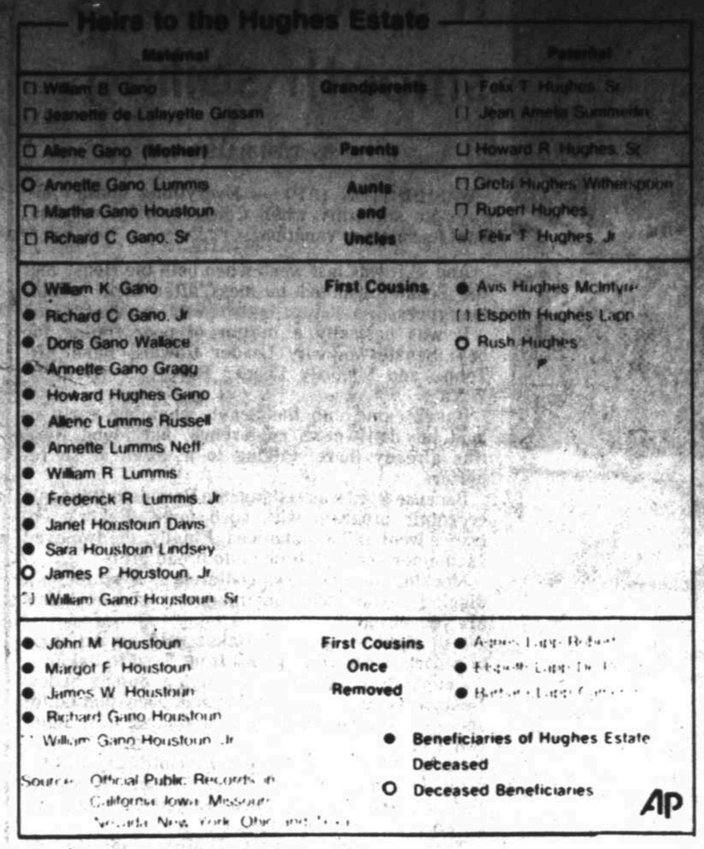

Attorneys for 400 of the distant relatives whose claims were denied showed up at Wednesday's hearing to challenge the claims of Avis Hughes McIntrye of Montgomery, Ala., and her brother, the late Rush Hughes, but Gregory ruled they had no standing and did not allow them to argue their case.

Gregory ruled that although Rupert never formally adopted Mrs. McIntrye, 81, and her brother, they were entitled to share in his estate because Rupert gave them his name and provided for their care and education.

The judge ordered the series of hearings to determine the maternal and paternal heirs when he declared earlier that Hughes left no valid will or immediate survivors when he died April 5, 1976, aboard an emergency medical flight from Acapulco, Mexico, to Houston.

The maternal heirs were unchallenged in an August hearing, and a six-member jury upheld the claims of Rupert's three granddaughters on Sept. 4.

The next major battle comes later this year in the U.S. Supreme Court when California and Texas will debate which state has the right to collect hefty inheritance taxes. Both states have claimed Hughes as a resident.

Probate Judge Pat Gregory approved the last two claims to the estate of billionaire Hughes Wednesday in Houston. This chart shows the 22 relatives who have been named heirs to the Hughes fortune.

Customer's research leads to company arrests

NORWALK, Conn. (AP) — A former bookkeeper got so mad at her high electric bills that she demanded to see the power company's books and what she found led to the arrests of three company commissioners on charges of stealing hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Chief State's Attorney Austin McGuigan said the three — and four other people charged in the case — engaged in "wholesale debauchery" of the South Norwalk Electric Works, a municipal power company.

"I had a feeling there was some hanky-panky, but I didn't think it would be anything like this," said the former bookkeeper, Dorothy Spielman, who now works in a bank as a supervisor.

The three commissioners, George Carrasquillo, Frances Autuore and Edward Ancrum, were arrested Wednesday and released on written promises to appear in court. A warrant was issued for former Commissioner John DeBlock.

THREE OTHERS were arrested previously: August R. DiStasi, the former superintendent, who waived extradition from Texas, Francis T. Willey, a company foreman, and Edward Murachanian, a vendor.

The seven, all from Norwalk, are charged with larceny and conspiracy to commit larceny.

"If they only did what I asked them to do on the bills, I wouldn't have been as persistent," said Mrs. Spielman.

She said she was frustrated by the company's refusal to itemize her bills. "I wanted my fuel adjustment shown as a separate item, and they wouldn't do it," she said.

Mrs. Spielman's arguments with South Norwalk Electric Works started in 1979. "When they told me I wouldn't understand, then I started keeping track of my bills," she said.

She found that when she multiplied her electricity use by the rate, her total and the company's differed on three occasions.

"When I called them, I found out they had thrown a 6 percent surcharge on the bill," she said.

THE STATE Department of Consumer Protection referred Mrs. Spielman to the Department of Public Utilities Control, which said it had no jurisdiction.

"The Norwalk system was used in textbooks, I understand, as an example of a bizarre arrangement," Norwalk Mayor William Collins said later. The company, which has about 40 employees and 5,300 customers, is technically "owned" by voters in its service area and the commissioners are elected for six-year terms.

"Since they are elected separately from city officers, and in no way report to the city, the city has no control," Collins said, adding it apparently would be impossible to remove the commissioners from their posts.

In March, Mrs. Spielman went to a meeting of the commissioners to complain.

"I asked them why I got 13 bills in 12 months," she said.

Her questions were reported in local newspapers, and a customer of another municipal utility called to tell her that registered voters had the right to examine the company's books.

It's not always smooth sailing

By TOM RAUM

WASHINGTON (AP) — Everything doesn't always go smoothly when Congress first returns from its summer vacation.

And so it was last week when both the House and the Senate resumed business after their month-long recess.

It was basically a matter of poor timing for both Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., and Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va.

Baker came into the Senate chamber early to hold his daily news conference, but found Byrd was already there, talking to a dozen or so reporters.

Because Byrd was lashing into President Reagan's economic program with such force, Baker's entrance went all but unnoticed. Finally, the two eyed each other and both broke into broad grins.

Mocking his own news conference, Byrd made a digging gesture with an imaginary shovel. "How are you Howard?"

"All right — so far," Baker said as the troop of reporters moved as a unit from Byrd to Baker.

Later, Byrd struggled to divide among fellow Democrats the 25 minutes they had been allotted for speeches. But no matter how he figured it, it didn't come out.

First of all, Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., wanted 15 minutes and Sens. William Proxmire, D-Wisc., and Wendell Ford wanted four minutes between them. So far so good.

Then Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., indicated he too wanted to speak. For how long? Byrd inquired. Twenty minutes, Stennis responded.

Byrd looked perplexed. Baker finally came to his rescue, winning Senate approval to give the Democrats an additional 20 minutes for their speech making.
