Both Teams Play Brilliant Football; Sandie Mentor Pays Tribute To Lubbock As Game Ends

BUTLER FIELD, AMARILLO, Nov. 2. Amarillo's Golden Sandstorm blew with pent-up fury on two brief occasions here Saturday afternoon and scored a pair of touchdowns to win a bitterly fought gridiron battle with the fighting Westerners, 13 to 7.

Westerner-boosters who stayed at home Saturday said it with telegrams in cheering on the fighting Gold and Black eleven. More than 20 wire messages from local fans and fanatics were received by the Westerners at Butler Field in Amarillo before or during the game. Most of these were read to members of the team between halves.

Lubbock Westerners, who never-the-less covered themselves with glory by exhibiting one of the gamest demonstrations of fighting spirit in the annals of West Texas high school football.

Although winning, 13 to 7, the Sandies were completely outplayed through most of the hard fought battle, gaining a victory through two long runs by Bill Mac Gibson and Carl Bufkin. This pair of backs managed to break loose for the Sandstorm's two counters, and aside from these two plays, one coming in the first period and the other in the third, the Amarillo eleven was

Police Force Reinforced When Gangs Continue To Carry On Sabotage Drive In New Orleans Row

(By Associated Press)

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 2.—Plainsmen, armed with shotguns in an augmented police force on 8 hour shifts was Police Superintendent Ray's answer today when striking gangs continued their campaign of sabotage by blowing up street cars and blasting residences occupied by non-union motormen and conductors in the strike of the city street car crews.

Today repeated his order that night-time bombing of street cars must stop and ordered his force into intensive activities during the "danger hours."

Six Blamed

Well informed officials of the police department let it be known today that it was their belief that persons guilty of placing explosives on street car tracks and hurling bombs under residences numbered "less than six" and said that the capture of one of the number would lead to apprehension of all.

Working side by side with police in the search for some clew to the identity of the perpetrators of violence was Edward J. Smith.

Patience Test Won By Police

CORPUS CHRISTI, Nov. 2. (AP)—The patience of a thief who stole 168 miles of telephone wire in short sections has been matched by the perseverance of local police who after tracing the wire through junk dealers to points as far away as St. Louis arrested the alleged thief today.

The wire was taken from poles on Padre Island near here, where it had been strung by a local amusement company developing the island. The complaint filed charged George McGeorge, who lives on the island, with theft of the 30,000 pounds.

State To Oppose Change Of Venue For Lester Case

Lubbock Man Charged With Slaying Wife Will Go On Trial Here Tomorrow In 99th District Court

The State will oppose efforts to secure a change of venue for Clay Lester, charged with murder in connection with the fatal shooting of his wife, Mrs. Virgie Lester, when he appears in 99th District court tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock for his scheduled trial, District Attorney Durwood Bradley announced late Saturday.

"We believe that Lester can receive as fair a trial in Lubbock as anywhere in the State," said Mr. Bradley.

Bail Is Denied

Lester was returned to the Lubbock county jail Friday afternoon without bond, following habeas corpus hearing in 99th district court before Judge Clark M. Mullican. Shortly afterwards the defense counsel of Schenck & Triplett announced that a change of venue would be sought Monday.

The fatal shooting occurred in this city on the morning of October 24 at 413 Avenue H, where Mrs. Lester and Mrs. Eva Paschall operated a small cafe.

"The order issued Thursday which restrained Lubbock county newspapers from publishing the sworn testimony of the habeas corpus hearing certainly does not apply to the trial which opens Monday," Judge Mullican announced Saturday. "When a jury is selected for the case newspapers will be welcome to publish all the testimony. The court assuredly recoghizes the freedom of the press."

His Booting Is Aid To The Cause Of Locals; Crites And Hodges Also Gain On Cotton Palace Field

(By Associated Press)

WACO, Nov. 2.—Reversing their sluggish form displayed a week ago at Shreveport, the Baylor Bears pounded out a 34-0 win over the Texas Tech Matadors here Saturday afternoon on the Cotton Palace field.

Baylor scored early in the game with a steady drive from their 40-yard line, and jumped into a 7-0 lead. They repeated the performance in the same quarter after Gilliland and Wilson advanced the ball on end runs and tackle plays, and Wilson chased around the Matador end for 14 yards and touchdown.

Jennings Not There.

The Bears played without the direction of their coach, Morley Jennings, who was in Dallas attending the Texas University-S. M. U. game. Baylor found no difficulty in scoring a touchdown in each succeeding quarter after steady marches to the Tech goal line. The Bears were complete masters of the game for the afternoon and kept the ball in their possession for most of the game.

The Bruins made 16 first downs

Cotton Ginnings Near Standstill

With a week of wet weather, cotton picking and cotton ginning in Lubbock county remained almost at a standstill, with only about 1,000 bales estimated as having been ginned throughout the county, in its 30 gin plants. This season's total ginnings are approximately 24,000 bales, although many gins remained inactive throughout the week.

Lubbock's seven gins turned out only 388 bales, with Slaton's six plants reporting 146, from Saturday to Saturday. The week before there were 5,362 bales turned out in the county.

Considerable loss is reported over this and other South Plains counties from cotton being beaten into the ground by the heavy rains. Just how much loss could not, of course, be estimated.

Hamilton Tells Of Fight With Walton

Members Of Hamilton Family Pose During Trial

NEA Fort Worth Bureau

Defense Rests After Unshaken Story Of Alleged Slayer

(By Associated Press)

WEATHERFORD, Tex., Nov. 2.—Positive and confident, R. H. Hamilton today told a jury in his murder trial of his "mortal battle" with Tom Walton, jr., 21, his son-in-law, in Hamilton's Amarillo law office last May 4. Only once did he show signs of nervousness. His story was unshaken by nearly three hours of cross examination and the defense rested with his testimony.

Thus far Hamilton's 18-year-old daughter, Theresa, the widow of the man killed in the struggle, has not testified. Neither has she been in the court room. She has been under the court rule, barring possible witnesses from listening to testimony.

Claims Grappling

Hamilton told the jury in Bryanesque tones and at times in the manner of a school master, which he once was, that he grappled with with Walton and pulled the trigger of a pistol that Walton had taken away from him.

"He was doing everything to shoot me and I was doing everything I could to shoot him," Hamilton declared.

Sticks To Story

Efforts of the prosecution to get the one time member of the Texas supreme court commission of appeals to say he fired a shot after Walton slumped to the floor were futile. He repeatedly denied that he knew Theresa and Walton had married February 10 while both were in the University of Texas. He ad-

Concessionaire Is Murdered By Pair

EL PASO, Nov. 2. (AP)—Glen Jones, 44, a concession owner with the Wortham Shows, was murdered here tonight by two men who represented themselves as prohibition officers and forced Jones and his wife to get out of their car on a pretense they were going to search it for liquor.

As Jones stepped from the car the two men drew guns and opened fire, riddling his body with bullets. Mrs. Jones screamed just before she fainted and the two gunmen fled.

Two Motives.

Police are working on two motives — revenge and robbery. Jones wore several thousand dollars worth of diamonds, but no attempt was made to take them.

Jones and his wife were driving to the carnival lot when the murder occurred. The two drove up in another car and told Jones to drive to the curb, saying they were police officers.

Cause Of Martial Law In Borger Is Believed Cleared

Former Deputy Constable Sam Jones, Jim Hodges Face Charges In Fatal Shooting Of John Holmes

Culminates Probe

Both Men Are Jailed After Return Of One Prisoner From New Mexico By Deputy Red Burton

(By Associated Press)

BORGER, Nov. 2.—Former Deputy Constable Sam Jones and Jim Hodges late today were charged with the murder of District Attorney John Holmes last September 18. Holmes' murder was the immediate cause of martial law in Borger.

Both men were lodged in jail, following filing of the charges by Deputy Sheriff Red Burton.

Burton brought Jones back yesterday from New Mexico, on an indictment for a liquor law violation. Hodges, manager of a boiler works here, was arrested at his home.

Prosecuted Once

Hodges was once prosecuted by Attorney Holmes, and freed in a pipe theft case.

The murder charge was filed in County Judge Hood's court.

Officials expressed confidence that they had made a decisive move toward solving the mystery, but refused to give their reasons for thinking so.

County Attorney Henry Meyers said that the "ramifications" of the case were widespread and would involve an enormous amount of work. "At the present time," he said, "the less we say about the case, the better."

Hodges was subjected to questioning here tonight but Deputy Sheriff Burton indicated that the prisoner stoutly maintained his innocence.

An all night session of official conferences was anticipated and a feeling of tenseness pervaded city

Gentlemanly But Daring Bandit Invades Room In Hotel To Escape With Loot Of Cash And Jewelry

(By Associated Press)

HOUSTON, Nov. 2.—A gentlemanly but daring young bandit invaded a guest room in the Rice Hotel Saturday night and escaped from a cordon of officers after robbing Abe Zindler, Houston merchant and Erving Friedman, New York salesman, of $225 in cash and jewelry valued at more than $1,000.

Zindler lost a diamond ring valued at more than $1,000, an expensive wrist watch and a small amount of cash to the suave young bandit who leveled a pistol and searched his victims.

Ring Spared

Although Friedman was relieved of $250 in cash, the gunman spared the salesman his expensive diamond ring after he stated it was the gift of his mother.

After the robbery, the bandit forced his victims into the bathroom bound their hands and feet with strands of wire and then backed from the room.

Alarm Sounded

Succeeding in opening the door, the two men wriggled to a telephone and sounded an alarm after knocking the instrument from its stand.

The bandit entered the room following the visit of a bell boy. He asked for writing paper and as the two men turned to accommodate him, whipped a pistol from his pocket.

Although every available officer was given a description of the man, no clues to his identity had been uncovered late Saturday.

NOMINATION CONFIRMED

Claims Against County Must Get O.K. From Auditor; System Is Explained

MANY firms and individuals who have claims against the county of Lubbock, covering articles of merchandise, sold, do not understand the procedure necessary to receive an early and business-like payment, according to County Auditor J. Y. Boyd.

"Prior to the time when Lubbock county employed a county auditor", Mr. Boyd explains, "the county judge acted in the capacity of county purchasing agent and bills or claims, were handled through him. This, of course, because of the magnitude of business obtaining with the county, was an imposition upon the judge, requiring time that was sorely needed in attending to weightier details

Procedure Changed

"Since the county has employed an auditor, the change in procedure has not yet been learned by many firms with which we do business. Take, for instance, the matter of itemizing statements that are presented for the auditor's okeh before payment can be made.

"Should the men in charge of the county's road camp desire to purchase a file, or similiar small, much needed article that is cheap in price, before I can place my okeh on such a purchase, I must be told, through a statement, what size file it is, who ordered it, how much it cost, and for what purpose it was bought.

Can't O. K. 'Em

"If the person ordering this, or any and all purchases, has not filled out a requisition blank for same, it is impossible for me to okeh that particular account until this detail has been straightened out."

The purchasing agent does not pay the county's bills, however. Each of these, following his okeh, are presented to the county commissioners. That body orders payment made.

An indication of the enormity of Lubbock county's volume of business transactions is to be gained from a glance at a condensed statement submitted by the auditor at the close of business on Oct. 26. The statement shows amounts on hand in various funds, and is quoted below:

Funds Are Shown

General, $6,941.52. Jury $10,455.80. Courthouse and jail $27,289.36. Road and bridge, proper, $1,403.76. Precinct No. 1 $16,931.95. Precinct No. 2 $10,532.10. Precinct No. 3 $3,954.88. Precinct No. 4 $8,661.56. Road and Bridge fund No. 5 $968.13. Idalou Park $185. Lubbock Park $2,206.57. Shallowater Park $834.20. Slaton Park $365.38. Poor Farm $1,098.40. Road district No. 1 sinking $13.92. Old courthouse and jail, sinking $7,761.98. New jail, sinking, $3,020.26. Permanent improvement, sinking, $299.12. Park, sinking $258.61. Road and bridge, sinking, $2,134.14. Total balance, $108,028.77.

The balance on the date, as given above, compared to a balance on the date of Sept. 21, shows a difference of $20,464.06, which is the volume of business handled by the commissioners' court during the period.

View in the eyes of the county auditor, this volume of business represents merely a thousand or more different bills, every item on every one of them requiring itemization and requisitions showing who ordered them, for what, and other multitudinous details.

Local Professor Says England Is Friendly To U. S.

Oscar Kichens, Member Of Tech Faculty, Comes Back To America After Summer Of Study In Britain

As a whole, England has a friendly feeling toward the United States, due in a measure to kinship ties and commercial interests, says Prof. Oscar A. Kichens, of Texas Tech, who studied last summer in the British Museum and the Public Record Office at London.

"The only unkind epithets I heard applied to this nation while in England came from the riff-raff class in London," said Professor Kichens.

Loyalty Is Paramount

"Great Britain," he continued, "has instilled a remarkable loyalty among its possessions. London seems to be continually sheltering a homecoming populace. Subjects of the Commonwealth visit England throughout the year.

"At one time I dined with men representing four of the dominions. There they exchanged ideas, having in common loyalty to one flag."

Born in Envill, Tenn., and still a young bachelor, Professor Kichens grew up without opportunities for an education. He adopted a self-planned schedule of studies at home, and in his teens taught night schools for Tennessee mountaineers. He completed his high school work through a correspondence course and later went to Oklahoma university, where he received his A. B. and M. A. degrees.

Taught in Oklahoma

He later was principal of high schools at Erick and Perry, Okla., but near the close of the World war he went to Leland Stanford university where he studied for overseas war work. After the war he taught in Aberdeen Normal at Aberdeen, N. D. From there he went to Butler college, Indianapolis, Ind., where he taught five years.

During the 1928-29 session he did graduate work at Iowa State, and studied in England last summer.

Lubbock Rates 98 Per Cent For Raw Milk Supply Here

Sanitary Survey Of Fifty-Nine Texas Cities Gives Lubbock Rating Bested By Only One Town

Together with four other cities of Texas, Lubbock has been given a rating of 98 per cent on its raw milk supplies out of a possible score of 100, according to an announcement received Saturday from Austin. The only perfect rating scored was Fredericksburg. Lubbock, Pampa, Pharr, Sweetwater and Texarkana were only two points behind.

A sanitary survey of fifty-nine cities in Texas now operating under the standard milk ordinance has just been completed by Milton M. Miller, milk specialist of the U. S. Public Health service, who has been in Texas for the past five months working in cooperation with state department of health.

Get General Rating

The cities were given a general rating for their retail raw milk supplies, the raw milk delivered to pasteurization plants, the pasteurization plants themselves, and the percentage of milk pasteurized was completed.

Thirty-six of the cities scored 90 or above. The standard milk program has been promoted in this state over a period of only four years, and previous to 1924 there were very few grade A dairies in the state.

Cities receiving the highest ratings on their pasteurization plants include Lubbock, Graham, Texarkana, Pampa and Mineral Wells.

The best grade of milk going to plants to be pasteurized was found at San Antonio, Amarillo, Abilene, Breckenridge, Graham, Lubbock, San Angelo, Sweetwater, Harlingen, San Benito, Fort Worth, Fredericksburg, Austin, Marshall and Texarkana where the scores ranged from 90 per cent upward.

This is the second official rating given Texas cities by the U. S. Public Health service, and all cities are said to show remarkable improvement. Milk consumption is gradually increasing and public confidence in the state's milk supply is becoming a strong incentive for further improvement on the part of dairymen.

IN THE REALM OF SPORT
WITH ALLAN CARNEY
Avalanche Sports Editor

Amarillo was football mad yesterday before the game and after the battle the fans of the Panhandle metropolis were groggy from watching the inspired Westerners of Lubbock outplay, outfight and outeverything but outscore their joy and pride—the Golden Sandstorm.

Four gigantic parades through the downtown section preceeded the game and the largest crowd of the season jammed Butler Field to witness the scrap. Amarillo is proud of its high school football plant, and well it should be. A grandstand capacity of 7,800 was practically filled and the bleachers accommodations of 1,000 additional fans seated the majority of the Amarillo high school student body, including a girl pep squad of 380 members.

The Amarillo pep squad and band paraded on field before the game and between halves, and the Lubbock pep producers took their turn between halves. Both were given rousing ovations from the huge crowd. An interesting feature of the Sandy pep squad is the pair of midget twins—pep squad mascots. Ray and Rex Daniels are twins but were born in different years. One first saw the light shortly before midnight of Dec. 31, 1925, and the other the first hour of 1926.

Lubbock's delegation of 1,200 rooters occupied a reserved section in the center of the grandstand, immediately behind the Westerner bench. The local high school band played continually throughout the game.

Strange as it may seem, the concensus of opinion in Amarillo following the clash Saturday was that the Sandies were lucky to come out with the long end of the score. Statistics show that the Westerners outplayed their rivals in every department of the game, with the exception of kicking. Fumbles proved to be the downfall of the Lubbock eleven; this may be attributed to the high tension under which the Westerners were playing. Keyed to almost unbelievable pitch, the locals gave every ounce on every play and at times were a bit overanxious.

Although most of the Sandy admirers gave the Westerners credit for their powerful defensive game many expressed disgust for the offensive performance of the Smith-coached aggregation. These few simply failed to consider that there were eleven fighting Lubbock men in there on every down, and that only super-football could have gained against such opposition.

Raymond (Whacker) Barton, 1928 captain of the Lubbock eleven, was on hand for the battle, occupying the bench with the Westerners. Barton was a leader and fighter that will be hard to replace and his influence on future Westerner football teams will last for many years to come. Kenneth Travis, Bob Walker and Speer, stars on the champion Amarillo eleven of 1928 who are now members of the S. M. U. freshman squad, were also back to cheer on their former teammates.

Moody Smith was a marked man on the Lubbock lineup from the first to the last whistle. This, however, did not prevent the flashy Westerner halfback from breaking through the powerful Amarillo forward wall on numerous occasions and taking a leading part in Lubbock's offense. While the Sandies were watching for Smith, "Dub" Lawson gave the Amarillo gridders plenty to worry about. Playing the greatest game we have had the opportunity to see him turn in, Lawson showed more drive than any back on either club. He not only played a bang-up game at carrying the mail, but was a tower of strength on the defense.

In the first half, the Westerners mulled enough passes to win an ordinary ball game. Many of these came with the receiver in an open field and a touchdown would have been the result.

Before the game was over, the Sandies came to fear Lubbock's brilliant pair of ends as much as the entire Westerner backfield. Rich and Price both made sensational gains around the Amarillo flanks, the majority coming on the old-reliable end-around play. Rich and his 180 pounds of brawn resembled a huge workhorse as he pumbled around the Amarillo ends, led by a pair of interference runners, Amarillo tacklers found him exceptionally hard to bring down. Price matched this performance with his dazzling speed, on two occasions took the ball from punt formation and made long gains. One of these a 20-yard run carried the ball to the 10-yard line, but the play was called back.

Superior Eleven From University Balked By Rival

Longhorn Booters Try Four Field Goals To No Avail As Fighting Pony Wall Staves Off Defeat

BY GAYLE TALBOT JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

DALLAS, Nov. 2. (AP) — Southern Methodist university's big red line made a half-dozen heroic stands when backed deep into its own territory here today and the Mustangs battled Texas university to a scoreless draw in their important Southwest conference duel.

Twenty thousand fans saw the Ponies, roundly outplayed during the last half, rise to the heights, when their goal line was threatened and beat back repeated thrusts of the powerful Longhorn machine.

Four times the Steers, balked at the line, attempted goals from placement. All were wild. Once the ball went over to the sorely pressed Mustangs on their own three-yard line; again on the four-yard marker. It was another of those pliant Methodist forward walls, that gives in midfield but becomes a band of steel near its goal line.

But for a freak of chance the Mustangs would have won, despite the overwhelming superiority of their Orange clad adversaries. In the second period Weldon Mason, Pony half, flipped a pass and carried cleanly to Vic Sauffley, big end, who was standing on the Texas goal line. It would have been an easy catch for the average schoolboy, but Snuffley felt the ball thud against his manly chest and bounce harmlessly to the sod.

That was the Mustangs' only scoring threat of the day. From there on they were too busy holding Shelley, Rees, Beular et al, to make many offensive gesturs.

The vaunted Methodists passing attack was stifled in the second half, when the Longhorns piled up 12 first downs to one for the home boys. Except for a brief time in the second quarter, when a series of passes from Mason to Kattmah and Davidson made three first downs and carried to the Texas 20-yard line, the Ponies displayed no punch.

By beating back the undefeated Longhorns today S. M. U. preserved its record of not having been beaten by Texas since 1919. Texas had the better team today, but it could not win.

Honors in the well advertised individual duel between the two "super" stars, Shelley of Texas and Mason of S. M. U., went to the 190-pound Austin lad as the result of a rousing comeback in the second half. Mason was brilliant for the first two quarters, passing true to his waiting receivers and making several sparkling runs, but he was bottled up for the last 30 minutes of play. Shelley, whose longest gain during the first two periods was six yards, was a terror the last half, ripping the Mustang line for repeated gains. He couldn't seem to untrack himself when inside the Methodists' 20-yard line, however.

Nona Rees, the Longhorns' blond field general, almost stole the show from his better press-agented team mate, Shelley. On the opening kickoff the San Antonio boy broke through a maze of tacklers near his own goal line and skipped 80 yards before Mason brought him down on the Mustang 19-yard line. His sensational gallop gained nothing, however, as three line plays failed to gain a yard and Shelley's attempted placement from the 30-yard stripe was awry.

After this narrow escape the Mustangs appeared to take new life and drove from their own 20-yard mark past midfield before a fumble cost them the ball. They continued to hold an edge in the second quarter, using their deceptive passes to reach the Longhorns' 29-yard mark, there again to lose out on Sauffley's costly muff. At the half S. M. U. had piled up eight first downs to one for Texas, all but two on passes.

The Longhorns were a different team when the second half opened. Taking to the air, with Rees and Shelley doing the tossing, the Orange went from its own 35-yard line on four successive first downs to the Mustang 30-yard mark before stopped. On fourth down Shelley flung a pass that Mason barely knocked from Vining's grasp on the goal line.

Undaunted, the Texans launched another drive that travelled 50 yards and came to a halt on the Ponies' three-yard line. Again Mason saved the Methodists when he tackled Vinling after he had taken a toss from Beular.

During the closing period the Mustangs scarcely had possession if the ball. All they could do was

Unknown Star Steals All The Thunder As Yale Defeats Dartmouth, 16 To 12

Hoot Ellis Steals A Pass To Put Old Eli On Top

BY BRIAN BELL
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 2. (AP) Yale defeated 16 to 12, this afternoon, thanks to a Will-o-the-Wisp back, Hoot Ellis, of Des Moines, Ia., who leaped up in the gathering dusk and drizzling rain to steal the thunder which had been alloted in advance to Albie Booth of Yale, and Al Marsters, of Dartmouth.

With Dartmouth leading 12 to 10, late in the final period Ellis, who runs the 100 and 220 in impressive style when he swaps his football uniform for a track suit, intercepted a Green pass on his own 25 yard line and outdistanced the field in a wild dash to the touchdown the Blue needed.

Jinx Still Holds

Dartmouth never has won a game from Yale, one tie being its sole credit in 12 games. Late today a great majority of the crowd of 70,000 had decided that today was the day of days for the lads from the Hanover hills of the White mountains, only to have Ellis upset the dope.

Score by periods:

Yale	3	0	7	6	—12
Dartmouth	0	0	12	0	—12

Yale scoring: touchdowns, Beane (sub for Miller); Ellis. Points after touchdown: Booth. Goal from field: Booth.

Dartmouth scoring: Touchdown—McCall, Marsters.

Loboes And Mine Eleven Tie, 0-0

ALPINE, Nov. 2. (AP)—On a field made slow by two weeks of intermittent rain and snow the Sul Ross Loboes and the El Paso Miners fought to a scoreless tie here today. The teams were evenly matched and each failed to cash a chance to score. The superiority of the Miners' line was balanced by the long punts which "Iron Man" McNeil, Sul Ros quarter, got away.

In five games played the locals have won four and tied the other. Coach Lewis formerly played with West Texas State Teachers college, Canyon, and Abilene Christian college.

Walt Masters Plays Great Game For Pennsylvania

FRANKLIN FIELD, PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 2. (AP)—One hundred and sixty-five pounds of human lightning streaked across battle-scarred Franklin Field today, leading a tricky University of Pennsylvania football team to a 7 to 2 victory over the Navy.

Seventy-five thousand fans, the largest crowd ever to jam its way into the gigantic double decked horseshoe stadium, looked on in admiration as Walt Masters, a bit of barelegged football demon, literally lifted an inspired Penn eleven to victory over a hard tackling aggregation from the service school.

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 2. (AP)—Led by three tireless backs, Minnesota's Gold and Maroon jerseyed Gophers crushed the University of Indiana's fighting eleven, 19 to 7, here this afternoon.

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

WICHITA FALLS, Nov. 2.—Wichita Falls High School Coyotes staged a come back here today to defeat Vernon, 14 to 0, in a game marked by vicious charging and tackling. Few members of either eleven left the field without some mark of the battle imprinted upon their anatomies.

Wichita Falls scored early in the first period. After one exchange of punts, the Coyote line surged through and blocked Crawford's boot, Beaty recovering on the 10-yard line. Four line plays carried it over.

In the fourth period R. Carstarphen recovered a Vernon fumble on the Lions' 23-yard line. Despite the loss of 13 yards on one play, the Pack put over the second touchdown. Dixon converted both extra points.

Coyotes Choose To Kick.

Wichita Falls elected to play a kicking game throughout and generally Holden booted the ball on first or second down. This method kept the ball in Vernon territory practically all of the time, and the Lions, finding their passing game futile, never threatened to score at any stage of the game. Saints Remember Points Stressed By Jack Meagher

And Former Pupils Defeat Coach's Rice Team Easily In Game At Houston; Both Clubs Are Lethargic

(By Associated Press)

HOUSTON, Nov. 2.—The boys Jack Meagher helped teach to play good football at St. Edwards university remembered their lesson well and administered a sound 20 to 7 thrashing to Meacher's new team —Rice Institute—here today.

Except when Lee, an end, took a long pass from R. Jones over the goal line in the outstanding feature of a wild fourth period, the Owls didn't show much threat.

Teams Are Lethargic

The day was cold but cloudy and dark and the teams, both of which had "dedicated" the game to Meagher, seemed somewhat lethargic.

Early in the first quarter Ransom and Bomba, a couple of stocky backs, started plunging down the field. Jansing, a big fullback who punted like an expert and ran with a stride like that "Big Ox" Eckhardt used to employ at Texas university, helped them along now and then with a hard smash. Toward the end of that victory chase it was nearly all Ransom. He kept darting through, ending with a one yard leap for touchdown. Then he drew back and crashed over again for the extra point.

Bomba Gets Hot

After that Bomba stayed persistently in the scoring picture, collecting the other two for the Saints. Ransom got the ball down deep in Rice territory with a long run, but he was hurt in the tackle and they took him out. Bomba plunged to the eight inch line and required three downs to crawl over a stubborn and gallant Owl line. He failed in the running try for another point.

His next marker should be credited largely to Vogt, a determined tackle who caught a Rice punt amidships and fell on it in the shadow of the Owl line. Figarri kicked goal.

Quarterback Russell added the point with a drop kick, to Rice's lone touchdown.

Score by periods:

St. Edwards	7	0	0	13	—20
Rice	0	0	0	7	— 7

St. Edwards scoring: Touchdowns, Ransom, Bomba (2); point after touchdown—Bomba, Figarri.

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

CANYON, Nov. 2. — The West Texas State Teachers college defeated the Daniel Baker Hill Billies in a spectacular game of football here today, 7 to 0. The game was played as the annual home-coming for the West Texas alumni and ex-students. Both teams threatened repeatedly to score but when the goal line was approached the team on defense would tighten up and hold.

Taylor, halfback of Daniel Baker, was the best ball carrier for the visitors, while Miller, at guard, was outstanding for the Buffaloes. Gerald was again the outstanding man, carrying the ball approximately three out of four times and never was thrown for a loss. On most plays he netted substantial gains. His passing to Randy resulted in the touchdown that gave the Buffaloes the game.

Jones played a steady game at quarter and kicked the extra point after touchdown. The blocking of Newman and Powell was outstanding. Logan played the best for the Buffs in the line, while the work of both lines was fine.

The Low-Down On The High-Ups

A writer recently asked Knute Rockne about his golf game and Knute replied that he "looked like the devil in knickers." . . . Nebraska and Pitt had a lot of conversation during their game last year and this year. . . . "Send us a rose from Pasadena," scoffed the Husker lads, "what a lucky bunch of false alarms you birds are." . . . Last year it seems the Pitt players taunted the Nebraskans considerably . . . Ty Cobb is a millionaire or near it. . . . Chiselers, as they call the boys who try to buy up shares in prizefighters at bargain rates, anxiously awaited the arrival of Primo Carnera from Europe. . . . Fighters tabooed by the New York boxing commission are denied the privileges of London boxing clubs.

The Teachers held the Aggies scoreless in the first quarter, but the Farmers drove across 7 points in the second, 20 in the third and 27 in the fourth. Second string men started for the Aggies.

Ohio State Bows To Pittsburgh In Muddy Grid Bout

More Than 55,000 See Hard Fought Tilt As Rain And Cold Sweeps Down; Uansa Is Pitt's Star

BY ALAN GOULD
Associated Press Sports Editor.

PITT STADIUM, PITTSBURGH, Nov. 2. (AP)—Splashing through the mud, the rain and Ohio State's defence with all the reckless abandon of an acrobat on a holiday, tumbling Toby Vansa led Pittsburgh to a smashing victory today over the Buckeyes. The final count was 13 to 2, with all of the best known methods of scoring utilized in a battle that was fought throughout in a steady downpour.

Despite the bad weather, more than 55,000 fans turned out to see Uansa perform sensationally and watch Pittsburgh plough toward its goal of a national championship. It was the sixth successive triumph for the powerful Panther machine, coached by Dr Jock Sutherland, as well as Ohio State's first setback of the season.

Uansa Who Stars.

In a muddy struggle between two rugged, alert and courageous defensive outfits, Varsa stood out brilliantly, defying the elements as well as the Buckeye defense with his tumbling, twisting dashes on a field that was fairly dry at the outset but about ankle deep in mud at the finish.

Westerners Are Heroic In Defeat As Sandstorm Of Amarillo Merges With 13-7 Victory In Great Game

met by a super-charging machine that gave its best on every down. Lubbock's margin of 15 first downs to 13 for the Sandies tells a story in itself.

Lubbock lost its crucial combat today but a battered Amarillo squad and the large part of the crowd of 9,000 fans that witnessed the struggle, left Butler Field with their horse shoes, rabit tails or what have you, held in a fond embrace. Time after time the fighting, crying horde of Golden-Jersied Warriors from Lubbock appeared headed for touchdowns, and on all occasions but one bad breaks halted their drive. Penalties fumbles and various technicalitics of the game came in rapid succession—enough to dishearten the bravest of fighters, but not so with the Westerners. The plucky charges of Fruka and Morgan never once let up scrapping, completely demoralizing the Amarillo assault at times.

Bufkin Scores First

Amarillo drew first blood in the first quarter on a single play by Carl Bufkin, high-stepping Sandy halfback. Smith's poor kick had given the ball to Amarillo on its own 43 yard line. Gibson was stopped at the line on the first Sandy thrust but on the next Bufkin followed perfect interference through the left side of Lubbock's line, charged into the open and raced 52 yards for a touchdown without being touched. Gibson kicked goal to give the Sandies a 7 to 0 lead.

The Westerners came back fighting all the harder after the Sandies had scored and tied the count before the first period had ended. With 11 Amarilloans gunning for Moony Smith, W. D. Lawson was given an opportunity to strut, and how he did it! Displaying the speed of an express and the drive of a dynamo, Lawson shot through the 2; field goal, Rooney; placements, Amarillo forward wall for gain after gain.

Pass Intercepted

An intercepted pass followed by a heave from Smith to Price gave the Westerners their lone counter. Gibson attempted a pass on the second down which landed in the arms of Malcolm Martin on Amarillo's 29 yard line. On the second play, Smith stood behind a screen of blockers and tossed a beautiful pass to Price who ran the remaining distance across the Sandies' goal line. Smith kicked goal and the score was tied.

Getting their first opportunity to use their touted running attack, the Sandies opened up briefly in the second period but never penetrated further than Lubbock's 30 yard line. Bufkin and Gibson carried the burden of the Amarillo assault.

Westerners Threaten

The Westerners threatened seriously at the beginning of the third period but Lawson's fumble lost all that had been gained. Taking a bad Amarillo kick on the Sandies' 27 yard line, Lubbock advanced to the 17 yard marker where the costly fumble occurred. Again in the fourth period it looked like a Lubbock touchdown, but Price fumbled after he had received a 32 yard pass and the ball went to Amarillo on its own 20 yard line.

Previously Yancey Price had raced around end to Amarillo's 10 yard line but the play, which netted 30 yards, was brought back and Lubbock was penalized for off side play.

To name the stars for Lubbock would men the listing over every golden-jersied lad who went on the field, but there are several who played super-football in all de-

"Love's Tomb" Is Found In Records Of Clerk's Office When Cupid Is Beaten

LOVE'S TOMB may be found in a certain ledger in the county clerk's office and "Void" is the epitaph which is written. The divorce courts and hospitals aren't the only places you will find evidences of domestic tragedy. Sadder stories may be found right in the marriage license book.

Some of the tragedies which are rather prevalent in the days before the passing of the three-day marriage law have been eliminated because if two young people swear falsely that they are of age it is usually discovered within the three days since a list of intentions is printed in several pamphlets and the daily papers. Run-away youngsters, however, go across the border to neighboring states where this law is not in effect.

Old Couple Weds.

Last spring the clerk was called to the counter one morning by a man in his late sixties accompanied by a trembling old lady slightly younger. They had loved each other in their early youth and had planned to marry but parental opposition to the match had been strong. Now, after an intervention of almost half a century during which time both had married and reared a family and the one had lost his wife through death and the other her husband, they were going to marry and spend the declining years of life together.

"I feel sorry for many couples who come to sign intention to marry, said Mrs. Walter T. Clark, deputy county clerk, because they are so extremely nervous as a rule. It is amusing and at the same time it is rather pitiful. Usually the party who accompanied the man does most of the talking, according to Mrs. Clark, and after clearing his throat announces "This fellow wants to get fixed up."

One man and woman had married and with complications arising had secured a divorce only to decide later that they would try matrimony together once more. After signing intentions the prospective husband returned alone to report, despondently, that "she had changed her mind."

Intention papers are void after 30 days and no record is kept of those who do not come back for a license. Seventy-two hours must have elapsed before a marriage license may be issued and as a general rule the groom waits for several hours in the county clerk's office until the designated time arrives.

Licenses Mixed.

Mexicans come in droves as a rule to accompany the contracting party and it is almost an impossibility to determine just which one is the one to marry. The story is told of a certain Lubbock Mexican who bought a license here and went to New Mexico to marry. When he learned that it was necessary to buy a New Mexico license he returned the first one and demanded the two dollars refunded.

One young woman changed her mind after all arrangements had been made and the jilted suitor came back to "straighten things up with the state."

Not so very long ago the telephone in the clerk's office rang and a mother at the other end of the wire refused permission for her daughter to wed and said the couple were on their way to the bureau. In a few minutes up they rushed breathless from the quick dash upstairs only to be told of the refusal. Two young people turned away quite crest-fallen for a moment with the single ejaculation of a faint "well" but in a few minutes the boy exclaimed "Come on let's go back; maybe we can make her change her mind again."

Weddings, Divorces Increase In Texas

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2 (AP)—Both marriage and divorce are on the increase in Texas, the department of commerce announces in making public figures based on the years 1927 and 1928.

In 1928 there were 76,340 marriages performed in the state, compared with 74,042 in 1927, representing an increase of 3.1 per cent. Divorces in 1928 increased 4.5 per cent over the previous year, the number granted having been 18,073 and 17,200, respectively.

Marriages annulled in 1928 totalled 155 against 115 in 1927, the department said. The figures, obtained from county clerks and clerks of county courts, are preliminary and subject to correction.

"The estimated population of Texas on July 1, 1928, was 5,487,000 and on July 1, 1927, 5,397,000," the report said. "On the basis of these estimates the number of marriages per 1,000 of population was 13.9 in 1928 against 13.7 in 1927 and the number of divorces 3.29 in 1928 and 3.20 in 1927."

Republicans Say Promises To The Farmer Are Kept

Charge Of Newspaper Head Denied By Smoot; Row On Senate Floor Aftermath Of Letter To Reed

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2 (AP)—For the second time in as many days an administration leader in the senate today denied contentions made in a letter received from F. E. Murphy, publisher of the Minneapolis Tribune, that the republican party was failing to carry out its promises to help agriculture.

Senator Smoot, of Utah, replied that congress already had passed a Farm Relief bill and would enact a tariff law that would be approved by the west and northwest.

Retort Is Given

A similar letter sent by Murphy to Senator Reed, of Pennsylvania, drew a retort from him yesterday that the actions of certain senators on the tariff question was more damaging to the economic security of the country than "all the communists combined."

Asked in the senate today by Senator Wheeler, democrat, Montana, to name the senators he had in mind, Reed said he would "leave that to the good conscience of the senators and the observation of the country."

No Reflection Meant

In his reply to the Minneapolis publisher, Reed had said he meant no reflection on Senators Schall and Shipstead, of Minnesota.

Wheeler asked if Senators Borah or Thomas, republicans, of Idaho were included in the Pennsylvanian's "communist" category. Reed denied he had described anyone as a communist, and said he would make the same reply if all senators were mentioned.

"If the senator is trying to provoke me into insulting any of my colleagues, he's not going to succeed," he shot at Wheeler.

"I think the senator already has done that," the Montanan retored.

Murphy wrote Smoot that republican newspapers and workers in the agricultural west were being put in an embarrassing position by the attitude toward the farmer of the "so-called regulars" in the senate.

Buck Passing On Stock Break Has Inning In Senate

Democrats And GOP's Enjoy Day Of Shifting All The Blame; Leaders Of Both Parties Draw Fire

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Republicans and democrats passed around the blame for the stock market situation in the senate but agreed that it should and could be adjusted on a stable basis by leaders of the financial world.

Senator Robinson, republican, Indiana, contended Chairman Raskob of the democratic national committee, induced thousands to enter the stock market by publicly advocating stock purchase.

Robinson Is Rapped

Senator Harrison, democrat, Mississippi, accused Robinson of "playing politics" with the nation's temporary "delicate economic situation" and gave notice that "I don't propose to do anything by vote or expression that will retard in the restoration of economic stability." He said Raskob urged investments only in sound securities and had not proposed speculation.

The Indiana senator began the discussion in response to the public statement of Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the democratic leader, charging that the repeated prosperity statements of President Hoover, Calvin Coolidge and Secretary Mellon had contributed to excessive speculation.

Leaders Not Blamed

The Indianan argued that administration leaders were "no more responsible" for the stock market situation "than the man in the moon." Describing Raskob as a stock "plunger," Robinson read statements of the democratic chairman urging stock investments.

"Constrast that," Robison of Indiana said, "with the known attitude of the president of the United States. Throughout his life and especially during the eight years he served as secretary of commerce, legitimate commerce and industry reached unheard of heights of success and prosperity."

Interview Quoted.

Senator Harrison read from an interview given recently by Mr. Raskob expressing concern for the stock market and asked if President Hoover or Secretary Mellon had ever given out any such statement of warning.

Senator Barkley, democrat, Kentucky, recalled the recent "prosperity" statement by Mr. Hoover in the midst of the sock market collapse. He added that after the "so-called Coolidge bull market," began there was "scarcely a week or a month" that Secretary Mellon did not issue a statement asserting there was no reason for a market decline when one had occurred.

All Broadcast Angles To Be Linked In Novel Program

Westinghouse Will Stage Novel Radio Hour Wednesday

All Units Of Entertainment To Be Given In Program Over N. B. C. November 6; To Be Continuous

By NEA Service.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—The men who fashion radio productions are about to see a dream come true.

This dream concerned a production utilizing every important unit in broadcas: entertainment; a presentation with a symphony orchestra, a symphonic choir, noted soloists, a cast of experienced actors and actresses and with the whole linked together by a continuity written by a recognized craftsman in such things.

The production is to have its premiere in the New York studios of the National Broadcasting company at 7:30 o'clock eastern time, November 6. Sponsored by the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company, it will be titled "The Westinghouse Salute."

Forty Sing as Instruments.

The musical background of the production will be developed by a group of 90 musicians, under the direction of Cesare Sodero, maestro of the National Grand Opera company. Fifty of his musicians are instrumentalists; the remaining 40 are vocalists, but they will sing as instruments and without words in the symphonic group.

Into this musical setting will be woven two dramtic incidents in each weekly presentation. And each program will be a salute to some industry, beginning with steel and including aviation, lumbering, oil production and all other important industries, the dramatic moments will be concerned with the human episodes in the featured industry.

Continuity by Bierstadt.

The entire continuity, including the dramatic episodes, will be written by Edward Hale Bierstadt, whose Empire Builder sketches have won him recognition throughout the broadcasting world.

Another unusual development in the production will be that the customary announcements will be eliminated. Instead, a voice, using words and phrases in harmony with the entire presentation, will link together the whole production. The voice will be that of Pedro de Cordoba, maestro of the National Grand Opera company.

The Westinghouse Salute will have its own production staff, which will include arrangers, copyists, a choir master, a director and an assistant for the dramatic cast and a general supervisor of the entire production. The entire staff has been recruited from the NBC studio personnel in New York.

More than 125 persons each week will be in the studio when the program is on the air.

Still more unusual, according to present-day radio practices, is that the full name of the organization sponsoring the production will not be mentioned on the air. The program title, "The Westinghouse Salute," and the phrase "The Westinghouse production," are used twice each during the presentation — at the opening and at the close.

Salute to Steel Industry.

The first program will be a salute to the steel industry. An original music score, a composition of Bodero, with interpolation from the works of Mendelssohn, Elgar and Wagner and others, will be played by the symphony organization.

In one of the dramatic episodes listeners will be taken back to the court of Henry IX of France and a tourney will be depicted in sound. The second episode will deal with an earthquake and the sounds of the upheaval will be broadcast.

Construction work on the new series started more than four months ago. In the size of its regular cast, in its cost and in the time devoted to preparation for broadcasting, the new production is believed to exceed any other known program.

TO COME TO TEXAS

Frederick Hoffman To Talk In Texas In December

AUSTIN, Nov. 2 (AP)—Frederick L. Hoffman, L. L. D., consulting statician of one of the largest insurance companies in America, will attend the Seventh Texas Sanitarians' Short School at Edinburg, Dec. 3-5, Dr. J. C. Anderson, state health officer, announced.

He will speak to sanitarians on "Health Aspects of Aviation." He also will address a special group of physicians on public health aspects of cancer based on his findings in a San Francisco survey.

Other out-of-state speakers on the program are Dr. Louis I. Harris, former health commissioner of New York City; George M. Putnam and Arthur E. Gorman, formerly with the city health department of Chicago; Dr. A. G. Heath, city health officer of Shreveport, La.; Ernest Kelly, of the market milk division, United States department of agriculture, and George N. Thompson, secretary of the building code committe of the United States department of commerce.

WILL AID POOR

Mexico Turns Eyes Toward Health Of Children

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 2 (AP)—Health department inspectors will visit the homes of the poor and teach the housewives how to care for their children and keep their houses clean.

This means has been adopted to cut down the infant mortality rate, which is high here and is believed to due principally to lack of sanitation.

Increase Shown In Broadcast Drama Calls For More On Air, Chiefs Order

By NEA Service.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—Time devoted to broadcast drama by the National Broadcasting company has been doubled since last January, according to a recent survey, and there will be a steady increase in the hours of dramatic entertainment during the coming season, say NBC program executives.

Last January the NBC presented periods of dramatic entertainment totaling less than five hours a week. In July of this year time devoted to this type of broadcast had increased to six hours and now the average is more than 10 hours a week.

The reason for this increased interest in radio drama is found in letters received from listeners during the past six months. Radio plays are believed to be more popular than ever before in the history of broadcasting and as the technique of presenting a dramatic production with only dialogue and sound effects is developed, a corresponding increase in interest is expected.

Eighteen Sketches Weekly.

At present the NBC broadcast 18 regular periods of drama each week through its several networks. Besides these regular radio plays or sketches, short dramatic sketches occasionally are introduced in the big radio revues.

The 30-minute period is by far the most popular time for a dramatic presentation, according to the survey. There are 16 radio drama periods of a half hour each, one that runs an hour and one 15-minute playet.

The hour period, however, is a notable departure in broadcast procedure. It is taken up by the Radio Guild, a stock company of well-known Broadway players who are presenting a series of the world's best known plays. The guild is directed by Vernon Radcliffs, a veteran of the theater, who has had long experience in radio production.

Bible Incidens Revived.

The radio stage turns its spotlight on many phases of life, Bible dramas, one of the most popular dramatic presentations ever to go on the air according to NBC episodes of the Bible. Historic Trials, a new series written by Edward Hale Bierstadt, presents a dramatic courtroom scene each week.

"The Little Drama Movement" is a burlesque on amateur theatrical groups and "Hello, Mars," Raymond Knight's new production, burlesque phases of modern life.

"Whispering Tables" has an underworld atmosphere and is full of Bowery dialect, while the "Two Troupers," Marcella Shields and Helene Handin, take listeners back stage in a comedy sketch.

"Rapid Transit" is based on episodes in metropolitan life and "The Cub Reporter" tells of the adventures of a youthful newsgatherer in New York. "Forty Fathom Trawlers" describes the adventures of deep-sea fishermen and "Harbor Lights," another radio drama with a salty atmosphere, introduces more thrilling tales of the sea.

BEFORE The MIKE

Struggling composers looking for a "break" in New York may find their opportunity in the kindness of Paul Specht, famouse conductor who broadcasts his orchestra music on the Columbia system from the new Governor Clinton hotel. Paul has collected the most promising compositions that failed of publication and hopes, by broadcasting them, to help their composers to popularity.

Informal Conferences To Bring On Final Action For Tariff Bill Are Flat Failures; Solons Wrangle On

Efforts To Allign Regular Forces With Insurgents Are Futile; Senators At Complete Loggerheads

BY D. HAROLD OLIVER
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2—Informal conferences looking to early final action on the tariff bill by the senate have failed and the suggestion of President Hoover for a meeting of republicans to send the measure to conference with the house in two weeks produced no tangible results.

Some of the newer republican regulars suggested it might hurry matters if an unofficial committee of six, comprising two senators from each of the republican regular and independent groups and the democrats, were selected to agree on a large percentage of uncontested rates, leaving only a few major controversies to be threshed out. It was proposed that this might be done during a week's recess of the senate.

Delay Blame Placed

Little welcome was accorded it as the elder republicans awaited other suggestions to speed up the measure. Both Chairman Smoot, of the finance committee and Senator Jones, of Washington, acting republican leader, served notice that from now on responsibility for delay belonged to the coalition since it was in control.

Senator Simmons, of North Carolina, democratic spokesman on the bill, was inclined to a plan whereby the democrats and republican independents would get together on each schedule of rates and present the results to the administration forces. Whatever the latter declined to accept, under this plan, would be settled in debate and by record votes.

Progress Negligible

Progress with rates was negligible. The day was devoted largely to speeches. In one of these a southern democrat—Ransdell of Louisiana—appealed to his colleagues to forget sectional animosities and partisanship and support the measure.

Ransdell quoted from the democratic platform and the Louisville speech of the party's presidential candidate, Alfred E. Smith, as calling for adequate tariff protection to agriculture and industry alike. He said: "It was a happy day for those of us who had been fighting the battle of protection within the ranks of the party almost single-handedly to know that once more our party has returned to the mooring of its first forty years, after nearly a century of adherence to the policy of free trade and tariff for revenue only."

The Louisianan's speech drew a congratulatory reply from Senator Shortridge, republican, California.

Asked what he thought of the prospects for speeding up the measure, Senator Smoot said:

"They talked four and a half hours of bunk yesterday and they are on the bunk schedule today."

Lubbock Doctors Give Methods Of Combating Colds As Winter Season Draws Near To South Plains

"HAB YA ANY sejeshuns to prevent golds?" querries the cold sufferer.

"Typographical error," interrupts the newspaper editor.

All of which proves that things are not always spelled as pronounced, particularly in the language of "bad colds." That, ladies and gentlemen, is sufficient introduction for Mr. Ker Choo, chairman of the Cough Club of America, who is in this city in the interest of spreading his propaganda among those who are not physically equipped to fight his weakening influence.

Colds Are Combatted.

Meanwhile, many of the medical profession are assembling their educational program in combatting seasonable encroachment upon the property of health.

Recommendations for preventing colds follow:

Dr. J. T. Kreuger—"Bathe daily in warm water, followed by a dash of cold water. Then rub towel thoroughly over body. Keep windows open, especially while sleeping. Try to spend as much time as possible in the open air, but always keep the body dry and warm."

Dr. Sam H. Stewart — "Wear proper clothing. Avoid exposures. Colds are contagious; avoid close contact with the cold sufferer. A cold serum would be a good preventive measure."

Alkali Recommended.

Dr. Sam Dunn—"Keep body in good condition, so as to counteract germs; this means proper eating, proper sleep and proper clothing. Many doctors are recommending alkali, such as soda bicarbonate, as a preventive. Take purgatives for regular eliminations."

Dr. J. W. Rollo, city health officer—"Try to have plenty of fresh air all the time. Keep the feet dry. Avoid crowded places. Take cold serum."

There is no specific treatment for colds, the doctors agree. Most of them recommend various cough syrups.

Governor's Body To Be Reinterred

AUSTIN, Nov. 2 (AP)—The body of former Gov. Hardin R. Runnels will be removed from Bowie county and reinterred in the state cemetery here Sunday. A funeral service will be held at the state capitol with R. L. Bobbitt, attorney general, as the principal speaker.

Runnels was a member of an illustrious family, his uncle, Hiram G. Runnels, the man for whom Runnels county was named, having been a governor of Mississippi before moving to Texas.

Hardin Runnels defeated the immortal Sam Houston for governor in 1857 but Houston turned the tables two years later. Before being elected governor, Runnels served as a member of the legislature from Bowie county, being speaker of the house one term and as lieutenant-governor.

Stokes Declares 20c Cotton Possible By Cooperation

Statewide Cotton Marketing Would Boost The Price

Farm Bureau Cotton Men, In County Meeting, Declare Ginning Cost Is Much Too High

If every farmer in Texas would this year take advantage of the Federal Farm Board's offer of advancing money on their cotton, provided their crop were handled through some recognized cooperative marketing organization, such as the Texas Farm Bureau association, the hprice of cotton would immediately go to 20 cents a pound, so Lynn Stokes, president and general manager of the cotton association told those in attendance at Friday night's meeting of the Lubbock County Farm Bureau, held at Hurlwood.

"As long as we are satisfied with low prices," Stokes said, "the Farm Board can not bring any relief to the farmers. They can only help the farmer to help himself. The United States government is striving, through the Farm Board, to raise the standards of agriculture up to the established standards of commerce and industry, and it is up to the individual farmer to study his own problems first, then to practice cooperation with his fellows."

Farmers Made Board Possible

Stokes stated that the present Farm Board is the result of many years of continued effort, on the part of organized farmer cooperatives and other farm orgnizations, to gain recognition and assistance from the government. He also said that there is more interest evident in cooperative marketing in the state of Texas, at this time than ever before.

"Farmers, business men, chambers of commerce, bankers, all are inquiring of the Texas Farm Bureau Cotton association as to how to go about signing up for membership, in order to have advantage of the advance fund offered through the Farm Board. And there have been more members signed up by us, in th past two months, than there have been during the past two previous years.

More Cotton Being Received

"The association has received 60 per cent more cotton this year, than it had up to the same time last year."

In mentioning the gin program of the Farm Bureau Cotton association, Stokes stated that, when a gin worth $15,000 would clear $15,000 from ginning cotton in one season, it was time that farmers gave serious thought to owning and operating their own gin plants. To do his, they were passing these enormous profits back to themselves.

Following Stokes, R. E. Overstreet, state direcor of the cotton association, declared that more profit to farmers was being had through operation of thei own gins than they could receive through cooperative marketing.

Gin Program Successful

"We have put the street buyers of cotton out of business," Overstreet declared, "by our gin program. "And, we have learned that we can gin a bale of cotton for $3.50, including the bagging and ties. But, the farmers are paying $10 a bale for ginning. There are too many gins and farmers are paying for the cost of operating these extra plants."

It was Overstreet's declaration that nobody is going to relieve the farmers of his present condition, "except the man who wears the farmer's boots."

Urges Schools See Tech

A suggestion was made by Stokes that every school on the South Plains should declare a holiday, one day of the year, and take their students to Lubbock for a thorough visit and inspection of the textile engineering school of Texas Technological college.

"Every step, from the farmer to the spinner, is done in this textile school, and all farmers should study those steps and learn more of the necessary proceedures through which their products must go."

TAKING TO AIR

Arkansas U. Students Will Be Flying Soon

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. Nov. 2 (AP)—If present plans mature, University of Arkansas students will take to the air. And it won't be because they are flying away from their classes, but because flying will be part of their class work.

The school will be located a few miles from the city and is to start in November. Razorback students desiring to take lessons may begin their ground courses as soon as the school is opeped provided they have the consent of their parents and that it does not take too much time from their other activities.

Use Of Low Cutting Corn Tools Give Aid In War Against Borer

Corn stalks, "winter home" of the European borer, are cut off even with the ground by new device for corn binders. A low cutting hand hoe (below) cuts the stalks shorter than the ordinary corn knife. Only the blade is shown.

By FRANK I. WELLER
Farm Editor
Associated Press Feature Service

WASHINGTON (AP)—Because a clean field is the best insurance against the European corn borer, the federal division of agricultural engineering has developed a low cutting attachment for four makes of corn binders and a low cutting hand device or hoe.

Either can be made in the farm shop, at little cost, from materials purchased at a hardware store.

Binder Device Described

The binder device consists essentially of a long stationary knife set a short distance ahead of the regular sickle, to cut the stalks off at the surface of the ground; an elevating chute to lift the stalks so they will not be cut again by the sickle; and an extension butt gatherer chain and extra-throat springs to grasp the stalks as they are cut and carry them through the machine.

The low cutting hoe weighs about 34 ounces and, dropped from a height of about 2 feet, is sufficient to sever the stalks with no extra effort by the operator. It requires very little more labor than the customary corn knife and is no more dangerous to use.

Means of Controlling

Removal of all corn stalks from the field for later shredding, cutting or burning is one of the most effective means of controlling the European corn borer. It is necessary that stalks be cut off at ground level, thereby leaving no stubble. By this means most of the borers can be removed from the field in the stalks.

The standard corn binder will not cut closer to the ground than 5 or 6 inches and hand cutting with the ordinary corn knife leaves stubbles considerably longer, which may contain even more borers.

Hog Raising On Plains Is O. K.

TAHOKA, Nov. 2.—Profit from a 4-H club pig project has opened the eyes of O. J. Sproles, Lynn county club boy, to the possibilities of successful hog raising on the South Plains.

O. J. bought a 27 pound eight weeks and three-days-old Duroc jersey barrow pig for $7.50. One hundred and ten days later he had managed to add 221 pounds weight to the pig, two pounds a day, at a cost of 4.4 cents per pound. The total feed cost was $9.80. He won a $6.00 prize on the hog at the Lynn County Fair and sold him for 10 cents per pound, bringing in a sum of $30.80, a net profit of $13.50 one the one pig.

TO REVISE CODE

Houston's Buildings Being Undermined By Insects

HOUSTON, Nov. 2 (AP)—The city's building code will be revised by Engineer H. L. Shaw for protection against "millions of termites" which he said are chewing away at homes and furniture.

The termite, the city engineer explained, is a curious tropical insect, well equipped for modern warfare. Each is armed with a buzz saw jaw and can fly or walk but prefers the subterranean channels (or trenches) through the foundations of houses and furniture to open warfare."

"They are organized into armies, well trained and well equipped. They have a king at their head, divisions, brigades, regiments, companies, squadrons, generals, colonels, captains and top sergeants."

The common ant, Mr. Shaw added, is a deadly enemy to the termite and Houston needs more of these enemies.

FARM WEEK IN WASHINGTON

BY FRANK I. WELLER
Farm Editor
(Associated Press Feature Service)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2. (AP)—Enlargement of the federal crop reporting and agricultural outlook service in foreign fields, requested by the farm board, is expected to be a considerable factor in the stabilization of domestic markets.

Producers of cotton and wheat, particularly, know that some of this country's most important crops are very strongly influenced by the foreign situation and that prices rise and fall in definite relation to supply and demand abroad.

By increasing the foreign service the board hopes to eliminate unwarranted price fluctuations which sometimes result from inaccurate or misunderstood reports.

There now are crop reporting staffs in London, Berlin and Shanghai. It is proposed to augment those with staffs at Paris, Marseilles, Copenhagen, Bucharest, Buenos Aires, Melbourne and Johannesburg.

Receiving full and reliable reports from these stations is considered no more important than receipt of timely information. In effect, the board would turn the foreign service from a history recording machine into a history making organization.

It stresses the significance of receiving figures on production, carryover and demand in time to guide market activities of domestic producers. With an intimate knowledge of both domestic and world conditions actual or impending, the farmer may decide whether his greater profit lies in selling at a specific time, holding all or part of his crop, and whether to increase or decrease his next acreage.

The domestic crop reporting service is a model of what the board wishes the foreign service to become. The department of agriculture expends more than $2,000,000 annually in collecting within the boundaries of the United States statistical information in regard to production, prices and the market situation, prices and the market situation of agricultural products.

Success Of Long Staple Cotton On South Plains Proved 10 Years Ago

Lynn County Man Says That Early Maturity Claim Of Short Staple Varieties Is Unfounded

TAHOKA, Nov. 1.—The success of long staple cotton on the plains was proven by him ten years ago, according to J. S. Wells, for 25 years one of the most prominent farmers and business men in Tahoka. Among other Plains towns, Tahoka is waging a campaign to secure the planting of more long staple cotton, but the principal argument for the short staple seems to be that it matures earlier and produces more, in spite of the fact that it does not bring as good a price.

"I produced cotton in Lynn county for 14 consecutive years, 1906 to 1919, inclusive," Mr. Wells says. "During this period there was never a stalk of short staple on my farm and only six bales of snaps were gathered during the entire time, and these were gathered in the fall of 1919. Only during the years 1909, 1917 and 1918 did I harvest less than a half a bale per acre and during the years 1906, 1907, 1913 and 1914 I made a bale per ace on my long staple cotton and it opened in time for me to get it picked."

The chamber of commerce, County Agent Ray E. Shaver and a committee of farmers are working on the long staple project in Lynn county.

Snyder Farmer Finds That Poultry Furnishes Balance Of Profit When Given Thought; Figures Are Given

Scurry County Man Says He Is No Exception; Anyone Can Make Money If He Is Practical, Is Claim

SNYDER, Nov. 2.—That the average West Texas farmer, plying his trade on an average farm and not being an expert poultryman can profit on his flock is shown in the records just made public by F. I. Townsend, of the Ira community.

One year ago, O. P. Thrane, vice president of the Snyder National bank and an official of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, asked Townsend, a customer of the bank, to keep books on his poultry project so definite information might be secured. Six months ago Townsend made his first report which showed that from Oct. 20, 1928 to April 20, 1929, a flock of 260 White Leghorns hens had produced $452.07 worth of eggs and that $108 had been spent for mash, leaving a net profit for the first six months.

Profit Easily Seen

During the past six months from April 20 to Oct. 20, 1929. Townsend's records show that his hens have produced a total of $329.40 worth of eggs and that $80 had been spent for food, leaving a profit of $249.40 above the cost of the food.

Over the entire twelve month period from Oct. 20, 1928 to Oct. 20, 1929, the hens produced $781.47 in eggs, and $188.70 has been spent for mash, leaving a profit of $592.77 for the year above all feed costs.

Townsend says: "The flock had the run of the farm and has consumed during the year a considerable quantity of grain picked up by them in the stock lot and feed lots for which no charge was made, as it was impossible to estimate the quantity or the value of the grain they consumed." The owner has kept the actual records for the year and there is no guess work about his report and herewith may be found basic thoughts that every farmer in West Texas can well study for his own benefit.

Average price received per dozen on the Snyder market for the year, 27 1-2 cents.

Average number eggs laid per hen, during year, 130 plus.

Feed cost, per dozen eggs, 6 3-4 cents.

Average feed cost per hen for year, 72 1-2 cents.

Raises Chicks, Too

In addition to the profit derived from the sale of the eggs, Townsend has raised this year 573 chickens and of that number 323 were roosters. The family ate 163 of these and sold 109 small fryers for $37.50, selected 35 of the best cockerels for breeding purposes and sold 16 cockerels to a neighbor for $16.

Townsend now has on hand at his farm 250 pullets which makes a grand total of 507 hens and pullets and 35 roosters. Culling next month will slightly reduce this total.

No Labor Charge

The report as made to the bank continues to say that no charge has been made for the labor or work of caring for the flock as it was carried on in connection with the other farm work and no account of the time devoted to the actual care of the chickens.

No claims are made by Townsend for being a poultry man, but just an average farmer and it is his opinion that a few good cows and a flock of chickens properly cared for will add a substantial sum to the income of any farmer. All that Townsend contends that farmer must do is to acquire the necessary information as to the proper care of hens and to apply himself assiduously to the business, neglecting no detail whatever in the care of the flock.

SCOUTS MOVE UP

Lubbock Men Aid In Honor Courts Friday Night

Boy scouts were moved up to higher ranks at courts of honor conducted Friday night at Brownfield and Littlefield.

T. A. White and Thomas Everheat conducted the court at Brownfield, while George Eaton, deputy scout commissioner of the South Plains area, had charge of the Littlefield court.

The University of Missouri calls student automobiles "a contributing factor to idleness' and "in some cases a detriment to morals."

With The Co-Ops

TURKEY MARKETING

Approximately sixty cooperatives in the Mountain States will market between 400 and 500 car loads of turkeys this fall. As these cars will contain from 1 800 to 2,400 birds each, not less than three-quarters of a million turkeys will be handled by the sixty associations. Most of the turkeys will be included in pools for the Thanksgiving trade or for the Christmas holiday trade.

Cooperative turkey marketing in the Mountain States had its beginning with the Big Horn Cooperative Marketing association, Basin, Wyo., about 1922. In 1923 four other associations began handling turkeys on a cooperative basis.

Some of the associations are small groups of producers who supply only enough turkeys for a single carload shipment. Three of the associations aim to serve most of the turkey producers of entire states.

Several of the associations are deducting a fraction of a cent per pound on turkeys handled, for the purpose of accumulating a fund for strengthening and expanding the sales service.

MARKETING IN TEXAS

The Rio Grande Valley Vegetable Growers' association, Rio Hondo Texas, was formed in 1928 to market vegetables and cotton for its members, and to buy fertilizers, seeds and insecticides. During the 1928 marketing season the association transacted business amounting to $34,289. In its second year ending August 31, 1929, the sales totaled more than $100,000. However, owing to heavy operating expenses, the retains from sales were insufficient and the years closed with a deficit of $2,565.

Seventy-five members, all of whom are farmers, are served by this association which is organized without capital stock as a cooperative enterprise.

INCREASED SEED SALES

More business was handled by the Farm Bureau Plainting Cotton Seed Distributors, Bakersfield, Calif., during the 1928-29 season than ever before. This association is concerned with the production and marketing of Acala cotton seed. All Farm Bureau members are eligible to participate in the benefits of the association. The reproduction fields under the control of the association stretch over an area extending 300 miles north and south. The seed from most of the fields is sold through the association, although special arrangements have been made to control the production fields of several organizations growing seed for their own members.

Since the formation of the organization in 1925, more than 3,700,000 pounds of seed have been produced under association control. Seed sales through the association have amounted to about $132 000 for the four seasons of operation. Total business for the period amounted to about $136,000.

From six million to twenty-five million pounds of wool has been marketed cooperatively in this country each year since 1920. The largest quantities of wool marketed through cooperative channels were handled during the years 1925 and 1926. In the latter year the cooperative organizations received and sold more than 25,000,000 pounds. Of the associations that report both number of consignors and quantity of wool delivered for the past nine years, the 1925 and 1927 reports show the largest number of pounds per consignor, the averages per consignor for those years being 913 and 1,017 pounds, respectively. In 1920 the average was 324 pounds per consignor, and in 1928, 670 pounds.

At the close of the 1928 season, 55 associations reported 16,541 consignors; 62 associations received 15,733,239 pounds of wool. Total sales for 55 associations amounted to $2,460,439. In 1928, associations in Oregon, Ohio, Montana, and Colorado led as regards quantities consigned.

Have Seed Tested–It's Free

BY T. C. RICHARDSON
Field Editor Farm and Ranch

Increasing numbers of farmers are producing seed for sale to their neighbors, to the general public, to seed dealers. This is encouraging so long as it raises the average quality of the seed planted by farmers generally. Seed, however, should not be offered for sale without the assurance that they are better than "average" seed.

Where the buyer has seen the crop growing and comes to the farm for the seed there is no opportunity for dissatisfaction unless the seed have low germinating powers, and this is a quality that cannot be determined by looking at the seed, or handling them. A good bright color is often thought to be sufficient assurance of germinability, but it is only a favorable indication. It proves that the seed were grown and harvested under good weather conditions, but does not tell you whether 60 per cent or 90 per cent of the seed will grow. Plumpness is also a good indication, but if the seed have been heated in storage, as so often happens, unknown to the owner, their vitality will be greatly lowered.

Only One Test Is Fair

There is only one test that is fair to both seller and buyer—a laboratory test and analysis. This analysis is made by the State seed laboratory without charge to residents of the State. The number of samples that may be tested free is limited in some States, but the average farm seed grower will hardly have enough samples to bring him into the class of the same dealer, who may submit hundreds of samples.

The seed to be offered for sale should be recleaned or otherwise put in the condition in which it is to be offered for sale. An average sample may then be taken, and no picking or other change should be made in the sample. The size of the sample to be sent the laboratory varies with the size of the seed, say 2 pounds of cotton, corn or other large seed, 1 pound of oats wheat, barley, grain sorghums, etc., while for millet or alfalfa, a smaller sample will serve.

Tells How To Send It

Place the sample in a small cloth bag, preferably, sew or tie securely, and address it to your State seed analysist, with your own name and address plainly marked on the corner of the label. A precaution well worth while is to write your name and address on a slip of paper and place it inside the bag before tying it up. Then if the outside label should be accidentally misplaced in the seed laboratory, the slip inside the bag will insure proper identification of your sample. Strong paper bags may be used for some of the larger seed if several thicknesses of wrapping paper are used to prevent holes bing torn in the bag in passing through the mails.

Arkansas—State Seed Analyst, Fayetteville, Ark.

Louisiana—State Seed Analyst, Baton Rouge, Louisiana.

Oklahoma—State Seed Analyst, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

New Mexico—State Seed Analyst, State College, New Mexico.

Texas—State Seed Analyst, Austin, Texas.

Send Early As Possible

Seed samples should be sent as early as convenient, as all the State seed laboratories are likely to be swamped with work during the main seed-selling season. You will save the analyst trouble and yourself delay by not waiting until near planting time, when most seed are sold.

Write your state seed anlyst or Department of Agriculture for a copy of the seed laws and the regulations of the department concerning the enforcement of those laws. In general terms the five States named have similar laws, but there are some differences which will be noted in another article.

All of them require that seed offered on the general market shall be properly labeled, and it will be well to for those who have seed to sell to learn just what the State law requires. Seed laws were passed for the benefit of farmers, but also for the protection and benefit of the honest seed grower or seed dealer who wants to sell his goods for what they are—not what he thinks they are, or what they look like.

Remember htat the life and productive character of the seed are wrapped up inside its coat, and nothing but a germination test will tell whether it is dead, weak or strongly viable.

Freeze And Rain Do Much Damage

Although considerable damage was suffered by that portion of the cotton crop which had fallen to the ground, by the recent rains and freeze, according to information gathered from various authoritative sources, a greater damage was done to feed crops that had not yet been cut and gatherd before the freeze and killing frost arrived.

It has been figured that at least 50 per cent of grain remaining uncut has been lost, throughout the entire South Plains, from devastating freezes.

This loss is felt extensively because, with the exception of a few localities, the feed crops of the South Plains are short this year, due to the drouth.

12 Year Old Club Boy Makes Profit

Nets $191.88 On Heifer Project This Year And Tells Details Of How It Was Done

"Twelve-year-old R. W. Woodruff, 4-H club boy of the Hardy community club," states County Agent D. F. Eaton, "is one of this county's future dairymen. He is making good in his club projects and talks to you upon various subjects pertaining to dairying like a grown-up and long-experienced dairyman."

This club boy reports are worth attention. The summary of his club project shows that he was presented with a Jersey heifer by his father the value of which was $100, and that he has, this year, made a net profit of $191.86 from this animal.

Details Are Given

Expenses of this project shows that, in addition to cost of the animal, feed cost was $45.72 and labor 3.80, making a total of $149.52. Since the start of this project, a calf was born to the heifer, the value at present of the two being $275, with milk sold and prizes won amounting to $66.40, or a total of $341.40 in receipts, giving the net profit of $191.88.

Following is this boy's story of his club heifer:

"I began this year's project with a two-year-old heifer.

"I have fed and cared for her with the best feed I was able to get. Built her a nice shed from some old sheet-iron so that she has a good dry place to eat and stay when the weather is bad.

Fed Balanced Ration

"On March 28 she dropped a nice heifer calf. She has produced two gallons of milk each day, up to Sept. 30. I have tried to feed her a balanced ration all the time and have kept her on a Sudan pasture during the summer months and also runs on a native pasture all the time.

"I brushed and cared for my cow and used a nurse cow to feed it so that I could see how much my heifer would produce. I showed this at the South Plains Fair and won second place on it. The feed I used was ground hegari bundles and ground cottonseed.

Cartagena and Barranquilla, Colombia, are to be connected by railroad or modern highway.

Fifty-two per cent of the students in medical schools of Russia are women, compared with 28 per cent in 1913.

Club Boy Tells, "What Cotton Seed Meal Means To The Dairy Industry"

BY R. W. WOODRUFF
Member Hardy 4-H Club

Just a few years ago people did not think of using cotton seed products. My father tells me that the farmer would only carry home enough seed to plant his crop another year, and leave the rest of his seed at the gin for the ginner to dispose of the best he could.

Since people have begun to study and learn what the dairy cows need to produce the most milk and butterfat, we find that she needs and must have a balanced ration.

This ration must contain the proper amount of proteins, which cotton seed meal provides, with the proper amount of home-grown feed to provide the carbon-hydrates and fats.

The ration must be adequate to maintain the cow's body with enough over to produce all the milk she can.

To do this properly the dairyman must study each individual cow and weigh the feed she eats and the milk she produces, so that he can balance the right feed for each cow, so that she can maintain her weight and produce the most milk.

It is very essential that each cow get the proper amount of protein and cottonseed meal is the best and cheapest feed we can find to provide this element.

It is not only essential to provide a balanced ration to the dairy cow during the lactation period, but also she should have a concentrate ration along while she has her rest.

Slight Early Advance In Cotton Is Followed By Reactions As Result Of Week-End Liquidations And Selling

General Market Closes In Steady Tone Net Unchanged To Five Points Down In Saturday Session

NEW YORK, Nov. 2. (AP)—A slight early advance in cotton on steady Liverpool cables, was followed by reactions under week-end liquidation and some southern selling during today's trading. January contracts sold off from 18.08 to 17.97 and closed at 17.98 compared with 18.02 at the close of the previous day. The general market closed steady net unchanged to 5 points lower.

The opening was steady at an advance of 2 to 5 points on covering and trade buying which was promoted by unfavorable features in the weather news and the relatively steady showing of the Liverpool market. December sold up to 17.97 and March to 18.36 at the start. The lowest prices of the day were reached in the late trading and the close was within a point or two of the lowest on most positions.

Report Published

A private crop report was published placing the yield at 15,215,000 bales compared with a report of 14,833,000 by the same authority a month ago.

Later another private report as issued placing the indicated yield at 14,700,000 bales and it was pointed out that the average of the two reports, or 14,958,000 bales was within 42,000 cabins of the official crop indication of 14,915,000 as of October 1st.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 225,800 bales against 148,000 last year.

Cotton Fluctuations Narrow Saturday

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 2 (AP)—With quite moderate trading in cotton today price fluctuations were narrow. One private report indicated a yield of 15,200,000 bales, an increase over last month but the other placed the total at 14,700,000 bales.

The trading in evidence proved to be mainly an evening up for over the week-end and a preparation for next week's private crop estimates just ahead of the government report due November 8.

After opening at 18.00 January declined to 17.91, down 9 points and closed at 17.98 or 6 points net lower for the day. The general market closed steady at net declines of 6 to 7 points.

Hawkins

when the tragedy occurred. He stated that Walker remonstrated with Hawkins for allowing two dogs to fight, and said that the latter went into the Walker residence and returned with a shotgun, after the father-in-law had tried to disrupt the fight.

"And tell the jury what happened," said Mr. Bradley.

"Hawkins shot Walker," replied McCain.

Story Corroborated.

Eugene Brents and Floyd Brents, who also live on a farm near the scene of the tragedy, and who were at the Walker farm when the shooting occurred, corroborated McCain's testimony when placed on the stand.

Sheriff Elmer Reed, of Crosby county, testified as to the arrest, and Dr. W. C. Snow, of Ralls, testified that one wound was found in Walker's body when it was examined.

E. A. Watson, of Crosbyton, represented Hawkins at the examining trial, while Mr. Bradley was assisted by N. C. Outlaw, Crosby county attorney.

Material Setback In Wheat Values Suffered In Mart

Decline Caused By Reports Of Europe Being Overloaded With Breadstuff Supplies

BY JOHN P. BOUGHAN
Associated Press Market Editor.

CHICAGO, Nov. 2. (AP)—Confronted by reports that for at least the time being Europe is overloaded with breadstuff supplies, the Chicago wheat market today suffered material setbacks in prices. Trans-Atlantic export business in North American wheat appeared to have bumped into a stone wall, and new speculative buying of wheat future deliveries here showed a declined falling-off in volume, with selling pressure enlarged, especially from the east and northwest. Something of an offset, however, was furnished by indications of a good-sized demand for Canadian wheat to be shipped to the Orient.

Chicago closing quotations on wheat were unsettled, 5-8c to 1c a bushel under yesterday's finish. Corn closed 3-4c to 1c down, oats 1-4c to 1-2c off, and provisions unchanged to a decline of 15c.

Prospects that an increased movement of the new corn crop will result from better weather prevailing throughout the corn belt tended to put corn prices down. Oats sympathized with declines both in corn and wheat.

Provisions advanced early on account of commission house buying but afterward receded.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 2. (AP)—William G. Lee, 70, the leader of a thousand battles in behalf of the railroad workers of the nation died today at his home in Lakewood, Cleveland suburb.

Holmes Charges

Guardsmen Called

Holmes was shot down as he was putting his car in the garage at his home, Sept. 13. State rangers were immediately dispatched to Borger and they, with local authorities carried on an intensive investigation. On their advice, and the advice of personal representatives, Governor Moody proclaimed martial law in the county and charged that a "deeply entrenched criminal ring" existed. State Ranger Captain Frank Hamer had previously indicated that he had evidence that crime here had the connivance of some officers and that some town and city officers were parties to a conspiracy with the criminal element.

Jones was one of the first men taken in custody when the troops arrived and later he was charged with a liquor law violation and was held without bond under the authority of martial law.

Many Questioned

A military court of investigation questioned every witness who, it thought, possibly could help in revealing Holmes' assassin. This evidence was placed before the grand jury and military authorities announced that martial law would not be lifted until the old county and city administrations were thoroughly cleaned out. This finally was accomplished by resignation. Ranger C. O. Moore, under whom Burton was working when he arrested Jones and Hodges, was appointed sheriff and a complete panel of new county and city officials, approved by Clem Calhoun, Holmes' successor, was installed. The troops left Borger some time ago, but it was not until this week that a formal proclamation ending martial law was issued in Austin.

Investigators probing the Holmes' mystery were handicapped by the fact that the district attorney had been playing a lone hand, seeking no assistance, and revealing the details of his prosecutions to no one.

PLEBISCITE LOOMS

Assertion Of Germans On Young Plan Likely

BERLIN, Nov. 2. (AP)—A plebiscite throughout Germany on rejection of the Young plan now appears a certainty in view for the success of the Nationalists in obtaining the requisite registration for holding such a referendum.

"The first battle is won," says the Kruez Zeitung, voicing the jubilation of nationalist fascist quarters. While the sponsors of the proposal won only by a nose the result is likely to keep the German political pot seething.

Cattle Trade Slow Around Eleven Of Livestock Market Circuits For Week

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 2. (AP)—(U. S. D. A.)—Cattle trade around the 11 market circuit during the week under review was slow, with killing classes weak to unevenly lower, most points reported losses of 25c a $1.00 on beef steers, yearlings and fat she stock. Chicago scored $16 on highly finished heavy steers and the same at Kansas City on strictly choice yearlings. Stockers were in liberal supply, aggregate receipts 310,000, a decrease of 20,000 from last week but 46,000 heavier than a year ago.

Hogs steady to 40c lower as compared with a week ago, most points reporting losses of 15 a 30c. Current values are the lowest since January. St. Louis had a late top of $9.70. Total offerings 424,200 as compared with 522,934 last week and 416,393 the corresponding period a year ago.

Suply Short

The sheep supply approximated 411,000 a shortage of 144,000 from last week and 42,500 less than a year ago. Curtailed receipts failed to stimulate demand for fat lambs as the trade on dressed lambs was very slow. Prices on fat lambs were steady to unevenly lower, range offerings off 25 a 50c. Aged stock held fully steady with a few markets showing a substantial advance.

Price Not Tested By Cattle Supply

FORT WORTH, Nov. 2. (AP)—Not enough cattle and calves received here today to test values and the market as a whole appeared nominal. Some butcher cows reported around 6.00 and a few low cutters sold at 4.00@4.50. Best fat calves displayed brought 9.00 or above.

Best grade stock seer calves 11.00

The most severe decline occurre in slaughter calves where price closed around 75 to $1.00 lowe Heavy fat calves that were liste up to 10.50 for last week are sellin now on packer account at a practical limit of about 9.50.

A very light supply of hogs arrived. Sales steady. The carlot top, 9.15, paid for smooth butchers. Best truckers 9.00 and packing sows 7.50 @8.00.

No business transacted in sheep or lambs today.

In 1789 there were only 75 post offices in the United States. In 1929 there were more than 49,400. The post office revenue in 1789 was about $25,000. In 1929 it will exceed $700,000,000.

case whether they were legally married. All I know is what some people say."

At times it was difficult to tell whether Hamilton or E. H. Grindstaff of Weatherford, special prosecutor, was doing the cross examining. Once Grindstaff asked: "Were you calm and cool and collected after the shooting?"

"What do you mean by calm, cool and collected?" Hamilton demanded.

Again Grindstaff attempted to ascertain whether Walton fell to the floor quickly or slowly after five shots had been fired from a .44 calibre revolver.

"Mr. Grindstaff, I don't know," Hamilton answered. "I never before saw a man who was shot fall, so I don't know whether he fell suddenly or slowly."

Tells Own Story

In his own words, this was Hamilton's story of the shooting:

"I got up and walked to the door and saw in the reception room the young man, Tom Walton. We were about 12 or 14 feet apart. When I saw him it made me rather uneasy and I stopped and said: 'Good morning.' He didn't say a word but he stood there with his hand in his right coat pocket and with a vicious expression on his face. He moved his right hand in the coat pocket and I immediately grabbed for my pistol.

"When I grabbed for the gun he made a dash toward me. I pulled the gun out and he jerked it out of my hand and I caught hold of it. It was discharged over my right shoulder. From that time until Tom Walton fell to the floor there was a mortal battle over that pistol. He was doing everything to shoot me and I was doing everything I could to shoot him."

Sorry For Act

Hamilton said he walked back into his office from the reception room, remarking to J. W. Burks, Amarillo real estate man who testified as a defense witness: "I am sorry I had to do it but I had to protect my own life."

Then, "Thinking of my wife and family in Austin," Hamilton said he sat down at his desk and wrote the following telegram to Mrs. Hamilton: "About three minutes ago I had to shoot Tom Walton. This is awful. I had to do it to save by own life. Don't worry. I had to do it."

Mrs. Hamilton was in Austin with Theresa, then 17. The girl was recovering from an appendicitis operation and Walton was in Amarillo, writing her frequent letters which Mrs. Hamilton intercepted and sent to her husband.

After reading those letters and hearing other threats Walton was supposed to have made Hamilton said he became "uneasy." He purchased a .44 calibre pistol from his law partner, Harry G. Hendricks, and carried the pistol with him all the time.

When he saw Walton he had the pistol stuck inside his trousers and had difficulty in pulling it out, the accused man testified. He declared he did not have time to discharge it before Walton grappled with him.

"I tried to and couldn't. I didn't want to kill that boy—I hated to kill that boy. If I could have stopped him before he got to me I would have."

Hamilton read into the record letters from Mrs. Hamilton and his other daughter, Helen, 21, a university student who is now working on a M. A. degree. One of the letters, besides threatening Hamilton, allegedly contained this remark: "Tell Helen to keep out of this, for if I lose you I'll die and if I die I might as well make it an interesting death." In the same letter, while asking for pictures of Theresa, Walton said: "I like especially the one taken the day after the night before, for then you gave me everything and you loved me then." That letter was written April 22.

Mrs. Hamilton, in another letter, said she thought it might be advisable to "take Theresa to France or some far-off place to restore her character ruined by the enemy."

Lubbock Women Have Two-Fold Interest In Approaching Convention

Mrs. Chester Hubbard Is Awarded Prizes On 24 Out Of 29 Paintings In Autumn Fairs Throughout Texas

Wins First Place In Two Non-Professional Divisions Of Portraits In Dallas; Ranks First In Groups At Amarillo, San Angelo

AMONG those who have brought honors to themselves and to the city in which they make their home is Mrs. Chester A Hubbard, 1815 Avenue K, who, during the fall months, has been listed among the successful and talented non-professional artists.

Mrs. Hubbard has studied art for a number of years, but only this fall ventured in sending her paintings to fairs over the state, the result which has been that pizes were awarded for 24 of the 29 paintings entered in the exhibits.

The last of the prizes was awarded recently when Mrs. Hubbard's portraits were awarded prizes at the state fair of Texas in Dallas. The local artist entered three paintings of heads of her son, winning first for portraits in oil and first in portraits in pastels in the non-professional group.

Her paintings have been exhibited at four fairs, The Panhandle South Plains Fair in Lubbock, the Tri-State Fair in Amarillo, and the West Texas State fair held in San Angelo, and the fair at Dallas.

At Amarillo six paintings were entered, with the artist taking five prizes in addition to sharing the honors in the black and white division with a Dallas artist. A San Angelo she also shared in the black and white division, winning first for portraits.

Her prizes really began in June when she won one of the six cash prizes for an exhibit at the eighth annual Texas artist camp at Chriswal.

While she was in Dallas, during the past week, she studied with Miss Adele Brunet, who has recently returned from abroad.

Statistics Given On P. T. A. Groups By State Leader

Lubbock Society Urged By District President To Name Delegates To Waco Meeting Soon

A release from the Texas Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teachers associations this week gives some statistics from Mrs. James Loving, Austin, state treasurer of the Texas Congress.

"The use of the individual membership cards authorized by the National Congress of parents and teachers at its annual convention last May in Washington, D. C., and being set out this fall from the state office of the Texas Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher associations to every association sending in per capita dues of twenty-five cents for state and national membership is proving a splendid membership incentive," stated Mrs. Loving.

"Membership dues are pouring into state office and additional dues from those associations that have already sent in 1929 1930 dues. This means that we should have a larger delegation at Waco at our twenty-first annual convention, November 19-21 than ever before, because the many new associations and additional members make possible a larger number of legitimate delegates."

Mrs. A. C. Surman, of Post, president of this district, has urged Lubbock P.-T. Associations to select delegates to the meet at Waco as soon as possible. Rates will be reduced for delegates and it has been suggested that those going in cars let it be known and perhaps arrangements may be made in private automobile transportation.

According to Mrs. Loving the state Congress will be well on its way to the 70,000 membership goal that was set for March 1, 1930, when the national per capita has to be sent to the national treasurer.

Velvet And Lame Are Among Best Autumn Fabrics

By MME. LISBETH

Lames and velvets for evening, also flat crepes, failles and satins; velvets, tweeds, crepes and wool crepes for the afternoon and street. These are leading fabrics for autumn.

The lames are more beautiful than one can well remember them having been before. They are sheer, brilliant or suave; glistening sometimes with metallic threads and sometimes with a mixture of silk and rayon.

Of course the velvets are those lovely sheer ones called "transparent," which have rayon pile and silk backs.

Particularly chic is the little afternoon three-piece suit, left, of transparent velvet with panne velvet truck-in blouse. It is quite feminine, and yet a far cry from the fussiness which we were wont once to associate with distinctly feminine clothes. The new femininity in the mode is definitely one of graceful, simple charm.

Illustrated, top right, is a heavy rayon and silk flat crepe frock with one of the new cape collars. This cape achieves a new importance by means of its interesting, but gay way of ending in a little tie at the front. It has a border of baby caracul, closely clipped. The new higher waistline is indicated and the hat follows with great smartness the lines of the cape.

In the lame evening gown, center, the higher waistline is also indicated, but here we have one of fashion's twins, for while the narrow belt sets the waistline high, the skirt is attached to the bodice at a lower line, giving the dual effect so smart at this moment of transition between low and high.

Eight Parent-Teacher Associations Make Plans For Year's Activities

To Improve Grounds And Maintain Cafeterias At Schools; January Art Showing Will Be Sponsored Also

Mrs. W. W. Royalty Heads Organization; Individual Needs Of Various Schools Are Considered At Each Council Meeting

BEAUTIFICATION of the grounds surrounding the school buildings and the conducting of the cafeterias in each of the schools is the two-fold plan for the year of the Parent-Teacher associations of the city as shown in a survey made of the work being started by the eight groups in the city.

Heading all of the organizations is the City Parent-Teacher Council, of which Mrs. W. W. Royalty is president. Other officers for the ensuing year are Mrs. T. A. White, first vice president; Mrs. T. R. Prideaux, second vice president; Mrs. J. R. Weiss, third vice president; Mrs. Pitts, corresponding secretary; Mrs. E. B. Wheelock, recording secretary; and Mrs. C. F. Elkins, treasurer.

As a clearing house for the problems of the P.-T. A. work, the members of the city council include the principals of the schools the presidents of the city organizations and two representatives from each group. Usually the representatives are appointed for the year, but several of the groups this season are trying the scheme of appointing two different representatives each month so that more in that particular organization will become acquainted with the workings of the organization.

Problems from the different schools are discussed at each of the meetings as the main subject for the group is "Child Welfare."

The city council has already sponsored a "Boys' Night" and is planning a "Girls' Night" before the end of the school year, in addition to the art exhibit to be brought to the city in January.

Mrs. A. H. Leidigh has resigned as president of the Senior Parent-Teacher association and Mrs. C. K. Love, first vice president will serve in her place until another election is held. Other officers are: Mrs. F. O. Bennett, second vice-president; Mrs. H. A. Welmaker, third vice-president; Miss Ethel Lawson, secretary; and Mrs. Witt, treasurer.

Mrs. G. T. Seales is president of the Junior High group, and it is this group that is diverting a little from the general plans in their plan for assisting the Junior High school girls in obtaining equipment for amusements in the school. This equipment is to be purchased after a conference is held with the girls.

Playground equipment is being purchased and the grounds of the George M. Hunt school are being beautified by that group, with Mrs. W. E. Twitty as president. The officers for the year are Mrs. J. R. Kilpatrick, first vice president; Mrs. J. H. Kimmel, second vice president; Mrs. J. P. Giles, third vice president; Mrs. M. B. Hilburn, secretary; Mrs. Munroe Williams, treasurer; and Miss Leona Bowlin, reporter.

Over at the Central Ward, it's soap and towels. For the Parent-Teacher association there is supplying those two articles, and in addition is placing special stress on the cafeteria. Mrs. E. L. Robertson, heads the organization for the present year, with Mrs. H. E. Blocker, as first vice president. Other officers are Mrs. C. C. Lindsey, second vice president; Mrs. H. A. Davidson, secretary; Mrs. W. E. Ballew, treasurer; Mrs. Scott, third vice president.

Mrs. J. A. Wright, is president of the Sanders P.-T. A. for the ensuing year, the other officers being Mrs. Davies, first vice president; Mrs. Brown, second vice president; Mrs. C. C. Ragland, third vice president, and Mrs. D. Jarrett, secretary-treasurer.

There are many plans that the association there is considering, principal among these is the placing of a cafeteria in the school, and the cleaning of the grounds around the new school house.

Mrs. E. B. Wheelock heads the Parent-Teacher association of the K. Carter school, which also has a beautification program.

The Dupre group this year is stressing the plan of having programs at each of the meetings, the programs dealing with the association between the teacher and the parents. In addition the group has planned a campaign of tree and shrub planting.

PLANS ARE CHANGED

Lewis' Body May Remain In Grimes Co. Cemetery

AUSTIN, Nov. 2 (AP)—The re-interment of the remains of Kenneth Lewis Anderson in the state cemetery here has at least been postponed and may not occur at all.

The residents of Anderson, county seat of Grimes county, protested against the removal of the body of the last vice-president of the Republic of Texas and raised a substantial sum to repair the dilapidated tomb and clean up and beautify the cemetery in which Anderson was buried. The proposal is being considered by Anderson's relatives.

The town of Anderson was renamed for Anderson after he had died there in 1846. The re-interment of Anderson's body had been scheduled for November 3.

CONTROL REGAINED

Catholic Priests Go Back To Former Churches

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 2 (AP) — Schismatic or National Catholic priests will be permitted to retain control of those churches that were in their charge before the controversy between the government and the Roman Catholic church broke out in 1926, under orders issued to state authorities by the department of the interior Friday.

State governments were instructed to return to Roman Catholic priests all churches which were in their hands before the controversy, including those which have been occupied by the Schismatics since.

The WOMAN'S DAY

To live in a glass house used to sound as impossible as to dance in glass slippers or wear a solid gold gown.

But according to Philip D. Jordan, instructor in the philosophy department of Long Island University, the apartment of the future will be of glass and steel.

Our beautiful brick and frame structures of today may some day be as obsolete as the portcullis and the drawbridge.

"There is no reason why stone and brick should remain the prominent building material," said Jordan. "In the middle ages stone structures were built with the smallest allotment of window space as a protection against enemies.

"We have progressed gradually, by letting in a little more air and sunlight, but still we have not entirely succeeded in freeing ourselves from the medieval influence.

"The so-called modern sky-scraper is really medieval in architecture, now that the durable qualities and the health-giving properties of glass are known."

• • •

IN REALM OF FACT

One listens with interest to a philosopher's theories—it is his business to dream and to vision; but when an architect begins talking about glass houses, and building them, we feel they are coming out of theory into fact.

Thus when Frank Lloyd Wright, New York architect, actually has plans for buildings of glass and intends to construct them, we rub our eyes and wonder where we have been all our lives.

Wright sees the skyscraper evolving into an inverted cone of glass with copper and steel furnishings, built around a concrete core running through the center, resting on a concrete base set in bed rock.

As the building is carried upward, small apartments will be constructed, giving the whole the overlapping appearance.

"This idea is to be carried out," he explained, "because the higher the building the more valuable the space. From the central core of the building shelves and floors will extend and over these shelves the glass and copper shell will be constructed, and the utmost in air and lighting conditions attained."

He supplies originality and distinction by varying the color and the transparency of the glass. All possible furniture is built in and only the small items are movable.

His plans call for the construction of this type of building in the shop, all except the pouring of the concrete base and core.

Doubtless a dozen could be made up in advance, and one could shop for ready-made glass skyscrapers as one does for chests of drawers or hats, have them delivered C. O. D. and stuck into the concrete the same day.

• • •

THE CHANGING SCENE

As we behold the changing skylines of our large cities, particularly in New York and Chicago, and study the innovations that have been introduced in the last quarter of a century, we realize that nothing is impossible.

Why not have glass houses? Why not live in inverted cones? Why not erect giant bee hives and colossal ant hills? There is no limit to what can be built with the hands.

But inside these houses, whether glass or mud, the occupant continues to eat, sleep, laugh, weep and die. The background of the human drama changes, buildings rise and fall and the pageant moves on, but the individual life conforms to the formula of Adam and Eve—who had no house at all.

How to Achieve Beauty

BY MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

Of course expensive resorts in Europe are out of the question for a great many American women. Even the American resorts which have grown famous as watering places are frequently beyond the comfortable income. But there are ways and means of adapting the routine of these places to your own needs.

The average American woman lives an existence full of strain and activity. Today a goodly per cent of them are running households and doing some kind of work in the business world, too. It is possible to go on for months and months without feeling the effects of this too strenuous existence. Then quite suddenly you find yourself depressed and dissatisfied, and you cannot tell why. This happens very frequently and can be a purely mental state, or it can really be physical exhaustion.

If it is a mental state, then you need a change just as much as the person who is tired out—for the mind and the body are so closely allied that the body cannot be well unless one's thoughts are happy. The wise woman does not let a mood of depression take hold of her. The moment she feels bored she knows that it is time for a change of atmosphere. Whether she goes to Baden-Baden or visits a dear friend in a small country town nearby, makes little difference. The point is that the change will be beneficial.

New faces, new streets, new activities, even for as short a time as a week-end, can send a woman back to her home surroundings contented with that which she had left with annoyance a few days before.

If it is possible to combine rest with entertainment in the moderate doses prescribed at the watering places of both continents, then it is wise to do so. Breakfast in bed, someone to wait on you if you're used to waiting on other people, a visit to the theater or concert hall—anything which breaks the monotony of your regular schedule—will have a decidedly beneficial result.

Even the best of us grow stale. Some of us make the mistake of trying to fight to bring ourselves back to our generally happy outlook. It is better to save that energy and to relax and let the peace and quiet of some new environment bring contentment back to you.

Hallowe'en Functions Predominate In South Plains Society Of Past Week; One Marriage Is Announced

Former Lubbock Couple Give 2 Bridge Parties In Home At Plainview; Stag Event Is Held

A NUMBER of parties have been given in South Plains' cities during the past week with the Hallowe'en motif predominating. A shower was given for a recent bride in Floydada and one marriage was announced in Snyder.

Dewey Moore and Miss Eva Belle Fenton, both of Snyder, were married Sunday, October 20, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Womack with Rev. T. L. Nipp, pastor of the Baptist church officiating. The wedding was witnessed by only a few friends of the couple.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Fenton, while the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Moore.

STAG PARTY GIVEN

A stag party honoring R. H. Odom and J. C. Dorward was given last Tuesday evening in the Odom home by Mesdames Dorward and Odom.

Chrysanthemums and roses added attractiveness to the entertaining rooms. The Hallowe'en motif was carried out in the appointments of the party. About ninety guests attended.

SHOWER HONORS BRIDE

Mrs. Fay Maxey, who before her recent marriage was Miss Lena Stephens, of Midland, and who now lives in Floydada was honoree at a miscellaneous shower when the Woman's Council of the First Christian church entertained Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. John Farris.

A mock wedding was the feature of a short program.

The wedding gifts were presented in a huge wedding bell.

Mrs. J. E. Stephens, of Midland, the bride's mother and Cecil Hamilton, of Big Spring, a cousin, attended the shower.

Hallowe'en has been the inspiration for many informal parties in Floydada during the month of October. Almost at the beginning of the month parties have been suggestive of Hallowe'en and interest increased as the date approached.

Perhaps one of the largest parties of the season was given last Friday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Houston with Mr. and Mrs. Houston, Dr. and Mrs. V. Andrews and Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Houston as hosts and hostesses at eighty-four.

Delightful refreshments were served to sixty-four guests.

WILLIAMS ARE HOSTS

Mr. and Mrs. Lynn Williams, of Plainview, but formerly of Lubbock, recognized the Hallowe'en season by entertaining Thursday afternoon and evening with two bridge parties at their home on Nassau street.

As the guests arrived they were greeted by little Miss Betty Jean Williams and Miss Wymeth Rudgins. These little girls represented two clowns.

The house was attractively decorated in Hallowe'en symbols while the color scheme of black and orange was cleverly carried out in table covers, pumpkin centerpieces, and the refreshment course.

The guest list for both afternoon and evening included 48 names.

Tariff Lobby Probe Reaches Down Into Gulf Coast

Southern Tariff Association Head Put On Stand; Organization Asked Aid From Senators From The South

Friend Of Hoover' Quoted As Promising Help From White House; Record Is Kept On Testimony

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Examining activities of the Southern Tariff association in connection with the pending tariff legislation, the senate lobby investigating committee has been informed by J. A. Arnold, vice-president and general manager, that he had conferred with several senators in regard to obtaining satisfactory rates on Gulf coast products.

Arnold said he talked with Senators Fletcher and Trammel, democrats, of Florida, participated in presenting a memorial to Senator Watson, the republican leader, and was a member of a committee which called on Senators Connally, of Texas, Black of Alabama, and Harris of Georgia, all democrats.

Correspondence Examined

Attention of the committee was devoted almost entirely today to examination of Arnold's correspondence, which will be resumed at the next session Tuesday. A mass of correspondence, most of it bearing upon the tariff contest, was read into the record.

One of the letters, written by Arnold to a representative of the National Livestock association, said Senator Watson had suggested that "some one of us" get in touch with Senator Kendrick of Wyoming, in regard to the flexible provision of the tariff act. The letter said the vote was expected to be "close."

Writes To Watson

Another letter written by Arnold to Senator Watson suggested that Watson and Senator Thomas, republican, Idaho, confer with representatives of farm organizations and that Watson tell them he was willing to help them in the rates on vegetable oil and long staple cotton if they would aid in passing the bill.

"Why did you ask Senator Watson to do that?" demanded Senator Walsh, democrat, Montana, who did most of the questioning.

"I thought he was the man to go to," Arnold replied.

Promise of White House support was contained in a letter from G. Fletcher, of the Florida East Coast Growers association, to Arnold. The letter said:

"Will See Hoover"

"If things come to where they are looking up there, I will come up and see my friend Hoover and make them all be good."

Senator Fletcher was characterized as a "traitor along with other democrats" in a letter to Arnold from Lorenzo A. Wilson, of Jacksonville, chairman of the Florida division of the tariff association.

The letter added that Senator Trammell was "the best log-rolling politician that ever came out of any state in the Union—just as clever as he can be."

Importance Stressed.

Wilson wrote he believed Fletcher "realises the importance of what this tariff will mean to Florida," and promised to "take up the matter actively with some of the large Florida landed interests that I think would have more influence with him than I have."

The letter predicted that Trammell "will come along our way nicely."

In a letter, Arnold said both Fletcher and Trammell were "functioning" and he believed both would vote for the tariff bill.

RELEASED ON BOND

KIRBYVILLE, Tex., Nov. 2. (AP)—E. H. Strickland, telegraph operator for the Santa Fe was released on $1,000 bond today following an examining trial before J. D. Howell, justice of the peace. Strickland is charged with killing John Winton, bachelor dairyman, today shortly before daybreak as he was walking along the Santa Fe tracks. Strickland has a wife and two children. Domestic troubles are said to have led to the tragedy.

Unripe flax eaten by several horses in Montana caused a poisonous acid to form in their stomachs, resulting in their deaths.

Scales Of City Tell Many Tales

Dieting Women, College Girls And Even A Few Men Are Customers Of Weight Vending Machines Here

THEY came, they saw, and they went away disappointed. This tells in a few words the great tragedy which befalls most folks fat and thin alike when they step upon public scales.

There are twelve scales in front of business houses on Broadway alone with many others in different parts of the city. Attractively enameled white with red lettering they offer quite an incentive to stop and ascertain your weight. "Do you know your weight or what you should weigh; take home dated and printed a record of your weight and fortune, and profit-sharing fortune telling scales," are examples of the invitations.

Just 'Stick Around"

If you have half an hour to watch, sometime, park in front of public scales and learn a little psychology not found in the text-book.

Along come two little boys who are in all probability brothers. Both want to weigh. The first one will usually get on and then slide off as the second one steps up and figure they have saved a penny.

Here comes a fat woman who has dieted for one day and eaten heartily for three days but expects to see a radical change. Gingerly tiptoeing on she experiences a momentary feeling of panic and after watching the arrow spin rapidly around and stop too near the one hundred and eighty mark she flounces off railing about the scales which are bound to be in need of repair.

One Bright Spot

Perhaps the next person to take advantage of the penny purchase will be a man who has not been out of the city for ten years but his fortune reads "you love to travel and eventually will gain much in this manner" and heartily agreeing with the prophecy he brightens up as he continues on his way.

The expressions most likely to bring about a smile to the watching one are those of people who are on a diet. The sufferers either want to gain or lose and after spending several hours on a liquid diet one weighing near a drug store is likely to go in and eat a sandwich or drink a malted milk. This may account for the reason that so many drug stores have placed scales in front of their doors.

Out near the candy counter at Texas Tech some one has thoughtfully placed scales and now every time a certain girl asks for a piece of candy the boy friend suggests that she step upon the scales first. Probably no scales in Lubbock are weighed upon as much as this one at Tech and over a thousand pennies usually are counted by the penny man when he comes around.

Canyon will unite with Amarillo in helping the park board to do its work in this region of the state.

Bedtime Yarn Is Flat; Suit Filed Asking Divorce

The bedtime story of "work at the office" failed in its purpose according to the divorce petition of a Lubbock woman filed Saturday.

The plaintiff alleges that she, after her husband had told her that he would be working on a certain night recently, went to his office and found him not there. She charges that she visited the office twice later, and that after her final visit she saw her husband riding in an automobile with a woman. She states in the petition that her husband did not come home that night.

She seeks the custody of three small children.

HOTEL EDSON OPENS

BEAUMONT, Nov. 2. (AP)—Nearly 800 people tonight attended the opening banquet of Beaumont's new 22 story hotel Edson, the tallest hotel building in Texas. This formal opening was of twofold importance, as in addition to the opening celebration, it was also honoring the birthday of E. G. Edson, president of the Edson hotel company, builders. A huge birthday cake marked the table used by the Edson party. The hotel is to be operated by the Baker Hotel company.

Disappearance Of $2,836 Creates Mystery

Richard Merriwether, general manager of the company, said all he knew was that the money was in the car when it left the barns, and missing when it reached the bank.

CHAPTER I.

"Well, my lad, if it's work you're wanting, Lieut. Strawn here is the man to see that you get your fill of it," said Police Commissioner O'Brien, his blue eyes twinkling at the tall young man who sat across the desk from him. "Jawn—" he turned slightly in his swivel chair and drooped a sandy-lashed lid in a significant wink — "this young scalawag happens, by the grace of God and a sister of mine—rest her soul—to be my nephew. Do you think that the taxpayers will rise in their wrath and defeat me at the next election if I give him a job under you on the homicide squad? Of course you're to kick him out if he's no good as a sleuth. But if he's half as good at finding out what a fellow would give his right arm not to have found out as his mother was."

Why, Nora, bless her heart, knew when I was in love with a girl before I had tumbled to it myself—"

"And what might his name be, Commissioner?" John Strawn, lieutenant of the Hamilton homicide squad, interrupted, his gray eyes narrowing speculatively upon the smiling young man who had risen and was holding out a hand.

"It might be O'Halloran, if that willful sister of mine hadn't lost her heart to a Scotchman by the name of Dundee," O'Brien chuckled. "Irish he is, Jawn, as you can see by the black hair and the blue eyes of him, but Scotch he is, too, by the name his father pinned on him. Jimmie Dundee his name is, Jawn, or, if you're wanting his alias, you might write him down in your books as 'Bonnie' Dundee. A sorry name for a six-footer like Jimmie here, but Bonnie he's been since a sentimental lass he lost his heart to in high school found a poem called 'Bonnie Dundee' and made him a present of the nickname. So 'Bonnie' he is, and 'Bonnie' he'll be till he dies, I suppose. But what do you think, Jawn? Could you overlook the handicap and give the boy a trial at the detective business?"

"Anything you say goes, Commissioner," Strawn agreed grudgingly at last taking the firm young hand that was still thrust toward him. "Of course, he'll have to take the regular examinations—"

"Of course!" Bonnie Dundee flashed a wide, disarming smile at the dour man who was to be his chief. "And thanks much, Lieutenant Strawn. I hope you'll forget, after a bit, that I worked pull to get this job—"

"Pull, is it?" his uncle interrupted. "I'd have you know, lad, that I've got the interest of Hamilton at heart, not yours! If half this Inspector Jessup of Scotland Yard says about you is true, Strawn is going to be glad to have you. Just look at this, Jawn!" O'Brien drew an official-looking letter from a desk drawer and passed it to the police lieutenant.

• • •

"Hmm," Strawn remarked noncommittally, as he read the three or four paragraphs. "So you've worked in Scotland Yard, have you Dundee?"

"Yes—six months, sir, but only in a very minor capacity. I was under Inspector Jessup in the Department of Records. I did not actually go on cases, but I did manage to learn something of British police methods."

Straw thawed visibly. "College, I suppose?" he grunted.

"I'm afraid so. But as I spent most of my time reading everything on criminology that I could lay my hands on. I don't think I'm overburdened with an education, [illegible]! A story-book detective," Lieut. Srtwan commented, but there was a glint of not unkindly humor in his gray eyes. "I'm afraid you're going to be disappointed in Hamilton as a crime center, Dundee. Offhand, I can't recall a single case where a rich old man was found dead in his library, a carved dagger in his heart, and doors and windows barred. And so far as I know, there's not a single house in all Hamilton with a secret passage—"

O'Brien chuckled. "You're right, Jawn. I'm ashamed of our murderers. Not an ounce of originality in a jellful of 'em! Just old-fashioned killers, the lot of 'em—shooting off .32's, carving their wives or sweethearts with razors or butcher knives. Sometimes the ladies serve arsenic sandwiches at their tea parties, but on the whole, my boy, they give us a pretty dull time of it, leaving so many clues lying around that sometimes Jawn Strawn here is almost ashamed to take the taxpayers' money—"

"Excuse me, Mr. O'Brien," a girl's voice spoke from the doorway, "but here's a special delivery letter for you, marked 'Personal.'"

"Eh? . . . Oh, all right . . . No, you needn't wait, Miss Crane," the police commissioner said rather pointedly, as he saw his secretary's eyes lingering upon the handsome face of his nephew.

As the girl—not a very pretty one, but striving by make-up arts to appear so—left the room, the police commissioner slit the envelope, drew out three sheets of cheap, [illegible], and began been that all her fellow-boarders are plotting to kill her. What's that high-falutin' name you college boys have for it?"

"Persecution complex," Bonnie grinned. "Pardon—may I see the letter?"

Strawn, who had made no comment on the letter as he read it, beyond a disgusted snort, passed the sheets to the young man.

Dundee's bright blue eyes traveled swiftly down the first page of small precise handwriting in green ink; then his audience of two saw him frown, as he began to re-read the sheet.

O'Brien winked at Strawn, and the police lieutenant returned the pleasantry with great solemnity.

But Dundee's attention was concentrated on the letter:

The Rhodes House,
511 Chestnut Ave.,
June 29, 1929.

Police Commissioner Patrick C. O'Brien,
City Hall,
Hamilton.
Dear Sir:—

I read one of your speeches in the paper when you were running for re-election. You said something like this: "My aim, as police commissioner of Hamilton, has been and will be to decrease crime by sound and logical methods of prevention. In my opinion, crime prevention is of even greater importance than crime detection." There was a lot more to it, of course, but I thought then you were a mighty sensible man.

Well, Mr. Commissioner, I was glad you were re-elected, although I couldn't get out to vote for you, because I haven't been able to walk down a flight of stairs for more than two years. I weigh over 300 pounds, and I have what the doctors call fatty degeneration of the heart.

But now I want to remind you of what you said in those election speeches, and ask you to prevent my murder. No, I'm not crazy, and I do know for certain that my life is in danger. It's because of my money, though I haven't got as much as those who would like to get it, by fair means or foul, think I have. Everything I have in the world is in my room, on the second floor of the Rhodes House, which is a boarding house, as you probably know. First and last, and by one way or another, I've made a good many enemies during the five years I've lived here, and all because of the money.

There's no use writing me a letter, telling me to put my money in a bank, so I won't be murdered for it. I have good cause to put no faith in banks, and my bad heart would keep me from going to the bank to get any of it out when I needed it.

What I want you to do is to send a plainclothes detective to talk to me, and to protect me from the fate that I am sure is hanging over me. I'll name no names now, but when your detective comes, I'll have plenty to tell him—enough to convince him that I'm not the silly old fool you're thinking me now.

If you want to prevent the robbery and probably the murder of an old woman who has never done anything worse in her life than to arouse in her fellow-boarders the passion of greed, you will do as I ask.

Respectfully yours
(MRS.) EMMA HOGARTH

P. S.—Please tell your detective not to let on to anyone, not even to Mrs. Rhodes, my landlady, that he is a detective.—E. H.

"Well, Bonnie," O'Brien challenged, when Dundee had finished reading the letter, "Looks like a big case, doesn't it?" and he winked again at Lieut. Strawn. "What do you 'deduce'?"

Bonnie Dundee saw the wink, understood very well that his uncle was "riding" him good-naturedly, but felt no resentment. When a man is only 25 he does not expect to be taken very seriously by his elders.

"I 'deduce' that Mrs. Emma Hogarth writes a very logical, lucid letter for a 'nut'," he answered, grinning. "What are you going to do about it, Uncle Pat? She does put it up to you rather strongly, I'd say.—My aim, as police commissioner of Hamilton, has been and will be to decrease crime by sound and logical methods of prevention.', he quoted, his blue eyes sparkling with mirth. "Who wrote that speech for you, Uncle Pat?"

"I wrote it myself, you young whippersnapper!" his uncle retorted. "And just to prove I meant every word of it, I'll send somebody around to talk to the old dame—"

"Who seems to be quite an admirer of yours." Dundee interrupted, smiling broadly. "She knows how to get what she wants out of the Irish, doesn't she? . . . Say, Uncle Pat, how about letting me have a powwow with this shrewd old miser?"

"Blithering old nut, you mean," Strawn commented sourly "As the commissioner told you, Dundee, we've got hundreds of letters like that on file, and not one of the writers has been robbed or murdered yet."

"Somehow," Dundee said, "I feel that this case is just a little different from those hundreds of others. I think I'll see if there's a vacant room at the Rhodes House—"

"If you're to believe this letter, it's more likely to be a Rogues' House," O'Brien chuckled. Then his smile faded, as he realized the significance of his nephew's remark. "Listen, boy, you're not going to leave your Aunt Mary and me flat, are you? Isn't our guest room good enough for you?"

"Too good, since I can't pay for it," his nephew answered seriously "It's good of you and Aunt Mary to want me, and I've immensely enjoyed this week of being a pampered guest, but now that I've landed a job I'd like to scout around for a boarding house. I'm glad Mrs. Hogarth's letter came while I was here. She at least makes the Rhodes House sound—well, interesting."

Lieut. Strawn rose, knocked the ashes from his pipe into the police commissioner's big brass cuspidor, and reached for his uniform cap.

"Well, Commissioner, I'll be ambling on over to headquarters. Glad to have met you, Dundee. This being Saturday, guess you won't be ready to report till Monday."

"I may be ready to report this evening, Lieutenant," Dundee answered. "That is, if you and Uncle Pat are willing for me to look into this Hogarth letter. It seems to me that I might as well 'protect' the old lady, as she requests, and get a good boarding house at the same time. It's a decent place, I suppose?"

"One of the best," Strawn admitted. "Aside from its fascinating criminal prospects, as outlined in that letter, the Rhodes House is convenient to headquarters and the business district. One of those old mansions deserted by their owners when the business district began to spread west. Chestnut avenue used to be on Hamilton's Park avenue, in the good old days. Now the old houses are coming down and filling stations, garages and apartment houses are going up in their places. If you really want to find a good boarding house, I suppose you might do worse than the Rhodes House. But I hope you won't be too disappointed when you find that Mrs. Emma Hogarth is just another letter-writing nut."

"I'll try to bear up," Dundee promised, laughing. Then, seriously, "but if I should think her story important enough to pass on to you, could I reach you tonight?"

Strawn shrugged. "Sure! I seldom leave headquarters before midnight. Glad to have you drop around any time and tell me all about Scotland Yard."

When the detective had left, a slight smile on his big, square face, Police Commissioner O'Brien tilted back in his swivel chair and regarded his nephew with fond, smiling eyes.

"Well, boy, I think we put it over, Strawn's one of the finest, you know, but I had to handle him with kid gloves to keep him from getting sore for slipping a man into his department over his head. He likes you, all right."

"He conceals it admirably," Dundee laughed. "I may as well add that I like him, too."

"John Strawn has been on the force for more than 25 years," O'Brien went on. "He's a splendid routine detective — thoroughgoing, tireless, relentless—"

"But unimaginative?" Dundee suggested, rising.

"You'd better park your imagination outside Police Headquarters Monday morning, young feller me lad," his uncle warned him. "Hold on! I'm going to call it a day. We'll go home and break the news to your Aunt Mary that you prefer a prunes and oatmeal boarding house to her honeydew melon and waffles brand of hospitality. Poor Mary! It's a lonely woman she'll be—"

Bonnie Dundee laid an affectionate arm about his uncle's shoulder. "Suppose you give your brogue a rest when you're talking to me alone, Uncle Pat," he laughed. "I know it goes over swell with the cops and the voters, but—"

"You're an impudent rascal," his uncle charged, but his eyes were twinkling.

As uncle and nephew passed through the outer of the two offices that made up the Police Commissioner's suite in the City Hall, a plain girl who hoped she looked pretty, because of the extra layer of make-up she had added to her complexion, caroled a sweet "Goodby, Mr. O'Brien. Goodby, Mr. Dundee," her eyes coquetting hopefully with the tall, slender young man.

But Bonnie Dundee was not thinking about her, scarcely heard his own voice answering. He was thinking of a fat, sick old woman who was inferror of her life.

"What's that you're muttering to yourself, Bonnie?" his uncle asked, when the elevator had deposited them on the main floor of City Hall.

"Was I muttering?" Dundee flushed and laughed. "It was just a stanza from one of Burns' pomes:

"I've lived a life of strut and strife;
I die by treacherie:
It burns my heart I must depart,
And not avenged be'."

"Have you gone clean daft over the Hogarth woman?" his uncle demanded in genuine astonishment. "Surely you're not taking that fool letter to heart, my boy?"

"Not 'to heart' yet, but 'to head'," Bonnie Dundee retorted. "I can't help thinking about her. If she really has a miser's hoard hidden away in her room, and everyone knows it, she's asking for trouble and—well, I'm afraid she's pretty sure it's coming.

"Not with you on the job," his uncle reminded him cheerfully. "By the way, how are you fixed for money? I don't want you to have to rob the old lady to get the money to pay your board—"

"Thanks, Uncle Pat. There's a few hundred left from Dad's estate; enough to see me through if the fair city of Hamilton pays its cub detectives a living wage. By the way, at the Rhodes House I'm going to be a newcomer to the city, looking for a job. Which is true enough, isn't it? And even if the Hogarth affair proves to be as trivial as you think it, I'd like to live there incognito. I rather think life will be pleasanter for my fellow boarders if they don't know I'm on the detective force—provided I pass my examinations," he added with a grin. "And of course if Mrs. Hogarth actually does need protection, I can give it to her much more efficiently if my official connection with her is unsuspected."

"All right, lad. Have your fun," his uncle agreed. "I shan't give you away."

At 5 o'clock that Saturday afternoon, June 29, a tall, slim young man, wearing a well-fitting suit of blue serge whose Bond Street label he had rather regretfully removed, turned up the cement walk leading from Chestnut avenue to the front porch of the Rhodes House.

The big lawn needed cutting rather badly, but after the months he had spent in London, and, more recently, in New York, even a neglected lawn looked heavenly. Flowers, too, in narrow beds along the walk and below the low porch, which extended the whole width of the house and, apparently, along the entire east side of it. Red rambler roses on a trellis which closed of the west end of the front porch. A driveway which hugged that side of the west lawn, about 15 feet from the graveled greenhouse, probably yielded few flowers now, for of its hundreds of little glass panes only a few remained unbroken.

On the east lawn there was a big garden swing, glistening from a recent coat of green paint. And in the swing a pretty girl sat rocking idly.

"I know I'm going to like this place," Dundee told himself jubilantly. She was a very pretty girl with the late afternoon sun slanting golden beams through the coppery brown of her unbobbed hair.

He flicked his eyes away, for he had stared just a moment too long. The house was a jolly old thing. No, he corrected himself swiftly. He must not lapse into those English phrases he had picked up unconsciously. But it was a fine old place. Three stories, the top one many-gabled, in the fashion of a by-gone architecture.

The wide porch, supported by many slender posts, was duplicated on the second floor, and over this double-deck porch extended an abruptly sloping roof from the level of the third story. Certainly a hospitable, comfortable-looking house, in spite of the shabbiness of the ancient white paint and its air of decayed gentility.

Later, Bonnie Dundee was to feel a curious sympathy for the fine old house, when pictures of it appeared in newspapers, with the caption, "Murder Mansion."

A big, pompous, middle-aged man in a freshly laundered suit of white duck rose from a porch chair and boomed a friendly greeting:

"How do you do, sir? Do you wish to see the landlady, Mrs. Rhodes? I'm Mr. Sharp—Mr. Lawrence Sharp."

• • •

Bonnie Dundee set down his heavy suitcase and extended a hand as friendly as the greeting. Nice folks, these middle-westerners!

"Glad to know you, Mr. Sharp. My name is Dundee—a stranger to Hamilton. I'd like very much to get board and room here."

"You picked a good town, Mr. Dundee!" Mr. Sharp boomed heartily. "Fastest growing city in the middle west. Yes, sirree! One hundred thousand by 1930 is our slogan, Mr. Dundee—Oh, here's Mrs. Rhodes. . . . Mrs. Rhodes. I'd like to make you acquainted with a newcomer to our fair city—Mr. Dundee, of—where did you say you're from, Mr. Dundee?"

Bonnie hesitated for only a moment. Then, "New York City," he smiled, stating the exact truth, for he had come from New York to Hamilton, though he had had no home since his father's death the year before.

Until he saw her smile, Bonnie was afraid that his prospective landlady was a formidable one—the kind he particularly detested. Tall, her big bones well covered with flesh which, however, did not give the impression of fat; a high, sternly corseted bosom; an olive-skinned face, crowned with iron-gray hair in an old-fashioned, intricate coiffeur. He was about to put her age tentatively at 50, when she smiled—a smile that drove the anxiety out of her face and made her large brown eyes sparkle like a girl's. Bonnie had no glimmering of the fact that it was his own fresh, boyish good looks that had worked the minor miracle.

"Were you looking for a place to board, Mr. Dundee?" Mrs. Rhodes asked hospitably.

Ten minutes later, preliminary negotiations concluded, Bonnie Dundee and his landlady stood in a little room on the third floor, charming with its sloping ceiling, faded but pretty wall paper, crisply laundered dotted Swiss curtains in the little gable windows.

"Sorry I haven't a room on the second floor, as you wanted," Mrs. Rhodes worried, "but I think you'll find this room very comfortable, Mr. Dundee. Quiet, too, if you like quiet. There are only two other rooms occupied on this floor at present, Miss Jewell Briggs, who has the room across the hall from you, is away visiting her family over the week end, and Tilda, the chambermaid, has the little room at the rear. I'm sorry there's only one bath on this floor—"

"Oh, I'm going to be luxurious up here," Dundee assured her.

"Dinner's at six," she told him. "I know that's rather early for summertime, but my guests are always so hungry after their long days at the office. I hope you'll be happy here. I have a nice little crowd of guests—more like a family than just boarders."

Freshly tubbed, Dundee descended the stairs at exactly six o'clock. Somewhere below a deep-toned gong was summoning the boarders—a rather unnecessary formality, he thought, for when he entered the dining room the tables were almost filled.

Mrs. Rhodes was waiting for him and escorted him to the long table in the center of the room.

"This is the house guests' table, Mr. Dundee. The little tables are for 'mealers'—transients, you know, who come only for dinner." With her hand on his arm, she performed the introductions:

"This is Mr. Dundee, folks. And Mr. Dundee, this is Mrs. Sharp. You've already met Mr. Sharp. And this is Miss Barker; Miss Shepherd; Mr. Styles; Miss Paige; Mr. Magnus, and Mr. Dowd."

There was a chorus of friendly greetings, and as Dundee took his seat directly opposite the very pretty girl who was Miss Paige, he reflected:

"Nice, friendly people. Just folks! I suppose Lieut. Strawn and Uncle Pat are right and that I'm as big a nut as that poor old woman upstairs."

But just then there came, from above, a raucous screaming of words, in a voice that was so strangely horrible that Dundee's hair rose on his scalp.

"Help! Murder! Police!"

Hardly A Well Day In 10 Years

Amarillo Man Says Wife Feels Fine After Taking Two Bottles Of Orgatone

"My wife has been ill for about ten years with stomach and liver trouble," said G. H. Griffin of 2301 B. W. Sixth St., Amarillo, Texas, while talking with the Orgatone representative.

"Doctors told us that she had a dead liver. She always felt tired, sluggish and worn out and didn't have any energy or feel like doing anything. She would have bloating spells which would affect her heart. What little food she ate soured on her stomach and made her miserable for hours afterward. She had a bad case of constipation and suffered from headaches. She was always tired and felt like she had done a big day's work when she didn't do much of anything.

We saw Orgatone advertised so highly and heard so many people talking about it we decided that it was the medicine for her and it has proven so in her case. Her stomach and liver trouble is a thing of the past now. She has more strength and energy than she has had in several years. She feels better during the day and now is able to do part of her work and is getting stronger every day. We both think Orgatone is wonderful as it has proven so in my wife's case and I am glad to recommend it.

Genuine Orgatone may be bought in Lubbock at Bowens Drug Store. Ad

ONE MINUTE PULPIT

Whosoever shall receive one of such children, receiveth me: and whosoever shall receive me, receiveth not me, but him that sent me.—St. Mark 9:37.

A man looketh on his little one as a being of better hope: in himself ambition is dead, but it had a resurrection in his son.—Tupper.

LET WILLIAMS COME!

THE PROSPECT of having Carl Williams, cotton states representative on the Federal Farm board, as a speaker at the second annual Farmers Short Course at Texas Technological college in late winter is an alluring one. It is doubtful if the holder of any more important position could be brought here and the Avalanche-Journal is thoroughly in accord with the idea.

Editor of the Oklahoma Farmer-Stockman, Carl Williams represents the fleecy staple and its growers in the all-important consideration of farm relief. While his appointment was attacked in some parts and the belief was forwarded that a cotton representative should come from a region which has been producing cotton much longer than has Oklahoma, Carl Williams, in the language of the streets, "knows his cotton—and how!" Anyone who has followed his publication at all, anyone familiar with the wonderful progress it has enjoyed with Carl Williams at the helm, must realize that as an agricultural expert he has few, if any, equals in the Southwest.

Talk of dairying of poultry and hog raising, feed crops and the other things which go to make up diversification if you will but the 'money crop' in Lubbock county and over the South Plains is cotton. Carl Williams couldn't come to a better place to learn of the needs of the cotton planter—and the South Plains couldn't have a more important figure than he to visit in our midst.

In other words, the Avalanche-Journal hopes he comes—and commends the agricultural repartment of Texas Tech in trying to get him.

IF WASHINGTON ONLY WOULD

For many years the Italian government has impressed into the military service Italians who return to the mother land after becoming American citizens through naturalization. The passport division of the state department specifically warns all naturalized citizens that when they return to their native countries they may be held for military service.

Moreover, Mussolini's tax gatherers for two years have been annoying American citizens, who happen to have been born in Italy and to be bachelors, with demands for payment of Italy's bachelor tax. And fascist activities in the United States have been almost intolerable at times, although directed from Rome.

It is not recalled that Washington has once raised a voice in protest against all this, that it is not until now. At this late hour the state department contemplates addressing a note of protest to the Italian government.

Why this sudden excitement over an old issue? A safe guess would be that Mussolini's net has at last caught an extraordinary fish. Some generous contributor to the G. O. P. war chest, perhaps. A friend or relative of a ranking jobholder or congressman. A newspaper suggests it may be a political supporter of Fiorello LaGuardina, Republican candidate for mayor of New York, and if it is, it is a safe bet the supporter claims control over a goodly number of votes.

THE AGE-OLD PASTIME

Although in the downtown districts of our cities the sidewalks are still crowded with pedestrians, it is probably true that walking has become an obsolete pastime in America. The rushing in and out of stores in the shopping districts isn't walking anyway, in the opinion of lovers of that former days of physical exercise.

We have lost the feeling of leisure which in former days was so conducive to walking. Even in our motoring we seem to be possessed of the idea that we must hurry to get somewhere, although we may have no particular destination in mind.

Obviously the automobile does not permit of saunttering. When the road is good, there comes the irresistible impulse to make the most of it, which to nearly all drivers means anywhere from 35 to 60 miles an hour. And consequently there is lacking the opportunity for quiet enjoyment of the passing landscape; and lacking too, is the inducement for reflection and restful meditation which walking, either by one's self or with agreeable companions, makes almost inevitable. In its own way motoring has its pleasures, and on the whole they are no less than those of walking. And perhaps in the stress of modern life it is only natural that we should have taken to the thrill-producing form of exercise.

LEADERS IN NAME ONLY

There is a continuous obligation owed by every individual to the community and especially by those most favored by fortune. Enlightened self-interest should quicken acceptance of the obligation. There is hardly room for argument that what is good for the community is, broadly considered, good for the individual in his work. Conversely, what is good for the individual in the best sense is good for every other man, woman and child in the community.

Too much must not be expected from politicians and parties, too often approached from both sides on the basis of a horse trade. Governmental agents must be supplemented by the efforts of private persons who can envision things as they ought to be, and at long range. Politicians and officeholders, regardless of what they may say in their campaigns, are mostly concerned with getting into office and staying in. That is why they are in politics. They are in politics to get into office or to have a hand in putting others in office, as other men and women are in business or professions to make money or a career, or both.

But the politician and officeholder is usually wise enough to know that that which is beneficial to the community or state or nation will best react to his benefit. His motives for serving the public may be selfish but the service is no poorer for that.

No man can long remain in public office or in political control who consistently disregards the will and welfare of the voters. Public service is the foundation upon which he must build his political power.

On the Firing Line at the Nation's Capital

NATION'S CAPITAL CONCLUDES SECRETARY MELLON BACKED UP

BY CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—All the gossip concerning prospects of Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon's resignation has died down.

There was a good deal of it for awhile.

Occasionally, when a particularly convincing-sounding rumor was in circulation, a perfunctory denial would be put out, but the general impression was that, sooner or later a show-down would arrive and the Pennsylvania multi-millionaire would quit.

The treasury head had things entirely his own way during the Coolidge regime. He did not concern himself with governmental questions outside his own department, but what he said concerning treasury policies went. There evidently was no argument about it.

This state of affairs did not lap over into the Hoover administration.

There were no signs of a fuss, but the new president's decisions, as given publicity, on issue after issue, were at variance with what everyone, in the least familiar with Secretary Mellon's ideas, knew to a certainty would have been the latter's preference, had the choice been left to him.

In fact, on several occasions the secretary, obviously speaking too soon, actually expressed himself one way, and then the president did something else.

Folk who considered themselves well acquainted with Mr Mellon did not believe this could continue long.

With each succeeding incident of the sort referred to above they predicted, "Now he'll resign," and reports that he was on the verge of doing so would fly back and fast.

But one day recently, following an especially thick flock of rumors and another failure by Mr. Mellon to resign, a denial was issued which was not so perfunctory.

It did not sound like a denial based merely on the assumption that maybe there would no resignation. It told exactly how long Mr. Mellon would stay—until the end of President Hoover's term. It was a denial of a kind which, were it to prove unfounded, would be not a little embarrassing to the administration—as indicating that it did not know what it was talking about.

Some of them mean almost nothing; some clearly are intended to be the real thing. This one was of the latter class.

Accompanying this final, convincing denial was a little screed apiece by the three or four newspaper boys who are recognized as "in close touch" with the White House, reproving their less favored brethren for the baseless reports they had so frequently circulated.

But did they believe that the earlier denials meant the same thing that the last one did?—that the administration had been sure all along that Mr. Mellon never intended to resign?

Not so anyone could notice it.

They believed that President Hoover and Secretary Mellon finally had been to the mat—and that THEN it came out that Mr. Mellon did not want to resign.

A pretty good man gets to thinking that the boss cannot do without him—that the boss will back up in the well known last analysis—and he tries it and discovers that the boss will not back up—whereupon, if the boss will let him, he backs up himself.

TANK IS FAIR SUBSTITUTE FOR OLD SWIMMIN' HOLE, IF IT IS KEPT SANITARY

Swimming and Swimming Pools

X wants to know:

1 How about swimming as an exercise? I love it, and in the winter I go to a swimming pool. Allright?"

Ans. Swimming allight? Yes, indeed, X, it is one o' the best forms of exercise, bringing into play nearly every muscle of the body! And it is the only active exercise that can be taken in hot weather without discomfort or danger. Every child should be taught to swim, and the earlier, the better, both for the value o' the exercises and for the life-saving possibilities. Yes, when it is impossible to swim in the natural waters, tank swimming is a fair substitute, if the pool is kept in a sanitary condition. By this is meant that the swimming suits and towels are disinfected before use, the proper precautions about the personal hygiene of the swimmes are observed, and some method of disinfecting the water is used.

Ans. A medium or hot shower, with plenty of soap, should be required of each swimmer before entering the pool, for this pool is really a common bathing tub. Furthermore, the officials should see that no one who has a skin disease, or running ears or eyes or other open sources of infection, is allowed into the pool. Diseases (especially inflammation of the eyes and ears, intestinal infection, skin diseases, etc.) can be and not infrequently are, contracted in swimming pools where such precautions are not taken.

3. "How long do you consider it wise to stay in the water? Personally I can stay in a very short time and when I asked my doctor about this, he just told me to get some fat on my bones; but that really wasn't sympathetic advice!"

Ans. The length of the stay in the water depends upon your reaction, X. Some can apparently stay in indefinitely witnout any ill effects. Your doctor's advice may not seem sympathetic, but there's truth in it, for those who are insufficiently padded lose body heat very rapidly and so get cold quickly.

4 "When coming out, I take a long, very hot shower and then as cold a one as I can get, but do not know if this is allright."

Ans. Yes, the hot shower on coming out of the pool, followed by cold, is good for you, especially if you are chilly. Otherwise not necessary.

5. "My eyes become irritated after using the pool. What is the cause of this?"

Ans. The water in most swimming pools is disinfected by chloride of time, an exceedingly potent and safe chemical. (It is also used to purify drinking water.) Sometimes the engineer is a little too lavish with his remedy; then it may irritate the mucous membrane of the eyes and throat for a short time. Call the attention of the authorities to this for it is not necessary. (Three grains of the chloride of lime—less than one-ninth teaspoonful—will kill off myriads of bacteria in a barrel of water! For the purification of drinking water, from 5 to 12 pounds is used for one million gallons!)

Miss E—It is true that mumps in young adult males (not in boy children) may infect the generative system and it does, in from 15 to 25 per cent of the cases. Whether the patient becomes sterile depends on the degree and extension of the infection.

Miss S—Your questions on colls are answered in our article on the subject. See the column rules for obtaining this.

All you can say for silver dollars is that they make a loud noise in the collection plate.

A Study In Oil

On the Fence with The Seer

For centuries we have paid homage to Christopher Columbus, Italian seaman and adventurer as the discoverer of America, the most glistening gem of all discoveries. But now research and other authoritative forces disclose the fact that his name was not Columbus or even Columbo and that he did not discover America at all—looks like a lot of wasted praise to the Seer, and we dare not think of the printers ink wasted on the subject since 1492.

* * *

The Seer notices where the grocers and sausage venders are "whooping 'em up" now that the seven years "Feminine Famine" has ended—the lady with curves is the vogue and common sense is established once more—Hollywood's 18-day diets will become as obsolete as a hat on a college campus.

Radio's far-flung voice is a perpetual monument to progress and the efforts of man—it is the reward of years of research and is supreme as a useful factor in the life of the nations Radio has to some extent robbed the arms of Morpheus but after all the sacrifice is insignificient in the glamour of its usefulness.

Today's Poem

CONSTANCY

"Dear as remembered kisses after death"—
We read and pause, toying the pliant page
With absent fingers while we question slow,
By whom remembered? Not by those that live,
Forgetting the pale past. Ah, no! for them,
The sudden stirring of such long-whelmed thought
Means shok and pain, and swift reburial,
But it may be, that with the dreaming dead,
Who sank away quick pierced by despair,
It may be that their stillness is aglow
Through soft recalling of each loved caress;
Perchance it is of them the poet saith
"Dear as remembered kisses after death."—Minor Watson.

INTELLECTUAL BEAUTY

Beauty still walketh on the earth and air;
Our present sunsets are as rich in gold
Mid branches green still ring-doves coo and pair,
So, if we are at all divinely souled,
This beauty will unloose our bonds of care,
'Tis pleasant when blue skies are o'er us bending
Within old starry-gated Poesy,
To meet a soul, set to no worldly tune,
Like thine, sweet friend! Oh, dearer this to me,
Or noble music with a golden ending.—Alexander Smith.

Methodists Of Northwest Texas Will Meet In Annual Conference In Pampa On November 13; Bishop To Preside

Approximately 500 Delegates Are Expected For Sessions; "Four Year" Men Listed

(By Associated Press)

PAMPA, Nov. 2.—Bishop John M. Moore, of Dallas, will preside at the Northwestern conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, which will convene in its twentieth session at the Methodist church in Pampa, November 13. Appointments of preachers for the ensuing year will be made.

The Rev. W. M. Murrell, presiding elder of the Clarendon district and the Rev. T. W. Brabham, pastor of the Methodist church in Pampa, are clerical hosts to the body which will bring approximately 500 delegates and visitors.

Closes Quadrennium.

The approaching session marks the close of a quadrennium and consequently the election of delegates to the next quadrennial general conference which meets at Dallas, May, 1930, is a matter of paramount importance. The Northwest Texas conference is entitled to 10 seats in the general conference five clerical and five lay delegates who will have a voice and a vote in the enactment of legislation and election of bishops and other officers of the church in the next sitting of Methodism's supreme organization.

Assignment of preachers for the ensuing church year claims the attention of Methodists of this section. Under Methodist law a preacher may be returned annually to the same place for any number of years with the exception of a presiding elder whose tenure of office is limited to four years. The presiding bishop is generally limited to a quadrennium of service although there is no rule prohibiting him serving a longer period.

Among the "four-year" men are those who have served longer are the evs. J. E. Boyd of Albany; H. C. Gordon, of Anson; C. C. Wright of Baird; L. W. Stuckey, of Polk street, Amarillo; U. S. Sherrill, of Mobeetie-Kelton; J. F. Michael, of Abernathy; R. A. Stewart, of St. Johns, Stamford, and C. A. Bickley of Vernon (five years.)

Conservatives Of Canada Attacked By Premier King

Party Flayed For Urging Immediate Retaliation In Way Of Higher Tariff; Compared To U. S.

WINNIPEG, Man., Nov. 2. (AP)—MacKenzie King, liberal premier of Canada, tonight attacked the conservative party for proclaiming "a menace to our political life arising out of something that was transpiring in the United States" and for urging immediate retaliation in the way of higher tariff.

In his first political address since the prorogation of parliament last July the premier recalled that R. B. Bennett and some of his conservative followers had suggested during the last session of parliament that body should be kept in session pending final action on tariff revision in the United States.

"Spectacle Ridiculous"

"A fine spectacle we would have made of parliament as a deliberative assembly had we acted upon that advice," King said. "In view of the events of the last few months how ridiculous a spectacle Canada would have presented to the world had we adopted the suggestion of Mr. Bennett and other members of his party and remained in session in order to deal with a so called menace which has not yet materialized.

"Does anyone imagine that the United States congress would have cringed before an attitude of that kind? As a matter of fact, would not such a course have proved in the long run the best means whereby to defeat our own ends."

The prime minister outlined in detail the system under which a tariff bill is prepared in the United States congress and then traced the history of the debate in both houses since April 12 when the special farm relief session was called by President Hoover.

"It is now pretty evident that there is little or no possibility of any tariff bill becoming a law at this session," King said.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—Lost children have long been one of the major problems with which Manhattan has coped.

Hundreds are daily picked up by the police toddling about the streets, dazedly crying for their parents. Each precinct police station daily witnesses a dozen happy reunions.

Coney Island for years has held the record. Any active Sunday sees a hundred or more youngsters waiting for a mother or father to show up.

Next in line have been the New York department stores, where, with a mother rushing about in search of bargains, many a child has been lost in the shuffle.

And one of the recent innovations has been a scientific method of getting mother and child together with the greatest amount of haste and convenience. Macy's, for instance, now uses an automatic announcement system which operates from the "lost child" department. As soon as a babe is seen going about weeping or looking dolefully into each passing face, an employe takes the child to a broadcasting room. Within a few moments, a loud speaker has given due notification to each floor and word is on its way to each department. Reunions are thus arranged, in most cases, within a short space of time.

The sudden ups and downs of Broadway are particularly severe on those who hang tensely on, despite advancing years. The side street rooming houses hold scores of pathetic cases of oldsters, in sad need of assistance.

A case which occurs to me at the moment is that of a veteran of 65 years' stage experience. Last year we all wrote paragraphs about John Rogers, the 88-year-old drama patriarch who insisted on going back on the road.

Aw now, "Yours Merrily" Rogers would never quit! He was a trouper if you please! Could his 88 years stand the wear and tear of road trouping?—don't be silly. And so Rogers went out with a road company in "The Trial of Mary Dugan." Wherever he went, newspapers interviewed him. That was last season.

The other day, glancing over a copy of Billboard, I came upon this item . . . "Yours Merrily was a prince of good fellows and a lavish entertainer when fortune smiled upon him, and now his many friends and associates have a chance to do something for him. Several have already contributed, but Rogers needs a considerable sum to carry him through his long siege of illness that faces him . . ."

Filling in between the lines, one comes upon an old, old story. "Yours Merrily" tried, but Time was against him. Perhaps he could have stayed in the sunshine of California and given his failing health a large boost.

But troupers don't behave that way. They always come back—even when they are carried back. They always come back to the magnet!

About a year ago an elderly, man, dapper after the fashion of stage folk—but in a threadbare way—appeared one afternoon near the stage entrance of a theater in the middle Forties, hesitated and then approached the doorman. Being a good guardian of his portal, the doorman frowned. The elderly man was about to be ejected, when a prominent young actor made his exit, hurrying away from a rehearsal.

The veteran was an actor who had started the star on his career. And, like so many others, the oldtimer was now down and out. He lives now on funds supplied by one of the many theatrical charities—and theater folk, by the way, are among the world's heaviest charity contributors.

Twentieth Century Found Lobbies On Decline But Railroads Were Able To Put Over One Big Steal, Dutcher Says

Various Groups Have Been Constantly Fighting For A Slice In Each Session Of Congress Since Long Ago

EDITOR'S NOTE. This is the eighth of a series of stories by Rodney Dutcher on the operations of Washington lobbyists in the past.

• • •

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2. — Although the old-fashioned Washington lobby continued its vicious and insidious methods through the last century, various checks upon its influence developed and the extent to which it was able to create general corruption by widespread bribery gradually became modified.

Two of the most powerful lobbies of the present day were born in this period, the dry lobby and the labor lobby.

As early as 1881 the American Federation of Labor had begun a campaign here demanding enforcement of the federal eight-hour law for mechanics and laborers on the public works. At that time the federation was also working on state legislatures for child labor laws, though it did not seek a national child labor act until some time later.

Got Little at First.

Labor's power grew slowly, however, and for many years it had to be content with such minor crumbs as measures excluding Chinese coolies and forbidding entry to European workers under contract. It could do nothing to stem the great incoming tide of other foreign labor.

The Anti-Saloon league opened its national legislative office here in 1899 and at once began to supervise the introduction and watching of bills, lobbying before committees and among congressmen, directing the sending of petitions and personal communications to members and other methods. In a very short time the league lobbyists were showing results, claiming credit for the army canteen law of 1901 and many subsequent measures.

Meanwhile, great industrial and financial groups, instead of relying entirely on lobbyists, were more inclined to encompass the election wherever possible of men to the Senate and House who were already pledged to their interests. They had always been able to keep certain men in the Senate especially, first because state legislatures elected senators and state legislatures were easily bribed, and, second, because the six-year term of senators rendered them more immune to popular sentiment than the two-year term congressmen. There came to be "steel senators," "coal congressmen," "meat senators," "timber congressmen" and "railroad members."

The tariff lobby with the aid of controlled senators won a memorable victory in 1894 when the democrats had the White House and both houses of congress. The house bill put sugar, coal, lumber, iron and wool on the free list and slashed rates on cotton, woolens and linen. But the senate, thanks to a few democrats, made a high tariff bill out of it and Cleveland had to let it become law. A congressional investigation subsequently produced unsavory evidence concerning the pressure of interested groups on specific schedules and gave impetus to the movement for popular election of senators.

Lobbyists had comparatively thin pickings under Cleveland, however. Although he had a republican congressional majority against him in his first term, he vetoed bills that came along with the smell of graft, including many pension measures and a huge pork barrel river and harbor bill. He went further and wrested more than 80,000,000 acres of public lands illegally obtained from more or less corrupt land office officials in previous administrations.

Between Cleveland's administrations, however, the lobbyists made something of a cleanup in 1890 with the McKinley tariff bill. The sugar lobby of 30 years ago managed to obtain an ample bounty on sugar produced in this country. (The sugar bounty proposal has been revived in the 1929 tariff fight.)

Expert railroad lobbyists appear to have pulled off their last large coup in 1900. They had lost none of their astounding nerve.

The Union Pacific, Central Pacific, Northern Pacific, Kansas Pacific, Southern Pacific and Pacific railroads had been handed $140,000,000 in cash and more than 100,000,000 acres of land by congress. There were 45 other railroads to which the government had given subsidies. It was estimated that the total land grants to railroads covered area equal to that of New England, New York and Pennsylvania. Land grants in each of several states were the equivalent in area of three or four smaller states.

They Wanted More.

But the railroads saw that the government still had public lands to be grabbed. And they found that some of their own free land was not as good as some of the remainder of the government's land. So the railroad magnates conferred with their lobbyists and their controlled members to see what could be done.

They put the scheme over through the Forest Reservation bill, a praiseworthy bill which incidentally provided for indemnifying evicted homesteaders by giving them choice of lands elsewhere. When the bill went to conference the railroad members slipped in four words—"or any other claimants." Those four words enabled the roads to take millions of acres of the best remaining public lands in exchange for millions of acres of desert, denuded timber lands, arid hills and mountains covered with perpetual snow. Senator Pettigrew of South Dakota raised a holler, but Congress, dominated by the railroads, refused to take any action until the roads had all they wanted.

The island of Niuafoou of the Tonga group in the South Seas on which lava recently began to flow from eight craters, is said to produce the most delectable cocoanuts grown in the Pacific.

Outline A Definite Policy Of Service

— THEN BUILD

Every successful business, sometime before it is opened to the public, must outline certain definite policies of service. The inception of a new idea of service is purely an experiment until it has stood the test of time. Many instances in the history of American business show evidence of someones taking a chance with an idea, which, if successful, is generally accepted. If the idea of service is sound, the firm succeeds.

Texas Utilities was founded upon the principle of serving a great number of people at the least cost possible per customer. The standard of service must be the best, for that is what the public wants, yet it must be produced economically. Solving that problem is a sound basis for success.

"Honky-Tonk" Headlines Week's Offerings At Lindsey

"Honky Tonk" Is Lindsey Feature Presented Today

Sophie Tucker Of Stage Fame On Screen Here

In "Honky Tonk," Warner Bros. latest talking, singing Vitaphone production, which comes to the Lindsey theater today, Sophie Tucker the perennial "red hot mama" of the stage, makes her screen debut.

Miss Tucker is presented in the character of a singer and leader of the "floor show" in a hectic New York night club, and it is here that George Duryea, as one of a party of roystering, inebriated college boys, is persistently insulting to a fascinating entertainer.

Knockout Youth

At length, unable to still his objectionable jibes, Sophie invites the youth into an anteroom, and promptly knocks him out with a well-aimed blow to the chin. She directs the head waiter to have him carried outside, dusts off her hands, and goes back to sing another song.

Other players supporting Miss Tucker in this thrilling Broadway romance which deals with jazz-mad cafe life and tender mother love are Lila Lee, Audrey Ferris, Mahlon Hamilton and John T. Murray. The production was directed by Lloyd Bacon, and the story, written by Leslie S. Barrows, was adapted for the screen by Graham Baker.

"Come Across" To Headline Program At Lyric Theater

Modern Life Shown In Night Club Picture

A cross-section of modern life is exposed to view in "Come Across" the Universal talking production, which will open at the Lyric theater today.

Its action moves from a notorious underworld night club with its mad singing and dancing, to a mansion in a fashionable Long Island district. Its plot depicts the adventures of a wealthy girl who leaves her sheltered existence to expose herself to the worst dangers of the underworld.

Would Learn Life.

Lina Basquette plays Mary Houston, the society girl of the story, who is not satisfied with the life of her rich set. She wants to find out about life, she wants to learn how the other half lives.

To do this she enters into an entirely new environment and braves every danger. She appears in a scanty costume as an entertainer in a night club of the worst sort. She apparently lends herself to the plans of notorious criminals.

"This may be, as far as the great majority of cases is concerned," says Miss Basquette, "an exceptional step for even the modern girl to take. But the modern girl is continually risking her neck in the pursuit of thrills and speed. Nothing is too hazardous for her to attempt."

Miss Basquette is eminently qualified to be a dancer, in a cafe or anywhere else. Of all motion picture actresses, she is probably the best known for her dancing ability. She has appeared in such New York spectacles as Ziegfeld's "Follies" and "Louie the 14th," and in the "Nifties of 1923."

PLAN POULTRY SHOW

Second Annual Event Will Be In Howard County

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

More regulation chicken coops will be purchased by the committee on arrangements, it was announced here today. The poultry show and school will be open to all entries and is being held to stimulate interest in poultry raising. The income from poultry in West Texas is small when compared with the possibilities of the industry. Prizes will be given those entering winning birds.

BUDDY ROGERS (At Lindsey)

MARY BRIAN (At Lindsey)

Buddy Rogers And Mary Brian Start Here On Thursday

"River of Romance" To Be Offered At Lindsey

The Southern accent which she packed away in vocal moth balls a few years ago, was brought out for an airing recently by Mary Brian, dark-eyed screen actress.

Miss Brian, heroine of many a romantic part in the screen drama, plays the role of "Lucy" in the "Buddy" Rogers starring picture, "River of Romance" which comes to the Lindsey theater for a three-day run beginning Thursday.

Director Wallace specified that all in the cast must have Southern accents to further the realism of the spoken dialog in the picture, which is all-talking.

Miss Brian was born in Corsicana, Texas. In the four years that she has forged ahead in pictures, achieving the front rank as a Paramount featured player, her Dixie drawl has become almost imperceptible. But when the first "shots" of "River of Romance" were made, it was clear to all on the set that Miss Brian had had no difficulty in resurrecting her lolling, limping lingo, suh.

A splendid array of talent has been cast in support of Rogers. The players include Henry B. Walthall, veteran of the stage and the screen since "Birth of a Nation" days; Wallace Beery, burly good-bad man of the films; Mrs. George Fawcett, June Collyer, Walter McGrail, Natalie Kingston, Anderson Lawler, George Reed and Fred Kohler.

CONTROVERSY ENDS

Diet Trouble With Minister Of War Settled

WARSAW, Poland, Nov. 2 (AP).—Settlement of the controversy between Marshall Pilsudski, minister of war, and Ignace Daszinski, speaker of the diet, appeared improbable tonight before the return to Warsaw of President Moscicki, who planned to spend three days at his country residence.

The deadlock between the leaders of the opposing political factions had been put up to the president by both. The speaker informed him yesterday he could not open the scheduled fall session of the diet because of the presence of "armed" army officers who appealed with their chief, Marshal Pilsudski.

Every county in South Carolina has a natural resources commission.

Increase Is Seen In Wheat Acreage

Ten Per Cent Boost Looms In Floyd County During Next Season; 130,000 Acres To Be Planted

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

FLOYDADA, Nov. 2.—With some of the acreage planted to grain sorghums and cotton this year being sowed in wheat those who are best informed on farm conditions in Floyd county estimate that the acreage to be sowed in wheat this year will increase as much as 10 per cent. If this estimate is correct there will be approximately 130,000 acres planted to the golden grain in Floyd county.

More than 1 1-2 inches of rain have fallen in the county this week making ideal conditions for the young wheat although preventing the gathering of the cotton crop. Some of the wheat was dry sown but is up to a good stand after recent rainfalls. According to grain buyers at Floydada there is yet to be several thousand acres of wheat sowed although the majority of the crop has been sown and is up.

Heavier rain in the north portion of Floyd has placed that particular section in better condition as far as this crop is concedned than any other portion but wheat farmers throughout the county are elated over present conditions and are of the opinion that with only fair conditions the remainder of the season that a better than average crop is likely.

Campbell Has New Novel, 'Old Miss', Of Southern Life

Panoramic Story of Group Told In Book

OLD MISS, by T. Bowyer Campbell, 302 pp. Boston; Houghton Mifflin Company, $2.50.

TO THOSE readers who like novels panoramic in scope and infinitely painstaking detail "Old Miss by T. Bowyer Campbell may be highly recommended. Into its pages Mr. Campbell has compressed nearly a century of American history, the life of the principal character spans the birth and death of a civilization.

This second novel by Campbell is very different in subject and temper from his first. "Black Sadie" was a sharply defined and centralized character study of a negro girl. In spirit it was as modern as a Harlem night club. For the scene and story of "Old Miss" Mr. Campbell has forsaken the present century and gone far back into the past of the old South, into the early days of Virginia's statehood.

Life Takes In.

Charlotte Stepplston, four, eight, 12 years old, growing up at Pine Grove in Old Virginia. Charlotte Stepplston a young lady, the belle of her first assembly ball; traveling now with her pa to tichmond; meeting with Robert Tirwell, bold, dashing, ardent. Charlotte Stepplston engaged, married, blissfully happy, settling down as Mistress Robert Tirwell, caring for the black people, managing the place; a mother now, first Belle, and then Lotty, then Martha, and finally Mara, but no son, no heir. Master Robert away in great chagrin to Mexico. Young Miss at home with her brood, waiting patiently for nine years. Robert back at last and on his heels the Civil War.

Young Miss is Old Miss now. Robert is dead, home from his wanderings forever. Courage! The Stepplston fortune is gone, the black people are drifting away, the plantation must be sold, and old Miss lies dying, 86 years old, her face like marble.

One Must Read It.

It is hard to describe the creation of a human soul. Only by reading the book can one realize the vivid beauty with which the author has painted not only a woman but an epoch.

The only possible charge to be brought against it is one of dullness. There are few dramatic high spots in the narrative, and those there are — like the surrender of Lee—depend for their effect upon the power of previous association. Nevertheless, the book actually captures some of the fragrance and futility of the old order.

Students Profit By Church Work

CANYON, Nov. 2—The local Methodist church, with Rev. J. E. Jameson as pastor, has in it about 200 college student members who are taking active part in one or more of the organizations of the church.

When a student who is away from home takes up work in the church here, Miss Mattie Mae Swisher, the student secretary notifies the pastor of the home church from which the student comes. In this way both parents and pastors know that their young people are carrying along their religious education along with other phases of college life. This service is much appreciated by both parents and churches, according to letters received here.

The territory of Alaska has a net cash balance of $1,000,360, a gain of $138,365 over the previous fiscal year.

Turns Of A Bookworm

Book News Notes For This Week

TO TAKE its place beside the other revealing books of the late World war comes a little volume of the letters of German university students — "German Students' War Letters," translated and arranged from the original edition of Philipp Witkop by A. F. Wedd. The German Ministry of Education placed at the disposal of Prof. Witkop 20,000 letters. He made his own selection from these thousands and offers them as a Memorial to the many brave young men who, hating war, went out to face its dirt and terror, its suffering and death, because they thought the Fatherland had need of them and their sacrifice.

Those who may have looked upon the German people as unreasoning automatons, barbarians who blindly obeyed the orders of the slave-drivers who goaded them on, will find these letters of the students from all the universities of Germany, most revealing.

"The Menin Gate Memorial, on Menin Road where hundred of thousands passed through to the Ypres Salient records 56,000 British who fell from October 1914 to the night of Aug. 16, 1917. By the 6th of October, 1918, the Belgians and French were on the line Eleven days later the Belgians were in Ostende, and the British warships in the harbor. The Ypres Salient existed only as a battle-field and a memory.

Happiness

The note of happiness that marked the previous writings of Miss Helen Keller is continued in "Midstream," the story of her later life.

"I have no great adventures to record," she says, "no thrilling romances, no extraordinary successes. This book contains simply the impressions and feelings which have passed through my mind . . . My life is a 'chronicle of friendships.'"

These friendships, with Mark Twain, Alexander Graham Bell, the Carnegies, the movie stars of Hollywood and others, are revealed as Miss Keller tells of her various activities at home, on the stage and lecture platform and in the improvement of conditions among those who, like her, are blind and deaf.

Praise For Book

Philip Littell, former editor and critic, has come out strongly in praise of "Why Janet Should Read Shakespeare," the new book by Norman Hapgood which Century recently published. Writes Mr. Littell to Mr. Hapgood: "Your book does one of the—I mean THE—best services anything on Shakespeare can do for me, makes me want to read nearly all of him at once, a play a day, each play at a sitting. Your interest in him is astonishingly fresh, and you get it across to me. You leave me feeling younger and opener-eyed."

Error Goes On

Readers of Samuel Merwin's new novel, "Lady Can Do" (Houghton Mifflin company), may quite rightly be surprised when they discover the heroine taking a train for Long Island out of the Grand Central Station. This error escaped the editors for the Saturday Evening Post, the readers for Houghton Mifflin and the author himself until it was too late for a correction to be made. The strange part of it is that Mr. Merwin used to live on Long Island and never once thought of trying to get home via the Grand Central.

TO TERRACE LAND

Howard County Farmers Sold On Countouring

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

BIG SPRING, Nov. 2.—The farmers of Howard county realizing the importance of terracing and contouring their lands have placed applications with County Agent Bush for the terracing of more than 4,000 acres of land to be terraced this fall and next spring.

Terracing schools will be held in different parts of the county at which time farmers will be instructed in the work in order to get this amount of acreage terraced. The school will be held under the supervision of the county agent and by representatives of the Federal Land and Loan bank of Houston.

PRODUCER ANNOUNCED

GEORGETOWN, Tex., Nov. 2 (AP)—Completion of a small oil producer on the Fouse lease between Round Rock and Georgetown was announced Friday by J. Eugene Brown and the Ray Oil Co., of San Antonio. Oil was found at 150 feet. The drillers thought it came from the Edwards lime through a crevice following an igneous formation. The oil is a thirty gravity. A conference has been arranged to determine whether the well shall be shot.

Hungary Legation Picketed By Mobs

Delegation Protest Against Fascism And Hrothy Regime; Little Attention Is Attracted By Affair

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2 (AP).—A delegation in which women outnumbered men picketed the Hungarian legation for a short while today in protest against fascism and the Horthy regime in Hungary.

The demonstration in which committees representing the anti-Horthy league, the internation labor defense and the anti-fascist federation in New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington participated, was a small one and attracted little attention.

Placards Carried

The 16 picketers carried placards denouncing Admiral Horthy and demanding freedom for "political prisoners in Hungary." Two detectives and a bicycle policeman looked on.

Officials of the legation said Count Szechenyi, the Hungarian minister were absent from the legation. Shown a copy of a press statement issued by the committee in denunciation of the Horthy regime, the minister said he was "not interested."

The statement said the demonstration was to express the solidarity of workers and revolutionary intellectuals against fascism and every form of capitalists oppression in every country.

WOMAN'S STUDY CLUB

The Woman's Study club held its meeting Friday in the attractive home of Mrs. R. Jones Goode, with Mrs. R. L. Bowman co-hostess. The program was on Kipling's "The Light that Failed" and was very ably directed by Mrs. E. S. Smith. Nicholson.

The club elected Mrs. H. F. Pearson delegate, and Mrs. J. T. Howell as alternate to the state convention of Federated clubs at Mineral Wells November 12. Also Lubbock's invitation for the 1930 convention was endorsed by the club.

The Goode home was resplendent in lovely roses, dahlias and chrysanthemums and the Hallowe'en suggestion was used in serving refreshments of sandwiches, coffee and upside down cake to Mesdames R. L. WASHINGTON, Nov. 2 (AP)—Senator Brookhart of Iowa was asked Friday by United States Attorney Leo A. Rover to appear before a District of Columbia grand jury which is engaged in studying liquor conditions in Washington.

The subpoena issued by the attorney directed the Iowan to come before the jury on Wednesday.

The senator recently told the senate he had attended a party at a Washington hotel several years ago at which liquor was served. The dinner, he said, was given for incoming members of congress.

Subsequently, Brookhart said unless action was taken before December the statute of limitations might bar any action the grand jury might wish to take. Rover previously had invited the senator to appear before the grand jury, but the suggestion was ignored.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2 (AP)—The Kuo Min news agency Friday made public a Shanghai dispatch saying that Tengfeng, a strategic city in western Tonan, had been captured by government troops. The rebellious Kuominchun, "People's Army", was described as withdrawing toward Loyang before the advance of the nationalist troops.

CELEBRATE GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY

J. T. Simpson, aged 76, and his wife, 66, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary Sunday, Oct. 27, quietly at their home with a few of their relatives as guests, while rains falling throughout the day kept their daughters, sons and grandchildren who lived out of town away.

Those present at the entertainment Sunday were Mr. and Mrs. Hub Davis, and Fred and Sus Shaw.

A quiet dinner was held at the noon hour during the day, following the church services in the morning at which the old couple attended. The evening entertainment consisted mostly of "just talking" as the honoree on the male side stated. Bringing up old times of fifty years ago and reliving them again before a cozy gas fire occupied the guests for the large part of the evening.

Simpson can tell many interesting tales of incidents that have occurred during the past. He is truly a Texas man, having lived for 69 years of his life in this state, all but eight of his 76.

Mexican General Escapes Death By Assisination

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 2 (AP)—General Antonio Rios Zertuche, former chief of police in Mexico City, narrowly escaped death by assassination Friday at his haciendo near Monclova in the state of Coahuila. Two bullets pierced his hat and three others struck his automobile of seven pistol shots fired by the assailant.

General Rios in asking friends here to urge the president to give him guarantees of safety gave the name of his attacker as Jesus Verdusco but did not explain the attack further.

He was a close friend of the late General Alvaro Obregon and was named chief of police immediately after the former president was assassinated in July last year. He conducted the investigation which led to the execution of Jose Leon Toral for the murder of Obregon and resigned his police post some months ago.

One of the southwest's oldest stagecoach stations, near San Antonio, Tex., still is in service.

Guests were forced, despite screams of protest, to tread precarious paths of cotton seed, bed springs, etc., to the accompaniment of blood curdling shrieks and wails from unseen Hallowe'en imps.

Some of the leaguers were very attractively costumed, forming a picturesque background for the ghost stories told by the light of a lone candle. Two features of the entertainment program were the fortune telling and the harvest tournament.

Terrell Opposes Texas' Plan For Prison Operation

Move Will Cost State More Than $10,000,000, Says Commissioner Of Agriculture In Statement

(By Associated Press)

AUSTIN, Nov. 2.—Declaring that he favors centralizing the penitentiary on farm lands now owned by the state, George B. Terrell, commissioner of agriculture, said in a statement recently that "any attempt to go into manufacturing on a large scale with convict labor, using costly machinery, will cost the state $10,000,000 during the next few years with no assurance that the state will ever recoup the losses."

"The legislature seems to be the only hope now of averting greater losses than we already have in prison management," Terrell said.

"Manufacturing of cement for road and bridge building, automobile number plates, certain articles for the use of the prison system and state institutions might be profitable, and this, with intelligent and capable farm management may eventually put the system on a self supporting basis. Demagogic, destructive criticism should have no place in solving this problem. It should be handled with care and caution combined with capable management."

He said that if the central prison plant is to be located away from the major farming operations, as now indicated by a majority expression of the locating commission, it should be relocated in Huntsville, where it is now, on land owned by the state.

"There is no use in buying lands at exorbitant prices when the state owns plenty of better land," he said. "There is no economical or financial reason for locating the main prison buildings near Austin.

"The legislature should go slow about selling the large farms below Houston as there are oil fields around them and they will be developed some day when the big oil operators get possession of the state lands, or when they are convinced the state will not sell them. These farms will be worth millions to the state in the future. They are now the richest farming lands in the state and should not be sold for a song."

He said his investigations for many years had convinced him against his will that farming operations must always be the major business of the prison system.

Debate Schedule At Texas Tech Complete For Year

Six Colleges Of Texas Are To Be Engaged In Talk

Forensics Here Gaining In Popularity, Head Of The College Speech Group, Is Certain; Many Like It

TEXAS TECH has a full schedule in debate for the year according to Miss Anna Jo Pendleton, instructor in speech. It includes debates with Simmons university, Abilene; West Texas State Teachers college, Canyon; Abilene Christian college, Abilene; McMurray college, Abilene; Texas Christian university, Fort Worth; Baylor university, Waco. Other dates may be made at a later time according to Miss Pendleton.

There are seven students in the college who were active in debate work last year. These are Hal Lary, Sydney Knowles, Wayne Castleberry, Willard Nott, Alvis Ellis, Don Wellman and Lizzie Belle Clements. Members of this group engaged in forensic contests with eight schools last year and won five of them.

Twenty-five Enrolled

This year there are about twenty-five enrolled in debate class; about forty students, interested in this line of work, are out for the debate team. According to Miss Pendleton there is much good material in the freshman group, many of whom have had experience in high school encounters.

One of the questions to be discussed this year is: "Resolved, The Nation Should Adopt a Plan of Complete Disarmament Excepting the Forces Necessary for Police Purposes." The purpose of the inter-college debates is to help keep up a friendly interest in other schools besides that aroused through athletic contests, according to Miss Pendelton.

Question Is Studied

A student does not memorize his speech when he prepares to give it in a contest. He studies the question and is able to discuss it from the platform. It is not the aim of the college to put out a winning team, although we do like to, but it is the aim of the college to offer students all of the training along that line that they are interested in receiving. There are about twelve girls who are working toward the girls team. They have only one contest. It is with the girls of Simmons university.

"I consider that the value the courses now offered in debate is a distinct drawing card to the attendance of the college. Many high school pupils watch with interest the activities of debate here," said Miss Pendleton.

Expenses Are Split

Expenses of the teams who visit Tech are usually paid by the visiting team while the home team pays for entertainment and the cost of the debate. Expenses of the Tech team who go to other schools are paid from an allowance given them from the Student Activity tickets.

"The immediate value of debate to the public is shown in the fact that public questions, of local and national interest are always used as debate material. It helps to crystalize the public opinion on the merits of the question," Miss Pendleton thinks. "There are three types of debate in Tech. One is the Freshman in which freshman debate with freshman, the second is the regular Varsity debate team and the third the girls team. So far there has been only one women's debate on the campus but a greater program is being planned for them. In practicing the students debates are held between boys and girls.

Humor Is Popular

There is a growing tendency toward humor but as yet there have been no strictly humorous debates held on the Tech campus."

Students gather information on the questions from current magazines and books, both source and specific. Miss Pendleton states that faculty members of other departments are always glad to discuss the questions with the students. Contests are judged in three ways. One of them is the audience decision, the second is a critic judge and the third is by three judges. All judges are appointed with the consent of the visiting team.

According to Miss Pendleton interest in debate grows stronger every year that it is offered on the campus.

Tennessee Man Runs An Auto For What-Have-You Agency; "Tradin' Claude" Reeder Exchanges Used Cars for Mules, Monkeys, Crops, Clothing--Anything

By NEA Service.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 2. — Residents of East Tennessee desiring a new or used automobile need not have the money to buy it. All they need is anything of value and "Tradin' Claude" Reeder will exchange one of his motor cars for it.

"Tradin' Claude" is the popular nickname for Col. Claude S. Reeder, president of the Cherokee Motor company, automobile dealers, of this city. Officially Colonel Reeder sells Studebaker and Erskine automobiles, but he's best known for the unusual trades he makes in the sale of these cars and used cars that come his way.

For the last eight years, Colonel Reeder has been trading his cars for anything of value—crops and clothing, mules and monkeys, coal and diamonds, cemetery lots, abandoned houses, cattle, horses, farm machinery, pianos, radioes and whatnot.

As a result "Tradin' Claude" believes he has solved what is known as the used-car-problem among automobile men in his own unusual way.

His Cars Keep Moving.

"In the last eight years since we have been trading," says the amiable colonel, "we have sold 8,000 automobiles this way. And we have been able to keep our secondhand cars down to practically nothing."

Yet the stock of knick-knacks and creatures that he has accumulated in payment for these automobiles has also been sold out almost to the last item. In turn, Colonel Reeder says he has come out on the profitable end.

"The idea of trading for anything," explained "Tradin' Claude," "started by the fact that we had a houseful of second-hand cars that were not moving. We ran a full page ad, addressing it to the farmers around Knoxville, and asking them to bring in their mules or old machinery and anything of value they had to trade for a car.

"The day set for the trade looked like a carnival. It was in the fall and, of course, the farmers did not want to carry their stock over the winter and feed them. At that time I owned a farm close to town where we could take the traded stock and hold it for a good market."

Has Own Expert Appraisers.

In order to be sure he isn't being cheated in a stock deal, he has engaged the expert services of J. L. Cox, who knows the stock trading game from A to Z. Cox does the appraising, Reeder completes the sale.

The first carnival of trade led to so many others of different varieties, that today "Tradin' Claude" Reeder can't think of an item which has not been traded for one of his cars.

A man came to him with a large diamond, and went out with a used automobile and $300 to boot! Recently he took over a cemetery lot in trade and about $850 worth of coal.

One of his unique trading activities is that in which he deals in crop futures, for the price of a new or used car An expert tobacco appraiser surveyed the growing crops of farmers in the district and on this man's appraisals Reeder took over future deliveries of tobacco for his automobiles, paying the farmers the difference in money. The crop, when harvested, was delivered to a tobacco warehouse where Reeder has already arranged its sale.

"We traded a second hand hearse for a carload of sweet potatoes," he recalls. "We found a market for the potatoes before the carload arrived, in a construction camp. A carnival was in town and the owners heard of our advertisement. We traded a car for a bear and two monkeys which in turn we sold to another carnival company.

"We traded with a piano house for six pianos, and we found a ready market for these. We traded some of our cars for 100 suits of men's clothing and sold them through a fire sale in another store.

Abandoned Houeses and Rugs

"We traded a used car for 10 radios and ran an ad that cleaned these up. We traded a car for two houses that were going to be torn down and we sold the material off the ground right where it was. We traded a car and a truck for oriental rugs and found a ready market for these."

Through his wide acquaintance in this locality, Colonel Reeder has been able to keep in touch with the markets for everything which has come into his hands. When he couldn't make a quick sale of a traded material, he would take a credit memorandum for it and sell this.

"We are making trades daily for vacant lots and other real estate. We traded for all kinds of building material, lumber, roofing, cement, marble, glass and sold them to contractors.

"Our reputation as traders has spread over East Tennessee and we have calls daily for different commodities. A shipper had a standing order with us for mules to be delivered to a large plantation owner. We got these from a contractor for some cars and we sent them right over to the shipper, making a profit both ways."

Colonel Reeder's original motive was to keep down his used-car stock. He has done this, but he has also established a new kind of business—a combination automobile stock-produce and what-have-you exchange.

Women's Make-Up Blamed On Autos

By NEA Service.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2 — If it weren't for the autos, women would probably be without a lot of their cosmetics. For the auto necessitated large quantities of gasoline and in the cracking process, waste gases yielded a lot of make-up women use.

According to Gustav Egloff, in a report to the American Chemical society, these waste gases are a potential gold mine of various articles. From them are made cosmetics and medicines, lampblacks and hydrogen. And after all these products are taken out of the gases, there is enough left over to make 300,000,000 gallons of grain alcohol, or three times the amount now used in the United States.

Youngquist Named To Pro Law Post

Attorney General Of Minnesota Heads Enforcement Of Prohibition Laws; Is Native Of Sweden

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2. (AP)—C. Aaron Youngquist, attorney general of Minnesota, is to take over the prohibition enforcement post in the department of justice which Mabel Walker Willebrandt held for eight years.

Announcement of the selection of Youngquist a native of Sweden, was made today at the White House in a statement prepared by the department of justice and describing the new assistant attorney general as "dry politically and personally."

Minnesotans Control

The appointment of Youngquist gives the control of making the dry laws effective largely to Minnesotans, Attorney General Mitchell and James M. Doran, the prohibition commissioner, are from that state. Also, the prohibition law was written by another Minnesotan, Andrew J. Volstead, a former representative.

Appointment of Youngquist on the personal recommendation of Mitchell ended for the chief executive a quest which has been carried over several months since Mrs. Willebrandt resigned, and which resulted in a rather comprehensive survey of the country of an enforcement officer with a satisfactory record of achievement in making laws effective.

Children Like School Health Rule

Visit To Principal's Office Is Pleasure Now Since It Means Milk, Not Whipping, Health Nurse Reports

A passerby might wonder, if he chanced to peep into the window, just what would make a group of playful children so interested in visiting the office of the principal of the school.

Just before recess, say 10:30 in the morning, doesn't seem a pleasant time to be called before the head of the school for a morning misdemeanor, and in addition it's nothing to be so enthusiastic about.

They're After Milk

But that line the passerby chanced to see at the Sanders school was after food—milk and graham crackers.

When Mrs. Joe Smith, public school health nurse, examined the children at the Sanders school she found that 55 of them were ten per cent under the average weight. Through the committees which handled the milk and ice fund during the summer, a plan has been worked out so that milk is furnished for the children. So each day it's four gallons of milk consumed, or in other words, one-half a pint to each child.

And do they like it? Mrs. Smith answers that question by smiling and replying, "They ask for more."

Keller Promoted In Chrysler Co.

Former Vice-President Now General Manager Of All Divisions Of Chrysler Corporation

With Walter P. Chrysler's announcement of the promotion of K. T. Keller from vice-president in charge of production to vice-president and general manager of all divisions of the Chrysler Corporation, a genius in America's greatest industry has been rewarded for outstanding executive ability.

Since Mr. Keller's connection with the corporation, Chrysler Motors has leaped forward to a place among the three greatest producers of motor cars, and no small part of this achievement has been attributed to "K. T.," as he is known among all his associates. Between Mr. Chrysler and Mr. Keller is a bond of experience, manufacturing wizardry and enthusiastic idealism extending over many years.

Displayed Skill.

Mr. Keller stepped into his first major production responsibility at the Northway Motor company, where his skill in factory organization won his the position of superintendent of that company. This field of activity was interrupted for two years when Keller went to Indianapolis as master mechanic and assistant to the general manager of the Cole Motor Car company.

When Mr. Chrysler became first vice-president in charge of operations in General Motors, he immediately called Keller to Detroit as a member of his staff. Later on, with the rapid rise of the Chrysler business and the expansion of manufacturing plants, it was to K. T. Keller that Mr. Chrysler again turned.

Furs taken by North Carolina trappers annually are valued at more than $1,000,000. Opposssum and raccoon skins account for more than half the total value.

RECORD IS BROKEN

For th month of October, ending Thursday, Kuykendall Chevrolet company, local distributors, has enjoyed the greatest month's business since George P. Kuykendall entered the automobile business in Lubbock five years ago. This concern's record for the month, showing the sale of 68 new cars and 67 used machines, shows the phenominal growth of the organization under the careful guidance of a master automobile dealer.

IS LEADING AGENCY

A check-up over the southwestern region of the country gives Kuykendall Chevrolet a long margin over all keypoint agencies in the four states, included in the section from the standpoint of yearly quota. This means that the Lubbock agency sold a greater per cent of its yearly quota than any other leading point in the section. This includes Amarillo, Abilene, San Angelo, El Paso, Wichita, Fort Worth and Dallas.

CON[illegible] IS OVER

A Turkey and Beans contest between two groups of the Scoggin-Dickey retail sales force came to a close on the last day of October after a hectic period of two month's close competition. During this time the Oakland-Pontiac agency has enjoyed a remarkable business. The winners will eat turkey and the losers, beans at a banquet given by the management.

During the month of October, Scoggin-Dickey increased considerably their retail business volume over the previous month. Four Oakland and 10 Pontiacs were rolled from their show rooms for retail delivery. A greater number of high priced jobs were delivered during the past month than in September.

NEW CARS SOLD

Caprock Motor company, local De Soto distributors, announce the sale of three new cars during the last week. Morris Scrogin, of this city, purchased a De Soto coach. A De Soto sedan was delivered to Carl Heninger, professor of Romance languages at Texas Tech, and a De Soto sport coupe to W. W. Richerson, of this city.

NEW MODEL COMING

Concentrating on Nash sales and service, Ragland Motor company has entered into a period of prosperity. A sale launched by this concern recently has netted results far beyond the expectations of the management. The new Nash "8" is expected to arrive in Lubbock within a short time.

Six cars sold in one day is the record boasted by the Nash agency for last Monday. Five of these were used cars and one a new machine.

USED CARS MOVE

An increase in the sale of used cars was the feature of Kent Buick company's business for the month of October. Twenty-two second hand cars delivered in addition to nine new cars, according to Frank Kent, manager.

GOUGH KEEPS BUSY

The month of October was another busy month for Gough Motor company, local Studebaker distributors. Manager C. E. Gough has announced the sale of nine new cars and 23 used machines during the month. This record shows an increase in new cars over September but a decrease in sale of used cars.

Dallas shows 28% increase in EIGHTS!

Facts just obtained from 28 representative American cities indicate conclusively that the motoring public prefers the Eight to all other engine types. Take Dallas as an example: for the first 8 months of 1929, new cars with list prices above $1000 showed a 28 per cent increase in Eights and a 10 per cent decrease in Sixes!

At the famous Paris Salon this fall, 44 makes of eight cylinder cars were exhibited, compared with 27 last year.

Studebaker, world's largest producer of Eights, two years ago initiated this era of the inexpensive Eight with the champion Studebaker President which traveled 30,000 miles in 26,326 consecutive minutes.

And today, at customary six-cylinder prices, you can choose from three great lines of Studebaker Eights—holders of eleven world records for speed and endurance and more American stock car records than all other makes combined.

Get a smart, new, thrifty Studebaker Eight—backed by 77 years of manufacturing integrity—and your car will be worth more in the trade-in markets of the future.

Low Turnover Is Oakland Feature

Plant Efficiency Is Due To Skilled Workers Who Are Aided In Building Permanent Homes

The ancient adage that "a workman is no better than his tools" works both ways. The tools are no better than the workman upon whose skill their effectiveness depends.

The model plant of the Oakland Motor Car company has both. Its tools, equipment and machinery stand unsurpassed throughout the entire industry for accuracy and precision. And its factory personnel is composed largely of veteran "steady men"—experts by virtue of special training and long experience.

Workers Thrifty.

Gordon Lefebvre, vice-president in charge of operations, attributed the high efficiency of the Oakland-Pontiac factory in great part to the fact that most of its workers are thrifty "home bodies."

"Stability and permanence of the personnel are vitally important factors in the quality of the work turned out by any factory," said Mr. Lefebvre. "Our plant is staffed mostly by men who have been with us for years and who expect to remain with us for many more years to come. Our labor turn-over is exceptionally low.

Saving Fund Members.

"More than 90 per cent of our workers are members of the General Motors Savings Fund. And right now 652 of them are using the Savings Fund as a means of financing the purchase of homes.

"We believe it is just as important for our men to own homes as it is for them to have bank accounts. We encourage them to have both. Under the plan of the General Motors Savings Fund, each dollar deposited by the workman up to a certain amount, gives him an additional credit of at least 50 cents. At the end of five years he receives the entire sum, together with accrued interest."

Pertinent Facts About Automobiles By Israel Klein, Science Editor For NEA Service

BY ISRAEL KLEIN
Science Editor, NEA Service.

Motorists have asked me more than once why airplanes have to be equipped with an engine of different design from that of the automobile engine. To them it seems that the automotive power plant might do just as well for the airplane or that the more powerful airplane engine might enhance the performance of the automobile.

Here, however, are two entirely different types of transportation, each requiring its own peculiar means of motive power. Their requirements are such that each engine is efficient only in its place and would be altogether useless if transferred.

• • •

The basic difference between automotive and aircraft engines lies in the order of their requirements. Both types, of course, have exactly the same requirements for efficient and profitable operation. But they differ in that outside of only one, these requirements are reversed in order of importance.

That one requirement that is first of all in both automotive and airplane engines is reliability. Once the factor of reliability is cared for, however, the following factors vary in importance.

What is demanded of a good automobile engine in order of importance includes reliability, quietness, flexibility and smoothness, fuel economy and lastly low weight per horsepower.

The order of requirements for the aircraft engine is reliability, low weight per horsepower, fuel economy, flexibility and smoothness and lastly quietness.

• • •

No motorist could stand the noise of the airplane engine underneath his motor car's hood for any length of time. In order to muffle that noise, however, he has to sacrifice just those constructional features that go to make up low weight and greater sturdiness in the airplane engine, with increased power.

Cast iron cylinder blocks and connecting rods make for a quieter but much heavier engine. And since a minimum of weight is demanded for air transportation, quietness is sacrificed there.

The result is that the airplane engine can supply one horsepower of energy to only two to three pounds of its weight, while the automotive engine weighs ten pounds to the horsepower.

• • •

The wide range of power requirements needed for travel on the highways, where there are all sorts of hills and varying traffic conditions, is not needed in the air. So as flexible an engine as we use in our autos is not necessary in the airplane. The speed range for the aircraft engine is much more limited than that for the auto engine.

It would never do therefore to put an aircraft engine into our cars and try to move along in traffic, even though some way were found to minimize its noise. For just as soon as we tried to throttle down, the engine would set up a vibration that would shake our car and bodies to pieces. The airplane engine is vibrationless only within certain narrow limits. The automotive engine is vibrationless practically within all speed ranges.

This flexibility is attained, however, at the cost of more economical fuel consumption, for the higher the speed of the motor the more fuel we have to burn. Since there is no need for a varying speed engine in aircraft, the carburetion is fixed for most economical operation at a certain definite engine speed.

The aircraft carburetor, besides being set for definite speed limits, also has to have a compensating device for quick variations in altitude, which is not needed in automotive engines.

Double forced lubrication also is essential for airplane motors, with a pump forcing oil into the engine and another drawing the return oil back to the source of supply. That's positive lubrication, which is not so essential in automotive plants where there is an extra supply of oil underneath.

Borger Combed For Slugging Suspects

BORGER, Nov. 2. (AP)—County and city police tonight were combing Borger and vicinity for suspects following the slugging of Miss Pearl Throckmortin, a special nurse, here late last night. From her incoherent statements at the hospital, it was believed her attacker was a negro.

She was said to be gravely injured and possibly suffering from a fractured skull.

The physicians said she keeps repeating "two dollars is all I have now but if you wait until morning I may get some more."

Miss Throckmortin was discovered near the business district when lights of an automobile fell upon her. Doctors believed it would be 12 to 24 hours before she regained consciousness.

Chevrolet Downs "Hard Starting"

Cold Weather Driving Made More Pleasant After Experiments In 'Cold Room' Of Chevrolet Factory

DETROIT, Nov. 2.—To many automobile owners, "cold weather driving" and "hard starting" are synonymous.

It is true that an engine does not start as easily in winter as in summer, but a little care on part of the owner will go a long way toward minimizing the difficulty, Chevrolet Motor company engineers point out.

Since the inception of the Chevrolet car more than eighteen years ago, company engineers have been applying themselves to the problem of easier starting.

Use "Cold Room"

Making use of the "cold room" facilities of the General Motors research laboratories and working for hundreds of days in zero weather at the General Motors proving ground, Chevrolet technical men have been attacking the "cold motor" problem for many years.

In considering the case of the car that is difficult to start in cold weather, Chevrolet engineers call attention first to the rather obvious fact that an engine in good condition will perform all its functions, including starting, more satisfactorily than one that is out of adjustment.

Parts Have Role

The principal parts which have a direct bearing on the starting of an engine are: battery, starting motor, carburetor, spark plugs, ignition system and valves.

As the efficiency of the battery is materially reduced in cold weather, it should be given great consideration. If the electral system is weak, complete combustion cannot be obtained, therefore, before the start of winter, it is good preventive insurance to have some reputable electrical service station check over the battery, spark plugs and entire ignition system.

Byrne Named New Hudson Official

The Hudson Motor Car company announces the promotion of H. F. Byrne to service manager. In this capacity Mr. Byrne will asume the responsibility of directing the service operation on Hudson and Essex cars through a world wide dealer organization now numbering 6,000, the largest in Hudson's history.

A native of Dayton, Ohio, Mr. Byrne studied engineering at the University of Dayton, graduating in 1919. After a year devoted to post-graduate research work at Notre Dame, he became associated with the Davis Sewing Machine Co., as assistant chief engineer. He joined the Hudson technical staff in 1923.

The following year he was assigned to the service department and in 1925 his success in simplifying a number of complicated service operations won him promotion to the position of technical service manager in charge of a staff of 28 traveling representatives.

Most Critical And Expert Mechanical Audience In World Sets Approval On Engineering Features

KENOSHA, Wis., Nov. 2.—American motorists—at once the most expert and the most critical mechanical audience in the world—set their seal of unqualified approval on the advanced engineering features and designs revealed last week in the national introduction and display of the new Nash "400" Series cars for 1930.

Experts and car owners in every part of the country flocked to Nash salesrooms to examine the great new line, and it was significant of the overwhelming public interest that always attends announcements made by C. W. Nash that they studied mechanical details of the new Twin-Ignition Eight, the Twin-Ignition Six and Single Six groups as thoroughly as they did the beautiful new lines and advanced styles which mark the Salon bodies for the coming year. They found refinements and appointments in the new cars which create a standard of quality far beyond anything in the field, ad gained a new conception of the motoring luxury at moderate cost which is a foundation building stone in Nash success.

Setting the pace for all other low-priced sixes

The Coupe • Body by Fisher

IN EVERY phase of performance, today's Pontiac Big Six is setting the pace for all other low-priced sixes. The reasons are obvious. Its 200-cubic-inch L-head engine is the largest to be found in any six so low in price. Its carburetor is of the most advanced type, incorporating an accelerating pump for extra snap. A gasoline pump supplies the correct amount of fuel for any speed. Thermostatic control of water temperature keeps the engine operating at high efficiency at all times. Little wonder, then, that Pontiac is out-performing its field—

In Speed. The highest speed offered by any low-priced six—proved by the "fifth wheel," most accurate speed measuring device known to automotive engineers.

In Acceleration. The fastest acceleration provided by any low-priced six—this also proved by the scientifically accurate "fifth wheel."

In Safety. Because of its non-squeak, internal-expanding four-wheel brakes—its hardwood-and-steel body construction—its full tread axles, front and rear.

Furthermore, the Pontiac Big Six combines these superiorities with the equally important performance factors—smoothness, riding and handling ease and long life. In addition, it is remarkably economical to own and operate. Come in and let us give you figures which substantiate this statement. And bring your present car for our generous appraisal.
