Texas' Hispanic voters may be this year's 'sleeping giant'

By PHILLIP SWANN

WASHINGTON — You can't win in Texas without Hispanics. Gov. William Clements knows it and so does his opponent, Mark White. In fact, everyone knows it, except perhaps one group — the Hispanics themselves.

Election analysts predict that fewer Hispanics will vote this November than in last May's primaries.

"We still don't recognize that we have the potential to make the difference in elections," explans Hispanic Caucus Chairman Rep. Robert Garcia, D-N.Y.

Hispanics would seem to have good reason to flex their newly developed muscle at the polls this November. The Reagan administration has pushed through cuts of numerous special interest programs for Hispanics, such as legal services for the poor. And much of south Texas, where Hispanics outnumber whites, is in financial shambles largely because of the devaluation of the Mexican peso.

But many Texas political observers say that Hispanics do not believe such hotly contested races as Clements-White and Rep. Jim Collins' bid to unseat Sen. Lloyd Bentsen will have much of an impact on their lives.

"They see little difference in White and Clements," says Willie Velasquez of the Southwest Voters Registration Project, which is based in San Antonio. "Our polls show that Mexican-Americans see their problems at the local level, such as the school board. The statewide races don't do anything for them."

From Our Washington Bureau

Approximately 21 percent of the Texas electorate voted in last May's primaries, but nearly 27 percent of registered Hispanics cast their ballots. Those statistics would seem to indicate that there is a new, growing political awareness among Hispanics.

But there was a similiar voting pattern in 1978, the last non-presidential campaign year. Twenty-eight percent of the registered Hispanic voters turned out for the 1978 primaries, compared to a 32.7 percent turnout rate for all voters. But 42 percent of the electorate voted in the general election, while the Hispanic turnout dipped to 27 percent.

"In general elections, just about every group (has a higher turnout) except for Mexican-Americans," says Velasquez.

There seem to be two reasons why there is greater Hispanic participation in Texas primaries:

—There are usually more Hispanic candidates in the primaries, which in turn gives Hispanic voters a heartfelt reason to go to the polls. There are no

More striking urged

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Fugitive Solidarity leaders urged workers in four cities to stay home today in the second week of sometimes bloody protests over the government's banning of the independent labor union.

No new uprisings were reported over the weekend.

Sources with contacts among the underground union leadership said workers were asked to boycott their jobs in Warsaw, Gdansk, Krakow and Nowa Huta — the model Communist city where police killed a young steel-mill electrician during three days of rioting last week.

Worker compliance with other recent Solidarity strike appeals has been spotty and generally ignored in the capital.

Authorities said last Wednesday's shooting of 20-year-old Bodgen Wlosik remained under investigation. Earlier reports by the official PAP news agency said Wlosik was mortally wounded when a plainclothes policeman was attacked by demonstrators and opened fire in "self-defense."

Related Stories, Page 2C

Wlosik is the only officially acknowledged fatality in the new spate of unrest touched off by Parliament's Oct. 8 passage of a tough new labor law that banned Solidarity.

Witnesses said Nowa Huta, a Krakow suburb about 160 miles south of Warsaw, was virtually under police occupation as riot squads armed with automatic weapons patrolled the streets Sunday, allowing only small children to place flowers at the spot where Wlosik was shot.

Privately printed funeral notices posted in Nowa Huta said Wlosik would be buried this Wednesday, but official sources in Krakow said no firm date would be set until today. The sources, who requested anonymity, said they feared the funeral might cause tensions to escalate.

Wlosik was the 15th person reported killed in riots since the imposition of martial law Dec. 13, when Solidarity was suspended and hundreds of its leaders were interned, including union chief Lech Walesa.

Union militants staged the first and biggest strike protesting the outlawing of Solidarity last Monday at the sprawling Lenin Shipyards in the Baltic port of Gdansk.

Greetings for Gemayel

Lebanese President Amín Gemayel, right, greets Terence Cardinal Cooke Sunday upon the former's arrival in New York City. Gemayel, in the United States to address the United Nations General Assembly today and meet with President Reagan and Secretary of State George Shultz in Washington, D.C., Tuesday, is on his first trip abroad since being elected president last month.

Gemayel demands troops' withdrawal

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Lebanese President Amin Gemayel, declaring outsiders converted his country from a haven of peace to an arena of terror, today demanded that all foreign troops leave Lebanon.

"I call for the immediate and unconditional withdrawal of all non-Lebanese forces from Lebanon," he told the 157-nation General Assembly, drawing 25 seconds of applause.

"I call upon the world community to help Lebanon regain its real independence and rebuild its economy."

Gemayel, delivering his speech in English, said: "Competing ideologies in the Arab world, the Palestinian armed and uncontrolled presence in our midst, the recurring Israeli invasions and incursions into our land" contributed to "a continuing state of war in Lebanon since 1975."

"The war claimed the lives of more than 100,000 citizens," he said. "It destroyed cities, towns and villages. It brought foreign troops into our land. It divided our people and converted Lebanon from a haven for culture and peace into an arena for terror and violence...

"In the name of the Lebanese people, I want to tell you: We have had enough. Enough of bloodshed, enough of destruction, enough of dislocation and despair.

"Each counry enjoys internal sovereignty. So should we! Each country depends on an effective army to defend its independence. So should we!" the 40-year-old president said.

He called for a settlement between the Palestinians and the Israelis that would give both full rights.

"As we wish to live in peace and freedom in our land," he said, "so should the Palestinians live in peace and freedom and self-determination in their land, Palestine," he said.

"As we cherish our independence, we also cherish the hope that Palestinians and Israelis, with the support of the world community, will reach a settlement that will allow them both to enjoy the fullness of rights."

His half-hour speech was interrupted 10 times by applause and got 30 seconds of applause at the conclusion.

Gemayel, on his first official visit to the United States since taking office 25 days ago, was expected to make the same demands later today before the U.N. Security Council.

He is scheduled to meet with President Reagan on Tuesday in Washington, discussing efforts toward getting Syrian, Israeli and Palestinian forces out of Lebanon. The United States, which with France and Italy have stationed peacekeeping forces in Beirut at the request of the Lebanese government, has been attempting to mediate a withdrawal of the other forces.

Troops may pull out soon

By BARRY SCHWEID

WASHINGTON (AP) — If all the pieces fall into place, the United States could be ready to announce an agreement on the withdrawal of all foreign forces from Lebanon by the end of the week.

That would allow the Reagan administration to shift its attention to finding a way to open negotiations on Palestinian self-rule.

The principal sticking point on the pullout plan is Israel's insistence that the Palestine Liberation Organization leave first.

Lebanese President Amin Gemayel, who also wants PLO forces out of the country, is apt to support the Israeli position when he meets with President Reagan on Tuesday.

It would then be up to Gemayel to use his influence with Syria to persuade the PLO to exit before the Israelis and Syrians.

Gemayel is expected to assure Reagan that Lebanese troops will be able to maintain order after the Israelis depart. That peacekeeping role in Beirut, the Lebanese capital, is now being filled by U.S. Marines, French and Italian troops.

During Tuesday's visit, Gemayel probably will be offered sizable U.S. aid for post-war reconstruction.

Peter McPherson, the administrator of the Agency for International Development, will return to Lebanon soon to make another assessment of the situation. He has been there three times over the last several months.

Having made progress on other parts of the plan during talks here last week, Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir is ready to return from a sidetrip to Costa Rica if the agreement can be wrapped up during Gemayel's visit.

Administration officials say none of the Israeli conditions presented "insurmountable problems," but the timing of the PLO pullout was difficult. U.S. and Israeli spokesmen said Shamir's talks with Vice President George Bush, Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger went well.

A withdrawal agreement would set the stage for an attempt to reopen negotiations over the Palestinians.

Reagan will receive an Arab delegation on Friday, getting their views on his "fresh start" proposals for a settlement.

U.S. threatens to leave U.N. agency

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Delegates to a U.N. telecommunications agency meeting opened debate today on a resolution to oust Israel and the United States vowed to walk out and withhold financial support if it passes.

Michael Gardner, chief of the 28-member delegation, said the Algerian-sponsored resolution is illegal, illogical and unreasonable.

He said the U.S. delegation would "immediately and permamently" leave the technical conference and that the American government would "suspend all, I repeat, all financial support" to the 157-member International Telecommunications Union if the anti-Israeli resolution is approved.

The United States provides $3.2 million a year, or about 7 percent, of the ITU's budget. The ITU normally deals with such technical issues as allocation of short-wave radio frequencies and the United States maintains the resolution, introduced because of Israel's invasion of Lebanon, has no place on the agency's agenda.

The debate was interrupted by a statement from the ITU's international law adviser, West German Alfons Noll, who said the resolution did not conform with the ITU's convention and should be considered illegal.

If the resolution does come to a vote, it would be the first test of strength of anti-Israel sentiment in the United Nations following a U.S. threat to withdraw from the world body if Israel is expelled from the U.N. General Assembly.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz said Saturday that the United States would quit the assembly if Israel were ousted and "withhold payments to the United Nations until Israel's right to participate is restored."

The United States contributes 25 percent of the annual U.N. budget.

Clements, White both consider debate success

DALLAS (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements and challenger Mark White shook hands and came out singing — their own praises — in a rather subdued third gubernatorial debate where only "politician" was slung as a dirty word.

"I'm a businessman — not a career politician," Clements said, invoking his oft-used campaign one-liner.

"The governor prefers to play politics instead of getting laws on the books," White countered.

Both men claimed victory after Saturday's debate, the last in a scheduled series of televised exchanges between the incumbent Republican governor and his Democratic challenger, who currently is the state's attorney general.

Each used the hour-long format to answer questions with their campaign promises and point out the other's shortcomings.

Clements contended White was a "poor to mediocre" attorney general who, as a gubernatorial candidate, has not come up with plans to deal with essential issues — including teacher pay raises, immigration or funding for state highways.

"Those are all nice words," he said at one point, after White answered a question, "but there are no solutions there."

White refuted Clements' repeated statement that as governor he represented "all Texans."

Bess Truman dies at 97

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Bess Truman, the nation's oldest former first lady and the lifelong sweetheart President Harry S. Truman called "The Boss," died early today. She was 97.

The Truman family physician, Dr. Wallace Graham, said Mrs. Truman died of congestive heart failure. Research Medical Center said she was pronounced dead on arrival at the hospital at 4:38 a.m.

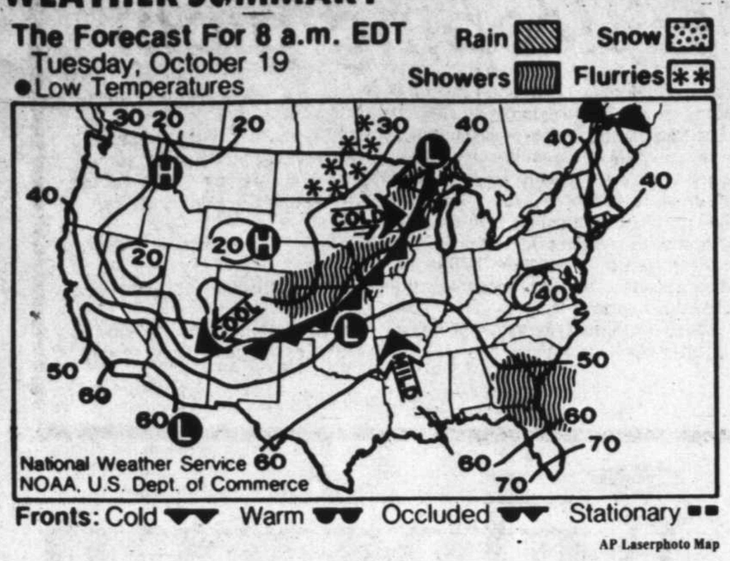

Mrs. Truman lived longer than any other former first lady.

Mary Scott Harrison, the second wife of Benjamin Harrison, died in 1948 at age 90. Edith Wilson, wife of Woodrow Wilson, died at age 89 in 1961. The oldest living first lady is 70-year-old Pat Nixon.

Autumn making a comeback

After summerlike temperatures this weekend, Tuesday's cooler temperatures should remind us that it really is fall.

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, it is expected to be fair and cooler beginning Tuesday.

The low tonight should be in the mid-50s with southerly winds 5-10 mph.

The high Tuesday is expected to stabilize in the mid-70s with southwesterly winds 10-15 mph, picking up in the afternoon and becoming northerly 10-20 mph.

Sunday's high of 85 was warm, but not as hot as the record high of 95 set in 1964. The overnight low of 53 fell short of the record low of 37 set in 1968.

State's Hispanic voters potentially strong bloc

Hispanics on either the Republican or Democratic state campaign tickets this November.

—Campaigns in heavily Democratic Texas are usually won or loss in the primaries. Hispanics, who turn out in large numbers to elect sympathetic candidates in local primary elections, believe they have less at stake in the general election.

But Texas candidates who are running statewide races can hardly afford to write off the Hispanic vote. In fact, Texas gubernatorial candidates are making strong pitches to woo the "sleeping giant."

In capturing the state house in 1978, Clements carried 26 percent of the Hispanic vote, a strong showing for a GOP candidate. But it is questionable whether the governor can be re-elected with the same total, says Clements spokesman Tony Garrett, who adds the campaign is shooting for 40 percent.

"The sheer numbers say they (Hispanics) are a strong force that you must go after," says Tabor Ward, Texas GOP communications director.

Mexican-Americans, who make up about 21 percent of the state population, undoubtedly can make the difference in a close race. Approximately 830,000 Texas Hispanics are registered to vote, an increase of 300,000 since 1976.

Moreover, Hispanic advocacy groups, such as the League of United Latin American Citizens, have developed highly sophisticated campaigns to help candidates who support "the Hispanic cause." LULAC, which is based in Corpus Christi, has even established a political action commitee.

"We're still a young community, just starting out," says Garcia. "It's going to take some time. But look out. By the year 2000, Texas will be at least 30 to 40 percent Hispanic. That's a helluva voting block."

Missing tourists reported seen in Zimbabwe, officials say

WALNUT CREEK, Calif. (AP) — The U.S. State Department says it has received a report that six tourists kidnapped in Zimbabwe have been seen by villagers, but the sighting hasn't been confirmed.

Brooks Baldwin, the father of one of the six, said Sunday a State Department official telephoned him Friday night at his home here, 20 miles east of San Francisco.

Opponents of Zimbabwe Prime Minister Robert Mugabe abducted two Americans, Brett Baldwin and Kevin Ellis; Britons James Greenwell and Martin Hodgson and Australians Tony Bagzel and William Butler on July 23.

Baldwin, a real estate broker, said the State Department told him villagers reported seeing the six tourists "along with their captors."

He said State Department officials have contacted him almost every day with news, usually scanty, of developments.

State Department spokeswoman Susan Pittman said Sunday the department "had a report that the six had been sighted, however, it is unconfirmed and unsubstantiated."

The kidnappers demanded the release of two people held by the government and threatened to kill the hostages, who were seized on their way to Zimbabwe's most famous tourist attraction, Victoria Falls.

The abductors, reportedly six in number, support Joshua Nkomo, leader of a party opposing the government. They stopped the tourists' minibus at a roadblock 50 miles northwest of Bulawayo.

Despite a widespread search by the army, police and security forces, the six tourists remain missing. There have been rumors of their murders, but no bodies have been found.

Debate crowd grows

By The Associated Press

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, a 10-year veteran of Texas' second highest executive post, says his record of improving the state's fiscal management should earn him re-election.

But Hobby's Republican challenger, George Strake, contends it's time for a fresh face and new ideas in the office.

Hobby and Strake appeared Saturday night on a question-and-answer program broadcast statewide on public television.

The candidates for state treasurer also engaged in a brief, televised debate that included the Libertarian Party hopeful.

Strake complained the 15-minute program was too short and offered to pay for a one-hour broadcast debate with Hobby.

"George, 15 minutes is plenty of time for you to display your knowledge of state government," Hobby countered.

Strake, a former Texas Secretary of State, said Hobby's 10-year tenure as lieutenant governor was too long — and Hobby had too little to show for it.

During the decade, crime has risen, state spending and personnel have increased and highways have deteriorated, Strake said.

But Hobby said experience in the lieutenant governor's job "is a distinct asset to the taxpayers."

Hobby said he had begun a system under which all state agencies are required to justify their entire budgets — and not just spending increases — every two years.

Strake called Hobby a liberal, citing Hobby's support of Democratic presidential candidate George McGovern in 1972, a re-election endorsement from Texas AFL-CIO President Harry Hubbard and his fund-raising efforts for the American Civil Liberties Union.

Hobby said the ACLU "defends the constitutional rights of the citizens of this state."

"If he doesn't agree with the constitution, (Strake) would have real trouble taking the oath of office if he won," Hobby said.

Hobby waived his closing statement in order to call for the adoption Nov. 2 of a constitutional amendment that would raise the welfare payments ceiling in Texas.

The incumbent said the current monthly payment of $32 per child is too low and contended an increase is "a matter of humanity and good conscience."

Strake and Hobby had the debate to themselves. Libertarian Party candidate Laurel Kay Freeman was due to give birth and could not appear.

Libertarian Alma Kucymbala, an accountant, joined Republican Allen Clark and Democrat Ann Richards in their debate in the campaign for state treasurer.

Ms. Kucymbala proposed the greatest departures from current state practices — including competitive bidding among banks and an end to discretionary decisions about which banks get what sums of money from the state.

Clark said his West Point training has given him discipline and the loss of his legs in Vietnam has given him compassion. Clark also contended his service as a top aide to Gov. Bill Clements has qualified him for election to the treasurer's post.

Clark said he would apply business principles he learned as a banker managing investments to the management of state funds.

Ms. Richards, a former Travis County commissioner, said state money "is not like private business money."

"It belongs to the people and we don't make the sort of speculative investments we do in business," she said.

Both Richards, who defeated incumbent Treasurer Warren Harding in the May primary, and Clark said they would favor an index system so that money the state earned on its deposits would be more closely tied to prevailing interest rates.

Former First Bess Truman and her husband, former President Harry Truman, are shown in February 1958 during a visit to Washington, D.C. Mrs. Truman, whom Truman said was his only love, was pronounced dead early this morning upon arrival in a Kansas City, Mo., hospital. She was 97.

Former first lady Bess Truman dies

recent years by a variety of ailments — arthritis, abdominal stress and high blood pressure. On Sept. 2, she was rushed to the hospital from her home in nearby Independence, Mo., with internal bleeding.

GRAHAM SAID the bleeding, which he attributed to an ulcer in her duodenum, stopped the next day, but Mrs. Truman was not released from the hospital until Sept. 24.

She was hospitalized for six days in August for treatment of hyperkalemia, a potassium buildup caused by diminished kidney function.

Mrs. Truman outlived her husband by nearly 10 years. Friends say their childhood romance never flagged — that he was the only man she ever really loved and she the only sweetheart he ever had.

In 53 years of marriage, Mrs. Truman much enjoyed the traditional woman's role of the quiet and unassuming but thoroughly devoted wife and mother. But Truman said she was his closest confidante and adviser on every important thing he ever did — including decisions leading to his upset victory over Thomas E. Dewey in 1948.

"I never wrote a speech without going it over with her," he said of the woman who shared his rise from county official to the U.S. Senate to president.

To some, Mrs. Truman's dignity and reserve left the impression that she was austere, withdrawn and colorless, but those intimates entitled to call her Bessie knew her as warm and gracious, witty and wise.

SHE SAID in 1948 that being first lady required "good health and a sense of humor." Of criticism of her husband, she said once, "after 25 years in politics, I've learned to accept it — almost."

And despite her eagerness to avoid publicity for herself, Mrs. Truman became known as a gracious White House hostess and a woman with an amazing ability to remember names.

Observers regarded it as characteristic that she reduced the White House staff by almost half after her husband became president. Guests described her as a housekeeping genius, both in the White House and at the family mansion in Independence.

Known as independent and athletic during her girlhood in Independence — where one magazine writer reported she was the only girl able to whistle through her teeth — Bess Truman was the only daughter in a socially prominent family. She was born in the three-story Victorian mansion in Independence that her grandfather built in 1865, and it was her home for nearly all her life.

Although primarily a homemaker and helpmate, she was active in social organizations, and did draw a salary for a time — she spent two years on Truman's Senate staff as a clerk and secretary, at $4,500 a year.

AFTER LEAVING the White House, Mrs. Truman said she missed some things about life there — notably its able gardeners and household staff — but not the "big receptions where hundreds and hundreds of strange hands had to be shaken," the mountains of mail and many appointments.

The Trumans retired to Independence from Washington, and in 1955 she told of her unsuccessful efforts to get her husband to put their power mower to use — a tale that strikes a familiar chord for followers of the scrappy former president.

"Finally he did, 11 o'clock on a Sunday morning, with all the Methodists and Baptists going by our house on the way to church," Mrs. Truman recalled. "There's not a doubt in my mind he planned the whole thing deliberately to save himself from ever touching that mower again. And he hasn't."

Born Elizabeth Virginia Wallace on Feb. 13, 1885, a birthday Truman said he could always remember because it fell before Valentine's Day, Mrs. Truman was known as Bess to the world and Bessie to intimates.

Her husband's will specified that she be buried beside him in the garden of the Truman Library, a few blocks from the family mansion. With her name and other pertinent information, Truman directed that the inscription on his wife's slab read: "First Lady, The United States of America, April 12, 1945-January 20, 1953."

FIRST LADY was not a role Bess Truman sought. When Truman was nominated as Franklin Roosevelt's running mate in 1944, Mrs. Truman said she didn't want her husband to be vice president but was "reconciled" to the idea. The Democrats won, and within a few months, Roosevelt was dead and Truman was the nation's 33rd chief executive.

"I've had several moments of great joy...but the greatest joy of them all was when my sweetheart from 6 years old consented to become Mrs. Truman," Truman wrote in a 1958 letter to Arkansas Superior Court Justice Edward McFaddin published in "Off the Record, the Private Papers of Harry S. Truman."

Truman wrote that Mrs. Truman had been willing to marry before the end of World War I, "but I thought that I might be legless, eyeless or under some other handicap and we put it off..." They were wed June 28, 1919, after he returned from wartime service in Europe.

By the time Truman died at age 88 on Dec. 26, 1972, arthritis in her right leg had advanced to the point where Mrs. Truman had curtailed her activities.

Nevertheless, she built a new life with the help of a few close friends. It was perhaps a mark of fastidiousness rather than vanity that she continued to make regular trips to the beauty parlor.

OCCASIONALLY, ON a good day, she would go for a drive, or to the library, or meet a friend for dinner at a restaurant. But even these outings diminished.

Except for trips to her hairdresser, Mrs. Truman rarely ventured from her home after age 90. Her last public functions were funerals — her husband's and those of Vietta Garr, a longtime family cook and maid, and Paul "Mike" Westwood, Truman's bodyguard.

In the summer of 1976, Mrs. Truman was hospitalized for arthritis. After returning home, she agreed, at the insistence of her only child, Margaret Truman Daniel, that she no longer would climb the long staircase but would sleep in a downstairs bedroom.

A housekeeper came in to do the cleaning and the cooking. And the Secret Service was on guard.

A routine checkup in March 1978 turned into a four-week hospital stay and Mrs. Truman was hospitalized twice more that year for a variety of ailments.

Tylenol incident probably inspiration for copycats

By The Associated Press

Tainted eye drops, mouthwash and nasal spray were reported found in scattered cities over the weekend and authorities attributed the tampering to copycats set off by the deaths of seven people who took poisoned Extra-Strength Tylenol.

Lavoris mouthwash was pulled from the shelves of a store in Clearwater, Fla., and bottles of Neo-Synephrine nasal spray were removed and later restored to a drug store shelf in Las Vegas, Nev., in separate incidents.

Four women in Palm Beach County, Fla., complained that their eyes burned after using Visine A.C. eyedrops. Two of the bottles used by the women came from the same lot as two bottles found to contain hydrochloric acid in a similar incident in Mesa, Colo., authorities said.

Also, a 19-year-old Kentucky man was arrested Sunday and charged with extortion after FBI agents investigated a letter that warned a grocery store of neurotoxic poison in certain foods. The letter demanded $5,000 to identify which foods had been poisoned.

Lawrence Maynard of Louisville was arrested at a telephone booth where the extortionist had demanded the money be left, said James Yelvington, special agent in charge of the FBI in Kentucky.

In Iowa, a rural couple was charged with extortion after grocers received threats that food items would be injected with pesticide unless $800,000 was paid.

James Raymond Whitford, 35, an unemployed creamery worker, remained in the Linn County jail Sunday night in lieu of $50,000 bond. His wife, Donna Mae, 36, was released on her own recognizance.

Police said the Whitfords were arrested Friday near the site where bogus cashier's checks were left according to the extortionist's instructions.

The rash of product-tampering followed the deaths of seven people in the Chicago area who had taken Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules that had been tainted with cyanide.

Police in Clearwater said that whoever put acid in bottles of Lavoris mouthwash may have gotten the idea from the Chicago killings.

Four bottles of cinnamon-flavored Lavoris pulled from shelves of an Albertson store in Belleair Bluffs had been laced with muriatic acid, authorities said. Muriatic acid is the commercial name for liquid hydrochloric acid and is commonly used to bleach rust spots off concrete.

A tourist from Massachusetts suffered mouth burns Thursday after taking a swig of contaminated Lavoris purchased at the store.

"I swirled some (Lavoris) in my mouth and I could feel the burning start, but I couldn't get it out of my mouth fast enough," said Jim Balzotti of Pembroke, Mass., resting in his Clearwater motel room.

Balzotti said the tainted mouthwash dissolved the finish off a motel vanity where he spit it out.

Dr. Hu Chien Yeh said Balzotti suffered second- and third-degree burns on his tongue and lips. "It is fortunate that person did not swallow the Lavoris. He could have died," Yeh said.

Malcolm MacGruer, a spokesman for Richardson-Vicks Inc. of Wilton, Conn., the maker of the mouthwash, called the contamination an isolated incident.

In Las Vegas, bottles of Neo-Synephrine nasal spray were removed from a store where a woman said she purchased a bottle that contained lighter fluid.

But the nasal spray was restored to store shelves later Sunday after authorities determined that the lighter fluid was inserted "probably at the point of use and not at the point of sale," said Dr. Otto Ravenholt, head of the Clark County health district.

Norma Hall, 38, was examined and released at a local hospital but doctors found no sinus burns or other evidence of damage from the nasal spray.

Her bottle of Neo-Synephrine was turned over to local police and the Metro Criminal laboratory determined it was 50 percent lighter fluid.

An answering service for Winthrop Laboratories, a division of Sterline Drug Inc., the drops' maker, said no officials were available for comment early today.

Meanwhile, officials in Palm Beach County, Fla., were checking Visine A.C. eye drops for possible contamination after four women complained that their eyes burned after using the product.

A Grand Junction, Colo., man suffered corneal burns Oct. 11 after using Visine A.C. eye drops that contained hydrochloric acid. Two of the bottles used by the Florida women were from the same lot number — 122 — as two bottles contaminated with acid in Colorado.

President and Mrs. Reagan make a smiling return to Washington Sunday, following a weekend stay at the presidential retreat in Camp David, Md. The first couple arrived by helicopter at the Pentagon rather than the White House, where the grounds were open for autumn tours.

Democrats plan back-to-work bills

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional Democrats are ignoring President Reagan's call to "stay the course" with his economic policies, and are promising instead to push back-to-work legislation when the House and Senate return after the Nov. 2 elections.

Democratic leaders, kicking off the last two full weeks before Election Day, sent a letter to all House Democrats today belittling Reagan's view of the economic situation as "pie-in-the-sky optimism."

"When we return to work Nov. 29, we must give top legislative priority to job-creation and economic recovery," said the letter signed by Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass.; Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, and Majority Whip Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash.

"President Reagan's televised remarks make it clear that he disagrees with this Democratic agenda," the letter said.

"We believe that the results of the Nov. 2 election will make it clear that the American people vastly prefer a back-to-work program to the president's stay-the-course philosophy."

That would appear to be throwing down the gauntlet to Reagan, who said in his "non-partisan" economic progress report to the nation last week that "America is recovery-bound and the world knows it."

Reagan cautioned against "listening to some who would go back to the old ways and the quick fix."

The president said that during Congress' "lame duck" session he wanted to see action on:

—Unfinished appropriations bills.

—Reconsideration of a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution.

—Regulatory reform for the federal government.

—Enterprise zone legislation providing incentives for development of depressed urban areas.

—The Clean Air Act, to diminish air pollution.

Said the Democratic leaders: "Conspicuously absent from that agenda was any measure to create jobs and put Americans to work."

They said their agenda called for trying again to enact a measure to subsidize moderate-priced housing. Earlier this year, Reagan vetoed an emergency spending bill that contained such a housing provision.

In his veto message, Reagan said his administration "will not promote a housing recovery by going even deeper in debt. More red-ink spending will only make the housing recession worse."

Reagan's compelling anecdotes tales which mix fact with fantasy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan likes to tell stories, sometimes about his days as a Hollywood actor, sometimes about the early days in radio; but he loves the compelling anecdote that helps make his point on a controversial political issue.

While the tales of his own days in past careers presumably are accurate, some of the other stories aren't. More and more often, White House officials simply shrug their shoulders when a presidential account in challenged.

As communications chief David R. Gergen said recently, the accuracy issue "has basically gone away because it's no big deal."

In a factory cafeteria on the outskirts of Columbus, Ohio, earlier this month, a worker asked the president if local communities could be permitted to decide whether to require school busing for desegregation.

Reagan repeated his oft-stated belief that "busing has failed in its purpose." Then he went on to tell a story about Linda Brown, the little girl who lent her name to a lawsuit and became a symbol of the fight against segregation.

THE CASE WAS Brown vs. Board of Education, and by deciding in favor of Linda and her fellow black school children in Topeka, Kan. in 1954, the Supreme Court held school segregation inherently unequal and unconstitutional.

"Mrs. Brown took this all the way to the Supreme Court because of her own memories of her childhood when she had to go miles past a school near her home simply because of segregation," Reagan said. "And then she had a daughter of her own, and Mrs. Brown is opposed to busing in her own community because, she said, now her daughter is bused miles past the school near their home, and she said that wasn't what she had in mind."

As a girl, Linda Brown — now Linda Brown Smith — was bused miles past a white school near her home to attend a black school on the other side town before the Supreme Court decision.

But her daughter wasn't. Topeka doesn't bus children for racial balance, and Mrs. Smith's daughter Kim, 17, graduated last May from the public high school two blocks from her home.

WHAT IS MORE, Mrs. Smith's own public statement contradicts Reagan's.

In 1979, Mrs. Smith asked a federal judge to reopen her case because, 25 years after her own court victory, she felt her daughter was still the victim of de facto segregation in the Topeka school system. Interviewed by Phil Donahue on NBC's Today Show, she said she wasn't advocating mandatory school busing for Topeka because that was not the issue in her case.

She added, however, "I know what it is to have to get up early and go catch a bus in the cold and ride clear across town. But I also say if this is the solution, for now we should have busing."

Michael Baroody, the White House aide charged with checking facts in Reagan speeches, was asked for documentation of Reagan's story. Three days later, when Baroody failed to return telephone calls, assistant press secretary Anson Franklin said, "We cannot produce the documentation right now."

Nonetheless, said Franklin, "We stand by it."

TWO WEEKS BEFORE the Linda Brown story, Reagan was explaining his position against abortion to a group of editors of religious journals invited to the White House.

Because there is debate about when a fetus becomes a human life, he said, the government should "opt for the fact that it's alive till someone can prove it dead."

"I think the fact that children have been prematurely born, even down to the three-month stage, and have lived, the record shows, to grow up to be normal human beings, that ought to be enough for all of us," Reagan said.

But the record doesn't show that.

The National Right to Life Committee claims, that 10 years ago, a baby born 4½ months after conception survived, and a White House spokesman said later that was the case Reagan was thinking of and the figure he meant to cite.

But even the 4½-month figure is disputed in medical and legal circles.

THE AMERICAN College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists says there is "no scientific or medical evidence" to support a claim that a fetus can survive at even 5½ months. And the government's National Commission for the Protection of Human Subjects of Biomedical and Behavioral Research has concluded, "There is no unambiguous documentation that an infant born weighing less than 601 grams (1 pound, 5 ounces) at a gestational age of 24 weeks (six months) or less has ever survived."

Gergen said the figure wasn't important because the very fact that there was a dispute over the correct number served to buttress Reagan's argument.

In his last news conference, Reagan said unemployment went up in the closing months of Jimmy Carter's presidency when it actually went down. He claimed the gross national product, used to measure recession and recovery, had grown for four quarters when he meant two.

For a time, published accounts of presidential misstatements sparked high-level searches for exculpatory evidence. Now, more and more, officials simply shrug their shoulders when Reagan commits another faux pas.

THE PRESIDENT'S inability to get his facts straight, a longtime subject of derisive comment among the reporters who cover him, has become a matter of diminishing concern for the White House staff.

As Gergen said, "The things that people are concerned about are of a totally different nature."

"We try to get the press to focus on the big picture," said another Reagan aide, who agreed to discuss the problem when promised anonymity. "In most cases the president knows the substance of the issue. And I think we've just come to the conclusion that people (within the White House) are not going to devote endless amounts of time chasing down figures."

The pilot of this Egyptair plane, which crashed at Geneva airport Sunday, blamed poor weather conditions for the accident, which all 178 people aboard the plane survived. A spokesman for the airport said weather conditions were satisfactory for takeoffs and landings.

Pilot blames bad weather for plane crash

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — An Egyptair pilot blamed deteriorating weather conditions for the fiery crash of his passenger plane at Geneva airport, said Alain Borner, the Swiss minister responsible for the airport.

All 178 people aboard the plane survived the Sunday crash. Five people were treated for injuries and one of them, Elsa Herren, of Schaffhausen, Switzerland, was hospitalized with a broken ankle.

Borner said the pilot, whom he did not identify, told him he had trouble landing because of "bad weather conditions" at the airport, where drizzle started falling shortly before the accident. Borner told reporters the pilot told him the cloud ceiling was "very low."

But airport spokesman Daniel Tesseyre said "as far as I'm concerned conditions were satisfactory" for takeoffs and landings. He declined to speculate on the extent of damage although he said it "looked to me like a complete writeoff."

Borner said the plane touched down about 200 feet short of the runway, bounced into the air and came down on its right side in a grassy area along the runway.

The force of the landing broke off the right wheel and the plane zigzagged on and off the runway before stopping, he said.

Plane's payload was too heavy, NTSB investigator says of crash

TAFT, Calif. (AP) — An airplane that stalled and crashed in flames on a parachute drop zone, killing the pilot and all 13 skydivers aboard, was carrying twice as many passengers as it was supposed to, a federal investigator says.

"That is not a 14-passenger airplane, even with modifications," said Don Llorente, an investigator for the National Transportation Safety Board who is probing the Sunday crash.

"Under normal seating capacity there would be six passengers and a crew of two, of which only a crew of one is required."

The crash of the twin-engine C-45H — a Korean War-vintage plane designed for military use — occurred at a privately operated former military airstrip eight miles southeast of Taft and 130 miles northeast of Los Angeles.

The strip is used by the Taft School of Sport Parachuting, which has operated there for more than 20 years.

"It got 150 feet in the air and stalled out," said Art Armstrong, owner of the club. "It veered off, landed on its left wing tip, and burst into flames like a bomb."

Llorente said what appeared to be a pill jar was found on the pilot, and investigators were trying to determine what kind of pills were inside. He also said there was no evidence of required passenger straps in the charred wreckage of the plane.

Airplane passengers are not required to have seats, Llorente said, but passenger restraints or belts are "required for all takeoffs and landings."

The plane is designed to carry a payload of 2,000 pounds, Llorente said. The people aboard each weighed an average of 170 pounds, and each had a 25-pound parachute, for payload of at least 2,730 pounds, he said.

"The issue is why the pilot, with 22 years experience, would take off with 13 passengers," Llorente said. "The overweighted aspect is a source of primary concern."

Armstrong identified the victims only as the plane's pilot-owner, an observer, a skydiving student, a skydiving instructor, and 10 experienced sport parachutists.

Coroners worked through the night to match names to the charred bodies, said Kern County sheriff's Lt. John Howard.

The pilot was a Los Angeles man who operated his plane out of Van Nuys Airport in the San Fernando Valley north of Los Angeles, Armstrong said, and Llorente confirmed the plane was from Van Nuys originally.

The victims were from communities including Santa Barbara, Lompoc, Santa Maria and San Luis Obispo, Armstrong said.

Eyewitness Herman Dargadz said most of the bodies remained in the wreckage after the plane nose-dived to the ground, although he saw one body about 10 feet away.

Deputy Bill Wonderly said emergency workers called to the crash scene immediately realized it was "no use" to look for survivors.

The crash occurred in an open, level field popular with skydivers for many years.

Apparent defector killed

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — An Afghan air force MiG-17 crashed near a Pakistani provincial railroad station today, killing the pilot, who was apparently trying to defect, the Defense Ministry said.

A brief statement from the ministry said the plane crashed near Quetta, capital of Baluchistan province, which borders Afghanistan, as the pilot was attempting to land. Cause of the crash was not immediately known.

Pakistan harbors thousands of Afghan refugees and dissidents who have fled Afghanistan since the Soviet Union intervened in 1979 to help the Moscow-backed government crush a Moslem uprising.

Miami man mystified over daughter's death

MIAMI (AP) — Ten-year-old Staci Weinstein had lost her mother to cancer only a few months before and was staying home from school. As she rested in her bedroom with her stuffed animals, someone walked in and shot bullets into her head, chest and abdomen.

Police are mystified by the slaying last Thursday. There was no sign of robbery or sexual abuse, they say.

Her father, Marvin, an unemployed baker, says that when he came home from job hunting early that evening, he found her body face down in her bed, her head on a blood-drenched pillow.

He screamed for help: "I think something's wrong with Staci. I don't believe what I see. I think she's dead," according to Diane Stahl, a neighbor.

Police searched the one-story house but said they found no signs of a forced entry and apparently nothing missing. The girl was not sexually molested. A back door leading to the swimming pool was open.

Staci died of gunshot wounds to the head, chest and abdomen, ruled Dr. Charles Wetli, Dade County medical examiner.

Investigators are at a loss for leads in the case, Metro-Dade Police Capt. John Coogan said Sunday night. "I know of nothing new. We have had nothing," he said.

"Every child and adult is frightened. Everybody is shook up. It was a grotesque thing," said Mrs. Stahl's husband, Stanley, after Staci's funeral Sunday.

For the Weinsteins, Staci's death was another in a series of tragedies since they moved to the close-knit northern Dade County neighborhood five years ago from Toronto.

First, Weinstein's wife contracted breast cancer. Next, the family car caught fire as the Weinsteins were driving home from a trip.

Mrs. Weinstein died June 6.

"It's almost like we had a curse on that house," he said.

Staci would have been 11 this week and Weinstein said was planning a birthday party capped off with a present of a new bicycle. She loved stuffed animals, roller skating and slumber parties, he said.

Flanked by his other daughter, 12-year-old Hilari, the grieving father made a televised plea Saturday to the killer.

"You are very sick, and it will be very hard to live with yourself after what you have done," he said in a hoarse voice. "Please turn youself in to the police so that you can get some help before you commit another terrible crime."

Hilari said she would never again sleep in the house. Instead, she and her father said they would stay with friends.

About 300 people attended the funeral, said Stuart Markus, Weinstein's attorney and longtime family friend.

"The child was well-liked, and a lot of the people at the funeral were friends and teachers. As a matter of fact, (Weinstein) said he was amazed at the number of people who came because they knew her, not him," said Markus.

The neighborhood was there in force, Stahl said.

"We're just going to band together and held each other and help Mr. Weinstein any way we can," he said. "Hopefully they'll catch this sickie quickly."

Four people remain trapped inside plane down in Atlantic

NEW YORK (AP) — Stormy seas prevented divers from reaching four people believed trapped since Saturday inside an airplane that went down over the Atlantic Ocean, the Coast Guard said.

Coast Guard divers were to try again today to rescue the four crewmen from a partially submerged Colombian Air Force plane that went down Saturday with 13 people aboard. Eight were rescued and a ninth was washed overboard and presumed drowned.

The Coast Guard has said it is handling the situation under the presumption that the four are alive.

Coast Guard spokesman Greg Creedon said that only the tail section of the plane was above the water, and that the craft could sink at any time because "it's not designed to float."

Stormy seas with 10-foot waves prevented four divers from entering the craft on Sunday.

Divers from the Coast Guard's Atlantic Strike Team at Elizabeth City, N.C., decided not to enter the craft after "they saw water flowing in and out."

Over 30 die in crash

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Thirty-two people were killed and at least 70 others injured when a passenger train slammed into the rear of another, railway officials said today.

The officials said the Sunday night crash may have been caused by a faulty signal.

Authorities said at least 15 of those injured in the crash near Quilmes were hospitalized in critical condition.

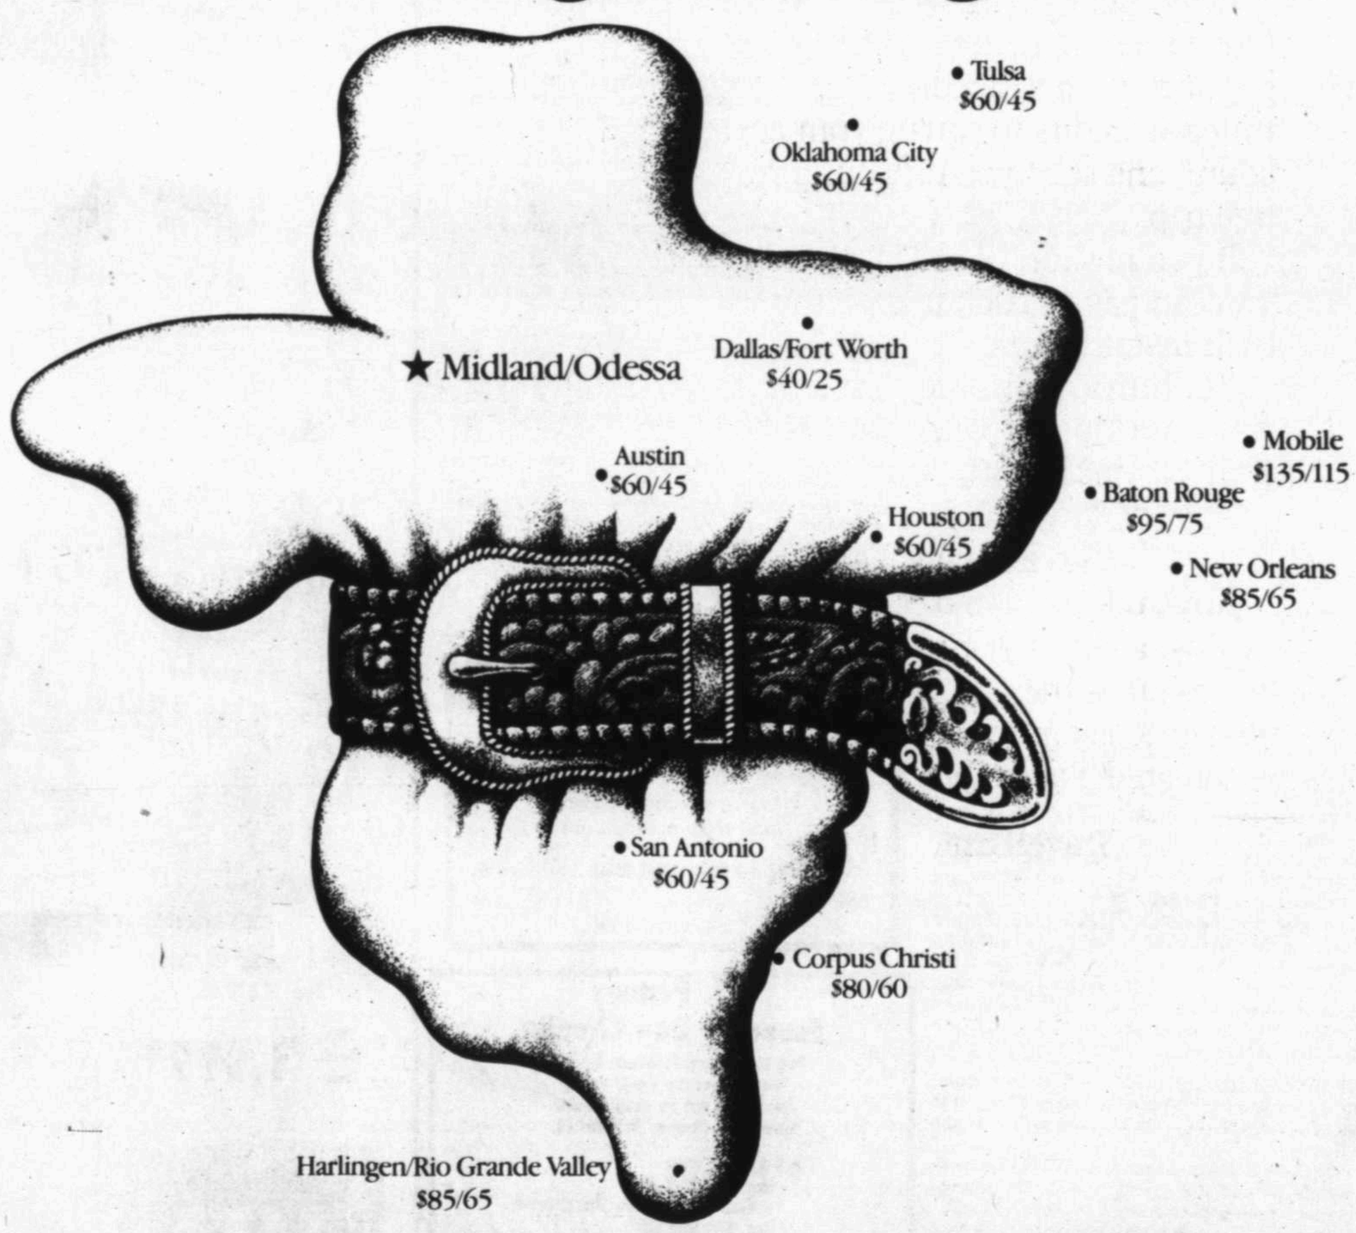

The crash occurred when a speeding passenger express train, enroute from the seaside resort of Mar del Plata to Buenos Aires, plowed into the rear of a second passenger train.

State offices, courts

When voters go to the polls Nov. 2, they'll be choosing leaders who will shape the course of Texas' future.

Lt. Governor

George W. Strake Jr., the Republican nominee, proved his value to the state while serving as secretary of state. We believe he would bring to the state's second highest political office the dynamic voice it will need in future years.

Strake, a Houston independent oil operator, civic leader and philanthropist, would complement the effective and insightful leadership of Gov. Bill Clements.

Attorney General

Republican nominee Bill Meier is a respected lawyer from the Mid-Cities area who served 10 years as state senator from Tarrant County.

He is the author of the state's current death penalty law and, we believe, would be a fine chief legal officer for Texas.

Comptroller

Since taking office as the state's Comptroller of Public Accounts, Bob Bullock has performed his job extremely well — collecting taxes.

Bullock has created some waves with his personal flamboyance and has made a lot of headlines. But that doesn't detract from the fact he has served the taxpayers of Texas in good fashion, increasing tax collections by a yearly average of 15.1 percent.

State Treasurer

The state treasurer is charged with earning the highest possible return on the state's money. Allan Clark, a Republican banker, is the best choice for this important job.

Clark is a 40-year-old Vietnam veteran. He is a graduate of West Point. But it is his banking experience which qualifies him for this job.

Land Office

Woody Glasscock Jr., a Republican banker and rancher from Hondo, knows the land and knows finance. The commissioner of the General Land Office needs that knowledge and expertise because he is charged with managing the state's land to the best advantage of all the state's residents.

A fifth-generation farmer and rancher, Glasscock also is knowledgeable of the oil and gas industry.

Ag Commissioner

Fred Thornberry, a Republican, is an acknowledged expert in agribusiness. That fact is important when you consider the challenges facing farmers, ranchers and agribusinessmen in these difficult economic times.

Thornberry has served as an agriculture agent and is an internationally recognized agriculture consultant.

R.R. Commission

Democratic railroad commissioner Jim Nugent has continued his admirable record of public service established in the Texas House during his first three years on this important commission. The commission's actions affect the daily lives of Texans in many more ways than energy concerns, although that is a prime responsibility.

Nugent is a fair, knowledgeable and far-sighted leader on the commission. He should be re-elected.

The Courts

Ted Robertson of Dallas, Democratic nominee for Supreme Court justice, Place 1, has been a fair and effective jurist since 1965.

The Texas High Court has tremendous impact on the daily lives of the state's residents. It needs steady hands on the helm and Judge Robertson, who has the support of a majority of lawyers polled statewide, would provide that type of justice.

Chuck Miller, also of Dallas, carries the confidence of a number of the state's lawyers in his bid for Place 2 on the Court of Criminal Appeals.

Judge Miller knows criminal law, having presided over more than 800 criminal trials in Dallas County. Out of a field of six judicial candidates for this bench prior to the May primary, Judge Miller scored highest in a poll of attorneys statewide.

We believe he would be a fair and qualified jurist.

Another View:

Jobless toll is needless

The latest unemployment statistics are genuinely grim, no matter how hard some people may try to make them appear otherwise. Moreover, the situation is worse than it really had to be.

For the first time since the end of the Great Depression, the unemployment rate is in double digits — 10.1 percent of the total work force. That means that 11.3 million Americans are available for work but do not have jobs.

An additional 6.6 million, the largest number ever, have been forced to accept part-time work because full-time work is unavailable. (They are in addition to the 12.7 million who work part time by choice.) The 6.6 million figure contrasts with 4 million in 1980 and represents an increase of almost a million in the last month alone.

On the positive side, of course, many people are still working — 99.7 million, including part-timers. Yet, that is down 1.9 million from July, 1981, whereas the work-age population has kept increasing.

We do not accept the argument that the entire debacle was unavoidable — the "price of controlling inflation." Some of it, maybe, but surely not hardship of the magnitude that millions of Americans are now experiencing.

Although you are not likely to hear President Reagan concede the point, both the inflation problem (severe as it was) and the employment picture had shown some improvement before he took office, and many other economic indicators were on the mend. Interest rates were still too high, but even interest could have come down within a reasonable time if Mr. Reagan and allies in Congress had exercised reasonable fiscal restraints. Instead, by slashing taxes and greatly boosting military spending goals, they generated gigantic deficit projections that kept interest rates high and helped push the country into today's tragic recession.

Now that the recession is bringing interest rates down, and the Federal Reserve Bank is easing up on the money supply, the business economy may begin to recover. However, most analysts predict that the severe unemployment problem will linger long after business picks up. Jobless workers will continue to pay the price for policymakers' reckless fiscal experiment.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, Oct. 18, the 291st day of 1982. There are 74 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Oct. 18, 1867, the United States took formal possession of Alaska from Russia.

On this date:

In 1944, Soviet troops invaded Czechoslovakia in their drive to Berlin during World War II.

In 1974, the Soviet Union and Egypt agreed to support the establishment of a Palestinian state.

In 1979, the Church of England said homosexual relationships may be justified, and recommended homosexuals not be barred from the priesthood.

Ten years ago: The United States and Soviet Union signed trade agreements that include Soviet repayment of $722 million in World War II lend-lease debts.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

'Party politics' takes over economic debate

WASHINGTON — Party politics, with all its emotions and harangues and oversimplifications, has taken over the economic debate. The choice, if the political rhetoric is to be accepted, is between the Republicans' trickle-down theories and the Democrats' siphon-off practices.

Jack Anderson

Anyone who has ever attended a night session of the Senate, or who has noticed the unnerving glitter in the eyes of a congressman as he propounds his latest panacea, or who has scrutinized the gang hanging around the reception room of a party leader, might worry.

For political solutions, invariably more expedient than efficient, have brought us to our present economic state. President Reagan's latest remedies — tight money, tax cuts and free-market measures, all wrapped up in a package called Reaganomics — started off in the clouds but lost altitude rapidly.

The supply-side theoretics didn't bring the promised prosperity, but, rather, caused the economy to plunge deeper into recession. If the inflation rate has also slowed, it has been caused by a weakened economy, not by the healthy free market that Reagan envisioned.

Our conservative president rejected the "countercyclical stabilization policies" that past presidents have used for 40 years to maintain high employment and keep prices stable. What this profound phrase means is that Reagan's predecessors managed the economy by manipulating fiscal and monetary levers.

Reagan disdained the monetary machinery and decided to let the marketplace take care of itself. His theory was that the economy would run more smoothly if the government's monkeywrenches were removed from the machinery. But some of the wrenches, in turns out, were needed to repair the wheels.

It is the genius of the free economy that it does not require the innovator to secure the permission of organized society to launch his schemes. If he can get a few gamblers to bankroll him, he is on his way — free to create, if he can.

If he succeeds, the rewards can be spectacular, and society will share in the gain. If he fails, only he and his improvident backers are the losers.

But it has become increasingly difficult to get an innovative proposal, or even an old routine one, through the layers of bureaucracy that have accumulated in the past 40 years. Just about every private enterprise of any consequence has become ensnarled in government red tape.

The problem is this: How much government intervention is necessary to protect the public from the harebrained schemes and grasping hands of private entrepreneurs? But how much government interference discourages free enterprise and results in stagnation?

• • •

SEE NO EVIL: How can any president, with the best will in the world, crack down on waste and corruption in the federal government if top bureaucrats ignore misconduct? The answer is simple: He can't.

High officials of the Energy Department have known for more than a year that a printing specialist was moonlighting at a northern Virginia printing company that was doing work for the department. Alerted to this potential conflict by conscientious employees, the bureaucrats did nothing to clear it up.

The employee is now under investigation by a grand jury on charges of funneling government printing contracts to his private employer and taking kickbacks for his efforts. High officials have been called to testify before the grand jury.

The situation is also being investigated by the Energy Department's inspector general, the Government Printing Office's inspector general and the Postal Service's mail-fraud unit.

Top Energy officials have either denied they knew about the allegations of misconduct or refused to comment. The Justice Department attorney who is presenting the case to the grand jury refused to confirm or deny the charges. But my associate John Dillon got the story from Energy Department sources and grand jury witnesses, all of whom asked that their names not be used.

According to these sources, the employee got thousands of dollars' worth of government printing business for his company in violation of regular bidding procedure. On at least one occasion, according to one source, he actually did printing work on Energy Department presses, then packaged the stuff in his company's boxes and billed the government for the job.

The man in charge of the department's management division, and ultimately responsible for the printing operation, is Assistant Secretary William Heffelfinger. Though he's been in hot water on various occasions, Heffelfinger, a career bureaucrat, has managed to survive under both Democratic and Republican administrations.

He claimed to know nothing about the case until my associate called. "I don't know a thing about it," he said. "This is the first I've heard of it."

Told of Heffelfinger's denial, a source who testified before the grand jury said, "I told him twice."

According to sources, other Energy officials were also informed of the conflict of interest more than a year ago, but, like Heffelfinger, did nothing to resolve the problem.

INSIDE REPORT:

Cuomo will vow to abandon national hopes

WASHINGTON — If he is elected governor of New York Nov. 2, Lt. Gov. Mario Cuomo will publically pledge not to seek the Democratic presidential or vice presidential nomination in 1984 — preferring the role of power broker.

Rowland Evans

His pledge would be intended to expand, not restrict, Cuomo's national influence within the party. He feels that the desire to be on the national ticket so widely advertised by his defeated primary foe, New York City Mayor Ed Koch, would dilute his activities as a party power.

Robert Novak

Where Cuomo as governor would seek to throw New York's big delegation is another matter. The state's Democrats generally favor Sen. Edward M. Kennedy in 1984, as they did in 1980. However, Cuomo staunchly supported Jimmy Carter's losing New York primary effort against Kennedy.

NEW MEESE ROLE

An unaccustomed burden has been placed on the broad shoulders of presidential counselor Edwin Meese III: Find "painless" ways to make massive cuts in the new defense budget to be sent to Congress next January.

That unwanted assignment for the president's chief arms buildup supporter among top White House aides is dictated by alarming deficit numbers beginning to crop up in David Stockman's Office of Management and Budget. By some estimates, the deficit for the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, 1984, will top $200 billion — unless drastic savings are found. Few White House officials believe that entitlement programs offer anything like the required cuts.

Thus, the Pentagon becomes the inevitable target. But not even the most assiduous budget cutting for defense could make a real dent in the deficit without emasculating Reagan's vaunted military buildup. Meese's recruitment was designed to put the job in the hands of friends of the arms buildup.

GLENN GOOFS

The recent performance of Sen. John Glenn in Oklahoma, whose predominantly conservative Democrats have looked on him as the answer to Teddy Kennedy, suggests his presidential act needs polishing.

When Glenn learned that several local candidates were to be introduced before his speech at a $20-a-ticket fundraiser at an Oklahoma City motel, he immediately requested and was granted use of an office in the motel. Not until Sen. David Boren's introduction did Glenn emerge from the office. He then delivered a 15-minute speech, following which he promptly left the room — without shaking a single hand or explaining why.

"I've never quite seen anything like it in all my years in politics," one veteran Oklahoma Democrat told us. Glenn later did a little mixing at a $100-a-head affair at the home of Robert S. Kerr Jr., son of the late senator. But Oklahomans who had traveled far to pay their $20 and see the famous astronaut-statesman were disappointed.

GOP PALACE POLITICS

The surfacing of New Right political consultant Paul Manafort as possible successor to Republican National Chairman Richard Richards smacks more of palace politics than a battle over the presidential succession in 1984 if President Reagan does not run again.

Manafort was boosted by conservative activists after White House aide Rich Williamson emerged as a candidate for the job. The argument against Williamson, who is close to White House chief of staff James Baker, is that as national chairman he would tilt toward Vice President George Bush and against Rep. Jack Kemp in the succession struggle.

Actually, Williamson is one of the more ideologically conservative staffers in the White House despite his relationship with Baker. He is on good terms with Kemp. But he has enemies of his own, including fellow presidential aides determined to keep him from the party chairmanship.

STRAUSS' NON-WINK

Robert Strauss, key inside strategist of the Democratic Party for the past decade, was questioned closely by party leaders in his home state of Texas about the possibility of making a run for the presidential nomination in 1984. Strauss' answer: Thanks, but no thanks.

Highly-popular in his homeland, Strauss has been touted, sometimes only half seriously, as the best presidential prospect the Democrats could nominate. Ideologically opaque and a political pragmatist, Strauss has been told that he is the first Jew in history who might make it to the White House.

In Austin several weeks ago following a trip to his Dallas law firm, Strauss was pointedly asked by prominent party leaders whether there was any chance of his running. He said no, in effect turning his party pals loose to go wherever they want for a candidate.

CHARLEY REESE

Test scores show verbal training edge

The college boards have for the first time released a breakdown by race of the scorers on the Scholastic Aptitude Tests. The results show there is a 100-point gap between the scores of blacks and whites.

Charley Reese

Bigots will take this raw data and claim that it proves blacks are genetically inferior to whites; white liberals will take the same data and argue that it proves the education system is failing black children; and black politicians will say that the data proves the tests are racially biased.

I don't think the data proves any of the three.

In the first place, we ought to dismiss entirely the notion of tying judgments like inferior and superior to intelligence and test scoring ability. Human beings are not computers to be judged by their storage capacity and computing speed. A person's IQ and test-scoring ability are irrelevant in determining human value.

A person can be highly intelligent and educated but lazy, despicable and worthless. A person of average or even below average intelligence can be a noble human being worthy of love and admiration. Tests measure only a function of the bio-computer; they cannot measure character, motivation, and energy.

I believe there is a simple explanation for the 100-point gap. The human mind solves problems with verbal equations, and therefore all tests are essentially tests of language aptitude.

Take the highest scoring child and give him two years of French and then the same tests, written in French, and his score will plummet, not because he is less smart, but because he is less skilled with the language symbols in which the test is written.

At the present time, for cultural reasons, many black children continue to come out of homes in which verbal skills are not stressed, particularly during the critical period from birth to age six. These children are handicapped in verbal skills to such a degree that it is difficult to overcome. The handicap has nothing to do with inherent intelligence.

Research in Canada has shown that children who are exposed to a foreign language between birth and age six develop certain patterns in their brains. Even though instruction in a foreign language ceases at age six, they can learn a new language 20 years later much easier than a child who grew up in a single-language environment. In other words, the patterns established in the brain remain with the person for life and the person who lacks those patterns never achieves the same proficiency in learning new languages no matter how smart he is.

It seems reasonable to me that the same principle applies to a child in a single language environment. In other words, a child who is read to and conversed with often from birth to age six develops certain brain patterns that facilitate the acquisition of verbal skills. That child will learn to read and to reason easier than a child who grew up in an environment in which verbal communication was at a minimum.

I suspect that the amount of verbal training in the pre-school years is the critical difference. This would account for the fact that some black children from economically deprived homes score as high or higher than whites. What matters is neither race nor income but the amount and quality of verbal communication between parents and children.

The good news is that this is a condition which can be changed and it will change as more and more blacks escape from manual labor into professions and businesses which require verbal skills, for they will tend to verbalize with their children more than their parents did with them.

In the meantime, we should be wary of demagogues who distort information for their own selfish purposes. We should, instead, judge people on their character and contribution. After all, equally valid tests show that American whites lag 7 to 10 points behind the Japanese in IQ. The last time Japanese feelings of superiority got out of hand, Americans — black and white — demonstrated the contrary.

Mary Tyler Moore rides in city but journey ends at Mt. Sinai

NEW YORK (AP) — Mary Tyler Moore's horseback trot in New York City landed her in Mount Sinai Hospital over the weekend, but doctors say the actress will soon be back in the saddle.

The 44-year-old actress took a spill during the ride, but was not seriously hurt, a hospital administrator said Sunday.

She was treated for about an hour and was released Saturday after tests showed no significant injury, said hospital administrator Peter Byrne.

The hospital is on Fifth Avenue across from Central Park, which has horse paths. The accident site, however, was not disclosed.

LONDON (AP) — British legislators are arguing over Princess Anne's decision to stop in South Africa on a tour for a children's charity.

Princess Anne

The princess, president of the Save the Children Fund, is also visiting Zimbabwe, Malawi, Kenya, Djibouti, Somalia, North Yemen and Swaziland on her tour. The fund, founded in 1919, helps children in underdeveloped nations.

Buckingham Palace said the princess personally requested a meeting in South Africa with representatives of the fund and will meet them during an hour-long stopover at the Johannesburg airport en route to Swaziland.

Robert Hughes, opposition Labor Party lawmaker and chairman of Britain's anti-apartheid movement, which opposes South African racial segregation, on Sunday called the stopover "extremely stupid."

But John Carlisle, Conservative lawmaker and secretary of his party's Africa Committee in the House of Commons, said, "I heartily applaud Princess Anne's decision because children need saving in South Africa as much as they do in other parts of the world."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A poster showing "Magnum, P.I." star Tom Selleck taking off his shirt with his pants unzipped and no underwear has drawn an $8 million lawsuit from the actor.

Tom Selleck

Superior Court Judge Leon Thompson issued a restraining order against distribution of the poster Friday after Selleck's lawyers went to court claiming it was unauthorized and violated privacy rights.

Selleck "has never posed for that type of picture. He has never appeared nude, so that is why he finds it so outrageous that they would depict him in such an outrageous pose," said his attorney, Martin Singer, who said the poster is an artist's rendering.

A telephone call to the law firm representing the three people named in the suit — Louis Cuprill, Mark Bernard and Timothy Andereson — went unanswered Sunday.

Four companies also were named in the suit — a communications company, a publisher and what Singer said were two retailers.

I.M. Pei

PEKING (AP) — Architect I.M. Pei had one of his staunchest fans on hand for the opening of the new 293-suite Fragrant Hills Hotel — Jackie Kennedy Onassis.

Pei, a Chinese-American, was the architect of the Kennedy Center in Washington and designed the new hotel for foreign tourists. It is a 50-minute drive from the heart of Peking.

The structure is located on the picturesque western hills outside the city, on the site of a former emperor's palace and summer resort.

Mrs. Onassis is traveling on a private tour as Pei's guest. She has shunned reporters and photographers, and foreign reporters were barred from the opening.

BOSTON (AP) — Ronald Reagan and Edward Kennedy, who seldom agree on much, will join forces Tuesday to congratulate the Atlantic Monthly on its 125th birthday.

President Reagan is sending a taped message to the magazine's celebration while the Democratic senator from Massachusetts highlights a guest list that includes novelist Saul Bellow and journalist Seymour Hersh.

The magazine was born in 1857 with an imposing list of founders and writers: Oliver Wendell Holmes, Henry David Thoreau, Ralph Waldo Emerson and James Russell Lowell.

Its contributors over the years have included Mark Twain, Robert Frost and William James.

But the magazine's owner says it isn't resting on its laurels.

"We want to continue the tradition of being a thoughtful, conscientious voice that is interesting and absorbing," said Mortimer Zuckerman, a real estate developer who bought Atlantic two years ago.

Zoo vet deals with unusual forms of life

DALLAS (AP) — Dr. Bonnie L. Raphael's smallest patient weighs two-thirds of an ounce. The largest weighs two-and-a-half tons.

She deals in life and death in extraordinary forms, in odd couplings and unnatural acts aimed at keeping the world's exotic animals alive and kicking, crawling, climbing, flying, swimming or slithering.

She hopes to help a giraffe give birth to an okapi.

The cross-genus breeding experiment is perhaps Ms. Raphael's most startling task as the veterinarian at the Dallas Zoo, where she takes care of 2,000 animals. But almost all of her job is odd.

"I don't like to see animals used solely for man's benefit. That's one thing that drew me to zoos and wild animal medicine. What we're doing with our breeding programs is trying to save animals from extinction, although sometimes the public doesn't see that," she said.

AND ALTHOUGH SHE is convinced "a human life is more important than an animal life, I think animals need more champions watching out for them."

The small blunt hands of the short, slight, 32-year-old woman have performed delicate fiberoptic surgery on tiny flame-faced tanagers, South American birds that are the smallest creatures in the zoo.

Those hands also have pounded the leathery hide of the zoo's biggest beast to prepare the 5,000-pound asthmatic Nile hippotamus for an injection.

Ms. Raphael has treated deadly poisonous snakes, given shots to hostile apes, and performed a Cesarian section on an iguana.

One of only about 40 full-time zoo veterinarians in the United States, she spends about half her time practicing preventive medicine --- performing tuberculosis tests, controlling parasites, trying to isolate sick animals, taking blood samples.

About 30 percent of her work is treating the sick, and 20 percent is breeding, which is "what it's all about" in the changing life of American zoos.

"SO MUCH OF ZOO medicine is not written down — it's zoo vets carrying around clinical knowledge in their heads," she said. "That's changing as zoos become more and more involved in conservation.

"The Dallas Zoo started as a menagerie in 1904, and most of the construction you see today — the barred cages and concrete floors — was done by the (Works Progress Administration) in the 1930s. Then, the idea was just display. There was no emphasis on conservation, breeding, not even education. We all accept zoos as recreation, but there's a much more important role."

The goal of zoos like Dallas' that participate in the National Species Survival Plan of the American Association of Zoological Parks and Aquariums is to breed endangered species in captivity to "keep some around for future generations to see, and — we hope — one day reintroduce them to their natural environments."

Dallas had a record number of animal births in 1981, Ms. Raphael's first year on the job. Several rare and endangered animals — a lowland gorilla, klipspringer antelope, lesser panda, and an okapi — were born, and a young pygmy hippo, which is vanishing in the wild, is pregnant.

THE OKAPI BIRTH was something of a coup: the only one in the country this year. The Dallas Zoo prides itself on being a "forerunner in a world effort" to maintain the strange, chocolate-colored animal with a pin-striped rump and legs, whose survival in its native Zaire is doubtful.

That's where a crippled, cow-hocked okapi named Miracle comes in.

Miracle was born in the Dallas Zoo, but she is not on display because a hip problem makes her ugly. She has trouble walking now, and spends much of her time lying in her hay-filled stall in a back-lot stable, calmly turning her huge, long-lashed brown eyes on the occasional stranger.

"She is not strong enough to carry a pregnancy, she's not an attractive animal, and basically she's just wasting her life," Ms. Raphael said. "But she's still valuable in terms of potential offspring."

The Dallas Zoo, working with Texas A&M University and the Oklahoma City and San Diego zoos, hopes to use Miracle as an okapi embryo factory.

EMBRYO TRANSPLANTATION is common today in the cattle industry, where it is used to get large numbers of valuable pure-bred animals from one mother.

The mother is given hormones that stimulate her to produce dozens of eggs. She is artificially inseminated, and the fertilized eggs are flushed out before they can attach to the uterine wall. The embryos are then implanted in a less valuable animal, a surrogate mother that carries the pregnancy to term.

Basically the same techniques are to be tried on Miracle, but there's a hitch: All okapi are rare, none are "less valuable," and the beast that looks a little like a zebra and a lot like an antelope has only one relative — the giraffe.

Cross-genus embryo transplants have not been tried before. But both the giraffe and okapi have 14-month gestation periods, and the Oklahoma City Zoo has a female giraffe they are trying to make willing.

She and Miracle are being trained to stand quietly so the procedure can be done without anesthetic.

Dr. Bonnie L. Raphael checks the heartbeat of a newborn klipspringer at the Dallas Zoo. Dr. Raphael treats the 2,000 animals at the zoo and is one of only about 40 full-time zoo veterinarians.

THE SAN DIEGO ZOO IS doing the hormone research, and Dr. Dwayne Kramer, a large animal reproduction specialist at Texas A&M, is a consultant on the project.

It's a delicate and messy business, involving daily rectal palpitations of large and edgy animals, and the taking of daily urine samples. The beasts' reproductive cycles must be synchronized, and no one knows if the months of effort will pay off. The first attempt is about six months away, Ms. Raphael said.

"It's not the easiest thing to keep going, but what you have to decide is what your commitment to a project like this is," she said. "We're looking at every possible avenue of getting these animals on the ground.

"With any birth, you get this wonderful feeling. That's what it's all about. And this would be — well, a miracle."

Freelancer reports on Prince Andrew's antics with Koo

LONDON (AP) — Prince Andrew returned to Royal Navy duty as a helicopter pilot today after a headline-grabbing Caribbean holiday with an American actress. Prince Charles and wife Diana cut short a Scottish vacation after a reported spat about the rain at a royal estate.

Andrew, who flew a Sea King helicopter with the 882 Squadron in the Falkland Islands war with Argentina last spring, cut short his post-war stay on the island of Mustique last Wednesday after British newspapers trumpeted his companion's past roles in blue movies.

The holiday remained on tabloid front pages today with reports — attributed to a member of Andrew's party — that the 22-year-old prince and 25-year-old actress Koo Stark romped nude around the pool after he playfully tore off her bathing suit and had his own trunks removed in retaliation.

"Koo Starkers (naked), Says Liz," said the headline in The Sun.

Freelance journalist Elizabeth Salomon, 27, who stayed with the couple at the vacation hideaway of Andrew's aunt, Princess Margaret, was quoted as saying that after the battle of the bathing suits, "Andrew and the rest of the party felt quite free to parade around in the altogether, just out of sight of photographers."

In addition to having "strutted around in his birthday suit," the prince chased other guests with a live lobster, thrusting it down one woman's swimsuit, the Sun quoted Miss Salomon as saying.

Miss Salomon reports the prince and Miss Stark — who in her teens appeared in the soft-porn films "Emily" and "Cruel Passion" — are "very much in love" and have kept in constant touch since their holiday ended, according to the newspaper.

Daily Mail gossip columnist Nigel Dempster quoted furious members of the prince's party as saying Miss Salomon, a friend of Miss Stark's, had vowed not to reveal what transpired on Mustique.

"She went down on her knee and promised that she wouldn't tell anyone, at least not until she was 75," Dempster quoted one unidentified friend as saying. "She's grown old rather quickly."

Right to Read Committee wins banned-book battle at last

The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

ISLAND TREES, New York — The six-year-old protest sign of the Right To Read Committee, yellowing and curling at the edges, formally became part of the past Sunday. The nine banned books have been returned to the school library shelves.

The sign was the centerpiece of a small celebration in a community torn apart by a dispute that brought unwanted national attention since the school board voted in 1976 to remove nine books they found to be unpatriotic, indecent and anti-religious.

"We wanted to say welcome back to the books," said committee member Justine Schachter to the 100 persons — including three authors whose books were banned — who came to a celebration brunch at a local mall.

"You are my heros and heroines," said Piri Thomas, author of "Down These Mean Streets." Also saying thank you were Kurt Vonnegut Jr. and Alice Childress. "I've been following this marvelous community struggle," said Vonnegut, whose "Slaughterhouse Five" was removed. "It was done intelligently and they carried it through," he said.

In the community room of the mall public library, participants reminisced about the community meeting there at the start of the struggle. "Do you remember that night, 200 people packed in and the hostile audience?" Barbara Bernstein, head of the Nassau chapter of the civil liberties union, was asked. "October, 1976" nodded Mrs. Bernstein, who along with the authors, three student plaintiffs and two civil liberties lawyers received gifts of sketches illustrating a Brecht passage on censorship.

The books were returned in time for the start of school after the school board decided at a stormy August meeting not to continue the removal battle. The board now requires that a letter be sent to parents of any student who checks them out. The notice reads in part, "The Board of Education wishes to inform you that the book(s) selected by your child may contain material which you may find objectionable."

However, the return of the books may not be the end of the suit. Both sides are still negotiating a settlement. The New York Civil Liberties Union, which represented the students who sued, is troubled by the note to parents and that one of the books, "The Fixer" by Bernard Malamud, has not been restored to the curriculum, although it is in the school library.

Candidates choose TV

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Hands go unshaken, autographs unsigned, babies unkissed. In campaign 1982, California-style, the candidates are keeping their distance from the voters, choosing television instead to slam their messages home in 30-second bursts.

The big campaign event used to be the rally where thousands cheer; now it's the fund-raiser where dozens open checkbooks.

Relatively rare is the California voter who has met Gov. Jerry Brown or San Diego Mayor Pete Wilson in their quest for the United States Senate. Few have heard a live elect-me-governor speech by Los Angeles Mayor Thomas Bradley or state Attorney General George Deukmejian.

Where once the candidates for governor and senator went on the stump, they now go on the tube. The Basic Speech has been reduced to half-a-minute video.

"THAT'S BECOMING an unfortunate trend, no doubt about it," says George Gorton, the former Youth for Nixon worker who is running Wilson's campaign. "My sense is that this may not be as powerful in the rest of the country. If you are campaigning in Nevada or Oklahoma, you can still do it the old-style, precinct-by-precinct."

Ladonna Lee, a partner in Eddie Mahe & Associates, a Washington firm masterminding six campaigns, says the type of district and state determines the mix of commercials and personal appearances. In one North Carolina congressional campaign, the firm's candidate has gone into virtually every tiny community and bought TV time in two markets. In a Tennessee Senate campaign, the candidate mixes "intensive media" with personal campaigning. "In both campaigns," she says, "it's not either-or."

BUT CALIFORNIA has 11 million registered voters in a state 780 miles long. There are more people of voting age in California, 18.3 million, than in the 20 smallest states combined.

In the gubernatorial and senatorial races alone the four major candidates will spend about $12 million before it's all over.

"If you shook 5,000 hands a day from primary day on June 8 to the general election on Nov. 2," Gorton says, "you wouldn't reach one-tenth of one percent of the voters." His arithmetic is off, but the idea comes across.

So there's not much news to cover on the stump these days.

"Here it is three weeks before the election, and I'm going home for the weekend," said a veteran California political writer. "It used to be my wife wouldn't see me the last six weeks of the campaign."

IN 1974, when Brown was first elected governor, major candidates averaged half-a-dozen appearances a day. In one day, Joseph Alioto, a Brown primary opponent, flew at 5:30 a.m. to Stockton for a labor breakfast, to Nevada City to shake hands at a lumber mill gate, to another breakfast in nearby Grass Valley, to Placerville for a noon rally in the town square, to Modesto, to a country barbecue in Riverbank and back to San Francisco for an 11 p.m. meeting with labor leaders.

Deukmejian's former campaign manager, Bill Roberts acknowledged that those days are over. He sees nothing wrong with that.

"It's happening. It's happening for the best," he said.

By 1978, the pace of public events slowed to three or four a day. More and more time was devoted to fund raising for the TV ads.

NOW THE DAYS when there are multiple events are the exception. On Sept. 15, Deukmejian was in Redding. He attended a Rotary Club luncheon, taped an interview at KIXE-TV and attended a reception. It was one of his busiest days of September.

In the month beginning on Labor Day — the traditional kickoff for a fall election campaign — Wilson's schedule shows he attended at least 22 receptions, which is what politicians call fund-raisers. In the same period he gave six speeches, held three press conferences and just one rally.

Brown did his fund-raising earlier this year. But still his schedule shows that he delivered only four campaign speeches in that month, held three press conferences and was at six rallies. In that time he also attended 16 public events in his role as governor.

DEUKMEJIAN WAS at 24 fund-raisers, gave a third as many speeches and held nine press conferences. Bradley had 15 fund-raisers and gave nine speeches — three the same day in San Francisco.

Wilson's campaign manager says by Election Day, "We'll spend $5 million to $6 million and half will go to television." Campaign manager Jack Mayesh says Brown will spend $4 million on television and radio. Bradley's campaign manager, Phil Depoian, expects to spend $5 million by the time it's over with half going to pay for television in seven markets.

American wins physics prize

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — American Professor Kenneth G. Wilson, of Cornell University, was awarded the 1982 Nobel Prize in physics today for his theories about changes in matter under influences such as heat or magnetism, the awards committee announced.

The 46-year-old professor was honored for his theory on "critical phenomena in connection with phase transitions," that solved a classic problem in physics, the announcement said.

"I expect that the champagne will flow freely" at Cornell today, Wilson said in a telephone interview from his home in Ithaca, N.Y.

"Yes I was very surprised and especially so that I'm getting the prize alone," he told The Associated Press.

He said he would have expected to share the award with Michael Fisher of Cornell and Leo Kadanoff at the University of Chicago. The three shared Israel's Wolf Prize in Physics several years ago, he said.

"THERE'S NO question that there's greater prestige for me," in winning the prize alone. "I was certainly very proud to share the Wolf Prize with Michael and Leo. I only can only hope that they can participate in the Nobel Prize in the future."

In Chicago, Kadanoff said, "He did magnificent work. He's very, very deserving of it. I couldn't be more pleased."

The problem of "critical phenomena" has long been studied by physicists and has yielded several previous Nobel Prizes, notably to Soviet scientist Lev Landau in 1962 and to Norwegian-American Lars Onsager, who won the chemistry award in 1968.

"The problem was solved in a definite and profound way by Kenneth Wilson in two fundamental papers from 1971," the Swedish Academy of Sciences said in announcing the award.

Kenneth Wilson

A theoretical physicist, Wilson has made important contributions to the study of the dramatic changes that take place in physical systems at certain critical temperatures. The boiling of water is an example of such a change.

WILSON HAS decribed in mathematical terms the broader properties of such changes, which occur in large systems as well as in quarks, now thought to be the fundemental building blocks of all matter.

"Wilson succeeded in an ingenious way to solve the problem. Instead of a frontal attack, he developed a method to divide the problem into a sequence of simpler problems in which each part could be solved," the academy said.

The committee secretary, Bengt Nagel, also a theoretical physics professor, said Wilson's work is wholly theoretical without any concrete experimenting.

"There is no immediate practical applications to his work, but of course there is a potential for applications in several possible fields in the future," said Stig Lundqvist, who heads the Nobel committee.

Wilson is one of the younger laureates in a long list of American recipients of the physics prize, a category which has been dominated by the United States since after World War II.

BORN JUNE 8, 1936 at Waltham, Mass, Wilson earned a doctorate from the California Institute of Technology in 1961 and has been a professor of physics at Cornell since 1971.

The prize, the second Nobel science award announced so far this year, brings the recipient the equivalent of $157,000.

The medicine prize was awarded last Monday to an Englishman and two Swedes for their work with grandular hormones that may be helpful in preventing ulcers, unwanted blood clotting and menstrual cramps.

The three winners were Englishman John R. Vane, 55, and two Swedes who started their research in partnership as a teacher and student — Sune Bergstrom, 66, and his former graduate student, 48-year-old Bengt Samuelsson.

Nobel Prize in chemistry awarded to biologist

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — The 1982 Nobel Prize in chemistry was awarded today to South Africa-born Aaron Klug, molecular biology researcher at Cambridge University, for his work on electron microscopy and important nucleic acid-protein substances.

The 56-year-old Klug has worked 20 years for the Medical Research Council at the molecular laboratory in the English university town.

History buffs want to salvage 312-ton steamer

JEFFERSON, Texas (AP) — It took the technology of underwater magnetic surveys to find a lake-bottom site that may hold the remains of a 312-ton steamer that burned and sank 113 years ago. But it's going to take money to find out for sure.

Some East Texas history buffs are trying to raise $15,000 to hire divers to explore a targeted area of the 3,500-acre Caddo Lake, where magnetic surveys show the Mittie B. Stephens may have come to rest.

The vessel burned and sank in 1869, killing 64 of her 104 passengers in the worst lake disaster ever in Texas. Its bell and safe full of gold were recovered, but the remainder of the wreck disappeared under a blanket of silt.

The surveys show that something metal is lying on the bottom of the south side of Caddo Lake, but it might only be beer cans.

Members of the Marion and Harrison county historical commissions are trying to collect $15,000 for the divers, and then another $50,000 to excavate the remains.

Richard Collins of Dallas, a Texas Historical Commission member, said he hopes enough money can be gathered from foundations and individuals to schedule a dive early next summer.

"It appears we have discovered the remains of the Mittie B. Stephens, but there is no way of verifying that without divers," Collins said. "It may be beer cans or it may be the remains."

The burning boat came to rest only 20 feet from the shore, but darkness, fear of water and panic kept many of the victims from reaching safety, historians say.

Searchers believe the boat is in only five to 12 feet of water, but hidden under a deep layer of silt. The mud has made the identification effort more difficult, but may mean the boat is well-preserved.

"We want to excavate the steamboat for a lot of reasons, primarily to give us an insight into what life was like on a steamboat," said Duke DeWare, a Jefferson attorney who is leading the recovery effort.

Steamboats were a chief form of travel and shipping in the 1800s and of particular importance to Jefferson, a once thriving port city of 12,000. Caddo Lake connected Jefferson with the Red River.

The city's prominence waned in the 1870s when the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers removed a natural log-jam on the Red River. That dropped the lake level so low that steamers no longer could reach the town.

The sinking of the Mittie B. was one of several steamboat wrecks recorded in Texas history, but only one other has been studied by archaeologists.

Wallbangers leave Woozy Redbirds reeling, 6-4

By THOMAS BOSWELL
The Washington Post
and Los Angeles Times

MILWAUKEE — More than likely, the St. Cardinals are convinced now. After losing the fifth game of the World Series to the Milwaukee Brewers, 6-4, to fall behind, three games to two, the Cardinals have seen enough of the True Blue Brew Crew to get the general idea.

Here the Cardinals were led to believe that they would be playing the champions of the American League — the patsy circuit — and what do they get? A kind of hybrid gang of National League spleen crushers.

Harvey's Wallbangers, indeed. Harvey's Headbangers, more likely. With your head.

Power everywhere. More speed than advertized. Defense to beat the band. No conspicuous weaknesses. Never quit, play hurt. Eat adversity, yawn when you've got 'em down. Throw at your head, slide in your face, spit in your eye, and never apologize. Score runs in an avalanche just when you think you have them beaten. Thump you any way they have to, even if the greatest relief pitcher in history is hurt, even if two-thirds of their outfield is injured, even if their starters look sort of frazzled, even if their good ol' manager barely seems to know what inning it is.

BEST TEAM in baseball. One game away from winning its first World Series. Better get out of the way before something ugly happens.

When a team that hits 216 home runs in the regular season comes from behind to take charge of a World Series, as the Brewers have done, without hitting many home runs, it's time to worry. When the Brewers beat you with their gloves, as they did this gloomy afternoon, then it's time for concern.

Two day ago, when they led the Brewers, 5-1, in the seventh inning of Game 4, the Cardinals — on the verge of a three-games-to-one lead — were ready to measure themselves for world championship rings.

Now, after watching Robin Yount get four more hits, after watching Mike Caldwell survive for 8 1-3 innings on a day when he had nothing and allowed 14 hits, after seeing Bruce Sutter give up what proved to be the two winning runs, after watching as the Brewers made a half-dozen brilliant defensive robberies, the Cardinals know better.

Make no mistake, the Cardinals are worried, from their Manager Whitey Herzog, who is already talking in postmortem tones, to their solemnal veterans, who know from experience when a good thing has gone bad.

"If we should be fortunate enough to win the sixth game, then ... " began Herzog in the manner of a mortal fellow who doesn't wish to annoy an extremely large person.

HERZOG AND the rest of the Busch Bunch are going home now. They can look at matchups. On Tuesday, it's 258-game winner Don Sutton against their nine-game-career winner John Stuper. Make your own jokes.

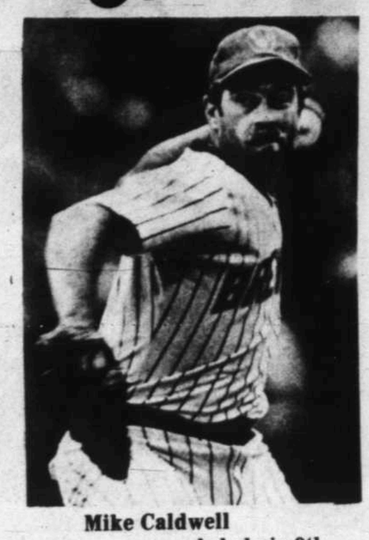

The Brewers have the wind behind them now. Every time they look around, somebody from the Hall of Fame is lurking around their locker room asking one of them for a bat to enshrine. First, it was Paul Molitor for his five hits in the opener. Sunday evening, it was Yount for being the first man in 79 series to get four hits in a game twice in the same series; he has 11 hits now, just one off the record for most hits in a six-game series and just two away from the record, held by Bobby Richardson and Lou Brock, of 13 in a seven-game series.

At this game's end, as a cast of 56,562 mauled the field, Yount was brought back out of the dugout for a curtain call by the chants of "MVP ... MVP."

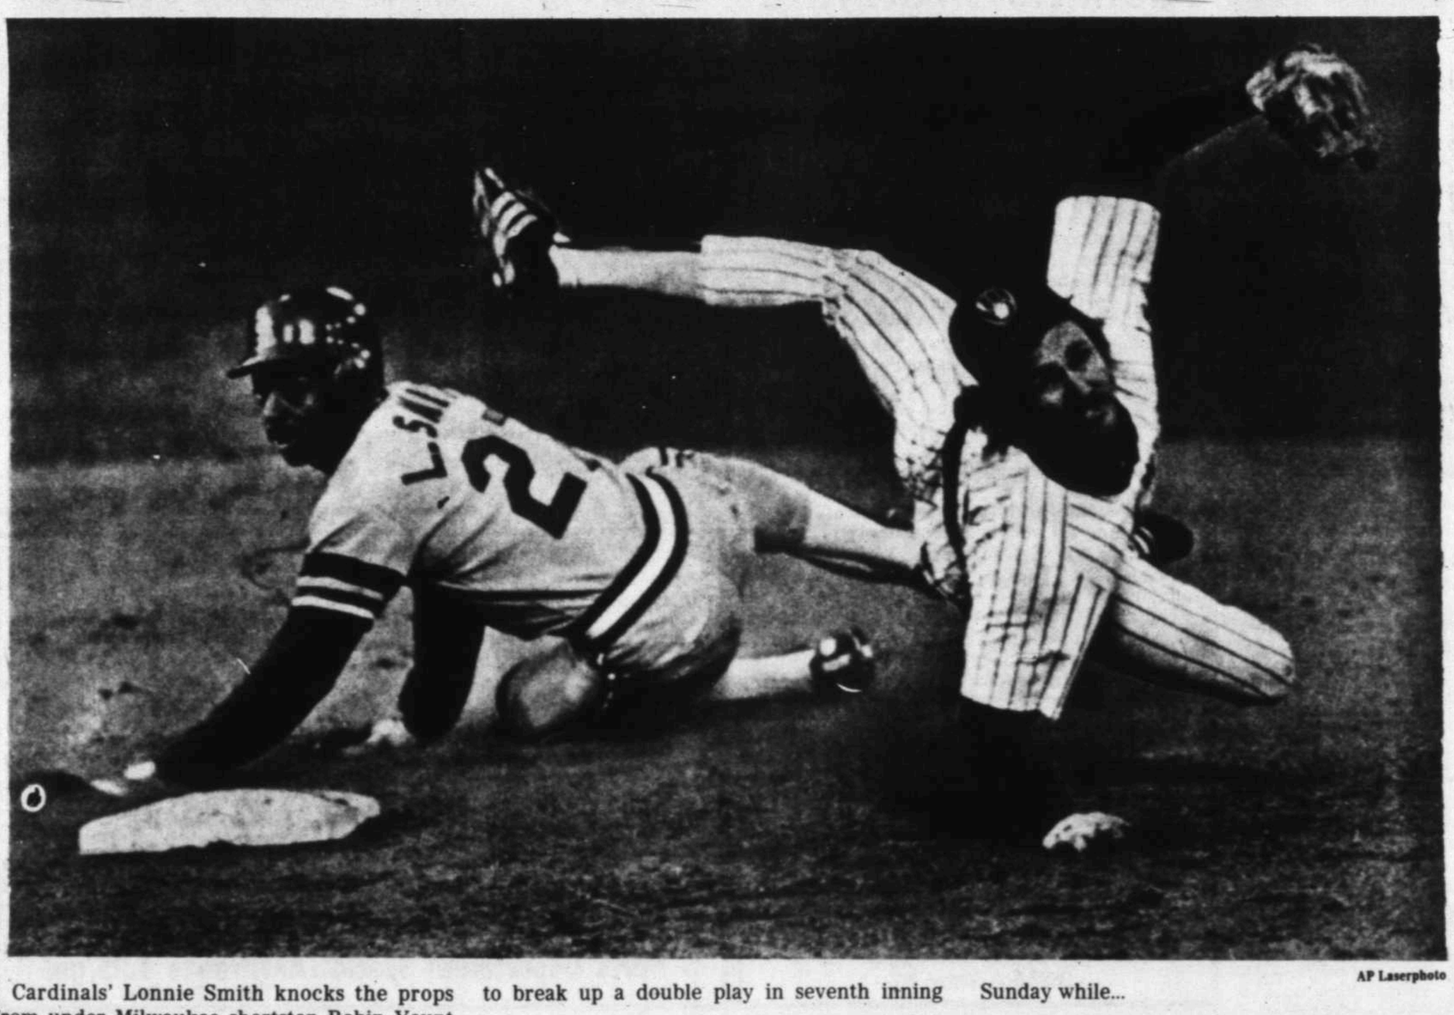

This time, however, it was series MVP that the fans meant.

ON THIS RAW, blustery, basically miserable day, Yount was at the center of almost all the Brewers' mischief making.

Stalled NFL talks resume

COCKEYSVILLE, Md. (AP) — Union chief Ed Garvey returned to the negotiating table as the National Football League players' strike entered its 28th day, following a secret meeting with Dan Rooney, president of the Pittsburgh Steelers and a member of the owners' executive committee.

Garvey and several members of the NFL Players Association's negotiating committee met Sunday with Rooney at Martin Airport in Essex County, Md., less than an hour's drive from this Baltimore suburb where intense and extensive talks have been going on since last Tuesday under the direction of private mediator Sam Kagel.

NEITHER THE nature of the Garvey-Rooney meeting nor who asked for it were known. Both Rooney, contacted by telephone at his home, and union sources refused comment..

Rooney and Garvey set up a meeting of the union chief and the owners' six-member executive committee here Oct. 5, when Garvey failed to sell the owners on the union's wage-scale concept, a pivotal part of its demands for a new collective bargaining agreement.

The talks, which recessed at midnight Sunday, have yet to address in depth the economic issues, the primary reason the union on Sept. 21 called the first inseason strike in the NFL's 63-year history.

And as the talks entered their seventh day, time all but officially ran out on next weekend's games, the fifth to be affected by the dispute.

"It doesn't look like there's any way they can be played," a management source close to the talks said of the Oct. 24-25 games which, if lost, would reduce the season to a maximum 13 weekends. NFL owners and Commissioner Pete Rozelle have said 13 or possibly 12 games would be the minimum acceptable number to maintain the "integrity" of the season. And Coach Bud Grant of the Minnesota Vikings has been quoted as saying he would have to have his players in camp by a Monday in order to be ready to play the following Sunday.

"YOU'RE TALKING about the players having six or seven days to get back and get ready, and maybe even two or three days of two-a-days (twice-daily workouts)," the management source said. "Maybe they would get them in if a settlement came right at the borderline hour. But I can't see a settlement coming within the next 24 hours."

Since Kagel, a 73-year-old San Francisco lawyer, took control of these talks, the two sides have scratched and clawed their way through non-economic issues, spending as many as 19 hours at the table in a 24-hour stretch.

But the operative word still is money — $1.6 billion, to be exact. The owners have offered it in a five-year package. The union wants it in four years. Neither side has budged.

Rookie Collins gets big test this week

IRVING, Texas (AP) — After three Southwest Conference football games, Bobby Collins looks tired. The gray in his hair looks whiter. And he has to play the Texas Longhorns on the road Saturday.

"It will be a battle ... a big game ... but I've been in them before," Collins said Saturday night, hours after his No. 5-ranked Southern Methodist Mustangs had conquered Houston 20-14 in another close one for the new coach.

His teams have beaten Texas Christian and Baylor by three points each in conference encounters.

The former Southern Mississippi coach bristled somewhat when someone suggested the Longhorns and an expected sellout crowd of 80,000 in Memorial Stadium might intimidate him and his Mustangs.

"I've been with teams to Ohio State, Notre Dame, Birmingham, Ala., Tuscaloosa — I'm not exactly a rookie, you know," Collins said. "I'd like to think that the bigger the crowd the better you play ... We've all got a little of that (competitor) in us."

Had Collins taken any preview sneak looks at films of the Longhorns, who were idle over the weekend?

"I haven't seen 'em," he said. "My first look will be at noon Sunday. I just know Texas had a week off to get ready for us."

Will he remind his players of the 9-7 defeat the Longhorns inflicted on the Mustangs last year, the only loss of the year?

"Well, we might try to make 'em aware they lost last year but all I know is they started talking Texas in the dressing room as soon as the (Houston) game was over," Collins said.

Collins said SMU certainly didn't want to go 10-1 this year.

"If you just lose one game that's all people want to talk about," he said. "You're better off going 8-3 ... then they (the alumni) want to talk about the victories ... Of course the players on the team last year remember the Texas loss."

SMU is unbeaten and 3-0 in the conference. Texas is 1-0 and trying to recover from a 28-22 loss to Oklahoma.

The game is set for 1 p.m. although ABC-TV could move the kickoff for a national telecast.

Eric Dickerson gained 241 yards on 27 carries in the victory over Houston.

Collins said, "I wish everybody in the country could have seen it. He's simply the best player in college football today."

Turner takes financial bath on NFLPA All-Stars

WASHINGTON (AP) — Game One of the NFL Players Association-sponsored exhibitions may have been a symbolic victory for the striking players even while it was a financial loss for Turner Broadcasting System.

The National Conference East took a 23-21 victory over an AFC East squad Sunday in the 55,045-seat Robert F. Kennedy Stadium in Washington, D.C. Only 8,760 tickets were sold and the crowd didn't look that big.

Meanwhile, Robert Wussler, vice president of Turner Broadcasting that is paying $500,000 per game to the union, said the cable company "did not come close to covering costs, but we're committed to next week's game. There was tremendous pressure on the advertisers."

Wussler said he had no proof of pressure on advertisers from the league or television networks. "We just know there was tremendous pressure on the advertisers," he said.

Owens said the NFC East team will meet the winner of tonight's contest next Sunday in Toronto.

Redskins' place-kicker Mark Moseley, named the game's most valuable player after kicking three field goals — including a game-winning 45-yarder with 1:01 remaining — said: "The players feel that a game is a game and the union is made up of players who want to play football."

"The fact that we were able to pull the game off, and did it in just a week, is significant," he added. "That's what we have been saying — this is a people's game. We're not selling cars or soap."

Quarterback Gary Danielson of the Detroit Lions threw touchdown passes of 13 yards to John Spagnola of Philadelphia and 48 yards to Mel Gray of St. Louis.

Grand Prix car teams agree to speed curbs

PARIS (AP) — Grand Prix racing teams have surprisingly agreed to drastic rules changes ordered for 1983 to reduce speeds and increase the safety of drivers, track officials and the public, it was learned Monday.

The major changes involved are aerodynamic. The 1983 cars must have flat undersides and may not use the "skirts" which now close the gap between the side body work and the track.

Permian ushered from Real race

Odessa Permian beat Midland Lee Friday night and the rest of District 4-5A is wringing its hands over the fact that the Panthers have locked away their "umpteenth" league title with their "ndreth " straight league win while holding a lodge brother scoreless for the "nth" time in a row.

"What's the use. They've done it again," is the typical reaction of another down-in-the-dumps fan, which is a sad way to look at the vagaries of life.

Let's look at this thing realistically, well, at least, with a chins-up optimism. After all, all is not lost.

WHAT ACTUALLY has happened:

Odessa Permian was eliminated from contention Friday as the District 4-5A second-place representative in the state football playoffs, leaving a seven-way battle for the coveted spot which will pit the winner against the toughest district champion available in bi-district. The 4-5A champion will play some runnerup in bidistrict.

Permian fell from the wild, no-holds-barred struggle for second against Midland Lee, 27-0. This latest development followed hard on the heels of 37-0, 30-0, 31-0 games which left Permian on the outside looking in as the district race barrelled into its final three weeks.

Die-hards on Odessa's east side, admit there is still a mathematical possibility of getting into the race for runnerup, but it isn't voiced with much conviction.

"Only if they mend their ways and become socialable with the rest of us, do they stand a chance," said one follower of a team still in the race. "And it's just as well. Panthers give off a repulsive odor when they break a sweat."

"That may be true," admitted one loyal Permian rooter, who maintains he will stick with the team even if it continues its monotonous habits, "But this Panther hasn't done much sweating this year."

IN ANY case, with Permian out of it, the final three weeks should prove exciting. Midland Lee, Big Spring, San Angelo and Midland High are deadlocked at 2-2 with Odessa High while Abilene and Abilene Cooper at 1-3 are longshots, at best, for the playoffs.

Even comparative scores fail to establish any clear-cut favorite among the 2-2 teams. Big Spring has beaten Midland and Abilene Cooper. Midland has beaten Cooper and Odessa. Odessa has beaten Lee and Cooper. San Angelo has knocked off Cooper and Abilene. And Midland Lee has taken the measure of San Angelo and Abilene.

The most decisive margin in the skirmishing among the teams tied for the coveted playoff berth was Midland's 10-0 win over Odessa.

A COUPLE of sticks of dynamite should loosen the logjam this week with Midland High hosting San Angelo, fresh from an 8-0 win over Abilene, and Midland Lee at Big Spring, whose two-game winning bubble was burst last week by a long-dormant Cooper team that finally woke up, 37-15.

Odessa treks to Abilene, whose lone league victory is a 20-6 win over Big Spring, which holds a 10-7 win over Odessa.

And while the rest of the league loses interest in Odessa Permian, once a hot, pardon the expression, item in 4-5A, the Panthers must finish the season in relative obscurity, except for state polls, hopeful they can avoid breaking a sweat and offending those standing too close.

"It's a terrible cross we must bear," said someone who sounded, but didn't look like Permian Coach John Wilkins, "but we must be brave in times like these and hope for the best."

FOOTBALL—Ten members Denver Broncos say they would return to camp, strike or no strike, if management opens the clubhouse doors. Thirty-one Broncos were polled by The Denver Post, and only two said flatly that they would not report if the strike till were under way. Ten said they would report, 14 were undecided and five declined to comment. Those saying they would return to practice were running back Rob Lytle; offensive linemen Tom Glassic, Keith Uecker, Bill Bryan, Dave Studdard and former Midland Lee-Baylor lineman Keith Bishop; place-kicker Rich Karlis; reserve quarterback Mark Herrmann; tight end Ron Egloff; and linebacker Randy Gradishar...

Dieter Brock threw two touchdown passes and ran for a third as the Winnipeg Blue Bombers defeated the Toronto Argonauts 29-16 in the CFL. Brock passed 32 yards to Kevin Cole for one TD, ran one-yard for another and then hit Ricky Martin with a 30-yard TD toss. The victory, before 42,840 in Toronto...

Darrell Moir intercepted a Tom Clements pass and returned it 20 yards for a TD with 1:09 left to give the Calgary Stampeders a record-setting 55-48 victory over the Hamilton Tiger-Cats in the CFL. The 103 points set a CFL single-game record. The previous high was 96 when Montreal beat Hamilton 82-14 on Oct. 20, 1956. Moir's touchdown came only 28 seconds after Calgary quarterback Gerry Dattilio tied the game on a 6-yard run. Clements threw five touchdown passes...

Pierre Levisse of France was second in 57:56 and Bernie Ford of Great Britain was third in 58:03. Paula Fudge of Britain was the first woman across the finish line, trailed by Annick Loir of France and Angela Deegan of Britain.

Weekend observations:

From the top of the end zone stands at Memorial Stadium isn't a very good place to watch a game, but when you are watching a heavyweight fight, who cares where, as long as you get to see a piece of the action.

Like most football games, it perhaps was one decided as much by mistakes and the ultimate disposition of those mistakes as by any positive action by either team.

In the first period, for example, the game may have hinged on a couple of errant pitchouts, one by each team, on successive series. Permian miscued first, but was lucky enough to recover the ball. If Lee had recovered, the Rebels would have been in four-down range.

Moments later, a Lee pitchout went astray and Permian recovered and converted it into points. One wonders how much difference it might have made if the Lee had converted its opportunity into points and Permian had been a shade too late on the loose Rebel fumble and Lee had retained possession.

From such things momentum is built and upsets sprout...

WE GOT OUR first look at Odessa's Ratliff Stadium, thanks to Sunday's replay of the Odessa-Midland game.

Maybe, it was the color on our set, but the old Red Hosses aren't that Red any more. The Bronchos look more maroon.

Midland won the game 10-0, but one wonders how. The Bulldogs moved the ball well enough to win by a much bigger margin. But then penalties wiped out some big plays and fumbles gave Odessa enough opportunities in scoring range to win it. It all boils down to Big D doing the job under pressure...in fact, it was Big D that supplied the lone Midland touchdown...

Perhaps most impressive bit of skullduggery was pulled off by Midland quarterback Mark Page in the third quarter. He faked the ball so well that the camera man atop stands missed the resulting 25-yard dash up-the-middle, or wherever, completely. So, resorting to the ground level camera...well, it too was focused on

Mark while the runner was dashing out of lense range. Unhappily, the play was called back...

THE STATE'S big 5A game saw No. 10 Trinity Euless upset No. 1 ranked Bryan, 14-13. What makes it interesting to 4-5A fans, both coaches formerly plied their trade in our district. Trinity's John Reddell, of course, coached at Midland High, and very successfully. Bryan's Merrill Green coached at Abilene Cooper and his Jack Mildren-led Cougars went to the state finals one year. Both were teammates at Oklahoma University.

SOMEHOW YOU knew Stanford was in trouble after that freshman returned the kickoff 69 yards to set up the TD that put the Indians ahead of USC 14-7. The TV crew "wowed" he was the fastest player on the Stanford team. So you had to wonder how come that Trojan tackle ran him down from behind...

After Notre Dame beat Miami, a big trouble maker for the Irish last year, it looked like Gerry Faust's bunch might make it to the USC game unbeaten. After all, Arizona had pulled its shocker of the year by tying UCLA the week before. But a 48-yard field goal on the last play of the game gave the Wildcats a victory. Incidentally, somebody got their script fouled up. Notre Dame is supposed to win them that way, not lose them...

When Brownwood played Cleburne in TCU's Amon Carter Stadium Saturday night, 27,500 showed up, which, incidentally, is not the largest crowd for a Texas high school game.

Yount not worrying about MVP laurels

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Robin Yount says he is too busy being a family man and trying to help the Milwaukee Brewers win the World Series to think much about the awesome prospect of being named a "most valuable player."

From his self-effacing point of view, the idea of it seems as cumbersome as all the fuss over his setting records during the Series with the St. Louis Cardinals.

"It is nice to be recognized," he said, "but I'm not after that. I'm just a human being like anyone else who has been gifted with the ability to play baseball."

"It's not that big a deal," he said. "The record makes me feel good, but I'm not concerned unless we win the World Series."

Yount, whose wife is expecting a third child, said an aspect of the Series that lacks appeal for him is the publicity he has attracted.

"If there is a drawback, I suppose it would be all the exposure," he said.

"I realize that when you get to this point, it is all a part of it. Any kid who thought about playing baseball has dreamed about playing in the World Series. The only surprise I have had is the media coverage. I didn't realize there would be so much," he said.

Yount is the first player in World Series history to collect four hits in two different games. He went 4-for-4 Sunday in the 6-4 victory over St. Louis, including a solo homer in the seventh.

Shivering Card fan unhappy

ST. LOUIS (AP) — More than 1,000 cheering, chanting, pennant waving fans, were left out in the cold as they waited in vain for the return of the St. Louis Cardinals after a 6-4 loss to Milwaukee.

"I think it's terrible," wailed Peggy Hennessy, who said she wanted to show her spirit despite the loss which left the Cards down 3-2 in the World Series. "They need to know the fans are behind them."

SMU, Houston headed

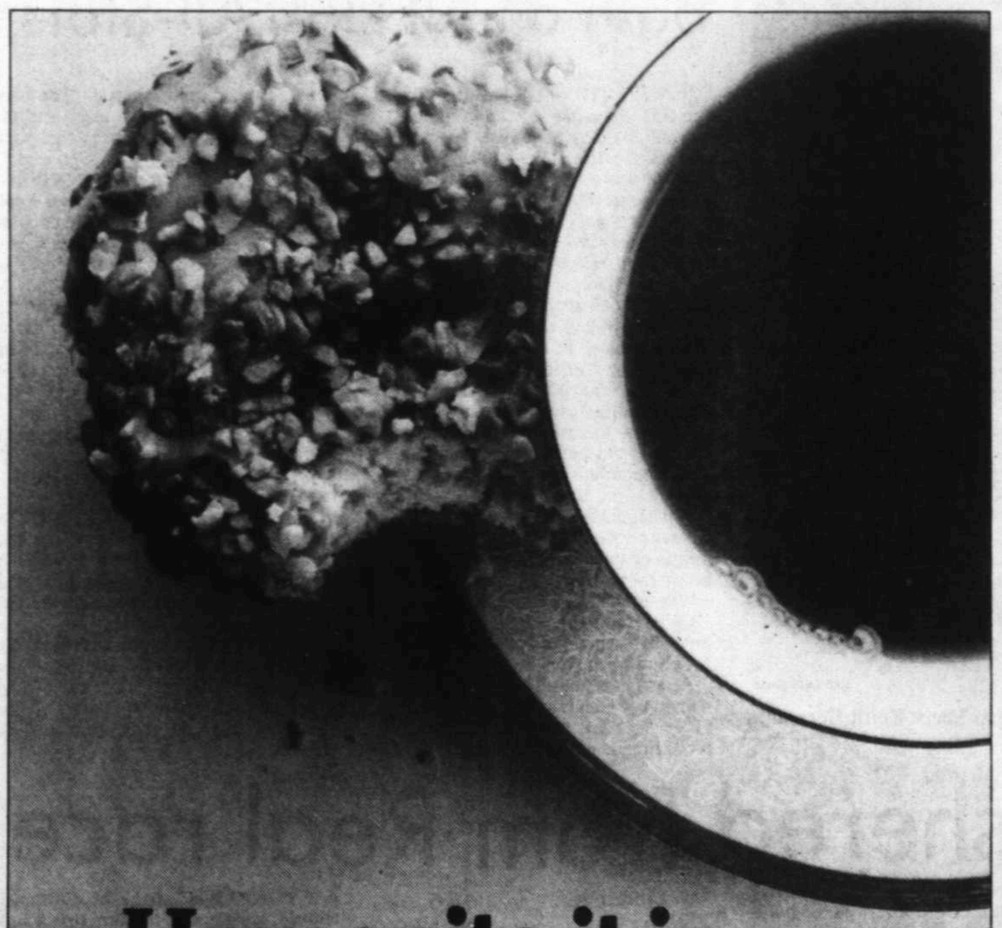

DALLAS (AP) — Southern Methodist and the University of Houston are the likely participants in the 1983 Mirage Bowl game in Tokyo, Japan next fall, according to SMU athletic director Bob Hitch.

Clemson will play Wake Forest in the 1982 contest, scheduled for Nov. 27. The game will be played in Tokyo's 80,000-seat National Stadium and televised live throughout Japan.

Milwaukee drapes Cards over ropes

He hit a first-inning shot off the foot of starter Bob Forsch and scored when Ted Simmons chopped to first.

A couple of innings later, Yount's double was instrumental in the Brewers' scoring another run. Finally, when the Cardinals closed to 3-2 in the seventh, there was Yount again to make a dramatic point. How, you ask? With a home run. And not an ordinary one. Opposite field. Flick of the wrists. Into a gale-force wind. A bullet to the bleachers.

Yount did it with the glove, too. But, then, so did almost every Brewer. Charlie Moore slid across the grass in right to rob Lonnie Smith of a double. Paul Molitor leaped high at third, stomped on the bag, then fired to first for a double play. Cecil Cooper made a diving stop of a shot to his right, then threw from his knees to Caldwell covering to end a rally in the seventh. Yount roamed behind second, ignored a terrible hop and took a hit away from Smith. Jim Gantner dove behind second to hold another ball in the infield and prevent a run.

"Against a mediocre defensive team, we'd have had 20 hits today and I don't know how many runs," said Keith Hernandez, who had three of St. Louis' futile 15 hits.

"Don't know how many hits we'd have had on a turf field," Herzog said with a growl. "We didn't play on turf. Can't cry about that."

"I'm so glad that a national TV audience could see us kill somebody with leather," said Brewers General Manager Harry Dalton. "It kills me that people think we're just a crunch-and-run club."

THE BREWERS could hardly have captured this game with more authority. They scored the first time they got to bat as a Simmons ground out scored Yount. When the Cardinals tied matters, 1-1, on a triple by David Green and double by Hernandez double, the Brewers responded with a go-ahead run in their next time at the plate, this time on a Cooper ground out, scoring Molitor.

The Brewers, just like the textbook says, pushed that margin out to 3-1 with a double by Moore and single by Molitor in the fifth. And, when the Cardinals made scary noises with an RBI single from silent George Hendrick in the seventh, what did Yount do but hit that homer for emphasis.

In fact, when the Brewers beat on Sutter in the eighth for two insurance runs with three smoking singles to center, plus a walk, their 6-2 lead entering the ninth looked like overkill. Surely those clutch two-out RBI hits by Moore and Gantner had merely been window dressing, a final cause for celebration by a Milwaukee crowd that hadn't had a World Champion in County Stadium in 25 years.

However, the Cardinals actually got to bring the go-ahead run to the plate.

Only those whose sensitivities are ground to dust would say that a one-legged manager who has had heart and stomach surgery could make a sequence of colossal mistakes that almost lost a pivotal Series game for his team. So, let's not say it. Let's pretend that there was nothing unusual in leaving Caldwell on the mound in the ninth as, with one out, Green doubled, Hernandez double and Hendrick singled. Let's pretend that anyone might leave in a pitcher who has given 14 hits and let the tie run get to the plate.

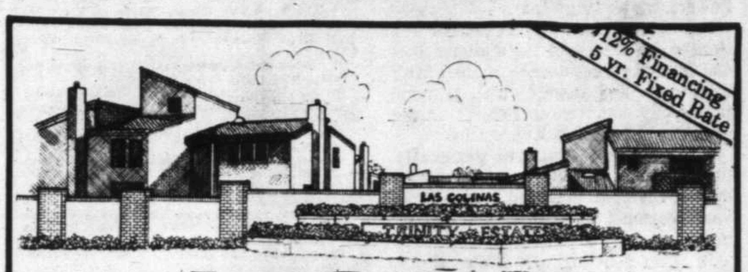

LET'S PRETEND that every Milwaukee heart didn't jump into every Milwaukee throat when Darrell Porter lined reliever Bob McClure's first pitch to right for yet another hit-go-ahead run now at the plate, tying run on first.

And let's sluff over the good fortune needed for McClure to strike out Willie McGee and get Gene Tenace to fly out to end the game. Let's not dwell on why a lefty, McClure, was allowed to work to Tenace,

BOWLING BEAT

Porter tocompete in Special Games

By RANDY ISENBERG

Leonard Porter of the Midland Special Olympics bowling program was selected to represent the Tall City at the International Special Olympics meet in Baton Rouge on July 9-18. Porter, who bowls from a wheelchari, has been bowling in the program for the past six years. Also attending the Special Olympics will be George Ann Powers, the program coach.

Powers has given a great deal of her time to the success of the Midland Special Olympic program. She is one of the most dedicated and unselfish persons in our city and without her continued enthusiasm for the MSO program.

The Midland program generally takes 20 persons each year to the state Special Olympics in Grand Prairie. This year's regional tournament will be conducted at Dellwood Lanes.

In other bowling news, Ron Klein, participating in the Midweek Break Mixed League, converted the 7-10 split, the hardest split to make.

In Ladies Scratch Trio play on Sept., 27, Karen Jordan continued her torrid pace with games of 220 and 211 for an 821 four-game set and Patti Graham rolled games of 201 and 226 for a 782 series. Jordan also rolled games of 245 and 200 for a 634 series in the Wednesday Ladies Scratch League and followed with a 204-584 on Oct. 13.

Ruben Urias rolled a 227 game for a 649 series while bowling in the Chicano Mens League and Loco Quiroz rolled a 606 series. Russ Driever was high in the Alley Cats Mixed League with a 230 game and a 635 series while Joe Nixon paced the Petroleum National Mens League with a 254 game and 615 series.

Upcoming Events: Southwest Amateur Bowlers Association meets in San Angelo and Amarillo on Oct. 16 in Odessa at Sky Lanes on Oct. 23 and in Lubbock at Imperial Lanes on Oct. 23, and in Amarillo on Oct. 30 at Grand Bowl. On Nov. 6, the SWABA returns to Midland at Dellwood Lanes.

Dow Jones Index not the only show in town

By ROBERT E. DALLOS
Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — For the last couple of months, Wall Street has been Page 1 news. From the headlines, the Dow Jones Index looks like the only show in town.

True, the Dow Jones average of 30 individual stocks, which traces its lineage to the 19th Century, is the best-known indicator of action in the stock market. But there are numerous other indexes, many of them rated by some analysts as giving a better picture of the market than the Dow. And a look at several of the major alternative indexes suggests, if anything, even greater strength.

Since the rally began in mid-August, the other indexes have all slightly outpaced the Dow industrials, which closed at 993.10 Friday, up 216.18 points, or 27.8 percent, since Aug. 12.

"The real strong sectors of the stock market over the past eight weeks or so have been largely in high technology and in the consumer area," says Charles Comer, a vice president and manager of technical analysis of Bache Halsey Stuart Shields Inc. "To a larger degree than the other indexes, the Dow is weighted toward the basic industrial sector. The basic industrial stocks have tended to lag a little."

The American Stock Exchange maintains an index of all the nearly 900 stocks traded there. That index, among all the major ones, tallied the highest percentage increase since the mid-August rally. It closed Friday at 313.88, an increase of 76.59 points, or 32.2 percent.

The percentage increases of the other key indexes were very close to one another.

Standard & Poor's Corp. has two broad stock market indexes, the so-called S&P 500 (400 industrials, 20 transportation issues, 40 utilities and 40 financials) and the S&P 400 (the 400 industrials alone). From an Aug. 12 low closing for 1982 of 102.42, the 500 index rose 30.4 percent to 133.57 as of Friday. The S&P 400 industrials climbed in the same period from 114.08 to 149.27, or 30.8 percent.

S&P reports that the best performers in its 500 were the stocks of banks outside New York City, brokerage firms, savings and loans, New York City banks, air freight stocks, communications-equipment manufacturers and hospital-management companies.

The New York Stock Exchange keeps a composite index of all the 1,500 common stock issues listed on the Big Board. It has risen 30.5 percent to 76.74 since the rally began.

About 3,000 over-the-counter common stock issues are contained in the index of the National Association of Securities Dealers Automated Quotation service, more commonly known as the NASDAQ composite. The value-weighted index hit a 1982 high of 205.17 at the close on Wednesday but has since declined a bit. It closed Friday at 204.46, up 28.5 percent from 159.14 at the opening of Aug. 13.

Analysts say the heavy activity on the New York Stock Exchange has had an influence over Amex and OTC trading.

"When you get such heavy volume over on the Big Board," says an official of one exchang3, "it is bound to spill over. People get caught up in this kind of thing. The little guy says, 'hey, I want to get in on this.'"

Trading has been heavy on the Amex. (The Big Board volume, nearly 12 billion shares for the year so far as of Friday, broke the record for any previous entire year on Thursday morning.) On the Amex, volume so far this year has topped 914 million shares.

The Wilshire 5,000 Equity Index, which sums the market value of all publicly traded common equity issues (there are now 5,200), is a meaningful indicator because of its sheer breadth. As might be expected, it is calculated in trillions. It rose 30.24 percent from when the rally started to Friday's close, when it was valued at $1,368,964,000,000. In other words, in two months the value of all stocks traded rose more than $300 billion, according to Wilshire Associates of Santa Monica, Calif., which maintains the index.

All the stock indexes, including the Dow Jones, are still a bit below their record highs. The NASDAQ peak of 223.47 was set on May 29, 1981; the NYSE composite high of 81.02 was reached Nov. 28, 1980; the Amex record is 380.36, set Aug. 13, 1981; the record for the Dow industrials, reached Jan. 11, 1973, is 1,051.70. The peak for the Wilshire, set Nov. 28, 1981, is $1,466,642,000,000.

While conceding that their index of 30 industrials might not cover some sectors of stock trading, the people at Dow Jones nevertheless are quite chauvinistic about it, noting that it covers more than 25 percent of all American stockholdings.

"We don't hold a gun to anybody to use our index," says Charles Stabler, an assistant managing editor of the Wall Street Journal who monitors the index for signs that substitutions should be made in its component stocks. "We just print it. There may not be as many stocks on the Dow industrials as on the other indices, but ours does reflect the broad movement of the market."

Stabler acknowledges that the Dow index does not reflect what is happening in the so-called second-tier stocks, or those traded on the Amex or over the counter. Nor does it reflect "fads in certain industries such as the rise in oil stock prices not too long ago." But, he added, "the markets generally tend to move together."

When Charles H. Dow, the Wall Street Journal's first editor, introduced the first Dow Jones averages, he changed stocks frequently to coincide with the industries about which he was writing. In those days, they were mostly railroads.

Many of the Dow stocks have been in the index since 1928, when it was increased from 20 to 30. Some old-timers: U.S. Steel, Bethlehem Steel, Standard Oil of New Jersey (now Exxon), Postum Inc. (now General Foods) and Allied Chemical (now Allied Corp.).

Since World War II, there have been nine substitutions in the Dow, four of them since the average first topped 1,000 in 1966. The most recent change: American Express for Manville Corp., which in August filed for protection from creditors under Chapter II of the federal bankruptcy laws.

"Dow Jones makes subsitutions," Stabler says, "but it doesn't do it frequently. There is value in consistency."

Progress made on pipeline problem

By ROBERT C. TOTH
Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The United States and its major European allies are making progress on a plan aimed at ending U.S. sanctions against the Soviet natural-gas pipeline, but "it's premature to say we're close to solving this issue," a White House official said Sunday.

Under the plan, Washington and its allies would agree on areas in which economic pressure could be brought against Moscow for its political actions, and the allies would then "commit themselves to study specific actions to take in lieu of our sanctions, said the official, who spoke on the condition that he not be identified by name.

Areas already identified are high-technology exports and economic credits and loans to the Soviet Union, and perhaps grain exports to Moscow as well. Alternative energy supplies so that the European nations can avoid reliance on a proposed second Siberian gas pipeline are also being studied, the official said.

The movement toward resolving the U.S.-European dispute over the sanctions was begun two weeks ago by Secretary of State George P. Shultz in talks with West European foreign ministers at the United Nations, and at a North Atlantic Treaty Organization meeting in Canada immediately afterward.

There is hope that an agreed position, in the form of a joint communique, will result, the official said. But the entire process may yet collapse, he cautioned.

Presidential counselor Edwin Meese III, appearing Sunday on the CBS-TV interview program "Face the Nation," said a New York Times report on the efforts to end U.S. sanctions was a "distorted version" of the process initiated by Shultz. Meese reiterated the White House position that the administration is willing to consider any suitable alternativdes to the U.S. sanctions that the allies may offer.

The New York Times report said Secretary of Commerce Malcolm Baldrige had been prepared to announce an end to U.S. sanctions last week. But the White House official said that report was wrong. "It's premature to say we're close to solving this issue," he said.

France, Britain, West Germany and Italy have extensive contracts and credit arrangements with Moscow to supply equipment for the pipeline now under construction.

President Reagan banned the shipment of any U.S.-made equipment for the pipeline to punish the Kremlin for its role in the martial-law crackdown in Poland. And he said that the United States would apply sanctions against any foreign company supplying U.S.-licensed equipment for the project.

Companies in all four countries have defied the threat and have been banned from receiving any further U.S. petroleum related technology and equipment.

While the Reagan administration opposes the pipeline as potentially increasing West European dependence on the Soviet Union, and giving the Soviets Western hard currency that can be used to bolster their economy, the Europeans say they have valid contracts to supply the pipeline materials and will not renege. They also discount the U.S. argument about dependence.

The dispute has caused strains in U.S.-European relations that some experts contend are the most severe in decades.

Italy appears most eager to end the confrontation with the United States, with France least flexible, the official said. Britain, and West Germany, since its new conservative government took office, are siding more with Italy, he said.

The European nations are not being asked to take actions that directly substitite for the sanctions or are more punitive, before the United States lifts its sanctions, the official said. Rather, they are being asked "to agree on a specific plan, to agree on intentions toward actions" in those areas identified as pressure points, before the United States will ease its stand, the official said.

There appear to be differences among U.S. agencies and administration leaders on the nature and extent to which European governments must publicly commit themselves to take economic steps against Moscow to influence its behavior.

Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger is identified as the leader of the hard-liners who want the firmest European commitments, while Shultz, Baldrige and special trade representative Bill Brock appear more willing to accept face-saving language from the allies in their desire to restore political and economic harmony within the Atlantic Alliance.

The White House position, while closer now to the hard-liners, may ease as the bargaining process continues.

More securities analysts saying oil slump over

By ROBERT BURNS
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A growing number of securities analysts are proclaiming the worst of the oil industry slump is over, and the optimism is pumping new life into energy stocks.

As a group, oil stocks had lagged behind the big gainers in the stock market's spectacular October rally. But in recent days the oil and oil-service issues have surged, dominating the list of most-active issues on the New York Stock Exchange.

The big gainers among the international oils include Exxon and Standard Oil of California, while Schlumberger and Halliburton are among the oil service leaders.

For most of the past year, oil stocks have weakened as oil prices edged ower and a large oversupply of crude oil and refined products flooded the market.

While few analysts see a quick turnaround in oil prices, they now see less chance of a collapse and, thus, less chance of widespread carnage in the oil business.

Earlier this year the stock market seemed to be heeding the warnings of some analysts that oil prices could fall to $20 a barrel or lower, from the current level of about $33. The value of most of the dominant oil stocks tumbled.

The recent revival of energy issues has arrived with scant evidence that conditions in the world oil markets have improved substantially. Instead, it seems, investors are less willing to accept the idea that oil prices will plummet.

The oil service issues, which had been high fliers as recently as last year before sagging this year, have rebounded on expectations of an increase next year in domestic drilling. The federal government's sale last Wednesday of oil and natural gas leases in a promising area off the Alaska coast heightened the expectations of a pickup in drilling in 1983, analysts said.

The energy group also was supported by a new forecast by the International Energy Agency, an organization established by the United States and 20 other major industrial nations to cope with the energy crisis. The agency said that while oil prices should remain stable through the mid-1980s, prices are likely to begin a sharp acceleration in later years as oil production declines and demand rises.

Another factor working in oil's favor is the approach of the winter heating season, when demand for heating oil usually increases and profits thus are heftier.

Despite the turnaround in energy's fortunes on Wall Street, analysts caution that a recovery in oil markets will be slow. One of the biggest uncertainties is the prospects for the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to avoid driving too much oil onto the market or starting a price-cutting war.

Also, the timing of an economic recovery in the United States and in major Western European countries also is critical to the upswing in oil demand that many analysts are predicting.

Few economists expect the U.S. economy to show much improvement this year, but a consensus appears to be developing for a noticeable revival in 1983. That is expected to increase demand for industrial use of residual oil and perhaps a jump in motorist demand for gasoline.

Vandal brags about his exploits, calls it 'ecotage'

DENVER (AP) — A man who says he is responsible for some sabotage committed to prevent construction projects from intruding in wilderness areas doubts he would be prosecuted if caught because the companies "don't want any martyrs."

The man, identified as "Bob" in an interview published Sunday in the Rocky Mountain News, said he learned from experience that barbed wire can wreak havoc in oil fields when dropped down a drill hole, and liquid fiberglass is better than sugar when trying to damage a fuel tank. The sabatoge, dubbed "ecotage," is occurring more often, and its perpetrators are hard to catch.

"The general attitude is that you are not going to be able to catch them in a remote area some time after the crime," said Bob Lindley, president of R.T.L. Investigation and Security Co. of Boulder, one of the firms that handles such cases.

But Bob said even if he were caught, he doubts he would be charged.

"They don't want any heroes ... They don't want any martyrs," he said of the companies.

Fred Kingwell, a spokesman for the Bridger-Teton National Forest in Wyoming, agreed.

"They (companies) do try to keep it quiet," Kingwell said. "They find it (publicity) encourages that kind of activity. The industry has perhaps accepted things that happen so the people who did it don't get the publicity."

Ecotage usually occurs in areas where there has been opposition to a project, with the destruction directed at thwarting the project, say county sheriff's and company officials.

Bob said he turned to ecotage because he was frustrated by seeing energy companies destroy wilderness areas to drill dry holes and gain tax writeoffs and timber companies clear-cut marginal areas to obtain government subsidies.

"These are scenic areas that many people have an emotional attachment to," Bob said. "One of the functions I serve is to make the Sierra Club look responsible."

The Sierra Club, as well as most other environmental groups, condemn ecotage.

Officials say ecotage occurred, among other places, during widening of Interstate 70 in a popular southwestern Utah backpacking area, on a road being built for a Getty Oil project near Jackson Hole, Wyo., and at the proposed AMAX Inc. molybdenum mine near Crested Butte, Colo. The most costly incident was the sawing of power line supports west of Durango, Colo., in 1980. Some 3.2 miles of line fell and officials said repairs cost $270,000.

Chrysler, UAW begin new round of contract talks

HIGHLAND PARK, Mich. (AP) — A new round of contract talks between Chrysler Corp. and the United Auto Workers union resumed today, with the union awaiting word on whether Chrysler will give autoworkers an immediate pay raise.

"Today is the listening day," Marc Stepp, the UAW vice president in charge of the union's Chrysler department, said today as he entered Chrysler building where negotiations were being held.

The union had demanded the pay raise Friday, but the company said it would study the proposal over the weekend and get back to the union today.

Negotiations on a Chrysler-UAW pact were reopened Friday after workers voted overwhelmingly against a tentative agreement that contained no immediate pay boost.

"When we get the (company's) reaction, then I think we will be in a position to make a decision on what we're going to do (about setting a strike deadline)," Fraser said.

The talks should be completed "one way or another" by Friday, Fraser said. He said autoworkers probably would stay on the job until the union authorized a strike.

The UAW did not say how much of a raise it is seeking, but Fraser has told reporters that more than $1 an hour "has a nice ring to it."

The union also said autoworkers were unhappy with provisions to penalize frequently absent workers and with the ratio of supervisors to workers in plants.

Chrysler spokesman Charles Scales said the automaker had no comment.

Fraser said he would not agree to rearrange workers' current benefits to make up for an immediate pay raise.

"Obviously, they know and we know the kinds of moves that have to be made," he said. "Once they give us a signal or an indication that they want to improve the offer, we could do it very, very quickly."

Seventy percent of the autoworkers who cast ballots rejected the tentative agreement. About 43,200 working U.S. autoworkers plus an uncalculated number of the 40,000 on indefinite layoff were eligible to vote.

"Clearly the Chrysler workers are saying almost in a single voice that they want a wage increase up front," Fraser said.

It was the first tentative UAW contract at one of the Big Three U.S. automakers to be rejected by a vote of hourly skilled and unskilled workers. In the 1970s, Chrysler engineers represented by the union rejected a tentative contract, and in 1973 skilled tradesmen at Ford Motor Co. rejected a tentative accord.

Oil man's dealings investigated

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal grand jury is investigating charges that an owner of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp. improperly diverted $23 million in profits from an oil company he controls to a Swiss affiliate, the Washington Post reported Monday.

The newspaper said the U.S. attorney's office for the Southern District of New York started the investigation of Marc Rich earlier this year. Rich, a New York City resident, is half owner of the film company and is also one of the largest crude-oil traders in the country.

Upon the request of the U.S. attorney's office, the Internal Revenue Service has also entered the case to determine whether Rich's worldide trading practices violated tax law.

The Post said it interviewed two Texas crude-oil traders who had pleaded guilty and served 10-month prison sentences in connection with unrelated oil transactions.

The men, David Ratliff and John Troland, said they told investigators their firm, West Texas Marketing Corp. of Abilene, made transactions with Rich's company, Rich & Co. International Ltd., the Post reported.

The men said they told authorities that Rich's company sold their firm volumes of allegedly price-controlled crude.

Kickback scheme checked

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Authorities say they are investigating allegations of a possible $97 million kickback scheme in which Mexico's state oil monopoly Pemex bought overpriced hardware from a Houston-based oil field equipment company.

The federal attorney's office said Sunday that an audit of the monopoly's dealings with Crawford Enterprises Inc. between 1977 and 1980 showed that equipment Pemex purchased from the U.S. company in the three-year period ranged between 35 and 45 percent above its list price.

Spokesmen for Crawford refused to comment on the Mexican report.

In a statement, the federal attorney's office said that "it is proven that the oil equipment Pemex acquired through Crawford Enterprises represented a notable increase over prices set by the manufacturers and that these could have been acquired at less cost."

Officials said investigators have already compiled a 5,000-page study on the case.

The statement said purchases of overpriced equipment continued to be made through Crawford even after the actual manufacturer, C.E. Miller Corp., notified Pemex in writing that it could provide the equipment for millions of dollars less.

It said shady dealings involved Crawford, unidentified Pemex officials and a brokerage company that represented Crawford. The brokerage company, Grupo Industrial Delta, made headlines here earlier this year after four of five members of its board of directors were charged with evading taxes on at least $45 million.

Last month, another Houston-based company, Ruston Gas Turbine Inc., pleaded guilty to charges of helping bribe officials of Pemex and was fined $750,000 by a federal judge.

Crawford was named in court papers as the company that arranged that scheme by approaching two Ruston officials in October 1977, but no charges were brought against Crawford.

Money supply up $6.9 billion

NEW YORK (AP) — The money supply rose $6.9 billion in the first week of October, but the increase was expected by Wall Street and economists expected little effect on interest rates.

Indeed, bond prices recovered somewhat following release of the money figures late Friday, and interest rates on short-term government securities fell.

The increase came in the Federal Reserve's broad measure of money, M1, which includes cash in circulation and deposits in checking accounts. Until last week, a surge in M1 would have raised fears of a new round of credit tightening by the Fed, which seeks to contain money growth so as not to fuel inflation.

But last week the central bank decided it would temporarily pay less attention to money growth because of upcoming technical factors that could distort the figures.

One of those factors was the expiration of All Savers Certificates at the start of this month, and it was expected that much of the money previously tied up in those certificates would make its way into the M1 pool.

Way cleared for grain deal

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan cleared the way for the Soviet Union to buy up to 23 million metric tons of U.S. wheat and corn — with a delivery guarantee as a special bonus.

Reagan acknowledged, however, that there is no certainty that the Soviets will buy that much or that they will snap at his offer to guarantee delivery of grain purchased during the month of November and shipped within 180 days.

The announcement was made in a radio address Friday.

"Things haven't been very good down on the farm," Reagan told his audience. "Your are carrying tremendous burdens, sometimes impossible burdens."

According to Agriculture Department estimates, net farm income will be down for the third straight year, and debt is at an all-time high.

Reagan's offer of additional grain comes at the same time that he is trying to enforce a ban on European exports of U.S. high technology to Moscow.

"It is hardly understandable for Europeans that one introduces an embargo against technical equipment (for the pipeline) and argues against the alleged foreign currency income derived by this, and on the other hand exports grain," said a spokesman for the West Germany economic ministry, who declined to be identified.

Reagan signs financial bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has signed a bill that will put banks and savings and loan associations in competition with high-interest money market funds.

"This bill is the most important legislation for financial institutions in the last 50 years," Reagan said in a ceremony Friday.

The bill, hailed by Reagan as an "historic reform" and the first step toward comprehensive financial deregulation, will allow banks and thrift institutions to offer deposit accounts at market interest rates, with limited checking account features and no withdrawal penalties.

Unlike the money markets, the accounts will be federally insured.

At the same time, the law will allow thrift institutions to make commercial loans.

Banking analysts say the law should allow banks and thrift institutions to lure away money from the money markets, which now have about $200 billion in assets.

That, in turn, should make more money available for mortgage lending.

Budd Co. wants concessions

DETROIT (AP) — The Budd Co., expecting fiscal 1982 losses to top $126 million, wants more concessions from workers who already have given up cost-of-living increases and paid personal holidays, the company says.

Budd officials have been meeting with employees to explain the plight of the firm, which has been hit hard by declines in the auto industry and the loss of lucrative subway car contracts, spokesman Paul Sichert said Friday.

The company has not yet determined its losses for the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30, but the figure already has reached $126 million, Sichert said.

Budd, based in the Detroit suburb of Troy, is "in serious financial trouble" and "its only hope is concessions from the workers," Budd President James McNeal Jr. said Thursday night.

The United Auto Workers union agreed last spring to give up cost-of-living increases and paid personal holidays until the end of the year in exchange for job guarantees from Budd.

The company has met informally with the UAW to discuss reopening the contract, but no list of concessions has been presented and a timetable for has not been set, Sichert said.

UAW President Douglas A. Fraser declined comment Friday on the company's request.

More Canadians bankrupt

OTTAWA (AP) — Canadian bankruptcies rose to 3,937 in September, up 50.9 percent from 2,609 in September 1981, the Consumer and Corporate Affairs Department reported.

January-September bankruptcies totaled 30,374, up 36.8 percent from 22,204 a year earlier, the government said Friday.

Of the September total, bankruptcies by individuals accounted for 3,007, up 51.0 percent from 1,991 a year earlier, and business failures for 930, up 50.5 percent from the year-earlier's 618.

Bells peal for steel industry

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Church bells rang and factory sirens moaned in steel towns hard hit by unemployment, as distress signals for an industry suffering its worst slump since the Depression.

"The response was firm and loud. It was very impressive," said specialty steel industry spokesman Hubert Delano, who was in downtown Pittsburgh Friday when bells tolled at noon from churches and the courthouse.

"We hope President Reagan will hear and find an opportunity to sit down with us and the president of the United Steelworkers of America. We believe the jobs lost are far too many and the anguish far too great," Delano said.

The Specialty Steel Industry of the United States, a corporate lobby group, and the union organized the demonstration after efforts to meet with Reagan over import restrictions were unsuccessful.

"We rang the courthouse carillon chimes. Then we began an hour of patriotic hymns. The electricians turned it up full volume to make sure it was heard as far as possible," said Allegheny County communications director George Thomas. "Let's hope we can ring the bells again when everyone goes back to work."

The American Iron and Steel Institute, another trade group, estimates industry unemployment is close to 45 percent with some 200,000 steelworkers laid off.

September diesel car sales off

DETROIT (AP) — U.S. diesel car makers last month recorded their lowest September sales figures since 1979, an industry trade journal reported today.

Despite optimistic forecasts, sales figures were down 38 percent from September 1981, according to Ward's Automotive Reports.

Ward's said only 29,277 diesel-equipped cars were sold in the United States last month, down from 47,291 a year ago and the lowest September figure since 11,718 were sold in 1979, when only five carmakers were in the diesel market. Currently, 12 automakers are selling diesels in the United States.

For the first nine months of 1982, diesel car sales have fallen to 273,493 from 397,316 in the year-ago period, Ward's said.

However, Chase Econometrics last week released a study predicting diesel engines in 14 percent of all new cars sold in the United States by 1985 and 17 percent of light trucks. That translates into 1.7 million diesel cars and light trucks, based on Chase's forecast for overall new vehicle sales in 1985.

EEC to leave grain deal alone

NYBORG, Denmark (AP) — European foreign ministers vowed Sunday not to interfere in U.S. grain sales to the Soviet Union, despite the U.S. ban on pipeline technology.

The European Economic Community ministers, ending a two-day informal meeting under tight security at a seaside Danish hotel, called for "constructive dialogue" between the EEC and the United States.

"Our relations should be based on reciprocity," said Foreign Minister Uffe Ellemann-Jensen of Denmark, current president of the EEC council.

"It is as valid for them (the Americans) to protect their interests as it is for us to protect our interests. It's like that among good friends, isn't it?" he said to reporters.

GM, Chrysler to show quarterly profit

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. and perhaps Chrysler Corp. will be the only domestic automakers to show a profit for the third quarter and industry losses will total $150 million to $350 million, auto industry analysts say.

"General Motors will make money because they were able to control their costs," said Arvid Jouppi, an independent analyst in Detroit.

Five other analysts agreed. Their predictions of GM earnings ranged from $25 million to $75 million for the third quarter, traditionally the industry's toughest because of startup costs for new models.

GM has earned $688.3 million so far this year. It lost $468 million in the third quarter of last year. U.S. sales this year are down 12.8 percent from last year's tally.

Analysts say that if Chrysler reports a profit in the third quarter, it won't be much.

United Auto Workers union President Douglas Fraser, who sits on the board of directors at Chrysler, has predicted the company will show a quartlery profit, but has declined to say how much.

Any profit will be "under $10 million," said David Healy, analyst at Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. in New York.

Chrysler reported profits of $256.8 million in the first half of 1982. In the third quarter of 1981, it lost $140.1 million. Chrysler car sales this year are off 11.8 percent from a year earlier.

The six analysts agreed that Ford Motor Co. will lose millions of dollars in the third quarter, with the loss estimates ranging from $125 million to $360 million.

"Their North American sales volume in the third quarter was 15 percent below the already-depressed levels of 1981," Healy said. "And they have no particularly hot-selling car" in the profit-rich luxury or specialty car markets.

Earlier this month, former Ford Chairman Henry Ford II admitted the company would be in the red, but would not say by how much.

Ford lost $97.1 million in the first half of 1982. It lost $335 million in the third quarter of 1981. U.S. sales so far this year are off 8.6 percent from year-ago levels.

American Motors Corp. will be in the red for the 10th straight quarter, analysts said, despite the introduction of its first subcompact, the Renault Alliance, in late September.

"I can't believe the car will take off that fast" and pull AMC into the black, said Arthur Davis, analyst at Prescott, Ball & Turben in Cleveland.

"They can't be making much money on it," said Mary Ann Keller, analyst at Paine Webber, Mitchell Hutchins & Co. in New York. "It's very, very low-priced."

Base price for the Alliance is $5,595.

AMC has lost $119.7 million so far this year. It lost $16.8 million in the third quarter of last year. So far this year, AMC car sales in the United States have dropped 34 percent from 1981 figures.

The last time the automaker had a quarterly profit was in the first quarter of 1980, when it earned $1.3 million.

The fifth domestic carmaker, Volkswagen of America Inc., is a subsidiary of Volkswagenwerk A.G. of West Germany and does not release quarterly earnings separate from its parent firm.

Texas Energy doubles Wyoming coal lease bid

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — Texas Energy Services Inc. doubled its bid on the second offering of a 4,855-acre federal coal lease in Campbell County and ended up the high bidder at $22.3 million, the federal Bureau of Land Management said.

The Rocky Butte tract, with estimated coal reserves of 445 million tons, was offered in the biggest federal coal lease sale in history April 28, and Texas Energy of Houston had made the highest bid then of $2,300 an acre.

But a review by the U.S. Minerals Management Service and Justice Department determined the bid was below the fair market value. Texas Energy's new bid of $4,600 an acre will go through the same review, according to BLM spokeswoman Pat Korp.

The only other tract up for bid Friday was the 328-acre Fortin Draw lease, with estimated coal reserves of 26.6 million tons. The only bid for that tract was $4,225 an acre, for a total $1.3 million, by WyoDak Resources Development Corp. of Rapid City, S.D.

Rocky Butte is seven miles southeast of Gillette, and Fortin Draw is five miles east of Gillette.

The April 28 sale of coal leases in Wyoming and Montana brought the government $54 million, but then Texas Energy's $11 million bid was rejected.

A suit in federal court in Montana challenges the sale, contending it wasn't needed, lacked an adequate environmental impact statement and should have been delayed to get a better price for the coal.

Let's Talk. There has been a lot of information lately about where Southwestern Bell is headed. About where our coming separation from AT&T is going to take us. We want you to understand what's ahead. What changes are coming. How they'll affect you. So let's talk.

Q. Is Southwestern Bell really going to be split off from the Bell System?

A. Yes. AT&T will separate Southwestern Bell and the other local Bell telephone companies from the Bell System. Southwestern Bell will be an independent company.

Q. I own AT&T stock. Will my investment be split between AT&T and the local operating companies?

A. Yes. Your AT&T stock represents an investment in the total Bell System—AT&T and each of its units, including Southwestern Bell.

Q. Can I arrange to receive all my holdings only in Southwestern Bell?

A. No. At divestiture, each AT&T shareholder will receive a piece of the new AT&T company plus a proportionate value of the divested companies (organized into seven operating regions). After divestiture, however, each share owner can decide whether to retain all or part of that investment.

If you have other questions, let's talk. Just call 1-800-555-5000 between 11 a.m. and 8 p.m., Monday-Friday.

There'll be someone to talk to.

Or send in this coupon. You'll get our free booklet, "Let's Talk."

CAUTION: GENIUS AT WORK

By the late-night light of his drafting table lamp, Watlington ponders another scientific puzzle.

In a workroom populated as much by hot pads and potted plants as electrical gizmos, dials and switches, Steve Watlington sifts through nature's ingredients and quenches his life-long thirst for knowledge.

It's an unlikely location for a laboratory; a cinderblock garage adjoining a rambling, vine-shrouded house on Midland's south side. A workplace as much unlike the catacombed castles frequented by movie mad scientists as its owner and chief occupant differs from infamous cinema crazies like Legosi and Karloff.

There Watlington, 39, a self-described "investigator," explores questions of electricity, optics and energy — whatever piques his curiousity — with an inquisitiveness spawned by childhood ruminations on clattering lightning bolts.

Born the son of Tom and Mattie Pearl Watlington in Houston Nov. 17, 1942, Watlington's family moved to Midland while he was still an infant. Watlington grew up around his father's welding shop, where he learned the craft at an early age.

"I WAS ALWAYS fascinated by the arc, the brilliance of it. My dad said, 'If you're going to be burning up welding rods, you might as well learn how to weld.'"

As a youngster, Watlington pestered his father continually to buy him a lightning rod — a gift he just recently received. "I was always fascinated by lightning. The power of it, the awesome energy and the destruction it can do. Something you can see but you can't control."

At 17, Watlington found himself fascinated with many things, high school not among them. He eventually quit, and threw his efforts behind a subject he fancied, designing and constructing a small jet engine.

He later mounted the engine on a small vehicle and made several dust-spewing test drives along southside roads.

WHEN ASKED WHERE a 17-year-old gets the knowledge and ability to build such a machine, soft-spoken Watlington struggles to find a definitive response.

"You just pick things up," he said with a shy smile and a shoulder shrug. "I sure didn't learn it in school. School is the most boring place I've been in my life."

He entered jet engine mechanic training in the Air Force, but became disillusioned with the program. "I was fixing to set the world on fire. If I go after something I go after it all the way."

He was disappointed to find his colleagues somewhat less serious about their work, and received an honorable discharge after four months.

He returned to Midland and worked as a welder for a time. Later, he received his GED from Odessa High School before enrolling at Abilene Christian University. But there again he found the classroom atmosphere more restrictive than conducive to his boundless appetite for investigation.

"I DIDN'T HAVE the interest to keep from flunking, really. The classroom is just not where I'm supposed to be."

Shortly after leaving college, he contacted the General Electric High Voltage Laboratory in Pittsfield, Mass., to arrange a "look's" tour in 1966.

GE officials saw that Watlington knew plenty about electricity, waved their two-year college requirement and hired him as a high-voltage technician.

Although Watlington enjoyed the high-voltage testing, he describes himself as "a pretty flighty" person. Intellectual wanderlust once again grabbed hold and he returned to Midland.

Ensuing years brought a flurry of activity — in fits and starts.

Although Watlington has a keen interest in astronomy and the mechanics and optics of telescopes, he considered but declined a job offer at the Mount Palomar Observatory in California, at the time the location of the world's largest telescope.

FOLLOWING THE path of his older brother, Mike, he took flying lessons and soon received his pilot's license. After working as a flight instructor for several months, once narrowly helping a student pilot avoid an onrushing plane with a tricky, aerobatic manuever, Watlington was grounded by the Federal Aviation Administration.

"I was too much of a daredevil, flying under bridges and stuff. If I'd stayed with it, I probably wouldn't be here now."

Soon afterward, 27-year-old Watlington began planning and constructing a turbine engine which ran on almost any fuel, including crude oil and discarded motor oil. He said the engine, while not the most efficient power source, was an extremely effective heat generator.

In 1970, McMurray Oil Tool Co. of Houston showed an interest in his creation, but Watlington said the company was never able to properly reproduce his design.

When asked where he acquired the know-how for his creation, Watlington again merely smiles and shrugs. "All you have to do is ask questions. This little black box (the telephone) ties you to the finest minds in the country.

"IF YOU CAN comprehend how a thing works, you can make it. When you understand how a thing works, it's a piece of cake, really."

In recent years, Watlington has generated enough "cake" to fill a good-sized bakery. From an El Paso company he obtained a bank of electrical capacitors capable of storing and then releasing a burst of about 110 billion watts of electricity.

Watlington uses the "juice" to power a one-megawatt laser he constructed. On a much larger scale, Watlington has contemplated building a 27 billion watt CO2 laser that could be fired at thunderheads to discharge the cloud and help decrease the potential for lightning-induced forest fires.

For now, Watlington is puzzling through using high energy levels and a magnetic bottle to implode a deterium-trinium, gold-plated pellet with enough energy to produce a fusion reaction that would emit usable energy without radioactive waste.

He said some of the country's finest scientific minds are also working on the problem. "It's still a mystery to me how to do it. I don't have the answer."

AFTER SOME astronomy classes at Midland College, Watlington took an interest in the optics of telescopes. He designed and built a mirror-grinding machine and later constructed a vacuum deposition apparatus used in applying reflective metal coating to mirrors.

Watlington recently "went public" with his mirror coating business. For his own enjoyment, he ground a 12,000 mm telephoto lens that enables the viewer to read the mint date of a penny perched on a stump across the street.

For about six cents worth of electricity per gallon, Watlington's water distiller purifies Midland water. He designed and machined a silencer for a .22-caliber rifle.

Watlington isn't all explosives and electricity, either. Although he cannot read music, he taught himself to play piano and will occasionally bang out a bit of Beethoven or a snappy boogie woogie.

He enjoys camping and motorcycle riding in the mountains near Cloudcroft, N.M. "I guess the closest I come to content is really busting my buns on that motorcycle up by Cloudcroft, trying to see one more tree, one more mountain."

IN 1975, Watlington purchased a hang glider and began "making like a buzzard" on the sand hills near Monahans. Later, he tackled the Scenic Lookout Mountain at the Big Spring State Park.

The "buzzard" stalled during a flight from a 210-foot cliff. As he plummeted to earth, Watlington recalled, "I didn't say, 'God save me.' It's more like, 'I'm in your hands now.'

"It was just like throwing a Coke bottle down," he says, describing the X-rays of his shattered legs.

Doctors eventually amputated his left leg at mid-calf, sending Watlington into deep depression. While considering an artificial limb, Watlington summoned another amputee to his hospital room for advice.

"I looked at his legs and I couldn't tell which one was artificial and which was real," he said. "From that point on, I was ready to get the show on the road, get it over with and get going."

AFTER MONTHS recuperating, Watlington was fitted with an artificial leg. Later, because his right ankle was severely maimed in the accident, another amputation was performed and Watlington received his second artificial leg.

Although most amputees go through several artificial limbs as their natural limbs shrink, Watlington quickly put his ingenuity to work to save himself some money and walk comfortably.

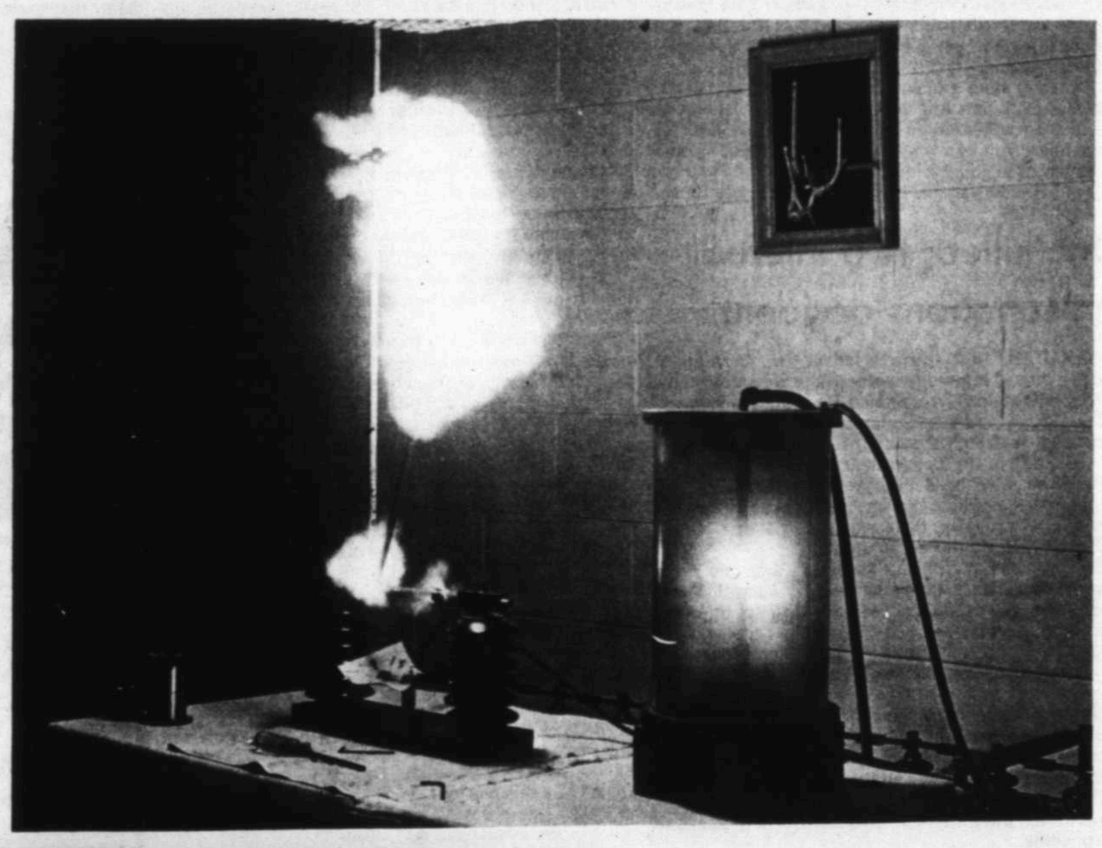

He occasionally uses a hypodermic needle to inject hot paraffin into the limb lining, allowing the leg to mold to his stump.

Typically, Watlington is unpretentious about his creations. "All my stuff and 50 cents will buy you a cup of coffee," he said, chuckling.

But the facts belie his modesty. Bob Howard, distribution operation supervisor for Texas Electric Service Company, said his company has drawn on Watlington's knowledge in staging high-voltage experiments for new employees. He helped a local drilling company establish a reverse electroplating process to recover diamonds from drill bits.

Jerry Petree, Midland's fire marshal, said Watlington's acquired knowledge of explosives has aided the city in some touchy situations.

"Whenever I have a question pertaining to anything that has to do with explosives, I rely on Steve for the information," said Petree. "It never ceases to amaze me how he knows so much about so many things. I'm glad he's on our side."

For a few microseconds, Watlington's power supply creates a a booming, 6.875 billion watt burst of electricity. He said the blast represents a power level greater than that generated by Texas Electric Service Company during its peak summer periods.

Watlington peers through a glass of water tapped fresh from his distiller, at far left. He said the apparatus uses about six cents of electricity to purify a gallon of Midland tap water.

Among his many areas of expertise, Watlington possesses an insight into explosives. At left he displays a ¼-inch steel plate peeled opened by a fist-sized shape charge.

DEATHS

Milton B. Harris

Services for Milton Boyd Harris, 19, of Midland are pending with the Hanner Funeral Home in Atlanta. Local arrangements are being handled by Easterling-Wilson Funeral Home in Odessa.

He died Saturday in an automobile accident.

Harris was born May 22, 1963, in Texarkana, Ark. He was a painter and member of the Baptist churh.

Survivors include his father, Phillip Harris of Midland; his mother, Joy Lynn Smith of Little Rock, Ark.; a brother, Anthony Dean Harris of Midland; and his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Bud Harris of Atlanta and Mr. and Mrs. George Davis of Texarkana.

Dean L. Hambrick

LUBBOCK — Services for Dean Lewis Hambrick, 68, of Lubbock, father of Larry Hambrick of Midland, will be at 2 p.m. Tuesday in Sanders Funeral Home Chapel with Dr. Dudley Strain, pastor of Westmont Christian Church in Lubbock, officiating. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park in Lubbock.

He died Sunday in a Lubbock hospital.

Hambrick was born in Texas, moving to Lubbock from Lamesa in 1957. He married Bovie Cummings in 1957 in Lubbock. He was a member of the Baptist Church.

Other survivors include his wife, another son, five stepsons, two step daughters, two sisters and two brothers.

Birtha Johnson

Services for Birtha Johnson of Midland are pending under the direction of Thomas Funeral Home.

James E. Mitchell

LAMESA — Graveside services for James Edgar Mitchell, 79, of Lamesa were to be at 2 p.m. today in the Mount Olive Cemetery in Big Spring with Dr. Phillip McClendon officiating. Services were to be directed by Branon Funeral Home in Lubbock.

He died Sunday in Lubbock.

Mitchell was born in Arkansas. He moved to Midway Community in 1944 from Big Spring.

Survivors include a sister, Girdie Black of Oceanside, Calif., and a niece.

Wayne Parrish

BIG SPRING — Services for Wayne Parrish, 22, of Big Spring were to be at 2 p.m. today in Nalley-Pickle Rosewood Chapel. Mansonic graveside rites were to be in Trinity Memorial Park.

Joe E. Paul

BIG SPRING — Services for Joe E. Paul, 67, of Big Spring were to be at noon today in Nalley-Pickle Rosewood Chapel with burial in Mount Olive Park.

Allie L. Thorne

Services for Allie L. Thorne, 70, of Midland were to be at 4 p.m. today at the Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home chapel, with burial in Resthaven Memorial Park.

Mrs. Thorne died Saturday night at a Midland hospital.

She was born March 7, 1912, in Clarksville. She spent her early life in Ranger and attended schools there. She married U.E. Thorne in 1932 and the couple moved to Pampa, where they lived for 12 years. They moved to Midland in 1980 after having lived in Dallas and Breckenridge. She was a member of the Presbyterian Church.

Suvivors include her husband; a son, Gerald W. Thorne of DeRidder, La.; a daughter, Karla Cowden of Midland; a brother, Lowe Wallace of Azle; two sisters, Iva May Hooks of Ranger and Betty Lewis of Irving; and three grandchildren.

Pallbearers were to be Wright Cowden Jr., Bill Clay of Odessa, Foy Haddox of Borger, Wright Cowden Sr., Eddie Marcum of Pecos and Cowden Oliver. Honarary pallbearers were to be Nickey R. Ingram and Michael Imber.

Ina Bassham

Ina Bassham, 64, of 4620 Mercedes, died Sunday at her residence after a lengthy illness.

Services will be at 10 a.m. Tuesday at the Westside Church of Christ with Don Mitchell officiating, assisted by F. Dale Simpson. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Bassham was born June 5, 1918, in Fannin County. She was raised in Wolfe City and married Roy E. Bassham Oct. 18, 1934, in Colorado City. They resided there for six years, moving to Midland in 1940. Mrs. Bassham was a retired seamstress at Julian Gold. She was a member of the Westside Church of Christ.

Survivors include her husband of Midland; two daughters, Mrs. David (Jo Ann) Rigney of Lake Charles, La., and Mrs. Paul (Donna) Camp of Amarillo; three brothers, Houston C. Lindsey, W.A. "Buddy" Lindsey and Johnny R. Lindsey, all of Colorado City; and five grandchildren.

The family requests that memorials be directed by Hospice of Midland, P.O. Box 2621, Midland.

Gladys Arrington

MILES — Services for Mrs. Elton (Gladys) Arrington, 70, of Miles, sister of Mrs. Eddie Autry of Midland, were held Saturday in San Angelo. Burial was in Miles Cemetery directed by Johnson's Funeral Home in San Angelo.

She died Friday in a San Angelo hospital.

Mrs. Arrington was born Nov. 24, 1911, in San Angelo. She married Elton Arrington Oct. 27, 1934, in San Angelo and was a member of Veribest Baptist Church.

Other survivors inlcude her husband, a son, a daugther, two brothers and eight grandchildren.

George E. Davis

George E. Davis, 78, of 2000 N. Main St., died early Sunday in a Midland hospital.

Services will be at 3 p.m. Tuesday at the Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home chapel with the Rev. Kenneth James, associate minister of St. Luke's United Methodist Church, officiating. Burial will follow at Evergreen Cemetery in Stanton under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Davis was born March 4, 1904, in Taylor County. He spent his early years in Taylor County, moving to Stanton in 1923 with his parents. He farmed for many years and also was an electrician. He also was a former sheriff of Martin County. Davis served in the Army during World War II. He moved to Midland three years ago.

Survivors include a daughter, Cindy Sides of Austin; a brother, John Davis of Keller; four sisters, Jewel Hancock, Bettie Huggins, Belle Mashburn and Ida Mashburn, all of Midland; a granddaughter and several nieces and nephews.

Charles Garmon

Services for Charles "Buddy" Garmon, 49, of 801 S. Weatherford St., will be at 11 a.m. Tuesday in the Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home chapel, with burial to follow in Resthaven Memorial Cemetery.

Garmon died Saturday afternoon in a Midland hospital.

He was born July 23, 1933, in Mount Pleasant. He was raised in Clarksville and Detroit, Mich. He moved to Midland in 1948, where he was employed by Banners Milk Co. He served with the U.S. Army from 1950 to 1952. He had also been employed by Snowhite Laundry and Gene Shelburne's City Transfer and Storage Co. He was employed by Gibson's at the time of his death.

Survivors include three sons, Jessie Lopez, Monty Ray Garmon and Buddy Garmon, all of Midland; a daughter, Mrs. Terry Ann Oliver of Midland; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Garmon of Midland; three sisters, Linda Reed of San Antonio, Mrs. Richard (Catherine) Rector of Corpus Christi and Mrs. Thomas (Charlotte) Manley of Midland; and two grandchildren.

R.B. Anderson

PAULS VALLEY, Okla. — Services for R.B. Anderson, 64, of Ramona, Calif., and formerly of Midland, will be at 2 p.m. Wednesday at Pauls Valley Cemetery in Oklahoma directed by Stuffle Bean Funeral Home.

He died Friday at his residence in California.

Anderson was born Sept. 22, 1918, in Oklahoma. He was retired from the U.S. Marine Corps. While in Midland, he was active in the Pecan Growers' Association and did volunteer work with senior citizens.

Survivors include his wife, a daughter, several brothers and sisters and three grandchildren.

William Olliff

William "Bill" Olliff, 81, of 807 S. Weatherford St. died Saturday in a Midland hospital after a lengthy illness.

Services were to be at 2 p.m. today in the Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home chapel under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home. Burial was to be in Fairview Cemetery.

Pallbearers were to be John Foster, Barney Hightower, Burton Cain and Gerald Yarbrough.

First female Opry singer dies at 70

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Alcyone Bate Beasley, the first woman to sing at the Grand Ole Opry, has died of a stroke at the age of 70.

Mrs. Beasley, who died Saturday at Nashville Memorial Hospital, was the daughter of Dr. Humphrey Bate, leader of "Dr. Humphrey Bate and the Possum Hunters" country music group, the first string group to perform on WSMRadio on Oct. 25, 1925, three weeks after the station went on the air. Bate died in 1936.

She stayed with the Grand Ole Opry after her father died, and joined the Dixie Dons, known for singing "old favorites" songs.

Mrs. Beasley wrote musical arrangements for her father's group and the Dixie Dons, and later wrote music for radio and television commercials. She first sang at the Opry at age 13.

Mrs. Beasley is survived by her husband, Jack Beasley; a son, Terry N. Beasley of Nashville; two daughters, Nancy Hunt of Livermore, Calif., and Barbara Thompson of Macon, Ga.; two brothers, Edwin Miller Bate and Humphrey Bate of Nashville, and five grandchilren.

Services are scheduled for Tuesday.

PLO's network of tunnels unearthed

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The tunnels twist and turn for miles under the Lebanese capital, sometimes so narrow a man has to crawl through them, sometimes wide enough to take a truck.

This is the underground network the Palestine Liberation Organization used to hide guerrillas and arms in its last stronghold during the summer Israeli invasion and bombardment. It is largely unexplored by outsiders, and military officials say it may be months before its full extent is known.

"We haven't explored the whole network," said Capt. Corrado Cantatore, spokesman for the Italian troops in the multinational peacekeeping force. "But as far as we know, the tunnels are connected with many exits."

The tunnels were built after the PLO arrived in Lebanon in 1970 and were believed to be fairly extensive by the time of the 1975-76 civil war.

Some guerrilla leaders had talked about the tunnels before their evacuation from west Beirut six weeks ago, saying they were patterned after those used by the Viet Cong during the Vietnam War.

Several ranking members of the more radical wings of the PLO visited Vietnam in the late 1970s and later remarked that they had found the Viet Cong tactics against the United States "instructive."

"We learned a lot about tunnels from Vietnam," a senior PLO official remarked during an interview last winter.

PLO tunnels were found in southern Lebanon soon after Israel invaded June 6. Israeli troops found huge caches of arms, shells and dynamite in tunnels in a small village south of Sidon and said 300 trucks were not enough to carry them away.

But the Israelis apparently did not find all the hiding places. A few guerrillas claimed they hid in the tunnels under Beaufort Castle, a fortress built by Crusaders in the Middle Ages, for five weeks after it fell to Israel.

There have been rumors of a sophisticated underground center in Sidon — also known as Saida — with gates opening on the sea that could be operated by signals transmitted by submarines. Israeli military officials in Sidon, a former PLO stronghold on the Mediterranean 25 miles south of Beirut, said they had searched up and down the coast but had not found any such center or gate.

In Beirut, the tunnels run under the Palestinian refugee camps of Sabra, Chatilla and Bourj el-Barajneh, former strongholds of the PLO which took the brunt of Israeli bombing during the war.

Some of the entrances are disguised to look like cellar doors on any house, with concrete steps leading down to the basement. Others are small openings in mounds of earth, leading into large bunkers with concrete walls where hundreds of civilians as well as guerrillas took shelter during Israeli air raids. A few are large, with a ramp sloping down like the entrance to an underground garage.

The tunnels were still littered with cases of dynamite, shells and bombs when a reporter visited them. Dirty blankets and pillows, cans of food and high school textbooks on the floors show that people slept, ate and even studied there.

The tunnels are dark and damp, with tiny shafts for air and light. Cockroaches crawl on the concrete walls.

The Lebanese army discovered the tunnels when its soldiers took up positions in Bourj el-Barajneh last month after the departure of PLO guerrillas.

Army sources said they found stolen cars, a printing press, disassembled parts of helicopters and underwater scooters that could transport one or two people along the seabed. They said they also found food supplies and a radio relay station.

Cantatore said Italian troops patroling the camps are more concerned about finding unexploded bombs above ground and clearing the area of mines than exploring the tunnels, so it will be some time before anyone knows exactly how extensive the system is. But Lebanese security sources said they have found at least four miles of tunnels running under the refugee camps in Beirut with one exit near the airport.

Cantatore said the tunnels were used basically for defense, although they also made it possible for the guerrillas to supply their positions with arms and ammunition.

"The tunnels were not something to help them fight. They were something to help them survive," he said in an interview. "A tunnel can only be used as an offensive thing if it goes behind enemy lines."

The tunnels apparently provided good protection during Israeli air raids, but may have been death traps during the Sept. 16-18 massacre of hundreds of people in the Sabra and Chatilla camps. Security sources said grenade explosions blocked the entrances to the bunkers, and some people may have been trapped inside.

Moustafa Habra, a survivor of the massacre, said he was hiding in a bunker with 100 other people when rightist Christian militiamen burst in and hauled men, women and children out.

Habra's wife and three children were killed. He was shot down by machine-gun fire with a line of 30 men but despite his wounds managed to crawl away to safety after the gunmen left.

Columnist cleverly disguises story

By MARCUS ELIASON
Associated Press Writer

TEL AVIV, Israel — In what fellow journalists called an ingenious story that evaded military censors, an Israeli columnist informed readers of a major war debate in the Cabinet by transposing it to Poland in 1922.

Amnon Abromowitz, who writes for the daily Maariv, learned two weeks ago that his government had nearly launched a new offensive in Lebanon. But military censors refused to let him publish it on national security grounds.

So Abromowitz bypassed the censors by resorting to "historical fiction," using details of the real story to concoct a mythical Polish Cabinet debate 60 years ago.

What really happened, reported a week later when the government relaxed censorship on the event, was that on Oct. 4 the Cabinet defeated by one vote a proposal to attack Palestinian guerrillas in Lebanon in retaliation for a guerrilla attack that killed six Israeli soldiers. But those who knew how to decode Abromowitz's column knew about the vote three days after it took place.

"I think the public had a right to know how close the Cabinet was to launching an action that could have led to a new conflagration," Abromowitz said in an interview. "It was my duty as a journalist to get the story out, so I wrote it as though the whole thing happened in Poland 60 years ago."

Only one West Texas park to be affected by federal funds cutbacks

From Staff and Wire Reports

While federal cutbacks are forcing officials to shut down 19 East Texas federal parks and partially close 35 more, only one West Texas park will be be affected.

According to Perry Robinson, representing the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers in Fort Worth, "these cutbacks won't bother you folks much."

There are only two federal park lakes in West Texas — O.C. Fisher in San Angelo and Hords Creek in Coleman — which are controlled by the Corps. The national parks are administered by the U.S. Department of Interior.

O.C. Fisher Park may feel the crunch with a partial closing, according to a Corps spokesperson in San Angelo. However, the cutback will be minor with removal of some of its recreational facilities.

Other than that, the spokesperson said the park will remain in operation.

Officials for Hords Creek in Coleman could not be reached for comment.

Miller Bonner, an aide with U.S. Rep. Kent Hance's office, said this morning that, according to the U.S. Department of Interior, West Texas' national parks — Guadalupe Mountains National Park, Big Bend National Park and Fort Davis National Historical Site — are not expected to be affected by any federal cutbacks.

The three national parks are currently operated under the 1982 fiscal year budget. But, because of inflation and labor, Bonner said the Department of Interior will be asking for additional funds in the 1983 fiscal year budget.

Big Bend National Park's $1,840,100 present budget is expected to be increased to $1,948,000; Fort Davis National Historical Site is expected to jump from $305,500 to $319,000; and Big Bend National Park's $629,500 budget should be increased to $714,000 in fiscal year 1983, according to Bonner.

Meanwhile, Lufkin residents are scurrying to collect signatures on a petition, protesting a park's closing in their area. The residents claim that the shutdown will deprive tourist dollars for Lufkin.

But Robison said, "The parks we closed were the ones with the least number of visitors and most inefficient to maintain."

Traditional Democrats endorse Clements' candidacy

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

Denying suggestions they had abandoned their party, traditional Democrats O.C. Fisher, Tom Massey and Dorsey Hardeman pledged support for Gov. Bill Clements in the Nov. 2 governor's race in a Midland Regional Airport press conference this morning.

"I put my state and my country above my party," said Massey, a San Angeloan who served in the State House of Representatives from 1973 until this year. "In November, you can vote for the individual — and that's what I'm going to do."

"I'm a Democrat...on the independent side (but) I think this is a year to put the quality of candidates ahead of everything else," noted Fisher, who served 32 years in Congress prior to retiring to Junction. "My support (of Gov. Clements) is based upon his performance record. I think of his performance in the field of education, and the strong support he has given against crime and narcotics...and for the right to work in Texas.

"I know he has advocated restraint in the tax hikes that have been going on across the country. He has made Texas a safer and better place to live and raise a family."

The comments of Hardeman, who represented San Angelo in the State House of Representatives and Senate 25 years, echoed those of Fisher and Massey.

"I just vote for Bill Clements because I think he's the best man for the job," he said. "I think he's got guts enough to come out and take a stand. There comes a time to take a stand and make a decision, and he does."

Fisher, who was elected numerous times to Congress on the Democratic ticket, said he has not forsaken the party, but merely "realigned myself based on the quality of the respective candidates...If Bill Clements were Democrat, I'd be strong for him."

Massey said Clements has demonstrated his ability to be a "tough administrator" through his personal persuasion, tactics, appointments to boards and calling of special sessions of the legislature. Additionally, the progress that has been made in the field of water development and planning during his tenure loom as important, he said.

"If you think that we've had a problem with oil and gas in the last few years, just wait a while if we don't do something about water," said Massey. "By the year 2000 water demand in Texas will far outstrip supply. I think the governor is leading the way to some real progress in that area, and I'm glad to support him."

Massey, who noted he has supported Clements' Democratic opponent Mark White in previous races, said that "so far as this race is concerned...there's a lot of unknown qualities about White."

The Midland press conference was the initial stop in a West Texas tour today that was also to take the men to Andrews, Big Spring and San Angelo.

One killed, two injured in Monahans accident

MONAHANS — A traffic accident near here killed one person and injured two others late Saturday night.

Pronounced dead on arrival at Medical Center Hospital in Odessa was Luz D. Rascon, no age available, believed to be from Odessa.

According to the Department of Public Safety, she suffered massive head injuries when the 1978 Ford pickup truck in which she was a passenger struck the rear of a 1978 Mercury Cougar driven by John C. Kight of Hobbs, N.M. He was not injured.

The driver of the pickup, Gilberto Yanez, no available, of Monahans, was in satisfactory condition this morning at Ward County Memorial Hospital in Monahans. He also suffered head injuries, as did another passenger in the pickup, 27-year-old Gloria Martinez, no address available. She was in stable condition in the intensive care unit of MCH.

The accident occurred about 11:25 p.m. Saturday on Texas 18, approximately 10 miles north of Monahans. Yanez's pickup hit the rear of Kight's car and rolled over three times, ejecting all three occupants.

The Rascon woman's body was taken to the Easterling-Wilson Funeral Home in Odessa, where services are pending.

Sheriff's department to present rural crime prevention program

The sheriff's department will be conducting a crime prevention program at the Midessa Baptist Church on West U.S. Highway 80 at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

The program, which is free and open to the public, will include films and slides on how county residents can best protect themselves from rural burglaries and thefts.

More information can be obtained by calling the sheriff's office at 682-9774.

Suspect surrenders himself in Odessa shooting death

ODESSA — A suspect is in custody following a shooting that left one man dead early this morning.

Juan Carlos Bates, 20, no address available, was pronounced dead at Medical Center Hospital about 3:30 a.m. today. He was driven there by a private vechicle and had been shot once in the chest. An autopsy had been ordered by Ector County Justice of the Peace Manuel Valles.

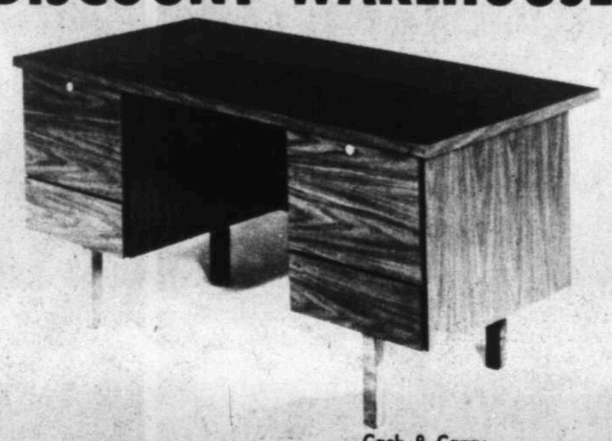

Witnesses told police the shooting took place at 313 Geneva St. during an argument over a gun. An 18-year-old man turned himself in at the sheriff's office about 7:30 a.m. today but no charges were immediately filed. An investigation is continuing.

Christmas and Santa may not fill your dreams yet, but manufacturers and retailers already are readying for big holiday sales. Hot items for the Christmas trade are Garfield the Cat and stuffed E.T., above, atop board version of Pac-Man.

Toy manufacturers, retailers already preparing shelves for green Christmas

By DAVE LARSEN
Los Angeles Times

Almost a quarter of a century ago, our fathers brought forth on this continent a new toy, conceived in utter madness and dedicated to the proposition that all the world loves a fad.

But as sales of the Hula Hoop wound down following its introduction in 1958, industry savants nodded knowingly. They had seen it all before.

Wrong. Purchases of the 3-foot rings are almost as great as ever, and a recent innovation has Wham-O Manufacturing Co. of San Gabriel, Calif., anticipating a green Christmas.

While visions of the fat man in the red suit on your roof may be the furthest thing from your mind now, manufacturers and local retailers have the Christmas spirit.

Some merchandise is already on the shelves; more is even now being shipped.

WHAM-O HAS A hip up, so to speak, by having introduced earlier in the year only the third change in the venerable history of the Hula Hoop.

"In 1967 we put ball bearings inside to make a shoop-shoop sound, said George Sappenfield, manager of community relations. "Now we offer a version with barber-pole stripes that has granules inside that give it a peppermint scent."

Scents are going to be big in the forthcoming holiday season, but we cannot leave Wham-O (which has sold more than 75 million Hula Hoops) without disclosing that further refinements are being considered.

A square one, maybe?.

Down through the years, children have had access to toys that talked, walked, ate and wet. Now comes smell.

"It's amazing how many will be scent-oriented this year," said Doug Thomson, president of the Toy Manufacturers of America Inc.

The trend, if such it is, perhaps may be traced to 1980, when Strawberry Shortcake came into the world, courtesy of Kenner Products in Cincinnati.

SUCH WAS THE demand for the 5 1-2-inch doll that smelled like shortcake that she now has or will have by the holidays 13 friends.

These are — are you ready? — Lemon Meringue, Huckleberry Pie, Orange Blossom, Raspberry Tart, Apricot, Blueberry Muffin, Butter Cookie, Lime Chiffon, Angel Cake, Cherry Cuddler, Apple Dumpling, Purple Pie Man (cinnamon) and Sour Grapes.

Finally this year, the introduction of 13-inch soft-bodied baby dolls which, when their tummy is squeezed, blow scented kisses.

Even Ideal Toy Corp. in New York is getting into the act with The Hershey Bear, a plush version that comes in three sizes and reeks of chocolate.

"Little girls love perfume, but they are more likely to want scents with which they are familiar than adult aromas," explained senior vice president Stewart Sims.

Ideal, of course, is responsible for getting everyone hooked on Rubik's Cube. It has followed this with Rubik's Revenge, which, instead of nine cubes on each side, has 16. The funny farm is taking applications.

"We expect that our hot new puzzle for this Christmas season will be Alexander's Star," said Zeke Rose, spokesman for Ideal. "It is a variation on Rubik's principle, but in the shape of a great dodecahedron."

IF YOU HAVE to ask, you'll never know.

Obviously, the company has its own entry in the scent olympics, a doll called Jelly Bean whose tummy feels like jelly and smells like a jelly bean: lemon drop, bubble gum and purple punch.

Licensing will figure significantly in this year's holidays, according to Donna Datre, public information manager of the Toy Manufacturers of America.

Since this is unofficially the Year of the Cat, what better representative than Garfield, who got his humble start in comic strips?

"We have been in business 26 years and we are the largest manufacturer of stuffed animals in the world," said Hooman Amiri, marketing research manager of R. Dakin & Co. in San Francisco. "We have had Benji, we have had others, but Garfield is by far the hottest license product in our history."

E.T., the Extra-Terrestrial from the hit movie, will be inflicted without mercy, probably deservedly so. Pop an Excedrin and face up to it.

Steve Adler, vice president of Merchandising Corp. of America, the film's licensing representative, said most of the products won't be available in stores until late this year — and some are even being aimed for Christmas 1983 and beyond.

THE LINE MARKETED by L.J.N. Toys Ltd. in New York includes (for about $9) an E.T. Talking Figure. Pull a retractable cord and you hear "Elliott," "Ouch," "E.T." and "Home."

Karyn Weiss, director of product development, said there also will be a windup figure that will waddle, Elliott on a moving miniature bike with the space visitor in the basket, vinyl collectibles such as one showing the creature in a bathrobe, and a spaceship out of which the alien pops like a piece of toast.

"Counting this year and next, we anticipate selling more than $100 million of E.T. products," Weiss said.

Another firm, Kamar International Inc. in Torrance, Calif., expects to have about 10 million stuffed E.T. dolls in the hands of retailers in time for the holiday rush.

Merchandising Corp. said five times as many sought the license as were granted.

Goodies in which the alien will figure include vacuum bottles, pillows, clocks, shoelaces, bubblegum packages, even a board game by Parker Brothers during which a ghost costume is put on the critter.

NOT THAT THE Beverly, Mass., firm has soured on Monopoly, of which it has sold more than 85 million since its introduction in 1935 — and in 19 languages — but up until now it has been the same old roll the dice, buy a house. Not even any balloon payments to deal with.

"Now we are out with an electronic accessory," said Carol City, public relations manager. "It is the only addition to the game there has ever been."

The Playmaster, as it is called, sells for about $50 and is claimed to speed the game and spice the interest.

"It rolls the dice in effect by giving a pair of numbers, also occasionally announces unowned properties as the ones purchased are programmed into it, keeps track of who owns what, and allows a player to borrow against his or her property at 10 percent," City explained.

Furthermore, the accessory rings out "We're in the Money" when someone passes Go and collects $200, "I've Been Working on the Railroad" for someone who is thusly perched, notes from Beethoven's Fifth Symphony to call ffor repayment of a loan (which is more than your banker does), and "Taps" when a participant goes bankrupt.

Then there is a whole fresh assortment of Brooke Shields dolls (L.J.N.), Tombstones that ooze "fun blood" from characters imprisoned in them (Ideal), more Star Wars figures and vehicles (Kenner), and now "Pac-Man" in boardgame form (Milton Bradley).

WHICH SEGUES US cleverly into the superstar of last year's holiday season and generally predicted for an encore this year: the wonderful world of home video games.

For several companies, having missed the train last season on mind-boggling profits, the approach this year — to crossbreed the metaphor — is that if you can't make the razors, at least get a piece of the action on the blades.

In other words, there are big bucks — about $1.2 billion in sales last year — in home video game cartridges that run from about $15 to $30 apiece retail.

For instance, Parker Brothers decided for the first time to dip its toe into the water and come up with Atari-compatible cartridges, The Empire Strikes Back and the arcade biggie Frogger. Spokeswoman City said that by Christmas the stores will have two other company cartridges, Amidar and Spiderman.

His newstand is grandstand

By AL MARTINEZ
Los Angeles Times

SAN FRANCISCO — Davey Rosenberg, who is perched like a large frog on a small stool behind the cash register of the family newsstand, checks his watch.

Time for the hourly announcement. He leans back precariously so that he can see down a row of porno magazines, where a bunch of the boys are browsing, and shouts around his unlit cigar: "Time to pay the rent, men! Everybody buy!"

A few produce cash, others try to slip away unnoticed. Rosenberg won't let them. "This ain't the public library!" he hollers after them as they hurry out the door.

"If there's one thing worse than a pre-vert," Rosenberg grumbles, ringing up a sale, "it's a cheap pre-vert."

The sale is for $6.05. The customer hands him a ten.

"You got a nickel?" Rosenberg demands, still ranckled by the idea of cheap pre-verts.

The man says no.

Rosenberg glares at him. "Why not?"

Nearby, a matronly lady clears her throat.

"Don't spit on the floor!" Rosenberg roars.

The startled matron stares. She can't believe he is talking to her.

"It's all right," Rosenberg says gently, realizing her shock. "Go ahead, honey. Spit."

Customers call it the best show in town: Rosenberg, 46, who created topless dancing, now doing shtick at his father's shop on Geary that sells magazines and out-of-town newspapers.

"They oughta put up bleachers in front of the place," a passing cop says. "I could listen to the guy all day."

Once the self-proclaimed world's greatest press agent, Rosenberg now presides daily over what he calls the world's greatest grandstand.

There is nothing modest about Rosenberg, either in his thinking or his girth. He weighs 310 pounds, and though that is 120 pounds less than what he weighed three years ago. His ample posterior still spills over the sides of his small stool.

He peers out at the world through amber-tinted glasses at a shop that is as much a part of San Francisco as columnist Herb Caen.

It is owned by his father, Harold, and, among other things, features newspapers from 100 cities around the world, 5,000 different magazines, a mousetrap on the floor behind the counter and a sign that says "No smoking in carpeted area."

The carpeted area is a single worn and shredded rug.

"People love to be insulted," Rosenberg says. "They go away feeling better for it."

As if to illustrate the point, a proper English gentleman approaches. He can't find the London Times. Rosenberg says it's sold out.

"Do you have any idea where else I might buy one?" the man asks.

"Try London," Rosenberg snaps.

The man glares and strides away.

"See," Rosenberg says, "he's feeling better already."

Rosenberg is an equal-opportunity insulter. After he once asked Frank Sinatra, who was staying in town, for an autographed photo, Sinatra sent him a picture of him in a sweater. Rosenberg wrote back thanking him, then added, "But next time, no sweat shirts." Sinatra sent him one in a tuxedo.

"I love it here," Rosenberg says. "I could be the world's greatest comic. When I'm elected mayor, I'm going to move City Hall to Geary."

He's only half-kidding. Since the end of topless dancing in the city's North Beach a decade ago, Rosenberg has run for the San Francisco Board of Supervisors twice.

Forget that the second time he got only 80 votes.

"I could be elected mayor," he says confidently. "Anyone would be better than what we got. The town has gone to hell. The only recreation in the city now is getting mugged."

"We're good at that," a customer chimes in.

"Stay out of this," Rosenberg snaps.

They used to call him "the King of Boobs," a slang reference to that portion of the female anatomy he once glorified. He is the man credited with turning a section of the town once owned by beatniks and poets into the topless capital of the world.

"June 19, 1964," Rosenberg says. He pronounces the date in a tone reserved for the fall of Rome or the birth of a prince. "The first day Carol Doda danced topless."

He was press agent for the Condor Club in those days. North Beach was existing but not booming. Then Rosenberg saw a newspaper photograph of a little girl in a topless swimsuit.

With a brain that someday may be preserved in a jar at the Press Agent's Hall of Fame, Rosenberg translated the casual moment into an elemental gimmick.

"I went down and bought a topless swimsuit for 25 bucks," he says, with a rare grin. "I handed it to Carol who was a waitress at the club and also did some dancing.

" 'This is what you'll be wearing tonight,' I said. She opened the package, looked at the bikini bottom part and said, 'Where's the top?' 'Honey,' I said, 'there ain't one.' "

For about five years, North Beach boomed and Rosenberg became, according to him, the highest paid press agent in the country.

Nominate Family of Year

In anticipation of National Family Week, Mayor Thane Akins will present an award to the Midland Family of the Year Nov. 19. All Midland citizens are invited to nominate before Oct. 31.

Each nominated family will be interviewed.

Mail nominations to "Family of the Year," P.O. Box 914, Midland, Texas, 79702. Include the name of the family nominated, phone number, address and comments, as well as the name, address and phone number of the person submitting the nomination.

The purpose of the Second Annual Family of the Year contest is to promote the importance of a family unit. Characteristics of a good family unit include members who are loving and unified, attend church regularly, have high moral standards, are good neighbors, exhibit patriotism and participate in community service.

The Melvin P. Dunn family, members of St. Ann's Catholic Church, were named "Family of the Year" in 1981. They were selected from 22 nominations.

The winning family will be named Nov. 19 in a special program at the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, which is sponsoring the award. Because of this sponsorship, members of the church are not eligible for nomination. The program is open to the public.

The shortest lived U.S. coin was the twenty-cent piece, issued regularly only in 1875 and 1876. They were too easily confused with quarters.

DEAR ABBY

Foul-mouthed caller hangs up with ringing ears

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: The most effective way I have found to deal with obscene phone calls is to keep a referee's whistle near the phone. As soon as I realize it's an obscene call, I give the caller an earful!

All it takes is one shrill blast into the phone and the caller hangs up. And you can bet he won't call again. — WHISTLE TREATMENT IN DURANGO, COLO.

DEAR WHISTLE: Read on for the Texas treatment:

DEAR ABBY: I wrote in some time ago telling how I handled obscene phone calls and you printed my letter. Please print it again. If not, please send it back. It's the only one I have left. — MARY W. IN ORANGE, TEXAS

DEAR MARY: It's worth another shot, and here it is:

"DEAR ABBY: My experience may help women who don't know how to handle obscene phone calls. Many years ago, when I was an attractive young woman, my telephone rang, and when I answered it, I heard a male voice speaking all this filthy language. I had never heard such dirty talk in my life! Then it occurred to me that the caller would get no thrill out of talking to a deaf old lady, so that's what I pretended to be.

"I said in a very weak and shaky voice, 'What did you say?'

"The man then repeated his obscene message — only louder.

"In the same croaking, shaky voice, I again said, 'What did you say? I can't hear you.'

"The caller started to shout his filthy spiel again when I heard another male voice in the background say, 'Hang up, you fool!'

"The fool hung up and never called back."

DEAR ABBY: I know that the telephone company recommends that the best way to deal with obscene phone calls is to hang up. Sorry, I don't buy that.

Why should some filthy-mouthed or possibly deranged pervert get away with making an innocent person a victim of such abuse?

I say, call the telephone company and DEMAND that something be done. You can't tell me that in this age of sophisticated electronic miracles, the telephone company couldn't monitor a telephone line if it wanted to.

I would also call the police. I am sick of seeing the rights of law-abiding citizens trampled on, while criminals go unpunished! — TICKED OFF IN BLOOMINGTON, ILL.

DEAR ABBY: Here's an idea for "Sick of Sickos," who has to deal with obscene phone calls in her office: My daughter has a friend, a young lady, who manages a bookstore in Richmond, Va.

When she had this problem, she finally said very sweetly and politely to the caller, "Sir, would you mind speaking up and talking more clearly? We aren't getting you very clearly on the tape."

The fellow hung up and hasn't been heard from since. — ARLINGTON, VA.

Witness will continue testimony linking Harrelson to Wood slaying

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Defense attorneys today resume questioning a key government witness who testified Charles V. Harrelson bragged about getting away with killing people not long after U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. was slain.

Harrelson's attorney, Tom Sharpe Jr., had begun cross-examining Hampton Robinson III late Friday before U.S. District Judge William S. Sessions recessed the trial for the weekend.

Robinson, 34, has provided the prosecution the necessary link between convicted narcotics dealer Jamiel "Jimmy" Chagra and Harrelson, the hitman Chagra allegedly hired to shoot Wood.

Harrelson, 44, his wife, Jo Ann Starr Harrelson, 41, and Chagra's wife, Elizabeth, 28, are on trial in connection with Wood's murder here May 29, 1979.

Chagra will be tried for murder separately later.

Robinson testified Harrelson came to his ranch in June 1979 and said, "Killing people and getting away with it is my long suit."

Harrelson also said, "The judge didn't get killed; he committed suicide by the way he sentenced people," Robinson testified.

Wood, 63, was scheduled to preside at Chagra's 1979 narcotics trial when he was shot in the back outside his San Antonio townhome.

The heavy-lidded Robinson, an admitted former cocaine and heroin addict still taking methadone treatments, told jurors about a trip he and Harrelson took to Las Vegas, Nev., in late April 1979.

Robinson said he saw Harrelson and Chagra shooting craps at the same casino table and that Harrelson later told him Chagra won a "half million dollars."

The government contends Chagra agreed during Harrelson's Las Vegas trip to pay him $250,000 to kill Wood.

Robinson also testified Harrelson telephoned him in Houston and asked Robinson to obtain a rifle in May 1979, and later asked him to dispose of a white-over-gold Oldsmobile. The government contends the auto, registered to Mrs. Harrelson, was used as a getaway car in the Wood slaying.

Robinson did not furnish a rifle as Harrelson requested, so Mrs. Harrelson used a phony name to buy a .243-caliber deer rifle in Dallas 12 days before the killing, the prosecution charges.

On the afternoon of the killing, Robinson testified, Harrelson telephoned him and said, "I've gotten everything taken care of. I'll see you in a couple of days."

Sharpe has said he will use the government's own witnesses to prove a scenario closely related to the prosecution's, but pointing to a different killer.

During his questioning of Robinson, Sharpe attempted to shift suspicion to Pete Kay, 40, a Huntsville nightclub owner and friend of both Harrelson and Robinson.

After the judge's slaying, Kay tried to "give or trade" to Robinson a .243-caliber rifle, the witness testified.

"I told him you'd better get rid of it because it's the same caliber of rifle used to kill the judge," Robinson said he told Kay.

Kay, expected to be called as a government witness this week, lived with Mrs. Harrelson five years before she married Harrelson. Sharpe said he would show Mrs. Harrelson gave the rifle to Kay after buying it.

Sharpe also created mystery about a man named Eric Brogan, alis Eric Lloyd, whom Robinson said accompanied Harrelson to Robinson's ranch in June 1979. Robinson said Brogan was killed that same month in a car wreck at Victoria.

Anti-draft demonstrators arrested

WASHINGTON (AP) — Police today arrested 55 demonstrators who crossed police lines outside Selective Service headquarters.

About 200 demonstrators, mostly young people from various anti-draft groups, rallied in downtown Washington early in the day and then marched to the headquarters in the Georgetown area.

Police, who were nearly as numerous as the demonstrators, cordoned off the area and confined the protesters to a grassy hill across the street from the building.

The arrests came when several of the protesters crossed the police lines and sat down in the street.

Those arrested, 40 men and 15 women, were charged with crossing police lines, a misdemeanor that carries a $50 fine upon conviction.

Most cooperated with officers and walked to police vans to be driven away, although a few went limp and were carried away on stretchers.

Demonstrators carried signs denouncing the Selective Service System and demanding an end to recent indictments of young men for failing to register for the draft.

A few of the demonstrators burned registration forms.

The demonstration forced police to close the street in front of Selective Service headquarters for several hours, but otherwise business at the agency was not disrupted, according to spokeswoman Joan Lamb.

There is no draft, but Selective Service registration is required to provide a pool of names for use in the event of a national emergency.

Registration was instituted two years ago under then-President Carter. President Reagan, although he had campaigned against peacetime registration, decided to continue the program after military rule was imposed in Poland.

Young men are required to sign up within 30 days of their 18th birthday.

Selective Service officials say compliance has reached 94.2 percent of those eligible. There are about a half million young men who have failed to comply wth the law, although officials estimate that more than 100,000 of those are members of the reserves and National Guard.

Texas town's star may be falling

RISING STAR, Texas (AP) — When town officials checked the treasury Friday afternoon, they found only $14.86 in the general fund, which covers police, fire and street expenses.

One solution, the mayor said, would be to lay off some police officers.

But there are only two police officers in Rising Star, a Central Texas farming community of 1,200 people east of Abilene.

"If laying off policemen is the answer, then it must be done," said Mayor H.L. Killion.

"We're broke."

Despite the lack of city revenues, both of Rising Star's finest stayed on their beats last weekend.

"I'm going to hang on as long as I can," Police Chief Curtis McGlothlin said. "We — Dennis (Hall) and I — will continue to support the citizens of Rising Star as long as we possibly can do so."

Robin Reed, owner of the Rainbow Cafe, said a newly formed citizens committee, which already has privately collected $508, agreed recently to support keeping the officers until an Oct. 25 town meeting.

The crisis stems from a shortfall of income from tax revenues, said Rising Star city administrator Janna Jones.

The proposed 1982-83 fiscal year budget calls for the police department to receive $53,000, Killion said, but tax collectors haven't been able to accumulate that much for all city services.

"I cannot see having a police budget more than the total income," Killion said. "We need a police department, but we also need a budget we can live with.

"The total tax revenues that our taxes should bring will be about $44,000. This is $9,000 less than what the total (proposed) budget has been for the police department," the mayor said.

About $27,000 of the police department budget is for salaries, he said.

Ms. Jones said Rising Star's falling general fund bottomed out Friday afternoon at $14.86, from which the city pays police and administrative salaries as well as fire and street department expenses.

Killion said the police chief might be willing to take a pay cut, and Peace Justice J.P. "Buddy" Turner, who is not seeking re-election, has agreed to work as a police officer for a lesser salary.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): It is time to apply some discipline and shed any excess weight. Improvement in your appearance will make you feel better about yourself. Be candid with the boss when discussing your feelings.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A happy ending lifts your spirits. You discover something important about yourself. Be candid with the boss when discussing your feelings.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be more aggressive when pursuing goals that are important to your financial security. A romantic interlude may have more consequences than you anticipated.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Show sympathy even to those who have not been kind. Art, music bring you good luck. Be firm when negotiating for a new job or business contract.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your reactions to a presentation will affect the outcome of a business matter. Share news with mate. Your earnings increase between now and Thanksgiving.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Chances for success are best early in the day. Teamwork swells profits. Keep cool even when your patience is tried by a family incident.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A cat-and-mouse situation at work is annoying. Laugh at the pettiness of others. Self-discipline and an older person's advice will help you triumph.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Work quietly in the background until your equilibrium is restored. Singles gain new insights into their romantic expectations later today.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) News from abroad helps you improve your financial situation. Attend to last-minute details. You sometimes insist on doing tasks you really should delegate.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Read between the lines and trust your hunches. A candid discussion with mate or partner clears up a misunderstanding. Help someone cope with his problem.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Bargains abound but you must keep a sharp eye out. Faraway friends are thinking of you. Look for an undercurrent of deceit in business negotiations.

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A7 ♡KQ1063 ◇AK83 ♣K5
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 ♠	Dble	1 ♠	Pass

What action do you take?
A.—On this bidding, partner can't have much. But then you don't really need much from him to be able to compete at the three-level, especially since your king of clubs seems well placed. Length in either red suit in partner's hand would suffice, and the way to get him to bid is to double again—since he has not yet spoken, this double is also for takeout.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K6 ♡J87 ◇AKQJ1054 ♣A
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one spade. What action do you take?
A.—We think that three no trump is a reasonable gamble. Even if partner is completely broke, a spade lead should give you an excellent chance to run nine tricks. On some other lead, you may be set, in which case, no game was possible. Note that a jump overcall to three no trump does not invite partner into the auction—he should refrain from bidding even with a long suit and a weak hand.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A652 ♡AQ1073 ◇7 ♣KQ5
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	2 ◇	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—First, you did well not to open one spade—the suit is too weak and the hearts too strong to bid in an unnatural way. But you are not strong enough to reverse now with two spades. You should simply rebid two hearts. If partner has a spade suit, he can introduce it into the auction at his next turn. And don't rebid no trump with an unbalanced hand.

Q.4—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠8652 ♡952 ◇984 ♣AK3
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♡	2 ♠*	3 ◇	?

* preemptive
What action do you take?
A.—At this vulnerability, you are certainly going to sacrifice at four spades should the opponents get to four hearts. But you may as well suggest a defense to partner en route. Bid four clubs on the way to four spades. If the opponents go to the five-level, pass. With a club lead, you could easily defeat any contract at that level.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K5 ♡KJ96 ◇AJ83 ♣K97
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 NT	Pass
4 NT	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—First, if you think that partner is asking for aces, may I recommend one of our books on bidding. Partner is making a quantitative raise in no trump. He is asking you to bid a slam if you are maximum for your jump response to two no trump. Since 15 points is the top of your range, bid six no trump.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, South hold:
♠8742 ♡964 ◇A872 ♣A6
Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?
A.—There is a temptation to respond one no trump—your hand is balanced, your spade suit is weak and you have only three-card support for hearts. But your hand is really suit-oriented because you hold two aces, a ruffing value and scant intermediates. We believe you are less likely to come to grief and more likely to reach your best contract if you elect to raise to two hearts.

Ex-Braniff executive missing

DALLAS (AP) — The wife of a 51-year-old former Braniff International executive says she is keeping her emotions in check and organizing search parties on her own to find her missing husband.

The Texas Rangers are treating the disappearance of Edson Emerson Beckwith as a missing person case, but Jane Beckwith said she is sure there is more to it.

Mrs. Beckwith said she suspects foul play, but has no idea what happened to her husband. She hasn't heard from Beckwith in three days and hasn't received a ransom request.

Beckwith's car was found late Friday night abandoned off a farm-to-market road in remote northeastern Texas, east of Caddo Mills, where a receipt showed he had bought gas Thursday.

The financial consultant was traveling back from a business meeting in Omaha, Texas, and never made it home Thursday, Mrs. Beckwith said.

"He was coming home for my birthday to take me out to dinner. The people at his meeting said he wanted to leave early to pick up a birthday present for his wife," she said.

"He's always been most prompt. He is a most precise man, a meticulous man," she said. "I haven't heard of any ransom. Nothing."

Coloreds divided over questions of racial politics

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — The white-minority government's offer of parliamentary seats for "coloreds" has posed one of the most difficult political questions for nonwhites in South Africa: Whether to work within the system, or outside it, to dismantle apartheid?

The country's 2.7 million coloreds, as people of mixed race are called here, are divided over the offer, which was adopted as official policy of the ruling National Party at a recent provincial party congresses.

David Curry, national chairman of the biggest colored political party, says those who refuse to consider the proposals are either naive or "choosing to use a different strategy than working within the system, which is their right."

But he adds, "It is unthinkable politically to say we are going to chuck this structure the government is offering into the dirt without examining it."

HIS LABOR PARTY, which won 31 of 40 seats on the country's advisory Colored Persons Representative Council before the government dissolved it in 1979, will decide at a Jan. 3 meeting whether to take part in the eventual elections.

The Nationalists are expected to push through parliament early next year legislation to give the coloreds and South Africa's 800,000 Indians seats in parliament. A date for elections would be fixed after that.

Under apartheid — race-separation — laws, the coloreds have not had the right to parliamentary representation since 1969, and the Indians since 1948.

R.E. Van der Ross, rector of the University of the Western Cape and founder of the Labor Party, predicts the party will participate in the elections "and this will insure a reasonable degree of participation at the polls."

But he said radical colored leaders will issue widespread calls to boycott the elections.

EVEN AMONG moderates, Van der Ross said in an interview, "You're not talking to people who are going to come to you cap in hand in the sense that we appreciate every little thing that you do in order that we may prove our worth as citizens and prove our worth as human beings."

The colored people, close both by blood and language to the Dutch-descended Afrikaans speakers who dominate white politics, were hurt when their "full political rights were lost through political expediency," he said.

The Nationalists, elected with less than a majority of the popular vote in 1948, removed coloreds from the voting rolls in 1956 because they tended to vote for other parties. After that, three parliamentary seats were set aside for white candidates who were to represent the coloreds' interests, but in 1969, the coloreds lost that representation too.

ANTI-APRATHEID GROUPS claim the new proposals also are politically expedient — that the nation's 5 million whites want the coloreds and Indians to side with them against the 21 million blacks.

Student leaders at the university, set up for coloreds under racial separation laws, are campaigning for total rejection of the plans for creating a new parliament with separate chambers for whites, coloreds and Asians.

Members of the student council, interviewed in their campus office on condition that they not be identified by name, said they rejected the plan because whites would retain the final say on important matters and because it made no provision for the black majority.

"It is a step backward because it seeks to divide oppressed people by giving elite status to certain people," said one student.

THE REV. ALLAN Boesak, a leader of the colored branch of the South African Dutch Reformed Church, like many radical colored leaders considers himself to be black. He says colored people will never accept a system denying blacks political rights.

Van der Ross says most colored people have little contact with blacks and some even fear that black rule would lower living standards.

"My students wouldn't like you to say so but it is true that colored people in the Western Cape have had a lot of privileges that blacks have not had, including the right of unions, freedom of movement, better education and better attention paid to their needs. This is not to say that there are not poor colored people, but there are black people who are a lot poorer."

Moral Majority still potent force

WASHINGTON (AP) — At the Quint City Baptist Temple in Davenport, Iowa, the Rev. Olen Adams asks the 109 adults in his Sunday Bible class how many are registered to vote.

All but a dozen raise their hands.

At the Rev. Jerry Falwell's headquarters in Lynchburg, Va., clerks log $200,000 in contributions in one day.

From the office of the American Coalition for Traditional Values in Olympia, Wash., photocopies of lawmakers' voting records are mailed to evangelical churches.

Twenty-three months after helping to sweep President Reagan and fellow conservatives to power in Washington, the Moral Majority seems as potent a political force as ever.

There is disillusionment among the Moral Majority's rank and file about the pace at which Reagan and the Republican-controlled Senate have moved on such social issues as school prayer and abortion.

BUT THE movement's leaders say this has not kept the organization's fundamentalist followers from registering to vote or contributing to its coffers.

Founded in June 1979 by Falwell, pastor of the Thomas Road Baptist Church in Lynchburg, the Moral Majority contributed to Reagan's victory and the defeat of liberal Democratic senators in 1980.

Begun with $32,000 that Falwell raised from seven contributors, the organization expects to receive $1 million in contributions in October alone.

Falwell says the Moral Majority registered 4 million new voters in 1980 and expects to double this by the 1984 presidential election.

The organization has had its troubles along the way.

In September 1981, Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., a senior statesman of conservatism, denounced members of the Moral Majority in a Senate speech for trying to "dictate their moral convictions to all America" and asked, "Just who do they think they are?"

IN A RESPONSE from the other side of the political spectrum, the Norman Lear-backed People for the American Way sponsored a television program accusing the group of "witch hunts, slavery (and) McCarthyism."

In the June issue of Moral Majority Report, executive vice president Ronald Godwin appealed urgently for funds, saying that "our frequent crises have grown more frequent."

Despite this, "we are experiencing our greatest growth," Cal Thomas, the organization's press spokesman, said by telephone from Lynchburg.

Thomas said the Moral Majority has received contributions from 10,000 new donors so far this year, "up significantly" from the same period in 1980.

He said the organization does not give money to candidates, but is "in the midst of a national telephone campaign to turn out the vote on Nov. 2," especially in areas where races are close.

The Internal Revenue Service says it is checking a complaint from People for the American Way that the Moral Majority Foundation is illegally soliciting tax-exempt deductions for political activities.

THE COMPLAINT cites a letter from Falwell saying voters were being urged to support "pro-life, pro-traditional family and pro-school prayer candidates." Thomas said attorneys advised the organization that the camaign is legal so long as no candidates are named.

Records of the Federal Election Commission show that the Moral Majority Political Action Committee gave $11,500 to nine Senate and House candidates in the 1980 elections, but that the committee was dissolved in 1981.

In recent weeks, the Moral Majority has mailed to pastors a list of "do's and don'ts of political activity," advising them how to conduct a voter registration and warning churches against endorsing candidates.

Adams, the pastor from Davenport who is setting up a voter registration table in the vestibule of his church, says he still favors Reagan but "we feel he has moved quite a bit toward the center from when he campaigned for election."

ASKED FOR specifics, he cited "appointing the woman to the Supreme Court. Her record certainly did not indicate performance that would parallel with Reagan's politicking before he was elected."

Kidnapping of university president still unsolved in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — In the three months since the kidnapping of David S. Dodge II, the acting president of the American University of Beirut, there's been a letter and a tape recording from him saying he's alive, then six agonizing weeks of silence.

The U.S. Embassy will say nothing more than it is operating on the assumption that Dodge is alive. But sources say investigators are working frantically behind the scenes, trying to get in touch with the kidnappers to press for his release.

"The sad fact is there is no one to negotiate with," said a well-placed source who asked not to be identified further. "It's strange. You kidnap someone because you want something, but we haven't been able to get in touch with them."

Sources said Dodge sent a handwritten letter and a tape recording to American officials in late August, saying he was alive and well and stating his kidnappers' demands. There has been nothing from him — or his kidnappers — since.

THE KIDNAPPERS want to exchange Dodge for four Iranian diplomats abducted in Lebanon in July, the sources said. The problem, according to the sources, is that no one knows who abducted the Iranians or how to get in touch with their kidnappers to arrange an exchange.

The case is so sensitive that nearly all Lebanese and Western officials who agreed to talk it did so with the understanding that they be identified only as "sources."

The 58-year-old Dodge, who was born in Beirut, was abducted by two gunmen as he strolled home from his office on campus at sunset July 19. At the time, he was the most prominent American living in mostly Moslem West Beirut.

The U.S. Embassy had closed June 23 and its diplomats moved to the Christian east side of the city as Israel bombed the west in its war with the Palestine Liberation Organization. Some sources said they believe if the embassy had remained open, an American diplomat — not Dodge — would have been kidnapped.

THERE HAS BEEN speculation that the gunmen were former students at the university, which could explain how they got past the guards at the gate to the 70-acre wooded campus overlooking the Mediterranean.

At first, Lebanese security sources said they suspected Dodge was kidnapped by Amal, a group of pro-Iranian Lebanese Shiite Moslems. But Nabih Berri, the Amal leader, condemned the abduction and said his people had nothing to do with it.

However, Lebanese police believe a splinter group of former Amal members may have carried out the kidnapping, one sources said.

The other mystery is who abducted the Iranian diplomats.

Mohsen Musavi, charges d'affaires at the Iranian embassy here, and three of his aides disappeared after entering east Beirut, which is controlled by rightist Christian militanmen from the Phalange Party to which President Amin Gemayel belongs.

THE PHALANGE, also known as the Kataeb, denied leftists accusations that its militiamen kidnapped the Iranians. It said the Iranians were turned back at a Phalange checkpoint and were last seen driving north toward Tripoli.

"The Kataeb claims they didn't have the guys," said one source. "Nobody knows who has them."

Apparently the men who abducted Dodge thought the United States could put pressure on the Phalange, whose militiamen cooperated with Israel during the war, to release the Iranian diplomats, sources said.

Shortly after Dodge was abducted, PLO chairman Yasser Arafat ordered a house-to-house search for Dodge and offered to mediate to secure his release. The PLO said July 22 that it had identified the kidnappers but refused to say who they were.

BUT THE SOURCES said the kidnappers rebuffed the PLO and refused to negotiate. Since then, investigators have contacted "every militia group in Lebanon" but have turned up no new clues, a source said.

Investigators say the abduction is mysterious because the kidnappers haven't shown any desire to talk or even make their demands known, beyond the letter which Dodge sent in August. There has been no request for ransom, so it is still assumed the motive for the kidnapping was political, the sources said.

Malcolm Kerr, who took over as president of the American University of Beirut this summer, said he cannot talk about the case because it is feared any publicity could endanger Dodge's life. Kerr said Dodge's wife and four children are living in Princeton, N.J.

"We had reason to believe he was alive and in good health in late August," Kerr said. Asked if he was hopeful that Dodge would be released, Kerr said: "Other people in Lebanon have been kidnapped for longer periods and released."

Texans will decide on welfare payments

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texans get a chance Nov. 2 to say if the state should continue making welfare payments to needy dependent children, even if the federal payments stop.

The proposed constitution change, Proposition No. 2, is one of six suggested amendments on the Nov. 2 ballot.

Should the six proposals pass in November, that would make a total of 253 changes in the Texas Constitution since it was adopted in 1876.

Proposition No. 2 would remove the present $80 million ceiling on the amount of state aid that can be matched with federal money for Aid to Families of Dependent Children (AFDC). It also would remove the present requirement of matching federal funds for state money.

"I think chances are excellent for passage of the welfare amendment," said Phil Strickland, head of Citizens Concerned About Children, which claims support of the governor, lieutenant governor, and speaker.

"Because of inflation, cutbacks in federal assistance and population increases, Texas is fast approaching the present $80 million ceiling," said Strickland, who also is director of the Texas Baptist Christian Life Commission. "Unless Amendment No. 2 is adopted, the average $34 per month benefit — which ranks Texas 49th among the states — will be cut, or truly needy children will be dropped from the program and denied assistance."

The proposed amendment removes the present $80 million ceiling on the amount of state aid to dependent children and their caretakers and sets a new ceiling of $160 million for the 1982-83 period and 1 percent of the state budget after that.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby has estimated the next Legislature will need about $100 million for the matching funds.

The present ceiling was adopted in 1969. In 1971, voters refused to support a Legislature-approved plan to raise the ceiling to $55 million for each business year.

Opponents of the proposition say welfare spending should be reduced instead of increased. They argue the 1 percent state budget ceiling, after 1982-83, is too lenient.

Proposition No. 6 on the ballot would increase the maximum interest rate charged on general obligation bonds issued by the state from 6 percent to a "weighted average annual" 12 percent. If approved, this would affect bonds authorized by the Constitution, such as water quality enhancement and water conservation bonds, park development bonds and student loan bonds.

It would not affect the popular Veterans Land Program bonds, which had their interest rate increased in 1981 from 6 percent to 10 percent.

Proponents say the 12 percent interest is necessary to sell bonds on the present inflationary market.

Opponents say payment of increased interest rates contributes to the inflation and the state should not increase its debt by selling more bonds.

Also on the ballot are two other proposed changes of limited interest to statewide voters. They are:

—Proposition No. 4, to allow the Legislature to authorize four-year terms, instead of two-year, for governing boards of water districts and other conservation and reclamation districts. Proponents say it is very costly to hold such elections every two years, mainly in rural areas and usually resultin in low voter turnout. They claim there would be more interest in four-year terms.

—Proposition No. 5 would allow Tarrant and Bee counties to abolish the office of county treasurer and transfer the duties to the county auditor, after a local election. In 1979, the Legislature attempted to abolish the Tarrant County treasurer by a special state law. The attorney general ruled against that, however, saying the Legislature could not change a constitutional provision without voter approval. Bee County was added when the controversy resurfaced in the 1981 Legislature.

The first year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated equivalent to a rate of 8½% for 95% loan-to-value. Interest will be charged at a rate of 13½% for the first 6 months of the loan. After the first 6 months interest will be charged at the most recent 6months Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. Payments on these mortgages are graduated so as to increase the principal and interest payments 7.50% each year for the next 4 years. At the end of the first 5 year period, the graduation in payments will cease. A new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage to amortize the remaining balance over the remaining 25 years of the mortgage based upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. The 7½% maximum increase can be more if the original loan principle exceeds 125%. At each 5 year anniversary date, the payment may be adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan. ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE APPROXIMATELY 14.28%
