Ku Klux Klan draws fire

Authorities contend blast was accident

By DIANA SMITH
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — The day care center blast that killed four toddlers and an adult was an accident, authorities say, but some anguished parents believe a bomb was responsible, and some blame the Ku Klux Klan.

"We're tired of our children being killed," said the Rev. Joseph Lowery, head of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

An angry, disbelieving crowd of about 200 people gathered Monday night at a west side church where Public Safety Commissioner Lee P. Brown answered questions about Monday's mid-morning explosion at the Gate City Day Care center, where 82 pre-schoolers were playing.

A cast-iron boiler in the building's furnace blew apart "like a hand grenade" about an hour after it was fired up on the first chilly day of fall, investigators said. Experts who examined the debris reported no evidence of a bomb. Brown said.

But there were shouts of disbelief from the crowd.

"I'm a veteran. I know about explosives," said an unidentified man who was greeted by cheers and applause from the crowd. "But there ain't no way in hell that a furnace could blow like that."

"How many more?" shouted another man. "Until we're tired of burying our dead?"

Others at the meeting shouted that the Ku Klux Klan had set off an explosive device at the center in Bowen Homes, a public housing project in west Atlanta.

Speculation about a bomb or Klan involvement was being fueled by the black community's anxiety over unsolved slayings of eight black children and the disappearances of eight others recently.

"There is an organized assault on black people across the country," Lowery said after the meeting. "We are tired of our children being killed."

Investigators said the cast-iron boiler, fueled by natural gas, was blown apart in a way that only steam pressure could have caused.

Atlanta Gas Light Co. spokesman Jim Tate said experts ruled out the possibility of a bomb because "an explosion would have moved the boiler, lifted it, possibly even turned it over. But it would not have detonated it like a hand grenade."

Frantic parents rushed to the day care center and local hospitals when they got word of the disaster.

When Kimberly Carroll saw little bodies covered with sheets, she was gripped with fear that her 4-year-old son Tony was dead.

"I was terrified," she said. "I just felt like I had lost him."

But she was one of the lucky ones, reunited with her child at Grady Memorial Hospital an hour later.

Andre Stanford, 3, died in the blast. "His mother started to keep him out. He had a little slight cold. But he wanted to go," said his father, Leroy Smith, as he stood outside the county morgue.

Hundreds of youngsters in day care centers all over Atlanta were evacuated after several callers claimed responsibility for the blast and said there were bombs planted elsewhere.

A rumor control center was established Monday to try to quell rumors about the explosion, and Mayor Maynard Jackson ordered increased police patrols.

Iraqi forces setting up for seige

BASRA, Iraq (AP) — Iraqi forces threatening Abadan moved more armor and artillery across the Karun River but appeared to be preparing for a siege rather than an assault to overrun the Iranian oil city and its giant refinery. New mediation efforts reportedly were under way to try to end the war.

As the Iraqi effort to win complete control of the Shatt al-Arab estuary went into its 3rd day, Iran's official Pars news agency said the invaders put two more pontoon bridges across the Karun northwest of Abadan, giving them three crossing points on the approaches to the threatened city.

Iran claimed it shot down six Iraqi MiG jets in raids today on Abadan and Kharg Island, off Iran's southwestern Persian Gulf coast. It claimed six other Iraqi jets were downed in raids

Monday over the same area. Iraq said all its planes returned safely from both raids.

Habib Chatti, secretary general of the 40-nation Islamic Conference organization, prepared to begin a fresh mediation effort with visits to Baghdad and Tehran. Both Iraq and Iran have ignored past appeals by the United Nations for an end to the fighting.

A Kuwaiti newspaper, Al-Wattan, quoted Saslah

Khalaf, a leader in the Palestine Liberation Organization, as saying the PLO is about to propose a new formula for ending the war. Under the proposal, Iraq would agree to return to its border and Iran would agree to negotiate with Iraq in another country under the auspices of a third party, he was quoted as saying.

Iran said it had crushed an Iraqi-backed breakaway rebellion by autonomy-seeking Kurdish insurgents in northwestern Iran near the border with Turkey. The Pars news agency said 80 rebels and 20 Iranian security forces had been killed in two days of fighting.

A British reporter who visited the Abadan area said he saw tanks, amphibious vehicles and artillery moving across one of the bridges "in a leisurely manner."

City approves bond investment change

By LYNN HUNTER
Managing Editor

The Pampa City Commission today gave authorization to proceed with a change in investments to get out from under restrictive covenants in a 1956 and 1958 sewer revenue bond issue. The investment change will allow the city to receive about $40,000 in income and to reissue revenue bonds if needed before the October 1982 retirement date of the bonds.

The commission also agreed to cover traffic lights at Foster and Somerville for a trial period and to seek paying of two blocks of Somerville Street west of Sumner.

Ken Smith of Rauscher, Pierce and Refines Inc. appeared before the commission with a proposal for "advance refunding" in their payment of the 1956 and 1958 water and sewer revenue bond issues.

Smith said if the city paid out the bonds, according to the current retirement schedule, their interest earnings would be $39,433. Restrictive covenants in the issue prohibit the city from issuing any other revenue bonds before the October 1982 date unless the city can show they have earned one and one-half the bond issue amount in two consecutive years.

Smith said the city could call the outstanding issues at their next payment, April 1, 1981, and earn $23,813.

But under a new method, called "advance refunding," the city could not only pay off the bonds and earn about $41,000, but also be relieved of the restrictive covenants.

Mayor Ray Thompson, Commissioners Buddy Cauthorn and Coyle Ford, the only commissioners present at the meeting, agreed the city should follow the advance refunding route.

Smith said with authorization given today, a resolution would be offered at the next commission meeting authorizing a changing in the city's investment. He said a trust agreement would be worked out with the bank through the city's bonding attorneys.

Smith said if the transaction were made this month, he anticipated no change in current interest rates affecting the city's earnings greater than $500 to $1,500.

The advance refunding procedure involves the purchase at current market prices of two U.S. Treasury bills, one for $128,000 and one for $121,000.

The bills would then back the payments to investors, relieving the city of its debt.

Regarding the traffic signal at Foster and Somerville, City Manager Mack Wofford said city officials wanted to "bag" the lights for a trial period, installing stop signs on Somerville and making Foster the through-street.

He said no action of the commission was required, but he wanted to let commissioners aware of the change.

Mayor Thompson and Commissioner Cauthorn both expressed some misgivings that the plan would work, due to the youths "dragging" Foster, but okayed the trial period.

Engineer Gene Barber showed the commission two portions of Somerville Street, termed "leave-outs," which will be unpaved after current paving plans are completed. Barber said the areas are 250 feet north of Sumner on Somerville, and west of Wells Street to Dwight Street on Somerville. He said Caprock Apartments plan to pave the area west of Dwight Street to a utility easement line at the west edge of the new apartment construction area.

Barber said there are six adjacent owners along the two stretches of Somerville.

"At times, they have shown interest in the project, but when it comes time to sign a check, they haven't shown much interest," Barber said.

Mayor Thompson said, "I think we ought to try to work with the owners as much as we can before we go to an assessment program. It looks like it would be to their advantage to get it paved."

Wofford said the city could legally assess the costs to the adjacent owners, "but it's a long legal process, and I think we ought to attempt negotiations first."

Wofford said the first step the city will take is to issue letters to the owners of the property, which he said would be done next week.

Thompson said, "Let's have voluntary participation if we can."

Barber also said the new apartment complex will get its first occupants in the latter part of November and the first part of December.

The commission gave approval of absences from city commission meetings for Commissioners O. M. Prigmore and Buddy Cauthorn.

Thompson said, "Mr. Prigmore has been absent considerably and there has probably been a good reason for it. He has been working at the governor's request to do an audit on state agencies."

"We hate to lose him and need him in our meetings, but it's probably worthwhile work. He ought to receive our thanks for that," Thompson said.

Coyle Ford said, "I think we're lucky to have him here. I don't think it has created any problems," referring to Prigmore's absences.

Cauthorn protested some absences for the month of July saying, "These are not regular meetings they've got me down for. Are these special meetings? I think the majority of them were all in one month in special meetings."

Wofford said, "Many of these in the month of July are special meetings." He said the commission only meets twice a month, on the second and fourth Tuesdays.

Crime spree ends in 'shinnery patch'

By DEBORAH BRIDGES
Staff Writer

The three-state crime spree of two California men was cut short after a five-hour manhunt in rough country east of Shamrock Monday afternoon.

Awaiting arraignment in Wheeler County Jail on charges of robbery by force are Samuel Scott Maxwell, 19 and David Lee Workman, 19, both of Ridgecrest, Calif. Wheeler County Sheriff Doyle Ramsey said.

The duo turned themselves in to law officers near a "shinnery patch" — heavy underbrush — located ten miles east of Shamrock and two miles south of Interstate 40, the sheriff said.

Gray County Sheriff's Deputy Kelly Rushing who was on the scene when the arrest was made said the two men were barefooted and "in pretty bad shape."

The arrest was made at about 4 p.m. Monday, five hours after the search had begun. The manhunt involved about 35 law enforcement officers on horses, a helicopter, an airplane and four-wheel drive vehicles.

The charges result from an incident Monday morning in which two men reportedly "forcefully" took a purse containing about $100 from a 75-year-old woman in the parking lot of Shamrock Hospital, Ramsey said.

A vehicle matching the description of the one used in the robbery was spotted at the intersection of U.S. 66 and Texas 83 by Shamrock Chief of Police Kelly Locke. The police chief said he chased the vehicle on Texas 83, Interstate 40, and various country back roads until the vehicle was abandoned by the two subjects in a wheat field southeast of an Ashland Chemical carbon black plant, seven miles east of Shamrock.

A check on the 1980 Buick Regal showed the vehicle had been stolen from Las Vegas, Nev., he said.

Further investigation revealed the two men were wanted in Ridgecrest, Calif. for burglary and in Las Vegas, Nev. for robbery, Ramsey said. The Las Vegas robbery involved the taking of money and the vehicle, he said.

The suspects were believed to have been armed with a .38 caliber revolver when the manhunt began, Ramsey said. "They started out armed, but they threw the pistol away before we caught them," he said. The pistol had not been recovered early today, he said.

Plans to have the two extradited to California or Nevada have not been made, Ramsey said. "Our charges come first. When we get through with them in a month or two months, if either of them (the authorities in Nevada or California) want them then they can be extradited," he said.

Weather

The forecast calls for a 20 percent chance of thundershowers today and tomorrow. It will be partly cloudy today and tonight but not so warm. Temperatures will be in the low 80s today with overnight temperatures in the mid 50s. The high for Wednesday will be in the mid 70s. Winds will reach 15-20 mph today increasing to 15-30 mph Wednesday.

Area accident victims remain hospitalized

A felony hit-and-run warrant has been issued for a Mexican male by Texas Highway Patrol troopers in connection with an accident on Texas 152 Saturday night in which three Pampa women were injured.

The three sisters — identified by officials as Gloria Chavez, 23, Lupe Chavez, 20, both of 1006 E. Frederick and Sacarro Madril, 24, of 114 E. Campbell — are all listed in satisfactory condition at Northwest Texas Hospital of Amarillo. Each of the three victims was reported to have suffered head injuries and concussions in the mishap. Madril was reportedly the most seriously injured of the three.

The accident occurred at about 6:30 p.m. Saturday on Texas 152, eight miles east of Borger, according to investigating trooper Gordon Miller. The late model AMC Gremlin was traveling toward Pampa when the accident occurred, he said.

Investigation results indicate a second car was involved in the wreck and left the scene. "Apparently, the suspect (which Miller said he believes was driving the vehicle) lost control of his vehicle and spun in front of the second vehicle (in which the three women were passengers) causing them to travel into a ditch," Miller said.

The suspect then left the scene, leaving no identification and failing to aid the injured women, he said.

The person named in the warrant could possibly have been involved in a hit-and-run which occurred recently on McCulloch Street in Pampa, Miller said. This was not named in the warrant, however, the trooper said.

Saturday's wreck is the third serious accident to have occurred in the area during a five-day period.

Four other persons are hospitalized for injuries they received in traffic accidents during that time.

After a second wreck Saturday at 10:15 p.m. on a Farm to Market 2300 near Groom, a White Deer youth remains in critical condition at Northwest Texas Hospital. Jerold McCown, 18, was seriously injured when the pickup truck he was driving rolled over his body. The owner of the truck and a passenger, Ken Martin, 19, also of White Deer, was treated and released. The third person involved Eddie Finck, 21, Groom, was not injured. Finck was reportedly attempting to pass the Martin vehicle when the two trucks collided causing the Martin truck to flip three and one-half times.

Three persons involved in an fiery collision Thursday night east of Miami were still hospitalized early today. Two elderly Canadian women died in the crash.

Listed in critical condition by officials of the burn center of Parkland Hospital in Dallas is Betty Carr Davis, 46, of Canadian. Michael Porter, 20, also of Canadian, is listed in fair condition at Parkland. The third victim, Cindy Brown, 22, of Canadian is in satisfactory condition at High Plains Baptist Hospital of Amarillo, according to a hospital spokesperson.

THIS WAS HOME. A group of Algerians sit in front of the building that was their home in Al Asnam Monday. A series of new aftershocks rumbled through the city late Monday, panicking survivors of Friday's devastating earthquake. (AP Laserphoto)

Rubble continues to yield quake survivors

AL ASNAM, Algeria (AP) — The rescuers knocked on a steel girder and listened. Moments later, they heard a feeble scratching, proof that someone was still alive nearly four days after Al Asnam's killer earthquake buried him beneath the wreckage of the office building.

Suddenly, the rescuers dropped their tools and ran into the street. The ruins had been shaken by another of the dozens of daily aftershocks. A concrete wall directly overhead, leaning at a 30-degree angle, threatened to bury the diggers.

The aftershocks Monday, some measuring up to 5 on the Richter scale, caused a panic among the tens of thousands of homeless survivors receiving food and medical aid in temporary tent cities. Terrified men, women and children poured into the open air.

The official Algerian news agency said there was no further damage or casualties Monday in Al Asnam, where 1,600 bodies have been recovered and the Red Crescent relief organization estimated 5,000 to 20,000 people were killed, 80 percent of the city of 125,000 people were destroyed, and 250,000 of the province's 1 million people were made homeless.

As each aftershock subsided, the thousands of Algerian searchers and French and Swiss alpine rescue teams with trained search dogs returned to the rubble. More victims were brought out, alive but badly injured.

The scratching was believed to be coming from the watchman at the building's underground parking lot.

"Last night, we heard him crying for help," said one of the searchers. "This morning one of our avalanche dogs confirmed his presence, but now his cries have stopped."

Then they heard the faint scratching from below.

"Every day there is less and less hope for those buried in the ruins," said a doctor standing by. He said on Sunday he had to amputate both legs of a trapped man to save his life.

A week after the 1954 quake which killed 1,600 people in Al Asnam, survivors were still being found alive in the ruins, according to a police officer.

Small children who lost their parents in the disaster wandered aimlessly through the streets. Rescue teams organized by a women's group gathered them up. Those whose relatives could be found were turned over to them. Volunteer families cared for others.

At one tent camp, 12-year-old Fadila complained of the cold at night — "I have only a single blanket and no mattress; could you help me get another blanket?" But she said her parents and all eight of their children escaped from their house seconds before the walls came crashing down.

"My eldest brother was carrying little Mohamed, aged two, and Mama clutched the new baby. Thank God we are all safe," she said.

"But I don't think I want to live in Al Asnam any more. I am afraid."

Budget will dominate meeting of commissioners

Gray County Commissioners will be discussing the 1981 budget and the Treasurer's report when they meet in regular session Wednesday, at 9:30 a.m. in the Gray County Courthouse.

Work on the Perry-Lefors Airport will also be discussed by the commissioners and bids will be awarded for the work.

The TAC group medical and life insurance plan will be on the agenda for consideration.

Three items, the CETA, Home Energy Assistance Program, and a nondiscrimination resolution will be discussed.

Commissioners will also consider the A-95 request for the Lefors water well project.

A revised plat for the Pampa Industrial Park East will be considered by the commissioners.

Texas weather

By The Associated Press

Slightly warmer temperatures were forecast today for most of Texas.

Forecasts called for partly cloudy skies and warmer temperatures. Highs were to be mostly in the 80s except in South Texas and Southwest Texas where readings were to be in the 90s.

A few widely scattered showers were reported during the night in the Trans Pecos area and in the Lower Rio Grande Valley. Rainfall amounts were mostly light, ranging from .10 to .25 of an inch.

Low clouds were reported early today in South Central and South Texas while the remainder of the state had clear skies. The clouds were located from Del Rio northward to Austin and south to the Corpus Christi-Alice area.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 60s. Extremes ranged from 49 at Marfa to 75 at San Antonio.

Texas forecasts

North Texas - Clear to partly cloudy and warm through Wednesday with widely scattered thundershowers west Wednesday. Highs 80s. Lows 60s.

West Texas - Partly cloudy through Wednesday with widely scattered thundershowers mainly north tonight and east of mountains Wednesday. Highs 80s except upper 70s mountains. Lows low 50s Panhandle to low 60s southeast except upper 40s mountains. Highs Wednesday mid 70s Panhandle and mountains, upper 80s extreme south.

South Texas - Partly cloudy and warm through Wednesday. Highs 80s and 90s. Lows 60s and 70s.

The deposits being held in Pampa and area banks and savings and loan companies are up and the trend looks good for the Panhandle economy.

The area banks contacted showed an upward trend in the amount of deposits and the amount in loans.

The future of economics is hard to determine the bankers contacted said. However, the 1980 elections, soon to be conducted, actually played a small part in the economy officials said.

The amount of deposits in the First National Bank in Pampa has increased $19 million from 1979 to 1980. The third-quarter in 1979 showed $63,719,000 on hand in deposits and the third-quarter of 1980 ending Sept. 30 showed deposits of $82,424,000.

Loan amounts have increased from $26,045,000 to $30,706,000.

"Our economy is good, here in the Panhandle," a First National Bank official said. "However inflation has contributed to some of our increases, just as it has affected everything else."

Chief wants charges in fight aftermath

EASTLAND, Texas (AP) — Not too many things have gone right since Friday for Dublin and its football team, which still had hopes of backing its 9-1 season of 1979 with a District 10-AA championship this year.

They lost 26-21 to unbeaten Eastland when a touchdown was called back as time expired.

Then there was a fight after the game — involving Eastland police and the Dublin coaches, not the players — when Eastland fans threw jeers, taunts and a few objects at the Dublin bus when it headed out of town.

Now the Eastland police chief wants charges filed against Dublin's coach, two of his assistants and two Dublin fans.

Police Chief Bobby Arriola is seeking a grand jury indictment against 36-year-old Dublin rancher Dick Zachry, and resisting arrest charges against the others. Arriola said Zachry's flying elbows sent one of his officers to the hospital with bruised ribs.

Dublin officials have blasted Arriola and his staff as "young and inexperienced" officers who reacted with excessive force to the disturbance.

The attorney for the school said he will file a lawsuit "as soon as possible" against five or six officers and the city of Eastland.

"I deny any allegations that any of my officers beat any of them with clubs. All they did was physically grab them and try to restrain them," said Arriola, who was on hand when the brouhaha occurred.

The Eastland police arrested Zachry, Dublin head coach Bill Bryant, assistants Bitty Ward and Charles Everett and Dublin businessman Bill Greer. They stayed in jail an hour and a half before Zachry made his $1,000 bond and the others made their $500 bonds.

An Eastland man fighting with Bryant outside the bus was arrested but fled into the crowd while the officers were trying to subdue Bryant, Arriola said.

Dublin fans say Bryant got off the bus when Eastland fans jeered at the players and threw something at the vehicle on an Eastland street after the game.

"Our coach got off to see who it was, and... one of the people in the crowd took a swing at the coach," according to Dublin newspaper publisher Wesley Burnett, who said he talked with fans who witnessed the scene.

Bryant "ducked and pushed off and was backing his way back to the bus to get the boys out of town when he saw it was an unruly crowd. As he was getting back on, a police officer grabbed him and got him off, and they pulled a gun as the assistant coaches were trying to get the bus moving," Burnett added.

Arriola said: "No charges have been filed. We still have one officer hospitalized, and the charges will depend on his condition. We will turn all our information over to the grand jury and recommend that charges be filed," the chief added.

"The biggest part, the Dublin coaches was kind of angry over the touchdown being called back," Arriola said.

The game ended as quarterback Bill Boy Bryant, the coach's son, rolled left on an option play and tossed a 3-yard pass to his younger brother, Blake Bryant, in the end zone.

Two officials signaled a touchdown, but another referee ruled the quarterback had passed the line of scrimmage before releasing the ball.

"It's really a shame when all the media cares about is what happened after the game. That didn't have anything to do with the outcome of the game," Bryant said. "Sure, it's juicier. But all I care about is the young boys who should have won that game. But no one wants to talk about that."

BIG MARKET LIST. Mr. and Mrs. Rusty Neef, chairmen of the Choir Boosters Spaghetti Supper, check over the giant sized shopping list as a preparatory measure of the supper which will be conducted Friday from 5 p.m. until 7:30 p.m. at Pampa High School cafeteria. Ship wreck continues to give up treasure

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — The wreck of an 18th century ship discovered earlier this year off the Louisiana coast still carrying its cargo of gold and silver has been identified as the Spanish vessel El Constante, which sank during a hurricane in 1766.

And the same storm probably wrecked two other ships in the El Constante's fleet, which may still be lying somewhere nearby in the Gulf of Mexico, experts said.

There's a "distinct possibility" that the Santa Barbara and El Corazon de Jesus — The Heart of Jesus — can be found in the same area, said Gordon T. Watts Jr., a noted underwater archaeologist.

Gov. Dave Treen and officials of the state Department of Culture, Recreation and Tourism announced the El Constante's identity at a news conference Monday.

A partial history of the ship had been pieced together from colonial records in Mexico, Spain and sources in the state museum.

It was one of six in a fleet bound from Veracruz, Mexico, to Spain in September 1766, when the hurricane blew up in the Gulf of Mexico.

A secondary source published in 1853 indicated the fleet carried more than 15 million pesos worth of gold, silver, copper, indigo, dyewood, sugar, hides, cacao, pottery and spices.

Asked to estimate the value of the precious metals that were on the six ships, Steve Perry, assistant secretary of the culture and tourism department, said, "It is of untold value today."

At modern day prices, the 40 pounds of gold recovered thus far is worth $350,000. Officials say the artifacts and archaeological information "are the most exciting find" in the state's history.

The remains of the El Constante were discovered earlier this year by a shipwrecker in 15 to 18 feet of water about 1 1/2 miles off the coast of Cameron Parish near the Rockefeller Refuge.

From underwater examinations, Watts said it appeared the ship was 140 to 144 feet long and was a "fairly sizeable ship" for that era. Watts said that about one-fourth of the hull of the ship appears to be intact. "There is no reason that the site can't be excavated in an archaeologically accepted way," he said.

Only a small portion of the metals and artifacts has been brought up from the shipwreck, officials said, adding it probably will take four or five months to excavate the site.

A private firm is doing the excavation but the state controls how it will be handled. Since the initial finding in July, the wreck has yielded Mexican Indian ceramics, iron cannon balls and ship fittings.

Kiwanis name "Officer of Quarter"

Det. Jerry Womack

Det. Jerry Womack, juvenile officer for the Pampa Police Department, was recently honored by the Pampa Downtown Kiwanis as "Officer of the Quarter."

The newly-named juvenile officer was presented with a plaque honoring him for his work with the department by Kiwanis President Phil Vanderpool during their meeting Friday.

With a background in child welfare as a caseworker for the Department of Human Resources, Womack has taken over most of the department's work with children during the past two months. He is liaison officer in the schools besides his work investigating juvenile offenses.

"I'm not still a social worker," Womack says of his job. "I deal with juvenile investigations only."

"A juvenile is just like anybody else when he does wrong. My main duty is to stop them from doing what they are doing," he says.

"But I hope to keep them from being repeat offenders. If I can encourage a young person or lead them to the right means to get help, then that's certainly part of the job, too," he adds.

A native of Lubbock, Womack joined the Pampa Police Department in August of 1979. Prior to working with the Department of Human Resources, he attended Texas Tech University where he received a bachelor's degree in sociology. He also served four years with the U. S. Army.

During the past summer, Womack coached a little league baseball team sponsored by members of the police department. As a liaison officer, he is a familiar face in the city's schools.

Drug bust suspect recaptured

DALLAS (AP) — A man who jumped bail six years ago in what officials call the largest cocaine bust in Dallas has been recaptured by state narcotics agents.

Warren J. Starnes, who had lived in Tulsa and McAlester, Okla., used the alias Edward Potter for the past six years. He was arrested by Department of Public Safety officers Oct. 6 as he entered the Collin County courthouse at McKinney, DPS officials said. He showed up for a hearing on a charge of driving while intoxicated.

He is now held at the Tarrant County jail in Fort Worth on $20,000 bond.

Starnes was arrested in 1974 along with Dallas businessman Carr P. Collins III and seven other men and charged with delivery of cocaine.

DPS officials say Starnes' recapture was sheer luck. After he was arrested in Plano on a charge of driving while intoxicated, a DPS agent checked through the state drivers license bureau in Austin and found that Starnes had been using the alias Potter, officials said.

He was scheduled to go on trial Sept. 29, 1975, but failed to appear in state district court in Fort Worth, where the trial had been moved from Dallas.

Starnes' attorney, Frank Wright, said his client jumped bail because he "thought the situation was unfair."

Other defendants in the drug trafficking case, with the exception of Collins, were indicted for delivery of cocaine. Collins originally was charged with delivery, but the charge later was reduced to possession. He was sentenced to five years — the shortest term in connection with the case.

"Collins with his political clout gets five years and is out on the street, but they want to give Starnes 50 years to life..." Wright said.

DPS officials said at the time they did not expect to get a delivery charge against Collins, since the agent in charge claimed he couldn't testify that the wealthy businessman had been delivering the illegal drug.

Mourning period begins in Buffalo

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Black ribbons fluttered on lapels, and sleeves were wrapped with armbands of mourning today as thousands of Buffalo's citizens, black and white, began a 21-day expression of sorrow for six blacks slain in less than four weeks.

"I'm a bit overwhelmed. I didn't expect the barrage of people," said civil rights leader William Gaiter, president of the Institute of People Enterprises.

Gaiter had asked residents of this city of 357,000 to mourn the victims by wearing armbands or ribbons. He said more than 5,000 armbands and ribbons, twice as many as expected, were passed out Monday, many to "a surprisingly large number of whites."

A police manhunt continued, with officials unsure how many racially selective killers were at large. Authorities said the FBI was making a composite drawing of a suspect.

"The FBI artist worked until late Sunday night with the witnesses and worked again Monday morning with them," said Edward Cosgrove, Erie County district attorney.

Cosgrove foresaw "no arrests around the corner" in the slayings and in the assault on Collin Cole, 37, a black former Attica prison inmate who was being treated for a drug overdose Friday when a man tried to strangle him in his Erie County Medical Center room.

Cosgrove said Cole's condition was improving and that investigators hoped to talk to Cole again soon.

The FBI composite drawing will depict the so-called "22-caliber killer" who gunned down four black males in Buffalo and nearby cities during a 36-hour period Sept. 22-24.

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Classrooms in this poor, border school district have closed their doors to new enrollments by children of illegal aliens, at least temporarily, under a federal judge's order.

The Brownsville Independent School District halted the enrollments Monday, becoming the first Texas district to do so less than two weeks after a federal judge ruled the children of illegal aliens had the right to a free education in Texas public schools.

U.S. District Judge Filemon Vela issued a temporary restraining order here Friday free schooling for the youngsters.

The order will not affect the 557 undocumented children already in school.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coving Commandment.

Labor gets much of food dollar

America's supermarkets and their customers are paying more and more and more for foodstuffs, and they speak of how the farmer and the grower - shipper are benefiting from the high prices.

Such misinformation spreads and gives the producer a bad name and the productive region loses a little of its allure.

It would be good if those who herald the food - producing prowess of the growers would tell the full story, that the flow from the cornucopia does not turn into rivers of money emptying into the pockets of the producers.

The agricultural producer receives only a fraction of the dollar spent for his end - product (food) in the supermarket.

Who gets the lion's share? You can be the judge of that.

Marketing costs, led by labor, continue to boost food prices which may be up 10 to 12 percent by late 1980, compared to a year ago, Dr. Richard A. Edwards, economist in marketing and food distribution with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service of the Texas A&M University System said.

And hear this:

"Labor's share of the retail food dollar will be more than that of the farmer in 1980," Dr. Edwards added. He continued, "Our estimates show that 32 cents of every dollar spent for food items this year will go to labor costs, while only 30 cents will go to the farmer, the producer of those items."

He said labor makes up a big part of the marketing bill or food price spread, the difference between the retail price and the farm value of the commodity. He added that other items contributing to the marketing bill are packaging, transportation, pretax profits and costs such as taxes, depreciation, rent, energy and interest.

"About nine cents of every food dollar goes for packaging, a nickel goes for transportation, almost another nickel goes for pretax profits, and 20 cents covers other costs," the economist added.

And hear this, too: While the farmer's share of the food dollar in 1980 will be below that of a year ago and pretax profits are also expected to drop slightly, other parts of the marketing bill should show sharp gains, the economist said. He estimates that labor costs will be up 10 to 12 percent, packaging costs up 12 to 14 percent, and other costs up about 20 percent, caused mainly by skyrocketing utility costs.

Dr. Edwards emphasized that a major reason the marketing share of the food dollar continues to increase is the increasing popularity of convenience foods. He said, "The time and work involved in manufacturing these products is shifted to the manufacturer from the consumer, a service which means higher prices."

When one observes the big grocery bill one is paying, one should not blame the farmer. The farmer is getting less. Labor is getting more. If government - mandated minimum wages were not involved and the supply - and - demand principle was allowed to run its course, a "more reasonable" food bill could be in sight at this point. The other factor, of course, is the individual who in demanding convenience foods must pay for that convenience. Whatever one does, one should know that the American farmer is still the provider who continues somehow to hang on despite government regulation and government - induced inflation.

Symposium could bring some good

There is a rebellious attitude developing strength in Texas toward the property tax.

And we frequently have been chided, mostly by bureaucrats small and large, that what we think we see is only a ripple which will never amount to anything powerful and statewide.

Yet the September issue of the Texas Research League's Analysis announces that a tax forum has been set for Nov. 20 in Austin. The League reported:

"Heeding the warning signs of an impending property tax revolt throughout Texas, the Texas Research League has organized a panel of blue - ribbon property tax authorities to discuss various realistic solutions for statewide complaints about existing property tax relief and reform measures."

The League will sponsor the "Symposium on Property Tax Relief and Reform" at the Marriott Hotel in Austin, according to Sam Coats, League president.

(The League's address: 1117 Red River St., Austin 78701)

"The League would be derelict in fulfilling its mission if it did not address the twin issue of property tax relief and reform at a time when those issues are so seriously impacting so many of our citizens ... The League will not advocate a legislative program; that is ... the responsibility of policy makers," Coats said.

He said the League's role in the symposium will be confined to tax information based on objective research.

Coats, in his "Viewpoint" column in the Analysis, wrote that many political observers — and others, including tax authorities — think a property tax revolt is brewing in Texas. He listed some of the early signs, one being that "several taxpayer organizations are making use of the initiative and referendum provisions of home rule charters in an effort to impose severe, sometimes crippling, limits on the taxing authority of their city governments."

He commented: "The trouble with revolutions is that they frequently do more harm than good. More often than not, everybody is better off if they can be defused before they explode. And our society and government are so structured as to permit removal of the germs of such a revolt without killing the patient ..."

"But to avoid revolt, we must: (1) Understand the underlying reasons for the revolution; and (2) Devise a sane and sensible way to resolve the issues in an equitable yet fiscally responsible manner ..."

We feel we will be hearing more about the symposium as time goes on. We note that it will be after the general election, and the outcome of the election may have a bearing on what will be the atmosphere of the session. What Coats has said has merit, but "taxes" falls into the category of a bad word, the use of which is, at the least, vexing. Some real good could come out of the symposium if it is not loaded with persons motivated by their involvement in government.

Clark stands firm for freedom

By Oscar Cooley

With war raging between Iraq and Iran, people's attention turns to international affairs. How will the U.S. be affected? What will be the foreign policy of our next president?

Ed Clark, the Libertarian Party's candidate, in his platform has spelled out pretty clearly what he thinks our stance should be. In general, he believes the United States should mind its own business, not that of other nations. This would mean withdrawing from many present international commitments. Some label him "isolationist."

"We should return," goes the platform, "to the historic libertarian tradition of avoiding entangling alliances, abstaining totally from foreign quarrels and imperialist adventures, and recognizing the right to unrestricted trade, travel and immigration." We should seek peace but at the same time we should defend, against attack from abroad, the "lives, liberty, and property of the American people."

On military policy, it says, "We recognize the necessity for maintaining a sufficient military force to defend the United States against aggression. We should reduce the overall cost and size of our total governmental defense establishment."

Is this contradictory? Some may think so, but reading on, they will find that Clark believes our present danger lies in our policy of intervention, as in Korea and Vietnam, which he would discontinue.

He would withdraw all American troops from bases abroad. For example, in Korea. Our military commitment to South Korea, also to NATO, should be cancelled. The Monroe Doctrine (that we will take a dim view of aggression upon any nation of the western hemisphere) should be given up. These are apt to lead us into non - defensive war, he thinks.

"We view the mass destruction potential of modern warfare as the greatest threat to the lives and liberties of the American people and all the people of the globe. We favor international negotiations toward general and complete disarmament down to police levels, provided every necessary precaution is taken to effectively protect the lives and the rights of the American people."

It is hardly necessary to say that the libertarians oppose the draft, as well as compulsory registration.

"We call upon the U.S. government to cease all intervention in the Middle East ... In view of the present conflict there, this statement in the platform takes on especial interest. Clearly, Clark does not favor the U.S. going to war to defend the Middle East states or Afghanistan against domination by Soviet Russia."

In short, Clark holds it is not our job to police the world. We should not favor one country over another but should be a good neighbor to all. If our overtures of friendship are rebuffed, we should simply withdraw and let them stew in their own juice. We should "walk softly and carry a big stick," as Teddy Roosevelt said.

The Libertarians have no faith in the United Nations. They would have the U.S. withdraw from the UN as well as from the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund. They would have the private banks function freely in the international as well as home field.

Our government also should cease giving foreign aid. Give all people freedom to earn dollars by selling us goods and services, but put no one of them on a dole. Private American citizens, however, should be free to give aid to foreigners, says the platform.

Broadly speaking, Ed Clark and his party are opposed to big government. They would reduce the government radically, cutting taxes drastically, and abolishing many government offices and agencies that do not directly help to protect the lives and liberties of individual Americans. But they would have us stand firm against any aggression from abroad.

This would have the effect of opening up many areas of activity for private enterprisers, as for example in the fields of foreign trade, finance, education, health services and even mining, transportation and construction. New firms would be launched. Vastly more money would be saved and invested. Employment would greatly increase.

It is not too much to predict that pioneer America, the land known to our great grandparents, would be reborn.

Ed Clark knows he will not be elected president, but he hopes to get 5 percent of the vote. Surely as many of the voters as that stand firm with him for freedom.

If the American people are serious about preserving basic American principles and renewing the free America of old, he will get a substantial vote. To see this happen would be a healthy experience for whoever wins.

Today in history

Over there, over there

by ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON — Every time something happens in Iran, the Iranian students in the United States seem to come out of the woodwork, or wherever they live, protesting alleged American involvement, screaming oaths against the U.S. president, and screwing up the traffic something awful.

This is, of course, perfectly legal, but it does go against the grain of many Americans who feel that the streets could be better used during the rush hour than for pro - Khomeini demonstrations.

As a defender of free speech, I cannot call for any group to be banned from parading and shouting. But it seems to me that with Iran at war, the students could do so much more good if they went home and defended their country.

From what one can see, the Iranian students have tremendous spirit. Their talents seem wasted in the United States, yelling at the top of their lungs about all the terrible things that are being done to them. These people would make marvelous soldiers in Bani - Sadr's army, and could really play an important part in repulsing the satanic forces which are trying to overrun their country.

Instead of lying down in the streets of Washington trying to stop our buses, they could throw themselves in front of the Iraqi tanks. And instead of burning effigies of President Carter, they could lob grenades at the Iraqi soldiers who have invaded their land.

Naturally, all of us here in the United States would hate to see them leave, but we would understand it if they all packed up tomorrow and left for their homeland.

There might be financial problems in the pro - Khomeini students getting back. But I think this could be dealt with by unfreezing some of the Iranian assets in this country, and providing them with free transportation to Tehran.

Let no one make any mistake about this proposal. No Iranian student should be kicked out of the U.S. just because he doesn't like it here. But we should appeal to his patriotism. Instead of the American people looking on with distaste as the students demonstrate, we should urge them to enlist in their own armed services and go forth to fight their holy war where it is taking place.

We should make it perfectly clear that we would love to have them stay in America, but their protests are falling on deaf ears here and they are much more needed on the battlefield. I would even hold a ticker tape parade down Broadway as they marched off to the troop ships which would take them back to the land of their birth.

Many people to whom I have suggested my idea seem skeptical. They say the Iranian students don't want to go home. They maintain the students would rather remain here, where they know they are safe from the crazy mullahs who are running their country. They also know they'll be protected in the U.S., no matter what they're protesting, which doesn't happen to be the case in Iran.

But I don't believe it. I know every pro - Khomeini student is dying to leave the oppressive police state they maintain we have over here. So I say, "Iranian Students, Unite and Go Home. Your Country Needs You — And Arrivederci, Gang. We'll Miss You, But When You Gotta Go, You Gotta Go."

Imports: China first

By Anthony Harrigan

President Nixon's attorney general, John Mitchell, said early in that administration: "watch what we do, not what we say."

The same advice applies to the Carter administration. Mr. Carter frequently says one thing while his administration does another.

This is clearly illustrated in the administration's approach to textile imports from Communist China.

On Sept. 16, Mr. Carter, in a campaign appearance in upstate South Carolina, promised a cheering crowd of mill workers that an upcoming trade agreement with China would help their ailing industry.

Within days, the Carter administration signed agreements with the Peking Regime that revealed the falsity of the statement the President made to the textile workers.

The New York Times reported that the agreements "provide for substantial increases" in imports from China. In the largest category of Chinese imports, men's cottons trousers, imports will be increased by 65 percent in the next three years.

Stuart H. Green, chairman of the American Apparel Manufacturers Association, warned that the higher level of imports "will create tough, low - price competition in an industry which already has lost lots of jobs because of imports." He said that the trade document signed by the Carter administration "completely violates the President's white paper on a bilateral trade accord, which promised to prevent surges in apparel imports."

Thomas N. Roboz, chairman of the Stanwood - Corporation, a large apparel producer, agreed with Mr. Green, saying: "The agreement is a total abrogation of what Mr. Carter promised." He added: "Not only is there a 35 to 40 percent increase in the amount of imports, but there is also a forgiveness of 50 percent of the overhang in the embargoed Chinese goods effected last year."

In other words, the Carter administration has broken its pledge and adopted a China - first trade policy.

It should be remembered that American manufacturers are being asked to compete against a government - run textile industry that pays its workers 20 cents an hour. What American industry could hope to compete successfully against such a socialist sweatshop system?

The pact that President Carter has approved with China will result in the loss of jobs and profits in the United States. It points up the hollowness of Mr. Carter's promise to help "revitalize" American industry. The workers in textile and apparel shops who lose their jobs won't be able to shift to computer building or other exotic tasks. The textile and apparel industries offer blue - collar employment that is vitally needed by the American people. Those who lose their jobs will be sacrificed on the altar of international politics.

For years, influential elements in the State Dept. and elsewhere in the federal government have regarded the textile and apparel industries as expendable industries. They have blithely assumed that the United States can afford to yield such industries to Third World countries. But America is losing its manufacturing base to foreign countries with nationalized or directed industries. The China imports pact is a cruel betrayal of an essential industry and its workers.

Cash calls award 'country boy's dream'

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Barbara Mandrell said she was only 13 when she first heard Johnny Cash sing. Eighteen years later, they shared top country music honors — and Cash called his award "every country boy's dream."

Miss Mandrell won the prestigious entertainer of the year award at the nationally televised Country Music Association awards show Monday night, and Cash was elected to the Country Music Hall of Fame.

"It's hard to explain how I feel," said the 31-year-old Miss Mandrell. "I'm afraid I'm going to fall out."

The pint-sized Miss Mandrell, who plays five instruments, had a hit this year with "You Can Eat Crackers in My Bed Any Time."

Cash, who overcame pill addiction in the late 1960s and went on to become a superstar with hits like "A Boy Named Sue," capped his 25-year career with election to the hall of fame.

"This was the big one, mama," said Cash after the show. "This was the one I've hoped for, dreamed for and prayed for. It was every country boy's dream."

It was not his only prize of the evening. His wife, June Carter, presented him with a shiny silver Mercedes Benz after the show. The association's 5,000 singers, musicians and other members chose George Jones for two awards — male vocalist of the year and single of the year for "He Stopped Loving Her Today."

Jones, who overcame a drinking problem this year, was the only double winner. "You can never realize how much this means to me," he said from Sparks, Nev., where he was performing. "I have the boost I needed. It put me right on the top."

Former folk singer Emmylou Harris was voted female vocalist of the year. Other winners were: "Coal Miner's Daughter," the soundtrack from the movie about the life of country singer Loretta Lynn, sung by Sissy Spacek, album of the year; "He Stopped Loving Her Today," song of the year for writers Bobby Braddock and Curly Putman; the Statler Brothers, vocal group of the year; the Charlie Daniels Band, instrumental group of the year; Moe Bandy and Joe Stampley, vocal duo of the year, and Roy Clark, instrumentalist of the year.

Two others were elected to the Country Music Hall of Fame. They are Connie B. Gay, who pioneered commercial country radio and helped launch the careers of Clark and Jimmy Dean, and the Original Sons of the Pioneers, best known for their Western-style songs like "Tumbling Tumbleweeds" and "Cool Water."

Among those in the crowd at the Grand Ole Opry House was Amy Carter, the president's 13-year-old daughter. She was the guest of country music singer Tom T. Hall, a friend of the Carter family.

No record company dominated the balloting. CBS Records won five awards, MCA Records won three and Mercury and Warner Brothers won one each.

SHARING. Singer Johnny Cash, his wife June Carter, and son John Jr., admire the plaque noting Johnny Cash's election to the Country Music Hall of Fame. Sharpshooters rescue hijacking hostages

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Army sharpshooters cut through the rear door of a hijacked jetliner in southeastern Turkey early today, stormed in shooting, rescued more than 100 hostages and captured five Turkish hijackers who smuggled pistols aboard in hollowed-out Korans, the semi-official Anatolia news agency reported.

The hijackers and some of the passengers were reported slightly injured in the assault, which began at 5:25 a.m. and ended a minute later, about 11 hours after the quintet took over the Turkish Airlines Boeing 727.

The hijackers, who posed as Iranian followers of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and his Islamic revolution, were flown to Ankara.

Anatolia said they included two journalists, an escaped convict who had been serving a 20-year sentence for left-wing terrorism and an engineering student. No information about the fifth man was given except his name.

The journalists were Yilmaz Yalciner of an Ankara economic weekly, reportedly a member of an Islamic fundamentalist organization, and Coskun Aral, an employee of a Paris photo-news agency. Anatolia said, It said the ex-convict was named Mehmet Ahlak and he was a member of the leftist Turkish People's Liberation Army.

The plane was on a flight from Munich, West Germany, to Ankara, the Turkish capital. Anatolia said the hijackers smuggled two pistols aboard in hollowed-out editions of the Koran, the Moslem holy book, and commandeered the aircraft shortly after it took off from Istanbul at 6:15 p.m. Monday on the last leg of the flight. Other sources said there were 148 persons aboard, all of them Turks.

"From now on the law of Islam prevails in this plane and therefore we want to go to Tehran or Jidda (in Saudi Arabia)," one of the hijackers told a woman passenger. But the pilot said he did not have fuel and landed at Diyarbakir, in southeastern Turkey, where Turkish army troops surrounded the plane. The troops included sharpshooters in the area for military maneuvers.

The hijackers threatened to blow up the plane unless it was refueled by 9:30 p.m., but the government refused to comply and the threat was not carried out. Shortly after the deadline, however, 39 women, children and aged passengers were reported released.

Negotiations with the hijackers went on for several hours, but the airport was blacked out and preparations for an assault on the plane were made. The Turkish news agency said after an unsuccessful rescue attempt was made at 2 a.m., negotiations were broken off an hour later and the successful attack was made at 5:25.

Gen. Kenan Evren, who led the military coup on Sept. 12 and now heads the ruling National Security Council, was in the Diyarbakir area for the military maneuvers, but there was no immediate comment from him or the rest of the five-man council.

Idabel shooting said unrelated to Sunday death

IDABEL, Okla. (AP) — Five teen-agers were arrested Monday night after a bi-wing crop duster was shot in its tail section as it flew three miles south of Idabel, sheriff's deputies said.

McCurtain County Undersheriff Charlie Flowers said he was convinced the shooting, which led to the arrests of the five black youths, was unrelated to Sunday night's shooting of two black men by white police officers.

"They were just shooting at an airplane," Flowers said.

Flowers said pilot Jimmy Dale Tapley of Idabel was flying the plane when youths in two cars fired at the craft. Tapley used his radio to call Roy Robinson, a mechanic at the Idabel airport.

Robinson called police and drove out toward the site where the gunfire was reported as pilot Tapley kept track of the two cars.

The cars were followed and one was stopped by Robinson and a companion. The other vehicle drove off. Three Idabel police cars arrived within minutes, officials said.

Five teen-agers, age 16 to 19, were arrested without incident. No names were released by investigators.

After the arrest, about 15 of the teen-agers' friends came to the sheriff's office but they were merely trying to find out about the arrest. Flowers said the youths quietly left after being told what had happened.

United Nations marks 35th anniversary

UNITED NATIONS (AP)—The United Nations, being sorely tested by the war between Iran and Iraq, marks its 35th anniversary this month amid continuing doubts about its effectiveness and credibility.

Even U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, in a bleak anniversary year report, has complained of an "erosion of the authority and reputation of the United Nations as a responsible international body."

Waldheim noted that "decisions of the Security Council and resolutions of the General Assembly often go unheeded, so that problems which should have been brought under control persist, proliferate and pose continual threats to international peace. This also has a debilitating effect on the United Nations itself."

Since the U.N. Charter came into force on Oct. 24, 1945, Waldheim said, "the pursuit of many of the great objectives...may seem to have lost momentum or to have been obscured, while some of the progress made in the last 30 years has been dissipated."

Again and again, U.N. appeals and resolutions have proved to be fruitless. Despite these acts, American hostages continue to be held by militants in Iran.

Foes of Israel charge that the Jewish state is making a mockery of the 154-nation world body by defying a long list of resolutions calling on it to return Arab territories occupied in the 1967 Middle East war.

In response, Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir dismissed the resolutions aimed against his country as "the most cynical expression of the gap between the original vision and the reality prevailing in the United Nations today." He noted that half of the Security Council debates held during the first nine months of this year had dealt with Israel.

Peace Corps notes its 20th anniversary

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP)—A year-long celebration of the Peace Corps' 20th anniversary begins today at the University of Michigan, where John F. Kennedy first issued his call for Americans to aid underdeveloped nations.

Peace Corps officials traveled here to hear Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie deliver the keynote address and participate in workshops on the corps in the 1980s. A reunion for former volunteers also was scheduled.

Kennedy, speaking to 10,000 students outside the University of Michigan student center early on the morning of Oct. 14, 1960, asked, "How many of you are willing to spend 10 years in Africa or Latin America or Asia working for the U.S. and working for freedom?"

Some 85,000 Americans have answered affirmatively in the years since Kennedy signed the presidential order creating the Peace Corps in March 1961.

By January 1962, 748 volunteers were working in 13 countries. Today the corps — under ACTION, the government's major volunteer agency — has grown to 5,508 people stationed or training to serve in 62 developing nations that requested their help. The largest concentrations are in Kenya and the Philippines.

"Many of the (government) ministers we deal with now were taught by Peace Corps volunteers 20 years ago," said spokeswoman June Carter Perry.

Nations today want the Peace Corps to provide "skilled people to work in fisheries, biologists, engineers, people with math or science training," she said. Twenty years ago, the great demand was for English language training, but that has declined.

Court okays public show of Abscam tapes

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Supreme Court today cleared the way for millions of television viewers to see the Abscam videotapes that led to Rep. Michael J. Myers' criminal conviction and expulsion from Congress.

The justices turned down an emergency request by lawyers for the Pennsylvania Democrat aimed at blocking access to the tapes by the three commercial television networks.

There were no recorded dissents. A federal appeals court in New York ruled on Oct. 1 that tapes of Myers' conversations with FBI undercover agents could be copied and broadcast, but it postponed the ruling's effect to allow Myers to seek help from the nation's highest court.

The ex-congressman's emergency request was submitted to Justice Thurgood Marshall, who last week postponed the effect of the lower court rulings until some final determination by all nine justices.

Myers, of Philadelphia, was convicted of taking a $50,000 bribe from undercover agents posing as Arab businessmen seeking political favors.

The FBI's "sting" operation led to the indictments of six congressmen. Myers was the first to stand trial.

Myers was convicted Aug. 30 along with New Jersey state Sen. Angelo Errichetti, who is also mayor of Camden, Philadelphia City Councilman Louis Johanson and Philadelphia lawyer Howard Criden.

In ruling that the tapes could be made available to the networks, the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said: "There is a significant public interest in affording that opportunity contemporaneously with the introduction of tapes into evidence in the courtroom, when public attention is alerted to the ongoing trial."

Myers and his three co-defendants asked that public the networks' access to the tapes be blocked until the Supreme Court can act on a formal appeal, not yet filed.

Myers says he still intends to campaign for re-election in November. If he wins, the House would be faced with the question of whether to seat him when the new Congress meets next January.

In urging the court to clear the way for the tapes airing, lawyers for the three networks argued, "Full public understanding of and informed judgment... on the question that will face (Philadelphia voters) a few weeks from now about the fitness of Mr. Myers to serve in the House may in large measure be dependent upon whether or not the tapes will soon be available for public viewing."

Myers' request was supported in a "friend-of-the-court" memorandum submitted by Rep. Frank Thompson Jr., D-N.J., who is himself facing criminal charges in the Abscam investigation.

Foreign students increase

By The Associated Press
Students from foreign countries, particularly Iran, are coming to Texas in record numbers surpassed only by California, the Institute of International Education says.

A survey of Texas colleges and universities for the 1979-80 academic year reflects a nationwide increase in the number of foreign students, the New York-based institute reported.

There are about 286,000 foreign students on campuses across the country, the survey said.

Foreign students numbered 24,416 in Texas schools, compared with 47,621 in California. For the first time in the 26-year history of the poll, Texas' enrollment passed that of New York, which totaled 23,569.

The survey estimated 60 percent of the students come from Asian nations, with Iran contributing the highest number — 51,870 this year.

Taiwan, Nigeria, Canada, Japan, Saudi Arabia, Hong Kong, India and Thailand also export large numbers of students, and most major in engineering, business and management.

"Mainly, they're the ones that have the money to send their kids to school in the United States," said Judy Young, director of the International Office at the University of Texas at Arlington. UTA has the fourth-largest number of foreign students in Texas with 1,339 enrolled this semester, she said.

Texas Southern University in Houston tops the list with 2,544 students registered in September, said Chuck Smith of TSU's university relations department.

The University of Texas at Austin ranks next with 2,354 foreign students, the central campus of the University of Houston third with 1,813, UTA fourth, and North Texas State University fifth with 1,322.

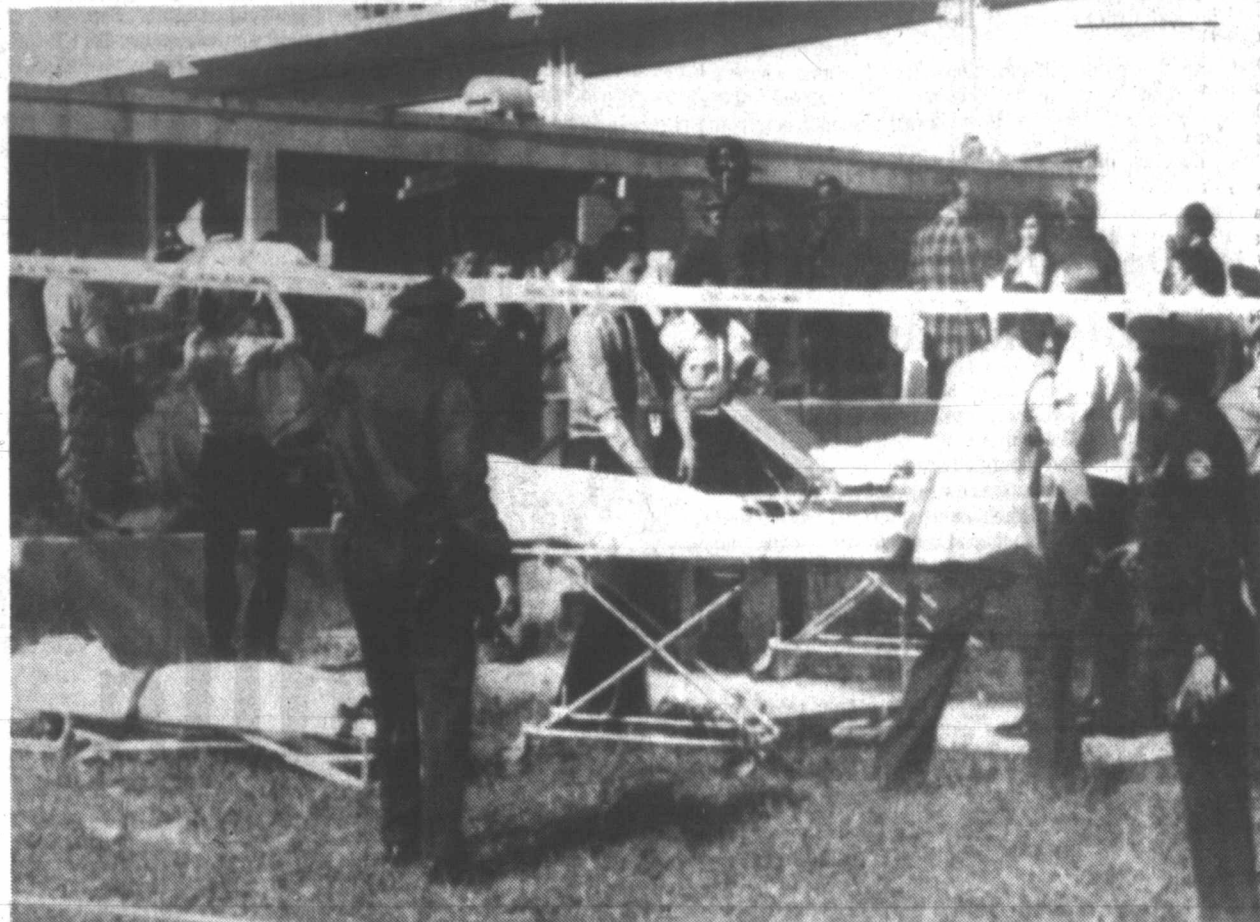

Columbus among 'flat earth' gang

LANCASTER, Calif. (AP)—A day of parades has reminded the country that Christopher Columbus discovered America, but how many people know he proved the world was flat?

"Most people don't realize this because it's not taught in government-run schools. But that's what happened," says Charles Johnson, president of the International Flat Earth Society.

"We count Columbus as one of our gang," Johnson insisted Monday.

His organization teaches that the world is flat as a pancake and extends infinitely in all directions, although the known world is hemmed in by an impenetrable 150-mile-high wall of ice that forms a South Pole around the rim of the saucer.

Murder suspect baptized

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP)—Monday was momentous for Billy Wayne Alexander Jr.

The 21-year-old Lorenzo man first pleaded innocent to capital murder charges in the death of a Texas highway patrolman.

Then he was baptized in the Lubbock County Jail by minister Ken Meeks.

Meeks said he had talked to Alexander Friday night and the accused man requested the baptism after "accepting the Lord Jesus Christ."

Alexander entered the plea before District Judge Robert C. Wright, who found the defendant too poor to employ his own counsel.

HERE'S A SENSIBLE WEIGHT LOSS PROGRAM THAT REALLY WORKS

If you are serious about losing weight

If you are ready to go beyond disappointing, half-hearted attempts to follow one fad diet plan or another, if you have been discouraged by losing a few pounds only to gain them back, if you are skeptical of claims of miraculous, no effort weight loss programs but still long to be slim and healthy, then you should know about Diet Center. Here, at last, is a sensible approach to rapid weight loss and permanent control.

Lose 17 to 25 pounds in just 6 weeks

At Diet Center, your rate of reduction is predictable and sustained. Thousands of people have lost 50, 75 or even 100 pounds and more without loss of energy and without depriving themselves of satisfying, nutritious foods. The entire Diet Center Program is based on sound nutrition and we are actively involved in supporting and implementing the U.S. Dietary Goals and the U.S.R.D.A.

NO SHOTS • NO DRUGS NO CONTRACTS

The Diet Center Program results in totally natural weight loss. Through wise food selection and the proper preparation of those foods you will supply your body with all the necessary nutrients. You will be supplied with a Diet Center food supplement that will stabilize your blood sugar level and keep you from feeling hungry or craving sweets. Your Diet Center Counselor will work closely with you and your doctor to tailor a plan to your personal needs. There are separate programs for men, women and for younger dieters. Each one has been developed, tested and proven effective, over the past ten years.

We'll teach you how to keep it off

There are three phases of the Diet Center Program: Reducing, Stabilization and Maintenance. Each is vitally important to this, the last weight loss program that you will ever need. You will meet daily with your Diet Center Counselor. Your progress will be charted and necessary adjustments will be made for optimum weight loss. Most importantly, you will receive a basic education in nutrition and learn the satisfying, wholesome eating habits that will keep you slim and healthy for the rest of your life. Through all of this, your Diet Center Counselor will be working with you, offering advice and support. Your Counselor knows exactly what you are going through. 'Desert Mushrooms' may answer the riddle of the universe

SOCORRO, N.M. — A new kind of "spaceship" is taking earthlings on a journey into deep space — beyond the stars — and may eventually unlock the mystery of the creation of the universe.

The feat is being made possible by a $78 million complex of searing white antennae known as the Very Large Array (VLA), the world's largest radio telescope.

E-Systems, Inc. a Dallas-based international developer of high technology systems and products, built the transporter and the 27 antennae — plus one spare — which are distributed along three arms of double railroad tracks (38 miles) in the shape of a Y.

More than 600 scientists, astronomers, technicians, and public officials, many from around the world, gathered on the plains of San Augustine, 52 miles west of Socorro, N.M., Friday (Oct. 10) to dedicate the giant instrument that may revolutionize radio astronomy.

The VLA is part of the National Radio Astronomy Observatory (NRAO), one of five national astronomy centers funded by the National Science Foundation, a federal agency in Washington, D. C. NRAO is operated under contract for the NSF by Associated Universities, Inc. a non-profit organization sponsored by nine universities.

Like alien mushrooms the 82-foot diameter antennae began sprouting on an ancient lake bed, amid a scattering of sage and cattle from nearby ranches. That was 1975, 14 years after the first conceptual studies, and nearly three years after construction began.

The VLA is going into full operation on schedule and was constructed within the amount budgeted.

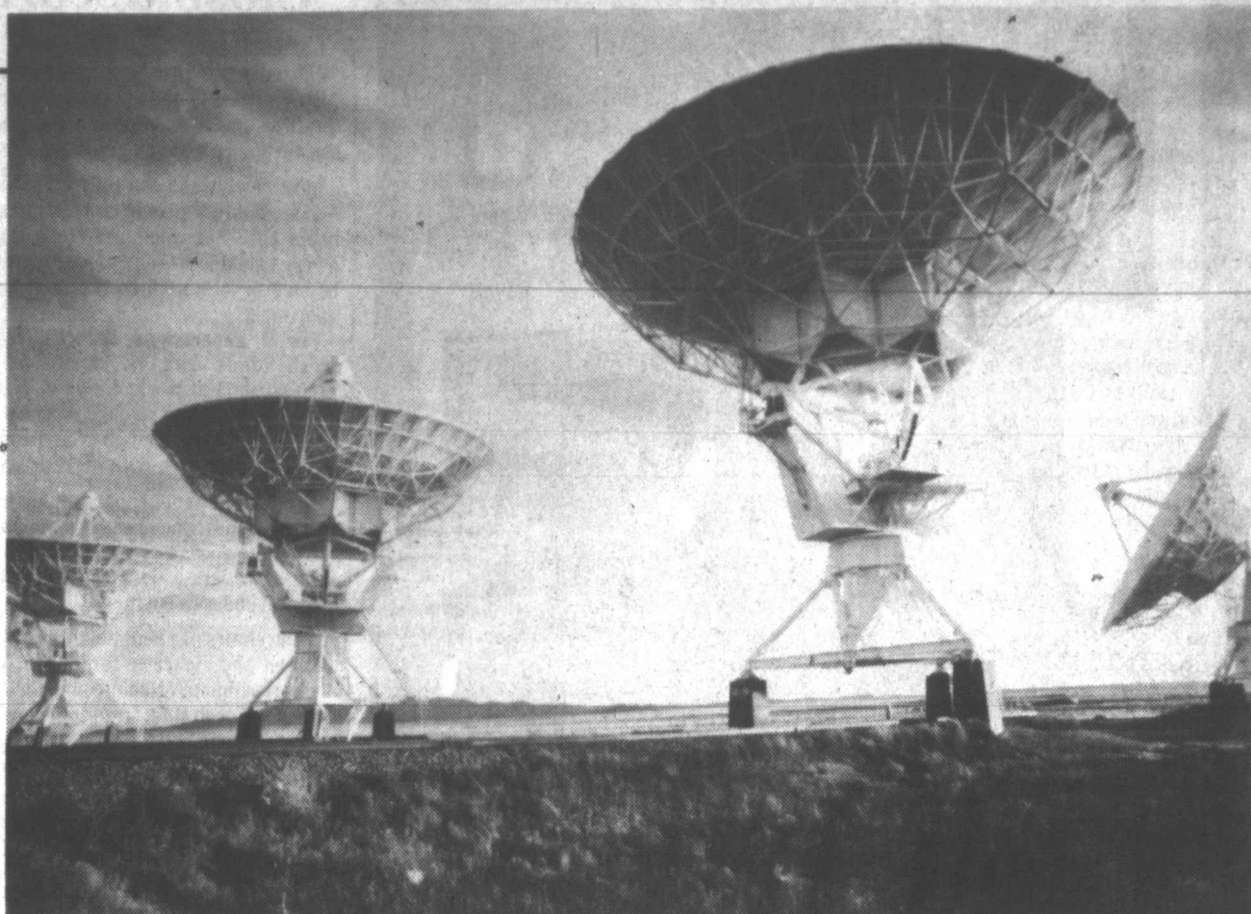

Each of the steerable concave telescopes is 94-foot high and weighs 213 tons. A special 36-wheel transporter moves each antenna to one of 72 observation stations, where incoming radio waves are captured and linked by underground microwave channels to a central computer. The proximity to the equator, 7,000-foot elevation and low humidity of the site also assure good radio reception for what is, in effect, a single dish 21 miles in diameter.

From those radio waves, astronomers can make radio maps of distant objects, like quasars of galaxies, that are as detailed as the photographs taken by large optical telescopes.

Since the initial VLA antenna received its first signals from a radio source known as 3C-274 in the constellation Virgo about four years ago, approximately 300 scientists from 84 institutions in 27 states and 13 foreign countries have been attracted to the telescope.

The instrument is in nearly continuous use — 24 hours a day, seven days a week — stopping only for maintenance. Unlike optical telescopes, the VLA is not limited to nighttime observations nor by normal cloud cover.

DESERT MUSHROOMS - Alien mushrooms on the plains of San Augustine? No, just giant "ears". These 82-foot diameter antennae, may someday reveal how the universe was created. The "ears" are part of a 27-antenna contingent that form the most powerful and sensitive radio telescope in existence. The National Radio Astronomy Observatory groups the 213 ton dishes along a 38-mile configuration of railroad tracks to monitor the hiss of quasars. (AP Photo)

Independent trade union wins another Poland round

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Poland's independent trade union movement won another round today as the official union council prepared to dissolve because all its branch unions have quit it to become "independent."

Representatives of the independent movement charged that some of the breakaways were still controlled by the Communist Party.

Mieczyslaw Grad, secretary of the once-mighty Central Council of Trade Unions, said a "liquidation commission" probably would be formed soon to dismantle the council formally and that some of the 150 political officers on the council staff have quit, the official PAP news agency reported.

Grad said all the branch unions quit to become independent unions under the Gdansk settlement six weeks ago that ended the nationwide summer strikes. The walkouts began when the government withdrew meat price subsidies on July 1. As part of the settlement two months later, the communist regime agreed to allow formation of unions free of party control for the first time in the Soviet Bloc.

Representatives of the Solidarity union federation, the offspring of the summer strike committees, said some of the old unions now calling themselves independent still retained their close ties to the party.

Janusz Onyszkiewicz, an organizer for the Warsaw branch of Solidarity, said there are now three types of unions; the true independents forged from the strike movement, the old unions now out of the council and new "bogus unions set up by management to co-opt the movement."

He said some of the old unions are sincerely trying to get greater autonomy from party control. But others, he said, tried to adopt the guise of independence before organizers could form a truly independent union that would lure away the old unions' members.

Solidarity officials have helped organize hundreds of independent local unions divided into 49 regional branch organizations, said a spokesman in Gdansk, the Baltic port that was the headquarters for the summer strikes. He said the new unions represent 7 million of Poland's 13 million unionized workers.

But the unions won't become legal until Solidarity's charter is approved by the Warsaw district court. The court has approved 12 charters so far and another 16 are pending, including Solidarity's.

One point of contention is Solidarity's provision barring officials of political parties and the government from leadership posts in the new unions. This is designed to assure freedom from party control, a Solidarity lawyer said.

The organization, headed by strike leader Lech Walesa, is aware that past promises of reforms following riots or strikes have proved hollow.

Michigan Catholics will learn new guidelines in marriage plans

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Sermons on the next two Sundays will spell out new pre-marital guidelines for Michigan's 2 million Roman Catholics, including a six-month wait between engagement and the wedding.

The pre-marital guidelines, already in effect in other parts of the country, are aimed at increasing the success of marriages, church officials said.

The new rules include a six-month wait between the time a priest is told of a couple's engagement and the date he will officiate at their wedding. And the guidelines do not make an exception in the case of pregnancy.

"The intent is not to make it more difficult to enter marriage," said Cardinal John Dearden, head of the Archdiocese of Detroit, who announced the guidelines at a news conference Monday.

The intent is to "strengthen those who are entering into the marriage state," he said, citing statistics indicating that one in four marriages ends in divorce, that 50 percent of marriages involving teen-agers fail and that there is only a 10 percent success rate for teen-age marriages prompted by pregnancy.

The guidelines, effective Jan. 1, will be the subject of sermons in the state's 750 parishes on the next two Sundays, Dearden said.

The rules include a period of "assessment" under a priest's guidance before the wedding date is set and instruction in communication, sexuality and the practical aspects of married life.

If either the man or woman is not Catholic, a cleric of the other faith will be invited to the instructional program.

Illegal alien charged

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) — A 42-year old illegal alien arrested in Ten Sleep, Wyo., over the weekend will be sent to Montana to face charges in the stabbing death of a Billings man, police here said Monday.

A warrant charging Hector Estevan Garcia with mitigated deliberate homicide was issued Monday. Garcia was held without bond in Worland, Wyo., after a Ten Sleep rancher recognized him from a police drawing that was released to newspapers.

Because Monday was a holiday, Garcia probably will not be arraigned in Wyoming until Tuesday or Wednesday, police said. Billings authorities said they will then seek to have him extradited to Montana.

Garcia is accused of stabbing Ralph McDonald, 26, of Billings, in a bar on the city's run-down South Side bar on Oct. 4.

A Fredericksburg, Texas, man, Robert Jones, 22, was arrested within hours of McDonald's death. He is accused of encouraging the other man to stab McDonald and is charged with felony solicitation.

Police said the Wyoming rancher, Tom Lowe, told them Garcia had left the ranch on Oct. 2 but had returned unexpectedly about a week later.

WITH OLD and new furnishings, fresh color treatment and inexpensive shelving, a blank end of a room becomes an interesting alcove. Close decoration gap

LANCASTER, Pa. — According to Ralph Waldo Emerson, "Old and new make the warp and woof of every moment." That principle applies to decorating a home, whether it be — the first or the last — for a young couple starting out or a middle-aged couple paring down.

Most newlyweds can't afford to furnish a home from scratch. And few mature people can bear to surrender all reminders of a happy past. For young marrieds, Aunt Edna's bookcase may be a very valuable storage piece. Their parents, likewise, might not be able to forsake a comfortable pair of wing chairs in a new apartment.

For all generations, favorite treasures, new purchases and fresh ideas can be combined successfully by studying professionals at work. Linda C. Newman, A.S.I.D., an interior designer from Armstrong, recently accomplished just that in a room dramatic enough for people in their twenties, yet easy-enough-to-live-with for retirees.

Using a six-panel supergraphic from Stockwell Wallcovering (La Touraine), she created a spectacular mural and eliminated the need to accessorize a large wall. The bold cubistic fabric she selected covers a do-it-yourself game table and is repeated in ottoman and sofa cushions.

Wing chairs are reupholstered in a velvet pin-stripe and a new cocktail and cigarette table from Thomasville add elegance to the surroundings. Background for it all is "Dreamspun" velvety carpet in Torch Rust from judiciously furnished living room.

Ms. Newman saved most accessories for visual impact on the opposite wall, at the fireplace-end of the room. That wall is artfully decorated between bookcases with juxtaposed pictures and sconces. The shell prints are outfitted in velvety rust mats to repeat the carpet's tone and texture.

Here is evidence of a decoration-gap bridges. Color it bona-fide "eclectic!"

Helpful house-hunting hints

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Looking for the right place to rent is like searching for the right job. First you have to figure out what type you want; and, more importantly, what type you can afford. Then, when you find the perfect one, you just hope they'll have a vacancy and accept your application.

You can get some helpful hints about house-hunting from the Department of Housing and Urban Development's booklet, "Wise Rental Practices." You can get a copy of the free brochure by sending a postcard to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 665H, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

Try to keep your total monthly housing costs equal to one week's gross pay. Don't forget to figure in parking fees, utilities, insurance and any other special fees along with the rent. Before you make a final rental decision, consider your other non-housing expenses. If you have high medical costs, child care, car payments, clothes, food or installment loan expenses, subtract these from your monthly income to see how much is left for housing and other expenses.

Finding a place you like that you can afford is a time-consuming task. It often helps to check first with friends to see if they know available places to rent. Or look in the newspaper's classified section to get an idea of the various rents charged. If you know of an apartment building you'd like to live in, go directly to the apartment manager. If it's an area you like, try walking or riding around the neighborhood; one of the residents might know about a vacancy. You could also check with an apartment-finding business. In some cases, these "apartment finders" have listings that do not appear in the newspaper. But be aware that you can read the daily papers and get many of the listing for yourself.

Most apartment managers will ask you to fill out an application, and some will charge an application fee. Before you pay, be sure to ask if you can get your money back if you don't take the apartment.

Make a thorough tour of inspection before you sign the lease. If you see any problems, such as leaky faucets, appliances that don't work, falling plaster or broken floor tiles, make a list and attach a copy to the lease. Keep your copy to avoid paying for these damages later.

Read the lease completely, noting the terms under which you can get your security deposit back when you leave. And don't forget to get the name and number of the apartment owner or caretaker in case of an emergency or maintenance problem.

When you order a copy of "Wise Rental Practices" (free), you will also receive a free copy of the "Consumer Information Catalog." Published quarterly by the Consumer Information Center of the General Services Administration, the "Catalog" lists over 200 selected free and low cost federal consumer publications.

Ties are key to well-dressed look

COLLEGE STATION — Men's neck ties serve many purposes — especially as a key to the well-dressed look of today's fashions, says Becky Saunders, a clothing specialist.

"Perhaps most importantly, a tie 'ties together' or coordinates the suit or jacket and slacks with the shirt," she says.

Mrs. Saunders is on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

A tie also extends the wardrobe, and it adds versatility, she says.

For example, garments that ordinarily would not be worn together can look dynamic when worn with the "right tie." In making sure a tie is "right," colorwise, remember a tie "works" if it does one of the following:

- accents a secondary color in the suit, jacket or shirt.
- repeats colors from the suit, jacket or shirt.

Once you understand how to make colors "work," you can advance to additional fashion-combination techniques.

For example, you can experiment with patterns — you can combine a patterned tie with another-patterned suit or shirt as long as one pattern is noticeable dominant.

Tie width is important, too. Because of its shape and placement, a narrow tie makes the face and body look slimmer. Mrs. Saunders says.

Since a tie is a focal point, it helps draw attention to the face.

AT WIT'S END

By Erma Bombeck

It has been 20 years since children first entered my life, and in all that time, not once have our bodies been on the same time cycle.

When I was on wash, iron, shop, cook and run, they were on perma-sleep and off. When I was on sleep and exhaustion, they were on spin-around-the-crib, damp, dry and fill.

I have never understood that.

How can you live with someone all those years and never adapt to their days and nights? When I was awake, the baby was asleep. When I went to bed, the baby woke up. My husband never understood it either. He'd ask, "What's the matter with that kid?" and I'd explain, "Birth lag."

The other night, the phone rang at 10 o'clock. My husband and I had been asleep in our chairs since 7:30. (We always like a nap so we won't go to bed exhausted.) The call was for one of the children inquiring what the plans were for the evening. My blood sugar dropped just thinking about it. The only thing that could possibly have gotten me out of that chair would have been a fire or possibly a cab offering me a ride to the bedroom.

At that moment I looked at my husband and our eyes met in one of those rare moments of understanding.

"He is going out at this time of night? That's ridiculous! What can kids possibly do at this hour?"

"If you can't remember, you won't understand it when I tell you," I said.

"We never started out that late even when we were dating! Did we?"

"Are you kidding? I was 23 before I ever saw my mother dressed. She was in night clothes when I went to school and by the time I got home, she was in her bathrobe again."

"That's ridiculous. Why do we bother furnishing them with a bed? We could just get out of ours and they could crawl in."

"You want them to store their wet towels on the floor?"

"I'm serious. You can't tell me restaurants aren't open at four or six."

"Do you remember the last time you took me to dinner at six? They were still serving lunch. You know the trouble with us? We can't figure out how they stay awake."

Our son came through, showered, fresh, smelling wonderful, full of zip. "Don't get up," he motioned. "Catch you later. Bye. Mon. Dad."

My husband sighed. "How do YOU spell relief?"

We recited in unison, "B-Y-E M-O-M and D-A-D!"

Rustproofing can extend a car's life

WASHINGTON, D.C. — As inflation increases the cost of automobiles, more and more people are looking at the purchase of a car as a long term investment. Rather than trading in their vehicles after three years, 54 percent of new car buyers are arranging four-year financing, according to a 1979 survey. The longer they keep a car, however, the more attention they need to pay to rust, the biggest enemy of long automotive life.

Many consumers look upon a rusting vehicle from the standpoint of diminished resale or trade-in value, not realizing that rust can present serious safety problems as well, particularly hazards caused by corroded frames, steering linkages and brake lines. Cars rust because of the persistent contact of iron alloys with water and oxygen, a process hastened by the presence of acids in air pollution, road salt and other chemicals used to fight snow and ice and salty air and water in coastal areas. Most rust corrosion damage to cars is insidious, attacking from the inside out: headlight areas, behind chrome, inside doors, around windows, inside rocker panels, along door posts, inside the trunk and trunk lid, grille areas and grille mounts, fenders, springs, the hood crown and even interior door hardware. Visible rust to the underbody and frame accounts for only about 12 percent of corrosive damage.

Too many automobile owners, cautions the Better Business Bureau, confuse undercoating a car with rustproofing it. The undercoating process, originally designed as a sound-deadening measure, employs an asphalt-like coating which tends to lose adhesion as it hardens, forming pockets and cracks that trap moisture. Government studies indicate that such undercoatings may actually accelerate corrosion instead of preventing it.

A recent proliferation of rustproofing techniques give the car owner a bewildering array of options, including buying a new automobile from a manufacturer offering a no-rust-through warranty, adding rustproofing to the dealer preparation process before taking delivery of the car or having a vehicle treated by an independent or franchised rust-proofing company. Significant difference among methods of application, types of sealants used and terms of warranties make it important for the consumer to investigate thoroughly before making a decision. The Better Business Bureau can provide reliability reports on companies offering rustproofing services.

A good non-corrosion treatment involves drilling inconspicuous access holes into all boxed-in areas of the car and then spraying in a rustproofing sealant, not only to completely cover the metal with a protective coating but also to penetrate into corrosion-prone seams. If rustproofing is to be added to a car after it leaves the factory, ask the prospective dealer for permission to view the rustproofing area in his service garage while applications are in progress. Note whether or not technicians are careful to avoid spraying exhaust systems, catalytic converters and brakes and whether they skillfully plug all holes drilled into the body of the vehicle. Above all, become familiar with the terms of the warranty:

— Does it cover the entire car or only the parts sprayed? What is the extent of any exclusions?

— Does it spell out clearly the responsibilities of both the rust protection dealer and the car owner in any maintenance program? If the car must be brought back for periodic inspections, what happens if an inspection is late or missed?

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

TICKTOCK TAMMY

DEAR ABBY: In regard to the hostess who didn't know how to get rid of her late-staying guests, how do you like this for a remedy?

A friend attended a party where she and other guests had overstayed their welcome. The hostess was obviously exhausted and eager for them to leave. Then, as one of the guests half-rose from her chair to adjust her skirt, the weary hostess rushed over to her and blurted out, "My dear, must you stay? Can't you leave?"

The guest left immediately.

R.C.W., BURBANK

DEAR ABBY: Add this to your list of diplomatic ways to get rid of guests who overstay their welcome: Good-humoredly rise and say, "Well, we are going to bed so you nice people can go home."

JOAN

DEAR ABBY: The last time my guests stayed too late, I excused myself, went to my bedroom and quickly changed my dress to my bathrobe. When I returned they immediately took the hint and left. No hard feelings.

SAN FRANCISCO SLICK

DEAR SLICK: That may work with several guests, but I wouldn't recommend it for a lady who is entertaining a gentleman. He might interpret it as an invitation to stay all night.

DEAR ABBY: When a guest stays too late, I always stretch out on the couch, or curl up in a big chair, close my eyes and "pass out." To make it even more realistic, I snore a little. It has never failed.

FOXXY

DEAR ABBY: The best way to ensure one's self against guests who overstay their welcome is to have a grandfather clock that chimes every 15 minutes. A cuckoo clock is even more effective.

DEAR TAMMY: Better yet, start a cuckoo clock collection. You could "wind up" with a fortune.

DEAR ABBY: STUPID CITY KID (AGE 36) wrote to ask how a mule differed from a donkey. He also wanted to know how they both differed from a jackass. I'm glad you explained it, because it gave me the courage to ask the following question:

Does a rooster have a male organ? I'm sure he must have, so I'll rephrase the question. Is a rooster's male organ sufficiently large to be visible to the naked eye? Thank you.

ANOTHER STUPID CITY KID (AGE 55)

DEAR KID: A rooster's male organ is barely visible. Obviously it is large enough to serve the purpose for which it was intended. But by human standards, it's nothing to crow about.

DEAR READERS: Almost everyone remembers where he or she was on Nov. 22, 1963, when the news that the late President Kennedy was assassinated was first broadcast.

If yours is an unusually interesting story to tell, please put it on a postcard and send it to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Museum receives film collection

CANYON — For weekend entertainment during the war years of the 1940s, Virgil Gill's father showed movies in his collection to his restaurant patrons in Fort Worth.

Gill, who is an operations officer in the West Texas State University housing office and his family have donated 150 films in his father's collection to the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum, which is located on the WTSU campus.

Although Gill was young, he remembers selling concessions to the customers who viewed the free movies.

The silent film collection, which includes Westerns, mysteries, cartoons and comedies, was acquired when Cecil Gill, a Fort Worth area entertainer, traveled to Hollywood, Calif. several times during his career. When Gill died, Virgil Gill, his sister, Janice, and their mother, Pearl Gill, who lives in Arlington, decided to donate the collection.

Their choice was the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum.

The films were all 35 millimeter for showing in moviehouses, Gill said, and were housed in the family garage. Because of the nitrate base of many films in the collection, deterioration has ruined many of the films.

Bobby Weaver, museum curator of ethnology, said tentative plans have been made to transfer the collection to safety film, which has an acetate base to prevent deterioration.

Cecil Gill began his entertainment career in Abilene when he auditioned on stage and won a radio spot on a Fort Worth radio station, said his son. He sang for about 15 years in radio spots for about 10 stations in the area.

He traveled, showing his movies and performing skits. In Fort Worth, he performed with Ernest Tubb, Minnie Pearl and Roy Acuff, his son remembers, and he recorded many of his songs.

Gill said his father did part with several films in the collection, including serials, which "would eventually ruin." The collection also includes a film on the 1926 Jack Dempsey-Gene Tunney title boxing bout, Nick Carter mysteries and Western features starring Tom Mix and William S. Hart.

One of the rarest films in the collection is the hour version of "Birth of a Nation," filmed in 1915 as a rebuttal to racial stereotyping in D.W. Griffith's "Birth of a Nation."

Weaver said the film has been believed lost for 60 years. The American Film Institute has made a print of the fragile film and the original will be preserved in a national archives at the Library of Congress at Washington, D.C. The American Film Institute will premiere a new print of the film in Washington in November.

The original three-hour version was first shown in 1915 at the Blackstone Theater in Chicago. After one other public showing, the film was trimmed to 60 minutes. The remaining two hours and the musical score have been lost, leaving only the cut version.

"The particular scarcity of copies of this film has made it very hard to locate and we are fortunate to have preserved it," said Weaver.

"Birth of a Nation" was filmed between 1915 and 1916 in Chicago and Florida. The screen shows no credits for the actors, but the film was directed by John W. Noble.

Through the exaggerated movements of the actors, typical of silent films, the story is a paraphrase of the Bible beginning with Adam and Eve and progressing through the stories of Noah, Moses and Jesus.

Parts of the film which have been cut dealt heavily with the racial rebuttal theme, said Weaver.

In one scene, Jesus preaches to the multitude. The camera intentionally points out several members of the crowd including a black, an Arab and an Oriental.

The story of Jesus then skips several centuries to Columbus, and, according to the sub-titles, his "brave little band." Portrayed next are Paul Revere, the American Revolution, the signing of the Declaration of Independence, President Abraham Lincoln, the Emancipation Proclamation and Lincoln's assassination. The film ends with World War I.

Focus of the film is a theme of equality. The National Archives has received a list of the films in the collection, said Weaver.

DR. LAMB

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

York, NY 10015

DEAR DR. LAMB — I'm wondering if I have low blood sugar. I have all the symptoms. I get tired easily and I notice that I have a low spell in the middle of the morning and afternoon. Then I read an article in Time magazine a few months ago that said that it was a bad diagnosis and many people who were told they had low blood sugar really just had an emotional problem. Do you have any information on low blood sugar that would help me understand this?

DEAR READER — The symptoms that have frequently been ascribed to low blood sugar also occur in many other disorders, including stress and emotional disturbances. A proper diagnosis can only be made by a careful clinical evaluation.

This is not the first time that the frequent diagnosis of low blood sugar has been questioned. The American Medical Association found it necessary to warn about this several years ago.

The big problem is that when your blood sugar (glucose) falls it stimulates the release of adrenaline. The adrenaline stimulates your liver to release glucose into your blood to maintain your blood level. That is a natural reaction we all have. In a person who has clinically significant low blood sugar problems the amount of adrenaline released is enough to cause shaking, tremulousness, anxiety and symptoms that people ascribe to low blood sugar.

However, anxiety or stress can cause you to release adrenaline also, even if your blood glucose level is normal. Again the adrenaline causes the same symptoms. So people who are anxious often do have the same symptoms that people who have low blood sugar have — because both conditions cause an outpouring of adrenaline.

The factors that cause low blood sugar, when it is correctly diagnosed, and the best measures to control the glucose level are discussed in The Health Letter number 3-9, Low Blood Sugar: Hypoglycemia, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10015.

DEAR DR. LAMB — For some time I've been having trouble with one of the glands under my tongue. It swells and gets very painful. Recently, with my tongue I could feel a swelling on the floor of my mouth. I took a look and on the right side where the gland is swollen, I noted what looked like puss at the end closest to my teeth. I tried to dislodge it with a cotton swab but it's still there. I can feel the tiny lump with my tongue. I can also see saliva coming out from the left side but none comes out of my right side. I think this little puss-looking thing must have blocked the duct. Does any of this make any sense at all?

DEAR READER — Yes, it does. You can develop stones from the salivary glands and they can block the duct causing the gland to swell.

Stamps feature Disney characters

The ever-popular Walt Disney cartoon characters appear on a new set of nine stamps issued by Saint Lucia to commemorate the 10th anniversary of the first moonwalk. The characters — Mickey Mouse, Minnie, Donald Duck, Pluto, Goofy — are seen in a space motif.

The ½-cent shows Mickey Mouse as an astronaut straddling a rocket somewhere in space. The 1-cent depicts Donald Duck's version of a space walk. The 2-cent illustrates Minnie Mouse as a "pin-up" astronaut adrift on the crest of a cheese-covered moon. The 3-cent features astronaut Goofy as he hitches a space ride to Mars. The 4-cent pictures the same Goofy as a moonwalker. The 5-cent shows Pluto burying a bone on the moon. The 10-cent depicts Donald Duck walking in space. The $2 features Donald navigating his space ship with a paddle. The highest value, $2.50, illustrates Mickey riding his space vehicle on a bumpy moon.

A souvenir sheet also was issued, depicting the moon landing as Mickey films Goofy emerging from the space ship — and ready to slip on a banana peel.

All the stamps are available at your local stamp dealer. For U.S. collectors, here is the upcoming schedule:

August — Coral Reefs commemorative stamps in a block of four different designs; September — Edith Wharton commemorative stamp in the Literary Arts Series, Golden Hinde commemorative postal card in the international surface rate; October — Christmas stamps in two different designs; Battle of Kings Mountain commemorative postal card; bicycle embossed stamped envelope; Honey Bee embossed stamped envelope.

Watch this column for further details as provided by the U.S. Postal Service.

Canada's series of stamps commemorating the Inuit people will be completed in September with the release of the final four adhesives. This grouping uses Inuit spirits for its subject. The Inuit, people of the North, live in a world they believe to be inhabited by many spirits.

The new stamps will be in two sets-tenant pairs. One pair will consist of two 17-cent stamps. The first portrays a soapstone sculpture of Sedna, the Sea Spirit. The second shows a print, "The Return of the Sun." The stamps of the second pair are 35 cents each. One is a print of a Shaman and the other features a soapstone sculpture of a bird spirit.

Names in the news

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles police have been getting help from a "celebrity squad" lately.

First it was Mayor Tom Bradley. Then Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. And last weekend, former TV "Policewoman" Angie Dickinson helped real-life officers crack a vandalism case.

Awakened by the sound of crashing furniture at the home of her Bel Air neighbor Herbert Sterns, Miss Dickinson called police early Saturday, then helped them track down a scantily clad man she saw running from the house.

What's more, said detective Jerry Winkle, "she turned in a top performance as a witness."

LONDON (AP) — Prince Philip may always walk a few steps behind his wife in public life, but at home he is a Victorian — albeit benevolent — patriarch, according to a biography of Queen Elizabeth II's husband published today.

"The Duke of Edinburgh, though he is unwilling or unable to bully his wife, presides over his home as an old-fashioned 'pater familias.' Generally speaking his word goes," writes historian Denis Judd.

Of the royal couple's relationship, Judd says,

EDWARD HEATH

"They love each other, while being acutely aware of their partner's inadequacies and foibles."

The couple was married on Nov. 20, 1947, and Elizabeth ascended the throne five years later. They have four children.

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Former British Prime Minister Edward Heath has warned students at the University of Georgia to expect increased demands for food, energy and raw materials in their lifetimes because of world population growth.

Population worldwide will rise by about 2 billion to 6.3

billion in the next 20 years, he predicted Monday, saying nothing can prevent such growth when large segments of the population in the developing world are in the child-bearing age.

"We will not escape the moral consequences of tens of millions of people dying in the poverty belts, the starvation belts of Africa and India shown on television nightly. We shall never escape the moral consequences of that," he said.

Heath, prime minister from 1970 to 1974, was in Athens for a weekend visit with friends during his trip to the United States.

Horse stealing on the rise

Constable favors hanging horse thieves

DALLAS (AP) — Constable Forrest Keene says he is ready to return to the law of the Old West when horse thieves were summarily strung up from the nearest tree.

The Dallas County lawman says he didn't give horse stealing much thought until someone snatched Skip, his light dun quarterhorse.

"It's like losing a member of the family," he said. "I wouldn't have thought a whole lot about it if they'd stolen my automobile."

Now Keene is a man with a cause. He put bumper stickers that say "Hang Horse Thieves" on his station wagon and he's organizing with other owners to stop the alarming increase in horse stealing from urban areas.

An investigator for the Texas Southwest Cattle Raisers Association, which investigates livestock thefts, said nearly 50 horses are stolen each month from pastures in Dallas, Houston and Fort Worth.

"It's up 30 percent from over last year in these three metropolitan areas," said Cullen Robinson, head of livestock investigations for the association.

"It's not like machinery or televisions, where they only get a few cents on the dollar of the true value," said Steve Munday, spokesman for the association. "That's one of the reasons for so many thefts."

Slaughterhouses pay about 50 cents a pound for horses.

"Any old horse will weigh at least 1,000 pounds so he is bound to bring $500 to $600," Munday said.

Robinson said the increase of horses in urban areas is a big attraction to thieves. And when horse thieves get caught, they usually walk away with a probated sentence, he said.

"Now days, you catch a horse thief, they carry him before the judge, he makes bond and he's back stealing horses to pay his lawyer," Robinson said. "We got one in the Dallas area that we've caught three times."

"If we could get two- to 10-year sentences instead of two to five years probation, we could stop a lot of it."

Keene, who celebrated his 39th anniversary as a Texas lawman on July 28 — the day Skip was stolen — says he feels partly to blame for the light treatment.

"Law enforcement looks at the theft of a horse like the theft of two hubcaps off a Cadillac, which is deplorable," he said. "I am guilty as a law enforcement officer of 39 years."

Keene says he circulated leaflets to lawmen within 100 miles, offered a reward and hasscoured area horse sales trying to find Skip. But his efforts have been futile.

Mary Wilson was luckier. Her daughter's horse was stolen from a pasture in suburban Mesquite three years ago along with seven other mounts. The owners — seven women — traveled to horse sales all over the area.

"We got five of them back," she said.

But they were too late to save the three that were sent to a packing house.

The man convicted of stealing the eight horses got 10 years' probation, "a pat on the back," Mrs. Wilson said.

"If there was no market for horse meat in Europe, there would not be so many horse thefts," she said.

But Robinson said packing plants here are not to blame for the increased thefts.

"The Texas plants are legitimate," he said. "And they cooperate with us fully when we're looking for a stolen horse. Their buyers go to horse sales and they buy horses."

"There's no way to tell if it is stolen."

A spokesman for Beltex packing plant in Fort Worth said the plants have a bad reputation they don't deserve.

"It's always the packing plants that get accused of cooperating with the thieves," said the spokesman, who asked that his name not be used. "We not only cooperate with the cattle raisers association, but all the police departments, law enforcement agencies and livestock associations in the United States."

Ag secretary tours Texas

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) —

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland toured East Texas today in the second leg of a two-day campaign swing through Texas for President Carter.

After a breakfast with Democratic campaign leaders in Palestine, Bergland was scheduled to attend receptions in Palestine and Corsicana. He planned to tour a gasohol plant in Stamford before returning to Washington.

On Monday, Bergland toured an alcohol plant at Rockport, on the coast, and then traveled to College Station.

In a Texas A&M University speech, Bergland estimated purchases by Mexico and China will boost U.S. exports in 1980 to "around the $40 billion mark."

He contended the figure would be "about 75 percent higher than during the best years of the last administration."

The United States' new trade pact with China is the result of a policy begun by the Nixon administration, Bergland said, with the last two years spent in discussing conditions of the agreement.

Expanded purchases of farm products by Mexico also would help boost the export figure, Bergland added.

Reagan, Carter gain in suburbs and among workers, Anderson slips

NEW YORK (AP) — Ronald Reagan has strengthened his support a bit in the suburbs, while Jimmy Carter picked up some backing among blue-collar workers. And John Anderson slipped a little more.

The patterns of support for the presidential candidates have shifted slightly over the past few weeks of the presidential campaign, the latest Associated Press-NBC News poll says, but overall standings haven't changed much.

Reagan is still holds a lead over Carter, with Anderson far behind.

More Americans have decided in the last few weeks whom they are going to vote for on election day, but their decisions are not accompanied by much enthusiasm for the candidates, as concerns about them persist.

The public is concerned about Reagan's understanding — or lack of understanding — of the nation's problems, and voters fear he might take the country into war. But they don't think much of Carter's first years in office nor the way he has run his campaign for re-election.

Asked their choice if the presidential election were held now, Reagan was chosen by 43 percent of the likely voters. Carter was named by 35 percent and Anderson by 10 percent. One percent mentioned others and 11 percent of the 1,548 likely voters interviewed nationwide by telephone Wednesday through Friday were not sure.

Both Carter and Reagan have gained support since the AP-NBC News poll taken Sept. 22-24, while Anderson has slipped. At that time, Reagan stood at 42 percent; Carter at 33; and Anderson at 13 percent.

The number of likely voters who say they have made up their minds how to vote has risen in the past few weeks as well. Sixty-eight percent said they had made up their minds whom to vote for on Nov. 4. That's up from 61 percent in the previous AP-NBC News poll. Thirty percent said they had not decided and 2 percent do not now plan to vote.

Reagan leads among that subgroup of likely voters who say they have definitely made up their minds.

He is the choice of 50 percent of this group, with Carter getting 40 percent. Anderson draws 8 percent. One percent mentioned others and one percent claimed to be undecided, even though they also said they had made up their minds.

Yes, there will be a 'Blue Lagoon II'

By Dick Kleiner

DEAR DICK: In "The Blue Lagoon," at the end the man says the two kids are "asleep." We weren't sure if he meant dead asleep or like snoring asleep. What were they? WENDY COMBS, Ash Grove, Mo.

According to people involved in that hit film, the idea was for the audience to make up its own mind about whether the kids were dead or just sleeping after they ate the poisoned berries. However, you may take some solace from the news that Columbia will make a "Blue Lagoon II," so apparently they survived somehow.

DEAR DICK: In the credits after most TV shows, there is a person called a "key grip." I would like to know what this person does and why he is called that. JIM GIEKER, Tinswell, Ill.

Around Hollywood sets, grips are workmen who do things like build the sets and move sets around. The key grip is simply the man in charge of all the grips on a set, like a foreman. The use of the adjective "key" is simply that he is number one guy, like you might say that Steve Garvey is the key to the Dodgers' success.

DEAR DICK: I am a 70-year-old senior citizen. Sometime during last football season, a comic was on TV with a routine about football. It was about a young country fellow who was seeing his first football game, and he couldn't understand it. Can you find out who this was? LAWRENCE E. LANE, Morrisville, Pa.

I'm afraid you've given me no idea of when, what network, what program. So I can't help with that, except to say that it sounds like that comic ripped off Andy Griffith. Years ago, when Griffith was starting, he was billed as Deacon Andy Griffith, and the routine you described was his big number. He called it "What It Was, Was Football," and he even recorded it. So this new guy was, apparently, doing Andy's old act.

DEAR DICK: We were watching an old movie, "Henry Aldrich For President." It was made in 1941, and I am curious about the character, Dizzy. He reminded me of Stan Laurel, of Laurel and Hardy. Could this have been a young Stan Laurel, maybe? Before Laurel and Hardy? KAYE DUVALL, Monrovia, Md.

No, Dizzy was played by an actor named Charles Smith. In 1941, Stan Laurel was already in his 50s.

DEAR DICK: In 1972, I saw a flick called "The Harrad Experiment." Could you please tell me if Joanne, of "Eight Is Enough," is one of the girls who played in that picture. If so, what is her name? MICHAEL AMPY CAPORINO, Hollywood, Fla.

Yes, you have a good eye and memory. Laurie Walters, who plays Joanne Bradford, was in "The Harrad Experiment."

Pro-Reagan forces tougher in effort to unseat Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — The picture and voice are President Carter's but the message — which is anything but Carter's — shows that pro-Reagan groups are getting tougher in their television campaign to unseat the president.

The new commercials are unabashedly "negative," taking aim at Carter, in contrast to earlier efforts which sought to boost Ronald Reagan more than to criticize the Democratic president.

One new 30-second spot features Carter pledging during the 1976 campaign to "guarantee the security of our nation," juxtaposed with a series of photographs: an American flag being burned, American hostages sitting blindfolded and bound in Tehran, Soviet tanks in Afghanistan and Carter embracing Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev.

"We trusted Jimmy Carter once," an announcer's voice concludes. "Can we afford to trust him again?"

Another paid commercial, purporting to examine Carter appointments, shows snapshots of three former administration officials and a voice intones, "Andrew Young, Carter's U.S. ambassador who called Iran's Ayatollah Khomeini a 'saint,' forced to resign after lying to the president... Bert Lance, also forced to resign... Dr. Peter Bourne, the Carter drug expert, forced to resign after supplying drugs to a White House staffer."

At the end of each spot, in type too small to read on a relatively sharp, 17-inch television screen, the ads say they were paid for by the National Conservative Political Action Committee and not authorized by any candidate.

An earlier series of spots boosting Ronald Reagan — "He'll make America great again" — is being phased out now in favor of the tougher anti-Carter commercials.

A similar organization, the Fund for a Conservative Majority, is trying to buy more than $1 million worth of television time in five key states to throw Carter's own words back at him, a favorite tactic the president's forces have employed against Reagan.

Because they can reach a potential audience of millions, the television spots are particularly aggravating to Carter-Mondale campaign operatives, who are waging a legal battle to outlaw all campaign spending by the self-styled independent committees and to keep them off the airwaves.

Weekly 'weirdfest' draws criticism

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A man's fingers are charred to blackened nubs. Another man's leg is grotesquely mangled by a speeding car.

Ah, that's entertainment!

Viewers of ABC's "That's Incredible!" — and there are many, many of them — have been treated to above spectacles, and would have been able to see a fellow crashing into a concrete wall (puncturing his aorta and breaking his pelvis, thigh and lower leg) if only the "That's Incredible!" camera hadn't missed it.

Oh well, those fun-loving folks will cook up something else.

It comes as no great revelation that people are disposed to leering at the calamities that befall others. So what's wrong with capitalizing on that human trait?

This:

Onlookers doubtful

Anderson insists he can still be a winner

NEW YORK (AP) — John B. Anderson is playing out the hand as though he still had some cards in it. If he does, they are well hidden. The independent presidential candidate insists that he still can be a winner. But as the leaves turn to mid-autumn's red and gold in the northeastern states that are likely to be his strongest, there is no evidence that he can carry even one.

Yes, Anderson concedes, the polls show him lagging, but they also show President Carter in deep trouble. The Anderson argument is that as voters see the increasing likelihood that Republican nominee Ronald Reagan is going to defeat Carter, they will turn to the independent ticket as the real alternative.

"I think Carter has peaked. I think he has faded," Anderson said.

"That's Incredible!" makes a mockery of television's lost promise to uplift, to broaden, even enlighten its viewers, a promise implying the acceptance of a certain responsibility that comes with commanding the public airwaves for the purpose of making a profit.

When "That's Incredible!" paid stuntman Stan Kruml to dash through a fiery tunnel or Steve Lewis to jump over two speeding cars (both ending tragically), ABC and the show's producers were appealing to that same ugly instinct that causes crowds to jeer a leaper on a ledge. That's exploitation.

In the very first show, there was an unintended self-parody that spoke directly to the heart of this sort of "entertainment."

"That's Incredible!" hired a child actor and let him loose on the streets of New York with instructions to look pitiful and pretend he was lost. New Yorker after New Yorker coldly passed the lost and tearful child, ignoring his simple plea for help. In the studio, the hosts lowered their voices and whispered sadly. "That's incredible!"

It didn't likely dawn on them that that same cruel capacity to countenance another's misery — or risk of misery — is precisely the trait for which this show aims. Or maybe it did dawn on them.

Certainly, not all of this show's segments end in tragedy. There was the lady who covered her face with bees, and the fellow who poured acid on his hand. What was the hook? Of course, the possibility of disaster.

When Kruml's tunnel run failed, the cameras zoomed in for a closeup of his gory hands. Why? So that children not be tempted to try the stunt. Hmm.

Young families frustrated in home battle

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The battle for a place to live already is frustrating for many young families and, because of a factor often overlooked in the traditional supply-demand analyses, it may get tougher. That factor is the "no children allowed" sign.

Families already face a depressing set of factors: a housing shortage; a bulge in the age-30 population that seems destined to add more pressure; rising prices; rising monthly carrying charges.

Now, a new study shows, the "no children" sign is going up more frequently. The national percentage, the study found, has risen to 26 percent of all rental units from 17 percent in 1974.

The study also found other percentages that add to the portrayal of a huge national problem, one in which an entire generation could be pressed into undesirable housing or compelled to forgo ownership.

The study by the Institute for Social Research at the University of Michigan said families with two children were excluded from half the rental units surveyed, and those with three children from 6 of 10.

Already, the report's authors say, "Families with three or more children have been forced to live in what they see as lower quality homes in less desirable or less convenient neighborhoods."

The authors, Robert W. Marans and Mary Ellen Colten, the increase of "no children" policies is evident not only in newer apartment houses but in older buildings which used to accept children.

Their conclusions follow a government-sponsored survey they conducted of renters and the managers of their rental housing, and which revealed, among other things that:

—Managers believe that increased maintenance costs are the biggest problem faced by those who rent to families with children.

—More than half the managers sampled said they think families without kids are bothered by neighbors who have children. However, a much smaller percentage of renters reported being actually bothered.

—Eighty percent of respondents living in places which exclude or restrict children said they would not move if families with children were allowed to move in.

The "no children" policies can be seen as part of a syndrome in which millions are faced with unsatisfactory choices in housing, at least in comparison with families of the previous three decades.

Already, housing industry officials say, high prices and interest rates, and an economy that discourages home building, has forced millions of young Americans to forgo dreams of ownership.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

October 15, 1980

Some important changes in your basic lifestyle are likely this coming year. At first you may resist them. Later you'll learn they were for your ultimate good.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Success may be denied you today if you lack tenacity. Once you start something, make a concerted effort to see it through to the conclusion you hope for. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You're basically courageous and assertive, but today you could be a bit too negative and timid. Don't worry about something that hasn't yet happened.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) A pal who is already indebted to you may try to put the touch on you again today. It could jeopardize the friendship if he or she gets in too deep.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Sometimes we defeat ourselves when we try too hard, because we do things against our better judgment. Take care this doesn't happen to you today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Problems you have to contend with today are apt to be mostly of your own making. You may see others as adversaries rather than as helpers.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Live in the NOW today, and not in the past. Dwelling on old errors is unproductive and could impede your progress.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) People you normally can depend on may not be too anxious to help you today. It might conflict with their own interests. Go it alone.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) There is a possibility today that your attitude toward your work may be more negative than usual. If so, the tasks at hand will prove difficult.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Unless changes come easily today, it is unwise to force matters. Bide your time. Wait until all the pieces fit more comfortably into place.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) It's important to set the example for cooperation at home today, or else members of the family may pull apart instead of together.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Uncharacteristically, today may be one of those days that, no matter what anyone does for you, they won't quite please you. Be grateful, not critical.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Be sure to divvy-up your fair share in involvements with friends today. Do nothing that might cause them to think you're a trifle stingy or looking for a free ride.

MARK MOSELEY, kicker for the Washington Redskins, is shown attempting a 52-yard field goal in the closing seconds of Monday night's NFL game

Denver slips past Washington

DENVER (AP) — On a day commemorating Columbus' discovery of America, the Denver Broncos rediscovered Rick Upchurch, their game-breaking wide receiver who has been strangely silent this season.

The speedy Upchurch worked behind the Washington secondary Monday night and hauled in a 32-yard touchdown pass from veteran Craig Morton with 3:08 remaining, lifting the Broncos to a 20-17 National Football League victory over the Redskins.

The triumph was the Broncos' second in a row and squared their record at 3-3, leaving them just one game behind AFC Western Division leader San Diego. Washington, meanwhile, slumped to 1-5, four games behind NFC East co-leaders Dallas and Philadelphia.

Upchurch had only 12 receptions entering Monday night's contest, and in some games hardly worked up a sweat as Denver used a two-tight-end alignment which kept him on the bench.

But he was a key performer against the Redskins, catching two passes on Denver's first touchdown drive and hauling in a 35-yarder on a march which produced a field goal, in addition to the clincher.

"It was a picture-perfect pass," said Upchurch of the game-winner. "The safety clamped on me as I was coming across. When I saw Craig coming out to the side I took it up the field." He said he felt Morton sensed the touchdown coming. "When he's feeling it, you've got to feel it with him," Upchurch said.

Morton, who came off the bench in relief of starter Matt Robinson for the third time this season, said the route was "a crossing pattern against a man-to-man defense, and I knew exactly where Rick was going to be."

Washington never led until midway through the final quarter after a bizarre exchange of fumbles. The Redskins had driven deep into Denver territory when fullback Clarence Harmon took a short pass from Theismann and fumbled the ball away at the Denver 7-yard line. But two plays later, Denver running back Lawrence McCutcheon coughed up the ball at the 5.

Redskins quarterback Joe Theismann capitalized this time, hitting a leaping Art Monk in the corner of the end zone for a 1-yard scoring pass and a 17-13 lead with 7:30 to play.

"I told him, 'It's your ball, I'm going to throw it to you so be ready,'" said Theismann. "Art Monk is going to be a great receiver. He's got moxie."

But Denver countered with a seven-play, 79-yard drive highlighted by Morton's 13-yard pass to Riley Odoms and Otis Armstrong's 19 yards on the ground. Upchurch beat Redskins safety Mark Murphy near the goal line and hauled in the pass for the winning TD.

A subsequent desperation drive by the Redskins was hampered by holding and clipping penalties, and Mark Moseley's 52-yard field goal attempt with 13 seconds left was wide.

"We played as hard as we can," said Redskins Coach Jack Pardee. "We gave it our best shot but it got away from us."

Of the final Washington drive, Pardee said, "We were moving the ball, and we got one penalty after another. The penalties killed us. Morton scrambles around all night and the officials don't call a thing."

Denver Coach Red Miller called it "a whale of a football game. Our offense came to play, and played hard. Craig threw the ball well and Rick played well. Our defense was a little disappointing, but they made some key plays. Fred Steinfort proved his worth again, and we'll call on him confidently any time we're in his range."

Academy paid off for White

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — When he takes the field tonight in the opening game of the 1980 World Series, Kansas City second baseman Frank White will be playing for himself, his family and his teammates, of course. But he'll also be playing for 49 other guys.

They are names you wouldn't know, but people White remembers. They were his colleagues in the first class of the Kansas City Baseball Academy, an ambitious venture in player development which never quite paid off, unless you count KC's second base-shortstop combination.

White and his partner, U.L. Washington, an alumnus of the third class, are the only prominent major leaguers produced by the Academy. But some people will tell you that's quite enough return for the Royals' investment.

The academy was located in Sarasota, Fla., and White earned his way there at a tryout camp in 1970. "There were 600 players over two days," White said. "They chose eight to go."

Who were the other seven?

"You wouldn't know their names," the second baseman said.

When White reached Sarasota, he found a remote baseball camp set on 260 acres well removed from the beaten path. "It was isolated, remote," he said. "It was very regimented. Junior college in the morning, baseball in the afternoon. No television, no family."

It meant 10 months away from his wife and infant son. The salary was $100 per month for the first 90 days with increases to $150, $200 and $250. "We spent most of our money in long distance calls back home," White said.

The Baseball Academy staff drove the students hard.

"It was very frustrating, sometimes," said White. "You couldn't be yourself. You lost all your freedom. The only relief was to go into the batting cage and just wear yourself out."

White spent 18 months at the Academy from August 1970-March 1972. Then he was given the opportunity to make a minor league club in the Royals' organization, and after that he moved steadily up until he reached the majors in 1973, the first Academy product to make it.

Now he's considered one of the very best second basemen in baseball, and when the Royals swept to the American League pennant, he was named the Most Valuable Player in the playoffs.

Since White and Washington, a number of other players have moved from the Academy to the majors. The roster includes Oakland infielder Jeff Cox and St. Louis pitcher Tom Bruno.

But White remains in a class by himself. He was the first one to make it and he thinks about the other 49 who didn't.

Museum operator says potatoes have 'image' problem

MARANSART, Belgium (AP) — Did the CIA sprinkle insects over East Germany to destroy the potato crops? Did potatoes make the Industrial Revolution possible?

Is it true Adirondack Indian Chief George Crum invented potato chips? And if he did, does anyone give a hoot?

It's all crucial to Tom Hughes, a 35-year-old Haddonfield, N.J. native who bananas over potatoes. In this hamlet on the southern fringe of the lush, lazy hills that formed the Waterloo battlefield where Napoleon finally lost, Hughes runs the world's only potato museum.

Ask him why and he'll explode with reasons like: "Potatoes are fun" and "Do you know potatoes offer more food value per acre than any other crop?"

Few people know these things, because potatoes have an image problem, Hughes says, adding: "The humble spud should not be ridiculed. It's the world's most undervalued plant."

Hughes heard a few years ago that someone who had compiled a world directory of museums noted there was no potato museum.

"Why should the potato deserve a museum?" Hughes recalls thinking. At the time, he taught fifth grade at the International School of Brussels, about 14 miles north of here, and potatoes quickly became a class project.

The project prospered, and when Hughes quit in 1979 for freelance writing, he turned the second floor of his house into a potato museum.

Visits are free, by appointment, to his unmarked museum cluttered with potato bags, sacks, mashers, hashers and peelers. He even has photographs of the potato mashers of some famous people's mothers — including Andy Warhol's.

There are also jars with Colorado beetles — the potato farmer's Enemy No. 1 — and specimens of some of the world's 10,000 potato varieties.

The museum contains posters (one dating to World War II urges Britons to eat potatoes), cookbooks, postcards, farming tools and a copy of "Liam O'Flaherty's 'Famine.'"

On one wall hangs an Idaho license plate boasting "Famous Potatoes" donated by U.S. Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus, a former Idaho governor. "He heard about this place and sent me the plate," said Hughes.

Hughes also shows potato movies. And visitors hear Louis Armstrong toot "Potato Head Blues" and are treated to tunes like the song about "potatoes" and "potatoes."

Most interesting, Hughes says, is the potato's impact on social conditions. "The potato famine in Ireland was caused by late blight, a relatively harmless fungus if detected early on," he says. No one did, and the Irish population was depleted by the millions who died or emigrated.

The potato's introduction to Europe from the New World, he says, meant better diets and, consequently, a lower mortality rate "which eventually yielded the manpower for the Industrial Revolution."

Hughes' head is filled with tuber trivia. A favorite story is that of Chief Crum, who worked as a cook at the Moon Lake House Hotel in Saratoga Springs, N.Y.

"One night, in 1853, Cornelius Vanderbilt, the industrialist, came to dinner and ordered french fried potatoes, but sliced as thinly as he once had them in France," says Hughes.

"Insulted, the chief peeled wafer-thin potato slices which he fried and served. For years they would be called 'Saratoga Chips.' Today we call them potato chips."

And Hughes says that in 1950, the Soviets accused the United States of dropping Colorado beetles on East German potato fields in a Cold War ploy. The U.S. government called the allegation "extraordinary," saying the insect had reached Europe long before.

Hughes also hopes to collect potato jokes. He has one already.

"Do you know the one about the American who runs a potato museum...?"

Ludden off critical list, still serious

MONTEREY, Calif. (AP) — Allen Ludden, longtime host of the television game show "Password," has been removed from the critical list but was reported in serious condition after a stroke.

Ludden's doctors were encouraged by his emergence Sunday from a six-day coma, officials of Monterey Community Hospital said.

"He is talking," said Marilyn Johnson, a hospital spokeswoman. He would not elaborate on Ludden's condition. He said he didn't know when Ludden might be released.

Ludden, who won popularity as the host of "Password" after a long career in radio and television, suffered a massive stroke Oct. 7.

The 62-year-old game show host was stricken while on vacation here. His wife, actress Betty White, has been near him since the stroke.

Earlier this year, Ludden was ill with an unspecified ailment.

Viewers to be saved from weeks of reruns

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — At long last, television viewers may soon be delivered from the weeks and weeks of reruns that were forced to remain on the air while the longest actors' strike ever paralyzed stage sets.

J.R. Ewing was back in his hospital bed, Ponch was patrolling California's highways and "M-A-S-H" was treating Korean War casualties as more actors returned to Hollywood studios and crews put in long hours to make up for time lost during the lengthy actors' strike.

"It feels great to be back to work, back with the gang," Mike Farrell said Monday as he returned to the 20th Century-Fox set of "M-A-S-H" with Alan Alda, Harry Morgan, Loretta Swit, David Ogden Stiers, Jamie Farr and William Christopher.

Also returning to the sets were "Dallas" stars Barbara Bel Geddes, Linda Grey, Steve Kanaly, and Mary Crosby and "Chips" hero Erik Estrada.

But actors had to cross the picket lines of striking musicians to get to the sets. The American Federation of Musicians has struck all major studios in an effort to win residuals for reruns of filmed TV series and movies.

Many Screen Actors Guild members pledged during their 11-week strike not to cross musicians' picket lines. But last week when SAG authorized members to return to work pending the outcome of a mail-in vote on a new three-year pact, a number of actors reversed themselves.

A spokesman for the musicians said they were disappointed the actors were no longer honoring their pickets, but said they understood the decision to return to work.

The American Federation of Television and Radio Artists already has voted 368-232 in favor of the new contract at its Los Angeles, San Francisco and Washington, D.C. locals. The last voting is scheduled today in Chicago and Wednesday in New York. SAG ballots are due at noon Oct. 20.

Disc jockeys honored

High Tars Finish Second To Merit!

MERIT low tar/good taste combination scores convincing 3 to 1 victory over high tar leaders.

There's a low tar cigarette that's challenging high tar smoking—and winning.

The cigarette: MERIT.

High Tars Finish Second

Latest research proves smokers prefer MERIT.

Blind Taste Tests: In tests where brand identity was concealed, a significant majority of smokers rated the taste of low tar MERIT as good as—or better than—leading high tar brands. Even cigarettes having twice the tar!

Kings: 8 mg "tar," 0.6 mg nicotine—100's Reg: 10 mg "tar," 0.7 mg nicotine—100's Men: 11 mg "tar," 0.8 mg nicotine av. per cigarette, FTC Report Dec. 79

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

Smoker Preference: Among the 95% of smokers stating a preference, the MERIT low tar/good taste combination was favored 3 to 1 over high tar leaders when tar levels were revealed!

Long-Term Satisfaction: In the latest survey of former high tar smokers who have switched to MERIT, 9 out of 10 reported they continue to enjoy smoking, are glad they switched, and report MERIT is the best-tasting low tar they've ever tried!

MERIT is the proven alternative to high tar smoking. And you can taste it.
