Commission passes $10.2 million budget by a 3-2 split vote

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

The Pampa City Commission, by a narrow 3-2 margin, gave initial approval to the proposed $10.2 million city budget and an accompanying 2 cent tax increase during its regular Tuesday night meeting at City Hall.

A large crowd turned out for the meeting, which was primarily centered around budget discussions. They were treated to a sometimes heated exchange between Mayor David McDaniel and Commissioner Richard Peet.

"I'd like to express a great deal of thanks to the city staff for what they've done," McDaniel said.

He said he wanted to make clear that in addition to the 5 percent pay raise for city employees the budget also included a $10,000 pay raise for City Manager Bob Hart.

Peet said he knew nothing about the proposal to raise Hart's salary by $10,000.

"I still feel more diligent work can be done (on reducing the budget). I am surprised by a $10,000 a year salary increase when we are so tight on funds," Peet said.

Commissioner Ray Hupp pointed out that Hart is paid much less than most city managers for cities the size of Pampa.

"This man saved the city of Pampa about $150,000 the first few months he was here. He's far and away the best city manager in the Texas Panhandle. In the last year he came under strong personal attack. This is a strong vote by this commission for the job he is doing," McDaniel said.

Hart has not received a raise since he took the Pampa job in 1985. With the increase his salary will be around $60,000.

Peet made the motion that two city ordinances be amended that gave Hart the ability to tranfer city funds between accounts. Hart said the transfer move authority was neccesary to handle payrolls before city tax money came in.

"I'm concerned about this," Peet said. "I'll use two examples from our current budget. In administrative travel we budgeted $9,000. We've already spent $18,000."

Peet suggested the ordinances be amended to read that the city manager "with the approval of the city commission" be able to make transfers.

No other commissioner would second the motion and it was not brought to a vote.

Commissioner Joe Reed said such a measure would cause daily city bookeeping to grind to a halt.

Several citizens spoke in support of Peet's efforts to monitor the budget.

"Mr. Peet is trying to do a good job and he's getting no cooperation," said Junior Shelton in his address to the commission.

"Mr. Peet made some requests for amendments. Mr. Peet said transfers of money will be made with no recall. Can you give me an example of funds that are transferred and why?" he asked.

Reed told Shelton the moves were essential since most fund reserves had been depleted and there was no reserve money to tide the city over.

Commissioner Hupp suggested a vote on the tax increase be witheld for two weeks to allow the Pampa Public Golf Association time to raise enough money to offset the moderate tax increase. Peet seconded the motion.

"That's fine for this year, but what about next year? This tax increase is to cover our commitment to this city," McDaniel said.

"We'll let next year take care of itself," Hupp responded.

The measure failed 3-2 with McDaniel, Gary Sutherland and Reed voting in favor of the tax increase. Peet and Hupp voted against the budget measure. Hupp has expressed a strong desire to prevent a tax increase.

City Attorney Don Lane told the commission that they could later repeal the increase if it became clear the PPGA could raise funds they had promised the city to help offset costs of a new municipal

United Way to kick off its fund raising efforts

Pampa's United Way fund raising drive begins bright and early Thursday with a kickoff breakfast at 6:45 a.m. in the M.K. Brown Room of the Pampa Community Building, 200 N. Ballard.

The breakfast, free to all United Way workers and Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce members, is to be held in conjunction with the chamber's September meeting.

Breakfast will be prepared in the recently-completed kitchen of the Community Building, according to Debbie Musgrave of the Pampa chamber.

The building celebrated its second anniversary on Labor Day, she said. In the two years since its completion, 30,000 people have used the building.

Guest speaker for the United Way breakfast is to be Carl Clark, brother of 1988 fund drive chairman Jimmie Clark.

Carl Clark, administrator of the Tarrant County Health Department, is a seven-year member of Toastmasters International. He has served as president of the Harlingen Toastmasters Club, where he was named Outstanding Toastmaster for two consecutive years. He was also the 1975 recipient of the James E. Clifford Memorial Award.

Active in many areas of public health, Clark holds a bachelor of science degree from West Texas State University and a master's degree in public health from the University of Texas School of Public Health in Houston.

This year's United Way goal is $336,455, an amount determined by its 15 member agencies' actual needs. United Way agencies cover a wide spectrum of the community.

Texas coast residents bracing for Hurricane Gilbert's winds

By JEFF AWALT
Associated Press Writer

GALVESTON (AP) — Residents along the Gulf Coast are stockpiling on food and supplies as they brace themselves for powerful Hurricane Gilbert while emergency preparedness officials make plans for evacuations.

The hurricane, packing winds of 175 mph, already ripped through Jamaica and the Cayman Islands and took aim early today on the resort island of Cozumel, Mexico.

It was expected to move into the Gulf of Mexico late today.

Robert Sheets, director of the National Hurricane Center, said early today he expects Gilbert to make landfall on the Texas-Louisiana coast in about 48 to 60 hours.

"There's a little bit of uncertainty how fast it's going to turn to the north or northwest, so we're going to wait until the center moves off the coast of Yucatan Peninsula and we'll still have 38 to 46 hours," Sheets said during an interview on NBC-TV's Today show.

Bill Tompkins, coordinator for the Galveston County emergency preparedness, said communications systems were being tested and procedures were being reviewed.

Based on weather forecasts from at least four sources, he expected the storm to be in the Gulf by Thursday morning.

"That's probably our most critical time," he said. "We'll be making decisions Thursday morning about what to recommend to the citizens."

In Orange County, officials were meeting this morning to pre-plan a possible evacuation.

"This thing could come right at us," said Orange County Emergency Management Systems Coordinator Dick Stanfield.

Orange officials on Tuesday also began stockpiling sand for use in sandbagging operations if the hurricane continues to head toward the area.

"This could come right at us," Stanfield said. "I hope it doesn't. I hope it goes into the part of Mexico where nobody lives."

In Brownsville, Cameron County Sheriff Alex Perez said he has already posted special schedules for his officers to follow if a hurricane watch is issued.

"We've contacted all the schools for shelters, to see which ones we'll be using this time," said Perez. "We're getting all the emergency generators ready for the jails, and getting extra gas for the patrol cars and getting everything set up. It seems like it will be coming this way, so we are getting prepared."

For the second time in two weeks, oil companies evacuated thousands of workers from rigs in the Gulf.

Houston city officials also scheduled a meeting today to develop detailed emergency plans, said Dick Hawkins of the Office of Emergency Management.

He said the city's plans include cordoning off the downtown area, which was littered with glass from skyscrapers by Hurricane Alicia in 1983.

At the South Texas Nuclear Project near Bay City, employees were securing down any loose objects at the plant's second unit, which is still under construction.

Employees also are reviewing all procedures for operations at STNP's Unit 1, which is in operation, said spokesman Glen Walker.

The plant is 13 miles from the coast and its containment center is built to withstand nature's forces — including earthquakes and 370 mph winds, he said.

"The plant is probably the safest, most hurricane-proof plant along the Gulf coast," he said.

If the hurricane heads towards Bay City, Walker said officials would decide about 12 hours before it hit whether to cut down operations and send all non-essential personnel home.

At NASA's Johnson Space Center, officials were meeting this afternoon to decide whether to close the center Thursday to everyone — workers and visitors. JSC employees are now free to leave anytime to secure their homes and get ready to leave if needed, said spokesman Kyle Herring.

The hurricane, however, would not delay the Discovery flight in Cape Canaveral, Fla., he said.

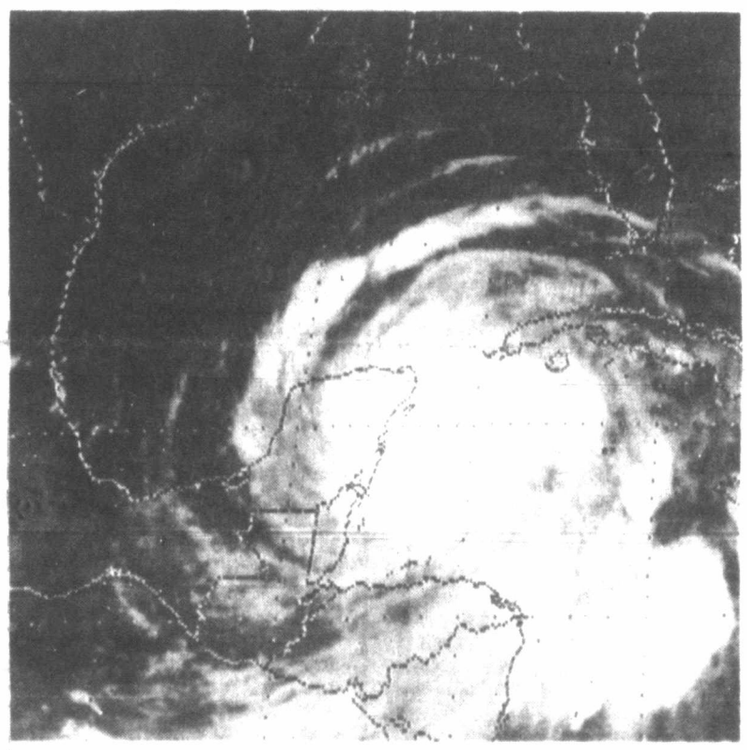

If needed, a JSC Mission Control crew would get out before the storm — if it came during a shuttle mission — and fly to White Sands Missile Range, N.M., to control a shuttle flight.

Houston Aviation Department officials were meeting this morning with airline representatives about the possible threat to the city's flight operations, said spokesman Bill Ainsworth.

Deficit lowest since December 1984

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. merchandise trade deficit shrank to $9.5 billion in July, the lowest monthly imbalance since December 1984, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said the dramatic 28 percent improvement in the trade deficit reflected a small increase in exports and a big decline in imports.

The latest trade deficit was certain to cheer Republican presidential candidate George Bush, who has been trying to deflect charges from Democrat Michael Dukakis that the country's soaring trade deficits demonstrate a major flaw in the Reagan economic program.

The July deficit was substantially better than economists had expected. The government did, however, boost the June deficit to $13.2 billion from the originally reported $12.5 billion.

The June deficit was the biggest trade shortfall since a $14.4 billion deficit in February, a figure that had sent the Dow Jones industrial average tumbling by 100 points.

The July deficit was likely to have an opposite effect. Indeed, even before the number was reported, optimistic remarks by Treasury Secretary-designate Nicholas F. Brady set off a last-minute Wall Street buying spree Tuesday.

He said he expected the trade deficit will decline at a "surprisingly fast" pace over the next few months, a remark investors interpreted as a hint that today's report would be encouraging.

For the first seven months of this year, the U.S. trade deficit has been running at an annual average of $137.5 billion, down 19.3 percent from the record $170.3 billion deficit suffered in 1987.

The significant narrowing in the trade deficit this year has been a major factor behind the economy's better-than-expected economic performance. Analysts said that more than half of all economic growth this year is coming from the narrowing trade gap.

U.S. exports are booming as the weaker dollar has made American goods competitive once again on world markets, a factor that has helped push factory operating rates to the highest level in eight years.

The $9.5 billion July imbalance between exports and imports was only the second single-digit deficit in the last three years and was the lowest since a $8.03 billion deficit in December 1984. The deficit had declined to $9.76 billion in May.

The July improvement reflected a big 8.9 percent drop in imports, which declined to $35.99 billion from a record June figure of $39.50 billion.

Exports were up by a smaller 0.7 percent to $26.5 billion, keeping them near the record levels they have been at for the last several months.

The big drop in imports came primarily in big-ticket capital goods, which dropped by $1.2 billion to $8 billion. This category had risen sharply the previous month as U.S. companies had looked abroad for the equipment needed to expand their own production facilities.

Also dropping sharply in July were car imports, which fell by $803 million with almost all of that decline coming from a drop in shipments of cars from Canada.

On the export side, the improvement reflected increases in a variety of products, led by a $600 million rise in sales of capital goods.

As usual, the country suffered its biggest deficit with Japan, a $4.4 billion imbalance, which was unchanged from June. The deficit with Western Europe rose to $2.3 billion from $1.9 billion in June. The deficits with Taiwan and Canada were unchanged at $1.2 billion and $1.1 billion, respectively.

With the release of today's report, the government resumed a practice abandoned in 1979 of simultaneously reporting the import figures with the cost of shipping and insurance removed.

Using this system, the deficit for July would have been an even lower $8.07 billion, down from a June imbalance, minus shipping and insurance, of $11.7 billion.

Motorists reminded to stop for school buses

Bus drivers for Pampa Independent School District report problems with motorists that are either uninformed about or simply disregard state laws on stopping when buses are loading or unloading students.

"My bus drivers are coming in and telling me they're having problems with people obeying the state law about stopping when a bus stops with its lights on and loads or unloads students," explained Herschel Burns, PISD transportation supervisor.

"If someone was to run over a little kid because they didn't stop when they should have, they'd feel real bad about it," he said.

"If you are in doubt (about the law) — stop," says Major Vernon Cawthon, Texas Department of Public Safety regional commander. "Those few moments you lose may mean a lifetime to some youngster. None of us want to be responsible for the death or injury of a young child."

All of the bus loading and unloading areas at Pampa schools are two lanes, Burns said, where it is required that both passing and oncoming vehicles stop until the bus turns off its flashing lights.

In 1987, 1,685 accidents involved school buses resulting in 1,085 injuries and about nine deaths.

Many motorists are confused about when they should stop and when it is legal to pass a stopped school bus, law enforcement officials noted.

When approaching a stopped school bus from the opposite direction on a highway, a driver need not stop if

— (1) the school bus is on a frontage road;

— (2) the opposing lanes are separated by a median strip 10 feet wide — this does not include turn lanes, or

— (3) the opposing lanes are separated by a permanent barrier. In these cases, only vehicles traveling in the same direction as the school bus must stop.

Vehicles may pass in the same direction if the bus is in a controlled loading zone adjacent to the traffic lanes, and where pedestrian crossing is prohibited.

Budget

golf course.

"I'm leery of a government that promises to later lower taxes. Historically, they never do," Peet said.

Reed said that if the PPGA raised enough money to offset a tax increase, he would vote in favor of the repeal.

However, McDaniel said even if the PPGA could raise $100,000 it would not equal the long-term effects of the 2 cent increase. He suggested that the longer the city waited to raise taxes, the larger an increase would be later.

Second reading and apparent approval of the budget will be during the City Commission meeting on Tuesday, Sept. 27.

In other business, the commission voted to sell a property at 1105 Campanella, award a building contract at the golf course to Vincent Construction of Amarillo for $19,758 and award two contracts for plumbing at the course.

A total of $116,893.90 was awarded for an irrigation system at the course. Baker Plumbing of Pampa was awarded $4,893.90 of the total contract. Western Industrial of Amarillo the was low bidder on the majority of the irrigation work.

On a 4-1 vote commissioners voted to change the name of Decatur Street to Randy Matson Avenue in honor of the 1968 Olympic star from Pampa.

Commissioners voted unanimously in favor of closing a tract of land they owned as well as accepting the audits of Energas, Southwestern Public Service, Sammons Cable and Southwestern Bell. They deferred action on a proposed rate increase by Rural/Metro Ambulance Service.

Commissioners signed an agreement authorizing Hart to begin negotiations with Southwestern Bell on a new franchise contract.

Country Fair chairmen finalize plans

Plans for the 1988 Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce Country Fair, scheudled Oct. 22, were finalized at a recent meeting of the committee chairmen. Organizers predict the fair will be as successful as it has in years past.

"Chamber members make a gigantic effort for this event so that it is the only fund-raiser that the group has during the year," said Robert Wilson, general chairman.

The event begins at 5:30 p.m. in the M.K. Brown Auditorium and features a silent auction, a live auction, food and drinks, and a dance. Tickets are available from the chamber office, 200 N. Ballard.

"We expect to have about 600 people again this year," Wilson said.

Solicitations Chairman Jim Morris reports that merchants are donating a variety of merchandise for the live and silent auctions. Merchandise ranges from a microwave oven to a gas grill, to a flag that has flown over the statehouse.

Food booths will feature steak on a stick and blueberry muffins from Danny's Market, barbecue from Dyer's, cobblers from the Pampa Country Club, tacos from Dos Caballeros, pizza and spaghetti from Mr. Gatti's, cheeses and crackers from Scotty's, and chips and dips from the Food Emporium, said Vicki Walls, food chairman.

Wayne Stribling is coordinating the sale of drawing tickets. Tickets may be split as many ways as purchasers desire. All tickets will be placed in a barrel, and the winners, drawn at the Country Fair, will win $5,000, $1,500 and $1,000.

Duane Harp reports the Gold Coats will be on hand to help during the live auction. Former general chairman Dona Cornutt and Mike Keagy also attended the meeting.

Court overturns one murder conviction

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals today overturned the murder conviction and death sentence of Sammie Felder Jr., who had been convicted twice in the slaying of a quadrapalegic Korean War veteran.

Three other capital murder convictions and death sentences were upheld, including that of Pamela Lynn Perillo, one of three women on Texas' death row.

Felder, who worked as an aide at an apartment complex for paralyzed people, was accused of robbing and fatally stabbing James Hanks in 1975 at the Houston complex.

Hanks, 42, had been paralyzed from a Korean War injury. A camera and wallet were stolen from Hanks.

Hanks' body was found in his bed, in a pool of blood, on March 14, 1975. He had suffered stab wounds in both temples and cuts to his neck. Although still alive when found, he died four days later in a hospital.

In overturning Felder's second conviction, the appeals court said the trial judge should have rejected one potential juror which Felder's lawyer had to excuse on a peremptory challenge. Later, after Felder's peremptory challenges were exhausted, another "objectionable juror" was seated, the appeal contended.

In the three other cases, the court upheld the convictions of:

- Perillo, who was sentenced to death in the February 1980 slayings of Robert Banks of Houston and his friend, Bob Skeens. Both men were strangled.
- Denton Alan Crank, sentenced to death in the slaying of Terry Oringderff of Houston. Oringderff, an employee of Rice Food Markets, was shot six or seven times in January 1984 after the store was robbed of more than $39,000 in cash.
- John Cockrum, sentenced to death in the May 1986 shooting of Eva May.

County facing a light agenda

Gray County Commissioners are to meet in regular session Thursday at 9:30 a.m. in the County Courtroom of Gray County Courthouse.

A light agenda has been set for the Sept. 15 meeting, compared to the lengthy one scheduled on Sept. 1.

County commissioners will hear a request for use of a county telephone number from the field base operator at Perry Lefors Field.

Also listed on the agenda is consideration of a letter for the city of Pampa to sell property taken in a recent delinquent tax sale.

Precinct 2 Commissioner Jim Greene has entered a request to transfer funds within his budget for the approval of other members of the county commissioners court.

Routine items such as payment of salaries and bills and time deposits and transfers round out the Thursday's scheduled meeting.

Police drop explosives charge

The Pampa Police Department, on the advice of federal authorities, are not pursuing charges against a Pampa man who had plastic explosives in his house. The discovery was made during a drug raid at 906 E. Browning several weeks ago.

Instead, Danny Ray White, 28, has been charged with a Class C misdemeaner by the fire marshall.

"All I could charge him with was having over 60 percent nitroglycerin. That's against a city code," said Fire Marshall Tom Adams. A Class C misdemeaner means if White is found guilty, he would only have to pay a fine.

He was arrested on a fire marshall's warrant Tuesday evening and later released on bond.

Police officials said that if the plastic explosives had been assembled as a bomb the case would have been pursued by federal authorities. Cecil Hauser, an explosives expert with Welex, detonated the TNT at the police firing range shortly after the raid. He said there were enough explosives present to blow up a car or house.

White has been charged with possession of illegal drugs in relation to the same raid. During the seizure police found a large cache of weapons, $12,000 cash and a number of items identified as drug paraphernalia.

They say more charges could be filed in the case.

Appraisal Board to meet Thursday

After sitting out a month, members of the Gray County Appraisal Board will reconvene in regular session at 5 p.m. Thursday in the district's conference room, 815 N. Sumner.

Among the action items to be considered in the meeting are a mineral contract, consultant for industrial and pipeline properties and bids for insurance coverage.

Also to be considered by board members are proposed amendments for the 1988 budget and the chief appraiser's report.

TCTA president urges teachers to stress professionalism

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Local members of the Texas Classroom Teachers Association got a vote of confidence from their state president, who was in town to address the group Tuesday afternoon.

Susan Crocker, a teacher from Grand Prairie, said the TCTA had five major goals outlined for 1988-89. Her remarks were made at a meeting at the Pampa Middle School library.

"The top of our five-point star is 'Texas Only.' We are an organization of Texas teachers. We are not controlled by Washington and our money stays here in the state," Crocker said.

Before the meeting, she said that TCTA members were opposed to striking for better wages, something the National Education Agency and its splinter group, the Texas State Teachers Association, have publicly supported.

"We don't think people want to see a teachers' group picket embassies or make statements about wars in Central America, either," she said.

She said the other four points were professional growth, legal protection, budget analysis and seeking education-related legislation.

"One of my favorite myths is that the TCTA only pays if you win a legal battle. We have $100,000 in legal protection for you and three attorneys waiting to help you. The whole point of liability insurance is for if you lose," she said.

"Last year our attorneys handled over 2,000 legal inquiries," Crocker said.

Concerning budget analysis, Crocker said TCTA would review a school board's budget to reveal areas that could be logically trimmed to provide teacher raises.

"We can say, 'Here, we want this raise, we need this raise, and here is how you can do it,' " she said.

Crocker told the TCTA members that the much publicized call by the TSTA for a $5,000 a year raise for all teachers was actually an education coalition plan that TSTA took credit for.

"The coalition asked that we hold off on publicizing it, so we did. TSTA did not hold off. Instead, they took the credit for the whole idea," she said.

TCTA is eager to work with other education groups, including TSTA, Crocker said, when they can find common ground.

"However, if it comes to choosing publicity or results, we choose results. We are a professional organization, not a union.

"There are a lot of people who will tell you they didn't go to college to walk a picket line," she said.

Crocker stressed the importance of the state Legislature passing guidelines that make school attendance rules more strict.

"Parents don't understand that attendance is tied to good grades. The biggest thing we need is parental support. If parents keep letting a child miss, they are telling that child that school is not important," Crocker said.

The TCTA is proposing a plan that calls for mandatory attendance a certain number of days each semester or the child cannot pass the class. Crocker said waivers would only be granted under extreme circumstances under the plan.

"Legislators don't even understand the importance of strong attendance. This year we will have to make them understand," she said.

During her remarks Crocker urged teachers to display their degrees and certificates in their classroom the way other professional groups do.

"We are one of the only professions that doesn't display our credentials," she said.

She is also concerned about new state laws that deny teachers the right to be told they have a child with AIDs in their class.

"We need to know that we have a child with hearing or sight impairments. We also need to know if there is a child with AIDs in our class."

Among the items Crocker said the TCTA will be lobbying for on the legislative level in Texas are: raising current teacher salaries, a formula that would allow teachers to comfortably retire after 30 years in the classroom and full state funding of the career ladder.

She said she is disturbed by a tendency among administrators around the state to criticize the 22-1 student-teacher ratio mandated by state law.

"The difference in a quality education is the amount of time you can spend with a child. I get very frustrated when I hear administrators say 22-1 doesn't matter," Crocker said.

She suggested that the primary edge private schools hold over public schools is their small class size.

"(Private schools) get their teachers from the public school system. But what they are able to do is spend more time per child. That is an absolute key to a good eduation. Twenty-two-to-one is a beginning to work toward the goal of spending more time with children," Crocker said.

The first-year TCTA president is currently on a year's leave from the classroom. She holds a bachelor's degree in liberal arts from Colorado State University and a master's degree in liberal arts from Southern Methodist University. She has done doctoral level work at the University of Texas at Dallas.

"I have no desire to be in administration. The best job in education is being a teacher. Now what we must do is get teaching on a payroll level that encourages the best teachers to stay in the classroom. Right now, just the opposite is happening," Crocker said.

In addition to bringing Crocker to Pampa, the local TCTA chapter will be sponsoring a candidates forum for the State Board of Education at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the M.K. Brown Room of the Pampa Community Building.

Senators want better mental health spending

AUSTIN (AP) — Before the 1989 Legislature will support more funding for the Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation, there must be assurance that funds will be prudently spent, the head of a Senate subcommittee said after criticizing the current retardation care system.

The system now appears to be "on the verge of failure," said Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi. He spoke at a Tuesday meeting of the Senate Subcommittee on Health Services.

"Something has gone very wrong in our system of caring for the mentally retarded," Truan said. "For decades, we have struggled with inadequate funding, outdated treatment, court orders and controversy, and even hostility over the best way to care for the retarded.

"Not one of those issues has gone away. They have multiplied," he said.

The subcommittee, which is studying the financing of community facilities for mentally retarded people, heard from MHMR department officials about state funds given to help start up private community homes and about contracts between a former state employee and the state.

In January, the department will ask the Legislature for an $87.3 million emergency appropriation to improve client-staff ratios in state schools, Truan said.

"As a member of the Senate Finance Committee, I assure you that we will be looking very carefully at any additional expenditures of state tax dollars that are requested for this program — and any other agency's programs," he said.

The department, through the Prospective Payment Program, has provided $1.46 million in start-up costs to community facilities since 1985, said auditor William Montalvo. Montalvo, internal audit director for the MHMR department, said just $96,845 has been repaid.

The program was designed to comply with a federal lawsuit settlement that included moving retarded people from state institutions to community homes. State funds are provided through the program to mental retardation authorities, which contract for community services.

Start-up costs are one-time funding needs associated with beginning a program, such as facilities and equipment.

Truan questioned whether it is constitutional for the state to provide such start-up funding to private businesses, and he questioned contracts between the agency and former employees. He cited the example of Donald Taft, former director of outreach services for the Corpus Christi State School.

The day after Taft resigned his state job in 1985, he signed contracts with the school to provide services. In 1986, Taft's company also signed a contract with Fort Worth State School, Montalvo said.

In the contracts, Taft was advanced a total of $347,827 in start-up funds without a payback provision, Montalvo said.

Jane Rowley, a spokesperson for Taft, said he had no immediate comment. She said Taft was out of his Corpus Christi office working on preparations for the possibility that Hurricane Gilbert would affect Texas.

Montalvo

MHMR officials said nothing illegal was found in the contract.

Department Commissioner Dennis Jones also outlined planned administrative changes that could include prohibiting contracts between mental health or mental retardation authorities and former employees for a period of time.

Another change would preclude advance payments for services from mental retardation authorities to private providers under the program.

Education heads dispute EEOC's ruling against teachers' literacy tests

AUSTIN (AP) — State education officials are disputing a federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission ruling that said the literacy test teachers were required to pass to keep their jobs discriminated against those who were black or older than 40.

"The test was a fair and accurate measure of the examinees' basic reading and writing skills that was in no way influenced by race or age," Education Commissioner William Kirby said Tuesday.

Kirby said another federal agency, the Office of Civil Rights, had looked at the exam and "found no evidence whatsoever of racial discrimination."

In the spring of 1986, all teachers and school administrators had two chances to pass the Texas Examination of Current Administrators and Teachers, or TECAT. Those who failed the test — 1,875 statewide — were not qualified to work in Texas schools that fall.

But the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, in a ruling made public this week, said the test discriminated "against blacks and persons over 40 years of age who took the TECAT in 1986 and were removed from their teaching positions as a result."

Kirby said the statewide results showed that 99.29 percent of educators under age 40 passed the test, while 99.64 percent of teachers over 40 passed.

"Older educators did better on the test than younger ones. The results clearly refute the contention that the test discriminated against individuals on the basis of age," he said.

Although minorities, particularly blacks, failed the exam at "a statistically significant rate," Kirby said, "an examination of the test development, validation, administration and scoring procedures adequately rebutted any inference of discrimination raised by the statistical analyses."

The EEOC ruling came in response to complaints filed by several teachers against their school districts, the state of Texas and State Board of Education, which approved the content and passing score of the exam.

The Texas State Teachers Association represented the teachers before the EEOC. The ruling could affect many of the educators who lost their jobs because of the exam, said TSTA.

"We said all along that the test was discriminatory toward blacks and older teachers," said Ollie Besteiro, TSTA vice president. "This means that school districts will have to go back and review their records to see which former teachers might be eligible for reinstatement, back pay or pension adjustments."

Amarillo agrees to review of Mesa settlement

AMARILLO (AP) — Amarillo city commissioners have voted to accept a settlement in the city's lawsuit against Mesa Limited Partnership and Energas Co. over the Amarillo gas supply.

Mayor Glen Parkey and commissioners John Chandler and Don Chrysler Tuesday endorsed the settlement that could reach $9 million after making one change in the 23-page agreement, the Amarillo Globe-News reported.

The agreement must be approved by a state district court judge.

The city of Amarillo is suing the two companies, claiming the quality and amount of the city's gas supply has been damaged because of Mesa's alleged over-extraction of natural gas liquids from the gas supply sold in the city.

The city also claims damages because of price markups of the gas supply dedicated to the city under a 1928 contract.

Mesa General Counsel W. Lin Patterson and Energas General Counsel Don James said they would review the change and, if found acceptable, recommend to Amarillo-based Mesa and Energas that the companies support it.

A paragraph in the settlement was changed by commissioners so the city could keep its rights and assert beneficiary claims to natural gas from the "B" acreage in the West Panhandle Fields, according to a Sept. 12 letter to the commission from Robert L. Templeton, the city's outside counsel in the lawsuit.

The move was opposed by two city commissioners, Keith Adams and Dave Taylor.

Andrew Littlefair, assistant to Mesa General Partner T. Boone Pickens Jr., said Tuesday that Mesa officials are reviewing the papers and will answer questions about the settlement in more detail Wednesday.

"We're considering the settlement..." Littlefair said. "A management team is reveiwing it from the legal perspective. We just need a little more time to study the document."

State District Judge David L. Gleason must still approve the settlement agreement which calls for at least $6 million in gas price reductions over a five-year period, lowering the price from $2.76 to $2.60 per thousand cubic feet (Mcf) of gas Mesa sells to Energas.

The settlement calls for a 2 percent price increase each year during the five-year period, meaning the price will reach $2.814 per Mcf by 1992.

The price decrease would be retroactive for 1988, and Mesa would make up the difference in further reductions to Energas, which Energas will pass onto consumers.

The settlement also calls for the city to drop all damage claims against Mesa and Energas, and Amarillo couldn't file any suits related to issues in the current case unless there is a violation of the settlement proposal.

A provision in the settlement would allow any party to the agreement to withdraw in the event that four Amarillo residents who filed a class-action plea to intervene on Aug. 23 actually do constitute a class.

Gleason is scheduled to set a date Friday for a hearing to determine whether they do.

Study offers plan to combat child abuse

AUSTIN (AP) — Dozens of changes recommended in a study of how the Texas child protection system operates offer a plan to combat child abuse and make the state's system one of the best, officials say.

"As private citizens and parents, we are not satisfied with a child protective services system in Texas that is merely average," said board member Rob Mosbacher in releasing the study Tuesday.

"We must have a program for Texas that is second to none. Today, we do not have that program. But for the first time ever, we have a plan to attain one," he said.

The study, conducted by the American Association for Protecting Children, will be presented to the human services board on Thursday. It found a number of problems and offered recommendations that Mosbacher said could lead to a "truly exceptional" system for Texas if they are implemented.

"What these experts found is that Texas, like most other states in the union, is struggling with the problem of child abuse and neglect," Mosbacher said.

No cost estimate has yet been prepared, he said, although it may not be that expensive.

"While resources is part of the problem, it is by no means the whole problem ... But I don't think the pricetag is going to be that substantial," Mosbacher said. "A great deal of the help can come at the county level, and it can also come from private sector organizations."

Reported cases of child abuse soared 119 percent from 1976 to 1986, while the size of the state's Child Protective Services staff grew just 6 percent.

Among the recommendations, the study found a need to improve support for foster homes. "Despite the enormous need, the number of foster homes in Texas declined from 1984 to 1987," Mosbacher said.

"Although CPS and law enforcement agencies are required by law to notify each other of abuse and neglect reports, a cooperative effort does not extend past that point," Mosbacher said.

The court system was the focus of other recommendations. Currently, the courts generally are involved only when state officials seek conservatorship or to remove a child from a family.

And because the department can be represented in court only by local prosecutors or a member of the attorney general's staff, whose expertise may not be child abuse issues, Mosbacher said "the effectiveness of our legal representation is sometimes in question."

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Soviets continuing their game plans

In the past three years Mikhail Gorbachev has transformed the Evil Empire in the Nice Empire. Even Ronald Reagan, the old cold-warrior who coined the term "Evil Empire," no longer uses it. But, even if a tiger meows like a kitten, you can still tell it by its stripes.

As the latest installment of what might be called the Gorbachev Doctrine (dupe the West, then expand), the Soviet Union has begun a large expansion of its naval base in Syria. The base will directly threaten the free nations of the Mediterranean all the way to Gibraltar. Most affected will be Isreal, just a few miles to the south of the new base. The base fills no true requirement of Soviet defense. Other than Syria, the only client state in the Mediterranean is Col. Moammar El-Gadhafi's Libya.

The new base will give greater flexibility to the Soviet submarine nuclear missile fleet. The subs will no longer have to sail far north to frozen Murmansk, through waters heavily controlled by NATO, around Spain, England and Norway, to get many essential supplies. Instead, they will port in warm Syria. That means the subs will more easily and more often be able to target their missiles at NATO forces in Western Europe.

This puts a new light on the Intermediate Nuclear Forces treaty signed last December by Gorbachev and Reagan in Washington. As Reagan has often said, the INF treaty for the first time is supposed to eliminate an entire class of weapons, to wit, intermediate-range nuclear missiles.

Alas, the treaty said nothing about submarine-launched missiles. The Soviets could base a whole fleet of nuclear subs in Syria, each bristling with nuclear cruise missiles targeted on NATO. As the 1988 edition of Soviet Military Power, prepared by Reagan's own Defense Department, warned in April, "The role of Soviet INF missiles will likely be redistributed to other systems in light of the recent INF treaty ... the Soviets may be able to turn to other ballistic missiles (ICBMs and SLBMs), aircraft and perhaps sea-launched cruise missiles to fulfill their strategic theater requirements in Eurasia."

The new Syria base will also give greater support to Soviet surface ships, including destroyers, cruisers, minesweepers and landing ships. This will shift to Syria many of these ships from their bass on the Black Sea, which is accessible only through the Dardanneles Strait, controlled by NATO member Turkey.

What we are seeing, then, is the careful expansion of an empire. The Soviets have been at this game a long time. They know how to be patient, how to feint a desire for peace, as in their partial pullout from Afghanistan, and how gradually to expand the boundaries of the territory they control.

"I was NOT in a brawl at a bar. I was in a brawl on the Morton Downey Jr. show."

He makes embarrassing point

James J. Kilpatrick

WASHINGTON — Just before Congress adjourned for its August recess, Sen. Rudy Boschwitz, R-Minn., performed a remarkably useful service. He exposed billions of dollars in what are known as "add-ons and plus-ups" to the defense appropriations bill.

He was talking, of course, about political pork. Before he had concluded his abortive effort, his indignant colleagues were squealing like stuck pigs.

Boschwitz is one of the ablest — and quietest — members of the Senate in which he has served for the past 10 years. He does his homework. He seldom speaks on the floor, and because he has small tolerance for sacred cows he is not an especially popular member of the club.

On Aug. 11, he did nothing to gain him favor: He offered an amendment to strike $1.7 billion in add-ons; before the chill descended, he was prepared to offer a separate amendment to cancel $4 billion in plus-ups. An "add-on" is an appropriation never requested by the Department of Defense. A "plus-up" is an increase over the Pentagon's proposed spending.

The senator was striking, unsuccessfully, at a pernicious practice in Congress — a practice that gets more pernicious all the time. This is the tendency on the part of Congress not merely to set policies, but also to micromanage their execution. Boschwitz was addressing the problem in defense, but he might equally have been addressing appropriations for the State Department and other major agencies

"The magnitude of waste caused year in and year out by congressional pork barreling rivals — in fact, dwarfs — the cost of fraud that is now being unearthed," Boschwitz said. He provided three pages of examples of unrequested spending.

One add-on provides $14.5 million to establish an "optoelectronics materials center" at the unnamed university, but when he sought to learn which university, "we were not able to get any answers from the Appropriations Committee." (This reporter was unable to get answers either).

The bill adds $3 million for a study of "the cause of limited supply of minority and women scientists, engineers and technologists." How did that get in the bill? Another item calls for $60 million in unspecified development of "threat stimulators." The Pentagon asked for none of these things.

Neither did the Navy ask for $2 million for maintenance of a facility in San Diego. The Air Force did not request funds for hospital repairs at the Air Force Academy. The bill adds an unsought $80 million for certain explosives, $40 million for additional Sparrow missiles, $55 million for two additional KC-130T planes for the Marine Corps Reserve, $42 million to buy six more MH-60 helicopters for the 304th Aerospace and Rescue Squadron.

The list of add-ons runs on and on: $130 million for 58 additional M-1A1 tanks, $326 million for 16 C-130 planes for the Air National Guard, $50 million for unspecified "miscellaneous equipment" for the Army National Guard. Among the plus-ups is an increase of more than $8 million to maintain two inactive ammunition plants in Illinois and Wisconsin. Many of the items mandate not only what additional material should be provided, but also where it should be acquired.

Boschwitz, who is not the most tactful member of the Senate, rubbed in a little salt. Many members who complain most fervently about excessive spending for defense, he said, are the same members who ask special favors for defense spending in their own states. This political intervention serves to undermine the considered judgment of the armed services.

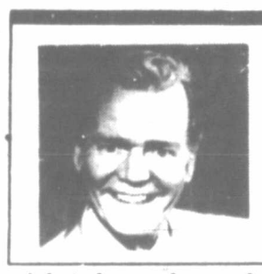

Louisiana's Sen. Bennett Johnston responded acidly that the Boschwitz amendment would make Congress superfluous. If the Pentagon's requests are to be rubber-stamped, neither decreased or increased, the legislative function would be nullified.

His main point was that agreement had been reached with the White House on a figure of $299.5 billion in defense spending for the coming fiscal year. After all the cutbacks, add-ons and plus-ups, the bill was within that amount. Boschwitz's amendment would reduce the total. "What are we supposed to do?" asked Johnston. "Are we supposed not to spend the money?"

Well, perish the thought. Boys will be boys, and the purpose of pork barrel spending is to bring home the bacon. Recognizing this political truth, Boschwitz saw that his amendment would lose by roughly 99-1 if all senators voted. He therefore withdrew his motion, but he had made his embarrassing point.

Animal rights now legitimized

Paul Harvey

On the cutting edge of my reform are the extremists.

In the forefront of humanitarian movements it most always takes a vocal, militant somebody to get our attention.

So there have been some, in the name of "animal rights," who burned medical laboratories.

Gradually, but inevitably, if the cause is just, the radicals who paved the way are replaced with rational methodologists.

The Council on Economic Priorities is a research organization which focuses on issues relating to corporate responsibility.

That council reports today that animal rights advocacy has been legitimized.

If it ever was but a "bunch of kooks in tennis shoes," that is no longer true. "Animal rights advocacy has become a mainstream grassroots movement in our nation."

According to the council, more and more major U.S. corporations are reducing laboratory animal testing or putting their research money into alternative forms of testing.

During World Laboratory Animal Liberation Week this past year, 50,000 people in 50 states picketed — and scored.

On several fronts there is new respect for animal rights.

Avon, Colgate, Hoffman La Roche, Johnson & Johnson, Procter and Gamble and Shell are conducting intensive in-house research to identify alternatives to animal tests.

Colgate, as a result, has reduced animal experiments by 90 percent.

Bausch and Lomb, Bristol-Myers, Clorox, Dupont, Exxon, Pfizer and Revlon are funding two major research centers at Rockefeller University and at Johns Hopkins seeking alternatives to animal testing.

Ralston-Purina provided $163,000 to Texas A&M for researching euthenics, a study of stress on farm animals.

Some substances have been tested for toxicity by an archaic method of placing drops in the eyes of rabbits. Cambridge, Mass., now has a city ordinance limiting animal testing, prohibiting altogether this Draize test.

Animal Rights International, a coalition of 400 groups, is developing a system whereby corporations will be publicly rated with respect to their practices on animal testing; the obvious implication is a boycott of companies callous enough to ignore this responsibility.

At the GOP National Convention, the Republican Platform Committee included a plank pledging George Bush to "call on the Food and Drug Administration to accelerate certification of technically sound alternatives to animal testing of drugs and cosmetics ..."

The "crusade" is not over. Abuses remain which are as hideous as ever. But while technology makes non-animal experiments both more effecient and less costly, humanness is becoming pragmatic.

Evolution, at its most accelerated pace, is agonizingly gradual.

You better watch out! Sasso is back!!

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

By the beginning of the Labor Day weekend Michael Dukakis's presidential campaign was dead in the water. The week-long TV preoccupation with the Republican convention in New Orleans, followed by another week of media hysterics over Dan Quayle's decision to join the National Guard 20 years ago, had resulted only in making Dukakis disappear from the nation's TV screens altogether. Thereupon his ridiculously inflated poll margins over George Bush simply evaporated.

At this unhappy juncture, moreover, Bush had the nerve to lead a small flotilla of TV cameramen through the gunk that has polluted Boston harbor all during Dukakis's two administrations as the "pro-environment" governor of Massachusetts. Worse yet, Dukakis was reduced to excusing his veto of a bill to start each school day with the Pledge of Allegiance by saying he'd been assured the bill was "unconstitutional" by the state's top court — a court so nuttily leftist that it recently went out of its way to admit the communist spy and convicted perjuror, Alger Hiss, to practice law before it.

In this overlapping set of extremities, what did Michael Dukakis do? He did what he always does in a jam: He sent for John Sasso. Mark that name well, for Sasso will for all practical purposes be your president for the next four years if Dukakis wins in November.

You may have noticed that the "wimp issue," as an argument against Bush, suddenly disappeared from our liberal media's overstuffed arsenal just about the time it became clear that Dukakis was going to win the Democratic nomination. The reason was simple: The real wimp in this race is Dukakis, and the media didn't want to draw attention to that fact by harping on the issue.

Dukakis is, in fact, a prize example of a very common political type: the amiable, well-intentioned front man for a pack of ruthless, nail-hard political operators. John Sasso has for years been the undisputed boss of the Massachusetts pack, and as such the brains and most of the other relevant equipment of Mike Dukakis.

By last September, when Sasso was caught red-handed leaking discreditable information to his media cronies about Dukakis's Democratic rival Joe Biden, the aroma wafting off this gorilla (who was then Dukakis's campaign manager) was so overpowering that Sasso was obliged to step down and run the campaign from behind the scenes instead. This fooled nobody except the public; Dukakis could no more run his own campaign than he could run Massachusetts without Sasso whispering in his ear. (The New York Times calls the relationship "like a brother ... unique.")

But by the end of August the Dukakis campaign had sputtered to a near-total halt. It simply wasn't enough for Dukakis to hold long telephone talks with Sasso every night: The master's practised hand was needed directly on the controls — and that is where, in desperation, Dukakis has now put it. John Sasso is officially back as boss of the Dukakis campaign.

The immediate consequence will be that the presidential campaign will get meaner and dirtier. One veteran watcher of Massachusetts politics told me back in May that he was trying to get to the Bush people and warn them: Bad things happen to people who run against Mike Dukakis. This observer not only credited Sasso with turning Biden into a political corpse; he was convinced that Sasso was behind the media's destruction of Gary Hart too. And he regaled me with stories of various Massachusetts politicos whose bleaching bones attest to the grim prowess of John Sasso.

So my advice to the Bush staff, and to the vice president himself, is: Watch out. Sasso is back.

Cool and wet weather helping firefighters to battle blazes

By JONATHAN W. OATIS
Associated Press Writer

Firefighters battling Western blazes got a helping hand from weather so cool and wet that a crew was pulled out of a wilderness near Yellowstone National Park for fear they'd be trapped by snow.

"Things are real calm," said park spokesman Greg Kroll. "We've had some pretty good precipitation."

Fires also burned in California, Utah, Oregon, Idaho, Montana, Alaska and Washington state as the worst fire season in 30 years continued.

Calmer 5-7 mph winds, lower temperatures and higher humidity were a blessing to California's Gold Rush country, where a fire that has burned 52 square miles since Sunday has destroyed 97 homes and 60 other buildings.

The thousands of residents evacuated Sunday or Monday were allowed to return to their homes.

About 30,000 firefighters were battling 32 fires in eight Western states, said White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater. President Reagan received a briefing Tuesday from a Cabinet-level team that toured Yellowstone.

As of Tuesday, wildfires had charred 4,104,000 acres, an area larger than Connecticut, according to the Boise Interagency Fire Center, which coordinates firefighting in the West.

At Yellowstone, officials kept an eye on the weather. Rain continued falling Tuesday in parts of the oldest national park. Today's forecast held a slight chance of showers, but called for a return of summer temperatures and more wind, said Kroll.

"The fires are still a threat, we are not out of it yet," said fire information officer Sonya Capek.

Firefighters used the break to strengthen lines. Meanwhile, about 550 Marines from Camp Pendleton, Calif., the first of 1,200 sent to reinforce the 7,200 firefighters in the park, arrived in West Yellowstone, Mont.

Fires have blackened 939,270 acres of the 2.2 million-acre park. Blazes in national forests and parks surrounding Yellowstone in Wyoming, Montana and Idaho bring the total to 1.4 million acres.

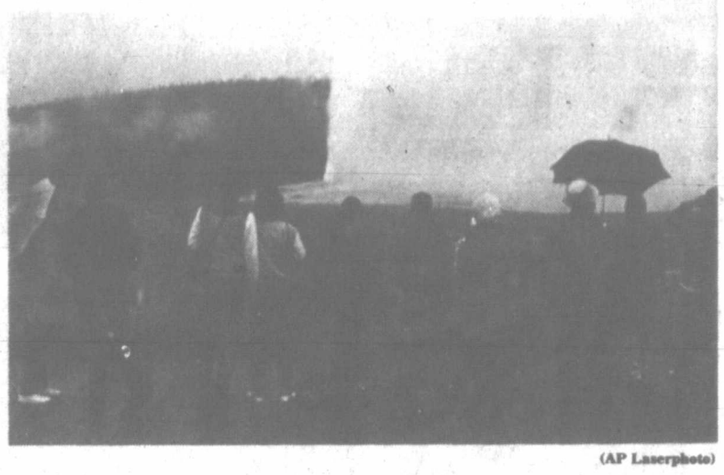

In the Bridger-Teton National Forest southeast of the park, a 38,507-acre fire was declared contained and a 225,500-acre complex of fires was 85 percent contained with full containment expected by Thursday.

North of the park, a 93,000-acre fire that threatened Cooke City and Silver Gate was declared 90 percent contained with complete containment expected by Saturday.

A crew was pulled out of the Absaroka-Beartooth Wilderness north of the park, said fire information officer Ted Coffman.

"We were afraid if we put a crew in there we might not be able to get them out if it snowed," Coffman said.

At Glacier National Park in Montana near the Canadian border, 1,300 firefighters joined by a Canadian "hot-shot" crew had a 31,500-acre blaze 30 percent contained.

Officials prepare to allow residents back in burned towns

By DOUG WILLIS
Associated Press Writer

LAKE WILDWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Thousands returned to their homes as fire officials, heartened by a day of favorable weather, lifted evacuation orders and reopened all major highways where a fire ravaged Gold Rush country.

Calmer winds, lower temperatures and higher humidity Tuesday helped crews as they bulldozed lines around more than 35 percent of the 3-day-old blaze, which gutted nearly 100 homes and threatened as many as 5,000.

"As far as I know, we have allowed everyone who wants to return home to do so," state Department of Forestry spokesman Steve Iverson said Tuesday.

But some of the 8,000 residents evacuated had little or nothing to return to in the charred foothills of the Sierra Nevada northeast of Sacramento.

Rusty Cline, 51, of the tiny community of Rough and Ready was part of a stream of refugees at a high school evacuation center Tuesday, which American Red Cross worker Elizabeth Quirk dubbed "the morning of tears."

"The fire raced in on us. We ran for the car, but it beat us there," said Cline, weeping. "I couldn't get my dog in the car. She was too scared." Her dog's fate was unknown.

Preliminary damage estimates were set at about $9 million, but authorities expected the figure to climb.

Officials also prepared today to begin relieving some of the 2,800 firefighters who have battled the fire, which consumed more than 52 square miles of timber and brush or 33,500 acres since it was started Sunday.

"If it holds through the night, we'll consider releasing some people," said Iverson, the planning chief for the firefighting force.

Full containment of the fire was expected by Thursday night, said Jack Placchi, a U.S. Forestry Service spokesman.

The fire, which apparently was started by a transient burning a piece of toilet paper, was one of several blackening Northern California and the drought-parched West, including fires that have charred nearly 1 million acres of Yellowstone National Park.

The blaze had been whipped by 30-plus mph gusts through Monday. But on Tuesday, winds were a moderate 5 to 7 mph while temperatures were about 10 degrees lower and the humidity level nearly double, Iverson said.

"The fire today cooperated quite a bit," he said.

The one drawback to the weather was an air inversion that forced the grounding of eight aerial tankers, which had dropped more than 2,000 tons of fire retardant on the blaze Sunday and Monday.

The swift-moving blaze had threatened 4,000 to 5,000 structures, but only 97 homes and 60 other buildings had burned.

Iverson said no additional homes were threatened as of Tuesday night. But homes in unburned pockets within fire lines could be threatened if winds shifted or pick up, he added.

"There's no nice clear fire line. It's a checkerboard," he said.

Flames Tuesday also scorched grasslands in the deserted eastern sector of Beale Air Force Base, home for some of the nation's most sophisticated spy planes. But the fire was stopped more than four miles from the edge of the main part of the base, firefighters said.

Reagan agrees to send U.N. past-due U.S. dues payments

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is releasing $188 million in overdue U.S. payments to the United Nations after becoming convinced that the world body has reformed some administrative and budgetary procedures.

At the same time, the White House said Reagan told the State Department to work out "a multi-year" repayment plan involving some $520 million in arrearages that have piled up in recent years because of U.S. dissatisfaction with the way the U.N. was run.

"In announcing these decisions, the president called on the United Nations to continue progress in areas where reform remains incomplete," spokesman Marlin Fitzwater told reporters Tuesday.

"The president reiterated the commitment of the U.S. to assist the U.N. in its reform program as well as in its new peace keeping efforts," he said.

In addition to the roughly $520 million in late dues payments, the United States is in arrears to the tune of $111.8 million in the assessments it is supposed to pay toward the separate U.N. peace keeping budget.

The United States pays 25 percent of the cost of running the United Nations, and 31 percent of the cost of the peace keeping operations.

Reagan is scheduled to visit the United Nations for two days later this month, and will address the General Assembly on Sept. 26. He also will meet with a number of foreign leaders while in New York.

Considering the financial burden the United States shoulders for the United Nations, both the administration and a majority in Congress have concluded there has been too little accountability from the U.N.

But Fitzwater said the U.N. "has made progress" toward streamlining and improving budget-making procedures and cracking down on the hiring of temporary employees for the secretariat. He also said that where U.S. interests are concerned, the "political environment" had improved.

U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar told reporters as he left U.N. headquarters in New York that Reagan's decision "is a very positive development which I very much welcome and which alleviates our difficulties. Of course, it is not the end of our financial problems, but it will alleviate them very much."

Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa, a member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, said, "The Reagan decision appears to signal a new era of cooperation rather than confrontation with the United Nations. The only question is whether Congress has the vision and the fortitude to reverse course and follow the president's lead."

Fitzwater said Reagan "will release $44 million, which was withheld in fiscal 1988, and $144 million which was withheld in fiscal 1989. He will request full funding of the United Nations in fiscal 1990, which amounts to approximately $476 million."

The $44 million will be released immediately, Fitzwater said, while the $144 million that had been earmarked in fiscal 1989, beginning Oct. 1, will be set free after the first of next month.

Fitzwater said Reagan was convinced that the United Nations had made progress in instituting reforms and that the president noted the increasing peace keeping role of the world body in such hot spots as Afghanistan, Namibia and the Persian Gulf.

Senate scraps Medicaid abortion bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate abandoned an effort to expand federal coverage for Medicaid abortions in the face of strong opposition from the House and the White House.

The Senate in July had voted 73-19 to allow federal financing for Medicaid abortions for women who are victims of rape or incest, but it backed down on Tuesday in a bow to political reality.

Under current law, federal spending for Medicaid abortions is permitted only if the procedure is needed to save a woman's life. The House reaffirmed its support for that policy last week, and in the process rejected the Senate's proposal for rape and incest exceptions.

President Reagan had promised to veto a $140 billion spending bill containing all the fiscal 1989 money for the departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education if it came to him with the Senate's abortion provision.

The Senate on Tuesday voted 47-43 to kill a motion insisting on the expanded Medicaid abortion coverage it had approved earlier.

"It's stand up and be counted time," said Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., the chief proponent of expanded Medicaid coverage.

"We're going to see how politically expedient we want to be," added Sen. James Exon, D-Neb., sponsor of the provision adopted by the Senate in July.

Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., chairman of the subcommittee that handled the spending bill, told his colleagues it would be futile to resist the will of the House and White House.

"We're talking about a House that we're 50 votes short in. We're talking about a president that's going to veto the bill. We're talking about a clock that's ticking," Chiles said.

Countered Exon: "Sometimes I think we quiver and retreat all too soon."

It took Chiles two tries to kill Weicker's motion insisting on the Senate abortion position. He lost the first vote 46-44 but prevailed on the second, 47-43.

The outcome was hailed by the National Right-To-Life Committee as "a sharp setback for the pro-abortion movement" and those groups, who label themselves pro-choice, had to agree.

Kate Michelman, executive director of the National Abortion Rights Action League, said "politics played a heavy role" in the vote.

"Arms got twisted so that our friends voted against us," she said. "They deserted us in the interest of pragmatic politics. It's clear they didn't want this bill to be held up."

"We are terribly disappointed," said David Andrews, executive director of the Planned Parenthood Federation of America. "These are clearly cases that cry out for public funding."

Cheesecake has surprise ingredient — sweet potatoes

This elegant cheesecake has a surprise ingredient — sweet potatoes. The cheesecake is garnished with fruit slices.

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens
Magazine Food Editor

Cheesecake is a comer. It's beginning to rival apple pie as an all-American favorite dessert. Sweet potatoes make this golden cheesecake perfect for fall entertaining.

When making any cheesecake, avoid overbeating when you add the eggs; overbeating makes the cheese mixture puff as it bakes, then crack as it cocls. Overbaking also promotes cracking.

To check doneness, gently shake the side of the pan. The center should barely jiggle and appear nearly set. It will firm as the cheesecake cools.

SWEET POTATO CHEESECAKE

2½ cups finely crushed vanilla wafers (about 55 cookies)
½ cup margarine or butter, melted
2 medium sweet potatoes, cooked, peeled and cooled
Two 8-ounce packages cream cheese, softened
2/3 cup sugar
2 eggs
One 16-ounce carton dairy sour cream
¼ cup orange liqueur or orange juice
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon

In a bowl combine crushed wafers and margarine. Press mixture firmly on bottom and 2 inches up sides of an 8-inch springform pan. Chill 1 hour. In a blender container or food processor, process potatoes (should have about 1 cup).

In a large mixer bowl beat together cream cheese and sugar with electric mixer on medium speed until fluffy. Beat in eggs just until combined; do not overbeat. Blend in sweet potatoes, sour cream, liqueur and cinnamon. Pour into prepared crust. Bake in 350-degree oven 55 to 60 minutes or until center appears nearly set. Cool on wire rack 5 to 10 minutes; loosen sides of cheesecake. Cool 30 minutes more; remove sides of pan. Cover and chill 4 to 24 hours. Garnish with orange slices or peel. Makes 10 to 12 servings.

Perk up meals with a fruit-cheese salad entree.

Salad entree features cheese, fruit varieties

By AILEEN CLAIRE
NEA Food Editor

A refreshing cheese-fruit salad is a delicious way to get added potassium and vitamin C, plus other nutrients. Vary the fruits according to what is most available and economical in the supermarket. Use this recipe for a luncheon or dinner entree or a brown-bag surprise.

CHEESE-MELON SALAD

1 medium honeydew or cantaloupe melon
1½ cups cubed Jarlsberg cheese
1 cup cubed tart apple
1 cup thinly sliced celery
½ cup chopped red pepper
2 small sweet gherkins, diced
2 tablespoons lemon juice
Crisp salad greens (romaine, escarole, chicory), torn in small pieces

For dressing:

½ cup sour cream
2 tablespoons lemon or lime juice
1 4-ounce package blue cheese, crumbled
1 tablespoon sugar

Cut melon in half; remove seeds and skin. Cube melon.

Combine melon with cheese, apple, celery, pepper, pickles and lemon juice. Toss to blend. Chill, if desired.

To serve, arrange salad greens on serving platter or salad bowl. Spoon salad onto greens.

For dressing, blend sour cream with lemon or lime juice. Stir in blue cheese and sugar. Serve over fruit salad. This kitchen-tested recipe makes 4 to 6 servings.

FRESH GRAPE AND PLUM COMPOTE

2/3 cup sugar
1 cup white wine or apple juice
1 cup water
4 whole cloves
1 cinnamon stick
1 pound fresh plums (6 medium), halved and pitted
2 cups seedless green grapes

In a large saucepan, mix sugar, wine, water, cloves and cinnamon. Place over low heat and stir constantly until sugar dissolves; simmer 5 minutes. Add plums and simmer 3 minutes longer. Remove from heat.

Add grapes and chill for 2 hours or overnight. This kitchen-tested recipe makes 6 servings.

Reuben-style rolls have chicken, coleslaw filling

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens
Magazine Food Editor

The happy combination of chicken, coleslaw filling and your microwave oven produces this fabulous chicken dinner. Pound the chicken breast pieces evenly so they'll roll easily and cook uniformly.

REUBEN-STYLE CHICKEN ROLLS

2 whole large chicken breasts, skinned, boned and halved lengthwise
4 slices cooked corned beef
½ cup deli coleslaw
Paprika
2 tablespoons finely chopped green onion
1 tablespoon margarine or butter
1 tablespoon all-purpose flour
Dash pepper
½ cup milk
½ cup shredded Monterey Jack cheese with caraway seed (2 ounces)

Rinse chicken; pat dry. Place each chicken breast half, boned side up, between 2 pieces of clear plastic wrap. Pound lightly with flat side of a meat mallet to ¼-inch thickness. Remove plastic wrap.

Place a corned beef slice atop each chicken breast half. Spread coleslaw over corned beef. Fold in sides and roll up each breast half, starting from a narrow end. Secure with wooden toothpicks. Arrange chicken rolls, seam side down, in a microwave-safe 8-inch round baking dish. Sprinkle with paprika. Cover with microwave-safe plastic wrap, folding back corner to allow escape of steam. Cook on 100 percent power (high) 6 to 8 minutes or until chicken is tender and no pink remains, giving the dish a half-turn and rearranging rolls after 4 minutes. Remove toothpicks. Cover to keep warm.

For sauce, in a 2-cup glass measure combine onion and margarine. Cook, uncovered, on high 30 to 40 seconds or until margarine is melted. Stir in flour and pepper. Stir in milk. Cook, uncovered, on high 2 to 3 minutes or until bubbly, stirring after every minute until sauce starts to thicken, then every 30 seconds. Stir in cheese. Cook, uncovered, on high about 30 seconds or until cheese is melted, stirring once. Serve sauce over chicken. Makes 4 servings.

Go nuts over mushroom soup

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens
Magazine Food Editor

I'm nuts about cashews — out of hand, in baked goods, and in this distinctive appetizer soup. It's easy to make, elegant, and impressive for company dinners.

Because they contain considerable fat, cashews and other nuts in unopened packages should be stored in a cool, dry place. Refrigerate opened packages or freeze for longer storage.

Cashews add a nutty taste to traditional mushroom soup.

CASHEW-MUSHROOM SOUP

2 tablespoons margarine or butter
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
1½ cups chicken broth
1 and 1/3 cups light cream or milk
Dash ground nutmeg
Dash pepper
1½ cups sliced fresh mushrooms
1 cup coarsely chopped cashews
Whole cashews and/or sliced mushrooms

In a medium saucepan melt margarine. Stir in flour. Add broth, cream or milk, nutmeg and pepper; cook and stir over medium heat until mixture is thickened and bubbly. Stir in mushrooms and half the chopped cashews; cook and stir 2 minutes more. In blender container or food processor bowl process half the mixture at a time until smooth; return all to pan. Stir in remaining chopped nuts; heat through. Season to taste. Ladle into bowls; garnish each serving with additional cashews and sliced mushrooms, if desired. Makes 6 servings.

Nutrition information per serving: 297 cal., 7 g pro., 13 g carb., 25 g fat, 34 mg chol., 261 mg sodium. U.S. RDA: 14 percent riboflavin, 10 percent niacin, 11 percent iron, 20 percent phosphorous.

Leftovers make rich casserole

By AILEEN CLAIRE
NEA Food Editor

Create a rich chicken casserole using leftover chicken, green beans and cream of mushroom soup and rice. Vary the vegetables you use when you make this microwave special.

Shorten time even more by preparing a larger quantity of rice than you need for another recipe; measure the amount needed and freeze for use in this recipe. Cooked rice also will keep in the refrigerator for three to four days.

DELUXE CHICKEN CASSEROLE

2 cups cooked rice (cooked in chicken bouillon)
2 cups cooked chicken chunks
1 16-ounce can French-style green beans, drained
½ cup each: chopped red sweet pepper and chopped onions, steamed
½ teaspoon ground black pepper
1 10¾-ounce can condensed cream of mushroom soup
½ cup chicken broth

Microwave method: Combine all ingredients in buttered 2-quart microwave-proof baking dish. Cover and cook on High for 5 minutes, or until hot and bubbly. Let stand 5 minutes. This kitchen-tested recipe makes 4 servings.

Conventional method: Combine all ingredients in buttered 2-quart baking dish. Bake at 350 degrees for 20 to 25 minutes, or until hot and bubbly.

Chill layered fruit salad overnight

Layer fruit, instead of vegetables, with lettuce and give favorite layered salad a brand new flavor.

OVERNIGHT LAYERED FRUIT SALAD

One 8¼-ounce can crushed pineapple
6 cups torn salad greens
One 6-ounce package mixed dried fruit bits
¾ cup thinly sliced celery
One 11-ounce can mandarin orange sections, drained
½ cup orange yogurt
¼ teaspoon curry powder
1 medium banana, sliced
¼ cup coarsely chopped cashews

Drain pineapple, reserving ¼ cup juice; set aside. In the bottom of a large bowl place half the greens. Layer in the following order: dried fruit bits, celery, orange sections, remaining greens and pineapple.

For dressing, in a small bowl combine reserved pineapple juice, orange yogurt and curry powder. Spread evenly over top of salad, sealing dressing to side of bowl. Cover tightly with clear plastic wrap. Chill up to 24 hours. Before serving, arrange sliced banana on top of salad. Sprinkle with chopped cashews. Serve immediately. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

'Tummy tickler' may help blind people see

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Researchers at Ohio State University are tickling the tummies of blind people in an experiment to help them see.

Research over the past five years is aimed at developing a miniature video camera system that can convert a picture into mechanical vibrations felt on the abdomen of the blind.

If they can refine the technique, the system will change a picture from the camera into electrical impulses that mechanically "draw" a picture on the abdomen, much like tracing a figure on the skin with a finger.

The tiny camera — about the size of a walnut — could be mounted on a cane or on the side of a pair of glasses, allowing a sight-impaired person to "see" what is in front of him, said the project's director, Herman Weed, a professor of electrical engineering and preventive medicine.

Other researchers have tried to transmit information to the visually handicapped through other senses, Weed said. One aid, a scanning device about the size of a pen, can be swept across a line of type.

For each different letter it sees, the device plays a distinct tone, and the user learns the tones associated with each letter, he said.

"We chose to use the skin, and chose to vibrate the skin mechanically," Weed said. That's because the brain already has spatial relationships coded within it — for example, by touching corresponding areas on the abdomen, a person would know whether an object is to the right or left of something else, he said.

People using the device still will have to decode the images transmitted onto skin, Weed said, but "we hope by going to the skin we could make the learning easier."

Because of the complexity of the research, the device still is in its early stages.

A second-generation prototype might be ready for testing in a month or two, Weed said. A commercially available version, which would have to be developed by private industry because of the cost, is several years away, he said.

The present model consists of the miniature video camera, a panel of 256 tiny mechanical vibrators that can be strapped around the abdomen, and a microprocessor that coordinates the two.

The "pictures" it produces are abstract. A Venetian blind, for example, would be felt as a series of jagged lines; displayed on a computer screen, the device's image of the Venetian blind resembles parallel rows of steps.

"We're using the equivalent of very poor film ... we've got a Coke bottle for a lens," Weed said.

More work will be required to make the device small enough to be portable and to be worn unobtrusively. Now, its electronics take up a table top.

The vibrating pad is clumsy and uses a lot of energy. At two pounds, it also is too heavy, Weed said.

A major problem yet to be overcome is depth perception. Pointing to a doorway down the hall, Weed said a blind person using the device could not know whether it was a doorway 4 feet tall up close or 7 feet tall far away.

Bus drivers learn to deal with 'Mama's little darlings'

PRINGLE, Pa. (AP) — Hands on the large wheel, school bus driving neophyte Bette Dunn looked over her shoulder and kiddingly asked, "All the animals in their seats?"

After less than an hour of on-the-parking-lot training, the Shickshinny woman had learned the affectionate term some bus drivers use to refer to the passengers they transport daily.

"It's the joke of the trade," explained instructor and veteran bus driver John Szcucki, of Edwardsville. "Sometimes we call them Mama's little darlings."

But Dunn and her dozen or so fellow students learned a lot more than driver jargon as they took classes at Luzerne Intermediate Unit 18 in Kingston this summer.

Bus maintenance, controlling rowdy children, rules of the road and using a fire extinguisher were just some of the topics covered in the course for both beginners and veterans.

New drivers are required to take 20 hours of training, while current drivers must enroll in 10-hour refresher sessions every four years.

On a Wednesday night, a few beginners slid behind the wheel for the first time as the class moved its base from the classroom to a nearby parking lot.

In a regulation 48-passenger school bus and two donated smaller vehicles, drivers circled a concrete barrier the length of a small city block, using their amber flashing lights and stopping at an exit.

Drivers pretended the blue-and-yellow trash can near the exit walk of the school was a student.

Instructor Bonnie Brown reminded beginners to stop the bus before the entrance door reached the child.

"By the time you get this door to the child, your front wheels could have run him down," she said. "That's why we never do convenience. We make him walk to us."

Many of the lessons were geared toward student control. Drivers must "maintain order" through their rearview mirror, Szcucki advised. When students curse, fight or smoke, drivers must be firm with them.

"You can't threaten them without doing it," he said. "You must follow through."

He recalled one boy who was difficult to quell. After the boy had been suspended and given numerous warnings, Szcucki set the final rule.

"I'm not going to bother turning you into the office anymore," he told the youth. "I'm going to put you right through the roof of the bus."

Szcucki never had to live up to his word — from then on, the boy behaved.

Kevin O'Connor, LIU assistant executive director and instructor coordinator of the class, stressed that drivers should avoid arguing and repeat instructions to students until they listen.

"We tell (drivers) to address students by their first names so they know they are responsible for their actions," O'Connor said.

Talk of disruptive students didn't alarm new drivers like Carol Davis, 32, of Center Moreland.

"I've been around kids for more than 16 years," she said, referring to her children, "so I'm pretty used to them."

Hats off to husbands who aid career wives

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Three cheers for Wayne Gretzky, the world's No. 1 hockey star! He left the Edmonton Oilers to join the Los Angeles Kings because his bride's movie career would be jeopardized if she left Hollywood for Canada.

Gretzky's move has special significance for me because my husband did the same thing for me 16 years ago, when I was an energetic young executive employed by a large national organization with offices in every major city in the country. I was offered a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity that would necessitate moving from Los Angeles to New York. My husband was doing well at the time with a California law firm. I didn't even have to ask him. He offered to move to New York to further my business career! The word "wimp" was not even in the language then, but he was called "weak," and a few other things that are not printable.

As it turned out, it was a great move for both of us. I'm sure this is not so unusual today, but 16 years ago, it took a real man to subordinate his career to his wife's.

MARILYN IN N.Y.C.

DEAR MARILYN: Orchids to your husband. Coincidentally, 16 years ago another young lawyer, James Schroeder, uprooted himself (from Denver) to follow his wife to Washington, D.C., when she was elected to the U.S. House of Representatives. It also turned out to be a great move for both of them. I agree, it takes a strong, unselfish man to put his wife's career ahead of his own. Lucky Patricia Schroeder!

DEAR ABBY: I am a widow (age 70) living alone in a remote part of Florida. I recently made a trip to Germany, my native country, after many years. Naturally, I visited relatives and friends. I stayed one week with a close girlhood friend — the mother of three grown children. She was very good to me and knows that she is welcome here at any time.

Well, she has written to tell me that her 25-year-old unmarried son, whom I met for just a few minutes, is coming to America to stay for several months. She informed me that she had given him my address and phone number, and I should "expect" him.

Abby, I know that he was well-raised, but I am old-fashioned and the thought of having this young man as a guest for several months is not pleasing to me.

What shall I do?

OLD-FASHIONED

DEAR OLD-FASHIONED: I think you should write to this "close girlhood friend" and tell her quite honestly what you have told me, that you would not be comfortable having her son stay with you for several months. Offer to put him up for a week until he can make other arrangements.

Be alert in the year ahead for solid investments or side ventures that could improve your financial position. Possibilities for finding something good look encouraging.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If a little mending is required in a relationship with someone you love, this is a good day to do it. Don't wait for the other party to make the overtures. Trying to patch up a broken romance? The Astro-Graph Matchmaker can help you understand what to do to make the relationship work. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Partnership arrangements you establish at this time are seeded with promise. The results of the collaborations should please all parties.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Determination, coupled with optimism, are the essential ingredients required for success today, especially where your career is concerned. Go in as if you've already won.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If you have something of importance to tackle today, treat it like a game rather than an obstacle. Things will be smoother by not taking yourself or events too seriously.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Things are moving in your favor and a successful conclusion to a testy matter is in the offing. This is not a time to be a quitter.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) The secret to constructing a successful agreement is to want the same for the other guy that you want for yourself. Fairness is the binding agent.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) A situation that is presently generating income for you still can be improved upon. The foundation is already laid, so build upon what you've begun.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) In your social involvements today, be a take-charge person. Your way of doing things will appeal to others — they won't mind you chairing the show.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Be ambitious today but not for self-aggrandizement. Focus your efforts to benefit those you love. This is where you will find your real joy.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If you are presently unattached, there's a possibility that an existing friendship could soon turn into something more romantic. Today might mark the beginning.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Success could come to you now in an area where you previously met rejection. This will not be due to a change in condition, but a change in attitude.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your optimistic and energetic personality will make you a dominating force in your involvements with others today. Objectives you establish can be achieved.

Close call at Olympics

SEOUL, South Korea (AP)— The Olympic Games showed signs of fulfilling the ancient dream of being a catalyst to friendship among nations, but the Games' traditional torchbearer also became a target of firebombs from student radicals.

As many as 50 firebombs were hurled at a runner carrying the torch today in the southern outskirts of Seoul, witnesses reported. Police said some of the flaming missiles landed about 10 yards away, but the runner kept up his pace and no one was hurt.

South Korean Foreign Minister Choi Kwang-soo said, meanwhile, that new relations with Hungary, borne of the Olympics, may be a breakthrough to ties with the Soviet bloc.

"We hope this will also provide us a momentum for a better relationship with North Korea," Choi said of the opening of relations with communist Hungary announced a day earlier.

Seoul was spinning with activity leading up to Saturday's opening of the Games. Athletes put in their final training, officials were setting up a high-tech drug center, and four cities made final bids for the 1994 Winter Games.

Defending diving gold medalist Greg Louganis worried about failure, but not losing. Gary Knapp, captain of the U.S. yachting team, felt sore and sorry after a bicycle accident knocked him out of the Games with a separated shoulder.

Before the victories and defeats, however, came the early evidence that these Games might serve a higher purpose, as the Greeks intended more than 2,700 years ago when the Olympics began.

Three days before 160 countries send athletes to the opening ceremonies, South Korea celebrated an agreement to open diplomatic relations with Hungary.

"The exchange of missions will be a major breakthrough in our overall relationships with East-bloc countries," said Choi.

Another sign of new amity was the first landing of a Soviet civilian plane in Seoul since the Korean peninsula was divided 40 years ago, and a Korean Airlines plane crossing Soviet air space for the first time since KAL 007 was shot down on Sept. 1, 1983.

The attack on the Olympic torchbearer came as he ran past Kyungwon University. Police had blocked the university's main gate in anticipation of trouble, but students tossed the firebombs ovear the school wall.

Astros falter in the clutch against Reds

By JOE KAY
AP Sports Writer

..CINCINNATI (AP) — The Houston Astros' failure to hit in the clutch cost them another chance at a clutch win.

The Astros managed just three singles off Cincinnati starter Jose Rijo, then left five baserunners stranded in the last two innings Tuesday night against the Reds' bullpen. The result was a 5-2 Cincinnati victory that left the Astros adrift in second place in the National League West.

Mike Scott, 13-7, allowed just two runs over six innings, but the Astros' inability to produce in the late innings left him with the loss.

"You've got to score more than two runs to beat this ballclub," Astros manager Hal Lanier said. "I've been saying it for a long time — you can't win unless you score, I don't care who you have on the mound."

The Astros' offense has struggled the last six weeks, leaving their starters with little to show for good performances. Scott hasn't won since Aug. 13, losing four of his last six starts despite giving up just 13 runs.

"We haven't been scoring runs," he said. "You go out and give up two runs, a lot of times you're going to win. Tonight it wasn't good enough.

"Whether we were out-pitched or out-hit, we were outscored. That's the bottom line."

Scott was overshadowed Tuesday night by Rijo, 13-8, who won for the second time in two starts since coming off the disabled list Sept. 8. He has allowed just five hits in 13 scoreless innings since recovering from the tendinitis in his right elbow that disabled him Aug. 18.

"I'm very pleased with the way I've been throwing," Rijo said. "I haven't given up a run yet. I'm very surprised and excited."

Rijo raised his record against the Astros this season to 5-1 in two starts and five relief apperances. He did it with a fastball that was about 5 mph slower than before the elbow problems.

"Most of the time when I'm not feeling my best I have good control and better results," he said.

He had good results through seven innings, as he turned a 5-0 lead over to the usually reliable bullpen. But Rob Murphy struggled in the eighth, allowing a walk and three hits, including a two-out RBI single by Glenn Davis. John Franco came on to get pinch-hitter Ken Caminiti to ground out softly with the bases loaded to end the threat.

The Astros got another run in the ninth on a two-out single by Kevin Bass, but Franco got Davis to fly out with runners on first and third to end the threat and earn his 33rd save in 35 chances.

"We had our chances, but they came with two outs," Lanier said.

The Astros also gave the Reds some extra chances.

Eric Davis singled home a run in the first for his 20th game-winning RBI, leading the National League. Jeff Reed hit his second NL homer and his first of the season in the second for a 2-0 lead.

Reliever Larry Andersen helped the Reds score three more in the seventh for what turned out to be the winning margin. He walked Reed and threw wildly to first on Ron Oester's sacrifice bunt, putting two runners in scoring position. Dave Collins and Barry Larkin followed with RBI singles, and Kal Daniels' infield single off reliever Dave Meads capped the rally.

"That inning when they got the three runs didn't put the game out of reach, but it put it longer out of reach," Lanier said. "You might be able to come back from two runs down. Five runs down, you've got a long hill to climb."

Red Sox increase AL East lead

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

Even in a season of discontent, Jim Rice still finds moments of solace. Enough of them might make him and the Boston Red Sox very happy.

Rice, relegated to a role as part-time designated hitter, connected for his eighth career grand slam Tuesday night as the Red Sox beat Baltimore 6-4 and increased their lead in the American League East.

"I'm ready to play any day, but if I'm not in the lineup I can't do anything about it," Rice said after starting for just the fourth time in 14 games. "My attitude has been the same for 14 years. I'm not going to change."

"When I'm called upon, I want to go up there and do my job. If I'm not called upon, I don't have anything to worry about."

Rice, suspended earlier this season after a run-in with Manager Joe Morgan, is batting .270 with 12 home runs and 61 runs batted in.

The Red Sox moved 4½ games ahead of Detroit, which lost to Toronto 9-1. New York also is 4½ behind after beating Cleveland 5-4. Milwaukee stayed 5½ back by defeating Chicago 4-0.

In other AL games, Oakland held off Texas 2-1, Minnesota rallied past Seattle 2-1 and Kansas City downed California 4-3.

Rice spoiled the major league debut of Pete Harnisch, who was drafted by the Orioles in June 1987.

Harnisch struck out Rice on three pitches in the second inning, but Rice got his revenge when he came to the plate with the bases loaded in the fourth.

Rice sent a 2-2 pitch high off the light tower above the wall in left-center field for his 376th career home run.

Lady Harvesters fall to Dumas

Pampa dropped its District 1-4A volleyball opener to Dumas 5-15, 10-15 Tuesday night at the Pampa Middle School gym.

The Lady Harvesters fell to 7-10 overall and 0-1 in district play.

"We had the jitters that first game and just weren't ready to play. Our transition game just wasn't very good," said Pampa coach Mike Lopez.

The Lady Harvesters looked much better the second game and at one point were leading by 9-4.

"We showed good hustle, but we just weren't able to maintain that lead," added Lopez.

Blocks and spikes by Yolanda Brown helped give Pampa the lead in the second game.

"Our setting isn't what I'd like it to be at this time, but with some hard work we're going to get there," added Lopez.

Pampa hosts Levelland at 2 p.m. Saturday in more district action in the middle school gym.

Levelland also opened its district season last night by defeating Lubbock Estacado 4-15, 15-12, 15-8.

In other district matches last night, Borger defeated Randall 15-3, 15-4 and Hereford won over Lubbock Dunbar 15-1, 15-1.

Pampa netters bow to Sandies

Pampa lost to Amarillo High 12-6 in tennis matches Tuesday at the high school courts.

"Both teams started out at a very sluggish pace and we never could quite recover from that start," said Pampa coach Jay Barrett.

Pampa won the girls' division 5-4 but won only one match in the boys' division.

"This was a very close contest, closer than a 12-6 score might suggest. Three or four matches could have gone either way," added Barrett. "They just didn't go our way this time."

FROM THE NOTEPAD: Did you ever see five hours of more brilliant tennis than the US Open championship last Sunday. Thanks to CBS-TV, a network known to sometimes abandon sports viewers before an event is completed, for staying with this one all the way...The caller was correct in saying the scores of the Pampa-Lawton football games in 1970 and 1971 were identical 14-9 finals, each school winning one, unlike a report on the sports pages of this paper recently-...Coach ROBERT MCPHERSON'S UNC-Wilmington Seahawk basketballers will face opponents from 11 different conferences this season. The former Harvester basketball coach for seven seasons is starting his third campaign with the North Carolina Division I entry...It was great to see PHS again field full boys and girls cross country teams last weekend at Borger. That has not been the case in recent seasons.

Coach ODUS MITCHELL was unable to attend the 50th reunion of the PHS Class of '38 last weekend, but football team co-captain J.W. GRAHAM did. "They had a kid named Kelly who was too tall for us to cover," the Harvester quarterback/defensive back said in explaining the 6-0 defeat by the Sandies that season, the only conference loss...The Minnesota Twins have a fine prospect in the farm system, right-handed pitcher TROY NIVENS, nephew of ELMER FITE of Pampa. Son of TERESA CAMPBELL WHITE, who attended the '38 reunion, Nivens was the Twins' first-round pick in the 1986 winter draft...Also among the returnees was band director WINSTON SAVAGE, who wrote the words and music to "March Green and Gold", but after 50 years couldn't remember the music! Does any former band member have a copy?..."Money is money. It's just a piece of paper", said 16-year old rising tennis star MICHAEL CHANG in response to Jimmy Conners' question about whether today's teenage players play for the love of the game or the money. Chang has won more than $90,000 on the tour this year, starting with a victory last winter in Amarillo.

Another winner recently, this time in golf, was DEWITT WEAVER III, who captured the Michelob Georgia Open Golf Championship at Savannah. His grandad, Dewitt the senior, was former head football coach at Texas Tech and later Missouri Valley Conference commissioner. Dewitt Jr., is also an outstanding golfer who tried the PGA tour...You don't have to worry about the draft if you can remember when our various bodies of government....city, school,county, state and national....were a servant of the people with limited powers and not our master with virtually unlimited power. And wasn't the issue of keeping government from having that power the reason a draft was needed-?...SUSAN ZINN, who recently was named assisstant commissioner of the Southwest Conference after five years with the University Interscholastic League, coached her Nebraska HS tennis teams to a 65-2 record in six years at Omaha, and built a 72-6 mark with her swim squads...Everytime I see NFLer BILLY RAY SMITH do that TV spot for the United Way I am reminded that he was one of the finest high school players I ever saw as he performed for Plano's Wildcats-...KAREN PHELPS, daughter of Notre Dame Coach Digger, is studying for a career in sports broadcasting. Texas must be out of step with the nation in extra-curricular sports. The National Sporting Goods Association reports that among America's youth ages 7-17, the top participation sport is basketball, followed in order by volleyball, baseball, soccer, softball and football. The Texas UIL doesn't even offer boys volleyball, soccer or softball, while most schools give only token support to baseball, opting instead to spend all the bucks and coaching expertise for non-lifetime sport of football...Can you name the seven major league managers who have already been sacked this season?...NASA has designed a water vest which major league umpires are using in an effort to beat the heat while calling balls and strikes...If you haven't received them by now, you won't get them. 194,000 tickets were requested for the 1989 Final Four at the Seattle Kingdome, and mailings already have gone out to the lucky winners...The second major league All-Star Game to be played outside the United States will take place when the 1991 game goes to Toronto's Skydome, expected to have a retractable roof by then. Canadian tests physical Spearman squad

By SONNY BOHANAN
Sports Writer

CANADIAN at SPEARMAN
Friday, 8 p.m.

In 1988, it's going to be a battle for Spearman's opponents every time the Lynx step onto the field.

This week, the Canadian Wildcats get the nod in what will undoubtedly be a physically brutal game. Spearman features both offensive and defensive lines in excess of 200 pounds per player on the average.

In two games, the Lynx have outscored their opponents 101 to seven, shutting out Shamrock 48-0 in the season opener and pounding Boys Ranch 53-7 last week.

The Spearman offense boasts a running back tandem made up of Shawn Cook and Haskell Garrett. Cook scored four TDs against Boys Ranch, bringing his two-game total to seven. Garrett, who averaged 22 yards per carry against Shamrock, averaged 22.8 against Boys Ranch, rushing for 209 yards and two touchdowns on nine tries.

It's no surprise that the Wildcats are concentrating on putting a stop to these two powerhouses. "What we've worked on this week is defense, and we will be every day," said Canadian coach Paul Wilson. "They're huge and experienced, and they bust some holes for those running backs."

As far as Wilson is concerned, the Lynx have not yet been put to the test this season. "They've never had to do much to win," he said. "We know their bread and butter stuff, because they haven't had to show anything else. But they haven't resorted to passing much, and they probalby won't until somebody half-heartedly tries to stop their running game.

"And that could be the worst thing a man could do, because they might really bomb you then."

The Wildcats, 1-1 on the season, are coming off a rousing 26-18 defeat of Sanford Fritch following their 27-6 loss to White Deer in the opener.

And between QB Shane Lloyd and end Scott Walker, Canadian has established a respectable passing game. Last week Lloyd completed nine of 22 for 107 yards. Walker came down with five of them for 75 yards and one TD.

Running back Larry Smith, who rushed for 107 yards on 12 carries and two touchdowns, should keep the Spearman defenders busy if the Canadian line can keep the Lynx heavyweights under control.

But again, the real issue is containing the Spearman drive. "We've got to keep the ball away from their offense," Wilson said. "We're gonna have to play one whale of a ball game to keep from embarrassing ourselves.

"But we need to play some tough teams, and we're gonna be ready. Our philosophy is, we've got them, so we might as well just play them and not cry about it."

WHEELER at MEMPHIS
Friday 8 p.m.

The defending Class A state champs face their toughest opponents thus far in the season when they meet the Memphis Cyclones Friday night.

Wheeler enters the contest, its third against a District 2-AA opponent, with a 2-0 record following defeats of Clarendon and Shamrock.

The Cyclones opened the season with a 33-0 shellacking of Chillicothe, but were stung by Childress 28-12 last week. While defeating Wheeler is always a formidable task, Memphis has caught the Mustangs at a vulnerable time.

During the game against Shamrock, Wheeler lost Shane Guest, its top running back, when two of his ribs were broken. The Mustangs are hastening to realign the offense in time to fend off the Cyclones and keep the winning streak intact, a job Wheeler coach Ronnie Karcher sees as the biggest challenge Wheeler has faced at this point in the season.

"Memphis is looking pretty tough to me," Karcher said, "and they'll be all we want this week. We'll have to play better than we have the past two weeks to stay on the field with them.

"Offensively, we're trying to get some backs in there to replace Shane (Guest)."

Karcher is knocking around a couple of different ideas for a new backfield. One has sophomore Jason Wood replacing Shawn Bradstreet at quarterback so that Bradstreet can fill in at running back, leaving the full back position for Michael Kenney, who came in for Guest last week and gained 45 yards on 17 carries in the second half.

And according to Karcher, this offense gives the Mustangs a chance to try out a new quarterback. "We need two different ways to go anyway," he said, "and Jason Wood needs to get some experience."

Another option would bring Ronnie Hungate in at full back, moving Michael Kenney to running back and leaving Bradstreet as the man-under.

In the Memphis camp, quarterback Jeff Richardson, a potential All-Stater, will head up the veer offense employed by new head coach Jack Needham. Richardson's 10.8 speed in the 100 makes him a threat at anytime and from anywhere.

His job will be to get past the Wheeler defense, led by Justin Hughes, an outstanding defensive performer last week, as well as Chad Bentley and Kyle Sword, who each tallied more than 10 tackles apiece against Shamrock.

Although it is unlikely that Memphis can stifle Wheeler's winning streak, the Mustangs have a fight on their hands this Friday.

WHITE DEER at CLARENDON
Friday, 8 p.m.

Like Wheeler, White Deer is matched with its third straight Class AA nondistrict foe.

The Broncos, 0-2 on the season and outscored 60-27 by their opponents, are recovering from a 21-12 loss to Sunray last week. They dropped their opener to Wheeler 48-6 two weeks ago.

White Deer brings two consecutive victories to Clarendon, including a 19-0 shutout of West Texas High and a 27-6 romp over Canadian.

And while the Broncos lack the size and speed they've known in the past, White Deer coach Windy Williams knows better than to count Clarendon out.

"They've got the potential to be a good football team, if they'll just play together," Williams said. "Kids are kids, and they've got some pride. They may come out after us.

"No matter what happens we've got to keep our minds on our own goals and get after it. If they get after us, it will be a good fotball game. If they don't, we're just gonna do what we can to get better."

In an effort to beef up its backfield, Clarendon has moved a couple of linemen to running back positions this season. Mike Moore (6-1, 185), an offensive tackle in 1987, and Kory Pounds (6-1, 180), a former guard, will both set up behind the line for the Broncos.

Others to watch for on the Clarendon squad are Michael Adams and Brook Grisham, both of whom scored touchdowns against Sunray last Friday.

As for White Deer, the Bucks are literally loaded in the offensive backfield. Between Bryan Waitman, Tim Davis, Bart Thomas, Mark Walden and Jason Marlar, White Deer can strike from all points of the compass.

The multiple-threat running game coupled with a bruising offensive line — featuring Brady Burns, Lee Barrett, Chris Luster, T.W. Lowe, Jeff Sullivan, Darren Hudson and Tommy Martinez — makes the Bucks virtually unstoppable.

At least for this week. The first real test for White Deer should come next week against Spearman.

Graves gymnasts qualify

Members of the Madeline Graves School of Gymnastics held its first qualifying meet of the year recently in Amarillo.

Four Pampa gymnasts — Traci Baumgardner, Mechelle Abbott, Jamie Henwood and Haley Going — qualified for the district championships.

Traci, competing in the 15 and over Class Three Experienced Division, placed second in bars, third on vault, third on beam, third on floor, and third all around.

Mechelle, competing in the 9-11 Class Three Novice Division, was first on bars, second on vault, second on beam, fifth on floor and first, all-around.

Haley in the 9-11 Class Four Experienced Division was eighth on bars, eighth on beam, tenth on floor, and tied for seventh all-around.

Jamie in the 9-11 Class Four Novice Division was seventh on bars, fourth on vault, second on beam, fifth on floor and first in all-around.

In the Novice Eight and Under Class Four Division, Mandy Parks was fourth on bars, seventh on vault, eighth on beam, and tenth in all-around. She missed qualifying for district by .65.

In the 9-11 Novice Class Four Division, Natalie Riley was eighth on vault. Andrea Philip and Andy Bullard placed with all-around scores of 23.35 and 20.44 scores respectively.

Amy Watson was fifth on vault, ninth on floor and missed qualifying for district by .15 in the 9-11 Experienced Class Four Division.

Jeanne Brown in the 12-year-old Experienced Class Four Division placed seventh on bars, fourth on vault, eighth on beam, ninth on floor and eight in all-around.

There were 147 gymnasts entered in the meet.

The Madeline Graves gymnasts are entered in a meet Sept. 24 in San Angelo.

Dust Devils qualify

The Pampa Dust Devils qualified for the district gymnastics championships after competing in a District One qualifying meet held recently in Amarillo.

The district championships will be held Oct. 22 in Odessa.

An all-around score of 30 qualified the gymnasts for Class Three competition while a 28 qualified for Class Four.

In the 9-11 age group, Jamie Smith was fourth in beam, third in bars and floor. She was third with an all-around score of 32.30.

In the 12-14 age group, Kari Bertram placed sixth in vault, first on bars and beam, fourth on floor, and second all-around with a score of 34.80. Ashley Childress was ninth in vault, second in beam, fifth on floor and sixth in all-around at 33.15. Carrie Whinery placed ninth on vault, eight on bars, fourth on beam and had an all-around score of 32.90.

Class Four gymnasts competing for the first time in a district meet were Katy Cavalier, ninth on beam, first on floor and tenth, all-around; Brandi Lenderman, ninth on floor, Danica Weeks, eighth on floor, and Tiffany Lowe also participated in the 9-11 age group.

The Dust Devils will compete in San Angelo Sept. 24 at the second district qualifying meet and the team will be accompanied by coaches Fred and Lola Hughes.

Bad weather brings pope to unscheduled stop in South Africa

By DAVID CRARY
Associated Press Writer

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Pope John Paul II, who had planned to bypass South Africa on his tour of the region, landed at Johannesburg today after bad weather diverted his flight to Lesotho.

Foreign Minister R.F. Botha greeted the pope on the steps leading from the plane, and they went together into the terminal at Jan Smuts Airport.

The pope, an outspoken critic of South Africa's racial segregation policies, did not kiss the ground, as he customarily does the first time he visits a country.

The Foreign Affairs Department said the plane would refuel and then a decision would be made whether to try again to fly to Lesotho, a mountain kingdom completely surrounded by South Africa.

Lesotho was to be the third stop on a 10-day trip that has taken the pontiff to Zimbabwe and Botswana.

He also plans stops in Swaziland and Mozambique.

The Vatican had said South Africa's Catholic bishops has advised John Paul that this was not an appropriate time for him to visit South Africa.

The pope has said he would like to visit South Africa at some point, but the country was not mentioned when the Vatican announced this week that John Paul would go to Tanzania and Madagascar on another African tour next year.

The pope, an outspoken critic of South Africa's racial segregation policies, did not kiss the ground.

Hundreds of thousands of South Africans had been expected to cross into Lesotho to see the pope during his scheduled 48-hour visit to the kingdom.

South Africans were deeply involved in logistical arrangements, and today units of the South African police were sent there on standby in response to the hijacking of a busload of pilgrims.

South Africa's Catholic bishops have been active in the anti-apartheid movement, particularly in the period since 17 major black opposition groups were banned in February.

The government has blamed the bishops for the pope's decision to omit South Africa from his official itinerary, and pro-government media have claimed many Catholics are angry at their leaders.

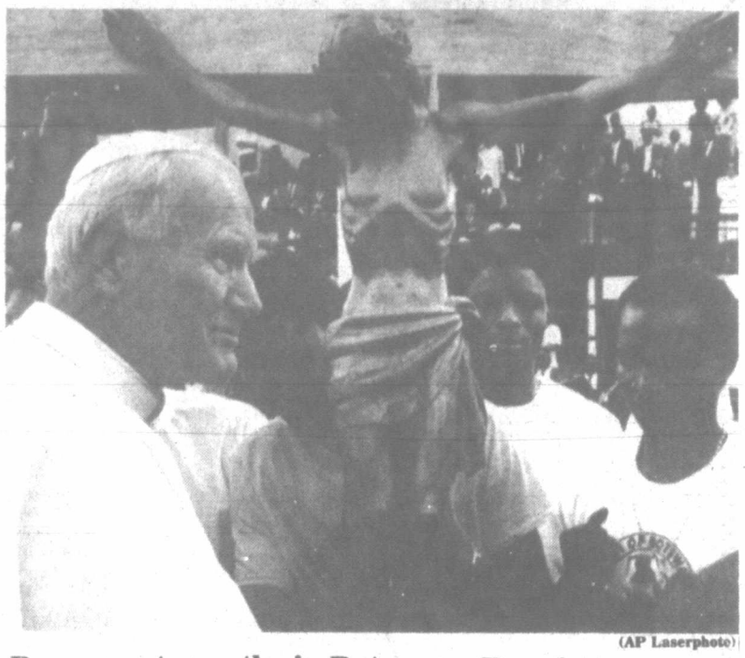

Pro-government media also tried to depict the pope as having repudiated Anglican Archbishop Desmond Tutu, South Africa's best-known anti-apartheid cleric.

This interpretation was based on the pope's unqualified denunication of political violence and reservations about sanctions and election boycotts. Tutu advocates sanctions and is urging a boycott of upcoming, segregated municipal elections.

He has repeatedly condemned violence but says he understands how some South African blacks feel they have no other alternative in seeking to end white-minority domination.

Under apartheid, South Africa's 26 million blacks have no vote in national affairs, and its 5 million whites control the economy and maintain separate districts, schools and health services.

Tutu's spokesman, John Allen, said there are no fundamental differences between the pope and the Anglican archbishop, who met earlier this year at the Vatican.

Hamadi claims witnesses are far from truth

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Mohammed Ali Hamadi today accused witnesses at his trial of failing to tell the truth a day after they testified that Hamadi gloated over the killing of an American passenger during the hijacking of a TWA jet.

Hamadi, a Lebanese Shiite Moslem, is accused of murder and air piracy in the June 1985 hijacking. U.S. Navy diver Robert Stethem was killed and 39 Americans were held captive for 17 days.

"The testimony very often deviates far from the truth," Hamadi told the court today.

On Tuesday, flight engineer Benjamin Zimmermann described how Hamadi pointed with pride to bloodstains of the murdered U.S. hostage and earlier, pilot John Testrake identified Hamadi as the hijacker who shot Stethem to death and said he was the leader of the operation.

Hamadi said today: "I was not the leader of the commando."

The defendant did not say anything about testimony that he had gloated over the killing of Stethem.

He also did not say anything about who killed Stethem. However, In testimony Aug. 9, he vehemently denied that he had shot Stethem.

Hamadi told the court today that the hand grenades the two hijackers had brought on board had been deactivated and the explosive material taken out.

"We didn't get on board to blow up the plane in mid-air," Hamadi told the court. He spoke in Arabic, and his testimony was translated into German by an interpreter.

On Tuesday, Zimmermann described how he and Hamadi, who has acknowleged taking part in the hijacking, made a walk-around inspection of the aircraft in Algiers, where it had been flown after Stethem was killed in Beirut.

"When we went around the front, the nose of the airplane, Mr. Hamadi joyfully pointed to the (dried) blood running down the door. And with the pistol he pointed — he indicated — he was very proud of this gun and of him having caused this," Zimmermann told the court.

After Stethem was shot, his body was thrown onto the runway in Beirut before the flight to Algiers. In previous testimony, Flight 847 pilot John Testrake identified Hamadi as Stethem's killer.

Zimmermann also testified he was kicked and pistol-whipped during the hijacking.

Zimmermann said the hijackers took turns in the beatings, but Hamadi was the more methodical, with the other hijacker more impulsive and excitable.

He said the second air pirate once "attempted to jump up and kick the co-pilot with a grenade in his hand."

"But somehow he got tangled up in the seat, and then the jumping stopped."

Zimmermann also described the events that led up to Stethem's shooting.

He said that during excited negotiations between the hijackers and the control tower in Beirut, Hamadi suddenly shouted "Get up! Get up!" to Stethem, who lay bound and beaten just outside the cockpit door.

Zimmermann said the hijackers then left the cockpit.

"I heard a pop. I heard someone exhale very loudly. I heard it above the engine noises. The shock of that noise was added to by the co-pilot on the radio stating that we needed fuel because they were killing passengers," Zimmermann told the court.
