USAF pulling out

MANILA, Philippines — The United States Air Force announced on Thursday that it would evacuate more than half of its uniformed personnel in the Philippines because of an erupting volcano that has coated a major American air base in ash, making it unusable.

The pullout of 4,500 of the 7,000 active-duty workers assigned to Clark Air Base would be the first major withdrawal of American military personnel from the Philippines since Mount Pinatubo unleashed a series of deadly eruptions last week. The evacuation of their families was begun last week, and is almost complete.

Clark — now buried under a carpet of volcanic ash that varies from six inches to a foot deep — is 10 miles east of the volcano.

American officials in Washington and Manila have suggested that Clark may be abandoned because of unacceptably high reconstruction costs.

"I'd give you even odds that the Air Force will never reopen Clark," an American official said on Thursday.

BONN, Germany — Lawmakers voted Thursday to return Germany's seat of power to Berlin, its historic home, and strip Bonn of the status of provisional capital it has held since the end of World War II. The narrow vote, a finishing touch to last year's reunification of Germany, followed months of bitter debate./7A

Voting Rights Act covers state judges

By Bob Dart
New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court ruled Thursday that a federal law protecting the voting rights of minorities extends to the election of state and local judges.

The dual 6-3 decisions came in cases from Louisiana and Texas but will have broad application because at least some judges are elected, rather than appointed, in 41 states.

U.S. Western District Judge Lucius Bunton, of Midland, who ruled in 1989 that the at-large system of electing judges in nine Texas counties diluted votes of blacks and Hispanics, said he was pleased that the U.S. Supreme Court today agreed with his decision.

"I felt all along that judges are covered by the Voting Rights Act, and I was confident the Supreme Court would find that as well," Bunton said in a phone interview from his Midland office.

For Gene Collins, the U.S. Supreme Court's ruling that the 1965 Voting Rights Act applies to the election of state and local judges represents a personal victory.

He and Midlander Aquilla Watson were among the named plaintiffs in the League of United Latin American Citizens' 1988 lawsuits challenging the at-large judicial election system in nine Texas counties, including Midland and Ector.

Collins, the president of the Odessa chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said playing a part in the lawsuits has been gratifying — especially now that the desired result has been attained.

"I'm happy because it took some doing on our part to be involved in it," he said.

"(The decision) means that those of us who are voting for judges can be assured that our votes will not be diluted in any kind

Bush sees Yeltsin, backs Gorbachev

By Maureen Dowd
New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — President Bush gave Boris N. Yeltsin a brief pat on the back on Thursday for pushing "democratic values and free market principles," but emphasized that his first loyalty is to the Soviet president, Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

"We have been heartened and encouraged by President Yeltsin's commitment to democratic values and free market principles, and we look forward to working with him," Bush said in a Rose Garden appearance with the newly elected president of Russia before their meeting in the Oval Office. "But at the same time — I want to be very clear about this — the United States will continue to maintain the closest possible official relationship with the Soviet government of President Gorbachev."

Yeltsin had urged Congress on Wednesday to direct help for the Soviet Union to individuals who are moving toward democracy, rather than to "an unreformed communist system," as he put it.

And on Thursday at a National Press Club luncheon, Yeltsin indicated that the United States would be wise not to wager all its diplomatic chips on Gorbachev, since, he said, Gorbachev alone cannot save the Soviet Union. "There is no one, there is no way for one man to preserve the Soviet Union," he said.

But Bush politely rejected these ideas on Thursday, saying his administration would continue to deal with the central government of Gorbachev.

'Let's not forget that it was President Gorbachev's courageous policies of glasnost and perestroika that were the pivotal factors enabling us to end the cold war and make Europe whole and free.'

— President Bush

The White House had been fretting over how to strike the proper balance of encouraging Yeltsin's rush toward democracy without undermining or offending Gorbachev.

Unlike the last time he was here, in the fall of 1989, this time Yelsin did not have to come in the back door and bargain for a few minutes of Bush's time during a meeting with one of his aides. Yeltsin's victory in the Russian elections has made him impossible for the administration to keep at arm's length.

Bush met with Yeltsin for an hour and 40 minutes in the Oval Office and posed for the cameras in the Rose Garden. But the president, who is a strong believer in supporting the global club of leaders, spent most of his time in their joint ap-

Top policy-makers convene in McAllen to talk free trade

■ High-ranking U.S., Mexican trade negotiators, hundreds of Texas business and political leaders attend two-day conference.

Associated Press

McALLEN, Texas — A Mexican ambassador said Thursday his country is looking for clean industry as it begins to negotiate free trade with the United States and Canada.

"The industry we're looking toward is the industry of the next century, not this century," said Miguel Aleman, Mexico's Ambassador-at-Large, at the beginning of a free-trade conference with Texas business leaders.

"We're going to grow clean," he said, responding to a chief criticism of free-trade opponents.

Aleman and other high-ranking U.S. and Mexican trade negotiators convened the two-day conference late Thursday, with about 375 Texas business and political leaders, at a McAllen hotel.

"The main thrust is to bring top policy-makers here to answer questions and concerns and tell how negotiations have been moving," said Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Mission.

Deputy U.S. Trade Representative Julius Katz, the chief U.S. negotiator, and his Mexican counterpart, Commerce Minister Jaime Serra Puche, are scheduled to present a report today on the trade talks, which formally began last week.

De la Garza, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, is hosting the event, which is sponsored by the Citizens Network for Foreign Affairs, a Washington-based economic research group.

"The conference really is to bring a little more focus to the North American trade talks and the impact on the border," said John Costello, president of the Citizens Network.

High court gives police new power to board buses, search for drugs

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court, ruling Thursday in a Florida case, gave police broad powers to board intercity buses at scheduled stops and randomly ask passengers for consent to search their belongings for illicit drugs.

The court said such tactics do not automatically violate a passenger's rights, even when police lack a search warrant or reason to suspect someone has committed a crime.

The 6-3 ruling overturns a 1989 Florida Supreme Court decision that said police in Broward County and West Palm Beach acted improperly in six separate cases when they randomly searched buses in search of drugs.

The state's high court had said in its 4-3 ruling that spot searches, even with the permission of passengers, is akin to the intrusive police methods of Nazi Germany or Communist Cuba.

The ruling came in the case of Terrance Bostick, who was arrested by Broward County sheriff's deputies in 1985 after they boarded and found cocaine in his suitcase aboard an Atlanta-bound bus in Fort Lauderdale.

Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, writing for the majority, said the ruling Thursday is in line with other court opinions that gives police the right to approach persons in airport terminals and other public places to ask for consent to search their luggage and other belongings.

"Our cases make it clear that a seizure does not occur simply because a police officer approaches an individual and asks a few questions," O'Connor wrote. "So long as a reasonable person would feel free to disregard the police and go about his business, the encounter is consentual and no reasonable suspicion is required."

The ruling from the increasingly conservative court follows other recent decisions giving police more power to conduct searches when they lack warrants and probable cause to suspect a crime.

In two separate rulings in May, the court gave police new authority to search closed containers in cars and other vehicles believed to contain evidence or illegal goods such as drugs.

In a sharply worded opinion for the minority, Justice Thurgood Marshall said the court's ruling upholds "the aura of coercion and intimidation that pervades such encounters" when police single out an individual to be searched.

He said the decision "trivializes the values that underlie the Fourth Amendment" protections against unreasonable searches and seizures.

The court sent the Bostick case back to the state courts for a new hearing to determine whether Bostick reasonably believed he had to comply with the police request or could have refused the search.

The state court in 1989 instantly applied the same ruling to a West Palm Beach cocaine case and four other Broward County cases.

West Palm Beach police in 1986 seized cocaine in Adrian Avery's bag when they boarded a Trailways bus and asked to search his luggage.

Avery was released without bail pending appeal after Circuit Judge Marvin Mounts ruled that the search was illegal. But the decision was overturned in 1988 by the 4th District Court of Appeal, which ruled 7-2 that the searches were valid.

"Nazi Germany, Soviet Russia and Communist Cuba have demonstrated all too tellingly the effectiveness of such methods. . . . History demonstrates that the adoption of repressive measures, even to eliminate a clear evil, usually results only in repression more mindless and terrifying than the evil that prompted them," Florida Supreme Court Justice Rosemary Barkett wrote in 1989.

The ruling Thursday represents a victory for the Bush administration, which joined Florida prosecutors in seeking to overturn the Florida Supreme Court ruling. Attorneys for the Justice Department argued before the nation's high court that the random searches were a necessary crime-fighting tool for police.

U.S. Solicitor General Kenneth Starr noted that police must secure the permission of passengers before a search and that they are carried out "in a reasonable and professional and non-intimidating way."

Budget writers recommend cutting aid to schools

AUSTIN (AP) — House budget writers Thursday recommended cutting nearly all additional state aid promised to public schools by the Legislature in its plan to help equalize education funding.

"The more money we put into this system, the worse it gets," Rep. Ric Williamson, D-Weatherford said. "If we continue to pile money into this piece of crap we will never have tax reform."

Texas Education Agency general counsel Kevin O'Hanlon told the House Appropriations Committee that such a reduction would hurt the state's ability to defend the new school finance law in court.

Other lawmakers said the committee plan would simply push the funding problem to the local level, where school districts would have to increase property taxes, slash spending, or both.

"If we reduce monies, we are saying to local folks, 'Raise property taxes,'" Rep. Paul Colbert, D-Houston, said. O'Hanlon said property tax rates would have to increase by about 9 cents to make up such a shortfall.

But Williamson, vice chairman of Appropriations, said the reductions are needed to help bridge a projected $4.7 billion shortfall in the 1992-93 budget. The committee will make recommendations to the House when lawmakers return for a July 8 special legislative session.

Earlier this year, lawmakers passed a bill that would have increased public school funding by about $1.3 billion. The action was prompted by a Texas Supreme Court ruling that found unconstitutional the current school finance system, which allows wide disparities in funding.

Budget experts said the price tag has increased another $350 million because of a reduction in statewide property tax wealth.

In Thursday's meeting, the Appropriations Committee rejected a move to supply that $350 million, and then voted 11-8 to cut $1 billion from the school bill for the next two years.

Under these moves, state spending for schools still would increase, but by less than one-tenth of what was promised in the education funding bill.

In another budget development, former San Antonio mayor Henry Cisneros, who serves on a task force studying taxes, said he and most of the other panel members are ready to recommend that the Legislature adopt a state income tax.

But a lawmaker in charge of writing a state budget said that the Legislature would probably ignore the income tax proposal.

Rep. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, chairman of the Appropriations Committee, said, "While it may be the thing we ought to do in the future, the time is not right."

"I just know (House Speaker) Gib Lewis and the feeling of the House right now, and that's not for an income tax," Rudd said.

But Cisneros said the state needs to overhaul the tax system.

"The sales tax is as high as it ought to go. The property tax is relied on too heavily for school finance. The franchise tax is a legal mess. And Texas needs a better tax structure for the long run," he said.

Cisneros said that although a majority of the 15-member task force favors a state income tax, he doubts lawmakers will follow through with the recommendation.

Task force members who support an income tax are discussing a 5 percent rate for a personal income tax, rather than the 6 percent previously presented, Cisneros said.

That would be offset by a reduction in property taxes, he said.

The proposed corporate income tax rate being discussed is 7.5 percent, rather than the previous 6.5 percent, he said. It would replace the franchise tax.

Gov. Ann Richards has declined to say what action she might seek on taxes, saying that she wants to examine proposed spending cuts that will be recommended by Comptroller John Sharp next week.

Sharp has headed a team of auditors which has examined spending by all state agencies since February.

NWS foresees 100-70 range

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high near 100 and south winds 10 to 20 mph, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight will be clear with a low near 70.

Saturday is expected to be clear with a high near 100.

After an overnight low of 71, Thursday's high was 94 compared with the record high for that date of 109 in 1951. The record low for today's date was 53 set in 1973.

STATE

Showers and thunderstorms triggered by afternoon heating moved across Northeast Texas on Thursday, while scattered storms formed over western sections and rain fell along the Gulf coast.

The National Weather Service said rain fell along a line from just southwest of Sherman through Longview to Hemphill. Radar reports indicated some large amounts.

Very heavy rain associated with a thunderstorm caused some street flooding in San Benito, near Harlingen. Other storms were spread along and off the coast from Brownsville to Port Arthur.

Additional thunderstorms developed in the Trans Pecos and Davis Mountains, the weather service said.

Skies were partly cloudy inland from the Gulf coast, and partly to mostly cloudy in central and western sections of North Texas.

Winds were generally from the south at 5 to 15 mph in the area, under the influence of a low-pressure system, and from the east and southeast at 5 to 10 mph in southern sections.

Southerly to southeasterly winds were reported in West Texas at 15 to 25 mph range, except in the Panhandle and far west with southwesterly winds of 10 to 20 mph.

Afternoon extremes were 76 degrees at rain-cooled Longview and 97 degrees at Wink. Readings in the 80s on Gulf beaches and parts of West Texas.

The weather service posted a severe thunderstorm watch until early Friday for extreme west texas as more storms developed over eastern New Mexico and the Trans Pecos area.

Scattered to isolated thunderstorms were forecast for Friday and Saturday across the Lone Star State, with some storms severe in the Permian Basin and West Texas mountains.

Overnight lows should range from the 60s in the north to the 70s in other regions. Highs both days were expected to be in the 80s and 90s, with 105 degrees in far West Texas and 105 to 110 in the Big Bend lowlands.

NATION

Campers fled advancing floodwaters in Montanta, tornadoes touched down in Texas, hail pelted Kansas and the Dakotas, and rain fell in the Southeast and Northwest on Thursday, the final day of spring.

Temperatures in California were unseasonably cool.

Up to 3 inches of rain in Montana caused creeks in Glacier National Park to swell, forcing the evacuation of campers. Rising water on the Two Medicine River threatened a bridge in the park.

Tornadoes touched down in Texas south of Tivoli and near Refugio. No injuries or major damage were reported from the storms.

Hail one inch in diameter fell at Bismarck, N.D. and east of Johnson, Kan., while hail nearly as large fell near Sublette, Kan. Hail the size of golf balls fell east of Big Bow, Kan. and near Victor, S.D.

Cool temperatures spread across portions of the West Thursday morning.

A record low for the date was set in Redding, Calif., where a 53-degree reading was one degree lower than the old mark set in 1943.

The low temperature for the Lower 48 states Thursday morning was 26 degrees at South Lake Tahoe, Calif.

At 1 p.m. EDT, rainshowers and thunderstorms ranged over Minnesota, the eastern Dakotas and most of the Southeast. Rain also fell in Montana, Idaho and the Pacific Northwest. Rainshowers also were scattered over New Mexico.

Heavier rainfall during the 6 hours ending at 2 p.m. EDT included almost an inch at Watertown, S.D. and Mobile, Ala.

JUSTICES: Ruling came in case from Texas

(From 1A)

Bunton said he hoped a solution to the problem would come quickly.

"During this entire period, while the appellate process was going on, the minorities were deprived of the rights they should have had during elections last year," the judge said.

"Now that the U.S. Supreme Court has ruled, I hope Gov. (Ann) Richards will decide the solution is not judicial, but should be a legislative one.

"I don't think the 5th Circuit (Court of Appeals) wants to tell the people of Louisiana or Texas what the solution is. The Legislature has been reluctant to move on this issue and I hope they will step forward now so that the voters will not be deprived in 1992 of what is rightfully theirs."

The ruling was a victory for the Bush administration and civil rights groups who had argued that judicial election processes in Louisiana and Texas were biased against black and Hispanic voters.

"We're ecstatic about it," said Robert McDuff of the Lawyers Committee for Civil Rights Under Law. "This is a very important step in desegregating the judiciaries of a number of states."

The Supreme Court reversed lower court decisions that said Section 2 of the 1965 Voting Act, as amended in 1982, did not apply to the election of judges. The disputed section insures minority rights "to participate in the political process and to elect representatives of their choice."

"If executive officers, such as prosecutors, sheriffs, state attorneys general, and state treasurers can be considered 'representatives' simply because they are chosen by popular election, then the same reasoning can apply to elected judges," Justice John Paul Stevens wrote for the Supreme Court.

Disagreeing strongly, Justice Antonin Scalia said the court had taken an activist turn and extended the statute beyond the legislative language.

"There is little doubt that the ordinary meaning of 'representatives' does not include judges," wrote Scalia, who was joined in dissent by Chief Justice William Rehnquist and Justice Anthony Kennedy.

"Our highest responsibility in the field of statutory construction is to read the laws in a consistent way, giving Congress a sure means by which it may work the people's will," said Scalia. "We have ignored that responsibility today."

However, Stevens said the ruling simply carries out the will of Congress, which he said had been thwarted by the lower court decisions. In amending the 1965 bill in 1982 and inserting the language on "representatives," the lawmakers intended to strengthen the statute, not weaken it, he opined.

"Congress made it clear that a violation...could be established by proof of discriminatory results alone," wrote Stevens. "It is difficult to believe that Congress, in an express effort to broaden the protection afforded by the Voting Rights Act, withdrew, without comment, an important category of elections from that protection."

The court majority was forged when Justice David Souter, the court's newest member, and the normally conservative Justices Sandra Day O'Connor and Byron White joined the moderate-liberal bloc of Stevens, Harry Blackmun and Thurgood Marshall.

The cases involved lawsuits by black and Hispanic voting rights activists, joined by the Justice Department's Civil Rights Division, that alleged Louisiana and Texas had illegally diluted the votes of minorities in their methods of electing judges.

The Louisiana case deals with the election of the state's seven Supreme Court justices. Five of the justices are elected from separate districts. Two are elected at-large within one district where the substantial black population is outnumbered by whites.

Black voters had argued that splitting the large district, which includes New Orleans, with a majority black populace, and its mostly white suburbs, would result in a district where a black justice would be likely to be elected. Despite a population that is nearly 30 percent black, no black judge has been elected to the Louisiana Supreme Court in this century.

HAIL: District Judge Hyde disagrees with ruling of at-large type election."

Collins said the decision probably will lead to the election of more minority judges, who will provide valuable role models for minority youth. The presence of minority judges also will cause members of the minority community to feel more comfortable with the sometimes intimidating criminal justice system, he said.

Collins congratulated U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton III, who presides over Midland's federal court. It was Bunton who in 1989 issued the decision that the Supreme Court upheld Thursday.

"I think he is one of the most brilliant legal minds in the country," Collins said.

Now that the Supreme Court has ruled, Collins said, it is up to the Legislature to implement a single-member district system for judicial elections.

"That should be a legislative process," he said. "We were in the process of drawing up the boundaries when the 5th Circuit intervened and stopped it."

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans, La., overturned Bunton's decision last year. The case was then appealed to the Supreme Court.

Before the appeals court's decision, Collins said, legislators were discussing plans that called for judges to be elected from the same geographic districts as county commissioners.

If that plan is retained, 238th District Court Judge John Hyde said, it could speed the creation of a fourth state-level court here.

Lawmakers failed during the last legislative session to pass a bill that would have created the fourth court. Local prosecutors and judges maintain that a fourth court is needed to relieve crowded dockets in Midland's 142nd, 238th and 318th district courts.

Although Hyde has been an advocate of an additional court, he said he disagrees with the Supreme Court's decision on single-member districts.

"I still do not believe philosophically that judges should be elected by single-member districts," Hyde said. "My feeling was based on the the fact that I didn't think that judges ought to be designated as representatives of any constituency, minority or otherwise. Judges do not represent anyone. Judges are the impartial arbiters of the law, and as such are not supposed to have a constituency. Single-member districts will change all that."

Nevertheless, he said, he respects the court's decision.

"I'm sure it means that this court will be subject to single-member district designation and that the 1990 county-wide election was the ... last county-wide election that this court will ever see," he said.

Hyde, whose term expires in 1994, said he did not know whether the court's ruling will mean that he will find himself in an election earlier than expected. Whether the 1990 judicial elections will be nullified remains to be seen, he said.

The next scheduled judicial election in Midland County is in 1992, when 142nd District Court Judge Pat Baskin is supposed to face re-election.

Baskin declined to comment on the court's decision. Judge Dean Rucker, who presides over the 318th District Court, is on vacation and could not be reached for comment Thursday.

Ms. Watson also could not be reached.

BACKS: Presidents discuss Yeltsin's agenda

pearance praising Gorbachev.

"He knows," Bush said of Yeltsin, "that I have great respect for President Gorbachev, as I do for him, and we have an excellent relationship. And our ability to work together has produced, I think, enormous benefits for both of our countries and it's served the cause of world peace and stability in the world.

"So let's not forget that it was President Gorbachev's courageous policies of glasnost and perestroika that were the pivotal factors enabling us to end the cold war and make Europe whole and free."

Administration officials said this week that they hoped that Yeltsin and Gorbachev would work together, so any support of Yeltsin's more dramatic reforms would not be perceived as a threat to Gorbachev.

But Yeltsin seemed to want to have it both ways this week on his four-day visit to Washington and New York.

He wanted to say, as he did on Thursday at the National Press Club, that he has "a balanced working relationship" with Gorbachev. "It has not been an even relationship," he conceded. "But there has been no rivalry, and certainly no personal hostility. It was, and sometimes still is, a matter of diverging positions."

But the Russian leader is also a skillful politician, and he wanted to cast himself as a man possessed of a bolder, surer vision about how to save the Soviet Union than Gorbachev has.

When a reporter at the press club asked him whether he would not be urging moderation, too, if he were "in Gorbachev's shoes," Yeltsin responded: "I shall never step into Gorbachev's shoes. I have promised him that."

He continued, more seriously: "I shall never be an advocate of slow, half-hearted change because this is a mortal danger to our country. If we go along that path, the system will take a revenge on us. It will never let us achieve democracy."

ESCOBAR: He may run drug empire from jail

the Colombian authorities.

In Washington, the State Department said it regretted the vote by a Colombian national assembly, shortly before Escobar's surrender, to ban extradition of all citizens.

Bob Martinez, the director of the Office of National Drug Policy, said he feared that the assembly had made a mistake because extradition would have been "a very useful tool to allow the Colombian judicial system to function."

United States officials have been disturbed at the events in Colombia, but they have been unable to change President Cesar Gaviria Trujillo's position that ending drug-related violence was the highest priority, while drug trafficking itself was an international problem beyond the control of any single country.

In the course of pursuing Escobar, who is thought to have been the principal architect of most of the violence, Gaviria's police and military have savaged his drug organization, which is based in the city of Medellin, seizing tons of cocaine and processing chemicals. But the government has largely ignored the rival drug gang in Cali, which is less violent but has surpassed Escobar's organization in its share of the world cocaine trade.

Some drug experts say they believe that if Escobar escapes serious punishment, relations between the two countries may become strained. But Washington's reaction has been restrained by the knowledge that while Colombia has left much to be desired in its pursuit of drug traffickers, it has been doing much more than Peru and Bolivia, its neighbors who produce most of the world's raw material for cocaine.

CONVENE: Formal negotiations are under way

(From 1A)

The United States, Mexico and Canada are holding three-way talks aimed at eliminating barriers to the flow of goods and services between them. Canada and the United States reached a free-trade treaty two years ago.

Congress last month allowed negotiations to begin with Mexico by agreeing to a "fast-track" approval process that would limit its ability to change a trade treaty. The Bush administration sought the "fast-track" power because officials feared no treaty could be made if it was open for change by lawmakers.

Ms. Hills, Serra and Canadian Trade Minister Michael Wilson conducted the first negotiating session last week in Toronto. They formed six working groups of lower officials to discuss market access, trade rules, services, investment, intellectual property and the settlement of disputes.

Formal meetings will rotate between the three countries with the next major session scheduled for August 20 in Seattle.

Critics of free trade contend it will make American and Canadian jobs flow southward to Mexico, where workers earn an average of $1.60 an hour.

Some South Texas farmers and ranchers complain free trade will make their products less competitive. Border city leaders, while excited by the prospect of growth, are worried that roads, bridges and other infrastructure components won't be in place by the time trade barriers fall.

The meeting in McAllen will focus on such concerns, de la Garza said.

Mexico's U.S. Ambassador, Gustavo Petricioli, will discuss the importance of free trade for border communities during a lunch speech today.

Richard Crowder, undersecretary for international affairs for the Department of Agriculture, and his Mexican counterpart, Luis Tellez, will make presentations on food trade.

Several Texas business leaders will discuss economic opportunities of free trade.

most three years. He is retired from the U.S. Army.

The last time Ms. Waldrop heard from her son was in a letter received March 26, shortly after he moved to Angel City from another part of the Philippines.

"My daughter-in-law wrote that she was real thrilled they had such a nice place," Ms. Waldrop said.

"I think it was a bad situation (the volcano). He was in danger since they moved to Angel City," she said.

Mount Pinatuba began erupting on June 9, with the most recent death count at 268.

Ms. Waldrop, who corresponds with her son regularly, has written several letters since the initial eruption of the 4,795-foot volcano, she said. Her son doesn't have a telephone.

"I've gone through the Red Cross and they can't find out anything. They are doing what they can," she said.

According to the Red Cross in Midland, many Red Cross stations in the Philippines are closed and many communication lines down.

Ms. Waldrop said she isn't aware of any other way to try and find out where her son and daughter-in-law are.

In addition, Ms. Waldrop said she has no clue whether her son may have been evacuated.

"I just have no idea," she said. "I'm just sitting and waiting to hear some news. I try to stay at the house as much as I can should a telephone call get through," Ms. Waldrop said.

"He is on my mind day and night. All I can do is pray and trust the Lord," she said.

House committee moves to overturn abortion ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Appropriations Committee on Thursday approved legislation to effectively overturn a Supreme Court ruling that bars abortion counseling at federally funded family planning clinics.

The measure, offered by Rep. John Porter, R-Ill., was passed on a 35-20 vote following an unsuccessful attempt to kill it by attaching a parental notification requirement.

The Office of Management and Budget sent a letter before the vote reminding lawmakers that President Bush has promised to veto any bill that weakens current restrictions on abortion.

Porter said, however, the committee's action shows there is strong, bipartisan support for the bill. He expressed hope that Congress would muster enough support to override a veto.

"This is an issue that concerns the relationship of the government to its citizens," Porter said. "Can the government withhold information in regard to a constitutional right? Can the government withhold that information and lie to that woman about her constitutional rights? My answer is no."

"People have to be told the truth — not part of it, all of it," Porter said. "They should be provided all the information they need."

Porter's amendment was added to a bill that would appropriate $203 billion for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services and Education. His measure would prohibit the administration from spending money to implement the "gag rule."

The appropriations bill was approved on a voice vote.

The Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee earlier this month voted 12-5 to lift the abortion counseling restriction.

The counseling ban was initiated by the Reagan administration in 1988 but challenged in the courts. The Supreme Court last month upheld the ban on abortion counseling.

Critics say it infringes on free speech and interferes with the obligation of physicians to care for their patients by giving them all necessary information about their medical condition.

Abortion foes say the counseling ban does not restrict access to abortion but simply ensures that federal money is not used to promote abortion.

"The evidence is overwhelming that when a (pregnant) woman goes into a clinic, they end up going out with an abortion," said Rep. Vin Weber, R-Minn.

National Right to Life Committee official Douglas Johnson said the committee's action suggested the House would approve Porter's amendment. But he expressed hope that supporters would not get a veto-proof majority of two thirds.

"We remain optimistic that over one-third of the House will oppose promotion of abortion as a method of birth control," he said.

Senate begins debate on crime bill with gun waiting period

WASHINGTON (HNS) — The Senate Thursday began debate on a sweeping anti-crime bill that contains a mandatory seven-day waiting period for handgun purchases. The provision could be determined by a dozen undecided members, including Texas' Sen. Lloyd Bentsen.

A spokesman said Bentsen, a Democrat, has not decided whether to support the measure, which contains the so-called Brady bill, named for former White House press secretary James S. Brady. Brady was wounded during a 1980 assassination attempt on President Reagan and remains disabled.

Bentsen's office reported receiving 200 calls per day or more this week, down from the 500 to 600 calls receptionists were fielding last week as gun control interests on both sides of the issue urged people to call undecided members.

The provisions incorporated into the Senate Democrats' anti-crime bill would require a seven-day waiting period and a criminal-record check of the would-be buyer.

"We're a handful of votes away," said Gwen Fitzgerald, spokeswoman for Handgun Control Inc., a pro-gun control group led by Brady's wife Sarah.

"We know there are a dozen senators on the fence," she said, adding the group expects to convince enough of the undecided members to block amendments that would strip the gun-control provisions from the bill.

She said the group is hopeful Bentsen will join them. "We've thought all along he would be one who would be more persuadable," she said.

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, opposes the gun-control provisions.

Joe Phillips, a lobbyist for the National Rifle Association, an anti-gun control group, said Bentsen told the organization he would decide the case on its merits. "That's all we ask," Phillips said, adding that Bentsen "has been a good friend on our issues for many years."

The NRA, one of the most powerful lobbying groups because of its 3-million membership list, reportedly has toned down the high-profile advertising campaign that proved unsuccessful in the House.

The House on May 8 voted 239-186 in favor of the Brady bill, a version that required a seven-day waiting period but gave police the option of conducting a criminal background check.

President Bush has threatened to veto the Brady bill, but he has said he would consider approving it if it was part of his anti-crime package.

Bush: Sanctions to end with prisoners' release

'Dramatic progress has been made . . . (but) more progress must be made.'

— President Bush

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush cited "dramatic progress" toward democracy in South Africa but said Thursday he won't lift U.S. sanctions until a final condition is met, the release of all political prisoners.

"We have a very good feeling now," Bush said after a White House meeting with black South African leader Mangosuthu Buthelezi.

The Zulu chief, an early critic of the sanctions, told reporters he pressed the president for a quick end to the five-year economic penalties but that Bush "didn't give me a date."

Aides said the president planned to consult with other South African leaders, including African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela, on the issue of political prisoners before announcing his decision.

Administration and congressional sources have said that, with the Pretoria government's repeal on Monday of its last major apartheid law, Bush wants to move quickly to lift the sanctions and might act by next month.

But Bush was noncommittal on timing.

"Dramatic progress has been made," he said, but immediately added that "more progress must be made."

Still, the president made clear that he would lift the sanctions once the remaining requirement of the 1986 law that imposed them — the freeing of all political prisoners — is met.

"Our law is very clear that when the five conditions are met, we will lift the sanctions," Bush told reporters outside the White House after the Buthelezi meeting.

But on Capitol Hill, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., objected to what he termed an "unseemly rush to reward the apartheid regime." He said other conditions in the law remain unmet.

"This is a flagrant attempt to undercut opponents of apartheid," Kennedy said in a statement.

Earlier, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said "there is no timetable" for lifting the sanctions.

One remaining dispute is over who should be considered a political prisoner.

Fitzwater said the administration would use its own definition — not a more-encompassing one used by Mandela's ANC — in deciding when to lift the sanctions.

"There is a disagreement on the question of defining political prisoners to include those who have committed violence. We do not in our definition, the ANC does," Fitzwater said.

College strips professor of nude beaches of job

Harker

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — A college professor who studies nude beaches was stripped of his job Thursday after being accused of unprofessional conduct and neglecting his teaching duties.

George R. Harker, professor of leisure, said he'd hit the talk-show circuit while appealing his firing from Western Illinois University.

"I hope to cash in on the notoriety that's come out of this," he said after the state Board of Governors met in the state capital. "I will be making public appearances and selling personal accounts of the situation."

The board met for more than half an hour in closed session before taking the action, which was effective immediately. There was no public discussion of the firing, which passed on an 8-0 vote.

Harker, who lectured on the philosophy and conduct of leisure activity, was the first tenured professor to be fired in the 92-year-history of WIU. He had taught at the school in Macomb for 21 years.

He said he would appeal through the university's union grievance process.

Harker said his study of nude or "clothing-optional" beaches didn't cause the conflict with the university, but it did add to the friction.

"If it wasn't the topic of nude beaches, and it wasn't where such a topic takes you — like Hawaii — who would care?" the professor told reporters before the vote.

Harker said he's become an expert on the subject and testified in legal challenges of restrictions on nude beach in Rochester, N.Y., West Palm Beach, Fla., and Hawaii. He has written a guide to managing public nude beaches and says he captures more grant money than anyone else in the Department of Recreation, Parks and Tourism Administration.

ABC details Casey and Meese ties to Iran deal

Hashemi said Casey asked if Iran was ready to deal with the Republicans and hand over the hostages.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former CIA Director William Casey may have been told by Iranian representatives in Madrid in the summer of 1980 that release of U.S. hostages would be delayed until Ronald Reagan took office if Casey helped them get arms, ABC News said Thursday night.

ABC's "Nightline" program interviewed Iranian arms dealer Jamshid Hashemi, who supplied a detailed description of what he said were two sets of meetings in July and August in Madrid with then-Reagan campaign manager Casey and two other unidentified men.

Hashemi, who refused to go on camera, said that it was Casey who asked whether Iran was ready to deal with the Republicans and hand over the hostages, according to ABC, whose investigation is being undertaken in cooperation the Financial Times of London.

There have been reports for the past decade that the 1980 Reagan campaign made a deal with Iran's ruling clerics to delay until after the election the release of the 52 American hostages seized in the takeover of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran in 1979. Those reports were revived with the publication earlier this year of an article by Gary Sick, a member of the National Security Council staff in the Carter administration.

Sick said he found considerable circumstantial evidence that the Reagan campaign had brokered such a deal with Iran.

In the Madrid meetings, Iran was represented by Iranian cleric Mehdi Kharoubi and his brother, Hassan, while Hashemi said he and his brother, Cyrus, who has since died, acted as interpreters.

Casey also has died. He succumbed to a brain tumor in early 1987, at the height of the tumult over the Iran-Contra affair.

Hashemi's account went like this:

In the first set of meetings, Casey asked, Would the hostages be released to President-elect Reagan, after the election?

The Iranian side replied that it would need time to get specific confirmation from the Ayatollah Khomeini.

If a post-election hostage release occurred, Casey told them, the Republicans would be grateful and would arrange for the release of Iran's frozen assets and military equipment for Iran that had been held up.

As gesture of goodwill, Mehdi Kharoubi told Casey the hostages would be released on the day Reagan was inaugurated. In exchange, the Iranians expected that Casey would help Iran get certain arms and information, even though he was not in the U.S. government.

Separately, the Atlanta Journal-Constitution said Thursday that former Attorney General Edwin Meese was a scheduled guest at the home of Cyrus Hashemi in December 1980, between Reagan's election and Meese's designation as a White House aide in the incoming administration.

College fund names House whip president

NEW YORK (AP) — Rep. William H. Gray III, the highest ranking black member of Congress, announced plans Thursday to resign, saying he could accomplish more for minorities in a new job: president of the United Negro College Fund.

"If there's anything that those of us who reach success ought to do, it is to be willing to go back, reach back and give back," said Gray, D-Pa.

Gray joined college fund officials at a news conference to confirm rumors circulating around Washington this week.

The congressman said he would complete the current House session, scheduled to end Aug. 5, and begin his new job Sept. 3.

As House majority whip, Gray was the No. 3 man in the House leadership and had a good shot at becoming the first black Speaker of the House.

Some of his black colleagues had expressed concern about the loss of such a powerful and highly visible position.

But Gray, while conceding that his new job would have "maybe not as much visibility," said working with the college fund was "the most important thing that I can do, the thing that will have the greatest impact. ...

"The Speaker is not the end all," he added. "Yes, it's important. ... (But) I think there's a more important contribution for me, and a greater mission for me: to help provide educational opportunity, to widen the doors of education, for over 50,000 black students."

Other factors in his decision, he said, were his desire to spend more time as pastor of his church, the Bright Hope Baptist Church in Philadelphia, and to spend more "quality time" with his wife and three teen-age sons.

Gray said that after his son graduates from high school in Virginia, his family will move to Philadelphia. He will have an apartment in New York, where the college fund is based.

Among senior Democrats already campaigning for Gray's leadership post are David Bonior, D-Mich., the chief deputy whip, and Steny Hoyer, D-Md., chairman of the House Democratic Caucus.

Back in Pennsylvania, Mayor W. Wilson Goode of Philadelphia is among several politicians who have declared an interest in filling Gray's House seat.

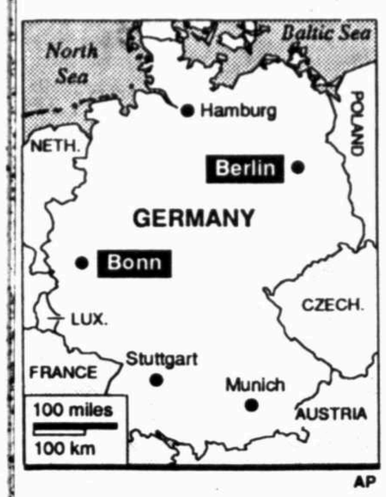
Lawmakers vote to return government to Berlin



AP

BONN, Germany (AP) — Lawmakers voted Thursday to return Germany's seat of power to Berlin, its historic home, and strip Bonn of the status of provisional capital it has held since the end of World War II.

The narrow vote, a finishing touch to last year's reunification of Germany, followed months of bitter debate. While many Germans promoted cosmopolitan Berlin as the natural capital in a prosperous, united Europe, others feared the choice would threaten Bonn economically and evoke memories of Berlin as the former Nazi capital.

Berliners poured into the streets to celebrate with champagne and fireworks. Cars jammed the Kurfuerstendamm shopping boulevard, honking their horns. Some Germans rode on the hoods of cars, and others leaned out the windows to hoot and holler their happiness.

"Berlin won, Berlin won!" two young men shouted from the window of an East German Trabant car.

In Bonn, a crowd of 10,000 people jamming the tiny market square watched sadly as the vote was broadcast on a giant television screen.

Lawmakers in the Bundestag, Parliament's decision-making lower house, chose Berlin by a 337-320 vote.

Under the proposal approved Thursday, the Chancellery, ministries and the Bundestag will transfer to Berlin. The Bundestag and the chancellor are expected to move after four years, after the Reichstag, Germany's former imperial Parliament, is renovated.

The overall transfer is expected to take 10 to 12 years.

Parliament's upper house, the Bundesrat, will remain in Bonn, as will thousands of ministry workers and other bureaucrats.

The Bundesrat is to vote July 5 to ratify the Bundestag's decision, but it is unlikely to block the lower house.

Some Berliners worried that moving the bureacracy from Bonn would spoil the freewheeling, offbeat atmosphere in Berlin.

"Berlin is kaput," said Alwin Nachtweh, 41, who sells chunks of Berlin Wall and Communist memorabilia from a concession stand where Checkpoint Charlie once stood.

"The culture, the freedom, the sense of escape here — it's all going to go. Big business will take over. This decision was made by Mercede-Benz," he said.

Peter Proese, a 55-year-old retiree, disagreed.

"Does having the capital spoil Paris?" he asked.

U.S., Soviets narrow START differences

BERLIN (NYT) — The United States and the Soviet Union said Thursday that they had narrowed their differences over a treaty reducing their long-range nuclear weapons, but not enough to be able to schedule another superpower summit meeting.

Speaking to reporters after a two-hour meeting, Secretary of State James A. Baker III and the Soviet foreign minister, Aleksandr A. Bessmertnykh, said that they had largely resolved one of the three major issues holding up the strategic arms reduction treaty, known as START.

Whether they will be able to tie up the remaining issues in time for a summit meeting in Moscow in July will depend on negotiations in the coming weeks, they said. A June meeting, though, which was their original plan, is now out of the question.

The Soviets, who are anxious for a meeting in order to discuss economic aid from Washington, sounded optimistic about holding one in July, while the Americans, who want to use the summit as a carrot to force the Soviets to make more concessions in the START talks, were more cautious.

"With respect to START and the possibility of a summit between President Bush and President Gorbachev, I think we are right where we were when we last met," said Baker, referring to his meeting with Bessmertnykh in Copenhagen two weeks ago. "Both presidents would like to have a summit in Moscow at the earliest opportunity, but they would like to do so at a time when they could conclude a strategic arms treaty."

Of the three major points of contention, the first is over how many warheads have to be loaded into each missile. This is a sensitive issue because any spare capacity in missiles could be used in a crisis by one side or the other to break out of the treaty limits and deploy more warheads.

The second is over how each side will transmit its missile test data to Earth, so that the other side can monitor it.

The third dispute is over how to define a new type of missile. For instance, a missile might be able to carry 10 warheads, but with minor changes it could be classified as a "new" missile that can carry only three warheads, even though it could quickly be restored to its original capacity if the adjustments were undone.

Sandinista, government talks begin

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Government and Sandinista leaders began private talks Thursday following two days of violence by Sandinistas to protest a government attempt to make them return seized property.

The bombings and takeovers of buildings subsided Thursday, but former President Daniel Ortega, the Sandinista leader, warned Wednesday that party faithful could take up arms if the National Assembly passed the rollback measure. A vote is expected within three weeks.

A government source told The Associated Press that Ortega and Antonio Lacayo, the top aide to President Violeta Barrios de Chamorro, met at the Sandinista army headquarters. Reporters were barred and no details were released.

"They don't want to make this public yet," said the source, who is close to Lacayo.

In March 1990, Sandinista deputies, then in the majority, passed laws saying anyone in possession of a home or a piece of land owned by the state could claim immediate ownership. Others were given land owned by the state.

If the rollback is passed, the titles to such property would be worthless.

Since taking office in April 1990, Mrs. Chamorro has been under pressure from the Sandinistas to leave intact the policies they established during a decade of revolutionary rule.

She has allowed the Sandinistas to maintain control of the army and police, but these compromises have angered her partners in the 14-party government coalition, who now control the National Assembly.

Ortega urged the Sandinista rank-and-file to fight the rollback measure the same way they battled the Somoza dictatorship during the 1979 revolution.

Jury selection ruling on target

The Supreme Court has rightly extended its attack on covert racial discrimination in the selection of juries.

Five years ago, the court empowered judges in criminal cases to examine whether prosecutors were using peremptory challenges to exclude jurors of the same race as a defendant. It was a breakthrough because normally such challenges are not questioned. Two months ago, the court broadened the attack, allowing even white defendants to trigger an inquiry when blacks were being excluded.

Recently, the high court carried the principle a dramatic step further. Even in civil cases, when private attorneys are striking jury candidates, judges must step in to make sure that racial discrimination is not at work, a 6-3 majority ruled.

Dissenters on the court sought to limit the equal protection guarantee of the Constitution to situations in which a government officer, such as a prosecutor, appears to be systematically striking jurors of one race. But Justice Anthony Kennedy, writing for the majority, saw clearly that the very process of jury selection is a government activity. Government, which gives the courts their power, is responsible for blocking this discrimination, no matter where the bias originates.

"Few places are a more real expression of the constitutional authority of the government than a courtroom, where the law itself unfolds," Kennedy said. What a welcome recognition that equal justice at the courthouse serves both equality and justice.

If people of all races are to be equal in the eyes of the law, then they must be equal in the courtroom, which is responsible for dispensing the law. This ruling underscores that truth.

ANOTHER VIEW

Ideological ban list isn't American way

The practice began in the McCarthy era, and flourished again in the Reagan era. Now cooler heads in the Bush era are ending it. Good riddance.

This was the State Department's practice of barring from entry into the United States people the department considered ideologically unacceptable. The Bush administration has agreed with members of Congress — notably Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan of New York — and the American Civil Liberties Union to support legislation that will remove almost all the 250,000 names currently on the "ideologically unacceptable" list.

The ideological exclusion was first allowed in the McCarran-Walter Immigration Act of 1952, which was passed over the veto of President Truman, another cool head but forced to operate in a hot-headed time. Since then, the exclusion has been used to keep out such people as the Nobel laureates Gabriel Garcia Marquez and Pablo Neruda, the novelist Graham Greene, the naturalist Farley Mowat and the actor Yves Montand. Most of those excluded were considered too leftist, but sometimes the pendulum swung the other way. Roberto d'Aubuisson, the right-wing Salvadoran leader, was barred. That turned even Jesse Helms against the list.

The new agreement is largely symbolic, because Congress last year forbade the State Department to exclude people because of beliefs, statements or political associations that would be protected under the Constitution for American citizens. Under that law, those who are on the list can apply to have their names removed. The new legislation provides for the State Department to purge the list on its own.

But symbols are sometimes important. In this case, it's important that both Congress and the administration are prepared to reverse an old wrong.

Only those who are extreme ideologues themselves want to keep people out of the country for being "ideologically incorrect." Americans could learn from many of the people on the excluded list, and they from us. Banning a person from the U.S.A. because someone in the government doesn't like something he said is not the American way of doing things. It's roughly the opposite.

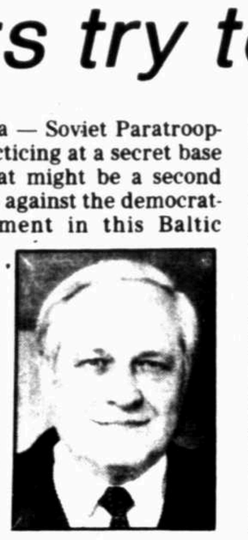
Soviets try to tighten grip on Baltics

VILNIUS, Lithuania — Soviet Paratrooper Unit 450 is practicing at a secret base in Russia for what might be a second attempt to mount a coup against the democratically elected government in this Baltic republic.



Anderson

The paratrooper unit, together with key paratrooper divisions from the city of Pskov in Russia, are being stoked by speeches on the need to suppress the national separatist movement in Lithuania, according to intelligence sources.

The presence of these paratrooper divisions raises the specter of a repeat of "Bloody Sunday" when soldiers killed at least 14 unarmed demonstrators in seizing a 1,100-foot television tower last Jan. 14. It was part of an overall effort to muzzle Lithuania's independence-minded media.

Lithuanians remember that at 1:30 a.m. the paratrooper units in light tanks and armored personnel carriers rolled up Cosmonaut Avenue and up the hill to the tower, which was roughly barricaded with cars, furniture and hundreds of unarmed human beings. The stunned crowd hadn't expected them to roll right over everything, including demonstrators at the front, without warning. Among the casualties was a high school senior shot in the forehead, and a 22-year-old conscript in the Soviet Navy who had just returned two months before from submarine duty.

President Bush last week granted $1.5 billion in agricultural credits to the Soviets, who have asked for approximately $100 billion in aid. Baltic leaders are adamantly opposed to such a bailout until the reform process has sunk its roots deeper, and believe that the money only serves to sustain Stalinist elements within the government.

Radical reformist Boris Yeltsin, who was recently elected the first president of the Russian republic, was scheduled to meet with Bush at the White House yesterday. Yeltsin has backed the Baltic's independence movement, and is the darling of its people.

The lurking threat of a move against the Baltics underscores a paradox of perestroika: Even as the Communist Party's iron grip on the vast Russian republic is breaking, it may reassert itself elsewhere in the Soviet empire. The man at the center of the paradox is Soviet President (and, ironically, recent Nobel Peace Prize winner) Mikhail Gorbachev.

Last January, paratroopers were the iron hand of a long-developed plot, probably by the KGB and approved by Gorbachev, in which strife was sown using non-Lithuanians, with the military then moving in on cue to restore order. That's the consensus of political officials here, as well as intelligence sources in Washington.

The Soviet Defense Ministry warned on Jan. 7 that they would be sending elite paratrooper units to Vilnius — but for the purpose of rounding up draft dodgers. The next day, a pro-Soviet group made up of hardened Communists from among the substantial minority of Russians and Poles here tried to storm the democratic Parliament during a rowdy demonstration against price hikes. They were successfully resisted by pro-independence demonstrators at the scene.

Then-Lithuanian Prime Minister Kazimier Prunskiene was meeting with Gorbachev in Moscow. As she was leaving the Kremlin, he instructed her to "Go back home and restore order. Otherwise I will be obliged to do the job myself."

Her government fell on her return when the parliament rejected 200 to 300 percent price hikes. In the confusion, Moscow seized the moment. The timing was perfect all around: President Bush would soon be distracted with the Jan. 16 launching of the war against Iraq and would continue to need Gorbachev's support.

CHARLEY REESE

Neither political party deserves any praise

President George Bush has begun his campaign for re-election and his theme will be that the Democratic Congress is no good.

Well, I buy that. Only, I also think he's no good. Given the present conditions of the country — staggering debt, invalid economy and crumbling infrastructure — neither the executive nor the legislative branch, neither Democrats nor Republicans deserve any parades.

Reese

When I go to the polls next year the main qualification I will be looking for is non-incumbency. From now own, I'm operating on the principle that while new faces may not be any better than the old ones, they damned sure can't be any worse.

When everyone was buzzing about the president's health and worrying about Dan Quayle succeeding him, I couldn't figure out what was bothering people. Two years of the Bush presidency produced an invasion of Panama, a war in the Persian Gulf, a hefty rise in taxes, a hefty rise in the deficit, and a serious economic recession. What could Dan Quayle do that would be any worse?

In all seriousness, we are not being governed by serious people. Much of what they do, even legislation, is nothing more than a public relations gesture. Both the Democratic and the president's crime bills are a joke.

We already have a zillion laws. There are, for example, about 26,000 existing gun control laws and regulations already on the books.

The president's crime bill would ban gun magazines which hold more than 15 bullets. Whoopee. You're facing a robber with a loaded gun six feet from your belly. Are you going to feel safer knowing that the gun has only 15 bullets instead of 17 or 20? Only if the man holding the gun is blind.

The bill adds the death penalty for a lot of crimes. Whoopee. Other than murder or treason, what crime would you want to punish with death? There are already among the states caboodles of death penalty laws and not a one of them seems to have any deterrent effect at all.

The president, for example, wants to apply the death penalty to a terrorist. Well, I hate to disillusion a president, but if he will make a few inquiries of people familiar with terrorism, they will tell him that most terrorists do not expect to survive their action to begin with and so a death penalty is not going to be a deterrent to a man on a suicide mission.

Besides, it's already against the law to kill people, blow up airplanes, carry weapons on board them, and on and on and on. We don't need new laws to combat terrorism. We need to change the foreign policy that causes terrorists to seek out American targets — like meddling in other people's quarrels.

The game politicians play, both at the state as well as national level, is to use legislation as a campaign gesture. You're concerned about crime? Okay, I'll pass a new crime bill. Concerned about the homeless? Okay, I'll pass a bill authorizing a study of the problem of homelessness in America. Worried about losing your job? Okay, I'll pass a law saying we are all in favor of full employment.

Laws have limited utility in any society. A law is just a rule to live by. By definition, outlaws or criminals are not overly impressed with laws. Neither are psychotics, terrorists, and sociopathic individuals. Indeed, there are very few law-abiding criminals. I've never heard of a serial killer strangling a woman and telling her, "Well, I would have shot you but there's a seven-day waiting period and I haven't been able to pick up my gun yet."

Of course laws not enforced are worthless as are laws nobody, including lawyers, know exist because there are so many thousands of laws on the book. What we need are fewer laws and more enforcement.

But we can all play the game. Let's pass a law that puts all the presidential debates and all the political commercials on the Comedy Channel.

That would be the proper environment for the carloads of nonsense, red herrings, lies, and false promises that high-paid manipulators of public opinion are preparing to dump on the American people in 1992.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

Poor, homeless best served by laws, order

Atlanta is entertaining an ordinance to outlaw begging, and New York City recently evicted squatters from one of its parks. A wholesome trend could be in the making. Twirling my mustache, may I try to show why this supposed callousness represents in fact a larger benevolence?

Murchison

Beggars, and those whom the media call "the homeless," have over the past decade or two turned whole portions of American cities into permanent encampments, squalid and disorderly.

We are institutionalizing the appropriation of public property, including sidewalks, by the mentally ill, the drug-addicted, and the violent.

Increasingly, social workers are telling us not to subsidize begging, as subsidization just encourages it. This is what common sense should tell us, too, and the lesson could be extended to homelessness.

The poor, as we are advised on High Authority, are always with us — and have a claim on our social benevolence. There are ways, nonetheless, to be benevolent, and there are ways to be callous and cruel. We don't intend the latter, no doubt, but that is what we have fallen into with present policies.

Social sensibilities of long standing started to change in the 1960s and '70s. The U.S. Supreme Court struck down vagrancy laws as unconstitutionally vague. In older, more orderly days, a policemen would approach a citizen, or knot of citizens, lounging conspicuously on a street corner. Move it, buddy, move it. If Buddy didn't move quickly enough, off to jail he went. (Mild stuff, actually, compared to Queen Elizabeth I's order in 1595 that vagrants found "notoriously culpable in their unlawful manner of life" should be "executed upon the gallows or gibbet.")

The point is that society — a large and various incorporation — has an interest in good public order and that the few shouldn't be permitted to impose unreasonably on the many. The high court was saying, nuts to all this.

In such soil, the problem of homelessness emerged like Johnson grass. Judicial and legislative decisions threw wide open the gates of mental institutions. The mentally disturbed, as well as the jobless, acquired the constitutional right to range at will.

In the '80s, when street grates and subways became camping grounds for the homeless, some commentators were ready with an explanation: Reagan had done this thing — fattening the jobless rolls, shriveling the housing market. No proof was necessary, just the bare, ideological assertion. (In truth, according to a Heritage Foundation study, there ain't no housing shortage, the number of dwellings having increased 50 percent from 1970 to 1987. Moreover, most of the long-term homeless — chiefly single men — have mental or drug problems.)

Liberal politicians and social commentators thus have a vested interest in continuing to beat their breasts over Street People's Rights. Some liberals, nonetheless, are jumping ship.

It will be urged that society has no business turning its back on the poor — which is true. The question isn't whether to take care of the poorest and most miserable, it's how to take care of them. The homelessness problem would be alleviated by reopening the mental hospitals to many who need to be there. Present welfare policies encourage desertion and dependence. The absence of vagrancy laws encourages vagrancy.

Meanwhile, let's remember that the poor are best served when the larger society provides a general climate of prosperity — yes, and of order. Poor, not rich, people are the chief victims of crime. We do nobody a favor when we turn over the streets and sidewalks of our great cities to the violent, the alienated, the professionally slothful.

In 1982, a jury in Washington D.C. found John Hinckley Jr. innocent by reason of insanity in the shootings of President Reagan and three others more than a year earlier.

In 1985, American, Brazilian and West German scientists announced that skeletal remains exhumed from a graveyard in Brazil were those of Nazi war criminal Dr. Josef Mengele.

Panhandle man claims 50 years in art of western swing

By Pat Sikes

CLAUDE (AP) — R.T. "Windy" Wood is a prophet in his own land, hoping to convince non-believers that western swing music will save their souls.

Many folks who have grown up since the 1930s danced their first two-step to the beat of western swing, so from Turkey to Tulsa, Wood is preaching to the choir.

But for the backsliders and those lost souls who have not had the opportunity to hear the word, Wood might have the answer. Wood is one of the last of a breed of musicians who can claim to be western swing authorities. Fifty years on the road and his nomination for the Western Swing Hall of Fame are testaments to his valid credentials.

Perry Jones, a director and Hall of Fame committee chairman of the Western Swing Society in Sacramento, Calif., says the Claude resident has a good chance of being inducted into the society's Hall of Fame the first Sunday of October.

"We typically induct 18 people a year," Jones said. "We average between 80 and 100 nominees a year." Society officials will make their selections in August.

Not far from his Collingsworth County origin, Wood has retired his 18-wheeler and disbanded the Windy Wood Caravan for greener pastures in Claude, where he still produces recordings.

Charles Townsend, a West Texas State University professor, western swing historian and Bob Wills biographer, cited Wood's contribution to the preservation and perpetuation of western swing.

Townsend wrote that Wood is "very important in both the United States and Europe as a patron of western swing." As part of the renaissance of western swing in the 1970s, "Wood and a host of other artists issued tribute albums commemorating the life and work of Bob Wills .. (He) put together a band that could play both 'Bob Wills' and 'Spade Cooley' and even combine them into the Windy Wood style."

The experiment resulted in two albums entitled "Kings' Row!" and "The Classic Sound of Western Swing" and brought Wood international recognition. The Franklin Mint Music Society reviewed the latter album and judged Wood's lively arrangement of "Charmaine" to be among the top 100 country and western tunes ever recorded.

The two "kings" who produced the almost indescribable sound of western swing led sometimes turbulent private lives. Wills had trouble with alcohol; Cooley died after eight years in the penitentiary for murdering his wife.

Reseachers: AIDS vaccines show progress

FLORENCE, Italy (AP) — A top AIDS researcher predicted Thursday that some trial vaccines intended to prevent infection by the virus could be ready for wider testing within three years.

Another researcher at a week-long international conference of AIDS experts said a genetically modified version of the virus itself shows promise as a possible treatment for people who already are infected.

Eleven possible vaccines are being tested on people in limited trials to check the safety of doses, said Dani P. Bolognesi, who directs the Center for AIDS Research at Duke University in North Carolina.

"Some of them have proven safe" and have produced immunites to different degrees Bolognesi told a news conference.

Researchers do not know how well any of the 11 vaccines will prevent infection by the HIV virus, Bolognesi said. But he said such testing "within the next three years with some of these candidates is realistic."

The treatment using genetic engineering would create an empty "shell" of the HIV virus and replace its genes with others, said William A. Haseltine of Harvard's Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

The therapy could only be used on people who already are infected because it would be possible that live HIV would remain in the genetically redesigned material.

"It's not ready for clinical trials," Haseltine said. "Maybe in a few years."

Congress picks Rao as premier

NEW DELHI, India (NYT) — P.V. Narasimha Rao, an ailing 70-year-old former foreign minister who has loyally served the Congress Party for five decades, was chosen on Thursday by the party to serve as India's ninth prime minister.

Aggressive efforts by a younger rival, Sharad Pawar, the powerful Bombay-based party leader, to wrest the prime minister's job from Rao, collapsed in mid-morning under pressure from state party bosses and loyalists who served under Rajiv Gandhi, the party leader who was killed on May 21.

Pawar, who is chief minister of the western state of Maharashtra, was viewed by these critics as too independent, too strong-willed, and too determined to break the traditional grip over the Congress Party by the "Hindi belt" of large northern states.

After Rao's unanimous selection by a show of hands of Congress Party lawmakers, he was driven, under heavy security, to the office of India's president, Ramaswamy Venkataraman, for a 40-minute meeting. Rao will be sworn in on Friday precisely at 12:50 p.m., which was deemed by his astrologer to be a propitious moment for him.

Jury sentences defendant to 20 years

■ Ivy Ray McGruder also fined $15,000 for two convictons.

By David Morris
Staff Writer

A Midland jury on Thursday sentenced Ivy Ray McGruder, 27, to 20 years in prison and fined him $15,000 for killing a man and attempting to kill a woman last December 22.

The five-man, seven-woman jury found McGruder guilty Wednesday of voluntary manslaughter in the stabbing death of 23-year-old Abel Tucker Hernandez. Jurors also found McGruder guilty of attempted murder in the stabbing of Hernandez's wife, 20-year-old Antricia Bedford Shaw.

The sentencing came on day four of McGruder's trial in 238th District Court before Judge John Hyde.

Ms. Shaw, who listened to the jury's decision from a wheelchair in the courtroom, said she was "satisfied" with the outcome of the trial.

Jurors sentenced McGruder to 20 years on both the manslaughter and attempted murder charges, but the terms will run concurrently. Twenty years is the maximum prison term for both offenses, which are second-degree felonies.

The jury fined McGruder $7,500 for each offense. The maximum fine for a second-degree felony is $10,000.

McGruder was originally charged with murder — a first-degree felony with a maximum punishment of 99 years or life in prison — in connection with Hernandez's death.

McGruder claimed that he stabbed Hernandez and Ms. Shaw in self-defense. He admitted on the witness stand Wednesday that he attacked the couple at their house at 3411 Park Lane after the threesome spent an evening smoking crack cocaine.

The attack left Ms. Shaw partially paralyzed on one side of her body, she testified earlier in the week.

McGruder's attorney, Tom Hirsch of Odessa, had asked jurors to sentence his client to probation.

Nevertheless, he said he was content with the jury's decision, which was handed down after about four hours of deliberation.

"I'm not surprised," Hirsch said. "That jury was a hard-working jury. That guy (McGruder) got a fair trial."

Midland District Attorney Al Schorre, who prosecuted McGruder, said he was pleased that McGruder received the maximum sentence.

Teen Court seeks funding

■ The program, under which youths are tried by a jury of their peers, requests funds from several taxing entities to cover operating expenses.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Young offenders will get their day in court as long as Midland's Teen Court gets its funding.

Teen Court is requesting funds from several taxing entities to help cover the expenditures of the program.

"I already have money in hand from the county and Junior League," said Mary Beck, executive director of the program. "And I have requested $11,000 from the city and the same from the school district."

The court gives young offenders a taste of the judicial system while allowing them to make restitution in a form other than paying fines or serving sentences handed down by the adult criminal justice system.

The court allows teen-agers to be tried by a jury of their peers, and also allows them to keep offenses off their records.

"The teen-agers find out that some of their actions were not only unacceptable to their parents, they were unacceptable to their peers," Ms. Beck said.

Sentences consist of attending life-management classes, performing community service hours and serving on jury duty.

Ms. Beck said the Midland Teen Court is modeled after Odessa's Teen Court and operated by the Junior League of Midland.

She said the operating budget has increased from $31,565 in 1990-91 to $34,341 in 1991-92.

"We are asking for more money from everyone this year," Ms. Beck said. "Last year the city and the school district each provided $10,000."

The county contributed $1,500 for operations, the same amount it provided last year. "But, the county also provides the office space, the use of the court facilities, utilities and even a parking place," Ms. Beck said.

She said that district and county judges, and members of the Midland County Bar Association volunteer their time to preside over the courts.

Nonetheless, operating costs such as postage to send notification of court dates, office insurance, supplies and workmen's compensation have all increased.

'I already have money in hand from the county and Junior League. And I have requested $11,000 from the city and the same from the school district...We are asking for more money from everyone this year. Last year the city and the school district each provided $10,000.'

— Mary Beck, Teen Court executive director

School board trustee Jackie Hamilton said she is in favor of funding the program, but state appropriations to the district won't be revealed until August.

"Teen Court is just wonderful," Ms. Hamilton said. "It is very successful. I have seen kids work on a jury, or work as a prosecuting or a defense attorney. It encourages them to go into law enforcement."

"I really like the Teen Court approach, especially with the criminal justice system being so overloaded," said school board trustee Gary Willis. "But the school district's budget is uncertain now, and there may even be another Legislative session after July."

Ms. Hamilton said principals can refer students to Teen Court and the progam is used by the school district in various ways.

About 7,728 youths attended court or classes — including life skills and safe driving classes — offered by the program last year (June 1, 1990 through May 31, 1991).

"The attendance number is high because some of the students are assigned to three jury duties and several life skills or driving courses," Ms. Beck said.

Ms. Beck said 530 cases were heard in the courts and 478 students completed all phases of the program last year.

"It (Teen Court) touches a lot lives," Ms. Beck said.

"I just can't see anybody that is not in favor of Teen Court," Ms. Hamilton said.

Board trustees will consider funding the program at Tuesday's meeting. City Council members will vote on funding the program in July.

City plans to start building firefighters' facility

■ Construction of training center at the airport expected to begin in the fall.

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

Firefighters at Midland International Airport could have a new training facility by the year's end, city officials said Thursday.

The city is planning to start building a $672,601 training center at the airport sometime this fall, Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor said.

On Tuesday, city councilmen are scheduled to vote on whether to proceed with the $43,101 design phase of the project.

The city still is awaiting word from the Federal Aviation Administration on 90 percent of the funding for the facility. An application for the $605,341 grant was filed last December.

"We're going to get it," Airport Director Ken Day said. "They have advised me that the funds are likely to be approved."

The city, meanwhile, would fund $67,601 of the project.

Day said the application's chances are good because the airport is required to have a facility for firefighters to practice responding to aircraft crashes. A decision is expected by September's end, he said.

McGregor said construction would include clearing the land, erecting a 6-foot security fence, a control center, a road to the site and a storage facility.

The funding, he said, also would cover digging a pit for "hot drills" and a limited supply of jet fuel and water.

Bids on construction, which would take between 90 and 120 days to complete, would be awarded in the fall, McGregor said.

The FAA requires airport firefighters to conduct hot drills at least once annually. The drill involves extinguishing blazing oil, gas or some other type of flammable substance.

Midland International firefighters were conducting yearly hot drills in an earthen pit near where the Confederate Air Force is building its museum.

Because of the CAF move, the city had to find another training site within a year, officials said.

The old pit also did not meet federal environmental standards. The Environmental Protection Agency requires that hot drill sites be lined with concrete, under which is a lining of synthetic material to prevent flammable substances from seeping into the soil.

Day said the city may eventually try to make the proposed center a regional training facility, a project city officials have said would cost up to $3 million.

Midland is an ideal location for such a facility because plenty of land is available for the drill site, officials said. It would be located just north of Midland

Benefactor helps fulfill teen's dream

■ Anonymous donor writes $1,900 check, which will allow McAllen student to attend language camp in Moscow.

The McAllen Memorial High School graduate was one of four students selected nationwide to participate in the language camp, which begins on July 11.

Of the 200 students involved, Flores finished with the highest score of 104.

He is also fluent in German, Spanish and English,and was ranked in the top 10 percent of his graduating class under an advanced honors curriculum.

Flores was awarded $500 toward the trip but needed $1,900 to attend.

Mitchell County sheriff indicted

COLORADO CITY (AP) — A Mitchell County grand jury Thursday indicted Sheriff Wendell Bryant on four misdemeanor charges alleging official misconduct and sexual harassment of county employees.

Bryant, 39, was arrested Thursday afternoon by a Texas Ranger and later was released on $3,500 in bonds, said Mitchell County Attorney Clay Strange.

Bryant, who has been sheriff since 1981, faces removal from office if he is found guilty on any of the charges, said Strange, who also has filed a civil petition seeking Bryant's removal and accusing him of sexual harassment.

The sheriff also faces punishment of up to two years in jail and up to $2,000 in fines for each of the sexual harassment charges.

The sexual harassment charges include allegations from sheriff's deputy Carol Hutto and jailer Gwen Henderson, who in sworn statements accused Bryant of touching and stroking them "without provocation or consent."

The incidents occurred at the sheriff's office for a year or more but more frequently within the past few months, the petition says.

Jackson criticizes Bush's opposition to civil rights bill

Jackson

AUSTIN (AP) — During a visit to promote his Rainbow Coalition agenda Thursday, the Rev. Jesse Jackson blasted President Bush's characterization of civil rights legislation as a "quota" bill and called for creation of a national health care system.

He also criticized the federal agency created to oversee the savings and loan bailout for giving only a small fraction of its contracts to minorities.

Jackson said he had not yet decided whether he would make a third try for the Democratic nomination for president in 1992 after running unsuccessfully in 1984 and 1988.

Instead, he said he was in town to promote his program of public service.

"These matters of substance and direction is what I am mobilizing people around the country to focus on through the Rainbow Coalition. Any decision that I might make beyond my current level of public service will take place perhaps in the fall," Jackson said after a meeting with members of the Texas coalition, including minority, gay and abortion rights activists.

Jackson serves as a nonvoting "shadow senator" from the District of Columbia.

He also visited an Austin AIDS treatment facility and was scheduled to meet privately with state leaders, including Gov. Ann Richards, before leaving for Houston to continue his weeklong tour of Oklahoma and Texas.

Thursday, Jackson said Bush's opposition to the 1991 Civil Rights Act "has reduced American politics to its lowest common denominator by race baiting."

"During the civil rights era, George Wallace stood in the school house door and said, 'Segregation today, tomorrow and forever.' Today, President Bush stands in the White House door and says, 'No quotas today, tomorrow and forever,'" Jackson said.

"We must not allow the country to be torn apart and diverted by the issue of quota. Whites, blacks and browns have good reason to fear the loss of jobs because we are losing jobs" to foreign cheap labor markets, he said.

Jackson also threatened to organize a protest of the Resolution Trust Corp., the agency supervising the S&L cleanup, unless it establishes an affirmative action program in awarding contracts.

In the RTC's Southwest Region which includes Texas, more than 67 percent of the agency's $160 million in contracts have gone to white men, Jackson said.

About 27 percent of the contracts went to white women, while less than 5 percent were awarded to black men, he said.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Kidnap, assault

Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 32-year-old woman reported to police that she was kidnapped and sexually assaulted by an acquaintance early Thursday morning, police said.

According to police reports, the woman was abducted about 1 a.m. by a 23-year-old Hispanic man, who drove her to an unknown location near Goldsmith. She told police the man forced her to perform oral sex and then undress. The man then tried — unsucessfully — to have sexual intercourse with her, police reports said.

The woman told police she convinced the man not to sexually assault her and to bring her home.

During an argument at the woman's home, a 16-year-old intervened when he noticed the man grabbing and pulling the woman. A fight ensued and the man fled.

Police were looking for the suspect on Thursday.

Police were called to a burglary in progress about 7:40 p.m. at a home in the 100 block of Glenwood Drive.

DREAM: Community donations to help teen study in Moscow

(From 1B)

The $1,900 was way beyond the means of his parents and it seemed the trip would remain only a dream.

But after an article on Flores appeared in The Monitor, the community responded with offers of contributions to the 1991 graduate.

"I just can't believe it. I walked in here (University Outreach) Monday morning... and they started telling me about all the calls and I just couldn't believe it," he said.

"All four lines here have been ringing constantly," said Monica Gonzalez, the center's director. She said they have been "watching the checks fall like rain. It's been really incredible," she said.

People have donated money, offered rides, called to congratulate him and offered to sponsor fund-raisers on his behalf.

One man, who asked to remain anonymous, presented Joey with a check for $1,900.

"He told me that I had to promise him that later on when I was able, I had to help someone," Flores said. "That's not a problem because that's what I believe in.

"I know what it's like to go through hard times, and if I can, I'll help someone like me," he said.

The anonymous philanthropist also told Flores that he had been searching for 10 years for someone to help.

"He said when he read the article, he thought, 'This is one I'm going to help,' " Flores said, remaining faithful to his promise to keep the man's name a secret.

Another man came in and gave $2.

"He said this is all I can give but I want him to have it," Gonzalez said. "It's been that kind of response. The community has really come through for Joey."

Several people donated $10 or more, and Gonzalez has opened an account at Texas Commerce Bank for Flores.

He was given his first checkbook and had to be instructed on how to write a check.

He made his first check out Tuesday for housing at The University of Texas-Austin, where he will be a freshman Russian language major in the fall. He received a $10,000 Texas Achievement Award from UT-Austin.

At this point, the modest teen-ager is still trying to grapple with the fact that he will be going to Moscow.

"It's all been so much. I thought about it today. I still can't believe I'm actually going to get on that plane and go to Moscow. I'm scared and excited," he said.

"My dad was happy. He wanted to cry almost but of course he couldn't in front of me," he said. "My Mom just let it loose.

"She just started crying. She's really a firm believer in God," Flores said. "She was telling me, 'You see how there's a God out there. We've suffered a lot but it's all worth it.' "

BILL: Jackson promotes program of public service

an RTC contract in Texas, he said

Teresa McUsic, spokeswoman for the RTC's Southwest Region, said the agency was holding a series of seminars for women and minorities on applying for RTC contracts, and employs specialists to encourage applications from minorities and women.

Only 12 percent of registered Texas businesses that would be eligible to receive the RTC contracts are owned by minorities or women, she said.

"We certainly are working for more, and we intend to get more (minority contractors)," Ms. McUsic said. "We are welcoming and encouraging and trying to get people to come forward, but the numbers are not as strong."

Jackson also called for establishing a G.I. bill of rights. Veterans of the Persian Gulf War "deserve more than parades and the ribbons because those are symbols. They cannot cash papier-mache and ribbons in for a health plan or for an adequate house or for an adequate education for their children," he said.

'Veterans...deserve more than parades...'

— Jesse Jackson

He also said the United States should start a bailout for itself, similar to the way it has aided countries in Eastern Europe, and said the Rainbow Coalition was planning a voter registration push across Texas and the Southwest.

Bomb explodes

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — A bomb exploded inside a car Thursday, killing a man as he apparently was holding the explosive device, police said.

Alfredo Ramos, 23, of Brownsville died at 5:40 a.m. in the vehicle on the southeast side of Brownsville, said investigators.

Three other people inside the vehicle at the time of the explosion were not injured, said Brownsville police Detective Robert Zapeda.

He said authorities were told that the device was thrown into the car and Ramos "picked it up and leaned out of the car to get rid of it when it exploded."

However, authorities also were looking into the possibility that the device was being transported in the car when it detonated.

The three survivors, one man and two women, were being interviewed by police, said Zapeda.

enabling older residents to independently live in their own homes. After the initial deep cleaning, weekly visits are made to keep the homes clean and habitable. Citywide also does yard work and provides limited emergency assistance. No fees are charged to program participants.

Harry Hinkle, Casa de Amigos president, said, "I think this is a step forward for both agencies. Citywide is adding services that we haven't been able to offer in the past. It also is compatible with our senior services programs."

Joe Dominey, Citywide board president, said the umbrella arrangement would save a large percentage of administrative overhead, allowing Citywide to concentrate on direct delivery of services.

"By affiliating with Casa de Amigos we are lowering the cost of each unit of service to our participants, while at the same time obtaining the professional management of a strong community organization," Dominey said.

Citywide program coordinator Cathy Roberson supervises a field crew of three workers, plus temporary workers and volunteers as needed.

In July, the organization will move its offices to Casa's facilities at 1101 E. Garden Lane.

In addition, they said air traffic here is not as congested as it is at airports in larger cities. Drills would have to be scheduled at least 30 minutes before aircraft landings.

The regional facility would include mock aircraft and buildings that would be set aflame and then extinguished by firefighters.

Houseflies may proliferate in combination of heat, damp and manure, ag agent warns

During this time of year, climatic conditions favor housefly production around the farm. With proper temperature and moisture, a generation of houseflies can be produced in a little less than one week.

Kiker

To control the buildup of houseflies on farm premises, use either poison baits or residual sprays.

Baits are most effective when used before populations have reached excessive numbers. They must be readily accepted by flies and must be easily accessible to them.

Residual sprays can be quite effective for quick population reduction. However, additional applications are usually required at regular intervals as specified on the label of the material used.

For maximum benefit, apply residual sprays to surfaces where flies rest, such as walls, ceilings, support beams and trusses. Also spray areas where manure collects. Apply spray materials thoroughly so that surfaces are wet, but stop before the point of runoff.

Several ready-to-use baits and residual sprays are cleared by the EPA for housefly control. The Texas Agriculture Extension Service booklet B-1306, 'Suggestions for managing external parasites of Texas livestock and poultry," contains information on products used for premise housefly control and is available at the county extension office.

Before purchasing a product, read the label carefully to make sure the material is appropriate for your particular situation.

Federal inmates learn gardening skills

By Susan Fahlgren
Associated Press Writer

BRYAN, Texas — Lee Williams and Ruby Stephens spend their days chatting about their families, attending classes and gardening in the Texas sunshine.

But the two women aren't part of a coffee klatch or neighborhood car pool. They are drug offenders serving time at the Federal Prison Camp. And they're future Master Gardeners.

"I've always had a garden at home and I like to work outside," said Mrs. Stephens, 48, wiping her forehead with the back of a dirty hand and breaking into a grin. "And we've learned to wade in mud."

Ms. Williams, 67, recently trudged through a muddy field, picking squash. "My mother and I always had a garden when I was staying with her. We never did as well as this, though."

The two are among a dozen inmates selected for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service's first-ever Master Gardener program conducted at a prison through nearby Texas A&M University.

Lisa Whittlesey, an extension service horticulturalist, acts as the instructor for the group at the low-security prison now located at the former Allen Academy campus.

The course is like any that the extension service provides for master certification: 50 hours of gardening instruction, 50 hours of volunteer work in horticulture and an examination.

Texas is one of 25 states in the country that offer the Master Gardener program. More than 500 Texans have completed such programs in 20 counties in the past decade.

"This is a new experience for me," Mrs. Whittlesey said. "I've taught high school horticulture, but nothing like this."

At the two-year-old prison, Mrs. Whittlesey teaches botany, landscaping and horticulture in a trailer for half the day. She plods through the fields with inmates for the other half, showing them how to grow crops and flowers, fertilize and landscape.

"They weren't what I expected," Mrs. Whittlesey said. "I thought they would be big, brawling, brute-looking women. I thought most of them would be young, like in their 20s. But a lot of them are older and have husbands and children.

"And they're serious about gardening," she said. "You can just tell them, 'This is what needs to be done' and they'll do it."

"She's a slave-driver," Mrs. Stephens said with a wink and a smile.

The class began in mid-March and will continue through the fall. Already, the inmates have built rail-edged flower beds and landscaped several buildings on campus. In addition, they have planted fruits and vegetables to supplement the food rations.

"It's good for the prison and it's good for the women," Mrs. Whittlesey said.

The women are mostly "white-collar" criminals, serving sentences for drug offenses, embezzlement or fraud, said Terri Lane, assistant superintendent at the prison camp.

"Most of the women in here are mothers and a lot of them are heads of single-parent households," Ms. Lane said. Many have high school diplomas, but few have skills for a high-paying career.

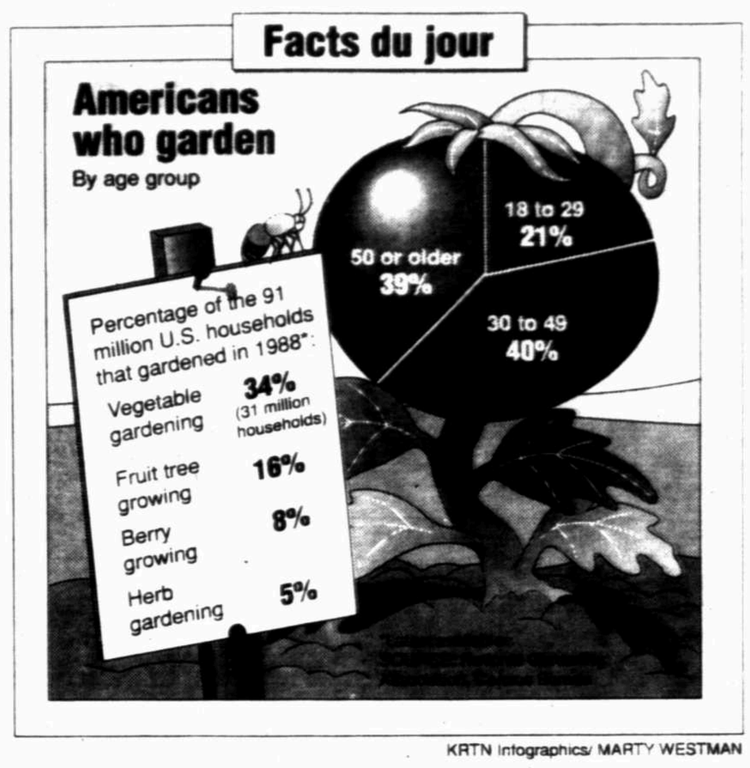
The prison itself still is being remodeled since its days as an academy. But there are no fences, no guards armed with semiautomatic weapons nor bars on the windows. The women sleep in dormitories and the grounds look more like a college campus.

But prison officials credit the gardening class with adding to that environment.

"We do like to have a nice facility that will blend into the community," said Janie Rodriguez, supervisor of education at the prison. "But we also were looking for a trade to teach these women. The Master Gardener program has been a benefit to both the institution and the inmate population."

The handpicked students in Mrs. Whittlesey's class have learned to draft their landscaping ideas, cut and place treated rails, test soils, order, plant and fertilize flowers and shrubs.

They've transformed a muddy courtyard into a gazebo area for picnics and suntanning. They've relandscaped the headmaster's yard. They've learned about the parts of the plants, how they reproduce and thrive, and what to do when they don't. They've learned about vegetables, the importance of weeding, root treatments and building up beds. They've picked tomatoes, squash, watermelons and peppers.



KRTN Infographics/ MARTY WESTMAN

The prison had its own greenhouse and a scraggly garden before, but inmates said they quickly learned about planting mistakes.

"I was surprised when we first started in the garden," Mrs. Stephens said. "We thought Mrs. Whittlesey was kind of touched (in the head) because she had us pull up everything. But now we can see that she really knew what she was doing."

Inmates have since grown bushels of vegetables — some from seed and some from seedlings. Class members have each become experts on one particular crop and have shared information with others.

"It's interesting to see the way the different ones grow," said Ms. Williams, the tomato expert.

But the best part of the class, inmates said, is that it has allowed them to feel the success of their own accomplishments.

"I let them do things their own way," Mrs. Whittlesey said. "We talk about it and they do it. They get really upset if they've planted something and see it doesn't grow as they planned.

"They take more of a personal ownership in what they're doing now," Mrs. Whittlesey said.

And it shows as the inmates guide visitors around the field, showing off prize squash and flowering arrangements.

"She has treated us like adults and humans," Mrs. Stephens said of her instructor. "She lets us make our own decisions about things. And she compliments our work and pats us on the back when we do well. That's important for kids and it's important for adults, too."

Already, Mrs. Stephens said some of the other inmates are jealous of the gardeners and are lobbying to get into the next class.

"There are other jobs here, but this keeps our interest," Mrs. Stephens said. "And we go every day that we can into the classroom. You can see what you're learning every day by trying new things in the field."

Plains wind erosion damage increases

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wind erosion in the Great Plains damaged nearly 8.2 million acres, a 5 percent increase from last season, the Agriculture Department said this week.

The damage was reported in the 10 states that make up the Great Plains, stretching from Texas to Montana. Last year the damage totaled about 7.8 million acres, including 1.6 million acres in Texas.

"Much of this damage is due to the prolonged drought, which resulted in insufficient (crop) cover," said William Richards, chief of the department's Soil Conservation Service. "One windstorm on March 12 in Kansas damaged nearly 1.7 million acres."

The agency measures wind damage during a seven-month season, which runs from Nov. 1 through May 31, when winds are usually the strongest and soils the driest. The survey covers 541 counties in the 10 states.

Although up from last season, the 1990-91 damage was far less than in some previous years.

In 1988-89, when there was widespread drought, about 14.3 million acres were damaged by wind. The most was 15.3 million acres damaged in 1954-55, the year that the agency began annual records.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

FRIDAY, JUNE 21, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Constructive changes will take place. September and October are wonderful months for business travel. Your career gathers momentum. Unexpected financial gains are possible in December; stay on your toes! A romantic interlude in January 1992 could lead to your tying the knot. Make new investments in early spring. By this time next year you will have a strong desire to get away from it all. Take that long-planned foreign vacation.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Meredith Baxter, pitcher Rick Sutcliffe, England's young Prince William, actor Michael Gross.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Act ready to withdraw from a non-committal love and you will find out how serious your partner really is. Other people pick up your hints. Aim higher where your career is concerned.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You excel on the social level today. The things you say remind your friends what a true gem you are! Be careful on the job — something could be hidden from public view.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Well-informed friends or an authority figure read you like a book today. You also know what they are thinking! Seize a golden opportunity to make a dream come true. Fulfill a promise.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Teamwork is needed to land new business and take care of projects already underway. Plan specific weekend activities for children. Repay an important social obligation.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You are apt to feel more energetic than your associates today. It might be wise to slow your pace a little bit. Try to steal some time alone with your loved ones.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Someone influential may be trying to send you a message of great import. Once you are enabled to decode it, take proper action. Listen carefully to a partner's ideas. You learn something valuable!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The extent of your resources will convince others of your success. Build a strong financial base as quickly as possible. Stop letting others treat you like a pawn. Assert your independence.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov.21): Hold fast to the position you consider best for yourself and your allies. This is not the time to play games with people of influence. Valuable property should be fully safeguarded and insured.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Overcome any dissatisfaction you may feel and try to extract more pleasure from your job. Your prestige grows. A candid chat may improve a domestic situation. Offer to do more to help.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your intuition is not as keen as usual today. Postpone answering any questions of great import. You need more time to arrive at a final decision. Take charge of your own business affairs.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Surprising developments could complicate an already puzzling situation. Avoid going to extremes. Someone from your past reappears. Reviving an old romance could be a mistake.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The element of surprise pays a key role in your forging a new friendship today. Go with the spontaneity of the moment. Only in financial matters must you apply the brakes. Treat mate gently.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are somewhat shy and tend to cling to their parents during their early years. Once they find their place in the sun, these youngsters will exude confidence and display a wonderful sense of humor. Thoughtful and perceptive, they make excellent communicators. Many noted writers and lecturers were born on this date. Loyal and affectionate, these Cancerians usually have a host of friends.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North

Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Six of ♡

The good book tells us that it is more blessed to give than to receive. At the bridge table, that's a sure-fire formula for going broke—but there are exceptions.

Once East had opened one heart, South gave up all thoughts of slam and simply made the value bid. West's double can be attributed either to a fit of pique or knowledge of declarer's ability; we would not have been confident of a double of six spades!

West led the singleton heart and East made the good technical play of the nine—West surely was not leading away from the ace, so it cost nothing to discover who held the queen. Declarer now had nine tricks, seven trumps and two hearts, and the 10th could come only from a heart ruff. So South won the queen and pitched the ace of hearts on the table and the contract out the window in one fell swoop.

West ruffed away the ace of hearts and returned a trump. Although declarer was able to ruff a heart in dummy, he was back to the nine tricks with which he had started—down one.

Even had there been no one-heart opening bid, declarer's play was less than perfect. Getting a heart ruff was vital, but so was preserving the ace of hearts as a winner. All declarer needed to do to fulfill the contract was to lead a low heart at trick two, surrendering a trick immediately that would have to be lost in any event.

Suppose West ruffs and returns a trump. Declarer wins in hand, ruffs a heart with the table's jack, returns to hand with a club ruff and draws the rest of the enemy's trumps. Then the ace of hearts can be cashed with impunity and declarer has ten tricks—nine major-suit winners and a heart ruff.

With Madonna on movie's team, Winger takes walk

CULVER CITY, Calif. (AP) — There's been a lineup change in the women's baseball movie, "A League of Their Own." Debra Winger is off the team; Geena Davis is being called up to replace her.

Winger

Ms. Davis, a box-office slugger in "Thelma and Louise," was hired after Miss Winger left the film.

Miss Winger's publicist, Pat Kingsley, confirmed she wouldn't be appearing in the movie, but declined to elaborate on the reasons.

Davis

According to a source close to the film who spoke on condition of anonymity, Miss Winger, who starred in "Urban Cowboy," and "The Sheltering Sky" was replaced because of disagreements with director Penny Marshall and Columbia Pictures.

Miss Winger objected to the casting of Madonna in the movie, the source said.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Billionaire Gordon Getty is raising roofs, not to mention eyebrows, with a $4.25 million plan for buying and redecorating the house next door.

The oil heir and his wife, Ann, want to raise part of the second floor of the adjoining house by three feet and remodel the facade to match the Italian Renaissance style of their 12,750-square-foot mansion next door.

Inside, the addition will include a swimming pool and a 40-by-24-foot music room where Mr. Getty can "compose his own music and listen to it," architect Ed McEachron said.

The music room will hold 70 seats for social occasions, such as fund-raising parties, but some neighbors think the audience's cars might be harder to accommodate.

Never fear, says city planner Gene Coleman, who isn't worried about parking in the neighborhood where valet parking is the norm.

The city Planning Commission will rule on the plans next Thursday.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Oscar-winning actress Meryl Streep is a mother again, and it's another daughter.

Louisa Jacobson Gummer weighed in at 6-pounds, 10-ounces when born June 12 at an undisclosed Los Angeles hospital, said a business associate of Miss Streep's who spoke Thursday on condition of anonymity.

It was the fourth child for Miss Streep and her husband, sculptor Donald Gummer, who own homes in Connecticut and on Los Angeles' West Side.

The couple has three other children: Henry, 11, Mary, 7, and Grace, 5.

Miss Streep, who won a best actress Academy Award in 1982 for her role in "Sophie's Choice" and a supporting actress Oscar for "Kramer vs. Kramer" in 1979, recently appeared in "Defending Your Life" and "Postcards From the Edge."

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Actress Cybill Shepherd and actor Blair Underwood will help preside at the dedication of the National Civil Rights Museum on July 4.

Shepherd

The $9.25 million museum is being built at the site of the Lorraine Motel, where Martin Luther King Jr. was slain in 1968.

Underwood portrays lawyer Jonathan Rollins on NBC's "L.A. Law." In the NBC movie "Murder in Mississippi," he portrayed James Chaney, one of three civil rights workers killed near Philadelphia, Miss., in 1964.

Shepherd, who's from Memphis, has appeared in the movie "The Last Picture Show" and the TV series "Moonlighting."

NEW YORK (AP) — When Joe Garagiola heard that Zuni Indian children were playing baseball without decent uniforms or equipment, he got Major League Baseball and some sports equipment manufacturers to pitch in.

The result: On Saturday, Garagiola will be on hand at the Zuni pueblo 50 miles south of Gallup, N.M., to hand out uniforms, bats, gloves and other baseball stuff to 180 boys and girls on 15 teams.

"This team effort is really about the spirit of the game," said Garagiola, the former baseball player and announcer who now coanchors NBC's "Today" show.

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Race car champion Robby Unser was clocked at 82 mph in the straightaway on U.S. Highway 77 south of Nebraska's capital. But it didn't earn him a checkered flag or a cash prize.

The 24-year-old driver from Albuquerque, N.M., who is the 1989 American IndyCar Series champion and son of three-time Indy 500 winner Bobby Unser, was stopped by a Lancaster County Sheriff's Deputy and ticketed for speeding in a 55 mph zone.

FAMILY MATTERS

Children from dysfunctional families learn 'don't feel' rule

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: I am married to an impossible man who says that he "can't feel." How can a person "not feel?" I have just about had it with being married to an iceberg. He is a wonderful provider and a good father to our children. He doesn't go out with the boys or drink or anything bad, but he's cold, cold, cold.

May

I see other couples who talk and touch and seem to have fun with each other. I have tried to discuss this with him but he just says that he doesn't know why he doesn't feel. I'm to the point that I'm ready to give up. Our sex life is gone because I don't want to have sex without anything else. What can I do? FROZEN OUT

DEAR FROZEN: Often a person learns "not to feel" from his or her family of origin. Usually, we learn to safely express feelings and affection from our parents. If the home is dysfunctional for some reason (such as alcoholism), the rules in the home are usually "Don't Talk, Don't Touch, Don't Feel." Look at his family to determine if his upbringing is a possible explanation. If he wants to do something about the situation, he has several options.

If he had a dysfunctional childhood, he might benefit from attending an Adult Children of Alcoholics (ACOA) group. He also may find professional counseling to be helpful.

He might consider performing the following exercise: Some of the different feelings are unconditional love, bliss, joy, compassion and empathy, enthusiasm, contentment, fear, hurt, sadness, shame and guilt, anger, confusion, emptiness and numbness. He should look at these feelings one at a time and think about when he might have experienced each in the last month; then write down the circumstances when each feeling was experienced. If a feeling was not experienced, write that down too.

This exercise is to help him identify different feelings. You might work with him on this by helping to jog his memory about events that might have caused unidentified feelings. The process of identifying and experiencing feelings is a slow and painful one, and I encourage you to be patient. The process may be slow and painful, but it works, so don't give up.

DEAR FAMILY: I wanted to write about the letter from the woman whose 19-year-old son was drinking and had got a DWI. You gave her good advice about her needing to go to Al-Anon. My son did the same thing but it was his father who kept saying everything was OK. He would even help (son) and make excuses for him when he came home drunk. I did all that I could to get my son to stop drinking and my husband to stop covering for him.

A friend finally conviced me to go to Al-Anon with her. I went and it was the best thing that ever happened to me. I have been able to "Let Go and Let God." Believe it or not, once I stopped trying to control my son and husband, my husband started demanding that our son stop drinking or move. I just want to tell that lady to go to Al-Anon, it works! HAPPY, JOYOUS AND FREE

DEAR HAPPY: Thank you for your wonderful letter. God works in many mysterious ways when we make ourselves available through the program.

DEAR READERS: Vacation time is here again, and many families with small children will be "on the road again." Here are some traveling tips that others have found to help make traveling with small children more pleasant.

Take along a goodie bag filled with hand toys that your child can easily handle. Don't take big toys that might create space problems, but do take some books for you to read to him and some for him to read to himself. Coloring books or word puzles are fine IF you child is old enough to not mark up your car!

Adjust your expectations to your child (or children). If they play quietly at home, they probably will travel better than children who require more adult attention. If your child usually does need your attention, plan on riding in the back seat with her and playing games. Do not expect your child to be "Superchild" and behave beyond her years. If your children do not play well together at home, do not expect them to play well together in a confined space. Plan on being involved in their activities.

If you are flying with a baby, take plenty of diapers and bottles. Giving a baby a bottle during takeoff and landing will help his or her ears. The flight attendants will warm the bottle for you. If you are flying with an older child, pack a small goodie bag and take gum for him to chew while taking off and landing.

Try to have fun while you are traveling. Your children will remember these times long after you have forgotten. Vacations with children should be organized FOR the children, not for the adults.

Bacteria cleans restaurant grease

KINGSPORT, Tenn. (AP) — No matter how hard John Maxwell works, his business will always be small — microscopic, in fact. But he can take comfort in that it multiplies quickly. Maxwell, president of Environmental Biotech of Northeast Tennessee, sells grease-eating bacteria to restaurants.

Tommy Thompson, director of operations for Cheers restaurants in Johnson City, said that the day before Maxwell began work, a grease trap had a 3-inch layer on top. Now, Thompson said, it looks like pond water.

Maxwell mixes frozen packets with 12 types of bacteria into five gallons of water. The solution is periodically released into drainage pipes. It is changed every two weeks. Maxwell also checks the pH of the grease trap to make sure there's nothing being poured down the drains, such as bleach, that could kill his bacteria.

The field is called bioremediation. Bacteria has already been used, for example, to help clean up the Exxon Valdez oil spill in Alaska. "We're the first ones I know of that are using a live bacteria in an injection system," said Bill Hadley, president of Environmental Biotech.

John Haines, a research microbiologist with the Environmental Protection Agency in Cincinnati, said scientists are harnessing what nature does anyway. "Bioremediation has been going on in nature for forever and a day," he said.

While bioremediation is relatively inexpensive and effective, it's a slow process, Haines said, and the end product is ecologically harmless.

DEAR ABBY

Clergy should be compensated

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: One would think that after 34 years of pastoral experience, I would have been prepared, but when asked by a professional adult, whose father's funeral I had just conducted, "What do you charge?" I answered, "Nothing"! The reply I received was, "If you will give me the name and address of your church, I will send a check in your honor."

Van Buren

I should have said, "Nothing, but I am accustomed to receiving an honorarium — especially from non-church members." And I could have added, "Today is my third trip to this city, totaling 240 miles. At a mere 20 cents per mile, that would be almost $50 for expenses alone — not including the six to eight hours spent in travel and preparation."

Last month I was asked to conduct a funeral service for a non-church member who lived in our community. I received an honorarium of $100, which was greatly appreciated and set aside for a future vacation.

The majority of pastors are underpaid and taken for granted. My wife reminded me of the time I was paid $10 for a wedding with the suggestion that I split it with the pianist! — ANOTHER GEORGIA PASTOR

DEAR PASTOR: Perhaps your letter will remind readers who require the services of a clergyperson for happy occasions (weddings, christenings,) as well as sad ones (funerals, last rites, etc.) that Hoover is no longer in the White House, and the clergyperson should be appropriately compensated for his/her automobile use, gasoline, dry cleaning, haircut — not to mention the effort and the time spent in preparing and delivering the service.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter and her husband are separated. Their children — an 8-year-old daughter and 11-year-old son — spend one weekend with their father and the next with their mom.

When they are at their father's, both children sleep in the same double bed with him. I think this is a bad idea and I told him so. His reaction to my protestations was, "Well, it's not as though I sleep in the nude — I always wear shorts!"

Abby, both children are developing rapidly and our whole family is concerned about their sleeping arrangements when they're at their dad's. Are we overreacting? Or do you think our concerns are valid? — GRANDMA

DEAR GRANDMA: Your concerns are valid. Not only should your grandson and granddaughter not be sleeping with their father — they should not be sleeping with each other.

DEAR ABBY: Would you please do all the parents of small children (babies especially) a big favor and tell the manufacturers of infant and toddler clothing to stop labeling the clothes by age (3 to 6 months, 18 months, etc.)? Nothing could be more irrelevant.

Our 4-month-old son is in the 95th percentile for length and weight for his age group. His clothes labels read 12 and 18 months. His pediatrician says he is in all respects normal — just big (every bit of 21 pounds).

If clothes were labeled by weight and/or length, making an appropriate purchase without trying to wriggle an overtired infant into the outfit first might be possible. As it is, I have drawers full of sweatsuits given to my baby by well-meaning friends who thought they'd be just right for next winter since the label reads "12 months." Most of these clothes fit him now.

We live in Florida and the thermometer hit 90 degrees yesterday. What a shame. Had the clothes been labeled according to weight, since he was 9½ pounds at birth, most people could have guessed he'd be at least three or four times that size a year later. I imagine parents of "preemies" have similar problems — PAT IN ST. PETE

DEAR PAT: Your suggestion makes sense. Let's hope the folks who manufacture infant and toddler clothing take note.

DEAR ABBY: My stepdaughter "Susie" and her husband, who live out of state and rarely communicate with us, came to visit us last year. Their visit was complicated by the fact that they invited another couple (whom we had never met) and their two children to join them. We made special sleeping accommodations and fed all six of them for several days.

I was ignored, talked down to and insulted by both Susie and her friend "Betsy" during the entire visit. Neither woman offered to help with the meals or dishes — they just sat while I waited on them. When it was time for them to leave, neither Susie nor Betsy said goodbye or thank you. They simply disappeared into their van while I stood there with tears in my eyes and egg on my face!

Now, Susie is making plans to use our home as a stop-over for several days next year — and she's bringing Betsy and family along. I told my husband that I could tolerate Susie and her husband if I had to, but I would not have Betsy and her family as houseguests again.

Abby, am I justified in my decision, and how should this be handled without offending my husband's family? — FRUSTRATED IN FLORIDA

DEAR FRUSTRATED: You are indeed "justified" in your decision, and if any of your husband's family are offended, they need only be told that you do not wish to accommodate guests who come uninvited and leave without so much as a goodbye or thank-you.

DEAR ABBY: I had to laugh when I read the letter from "A Lusting Guy in Indy" who roamed the malls lusting after slim maidens in tight jeans.

After 23 years of marriage, like a lot of other women, I've put on a few extra pounds. Try as I may, I can't get them off.

One day, my hubby asked me — with a sad expression, "Whatever happened to that little 24-inch waist I married?"

I replied — with an equally sad expression, "Well, Dear, I left it in the '50s with your hair!" (He's bald!) — NOBODY'S PERFECT

Carolina sunflower gets protection

Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — A sunflower found only in the Charlotte area has gotten federal protection as an endangered species.

Schweinitz's sunflower is close to extinction in the wild. Only 13 known populations exist in North Carolina and South Carolina, according to the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

"We can consider this one of the rarest plants in the world," said John Nelson, curator of the herbarium at the University of South Carolina.

The sunflower — distinguished by furry leaves and thick carrot-size roots — is found only in Mecklenburg, Cabarrus, Rowan, Stanly and Union counties in North Carolina and in York County, S.C., usually along highway and power line rights of way.

Nora Murdock of the Fish and Wildlife Service said two colonies disappeared between the time the plant was proposed as an endangered species last July and May 7, when the designation took effect.

Advocates learn role

BRONXVILLE, N.Y. (AP) — Sarah Lawrence College has become a training ground for a new profession known as health advocacy.

"The patient advocate's role is to sensitize the hospital staff to patient's perceptions of services and attitudes," explains Joan Marks, director of the program.

"They communicate patient complaints and concerns to initiate changes in hospital policy and procedure. In short, they make the institution more responsive to patient's needs."

According to a representative of the college, patient advocates are currently employed by some 4,000 of the nation's 7,000 hospitals.

NOTICE OF CONSERVATORSHIP OF FOOD INDUSTRY INSURANCE EXCHANGE

Pursuant to Article 21.28-A of the Texas Insurance Code, the Commissioner of Insurance issued an official order, No. 91-0821, effective June 14, 1991, placing Food Industry Insurance Exchange, Keller, Texas, in a state of conservatorship. This company is a reciprocal exchange authorized to write workers' compensation insurance and property and casualty insurance in Texas, pursuant to Chapter 19 of the Texas Insurance Code. The company is licensed in Texas only and historically wrote workers' compensation and property and casualty insurance for Affiliated Food Stores, Inc.

The Commissioner of Insurance finds that pursuant to Article 21.28-A, Section 5, Texas Insurance Code, the company has requested and consented to the appointment of a conservator. Supervision is inadequate to accomplish rehabilitation of the company.

Under the order, the conservator will assume control and operation of the company and will take all steps and legal measures necessary to preserve, protect, and recover the assets and property of the company. Efforts will be directed to the orderly wind up of the affairs of the company for the protection of policyholders, creditors, and the public without the necessity of the appointment of a receiver, if possible.

Covered claim obligations will be paid by the company, by the reinsurer, or by the guaranty fund subject to the limitations provided in law. The guaranty fund provides protection for covered claims up to the amount specified in Article 21.28-C, Texas Insurance Code. Provisions with respect to filing claims remain in force and must be observed.

Any outstanding claims will continue to be handled in the standard process as specified in the insurance contracts issued by the company. Claimants will be notified if there is any change in claims processing or handling.

Policyholders' rights are governed by the Texas Insurance Code, State Board of Insurance rules, Texas Workers' Compensation Commission rules, and by policyholders' individual contracts of insurance. Policyholders with specific questions regarding policy provisions should seek independent legal advice. No action is required by policyholders under Commissioner's Order No. 91-0821. If any action should be required in the future, claimants will be notified.

This notice is published pursuant to Article 21.28-A, Section 5A, Texas Insurance Code (Acts 1989, 71st Legislature, Ch. 1082, Sec. 4.02, eff. September 1, 1989).

Elderly volunteers bring time, talent

By Randolph E. Schmid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Marilyn McAlister had too much time on her hands after her children grew up and left town. Patrick McThee faced long hours of loneliness after he was widowed.

McThee volunteered at the library for the blind in Fairfax County, Va., and Mrs. McAlister offered her services at Traveler's Aid at National Airport.

They are among some 15.5 million people 60 and over who did volunteer work in the past year. That's 41 percent of the people in that age group, according to Marriott Senior Living Services, which conducted a survey of older volunteers.

Millions more are willing to volunteer but are waiting to be asked, said Brian Swinton of Marriott, which operates residential centers for the elderly.

"The study indicates an excellent opportunity to unleash a major force in senior volunteerism," he said.

Joyce T. Berry, U.S. commissioner on aging, said her agency is launching a $15 million campaign to encourage volunteerism through an Eldercare Volunteer Corps.

"After your spouse dies, and you have no children, you can feel useless, you don't have any mission in life," McThee said. Volunteering "makes you feel useful."

McThee said he was familiar with the library for the blind because of his wife, who had impaired vision. After he was widowed, he offered to help out.

AT FIRST, visiting the library brought back memories, but the only drawback he cites now is a little guilt for not doing more.

Mrs. McAlister said she volunteered because "I needed something to do."

Much of her work at the airport involves helping people find their way around: "Sometimes it is getting to the Metro, directions to hotels, I have seen a lot of deaf children come in and need help to find their plane," she said.

The Marriott survey found that among Americans 66 to 69, 4.4 million had volunteered, followed by 3.9 million among those 60 to 64. There were 3.4 million volunteers aged 70 to 74, 2.6 million in their late 70s, and 1.2 million people 80 and over who volunteered.

Women, who outnumber men in older age groups, are also slightly ahead in volunteering, 8.2 million to 7.3 million.

On average, volunteers donated about 3.6 hours per day worked, and worked 64 days a year. About one-fourth said they would have been willing to give more time if asked.

WHAT DO these volunteers do?

The biggest share, 6.5 million, make telephone calls and home visits to people, providing companionship and assistance.

Serving on boards and committees was the second most common function, cited by 5.8 million people, and 5 million give of their time and talents as educators and instructors.

The study found 4.9 million working in fund-raising activities, 3.5 million providing clerical services and 3.2 million acting as supervisors.

Other categories included providing counseling, 2.8 million; doing repairs, 2.8 million; nutrition information, 2.8 million; health services, 2.1 million; professional services, 2.1 million and cooking and housekeeping, 1.8 million.

Where do they do it?

Fifty-seven percent of the volunteers said they donated their time to churches and other religious organizations. Social service organizations placed second at 32 percent, followed by civil and cultural organizations, 25 percent, and schools, 22 percent.

Best old age involves both quality, quantity

By Dr. Henry F. Page

There is nothing new about living to an advanced old age. For example, think of Methuselah (1000 years) or walk on the grave of Thomas Parr (1483-1635) who lies in Westminister Abbey perhaps in part due to the fact that he was tried and convicted of rape at the age of 122.

Page

These persons were rare exceptions agewise, but now the new startling fact is that the average life span is attaining dizzying heights — from 40 years in 1850 to almost 80 years in 1991. The original increase was due to more people reaching upper middle age, but now, it represents old people growing even older. This includes not only orchestra leaders and comedians, but also the general population.

The ancient Eskimos solved the problem by setting the old chief on the large cake of ice and pushing him off into the vast North Sea.

Our present day Judio-Christian society gives our senior-senior citizens "tender loving care" plus attempts to prolong their lives with an array of scientific invasive modalities, such as tubes, outside the body breathing and heart stimulators, intravenous feeding, surgical implants and transplants.

All this is great when the prospect of resuming a worthwhile life-style is good, but when all one can hope for is preservation of a viable vegetable, such measures comprise cruel and unwanted punishment.

Unfortunately, well meaning therapeutic attempts may result in prolongation of death rather than life. This constitutes the most common scenario, but there is another side to the problem as exemplified by the following story:

Randall Sprague was a juvenile diabetic living in Indianapolis in 1919. At that point in time, diabetics had a two year life expectancy if one adhered to a very unpleasant diet and avoided most normal activity.

At the end of his allotted time, when he was at death's door, insulin was discovered by Banting and Best. Randall responded promptly and eventually became a chief surgeon at the Mayo Clinic. As such, he saved the life of a desperatlely sick young doctor named George Minot, who in turn discovered the cure for Pernicious Anemia — a wide spread fatal disease. So young Sprague, by making a long unpleasant fight against "hopeless" odds, ended up saving hundreds of thousands of lives.

How can a person facing the possibility of joining the pre-cemetary group protect oneself from inappropriate medical care? This now can be done legally and easily by allowing a proxy to make health care decisions in the form of an advanced directive called a "Durable Power of Attorney for Health Care."

A descriptive booklet and proper forms are available in the ofice of Chris Newman at Manor Park and Trinty Towers, or by contacting the Texas Association of Homes for the Aging (TAHA) at 720 Brazos # 1104, Austin, Texas, 78701.

It will help you avoid the triumph of science over both common sense and religion.

Schiraldi signs

CHICAGO (AP) — The Texas Rangers acquired right-hander Calvin Schiraldi from the Houston organization on Thursday and purchased the contract of right-hander Terry Mathews from Oklahoma City of the American Association.

To make room, the Rangers designated pitchers Joe Bitker and Mark Petkovsek for assignment. Both were placed on waivers for the purpose of outright assignment to Oklahoma City.

Schiraldi, 29, was pitching for Tucson where he had a 3-2 record with a 4.47 earned run average in 15 games. He signed with Houston after being released by San Diego this spring. Schiraldi is 32-38 with a 4.22 ERA and 21 saves in 232 games lifetime with the New york Mets, Boston Red Sox, Chicago Cubs and San Diego.

Schiraldi, acquired for a player to be named, is expected to report Friday.

Mathews, 25, was 5-4 with a 2.82 ERA in 13 games at Oklahoma City. He was 4-1 in his last five starts.

ACU stays Div. II

ABILENE (AP) — Abilene Christian University has withdrawn a request that the NCAA change its classification from Division II to Division I in men's and women's outdoor track and field.

Athletic Director Cicil Eager said the school reconsidered the move for financial reasons.

ACU was scheduled to assume Division I status Sept. 1, 1991.

The school applied for Division I membership two years ago, and has since complied with Division I regulations, officials said. The NCAA requires two years of compliance before reclassification.

Aggies accept findings

■ Texas A&M officials will not refute the 10 rules violations the NCAA claims to have found in the Aggie basketball program under Kermit Davis.

Associated Press

COLLEGE STATION — Texas A&M officials will accept NCAA findings that list 10 rules violations in the school's basketbal program, two more than the school reported, A&M vice president Robert Smith said.

The NCAA's letter of inquiry alleges that New York talent scout Rob Johnson, acting as a representative of A&M, violated NCAA rules by loaning $125 to former player Tony Scott.

The NCAA letter also said former A&M head coach

■ NCAA tries to avoid regulation/3C

Kermit Davis Jr. and former assistant coach Fletcher Cockrell violated NCAA rules by providing false and misleading information to A&M investigators, the Bryan-College Station Eagle reported on Wednesday.

A&M's 95-page report to the NCAA acknowledged the loan and unethical conduct by Davis and Cockrell, but did not list them as NCAA rules violations.

"We reported the $125 loan that Rob Johnson made to Tony Scott," Smith told the newspaper. "We acknowledged that it had occurred in our report but he could have loaned the money as a friend to a friend. ... The point is we had the same information they had."

A&M has until Aug. 14 to respond to the letter of inquiry. Smith said he expects to have the response ready in 30-45 days. The NCAA committee on infractions could hear Texas A&M's case when it meets in September in Boston, Smith said.

School officials released copies of the letter of inquiry on Wednesday. A&M received the official inquiry on June 13 and deleted the names of student-athletes before releasing the letter.

Besides the 10 alleged violations, the NCAA enforcement staff asked A&M officials to detail how they first learned of the possible violations and to explain disciplinary action taken against current and former staff members.

The letter of inquiry also asked A&M officials to provide information concerning other possible violations not mentioned in the school's report. A recent published report alleged that former A&M head coach Shelby Metcalf controlled a slush fund for players, but Smith said A&M investigators have already "dealt with" those allegations.

NCAA investigators did not include in the letter of inquiry one of A&M's eight allegations, that Davis provided cash for Scott's father's airfare from College Station to Rochester, N.Y.

Young Ryan to leave UT

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Nolan Ryan's son has asked for a release from his baseball scholarship at the University of Texas, saying he needs more playing time to improve.

Reid Ryan and his father, who pitches for the Texas Rangers, said they were disappointed that the younger Ryan did not get more opportunities to pitch during his freshman season with the Longhorns.

Reid, who appeared in only two games last spring, is considering transferring to Texas Christian University, Blinn Junior College or Pepperdine University in California.

The younger Ryan is currently playing for the Anchorage Bucks in a summer league in Alaska.

Ian Baker-Finch reacts to a successful birdie putt in Thursday's play.

Baker-Finch cards 62

■ Despite missing five other birdie putts, Australian Ian Baker-Finch comes just three strokes shy of the PGA's single-round scoring record.

Associated Press

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — Al Geiberger, consider yourself fortunate.

Ian Baker-Finch matched the course record with a 9-under-par 62 in Thursday's opening round of the Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic. Then he lamented about what could have been.

"I missed five other birdie putts from 10 feet in," Baker-Finch said.

Had he made three of those, the personable Australian would have tied the PGA Tour single-round scoring record Geiberger established with a 59 at the 1977 Memphis Classic.

"I've been setting some plans and goals recently, and I was thinking the other night how I'd really like to break 60," said Baker-Finch, whose previous low round was a 63. "And I realized you can't think about breaking 60 until you've shot 62 or 61. So I was thinking I wanted to lower my achievement level.

"Now I can start thinking about 61, and hopefully I can eventually think about getting to less than 60. But 62's a goal achieved."

Baker-Finch birdied six of his last seven holes at Kingsmill Golf Club to tie the course record set by Mike Sullivan a year ago on the 6,776-yard layout along the James River.

Bob Gilder, who began his round about the time Baker-Finch was finishing his, also avoided any bogeys in carding an 8-under 63.

"It's tough to go out there and see that," Gilder said of glancing at the leader boards early in his round. "It works on your mind a little bit."

Dan Pohl, continuing his recovery from major back surgery that kept him off the tour last year, had a 64. Also at that figure was Mike Reid.

Pohl said he needs 45 minutes of treatment and exercise before he can even step on the practice tee each day.

"I can't even anticipate what I might do tomorrow," he said. "I'm sure I'm probably the most surprised person here."

Roger Maltbie, Blaine McCallister and Dudley Hart carded 65s.

Sullivan was joined at 66 by Sam Randolph, Chris Perry, Mike Hulbert, Brad Fabel and Scott Hoch.

Baker-Finch's round was another example of his strong play since leaving Sanctuary Cove, Australia, and joining the American tour full time in 1989.

He has not missed a cut in 12 events this season, and his streak of 19 consecutive tournaments in the money is second on the tour only to the 20 of Corey Pavin.

Baker-Finch is 25th on the 1991 money list, fourth in driving accuracy, fifth in putting and seventh with a scoring average of 69.92.

But when he began his round Thursday morning on Kingsmill's 10th tee, it initially didn't appear as if something special would happen.

He missed the green with his approach shots on the 10th and 11th holes, both par-4s, and had to make par putts of 6 and 4 feet, respectively.

Sports world could use own tabloid

Standing in line at the grocery store checkout earlier this week, I couldn't help but notice one of those juicy tabloid papers.

Underneath an enlargement of Dolly Parton and next to a story about how Shirley McLaine poisoned Zachery Taylor in one of her previous lives, was the latest on Martina Navratilova and her relationship gone sour.

Patterson

The Martina news wasn't about love on the tennis court but about her "million dollar gay divorce."

Anyway, it gets me to thinking that with all the high jinks that have cropped up in the last couple of decades, the sports world needs its own Enquirer, or Star, or Weekly World News.

If we had one, we could've probably found these headlines cropping up on the front pages within the last couple of weeks:

■ "Tests Reveal Juice The Moose, Famous Chicken Long Lost Biological Parents of Big Bird."

■ "Mike Tyson's Brain Found on Tree Stump in Florida Everglades; Scientists say there is hope of restoring it to its previous condition despite length of time it's been out of use."

■ "Jose Canseco's Startling Revelation: I Was Kicked off My Little League Team Because of Lousy Defense."

■ "Skip Baldwin Named Chuck Woolery's Replacement on 'Love Connection.'"

■ "Hey Dudes, Michael Jordan Reveals That He's One of the Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles!; NBA star hopes for movie-career-in-a-shell if knees hold up."

■ "Angel Stadium's Mr. Trash Distant Cousin of Larry, Darrl and Darryl."

■ "Morgana The Kissing Bandit Critical After Accident With Knitting Needle."

■ "Nolan Ryan Cranks Up Radio, Plays Air Guitar When He Hears Guns 'N Roses; son says dad looks pretty goofy, but it helps keeps his arm strong."

■ "Steve Green Real Reason Behind Kiefer Sutherland-Julia Roberts Split."

■ "Scott Simpson Quits PGA Tour to Become Penniless Mime in Hollywood."

■ "Rickey Henderson Really A Quiet, Unassuming, Nice Guy, he admits."

■ "Family of Four Escapes From George Foreman's Stomach; 'It was a nightmare in the there,' one family member says, 'but we never lacked for a good meal.'"

■ "Don King's Brain Found in Manhattan Garbage Can; scientists say there's no hope, especially if it can be restored."

Sizzling Expos beat champs

Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Dennis Martinez anchored a combined three-hitter and Marquis Grissom singled home an 11th-inning run Thursday night as the Montreal Expos beat the Cincinnati Reds 1-0 for their seventh consecutive victory.

Martinez gave up two hits over the first eight innings, Barry Jones (3-4) gave up one in the next two, and Scott Ruskin pitched the 11th for his fifth save, giving Montreal a 7-2 record in extra-inning games this season.

Spike Owen led off the 11th with the Expos' sixth hit of the game off Don Carman (0-1), the fourth Cincinnati pitcher. Bret Barberie sacrificed him to second, and Grissom lined an RBI single to right.

Martinez, whose ERA dropped to 1.87, retired the first 17 batters he faced before Jose Rijo lined a single up the middle with two outs in the sixth. The right-hander allowed just one more hit, a soft single in the eighth by Todd Benzinger, as he extended his streak of consecutive scoreless innings to 24.

Rijo matched Martinez in stinginess for the first six innings — both pitchers faced the minimum 18 batters over that span. Rijo allowed a walk and two singles by Dave Martinez, but erased them with a pair of double plays and a pickoff.

The single that ended Martinez's perfect game wound up costing Rijo. He caught his cleats and severely twisted his right ankle while trying to steal second base moments later and left the game for X-rays.

Phillies 7, Astros 3

PHILADELPHIA — Rookie Wes Chamberlain had four hits and John Kruk drove three runs to lead Philadelphia over Houston.

Chamberlain, who played in 18 games for the Phillies in 1990 and saw brief action in April, was recalled from Scranton-Wilkes-Barre of the International League on June 15. He is 10-for-24 in six games since returning.

National

Danny Cox (2-1), who came off the disabled list on June 17, gave up two runs and three hits in 5 2-3 innings. Roger McDowell pitched two innings and Mitch Williams got the last three outs, allowing a run, to send the Astros to their fourth straight loss.

With the score 2-2, Chamberlain doubled with one out in the third, went to third on Kruk's single and scored on Dale Murphy's grounder.

The Phillies chased Jimmy Jones (4-5) in the fourth inning. John Morris led off with a single, went to third on Wally Backman's single and scored on Mickey Morandini's fielder's choice. Morandini stole second and scored on Chamberlain's double.

Kruk, who had three hits, added a two-run single in the ninth.

The Phillies took a 1-0 lead in the first inning on Kruk's run-scoring grounder and Backman added an RBI double in the second.

The Astros tied the score on Steve Finley's two-run homer in the third, his fifth.

Mets 9, Braves 7

ATLANTA — Hubie Brooks hit two homers and drove in four runs and Dwight Gooden also homered as the New York Mets beat the slumping Atlanta Braves.

Brooks hit his 12th homer of the season, a two-run shot in the fifth inning, had a run-scoring double in the fourth and a solo homer in the eighth to send the Braves to their sixth loss in seven games. There were eight home runs hit in the game, four by each team.

Howard Johnson, who had three hits, added a two-run double in a four-run fifth inning off struggling John Smoltz (2-9) and Kevin McReynolds had three singles and scored three times.

Gooden (7-5) got the victory despite giving up three home runs. He gave up a two-run homer to Terry Pendleton in the third and a solo shot to Pendleton in the eighth.

CHICAGO — Ruben Sierra hit a two-run homer to start a five-run rally in the ninth inning that gave Texas a 7-3 victory over the Chicago White Sox on Thursday night, but no one had a bigger day for the Rangers than Ivan Rodriguez.

Rodriguez, 19, making his major-league debut at catcher, threw out two runners attempting to steal and capped the ninth-inning outburst with a two-run single.

Earlier in the day in Tulsa, Okla., Rodriguez married Maribel Rivera.

Originally, Rodriguez was to have been married between games of a doubleheader Thursday night in Tulsa. But after he was called up by the Rangers Wednesday night, the wedding was changed to Thursday morning in Tulsa before he and his bride caught a plane to join the Rangers.

"I'm excited, I'm happy," Rodriguez said. "I was a little nervous in the first inning but I felt okay. I know the game. I want to stay here. I don't want to go back to the minor leagues."

The White Sox had rallied for three runs in the seventh inning to take a 3-2 lead behind Jack McDowell, who allowed only three hits and struck out eight in eight innings.

Bobby Thigpen, who set a major-league record of 57 saves last year, took over in the ninth and never retired a batter. Rafael Palmeiro walked and Sierra followed with his 11th homer to put the Rangers ahead 4-3. Franco followed with his eighth homer and after Gary Pettis walked, Thigpen was gone.

A single by Gonzalez and a double by Steve Beuchele preceeded Rodriguez' two-run single off Melido Perez.

"I could have stayed with Jack but we considered the number of pitches he had thrown and we didn't think he was popping the ball," manager Jeff Torborg said. "You have to go with what you've got. Last year we tried it 57 times and it worked. he's our man and I'll continue to go with him. it was just one of those nights."

Thigpen has blown five saves in 18 opportunities this year. Last season, he was 57-for-65.

American

Blue Jays 6, Yankees 1

TORONTO — Joe Carter hit two solo home runs and Toronto ended a four-game losing streak, beating the New York Yankees.

Carter went 3-for-4 and scored three times. He homered in the third inning and hit his 14th home run in the fifth.

Todd Stottlemyre (8-2) gave up eight hits, including Matt Nokes' home run, in eight innings. He walked none and struck out two.

Tim Leary (3-7) lasted only 4 2-3 innings. He gave up all six runs on six hits.

Brewers 4, Mariners 0

MILWAUKEE — Jaime Navarro pitched a four-hitter for his second career shutout as Milwaukee defeated Seattle.

Navarro (7-4) struck out four and walked two. He gave up four singles in his team-high fourth complete game and second shutout of the season.

The Mariners put runners on first and second with one out in the seventh inning, but shortstop Dale Sveum caught Omar Vizquel's line drive and threw to first base, doubling off Dave Cochrane.

The Brewers bunched four singles and a walk off Brian Holman (7-7) in the second for a 2-0 lead.

Angels 7, Tigers 5

DETROIT — Dave Parker's tie-breaking, two-run homer in the seventh inning sent California past Detroit in a game interrupted by a bench-clearing, beanball battle.

California rookie Luis Sojo was hit in the head by a pitch from Dan Gakeler in the fourth inning, and was admitted to a hospital with a mild concussion. In the bottom of the fourth, Chuck Finley was ejected after hitting Detroit's Mickey Tettleton in the leg with his first pitch.

The dugouts emptied after Tettleton was hit, but no punches were thrown. Angels manager Doug Rader argued the ejection.

Red Sox 8, Athletics 7

BOSTON — Tom Brunansky doubled home the tying run and then scored on Tony Pena's single in the eighth inning as Boston beat Oakland and ended a three-game losing streak.

Oakland went ahead 7-6 in the seventh with the help of Willie Wilson's 2,000th career hit before Boston bounced back.

Royals 3, Orioles 2

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Brian McRae singled home Kurt Stillwell from second base with one out in the 10th inning, giving Kansas City a victory over Baltimore.

Stillwell drew a leadoff walk from Todd Frohwirth (1-1) and Terry Shumpert sacrificed. McRae followed with a drive over the head of center fielder Brady Anderson.

Steve Crawford (2-0) got the victory as Kansas City evened its record at .500 for the first time since April 27.

Glavine reluctantly brushes Murphy back

Associated Press

ATLANTA — It was an uncomfortable situation for Tom Glavine of the Atlanta Braves, but one of baseball's unwritten rules dictated that he brush back the next hitter.

He did, reluctantly.

The next batter Glavine faced after Philadelphia's Roger McDowell had hit Atlanta's Otis Nixon in the top of the ninth inning on Wednesday was Dale Murphy, one of the most popular players in Braves history who was dealt away to the Phillies last summer.

Glavine threw four consecutive inside pitches to Murphy, who was backing out of the batter's box before the Braves' left-hander had released the final ball.

"Having Dale up made for a very uncomfortable situation," Glavine said after improving his record to 11-3 with the 9-2 victory over the Phillies. "If it's a different situation, a different hitter, something different might have happened."

"It was like playing dodge ball out there," Murphy said. "I don't think Tommy had the same velocity on those pitches that he did the rest of the game."

McDowell was ejected by umpire Bob Davidson after hitting Nixon with his second consecutive high inside pitch.

Davidson also ejected Glavine, who left without saying a word.

The ninth-inning brushback war probably stemmed from a Phillies-Braves game in Atlanta two weeks earlier when Philadelphia's Wally Ritchie sent Nixon backing out of the batter's box on one pitch and then hit the Atlanta outfielder with the next.

Nixon charged the mound and sent Ritchie to the ground with a flying kick. Once on the ground, Nixon had one arm around Ritchie's neck and the other punching him in the face.

Nixon, facing a four-game suspension for his part in the brawl, merely pointed at McDowell before going to first base. The two exchanged words after McDowell reached the dugout, but that was as far as it went.

Nixon declined comment after the game. McDowell said he wasn't throwing at Nixon.

"I don't know how to evaluate or characterize this one," Murphy said. "I don't want to get into reading minds."

RYAN: Reid wants more innings

(From 1C)

"Right now, I need to pitch," Reid told the San Antonio Light. "I felt I needed to get in more innings if I wanted to improve.

"The way they do things at Texas, they're trying to win as many as possible. If that means using three starters only, that's what they're going to do. It's been successful for them, but it also means that other guys don't get used.

"If I want to be one of the guys who gets to pitch, I've got to get some innings in."

The elder Ryan, a 300-game winner who has pitched a record seven no-hitters, agreed with his son's decision to move on.

"He needs to pitch and it doesn't look like he'll get a chance to at Texas," he said. "He'd be better off somewhere else."

Nolan Ryan and Reid opposed each other in an exhibition game in early April at Austin. This season, however, the younger Ryan pitched just 3 1-3 innings in two appearances, both non-conference games.

Reid also was upset when he wasn't put on the roster the regional playoffs after first being told he would be, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported Thursday.

TCU baseball coach Lance Brown has been a friend of the Ryans since the early 1980s, when the elder Ryan played for the Houston Astros. Brown, a coach at Rice at the the time, pitched batting practice for the Astros.

Brown often pitches batting practice for the Rangers. Reid strongly considered TCU before selecting Texas.

TCU sports information officials said Thursday they had not received any word on Reid's plans.

The elder Ryan said he was disappointed that Texas baseball coach Cliff Gustafson did not give Reid more opportunities to pitch.

Gustafson said Wednesday night that he was trying to bring Reid along slowly.

"I felt like he did about what we expected and what he was ready to do," said Gustafson. "It's not necessary to get a release (to transfer to a junior college), but we'll probably put one with it in case he wants to go somewhere else," Gustafson said.

Arkansas, SMU sign pact

DALLAS (AP) — Southern Methodist University and the University of Arkansas have agreed to play each other in football for four years beginning in 1992, officials said Thursday.

The Mustangs will play Arkansas in Little Rock in 1992 and 1994, while the Razorbacks visit Dallas in 1993 and 1995, SMU athletic director Forrest Gregg said.

"It's a good situation for us," Gregg said. "Arkansas certainly will always have competitive teams and we won't have to introduce them down here. They have a large following and wanted to continue playing in Dallas."

Several Southwest Conference coaches have expressed a reluctance to play the Razorbacks after they leave the league because the games could help Arkansas recruit players from Texas.

Sparring injury forces Chavez out of title bout

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Unbeaten Julio Cesar Chavez suffered a cut on the bridge of his nose during sparring Thursday, forcing the cancellation of his super lightweight title fight next week against Harold Brazier.

It took nine stitches to sew up the cut and Chavez will not be able to fight until it heals, said Joe Safety, a spokesman for Don King Productions.

The World Boxing Council's 140-pound title fight was on the undercard of the heavyweight fight between former champion Mike Tyson and Donovan "Razor" Ruddock at The Mirage hotel-casino.

Letterman doesn't reply to Astro offer

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Talk about missing a shot at baseball immortality. David Letterman may be muffing it big time. Almost like walking in the winning run after having the batter 0-and-2.

It's enough to make No. 1 on his Top 10 List — the one for why he shouldn't pitch against the Houston Astros: "I forgot to mail, phone or fax in my R.S.V.P."

A week-and-a-half after being invited to pitch for the Pacific Coast League's Tucson Toros in its July 1 exhibition against the parent Houston Astros, there's still no word from Letterman — the guy who's been making a pitch for months about strutting his stuff in the bigs.

The host of NBC's "Late Night With David Letterman" has been offering his services "to any major league team" wanting an inning of shutout ball.

He has said he might not strike out everyone or get the batters out in order but has guaranteed a scoreless inning.

So Rick Holtzman, owner of the Class AAA Toros, Fed Ex'd an invitation to start against the Astros at Hi Corbett Field. And Jon Ruby, general manager of the local NBC-TV affiliate, also faxed a letter last week urging him to show up.

Neither had received a reply as of Thursday.

And Letterman's office has been no help, with a spokeswoman saying her boss would not be available to talk.

"It's time to put up or shut up!" Toros general manager Mike Feder said. "He's been whining for two months, and now he's got the chance."

Feder then gave his Top 10 reasons why Letterman should appear:

— In the heat of the Arizona desert he can get his old arm loose.

— It might be 108 degrees that day, but it's a dry heat.

— So he can visit the birthplace of his idol ... Gary Shandling.

— He enjoys public humiliation.

— Pete Rose bet Lenny Dykstra that Letterman wouldn't show.

— So he'll have a real reason to wear a baseball cap in public.

— He won't be invited to have lunch with Dan Quayle that day.

— To be eligible for a Lite beer commercial with other great athletes such as Bob Uecker, Marv Throneberry and Rodney Dangerfield.

— No one else wants him.

— He'd be lounging poolside on Monday — his day off.

Oil posts gains

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices prices posted modest gains Thursday in a market that was propped up by heavy buying of home heating oil. Natural gas futures set another record low.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in July settled at $20.15 per barrel, up 16 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Futures contracts for crude to be delivered in July went off the board Thursday, setting up the inevitable contest to see whether those who had agreed to buy it or those who agreed to sell it would control the trading.

Natural gas contracts to be delivered in July also expired Thursday, at $1.167 per 1,000 cubic feet, an all-time low at the Mercantile Exchange and down 4.8 cents for the day.

Natural gas prices have recently sunk to their lowest level in decades, with demand sluggish because plenty of supply has been left over from back-to-back warm winters.

Some analysts believed strong demand in Germany, where purchasers are buying gas oil to beat out a pending tax increase, may have been the key. Others believed some large players may have been acting on inside information, which is legal in futures trading.

Home heating oil for delivery in July settled at 54.51 cents a gallon, up .88 cent. Unleaded gasoline for delivery in July settled at 61.43 cents a gallon, down .43 cent.

Stocks slip

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market recorded some spotty losses Thursday, faced with new worries about the outlook for corporate profits.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials posted its fourth consecutive loss, slipping 1.56 to 2,953.94. Since the start of the week the average has fallen 46.11 points.

Dollar jittery

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar retreated sharply against the Japanese yen and ended mixed against other currencies Thursday amid confusion over this weekend's meeting of major industrial nations.

In Tokyo, the dollar fell to a closing 139.20 yen from 141.10 yen at Wednesday's close.

The dollar strengthened slightly against the British pound. In London, sterling fell to $1.6310 from $1.6325 late Wednesday.

Gold slipped in New York, falling 60 cents a troy ounce from late Wednesday's $368.00 on the Commodity Exchange.

Craddick predicts tax battle

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

State Rep. Tom Craddick (R., Midland), took time out from his preparations for next month's special legislative session to discuss the recently-concluded 72nd Legislative Session with the directors of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association Thursday.

Craddick

He told the gathering that he expects a battle over the state budget, between those who support tax increases and a state income tax and those who want to see cuts made first. Craddick puts himself in the latter category.

"I believe we can fund the budget with no new taxes and without due hardship," he stated, adding that, despite gloomy appraisals from Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, "I just don't believe we need to fund a 25 percent increase in the budget. We need to cut back."

The key, he said, is "we have to convince people that not every needy program can be funded."

Still, he warned, "I believe that if we don't cut the budget, two years from now we will have a state income tax."

Redistricting will also occupy much of the Legislature's time, he predicted, describing to the audience that his new district "resembled an elephant's trunk." He said he feels the plan violate voters' rights, and has filed suit over it, predicting the plan would be thrown out by the courts.

Craddick spent much of the legislative session fending off a number of bills that would have been detrimental to the oil and gas industry. One was a bill that would have prohibited the use of fresh water in new secondary recovery projects. A second would have formed a new agency, the Department of Natural Resources, which the PBPA opposed as vague, poorly written and would have placed hardships on employees not allowed time for a systematic phase out of some state agencies.

A third bill would have allowed the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department to cite, for prosecution, owners of facilities that store hazardous substances when those facilities are responsible for the injury or death of protected wildlife. Harry Spannaus, executive vice president of the PBPA, said the bill used what he called "Gestapo" tactics that would have taken all due process and probable cause rights from the owners.

Craddick did help move some legislation that benefited the industry, including a new law that prohibits division orders from altering lease terms, one that increases interest due royalty owners under the Texas late payment statute, and an amendment to legislation that created an Oil Field Cleanup Fund that called for funds over $25 million to be placed in the state plugging fund.

Craddick noted that several thousand bills were introduced during the session that dealt with the oil and gas industry and the environment. He cautioned his audience that "The number of environmentally-related bills gets worse each session. It's going to get tougher and tougher to kill these bills."

Jobless surge casts doubts on recovery

By Karen Ball
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of Americans filing new unemployment claims surged in early June, the government reported Thursday, raising fresh doubts about whether the recession is ending.

"It's not good news ... It may indicate that the economy has not bottomed, or that a recovery had begun and then got short-circuited," said Jack Albertine, who heads an economic forecasting firm in Washington.

The jobless claims number — up 47,000 for the first week of June to cancel out a decrease of nearly that amount the week before — adds to conflicting evidence of late about the health of the nation's economy, analysts said.

Other recent economic data has shown rebounds in factory orders, retail sales and hiring practices. Two weeks ago, the government said the unemployment rate shot up to 6.9 percent, while a separate survey showed businesses adding on more workers.

"It's another sign that confusion reigns relative to the start of this recovery," Albertine said.

It was easier to tell when past recessions were over, noted Allen Sinai, chief economist at the Boston Co.

"It was much easier with earlier episodes, when we came barreling out, firing on all pistons with explosive jobs growth. That's not happening this time," Sinai said.

The Labor Department said that for the week ending June 8, there were 448,000 Americans filing first-time claims for unemployment benefits, an increase of 47,000 from the previous week.

In May, jobless claims had fallen for four straight weeks, something that had not happened since 1982, when the U.S. economy was pulling out of the last recession.

That stretch of improvements, coupled with other encouraging economic data, had prompted many analysts to predict that the recession might be ending.

Part of the sharp rise in jobless claims in early June could have been because the previous week included the Memorial Day holiday, giving workers fewer days to file claims and prompting them to wait until the first week of June to visit the unemployment office, analysts speculated.

IBM warns earnings may drop

NEW YORK (AP) — IBM dropped another Wall Street bombshell on Thursday, warning that its earnings would not meet forecasts.

IBM, the world's largest computer maker, issued a similar announcement in the first quarter, but this time it went beyond blaming the economy, saying business was being hurt by discount competitors and its own changeover to new products.

"Obviously things are lousy," said Stephen Cohen, an analyst at SoundView Financial Group Inc. "It's even lousier than most people were expecting."

Before the announcement, analysts forecasts for International Business Machines Corp. earnings in the second quarter, which ends June 30, ranged from 50 cents to $1.10 a share.

"We expect our results to fall below the low end of that range," IBM spokesman Rob Wilson said. "We do not anticipate a loss in the quarter but that depends on revenue production."

IBM's stock fell on the news, dipping as low as $97.12½ on the New York Stock Exchange after trading in the stock was halted in response to the announcement at the market's opening. IBM stood at $99.12½, down $1.87½, at the close of regular trading.

IBM Chairman John Akers recently chastised a group of IBM managers for the company's sagging performance. He said IBM employees were "too damn comfortable" when business was in "crisis," according to notes of the meeting leaked to the media.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Form 1099-B details mutual fund's activity

By Bill Doyle

Q. I went into a mutual fund in 1957 and recently sold out. In moving several years ago, most of my papers were lost. I know I paid $300 commissions when I first bought into the fund. I also recall paying taxes on dividends and capital gains distributions some years.

Will I get a statement from the fund, giving me an idea what the fund will send to the Internal Revenue Service?

Doyle

A. Come January, you will receive a Form 1099-B from the mutual fund. That form will give you more than "an idea" about what statistical information the fund will provide to the IRS. It will be exact, because a copy of your Form 1099-B will be sent to the revenooers to feed into their computers.

That 1099-B will list the precise amount of money you received when you redeemed your fund shares. Technically, you don't sell mutual fund shares. You redeem them by turning them back to the fund and receive the shares' redemption value at that point in time.

For tax purposes, a redemption of mutual fund shares is counted as a sale. You are required to report it on Schedule D of the Form 1040 federal income tax return you file for the year of the sale. In this case, that's the 1991 return you must file by April 15, 1992.

The only data the IRS will have about your fund share redemption will be that 1099-B. It will be up to you to provide information about whether you had a profit or a loss when you redeemed.

You do that by coming up with a "basis" — cost for tax purposes — of the shares you redeemed. The difference between your basis and the redemption price was your capital gain or capital loss.

To figure your basis, you must add together all the money you sent the fund to buy shares, plus any dividends and/or capital gains you reinvested to purchase additional shares.

Since it's obvious you do not have records of your fresh money and reinvestments, you'll have to try to obtain that information from the mutual fund. Good luck! Some investors have been driven up the wall in similar quests.

Q. I redeemed shares of a mutual fund I had begun acquiring in either 1985 or 1986. I knew I would need documentation showing I had either a profit or a loss. However, my records were forever lost due to water damage.

I phoned the fund's toll-free 800 number and requested a copy of my account's history. They sent me a printout only of last year's record. I called again and they sent me the same thing. I wrote to them two months ago and haven't had any response.

What do you suggest I do to acquire a copy of my account's entire history with that fund?

A. You're in the "try, try again" situation that has frustrated many investors.

Make your next attempt by registered mail, return receipt requested. Then, you will have proof your letter arrived. If you get no response within two weeks or so, phone the fund's shareholder relations department and demand action.

There's no assurance you will be successful. Shareholder services at some mutual funds are disgraceful. And the hard fact of the matter is that it's up to each investor to keep his or her own records. The funds should do it, but they are not obliged to.

Q. I sought records of my accounts at three mutual funds. The first furnished a complete history — back for eight years — without charge. The second provided two years' records and charged $10 for each prior year. The third was like the second, except the charge was $15.

What is your reaction to this?

A. It's not unusual and it's an object lesson why investors should keep their own records. In the case of a mutual fund, that can be accomplished by saving year-end statements in a letter-size envelope, tucked away in a safe place.

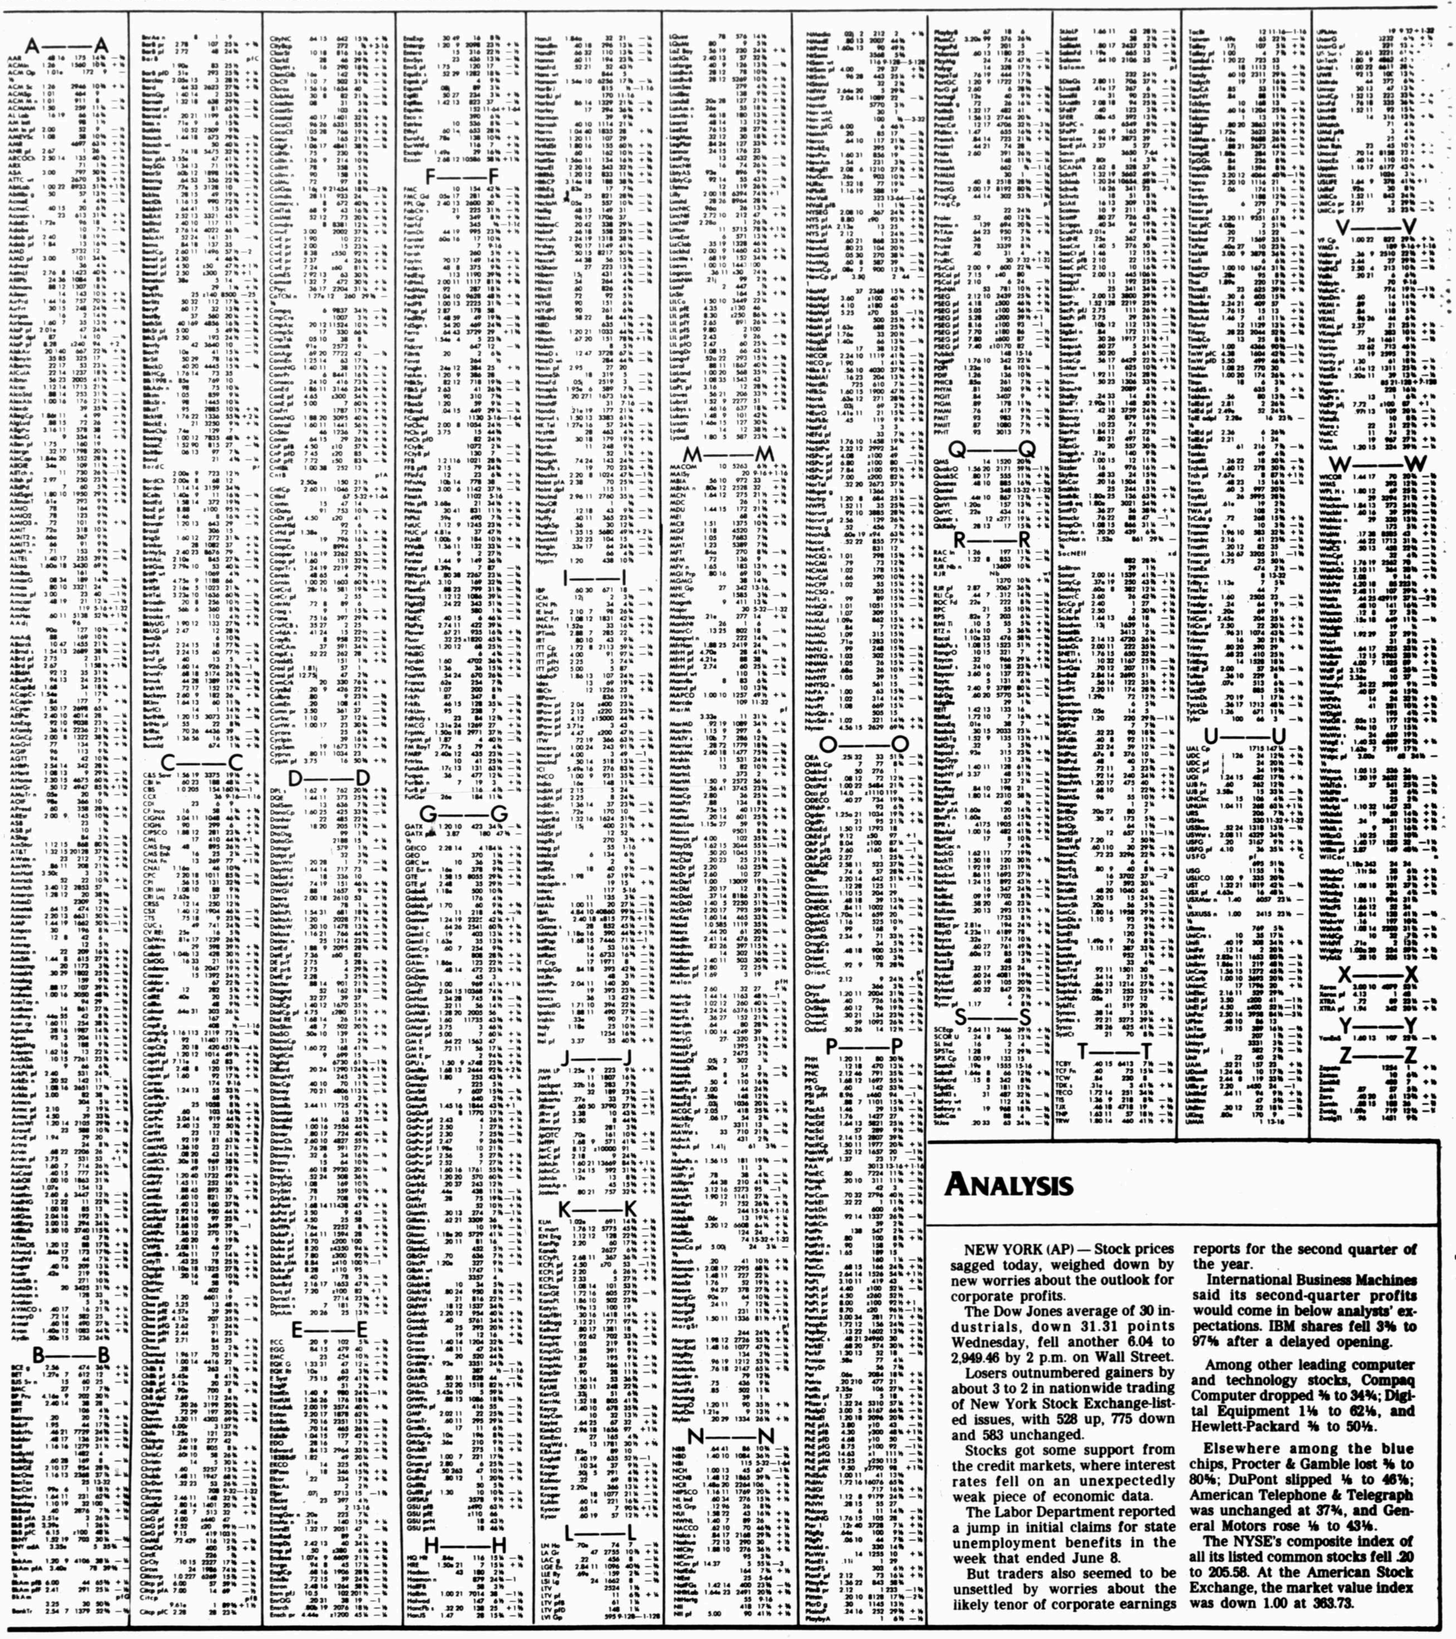
NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE



ANALYSIS

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices sagged today, weighed down by new worries about the outlook for corporate profits.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 31.31 points Wednesday, fell another 6.04 to 2,949.46 by 2 p.m. on Wall Street.

Losers outnumbered gainers by about 3 to 2 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 528 up, 775 down and 583 unchanged.

Stocks got some support from the credit markets, where interest rates fell on an unexpectedly weak piece of economic data.

The Labor Department reported a jump in initial claims for state unemployment benefits in the week that ended June 8.

But traders also seemed to be unsettled by worries about the likely tenor of corporate earnings reports for the second quarter of the year.

International Business Machines said its second-quarter profits would come in below analysts' expectations. IBM shares fell 3¾ to 97¼ after a delayed opening.

Among other leading computer and technology stocks, Compaq Computer dropped ⅝ to 34¾; Digital Equipment 1¼ to 62¼, and Hewlett-Packard ¾ to 50¾.

Elsewhere among the blue chips, Procter & Gamble lost ⅝ to 80¾; DuPont slipped ⅛ to 46⅝; American Telephone & Telegraph was unchanged at 37¾, and General Motors rose ⅛ to 43¾.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks fell .20 to 205.56. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 1.00 at 363.73.

Auto buyers make switch, study shows

WASHINGTON (AP) — During the 1980s, American consumers developed stronger loyalty to cars made by Nissan, Toyota and Honda and weaker attachment to Detroit's products, an economic study said Thursday.

In a report on brand loyalty, transportation engineer Fred Mannering of the University of Washington, and economist Clifford Winston of the Brookings Institution, a think tank, said American automakers will have trouble regaining old customers.

Even if American cars now are just as good as their foreign competitors, people are likely to perceive them as inferior and continue to prefer Japanese cars, Mannering and Winston said.

"Chrysler's cars are every bit as good as the Japanese, but nobody knows it," complains Chrysler's Lee Iacocca in one of his company's commercials.

"The major source of the U.S. makers' problems is attributable to vehicles that were of worse value and quality than the Japanese," Winston said in an interview. "That's something they can make progress on, but loyalty is something that is, to some extent, out of their control."

The researchers drew their conclusions from the "vehicle ownership histories" of 488 households that bought nearly 1,000 vehicles over the last several decades.

They define brand loyalty as more than just buying the same maker's car each time. Instead, they said it reflects such factors as vehicle ownership experience, word from friends, news and advertising which together cause a customer to think of his brand as the standard against which to judge competitors' cars.

The study said that if old customers had remained loyal during the 1980s, General Motors would have sold 4.3 million more cars, Chrysler would have sold 2.8 million more and Ford would have sold 107,000 more.

Without any change in today's loyalty patterns, the authors predicted that GM's market share will fall during the 1990s to below 31 percent, a decline of more than four percentage points.

They said the Japanese's combined market share will be almost as big as GM's.

Apple chairman takes pay cut; 1,500 to lose jobs

N.Y. Times News Service

CUPERTINO, Calif. — Apple Computer Chairman John Sculley, Northern California's highest-paid executive, will take a 15 percent pay cut as part of a broad cost-cutting plan that includes layoffs of 1,200 employees.

The personal-computer maker laid off 900 workers Thursday and a spokeswoman said that the company will ax 300 more in the next three weeks. The layoffs are part of an effort to eliminate some 1,500 jobs over the next 12 months. (The company expects to shed 300 through attrition.)

The cut will reduce Sculley's salary to about $1.9 million from the $2.2 million he earned last year. However, Sculley earned an additional $14 million by cashing in stock options last year, and his pay cut will not apply to any future options transactions.

Apple cut salaries for the rest of its executives and some other senior managers by either 5 percent or 10 percent. Michael Spindler, who earned $1.1 million last year as Apple's chief operating officer before he was promoted to president, and Joseph Graziano, who earned $1.3 million as chief financial officer, will take 10 percent cuts.

Apple launched a hurried cost-cutting campaign after its profit margins were pushed down by a change in marketing strategy. The company had shifted its emphasis to lower-cost — and therefore less-profitable — products in an effort to boost its market share.

Apple's sales grew by 19 percent to $1.6 billion in its fiscal second quarter ended March 29 from $1.3 billion in the year-earlier quarter. But profits stayed virtually flat at $131.1 million.

Analysts said that the pay cuts will do little to help Apple's profit margins.

Peter Rogers of Robertson, Stephens & Co. estimates that Apple will earn $475 million on sales of $6.6 billion in its fiscal year ending in September, compared with earnings of $474.9 million on $5.6 billion in sales.

"It's a symbolic gesture to try to narrow some of the disenchantment that these moves have created."

Employees, many angry that a seemingly healthy company has resorted to layoffs, said they were not impressed.

"It's purely a token gesture," said an Apple employee who helped organize a rally on Wednesday to protest the layoff. "Nobody at that salary level is going to feel the effect of a 10 to 15 percent pay cut, compared with someone who's getting laid off with no cushion at all."

EPA revises handbook amid industry complaints

NEW YORK (AP) — Few product withdrawals initiated by the Environmental Protection Agency have raised as much dust as its recent move against one of its own consumer handbooks.

The federal agency halted distribution of the popular environmental guide in February after several large manufacturers questioned the safety and environmental impact of suggested self-help steps.

Among the suggestions: substituting homemade mixtures for store-bought cleaners or using ceramic mugs instead of throwaway cups.

As the EPA moves to revise the handbook, the incident is drawing criticism that the federal agency opened its editorial process to companies more concerned with sales than the environment.

This week, Rep. Frank Pallone Jr., a New Jersey Democrat active in environmental issues, wrote to EPA adminstrator William K. Reilly complaining the move "cannot help but create the impression that the EPA is more sensitive to certain large corporations than it is to the desires of millions of American consumers."

The EPA says the revised version of the handbook, due out this fall at the earliest, will correct what it calls a number of technical inaccuracies, including the listing of flypaper and some household cleaners as hazardous substances.

EPA spokeswoman Marjorie Weidenfeld Buckholtz said the withdrawal was not a result of pressure, but because industry made some worthy points.

"We felt we have an obligation to provide information that is absolutely factual. We were concerned our credibility would be negatively affected," she said.

Besides a possible change in its hazardous substance list, the EPA is considering reworking the booklet's title to reflect a narrower focus on solid waste rather than general environmental issues.

The EPA's Office of Solid Waste, which published "The Environmental Consumer's Handbook" last fall, said it was one of its most requested documents.

About 15,000 copies, or half the original press run, were distributed. As for the other half, the spokeswoman said the EPA may recycle them or redistribute them with correction sheets.

The booklet suggested "safer substitutes for household hazards," raising corporate ire.

The critics, including Pallone and several environmental groups, fear the revision will represent a watered-down version of the original, which was intended to help consumers cut down on trash.

The original guide suggested "safer substitutes for household hazards," including steel wool and baking soda to clean ovens, polishing furniture with a mixture of lemon and mineral oil, and using natural soap flakes and vinegar to wash clothes.

The booklet prompted complaints from Procter & Gamble Co., Scott Paper Co., Sweetheart Cup Co. and several of their industry trade groups.

Some of the correspondence was obtained by the Environmental Action Foundation, a Washington-based consumer group. The Associated Press confirmed the contents of that correspondence with the companies and industry groups.

Procter & Gamble Co., in a letter dated Jan. 30 to the EPA, said it was concerned the booklet "makes recommendations on disposable diapers which are based on incomplete data that considers only one aspect of environmental impact, rather than a total lifecycle analysis."

The maker of Pampers, Tide and Mr. Clean and Top Job household cleaners also wrote that the handbook "advocates that consumers adopt a 'mix your own' approach to products employed in many standard household tasks without regard for the attendant safety concerns."

Stop buying trash shopping checklist

Here are ways Seattle shoppers are being asked to cut down on the amount of trash they produce.

- ✓ Is this plastic or paper packaging necessary or just for looks?
- ✓ Is this packaging recyclable? (Not plastic or mixed materials. (Buy paper, metal or glass instead of plastic.)
- ✓ Can I reuse this container for something else?
- ✓ Can this beverage container be returned or recycled?
- ✓ Can I buy this product (razor, cups, utensils, diapers etc.) in a non-disposable, longer-lasting form?
- ✓ Is there a non-hazardous substitute for this cleaner, pesticide or solvent?
- ✓ Can I use paper bags instead of plastic bags or use a reusable fabric shopping bag?
- ✓ Can I buy this fast food in paper containers instead of plastic or styrofoam?
- ✓ Is this product worth a higher garbage bill or a more polluted environment?

No more monkeyshine: Zoo's primate is back

SAN FRANCISCO (NYT) — It wasn't a lost lamb, but a middle-aged squirrel monkey that returned to the fold when San Francisco police recovered Sasha, who vanished from the zoo three weeks ago.

Police Inspector Ed Tank, who had followed the case since Sasha and three other monkeys disappeared May 22 from an exhibit in the children's section of the San Francisco Zoo, traced the monkey to a nearby neighborhood. The other three monkeys turned up on the zoo grounds shortly after they were first reported missing.

On Thursday, a man who said the monkey was a family pet called "Curious George" brought Sasha to the city animal care facility.

Tank, who would not identify the man, said that no charges are pending.

"It's like a kidnap case," Tank said. "The important thing is the return of the monkey."

He credited the cooperation of zoo and animal shelter officials and people living near the zoo with the successful conclusion of the case.

Tank, who lives with a 16-pound cat, watched while examiners checked to make sure they had located the right one-armed, golden-brown, three-pound female squirrel monkey.

Sasha had to pass an identification test before she could return to the comfort and safety of her home at the zoo.

Zoo keeper Roger Hoppes caught the shrieking monkey as she leaped from the dirty cage in which she arrived at San Francisco Animal Care and Control agency.

Animal shelter director Ken White held a sensor that looked like a small bull horn to Sasha's head. The sensor read a bar code attached to a microchip in the monkey's cheek. White checked the code, which appeared on a small screen attached to the sensor, against the zoo's record. A match.

"Sasha, you're home," he said.

The 11-year-old monkey lost her arm several years ago in an accident. Hoppes said that she would be examined for injury and disease at the zoo hospital.

"She looks scared, thin and obviously debilitated, but generally in good health," he said.

"She's been through it these past few weeks," he said. "She was yanked out of her normal social existance, living in fear for her life. She's had a lot to think about."

Once zoo officials are sure that Sasha is in good health and is used to outdoor evening climates, Hoppes expects that she will be returned to the exhibit she shares with seven other animals.

Before leaving the examining room, Tank took one last look at the monkey, which is about the size of a month-old kitten.

"Let me know how she is," Tank said.

FEMALE PERSONAL ADS
The following ads have been placed by females looking to meet males

I know there is a man out there looking for some fun and companionship. He must be in early to mid 30s, no smokers or drug users. Financially secure and take care of himself. He must like kids and enjoy going to movies, out to eat, or just spending time with someone special. I am a petite, divorced, single parent and tired of the bar and club scene. I own my own home and would like to find someone special to share my life with. Please call and leave phone number. I would really like to get to know you.

NOW May Just Be The Best Time To Buy A New Car, Truck or Van!

HERE'S WHY:

You AUTO Buy Now

DEALER INVENTORIES ARE HIGH
Dealers anticipated better sales earlier this year, and inventories are much higher than expected. When dealers say they are overstocked and have to move cars out, it isn't hype.

FINANCE RATES ARE FAVORABLE
The Permian Basin is getting stronger every day. The Midland Auto Dealers are wanting to make it even better by offering better selections and better prices. And since interest rates have been coming down, you'll find financing rates in your favor.

DEALER COSTS
Dealers pay interest charges for every day a car sits on their lot. Current larger inventories mean the dealers are now eager to sell.

TRADE-IN ALLOWANCES ARE GOOD
Dealers want clean, quality trade-ins to keep for their used car inventory. Consequently your current car is worth more as a trade-in than in recent times.
