Diller sees House at work

■ Hereford student spends summer as a congressional page

By Donald M. Cooper

Hereford Brand Managing Editor

In 1963, a 17-year-old high school student from Arkansas shook hands with President John F. Kennedy. That event instilled in Bill Clinton the driving ambition to become president himself.

Maybe he hasn't developed that ambition, but Christopher Diller ever enters the political arena and becomes a member of Congress, he likely would look back to the summer of 1999 as the impetus.

Diller, a senior at Hereford High School, served this summer as a page in the U.S. House of Representatives.

Earlier in the year, Diller sent an application for a page's job to U.S. Rep. Larry Combest, the Lubbock Republican whose 19th District encompasses Deaf Smith County.

Combest reviewed the applications and sent a recommendation to the office of House Speaker Dennis Hastert.

Hastert weeded through the hundreds of applications and finally settled on about 70 to serve as pages.

One of those select 70 was Diller, who received notice in mid-May.

As a page, Diller worked on the House floor.

"The House offices and sometimes a Senate office would call and we'd go and make the delivery," Diller said.

"We sat on the floor during debate, listening to the speeches," he said. "When a speech is given in Congress, it goes in the Congressional Record, a book that's kept every day. We would get the speech and deliver it to the Record staff."

Diller also had to go to the Library of Congress, which he said is filled with "250 years worth of books," to get materials for the lawmakers.

The pages also had to wear paper masks when working in the Library of Congress because of the dust that collects on the racks of old books. However, he said, the masks really weren't needed because most of the books that he had to deliver were contemporary.

"We also had to raise the

flag on top of the Capitol, on the House side," Diller said. He said there are about five flagpoles on top of the Capitol and a crew of Capitol employees spend all day raising and lowering U.S. flags for members of Congress who receive thousands of requests for flags that flew atop the Capitol.

However, the flag that Diller raised was the one that is raised each morning and flies throughout the day.

Diller said he was impressed by nearly all of the members of Congress.

"I'd seen all the people during the impeachment hearings (which were carried live on television) and then to meet and talk to them was a great experience," Diller said. "I didn't know what to expect, really. I'd seen them speak on TV, but I found out they're really regular people. Some of them are really nice," he said. "I never had much contact with the Democrats. When we got there, they split us (pages) between the parties, and I worked for the Republicans. As for the Republicans, I thought they're really great people."

Diller said he got the impression the lawmakers already had their minds made up before entering any debate; however, "they still wanted to hear the other side. Even before a vote, the members would be passing out fliers trying to get someone's vote."

Of the more prominent lawmakers, Diller said he was very impressed with House

Majority Leader Richard Army of Texas.

"You'd expect someone with that much power to be conceited, but he was just a normal guy," Diller said. "I didn't meet (House Minority Leader) Dick Gephardt, but some of the Democratic pages said he was real conceited."

Diller also praised Hastert, the speaker of the House. Hastert is low-key, not like his flamboyant and highly partisan predecessor Newt Gingrich.

"Mr. Hastert wants to make it work. He really works to make sure they get things done. He tries to be as bipartisan and fair as possible," Diller said. He also said that he thinks Hastert draws on his background as a high school wrestling coach as speaker, emphasizing teamwork in getting the job done.

Diller said the Washington experience heightened his interest in politics, which he has followed as much as possible in Hereford.

Political awareness is "the reason that I wanted to be a page. I wasted a lot of the speakers during the impeachment (hearings) and it sparked my interest," he said.

As a page, Diller had one of the best seats in the "House" to watch the legislative process.

"They go through so many things for a law. They vote on having a vote, but it's necessary," he said. "When we go there, they told us (pages) that the House is a circus and the Senate is a theater. ... It did get out of hand a couple of times and there were some harsh words," he said.

The partisan bickering was put aside and the lawmakers came together as Americans, not Republicans and Democrats, for the memorial service for the two Capitol Police officers killed last year during

City commissioners set to OK tax rate, budget

By Donald M. Cooper
Hereford Brand Managing Editor

It'll be a busy night Monday for the Hereford city commissioners.

The commissioners, who will meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the commission chamber at City Hall, will adopt the budget and tax rate for Fiscal 2000.

The proposed tax rate is 41 cents per $100 assessed valuation, unchanged from the year that ends Sept. 30. However, because of an increase in the total assessed valuation of property in Hereford, the rate represents a 2.47 percent increase over the effective tax rate of 39.8 cents per $100 valuation. The effective tax rate is the rate required to generate the same amount of revenue as in the previous year. An earlier estimate put the increase at 6.22 percent.

Because the proposed rate represents an increase over the effective tax rate, the city conducted a public hearing last Monday, but only two residents attended to express opinions.

The proposed budget projects general fund revenue for the next fiscal year will be $4,813,573, an increase of about $87,000 from the FY 1999 budget.

Of the revenue, the city expects to collect slightly more than $1 million in ad valorem taxes; $1.2 million in garbage billing; $700,000 in sales tax/mixed drink tax; and $700,000 from operating transfers, primarily from the water/sewer fund.

On the expenditure side, Nolen recommends spending $4,780,583, which would leave a $32,990 surplus when the year ends Sept. 30, 2000.

The water and sewer fund is expected to have $2,781,000 in revenues with expenditures of $2,428,332, leaving a surplus of $352,668.

The total revenue for Fiscal 2000 is projected at $7,594,573 and total expenditures are estimated to be $7,208,915, leaving a year-end balance of $385,658.

The commissioners also are expected to approve a $60,000 grant from the Hereford Economic Development Corp. to Hereford Farmers Co-op Gin to help complete an expansion project.

The gin's expansion project is expected to increase its processing capacity to 35,000 bales of cotton. It also will add additional workers.

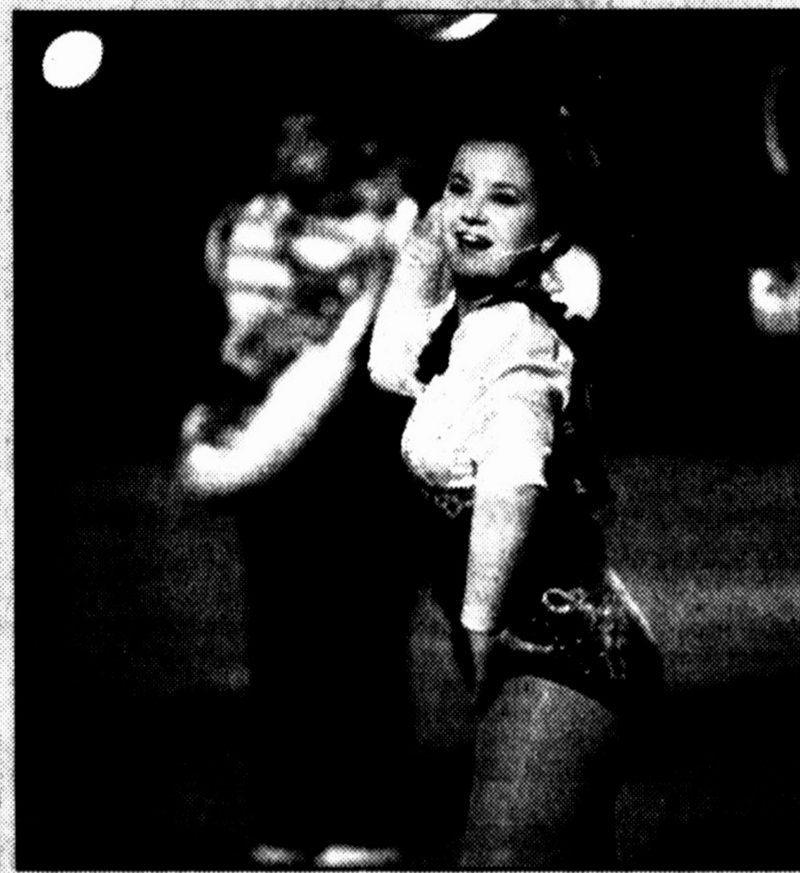

In other business, the commissioners will conduct a public hearing on condemnation of property at 236, 237 and 238 Catalpa;

Consider a zoning change request for property located in the 900 block of South Jackson and at 615 E. Park Ave.; Discuss retaining McGinty & Associates to conduct the audit of city finances for a fee of $12,500. The Hereford accounting firm has provided the audit services for the past seven years;

Approve a $334,835.36 budget for the HEDC; and

Consider the reappointments of Joe Artho and Craig Smith to the HEDC board.

GOP has plan for passage

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republicans say they are ready to begin pushing the remaining nine spending bills for fiscal 2000 through Congress next week, now that they think they have found enough money to do it without using Social Security funds.

In a meeting Friday of House and Senate GOP leaders, lawmakers decided to use next year's projected non-Social Security surplus, delay some spending until 2001 and accelerate other expenditures into this year, said Republican aides who spoke on condition of anonymity.

"They've got a plan" to pass the bills "without spending the Social Security surplus," said House Majority Leader Dick Arney, R-Texas, one of the participants.

The available funds total roughly $25 billion, which Republican leaders say should be enough to move the bills through Congress. Whether

Supreme Court justice is treated for colon cancer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supreme Court Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg is being treated for colon cancer, and it is unknown when she will be able to return to work.

Ginsburg, 66, underwent surgery Friday at the Washington Hospital Center. She is expected to remain hospitalized for about a week, court spokeswoman Kathy Arberg said.

Ginsburg, who had been a pioneering advocate for women's rights, became the second woman ever to serve on the nation's highest court, joining Justice Sandra Day O'Connor on the bench, when appointed by President Clinton in 1993.

She since has found a comfortable ideological home somewhere left of center on a conservative court dominated by Republican appointees.

When she joined the court, Ginsburg was the first justice chosen by a Democratic president in 26 years — since Lyndon Johnson named Thurgood Marshall in 1967.

Hundreds of refugees rescued

TARBORO, N.C. — Rescue helicopters working through the night lit rooftops with searchlights to spot some of the hundreds of people stranded by massive flooding not seen in North Carolina for decades, as people up and down the East Coast dealt with the remnants of Hurricane Floyd.

Professionals hovered overhead and neighbors churned muddy waterways in private motorboats to collect the stranded from porches, rooftops and trees.

"It is neighbor rescuing neighbor in a lot of situations out there," said North Carolina emergency management spokeswoman Renee Hoffman.

Floyd left at least 34 people dead — including 10 in North Carolina — when it churned up the East Coast. Thousands of homes and businesses were damaged and more than a million people were without electricity or water. The much weakened storm sped through Maine on Friday and entered the Bay of Fundy off Nova Scotia in late evening.

More than 4,000 people were left homeless after heavy rains sent rivers overflowing their banks across southeastern Pennsylvania.

Medicare has overpaid providers

WASHINGTON — Financial problems many hospitals and nursing homes are blaming on recent Medicare cuts are really the withdrawal pains of a health care industry that got used to being overpaid by the government in the past, Health and Human Services Secretary Donna Shalala says.

"After years of the government being relatively loose with the taxpayers money, that got built into the infrastructure of the health care system, and they're having trouble adjusting to a government that's a tougher manager and a more accurate payer," Shalala said Friday in an interview with The Associated Press.

Shalala also addressed political questions, saying she considers former Sen. Bill Bradley a friend but has sent Vice President Al Gore a $1,000 check in his race against Bradley for the Democratic presidential nomination. She has also contributed $500 to Hillary Rodham Clinton for her expected Senate run.

The Cabinet member also said she admired Republican presidential hopeful Elizabeth Dole's work in running the American Red Cross, particularly her success in cleaning up the blood supply after the emergence of AIDS. "She did an excellent job," Shalala said.

On another topic, Shalala chastised the states for breaking their promise to use the $246 billion from the tobacco lawsuit settlement for health programs and said she regrets that no federal strings were attached.

Resort town's mayor quitting

VAIL, Colo. — In a resort town where many people have second homes worth $1 million, a project to erect affordable housing for town employees has created a battle so contentious it has already claimed one casualty: the mayor.

Mayor Tom Ford, a proponent of the housing initiative, has given notice that he will resign at the end of his two-year term in November. He will also quit the city council, which appointed him as mayor in 1997, despite two more years to go.

The mayor's planned departure has become the subject of a new debate. Some have cheered it while affordable housing proponents are calling him a quitter. But Ford acknowledged difficulty continuing amid the deluge of complaints, some of them X-rated, as he strolled through city streets.

"It's hard to go home at night when people are railing at you all day," said Ford. "I was tired of getting yelled at ... (but) that was a small part of it. I skied the lowest number of times in the 25 years I've lived here. I came here to bike and ski."

Rescue workers prepare to transport accident victim to Hereford Regional Medical Center

Children, woman hurt

A late-afternoon accident on Holly Sugar Road, near Allied Millwrights sent two children and one woman to Hereford Regional Medical Center.

Just before 5 p.m. Friday, Rodolfo Dominguez, driving a 1995 Chevrolet pickup, exited the driveway at Allied Millwrights. The pickup fish-tailed into the oncoming traffic, striking a 1986 Oldsmobile driven by Susan Barts.

Barts' vehicle sustained a severe blow to the left front quarter panel sending it into the roadside ditch.

Emergency teams arrived to find Barts'

Oldsmobile on fire and Barts and two children injured.

Barts was transported to HRMC with a compound fracture and was expected to be transferred to an Amarillo hospital.

The two children were also transported, condition is unknown. None of the victims are believed to have sustained life-threatening injuries.

Department of Public Safety troopers are still investigating the accident, but are expected to charge Dominguez with failure to yield right of way and exhibition of speed on acceleration.

Democrats have edge among the Hispanics

WASHINGTON (AP) — Both major political parties have made clear that the nation's fast-growing Hispanic population is an important voting group, and a new poll suggests that Democrats have the early edge in the 2000 campaign.

Two-thirds of Hispanics say they would support a Democratic presidential or congressional candidate, according to the new bipartisan poll that also indicates Democrats have an edge on many key issues.

A Republican consultant whose firm helped produce the poll says the GOP can learn some important pre-election lessons from the poll's results.

"Republicans know that Hispanics have been pivotal in many elections," said Michael Deaver, a GOP consultant and former senior aide to President Reagan. "If ever there were a group that Republicans need to spend time with, it is the Latinos."

The results of the poll by Deaver's firm, Edelman Worldwide, and Democratic pollster Mark Penn were presented Friday at an event on Hispanic voters sponsored by Univision, the Spanish language television network.

Hispanics, by a 4-1 margin, were optimistic about their future in the United States and believe their personal economic situation has improved, the poll indicated. And they approve of the job President Clinton is doing by more than a 5-1 margin. Hispanics believe Democrats would do a better job of handling many key issues from health care to education to taxes, the poll indicated.

Governor pushes GOP tax cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's 31 Republican governors joined today in the GOP campaign for a 10-year, $792 billion tax cut that President Clinton intends to veto next week.

Wyoming Gov. Jim Geringer said in the Republicans' weekly radio address that the president's decision not to sign the tax cut into law shows that Clinton believes in a "protective and fatherly" government that doesn't trust people with tax money.

"Why not give the money and our government back to the people?" Geringer said. "America is at her greatest when power and responsibility are in the hands of the people,

"On every issue including Medicare, health care, welfare, education, affirmative action ... we scored much higher than Republicans, with more than 50 percent of the Hispanic community's approval," said Rep. Loretta Sanchez of California, a general co-chair of the Democratic National Committee.

Presidential candidates from both parties are making a concerted effort to appeal to the rapidly growing Hispanic population. By the end of 2004, Hispanics could be the country's largest minority, according to census estimates.

"The two front-running candidates speak to crowds in Spanish," Deaver said. "The assimilation process is working. ... I'm not quite clear who is assimilating whom."

Vice President Al Gore announced more than 500 Hispanic endorsements earlier this week and occasionally addresses Hispanic voters in Spanish.

The poll indicated:

- The three most important political issues for Hispanics were crime and drugs, education and the economy.

- Four-fifths of Hispanics say welfare must be replaced with an employment system that will funnel welfare recipients into the work force.

- Hispanics support Democrats in Congress by 66 percent to 24 percent, disapproving of Republicans in Congress by 50 percent to 39 percent.

The poll of 502 Hispanics in five major cities — Los Angeles, Miami, Chicago, New York and Houston — was taken Sept. 2-9.

they are correct will become evident when the legislation reaches the House and Senate floors over the next two weeks.

Fiscal 2000 begins on Oct. 1. So far, lawmakers have sent President Clinton only four of the 13 spending bills that would keep agencies functioning. The White House has threatened vetoes of six bills if passed in their current form.

The GOP goal is to put Clinton in the position of having to raid Social Security, boost taxes or find some other savings if he wants higher spending. The president has sought more spending than Republicans for a host of education, housing and other programs and proposed paying for it by raising cigarette taxes and fees on various federal activities.

Participants in Friday's meeting included House Speaker Dennis Hastert, R-Ill.; Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss.; House Appropriations Committee Chairman Bill Young, R-Fla.; Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman Ted Stevens, R-Alaska; and other GOP leaders.

Leaders of the two chambers also agreed how large compromise versions of the bills will be, which should speed their work in completing final legislation.

In one decision, Republicans agreed to provide $7.6 billion in emergency aid for farmers hurt by low commodity prices. The Senate had approved $7.4 billion, while the House had not voted for any.

If the agriculture bill can be completed and signed into law quickly, Republicans would try rushing about $5.5 billion of that aid out the door in the remaining days of this fiscal year.

They would do that by mailing checks to farmers or, if that isn't possible, transferring the money to a new, off-budget entity so the spending would be considered spent in fiscal 1999. That would ease their fiscal 2000 problem.

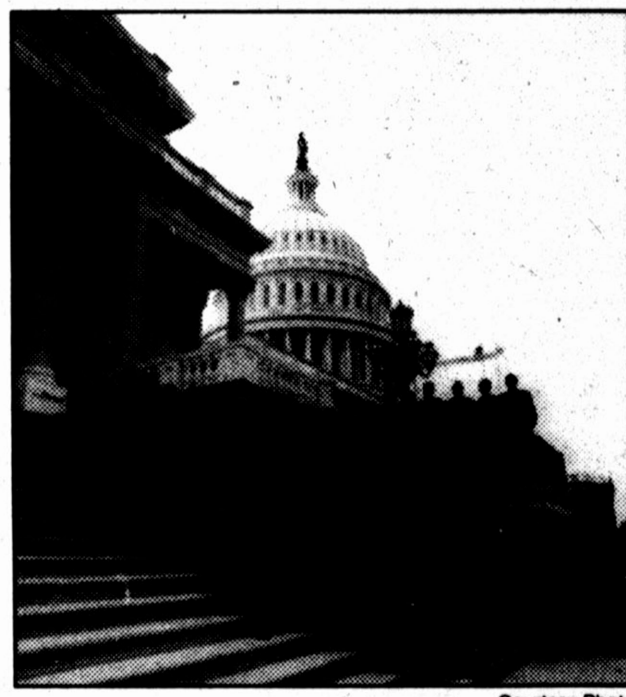

The rest of the farm aid would be charged against 2000's books. It would be paid for from the projected $14 billion non-Social Security surplus.

All expenditures using that projected surplus would have to be declared budget "emergencies." To make that more politically palatable in the Senate, Republicans there will probably shift several billion dollars from the defense bill to several domestic measures, then ask for "emergency" authority to restore money for defense.

So far, Republicans would not rely on the several billion dollars they proposed several weeks ago to recoup from the states from welfare, Medicaid and other programs.

A half-dozen GOP governors met Thursday with congressional Republican leaders and told them they did not want the federal government unilaterally reclaiming the funds.

They did say they would consider returning money in exchange for a loosening of restrictions on using federal funds for education and other programs. Aides from the two sides are considering options, participants said.

a shooting spree near House Majority Whip Tom DeLay's office.

"It was very emotional," he said, adding the Capitol police don't get much recognition for the important job they do.

Now that he's back in Hereford, Diller said he is trying to keep his options open for a career, although he said he "would like at some point in my life to take part in the political arena."

As a senior, he also is thinking about college. He hasn't decided where he wants to go, but because his interests are chemistry, history and political science "that'll determine the college."

He also enjoys flying, earning his pilot's license when he was 17. That has become a family tradition, he laughed, because his brother Nathan also earned his pilot's license when he was 17.

The boys apparently inherited their love of flying from their father, Ralph Diller, a pilot who owns a plane. The elder Diller and his wife, Kathy, operate a farm north of Hereford and raise corn, soybeans and wheat.

The older son, Nathan, is a cadet at the Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, Colo.; a daughter, Tamara, is a student at Texas A&M University in College Station.

The only disappointment that Diller had in his experience as a congressional page was "leaving. I really wanted to stay."

Maybe the next time he is on the floor of the House, he'll be a congressman and a page will be delivering his speech to the Congressional Record.

THE MULES

(Margaret Schultz)

"I was wearing a harness. A friend
Asked me why.
I brayed that if I have
To grind like a mule, I'd look like one.
And then she hee-hawed how awful it
Was the way they use mules.
I did nod.

Then she asked if a mule should be paid.

I said, "Sure. Why would I send my mule
Out to sweat for nothing!"

Then I knew
That I needed to drop my old job.
I couldn't let a fellow mule chuck
His hard work.

The donkey and I went
Our two separate ways, hoof to hoof.
I learned that a jackass and a mule
Cannot tug as a team.

Then that friend
Neighed for me not to call her a mule.

TeCube offers new perspective

REVIEW

With all the volumes about the Vietnam War already available, it would seem unlikely a new version is needed.

However, Leroy TeCube's book "Year in Nam" addresses the war from a new perspective - that of the Native American.

TeCube, a Jicarilla Apache from northern New Mexico, was a combat infantryman in Vietnam between January
1968 and January 1969.

Arriving in Vietnam just before the Tet offensive, which was a military defeat but a political victory for the North Vietnamese, TeCube served in the Army's search-and-destroy missions in the Americal
Division's operating area.

Drawing upon his traditional beliefs as a source of strength, TeCube gained confidence as combat infantryman and also earned the respect of the officers and men with whom he fought.

In the telling of his experience in Vietnam, TeCube tells how he went to fight with confidence in the rightness of the mission, which he saw as helping an ally protect itself from Communist aggression.

A year later when he returned to the Jicarilla Apache reservation, he was asked by a tribal member what he thought of his experience in Vietnam.

"I was truthful with her, as

I replied,

In looking back at Vietnam,

TeCube said the infantrymen tried to what they had been trained to do, but a corrupt government in South Vietnam lost the confidence of its people and the South Vietnamese army showed little desire to fight.

"(The) ... lack of support, the enemy's patience in waiting out the war, and the anti-war protests were the key reasons why we lost," TeCube observes.

TeCube's narrative is very detailed and of observation

are keen. However, when he

CHIROPRACTIC
For Better Health
Dr. Jeff Williams, D.C.

Is Your Child Athletic?

If your child is athletic, his/her enthusiasm for sports can sometimes lead to problems.
Minor injuries are common enough when two bodies collide at full velocity. But body contact is not the only problem.

Starts and stops at high speed, twisting and turning into awkward positions may cause strains to muscles, limbs and back.
Untempered enthusiasm may cause a youngster to try harder and play longer than is good for him/her. If their body is fatigued, there is great potential for accidents and injury.

And if he's too proud to complain of minor injuries, how do you find out if there's a problem that should be treated before it becomes worse?

The best answer is periodic chiropractic examinations. These are recommended before the season begins, so he/she can start in top form. They're also recommended whenever an injury occurs as well as at the end of the season. Any structural defects should get the correction and treatment needed to keep your child in good health.

Question:

How did the school district get into such a financial mess?

The $16-million dollar question rebounding through Hereford this week has been: "How?"

How did Hereford Independent School District, arguably one of the finest, most progressive school districts in the Texas Panhandle, if not the state, arrive on the doorstep of insolvency — or so was the somber projection foretold by new HISD Superintendent Beth Abernethy last week?

How did a school district whose very substance was built on a tradition of doing things right, doing them all within the constraints of sound fiscal responsibility fall into the yaw of near despair in the course of a few years?

No one is sure.

Definitive answers aren't coming as swiftly as the questions. And, the sad truth is, no one, even HISD, may have very many real answers for some time.

Every number Beth Abernethy hazarded a guess at last week, is conjecture and has not yet been proven. The HISD business office staff, working 16-hour days since those dismal projections were announced, are close, but have still not yet been able to completely resolve months of unreconciled bank balances. Reconciling those statements will be a positive step in determining where we are.

Additional audits of HISD's facilities allotment obtained through Texas Education Agency — an ambitious construction project implemented last year and encompassing four major new additions to HISD's physical framework — will perhaps give taxpayers and the school district their first accurate accounting of the project's scope since it began.

And, the school district will continue gathering as much concrete information as it can prior to its Tuesday, Sept. 28 school board meeting, where it is expected the board will announce a 5-cent increase in the district's tax rate, based to some extent on the district's vast loss in tax revenue.

But beyond the mounting pressures of a declining average daily attendance (ADA), an evaporating tax base, and the automatic loss this past year of $45.3 million in tax revenue due to the Homestead Exemption Act, HISD will also have to wrestle with internal issues that allowed huge technology and facilities allotment expenditures to become probable catalysts in HISD's financial decline.

The prognosis for HISD's financial health, as of today, is not good. And if HISD's situation is as bad as Abernethy has projected, then surely it would indicate a failure in the current system of checks and balances over school districts across the state, not just Hereford.

We'll have to wait for the final bill, but while we're waiting we think it's worth noting that we all share some culpability in the situation — TEA, HISD administrators, the HISD school board, the local media and Hereford taxpayers all presumed some one was watching the bottom line.

This community has weathered many past storms, using a winning attitude to beat adversity. It can do so again.

But this crisis may be another costly lesson and wake-up call for a community that covets being positive at all costs, especially when that mantra comes at the expense of constructive criticism and concern about how tax dollars are spent.

Payday at Hereford Independent School District?

Prayer always an issue

Dianna F. Dandridge

Late in the 15th century explorers braved the unknown seas, in ships most of us wouldn't board to cross the Tierra Blanca Creek never mind the Atlantic Ocean, and they found an unknown land.

Nearly 150 years later individuals searching for a place where they could worship as they saw fit fled to this new land. They fled, reasoning thousands of miles of ocean would protect them from the religious censure of the monarch.

More than 400 years later, minor points of religion continue to cause strife.

As a new millennium dawns, people are still being faced with "Do we pray or don't we?" "Who should pray and where is it allowed?" "If we can pray at one public function, why can't we pray at another?"

As a general rule, most people would like to blame the famed atheist Madeline Murray O'Hair for removing prayer from public schools. In reality, she only knew when to get on the bandwagon and because she was basically the most obnoxious person imaginable, she made a name for herself.

But now because of the stink she and many of her cohorts raised, prayer — especially at football games — is no longer allowed.

From what I've seen and heard, this is causing as much of a furor as did the 1963 Supreme Court ruling which eliminated school-led prayer.

In some ways I can understand both sides of the issue.

I know we have to separate church and state. I know if we recognize one religion, then all must be recognized. But wait a minute. Are all religions treated equally within the public schools of America?

Let's see.

Along about the end of November, classes are dismissed so students, teachers and staff can celebrate Thanksgiving.

In the United States, Thanksgiving is traditionally the day set aside to thank God for all the blessings we receive during the year. That and to stuff ourselves 'til we can hardly move.

Only a few short weeks later, officials dismiss classes for Christmas holidays. If I remember right, Christmas is a Christian holiday. What about Hanukkah and the Muslim feast days?

We celebrate Easter as the day Christ defeated death and rose from the grave.

What it boils down to is our schools revolve around Christian holidays. So why should prayer — even at a football game — be any big deal? No one is trying to convert a group of kids from one religion to another. No one is saying prayer is required. All the students, staff, and personnel get time off for Christian holidays, but I don't hear anyone screaming about days off for those Christian celebrations.

This country — regardless of what anyone says — was founded and based on Christian ethics and beliefs.

Our Declaration of Independence and our Constitution both make more than one reference to God, the Creator, Divine Providence and other terms Christians commonly use to name their supreme being.

From the time students enter a public school, they pledge their allegiance to the flag. One line in that pledge is "one nation under God." Some of the first songs band members used to learn to play were the "Battle Hymn of the Republic," and "God Bless America."

If all these non-religious people really want to get rid of prayer in school, why don't they put their money where their mouth is? After all, every bit of U.S. currency blatantly states "In God We Trust."

I would like to see all the non-Christian residents try to spend some currency that places its trust in something other than God. I believe that would come under the counterfeit laws.

As trite as it may sound, I have to agree with an old bumper sticker: "As long as there are tests there will be prayer in school."

I also have to agree with the sentiment of one of our school board members who said "without study, prayer will never get you through chemistry 101."

Unless history is to be re-written, prayer is a part of this country and it will remain wherever there is a need for help and guidance. It may be silent, unorganized, and undenominational, but it will remain.

I'm not particularly fond of being told when and where I can pray, but chances are if I feel the need to speak to my God, there is no one big enough or bad enough to stop me. I bet I'm not the only one.

Campaign finance reform must come from ones who benefit most

In the constant congressional struggle over campaign finance reform, the players are in charge of writing the rules.

That's why changing the system is so difficult. It affects the way House members and senators get and keep their jobs. Besides, the side with an advantage doesn't want to reform it away.

At this point, that means the Republicans; their campaign leaders said so in uncommonly plain language, pointing to the $40 million margin by which the GOP outraised the Democrats last time in the unregulated campaign contributions the reformers want banned.

Despite that, the House passed a bill to bar what's called soft money — in contrast to limited, hard-money donations candidates can take — and with 54 GOP votes for it.

Given the polls that show Americans dissatisfied with the high price of political campaigns, a reform vote is a practical one, the right side of the issue that regularly hits a

Calling our friends in Des Moines

Mauri Montgomery

Hello Hereford.

The rain we enjoyed this past week was a great blessing. Beyond giving our usually parched land a badly needed drink, the rain storms also tested the integrity of area roofs, and fine soil and stain-resistant carpets.

The rains helped us explore concepts such as volume. Does anyone out there know what the mud capacity of a farm pickup is? Answer: There's not enough mud in the world to ever be sure.

The thunderstorms probed the reliability of our local utility companies, and found some chinks in the armor.

While other Herefordites were bumping their heads as they tried to find flashlights and candles, or their way out of grocery store aisles suddenly swallowed by darkness Tuesday evening, our family was given another relished opportunity to renew old acquaintances at Southwestern Bell Telephone.

We've played cat and mouse with the utility company for years because of a phone line that hates moisture.

If prevailing winds bring us anything more than humidity, our phone line either quits completely, or becomes a receiving center for every phone call in the northern hemisphere.

At the height of an unusually wet snow storm last winter, I picked up the phone to make a call and wound up defending myself and my family heritage to a very ill-mannered woman in Des Moines, Iowa.

I started dialing before I noticed the line was open.

"Hello," I said.

Stagnant pause.

"Hello," I said again.

"Hello," the lady said, venom already dripping from her fangs.

"Yes M'am," I answered somewhat startled, but nevertheless in my best West Texan lilt.

"What do you want?" she growled.

"Well, excuse me M'am, you may have forgotten, but you called me," I said. "My phone didn't ring, I just picked up the receiver and you were on the line."

"Listen you stupid &@#!, you've called me five times tonight and I'm %+* tired of it," she screamed.

I knew God was testing me, so I tried again.

"M'am, I'm sorry. We've had phone trouble, and I assure you I didn't call you," I said with calm and reassurance. "I don't even know who you are."

"I'm not going to fall for that one. I'm not giving you my name or my credit card number," the hateful woman said. "You called Des Moines, Iowa. You called me five times because it's on my Caller I.D. Maybe you should take the time to look up the right area code before you start making calls," she added.

Of course, logic should have dictated I hang up and forget about this futile argument. My maker surely wished it would be so, but my maker also knows there are still challenges in the fight to save my soul.

An Irish temper is a bad thing and it was beginning to simmer. Besides, I had never run from a good debate in my life, especially from one with an insolent woman hailing from somewhere up north in Kalamazoo.

I paused, took a breath, and prepared to heave an arsenal of facts and personal opinions that would leave this rude woman humbled — shortly before she hung up on me.

"What was that all about," my wife asked? "We've got local access to Des Moines, Iowa now, so be careful who you call. Iowans don't like the phone much at night."

Most of the time though, we lose the phone entirely.

Ma Bell, our "Friendly Neighborhood Global Communications Company" refuses to put in a new line, preferring instead to have us call each time the service goes on the blink.

Invariably, the moisture and the line dry long before the serviceman gets there. Thus, it's a problem that doesn't warrant serious consideration by a corporation.

Since most of you probably have a phone service that works, the computerized repair service message goes like this:

"This is the Southwestern Bell repair center. For English, press one."

I usually choose that option since I've never been very fluent in Spanish. I used to think that eating a lot of Mexican food helped, but my in-laws and former college professors can attest that it doesn't.

The voice continues, "During this call, our automated system will help you by checking your phone line, diagnosing the problem and

The first votes in the 2000 presidential campaign won't be cast for several months, but to help the voters become more informed, here's a helpful candidate guide.

This guide appeared in the current issue of FYI Magazine of Roswell, N.M.

DEMOCRATS

Bill Bradley

D-Policy Wonk

Occupation: very tall egghead.

The smart money's going on a limb with this pick. After years of dealing with a lying, philandering $%&, it's likely voters will move in a new direction. Bradley's the perfect alternative. He's gangly, a little on the homely side and looks like he should be repairing your copier.

Al Gore

D-Old Tennessee Money

Occupation: Assistant to serial adulterer

So stiff he was probably sired by treated lumber. Showed only a limited gift for corruption when he was caught in the campaign money scandal. Inability to execute decent depravity reduces his entertainment value.

GOP

George W. Bush

R-Daddy's Coattails

Occupation:

generation silver spoon

Former oil company executive who showed great promise with his ability to drive companies into the ground. Naturally turned to politics, where such skills are in high demand. Now governor of Texas, which is slightly more prestigious than being grand klee of the Aryan Nation.

Elizabeth Dole

R-Beltway Society

Occupation: Famous guy's spouse

Washington power chick and former boss of the Red Cross. Her willingness to buck the GOP on gun control shows more testicular fortitude than any man in the race. However, marrying Bob raises serious questions about character flaws. What kind of woman finds Bob Dole attractive? Likely rooted for Darth Maul in "Star Wars."

John McCain

R-War Hero

Occupation: Senate bad boy

The wild card in this race. Has already admitted to extramarital affair, making him the natural successor to Clinton. A maverick disliked on both sides of the aisle because he doesn't follow party lines and rarely picks up dinner checks.

The last of the moderate conservatives, he probably has a better chance of becoming a Smithsonian exhibit than president.

Orrin Hatch

R-Land That Time Forgot

Occupation: Hardcore conservative

Used to be considered the Senate's biggest nut after Jesse Helms. Now that the Senate is filled with nuts, Hatch is considered a statesman. Comes from Utah, proving there are life forms on other planets. Mother named him Orrin, which could make him a contender by cornering the sympathy vote.

Steve Forbes

R-Idle Rich

Occupation: Spending papa's money

Last election was a flat-tax Republican. This election he's an arch-conservative. Next election he'll wear love beads, hand out daisies at airports and campaign on a "Save the Whales" platform. Wants to be president because he needs another place to store his vintage car collection. Always thought the White House would make a nice servants' quarters with a little fixing up.

Pat Buchanan

R-Television

Occupation: Sneering at foreigners

Mean as a junkyard dog. Was inspiration for Chucky in the "Child's Play" movies. Voted Most Likely to Get in Bar Fights With Visiting Dignitaries During Arguments About NAFTA by his high school class. Always wanted to bomb Mexico for a Fourth of July fireworks display. Berates small children for not contributing to the Gross National Product. This is what Marilyn Manson will look like when he's 60.

Dan Quayle

R-1950s

Occupation: Unemployed rich kid

Has the IQ of a washer-dryer set, but recently learned where Europe is. Spent most of his time as vice president playing army and watching cartoons. Founder of the Barney Fan Club. Thinks it would be fun to have a sleep-over with NATO leaders. Still worried about catching girls' germs.

Alan Keyes

R-Talk Radio

Occupation: Fields calls from kooks

Master political strategist: A black guy who's courting the conservative vote. These are the same people who wouldn't trust him to be alone with the White House silverware.

Gary Bauer

R-Netherworld

Occupation: Angel of Darkness apprentice

Speaks in tongues as a first language. Claims also to speak for God, but God won't accept Bauer's calls and recently took out a restraining order against him.

I hope this will be helpful when it comes time to go to the polls.

LETTERS

Dear Editor:

I have been much concerned regarding the article in the Sept. 10 Hereford Brand concerning the Hereford Independent School District financial crisis. Superintendent Abernethy is to be applauded for identifying the problem and placing it in the public light. Nevertheless, the numbers are extremely disturbing and have been the topic of discussion in most situations I have found myself in since that article appeared.

Based upon numbers provided by the Deaf Smith County Appraisal District, HISD's tax rate in 1998 was $1.3891 and that generated $6,537,270 in revenue. At current appraisals, the maximum rate would only generate another $521,909 per year. Certainly a small amount when faced with a $16 million shortfall. The only alternative would appear to be to approve higher rates through a bond election. That is legal, but since HISD's tax rate is already above those of surrounding counties, the resulting spike in rates would only encourage families to pick up and move.

At risk of stepping on sacred cows, there are a number of problems facing HISD three of which I would like to mention. All of these issues are daunting.

A significant problem is the fact that a very large asset in this county is exempt from property taxation. That asset is the 1-plus million head of cattle fed out in this county each year. The Texas Constitution exempts "farm products, livestock and poultry in the hands of the producer" from taxation. The Tax Code defines "in the hand of the producer" to mean "under the ownership of the person who is financing providing for the physical requirements of such livestock and poultry on January 1 of the tax year." Thus, Houston and Dallas investors who own pens of steers or heifers in a Deaf Smith County feedyard are covered by the farm products exemption even though that activity may simply constitute an investment for them. It has been common in this state's history to exempt portions of agriculture from taxation in order to protect farmers. This provision allows non-resident, non-farmers to enjoy the benefits and protection of Deaf Smith County without having their assets subject to property taxation.

Another problem is the fact that Deaf Smith County is being asked to educate a significant number of immigrant children with little assistance from the state or federal governments. Educating immigrant children is essential to bringing them into the American mainstream. It is important that this be done, but it does cost more to provide bilingual education and to educate children who come from a different culture. It should not be a burden that falls only to the local level but should be shared by society as a whole because it is the entirety of society that benefits.

The final sacred cow I would like to bring up is the school board. State law prohibits employees of a school district from holding a board position. It is my understanding that most, if not all, of the current school board members are spouses of employees of the district. No matter how responsibly they have acted in this matter, there is always the question of whether they scheduling a repair if needed. Please select one of the following four options: 1. To report a problem with your telephone service, press one."

I always press one. I don't know what the other options are.

"Please enter the area code and phone number that has the problem."

I take my time. A mistake at this juncture repeats the miserable litany.

The system checks and confirms what I already know, the phone line is full of water.

"Please wait for a service representative."

Pause.

"Hi, my name is Janet, how may I assist you."

I explain our phone problem; the fact that this always happens every time it rains or snows, that this is about the 15th time we've called in five years because it doesn't rain or snow very much here, that they'll have to reach me at this NEWSPAPER number since we don't have a working phone at the house, and that I think I know what my column topic will be this week.

She's not impressed. It bounces right off of her.

"Now sir, a service repairman will be sent to look at the problem before 6 p.m. today. You do realize that if we find that the problem exists on your service instead of our line, you will be charged a service charge for the repair," she asks.

"Yes Mam, as slow as I am, I've been trained to understand that," I said impatiently, "but what if the problem exists in Des Moines, Iowa? Does the lady there have to pay for the service call?"

cultural shock

Julie L. Carlson

Culture shock. It all began about a year ago. Now, I've lived a cultured life from Columbus, Ohio, to Syracuse, N.Y., to Memphis, Tenn., and on south to San Antonio, but I've never been subjected to such a hysteria as stock shows.

I spent my high school years in San Antonio; however, my high school didn't have FFA and I had never heard of 4-H. Every year I went to the San Antonio Rodeo and walked through all the livestock barns and called all the hogs "cute pigs" and all the steers and heifers "cute cows." I had no clue the different categories of each animal, they all looked the same to me.

In college, I met the man who would soon be my husband, a man who has a love for stock shows like I do for malls. Boy, oh, boy, was I in for the livestock life. He told me how much money people spend on these animals and my mouth dropped to the floor — no, actually down to the basement.

In the thousands of dollars! For a cow?! My mind went to wandering: Just think of the down payment on a car or how much of a shopping spree at the mall I could go on. If I had that money to spend, it wouldn't be on a cow.

Then it was time for the real show after hearing about it for six months. I was curious to find out what the fuss was all about and to gain my own opinion. My first show was in Plainview last summer.

I was so overwhelmed with the massive beauty parlor going on for the show animals I didn't even watch the show. I stood around, watched and wished I could be pampered like a show animal; my hair washed, dried, cut, and styled, not to mention a full body massage.

After my amazement passed, I walked into the arena and was blown away by the quietness that had fallen over the crowd just before the judge was about to name the Grand Champion. It was an eerie quietness, much like that at a PGA Tour right before Tiger puts the last hole for yet another million.

The judge took another two hours to determine the prize winner and finally the beauty pageant first-runner up is announced and by the time the Grand Champion is awarded, everyone else in the stands has vanished — they knew they didn't win. The few family members of the winner stand and cheer, take the belt buckle and a picture and head home.

It's over. Only one winner, probably the one that spent the least money on their show animal but spent the rest on the $50,000 air-conditioned trailer to transport it in, and all the others leave with their $10,000 steer and a pat on the back.

This is my life now — livestock shows. As you can tell, I don't have a true passion for this stuff, but it might wear on me after a few more decades. Come to find out, my opinion is nothing like my husband's nor the majority of the Panhandle's, but like the famous saying says (in my version), "You can take a girl out of the city, but you can't take the city out of a girl."

dead end in the Senate.

Reformers there, led by Republican Sen. John McCain, are trying to avoid a replay when they get their week of debate early next month, by rewriting what once was a broad campaign reform bill into one aimed only at soft money.

The strategy is to start with that and invite amendments that might add allies for the vote to get past a filibuster by GOP opponents, the party's floor leaders among them. That would take 60 votes, and they were eight short last time.

New tactics could raise another problem, with Democrats who want action on more sweeping changes now, and who likely will oppose some of the amendments that might attract more Republicans. McCain has said, for example, that he is open to the possibility of an amendment to raise the limit on candidate contributions, from the $1,000 ceiling set 25 years ago, perhaps to $3,000.

While there are Republican sponsors of the reform bills, they are a minority, lined up against their own leaders. The reform bills can't pass without overwhelming Democratic support, as in the House, where the bill passed 252 to 177, with only 13 Democrats opposed.

One GOP amendment there would have raised the contribution limit to $3,000, but it was rejected. No need to put more money into the system, opponents said in the House debate, pointing to the $50 million-plus raised by Texas Gov. George W. Bush under the current limits of $1,000 from an individual, $5,000 from a political action committee.

The six-figure donations can't be made to candidates; they go to the political parties in the soft money category the reformers want eliminated. Although the Republicans

Walter R. Mears
The Associated Press

In 1996, the two parties raised an estimated $260 million in soft money. Reform advocates estimate that will go up to more than $500 million for the 2000 campaign.

Soft money is supposed to be used for what are called party-building purposes, not on campaigning for candidates. But in practice, it is, by both parties.

The House bill also would regulate what are called issue ads, in which interest groups seek the election or the defeat of a candidate. That's another growing category of campaign spending, estimated at between $275 and $340 million for the 1998 elections, more than twice what was spent that way on the 1996 campaign.

Add it all together and whatever Congress does, or doesn't do, on campaign reform, the high price of politics is going higher.

Walter R. Mears, vice president and columnist for The Associated Press, has covered Washington and national politics for more than 30 years.

COMMENT

By The Associated Press

The Dominion Post of Morgantown, W.Va., on politics:

American politics often resembles a Greek tragedy — except all that should make us cry has us snickering in disgust, and the more we laugh at the absurdity of the body politic, the worse it gets. From Anywhere, USA, to Washington, D.C., the halls of government seem replete with manipulators, liars and thieves running the show.

Unlike the Greeks, the bad guys in these power plays aren't the ones drinking the poison to illustrate a moral point, though. Rather, the condition of American politics is poisoning us all.

We suffer from growing cynicism and lowest-common-denominator expectations for our leaders. We are, in essence, in a general state of ennui.

The Daily Oklahoman, on the Waco investigation:

Former Sen. John C. Danforth of Missouri is a good choice to run a new investigation into allegations of governmental misconduct in the 1993 Waco standoff that ended with the fiery deaths of 86 Branch Davidians, including 24 children.

The 63-year-old, three-term Republican left Congress in 1996 with a reputation fairness and compassion, no doubt because of law and divinity degrees he earned three decades ago at Yale. ...

Although Danforth's charge is to investigate official misconduct, his overarching mission is to restore public confidence in the Justice Department and the FBI, both badly tarnished by the Waco siege and fire. ...

We hope his investigation will settle, as quickly as possible, corrosive questions that should've been answered long ago, which instead have bred more cynicism about the government's exercise of power and authority.

have been influenced to support matters which have led to this problem because it provided an economic benefit to their families. The school board is the only check voters have on the superintendent of a school district. All too often, superintendents are motivated more by their own stature in the education community at large than by the grassroots needs of a county. An independent school board not motivated by personal gain is essential.

Beth Abernethy will need to be an iron-fisted superintendent to bring HISD out of this problem. But more should be done. We should request the Legislature to change the definition of a producer so that non-farmer investors in cattle-feeding operations in all counties of Texas pay their fair share of local taxes. We should request the Legislature and the Congress to consider assisting school districts with large immigrant populations and English as a Second Language (ESL) students so that the important task of bringing immigrant children into the American culture is properly funded. Finally, we in HISD should do what other districts do and prohibit spouses of school district employees from holding positions on the school board.

HRMC's Rehab Services...

Hereford Regional Medical Center believes that patients should not have to travel far to receive quality health-care, especially when recovering from surgery or injury.

After all, the best medicine should be close to home.

The Rehab Department at HRMC provides you with complete physical, occupational and speech therapy services. Our physical therapists treat patients with wounds, broken bones, sports injuries and provide therapy both before and after surgery. Our occupational therapists provide various hand and shoulder therapies and other treatments to nursing home residents and home health patients. And we have speech therapists available to treat a variety of speech conditions.

Also at HRMC is the DBC Active Spine Care Clinic. This program allows therapists to customize rehab programs to help reduce back and neck pain.

Hereford Regional Medical Center is committed to offering quality and convenient rehabilitation to patients in a friendly, caring environment.

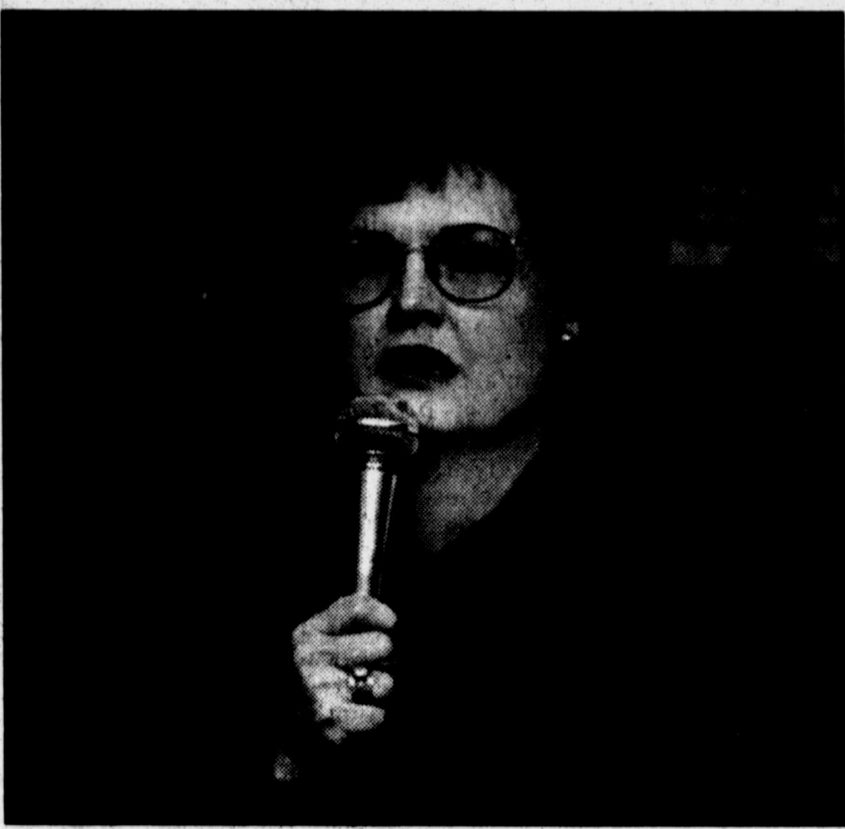

This commitment reinforces our belief that the best medicine is close to home.

HISD to be 'laboratory'

Special to The Brand

Hereford will be a laboratory of sorts for prospective teachers.

The Hereford Independent School District and West Texas A&M University will be partners in a program to improve the teaching of science and mathematics. The program is funded by the National Science Foundation (NSF).

HISD will become a laboratory for select WTAMU students to be immersed in the real world of science and mathematics teaching and learning. The NSF grant of nearly $700,000 is for the Graduate Teaching Fellows in K-12 Education project and was awarded earlier this month to the Texas Engineering Experiment Station (TEES), a state research agency and a member of the Texas A&M University System.

"This program is great for Hereford students," HISD superintendent Beth Abernethy said. "These WTAMU graduate students will add a new dimension to the classroom and will bring a vast knowledge of science and mathematics to our students."

The three-year project links TEES with researchers and students at WTAMU and Texas A&M-Corpus Christi (TAMU-CC). TAMU-CC will work with Beeville Independent School District.

Hereford and Beeville school districts have more than 4,100 students each, of which nearly 70 percent are Hispanic and more than 60 percent are economically disadvantaged. The schools are part of the Texas Rural Systemic Initiative (TRSI), a five-year, $10 million NSF effort led by WTAMU to improve mathematics and science skills for thousands of rural Texas children.

"TRSI is very excited about the opportunity this grant provides to support our work with Hereford and Beeville school districts to improve math and science education," Judy Kelly, TRSI project director and association director of the TEES regional division at WTAMU, said. "This project's special focus on two critical courses - algebra I and physics and chemistry - will provide successful strategies to share with other rural school districts across the state."

Hereford and Beeville school districts have more than 4,100 students each, of which nearly 70 percent are Hispanic and more than 60 percent are economically disadvantaged.

Dr. Flavious Killebrew, WTAMU provost and vice president for academic affairs, said this program will be a great opportunity for WTAMU students to participate in education while continuing research in science and mathematics.

"The stipends provided by the grant and the way the program is designed will be attractive to our top students," Killebrew said. "HISD and WTAMU will benefit from this opportunity."

Recruitment for select WTAMU students will begin later this fall. Students must be mathematics and/or science majors; two undergraduate and two graduate students will be chosen after a competitive application and interview process involving both WTAMU and HISD personnel.

The WTAMU students will serve as mathematics and science resources for Hereford teachers, as well as handling other projects.

TRSI started in 1998 with a $10 million NSF grant with Kelley as project director and Dr. Ted Guffy, WTAMU dean of the College of Education and Social Sciences, as the TRSI principal investigator.

CCC vets to be honored

■ Palo Duro SP will have special display of Depression crews

Special to The Brand

CANYON - Officials are seeking any information, artifacts, letters, clothing or pictures regarding Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC) involvement at Palo Duro Canyon State Park.

In recognition of their part in the development of Palo Duro State Park, the Texas Parks & Wildlife Department, in conjunction with Partners in Palo Duro Canyon Foundation, will dedicate an exhibit focusing on the CCC at 2-5 p.m. Saturday at the park visitor center.

Between July 1933 and December 1937, members of the Depression-era CCC were stationed at the present site of the state park. Local businessmen and civic leaders had petitioned the Roosevelt administration to send workers to the northern part of Palo Duro Canyon. The goal was to establish a site for visitors to enjoy the canyon, which extends 120 miles south from Canyon to Silverton.

Young men and military veterans who needed relief from the Depression enlisted and were sent to various projects throughout the United States, including Palo Duro Canyon.

During their stay at Palo Duro, the CCC workers established the main road which extends from the canyon rim to the floor, constructed El Coronado Lodge (site of the present visitor center), the main entrance building and the mess hall. Other projects completed by the CCC include shelter houses, cabins and various hiking trails.

Former CCC members stationed at the park are asked to contact Heather Lanman at (806) 488-2227, extension 49.

Talks to focus on millennium fears

Special to The Brand

AMARILLO - Twenty-eight Hastings Bookstores across Texas will hold book talks to provide answers to fears associated with the millennium.

"Customers want books and information to dispel their fears and answer questions relating to the millennium," Cindy Clapper, book manager for the Hastings store in Kerrville, said.

In Amarillo, Hastings Bookstores at 2001 S. Georgia and 4301 W. 45th Ave. will be the sites for special talks entitled "Live Free From Fear."

The sessions will be 2-4 p.m. Saturday at the Georgia Street store and 4-7 p.m. at the 45th Street store.

At both sessions, Lynn Jackson will discuss Mary Baker Eddy's "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," a best-selling guide to overcoming fear.

WTAMU site of math meet

Special to The Brand

CANYON — Math and science teachers across the region will gather Saturday at West Texas A&M University for the 6th Annual Panhandle Area Mathematics and Science Conference.

The conference will be 8 a.m.-3 p.m. in the Agriculture & Natural Sciences Building, the Hastings Electronic Learning Center and the Classroom Center on the WTAMU campus.

The theme of the conference is "Partnerships for the 21st Century," according to Judy Kelly, associate director of the Texas Engineering Experiment Station (TEES) Regional Division.

Last year more than 700 teachers and other participants from the Panhandle, South Plains and Eastern New Mexico attended the conference. University students who have not yet graduated but who are interested in teaching math or science are encouraged to attend.

"The teachers are able to come and learn first hand many new innovative ways of teaching math and science," Kelly said. "Then they can immediately implement these new ideas when they get back home."

Participants will be able to attend one-hour, grade-level-specific sessions throughout the day, with topics ranging from the standard "Using the Internet" to the mysterious "Crazy Eights, Crazy Proofs and Play Doh."

The conference is sponsored by WTAMU, Amarillo National Resource Center for Plutonium, TEES, Panhandle Area and Texas South Plains Councils of Teachers of Mathematics, Region XVI and XVII Education Service centers and the Science Teachers Association of Texas.

Check-in and late registration will be 8-9 a.m. in the Kelley Student Center, with sessions beginning at 9 a.m.

For more information or for registration forms, contact Chris Purkiss at 651-2285. Registration forms also are available on-line at <http://www/wtamu.edu>.

Domestic rig count rises by 13

HOUSTON (AP) — The number of rigs actively exploring for oil and natural gas in the United States rose this week by 13 to 703.

Of the rigs running nationwide, 132 were exploring for oil, 570 for gas, and one was listed as miscellaneous, Hous-

CANYON — Tickets for performances of the Branding Iron Theatre (BIT) at West Texas A&M University are available.

Season tickets are $6 per person per production and can be used anytime during the season. Season ticket holders have first-seat preference and will be reminded about reservations four weeks before each opening date.

"Regular adult admission is $7 per adult for plays and $10 per adult for the musical," Perry Crafton, WTAMU theatre director, said. "Season tickets are only $6 per adult for any production. We have some relatively unknown pieces this year that audience members will really enjoy."

The BIT will open the season Oct. 6-9 with "Getting Out" by Marsha Norman. The off-Broadway story focuses on a woman just released from prison after serving a sentence for murder. As Arlene starts her life over, her past literally haunts her in the form of Arlie, her destructive former self. As the

Living on the Edge

Cody Hodges tries to run while being held on by a Tiger defender Friday night in the Whitefaces' matchup against Wolfforth Frenship at Whiteface Stadium. Brand/Mauri Montgomery

Herd overcomes early mistakes to pummel Wolfforth Frenship, 34-17

By Yuri Soto

Hereford Brand Sports Editor

It wasn't perfect. But Whiteface Coach Craig Yenser will take the win.

"I told the kids that we still have a lot of work to do, Yenser said. 'The improvement is showing and I am pleased with my kids.'"

Despite two turnovers and several missed opportunities to score, the Hereford Whitefaces scored the last three touchdowns Friday night after leading only 21-17 in the third quarter, claiming a tough 34-17 victory over the Wolfforth Frenship Tigers at Whiteface Stadium.

"I am real impressed because Frenship had a 'never-say-die' attitude," Yenser said. "I thought Coach Davis did a great job of preparing for us. They really hurt us defensively."

In the third quarter, Hereford was on its way of putting the game out of reach early in the second half when L.J. Vallejo ran the ball into the end zone with 8:56 left in the quarter.

"Everything went well. All the people that returned from injury helped a lot," Vallejo said. "We're getting there (playing mistake-free football)."

But Frenship took over in the next series and moved the ball behind the passing of Tracey Vineyard.

Passes to Brandon Scroggins (11 yards) and Nick Riddle (14 yards) set up Vineyard's 15-yards scoring pass to a diving Bryan Moore. Hereford led 21-10.

After holding the Herd to a three-and-out, the Tigers drove again under Vineyard, this time would result a 46-yard touchdown pass to Nathan Nichols with 1:40 left in the third. Frenship closed the gap to 21-17.

Cleat Tattoo — Mike Bedolla runs over a Frenship defender to gain some yardage on Friday night at Whiteface Stadium.

But Cody Hodges led the Whitefaces back to the end zone with a one-yard plunge that put the Herd up 27-17. The score was keyed by a 28-yard run by Vallejo.

"The Hereford Whitefaces," said Frenship Coach Bobby Davis on what went wrong against Hereford on Friday night. "They are just a great team, they played good defense and you just got to give them all the credit."

It looked like it was going to be a tough game defensively for the Whitefaces when the Tigers drove 59 yards and Chad Mandrell kicked a 33-yard field goal for an early 3-0 lead in favor of Frenship.

But Hereford responded on the next series.

Vallejo caught a backward lateral pass from Cody Hodges with 34 seconds left in the first quarter and gave Hereford a 7-3 lead.

Then, the Whitefaces dominated defensively.

On the ensuing play, Jorge Rodriguez fumbled on the first Frenship offensive play and Seth Pietsek recovered at the ten.

That fired up Pietsek and the defense for the rest of the evening.

"The defense was fired up and the offense was excited to get the ball back," Pietsek said. "The defense knew that if we can get it back in the offense's hand, we would be alright."

On the next play, Hodges ran free on a quarterback

Week 1 in the NFL: What a way to start the season

All I have to say is "WOW." That wowing I am reacting to is the first week of the NFL season.

You Dallas Cowboy fans know what I am talking about. And some of you may not.

Down 35-14 in the middle of the third quarter against their archrival Washington

YURI SOTO

Redskins, Cowboys made one of the biggest comebacks in their franchise history.

An Emmitt Smith 10-yard touchdown in the beginning of the fourth quarter cut Washington's lead to 35-21.

Just when it seemed the Redskins had the Cowboys stopped to the ground, Aikman aired the ball out and passed a 35-yard touchdown to Michael Irvin with over six minutes left in the football game. Washington 35, Dallas 28.

The Redskins helped the Cowboys with many offsides and other defensive penalties in that drive.

On the next series, Irvin caught the tying pass from Aikman, a 12-yarder to be exact, with 3:25 left. The Redskins again killed themselves with penalties that helped the Cowboys advance the ball toward the end zone. Washington 35, Dallas 35.

From then on, lady luck was on the Cowboys side.

Aikman was intercepted at the Redskin 31-yard line. From there, the Redskins drive to the 25-yard line of the Cowboys thanks to a pass-interference call on Kevin Mathis.

Washington was set for a 42-yard field goal by Bret Conway and....

Holder/goat Matt Turk fumbles the ball and it's a race to get the ball and Conway passes it, Garo Yepremian style, incomplete (no interception return was returned for a touchdown) and ended the game on regulation.

In overtime the Redskins win the coin toss, but have to punt and the Cowboys take over from their own 20.

Then the killer.

Third-and-two from the 34-yard line. Redskins line up eight men on the line. Aikman hands off to Smith.

No, it's a fake handoff.

Aikman throws deep. The Redskins' safeties are frozen by the fake. Raghib Ismail is open and catches the ball. He runs to the end zone with no defender in sight.

COWBOYS WIN, 41-35.

Just part of the exciting first week in the NFL. Just look at some samples of it.

Bret Favre, injured hand an all, overcame three interceptions and passed a 1-yard touchdown to Jeff Thomason to beat Oakland, 28-24.

Al Del Greco kicked a 33-yard field goal with eight seconds left as the Tennessee Titans overcame 28-straight points by the Bengals and won 36-35.

Chris Jacke of the Arizona Cardinals booted a 31-yard field goal, overcoming a 24-6 halftime lead to defeat the Philadelphia Eagles, 25-24. The comeback was triggered by Jake, "the Snake" Plummer.

And New England's Adam Vinatieri added to the Jets problems with a 23-yard field goal with three seconds remaining to beat the New York Jets, who lost Vinny Testaverde early in the game to injury, 30-28.

What a NFL Week 1 it was. Can it be topped? We'll see what happens, because there 21 Sundays of football left.

Hunter safety education class great idea for kids and adults

From the time that my trembling hands tore away the Christmas wrapping and I opened the elongated box to reveal a Springfield single-shot .22 rifle, I can remember my Dad's solemn admonishments about firearms and hunting. Being given a gun was a vote of confidence on my parents' part in my judgment and maturity. This was no toy they were giving me—it was a tool fully capable of delivering death. It was to be handled safely, with respect, reason and caution, rather than fear. The places I went to hunt and the game I sought with the gun were also to be respected.

Dad spent indoctrination time with me, at first plinking at red coffee cans set-up an impossible distance from the firing line. It seemed long-range to me since I had never done more damage to a can than to tink it at close range with the round steel projectiles from a BB gun.

As I learned to handle the rifle and myself and absorbed the lesson that I was always to master the gun and never let poor judgment allow it to master me, there were trips to nearby farm lots and pastures for tries at cottontails and jackrabbits. Eventually, I was granted the privilege of hunting alone. By the time I graduated to shotguns, I could field my own safaris after ducks and pheasants, and those elusive trophies—geese.

I didn't receive formal classroom training in the handling of firearms as a youth, but I got the best teaching there was, from a hands-on mentor. The classroom was the back 40, scattered farm lots, pasturelands and playa bottoms.

Many of today's youth and even adults aren't fortunate enough to have a home-grown tutor in these matters, yet state hunting regulations mandate education for aspiring young hunters of certain ages.

Although a hunter education course is not required to purchase a license, all Texas hunters born on or after September 2, 1971 are required to meet hunter education requirements.

Hunters 17 years of age and older must successfully complete a hunter education course, and hunters between the ages of 12 and 16 must successfully complete a hunter education course or be accompanied by a licensed hunter 17 or older. Hunters under 12 must be accompanied by a licensed hunter 17 or older.

common-sense about firearms handling and ethics in sportsmen of all ages.

The standard hunter education course is a 10-hour class that teaches hunting safety, skills, and responsibility, and a bit about wildlife. Upon completing the class and passing the test that comes at its conclusion, a certification card—good for life—is issued. That card is honored by the 48 states and 10 Canadian provinces that require hunter safety education. The card must be carried at all times while hunting.

While I fell in an age group that was grandfathered-in and wasn't required to take the safety course in order to hunt in Texas—I did so anyway, several years ago when I planned an elk hunting trip to Colorado—where all ages have to produce such a card.

I signed-up for a course taught by Bill McCubben over several evenings at Amarillo College. Other than the classroom being on the warm side, it was a pleasant experience. Bill shared lots of stories and examples, and we got to share some of our own as well. Most of it was basic no-nonsense stuff that had already been drilled into me since boyhood, but a safety reminder now-and-then is appropriate. Many of the youngsters in the room probably hadn't been provided the first-hand instruction I grew up with, and that fact is even more true today.

One of the interesting activities in the course I attended was a video presenting shoot, no-shoot scenarios that you had to decide on. The video showed brief glimpses of situations. After pauses during the program during which you made your choice, "the rest of the story" was presented. There were compelling reminders of things like a house just over the rise, a camouflaged hunter in the edge of the field of view, etc. that created several no-shoot circumstances.

I passed-up a squirrel on a stump that I thought presented a potential ricochet hazard that the video eventually pronounced was an okay shot—but I didn't feel too badly about that...Better safe than sorry.

Additional hunter safety training opportunities will probably open up locally later this fall. There are nearly always a couple of opportunities in Amarillo, and occasionally, even in Hereford. Currently, classroom sessions are available in Lubbock on September 28 and October 26. You can contact Lubbock instructor John E. Dea at 800-888-0034.

A convenient new twist in hunter education is a home study book and video. Instead of the traditional 10 hour classroom course, the study-at-home course lets you get in six hours of the work at home, at your own pace.

Final certification involves a day of hunter skill and ethics exercises, including field and live-firing. As with the standard classroom course, you have to score 80 percent or better on the written exam.

Home study materials are sold individually as a book, in video format, or as a set with an additional workbook.

Text for the course is the Outdoor Life Hunter's Field Guide, developed jointly by the Texas Parks & Wildlife Department, the Nevada Division of Wildlife, and Outdoor Life.

The Outdoor Life Hunter Education Training Course materials should be available this month at retailers such as Wal-Mart, K-Mart, Academy Sports & Outdoors, and Oshman's.

Home-study materials are similar to the material covered in conventional classroom sessions with emphasis on hunter ethics, outdoor skills safety, respect for game laws, gun safety, landowner rights, respect for nature, survival tips and first aid awareness.

If you need information on hunter education courses, including home-study testing sites, you can call the Texas Parks & Wildlife Department's toll-free number at 800-792-1112, extension 62, to obtain a listing of courses by county.

Jim Steiert is a multiple award-winning member of the Texas Outdoor Writers Association, and recipient of TOWA's first "Outdoor Book of the Year" Award.

Come Here, Boy!!!!

Rover Vernon Adams and end Daniel Carnahan go after Frenship's Trace Vineyard during Hereford's 34-17 victory Friday night at Whiteface Stadium. The Herd improve to 3-0.

keeper and gave the Whitefaces a 14-3 lead with 11:54 left in the half.

After the fumble, the game was in the making of a cakewalk for the Whitefaces.

But lady luck was on the side of the Frenship Tigers, at least for the first half.

This game could have been worse for the Tigers. But Hereford was stopped in three of opportunities inside the 20-yard line twice in the first half.

On their third possession, Cody Hodges escaped the rush from the Tigers, but he fumbled at the nine-yard line and Frenship's Barry McCormick recovered.

The second time around, Hereford was stopped at the Tiger 30 on downs.

With four seconds left in the first half, L.J. Vallejo received a handoff from Hodges but fumbled the ball after going airborne over the end zone. Frenship's Fabian Coronado recovered and got the ball at the 20 before the half.

Vallejo, who finished 106 rushing on 13 carries, said that the missed scoring opportunities were mental breakdowns on the part of the Herd.

"They're were just mental breakdowns," Vallejo said. "It's just part of the game. We are just trying to play well and trying to get ready for district."

Frenship missed their opportunities in the second half. After a George Castillo fumble in the Hereford 46, the Tigers took over but were stopped by the Herd defense.

"Our turnovers gave them a shot and they took over on offense," Davis said of Frenship's mistakes. "The snap over the punter and the early fumble ruined us. If it wasn't for those scores, the result would have been more respectable."

Michael Barba and Johnny Zammaripa disrupted the line of scrimmage on the Tigers, getting four sacks on Vineyard.

Perlman recital set

Special to The Brand

AMARILLO -- Violin virtuoso Itzhak Perlman will perform for the 75th anniversary of the Amarillo Symphony.

Perlman will be joined in the performance, which begins at 8 p.m. Jan. 20, 2000, at the Amarillo Civic Center.

Tickets for the Perlman recital are $25, $50 and $75 and are available by calling the Symphony box office at 806-376-8782.

Perlman enjoys superstar status rarely afforded a classical musician. Beloved for his charm and humanity as well as his talent, he has come to be recognized by audiences all over the world who respond not only to his flawless technique, but to the irrepressible joy of making music which he communicates.

ITZHAK PERLMAN
Violin virtuoso to perform in Amarillo

In 1986, President Reagan presented Perlman with the Medal of Liberty.

Born in Israel in 1945, Perlman completed his initial training at the Academy of Music in Tel Aviv. He came to New York in 1958 and appeared on the "Ed Sullivan Show." Following his studies at the Julliard School with Ivan Galamian and Dorothy DeLay, Perlman won the prestigious Leventritt Competition in 1964, which led to a burgeoning world-wide career.

Since then, Perlman has appeared with every major orchestra and in recitals and festivals throughout the world. This recital will be his first appearance in Amarillo.

Perlman has received three Emmy Awards for his PBS specials. He also has won 15 Grammy Awards for his classical recordings.

Perlman's appearance in Amarillo is made possible by the sponsorship of the Jack B. Kelly Family.

Ribbon cut -- Members of the Hereford Hustlers and the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce joined owners David and Carolyn McDonald and their children, Lauri and Jerry, at the ribbon-cutting for Wishes Catalog Sales, a J.C. Penney merchant. Also present was Wishes employee Kim Dawson.

SAVING $2000

Matured, but he's still 'Bombastic Bushkin'

By Connie Cass

The Associated Press

MIDLAND — Restless as tumbleweed and rolling toward age 30 without a career, George W. Bush headed back to the spunky West Texas boomtown of his childhood. Maybe in Midland he could tap a gusher and finally sink some roots.

He brought his father's sterling name, degrees from Yale and Harvard, some $13,000 left in his trust fund, and his strongest personal asset — an exuberant charm spiked with wisecracks.

"He walked into the office and he hadn't changed a bit, the same impish George," recalled Joe O'Neill, a childhood friend. "He had a conversation with every secretary on the way back to me. He knew everybody in the office by the time he left."

Bush never found much oil in Texas, but he slowly found his way. He married and fathered twin girls, quit drinking, began studying Scripture, and made his unsuccessful foray into the family business by running for Congress.

He learned to court friends and political supporters of his father, the vice president. And he hooked up with the oil investors who would eventually help him become managing partner of the Texas Rangers baseball team. Bush used the Rangers post to cultivate celebrity status and prepare for a gutsy, winning challenge to Democratic Gov. Ann Richards in 1994. The Rangers deal also made him a multimillionaire.

He's clearly wised up, settled down. Yet friends say Gov. George W. Bush, the runaway front-runner for the Republican presidential nomination, isn't that different from "The Bombastic Bushkin" who stormed the oil fields in 1975.

He's impatient and super-competitive, whether at Scrabble or golf or politics. He's physical, quick to drape his arm around a stranger or grab a friend in a headlock. And he's blunt — "the son who pulls no punches and tells it like he thinks it is," according to Barbara Bush. He's "sort of gruff," his wife concedes, and it can be intimidating.

"He'd just pop off without thinking what was going to come out of his mouth," said a buddy, Charlie Younger. "He's reined it in some now."

But there are still the quips and raised eyebrows and winks, often conveying an ironic detachment from whatever carefully orchestrated campaign event he's starring in. The message, says wife Laura, is "don't get too serious."

GEORGE W. BUSH
BIRTH DATE — July 6, 1946
EDUCATION — B.A. Yale University (1968), MBA Harvard University (1975)
EXPERIENCE — Businessman in various industries, primarily oil (1968-1989); General Manager of Texas Rangers baseball team (1989-1994), Texas governor (1995-present)
FAMILY — Wife, Laura; Twin daughters
QUOTE — "I am proud to be a compassionate conservative. I know that this approach has been criticized, but why? Is compassion beneath us? Is mercy below us? Should our party be led by someone who boasts of a hard heart?"

George Walker Bush was born July 6, 1946 in New Haven, Conn., where his father, already a flying hero of World War II, was charging through Yale. When "Georgie" was 2, his parents moved West to chase the oil boom.

They settled in Midland, where friends recall an idyllic 1950s childhood of Little League, BB guns and backyard barbecues.

The next child, now Florida Gov. Jeb Bush, was seven years younger. Three others followed: Neil, stung by the S&L scandal of the 1980s and now a business consultant; Marvin, a venture capitalist; and Doro, wife of a Washington lobbyist and mother of four.

None seems to have felt the weight of their father's successes as much as the eldest, often called "Junior" although he's one name short of George Herbert Walker Bush.

He followed his father's path to prep school in Andover, Mass., and then Yale, but failed to live up to his legacy in academics or sports. Instead, he's remembered at Andover for organizing stickball tournaments and lavish pep rallies that brightened an otherwise rigid campus.

At Yale, like his father, he was tapped for the secret Skull and Bones society and became president of Delta Kappa Epsilon. Fraternity brothers remember him as "the life of the party" among a group preoccupied by beer, sports, soul music and, of course, girls. He surprised friends with a short-lived engagement to a young woman from Houston his junior year.

Friends say Bush avoided the nascent Vietnam War protests at Yale and didn't brook criticism of his father, then a Texas congressman supporting the war. He had a student draft deferment.

PCS agency receives state recognition

Special to the Brand

Panhandle Community Services was presented the state's largest merit award recently by the Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs.

The Hereford center is one of 15 local centers which serve residents of the Panhandle.

PCS has led the state in receiving the award for the last six years. Executive director Johnny Raymond and deputy director Phyllis Cook received the award while attending the Annual Executive Director's Conference held in San Antonio.

At the conference, Raymond was also presented a Lifetime Achievement Award for more than 25 years of service to the people of the Texas Panhandle.

Criteria for selection of the merit award was PCS's successful case management, operational efficiency and transitioning welfare families out of poverty.

The agency led the state in this role as its 15 centers helped 346 families get out of welfare roles during the past year. The entire state transitioned just more than 600 families out of poverty.

In accepting the awards, Raymond said, "Welfare reform is the new push from the federal and state government. Our agency has been addressing welfare problems for 33 years, long before the federal mandate. Our Families in Training program has over 150 single parents in colleges throughout the Panhandle right now, and we're seeing an average salary of $22,108 a year as they complete their training."

PCS serves the largest geographic area of the state, covering the 26 counties of the Panhandle. Organized in 1966, the community action agency provided assistance to 7,581 families this past year.

Programs consist of rural transportation, weatherization, housing rental assistance, emergency food assistance, vocational assessment/counseling, retired senior volunteers, homebuyer assistance, and information/referral services.

Ann Landers

Ann Landers
Dear Ann Landers: I thought there was something wrong with me, until I read the following AP story. It seems a recent study by a distinguished sociologist at the University of Chicago reached this conclusion: Sexual dysfunction is far more widespread than previously believed. More than 40 percent of women and one-third of men have very little interest in sex, are unable to have an orgasm, or suffer from some other sexual dysfunction. Surprisingly, sexual problems are highest among younger women, ages 18 to 29. The study also found that high school dropouts are the most likely to have sexual problems. The study's lead author, University of Chicago sociologist Edward Laumann, said he was "stunned" by the results.

The study was published in the Journal of the American Medical Association, and the conclusions were based on the findings of the National Health and Social Life Survey. The compilation of interviews conducted covered 1,749 women and 1,410 men. The participants were from 18 to 59 years of age.

I found the article very informative and agreed with everything I read until the article referred, jokingly, to the stereotypical excuse, "Sorry, dear, I have a headache." With that, Dr. Laumann lost me completely. In fact, he made me mad.

Headaches run in my family. As a headache sufferer, I know the anguish that this debilitating problem can cause. Many a night, I have accommodated my husband's wish to have sex, even though I had a splitting headache, because I didn't want to use that "excuse." Now, we have a respected doctor making fun of it.

I hope you will print my letter, Ann, and let Dr. Laumann know he insulted a great many women. — Nameless in Salt Lake City

Dear Nameless: I don't believe the article was "making fun of women." That tired and trite phrase, "Not tonight, dear, I have a headache," was used to make a point. I believe the doctor deserves a pass on this one. Meanwhile, thank you for a letter a great many women will relate to.

Dear Ann Landers: I've always wondered, what kind of people look for "companionship" via personal ads? I have never been tempted to answer such an ad, but one in particular caught my attention when it began to sound strangely familiar. Out of curiosity, I called the number specified and, sure enough, it was my ex-husband. Wow! Did I get a laugh out of that! I thought I'd split my sides!

The former Mr. Wonderful described himself in the ad as "handsome and wealthy." Since those attributes could be considered judgment calls,

I decided to give him the benefit of the doubt. But he lost me when he blatantly lied about his age and physical condition, describing himself as "virile and exuberant" and lopping six years off his age.

That was enough for me to believe what my gut had signaled — STAY AWAY FROM PERSONAL ADS. I'm certain there are many honest, decent people who place personal ads, but ordinary, everyday common sense should have told me that a person who is reduced to placing an ad in the paper in order to meet someone, must have exhausted all other possibilities and is pretty darned desperate. The bottom line: There are no "bargains" out there. — Smarter Now in Florida

Dear Florida: While I basically agree with you, there ARE exceptions. So, I never say never because, too often, I have been proven wrong.

Gem of the Day (Credit Joe Hickman, Contemporary Comedy): Kids today know more than adults about computers. It was embarrassing enough when they just knew more about sex.

Do you have questions about sex, but no one to talk to? Ann Landers' booklet, "Sex and the Teenager," is frank and to the point. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.75 (this includes postage and handling) to: Teens, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562. (In Canada, send $4.55.)

Mrs. Matthew Heidkamp
...nee Donna Grotegut

Heidkamp, Grotegut united in marriage

Donna Grotegut and Matthew Heidkamp were united in marriage on Sept. 11 in St. Mary's Catholic Church in Umbarger.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Josef Grotegut of Hereford.

Parents of the groom are Patricia Casey and William Heidkamp, both of Chicago, Ill. Father Robert A. Busch, Ph.D., officiated at the ceremony.

Jeanette Dreifuert of San Ramon, Calif., sister of the bride, was matron of honor and best man was Patrick McKenna of Chicago.

Bridesmaids were Monica Grotegut, sister of the bride from Dallas; Judith Grotegut of Hereford, sister-in-law of the bride; Kasey Stephens of Arlington; Colleen Murphy of Chicago; and April Bell of Dallas.

Serving as groomsmen and ushers were John Callahan of Oak Park, Ill.; David Smith and Terrence Gilhooly both of Chicago; Andrew Lynch of Villa Park, Ill.; and Sean Tansey of San Diego, Calif.

Acting as ring bearers were Christian and Andreas Dreifuert, sons of Jeanette and Uli Dreifuert.

Liturgical readings were given by Julie Heidkamp, sister of the groom, and Michael Dolle.

Music was provided by organist Rosemary Ramaekers and Christopher Grotegut, brother of the bride, was the soloist.

The bride wore a sleeveless, spaghetti strap silk white floor-length satin dress with a fitted bodice, full skirt, and detachable train. The dress was adorned with matching pearl beading along the top of the bodice and bottom edge of the full skirt and train. Her waist length veil was adorned with a simple white pearl comb and finished cord edge.

She carried a ribbon tied bouquet of white lilies accented with soft pink spray roses, stephanotis and greenery.

Bridal attendants wore navy blue two-piece floor length dresses with a natural waist and A-line skirt made with Nu Georgette material. The top of the dresses were sleeveless matte satin with a square neckline.

The couple was honored with a reception following the ceremony at St. Mary's Parish Hall. Serving the cake were Jennifer Heiman, Karen Dolle and Denise Batenhorst.

The bride's three tier cake with a four arm base was decorated with fresh stargazer lilies.

After the couple honeymoons in Kauai, Hawaii, they will return to Chicago.

The bride graduated from Hereford High School in 1991. She received a B.S. in Ag. Economics from Texas Tech in 1995 and graduated from the Illinois Institute of Technology with a M.S. in Financial Markets.

The groom graduated from St. Ignatius High School in Chicago in 1989 and graduated from the University of Illinois in Champaign, Ill. with a B.A. in History. He is currently employed as the Chicago Board of Trade floor manager for R.J. O'Brien & Associates.

Senior Citizens Day

AMARILLO -- Monday has been declared Senior Citizens' Day at the 1999 Tri-State Fair. This special day will allow area seniors (60 years of age and older) free admission to the fair until 6 p.m.

A special program for all visiting seniors is scheduled beginning at 10 a.m. in the food court area of the fairgrounds. Program highlights on the SPS Stage will include musical entertainment, refreshments, senior gift packs, and awards for the oldest man and oldest woman.

A full day of activities is planned to entertain the fair's senior visitors including: a donkey and mule show, Watusi cattle show, youth swine show, chainsaw artist, The Garcia Circus and at 6:30 p.m. the Sweet Adeline's and various barbershop quartets take to the SPS Stage.

For assistance in parking and additional information, contact the Tri-State Fair office by calling 806-376-7767.

YOUR EYES

Playing It Safe With Your Eyes

Hundreds of thousands of sports-related eye injuries are reported each year. More than a third happen to youngsters, in both organized sports and after-school playing. Fortunately, most are preventable by taking simple protective measures.

Protective eyewear is recommended for all sports involving high-speed objects. Racquet sports head the list of sports that frequently produce eye injuries, ranging from ocular trauma to eye loss. To maximize eye safety, players can wear sports goggles, equipped with impact-resistant polycarbonate lenses. Good-quality goggles also provide clear, unimpeded vision to maximize player performance.

Another option is wearing safety frames. The better frames pass rigorous tests for strength and lens retention. Close attention is paid at key points, such as the nose pads and hinges. Again, polycarbonate lenses are often recommended.

Whether it's racquet sports, baseball, or bicycle riding, safety eyewear can score big. Discuss your needs with your eye care professional.

Encourage friends, family members to participate in Tell-A-Friend Friday

During Breast Cancer Awareness month in October, the American Cancer Society, Texas Division, Inc., is launching a statewide campaign to reach Texas women with potentially lifesaving information.

"Tell-A-Friend Friday" will be held Oct. 1, a day on which women are asked to call and encourage friends and family members to have regular screening mammograms.

"We hope to reach more than 11,300 women, the same number of new cases of breast cancer expected to be detected in Texas in 1999, and encourage them to get a mammogram," Diane Lowell of Lubbock, chairman of the statewide effort, said.

Research shows that women are more apt to get a mammogram if they are urged to do so by a doctor, friend or family member. Tell-A-Friend Friday is a simple program by which women volunteer to call at least five of their friends and acquaintances and encourage them to get a mammogram.

The benefits of mammography are paying off, as statistics show that the survival rate of breast cancer is almost 100 percent when detected early.

"The only way we can further reduce the death rate from breast cancer is by getting more women to have annual mammograms and Tell-A-Friend Friday is a way to accomplish that goal. More importantly, now that Medicare covers the cost of annual screening mammograms, we're hoping that even more women will avail themselves of this important procedure," Lowell said.

Businesses are also encouraged to participate by allowing employees to make the calls from the workplace on Oct. 1 and throughout the month on the following Fridays.

Annual screening mammograms for women age 40 and older are the key element of the American Cancer Society guidelines, which also include an annual exam by a health care professional and monthly breast self-examination.

For more information and to volunteer for Tell-A-Friend Friday, call the American Cancer Society a 1-800-ACS-2345. Or visit the website at www.acs-tx.org.

Military Muster

Navy Petty Officer 3rd Class Chad M. Stephens, son of Dennis L. and Dianne Stephens of Hereford, is currently on station near Istanbul, Turkey aboard the amphibious assault ship and Amphibious Ready Group (ARG) flagship USS Kearsarge, home ported in Norfolk, Va.

Stephens' ship was called upon to provide effective care and disaster relief in the aftermath of the recent earthquake in western Turkey. While there, the USS Kearsarge ARG will assist in ongoing humanitarian and medical relief assistance.

The USS Kearsarge ARG's comprehensive medical facilities enable the ships to provide effective care and disaster relief in support of humanitarian missions. The three-ship group can provide 631 beds, six operating rooms and five X-ray rooms, staffed by eight medical doctors, three dental officers and 88 medical corpsmen.

In addition, the Kearsarge's 22 helicopters and 819-foot-long flight deck can support multiple medical evacuations.

Ships like the USS Kearsarge are deployed around the world to maintain a U.S. presence and provide a rapid response in times of crisis. Sailors and Marines like Stephens are often the first to arrive in situations ranging from humanitarian relief efforts to combat operations.

The 1995 graduate of Hereford High School joined the Navy in July 1995.

Juan P. Rico Jr. has joined the United States Army under the Delayed Entry Program at the U.S. Army Recruiting Station, Amarillo.

The program gives young men and women the opportunity to delay entering active duty for up to one year.

The enlistment gives the new soldier the option to learn a new skill, travel and become eligible to receive as much as $50,000 toward a college education. After completion of basic military training, soldiers receive advanced individual training in their career specialty.

Rico, a 1994 graduate of Hereford High School, will report for active duty Sept. 21.

He is the son of Manuela F. and Juan P. Rico of Hereford.

Constitution sidelights from DAR

As Constitution Week is observed Sept. 17-23, these Constitution Sidelights, furnished by Los Ciboleros Chapter Daughters of the American Revolution, feature signers of the Constitution. These men who gathered in Philadelphia from May to September 1787 are remembered for their dedication in creating a Constitution which established the rights, privileges, and responsibilities of American citizenship.

*Benjamin Franklin was born in Boston in 1706 and at the age of 81 was the oldest delegate to sign the Constitution. Thought he did not approve of many aspects of the Constitution and was hampered by his age and ill health, he missed few sessions, if any. His prestige and ability to soothe the passions and compromise disputes eased the way for the signing of this great document.

Volumes could be, and have been, written on the life of Benjamin Franklin but perhaps George Washington summed it up in a letter to Franklin in 1789: "If to be venerated for benevolence, if to be admired for talents, if to be esteemed for patriotism, if to be loved for philanthropy, can gratify the human mind, you must have the pleasing consolation to know that you have not lived in vain."

*Thomas Mifflin was born in Philadelphia on Jan. 10, 1744. He served as an aide to General George Washington during the Revolutionary War and later as Quartermaster General of the Continental Army. Mifflin served in the congress of the Confederation from 1782 to 1784. He represented Pennsylvania at the Constitutional Convention and although he attended regularly he made no speeches and did not play a substantial role though he was one of the signers. He died in 1800.

Octoberfest '99 is set deep in heart of Texas

Folks 50 and over are invited to experience nature at its best this year "deep in the heart of Texas" during Octoberfest '99, according to Beverly Harder, County Extension Agent for Family and Consumer Sciences.

The event, sponsored by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, will be Oct. 18-21 at Lake Brownwood.

Opportunities will include hands-on learning centers where one can learn painting, woodworking, holiday crafts, and other exciting projects. Education programs on topics such as horticulture, photography, nutrition, finances and other current interests are a popular highlight.

Fishing on Lake Brownwood adds popularity to this event. Lighted tennis courts, horseshoes, billiards, volleyball, shuffleboard, dominoes, and card and table games are all available. Fun and educational tours are planned.

A special "Walk on the Wild Side" theme featuring a costume contest will provide a festive atmosphere to the event. The theme party and the closing banquet will feature exciting activities and entertainment.

If interested, call the county Extension office at 364-3573.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Concentration: A Component of Success

Did you hear about the manager of an orange juice plant who lost his job because he couldn't concentrate? Or the photographer who lost all of her customers because she couldn't stay focused? Old jokes, but as in most humor there is an element of truth.

The ability to concentrate and stay focused is an important success trait. You can define concentration as "employing all of your mental power," "thinking intensely" or "focusing all of your attention on something."

Concentration allows us to shut out distractions and interference, and to center our attention on the matter at hand. Those who enjoy the most success in life are often those who can stay focused on getting the job done.

Concentration is a skill you can develop. You will reap many benefits by building this skill.

The Pay Off

A key benefit of concentration is that your productivity will increase. High achievers stay focused and accomplish more. We all have the same number of hours each day, but most of us can learn to use those hours more effectively. We will get done by focusing on one task until we finish it.

A second benefit of concentration is fewer mistakes. The quality of work completed increases when we're focused. We avoid those little mistakes we all make when a project doesn't have our undivided attention. It always requires less time to do it right the first time.

Another benefit is more available time. While concentration doesn't add hours to your day, it will free up more of those hours for other tasks. Fixing your focus on one task until you get it done will allow you to tackle more projects. The time you gain, added to that saved by making fewer mistakes, will stretch your day and make you more productive.

A side benefit, but still part of the pay off, is the peace of mind that comes from doing your job well. When you're doing quality work and accomplishing more every day, you become more relaxed. You no longer lie awake at night worrying about the tasks you weren't able to finish. You'll enjoy the peace of mind.

Barriers to Concentration

Distractions. Distractions come in many forms. Phone calls, co-workers and multiple tasks are leading causes of distraction. Shut your office door and put all calls on hold until you can complete an important, urgent task. When noise begins to threaten your concentration, put on stereo headphones and block out unwanted sounds with soft music.

Fatigue. Often your mind or body runs out of gas before you finish an important task. Usually, you are better off getting some rest before running to the job. No one knows your personal limits better than you. If you're too tired to focus, take a break. Get a little exercise or eat a healthy snack. Then you can return to the task refreshed.

Boredom. Routine tasks often cause boredom and symptoms similar to fatigue. If you feel bored setting in and have no real reason for fatigue - that is, the kids didn't keep you up all night - turn the task into a challenge. Make it a game, keep score and promise yourself a little reward if you finish early.

Clutter. When my desk is piled high with projects, I often find my mind traveling from one pile to another. When this happens, I prioritize the piles and move all but the most important one off my desk. It's the old "out of sight, out of mind" trick, and it works.

I hope these tips will help you. They won't take the place of hard work, but they will make your work more productive.

Some Books Worth Reading

Between the Covers

By Martha Russell

By the time you read this, we will have done what we call a "blitz" on the library shelves. The library was closed Saturday for the event. We have dusted, straightened, read, sorted and filed the entire collection. If you come in this week and everyone appears a little spacey and cross-eyed, you know why.

In a perfect world, all the books would now be in their proper places. We would be able to find everything you want, and there would be nothing lost. That's a perfect world. In the real world, finding books should be easier and the library should look neater and cleaner. When you consider that we have 70,000 volumes plus, that's not too bad.

We are continually made aware of the benefits of working cooperatively with other libraries in the Panhandle. Our memberships in Harrington Library Consortium and Texas Panhandle Library System assist us in numerous ways. The training we receive through both organizations has proven invaluable more than once.

One of the training sessions currently offered is conversational Spanish for librarians. Maricela and I are taking the five part class. Growing up in a bi-lingual family, Maricela has an ear to hear the language, and my college Spanish classes give me the ability to read the language with understanding, sketchy though it may be. But, it takes both of us together to figure out how to say things.

We have just had our first class and can now say, "Voy al banco." That is, being interpreted, "I am going to the bank." A useful phrase on payday, but it doesn't come up much in normal library conversation. Actually, we are just starting, and we learned quite a lot in our first class. Just getting over the embarrassment of speaking strange words, and taking the risk of saying something that you don't mean to say, is a big step.

Pat (Patricio) Mullin, head of children's services at Amarillo Public Library, is teaching the class. If you know Pat, you know that the class is not dull. He is an experienced and talented teacher, and promises to have us speaking library-necessary Spanish by the time we finish the class sometime in October. And, in the meantime, we have laughed a lot and had a marvelous time.

Joe Weaver is in the class, too. You do know Joe, and that any event with Joe in the group is a party.

If you speak Spanish, come in and give us a chance to practice. Maricela and I are practicing with each other, but we are probably driving the rest of the staff buggy.

Incidentally, we do have a collection of Spanish language books, both adult and juvenile. If you, or someone you know reads Spanish more easily than English, we can help. Or, maybe like Maricela and I, you are trying to brush up your Spanish and would welcome the challenge of reading Stephen King or Patricia Cornwell in Spanish.

New English books this week include the newest Rita Mae Brown book, Loose Lips. In the small town of Runnymede, Md., everyone knows everyone else and all of their business. The ongoing antics of the battling Hunsenmeier sisters, Julia (Juts) and Louise, have kept the town entertained since they were children.

Now, in 1941, as they approach the age of 40, Juts is unwise enough to mention the fact to her sister. The ensuing brawl amounts to $400 worth of broken glass at Cadwalder's soda fountain.

To pay the debt, the sisters choose a surprisingly new direction. Suddenly they are joint owners of The Curl 'n' Twirl beauty salon, where discriminating ladies meet to be primed, permed, and pampered while they catch up on the latest dirt. As usual the sisters rarely see eye to eye, and there are plenty of opinions to go around.

Even the common bond of patriotic duty brings wildly unexpected results when the twosome joins the Civil Air Patrol, watching the night sky for German Stukas. But loose lips can sink even the closest relationships, and Juts and Louise are about to discover that some things are best left unsaid.

If you're a Rita Mae Brown fan, you might enjoy Rita Will: Memoir of a Literary Rabblerouser by Rita Mae Brown herself. She tells the story of how she was born a sickly, illegitimate daughter of a flighty blue blood, and brings to life the eccentric cast of real-life characters who later fueled her extraordinary fiction.

Another new nonfiction book is Things Seen and Unseen: A Year Lived in Faith by Nora Gallagher. In the late '80s, Gallagher entered Trinity Episcopal Church as a tourist and ended up a pilgrim. What she wanted was peace, she thought. What she got was something entirely different. Gallagher chronicles a year of her own spiritual searching and the life of a parish church.

We experience, along with her, struggles with faith in the midst of community, a fatal illness in her family, sitting with a friend who is dying of AIDS and another with cancer, serving communion wine at the altar, and coping with homeless men and women and their critics.

Gallagher says, "Faith is not about belief in something irrational or about a blind connection to something unreal. It's about a gathering, an accumulation of events and experiences of a different order...the longing a soul has to find its shape in the world."

On a lighter note, we have House Calls by Patch Adams, M.D., It's full of cartoons with a distinct Far Side flavor. It's really funny as well as practical, even if you haven't seen the movie.

Corn prospects grim

Excellent yields, low prices, and closing facilities add to grain producer concerns

By Dianna F. Dandridge
Hereford Brand Staff Writer

Local farmers may very well consider planting something other than food corn when next planting season rolls around.

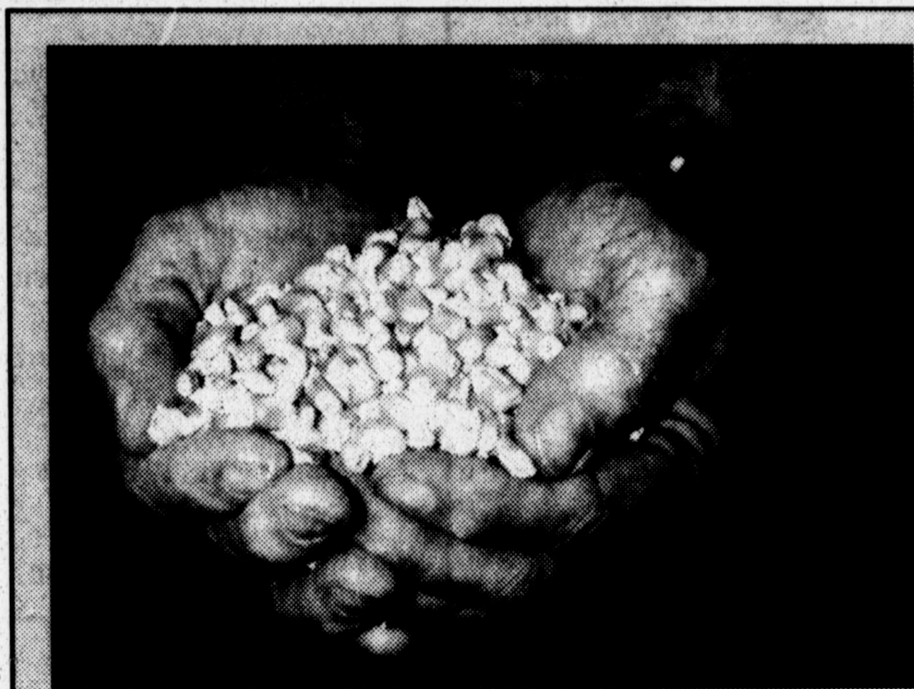

This year, according to Texas Corn Producers Board officials, the yield so far is proving excellent, but between low prices and the closing of the local Frito-Lay plant, food corn may be a losing proposition.

TCPB executive director Jerry Don Glover recently said last year area producers planted in excess of 42,000 acres of corn and harvested at least 33,000 acres.

"Many of those acres were food corn," Glover said. "I feel it will go down with the closing of Frito-Lay."

The saving grace for area producers who still want to plant corn is the number of feed lots that feed predominantly corn and silage.

"Custom Harvesters near Muleshoe are reporting good crops. Some as high as 200 bushels per acre. And, the ensilage has more grain than last year. Some ensilage is making 35-37 tons per acre. From all we've heard, the crop is looking really good," Glover said.

Last year's drought lessened corn crop throughout the area and in isolated areas east of Kress corn tested high for aflatoxins, a cancer-causing fungus brought on by the unusual conditions.

This year's corn crops didn't suffer the aflatoxin problems that lowered the value of corn last year and early moisture helped get corn off to a good start. Unfortunately, most of the corn-producing area is also having a good year, which continues to mean high yields and low prices.

Reports from the Texas Agricultural Statistics Service indicate statewide corn production increases of nearly 26 percent over last year's crop.

TASS expects approximately 233.6 million bushels to be harvested. As good as that may be, it still falls short of the 1997 record year by at least 3 percent.

The statewide yield is expected to average 135 bushels per acre - 35 more bushels per acre than 1998. TASS also expects harvested acreage to be down by 6 percent.

With good yields and good production conditions, the one factor which may prevent future planting will be the price farmers receive for their crop.

"Prices are terrible all over the U.S.," said Glover. "In some places, it's as low as $2."

Producers can always ship their food corn crops to other production cites, but the freight costs would only add to the producers lost revenue.

Just this week, growers faced the additional problems of late season rains.

Rains, which are usually welcome, can cause late stage corn to lodge - bending or breaking of the stalk low to the ground - and so make crops nearly impossible to harvest.

The weekly AgriPartner report indicates lodging is running very high in some fields and most is due to stalk rot rather than pest infestation.

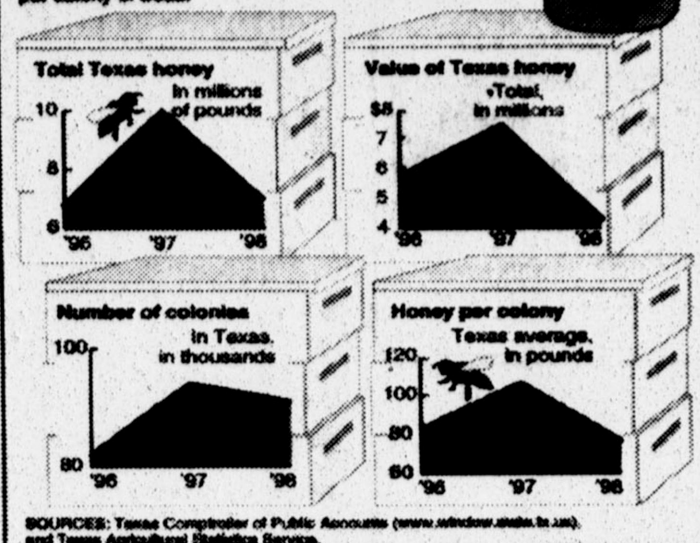

Until the middle of the week, area corn producers were expecting to be able to start harvesting within the next 10 days or so. With three to seven inches of rain being reported, harvesters will be kept out of the fields for at least another two weeks.

Glover said rains at this time could greatly affect the grain yield and quality.

Keeping an eye on Texas

Honey brings in money

Texas produces about five percent of the honey in the U.S., with beekeepers earning $4.3 million in 1998 from honey that produced an average of 77 pounds of honey per colony of bees.

TCPB selects new director

Texas Corn Producers Board has announced Tulia Elevator manager David Gibson will replace Jerry Don Glover of Dimmitt as the Executive Director.

The TCPB selected Gibson over more than 30 national candidates citing his experience in agriculture and his understanding of the challenges that today's farmers face, said TCPB Chairman Joe Reed.

"David brings Texas corn farmers the knowledge and experience that is necessary to best prepare producers for the challenges of the 21st century," Reed said. "He will continue to build on the foundation of his predecessors."

Gibson replaces Glover, who stepped down after four years in the position to return to private business and his family's farming operation. Glover had also served as TCPB treasurer.

Gibson will assume his duties Oct. 1, but will work with Glover during the next few months to ensure a smooth transition, said Reed.

He plans on continuing the emphasis on research and marketing, which he says is the backbone of TCPB programs.

Gibson is currently the manager of Attebury Grain of Kress and Tulia. He has served as County Extension Agent for Hale and Swisher counties and as an independent farmer.

Brown receives award

Throckmorton rancher receives the Ranching Heritage's 1999 Golden Spur Award

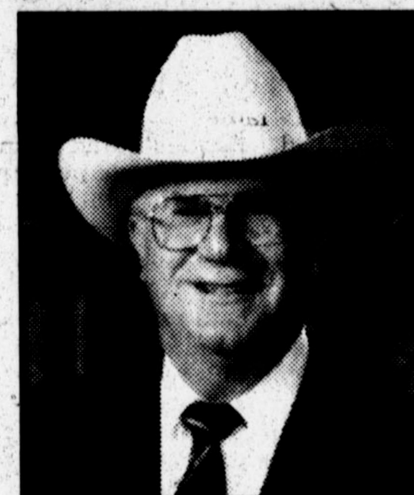

Throckmorton rancher and past president of the American Quarter Horse Association R.A. "Rob" Brown, Jr. will be honored Saturday, Sept. 25 with the National Golden Spur Award at the Ranching Heritage Center in Lubbock.

Brown, a Texas Tech Agricultural Sciences and Natural Resources graduate, is actively involved in the running and day to day operation of his ranch near Throckmorton.

Brown's family ranch began raising and breeding purebred Hereford in 1895 and is now a leader in innovative-cross and composite cattle-breeding.

Today the Brown ranching operation encompasses 81,000 acres in Texas and Colorado. Brown is involved with numerous agri-business industries including the R.A. Brown Cattle Co., and a wheat sorghum and yearling cattle operation.

He maintains records on 1,000 head of registered cattle, 1,500 head of commercial cattle, 40 AQH broodmares and 50 working ranch horses. Brown sells more than 400 bulls, 600 heifers and 25 ranching horses each year.

His operations maintain ownership of feedlot animals to help improve the genetic qualities needed in the industry.

Brown has taken a leadership role in numerous cattle, horse, and ranching organizations.

His involvement has spanned more than 20 years and he has served in leadership capacities in more than 15 organizations.

For more information or to make reservations for the dinner and awards please contact the Ranching Heritage Center at (806)742-0498.

The Golden Spur Award honors individuals who have made great contribution to the agricultural industry.

Improved irrigation touted at field day

Special to The Brand

Area producers who want to learn more about drip irrigation as a way to improve irrigation application efficiency are urged to attend a demonstration field day later this month.

The field day, which is sponsored by the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1, will be 9 a.m.-3 p.m. Sept. 23 at the Ronnie Owens farm, located 6 miles east of Hereford on U.S. Highway 60 and 1 mile north on Country Road E.

Producers are invited to stop by at any time during the field day for a one-on-one discussion of drip irrigation and other water conservative techniques.

The drip irrigation field day will focus on the installation and management of drip irrigation systems, according to district assistant manager Ken Carver.

"Drip irrigation is slow, frequent applications of small amounts of water to the soil area directly surrounding plant roots. Water losses caused by evaporation, deep percolation and runoff are virtually eliminated. Using drip irrigation can save as much as 30-40 percent of the water used by furrow irrigation," Carver said.

The drip tape is installed on 20 acres at the site and has been in operation since February 1997. Owens' system operates in a series of three stations.

Water district personnel will be available to answer questions and demonstrate a variety of water conservation techniques, including soil moisture monitoring with gypsum blocks and resistance meters, use of Potential Evapotranspiration (PET) data to schedule irrigation, design and installation of a drip irrigation system, as well as pump plant energy efficiency testing.

A dealer display will be set up at the site to show several products, including the drip tape, emitters and other hardware.

Carver encouraged any producer who is interested in water conservation to attend the field day.

"This is not a formal field tour. Visitors can stop by whenever they have time to see all the demonstrations or when they have just a few minutes to see the demonstration they are particularly interested in," Carver said.

The field demonstration day is sponsored by the water district and its Deaf Smith County committee.

For more information on the field demonstration day, contact the water district at (806) 762-0181 or by e-mail at hpwd@hpwd.com or info@hpwd.com

Writing want ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.

For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:

- Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.
- Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.
- Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.
- Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

The verdict is in: Judging Amy is a gem

Tyne Daly (Cagney & Lacey), left, and Amy Brenneman (NYPD Blue) leave the police beat behind for the new family drama Judging Amy, loosely based on the career of Brenneman's mother. The series premieres Sunday on CBS and moves to its regular time slot on Tuesday.

Despite the millennium and the completely online houses touted by the Japanese, there are still a few people who have yet to figure out how to set their VCRs. Finally, there is a reason to learn.

Judging Amy, an hourlong CBS drama series starring Amy Brenneman (NYPD Blue) and Tyne Daly (Cagney & Lacey), previews Sunday, Sept. 19, then moves to its regular Tuesday slot Sept. 21.

Every so often, a literate show — like Frasier — comes along. And sometimes, an ensemble cast just clicks — witness Friends — or real-life topics seem even more gut-wrenching when interpreted by excellent actors, as in the early years of Chicago Hope.

But how often do all these elements come together? And then go a step further to bring to television a story of strong women in important jobs keeping families together? Judging Amy is that absolute rarity.

After separating from her husband, Amy (Brenneman) leaves her life as a corporate lawyer in Manhattan and returns home with her daughter, Lauren (Karl Warren), to live with her mother, Maxine (Tyne Daly), and begin a new career as a family-law judge in Hartford, Conn.

The show plays with the delicate balance of three generations coexisting under one roof.

"The fights you are having with your mother when you are 12 never go away," executive producer Barbara Hall says. When adult siblings talk, "suddenly you are 35 years old and you are still saying, 'You tore my coloring book.'"

Some of the story line is autobiographical. Brenneman's mother is a juvenile-court judge, and she is from Hartford, the insurance capital of the world. When Hall and Brenneman got together, the actress explained her concept for the show, and Hall wrote the script in five days.

The show has lovely, funny doses of reality. When Lauren is preparing for an oral book report, she says she will do The Secret Garden, then opts for Everyone Poops — a much easier text. As Amy is being pulled by her demanding mother, uncertain child, new job and estranged husband, it's all told with the appropriate levity.

In the pilot, Amy tells Maxine, "I don't want to talk about my marriage with you. It's personal and it's mine, and you are not in it." To which Maxine, not missing a breath, says, "Well, there goes my personal life."

Hall, once a single mother, says even when life seems tough, it's not dismal. "I really did OK, and it's nice to be able to show that."

There were times of adjustment, she recalls, such as "having to suddenly make single friends because all of your friends are married. I discovered lunch-counter eating. I got a little bit shunned by the other mothers at my daughter's school."

"It's new to TV to have a strong female cast, written by a woman," Hall concludes. "It really becomes this woman's journey, this transgenerational thing. The female judge is something, it's a very interesting job and she works in family court and a lot of the cases will parallel what is going on in her life."

HOROSCOPES

September 19-25

ARIES - March 21/April 20

You finally get a chance to talk with a loved one about something that has been bothering you for quite a long time now. Don't beat around the bush. Get straight to the point, and try to work things out. If you don't, your relationship could be damaged. Capricorn plays a key role on Friday.

TAURUS - April 21/May 21

A quiet evening at home early in the week turns into quite an adventure. Taurus, when a close friend drops by unexpectedly. Be supportive, and try to help him or her. Don't get upset when things get a little crazy. This person appreciates all that you're doing.

GEMINI - May 22/June 21

You have a relaxing week ahead of you, Gemini. Enjoy it! Pamper yourself, because you deserve it. Spend time with loved ones whom you haven't seen in a while. They have a lot to tell you. A close friend asks you for romantic advice late in the week. Try to help him or her. Pisces plays an important role on Wednesday.

CANCER - June 22/July 22

Don't let your conscience get the best of you when you yell at a good friend early in the week. Cancer. This person was overly excited and needed someone to calm him or her down. You had to be stern. Don't beat yourself up about it. A loved one gets you involved in a family project. While you're not excited about it, do your best.

LEO - July 23/August 23

Don't let a co-worker's compliment go to your head early in the week, Leo. You certainly deserve the praise, but it doesn't mean that you can coast from here on out. You still have to work hard. Don't forget that. That special someone takes you out late in the week. Enjoy yourself!

VIRGO - Aug 24/Sept 22

Don't be too eager to lend an acquaintance a helping hand this week. He or she isn't telling you the whole truth. Getting involved with him or her right now will cause you a lot of problems. A loved one shares a family secret with you. Keep it to yourself, because it's not your place to tell anyone about it.

LIBRA - Sept 23/Oct 23

A loved one turns to you in a time of need. Don't be upset that you don't know what to tell him or her to do. This person really just wants someone to listen. Be there for him or her. That special someone asks you an interesting question late in the week. Be honest when answering.

SCORPIO - Oct 24/Nov 22

Don't back down when in a discussion with an acquaintance. You know that you are right, so defend your position. This person will realize that he or she is wrong soon enough. Onlookers will be impressed with your actions. Aries plays a key role in your romantic life on Tuesday.

SAGITTARIUS - Nov 23/Dec 21

Don't be afraid to be blunt when talking to a loved one about a problem that you're having. In order for this person to help you, he or she has to know exactly what's going on. Don't be embarrassed. A close friend reveals his or her true feelings for you. Before responding, think about how you feel and what you really want.

CAPRICORN - Dec 22/Jan 20

Stand your ground when a business associate questions a decision that you make. You know that you are doing the best thing possible. Just explain your decision, and this person is sure to support you. A close friend needs a shoulder to cry on. Be there for him or her.

AQUARIUS - Jan 21/Feb 18

Don't let a loved one force you to do something that you're against. Stand by your principles, and do what you think is right. He or she will respect you for it. The person whom you've been seeing doesn't call for a while. Don't get upset; he or she has just been busy.

PISCES - Feb 19/March 20

Even though you don't want to get involved in a family disagreement, you know that you have to. Loved ones are counting on you to help them work things out. Being the mediator will be more rewarding than you think.

Jenny Jones is featured in an A&E Network special that turns a critical eye on a controversial form of entertainment. It's Only Talk: The Real Story of America's Talk Shows airs Sunday, Sept. 19.

More than 50 years old, the talk show format has undergone great changes that some certainly would say are for the worse. But talk is cheap, it's easy to produce, and viewers love it.

It's Only Talk features interviews with Art Linkletter, Mike Wallace, Joan Rivers and many others.

Annabeth Gish and John Stamos star in Sealed With a Kiss, airing Sunday, Sept. 19, on CBS.

Stamos plays a young business hot-shot well on his way to the top of the corporate ladder. His life seems perfect, complete with a gorgeous fiancée who is ready to say, "I do."

But a chance encounter with a young woman leads him to a crossroad ... and drastic change in his life.

The original TV movie also stars Angie Dickinson, Robert Stack, Nell Carter and Jane Sibbett.

Master carpenter Norm Abram (left) and host Steve Thomas undertake a very personal restoration project as This Old House kicks off its 21st season Saturday on PBS (check local listings).

This Old House rebuilds family home hit by fire

©TVData Features Syndicate

When carpenter Dick Silva's family home of 32 years was ravaged by a five-alarm fire earlier this year, the Silvas lost a lifetime of memories and possessions. While nothing can bring them back, Silva should find comfort in the fact that his brother, Tom, has some solid connections in the restoration business.

Tom Silva is construction manager of the internationally known This Old House crew led by host Steve Thomas and master carpenter Norm Abram. The 21st season of the trend-setting PBS real-life restoration and remodeling show begins Saturday, Sept. 25 (check local listings), with the renaissance of the Silva residence.

"For the last 10 years, the Silvas have done whatever was needed to keep our projects on schedule," Thomas says. "Now it's our turn to do whatever it takes to get the job done -- which is to help Dick get back his house."

In helping their friend with this massive rebuilding project, the This Old House crew members earned themselves almost an entire season's worth of on-screen work. Eighteen episodes will feature the Silva home.

"Once our season starts, it's like a train moving down the track. The momentum has to be maintained, because the project isn't completed when you first start seeing the show. We don't know how it'll end either," Thomas confesses.

Homeowners are responsible for all building costs of the televised fixer-uppers. While insurance is covering a portion of the Silva restoration, generosity doesn't hurt either.

"Some materials are donated from manufacturers," Thomas explains. "We like to feature new technologies involving heating and cooling equipment and window and insulation systems."

The donations help persuade homeowners to try nontraditional approaches, Thomas adds. "It gives us a chance to use the best materials and techniques we've discovered and stay on budget."

Since this is a project that has the crew starting almost from scratch, the show's title may not exactly apply, but Thomas insists the series' mission carries on -- to instill an understanding of the rebuilding process while promoting a sense of self-reliance.

TV PIPELINE

By Taylor Michaels
©TVData Features Syndicate

Q: I enjoyed Bernadette Peters in Concert on PBS. I seem to remember her playing a photographer named "Charley" in a TV show several years ago. Am I right? She was so cute and doesn't look a day older. —Alice in California.

A: You have a good memory. Alice, Peters played Charlotte "Charley" Drake, a liberal free-lance photographer having a stormy affair with much older conservative political columnist Richard C. Barrington (Richard Crenna) in All's Fair, a Norman Lear sitcom that ran for a single season (1976-77) on CBS. Michael Keaton co-starred as presidential joke writer Lanny Wolf.

You're also right about this ageless performer, who knows the value of keeping both feet on the ground and taking care of herself. At 51, Peters has never looked or sounded better.

Q: A friend and I were watching Christmas Evil (sometimes known as You Better Watch Out), and I thought I recognized a face and voice as those of Jill from Home Improvement. My friend says it wasn't. —Marc Black, Cleveland, Ga.

A: Your friend, to my shock, is wrong. Patricia Richardson did indeed have a small role as a mother in that grisly, low-budget 1980 horror film.

Q: I am sure I remember Tommy Lee Jones playing in a soap opera back in the '60s or '70s. Does this ring a bell? —Gloria in Pennsylvania.

A: Yes. Before his movie career caught fire, Jones played Dr. Mark Toland on One Life to Live (1971-75).

Q: Why is it that reruns of The Golden Girls always stop after the episode showing Dorothy marrying Blanche's Uncle Lucas? The reruns then go back to the beginning of the series, but I remember many more episodes after the wedding. Am I mistaken? —Brandy Lynn, St. Petersburg, Fla.

Bernadette Peters

A: Not entirely. The episode you mention was, in fact, the series finale of The Golden Girls. The following fall, remaining cast members Rue McClanahan, Betty White and Estelle Getty switched to CBS in a new show called The Golden Palace, which found the "girls" living together in a South Beach hotel they had bought, not knowing it was a money pit. Palace lasted only one season.

Q: What does M*A*S*H stand for? —Helen McFarland, Waterford, Mich.

A: Mobile Army Surgical Hospital.

Q: Is it true that Melina Kanakaredes of Providence once played on Guiding Light? —Mary MacGibeny, Glassboro, N.J.

A: Yes. In 1991, Kanakaredes created the role of Eleni Andros Cooper, a part she played on the popular daytime soap until 1994.

The fourth annual ABC Super Soap Weekend at Disney-MGM Studios is set for Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 25 and 26, and this year it looks as if there will be more stars attending than ever before.

The event draws thousands of fans who want to meet their favorite ABC soap stars "up close and personal."

Different stations are set up for fans to get autographs, buy soap-opera-related items or watch their favorite stars in action.

Last year the special soap weekend was hindered by November sweeps and the strike at ABC. Many of the stars had scheduling conflicts and couldn't attend.

All My Children fan Susan Clark attended Super Soap Weekend last year and says she was thrilled to be in such close proximity to AMC star Cameron Mathison (Ryan Lavery). "We were able to talk with him, and he signed an autograph. He's even better-looking in person," she says.

Julie Pinson, who plays Eve Lambert on Port Charles, was surprised by the reaction of her fans.

"I play kind of a bad girl," Pinson admits. "I didn't know what to expect, but everyone has been so sweet."

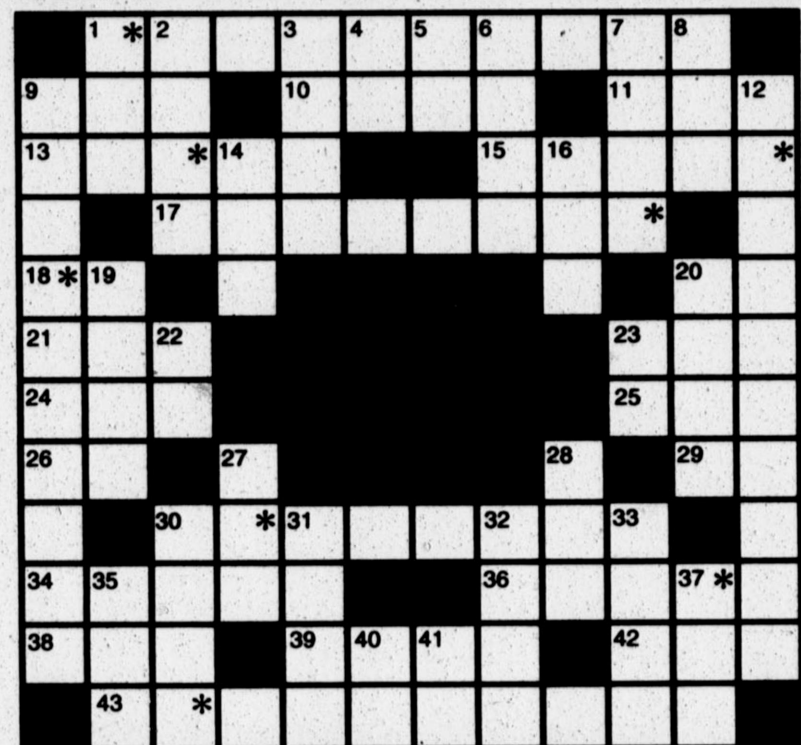

There are too many names to list, but the most popular stars from AMC, One Life to Live, PC and General Hospital will attend this year's event.

Susan Lucci (Erica Kane, AMC), Finola Hughes (Alexandra Devane, AMC), Michael E. Knight (Tad, AMC), Jackie Zeman (Bobbie Spencer, GH), Nancy Lee Grahn (Alexis Davis, GH), Robert S. Woods (Bo Buchanan, OLTL), Catherine Hickland (Lindsay Rappaport, OLTL) and Kin Shriner (Scott Baldwin, PC) are just some of the actors who are scheduled to appear.

Fans can see their favorite stars for the regular park admission price.
