Neighbors don't like lake's 'cost'

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Mildred Shapira knew the city was going to convert the park at A Street and Cuthbert Avenue into a lake, and that was OK with her.

But she didn't know they were going to cut down some trees to do it. When she looked out of her house at 1006 N. A St. Wednesday and saw the trees being sliced down, Mrs. Shapira decided to take some action to save the towering giants which had shaded the park for years.

"The trees are so beautiful; why do they cut down trees here?" she asked Wednesday afternoon. Standing in her yard across the street from the park, Mrs. Shapira watched the contract workers moving dirt in the first stages of the project.

Back on Oct. 28, 1980, the City Council began to wrestle with the problem of Wadley-Barron Park. For years, it had served as a neighborhood gathering place and a drainage area during heavy rains. But the low spots began to fill up with water and pumps did no good. The more they pumped, the higher the water rose.

Finally, the city was advised by Ed Reed, a local hydrologist, that the water was not leftover rain, but the rising ground water table. During the meeting in late October, Wayne Kohout, director of parks and recreation, told the council the higher water table "looks like it's permanent."

The council decided to investigate the possibility of turning it into a lake to have a unique recreational facility.

On Nov. 13, 1980, Kohout reported to the council his department had mailed 66 letters to residents in the area around the park asking their opinion about a lake. Of the 29 responses, Kohout said the majority favored the idea of a lake.

After reviewing plans in December, the council on Jan. 27 awarded a contract for $145,000 to South Texas Construction Co. to convert the land into a lake.

After hearing of the complaints Wednesday afternoon, John Campbell, foreman on the job, halted work on cutting down the trees.

Pulling out the plans given him by the city, Campbell said he was instructed to cut down 15 trees in the center of the park. That area would be deepened and be part of the lake, he said.

Trees along the east edge of the park then became the ones in question. Campbell explained the plans call for all trees more than 30 feet from the edge of the park to be cut down. If followed strictly, that would mean all trees along the east edge would have to be eliminated.

Campbell added that the city will decide which ones come out along the edge.

After meeting with Mayor G. Thane Akins and Councilman Tom Sloan Wednesday evening, Mrs. Shapira said she understands about the trees in the center having to go. "But we're still trying to save the others," she said.

"They couldn't have been more helpful," she said of the elected officials. "I understand it's a difficult problem for them."

Akins said this morning he would consult with Kohout and Fred Baker, director of public works, about the possibility of saving the trees around the edge of Wadley-Barron Park.

"This is the same plan we talked about in council meetings a couple of times," he remarked. "I'll see if changing the slope could save the trees. But if the roots are covered by water, the trees could die."

Digging in to park controversy

Perplexed as to why trees are being cut down in Wadley-Barron Park during the process of converting it into a lake are, right, Andrew Shapira and his mother, Mildred Shapira. Noticing Wednesday that the trees were being eliminated, Mrs. Shapira contacted city officials about saving the trees on the park's east edge. Above, a worker pushes out dirt to deepen the park. Trees which had been cut down earlier are in the background.

Cities draw state into controversy

Midland and Odessa are at it again over Monahans Draw and toilet water.

And this time, the Texas Department of Water Resources may be the whipping boy.

The tussle, which was re-instigated five months ago by Midland County Commissioners, was flown like a red flag Monday afternoon when the Commissioners' Court in a 5-0 vote agreed to seek a rehearing by the Texas Department of Water Resources to prevent the city of Odessa from continuing to dump effluent from it sewage treatment plant into the "navigable" draw.

The action stops shy of a lawsuit to seek injunctive relief to keep Odessa's sewage runoff out of Midland County.

The draw winds easterly to south of Midland onto the Colorado River and into a lake (E.V. Spence Reservoir at Robert Lee) from which Midland, Odessa, and other municipalities get most of their drinking, household and industrial water.

And as the draw's waters flow, they drop much of their salts, chemicals and heavy metals, which often leach through the porous draw and into wells used — or once used — for drinking water.

THE COMMISSIONERS' vote followed a two-hour executive session in which they discussed studies by Midland hydrologists Ed Reed and his son Joe Reed; research by Jewel Smith, chief sanitarian of the Midland City-County Health Department, and his chemist, Jim Davis; the expertise of Dick Hagelstein, district conservationist for the U.S. Soil Conservation Service for Midland County; and the draw's legal aspects with Ted Kerr, the Commissioners' Court counsel on the draw, and County Attorney Robert Rendall.

The motion by the court calls for "data and reports" on Monahans Draw to "be immediately forwarded to the Texas Department of Water Resource and that counsel (Kerr) request a rehearing on the city of Odessa's discharge permit into Monahans Draw to provide for an alternate method of disposal of effluent water discharge."

The motion, made by C. DeWayne Davis, was seconded by Win Brown, and unhesitatingly approved by Commissioners Durward Wright, Charlie Welch, Davis and Brown and by County Judge William B. "Bill" Ahders.

Moments later, the commissioners again launched into their 1982 budget study and left explanation for their action up to their hired counsel.

"THE (EFFLUENT) WATER has adversely affected the waters around Monahans Draw," Kerr said in the courthouse hallway, as the commissioners delved into the budget study.

Kerr said that Odessa officials have been "well advised" of the Midland

Midlanders awaiting official ruling on cancer machine

By SUE FAHLGREN
Staff Writer

Reaction to Wednesday's news of a Texas Health Facilities Commission officer recommendation to deny Odessa's application for a cancer machine proved to be somewhat hesitant on the part of Midland officials, who said they would wait for the final ruling from commissioners later today before making a comment on the situation.

Hearing officer Kevin Reed's recommendation was passed to the three-member board of commissioners Tuesday afternoon for review. Reed recommended denial of a certificate of need application from Odessa's Medical Center Hospital for a 6 Million Electron Volt linear accelerator as replacement for its current Cobalt-80 radiation machine.

"Certainly the hearing officer's recommendation is in line with the points that we tried to make so we have to be satisfied with the recommendation as we understand it to be," said Ray Branson, president of Midland Memorial Hospital, Wednesday. "We've not received the official recommendations, but as we understand them, they are very consistent with the testimony given on behalf of Midland Memorial Hospital."

In substantiating his decision, Reed pointed to adverse financial effects on the Allison Permian Basin Cancer Therapy Center, a lower-than-necessary projected population figure to support two 6 MEVs in the area and the general sufficiency of the existing Cobalt machine.

"We're tickled to death with the final recommendation from the hearing officer, but it's too early to count something ahead of time," said Mickey Cappadonna, MMH trustee and president of the Allison Center Advisory Committee. "We're very well pleased with the preliminary report and we certainly hope the commission will agree with those facts. Those are certainly the facts brought out in Midland's testimony in Austin."

In the three-day hearing on the application in April at the THFC in Austin, several physicians, hospital employees, board members and laymen from both Odessa and Midland testified on the effects of a second 6 MEV linear accelerator in the 17-county Health Systems Agency-12, in which both Odessa and Midland are located.

"Certainly any comment should be withheld before the decision by the Texas Health Facilities Commission makes their decision," said Dr. A. Lee Schlichtemeier, medical director of the Allison Center. "I have heard that he (Reed) has made that decision, but basically I am just responding to your questions."

Schlichtemeier said he had not seen an official statement from Reed with his specified reasoning. "You have to have those things before you can give an opinion."

The commissioners were expected to convene at 10 a.m. today to make the final decision on the application.

Rioting again marks IRA death

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The death of IRA hunger striker Raymond McCreesh early today sparked a new round of firebombings, hijackings and street skirmishes in Roman Catholic west Belfast.

McCreesh succumbed on the 61st day of his fast, becoming the third imprisoned Irish Republican Army guerrilla to starve himself to death this month in a campaign for political prisoner status.

Women banged dustbin lids and blew whistles — the signal used to warn their menfolk of army raids — to spread the news of McCreesh's death in the early morning darkness, as they had after the deaths of Bobby Sands on May 5 and Francis Hughes on May 12. Other women huddled in small groups reciting the rosary.

More than 300 rioters besieged the heavily fortified police-army base in the New Barnsley quarter, police said. At least 50 gasoline bombs were lobbed at the base, while troops fired fusillades of plastic bullets at the attackers.

Reports from the turbulent New Lodge district said a young girl was badly injured by a police plastic bullet, but there was no immediate word of other casualties.

Several thousand troops in armored vehicles and police officers in bullet-proof vests sealed off much of west Belfast, keeping the violence from spreading into Protestant neighborhoods.

Mobs of young Catholics, many of them masked, hijacked more than a dozen cars and trucks.

Mideast mission 'buying time'

JERUSALEM (AP) — U.S. envoy Philip C. Habib met today with Israeli opposition leader Shimon Peres, who said Habib's shuttle diplomacy has not found a solution to the Syrian-Israeli missile crisis, but has won precious time.

Habib's mission has taken him to Syria, Lebanon, and as far afield as Saudi Arabia, in a two-week-old attempt to defuse the powder keg threatening to plunge the region into war.

"My impression is that we have gained time," Labor Party leader Peres said after a breakfast session with Habib. "There is not yet a real solution to the problem, and I think we have to consider it still a very serious situation."

Despite Syrian claims that Israel is readying an attack on its Soviet-made anti-aircraft missile batteries in Lebanon, Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin said Wednesday negotiations will continue "as long as there is a spark of hope."

Peres, who hopes to oust Begin in national elections June 30, was critical of the prime minister's strident rhetoric when the missile crisis first blossomed, but then pledged to hold his tongue in the interest of an image of national unity.

So far, there have been no public signs the Habib mission is yielding results beyond the agreement of all sides to continue talking.

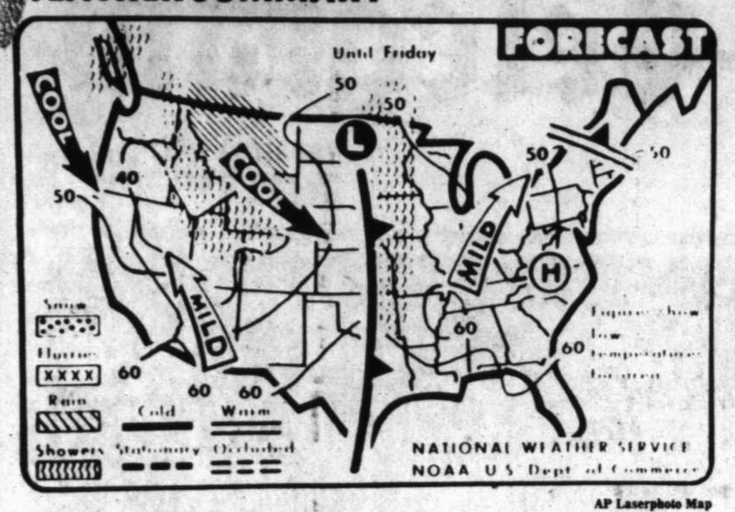

In Washington, White House spokesman Larry Speakes, asked about the Habib mission, said, "We're at a very delicate point at this time."

Various sources say Habib had proposed a four-point plan under which Syria would gradually withdraw its missiles from eastern Lebanon in exchange for limitation of Israeli overflights.

Syria moved the missiles into Lebanon on April 29, a day after Israel shot down two Syrian helicopter gunship. Israel said they were attacking its Christian militia allies, in an escalation of the ground war.

Tax board looking for 'hired hand'

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

While the Midland County Tax Appraisal Board is considering bringing in a "hired-gun" to handle legal matters and delinquent tax collections, the appraisal board also is searching for a home for Chief Appraiser Virgil Jones Jr., his 25 staffers and his $900,000 operating budget.

The six-member board on Monday interviewed four tax attorneys — from Austin to El Paso — who are seeking the position which will involve collecting delinquent taxes for the six taxing agencies in the county.

Repeatedly, Board Chairman Gil Thomson expressed concern over any law firm's possible tendency of "skimming the cream off the top" by working on the big accounts first and letting the small five-and-dime delinquent tax dollars go uncollected.

"Obviously," Thomson told Midland tax attorney Jack Hart, "the inclination is to pick out the biggest, because it's no more work than the smallest."

The delinquent tax collection fee is set by law at 15 percent but is to go up to 20 percent next year.

The delinquent taxes last year amounted to $1.14 million for the city of Midland, Midland College, the Midland Memorial Hospital, and the Midland Independent School District, while taxes brought in amounted to $24.4 million.

Jones, as the city's tax assessor-collector, is reponsible for bringing in the revenue for those taxing districts.

Last year, delinquent taxes on the Midland County and the Greenwood ISD tax rolls amount to about $275,000. Last year, the county brought in about $3.4 million in tax revenue, and the Greenwood ISD, about $1 million.

Jones said his collection rates run about 99 percent. The county brings in about 97 percent of anticipated revenue before collection of delinquent taxes and "100 percent and above" after delinquent taxes are collected. That, Ms. Shuffield told the Reporter-Telegram, is based on figures on the tax rolls.

The tax board will reconvene at 9 a.m. June 10 on the second floor of the Midland County courthouse to continue discussion on whether to hire an in-house tax attorney and staff to bring in delinquent taxes or to contract with an outside firm to do the collection and other work, including title checking.

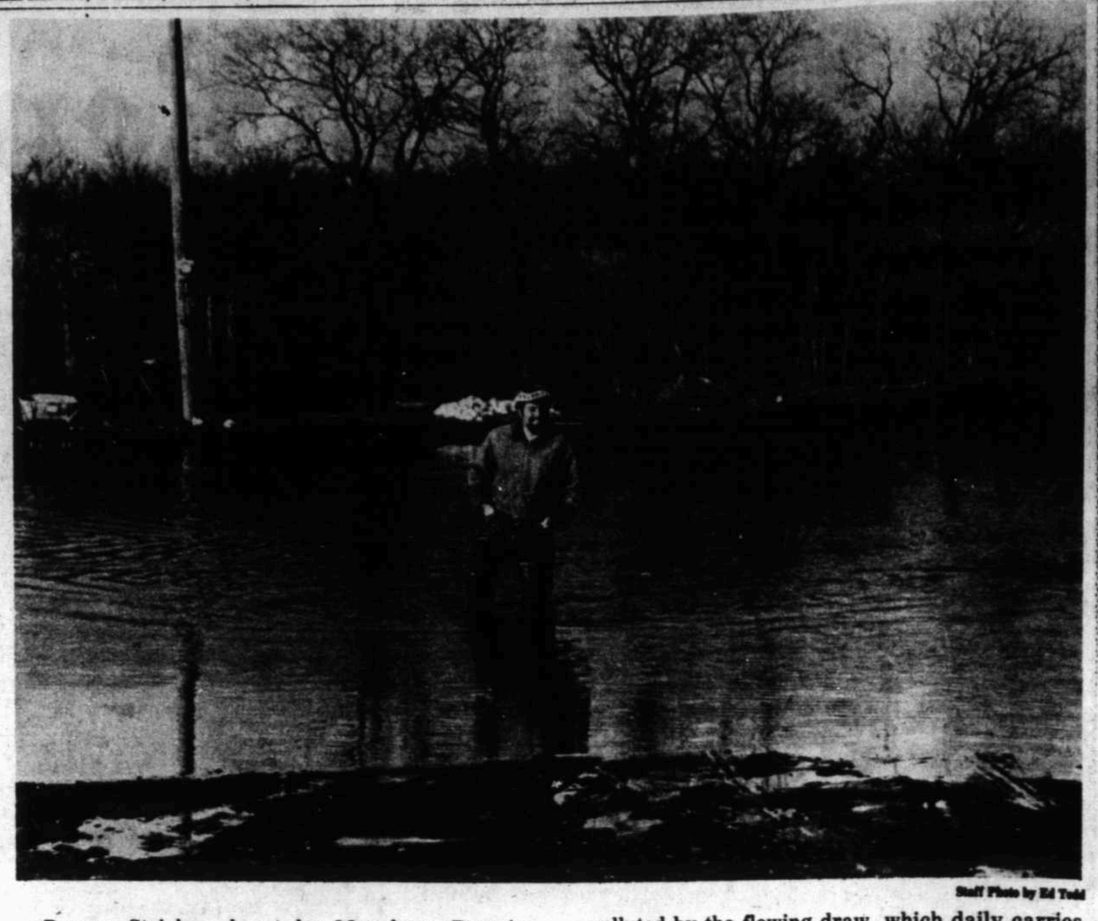

Meanwhile, the appraisal board is concerned about finding office space for Jones, who currently is set up in City Hall.

"I don't know how long the city will put up with us," said Thomson.

For years, the Midland County commissioners have been considering building a new Courthouse Annex, which will afford space for tax functions. But earlier this year, the commissioners appointed a blue-ribbon "ad hoc" committee to make recommendations on how best to provide more building space for county governmental-judiciary functions and tax work.

The blue-ribbon committee is still pondering proposals.

"You better abolish the committee and start building," suggested board member Joe Nuessle, who also is the city attorney.

Barney Stricker, beset by Monahans Draw's overflowing effluent and runoff, was up to his hip boots in January of this year on his flooded land, which adjoins the draw at Midkiff Road south of Midland. He's convinced his well water has been polluted by the flowing draw, which daily carries millions of gallon of treated sewage water from Odessa to the Colorado River and on to a lake from which Midland and Odessa get much of their drinking water.

State board drawn into debate

County commissioners' move, which he considers a legal action, and that a lawsuit has not been ruled out. "We've shown them the laboratory data," he said.

Specifically, Kerr said that nitrates and ammonia, potentially hazardous chemicals associated with treated sewage waters, are in underground water supplies along the draw.

"The draw is basically very porous," he said, and pollutants flowing along with the effluent discharge end up in the water table.

The concentration of nitrates exceeds that allowed for drinking water by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

"According to the EPA standards," Kerr said, "safe drinking water cannot contain more than 45 milligrams per liter of nitrates.

Samples taken from water wells along the draw have more than doubled EPA's don't-drink standards.

However, Kerr said he "wouldn't use the word 'hazardous' " on water containing the 45 mg per liter limits set by EPA.

"That doesn't mean you would drink it and expire on the spot," he said.

WATER TESTED also contained traces of heavy metals, including arsenic, lead and cadmium, and selenium.

"We don't have enough data to trace the heavy metals to Odessa," Kerr said.

Also, he said that preliminary reports do not connect the pollutants to petro-chemical plants in Odessa.

The attorney said that the basic 10-page report, which still is to be expanded, will be available for public perusal once it is submitted to the Texas Department of Water Resources and becomes public record.

Kerr was retained by the county commissioners after they voted last Dec. 23 to seek a court injunction to stop the dumping of Odessa's effluent into the draw and to file a lawsuit for damages. Instead of either route, the commissioners for now are seeking a rehearing on the dumping permit.

AN INDEPENDENT report made last August indicated that well water taken from Barney Stricker's place along the draw just south of Midland was not potable.

"It is apparent...that this water is not satisfactory for normal household use and consumption," reported Waylan C. Martin of Martin Water Laboratories Inc. of Monahans and Midland.

The water, which tested slightly alkaline, contained four times the maximum level of solids allowed by the Texas Department of Health; more than treble the amount of chloride permitted; more than five times the amount of sulfate permitted; and about one-eighth more magnesium than allowed.

But polluted drinking water, as in Stricker's case, hasn't been the only byproduct of the effluent-fed draw. Agricultural land, including cotton acreage and rangeland, has been flooded along the draw. Roads have been eroded by the draw's flow. Stricker's barn, which is just south of the draw and east of Midkiff Road, was flooded last year by the on-rush of effluent and rains.

Farmers such as Vernon Chandler, J.D. Crawford, Louie Koonce and Lee Bell have lost acreage to the draw's overflow.

Other tests made by Martin Water Laboratories detected toxic levels of phenol — carbolic acid — but not at alarming rates. The water soluble phenol, which is derived from the petroleum product benzene, is on EPA's hazardous waste list.

SILENTLY AND VOCALLY, Midland County commissioners have been dueling with Odessa over the draw even before the city of Odessa on Aug. 31, 1977, got a permit from the old Texas Water Quality Board (now, the Texas Department of Water Resources) to dump secondary-treated effluent into the draw.

The department permitted a discharge of up to 9.8 million gallons of effluent per day.

Commissioner Brown, who represented Midland County in protesting the 1977 permit, said then that he had sensed the board's decision was "already a cut and dry case. It appeared this had been discussed with the board privately (by Odessa officials) before the hearing."

That was almost four years ago. And Brown still feels that Midland was "shafted" by the department and Odessa.

Now, the commissioners will be awaiting for a rehearing and, should one be granted, will await the outcome before speculating on what to do if the department upholds the original permit and allows Odessa's sewage runoff — though treated — to pass through Midland County and eventually to be recycled into drinking and flushing water.

Meanwhile, the Odessa City Council may be wondering how to dispose of the discharge if the permit is withdrawn or, if the department insists, to make the water drinkable and clean.

Agreement near on 25 percent personal tax-cut plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, after sending signals that it was not "locked in concrete" on its multiyear tax cut, is nearing agreement on a compromise 25 percent cut in personal tax rates over three years, congressional sources say. The first reduction would come Oct. 1.

There was no immediate comment from the White House on the latest indication that it was softening its position on the size and shape of its proposed 30 percent, three-year tax cut. Nor was there any indication of how the proposal would do in Congress, where the original tax cut proposal has been called inflationary.

Four conservative Democrats who helped hand President Reagan a budget victory took their ideas for a tax cut to the White House, where they met Wednesday with administration officials.

Some of those familiar with the meeting said the president's advisers were prepared to accept a smaller tax reduction that would begin three months later than Reagan proposed. The delay, they said, was designed to hold down the federal deficit.

One of the congressman, Rep. Phil Gramm, D-Texas, termed the meeting "an effort to understand just what the White House will negotiate on and what is not negotiable."

Another participant, Rep. Kent Hance, D-Texas, said he was surprised at how little the president's advisers were willing to give at Wednesday's meeting. "If we get a compromise, they're not going to give much," Hance said.

Joining Hance and Gramm at the meeting, were Reps. G.V. Montgomery, D-Miss., and Charles Stenholm, D-Texas. After the session, the four met with Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, who is expected to play a major role in development of any compromise.

John Sherman, press secretary for the Ways and Means Committee, confirmed that the conservatives met with Rostenkowski. "They repeated the position they've held all along — that they want to work with the Ways and Means Committee on writing a tax bill."

Sources familiar with the White House meeting said the four congressmen agreed among themselves on a package of tax cuts and that the president's advisers seemed ready to pursue such a compromise. It was not clear whether all the elements of the package would be included in the main tax bill or some of them delayed until a second measure is considered.

Their proposed compromise would include:

—A 5 percent cut in personal tax rates on Oct. 1, and additional cuts of 10 percent on July 1, 1982, and July 1, 1983.

—A significant reduction in gift and estate taxes designed to improve the economic position of family farms and small businesses.

—A one-step reduction from 70 percent to 50 percent in the maximum tax rate on such investment income as interest and dividends. The administration had been proposing a three-step reduction.

—Increased tax incentives for individual savings.

—A business tax cut based on the faster deprecitation plan recommended by Reagan.

Earlier Wednesday, Murray Weidenbaum, chairman of Reagan's Council of Economic Advisers, indicated that any individual tax cuts might have to wait until next year, thus delaying the resulting loss of revenue and easing fears that the tax reduction would be inflationary.

"We are open-minded on the starting date and exact size of the cut," Weidenbaum said.

There has been continuing nervousness in the financial community about the government's ability to cut the federal deficit — and thus slow inflation — and congressional leaders in both parties have said they would not accept the full Reagan tax plan, which called for the first $54 billion reduction to take effect July 1.

Arrest may clear numerous burglaries

The arrest of two Odessa residents has cleared numerous burglaries in surrounding counties and is expected to clear at least four Midland County break-ins.

According to the Midland County Sheriff's Department, the suspects, a man and a woman, are being held under heavy bond in Stanton, where they were arrested by Martin and Ector county authorities about two weeks ago.

"An investigation revealed they are suspects in four burglaries here," said a Midland deputy this morning. "They may also be involved with several other burglaries here."

In addition to burglaries in Midland, Ector and Martin Counties, authorities believe the pair, who have not yet been formally charged in Midland County, may be responsible for break-ins in Andrews and Dawson Counties. Texas Rangers assisted in the case.

Police check robbery of trucker

Police today are looking into the complaint of an Odessa truck driver who said he was robbed at gunpoint after he stopped to check his trailer hitch about 8:30 a.m. Wednesday.

Elbert Underwood told officers he had pulled to the side of the road near the Department of Public Safety Headquarters on Holiday Hill Road when two men approached him and demanded money. Underwood said he handed over his wallet, which contained $150 in cash and assorted credit cards, and the men fled in a 1975 rust-colored Pontiac that was dirty and heavily damaged.

The men were described as Mexican, in their early 30s and wearing western shirts and blue jeans.

In other police activity during the past 24 hours, Walter Barrett of 3622 Shandon said a CB radio and five cassette tapes were taken from his vehicle while it was parked in the 1900 block of West Front Street.

And a Hagerstown, Md., woman told officers several pieces of jewelry were stolen from her room at a local motel May 2. Anna Lemmons said the jewelry was worth $600.

Bullock cancels request on land deal

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Comptroller Bob Bullock announced today he has canceled his request for an opinion from Attorney General Mark White regarding the proposed land swap between The University of Texas and the Anderson Ranch.

"I'm satisfied that the Legislature has worked out the kinks in the trade and the state can now get on with establishing the park," Bullock said in a statement released by his office.

The comptroller said the action "follows a change made in HCR 185," the resolution by the Legislature regarding the proposed trade.

That resolution was amended to include language to make possible payments in lieu of taxes to school districts in Presidio County "and that will effectively overcome the obstacles I had in mind," Bullock said.

The change calls for a trust agreement or tax-exempt non-profit corporation to make the payments.

"That eliminates the real problem I had with the earlier resolution about how this trade would be made," he said.

The proposed trade involves an acre-for-acre trade of 190,000 acres in Presidio County, owned by Robert O. Anderson, for university land in Hudspeth County. Anderson is chairman of the board for Atlantic Richfield Co.

After hearing testimony from three high-ranking state officials, the Senate Committee on Education gave a favorable recommendation Wednesday to the resolution.

Gov. Bill Clements, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong and UT Board of Regents Chairman James Powell all appeared in support of the plan.

Powell indicated his doubt over the authority of UT to accept the land and of the Parks and Wildlife Department to lease the area.

Presidio County Judge Charles Henderson expressed concern over the lost tax base for his county that the trade may incur, as state land is not subject to county property taxes.

Committee Chairman Pete Snelson of Midland pointed out that the resolution provides for the payment of taxes that may be lost to what Henderson called "probably the poorest county in the state."

Clements and Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong are to meet with Anderson today to look at the ranch land, and will fly over the ranch and over the university land proposed for the trade, the governor's office reports.

The office said no additional statements from Clements were expected Thursday. The governor is to continue on to Dallas, and has canceled his press conference which was set for Friday.

Scientists launch war on farm pests

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Armed with $9 million from the federal government, a battalion of scientists from 16 universities has pledged to eradicate the pests and diseases that destroy of millions of dollars of crops yearly.

The researchers, financed by the Environmental Protection Agency and the Agriculture Department, are searching for a combination of controls that would protect crops with minimum damage to the environment.

The consortium was formed amid rising concern over the world food crisis, the energy shortage and the use of new and exotic pesticides and fertilizers, said Dr. Ray Frisbie of Texas A&M University, the program's executive manager.

The group is directed by Dr. Perry Adkisson, deputy chancellor for agriculture of the Texas A&M University System.

Other universities participating in the program include Clemson, Louisiana State, Mississippi State, Pennsylvania State, Washington State, Cornell, Michigan State, North Carolina State, Southern Illinois University and the universities of California, Illinois, Wisconsin, Florida, Arkansas and Kentucky.

Pesticides, which virtually have replaced all other means of insect control, have resulted in the rise of pesticide-resistent bugs, disrupted natural biological controls, health hazards to humans and, in some cases, irreversible effects on wildlife and other organisms, Frisbie said.

"We want to develop a system that holds pest populations below crop damaging densities, is less energy dependent, economically feasible and causes the least damage to the environment," he said.

Much of the research focuses on four major crops — cotton, alfalfa, soybean and apple.

The five-year project was initiated in September 1979, followed by a year of academic research and another year of hands-on research at farms. It is now in its second year of crop production, Frisbie said.

In the High Plains region of Texas, a bollweevil suppression program has increased cotton production by about $20 million and decreased insecticide use by 8 to 20 pounds per acre, Frisbie said. In the Rolling Plains, uniform-delayed planting has reduced insecticide costs by about $5 million, he added.

Soybean prices below expectation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite the drought-reduced U.S. harvest last year, soybean prices have not risen nearly as much as many producers had expected.

One big reason is that Brazil and other producers of oilseeds have stepped up production and are supplying some of the demand that would have gone to U.S. producers. Another is that Western Europe, a big buyer, has not ordered as many U.S. soybeans as had been expected.

A report issued Wednesday by the Agriculture Department's Foreign Agricultural Service cited another reason why U.S. soybean producers — who rely heavily on foreign markets — are becoming a bit more concerned these days: palm oil, which is produced in several tropical countries, including Malaysia, the leader.

Soybeans are crushed or milled into two basic products — a high-protein meal and oil.

A few years ago, when palm oil could be imported more cheaply than what soybean oil cost, manufacturers of margarine, salad dressing and many other food products turned heavily to palm oil.

That triggered demands from U.S. producers for tight import restrictions and other measures. But palm oil imports peaked in 1975 and have declined since then. Recently, palm oil delivered to West Coast ports cost about 26 cents a pound, compared with 23 cents a pound for soybean oil in the Midwest.

However, on the international market palm oil is a growing item, according to department analysts.

"Although the oil palm is native to the African continent, the base for production has shifted to Asia and Oceania," the new report said. "Extensive new plantings have occurred in those areas, often by landholding government agencies and often with international financial assistance."

AGRICULTURE

Moreover, countries that import vegetable oil are showing "continued interest in palm oil," with India, Pakistan and the Soviet Union "marking substantial increases" in their imports, it said.

The soybean marketing situation is much more complex than its relationship to palm oil production, but in the competitive world market every factor is important and often bears upon the prices American farmers eventually get for their beans.

An earlier report on the supply and demand for soybeans and soybean products showed that U.S. oil exports in the marketing year that began last Oct. 1 are expected to total about 1.75 billion pounds, down 35 percent from 2.69 billion pounds in 1979-80.

Exports of whole soybeans, by comparison, are expected to decline 13 percent from last season.

The U.S. soybean oil stockpile carried over last Oct. 1 into this marketing year was 1.21 billion pounds, according to the report. By this Oct. 1, it is expected to be about 1.91 billion pounds.

Farmer calls ruling 'tyranny'

PUXICO, Mo. (AP) — Farmer Wayne Cryts says it's "tyranny." A judge has decided to sell soybeans that Cryts stored in a grain elevator that later went bankrupt.

Cryts says he'll try to avoid a confrontation.

"I'm trying to work things out so I won't have to take any physical action," he said Wednesday after a federal judge ordered the grain sold to pay debts owed by the bankrupt elevator owners.

"I'm doing everything I can to avoid it," he said.

Cryts and other farmers have been trying since last year to get back $5 million worth of grain they stored in the Ristine grain elevator in New Madrid, Mo., and three other Missouri elevators owned by James Brothers of Corning, Ark.

James Brothers declared bankruptcy last year, and a federal judge seized the grain until he could decide whether it should be returned to the farmers or sold to pay the company's debts.

Federal bankruptcy judge Charles Baker of Little Rock, Ark., ruled Tuesday that the grain should be sold and the proceeds placed in an interest-bearing account until its ownership is settled by the courts.

Four more Agriculture Department officials sworn in on Wednesday

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four more top-level jobs have been officially filled at the Agriculture Department.

Sworn in Wednesday were:

Frank W. Naylor Jr., undersecretary for rural development; John B. Crowell Jr., assistant secretary for natural resources and environment; Mary C. Jarratt, assistant secretary for food and consumer services; and A. James Barnes, general counsel.

Crowell was confirmed by the Senate earlier Wednesday, and the others were approved Tuesday.

Naylor, 42, a native of Mulvane, Kan., was senior vice president of the 11th Farm Credit District of Sacramento, Calif., before joining the Reagan administration.

He also served in the Agriculture Department and the Veterans Administration during the Nixon and Ford administrations.

The job pays $55,387 a year.

Crowell, 51, a native of Elizabeth, N.J., had been general counsel to the Louisiana-Pacific Corp. of Portland, Ore., since 1972. His salary is $52,750 a year.

Miss Jarratt, 38, a native of Clifton Forge, Va., has been a professional staff member of the House Agriculture Committee since 1975.

Murray's new leaf

William Murray, son of atheist leader Madalyn Murray O'Hair, appears to have undergone quite a transformation since he became a Christian. We're glad to see he apparently has really changed and that he is helping to counter some of his mother's ill-advised "accomplishments."

Those who might have questioned Murray's "religious awakening" should take note that last week he appeared before the Senate State Affairs Committee to testify in favor of a proposal to allow the state to decide whether students can pray in school.

And testify he did. Murray noted that the absence of prayer in public schools has done "great damage" to the United States. "Put prayer and Judeo-Christian ethics back in the schools," Murray urged. "Texas would no longer be subservient to the Supreme Court."

Quite a change for the man whose 1963 suit resulted in the banning of involuntary school prayer. But if Murray is successful in helping get passed Sen. Dee Travis's resolution asking Congress to call a convention to amend the U.S. Constitution in this regard, all Texans will owe him a vote of thanks.

It's been many a year since Murray's suit got the Creator booted from the public school classroom and all of us — Murray included — have had the chance to witness the effects. Chances are most Americans would be proud to roll back the calendar to the days of 1963, go through the motions again with school prayer still intact and see if what we came up with was any better than how it has evolved under the existing system.

In lieu of such a rollback, what we have to do is take it from here and see if we can pick up the pieces, so to speak. One good way is to support Travis's resolution. Apparently the state's legislators feel the urgency of the situation. The committee Murray testified before unanimously approved the proposal and sent it to the Senate floor where passage was expected.

It's really good to see Murray getting involved in attempting to remedy an old wrong. Christianity looks good on him.

Helms' divisive delay

The Senate at last has moved to confirm President Reagan's appointments to a variety of key posts in the State Department. The president can thank his own party, and specifically conservative Republican Sen. Jesse Helms of North Carolina, for the embarrassing delay.

Helms opposed many of the nominees on the ground that they didn't fit the Helms mold. And Mr. Reagan, apparently worried about offending his long-time supporter, did not push Helms. In fact, Mr. Reagan withheld some appointments until just recently.

That's too bad. Mr. Reagan long ago should have put Helms in his place. The State Department appointments are not the senator's to make. The authority belongs in the White House where the responsibility for American foreign policy lies.

Helms' delay has embarrassed Mr. Reagan both at home and overseas by creating the impression that the president cannot control his own party or conduct foreign policy with full confidence. Mr. Reagan and Secretary of State Alexander Haig need a complete staff of competent assistants — secure in their positions — if the administration is to formulate the firm and coherent policies that it claims have been missing in years past.

HEMISPHERE REPORT

Latin American chief execs don't always control troops

William Giandoni

Demands that President Reagan certify that the president of El Salvador, or any other Latin American chief executive, for that matter, is in control of his armed and security forces are an exercise in futility.

Probably the only Latin American head of state who comes close to exercising full control over his forces is the Cuban communist dictator, Fidel Castro, Moscow's puppet in Havana.

But, were Fidel to stop taking orders from Moscow, some Cuba watchers say, his younger brother, Raul, or some other Moscow-line communist would quickly replace him.

So, to condition U.S. aid to embattled El Salvador, or Argentina or Chile, for example, on the U.S. president's written word that whoever heads the government controls the armed forces is to ask the impossible.

Proof aplenty there is.

In El Salvador, for example, National Guard sergeants do not always obey orders given by army colonels.

More than a year ago, the day that the army started trying to impose the agrarian reform decree I was witness to an incident in which a National Guard sergeant and several lower ranking guardsmen bluffed a full colonel out of their office in a village not far from San Salvador.

The colonel, a career military man, had reprimanded them for allegedly having seized a Jeep rented by two Dutch correspondents. When they became insolent in their replies to the colonel's questions, he patted his hip, where he normally carried his automatic. It wasn't there. It was on the front seat of the sedan in which he had driven us to the guard post where he had put it to be more comfortable as he chauffeured us around.

The sergeant noted the colonel's dismay and motioned to one of his fellow guardsmen in the back of the room who moved our way trailing his automatic rifle.

Then the colonel announced that the matter of the missing Jeep would be better taken up in San Salvador at National Guard headquarters and we got back into our staff car and beat a hopefully dignified, hurried retreat.

On the way back to the capital, the colonel explained the obvious to us, that there were a number of undisciplined men in the National Guard who had little or no respect for authority.

That this is the case in El Salvador and in many other less-developed, less sophisticated countries, is no secret.

What is not generally recognized, though, is that similar situations can, and do, exist even in such highly civilized countries as Argentina.

Testimony on that specific point comes from no less an authority than Jacobo Timerman, the former publisher of the newspaper La Opinion of Buenos Aires.

In a book just published in the United States, "Prisoner without a name, cell without a number," a translation of his unpublished work "Preso sin nombre, Celda sin numero," written in Spanish, Timerman explains that some five months after his arrest on April 15, 1977, the Argentine military tribunal declared that there were no charges against him and that he was free. Yet he was kept under house arrest by order of the military junta until September 1979.

Then the Argentine Supreme Court ordered he be turned loose but "the generals, in special session, decided that despite the court order, I would not be released," Timerman wrote.

"The Supreme Court threatened to resign. The generals were prepared to arrest the court."

According to Timerman, it was only after "the president of Argentina, General (Jorge Rafael) Videla, declared that if the court resigned, he too would present his resignation," that he was freed. He was immediately deprived of his Argentine citizenship, and put on an airliner and deported to Israel.

With reference to El Salvador, the fact of the matter is the army, the national police, the treasury (hacienda) police, and others who bear arms in favor of the government now headed by President Duarte, with the acquiescence of the army, are not really under Duarte's command.

Nor were they really under the control of the chief of state before him, and those before that one, or, obviously, even of Gen. Carlos Humberto Romero, the questionably elected president who was ousted in October 1979 by his own armed forces, with at least the encouragement of the U.S. government of those days.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Business links muddy senator's motives

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — Profits and politics are old bedfellows, and it's not easy to discern the motives behind an elected official who acts in ways that benefit his friends and campaign contributors. It could be a matter of principle, a coincidence or a conflict of interest.

Such an official is freshman Sen. Robert Kasten, R-Wis., a 38-year-old member of the New Right who has been enthusiastically trying to clip the wings of the controversial Consumer Product Safety Commission. Without making a judgment on the senator's motives, I think the public is entitled to know about Kasten's links to corporations that have reason to want the commission weakened or eliminated.

For example, the commission has ordered installation of certain safety equipment on power mowers by next year. Frederick Stratton, president of Briggs and Stratton, a giant in the mower engine industry, is an old friend of the senator. Kasten's father sits on the company's board of directors.

Furthermore, Kasten received thousands of dollars in campaign contributions from executives and political action committees of Briggs and Stratton, John Deere, Toro and other manufacturers. Kasten insists he hasn't made up his mind on the safety equipment issue.

Another example: The product safety commission has proposed a ban on the use of formaldehyde in home insulation because the chemical is a suspected cancer-causing agent. Kasten received thousands of dollars from companies that produce either formaldehyde or dependent products. Five of the biggest contributed generously to Kasten's campaign: Georgia-Pacific Corp., $1,500; Tenneco, Inc., $3,500; Hercules, Inc., $500; Getty Oil, $1,000, and International Minerals and Chemical Corp., $1,000.

Wisconsin firms that have had products recalled by the product safety commission include John Deere, Briggs and Stratton, Ariens and the Kohler Corp. Kohler, whose executives gave Kasten $4,050 last year, was the subject of a commission order recalling 3,462 whirlpool tubs for safety reasons.

In all, Kasten received at least $36,200 from executives and PACs of corporations that would stand to benefit directly if the CPSC is killed or crippled.

There is another source of pressure that could be brought to bear on Kasten in his role as chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee's Consumer Subcommittee: Wisconsin Republican National Committeeman Ody Fish owns a company that manufactures cellulose insulation. At one point, his product not only flunked the commission's flammability tests, but 24,000 bags of the product were seized to prevent its continued sale.

As I noted earlier, it isn't easy to tell what motivates a politician's activities. And indeed, Kasten has made no secret of his hostility to the Consumer Product Safety Commission.

Footnote: Asked specifically about his father's presence on the board of a company that has had trouble with the commission, Kasten told my associate Tony Capaccio: "It doesn't make any difference at all. It won't affect my vote. The problem isn't in having the relationship. The problem occurs when I use my influence in some way to improperly influence legislation that would be to my benefit or the benefit of others."

WATCH ON WASTE: Despite years of scandals, the General Services Administration still plays fast and loose with the taxpayers' money. GSA auditors recently discovered that a deputy assistant administrator had been awarded a $5,000 bonus after being on the job for a grand total of 34 days.

When questioned, GSA officials pointed out that the man had worked at the agency several months in a different post — though not as a career appointee, for whom the Senior Executive Service Bonus Award Program was specifically designed.

In a recent confidential letter, the Office of Personnel Management noted that a performance award cannot be based, even in part, on the individual's work in a non-career post. That left only the 34 days in his career job as justification for the award. The OPM allowed the bonus to stand, while grumbling that it "can be presumed" that at least four months on the job was a more reasonable minimum for bonus consideration.

UNDER THE DOME: Two cut-rate barbers and a shop attendant in the Capitol have been trimmed from the Senate's budget at a savings of $65,000. But another barber shop in the Russell Senate Office Building has been spared because it is "cost effective."

— Sen. Howard Cannon, D-Nev., rode a stunning thoroughbred at the Las Vegas Frontier Parade this year. The horse, Helldorado, was purchased from the late Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., to help defray debts incurred by an unsuccessful presidential bid years ago.

— Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., is a self-proclaimed efficiency expert. Hates wasting time. So when he walks his dog, Honey, around Capitol Hill each morning, the senator shaves himself with a battery-operated shaver.

— Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., has been quietly fuming at the White House for its failure to send him the documents he asked for relating to the mass firing of the government's 16 inspectors general. In a weird sort of way, it's a bum rap. Reason? There simply weren't any documents to send. Incredibly, the firings were made without any review of individual qualifications.

— A loyal supporter of his home state's tobacco industry, Sen. Walter Huddleston, D-Ky., smokes cigars, cigarettes and a pipe.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, May 21st, the 141st day of 1981. There are 224 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On May 21, 1956, the world's first hydrogen bomb was exploded by the United States over Bikini Atoll in the Pacific Ocean.

On this date:

In 1542, Spanish explorer Hernando de Soto died while searching for gold along the Mississippi River.

In 1927, Charles A. Lindbergh reached Paris, completing the first solo airplane flight across Atlantic Ocean.

In 1944, Allied forces broke through the Hitler Line in Italy during World War II.

And in 1948, President Harry S. Truman sent Congress a special message proposing statehood for Alaska.

Ten years ago: an international mountain climbing expedition gave up its attempt to scale the unconquered southwestern face of Mount Everest.

Poland — and Solidarity — foretell end of 'Red Empire'

John Pinkerman

It may not come today, tomorrow, perhaps not even in this aging reporter's lifetime, but the Soviet empire is doomed to fall, just as all empires have fallen over the centuries.

The reason is Poland. The events at Gdansk, at Torun and at Warsaw have been compared by some observers to other satellite anti-Soviet uprisings. This observer, particularly after recent talks in Europe with communists and others, begs to disagree.

What is going on and has gone on in Poland poses far greater risk — and eventual certain defeat — for the Soviet Union than a few Germans throwing rocks at Soviet tanks in East Berlin in 1953. Poland's surge toward what might be called democratic socialism is of far greater significance than the futile riots by a brave few against the Russians in Budapest and Warsaw in 1956. And, what the Poles are saying and doing has far more staying power than what small group of Czechs did in unsuccessful revolt against the masters from Moscow in 1968.

In those previous bloodletting and relatively minor outbreaks to rid freedom-loving countries of the Soviets, the Western nations were disorganized and too feeble to take any kind of retaliatory action against the Kremlin — not even economic, cultural, political and diplomatic, let alone military.

Today, the West is stronger and it is generally unified, ready to punish master Red Leonid Brezhnev severely if and when (and such a move still is possible) the Red army moves into Poland.

There also is a definite and continuing weakening of the total Red machine insofar as it relates to satellite loyalty to Moscow. This started with the brave but dangerous move in 1948 by Yugoslavia's Marshal Josip Broz Tito. Tito "went it alone." He and his loose federation of six republics and two autonomous provinces not only have survived but they have prospered as compared to their communist neighbors, and their links to the West grow more firm every day.

Poland perhaps most of all, but even Hungary, East Germany and Czechoslovakia have watched Yugoslavia's relative prosperity grow with more than a little envy. So has Romania, and it has loosened its ties to Moscow in a slow but relentless way. Other satellites have watched Romania, too, and envied Bucharest's success in gradually rejecting Kremlin orders. Only Bulgaria stays firmly and proudly in the Soviet orbit.

But, there are reasons within Poland itself for saying that Russia's grip on its Warsaw Pact neighbors is doomed. Unlike the brief rebellions by little more than hundreds in East Germany, Hungary and Czechoslovakia, the Polish move toward independence involves millions. There are 10 million members in Solidarity alone, and this is an astonishing growth since the initial rebellion in Gdansk last August. There are 3 million Communist Party members who have no loyalty to Moscow, and while there is some duplication in membership, the two groups total at least a third of the entire Polish population. Poland's is no tiny one-time freedom movement.

Brezhnev, with such numbers involved, cannot silence the Poles simply by cutting off the head of one party or government leader. This Polish strength flows upward from the people and has more staying power than the traditional Soviet-style power structure that extends downward from the leadership.

Clearly, the momentum is with the Poles, despite any temporary setbacks that might be forced by the hard hand of Moscow. Such momentum is certain to be contagious, extending across satellite frontiers.

There are other minor signs contributing to the thesis that Moscow's total power days are numbered. The usually loyal Italian Communist Party has supported Poland against Brezhnev. So has the French Red organization.

As the drama of Poland continues to unfold, the advice Europeans have for President Reagan, Secretary of State Alexander Haig, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and other U.S. foreign policy experts is that they study, observe and plan more but talk less. Too frequent and conflicting statements frighten the Poles and other Europeans more than they reassure them.

U.S. mistakes notwithstanding, Moscow is on the run. The end of its total control over its neighbors is inevitable. And, thank the brave people of Poland for speeding the way to eventual freedom for many millions of Eastern Europeans.

Astronauts' wedding turns out to be more than routine

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — When Rhea Seddon's father filled out a newspaper form announcing his daughter's engagement to Robert Gibson, he expected it would be published in routine fashion.

It didn't occur to him that the engagement was front-page news.

But alert editors at The Tennessean, Nashville's morning newspaper, noticed that the occupation of both Miss Seddon and Gibson was the same — astronaut — and Edward Seddon's standard form became the source for a copyright news story.

"My father filled out the usual form and sent it in, along with a glossy print, thinking it would appear in the Nashville paper on Sunday along with all the other announcements," Miss Seddon explained in an interview at the Johnson Space Center. "He was kind of surprised when it appeared the next morning on the front page."

The two astronauts, who plan a May 30 wedding, will become the first U.S. astronauts to marry each other. One other astronaut couple married before joining the space program.

Miss Seddon said the engagement announcement was good news to Anna and Bill Fischer, who have been in the spotlight as the only husband-wife team among the astronauts.

"For the past year they have been known as Mr. and Mrs. Astronaut. I'm sure they feel it's nice to be passing the baton," she said.

Gibson and Miss Seddon will wed in a down-to-earth ceremony in her hometown of Murfreesboro, Tenn., followed by a honeymoon trip to Hawaii.

"I doubt we'll be the typical married couple," said Gibson. "I suspect I won't come home and complain about what a horrible day I had and she won't talk about the neighbor's dog."

He also said he will be in a better position than the average husband who has to miss a birthday or an anniversary because of his job — because she faces the same demands.

Neither Gibson nor Miss Seddon has made a space flight, and although the space shuttle program has been successfully launched, it's doubtful they'll fly a mission together anytime soon. But they say a husband-and-wife space trip is possible.

"I personally think she'll fly before I do," said Gibson, who has a 4-year-old daughter by a previous marriage. "But since she is a mission specialist and I am a pilot, the chances of our flying on the same mission will improve as the number of flights increases in the coming years."

Gibson, who as pilot would be the commander of such a flight, said taking his wife along on a space mission would create no special problems. "Just as long as she does what I tell her to do," he joked.

The romance between Gibson, 34, a Navy lieutenant commander from Westminster, Calif., and Miss Seddon, 33, a Berkeley-educated physician, blossomed in the cockpit of a jet fighter trainer.

Gibson, known as "Hoot" after the cowboy film actor, met Miss Seddon in January 1978. Both were among 35 candidates to undergo rigorous training at Johnson Space Center as space shuttle test pilots and mission specialists.

"I needed somebody to teach me to fly. I had a license to fly small planes, but that was nothing like flying a jet. He made me feel confident and taught me all about flying jets," Miss Seddon said. "We became friends, and later we became better friends."

In two years, Gibson proposed.

"I took her out for a very romantic dinner and then we went to watch the stars and the moonlight and I asked her to marry me," Gibson recalled. But he said if she was also caught up in the romance of it all, he couldn't tell from her casual reply.

"I told him, 'Sure,'" she said with a shrug.

News of the engagement didn't surprise their co-workers at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. But the official word did prompt some good-natured kidding, especially among Gibson's crew, who began calling him "Mr. Seddon."

"The other day I came back to the office and my secretary had left a message saying Brides magazine wanted an interview," Gibson said. "Not with Rhea — with me."

Vienna is planning to use subway heat for buildings

VIENNA (AP) — By year's end Vienna is slated to become the world's first city to heat buildings solely with the hot air from its subway system.

Vienna is scheduled to open this fall a 250-square-meter police precinct that officials say will get all its heat and hot water from a nearby tunnel and save the city eight tons of oil a year in the process.

"This is a unique project, and it may just be a touch of the future," says city engineer Hans Smetena, who is in charge of climate control for the city's three-year-old subway system.

If the experiment works well enough, the city will begin offering the subway systems as a secondary source of heating for private housing projects next year, municipal officials say. A 250-apartment housing project, scheduled to open next summer, could save its owners $7,900 a year through using subway-supplied supplementary heat, the engineers say.

At the current $1.60 per gallon price of heating oil here, the supplementary heating system would pay for itself in less than five years, according to municipal projections.

"The technology is there, it's just a matter of getting the attention of builders," Smetena says. "We'll have to prove to them that this is feasible for the future."

The system, Smetena explains, takes air from the warmest points in the subway tunnels and passes it through a compressor pump that further heats both the air and water flowing into the pump. The warm water is then passed in pipes and used as a heating source.

According to Smetena's calculations, the pumps can increase water temperatures enough for average private use.

"This subway heat is a source of energy that should please everyone," the engineer said. "It's cheap, renewable, locally supplied and safe for the environment."

City engineers say the heating project is not yet feasible elsewhere because in other cities temperatures in the subway tunnels vary too much with the seasons.

Vienna, with one of the newest subway systems among the world's major cities, keeps the temperature in its subway tunnels hovering around 65 degrees Fahrenheit with a complicated network of airshafts between tunnels, and leading from tunnels above ground.

Many of the shafts include large fans which keep the underground air circulating throughout the system.

Plans to use subway-supplied heat to warm two municipal swimming pools and two other housing projects in the near future are apparently already on the drawing boards.

The 14-mile Vienna subway system is scheduled to expand by 50 percent within the next few years, officials say. Construction for two extra subway lines is to start in 1982.

The compressor pumps, extra airshafts and other facilities needed for providing heat to homes will be built into the subway system as it expands during the next few years, engineers say.

Cholera reported

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — A sport fisherman who caught and cooked his own fish apparently prepared the seafood improperly and gave himself cholera, the first reported case of the disease in Texas since 1973, a state health department official said.

There is "no possibility" that the man contracted the disease from contaminated water or from commercially bought seafood, said state epidemiology director Dr. Barry Hafkin, adding that the area is in no apparent danger from an outbreak of the disease.

The 42-year-old victim lives in the town of China, about 10 miles west of Beaumont, and became ill May 6 with a high fever, diarrhea and loss of appetite, Hafkin said Wednesday.

When the man's condition worsened, he was taken to John Sealy Hospital in Galveston where tests confirmed he had cholera.

The last reported case of a Texan stricken with cholera was in 1973 at Port Lavaca while the most recent case nationwide was in Louisiana in 1978, said Hafkin. He added that there have been but five documented cases in the United States the past 10 years.

Britain, China both claim slum district

HONG KONG (AP) — An insignificant piece of no-man's land known for its filth, poverty and crime.

This is Hong Kong's Walled City — less than a quarter square mile of slum claimed both by Britain and China.

A haven for drug addicts, a stronghold of Mafia-style gangs and a refuge for those fleeing government control, it is a collection of ramshackle buildings.

Its 40,000 residents live in a world without running water, social services or even a sewage system.

Although claiming ownership, the colonial government refrains from administering it directly.

An attempt by the authorities to clean it up in 1963 fizzled out following a vehement "hands off" protest by Peking.

The loudest to join the protest were the area's pimps and gangs who controlled the brothels, the smoke-filled mahjong parlors and the opium divans.

The jurisdiction dispute stems from the fact that when the Chinese signed the Convention of Nanking in 1898 leasing a part of Hong Kong to Britain for 99 years, they excluded the Walled City from British rule — except so far as the colony's military security was concerned.

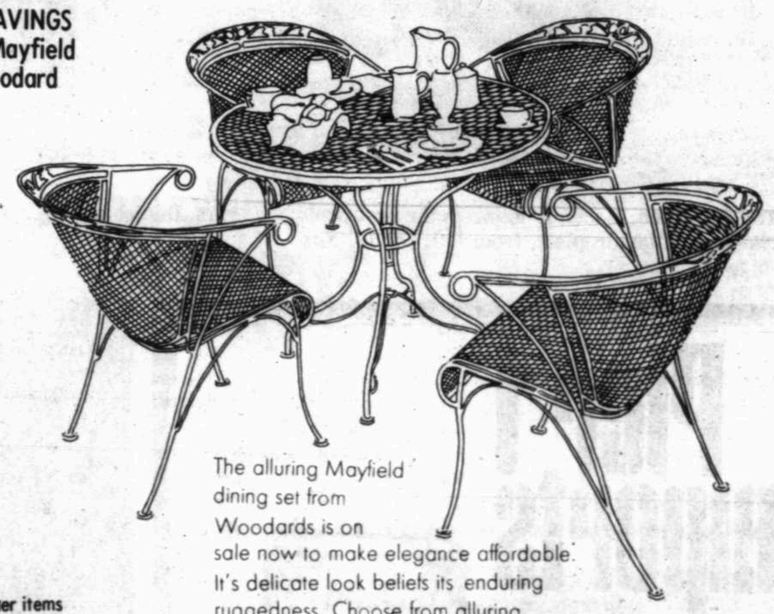

But one year later, Queen Victoria issued an order-in-council — never ratified by Peking — that declared such a system was inconsistent with the colony's military requirements and decreed the city as part of Hong Kong.

Nowadays, the opium divans are not visible to the visitor and the notorious sex-shows have disappeared.

The police make cursory patrols, though local leaders continue to administer their own laws.

ATHENS, Tenn. (AP) — As the ceremonial torch — lit by a kerosene camping lantern — heads for Moscow, Tenn., tobacco spitters and skillet throwers are warming up for the second annual Moscow Olympics.

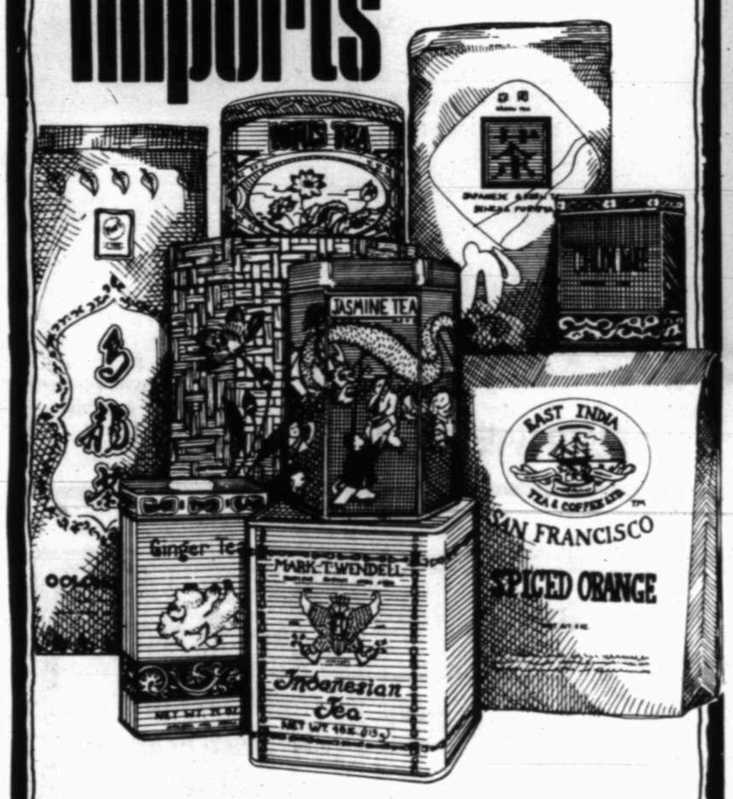

Tennessee's own version of the famed games got off the ground Monday when two high school girls began the first leg of a 350-mile relay to run a flaming torch from Athens to Moscow, a small West Tennessee town about 40 miles east of Memphis.

Ceremonies opened Monday when Dave Thompson, president of the Hiwassee Coon Hunters' Association, lit the flame. He did the honors because the official mascot of the Moscow Olympics is a raccoon.

Moscow residents began their games in 1980 as a spoof of the real thing after then-President Carter directed Americans to boycott the summer Olympics to protest the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

Diverse groups honor Polish union leader

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Solidarity union leader Lech Walesa has been elected "pipeman of the year" by the British Pipesmoker's Council and invited to Philadelphia to receive the city's Freedom Medal.

The Polish news agency on Wednesday quoted the British group as saying watching Walesa smoke a pipe "all smiling and talking about the latest events has a pronounced relaxing effect."

Walesa

The independent union leader was invited to Philadelphia, meanwhile, to receive an award of a different type.

A letter signed by Philadelphia Mayor William Green was hand-delivered to Walesa earlier this week by Edward Piszek, president of Mrs. Paul's Kitchens, who currently is visiting Poland.

In his letter to Walesa, Green said, "You would honor us by allowing us to recognize you for your courageous and selfless efforts, not only on behalf of your countrymen, but on behalf of all those who value freedom"

The mdal is the city's highest award and is presented, when deemed appropriate, at the city's Fourth of July ceremony at Independence Hall. It is conferred upon leaders whose efforts have helped expand ideals of freedom.

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The Weizman Institute of Science has sent a cable of congratulations to exiled Soviet scientist Andrei Sakharov, who is celebrating his 60th birthday.

Sakharov

Professor Michael Sela, president of Israel's leading scientific research institute, announced Wednesday that the cable was sent to the closed city of Gorki where Sakharov has been in forced exile since January 1980 for his dissident activities.

The cable expressed birthday congratulations and "affectionate admiration, not only for your immense scientific accomplishments, but also for your heroic stand for the greater good of mankind."

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's son ate a picnic lunch at 1,000 feet in a Goodyear blimp to celebrate his 23rd birthday.

Reagan

Sheila Patton Tate, the first lady's press secretary, said Nancy Reagan, her son, Ron, and his wife, Doria, took the blimp for a 45-minute ride around suburban Virginia.

"It's too bad we couldn't have stayed up longer so we could have flown over the Oval Office," Mrs. Tate quoted the first lady as saying.

The blimp, the America, is moored at Dulles Airport until June in honor of the centennial celebration of the Red Cross.

The president and his wife hosted a small dinner party in honor of their son Wednesday night.

The younger Reagan, a dancer with the Joffrey II ballet company, made his debut in the nation's capital at a benefit performance on Monday and has been visiting his parents at the White House since.

NEW YORK (AP) — Bill Moyers, who left CBS News three years ago complaining of limited time on the air, will return to the network Nov. 1 in a number of capacities that he says "will satisfy my schizophrenic personality."

Moyers, a former presidential press secretary and publisher of the Long Island newspaper Newsday, will take a position with assignments "ranging over the entire panorama of news actitives," Bill Leonard, president of the network's news division, said Wednesday.

Leonard said Moyers, creator of public TV's Emmy-winning "Bill Moyers' Journal," will be an editor, producer, broadcaster, "and above all, a reporter and analyst." And, said Leonard, he will develop a new show, perhaps similar to the "Journal."

NEW YORK (AP) — Historian Arthur Schlesinger Jr., president of the American Academy and Institute of Arts and Letters, has called on the academy to speak out against federal budget cuts.

Schlesinger issued his call Wednesday at the academy's annual awards ceremony, at which Russian-born artist Raphael Soyer and writer-critic Malcolm Cowley, former literary editor of The New Republic, received the group's highest award, the Gold Medal.

Other award winners were producer Joseph Papp and actor James Earl Jones.

Schlesinger warned academy members that federal budget cuts and inflation are "driving cultural organizations to the wall," while "blue-nosed busybodies invade libraries and schools in search of writings that they convict of the crime of secular humanism."

Love 22 on trial — a day early

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A man so enamored with the number 22 that he changed his name to Love 22 was going on trial today — the day before May 22, as he would put it — on charges of violating federal law by selling $22 bills the government says look too real to be funny.

Love 22, formerly known as Lawrence E. Wagner, is charged in U.S. District Court with circulating a handbill or advertisement in the likeness of a federal reserve note.

The trial is scheduled before Magistrate Ipgard Johannesen, whose office phone number happens to begin with the three numbers 589, which happen to add up to 22. Love 22 will be represented by public defender Jack Mulvehill, who also has an office phone number that starts with 589.

Love 22 claims to be 44 years old — that's twice 22 — and said he changed his name years ago after giving up an advertising career. Since then, he has ambled around the country in an old school bus converted into a mobile home.

The only address given by Love 22 is that of his "Love 22 for Pres." office at P.O. Box 4585 — it adds up to 22 — in Key West, Fla.

He wears a full beard, a pigtail and usually a dingy Uncle Sam suit. He was arrested by Treasury agents after this year's Mardi Gras celebration in February for doing what he said he normally does for a living — selling $22 bills at five for a $1, all the while extolling the mystic values of the number 22.

Love 22's face beams from the front of his $22 notes, and the back is a montage of clippings of bills of various denominations.

There is, of course, no such thing as a U.S. $22 bill, and he often wonders aloud how the government can accuse him of counterfeiting a note that doesn't exist.

Prosecutors and Love 22's public defender have refused to comment on what prompted the federal agents to arrest him.

Amazingly, every now and then, one of the $22 bills is apparently accepted as real.

Told at Love 22's March arraignment that someone recently spent a $22 bill in Reno, Nev., and got $21 change, Assistant U.S. Attorney Pat Deveney shook his head in amazement.

In anticipation of his New Orleans trial, Love 22 mailed out a flyer containing 22 "22-isms," including some local ones. A sampling:

—The streetcar named Desire, a New Orleans landmark that no longer operates, has the number 22 on it.

—New Orleans Athletic Club (22 letters) is located at 222 N. Rampart.

Contestant wants back in pageant

NEW YORK (AP) — Miss New York State, ejected from the Miss USA pageant for padding her bathing suit top, was going to court today in a last-ditch effort to get back into tonight's contest.

Deborah Ann Fountain arrived in New York Wednesday night and charged at an airport press conference that "at least five" contestants have enlarged their breasts with silicone transplants and as many as 20 others also used padding.

Miss Fountain said she would tape two talk shows before returning to Biloxi, Miss., for tonight's pageant, which will be televised nationally beginning at 9 p.m. EDT on CBS.

After Miss Fountain stepped off a plane at LaGuardia Airport, her red, white and blue pageant sash draped over her shoulder, attorney Gerald Posner said he would file a petition in court asking that his client be reinstated.

"As far as I'm concerned, this pageant has been poisoned," he said.

The court papers are to name Kayser-Roth Corp., Miss Universe Inc., sponsors of the pageant, and Harold Glasser, pageant president, Posner said.

Miss Fountain, who is from The Bronx, was disqualified Tuesday after pageant officials said she broke a promise not to discuss charges that she used foam rubber padding in the top of her swimsuit during competition.

The Daily News reported that Miss Fountain said the official "pulled me into a ladies' room and pulled down my swimsuit."

GM asking owners of 1980, 1981 models to check out rear seat belts

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. is asking about 56,000 owners of some of its 1980 and 1981 cars to check for a possible problem with rear seat belts, the automaker said Wednesday.

The problem could cause seat belt retractors to slip from a first lock position to a second lock position. The belts would then slacken and fail to restrain passengers as required by federal safety standards, GM spokesman Harold Jackson said.

The problem was discovered during a factory inspection and there have been no reports of injuries due to the faulty retractors, Jackson said.

GM said it will send letters to owners of some 1980 Monzas and Sunbirds, 1980 and 1981 Chevettes and 1981 Camaros and Firebirds, asking them to check their rear seat belts.

Inspection instructions will be included, or the owners may take their cars to GM dealers, who will perform the inspection at no charge.

The automaker said it will replace any defective seat belt retractors without charge.

Jackson said the inspection notice affects 56,000 people, but GM believes no more than 50 cars received the faulty belt retractors.

Mitterrand promises changes

AP Laserphoto

Former French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing, left, shakes hands as he greets his successor President Francois Mitterrand today on the steps of the Elysee Palace.

By PAUL TREUTHARDT
Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) — Socialist Francois Mitterrand, promising drastic economic changes but continuity in foreign affairs, took office today for a seven-year term as president of France.

He immediately named a premier for his transition government, Pierre Mauroy, 52, socialist leader of northern France and chief spokesman of Mitterand's presidential campaign. Government officials said Mitterrand would dissolve Parliament on Friday morning, and the composition of Mauroy's government would be announced later that day.

Mauroy's government is expected to take some immediate steps to improve the minimum wage and defend the French franc against speculation.

ITS MAIN TASK, however, will be to prepare for legislative elections in June. Mitterrand hopes the elections will overturn the conservative majority in the 491-seat National Assembly in favor of the leftist backing he needs to govern effectively.

Standing before a crowd of political and religious dignitaries in the ornate 18th century Elysee presidential palace, Mitterrand accepted the gold sash of the Grand Master of the Legion of Honor — symbol of the French presidency — from army Gen. Andre Biard.

Gen. Alain de Boissieu, son-in-law of the late president Charles de Gaulle, had resigned his post as chancellor of the Legion rather than hand the sash to de Gaulle's longtime political foe.

AS THE NEW president began his first speech in office, a 21-gun salute boomed from the Tuileries Garden near the Louvre museum.

He paid tribute to the forgotten people — "millions of French men and women, the yeast of our people, who over two centuries, in war and peace, by labor and blood, have fashioned the history of France without having access to it, other than through brief and glorious fractures of our society.

"In today's world, what greater duty could there be for our nation than to achieve the new alliance of socialism and freedom, what greater ambition than to offer it to tomorrow's world."

In foreign policy, the new president promised "a just and united France, which intends to live in peace with all, (which) can light the footsteps of humanity."

"France will say with force that there cannot be a real international community while two-thirds of the planet continues exchanging their men and their assets against hunger and scorn."

AFTERWARD Mitterrand shook hands with some of the 500 guests. Pierre Mendes-France, the Socialist premier under whom Mitterrand served in the 1950s as Minister of the Interior, could not hold back tears as he talked with the new president.

Outside the walled palace, hundreds of spectators crowded the narrow Rue de Faubourg St. Honore chanting, "Mitterand! Mitterand!"

Mitterrand, 64, the nation's fourth popularly elected president, breaks a tradition of center-right government begun when Charles de Gaulle established the Fifth Republic in 1958.

The transfer of power from Valery Giscard d'Estaing, defeated May 10 in Mitterrand's third bid for the presidency, was punctuated by a day of ceremonies spanning the French capital from the elegant tree-lined Champs Elysee to the ancient Latin Quarter on the Left Bank of the Seine River, with special emphasis on Socialist causes and heroes.

MITTERRAND'S first duty as president was to lay a wreath on the tomb of France's unknown soldier under the Arc de Triomphe. Other rituals ranged from the symbolism of the sash and medal of the national order of the French Legion of Honor — founded by Napoleon Bonaparte in 1802 — to the modern day reality of the code for unleashing France's nuclear weapons.

At the end of the day the new president planned to walk to the Pantheon in the Latin Quarter to meet Nobel Prize winners, authors from arund the worldand the widows of Chilean President Salvador Allende and Chilean author Pablo Neruda. Also at the Pantheon — where French heroes are buried — Mitterrand was to lay wreaths on the tombs of French Socialist pioneer Jean Jaures and World War II resistance leader Jean Moulin.

Observers were watching to see what concessions he must make to win support from the Communists, who are holding out for ministerial posts in Mitterrand's Cabinet.

THE NEW PRESIDENT has pledged to create new government jobs, nationalize large chunks of industry and the remaining private banks, freeze dividends and impose higher corporate taxes.

Measles hits vaccinated teens

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — National experts have been asked to find out why dozens of area residents fell victim to a measles outbreak, even though they were vaccinated against the virus after 1968.

Scientists from the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta were asked to study the discovery that almost half of El Paso's recent measles victims had been immunized with a post-1968 vaccine that should have been effective, a local health official said Wednesday.

Millions to feel Social Security cuts

ASHINGTON (AP) — The House Select Com-tee on Aging is providing the first estimates of the act of each of President Reagan's proposed ial Security cuts, which are designed to reduce efits by more than $81 billion by 1986.

ere are the panel's estimates:

-Altering the primary benefits formula: Lower efits for 18.1 million persons now age 56 through who retire over the next five years by an average 10 percent; affect 3.5 million in 1982. All future irees would lose 4 percent to 13 percent of benefits, ving Social Security $18 billion a year over the next years.

—Lowering early retirement benefits: Reduces m 80 percent to 55 percent the amount people can t at age 62; affects 1.4 million workers and spouses 1982 and 7 million by 1986. They would lose on erage one-third of their benefits, saving Social ucirty $600 million in 1982, $17.6 billion by 1986 and 1.5 billion a year over the long term.

—Computing benefits on work history up to age 65 stead of 62: This further penalizes early retirees, ves $1.3 billion by 1986 and eventually would lower l retirees' benefits by 4 percent to 10 percent for A vings of $5.1 billion a year over 75 years.

—Putting a cap on how much retirees' and survi-ors' families can draw: A total od 3.75 million ersons would have spouse benefits reduced or liminated, particularly among those drawing low enefits. About 270,000 would have their family enefits cut by up to one-third; almost 280,000 would lose spouse or children's benefits entirely. Saves $200 million in fiscal 1982, $2.9 billion by 1986 and $1.4 billion annually over the long term.

—Delaying the July 1982 cost-of-living increase to October 1982: Costs nearly 36 million beneficiaries an average $92.70 apiece next year. Saves Social Security $3.3 billion in 1982, $6.3 billion by 1986 and $1.9 billion a year over the long term.

—Eliminate "windfall" benefits for those who draw pensions in addition to Social Security. Number uncertain, but saves $600 million by 1986 and $1.3 billion a year over the long run.

—Eliminating children's benefits for early retirees: Affects 16,500 children next year. Saves $100 million in 1982, $1.9 billion by 1986 and an annual $2.6 billion over the long term.

—Require workers to have worked 7½ years in past 10 years, and six of the last 13 quarters to be insured against disability: Deprives 149,000, or 37 percent, of workers who would have drawn disability in 1982 of the benefits and costs some 1.26 million workers benefits over the next five years; saves $420 million in 1982 and $13.3 billion by 1986. This would reduce the program's outlays over 75 years by 17 percent.

—Require disability to be determined by medical conditions only, excluding a person's age, education and job history: About 35 percent of those age 60 to 65 would lose eligibility, or 31,500 in 1982 and 145,000 by 1986; saves $7.7 billion by 1986.

—Require a prognosis of 24 months, instead of 12 months, disability: Six percent of disabled workers, or 23,340, would lose benefits next year, 115,000 by 1986; saves $2.8 billion by 1986, eventually about $900 million a year.

—Make disabled workers wait six months instead of five for benefits: Affects 390,000 new beneficiaries a year, cutting benefits in 1982 by $482 for workers, $134 for spouses and $138 for children; saves $200 million in 1982, $1.4 million in 1982, $1.4 billion by 1986 and ultimately $1.8 billion a year.

—Establish a "megacap" on disability benefits for those who also get other pensions: Affects 10,000 new beneficiaries a year; saves $50 million in 1982, $500 million by 1986.

—Phasing out the retirement test: Would cost Social Security $6.5 billion by 1986 in increased benefits for the elderly who keep working; helps 871,000 people over 65, two-thirds of whom have earnings above $17,500; costs $600 million in 1982, $6.5 billion by 1986 and $1.8 billion a year over the long term.

—Taxing the first six months of sick pay. Affects workers and employers, not beneficiaries; brings in $400 million in 1982, $2.6 billion by 1986.

—Eliminating college students' benefits: Affects 700,000 recipients who would have benefits cut by 25 percent and eventually phased out, with some 500,000 who would have drawn benefits in 1982 getting none; saves $1 billion in 1982, $9.4 billion by 1986 and $1 billion a year in the long run.

—Eliminating the $122-a-month minimum benefit: 2 million persons on the rolls would have their benefits reduced outright; 1.1 million others would lose some Social Security, but might get more Supplemental Security Income, and about 100,000 new beneficiaries also would lose benefits in 1982; saves $1.3 billion in 1982, $7.2 billion by 1986, not counting offsetting higher welfare costs. Long-run savings are small.

—Eliminate the $255 lump sum death benefit: Affects survivors of 600,000 people who will die in 1982; saves $150 million in 1982, nearly $1 billion by 1986.

Presbyterians elect top leaders

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — A scrappy male pastor and a gracious church lay woman are the new top officers of America's divided but unity-seeking Presbyterians.

The Rev. Robert M. Davidson of New York City was elected Wednesday night as moderator of the larger, mostly northern United Presbyterian Church while Dorothy Barnard of St. Louis won that office in the mostly southern Presbyterian Church in the U.S.

With governing assemblies of both denominations meeting simultaneously here, they joined in a moving opening worship service in which platoons of lay ministers fanned out to distribute Holy Communion to more than 3,000 people.

"Almighty God ... we pray that we may be one in your love," imploredthe mixed Presbyterian family of northerners and southerners, their denominations separate since the Civil War.

"Jesus shall reign where'er the sun does its successive journeys run," they sang.

Afterward, in late-night separate business sessions, Mrs. Barnard was elected chief presiding officer of the southern body on a first ballot, 205 to 168, over the Rev. A.A. Markley III of Fayetteville, N.C.

Affirming support for church reunion and a conciliatory style in dealing with differences, she told applauding delegates, "I ask your prayers as well as your confidence."

Davidson, in a three-way race, won on a third ballot in his church, beating the runner-up, the Rev. Margaret E. Towner of Milwaukee, 347 to 236, while the Rev. Keith R. Shinaman of Marcellus, N.Y., fell far behind at the finish.

Mrs. Barnard, 56, wife of the head of a St. Louis shoe company and a widely active lay woman, succeeds the Rev. David L. Stitt of Houston. She is the second woman in the southern church's history to hold the top office.

Diversity "is something to celebrate," she said, urging greater ministry by the laity, a function she has served widely in this country and abroad, teaching, writing Biblical training manuals, serving in various church offices.

With greater theological competence and zest, the laity "could turn this world upside down," she said.

Davidson, 52, the skillfully articulate pastor of West-Park Presbyterian Church in New York City, took a crisply forthright stance in pre-election questioning over various issues agitating the mostly northern church.

He said he disagreed with its 1979 decision refusing ordination to homosexuals, adding that he would speak out whenever he held dissenting opinions.

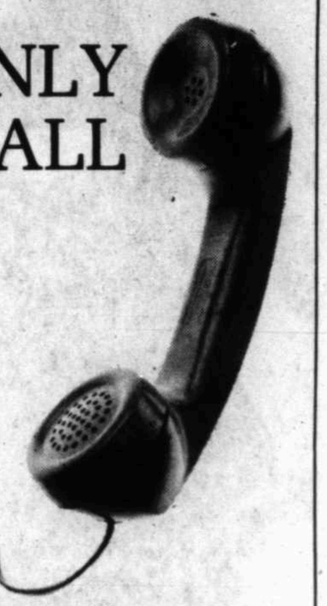

CRMWD jurisdiction is expanded

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Senate Committee on Natural Resources gave a favorable recommendation Wednesday afternoon to legislation expanding the jurisdiction of the Colorado River Municipal Water District.

House Bill 1801, carried in the Senate by Sen. E.L. Short of Tahoka, would expand the district's territory to include all of the land within the city limits of Big Spring, Odessa and Snyder.

Pope takes a few steps; Suspect still a mystery

By CLARA HEMPHILL
Associated Press Writer

ROME (AP) — Pope John Paul II's condition has "noticeably improved" over the past 24-hours, his doctors said today, after the pontiff began eating soft foods and took a few steps around his hospital room.

Meanwhile, investigators questioning Mehmet Ali Agca, the man accused of shooting the pontiff, say they are more baffled than ever.

"The further we go, the more mysterious he gets," said a police official who asked not to be identified. "It's possible he did it for the reasons he said, by himself. It's also possible someone paid him to do it."

"In the last 24 hours the clinical picture of the Holy Father has noticeably improved, confirming the substantial progressive stabilization of his general condition," said the medical bulletin on the pope's health issued by his doctors today.

It said the pontiff has been started on a semi-solid died and reported his temperature at 99.3 degrees Fahrenheit, less than one degree over the normal reading of 98.6.

For lunch Wednesday, the pope ate a thin soup and a mashed boiled pear, one of his doctors, Francesco Crucitti, told reporters. A dozen of the pope's 26 stitches were removed, he added.

John Paul's prognosis is still "guarded," which means doctors are not ready to predict a full recovery.

Dr. Luigi Candia, director of Gemelli Policlinico, the hospital treating the pope, said the "guarded" prognosis might be lifted today but cautioned, "It is not something you can make a firm prediction on."

Wednesday's medical bulletin from the hospital said the pope was continuing to recover normally.

"Yesterday morning and afternoon the Holy Father took a few steps and he rested in an armchair for a short time," the bulletin said.

One of the bullets that hit the pope tore through his intestines and doctors performed a temporary colostomy. Another operation will be needed to return the intestine to its normal place, the doctors say.

Doctors also had encouraging news about one of the two American women injured with the pope in the spray of bullets May 13 in St. Peter's Square, and said the other woman was running a slight temperature.

Ann Odre, 58, of Buffalo, N.Y., wounded in the chest in the attack, remains in "guarded" condition because of the fever, Dr. Federico Meneghini said. She is being fed intravenously but doctors hope she can return to a normal diet within the next 24 to 30 hours.

Rose Hall, 21, a resident of Wuerzenburg, West Germany, who was shot in the left elbow, will be released from the Santo Spirito hospital over the weekend, her chief Italian physician, Dr. Federico Meneghini, said. "She's itching to go back home," the doctor added.

Prosecutors interrogating Agca, charged with attempted murder of the pope and the two women, say they are still unable to fix the motive.

"He's not crazy, that's sure. He's not a schizophrenic. But all of his statements confuse us. We haven't been able to figure out who this man is," a police source said.

Turkish police believe Agca, who was convicted in absentia in April 1980 of murdering a journalist in Turkey, has links with various Moslem right-wing groups. They believe someone helped him escape from jail in November 1979 and helped him get the false passport he used to travel around Europe for 18 months before the papal shooting.

Sources said Agca told police, "I shot the pope because I consider him responsible for the reaction of the West against Islam and the head of the crusade that is being conducted against my faith." Agca claims he acted alone in shooting the pope, getting money for his travels by extortion, the sources report.

Police have been unable to track down any political contacts Agca might have had outside Turkey. They have confirmed he visited Tunisia, Spain and six cities in Italy and he says he traveled as well to Yugoslavia, Bulgaria, France, Switzerland, Germany and England.

Vienna police said they had established that the pistol that shot the pope was bought from an Austrian weapons dealer in April. It was not clear whether Agca himself bought it from the dealer.

Gunman sorry for women

ROME (AP) — Mehmet Ali Agca, the man charged with shooting Pope John Paul II, today said he was sorry two American women were wounded in the assassination attempt.

"I am sorry for the tourists," Agca said in Turkish, his native language, to a Turkish photographer as he was being transferred from Rome police headquarters to a prison 11 miles outside the city. He seemed eager to talk but authorities hustled him away.

Ma Bell begs for more

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Southwestern Bell asked the Texas Supreme Court on Wednesday to block a Public Utility Commission rate order lower than the increase Bell had already started charging.

The PUC order would allow Bell to raise rates by $114.3 million, about $38 million less than the rates Bell put into effect in November.

Bell had asked for a hike of $326 million in its original application in July 1980.

Wood grand jury concentrating on alleged payoff

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Federal grand jurors seeking to solve the murder of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. have delved into a purported payoff allegedly made in Corpus Christi or Brownsville in the month after the assassination.

Three witnesses who previously invoked their Fifth Amendment protection against self-incrimination testified under immunity Wednesday, and two said they were asked about a "payoff trip" allegedly made by the wife of convicted drug trafficker Jamail "Jimmy" Chagra.

Grand jurors planned to return today to hear Las Vegas gambler Bobby Hoff, who pleaded the Fifth Amendment during an April 29 appearance.

Edward Nichols, Chagra's brother-in-law, said he was asked if his sister, Elizabeth, who is Chagra's wife, "ever discussed any payoff she made to somebody."

Nichols said he was asked if he accompanied his sister to Corpus Christi or Brownsville in connectin with a "cash payment" and if he knew convicted contract killer Charles V. Harrelson; Harrelson's wife or her daughter.

He said he told the panel he did not know any members of the Harrelson family.

Grand jurors also asked Nichols if he knew anything about Woods' death.

"I gave them a big no, but I laughed first," said Nichols.

Las Vegas charter pilot Jimmy Walker, also testifying under immunity, said he was asked if he flew Mrs. Chagra to Corpus Christi or Brownsville in June 1979.

Walker, who has turned over his flight records to the panel, said he recalled no such flight and added, "I can't recall anything that was helpful to them." He said he also was interrogated about numerous charter flights of the Chagras over a five-year period.

Wood was slain on May 29, 1979, outside his San Antonio apartment and government attorneys have listed El Paso brothers Jimmy and Joe Chagra, Harrelson, Harrelson's wife, and his step-daughter as "targets" of a massive two-year secret investigation into the killing.

Wood, known as "Maximum John" for his stiff narcotics sentences, was scheduled to preside at Chagra's trial for drug-related continuing criminal enterprise.

Harrelson was identified in a police lineup as a man seen near Wood's apartment the morning he was killed, government sources said.

The third man granted immunity Wednesday was Guillermo "William" Cabrera, described as a longtime Chagra family friend who allegedly introduced Harrelson to businesswoman Virginia Farah last year in El Paso. Harrelson, using an alias, worked as a bodyguard for Mrs. Farah until he ws captured at Van Horn on Sept. 1, 1980.

Also appearing briefly Wednesday was Charles Joseph Chalin, 44, a Houston salesman who said he was an acquaintance of Harrelson. He told reporters he pleaded the Fifth Amendment and expected to be granted immunity on his return in June.

Mrs. Harrelson, 40, who pleaded the Fifth Amendment and marital privilege during a December appearance, arrived at the courthouse but she did not testify because of a government motion to disqualify Houston lawyer Don Ervin as her counsel.

Ervin said the sealed government motion claimed a "conflict of interest" in his representing all three members of the Harrelson family, but that he did not intend to withdraw as Mrs. Harrelson's lawyer.

Mrs. Jasper, 24, has been jailed in Uvalde on a contempt citation since she refused, on Ervin's advice, to answer the panel's questions on March 27. She was informed in open court of the alleged conflict of interest, but chose to keep Ervin as her attorney.

Mrs. Harrelson's scheduled grand jury appearance was delayed by agreement of Justice Department lawyers to give Ervin a chance to study the disqualification motion which he said "raises new issues." Ervin said he expected a hearing would be conducted on the motion within two weeks.

The thin, blonde Mrs. Harrelson said she likely would not testify if Ervin were disqualified.

"If he is disqualified, I would probably not testify at all because I can't think of anybody else I would want to represent me," she said.

Asked whether she would risk jail for contempt of court by refusing to testify, she replied, "if necessary, yes."

Jimmy Chagra is in a maximum security prison serving a 30-year no-parole sentence imposed after he was captured in Las Vegas in February 1980 after being a fugitive for six months.

Harrelson, 41, is held without bond at the Harris County Jail in Houston on state narcotics, weapons and gambling paraphernalia charges.

Conservatives force vote on abortion financing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Conservatives are forcing a vote on the emotional issue of federal financing of abortions for the first time since Republicans took control of the Senate in January.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., has proposed that only if a mother's life is endangered by the delivery of a child should tax dollars be used to pay for an abortion under the federal Medicaid program.

Under current restrictions, federal funds can be used only if a woman became pregnant through rape, incest or if her life would be endangered.

The amendment, set for a vote today as part of a $12.8 billion supplemental appropriations bill, is another in a series of anti-abortion proposals which conservatives hope will succeed in the Republican-dominated Senate.

Meanwhile, eight doctors and scientists attacked another anti-abortion bill during testimony Wednesday before a Senate Judiciary subcommittee.

The legislation, also sponsored by Helms, would define life as beginning at conception and would give a fetus full constitutional rights, thus effectively prohibiting abortions.

Dr. Lewis Thomas, chancellor of the Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center, said the question of when life begins "is not a scientific question and cannot be answered by scientists."

He said there are no criteria for accurately determining when life begins.

Similarly, Dr. Clifford Grobstein of the University of California at San Diego said the time when life begins "is not a precise date which could be written into law."

Dr. Mary Ellen Avery, a pediatrician from Harvard Medical School, said a fetus has no "viability" before the 24th or 26th week of pregnancy because before that time, the unborn child cannot survive outside the mother.

Dr. Avery and other specialists also said that if the proposed legislation became law, the growing practice of diagnosing major hereditary and congenital diseases and defects would probably be stopped.

Women who suspect that their unborn children may have major defects can now be tested, and if the test is positive, they can elect not to have the child.

"Women should have the option of knowing the risk of abnormalities in the fetus they bear," Dr. Avery said, "and they should also have the right to choose whether they wish to continue the pregnancy."

Sen. John East, R-N.C,, the subcommittee chairman, said the idea that doctors or scientists can set arbitrary times after conception but during pregnancy when life begins "is morally and ethically repulsive."

Dr. Avery replied, "I cannot accept the idea that every woman's pregnancy must be carried to term just because there was conception."

"Senator East," she said, "that is nonsense."

Dr. Avery and others who testified said they also believe that the anti-abortion legislation would prohibit certain kinds of birth control devices, including interurine devices, which block the fertilized egg from implanting on the wall of the uterus.

Convert plate scraper to fork

By AL CARRELL

Anyone who has a table saw should have a push stick. This is a tool that lets you move the work into the blade and through without getting your fingers near the fast moving blade and also prevents the blade from kicking back the work. There are all sorts of ways to make a push stick. Sometimes the work being cut off is very thin, and you will need to have something very skinny to safely get the work through the blade. E.R.N. came up with a good solution. He purchased a plastic plate scraper for use in the kitchen. He then cut a right angle notch into the end so the scraper-push stick holds the edge of most pieces of wood. And because the utensil is very thin, it works on thin cuts. The soft rubber-like end would also not be converted into a missile if the push stick should come in contact with the blade.

+ + +

Dear Al: Buying various lubricants in larger containers is a way to save money, but the small containers are more convenient. I have saved those small plastic limes that lime juice comes in and use them as oilers. It's easy to pry out the lid to fill the limes. Then I put that back in, and when capped I have a leak-proof, pocket-sized squeeze oiler. A tab of masking tape acts as a label to tell me what grade oil is in each lime. — W.C.A.

You can also save money buying the lime juice in a big bottle instead of in the little plastic squeeze containers.

+ + +

A SUPER HINT — Now is an excellent time to be sure that your automobile coolant, formerly known as antifreeze, is still going to see you through a hot summer if your car has air conditioning. Let me remind you that coolant apparently smells and tastes good to pets and children and can be fatal. If you drain the old coolant out, be sure to collect and dispose of it safely, and be sure to wipe up and clean away any drips.

DEAR ABBY

Husband buried in self-pity

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: You said, in defense of divorce, "I think it's more important to save people than marriages. And often, in an effort to save a marriage that isn't worth saving, people have destroyed themselves and/or each other."

I disagree. After 29 years and three grown (and left-home) children, my wife walked out. Her reason: "I want to do my own thing in my own way."

By your logic, Abby, she saved one person (herself) and ruined four (our three sons and me).

One son stood in our home and said, "I am the product of a broken home and I always will be." Then rivers of tears streamed down his face.

Need more be said? — M. IN OHIO

DEAR M.: Yes. Much more. It's difficult to understand how your wife could "ruin" a husband and three grown (and left-home) children by walking out after 29 years.

Every day thousands of people who are "left" by death and/or divorce manage to survive. It's not the end of the world. And if your son is going to blame whatever inadequacies he has or may have in the future on being "the product of a broken home," he will never be a man — no matter how tall he grows.

DEAR ABBY: After reading about the "genius" who found a system to beat the crap tables, I nearly died laughing.

The gambling establishments have special red carpets they roll out for "system" players.

The only ones who have the edge on the house are "blackjack counters," and once they are known, they are barred from playing blackjack.

Systems for craps are as good as systems for horses. There aren't any that work. Take it from one who knows. — I.S. (BEEN AROUND)

DEAR I.S.: As my father used to say, "If a man with money tells the casino owners in Vegas that he's figured out a way to beat the crap table, they'll send a plane for him."

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to the woman who has had it with baby sitters. I happen to be a 15 1/2-year-old baby sitter and I want her to know that not all sitters go through all the drawers, smoke pot, try on clothes, talk on the phone, entertain their friends and eat everything they get their hands on.

Here are a few of the things some baby sitters have to put up with:

Kids who won't mind.

Kids who scream and fight with their brothers and sisters.

Pets who make a mess on the rug.

Parents who go out and don't say where they are going or when they'll be back.

Parents who say they'll be back by midnight and don't get back until 2 a.m.

Adults who drive the sitter home and are in no condition to be driving. (They're drunk.)

People who don't pay the sitter and run bills for a couple of months. And by the way, I'm paid $1 an hour and I'm glad to get it.

Thanks for letting me tell our side of it. Sign this ... HAD IT WITH PARENTS

DEAR ABBY: I own my own business and I hire many high school students for part-time work. Abby, you cannot imagine how many parents call me and ask if I have a job for Ann or Tom!

If Ann and Tom want to work, I think they should do the asking. Having Mama or Dad ask for them doesn't say much for the child's initiative.

I feel it is important for young people to work and I give as many of them a break as I can, but I have made it a policy never to hire anyone whose mother or father calls and asks me to give the child a job. If a boy or girl is old enough to draw a salary, he or she is old enough to ask for a job.

I am sure other employers share my viewpoint. And if this letter helps to wake up just one teen-ager, it will have been worth the time I took to write it. — E. IN MINNEAPOLIS

DEAR E.: I'm glad you wrote. I'm sure you woke up more than just ONE teen-ager. (And a few parents, too.)

(Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple "do-your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's new booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (35 cents) envelope to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.)

Retail bankruptcies

NEW YORK (AP) — Changing neighborhoods are becoming more and more a factor in retail bankruptcies, says a marketing consulting firm which represents more than 180 men's stores throughout the country.

According to Marvin A. Blumenfeld, president of April-Marcus, Inc. of New York, other factors that contribute to retail failures include: rising operating costs; changing traffic patterns; the failure of key personnel to carry their weight; selling inappropriate merchandise, and inability of the owner to delegate responsibility.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

'Do not disturb' sign helps toddlers remember

DEAR HELOISE:

When my baby was small, her 4-year-old brother had a hard time remembering when the baby was sleeping and he shouldn't go into her room.

Finally, I took a picture of a baby sleeping and glued it to a piece of cardboard. On the opposite side, I put a picture of a baby playing.

A string was attached so the card could be hung on the baby's bedroom door knob.

This solved the problem of his walking in and waking up the baby. He's delighted at getting to look at the card and determine for himself whether he can go into the room or not. He's equally thrilled at getting to warn his little friends who come in to play that it's "quiet" time. — Mrs. Wallace

+ + +

These little ones need independence and responsibility, especially when there's a new one in the house to help share Mommy's time. — Hugs, to you both. Heloise

DILLY OF A DOILY

Dear Heloise: I have a wall phone in my kitchen and it was getting impossible to keep the soil marks off the wall around it.

To help preserve the paint, I purchased a large plastic doily and cut out the center to fit around the phone.

It really looked cute and brought on the compliments. You can even coordinate them to match your phone or wall. — Midge

+ + +

If you can't locate a doily large enough, how about a place mat if the area around your phone is large enough to accommodate it? — Heloise

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

Dear Heloise: If you've got kids, and there are kids in the neighborhood, then you know what I'm talking about.

My doorbell was constantly ringing, and no amount of counseling convinced them they were waking the baby.

In desperation I took the plate off the bell and padded the "clanger" with a tissue. Now all I hear is a dull KLINK-KLUNK instead of the nerve-shattering DING-DONG! — Thinker

MENDING REMINDER

Dear Heloise: When I do my laundry and ironing, I clip a clothespin onto the top of the hanger if the article of clothing is in need of a button, seam stitched or mending of any kind.

When time permits, the mending can be done, and because of the clothespin, you know not to wear that garment until it's repaired. — Jill

WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

Dear Heloise: When purchasing new draperies that were not lined, I noticed the label stated they were guaranteed not to shrink over two percent when washed.

What does that mean? How much can I expect them to shrink? — Wondering

+ + +

If it says they are "guaranteed not to shrink over two percent" (and this is residue shrinkage), you can look forward to their shrinking three-quarters of an inch for each yard of material.

For example: if your draperies are two and one-half yards long, you can figure that they'll shrink approximately two inches. — Heloise

KITCHEN CURTAINS

Dear Heloise: I use red and white checked tea towels for making attractive curtains for my small kitchen window.

When and if they fade, I can always use them for their original purpose. — M. McHugh

De Coster: Nancy Reagan's other hairdresser

By MARY STANYAN
Hearst Special News Service

New York — When Parisian hairdresser Marc de Coster, today one of the most publicized in his profession, came to America for the first time, he was, he says, "very green...all I could say in English was, 'Thank you very much, you look beautiful.'"

He learned quickly, but not without committing a few gaffes: "Thinking still in French, when I wanted to know if a customer wanted a rinse. I would say to the lady, 'Shall I give you a douche?' Needless to say, some of them looked a little startled."

His lack of language fluency was more than made up for by his skill at creating becoming coiffures, however. He was an instant hit, especially among women of a certain age. Today the dapper, suave-mannered and multilingual Monsier Marc, as he's known, can look back on more than 20 years of catering to VIP customers.

What's his secret of success, in a city teeming with status stylists? "I believe it is because I am like a chef — I take each appointment as an opportunity to come up with something special, something that is cordon bleu."

This year, de Coster's dedication to blue-ribbon hair styling has resulted in two coups that top his impressive record as hairdresser to the Celebrity Set:

— When Nancy Reagan moved eastward into the White House, she chose him to do her coifs when Julius Benggston, her West Coast man, isn't around with his combs and curling irons.

"It was a thrill, the first time I did her hair," he says. When he is asked how friendly he and Benggston are, he doesn't answer directly, but leaves the impression it is a sort of armed neutrality. "I said to Julius, I am not trying to replace you. Come to dinner with me and we will discuss how we will share things.

As for me, I am not at all jealous. Julius did the first lady's hair for the inauguration and the parties, but I was there, too. You see, her great friend Betsy Bloomingdale also is one of my clients."

— De Coster's latest famous customer is Evangeline Gouletas-Carey, the forgetful new wife of Gov. Hugh Carey of New York. She had him re-arranging her locks "about every 15 minutes" on her April 11 wedding day, and on subsequent occasions when she was called on to explain away the fact that she'd somehow overlooked a couple of previous husbands, what with all the excitement surrounding her nuptials.

"She is a very busy woman, a business tycoon, and she forgets details sometimes," de Coster says diplomatically.

Does Engie, as the New York press has dubbed her, even forget such details as hair appointments? Her hairdresser smiles and says, "No, never," and then diplomatically changes the subject.

"I like to do women who are around 40 and over, not youngsters any more. They are much more of a challenge. They have definite ideas of what they want, but they also will listen to their hairdresser.

"Now the first lady (Reagan, that is) wants a little swoop..." he cups a hand and demonstrates the preferred upward curve. "I do it a little differently than Benggston, and she likes it. She looks best with hair just earlobe length, which I approve — it suits the simplicity in fashion which she likes."

"Now, the other first lady (Gouletas-Carey), she has shoulder-length hair, and that is good, because she likes to wear it up and put flowers in her hair."

Does de Coster like to work with female Fortune 500 types such as the beauteous but reportedly dictatorial new first lady of New York?

"I like all women for their feminine attributes, not their achievements. I love especially the Italians for their bosoms, the English for their beautiful skin, like the complexion of Lady Diana Spencer, although as for her hair she looks like a boy. The French women I admire for their tiny waists. Americans? For their legs, of course.

What about those of Greek heritage, as Gouletas-Carey is? He pauses only a moment, then decides. "For their hot blood."

The legal way: Can heirs get partial distribution of estate?

By E.J. DEMSON, J.D.
Copley News Service

Probate courts in all states will allow a partial distribution to heirs of an estate especially if the estate's unpaid obligations are secured.

Q. What can I do to have my four daughters, heirs in their aunt's will, receive a part of her estate? The will has been in probate in Michigan for more than a year. Debts and expenses of the estate have been paid. The lawyer who is handling the estate says he is awaiting the estate's clearing from estate tax offices, both state and federal.

A. Ask the lawyer about the Michigan Statute (MCLA Sec. 700-194, msa 27,9104) which allows persons entitled to the estate's property to receive a part of the estate by petitioning the probate court if the debts and expenses are paid and security is furnished for debts that are unpaid.

If the lawyer fails to follow the heirs' request, they can retain another lawyer to file the petition.

Q. I live in Colorado, and would like to divorce my husband. We filed for bankruptcy three years ago and are back in debt again. He has no control over his spending for cars, boats and non-essential items. Would I be responsible for his debts if I divorced him?

A. Colorado Statute (Sec. 14-10-117) provides: To save the drain on the state's taxpayer Welfare Fund, if either ex-spouse is actually and honestly unable to maintain her-his self the ex-spouse who is financially able may be approached for help by a representative of the Welfare Board.

About the ex-husband's debts, the court's decree of divorce can free the ex-wife from any debts the ex-husband contracts. While the divorce does that, yet for use in your situation it can be specifically mentioned in the decree.

Q. My husband was transferred from California to Ohio. He wants to give our home in California held jointly by us to his daughter. It has been paid for by his earnings while we lived in California. Can he do this without my consent?

A. California Statute (C.C. 5118) provides: A single family resident acquired during marriage in joint tenancy while the couple lived in California is community property as well as property held in joint tenancy. A transfer of such property requires the signature of the joint tenant, the wife in this case, as well as a holder of a half interest in the community property.

Save money by making your own deli-style marinated vegetables at home. In addition to being economical, these vegetables are surprisingly easy to make.

Make marinated vegetables at home

Check a supermarket's deli section, and you'll quickly see the popularity of colorful marinated vegetable salads. Almost every deli offers several of the crisp vegetable mixtures flavored with tangy vinaigrette dressing.

Purchased ready-made, these salads carry a premium price. Made at home, they are much more economical — and surprisingly easy. You can mix up the salads in minutes, and they keep well in the refrigerator for up to five days, so you can easily have a salad or two on hand to round out lighter summer meals.

By mixing and matching favorite vegetables and vinegar-based dressings, you will discover a variety of combinations that work well together. For starters, try these recipes. Since the flavor and texture of every ingredient is so important in a marinated mixture, the recipes call for top-quality canned vegetables. Using the diagonal-cut green beans adds visual appeal, too.

Marinated Vegetable Salad has a crunchy texture and zingy flavor. Besides tasting great, the low calorie salad is a powerhouse of vitamin A. One 100-calorie serving supplies more than half of your daily requirement.

All that is required to make the flavorful marinade for Sweet and Sour Green Beans are a few easy changes to the basic oil-and-vinegar dressing. The crisp rings of onion mellow as the salad is refrigerated.

If you pack brown bag lunches, a container of a marinated salad makes a tasty accompaniment to a noon-time sandwich.

MARINATED VEGETABLE SALAD

17-ounce can sweet peas, drained
16-ounce can green beans, drained
1 cup sliced celery
½ cup sliced stuffed green olives
4 medium carrots, cut into 1-inch strips
1 medium onion, sliced and separated into rings
1 cup oil
½ cup wine vinegar
⅓ cup sugar
1 teasp. salt
1 teasp. paprika
1 teasp. dry mustard

Orange cake takes cake

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

With a huge crop of fresh oranges at hand, now is the time for cooks who enjoy serving delicious made-from-scratch desserts to consider creating an Orange Cream Layer Cake.

We like to bake the cake and fill and frost it a day before we're entertaining. Then we turn a wide, straight-sided, deep glass bowl over it to protect it, and we store it in the refrigerator to mellow overnight. The orange garnish is added just before serving. If you try this favorite recipe of ours, we hope your guests relish it as much as ours do.

ORANGE CREAM LAYER CAKE

1 cup sifted cake flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla
3 large eggs, separated
1 egg white, from a large egg
1 cup sugar
2 tablespoons butter, melted and cooled
3 tablespoons orange juice
Grated rind of ½ of a medium orange (1½ teaspoons)
Orange Raisin Filling recipe follows
1 cup heavy cream
2 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
Membrane-free fresh orange sections

Grease and flour two 9-inch round layer-cake pans.

On wax paper or in a small bowl stir together the flour, baking powder and salt.

In the large bowl of an electric mixer, beat the vanilla and egg yolks until thickened and lemon color; gradually beat in the 1 cup sugar until thick and pale yellow color. Add butter, then orange juice, beating after each addition until blended. Stir in orange rind. Gradually and gently beat in the flour mixture until batter is smooth.

With clean beater, beat the 4 egg whites until stiff; fold into batter. Pour into prepared pans. Bake in a preheated 325-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — about 25 minutes. With a small metal spatula, loosen edges and turn out onto wire racks. Cool completely. Layers will be thin. Sandwich layers together with the Orange Raisin Filling. Whip the cream, adding the 2 tablespoons sugar and 1 teaspoon vanilla, until stiff; use to cover top and sides of cake. Cover with a straight-sided glass bowl or a tent of foil and store in the refrigerator. Just before serving, garnish with the fresh orange sections.

Orange Raisin Filling: In a 1½-quart saucepan, stir together 2 tablespoons light brown sugar and 2 tablespoons cake flour. Gradually whisk in 1 cup orange juice, keeping smooth. Add 1 cup coarsely chopped raisins. Cook over moderately low heat, stirring constantly, until thickened and bubbly — 8 to 10 minutes. Cool before using.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

'Do not disturb' sign helps toddlers remember

DEAR HELOISE:

When my baby was small, her 4-year-old brother had a hard time remembering when the baby was sleeping and he shouldn't go into her room.

Finally, I took a picture of a baby sleeping and glued it to a piece of cardboard. On the opposite side, I put a picture of a baby playing.

A string was attached so the card could be hung on the baby's bedroom door knob.

This solved the problem of his walking in and waking up the baby. He's delighted at getting to look at the card and determine for himself whether he can go into the room or not. He's equally thrilled at getting to warn his little friends who come in to play that it's "quiet" time. — Mrs. Wallace

+ + +

These little ones need independence and responsibility, especially when there's a new one in the house to help share Mommy's time. — Hugs, to you both. Heloise

DILLY OF A DOILY

Dear Heloise: I have a wall phone in my kitchen and it was getting impossible to keep the soil marks off the wall around it.

To help preserve the paint, I purchased a large plastic doily and cut out the center to fit around the phone.

It really looked cute and brought on the compliments. You can even coordinate them to match your phone or wall. — Midge

+ + +

If you can't locate a doily large enough, how about a place mat if the area around your phone is large enough to accommodate it? — Heloise

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

Dear Heloise: If you've got kids, and there are kids in the neighborhood, then you know what I'm talking about.

My doorbell was constantly ringing, and no amount of counseling convinced them they were waking the baby.

In desperation I took the plate off the bell and padded the "clanger" with a tissue. Now all I hear is a dull KLINK-KLUNK instead of the nerve-shattering DING-DONG! — Thinker

MENDING REMINDER

Dear Heloise: When I do my laundry and ironing, I clip a clothespin onto the top of the hanger if the article of clothing is in need of a button, seam stitched or mending of any kind.

When time permits, the mending can be done, and because of the clothespin, you know not to wear that garment until it's repaired. — Jill

WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

Dear Heloise: When purchasing new draperies that were not lined, I noticed the label stated they were guaranteed not to shrink over two percent when washed.

What does that mean? How much can I expect them to shrink? — Wondering

+ + +

If it says they are "guaranteed not to shrink over two percent" (and this is residue shrinkage), you can look forward to their shrinking three-quarters of an inch for each yard of material.

For example: if your draperies are two and one-half yards long, you can figure that they'll shrink approximately two inches. — Heloise

KITCHEN CURTAINS

Dear Heloise: I use red and white checked tea towels for making attractive curtains for my small kitchen window.

When and if they fade, I can always use them for their original purpose. — M. McHugh

+ + +

By MARY STANYAN
Hearst Special News Service

New York — When Parisian hairdresser Marc de Coster, today one of the most publicized in his profession, came to America for the first time, he was, he says, "very green...all I could say in English was, 'Thank you very much, you look beautiful.'"

He learned quickly, but not without committing a few gaffes: "Thinking still in French, when I wanted to know if a customer wanted a rinse. I would say to the lady, 'Shall I give you a douche?' Needless to say, some of them looked a little startled."

His lack of language fluency was more than made up for by his skill at creating becoming coiffures, however. He was an instant hit, especially among women of a certain age. Today the dapper, suave-mannered and multilingual Monsier Marc, as he's known, can look back on more than 20 years of catering to VIP customers.

What's his secret of success, in a city teeming with status stylists? "I believe it is because I am like a chef — I take each appointment as an opportunity to come up with something special, something that is cordon bleu."

This year, de Coster's dedication to blue-ribbon hair styling has resulted in two coups that top his impressive record as hairdresser to the Celebrity Set:

— When Nancy Reagan moved eastward into the White House, she chose him to do her coifs when Julius Benggston, her West Coast man, isn't around with his combs and curling irons.

"It was a thrill, the first time I did her hair," he says. When he is asked how friendly he and Benggston are, he doesn't answer directly, but leaves the impression it is a sort of armed neutrality. "I said to Julius, I am not trying to replace you. Come to dinner with me and we will discuss how we will share things.

As for me, I am not at all jealous. Julius did the first lady's hair for the inauguration and the parties, but I was there, too. You see, her great friend Betsy Bloomingdale also is one of my clients."

— De Coster's latest famous customer is Evangeline Gouletas-Carey, the forgetful new wife of Gov. Hugh Carey of New York. She had him re-arranging her locks "about every 15 minutes" on her April 11 wedding day, and on subsequent occasions when she was called on to explain away the fact that she'd somehow overlooked a couple of previous husbands, what with all the excitement surrounding her nuptials.

"She is a very busy woman, a business tycoon, and she forgets details sometimes," de Coster says diplomatically.

Does Engie, as the New York press has dubbed her, even forget such details as hair appointments? Her hairdresser smiles and says, "No, never," and then diplomatically changes the subject.

"I like to do women who are around 40 and over, not youngsters any more. They are much more of a challenge. They have definite ideas of what they want, but they also will listen to their hairdresser.

"Now the first lady (Reagan, that is) wants a little swoop..." he cups a hand and demonstrates the preferred upward curve. "I do it a little differently than Benggston, and she likes it. She looks best with hair just earlobe length, which I approve — it suits the simplicity in fashion which she likes."

"Now, the other first lady (Gouletas-Carey), she has shoulder-length hair, and that is good, because she likes to wear it up and put flowers in her hair."

Does de Coster like to work with female Fortune 500 types such as the beauteous but reportedly dictatorial new first lady of New York?

"I like all women for their feminine attributes, not their achievements. I love especially the Italians for their bosoms, the English for their beautiful skin, like the complexion of Lady Diana Spencer, although as for her hair she looks like a boy. The French women I admire for their tiny waists. Americans? For their legs, of course.

What about those of Greek heritage, as Gouletas-Carey is? He pauses only a moment, then decides. "For their hot blood."

The legal way: Can heirs get partial distribution of estate?

By E.J. DEMSON, J.D.
Copley News Service

Probate courts in all states will allow a partial distribution to heirs of an estate especially if the estate's unpaid obligations are secured.

Q. What can I do to have my four daughters, heirs in their aunt's will, receive a part of her estate? The will has been in probate in Michigan for more than a year. Debts and expenses of the estate have been paid. The lawyer who is handling the estate says he is awaiting the estate's clearing from estate tax offices, both state and federal.

A. Ask the lawyer about the Michigan Statute (MCLA Sec. 700-194, msa 27,9104) which allows persons entitled to the estate's property to receive a part of the estate by petitioning the probate court if the debts and expenses are paid and security is furnished for debts that are unpaid.

If the lawyer fails to follow the heirs' request, they can retain another lawyer to file the petition.

Q. I live in Colorado, and would like to divorce my husband. We filed for bankruptcy three years ago and are back in debt again. He has no control over his spending for cars, boats and non-essential items. Would I be responsible for his debts if I divorced him?

A. Colorado Statute (Sec. 14-10-117) provides: To save the drain on the state's taxpayer Welfare Fund, if either ex-spouse is actually and honestly unable to maintain herhis self the ex-spouse who is financially able may be approached for help by a representative of the Welfare Board.

About the ex-husband's debts, the court's decree of divorce can free the ex-wife from any debts the ex-husband contracts. While the divorce does that, yet for use in your situation it can be specifically mentioned in the decree.

Q. My husband was transferred from California to Ohio. He wants to give our home in California held jointly by us to his daughter. It has been paid for by his earnings while we lived in California. Can he do this without my consent?

Save money by making your own deli-style marinated vegetables at home. In addition to being economical, these vegetables are surprisingly easy to make.

Make marinated vegetables at home

Check a supermarket's deli section, and you'll quickly see the popularity of colorful marinated vegetable salads. Almost every deli offers several of the crisp vegetable mixtures flavored with tangy vinaigrette dressing.

Purchased ready-made, these salads carry a premium price. Made at home, they are much more economical — and surprisingly easy. You can mix up the salads in minutes, and they keep well in the refrigerator for up to five days, so you can easily have a salad or two on hand to round out lighter summer meals.

By mixing and matching favorite vegetables and vinegar-based dressings, you will discover a variety of combinations that work well together. For starters, try these recipes. Since the flavor and texture of every ingredient is so important in a marinated mixture, the recipes call for top-quality canned vegetables. Using the diagonal-cut green beans adds visual appeal, too.

Marinated Vegetable Salad has a crunchy texture and zingy flavor. Besides tasting great, the low calorie salad is a powerhouse of vitamin A. One 100-calorie serving supplies more than half of your daily requirement.

All that is required to make the flavorful marinade for Sweet and Sour Green Beans are a few easy changes to the basic oil-and-vinegar dressing. The crisp rings of onion mellow as the salad is refrigerated.

If you pack brown bag lunches, a container of a marinated salad makes a tasty accompaniment to a noon-time sandwich.

MARINATED VEGETABLE SALAD

17-ounce can sweet peas, drained
16-ounce can green beans, drained
1 cup sliced celery
½ cup sliced stuffed green olives
4 medium carrots, cut into 1-inch strips
1 medium onion, sliced and separated into rings
1 cup oil
½ cup wine vinegar
⅓ cup sugar
1 teasp. salt
1 teasp. paprika
1 teasp. dry mustard

In large bowl, combine peas, beans, celery, olives, carrots and onion. Combine oil, vinegar, sugar, salt, paprika and mustard; mix well. Pour over vegetable mixture; toss lightly. Cover and chill several hours or overnight. 14 servings.

SWEET AND SOUR GREEN BEANS

2 16-ounce cans green beans, drained
1 medium onion, sliced and separated into rings
¾ cup sugar
½ teasp. salt
½ teasp. celery seed
¼ teasp. pepper

In large bowl, combine beans and onion. Combine remaining ingredients; pour over bean mixture. Cover and chill several hours or overnight. 10 servings.

What's cooking?

Annie Thomas

For those who are caught in a hurry on their way to a birthday, anniversary celebration or party and have forgotten to bake something the night before for the event, Annie Thomas, 207 E. Shandon, recommends a "Quick Cake" to get the harried party goer out of a bind.

Ms. Thomas, who is a housekeeper at a local residence, said her special recipe for the cake only requires an hour and a half from the mixing bowl to the paper plate and produces pleasing results for the more discriminating sweet tooth.

"When you need something quick, this recipe is dependable because it doesn't take that long and it turns out rich and moist," she said. "It only takes a small piece to fill someone, because it's so rich."

QUICK CAKE

1 box of Duncan Hines Butter Recipe Golden Cake Mix
⅔ cup water
3 eggs
1 stick butter or margarine
1 can of cream of coconut
1 can of sweetened condensed milk
1 cup of chopped walnuts or pecans

Follow directions on back of Duncan Hines box. Combine water, eggs, butter and cake mix and pour in 10" inch greased pan or bread loaf pan. Bake at 375 degrees F. until done.

Allow cake to cool for several minutes and insert criss-cross cuts with knife before adding extra ingredients. Spread cream of coconut and Eagle Brand milk and nuts if desired over surface of the cake. Allow liquids to seep into cake before serving.

Serves 12 to 14.

Ms. Thomas advises for extra creamy and rich results, the cook use a stick of pure butter rather than margarine. "The added ingredients really make the cake," she added.

Ms. Thomas who has lived in Midland off and on since 1939, said although she doesn't classify herself as an authentic cook, she does experiment around with various types of cakes and desserts.

She said the "Quick Cake" comes in handy when unexpected guests arrive or is convenient just to have around for snacking purposes.

"I have a lot of friends who have sweet tooths and when they come over and I don't have anything sweet, they want to know why," she said.

Old-time sour cherries marvelous preserves

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Once upon a time I was fortunate to have nearby friends who every year made marvelous preserves from the old-time sour red cherries growing on their own trees. There's no flavor quite like the one these cherries yield, and I used to look forward to the preserves they gave me. Then, alas, my friends moved away and I never did manage to cadge these special cherries — they have a short growing season — and I make the preserves myself.

Last spring another friend discovered that on the suburban grounds of the company she works for there were some trees producing sour red cherries in abundance. She and her colleagues were invited to pick and use them. They made some batches of a delicious Sour Red Cherry Pineapple Jam and gave me some jars of it along with the recipe.

If in the next weeks or months, you are lucky enough to have a cache of these special cherries at hand from your own tree or from a market, you might like to use the following recipe.

SOUR CHERRY PINEAPPLE JAM

2½ pounds (about) sour red cherries
3½ cups sugar
1 cup light corn syrup
Two 8-ounce cans crushed pineapple in unsweetened pineapple juice, undrained

Rinse, stem and pit the cherries; measure 5 cups. In a food processor or an electric blender coarsely chop the cherries. In a 5-quart saucepot stir together the cherries, sugar and corn syrup. Over low heat, stirring constantly, cook until the sugar is dissolved. Over medium heat, stirring occasionally, bring to a boil and boil 3 minutes. Stir in the pineapple and bring to a boil again. Continue to boil, stirring often, until mixture thickens or sheets from a spoon — 25 to 30 minutes. (To test the thickness pour a small amount of the boiling mixture on a small, cold plate; place in the freezer for a few minutes. If mixture gels, it is done.) Remove from heat; skim surface. Immediately ladle into clean, hot ½-pint jars leaving ½-inch headspace. Wipe top edges with a damp towel. Seal ccording to jar manufacturer's directions. Process in a boiling water bath for 5 minutes. Cool the jars on a wire rack or folded towel. Store in a cool place. Makes six ½-pint jars.

The butcher: Myths around the barbeque

By MERLE ELLIS

"Spring has sprung." My daffodils have died and we are definitely approaching barbecue season. This year again, if past years are any indication, magazines will be filled in the weeks and months ahead with tips, instructions and recipes for barbecuing almost everything. When it comes to cooking meat, much of what you read will be based more on fantasy than on fact. A number of myths seem to have developed over the years, a list of do's and don't's about cooking meat, that don't make much sense — to me.

Take turning a steak, for example. Dozens are the times I've read: "When turning steaks on the grill, always use tongs rather than a fork, which could pierce the meat and allow juices to escape."

The fact is, meat is not a balloon that bursts when punctured; it is multicellular. Using a fork to turn a steak (or any other meat for that matter) will not pierce enough of the cells to cause any noticeable loss of juiciness. Steaks can be (and in many restaurants are) mechanically tenderized with literally hundreds of thin knife blades and still be very juicy.

There is nothing wrong with turning a steak with tongs, but don't be convinced that you have to buy a pair to have a juicy steak. Spend that money instead to buy a better quality steak — one with a bit more "marbling" (intramuscular fat) — and turn it with a fork.

The myth that salting meat before you cook it draws out moisture and makes it less juicy is another you will probably encounter again this barbecue season. Not true! Pre-salting does not reduce juiciness. Oh, it would if you covered a steak with salt and let it set for six weeks, as is done when curing hams and bacon. Osmosis is a slow process and it doesn't have time to work when you pre-season a piece of meat just prior to cooking it.

Actually, before cooking is the best time to season a piece of meat, particularly for barbecuing. We use seasonings, herbs, spices, pepper and salt, to enhance the flavor of meat, not usually to mask it. Pre-seasoning allows the spices, etc., to mellow and blend with the meat juices, becoming part of the favorful crust that forms during cooking. If you wait till after cooking to season, there is no opportunity for flavors to blend and the seasonings tend to mask rather than enhance the flavor of the meat.

Another factor in favor of pre-salting is this: Salt retards caramelization. Salting a steak before cooking helps prevent the outside from becoming too dark and crusty before the center is cooked.

I disagree with much that I have read about how many times to turn a steak. It is usually recommended that a steak be turned only once after half its cooking time has elapsed. This works fine for thin steaks, 1/2 to 3/4 of an inch thick, which cook very quickly. But any steak over an inch thick will be juicier if you turn it every two minutes or so as it cooks.

Heat from below, as on a barbecue grill, drives the natural juices to the top. If you let a good thick steak sizzle over the coals for a full half of its required cooking time, a good sized puddle of juices will accumulate on top of the steak. When you turn it to cook the second side, you dump all of those natural juices into the fire with one big sizzle.

You'll keep more juice in the meat where it belongs if you turn the steak every couple of minutes as it cooks. That sort of confuses the juices; they start to rise to the top away from the heat, but before they get there, you turn the steak and the juicEs have to change course. They never get a chance to puddle up and get dumped in the fire.

Finally, there is the myth, perpetuated every year in myriad magazines, about the tenderizing effects of marinades. Weak acids, such as those in wine, vinegar and lemon juice, are of questionable value to say the least as tenderizers. They do contribute to flavor and that may be desirable, depending upon your taste, but they are not effective tenderizers.

Penetration studies have been made of "tenderizers" (including commerical preparations containing plant enzyme preparations, such as papain and bromelin) and it is generally concluded, as one study puts it, that "effective distribution canot be accomplished by natural diffusion." What that means is that you can't soak it tender! Marinades and tenderizers only work on the surface of the meat.

Various reports indicate a maximum penetration of two to five millimeters. That may have the effect of easing the initial bite experience on both sides of a steak, but it doesn't make the meat in the middle any easier to eat. A tough steak is very apt to be a tough steak with or without marinating.

Champagne ice authentic

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — "Champagne ice" was invented in 1965 by Lewis Bassett. It uses real champagne, eight full bottles in a 50-gallon batch. Champagne ice is an ice similar to sherbet, but contains no dairy products.

"The recipe has sugar, water and champagne," Bassett, now 75, said. "You'll find it on very fancy menus in better restaurants."

Policeman creates black cosmic superheroes

By MARIAN FOX
Associated Press Writer

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Comic book crimefighters have been zapping wrongdoers for years. But black superheroes who talk street talk, urge witnesses to work with police and accompany victims to court haven't found their way into the comics — yet.

A black policeman who's been working 3½ years with youngsters in a mostly black high school has created two such comic book heroes — "Iris" and "The Black Phantom" — in an effort to teach kids about fighting crime.

He wants to produce the books in Memphis and market them through a major franchise chain, such as hamburger or fried chicken outlets, as "extras" or prizes for kids in lower income areas.

"Now they give away trinkets, like balloons or whistles," said Patrolman Ricky Robinson, 30. "Why not give away comic books that get the message about crime across to our young people?"

Robinson, born in New York City's Bedford-Stuyvesant area and a policeman here since 1974, is a member of the Stop Black-on-Black Crime Task Force, Inc., a Memphis-based group that recently held a national conference on crime in the black community.

He came up with the idea for Iris and The Black Phantom last December as a way to reach youngsters exposed to crime.

Neither an artist nor a writer — "just an idea man" — Robinson, a smiling, energetic father of three who wears jeans to work to maintain a rapport with kids, formed a limited partnership called "The Do-Right Group" to transform his ideas into reality.

The Do-Right Group consists of Robinson, two artists who draw the characters, a writer for a puppet show they plan to produce, a teacher who'll also do some writing and a printer. He's applied for a copyright for his characters.

"The Do-Right Group is part of a revolution we hope to get a lot of people involved in — a revolution against crime," Robinson said. "To have a successful revolution, we must espouse the ideology of doing right."

In all the "Iris" and "The Black Phantom" comics, the criminal will get caught, Robinson said. Crimes depicted will be ones blacks face often — purse snatching, robbery, burglary, larceny, bank robbery, muggings, even kidnapping.

"The difference is that Iris and the Black Phantom will take the victim through the entire system," he said. "They will be there when police question the victim, the witnesses. They will urge cooperation, tell people what evidence police look for. And they will go to court and support people who testify.

"They will show there's more to fighting crime than just catching who did it."

Radio stations making waves

MILWAUKEE (AP) — There are about 35 radio stations in almost every major metropolitan area of the United States, according to Jim Hill of the News-Sports Radio Network.

The three largest radio markets, New York, Los Angeles and Chicago have 66, 62 and 50 stations respectively.

Irate man guns down lawnmower

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Owners of balky gasoline-powered lawnmowers probably have many thoughts about what to do with them, but Frank R. Karnes acted: He shot his lawnmower six times with a .357-caliber Magnum.

Karnes, 39, of suburban Elk Grove, appeared in Sacramento Municipal Court on Monday and pleaded guilty to firing a gun in a populated area. He was fined $65.

Charges of firing at an inhabited dwelling and vandalism were dropped.

A neighbor had called the Sacramento County sheriff's office last month saying he saw "muzzle blasts" as Karnes stood over the mower. One shot ricocheted into a house, knocking a spice rack from the wall.

Sheriff's deputies found the mower over an oil puddle, and Karnes asleep in his house with a Colt Python revolver on a bedside table.

Karnes, who admitted having been drinking for two or three days, told investigators, "I tried to start the mower but it wouldn't start. I got angry at the mower so I went in the house and got my gun."

Prophetess focus of growing mystic cult

SALISBURY, Zimbabwe (AP) — A year after Zimbabwe's independence, a cult is building up around the legend of a Zimbabwean prophetess who was executed by British colonial rulers nine decades ago for leading a revolt against white settlers.

Mbuya Nehanda, a mystical woman of the majority Shona tribe, was hanged in 1898 along with a fellow rebel leader, Sekuru Kaguvi, for treason.

She and Kaguvi during the previous two years had led Shona warriors armed with spears, clubs, axes and knives in attacks on families of white settlers who were then arriving in the country by ox wagon from South Africa.

Some white historians maintain that Nehanda, — "lion spirit" in the Shona language — was motivated by greed, looting the homes of whites who were slain.

But old black storytellers insist that Nehanda sought to drive the whites away from her land for fear her people would be enslaved.

As it turned out, independence under a black-majority government only dawned on Zimbabwe, or Rhodesia as it was previously called, on April 18, 1980.

Since then, Nehanda's image as a rebel against Queen Victoria's British government has been elevated to that of a national hero in the eyes of the 7.2 million blacks.

At least one educational publisher is rewriting history books to project Nehanda in that light.

Posters of the prophetess, barefoot and clad in rags, are on sale in shops.

Two Salisbury hospitals — one named after Princess Margaret of Britain, the other after the wife of the first British governor of Rhodesia, John Chancellor — are to be renamed after Nehanda and Kaguvi by the Health Ministry.

Nehanda was born in the mid-19th century in the Mazoe area some 30 miles north of Salisbury, today a rich white farming area.

A spirit medium, she was both respected and feared by local blacks. Whites dismissed her as a witch.

Nehanda and Kaguvi were captured after a running battle with mounted police led by Capt. Randolph Nesbitt late in 1897 following months of searching for her among the wooded hills around Mazoe.

They were hanged the next year and their cremated remains scattered in a place the British authorities kept secret for fear it would become a national shrine for blacks.

Senate considering free textbook bill

By GARTH JONES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas taxpayers may furnish private schools with the same free textbooks given public school students under a measure that gets final Senate consideration today.

Senators tentatively approved the measure 21-9 on Monday.

Opponents argued it would increase costs to tax payers while supporters said it would save tax money by educating more students in private schools.

"This is the beginning of a program to increase dramatically the cost to the people of this state," protested Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin. "People are removing their children from public schools to enter private schools of their choice and I don't think we should have to pay the increased cost."

"Private schools are saving Texas taxpayers about $415 million a year now because about 150,000 students aregoing to rivate instead of public schools," argued Sen. Tati Santiesteban, D-El Paso, sponsor of the measure.

The bill says that the same textbooks adopted by the State Board of Education for public schools "shall be furnished without cost to students attending non-public schools."

The Legislative Budget Board estimated the bill would cost $12.7 million from the state's general revenue fund for the 1981-82 school year, plus $3.3 million for each succeeding year.

"Similar bills just like this one have been upheld as constitutional by courts throughout the nation," Santiesteban said. "Church and private schools are using the same textbooks now as the public schools but many times there is only one book to three students because of the cost."

Sen. Oscar Mauzy, D-Dallas, argued against the bill.

"If you approve this, they (the private schools) will be back next time wanting you to approve audio-visual aids and workbooks, then the first thing you know, they'll want us to pay the teachers' salaries," he said. "There is plenty of opposition, including some church groups, saying that this violates the constitution provision on separation of church and state."

Santiesteban said spokesman of Methodist, Episcopal and Lutheran schools testified for the bill in committee.

Mauzy said the same committee heard oppositing testimony from two Baptist organizations and from state public education groups.

Businessmen asked to assist art funding

WASHINGTON (AP) — Business leaders were asked Monday night to seek increased corporate support for the arts in the face of President Reagan's budget proposals to cut federal arts expenditures in half.

Rawleigh Warner Jr., chairman of Mobil Corp. and the Business Committee for the Arts, said 70 percent of the two million corporations in America do not report any charitable contributions.

Among those who do, he told the 146 corporate members of the committee at its annual meeting at the National Gallery of Art, many have no arts support programs.

"In that depressing fact is the obvious challenge facing our Business Committee for the Arts," he said. "There is a whole world of smaller business out there that we have barely touched."

Warner applauded Reagan's effort to "take control of a runaway budget" and reduce the scope of government activities.

"We should look upon the planned reduction in federal arts expenditures as an opportunity for the private sector to take a larger role," he said. "If government is in some respects to shrink, then we ourselves — as individuals, as patrons and as leaders in the private sector — must try to fill the gap."

But Warner predicted that supporters of education, health and social services also will turn to corporations and private philanthropists for support as the government reduces spending on social programs.

"We shall have to take care that arts and cultural programs are not shouldered aside in the ensuing competition for support," he said.

Missile crisis distracting Israelis from economy

NORMAN KEMPSTER
The Los Angeles Times

JERUSALEM — Israel's tense confrontation with Syria over anti-aircraft missiles in Lebanon has almost totally distracted the Israeli public from the problems of the country's shaky economy.

That is bad news for the opposition Labor Party that had hoped to base much of its campaign for the June 30 election on an assertion that Prime Minister Menachem Begin's government is responsible for a stagnant economy coupled with the world's worst inflation.

"The campaign on economic matters and internal matters has not taken off," Haim Ben-Shahar, labor's choice for finance minister, said in an interview. "I have not been able to start (presenting labor's economic proposals) because of the Lebanon crisis.

"The campaign is waiting for the right opportunity, which I expect to come soon," he said.

The Israeli economy would seem to be an opposition party's dream.

The cost of living index jumped 10.7 percent in April alone, the fourth highest monthly increase in Israel's 33-year history.

VA to start debts drive

The Veterans Administration and the Department of Justice have begun a nationwide effort to collect debts owed by veterans who attended school under the GI Bill.

Most of the monies owed to the agency stem from educational overpayments while the veteran was in school or from defaulted education loans.

VA's aim is to collect debts of under $1,200 in instances where the veteran will first be notified by letter of the indebtedness, then be advised that approximately 30 days remain after receipt of the letter to pay the debt in full or make the arrangements for payment before the necessary court action is taken.

Debts in excess of $1,200 are being referred to the Department of Justice for collection. As a general rule, the Justice Department will demand immediate repayment of the debt. They utilize various post-judgment remedies such as taking liens on properties, garnishing salaries and attachment of bank accounts and other liquid assets.

These combined collection actions are being taken pursuant to Public Law 96-466 and a recent "Memorandum of Understanding" between VA and the Department of Justice.

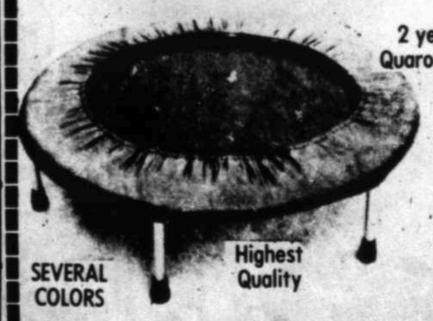

Legislation to improve the federal government's collection efforts is now being considered by Congress.

Provisions of the bill would allow the government to report the names of the delinquent debtors to commercial credit rating bureaus. Another provision would permit the government to withhold wages of federal employees who owe monies for education and loan payments.

Pasadena citizens proud to be rednecks

By JOE McQUADE
The Houston Chronicle

PASADENA, Texas (AP) — Residents of this working-class, urban frontier town made famous as the headquarters of Gilley's Club know what to expect when they tell citizens of nearby Houston where they live.

"People roll their eyeballs," said City Councilman Vernan Atkinson. "It seems like a big city needs an adjacent smaller city to be the brunt of its jokes."

Some unmerciful Houstonians say a rich Pasadenan is different from a poor one only in that he can afford to put two cars up on blocks in his front yard.

But Chamber of Commerce President Marshall Clinkscales says, "I don't think Pasadena has anything to be defensive about." He says the city of 113,000 has "the world's largest concentration of pickup trucks" and "comes by its redneck reputation honestly."

In fact, many Pasadenans seem to flaunt their lack of sophistication. David Pomeroy, president of the Pasadena Historical Society and a fourth-generation descendant of a city founder, sees a "reverse snobbery" among many of his neighbors.

"There is something of an anti-culture movement here, and you are looked down upon if you appear too cultured," he said. "People seem to be saying, 'I'm a redneck and I'm proud of it.'"

The city, after all, is not without its charms. City Council meetings are showcases for country aphorisms, and horses are plentiful here.

Gilley's, the honky-tonk promoted to national fame in the John Travolta film "Urban Cowboy" typifies Pasadena's bigger-is-better philosophy and its fondness for sprawling, single-story architecture.

But in many ways, Pasadena has clung to the old ways that saw it grow from a strawberry farming area in the 1920s to a major shipbuilding center during World War II. Even today, less than 1 percent of the population is black.

Pomeroy said that was a legacy of the 1930s and 1940s when "you didn't let the sun set on you in Pasadena if you were black." He said black friends have declined dinner invitations to his home saying, "I'm sorry, but you live in Pasadena."

Pasadena's 190-man police force has a single black, and the city houses the headquarters of the Texas Ku Klux Klan.

Critics also point to its image as a brawling, blue-collar town of redneck bars and nose-numbing smokestacks. However, city leaders say its neighborhoods are more tranquil than those in its big neighbor to the west.

"We're a much quieter and safer place to live and raise families than Houston," said Mayor Jim Clark.

He attributes the city's conservative, fundamentalist traditions to the "country rednecks" from East Texas who led the migration to the ship channel in search of jobs 35 years ago.

"They're good, solid citizens who believe in individual responsibility," he said. "They are what helps Pasadena keep its small-town atmosphere."

City secretary J.L. Pitre said, "You have a relatively small number of extremely wealthy or extremely poor people here. It's a working-class town, and these people tend to be more family-oriented."

Mayor-elect Johnny Isbell said the suburb's hotbed of political corruption was its major claim to fame before Gilley's opened. Two city commissioners and three consecutive mayors who served during the 1960s were indicted for stealing city funds. Sam Hoover, a former mayor, was convicted in 1964 on robbery and murder charges.

"I'm not saying a lot of our past problems have been undeserved, but I think we have become a lot more professional in this city," said Isbell. "We have no place to go but up."

Where is life we have lost in living

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — The Dark Ages don't seem as dark anymore; nor the barbarians as barbarous.

Ours is a savager age.

The terror that stalks our times, shooting down presidents, a pope, a pop star, a civil rights leader and every day hundredds of passers-by going up to Jericho like the biblical traveler who fell among robbers, may be the most terrifying in the whole panorama of humankind.

In all the history of the Crusades, with the cross of Christianity pitted against the crescent of Islam in two centuries of strife and slaughter, no frenzied fanatic struck own the popeor took a halbard or crossbow to the caliph of Jerusalem.

When Attila the Hun, the "Scourge of God," came to sack Rome after laying waste the eastern half of the Holy Roman Empire, Pope Leo the Great went unarmed to meet him at the outskirts of the city. In the dark year of 452, which seems enlightened by our standards, the pontiff and barbarian sat down for a chat on the banks of the river Mincio.

Leo reminded the invading Hun that Alaric the Visigoth had met his Maker rather soon after sacking the Eternal City a decade or so earlier. Attila had second thoughts about his long-sought goal and withdrew beyond the Danube.

Alaric, the king of the Visigoths, comes across in history as less barbarous than the modern connotation of the word. He besieged Rome three times, but always spared the pope, his palace and the churches.

All throughout the tumultuous papal reigns of the Borgias and Medici, known to some church historians as the "age of prelates," poison, and "Pinturicchio,"(the artist) who lavished gilt and extravagance on the Apostolic Palace. The unpopular Spanish popes moved safely through the crowds on the sedia gestatoria, the portable throne, giving their blessing.

When the callow King Charles VIII of France came to invade Rome, the roguish Borgia Pope Alexander VI sat him down in the Sals dei Misteri, the room of Mysteries exquistely painted in religious symbolism by Pinturicchio, and charmed him out of violence.

True, there were some close calls down the vault of centuries. A pope here and there had to flee to save the throne.

The French popes took refuge for 70 years in Avignon. The Medici Pope Clement VII had to hole up in the fortress-like Castel Sant' Angelo on the banks of the Tiber just beyond the Vatican, when Charles V, himself the Holy Roman emperor, sacked Rome and slaughtered 147 Swiss Guards defending the Apostolic Palace. And Leo IV in the ninth century miraculously put out a fire set in the Borgo Santo Spirito by Anglo Saxon arsonists.

There was also the sacrilegiously violent conclave, called to elect a pope at Viterbo, Italy, after Clement IV died in 1268, when Guy de Montfort settled an old family vendetta by stabbing Prince Henry of Cornwall in the heart just as the sacred host was being elevated at morning Mass. The malice here was definitely ad personem, unconnected with any media message.

But only in our times, in our so-called Free World, free to witness all kinds of horrors, is the pope who speaks mostly of peace from his balcony and goes about armed only with a smile and a blessing, the sought-after target and prey of faceless fanatics with some kind of a message.

Pope Paul VI had a narrow escape from the dagger brandished by a berserk Bolivian artist at Manila airport a little over a decade ago.

As seminarian, parish priest, bishop and cardinal, Karol Wojtyla managed to survive unscathed through the daily horrors of World War II, the successive occupation of his Polish homeland by German and Russian armies and countless confrontations with Communikst Party bosses and KGB-type bully boys. As pope he went forth to meet the people, to embrace them as no other pontiff ever had, in Mexico, Poland, Brazil, Africa, Japan, the United States, Ireland, Turkey, etc., obviously glorying in the freedom he had seldom known before coming to the chair of Peter.

And then suddenly on a sunny May afternoon in Rome, riding through St. Peter's Square in the white open vehicle that we reporters who covered him irreverently called the "popemobile," this man of peace and love and smiling infectious charity is gunned down by a terrorist with a message. A message of hate and revenge.

Which age now belongs to the Dark Ages? Attila the Hun's civilization would not have been uncivil enough to enshrine as culture assassination crowd pleasers like "Taxi" and "the Day of the Jackal." Violence as an art form belonged to the earlier era of Nero and Caligula, who operated right here in this same square. Only now is barbarism worthy of its name.

T.S. Eliot, the great Christian poet, brooded about our inhuman condition in "The Hollow Man":

"Where is the life we have lost in living?

Where is the wisdom we have lost in knowledge?

Where is the knowledge we have lost in information?

The cycles of Heaven in twenty centuries

Bring us furether from God

And nearer to the Dust."

West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt adjusts his cap after stepping off a helicopter Wednesday in Washington. With him is his wife Hannelore. Schmidt will meet with President Reagan today to discuss defense and economics.

Schmidt, Reagan to discuss defense

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. officials are refusing to set a precise timetable for negotiations with the Soviets on limiting nuclear missile deployment in Europe, a prime topic of West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's talks today with President Reagan.

And, administration officials say, Reagan also is unlikely to give Schmidt much encouragement about high American interest rates, which are aimed at slowing inflation in the United States but which the West German leader maintains are having a negative impact on European economies. After years of solid performance, the West German economy has been afflicted by low growth rates for some time.

The two leaders were scheduled to meet at the White House today as Schmidt opened a three-day official visit.

Schmidt's trip comes at a time when his personal popularity among West German voters has slumped to an all-time low. West Germany's sluggish economy is one contributing factor; another is the politically divisive issue of the planned deployment of U.S. nuclear weapons in West Germany and other NATO countries.

Left-wing opposition to the missiles has caused a deep split in Schmidt's Social Democratic party. Last weekend, the chancellor threatened to resign if his opponents continued efforts to undercut the NATO decision.

To defuse that issue, West German sources said early this week, Schmidt hoped to win a commitment from Reagan for early U.S. negotiations — perhaps in September — with the Soviet Union on limiting nuclear weapons deployment on the continent.

Other West German sources said Wednesday, however, that Schmidt did not plan to press Reagan too hard on the missile issue.

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. promised the NATO allies earlier this month that the administration intends to open such discussions before the end of the year, but he refused to outline a more specific time frame.

The administration was no more precise as Schmidt arrived Wednesday.

Asked whether Reagan would be willing to accommodate Schmidt's political needs, a senior administration official declined to answer directly.

Speaking with reporters on the condition that he not be identified, the official said only that both the NATO foreign and defense ministers endorsed Haig's end-of-the-year timetable at separate meetings this month.

If the superpowers are unable to reach an arms control agreement, the United States will begin deploying 572 cruise and Pershing II missiles in Western Europe starting in 1983.

The alliance adopted that decision in 1979 as a means of offsetting Soviet deployment of SS-20 missiles. The Soviets now have an estimated 220 of the SS-20s in place, each with three warheads. France, with 18 land-based nuclear missiles, is the only Western European country where such weaponry now is deployed.

Schmidt told reporters ast weeked that he intended to use his visit here to make the point that American policies have "repercussions outside as regards their partners and friends."

Schmidt contends that interest rates in the United States are partly to blame for his country's recent slow economic growth.

Senior U.S. officials who briefed reporters Wednesday, however, said Reagan planned to tell Schmidt that the administration's economic program must be carried out fully if the nation's prosperity is to be restored.

In addition to the economy and the missile issue, Schmidt was expected to discuss such topics as Poland, the Middle East and the overall state of East-West relations.

After his meeting with Reagan, Schmidt was to have a luncheon with Haig and then meet with congressional leaders. He also plans discussions with Defense Secretary Caspar Weinburger and with leaders of the American Jewish community before returning home Saturday.

Doctors check hunger strikers

ATLANTA (AP) — Thirteen Cubans on a hunger strike at the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary used the anniversary of Cuba's independence from U.S. military control to appeal for support.

"We appeal to the jury of the conscience of all the worthy and noble citizens of this great country, so they will keep this group of Cubans from dying behind the shadows of the bars of this prison," the 13 said Wednesday in a statement translated and released by the Atlanta Committee on Behalf of Cuban Prisoners.

Warden Jack Hanberry said federal policy calls for medical monitoring of inmates who go 72 hours or more without food. Hanberry said 12 of the Cuban detainees did not stop eating until Monday.

Those men are housed together and monitored, prison spokesman William Noonan said.

Thomas Antona, ACBCP president, has said Manuel de la Torre Rodriguez, who has not eaten since May 1, is growing weaker and is "not smiling anymore."

Noonan said Wednesday that de la Torre was being housed in the prison hospital and was being weighed daily and examined by a doctor.

A separate statement was released by one inmate who pointed out that Wednesday was the 79th anniversary of the day the first Cuban congress took over the government from U.S. military authorities after the Spanish-American War.

"That 20th of May 1902, Cuba showed the world that it was free and sovereign, and that the Cuban people had a country without masters," said the statement by Mario Solavo Vazquez.

The penitentiary here is the sole detention center for 1,746 Cuban refugees who told immigration officials they had been in jail in Cuba when they arrived on the "Freedom Flotilla" boatlifts last year.

Last week, U.S. Attorney General William French Smith ordered that no more detainees classified as minor offenders be released from the prison pending the formulation of specific policies on which offenders can be released to sponsors.

Some 173 of the Cubans held here facility are believed to be in the minor-offender category.

Postal Service to celebrate holiday

The U.S. Postal Service will operate on a normal holiday schedule on Monday in observance of Memorial Day.

No residential, business or rural delivery will be provided, with the exception of special and express mail deliveries.

No window service will be provided, however, there will be a regular holiday collection of mail.

In addition, all first class mail from the Main Post Office and all area branch offices will be boxed for delivery, according to a spokesman from the Midland Post Office.

Planes nearly collide

ORMOND BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration says it is investigating the second report in a month of two planes nearly colliding over Northeast Florida.

An Eastern Airlines jetliner, bound from Daytona Beach to Atlanta, and a twin-engine Piper passed within 200 to 300 feet of one another north of Ormond Beach on Wednesday, FAA officials said.

Last month, a Delta Air Lines jet and a USAir flight were involved in a near collison over Jacksonville. FAA spokesman Jack Barker in Atlanta said that incident was due to a systems error at the northeast Florida flight center and a full report on the incident is expected soon.

Being wheeled in to St. Vincent Hospital in Santa Fe, is Steve Henley 20, of El Paso, who was found alive Wednesday after being missing for five days. Chris Dolby the person who was with Henly died. When admitted to the hospital Henly's condition was said to be serious but stable.

One El Paso man survives five days on snow-covered New Mexico peak

TAOS, N.M. (AP) — One of two El Paso, Texas men who survived five days on snow-covered Wheeler Peak — the highest mountain peak in New Mexico — was hospitalized today in stable condition with frost bite on his hands and feet.

A search and rescue team Wednesday found 20-year-old Steven Hendley, "shaken but coherent." In a nearby sleeping bag, searchers found the body of Hendley's companion, Chris Dolby, also 20.

The two Texas men were trapped about 1,000-feet below the summit of the 13,500-foot peak last Friday when a late spring snowstorm moved into the mountains near here.

Relatives of the men told authorities the two planned to backpack on the peak last weekend. When they did not return to their homes late Sunday, police were notified and an extensive search began on Monday.

Hendley was airlifted by an Army helicopter to St. Vincent Hospital in Santa Fe. A hospital spokesman said late Wednesday he was suffering from frost bite on his hands and feet. Dolby's body also was removed from the mountain by helicopter.

The two men were spotted by searchers at noon Wednesday at about the 12,500-foot level of the rugged peak.

Buddy Clancy and Chuck Rose, two of the searchers who found the men, said they were "on a very exposed ridge."

"He (Hendley) was in his sleeping bag, partially covered with snow. He was just laying there," Clancy said, "reclining against his backpack. He had a little bag of nuts and fruit he was munching on. He said his friend died Saturday night."

Ray Piper, field coordinator for the state search and rescue unit, said Hendley and Dolby were apparently trapped atop the mountain by the snowstorm that moved into the area last Friday, dumping up to a foot of snow on the mountain. Temperatures on the mountain dropped into the teens in recent nights.

"They were on the east side of the peak," said Piper. "I think they were on top when the snow hit and they went down the east side a little ways to try and get out of the wind."

Piper said Hendley and Dolby were well above the timberline, in an unprotected area covered with snow. Piper said the two men were in their sleeping bags when found, but were wearing relatively light clothing.

"They were not adequately prepared for this type of weather," Piper said.

Search teams reported snow drifts up to six feet deep in the area.

Piper said Hendley and Dolby could not walk out of the area once the snowstorm trapped them.

"It is real, real rugged, and if you are not an expert mountain man, you don't want to be hiking up there," Piper said.

Piper said the two hikers were found on a peak known as Mount Walters, which searchers had scoured since the rescue mission began Monday morning.

"We had searched that area about three times, but because they were in the snow, it was hard to see them," Piper said. "The one that survived was shaken but coherent."

Officials said Dolby was a student at Texas Tech in Lubbock, and Hendley has been employed in Lubbock.

Dolby's was the second death this year in New Mexico resulting from a wilderness mishap. In late March, 20-year-old Kurt McDonald of Albuquerque died after he and a companion were trapped by a two-day snowstorm on the face of Santa Fe Baldy.

Also in March, two New Mexio Highland University students who spent four days lost in the Pecos Wilderness, northwest of Las Vegas, N.M., were found alive.

A puppet show by students at Travis Elementary was one of the highlights of Carver Cultural Center's recent "Family Fiesta."

Carver Center's 'Family Fiesta' a family affair

A "Family Fiesta" was held recently at Carver Cultural Center as part of the school district's migrant education program.

The covered dish affair was highlighted by entertainment that included a puppet show by students at Travis Elementary, a dance by DeZavala 4-year-olds, and a flute recital by a student at Alamo. In addition, student projects were on display.

A raffle was held and donated door prizes and encyclopedia sets were awarded the winners. Following the meal, several students were given merit certificates for work done in the migrant program, which is federally funded and provides supplementary education to migrant students.

Prison tents open for inspection

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Newsmen were invited today to inspect Army tents that will be used to house up to 1,500 prisoners and relieve overcrowding as ordered by a federal judge.

Several eight-man tents have been pitched within the fenced-in parts of four of the prison's 16 units, said Texas Department of Corrections spokesman Rick Hartley. He said wardens were not allowing any maximum security or "problem" prisoners to occupy them.

Hartley said it was hoped the prisoners housed in tents could be moved before winter into permanent quarters now under construction.

"We really don't expect to have to use the tents in the winter. If we do, the main thing is to block the wind, but we're hopeful to be able to have them out of the tents by then," Hartley said.

He said the tents will be equipped with steel beds and mattresses.

Recommendation likely on Brand appointment

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Senate nominations subcommittee was expected to make a recommendation today on Gov. Bill Clements' appointment of McAllen Mayor Othal Brand to the state prison board.

The public hearing on Brand, which began Tuesday, already is the longest ever held on any appointee, Sen. Peyton McKnight, D-Tyler, chairman, said Wednesday.

After the subcommittee reports, the final decision will be up to the full Senate which must approve gubernatorial appoinments by a two-thirds margin.

At Wednesday's hearing, opponents claimed Brand would be "divisive" on the board of the Texas Department of Corrections.

Others claimed he was at least indirectly responsible for the disappearance of videotapes showing brutality by McAllen police in handling prisoners.

"I don't think we violated any court order (to retain the videotapes)," Brand testified. "This is one man who is not going to violate any court order if I am aware of it."

Brand said, in reply to cross examination by Sen. Hector Uribe, D-Brownsville, that a 1976 federal court order against erasure of tapes referred only to specific dates and incidents. "It was not a general order to retain all tapes," he said.

He said it was a routine matter for the police department to erase videotapes taken of persons being processed before being placed in jail, unless the tapes were marked for keeping. He said all tapes concerning pending civil suits were kept.

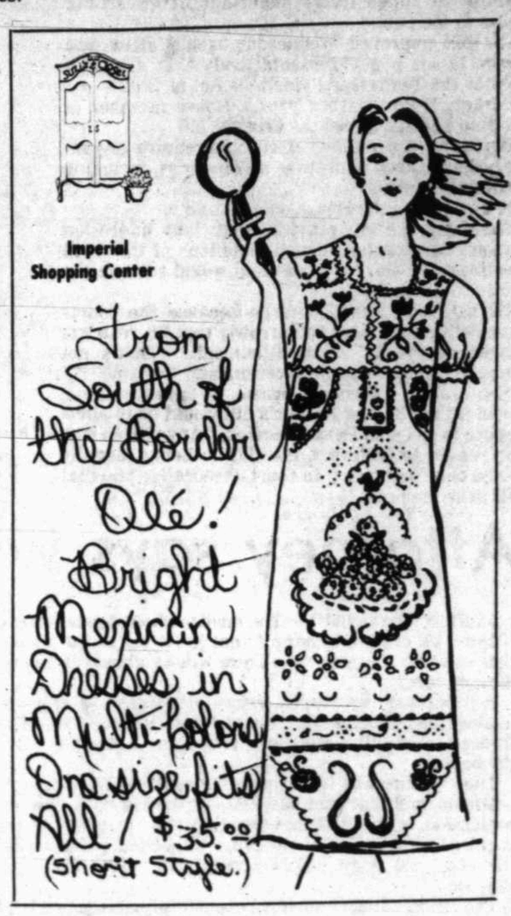

Brand said there have been 27,000 bookings over the past five years, while he was commissioner and mayor, "and I guess there were 40 or 50 civil rights suits filled in that time."

James Herrington, American Civil Liberties Union attorney who now has 26 civil rights suits pending against McAllen police, said Brand's appointment was "ill-advised. He's not the man for the job."

Herrington said his organization knew of 72 videotapes "that show brutality by the McAllen police department and there are another 700 that were erased in violation of a court order. We do not know who erased them."

He said he did not blame Brand for the alleged police brutality, but added, "what I'm talking about is mismanagement."

"Othal Brand has been the most divisive force in the Valley and our city," said Brinkly Oxford, McAllen lawyer. "Everything he goes into he thinks he must have his way on everything...this would be a most controversial and negative appointment."

Michican prison plans early releases

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Michigan corrections officials are set to begin releasing hundreds of inmates early in an effort to relieve overcrowded prisons.

Gov. William Milliken signed Michigan's first prison crowding emergency declaration on Wednesday, just hours after it was unanimously requested by the state Corrections Commission.

The first parolees to gain releases under the program should be freed by the middle of next week, officials said. The parolees are to be released up to 90 days early.

Between 700 and 900 inmates could be released early during the next three months under conditions of the emergency declaration.

"The orderly release of eligible parolees...ahead of schedule is infinitely preferable to allowing the overcrowding situation to continue," Milliken said.

The emergency was declared after the Corrections Department counted 13,111 inmates — 237 more than the capacity of state prisons. The prisons have been too full for 69 days in a row, the department reported.

In a letter to Milliken, the commission said "all administrative actions...have failed to reduce the prison population."

The state Parole Board already has screened and interviewed 49 prisoners for early release in anticipation of the declaration, said Corrections Director Perry Johnson.

States take prison actions

By The Associated Press

With prisons filled to overflowing, the governor of Michigan cleared the way for the release of 1,000 inmates, a federal judge fined Maryland for overcrowding prisoners and inmates in Texas will be spending the summer in tents.

"If tents are good enough for our Army, our Marines and our National Guard, they're good enough for our prisoners," Texas Gov. Bill Clements said Wednesday.

Gov. William Milliken declared Michigan's first prison overcrowding emergency Wednesday hours after it was requested by the state Corrections Commission, which unanimously certified that the state's 12 prisons and 11 prison camps are overcrowded.

The Corrections Department reported that state prisons hold 13,111 inmates, 237 above capacity.

The Parole Board is reviewing applications to determine which inmates are eligible for early release, which could begin by the end of next week, said Corrections Department spokesman Calvin Goddard.

In Alabama, U.S. District Judge Robert Varner told prison officials Tuesday he may begin releasing state inmates, possibly at a rate of 200 every other week for 10 weeks, to relieve overcrowding in state and county penal facilities.

An annex at the state House of Correction at Jessup is due to be finished in June, and new construction is planned at the state penitentiary at Baltimore.

Texas Senate approves new open meetings bill

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Senate has approved a bill which sponsor Carl Parker claims is an attempt to "open fully" meetings of governing bodies to the public.

The bill approved Wednesday would allow any person to sue a governmental body that allegedly violates the Texas Open Meetings Act of 1973.

Parker, D-Port Arthur, was a House member at the time and sponsored the original bill.

His Senate amendment also would require governing bodies to keep minutes of all meetings, including executive sessions.

It was sent to the House on a 28-3 vote.

Currently, the law provides that "any interested person" can sue for alleged violations of the Open Meetings Act. Parker's proposal would remove the word "interested."

He said this was necessary because the courts have defined the word so narrowly that "it restricts almost everybody" from filing suit. "That's not the spirit of openness in government," he said.

Sen. James "Buster" Brown, R-Lake Jackson, asked if the effect of Parker's bill would be to allow anyone to sue, and Parker replied, "Any citizen who has reason to believe a meeting is being illegally closed can challenge it in court. Generally, who that will be is the press."

Six more counties investigated

TYLER, Texas (AP) — Purchasing records from six more Northeast Texas counties have been requested in an investigation of an alleged kickback scheme that already has led to indictments against 11 people.

U.S. Attorney John Hannah sent letters to the county auditors of Gregg, Harrison, Marion, Upshur, Wood and Camp counties asking for records of all purchases of road machinery and supplies for the last five years.

Hannah's letter requested the names and addresses of all salesmen who have sold such items and estimates of how much business each has done with each county.

Attorney says wiretap abuse inherent

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The lawyer who defended Speaker Bill Clayton on criminal charges that grew out of an investigation that used wiretapping says there will be abuses if Texas gets a wiretap law.

Roy Minton, an Austin criminal defense lawyer, testified against the bill before the Senate Jurisprudence Committee. The House-passed bill closely tracks federal legislation already on the books.

The measure was left as pending business Wednesday.

Minton said that even the FBI — "the big boys, the top of the profession, with all their education and training" — were not required to prove probable cause to get federal permission for the taps and body mikes during their 1979 investigation of Clayton.

The Texas bill does not have enough safeguards in it to restrain officers working "in the heat of pursuit, in ferreting out crime," he said, because zeal often "overrides honesty" in day-to-day law enforcement.

Minton said the bill, a key part of Gov. Bill Clements' "War on Drugs," states a person is entitled to notice that his phone has been tapped or his house bugged but it also lets the notice be postponed indefinitely for "good cause."

According to Minton, that means " ... all they have to say is 'It'll hurt law enforcement.' That means you'll never know."

Sen. Oscar Mauzy, D-Dallas, a long-time opponent of wiretapping and chairman of the committee, said at the opening of the hearing that Clements and the bill's sponsor had agreed to an amendment that would make the law self-destruct after four years.

Opponents had hoped Mauzy would let the bill, sponsored by Sen. Ed Howard, D-Texarkana, die in committee.

Howard said his bill was a necessary law enforcement tool to get at the kingpins of Texas' burgeoning narcotics trade. The bill has many safeguards to protect citizens, he said.

Under the bill the Department of Public Safety could tap telephone lines and install "bugs" to investigate narcotics violations. The taps and bugs could be used only after the DPS got judicial permission, and illegal wiretapping would be a crime carrying a punishment of two to 10 years and a $5,000 fine.

Covert entry — which committee member Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, called "legalized breaking and entering" — would be allowed to install the surveillance devices. Officers who overhear information not related to narcotics violations could turn whatever they know over to "appropriate authorities."

Col. Jim Adams, head of the DPS, said wiretapping would help catch the "highly organized and sophisticated operators, the financiers and master criminals."

"Some of these larger organizations involve businessmen, lawyers, accountants, all acting together," he said.

Wiretapping "will not in itself solve the problem, but it is one more tool," he said. He said he could not guarantee there would be no abuses.

Professor examines Mexican relations

ODESSA — A lack of understanding of historical culture on the part of the United States is one of the reasons Mexico distrusts the United States today, according to a University of Texas of the Permian Basin professor who recently visited a Mexican university as part of an exchange program.

Dr. Thomas E. Schaefer, associate professor of management, recently returned from Universidad Autonoma Del Noreste in Torreon, Coahuila, Mexico. He made eight speaking presentations within a three-day period on college and university campuses and at municipal theatres.

Schaefer said he spoke on the dynamic character of the Mexican economy at this time — from migration problems to the use of their newly-found petroleum resources.

Schaefer said Mexico's new-found wealth as the result of oil gives them many options which previously were not open to them — and the United States will be affected by these options.

He noted Mexico is looking not only at the social changes they can make internally as a result of this money - and this problem alone is complex, but they also are considering the question of where to export their oil.

"For the first time, they have something we want," Schaefer said, pointing out that most of the multi-billion dollar trade between the two countries involves U.S. products going to Mexico.

"If we (the United States) expect them to sell most of their export oil to us, even for practical reasons, we must show them that we aren't as difficult to get along with as neighbors as we were in the past.

"I would hope that we could hope for consideration because there has really been a change of conscience," he said.

"To the Mexican people, history is more important than it is for us. For us, the present is an anticipation of the future, but for them it is an extension of the past. This lack of understanding of the historical culture of Mexico is one of the reasons they mistrust the United States today," he said.

Schaefer's visit to Mexico is part of a continuing exchange which began in th spring of 1980 with the visit of Vice Rector Pedro Hector Rivas from Universidad Autonoma Del Noreste in Torreon, Coahuila, Mexico.

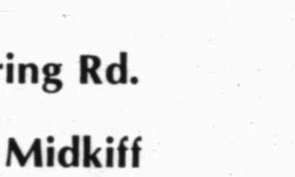

A student exchange is scheduled this summer. Hope Vega, UTPB Spanish graduate from Odessa, will go to Mexico, attend classes and work in an intern program with a Mexican business firm July 13-Aug. 21. At the same time, a Mexican student, Olga Leticia, Acenedo Garcia, will study at UTPB and work with American Bank of Odessa.

Schaefer said other faculty exchanges involving areas of study other than economics, are now in the planning.

Pipeline poses no threat to Houston nuclear plant

HOUSTON (AP) — A panel of expert witnesses says a gas pipeline near the proposed Allens Creek nuclear plant 45 miles from downtown Houston poses no threat to the controversial facility.

Panel members William Carnes, Robert Iotti and William Mercurio are employees of EBASCO, the company designing the Allens Creek plant. They testified in a Nuclear Regulator Commission hearing Wednesday that the pipeline would be able to withstand any pressures likely to be put on it.

The pipeline now runs through what is to become the plant's cooling lake, but would be moved west of the proposed 7,000-acre nuclear site, about three miles from the plant's reactor building.

Opponents contend the site is too close to a populated area containing 4 million persons.

'Cloud 9' sure to keep insomniacs wide awake

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Drama Critic

NEW YORK (AP) — Hmm. The first act has adultery, a lesbian maid who tries to seduce her employer's wife, and a handsome explorer who separately beds the wife's young son and a male servant.

Round Two offers two homosexuals, the now-grown son and his tough young Cockney lover. And the former's married sister, a mother who takes up with a divorced Cockney lesbian who also is a mother.

Yes, and the middle-aged mother of the brother and sister leaves her husband and learns the joys of masturbation. Before that, the brother, his sister and her lover get tipsy on wine and nearly commit ensemble sex with the sister's husband.

All this lurks in "Cloud 9," a sure cure for insomnia devised by Caryl Churchill. An English import directed by two-time Tony winner Tommy Tune, it opened off-Broadway this week.

Despite some touching second-act moments, it doesn't seem destined for a long run. Indeed, at halftime you may feel like making a short run to the nearest pub and staying there until the all-clear sounds.

Billed as a comedy, it's respectively set in colonial Africa in 1880, then in Britain of 1980, the past in a plantation set of green louvered panels, the present in a large London park.

It revolves around a British family whose members only age 25 years despite the passage of 100. The slow aging may represent the slow decay of English society. Or the power of English tea.

(Must be strong tea. In Act One, a man plays the wife, a woman her son and a rag doll her daughter. In Act Two, a stout chap with a five o'clock shadow plays the lesbian's daughter, a brat named Kathy. But I digress.)

The African segment, done in tedious, leering high camp, has our colonial clan nattering on about Queen, country, the greatness of the British Empire and the appearances that must be upheld at all cost. In this era, homosexuality is a no-no, hypocrisy a yes-yes.

ABC takes first in Nielsen ratings

NEW YORK (AP) — Drawing big audiences for several first-run programs, including a made-for-TV movie called "The Best Little Girl in the World," ABC won the networks' weekly ratings race for the first time in a month, figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. show.

ABC tied CBS, the No. 1 network in the recently completed 1980-81 season, in last week's competition. CBS finished first the three previous weeks.

ABC listed five of the 10 highest-rated programs in the week ending May 17, and compiled an average rating of 17, compared to 16.2 for NBC — runnerup for the first time since early March — and 15.4 for CBS.

The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 17 percent of the nation's homes with television were tuned to ABC.

NBC's escape from the ratings cellar was aided by a first-run movie, "Meatballs," starring former "Saturday Night Live" player Bill Murray, a special called "TV's Censored Bloopers," and an episode of "Little House on the Prairie."

The rating for "Best Little Girl," the week's No. 1 show, was 25.5. Nielsen says that means of all the TV-equipped homes in the country, 25.5 percent saw at least part of the show.

Only one of the top 10 shows, CBS' "60 Minutes" in ninth place, was a rerun. Nineteen of the 55 programs rated during the week fell into that category.

CBS scored with a film biography of country star Tammy Wynette, "Stand By Your Man," which finished seventh, but most other first-run specials and movies broadcast during the week were only moderately successful.

"Ladies and Gentlemen ... Bob Newhart, Part II," on CBS was No. 26 for the week, with the concluding installment of NBC's two-part miniseries, "The Starmaker," 32nd. Part I was in 38th place.

CBS' broadcast of the Canadian production, "Escape from Iran," was 33rd.

CBS and ABC each had two shows among the week's five lowest-rated. The latest production in CBS' "Body Human" series was No. 51, followed by "B.J. and the Bear" on NBC, an ABC movie, "The Longest Yard," a CBS presentation of the classic "Les Miserables," and "Those Amazing Animals" on ABC.

Here are the week's 10 highest-rated shows:

Movie-"The Best Little Girl in the World," with a rating of 25.5 representing 19.8 million homes, and "Three's Company," 24.2 or 18.8 million, both ABC; Movie-"Meatballs," 23.6 or 18.4 million, NBC; "Too Close for Comfort," 22.4 or 17.4 million, ABC; "TV's Censored Bloopers," 22.3 or 17.3 million, NBC; Movie-"Stand By Your Man," CBS, and "Hart to Hart," ABC, both 21.6 or 16.8 million; "60 Minutes," 21.4 or 16.6 million, CBS; "Laverne and Shirley," 21.3 or 16.5 million, ABC, and "Little House on the Prairie," 20.7 or 16.1 million, NBC.

The next 10 programs:

"Love Boat," ABC; "CHiPs," NBC, and "M-A-S-H," CBS, tie; "Greatest American Hero," ABC; "Diff'rent Strokes," NBC, and "Happy Days," ABC, tie; "Real People," NBC; "Fantasy Island," ABC; "Trapper John, M.D.," CBS, and "Barney Miller," ABC.

Senate approves 'head shop' bill

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A Senate committee has approved a bill outlawing sale and possession of items — like spoons, scales, cigarette papers and balloons — used with illegal drugs.

The House-passed bill, sponsored by Sen. Grant Jones, D-Abilene, was approved 6-0 Wednesday and sent to the full Senate for consideration.

Opponents said the measure was unconstitutionally vague and overbroad. Mark Cohen, representing the Texas Tobacco Accessories Trade Association, said the bill could be used to penalize businesses that innocently sold such things as balloons.

John Duncan, head of the Texas Civil Liberties Union, said the bill was unnecessary.

"Commercially available paraphernalia has nothing to do with the use of drugs. It is nothing more than the chic adaptation of commonly available materials," he said. "The absence of a roach clip won't keep anyone from smoking a joint (marijuana cigarette)."

Relaxed Cliburn happy with current lifestyle

By ROBERT BARR
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Surviving in the crucible of intense initial competition to fight one last battle in the glare of national television attention, six young pianists will make it to the finals of the Van Cliburn International Piano Competition.

The finals, with pianist Andre Watts as host, will be broadcast from Fort Worth, Texas, at 6:30 p.m. CDT Sunday, May 31 on public televison stations. Broadcast times vary, so check local listings.

What's in it for the winner? A gold medal, $12,000 cash, two years of concert bookings and, with luck, the prospect of someday being happily idle, like the competition's namesake.

"I'm very happy with my life right now," says Cliburn, who has not played publicly since 1978.

When is the time to return to the concert stage? "When you want to," he says. When will that be? "Oh, I don't know. Soon." Will he perform as often as before? "I don't know."

Cliburn's career rose like a rocket in 1958 after he won the gold medal at the Tschaikovsky Competition in Moscow. He returned home to a ticker tape parade and a lucrative career as a concert star and recording artist.

It is difficult to imagine that any pianist today — at least an American pianist — could duplicate Cliburn's feat of becoming a national hero by winning a musical competition. For this year's Van Cliburn Competition finalists, there is still the chance of launching a less spectacular but nonetheless satisfying career.

Cliburn has no official connection with the Van Cliburn Competition, but says he "helps out" in any way he can. In a recent interview, he offered this advice to competitors: "Believe in yourself first of all. The only thing that is a primary consideration is that intense desire to communicate your thoughts to this music, to an audience."

And don't worry if you lose.

"There have been many prize winners who have had careers, and have not had careers. And sometimes those who did not proceed even to the finals have had wonderful careers."

Cliburn says he has been in concert halls as much as ever, only now he is in the audience.

"You get to be quietly creative; you work a lot; you're able to go to concerts," he says of his extended sabbatical. "I particularly like to go to the opera. I love singers, and really, I get so sad when I think of certain performances that I was not able to attend, and I wanted so much to be in attendance. Now it's wonderful to be able to go.

Connery may have winner with 'Outland'

By FRED YAGER
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The last 10 years have not been kind to Sean Connery in terms of movie box office success.

In 1971, the last time he played James Bond, he was voted one of the top 10 money-makers by American theater owners. But after six 007 films, Connery was weary of the secret agent role and yearned for more challenging parts. So he turned in his license to kill.

Since then, many of his recent films, including "Cuba," "The Great Train Robbery" and "Meteor," have died at the box office.

Even Connery knew his decision to play a variety of roles would be risky, but he wanted to take that chance. In 1972, he produced "The Offence," which he said, is still $800 from breaking even.

Now, at 51, Connery is taking another risk, starring in "Outland," a space movie that has no monsters, no fancy weaponry, no bright lucite domes and relies on human drama and emotion for its primary conflict.

"I'd read a lot of scripts," said Connery, "and found 'Outland' very refreshing. It's 'High Noon' in space, but a space I could relate to and understand. It's about people, not things."

In "Outland," Connery plays an outspoken federal marshal whose sense of justice clashes with officials running the mining establishment.

"He's an interesting character," Connery noted. "A cop with family problems who has a wife and kid about to leave him and he's stuck on this godforesaken spot trying to decide whether to make a move against the establishment.

"This is a different type of film than 'Star Wars,'" he added. "It's a detective story with twists and suspense. There are no ray guns. We used hardware I could comprehend, like shotguns. The living is uncomfortable, like it would be in any frontier mining community."

Although the focus in "Outland" is on human conflict, the film has its share of special effects, including a relatively new process called introvision which produces realistic visuals by manipulating perspective and illusion.

"It gives you the sense humans are dwarfed by the scale of the gigantic mine," Connery explained. "It's a very slow process using special lenses and rear screens. But when it's all fused together, optically corrected and graded, it's quite stunning."

Unlike Connery's recent box office failures, industry sources have predicted "Outland" will be a hit, judging from reaction from screening audiences and market and research surveys of what moviegoers want to see.

Although Connery would be as pleased as anyone with a financial success, that has little bearing on the films he decides to make.

"I like to be surprised," he stressed, "when it comes to chosing a role, and I'd rather do as many varied things as possible because it's much more stimulating and in the end more rewarding as an actor. It opens you to more criticism and problems, but these are outweighed by the results."

In the past year, Connery has made two other yet-to-be-released films, "Wrong Is Right" and "The Time Bandits."

'Breaker Morant' reveals quality of Australian films

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

BREAKER MORANT is the best evidence yet of the superior filmmaking that is coming out of Australia. Bruce Beresford had directed a flawless cast in a fascinating tale of court martial injustice during the Boer War. "Breaker" Morant (he's a horse breaker and poet from Australia) is accused of shooting Boer prisoners as well as a German missionary. Although they were only following Lord Kitchener's orders, they are doomed as a gesture toward achieving a peace conference. Beresford cleverly juxtaposes the trial with scenes depicting the testimony. It is a period drama, yet the parallels to Vietnam and other more recent wars are real and compelling. Rated PG because of the shootings.

Third hunger striker dies

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Raymond McCreesh, a 24-year-old convicted IRA gunman, claimed martyrdom as the 15th Irish nationalist to die in a hunger strike this century, and the third to succumb this month in the Maze Prison death fast for political prisoner status.

McCreesh died early today in the first hours of his 61st day without food, the latest casualty in the Irish Republican Army's often bloody crusade for a united Ireland.

"He had no fear of death," said his brother, the Rev. Brian McCreesh, a Roman Catholic priest who reportedly was at his bedside in the Maze Prison hospital when he died. "I saw him sometimes and I was utterly moved by the dignity he showed."

Raymond McCreesh was a guerrilla, or terrorist, the choice depends on how you view sectarian war in British-run Northern Ireland.

He fought for the outlawed IRA's militant Provisional wing in south Armagh, the nationalist stronghold known to British soldiers as "bandit country." More than 40 soldiers have been killed there in the last decade.

McCreesh followed hunger strikers Bobby Sands and Francis Hughes to grave in the death fast campaign aimed at forcing the British government to treat jailed guerrillas as political prisoners rather than criminals. Sands died May 5 in the 66th day of his fast and Hughes followed on May 12 in his 59th day without food.

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher has ruled out the prisoners' demands and says the strikers are going to their deaths in vain.

To his relatives in the south Armagh village of Camlough, McCreesh died a hero. They were fiercely proud of his last stand as a rebel against British rule and Protestant domination in Northern Ireland.

"The hunger strike has become a symbol of our own existence," said the Rev. McCreesh, referring to Northern Ireland's 500,000 Catholic minority. "We, too, are fighting for our right to be Irish."

Another brother, Malachy, said Raymond quit school when he was 16 and worked for a time as an apprentice sheet-metal worker in the staunchly Protestant town of Lisburn south of Belfast.

He said the McCreesh family was not involved in the anti-British Republican campaign, but Raymond was enraged by the "Bloody Sunday" killings of 13 Catholic civil rights marchers in Londonderry by British paratroopers Jan. 30, 1972.

The IRA said Raymond, the second youngest of eight children, joined the "Provos" soon after his 17th birthday in 1973. At about that time he left his job in Lisburn to work as a milkman, using his job to drive around the hills of south Armagh gathering intelligence on British troop movements.

Because his family had no known Republican associations, McCreesh was never suspected of being a Provo, although he was twice held briefly for questioning by police in the neighboring Irish Republic.

He broke cover only once — to march unmasked and in combat uniform at the funeral of two Provo friends blown up by their own bomb in Dec. 1975. Still he went undetected.

IRA sources said McCreesh was involved in several guerrilla ambushes.

His luck ran out when he and three other Provos moved in to ambush troops manning an observation post near Manorhamilton June 25, 1976.

One of the team hijacked a car to leave unattended in the road as a lure to bring the troops out of their post.

But the guerrillas did not know they had been spotted from another army observation post that called in helicopters and paratroopers to cordon off the ambush site.

As the paratroopers closed in, McCreesh and one of his comrades ran into an empty house and waged a gun battle with the soldiers.

After several hours, a priest persuaded them to give up and they walked out with their hands up. They fled back into the house when some paratroopers again fired, but they eventually surrendered to police.

McCreesh was held in police custody until March 1977, when he was sentenced to 14 years for attempted murder and possession of firearms.

McCreesh joined other convicted IRA men in the Maze who were waging a cellblock protest for political status. He refused to wear a prison uniform and used only a blanket to cover himself.

Later he joined the "dirty protest," refusing to wash and smearing his cell with his own excrement.

Pravda says war possible

MOSCOW (AP) — The United States and Israel threaten to spark war in the Middle East by planning to teach Soviet-ally Syria "a lesson," the Soviet Communist party newspaper Pravda charged today.

Under the headline, "Threat of a Major Conflict," Pravda said there were reports that Israel was moving artillery and armored units to the southern Lebanese border, and implied that a new Mideast conflict was part of Israel's plans to permanently annex the Golan Heights, captured from Syria in the 1967 Mideast war.

Israel has threatened military action to force Syria to withdraw Soviet-built, anti-aircraft SAM-6 missiles deployed in eastern Lebanon after Israeli warplanes shot down two Syrian helicopters over the region on April 28. U.S. envoy Philip C. Habib is currently in the Middle East, shuttling between Israel, Syria and Lebanon in attempts to end tensions.

"Tel Aviv's plans are wild and dangerous," Pravda said, adding that "the idea of 'teaching Syria a lesson' to weaken it accords the aims of both American and Israeli policy."

The Soviet charge came a day after an announcement that Jordan's King Hussein would visit the Soviet capital in the next 10 days, before the end of the month.

Hussein will be the third high-ranking Arab official to visit the Kremlin in the past two months in what many observers view as a Soviet campaign to regain lost diplomatic ground in the Middle East.

Kuwaiti foreign minister Ahmed al-Salah and Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy both visited Moscow last month.

Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev has been pushing for an international conference on the Middle East, and first deputy Soviet foreign minister Georgy M. Korniyenko visited Syria at the beginning of the missile crisis on an undisclosed mission.

At the same time, the Soviet media have been critical of Habib's diplomatic mission to the Middle East, saying it was organized to promote American interests at the expense of Syria and Lebanon.

"From the point of view of maintaining peace, Habib's mission gave nothing," the latest Pravda article said.

Radio vs Pen Pusher at scrimmage tonight

The Midland Lee Rebels end three weeks of spring training today at 7:30 p.m. with the annual Maroon-White scrimmage at Memorial Stadium, but a couple of ringers have been thrown in to give the controlled scrimmage and added flare.

ED CLEMENTS of KCRS will coach the Maroon team tonight while Terry Williamson of The Midland Reporter-Telegram will coach the White team. Both will call plays for their respective teams under the guidance of assistant coaches assigned to each.

"I think it's something different that the kids will enjoy and we are looking forward to the game," Dykes said of his added twist.

But the coaching gimmick aside, the scrimmage is the culmination of three weeks of hard work for the Rebels and it will be the last chance until fall for the coaches to evaluate the players. In that respect, the Rebels have a lot riding on the outcome.

"We've had a good spring with great effort and intensity by our kids. We've had great weather with an usually cool spring and I think that helped a great deal," Dykes noted. "We will film the scrimmage and it will be a good chance to evaluate a lot of people since there will be 22 starters on the field at all times.

"I THINK we have the squads evenly divided, and I hope to see a good game with a lot of electricity in the air. We would really like to see the kids get after it."

Dykes said the scrimmage will consist of four 10-minute quarters. There will be no kickoffs and all punts will be fair caught with no returns.

Lee's freshmen ended spring training last Friday, but Dykes was pleased in that area also.

"This freshmen class showed signs of being a good one, and we were pleased with the way they performed. They had a scrimmage Friday and I think they really performed well," Dykes said.

THE REBELS have several players returning both offensively and defensively, but the lines on both units were wiped out by graduation. That could be a key area for Lee fans to keep their eyes on tonight. Dykes has been very pleased with line prospects this spring, but many do not have a lot of experience.

Thursday night's offensive units will consist of the following:

White Team

Quarterbacks: Bart Ryan, Paul Cox, Scott Slawson. Fullbacks: Calvin Riggs, Charlie Boyd, Leonard Freeman. Tailbacks: Darrin Williams, Tommy Joe DeWitt, Carlton Johnson, Kevin Taylor, Scooter Carter. Flankers: Kevin Sparks, Greg Woodberry, Mark Bowen. Tight Ends: Kenneth Hardison, John Schrode. Split Ends: Lane Marks, Luther Johnson, Brent Snyder, Robert Woodruff. Tackles: Lee Power, Felix Hall, Len Bridgeman. Guards: Jim Walley, Tim Woodlee, Cary Stotts, Anthony Adams. Centers: Tim Murray, Kerry Robertson.

Maroon Team

Coaches: Ed Clements, head coach. Assistants: Jack Tayrien, Van Tom Whatley, Earl Miller, Randal Smith, J.C. Gotcher, Tommy Chambers.

Cubs close stand with 6-3 win

BY TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Midland's Cubs departed for Tulsa by charter bus at 9 a.m. today, but they left behind their first winning homestand of the Texas League season as a result of a 6-3 victory Wednesday at Cubs Stadium on lefthander Norm Churchill's six-hitter.

Centerfielder Mel Hall and catcher Mike Diaz furnished the offensive impetus for the Cubs' sixth win in the 10-game stand which left Manager Roy Hartsfield feeling his team was at least competitive as the first half race heads into the final month.

"Some of the guys have started hitting and our defense has improved. All I'd like is a little more consistency out of our starting pitching."

THERE WERE no complaints in the latter department Wednesday as Churchill gave up three unearned runs on a bases loaded double by Jim Rothford in the sixth inn that cut Midland's lead to 4-3, but otherwise was consistency personified in notching his fourth win in six decisions.

"Yes, it was my best game of the season," said the 6-4, 23-year-old from Tampa, Fla. "After the error in the sixth, I lost my concentration and I was lucky to get out of it with only three runs."

For the first five innings Churchill's sinker had the Captains pounding the ball into the ground, "but then in the sixth I was throwing fast balls and they were laying back waiting for it. Mike (Diaz) made me go back to mixing up my pitches and I was okay the rest of the way. But I got great defensive support.

HALL turned in the play of the night in the second as Paul Szymarek poled a long ball into the right center alley. Hall made a skidding lunge at full speed, threw his glove across his body and somehow snatched the ball a couple of feet from the turf.

Hall appeared headed for a dreadful night at the plate. Scott Garrelts, 1-6, fanned him his first three times up, but when he came up in the sixth with Shreveport breathing down the Cubs' neck, Mike Shepston and Dave Owen were on second and third as a result of singles and an error on a pick off attempt.

Hall responded in the clutch by drilling the ball to center for a two-run single. When the ball got through Greg Baker, Mel gave the crowd a thrill by trying to make it all the way to the plate, only to be thrown out.

However, it gave the Cubs a 6-3 lead, more than enough to win, the way Churchill was throwing.

Mike Diaz got the Cubs off to a 2-0 lead in the second when he followed a walk to Jack Upton with his fourth homer, blasting a change up over the left field fence. In the third Midland score two more. Randy LaVigne singled, Mike Diaz walked and then Garrelts uncorked two wild pitches, plating one run while Shepston's fly to center accounted for the second tally.

Players hot over 'Take-it-or-leave-it'

New owner's proposal doesn't thrill players

NEW YORK (AP) — A negotiator for the Major League Baseball Players Association said Wednesday that if the latest owners' initiative was a "take-it-or-leave-it" proposal, the players will leave it.

Don Fehr, general counsel to the Players Association, said the cover letter introducing the owners' surprise proposal Tuesday "does not provide the basis for negotiations, if I read it correctly. The cover letter says that nothing has been held back and that it (the proposal) removes the need for 11th-hour negotiations."

Fehr said the owners didn't offer to continue bargaining but offered to meet "to answer questions." Then Fehr added: "If this is take-it-or-leave it then, in my opinion, the players are not going to take it."

Steve Rogers, player representative for Montreal, said Wednesday by phone from San Diego that all the clubs were being polled Tuesday and Wednesday to reaffirm their support for the players' planned action.

"We wanted to show that we thought the owners' new amendments on compensation were insignificant and not aimed at correcting the problem," Rogers said. "The players dismissed it (the proposal) as word games. The owners still see the need to punish the team that signs a free agent rather than help a team that loses one."

Wednesday was an off-day for the baseball talks that are moving dangerously closer to the players' May 29 strike deadline.

Negotiations are set for Thursday morning in the office of the Player Relations Committee, the bargaining panel for the owners.

Originally, federal mediator Kenneth E. Moffett had scheduled talks for Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of this week. But Ray Grebey, chief negotiator for the 26 clubs, traveled to Washington Wednesday for talks with the National Labor Relations Board.

Last week, the players filed a complaint with the NLRB, requesting that the owners be forced to turn over financial data that could be helpful in resolving the only issue in the dispute: free-agent compensation.

If the players gain the financial records, they would need time to study them. So the players also have sought a federal court order to extend the May 29 strike deadline, which was locked into last year's May 22 agreement that allowed the players to strike by June 1, if the owners had implemented their compensation plan into the contract.

Fehr wouldn't say whether the Players Association would have a proposal in response to the owners' Tuesday initiative.

Even though the owners added some statistical criteria to the appearance criteria for free agents requiring compensation, the new proposal would still classify 50 percent of the players as "ranking" free agents whose old team would receive a major league player in return.

To meet another player request — that veterans be exempted from compensation — the owners said a free agent with 14 years experience would only get an amateur draft choice as compensation. Players in this category include: Tom Seaver, Steve Carlton, Phil Niekro, Rusty Staub, Pete Rose, Gaylord Perry, Joe Morgan, Tommy John, Carl Yastrzemski, Rick Monday, Don Sutton, Willie Stargell, Woodie Fryman and Rod Carew.

The Players Association's dislike for a secret re-entry draft and hidden information on "ranking" free agents remained in the owners' proposal. "If they're doing things in an open, above-board manner, there's no reason to hide anything," said Fehr.

Former Indy 500 winner Mario Andretti laughs with a friend during practice at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway earlier this month. Andretti's car, qualified by Wally Dallenbech while Andretti missed last weekend's qualifying due to a conflict with the Belgian Grand Prix, will start to the back of the 33 car field in Sunday's race.

Mario backs field again for Indy

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — For the second time in his last three Indianapolis 500s, veteran Mario Andretti will find himself starting Sunday's race at the back of the 33-car field.

A conflict between his Grand Prix driving schedule, which kept him out of the 1979 race, and his committment to drive Indy-style cars sent him to the rear of the lineup.

THE 5-FOOT-6 driver was unable to qualify his own car for the race after rain washed out most of the opening weekend of qualifications. He had to drive for Alfa Romeo in the Belgium Grand Prix last weekend and his Indy car was qualified by old friend Wally Dallanbach.

Dallenbach, retired as an active racer since mid-1979, put the car in the middle of the third row. But race rules require the placing of a car at the back of the field when the driver who qualified it is replaced.

There is a way to get around the rule. Dallenbach could start the race in Pat Patrick's Wildcat and be replaced during a pit stop without penalty, but Andretti said no consideration was given to that possibility.

"WALLY'S RETIRED. He just qualified the car absolutely as a favor to Pat, his friend and former car owner, and to me, just as a friend," Andretti said. "We just brought him out of retirement and you could see he had no other intentions."

Andretti was in the same situation in 1978 when Mike Hiss qualified his Penske-Cosworth and Andretti finished 12th after experiencing engine problems.

HE SAYS the poor starting position doesn't call for quick heroics in an effort to get to the front.

"I'll just try to stay out of trouble at the start," he said. "I'll tell you that. There's nothing more disappointing than when you have a good car and jeopardize your chances because of early mistakes. Early mistakes are very easily made here. So I'm going to try and do my part. I'm going to start just as easily as I can."

The U.S. Auto Club scheduled a hearing for today on owner Rolla Vollstedt's appeal of his car's disqualification. The car, driven by Jerry Sneva, was scratched by the stewards Tuesday on a protest by driver Jerry Karl involving a charge that an illegal mechanical device had been used to boost the car's speed.

The conflict that placed Andretti in the back of the field may not exist next year. The 41-year-old Italian native, said Wednesday he's growing weary of the hectic schedule his double committment produces. He said he is seriously considering staying in the United States to run the Indy circuit in 1982.

"I haven't made up my mind, but I'm definitely thinking about the future. I'm going to look at the situation later on in July or August," said Andretti, who won the world driving championship for Team Lotus in Grand Prix competition in 1978. "I just may come here (the U.S.) and see if I can race until I'm 80."

Rebels must win twice at Lewisville

Lee faces playoff elimination

By MIKE CRUVER
Sports Writer

Midland Lee's baseball team is in big trouble.

After playing what must have been their poorest game of the year in losing 4-0 on the home field, the District 5-5A champs find themselves down 1-0 to Lewisville in the baseball bi district best-of-three series. Now, the Rebels are faced with the unenviable task of beating the Farmers twice on their home field to pull the final district title out of the fire.

FRIDAY'S FIRST game is set to get underway at 1 p.m. If the Rebels win that game, there will be a second game. Should the Rebels lose the first contest, well, they will just get an earlier start back to the Tall City.

Following Tuesday's performance, Lee coach Ernie Johnson was very displeased with the way his troops played. Johnson said, "We weren't ready to play. I don't know why but during batting practice I could have predicted this outcome." Johnson added, "I have already had a little talk with the players and I am going to talk to them a little more."

NO MATTER what is said, the Rebels are going to have to improve their on field performance dramatically if they expect to stay in the playoff picture past Friday. Tuesday, Lee played like little leaguers: silly base running errors (getting doubled off first on a foul ball pop to the catcher down the firstbase line), swinging away on 3-0 counts and popping up when they have the take sign and the pitcher has just walked two straight batters.

If Lee can play a more intelligent game and the pitchers can keep the Farmers from hitting the ball out of the park, the Rebels stand a chance of winning.

Monday, Alan Koonce went the distance but two bad pitcher haunted him. In the first, with a two-strike count, Koonce throw a fastball that got over the plate that lefty Chris Hall lifted over the leftfield fence for a home run. In the fourth, Koonce got a fastball up to high to Kevin Miller. Miller responded by hammering the pitch over the fence in left for a two-run homer. Without those two big blows, Koonce could have been pitching shutout ball. As it was, he wound up losing his third game of the year despite giving up only five hits, walking none and striking out three.

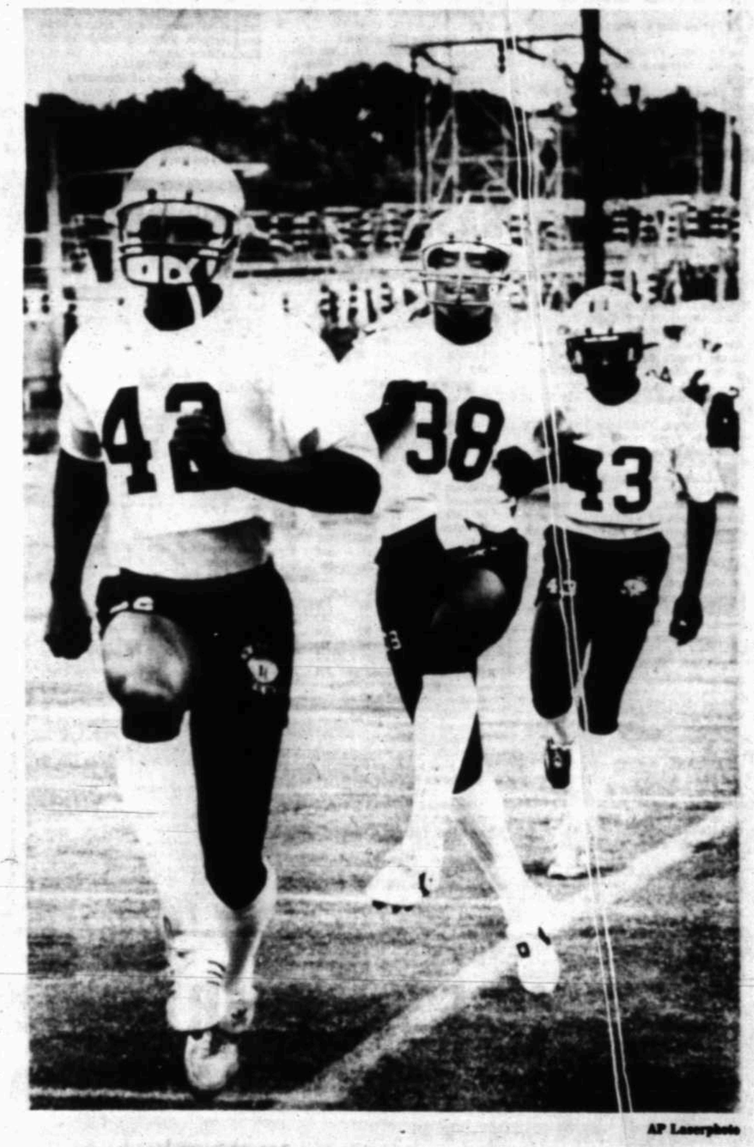

RANDY VELARDE, 7-1 on the season, is the pitcher Johnson will send to the mound Friday. In 37.2 innings of work, he has struck out 31 and walked 24 with a 1.69 ERA.

Lefty Mike Crusoe, 10-3 with a no-hitter to his credit, will open on the mound for the Farmers. He has compiled an ERA of 1.32 in 68.1 innings of pitching. Crusoe was the losing pitcher in Saturday's District 6-5A playoff game with Dennison.

The Rebels also need to get their bats warmed up. Bron Beal and Doug Smith combined to hold Lee to an infield single by Koonce (the ball hit Beal on the leg and it is suspected he broke it) and a solid single to left by Ron Smedley. Outside of those two hits, the Rebels managed only one solid blow. Bill Dern nailed a pitch on the head that was flagged down in deep centerfield on a great play by Rod Fearnside.

Farmer coach Mike Campbell is excited, "We won on the road. All we need to do now is win one out of two at home."

Coach Johnson put the situation in perspective for Lee by saying, "Our backs are against the wall."

'The Big Shootout' greatest day in Texas sports

DALLAS (AP) — Dec. 6, 1969. The Texas Sports Writers Association has deemed that date the greatest day in the state's sports history.

If anyone has forgotten, that was the day of the "The Big Shootout" between the universities of Texas and Arkansas for the national football championship.

Ironically, the game was played in Fayetteville, Ark., and not the Lone Star State. But a 20-member selection committee of the TSWA decided that dramatic gridiron face-off was the highlight of Texas sports events.

THE ASSOCIATION had a slew of sports events to call its top ten of Texas sports — dating all the way back to Dec. 26, 1908, when Jack Johnson won the world heavyweight boxing title from Australia's Tommy Burns.

When Texas entered the field against Arkansas in 1969, Darrell Royal's team was undefeated and untied, ranked No. 1 in the nation with 19 straight wins.

The Razorbacks weren't slouches either. Arkansas also was undefeated and united, with 15 consecutive wins.

The game was a toss-up until the final period when the Longhorns came from behind and barely nipped the Razorbacks, 15-14. President Richard Nixon was in the jammed crowd of 45,000.

The TSWA called the game "the perfect climax to college football's centennial season."

The association tagged Aug. 4, 1945 as the second-most important date — when Byron Nelson racked up his eleventh consecutive golf tournament victory.

TWO DATES tied for third place — Aug. 8, 1932, when Mildred "Babe" Didrikson won her third medal in the Olympics, and Nov. 30, 1935, when SMU beat TCU 20-14 and captured the national championship and an invitation to the Rose Bowl.

Here are the rest of the association's top picks:

— No. 5, Sept. 28, 1924 — Roger Hornsby finished the National League baseball season with a .424 batting average, highest in big league history.

— No. 6, Jan. 16, 1971 — Dallas Cowboys won their first Super Bowl game, 24-3 over Miami.

— No. 7, April 9, 1965 — Houston Astrodome, sport's first domed stadium, opens.

— No. 8, (tie), Jan. 2, 1922 — Texas Aggies upset Centre College in the "Dixie Bowl," 22-14.

— No. 8 (tie), Dec. 3, 1949 — Notre Dame barely beat SMU 27-20, in one of college football's greatest-ever games.

— No. 10, June 11, 1950 — Ben Hogan came back from a near-fatal automobile accident to win the National Open golf tournament.

Rules trial may threaten future of pro sports

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An attorney for the National Football League told jurors in an antitrust trial today that the Oakland Raiders' challenge of NFL rules is a threat to the future of professional sports.

"We think the principle te plaintiffs are espousing in this case is as damaging to professional sports as drinking mercury-poisoned water is to people and animals," said attorney Patrick Lynch.

Lynch, in an opening statement which followed a full day of speeches for the opposing side, said: "This case attacks one of the basic keystones of the business of professional sports."

He argued that league football requires the cooperation of all teams which sign up to follow the rules.

Lynch argued that the case hinges on a violation of contract law, with Oakland Raiders managing partner Al Davis trying to break his agreement to keep the club in Oakland, and not a violation of antitrust law by the NFL.

"I submit to you that the antitrust claim in this case (by the Raiders and the Los Angeles Coliseum Commission) is a fabrication," Lynch said, "a trumped up claim that the city of Los Angeles dreamed up to take away Oakland's team, to take away Oakland's football rights like they took the San Fernando Valley's water rights."

Of Davis' claim that the NFL is restraining trade by barring him from moving the Raiders to Los Angeles, Lynch said: "Nobody held a gun to Mr. Davis' head and said, 'You must join this league.' Mr. Davis made the choice."

As today's session opened, jurors were introduced to Georgia Frontiere, owner of the Los Angeles Rams, who sat in the back row of the spectator section flanked by her husband Dominic and Rams General Manager Don Klosterman.

Davis and NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle sat separated only by an aisle in a front row but did not look at each other.

Attorneys for the Rams and the Oakland Coliseum were to speak after Lynch, and testimony was to begin Thursday.

The jury will decide the validity of an NFL rule that requires approval of three-fourths of the league's 28 owners for any franchise move.

Dodgers win third in a row

By The Associated Press

In other Texas League action, Tulsa beat Amarillo, 5-2, San Antonio defeated Arkansas, 6-2, and El Paso whipped Jackson, 9-1.

George Wright had a two-run home run to help the Tulsa Drillers take a 5-2 victory over the Amarillo Gold Sox.

The winning pitcher was Dock Neilson, 1-0. Tim Hamm, 4-5, was the loser.

Dave Sax drove in two runs with a single in the first inning as the San Antonio Dodgers beat the Arkansas Travelers, 6-2.

Arkansas pulled of a triple play in the eighth inning. With the bases loaded, Gotay Mills caught a sinking line drive and threw to shortstop Rafael Santana covering third. Santana relayed the ball to Jeff Doyle for the third out at second base. The San Antonio runners thought Mills had trapped the ball and were caught off guard.

Steve Marsden, 4-3, was the winning pitcher. Kerry Burchett, 2-4, was the loser.

Impressive field slated for meet

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Ten track stars from Cuba, including Olympic medalists Alberto Juantorena, Silvio Leonard and Alejandro Casanas, are expected to compete in the Brooks Invitational meet at the University of California on June 13, Cal Athletic Director Dave Maggard said Wednesday.

Juantorena, an Olympic champion in 1976, is expected to run in the 800-meter event at Berkeley against a field including U.S. stars Don Paige and James Robinson. Leonard will be facing James Sanford and Carl Lewis in the sprint events, and hurdler Casanas will go against world record holder Renaldo Nehemiah.

White Sox free agents are doing their jobs

The Chicago White Sox signed free agents Carlton Fisk and Ron LeFlore before the season to improve their chances of contending for the American League West championship, and so far they are doing just that.

Fisk started the season in dramatic fashion with home runs to defeat his former team, the Boston Red Sox, and although he has slumped lately, his bat was hot again Wednesday night as he collected four hits, including the game-winner, as Chicago's beat Toronto 6-5.

LEFLORE, WHO had 97 stolen bases last year for Montreal, has been less impressive, hitting just .216, but his 11 steals are third-best in the league.

LeFlore had two thefts in the victory over the Blue Jays, including one in the eighth inning that set up Fisk's tie-breaking hit.

The victory, combined with first-place Oakland's seventh straight defeat, a 5-3 loss to Boston, left the White Sox in second place, only three games out of first place. In other AL games, Baltimore beat California 5-3, Seattle tripped Cleveland 3-1, Detroit whipped Texas 8-4, New York edged Kansas City 5-4 in 11 innings and Milwaukee defeated Minnesota 6-1.

"I'VE BEEN in a mild slump," said Fisk. "The last four or five days I haven't been swinging the bat well at all. I got four hits today, but I still feel I can go at the ball a lot better than I did tonight."

In the eighth, LeFlore reached first when shortstop Alfredo Griffin made a hurried throw and then moved into scoring position with his second stolen base.

"It was a pressure situation for stealing a base. I had my mind made up to go," said LeFlore. "I think (Joey) McLaughlin was rushing his delivery somewhat and that in turn made me look at him a little bit longer to see if I could find some mistake that he was making.

"When Fisk came up I think I had him to the point where I thought I could get a good jump."

Ed Farmer, 1-2, picked up the victory in relief of Richard Dotson, while McLaughlin, 0-2, the fourth Blue Jays pitcher, absorbed the loss. Lamarr Hoyt relieved Farmer with two outs in the eighth and went on to record his fifth save.

DAMASO GARCIA had a two-run homer for the Blue Jays to tie the game 5-5 in the seventh.

"After they tied it in the seventh the only thing I was thinking was how to get LeFlore on base," said White Sox Manager Tony LaRussa.

With that accomplished, Fisk came through.

"It feels good to not only get some hits, but to get a hit that helped win it," he said.

Brewers 6, Twins 1

Jim Gantner had four hits and Ed Romero knocked in two runs, including the go-ahead score with a sacrifice fly in the seventh inning, as Milwaukee handed Minnesota its seventh straight loss and 12th in the last 14 games.

The Brewers, who have won five in a row, also got another good game from reliever Rollie Fingers, who saved his eighth game, including four in the current streak, and lowered his ERA to 1.01.

"He's been as good or better than I imagined," Manager Buck Rodgers said of the lanky righthander.

Yankees 5, Royals 4

Graig Nettles hit a bases-loaded, 385-foot single in the bottom of the 11th inning to give New York a sweep of its three-game series with Kansas City.

The game-winning blow came after intentional walks to Reggie Jackson and Jerry Mumphrey loaded the bases with one out.

"I was shocked when they walked Mumphrey," Nettles said. "With his sore thigh, he was a perfect double play possibility."

Orioles 5, Angels 3

Gary Roenicke, batting .538 in the last seven games, drove in two runs with a double and sacrifice fly to lead Baltimore to its eighth straight victory.

Dennis Martinez won his fifth straight game against one loss for the Orioles, while Don Baylor and Rod Carew homered for California.

Mariners 3, Indians 1

Brian Allard and Shane Rawley combined on a five-hitter, Tom Paciorek doubled home the go-ahead run and Jeff Burroughs homered as Seattle beat Cleveland's Len Barker in his first outing after his perfect game.

Barker retired the first four hitters before a single by Bruce Bochte stopped the pitcher's streak of 31 straight outs, two short of the American League record of 33 by Steve Busby and John Montague.

Allard allowed only four hits in seven innings for his first victory in two decisions.

Tigers 8, Rangers 4

Larry Parrish drove in three runs with a homer and a double and Al Cowens delivered a key two-run single to back Jack Morris' five-hitter for Detroit.

Cowens' two-out hit in the sixth inning changed a 3-2 Texas lead to 4-3 Detroit and the Tigers put the game away with four runs in the seventh.

Morris, 5-3, has won four games in a row.

Red Sox 5, A's 3

Oakland lost its seventh in a row after a 25-8 start when Boston's Rick Miller stroked a two-run single to break a 3-3 tie in the seventh inning.

Dwayne Murphy and Mitchell Page homered for Oakland.

Horns' Littlefield dies

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — For more than 40 years the name of Clyde Littlefield was synonymous with track and field excellence at the University of Texas in Austin.

Littlefield was the Texas track coach from 1920 through 1961. His teams won 25 Southwest Conference championships and, earlier this year, was elected to the U.S. Track and Field Hall of Fame.

Littlefield died Wednesday at his home. He was 88.

His athletic career includes record-breaking performances as an athlete, as well as his acclaimed coaching achievements.

As a 185-pound University of Texas athlete, Littlefield was a four-year letterman in three sports — football, basketball and track — and he even pitched two baseball games before giving it up because he did not have enough time.

In four years as a football running back he led the Longhorns to a record of 28-5. His senior year of 1915 was the first year of the Southwest Conference.

In basketball the Longhorns were 37-0 over three years, and Littlefield was captain of the 1914-15 team. Years later he was picked on the Helms Foundation All-America basketball team for that year.

Littlefield also was the best hurdler in the SWC at the time and once equalled the world record in that event.

Pittsburgh's Easler pumping life into Pirates

By The Associated Press

With Dave Parker on the disabled list, Willie Stargell playing sparingly and Jason Thompson struggling, the Pittsburgh Pirates' offense hasn't been in the best of health this season.

BUT MIKE Easler has suddenly pumped some life into it.

Easler, who has replaced the more celebrated Parker in right field, is hitting .340 with five home runs and 20 RBI. Two of his round-trippers came Wednesday night, along with a double, as he led the Pirates to a 6-1 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

"I feel no pressure," said Easler. "I just want to do what I can do and help the team win."

To keep his mind up to it, he has pasted the photographs of two great hitters on each side of his locker — Ted Williams and Rod Carew.

"I LIKE to keep the best on my mind," Easler said. "These pictures help keep me up. That's what I used to do in the minor leagues. It's a psychological thing. You've got to concentrate. And that's what I try to do."

In other National League games, it was Houston 4, St. Louis 3 in 11 innings; New York 4, San Francisco 3 in 10 innings; Cincinnati 10, Chicago 7; Montreal 6, San Diego 2, and Los Angeles 3, Philadelphia 2 in 10 innings.

Easler's three-run homer in the first inning gave Pittsburgh a 3-0 lead off losing pitcher Bob Walk, 1-3. Easler's blast followed walks to Tim Foli and Jason Thompson.

THE BRAVES scored a run in the second on an RBI forceout by Rafael Ramirez, but the Pirates came back with two more runs in the bottom of the inning and then capped their scoring in the third on Easler's solo blast.

Winner Rick Rhoden, 5-0, who had missed two prior starts with a sore elbow, allowed six hits, struck out four and walked one in six innings. He left because of fatigue and was replaced starting the seventh by Enrique Romo, who earned his fifth save while pitching hitless ball over the last three innings.

Astros 4, Cardinals 3

Rafael Landestoy walloped a two-out RBI triple in the 11th inning, leading Houston over St. Louis. Landestoy's hit came off relief ace Bruce Sutter, 1-2, the third St. Louis pitcher and gave the victory to Joe Niekro.

Niekro, 5-3, pitched the first 10 innings and scattered 10 hits while striking out eight. Joe Sambito pitched the last inning for the Astros, recording his third save.

Sutter retired Art Howe and Danny Heep to start the Houston 11th before Alan Ashby singled and scored on Landestoy's triple. The hit broke a 3-3 tie that existed since the third inning, when the Astros deadlocked the game on Jose Cruz's RBI triple.

Mets 4, Giants 3

Alex Trevino's sacrifice fly with the base loaded in the 10th inning lifted New York over San Francisco, snapping a nine-game losing streak for the Mets.

Lee Mazzilli's leadoff walk triggered the winning rally off Greg Minton, 1-2. Mazzilli took second on Joel Youngblood's single and Dave Kingman's single loaded the bases. Trevino then hit a fly to center, driving in Mazzilli. Jeff Reardon, 1-0, pitched out of a jam in the bottom of the inning to gain the victory.

"I was ahead on the count 0-2 to Kingman and I was looking for the strikeout, but I got it up," Minton said. "I was high to Trevino, too. When guys like him beat me on a long fly, I'm doing something wrong."

Reds 10, Cubs 7

Ray Knight belted his fourth homer of the year, then walked with the bases loaded to break a 5-5 tie in the seventh inning to send Cincinnati past Chicago. The loss was the eighth straight for the struggling Cubs.

The Reds trailed 5-4 going into the seventh but loaded the bases on an error and a pair of singles. Dave Concepcion singled to score the tying run before Knight drew a walk from loser Lee Smith, 1-3, to drive in the winning run.

Concepcion knocked in his second run with a double in the ninth and Doug Bair, a relief pitcher, then hit his first major league homer, a three-run shot, to complete the scoring.

"My feeling was that this might be the day they would break out of their slump," Knight said of the Cubs. "When they score five runs (in the first inning), you have some playing to do. But we can come back against anybody."

Expos 6, Padres 2

Andre Dawson hit two solo homers and scored four runs and Willie Montanez singled in two runs to lead Montreal over San Diego. Steve Rogers, 4-3, snapped a personal two-game losing streak with an eight-hitter. Loser Steve Mura, 1-6, surrendered five walks and four hits before leaving in the fifth.

"I was lunging too much, so I made a minor adjustment in my swing," said Dawson. "All I'm trying to do now is cut down on my strikeouts and hit the ball hard."

Dodgers 3, Phillies 2

Rick Monday slugged a leadoff homer in the 10th inning to break a tie and lead Los Angeles over Philadelphia. Monday, batting for winning pitcher Steve Howe, 4-1, slugged his second homer of the season, off loser Tug McGraw, 1-4.

Howe had relieved Dodger starter Burt Hooton while McGraw took over in the ninth from Steve Carlton.

Philadelphia's Pete Rose surpassed Henry Aaron's all-time National League record for career at-bats in the fifth inning with his 11,629th.

NHL overcomes many problems

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Despite inflation in the two nations in which his league does business, despite escalating ticket prices and no network television contract, National Hockey League President John Ziegler walks around with a smile on his face.

Why?

Why not?

"This year" says Ziegler, "attendance was up a little over 2 percent at a time when the economy is down in many of our cities. The hockey fan remains loyal and is sticking with our sport as a main form of entertainment."

Ticket prices are skyrocketing in some places in some sports, but Ziegler said that is not a problem in the NHL.

"We are always concerned with pricing," he says. "But our increases have been a little behind the rate of inflation. When you look at it market-to-market, more times the increase in price is a catchup. It may not be easy for the individual fan to take but our fans pretty much have stuck with us."

What about attracting new fans by expanding, Ziegler was asked?

"In the past selection of franchise cities, in some of the areas we tried to push a product where it wasn't wanted," he says. "I can't say how long we'll stick with 21 teams but expansion is not a topic of discussion right now."

The major subject in hockey this summer will be the negotiations between the owners and players regarding free agency. The league and the players association have a collective bargaining agreement which the players can terminate as of September 1982.

The NHLPA wants total free agency, or something comparable to baseball's market, in which only draft picks are used for compensation.

The owners say they won't accept anything like the baseball plan.

If they can't reach agreement on free agent movement, termination and a strike would appear imminent, though not next season.

Ziegler fully realizes that a free-agent shopping spree like that held in baseball each year could destroy the NHL. As it is, there aren't all that many healthy franchises.

"We don't have access to the figures but I would say about one-third to 40 percent of our teams made money this year," Ziegler notes. "Another third probably broke even.

"Two or three lost substantial money. If it's just one, it's too many. But at least now, a team can finish last and not go broke."

Cubs close homestand

As the Cubs leave for 10 games on the road, the 6-4 record was encouraging, but could have been sensational. The lone loss to Tulsa was in 11 innings while all three defeats at the hands of Shreveport were by one run, one of which went 11 innings when Midland rallied for four runs in the ninth to tie it.

The Cubs are 4-11 in one-run games, which is how close they are to being in contention.

BRUIN BREWIN'S—Javier Fierro was the only Cub with two hits and one knocked the lights out on the scoreboard, a double that hit the overhang light above the Midland National Bank sign to the left of the scoreboard proper...Churchill's third complete game, second in his last three starts, droppd his ERA from 6.17 to 4.91...Third baseman Carmello Martinez, snagged Szymarek's vicious liner in the fourth, and first baseman Upton dug Owen's throw out of the dirt on Rothford's grounder in the second to contribute big defensive plays to the cause....Midland is now 12-12 at home...

NCAA, CFL clash over television grid contract

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Already at loggerheads over voting on an NCAA referendum for a new college football television contract, the NCAA and College Football Association clashed again on the subject Wednesday, with each side implying the other doesn't know what it's talking about.

Charles M. Neinas, CFA executive director, told The Associated Press that 53 of the 62 CFA members had followed his urging and abstained from voting on the NCAA referendum.

But after lengthy consultation among its staff members, the NCAA fired back, saying only 42 CFA members had voted, with only 32 abstaining.

It marks the second time in less than a week that Neinas and the NCAA have disputed each other's figures.

Neinas said last Friday, before the votes were tabulated, that 50 CFA members had followed his instruction to abstain. The NCAA responded the next day, saying only 23 had done so, apparently not counting ballots recieved outside a specified voting period.

The referendum dealt with a "series of principles" for negotiating what promises to be the richest NCAA television contract ever.

Neinas had urged CFA members to return the ballot indicating an abstention for "legal reservation."

The CFA includes all major football conferences and independents except the Pacific-10 and the Big Ten.

The CFA, a newcomer on the collegiate sports scene, is believed to be trying to wrest at least partial control of football matters from the National Collegiate Athletic Associaton, which has always been the college sport's ruling body.

It was felt the "series of principles" were not at issue as much as the CFA is attempting to take a more militant stance against NCAA control of college football.

The "series of principles" covered a great number of details, including examining the possibility of using two networks for televising NCAA games, where ABC has held exclusive rights since 1966.

The NCAA's current contract with ABC expires after the 1981 season with renogtiations on a new contract expected to start soon.

Many highlights on White River trip

KENNY REDIN'S
Fin & Feather

Fresh friend trout, Ozark baked beans and Arkansas hushpuppies cooked over an open fire along the banks of Arkansas' scenic White River is just one of the many highlights you'll encounter on a float trip down the White River.

The White River below Bull Shoals flows through some of the most beautiful country in mid-America, and it clear, cold waters abound with heavy-bodied rainbow and brown trout.

But the real charm of fishing here is the leisurely way in which it is done. Comfortably relaxed in a deck chair in a wide 20-foot John boat, you drift with the current and experience a different variety of fishing action and scenery with each new bend of the river.

FISHING VARIES with the amount of water flowing out of the Bull Shoals Lake, and there is no way that water conditions can be predicted in advance. As a rule though, everyone on these floats catch fish, and the odds of taking a trophy rainbow or brown are excellent. At the end of the float, guests are taken back to the lodge by van, or if water conditions are right, they can make the trip back up river by boat.

Fishing is practical throughout the year, but March through October is the most pleasant period.

There are many ways to go on this trip. Most trips consist of two full days of fishing with that famous shore lunch with fried trout. Talk about a meal fit for a king, the White River shore lunch is out-of-this-world. It's no problem catching eating-size trout and that makes for a delicious lunch, topped with trimmings.

THE FLOAT trip normally starts several hundred yards downstream from Bull Shoals dam. The float is a slow one, allowing anglers plenty of time to participate in trout fishing. Normally, the fishing guide will instruct his customers to cast downstream, let the bait idle to the bottom and drift with the current. There's very little casting, as the bait drifts about as slow as the boat does. About the only casts the angler has to make is when he's caught a fish or when he sees a good looking eddy in the river.

The bait varies from month to month. Small flies, salmon eggs and tiny spinners are excellent baits from now until mid-August. Larger baits and spinners are used in late August through October. The fish are moving more, hungrier and much more aggressive in tle colder months.

Besides battling a brown or rainbow trout, the scenery is what captures the angler's imagination. Colors of the trees and shrubs that line ths shores of the White River are spectacular. It's not uncommon to round a bend in the river and witness a mother raccoon and her cubs playing along the river banks.

The birdlife is out-of-sight. Many species of birds filter through the trees and walk the river banks in search of frogs, crayfish and aquatic insects. There's never a boring moment on these peaceful White River float trips.

THE INITIAL float trip consists of some 18 to 20 miles of floating downstream. It takes about eight hours to make the trip. Out-of-state anglers must purchase a $7.50 fishing license and a $3 Federal trout stamp before fishing.

If anyone is interested in the White River trip, there is a group of anglers leaving San Antonio by private charter bus on June 11. Members of the Texas Sportsman Club have this trip booked, which features two full days of trout fishing, the famous shore lunch and overnight accomadations at the Bay Breeze Resort-Motel. Total package cost is $370, which does not include fishing licenses or rod and reels. All bait and terminal tackle will be provided.

For more information on this trip, you may write: Texas Sportsman Club, 8000 Broadway, San Antonio, Texas, 78209 or call 512-824-5967.

Pleasant Coloney sharp

NEW YORK (AP) — Pleasant Colony, the Kentucky Derby and Preakness winner, galloped two miles on the main track at Belmont Park Wednesday and trainer Johnny Campo said, "He went real well. He's feeling real good."

Campo said his biggest concern is the three-week wait between last Saturday's Preakness and the June 6 Belmont Stakes.

"This horse gets really bored easily," said Campo. "He likes to run and he likes to train."

A victory in the Belmont Stakes would make Pleasant Colony the 12th Triple Crown winner is thoroughbred racing history.

Brown not upset over Loughery getting job

ATLANTA (AP) — Hubie Brown has no hard feelings toward Kevin Loughery, the man chosen to succeed him as coach of the Atlanta Hawks. And although he hasn't found a job, Brown says he has a "healthy attitude" about his situation.

"For the first time in memory we are looking at a tight situation," said Brown, who was fired shortly before the end of the 1981 season after five years with the National Basketball Association club.

"THERE ARE not five to seven jobs in the NBA open right now," said Brown. "We are looking at zero jobs open."

Brown, who came from a championship in the now-defunct American Basketball Association to lead the Hawks from the cellar to a divisional title, said he's patiently waiting for a job to turn up.

He made his comments in an interview published Wednesday in The Atlanta Journal.

Opening lead: Six of ◇.

A bad break comes as a surprise to the average player. An expert prepares for it. The difference can be seen on this hand from a recent team match.

The bidding was similar at the two tables. South was a trifle skimpy for a demand bid, but we do not quibble greatly with that action. The opening lead at both tables was a low diamond.

At the table where the unwary player was in charge of the proceedings, he won the ace of diamonds and immediately led a trump to the king, followed by the ace. When East turned up with four trumps, there was no way to prevent the loss of a trump trick and a spade, down one.

The expert declarer saw at once that the only danger to the contract was a 4-1 trump split. If West had the four trumps, there was nothing that could be done about it. But if East held the long trumps, they might be neutralized with a trump coup. To bring that off, declarer would have to shorten his trumps to four.

So South won the ace of diamonds and immediately ruffed a diamond. Next, he led a low spade. West won the ace of spades and, for want of anything better, shifted to a club. Declarer won in his hand with the ace, ruffed a spade in dummy and returned to his hand with a diamond ruff, bringing his trump holding down to the desired number—four. Now he cashed the ace and king of hearts, and when West showed out declarer's groundwork was about to pay off.

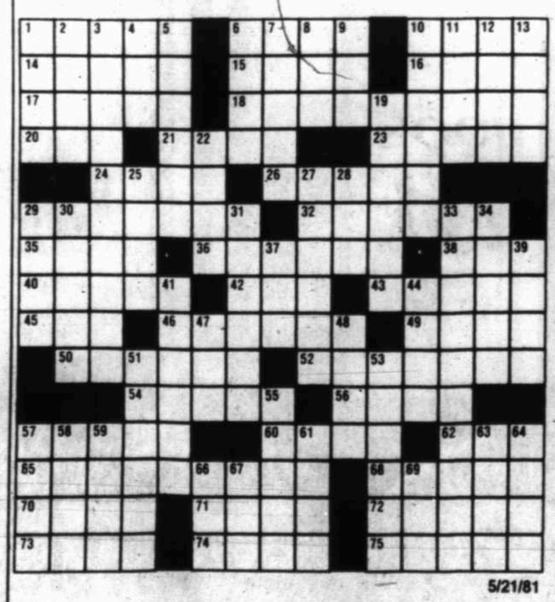

He needed just one more stroke of fortune—the second round of clubs had to live. Declarer overtook his queen of clubs with the king, and when East followed suit the hand was over. Declarer simply ran clubs, discarding spades from his hand if East refused to ruff. East could ruff whenever he pleased, but declarer would overruff, draw the last trump and the rest of his hand would be high.

Only rain can stop big cypress fire

BIG CYPRESS NATIONAL PRESERVE, Fla. (AP) — With water cascading around them from a helicopter skimming over the trees, two yellow-clad firefighters, nearly obscured by choking gray smoke, furiously hacked away at flames in the parched swampgrass.

The crackling inferno muted the noise from the hovering chopper as its pilot maneuvered a water-filled bucket and dumped its cargo on a flash fire that exploded around the firemen. There was a sizzling sound, and the "spot fire" was out.

Their faces sooty and streaked with sweat from the fire and the equally torrid tropical sun, the two men wearily picked up "flappers" — a square of hard rubber attached to a stick that's used to smother flames — and trudged back to their four-wheel drive vehicle.

Their work wasn't over. The Big Cypress fire was still burning.

Since the first of the year, these National Park Service employees have joined firefighters throughout Florida in a largely unsuccessful war against wildfires that have blackened more than 385,000 acres. The Big Cypress fire is the worst — an estimated 105,000 acres charred so far, and no end is in sight.

Hot weather, low humidity and one of the worst droughts in state history have parched the hammocks and brushlands of South Florida, turning usually damp muckland into an inferno.

The fires spawned thick smoke that rolled over South Florida last week. Doctors warned patients with respiratory ailments to stay inside, and visibility dropped to less than a mile in some areas. The Highway Patrol was forced to close Alligator Alley, a major east-west highway, for about 20 hours.

Inside this 2,400-square-mile preserve, swampland normally under water and teeming with alligators, snakes, rabbits and exotic insects and plants has dried out, stranding wildlife in a few ponds just ahead of advancing flames. The ground is strewn with the charred remains of creatures caught by the fire.

Firefighters say there is very little they can do to save the land or animals. Only heavy rain can stop the fires, which were caused by anything from a careless motorist's cigarette butt to arson.

The rainy season generally begins in May and lasts for several months, but this year has been an exception. There were thundershowers Tuesday in the Florida Panhandle and weather forecasters said there was some prospect of rain through the end of the week.

"You can't fight a fire like this directly because the conditions are too severe — the drought, the low humidity and the winds," said ranger Robert Yates as he took a swig of Gatorade and watched flames jump from top to top of cypress trees along Burns Road, a strip of gravel that cuts through the middle of the preserve some 70 miles west of Miami.

"So all we're trying to do is fight it indirectly and protect the structures that may be around it."

Adds Rick Smith, assistant superintendent of Everglades National Park: "Our philosophy is to protect structural property and human life. It's pretty hard to attack a fire of this size with the idea of putting it out."

Thus far, they've been successful — a few hunting camps have been burned, but no lives have been lost, and no injuries reported.

A few hundred yards down Burns Road, range technician Bob Wilson slapped at flames burning toward a small lake. A curious alligator surfaced and swam toward him. But the reptile stopped and ducked under the water as the helicopter skimmed over the pond to fill its huge plastic bucket.

"I like to use fire as a management tool a lot more than I like working suppression," Wilson said. "But now, when it gets this dry, the fires become destructive."

These firefighters, who normally work as rangers or technicians in the preserve or in nearby Everglades National Park, say only torrential rains will tame the flames.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

An explanation of hemorrhoids

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've had hemorrhoids for several years, but they bother me only on rare occasions. I know what they feel like, but I don't know what they are. Can you explain this, and also suggest how the discomfort caused by hemorrhoids can be eased? — Mr. T.J.

Dear Mrs. J.: Before responding to your questions, I want to stress that anyone with hemorrhoids should check with his or her doctor to make certain that specific medical or surgical treatment is not indicated. This is particularly important if there is bleeding or pain. While home treatment is sufficient for many individuals who suffer with hemorrhoids, one should not assume that this is always the case.

Hemorrhoids are simply enlarged veins around the rectum, and are common during pregnancy and in persons who are constipated. One way to avoid them, therefore, is to try to prevent constipation by having a diet that is high in bulk. A person with a tendency towards hemorrhoids should also try to avoid straining with bowel movements.

If a hemorrhoid condition is aggravated, the patient can ease the discomfort by sitting in about 10 to 12 inches of warm water in a bathtub a few times a day. This can be done for 20 to 30 minutes at a time, with the buttocks spread apart.

I would warn again, however, that if hemorrhoids are accompanied by bleeding and pain, it is important to check with a doctor. While rectal bleeding is not necessarily symptomatic of a serious condition, it may be and should not be ignored.

Two convicted in lottery fix

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Former television emcee Nick Perry and suspended lottery official Edward Plevel have been convicted of rigging the Pennsylvania Lottery in a scam that generated a record $3.5 million payout.

The Common Pleas Court jury returned the verdict Wednesday night after 6½ hours of deliberation. Plevel was acquitted of a lesser charge.

It was the first time anyone had been tried for rigging the state lottery. Defense attorneys Tom Livingston and Tom Ceraso said they would appeal.

"I'm disappointed, obviously, but the game's not over until the final whistle is blown," said Livingston, who represented Perry.

The state accused both men of rigging the April 24, 1980, Daily Number drawing, which paid the record amount when the winning number 6-6-6 was drawn. Prosecutors said the pingpong balls in a number-selecting machine were weighted, making unlikely that numbers other than 4 and 6 would pop up.

Perry, 64, was the host of the nightly drawing at WTAE-TV in Pittsburgh, and Plevel, 52, was Lottery Bureau district manager in charge of the drawing's security at the studio on April 24.

No date for sentencing was set. Perry faces a maximum of 61 years imprisonment and $130,000 in fines. Plevel could be sentenced to a maximum 33 years in jail and fined up to $70,000.

The jury found Perry and Plevel guilty of theft by deception, rigging a publicly exhibited contest, criminal mischief, criminal conspiracy and perjury. Plevel was acquitted of unsworn falsification.

"I'm very much surprised at the verdict," Perry said, declining further comment.

Gov. Dick Thornburgh, a former federal prosecutor, lauded the case's outcome.

"The word is out now that Pennsylvania is showing the will, the means and the determination to bring white collar criminals to the justice they deserve and we intend to keep it up," Thornburgh said in a statement.

Both defendants sat impassively when the verdict was returned shortly before 11 p.m. EDT in the courtroom of Judge William Lipsitt.

Perry's defense, which lasted 15 minutes, consisted of two witnesses who said his character was "above reproach."

Plevel testified in his own behalf and in closing arguments Ceraso said security surrounding the drawing was lax and implied others could have rigged it. Plevel said he was away from the machine for about 15 minutes on April 24, and was absent on other occasions as well.

Livingston attacked the credibility of the state's chief witnesses, brothers Peter and Jack Maragos and former television stagehands Joseph Bock and Fred Luman. All were originally charged in the case, but agreed to testify for the state in hope of lenient treatment.

"The moment Mr. Maragos bought freedom for him and his brother by agreeing to put the finger on Nick Perry, that was the moment that justice was bought for a heavy, heavy price," Livingston said.

Much of the state's case was based on testimony from the Maragos brothers, who said Perry, a former business partner, came to them with the idea of rigging the contest.

Peter Maragos also testified he went to Philadelphia to place wagers of about $10,000 on the eight combinations of 4 and 6. The state contends the Maragos family had $1.2 million in winning tickets.

PERSONAL, To Mary:

Franklin denies all charges, including shooting of Jordan

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP) — Calling the murder charges filed against him "an amazing chain of coincidences," Joseph Paul Franklin says he was falsely convicted of shooting two black joggers in Salt Lake City, the Fort Wayne News Sentinel said Wednesday.

In a telephone interview from the Salt Lake City-County Jail, Franklin also said he had nothing to do with the shooting of National Urban League president Vernon Jordan in Fort Wayne, said the newspaper in a copyrighted article.

"The FBI wants to keep a clean record and they want to take all these crimes and solve them by saying I committed them," he said. "But I'm not going to confess. I think I'll get acquitted."

Franklin is currently being held in Salt Lake City and is appeallig a federal conviction for violating the civil rights of the black joggers by fatally shooting them. He is awaiting trial on Utah state murder charges for the same August 20, 1980, sniper shooting.

"I want to say I didn't have anything to do with the Vernon Jordan shooting," Franklin told reporter Pete Fullam. "I wasn't even there the night of the shooting. I wasn't in Indianapolis in January 1980 and I wasn't in Oklahoma City," two of the places where he's been charged with killing blacks.

The 31-year-old Mobile, Ala. native did not hide his contempt for liberals and blacks, the newspaper reported, adding that he told two racist jokes about the slain children in Atlanta during the phone call.

Franklin is also charged with the Oct. 21, 1979, sniper attack in Oklahoma City that killed a black man and a white woman as they loaded groceries into a car, and in Indianapolis with January 8 and 14 sniper attacks that killed two black men.

Franklin is considered a suspect in the May 29, 1980, shooting of Jordan, but no charges have been filed in that case.

"It's just an amazing chain of coincidences. I'm a racist and that's why I'm being charged with this," Franklin told the newspaper.

Franklin called the News Sentinel collect from a telephone in the Salt Lake City jail at 4 p.m. EST Tuesday. The call was logged by jail officials who said he was allowed two calls per week, the newspaper reported.

Franklin's call was in response to a letter from News Sentinel asking if Franklin had any comment about the charges against him.

Presidential security undergoes new look for Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Air Force One, the gleaming, portable symbol of the presidency, taxied to a halt at the Michiana Regional Airport near South Bend, Ind. From inside, a small crowd, perhaps a few hundred people, could be seen waiting.

They were kept behind two fences that created a no man's zone, an empty security buffer between the president and the people.

When President Reagan stepped off the airplane, just about every White House staff member who accompanied him had already deplaned — the reverse of the order followed by previous presidents who were customarily among the very first to step out from the forward cabin.

It is when he appears at the doorway of the airplane, with no security agent shielding him, that a president is completely exposed, however briefly, to a sniper. Thus, a shift in the procedure can help throw off a potential assassin.

The position of the crowd, the order of the procession out of the presidential jet and countless other details — the receiving line was limited to two people to reduce the president's time on the open airfield — reflected the new look of presidential security.

As Reagan resumes his travel while still recuperating from a gunshot wound suffered in a March 30 assassination attempt, the Secret Service is experimenting with variations on their time-tested procedures, each wrinkle intended to increase the odds in their favor.

When Reagan left the White House on Monday evening to watch his son perform in a ballet, two nearly identical black limousines were placed in his motorcade, their fenders flying U.S. and presidential flags. One car was for the president; the other was a decoy.

The president is leaving Washington on Friday for the privacy of Rancho del Cielo, his hideaway in the Santa Ynez Mountains behind Santa Barbara, Calif. And then it is on to the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., next week.

If all goes according to schedule, the public will have no opportunity to see Reagan. Air Force One will land at a military facility down the Pacific Coast from Santa Barbara, and the president will be flown by Marine Corps helicopter to the ranch.

White House aides have become so reluctant to discuss security precautions that they are putting off the record the most non-committal comment they could make: "No comment."

The trip to South Bend last Sunday put the president in full view of approximately 12,000 people as he received an honorary degree at Notre Dame, spending more than an hour seated at the front of a platform in a circular arena.

But he was not alone on the stage. In addition to the other honorary degree winners, there was at least one Secret Service agent garbed appropriately in an academic robe, a yellow tassel on his mortarboard and the academic hood of a doctoral candidate draped over his shoulders.

Another agent, more normally attired, stood nearby, one foot on the steps leading to the platform. He held a raincoat with a protective, heavy lining sewn in.

A close look at Reagan's suit jacket, before he donned his academic robe, revealed the distinct outlines of a bulky protective vest.

The crowd was searched by police officers who waved portable metal detectors around each spectator entering the arena.

The president was driven directly into the building in one of the armored limousines flown around the country for his use, and the doors to the building were locked behind him immediately.

This meant that a group of reporters in the motorcade were locked out temporarily, along with two accompanying Secret Service agents, because a local police officer would let no one in without his superiors' permission.
