Jackson secures release of 22 Americans

By BETTY ANNE WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

HAVANA — Cuban President Fidel Castro announced today the release of 22 Americans from prisons here after meeting for more than eight hours with Democratic presidential contender Jesse L. Jackson.

Jackson and Castro began their talks in mid-afternoon Tuesday and continued on past midnight.

At a 12:20 a.m. EDT joint news conference, Jackson said the 22 Americans represent most of the U.S. citizens held in Cuban jails. He said they would accompany him when he returns to the United States on Thursday after a visit to Nicaragua.

The head of the U.S. interest section in Havana, John Ferch, told reporters earlier that 29 Americans are imprisoned in Cuba.

Castro said those being freed represented every American held in Cuba except those imprisoned for airplane hijacking.

Castro also agreed to permit the departure of Andres Vargas Gomez, identified by Cuban authorities as a CIA operative. He is a former prisoner who was let out of jail in an amnesty in the late 1970s but detained in Cuba.

■ Democratic frontrunners 'make peace' — Page 4A

The names of those to be released were not immediately available.

It was the second time that a Jackson visit to a nation with poor U.S. relations had led to the release of captive Americans.

In December 1983, Jackson negotiated the release of Lt. Robert O. Goodman Jr., who had been held in a Syrian jail after his plane was shot down over Syrian-controlled Lebanese territory.

Other U.S. politicians have preceded Jackson in winning the repatriation of Americans held in Cuban, although not in such large numbers.

A few examples: Castro released three American women jailed on drug charges after an April 1983 visit to Cuba by Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn.

Rep. Mickey Leland, D-Texas, negotiated the release of two Texans jailed after their plane made an emergency landing in Cuba and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., secured the release of two prisoners in 1982.

Asked if he were troubled because many of those being freed were alleged to be involved in narcotics trafficking, Jackson said that "the real point is to bring American citizens back."

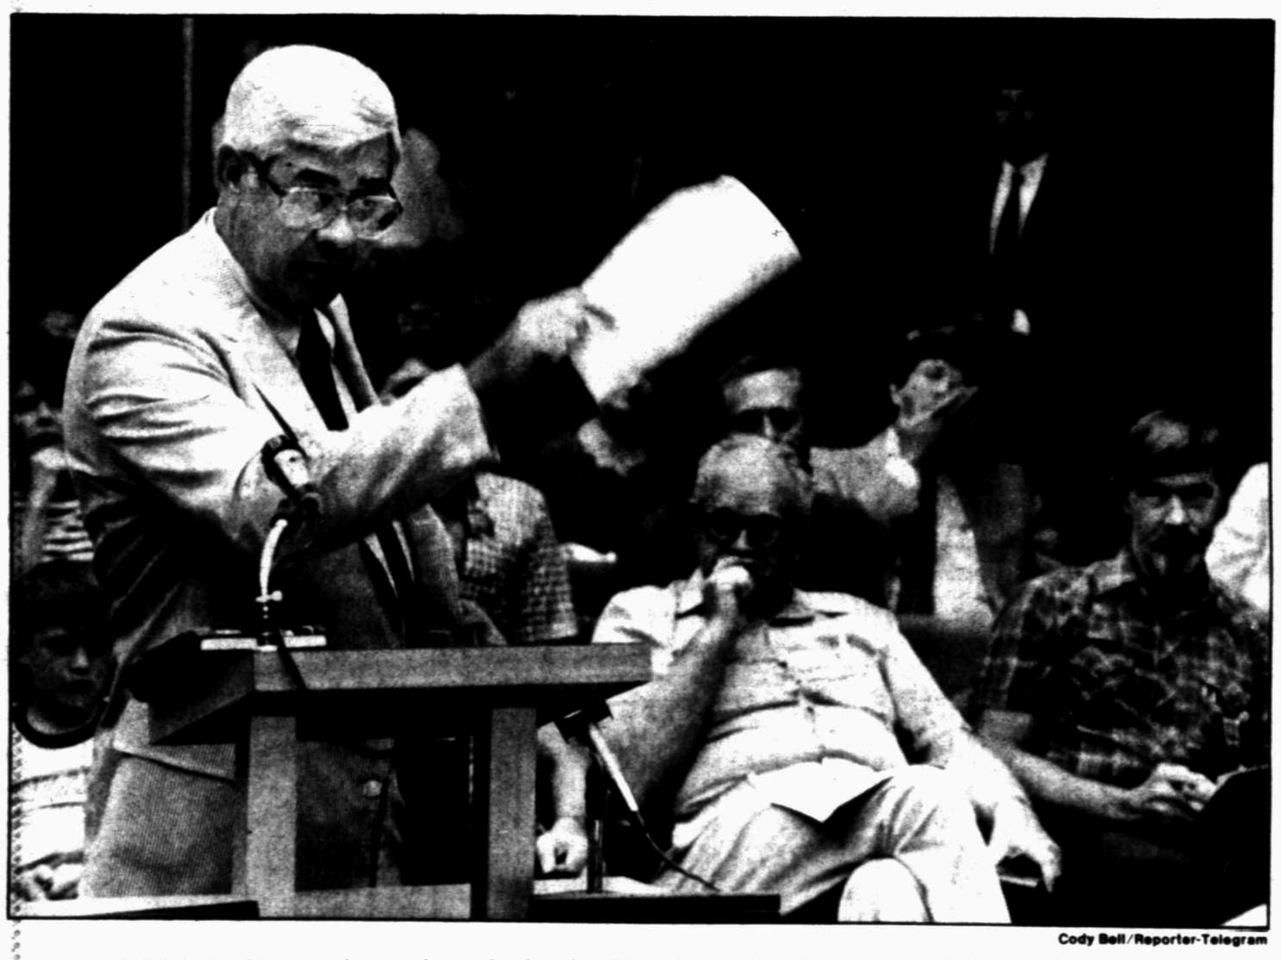

"Whatever their case may be, they should be subjected to a judicial process," he said. "I should not make the judgment and the press should not hold a trial."

Castro said he favored Jackson's suggestion that the United States and Cuba exchange ambassadors, which would require re-establishing formal diplomatic relations broken in 1961. The two countries now communicate through interest sections in the Washington and Havana embassies of other nations.

Castro, at the urging of Jackson, also agreed to proceed with talks with the United States on immigration matters.

He said the discussions could include the sensitive issue of "excludables," problem exiles who have been detained in the United States since the Mariel boatlift of 1980, and the issue of visas to make it easier for divided families in both countries to maintain ties.

Jackson said he invited Castro to visit the United States, but the Cuban leader made no commitment to accept the offer.

Jack Nini airs his complaints about the local cablevision service during a public hearing Tuesday.

Cable complaints aired at hearing

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

■ City Council considers work on sewer line — Page 1C

Dimensions Cablevision, part of the Times-Mirror Cable Television group, will view its rate structure a second time after hearing the same complaint replayed several times Tuesday afternoon in City Hall Council Chambers.

During a public hearing as part of the City Council meeting, Midlanders focused their complaints not on the basic cablevision service, but on the stairstepping pricing structure. After tuning in to more than an hour of the complaints, Greg Holmes, new general manager for Dimensions, said that although the package rates had just been re-adjusted, "nothing is absolute. We'll continue to evaluate all the possible options.

"It gave me an opportunity to first hand hear some of the concerns that are first and foremost to the people of this community. My goal is to be responsive to those concerns," Holmes added.

IN TURNING ON the discussion to the cablevision service, Mayor G. Thane Akins pointed out to the people that cable TV is not owned by the city, nor does Dimensions have an exclusive franchise here. "But at the same time, we realize it is the only cable TV company in town. It should be responsive to the city and furnish their needs."

J.T. Underwood of 1504 S. Colorado St., complained his service went out one Saturday afternoon and he couldn't contact anyone at the office to get it back. Holmes, who has been in charge here since the end of May, said the service department now is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekends.

Nancy Hart wants to record shows with her VCR while watching another. But under the converter system, she can't do that. Holmes said it can be done if she gets a diagram that shows how to do the correct wiring. Another man later complained about all the equipment required to do that.

The scrambler box — known as the "black box" — also was the focus of the subscribers' ire. To get certain shows, the black box must be rented. There is a charge for the service on each television and another charge for each black box.

Susie Sheffield said she has enjoyed her cablevision service for the three years she's lived in Midland. But it came to a halt when she had to get the scrambler and pay for the service on three TV sets. She stopped the service and returned the scramblers.

COUNCILMAN DAVID Godfrey questioned the city attorney about how the council could regulate those additional charges. The city can't, according to the attorney, Joe Nuessle. "Special programming is not under our jurisdiction," he replied.

The mayor asked what the price would be on three TV sets with the basic service and was told it would be $20.45 a month. Add on a remote control and converter to each and the price goes up to $39.33, he was told by Dimensions personnel.

"That's a lot of the complaint," he said. "The cost for essentially the same thing."

Echoing that was Jack Nini, who said he currently pays $21.95 for two TVs and two remote controls. Now, they want him to add the scrambler and tack on another $9.50 to his bill, he said.

"My question is will we be here next year with another little box for another $3.50. Where does it stop? When does the council say, 'No more.' We've been ripped off enough...no more black boxes," Nini said. "I have excellent service, but what galls me is the charges."

SOME SUBSCRIBERS told of other cities where the "box" is small and attached to the back of the TV set. Dimensions' box is large and must sit on top of the TV set, they complained.

MISD budget woes forecast

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

■ Policy revisions approved — Page 1C

Midland Superintendent Dr. Joe Baressi painted a gloomy financial picture for trustees attending Tuesday's school board meeting. If the legislature enacts expected school reforms during the special session, even severe budget cuts may not keep Midland Independent School District from being forced to seek a sizeable increase in tax revenues, he said.

Although final figures have not been agreed upon, MISD may get less state funding and at the same time be forced to increase salaries and pay a portion of retirement benefits, Baressi said.

If legislative reform is to go into effect this year, the board will have to make budget cuts to keep a tax increase within reason, he added. "There's no way we're going to survive the loss of $3.7 million (in state funding) without some fairly deep cuts, including the loss of personnel." The district has already put a freeze on hiring, he said.

Six-block area spends hour without power

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

A six-block section of downtown Midland was without power for almost an hour Tuesday after a power line got loose and grounded out.

"The area from Missouri between Marienfeld and Big Spring up to Ohio" was knocked out at about 2:45 p.m., said Texas Electric Service Co. District Supervisor Roger Marshall. "About eight buildings were affected."

It took TESCO employees about an hour to switch all the buildings to an alternate power circuit, said Marshall.

Big city blackouts often result in looting and general panic, but the Tall City reaction was more subdued. At Luigi's Italian Restaurant, 111 N. Big Spring, the power failure caused little commotion.

"We eat by candlelight at night anyway," said Dee Stacy. "It's sort of slow in the afternoon anyway — we just had a couple of coffee customers," one of whom demonstrated his aplomb by taking a candle and making his way back to the restroom.

There was a little more light at the Summit Building at 300 N. Marienfeld, where emergency generators kept a few hall lights burning. But even though no one was stuck in an elevator in the 12-story building, "For management, it was very unnerving," said Sara Lawson, properties manager for Summit Management.

Tenants were walking down to the building office to see what was going on, she said, but they didn't seem particularly upset — "They just wondered how long it would go on. Some of the secretaries decided it was a good time to go shopping."

Southwestern Bell, at 410 W. Missouri, was the last building to have power restored. Thanks to an emergency power source, Bell customers weren't affected, but "It was pitch dark in my office — I lit a candle," said Darlene Gifford, manager for community relations. "It was there for appearances, but it came in handy."

Drinking age bill goes back to House

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A 21-year-old national drinking age bill is headed back to the House, where quick action could help it become law in time to give the nation a symbolic warning about drunken driving before the Fourth of July weekend.

The measure, which passed the Senate 81-16 Tuesday night, would not take effect for two years. But Sen. Paula Hawkins, R-Fla., said it could send an immediate message that the nation is cracking down on drunken drivers.

"It would be symbolic if, before we have a big roaring holiday, we have this in everybody's mind," she told a post-vote news conference.

The House also passed a "minimum 21" bill June 7, but must now decide whether to accept a Senate-added incentive program for states that enact automatic jail terms and fines for convicted drunken drivers.

Rep. James J. Howard, D-N.J., the bill's chief House sponsor, said he would have to study the Senate version before recommending a position to the House.

But he added, "The chances are very good that we will have a 21 year old minimum drinking age pass the House again before the July 4 break" — which begins Friday.

President Reagan said he supports the bill even though he normally doesn't like the federal government telling states what to do.

He said the measure would combat the "national tragedy" of highway deaths, caused in part by young people who cross state lines to buy liquor they cannot get in their own states.

Both the House and Senate bills would withhold badly needed highway construction money for states refusing to enact a minimum drinking age of 21.

Sen. Frank R. Lautenberg, D-N.J., the chief Senate sponsor, said the penalty period would begin Oct. 1, 1986, and last for two years. A state would lose 5 percent of its allocation the first year of the penalty period and 10 percent the second year.

However, any state raising its drinking age within the two years would have its money returned, while states not acting in that time period would never regain the funds.

Lautenberg estimated the cost would be $260 million the first year and $520 million the second year if all 27 states currently without a minimum age of 21 failed to act.

The incentive part of the program would fatten a state's treasury with additional highway safety money if the state enacted automatic punishments, a computerized traffic records system and laws against drivers under the influence of drugs.

Civil rights proponents predict victory in Senate

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Buoyed by an overwhelming House vote, civil rights forces are predicting victory in the Senate for their bill to overturn the Supreme Court decision limiting federal penalties for sex bias and other discrimination.

The bill's supporters say the measure, opposed by conservatives and the Reagan administration, reaffirms longstanding congressional intent that federal money should be cut off to all parts of an institution that discriminates on the basis of sex, race, age or physical handicap.

"The radical right will be isolated," predicts Ralph Neas, executive director of the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, a coalition of 165 organizations.

WORLD

Soviet Union goes on offensive in propaganda battle with U.S.

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union, annoyed by the barrage of Western protests about its treatment of dissident Andrei Sakharov, is waging a similar campaign over an American Indian imprisoned for murder in the United States.

Hailing American Indian Movement leader Leonard Peltier, 39, as a "freedom-loving man" jailed unjustly, the official Soviet press has run stories almost daily for weeks calling his case an example of American human rights abuse.

Peltier is serving two life sentences for murdering two FBI agents during a 1975 shootout on the Oglala Sioux Indian reservation at Pine Ridge, S.D.

Soviet officials have answered all inquiries about Sakharov with the argument that confinement of the Nobel Peace Prize winner in the closed city of Gorky is an internal matter.

Sakharov has never been convicted of a crime.

But he and Peltier have both staged hunger strikes to protest their treatment by the authorities of their respective countries.

The Soviets accused U.S. authorities of attempting the "deliberate physical destruction" of Peltier when he began a hunger strike in the Federal Correctional Center in Marion, Ill. last April 10.

The almost daily bulletins on Peltier's hunger strike continued for weeks after his fast ended May 22.

The Soviet campaign culminated this week in a letter to President Reagan from four Soviet Nobel laureates who used language and arguments paralleling protests on Sakharov's behalf. They accused U.S. authorities of jailing Peltier on "trumped-up charges" intended to "decapitate the American Indian movement."

The press campaign appears to be an effort to rebuke Western leaders for trying to intercede on Sakharov's behalf.

For domestic audiences, the campaign seems aimed at deflecting attention from Sakharov and portraying the West as a place where dissenters are imprisoned unjustly — a charge often leveled against the Soviet Union.

It has happened before. In 1978, when dissident Yuri Orlov was on trial, the Soviet press ran critical stories about cases like the "Wilmington 10" firebombing trial, which became a major U.S. civil rights issue.

Syria, Israel agree on prisoner exchange

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Syria and Israel have agreed to exchange war prisoners, Syria's official news agency reported today. The exchange reportedly will include more than 290 Syrian prisoners.

Syria holds six Israeli prisoners, but the number of Israelis to be freed was not disclosed. The Israeli military command in Tel Aviv today declined to comment on the reported exchange.

The news agency SANA said the swap would take place Thursday near the southern Syrian frontline town of Kuneitra, provincial capital of the occupied Golan Heights which Israel annexed in December 1981. The area is a buffer zone controlled by the United Nations.

Cherbourg honors American who freed city from Nazis

CHERBOURG, France (AP) — Three weeks ago and 50 miles away on the Normandy D-Day beaches, presidents, kings and queens gathered to honor the soldiers who helped liberate France from Nazi occupation 40 years ago.

On Tuesday, in Cherbourg's Place de la Republique, were the city's mayor, a group of veterans and Bill Finley's three sisters.

Sgt. William F. Finley was, in the best sense, an ordinary hero, a Decatur, Ill., boy who joined up at age 17, dashed under fire across Cherbourg's main square and liberated the City Hall on June 26, 1944.

Less than 10 months later, at age 20, he died of wounds in Germany.

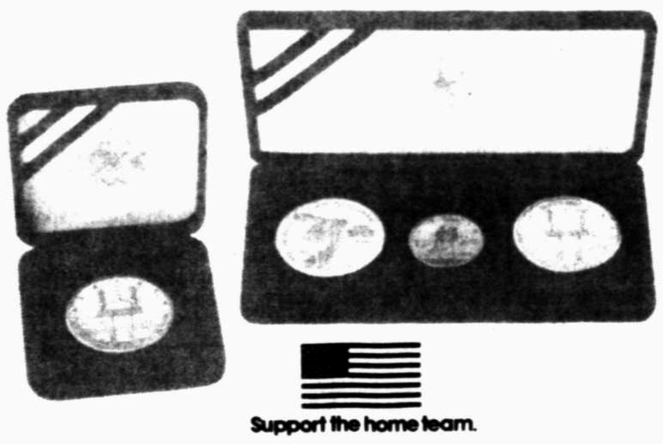

Cherbourg's present mayor, Jean-Pierre Godefroy, is of a generation to whom the war is a dim childhood memory. Yet he said with pride and determination at Tuesday's ceremony: "Our city will always remember those who gave their lives for our freedom."

As Cherbourg thought about what it should do to mark the 40th anniversary of France's liberation from the Nazis, they realized that Finley could be the symbol of the freedom, that through him, the city could thank all those who fought valiantly and died almost unknown to history.

Finley might have remained one of those unknown heros except for the good memory of Paul Ingouf, a city historian and journalist, who had talked with the American and noted his name, almost correctly, during the days of liberation.

WEATHER SUMMARY

National Weather Service NOAA U S Dept of Commerce

AP Laserphoto Map

Showers from the Gulf to the Northeast and in the Southwest are forecast through Thursday by the National Weather Service. Fair skies are expected for most of the nation, with cooler temperatures anticipated in the Midwest.

City's 101-degree heat falls short of 1972 record

From Staff and Wire Reports

Midland on Tuesday fell just two degrees short of equalling the record high temperature for the date of 103, set in 1972. But the 101 we did hit was probably more than enough for most Midlanders.

Skies will remain partly cloudy tonight, with a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms and the possibility of local heavy rainfall. The overnight low will be near 70, with winds from the northeast at 5-10 mph. Thursday will also be partly cloudy, with isolated thunderstorms and a slight chance of rain, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. The high will be in the mid 90s, with winds from the east at 5-10 mph.

The overnight low of 73 was 12 degrees above the record low of 61 set in 1968.

STATE

Abundant gulf moisture and a weak front across Central Texas combined early today to produce showers and thunderstorms across central portions of the state.

The area of showers was mainly concentrated along the weak front extending from Lufkin through Waco to north of Midland.

NATION

The Great Lakes and upper Mississippi Valley were pounded by thunderstorms today after a storm system dumped at least nine tornadoes on Wisconsin and hurled damaging winds and hail from Michigan to Nebraska.

FORECAST

Mondale, Hart share short memory

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — In politics, a short memory sometimes is necessary. Remember all those nasty things Gary Hart and Walter Mondale were saying about each other just a little while ago? They're talking as if they don't.

After their peace conference of East 69th Street on Tuesday, the two were calling each other by their first names, and Hart was asked if either had apologized to the other. He looked surprised that anyone would suggest that either had any reason to apologize.

Why, said Hart, nothing he had said about Mondale was as severe as what George Bush had said about Ronald Reagan in 1980, charging candidate Reagan with advocating "voodoo economics."

Mondale said the Democratic presidential campaign had been "boisterous." But "now we're seeking the common ground and finding it. If the Republicans think they are contending with a divided party, they can forget it."

"I think we respect each other," Mondale said.

Maybe so, but Hart and Mondale were at one another longer and their rivalry seemed more intense and more personal than had the Bush-Reagan campaigns of four years ago.

Look at the record:

—Mondale, in Texas on April 26: "Listen to Mr. Hart with a grain of salt. He's all over the map. When he's in the Northeast, he says one thing. When he's here, he says something else." He said Hart was running in Texas "as an anti-labor candidate ... (who) can't say one good thing about working people ... If he had his way, 600,000 people (at Chrysler Corp.) would be out of work."

—Hart on Mondale in Nebraska on May 10: "We can't retreat to the failed policies of the past .... I couldn't disagree more with my principal competitor, Mr. Mondale, on the issue of trade policy."

—Mondale on May 30 accused Hart and the Rev. Jesse Jackson of practicing "the old politics" by cutting deals in some primary states that Mondale carried to try to "win the election though they'd lost it."

—Hart on May 3 said a Mondale victory could produce a "tainted nomination" for president if Mondale's fund-raising and spending tactics were found to be illegal.

All this appeared forgotten over bacon and eggs Tuesday, if Hart and Mondale meant what they said to reporters following their get-together.

They said they stood agreed on the need to defeat Ronald Reagan in the fall. Antagonisms between himself and Mondale, said Hart, with a straight face, have been "overreported."

From the peace table, Hart went to a rally at the scene of his triumph in New Hampshire, and Mondale went off to several private fund-raisers in hopes of retiring the bulk of a $2 million debt before the Democratic National Convention, which starts in three weeks.

The third candidate, the Rev. Jesse Jackson, was in Cuba meeting with President Fidel Castro and seeking release of American prisoners.

Mondale was in Hartford, Conn., today for another fund-raiser, then planned to spend the night in Washington and to interview Philadelphia Mayor Wilson Goode as a possible running mate on Thursday.

Hart's citation of Bush's rhetoric against Reagan in 1980 seemed to carry the message that he didn't feel he had said anything so rough about Mondale as to rule him out as a possible running mate with Mondale. Both he and Mondale insisted they did not discuss the No. 2 place on a Mondale ticket.

"Mr. Mondale feels very strongly about wanting to repair their friendship," said Maxine Isaacs, his press secretary. It was virtually the only acknowledgement from the Mondale camp that the friendship had fallen into disrepair.

Hart, in New Hampshire, was on a nostalgic and sentimental visit to the state which gave him an overwhelming upset primary election victory over the former vice president last February.

In a rally before 500 enthusiastic supporters in Concord, Hart said the voters of New Hampshire "lit a torch which spread into every state and every county in this country."

Hart's rhetoric at the rally seemed to contradict the tone of the peace meeting with Mondale.

In New York, Hart said staying in the race for the nomination would "not be a detriment to Mr. Mondale's candidacy."

Asked in New York if he would win the nomination, Hart said, "I certainly hope so."

In Concord, Hart stripped off his suit coat, rolled up his sleeves and said he is the only Democratic candidate who can defeat Reagan this fall.

"I do not quit," Hart said, firmly predicting he would win the nomination and the White House.

The selection of Goode, newly installed in his first major elected public office, as a potential running mate for Mondale came as a surprise.

But Mondale spokesman Duncan Dayton said Mondale had known Goode for some time and respects him.

Goode will be the third mayor and the second black Mondale has interviewed. He has previously talked to Mayor Tom Bradley of Los Angeles, who is also black, and with Mayor Dianne Feinstein of San Francisco, and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas.

Jon Edmonson is paying for service to five television sets. As Dimensions has added requirements for getting various types of services, Edmonson's monthly bill has gone from about $20 a month to more than $80, he said. "It's a damn ripoff. If you have no control over it on extras, how many more inconveniences can they think up?"

Gilbert Gilles described a "frustrating" 15 days last December in which his service developed trouble. After numerous calls to Dimensions and several trips by service people, Gilles had his television checked at a repair shop. He was told his television was fine, but that he needed an amplifier because the cable signal had weakened. Gilles purchased a $65 amplifier.

"It's crazy that had to happen," said Holmes. Once the signal is transferred from the old wiring system to a new one being installed the problem should clear up, he noted.

During his month in the new job, Holmes said he has identified various areas of concern and he cited steps being taken to resolve them.

More people have been hired, a new phone system installed, service hours extended and phone sales instituted, he began. Customers should try calling on Tuesday through Thursday, which statistically are the slow service days.

HE HAS PUT together an in-house task force to address customer problems and has designated a "fire truck," or someone to react to problems of a service nature immediately.

Persons requesting service or installations on a particular day will be reminded the day prior to the one requested. If the person isn't at home, the service person will try a second time that day.

The rebuild system, in which Times-Mirror said it would install about 300 miles of new lines throughout the city so subscribers could have access to more than 50 channels, should be completed by the end of September, according to Holmes.

Because the rebuild system has involved tearing up alleys and streets to install the lines, residents have complained about the trenched up alleys and poor workmanship. Holmes said the contractor now is trying to get the work completed in four working days.

Akins pointed out one resident complained about the line installed in his paved alley and was told the contractor wasn't going to repave the street. "He certainly will fix it. That is unacceptable behavior," the mayor added.

HOLMES SAID the scrambling and converter boxes were necessary to keep the programming from being leaked. Gil Tash, an engineer with Dimensions, said the cable service has "a legal responsibility that they (programs) can't be taken without payment. We have to meet strict standards concerning signal leakage. Under the old method of trapping, people could get into the system. Scrambling is the only way" to avoid leakage.

Without any legislative changes, next year's preliminary budget is $49.3 million. Nearly $20 million is anticipated in state funding and non-tax revenues, Baressi said. "That would take a local tax levy of $29.2 million to finance. Given our new tax values, and given we will not be able to tax our bank stock, it will take a 68.82-cent tax rate (per $100 valuation) to fund our budget," he estimated.

That includes only those pay increases calculated into the current pay scale.

"To have enough funds in our budget to fund the $1,700 raise the governor's been promising, we would have to increase our tax levy by $2 million, or raise our tax rate to 73.52," he said. That would be an 8.1 percent increase over the estimated effective tax rate of 68.82.

"I have heard from a very reliable source that the conference committee (of the House and Senate) will require local districts to pay retirement benefits on wages over the state base," Baressi added. Midland employees currently are paid 32-50 percent over state base. To finance the local portion of retirement benefits would cost the district another million dollars, Baressi estimated, raising the rate to nearly 76 cents, or 11.6 percent above the effective tax rate.

By law, any increase that is more than 8 percent above the effective tax rate is subject to a rollback election. But because local school boards have little choice since the costly reforms would be mandated, Rep. Bill Hammond of the House Public Education Committee told Baressi school districts will not be subject to rollback this year.

The effective tax rate, basically, is the rate required to raise the same amount of money during the current year as was received last year. Although last year's actual tax rate was 77 cents per $100 valuation, this year's estimated effective tax rate is less than 69 cents. The rate is lower because the tax base, or valuation of taxpayers' property, increased about 20 percent.

Thus, a homeowner may pay more taxes this year even though the rate is lower, because his house may be worth more after reappraisal.

So trustees must put consideration of the budget and tax rate on hold until the legislature acts. However, if the school board expects to exceed the effective tax rate by more than 3 percent, it must notify the public of its intent to do so by the end of July.

Stacey Merkt appears on Tuesday's episode of "Donahue" with Robert White, left, former ambassador to El Salvador, and Guilermo DePaz, a Salvadoran citizen.

Church worker placed on two years probation

The Associated Press

BROWNSVILLE, Texas — A federal judge today sentenced Colorado church worker Stacey Lynn Merkt to a 90-day suspended sentence and placed her on two years probation.

Ms. Merkt, 29, of Colorado Springs, Colo., was found guilty May 14 on three counts of conspiring to transport, transporting and aiding and abetting illegal Salvadoran aliens around Border Patrol checkpoints on a rural highway to San Antonio. It was the first conviction of a U.S. citizen connected with a nationwide movement providing sanctuary to undocumented Salvadorans.

About 100 of Ms. Merkt's supporters who packed the courtroom demonstrated peacefully outside the courthouse.

Ms. Merkt spoke for about 10 minutes before the sentencing telling U.S. District Judge Filemon Vela that pre-sentencing reports he had received were "a little bit sterile so I wanted to give you a window into me.

"I am a lover of life...I have a deep respect for this land and everything on it," she said.

Vela wished her well and told her that violating the law was not the way to go.

"I'm no celebrity and I'm no martyr and I'm certainly no criminal," she said. "You and me, we both stand for justice and we don't take that lightly."

Vela asked her if she was going to violate the law again and she said, "I have no plans to violate the law."

She faced up to 15 years in jail and a $9,000 fine.

Ms. Merkt is a member of a loose-knit network of church and lay workers providing assistance to Salvadorans.

The so-called underground railroad workers maintain that assisting Salvadorans is legal under the federal Refugee Act of 1980 and United Nations protocol.

They say Salvadorans, fleeing a violent, civil-war torn homeland, are political, not economic refugees as the government contends. And, they add, helping Salvadoran refugees is one way of expressing their opposition to U.S. involvement in El Salvador.

During Ms. Merkt's trial, defense attorneys called a series of religious workers, including the Bishop of Brownsville, who testified that they believed protecting refugees is a religious right and duty.

Ms. Merkt was arrested Feb. 17 on a rural South Texas highway near Hebbronville in the company of the two Salvadoran adults and one infant, an American nun and a Dallas Times Herald reporter. Border Patrol agents stopped their diocese-owned car and arrested the group just before dawn.

The nun, Sister Dianne Muhlenkamp, a Catholic school principle from Fort Wayne, Ind., received one year's probation under a plea-bargain agreement with U.S. attorneys.

The case against the reporter, Jack Fischer, was never presented to the grand jury. Fischer was on assignment writing a story on the sanctuary movement.

U.S. will offer aid, not weapons, to Kuwait

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration plans to offer Kuwait as much as $50 million in military assistance to improve its defenses against possible air attacks from Iran, but weapons won't be included, U.S. officials say.

These officials, who insisted on anonymity, said they were not concerned Kuwait decided to shop for weapons in the Soviet Union after being turned down by the United States in a request for Stinger antiaircraft missiles.

Pentagon spokesman Michael Burch, who declined to disclose the contents or value of the U.S. assistance, said Tuesday that Congress would be notified of the administration's plans later this week.

Other officials, who didn't want to be identified, said the package for Kuwait will include new command and control equipment and improved radar facilities.

Because of concern over recent Iranian attacks on oil tankers in the Persian Gulf, the administration had previously agreed to sell 400 Stinger missiles and other air defense equipment to Saudi Arabia.

One aim of the American assistance will be to integrate Kuwait's air defenses with the more sophisticated defenses of neighboring Saudi Arabia.

Family may raise baby found on doorstep

WILLINGBORO, N.J. (AP) — The Smallwoods raised 13 youngsters, including 10 foster children, and they may have found No. 14 — an hours-old boy wrapped in a towel, stuffed in a paper bag and propped against their front door.

A note in the bag was addressed to a couple in a community about 50 miles away who had placed an advertisement in a newspaper seeking to adopt a child, but they knew nothing of the infant, said police Capt. Richard Van Sciver.

That couple does not want to adopt the baby, but the Smallwoods are not so sure.

"I would love to keep it," said Clara Smallwood, adding she was not sure whether she will apply to the state to adopt the baby.

John Smallwood found the infant when he left the house Tuesday morning. He brought the bag inside, saw it move and tore it open before discovering the baby, surrounded by its umbilical cord and placenta.

"Whoever left (the baby) knew we love children," said Mrs. Smallwood.

The boy, who weighs 6 pounds, 10½ ounces, was in good condition at the Zurbrugg Memorial Hospital division in this Burlington County community but has not been given a name, said hospital spokesman Wayne Segal.

"It seems very healthy," he said. "One of the nurses gave him the bottle and he finished the whole thing."

The infant, who Segal said "looks like Winston Churchill," will stay at the hospital for several days before being put in the care of the state Division of Youth and Family Services. The agency will put the child in a foster home while authorities search for the parents.

Mrs. Smallwood, 53, said that two years ago she was recognized by the DYFS as an outstanding foster mother.

Carver turns wood into works of art

WEST COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Cornell Reynolds says his good friends believe he can make anything out of wood. They may be right.

The 80-year-old Reynolds is a master in the dying art of woodcarving. And he has a host of treasures to prove it.

His creations include the massive walnut-stained oak altar at his church, Mount Tabor Lutheran in West Columbia, hundreds of grandfather clocks and thousands more rice beds, tables, sideboards, toys and other items.

The aging craftsman now has arthritis in his back, but the affliction has only slowed his creativity, not stopped it.

"He is a master, he really is," said Andy Jones, a former co-worker of Reynolds and a close friend. "I've learned worlds from him." Jones has his own workshop and is learning woodcarving from Reynolds.

Born in South Carolina, Reynolds spent most of his childhood at a Lutheran orphan home in Salem, Va., after his father died when Reynolds was 3. His experience at the orphanage convinced him that he should try to do things for other people.

When Reynolds returned to South Carolina, he got a job as a printer with the State Printing Co. He worked there 48 years before retiring to "do what I wanted to do" — woodcarving.

Reynolds said he had taught himself the craft, studying books and researching styles of furniture.

"I'm not in business," he said, although he admitted, "I've made a little money on it."

In 1947, he was made chairman of the building committee at Mount Tabor Lutheran Church. He researched, designed, built and carved the sanctuary's oak altar. The project took 14 months in his spare time.

"These are love hours," he said, showing off the ornately carved lecterns and altar appointments. "You don't get quite as tired doing love hours."

Reynolds said he had spent two years researching altars before tackling the project. He said he'd visited at least 100 churches, climbing through coal chutes to get inside some of them.

Many of Reynolds' creative treasures are in the spacious home of his son, Ted. There are grandfather clocks, a backgammon table, dining table, sideboard and china cabinet, baby crib, rice beds and accent tables.

Reynolds does his work in a garage-size shop behind his white frame house. The concrete block building is crammed with power drills, hand tools and work tables, all blanketed with a thin layer of sawdust.

Reynolds said he wouldn't create a piece for just anyone.

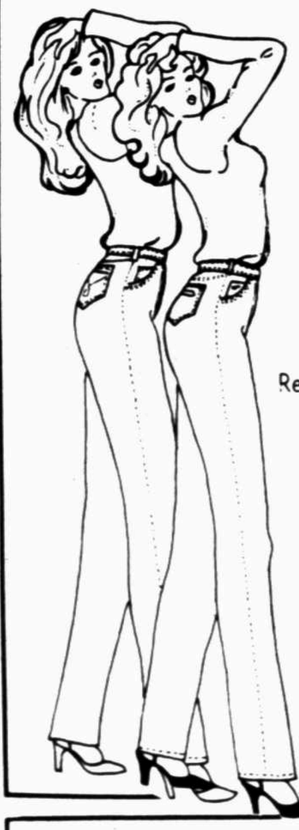

"I'd never make you a clock if you didn't want it," he said. "You've got to really want it."

Reynolds says he is disturbed that woodworking is fast becoming an extinct handcraft.

U.S. influence pervasive in El Salvador

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The influence of the United States is clearly visible wherever one goes in this country, from the soldiers in U.S. uniforms battling leftist guerrillas to hamburger stands with golden arches.

At the forefront is the U.S. Embassy, referred to by some sardonic Salvadorans simply as the "Casa Presidencial" — the presidential house. The embassy, once housed in a colonial structure, now covers a city block and resembles a high-walled fortress with armed guards at every gate.

While the embassy denies it is calling the shots for the government, U.S. officials concede the American government exerts influence — and sometimes diplomatic pressure — to get what it wants.

"We are not here to run the Salvadoran government, but we do try to help where we can. We serve as a catalyst, sometimes a cattle prod," said one U.S. official who spoke on condition he not be identified.

The influence recently was spotlighted by the case of five former national guardsmen convicted of the 1980 murders of four American churchwomen. It was U.S. Embassy officials and FBI agents who put together the physical evidence and subsequently identified those tried for the murders.

There is a widespread belief in El Salvador that the case would never have gone to trial without constant pressure from the United States, including Congress withholding $19 million in military aid this year until the case was resolved.

Vice President George Bush visited here last December and reportedly presented a list of military officers linked to rightist death squads who had to be sent out of the country or relieved of their duties.

But the American influence can be found in ways not connected to politics. On television, Wonder Woman chases the bad guys, while the radio broadcasts the latest in American music and movies show U.S. films with Spanish subtitles.

In U.S.-style supermarkets, bottles of Kentucky bourbon vie for shelf space with Coca-Cola and potato chips. At shopping centers, those with enough money can buy American designer jeans, T-shirts, jogging shoes and disco records.

Over the years, scores of U.S. businesses have operated in El Salvador, mainly because of an available labor force and low wages. However, the 4½-year civil war by leftist rebels trying to topple the U.S.-backed government has taken its toll.

Before 1979, there were at least 70 U.S. manufacturing subsidiaries or sales divisions. Now about half that number remain, including Citibank, Xerox, Kimberly-Clark and Texas Instruments, the largest single employer with an estimated 2,400 workers.

U.S. envoy meets with minister from Nicaragua

MANZANILLO, Mexico (AP) — Representatives of the United States and Nicaragua met for the second day at this Pacific resort, with soldiers and a navy boat patrolling nearby to help ensure the talks remain secret.

Harry Shlaudeman, U.S. special envoy for Central America, and Victor Hugo Tinoco, Nicaragua's vice foreign minister, discussed the tense relations between the United States and the leftist-led Central American country.

A source in Nicaragua with access to diplomatic information said the talks, which began Monday, could resume again today if "they continue in a positive way."

Meanwhile, a Costa Rica-based rebel organization that opposes the Nicaraguan government, ousted Eden Pastora, a charismatic guerrilla leader who opposed joining together with a rebel group based in Honduras, rebel sources said.

In Manzanillo, reporters have been allowed no closer than 300 yards to the site of the U.S.-Nicaragua talks, and they have received no word on the progress of the talks.

One U.S. official described the tight security at the talks as part of an effort to keep the discussions "confidential and private."

The United States has supported rebels trying to overthrow Nicaragua's government, but Congress this week deleted from an emergency spending bill a $21 million appropriation sought by the Reagan administration for covert operations in Nicaragua.

The Reagan administration says the Nicaraguans are trying to export their 1979 revolution to other Central American countries, especially U.S.-backed El Salvador.

The current talks were set up on June 1, when Secretary of State George P. Shultz made a surprise visit to Nicaragua and met with junta leader Daniel Ortega.

The decision to oust Pastora from the Revolutionary Democratic Alliance, known by its Spanish initials ARDE, was made Monday night at a meeting of the rebel group's directorate, sources inside the group said.

Broadcast reports in Panama said Pastora left that country Tuesday for a trip to the United States.

Pastora has been considered the backbone and inspiration of the ARDE's estimated 4,000 guerrilla fighters, who carry out attacks along Nicaragua's southern border.

Indian troops reopen temple to Sikh pilgrims

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Indian army troops reopened the battle-scarred Golden Temple complex in Amritsar to more than 5,000 Sikhs today, one day after it was abruptly closed to thousands of pilgrims.

The 17th century temple, holiest shrine in the Sikh religion, was opened for two hours this morning, according to police officials in Amritsar. They said pilgrims wishing to enter the complex outside the designated visiting period would need special passes.

The temple was opened Monday to 10,000 pilgrims for the first time since the bloody army assault on Sikh extremists three weeks ago. But it was closed Tuesday after only 300 people had entered, leaving more than 5,000 people waiting outside.

Authorities reportedly were concerned about crowd control and the continuing efforts to recover weapons from the complex.

Reports from Amritsar today said the army had found more weapons stockpiled by the militants, and wished to keep crowds of visitors under control.

All-India Radio said ammunition and four hand grenades were recovered today near the Akal Takht building where militants made their last stand. The army already has recovered a vast arsenal of sophisticated weapons used by militants.

Sikhs, a minority overall in India, make up a small majority over the Hindus in the northern state of Punjab, where Amritsar is located and where Sikh militants have been agitating for greater political and religious rights.

Mrs. Gandhi ordered troops to assault the temple complex to drive out Sikh extremists blamed for a terrorist campaign in the Punjab. Hundreds of Sikhs and soldiers were killed in the June 4-7 assault.

A pilgrim who visited the temple Monday said charred scraps of scripture were distributed to agitated pilgrims who kissed them and kept them as relics.

He also reported that many people were weeping over damage to the bullet-riddled complex and some Sikhs were muttering threats against the army and government.

Commandeered jet still on ground in Cairo

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — A commandeered Iranian passenger jet remained on the ground in Cairo today while Egyptian officials, who refused the two hijackers' request for asylum, sought a country willing to accept them.

An official at the Cairo airport control tower said the hijackers and three crewmen were allowed off the plane late Tuesday to rest before continuing their journey.

The official, who refused to give his name, said it was possible the plane might take off today but did not elaborate.

The hijackers, whose identities were not disclosed, commandeered an Iran Air Boeing 727 over southern Iran on Tuesday. They ordered it to fly to Qatar, where they released 136 passengers and all but three of the crew members.

They then headed for Egypt, even though officials had declared that Egyptian air space was closed to the plane. The airplane landed after the crew reported that it was nearly out of fuel.

Americans' bus bombed

SAN SEBASTIAN, Spain (AP) — While a group of American high school students relaxed in a hotel, their tour bus parked outside was wrecked by fire-bombs, authorities said today. A Basque separatist group claimed responsibility.

The bus was attacked Tuesday after it had brought a group of 34 students and four teachers across the border from France to Spain, the civil governor's office said. None of the Americans — who are from Spokane, Wash., and Boise, Idaho — was injured.

San Sebastian is located in the Basque region on Spain's northern coast near the French border. Some of the students are descendants of Basque shepherds who emigrated to Idaho many years ago.

One of the students, who refused to be identified by name, said she saw two or three young men hurl what appeared to be Molotov cocktails into the bus. The bus caught fire immediately and was heavily damaged before firemen arrived, she said.

Diplomat sees Britons

LONDON (AP) — The Foreign Office says a British diplomat has been allowed to see five of six Britons held by Libya — the first outside contact with them since their arrest in April during the siege of the Libyan Embassy in London.

Vice Consul George Anderson, head of the British interest section at the Italian Embassy in Tripoli, saw the men in the Libyan capital on Monday, the Foreign Office said.

Anderson said the prisoners, who were being held in government buildings rather than jails, told him they were well.

Anderson was not allowed to see the sixth captive Briton, John Campbell. A Foreign Office spokesman suggested Tuesday that this may have been a Libyan oversight and said Britain was pressing for access to Campbell.

Childhood pets may be secret to executives' successes

CHICAGO (AP) — A secret to the success of many top business executives might be the Rover, Fido or Kitty in their childhood, according to a survey by a group that promotes responsible pet ownership.

A poll of Fortune 500 chief executive officers determined that 94 percent of the respondents had had a dog, cat or both as a child, according to the Pets Are Wonderful Council, a nonprofit organization based here.

That compares with figures indicating that about 53 percent of U.S. households include a dog or cat, the group said.

One respondent to the survey wrote that his childhood dog taught him "about love, devotion and sacrifice. He was a good listener and terrific company. I can't imagine growing up without him."

Another said his dogs "are members of the family," while a third quipped that "my Molly is my second sweetheart."

Those responding did so anonymously, said council spokeswoman Jeanne Neylon.

Most of the 74 executives who replied said they had learned responsibility from their childhood pets, she said.

"That was No. 1," Ms. Neylon said. "Empathy was a big one; they learned how to share. A lot of people learned about companionship. When they'd get home, they could talk to their pets."

"Some of them said pets are better than kids; they don't talk back," she added. "And when they felt lonely, they always had a pet to talk to."

Dogs were the most popular childhood pet, followed by cats and then horses, she said. And 75 percent of the executives said their families still have pets.

About 44.7 million U.S. households have pets. Slightly more than 40 percent of households have dogs, while about 27 percent have cats. There are 50.2 million and dogs and 46.3 million cats in the United States, Ms. Neylon said.

The council works with 3,000 animal shelters and 1,800 animal hospitals nationwide, sponsoring education about animals as well as programs that provide pet visits for nursing home residents.

Ms. Neylon said a study a few years ago reported that people who have pets are viewed by others as being better educated, better looking, friendlier and more generous than those without.

Ms. Neylon said she had dogs and cats as a child, and has a cat and a kitten now.

"Someday I'll be taking over the world," she quipped.

Senate authorizes age 21 drinking bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate approved a measure to force states to choose between raising the drinking age to 21 or losing millions of dollars in federal roadbuilding funds.

After the Senate passed the measure 81-16 on Tuesday, supporters predicted fast action in the House, which already has approved a similar version. They said final action before the Fourth of July would send a highway safety message.

"It would be symbolic if, before we have a big roaring holiday, we have this in everybody's mind," Sen. Paula Hawkins, R-Fla., told a news conference.

Sen. Frank R. Lautenberg, D-N.J., estimated that his measure would save 1,000 lives a year by raising the drinking age in a number of states.

Sen. Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H., an opponent of the bill, said supporting it took "a lot of gall and a lot of brass" because it means federal interference in state affairs. But Lautenberg brushed aside such qualms.

"It's time to use the stick," he said.

The measure would withhold 5 percent of a state's highway construction money if the legislature failed to adopt the age 21 minimum by 1987. The penalty would climb to 10 percent in 1988.

In other action, House and Senate negotiators wrestled over a plan to reduce an estimated $600 billion in federal deficits over three years. Democrats prodded Republicans to accept a slowdown in military spending growth — the last point of controversy in the package, which also includes cuts on the domestic side and an assortment of tax increases.

Congress has been struggling to balance in three equal parts the two kinds of spending cuts and the tax increases to form what President Reagan called a "down payment" on the deficit.

Meanwhile, the House approved and sent to Reagan a $1.4 billion emergency spending bill that provides funds for summer jobs for youths. Stripped from the measure earlier by the Senate was $21 million in aid to guerrillas fighting the Nicaraguan government.

Jury tampering probed in De Lorean trial

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The FBI launched a jury-tampering probe in John Z. De Lorean's drug trial after seven jurors said they mysteriously received copies of a congressional report condemning FBI "sting" operations such as the one that led to the automaker's arrest.

U.S. District Judge Robert Takasugi warned the rest of the jurors and alternates to watch their mail for the same document and bring it to him today unopened.

He instructed all panelists to "avoid overhandling the documents" and put them in brown paper bags, apparently to preserve fingerprints, before they deliver them to the court.

"As a lawyer and an ex-FBI agent, it seems to me somebody is trying to interfere with the trial," said Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., whose name was on the envelopes mailed to jurors.

A central issue raised in the De Lorean cocaine trafficking case is whether government agents acted improperly in the "sting" operation that led to his indictment on charges he conspired to distribute $24 million in cocaine.

If convicted, De Lorean could be sentenced to up to 72 years in prison.

Edwards said he was unaware the reports had been sent to the De Lorean jury, but noted many requests for copies of the document had been filled by his office since it was issued May 1.

Edwards' office disclosed late Tuesday it had turned over to the FBI a letter requesting that 13 copies of the summary be mailed to a list of California residents.

The congressman declined to identify the individual who sent the letter, which was dated June 20 and postmarked San Francisco.

Edwards' name appeared on the envelopes because he is chairman of the House Judiciary Subcommittee on Civil and Constitutional Rights, which generated the summary.

The 27-page document, "Executive Summary of Report on Undercover FBI Operations," was highly critical of "stings" and the use of informants, describing how such operations had injured innocent people and undermined public confidence in government agencies.

"Undercover operations carry the potential for manipulating the political process and tampering with history," the summary said.

De Lorean's defense team has suggested he was "set up" by overzealous agents and a greedy informant who masqueraded as drug dealers and preyed on De Lorean's financial woes.

The mystery of the mailed documents surfaced Tuesday when Takasugi startled attorneys with his announcement from the bench that some jurors had brought him copies of a congressional summary they received from Edwards' office.

"I was absolutely blown away," De Lorean's attorney, Howard Weitzman said later.

Weitzman said, however, that jurors' initial comments about the mailing indicated there was no damage to their impartiality. "My opinion is it would have little or no effect on jurors' ability to render a fair verdict."

The prosecutors declined comment.

John De Lorean and his wife Cristina walk past television news crews outside federal court in Los Angeles Tuesday at the end of the day's proceedings in his cocaine trafficking trial. Nuclear 'no no'

Texas senators waded knee-deep into the nuclear waste disposal dilemma earlier this week when they passed without opposition a resolution telling the federal government to look elsewhere for a dumpsite.

The resolution was sent to the House where, if it's adopted, will enact the state's veto to a prospective move to locate a nuclear waste disposal site in Texas. The House should adopt the resolution.

Two of five prospective sites throughout the nation designated by the U.S. Department of Energy are located in the Texas Panhandle. Those sites should not be confused with the current search under way for a site for a low-level radioactive waste disposal location. The two Panhandle sites, if chosen, would contain high-level nuclear wastes.

But federal law allows governors and state legislatures to veto nuclear waste disposal sites within 60 days of a presidential recommendation to Congress. The bill now moving through the legislature would provide the vehicle for the lieutenant governor and House speaker to register the state's veto following a presidential decision.

Certainly enacting the veto would overlook the reality of the situation. The nation is generating increasing amounts of nuclear wastes and an acceptable method of disposal must be found.

But the underground disposal plan now on line is questionable from a safety standpoint and obviously unacceptable to a large number of Americans. Due to that fact, alternate disposal methods should be strongly considered.

As we noted, enacting the state's veto constitutes side-stepping the real issue for the moment. No state will gladly accept nuclear wastes.

Perhaps, though, it will help illustrate to the federal government the need to re-examine its nuclear waste disposal plans.

Real-life rainmakers

It's been quite a few years since self-professed rainmakers plied their trade in the dusty West Texas region, traveling from town to town offering hope of rain to farmers and ranchers.

The "magic" of the rainmakers wasn't always successful; sometimes a hearty helping of disappointment is all the people received. But through the years hope stayed alive that man could control the weather — shaping it to his benefit.

That hope was evident in the recent announcement that the Water Development Board has approved funding for a cooperative three-year agreement with the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation for a cloud seeding demonstration project. The project will be carried out by Texas Tech University in Lubbock.

Notification of the cloud seeding program comes at a time when much of West Texas is in the grips of a long-term drought. While the results of any cloud seeding, if successful, would mostly benefit agribusinessmen for the future, any man-generated rainfall would be appreciated by all area residents.

Man has always experienced a longing for the ability to control the weather and, thus, its effect upon him. This program undoubtedly will put man's scientific abilities to the test.

We will be watching the experiment with keen interest.

Another View:

Paternalistic rule

By order of U.S. District Judge Marilyn Hall Patel, veterans have been relieved, at least temporarily, of an absurd anachronism in the laws governing veterans' benefits. Since 1862, there's been a $10 limit on the amount any veteran can pay an attorney for help in securing benefits or appealing Veterans Administration decisions. Indeed, any lawyer charging more than that is guilty of a crime.

Patel was acting none too soon when she ordered the VA to suspend enforcement of those rules, pending the outcome of a case just brought by several veterans groups, challenging the constitutionality of the $10 limit.

The limit was originally intended to protect veterans from shysters who would charge large fees to obtain for the veterans the same benefits the VA would have given them without any lawyer interfering. And for 120 years, the limit has functioned as it was intended to, essentially preventing veterans from using attorneys.

Recently, however, as increasing numbers of veterans have been filing increasingly complicated appeals against VA decisions — and consistently losing them in Agent Orange cases and radiation exposure cases — the $10 limit has operated as a serious impediment to justice. As Judge Patel pointed out, the paternalistic assumption behind the old rule — that the veterans couldn't figure out for themselves when they did or didn't need a lawyer — is certainly now, if it wasn't always, more insulting than useful.

There isn't another federal court or agency that prevents its clients from hiring attorneys to help them wend their way through the judicial or bureaucratic appeals process. If the courts don't ultimately find constitutional grounds for overturning the VA's $10 limit in the case the veterans groups have brought, then Congress should step in and eliminate the rule itself, on the grounds of simple fairness.

Defective pacemakers deadly

WASHINGTON — Somewhere in the United States, there are 14 elderly Americans walking around with defective pacemakers that could fail at any minute. These people could drop dead in their tracks.

Jack Anderson

I don't know their names; the figure 14 is a conservative statistical assumption by the Food and Drug Administration. It has warned the pacemaker manufacturer privately of a wiring problem in one of its models that could prove fatal to some wearers.

The alleged defect has been discovered in a pacemaker made by Medtronic Inc. of Minneapolis, the world's largest pacemaker manufacturer. The problem has been traced to plastic-coated wires, identified as Model No. 6972, which lead from the pacemaker unit to the heart.

The wiring problem came to light last February when one of Medtronic's biggest customers, the Lancaster (Pa.) General Hospital, operated on dozens of heart patients to remove the potentially faulty wiring component.

It was discovered that under stress the thin plastic coating can crack. Blood will then seep through to the wiring, causing a short circuit. The Lancaster incident led the company to issue a letter to physicians explaining the problem and acknowledging that the wire leaders have a 10 percent failure rate after three years' use.

But the full extent of the danger was not recognized at the time. The FDA said that "in virtually no instance would this type of failure directly result in death." This assurance was repeated by FDA officials in March testimony before Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich. "It is very unlikely that the failure of a lead could result in death or serious injury," said John C. Villforth of the FDA.

But in a subsequent private letter on May 29 to Medtronic president Dale Olseth, the FDA took a sterner position. The letter stated that an FDA "health hazard evaluation committee has concluded that pacer lead malfunction due to insulation damage is likely to occur, and this may result in serious adverse health consequences involving cardiac complications or in death."

The letter added that further information from doctors had led the FDA to believe that the three-year failure rate could actually be as high as 20 percent. A Medtronic spokesman told my associate Tony Capaccio that the company stands by its estimate of a 10 percent failure rate.

Here's how the FDA arrived at its estimate of 14 potential fatalities, according to the letter: There are 18,000 known wearers of pacemakers with the troublesome wiring component, "of which 20 percent may fail," and 20 percent of these failures "may result in sudden cessation of pacing." That would be 3,600 potential failures, of which some 700 would be dangerously abrupt.

Of those 700 pacemakers, "2 percent are in patients who are totally pacer dependent and who may die as a result of pacing system failure," the FDA wrote, concluding, "These assumptions indicate that 14 patients are at risk of dying as a direct result of pacer lead failure."

The Medtronic spokesman said: "Our best statistical people have gone over this assumption. The numbers FDA mentions don't square with our data. ... We're certainly not saying they are wrong, but there is a point of confusion."

The FDA is also preparing a letter to Medtronic citing the firm for keeping inadequate records on the wiring problem. Specifically, though FDA investigators could find only 177 reports of wiring failure in the company's files, they said a Medtronic executive told them the number could be as high as 1,000.

"It is evident that potential failures may be five or six times the number indicated," an FDA report stated, adding, "We feel that Medtronic has not made a proper reaction to a serious problem."

FEUD OF THE WEEK: Francis Mullen, the former FBI official who now heads the Drug Enforcement Administration, is no stranger to controversy. Nor does he shrink from confrontations with the high and mighty.

Recently, Mullen launched a frontal assault on the federal task force on drugs headed by Vice President George Bush. The task force, Mullen said, is a "liability." Its "grandiose claims ... are beginning to discredit and devalue the efforts of the administration's numerous drug control programs."

Mullen gets his ammunition from DEA files, which contain several complaints about the task force's officiousness. These include task force underlings promising DEA resources to foreign officials without consulting DEA; asking foreign officials to share intelligence directly with them, when DEA already gets the information; inflating the quantities and value of drugs seized, and puffing up the task force as an operational enforcement arm instead of a coodinating body.

CONFIDENTIAL FILE: Iran has figured out how to thwart U.S. intelligence agencies' super-sophisticated electronic eavesdropping devices. Instead of communicating by radio, the Iranians now send their most sensitive messages by human couriers, who are immune to the prying ears of spy satellites and similar snoopers. It's making it tougher to monitor developments inside Iran.

— If the Persian Gulf war causes OPEC to collapse, will the Soviet Union replace it as oil supplier to the United States? Administration economists are studying just such a bizarre possibility, noting that the Soviets are always looking for hard currency. Another strange possibility: Libya.

Book discounts gloomy forecast

Researchers at the University of Arizona may be on the threshold of a major breakthrough — developing a method for using salt water in the production of crops.

Edwin Feulner

Successful experiments have been conducted at the university using salt water for growing a protein-rich soybean-type plant. Since the globe has virtually unlimited quantities of salt water, the research suggests that even drought can someday be conquered.

While this is interesting in and of itself, the Arizona research — announced at the recent annual meeting of the American Association for the advancement of Science (AAAS) — also illustrates the point of a major new book, The Resourceful Earth, a collaboration by a group of world-class scientists and academicians headed by Julian Simon of the University of Maryland. The 600-page book (Basil Blackwell, New York and London, 1984) might be viewed as an antidote to the gloom-and-doom scenarios that have dominated the discussion of world resources for many years.

Not only are things not getting particularly worse, the authors write, they are in many cases getting better. This is in stark contrast to the heaven-help-us picture painted in the Carter-era "Global 2000" report. That report, you will recall, seemed to imply that mankind would be soon stalking the caves again if we didn't wise up.

The Resourceful Earth challenges the scientific hocus-pocus presented in Global 2000. On the basis of present trends, the authors say, the world in the year 2000 will be less crowded, less polluted, more ecologically stable, and less vulnerable to resource-supply disruption than the world we now live in. Among other things, the book notes that life expectancy is rising and birth rates falling; food and fish harvests are keeping ahead of population growth; fresh water supplies remain adequate for our future needs; the climate shows no signs of dramatic change; accessible mineral resources are actually more abundant than at any time in the past, and so on.

Not everything is well, the authors certainly agree. But by and large there's no reason to panic.

One of the reasons, Dr. Simon tells us, is because when challenged, man has consistently throughout history demonstrated the ability to overcome adversity. The experiments with salt-water farming are an example. But by no means the only example.

Take a drive through the Mississippi delta sometime. And in places like Belzoni, Yazoo City, Indianola, you'll now find people "farming" catfish. Not smelly bottom-eaters like you used to pull out of the pond as a youngster, but grain- and vitamin-fed fish that are now even finding their way to gourmet tables around the country.

Fifteen years ago catfish farming was virtually unheard of. Last year, U.S. catfish farmers produced 200 million pounds of what they call the "fish with a pedigree."

The point is that if you want to know what the world is likely to be like 20 years from now, you'd learn more by asking the aquaculturists from any bureaucrat in Washington.

The Resourceful Earth suggests that man can continue to produce plenty without raping the earth in the process. The scientists at the University of Arizona and the catfish farmers in the Mississippi delta are proving it.

Anybody want vice presidency?

I was walking down the street minding my own business when I passed the "Mondale for President" headquarters building. There was a long line out front and I asked a man what was going on.

"The candidate is interviewing people to be his vice president," he replied.

Art Buchwald

"What did he do — put an ad in the paper?" I asked.

"Not exactly. But he put out word to all the leaders of the unions, women and minority groups that he'd talk to anyone who wanted the job. I heard about it from my cousin who works with 'Hispanic Joggers for Mondale.'"

"I didn't know Mondale had time to see everyone who wanted to be vice president."

"He has nothing else to do until the July convention. By interviewing vice presidential candidates he can keep his name in the paper. You want to get in line?"

"It looks awfully long."

"That's what I thought, but it moves pretty fast. Every once in a while a volunteer brings out coffee and doughnuts so it isn't as bad as you would think."

I had nothing to do for the afternoon so I went to the end of the line. There was a woman senior citizen in front of me.

"You going to go for it?" I asked her.

"Why not?" she said. "He's going to need a woman on the ticket, and he also needs the senior citizen vote. I could be a twofer."

"Do you think you're up to being vice president of the United States?"

"As far as I can tell, a vice president's main function is to go to funerals, and I go to a lot of funerals."

"I understand the vice president also serves on the National Security Council."

"I thought it was the Social Security Council," she said. "That was one of the reasons I came down for the job."

"Not to worry," I assured her. "You have to go along with the president on national security anyway, so you just agree with everything he says."

"I hear the job pays pretty good."

"You don't get what you would as vice president of General Motors, but you won't starve to death."

"Well, that's better than being on Social Security."

Two hours later I was escorted into the candidate's office. He was surrounded by advisers.

He shook my hand and told me to take a seat. "What can you add to my ticket?" he asked.

"Well, sir, the way I see it the only way you can beat Reagan is if you have the media behind you. If you make a newspaperman your running mate, I can deliver CBS, ABC, NBC, and George Will."

Mondale seemed interested. "Are you sure?"

"I have the Eastern Establishment media in my pocket," I told him. "We've been dying to have one of our own in the White House for years."

"Well, it's something to think about. I'm very impressed with your qualifications. Leave your name with my secretary and we'll get back to you."

"Thank you, sir," I said and left.

I met the little old lady out on the sidewalk. "How did you do?"

She said, "He was very impressed with my qualifications and told me he'd get back to me. Do you think he means it?"

"I'm sure he does. But I wouldn't give up your Social Security check until you see what happens in San Francisco."

nation in brief

Fake tickets cost states $175,000

NEW YORK (AP) — More than $3 million in bogus toll tickets were printed to help finance a scheme to ship $15 million in counterfeit U.S. currency overseas, authorities said.

The U.S. Secret Service displayed 30 cartons of counterfeit items Tuesday in describing the operation that led to the indictment of three men.

The fake toll tickets cost New York and New Jersey $175,000 before the scam was uncovered, authorities said.

Legislation opens doors for bank

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — The nation's seventh largest bank took a step toward solving its financial woes when Gov. James Thompson signed emergency legislation opening the door for an out-of-state buyer to purchase the institution.

Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co. was stabilized last month by a $7.5 billion rescue package put together by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. after a run on deposits by primarily foreign investors.

The bill signed Tuesday by Thompson was designed to cut losses to investors by increasing the number of potential buyers.

NAACP refused teen's files

ATLANTA (AP) — The state refused to let the NAACP see files involving a black teen-ager convicted of killing his white girfriend's mother but agreed to discuss charges of possible discrimination with the civil rights group.

Earl Shinhoster, a regional director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said Tuesday that the Georgia Bureau of Investigation agreed to a meeting within a few weeks.

Authorities "zeroed in on" Michael Moore, 18, despite evidence linking his girlfriend to the murder, Shinhoster said.

Opponent makes affair main issue

BOSTON (AP) — Charges by his opponent that Rep. Gerry Studds engaged in "child abuse" when he had homosexual relations with a 17-year-old House page insult "the intelligence and decency" of the public, an aide to Studds said.

Plymouth County Sheriff Peter Flynn, who faces Studds in a Sept. 18 Democratic primary, made the charge Tuesday as he announced that he would make Studds' censure by the House the main campaign issue.

Both Studds and the page say the 1973 affair was by mutual consent.

Driver says she was 'set up'

WARE, Mass. (AP) — A woman who pleaded no contest to drunken driving charges says she is innocent and was "set up" by police because she won $870,000 when she claimed police freed an intoxicated driver minutes before he killed her husband and daughter.

Debbie Irwin was arrested Memorial Day weekend after police say she almost ran down an officer and then refused to take a breath test.

Mrs. Irwin was fined $200, ordered to pay $280 for a driver education course, placed on probation for a year and had her license suspended for 30 days.

Republicans say 44 percent of delegates will be women

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan-Bush '84 campaign says that 44 percent of the delegates to this summer's Republican National Convention will be women, up sharply from four years ago.

With the GOP worried about a gender gap at the ballot box, President Reagan and other top Republican office-holders have gone out of their way to prod state Republican conventions to balance their delegations voluntarily between the sexes.

Their counterparts in the Democratic Party mandate an equal division of delegate seats between men and women.

At the 1980 Republican convention in Detroit, 29 percent of the delegates were women, according to a survey conducted by the National Federation of Republican Women.

Betty Rendel, president of the 160,000-member National Federation of Republican Women and a delegate to every GOP convention since 1968, said 44 percent would mark "a great improvement."

She recalled that GOP convention delegates back in 1972 had turned aside a proposal to use quotas "and said, 'We'll do it ourselves.' '72 was not good, '76 was not good, '80 was not good and '84 is maybe not going to be perfect, but it sure is going to be a whale of a lot better."

So far, Republicans have elected 1,938 of the 2,235 delegates to this year's convention in Dallas, which runs from Aug. 20 to 23.

Sharon Griffith, a delegate specialist at the Republican National Committee, said that in 35 states and the District of Columbia that have completed their delegation selection, 898 men and 649 women have been chosen. That is a 58-42 split.

John Buckley, deputy press secretary for the Reagan-Bush re-election drive, said it expects women to hold 44 percent of all seats when the final delegates are chosen.

"We as a party do not believe in quotas the way the Democratic Party does. We believe in voluntarily trying to equalize the number of women and men," said Buckley.

He said President Reagan and GOP chief Frank Fahrenkopf had asked state party leaders to increase the number of women delegates, and Sen. Charles Percy in Illinois, Malcolm Wallop in Wyoming and Richard Lugar in Indiana as well as Arizona's Republican congressmen had given up their own seats so women could be chosen.

Mrs. Rendel just returned from a GOP convention in her home state of Indiana, where she was formerly a state vice chairwoman. "We came out with 46.3 percent women in Indiana. That's a far cry better than we were in 1980, when it was 17 percent," she said.

Noting that one man told her he was always a GOP delegate, she said, "This was the time we had to tough up and say to them, 'It's someone else's turn.'"

Four years ago, one of the most controversial actions at the GOP convention was the party's reversal of its traditional support for the Equal Rights Amendment. Polls have consistently shown that Reagan has less support among women than men.

Ms. Griffith, the national committee's delegate specialist, said Georgia is sending 17 women delegates to the convention and only 13 men. Texas will have 55 women and 54 men, and Ohio 45 women and 44 men.

"Pennsylvania is probably the most lopsided state," she said. Its delegation includes 87 men and only 11 women. Men outnumber women 22-11 in North Carolina's delegation and 23-13 in South Carolina.

GOP rules encourage states to achieve an equal balance, as well as to encourage participation by minorities, youth, ethnic heritage groups and senior citizens.

The Democrats have state-by-state affirmative action goals for their delegations.

It is not yet known how many minority delegates will be in Dallas. Buckley said it is believed that in 1980, minorities comprised about 5 percent of the total GOP delegates and alternates, but exact figures were unavailable.

Lawmakers introduce tax bills

Stan Schlueter

AUSTIN (AP) — House members should find out today what the tax payer thinks about a $1.35 billion tax package proposed to pay for public school reforms and highway improvements.

Rep. Stan Schlueter, D-Killeen, introduced the tax measure in the House Tuesday and Sen. Grant Jones, D-Abilene, filed the same bill in the Senate.

One of the first provisions scheduled in the public hearing before the House Ways and Means Committee would do away with the special bank stocks tax and put banks under the state franchise tax, with the proceeds reimbursed to local governments.

Schlueter said he hoped to have the bill ready for House debate by Thursday, or Friday at the latest.

Jones set Senate committee hearings on his bill Thursday and Friday. Senators cannot vote on a tax bill until, and if, it passes the House first.

Schlueter told a news conference Tuesday the package was designed to take care of the three-year cost of the teachers pay raise and school improvements, as well as about $400 million for highway improvements.

Parts of the bill would raise existing taxes but not the state sales tax. However much of of the measure is devoted to erasing present exemptions to the state sales tax.

The tax proposals include:

— Doubling the state gasoline tax to 10 cents a gallon.

— Increasing the motor vehicle sales and rental tax from 4 to 5 percent.

— Increasing liquor taxes 20 percent.

— Lowering the mixed beverage tax from 10 to 8 percent and putting highballs under the sales tax. Schlueter said this would result in increased revenue for city and county governments.

— Increasing the state franchise tax from $4.25 to $5.25 per $1,000 of taxable capital.

— Increasing motor vehicle registration fees $25 over three years, with a $12.50 increase the first year.

STATE

— Repealing the exemption on first-year insurance premiums.

— Raising hotel and motel taxes from 3 to 4 percent.

The bill would eliminate sales tax exemptions on computer software; advertising in newspapers, on radio and television and billboards; amusement admissions; cable TV; personal services; auto parking and storage; and home fertilizer.

The bill would remove exemptions for food products, including ice cream and other frozen deserts, doughnuts, cakes and pastries.

It also would place all tobacco products under the sales tax. Schlueter said presently all tobacco products are under the special tobacco tax except snuff, which is under the sales tax.

The tobacco tax on cigarettes would be increased one cent a pack and would be dedicated to cancer research.

Schlueter said state fees for amusement machines would be doubled and all telephone operations, including new long distance companies, would be brought under the current 4 percent gross receipts tax that telephone companies pay.

A separate part of the bill would increase tuition at state colleges and univerities. Schlueter said it has been the legislative concept to increase tuition so it would be at least 15 percent of the cost per student. He said tuition today represents less than 4 percent of the cost. His bill would provide a 2 percent increase in tuition a year until it reaches 15 percent of the cost.

Medical school tuition would be increased to pay for 10 percent of the cost of the education.

Parents sue blood center, claiming AIDS killed son

DALLAS (AP) — The parents of a 2-year-old boy are suing the Dallas Blood Center, claiming their son contracted acquired immune deficiency syndrome and died after receiving blood transfusions supplied by the center.

David and Denise Witherspoon filed suit in state district court here Monday saying the center failed to test blood properly, screen donors and warn users of the risk of contracting AIDS.

The suit accuses the blood center of violating the Texas Deceptive Trade Practices and Consumer Protection act by selling blood that was "defective and dangerous."

But the center's director said that the child could not have contracted AIDS from the donated blood. He said the donor whose blood was given to James Witherspoon did not appear to have the disease.

"We know who gave the blood, and the donor does not appear to have the AIDS syndrome," said Dr. James Wheeler. "The donor is in no known risk group."

Wheeler said the center will be able to prove that the child did not die of "transfusionally related AIDS."

The boy was given blood transfusions in the intensive care unit of Parkland Memorial Hospital after his premature birth on Oct. 28, 1981.

He later was re-admitted to the hospital several times with pneumonia and a cytomegalovirus infection, illnesses that usually afflict AIDS victims. He died on Feb. 6.

Phils find winner in bullpen

Bucs Thompson belts four home runs

By Associated Press

A lack of starting pitchers was hardly a concern of the Philadelphia Phillies when they began defense of their National League crown with the presence of four-time Cy Young Award winner Steve Carlton and last year's recipient John Denny.

But with Carlton having a so-so season and Denny on the shelf, it was time for somebody with a strong arm to pick up the slack. Out of the bullpen came Kevin Gross, whose biggest problem was strength — too much of it to be accurate. He was constantly overthrowing.

"I realized I had to take time with my delivery and be smooth and the ball would pop," Gross said Tuesday night after hurling seven strong innings in a 3-0 victory over New York that moved the Phillies into a virtual tie with the upstart Mets for the lead in the NL East. "Tonight I did all that. I really felt good out there."

"I'm not trying to pitch as good as he does," Gross said of Denny, who made his last start May 24 before being placed on the disabled list with an inflamed nerve in his right elbow. Denny was 4-3 with a 1.68 earned run average. Gross is now 4-2 with a 2.61 ERA and a burning desire to remain in the starting rotation.

In relief, Al Holland worked the final two innings, striking out three for his 17th save.

Mike Schmidt's 16th home run and Juan Samuel's fifth provided more than enough offense against Walt Terrell, 5-7.

Pirates 9-8, Cubs 0-9

Thompson hit four of eight home runs on a windswept afternoon at Wrigley Field which also featured a first-game shutout by his teammate Rick Rhoden, 6-5. Chicago hung on to win the second game despite two homers by Thompson and two by Pittsburgh's Doug Frobel.

"The wind helped and I made good contact," Thompson said of an 18-mph breeze.

Rhoden's four-hit, seven-strikout effort on the heels of Monday's four-hit, 3-0 shutout by Jose DeLeon marked the first time the Cubs had been blanked in consecutive games at Wrigley Field since Bob Gibson and Tracy Stallard of St. Louis did it in 1965.

Thompson, who has eight homers this season, led off a five-run third inning with a blast off Dennis Eckersley, 1-5, and hit his sixth of the season in the sixth inning of the opener. Johnny Ray had three hits, including a run-scoring double in the second inning and a two-run triple in the third.

The run-starved Cubs struck in the first inning of the nightcap with a six-run outburst against Larry McWilliams, 4-6. Gary Woods' two-run homer, his second, highlighted the assault, which included one of Jody Davis' four hits. Keith Moreland's sixth homer made it 6-1 in the third inning.

Rich Bordi, 3-1, was the winner. Lee Smith struggled for his 15th save.

Padres 5, Dodgers 0

Ed Whitson, 8-4, and Goose Gossage combined on a six-hitter and were backed by a 14-hit attack as San Diego won for the fourth straight time to increase its lead in the West to five games over Atlanta. The lead is the largest in San Diego's 16-year history.

The Padres made it 33 hits for the two games. Garry Templeton, whose second-inning single was the game-winner, had four hits. Steve Garvey and Carmelo Martinez had three apiece.

Astros 10, Braves 5

A two-run homer by Jerry Mumphrey and Jose Cruz' two-run triple keyed a 12-hit Houston attack and Joe Niekro, 7-7, won his fifth straight decision.Mumphrey's fourth homer of the year came on the first pitch after Cruz had singled to start the Houston sixth against Atlanta's Rick Camp, 3-1, who had taken a two-hit shutout into the inning.

Angels escape Rangers' ambush in 14th

By Associated Press

In a pinch, the California Angels got a perfect pitch from Bruce Kison and a perfect throw from catcher Bob Boone.

The Angels, on the brink of another agonizing one-run loss, escaped major trouble in the 11th inning Tuesday night and then reversed their fortunes when Rod Carew singled home Gary Pettis in the top of the 14th for a 3-2 victory over the Texas Rangers.

After three straight losses, and five one-run defeats in their last nine games, the visiting Angels seemed headed in that direction again when the Rangers loaded the bases with one out in the bottom of the 11th.

Kison ran the count to 3-2 on pinch hitter Marv Foley and then struck him out.

Boone then ended the threat by picking off pinch runner Alan Bannister from third base.

With one out in the 14th, Pettis walked on four pitches from Odell Jones, 1-3, and then stole his 30th base of the season. Carew sliced Jones' next pitch into right for the game-winning hit, which evened Kison's record at 1-1.

California's victory kept the Angels atop the tight AL West, one game ahead of the Twins.

"We've been getting the opportunities and having the right men hitting, and nothing's been happening," said California Manager John McNamara. "We've lost one-run ballgames because our big people haven't been hitting."

The Angels tied the game with two outs in the ninth. An error by shortstop Curtis Wilkerson allowed Jerry Narron to reach second, and he scored on Pettis' single off Charlie Hough, who was trying to win his sixth straight start.

American League

Tigers 9, Yankees 7

Lance Parrish drilled a two-out, two-run homer in the top of 10th inning at Yankee Stadium as Detroit opened up a 10-game lead over second-place Toronto in the AL East.

The Tigers, who took a 4-0 lead in the second inning, trailed 7-4 going into the eighth. But an error by third baseman Roy Smalley opened the gates to three unearned runs — two scoring on Alan Trammell's single and the other on Darrell Evans' pinch-single.

In the 10th, Trammell singled with one out off Clay Christiansen, 2-3. Trammell was then thrown out trying to steal, but Evans walked and Parrish followed with his 14th home run of the season.

Brewers 6, Blue Jays 3

Robin Yount homered and drove in three runs as Milwaukee sent the Blue Jays to their fourth straight loss.

Yount's sixth homer, a two-run shot, gave the host Brewers a 6-2 lead in the fifth inning.

Milwaukee scored four runs, helped by a pair of Toronto errors, in the bottom of the first after George Bell singled home two runs for the Blue Jays in the top of the first.

Don Sutton, 5-7, got the victory and Rollie Fingers recorded his 14th save. Red Sox 5, Orioles 2

Rookie Al Nipper and the Red Sox were in command in Baltimore.

Nipper, 1-2, held the Orioles hitless until Rich Dauer doubled with one out in the sixth. Nipper went 6 1-3 innings nd Bob Stanley got his 13th save.

Mike Boddicker, 9-6, was not sharp for Baltimore. He did not retire any of the three men he faced in the third inning.

Bill Buckner got the 1,999th hit of his career, an RBI single in the fourth.

Mariners 5, White Sox 0

Mark Langston avenged a recent loss to Chicago and LaMarr Hoyt by pitching a five-hitter and striking out nine.

Langston, 5-6, had lost a 5-4 decision to Hoyt on June 20 in Seattle.

The visiting Mariners jumped ahead in the first when Ken Phelps hit his 10th home run and Al Chambers followed with his first.

Dave Henderson smacked a solo home run in the ninth to cap the scoring.

Twins 8, Indians 3

Leadoff man Kirby Puckett went 4-for-5, including a double, scored three runs and drove in another to pace the Twins in Cleveland.

Puckett has walked just three times in 173 at-bats since being recalled from the minors on May 7. But the 23-year-old center fielder is hitting .335.

Kent Hrbek added three hits.

Frank Viola, 7-7, went 7 2-3 innings for the victory. He allowed solo home runs to Andre Thornton, No. 14, and Carmen Castillo, his sixth, in the eighth inning. Ron Davis picked up his 14th save.

A's 8-6, Royals 4-1

Curt Young, recalled from the minors four days earlier, allowed just two hits over 6 2-3 innings as the A's won the nightcap. He retired the first 12 Royals before Hal McRae singled off the left-hander's leg to lead off the fifth.

Rickey Henderson had three hits to spark Oakland to victory in the sloppily played opener. Lary Sorensen won his second game in 10 decisions and Bill Caudill registered his 15th save.

Pablo hides emotions

Morales shatters world mark

Olympic Trials

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Pablo Morales, like all the other qualifiers, is thrilled at making the U.S. Olympic swimming team. It's just that he doesn't show it.

"This is a stepping stone (to the Olympic Games in Los Angeles). If I appear to be nonchalant, it's just because I'm an easy going person," Morales said, a big grin on his face. "Really, I'm very excited about it."

Morales on Tuesday became the second Stanford University swimmer to shatter a world record in two days of Olympic Trials. Teammate John Moffet set a world mark in the men's 100-meter breaststroke on Monday.

Tuesday, Morales won the 100-butterfly in world-record time; a third Stanford swimmer, Susan Rapp, set an American record in the women's 200-breaststroke; and a fourth swimmer from Stanford, Jeff Kostoff, beat American record-holder Jesse Vassallo for the top spot in the 400-individual medley.

"We didn't plan it that way," Morales, 19, said of the outstanding performance by Stanford swimmers. "But we hoped it would happen. Hopefully, there will be more."

Morales' winning time of 53.38 seconds broke the American and world record of 53.44 set by Matt Gribble of the University of Miami last August. Gribble, the 1982 world champion who has been slowed by a back injury, finished second to Morales with a time of 54.07.

The top two finishers in each event qualify for the Olympics. Today's schedule included the men's 100-freestyle and 200-backstroke and the women's 400-freestyle and 100-backstroke.

The week-long trials at the Indiana University Natatorium end on Saturday.

Also qualifying Tuesday for the Olympics Rapp and Kim Rhodenbaugh in the 200-breaststroke; Cynthia Woodhead and Mary Wayte in the 200-freestyle; and Kostoff and Vassallo in the 400-individual medley.

Rapp, who will be 19 next week, was clocked at 2:31.54 to break the former American record of 2:32.41 by Jeanne Childs, who finished fifth. Rhodenbaugh was more than three seconds behind Rapp at 2:34.91.

Kostoff, the American record holder in the 800-freestyle, won the 400-individual medley at 4:21.37.

Cartwright triple does in Midland

From Staff Reports

Alan Cartwright tripled home the winning run in the fifth inning as the El Paso Diablos took a 6-5 Texas League victory over the Midland Cubs.

Cartwright's triple off the fence scored former major leaguer Kelvin Moore and broke a 5-5 tie. Moore earlier had slugged a two-run homer in the first inning and ended a Midland rally in the fifth inning by catching a line drive that appeared destined as an extra base hit down the first base line.

Darrin Jackson was 3-5 with a triple, scored two runs and drove in a run for the Diablos.

Johnson Wood, 3-0, was the winning pitcher. The loser was Larry Hrynko, 0-3.

The win gave El Paso the series, 4-2, as the Cubs departed for six games in Beaumont against the Gators, first half pennant winners.

Centerfielder Mike Brumley singled to open the ninth and was called out trying to stretch it into a double. The instant replay scoreboard TV view, however, showed that Brumley appeared to be safe. Manager George Enright erupted out of the dugout to argue the call and was ejected from the game along with Brumley.

After relieving Hyrnko with one out in the fourth, Jim Boudreau pitched two-hit ball for the rest of the way.

In other Texas League action Tuesday night, San Antonio defeated Beaumont, 5-3, and Arkansas beat Tulsa, 6-2. Jackson's scheduled game at Shreveport was postponed because of wet grounds.

Todd Gauntlett broke up a 3-3 tie in the eighth inning to give the San Antonio Dodgers a 5-3 victory over the Beaumont Golden Gators.

Gauntlett's ground out to third allowed Larry See, who had walked and moved to third on a sacrifice by Gilberto Reyes and a throwing error, to score the tie-breaking run.

The final run by San Antonio came in the ninth when Joe Vavra walked, moved to third on a single by Stu Pederson and came home on sacrifice fly by Ralph Bryant.

Pederson was 3-4, driving in two runs with three singles. James Steels was 2-4 for Beaumont with an RBI.

The wining pitcher was Tim Meeks, 7-6. The loser was Pete Kutsukos, 3-3.

Homers by Bob Geren and Curt Ford paced the Arkansas Travelers to a 6-2 victory over the Tulsa Drillers, but it took some pressure pitching in the seventh inning to preserve the victory.

The Travelers had a 4-2 lead in the seventh inning when starter Matt Kinzer loaded the bases with only one out. Reliever Pat Perry came on and struck out Randy Asadoor and cleanup hitter Javier Ortiz to end the threat.

Arkansas added two more runs in the eight when Greg Guinn tripled home a run and scored on a sacrifice by Bob Helsom.

Kinzer, 3-1, was the winning pitcher. The loser was Steve Kordish, 4-6.

NBA retires old coin for lottery

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The National Basketball Association is retiring the 100-year old silver dollar it has been using to determine which team gets the No. 1 pick in its college player draft.

The coin flip is being replaced by a seven-team lottery.

The switch is aimed at creating more interest and avoiding potential embarrassment.

The alteration of the draft structure came as a surprise because the NBA's Competition and Rules Committee, composed of coaches and general managers, had not made a firm recommendation. Starting next season, the draft also will consist of seven rounds instead of 10.

Under the new system, the seven clubs that do not make the 16-team playoffs will have their names drawn in a lottery to decide their position for the June draft.The playoff clubs will continue to draft in inverse order of their records, with the team with the worst mark picking eighth.

Stern and other league officials feel the new rule will prevent the possibility of a non-playoff team deliberately losing games to improve its drafting position.

The board's other major activity at its lone day of meetings — which followed two days of discussions by general managers and coaches — centered on the San Diego Clippers, whose owners announced in May they were moving the franchise to Los Angeles.

Stern said the NBA's other club owners supported the league's position and its $25 million lawsuit filed in federal court last month against the Clippers. The lawsuit seeks confirmation of the NBA's right to approve or disapprove the relocation of franchises.

Meanwhile, Clippers' management reacted swiftly to the board's action. The club has maintained the NBA constitution does not require approval of franchise relocations.

The NBA maintains all franchise relocations must be approved by the Board of Governors.

The NBA has scheduled the Clippers to play their 1984-85 home games in Los Angeles, pending outcome of litigation that Stern believes could be settled "within months, or as long as years."

Utah Jazz sold

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Utah Jazz, burdened for years by debt, took what owner Sam Battistone called "the biggest step in the history of the franchise" by selling 50 percent of the National Basketball Association club to a wealthy Saudi Arabian family for $8 million.

Battistone, who helped bring the Jazz to Salt Lake City from New Orleans in 1979, announced Tuesday that half of the club had been purchased by Triad America, founded in 1974 by Saudi-born Adnan Khashoggi and presided over by his brother Essam.

Bail set for Sax imposter

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Bail has been set at $500,000 for a man the FBI says passed himself off as Los Angeles Dodgers infielder Steve Sax and also as Sax's brother Dave, who plays for the Albuquerque Dukes, as a way to bilk women fans out of money.

FBI agents arrested Frank Berkowitz, 25, of New York, Monday as he tried to pick up money wired to him as part of an undercover operation, spokesman Bobby Jones said in Los Angeles.

U.S. Magistrate Elliot Sattler set bail at $500,000 Tuesday after Berkowitz was charged with federal wire fraud. He ordered Berkowitz transferred to Los Angeles for further proceedings.

The defendant initally refused to tell authorities who he was.

Jones said Berkowitz allegedly posed as Steve Sax, the Dodgers' second baseman, and Dave Sax, who plays for the Dodgers' minor league club in Albuquerque.

USFL names Panther back

From wire reports

FOOTBALL—Michigan Panthers' running back John Williams, who rushed 15 times for 161 yards, including two touchdowns, in a 20-17 victory over the Chicago Blitz on Sunday, was named the USFL Player of the Week...

After months of negotiations, the New Orleans Saints and the New Orleans Superdome have reached a tentative agreement to cut the NFL team's rent by $800,000 a year, Gov. Edwin Edwards says. In addition, the state will try to provide land near Fontainebleau State Park in St. Tammany Parish which the team can use as a training site for $1 a year. Although the lease agreement has not been signed, the proposal was worked out as a way of assuring that the Saints would remain in New Orleans. The proposal gives the team two five-year options on the Superdome...

BASEBALL—Leron Lee's 14th homer was only enough to give the Lotte Orions a 1-1, rain-shortened tie with the Seibu Lions in Japanese League play...

A Triple A team for Calgary became a virtual certainty when the city council agreed to spend $1.5 million to upgrade Foothills Athletic Park to Pacific Coast League standards. Calgary sports promoter Russ Parker said he's starting plans to bring the Salt Lake City Gulls, which he recently bought for an undisclosed sum, to Calgary in time for the 1985. Foothills Park will be a "comfortable home for the team once seating is expanded to 5,000, new dugouts are built and washrooms and ticket facilities improved," said Parker...

GOLF—Former Duke footballer Mike Souchak was inducted to the Golf Hall of Fame at Pinehurst, N.C. Souchak won 16 PGA tour events in a 20-year career...

The LPGA tour, absent from Houston since 1978, returns July 4-7, 1985 with the $300,000 Mazda Hall of Fame Classic at Sweetwater CC...

GENERAL—Howard Cosell and North Carolina coach Dean Smith told Congress that the NCAA, rather than the federal government, should be responsible for cleaning up what Cosell called the "corruption that so pervades big-time college sports. I question whether the federal government should get into this," said Cosell, after listing a number of incidents in which college athletes were unable to read.

"The universities are supposed to lead," Smith said, and they should take it upon themselves to solve the current problems. The committee listened to Kevin Ross, a Chicago-area athlete, tell how he was recruited to play basketball for Creighton University even though he was illiterate...

The Baltimore City Council tentatively approved a resolution permitting the use of municipal funds for the construction of a new sports stadium. If passed, the resolution would reverse a 10-year-old ordinance that prohibits using public funds for construction of any stadium other than Memorial Stadium. If given final approval Thursday night, the measure would appear as a charter amendment question on the November city election ballot.

Councilman Joselph Diblasi said its passage is necessary to lure a major league football team back to Baltimore to replace the Colts, who moved to Indianapolis last spring...

Torch reaches Utah reservations

VERNAL, Utah (AP) — The Olympic torch passes through the Uintah and Ouray Indian Reservation today en route to the Summer Olympic Games at Los Angeles.

A handful of spectators were at the Utah border late Tuesday as May Verdugo of Phoenix, a runner for AT&T, carried the 2-pound, 2-ounce torch across the border with Colorado near Dinosaur National Monument.

The night stop was at Vernal's Uintah High School, said Chris Talbott, a spokesman for AT&T, which is managing and underwriting the Olympic Torch Relay.

The run began May 8 in New York and will conclude July 28 in Los Angeles to signify the start of the Summer Olympics.

Today's schedule called for the torch to leave Vernal this morning, pass through the Ute Indians' Bottle Hollow Resort, Roosevelt and Duchesne and arrive in Heber City about 10 p.m.

The route of the propane torch, along U.S. 40, is in the Uintah Basin, Utah's major oil and gas area.

Swale anaphylactic shock victim, says vet

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Swale, the Kentucky Derby and Belmont Stakes winner who inexplicably collapsed and died June 17 after a light workout at Belmont Park, may have been the victim of exercise-induced anaphylactic shock, an allergist says.

"It's the answer. I know it is," said Dr. Claude Frazier of Asheville, who for years has studied anaphylactic shock resulting from insect stings and, more recently, from exercise.

Anaphylactic shock is an extremely rapid allergic reaction that begins with hives and difficult breathing and progresses in minutes to potentially lethal shock as blood vessels shut down, Frazier said.

The pathologists who examined Swale's body aren't as sure as Frazier about the cause of death.

"It (anaphylactic shock) is a plausible explanation," said Dr. Peter Mann of the University of Pennsylvania's Laboratory for Large Animal Pathology. "It's as feasible as a number of other things. There's no way to prove it."

Pennsylvania pathologists previously had ruled out heart failure and said microscopic analysis of Swale's tissues had provided no further explanation of the cause of death.

Cruz, who had three hits, belted his triple to right-center in the seventh off reliever Pete Falcone. Niekro had singled and Denny Walling, who later added a three-run homer, his first, had walked off Camp.

Cardinals 6, Expos 3

George Hendrick continued his clutch hitting with his 10th game-winning RBI, a two-run single that keyed a four-run St. Louis first inning.

Reds 4, Giants 2

Mario Soto, 8-1, tossed a seven-hitter for his seven straight victory with five no-decisions along the way.

Cowboys sign second-round pick

DALLAS (AP) — Victor Scott has signed a three-year contract with the Dallas Cowboys, team vice president Gil Brandt announced.

Brandt said the defensive back from the University of Colorado, a second-round draft choice, signed the contract late Tuesday.

"He's going to be an excellent player, no doubt," Brandt said.

The signing of Scott left only three Cowboys' draft picks who have not signed, according to team spokesman Greg Aiello.

Aiello said the contract, which was negotiated between Brandt and Scott's agent, Jack Mills, includes a series of one-year contracts.

Aiello would not disclose the terms of the contract.

Scott will likely compete for starting right cornerback position, against veterans Ron Fellows and Rod Hill, Aiello said. The slot was vacated by Dennis Thurman, who held the position for the past three years. Thurman is switching to safety, Aiello said.

The three unsigned draft choices are third-round draft choice Fred Cornwell, a tight end from the University of Southern California; fifth-round pick Steve Pelluer, a quarterback from the University of Washington; and 12th round draftee Carl Lewis. Lewis, a track star who will be competing in this year's Olympics, is currently un-signable, Aiello said.

Aiello said Scott will report to the Dallas Cowboys' training camp July 8th in Thousand Oaks, Calif.

Wade celebrates with Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — With the women's participation at Wimbledon exactly 100 years old, it was fitting that Virginia Wade should receive a standing ovation for a first-round victory.

Wade, Wimbledon champion in 1977, 38 years old and playing in her 23rd consecutive All England tennis championships — an all-time record — came from behind Tuesday to beat Ann Henricksson of the United States 3-6, 6-3, 6-4. Afterward, she said: "I wasn't all that sharp because I don't play that often. But I was still nervous, just like I always am, and felt very privileged."

While Tuesday was predominently women's day, the sexes were alternating on the show courts today.

First up on Center Court was Jimmy Connors, the No. 3 men's seed, against Sweden's Stefan Simonsson, followed by Kathy Jordan against Virginia Ruzici.

Martina Navratilova was to meet Amy Holton on Court No. 1 followed by Sweden's Stefan Edberg against Johan Kriek. Ivan Lendl, the No. 2 seed from Czechoslovakia, was to play Derek Tarr of South Africa on Court 2.

Wade has seen more Wimbledons than other player here and will be one of 17 past woman champions parading on the Center Court next Monday in a special centenary celebration.

"Fifteen years ago here, the balls and courts were so fast that people began to enjoy women's tennis."

"Right back when women's tennis first started, we were treated with respect. What has happened more recently is that the respect has turned into real admiration for women's competitiveness and talent," she said.

Two of Wade's contemporaries in her long career have been Billie Jean King —six-time singles titlist here — and defending champion Navratilova.

Asked which of them would win matched at their peak, Wade could not choose.

Wimbledon

"It would be a fascinating contest. Billie Jean was such an incredibly tough match player and knew how to play each opponent. Her greatest asset was her ability to get fired up and find cracks in her opponents' armor.

"Martina is simply a superb athlete. She goes and plays her game and does not have to work out what the other person is doing. She's a different animal."

Pam Shriver, Navratilova's longtime doubles partner — they won the Grand Slam of doubles at the French Open earlier this month — probably knows the Czech-born, naturalized American better than any other player.

"I think if anything I don't hold her in quite the high esteem that other players do 'cause I know her so well," Shriver told reporters.

"My God, in doubles, I've seen her hit some unbelievable shots but I've also seen her hit some unbelievably horrendous shots.

Derrbyberry sidelined at SW Texas

SAN MARCOS (AP) — Southwest Texas State basketball coach Bob Derryberry resigned Tuesday because of medical reasons, university athletic director Bill Miller said.

Derryberry, who posted a 48-32 record for SWT in the past three years, will leave his post effective Sept. 1. Miller says he hopes to announce a replacement within the next few days.

The coach, 47, has been plagued with respiratory problems for the past two years. He said his resignation is in the best interest of himself, his family and the university.

"If there were any way I felt I could carry on, I wouldn't even think about this," Derryberry said. "It's tough to work 25 years to get a good job and then have to give it up like this."

He said he has no immediate plans but would remain in San Marcos for the forseeable furture.

Derryberry led the Bobcats to two second place ties in the Lone Star Conference and finished fifth this year.

Lopez lawyers gain files access

MACON, Ga. (AP) — Saul Lopez, a pitcher for a Pittsburgh Pirates Class A farm team, waived a commitment hearing on rape and murder charges after prosecutors agreed to give his lawyers access to their evidence files.

Lopez, a hard-throwing righthander with the Macon Pirates, was charged Thursday in the death of one of his neighbors, Mary B. Ferrell, 25, a nurse who was raped and strangled.

Lopez, who is being held in the Bibb County jail, also is charged with criminal intent to commit burglary in a separate incident.

Magazine spreading to video

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A homemade blue collar magazine, spiced with barbed humor and heavy on jobless laments, is branching out into television as it celebrates its fifth anniversary.

"We feel that working men and women have things worth saying and writing about, and they ought to be encouraged to express them," said Larry Evans, 36, a furloughed steelworker who is the driving force behind "The Mill Hunk Herald" and its new television cousin.

"Video is the future. It's the new world. We can reach a wider audience this way," said Evans, a graduate of Loyola College with a degree in economics who was laid off at U.S. Steel Corp.'s Edgar Thomson Works in 1981.

The irreverent magazine published the first of its 14 issues in February 1979 when steel furnaces were churning full blast. It appears whenever Evans and his all volunteer staff raise enough money to pay the printer.

In January, Evans produced the first of a hour-long monthly program called "Our Own Show," which airs six times a week in different timeslots on Warner Amex Communication Inc.'s community access channel. The show spotlights mill towns, current strikes, labor's heritage and unemployment, with Evans and his staff often doing the interviewing and the camera work simultaneously.

In addition, Evans has in production a show called "Millhunk MTV," which puts activist songs to videos of shuttered plants, depressed communities and rusting factories adorned with "For Sale" signs.

Warner Amex provides free equipment and studio time for public access shows under its contract with the city of Pittsburgh. Though no ratings were ever taken, the show reaches a very limited portion of Warner's 72,000 subscribers, officials said.

The $1 magazine has 2,600 subscribers and sales of about 500 issues at newstands.

The magazine takes its name from "Hunky," a shortened version of Hungarian and an ethnic slur aimed at eastern European immigrants who came to work in the steel mills. Hunk has since become a generic name for mill hand.

It was created by a band of upstarts dissatisifed with the United Steelworkers of America publication.

"We were frustrated. It started as a communication between mills," said Evans, dressed in a sweater, jeans and sneakers as he edited film. "Our union paper was glossing over some things we thought were important, and there was no way to be critical of the union. It's an experiment in democratic journalism."

Despite a loss on today's hand, the team led by Malcolm Brachman of Dallas defeated the squad of Edgar Kaplan of New York to earn the right to represent the U.S. in the 7th World Team Olympiad, to play in Seattle, Wash., this October.

The contract in both rooms was four hearts. For the Kaplan team, North was the declarer and East led the queen of spades. Declarer won on the board and led a diamond to the jack and ace. He won the spade return in hand, cashed the king of diamonds and ruffed a diamond. He led a spade and ruffed low when West opted to sluff his last diamond.

Declarer cashed the king of trumps, ruffed a diamond high as West sluffed a club, and then cashed the ace of clubs. When declarer now exited with a club, West had to ruff his partner's trick and lead a trump away from his 10 into dummy's A-Q-9. So declarer made the rest of the tricks for an overtrick.

In the other room, South won the opening spade lead, cashed the ace of clubs and led another club. East won the king and returned a low club. Declarer sluffed a diamond as West ruffed. West returned a diamond to his partner's ace, and when East continued with a fourth round of clubs, declarer's goose was cooked. Since he could not afford to ruff low, he ruffed with the jack. But now West's 10 of hearts was promoted to the setting trick.

The Kaplan team gained 11 International Match Points on the hand to keep within a few points of Brachman at the halfway stage of the match.

'Captain Kangaroo' will set sail for new TV series

NEW YORK (AP) — Bob Keeshan, who for nearly 30 years entertained children as kind-hearted "Captain Kangaroo," will close the curtain on the award-winning program in December.

Keeshan will continue on CBS with a new show, "Storybreak," starting in January, the network said Tuesday.

Keeshan, who created the clown Clarabelle on the "Howdy Doody" show, launched "Captain Kangaroo" on Oct. 3, 1955.

"Storybreak," a Saturday afternoon series, will try to motivate children to read by presenting original adaptations of literature.

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — Sybil Carter, the wife of former first brother Billy Carter, balked when a doctor told her she needed treatment for alcoholism as badly as her husband, but she discovered "counseling was the most important thing to happen in my life."

Five years later, she is promoting a drug and alcohol program at Union Pacific railroad designed to encourage railroad offenders to seek help without fear of punishment.

"I can't tell you how much good counseling does. Do not leave the families out," she told a group of Union Pacific representatives Tuesday.

Mrs. Carter said her husband has also been sober five years.

"Billy still cusses a lot, but he doesn't drink anymore," she said.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Linda Marchiano, who appeared under the name Linda Lovelace in the X-rated film "Deep Throat," has added her support to the city's new law banning violent pornography.

Ms. Marchiano filed a friend-of-the-court motion Monday with U.S. District Judge Sarah Evans Barker in an effort to dissuade legal challenges to the ordinance approved in April by the City-County Council.

An injunction issued by Ms. Barker has put the ordinance on hold while its constitutionality is tested in the courts.

Ms. Marchiano says she was coerced into her role as Linda Lovelace during the 1970s by people from whom she has since "escaped."

Infant mortality drops

Seventy years ago about 100 in every 1,000 American children died before reaching their first birthday. Now the rate is 11 deaths per 1,000 infants born.

FOUNTAIN VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — The good news for Reggie Jackson is that police have located the baseball slugger's missing Porsche 930. The bad news is that the $65,000 car was stripped and cut in three pieces.

The California Angels outfielder's customized car was stolen June 13 from outside a Newport Beach restaurant where Jackson was having dinner. It was found Tuesday in an industrial park.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Carl Foreman, a writer-producer who earned five Academy Award nominations for such films as "High Noon" but was forced to flee Hollywood during the blacklist era, died Tuesday of brain cancer. He was 69.

Foreman's film credits included "The Guns of Navarone" and "The Bridge On the River Kwai." After "High Noon," it was 16 years before he returned to Hollywood to make "MacKenna's Gold."

LONDON (AP) — Oleg Kerensky, a noted bridge designer, died Monday at the age of 79.

Kerensky was the principal designer of Britain's Severn and Forth suspension bridges, the Sydney harbor bridge and the Ganga bridge in India.

LONDON (AP) — Cecil Parrott, a diplomat, linguist and translator of Czech literature, died Saturday at age 75.

Parrott served as a diplomat in Norway and Sweden and as British ambassador to Czechoslovakia from 1960 to 1966. He translated Jaroslav Hasek's classic novel "The Good Soldier Schweik" from Czech into English and also wrote a biography of Hasek in 1977 called "The Bad Bohemian." In recent years, Parrott was professor of Central and Southeastern European Studies at Lancaster University.

'Dervishes' join religious sect to do 'God's will'

OMDURMAN, Sudan (AP) — Every Friday, as the sun creeps low into the western desert, dozens of men dressed in bright green, dance, whirl and leap in rituals that date back to the dawn of their Islamic faith.

They are the "whirling dervishes," members of mystical Sufi sects which command their followers to withdraw from the world and its pleasures in search of religious purity. Members of Sufi sects are known as "el darwish" in Arabic — or "dervishes" in English.

The colorful Friday dances, which last about two hours and end with some of the dancers prostate in religious frenzy, attract hundreds of curious Sudanese and even foreigners to a stark, sandy and rock cemetery where a former sheik of this sect is buried.

"When a person feels he is afraid of God and would like to serve him and pray to him, leaving behind worldly pleasures, he comes and lives with us until he proves his true belief and the sheik allows him to wear the green robe," said 40-year old Sheik Kazzam, who has been a dervish for 13 years.

This sect follows Sheik Hamad el-Nil and Sheik Abdallah el-Seedy, and is one of at least 50 Sufi groups operating in Sudan alone.

This particular sect, whose exact membership is unknown even to the sheiks, has been holding these weekly rituals for nearly 30 years. But Sufi orders and their mystic rituals date from the eighth century, some 200 years after the prophet Mohammed died.

Sufi sects can be found all over the Middle East, but are most prominent in Sudan, Egypt and Iraq. Sufis wear bright green, the color of the dome of the prophet's tomb.

The religious dance begins with the dervishes moving in a wide circle, swaying softly and chanting the Koran's "99 names of God" to the steady beat of drums. As the beat quickens, some of the dancers become absorbed in the ritual, whirling around and hopping on one leg. Some fall to the ground semi-conscious.

At this point, Sudanese onlookers, including children, usually join in the procession, which ends at sundown with everyone going to the mosque next to their leaders' tomb for prayers.

Plague, the so-called Black Death, rampaged across 14th-century Europe, killing one-third of the population. Bubonic plague, the most common type, which can be cured with antibiotics, is transmitted by flea bites.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Angel food cake may satisfy needs at night

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've been trying to cut down on the amount of fat I have in my diet, and I've really been very good about it. The time when I fall down is at night. For years now, just before going to bed at night, I have had something sweet, like a piece of cake or pie. It just seemed to help me sleep better. When I don't have it, I feel restless and hungry, even though I've had a full meal, and I have trouble falling asleep. Do you have any ideas? — Joe, N.Y.

Dear Joe: Angel food cake is relatively low in fat. You might want to try it instead of other cakes, pies, or cookies to see if it satisfies your need for something at night.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am a high-school student and have become interested in body building. Would having more protein help build up the strength in my muscles? Would the use of a protein supplement be a good source of this extra amount? — Paul, Cambridge, Mass.

Dear Paul: Muscular strength is the result of training, not diet, although muscles do need a little more protein during development. However, the average American diet already contains more than the recommended daily allowance for protein, and the purchase of protein supplements would be an unnecessary expense.

The way to develop muscles is to stress them through repeated hard exercise, as through weight lifting.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am within five pounds of what I consider my best weight, and I am trying hard to keep it there. Would eating several small meals during the day be better than having three large ones? Or is there some other schedule that you would recommend that would be even better in helping a person keep her weight down? — Eve, N.Y.

Dear Eve: Except for the fact that I advise my patients not to skip breakfast, there is really no magic number of meals a person should have each day. Some older people may be able to maintain a well-balanced diet by eating only twice a day, while a professional athlete may have to eat as many as five times a day to maintain his weight. More important that the number of times you eat is what you eat.

The trouble with skipping breakfast or any other meal is that some people may tend to comepensate for it by eating high-calorie foods such as cookies during the day, or by over eating during the meals they do have. This practice not only often results in an intake of more calories than would otherwise have been consumed, but does not provide the nutrients that would have been obtained with three meals.

Neil Solomon, M.D., is a columnist for Los Angeles Times Syndicate. If you have a medical question, write Dr. Solomon at 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md 21208. Dr. Solomon will not give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.

Knight foundation offers matching grant

DETROIT (AP) — The Journalists in Residence program at the University of Michigan will get a $1 million donation from Knight-Ridder Newspapers Inc. and the Knight Foundation if the school can match the gift, the company said.

The three-year grant would help replace National Endowment for the Humanities funding that ends this year, said a statement released Tuesday in Detroit from James L. Knight, chairman of the Akron, Ohio-based foundation, and Knight-Ridder Chairman Alvah H. Chapman Jr.

"The program, by furnishing an opportunity for additional education in mid-career, gives journalists greater expertise and our profession enhanced credibility," the statement said.

Journalists in the program, known as Michigan Journalism Fellows, spend an academic year at the Ann Arbor campus taking classes and doing research. There have been 131 such fellowships given to print and broadcast journalists since the program began 11 years ago.

The university is providing money to support the fellowship program in the coming year, and an advisory committee is trying to raise $4 million to assure that it continues.

Runaways can be 'home free' with new program

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Runaways try to escape.

Thousands of boys and girls do it every year. They run.

But, if they have no place to run to and get tired of escaping, they — if they want to — can go back home on a free ticket and start anew under a "Home Free" program jointly sponsored by the International Association of Police Chiefs (IAPC) and Trailways Inc., the bus line.

The nationwide program was launched June 7.

"In the first week, we took 67 kids home, which we feel is wonderful," said Tricia Barnett, Trailways' director of public relations.

Last Monday evening, Midland sped its first youngster home under the joint program.

A 16-year-old girl from Phoenix, Ariz., took up the IACP-Trailways offer and caught the 6:30 p.m. westward-bound bus out of Midland.

The girl, a runaway from a private girls' home in Phoenix, turned herself into the Midland Police Department over the weekend," said Midland Police Detective Capt. Billy Ray. "She had been gone about five months," he said.

"WE COULD NOT locate her mother, and her father did not want anything to do with her," Ray said.

In Phoenix, the runaway was met by representatives of the Arizona child welfare agency, Ray said.

Trailways ticket agent Robert Fino said the girl "didn't say much" as she boarded the bus.

"We're real pleased about it," said Freddy Munoz, Trailways terminal manager in Midland. "We're not concerned about the money. We assisted in getting the child back home. That's the whole idea: to help the kids in their honest effort to go back home...We're excited about it and hope it's an on-going program."

The 16-year-old Phoenix runaway "apparently had a drug problem" and had come to Midland, since she had lived here in the past, said Lorraine Miles, chief probation officer for the Midland County Juvenile Probation Department.

"It sounds like a good deal (the Home Free program) if the child is willing to go home," she said.

Matt Holton/Reporter-Telegram

In another program to get runaways back home, Ms. Miles said Midland County pays the airplane or bus fare home for runaways in cases whereby the parents or an agency won't pay the fare. "Most of the time the parents are willing (to pay the fare home)," she said.

In the case of the Phoenix runaway, Ms. Miles said the girl was "willing to go back to the (girls') home. I feel sure they will take her back."

CHILDREN "RUN AWAY because of problems" which they, in their "immature minds," think can't be resolved, Ms. Miles noted. But most of the time, the problems are not insurmountable, are not as major as the children thought, and can be resolved.

Trailways will pick up the bus tab on any indigent runaway or missing youngster who wants to go back home, start anew and cope with problems which may have led to the child's departure.

"With some 1.8 million young people leaving home every year," noted Norman Darwich, IACP executive director, "it is hoped that we can reduce the number of young victims who fall into the hand of criminal predators or who turn to criminal activity to support themselves."

In efforts to inform runaways of the Home Free program, IACP and Trailways are making public service announcements and are distributing posters and leaflets in places "where young people congregate": video parlors, malls, amusement parks and shopping centers, noted Darwick.

"Why run when there's no finish?" says the text of the poster. "Be a winner. Go home."

Ms. Barnett, who is assigned to the Trailways headquarters in Dallas, said the Home Free program is earning the "overwhelming" support of the public and the "positive" support of social-service agencies.

CONTRIBUTIONS given Trailways in support of the program are being routed to the Missing Children's Center in Washington, D.C., said Ms. Barnett.

"We're really thrilled about it."

She said Trailways, which supports youth programs, already is a "partner" with the Boys Club of America and the Martin Luther King Jr. Center in Atlanta, Ga. The bus line got involved in the free-ticket-home program after the IACP "made us aware of the magnitude of the runaway problem."

The first runaway in the Home Free program was a teen-age girl from Boston, Mass. She ended up in Tuscaloosa, Ala. So, Trailways bought her ticket from Tuscaloosa to Boston on June 8. But in en route, the girl lost her ticket at the New York Port Authority. "She was kind of frazzled, I think," said Ms. Barnett. So, Trailways bought her a ticket on "another bus line" and sped her on home.

Midland Police Chief Wayne Gideon, an IACP member, said the Home Free program "is a positive step in the right direction...There's a runaway hotline that's national."

"I don't think we would hesitate to take advantage of it," Gideon said of the program.

He said efforts aimed at getting runaways back home may "begin a dialogue before the criminal elements get ahold of the children. They can re-think their position."

"Pimps and other purveyors of all sorts prey on juveniles in bus stops, streets and alleys," Gideon said. "They become targets and victims of all sorts of heinous acts."

School trustees approve revisions to policy book

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

Midland school trustees Tuesday gave final approval to 18 revisions in its policy handbook, then invoked one of the changes two hours later to deny hearing a teacher's grievance.

Pamela Young, who taught at Alamo Junior High School last year, wished to appeal an evaluation she had received. But the revised policy states grievance hearings cannot concern evaluations, although any action taken as the result of an evaluation can be appealed.

"We allow each of our employees to fill out a statement and attach it to the evaluation if they disagree with it," Superintendent Dr. Joe Baressi reasoned. "They do have an avenue to express themselves and express their difference of opinion if they wish to."

Past practice has been to discourage grievances over evaluations, he said, and as far as he knew Mrs. Young was the first teacher to request one for this reason.

Major revisions approved on second reading by the board included:

—Employee grievance procedures: Employees can request a grievance hearing only if a policy or written procedure has been violated. They cannot complain about federal or state regulations the board cannot change, a performance evaluation or a mandatory improvement plan.

The written grievance must be submitted to an administrator within 10 days of the alleged violation.

—Drug policy: Expulsion may take place after the second offense, rather than the third, and the policy was clarified to include violations committed in a private vehicle on school property.

It also requires students and, if appropriate, parents to receive counseling if the principal feels it necessary.

One representative of Neighbors Against Burglars and Drugs, a local group concerned about drug-related crime in Midland, still expressed dissatisfaction.

"I wonder if the policy concerning drug pushers had been made less tolerant in any real sense," queried Catherine Taylor, 1203 Country Club. "Drug dealers will be tolerated until their second offense — or until the second time their caught." But Trustee Ron Britton said it must be flexible enough to deal appropriately with minor offenses as well. "We want to be reasonable as to how we treat the guy who may have a six pack in his car as compared to a drug dealer," Board President Parker Humes agreed.

—Grading: To D or not to D was the argument in complying with a new state requirement stating a score below 70 is failing. In previous years, 70 was a C.

While trustee Joe Golding felt the grade scale should be left as is and the D done away with entirely, the board voted 7-2 to keep the D.

Without that buffer, it would be possible for a C student with a 71 average to unexpectedly fail a class because he did poorly on the semester final. "The old traditional C is seen of as acceptable in most households and is not seen as anywhere near failure," Baressi pointed out.

Council wants plans drawn up for airport sewer line

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Looking at a price tag of more than $6 million at today's rates, Midland City Council told an engineering group to draw the plans and specifications and look at acquiring right of way for a sewer line to run from Midland Regional Air Terminal to the treatment plant southeast of the city.

During Tuesday's regular session in City Hall, councilmen adopted a new fee structure at Hogan Park Golf Course, accepted the audit of fiscal year 1983, approved new leases with Rich-Air and agreed to issue permits for drilling oil and gas wells.

Bill Carroll, project engineer with Black & Veatch, said the 27- and 36-inch lines would carry sewage from the Air Terminal area. These lines would run parallel to the Interstate 20 south service road.

Currently, the sewage is being handled at the airport's treatment plant. But that facility was built during World War II as part of the Army Air Base. With increased development of the airport area, that plant no longer can meet the increased needs. This new line also would relieve congested areas in the south part of Midland and be able to provide service to areas outside the city, according to Carroll.

Aviation Director Vic White reported complaints from some of the airlines when they tried to dump the loads from their lavatory service trucks into the airport treatment plant. "There's an overload," he said.

John Lowe, utilities director, said it no longer is economically feasible to operate the airport plant. "It's well past the economic limit of what its useful life ought to be. There are some failures that could happen that would be disastrous." He recalled last summer when the plant was out of service because some parts couldn't be found. Because of the plant's age, "it is difficult to find replacement parts."

Councilman Jesse Hatfield joked that Midland could let the plant back up and run down Monahans Draw toward Odessa. "Working together," hummed another councilman.

But they were concerned about the $6.3 million price tag that didn't include the cost of getting right of way. "We need to consider if this is where we want to spend $6 million," said Councilman Steve Davidson.

The research on the right of way isn't included in the engineers' study fee and will come under a "supplemental services" clause on the contract. "It's called the gotcha clause," said a councilman.

The council shot a hole in one as they unanimously approved a fee structure in which the $300 membership rate remains the same while the senior citizen will have to pay $150. The $300 member, however, will have to pay $1.50 per round of golf. And other players will pay $1.50 more per round. This was a compromise between the golfers and city officials. The additional monies are to help pay for building another nine holes.

Midland City Council turns down TESCO's request for rate hike

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Midland City Council blacked out a rate hike request from Texas Electric Service Co., but that isn't the end of the line for the utility company. The decision, following normal procedure, will be appealed to the Public Utilities Commission.

During Tuesday's meeting in City Hall, the council held a public hearing on TESCO's proposed 8 percent rate hike that would bring in an additional $304.2 million. However, the only people who appeared were from TESCO, including Winston Barclay, division manager.

After the requested rate hike had been filed with the PUC in March, Midland and 77 other cities on the TESCO system suspended the increase for 90 days to give a consultant time to study it. Deputy City Manager Fred Poe said the consultant recommended an increase, but not as much as TESCO wanted.

Barclay argued that unless TESCO received the full rate hike, it could lose investors in the financial market and that, in turn, could mean problems in the future for customers. "If the commission continues returns that aren't adequate, then this council chamber could be filled with people complaining about their electric service."

TESCO has seen a 48 percent growth in customers and as a result must build more generating capacity. The company has been diversifying its fuel sources, going from lignite coal to nuclear power. One unit at the Comanche Peak nuclear power plant should be ready by the end of this year, according to Barclay.

It's this cost of constructing more generating plants to handle the demand that needs to be figured into the rate hike request.

Businessmen convince Odessa council to stop road-widening project

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A group of West County Road business owners convinced the Odessa City Council Tuesday to stop a project that would have widened the busy thoroughfare, putting the skids on state-funded road improvements.

In response to the pleas of a council chamber packed with merchants, the council voted to stop plans that had been in the works since September 1983 to widen a portion of the road — a decision which may cost the city the $900,000 the state had set aside for the project.

The city voted to contact the Highway Commision about an exception which would save the funds which otherwise would be forfeited if the project was discontinued. This decision prompted a round of applause from the audience.

Merchants with stores along West County Road took turns telling the council of the hardships that would have to be endured during the road improvement project, which would have widened and repaved the road from 16th St. to Kermit Highway and upgraded drainage.

Along with the state's $900,000, the city had allocated $700,000 in revenue sharing funds for the drainage project that may now be used to repave the road. A show of hands requested by Mayor John Minor suggested the merchants favored repaving, but were against additional work which would have reduced problems with flooding and widened the roadway.

A Highway Commission spokesman was not overly optimistic the exception would be granted by the Federal Highway Commission, suggesting that such a change by the federal commission would be a "rare case."

"I stand to lose everything I own," said Rob Reese, owner of two stores located along the road. After the council had surrendered to the merchants' wishes, he added "I'm thrilled we were successful at this level. Not only thrilled, a little amazed."

Along with the string of business owners who appeared to protest the project, a petition bearing 43 names of people opposed to it was presented at the meeting.

"It needs to be rebuilt," said Director of Public Works Bobby Tucker. About 17,000 cars per day travel the road, with future estimates rising to 26,000-30,000.

Councilmen Sherman Cox and Nicky Sheets suggested the repaving be done with city money and the state money be rejected. City Manager John Harrison suggested the city look at costs to do the repaving without the state, and possibly shift back its funds to a project on North Dixie for which the $700,000 had at one time been earmarked.

"I don't think there's ever been an opportune time to develop along the road," said Councilman Vern Foremen, "It's something we need to face."

A public hearing conducted by the district office of the highway department attracted 60 people concerned with the proposed project.

Since the highway department had authorized and set aside the funding Sept. 22, 1983, the city has spent $30,000 on preliminary engineering and approved the preliminary plans for the drainage work. Until Tuesday's reversal, the city and state had been working together on the plans, which failed to clear what Tucker called "the last big hurdle" between plans and beginning of construction.

Defendant admits to shooting, DA tells jury

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Assistant District Attorney David Joers told jurors Tuesday that murder defendant Lori Anderson admitted shooting Jon Marvin Whatley to death and that she also told police where to find the gun and Whatley's car, which she apparently used to flee her blood-stained apartment after the shooting.

Whatley, a 35-year-old Odessa man, was found lying face up in apartment 110 of the Courtyard Apartments, 2300 N. A Street, about 1 p.m. on March 28. He had been shot twice in the chest and had been dead about 12 hours when police, acting on a tip, discovered his body.

The car, with the keys in the ignition, and a .25 caliber automatic were found along Loop 250, about a half-mile from the murder scene.

Also taken into evidence were several nude and semi-nude photographs of the attractive 24-year-old defendant — also unemployed — who went on trial Tuesday before an eight-man, four-woman jury in State District Judge Pat M. Baskin's court. She faces a maximum of life in prison if convicted.

Officer Shirley Letourneau tesitified that Whatley was barefoot, with his shoes "neatly placed" near the body. He had a small cut on his left hand and his face was covered with a cloth. One of the nude pictures had "a bloody print" on it.

It is believed the shooting resulted from an argument over the photos.

Det. Sgt. Jeff Haile told jurors of finding two .25 caliber shell casings in the apartment and that two hypodermic syringes and a quantity of cocaine were found in Ms. Anderson's possession when she was arrested at an Odessa motel about 4 p.m. on the day of the shooting.

Police said at the time of her arrest that she swallowed a large amount of cocaine when they confronted her at the motel. She was taken to Odessa's Medical Center Hospital for treatment before being transferred to Midland and held under $50,000 bond set by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine.

Haile also testified that there were no "conclusive" prints on the gun and that there was no sign of a struggle in the apartment.

Testimony resumed this morning. Ms. Anderson is being represented by Odessa attorney Tom Hirsch.

Courthouse tussle results in mistrial

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A courthouse tussle between a defendant and the plaintiff's brother prompted an Ector County district judge to declare a mistrial Tuesday in a civil case that had been proceeding in his court for five days.

District Judge Joe Connally ordered Larry Barber, brother of 15-year-old Tammy Jo Barber, put in jail Monday night after Barber reportedly attacked Richard Berry, the driver of the truck which allegedly struck a car driven by Barber's father in April 1982. The father died in the accident and the 15-year-old sustained serious injuries.

The incident began in the corridor outside the 244th District courtroom after Monday's proceedings had ended. Connally said Barber shouted an obscenity at Berry, then attacked the defendant with several jurors watching.

Winning cutting horses can make owners millionaires

BRENHAM (AP) — With a few deft moves, veteran horseman Polly Hollar tightens the drawstrap on his saddle before mounting his horse to return to the corral for another work session of cattle cutting.

Hollar is one of many horse trainers in Washington County, specializing strictly in readying horses for million-dollar competitions around the nation.

A multiple champion himself, Hollar uses his ranch just west of Brenham on U.S. Highway 290, as a training center for cutting horses.

Guiding his horse toward a group of cattle bunched at the far end of the large holding pen, he is doing his day's work.

A soft, guiding nudge with a knee, a barely audible word of encouragement from the rider and the horse separates a calf from the herd.

Instinct dictates that this calf return to the herd. Now it's up to the horse to keep this animal from rejoining its companions for as long as possible — without help from the rider.

Dust swirls time and again as sudden moves to the right, the left, some fancy backstepping and tight turns keep the calf away.

Finally exhaustion overcomes the animal's instinct to rejoin its herd. Lethargic, it wanders to another corner of the corral.

After a good half hour of this, Hollar guides the horse toward the gate, dismounts and hands the reins to a helper.

"Good workout. He's learning, but I still had to help out here and there by using the reins," he grumbles.

A novice would never have noticed, but the experienced eyes of judges at a cutting futurity pick up such "mistakes" the second they occur.

A rider is not allowed to rein his horse during competition. In fact, the less reining and spurring a rider has to do, the better the horse will be rated, since judges look for natural ability in the animal.

"In such contests — really, in this business they are called futurities and stakes or superstakes — there are million dollar figures involved. You can't afford a mistake," Hollar said.

"Cutting is the biggest thing around and a lot of kids can become financially wealthy by winning, if they are good," the horseman explained.

Indeed, showing horses at high-priced contests is one of the biggest money-making ventures in Washington County.

Area horsemen questioned would not dare guess at the cash brought into the county through such contests, but agreed that training operations located in the county bring in "more than $1.2 million annually."

The audit by Main Hurdman showed the city to be in "adequate" financial shape last year, according to a representative of the firm. Although there was an excess of expenditures over revenues due to a shortfall in the city sales tax rebates, the expenditures fell within 0.2 of 1 percent of the budgeted amount. In addition, the city has $9 million in unbudgeted surplus, according to the representative.

Ten leases with Rich-Air were consolidated into three and the new price should bring in an additional $3,000 a month, according to White. Length of time was set at 20 years with appraisals at five years.

Discovery Operations was given a permit to drill in Adobe Meadows Addition, 1,000 feet west of Fairgrounds Road and 150 feet north of Mockingbird. Another permit was given to drill in Wemberley Addition about 900 feet from the south section line and 1,980 feet from the east section line.

The council approved a specific use permit to Veloz Enterprises to sell alcoholic beverages in a new restaurant on the northwest corner of Wadley and Midland Drive. Speed limit on Midland Drive north of Loop 250 was lowered to 25 mph and a one-hour parking zone was set up in front of the Public Safety Building on East Texas.

X-Pert Land Development was granted a zone change on a tract 650 feet west of the intersection of Northgate Avenue and Midland Drive to construct a shopping center. But after learning this was the third zone change on that tract in three years, the mayor warned he had better not see it again. "Zoning isn't permanent, but it's not transient," he said.

Akins also proclaimed July 4 as a "day to honor America and Americans."

Numerical grade values were updated to: 92-100, A; 83-91, B; 74-82, C; 70-73, D; and below 69, F. Letter grades had been divided into increments of 10.

—Pupil attendance: Absences for extracurricular activities were limited to 10 per year. A student cannot miss any class he is not passing, and is not eligible to participate if he is not passing at least four academic classes.

Eligibility is to be certified each week.

—Elementary courses: In compliance with state regulations, time devoted to health and fine arts in the primary grades was decreased significantly while time spent on mathematics increased considerably.

In intermediate grades, time spend on health was increased, but minutes alloted for physical education was cut by more than one-fourth.

—Tests: Semester finals will be required in all secondary schools in all academic subjects. In grades nine through 12, the final will count as one-fourth of the total grade. In grades seven and eight, is will count one-seventh.

Several revisions were simply clarifications or formalization of past practice.

The board also voted to suspend the gymnastics program next year. Only three students had expressed interest.

It also planned to meet July 17 for a budget workshop session.

TESCO

The last time TESCO asked permission to raise the rates, the PUC — which serves as the final authority on what can be charged — allowed only 6 percent out of a 16 percent request.

The company must be kept in good financial condition to retain a high bond rating and attract investors. But the reduced rate increases are hurting TESCO, he said. AAA bonds have been de-rated to AA-Plus by Standard & Poor's. Duff & Phelps lowered it June 13 by the same degree.

"We need a 16¾ percent return to keep our bond rating. The PUC allowed us 15.53 percent in the last rate case. Our stock is selling below book value," Barclay said, asking the city not to go along with a Texas Municipal League recommendation of a $32 million increase.

Mayor G. Thane Akins pointed to the "wide disparity" in recommended rates from various consulting groups. "The PUC has political consideration coming out its ears. I don't mind construction being used as a swaying factor, but I don't see how you get such a difference in rates," he said.

Poe pointed out that some of the utility companies that have been down-rated in the bond market have nuclear plants under construction. He also said TESCO would have settled for a $38 million rate increase recently.

Barclay said the $38 million was only for one part of the rate package.

Councilman David Godfrey said the down rating on the bonds is important. "It is significant what the financial markets are saying. These are people willing to put their money where their mouth is."

Noting that the PUC is going to allow the rate hike it wants despite what other cities may recommend, Godfrey moved to deny any rate request for TESCO, and it passed unanimously.

Sheriff's deputies took Barber to jail, but Connally discovered him outside the courtroom Tuesday morning and ordered him incarcerated again.

He then granted a motion for mistrial.

"That's one of the things I'd never seen before," said Connally, who noted the irony of a fight erupting from civil proceedings meant to solve disagreements without violence.

Connally said he would charge Barber with contempt of court and assess a fine of $432 — the total the county owed the 12 jurors who sat through the six days of testimony. While the county lost six trial days, Connally suggested the costs to the attorneys in the case were likely in the thousands of dollars.

Attorney Warren Burnett is representing Ms. Barber and her mother, Barbara Stroud, in the suit against Berry and his employers, C.M. Killion Trucking Co. The original petition call for $2 million in damages.

The case, which Connally said the two sides had not been able settle in a Tuesday meeting, will be reset and proceed again with a new jury unless a out-of-court settlement can be reached.

The suit charges Berry and Killion Trucking with negligence in the April 30, 1982 accident in which Berry's truck reportedly collided on 42nd St. in Odessa with the car carrying the plaintiff and her father, James Barber.

A sheriff's department spokesperson said Larry Barber had been released on bond Tuesday afternoon.

Eight arrests made for solicitation

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Eight men and one woman were arrested Tuesday as local law enforcement personnel continues its crackdown on prostitution along 2nd St. (Highway 80) in Odessa.

The eight men, from Odessa, Goldsmith, Andrews and Stanton, were arrested after allegedly soliciting Odessa policewomen posing as prostitutes on the street outside a group of hotels in the 1200 block of 2nd St. near downtown.

A woman listing a Dallas address was arrested by DPS intelligence officers after she allegedly solicited them during the crackdown which ran from noon until midnight, Tuesday.

Four of the men and the woman have been released on $500 bond, while the other four men remained in jail Wednesday morning.

Four men were arrested June 20 in the first recent instance of law enforcement arresting the men soliciting the prostitutes. The crackdown is reportedly in response to residents' complaints.

Bill would increase school funds

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The House version of an education reform bill, currently being debated by a House-Senate conference committee, would give Midland County schools an additional $1,434,400 in funding for equalization and teacher salary raises.

The latest figures, which remain subject to change, were computed by the Texas Education Agency last week. They are included in House Bill 72, a compromise measure sponsored by Rep. Bill Haley, D-Center.

In Midland County, the amount of funding under the House plan are:

—Midland Independent School District, an additional $683,700.

—Greenwood ISD, an additional $750,700.

Figures in a Senate compromise bill are different, but officials indicated Tuesday a new computer model featuring updated funding figures had not been completed.

Board will get report on nursing program

From Staff Reports

Midland Memorial Hospital trustees and directors are expected to receive a report on the status of the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center satellite nursing program during regular meetings Thursday.

The proposed nursing program would allow nurses who have graduated from associate degree programs at community colleges the opportunity to complete their baccalaureate degrees in Midland, according to Ray Branson, MMH president.

Tentatively approved last month, the program is awaiting agreement with other area hospitals to share the cost of the program, which is expected to be about $300,000 for the first two years. MMH would donate building space and about $40,000 while the faculty would be paid by Texas Tech.

In other action, trustees and directors will hear reports on the chemical dependency unit, construction, renovation and parking projects.

The trustees begin their meeting at noon in the MMH Medical Staff Conference Room. Directors will follow at 2:30 p.m.

Police say robbery motive in murder

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Robbery is the motive suspected in the Tuesday night death of an Ector County man, which the sheriff's office has listed as a capital murder.

Geronimo Perez, 62, was found dead in the area of his home at 1200 Edgeport in North Ranchito, a development in the northern region of the county, by sheriff's deputies at 8:24 p.m., Tuesday.

Reports indicate Perez died from blows to the head from a large rock. He was pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace Virgil Lumpee.

Investigation of the incident continues, with robbery suspected because property previously at the house has not been located. No arrests had been made Wednesday morning.

This marks the fifth violent death reported in Ector County since Saturday. Two 19-year-old Odessans were shot to death Saturday during a battle on a southside street and two men were found Monday shot to death outside the city limits.

Bank starts fund to help man's family pay funeral expenses

A fund to help the family of Gerald Lewis pay his funeral expenses has been started at Midland American Bank.

Lewis, 19, was shot to death June 20 near a southeast Midland nightclub. His mother and three sisters are unable to pay the funeral expenses. Winston Sosebee, manager of the Sonic Drive-In, 1109 N. Midkiff, started the fund after learning of the family's plight from one of Lewis' sisters who works at Sonic.

Persons wishing to donate to the fund may do so at the Sonic Drive-In or by contacting Midland American Bank, 401 W. Texas Ave., Suite 100.

Commissioner may be out $630

AUSTIN (AP) — A commissioner who reimbursed $630 in traffic fines to drivers doing work for the county may not in turn be reimbursed by the county, Attorney General Jim Mattox said Tuesday.

Mattox said according to his information the commissioner had employed four trucks, including two owned by the county, to haul gravel for road repairs and maintenance. The four drivers were issued a total of seven citations for carrying too much gravel and having no cover to prevent spilling. They pled no contest and paid $630 in fines. The commissioner reimbursed them out of his own pocket and then sought reimbursement from the county.

"In short," Mattox said, "the county commissioner's reimbursement of traffic fines paid by the four drivers was at his own risk and expense and is not a proper charge on county funds."

Man arrested in grenade attack

GALVESTON (AP) — A 23-year-old laborer was arrested in connection with last week's grenade attack that injured five people, authorities said.

Javier "Harvey" Espinosa, charged Monday with possession of a prohibited weapon, is the second man arrested in the case. Police said Espinosa gave the grenade to another man, who has been charged with possession of a prohibited weapon last week.

Espinosa was jailed in lieu of $10,000 bond. Tonly Rios, 29, is in the Galveston County Jail in lieu of a $50,000 bond.

The case is expected to be referred to the grand jury within the next two weeks.

Member of drug ring sentenced

HOUSTON (AP) — A Cuban man who authorities say was involved in one of the largest drug suggling rings in Texas history was sentenced to 179 days in jail and fined $4,000, a federal judge said.

Giraldo Alvarez, 38, who pleaded guilty last month to a charge of conspiring to import marijuana, also received five years' probation.

U.S. District Judge James DeAnda said Monday he will reconsider the jail sentence after Alvarez's four co-defendants are tried. The case is set to go to trial Aug. 20.

Defendant Jorge Ubeda, a 39-year-old Houston insulation contractor, is believed to have led a ring that smuggled more than $225 million in marijuana aboard shrimp boats into Texas over a three-year period. He is being sought for failing to appear for a June 11 trial.

Police raid Plano teen hangout

PLANO (AP) — Police are hoping that a recent crackdown on teen-agers who smuggle beer into a popular hangout will — if nothing else — let their parents know their children are drinking.

On Monday, dozens of teen-agers who smuggled beer into the Plano Drive-In were ticketed. The raid came after five people were injured in several fights that broke out at the drive-in two weeks ago.

"Alcohol is the biggest catalyst for the fights," said Plano police Capt. Lyndon Payne.

In the first hour of the raid, police officers stationed just inside the entrance confiscated beer from about 80 underage patrons.

Despite the crackdown, many teen-agers who escaped arrest and citations Monday night vowed to return next week.

Quinlan man dies when single engine plane crashes

QUINLAN (AP) — A 52-year-old Quinlan man was killed when his single-engine Cessna plane crashed in southwest Hunt County, authorities said.

Department of Public Safety officials said the man, who was alone in the aircraft, was identified as Harold G. Thweatt.

The crash of the small red and white plane was reported to authorities at 2:20 p.m. Tuesday when a "very hysterical" eyewitness called the Hunt County sheriff's office, said county warrant clerk Linda Sasser.

Authorities are investigating the cause of the crash, Sasser said.

"All we know is the plane went down in a pasture at the Crazy Horse Estates. It was burning after it hit the ground," Ms. Sasser said. "We're having very bad reception and the weather is bad. A lot of radio lines are down."

The estates are located near Quinlan in southwest Hunt County.

She said Federal Aviation Administration investigators, DPS units and officers from the Quinlan police department were at the scene Tuesday.

Kidnapped baby back with parents

GREAT BEND, Kan. (AP) — A baby born to a Texas couple stranded in central Kansas has been found by police and returned to her parents after being kidnapped from the nursery of a Great Bend hospital.

Although police said no motive has been established for the kidnapping, the infant's father said he believes the family's plight and publicity surrounding it may have motivated someone to take the child.

Penny Ann Gardener was less than a day old when she was taken from the Central Kansas Medical Center nursery Monday. The baby was found Tuesday at a home in St. John, a community about 25 miles south of Great Bend.

A man and a woman were arrested in connection with the kidnapping, said Stafford County Attorney Rodney Lyons. The six-pound, 11½-ounce baby was found sitting in a car seat in a house with the woman suspect, said St. John Police Chief Kelly Parks.

"I'm so happy," said the girl's father, Allen Gardener. "I'll tell you no one's going to get close to her again. I'm wanting to cry with relief."

The disappearance of the baby came less than a week after the family was featured in a front-page article and picture in The Great Bend Tribune. The story reported how Gardener, his pregnant wife, Kaye, and two sons had arrived in Kansas with no money and no place to stay.

Gardener, who has been a cook and construction worker, guessed that "someone figured we couldn't support the baby and decided to give it a good home."

"We were sitting on the back of my truck. Flat broke. Out of gas. No money and no job," he said. "The newspaper got ahold of that. The first thing that hits my mind is, 'They can't afford to take care of that baby.'"

The article has helped the family. As a result of the story, Gardner found a job as a laborer with an oilfield service company. A staffer at the newspaper gave him $150 for two weeks' rent, he said.

Penny Ann was born at 11:36 Sunday night. She was discovered missing from the hospital nursery about 5:30 p.m. Monday, police said.

Three nurses saw a woman in the nursery about the time Penny Ann was discovered missing. A fourth nurse saw a woman running from the hospital carrying a baby, Great Bend Police Chief Dean Akings said.

"I was standing less than two inches from the woman in question," Gardener said. "She was in the nursery and she asked me if that was my baby, and I said yes she was. She said she's pretty, and I said yes she was."

The family was stranded in Great Bend on June 18 when their truck ran out of gas. He had brought the family from Fort Worth on $36, but spent the last of his money to buy a package of bologna and a loaf of bread, he said in an interview with The Tribune published June 19.

"A man followed me back to the truck and gave me $50," Gardener told The Tribune. "I've got money.

"We ain't never got this far down before," he said. "The harder we try the further behind we get. On the road, it takes less than a week to go under."

Parents protest plan to appoint board

AUSTIN (AP) — A group of parents, unhappy over plans by Gov. Mark White and the Legislature to have the State Board of Education appointed, says it has gotten a cold shoulder from lawmakers.

"They are not listening to us," said Robin Lewis of Dallas, a member of the group Traditional Families in Texas.

"They have deliberately taken education out of the hands of the people. Their basic attitude is that the people are not capable of making decisions for themselves," Mrs. Lewis said.

Her group and others identifying themselves as pro-family organizations, staged a rally on the Statehouse steps Tuesday to protest legislative moves toward abolishing the elected state board of education and some other proposed changes.

As about 250 people gathered for the rally, a House-Senate conference committee worked on the school reform bill sought by White.

Lawmakers have agreed to replace, at least temporarily, the elected 27-member State Board of Education with a panel appointed by the governor.

Mrs. Lewis said she had been to the Capitol before for an earlier demonstration and to talk with lawmakers, but wasn't happy with the response she got.

"Last week, I got up here and I was a concerned parent. This week, I'm an angry parent. We have asked our legislators to vote for an elected board and they have completely ignored us," she said.

"We don't have any malice. But we're going to go in and say, if you can't represent us then you don't need to be our (elected) representative. We do have a voice, and that's at the voting booths in November."

Noting that school spending takes up $8 billion in tax money every two years, Mrs. Lewis and others said the elected board should be kept so education will be responsive to the people.

White has said a smaller, appointed board would be more accountable to the governor and therefore more likely to take action on reform.

"How can you say that cutting the board down to a smaller number and not even electing them is making them more accountable?" asked Buddy Hicks of Leander.

"When you give more power to the bureaucrats and take power from the people, it creates more problems. It does not solve anything," Hicks said.

While saying the groups believe teachers deserve pay raises, a major element in the reform legislation, Hicks said the groups also favor a back-to-basics approach stressing "reading, writing and arithmetic." He said teacher competency testing is needed to make certain those in the profession are capable of doing the job.

Also organizing the rally were Parents Perogative, the Texas Eagle Forum and Taxpayers for Educational Excellence. Hicks and Mrs. Lewis said demonstrators would lobby lawmakers, trying to get them to change their minds.

Although the House and Senate have passed two bills on school reform and the conference committee was nearly done with a final plan, Hicks said, "The process is not over. We need to be persistent. We're not going to give up and we're not going to go away."

TRC allegedly asks Mattox not to interfere

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Railroad Commission urged attorney general Jim Mattox to stay out of its business after he intervened in a federal energy case involving two of his campaign contributors, according to a published report.

Mattox got involved in the federal oil and gas regulatory case earlier this year after the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission filed a complaint in February against Panhandle oilmen Vernon Stowers, L. R. Spradling and 35 other oilmen. Stowers and Spradling had donated $26,000 to Mattox in 1982.

The FERC claimed that the oilmen had overcharged interstate customers by $3 per 1,000 cubic feet for natural gas produced as a byproduct of their oil wells, according to a story published Tuesday by the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Attorneys for the oilmen said that if the FERC wins, Spradling and Stowers stand to lose their wells and owe $100 million in penalties, while an unfavorable Railroad Commission ruling would cost them only their producing wells.

Mattox reportedly entered the case saying it was up to the Railroad Commission, not the FERC, to regulate oil and gas production in Texas, the newspaper reported.

Railroad commissioners Mack Wallace, Buddy Temple and Jim Nugent quickly objected.

In a March 5 letter to the attorney general, they said his action could hamper a separate case involving Spradling and Stowers and dealing with the same issues already before the Railroad Commission.

"We therefore wish to make it clear once again that we do not wish to intervene in the Federal Agency Regulatory Commission proceedings because such action might very well prejudice the Railroad Commission in the performance of its duties," they wrote.

According to Mattox's press secretary, Comptroller Bob Bullock urged Mattox to intervene in the suit. Elna Christopher said Bullock told Mattox that the state could lose $15 million to $18 million in severance taxes if the FERC ruled against the independent oilmen.

"We make our decision on what is best for the state as a whole," Ms. Christopher said.

The Star-Telegram said that Executive Assistant Attorney General Dave Richards said Mattox was trying to save the Railroad Commission from its own ignorance.

"We've got client agencies asking us to do something," Richards said. "It's our position that we're going to make those decisions. The ultimate client is the state of Texas."

Stowers and several other oilmen asked Mattox administration officials to intervene in the case in December, according to the Star-Telegram. At the same time, Railroad Commission attorneys urged Mattox not to get involved, the newspaper reported.

At issue in the case is whether a substance known as "white oil" is gas or oil.

Some independent oilmen cool the gas byproduct from their oil wells into white oil to keep the wells from becoming gas wells under Railroad Commission rules. The price at which the independents sell their gas is governed by whether the wells are classified as oil or gas wells.

Jury recommends death sentence for murderer

EL PASO (AP) — A state district court jury has recommended that a man convicted of capital murder in the stabbing death of a retired El Paso man be sentenced to die by lethal injection.

The same jury had found Federico Macias guilty on Sunday of capital murder in the December 1983 machete slaying of Robert Haney. It recommended the death sentence for Macias Tuesday.

Haney, 48, and his 63-year-old wife, Naomi, were found bound and hacked to death in the living room of their El Paso home on Dec. 8, 1983, according to police.

Autopsy results indicated the elderly couple was beaten repeatedly on the head with a machete.

Macias testified during the punishment phase of his trial that he had nothing to do with the Haney murder.

Asentencing date was not set.

America's Favorite: The Picnic Barbecue

America loves picnics and barbecues! Favorite foods, usually cooked and served indoors, take on a new taste appeal when grilled outdoors.

Fresh air and wide open spaces, the aroma of barbecuing turkey, colorful vegetable salads and California ripe olives: they all come together for an all-time favorite picnic experience.

Barbecuing America's native bird, the turkey, in a covered charcoal grill reduces outdoor cooking time because heat is reflected off the lid onto the food. And the deep basting in Butterball turkeys eliminate the necessity for frequent hand basting. A broad-breasted, deep-basted turkey weighing up to 14 pounds fits comfortably under the grill lid.

Country Fare Barbecue Glaze has a tangy flavor that's equally delicious brushed on the bird for a wrap-around flavor, or simply spooned on each succulent slice. This easy-to-make glaze can be prepared up to two weeks ahead, using a secret ingredient – Kitchen Bouquet. Make plenty and keep it on hand for grilled hamburgers and ribs, too.

For a very special turkey flavor underneath the glaze, add mesquite barbecue chunks to the charcoal. Soak the chunks three to four hours before adding to hot coals. Six to eight mesquite pre-soaked chunks, three to four added to each side of the hot charcoal, will be enough to add a distinctive and smoky taste to the turkey.

A favorite homemade salad dressing comes to the table in a new role as the creamy dressing for our Bountiful Potato Salad. The unique blend of hearty spices in Hidden Valley Ranch salad dressing mix creates an especially delicious dish. Fix it a day ahead: the flavor in this vegetable-laden potato salad improves as it waits in the refrigerator.

California Olive-Nut Spread will appease those impatient appetites, whetted by the delectable cooking aromas. You can whip up a batch of this crunchy spread for a versatile sandwich filling, or use it as we show here – with crudites (cut up vegetables) and a variety of crackers for dipping. California ripe olives also are perfect for nibbling. Children love to pop one ripe olive onto each finger of a hand as an eat-and-run picnic snack. (Wash those hands first!) California ripe olives are a healthy treat anytime – and have only six calories in each large olive.

So pack up the grill and food basket and take off for a summer outdoor eating adventure you'll remember fondly all year long.

TO PREPARE TURKEY:

- Thaw Butterball turkey according to directions in folder accompanying turkey.
- Free legs and tail from tucked position. Remove neck, giblets and gravy packet, if included.
- Rinse turkey and drain. Draw skin over neck and hold in place by twisting wing tips behind the back.
- Do not stuff. (Stuffing can be baked in a disposable foil pan on the grill beside the turkey during the last hour of cooking.)
- Retuck legs and tail. Brush with oil.
- Insert roast meat thermometer into the center of the thickest part of the thigh, not touching the bone.

TO BARBECUE TURKEY:

- Wrap the turkey wing tips and leg ends with foil.
- Place turkey on top grill above drip pan.
- Place cover on kettle.
- To maintain heat, add six to eight briquets to each side every hour of cooking.
- Add charcoal through openings by grill handles.
- Check for doneness after 1-1/4 hours for a 10-pound turkey; internal temperature of thigh should be 180 to 185 degrees.

BOUNTIFUL POTATO SALAD

- 6 slices bacon
- 3/4 cup chopped celery
- 3/4 cup carrots, finely chopped or coarsely grated
- 1/2 cup chopped onion
- 1/4 cup chopped parsley
- 3 hard-cooked eggs, chopped
- 1-1/2 cups (6-ounce can) pitted California ripe olives, drained
- 3 tablespoons pimiento
- 1/2 to 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/8 teaspoon pepper
- 2 tablespoons rice vinegar or distilled white vinegar
- 1-1/4 cups prepared Hidden Valley Ranch Salad Dressing, Milk Recipe, Original Ranch flavor

Cook potatoes until tender. Drain, cool, peel and cut into cubes. Cook bacon until crisp; drain on paper towel. Crumble bacon and set aside 2 tablespoons for garnish. Reserve 2 tablespoons bacon fat. Reserve 12 ripe olives. Add crumbled bacon, vegetables, eggs, olives, 2 tablespoons pimiento, salt and pepper to potatoes. Add vinegar to reserved bacon fat, heat to boiling and pour over salad; mix well. Add salad dressing and mix gently to coat potatoes. Chill one to two hours. Garnish with reserved bacon, pimiento, chopped parsley and reserved ripe olives. Makes 6-8 servings.

MICROWAVE DIRECTIONS: Peel and cube potatoes. Arrange in circle in 9-inch glass pie plate and cover with plastic, vented at one corner. Microwave on high for 8-10 minutes. Uncover and cool to room temperature. Arrange bacon on microwave-safe bacon/meat rack. Cover with paper towel. Microwave on high for 5-6 minutes or until crispy cooked. Proceed as above in combining ingredients.

COUNTRY FARE BARBECUE GLAZE

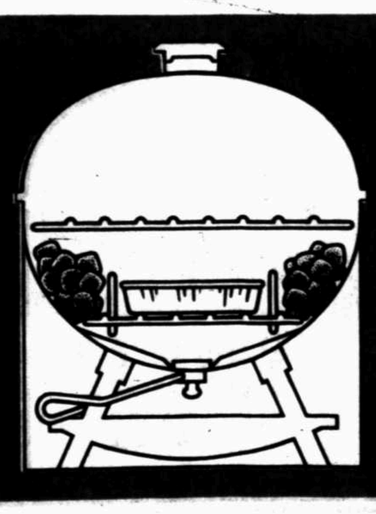

- 1/2 cup light brown sugar, firmly packed
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 2 tablespoons prepared mustard
- 1-1/2 teaspoons chili powder
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon garlic powder
- 1/2 teaspoon onion powder
- 1 cup catsup
- 1/4 cup cider vinegar
- 2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
- 1 tablespoon Kitchen Bouquet

Combine 2 tablespoons water with cornstarch and stir into sauce. Cook and stir over medium heat to thicken slightly. Set aside until ready to use. Sauce may be refrigerated, covered, for two weeks. Makes approximately 2-1/2 cups.

CALIFORNIA RIPE OLIVE-NUT SPREAD

- 3 cups whole pitted California ripe olives
- 1 cup walnut pieces, lightly toasted
- 1/4 cup mayonnaise
- 1/2 teaspoon or more minced fresh thyme or tarragon, or 1/4 teaspoon dried leaf thyme or tarragon (optional)
- Freshly ground black pepper

Finely chop olives and nuts by hand with a knife or in a food processor. Mix olive-nut mixture with mayonnaise. Season to taste with thyme or tarragon, if desired, and pepper. Can be made ahead and refrigerated.

Barbecuing was never easier. A Weber covered kettle barbecue gives you heat control while cooking the bird – or any other foods – to the peak of flavor and juiciness. The following directions are foolproof. You may be elected neighborhood barbecue chef of the year!

TO PREPARE COVERED KETTLE GRILL:

- Open all dampers and leave open during cooking.
- Place foil drip pan (slightly larger than turkey) on bottom grill.
- Attach charcoal rails.
- Place 15-30 briquets along charcoal rails.
- Saturate briquets with lighter fluid, wait a minute or two.
- Light briquets in several places to start, and burn for approximately 30 minutes or until white in color.
- Spread briquets evenly.
- Leave kettle cover off.
- Place top grill in kettle, with handles over coals. (See Illustration)

FRUITED COLE SLAW

- 1/2 head green cabbage, shredded
- 1 cup shredded red cabbage
- 1 cup toasted walnuts, coarsely chopped
- 2 red apples, sliced
- 1-1/2 cups prepared Hidden Valley Ranch salad dressing, Original Ranch flavor

Combine prepared cabbage, walnuts and apples. Add salad dressing and toss.

Olive oil gains fans

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

When I was growing up my family, like many others, usually served a green salad with dinner. The dressing at our house was invariably based on wine vinegar and Italian olive oil.

I took it for granted until after World War II when soaring prices of food imports forced most stores to replace olive oil with oils made from peanuts or vegetables.

In the past few years, however, olive oil has been staging a comeback and is attracting a new generation of American fans. The oil is still costly, but the market is growing.

I learned a few things about this Italian classic recently when I lunched with the Marchese Lodovico Antinori, member of an ancient Italian noble family which has long been famous for its wines.

Less known are the silver green olive trees that dot the hills surrounding the Antinori vineyards. The oil has long been a favorite in its native Tuscany, however, and it is now being exported to America. Olive oil is exported by France, Spain and Greece, as well as Italy.

"The best olive oil," Antinori told me, "is known as 'extra virgin.' This oil is released by the first and most gentle pressing of the choicest olives."

There are lesser grades that are still in the top category. They include superfine oil, fine virgin and virgin.

Italians use their native oil not only in salads, but also to flavor hot vegetables, such as asparagus and green beans. They often use it to brush grilled meat or fish. One version that intrigues me is to drizzle the oil on hot bread that has been rubbed with garlic.

Here is a recipe that Lodovico Antinori gave me for a tomato and mozzarella salad in olive oil.

TOMATO AND MOZZARELLA SALAD

4 medium tomatoes
10 leaves fresh basil, cut up, or ½ teaspoon dried basil
¼ teaspoon oregano
3 tablespoons Italian top grade olive oil
8 ounces mozzarella cheese

Slice tomatoes, arrange in shallow dish. Scatter with basil leaves and oregano. Drizzle with olive oil. Cover. Refrigerate at least 2 hours. At serving time, add mozzarella, sliced thin, and toss.

Serves 6. Good with a Chianti wine.

DEAR ABBY

Girl learns painful lesson

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem I'm hoping you can help me with. I am 13 years old. I was going out with this guy I'll call Paul, then last November we broke up and he started going with this girl I'll call Julie.

I kept going over to Paul's house anyway, and when I did we would make love. He told me that he had never made love to Julie, that he really loved me and wanted me to be his lover, but he couldn't break up with Julie because he didn't want to hurt her. I guess he didn't care how much he hurt me.

Today I found out that all the time he was having sex with me, he was having sex with Julie, too. I still care for him a lot and just can't deal with the fact that he lied to me. What should I do? — BAD EXPERIENCE

DEAR BAD EXPERIENCE: What you should do is forget him. He used you. No experience is "bad" if you learned something from it. Thank God you didn't get pregnant — or contract a venereal disease.

Consider the pain of this humiliating experience as "tuition" in the school of experience, and promise to save yourself for a worthwhile man who cares about you.

DEAR ABBY: I am confused about something. I recently gave birth to twins — a boy and a girl. In public, we attract a lot of attention. People ask a lot of questions, especially these two: "Are they boys or girls?" and "Are they identical?"

Even after I tell people the twins are a boy and a girl, I am asked if they're identical.

Abby, obviously, if one is a boy and the other is a girl, they are not identical, but so many people ask, I am beginning to wonder if boy-girl twins can be identical.

Please clear this up for me. — MOTHER OF TWINS

DEAR MOTHER: There are two types of twins — identical and fraternal. Identical twins are the result of one egg that divided into two identical halves.

Fraternal twins are the result of two separate eggs (fertilized at the same time). Boy-girl twins are ALWAYS fraternal, but not all same-sex twins are identical.

DEAR ABBY: My 21-year-old daughter is getting married in September. She wants her father to walk her down the aisle, but here's the problem.

Three years ago my husband left me for another woman. After we separated, they lived together for two years, and after our divorce was final, they married.

My ex refuses to walk his daughter down the aisle unless he can bring his wife to the wedding. My daughter says if that woman comes to her wedding it will spoil her wedding day.

It would be awkward for me, too, because everybody knows the part she played in our divorce, and there would be a lot of gawking and talking that would take away from the full attention every bride expects on her wedding day.

We are at an impasse. What should we do? — UPSET MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: You and your daughter should have the kind of wedding you can afford — even if it's only a few of your nearest and dearest. And tell your ex you will miss him.

Slim salmon treats

Salmon lettuce rolls were designed for calorie watchers. You may want to serve them to guests who are on the lookout for an hors d'oeuvre or buffet dish that isn't rich.

This combination was inspired by a Chinese dish in which cooked butterflied shrimp and a tomato sauce are rolled in Iceberg lettuce leaves. In the following recipe a simple canned salmon mixture is rolled in Bibb lettuce leaves.

SALMON LETTUCE ROLLS

15½-ounce can salmon
2 heads Bibb lettuce
1 cup cooked rice
2 tablespoons chopped nuts
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
2 tablespoons lemon juice
¾ teaspoon grated lemon rind
Minced fresh dill or crushed dried dill weed to taste
Salt and pepper to taste

Drain salmon, reserving 2 tablespoons of the liquid; flake. Reserve large outer leaves of lettuce; finely chop enough of the inner leaves to make 1 cup. Toss together the salmon, reserved liquid, chopped lettuce, rice, nuts, parsley, lemon juice, lemon rind, dill, salt and pepper. Chill until serving time. Serve salmon mixture and lettuce leaves. A spoonful of the salmon mixture is wrapped in a lettuce leaf and eaten out of hand. Makes 3½ to 4 cups salmon filling — enough for 20 lettuce leaves. —(AP)

Cooking over coals tasty, economical

Hearst Feature Service

Meat cooked on the grill always seems to taste better. A cut suitable for cooking over the coals is probably on your shopping list for a weekend meal. Costly tender steaks are first choice, but you can cook out more often when economical cuts are selected.

Cooking over the coals is cooking with dry heat, a method that toughens meat. Smart shoppers select meats which are naturally tender. Most cuts of pork, all poultry, fish and ground meats cooked over the coals can provide tender, moist products. Ham normally is fully cooked and requires only reheating to serve.

It is easy to cut costs and add variety to the menu by marinating less tender cuts of meat for the grill. Marinades turn beef rump, round and chuck roasts or steaks into flavorful, tender servings of meat. Cutting roasts into steaks is another way to save food dollars.

Marinades are a mixture of oil, herbs and acid. The oil and herbs play an important role in giving flavor to the food, but it is the acid that softens the connective tissue.

It is easy to make your own marinade. Bottled clear French dressing works well and is convenient, but making your own lets you control the amounts of oil and salt.

To marinate, place meat in a plastic bag set in a deep bowl or shallow baking dish. Pour marinade mixture over the meat. Close bag or cover dish with plastic wrap and refrigerate. Turn bag or spoon marinade over the meat occasionally to coat evenly.

The size of the piece of meat determines marinating time. Large roasts can be marinated several hours or overnight. One or two hours are adequate for small cubes of meat or for thin steaks which are from less tender parts of the animal. Marinate fish for 30 minutes. Meat becomes soft when the marinating time is too long.

Basting with marinade or a tangy barbecue sauce will improve the smoky flavor of meat cooked on the grill. To further enhance the flavor, barbecue sauce keeps meat moist and prevents burning.

GRILLED PORK STEAKS

3 pork blade steaks, cut ½- to ¾-inch thick
1 tablespoon brown sugar
1 to 2 teaspoons curry powder
¼ cup soy sauce
1 can (8-ounce) tomato sauce
1 small onion, chopped

For marinade, combine brown sugar and curry powder in a small saucepan. Mix well. Gradually add soy sauce, tomato sauce and onion, stirring to combine. Bring to a boil, reduce heat and cook slowly 5 minutes. Cool.

Place pork steaks in plastic bag or baking dish. Add marinade, turning steaks to coat. Close bag or cover dish and marinate in the refrigerator 2 hours. Drain, reserving marinade. Place steaks on grill over low to medium coals. Cook 30 to 40 minutes or till done, brushing with marinade and turning occasionally. Makes 4 to 5 servings.

SPICY BARBECUE SAUCE FOR CHICKEN

2 tablespoons ketchup
2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
2 tablespoons soy sauce
2 tablespoons pineapple jam or honey
1 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons pepper
2 teaspoons dry mustard
½ teaspoon curry powder
Dash of Tabasco
2 cloves garlic, chopped
2 teaspoons pickle relish

Mix all ingredients together in food processor with metal blade or in a blender. Remove to medium saucepan and bring to a boil. Simmer 5 minutes. Cool and store in refrigerator. Makes 1-1/4 cups, or enough for 3 to 4 chickens.

ASPARAGUS AND BACON STIR-FRY

5 slices bacon
2 pounds asparagus
1 tablespoon minced onion
2 teaspoons minced ginger root
1 can (8-ounce) water chestnuts, drained and sliced
¼ teaspoon sesame oil

Fry bacon in skillet until crisp and golden. Drain all but 2 tablespoons drippings in skillet.

Cut asparagus spears into thin (⅜-inch) diagonal slices, leaving tips whole. Heat bacon drippings in skillet over medium heat and saute onion and ginger. Add and stir-fry asparagus, except tips, until tender crisp, about 5 minutes. Add bacon, asparagus tips and water chestnuts. Stir-fry 2 to 3 minutes longer. Stir in sesame oil and serve. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

CAMPFIRE BANANAS

3 medium bananas, sliced
¼ cup margarine
¼ cup brown sugar
2 teaspoons rum extract
¼ teaspoon ground cinnamon
Vanilla ice cream (optional)

Cut 4 squares of aluminum foil. Divide sliced bananas and place at center of each foil square. Top each serving of fruit with 1 tablespoon margarine and brown sugar, 1/2 teaspoon extract and sprinkle of cinnamon. Fold corners of foil to center and seal. Grill over medium hot coals 10 minutes or until bananas are hot. Fold foil back to serve and top with ice cream or milk, if desired. Serves 4.

Best picnics kept simple

The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Now that the weather is warm, it would be nice to know of a handy little book on quick and different sandwich and dessert recipes suited for express-lane shoppers who want to go from the store straight to the picinc.

While "Lunches to Go," by Janeen Sarlin (Barron's, $4.95), is not promoted as a handy tool for quick grocery shopping, 24 of its 32 recipes for sandwiches, breads and desserts are perfectly suited for quick shopping and assembling.

They are easily transportable and will follow you anywhere on a pretty summer day — whether it be biking, boating, backpacking, picnicking, camping or even sitting in your own yard.

The book is among four new additions to Barron's "Easy Cooking" series, which has been expanded to 12 books.

The sandwich combinations are filling and far from the standard ham and cheese on rye or egg salad on white. (However, we did find two tuna salads to satisfy the die-hards.)

The more daring, however, should try a roast beef Russian-style piled high on pumpernickel with horseradish, red beets and sour cream, or Sardinian Delight — boneless, skinned sardines with lemon juice, red onion and tomato on buttered pumpernickel.

The book is short-winded, as today's standards go, with a one-page introduction that suggests packing multicolored paper napkins in the lunch box and serving iced tea in wine glasses, and then quickly moves on to the recipes.

Preceding each recipe are nutritional breakdowns for protein, fat, sodium, carbohydrates and potassium as well as calories for each serving.

Here is one such meal from the many to choose from, along with a recipe for sun-ripened iced tea.

TUSCAN PEARS WITH HAM-WRAPPED BREADSTICKS

For the pears:
2 large ripe pears
1 ounce blue cheese, softened
1 ounce sweet butter, softened
¼ cup chopped pistachio nuts

For the breadsticks:
5½-ounce bag Italian breadsticks
8 thin slices baked ham (or if available, prosciutto)

Cut pears in half lengthwise, leaving stem and skin on. Remove core without detaching stem. Scoop out a bit more fruit. Mix cheese and butter together until smooth. Place half the mixture in the center of each pear half and "glue" the halves together.

Roll the edges in chopped pistachios. Place in refrigerator 20 to 30 minutes to firm up or place in a portable cooler to keep cold until you are ready to eat. Serve with ham- or prosciutto-wrapped Italian breadsticks. 2 servings

TWO-HOUR SUN TEA

10 tea bags
½ gallon water

Steep tea bags in water in a jug with a tight-fitting lid, for two hours in the sun. Serve over ice. Be sure to watch the tea after two hours; as long as the bags are left in, the tea will continue to strengthen. Makes ½ gallon.

Melon shell holds salad

Many people are enjoying the sweet mellow flavors of melons, cantaloupe and honeydew, which are becoming produce favorites.

Honeydews known as green-flesh or tamdu have subtle but distinctive flavors. Honeydews also tend to be larger than cantaloupes and have slightly large cavities.

In selecting ripe cantaloupe, look for good deep netting on the outside that tends to be golden in color. The melon will have a sweet musky aroma and will slightly yield to gentle pressure on the blossom end of the fruit (opposite from the stem end).

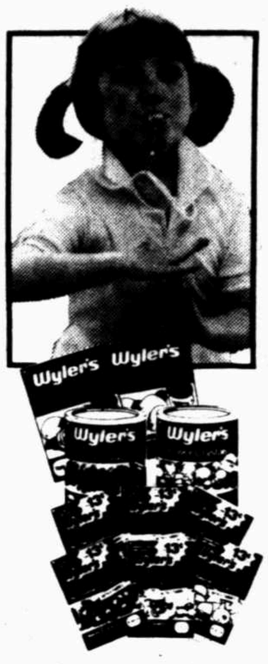

If fully mature, store melons in the refrigerator. If too firm, keep at room temperature until the desired softness is reached. An important note to remember: Melons will not ripen after picked but will soften if not refrigerated.

MELLOW MELON AND CHICKEN SALAD

2 medium cantaloupe, halved
1/2 small honeydew in balls
2 whole chicken breasts, baked and diced
3 stalks celery, finely chopped
3/4 can (1 pound 4 oz.) pineapple, drained
1/2 teaspoon curry powder
2 generous tablespoons mayonnaise
1 tablespoon sour cream
Salt and pepper to taste
Sprinkle in dry roasted sunflower nuts
Parsley (optional)

Remove skin from chicken breasts and bake covered at 375-F. for 30 minutes or until done. When cool, dice into bite-sized pieces.

Halve cantaloupe, scooping out seeds. Refrigerate. Make melon balls from honeydew half using small end of melon ball scoop. To honeydew add diced chicken, chopped celery, drained chunked pineapple, curry powder, mayonnaise and sour cream. Salt and pepper to taste. Sprinkle in dry roasted sunflower nuts as desired. Refrigerate. When serving, scoop chicken salad into halved cantaloupe. Garnish with parsley if desired.

Susan Samtur, refunding expert at Family Circle magazine, bought $519.66 worth of merchandise at the supermarket and paid only $22.10 by using manufacturers' cents-off coupons and free-product coupons collected from magazines, newspapers, Sunday supplements and refund offers. In a recent issue of Family Circle she shared some of her shopping secrets:

— Try to shop in the same store all the time so its layout is familiar. Categorize shopping list accordingly. Each week go through the store's flyer and check for specials. Savings can be doubled by using coupons for items that are also on sale.

— Many people make the mistake of not clipping more than one coupon for a particular product, thinking they are only allowed to use one coupon per family. Remember, as long as the same number of products are bought, any number of coupons can be used.

— Buy the smallest size allowable. Read each offer carefully to maximize savings — some manufacturers' coupons state specific sizes, some don't.

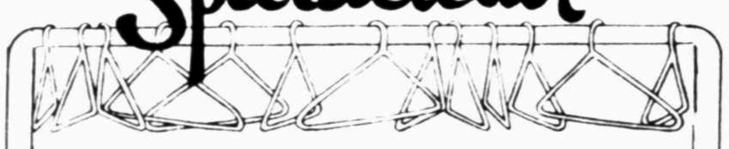

— Watch for new-product introductions, which usually have refunds.

— Try to buy in season. Seasons and holidays dictate times stores put certain items on sale. For example, garbage and lawn bags usually go on sale in the summer, as do barbecue fixings. If storage space is available, save coupons for these seasonal items and buy in large quantities when they are on sale.

Onions retain most nutrients

The goodness and fresh wholesomeness of sweet, mild onions is just what's needed to make a perfect occasion out of a summer barbecue.

Onions are at their best as a raw vegetable, and when served raw they also retain more of their important nutrients. One medium-sized onion is a good source of iron, calcium, potassium, protein, B-vitamins and vitamin C. In addition it has only 38 calories, according to the U.S.D.A. Handbook No. 8

Because of the unusual characteristics of spring onions, special recipes have been developed around them. And salads are great for summer meals as appetizers, main dishes or accompaniments to a meal.

For a unique salad or side dish, try the following recipes:

POTATO ONION SALAD
1 medium onion, thinly sliced and separated into rings
5 medium potatoes (1-3/4 pounds)
1/2 cup minced parsley
1/4 cup white wine
Vinegar
1/2 cup olive oil
1 teaspoon prepared Dijon-type mustard
Salt and white pepper to taste
Lettuce, paprika, sliced hard-cooked eggs, green pepper rings

Boil potatoes in jackets in salted water until tender; peel and slice thin. Add onion and parsley. Beat together oil, vinegar, mustard, salt and pepper; add. Mix gently but well. Potatoes should be quite moist. For tart flavor add vinegar. Serve at room temperature on lettuce; sprinkle with paprika and garnish with eggs and green pepper. Serves six.

SPRING TACO SALAD
1 cup chopped onions
1 pound ground beef
1/2 cup taco sauce
1/2 cup pitted black olives
1 small head lettuce, chopped
1 green pepper, cut in strips
2 tomatoes
2 cups shredded cheese
1 package taco flavored tortilla chips, crumbled
1 cup Thousand Island dressing
1 can kidney beans

Brown ground beef; drain. Stir in taco sauce and beans; heat. Mix together onions, lettuce, pepper, tomato, olives, cheese and chips. Spoon beef and dressing over lettuce mixture. Serve promptly.

SIMPLE SUMMERY SALAD

CHARCOAL BAKED ONIONS SUPREME
6 medium-sized sweet onions
1-1/2 cups prepared stuffing mix
1 teaspoon poultry seasoning (optional)
1-1/2 cups grated sharp cheese
3/4 cups melted butter or margarine
1 cup hot water

Peel onions and cut each crosswise in three or four slices. Combine stuffing mix and cheese; add melted butter and hot water along with poultry seasoning if desired. Blend well. Spread stuffing mixture thickly between onion slices; reassemble each onion. Wrap each onion securely in heavy aluminum foil or double thickness of regular foil. Place on grill or directly on coals. Bake one to two hours depending on size of onions and heat on fire.

DILLED ONION RING QUICKIE
Save leftover liquid from favorite dill pickles. Slice large, round onions into 1/4-inch thick slices. Separate into rings if desired. Measure enough pickle juice to cover onions. Heat juice to boiling and pour over sliced onions. Chill in covered container eight to 10 hours before serving.

Wine shipments level off

The Associated Press

Americans' ardor for the grape — at least the domestic variety — seems to be cooling.

That's the word from Marvin Shanken, the publisher of Impact, a publication for the wine, distillery and beer trade.

Shipments of wine, both foreign and domestic, within the United States increased by only 2.9 percent to 529.2 million gallons in 1983. This was a little better than 1982's 1.8 percent increase, but it didn't compare with the average 5.4 percent annual growth between 1975 and 1980.

For domestic producers, the picture was darker. Domestic wine shipments were up 1.6 percent, while foreign wine shipments increased 7.2 percent.

Shanken blames the weak U.S. economy and the strong dollar for the poor domestic performance. "Last year's nearly flat performance reflected the industry's extremely difficult position in an economy that only began to recover from the deepest recession since the Great Depression of the 30's," he said.

A lot of the growth there was came in the category of something called wine coolers, wine blended with fruit juices and sparkling water. That category grew 18.5 percent last year and increased its market share 6.4 percent. Sparkling wines like champagnes grew a whopping 16.2 percent, to a market share of 8.2 percent. Table wines — the whites, reds and roses drunk with meals or as aperitifs — account for almost eight bottles out of every 10 sold.

"Wine importers wore broader smiles as imported table wine advanced ... while U.S. table wine remain flat," Shanken said. "While still commanding the total table wine market, California continued to lose market share to imports ... Italy, France and Germany all achieved table wine increases," he added.

Shanken predicted that the "the years of substantial annual growth rates (for table wines) are a thing of the past ... Moreover, table wine's share loss of the total market ended its historic non-stop rise dating back to 1960... Sparkling wine has moved ahead of dessert wine in terms of both market share and volume to become the second most favored wine type in the United States." Champagne imports were particularly strong, surging by 43 percent. Domestic sparking wine shipments rose 16 percent last year.

By last year, sparkling wine had 8 percent of the market; French champagne producers removed sales limits which had been imposed after poor harvests in the mid-1970s as recent bumper harvests built up stocks.

The biggest percentage gain among major wine types last year was in special natural wine, a category that includes something called wine coolers which are sold in competition with beer in many retail stores. But the coolers too could face competition if the brewers introduce new products to tempt consumers beginning to loosen the purse strings.

California still holds the lion's share of the U.S. wine market — 67 percent — but it lost one percent last year; in 1975 California had 75 percent of the U.S. market.

Pork spareribs prepared with soy sauce, garlic

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

JENNIE'S SPARERIBS

2 pounds fresh pork spareribs
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
2 teaspoons finely chopped garlic
2 tablespoons white wine
2½ tablespoons cider vinegar
3 tablespoons sugar
4 tablespoons soy sauce
2 scallions, finely chopped

Have spareribs cut across the bone in 1½-inch-wide strips. Cut rib bones apart and trim off fat. Bring 2 quarts water to a boil. Parboil ribs 3 minutes; drain well.

Heat wok or saucepan; add oil, garlic and spareribs. Stir-fry over high heat for 3 minutes. Add ½ cup cold water, wine, vinegar, sugar and soy sauce.

Bring to a fast boil. Reduce heat to medium. Cover and cook for 40 minutes. Check liquid occasionally; if it begins to boil away, add a little more water. Remove ribs and the small amount of sauce to a platter; garnish with scallion. Serve at once.

Nutritional terms defined

By SHIRLEY BRIGHT BOODY
Registered Dietitian
Copley News Service

Are you confused by some of the terms in use today by health professionals in nutrition?

Today, everybody or almost everybody, seems to be on some kind of diet or health-kick mania. Of course that's not bad, in most instances it sure beats inertia and overweight, but misunderstanding and overdoing or under doing your nutrition can be hazardous to your health.

Have you ever heard any of these terms, and not known what they really meant? Here are some explanations that may help you better understand what they mean.

ORGANIC: Having properties associated with living organisms or referring to a chemical containing carbon.

INTERNATIONAL UNIT (I.U.): A standard unit of measurement for vitamins A, D and E, upon which the actual biological activity of a vitamin can be measured.

ENZYME: A substance that increases the speed of a biological reaction, but doesn't enter into it.

KILOCALORIE: The correct technical term for "calorie," a unit of heat necessary to raise the temperature of a kilogram of water 1 degree centigrade.

CHOLESTEROL: A fatlike substance found in every animal cell. An essential part of blood, tissue and bile, and essential in producing certain hormones.

MALNUTRITION: Undernourishment from insufficient food, improper diet or physical abnormalities.

METABOLISM: The continuous physical and chemical processes of living things that convert nutrients into energy, body structure and waste.

SATURATED FAT: Fats that remain solid at room temperature, usually from animal sources.

POLYUNSATURATED FAT: Fats that tend to be liquid at room temperature, usually from vegetable sources.

FATTY ACID: The component of fat that is responsible for the saturated or unsaturated quality.

ESSENTIAL FATTY ACIDS: Fatty acids that cannot be produced by the body. They can be supplied by foods.

NON-ESSENTIAL FATTY ACIDS: Fatty acids produced by the body.

MICRONUTRIENTS: Nutrients required by the body in tiny or "trace" amounts, they include vitamins, copper, iron and iodine.

MACRONUTRIENTS: Nutrients required by the body in relatively large amounts, and that are a large part of body weight. They include protein, carbohydrates, fats, calcium, phosphorus, magnesium, potassium and chloride.

PROTEIN: Any class of naturally occurring compounds, composed of amino acids containing carbon, hydrogen, nitrogen, oxygen and sometimes sulfur. Garlic more than just strong smell

Hearst Feature Service

Only alliophobes — those who fear garlic — complain about that socially undesirable characteristic, garlic breath. Lovers of the Stinking Rose, who have their own official club and newsletter called Garlic Times, mounted a national boycott of a mouthwash a few years back because television and magazine advertising for the product insisted that it could stop bad breath caused by garlic and onions.

"In this age of sophisticated culinary tastes," the editors of Garlic Times argued, "the lingering odor of garlic and onions on one's breath is a sign of cultivation."

Here are garlic recipes from The Ark restaurant in Nahcotta, Wash., site of the recent third annual Garlic festival:

GARLIC ROSE SOUP

14 cloves garlic, minced
4 shallots, minced
2 to 3 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
6 to 8 small tomatoes, diced
2 tablespoons chopped flatleaf parsley
1 cup cooking sherry
6 to 8 cups garlic stock (recipe follows)
2 dashes rose water
Salt and white pepper to taste
2 cups whipping cream
Creme fraiche or sour cream for garnish, if desired
Candied rose petals for garnish, if desired (recipe follows)

In soup kettle, saute garlic and shallots in butter until garlic starts to lightly nut (turn light brown). Add flour and cook 1 to 2 minutes, stirring constantly. Add tomatoes, parsley, sherry, stock and rose water. Add salt and pepper. Bring to near boiling, then simmer uncovered about 10 minutes. Finish with whipping cream.

Garnish with dollops of creme fraiche or sour cream and top each dollop with candied rose petal, if desired. Makes about 8 servings.

GARLIC STOCK

1 pound garlic or more, if desired
1 small onion 6 cloves
1½ gallons water
3 carrots, cut in chunks
1 small bunch parsley, including stems, coarsely chopped
1 bay leaf

Cut full bulbs of garlic in half horizontally to expose insides of garlic cloves. Peel onion and stud with cloves. Fill soup kettle water. Add halved garlic bulbs, onion studded with cloves, carrots, parsley and bay leaf.

Bring to lively boil, then simmer 90 minutes to 2 hours uncovered to reduce. Can be reduced another 45 minutes for stronger flavor. Makes about ¾ gallon.

Note: Remaining stock can be used for other soups or for cooking rice.

CANDIED ROSE PETALS

3 egg whites
Superfine sugar
Fresh rose petals

Gently whip egg whites just until bubbly and thinned. Dip rose petals in egg whites. Smooth petals through fingers to remove excess whites. Lay petals in bowl of sugar and shake gently.

Turn over and dip in sugar again just until coated. Avoid clumping of sugar. Shake excess off. Lay petals on parchment paper to dry at room temperature. Petals should be exposed to as much air as possible and dried away from heat.

Dry on one side for several hours, turn over and dry completely. These will keep for months in airtight container.

BRAISED STURGEON WITH GARLIC RASPBERRY SAUCE

10 ounces fresh raspberries (about 2 cups)
¼ cup water
5 tablespoons clarified butter
4 fillets (6 ounces each) fresh sturgeon
Salt and white pepper to taste
Juice from ½ lemon
6 tablespoons Madeira, divided
1 teaspoon minced garlic
½ teaspoon minced shallots
2 tablespoons whipping cream
Fresh raspberries for garnish

Pick over raspberries. Place in saucepan with water and bring to simmer over medium-low heat. Cook until soft puree stage, stirring occasionally. Sieve through mesh strainer to remove seeds. Set aside. Melt butter in saute pan, place fillets in pan and season lightly with salt and pepper.

Brown fillets on both sides over medium-high heat, sauteing until fillets are about half-cooked. Squeeze juice of ½ lemon over fillets. Deglaze pan with ¼ cup Madeira. Remove pan from heat and transfer fillets to ovenproof plate. Keep warm in 300-degree oven. Fillets will finish cooking while sauce is made.

Put saute pan back on heat, add minced garlic and shallots and shake pan to agitate contents just until garlic is lightly browned. Add remaining 2 tablespoons Madeira, stir lightly to deglaze pan and mix thoroughly. Add raspberry puree, cook gently for 2 to 3 minutes to slightly reduce mixture and marry flavors. Stir in whipping cream and heat just until mixture is warmed and blended. Remove fillets from oven, lace raspberry sauce over fillets and garnish with 3 or 4 fresh raspberries. Serve immediately. Makes 4 servings.

Copycat sundae close to original

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

Once upon a time, beginning in the 1920s, there was a chain of "tea-room restaurants" in Philadelphia, Boston and New York City. There you could sit at a soda fountain or a table and order a simple but rich sundae: vanilla, chocolate or coffee ice cream topped with hot fudge chocolate sauce and salted almonds or pecans.

The chocolate sauce was so popular that eventually the restaurants carried it for sale in jars (one of the first great American "take-outs"). Although it's been almost 15 years since those restaurants closed, a friend of mine and I still hanker after that sauce. Recently she made up her own version of it and sent me a jar. Brave woman. Would it have the famous attributes of the orginal? Would it, ladled hot over a scoop of ice cream, begin to become firm? Would it keep twirling around my spoon to taste like candy with every mouthful of the sundae?

The verdict? "Comes darn close."

COPYCAT CHOCOLATE FUDGE SAUCE

½ cup sugar
2 tablespoons cocoa
⅓ cup milk
¼ cup light corn syrup
1 square (1 ounce) unsweetened chocolate, chopped
2 tablespoons butter
⅓ cup heavy cream
1 teaspoon vanilla

In a heavy 2-quart saucepan stir together the sugar and cocoa. Stir in the milk and corn syrup until blended.

Stirring constantly, over medium heat, bring to a full boil and boil 8 minutes.

Off heat, stir in the chocolate and butter until melted. Gradually stir in the heavy cream until blended.

Stirring constantly, over medium heat, bring to a boil and boil 2 minutes. Off heat, stir in the vanilla. Cool.

Store in a tightly covered jar in the refrigerator. Reheat, uncovered, in the jar in a saucepan of almost simmering water until warm and spoonable.

Makes about 1¼ cups.

Cobbler requested

STRAWBERRY COBBLER

This is so good that each year we get requests for the recipe.

Topping, recipe follows
1¼ cups all-purpose flour
1¼ teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons butter
¾ cup sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 large egg
½ cup milk
3 cups strawberries, hulled (halved if large)

Make Topping and set aside. Stir together flour, baking powder, salt. Cream butter, sugar and vanilla; beat in egg until blended. Add flour mixture and milk; beat only until smooth. Spread over bottom of a buttered 8-inch square baking dish; scatter strawberries over top. Drop teaspoonfuls of Topping over berries. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out free of batter — 1 hour. Serve warm with whipped cream or vanilla ice cream. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Topping: Beat together until smooth ¼ cup butter (soft), ¼ cup sugar and ¼ cup all-purpose flour.

New process search

Joblessness less prevalent in '83

WASHINGTON (AP) — Close to 24 million Americans were touched by unemployment last year, but that was an improvement over 1982, "reflecting a year of strong labor market recovery," the Labor Department says.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics, releasing its annual "work experience" findings, said the number of people who were officially categorized as jobless at some point in 1983 was 23.8 million — 2.7 million fewer than in the preceding year.

It said the number of people who held a job during all or part of last year totaled 117.7 million, up 1.4 million from the year before.

The findings released Tuesday were based on responses to special "work experience" questions asked by agency surveyors in March. The question was posed to a random sample of U.S. citizens age 16 and above.

The bureau said the gain in the number of people who held jobs at some point last year "kept pace with the year-to-year increase of the working-age population."

The "work experience" survey by the bureau is broader than the monthly employment report, which is based on a random Current Population Survey of 60,000 U.S. households and which shows only how many people are working and are unemployed in a given month.

Among the other "work experience" survey findings were these:

—People who were jobless at some time or other last year constituted 19.6 percent of the 121.6 million people who worked or looked for work during the year. This proportion was well below the 22 percent figure in 1982.

—The proportion of blacks experiencing some unemployment in 1983 was 29.1 percent, down from 33.4 percent the year before and 30.5 percent in 1981.

—The great majority of people experiencing some unemployment in 1983 — 84 percent — held at least one job during the year. The remaining 16 percent looked for work at least part of the year but never held a job, the bureau said.

—Among people who were jobless at some point last year, the proportion of these unemployed people with "two or more spells" of jobless fell to 32.4 percent in 1983, compared to 33.6 percent in 1982.

Unions can't prevent members from quitting

WASHINGTON (AP) — A union cannot restrict the right of a member to resign, a labor relations panel has concluded in a decision that labor officials say will almost surely end up in the Supreme Court.

The National Labor Relations Board, dominated by Reagan administration appointees, held that limiting conditions under which union members may resign violates provisions of federal labor law.

The 3-0 decision, reached last Friday and released publicly by the board Tuesday, was roundly criticized by labor officials as undermining union solidarity during strikes. A fourth board member refused to sign the decision.

In a case involving the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers and a California auto dealership, the board accepted as valid an unfair labor practice complaint brought by management against Local 1414 of the machinists union.

The union, invoking a provision of its constitution preventing rank-and-file members from resigning just before or during strikes, "illegally fined an employee after he resigned from membership and returned to work during a 1981 strike," the board said in a statement.

Consultant 'hot' over remark

WASHINGTON (AP) — A majority of the House Interior Committee has asked for disciplinary action against a full-time consultant on one of its subcommittee staffs after he was quoted as saying that officials at a Mississippi nuclear plant are "not qualified to operate a car."

Rep. Jerry Huckaby, D-La., and 23 other congressmen on the 38-member Interior Committee wrote Chairman Morris Udall, D-Ariz., complaining that the remark by Richard Udell was "a blatant slur aimed at Southerners."

Huckaby said in a speech on the House floor last week that he wanted some kind of action taken "so that these bigoted statements will never appear again."

Udell's boss, Rep. Edward Markey, D-Mass., said through a spokesman Tuesday night that he had written a letter to the 24 congressmen apologizing "to anyone who misinterpreted the remarks to be derogatory in any sense to the people of Mississippi."

Markey, one of the most vociferous critics of nuclear power in Congress and chairman of the interior panel's oversight and investigations subcommittee, has criticized the Nuclear Regulatory Commisssion for allowing the Grand Gulf nuclear plant at Gulfport, Miss., to operate at low power.

The $3.3 billion plant, owned primarily by Mississippi Power & Light Co., has been plagued with a series of last-minute problems arising just before it was scheduled to begin generating electricity commercially.

Comanche Peak increases costs

AUSTIN (AP) — Increased costs of the Comanche Peak nuclear plant can be laid largely to growing regulatory requirements and changing interpretations of regulations, the Public Utilities Commission was told Tuesday.

Increases in the cost of Comanche Peak reflect "primarily and predominantly the effects of the changing regulatory climate in which the plant had to be built," Michael D. Spence, president of Texas Utilities Generating Co., testified at the TUEC rate hearing.

TUEC has asked for a $304.2 million rate increase.

"Although inflation and higher interest rates have had impacts on Comanche Peak's cost, growing regulatory requirements and changing interpretations of requlations have added most to the cost," Spense said.

Spence said that in 1972 when the company first announced its plans to build Comanche Peak, there were about 40 regulatory criteria and guidelines in existence. By 1980, Spence said, that number had grown to about 300, with many more being developed.

FAA says airports overcrowded

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of the Federal Aviation Administration says the air traffic control force will be at full strength by February, but delays in flights will continue because of overcrowded airports.

Most of the restrictions on air traffic related to the firing of striking air traffic controllers in 1981 have been lifted, but new controls have been put in place to keep planes safely separated at some of the world's busiest airports.

FAA Administrator Donald Engen told reporters on Tuesday four U.S. airports don't have enough runways for all the air traffic, leading to delays for travelers as controllers hold planes in the air or on the ground to maintain a safe distance between them.

Engen was scheduled to testify today before the subcommittee on investigations and oversight of the House Committee on Public Works and Transportation which is looking into charges by an FAA traffic manager that air traffic crowding near Denver is unsafe.

"Safety of the system is coming under jeopardy," Ralph P. Kiss said in an internal memorandum sent in May to his superior.

He said the four airports currently overtaxed are O'Hare in Chicago, La Guardia and John F. Kennedy airports in New York and Denver Stapleton.

Man sells power to electric company

His answer is blowing in the wind

SAN MARCOS, Texas (AP) — Ask James Johnson how to pull the plug on the power company, and he will tell you the answer is blowing in the wind.

Sitting in Johnson's yard is a giant machine that generates electricity when the wind blows. Three silver blades, which cut a circle 19 feet in diameter, are perched on a 54-foot-tall steel tower. The blades rotate to turn a turbine that generates electricity for Johnson's home. Behind the blades is a large weather vane that keeps them facing into the wind.

The harder the wind blows, the more power is produced. Sometimes it is enough to make Johnson's electric meter run backwards as excess electricity produced by the wind turbine flows into the lines of the Pedernales Electric Cooperative.

"I don't have a vendetta with the power company," said Johnson, who lives in the Country Estates development off Route 12 west of San Marcos. "I just thought it was time to cut my electricity costs."

A Pedernales official suggested that the wind turbine is an awfully expensive way to reduce an electric bill, however.

The wind turbine is visible for miles and has been catching the attention of passers-by since it was installed in late May, said Johnson. He works out of his home running a firm that builds microwave communication towers.

When the wind isn't blowing, Johnson buys his power from Pedernales. But when the wind is whistling and generating more power than Johnson needs, the extra electricity automatically flows into utility power lines.

Last month Johnson and Pedernales officials signed a contract under which the utility will pay for any surplus power the machine generates. It was the first time the utility made such an arrangement.

Under federal law utilities are required to purchase surplus power from small power producers like Johnson. The price varies, depending on the price of fuel. But for now it should average 3 to 4 cents for every kilowatt-hour of power Johnson sells. That is about half what he pays for power from Pedernales.

Pedernales plans to install a special meter to record the amount of power that goes into its lines, Johnson said. Then, he will be the only customer to get a check each month along with his electric bill.

But for the time being, when excess power flows back to Pedernales, it causes Johnson's electric meter to run backward. This reduces the amount of power that Johnson will be charged for.

"There's no doubt that electricity costs are going to go out of reach before too many years," said Johnson, citing an estimate that the cost to Pedernales customers will increase 77 percent over the next decade. "The more the costs go up, the more my machine will be worth."

But the power savings will not come cheap. The machine and associated equipment cost an estimated $19,000, and qualify him for a $4,000 federal tax credit, Johnson said.

He insists the investment will be worth it, but for now he avoids questions about how long it will take to pay for the machine in power savings. It's going to take a year of operation before anything definite can be determined, he said.

The cooperative plans to monitor the system closely to see how well it works and to identify any safety problems associated with the flow of electricity back into the utility system, said General Manager Bennie Fuelberg.

A number of people have approached the cooperative in the past to inquire about the use of wind power, Fuelberg said. "But when they studied it, they determined it was not a very good deal," Fuelberg said. "It's an awfully big investment out there for comparatively small savings."

Johnson, 60, a retired Air Force chief master sergeant, said he studied wind power for years before deciding to buy a unit made by a Nebraska company called American Energy Savers. Johnson said he is so impressed with it he decided to become a dealer for the machine.

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Wildcat opens new Tannehill pay

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business-Oil Editor

A King County wildcat has opened a new Tannehill pay stringer in the Big N field.

TAUBERT, STEED, GUNN, & MEDDERS, Wichita Falls, completed its No.22 S.B. Burnett Estate "WM" pumping 80 bopd of 36 API and two bwpd through perforations at 2,770-2,788 ft. Completion in the 18 ft. pay section was natural, after the well had been drilled to a TD of 2,970 ft. and 4 1/2 in. casing was set to that depth.

The well is located 495 ft. from north and 1,467 ft. from the west lines of Section 9, Block F, H&TC survey, Abstract 176, 15 miles southeast of Gutherie.

Other production in the field comes from the Strawn at 5,250 ft. and Tannehill pay zones at 2,888 ft. and 2,867 ft.

Another good Fusselman field is in the making

Another significant Fusselman field appears to be in the making in the Buckshot Multipay field of Cochran County.

Fusselman production in the field was opened earlier this year by Fort Worth operator ROBERT KLABZUBA'S No.1 F.O. Masten Estate which flowed 177 bopd of 43.3 API and no water on a 12/64 in. choke.

Now, a 1,500 ft. offset well has been drilled that appears to be more firmly on the structure as it completed for 247 bopd of 42 API and no water.

The well was completed through perforations at 11,369-11,383 ft. after being drilled to a TD of 11,374 ft. and setting 5 1/2 in. casing to 11,363 ft.

Location of the confirmation well is 850 ft. from north and 660 ft. from east lines of Section 16, Block 152, Randall CSL, nine miles southeast of Bledsoe.

Cisco strike confirmed

The Michelle Kay field has added a second well to confirm Cisco oil production in the field.

G.W. BROCK INC., Midland, drilled the No.1 Godfrey in January of this year to pump 48 bopd of 38 API and 210 bwpd. Now JOHN L. COX, Midland, has drilled a 1,500 northward offset well, the No.1-B Godfrey, which was completed pumping 22 bopd of 38 API and 72 bwpd. The offset well is located 660 ft. from north and467 ft. from west lines of A.H. Smith survey No.1, 18 miles west of Girard.

Completed in perforations at 5,758-5,785 ft., the offset confirmation well is 72 feet lower than the Brock opener which was completed in perforations at 5,830-5,835 ft.

New wildcats planned

THE ANSCHUTZ CORP., Midland, has made application to drill four new wildcats in three separate counties.

The firm proposes to drill a test 11 miles northwest of Midland in Ector County to look at the Atoka, Strawn and Wichita Albany in the Circle Bar East field, while prospecting at 13,500 ft.

Also planned is a 6,000 ft. San Andres prospector to be drilled 16 miles northwest of Midland in Andrews County, a 13,500 ft. wildcat six miles northwest of Midland, and a second 6,000 ft. test also 6 miles northwest of Midland.

Howard County will draw two wildcats. AA ENERGY CORP., Midland, will drill a 10,700 ft. wildcat 3 miles northwest of Morita, while EXXON CORP., Midland, plans a 10,750 ft. test 9.5 miles southwest of Big Springs.

Monsanto worker says chemicals piled up like snow

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Workers labored for years with the bitter taste of toxic herbicide dust in their mouths, says a former Monsanto Co. employee testifying in a lawsuit by seven retirees who claim they were slowly poisoned on the job.

The retirees are among 170 past and current employees seeking more than $2 billion in damages for a variety of health problems, including cancer and palsy, which they say were caused by their exposure to the poisonous chemicals.

Omar Wilson Cunningham, the first witness called in the suit, said Tuesday that the herbicide 2,4,5 T piled up "just like snow" at workers' feet.

Cunningham, 60, said he remembers the taste of the herbicide — an ingredient in the defoliant Agent Orange — because it frequently penetrated his respirator.

"You got a blast of hot air and the strong odor of 2,4,5 T. The odor wasn't too bad, but the taste was bitter," said Cunningham, who is not a plaintiff but worked with the substance for two decades. "You always had an accumulation of dust in your mouth and nostrils."

The 170 people suing Monsanto claim their health was slowly damaged by years of work at the company's plant in Nitro. U.S. District Judge John Copenhaver says the first trial, presenting the claim of seven retirees, could take six months.

Cunningham testified after lawyers for both sides presented opening arguments to the jury.

E. Stuart Calwell, representing the retirees, said he will prove the company knew employees were endangered by handling the chemicals but proceeded with the work anyway "for the money."

He said that at one point, profit-minded executives even figured the cost of health problems associated with the chemicals, setting the figure at 4 cents a pound.

Monsanto's lawyer, Charles Love, defended the calculation, saying "every business computes those costs."

Few military 'escape and evasion' kits offered to public in sealed bid sale

BATTLE CREEK, Mich. — A small number of military 'escape and evasion' kits, first used by World War II pilots and aircrewmen downed in unfriendly territory, are being offered to the general public in a sealed bid sale through the Columbus Reional Office of the Defense Property Disposal Serice (DPDS).

The kits, commonly called 'barter kits', contain gold coins, jewelry and watches. Bids on the kits will be accepted at the Columbus, Ohio, office until 9 a.m., Tuesday, July 24, 1984, at which time all bids will be opened to determine the highest bidders.

The sale will actually feature two different types of kits. One, the Atlantic kit from World War II and the other, the Southeast Asia kit, believed to be first used in Korea and later in Vietnam.

A representative sample of the kits will be available for inspection at the Columbus Region Office, beginning June 25. Inspection times will be from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. daily, excluding Saturdays, Sundays and national holidays.

Information on the sale is available by contacting the Columbus Region at P.O. Box 13110, Columbus, Ohio, 43215, and requesting sales catalog 27-4271.

The government will establish a minimum acceptable price for the kits no later than 10 a.m. (Eastern Daylight Time) on the day before the bid opeing. These prices will be based solely on the government's best estimate as to the net value to the government of the gold contained in each item. The New York Comex price for gold as reported by the Wall Street Journal on July 20, 1984, will be used to calculate minimum acceptable prices.

No bid below the calculated minimum acceptable price will be considered for award. A deposit equal to 20 percent of the total amount bid must accompany each bid.

No telegraphic or telephonic initial bids will be accepted on this sale, although telegraphic modifications (or withdrawals) of bids will be accepted. These modifications or withdrawals must be sent to: Sales Contracting Officer, Defense Property Disposal Region Columbus, Bldg. 27, Section 6, Defense Construction Supply Center, Columbus, Ohio, 43215, Telex 241-172, answer back code DPDR COL.

Postage and handling of kit shipments will be prepaid by the government to the highest bidders within the United States, trust territories and possessions.

The government anticipates this will be the final sale of escape and evasion kits. In August 1979, a test sale of 300 Atlantic and 50 Southeast Asia kits was held. The following year, two sales inolving a total of 2,200 Atlantic and 425 Southeast Asia kits were conducted. The July 24 sale will complete the disposal action on the more than 3,300 barter kits that were removed from war reserve stock.

Pacific area leader in projected hiring

CLEVELAND — With 54.8 percent of the executives polling in the Pacific predicting staff increases, the region leads the nation in projected hiring. This is the same percentage of new hires anticipated in last quarter's projection. Additional evidence of the substantial confidence in this region, is demonstarted by the fact that staff reductions have also dwindled from last quarter's 10.6 percent to this quarter's 7.1 percent.

Self-movers usually young, not going far

WASHINGTON — People who move their own furniture usually are young, don't make a lot of money, are renting just a few rooms and are moving less than 10 miles.

On the other hand, those who use moving companies are typically over 30 years of age, have an income in excess of $20,000, own their home, two cars and have moving costs paid at least in part by their employer.

And those who self-move would rather not, according to a study conducted by the University of Maryland Transportation Studies Group, which found that "while 76 percent of the households self moved on their most recent move, only 47 percent anticipate a self move on their next move."

The highest share of people shifting from self moving to moving companies occurs among those who believe safety and concerns about personal injury are important influencing factors.

Done on behalf of the American Movers Conference, trade association for the interstate moving industry, the study showed that 76 percent of all people who moved fell into the self-move category, while 21 percent used a moving company and 3 percent used a combination. Of those who self moved, 21 percent used rental equipment, and 55 percent used their personal or borrowed vehicles.

The scientific study used interviews of 999 people from across the country who had moved during the previous 12 months.

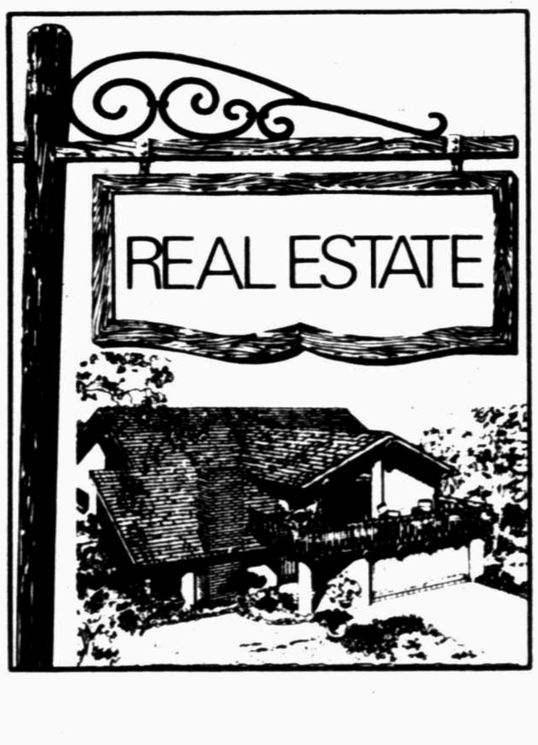

The Maryland group discovered that the main reasons all people gave for disliking a self move were the physical work and hassle involved (36 percent) and packing (17 percent). About 20 percent who self moved using equipment and 15 percent who self moved without equipment disliked nothing about the self move and more than 5 percent disliked everything.

Conversely, 54 percent of those who used moving companies said they were completely satisfied with the experience.

The most frequently mentioned dislike of the moving company experience was cost, noted by 26 percent of all households, but only 9 percent of the users of moving companies. No other factor was mentioned by at least 10 percent of the households.

Interestingly, among those who self moved on the basis of convenience and ease, 64 percent said their next move would be with a moving company. Among self movers who were concerned about the amount of goods they had to move, 86 percent said they would switch to a moving company on their next move. In contrast, however, among the self movers who said their decision was based on financial consideration, 91 percent said they would self move on their next move.

Americans to be conscience-stricken about borrowing

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Why are we borrowing so much?

"Because it is so easy to borrow," says Edward Yardeni, director of economics at Prudential-Bache Securities. Deregulation, he says, has lowered the risks to lenders, and so they pump out the credit.

Many people would agree with him — people who find banks offering mortgage loans that would have been denied a few years ago, and lines of credit that even customers sometimes think are rather generous.

In spite of rising interest rates and repeated forecasts of a cooling economy — and even, some say, despite efforts of the Federal Reserve to bring it about — the amount of credit outstanding has been rising.

Government borrowing is up. Business borrowing is growing because of a newly expressed interest in renovating or adding to production facilities. And for the first time in many months, consumer installment credit early this year again topped 16 percent of disposable personal income.

At a meeting in San Francisco a few weeks ago, Yardeni said he asked his audience of 100 professional money managers if over the past 30 days any of them had received an invitation from a bank to open a line of credit.

He says he was shocked. "Ninety-five people raised their hands," he relates. He comments sardonically: "Maybe the remaining five were just bad credit risks." He blames bank deregulation in part.

Whatever the reason, a feeling seems to be developing that deregulation might have been overdone, especially in view of recent bank failures and the dangerous financial plight of Continental Illinois National Bank.

In a significant change of attitude, Congress now seems anxious to put a harness on newly won bank freedoms, including restrictions on their newly won rights to offer discount stock brokerage and insurance services.

Legislative restrictions also are being sought on the proliferation of adjustable rate mortgages, which many bank and building industry spokesmen have credited with having made housing "affordable" for millions of families.

Congress' concern seems aimed a correcting what critics call "payment shock," or the escalation of monthly interest charges that can occur on such loans. Others are concerned that low first-year interest charges on some adjustable mortgages allow families to qualify for loans that are bound to be foreclosed.

Some critics contend that deregulation — and such products of deregulatory spirit as overdraft accounts, lines of credit, and home equity accounts — has made it more difficult for the Federal Reserve to discipline financial markets.

Another widely held notion is that the Fed can't do much about it anyway — that if it seeks to slow the pace of borrowing by allowing interest rates to rise more sharply they will risk bankrupting debtor nations such as Argentina.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Woman wants to report capital gains correctly

By BILL DOYLE

Q. My sister-in-law, who is elderly and ill, asked me to arrange the sale of stocks she owned. She signed the stock certificates and I turned them over to a brokerage firm, which sold them and sent her checks for the proceeds. There were 15 stocks, so a large amount of money was involved.

Now, I'm informed she is supposed to report profits from these stock sales as capital gains on her income tax return. To do that, we have to know the prices she paid for the stocks. She doesn't remember those prices and has no records. What can we do?

A. Your sister-in-law has a familiar problem. All-too-many people don't know the prices they paid for stocks and other "capital assets." Getting accurate numbers sometimes can be an impossible task.

If your sister-in-law can remember the brokerage firm through which she bought those stocks, you can start there. That firm might be able to go through its records and come up with the purchase prices. I have to warn you, however, that most brokerage houses can't do that for transactions made years ago.

You could go through microfilm records of newspaper stock tables at a public library and select prices around the date the stock certificates were issued. The rub, here, is that stock certificates can be issued from weeks to months after the dates on which stocks are purchased. You won't know, for sure, what prices she paid.

On her income tax return, she could list as the stocks' costs the prices you find in newspaper records. Then, you can hope the Internal Revenue Service doesn't question her reutrn. Under our tax system, the burden of proof is on the taxpayer.

If you run into a deadend, you might go to your local IRS office, explain the situation and ask what cost prices the people there feel should be assigned to those stocks. Despite the horror stories you sometimes hear, it's unlikely the revenooers will be unduly harsh on that elderly lady who wants to report her capital gains correctly.

Three tunnels discovered under DMZ

DEMILITARIZED ZONE, Korea (AP) — Two hundred forty feet below the surface at one of the most heavily fortified areas in the world, two armed sentries stand on 24-hour guard.

One mans an M-60 machine gun; the other stands by a three-foot thick concrete wall. Both pack .45 automatic pistols and are watched by closed circuit television cameras.

The soldiers guard a tunnel, wide enough for three soldiers to run through abreast, that passes under the tense Demilitarized Zone dividing North and South Korea.

The South Korean Army says it discovered in June 1978 the "Tunnel of Aggression," dug by their Communist enemies north of the 38th parallel. It was the third such tunnel the South Koreans say they uncovered, and it stands as a reminder to the uneasy armistice between the two sides today.

South Korea claims the tunnels reveal North Korea's intention to reunify the Korean Peninsula by force. The North denies digging them, claiming they are South Korean propaganda.

Korea has been divided since the end of World War II, and the DMZ was established with the signing of the armistice that ended the 1950-1953 Korean War.

The DMZ is a desolate, barren strip of land 156 miles long and 2.5 miles wide.

The discovery of the third tunnel stemmed from the 1974 defection of Kim Pu Song, a North Korean engineer who said he had conducted tunnel surveying in the area since 1972.

Based on information supplied by Kim, South Korean authorities believe there may be as many as seven more tunnels beneath the DMZ, according to 1st Lt. Ryoo Koo-hyun of the South Korean army.

The U.N. Command Tunnel Neutralization Team had to bore through solid granite to reach the tunnel, which extends 435 yards into South Korean territory.

Its dank, chilly interior has been sealed off just south of the Military Demarcation Line by two concrete walls and an area laced with barbed wire and Claymore mines.

"The North Koreans accused us of building this tunnel, then they said it was a coal mine built by the Japanese," Ryoo said. "They even painted the granite walls black."

The tunnel, now a popular spot for family outings and school field trips, is beneath a low, hilly area dotted with poplars and pines just 26 miles north of Seoul and 2.5 miles from Panmunjom, the truce village in the DMZ where North and South delegations meet periodically for generally fruitless talks.

Hobbyists show miniature circuses

By LYNN CLINE
Associated Press Writer

DES MOINES, Iowa — The circus has come to town, but you won't see any big-tops rising on the horizon.

In fact, there are 50 circuses here, though they're not the kind you can run away to join.

The only way to get a glimpse of the acts in and out of the circus rings is to stoop and peer into miniature tents and wagons full of animals and entertainers — carved from wood.

It's all a part of the 48-year-old Circus Model Builders Inc. gathering at the Iowa State Fairgrounds, where more than 50 circus lovers from 15 states are displaying their diminutive handicrafts in a four-day exposition.

"I've been doing this for 30 years," Charles Shane of Wahoo, Neb., said Tuesday, waving at a three-foot long miniature complex, complete with a three-ring circus under a big top tent, sideshow attractions and an outdoor circus cookhouse.

"It takes at least 21 footlockers to haul all that stuff around," he added.

Shane's replica was carefully crafted from wood and hand-painted. Some of his tiny creations contain motors: a clown who rides across a highwire and hula girls who dance in front of a smaller tent. There's even a small boy and his dog trying to sneak into the circus by climbing under a tent flap.

The 50 colorful and elaborate displays — featuring horses, elephants, lions, trainers, sideshows and clown acts — take up 10 rows in the grandstand building at the fairground complex.

The model builders group members tour the country each year to "keep the public circus-minded," said Pete Hildreth of Des Moines, chairman of the group.

"We're all circus-minded at heart," he said. "You can't buy your own circus, but you can build your own miniature circus."

Hildreth said the purpose of the gathering was "strictly to get together for some comaraderie and to get the public 'oohing' and 'aahing.'"

About 100 people toured the tiny circuses during a morning hour Tuesday, the opening day of the show, the 23rd of its kind.

Admission is free because "it's not a professional thing," Hildreth said.

He said most of the participants had other jobs or were retirees and build the miniature replicas because of their love for the circus.

"This is a therapy for me, and a way to unwind from my job," said Shane, who has worked as an inspector for a Nebraska public service commission. "After a particularly trying day you go home, wrap your fingers up and start whittling."

Shane said he's always loved the circus. He grew up living next door to Virgil Campbell, one of three brothers who owned the Campbell Brothers Circus from 1892-1912.

Americans still unsold over gold

By DAVID GOELLER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — It sounded like a great idea in 1978 when gold fever was infecting speculators and people were worrying about inflation: dip into the U.S. government vault, mint medallions and make a killing for the taxpayers.

An eager market, the thinking went, would not only be buying the world's prime metal but would prize the American Arts series coins with portraits of author Mark Twain, artist Grant Wood, jazzman Louis Armstrong, poet Robert Frost and actress Helen Hayes.

But today, four years after the price of gold peaked and began diving, the U.S. Mint has shelved its heavily promoted campaign to turn its gold pieces into the American version of South Africa's Krugerrand and Canada's Maple Leaf.

"It just hasn't worked," says Francis Frere, the mint's assistant director of marketing. "They're not selling. We've made a strong effort, but it's not working. It was a major campaign."

In 1980, when gold hit a high of $850 an ounce in world bullion markets, the mint began selling the commemorative medallions and was able to market about 440,000 ounces worth made from gold carried on the U.S. books at $42.22 an ounce.

But sales, made primarily through post offices, nosedived to 128,000 ounces in 1981 and were languishing in 1982 when the mint decided to stir interest in the half-ounce and ounce coins by turning marketing over to bullion professionals.

In a contract that drew criticism from a key House member, the New York firm of J. Aron and Co. agreed to sell the medallions in a deal that called for the firm to buy 3 million ounces of the coins at 2 percent over current gold market prices.

J. Aron's campaign began in April 1983, utilizing its contacts in the precious metals business and bolstered by a $4 million advertising blitz with TV spiels by Bob Hope, Johnny Cash, former U.S. Treasurer Angela Buchanan and Donna Pope, director of the mint.

The company had until September 1985 to unload the 3 million ounces, but early this month the contract was canceled after J. Aron bought 1 million ounces but managed to sell only about 150,000 ounces, according to a spokesman for the firm.

"We expected to see a response to the 3 million ounces and hoped to go back (to the mint) for more," the spokesman said. "We felt this piece would reach many new gold buyers. But there was no incentive to buy at this time. The market was either flat or decreasing."

When the contract was aborted, gold was selling for $393 an ounce in world markets. The one-ounce U.S. medallion was priced at $399, the same as the Krugerrand and the Maple Leaf, which unlike the medallions are legal tender that can be spent in their respective nations.

Eric Trujillo, manager of precious metals for Ruesch International Monetary Services in Washington, said the medallions were difficult to sell for several reasons.

"The timing was bad for the U.S. to get into the gold market; it's been going down," he said. "The buying frenzy isn't there. Because of the worldwide acceptance of the Krugerrand and the Maple Leaf, commemorative medallions seem to have lost interest in the last several years."

The J. Aron spokesman and Frere say the company stood willing to fulfil the contract. But Frere said that doing this would not meet the mandate of the 1978 legislation that created the medallion program.

'Wolf' scares park operators

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Who's afraid of the Big Bad Wolf? Its owner, that's who.

Busch Gardens Old Country was all set to open its newest, scariest ride this week, a super roller coaster named "The Big Bad Wolf." But park operators decide the Wolf was too bad because it was too fast and delayed the official first ride.

Connie Desaulniers, a spokeswoman for the amusement park, said the $6 million custom-made ride would open as soon as additional brakes are installed to slow it to an estimated top speed of 45 mph.

"The braking system is being modified now, and any modification requires complete retesting for the ride," she said. "We should, hopefully, have it open in a few days."

'I LIVE WITH MY GRANDPARENTS NOW.'

"I want to tell you about something that's very important to me. Using the safety belts in your car. More than 16,000 lives could be saved each year if people just buckled up.
