Son unloads anger over auto repairs

■ Antonio Armijo, of Big Spring, took a rifle into a repair shop, opened fire, took father hostage, police said.

By Richard Acosta
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — Slow service apparently drove a Big Spring man to open fire in a family-operated garage before taking his father hostage Tuesday night, according to police.

Big Spring police arrested 20-year-old Antonio Armijo in connection with the alleged garage shooting and hostage situation, according to reports.

Public Information Officer Sgt. Roger Sweatt said the situation started around 8:30 p.m. as a result of a disagreement at a Big Spring garage located in the 500 block of East First Street.

"He (Armijo) had taken in his vehicle to be worked on," Sweatt said. "Apparently, he was not happy with how long it was taking to get his car fixed, so he went to the shop and he pulled out a rifle."

Armijo fired several rounds inside the business before leaving, according to police reports.

Witnesses provided investigating officers with a description of Armijo and pointed them in the direction they believed he could be found. Shortly thereafter, police found Armijo's vehicle in front of a house in the 2500 bock of Gunter in Big Spring, according to reports.

Police were able to open communications with Armijo, who told police, "he had a family member inside the residence and neither he, nor the family member were coming out."

Inside, Armijo allegedly was holding hostage his 43-

Bail granted for 8 of 25 arrested in Big Spring

LUBBOCK — Eight of the 25 people arrested in connection with the Friday drug bust in Big Spring are out on bail, according to FBI and Department of Public Safety officials.

DPS officials said only those considered low-risk bond jumpers or were facing less severe charges have been granted bond thus far.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Dick Baker said at a press conference Friday that authorities' wanted the suspects to remain jailed in lieu of bond.

"Due to the high risk of skipping bail and the danger to society (that) these people are, we plan on asking that these people be held without bond," Baker said.

Of the remaining 17, all are being held in the Lub-

UTPB unveils plan for $11.4 million building

By Daniel Arp
Staff Writer

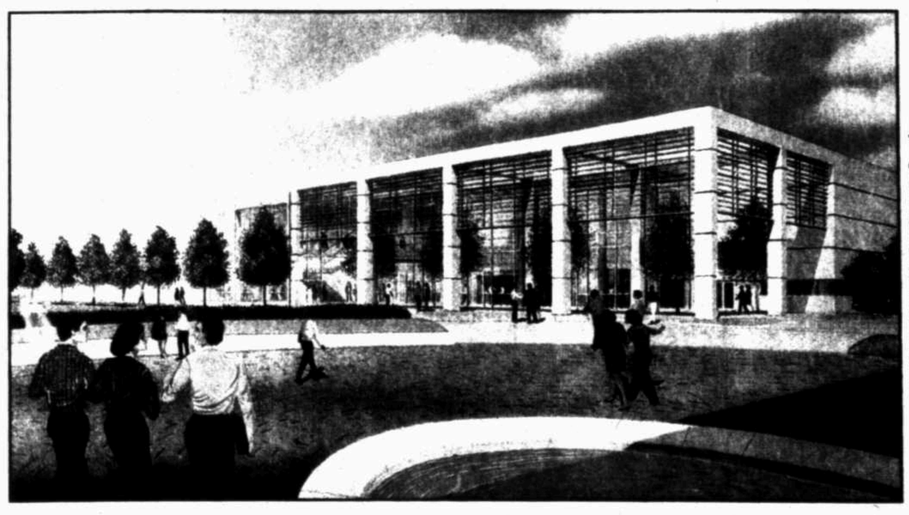

ODESSA — The University of Texas of the Permian Basin revealed Wednesday its chosen design for a new $11.4 million library to be completed by the end of 2000.

The project is the second and last part of a $25 million building project, the university's first major construction effort since shortly after its opening 25 years ago. Ground was broken in May for a new visual arts building.

The project got off the ground this past year when the state Legislature allocated $25.8 million to UTPB, the fourth largest amount received by any university that year.

"It was a team effort. It took all of the representatives from Maurine Hanks rescued the "Vealmoor" sign when the town's school was torn down in the 1960s.

Vealmoor exists mostly in the memories of those who lived there and woman who watches over it

By Johnnye Montgomery

VEALMOOR — Vealmoor, named for the moors of Scotland by Minnie Slaughter Veal, lies in a straight line 19 miles north and about five degrees west of Big Spring on Texas Transportation maps, but you won't pass through it intentionally.

Maurine Hanks, who lives there, said most strangers who come through are lost — they meant to go to Lamesa — and failed to notice that Highway 87 veered off about eight miles north of Big Spring, and continued on the straight and narrow road that at that point became FM 1584.

"They knock at my door, and ask me how to get to Lamesa, and I tell them, and they're on their way," she said. "There's nothing here anymore, since they closed the post office two years ago."

Ms. Hanks has seen six grocery stores and gas stations and a good-size school come and go since she and her husband moved there in 1932. Also, in the past is a hotel built and operated by Mae Zant, a widow from Albany who had bought land from promoter W. P. Soash in 1924.

The hotel originally was used by the prospective land buyers brought in by Soash, who found it economically feasible to pay the room rent and save the wear and tear on his vehicle and on his prospects' sensibilities traveling back and forth from Big Spring.

The first post office was in the hotel; Ms. Zant served as postmaster.

But when the land deals were all done, Ms. Zant no longer had enough tenants to keep the hotel going, so

Economic gap between U.S., other nations huge, problematic

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — The skyscrapers are half empty here, and the jobs are disappearing. Compare that to America, where the stock market has bounced back and unemployment is at historic lows.

Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan's description of the United States as an "oasis of prosperity" in a troubled world doesn't even begin to describe the huge gulf between America's good times and many other nations' very hard times.

In all, 40 percent of the world is in recession, and this region is ground zero of the suffering. Indeed, Malaysia, Thailand, Indonesia and South Korea have gone beyond recessions to outright depressions, rivaling America's Great Depression of the 1930s.

The disparity is causing problems as officials try to come up with solutions to help the countries in trouble.

"Coordinating policy when the problems differ so much is extremely difficult," said Allen Sinai, chief economist at Primark Global Economics.

For two decades, the Asian tiger nations boasted miracle economies growing faster than any others. Symbols of that past growth were everywhere as leaders of the Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation summit met here to discuss the global economic crisis.

Vice President Al Gore met with other leaders at an opulent hotel, just one of many added to a Kuala Lumpur skyline that boasts the world's tallest skyscrapers, the twin Petronas towers.

But many of the big office towers now stand half empty. Construction cranes are idle, food staples such as flour and oil have been in short supply and unemployment has doubled in a year — it's 6 percent and climbing, the highest in a decade.

In Thailand, 250,000 children have been taken out of school because their families can't afford tuition. In South Korea, 2.2 million workers have been laid off as the country's once mighty corporate giants face painful futures.

The economic upheaval will plunge 50 million people back into poverty, wiping out decades of progress in raising living standards, the World Bank estimates.

Economic output already has fallen 17 percent in Indonesia and around 7 percent in Malaysia, South Korea and Thailand. In the United States a decline of just 0.9 percent in the last recession was severe enough to prompt voters to turn President Bush out of office.

And today, in stark contrast to Asia, the U.S. economy is roaring through its eighth consecutive year of economic growth, a peacetime record.

Growth will slow next year, but any fears of a U.S. recession have eased now that the Federal Reserve has aggressively cut U.S. interest rates. Those moves also have sparked a rebound in the American stock market and helped stabilize Asian markets as well.

Even with the impact the global crisis has had on U.S. manufacturing, unemployment is holding rock steady at 4.6 percent, the longest stretch below 5 percent in 30 years.

That doesn't mean the United States has been untouched. In Washington, the government reported Wednesday that the U.S. trade deficit so far this year is running at a record annual rate of $166 billion, a whopping 50 percent higher than last year.

The growing deficit reflects Asia's troubles. American farmers and factories have lost valuable export markets as the steep Asian recessions have cut into demand for U.S. products.

The trade deficit will be a major topic for President Clinton as he travels this week to Japan and South Korea. He faces growing pressures from labor unions to do something to stop the flood of foreign products into America.

The steel industry is campaigning hard to get the administration to impose stiff dumping penalties on steel imports from Japan, Russia and Brazil. Textile makers, machine tool manufacturers and computer chip makers have complained about the rising competition. And farmers, facing steep drops in income, recently got billions in aid from Congress.

At the meetings in Malaysia, talks concluded with vague promises to speed efforts to combat the crisis but few ideas of how to accomplish it.

All goes normally as U.N. inspectors resume monitoring Iraq

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — When United Nations weapons inspectors went back to work Wednesday, it was so normal it seemed as though the last two weeks of high tension never happened.

The six white vehicles from the U.N. Special Commission investigating Iraq's hidden arms pulled out of UNSCOM headquarters on Baghdad's eastern edge. Accompanying them were a half-dozen cars full of Iraqi escorts — a sign that Iraq was cooperating.

The weapons inspectors would not talk to reporters or TV crews, as usual. And their spokeswoman, Caroline Cross, would not say where the inspectors were going or what tasks they would perform.

"The Baghdad Monitoring and Verification Center has resumed full-range activities" was her succinct announcement of the return to work.

In fact, the inspectors were back on the job only after the United States and Britain threatened air strikes against Iraq unless it resumed full cooperation with the monitors.

Iraq backed down Saturday as air and missile attacks were about to be unleashed.

On Wednesday, the first evidence came that Iraq was complying. It provided the escorts necessary under Iraq-U.N. agreements; in the past it has denied escorts as a means to block inspections.

Asked about the first day of work by UNSCOM inspectors, U.N. spokesman Fred Eckhard in New York said: "They did a normal day's work and came back — no problems."

The inspectors were expected to limit their first visits to sites where they have installed cameras and sensors for long-term monitoring.

The surprise checks that in the past created clashes with Iraq will come later, Ms. Cross has said. These are visits to sites where it is suspected that Iraq has hidden material related to chemical and biological weapons programs or long-range missiles.

Iraq suspended U.N. weapons monitoring activities on Oct. 31, and UNSCOM and the International Atomic Energy Agency, which investigates Iraq's nuclear programs, pulled out their inspectors last week.

Eighty inspectors from UNSCOM and six from the IAEA returned Tuesday. Another six inspectors returned to Baghdad from the Gulf state of Bahrain on Wednesday.

Britain's high court to rule on Pinochet

LONDON (AP) — Britain's highest court will announce next week whether former Chilean dictator Gen. Augusto Pinochet has immunity from arrest and can leave Britain, officials said Wednesday.

The five-judge tribunal in the House of Lords, headed by Lord Justice Gordon Slynn, will hand down its ruling on Nov. 25 — the general's 83rd birthday.

Spanish authorities, who want to extradite Pinochet to face charges of genocide during his 1973-90 rule, had appealed the High Court ruling, which said the ex-general has immunity from arrest under English law as a former head of state. British prosecutors joined them in the appeal.

Pinochet was arrested on a Spanish warrant Oct. 16 while in a London hospital bed recuperating from back surgery.

On Tuesday, a British court ordered the former dictator to appear in court Dec. 2. It also said the British government must decide by then — if the Lords rule against him — whether extradition proceedings can go ahead.

A Chilean government report says 3,197 people were murdered or disappeared at the hands of security forces after Pinochet ousted Salvador Allende, an elected Marxist.

Pinochet remains under police guard in Grovelands Priory, a north London hospital. New bail conditions agreed upon Tuesday say he can be moved, but must remain under guard.

Lawyers say he now is fit enough to leave the hospital.

By tradition, the judges in the House of Lords enter the chamber together and present their judgment in the form of a speech.

There usually is a leading judgment, but each judge can spell out individually the reason for his decision on a particular legal point. Judges who dissent give separate judgments.

Down, but not out: Britain's hereditary peers face final battle

LONDON (AP) — They've seen countless monarchs come and go, survived England's 17th-century civil war and deftly sidestepped abolition during 150 years of popular democracy.

Now, Britain's hereditary peers are likely facing their final battle after a millennium of political influence.

Prime Minister Tony Blair wants to strip the 759 nobles of their voting rights in the House of Lords, Britain's upper chamber, as part of a parliamentary reform program.

But some peers, described by one newspaper as "an elderly but tenacious and highly experienced guerrilla force," vow to fight back by clogging up the government's legislative program.

"I would regard that as my final duty and would be proud to go out as a 'football hooligan,'" says Earl Onslow, 60, referring to England's notoriously unruly soccer fans.

The House of Lords, which revises and examines government legislation, was established in the 11th century. It is composed of hereditary lords, who inherited their titles, and life peers, who are awarded titles and may be the only members left after reform.

The peers debate in an ornate, gilded chamber and have a reputation for courtesy, unlike the House of Commons, where directly elected Members of Parliament argue more raucously.

The rebellious peers say the Labor Party's plans to abolish their voting rights without proposing an alternative threatens Britain's constitutional balance between the government's executive and legislative branches.

"Doing away with us without qualification won't do," said Lord Mottistone, 78. "In the last resort, we may fight all sorts of rearguard actions — slow things down, ruin government legislation — because we will fight this hard."

Reformers counter that it's indefensible that hereditary lords, who overwhelmingly support the opposition Conservative Party, can vote in Parliament on the basis of their ancestry.

"I think the hereditary principle has led to a very narrow social group in the Lords — almost exclusively male and overwhelmingly Tory," said Lord Ponsonby, one of only 16 Labor-supporting hereditary peers.

Britain's nobles have been a power for a thousand years, although their influence has been draining to the House of Commons for the past four centuries.

A total of 1,272 peers — and a smattering of peeresses — are eligible to sit in the House of Lords. Of those, nearly 500 are life peers.

Only about 200 hereditary peers regularly attend, carrying out the bulk of the chamber's work with about the same number of life peers.

A few hereditary peers trace their lineage to commanders of William the Conqueror's invading 1066 Norman army or illegitimate royals born to monarch's mistresses. But most of the titles are less than 150 years old, won by political and military worthies from England's landed gentry or wealthy industrial families who helped govern Britain and ruled its far-flung Victorian empire.

Labor's refusal to say how the revised chamber will fit with Britain's new constitution, in which Scotland and Wales will have their own national assemblies, have led to accusations that Blair is planning a new era of patronage politics.

"We don't want an assembly which is the prime minister's mirror," said Earl Russell, a spokesman for Britain's Liberal Democrat party.

Some life peers also think the reform plans are being pushed through too fast.

"We may have to change," said Lord Chalfont, an independent. "But we don't have to change a thousand years of history in the course of a single parliamentary session."

Labor supporters call that foot-dragging, and dismiss the peers' claims of impartiality.

Lord Basham, a council leader from southern England who was given a life peerage by Blair, said the government would publish its reform proposals next year.

In the interim, the hereditary peers have started a quiet campaign by taking their case to the court of public opinion.

Although polls show the majority of Britons support ejecting the nobles from the chamber, others point to high levels of support for them on specific issues.

The Lords voted against lowering the age of gay consent, for example, and opposed unpopular measures such as the government's ban on selling beef on the bone after a theoretical link with "mad cow" disease was announced.

Labor's worry is that if the hereditary lords can raise enough public support and identify themselves with popular causes, Blair may be forced to shelve reform plans.

"I think the arguments being put forward are delaying tactics. I think the hereditaries realize the game's up, but they want to be recognized when they walk out of the door," said Lord Ponsonby.

"In personal terms, I would be sorry to go," he said. "I hope I have made a contribution. But that doesn't mean I wouldn't vote against my own abolition."

Thousands protest as Indonesian Parliament promises reforms

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Unbowed by the shooting deaths of students by the military last week, about 4,000 protesters streamed through the capital Wednesday and laid flowers outside the gates of the heavily guarded Parliament.

While defiant voices of demonstrators echoed in Jakarta's streets, lawmakers began deliberating inside the green-domed legislature on proposed political reforms that indignant students have called inadequate.

"None of us are afraid of the soldiers," said Arif Rachman, a protest organizer. "We are getting stronger now because of the killing of our colleagues."

Sixteen people, including eight students, were killed last week when security forces opened fire on protesters trying to march on Parliament. Others, including some police, died when rioting broke out in parts of Jakarta.

Police announced Wednesday they had charged 10 opposition activists, including two retired generals, with orchestrating last week's violence in a bid to topple the government of President B.J. Habibie. If convicted, they could be imprisoned for life.

Summoned to National Police headquarters earlier Wednesday for questioning, retired army general Kemal Idris called the allegations a "mere fabrication."

In Jakarta, rush-hour traffic was brought to a standstill Wednesday when about 2,500 students marched peacefully past hotels and office buildings. They were blocked by about 100 army anti-riot officers from moving to the National Monument near the presidential palace.

To avoid a confrontation, the throng headed toward Atma Jaya University, where soldiers and police had opened fire on protesters last Friday.

A separate group of about 1,500 of demonstrators, riding in and atop of 15 buses, was also blocked by soldiers. They were later allowed to gather outside the heavily guarded Parliament building under a military escort.

Earlier, in a speech that opened a new session of the legislature, Speaker Harmoko warned that any delay to the reform process could "trigger new problems" in the sprawling Southeast Asian nation, now beset by political and economic turmoil.

He said parliamentary elections in May or early June 1999 would be "based on honesty and justice, and would be direct, open to all, free and secret."

Meanwhile, Cabinet Minister Adi Sasono said Wednesday that autopsies on the bodies of some students who died in last week's shootings showed some had been killed by live ammunition.

"Yes, they used real bullets," Adi said in an interview with Dow Jones Newswires. "I got a report from the doctors who carried out autopsies...and found there were real bullets used."

The military has insisted that security personnel were issued only plastic bullets and blank ammunition.

Investigators: Fracture on deck led to January sinking of freighter

ST. JOHN'S, Newfoundland (AP) — A fracture along the deck of the grain carrier Flare may have caused it to snap in half and sink in stormy seas, killing 21 crewmen, federal investigators said Wednesday.

In issuing the interim findings of their investigation into the January sinking, the investigators warned that up to 14 ships of similar age and design around the world could be vulnerable to the same defect.

The fracture ran along the starboard side of the deck at one of the ports used for loading grain, said Bill McOnie, the Canadian government's lead investigator. An underwater inspection by a remote-control camera confirmed the location of the crack.

"This may be a failure point in other vessels and we certainly don't want a second Flare," McOnie said Wednesday from Dartmouth, Nova Scotia.

McOnie said the cause of the fracture was not known.

Four crewmen survived when the Montreal-bound freighter sank in the Gulf of St. Lawrence. The Cypriot-owned and registered ship was built in 1972.

year-old father, Arthur Armijo.

Big Spring police called out the Special Operations Response Team and crisis negotiators to talk with Armijo.

"He was just talking to us at first," Sweatt said. "Then he would become threatening. Although there were times when he led us to believe he might do something, he never came out and said he was going to do anything to us or his father. When we would ask to speak with his father and he would just get upset."

Negotiations went on for approximately four hours before Armijo surrendered to police peacefully, reports indicated.

"We lost communications for a while," Sweatt said. "Once we re-established communications he decided to give himself up. I don't know if his father told him something or if he had thought it over and wanted to give up, but he came out."

Eventually, the father was released unharmed.

While searching the residence, a rifle was found and identified as the weapon used in the alleged shooting at the garage, according to reports.

"We're happy with how everything turned out," Sweatt said. "No one was hurt and the team did a good job."

Armijo is charged with aggravated assault with a deadly weapon, a second-degree felony, in connection with the shooting. As of Wednesday night, he was being held in the Howard County jail without bond, according to reports.

(From 1A)

West Texas to get it done," said Rep. Buddy West, a representative from the 81st District and a 1975 alumnus of UTPB. West is also a member of the appropriations committee and higher education subcommittee of the Texas Legislature.

"Dr. (Charles) Sorber, (president of UTPB) had a dream, he had an idea. He took it to the development board ... and we were able to get it done."

The new space is badly needed, according to Carole Johnson, interim director of the library.

"(The library) is really inefficient. It's not up to ADA (Americans with Disabilities Act) standards," she said afterward. "When a collection grows and the space stays the same, the collection takes up users' space. That's one of the reasons they have to build this."

The new library will be 79,000 square feet and able to house all the library's holdings as well as provide room to grow by up to 25 percent. Total capacity will be about 220,000 bound volumes and more than 1 million microforms.

The present library is overfilled and covers only 19,000 square feet.

Plus, it's an eyesore, Ms. Johnson said.

"Nothing matches. In the microform room we have five colors on the walls — and they clash with the carpet," she said.

Ms. Johnson said she has had to deal with mustard-colored file cabinets and orange shelving for too long.

"Aesthetics is definitely one of the things we gain (with this new building)."

The new facility features strip windows, shade structures above the entrance, and a glassy north elevation. The goal behind the design, said architect Dan Wigodsky, was to create a "sense of openness and light."

"The library should be a place where people want to go to study," he said.

In addition, the building features lecture halls in which every seat is wired for the Internet, a spacious commons that will be used for special events and study, and a major computer lab.

Construction is scheduled to begin July 5; students should be able to access the building by January 2001.

VEALMOOR: Old school sign now front step of home

she moved it to her farm. A large brick schoolhouse was built after the 1948 oil boom, but in the 1960s, the school was consolidated and moved to Gail, so the schoolhouse was torn down and the bricks used to build the Giant Food Store in Big Spring.

Ms. Hanks kept the cement "Vealmoor" sign that sat in front of the school and now uses it as a step for her front porch. Several years ago, a reporter from Big Spring came out, took her picture with the sign and named her "The Mayor of Vealmoor."

Ms. Hanks and her husband, Porter, built a grocery store at Vealmoor in 1932. "We sold the crop, the house and 80 acres for $500, and built the store and stocked it and had money left over," she remembers.

"We built the store in front and a place for us to live in the back. When it was all finished, my husband told me to go look in our pantry and make a list so we'd know what stock to order, so I did. But neither one of us drank coffee.

"The day we opened, our first customer was Carl McKee, and he asked for a pound of coffee. That's how we lost our first sale."

The Hankses milked a cow and sold the milk, and raised chickens for eggs to sell, and during the Depression, maintained an informal clearinghouse for food stamps.

"People were always trading sugar stamps for shoe stamps, coffee stamps for gasoline stamps. We had a regular stamp bank where we kept up with things like that. We had the post office in the store, with 16 mail boxes."

In the early days they also sold ice that was brought from the ice-house in Big Spring in 300-pound blocks. The store's first refrigerator was a kerosene-powered Electrolux.

Ms. Hanks said people were always asking them to reopen the store after hours or to open early.

"They'd come knocking on the door and say, 'I'm out of gas. Can you open up and sell me some?' and my husband would do it."

The store became a social center for the community. They set up a table in the store and games of 42 and Chinese checkers would go on for hours, especially during bad weather.

Ms. Hanks said the oil boom in 1948 and the post-war agricultural boom helped business, but it came with its share of problems.

"With so many people coming in the store at one time, we had more theft," she said. "They'd steal things that we knew they didn't need, or couldn't even use."

Her husband dealt with the five-finger discounters in his own unique way.

"One day he saw this fellow stick a bottle of hand lotion in his pocket and walk out with it. He followed him outside, and said, 'You owe me $2 for that hand lotion you walked out with.' The man said, 'But that hand lotion only cost 49 cents.' And my husband said, 'No, that's what it would have cost you if you'd paid for it inside. Out here, it costs $2.' And the man paid him."

In 1936, the Hankses, who were still farming in addition to running the store, sold their cotton for enough to buy lumber to build a house separate from the store. Hanks built the house himself, and the family moved in just in time for their second daughter, Howard County's first baby of 1937, to be born in the house.

In 1964, after running the store for 32 years, the couple decided enough was enough. They sold the store and planned to take it easy for a while.

Hanks went to Big Spring to sign the papers, and began to feel sick as he drove home. He died later that night.

Ms. Hanks still lives in the house that her husband built. She watched the town dwindle to a present population of seven — people died or moved away, while she stayed, content with where she is, and with her life as she lives it.

She said it's a good life.

She goes to church in Ackerly, and every Saturday, she and three other women in her Sunday school class get together to play gin rummy or 42.

She plays piano by ear, and for her 85th birthday, bought a new Baldwin piano.

"I'd had in mind I wanted a baby grand, so my granddaughter and I went to Midland to the music store, and I bargained and bargained with the man, and finally we came to an agreement on the price and he was going to deliver it the next Monday.

"Well, that Monday, I woke up early, and realized that a baby grand just wouldn't look right in this house, so I called him. He laughed and said, 'You mean after all that bargaining you did to get me to come down on price, you're not going to take it?' And we started talking about Baldwins. I bought this Baldwin over the telephone, and didn't even bargain him down on it.

"I love it. I wake up every morning and go straight to that piano and play, 'Thank God for Saving My Soul.'"

Ms. Hanks doesn't spend all her time sitting at home, however. She has visited Europe, and will soon leave on a cruise with a friend. For her 80th birthday, she bought herself a new car.

"I don't know what I'll buy for my 90th birthday," she said. "Maybe roller blades."

Memorial forges ahead with cardiac institute

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

After delays and bid problems, the new heart institute at Memorial Hospital and Medical Center is back on track, with construction expected to begin in early December.

MHMC is set to become a major regional center for cardiac care with the new institute, which is a joint effort between the hospital and Texas Tech University, hospital staff told a Wednesday meeting of the Midland County Hospital District's board of directors.

The new center will become a teaching adjunct to the Tech Health Sciences Center's cardiac internship program.

MHMC officials had hoped to start construction before now, but there were delays, including a bid for the hospital's portion of the construction that was $300,000 higher than anticipated.

Hospital staff, however, adapted the construction schedule, delaying the building of a new waiting room for the heart institute. After that, only one stumbling block remained, MHMC officials said.

Tech has an administrative fee attached to all construction projects, and this fee amounted to an additional $87,000 in expense to the hospital, said Anne Shaffer, an MHMC administrator.

Given the higher-than-anticipated bid returns, MHMC staff and local political leaders negotiated with Tech officials and managed to get this administrative fee dropped.

Contractors are meeting next week to plan the new construction, and demolition of the hospital's old surgery area will begin in early December.

The total project is expected to cost about $6 million and includes two cardiac surgery suites, two cardiac catheterization labs and other associated facilities.

Tech officials are paying $2.5 million for their portion of the complex.

Also at Wednesday's meeting:

■ Larry Sanz, vice-president and chief financial officer for MHMC, reported that the hospital has adapted quickly to changes in costs that dipped profits below expectations two months ago.

Increased use of the hospital resulted in higher earnings, but this increased use also called for increased staff and the hospital lost much of its earnings to pay for additional nurses, he said.

Increased medical materials prices also cut into the overall profitability during that month.

During the last month, however, the hospital hired about 50 more nurses, which reduced the institution's reliance on high-priced, agency-contracted nursing services.

The number of agency nurses at the hospital went from more than 50 to about 15 last month, Sanz said.

So profits for September came in just above projected earnings levels, Sanz said.

■ The hospital contracted for $28,620 for a federally mandated asbestos identification project.

A third-party company will inspect every part of the hospital, and all hospital properties such as the community clinics and the Allison Cancer Center.

Parts of the hospital built in 1954 that have never been subject to a major renovation are known to have some asbestos materials.

This includes eastern portions of the fourth and second floors, Ms. Shaffer said.

In the past, federal regulations have called for leaving this kind of asbestos material in place, as it poses no hazard as long as it is not disturbed through construction efforts, she said.

Expensive asbestos removal procedures were used before construction of the new surgery center.

The mandate, however, requires that all such asbestos products be identified and mapped so that hospital maintenance staff know of their existence.

Israel-Palestinian talks focusing on final peace settlement resume

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli and the Palestinian negotiators resumed long-suspended talks on a permanent peace treaty Wednesday, agreeing to formally reopen the sessions with a ceremony on Palestinian territory next week.

Israeli Foreign Minister Ariel Sharon met with Palestinian official Mahmoud Abbas, who said later that Israel would carry out the first stage of an overdue West Bank troop withdrawal on Friday and release 250 Palestinian prisoners. Sharon did not confirm the timetable.

The meeting was the first official discussion of a final status agreement between the two sides in 30 months. The deadline for reaching an accord is May 4, 1999.

In final status talks, Sharon and Abbas will tackle the most explosive issues of the Israeli-Arab conflict: permanent borders, refugees, water, Jewish settlements and the status of Jerusalem, which is claimed by both sides.

"We are starting today to negotiate the permanent agreement," Sharon told reporters at the start of his meeting with Abbas at the Israeli Foreign Ministry. "I think that we have to look to the future. Looking to the past will not help us."

Afterwards, Abbas said he and Sharon discussed the progress of Palestinian-Israeli committees on the economy, a Palestinian seaport and future Israeli withdrawals.

"Within a week there will be an opening ceremony for the resumption of the final status talks," Abbas said. "It will be in the Palestinian autonomous areas."

Sharon confirmed the plan in comments to reporters.

Friday's scheduled troop pullout is part of the land-for-peace accord signed by the two sides in Washington last month. Under that agreement, Israel is to undertake a three-stage withdrawal of its forces from 13 percent of the West Bank in exchange for Palestinian security and anti-terror measures.

Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's bitterly divided Cabinet is to convene Thursday to review Palestinian compliance with the accord before giving the go-ahead for the first withdrawal, from 2 percent of land in the northern West Bank.

The Cabinet was also expected to discuss a dispute over the prisoner release. Palestinian officials have complained that 150 of the 250 prisoners to be freed are ordinary criminals and not the promised political prisoners.

Abbas also said Palestinian and Israeli security officials will meet Thursday to discuss details for the redeployment and to put final touches on plans to open the Palestinian airport.

Bowing to Israeli demands to disarm militants and confiscate illegal weapons, the Palestinians on Wednesday issued rules and regulations regarding weapons.

The weapons decree, which calls for jail terms and fines of up to $4,000 for anyone caught with illegal arms, was read out on Palestinian TV and radio broadcasts. Palestinian forces will begin illegal weapons searches Dec. 6.

Meanwhile, Israeli soldiers chased settlers off a rocky hilltop near the Jewish settlement of Kedumim on Wednesday. About 30 settlers camped on the site Tuesday, declaring they were establishing a new community there.

"We are trying to keep the land from being given to the enemy," said settler Shoshi Nor after vacating the hill. Eleven settlers were detained for questioning, Israeli police said.

Israel's government has angered Palestinians by confiscating Arab-owned land to build access roads to settlements that will be surrounded by Palestinian-controlled territory after Israeli forces withdraw.

Earlier Wednesday, the obstacles ahead were again made plain when Abbas told Voice of Palestine radio that the Palestinians envision "the creation of a Palestinian state with Jerusalem as the capital" at the conclusion of the talks.

Palestinian threats to unilaterally declare an independent state, coupled with a reference to rifles by Arafat, led to a crisis Monday when Netanyahu suspended the West Bank troop withdrawal for a day. It was lifted when Arafat retracted his statement.

What's in the stars from meteor shower, astrologers wonder

CHIANG MAI, Thailand (AP) — Thailand's fortunetellers can normally spin a detailed account of how the stars affect behavior and destiny, but the spectacular meteor shower being watched by millions has them shrugging their shoulders.

The mountains near this northern city have been a prime location for viewing the Leonids meteor shower, drawing tens of thousands of Thais and foreign visitors to catch a glimpse of the most spectacular celestial fireworks show in 33 years.

Stargazers have made wishes faster than the meteors can fall. Local astrologists, though, don't have much idea how the event will affect a person's fate.

"Meteor showers are often associated with traditional myth," said Col. Kitikorn Methathip, a sought-after fortuneteller by hobby and a soldier by profession. "This is because there is not enough statistical evidence to form the basis for an astrological analysis."

Kitikorn says that regular celestial events are recorded in astrological charts and are used for the purpose of analyzing a person's destiny.

"It's about mapping out one's fate with the celestial information," Kitikorn said. "All of us are born with a set of characteristics and fate that has been largely defined by which day we were born and which constellation we fall under."

Meteor showers like Leonids are outside the astrologer's context of understanding and an unpredictable factor in what people like Kitikorn consider the known potential of the stars.

The Leonids shower, so named because the meteors appear to come from the direction of Leo, is caused by Earth's path through the long tail of the Comet Tempel-Tuttle.

Leonid showers occur each November, but are spectacular only once in every 33 years when the comet speeds through the inner solar system and sheds swarms of particles as it nears the sun.

In their last appearance, some 150,000 separate meteoroids — or particles from the comet, some of which are no bigger than a grain of sand — were recorded.

This time, the best viewing is theoretically in Asia, but bad weather disappointed many people on Tuesday, what many considered the prime viewing night.

In the end, Kitikorn noted, neither meteors nor stars make much difference in determining one's destiny.

"A person can be born under the best astrological attributes, but he or she cannot escape the ultimate responsibility as a human being — which is paying the price for all the bad deeds one has done in the previous life," he said.

Falling interest rates are boon for local district

Reacting to the Federal Reserve's decision Tuesday to cut interest rates for the third time in seven weeks, Midland Independent School District board members on Tuesday wisely decided to hold off on issuing $19.5 million in bonds until after Dec. 3.

The bonds are part of a total package of $39.5 million being used to finance school building renovations, but with the Federal Reserve cutting interest rates the district could end up spending at least half a million dollars less for the planned renovations than when it first presented the $125 million package to Midlanders 18 months ago.

With the Federal Reserve cutting interest rates the district could end up spending at least half a million dollars less for renovations.

Already, said Art Martin, MISD executive director of business services, the district expects to "save" $400,000 to $500,000.

The district also received more in state funds than originally anticipated, which further complicates the financial picture for district officials. At this moment, it is impossible for them to determine exactly how the school finance picture will come out.

One thing is clear: The falling interest rate will translate into positive financial news for school officials and taxpayers in Midland, but the question mark at this point comes from the state level.

As Martin noted during the school board meeting, "There's a lot of uncertainty and a lot of variables right now, because this is a legislative year. I don't think anyone can predict what's going to come out of Austin."

Martin was certainly correct in that assessment. Even with that noted, however, the news of falling interest rates still should be a pleasant sound to Midland taxpayers.

Williams deserved Top Hand Award for all his efforts

During his years in Midland, Clayton W. Williams Jr. has poked good-natured fun at numerous institutions and people. Tuesday evening some of those who have been the objects of his humor in the past got the opportunity to pay him back as Williams was "roasted" at the Petroleum Club and given the Permian Basin Petroleum Association's Top Hand Award.

He was fully deserving of it.

Williams has achieved success as an oilman, rancher, banker, pipeline executive and entrepreneur, and through it all his community spirit and joviality have been apparent. He obviously enjoys life and a good laugh, and is not timid about poking fun at himself or others.

Some years ago, Williams' reputation as one of the best known ex-students of Texas A&M University and his success in business underscored his connection to that university. That allegiance to the Texas Aggies was available for everyone in downtown Midland to see as a giant Aggie flag unfurled in the Texas sky above his office. Since then, Williams' ClayDesta business complex became a reality in north Midland and Claytie moved his office there, but his allegiance to the Aggies remains true as does his community spirit for Midland.

Williams has been an outspoken, unabashed spokesman for Midland — virtually a one-man chamber of commerce for the community.

We congratulate him on being voted the PBPA's Top Hand Award. He is a worthy and deserving honoree — no joke!

Republicans drift while conservatives float

PHILIPSBURG, St. Maarten — In a "post-election" cruise sponsored by National Review magazine, economic and social conservatives agree that Republicans had no message. In cards as well as politics, something beats nothing. Republicans had nothing to offer voters at the national level and so they were either beaten (losing five House seats) or won nothing (a status quo Senate). The consensus here is that, without a message that resonates with voters, a repeat of the "Seinfeld" (it's about nothing) 1998 election will return Republicans to the familiar minority-party position.

Thomas

"Republicans did nothing they promised to do," was the main complaint. No tax cuts, no reduced spending, no cut in government agencies or Cabinet departments. They didn't even try — and they disgusted many by trying to spin their own supporters into believing they did.

From economists Stephen Moore and Larry Kudlow, to the social conservatism of the Christian Coalition's Randy Tate and political consultant Ralph Reed, the feeling is that the 106th Congress under House Speaker Bob Livingston and Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott will do even less. No one expressed support for Livingston as anything more than a transitional figure. They only hope that Minority Leader Dick Gephardt is not the one transitioned to. Moore noted that 60 percent of those who think things have been going well voted for Democrats in the Nov. 3 election. Republicans earned no credit, he says, because they didn't claim any. "We'll get wiped out in 2000 if we don't change that perception," he said.

"Character matters," said Larry Kudlow, "but the GOP doesn't have any. It is weak in both character and courage, and that's why it is losing." Libertarian, social and economic conservatives lamented the failure of the GOP leadership to hold hearings on spending priorities, instead rushing through a budget agreement no one had read. "It was bad enough," noted Moore, "that $1.2 billion more is being pumped into the Department of Education for 100,000 new teachers, but three to four days before the election, the Republican National Committee issued a press release claiming that hiring new teachers with federal money was a Republican idea."

Everyone hates polling, said Kudlow, because "polling doesn't tell you what the best remedies or policies are." He said a number of pollsters told the candidates that people didn't want tax cuts. "That was largely their view, not the people's view," he said. He suggested that polling and marketing are no substitute for sound data.

There is great fear among these conservative intellectuals that President Clinton will seize more issues from Republicans, possibly the privatization of Social Security and an across-the-board tax cut, to pave the way for Al Gore's presidential run.

During a panel on "What Happened to the Surplus," National Review president Dusty Rhodes listed a few of the pork projects tucked away in the budget measure, including hundreds of thousands of dollars for grasshopper research in Alaska and Vidalia onion research in Georgia. He then suggested a Jesse Ventura approach to the surplus: give it back. "Why don't elected leaders cut our tax rates?" he asked. And then he answered: "Laziness at best and ignorance at worst. (Members of Congress) don't know about economics, and they aren't interested in knowing."

Kudlow said the GOP has no tax policy and he suggested five reasons for cutting taxes: it promotes economic freedom and choice; it promotes growth, as it did when taxes were cut in the '20s, '60s and '80s; it limits government by "starving the beast"; it promotes a cultural spirit of personal responsibility and self-government, limiting the need for government; it affects everybody.

On social issues, Ralph Reed said religious conservatives will have to learn a strategy of "radical incrementalism." The Founders, he said, wanted big changes to go through a long process. The question, though, is whether that process will come from the top through politics and government, or must it first be reflected from moral conservatives and churches showing the way?

This is not a happy group, and since many of them influence large numbers of people, their message spells trouble for Republicans unless the phony revolution of 1994 is replaced by an internal party revolution well before 2000.

SUZANNE FIELDS

We're Clinton's collective permissive parent

Paula Jones settled her case against the president, but nobody in this ugly affair comes out a winner. The case managed to bring out the worst in just about everybody.

Fields

James Carville set the tone when he picked on Paula as "trailer-park trash."

Radical feminists who embraced Anita Hill's mild (by today's standards) accusations against Clarence Thomas, with far fewer sordid specifics than Paula made against the president, showed remarkable tolerance for the frisky president. The president of Ajax Widgets would get no such pass.

And then there's poor Paula. She convinced many commentators — including me — that she was in this only to clear her good name with an apology. Instead she settled for money (most of which will go to lawyers), leaving her name no better, four-and-half years later, than when she first protested a magazine article citing her as a willing partner in a hotel-room liaison with Gov. Bill Clinton.

We've lost the capacity to express disgust at disgusting behavior. Have you noticed how just about everyone offers a cliched, watered down condemnation that begins with "Yes," and ends with the qualifying conjunction "but." "Yes, what the president did was bad ... but ... we need to move on, but everybody lies about sex, but Kenneth Starr is worse." We talk about censure because the word carries no punch in the context of the president's perjury. It's a booby prize for bad behavior, what Dan Quayle rightly says "substitutes symbolism for the law."

When Hillary Clinton was interviewed on NBC after the Monica Lewinsky story broke, Matt Lauer asked her a leading hypothetical question.

"If an American president had an adulterous liaison in the White House and lied to cover it up, should the American people ask for his resignation?"

"Well, they should certainly be concerned about it," she responded.

"Should they ask for his resignation?"

"Well, I think, if all that were proven true, I think that could be a very serious offense," she said. "That is not going to be proven true. I think they're going to find some other things. And I think when all of this is put into context, and we really look at the people involved here, look at their motivations, look at their backgrounds, look at their past behavior, some folks are going to have a lot to answer for."

Pogo said it first and got it right: "We have seen the enemy and it is us."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, Nov. 19, the 323rd day of 1998. There are 42 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Nov. 19th, 1863, President Lincoln delivered the Gettysburg Address as he dedicated a national cemetery at the site of the Civil War battlefield in Pennsylvania.

On this date:

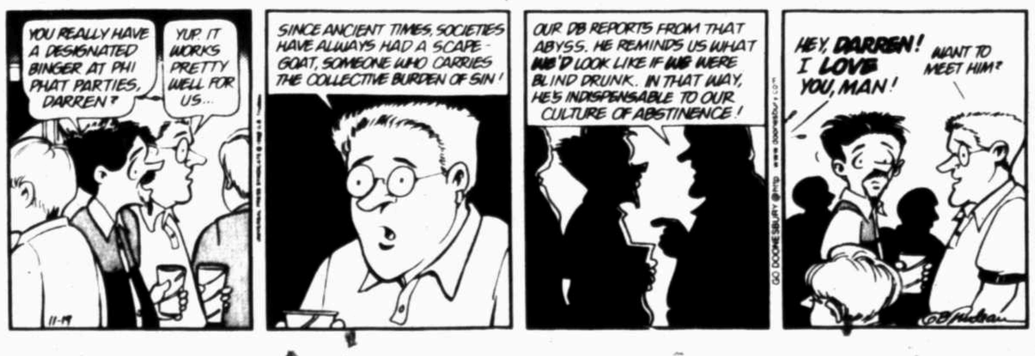

In 1794, the United States and Britain signed the Jay Treaty, which resolved some issues left over from the Revolutionary War.

In 1831, the 20th president of the United States, James Garfield, was born in Orange, Ohio.

In 1919, the Senate rejected the Treaty of Versailles by a vote of 55-39, short of the two-thirds majority needed for ratification.

One year ago: Iowa seamstress Bobbi McCaughey gave birth to four boys and three girls — only the second set of septuplets known to be born alive. The space shuttle Columbia zoomed into orbit on a two-week science mission.

GEORGE WILL

America could have avoided Iraq showdown

WASHINGTON — America nearly went to war last weekend in defense of weapons inspections in Iraq that U.S. diplomacy surreptitiously subverted last summer. That subversion provoked an American rarity, a resignation on principle, by an American rarity, inspector Scott Ritter, who never learned in the Marine Corps the delicacies of surrender.

The surrealism of U.S. policy — suddenly threatening war to support an inspection regime that an anonymous administration official admits has been "moribund" for three months — was compounded by proof that the pen can indeed be mightier than the sword. A letter, reiterating the broken promises of a recidivist liar, turned back airborne B-52s and prevented launchings of cruise missiles and other aircraft.

Will

Which is good, there being no evidence (other than his words; slight evidence) that President Clinton has suddenly developed the requisite seriousness for dealing with Saddam Hussein. Clinton is seriously committed to an unserious policy, the flaws of which derive, as the entire post-Gulf War debacle does, from the subcontracting of U.S. policy, and the consequent subordination of U.S. interests, to the United Nations.

Saddam remains in power because President Bush felt constrained by the fact that the U.N. mandate for military action extended only to expelling Iraqi forces from Kuwait. Perhaps that constricted mandate was a price worth paying for the breadth of the Gulf War coalition that Bush so brilliantly constructed.

However, Sen. John McCain, sounding more presidential than the current president, says it was a "terrible abdication of our responsibilities" when we allowed U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan to broker the February deal that deterred U.S. military action by producing more absurd Saddam promises.

Clinton enters the last quarter of his presidency still searching for a "legacy." Removal of Saddam would suffice, and Clinton is now committed, sort of, to trying to overthrow Saddam, even though Clinton's administration has not yet asked "Mother, may we?" of the U.N.

That is the formal meaning of Clinton's Sunday promise to "intensify" U.S. "engagement with the forces of change in Iraq" under provisions of the Iraq Liberation Act, which provides $97 million for aid to Iraqi insurgents. In the highly unlikely event that Clinton really tries to topple Saddam, the two most important legislative acts of his presidency (the other was welfare reform) will have been forced upon him by Congress.

But Saddam will not be removed by radio broadcasts, or by Kurdish, Shiite and other resistance groups supported only by money and air power from the United States and others.

Air power can do what McCain, the former Naval aviator, suggests should be avowed U.S. policy: U.S. forces should quickly destroy any site, such as a presidential compound, that inspectors are prevented from examining. There should be no time-consuming "consensus-building" with that fiction, the "international community," no "Mother, may we?" permission-seeking.

Someone should acquaint Clinton with Alan Bullock's epigraph for his biography of Hitler. It is Aristotle's statement, "Men do not become tyrants in order to keep out the cold." That is, tyrants are not banal utilitarians; they have unusual passions and aspirations.

Saddam plays with Clinton as Heifetz played a Stradivarius, with subtle virtuosity. But, says McCain, Saddam's ruthless and occasionally (invading Kuwait in August 1990) reckless boldness in pursuit of megalomaniacal aims—Iraq as regional hegemonist and then world power—makes it intolerably risky to count on simply deterring him, as the Soviet Union was deterred, by threats of destructive retaliation.

Perhaps last weekend clarified this much: Clinton's foremost legacy will be Saddam—overthrown, or more secure and threatening than ever.

Livingston to be speaker, Armey survives challenge

■ J.C Watts, House's only black Republican, elected new chairman of GOP conference.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Rep. Bob Livingston collected unanimous Republican backing Wednesday to become House speaker and quickly pledged action in the new Congress to cut taxes and preserve Social Security. J.C. Watts, the only black among 223 GOP lawmakers, won a leadership post, too.

"There are some who insist the Republican era is over," Livingston, R-La., told fellow GOP lawmakers still reeling from the loss of seats in this month's elections. "But that's like saying the American dream is over. It isn't true, and they know it."

He pledged cooperation with the Democrats, then added, "We will do so to advance Republican principles" of less government.

Livingston, 55, a pragmatic conservative and chairman of the Appropriations Committee with a history of working with Democrats, was nominated without opposition to succeed Newt Gingrich as speaker. Gingrich bade farewell to the Republicans whom he led to power four years ago, handed a gavel to Livingston to signal the shift in power, then left Washington with his wife for a Florida vacation.

"Bob Livingston is totally in control right now," Rep. Gerald Solomon, R-N.Y. declared in the corridor outside the meeting room, even though his formal ascension won't occur until Congress convenes on Jan. 6.

Livingston's victory was sealed nearly two weeks ago when Gingrich stunned Republicans with a decision to step down. The Louisianan had already begun campaigning for votes, and he quickly cleared the field of opponents.

But there were lively races for other leadership posts as Republicans sought to retool for the congressional session over the next two years, and the elections in 2000.

Majority Leader Dick Armey of Texas was re-elected, but needed three ballots before vanquishing Reps. Steve Largent of Oklahoma, Jennifer Dunn of Washington and J. Dennis Hastert of Illinois, the chief deputy whip whose name was offered by other lawmakers in a draft effort. Armey's margin of victory was 127-95 over Largent on the final ballot, after the low vote recipient dropped off following previous rounds.

Rep. Tom DeLay, the GOP whip, was re-elected without opposition.

Watts' victory as new chairman of the GOP conference, or caucus, came at the expense of Ohio Rep. John Boehner, who was seeking his third term. Watts, a telegenic former University of Oklahoma football star, triumphed, 121-93, a victory made sweeter because it fell on his 41st birthday. Whatever his formal leadership duties, Watts is likely to become a familiar face on television and before Republican audiences around the country as the party seeks to broaden its appeal.

"I'm excited about everybody working together as a team to make sure that we cut people's taxes, that we strengthen our national defense, that we strengthen Social Security, we continue working on a health care system to make it better," he told reporters shortly after his election.

"People were ready for a change," said Rep. Matt Salmon of Arizona after Watts' victory.

They got it, too, beginning at the top, where Livingston has pledged a more businesslike, less revolutionary political style than Gingrich practiced.

AP photo

Rep. Bob Livingston, R-La., left, followed by outgoing House Speaker Newt Gingrich and his wife Marianne, walks down the steps of the Capitol on Wednesday. The men were going to a meeting where Republicans chose their leadership for the 106th Congress.

In his remarks before the rank-and-file, he praised Gingrich. "Newt seized greatness," he said. "History will speak his name."

He made no mention of social issues such as abortion that frequently divide Republicans and polarize the electorate. Nor did he touch on the impeachment inquiry pending in the Judiciary Committee, although others have said he wants the issue concluded before he takes office in January.

At the same time, he showed his partisan side.

"We will preserve the Social Security trust fund from the raids begun by Lyndon Johnson and the Democrat Congresses," Livingston said. "And our priority must be to balance the budget and cut taxes. And for the sake of our children and the future of our country, we must provide education reform."

Livingston offered no specifics, and it will be extraordinarily difficult to move legislation through the House without bipartisan cooperation, given the slender, six-seat majority held by the GOP.

The Louisiana Republican referred to Democrats when he said he wanted to serve in a tradition "that fosters cooperation and respect. We Republicans lose nothing by reaching out to the other side, to talk and listen and work in tandem with those who may share some of our goals and dreams."

Even as he acknowledged the difficulty of the task, Livingston cautioned fellow Republicans not to interpret the Nov. 3 election returns as a defeat.

The GOP holds a majority, he said. "Let's make sure we don't misinterpret a warning for a whipping."

Starr gets OK to reach beyond Lewinsky issue

Associated Press

■ More national news/5B

WASHINGTON — Prosecutor Kenneth Starr was given leeway Wednesday to reach far beyond the Monica Lewinsky matter as he makes his case at President Clinton's impeachment hearing. The White House assigned an ardent Starr critic to cross-examine him.

With Republicans and Democrats readying for a partisan fight at the hearing on Thursday, Starr prepared a presentation that would portray the Lewinsky matter as the core of a pattern of lying and obstruction of justice.

Clinton himself was thousands of miles away on a trip to Asia.

Chairman Henry Hyde, R-Ill., has afforded Starr two hours to give his evidence to members of the House Judiciary Committee. Starr's presentation will be followed by questions from committee investigators, lawmakers and — lastly — Clinton private lawyer David Kendall.

Starr's appearance, at only the third presidential impeachment inquiry in the nation's history, "won't be a straight recitation" of his written report submitted in September, said his spokesman, Charles Bakaly.

The independent counsel, who recommended 11 grounds for possible impeachment, will "try to give some historical context to the allegations," Bakaly said.

Democrats were infuriated that Starr was given authority by Hyde to delve into matters such as the Whitewater real estate transactions, misuse of FBI files, firings at the White House travel office and payments to presidential friend Webster Hubbell.

"This is an impeachment in search of a crime," complained James Jordan, spokesman for Democrats on the Judiciary Committee.

The Clinton administration, given 30 minutes to cross-examine Starr, assigned Kendall — who has accused Starr of leaking grand jury material and has relentlessly pursued a contempt of court motion against him.

Hyde was both conciliatory and unbending in an impromptu news conference.

Asked whether he would place limits on Starr, he responded, "Why should I? Because the Democrats would like that? The Democrats want to stick to Monica Lewinsky. We want to look at everything. That's the big difference."

The chairman promised, however, to be "liberal" with Kendall's half-hour time limit. "If they're on a line of questioning and they need more time, I will grant them more time. I wish to control the time. They're not being mistreated at all."

On Tuesday, Hyde wrote the White House that Clinton's lawyer wouldn't be allowed to question Starr about the various controversies surrounding his investigation, such as the grand jury leak investigation and his contacts with Paula Jones' lawyers.

"Efforts to utilize these proceedings as a forum to inquire about nongermane matters, such as investigations into the conduct of the investigation, that are pending before other bodies, shall not be permitted," Hyde wrote.

Hyde also pressed the administration to answer the committee's 81 questions about Clinton's conduct and respond to the GOP's request for material that could help Clinton's case.

"The answers to these requests for admission should not be difficult or time-consuming," Hyde wrote. "Your cooperation is essential in bringing the committee's inquiry to a fair and timely conclusion."

Clinton's spokesman, Joe Lockhart, said it appeared the Republicans were off on an unfair, unconstitutional "partisan adventure."

Speaking to reporters moments before Clinton left for Asia, Lockhart complained that Republicans are seeking to muzzle the president's defenders while attempting to broaden their investigation.

"They have rediscovered all of their old bad habits and since they don't like where it's going they're going to try to find something else," Lockhart said.

Starr, a former judge not accustomed to appearing at politically charged congressional hearings, has been holding mock sessions with his own staff.

He was encouraged to listen to questions buried in rhetoric and ignore possible attacks.

Asked whether he would place limits on Starr, Hyde responded, 'Why should I? Because the Democrats would like that? The Democrats want to stick to Monica Lewinsky. We want to look at everything. That's the big difference.'

Museum board honors Wagner, Brown

Midlanders among those to be inducted into Petroleum Museum Hall of Fame

From Staff Reports

Cyrus "Cy" Wagner and Jack E. Brown of Midland, founders of Wagner & Brown Ltd., are among those who are to be inducted into the Petroleum Museum's Hall of Fame in April, Dr. Tulsi Dyal Singh, museum board president, said Wednesday.

The other inductees are the late John C. Karcher of Dallas; and the late William A. "Monty" Moncrief and his son, William A. "Tex" Moncrief Jr. of Moncrief Oil in Fort Worth.

They were selected from a group of nominations submitted to the Hall of Fame Committee, chaired by Tom Sikes. Induction of these five into the Hall of Fame will bring the total number of honorees to 100.

"Because of their accomplishments and achievements, these remarkable men of action deserve this high honor," Sikes said. "They made excellence conspicuous in their lives and will become legends of the American petroleum industry."

Describing the five as great community and business leaders, Sikes continued, "They helped develop this vital industry."

Wagner grew up in Tulsa, Okla., and graduated with a bachelor's degree in geology from the University of Oklahoma. He started as an oil scout in Midland with Amerada Petroleum.

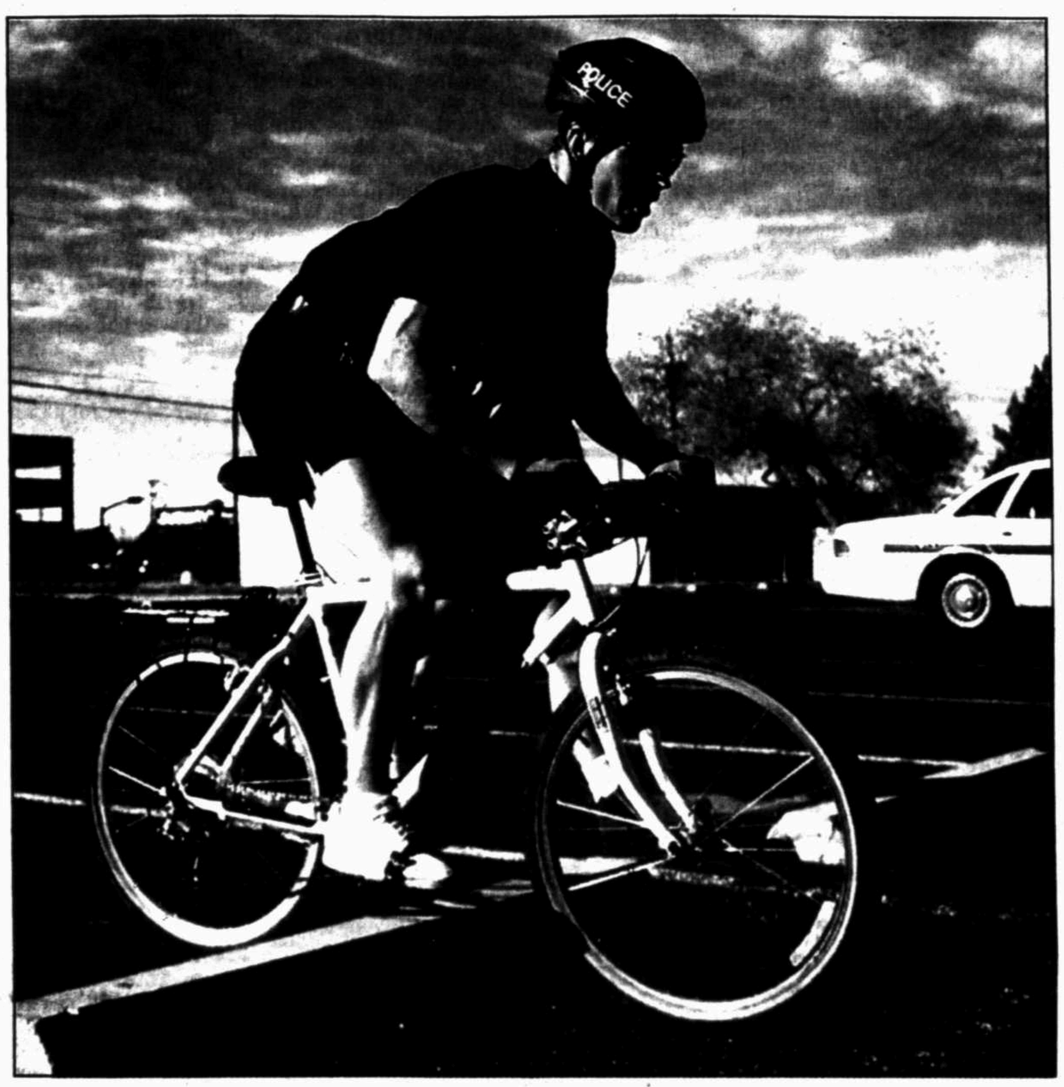

Brown was raised in Brownsville and graduated from Texas A&M University with degrees in petroleum and mechanical engineering.

The two met while employed with J.E. Jones Drilling in Midland. In 1962, they pooled their non-existent financial resources to form a company that today is known as Wagner & Brown Ltd.

Wagner & Brown's first breakthrough came in 1967 in New Mexico's Bagley Field, where a major oil company had lost interest because of excessive amounts of water produced with the oil. They developed the Burro Pipeline to dispose of the water, and their business was rolling. By the time they left the Bagley Field, they had completed more than 60 wells.

The next major development came in the Highlight Field and Muddy Play in the Powder River Basin of Wyoming. In 1975, the partnership initiated its largest Campaign urges populace to take steps to 'age well'

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

As the Lone Star State begins graying at the temples, the Texas Department on Aging wants to see that Texans age well.

Mary Sapp, executive director of the Texas Department on Aging, outlined the state initiative "Aging Texas Well" on Wednesday for the Citizen's Advisory Council of the Permian Basin Area Agency on Aging.

The program "takes a look at where we are in Texas in terms of the aging of the population, where we are and where we need to be going," she explained.

She said that includes not only state services but working with Texans, "providing the education and motivation to age well."

Part of aging well, she said, is eating well, exercising regularly and community involvement.

"We want to help Texans look holistically at their lives and what they need to do to live life well," she said.

The state's population overall is younger than most of the nation, but Ms. Sapp pointed out that the population is aging. Between 1980 and 1990, the state's general population rose 19 percent, while the population of those age 60 and up rose 23 percent as senior citizens choose areas such as the Rio

Woman accused of swindling local bank

By Rick López
Staff Writer

A woman accused of swindling Midland American Bank out of $12,000 was indicted in federal court Wednesday.

Luz Armendariz Galindo, whose age was unavailable, was charged with one count of bank fraud stemming from a scam she allegedly executed between October 1996 and April 1997, reports indicate.

The indictment states that Ms. Galindo "noticed that there existed an overage in the Insurance Refund account of Midland American Bank. The defendant believed that the bank was lax in its accounting oversight in the Insurance Refund account."

The defendant allegedly took cashier's checks issued from the insurance refund account and deposited them into her personal account at another bank. She used fake names or variations of true names on the checks and endorsed them to herself, the indictment states.

Reports show that she deposited a total of 16 checks with amounts ranging from $302 to $1,567. The total amount she is charged with taking is $12,417.

Maximum punishment for the offense Ms. Galindo is charged with is 30 years in prison and a $1 million fine.

The panel also returned indictments against two men who allegedly ran a crack operation from an Odessa hotel.

Odessan Andre "Treetop" Douglas Jr., 21, and Galveston resident Roderick Deshon Bryant, 20, are both charged with one count of possession of a controlled substance with intent to distribute, one count conspiracy and one count of maintaining an establishment (for drug purposes).

According to an investigation report filed by the West Texas Narcotics Task Force, the men's charges stem from a drug bust authorities made Nov. 4 at the Odessa Holiday Inn.

A housekeeper called Odessa police and told them she found marijuana in one of the suites she was cleaning and had also seen a man walking around with

Retired vet has time to chew the fat, and for him, life is good

The old man, topped off in his everyday dress by his wide-brimmed black hat, and smoking Grandma's Ice Cream tobacco in his well-traveled pipe, stopped by the Pete's & Repete place for his morning smoke and chat.

Todd

"Oh, we just sit around and chew the fat and talk about the past," said the older fellow. Charlie Brown is his name, he said, and, at age 79, he is "pretty well-known in this town."

He has pretty well been around the world, from the Pacific to the Atlantic by way of the Panama Canal, because of a war he helped win. He served in Gen. George S. Patton's Third Army in Europe by "hauling supplies and weapons and things for the Army.

"I was steady on the go," Brown said. "I did what I was supposed to do."

Like millions of Americans, Brown got into World War II after the United States got catapulted in, on that Sunday morning on Dec. 7, 1941, when Japanese forces attacked Pearl Harbor 57 years ago.

"So I went home (in Big Spring). I was drafted and went into service," compliments of the national draft, Brown recalled. "I got out of service and come back to Big Spring, and Big Spring wasn't what they said it was. They said the boom was over here (in Midland), so I wind up here. I've been here ever since."

And when he first came to Midland, the city "had two banks in downtown right across from one another. Now, there are 20 or more."

From day to day, Brown drives his old sedan to chat with the Pete of "Pete's & Repete, where flats are fixed for a $5 bill. Pete fixes flats just to survive, that's all," Pete said. "The (Social Security) check I get is not enough."

Down the street a piece is a place that looks like what it is, the weathered Hard Times Trading Post.

All in a row, Brown, Pete, who's 68, and Carlos Martinez, 32, sort of settled into their easy chairs just outside Pete's white stucco and blue-trimmed house, a former Midland Army Air Field World War II barracks. They watched the traffic ease on by along U.S. Highway 80 and smoked away. Brown puffed more than smoked on his pipe, which is not always fired up, and his friends took on those filtered-tip cigarettes, the brand that the cowboy on the horse smokes in the old advertisements.

After the war, Brown got work in the oil fields.

"I've made two oil booms right here — Spraberry and Hadacol," Brown said. "I've been in the oil field where drillers didn't want blacks on location. They didn't think we were qualified, but it's been proven we are qualified. They'd let us work, but we weren't welcome in the oil field, let's put it that a-way."

Brown, who got to know a lot of roughnecks, drillers, and tool pushers, said they turned out to be pretty good folks "after you got to know them."

For a while, Brown hauled sand for Halliburton's oil-well cementing operations. "And I did Halliburton's running around — got an easy job."

Afterward, the city of Midland hired

TODD: For Brown, life is good

(From 1B)

Brown to pump gasoline and fix flats at the old city barn.

For him, life is good.

"I eat, sleep, look at the TV, and play with my grandbaby when I'm not in the (Veterans Administration) hospital," Brown said. "I thank the Lord. He got me here for some reason or another. I try to stay out of people's way."

Brown, who already has swapped his summer straw hat for his winter black felt hat, considered a phenomenon that fascinates all people rich or poor or at home and chewing the fat with friends.

"The weather is supposed to change tomorrow, supposed to get cold," Brown supposed. "Weather changes one day to the other — speaks for itself. We never know what tomorrow will bring. If we could, we could look into the future."

OBITUARIES

Jesus del Llano

The del Llano family would like for all to join in the celebration of the life, love and wit of Jesus del Llano. He passed away Saturday, November 14, 1998, in a Midland hospital a few days from his 85th birthday.

Jesus was born in Mazapil, Zacatecas, Mexico, on November 22, 1913, to Evaristo and Felicitas del Llano, both now deceased. He was also preceded in death by his wife, Jean, in Midland; and by his brother, Margarito, from Las Cruces, New Mexico.

He is survived by a brother, Manuel, and a sister, Ruth, from Roswell, New Mexico, and a sister-in-law, Mrs. Senaida del Llano from Las Cruces, New Mexico.

Jesus came to the United States in November 1921, and to Roswell where he was raised and worked as foreman at South Springs Ranch and retired from the city of Roswell. He married Jean Burrola on May 22, 1937. That marriage produced a son, Ramon (Ray), who with his wife, Mary Sue, lives in Midland, Texas; a daughter, Elvira Barrett, who with her husband, Harry, lives in South Norwalk, Connecticut; and a daughter, Cecilia Mills, who with her husband, Bill, lives in Danbury, Connecticut.

He and his wife had been members of St. Peter's Catholic Church in Roswell until moving to Midland, Texas, in 1980, and became members of St. Stephen's Catholic Church.

After being naturalized in December 1944, the local and national political scene remained among Jesus' many interests. Watching CNN and C-Span were among his favorite TV pastimes. He took pride in his knowledge of government and its structure and administration and considered his voting right a treasured privilege. He enlisted in the New Mexico State Guard at the age of 31 and was discharged in August 1946.

The love of his family was the top priority in his life. After the loss of his wife in 1988, Jesus spent the summers with his Connecticut family and the winters with his Texas family. He blessed those families, which included nine grandchildren and his first great-grandchild born this fall, with the legacy of his wisdom, love, and especially his wit. He was a person with natural talent and enjoyed playing the harmonica, piano and accordion.

Rosary will be recited at 7 p.m. on Friday, November 20, at LaGrone Funeral Home, Roswell, New Mexico. Mass is scheduled at St. Peter's Catholic Church, Roswell, at 11 a.m. Saturday, November 21, 1998, with interment following at South Park Cemetery. Friends and relatives will be received at the VFW Hall 2575, 3908 SE Main.

Pallbearers will be his grandchildren: Sue Ellen O'Shea, Mark, Ron, and Kathy Barrett, Nora Dreaper, Lydia Mills, Ann, Debbie, and Marcia del Llano. His new great-granddaughter, Ryan Taylor O'Shea, will be honorary pallbearer.

The family requests that remembrances be made by donations to the American Heart Association.

Jury convicts former Midlander on embezzlement charges

By Rick López
Staff Writer

A sentence range for a man found guilty of embezzlement Wednesday is uncertain, since state laws allow a district court judge to take the defendant's prior conviction into consideration when assessing punishment, prosecutors said.

Jurors returned two guilty verdicts against former Midlander Keith Lehto, 36, who was convicted on two counts of felony theft stemming from $16,000 he took from a local publishing business, Petroleum Listing Services (PLS).

During the trial, PLS president Ron Wise claimed that the defendant took advantage of using unaddressed, pre-signed company checks to make a down payment on his house.

The checks were only designated for payment of small, work-related expenses, such as postage fees, Wise said during the trial.

Lehto is to be sentenced before 385th District Court Judge Willie Dubose at 8:30 a.m. today. It is possible that the judge's sentence could be influenced by a prior conviction he has in Gallatin County, Mont., Assistant District Attorney Robin Sams said.

Ms. Sams quoted Montana authorities as saying that Lehto was convicted of felony forgery stemming from a theft at his workplace there.

About eight months after Lehto's week-long trial in October 1995, a judge in the 18th Judicial Court District in Montana signed an agreement that allowed the defendant to be placed on deferred sentencing, which may be the equivalent of Texas' probation conditions, prosecutors said.

Lehto was still serving out his sentence when convicted Wednesday, authorities told Ms. Sams.

Without considering his prior conviction, Lehto's local charges carry a punishment of 180 days to two years in a state jail facility, Assistant District Attorney Eric Kalenak said. It is possible that Montana authorities could consider Lehto's conviction as a violation of probation, Kalenak said.

Midland County indictments allege than on Jan., 24, 1996, Lehto addressed a check to himself for $4,100. Less than a month later, he addressed another check to himself in the amount of $11,400.

The defendant's attorney, Tom Morgan, said during the trial that Lehto only took the money because it was loaned to him as a hiring incentive.

Panel charges man with intoxication assault; 16 others indicted

By Rick López
Staff Writer

A Midland man, whose passenger was injured during an accident, was indicted Wednesday on charges of intoxication assault.

Alberto Davila, 20, had a 0.11 blood/alcohol level when he crashed into a utility pole at the intersection of Crestview and Illinois streets in the early-morning hours of Nov. 8, 1997, reports indicate. Anything over 0.01 is illegal under the Texas Penal Code.

The grand jury said in the indictment that his alleged actions caused Carole Martinez, 29, to remain hospitalized for six days while she underwent a series of surgeries.

She was treated for facial wounds, a torn liver and a fractured ankle. Paramedics had initially listed the woman in critical condition, Assistant District Attorney George Patterson said.

Davila was released from the Midland County jail after posting a $5,000 bond, reports indicate.

The grand jury also indicted Phillip Burdette, 34, on charges of attempted sexual assault and aggravated assault stemming from an Aug. 24 attack on a woman he knew.

According to the indictment, the suspect tried forcing the victim into having sex by threatening her with a large kitchen knife.

Patterson said that the incident occurred when the man was visiting the victim at her home. He asked her to have sex, but she denied his request. He later asked her again as he held the knife in his hand. Though the woman was not injured, she was placed in fear of her health and life, Patterson said.

The victim ran from her home to a neighbor's house and called police from there, he said. Reports indicate that Burdette remains at the county jail, where he is being held on a $125,000 bond.

In another case, Tracy Michelle Smith was charged with injury to a child in connection with the assault of a 12-year-old relative. Ms. Smith, 30, allegedly threw the girl against a wall and struck her with a shoe and telephone, leaving bruises on her body.

Ms. Smith was released from jail on a $6,000 bond, reports indicate.

Fourteen other defendants were indicted by the grand jury. The following list contains their names, ages, charges and dates of alleged offense:

- Randall Norman, 46, aggravated assault with a deadly weapon, Sept. 25;
- Frederick Boos, 46, felony DWI, July 15;
- Timothy Behnken, 26, forgery, July 2;
- Billy M. Blake, 43, felony DWI, June 11;
- Donald Eugene Williams, 44, felony DWI, Aug. 27;
- Fred Elizardo, 18, theft, Sept. 17;
- Joe Rocha, 28, felony DWI, Sept. 24;
- Charles Wayne Hayes, 49, felony DWI Sept. 20;
- Chris Ronald Lamb, 32, felony DWI, Sept. 20;
- Javier Miramontes, 32, felony DWI, date unavailable;
- John Espinosa Jr., birth date unavailable, felony DWI, Oct. 10;
- Jim McFadden, 55, criminal trespass, oppression, April 24;
- Eric R. Bernard, 18, unauthorized use of a motor vehicle, Oct. 17, and
- George Gambrell Jr., 33, burglary of a habitation, Nov. 11.

Known as the "Father of the Reflection Seismograph," Karcher's work transformed the petroleum industry. Raised on an Oklahoma farm, he studied electrical engineering and physics at the University of Oklahoma before heading to the University of Pennsylvania for his doctorate in physics. While a graduate student, he spent three weeks working on scientific measurements at the Thomas A. Edison laboratory, where he often talked with the famous inventor.

As an employee of the U.S. Bureau of Standards in 1917, Karcher noticed the difference between refracted and reflected seismic waves. During his association with Edison, he learned about the physical phenomenon of signals that echoed from subsurface strata. He also recalled hearing geology students talk about dome-like reservoirs, anticlinal structures and oil entrapment in porous rocks or sands. Karcher combined this knowledge into a theory, and in 1919, he conducted experiments in an abandoned rock quarry in Oklahoma and proved the existence of seismic refractions.

Soon after was born Geological Engineering Co. In 1921 Karcher tested his theory on a farm three miles north of Oklahoma City and proved the validity of reflection seismograph as a useful tool in the search for oil. Following a meeting with Everette DeGolyer, vice president of Amerada Petroleum, the two formed Geophysical Research Corporation. GRC was contracted by Gulf Oil to do reflection seismic surveys that identified more than 100 salt domes. Later, under contract to Louisiana Land and Exploration Co., GRC conducted offshore prospecting covering 200,000 acres and a land area of 100,000 acres.

In 1930, Karcher sold his interest in GRC and organized a new company, Geophysical Service Inc. By the end of 1933, GRC had nearly 40 crews at work. From 1940, the reflection seismograph went worldwide.

Later, Karcher was involved in Comanche Corp. Seaboard Oil used Comanche's seismic data and drilled the discovery well in the prolific Vealmoor Field in Howard County.

"Monty" Moncrief was a legendary wildcatter who maintained oil and gas properties in Texas, Oklahoma, New Mexico, Wyoming and several other states. Born in Sulphur Springs, he attended the University of Oklahoma and then served in World War I before going to work for Marland Oil Co. in the accounting department. By 1925, he had become an expert landman and was promoted to executive vice president of Marland.

He began his career as an independent oilman in 1929 and drilled 29 dry holes. Two years later, on Jan. 26, 1931, he hit a big one. Lathrop No. 1 was the discovery well that extended the East Texas Field and enabled the fledgling Moncrief to take off with his company, Moncrief Oil. During the 1930s, Moncrief worked in the Conroe, Hastings, Cayuga and Rodessa fields. In 1946, he went into the Cedar Lake Field of West Texas where he proceeded to drill about 50 producers. In 1949, he drilled a dry hole then 28 straight producers in the billion barrel SACROC Field of Scurry County.

The elder Moncrief has been described as a true all-American wildcatter, an excellent landman, a sound oil and gas independent and a practicing conservationist. He served as the first chairman of the Yates Field Proration Committee in Pecos County.

After serving in World War II, "Tex" Moncrief joined his father in the business in 1945 and made his own incredible gas find in Wyoming's Madden Field. Tex followed his father everywhere and learned by watching.

Philanthropy became a passion for the elder Moncrief. He was a founding member of the Fort Worth Petroleum Club and held memberships in almost every professional oil organization. He and his son were major benefactors for Moncrief Hall at Texas Christian University. The elder oilman was also involved with All Saints Hospital, Lena Pope Home and County Day School.

The younger Moncrief is a former director of Chase Texas (formerly Texas Commerce Bank) and serves as a director at M.D. Anderson Cancer Center. He also served on The University of Texas Systems Board of Regents and The University Cancer Foundation Board of Visitors.

Jury rules in favor of Odessa hospital in civil lawsuit

By Rick Lopez
Staff Writer

A federal jury on Wednesday ruled against an Odessa woman who filed a civil lawsuit against Medical Center Hospital.

The lawsuit claimed that hospital employees made her a victim of racial discrimination and physical harassment.

Since Monday, a jury in the court of U.S. Magistrate Judge L. Stuart Platt began listening to testimony in the trial of Ana Maria Orbiz vs. the Ector County Hospital District, aka Medical Center Hospital, and Chad Waite, a hospital unit clerk.

After hearing all the evidence, jurors found no claims against the defendants.

Ms. Orbiz, 58, claimed that on April 28, 1997, she was harassed by Waite in front of her co-workers when he screamed at her, forcibly pulled her lab coat, and touched and assaulted her.

She claims that she told a hospital supervisor about the incident, but no action was taken against Waite. Ms. Orbiz said that the hospital allowed several other episodes to follow the initial argument.

In her lawsuit, Ms. Orbiz, who is Cuban, claims that she was the victim of discrimination because of her ethnic background and because she was older than 50. She also claimed that she was harassed for reporting the alleged assault to her supervisor.

She sought compensation for loss of earnings, physical pain, mental anguish and fringe benefits, which she claimed exceeded $150,000.

However, the jury dismissed all seven claims she made against the hospital, which include violation of civil rights, intentional infliction of emotional distress, retaliation, breach of contract, assault and battery and breach of good faith and fair dealings.

Court records indicate the court had dismissed most of the claims for lack of sufficient evidence.

A hospital spokeswoman said they would not comment on the verdict. Messages left at the office for Ms. Orbiz's attorney, Gerald Fugit, were not returned Wednesday.

INDICT: K-9 handlers found cocaine stashed in room a syringe in his hand. Authorities monitored the scene and saw a man leave the suite and get into a late-model sports car.

Police followed the car and called in the license plates to dispatchers. They pulled the driver over after learning that the plates were stolen. Police questioned the car's occupants — the two defendants and two women — and got permission to search the room.

A task force officer quoted Douglas as saying, "I have nothing to hide. Tear my s--- up." Douglas told the officer he was staying there because he and his girlfriend got into an argument.

Officers at the scene reported finding marijuana residue in the bedroom, cocaine residue in the microwave and closet and instruments they suspect were used for cooking crack.

Police searched Douglas' wallet and found a list of phone numbers that included names of four people who Odessa police identified as "well-documented crack dealers."

One of the alleged dealers was recently arrested after selling crack to undercover task force officers, reports indicate. Police contacted the dealer, who told them Douglas was his main crack supplier.

Hotel employees told police that Douglas had been renting the suites since Nov. 2 and paid $706 cash for a two-day rental, movie fees and phone costs. They told police that the room received 30 incoming calls between 3 p.m. and 11 p.m. one night.

K-9 handlers found a bag of cocaine stashed behind a toilet paper holder. Authorities reported finding more than 50 grams of crack, but did not list its exact weight. Under police questioning, Bryant told police that he met Douglas on Oct. 29 at an Odessa bar.

If convicted, the men face up to life in prison and a $4 million fine for the conspiracy and distribution charges and up to 20 years in prison and a $500,000 fine for the charge of maintaining an establishment.

Economist predicts tough times for Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — The construction cranes dotting the Houston skyline are something of an economic mirage, according to a prominent local economist who forecasts a slowdown for the state's largest city.

Despite years of diversification since the 1980s oil bust, University of Houston professor Barton Smith said Wednesday that energy prices still drive Houston's fortunes. And since midsummer, those fortunes have fallen.

"Diversity is a nice thing if the things you're diversifying into are also doing well," Smith said in his semiannual state-of-the-economy address.

The high-tech and international sectors that Houston has nurtured this decade have gone soft along with rock-bottom oil prices, Smith said. "They're not going south like energy, but they're slowing down."

Smith predicts Houston's recent robust job growth will slow to a crawl next year as the world's energy industry tries to figure out what to do with an oil glut that has almost halved oil prices that peaked around $23 per barrel two years ago.

AGE: 'Texercise' calls on Texans to exercise 25 hours over three months

(From 1B)

Grande Valley and Permian Basin for retirement, she said.

In the Permian Basin, while the overall population rose 7 percent during that same period, the older population rose 27 percent, she said.

"You're seeing an increase here in the overall percentage of senior citizens as opposed to other parts of the state. In the Concho Valley, for example, the senior population is lower but in the Permian Basin it continues to inch up. It's the same in terms of minority senior citizens, and, unfortunately, low-income senior citizens."

The department has its beginnings in the Older Americans Act passed by Congress in the 1960s. As part of that act, Texas formed the Governor's Council on Aging, which was made a department in 1981. The agency helps administer that act in Texas, distributing funds to regional agencies on aging and serving as an advocate and planner for state services in charge of senior citizens and aging.

The state has done a lot in terms of offering services for senior citizens, Ms. Sapp said. "But there's an ever-increasing need and we're going to be looking to push the limits of creativity."

First, she said, Texans can do a better job of aging so they won't need the state's services as much.

"We've accepted that as we age, our bodies deteriorate, but that's a myth. Research has shown that no matter how old you are, exercising properly makes an impact. It's never too late to improve your health."

The agency will begin promoting "Texercise" beginning the first week of December at the Governor's Conference on Aging, with aerobics expert Ken Cooper serving as honorary chairman.

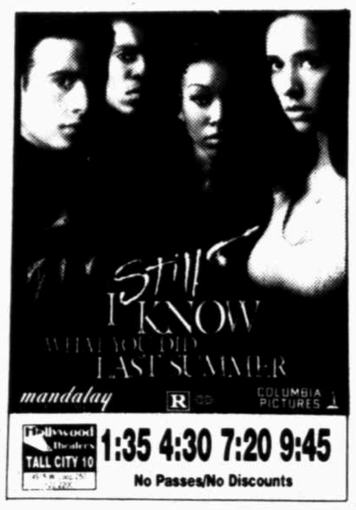

"Texercise," Ms. Sapp explained, asks Texans to exercise for a total of 25 hours over a three-month period, whether it's gardening or walking, and then submit their names to the agency for display at the Capitol next May. The agency is looking for participants to form teams and intergenerational teams — such as grandparents exercising with their grandchildren. The concept has been enthusiastically received by corporations and other organizations that want to join the agency as partners to promote the concept, she said.

"We have to have partnerships. We can't do this in isolation."

Everyone is intellectually aware of what they need to do to stay healthy and age well, she said.

"If you want to age successfully, the choice is yours. Genes have some influence, but you have control over how you age and what your quality of life is."

Researcher says he has piece of dinosaur-killing asteroid

Associated Press

The evidence is no larger than a match head. Yet, if scientists are right, it bears witness to the cataclysm that wiped out the dinosaurs.

Geophysicist Frank Kyte of the University of California at Los Angeles has found what he said is the first known fragment of the gigantic, rocky asteroid that scientists believe slammed into Earth 65 million years ago.

The fragment contains high concentrations of iridium, a rare metal, as well as iron, nickel and chromium at levels peculiar to extraterrestrial objects. Kyte said the most reasonable explanation is that it came from the asteroid.

Other scientists said the geochemical analysis shows that the rock chip probably did originate from space. But whether it was shed from the asteroid that doomed the dinosaurs remains open to debate, they said.

An analysis of the fragment was published in Thursday's issue of the journal Nature.

The coarse-grained fleck was pulled from the floor of the Pacific Ocean in a thin layer of the planet's crust known as the K/T boundary. Scientists believe the layer formed from the debris that settled back to Earth after being blown into the atmosphere by the asteroid.

Other researchers have found grit in the K/T boundary that might have been part of the pulverized asteroid, but the traces were too small to analyze conclusively.

"This is the first object recovered from the K/T boundary that is unarguably meteoric," Kyte said. "My personal interpretations will be subject to review. But in the end we will learn more about one of the worst days in the history of the Earth."

If the K/T boundary is the smoking gun indicating a cataclysmic event, the fragment could be a bullet fired by the gun, Kyte said.

The doomsday rock is thought to have eliminated 70 percent of all plant and animal species and changed the course of evolution.

"The K/T asteroid was something like six miles across, and it got blasted into pieces that would fit on the head of a pin," said Jeff Pleschia, a crater specialist with the U.S. Geological Service in Flagstaff, Ariz.

The K/T boundary is nearly devoid of signs of past life, but is full of blasted quartz crystals, iridium and other traces suggesting the planet absorbed a tremendous blow from a space object. Fossils of dinosaurs and many other creatures found in the older, lower rock layers are not present in the higher, more recent strata, suggesting a mass extinction.

Kyte first displayed the rock chip at a scientific meeting at NASA three years ago. Even though it was found in the K/T boundary, critics suggested it might be just a stray fleck of interplanetary debris.

Since then, Kyte has used an electron microscope and other high-resolution equipment to examine the fragment's molecular structure.

Kyte's analysis buttresses the theory proposed in 1980 by geologist Walter Alvarez of the University of California at Berkeley that the dinosaurs vanished because of a collision with a huge asteroid or comet.

At first, the theory had few supporters. But in 1989, scientists found evidence of a 180-mile-wide crater gouged out of the Earth on Mexico's Yucatan Peninsula.

What species didn't die in the immediate blast probably struggled to survive in an extended period of global cooling and environmental havoc.

In 1997, researchers drilling into sediment off the Florida coast said they found the "smoking gun" of the asteroid collision — a thin reddish stripe that was called the "fireball layer."

Direct proof is hard to come by, however. According to some estimates, up to 99 percent of the asteroid vaporized on impact with a force greater than all of the nuclear weapons ever made. The rest was scattered for thousands of miles — 5,000 miles in the case of this fragment.

"The older something is, the harder it becomes to find a piece of the original," Pleschia said. "It is incredibly painstaking work. You would have to be incredibly lucky to find a fist-sized chunk of this asteroid."

Diagnosis, treatment of attention deficit disorder still uncertain

WASHINGTON (AP) — Doctors still don't know the best way to treat or even diagnose attention deficit disorder in children — even though more than a million children now take powerful drugs to control their hyperactive behavior, according to the National Institutes of Health.

In a report issued Wednesday, a panel of experts selected by the NIH called attention deficit disorder a "profound problem" that may affect 3 percent to 5 percent of all American schoolchildren and costs schools more than $3 billion.

But a consistent, proven method of diagnosing and treating the disorder remains elusive, the experts said.

"There is no current validated diagnostic test for" the disorder, said Dr. David J. Kupfer, a University of Pittsburgh psychiatry professor and chairman of the panel.

Some treatments are effective in the short term — principally drugs such as Ritalin — but no studies have examined their effect on children who take them for more than 14 months, Kupfer said.

Attention deficit disorder, or ADD, also known as attention deficit hyperactivity disorder, usually is diagnosed in school-age children, often as the result of a child's disruptive behavior.

Symptoms include the inability to sit still for reading, study or even to watch television. Often a child cannot play in group games and will act on inappropriate impulses.

Yet defining precisely what constitutes ADD is difficult, said Dr. Mark Vonnegut, a pediatrician and panel member from Quincy, Mass.

"The diagnosis is a mess," Vonnegut said, "but we all believe we are dealing with a serious core problem."

U.S. population headed for 394 million in half a century

WASHINGTON (AP) — By 2050, the United States population will grow to 394 million, some 50 percent more than at present, the Census Bureau projects in a new population profile.

And this population will be older, on average, than now and will contain a larger share of minorities.

The elderly are expected to double their share of the population in more than one-third of the states, and the fastest rates of growth for minorities are expected for Hispanic, Asian and Pacific Islander populations.

California is expected to continue rapid growth, adding 17.7 million people between 1995 and 2025, the agency said. Texas is expected to grow by 8.46 million in that period and Florida will add 6.54 million.

The new projections are contained in a wide-ranging new profile of the nation by the numbers.

Compiled from census and government survey data, the profile contains sections on national and state population trends and projections, geographic mobility, school enrollment, educational attainment, households and families, marital status and living arrangements, fertility, child care arrangements and dozens of other topics.

Already the country's population has grown nearly 18 million since the 1990 census, the report notes, but the rate of increase is slower now than it was in the early 1990s, falling from 1.02 percent in 1990 to 0.88 percent in 1996.

That's because fewer people are being born and more dying as the population ages. In particular, the massive Baby Boom generation born in the years following World War II is moving into their less fertile years.

On Jan. 1, 1997, there were 27,090,000 women in the prime childbearing ages of 15 to 29. That's 1,637,000 fewer than in 1990. There were 4.15 million births in 1990, compared with 3.85 million in 1996. At the same time, the number of deaths rose from 2.16 million in 1990 to 2.35 million in 1996.

Other findings of the report include:

- The nation's 273 metropolitan areas contain nearly 80 percent of the population as of 1996, with a total of 211.9 million of the 265.3 million Americans. Between 1990 and 1996, the nation's population increased 6.7 percent while metropolitan areas grew by 6.9 percent.
- Some 42.5 million Americans moved between 1995 and 1996, 16.3 percent of the population. That rate is down from 20 percent in most of the years in the 1950s and 1960s.
- Between 1994 and 1995 about 5.4 percent of students in 10th, 11th and 12th grades dropped out of school. That rate is not significantly different from the rate 20 years earlier.
- The number of single parents tripled from 3.8 million in 1970 to 11.7 million in 1996, an increase from about 1.9 percent of the population to 4.4 percent.

Washington's Mount Vernon home undergoing renovation

N.Y. Times News Service

The father of our country lived in a regal home in Mount Vernon that has been magnificently preserved. However, it is undergoing renovation and sprucing up to be completed in time to mark the bicentennial of George Washington's death Dec. 14, 1799.

At Mount Vernon, renovations of the so-called new dining room, the grandest room at Mount Vernon, will be completed in time for Presidents Day Weekend in February.

The 1,000-square-foot gallery known as the Mount Vernon Museum reopens Feb. 15 with 100 artifacts and art works, some borrowed from other institutions for the occasion.

A musical program at night and a multimedia presentation, "Washington Is No More," will be offered during 1999.

With local events planned in every city, town and village that wants them as part of the "George Washington Bicentennial Community Program," it is safe to say that most people in the United States will be within shouting distance of an event honoring the president.

The year of George Washington will conclude Dec. 18, 1999, with a re-enactment of his funeral at Mount Vernon, complete with a procession of historically attired mourners.

Hefty red wine a fair match for Thanksgiving bird

By Frank J. Prial
N.Y. Times News Service

I see by the newspapers that the Dean of Westminster Cathedral in London wants to eliminate the Christmas tree. It's a pagan symbol, he says, never mind that the queen donates two trees to the cathedral each year.

I don't know how the dean will wriggle out of this one, but I can sympathize with him because I have something equally subversive in mind: getting rid of the Thanksgiving turkey. Yes, that sacred symbol of holiday plentitude and culinary ineptitude. It's time for it to go.

Trouble is, I forget about this annual outrage until a day or two before it's on us again, when it's too late to drum up support for my cause, or to push my preference for fried chicken. So since I have to have turkey, I'd like to have good wine with it.

But which one? First of all, let's keep it American. It's our holiday, so why not drink our wines? And let's keep the prices moderate — around $20 or less.

A lot of these wines are on my perennial list. Why not? They are consistently good. A few are here for the first time, including two from Gallo, of all people. Let's face it; they are making more and more good wines in California these days.

There is a belief in some circles that since turkey is poultry, it should be paired with white wine. Not so. Its strong flavor will tolerate some white wines, but it pairs best with robust reds, even rustic zinfandels.

Once, zinfandel would have been the odds-on favorite for any American festival. Like most of us, its ancestors came from elsewhere (Croatia, in its case), but now Americans are the only people who make it and it deserves a special place at the Thanksgiving table.

The 1995 Frei Ranch Zinfandel by Gallo confirms that this huge winery's commitment to quality is paying off. The wine is a bit softer than might be expected from a full-bodied zinfandel, but the color, the aroma and the taste are unbeatable. Niebaum-Coppola's Edizione Pennino is a zinfandel named after the music publishing house of Francis Ford Coppola's grandfather. The label is Italianate, the wine Californian.

Fetzer Vineyards is in Mendocino County, where some of the best zinfandel grows. This winery's skill with the grape comes through in its Barrel Select Zinfandel. Jedidiah Steele may have made his name with chardonnay and his good pinot noir, but I think his heart is in zinfandel. Try the 1996 Steele Zinfandel from the Pacini Vineyard, in Mendocino, of course.

Merlot is still everyone's favorite American red wine. I'm less overwhelmed than others but there are some good ones out there. The Washington State winemakers have a special touch with merlot; they give it a little more structure, a little more style. The Canoe Ridge and Columbia Crest 1995's illustrate this. Robert Mondavi's 1994 Napa Valley is also a superlative merlot.

In keeping with the leaner style are some Long Island merlots. These wines impressed a group of prominent Bordeaux winemakers and chateau owners when they toured the North Fork vineyards a few years ago. Palmer and Hargraves are worth consideration.

Rhone-style wines are flourishing in California. There are a couple worth considering: Le Cigare Volant, from Bonny Doon Vineyard in Santa Cruz, is Randall Grahm's homage to Chateauneuf-du-Pape. It is a worthy evocation of the rich Rhone style with a nice touch of spicyness. And there is petite sirah.

No one is absolutely certain what the petite sirah grape really is, although the weight of expert opinion seems to be on the side of the durif, a little-known hot-climate grape in France. Whatever it is, you will be certain you have opened an excellent bottle of wine when you try Stags' Leap Winery's petite sirah, a solid late-fall wine.

Cabernet sauvignon still reigns as the king of California red wines, and there are people who see no reason to drink anything else. Even if your tastes are a tad more eclectic, there are cabernets you should consider for your big dinner.

With its 1994 Stefani Ranch, Gallo is a contender, too, along with Fetzer's Barrel Select 1994, Beaulieu Vineyards' Rutherford 1995 and the St. Supery 1995.

Trefethen Vineyards and the less-well-known Turnbull Cellars are Napa Valley neighbors producing excellent, if different, style cabernets. Both are particular favorites of mine. But then, so are Robert Mondavi's Napa Valley cabernet and Simi Winery's Alexander Valley.

For die-hard white wine fans, there are some great chardonnays. Never much of a California chardonnay fan, I must admit it goes well with turkey. Estancia's Pinnacles chardonnay from the mountains east of Monterey and Edna Valley's chardonnay from San Luis Obispo are two elegant wines with enough substance to stand up to any meal. Robert Mondavi's 1995 Carneros District is another excellent buy.

Franciscan Vineyards Oakville is always a good bet for price and quality, and if you seek diversity, think of Benziger, which offers a Napa chardonnay and a Sonoma chardonnay.

There are other good white wines — but none are substantial enough for turkey. We can drink them after I get rid of all these turkeys.

November time for creating compost, winter garden beds

By Deborah A. Benge Frost

November is a great month for some important garden activities. Take advantage of this month's weather and events to help improve your garden.

Benge Frost

COMPOST

Late fall and early winter crops, such as pecans, tomatoes and other cool-season vegetables, can be gathered during this time of year. But another kind of bounty is the leaves, grass clippings and other kinds of organic matter that can be composted and turned into mulch.

Raw organic matter — leafy kitchen waste, leaves, etc. — become a superior additive for the soil when they are turned into compost. Soil improvements — such as increased ability to hold water and nutrients, improved soil aeration and drainage, and better soil texture — are gained though the use of compost.

Instead of sending left-over leaves, clippings and dead plants to the dumpster, try composting them.

GREEN TOMATOES

Even though freezing weather is coming, lots of green tomatoes are still on the vine.

If the weather forecast shows a light freeze is coming, cover plants with a large sheet or similar protection. For added protection, hang a light bulb in the tomato cage

If a hard freeze is predicted, determine which tomatoes are large and mature enough to pick. Green tomatoes can be mature enough to ripen fully off the vine. To determine what size is large enough to pick, select a green tomato that is nearly harvest size, cut through the fruit and look at the seed. If the seed slides out of the way of the knife point, it is mature enough to fully ripen; if you are able to cut through tomato seeds with a knife, the fruit is too immature to complete ripening off the vine.

Once you've determined by size which tomatoes will ripen, pick all of those, and leave anything smaller for the compost pile. Place all red and pink tomatoes on the windowsill or cabinet. Green tomatoes can be laid in a single layer in a shallow cardboard box and placed in a dark spot to ripen. Make sure fruits don't touch each other. Check the box about once a week and take out the red ones as they ripen. Believe it or not, this can go on for weeks. Tomatoes that were "green as a gourd" can ripen to a full, tasty red.

Speed up the ripening process by placing tomatoes in a paper bag with a ripe apple or banana. Ripe fruit gives off a natural ripening gas called ethylene, which can speed the ripening of green tomatoes.

BED THE GARDEN

As soon as you've finished harvesting the crops, get the garden ready for winter and spring by planting a cover crop, which is an excellent way to improve the soil. Sometimes called a green manure crop, these cover crops are mowed down and turned under in spring to add organic matter to the soil. They also provide green cover during winter; reduce water runoff; reduce winter weed growth; provide food for birds and other wildlife; act as a trap crop for root knot nematodes; can fix atmospheric nitrogen for plant use; and can help reduce soil pH.

Cereal rye grass and Cahaba white vetch are two recommended cool-season cover crops. Cereal rye grass — specifically 'Elbon' variety — makes a good trap crop for root knot nematodes, which are microscopic roundworms that invade some root systems and cause galls to develop. These galls interfere with water and nutrient uptake, which leads to easy wilting, yellowing, stunting, rotting roots and death. Although nematodes are very difficult to control, planting cereal rye grass in the fall can help.

Sow cereal rye grass at the rate of 3/4 pounds per 100 square feet of garden space. Rake it into the soil surface; follow up with watering and periodic fertilizing once every three or four weeks.

One month before planting in the spring, shred the rye grass with a string trimmer or mower, and till it into the soil. The nematodes will be trapped in the roots and die as the organic matter decomposes.

Cahaba white vetch, a deep-rooted, cool-season legume, lends much organic matter to the soil and roots very deeply to help alleviate a hard pan or compacted oil. Vetch can also take nitrogen from the atmosphere and fix it to a form plants can use. Legumes have nodes on the roots (different from galls caused by nematodes) that can fix this atmospheric nitrogen.

Masonry takes skill to repair

Associated Press

Bricks, blocks and other masonry are among the most trouble-free of building materials. But even masonry is not immune to damage caused by moisture, settling or impact.

It's important to repair masonry as soon as you discover the damage. If neglected, small problems that are easy to fix can become major ones that require a mason's attention.

A common problem is efflorescence, a white powdery substance found especially on new masonry surfaces. It occurs when internal moisture dissolves soluble salts present in concrete or mortar. The salt solution migrates to the surface and evaporates, leaving behind deposits of crystallized salts. Moisture in fresh mortar makes new structures especially prone to efflorescence. Masonry walls exposed to rain during construction may also develop the condition.

In itself, efflorescence is more an aesthetic problem than a house-threatening one. You can remove the powdery residue by scrubbing it with a stiff-bristled brush and water.

But if it continues or if it appears on older masonry, it may signal a more serious problem.

Look for an entry point for moisture, such as cracks, crumbling mortar and deterioration around windows, doors and chimneys. Also check for dampness caused by moisture-saturated soil against masonry below ground.

Dampness in below-ground masonry is difficult to cure. The soil around the masonry must be drained. If the masonry is a foundation wall, first make sure that the gutters are not clogged and that downspouts have drainage that carries runoff away from the house. Sometimes the soil needs to be regraded so that it slopes away from the foundation.

Cracked or crumbling mortar joints allow moisture to penetrate the wall, where it can freeze, causing even more expensive damage. The process of fixing mortar joints — called repointing or tuckpointing — involves chiseling out damaged mortar and replacing it with fresh mortar. New mortar should match the old as closely as possible in composition, color and joint profile. This is especially important when repointing very old or historic masonry, whose mortar may differ significantly in strength and flexibility from modern mortars. In this case, contact a preservation agency for the name of a mortar analyst.

Like defective joints, cracked or crumbling bricks weaken a wall by letting in moisture. Replace such bricks as soon as possible. If damage is in a critical load-bearing area, such as above or below a window or doorway, consult a mason.

A long vertical crack in a concrete or brick wall may result from normal settlement of a new building. When the building has settled, the crack will stabilize and can be filled. But if such cracks open again after being filled, there may be a serious movement of the earth beneath the structure or a flaw in the foundation.

Call in an engineer to determine and correct the cause.

DEAR ABBY

Widower stuck in middle of church lady tug-of-war

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: The letter you printed about the widow who was coming on to a married man at church reminded me of something that happened to me. In my case, the minister had to step in and resolve the matter.

Van Buren

Two old gals, each 80 and widowed, wanted to sit with me in church. I'll call them "Mary" and "Alice."

I'm 71 and a widower. I've never been good-looking, nor made much money. I do have my health, however. I love golf, quail hunting and my church, but have no interest in women and romance.

Several months ago I was in church when Mary sat down beside me. I had seen Mary with her daughter, but didn't know her. Every Sunday after that, Mary joined me. I hinted to her daughter to come and get Mary, but somehow she kept slipping away from her daughter.

About a month later, I was joined by Alice, who'd take the spot on my other side. Now I had TWO women with me, both of whom I was trying hard to shed. Alice would sit down with her daughter, make an excuse like going to the rest room, then hasten to my pew.

Then came an incident that still has the congregation laughing. Mary and I were sitting there and the service was about to begin, when along came Alice. Instead of Alice sitting on my right side, she tried to wedge in on my left, between Mary and me.

Curious to see what would happen, I didn't budge an inch. Neither did Mary. So Alice began wiggling her derriere, trying to force a spot between Mary and me. By now, the congregation was giggling, even laughing aloud.

Suddenly, Alice lost her balance and fell right into my lap. The crowd guffawed. Alice's daughter appeared, helped her mother to her feet and led her away. A moment later, Mary's daughter was there leading away her mom. Mary was protesting, "He's MY man. I saw him first!"

I haven't been bothered by either woman since. I'm told the minister met with both families and the daughters agreed to exercise more control of their mothers. I'm enjoying church a lot more these days. — 71 IN ST. LOUIS

DEAR 71: How fortunate that Alice's fall from grace occurred in church, where the minister could intercede on your behalf.

Many years ago I was told that the most dangerous place a tourist could be while on safari was between a hippopotamus and water. Your experience illustrates that it can be equally dangerous to get between an amorous woman and the object of her affections.

DEAR ABBY: The company I work for is located on an island, and we must commute by ferry. We can either walk on, take a bus, hitch a ride or drive our cars aboard, but the latter is quite expensive.

My problem: One of my coworkers constantly asks for a ride. She walks onto the ferry and wants to ride with me from the dock to work. She never brings her car, so she can't reciprocate by offering rides to those of us who accommodate her.

Abby, this woman talks nonstop, and I don't always feel sociable. I cherish my private time while I am commuting.

Is there a way I can tell this coworker she's not welcome to ride with me without offending her? — IRRITATED ON THE FERRY

DEAR IRRITATED: Probably not. People who are insensitive enough to continually mooch a ride usually become very sensitive when the intrusion is called to their attention. However, honesty with diplomacy is the best way to go. Explain to your co-worker that your commute to work is your "think tank time," and you concentrate more effectively when you are alone with no distractions. Then ask her to please understand and to forgive you for not sharing your car.

For everything you need to know about wedding planning, order "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447. (Postage is included.)

HOME/GARDEN

Seeds for Thought/7B
Dear Abby/7B

Photographs by JAY BACHEMIN / Scripps Howard News Service

Light suffuses the new breakfast area, top, and sitting room. Ceilings and woodwork are mahogany. Heat comes from the hot water system under the floor tiles. The copper structure above the bay window, above, is more than decorative. It also is a box gutter for collecting water and directing it to the downspouts. The kitchen, right, features new granite countertops and original cabinets updated with white paint.

Remodeling project worth the wait

The new deck and terrace make for a lovely transition into the garden.

DREAM Addition

By Carole L. Philipps
Scripps Howard News Service

When a Hyde Park, Cincinnati, couple decided to keep their home of 20 years and remodel to make it the house of their dreams, they had a few reservations and some very specific goals:

They wanted an addition to complement their 1928 brick English country-style house, but they wanted the addition to be lighter, brighter and more airy than the more formal parts of the house.

Since both love to cook, they wanted a true cooks' kitchen that would allow them to work there together.

They wanted the addition to be a gentle transition to the backyard garden and they wanted none of the existing trees harmed or removed.

And most important of all, they wanted the work done in a way that would not aggravate the wife's sensitivity to dust and chemicals, such as the urea formaldehyde normally found in plywood.

When the couple, who very much value their privacy, approached architect Robert Sala, they not only got the design of their dreams, they also found a way to meet all of their other remodeling goals.

"We started with an existing kitchen, a small room at the back of the house and an outside stoop," Sala said.

"They wanted a place that would open up the back of the house and integrate the living space with the outside," said Sala. "They didn't require a seamless addition," said Sala, referring to one that would be indistinguishable from the existing building. "I designed an addition that had its own character, but didn't clash with the home. I was allowed to be expressive and at the same time complementary."

The finished space — kitchen, breakfast area, sitting room, deck and transitional terrace — is a marvel of magnificent materials. Copper was used inside (a sink, cupboards) and out (the gutter system, flashing). Copper flecks in the granite countertops add another tie-in. Ceramic tile with a rustic, stone-like finish covers the floor.

Perhaps the single largest design statement— mahogany for interior ceilings and cabinetry and for railings on the cantilevered deck — came from the family's mahogany Baldwin concert-sized grand piano. The instrument sits in the wide passage from the original portion of the house to its addition.

The lady of the house admits that she "had some pretty specific ideas in mind that I wanted for the house. I had been thinking about it for 20 years, planning it for 20 years."

But health concerns had postponed the remodeling.

Water-soluble paints and stains were used in the project to avoid irritating fumes. In place of plywood for interiors of cabinets, particle board, with no formaldehyde, was used.

Carpenters worked in the basement and used exhaust fans and vacuum systems for tools to collect and remove the dust.

Both husband and wife stayed comfortably in the residence throughout the lengthy construction period.

The homeowner is thrilled with her new space. "Oh, it has worked out wonderfully. I find myself spending all my time in there," she said.

And is there something she wishes had been done differently?

"We really like the way we did it. I don't know that we would want to make any changes. To come to the end of a project and feel that way is quite a relief."

Call it a chaise

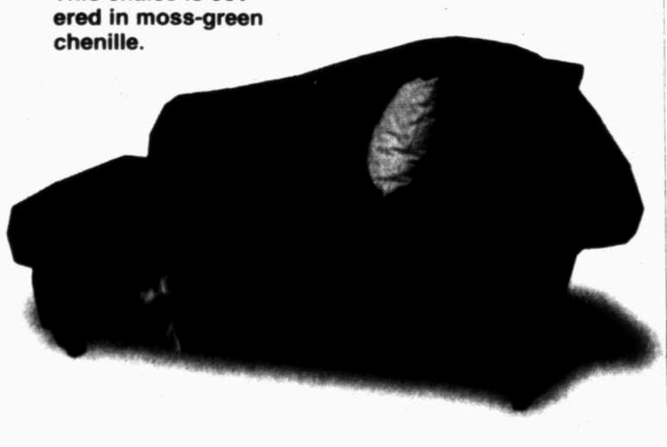

It used to be a chaise longue, until the classic lounging chair's big comeback in recent years, which coincided with homebuilders' big boom in master bedrooms. Now the term has been shortened to chaise by most manufacturers of the really long loungers perfect in sitting rooms off the master bedroom, in the master suite or master chamber.

Whatever you call the big bedroom so popular among new homebuilders and remodelers, it has become the American home's third largest room, according to Michael Delgaudio, vice president and creative director for North Carolina-based Century Furniture. The suites rank after great rooms and family rooms in spaciousness.

"That's why we make the chaise in several styles and a choice of 2,300 fabrics. We feel strongly about it and are adding new styles of the chaise to our line every year . . . The chaise is all about personal elegance," said Delgaudio by phone from High Point, N.C.

Delgaudio said that people want their master bedroom to be a retreat after stressful days. A chaise, a cozy fleece or crocheted throw and a good book add up to cocooning comfort.

GO ORGANIC

When rototilling, be sure to add plenty of organic matter to the soil. Rototilling greatly increases microbial activity in the soil by distributing the organic matter throughout, which causes it to be consumed faster. If you don't add organic matter, you can end up with lifeless soil.

THINK GLOSS FOR KITCHEN

If you are painting your kitchen or eating area, remember to use a paint that is tolerant of spills and splashes. A gloss or oil-based eggshell paint is best for maximum washability.

Chaps at Q-school

LA QUINTA, Calif. — Two former Midland College golfers, Steven Young and Chad Campbell, are in the hunt to earn their PGA Tour cards after the first round of the 1998 PGA Tour National Qualifying Tournament.

The top 35 players plus ties in the tournament receive PGA Tour exemptions for 1999. The next 50 players earn full exemptions to the developmental Nike Tour, with the rest of the players in the finals earning partial exempt status for the Nike Tour next year.

Young, who graduated from Midland College in 1997, shot a first-round 70 (36-34) and stands eight strokes off the pace set by PGA Tour veteran Rick Fehr. Young is in a group tied for 59th, just two strokes out of the top 35.

Campbell, an Andrews native, shot 71 (33-38) and is in a group tied for 79th. Campbell is coming off his most successful season as a pro. The former Chap all-America was the leading money winner on the Hooters Tour.

Both players played in the same group, taking on the 7,164-yard, par 72 Weiskopf Course at PGA West.

The tournament is a six-day event and is being played on two courses, the Weiskopf Course and the 6,747-yard, par 72 Dunes Course at LaQuinta.

Elway may play

DENVER — Having found the sideline neither a fun nor a safe place to be, John Elway reported improvement of his rib injury Wednesday and said he planned on playing Sunday against the Oakland Raiders.

Elway, bothered by a rib cartilage injury during the week prior to the San Diego game on Nov. 8, aggravated the injury during pre-game warmups. He managed to play only the second series of the game before retiring in pain.

Saying he also came back too soon from a hamstring injury earlier in the year, Elway vowed last week to never again rush back from an injury. He watched Monday night's game against AFC West rival Kansas City from the sideline.

But Elway appeared to be a man in a hurry on Wednesday.

"I'm feeling a lot better and a lot less sore," he said.

Asked if he expected to play on Sunday, he said, "I'm hoping so, unless I have a setback, which I don't anticipate. But, yeah, I'm planning on it."

Might he consider taking another week off to make sure his ribs are completely healed?

"No," he said. "If I'm ready to play, and I can play to the level I need to play to help this team, then I'm going to play. I'm through the point where really the pain was a factor. It's still my job to play.

"It's no fun (not playing), there's no question about that. I'd much rather be out there."

Elway, 38, watched as backup Bubby Brister engineered a 30-7 victory over the Chiefs on Monday night, raising Denver's record to 10-0. Elway admitted feeling some discomfort at the thought of being in the hostile environment of Arrowhead Stadium without the protection of a helmet and shoulder pads.

Gonzalez captures AL MVP

■ Rangers' slugger earns Most Valuable Player Award for second time.

By T.R. Sullivan
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

Texas Rangers outfielder Juan Gonzalez has been named the American League's most valuable player for the second time in three years.

Gonzalez, who won a tight race for the award in 1996, was the overwhelming winner this time, receiving 21 of 28 first-place votes from the baseball writers. Boston Red Sox shortstop Nomar Garciaparra was a distant second.

"I'm the most excited person in the whole world right now," Gonzalez said yesterday from Puerto Rico, where he celebrated with a small group of family and friends.

Gonzalez, who will receive a $250,000 bonus in addition to the trophy, is the 23rd player in major league history to win two MVP awards. He is the first Latin American player to win the award twice.

The Chicago Cubs' Sammy Sosa can make it a clean sweep for the region by winning the National League award, which will be announced today.

Sixteen of the other 22 are in the Hall of Fame. Cal Ripken, Barry Bonds and Frank Thomas are still active; Robin Yount and Dale Murphy aren't yet eligible for enshrinement.

Roger Maris, whose single-season home run record was broken this season by Mark McGwire, is the only two-time MVP who is eligible for the Hall of Fame but not in it.

"This says Juan is one of the elite players," said Rangers manager Johnny Oates. "To be elected two out of three years, that says he's among the best of the elite. That's quite an accomplishment. What he does, he does very well, and that's drive in runs."

His number of runs batted in proved to be the difference. Gonzalez led the American League with 157 RBI, the most by one player since Boston's Ted Williams and Vern Stephens drove in 159 in 1949.

He had 100 RBI at the All-Star

King of the Drill

Rebs' lineman Richards rarely gets beaten

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

During regular season play, Midland Lee holds a daily practice event called the nutcracker where the offensive players go against the defensive players in a one-on-one blocking drill. It is one of the highlights of a practice session.

The King of the Hill in this drill is usually one Rex Richards, a 6-5, 270-pound senior offensive guard who takes to this endeavor like a duck takes to water.

Around mid-season, Richards drew linebacker Drew Anderson, a mismatch of about 90 pounds. Richards slipped at the start and was buried by Anderson.

The next day Richards finds a picture on his locker of one player laying on top of another with the player on the bottom buried in the grass. Richards was fuming while trying to find the culprit that posted the picture on his locker.

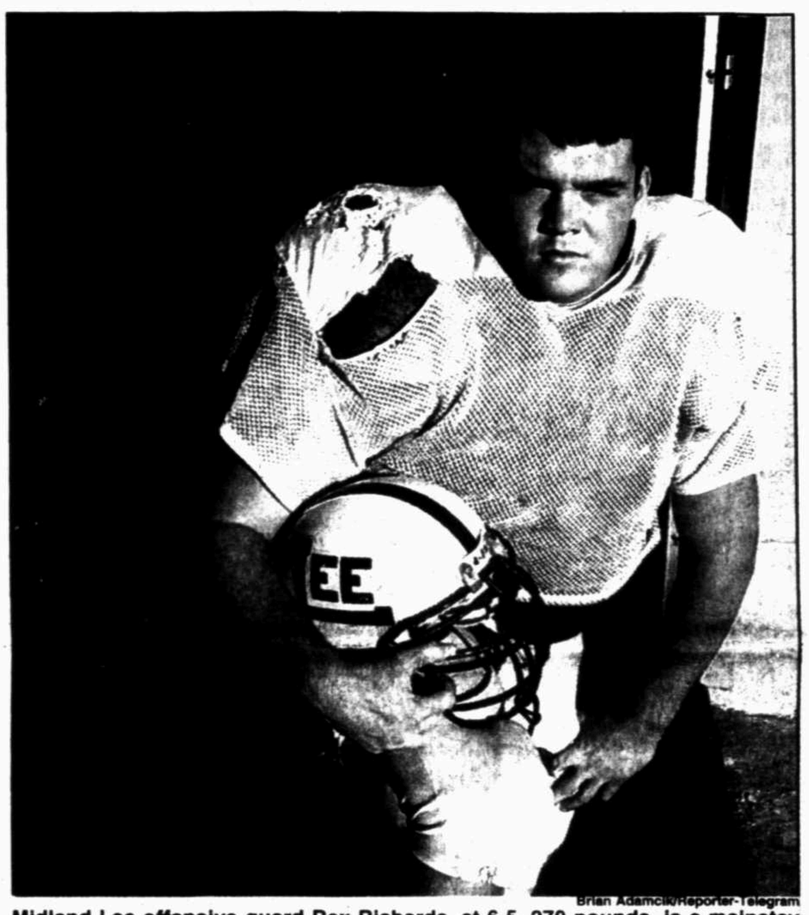

"Rex just doesn't get beat in that drill very often. He's a bad dude," said Lee coach John Parchman. "Drew really got him that one day and the whole team was razzing Rex about it. I don't think anyone wanted to be around him the next time we had the drill."

Richards may be the heart and soul of a young offensive team that features mostly underclassmen. He is Division I material for college next year. And he is one of the team leaders.

He also grades high. He graded out a team best 84 percent in the grading system used by Randy Smith, the offensive line coach and led the team in pancakes (where you block a player down on his back) with 73 in just 11 games.

"I really grade hard, probably too hard," Smith says. "He graded out at over 90 percent in two games (San Angelo and Midland High) and Andy Brewster (center) was the only other

Lady Chaps open Classic vs. Phoenix

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

After coming off tough road tournaments, the Midland College basketball teams are coming back to the Permian Basin this weekend in hopes of reaching their coaches' high expectations.

The Lady Chaps, in search of respect, host the Lady Chap Classic starting tonight, while the men head 17 miles west to play in the Odessa College Classic starting on Friday at 6 p.m. against Howard College.

The Lady Chaps come into tonight's 7:30 game against Phoenix College with a 5-1 overall record and a recent 2-1 mark at the tough Texas JUCO Roundup in Wichita Falls. The only loss the Lady Chaps suffered was a 71-65 setback to No. 1 Trinity Valley. Most teams would be pleased with the overall start and performance but not the never-satisfied MC coach Ron Jones.

"I was really happy with the Ranger game (a 92-48 win on Oct. 9) with the type of intensity we had on defense," Jones said. "I was disappointed we didn't have that type of intensity this past weekend. We should try to play great defense every night. We did some things well but I don't think the level of intensity I hoped we

Stanton puts off basketball season again

By Stewart Doreen
Assistant Sports Editor

STANTON — Tuesday night the state-ranked Stanton boys basketball team was scheduled to open its season versus Reagan County. It didn't happen.

In what is becoming an old song for the Buffalo basketball program, the start of the season will not come as soon as planned. The problem is a football program that is just too good.

"Last year, we missed 14 games," said Stanton basketball coach Doug Gordon, whose team finished with a 20-2 record and a Region I-2A tournament appearance last year. "This is the fourth year in a row (the team hasn't started on time). We hold off until varsity football finishes. All 13 players are on the football team.

"We get them later after football and coach (Rob) Bird gets late for track. I'm hoping he gets them late. That is just part of being in a small school."

This is a problem for Gordon, but a good problem as he says. Last year, the Arrest humiliates Hampton coach

By Sonja Barisic
Associated Press Writer

HAMPTON, Va. — The Hampton University women's basketball coach said Wednesday she was humiliated and scared when Lubbock, Texas, police arrested and handcuffed her over what she said was a false accusation that she tried to run a con game.

Patricia Bibbs, her husband, Ezell, and assistant coach Vanetta Kelso were arrested Monday after a woman claimed they had tried to con her out of cash at a Wal-Mart. No charges have been filed.

Hampton's game Tuesday night with No. 12 Texas Tech was canceled because the coaches and team weren't physically or emotionally prepared, university officials said.

During a news conference Wednesday, Bibbs, her husband and her assistant, who are black, said in response to questions that they believe race played a role in their arrests.

"I was handcuffed, and I was never read my rights," Bibbs said when asked to elaborate. She also said that none of the 15 or 20 police officers she saw was black.

Bibbs said the ordeal lasted about six hours.

Being held in a dirty jail cell with graffiti-covered walls was "worse than what you do with a ... wild animal," she said, crying.

"It's demoralizing. It's embarrassing to be falsely accused. I've seen it. I've read about it. No one knows until you experience it," she said.

Aggies, Wildcats end suspense early in Big 12

There's not a lot of suspense left in the Big 12 football season.

Losses by Texas and Missouri and wins by Texas A&M and Kansas State last week clinched Big 12 title game appearances for the latter two.

Peden

This week's only decent game has No. 2 K-State visiting No. 19 Missouri. It's a game that could have been interesting without the early clinchings. K-State could still suffer from an emotional hangover after beating Nebraska for the first time since the Beatles were a group, but it's still very likely that the Wildcats will take a perfect record into St. Louis.

By the way, the biggest impression made by A&M's win over Missouri is that Missouri needs a kicker badly. The Tigers missed two reasonably easy field goals and lost by three to the sixth ranked Aggies. Any high school kicker who is halfway decent should start sending game tape to the Missouri Athletic Department immediately.

A&M is off this week, as are Texas, Nebraska and Colorado. The Aggies and Longhorns have an extra six days to think about their meeting the morning after Thanksgiving in Austin. There's nothing at stake in that game except for pride, which in this case means there's a lot at stake.

Texas Tech, which is a few votes shy of being ranked after whipping the 'Horns last week, plays a game at Oklahoma this week. While Oklahoma isn't very good, at least this game has the revenge-factor; last year, the Sooners went to Lubbock and stole a 32-21 victory, costing the Red Raiders a spot in the Big 12 title game. Expect the Sooners to pay for it this year.

The only other games in the Big 12 involve second-division teams: Baylor plays at Oklahoma State and Kansas goes to Iowa State, which can clinch the worst record in the league with a loss.

WAC: While TCU, SMU and UTEP have all solidified middle of the pack status in their respective WAC divisions, Rice has an outside shot at playing in the WAC title game — but it's way outside.

Rice (5-2 in WAC games) plays at No. 20 Air Force (6-1) while Wyoming, at 6-1 the other contender in the Mountain Division, plays at Tulsa. If Rice wins (a longshot) and Wyoming loses (a real longshot), that would create a three-way tie, and Rice would represent the division in the WAC Championship because of a better record against teams in the division.

Texas-El Paso plays at San Diego State, which is the co-leader with BYU (both 6-1) in the Pacific Division.

The Metroplex teams get chances to fatten up their records in their season finales. Southern Methodist goes out of conference to play Navy. Texas Christian goes to Sin City to play UNLV. There are only a few winless teams left in Division I-A, and the WAC has two of them: UNLV and Hawaii (but who can practice in those environments?)

OTHER TEXAS SCHOOLS: Houston won the first Conference-USA title, but the Cougars haven't come close since. They close their season against Tulane, one of the nation's nicest success stories.

Tulane is undefeated (9-0) and is ranked No. 12. The schedule has been way too easy for the Green Wave to wash very high in the Bowl Championship Series standings — they're 16th — but considering where Tulane has come from, they don't care too much.

Here's hoping coach Tommy Bowden doesn't take the money and run to a higher-profile program — even if Gary Barnett might advise him that way.

'72 Dolphins want Broncs to lose once

By Steven Wine
AP Sports Writer

MIAMI — With the showdown still a month away, the 1972 Miami Dolphins are already working on a game plan.

They'll assemble along the sideline, the past come to life, looking over Jimmy Johnson's shoulder and rooting to preserve their unique place in NFL history.

The schedule says Denver at Miami on Dec. 21. That could also mean the unbeaten '72 Dolphins against the unbeaten '98 Broncos.

"I'll be down there on the field trying to trip somebody as they go down the sideline," said Mercury Morris, a running back on the Dolphins' team that went 17-0. "I'll be out there with one of those laser lights, shining it in John Elway's eyes. This is Miami: You want to play? Let's play."

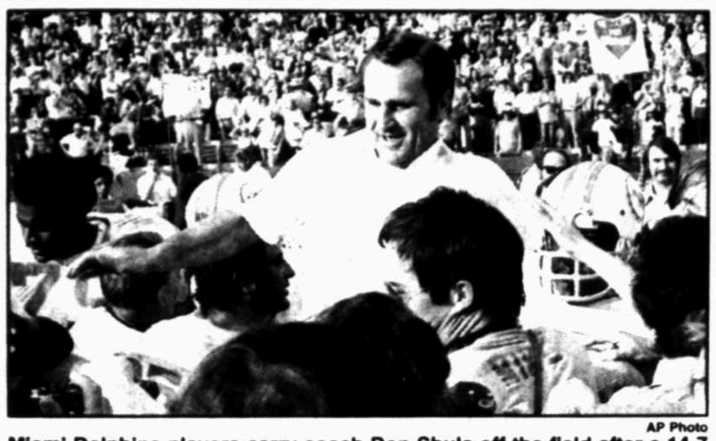

The tantalizing scenario depends on Denver winning its next four games: Oakland, at San Diego, Kansas City and at the New York Giants. Victories would make the Broncos 14-0 when they play in Miami on the Monday night before Christmas.

The 1972 Dolphins achieved the only perfect season in NFL history. Now the Broncos have a chance to match the accomplishment.

"I hope somebody beats them and we continue to be the only team," Hall of Fame coach Don Shula said. "It's just nice being the only team that has ever done something. I've enjoyed that.

"Every year about this time you get worried, and this year with Denver you've got a very strong team. They're going to be tough to beat."

The coach who replaced Shula will worry about the Broncos later. With an important game looming for AFC East leader Miami on Monday at New England, Johnson isn't inclined to talk about the Broncos' game now.

AP Photo

Miami Dolphins players carry coach Don Shula off the field after a 14-7 win over Washington in Super Bowl VII finished off the only perfect season in NFL history. The Denver Broncos are threatening that achievement, and the members of the 1972 Dolphins are already getting ready for the Broncos' visit to Miami in December.

"That's the furthest thing from my mind," Johnson said Wednesday. "It's foolish to even think past New England."

The '72 Dolphins, however, can afford to look ahead.

Perfect-season quarterback Bob Griese admires the defending champion Broncos, noting that journeyman Bubby Brister has filled in for Elway the same way journeyman Earl Morrall replaced an injured Griese in 1972. And Griese likes the idea of an unbeaten Denver coming to Miami, in part because his son, Brian, is the Broncos' third-string quarterback.

"I've told Brian, 'If you come down here undefeated, we're going to be on the sideline, and we ain't going to be rooting for you guys,'" Griese said. "It'd be something if he had to go in and play. Don't ask me who I'd be for then."

The Dolphins against an undefeated Denver would be perhaps the biggest NFL game this season and the biggest in Miami since 1985, the last time a team made such a serious bid for a perfect season.

The Chicago Bears were 12-0 in 1985 before Shula's Dolphins beat them on a Monday night in the Orange Bowl, 38-24. Members from the '72 team watched in delight from the sideline as the Dolphins raced to a 31-10 halftime lead.

The game turned out to be the Bears' only defeat of the season.

"It was such an exciting and memorable night," Shula said. "I remember pulling into the Orange Bowl parking lot and the electricity — you could sense it two hours before game time.

"Then once the game started, it was one of those nights when we couldn't do anything wrong. That's probably the best first half of football I've been around as a coach."

Thanks to prescient NFL schedule-makers, a similar scenario is possible a month from now.

Even if the Broncos beat the Dolphins to reach 15-0, they'll still need a win at home against Seattle and then three postseason victories, including a Super Bowl win in ... (drum roll) ... Miami.

"It looks like they have a very good shot at running the table," '72 Dolphins receiver Paul Warfield said. "They look so much better than most of the folks they're playing on the schedule.

"If Denver is able to go through the season undefeated, they deserve tremendous accolades. My hat goes off to them, because I know how difficult it was."

Even the 1972 Dolphins can't begrudge a perfect ending.

Warren plays it down, but wants to prove Seahawks made mistake

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — The Seattle Seahawks never came to Chris Warren to tell him he was no longer in their plans although he was the leading rusher in club history.

"They gave me no indication they didn't want me but I heard about it by word of mouth," Warren said on Wednesday. "Other backs were visiting and I didn't even know about it."

To say Warren is pumped for the Dallas Cowboys game against Seattle in Texas Stadium on Sunday would be the understatement of the year.

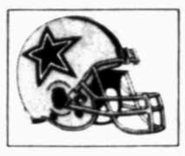

He is trying to play it low key, but the smile on his face tells a different story.

"I'm not bitter," he said. "If I was bitter it would take away from my game and fall into their hands. It's obvious they wanted Ricky Watters and not me. That was obvious when they invested $5 million a year in the guy."

But it's hard for Warren to convince himself the meeting with his former team is just another game.

Warren, who rushed for 6,706 yards and scored 44 touchdowns in his eight-year career with Seattle, admitted there will be give and take with his former Seahawk teammates.

"Sure, they'll be waiting for me and trying to take me out of the game and I'll be trying to avoid that," he said. "It's going to be tough. But I'm looking forward to it."

Seattle coach Dennis Erickson said on Wednesday in a conference call that the Seahawks will be seeing Warren's best.

"I'm happy for Chris and how things worked out for him in Dallas because he did a lot of things for this franchise," Erickson said. "There is no question in my mind Chris will be pumped and ready to play on Sunday."

Seattle quarterback Warren Moon said the Seahawks dumped Warren because "they felt his play was starting to decline. I just knew when he went to Dallas it was going to be a great find for them because of the talent he had."

Warren's feeling are still hurt.

"I still don't know the answer to why they didn't want me because I felt things were good enough the way they were," Warren said.

Erickson said he didn't want to get into why Warren was let go, saying only "it was salary cap and different things we were doing. That's all I want to say about it."

Warren and some of the Seattle players are still good friends.

"I talk to a lot of them," Warren said. "I talk to Cortez Kennedy every day or so."

Although Warren isn't the featured running back with the Cowboys because of Emmitt Smith, he still likes his role with the Cowboys.

"It's been a good situation for me," Warren said. "I've kind of eased into the offense and it gets better each week."

Warren volunteered to return kickoffs when Kevin Mathis broke an arm and another chore could be added on Sunday — punt returning — if Deion Sanders' sprained left big toe doesn't heal.

"I want to play as much as I can and if they want me to return punts I'll be ready although the last time I did it was 1992," Warren said.

Warren has rushed 45 times for 202 yards and scored 3 touchdowns for the Cowboys. He's also caught 9 passes for 41 yards and a touchdown.

HOOPS: TABC ranks Stanton third

(From 1C)

Buffalo football team had playoff success, winning a Class 2A state title. This year, Stanton is again knee-deep in football. This Friday, the No. 6-ranked football team (10-1 overall) travels to Sweetwater to play Eldorado (6-5).

The players will again be getting used to playing under the state's biggest spotlight and getting used to post-season pressure.

"If we come out of football injury free, I feel good," said Gordon, who coaches offensive linemen and linebackers. "They play basketball all summer long and are shooting the basketball on weekends. With two or three practices, they can shoot the basketball really well."

Playing under postseason pressure could again be key because again the Buffaloes are expecting success. The Buffaloes return three starters (Kyle Herm, Justin Cobb, Chad Smith) and six other lettermen from a team that fell to Lockney in the regional semifinals. They come into this season ranked No. 3 by the Texas Association of Basketball Coaches and No. 2 by Texas Basketball Magazine. They are also a favorite to win District 3-2A, which Gordon says will be very competitive.

"We have good teams in the district," said Gordon, whose teams didn't lose a district game over the last two years. "Tahoka and Coahoma will be tough and the other teams have some good athletes."

The Buffaloes are expecting good things this year, but again will have to wait. However for Gordon, he just hopes it is worth the wait.

"They are focused on football," Gordon said. "When we finish (football), hopefully after a state championship, it will not take long to get focused on basketball."

New Coaching Faces

School	Boys Coach	Girls Coach
Big Spring	Jim Avery	Cathy Loter
Rankin	Corey Richardson	Scotty Carmen
Trinity	Cleveland Phelps	Jeff Young
Greenwood	—	Amy Daniels
Garden City	—	Keith Stone
Stanton	—	Tim Van Hecke

TUESDAY NIGHT HIGHLIGHTS: Some of the big performances from the first Tuesday night of area included two Trinity 20-point outings as the Chargers routed Loraine, 98-27. Nick Whitley scored 22 while teammate Taborick Ephriam threw in 20... Garden City's J'Layne Niehues poured in 21 in the Lady Bearkats' win over Robert Lee... In Andrews' loss to Odessa High, Jacob Lopez totaled 20 points... Renee Rougeaux had a double-double (16 points and 14 rebounds) in Trinity's loss to the Loraine girls...

LOTS OF NEW FACES: Many area teams hit the court this season with new head coaches gracing the sidelines. Three schools have news girls and boys coaches - Big Spring, Trinity and Rankin. Greenwood, Stanton and Garden City changed one coach each. Andrews and Midland Christian stayed the same.

RICHARDS: Rex anchors Rebels' line player we had that graded at 90 percent in a game this year.

"What Rex does for us best, however, is in the leadership department and I feel that has made a huge difference in our team. He demands 100 percent from everyone and if we don't get it, you hear about it from Rex.

"He just loves football and he's an excitable type of kid. We have to watch that with him, but all he does trickles down to the rest of us. He's an offensive line coach's dream. And the thing about it, I think our offensive line is turning into a bunch of Rex clones with his motivational tactics."

With Richards' natural competitive instinct always at high gear, he didn't like the 5-5 mark the team posted when he was a junior. Now that the playoffs are here, he almost seems like he's on a personal mission.

"I'm excited that the team is doing well. I think it is all coming together," Richards said. "Winning a state championship is everyone's goal when you start playing the game. We've got a long way to go to do that, but I think everyone on the team is feeling it, and they're as excited as I am about being in the playoffs."

But the playoffs haven't kept Richards from his focus on the game.

"My focus is on being a better technician in what I do," Richards said. "I want the team to know that when they run to my side of the ball, they can do it without a problem."

"Rex has all the physical tools," Smith said. "He can just overpower people with his size and strength. We've been working lately on cleaning up his technique and he's still getting better. He can bench press 360 pounds and he's under five-flat in the 40."

As far as the nutcracker drill is concerned, Richards is undaunted in his love of going one-on-one.

"I like that drill," Richards says. "We've been hittin' on each other since we were kids and it really helps you get your form down."

Richards also feels blessed to be on a team that is solid defensively. That, too, helps him prepare for a game.

"Our defense is spectacular," he says. "When we scrimmage against our defense, you get some real good work. And you know if you can do your job against them, you can do it against anybody."

Even though Richards is nearing the end of his high school career, he thinks the Lee offense may be even better next year.

"Nearly everyone on the offense will be back. They should put up some points next year," Richards says.

But this lineman won't be back next year. He'll be off starting a new college career. Just where is still a guess.

"I'm looking at six colleges right now," Richards said. "It's a hard decision to make. I still haven't picked yet. But I was at the (Texas) Tech-Texas game last weekend and I liked that a lot."

And Lee has liked what they've seen of Richards this season.

NBA Lockout

By The Associated Press

A look at the NBA lockout through Wednesday, Day 141:

GAMES LOST WEDNESDAY: 7.

TOTAL GAMES MISSED: 115.

EARLIEST ESTIMATED DATE THAT SEASON CAN START: Dec. 22.

NEGOTIATIONS: The sides will hold a formal bargaining session Friday.

PROJECTED PLAYER SALARY LOSSES (through Dec. 22): $298 million.

THURSDAY'S BEST CANCELED GAME: Chicago at Houston, 8:30 p.m. EST. These teams that have won the NBA's last eight titles (Bulls '91, '92, '93, '96, '97, '98; Rockets '94, '95). Would Michael Jordan have been with the Bulls? Would Charles Barkley have been back with Houston?

QUOTE OF THE DAY: "The thing I read about Indiana is that their team is ready to go. They've got 11 or 12 guys working together each and every day, and I think that team will definitely have a jump on all the other teams because they are more committed. For our team, I haven't heard those reports." — Knicks coach Jeff van Gundy on whether well-established teams will have an edge in a shortened season.

Woods drains birdie on 17th to edge Singh

Associated Press

POIPU, Hawaii — With the wind howling and squalls sweeping over the Poipu Bay Resort Course, Tiger Woods' patience prevailed Wednesday, giving him the PGA Grand Slam of Golf title in a 2-up victory over Vijay Singh.

Woods, who gained entry to the exclusive four-man event as an alternate, led only briefly, at the 15th hole, until the 17th when he rolled in a 12-foot birdie putt.

U.S. Open winner Lee Janzen, who lost to Woods on Tuesday, didn't take the lead until the 17th hole, but it was enough to earn a 1-up victory over Mark O'Meara.

In describing the round, Woods said, "It was a rough day. Conditions were awfully hard, very difficult, very demanding. You had to be very patient, execute the shots you had to execute and keep your patience.

"Today was one of those days if you lose your patience, you lose the match very quickly."

Singh still had an opportunity on the closing hole, a downwind 550-yard par 5, but his second shot bounced its way into the Pacific while Woods laid up.

"It was a pretty rough day," Singh said. "You had to try to pick right club and with the wind that strong, it was hard to keep your balance."

Club selection was a nightmare, he said.

"I had trouble quite a few times," he said. "For 160 yards upwind, I hit a 3-iron. And then downwind, I used a pitching wedge from 180 yards. It didn't make sense. But, like Tiger said, you had to be patient."

"It was just a matter of hanging in there," Woods said. "I knew I was going to make mistakes; I knew Vijay was going to make some mistakes.

"It was just that conditions were so rough that it was going to happen. I just had to hang in there, hang in there and hopefully make have couple of putts down the stretch.

"I made a couple. Unfortunately, I missed the one at 16, but I made the one on 17."

The win was worth $400,000, while Singh, the PGA Championship winner, collected $250,000.

It also made Woods the second alternate to win the $1 million tournament. Greg Norman, thanks to a double victory by Nick Price, won the 1994 Grand Slam.

Singh led for most of the championship match and was ahead by two when Woods conceded the 12th hole.

But Singh, the PGA Championship winner, then had three consecutive bogeys. Woods birdied the 427-yard 15th to go 1-up.

Woods gave back the advantage on the next hole when he bogeyed, but took the lead on the par-3 17th with his birdie putt as Singh's 25-foot effort hung on the lip of the cup.

In the third-place match, O'Meara, who won the Masters and British Open, built a two-hole lead with seven holes to play. However, he went bogey-bogey over the next two holes to square the match and then lost it on the 17th.

Vernon RJC features West Texans

Staff Report

VERNON — Vernon Regional Junior College is headed to the National Junior College Volleyball Tournament for the first time in history — with a roster that looks more like a Midland or Odessa College lineup.

Former Midland High standout Alicia Kirk, a freshman at VRJC, is one of the players with a West Texas connection on the team and she came up with a big game for the Lady Chaparrals (yes, Lady Chaps) in the finals of the District 3 title match over Redlands Community College, 15-8, 15-9, 11-15, 15-9.

Kirk went 16-for-16 with her serves and recorded one ace for 100 percent serving. She also had 17 playable passes on service receive and 11 block deflections and four block assists.

Only last spring, Kirk was playing softball with the Midland High Lady Bulldogs, a team that went to the region semifinals. She was also a member of the MHS volleyball team and she is playing both sports at Vernon.

But she isn't without company. She should feel right at home with the VRJC Lady Chaps since 11 players on the team have West Texas ties.

Tiffany Fowler and Kari Putman, both freshman, hail from Odessa Permian. Sophomore Prescilla Rampone is from Andrews. But that is only the start.

There are also sophomores Tiffany Garza of Snyder, Holly Davis of Fort Davis and Alysia Neill of Lubbock. Freshmen are Natalie Cardwell of San Angelo, Amber Counts of Water Valley and Shelley Reeder of Lubbock. And for good measure, throw in Krista Martin, a freshman from Hobbs, N.M. That's close enough to claim a West Texas tie.

There are only three other players on the team and two of them are from Chillicothe.

If Vernon coach Julie Myers can vault a team into the national tournament with the top end loaded with West Texas talent, a trend may start. Teams may be flocking to the West Texas area to find volleyball talent.

Kirk is finding out that you can leave home without even noticing. And it's also nice to be part of making history. Now, the national title will have to be the next historic step.

have was there."

And what about the close game against Trinity Valley — the perennial No. 1 team in junior college basketball?

"What I felt like after the game is that we should've won the game," said Jones. "We had a competitive game with them but our intensity level wasn't on a consistent basis.

"Naturally, you would like to see how you compare to the best team in the nation. But I felt we should've won the game. I feel this team has got a lot of potential. And I also know we're not where we need to be."

Phoenix College will be playing its first game of the season in this tournament and Jones expects the opponent to be up for this contest.

At 7:30 p.m. Friday, the Lady Chaps play Blinn College, a team that's been playing well lately, losing a close game to Grayson County and beat Weatherford and McLennan in a tournament.

The Lady Chaps then close out the tournament at 3 p.m. Saturday against Hill College, a team which Jones hasn't seen yet but is sure to evaluate during the tournament.

It's obvious that Jones and his Lady Chaps want to win but also get the focus to where the fifth-year coach wants his team to be at.

"We just want to learn and get better," Jones said.

The Lady Chaps, despite their success over the past four years, were not ranked in the the preseason JUCO women's poll, and they didn't even receive any votes. That's enough to get any coach or team anxious to do even better.

"I don't think that being ranked is a motivation as far as our games. It's disappointing that our program is not being respected the way I think it should be. I guess maybe it's because we're still new," Jones said. "The preseason poll is not like the regular season poll where the coaches are more involved. It's voted on by five board of directors."

Chap men look to bounce back from tough road trip

The Midland College men took a 16-hour road trip to the Barton County (Kan.) Cougar Classic this weekend. They might have come away with two losses but the tournament provided a great learning experience for coach Pat Rafferty's team.

"Barton County (a 77-72 loss) was really a good team. Barton will probably be ranked in the top 10," Rafferty said. "And Seward (a 74-70 loss) is another good team. They finished fifth in the national tournament a year ago and will probably be ranked among the top 25. That was good experience for our guys because they were like league games. Against Seward we were up by 11 at the half but we just left the game in the locker room."

What has killed the 3-3 Chaps has been turnovers in which they had 27 against Seward and 28 against Barton County.

"Right now we're our biggest opponent," Rafferty said. "We just have to get smarter and more purposeful with the ball."

The overall record for MC might not look as pretty as last year's 16-0 start but Rafferty is pleased with the way his team is learning against great competition.

"Nobody has ever won the league or qualified for the regional tournament in November and December, but the experience and the reference point we get now are going to pay off in January or February," Rafferty said. "Last year we won 16 games but we didn't play any tough games. This year's schedule is coming out the way I originally intended it to and that was to prepare ourselves come January and February. It may not look like it on the surface but we're doing a lot of things well."

The Chaps open the OC Classic at 6 p.m. Friday against Howard and then play AAU Taco Villa out of El Paso, at 6 p.m. Saturday.

"This is the best Howard team since I've been here and (Howard coach Tommy Collins) might even admit that," Rafferty said. "They're good, they're sound, they're versatile, and they just have every ingredient for a good basketball team. They've got a combination of returning players and some good freshmen.

"Howard will provide us with some adversities and we will provide Howard with some adversities. Howard is picked first in the coaches' poll. It will be a January, February type atmosphere."

MVP: Gonzalez wins again

break, creating speculation he would challenge the all-time single-season record of 190 set by Cubs outfielder Hack Wilson in 1930.

Gonzalez also hit a career-high .318 with 45 home runs, 110 runs scored and a league-leading 50 doubles. His batting exploits helped the Rangers win their second West Division championship.

"I'll remember most us winning the division title," said Gonzalez, who has played eight full seasons with the Rangers. "When you win the division, that's a great moment for the whole team and the whole organization. Then, 157 RBI was amazing. There's been a lot of years where nobody drove in more than 150 RBI."

Gonzalez said he was also proud of staying injury-free. This was the first time in four years that he did not spend time on the disabled list, allowing him to set a career high with 606 at-bats.

"He talked in spring training about playing every day," Oates said. "That's what I'm most excited about, his dedication and hard work being rewarded like this."

The voting was done by 28 baseball writers, two in each American League city. Ten players were named on each ballot. Gonzalez received 21 first-place and seven second-place votes for a total of 352 points.

COACH: NAACP speaks out

(From 1C)

Hampton president William Harvey said the university has contacted two attorneys. "No one in this country ought to be faced with this kind of degradation or harassment," he said.

Rose K. Wilson, president of the Lubbock chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said her organization plans to investigate the arrest.

"I believe race was a factor," Wilson said. "They were never charged but you take them downtown, hold them for four hours and then let them go. I don't believe a couple of white coaches would have been held for four hours. If they were not charged what were they doing downtown for so long?"

Lubbock police said they were investigating to see if this was a case of mistaken identity.

"But we clearly had a victim transported to the scene that said that without a doubt those were the people involved," Police Chief Ken Walker said.

Hester Elenita, a 43-year old woman who is identified in police reports as the alleged victim, declined to comment on the arrests. A man identifying himself as her husband called the arrest of the Hampton coaches "unfortunate."

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Tuesday: 1.3795 Swiss francs, up from 1.3755; 5.6213 French francs, up from 5.5998; 1,659.90 Italian lire, up from 1,652.50; and 1.5520 Canadian dollars, up from 1.5473.

Oil prices sink to near 12-year low

■ Belief OPEC won't make new output cuts sends futures prices close to 12-year lows.

N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Crude oil fell more than 2 percent to a five-month low after an Iranian official said it's unlikely the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries will announce new output cuts when it meets next week.

Cuts of 2.6 million barrels a day by OPEC this year were too small to eliminate a global supply glut that sent prices down 39 percent in the last 12 months. Mehdi Hosseini, Iran's deputy oil minister, said OPEC "has done its best" to prop up oil prices and probably won't cut more.

"OPEC countries are suffering, and they need to export as much as they can, even if it's cheap," said Gary Carney, crude oil buyer for Texaco Trading and Transportation at Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

December crude oil fell 31 cents, or 2.5 percent, to $12.14 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange, the lowest closing price since June 19.

Prices fell 12 percent in the last four days, approaching the 12-year low of $11.42 reached on June 15, as the likelihood of a U.S. military attack on Iraq diminished. On Saturday, Iraq agreed to resume cooperating with United Nations weapons inspectors. That averted a threatened U.S. attack that could have disrupted the country's oil exports, eliminating unwanted oil from the market.

The surplus is "just ugly, ugly, ugly," said Tom Bentz, senior vice president-energy at Cresvale International LLC in New York.

The chief executive of Mexico's state oil company, Adrian Lajous, said OPEC is more likely to extend its current oil production cuts, which amount to about 3.5 percent of world supply, for another six months until the end of 1999. Mexico isn't a member of OPEC, but it played a key role in engineering a series of output cuts by world oil producers.

Mexico is prepared to extend its cuts of 200,000 barrels a day until the end of next year, Lajous said.

Gasoline futures fell more than 2 percent to a five-year low after the API reported that U.S. inventories rose a greater-than-expected 3.5 million barrels, or 1.7 percent, last week to 205.6 million barrels.

Analysts expected the API report, which was issued after trading ended Tuesday, to show a gain of 400,000 barrels to 1.1 million barrels.

December gasoline fell 0.86 cent, or 2.3 percent, to 37.20 cents a gallon on the Nymex, the lowest closing price since December 1993.

U.S. retail gasoline prices already are at their lowest since March 1992, the American Automobile Association said yesterday. The national average price of self-serve regular unleaded gasoline fell 1.2 cents from mid-October to $1.055 a gallon, the AAA's said, leaving them almost 18 cents lower than a year ago.

"The more discord in OPEC, the more discounts for the consumer," said Michael Fogelberg, program director at Boston Oil Consumers Association, a 6,000-member heating oil buyers cooperative in Boston that purchases about 5 million gallons a year.

December heating oil fell 0.39 cent, or 1.1 percent, to 34.71 cents a gallon, the lowest closing price since Aug. 27.

Dow jumps above 9,000

Associated Press

NEW YORK — The Dow rose within 300 points of a new high, but most stocks fell Wednesday as the latest interest rate cut by the Federal Reserve left a bittersweet taste in the market.

The Dow Jones industrial average erased an early 29-point deficit and rose 54.83 to 9,041.11.

The blue-chip rebound also lifted broad-market indexes, with the Nasdaq composite rising 18.92 to 1,897.44.

But the market's overall mood, which produced a late pullback on Tuesday, remained rather subdued considering that the Fed had just lowered interest rates just a day earlier.

The Dow, now up 14.3 percent for the year, lost about 25 points on Tuesday despite an initial rally after Fed policymakers lowered the central bank's lending rates for the third time in less than two months.

The first two rate cuts, in late September and mid-October, were pivotal in sparking a 1,500-point rebound by the Dow. But there were mixed feelings about the Fed's most recent response to the instability that began gripping world economies and markets in August.

While the previous rate cuts have helped bolster the economy by loosening up the purse strings among jittery lenders and borrowers, the continued urgency of Fed policy suggested that the global backdrop may be worse than feared.

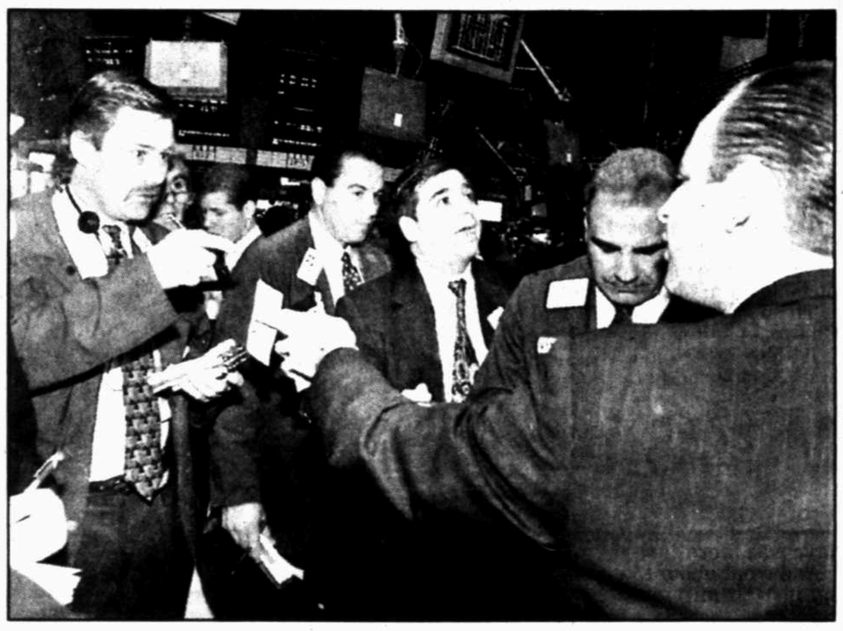

Furthermore, with inflationary pressures still looming, analysts said it's unlikely the Fed will risk fueling more demand with a fourth rate cut any time soon.

The Dow's advance was led by 3M, up 3 to 82 1/16, and American Express, up 2 to 102. But most of the day's standouts came, once again, from the technology arena.

America Online surged 8 1/2 to 83 7/8 and Netscape Communications rallied 10 to 39 1/4 after The Wall Street Journal reported that AOL may display a Netscape browser alongside or instead of its current Microsoft browser.

Declining issues outnumbered advancers by a slim margin on the New York Stock Exchange, where composite volume totaled 807.08 million shares.

The Standard & Poor's 500 rose 5.16 to 1,144.44, the NYSE composite index rose 2.44 to 563.46, and the American Stock Exchange composite index rose 0.96 to 667.85. The Russell 2000 index of smaller companies rose 2.69 to 391.12.

Trade deficit narrows in September

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A blip in aircraft exports temporarily narrowed the U.S. trade deficit in September. But economists warn the gap between what the nation sells overseas and buys will continue to grow, though perhaps not as rapidly as during the peak of Asia's financial crisis.

At $14 billion, the seasonally adjusted September difference between exports and imports was 11.7 percent lower than a revised record of $15.9 billion in August, the Commerce Department said Wednesday.

However, Lee Price, the department's chief economist, warned that a huge $2 billion increase in aircraft sales abroad, which more than accounted for the deficit decrease, "is not a permanent trend."

Other analysts said the trade gap is continuing to deteriorate, though not as fast as during the first half of the year.

"The trend is still toward worse, rather than better, even if we had one month where one of our leading export industries — aircraft — did well," said economist Bill Cheney of John Hancock in Boston. "Tradable goods industries are hurting and will go on hurting for a while."

Starting last summer, currency crises leveled a number of Asian economies and then Russia's and, until last week's $42 billion international rescue of Brazil, threatened Latin America.

To protect the U.S. economy from spillover from overseas recessions, the Federal Reserve cut short-term interest rates on Tuesday for the third time in less than two months.

Nevertheless, the crises have flattened many foreigners' ability to buy U.S. factory and farm products. At the same time, devalued currencies have given some countries a competitive edge in selling goods in the United States.

Despite the improvement between August and September, the deficit for the July-September quarter rose to a record $44.5 billion.

So far this year, the deficit in goods and services is running at an annual rate of $166 billion. That's 50 percent above last year's $110 billion imbalance and puts the imbalance on track to top the previous record of $153 billion, set in 1987.

In September, U.S. exports of goods and services rose 3.3 percent to $77.1 billion. But for the first nine months of the year, they were off 0.5 percent. Imports fell 0.2 percent to $91.2 billion but were up 4.8 percent for the first nine months.

In goods alone, the U.S. trade deficit with Pacific Rim countries soared 36 percent to $119 billion from January through September, compared with the same period a year earlier.

In September, the trade deficit with China fell just $6 million short of August's $5.91 billion record. But, with Japan, it declined to $5.07 billion from $5.2 billion the month before.

The deficit with Canada, America's largest trading partner, jumped 40 percent to $2.3 billion in September, highest since December 1996. Reflecting the end of the General Motors strikes, auto imports from Canada increased by $1.1 billion.

The deficit with Mexico fell to $1.45 billion, down 18 percent from a record $1.76 billion in August.

The increase in U.S. exports overall was the second in a row and came after four consecutive declines. Exports of civilian aircraft doubled to a record $4 billion.

Exports of agricultural products fell 8.6 percent to $3.3 billion, the lowest since July 1994.

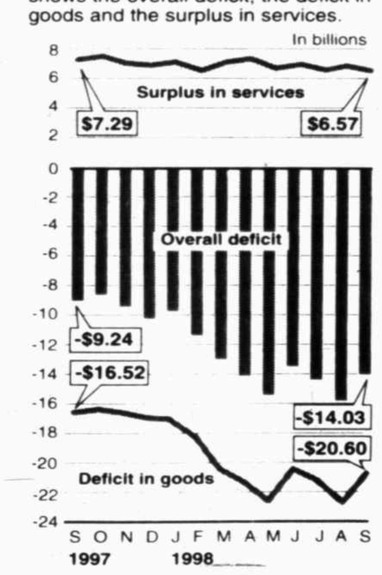

Meanwhile, imports of advanced technology products, including computers, rose to a record $14 billion. But oil imports fell 10 percent to $3.6 billion.

"That's clearly an aberration. Oil consumption in the United States is clearly on the rise," said economist James Glassman of Chase Securities Inc. in New York.

It reflected a decrease in volume to 8.23 million barrels a day from 9.32 million but an increase in price to $10.98 per barrel, compared with a 12-year low of $10.63 in August.

Microsoft says IBM recruited rivals against it

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Microsoft took the offensive Wednesday at its antitrust trial, accusing IBM of recruiting its largest rivals into a plan to cripple the software giant's influence.

The plan, the Microsoft attorneys contended, involved Java, a computer language that lets programmers write software that can run on many different operating systems — something Microsoft feared could make its dominant Windows operating system obsolete.

Microsoft is facing government accusations of participating in anticompetitive acts such as trying to bully a competitor into dividing the market for Internet software.

During cross-examination of IBM executive John Soyring, Microsoft attorneys introduced an August 1997 e-mail from IBM software executive John Thompson. The memo outlines projects involving Java that would "put Microsoft on the defensive." Among its recipients were Scott McNealy, chairman of Sun Microsystems, which created Java, and Jim Barksdale, chief executive officer of Microsoft's chief rival, Netscape Communication Corp.

In another e-mail from May 1998, IBM executive Rodney Smith wrote about how Sun and IBM could work together, writing: "The whole context for this meeting is a 'closer' joint working relationship to ensure we can win against Microsoft."

Microsoft attorney Steve Holley suggested that in addition to Sun and Netscape, IBM also invited executives from Oracle, Novell and Apple to join the efforts.

Recent election really just rearranged nation's deck chairs

By M. Ray Perryman

Whew! The past few days have seemed like a real shipwreck. Election tidal waves spanned the horizon from almost unheard of Democratic gains in the House in the "off-year" to the simultaneous pinning of two veterans of the political ring by Jesse "The Body" Ventura. Those who were expecting calm seas were greeted with an eruption of icebergs. In the wake of the result, the most prominent Republican in America has abandoned ship (or been thrown overboard) and swam back to the tranquil shores of the land of peaches and midnight in the garden of good and evil.

Perryman

Stepping back and assessing the carnage from the storm, however, reveals a very interesting sight. The Republicans lost a few seats, and their majority became razor thin. On the other hand, they changed captains and came up with a leader more likely to forge a consensus among the mutiny-minded crew. All things considered, it was pretty much a wash.

The Democrats, on the other hand, picked up a few seats and saw a much-maligned rival walk the plank. At the same time, they remain the minority party in both houses, have an embattled leader, and have just lost their favorite whipping boy. Again, when you add it all up, it doesn't amount to much.

Thus, while first reports had vessels cracking from bough to stern, a much different picture emerges now that the winds have died down. All we really did was rearrange a few deck chairs on the same old vessel. The results clearly show that folks were little concerned about the size of the advance the Speaker received from his latest "Tales of the Sea" or even what the President was doing in his opulent staterooms. Their focus is on — what else — the economy!

The electorate is seeking solutions to an unstable global economy that is jeopardizing the growth of their savings and retirement funds. Problems in Asia, Latin America, and Russia are making their way into mutual funds, 401(K)s, Individual Retirement Accounts, and company pensions. An era of unprecedented prosperity has ironically widened the gap between the rich and poor, and poverty and related social service needs must be balanced against increasing calls for fiscal responsibility. The long-term viability of the Social Security system is by no means assured as Baby Boomers approach retirement and program costs escalate. Healthcare costs and quality remain at the forefront of people's minds. Growth has slowed of late, and consumer confidence has waned. I don't think there'll be a recession anytime soon, but that opinion is certainly not unanimously held. People are tired of mindless rhetoric about what we are going to do with our imaginary budget surplus. They are ready for some answers.

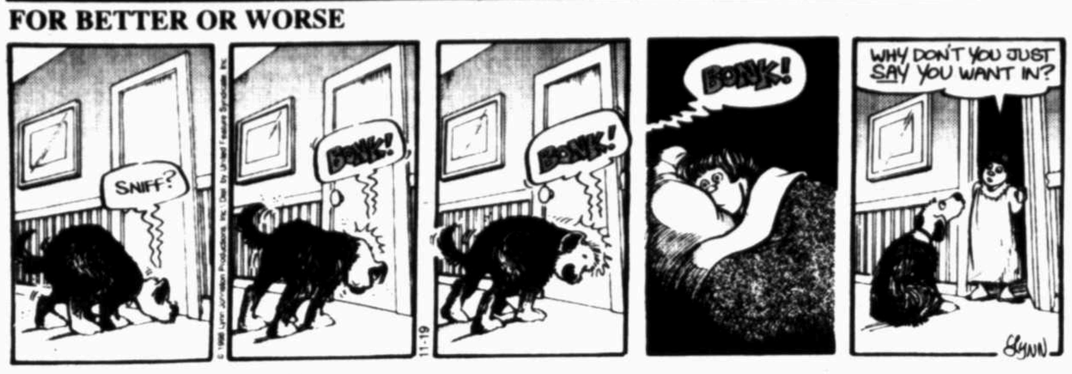

In summary, like the great computer-generated ship that sank with Leo, Kate, and Molly Brown, this latest voyage to the polls created a decent show. Minnesota's governor scored a major body slam, our own Texas governor emerged as the early favorite to be the next President (his brother did pretty well, also), and a prominent New Yorker went from the Senate to the house!

In the final analysis, though, this trek did not settle the issue of who will be at the helm as we sail off the map and into the next Millennium. That task will ultimately fall to the party with the ability to gaze at the stars, capture "the vision thing," and chart a bold, new course through troubled waters. If nothing else, our quest for the safety of the shore should be anything but boring. Ships' doctors and spin doctors alike should beware. Happy sailing!

The bidding:

Opening lead: King of ♠

How you play a specific suit depends on several factors, among them how many tricks you need from the suit and whether a particular opponent must be kept off lead. But sometimes the enemy can thwart your best efforts.

The auction was routine. That set the stage for an intriguing battle between South and West.

The Rule of Seven states that, by deducting the combined number of cards the declaring side holds in the suit led from seven, declarer arrives at the number of times a single stopper in the suit must be held up. Applying that rule, declarer refused the ace of spades for one round, winning the second.

South had five fast tricks in hand, so only four were needed from the diamond suit. Also, West had to be kept off lead at all costs. Since the odds favored a 4-2 diamond split, declarer led a diamond, intending to duck the trick to East. Had West routinely obeyed the dictum of second hand low, declarer would have inserted the eight and, with the expected diamond distribution, all would have been well as long as declarer did not risk the finesse when East shifted to a club. But West shot in with the jack of diamonds, and declarer was forced to go up with a high diamond. When that suit did not split evenly and South then elected to try the club finesse, the defense prevailed.

Yes, declarer could still have gotten home, but that does not detract from West's superb defense.

N. Ireland negotiators to be honored

BOSTON — Eight Northern Ireland negotiators will receive a special Profile in Courage Award from the John F. Kennedy Library for brokering the peace agreement.

The library said Wednesday it chose non-Americans for the first time to recognize "the extraordinary political courage demonstrated by the eight political leaders to bring about peace in Northern Ireland."

The eight are: David Trimble of the Ulster Unionist Party; John Hume of the Social Democratic and Labour Party; Gerry Adams of Sinn Fein; John Alderdice of the Alliance Party of Northern Ireland; David Ervine of the Progressive Unionist Party; Monica McWilliams of the Northern Ireland Women's Coalition; Gary McMichael of the Ulster Democratic Party; and Malachi Curran of the Northern Ireland Labour Party.

The awards, named after President Kennedy's Pulitzer Prize-winning book, will be presented Dec. 7.

PARIS — Screen idol Alain Delon lost a bid Wednesday to block publication of a biography.

A judge ruled that a ban imposed in August runs contrary to freedom of expression because the final contents of the book are uncertain.

The actor had won a temporary order against biographer Bernard Violet. Delon was also seeking about $70,000 in damages.

Delon, who has seen a synopsis of the book, accused the author of being a "spelunker of the garbage can" to get information. Among details from the synopsis published in a magazine were Delon's reported ties to shady politicians, mob figures and mercenaries.

Now 63, Delon was for decades a dashing leading man in dozens of movies, including "The Leopard" and "Rocco and his Brothers."

NEW YORK — Michael Moore's cameras can roll on city streets in a truce with Mayor Rudolph Giuliani.

The city on Tuesday lifted a ban blocking the "Roger and Me" director from taping a TV satire.

"I'm very happy they have reversed their position on this," Moore said. "I know once they stopped to think about the First Amendment implications, they would do the right thing."

Patricia Reed Scott, the head of Giuliani's film office, said she blocked Moore's project because she had misunderstood a court order requiring Moore to stay away from millionaire industrialist Ira Rennert.

Rennert is a target of one segment of Moore's Bravo channel show "The Awful Truth," which debuts in April.

PARIS — A French court Wednesday ordered a weekly magazine to pay $12,500 in damages to Princess Diana's bodyguard Trevor Rees-Jones for publishing an interview he says never took place.

The magazine, Voici, was also ordered to publish the ruling in its next issue.

At the time of publication in July, the magazine had every reason to believe the interview was authentic, Voici lawyer Luc Brossellet said.

"Perhaps, and I emphasize perhaps, we were misled," he said.

Brossellet wouldn't say where the interview came from.

Rees-Jones was the sole survivor of the 1997 crash that killed Diana, boyfriend Dodi Fayed and their driver.

OMAHA, Neb. — Jon Christensen is about to make the jump from bachelor congressman to married businessman.

The 35-year-old Nebraska Republican will be married Saturday to former Miss America Tara Dawn Holland in Mobile, Ala., her hometown.

Soon after leaving Congress in January, he will begin work in Omaha for a new firm that assists estate planning attorneys.

Christensen finished last against Lincoln Mayor Mike Johanns and state Auditor John Breslow in the May GOP primary for governor. Johanns ... as elected governor earlier this month.

During the primary campaign, Christensen, a Christian conservative, volunteered this about his fiancee: "She is a very disciplined woman who has saved herself for marriage."

HOW TO READ THE MARKET IN REVIEW

Here are the 1,675 most active stocks on the New York Stock Exchange, 925 most active on the Nasdaq National Market and 405 most active on the American Stock Exchange. Stocks in bold are worth at least $5 and changed 5 percent or more in price. Underlining for 50 most active on NYSE and Nasdaq and 25 most active on Amex. Tables show name, price and net change, and one to two additional fields rotated through the week, as follows:

Name: Stocks appear alphabetically by the company's full name (not its abbreviation). Names consisting of initials appear at the beginning of each letter's list.
Last: Price stock was trading at when exchange closed for the day.
Chg: Loss or gain for the day. No change indicated by ...
Tkr: The stock's ticker symbol.
How to use: The ticker symbol can help you get information about a company. Two important uses: Most services that provide stock quotes over the phone require the ticker symbol. Second, stock brokers and analysts can recognize stocks more easily with a ticker symbol.

Generally, ticker symbols resemble the company name although some – BUD for Anheuser Busch Cos. and FON for Sprint Corp. – are more related to what a company does. Tickers on the New York and Amex usually don't exceed three letters. On Nasdaq, they go up to five letters.

The names you see in this paper are abbreviations of the company name supplied by The Associated Press. Companies can help determine what their abbreviation will be. Overall, AP tries to use an abbreviation that will most closely match the full company name.

Stock Footnotes: cc – PE greater than 99. dd – Loss in last 12 mos. d – New 52-wk low during trading day. g – Dividend in Canadian $. Stock price in U.S. $. n – New issue in past 52 weeks. s – Split or stock dividend of 25 percent or more in last 52 weeks. Dividend begins with date of split or stock dividend. u – New 52-wk high during trading day. v – Trading halted on primary market. Unless noted, dividend rates are annual disbursements based on last declaration. pf – Preferred. pp – Holder owes installment(s) of purchase price. rt – Rights. un – Units. wd – When distributed. wi – When issued. wt – Warrants. ww – With warrants. xw – Without warrants.
