General amnesty approved in Poland

By MATTHEW C. VITA
Associated Press Writer

WARSAW, Poland — The Polish Parliament approved a general amnesty Saturday that included political prisoners jailed after the December 1981 military crackdown on Solidarity.

Lech Walesa, leader of the now outlawed Solidarity movement, said "the amnesty doesn't mean anything" without a return of free trade unions.

But Poland's Roman Catholic primate hailed the amnesty and there was immediate speculation that U.S. sanctions against Poland might be eased.

Polish leader Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski told a ceremonial session of Parliament the amnesty was a humanitarian gesture by the Communist government toward its opponents, but he warned that it would not change authorities' "severe judgement of anti-state activities."

Government officials said the amnesty would apply to 652 political prisoners jailed after the 1981 crackdown, including seven Solidarity leaders and four advisers charged with plotting to overthrow the Communist system.

The amnesty also would include underground Solidarity figures who present themselves to police before the end of the year and sign written statements pledging to stop their opposition activities, officials said.

Polish, opposition and Western diplomatic observers called the amnesty a significant conciliatory gesture by authorities.

The amnesty, which was approved by the Sejm, or Parliament, by a vote of 365 to four, with eight abstentions, also will cover nearly 35,000 of the 75,000 non-political prisoners, government spokesman Jerzy Urban said.

Walesa, contacted by telephone at his apartment in the Baltic port of Gdansk, said if all Solidarity activists were included in the amnesty it "certainly will be a step toward national agreement."

But he added, "Without (trade union) pluralism the amnesty doesn't mean anything.

"If such opportunities are not created, if people are not able to engage in activity within sensible limits, then within one month's time we'll have a similar situation and probably even more in prison than there are now."

Cardinal Jozef Glemp, who has attacked the continued detention of political prisoners, praised the parliament's action, according to an adviser to the Roman Catholic episcopate in Warsaw.

The amnesty raised the possibility of an easing of the U.S.-led Western sanctions imposed against Poland following the Dec. 13, 1981 imposition of martial law that suppressed Solidarity.

U.S. officials have made it clear the continued detentions of political prisoners are a central issue preventing improved U.S.-Polish relations.

Bankers see 'stabilization'

By RON GILMORE
Business-Oil Writer

While deposits at Midland banks are down $42.9 million from the previous quarter and $179.4 million from the second quarter 1983, local bankers are confident of what appears to be a stabilization of the industry.

Total deposits for the second quarter ending June 30 were more than $1.48 billion, compared to $1.66 billion one year ago. Total loans peaked at $787 million, an increase of $16.8 million from the previous quarter. As a result of the city's two bank failures, total loans are down more than $929.4 million from the same time one year ago.

After a stormy year of bank failures and FDIC acquisitions, confidence in the local economy appears to be growing.

"Things are back to a more normal business level," said Bill Franklin, president of First City National Bank of Midland. "I feel very good about this year and I think that next year will be even better," he said.

First City has seen a rise in deposits of more than $9 million and a $7.4 million drop in loans from last quarter.

"Nine million dollars may seem like a lot, but for a bank that is just normal fluctuation," said Franklin.

Other bankers also pointed out that the decline in deposits over the previous quarter is a seasonal fluctuation.

Franklin is not alone in his optimism for the local economy.

"We couldn't be happier," said Bill Parker, president of Western State Bank. "Midland's economy is extremely resilient."

Both Parker and Franklin compare today's economic situation to that of a pre-boom economy — that is, before the tumultuous expansion and growth of 1980-81. "If you use the boom era as a measure, you will always be a failure," said Franklin.

Dan Garlington, assistant vice president of RepublicBank Midland, agrees with Franklin.

"Things are getting back to an even keel and people are trying to get used to a pre-boom economy," he said.

An enlightening of Midland's business leaders is one reason for the upswing in the local financial arena, one banker said.

"Business leaders were caught unaware during the boom," said Elizabeth Harrell, vice president of Community National Bank. "Everyone rushed into things then, but today they are more conscious."

Tom Wageman, president of RepublicBank First National, sees the second quarter as a time of careful growth.

"We are in the process of building," he said. "Despite a drop in deposits, we saw a growth in total transaction business."

Deposits were down for five Midland banks and up for five others. First City National Bank, Western State Bank, United Bank, Midland American Bank and Community National Bank saw increases in deposits from the previous quarter. Showing a drop in deposits were RepublicBank First National, Texas American, ClayDesta, Security National and RepublicBank Midland.

Total loans decreased this quarter for FirstCity National, Texas American and RepublicBank Midland. The others showed an increase in loans for the first quarter of 1984.

County's DWI crackdown credited to jurors, citizens

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

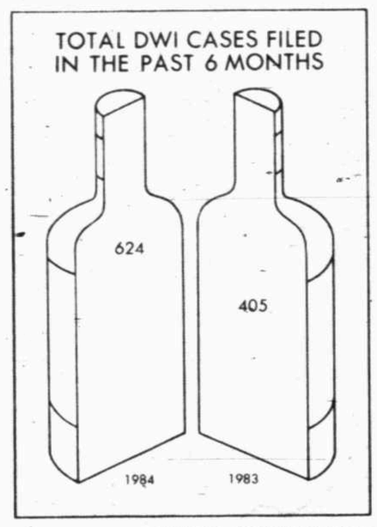
Officials say police and the public deserve the credit for a whopping hike in the number of misdemeanor DWI cases filed in Midland County during the first six months of 1984.

Figures show Midland's four law enforcement agencies filed a total of 624 DWI cases with the county attorney's office from Jan. 1 through June 30 — a 54 percent increase over the same period a year ago.

"Juries appear to be giving stiffer sentences lately," said Assistant County Attorney Mark Dettman. "Of the last two cases I personally tried, the defendants each got a year in jail.

"Jurors are saying that now is the time to put a stop to DWI. Since the new law went into effect Jan. 1, police are strictly enforcing it and we've seen a big increase in the number of cases filed with this office."

The new statute heightened police morale by raising the penalties for DWI convictions, mandating the videotaping of suspects and doing away with probation not being considered a final conviction. That change generally allows subsequent offenses to be tried as felonies.



Matt Holten/Reporter-Telegram

One felony case recently tried by the district attorney's office resulted in a jury sentencing the defendant to five years in prison. It was his third offense, none of them involving accidents or injuries.

Arrests by city police account for 425 of the 624 misdemeanor DWIs filed during the past six months. This represents a 228 percent increase over the same period in 1983.

The Department of Public Safety filed 97 cases from January through March this year. Figures through June have not been tabulated. But for the same three-month period in 1983 the DPS filed 81 cases, according to Capt. Tony White.

While the sheriff's department doesn't routinely work traffic — in the sense of writing tickets — they "do watch for hazardous motorists," said Capt. Richard Stratton, and deputies have made seven misdemeanor DWI arrests so far this year. The 1983 figure for the same period stood at 15.

Repeated requests for figures from Constable Tom McGinnis' office went unheeded.

You could call it Ferraro's party

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO — Walter Mondale is the standard bearer, but the 39th Democratic national convention will be remembered as the Geraldine Ferraro convention. Chose him, loved her.

It's hard to imagine what the convention might have been had Mondale tapped a Henry or a Lloyd or a Tom or any of the other men that were believed on his vice presidential shopping list. How do you measure spark?

This was a political party that had been holding nominating conventions ever since 1832 — and never considered a woman. It took 84 years for the Democrats even to recommend that women be allowed to vote "upon the same terms as men."

Where did it all go right, when it loomed so wrong?

The polls, after all, had consistently shown Ronald Reagan to be a clear favorite in November. Gary Hart would do better against the president than Mondale, the pollsters said, even though the former vice president had the delegates.

Mondale was beginning to look indecisive — not good for a presidential candidate — with his extended interviews, the call-backs, the emissary checks of possible campaign partners. He carried the loser's burden with Jimmy Carter. He was damned if he didn't pick a woman and damned if he did. Feminists threatened to promote a rival at the convention if his choice of running mate was a man; he would look as if he were knuckling under if it wasn't.

Then, as delegates were packing for their trip to San Francisco, he made his choice, picking the woman who figured strongest in speculation. Geraldine Ferraro, the three-term congresswoman from blue collar, mostly-white Queens, was in.

Oh, the joy. Not a news story, not a television report failed to use the word historic. The tidings swept away much of the gloom. President Reagan spoke about tokenism, but Democrats weren't listening.

Man's family to get $1.59 million

Settlement, sealed since June, stems from KOSA crash

From Staff and Wire Reports

The family of a Midland man killed in the KOSA-TV plane crash last November will receive at least $1.59 million over the next 30 years as part of a June court settlement, according to court records.

"We felt like it was a good settlement," Midland lawyer William Kerr Sr., who represents Gwen Price and her three children, said Friday. "It's income that can take care of the family through the years in a substantial manner."

Mrs. Price's 37-year-old husband, Jay; pilot Keith Elkin, and six KOSA-TV employees were killed Nov. 26, 1983, in the crash of a twin-engine Beechcraft near Midland Regional Airport.

The television station had chartered the plane from Texas Western Aviation for a trip to cover high school football playoffs. Texas Western and the plane's owner, Richard Gaddy, were named in the suit, filed June 7.

District Judge Pat Baskin approved the settlement the same day, according to court records. Baskin originally sealed the settlement at the request of the Price family.

The settlement was reached following negotiations that stretched over several weeks, Kerr said.

Los Angeles lawyer R.M. Kern, representing the defendants, said the settlement was not an admission of liability.

According to court records, the agreement called for Mrs. Price to receive immediate payment of $200,000 and another $150,000 in 2014. The widow also will receive annual payments of $30,000 a year for life.

In addition, her daughter Stacey Price, 15, will receive $200,000 in payments between 1987 and 2004. Shelley Price, 12, will receive $206,000 between 1989 and 2006, and Jay Michael Price, 7, $240,000 between 1995 and 2012.

"There were three minor children involved, and we settled the thing so they would be able to get well-educated if that's their wish," Kerr said.

All payments will be tax exempt, according to records. "That's one of the very attractive features of this type of settlement," Kerr said.

A National Transportation and Safety Board investigator has said the crash early Nov. 26, 1983, may have been caused when a passenger grabbed the controls as Elkin suffered a heart attack.

Fixx dies of heart attack while jogging

Associated Press

HARDWICK, Vt. — Jim Fixx, whose best-selling "The Complete Book of Running" helped push millions of people into sneakers and the jogging craze, collapsed and died of a heart attack while jogging in northern Vermont, authorities said Saturday. He was 52.

Jim Fixx

Fixx, a resident of Greenwich, Conn., collapsed Friday on Route 15 in this rural village and died immediately of a heart attack caused by serious heart disease, said Vermont's chief medical examiner, Dr. Eleanor McQuillen, who peformed an autopsy on Fixx Saturday morning.

His body was found by a passing motorcyclist at 5:30 p.m., police said, about 50 feet from the motel where he checked in an hour earlier.

Fixx's best-selling book on the mechanics of running was a huge success in the United States in 1978 and was translated into 12 languages. It earned him over $1 million, and put the former magazine editor — who used to smoke two packs a day and got into running when he hurt a leg — in great demand as a lecturer on running.

Fixx had been running near Caspian Lake, according to his second former wife, Alice Kasman Fixx, who said he ran 10 miles a day.

"He had serious heart disease affecting two major arteries to the heart. They were completely blocked off," Ms. McQuillen said.

She said Fixx apparently didn't have any warning signals that usuallly accompany a heart attack, such as severe chest pain, that he apparently didn't know of his condition and that he died immediately.

"A passing motorcylist discovered him laying alongside the road," Hardwick police Sgt. George Brierley said Saturday.

Brierley said that when he arrived passers-by were attempting to revive Fixx, but he said Fixx had no heartbeat.

He said Fixx was dressed only in a pair of jogging shorts "so we had no idea who he was."

He said when Fixx didn't return to the Village Motel for some time, authorities took photographs of the body and showed them to David Smith, owner of a lodge in nearby Greensboro and a friend of the author. He said Smith identified the dead person as Fixx. Smith said he later went to Copley Hospital in Morrisville to identify the body. Fixx was wearing a ring with his name inscribed on the inside, he said.

Pattie Dickson, a clerk at the motel, said Fixx had checked in around 4:30 p.m. Friday and asked her about local restaurants. She said she did not see him go out jogging.

According to Smith, Fixx was in Vermont for a vacation and had planned to spend August in a cottage on Caspian Lake. Smith said Fixx had been in Vermont last month for a two-day running workshop in Greensboro, where he was an "old-time summer resident."

Born James Fuller Fixx in Queens, New York, on April 23, 1932, Fixx studied at Indiana University and was graduated from Oberlin College in 1957.

After a brief tour as a $75-a-week reporter on the Sarasota (Fla.) Journal, Fixx became a feature editor for Saturday Review. He left that post in 1966 to become executive editor of McCall's Magazine.

He also served as a consulting editor to The New York Times and MBA Communications, and as managing editor of Horizon magazine from 1974 to 1976.

Fixx became a runner in 1967 by accident. He was a portly, two-pack-a-day smoker when he injured his leg, and tried running to get in shape. He started feeling better, younger, and went from 220 pounds to 159.

In 1980 he wrote "Jim Fixx's Second Book of Running." He wrote two other books before his first book on running, "Games for the Superintelligent" and "More Games for the Superintelligent."

In addition to John, Fixx is survived by three children by his first marriage to Mary Durling — Paul, Elizabeth and Stephen.

John Fixx said funeral services will be held Tuesday at St. Saviour's Church in Old Greenwich, Conn.

Hot, sunny weekend in Basin continues

From Staff and Wire Reports

Yet another hot sunny day with temperatures in the mid 90s is in store for the Permian Basin today, as the dog days of summer drone on.

Today will be sunny and hot, with a high in the mid 90s. Tonight's weather will be fair and mild, with a low in the low 70s and winds from the southeast at 10-15 mph, while Monday will be a repeat of today, with sunny skies and temperatures in the mid 90s, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Saturday's high of 96 was 7 degrees below the record for the date of 103, set in 1981, while the overnight low of 71 was 11 degrees above the 1961 record of 60.

STATE

Most of Texas was sunny and dry Saturday as a ridge of high pressure remained the key weather factor over the state.

Showers and thunderstorms were scattered over the mountains of far West Texas and thunderstorms were widely scattered over the Coastal Plains.

Afternoon winds were mostly from the southeast at 10 to 15 mph.

High temperatures were in the 90s over most of the state, with only a few locations along the Rio Grande reaching 100 degrees. The clouds and rain cooled temperatures in the mountains of West Texas into the upper 60s and lower 70s.

The National Weather Service was calling for isolated to widely scattered thunderstorms over the southern two thirds of the state this rest of this weekend. Otherwise, partly cloudy to fair skies were expected over the rest of the state.

Daytime temperatures will continue to be hot through Monday.

Lows were expected to range from the middle 60s in the Panhandle and the mountains of West Texas to near 80 at the coast.

Highs Sunday and Monday were expected to hit the middle and upper 90s over wide sections of the state. Forecasters said the mercury would top out near the 105-degree mark in the Big Bend region.

NATION

Thunderstorms dumping more than an inch of rain flooded roads in Phoenix, Ariz., on Saturday, while more showers pelted the sodden East Coast, leaving record rainfall in Lynchburg, Va.

Sunny skies prevailed across the Great Lakes and Ohio Valley to much of the Great Plains, where temperatures reached into the 90s. Hill City and Garden City, both in Kansas, had reached 99 degrees by mid-afternoon, while Pierre, S.D., reached 100 degrees.

The National Weather Service posted flash flood warnings in the Phoenix area, where 1.54 inches of rain had fallen. Area police agencies reported at least half a dozen roads closed.

BANKS

RepublicBank First National led the other banks with total deposits of $634 million and total loans of $263 million, despite a drop in deposits.

First City National was second with $400.3 million in deposits, an increase from $391 million in the first quarter. Loans totaled $265 million, down $7.4 million from the previous quarter. The bank saw a decrease of $3.6 million in deposits and $18 million in loans since second quarter 1983.

With deposits totaling $145.7 million and loans of more than $87 million, Texas American ranked third in both areas. The second quarter saw a decrease of $13.6 million in deposits for the bank and a $5.6 million decrease in total loans.

ClayDesta National Bank also had a drop in deposits of $779,350 in the second quarter.

Total deposits for ClayDesta dropped to $102.4 million (but were up $53 million from 1983), with an increase in total loans to more than $57 million.

That figure has more than doubled from this time last year, when loans reported were $22.8 million.

Western State Bank reached total deposits of $84.6 million and total loans of $68.4 million last quarter. That compares to a first quarter report of $77.9 million in total deposits and $62.2 million in loans.

Western, like ClayDesta, has shown a dramatic increase in total deposits and loans since second quarter 1983. At this time last year, Western reported $48.9 million in total deposits and $43 million in loans.

RepublicBank Midland had $57.5 million in deposits, a decrease of $2 million from the first quarter and up $11 million from second quarter 1983.

1.RepublicBank First National Midland succeeded failed First National Bank after the fourth quarter began, taking over that bank's deposits but not its loans. Republic has since purchased a small portion of FNB's loans and has begun making new loans of its own, as indicated in the table. As Republic First is a new bank, its condition cannot be accurately compared to that of its predecessor.

2.UnitedBank, formerly Mid-Cities National Bank, is successor to failed Metro Bank. It took over the old bank's deposits but not its loans, during the third quarter. It has since purchased some of the old bank's loans and begun making new loans of its own, as indicated in the table. However, UnitedBank's present condition cannot be accurately compared to that of its predecessor.

3.Community National Bank opened Jan. 3, 1984.

Matt Holten/Reporter-Telegram

Total loans net of discount were also fewer than the previous quarter, decreasing by $1.6 million to $11.8 million.

United Bank reported a $5.3 million rise in total deposits from last quarter, one of the highest percentage increases.

Deposits for this quarter were $29.6 million with loans of $12.7 million. United assumed the deposits but not the loans, of the failed Metro Bank last July, making loan and deposit comparisons between last year invalid.

Security National Bank remained relatively close to last quarter's report with a decrease of $747,659 in total deposits to $12.6 million. This is substantially higher than last year's report of $9.7 million.

Total loans have increased slightly to $9.89 million from last quarter's $9.85 million. That is an increase of $7.6 million from 1983.

Community National Bank, which opened Jan. 3, again showed substantial increases in total deposits and loans.

The bank reached $12.5 million in deposits, up $2.5 million from last quarter. Total loans were $4.7 million, up $1.9 million from second quarter.

Midland American Bank saw an increase in both deposits and loans this quarter. With $6.7 million in deposits, the bank saw a jump of $469,780 from last quarter and more than $2.9 million from this time last year. Loans increased $2 million from the previous quarter and $2.8 million from 1983.

PARTY

Ms. Ferraro said: "We will get him for that one. Right?"

Before the convention, Ms. Ferraro in tow, Mondale traveled to his boyhood town, Elmore, Minn., like a suitor bringing home his intended to show her off. The homefolks loved her. She was bright and perky. See, Mondale was saying, she comes from New York, but she's just like us.

Gerry — by now, it was Gerry — has a sense of humor and she used it. How had she, a liberal, been elected from the district in Queens where the fictional Archie Bunker espoused his male chauvinist-WASP views? "I'll tell you a secret," she said. "Archie didn't vote for me, Edith did."

On they went, to Lake Tahoe, Calif., to make convention plans. They took a leaf out of Ronald Reagan's campaign book, got up early, to be photographed with the runners carrying the Olympic torch.

But then a misstep. With cataclysmic bad timing, word leaked out — and Mondale confirmed — that Charles T. Manatt was being fired as chairman of the Democratic National Committee. This, on the eve of the convention that Manatt had brought to his home state.

Grassroots America knows little about party chairmen and cares less. But the man rumored to replace him, Bert Lance, still evokes passions. Lance was the Georgia buddy who helped Jimmy Carter get into the White House, who became his budget director, and who had to leave because of questionable banking practices in his past.

Facing a revolt, Mondale backed down. Manatt could keep his job. Bert Lance would be the general chairman of the Mondale campaign.

On to San Francisco.

At Moscone Center, named for a mayor who was assassinated, police created a modern-day moat. A block square parking lot facing the underground auditorium was made into a demilitarized zone. Demonstrators were to be kept hundreds of yards away from the center. They showed up by the tens of thousands the day before the convention opened. Delegates were hardly aware of their presence.

Mario Cuomo, the governor New York had the task of pumping life into the convention, and he did. The perfect keynoter.

Cuomo delivered a masterpiece with a theme dating back to the New Deal days of Franklin Roosevelt. "The difference between Democrats and Republicans has always been measured in courage and confidence," he said. "The Republicans believe that the wagon train will not make it to the frontier unless some of the old, some of the young and some of the weak are left behind by the side of the trail."

The Democrats did it before, he said, "and Democrats can do it again."

In the privacy of hotel suites, Mondale, Hart, Jesse Jackson and their aides negotiated. There were platform differences Tuesday that could make unity impossible; they were worked out.

The party statement that was created is tailor-made to Mondale's candidacy but it borrows heavily from Hart and to a lesser extent, Jackson. It's a non-specific, traditional statement of Democratic themes, goals and promises. Unlike other Democratic platforms, it doesnt endorse specific job programs, national health insurance or the kind of big domestic spending programs Democrats are famous for.

Only Ronald Reagan really is attacked by it.

DWI

The videotaping of DWI suspects is thought to be largely responsible for roughly 99 percent of the defendants pleading guilty and saving taxpayers the expense of trials.

The other one percent either were tried by juries or a judge in the county court system, according to Dettman. The county attorney office's dismissal and charge reduction rate is running at about five percent.

"The main reason for dismissing a case or reducing it to public intoxication is insufficient evidence," said Dettman. "We sometimes can't definitely place a driver behind the wheel.

"Say he hits a tree and is walking down the road when police arrive. Even if he admits he was driving, the law requires more than just his oral statement.

"There are also cases where the videotape doesn't show the driver to be drunk. We'd have a hard time convincing a jury he was intoxicated.

"In addition, there are some rare cases where the defendant is sentenced to prison on an unrelated criminal charge."

Overall, both Chief of Police Wayne Gideon and Mothers Against Drunk Drivers spokeswoman Cynthia Grubb are happy with the results of the DWI crackdown, although Ms. Grubb has some reservations about one particular case.

"I'm basically pleased with the disposition of the cases by the county attorney's office," said Gideon. "I'm also encouraged by the new law and the fact that the general attitude of the public toward DWI is changing."

Said Ms. Grubb: "We are delighted with the increased number of cases filed. And — in general — we're pleased with the dispostion of them by the county attorney's office. But we'd like to see even fewer cases dismissed or reduced.

"There was one case of an individual hitting a mailbox. He was three times over the legal limit for driving, but the case was reduced to public intoxication — even though a witness saw him get out of the car. I can't get a satisfactory answer as to why."

According to Dettman, the reason the case was reduced is that "one of our new assistants didn't think there was enough evidence to put the driver behind the wheel — even though there was. It was simply a mistake."

Search continues for Andrews teen-ager

PAGOSA SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — The search for a 15-year-old Texas boy, described as "an excellent backpacker," continued in a remote, mountainous area 20 miles north of here Saturday, aided by an Army helicopter from Fort Carson.

"We're just re-searching the area with teams and dogs to determine for sure he is or is not in the area," said Hinsdale County sheriff's deputy Ed Toner.

Chris Harvey of Andrews, Texas, disappeared on July 11 near the trailer vacation home of his family at the edge of the San Juan National Forest.

Harvey, described to authorities as "an excellent backpacker," was wearing a tan-checked, long-sleeved shirt, jeans and tennis shoes when last seen, Toner said.

The youth was not carrying any backpacking or other survival equipment when he disappeared, Toner added.

Hinsdale County straddles the Continental Divide in southern Colorado. The search was being concentrated in the rugged San Juan Mountains, a branch of the Rockies.

Hinsdale County Sheriff Burt Smith said the likelihood of Chris' survival diminished daily. 'It's possible," Smith said. "We've known it to happen with other youngsters."

Toner, who lives in the mountainous area, said the mercury dipped to 40 degrees on Thursday night but added that Friday night was much warmer.

The Army Chinook helicopter joined the search on Saturday morning, Toner said, and flyovers were planned throughout the day.

Jim Harvey, the boy's father, was at the search headquarters on Saturday, Toner said.

Chris is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kingman of Albuquerque.

FBI releases videotape of helicopter robbers

VALLEY VIEW (AP) — The FBI released a videotape Saturday of four men who robbed a rural Texas bank and fled in a helicopter with another suspect after the daring daylight heist.

The robbery of the Valley View National Bank was strikingly similar to the holdup Feb. 15 of a Leesville, La., bank that was not equipped with cameras, and investigators say they believe the five bandits Friday were the same ones who took $163,000 from the Louisiana bank.

An FBI agent said he expected the videotape to be compared to composite sketches that were made of the Lousiana robbers. "I would assume that's going to be done," said FBI agent Joe Gray.

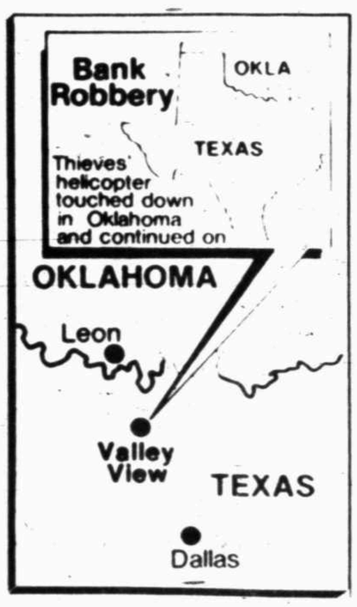
Investigators say that the five bandits swooped down on a pasture near the small Valley View bank about 9:30 a.m. Friday and robbed it of an undisclosed amount of cash without firing a shot from their automatic weapons.

The Bell LongRanger helicopter — which was stolen Thursday night in Galveston — was spotted later near Leon, Okla., where the robbers dumped some empty cash boxes.

Gray said that the search for the robbers had spread across several states, but he declined to discuss any possible leads.

The helicopters in both robberies were stolen from Scholes Field in Galveston. The helicopter used in the Leesville robbery was recovered six days later from Catoosa, Okla., near Tulsa.

The FBI said it was apparently the first time bank robbers had used a helicopter as a getaway vehicle. And the Leesville robbery became an instant legend.



Within hours of the holdup, two young entrepreneurs were selling T-shirts, proclaiming "I Survived The Leesville Bank Robbery." The logo circled a picture of a swooping helicopter.

There were also reports that the robbers barely missed intercepting a $12 million payroll for the nearby Army base at Fort Polk, but the armored car was late.

Ex-policewoman rehired to be mayor's secretary

PASADENA (AP) — A former policewoman who had to leave her job because she married a fellow officer says getting her new secretarial position was "an extremely happy ending."

Gail Kello, 31, handed in her badge Thursday to the Pasadena Police Department after marrying patrolman Larry Kello, 36, the night before. The marriage put the couple in violation of a Pasadena Civil Service rule prohibiting married couples from working in the police department.

But Ms. Kello, was off the job only one day when Mayor Johnny Isbell hired her as his secretary.

Ms. Kello, formerly Gail Mahaffey, said Isbell and her former boss, Pasadena Police Chief David Mullican, came up with the job offer Friday.

"I have been a police officer for seven years. It's hard to do anything else — especially when you don't want to — but I am thankful for the job," she said Friday.

The couple had postponed their wedding for more than a year as they challenged the rule, which was upheld by U.S. District Judge Norman Black on Wednesday.

Dallas preens itself for big GOP party

By CANDICE HUGHES

DALLAS (AP) — Image-conscious Dallas is anticipating the Republican National Convention like a nervous hostess getting ready for her first big party — preening for guests and girding against gate crashers.

Convention planners expect at least 25,000 to 30,000 visitors — almost half of them members of the news media — to converge on Dallas for the city's first national political convention.

President Reagan is coming, of course, and so is Vice President George Bush. Opera star Luciano Pavarotti will be here, and so will the Moral Majority's Rev. Jerry Falwell.

Dallas will play host to 2,235 delegates, an equal number of alternates, about 500 people referred to as "party dignitaries" and at least 13,000 representatives of news organizations.

And then there are the others, the uninvited guests. William Simmons, coordinator of the Dallas March and Rally Committee, says the protest group coalition hopes to attract between 5,000 and 10,000 "counter-conventioneers."

The coalition, he said, has invited the Rev. Jesse Jackson, Dr. Benjamin Spock, activist Angela Davis and others to various events that delegates won't find on their official programs.

Fred Meyer, chairman of the local welcoming committee, says the protesters won't be local people, as were many at the Democratic National Convention in San Francisco.

"We don't grow those kinds of people here," he said. "That's not our style. Philosophically, this area is 70 percent conservative."

Texas plays an important role in presidential politics; no candidate in modern times has won a presidential election without carrying the state. And Dallas, the nation's seventh-largest city, is the home of former Gov. Bill Clements, a staunch Reagan supporter and the only Republican governor of Texas since Reconstruction.

The city has been anxiously sprucing up for months. A civic clean-up drive began with junk cars in February, moved on to litter and climaxed with a war on weeds.

A 20-block area along Young Street, which links the convention center and the official convention hotel, is being turned into an elaborately landscaped boulevard.

The style that the city seems ready to project is a mixture of the cowboy and the cosmopolitan.

Visitors to Dallas will be able to indulge in everything from the $300-a-person charity Polo Ball to prayer meetings. Tours are available that retrace the last trip of former President John F. Kennedy — he was assassinated here in 1963 — as are trips to art museums or the South-fork Ranch, home of television's Ewing family.

Local Republicans, who have said that almost every delegate and alternate will be entertained in a private home, have been vying for the services of fashionable caterers. The New York delegation will be treated to an evening at Billy Bob's, a cavernous "cowboy" honky tonk in Fort Worth.

"There wasn't much point in taking people from Oklahoma there," Meyer said.

Dallas set out to be the only city to host a national political convention without spending local tax money.

An ambitious fund-raising effort so far has raised more than $3 million from private sources. Nearly $600,000 was pledged at a single meeting of wealthy local businessmen recently.

Conventions spokesman Gary Hoitsma said another $8 million in federal funds will be spent by the Republican Party.

The biggest headache, he said, is preparing the convention hall.

Inside the Dallas Convention Center, work crews on Tuesday began the task of filling 200,000 square feet of empty exhibition space with a podium, seating for more 4,000 delegates and alternates and 18,000 guests, and a new lighting and sound system.

Outside the convention center, a controversial 6-foot chain link fence to keep protesters at bay is going up. The Dallas March and Rally Committee has sued the city, saying the fence violates constitutional free speech guarantees.

To some, the fence represents an excessive concern with order and the city's image.

Leland will lead black caucus

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Rep. Mickey Leland, D-Houston, has regained a seat on the Democratic National Committee, where he will lead the committee's black caucus.

Party chairman Charles Manatt designated Leland on Friday to take one of two places Manatt held as chairman and committee member from California.

Manatt put Leland on the committee after Manatt and other committee officers were reelected unanimously with Mondale's support.

Leland, who had supported Walter Mondale for the party's presidential nomination, was beaten for reelection by State Rep. Al Edwards, a supporter of the Rev. Jesse Jackson, at last month's state party convention.

Party officials said midway through the Democratic National Convention last week that the Mondale campaign planned to replace three members of the committee. San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros was to be one of the planned new appointees.

Asked why that plan was dropped, a Mondale strategist told The Dallas Morning News, "because we don't want to bother with it."

Fort Worth gang led by 16-year-old

FORT WORTH (AP) — A gang of teen-agers, driven around town by a 52-year-old man while they looked for people to rob, was actually led by the youngest member of the group, a 16-year old boy, police say.

"Suprisingly, the youngest took control and dictated what was to be done," Lt. Ray Armand said. "He was the most aggressive of the bunch."

The gang is suspected of robbing at least eight people on Fort Worth's east side since late April and with killing Steven McClure, a truck mechanic who had stopped for gas at a convenience store, in June.

Capital murder charges were filed Friday against David W. Reed, 52; Michael Cousin, 17; William Shelby, 17; and James Hawkins, 18.

A fourth teen-ager, who was 16 at the time of the June 20 slaying, is being held by police in the West Texas town of Muleshoe, in Bailey County. He is believed to have been the one who actually shot McClure.

Reed, nicknamed "Uncle," picked up the group and drove them around town in his gold Cadillac, but the 16-year-old apparently was the ringleader, Armand said.

"They started out stealing beer from convelence stores, grabbing purses and finally advanced into robbery and assault," Armand said. "In some cases, they terrorized individuals with threats of retaliation if they called police. The individuals feared for their lives and safety so never called."

The gang had one gun that they used to frighten their victims, Armand said, and the gun was usually left in the car unless it was needed to scare the victim.

"When they confronted McClure, he stood his ground," Armand said. "They had to either run or stand up to him, so they shot him."

State Board of Education worries about interpretation of reform bill

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Board of Education did a quick turnaround on standards for spending money on recently mandated school reforms after discovering that an earlier vote might cost taxpayers hundreds of thousands of dollars.

The 27-member elected body, which will soon be replaced by a 15-member appointed board, spent most of the day worrying over explanations and interpretations of the $2.8 billion public school reform measure approved by this summer's special legislative session.

A $4.6 billion tax bill was passed to pay for it and highway improvement over the next three years.

The board's decisions on how the bill should be implemented will be passed on to local school officials in workshops throughout the state next week.

The board members were reminded several times Saturday that the bill — which Gov. Mark White said would lift Texas "from the back of the pack to the top of the class" — also would bring increased local taxes.

Most of Saturday morning was spent setting a guideline on how much of the additional money voted by the Legislature for educationally disadvantaged students should be spent on administrative expense.

By a 17-1 vote, the board approved one interpretation that would mandate spending 90 percent of compensatory allotment for training educationally handicapped students strictly for instructional uses. The Texas Education Agency had recommended a cap of 35 percent for administrative expenses.

Board member Ruben Hinojosa of Mercedes, said some schools used only 2 to 9 percent of the extra money now for administration.

But Education Commissioner Raymon Bynum said the 35 percent was clearly the intent of the Legislature, although the figure was not written into the bill.

And after a 10-minute coffee break, Mary Ann Leveridge of East Bernard moved that the previous vote be voided because she said she was informed the decrease in use of state funds for administration would cause school boards to raise local taxes to pay for the added costs.

"I am very opposed to that," she said.

TEA Deputy Commissioner William Kirby said she was right, and used the Lubbock school district as an example. He said the district was getting $2.8 million more under the new school bill but it also would have to pay about $814,000 additionally for the "career ladder" teacher promotion plan.

The Lubbock district would get about $2.5 million in compensatory education funds for the disadvantaged, but if it had to use 90 percent for classroom use only, it could increase the local fund responsbility by $600,000, which could cause higher property taxes, Kirby said.

"There is nothing that requires these local schools to raise taxes in this bill," said Will Davis, Austin attorney and board member. "This bill increases the compensatory education funds to local schools.

Tax incentive policy truly out of this world

HOUSTON (AP) — A new tax-incentive policy designed to encourage businesss to invest in space will stimulate advances in technology and will help put private space investors "on an equal footing" with their Earth-bound counterparts, a space agency official said.

Previously, companies that it difficult to raise capital for space-based ventures because of the risk and length of time involved, said L.J. "Bud" Evans Jr., director of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's commercialization task force.

President Reagan announced the new policy in a White House ceremony commemorating the July 20, 1969 moon landing by Apollo 11 crew member Neil A. Armstrong, Edwin "Buzz" Aldrin and Michael Collins.

Evans said federal officials, including Reagan, have met with industry leaders to discuss the possibilities of private investment in space activities.

"I think there's an increased interest on the part of Wall Street. They did feel space business was at a disadvantage," Evans said at a Washington press conference that was televised closed-circuit to reporters at Johnson Space Center near Houston and other NASA facilities.

Evans said the new policy will eliminate some "tax discrimination" laws and regulations that slow space development and make it difficult for companies to protect trade secrets.

Currently, products made in space are treated as imports under tax laws.

"We're not looking for special privileges," Evans said of NASA's desire to lure private investors. He said the only proposal that Reagan vetoed for the policy was one asking for government-guaranteed loans and tax exempt debentures for corporations.

Surgeon designs lens for use in cataract surgery

HOUSTON (AP) — A California eye surgeon says a soft plastic implant lens he designed may some day make cataract surgery easier, quicker and safer.

Dr. Thomas R. Mazzocco, an opthalmology professor at the University of California in San Francisco, said the new lens is more compatible with the human eye and is easier to insert surgically.

"It's called the Elastic Lens — and it's working wonderfully," Mazzocco said Friday at an ocular surgery seminar in Houston.

The Elastic Lens is easier to sterilize and squeeze through small incisions because of its pliablity, said Mazzocco, who has a private practice in Van Nuys, Calif.

"I began thinking about this type of compressible lens that would fit through the same wound made in the eye to extract the natural cataract several years ago," he said. A private company was formed to make and market the lens.

The lens can be folded in half and inserted into the eye incision and is used for phacoemulsificaition, a process in which cataracts are ultrasonically cut up and sucked out, Mazzocco said.

"We can do both through a one-eighth inch incision now instead of having to create a larger wound to perform the older type of lens implant," he said. "Actually, it only takes one stitch to sew up this incision."

Mazzocco said the smaller incision enables a shorter, safer operation and a quickerr recovery.

'Power to destroy' colors dispute between Texas, federal government

By BILL KIDD

AUSTIN — "The power to tax," Supreme Court Justice John Marshall wrote in 1819, "involves the power to destroy."

That idea is well understood by governments and underlies the ongoing dispute between Texas, other states and the federal government over bonds and their tax status.

Gov. Mark White recently expressed "great disappointment and concern" over federal legislation limiting the annual amount of industrial revenue bonds which states may issue.

White said, and other state officials have agreed, that the cap on tax-exempt bond issues would restrict the ability of state and local governments to finance "infrastructure needed for economic development."

The problem is more severe for Texas than for some other states, White said, because of the rate of growth occurring in Texas.

Limiting bond issues "will curtail our ability to respond effectively to our needs at the state and local levels," White argued. "I think," he added, "it's bad for Texas."

Under the cap, Texas will be limited to around $2.2 billion a year for tax-exempt industrial revenue bonds.

Because of the way the law has been set up, state officials said there won't be a problem in 1984.

But 1985 may be another matter. There remains some uncertainty among state officials and among officials in the bond industry as to exactly what the impacts will be because of uncertainties over the final language and associated regulations.

However, there is a consensus that the effects for Texas won't be helpful and could be quite harmful.

White, in expressing his unhappiness, said the restrictions could limit a number of "distinctly public purposes."

Among those purposes, White said, are water supply and development, wastewater treatment, sewage and solid waste disposal, pollution control, power generation "and even needy college student financial aid."

White's office is still trying to get clarification on just what the states must do under the legislation but a spokesman said the 1985 Legislature will be required to approve a plan for allocating bond-issuing authority among state and local governmental issuers.

The reason for the legislation, officials said, was supposedly to stem the loss of federal tax revenues from investment in tax-exempt bonds by investors wanting to shelter some of their income.

But officials said they believe that the legislation also reflects long-standing opposition by the U.S. Treasury department to tax-exempt bonds, of any variety.

One attorney reported research efforts indicating at least half a century of unhappiness by the Treasury. "They don't think there should be any tax exemptions, period," he said.

White's aides said they argued with Treasury officials about the legislation and with members of Congress and the Reagan administraion about Texas' needs, including the needs of river authorities, which have some $5-6 billion in industrial revenue bonds for pollution control, power and water development and treatment projects.

"They told us," an aide said, "they wanted to crack down on some abuses...We told them there was no reason to crack on the entire program...we haven't been doing what they're talking about."

None of the problems cited, the aide added, were from Texas, which has "more stringent public purpose requirements" than some other states.

"We told them," the aide commented, " 'Look, we don't have the pizza parlors; we don't have the massage parlors'...It didn't seem to make any difference."

Texas and other states already have been involved in a dispute with Treasury over requirements that municipal bonds be issued in "registry" rather than "bearer" form.

Bearer bonds are owned by the person in possession of them (the bearer); registry bonds name the owner.

Treasury officials argue bearer bonds have been used by criminals such as drug dealers to shelter illegal income.

Texas and other states, in a case now pending before the U.S. Supreme Court, argue it costs issuers, including states and local governments, more to issue bonds in registry form than in bearer form.

More important, they say, it violates a fundamental constitutional principle: That one unit of government cannot tax another unit of government, which is what Treasury is really doing.

They don't think John Marshall would approve and hope his successors feel likewise.

Mondale accuses Reagan of secret plan to raise taxes

GRAND MARAIS, Minn. (AP) — Walter F. Mondale on Saturday accused the Reagan administration of concealing a secret plan to raise taxes after the fall election campaign.

Beginning a five-day fishing vacation, the Democratic presidential candidate also said that if he is elected, he would have to make additional cuts in domestic programs because of huge federal deficits accumulating during President Reagan's first term.

Of the likely administration tax increases, Mondale said: "They don't want the American people to see it because it will be above all an unfair program that will sock the taxes to average Americans, who got no relief the first time around, and cut programs such as Social Security..."

As evidence for what he called "a secret plan that they will announce after the campaign," Mondale cited indications by Treasury Secretary Donald Regan that the administration is studying either a national sales tax or a flat income tax to be proposed to Congress if Reagan is re-elected.

"No wonder they don't want to tell people," Mondale said.

"I demand again that Mr. Reagan table his plan. Let's not have any secret, sour surprises after the election. Let's talk about it right now," he added, repeating his call for a debate with the president before the November election.

Asked about Mondale's charges, White House assistant press secretary Robin Gray noted that deputy press secretary Larry Speakes had responded to similar accusations on Friday.

While Mondale fishes, Ferraro goes shopping

AP Laserphoto

Democratic Vice Presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro is greeted by her mother, Antonetta Ferraro, after arriving at La Guardia Airport in New York City Friday night.

NEW YORK (AP) — Now a part of political history, vice presidential nominee Geraldine Ferraro was back home in Queens, shopping and relaxing Saturday before assuming her role as the sparkplug of Walter Mondale's presidential campaign

Less than 12 hours after returning home from San Francisco and her landmark nomination at the Democratic National Convention, Ms. Ferraro, now with an entourage of aides, Secret Service agents and reporters, motorcaded to a nearby supermarket.

She pushed the cart and her millionaire husband John Zaccaro paid the $119.13 bill at the checkout stand.

"I'm not going to do this every week with you guys," she told reporters. "You're going to lose votes for me.

"Do you see their faces?" she said pointing to other shoppers. "They want to do their shopping."

She was keeping to her plans for the weekend during which she said she would "spend a little time unpacking, get some wash sent out, probably doing a little bit of food shopping and then relaxing until Monday."

Before leaving San Francisco, she positioned herself as the tough campaigner, challenging Vice President George Bush to a debate.

"I think the American people ought to know if I'm substantive...I'd like to invite George Bush to debate."

As for ground rules, "Anyway he wants, I want to meet George Bush," she said.

She also emphasized that she is more than a symbol, telling a Democratic audience President Reagan "has referred to me as a token; we'll get him for that one. Right?"

Over the weekend, it will be Ms. Ferraro, the daughter of Italian Roman Catholic immigrants with the close-knit family and an average working mother from Queens.

Mondale campaign strategists say that while Ms. Ferraro's exact role is evolving, one of the messages she will carry is that of strong family values.

Both Mondale and Ms. Ferraro will "focus on the basic American values they bring to this campaign," said Mondale campaign chairman James Johnson.

Ms. Ferraro's 79-year old mother, Antonetta, presented her daughter with a hug, a kiss and a bouquet of red roses upon her return from San Francisco.

She was expected to make her regular appearance at Mass on Sunday.

Then the scene and the message will shift with a trip to Washington, expected Tuesday.

In the nation's capital, she will b Rep. Ferraro, attending to legisla tive business and seeking to build vice presidential campaign staff.

"I still am a member of Congress," she said Friday night. "I'll be doin some work Tuesday and Wednesday in Washington and then we start th campaign."

Democratic Party professionals look at her candid, breezy, brash style and winning smile as a way to ignite the campaign for the White House.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., one of her earliest major supporters, recalled a Capito Hill luncheon meeting with Mon dale.

"I told him I thought we needed spark," O'Neill said. "And I told him at that particular time that Gera dine would be a helluva candidate That I thought that the time ha come for a woman and everythin in poilitics is timing."

"I think Gerry has given us th spark...to get an enthusiasm rollin out there," O'Neill added.

O'Neill has prodded Mondale sometimes publicly, to run an active aggressive campaign, and he sai Ms. Ferraro will be more than stage prop.

"She'll speak up to Mondale an she'll tell Mondale a thing or tw along the way," O'Neill said.

Reagan moves to regain offensive

WASHINGTON (AP) — After a week-long thrashing at the hands of the Democrats, President Reagan is moving quickly to regain the political offensive with a prime-time news conference and a campaign trip designed to show that he's conceding no region to Walter F. Mondale.

With a prediction by Edward J. Rollins, director of Reagan-Bush '84, that the president can lose his re-election bid only "if we really screw up badly," Reagan is scheduled to leave Wednesday for campaign events in three key strategic states: Texas, Georgia and New Jersey.

That trip will follow a press conference Tuesday night which almost certainly will be dominated by political questions, giving Reagan his first real chance to match the rhetoric of Democrats.

The political journey, for which Reagan's re-election committee will pay, was put together hastily as it became clear last week that Democrats would emerge from their convention in harmony.

"It's just a loud and clear message of the kind of campaign we want to conduct and the kind of voter we want to go after," Rollins said in a recent interview with The Associated Press.

Even though Reagan leads handily in most public opinion polls, his campaign foray is a recognition that the Democrats gained ground last week.

"If Mondale had had a miserable week and this convention would have been as catastrophic as we all hoped it would be...Mondale never would have been in this race," Rollins asserted.

Instead, he said, the convention ended on a note so positive that Democratic activists are likely to be thinking they have a chance to close the gap if they work hard.

Even so, Rollins' belief that the race is Reagan's to lose is shared by many Republicans, including Lyn Nofziger, a consultant to the re-election committee, who flatly predicted Mondale could do nothing positive to win.

Vice President George Bush is preceding Reagan, hitting the campaign trail Tuesday with a visit to four cities in Texas, his home state. His tour will conclude Wednesday.

Mourners jam service for massacre victims

SAN YSIDRO, Calif. (AP) — The 21 victims of the McDonald's restaurant massacre were commended to "the embrace of a merciful and loving God" Saturday as sobbing relatives and more than 1,000 other mourners, including the killer's widow, jammed a memorial service.

An overflow crowd filled the aisles and lined the walls of the 800-seat Our Lady of Mount Carmel Church. Hundreds more stood outside during the service, which doubled as a funeral for six of the victims.

"This is about the saddest community in the United States," the Rev. Leo T. Maher, the Bishop of San Diego, told reporters afterward.

After the services, about 20 people gathered outside the restaurant, which has been closed since the shootings. They carried signs in Spanish reading, "Pain in the Heart." They said they wanted the restaurant permanently closed and turned into a memorial playground.

McDonald's executives, who on Friday said the corporation was donating $1 million to a fund for the victims, earlier said there would be no decision on the future of the restaurant until next week.

The 21 were slain during a shooting spree Wednesday that ended when a police marksman's bullet killed James Oliver Huberty, 41, a gun fancier and unemployed security guard.

His widow, Etna, said after the shootings that he had been having increasing emotional problems — including hearing voices — since losing his guard job several weeks ago.

Mrs. Huberty and the couple's daughters, Zelia, 14, and Cassandra, 10, had a private viewing of Huberty's body at a local mortuary Friday.

The widow, who was escorted to seat near the front of the church bu refused to respond to reporters questions Saturday, said earlier tha no services would be held for he husband and that his body would b cremated.

At the memorial service, fiv closed caskets, topped with wreath and flowers, were positioned before the altar. The funerals were sche duled after the memorial service.

One coffin bore two bodies — Jackie Wright Reyes, 18, of San Ysi dro, and her 8-month-old son, Carlos The other victims were Maximiliano Rivera, 25, of San Diego; Margueritz Padilla, 18, of San Diego; Claudi Perez, 9, of San Ysidro; and Maria Elena Colmenero, 18, of Tijuana Mexico.

Mourners fanned themselves with programs and one relative of a vic tim wailed as the service began.

Pageant offices no longer placid

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — The Miss America pageant offices are normally placid, but controversies such as the firing of emcee Bert Parks and a proposal to eliminate the swimsuit competition have created a flurry of excitement.

No episode, however, has caused anything like last week's Maelstrom after it was revealed that nude photographs of the 1984 Miss America, Vanessa Williams, would appear in Penthouse magazine.

Representatives of national magazines, radio and television networks, wire services and the nation's largest newspapers descended upon pageant offices on the Boardwalk.

Albert A. Marks Jr., the pageant's executive director, faced a room jammed with reporters, lights and cameras on Friday when he announced that the pageant's executive committee had asked Miss Williams, 21, of Millwood, N.Y., to resign.

She was the first black woman to wear the crown, and became the first to be asked to give it up.

The announcement, Marks told The Associated Press, was the toughest thing he had to do in 24 years at the helm of the pageant, where he first began working as a volunteer in 1951.

Postal employees work without contract

WASHINGTON (AP) — Postal employees worked without a contract Saturday after talks between the U.S. Postal Service and four unions representing 600,000 workers reached an impasse as the old labor agreements expired.

Federal law outlaws strikes against the Postal Service and the breakdown of negotiations triggered a fact-finding period that could lead to binding arbitration that may not be resolved before Dec. 10, said Postmaster General William F. Bolger.

Representatives of the two biggest unions left the talks late Friday, shortly before the contracts expired at 12:01 a.m. Saturday, as Postal Service negotiators continued to press for a three-year wage freeze. After the talks broke down, each side accused the other of failing to bargain seriously for new contracts.

Moe Biller, president of the American Postal Workers Union, urged his members to "keep your cool," as the Postal Service extended its final offer until 6 p.m. The unions said they will ignore that bid.

Neighbors remember fugitive's charm

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Dressed in jeans and a yellow T-shirt, he looked like just another man relaxing on the park bleachers with his girlfriend on a hot summer day.

But Alton Coleman was wanted in a bloody string of murders, rapes and kidnappings across six states, and when police approached him, he knew his seven-week odyssey was over.

Coleman, 28, and his companion, Debra Brown, 21, who allegedly accompanied him on his travels, surrendered peacefully Friday to police, who had been tipped to the couple's whereabouts when a childhood friend of Coleman's spotted him in the area.

Sgt. George Scharm recalled how nonchalantly Coleman reacted when Scharm and another sergeant, guns drawn, headed for him.

"He was just smiling," said Sgt. Kathryn Hynds.

Coleman's coolness fit with his character, according to people who knew him in the Waukegan neighborhood where he lived with his 73-year-old grandmother. His poise and quiet charm could be captivating.

Oelia Johnson, a resident of the same apartment complex as Coleman's grandmother, remembered Coleman as "a lovely young man" who was "just as nice as he could be."

But the FBI developed a much darker view of the man it added to a special edition of its "Ten Most Wanted List."

Coleman, who dropped out of grade school and never held a full-time job, according to relatives, was a "con man" and a "smooth talker."

Dewey Shoemaker, a maintenance foreman at Indianapolis' Crown Hill Cemetery in 1953, squats by the headstone of John Dillinger.

Theater recalls Dillinger's death 50 years ago

CHICAGO (AP) — He stepped out into the sultry summer night feeling invincible, America's most notorious desperado with a woman on either arm. Shielded from the glow of streetlamps, a G-man lit a cigar and, taking their cue, two more stepped from the shadows of the Biograph Theater.

One woman — her red-orange skirt an identifying mark for the agents — already was lagging behind when the second tugged nervously at his sleeve. Suddenly, the "ba-ROOM" of .45-caliber automatics shattered the night, and into the cobblestone alley between a tea store and a chop-suey restaurant, 31-year-old John Herbert Dillinger fell dead.

It was 10:40 p.m., July 22, 1934. "Manhattan Melodrama," starring Clark Gable as a gangster with a heart of gold, was on the marquee.

Sunday night, owner Larry Edwards will put that title in lights again, park 1934 Fords around the theater and roll back admission prices by 50 years.

The "John Dillinger Died for You Society," a zany collection of drinking buddies who began toasting Public Enemy No. 1 to break up studies at the University of Texas years ago, "are threatening some kind of surprise," Edwards said, likely a re-enactment of the shooting.

In a 14-month spree from May 1933 until his death, Dillinger's exploits set Depression-era readers' imaginations on fire. He broke out of jails twice, robbed nearly two dozen banks — a not-always unpopular feat given the times — and blasted his way free of police traps in several Midwestern locales with a recklessness that made him an instant legend.

In official accounts of Dillinger's death, authorities denied any "shoot to kill" order, saying Dillinger ignored the warning, "We've got you surrounded," and went for his weapon.

But several biographers say otherwise, citing Deputy U.S. Attorney General Joseph Keenan's comment on March 3, the day Dillinger escaped from the "escape proof" jail at Crown Point, Ind., supposedly using a wooden pistol whittled in his cell:

"I hope to get him," said Keenan, "under such circumstances that the government won't have to stand the expense of a trial."

FBI agent Melvin Purvis, who used "The Lady in Red" to set the trap and lit the cigar to signal 27 other federal agents in the area, later recounted being so nervous that he tore the buttons off his coat fumbling for a gun he didn't fire. Some 25 years later, depressed and in poor health, he shot himself in the head with a chrome-plated .45 in his Florence, S.C., home.

Dillinger was dead nearly 30 years before special agent Charles Winstead admitted to Joe Pinkston and Bob Cromie, authors of "Dillinger: A Short and Violent Life," that he and special agent Clarence Hurt fired the fatal shots.

Word that Dillinger was dead raced up and down Lincoln Avenue. Within minutes, a movie-going crowd of about 250 swelled to 10 times that, and news photographers jockeyed for position with hero-worshipping women who dipped handkerchiefs and the hems of skirts into the blood staining the pavement.

Those who saw the body didn't see the same Dillinger pictured in "wanted" posters or the newspaper pages. His short-cropped auburn hair was dyed black and his eyebrows plucked to a fine line. He had grown a thin, black mustache.

But his outfit was the very image of the gentleman bank robber: straw skimmer; sunglasses; well-pressed gray trousers; white shirt, with a wine-colored tie; and white brogans. Dillinger may have carried a .380 Colt automatic. If he reached for the gun, it never cleared his pocket.

"Never trust a woman or an automatic pistol," Dillinger is reported to have once told a companion.

Jury to decide if man goes to prison, hospital

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A jury will resume deliberations Monday to decide whether Marvin Pancoast, convicted of bludgeoning to death former model Vicki Morgan, should be committed to a mental hospital or sentenced to a 25-years-to-life prison term.

The same panel found Pancoast, 34, guilty of first-degree murder in the baseball-bat killing of Miss Morgan, 30, in July 1983.

Miss Morgan was the one-time mistress of the late Alfred Bloomingdale, the department store heir who was a confidant of President Reagan. Two years ago she filed a $10 million palimony suit aginst Bloomingdale, claiming he promised her lifetime support in exchange for her services during their 12-year relationship. A judge threw out most of the complaint.

Mayor resigns post

HOUGHTON, Mich. (AP) — The mayor of this rural community resigned two days after his arraignment on criminal sex charges for alleged homosexual acts.

Mayor Gerald S. Bond, a high school math teacher who also is licensed to take in foster children, resigned his part-time city post Friday, telling the town council he didn't want "the recent unfavorable publicity to reflect on the city of Houghton."

Bond, 46, was arraigned Wednesday on felony charges of gross indecency with a male and sodomy, said Houghton County Prosecutor Richard Murray. He plans to argue that the victim, who was at least 16, was reluctant to resist because of Bond's position of authority.

Judge rules for fair

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A state judge has ruled the World's Fair is a private corporation that can keep its financial accounts confidential even though $32.5 million in taxpayers' money is involved with it.

Civil District Judge Gerald Federoff on Friday dismissed a lawsuit by Capital City Press of Baton Rouge seeking access to the records under the state Public Records Act. The newspaper publishing company's suit claimed so much public money was in the fair it is no longer a private enterprise.

The state has guaranteed a $17.5 million loan for the fair, meaning if the exposition can't repay the money, the state must. An earlier loan of $10 million and a $5 million advance also came out of public funds.

Shiite Moslem hijacker surrenders in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A lone Shiite Moslem hijacker waving a fake Molotov cocktail took over a Middle East Airlines plane carrying 146 people Saturday, but later released all aboard unharmed and surrendered to police in Beirut.

Lebanese Information Minister Joseph Skaff, who headed the team that negotiated for two hours with the air pirate, said the man — identified by state-run Beirut Radio as Atef Zein, from south Lebanon — hijacked the jetliner because he was denied an entry visa to the Persian Gulf emirate of Abu Dhabi.

The plane, a Boeing 707-B720, was flying from Abu Dhabi to Beirut when it was seized. The hijacker tried to force it to land at Damascus, the capital of Syria, for refueling, but Syrian officials refused the plane permission to land and it went on to its original destination, Beirut.

"He (Zein) also told negotiators he wanted to dramatize the plight of south Lebanon under Israeli occupation," said Skaff.

Israel has occupied south Lebanon since June 1982.

The hijacker first freed about 90 women and children passengers and then agreed to let the rest go in exchange for being allowed to hold a planeside picture-taking session with journalists, airport officials said.

But when he stepped off the plane, police immediately grabbed him and handed him over to the prosecutor-general's office, where he was held in custody.

Police said a soft drink bottle the hijacker toted was found empty after he surrendered, and there was no sign it had been filled with gasoline.

West German calls for end to Persian Gulf war

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — West German Foreign Minister Hans Dietrich Genscher called for a quick end to the Persian Gulf war between Iran and Iraq in talks Saturday with Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati.

According to West German officials accompanying Genscher on his two-day official visit to Iran, he expressed the concern of West Germany and the European Common Market that there be stability in the gulf and urged a quick settlement of the 46-month-old conflict.

In talks with Economy Minister Hossein Namasi, Genscher called for a further expansion of trade between Iran and West Germany.

Tehran newspapers published front-page articles Saturday describing West Germany as an "opponent" of the Iranian revolution and as an ally of the United States, which they called "Iran's biggest enemy."

The articles in the government-controlled newspapers also urged Iranian officials to tell their guests that West Germanmy must stop supporting "Iranian counterrevolutionaries."

Genscher's spokesman, Karl Paschke, said the newspaper articles did not come up during the minister's talks here.

Genscher's schedule also called for meetings with Prime Minister Mir Hussein Musavi and Parliament President Hashemi Rafsanjani.

Prior to his talks with Velayati and Namasi, Genscher laid a wreath at the memorial for Iranian leaders killed in a huge bomb attack on the parliament building in 1980.

He also visited the "Blood Spring," a fountain of red-colored water symbolizing the blood of the "martyrs" killed during the Islamic revolution and the gulf war.

Genscher arrived in Tehran on Friday. Officials accompanying the West German foreign minister said the visit was expected to boost relations between the two countries. The officials, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said Iran had proposed to improve its trade balance with West Germany with a long-term agreement on oil deliveries.

Iran was also interested in sending people to West Germany for specialized training in different fields, the officials said.

The Iranian government would like to see construction completed on a nuclear power plant in the southern city of Boushahar, the officials said.

Kraftwerk Union, a builder of nuclear power plants which is based in Offenbach, West Germany, began construction of the plant after signing a contract with the government of the late Shah of Iran in 1976.

The company canceled the contract and abandoned the site in June 1979 after the Islamic revolution which brought Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini to power.

About 40 company employees have been in Iran since early this year to see, the company said, if it was "technically possible" to finish the first of the two partially completed plants. The company said that in any event, it would not resume work until the war between Iran and Iraq is ended. A company official said last April the plant could not be finished before 1989.

Iranian diplomat says Iran planning 'grand offensive'

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — A top Iranian diplomat said Saturday that Iran was planning a "grand offensive" to end the 46-month-old war with Iraq and topple Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

"I promise you that the grand offensive will come forth to end the war with a victory for Iran," Mohamed Baqueri, the roving Iranian ambassador in the region, told a news conference in Kuwait. He refused to say when the offensive would begin.

Arab diplomatic sources say Iran has massed 400,000 regulars and volunteers for a ground offensive against Iraq's southern region around the key port of Basra. The Iraqis say they have mobilized 500,000 soldiers and ultra-modern Soviet-made weapons for the "last ditch battle."

Baqueri, head of Iran's diplomatic mission in Kuwait, repeated Tehran's "unequivocal rejection" of efforts of the seven-nation Islamic mediation committee to end the war.

He said Iran was "out to punish the Iraqi regime and uproot Saddam," and dismissied the committee as "biased."

The committee, chaired by Gambian President Dawda Jawara, resumed its mediation bid last week with a meeting in Jidda, Saudi Arabia. The committee was formed at a summit meeting of the 47-nation Islamic conference organization in Saudi Arabia in 1981.

Five wounded in grenade attack in West Bank city

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The military command said at least five people were wounded, four Palestinians and one Israeli soldier, in a grenade explosion Saturday in the occupied West Bank city of Nablus. It said the target of the unidentified assailant was an army patrol riding in a jeep.

The Palestine Press Service said that Israeli soldiers opened fire and hurled their own grenade into a crowd in the city's central plaza after the noontime grenade attack on their jeep. The service, which reports on the West Bank, said five Palestinians, including a 12-year-old boy, two women and a 60-year-old man, were wounded by bullets and grenade fragments.

Soldiers clamped a six-hour curfew on the area after the assault, and detained at least 70 Palestinians, the press service and the military said.

An army spokesman denied soldiers opened fire or threw a grenade. He said soldiers were searching the area of the attack, variously called "clock plaza" or "casbah plaza."

The military said the soldier was slightly wounded.

Real Estate today
By Don Harvey

TAX BREAKS DIDN'T COME EASY
In case you take real estate tax breaks for granted - don't. The National Association of Realtors fought hard and long for all of them.
Due to Realtor efforts, the interest paid on mortgages became tax deductible in 1920. This has been a major savings for homeowners. In 1952, the National Association won a six-year campaign that allowed sellers to defer capital gains taxes on the sale of their home if another home of equal or greater value was purchased. Realtors were responsible for winning depreciation deductions; for deductibility of fix-up costs and broker's commissions from the sale price for tax purposes.
In the late 1950's, Realtors won tax deductions for moving expenses related to a job transfer. Likewise, Realtors promoted expansion of relief to the elderly in home sales. In 1962, those 65 and over could exempt the first $30,000 of their home sale from taxes. Today, the age has been lowered to 55 and the exemption has increased to $125,000.

Leaders of dockworkers' union order reopening of ports

LONDON (AP) — Leaders of the dockworkers' union on Saturday ordered all ports to reopen at midnight, ending a strike that had paralyzed three-quarters of British trade.

For Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's beleaguered government, it came as a badly needed break.

At an hour-long meeting in London, 92 delegates of the Transport and General Workers' Union, which represents 35,000 longshoremen, approved a deal put together early Friday with the National Association of Port Employers.

The breakthrough left the militant coal miners' union pursuing a lone battle in its 18-week-old strike to keep the government from closing 20 unprofitable pits and eliminating 20,000 jobs.

The stevedores' dispute, an offshoot of the miners' strike, began July 10 to protest the British Steel Corp.'s use of non-union labor to load iron ore that union workers refused to handle in support of the miners.

The dock strike closed 90 of Britain's ports and paralyzed 75 percent of Britain's import-export trade. Thousands of tons of produce and fruit rotted while awaiting shipment.

Dockworkers at 12 ports hit by the strike returned to work Friday without waiting for the union's decision. Longshoremen at the remaining ports were told to go back to their jobs at midnight Saturday.

The stoppage stranded 180 truck drivers at Dover. Some threatened to burn down port facilities if they were not allowed to cross the English Channel.

The truckers, like the dockworkers, belong to the 1.5 million-member Transport and General Workers' Union.

Port traffic was returning to normal as ferries sailing from Dover, one of the first of the striking ports to reopen, carried 2,000 trucks and 100,000 vacationers across the channel on Friday.

The end of the dock strike came on Britain's traditionally busiest travel day of the year — the start of the long summer school vacations.

Within hours of Saturday's announcement, 1,700 longshoremen at Tilbury, a major container port on the south coast, returned to work. They allowed into the port three cargo ships stranded offshore for nearly a week.

John Connolly, of the longshoremen's union said: "We have reaffirmed our position about the use of scab (non-union) labor in the course of this dispute."

The employers' association had quickly apologized for using non-union help, but the dispute spiraled into a demand that employers promise never to use non-union labor again, and pledge not to erode a longstanding dock labor plan, which guarantees about 13,500 longshoremen jobs for life.

Will Israelis vote Shamir out of office?

JERUSALEM (AP) — Battered by the nation's economic crisis, Israelis seem determined to vote Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir out of office in national elections Monday, the latest polls show.

The future of the Israeli-occupied West Bank is the issue most heatedly disputed, but it is largely eclipsed by the realities of living with an annual inflation rate of 400 percent.

If the opposition Labor Party wins enough seats in Parliament to form a coalition government, it promises to get the Israeli army out of Lebanon swiftly and to soften the hardline policy toward the Arab countries that has guided Israel since Shamir's Likud bloc came to power in 1977.

Seldom have Israelis been so divided, not only on peace with the Arabs, but on the questions of economic equality; the place of religion in daily life, and the clash of ethnic cultures.

In an election eve interview with The Associated Press, Shamir seemed fatigued and downcast, but he voiced confidence he would confound the polls and win.

"Yes, I'm confident," he said at his Tel Aviv campaign headquarters Friday. "Two days before the elections it is not helpful to analyze the polls. We find that the best poll is the election."

The latest opinion survey by the Dahaf agency showed Labor, led by Shimon Peres, winning 49 of the 120 seats in the Knesset, or parliament. The poll of 1,030 Israelis predicted 37 seats for Likud, with a 3 percent margin of error.

In the 1981 election, Likud won 48 seats and Labor 47.

Twenty-six parties are competing for the support of 2.6 million eligible voters. The main contest is between Labor and Likud, but the small parties will be crucial for forming a coalition.

Six religious parties, three left-leaning factions, a centrist group led by charismatic former Defense Minister Ezer Weizman, and two parties even more to the right than Likud are among those that could win enough votes to have a say in the shape of Israel's next government.

Peres, who has lost two elections to Likud, may have trouble attracting enough small parties to give him the 61 seats needed to form a government.

Hoping to salvage some position of power, Shamir has offered a joint government with Labor despite their foreign policy differences.

He says only a national unity government can summon up the strength for imposing tough measures to reverse the inflationary spiral and reduce a $22 billion foreign debt. Peres has rejected Shamir's offer of shared power.

Economists say whoever wins the election will have to cut living standards and end the national shopping spree that has been going on ever since the annual inflation rate first exceeded 100 percent four years ago.

In the last month many Israelis emptied their bank accounts to buy cars, washing machines or black market dollars to protect themselves against a feared postelection austerity drive.

Both parties say the solution is to encourage exports, control prices and slash government spending.

Their deepest dispute is over the West Bank. The Likud rules out giving up any of the territory captured in the 1967 war. Labor says it is ready to give back as much as 60 percent of the territory to Jordan in exchange for peace.

"The Arab countries do not speak about compromises. What they want is our disappearance or at least our complete withdrawal to the borders of 1967. This is not a compromise," Shamir told the AP.

Since 1977, the Likud more than quadrupled the number of Jews in the West Bank, to 30,000. About 800,000 Palestinians live there.

Peres has sharply attacked Shamir for what he calls the "unnecessary war" in Lebanon and the government's failure to withdraw Israeli forces after a two-year occupation of south Lebanon.

Likud says its policies brought peace to northern Israel for the first time in a decade and destroyed the Palestine Liberation Organization's last territorial base.

Shamir, 68, was raised in nationalist politics in the pre-state underground which fought British rule in Palestine with terror and assassination.

Peres, 60, a former defense minister and a polished politician, has an image as a political loser.

Shamir ready to talk with Arabs

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir says he is ready to negotiate with Israel's neighbors but that Arab states "are against any compromise."

In an interview with The Associated Press, the 68-year-old Shamir outlined his foreign policy differences with Labor Party challenger Shimon Peres and the U.S. government.

Peres and Shamir go into national elections Monday after a campaign in which they clashed repeatedly over the future of the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Peres has said that he will make peace talks with Jordan his first foreign policy priority and that Labor is willing to offer Jordan a territorial compromise — partial return of land seized in the 1967 Middle East War in exchange for peace.

Shamir, looking tired from three months of intense campaigning that left him hoarse, said on Friday he was willing to negotiate without preconditions with Jordan's King Hussein.

But Shamir is opposed to the return of any occupied territory. Instead, he offers a form of autonomy for the 1.3 million Palestinians in the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip that was envisioned in the 1978 Camp David accords.

"So far the position of the Jordanian government has been negative. They have declared many times that they are requiring preconditions for such negotiations. These preconditions include our withdrawal from Judea and Samaria (the West Bank) and the eastern part of Jerusalem.

"Of course we have not accepted these preconditions and we are ready to negotiate without any preconditions," said Shamir, interviewed at his 14-story Likud Party headquarters in Tel Aviv.

The Shamir government's determination to pursue its policy of settling Jews in the West Bank is a major source of friction with the Reagan administration.

Shamir acknowledged his differences with the peace plan outlined by President Reagan in September 1982. It calls for incorporating the West Bank into a federation with Jordan.

When asked if Israel would change its attitude if the Reagan plan was put forward again after the elections, he replied, "They know we think that some ideas expressed in this speech are contradictory to the Camp David agreements."

world in brief

Thailand, Laos begin negotiations on villages

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Thailand and its communist neighbor, Laos, began negotiating Saturday to end weeks of dispute and some armed clashes over three frontier villages claimed by both countries.

The meeting was their first since the dispute began in late May. Both countries have sent protest notes to the United Nations.

"Hopefully by Monday, some agreement in principle will be announced by both governments," Thai Foreign Ministry official Suthi Prasartvinitchai told reporters at the end of the first session.

A nine-member Laotian delegation, headed by the deputy foreign minister, arrived here Saturday. Leading the Thai side is the permanent secretary of the Foreign Ministry.

The three villages — Ban Mai, Ban Kang and Ban Savang — are on the frontier of Thailand's Uttaradit province and Sayaboury province of Laos. There have been border incidents since the communists took power in Laos in 1975.

Cashier has quadruplets

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — A 23-year-old cashier has given birth to quadruplets — a boy and three girls — in a Budapest hospital, the Hungarian state-run MTI news agency reported. It said mother and babies were in satisfactory condition.

The woman was identified as Mrs. Lados. MTI said the delivery, by Caesarean section, occurred in the 32nd week of pregnancy and took 40 minutes.

The agency said doctors discovered the woman was expecting quadruplets in an ultrasonic examination on June 7.

MTI said the babies weighed from two pounds, 10 ounces to slightly over three pounds each.

Drug traffickers arrested

FLORENCE, Italy (AP) — Police have announced the arrests of a Belgian, a West German and two Italians in connection with a gang that allegedly shipped heroin to the United States in shoe boxes.

Police said Friday the four were arrested earlier this month in Switzerland and France on international warrants charging them with criminal association for trafficking in heroin and with helping the drug ring recyle money.

They said Swiss authorities had also seized bank accounts in Zurich, Lugano and Chiasso containing more than $60 million that were believed connected with the ring's activities.

New Grapefruit 'Super Pill' Gives Fast Weight Loss

No Dieting - Eat All You Want Pill Does All the Work

BEVERLY HILLS, CA. (Special) An amazing new "super" grapefruit pill has recently been developed and perfected that reportedly "guarantees" that you will easily lose at least 10 pounds in 10 days. Best of all, it allows you to "eat as much as you want of your favorite foods and still lose a pound a day or more starting from the very first day until you achieve the ideal weight and figure you desire."

This "super" grapefruit pill is a dramatically improved version of the world famous grapefruit diet. It is far more effective than the original and eliminates "the mess, fuss, and high cost of eating half a fresh grapefruit at every meal."

"Pill Does All the Work"

According to the manufacturer, "the pill itself does all the work while you quickly lose weight with NO starvation "diet menus" to follow, NO calorie counting, NO exercise, and NO hunger pangs." It is 100% safe. You simply take the pill with a glass of water before each meal and the amazing combination of powerful ingredients are so effective they take over and you start losing weight immediately.

Pill Has ALL Daily Vitamins

The powerful and unique combination of ingredients are what make this a "super-pill". It contains highly potent grapefruit concentrate and a diuretic to help eliminate bloat and puffiness. No need to take any vitamins to maintain your good health and energy. The pill is fortified with ALL (100%) of the U.S. Government daily vitamin requirements.

Contains Japanese 'Glucomannan'

Each pill also contains an amazingly effective amount of "glucomannan", the remarkable natural dietary fiber discovery from Japan (used successfully for over 1500 years) that expands in your stomach and gives you a full and satisfied feeling all day long.

The super-pill is already sweeping the country with glowing reports of easy and fast weight loss from formerly overweight people in all walks of life who are now slim, trim, and attractive again.

Now Available to Public

You can order your supply of these highly successful "super" grapefruit pills (now available directly from the manufacturer by mail order only) by sending $12 for a 14-day supply (or $20 for a 30-day supply, or $35 for a 60-day supply) cash, check, or money order to: Citrus Industries, 9903 Santa Monica Bl., Dept. 841, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. (Unconditional money-back guarantee if not satisfied.) Visa, MasterCard, and Amer. Watson catches Ian Baker-Finch

British Open

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland (AP) — Tom Watson used "one of the best rounds of golf I've ever played" to move into a tie for the third-round lead and take another step toward golfing history Saturday at the 113th British Open.

The defending champion, a five-time winner of this ancient event but never at St. Andrews, crisply stroked his way to a 6-under-par 66 on the historic Old Course.

Watson, who started the day five shots off the pace, completed 54 holes over the centuries-old links in 205, 11 shots under par, to tie with Ian Baker-Finch, the 23-year-old Australian who led after two rounds.

Baker-Finch, winner of two titles in his brief career, nursed home a 71 in the brisk breezes and saved a share of the top spot with an escape from the Valley of Sin, the deep depression in front of the 18th green.

The two will be paired together in the last group off the tee in Sunday's final round — Watson, trying to equal a record of six British Open victories, and a previously obscure player making his first appearance in one of the game's Big Four championships.

"I've never been in this position before," said Baker-Finch. "I'm not surprised to be leading.

"But, he added, "I'll be surprised if I win"

Watson, however, was taking nothing for granted going into a match-up that appeared to be heavily weighted in his favor.

"He'll be trying to do what he wants to do best — win the golf tournament," Watson said. "So will I."

Only two shots back and still very much in the race were Bernhard Langer of West Germany and Seve Ballesteros of Spain, who were tied for third at 207.

Langer had a third-round 68, which included a spectacular save of par on the 17th, the Road Hole, where he had to play a third shot from an extremely awkward position while standing in a deep bunker.

Ballesteros, twice a Masters champion and a previous winner of this title, had a 70.

It was another five strokes back — and seven back of the co-leaders — to the trio tied for fifth at 212, Hugh Baiocchi of South Africa, Lanny Wadkins and veteran Lee Trevino.

Baiocchi had a 70 in the brisk, cool breezes. Wadkins had a 73.

Any hopes the 44-year-old Trevino may have had of achieving a third British Open crown were dashed when he drove into one of those dreadful little pot bunkers on the 13th fairway, which led to a double-bogey 6.

He lost another stroke on the next hole, the par-5 14th which both Watson and Jack Nicklaus said featured "the most difficult pin position I've ever seen."

Gliders breeze to windy heights

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

Man has always wanted to fly.

There are ways. But perhaps the best is soaring, which takes no gasoline and little risk. The concept of powerless plane flight might raise eyebrows, but gliding is a sport that has already caught on big globally. America has only recently begun to explore the wonders of flight from a bird's eye perspective.

Gliding in the Midland area has been popular for a select few, but the weather conditions here provide excellent soaring. With a surprisingly small amount of time and money, anyone can soar.

THE GLIDER isn't frighteningly flimsy. Children of all ages have assembled gliders bought for two bits at the corner store. While the construction and design for gliders are basically the same, these gliders that way as much as 1,500 pounds can ride the wind with more ease than many power planes. The altitude record for gliders is over 46,000 feet, much higher than commercial jets usually fly.

And according to Roger McMakin, a Midland enthusiast, endurance records aren't even challenged anymore. Winds in certain areas are so strong and steady that if a pair of flyers wanted to, they could probably stay airborne indefinitely.

"There are three things about soaring that make it a perfect hobby," says Bill Jowell of Midland. "First, it requires some skill and there's an element of danger. Second, it's relatively inexpensive and third, it serves no useful purpose."

THE PERMIAN Soaring Association serves the Midland-Odessa area, and the club has about ten planes that make regular flights.

The Permian Basin features plenty of thermal winds, hot air, that make it good for flying year-round. Thermals are hot air currents that rise up and create lift, and glider pilots seek them out to sustain flight. A pilot must have a solid knowledge of wind patterns and tendencies before taking flight. Planes are graded for flight ratios of distance per foot of altitude. A plane graded 30-1 is able to travel thirty feet in distance for each foot of altitude. Therefore, a plane that catches a good thermal (Jowell recently went to 16,000 feet on one between Stanton and Big Spring) can really travel. For example, after attaining 10,000 feet, a plane rated 30-1 could go 300,000 feet, over 50 miles, without benefit of any other good winds.

Jowell has had three planned trips of 180 miles that haven't yet been completed. But he stayed up for six hours, 13 minutes in his longest flight. Darkness caused Jowell to land.

The glider itself is basically as simple as the drug-store type. Most planes are constructed of fiberglass or aluminum. Some have flaps, some do not. The instrumentation is generally very simple, also. Gauges are for airspeed, an altimeter gives the heigth, and there is a compass and radio.

What there isn't is a gas gauge or engine meters. The most incredible thing about soaring is that there is no power. Until one is actually airborne, the realization that Mother Nature (with the help of a tow plane) is providing the impetus is never accepted.

"You never think of the office," Jowell says of airtime.

ALTHOUGH SOARING has yet to achieve the status and popularity in America that it has been afforded elsewhere, it is not difficult to become involved. At age 14, it is possible to obtain student certification for solo flight.

One can get private certification by age 16, and after a person is 18 they can get commercial classification.

The Soaring Society of America promotes and publicizes the sport nationally. The SSA is recognized as the voice of the sport in the United States, and they organize many competitions and events. Membership costs are only $28 yearly.

Jackson erupts against Midland

From Staff Reports

JACKSON, Miss. — The Jackson Mets, who had scored only 10 runs in the first four games against the Midland Cubs, erupted with a 12-run attack here Saturday night to down the Cubs by a 12-4 margin.

The loss gave Jackson the series by a 3-2 margin after Midland had won the first two games of the series.

The good news is that the Cubs have ended a 4-6 road trip and are scheduled to face the Shreveport Captains Monday night in the first of a 10-game homestand. The Cubs, who started the second half with 22 of 28 games on the road, will finally get a long home break with Shreveport and Jackson coming to town during the 10-day stand.

Dave Cochrane, who knocked in four runs, brought three home in the Jackson first with a key double to highlight the first of three innings in which the Mets scored four times.

Billy Beane and Ed Hearn hit back-to-back homers in the four-run eighth and Larry Denby's two-run triple was the key blow in a four-run sixth.

DeWayne Vaughn went 5⅓ innings to pick up his fourth victory of the season while Mike Graves got his eighth save, his first since June 18.

Joe Housey took the loss, falling to 4-5 for the year. Housey gave up seven of the Mets' runs, all earned.

Dan Norman, Tony Woods and Darrin Jackson all had two hits each for the Cubs.

Jeff Jones went 0-for-3 Saturday, leaving him with an 0-for-9 performance in the series.

The Cubs moved to within 4-3 of the Mets in the top of the sixth, but Jackson's eruption of four in the bottom of the frame turned the game into a rout.

On the road trip, Midland lost three straight to Shreveport before rolling off four straight victories. Now they come home with a three-game losing streak.

Shreveport and Midland will meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday as the teams take Sunday off for a travel day.

M-Cubs add cheerleaders to game plan

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

A new tradition at Cubs Stadium may be beginning this week at Cubs Stadium since the debut of the Cub Cheerleaders is scheduled for Friday.

Six girls have been chosen to the Cub Cheerleaders squad through P.S. Images, a Midland modeling agency. They will perform at all Cubs' home games after Friday and they are hoping that it will be a future fixture at Cubs Stadium in the years to come.

Bernard Lankford, co-owner of the Midland Cubs, said Saturday, "This really wasn't the idea of the Midland Cubs. We were contacted by P.S. Images and thought it was a good idea, so we are going to give it a try through the rest of the season and see how it goes.

"I think the girls are looking forward to it. We have set up Friday as their official opening with us, but they may show up for a game before hand to get the feel of things. Friday nights are traditionally large crowds for us and we thought that would be a good time for them to start."

Saturday's answer: Early Wynn of the Cleveland Indians won the American League earned-run title in 1950 with an ERA of 3.20, the highest ever for a champion.

Did You Know?...

A racehorse named Halcyon of a half century ago was such a bad actor at the post he had to wear blinkers resembling venetian blinds. The jockey pulled a string to open them at the start.

When Man o' War won the Belmont Stakes in 1920, he raced in a clockwise direction. The next year a change was made to the counter-clockwise style used today.

Tigers nip Rangers, 7-6

DETROIT — Chet Lemon and Howard Johnson drove in two runs each during a five-run fifth inning Saturday night to lead the Detroit Tigers to their eighth victory in nine games, a 7-6 triumph over the Texas Rangers.

Tom Brookens walked to open the fifth, took second on a wild pitch and scored on Rupert Jones' one-out single. Walks to Kirk Gibson and Darrell Evans loaded the bases and Lemon followed with a two-run double to tie the score 5-5.

Danny Darwin relieved Texas starter Dickie Noles, 1-1, and Johnson greeted the reliever with a single to score Evans and Lemon.

The Rangers took a 5-2 lead in the third against Detroit starter Glenn Abbott on a two-run triple by Mickey Rivers, Pete O'Brien's two-run homer, his 11th of the season, and Tommy Dunbar's RBI groundout.

Texas added a run in the seventh on Buddy Bell's RBI groundout.

The Tigers scored twice in the second on Dave Bergman's RBI single and a throwing error by Texas right fielder Larry Parrish.

Sid Monge, who relieved Abbott during the Rangers' five-run third inning, gained his first victory against no defeats. Willie Hernandez worked the final two innings to earn his 19th save.

White Sox 4, Indians 3

CLEVELAND — Pinch-hitter Jamie Quirk, called up from the minors only two days earlier, snapped an eighth-inning tie with a sacrifice fly, lifting the Chicago White Sox to a 4-3 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

With the score tied 3-3, Vance Law started the winning rally with a one-out walk from Tom Waddell, 2-3. Pinch-hitter Jerry Hairston then doubled to send Law to third and knock out Waddell in favor of Ernie Camacho.

Quirk, recalled from the White Sox's Triple A affiliate in Denver on Thursday, then hit a sacrifice fly near the warning track in left, allowing the White Sox to move over the .500 mark at 48-47.

Jerry Don Gleaton, 1-0, who also was called up Thursday from Denver, pitched 1⅔ hitless innings for the victory. Ron Reed finished up to earn his sixth save.

Brewers 7, A's 4

OAKLAND — Jim Gantner, who wasted an opportunity to win the game one inning earlier, stroked a two-out, two-run single to break a 10th-inning tie and give the Milwaukee Brewers a 7-4 victory over the Oakland A's.

Chuck Rainey, 0-1, gave up a lead-off single to Ben Oglivie and Ed Romero's sacrifice bunt moved Oglivie to second. After Sundberg struck out, Rainey walked Dion James and Rick Manning to load the bases, setting the stage for Gantner's single to right. Robin Yount drove in the third run of the inning with a single.

Rick Waits pitched 3⅓ innings of scoreless relief to even his record at 2-2, and Rollie Fingers got the final out for his 22nd save.

Royals 4, Orioles 3

KANSAS CITY — Cal Ripken Jr. had three hits, and Rich Dauer broke a 3-3 tie with a sixth-inning double as the Baltimore Orioles snapped a three-game losing streak with a 4-3 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

Ripken drove in one run and scored another for the Orioles.

Twins 5, Yankees 2

NEW YORK — Kent Hrbek drove in three runs with a two-run home run and a double and Mike Smithson scattered seven hits over 5⅓ innings as the Minnesota Twins downed the New York Yankees 5-2.

Smithson allowed two runs, striking out two and walking two, to raise his record to 10-8, matching his victory total for last season when he was 10-14 before being traded by the Texas Rangers.

Red Sox 16, Angels 4

ANAHEIM, CALIF — Boston's Bill Buckner hit a grand slam home run in the sixth inning, but it was only one of many blows recorded as the Red Sox pounded out a 16-4 victory over California.

Bruce Hurst pitched his ninth complete game of the season, giving up seven hits, striking out five and walking none.

The newly formed Cub Cheerleaders work on routines for their debut which is scheduled for Friday at Cubs Stadium. Sandy Maruchi, center, is coordinator of the squad. She is flanked by Denise Day and Carol Bennett.

Tully ups pole vault mark

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Mike Tully broke his own American record in the pole vault and China's Zhu Jianhua cleared 7-feet, 7¾ inches in the high jump Saturday as 78 Olympians competed in the Prefontaine Classic track and field meet.

Tully made it over the bar at 19-1¼ on his third and final try to better the U.S. mark he set earlier this year by a half-inch.

He missed three times at 19-2¼, two inches short of the world record set last week by Sergei Bubka of the Soviet Union.

Zhu, competing for the second time in the western hemisphere and the first time since his arrival as a world-class competitor, cleared his winning mark on the fourth try. He missed three times at 7-7¾ before his successful effort.

Zhu, who set the world mark at 7-10 in June, defeated Jimmy Howard of the United States in a jump-off after both cleared 7-6½.

He cleared 7-1, 7-3 and 7-5 without a miss in the high jump competition, which was hastily arranged after the Chinese star decided earlier this week to compete in the meet.

Howard missed at the winning mark four times.

Steve Scott's hope for a record-threatening effort in the mile run was thwarted by a strong north wind that blew into the runner's faces on the backstretch at Hayward Field.Still, Scott won in 3 minutes, 54.44 seconds.

Tom Petranoff, who lost his world record in the javelin when East Germany's Uwe Hohn managed a 343-10 mark Friday in Berlin, finished a disappointing fifth at 263-1 here Saturday. Brian Crouser of Oregon won the event at 287-6.

"I pressed," Petranoff said, "no doubt about it."

Kim Gallagher, the U.S. Olympic Trials winner at 800 meters, pulled up lame with tightness in her hip in the event in Eugene.

New Zealand's John Walker won the 5,000 meters against a star-studded field with a time of 13:43.32.

Brian Diemer pulled off a major surprise in upsetting U.S. steeplechase standout Henry Marsh in a relatively slow 8:33.09. Marsh was second at 8:34.47 and said he has been bothered by a virus since the U.S. Olympic Trials, where he was first and Diemer came in second.

"I'm disappointed. That's the first time I've been beaten by an American in about three years," Marsh said, "but I had to find out what I had."

Marsh said he is unsure whether he will train hard or take it somewhat easy between now and the Olympics. Either way, he said, he'll be taking a risk.

"But these are the Olympics," he said. "You've got to take risks."

Joaquim Cruz, the University of Oregon runner and Brazilian gold medal hopeful at 800 meters, won the 1,000 meters Saturday in 2:14.54, the fastest time ever in the United States in the seldom-run event. Jim Spivey, U.S. Olympic Trials 1,500-meter winner, was a distant second.

Michael Carter won the shot put, even though he and U.S. Olympic teammate Dave Laut both had marks of 68-11½. Carter was given the victory based on a metric measurement.

Karin Smith of the United States took the women's javelin at 195-3, while Christina Boxer of Britain captured the women's 800 meters in 2:02.53.

CHEERLEADERS

The idea of Cub Cheerleaders is the brainchild of Sandy Maruchi, 28, who is a co-owner of P.S. Images and who will also serve as one of the cheerleaders.

"I came to Midland from Philadelphia and Midland is a small town to me," noted Maruchi. "When I heard of the Midland Cubs, I didn't think it would be any big deal in a place like Midland, but I went to some of the games and was super impressed with the team and the facilities.

"I began thinking that they needed cheerleaders or a dance group to just add to the excitement. And now we're going to have Cub Cheerleaders.

"I called Bernard (Lankford) to see what he thought of the idea and told him that P.S. Images would put the group together for the Cubs. We advertised in the paper and had three tryouts with over 25 girls in all trying out. We chose five besides me and three alternates.

"We're giving it a try and if all goes well — if the team likes us and the fan like us — we hope it will get bigger and better in the years to come. The Cubs have been super cooperative and we're all excited about it."

Lisa Garrett, 18, is one of the Cub Cheerleaders and she says, "I'm just doing this to support the team. I go as often as I can to the Cub games and now it looks like I'll be going even more. I was taking modeling from Sandy and she called me and asked if I would tryout. I did and here I am."

Another of the cheerleaders is Cathy Cutwright, 19, and she claims to be another Cub fan. "I go to a lot of the Cub games. I'm an aerobic dance instructor and knew Sandy. I talked with her about trying out for the squad and I'm glad I did."

Others who will be on the team are Alicia Thompson, 17; Denise Day, 17; and Carol Bennett, 20.

The Cub Cheeleaders have been working out at Cubs Stadium and have already encountered some problems. During one practice session, the automatic sprinkling system came on and doused the squad during a routine.

Johnson prefers Oiler training camp

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Dallas Cowboy-turned-Houston Oiler wide receiver Butch Johnson completed his first workout under Oiler Coach Hugh Campbell Saturday and he already has some comparisons to make with "Fort Landry."

Johnson left little doubt about his feelings for Dallas Coach Tom Landry or the training camps that he operates at Thousand Oaks, Calif.

Johnson says Campbell's lack of a curfew is much more to his liking.

"Coach Landry's camp is like Fort Landry, that's what we used to call it," the talkative Johnson said as the Oiler veterans completed their first drill on the Angelo State University campus. "It was just that tight of a ship.

"You had to be in the halls at a certain time, you had be in your bed a certain time."

But Johnson, who was traded to the Oilers in exchange for receiver Mike Renfro in April, found a different atmosphere under Campbell.

"What I've found here, is the living conditions are better than at Thousand Oaks," Johnson said. "I'm living with myself and not three or four other guys in a dorm room.

"There is no set curfew which is something I haven't been used to.

"At 10 o'clock at night I'm used to guys coming with a flashlight waking you up to see if you're in bed. Here, they are expecting you to be a man and go to bed at an hour you think is reasonable for you to get up."

Johnson said he would have refused to report to Houston if former Coach Ed Biles was still the head coach.

Orioles win battle of '69 teams

CHICAGO (AP) — They called it the "Hall of Fame" game although there were only three members of the Hall of Fame present. They also billed it as "The World Series That Should Have Been."

It was an old timers game Saturday featuring the Chicago Cubs and the Baltimore Orioles of 1969. That was the Cub team that blew a 9½-game lead in the stretch to the New York Mets, who went on to whip the Orioles in five games in the World Series.

This time the Orioles won it 3-1 as the Baltimore Hall of Famers — Brooks Robinson and Frank Robinson — distinguished themselves. Brooks, naturally, made a couple of fine fielding plays and Frank, currently the manager of the San Francisco Giants, singled across a run in a three-run second that featured a two-run double by Dave May.

Whitworth nears 85th win

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Kathy Whitworth, seeking a record 85th professional golf title, shot a 71 Saturday to move into a 1-stroke lead over streaking Rosie Jones and faltering rookie Cathy Marino after three rounds of the Rochester International LPGA golf tournament at Locust Hill Country Club.

Whitworth overcame a four-stroke lead held by Marino, who ballooned to a 76, as she moved into position to break out of a tie with Sam Snead as the winningest professional golfer of all time.

She stood four strokes under par after rounds of 73, 68 and 71 on the par-72, 6,162-yard course. The third round was played under sunny skies on dry fairways and fast greens.

Jones, who lost the U.S. Women's Open last weekend on the final hole, birdied the tough par-4 14th hole to move into a tie with Marino, the leader for two rounds. She added a birdie at the 16th to go ahead, but then bogeyed the 18th by missing a four-foot putt to fall a stroke back. She finished with a 2-under-par 70.

Whitworth, playing in a three-some with Marino and Lauri Peterson, narrowed her four-stroke deficit after two rounds to two strokes on the first three holes, then marched ahead of the faltering Marino in spite of bogeying the fifth and 10th holes.

Whitworth's birdies came on the 1st, 3rd and 16th holes.

Marino, 23, of Enid, Okla., 36th on the LPGA money list, topped her fairway shots for bogeys on the 13th and 14th holes to lose her lead over Whitworth and Jones.

Marino and Jones were one stroke behind Whitworth at 3-under par, followed by Betsy King, who stood alone at 2-under after shooting a 71. Sandra Haynie, Cathy Morse and Myra Van Hoose were tied at 1-under par.

Marino's 36-hole-score of 137 had been a personal best and just two strokes off JoAnne Carner's record in the $200,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament.

Lauri Peterson, who had shot a second-round 67 to move into a five-way tie, blew to a 76 to stand 1-over par.

Heafner, Hoch lead Quad Cities

COAL VALLEY, Ill. (AP) — Vance Heafner and Scott Hoch vaulted into a tie for first place at 10-under-par 200 after the third round of the $200,000 Quad Cities Open golf tournament Saturday.

Second-round leader Dave Stockton slipped to 201 after shooting a 1-over-par 71 at the 6,514-yard, par-70 Oakwood Country Club course.

The winner earns $36,000.

Tied for third place were Tim Norris, Woody Blackburn and Randy Watkins, all at 8-under 202 after 54 holes.

Stockton, Heafner and Hoch, who played together Saturday and will be in the same threesome again Sunday, staged a dogfight for the lead, with each holding it alone at least once during the day.

Hoch, 28, shot the best round of the three, finishing with a 4-under 66 thanks to birdies on the first, sixth, seventh and 18th holes.

His birdie on the par-4, 384-yard 18th moved him into the tie with Heafner, who shot 69.Hoch, from Orlando, Fla., won the Quad Cities in 1980.

Stockton, seeking his first victory since 1976, opened Saturday as the leader at 10 under.Stockton made just two birdies and suffered three bogeys, howeverm and had to putt 33 times compared to the 27 he needed in his previous rounds.

"All in all, I'd rather play this round over again," said Stockton, 42, a veteran of 20 years on the PGA tour.

Heafner, 29, of Cary, N.C., who shared the first-day lead with Stockton, had a solid if unspectacular round.A bogey on the 17th hole dropped him from 11-under, which had been the lowest running score of the tournament.

"I just didn't play well enough to shoot a low round," he said.

A blazing sun sent temperatures into the 90s Saturday afternoon.

BRITISH

That pair of 6s sent Trevino reeling to a 75.

Nicklaus, who had won the last two British Opens played here, managed a 68 that was, he acknowledged, too little and too late. He was at par 216.

Nick Faldo of England, playing in the last group with Baker-Finch, had an embarrassing 76 before a record British gallery of 38,000 and was at 213.

Masters title-holder Ben Crenshaw was 70-217 and U.S. Open champion Fuzzy Zoeller was 71-214.

Greg Norman, the Australian who had been on such a rampage through the American Tour and shared the first-round lead here, had a 74 and was out of it at 215.

Scotsman Bill Longmuir took himself out of the race with a 79-217.

Watson, the only three-time winner on the American Tour this season and in his customary position as the year's leading money-winner, will attempt to equal the record of six British Open crowns set by Harry Vardon with his last victory in 1914.

"Any thoughts of what it means, any thoughts of winning the championship, winning the sixth British Open, equaling the record, winning at St. Andrews, will have to come after the fact," Watson said.

In addition to Watson only James Braid and J.H. Taylor — contemporaries of Vardon — and Australian Peter Thompson have won this title five times.

"I'd hate to be the one to keep Watson from the record," Baker-Finch said, "but I'll be trying."

Watson has an opportunity to accomplish a feat unique in history — a sweep of the Scottish courses used for this championship, which he calls "the World Series of Golf."

His previous British Open triumphs have come at Carnoustie (1975), Turnberry (1977), Muirfield (1980) and Troon (1981), all in Scotland, and last year at Royal Birkdale in England.

Now he's in position for a shot at still another one.

"That's the best round I've played this year," he said. "The round the day before is No. 2. I just hope that progression continues."

After matching an opening birdie with his only bogey of the day, he began his move toward the leading Baker-Finch with a 10-foot putt on the third hole.

He reached the par-5 fifth in two and 2-putted for birdie. On the next two, he flipped sand wedge second shots inside of 5 feet, birdied both and reached the turn in 32.

He drove the green on the 342-yard 10th hole and 2-putted for birdie, then got another sand wedge shot to point-blank range on the 12th and birdied again.

Then, coming back to the great stone pile that is the clubhouse of the Royal and Ancient Golf Club of St. Andrews, with the wind in his face, he parred home.

Baker-Finch, who said he "was surprisingly calm and relaxed" in his unaccustomed role as a leader, dropped a pair of 25-foot putts and 2-putted the fifth to go 3-under early in the day.

But he bogeyed the ninth from a bunker, 3-putted for par on the 10th, then 3-putted again, this time for bogey, on the 11th.

He got one shot back with a 12-foot birdie putt on the 12th, led by two at that point but couldn't hold it.

He drove into a fairway bunker on the 14th and bogeyed. He was short in two on the 17th and bogeyed, falling back into a share of the lead and retained that only with a good 2-putt from the Valley of Sin.

Jordan scores 27 to lead Olympians by NBA, 84-72

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Coach Bobby Knight says he doesn't like to single out individuals on his U.S. Olympic men's basketball team, but forward Michael Jordan is an exception.

"I like to use the term 'basketball player' and Michael is a great, great basketball player," Knight said after Jordan scored 27 points Saturday to give the Olympians their eighth straight exhibition win over the National Basketball Association All-Stars 84-72.

The 6-foot-5 All-American from North Carolina was the first-round draft pick of the Chicago Bulls last month and some of the NBA players are already shuddering at the thought of defensing him next season.

"He's just an enormous talent," said All-Stars Coach Pat Riley of the Los Angeles Lakers. "He's as gifted a player as any I've ever seen play ball. What happens here and then through the Olympics will only make him better. I don't think he realizes how good he really is."

Jordan said "it's an honor to be playing against guys I've watched on television," but side-stepped predictions about what he can accomplish in the NBA.

"It's going to be a lot different when I get there. I'm not really stressing my own individual play right now," he said. "And right now, we're playing against basically out-of-shape players. There's no comparison."

SWC makes tentative TV deal with Raycom

AUSTIN (AP) — Raycom Communications of Charlotte, N.C., has tentatively agreed on a Southwest Conference television package to broadcast as many as eight football games this fall and up to 23 basketball games next winter, SWC commissioner Fred Jacoby says.

Jacoby, who represented the conference at a Friday meeting in Austin, said the televised football games and their kickoff times have yet to be designated.

The football package will call for six to eight televised games with each conference member appearing at least once and no one more than twice, he said. Schools would be limited to one TV appearance for home games.

"We put the concept down on paper at our meeting last week in Chicago, and now we have a tentative agreement," Jacoby said. "The plan will now have to be presented to all conference members for approval before contracts can be signed, but we should be able to announce a schedule within the next two weeks.

"But even that, of course, will be tentatives, due to the CFA (College Football Association) negotiations," he said.

The SWC schools are among the members of the CFA, which is expected to negotiate an agreement with ABC.

The CFA plan is expected to limit national TV appearances to four, meaning that an SWC school could conceivably make six appearnces.

The basketball package, he said, will include a nine-week regular schedule, with 18 televised games on Saturday and Sunday afternoons and five more contests in Saturday night prime time. In addition, all seven games of the conference post-season tournament in Dallas in March would be televised.

Still up in the air is the question of time slots for football. Prior to the U.S. Supreme Court antitrust ruling June 27 that threw out contracts between the NCAA and CBS and ABC, the NCAA had controlled all three time slots on Saturday, 12-3:30 p.m., 3:30-7 p.m. and evenings.

Most of the games in the SWC package with Raycom will probably start at noon, Jacoby said.

Jacoby said revenue, after expenses, from the football and basketball packages will be shared on a percentage basis between the SWC and Raycom.

Raycom has indicated it will begin signing up outlets in Texas and Arkansas next week, the SWC commissioner added.

Raycom has televised Atlantic Coast Conference basketball games for the past several years and has done some college football on a delayed basis, Jacoby said.

Expos defeat Astros, 4-2

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Tim Wallach belted two doubles, drove in a run and scored a run to lead the Montreal Expos to a 4-2 victory over the Houston Astros Saturday night.

David Palmer, 4-3, gained the win, only his second in his last 13 starts, giving up eight hits in six innings. Mike Scott, 4-8, was the loser, allowing four runs on seven hits in 5⅔ innings.

Trailing 1-0, Montreal scored four runs in the sixth. Tim Raines led off with a triple and scored on Andre Dawson's sacrifice fly. Gary Carter then tripled and after Mike Stenhouse was hit by a Scott pitch, Wallach doubled Carter home.

Derrel Thomas' single drove in Tony Scott, pinch-running for Stenhouse who had left the game with an injured elbow, and Wallach

Cubs 4, Giants 3

CHICAGO — Thad Bosley hit a tie-breaking double with two out in the 11th inning, powering the Chicago Cubs to a 4-3 victory over the San Francisco Gaints.

With one out in the 11th, Jody Davis singled and was forced when Larry Bowa bunted. Bowa then stole second and scored as Bosley lined a double down the left-field line off loser Greg Minton, 1-7. Rick Bordi, 4-1, was the winner.

The victory kept intact the Cubs' perfect 7-0 record in extra-inning games. The Giants are now 4-8 in overtime.

Braves 5, Phillies 3

ATLANTA — Rick Camp surrendered only two hits over seven innings, and Claudell Washington singled home the lead run in the fifth inning to pace the Atlanta Braves to a 5-3 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Camp, 5-2, fell behind early when Juan Samuel hit a two-run double in the first inning, but he allowed only one other hit and had a career-high seven strikeouts to go along with seven walks. Donnie Moore earned his 10th save by checking Philadelphia on two hits over the final two innings.

Padres 6, Pirates 4

PITTSBURGH — Graig Nettles drove in three runs with a first-inning, bases-loaded double to trigger the San Diego Padres to a 6-4 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

San Francisco's Manny Trillo is safe at first as Chicago's Leon Durham misses the ball Saturday at Wrigley Field.

Alan Wiggins was safe on shortstop Dale Berra's error to lead off the game and Tony Gwynn followed with a single. After Steve Garvey walked, Nettles hit a ball high off the wall in right field to score all three. Two outs later, Kevin McReynolds doubled to score Nettles.

The runs came off loser Bob Walk, 1-1, who left the game after two innings with a strained right elbow.

Mets 2, Reds 1

CINCINNATI — Hubie Brooks and Darryl Strawberry each singled in a run and Doug Sisk provided strong relief pitching to lead the New York Mets to a 2-1 decision over the Cincinnati Reds.

Winner Sid Fernandez, 2-0, allowed six hits, walked none and struck out seven through 6⅓ innings. Fernandez had retired 10 batters in a row from the second to the sixth inning. But after Dave Parker homered to open the seventh and Nick Esasky tripled one out later, Sisk came in and snuffed the Reds' rally by getting two pinch-hitters on ground balls.

Dodgers 3, Cardinals 1

ST. LOUIS — Los Angeles pitcher Rick Honeycutt went the distance, pitching an eight-hitter for an 3-1 victory to gain his first victory in seven previous starts.

The victory gives Honeycutt an 8-4 record on the year. Meanwhile, Joaquin Andujar, 13-9, pitched 5⅓ perfect innings before the Dodgers reached him for all three of their runs in the sixth.

Politics, weather cloud L.A. Games

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Athletes and journalists are pouring in by the thousands, flags and banners color the urban landscape, and Olympic electricity is flowing.

After six years of planning, the first Summer Olympics on U.S. soil in 52 years — and the first ever staged by a private organization — open next Saturday under a cloud of politics as well as weather.

From tiny Andorra to war-scarred Lebanon, from farms, armies and aristocratic bloodlines, a record 7,800 athletes from 141 countries are set to compete, covered by a record 8,200 journalists.

It will all happen against the backdrop of the Soviet-led boycott involving many potential medal winners, last-minute litigation and concerns about terrorism.

The weather has been a concern all along, but some early arrivals said it was even worse than they expected.

"We're surprised to find it's hotter here than where we just left," Mohammed Redwan Khari, the Egyptian team coach, said.

It was 96 then, in the midst of a 12-day heat wave which sent temperatures as much as 12 degrees above normal.

A similar heat wave during the Games could make conditions "intolerable" for the athletes, said Arthur Lessard, meteorologist in charge of the National Weather Service of Southern California.

The mercury dropped closer to the normal mid to high 80s Wednesday, but the forecast offered little hope that would continue.

A year ago, the Los Angeles area suffered through "one of the hottest summers in the last decade," according to the weather service, and the 30-day forecast covering the 16 days of the Games calls for above-normal temperatures, with less than a 30 percent chance of rain.

Smog is another unpredictable factor.

A study of the July 28-Aug. 12 period revealed that there were only two first-stage smog alerts — heavy pollution considered enough of a health hazard to cancel high school sports — downtown during the past five years.

But there were 21 days of first-stage smog alerts through July 15 — the worst smog problem in a decade — and industries have been urged to reduce emissions.

Although many athletes have expressed concern about smog, the top official of the area's air quality board, Dr. Thomas Heinsheimer, said tests have determined that it should have little or no effect on competition.

Nevertheless, events that require the most sustained activity, such as the marathons, have been scheduled for the early evening when smog levels are usually low.

That's about all the organizers can do.

"There's some finger crossing," said Harry Usher, vice president and general manager of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, "but it falls in areas that are out of our control."

Terrorism in a politically volatile area, with 26 events spread over 200 miles, may be equally hard to control, but more precautions at least can be taken.

To protect the athletes from an incident similar to the Munich massacre in 1972 that left 11 Israeli athletes dead, the LAOOC is reportedly paying in excess of $100 million for security. The pricetag includes state-of-the-art detection gear, sophisticated robots and a fleet of helicopters, some of them specially equipped with infra-red night scopes. The style and color of security uniforms was a closely guarded secret to keep potential terrorists from copying them.

With a security force of 18,000 — four times the size of the Los Angeles police force — the costs are likely to exceed the $123 million Montreal spent for protection in 1976. There has been no violence in the Olympics since the 1972 incident.

The Soviet boycott will keep 14 countries, including East Germany and Cuba, out of the Games, and five other countries are staying away for different reasons.

Two athletes had to go to court to get here, and another is still trying.

Pentathlete Bob Stull, 23, of Damascus, Md., was in danger of being kicked off the four-member U.S. team until he was acquitted by an independent panel of sports representatives of charges that he conspired with his competitors to rig fencing bouts in the Olympic trials.

John Bertrand was ordered reinstated to the U.S. yachting team by a California Superior Court judge. He had been replaced by Russ Silvestri, who won the Finn Class Olympic trials but was found by a U.S. Yacht Racing Union jury to have deliberately harassed Bertrand during competition.

U.S. weightlifting champion Jeff Michels has one last, slim chance. Michels, a heavyweight who was the only American to crack the top 10 rankings in the world last year, was suspended from competition for two years by the International Weightlifting Federation after testing positive for banned substances during the 1983 Pan American Games. He maintains he is innocent and is taking his case to the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Chicago on Monday.

In a sense, the Los Angeles organizers are on trial themselves.

As the first staged without public funds, the XXIII Summer Olympiad has shaped up as the Games of high stakes.

But, by charging 30 corporate sponsors a minimum of $4 million and by landing a $225 million television contract from ABC, the LAOOC has the money.

And if projections hold true, the Games may actually make money.

That has happened only once before — in 1932, when, despite a global Depression, the Los Angeles Olympics generated a $1 million profit that was turned over to the taxpayers.

Since the modern Olympics began in 1896, no other host city has been able to make the claim. The Montreal Games left taxpayers with a $1 billion deficit and the 1980 Moscow Olympics cost the Soviet government a reported $9 billion.

Crisis of food

Most of us probably can remember being told as children to eat all of our meals because we should not waste food when underprivileged children in other parts of the world are hungry. Well, that may have been a parental tool intended to get us to eat, but it wasn't incorrect. In fact, 600 million people worldwide lack sufficient food to meet their basic nutritional needs.

That's the figure attributable to Focus, a publication by the Joint Center for Political Studies. And it's not the only one either. The figures are startling and sobering.

One child in four born in the developing countries dies before the age of five, usually of malnutrition. Each year, 100,000 children go blind from a lack of vitamin A. Those figures graphically demonstrate the dimensions of the world's hunger problem, a problem that seems far away from those of us living in affluent Midland.

But it does exist and nowhere is the problem worse than in Africa. While in most of the developing world food production has outpaced population growth, in Africa per capita food production actually has declined in recent years.

Says the publication: "Food shortages have plagued Africa in the past, but the situation today is especially perilous. The worst drought of the century has ruined the crops of African farmers. For the past three years, this drought has hit more countries than ever before; in past crises ... the emergency was more limited in scope. Countries that normally export food to their neighbors in southern Africa are now critically short themselves."

If any parents are repeating that warning to their children today, they can say it with conviction. Africa is just one example of the horrible food crisis plaguing the world.

Recycling bargains

As all avid do-it-yourselfers are only too painfully aware, a trip to the lumberyard or the building supply house for the materials required in a small home modification or repair project can flatten the wallet in short order.

The high prices for such items as a new door, a mantel-piece or flooring can quickly discourage many householders in the low-income group who might want to upgrade or refurbish their dwellings to the ultimate benefit of the neighborhoods they inhabit.

The City of Baltimore has found an answer to this problem which is so eminently simple and sensible that it is surprising the idea has not occurred to the administrations of other major municipalities.

For nine years, Baltimore has operated a salvage depot to recycle old components from demolished buildings to sell to residents at low prices.

A number of private, nonprofit groups around the country are running similar depots on a smaller scale but these institutions deal mainly in recovered items of interest to antiques enthusiasts and history buffs. The Baltimore depot gets a few of these shoppers, as well — a gold-leaf mirror rescued from a razed mansion recently sold for $1,300.

For the most part, however, the Baltimore depot caters to the householder who wants to replace a door or a section of flooring and is willing to put in a few hours of planing, polishing and repainting. Ninety-five percent of the depot's customers are home owners who have a genuine need for the items. The others are interior decorators, or owners of businesses, who want to perk up their establishments.

While the Baltimore experiement has yet to show a profit — the income is still exceeded slightly by the operation costs — it is going a long way in assisting resourceful home-owners who otherwise could not afford needed improvements. Moreover, the depot is grating new life to many serviceable items that conceivably might wind up in the limbo of a landfill.

Another View:

Lifting barriers

The U.S. Jaycees laudably seek to better their communities and to develop the leadership skills of the organization's members. Regrettably, the Jaycees have limited those goals to men.

Now, in a welcome ruling by the U.S. Supreme Court, Minnesota has been allowed to bring the Jaycees under the state's anti-discrimination statute. The court said the organization, open to virtually all men between the ages of 18 and 35, could not claim a constitutional right of freedom of association as a way to exclude women.

The Jaycees had argued that the goal of furthering leadership skills of young men would be effectively destroyed if the organization were forced to admit women. However, Justice William Brennan, writing for a unanimous court, rejected that view.

The court acknowledged that its decision was, to an extent, an abridgement of the Jaycees' rights of association. However, the court said that Minnesota's compelling interest in preventing discrimination against women justified the infringement.

Because the Jaycees were found to be a "large and basically unselective" organization, the court indicated that the group had a status unlike that of, say, the Kiwanis Club.

Whatever the legal fine points, all such organizations — often major parts of the network through which business and professional contacts are made and careers advanced — should open their doors to women. As women increasingly participate in the nation's business, professional and political life, they deserve the same opportunities as men to offer a contribution to civic betterment — and to gain access to a community's inner circle of leadership.

JACK ANDERSON

Prime minister changing Japan

WASHINGTON — When photographs of world leaders are taken, the Japanese prime minister usually appears somewhere near the edge. Yet Japan is challenging the United States as an economic power, and Japanese influence is growing throughout the world.

Jack Anderson

Japan's prime ministers have been faceless men, unknown and unappreciated, who have been quickly forgotten. But the 17th prime minister since the war, Yasuhiro Nakasone, will not be another anonymous leader. He is taking his rightful place at the center of the world stage.

After more than a year in office, two things have become clear: Nakasone is the most American-style leader to emerge in postwar Japan, and he is the best friend the United States has had in Tokyo since Gen. Douglas MacArthur left town.

Perhaps the most unusual thing about the 66-year-old prime minister is that he is determined to make himself a leader in a traditionally consensus-oriented society. In politics as in industrial policy, the Japanese believe in sharing the decision-making process.

"He's a new type of Japanese prime minister," U.S. Ambassador Mike Mansfield told my associate Dale Van Atta in Tokyo recently. "He's trying to lead. But he recognizes that has its limitations. He still has to conform to the idea of concensus, getting support from his people for what he does."

Mansfield said the very fact that Nakasone is trying to change his country's political habits shows he is "a man of courage." The ambassador described Nakasone as "a man who knows where he wants to go, a man who wanted to be prime minister all his life and now is."

A veteran of the Imperial navy in World War II, Nakasone was first elected to the Diet soon after the war at the age of 28. For most of his career he has been described as a "Young Turk." He has held five Cabinet portfolios, including the important ones of defense, international trade and industry, and science and technology.

One high-level Japanese official suggested that the key to understanding Nakasone as a politician is the fact that he is not, like many of his predecessors, a product of the bureaucracy. "He became a Diet member from local politics, not the longterm bureaucracy," the official explained. "That's why he was traditionally the dark horse in the power struggle."

Part of the reason for Nakasone's success — and for some criticism — is his exceptional gift for dramatic public speaking, a singular trait among Japanese politicians. Normally, the Japanese respect haragei (literally, "talking from the stomach"), meaning things left unspoken. The man of few words is revered.

"Nakasone thinks clearly," one political observer explained. "He expresses himself well, presents his thoughts in a well-ordered fashion and with some flair. He has unusual ability as a public speaker, unusual for a prime minister."

But Nakasone has also been the target of criticism for his oratorical histrionics. Some of this criticism may be inspired by political envy: Nakasone is formidably effective with the Japanese press, and a charismatic presence on television. "He's no Ronald Reagan, but by Japanese standards he is exceptional," said one Japanese observer.

In addition, the prime minister is skilled at one-on-one politicking, an adroit bargainer in the secluded Tokyo restaurant tete-a-tetes where the most important political deals are made.

Nakasone is unabashedly pro-American. He is "as good a friend to the United States as we'll find in Japan," said Mansfield. He added that Nakasone "makes no bones of the fact that Japan's policy is tied to the United States in the field of foreign policy and defense."

What are his objectives? A secret National Security Council study summarizes them in this order: 1. "Maintenance of its security;" 2. "its partnership with the U.S.;" 3. "Stable relations with China and the Soviet Union;" 4. "Mutually beneficial relations with other nations in East Asia;" and 5. "A regional and world environment facilitating Japan's trade, access to raw materials and foreign investment."

Nakasone has the distinctly un-Japanese habit of shaking hands with everyone he meets — a politically effective technique he said he learned from the late Robert F. Kennedy. He gets along fine with President Reagan; they are on a "Ron" and "Yasu" basis.

Nakasone keeps his equanimity by practicing Zen. "In the midst of chaos, he seems so still," said one friend. "But he is not asleep, unlike (the late Prime Minister Masayoshi) Ohira."

Mansfield, who sees the prime minister half a dozen times a year, described Nakasone as "ordinarily aloof, but when you get him in the right circumstances, quite warm." The ambassador said Nakasone has a sense of humor, but added, "Not too many Japanese have too great a sense of humor, so you have to grade it in degrees."

GEORGE F. WILL

Just a three dollar convention

SAN FRANCISCO — The Democrats' convention was the sort of event that Jim told Huck Finn "you wouldn't want to miss for three dollars." Four maybe, but not three.

George F. Will

It might have been a $7.50 convention, a humdinger, had Gary Hart pounced after Geraldine Ferraro's first interview with Walter Mondale, whose staff reported that she had done poorly. Had Hart got her to join a Gary-and-Gerry ticket, he might have knocked enough delegates off Mondale's pile to pull Mondale below the winning total. Hart then would, I believe, have been nominated in a rush.

Democrats certainly do have a powerful liking for being stampeded. The premier stampeder, Jesse Jackson, probably helped his party, and Ronald Reagan's..

Jackson gave Democrats in the hall, and some traditional Democratic constituencies, a chance to do what self interest and liberal doctrine make them want to do: feel warmly about him. So the unprecedented — turning over a night of the convention to someone who finished a distant third in the nomination contest — was practical politics, as well as emotional therapy for the man who has been seeking respect while others were seeking the presidency.

On the other hand, the congregation in the convention hall, experiencing a political Pentecost, was not, to put it mildly, a representative slice of that which matters: the electorate. Many people at home watching Jackson's hot performance on the cool medium must have thought, "Surely I am not part of the huddled masses summoned to come unto him. That party makes me uncomfortable."

Now as Walter Mondale charges forth, his lance at the level, to slay the dragon of Reaganism, the question is, "Where is the best of him?" He left here under the shadow of a doubt that hovered over him in January. The doubt is whether he has, as his opponent so conspicuously does, a talent for embodying a cause.

One discouraged Democrat says Mondale's strategy has become his message. Another says Mondale's method mirrors his mind, in this sense: Mondale does not think in terms of individuals. Rather, he thinks that everyone is a member of a group, and every group has their organization, and every organizaiton has a leader with whom you make arrangements. For example, a person from the South is a member of "The South," which has a regional political organization, at the head of which is...Bert Lance.

One splendid if unintended result of this convention is that a dreary subject may have been eliminated from this year's campaign. Lance left Washington under a cloud of charges that were as insubstantial as, well, a cloud — or as the charges against Ed Meese. Perhaps the parties can negotiate a mutual and verifiable freeze on sanctimony: "We won't talk about Lance's checkbook if you won't talk about Meese's cuff links."

The convention made the campaign themes as clear as consomme: Reagan is unfair at home and unsafe abroad.

When Jim asked Tom Sawyer what a Moslem is, Tom said a Moslem is someone who is not a Presbyterian. With similar precision Democrats say that "fairness" is not what Reagan delivers. Among the many things we will learn in the next 100 days is whether the "fairness" of the federal social agenda is a salient issue during an economic boom.

The country is more conservative than it was four elections ago, and the Mondale-Ferraro ticket is even more ideologically uniform and pronouncedly liberal than the second-most-liberal ticket of the postwar era, Humphrey-Muskie in 1968. Today only one-third of all Democrats describe themselves as liberals.

The current House of Representatives is the first in which a majority of seats are not from the states that won the Civil War. Republican successes in the rising regions — the South and West — have tempted, or forced, Democrats to concentrate on the Northeast and industrial Midwest. This regionalism partially explains today's unusually divergent views of the two parties concerning the country's condition and the government's agenda.

Only 10 elections since 1789 have been close, meaning won by a margin of approximately 3 percent or less. But close elections seem to come in clusters. Five were consecutive (1876-1892) and three were recent (1960, 1968, 1976). More than one-fourth of those who voted for Carter in 1976 did not in 1980.

Democrats can reasonably hope that their reasonably harmonious convention (only the second such since 1964) will revise the allegiance of those Democrats who were dispirited four years ago. So this was indeed a $3 convention, and in Huck's day three dollars warn't, as he said, nuthin' to sneeze at.

ANTHONY HARRIGAN

Rising of campus chic not needed

The decline of intellectual order in the United States can be traced to the transformation of many leading American colleges and universities into training centers for liberal chic. Though no educational institution gives a degree in fashionable liberal notions, many institutions know how to influence the moods and attitudes of the rising generation.

Anthony Harrigan

Development of liberal chic on the campus begins at the top with role models in the administration and faculty, often with the president of the institution.

This came to mind the other day in reading a glowing account in The New York Times of the personality, interests ad methods of the new president of Swarthmore College in Pennsylvania. The new president, Dr. David W. Fraser, was described as a "slightly unkempt young physician" whose chief personal ambition is "to write the world's best book on twining, an intricate sort of weaving practiced by various tribal peoples around the world."

The new president of this prestigeous college does all the right things. According to The Times, he "slouches in a chair, lopes off to lunch and bicycles around the arboretum. His shoes are scuffed and his clothes are determinedly undistinguished."

It's not that Dr. Fraser is the absent-minded professor type. The newspaper reports that Dr. Fraser was asked the other day what was the proper mission of a liberal arts college. "Liberation," he replied. And The Times added that he said this "without embarrassment." In today's world of liberal chic, why should he be embarrassed for not saying "sound learning" or "knowledge of our cultural heritage"? Such answers might cause him to be regarded as an old fogey in some circles.

One can't be sure from the article what type of "liberation" Dr. Fraser has in mind. He also is described as questioning traditions, including the college's Oxford-style system of individual study for honors students.

Perhaps the most significant clue to Dr. Fraser's outlook is his opposition to a new law requiring colleges to report students who seek federal financial aid but refuse to register for the draft. One wonders whether he is all for students receiving financial benefit from their country without doing anything to deserve it.

The final paragraph in The New York Times story on Dr. Fraser described a sit-in in a college building. The article stated that Dr. Fraser was "absolutely delighted." One might ask whether he views a sit-in as an element of "liberation."

Swarthmore is a private college, and its trustees can choose whoever they wish as president. The choice, however, is of public interest and concern. Private colleges have an important role in setting standards for public education in the United States. The leadership they have is indicative of the tone or tendency of the educational system in the United States.

America society faces grave problems. Eductional standards are deteriorating. National and international problems require the application of disciplined intelligence. Another dose of permissiveness is the last thing needed by a new generation of college students.

Convention comes to expected conclusion

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

Hearst

SAN FRANCISCO — Former Vice President Walter (Fritz) Mondale is savoring his first ballot triumph and the acclamation victory of his running mate congresswoman Geraldine Ferraro as the Democratic convention decamps.

Down to the computer counting, Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado contested the outcome, never really in doubt with all the party muscle Mondale assembled long ago. Then reality in figures set in and Hart appeared to urge "unity," as did the Rev. Jesse Jackson. An obviously relieved Mondale came forward to say thanks and appeal for an all-out campaign against President Reagan.

Mondale in his acceptance speech promised to cut the budget by two-thirds and hike taxes, no matter how much it hurts.

It was an expected end to an up-and-down primary campaign, preceded here under glorious San Francisco weather marred briefly by motley demonstrations of gays, peaceniks and myriad religious groups demanding "peace," to which the convention responded with throaty approval.

TV coverage was mercifully abbreviated for this convention at the Moscone Center — almost three football fields long and over half a football field wide — and built underground at the cost of $126 million. Saturation with stem-winding speeches and commentary filled the other media, and I won't attempt to bore you additionally except to note some important declarations.

New York Gov. Mario Cuomo delivered the keynote speech, lambasting President Reagan and the Republican administration. It was a fiery speech, all right, and positioned Cuomo as a front-runner for his party's stakes in 1988. The governor, I found through research, took lots of liberties with figures he used, which were distorted in large measure and most deceptive. I'll get around to that area of political chicanery a little later.

Then there was the emotional, rousing message by Jackson, first black presidential aspirant to address a convention. The mercurial Jackson, for months the center of controversy because of anti-Jewish remarks, apologized for any "pain" he may have caused in the heat of campaigning. Because of Jackson's loose lip qualities, many Jewish leaders stay skeptical of his convention appeal.

In his address, Jackson also declared that he intended to cooperate and support the party's presidential nominee. That enabled Mondale's people to breathe a sigh of relief because Jackson had been non-commital right to the last minute. It also effectively isolated Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado, who stayed in the race until he was counted out.

Sparked by Gov. Cuomo's attacks on the president's economic policies, a succession of convention speakers, including Sen. Ted Kennedy, went into the same orbit. It sounded to me as if they were looking back years ago and blaming Herbert Hoover for the Depression. Let's take a quick look at the record, not as the Democratic conventioneers try to tell it.

Just the other day, the Labor Department released the stunning figure that unemployment was at 7.1 percent nationally for June, the lowest rate for more than four years. It baffled all economists and was lower than when President Reagan took office, inheriting a big jobless headache and soaring inflation rate from Jimmy Carter.

The president, not simply satisfied with the challenge to his economic progress by the Democrats, will be touring the nation in a few days. He will contrast his projects of economic vitality, a strong defense and traditional values against the rhetorical accusations from the convention here. The trip takes President Reagan to Texas, Georgia and New Jersey, and as White House spokesman Larry Speakes said: "He has a good, solid record to run on and he's proud of it." President Reagan signed into law a package of tax measures that will trim $63 billion from the deficit and encompasses a wide variety of reductions from businesses to Medicare. It's an accelerated campaign schedule for the president, who hadn't been expected to head full tilt into the campaign until after the Republican convention in Dallas next month. Republican strategists are pleased because they don't want to be overconfident.

That tendency toward Republican over-confidence has been obviously strengthened by the incredible booboo committed by former Vice President Mondale. On the eve of the convention, he appointed Bert Lance, a controversial crony of ex-President Carter, as his campaign chairman. He also announced that Lance would help him select a successor to the popular chairman of the Democratic National Committee, Charles Manatt. The appointment of Lance, who had been indicted for fraudulent banking practices and later cleared, and attempted ouster of Manatt stirred revolt. So, in 24 hours, Mondale restored the man he dismissed, Manatt, but kept Lance as campaign manager.

Even that move soured rank-and-file Democrats. Many delegates sneered openly at Mondale's "southern" strategy and saw him as a totally indecisive leader. After the imaginative choice of congresswoman Ferraro of Queens, N.Y., the Lance on-again, off-again tactic is proving a sore point with Democratic delegates.

Then another Mondale claim is coming back to haunt him. On Nov. 28, 1979, when the Carter administration was sitting pretty, Mondale insisted: "This country needs seasoned, experienced, trained, tested leadership." As Jimmy Carter's vice president, Mondale was preparing for the re-election campaign of his boss, who was subsequently crushed by President Reagan the following year.

As followers of this report know, I'm pro-Reagan but have never hesitated to criticize him when I feel an administration policy needs sharp questioning. At this point, following nearly a year of primaries and his most recent questionable appointments, I turn this over in my mind: Do people want to try out the Democratic candidate who placed the emphasis on experience mentioned earlier in my report or re-elect the incumbent? Obviously, the president deserves re-election on his record.

Let me clarify my cable/VCR complaint

I am writing to clear a misunderstanding occasioned by my comments at a recent City Council meeting. I attended the meeting to express my dissatisfaction with the current cable television system and the operation of my VCR. Apparently I did not express myself well because (Gregg) Holmes of Times-Mirror and (Lana) Cunningham of the Reporter-Telegram misunderstood. While reading Sunday's Letters to the Editor, I found that I have an unexpected champion in Timothy Hartsfield. In the interest of fairness to all parties, I will try to clarify my complaint.

I own a VCR that is capable of taping up to nine different programs within a 15 day time span on different channels. However, with the converter system used by Times-Mirror, channel selection is controlled by the converter, thus I cannot program my VCR to tape several programs on different channels. I paid a good deal extra for this expanded programming feature only to find that Times-Mirror has rendered it worthless. Dennis Anderson, Regional Engineer for Times-Mirror, sympathetically confirmed my misgivings. Surely there must be a more feasible system. In fairness to Times-Mirror, they did provide instructions for using my VCR so that I could tape one program while watching another. Times-Mirror provided the coaxial cable at no charge. However, a necessary second converter did cost $3.45 and I did have to purchase a $10 switch from a local electronics store. I have yet to receive a satisfactory explanation from Times-Mirror. I trust that one will be forthcoming.

Since the City Council meeting, I have another complaint to register with Times-Mirror. WGN was replaced with CBN. I understand that the cost to carry WGN is significantly greater than the cost associated with CBN. However, I might point out that Times-Mirror now offers three channels with religious programming, two of which occupy channels on the lower tier. I for one, do not consider CBN a suitable replacement for WGN. As a friend noted, WGN not only offers programs different from those shown by CBN, but it also airs the Chicago Cubs baseball games, which would be of interest to Midland Cubs fans like myself. Why not place WGN on the upper tier? I for one would be willing to pay a little extra to absorb the increased costs.

Why not honor our Olympians of past?

I think it is very nice that the young man, Mark Genereaux, is riding his bicycle to the Olympic Games.

I have to wonder though where the judgement of the sports editor was that he did not see fit to also put an article on the sports page concerning Walter Laufer, who actually participated in the Olympic Games in 1924 and 1928. This man had an outstanding record. He won a gold medal and a silver medal in the 1928 games. He also beat Johnny Weismueler once.

We had to read about his feats in the obituary on the same day, July 17, that we read about the young cyclist.

Recent reassessments of property protested

Our Midland is a small and beautiful city. As responsible citizens, each of us must contribute to its improvement and development. For this reason I protest the recent reassessment of our properties valuation by the Midland County Appraisal District. The reassessment is unreasonable and results in unusually high property taxes. This improper taxation is dangerous for Midland's future development.

Midlanders are aware that our economic dependence on the oil industry has now left us in a recession relative to the boom which the Permian Basin experienced in the years of 1979 and 1980. A depressed market is especially evident in the real estate business with a glut of apartments and houses both for sale and for rent, one would expect a reassessment of property valuation reflecting the realities of the real estate of today.

Specific examples include 409 Marshall St., an unimproved vacant lot which is in a run down area on the east side. The valuation of this property escalated from $1,400 in 1983 to $14,000 and 2001 W. Kentucky, a 59 year old depreciated house jumped from a 1983 valuation of $25,000 to $59,440. The rationale behind these figures must be in error and thus unjust to all parties.

Taxation must be relative and proportional to the realities of today. We would like to maintain our dynamic and constructive attitude about our hospitable city. We do not want to be accomplice or accessory in accepting the Appraisal District proposal for this high and improper taxation based on high property valuation.

Members of the State Property Tax Board, please take my letter in due consideration about this delicate matter.

Just who do you call 'black community?'

I wish to voice my objection to the Midland Reporter-Telegram's frequent use of the phrase "the black community."

I realize that this is a popular euphemism in journalism today, but in fact it is overused, divisive and imprecise.

If you mean "blacks," say blacks. Why imply that Midland is divided into communities based on race? Whichever definition of the word "community" you wish to apply to the term, the issue of racial separation remains.

It is incongruous to write of "the black community" when no mention is ever made of "the white community." The editors probaby realize that utilization of the phrase "the white community" would be inviting criticism and vituperation.

Midland is a community comprised of people. When referring to one group of people, you are referring to a subset, not an entirely separate set.

Even a small effort to curtail divisiveness would benefit the community.

Don't underestimate historic home's worth

A problem of great magnitude has surfaced, causing many people of Midland to take affirmative action in endeavoring to "Save the Lancaster House."

It is the opinion of many that the Lancaster House is a historical landmark of great value that should be preserved.

It is appalling that in a time of great cultural growth in our city we forget one of the great sources that was the nucleus of much of our cultural development.

Midland was founded by adventurous pioneers and as Midland grew and flourished, the heterogenous influx of so much talent, both technological and artistic, caused Midland to be ranked as one of the most highly cultured cities in the United States.

Naomi Lancaster recognized this great artistic potential and worked diligently to give individuals the opportunity to individually and collectively develop the high culture that we now enjoy.

Are we, the citizens of Midland, going to ignore the opportunity to preserve this historical structure; or, are we going to silently watch the demolition of a fine building that has so much potential for being developed as an educational and art center?

Let us not underestimate the strength of a combined effort to "save the Lancaster House" if we contribute our nickles, dimes, quarters, and larger gifts. Money is needed for the preservation and maintenance of this fine historical

'Pigeon problem' ruining daily drive

Every morning I drive into Midland up South Big Spring, under the U.S. 80 underpass, and into downtown. Every evening I go home the same way. I don't know any other efficient way to come into town, but if something is not done soon I am going to have to carve out a new route.

I am speaking, obviously, about the pigeon problem in the U.S. 80 underpass. Yes, I know that pigeons are prolific and dirty and leave caustic little droppings all over everything. Yes, I know they are a nuisance and traffic hazard and make people angry. But surely there is another way to handle this problem besides poisoning the poor birds right there on the highway.

Twice a day I must drive through that underpass, past dying, dead, and squashed pigeons. Every day I must become a traffic hazard myself trying to avoid those birds that are making their last failing attempts at life, that are squatting forlornly in the middle of the road, peering out of feverish eyes at the cars zooming past. Every day I must wonder about the ultimate fate of the underprivileged kids who live on Midland's south side who stand in wait under that underpass, pouncing on the pigeons as they drop and taking them home to cook and eat. What happens to children who eat poisoned pigeon meat?

I have tried to turn my head the other way and declare that it is not my problem. I don't live under the underpass; I don't eat pigeon meat; I don't raise pigeons for fun and profit; I am not a member of whatever council it is that decided poisoning the pigeons was not the answer. But I cannot stand it anymore, and surely I am not alone!

Yesterday I almost rear-ended a little car parked in the middle of the road under the underpass in the 5:00 traffic. As I drove closer and realized the car was, in fact, stopped under there, I could see the driver, a frantic young woman, trying to figure out where to go as she watched with horrified eyes a pigeon going through its death throes. And because she was blocking traffic, I had to watch it, too. I had to watch that once high-flying bird, beautiful despite its personal characteristics, stretch its wings skyward and gasp for breath. I had to watch it reach for a gust of wind to carry it away from the death chamber that was once its nest. I had to watch it kick and jerk and finally collapse, its little legs outstretched in the road, and then I had to watch the car behind me pass us all and squash it.

The young woman in the car ahead of me pulled over to the side of the road and put her head on her steering wheel. She was either sobbing or throwing up; either would have been an appropriate reaction. I was fighting down both as I drove on home. And I do it every day, twice a day.

Please, somebody do something. And do it somewhere else but in public!

'Intense scrutiny' of convention beyond call of duty

NEW YORK — Tuesday night was warm and humid here on the eastern edge of the continent, a perfect night for baseball, and since we were trying to follow the Democratic convention the way it might be followed by the average American — whoever that might be — we drove to Baltimore to see the Orioles play the Minnesota Twins.

As a result, we missed Jesse Jackson's speech, which everybody said was so good, but came home persuaded that the Orioles desperately need a third baseman, a designated hitter and an outfielder who can hit .300 if they're going to beat Detroit for the pennant.

Breakfast television the next morning taunted us with hints that we had missed a real barn-burner of a speech by going to the game, but, being television, it refused to show us more than five seconds of the performance. When it comes to history, television is as useless as handwriting on the wind.

The night before the Jackson speech we stayed home to listen to Mario Cuomo's keynote address. All the TV ringmasters in their booths at the convention hall gave it an A-plus which seemed about right to us, too.

Even professional Republicans probably enjoyed it, since it must have left them grateful to be running against Walter Mondale instead of a spellbinder who could play the Wizard of Television just as expertly as Ronald Reagan.

Earlier in the week I spent a good bit of time worrying about Rep. Geraldine Ferraro's being subjected to intense scrutiny. For several days running you couldn't turn on the set without hearing a TV political expert say that, as the first female vice presidential candidate, she would be "subjected to intense scrutiny".

I didn't like the sound of this. Though I may not be the average American, I am as average as the next American, and since I would resent being subjected to intense scrutiny simply because I was running for a ho-hum job like the vice presidency, I believe Rep. Ferraro has a right to object to it, too, especially since the television experts suggested that the scrutiny would be intense because of her femininity.

I raised this question with the friend who had joined me in following the convention like the average American. "Would you want your wife, sister, daughter or one of your granddaughters subjected to intense scrutiny just because she ran for vice president?" I asked.

"What are you talking about?" he replied.

"Intense scrutiny," I said. "Every time I turn on the TV somebody is saying Geraldine Ferraro will be subjected to intense scrutiny. My God! If she were running for president they'd probably subject her to vivisection"

He said I was getting too involved with the convention and should look at less political TV. "We have to be average" he said. "Do you think the average American gives a hoot whether candidates for president are subjected to vivisection?"

So we turned to the cable and watched "Octopussy", which burlesqued itself too vigorously to be first-rate James Bond. The next day we watched the convention coverage closely — subjected it to intense scrutiny, you might say. We were trying to determine which TV correspondent would make the best James Bond if Sean Connery and Roger Moore both succumbed to SMERSH.

We had narrowed it down to a contest among Sander Vanocur, Roger Mudd and Bill Kurtis, when my friend spoiled the fun by pointing out that we were being old-fashioned sexist swine. "Why can't James Bond be a woman, just like a vice presidential candidate?" he said. "They could call her Jamaica Bond."

The night Gary Hart spoke we were eating at the Friendly Tavern and debating whether Lesley Stahl or Barbara Walters would make the better Jamaica Bond and did not get home until Hart was waving goodbye, backed up by the theme music from "Chariots of Fire." Afterwards we watched several newspaper pundits subjected to non-intense inquiries about the political future.

The Republican pundits more or less called Walter Mondale a pitiful hopeless boob while the Democratic ones talked about Harry Truman, who fooled the pundits 36 years ago. Since it was nearly 11 p.m., my friend and I were amazed that the Democrats still planned several more hours of speaking before officializing their choice of Mondale, so I went to bed and he went off to play Parcheesi with his wife.

It's hard to believe that television and Republicans intend to do the same thing all over again next month in Dallas.

City prepares to build up budget

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Midland's city budget could be described as the city's economic thermometer. As the economy has improved, city spending has gone up. As the business climate has soured, the mercury — or spending — has held steady.

The proposed budget for 1984-85 reflects an inching upward from the holding pattern from the past 1½ years, an indication the City Council might be letting out its breath slowly in hopes the stale economy is picking up some life.

Filed late last week in the City Secretary's office for public review, the budget calls for spending amounting to $57 million. This is an $8 million increase over the previous two years' budgets, which held the line at $49 million. Only two years ago, the budget had been set at $34.7 million.

It was during 1982 and 1983 that Midland's economy began to slide from a high in 1981.

For 1983-84 fiscal year, city employees toiled without a pay increase. This year the City Council has included a 5 percent raise effective Oct. 1 and a 1 percent hike April 1 if the economy reflects a definite upswing. This 5 percent is adding $1 million to the expenditures column.

Back in 1980, when Midland was running on a fast incline, the budget for fiscal year 1981 called for a six-cent tax hike, 25½ new employees and 7 percent pay raise for city employees. The tax rate went to 39 cents per $100 valuation on a tax base that for the first time broke the $1 billion mark.

This year, the tax base surpassed the $3 billion mark, and the council has proposed raising the tax rate by 3 cents to 37 cents per $100 valuation.

The last time the City Council didn't raise taxes occurred during the late 1970s when Midland was rallying from a depression in the early 1970s. As an example, there was the 1977 fiscal year budget which called for $15 million in spending but no increase in the tax rate. The increased spending was paid for from the city's unappropriated surplus.

The council still is drawing out of that unappropriated surplus. For 1983-84, it had planned to take $2.5 million out, but will only need $1.2 million. For fiscal year 1984, $1 million will come out of that surplus to cover the deficit.

The largest chunk of spending goes to the employees. Personnel services are up about $2 million in the General Fund budget due to a net increase of 3¾ persons.

Eighteen are being added to the Fire Department to staff the two new substations opening in north Midland. In addition, the city is paying a 20 percent increase in health insurance premiums, a hike in other fringe beneifts and several merit increases.

A breakdown of the various departments budgeted through the General Fund include: police, $569,000, includes eight new employees; fire, $517,000, 18 firemen funded for a full year; court, $112,306, three new persons; streets, $139,213, three new employees; data processing, $57,335, half an employee; parks, $90,000, no new employees; finance, $54,600, one new employee; MidTran, a reduction of $59,000, loss of 8¾ employees; traffic engineering, $103,000, three new employees.

School system counting cost of reforms

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

It took reams of paper, weeks of study and hundreds of questions, but Midland school officials finally have been able to determine the local impact of recent legislative educational reforms.

Guidelines for advanced placement testing and prekindergarten classes will cause the most frenzy, Assistant Superintendent Dr. Duane Moore predicted.

Effective this year, school districts must develop and offer advanced placement tests for all primary grades and each subject at the secondary (sixth grade and up) level. Primary students passing the tests by at least 90 percent can skip a grade, and secondary students will receive credit for the class.

"We must form a committee and develop examinations for each grade level," Moore explained. "We have never done that before. We operate the gifted and talented program, and we feel that's responsive to the needs of gifted students."

Midland Independent School District already offers credit-by-testing at the secondary level in some subjects, he added.

ACCORDING TO new guidelines which go into effect next summer, 4-year-old students who speak limited English or who come from low-income families will be eligible for prekindergarten. The preschool would be similar to MISD's Head-start program, the only difference being that only financially disadvantaged students now qualify.

Moore guessed enrollment could increase from 220 to 400 or 500 students. "That would raise problems with facilities, staff with appropriate certification and funding," he said.

Finding teachers who are certified in both early childhood development and bilingual education will be extremely difficult, he added. "This is going to cause us some real problems because the number of teachers who possess bilingual certification and early childhood certification are few and far between. It will be a real challenge to MISD and most school districts in the state."

Other statewide changes involve testing of students and teachers. By June 30, 1986, all teachers and administrators must take a one-time-only competency test. It will test their knowledge in their area of certification. In addition, prospective teachers will be required to pass a test before receiving certification.

STUDENTS WILL be tested in 11th grade for mathematics and English language arts skills. Both sections of the exit test must be passed before a student receives a high school diploma. Districts must provide a program of remediation for students who fail the test. They must also offer to tutor students who fail a particular course.

"That is not too dissimilar to what we do now," Moore said. "This year we offered study halls for academic failures, but only at the secondary level." The problem, Moore pointed out, is that Midland students must earn 22 credits to graduate and only have the opportunity to take 24. Voluntary remedial programs may have to be offered after school or during the summer, he said, adding he was unsure whether or not a fee would be charged.

Another regulation states any student who has five unexcused absences in a class will not receive credit for that class. That, coupled with a limit on the number of days a student can miss for extracurricular activities, has prompted MISD to develop a computerized method for keeping track of absences.

The career ladder concept provides for supplementary pay for teachers meeting criteria regarding education, experience and performance. "It's very similar to our performance-based salary supplement," Moore said. The main problem involves inclusion of other teachers as evaluators. Not only does this detract from their teaching duties, Moore noted, but will require extensive training. "It's not an easy task. We have spent three years training our principals to do it."

"We'll have to include two parent-teacher conferences a year in addition to those others" for failing students, Moore added. "That's a major change."

OTHER MINOR changes that will have to be made are:

— The district must give written notice of students' grades each six weeks, and the notice must be signed by parents and returned to the district. At present, MISD does not require such signatures from parents of secondary students.

— Parents must be notified in writing when their child has received an unsatisfactory grade, and a parent-teacher conference will be requested.

— Classes cannot begin until after Sept. 1.

— School districts lost state funding for driver education. "This means we'll have to look at our income in the drivers' education program and determine if additional fees are necessary to fund it," Moore said.

— A discipline management program will have to be implemented. "We currently have a management program at the elementary level — assertive discipline. The secondary schools also have a code of conduct and specify discipline for misbehavior. We'll have to fine tune that process to bring it into compliance."

— Teachers will be given two days prior to the beginning of school for class preparation.

— The Texas Assessment of Basic Skills (TABS) test will be administered in grades one and seven, as well as three, five and nine.

— All instructors will be required to teach at least four hours a day. In a few cases, Moore explained, teachers who were also chairmen of large departments only taught three classes per day.

Registered piano master craftsman Aaron Cummings plunks out a few notes on a Steinway.

Those piano lessons 'pay off'

Midland man master at tuning, repairing instruments

Midlander in Profile

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Like most children, Aaron Cummings didn't like learning to play the piano. But looking back, he's glad his parents insisted on the training.

That's because it led to an unusual career and the chance to work for such noted entertainers as Willie Nelson, Ferrante and Teicher, the Oakridge Boys and Ronnie Milsap.

"Two performers I particularly enjoyed working for were Marty Robbins and John Denver," says Cummings. "They were very personable. Some artists don't take the time to visit backstage. Those two did. I also admire their music."

What he does backstage for the stars is tune their pianos. But that by no means exhausts his talent at the keyboard.

At 33, Cummings is a registered master craftsman who not only tunes and plays pianos but also overhauls them — something only a dozen or so other people in Texas are able to do.

He apprenticed under two master craftsmen for five years, then trained at the Steinway factory in New York. Today, he's the official Steinway technical representative for the Permian Basin and works out of the Doc Young Music Co. in Odessa.

"Both of my mentors were in their 80s and didn't charge for the training," said Cummings. "They were nearing the end of their careers and wanted to see someone carry on the art.

"It's really about the only way to learn the business. You have to be fortunate enough to have someone take you under their wing and show you how."

Although other companies manufacture grand pianos, the Steinway Grand is considered the Rolls Royce of grand pianos, according to Cummings:

"They're handmade and take 16 months to build. You never throw any grand piano away. Each overhaul lasts 60 to 70 years, but pianos should be tuned every year. Not having them tuned regularly can lead to major repairs."

Cummings recently finished rebuilding a 1923 Steinway Grand for Midlander Connie Erskine. The job took four months, with much of the time spent waiting for parts.

Mrs. Erskine paid $800 for the used instrument in the late 1940s. Today, the same piano would sell for $18,000.

Overhauling Mrs. Erskine's piano involved taking out its 236 strings, removing the tuning pins and sound plate — or harp — repairing cracks in the sound board with spruce shims, refinishing the sound board with a special lacquer and replacing a cracked pin block.

"Then it was simply a process of putting everything back together and tuning the piano," recalled Cummings, who majored in music at Southwest Texas State University in San Marcos.

"There's not anything on a grand piano that can't be repaired — from a broken ivory to worn felts."

Tuning and minor repairs are accomplished in his clients' homes; major repair work is done in the shop. Most of his specialized tools come from France and Germany.

Cummings uses his own handmade equipment to move pianos in and out of homes, and employs a specially built trailer to transport them.

He works on the Midland—Odessa Symphony Orchestra's 9-foot Baldwin Grand and once made an interesting discovery on a Steinway Grand owned by the Midland school district:

"When I opened it, I found it had been signed by a member of the Steinway family in the 1940s. It really makes the piano unique, in that it's one of the few ever signed by a Steinway."

Grand pianos range from $8,000 to $54,000 in price. Pianos in general contain more than 7,000 moving parts and 14 different types of wood. The wood provides structural stability and the varying tones produced by pianos.

There's from 150 to 180 lbs. of pressure on each string of a properly tuned instrument, for an overall inward pressure of about 20 tons on the sound board and plates.

Cummings also rebuilds player pianos. With "a little help" from his wife Kay, he averages 12 major overhauls a year and "hundreds of tuneups. A lot of times — especially with player pianos — you have to fabricate your own parts.

"To me, taking an instrument made by a master who is now dead and making it beautiful again gives me a great deal of pride."

So much so that he signs his work like the old masters signed theirs.

Four-year-old Meghan Cummings and her 6-year-old brother Gregory have not shown much inclination toward following in their father's footsteps.

But perhaps remembering what his parents accomplished by "coercing" him into piano lessons, he smiles and says: "They're going to."

GARY OTT

Speech would be unconventionally dramatic

All things considered, I don't think I would enjoy giving a major address at a political convention. For example:

— I would probably be forced to follow someone like Jesse Jackson and everyone would fall asleep before I got to my third paragraph.

— I do not have the ability to put words together that will bring tears to the listeners' eyes. The last time I made someone cry was when, at age 17, I informed my parents I was dropping out of society and joining a religious cult.

— When pausing for dramatic effect, I would reach for a glass of water and promptly drop it, causing a small puddle to form on the stage.

— When leaving the stage, I would slip and fall in that same puddle of water.

— I find it extremely difficult to discuss issues of great importance such as world hunger and the nuclear arms race when surrounded by balloons and silly-looking placards.

— When reaching the high point of the speech, my voice would suddenly crack, giving me the sound of a late-developing adolescent.

— When beginning my speech I would say, "My name is Gary Ott..." and there would be no applause or sign-waving.

— I would mispronounce the name of the candidate I was nominating.

— Following my speech I would move that my candidate be nominated by acclamation. The motion would fail, amid much laughter, booing and hissing.

— Upon my arrival at the podium I would suddenly realize I had brought the wrong notes with me.

— In an attempt to loosen up the crowd I would relate a few amusing anecdotes but, unfortunately, forget the punch lines.

— Halfway through my speech I would experience a sudden craving for a cigarette.

— Following my address no TV newsmen would rush toward me in search of further comment.

— While I was making a sarcastic remark about Jerry Falwell a bolt of lightning would strike the convention hall.

— Forgetting that Martin Luther King Jr. said it first, I would begin my speech by shouting, "I have a dream." Understandably, the black delegates would be offended and shortly thereafter announce a boycott of my candidate.

— In an attempt to be patriotic I would quote from the Pledge of Allegiance...incorrectly.

— After leaving the stage I would be informed that my zipper had been in a most embarrassing position throughout the speech.

— During my address the TV cameras would suddenly shift to a floor fight (a real one between a South Georgia boll weevil and a lesbian from San Francisco), leaving me with an audience of balloons and silly-looking placards.

Which is probably just as well.

DEATHS

DeBusk infant

Celeste Lucy DeBusk, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred N. DeBusk of Midland, died shortly after birth Thursday. Services will be at 6 p.m. today at the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, with burial in McCamey Cemetery.

Other survivors include six brothers, Allen, Tyson, Todd, Jason, Justin and Brent DeBusk, all of the home; a sister, Christina Louise Gibbs of Dallas; and two grandmothers, Della Robb of Burbank, Calif., and Jewell DeBusk of McCamey.

Memorials may be directed to the Building Fund of the Midland Third Ward, Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, c/o 3606 Stanolind, Midland.

Nadine Ford

Nadine Ford, 69, of Hobbs, N.M., and formerly of Midland, died Thursday in a Hobbs hospital following an illness.

Graveside services were held Friday in Prairie Haven Cemetery in Hobbs.

Mrs. Ford was born March 6, 1915, in San Saba and had lived in Midland until the 1960s, when she moved to Temple, and last March, she moved to Hobbs to live with her daughter.

Mrs. Ford was a member of the Rebekah Lodge and the Veterans of Foreign Wars' auxiliary.

Survivors include a daughter, Ruby Bonner of Hobbs; two sons, Eugene Ballard and Ernest Ballard, both of Brownwood; four brothers, Val Glenn of Temple, Dell Glenn of Moran, Leaburn Bowman of Houston and Delvin Glenn of Los Angeles; two sisters, Wynama "Boots" Danley Riley of Midland and Emma Lou Bradshaw of Austin, and a number of grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

R.W. 'Bill' Jones

Richard W. "Bill" Jones, 42, of Midland, died unexpectedly while vacationing in the Dominican Republic on July 18.

Rosary is scheduled for 7 p.m. Monday at the Ellis Chapel. Mass is scheduled for 11 a.m. Tuesday at St. Ann's Catholic Church, with burial to follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Jones was born Oct. 14, 1941, in Bloomington, Ind., and was reared in Corpus Christi, where he attended Mary Carroll High School and Del Mar College. He served in the Army, moving to Midland after receiving his discharge in 1964.

After working for the Reporter-Telegram for a short time, Jones joined the Southwestern Co. At the time of his death he was a district salesman fr Compugraphic Corp. He married Jocelyne Stanton in Midland in 1965; she preceded him in death on June 8, 1983.

Survivors include two sons, Matthew Christopher Jones and Andrew Douglas Jones of Midland; and a sister, Mrs. James Sharp of Houston.

Velma Barnett

Services are pending at Ellis Funeral Home for Velma Barnett of Midland, who died Saturday at a local hospital.

Faulk: American society 'unique'

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

In politics, U.S. citizens can't afford to let things run their course without knowing and exercising their rights, said constitutional expert John Henry Faulk.

In this arena, the Austin native, also known as a humorist and folklorist, voiced his greatest concern during an interview prior to his public talk this week on "To Secure the Blessings of Liberty" at the Permiam Basin Petroleum Museum.

"The citizens of this Republic in which we live are not conversant with those varied principles and ideals that make it possible to be the people that they are.

"We are a unique society. It is the first on the face of the Earth and in the history of mankind where people took charge of their own destiny — where the people became sovereign and the government became the servant."

In 1787, when the founding fathers drew up the Constitution of the United States, Faulk said, they rejected monarchies wherein kings ruled by Divine Right and the people had very little say. They formed a Republic, a democracy; the people would decide who was going to serve them in the government.

"And this was regarded as so revolutionary, so utterly absurd by all the existing society's except ours, that we were regarded as very temporary...But it worked. Ours worked and we became a beacon light of freedom to the rest of the world.

"My concern is that most Americans don't understand this...Do you know that 85 percent of the American public, according to Gallup, do not know what the First Amendment is?

"They don't know whether it's a local ordinance passed by the Midland City Council or whether it's a state law or federal law.

"They don't realize it's the result of the genius and wisdom of those men who sat in the first Congress to amend the Constitution and to pass on to you and me and all of our fellow citizens the great benefits of a free society, a self-governing democratic society."

Rights guaranteed under the First Amendment are essential to the survival of the United States as a free country.

"No self-governing democratic society such as ours can endure without a free press, without freedom of speech, without freedom of conscience, without the right to peaceably assemble and petition our government for redress of grievances, just as no totalitarian and authoritarian society can exist with those rights.

"I think this places a great responsibility on all American citizens to know what these guaranteed rights are.

"You might say, 'What difference does it make to me? What if Bill Jones is deprived of his right to print a paper. What if he's shut down by the government. I'm not running a newspaper or they don't bother my newspaper 'cause my newspaper praises the government, so they never try to shut me down. Shut him down; that's his business.' It isn't. It's your business because when the bell tolls, it tolls for all of us."

Faulk's belief in John Donne's "No man is an island" has him convinced that the Reagan administration has, on several occasions, moved the world too close to the tolling of the bell.

"I'm not a Democrat; I'm not a Republican. But I'm quite concerned over our foreign policy. I'm deeply alarmed over the state of international affairs, and I feel that the president has placed not only this country but civilization in a very precarious position in terms of nuclear annihilation because of his policies over the past three years of confrontational politics with the Soviet Union....

"We're living, as (Albert) Einstein predicted we would, on the very abyss of annihilation. There is nothing that we differ with the Soviet Union over that would be worth annihilating the human species and nothing that they could gain from a war that would be worth annihilating the human species for. And so I suggest that we have but one choice and never have had any choice since the nuclear age began but to carry on, rethink our position, and carry on an open, and complete dialogue — not a name-calling contest....

"I think that the president of the United States, in his confrontational attitude toward the Soviet Union, has now gotton the Soviet Union so terrified — and they were paranoid enough as they were — that almost anything could set off a confrontation that nobody could call back. And this is a very dangerous policy.

"War became an anachronism when we entered the nuclear age. As Einstein said, 'When you release the power of the atom, everything's changed except man's modes of thinking, and thus you drift toward unparalleled disaster.'

"I see nothing in the administration's policies that indicate that they know this. Otherwise, you would do everything you could to calm your enemy down, if you knew he could wipe you out, if you were realistic.

"I think the quicker we get this administration out of office, the safer we will be." Then he added, shaking his head, "I don't know. The Democrats are not much better on this matter."

It was a carton of mistaken identity

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

John Henry Faulk

A Texan transplanted to New York may be mistaken as an expert on rodeos. At least that's what happened to humorist, folklorist and constitutional expert John Henry Faulk in 1947.

"Since I was the only one at CBS that came from Texas, they were under the impression that I would surely know all about rodeos," Faulk said, laughing about his experience announcing the first remote broadcast of the World Championship Rodeo held at Madison Square Garden.

"The only rodeo that I'd ever seen in my life when I was growing up was one a carnival had that came through Austin. Well, I ran down to the New York library and read up on rodeos."

It wasn't announcing the event that gave Faulk problems. Pushing the sponsor, Camel Cigarettes, did.

In the middle of the event, Faulk ran down two floors in Madison Square Garden to sit in the midst of bales of hay adorned with Western saddles to chat in his best folksy manner with "cowboys and cowgirls" who were first screened by representatives of the sponsor.

"They'd sit down there by me, and I'd say, 'Howdy there. How're you feeling, partner? Where're you from?'

"Then I'd say, 'Well, what do you smoke?' and they were supposed to say, 'Well, I don't care; just whatever I can get.' And I'd take a carton of Camel Cigarettes and say, 'I want to give you a carton of Camel Cigarettes — there's not a cough in a car load — that was our motto.'"

Things went smoothly until a maverick ran in through the lines and was on the air before Faulk or the sponsor suspected he hadn't been screened.

"I'm sitting up there, and this old boy come wandering up, one eye cocked, mouth hanging open, snuff running out of each corner of his mouth and hat kind of beat up on."

The man ambled up and sat down beside Faulk. The resulting conversation went something like this:

"Hello there, what's your name?"

"Willie."

"What do you do, Willie?"

"I shovel bull; ah, I look after brahmers (Brahmas)."

"They're pretty dangerous, aren't they?"

"Shore are, if you ain't got more sense than to get in the damn pen with 'em."

"Willie, what do you smoke?"

"I don't smoke."

"I want to give you a carton of Camel Cigarettes; that's the best cigarette you've ever smoked."

"Naw. I wouldn't want 'em."

"They're free."

"I know, but them things'll kill you. Them Camel Cigarettes are the worst ones you can smoke. They'll give you TB."

Faulk was finally able to get Willie to take a carton, but his parting blow — "I'll give 'em to somebody I don't like" — was almost more than the live telecast could stand.

"The one thing that was unmentionable on the air at that time was any connection with illness and cigarettes. Cigarettes represented the biggest source of the advertising dollar in radio and television at that time. There were no rules against it."

Faulk chuckled for a few minutes before adding, "He was utterly sincere; he wouldn't lend himself to exploitation by the silly advertising folks."

Since then, Faulk has had his own radio and television shows as well as guesting on numerous television talk shows in addition to being a regular on the long running "Hee Haw." He had a few comments to make about television and radio advertising today.

"I've seen as many as five or six one-minute spots in a half hour show. I think it's an imposition on the public, and I think it's going to run its course. I think the public's going to rebel at it one of these days."

Soil samples from West Texas examined for DDT contamination

ODESSA (AP) — State agricultural officials are examining soil samples taken from far West Texas for evidence of DDT and its byproducts, after a federal study found dangerously high amounts of the pesticide.

Results of the study should be available in the next several days, said a Texas Department of Agriculture official. The soil samples were gathered last month.

An earlier investigation by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service found that some animals living along the Rio Grande and Pecos River in Texas and New Mexico had the highest levels in the country of a DDT breakdown product.

Agriculture inspector Dale Burnett said he and other state specialists visited farming communities in and near Pecos, Presidio, Dell City, El Paso, Coyanosa and Van Horn last month to check for the sale or use of DDT. Soil samples were taken beginning June 11.

Burnett said the team found no sales or reported use of DDT during their visits last month. Use of the chemical was banned in the United States 12 years ago.

"It kind of confirmed what we already knew," he told the Odessa American.

Burnett said results of the soil samples will be given to a toxicologist in Austin.

House in county destroyed by fire

A house on Cloverdale Road in Midland County was destroyed Saturday morning by a fire which took firefighters six hours and 8,000 gallons of water to extinguish.

No one was hurt by the blaze, which was reported at 3:57 a.m. By the time the last of the seven fire units which responded returned to its station at 9:58, the home owned by Karis Paschal near Cole Park had been destroyed, fire officials said.

The cause of the fire was undetermined.

Firefighters were also called out Saturday to extinguish a fire in a storage building at 610 S. Lorraine.

No one was injured by the fire, which was reported at 9:13 a.m., but fire officials said there was heavy damage to the wood frame building and its contents.

The cause of this fire was also undetermined.

CITY

Net increase in the General Fund is $417,000, according to a memo prepared by the city staff. Other major expenditures were $64,500 for computer maintenance; $83,000 in traffic supplies and equipment to stripe streets more frequently; $452,000 for sealcoating and street repair; and $370,000 for parks in which $75,000 will be for developing House Park and $180,000 for renovating Doug Russell pool.

The Water Fund and Airport Fund are self-sufficient departments, attempting to pay all expenditures from revenues.

There is a decrease in one item under the Water Fund, and that is $67,000 the city won't have to pay people for using effluent for irrigation. The new disposal site should be opened later this year. Otherwise, the city is expecting to pay $113,000 more in electric charges to pump water; and $450,000 more in buying water from the Colorado River Municipal Water District. Debt service on $20 million in revenue bonds to build that sewage disposal site should amount to $404,000.

City officials are planning to raise the water and sewer rate 6 percent to help balance that fund's budget. Minimum sewer rate would go up to $10.50.

Under the Airport Fund, no new employees are budgeted. Maintenance on the Terminal Building is expected to cost $39,000. Debt service on the $7 million bond issue should cost $167,000.

Homeowners' insurance rates may fall

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The average homeowner in Midland County would pay 11.9 percent less for homeowners insurance coverage under rates proposed by the State Board of Insurance staff for policies written or renewed on Dec. 1.

Statewide, the SBI staff recommends a decrease of 8.6 percent for homeowners coverage.

Board members will consider the staff recommendations and recommendations of insurance industry representatives at a hearing set for Thursday in Austin.

A spokesman for the board said the reductions reflect changes in the rating formula used by SBI, with consideration of investment income to insurance companies and elimination of the 5 percent profit factor included in the previous formula.

Industry officials haven't released their rate recommendations or commented publicly on the formula changes.

Last year was a time of considerable losses in homeowners coverage due to Hurricane Alicia and the "big chill" at the end of 1983.

However, a board spokesman said the figures used in calculating the changes were "closed out" before the losses from freezing weather were considered.

SBI earlier reported total earned premium on homeowners for 1983 came to $888.3 million, with losses of $1.2 billion incurred.

Other property lines for which the SBI staff recommended changes included the following: (Statewide figure first, then Midland County figure.)

— Tenant homeowners, up 16.9 percent (Midland, up 19.2 percent).

— Farm and ranch owners, down 8.2 percent (Midland, down 9.2 percent).

— Fire, down 4.9 percent (Midland, down 4.9 percent).

— Extended coverage, down 7.5 percent (Midland, down 2.4 percent).

MISD

— The district will have to submit a comprehensive district performance report to the state. "Basically it's a matter of combining the many activities we do now in one report," Moore said.

OTHER CHANGES were anticipated by the school board and made into policy before House Bill 72 was approved:

— Minimum score for a passing grade was raised from 60 to 70 percent.

— A failing grade will result in the student's suspension from extracurricular activities for the following grading period.

— Interruption of the school day for non-academic activities will be limited as much as possible.

People of our community who make a difference.

Reagan H. Legg

Midland can be aptly described as"energetic" and "optimistic", because it reflects the personalities of Midlanders, such as attorney Reagan H. Legg.

Since Mr. Legg moved to Midland in 1948 he has invested his energy in making Midland a well balanced community. His optimistic leadership has been an asset to Midland's development in the arts, in charitable organizations, in politics, in religion, and in the business community. In addition, Mr. Legg has invested much energy in the educational development of Midland.

The arts have prospered in Midland because of people like Mr. Legg who was a member of the Board of Governors of Midland Community Theatre (1963-1965) and president from 1965 to 1966. He has also served on the board of Trustees of the Midland Symphony and Chorus Association(1961-1963).

Charitable organizations have benefited from Mr. Legg's energetic leadership. From 1966 to 1972 he was on the Board of Directors for the Permian Basin Multiple Sclerosis Society.

Mr. Legg has also been active politically. He is past chairman and secretary of the Midland Democratic Executive Committee. However, Mr. Legg's optimistic commitment to Midland's development does not stop with politics.

Midland's religious life is also important to Mr. Legg. Since 1955 he has taught an adult Sunday School class at Saint Luke's United Methodist Church.

In addition, Mr. Legg has contributed much time and energy to Midland's business community. He has been director of the Midland Chamber of Commerce (1968-1973), a member of the Education and Legislative Committees (1973-1977), and Chairman of the Education Committee (1978-1983).

Education is the sector of Midland's life which most interests Mr. Legg. He takes pride in serving on the Board of Trustees of Midland College (1972-). He was elected president of the board from 1972-1975 and is serving another term now which will expire in 1986. In 1977, Mr. Legg was selected by the Association of Community College Trustees as the most outstanding community college trustee in the United States.

Strong beliefs, dedication and action are why Reagan H. Legg makes a difference in Midland.

Answer Line

My question is: Do you know if there is any group or any people in Midland who will quilt tops for others?

I have several tops which were pieced by my grandmother and would like to get these quilted. — Audrey James ANSWER: Contact Alice Carlton at Calvary Baptist Church, 682-8392. There are members of this church who meet weekly for quilting.

Someone is burning trash in a pit south of Midland and, when the wind is blowing from that direction, we cannot even raise our windows at night because of the terrible odor. Can't something be done about this? — Anna LaPaglia

ANSWER: Answer Line contacted the Midland Fire Department, Midland County Sheriff's Department and the Air Control Board office located in Odessa. The day the Air Control Board was called, the supervisor and inspectors from that office were visiting the privately owned dump ground south of Midland to discuss with the owner the burning of trash, because the office had received several complaints such as yours.

The owner has made efforts to prevent the burning of trash on his property, because, among other things, when the Midland Fire Department is called to put out these fires the expense is paid by the owner. Some of these fires are unintentional and some may be caused by vandals.

The Air Control Board can issue a citation for notice of violation to the owner and if the situation is not improved can start legal action.

The Midland Fire Department does assist in extinguishing fires happening outside the city limits in Midland County, but has no legal jurisdiction, according to Assistant Fire Marshal Bobby Williams. The Midland County Sheriff's Department is unable to do anything about burning of trash outside the city limits, because the county does not have an ordinance against this.

The supervisor of the Air Control Board is Charley Sims. He can be contacted at 367-3871 for further assistance.

I am elderly and work as a daytime babysitter. I feel I have been cheated by the couple I work for. In fact, if my figures are right, they owe me about $72. Is there any way I can collect this money without hiring a lawyer? — J.B.

ANSWER: Yes. You can sue the couple is small claims court, says the State Bar of Texas.

Any claim for damages, wages, salary or for labor performed under a total of $200 can be brought in the justice of the peace or small claims court. Get in touch with the clerk of the court in the precinct where your employers live. You will be advised how to swear out your petition and how to sue for wages and for the cost of the lawsuit. You may represent yourself in this court. You will not need a lawyer since the judge will conduct the hearing.

I'm wondering why there isn't a city ordinance of some kind to get those garage sales signs off the posts after the sale is over? It is aggravating to see the signs and go to the address and the sale was yesterday or before. — Margaret Beard

ANSWER: The reason no ordinance exists to remove signs from utility poles is because there is a law making it illegal to place any signs on utility posts in the first place, says Warren Cloyd with the city's Code Enforcement Department.

This law is difficult to enforce because of the number of signs being illegally placed on these poles. Cloyd said it is a policy of the city for persons driving city vehicles to remove signs as they find them.

NOTE TO DELIA HERRON: Regarding your complaint about weeds and mesquite obstructing motorists' view of oncoming traffic at the intersections of New York Street with Colorado Street and at Big Spring Street, the problem has been eliminated. Orlando Temple with the city's Traffic Engineering Department immediately inspected the intersections and, in this case, the city was able to remove the obstructions. If City Hall was the office you contacted two weeks before you called Answer Line, you must have talked to the wrong department. In some situations the city must contact the property owners, but because of the conditions at these intersections, the city could take immediate action.

Barbecue to benefit Lancaster House

From Staff Reports

The Neighborhood Committee to Save the Lancaster House has a fund raising barbecue set for 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at Haley Park.

Since the Museum of the Southwest's board of trustees granted a 90-day reprieve for the home just days before the scheduled June 15 demolition, the committee has established subcommittees to work on such issues as how the Lancaster House can best be used by the museum and the community, what funds it will take to put it in useful condition and how to stir up public interest in preserving the home.

The committee hopes to encourage community involvement through the placing of signs and donation cans in stragetic areas as well as by organizing planned activities, such as the upcoming barbecue. The barbecue costs $10 per plate and includes dinner, entertainment and a progress report. For more information call 682-1939 or 682-8911.

Completed in 1938, the Lancaster House was for many years the seat of cultural activities in Midland. The home and property were given as a gift to the museum in 1970.

Naomi Lancaster, who moved to Midland with her husband Lynn (who died approximately 10 years later) in 1927, was instrumental in the formation of the museum, the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale, Midland Community Theatre, the Palette Club and Midland Arts Association, the forerunner of the Midland Arts Assembly.

She also had a hand in working closely with the music clubs, art groups, garden clubs, First Presbyterian Church, the American Association of University Women, the League of Women Voters and the Midland Chamber of Commerce. Her work with the Midland Chamber of Commerce included civic beautification projects and the support and further development of the Midland Public County Library.

The Neighborhood Committee has tentatively come up with an amount of $300,000 to save the Lancaster House. "We think we can repair it for that and set up an endowment also," said committee spokesman Jody Gilles. "We may be wrong. We do not have hard and fast figures from architects and contractors and electricians and plumbers."

The figure released by the museum on the cost of restoring the house to its original condition is $350,000, minimum, and a matching endowment fund to maintain the property each year. To restore and redesign the house so that it could be utilized as a museum facility the board said would run in the neighborhood of $700,000 and would once again require a matching endowment fund to maintain it properly.

'Olympics' slated at parks

From Staff Reports

The Parks and Recreation Department will hold Olympics and cookouts at local playgrounds to mark the end of playground season.

The Olympics will be held at each playground this week. Children can go to the playground nearest their home and compete in one-legged races, sack races, Frisbee toss, ball toss, gymnastics and baseball, and ribbons will be given out.

The Henderson Park Olympics will be Monday; the Wadley-Barron Park Olympics will be Tuesday; Tumbleweed Park Olympics, Wednesday; Grafa Park Olympics, Thursday; and the Lancaster Park Olympics, Friday.

The cookouts will be held at each playground beginning Friday at Lancaster Park. Each child is asked to sign up at his neighborhood playground or at the Parks and Recreation office before the day of the cookout. Each child will be charged $1 for the cookout, which will include hot dogs, chips, cookies and Kool-Aid. Children are welcome to attend all the cookouts, but must sign up and pay for each one.

The Lancaster Park cookout is set for Friday; the Henderson Park cookout for July 30; Wadley-Barron Park cookout, July 31; Tumbleweed Park cookout, Aug. 1; and the Grafa Park cookout, Aug. 2.

Final sessions start in parks programs

The Parks and Recreation Department has announced that the fourth and final session of summer programs will begin Monday. Children who have registered for programs should report to the following places:

Summer Fun Camp — Ulmer Park.
Pre-School Fun Camp — Parks and Recreation Gym.
Swimming Lessons — Doug Russell Pool.
Tots and Parents — Ulmer Pool.
C.P. Center — C.P. Center.
Tennis Lessons — Lee High School Courts.

All children should report at the time stated on their registration forms. For further information, call the parks and recreation office at 683-4381, ext. 316.

Park departments planning bike race

From Staff Reports

The Midland and Ector county parks and recreation departments and Peyton's Bikes announce the first Twin Cities Bike Race, to be held Aug. 4 at 8 p.m.

The race will begin at the Friendship Monument on Highway 191 between Midland and Odessa. It will run east to the Highway 191 — Andrews Highway crossover, then west to the Loop 338 crossover in Odessa and then back to the starting point.

Entry forms are available at the Parks and Recreation Office at 300 Baldwin St., and at Peyton's Bikes.

There are a number of medications that are made specifically for infants and children, and you can be sure to find them when you come to SERVICE DRUG OF MIDLAND, at A & Scharbauer (682-2519). 18 years of experience as a pharmacist has qualified me to advise parents on what medicines to use and which to avoid for their tots. We're open Mon.-Sat. 8-7. Visa, Mastercard and charge accounts accepted.

MEDICATION AND TODDLERS

The major problems in administering medicines to toddlers are taste and consistency. Parents have used numerous methods in disguising medicines that their children dislike taking. Some of the more successful methods include hiding the medicine in well-liked foods such as ice cream. Remeber that it may be easier for some children to swallow a ground table in ice cream than it is to swallow a supposedly good tasting liquid. Taste the medicine yourself so that you have some idea of what the child has to confront. Whatever system you use to administer your child's medicine, inform your physician. It may be that certain techinques can alter the medication's effectiveness.

HINT:

With infants, place medicine toward the back of their cheek pouch with a dropper.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

MC says goodbye to long-time employees

By H.A. TUCK

In the past two weeks, we've had to say goodbye to a pair of long-time Midland College employees who have contributed to the growth of the college for a number of years.

Dr. Richard Jolly, chairman of the technical studies divison, is moving to Fort Worth to become Associate Dean of Instruction for the Northwest campus of the Tarrant County Junior College district. He joined Midland College in 1977 as Job Placement Director, then became an instructor in management before being appointed a division chairman.

Anne Evans has taken early retirement because of medical reasons. Anne came to Midland College in 1976 as supervisor of a faculty pool, then became secretary to division chairman Dr. Jack Schneider.

• • •

"Kid's College at MC" got off to a great start last week and will conclude this week. There were hundreds of youngsters, ages 9 to 12, on campus enjoying a variety of courses offered for their enrichment and skill enhancement.

It took a lot of effort to put the program together, much of it by program coordinator Sue Alford and the folks in the Community Services Department. Also to be commended are all the teachers who agreed to teach for the eight days, including some who taught more than one class each day.

• • •

John McEnroe didn't hurt his attraction any last week by winning both his singles matches and teaming with Peter Fleming to win the doubles in th United States-Argentina Davis Cup quarterfinal tie in Atlanta, won by the U.S.A. 5-0. Seats really are going quickly for McEnroe's scheduled exhibition in Chaparral Center Aug. 9 against Vitas Gerulaitis, so don't delay buying your tickets to watch the world's greatest current tennis player in action.

EDUCATION

• • •

When the United States Olympic basketball team begans play later this month MC trustee Bill Kleine will have more than a passing interest in the players. His nephew, Joe Kleine from the University of Arkansas, is a member of the Olympic team.

• • •

MC President Dr. Jess Prrish last weekend was re-appointed as Legislative Chairman and a member of the executive committee of the Texas Public Community/Junior College Association, which is comprised of the presidents and chief executive officers of the 47 public community college districts in the state. the re-appointment came in Arlington during the group's annual summer meeting.

As legislative chairman, Parrish serves as the group's watchdog and chief spokesmen for the interests of Texas community colleges in both Austin and Washington.

• • •

OK, I'll concede the MC faculty softball team is much better this year. The team concluded its season this past week with quite a few more wins than its initial season in 1983 (well, almost any number is greater than one, isn't it?). Manager Will Morris and assistant manager Jack Schneider pushed the team to six wins this season, but may be taking their duties a bit too seriously, as we understand they now want to hold try-outs for faculty applicants, plus a budget for out-of-town recruiting.

Seriously, we are pleased with the improvement and know the team members have a good time in the league.

H.A. Tuck is public relations director for Midland College.

MC respiratory therapy students win 'Sputum Bowl' championship

Midland College's respiratory therapy class recently earned the title of state "Sputum Bowl" champions, qualifying them to compete in national "Sputum Bowl" competition in Phoenix, Ariz., in November.

The honor was bestowed in Houston July 10 at the Texas Society for Respiratory Therapy's annual seminar. The seminar included lectures on respiratory therapy, a review session for respiratory therapy students preparing for national board examinations and the "Sputum Bowl."

"Sputum Bowl" is similar to "College Bowl," in which two teams of students are questioned by a moderator. The team with the most correct answers after 20 minutes is the victor. "Sputum Bowl" is designed to test students' knowledge of respiratory therapy.

MC team members included students Michael Trusty and Kathy Wells, and instructors Bob Weidmann and Terry Gilmore.

In 1983 MC won the "Sputum Bowl" at the regional level.

DENNIS PORTER, son of Robert Porter of Midland, graduated from Walla Walla College in College Place, Wash., in June. He received a bachelor of science degree in nursing.

"Making the Grade" features students who have received degrees, awards, scholarships or other honors. Items should be brought or mailed to Education Writer, Midland Reporter-Telegram, Box 1650. Photographs can be obtained from the librarian or will be returned if a stamped, self-addressed envelope is enclosed.

education in brief

PBGC offers course in financial planning

Permian Basin Graduate Center is offering Personal Financial Planning and Investments in Real Estate for the Small Investor in August.

The financial planning seminar will be from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Aug. 16. Cost is $85. The real estate course will be from 7-9 p.m. Aug. 14-15 and costs $45.

Tax shelter seminar set

A free tax shelter seminar will be offered from 8 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Thursday at Midland College's Allison Fine Arts Auditorium.

The seminar will be co-sponsored by MC and the Midland Board of Realtors.

For more information call Ruth Young, education chairperson for the Midland Board of Realtors, at 683-5333.

MC resumes AIMS tests

Aptitude Inventory Measurement Service (AIMS) will return to Midland College during the 1984-85 school year to offer an aptitude testing program for adults and teens over the age of 13.

The first testing dates will be Oct. 19-21. Later tests will be offered Nov. 2-4, Nov. 30-Dec. 2, Feb. 15-17, Mach 22-24 and April 26-28. Testing takes one full day and three hours on either Saturday or Sunday.

The program is designed to give students information about possible vocations, schools and occupational pitfalls.

Adults can use aptitude information when considering career changes. In addition to revealing sources of discontent with the current job situation, the tests can indicate suitability of a different position with the same employer, a similar position with another company or training in a new field.

A $100 deposit is required at the time of application. The balance of $375 is due when the individual takes the test.

For applications and further information contact Dr. Robert A. Hawkins, MC, 684-7851, extension 123.

Sen. Sims appointed

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Sen. Bill Sims, D-San Angelo, has been appointed by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby to the Legislative Oversight Committee on State Telecommunications, which is charged with making recommendations to the 1985 Legislature on the replacement of the state's long-distance system.

Hobby also appointed Sens. Roy Blake, D-Nacogdoches, and John Leedom, R-Dallas, to the committee.

Luna family fund formed

A fund to help a family who lost their home in a fire May 31 has been established at Republic-Bank First National Midland by members of Our Lady of Guadalupe Church.

Israel Luna, his wife Olga, and their four children, ages 11 months through 22 years, have been living in a storage building since the fire.

Anyone wishing to donate furniture, dishes or clothing should contact Natalia Heredia at 682-4779, or Oralia Corrales at 683-7559.

Any assistance to the family would be greatly appreciated.

Evening orientation class offered for local Dale Carnegie course

Dale Carnegie Courses of Albuquerque, N.M., presented locally by A. Lee Straughan and Associates Inc., will hold an evening of orientation Tuesday for the upcoming 14-week Human Relations class.

The orientation is designed to acquaint prospective students with the subject matter covered in the Human Relations course so they can better determine whether or not enrolling in the class will benefit them.

One of three core areas of study covered by Dale Carnegie, the human relations class is intended to help individuals improve their personal relations skills.

The Tuesday orientation will begin at 7:07 p.m. and is being held in the Dale Carnegie classroom at Safety International, 6040 Highway 80. Further information concerning the orientation class and course registration can be obtained by calling Ron Bowman, 563-0801.

ARMED FORCES NEWS

Promoted to his present rank while serving with 1st Marine Division, Camp Pendleton, Calif., is Marine Cpl. Harold W. Smauley, son of William B. and Evelyn Smauley of Andrews.

Navy Ensign Michael L. Mahan, son of Richard L. Mahan of Odessa, recently completed the Aviation Pre-Flight Indoctrination School with academic excellence.

The six-week school, conducted at Naval Aviation Schools Command, Naval Air Station, Pensacola, Fla., is the first phase of aviation officer training. It introduces the prospective naval aviator, naval flight officer, and air intelligence student to the naval aviation environment and provides instruction in basic aviation related subjects.

Instruction includes aerodyndamics, physical fitness, swimming, engineering, land and sea survival techniques, aviation physiology, navigation and aviation student information.

Navy Seaman Recruit Tony R. Wingo, son of Jack and Sandy Parrot of Big Spring, has completed recruit training at the Naval Training Center, Great Lakes, Ill.

During the eight-week training cycle, trainees studied general military subjects designed to prepare them for further academic and on-the-job training in one of the Navy's 85 basic occupational fields.

Included in their studies were seamanship, close order drill, Naval history and first aid. Personnel who complete this course of instruction are eligible for three hours of college credit in Physical Education and Hygiene.

Navy Ensign Marshall W. Kilman, son of Lola M. Kilman of Big Spring, is currently participating in a West Coast Cruise. He is an officer assigned to the tank landing ship USS San Bernardino, homeported in San Deigo, Calif.

During the cruise, the ship is scheduled to visit several West Coast cities. Festivities the ship will be part of include competition with reserve units, local sports teams and embarkation of local civilian guests for cruises on the Columbia River, while in Portland, Ore.

The San Bernardino is 522 feet long, has a crew of 225, and can accomodate an additional 420 combat-ready troops.

Navy Seaman Danny R. Mercer, son of Mr. and Mrs. C.L. Mercer of Odessa, has completed recruit training at the Naval Training Center, San Deigo.

Marine Gunnery Sgt. Troy L. Gage, son of Paul P. and Sally Nauret of Odessa, has reported for duty at Marine Corps Helicopter Air Station Tustin, Calif.

Marine Cpl. Paul R. Burk, son of Leroy and Florence Burk of Andrews, was recently awarded the U.S. Marine Corps Good Conduct Medal.

The award, which signifies honest and faithful service over a three-year period, was established by the Secretary of the Navy in July 1896 to recognize good behavior and conduct in the Marine Corps.

"IF YOU THOUGHT THESE GUYS WERE GOOD ACTORS, YOU SHOULD CATCH THE REST OF OUR SHOW."

— Bill Howard, President of Gibson's

Recently, we received several letters at Gibson's suggesting that the people in our television commercials were professional actors and actresses. People paid to say nice things about our stores. Not so.

The people you see on television are real people. Real Gibson's employees. People who work in our produce department. Our meat department. Hardware and sporting goods departments. In cosmetics and groceries.

And if you were impressed by their performance on camera, you should see the rest of the show we're putting on everyday at your local Gibson's. We've cleaned up the stores. Filled the shelves with more of your favorite name-brand merchandise. Lowered prices. And improved service. It's no act.

It's our way of saying we want your business. Now, we may not win an academy for this, but we do hope to win you over to Gibson's.

THIS WEEK IN GOVERNMENT

Midland City Council

Animal Control will be changing its fees for services and its attitude toward wild animals in city limits if ordinances are approved Tuesday by the Midland City Council. The session starts at 10 a.m. in City Hall Council Chambers.

One ordinance would regulate when a wild animal could be kept within city limits. The other would raise fees for services offered by the Animal Shelter.

A final selection on a consulting firm for designing the new Midland Air Park might be approved. At the council meeting July 10, the council heard reports from numerous firms wanting the job.

The council also will hear a presentation from Shearson/Lehman on a new method of airport financing.

Drainage problems in Silkwood Addition will be heard for the second time. This addition is west of and adjacent to the current Air Park. Drainage from the development would run across Air Park.

An 11 a.m. public hearing will be held to declare certain structures dangerous and their removal ordered. Also at that hour, a public hearing is scheduled to consider a drilling plan for leasing the northwest quarter of Section 4, Block 38.

A 1:35 p.m. public hearing is scheduled on the request by Irene Sanders for a specific use permit for a day nursery 300 feet north of the intersection of Cuthbert Avenue and Austin Street.

Parker & Parsley is asking for an oil and gas permit in Hogan Park for a well 901 feet from the north section line and 1,267 feet from the east section line.

The council will consider granting a permit for a taxi stand at Midland Regional Airport.

County Commissioners Court

Midland County commissioners will discuss license plate fees and other business in their regular meeting at 9 a.m. Monday in the Midland County Courthouse.

Commissioners are to:

—Consider a report from Albert Stewart, road and bridge superintendent.

—Consider a request to advertise for bids for a new automobile for Constable Tom McGinnis's office.

—Discuss a telecommunications system.

—Discuss liability insurance.

—Discuss license plate fees.

—Discuss preventative maintenance for the heating and cooling systems of the courthouse.

—Discuss a resolution for Midland County's observance of Texas's Sesquicentennial.

—Consider approving election judges and alternates for the Nov. 6 general election.

MISD Board of Trustees

Midland school trustees will meet in regular session at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday to study the preliminary 1984-85 budget. Trustees are also expected to call a special board meeting to consider recommedations and make any necessary changes to the tentative budget.

Other items on the agenda include: Consider changing the kindergarten through third-grade day from 8-11 a.m.

Fewer construction permits issued

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

Fewer new homes are being built in Midland this year than in recent years, but there are apparently more people around to fill the houses and apartments already on the market.

Statistics prepared by the Economic Development Office of the Midland Chamber of Commerce show that new residential construction permits through May were down 32.7 percent from a year ago, and new commercial permits were down 67.4 percent.

But total employment was up 14.8 percent, so even though the labor force increased from 64,500 to 72,500, the number of people unemployed actually fell from 3,700 to 2,600.

Chamber of Commerce Executive Vice President Grant Billingsley downplayed the importance of the decrease in construction activity while hailing the employment increase as a sign of economic growth.

"The focus should be on the fact that an increased number of people are in the work force and getting hired," said Billingsley. "Business activity seems to be increasing."

Employment is a better indicator than construction of where the Midland economy is going, Billingsley said.

"Construction is going to lag behind. We aren't going to see the same levels we've seen in the last couple of years — it's just not needed."

There were 69,800 people employed in Midland in May, compared with 60,800 the year before, and the unemployment rate had fallen from 5.7 percent to 3.6 percent.

"In terms of unemployment rates, we're third in the state," said Billingsley. Only Bryan-College Station and Austin have lower unemployment rates than Midland, "And they seem to be the recognized hot spots in the state now."

Postal rates, airline boardings and water, electricity and telephone service connections were also up a bit from May 1983, indicating that Midland may have returned to the slow but steady growth of the pre-boom years.

"I see a slowdown (from the boom years)," said Public Utilities Director John Lowe. "It looks like we're back down to where we were."

Before the boom years, the city was adding about 600 water connections every year, but during the early 1980s the annual number went up to between 1,200 and 1,400, said Lowe.

But water connections were only up 1.6 percent in May from the year before, from 26,512 to 26,940.

"That's about where we should be," said Lowe.

Telephone modems to be demonstrated

From Staff Reports

There will be a special demonstration Monday of the use of telephone modems utilizing two microcomputers at the monthly meeting of the Computer Interest Group of Midland.

The meeting will be at 7:30 p.m. in the Midland Room at First City National Bank Tower II. Independent computer consultant Gene Houk and Henry Atchison of Clay-Desta National Bank will talk to each other through two microcomputers.

The telephone modem is an electronic link to anywhere in the world — it gives computer users access to all kinds of information. Even people who have computers in their homes can hook up to the rest of the world through their modems.

The demonstration is open to the public.

"Some people only live this way two weeks a year."

Welcome to vacation living all year long. Welcome to Saddle Club Apartments. Saddle Club isn't a resort-we just look like one. We offer you 2 sparkling swimming pools, 2 lighted tennis courts, 2 indoor racquetball courts, a universal gym, indoor and outdoor jacuzzis, and wet and dry saunas.

Once inside a Saddle Club apartment home you can cozy up to a warm fireplace, relax on your own patio or balcony and enjoy the feeling of luxury living.

There's privacy here, but if you want activities, we have planned resident get-togethers.

Rent beginning at $310. We're located only minutes from major businesses, recreation, fine restaurants and entertainment. We're probably only a few minutes away from where you work.

So if you feel like taking a vacation that never has to end, take a drive over to Saddle Club and let us show you how.

Tana Boyd hops into shape in a lycra leotard by Flexatard.

Vertical stripes by Softouch set the scene for Marcia Pack at the weight machine.

For years, Americans have been obsessed with the idea of keeping physically fit — thanks to the persuasive tactics of Jack La Lanne, Richard Simmons, Jane Fonda and other exercise gurus.

Donning their enviable Hollywood physiques, these "ministers of fitness" have capitalized on the craze and have transformed it into a multi-million dollar a year business complete with promotional television shows, record albums, books and individual lines of athletic apparel and sportswear.

Health clubs, which originally distributed membership cards exclusively to the "creme de la creme," now are as much a part of society's mainstream as McDonald's and Burger King.

And according to a few authorities on exercise and exercise fashion, the age of the 20-minute workout and designer leotards apparently is here to stay in Midland — at least for a while.

Debbie Ticer, aerobic exercise instructor at The Bodyworks, La Villita Shopping Center, said people of all ages are becoming more aware of how important an exercise program is to fitness. She said she has seen a definite "increase in interest as far as aerobic exercise is concerned."

Aerobic exercise routines resemble ordinary callisthenics but they actually do differ according to various medical reports.

"Aerobics strengthens the cardiovascular system by increasing the heart's utilization of oxygen preventing it from working as hard to carry oxygenated blood through the body.

"Also, there is a general toning and firming of the body," Ms. Ticer said.

To benefit from the program, she said participants must exercise "for 12 minutes at a minimum of 80 percent of the heart rate."

While the primary emphasis of aerobic exercise is to strengthen the cardiovascular system, she said it can be harmful if performed haphazardly.

"More attention is paid to the actual warm up and cool down periods mainly for injury prevention. But there is a risk of injury if you don't do it right."

Ms. Ticer said the current obsession with physical fitness also has transcended to the fashion industry.

She reports leading designers are constantly developing innovative fabric and color combinations hoping to create apparel that will appeal to fashion-conscious consumers.

Top selling items at The Body works include blouson leotards, cover ups to serve as exercise suits and casual wear, leg warmers, stirrup tights, belts and other matching accessories.

Unitards — full-length support suits made of cotton and lycra — also are popular selling items for fall, she said.

Ann Wright, owner of The Dance Shop, San Miguel Square Atrium, said "parachute" pants and jackets are the new wave in dance and exercise wear according to her sales figures.

The outfits — 100 percent nylon and similar to the formerly popular "windbreaker" — are considerably more durable than the average warm-up suit and are designed to hold in body heat, she said.

Other fashionable trends, according to Mrs. Wright, include "overlapping leg warmers accented with bandanas," separate trunks, midriff tank tops and exercise sweaters worn over leotards.

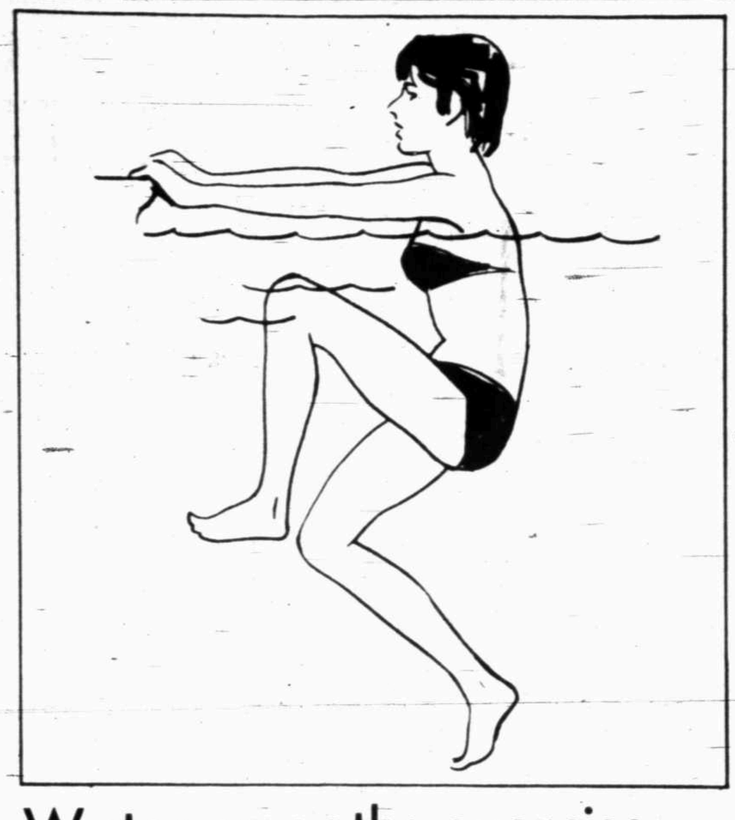
She also said she's impressed with the wide use of color adding that red, white and blue will be featured for fall as will purple, khaki, jade and mauve.

Leigh Stafford of The Sport Scene, San Miguel Square Atrium, said blouson leotards and two-piece trunk and tank tops and rapid sellers in the boutique.

"Our customers prefer them because they're comfortable, cooler and they're not quite as binding."

Also, she said separate trunks in solid colors do well "because you can wear different tops and get a different look each time you wear them."

Trek-ish fashions, modeled by Tana Boyd, in a purple and black lycra leotard and Toni Norris, in a fuschia unitard, set an enterprising mood for exercisers.



Water smooths exercise

By PATRICIA LORENZ
King Features Syndicate

I hate to exercise. I mean I hate it! Alone at home, or in a class in a gym, or even in a plush fitness center, to me excercising is sweaty bodies; smelly jogging outfits and gym clothes; strained, pulled and aching muscles; and a feeling of intense exhaustion and wild hunger pains when it's all over. Pretty bad attitude, eh?

I should qualify the above statements. I hate land exercises for those very reasons. However, I love aquatic exercises. What, you may ask, are aquatic exercises? Simple. Exercises done in the water...the nice, cool, refreshing, spirit-lifting water.

For the past 10 years, off and on, I have taught aqua-size classes in Missouri, Illinois and Wisconsin. As far as I'm concerned, it's the best way to get in shape, stay in shape and have fun while you're doing it.

One reason aquatic exercises are the best kind of exercises, is that the water itself doubles the effect of your efforts, and at the same time relieves any feeling of muscular strain.

By doing the exercises in the water instead of on land, you get twice the benefit without any sore muscles the next day. Besides that, water workouts give you long, strong, graceful muscles rather than bulky, knotty ones.

Aquatic exercises are certainly nothing new. For years they have been used as therapy to help patients regain the use of damaged limbs and muscles. A handicapped person with partial use of legs or arms can accomplish wonders in a water exercise program.

Who are the best candidates for aquatic exercises? The answer is simple. Everyone. Men or women, young or old, fat or thin, swimmers and non-swimmers, handicapped or not...everyone can do aquatic exercises with good results.

Most of the exercises are done in three to four feet of water so you don't even have to worry about getting your hair wet, although sometimes the splashes do work their way topside. Most people don't mind, though, because they're having so much fun.

I've found that the majority of my students are swimmers who enjoy ending each class session with about 10 minutes of lap swimming. During this time I take the non-swimmers to the shallow end and continue the exercises or help them with their swimming skills if they wish. (It helps to find an aquatic exercise leader who's also a certified swimming or water safety instructor.)

Just what are some of the exercises done in aquatic exercise class? Here are 10 basic examples. Start your program slowly. Gradually increase your speed and the number of times you do each exercise. As the class progresses you will also add more difficult exercises. You'll be amazed how much faster and easier you can do each exercise from one week to the next.

— Flutter kick. Hold on to the side of the pool with your body prone on the surface of the water. Flutter kick for 60 seconds without bending your knees. Kick from the waist and hips. Make those large thigh muscles work for you. Flutter kick both on your back and on your stomach.

— Leg lifts. Stand with your back along the side of the pool and your arms at a 45-degree angle holding onto the edge of the pool (or gutter). Raise your right leg up slowly (knee straight) and down again, 10 times. Repeat with the left leg.

— Arm circles. Squat under the water until the water reaches your chin. With arms straight out to the side (even with your shoulders), make big circles under the water. Do 25 big circles forward, then 25 circles backward.

— Side winders. Stand with your back to the side of the pool. While holding on to the side, raise both legs to the surface of the water, then pull both legs first to the left side (until your left leg touches the wall) and then to the right side (right leg touches the wall). Repeat 10 times each side.

— Jogging. Everyone jog in a big circle. Put your right hand on your right shoulder, left hand on left shoulder and twist your torso while you jog. Or put your hands behind your neck and touch right Elbow to left knee, then left elbow to right knee while jogging.

— Up, out, together. With back to side of pool, hold on to side (gutter) and raise legs up to surface. Pull your feet up toward your torso (knee out), then separate, straighten and stretch legs way out. Finally, slam legs together in original position. Repeat 10 to 20 times.

— Jumps. From a crouching position, jump out of the water with legs spread. Close legs quickly on the downswing. Repeat 10 times.

— Wooden soldier walk. Walk across the pool and back, raising your right leg out of the water, keeping the knee straight. Touch your right toes with your left hand, then let the right leg fall forward in a giant step. Repeat with left leg. Keep your back straight, shoulders pulled back and down, tummy in.

— Ballerina. Stand with your right side to the side of the pool. Hold on to gutter with right hand. Bring your left leg up in front of you and swing it around slowly 180 degrees (Keep toes out of the water), then lower the leg behind you. Repeat 10 times then switch sides and do the same with the right leg.

— Wall walk. Face the wall. Hold on to the gutter. Keep knees straight and walk up the wall. Bounce five times, then walk down. Then turn around (face the water), hold on to side and arch your back. Repeat wall walk, arching five to 10 times.

There are many more aquatic exerices for stretching, strengthening and firming every muscle in the body. In my classes I teach over 50 different exercises. The speed and number of times you do each exercise should be left up to discretion of each individual in the class. When you feel yourself getting overly tired, it's time to slow down, then change to an easier exercise.

When you're in the water, avoid the temptation before and after class to just stand there and visit with your friends. Visiting is fine, standing still is the bad part. Move! Swing your arms and legs. Bend your knees.

Any movement in the water is an exercise, no matter how easy it seems. That's the beauty of aquatic exercises.

Have you heard...?

By MARILYN McKNIGHT HARRISON

Sharla and Daniel Hamil were honored at a series of parties in Midland prior to their wedding Saturday evening in the First Presbyterian Church.

Pre-nuptial festivities began last February with an announcement party given by the bride's parents, Joan and Robert Southerland, in their home and concluded Friday evening with the rehearsal dinner hosted by the groom's parents, Erline and Ronald Hamil of Friendswood, at the Hilton Hotel. A bridesmaid's luncheon Friday noon at Ranchland Hills Country Club was given by Margie (Mrs. Donald) Lee.

Other courtesies extended the couple were a kitchen shower given by Annette (Mrs. Cristobal) Engleman and Jocelyn (Mrs. Richard) Williams; a "Honey-Do" couples' shower hosted by Penny and Ernest Angelo, and a brunch given by Roberta (Mrs. Buford) Bain and Frances Sizemore.

Also a miscellaneous display shower given by Gwen (Mrs. Don) Sparks, Sally (Mrs. Ken) Steward, Nelda (Mrs. Bill) Johnson, Miriam (Mrs. Norman) Womack and Sandra (Mrs. John O., III) Nobles; a lingerie and rice bag shower hosted by Francene (Mrs. G.H.) Lawless and Wanda (Mrs. Richard) Reed, and a pounding party given by Linda (Mrs. Alvin) Boyd and Mary Sue (Mrs. R.G.) Harrison.

The steeple bells rang as the guests departed the church for Midland Country Club, where the reception featured champagne punch, hors d'oeuvres, a four-tiered cake and dancing to the music of "Jade." The newlyweds arrived at the club in a limousine and departed in a horse-drawn surrey with fringe on top.

Adding a special touch to the wedding, the bride's Victorian-style gown of organza and re-embroidered Alencon lace was designed and made by her mother, and she carried a lace-trimmed, linen handkerchief that was originally fashioned as a baby bonnet for her to wear home from the hospital and was to be saved for her wedding day. The groom's wedding ring was made of gold from rings belonging to Sharla's family.

The couple will make their home in Lubbock, where Daniel is studying toward a degree in mechanical engineering technology at Texas Tech. The bride is a May graduate of Tech.

BENNIE AND BOB BLEDSOE were welcomed home from a wedding trip to La Jolla, Calif., with an ice cream party recently at the home of Schatzie and Charlie Tighe. Guests were employees of Bob's law firm, Cotton Bledsoe Tighe & Dawson, and their spouses.

Prior to their marriage June 23 in St. Nicholas Episcopal Church, the Bledsoes were feted with a cocktail party at Midland Country Club. Host couples were Lucy and John Woodside, Mary and Barry Beck, Jan and Dick McMillan and Patty and Tevis Herd.

Mrs. Beldsoe is the former Bennie Pennell.

TWO MIDLAND COUPLES, Kathy and Randy Taylor and their son and his wife, Cal and Randi Wolfenberger, recently attended a family reunion in Bonn, West Germany. They spent two weeks in Germany and Switzerland with the Taylor's older son, Klaus Wolfenberger, his wife Patti, and their daughters, Inge and Angela. Patti is the daughter of former Midlanders, Millie and Dwight Ford of Oklahoma City.

A 1965 graduate of Lee High School, Klaus received his college education at Texas Tech. Associated with the U.S. Justice Department since 1975, he was located in San Francisco prior to his assignment to the American Embassy in Bonn last year. He serves as a legal attache.

While in Germany, the family toured Southern Bavaria by automobile, spending several days in the rural village of Elbach visiting German relatives. They traveled to Switzerland by way of the Black Forest. Their final destination in that country was Zermatt, a popular Swiss resort, at the foot of the Matterhorn, which can only be reached by train from Tasch a few miles away.

While Cal and Randi returned stateside, the Taylors remained an additional two weeks and spent the last five days enjoying London's many attractions.

RUTH AND AUGUST WENCK enjoyed a visit in College Station recently with their son, Robert, and their grandsons, Robert Jr. and August II, who has just returned from a six-year stint with the U.S. Air Force Band in Germany. He plans to enter the music program at North Texas State University in the fall.

The highlight of the Wencks' visit was the Texas A&M dinner theatre production of the comedy, "Bell, Book and Candle," which their son directed and produced. Robert teaches drama and theatre arts classes at A&M and produces two dinner theatre shows each summer. The second will be an Agatha Christie mystery in August.

Southern belles didn't sunburn

Hearst Feature Service

If only women today were as smart as Scarlett O'Hara, who never knew the pain of sunburn or skin cancer. That's because she and other Southern belles were never far from their parasols and bonnets.

"The bronze, blond goddess in her 20s is going to be the prematurely wrinkled woman in her 40s," warns Dr. Darl Vander Ploeg, a dermatologist at the University of Texas Health Science Center at San Antonio.

The summer sun doesn't just cause a painful burn. Prolonged exposure also can lead to thinning of the skin, protruding blood vessels, wrinkling, brown spots and a tendency to develop skin tumors, called keratoses. Long-term exposure can lead to skin cancer.

"More than 95 percent of skin cancers are caused by exposure to the sun," said dermatologist Dr. Calvin Day, who specializes in the treatment of skin cancers. He added that many of his patients don't take cancerous growths on their skin seriously enough. "A skin cancer can be deforming and it can kill you," he said.

Sometimes, everyday exposure to sun over a period of years can cause skin cancers. Day cited studies that show men in this country are likely to get cancer on the left side of their face — the side exposed while driving. In England, where people drive on the "wrong" side of the road, the opposite is true. Women, who in years past were usually passengers, had a tendency to develop cancer on the right side of their faces.

"There is a 20 to 40 year lag between the time of exposure and onset of skin cancer, so we need to reach the ones who won't listen — the teens and people in their early 20s," Day said.

"Middle-aged, fair-skinned people who have had prolonged exposure to the sun have an unbelievable amount of skin cancer," Vander Ploeg said.

"People in their teen years burn themselves to a crisp and then wonder in their 40s why their skin is so terrible," Vander Ploeg said. The answer? Moderation and common sense from an early age on.

'Trailing spouses' common

Hearst Feature Service

Uprooted from Philadelphia, "trailing spouse" Judith Greber finally got to the family's new Los Angeles house. Her two sons and the dog were irritable. The moving van had vanished in Arizona. The drains were clogged. Greber sat on the front steps of the empty house and cried.

Greber's plight is common to wives of upwardly-mobile types. Every year, 1.5 million Americans make job-related moves. Most of these cause considerable family discomfort; many lead to alcoholism, depression, chronic anxiety, stress, obesity and even divorce.

The now determinedly settled-in Tiburon, Calif., resident is still haunted by the horrors of corporate relocation.

Greber has researched the nationwide problem and turned it into the plot of her second novel, "The Silent Partner," just published by Crown. And her husband recently left the presidency of that transfer-prone firm to head a new company "and to stay put. We're not moving, partly because of the book and partly because we have decided to take charge of our lives."

Greber believes corporations worry about women's complaints, "but too often their attitude is, 'How are we going to shut her up?'

"Eighty percent of corporate transfers can be avoided by long-term planning. There are solutions, some more expensive, but I hope that we are heading toward more human consideration. I like to think that a rational core will discover corporations are beginning to lose some of their best people. There is more recognition of the problems to the family, resistance from feminists, dual-career marriages, damage to children, financial costs — on the average, it costs a company $40,000 to relocate an executive and his family."

In her research, Greber found the average corporate move was every two years. "I talked to many women who had moved 18 times. My bottom line was the woman whose husband was with an oil company; they moved 30 times in 35 years and she finally had a nervous breakdown."

Denim has good, bad points

By BETTY W. KINSER
Copley News Service

Denim has many qualities, the most notable ones being it comes in several weights, it is durable and it is always in style.

But — just to keep the game interesting — it also has a few disadvantages. It fades (and fades and fades); it shrinks (and shrinks and shrinks); it frays (and ... well, you get the picture). But give it up? Never!

When selecting denim for a sewing project, look at all the weights. There are weights heavy enough to make a tent and weights light enough for a dress. Choose the one best for what you are making, remembering the fabric will become softer and lighter in both color and weight each time it is washed.

Buy an extra ¼ yard for each yard you need to allow room for shrinking. Prewash and dry fabric before cutting. Then, prewash and dry again. And again. And again. Press prepared fabric gently to remove any wrinkles.

Use a "jeans/denim" needle (Schmetz makes a very good one) and quality thread. On dark blue denim, black thread works better than navy. For outside work, select a topstitching thread in one of the colors used on ready-to-wear denim garments. Seams on denim should be either flat-felled, bound or overlocked to prevent fraying.

Flat-felled seams can create quite a "wad" at the hem area. So, after turning up the hem allowance, steam then pound seams to flatten and make stitching easier.

For topstitching, set machine for a slightly longer stitch and loosen upper tension a little.

Americans order brides from Asia

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — John Line's Asian wife had lately been acting suspiciously American, and now, looking for someone to blame, he blamed the Avon lady.

In a way, the Avon lady symbolized, for John Line, all that is pernicious about America, a country whose women have been ruined by demon ambition and dratted feminism.

So Line opted for the same solution that thousands of his countrymen have taken. He went and got himself a mail-order bride to cure all that. An Asian woman from a poor country, a woman who had some gratitude. He found her in a catalog. She more than fit the bill.

The woman was a virgin, nearly 20 years his junior, and she had other qualities he liked. "She can't add or subtract," said Line with pride. "She can't read a ruler." All of these were plusses. To further enhance her value, Line kept her ignorant of certain things that are more or less taken for granted in California and some other places, like driving a car.

FOR A YEAR and a half she couldn't use a telephone, but recently he taught her. Given that, and given that it took $6,000 to get her over here from the Philippines, nice and legal, she might find better ways to pay him back than the way she was acting: "She's in the bedroom now. Pouting."

This was driving him nuts. "She should thank God every day that someone took her out of that place she used to live. She should be appreciative." Instead of appreciation, said Line, 43, this is what he got at breakfast:

"I just came back from running some errands. She was cooking breakfast. I didn't pick up some Avon stuff for her — a former customer of mine sells it. She said, "Where's my Avon?" I said I didn't pick it up. She just gave me a bad look. So I get up from the breakfast table, drive over and get it.

"I destroyed it with a sledgehammer. I said, 'Here's your Avon!"

NOW, FOR some reason, Felina, 24, was sulking in the bedroom.

"She's getting too pushy, that's all," said Line, who has been married six times, and knows of which he speaks. "They begin to think only of themselves. They start to think they're the only person in the world. That's what Avon has done."

Scene from a mail-order marriage. They are emerging in every state in the union. A cottage industry of more than 50 companies has sprung up to offer men like Line — men fed up with American women — the chance to correspond with Asian ones. More than 10,000 men have signed up. From their pen-pal relationships, thousands of marriages have sprung, many of them after a face-to-face acquaintance of a day or two.

WHILE THE practice of mail-order brides has existed in this country since the Civil War, it flowed from scarcity of women in frontier areas or immigrants' preference for women of their own ethnic groups. The current wave flows from a rejection of available American women in favor of what is seen as a more subservient model.

Which is exactly what John Line wanted. He tried and failed with a Mexican wife. When he got her, in pristine condition, she was "real nice, real subservient." But he made mistakes. "I taught her to drive a car, to use plastic, to use money." She once started a fight with him, and "I pushed her down. She lived for a couple of days with a sore hip." That taught her. Taught him, too. If there's anything he's learned, it's this:

"They become Americanized real fast. It doesn't take long. 'Gimme this and gimme that.' I've had it. I wasn't born to serve her." He has made that point before.

"When she came to America, she had trouble cooking rice in my pans. She needed a special kind of pan. She didn't know how to use it, (the rice) would stick. And nag, nag, nag . . . One night she laid this on me. I have a way of solving problems. I smashed that sucker with a sledgehammer . . . Now she cooks rice in the old pan and it sticks to the pan. Every time. And it has for a year and three fourths."

STANDING IN the way of mail-order wedded bliss are a few unfortunate realities, especially for men who buy the stereotype that Asian woman are pliant dolls who live to serve their husbands.

"It's not true, it's unfair," said Loke Suat Hong (Sue) Cornick, a Malaysian woman happily married to an American man. They have a 7-month-old daughter, Kimberly Soo. "All Asian women are not like this or that. You can't say all Asian women are faithful or loyal to their husbands."

For some couples, like the Cornicks, of Van Nuys, Calif., the marriages work out well. From interviews with 13 spouses, it appeared that the happiest marriages were the most elalitarian ones. The Cornicks' marriage, was not born of Asian poverty or American desperation. While most of the brides come from poor families, Mrs. Cornick's father is a wealthy hotel owner.

IT IS A first marriage for both of them, and both are the same age, 25. Both had unhappy experiences dating people in their own countries, both wanted to try something new. Cornick has prejudices against American women, but his wife is similarly dissatisfied with Malaysian men.

Jim Cornick, a studio lighting technician, has drawn some local fire speaking out against his countrywomen. When he pronounced on a radio talk show that "American women aren't faithful," a local woman called and said that all he wanted was "a major household appliance with sex organs."

The selection process for mail-order brides most often begins in the Philippines, where English is widely spoken and the literacy rate is 83 percent. In 1982, 4,491 Filipinos entered this country as spouses of American citizens. This is more than twice the combined totals of India (464) Japan (651) mainland China (601) and Taiwan (230), according to State Department officials.

IN ADDITION to Filipinos entering as spouses of Americans, 1,763 more Filipinos entered the country on finance visas — visas that give the bearer three months to marry the American who requested them.

Lifestyle policies

The following are policies for publication of stories and announcements in the Lifestyle Department of The Midland Reporter-Telegram:

Information for our Sunday pages must be in our office by 5 p.m. the preceding Tuesday. For publication in a weekday paper, we must receive the information by noon two days before the story is to run. For example, an item to appear in Wednesday's paper must be received by noon Monday.

Engagement announcements must appear at least four weeks before the wedding date. Wedding stories must be submitted within five days of the event.

Engagements, weddings, anniversaries and club notices must be submitted in writing. All materials should include the name and telephone number of the person submitting them. These items appear in the Sunday paper only. The Reporter-Telegram has forms for announcements of engagements, weddings and anniversaries.

We cannot mail pictures or forms to persons living within Midland. Pictures must be picked up in the Lifestyle office within one month after publication.

Portraits of the future bride and bridegroom in one photograph may be submitted with engagement announcements. Wedding photographs should be of the bride only.

Pictures should be black and white, preferably glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but they may reproduce poorly. Good reproduction cannot be assured when color prints are used. In general, snapshots are not acceptable.

Anniversary celebrated

Mr. and Mrs. Don Hale of Midland celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary with a gathering at 7 p.m. Tuesday at 3301 W. Michigan. Hostesses at the party were Kathy Hale, daughter of the couple, and Mary Bujnoch.

Hale and the former Vickie G. Friday were married July 17, 1959 in Midland. They have three children — Clayton W. Hale, Don T. Hale Jr. and Kathy A. Hale, all of Midland — and six grandchildren.

The Hales have lived in Midland since their marriage. They have been in business with Jon L. Cox and are members of Temple Baptist Church.

New test developed for liver cancer

BOSTON (AP) — Within a year, a highly accurate new blood test should be available to diagnose liver cancer and provide the first major advance against one of the world's deadliest cancers, researchers say.

Doctors believe the test will allow them to spot the disease early enough to remove the cancer and ensure many victims a lengthy survival.

Until now, liver cancer, or hepatocellular carcinoma, has been almost always fatal to the estimated 250,000 people around the world who get it each year.

Though rare in the United States, the disease is common in many places, especially Africa and the Far East.

"It is a very, very simple, straightforward test to perform," said Dr. Jack R. Wands of Massachusetts General Hospital, who developed the test with researchers from the Institute Gustave Roussy in Paris.

The test also represents one of the first practical uses of monoclonal antibodies, a product of the new field of genetic engineering that experts hope will someday simplify the diagnosis of many illnesses.

Liver cancer is caused by the hepatitis B virus and is common in people who carry this germ in their bodies from birth. Wands said that men who go through life with this virus have a 50 percent chance of developing the cancer, and women have a 20 percent chance.

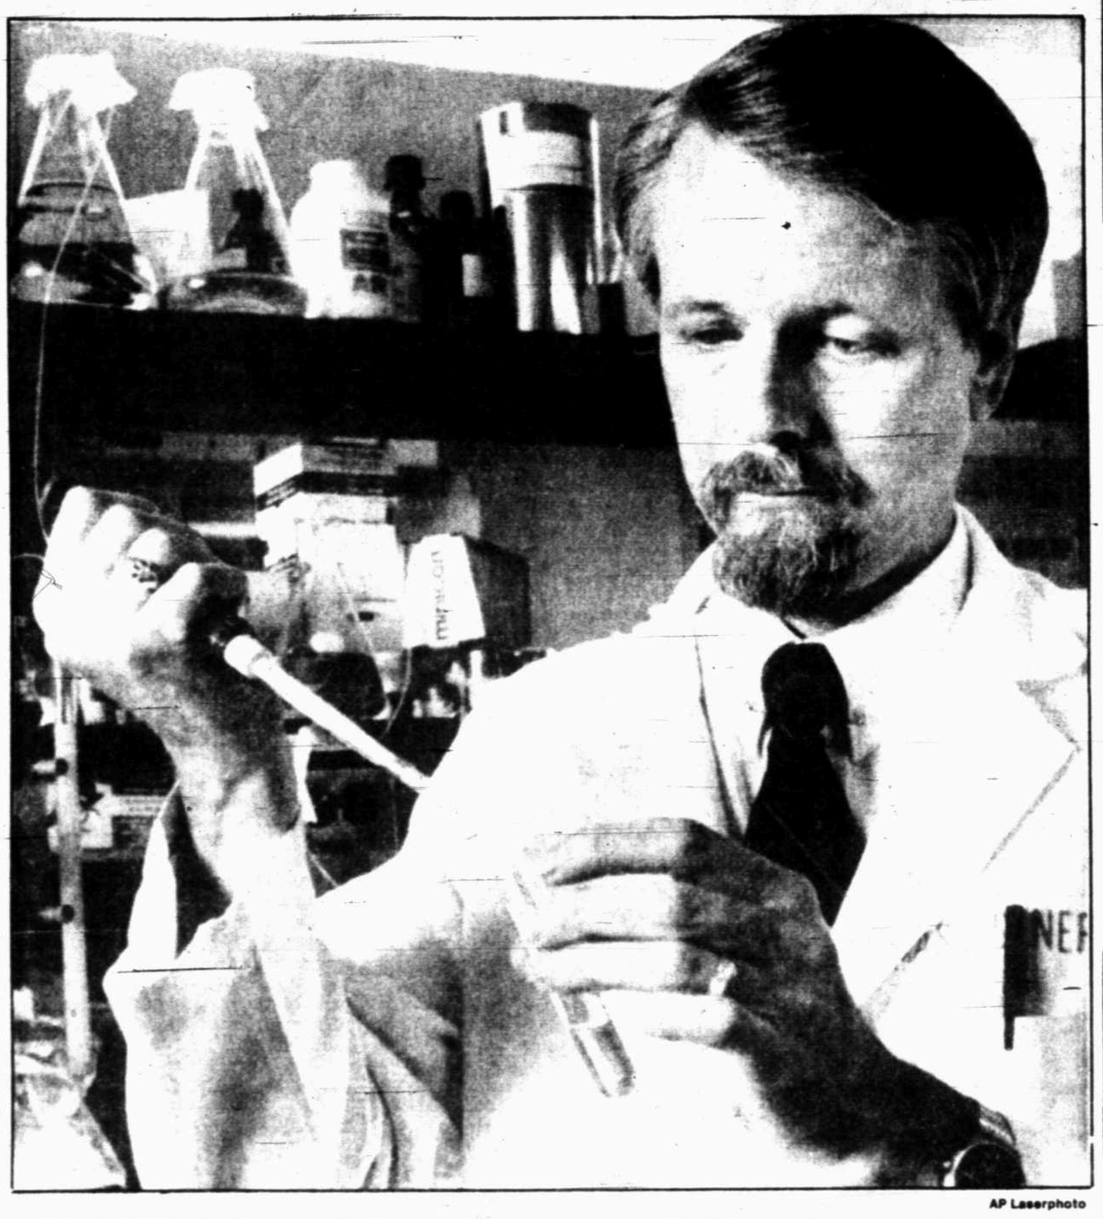
In China and Taiwan, about 20 percent of the population are carriers, It is also common in Japan, Korea and many African nations.

A report on the new test, the result of eight months of development, is being published in the June issue of the Proceedings of the National Academy of Science.

Wands said the test should be commercially available within a year and will cost a dollar or two. He recommended that it be performed twice a year on the 250 million to 300 million people carrying the hepatitis B virus.

Although the liver cancer is almost always spotted too late to be treated, occasionally it has been diagnosed early. And in these cases, doctors are able to produce long-term survivals in more than half the cases.

The test reveals the presence in the blood of a protein that is common in fetuses but ordinarily disappears after birth. This material, called alpha-fetoprotein, reappears when a cancer grows in the liver.



AP Laserphoto

Dr. Jack Wands draws a blood serum sample to be tested for liver cancer using a newly developed method devised by a research team at Boston's Massachusetts General Hospital.

The doctors performed the test on 1,635 people. They found that 80 percent of those who carried the hepatitis virus and had cancer showed high levels of the protein in their blood. However, all healthy people had very low amounts of the protein.

Wands predicted that when virus carriers are regularly screened for this protein, doctors will be able to spot it as soon as levels begin to rise.

"We believe that the tumor is small enough, at this point, to allow for surgical resection (removal)," he said at a news conference.

The test employs two monoclonal antibodies.

Women patients studied

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Throughout various states of surgery, women patients do not readily express their needs to medical personnel, relatives or friends, according to research by Janice DeMocker, assistant professor at University of Rochester.

Instead, she said, women assume the doctors and nurses know what they need. She interviewed female patients before, during and after hospitalization.

"Once discharged," she said, "the patients' ability to seek help appeared blocked by their need to care for family members, their desire to remain independent, and their perception that others were too busy."

Device designed to give deaf persons partial hearing

Hearst Feature Service

SEATTLE — An ear implant that can restore partial hearing for many deaf people will be available for the first time in the northwestern United States this month.

Clinical tests will be started for the implant that was developed after eight years of testing in animals at the University of Washington Primate Research Center.

It will not restore normal hearing but will allow a deaf person to have "auditory contact" with the environment, said Dr. Robert Dobie, director of the tests.

"They won't be able to talk on the telephone, but they will be able to hear things you and I take for granted: a car motor, a door slam, to know if a car engine starts when you turn the key, alarm sounds, sirens," Dobie said. "If they already Hp read to some degree, it will improve the ability to receive speech by a combination of lip reading and hearing."

Four hospitals elsewhere in the United States also will be conducting clinical trials of the ear implant.

The implants work by stimulating 30,000 auditory nerve cells with tiny electric currents. They are called cochlear implants because the device is implanted in or near the cochlea, a bony structure of the inner ear.

The device now is best suited to profoundly deaf people.

Interior MOTIVES
by Ray and Austella Berry

One major advantage in working with designers and decorators is that they can help you avoid the common, expensive mistakes in judgment made almost every day by amateurs. Few of us can honestly say that we have never made a purchase that hasn't turned out to be a white elephant. You may be very positive about your likes and dislikes. In fact, every purchase made may be fine by itself. However, there can be disappointments when everything is seen together. Designers and decorators are skilled at coordination and know what size a table should be to look ritht with a particular sofa and which patterns should not be used in large areas. When designers and decorators do your buying it is their responsibility to follow designated guidelines and cost estimates.

A good designer is one that does not force his or her tastes onto your decorating scheme. Rather, he or she advises and guides you according to what you want. Our professional staff at WINDOW DECOR will take your wishes, tastes and ideas and create beautiful coordinated windows, walls and floors for your home or office. Custom draperies and bedspreads are our specialty. Call 685-0875 and we'll come to you or you can visit us at 30 M. W. Industrial Loop. Hours: 8AM-4:30 PM Mon. - Fri., or by appointment

HINT:
Successful designing and decorating often depends on how well the total effect is anticipated.

DR. KURIANSKY

Man says he locked his 'sex drive in a cage'

By DR. JUDITH KURIANSKY

Q. For more than 20 years my ex-wife used sex as a weapon. She found everything, including touching, painful and had me firmly convinced I was an animal if I had an erection. I became ashamed of being a man.

After some years I learned to lock my sex drive in a cage. Eventually, she wanted out and I'm free now — the cage is wide open. But I can't perform in spite of many opportunities, and I can't maintain a relationship with a woman when there is a prospect of having sex. I want it but I'm scared.

Recently I came across an ad dealing with the use of a surrogate to work out sexual problems. Would you recommend this? J.M. Bayshore, N.Y.

A. From your account, a sexually repressed, controlling woman hammered away at your personal and sexual confidence.

You were psychologically abused and your trust in women and yourself has been shattered.

One has to wonder, though, why you put up with this for so long.

One reason lies in your history. If your ex-wife used sex as a weapon, you were likely locked in a battle of control, a common cause of sexual problems in couples, with you the controlled one.

I bet that while growing up you were similarly ruled by a dominating, critical mother who told you sex was wrong or put men down. Or you were sexual, felt guilty about it, imagined your mother's disapproval, and continued to punish yourself through adulthood.

People stay in situations — even unpleasant ones — because the known is more comfortable than the unknown.

Another reason for your current difficulties in forming a supportive loving adult sexual exchange lies in this adaptation of an old but true adage: Sticks and stones may break my bones but names will never harm me — unless I open my ears to them, and unless I believe what I hear.

In other words, no woman can make you deny yourself sexually or feel totally inadequate unless you feel that way yourself. Sometimes we hide our own insecurities behind someone else being the "bad guy."

In your case, here's how that works: You're afraid of women and your sexual urges. So you find a woman who stops you. Then you can complain about her being the stop sign instead of examining your own roadblocks.

Explore your childhood sexual experiences. Examine how your wife's "enslaving" you protected you from sexual fantasies and urges you might be trying to repress. Sometimes men in your situation are most fearful of acting out aggression in sex so they are relieved to have an excuse to hold back.

I champion your search for a permissive and loving partner, but I am concerned about your desire to find that in a surrogate.

A sex surrogate is a person who engages in sexual activity with the intention of helping the partner overcome a sexual problem. Many surrogates are ex-prostitutes. Only some have informal training in sexual therapy techniques, or are supervised and work in conjunction with a trained sex therapist to whom they report about their "sessions" with the client.

The International Professional Surrogates Association, based in California, intends to establish guidelines and credibility for practicing surrogates, but since none yet exist, the best way to find a surrogate is through a referral from a reputable sex therapist.

For years sex surrogates were frowned upon, and they mainly practiced openly on the West Coast. In the late 1970s an ethics congress convened by sex therapy team William Masters and Virginia Johnson decalared that sex between a therapist and patient is unethical, but that if a patient went to a surrogate, the therapist could not keep this secret from the partner (wording which avoided condemning the use of surrogates entirely, partly, critics say, because Masters and Johnson had used partner substitutes in some of their research.)

Proponents of surrogate therapy claim they can greatly help decrease a man's anxiety about sex (the main culprit in sexual problems) and build his confidence to take on a real relationship.

Critics claim the man should work on his fears of dating and sex so he feels equipped to find someone who would be a good sexual partner.

In your case, the desire to see a surrogate can be seen as a continuation of your pattern of being controlled by women. Examine your fantasies and expectations of what you would like in a surrogate partner and seek those positive aspects in a real relationship. Take full responsibility for your own sexuality.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Personality not altered by paralysis

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have a tremendous amount of admiration for anyone who overcomes a physical handicap. It's bad enough if someone is born handicapped, but I think it must be even worse if it happens because of an accident. I know a boy who was paralyzed because of an automobile accident when he was in high school, and now, two years later, he's going to college and has made a wonderful adjustment. Is he the exception that proves the rule? — Donna, St. Paul, Minn.

Dear Donna: I am happy to be able to tell you that the young man you write about appears to be the rule rather than the exception. The results of a five-year study of 70 adolescents who had experienced a permanent disability as the result of an accident indicted that, within a year, the great majority showed no major personality changes.

Dr. Richard Sarles, of the University of Maryland School of Medicine in Baltimore, reported that 56 of the 70 adolescents studied continued their schooling without the loss of a year, and most resumed all the activities they had participated in before their injury and that were not completely prevented by the injury. The same kind of adjustment was found in their relationships with their friends, including dating.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've heard most of the arguments in favor of breast-feeding, and I don't quarrel with any of them. But my first child, who was not breast-fed, has allergies, and I was told that this would not have happened if he had been breast-fed. I am not pregnant again and I would like to know if breast-feeding would prevent my second child from getting allergies. — Mrs. D.L., August, Maine

Dear Mrs. L.: Breast-feeding may postpone the development of allergic disease, and this is certainly desireable; however, breast-feeding is no guarantee against the development of allergic diseases.

For Carmine, Brookline, Mass.: Laboratory studies indicate that cells from skin that have been exposed to the sun divide fewer times than do cells that have not been exposed. This suggests that the sun's rays may accelerate the process of aging.

Neil Solomon, M.D., is a columnist for Los Angeles Times Syndicate. If you have a medical question, write Dr. Solomon at 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon will not give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.

New medicine effective against gonorrhea

BOSTON (AP) — An experimental medicine that is highly effective against drug-resistant forms of gonorrhea may someday replace penicillin as the standard treatment for the venereal disease, researchers reported.

Penicillin has been the recommended treatment for gonorrhea for three decades. However, public health officials are concerned about the emergence of strains of gonorrhea bacteria that resist penicillin.

In a new study, doctors tested the medicine norfloxacin on 92 Navy men in the Philippines who were infected with drug-resistant forms of gonorrhea. Just two pills were 100 percent effective in curing the disease.

"Norfloxacin appears to possess characteristics that could make it the drug of choice for uncomplicted gonococcal infections, particularly in areas where there is a high incidence of resistant strains," the researchers wrote.

Last year, 900,435 cases of gonorrhea were reported in the United States.

AT WORK

Bookkeeping can be done at home

By ADELE SCHEELE, Ph.D.

Q. — I have been a homemaker for three years. I have had seven years of experience doing clerical work, billing, typing, working with adding machines and computer terminals. Although my family situation prevents me from working at an outside job, I could at home. Any suggestions?

A. — If you like working with numbers, you can start by taking a beginning course in accounting, really bookkeeping, in order to do bookkeeping from your home. Then find a professional building stocked with certified public accountants, who are usually looking for extra workers. Go in to each office, introduce yourself and explain what you can do, and leave your card.

Take theirs and call back every week. Expect to charge about $6 an hour to start. Then after a year or so, when you gain the confidence of the accountants, you might be able to double that figure. If, during that time, you discover you really like the work, then you will have several options. One is to hire other homemakers to do even more service, or two, to continue studying accounting. In five or six years you might have a thriving cottage industry or be a CPA yourself.

Q. — I am a Ph.D. biochemist working as a staffer (like a technician) in a university. I can apply for a post doctoral position that I've had before but I'd have to take a cut in salary. How can I be more important and contribute more?

A. — Obviously not in your university. Brace yourself and look for a job in industry. Universities simply cannot support the number of Ph.D.s they graduate. Staying on as a post-doc will only demoralize you.

Get more involved with a professional association and find leads. Stop waiting for things to happen because you are well-qualified. There is still another lesson to learn — making your market now that you have studied it.

Q. — I am a woman in my 50s looking for a re-entry job. I'd like a position in health education since I've done so much volunteer work for the American Lung Association among others. I have organized community volunteers, written many articles, and even developed audio-visual material. A career counselor friend suggested gerontology as a field. Do you agree?

A. — Gerontology, the study of aging, certainly is a new field. But as far as I know, it exists mainly in academia. Explore there, but I am not optimistic about your prospects for a paying job.

I would rather bet on a large health organization hiring you to do just what you did as a volunteer.

Computers among top career choices

Associated Press

This year, for the second year in a row, male teenagers have picked computer science as their leading career choice, according to a nationwide poll.

While young men selected computer science as their first choice of study and career, two-thirds of the young women said they intended to study computers in college with about 35 percent planning to major in computer sciences, the study found.

The women ranked computer-related careers fourth behind medicine, secretarial and nursing careers.

Government sources report the number of computer-related jobs could grow by 301,000 nationwide during the decade, said Philip Clement, president of DeVRY Inc.

Jobs for electronics technicians could increase by 154,000 during the same period, Clement said.

good 'ol West Texas LUAU

Text by Lisa Gerlock

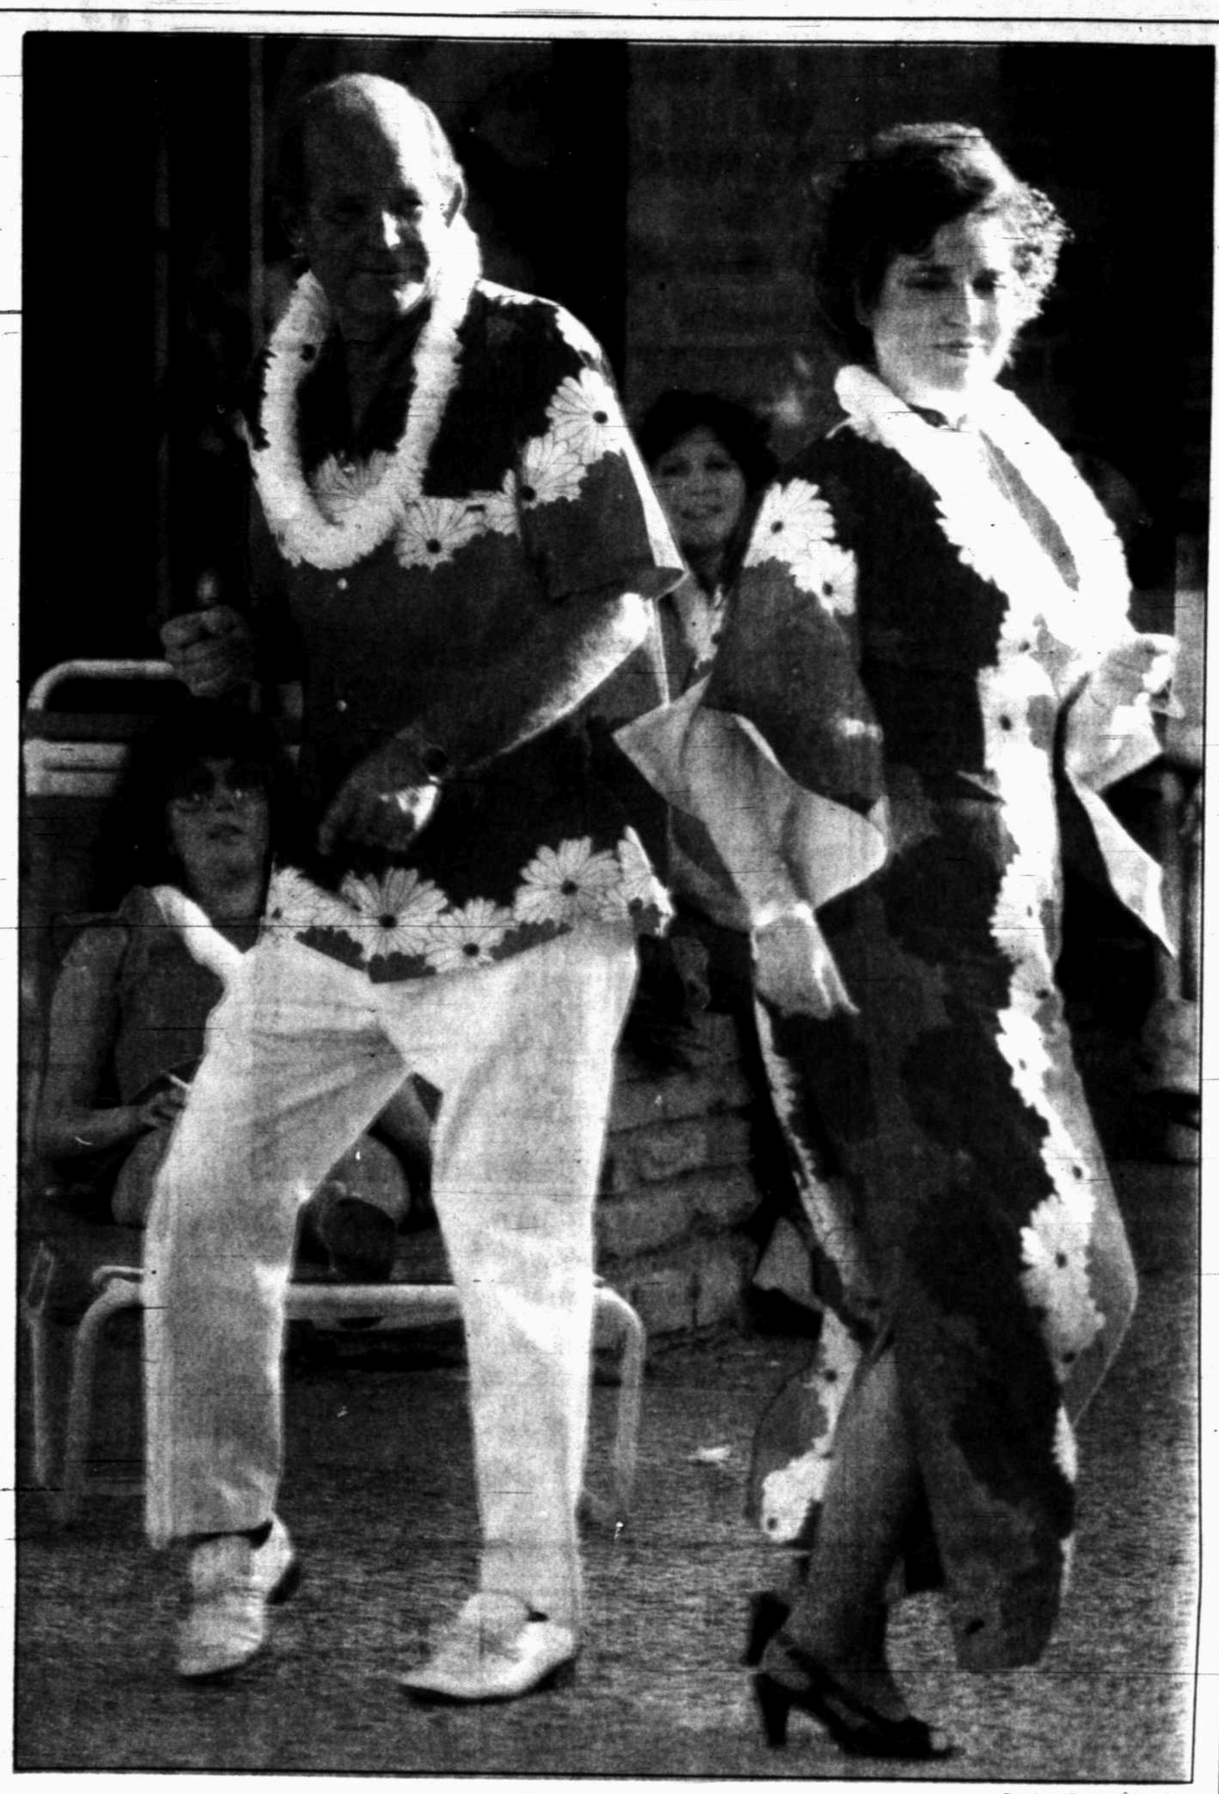
Ron Jaap/Reporter-Telegram

Though his cowboy hat may seem more appropriate for a barbecue, Matt Reppert is right in step with luaus West Texas-style as he pours a pineapple juice and brown sugar sauce over a pig roasted on a spit for the recent Quinten Walk luau.



Ron Jaap/Reporter-Telegram

Roy and Margie Hearon hula to the beat of a different bongo drum as a rock band serenades the crowd at Quinten's Walk's recent luau.

Jerry Mennenga/Reporter-Telegram

Peter Teipelke, executive chef at Green Tree Country Club and national award winner of a decorative roast pig, suggests a buffet menu to accompany a roast pig feast.

Though Peter Teipelke, Green Tree Country Club's executive chef, doesn't have a cut and dry recipe for roast suckling pig, he does have a list of suggestions for a buffet-style luau menu.

Cold dishes include poached salmon; a salad of rice, mushroom, green pepper and pimento; pineapple and papaya in a sour cream sauce; sliced cucumber and papaya in lime juice and tropical fruits of any kind.

Hot dishes include fried rice; eggplant; fresh baked sweet potatoes with coconut milk; fresh yellow squash in fresh dill sauce and fresh peapods.

"And for dessert," says Teipelke, "nothing is better than good old fashioned pineapple upside down cake. Don't let anyone tell you there is anything better."

For a tasty appetizer Chef Peter shares this recipe to serve four to six people.

SALMON LOAF

1 lb. canned salmon

8 oz. Philadelphia cream cheese

1 teaspoon fine minced onions

2 teaspoon horseradish (fresh horseradish, not sauce)

⅛ teaspoon liquid smoke

Remove skin or bones from canned salmon. Blend all ingredients together. Mold loaf in the shape you want it. Garnish loaf with fresh chopped parsely and fresh chopped pecans in any design and place loaf on plate with fresh papaya leaves (though they may be difficult to find in Midland). Refrigerate. Serve with cocktail rye or rye toast.

West Texas luaus may be far removed from the traditional banana trees, lava rocks, Hibiscus and tiki torches native to the luau land — Hawaii.

But when planning a such a festivity, many Midlanders strive for authenticity. Others simply accept the geographic limitations and adapt their own style. Luauing in Midland can mean anything from a gourmet feast complete with hoola dancers to a spit-roasted pig with a rock band.

Gary Hutchins, part owner of Hutch's Meat Processing Inc., a company established in Midland by his father 25 years ago, said requests for whole pigs to be prepared at luaus have increased in the past two or three years. He said his processing plant can clean and dress a pig for the occasion at a cost of "about $100, depending on the size of pig."

MOST REQUESTS are for small whole pigs with hide left on and the hair scraped off, Hutchins said. But because he is regulated by state inspection, the carcasses he prepares must be completely skinned. "The only plus of the skin is to hold the meat together.

"For luaus, most people wrap the pig in foil, then wrap it in wet burlap bags and bury it underground. Wrapping an entire pig in foil may be expensive, but if you're going to have a nice party, you may as well go all out."

He recommends a cooking time of at least 12 to 15 hours, depending on the size of the carcass. And if the meat is prepared with seasoning, "it cooks into it and adds flavor. Some people put the hot rocks from the fire inside the pig to make sure it cooks thoroughly.

HUTCHINS RECENTLY "cleaned and washed down" a whole pig ordered by Peter Teipelke, executive chef at Green Tree Country Club and national award winner for decorative roast pigs.

Teipelke prepared the suckling in a conventional oven and, because it was to be a festive piece for decoration as well as for feasting, he recreated the face with sweet potatoes and unflavored gelatin. "It's just like plastic surgery, complete with mudpacks," he said.

The German-born and Berlin-educated chef warns the most critical factor in roasting a pig is "to make sure it is roasted very nicely, very slowly. It must be well done.

"It must be roasted slowly because the skin is just like parchment paper. If you touch it, it will crack just like that."

IT IS IMPORTANT to make sure the skin from below the eyes is removed, he said.

To season the suckling, Teipelke said he sprinkled the inside of the carcass with a mixture of Lawry's seasoned salt.

The 55-pound suckling was wrapped in foil and roasted for 12 hours at 250 degrees Farenheit. When it was half done, he removed the foil so the suckling would have more color. "It turns a dark golden brown, a little darker than honey.

"The slower it is cooked, the more tender the meat. It is just the opposite of steak."

Teipelke also uses half a baked potato to stuff in the pig's mouth and, when it is done, he replaces the potato with a crab apple.

Teipelke estimated 300 people were served at the buffet-style luau, a club function which featured "The Pearls of the Pacific" Hawaiian dancers from Florida.

ONE RECENT luau in Midland hulaed to the beat of a different bongo drum at Quinten's Walk Apartments. The chief cook sported a straw cowboy hat as he prepared a pig on a spit and a goat on a grill. A rock band set the mood for the atypical tropical crowd.

The official luau cooks, Matt Reppert, co-owner of Zenter's Steakery, and Bubba Stobagh, manager of the Zenter's, volunteered their efforts and relied on their pig roast training from fraternity parties in college.

The original plan for a pit roast was canceled when they decided it would ruin the apartment complex's lawn. So they opted for a rotisserie-style roast, but that too was foiled when the machine's motor couldn't turn the 250-pound pig they cooked (average size is 150 pounds). The fire cannot touch the pig, and the pork must be roasted on hot coals only, so Reppert, Stobaugh "and about 50 other people" built a fire, and transferred coals from it to the spit, Reppert said. He prepared a "special" sauce of brown sugar, pineapple, pineapple juice and herbs and spices to season the pig.

AN ADDITIONAL showpiece was a 75-pound goat they purchased the day before and seasoned with butter, chives, salt, pepper. The goat was cooked on equipment at Reppert's restaurant and warmed up on a separate grill at the scene of the luau.

To accompany the menu, they served coleslaw, beans, potato salad, sausage appetizers, 15 kegs of beer and three silver champagne fountains of "Trash Can Punch."

But, they agreed, the pig and goat represented the more traditional luau atmosphere than anything.

Luau, by translation, means "feast." But to the people of Hawaii, luau means "party," one which can often be a 24-hour festivity, said Midlander Eric Motzno, a former Hawaiian resident.

"They are mainly a tourist attraction in Hawaii," he said, and claims he has been to some private luaus and even participated in preparing one feast.

The traditional luau begins with the digging of the pit in which the pig is roasted.

THE AVERAGE PIT has a diameter of six feet and is four or five feet deep. The pit is then lined with lava rocks from a stream. The special rock is part of the trick to building an underground fire, said Motzno.

For the next layer, wood is piled on top of the rocks followed by another layer of rocks. Then the fire is lit and the wood is allowed to burn for two hours.

When the fire burns out, the pit builder places bark from a banana tree on the red hot coals and covers it with a layer of banana tree leaves.

Please see LUAU, Page 2F)

LUAU

The pig, with chicken wire wrapped around its skin, is placed in the pit and more leaves are layered on top.

Burlap bags are then placed on top — enough to cover the whole pit — and a tent canvas is placed over the bags. Then dirt is shoveled over the pit level with the ground.

The pig roasts in the pit for 10 to 12 hours.

THE CHICKEN WIRE is wrapped around the pig's skin so, when the wire is pulled off the meat to eat, the skin is peeled off with it. The skin is really part of the feast, Motzno said.

Before the pig is wrapped, however, it is usually dressed with a special sauce and some of the hot lava rocks are placed inside the body so it will cook thoroughly.

Many hotels in Hawaii have luaus for guests, but they are modified versions of the private ones. Unlike the luaus the locals enjoy, which begin with the pit digging, hotel luaus begin when the pig has cooked and is removed from the pit, Motzno said.

Commercial luaus can cost anywhere from $25 to $35, including drinks.

POPULAR MENU items at a private luau include fresh fruits, shashime (raw fish), poi (Taro plant root, served creamed with brown sugar).

But in a land where banana trees are scarce, and plastic leis from a novelty shop are more commonly found than orchid leis, West Texans write their own rules for the party. They can wear cowboy hats and t-shirts instead of grass skirts and colorful headpieces because they want to.

Molded salad festive treat

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

Few people seem to be impartial about molded salads. Some dislike the idea of eating carrot sticks or other tidbits suspended in gelatin. Others find such a dish refreshing in hot weather.

For me, these salads, encased in glittering aspic, make a festive summer special either as an entree or dessert.

The key to this creation is the aspic that holds it together.

The gelatin which serves as the binding agent can be obtained at most food stores, either plain or flavored. Food writer Cynthia Scheer in her "Book of Salads" (ORTHO Books) says you should use a standard 3-ounce package of gelatin to thicken about 2 cups of liquid, consisting of bouillon, fruit or vegetable juice, or even wine.

To produce a garnish atop the salad when it is unmolded, put one-half inch of jelly mixture in the mold and chill until it begins to stiffen. Top with a garnish of parsley, stuffed olive slices or some such decoration.

BLUEBERRY SALAD

1 package (6 ounces) black-cherry-flavored gelatin
2 cups boiling water
1 cup plain yogurt
1 cup sour cream
¼ teaspoon ground ginger
2 teaspoons grated lemon rind
2 cups fresh blueberries
Mint sprigs for garnish

In large bowl, mix gelatin and boiling water, stirring until gelatin dissolves. Combine yogurt, sour cream, ginger and lemon rind. Stir into gelatin mix, blend well. Refrigerate, stirring occasionally until mixture is syrupy. fold blueberries into gelatin mix. Pour into 6-cup mold. Refrigerate until firm, about 6 hours. Unmold onto serving plate. Garnish with mint. Serves 6 to 8 people.

Salad uses brown rice

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

SOUTHWEST BROWN RICE SALAD

⅔ cup chopped (medium-fine) onion
1 clove garlic, minced
2 tablespoons butter
2 and 2-3rds cups water
1 cup select brown rice
1½ teaspoons salt
4-ounce can chopped green chilies, undrained
15½-ounce can red kidney beans, drained and rinsed
⅓ cup chili sauce
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
3 tablespoons lime juice
Cayenne pepper to taste
1 small avocado
1 medium tomato, diced (medium-fine)

In a medium saucepan over low heat cook onion and garlic in butter until onion is wilted. Add water and bring to a boil. Stir in rice and 1 teaspoon of the salt. Cover tightly and cook over low heat until all the water is absorbed — 50 minutes. Transfer rice to a large bowl. Stir in the chilies and kidney beans.

In a small bowl whisk together the chili sauce, oil, lime juice, remaining salt and cayenne. Pour over rice mixture; toss lightly to combine. Cool to room temperature or chill. Peel avocado and remove the seed. Cut into ¾-inch cubes. Just before serving add the avocado and tomato to the rice mixture and toss gently.

Makes 6 servings.

Sugar, vinegar keep flowers fresh

To keep flowers fresh as long as possible, take a tip from the experts: Add one teaspoon of sugar (for nourishment) and vinegar (to retard decay).

To keep roses in the pink, use the package of preservatives usually included in the florist's box. And always use warm water (100F).

Ways of preparing food change

From Staff Reports

PITTSBURGH, Pa. — Today's more active, health-conscious lifestyle has changed shopping and food preparation. Working mothers and full-time homemakers alike are looking for ways to cut down time spent in the kitchen while continuing to serve nuritious meals.

"Freezer living lets you have it all — convenience, economy and nutrition," said Janet K. Felmeth, director of the White-Westinghouse/Kelvinator Appliance Co. Home Economics Institute.

A freezer can save time in both shopping and meal preparation. According to Ms. Felmeth, an average family of four consumes 2-1/2 tons of food each year. "Without a freezer that would mean up to 208 shopping trips each year, counting those short runs for milk and bread," she said. "Owning a 16-cubic-foot freezer can cut shopping trips down to one a week, perhaps even fewer with careful planning."

Two hours saved in meal preparation can mean more time for leisure activities."A significant amount of time can be saved in day-to-day meal preparation," said Ms. Felmeth. "By cooking and baking in double quantities and freezing the second batch to be enjoyed later you've cut your time in half. Make it a habit and you'll have some extra time on your hands. Today there is a limitless variety of commercially prepared frozen foods and even self-contained meals that can make nutritious, low-calorie, flavorful meals fast and easy enough for any adolescent or adult family member to handle."

Convenience is also gained in entertaining. Ice cubes, frozen desserts, hors d'oeuvres and even entrees can be made ahead of the party to allow time for cleaning, making decorations and other party-related activities. A freezer can also bail out the person who has unexpected company.

A freezer can reduce the family food budget. "The money saved by buying in bulk produce and large quantities of sale-priced meats, bakery and prepared frozen foods can significantly reduce the grocery bill," said Ms. Felmeth. "Also, families who have their own backyard garden do so equally to save money and for the joy of eating fresh produce. Most active families do not like the hassle of canning and the flavor loss that results in this process. A freezer enables them to safely store the harvest with minimal effort, and freezing will maintain the garden-fresh taste of most produce items, even when served six to eight months later."

A third benefit of freezer living is nutrition. The convenience gained by owning a freezer encourages serving more nutritious, well-balanced meals instead of eating "fast" or "junk" foods.

And, according to Ms. Felmeth, the freezing process itself is a more nutritious method of preserving and storing food than other processes. "Freezing does not destroy essential vitamins and minerals, such as vitamin C, B1 and riboflavin, which are eliminated using other processes," she said.

Flowers delicious

By DIANE SAVAGE
Copley News Service

Roses are red and violets are blue — pretty to look at, and edible, too!

Roses, violets, peonies and lotus were all used in ancient times as flavorings that added delicate eye appeal to many dishes. During the 18th and 19th centuries, European cooks graced everything from cakes and puddings to liqueurs with blossoms.

Certain fresh flowers can make exquisite decorations for your homemade cakes, if you're sure they haven't been sprayed or treated. Daisies and African daisies, orange blossoms, violets and nasturtiums are favorites.

A variety of chrysanthemum grown by the Japanese is served pickled. The dried centers of marigolds may be used as a color substitute in recipes calling for saffron — at a much lower cost. The leaves of young marigold plants may be added to salads, and the petals are edible, too, when cooked. Even geranium leaves are found in jellies, compotes and pound cakes.

Rose water and orange flower water make delicate flavorings for confections and iced drinks. Or how about floral ice cubes? Place a clean miniature rose in each section of an ice cube tray. Cover with cold water and freeze — very pretty in iced tea or fresh orange juice.

My favorite flower for culinary purposes is the nasturtium. A native of Chile and Peru, this flame-flowered vine is edible all over. Bolivians freeze the roots, then boil and eat as greens. Tender leaves and blooms make dramatically colorful additions to summer salads.

A note of caution: Before you bite into any blossom, be sure you know that it's one of the safely edible variety. While they are all lovely to look at, some, such as the star-of-Bethlehem and lily of the valley, contain poisons.

A floral centerpiece makes a fragrant and graceful addition to any table — but why stop there?

NASTURTIUM CANAPES-4 thin slices whole wheat or brown bread
3 tbsps. butter, at room temperature
1 oz. cream cheese, at room temperature
4 large nasturtium blossoms, washed and minced

Spread each bread slice evenly with butter, then spread thickly with softend cream cheese. Sprinkle minced blossoms evenly over cheese, then cut each slice into 4 squares. Makes 16 canapes.

OMELET VIOLETTE
10 violet leaves
10 violet blossoms
6 eggs
3 tbsps. milk
¼ tsp. each salt, pepper and paprika
3 tbsps. butter or margarine

In cool water, wash violet leaves well. Dry on paper towels, then mince. Wah violet blossoms, removing stems, stamens and pistils. Place petals gently on waxed paper and refrigerate. With wire whip beat together eggs, milk, salt, pepper and paprika until frothy. Melt butter in large frying pan over medium heat, then pour in egg mixture. Use spatula to lift edges, letting uncooked egg run underneath. When omelet is just set, sprinkle evenly with chopped violet leaves, then turn. Place on heated serving platter and sprinkle top with violet blossoms. Serves 4.

NASTURTIUM SALAD
12 nasturtium blossoms
8 nasturtium leaves
16 leaves butter lettuce, washed and dried
1 cup sweet seedless grapes
½ cup cantaloupe balls
¼ cup vegetable oil
2 tbsps. white wine vinegar
1 tsp. Dijon mustard
1 tsp. honey
⅛ tsp. pepper

Rinse nasturtium blossoms and leaves well in cool water; let dry on paper twels. Set out 4 individual salad plates. On each, place 4 lettuce leaves, then top with 2 nasturtium leaves, ¼ cup seedless grapes, several cantaloupe balls and nasturtium blossoms. Combine remaining ingredients in small jar and shake to blend well. Pour equally over each salad and serve immediately. Serves 4.

Choosing kitchen timers increasingly complicated

By PIERRE FRANEY
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Kitchen timers are becoming as fancy in design as wristwatches, so choosing one to meet your particular needs has become more complicated.

Because exact timing is so critical, I often use kitchen timers when writing recipes. One problem with some of the smaller new models on the market is that their faces are difficult to read from a distance. I find myself working at the other end of the kitchen and glancing over at the timer to see how much time is left for something in the oven or on the stove. If the numbers are small I have to run over to the timer and look, which wastes time.

The oversize kitchen clock discussed here, made by a company called Pelouze, is large enough to read from far away and its high-pitched alarm is loud enough to hear even if you are in another room. This timer was designed for the hearing-impaired, so in addition to the loud tone it also has a little flashing light. The Pelouze timer is 7 inches high and about 6 ¼ inches wide at the base. It can be set for up to one hour.

Of course, not everyone has space for a kitchen timer of this size, particularly city dwellers with small kitchens. If you have to economize space, the compact timer by Lorus, a Japanese company, is one of the more attractive and efficient models on the market. It is about two inches square and emits a fairly loud beep. It runs on a penlight battery.

A perforated ladle is one of those basic kitchen tools to which most cooks give little thought. It comes in handy for all kinds of jobs, such as removing eggs from a poaching liquid, straining vegetables or noodles and skimming stocks. This professional-model ladle is deeper than most of the perforated spoons found in kitchenware stores; it also has a heat-resistant hard rubber handle.

Orange torte innovative

Associated Press

ROSLYN BEILLY'S ORANGE TORTE

2 large seedless oranges
8 ounces (1⅓ cups) whole blanched almonds
6 large eggs
1 cup sugar
1 tsp. baking powder

Butter and flour a 1½-quart round cake dish (8¼ by 1½ inches). Wash oranges; do not peel; add to a 2- to 3-quart deep saucepan with enough water to have pan about ¾ full; rapidly bring to a boil and boil 30 minutes; drain. Cool, cut oranges in quarters (removing any stray seeds) and puree in a food processor — there should be 2 cups. Finely grind almonds in a food processor — there should be 1⅓ slightly packed cups. In an electric mixer at high speed, beat eggs until thickened and lemon color; sprinkle with almonds, sugar, baking powder and orange puree; beat at medium speed until well-mixed. Turn into prepared dish. Bake in a preheated 400-degree oven until browned and cake tester inserted in center comes out clean — 40 to 50 minutes. Cool on wire rack — torte will sink slightly but evenly. Chill, overnight if you like. Serve with fresh fruit and whipped cream. Makes 8 servings.

Chinese chicken excellent summer recipe

Associated Press

CHERYL'S CHICKEN

1¼ cups Chicken Stock, recipe follows
2 tbsps. vegetable oil
2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
6 chicken thighs, rinsed and dried
1 cup dry white wine
⅜ cup soy sauce
3 tbsps. dark brown sugar
4 slices fresh ginger root, pared, each 25-cent size
1 clove garlic, sliced
1 scallion, cut into 1-inch lengths

Make Chicken Stock; reserve 1¼ cups. In a wok over medium-high heat, heat the oil and chopped garlic; add chicken and cook 2 to 3 minutes, turning to brown evenly; set aside.

In a large saucepan bring to a boil the 1¼ cups stock, wine, soy sauce, sugar, ginger, sliced garlic and scallion. Add chicken and bring to a boil again; simmer, covered until tender — about 40 minutes. Serve chicken with lots of rice and the thin sauce. If you wish to thicken the sauce, stir in ½ teaspoon cornstarch blended with 1 teaspoon cold water; repeat to thicken further.

CHICKEN STOCK

6 cups water
2½ pounds chicken backs and necks
1 small onion, thinly sliced
4 slices pared fresh gingerroot, 25-cent size
Pinch of salt and white pepper

In a large saucepan bring water to a boil. Add chicken and bring to a boil again; cover and simmer, skimming foam occasionally, for about 1½ hours. Add onion, ginger, salt and pepper; simmer for about 20 minutes longer. Strain through a fine-mesh strainer. Refrigerate. Remove hardened fat from top. Use 1¼ cups in Cheryl's Chicken. Store remainder in refrigerator or freezer in small containers to use as needed.

Fruit flavors enliven dishes

Mangos are high in vitamin A and are a good source of vitamin C. The fruit's delectable flavor is featured in this sherbet recipe.

FRESH MANGO SHERBET

1 cup sugar, divided
1 envelop unflavored gelatin
1-1/2 cups boiling water
1-1/2 cups fresh mango puree, abqut
2 to 3 fresh ripe mangos
1 cup milk
2 tablespoons freshly squeezed lime juice
2 egg whites

In large metal bowl combine 3/4 cup sugar and gelatin. Add boiling water, stir until sugar and gelatin completely dissolve. Cool to room temperature. Stir in mango puree, milk and lime juice.

Place bowl in freezer for 1-1/2 hours or until mixture is frozen about 1/2-inch around sides of bowl. Beat with electric mixer or wire whisk until smooth. Beat egg whites with remaining 1/4 cup sugar until stiff peaks form; fold into mango mixture.

Return mixture to freezer. Freeze several hours or until firm. Makes 1-1/2 quarts.

The nut-like flavor of artichokes is complimented by a wide variety of savory sauces. Or try Artichokes in Fresh Lime Marinade for a citrus-y taste treat.

ARTICHOKES IN FRESH LIME MARINADE

4 fresh artichokes
1 lime, thinly sliced
2 teaspoons salt, divided
1/2 cup salad oil
1/3 cup vinegar
1 teaspoon grated lime rind
1/3 cup fresh lime juice
1 tablespoon finely chopped fresh parsley
1 tablespoon dried leaf basil

Rinse artichokes in cold water. Turn each artichoke on side; with sharp knife cut 1-inch off top. Cut off stem close to base. Remove any loose or discolored leaves around bottom. Snip off sharp leaf tips with scissors.

In large saucepan or kettle bring three inches water to boiling; add lime slices, 1 teaspoon salt and artichokes.

Simmer uncovered 30-40 minutes until stem ends of artichokes are tender when pierced with fork and leaves pull easily from base. Turn upside-down to drain.

In large bowl combine oil, vinegar, lime rind and juice, parsley, basil and remaining 1 teaspoon salt. Mix well. Add artichokes. Refrigerate six hours or overnight if possible.

Spoon marinade over artichokes occasionally. Makes six servings.

DEAR ABBY

Filthy lucre given clean bill of health

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: "A Friend in Millbury, Mass." wrote to say that money is a notorious germ carrier — that each time paper money passes from one pair of hands to another, it becomes filthier. "Friend" went on to say that he would not eat in an establishment where the person who handles the money also handles the food.

As a 30-year owner of a fast-food restaurant, I have heard this story many times. It is not true. To support my statement, I submit this article that appeared in the Rochester (N.Y.) Times-Union in April 1973:

"MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Greenbacks dirty? No more than the silverware you eat with.

"A year-long study by Memphis and Shelby County health officials of 150 Memphis restaurants and food stores concluded that dollar bills are often cleaner than the knives and forks. 'Frankly, I was flabbergasted,' Don Daffron, who directed the study, said this week.

"'Everything I had studied in microbiology told me money was always covered with bacteria. But it was relatively clean.'

"He said $1 bills average 8,686 organisms per half side, less than knives and forks checked by food inspectors.

"Dimes and pennies averaged only 63 organisms per side, while quarters had 1,050, nickels 1,430 and half-dollars 268.

"Daffron theorized that there were fewer bacteria on pennies and dimes because copper and silver may retard bacteria growth.

"Daffron said the investigation was designed to find out how much bacteria was being spread by food servers who also run cash registers." — TOM WAHL, AVON, N.Y.

DEAR MR. WAHL: Now we know there's no need to launder dirty money. Thanks. And keep the change.

DEAR ABBY: While I agree with "A Friend in Millbury, Mass." that food service personnel who handle money should not handle food without washing their hands, your writer might be interested to know that all U.S. currency (paper bills only) is treated with an antibacterial agent that leaves it germ-free for the life of the bill.

Incidentally, the United States is the only country in the world to so treat its currency. — PETER FULTON ROSS, AUSTIN, TEXAS

DEAR MR. ROSS: It's good to know that U.S. currency is germ-free. But if it weren't, even a germ would have a hard time living on a dollar these days.

DEAR ABBY: The summer season is here again for us "fortunate" folks who have a place at the lake. I've decided to enjoy ours, and not be a hostess all summer as in previous years.

In case "friends" don't know it, it takes a lot of work to ready a cottage for the summer season. It's not like "On Golden Pond" where they just walk in, uncover everything and start living!

The place has to be cleaned from top to bottom. Water pipes need to be drained and cleaned. The boats need motors checked and oiled and the dock has to be repaired and painted. When that's done, there's the mowing and raking. No friends ever show up to help with these tasks, but every weekend they appear on Saturday a.m. through Sunday p.m. with their kids, minus beach towels, swimsuits, beverages and food.

Next year we may start going to our lake place on Monday morning and returning to the city on Friday evening to rest!

I might add that our summer drop-in friends never invite us to their homes during the winter months.

Please print this, Abby. It applies to a lot of folks. — FED UP IN MINNESOTA

AT WIT'S END

Children's rooms drive parents crazy

By ERMA BOMBECK

Children drive their parents crazy.

That's a fact.

But do you know what single complaint drives them there faster than anything else? Kids who don't clean their rooms.

I know, you thought you were the only mother who discovered life under their bunk bed. I felt guilty for years because I wouldn't allow the dog to kiss the kids for fear the dog would get sick.

Sometimes I think we're just spinning our wheels harping about it. I've read all those articles that guarantee instant conversion from resident pig to princess. They tell you to put down easy-care vinyl tiles in the bedroom. (I haven't seen the floor in 15 years.) They tell you to select mini-blinds and shutters rather than curtains. (How about painting the windows black?) They tell you to make the most out of storage space under the beds. (Where do they think I found the sherbert glass that walked and talked?) I don't think any of that works. I've never met a born-again slime fighter.

It's my theory that it's all tied up with a child's rebellion toward adult lifestyles. You can lead a child to a white-canopied bed, giraffe clothes tree, little shelves of books, and balloons painted on his waste can, but you can't make him clean it.

Everywhere in the house there are rules of cleanliness and order. Rinse the dishes and stack them in the sink. Fold up the afghan and put it back on the sofa where you found it. Flush. Hang up that dish towel. Close the refrigerator door. Get that wet glass off the table before it turns white. Flush. Straighten up that rug before someone trips over it. Push the chairs under the table. Wipe up those crumbs. Flush.

Their room is the only place they can thumb their noses at tradition and health standards.

When does this period end? I knew you'd ask that. Every parent wants to know. And that's the part I'm still working on. Sometimes, a little thing will trigger their realization that this is no way to live.

A great scholar once said, "Dirt is not dirt . . . but only something in the wrong place." For a long time I couldn't figure out what that meant. Now I know. We moved last year . . . and never told the kids where we were going.

Video livens up company meetings

FARMINGTON, Conn. (AP) — A trend toward livening up company annual meetings is under way.

Due to video-conferencing, more annual meetings than ever before will be taken to shareholders in various parts of the country, predicts John Budd Jr. of Emhart Corp.

Budd, author of "Corporate Video in Focus," says such meetings will have more emphysis on shareholder participation.

Two-week European tour well-orchestrated, grueling

By JOSEPH THESKEN
Copley News Service

Breakfast in Amsterdam. Lunch in Brussels. Dinner in London.

Sound like the itinerary of a jet-setter? Could be, but in this case it was the end of a European tour that could only be described as whirlwind.

We rolled relentlessly along the highways of France, Switzerland, Italy, Austria, Germany, Holland and Belgium for 12 days, taking in the scenery, stopping for sight-seeing, quick lunches and even briefer rest stops.

It was a well-orchestrated but grueling circle tour of Europe.

We were warned, on the first day of our journey, about what was ahead. As our tour director, Monica McPhee, warned us, it wouldn't be a picnic.

Our bus had just left the Cunard International Hotel in downtown London, a frantic starting place for dozens of tours, when Monica spoke over the intercom:

"Remember, this is a tour, not a vacation.

"We'll be getting up early every morning. We'll be traveling with few breaks during the day and it will be tiring.

"But it was your choice to take a tour that covers a lot of ground, and this is the only way we can do it."

SHE PAUSED and, with a disarming smile, added, "The vacation comes later, after the tour. Then you can rest up."

At the time, her words bounced harmlessly off our consciousness, as visions of Paris, Rome, Venice and the Swiss Alps danced merrily in our heads.

It was only much later, as we neared the end of our 3,000-mile odyssey, that her words came back with the certainty of an oracle.

Still, for a first-ever view of Europe, the tour was well worth it. Literally, it was a sampler of seven countries, giving my wife and me a small but tantalizing taste of each.

CNS Photo

A good way for travelers with time to see Amsterdam is to take a boat tour of its canals.

The next time we plan a trip to Europe — and after our experience we'll take another — the choice of where to go will be an easy one.

For purely spectacular scenery, the choice would be Switzerland or Austria.

For art and a fascinating view of a once-great civilization, Italy is the place.

In fairness to France, however, I have to say that my vision was blurred somewhat by a steady drizzle as we traversed the French countryside. And beautiful, romantic Paris was soggy and overcast the entire time there.

BUT I found Switzerland, even when rain and mist at times shrouded its Alpine peaks, little less than awesome. Snowcapped peaks glistened in the morning sun, outdoing any picture postcard or travelogue.

Waterfalls cascaded down sheer mountain slopes. Picturesque villages, topped by church spires, decorated lush green valleys.

"The Swiss have been blessed with 200 years of peace," Monica said, as if in answer to cries of, "Oh, how beautiful!" and "Fantastic!"

"They have been able to maintain their neutrality at times when every other country was fighting in wars. And, for a small nation, they are very well armed and prepared. You'll see more military vehicles on the roads of Switzerland than any other place in Europe."

The Swiss cities we visited — Lucerne, Lausanne and Berne — were attractive and affluent. Flags of the country's 22 cantons flew from buildings, adding a splash of color to the cities. The people were well dressed, prosperous looking. Poverty seems to be an alien word in their dictionary.

But for me, the Alps, not the cities, are the pride of Switzerland. They capture and hold a tourist's heart at first sight.

FOR ITALY, its pride is in its past glories, when Rome was the center of Western civilization, and in its galaxy of radiant artists — Michelangelo, da Vinci, Raphael and Titian, among others.

As our bus traveled the Highway of the Sun toward Rome, Monica recounted its history and legends.

"Rome is rich in the relics of the past," she said. "You'll find there traces of the last 3,000 years of civilization."

It was everything Monica said it was, and more. Rome is an exciting city, throbbing with life. It doesn't have the charm or order of a Lucerne, but it has the joie de vivre and zest of a bustling metropolis.

Rome is a tourist's treasure. For the art lover, there are Michelangelo's brilliant paintings in the Vatican's Sistine Chapel. For the history buff, remains of ancient Rome abound: the giant Colosseum, where the gladiators fought, the Forum, the center of Rome's social and political life and the temples erected to their gods.

One of the most memorable evenings of the tour occurred in Tivoli Gardens, on the outskirts of Rome. A guide led us by flashlight along a path that took us from one spectacular fountain to another. Backlighting illuminated the water shooting 40 feet in the air. It was a truly beautiful display.

OTHER MEMORIES of Italy:

— In Florence, birthplace of the Renaissance, seeing Michelangelo's magnificent and towering (17 feet tall) "David" in the Gallery of Fine Arts.

— Seated in a gondola, as it glided quietly along the inner waterways of Venice. The most relaxing time in the entire trip.

— St. Mark's Square, on Venice's Grand Canal, a favorite spot for tourists, with sidewalk cafes, jewelry and gift shops. It is dominated by the Basilica of St. Mark, dating to A.D. 829 the Clock Tower (1496) and St. Mark's Bell Tower, a relative newcomer, circa 1912. Looking across the canal, you can see the baroque-style Santa Maria della Salute, with water lapping at its front steps.

— Seeing for myself that the Leaning Tower of Pisa actually does tilt at a crazy angle, even more than picture postcards show.

From Italy, we drove through the Dolomite Mountain range and over the Brenner Pass. And, to the lilting tunes of Strauss waltzes, we entered Austria. Once again, the breathtaking grandeur of the Alps caught our eyes.

THE FINAL days of the trip went swiftly.

The bus rolled along the German autobahn, stopping in Munich, the university town of Heidelberg and Cologne, with an overnight in Bad Duerkheim, a small town near Frankfurt.

Then across the German border to the Netherlands, where we took a sight-seeing boat trip through the canals of Amsterdam, Holland's 700-year-old capital.

It was a tired troupe of travelers who staggered into the Cunard International in London that night, following a three-hour bus ride from Dover.

But we did see a great deal of Europe in less than two weeks. We took in some of the continent's most fascinating cities — Rome, Paris, Florence, Amsterdam, Lucerne and Brussels. The scenery, from the wine fields of France to the Swiss Alps, was a treat.

Rome: Walking around the 'Eternal City'

CNS Photo

Framed by a fountain, St. Peter's Basilica has awed visitors in Rome for centuries.

By GARY KRINO
Copley News Service

Rome is called The Eternal City and I think I know why. If you don't bring along a good pair of walking shoes, you're going to be eternally sorry.

Unlike Paris and London, which give the impression of a bunch of museums and palaces carelessly dumped out of a giant bucket and landing where they might, Rome has a central core — the ancient city — and that's probably where you'll want to spend most of your time.

The best way to see it is to slip into those comfortable shoes and start hoofing it. Rome, with its more than 2 million Romans, has a reputation for traffic jams every bit as monumental as any monument you'll see — which makes walking all the more essential.

The best place to start your trek through the ancient city is Rome's City Hall, flanked by the Capitoline and Conservatori museums. Michelangelo built the steps up which you'll hike. From there, you'll have a fabulous view of the Forum below. As crackpot as it sounds — who wants gray clouds and a touch of fog on the trip of a lifetime? — hope for both. They add a mystical touch to the antiquity you'll be seeing. You'll swear you see the ghosts of senators and Caesars lurking in the murk.

For a quarter-mile back of City Hall stretch Rome's greatest archaeological treasures. Get yourself down to Via dei Fori Imperiali, a wide boulevard opened by Benito Mussolini, and make a day of walking the short distance to the Colosseum. You're in for some stunners. Stretching away on both sides are 2,000-year-old marketplaces, forums, temples, amphitheaters, statues, you name it. Explore. You might like to hire a guide or grab one of the cassettes (make sure the recording is in English) that will tell you most of what you'll want to know.

When you reach the Colosseum, stop at one of the stands for some wonderful Italian ice.

The Vatican is a "don't miss," but this center of Christianity is such a giant glob of goodies that you're going to have to be very selective. If time is short, you'll probably have to make a choice — St. Peter's and the gardens or the Sistine Chapel and the gardens. The best bet is tours. They can be booked up to two days in advance at the information office between St. Peter's Square and St. Peter's.

At St. Peter's, you'll come across a platinum chalice presented by Spain's King Charles III to Pope Pius VI and an ancient cloak some say Charlemagne wore at his coronation. If you're a real adventurer, go to the crown of the 435-foot-tall dome. From there, all of Rome is yours. Part of the climb is by elevator, the rest by foot. The return trip will take you along a high, open section of the roof with no balcony or handrail.

The Sistine Chapel? It's one great art collection. The ceilings and upper parts of the walls were frescoed by Michelangelo, and his enormous "Last Judgment" covers the entire wall behind the altar. Other painters whose works decorate the chapel walls are Botticelli, Ghirlandajo, Perugino and Pinturicchio. Take along a good pair of binoculars so you can get a better look at the ceiling.

Children may enjoy vacationing in Ontario

Want a vacation the children can enjoy too? This year, why not try Ontario.

There's never been a better time for children to have fun in Ontario. This year Ontario Place, the entertainment showcase on the edge of Lake Ontario, has a host of new children's attractions.

A new crawl box is unusual because it simulates water — youngsters crawl through plastic tunnels, gaze out through distorting water lenses and finally pop into the open air through sky blue bubbles.

The new roller bin is literally a barrel of fun. Kids can stand inside and rotate it just by walking. They can also bounce around on the Moon Walk (a huge trampoline) and wander through a foam forest with 50 canvas bags to pound, hug or play hide-and-seek around. King of the Castle, which is also new, is a tall pyramid with slides down each face and foam cushions at the bottom.

Then there's the new water play area with 15 water games. Children can operate pumps and direct jets of spray. And there's even a handy walk-in dryer at the end.

For pre-schoolers there's a special area with small-scale duplicates of some new playground features, including the pyramid and roller bin. Also included are a jumping-jack air bag, hobby horses, animal swings and a ball bath where youngsters can crawl through more than 70,000 plastic balls.

Smaller communities in Ontario also offer entertainment for children. Visit Santa Claus at Santa's Village in Bracebridge, where kids will also find Old McDonald's Farm and a "Touch of Love" section with goats, sheep, deer and a llama. The Candy Cane Express carries youngsters through an Enchanted Forest and across Lemonade Lagoon.

Colorado ski trip offered

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

It's early, I'll admit, to discuss skiing — but for the dedicated powder lover here's a tip to keep handy. Starting this winter you can spend six days skiing in Telluride, Colo. for only $359. The package includes round-trip air fare from Los Angeles, a condominium and a lift ticket. Has to be the best ski deal to come along in several seasons. Because of the price, it's bound to be a sellout, so it might be wise to book early. The toll-free number in Telluride is (800) 525-3455. Meanwhile, starting Dec. 15, America West will operate a one-stop Saturday flight to Montrose, ce way and Frontier Airlines will be offering a $90 one-way fare, Los Angeles to Grand Junction.

Above a Shell employee vents carbon dioxide gas in the Enhanced Oil Recovery Project in the Denver Unit of the Wasson field near Denver City. The project is expected to recover an additional 280 million barrels from the field. A $99 million recovery plant, above right, will be the heart of the project.

Wasson project gets official start

Basin's largest carbon dioxide flood working well

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business-Oil Editor

The largest carbon dioxide flood in the Permian Basin in the world–is on stream in Denver City and performing well, according to Shell Oil Co.

Implementation of full scale injection into the waterflooded San Andres formation into the Denver Unit of the Wason field, according to Joe Kimmel, manager of the Wasson Complex.

"Currently, we are taking 200 million cubic feet per day of carbon dioxide from the Cortez pipeline, and expect to be taking the full complement of gas, 330 million cubic feet, by the fourth quarter of this year."

Kimmel said that results of the initial carbon dioxide injection have been very positive with no premature breakthrough of the gas, which is going into the formation in the right quantities and in the same distribution pattern as the previous water injection.

The $900 million Denver Unit project is expected to recover an additional 280 million barrels of oil from the Unit, making for a total of 1.2 billion barrels recovered from the world class reservoir, or 53 percent of the oil in place. It will extend the productive life of the field by 30 years.

FULL IMPLEMENTATION of the carbon dioxide flood comes after more than a decade of research and testing to determine if the gas would effectively mobilize oil trapped in tiny pores which was unrecoverale in a waterflood.

A $9 million, one-acre pilot project that included one injector and three producers as well as observation wells was conducted over a period of three years and proved that the formation was conducive to carbon dioxide flooding.

The current well pattern in the field is an inverted nine spot, with one injector for each three producers. About 2.5 million cubic feet of gas per day will be injected into each injector.

Gas for the flood comes from the Doe Canyon field and the McElmo Dome field in the southwestern cornor of Colorado near Cortez and is delivered to the Denver Unit by a 500-mile long, 30-inch pipeline.

While only 1.2 trillion cubic feet of carbon dioxide gas will be needed for the Denver Unit operations, the source fields have reserves estimated at approximately 10 trillion cubic feet. The McElmo Dome field, alone, is 25 miles long with over 200,000 productive surface acres, and is one of the world's largest accumulations of pure carbon dioxide with a gas composition of 98 percent pure carbon dioxide.

THE CORTEZ TO DENVER CITY pipeline is owned by a consortium of Shell Western, Mobil and Continental Resources and will be operated by Shell Pipe Line Corp.

The gas produced from this part of Colorado will probably be used in many carbon dioxide projects throughout the Permian Basin.

Ford Motor Co. reveals seat belt jingle winners

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co., hoping humor might strike a chord when cajoling and pleading do not, has announced the winning entries in a jingle contest aimed at getting its headquarters employees to use seat belts.

Twelve winners were chosen from 883 entries, and three of them were designed to be read from highway signs, much like the old Burma Shave advertisements, the company said Monday.

And the envelope, please:

"'If I wear my seat belt, my suit may get creased.'

"— Famous last words of the impeccably deceased."

That one was submitted by Michael Schwartz of Belleville, Mich., who works in environmental and safety engineering.

E.F. Hutton relocates to ClayDesta Plaza offices

In a move to ClayDesta Plaza earlier this week, E.F. Hutton became the first financial services firm in Midland to locate outside the downtown area.

Richard A. Walsh, senior vice president and regional vice president for the South Central District headquarted in Houston, said the move to the ClayDesta puts financial services on the northside of Midland and expands the firm's working space.

"We will have room for 16 brokers in our new facilities as opposed to 10 in our former location," said Walsh.

The regional vice president said his firm was confident that the energy business in Midland would proceed on a slow, constant growth trend, having reached bottom and now moving upward again.

Said Walsh: "We are confident more growth is coming and we want to be part of it. The way things are now Midland has to continue growing."

The firm also recently opened offices in Odessa.

Local oil firm head to appear on national TV

William Judd, president Texas American Energy Corp., Midland, will be the featured guest on a 30-minute, nationwide TV show this Sunday.

Judd will be interviewed by Myron Kandel, host of Inside Busi-ness a weekly program on CNN, Cable News Network, on a variety of energy issues, including OPEC, natural gas marketing and possible major oil and gas plays that may develop in the U.S. and elsewhere.

The television appearance is the result of Judd's speech to the New York Society of Security Analysts, Tuesday, Judd was invited by the group to offer an independent perspective on energy issue.

Judd was also interviewed by Oil Daily, a major industry publication, and that interview will be printed next Wednesday in the newspaper.

Inside Business and the Judd interview will be broadcast twice Sunday, at 5:30 p.m. and 10:30 p.m., on channel 6.

K mart to market financial services

Hearst News Service

Loudspeakers in some California K marts soon may blare out interest rates as well as specials on garden tools.

First Nationwide Savings, the aggressive savings and loan headquartered in San Francisco, announced this week that it will join with the retailer in a pilot program in San Diego this fall to offer some financial services in K mart stores. First Nationwide hopes the K mart connection will boost nationwide distribution of its financial services.

In October, First Nationwide will open 10 mini-offices in San Diego K mart stores to sell money market accounts, individual retirement accounts and, possibly, six-month to five-year savings certificates, the companies announced. The certificates program must first be approved by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

First Nationwide will not offer other services commonly found in its regular branches, such as checking accounts. The S&L will keep its services to a minimum to reduce labor and other overhead costs. As a result of the lower overhead, First Nationwide Chairman Anthony Frank said that the K mart branches probably will pay interest rates about half a percentage point higher than rates at its regular branches.

Some analysts said they saw the move as an attempt by K mart, the world's second-largest retailer, to stay competitive with Sears, Roebuck Co., the largest. Sears has led the move in recent years toward so-called one-stop shopping with retail goods and financial services such as banking, stock brokerage, real estate brokerage and insurance under one roof.

"Those are services that retailers don't make any money on," said Dennis Ross of Montgomery Securities in San Francisco. But the financial services draw in customers and can provide a refueling stop for customers whose wallets are running dry.

The pilot program with First Nationwide could help K mart in other ways. The retailer has become embroiled in legal battles by allowing its own employees to help market financial services in some of its Florida and Texas stores.

Through an agreement with Standard Federal Savings and Loan Association, of Troy, Mich., K mart employees in those stores assist customers in conducting long-distance banking with Standard Federal. The state of Florida has sued K mart, claiming the retailer is violating state laws against interstate banking. Switching to services offered by First Nationwide in Florida could solve some of K mart's problems because First Nationwide already legally operates full-service offices in Florida under governmental waivers.

Frank said his S&L has no plans yet to become involved with K mart's Florida financial services operations. But he indicated he would not mind considering it. "The logical next step for us is New York," where First Nationwide also has branches, Frank continued.

Frank began his franchise program in May 1983. S&Ls pay a fee to use the First Nationwide name and hook into such services as the large organization's advertising campaigns and ability to put together large loan packages.

First Nationwide is not new to setting up outlets in retail stores. The company already has had full-service branches on an experimental basis in five J.C. Penney stores in Sacramento, Calif., since June 1983. But the Penney's outlets have been expensive to staff because they offer so many services. As part of its agreement with Penney, for example, "we have to sell insurance," said Steven Johnson of First Nationwide.

To solve that problem, First Nationwide came up with the idea of limited-service offices for the K mart stores, Frank said.

Texas will pay a toll for business progress

Texas is changing. Demographics reveal that industry and people are moving to Texas at a rate that is making it not only one of the largest but also one of the most populated and wealthiest of states. It is a transition that is good for business, but one that will not come without a toll.

One of the things it may cost Texas is Texas itself — that is the loss of character, color, culture and charm that makes Texas, Texas. And when these begin to erode resentment can't be far behind.

Californians resented the depression and wind-whipped Okies who invaded that state. Oregon resented it when the over-crowded Californians tried to escape to their state. Billboards greeted Californians with messages that told them in effect to come and visit but please go home.

I sense that same resentment may be brewing in Texas.

I am particularly troubled by this "native Texan" syndrome which suggests there is, perhaps, some reason to be a bit prouder for being born in Texas.

It is a syndrome borrowed, I suspect, from the offensive Colorado bumper sticker caper of the same stripe.

Despite the fact that Texans, Okies and people from Kansas (whatever they're called) are the main economy of Colorado, Coloradoans like to insinuate that things would probably be better without them. The graffiti in one Crested Butte restroom reads: "If God had wanted Texans to ski, he would have given them mountains." Beneath it somebody, obviously from Texas, pinned this notation: "If God had wanted Coloradoans to ski, he would have given them money."

But, beneath all the good-natured ribbing there is often serious resentment on both sides.

Living in Colorado, I took exception to the jocular but unending innuendo that expatriate Texans were part of a sinister plot that was at the root of all of Colorado's problems.

"Gee, we never had all these dope problems until all you Texans came up here. Ha ha."

And now, back home, I take exception to the elitist notion, which seems to have grown up in my absence, that native is better. Have we forgotten how many of those who died in the Alamo were from Tennessee?

I came to Texas when I was five. I am as Texan as they get. I have never called another place home, although I have lived in several states.

So, I know from whence this pounding-of-the-chest comes from in the natives, and while I can't condone it, I can sympathize with it. It comes from a feeling of helplessness and frustration that Texas culture is being diluted by a horde of outsiders in search of jobs who have no love or feeling for our way of life.

Isn't it funny how we all love progress, but nobody wants to change the status quo? It can't be. You can't ask for more and expect things to remain the same.

For many years we have dwelled in the security of a homogenous tribe that talked, walked and thought pretty much like us — people who waved at us on long lonesome roads, lived for God, country and Friday night football, respected hard work, straight talk, simple pleasures, and good food like chili, barbecue and biscuits and gravy.

There was something wonderfully unique about being a Texan — even if you came from Arkansas or Oklahoma. After all, we were all "cousins" of the South, and not that much different.

But Texas culture is fading now, under assault from a different direction. Anyone who has been to Houston can confirm that fact. It's now closer in culture to New Jersey than Texas.

Even in Midland it's fading. Ever notice how many more, young non-Texas speaking fellows in three piece suits you see these days? Think they're from Arkansas?

I was talking to two young women recently, one from Chicago and the other from New York state. The topic was food.

Said the one from Chicago: "Don't tell me you guys really eat black-eyed peas. I never heard of such a thing."

"I know," added the New York girl, "I never will forget the first time I had to eat biscuits and gravy."

Had to eat biscuits and gravy??!! I nearly fell through the floor. I thought, "There goes the neighborhood. How many like this can we assimilate before irreparable cultural damage is done."

But it was foolish and selfish thinking on my part. Cultures come and go in the wake of changing and expanding economies and the social mobility they bring.

There is no longer any place for resentment, rudeness and predjudice toward outsiders in a nation with so much lateral mobility. I for one have resigned to be gracious to all Texans — new and old.

After all, it doesn't take any brains to be born here. It does takes some brains to move here.

Rig count continues to climb

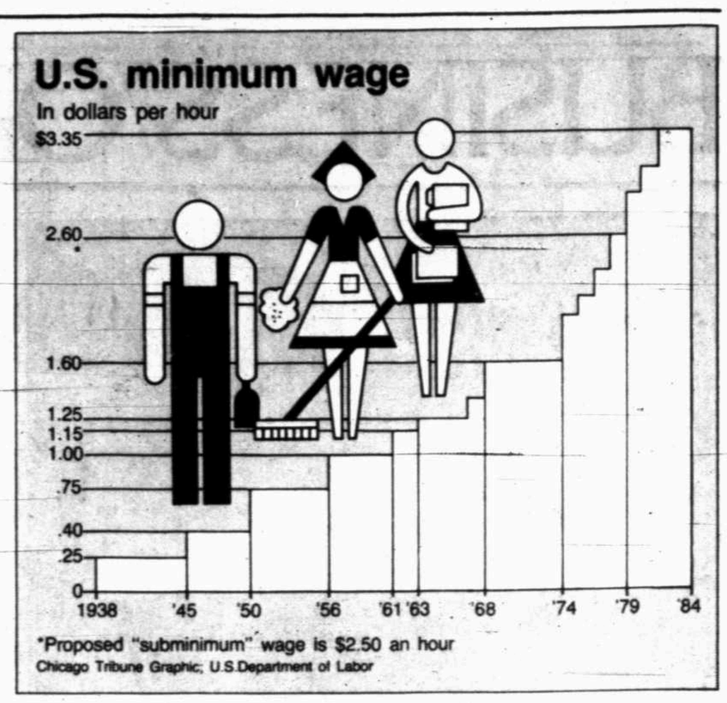
The Permian Basin rig count took a healthy leap forward of 14 rigs this week increasing the count by 21 rigs in just two weeks. Last week the count jumped from 323 to 330, and this week jumped again from 330 to 344.

The two dramatic increases follow a period of three weeks in which the count saw a graduai decline.

Lea County was the big gainer in working rigs, going from 34 last week to 42 this week. It is the first time traditional leader Lea County has been in the 40 bracket in many months.

Following behind Lea were Andrews with 31 rigs and Pecos County with 25.

The national rig count also jumped again this week, climbing from 2,374 to 2,389. The Texas count remained the same at 824, while Louisiana and Nebraska were gainers.



Exxon U.S.A. will introduce new super oil

HOUSTON — Exxon Co., U.S.A. is introducing a new super premium motor oil that exceed the lubrication requirements of all gasoline, diesel, and turbo powered automobiles on the road today.

"Through a major advance in motor oil technology, new Exxon Uniflo 10W-30 meets the demands of diesels and turbos along with the quality demanded by conventional gasoline engines," said Robert Larkins, Exxon Co., U.S.A.'s vice president for marketing.

PBGC to offer three courses

The Permian Basin Graduate Center will offer three courses in the PBGC Building, 105 W. Illinois, Midland.

"Applied Geochemistry in Petroleum Exploration," Monday and Tuesday, July 30-31, from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. This course is designed for geologists, geophysicists, and managers involved in oil and gas exploration who have little or no background in organic geochemistry. The primary focus of the course is how geochemistry can be integrated with geology and geophysics for optimum exploration success. It will concentrate on how exploration personnel can effectively use geochemistry to solve geological problems and reduce exploration risk. Wallace G. Dow, president, Dow Geochemical Services Inc., Houston, will instruct the course. Fee is $260.

"Managing Your Time," Wednesday, August 1, from 8:30 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. This course is designed for any person who needs to gain some advantage in time management effectiveness. Topics include: Time: The uncontrollable asset, how to improve time management practices immediately, how to develop a daily action plan that works, how to get organized once and for all, the monkey's on your back, why the nice guy is always behind, and how to keep everything on track. Jay Terry, center for professional education, Kansas City, will instruct. Fee is $130. Eligible for CPE credits.

"Basic Supervisory Skills," Thursday, August 2, from 8:30 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. This course is designed to improve production results, worker motivaion and morale, profits, and labor relations through the human relations and communications skills of your supervisors, foremen, department managers, group leaders, and office managers. Jay Terry will instruct. Fee is $130.

Jeans makers get blues as sales drop

Los Angeles Times

Blue jeans may appear as ubiquitous as ever, but the public's long infatuation with the traditional five-pocket denim garment is waning. Shoppers across the country are buying fewer jeans or shunning new purchases entirely, making do instead with an old pair or two.

"It's been quite a while since I bought a pair of jeans," said Karen Lamb, who was wearing one of the 30 pairs of jeans she owns. "When everything was jeans, jeans, jeans, I went jeans crazy," she said during a recent shopping expedition in downtown Los Angeles. "Now I'm sick of them. I'm buying everything but jeans."

THIS CHANGE IN shopping preferences is wearing holes in the jeans market. After experiencing years of rapid growth, manufacturers have seen sales stagnate since 1981, resulting in painful adjustments for the nation's $7-billion-a-year jeans industry.

Levi Strauss & Co., the San Francisco company whose founder is credited with the basic five-pocket jean design, has closed 22 plants over the last two years. The company's most recent decision to shut down 11 plants will leave about 3,600 workers without jobs.

Wrangler, another huge jeans maker, has also scaled back, closing nine U.S. jeans manufacturing facilities since 1982. In contrast, Lee, another of the big three manufacturers, has managed to buck the sales slowdown by aggressively wooing female shoppers with new styles.

GONE ARE MOST of those TV commercials featuring eye-catching figures clad in sexy designer jeans, sporting labels of Gloria Vanderbiltz'zon, Jordache, Sergio Valente and others. Those same labels, however, can be found on an increasing number of garments other than jeans these days. "The smaller companies have moved quickly out of five-pocket jeans," explained Cathleen W. Mackey, a senior analyst with the New York brokerage of First Manhattan Co.

In short, the fast growth in the jeans market of the last two decades has gone bust. Where jeans were once the trendy pacesetter from Bloomingdale's in New York to the boutiques of Beverly Hills, it is not unusual these days to find a garbage collector wearing Sergio Valente jeans as work garb.

Sales in the United States have remained virtually unchanged at about 500 million pairs a year since 1981, according to various industry sources, contrasting with an aver age annual growth rate of 5 percent between 1975 and 1980. Jean Driscoll of Jeanswear Communications, an affiliate of the Men's Fashion Association in New York, said, "The growth potential has leveled out."

THE SLOWDOWN is a result in part of the aging population. The baby boomers who helped make jeans the political uniform of the 1960s have grown up into suits and other less casual looks. With the median age of Americans now at 31, Mackey said, "they require different types of apparel."

Jeans sales slowed briefly in the mid-1970s, but received a shot in the arm from the designer-jean craze and the Western-look fad made chic in the 1980 movie "Urban Cowboy."

"People then, for some unknown reason, didn't buy just one or two pairs of jeans a year. They needed five or six," said Bill Hervey, president of Wrangler's menswear division. Now with purchases back down to pre-"Urban Cowboy" levels, he said, "people are looking at sales and saying, 'Jeans are dead.'"

The jeans business is hardly dead, however. "Just walk through any airport these days and you see denim, denim, denim," Hervey said. "... There are so many brand names, and everybody is pecking away at each other."

The problem, however, is that the market is no longer growing. Manufacturers must snatch sales from one another while competing with new looks that offer variations on the basic five-pocket theme.

Today's hot-selling fashion jeans have curious design twists — flaps, zippers at the ankles, stripes, prints and bright colors. Brands with peculiar names like Guess?, Mar ithe et Francois Girbaud and Jag are offering what fashion arbiters call the European look in jeans, at $50 a pair and up.

Firm to construct local pipeline

OMAHA — Northern Natural Resources Co. a division of Inter-North Inc., has announced plans to construct and operate a major carbon dioxide (CO_2) pipeline system in west Texas.

The 135-mile system which will be called the Central Basin CO_2 Pipeline, will be available to receive CO_2 from the Bravo, Cortez and Sheep Mountain Pipelines in Yoakum and Gaines Counties and will transport it south through Andrews, Ector and Crane counties. The CO_2 will be used at various oil fields for enhanced oil recovery.

An order for steel pipe has been placed and right-of-way activities have begun, according to Robert P. Raasch, president of Northern Natural Resources. Raasch said construction is expected to commence during the first quarter of 1985, with initial operation in January 1986. The pipeline will consist of approximately 65 miles of 26-inch diameter pipe, 30 miles of 24-inch, and 20 miles each of 20- and 16-inch pipe.

Central Basin Pipeline will act as a private, contract carrier of CO_2 for oil producers along its route. The pipeline and related facilities will cost an estimated $100 million and will have a freeflow capacity of660 million cubic feet per day. With the additions of four pump stations, the pipeline can achieve an ultimate capacity of well over 1 billion cubic feet per day. Transportation rates for the pipeline will be mileage-based, and terms can be tailored to match transportation with CO_2 purchase terms.

In addition to the main trunk transportation, Northern Natural Resources Co. also intends to offer distribution and related compression services to the oil fields served by the pipeline.

Doug Krenz, manager of CO_2 Transportation Services, said, "Northern Natural Resources sees this pipeline project as meeting an existing and growing need for transportation of CO_2 to these mature producing areas."

Group says study 'another scare tactic'

WASHINGTON — "Another consumer scare tactic" is the way the Independent Petroleum Association of America (IPAA) labeled a new study by a Washington based consumer group which claims residential natural gas prices could soar 14 percent next year when price ceilings are lifted on some natural gas production.

The Citizen/Labor Energy Coalition also claimed an average wellhead price increase of 20 percent.

Lloyd N. Unsell, executive vice president of the IPAA, a national trade association representing America's 15,000 independent oil and natural gas producers, said that "the study goes against everything we know and everything the most reliable experts are saying." And he charged that C/LEC is once again trying to "deceive the American public by foisting upon them this false and deceptive 'study'."

Unsell noted that last year C/LEC was forced to withdraw a similar study after the self proclaimed consumer advocacy organization admitted the study was riddled with "flaws."

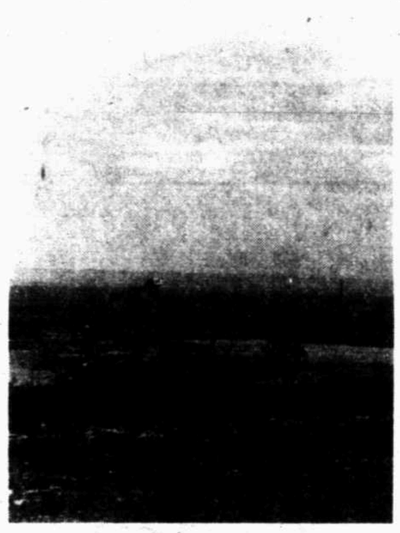
COMPUTREAT™

Provides reliable corrosion control anywhere.

Whether you're producing in Goldsmith, Texas or Elk Draw, Wyoming, Computreat's chemical injection system provides reliable, automated corrosion control to any wellsite.

Remote well sites and rough terrain often make the cost of conventional treatment methods prohibitive. Frequently, extreme weather conditions make reaching the wellsite impossible at any cost. Computreat is on your wellsite day and night, rain or shine, effectively and economically injecting treatment chemicals at any preset interval.

Using the wells produced fluid, Computreat's prewet function "wets" the casing and outside of the tubing to prevent chemicals from adhering to dry surfaces. The circulation cycle flushes up to four chemicals through the standing fluid level to the bottom of the well.



Extensive field tests prove Computreat's method of chemical addition controls corrosion; scale, paraffin and biological problems more effectively than chemical pumps or other methods.

Find out more about Computreat's automated corrosion control system. Contact John Stone at Texas Technical Development Corporation.

Economically treats wells at any time interval

Extensive field tests prove that Computreat's automated chemical injection system significantly reduces corrosion over conventional methods of chemical injection. That translates directly to a substantial reduction in equipment failure and replacement costs.

Until now, whether your well needed hourly, daily or weekly chemical injections, the only economical method to treat your well was based on your treater trucks' schedule. Computreat's computerized injection system allows chemical application at any programmed interval. Using the wells produced fluid, Computreat provides a prewet function. This function "wets" the casing and outside of the tubing to prevent chemicals from adhering to dry surfaces. Up to four different chemicals can be injected to the well followed by a circulation cycle that flushes the chemicals through the standing fluid level to the bottom of the well.

COMPUTREAT installation

Southwestern Bell plans equal access

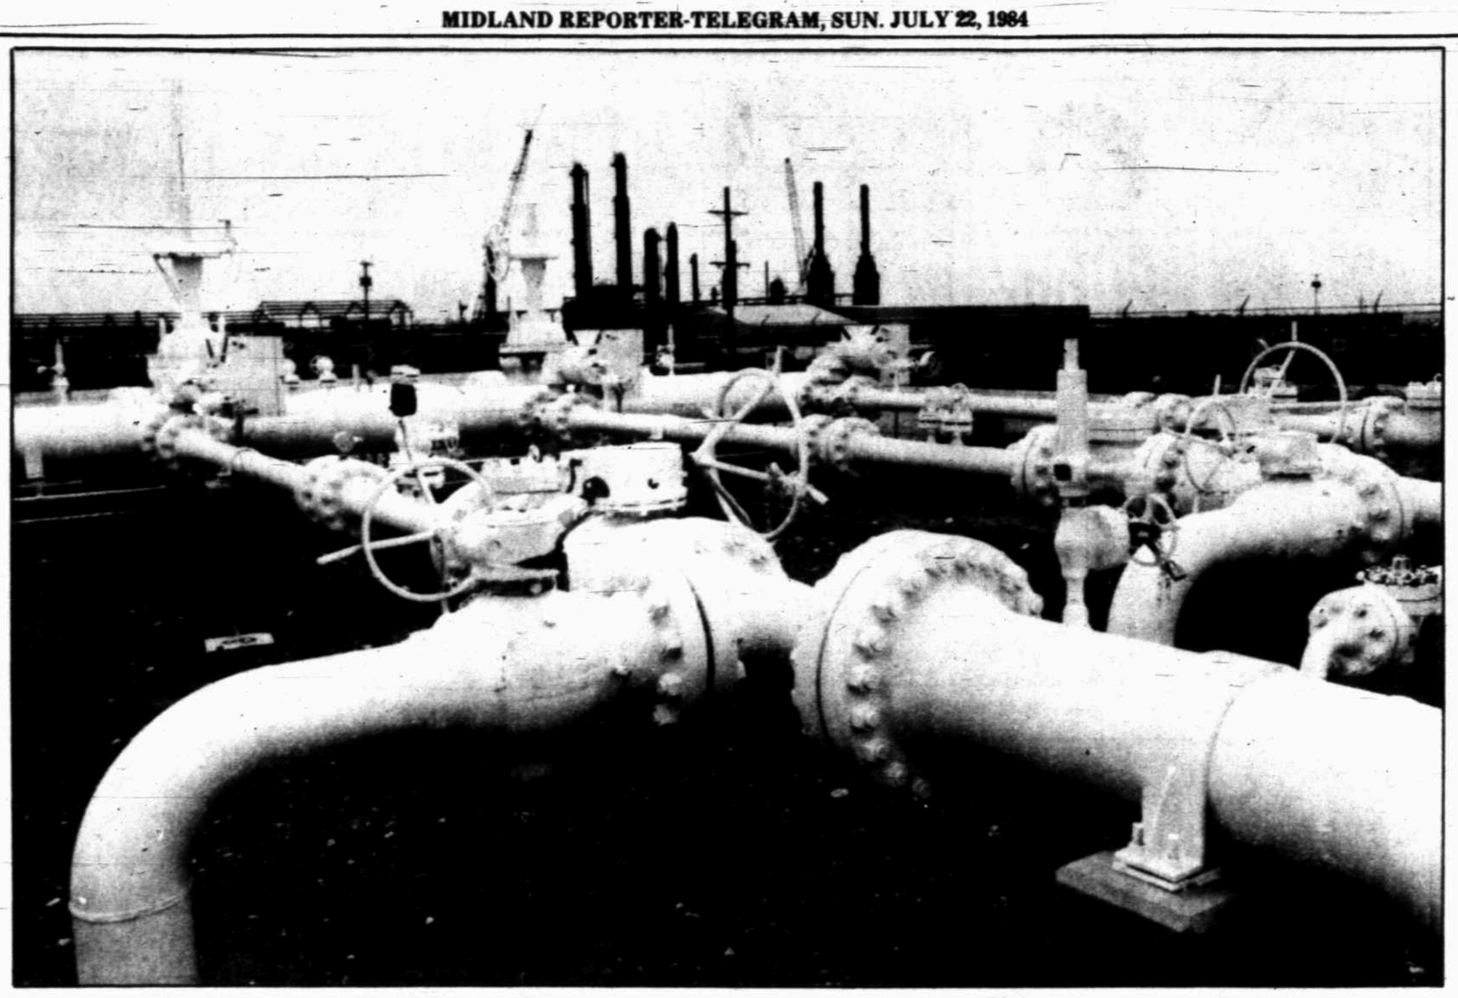
Southwestern Bell Telephone has notified all long-distance companies operating in Texas of its plans to introduce equal access in many of their telephone exchanges.

Equal access will give all long-distance firms the opportunity to be on equal footing with AT&T, both in transmission quality and dialing requirements. The new service is expected to increase customer convenience and fuel an already high competitive industry.

According to Darlene Gifford, manager-community relations, Southwestern Bell will introduce equal access in Midland for 682, 683, 684, 685, 686, 687, and 688, in February 1985. Equal access will be announced for other exchanges in Odessa and Midland in the near future.

Gifford said her company is developing a comprehensive information plan to keep customers abreast of the changes.

"We'll make sure our customers know what they need to do, when they need to do it," she said. Gifford said details of the customer information program, as well as additional information about equal access, will be announced later.



The main carbon dioxide manifold receives gas from the Cortez Pipeline, and equally from the recovery plant, background, and transports the carbon dioxide throughout the field.

Shell plans to flood the Denver Unit in two stages, using gas from Stage I to inject into Stage II.

Cost for the project has been staggering. Preparing for start-up of the Denver Unit has required over $900 million, which includes $200 million for development of the source field, $480 million for pipeline construction, and $220 million for injection and treating facilities at the Denver Unit. Over the life of the project, total investment, in terms of current dollars, will be about double the start-up cost.

The project has resulted in somewhat of a mini-boom in Denver City, with Shell employing about 220 on the project and contractors bringing another 500 employees into the community.

WORK IN THE FIELD which will continue through 1994 will include 150 pattern regularization and replacement wells, of which only 33 have been drilled; 190 miles of injection lines; 22 injection manifolds; 33 new production manifolds; 66 production and test separators; 50 miles of contaminated gas gathering systems, and 81,500 HP of gas compressors. The heart of the system will be a $99 million gas recovery plant for removal of hydrogen sulfide and carbon dioxide.

The plant which will have a capacity for handling 140 Mmscfd will be the largest of its kind and is scheduled for completion in 1985. A second plant will be added about 1992 when the volumes of gas recovered necessitate the capacity.

Rhoda Walker field interests sold to oil firm

BALA CYNWYD, Pa. — Bryn Mawr Energy Co., a private oil and gas company, headquartered in Bala Cynwyd, Pa. has recently acquired an additional 18.04 percent average working interest from Monsanto Oil Co. in eleven wells in the East Rhoda Walker field of Ward county. Bryn Mawr Energy in conjunction with its private limited partnership drilling programs participated in the drilling of the wells, beginning with the Thornton No. 1 well in December 1981. The purchase also includes a similar interest in six proven undeveloped sites which will be drilled in conjunction with future drilling programs.

The purchase, financed from internal cash and borrowings from the Bank of California, will increase the company's reserves by 445,000 barrels of oil and 1684 million cubic feet of gas.

Trade report may upset investors

New York Times News Service

Given the marketplace's recent penchant for treating good economic news as a portent of higher interest rates and inflation, the good news that's expected to come with next Friday's government report on the export-import merchandise trade balance for June should upset many investors.

"The figures will show that the June trade deficit was well below the $8.8 billion reported for May and the $12.2 billion the month before," said Gert von der Linde, chief economist at Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette, who has correctly called the trend in recent months. And von der Linde believes the trade deficit will continue to shrink during the rest of the year.

"I don't like to pick numbers, but the fact is that our economy is slowing and this will continue to reduce imports at the same time our exports continue to rise, in large part because the deficits put a lot of dollars in foreign hands," he explained.

The trade deficit hasn't been all bad. The inflow of cheaper foreign goods has helped to reduce inflation while it has stimulated the depressed economies of our trading partners, he said, adding: "Now we will see a greater eqilibrium in our trade balances."

If anyone needs insurance against loss these days it is the property and casualty underwriters, whose earnings have sunk far below the most bearish forecasts this year. Indeed, many casualty insurers have taken to paying out dividends from the retained earnings of prior years in order to keep the market price of their shares from falling.

Donald E. Franz, insurance analyst at Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co., believes the property and casualty insurers could collectively show a negative return on shareholder equity this year, compared with the gains of 5 to 10 percent reported in 1983.

"Basically," Franz said, "they are now paying for their high profits of the late 1970s, when 20 percent or more returns on equity were common. These returns attracted many to the business, which resulted in fierce price wars."

Lewellen will free up your time

"Dad may we going camping this weekend? You said we could someday."

"Son, I'd really like for us to go, but I have to paint the house this weekend. It's peeling so much that I just can't wait any longer. The trim will have to be done next weekend, but we'll go... someday."

Sound familiar? It seems to be getting harder and harder to make time for your family. Well, Bill Lewellen of Lewellen Construction strongly believes that quality family time should be a high priority. He has commited himself to his family and to helping you make time to be with your family.

Bill can't cut your overtime in half or mow your yard, but he can certainly guarantee that you will never again have to spend time repainting your house or trim. His company offers maintenance-free steel siding, soffit, and fascia which will add insulation to your home and protect it from the harsh weather elements, as well as prevent warping, rotting, and decaying of the original surface.

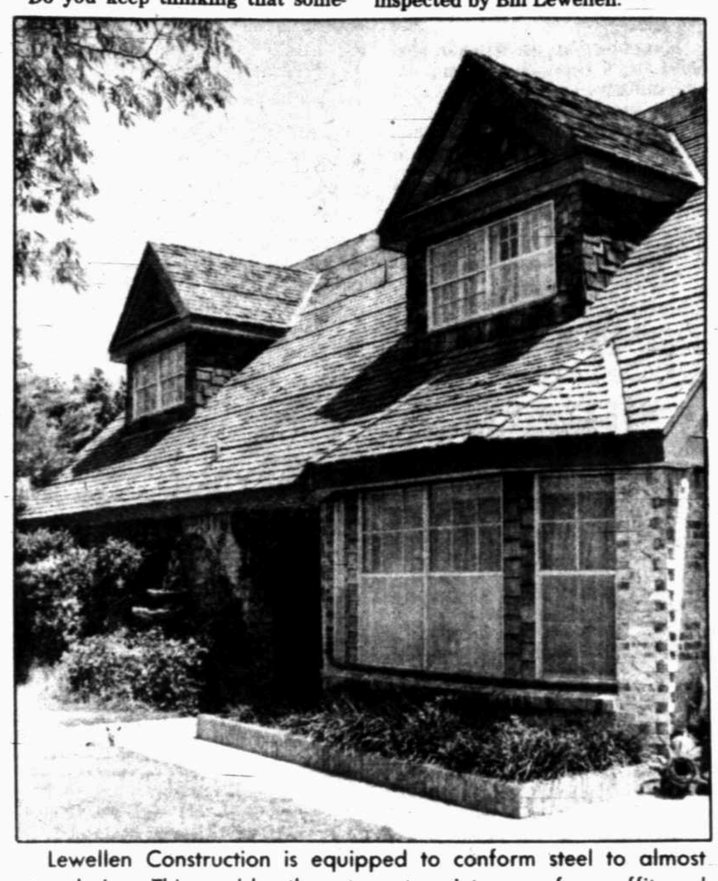
The use of steel siding, soffit, and fascia is not limited to a certain style of home. Families with mobile homes have been very pleased with the improved appearance and insulation which steel siding has given their homes. It is also noteworthy that brick homes with steel soffit and fascia sport a totally maintenance-free exterior without sacrificing style.

Lewellen Construction is specially skilled at forming the steel to fit most any shape so that the original design of your home will not have to be altered. Regardless of how different your home is from your neighbor's home, your family's need for free time together is much the same. So, whatever style of home you have, give Bill the opportunity to make its exterior completely maintenance-free.

Lewellen Construction does a professional job when it comes to making your home more relaxing. For example, they offer patio covers, carport covers and screen rooms by Fashion, Inc. What better place could their be to spend an evening with your family than right there at home on a covered patio?

It may interest you that Lewellen Construction can also install energy efficient storm and replacement windows. Energy will never be cheap again, so imagine how your family could use the money thermopane windows will save you on energy bills. The added security of storm windows is also worth considering.

Do you keep thinking that someday you'll find time to be with your family? Well, now is the time to make that a reality. Call Bill Lewellen today at 686-8007 and let him help by making your home's exterior maintenance-free. You can be sure that every job done by Lewellen Construction is done with great care. Bill doesn't subcontract the work, because he feels like that would give him less quality control. Each job comes with a life-time guarantee and is personally inspected by Bill Lewellen.



Lewellen Construction is equipped to conform steel to almost any design. This enables them to put maintenance-free soffit and fascia on uniquely styled homes such as the one pictured above.

Midland Muffler can offer you quiet driving and peace of mind

Roaring up to the starting line on a race track is great, but at a red light on Wall Street in your luxury car? That's absurd! Or, maybe you don't drive a luxury car, but you do pride yourself in keeping your economy car finely tuned. Well, in either case, a worn out muffler is no compliment.

Midland Muffler's owners, Greg Mayo and Walter McCall, are anxious to help you put an end to your embarrassing muffler problems. These experts can install a Silver Knights muffler on your car and watch you drive away with quiet confidence. Not only do their quality stock and turbo mufflers provide quiet driving time, but the accompaning lifetime warranty offers you peace of mind.

Recreational vehicles and foreign cars are no problem at Midland Muffler. Over six years of experience has equipped Greg to meet your every muffler need whether you drive a domestic or foreign car or a R.V.

Midland Muffler's quality work is not limited to mufflers. They also do custom exhaust systems and complete brake work. Replacing worn out shocks with lifetime-warrantied Monroe shocks is also a regular service they offer. If you're dreading installing a trailer hitch, let Midland Muffler install it for you. Whatever your need, you can be sure the job will be done correctly at Midland Muffler!

If you are into the sporty appearance of pipes or super performance of glass packs, Midland Muffler is the place to go. They offer both with a full one year warranty. In addition, they have a large selection of chrome tips.

Why wait any longer to see the experts at Midland Muffler about your car problems? For your convenience they open at 7:30 a.m. Monday through Saturday. On Thursday they stay open till 9 p.m. and on Saturday they close at 3:00 p.m. The rest of the week they are open till 5:30 p.m. You will be impressed with their exceptionally clean and modern shop at 3201-A W. Manpower is the efficient temporary service that you've been looking for Nobody does what we do to assure performance you can depend on. You have a work emergency. You need temporary help. When that happens, you want temporaries who can help solve your problems, not create new ones.

At Manpower, we've come up with a number of innovative ways to provide people who can step in and help out–when and were they're needed.

The things we do require a lot of extra effort on our part, but we think they're worth it. You see, we're not content just being the biggest temporary help service. We also want to be the best.

Picture yourself as a temporary going to a new job situation. You're about to meet new people, in a strange company; maybe work with unfamiliar equipment. You don't know the procedures. You're anxious, a little apprehensive.

The Work Environment Report is an important Manpower Service. Before an assignment, we learn as much as possible about the company. We want to know about the work site, equipment involved, safety precautions, dress requirements, parking facilities, reporting procedures, and more.

This professional, in-depth approach benefits you, because it benefits our temporaries. We're able to select the one best suited for your needs, then fill him in with all pertinent information.

The result: a better prepared temporary who spends less time learning the ropes and more time being a well-oriented, productive worker.

Manpower industrial workers receive their work assignments by phone after a thorough and professional interview which determines the work they like best–and do best. We are not limited in our selection by a small group of people who may come to a waiting room each day. We have a wide range of people and skills, and our employees, wherever possible, are assigned to work near their homes.

Result: people more closely matched to your needs–and their desires. Better punctuality...better productivity!

Manpower employees are: skilled workers in betweeen jobs or seeking extra money, people with seasonal jobs, retired persons who want to keep active, and college students with free time.

Through the Manpower Telephone Assignment System you can count on getting the kind of workers you want with the skills you need.

No system involving people can be perfect. So after assignments, temporaries' performances are reviewed. We provide our customers with Quality Performance Appraisal Forms which ask about such things as attitude and adaptability, and quality and quantity of work.

But that's only half of it. We also ask our temporaries about their job satisfaction. Did they enjoy the assignment? Were they over- or under-qualified? Would they like to work there again?

These reviews accomplish three things: greater job satisfaction for our temporaries, better performance for you, and an effective method of maintaining the standards we've set for ourselves.

Whatever Manpower services we perform for you, we'll perform them to your satisfaction. And we've put that in writing with the Manpower Guarantee. It's your total assuarance of a job well done.

We guarantee to you upon the use of our services, the folloowing: that our services will be performed to your satisfaction. With reasonable notification, Manpower will not charge for unsatisfactory performance. All Manpower employees are paid by check for services performed. As the employer, we will make all contributions for unemployment compensation funds as required by law, and we will make all deductions required of employers, including deductions for social security and income taxes. We agree at all times to make the proper deposits required by law covering the employees of Manpower. All Manpower employees are insured for fidelty and liability coverage.

Manpower has an office in Midland and Odessa, each with clerical, industrial and payrolling divisions to service you better. So, when you have more work than workers call the professionals at Manpower for all your temporary needs. We guarantee you'll be satisfied! Dave Kemp(L) along with Leon Blaschke(R) represents Farmers Insurance Group of Companies at the Kemp-Blaschke Agency at the corner of Midkiff and Ohio. If you have any questions concerning your insurance needs or your present coverage give them a call at 694-8849 or stop by.

Kemp-Blaschke represents Farmers Insurance Group

"Our goal is to provide the best possible coverage for the lowest possible price," according to Leon Blaschke. Mr. Blaschke represents the Farmers Insurance Group of Companies along with Dave Kemp at the Kemp-Blaschke Agency located at the corner of Ohio and Midkiff. The agency has been providing service to its clients from this location for the past 19 years.

The Kemp-Blaschke Agency specializes in homeowners, automobile and life insurance. They also offer coverage for mobile homes, boats, renters, and motorcycles. In addition, a complete line of commercial coverages is available.

Dave Kemp or Leon Blaschke will be happy to review your current policy to determine if your coverage is adequate for today's changing economy.

Through the use of Farmers Insurance Group Network System, Dave, Leon and Irene have the ability to provide prompt policy service.

Price quotations and coverage explanations are gladly discussed over the phone if you prefer.

By representing Farmers Insurance Group, the Kemp-Blaschke Agency is able to offer price advantages on most of your insurance needs including extra savings for non-smokers on homeowners, automobile and life insurance. Also, safe drivers are offered reduced rates on automobile coverage. This includes certain rate classes under the age of 25.

Farmers Insurance Group has always been dedicated to "fast, fair and friendly service." Recently, this commitment has motivatedFarmers' to invest millions of dollars in new drive-in claim facilities throughout the country and to establish one of the largest computer network systems in the world. One of the claims facilities was recently opened in Midland on the Andrews Highway near Loop 250.

To have all your insurance questions answered, give Dave, Leon or Irene a call at 697-8849 or stop by their office at the corner of Ohio Avenue and Midkiff.

Many Texas drivers still failing to obtain required auto liability insurance coverage

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

Some 15 percent of Texas drivers still are failing to obtain required automobile liability insurance coverage, despite the fact that they can be fined for not having coverage, the State Board of Insurance reports.

SBI member William P. Daves says in 1983 there were 140,000 convictions for driving without liability insurance, pointing to the fact that there is still a need to improve compliance with the law.

The House Insurance Committee, as part of its interim study efforts, is looking at uninsured and under-insured motorist coverages, with a subcommittee holding hearings on those coverages.

Insurance industry officials reported that consumers often fail to understand what those coverages provide.

The committee is to report back to the 1985 Legislature on "alternative methods" of marketing and underwriting uninsured and under-insured motorists coverage, along with the effect such changes would have on rates.

•••

Texas Credit Union Commission has approved regulations aimed at assuring parity of State and Federal credit unions, while delaying action on proposals to allow credit unions to issue and sell securities.

TCUC members asked the Texas Credit Union Department to redraft proposed regulations approved May 31 on the issuance and sale of securities.

Members indicated agreement that the revised regulation should provide for issuance of mortgage-backed bonds, as is being considered by Government Employees Credit Union, San Antonio.

And members indicated they would agree with allowing credit unions to refer consumers to operations offering securities services.

But they indicated some concern over credit unions becoming involved in offering securities services until credit unions have more expertise in that area.

GECU has asked whether a credit union may use an employee of a stock broker to offer services at a credit union, and has reported that it has been solicited regarding offering such services.

Texas Credit Union Department is attempting to determine whether other credit unions have been approached by brokers, and whether any have contracted for such services.

Commission members also voted to delay final approval of a regulation for standardized accounting procedures for State-chartered credit unions, but voted to give final approval to a proposal regarding parity of State and Federal credit unions on fields of membership and changes in fields of membership.

•••

Banking section, State Finance Commission, has requested the Department of Banking to provide the section with background material on previous proposals for State sponsored insurance of accounts for state banks.

Chairman Cullen Looney, Edinburg, noted at the section's meeting the subject has been raised by Sen. O.H. (Ike) Harris, R-Dallas.

Banking commissioner James L. Sexton told section members there could be a problem in providing the necessary level of confidence for such a program, as far as the public is concerned.

State backing for the system would be needed, Sexton contends, because private insurers find the risks involved difficult to assess — and private backing isn't likely to provide the confidence necessary to establish the system as an alternative to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

Department of Banking general counsel Archie Clayton said bankers were surveyed "a few years ago" regarding such a system, with about half of the state-chartered banks responding to the survey — and half of those indicating interest in the idea.

Clayton also noted that the Finance Commission had commissioned a study on the question in 1973 — and that the matter was examined by the House Financial Institutions Committee in 1977.

Some banking section members indicated they feel the idea retains the stigma of the "Sharpstown scandal" of the 1970s, which involved state-sponsored insurance of accounts legislation, and indicated they don't think the proposal would have widespread legislative support.

Section member Gerald Smith, Houston, said he feels banks may be reluctant to use a state-sponsored system because "in the current economic climate, banks may feel the need to have the FDIC for competitive reasons."

"Confidence in the banking system does need shoring up," Smith commented, but added "the question is whether this is a move that would shore up confidence."

Wal-Mart founder one of America's richest men

Country boy struck it rich by peddling discount products in rural areas

New York Times News Service

BENTONVILLE, Ark. — Sam M. Walton, founder of Wal-Mart Stores Inc. and reputedly one of America's richest men, played the crowd last month at the company's annual meeting.

In the gymnasium of the local high school here, he greeted old friends, hugged women and roused 1,800 shareholders, employees and guests in song — from "The Star Spangled Banner" to the company cheer.

The 22-year old discount chain, which operates largely in rural communities of 5,000 to 15,000 people in an ever-widening tier of 19 states in the South and Southwest, is the nation's fastest-growing retailer. The Bentonville-based company's growth rates in sales, profits, return on equity and other corporate barometers have been the highest in the industry since the late 1970's — a fact that did much to spark the cheers from employees who benefit from a generous profit-sharing plan.

"Wal-Mart is one of the very few general merchandising companies that are astutely managed, highly profitable and well positioned for the future," says Cathleen W. Mackey, analyst for the First Manhattan Co. in New York. Adds Stanley H. Iverson, analyst for Duff & Phelps Inc., Chicago: "Wal-Mart is the fastest-growing major retailer in the United States and the No. 2 discount merchant behind K Mart. Its management, motivation, communications and responsiveness to change are unique in the retailing industry."

Much of the company's success has been laid to Sam Walton, its chairman and chief executive. Born in Kingfisher, Okla., Walton is a country boy who struck it rich by peddling discounted products to rural America — and struck it very rich, indeed. Last fall, Forbes magazine identified him as one of the wealthiest men in America, in the good company of Rockefellers, Hunts and Gettys. It is an achievement, however, that Walton, a wiry bundle of energy, company boosterism and general enthusiasm, is loath to discuss. He'd rather talk retailing and give credit to his employees.

There are, he says, not many secrets in the industry. "Anyone willing to work hard, study the business and apply the best principles can do well," he says. "I worked at it. I walked into competitors' stores. And I wandered into more stores than anyone else. I was fortunate in getting some smart people to work for me and we avoided mistakes that the others made. We learned from everyone else's book and added a few pages of our own."

Walton's stamp is everywhere on the company — just as it was at the annual meeting. But, analysts say, this very dominance by the company founder could develop into a problem for Wal-Mart as it moves forward. The silver-haired Walton insists he has no plans "to quit now nor at any other time" and insiders deny any potential problems with succession.

In the last five years, according to the First Manhattan Corp., a brokerage firm, Wal-Mart's annual sales grew by an average of 39 percent, higher than K Marts 10 percent and Target's 29 percent. Wal-Mart,, which is about one-third the size of K Mart,, had $4.6 billion in sales for the 1984 fiscal year, which ended Jan. 31.

Margaret A. Gilliam, analyst for the First Boston Corp., New York, estimates that sales will be $6.5 billion this year.

Walton and his top team project sales of $12 billion in four or five years — three is more likely, analysts say — and a net income of about $300 million or more by then.

Already, Wal-Mart dominates many large rural markets in Arkansas, Missouri, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Texas, where more than half of its 660 stores are situated. And it has benefited from the boom in the Sun Belt but has been scarely affected by the region's recent economic weakness.

Recently it veered a bit from its rural concentration and has begun to move into such medium-sized cities as Little Rock, Ark., Springfield, Mo., and Shreveport, La. It is also circling larger cities, such as Kansas City, Mo., Dallas and St. Louis, by opeing stores on the fringes rather than downtown.

Wal-Mart plans to open 100 stores this year and 125 more next year, after opening 91 in 1983 and 161 in 1981 (when it acquired the 92 units of Kuhn's Big K Stores chain).

Wal-Mart's strategy is simple: It combines low operating costs, an emphasis on providing national brands at discount prices and an effort to dominate its market wherever it bases its stores. Unlike most retailers who justify rising prices and markups as a reflection of inflation, Wal-Mart trims prices by cutting distribution costs and putting pressure on suppliers to lower prices.

Sam Walton knows his market as only a native to that circle of states would. His family moved from Oklahoma to Columbia, Mo., when he was young. In 1940, the University of Missouri awarded him a baccalaureate degree in business administration and he later spent two and a half years in Des Moines working as a trainee at J.C. Penney. His lessons learned, he bought a Ben Franklin franchise store in 1945. With his brother, James, a co-founder of Wal-Mart and now a senior vice president, he operated a franchised chain of 17 Ben Franklin Variety Stores, turning them into the largest regional variety store franchise in the country. In 1962, the brothers began Wal-Mart.

Not unlike Harry Cunningham, K Mart's formerr chairman, Sam Walton sensed the potential for discount stores, particularly in rural areas.

"We had a variety-store background," said Walton, interviewed in an office filed with momentos of his love of quail hunting, tennis and dogs. "The big discunt entrepreneurs were in the East and hadn't come here yet. Even so, we were latecomers because there were already Woolco discount stores here, K Mart and Kuhn-Big K stores, along with small regional chains like ours. Later other discounters came. I had no vision of the scope of what I would start. But I always had confidence that as long as we did our work well and were good to our customers, there would be no limit to us."

Robert D. Southerland, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Texas American Bank/Midland has announced the appointment of JERRY D. COOK to vice president and business development manager.

Prior to joining Texas American Bank/Midland, Cook was vice president and marketing director of InterFirst Bank Odessa, N.A. Cook's business development activities, in that position, included: planning and executing market research, managing an officer call program and developing and introducing new products and services. Before beginning his banking career, Cook was an employee benefits professional. He has also held positions with the Treasury Department of the State of Tennessee and the office of the Commissioner of Insurance of the State of Texas.

Cook earned a bachelor of arts degree from the University of Texas and attended Institudo de Estudios Ibroamericans, Saltillo, Coahuila, Mexico.

An Odessa native, he has an extensive record of service to the Permian Basin community. Currently, he is serving as assistant executive director, Permian Basin Oil Show; first vice president, Permian Playhouse Community Theatre; and treasurer, Medical Center Hospital Development Corp. In addition, Cook has been active with the Odessa Chamber of Commerce and the Chuck Wagon Gang. He also serves as a member of the Baptist Spanish Publishing House Task Force on world-wide sales, distribution and inventory.

BOBBY L. SLEDGE has observed his 30 year service anniversary with Exxon Co., U.S.A. He is assigned as engineering advisor in the natural gas/CO2 section, midcontinent division located in Midland.

Since joining the company in 1954, engineering assignments with increasing responsibilities included New orleans, overseas loan assignments with Esso Australia Ltd, and headquarters in Houston. In April of last year, he transferred to Midland.

In 1954, he received a BS degree in chemical engineering from Rice University. He earned his MBA degree in business administration from Tulane University. At a luncheon held recently in his honor, he was presented service awards by senior engineering advisor Vaughn Young.

LARRY D. LONG with Exxon Co., U.S.A. has been promoted to technical advisor. He is assigned to midcontinent division, Midland, and heads the division's field studies group.

In 1966, he was employed in the East Texas Division. Subsequent engineering assignments included locaions in Los Angeles, South Texas, Houston, and Tyler. In 1979 he transferred from Los Angeles to Midland to head the field studies group.

He is a member of the Society of Petroleum Engineers of AIME, American Petroleum Institute, and is a Registered Professional Engineer in the State of Texas. He received a MS degree in civil engineering from the University of Texas at Austin.

JONI GRACE HELM has been promoted to manager in the audit practice of Arthur Andersen & Co. in Dallas/Fort Worth.

Helm received her BBA from Texas Tech University in 1980 and joined Arthur Andersen & Co. that same year.

During her career, Helm, 25, has been active in several professional and civic organizations in the Dallas/Fort Worth area, including 500 Inc.

HOUSTON — DAVID S. HOLLAND has been elected a director of Pennzoil Co., and a member of its executive committee.

Recently named president and chief executive of Pennzoil Exploration and Production Co., Holland replaces Harold J. Fitzgeorge, who retired July 1 as head of that oil and gas division.

Holland joined Pennzoil in 1966 in Midland as senior exploration geologist and advanced to become vice president of exploration in 1977 and senior vice president in 1979. He was instrumental in the formation of Pennzoil's offshore oil and gas program.

Holland is a graduate of the University of Texas with a degree in geology.

ORALIA CORRALES, agent wth Farmers Insurance Group has qualified for Topper Club, The Tooper Club is an elite group of agents who have demonstrated a high degree of proficiency in achieving profitable production.

Awards will be presented at the convention which will be held in New Orleans on July 24th to 27th.

AUSTIN — John Mackey, president of Briercroft Savings recently announced the appointment of ALAN E. MARSHALL as chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Equity Investors Inc. and Investors Inc., both subsidiaries of Briercroft Savings.

In addition to his responsibilities with Equity Investors Inc., Marshall was also elected to the board of directors of Briercroft Savings.

Marshall was formerly president and chief executive officer of Allstate Enterprises Mortgage Corp. in Deerfield, Illinois. During his eleven year with Allstate, their servicing portfolio grew from $250 million to $2.3 billion. Prior to joining Allstate, Marshall served as president and chief executive officer of Charter Mortgage Co. (now Alliance Mortgage Co.). Under his direction their servicing base grew from $200 million to $1.0 billion.

A graduate of MBA School of Mortgage Banking at Northwestern University, Marshall's industry affiliations include the Mortgage Bankers Association were he is past chairman of the Education Committee and has been a member of their long-range planning committee. In October of 1984, Marshall will begin a term on the Mortgage Bankers Association Board of Governors.

Investors Inc., is an Austin-based mortgage banking firm servicing over 15,000 loans exceeding $675 million in balances.

The Investors Inc. office in Midland is located at 2500 N. Big Spring, Suite 110.

ALICE, Texas — Burt Harkins, president of Harkins & Co., Alice, Texas, has announced that ROBERT L. SWANSON has joined the company as an associate and has opened an exploration office in Midland at 414 West Texas, Suite 210.

Swanson has an extensive background in exploration and production geology with both small and major companies. His most recent position, prior to becoming an independent geologist, was in association with McCormick Oil & Gas Corp. He has always been active in professional groups and served as president of the West Texas Geological Society for the 1983-84 term.

Swanson assumed responsibility July 1, 1984, for initiating exploration efforts and reviewing outside prospects for Harkins & Co. in the West Texas area.

ARNOLD DURHAM was presented a 30 year service award by Buren Hale, plant superintendent at a luncheon July 9, 1984. Attending were Louise Durham, Alex Bitolas, George Darden, Bob Lewis, Buren Hale, Bill Bull, George From, J.W. Wilson.

Arnold was employed by Arco Oil & Gas Co. on June 23, 1954 with the geophysical department. He transferred to the block 31 plant on November 24, 1962. He has worked as maintenance man, all areas of plant operations, utility gang leaderman, associate shift foreman and present job of shift foreman.

Midland resident PHARRIS IVY with ITR Petroleum was recently honored with a certificate of recognition from the Arrow Specialty Service School in Tulsa. Arrow is a manufacturer of engines, replacement parts, chemical injection pumps and other oilfield specialty items for an international market. Ivy completed a three-day training session on the operation and maintenance of single and twin cylinder engines.

Petroleum professionals to gather for SPE meeting

DALLAS — More than 13,000 petroleum industry professionals are expected to gather in Houston Sept. 16-19 for the 59th Annual Technical Conference and Exhibition of the Society of Petroleum Engineers (SPE).

The meeting will address the industry's status as it focuses on "Energy Outlook 1984: Shortage/Surplus."

More than 250 technical papers offer state-of-the art information on diverse topics ranging from drilling, production, and stimulation to reservoir simulation, gas technology, economics, and professionalism. These technical papers will form the 47-session program presented by outstanding engineers, scientists and managers from around the world.

A keynote session Monday, Sept. 17, will feature three industry leaders representing key segments of the petroleum community. Howard Kauffmann, president of Exxon Corp., will discuss international oil and gas supply. Robert R. Graves, vice president of exploration with Mobil Oil Corp., will review worldwide exploration. And Thomas H. Cruikshank, president and CEO of Halliburton Services, will present his outlook for the service and supply industry.

Other highlights include a session on EOR Forecasting and Outlook featuring presentations on the U.S. National Petroleum Council's 1984 EOR study and a "Production Forum" in which participants will discuss preliminary results of work in progress.

The annual President's Luncheon, Tuesday Sept. 18 at 12:15 p.m., recognizes outgoing board members and features installation of the society's new directors and the 1985 president, Kenneth W. Robbins, manager of international sales with Otis Engineering Corp. in Dallas. Robbins succeeds James R. Jorden, petrophysical engineering adviser with Shell Oil Co. in Houston.

An Awards Luncheon, Monday,, Sept. 17 will recognize several Society members for technical and professional excellence.

In addition to the technical program, the SPE meeting will also include an 85,000 net square foot technical exhibition at the Astrodomain, the largest exhibit ever for an SPE Annual Meeting. More than 350 U.S. and international companies will display the latest equipment and services available to the industry.

The Society of Petroleum Engineers is an international technical and professional organization serving engineers, managers and scientists engaged in the exploration, drilling and production phases of the petroleum industry. The Society has more than 52,000 members worldwide.

Oldtimer tire

It was 67 years ago that the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. first manufactured this cord pneumatic tire for use on its Wingfoot Express interstate truckline. Goodyear engineers dug into old files to figure out how to make it again. Ray McGinnis, a worker at Goodyear's plant in Gadsden, Ala., examines one of the new "old tires." The company recently purchased an old Packard truck and restored it for promotional reasons to duplicate a truck in the old Wingfoot Express fleet. The tire shown here will fit the old truck.

STANDARD OIL CO. (Indiana)

CHICAGO — Standard Oil Co. (Indiana) on April 23 announced estimated consolidated net earnings of $594 million for the first quarter of 1984, up 49 percent from the $399 million earned in 1983's first quarter. Earnings on a per-share basis were $2.03, compared with $1.36 for the first three months of 1983.

Richard M. Morrow, chairman and chief executive officer, said that the earnings increase was largely attributable to significantly higher profitability levels for refining, marketing, and transportation activities and chemicals operations as both of these areas posted sharp improvements from the depressed levels of the first quarter of 1983.

PENNZOIL CO.

HOUSTON — The board of directors of Pennzoil Co. has declared a quarterly dividend on its common stock of 55 cents per share, payable Sept. 15, 1984, to stockholders of record on Aug. 31, 1984.

A dividend of $2 per share has also been declared on the company's $8 cumulative preferred stock, payable Nov. 1, 1984, to stockholders of record on Oct. 15, 1984.

Pennzoil has paid quarterly dividends for 60 consecutive years.

TEXAS OIL & GAS

DALLAS — Texas Oil & Gas Corp. has reported that it achieved all-time highs in net income for both the nine months and third quarter ended May 31, 1984. Net income for the first nine months of fiscal 1984 totaled $255,744,000, or $1.22 per share, a gain of 18 percent over the year-earier level of $217,128,000, or $1.03 per share. Third quarter net income increased 17 percent to $88,306,000, or $0.42 per share compared with $75,202,000, or $0.36 per share, a year ago. (Per-share numbers are adjusted for the 10 percent stock dividend distributed in July 1983 as well as the 2-for-1 stock split made in January 1984.)

William L. Hutchison, Chairman of the Board, and Forrest E. Hoglund, President and Chief Executive Officer, stated, "These record results were due to increased gas gathering delivery volumes and higher sales volumes of natural gas liquids (NGLs) which continued to outpace last year's levels. Production of Company-owned natural gas, crude oil and condensate also increased."

ALLIED BANCSHARES

HOUSTON — Allied Bancshares, Inc., a Houston-based multibank holding company, has reported a 12.50% increase in net earnings per share for the second quarter of 1984 over the same period of 1983, according to Gerald H. Smith, President and Chief Executive Officer.

Unaudited net ernings for the second quarter of 1984 were $29,568,603 or $.72 per share compared to $26,018,901 or $.64 per share for the same period of 1983. Unaudited net earnings for the first six months of 1984 ended June 30 were $57,472,631 or $1.40 per share, compared to $50,805,845 or $1.25 per share for the first half of 1983.

ENERGY ASSETS INT.

NEW YORK — Energy Assets International Corp. has reported that operations for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1984, resulted in a net profit of $25,000 compared with a loss of $1,179,000 a year ago. Revenue for the year rose 88 percent.

Energy Assets, in conjunction with The E.F. Hutton Group Inc., has raised nearly $100 million since early 1983 for specialized financing projects in the energy industry.

REPUBLICBANK CORP.

DALLAS — RepublicBank Corp. has reported that second quarter 1984 net income increased to $32.3 million or $1.05 per fully diluted share, up $2.6 million or 9% from the first quarter of 1984. These results were due to continued strong growth in average loans as well as improved margins.

Net income was 15% below the $38.2 million recorded in the second quarter of 1983 primarily as a result of an increase in overhead expenses and the provision for loan losses as compared with the second quarter of 1983. Overhead growth in the second quarter of 1984 versus the comparable 1983 quarter was 11% excluding the expenses related to RepublicBank First National Midland which was established in the fourth quarter of 1983 and included in RPT's figures on a purchase accounting basis.

Kate Capshaw plays cabaret singer Willie Scott in "Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom" with Harrison Ford.

Kate Capshaw: 'I play the girl'

By JACK CARROLL
King Features Syndicate

Kate Capshaw has made six films, a half dozen projects that range from the summer's smash adventure, "Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom," to the social comedy, "Best Defense," in which she's featured with Dudley Moore and Eddie Murphy. The movies themselves represent the widest spectrum of popular filmmaking, but to the actress's mind, her roles, varied as they are, can all still be summed up in a phrase:

"I play the girl," she says simply.

She's underestimating herself, actually mimicking Hollywood thinking about actresses and women's roles. Still, there's no rancor in her voice as she reflects upon the characters she's played — and wanted to play.

Finally feeling the first glow of professional success, Ms. Capshaw is an intelligent, aware careerist who's willing to play Hollywood's game, but on her own terms. If they want her to play "the girl," she'll do it. But once on the set, she'll make the part a woman.

Her biggest part to date, Willie Scott in "Indiana Jones," is a good example. "I play a cabaret singer who thinks she's pretty glamorous," says Ms. Capshaw.

SHE'S A LITTLE befuddled by all the sudden attention, she admits, but you'd never know it looking at her or listening to her. Precise and crisp, she recalls Candice Bergen and Julie Christie, two intelligent actresses she's often compared to.

Another actress she's often compared to is Karen Allen, the actress who had the lead role in the first Indiana Jones film "Raiders of the Lost Ark." She says everyone wants to know the same thing: How is her character in the sequel different from Ms. Allen's Marion.

"Well, obviously Willie would be considered more traditionally feminine," she says. "If I had a fight with Karen Allen's character, she'd slug and I'd kick and scratch," she says. But there's more to her part than just a kicking, scratching bimbo in peril. As a woman involved in a rollicking, harrowing adventure, she can react for the audience, emphasizing the danger with her own fear and exhilaration.

"Marion and Indiana Jones had the same kind of heroism; they were both fearless and capable," muses Ms. Capshaw, admitting she likes to analyze characters this way. "They knew they could handle anything. And so did the audience. I'm more of a surprise. I respond heroically, but it's more of a shock. I do it wearing dresses, not pants."

Now, where some viewers may think "playing the girl" this way smacks of sexism, Ms. Capshaw says not so. A woman who favors linen suit jackets and ties in real life, she argues that asserting the physical and the feminine makes her Willie a thoroughly modern role model.

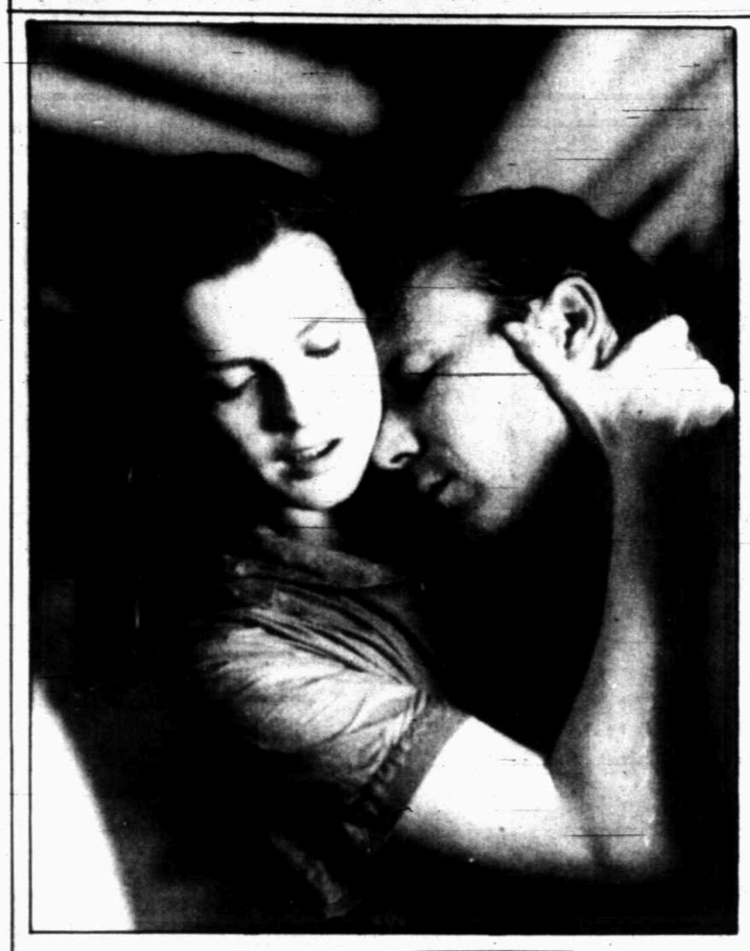
BETWEEN THE LINES



William Hurt and Kathleen Turner

Q. In the last year, I have seen William Hurt in "Body Heat," "The Big Chill" and "Gorky Park." He's a fine actor, yet he seems to have sprung up from nowhere. Can you tell me anything about him?

Kevin Lawler
Las Vegas, Nev.

A. He's 34, the son of a State Department diplomat and stepson of Henry Luce III. He's a Tufts University and Juilliard Drama School-educated actor who started acting while at Middlesex Prep School — a teacher suggested he channel some of his adolescent anger into the theater.

Years later, while at Juilliard, the old anger resurfaced and he again sought refuge in the theater, this time in a Shakespeare festival in Oregon, which he'd come upon while tearing across the country on a motorcycle.

A year later, he came back to New York, started working with the New York Shakespeare Festival and Circle Repertory Company. Even now, between films such as "Altered States," "Eyewitness" and the three you mentioned, he usually returns to the New York stage.

Two current projects reflect that dichotomy: the play "Hurlyburly" co-starring Sigourney Weaver and Christopher Walken and the film "The Kiss of the Spider Woman" shot in Brazil and co-starring Raul Julia and Brazilian sex symbol Sonia Braga.

On the personal side, he and girlfriend Sandra Jennings have a young son, Alexander.

Heather Thomas

Q. I would like to know how old Heather Thomas is, where she was born and if she's written any of the "Fall Guy" episodes

Dana Jurgens
Lowden, Iowa

A. She's 26, was born in Greenwich, Conn., but raised in Santa Monica, Cali. Although she graduated from U.C.L.A. Film School intent on writing and directing, she hasn't done much of it yet.

"She's been talking about it," explains a colleague on "The Fall Guy," and I know the producers are trying to work it out for her to write a few episodes, but it hasn't happened yet. Maybe next season."

Q. Can you tell me if "V" is going to be a series, if Marc Singer is going to be in it, and if he is Lori Singer's brother?

T. Fino
Scranton, Pa.

A. Yes to all three. "V" begins appearing as a weekly series on NBC October 26, Marc Singer will be in it and he and Lori are brother and sister. They're the children of the late conductor Jacques Singer, who inspired them both in the performing arts.

In another realm of the performing arts, you may want to keep an eye out for a future "Love Boat" special — "Love Boat Goes to Europe." In it, Marc does the Big Sail and falls in love with the often-romanceable Julie.

Q. Can you tell me what Leif Garrett is doing now — any movies?

Marjorie and Kathy Cudney
Trenton N.J.

A. He hadn't been doing much since "The Outsiders," but now he's just finished a movie called "Thunder Alley" in which he plays a rock star — not a real stretch as an actor. But what he really likes about it is the musical concentration: He's currently recording six songs for the soundtrack album and working hard on them.

Leif Garrett

Q. Please tell me what city "Hill Street Blues" is set in and where it's filmed.

Lorna Langston
Rock Island, Ill.

A. It's deliberately not set in any city and is shot — carefully — in downtown Los Angeles, avoiding any distinguishing characteristics — like palm trees.

Q. Please tell me something about Sandy Freeman of CNN.

Mrs. Frank Almon
Pensacola, Fla.

A. She's 41, the mother of three sons and a woman of determination and ambition, according to a former associate. The first in her family to finish high school, she then got a degree in music from Missouri's Webster College.

She left her native St. Louis for Chicago, and after working as a "Gaslight Girl" (a singing waitress at Chicago's Gaslight Club), she broke into TV in 1973 as the co-host of a morning talk show.

In 1980, she moved to Cable News Network to host her own show, obviously a step up, but problems immediately arose. Her job was in Atlanta, her family was still in Chicago and the interview subjects, she maintained, were in Washington, D.C. and New York, so she was constantly shuttling between those cities and exhausted from it.

Her marriage started to crumble and by the third month, she broke out in "hives the size of lemons" and developed colitis, bronchitis, swelling of the joints and pleurisy, all due to emotional factors, according to her doctors.

By the end of the first year, her marriage was over; four producers had left and she was at war with Reese Schonfeld, Cable News president and the man who had hired her. In 1982, the conflict peaked and Schonfeld reportedly fired her.

A few weeks later, however, she was back on the air with a raise and a move to New York, and Schonfeld was no longer president of CNN. Whatever the exact backstage maneuvering, Sandy Freeman obviously has friends in high places.

KATE

"Sure she complains about the discomfort. Sure she's always saying how hot it is. But when it comes down to it, she's got the guts, she's got backbone. Willie saves Indiana Jones, after all."

And anyone who sees the film will know what she's talking about. In one of the movie's endless hopeless situations, the secret latch that will stop a death contraption lies separated from Willie by a insect-infested space. As the knives and daggers close in on Indiana, Willie must thrust her hand through antennae, wing and claw to the pulley. The theater invariably erupts into a blood-curdling 'Ychhh!"

Recalling filming that scene still raises hackles, but Ms. Capshaw says that despite extensive location work in Sri Lanka and numerous stunt shots, she never felt personally endangered. "There was no macho sensibility here. I never felt like I had to prove anything."

In fact, because of the well- publicized accidents that have occurred on other productions, the safety precautions taken during "Indiana Jones" were sometimes extreme.

"They were overly considerate, I guess. There was one scene involving this enormous snake, and I felt really squeamish about it. Everyone was saying it wouldn't hurt me. I even visited it and touched it before the scene to get over my feelings. I couldn't do it. So they cut the scene. But they never made me feel like I was being silly."

IN THE END, the movie that resulted from the challenging, if well supervised, work was a film far more frightening than the original. "It's more of a spook house, where the first film was a rollercoaster," she admits.

So alarming are some of the scenes that a warning to parents has been tagged on the beginning. Ms. Capshaw, a mother herself, agrees wholeheartedly with the wisdom of the controversial and unusual move.

"At 7 or 8, a child can't stand back from the movie. What's happening up there is what's happening right here," she says. "I take my daughter who's 7 to movies and if I think I see her getting upset, I play a game with her. I ask her 'Where's the camera?' And she's able to understand that it's imaginary, a story."

Her insight into child psychology owes something to the three years she spent teaching grammar school and high school. "I just sort of fell into it," she admits, describing a St. Louis youth characterized by doubt and lack of direction. Raised in a suburb by parents who both came from farm backgrounds, Ms. Capshaw headed off to college unsure if she wanted to be a nurse, a minister, a vet or a teacher.

The latter won out, because it seemed the only way to collect her random assortment of credits into a major by the time senior year came along.

"I NEVER really considered acting," she says. "The plays I had been in in college left me with weird feelings about theater people. I had my friends in the crowds, but the kids who seemed really into it weren't the sort of people I wanted to be with a whole lot."

Marriage and motherhood followed as Ms. Capshaw pursued a life course that looked more middle American than a Grant Wood painting. She found satisfaction in this unexceptional life for a while, but eventually a nagging ennui set in.

"I just began to see years and years of this, and I couldn't stand it." With help from a shrink, she made the decision that would forever change her life. "I went to New York," she says.

With little more than a couple of headshots and the support of her husband, the brunette began to attract the attention of modeling agencies. Soon she was busy selling toilet paper and candy bars on commercials while trying to get work on stage. She landed the female lead in "A Little Sex," a 1981 feature made by Mary Tyler Moore's production company.

"It flopped. I didn't work again for what seemed like months," she recalls of her big break. "It was really disappointing. Philosophically, I could tell myself that these down periods happen to every new actress, to every actress, but that didn't help."

"The plays I had been in in college left me with weird feelings about theater people. I had my friends in the crowds, but the kids who seemed really into it weren't the sort of people I wanted to be with a whole lot."

— Kate Capshaw

MEANWHILE, HER marriage disintegrated and she had to face the problems of single motherhood. She found work on the soap opera "The Edge of Night" and made a TV movie. But eventually she said goodbye to Manhattan and moved out to Los Angeles.

"I really never gave up. I don't know why, though. Things were bleak, and I'm no wide-eyed optimist. Yet somehow I just believed it would happen if I kept at it long enough."

Her second film role turned out to be the turning point she had been hoping for. It was a movie called "All the Sad Young Men," a feature that has been retitled "Windy City" and should be opening this fall.

The juicy part as John Shea's girlfriend was one of the benefits of the coup, but meeting director Armyan Bernstein turned out to be equally as significant. They became romantically involved and are still together.

Getting "Indiana Jones" was more good luck for the actress whose fortunes seemed to be taking a distinct turn-around.

After a long and fruitless search had been conducted to locate an actress with the right combination of high-gloss spunk and brassy braininess, the film's casting director bumped into Ms. Capshaw's agent on a jogging track. He said he thought he had the right girl for the part and Ms. Capshaw went in for an audition.

"I FELT very strongly that Steven Spielberg liked me, but I wasn't sure I wanted the role. Oh, I wanted it but I knew it would be a lot of hard-ship, and I didn't know what I would do with my daughter, Jessica, and I didn't want to dye my hair blond. I think I was just making excuses, though. After waiting so long for something big to happen, I think I was just nervous when it stared me in the face."

Of course, she accepted the part and soon found herself on elephants' backs riding through jungles. She decided the best thing to do with daughter Jessica was to bring her along, and she ended up being something of a production crew mascot. "Steven loves kids anyway, and between all the animals and the costumes, she was more on vacation than anybody in the movie."

Ms. Capshaw says living in California now does pose a problem familiar to divorced mothers: making sure her daughter gets enough time with her dad.

She says she's glad that promotional engagements for the movies she's in this summer will permit Jessica to see a lot of her dad, who lives in New York.

She says she was first attracted to "Best Defense" because Willard Huyck, who wrote the "Indiana Jones" script, was directing. "He thought of me, but not for the part I'm playing. I'm not glamorous at all in this film and that's what I wanted. Coming after 'Indiana Jones,' I wanted something more realistic."

THE COMEDY CASTS Dudley Moore as a defense industry worker who discovers defective materials have been used. Eddie Murphy's the G.I. who's set to deploy the weaponry. In this chaos, Ms. Capshaw takes something of a back seat, but she's excited about the part for one specific reason.

"It's the first time in all of my movies that I play a scene with another woman. Isn't that incredible? Half a dozen projects and I've never appeared on screen playing to another woman."

The brief encounter involves a fight scene between the actresses, and Ms. Capshaw says she really "went over the top on it. I hope it will remind viewers of the scene in 'Turning Point' in which Anne Bancroft and Shirley MacLaine duke it out."

Ms. Capshaw dreams of making a movie with women dominating the cast. "Can you imagine a project with Streep, Field, Fonda and Spacek?" she says, her blue eyes popping.

But even though she claims she's not savvy to the ways of Hollywood business arrangements, she knows enough about the politics of dealmaking to know that no agent wizardry could hammer out an agreement combining this much talent.

"Besides," she says playfully, "who would play the girl in a cast like that?"

Presidential Museum has Standard show

ODESSA — A special exhibition "Out of the Forties: A Portrait of Texas from the Standard Oil Collection" is on display at the Presidential Museum through Aug. 25.

The 114 photographs in the exhibit, which document Texas life during the 1940s, were part of a massive public relations campaign mounted by Standard Oil Company of New Jersey. The exhibit is organized and circulated by the Amon Carter Museum in cooperation with Texas Monthly. The Odessa showing is funded by a grant from Charles J. George, Inc.

In 1943, Standard Oil of New Jersey hired economist Roy Stryker to improve its image and produce a body of public relations photographs that would illustrate how oil affected everyday life. Under Stryker's direction, Russell Lee and Ester Bubley did most of the Texas work, covering virtually every aspect of town and oil field life. Andrews and Odessa are represented in the photographs.

The Presidential Museum, corner of 7th and Lee streets, is open free to the public Tuesday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Muppet makers cling too closely to 'plot'

By DAVID LEE FORREST

In "The Muppets Take Manhattan," the loveable puppets do indeed take the town, but just a little too slowly.

The screenplay, by Muppeteer Frank Oz, Tom Pachett and Jay Tarses, is essentially a parody of those old Hollywood musicals in which an aspiring young actor (or singer or dancer or whatever) comes to the Big City, falls in love with a girl, pays his dues, loses the girl, gets his big break and then wins both stardom and the girl.

Forrest

Unfortunately, the writers go astray by clinging a little too closely to that prosaic, timeworn plot.

The Muppets' biggest charms have always been their innocence and their surrealness.

Their naivete is certainly appealing when they appear as a group of optimistic young performers who step off the bus in New York City and proceed to walk right into theatrical producers' offices saying, "We have this show you're going to want to produce on Broadway."

Kermit the Frog, Miss Piggy, Gonzo the Great and the rest of the motley crew are also amusingly incongruous as they walk the city's busy streets — attracting no attention from blase New Yorkers — and live in, of all places, bus station lockers.

During the early part of the film, young children in the audience laughed wildly at almost every funny thing the Muppets do.

The action begins to lag, though, as the Muppets meet with nothing but rejection and split up, leaving only Kermit to persist in trying to get the musical he wrote produced.

There are a few wonderful moments: a bizarre scene with fish flying through a 3D movie theater, a wild chase with Miss Piggy on roller skates pursuing a purse snatcher, and a terrifically funny doo-wop musical number with the Muppets as babies in a nursery (if you think Muppets are cute, you should see baby Muppets).

Between these weird and wacky parts, however, are jokes which could almost have been performed as well by a live actor as the world's most popular puppets. The charmingly unreal nature of the Muppets is wasted.

The film slows down so much during the more unimaginative scenes that even some of the children watching the film began to get a little restless.

A case of amnesia is thrown in to complicate the plot a bit and set up a brief satire on Madison Avenue advertising executives, but "The Muppets Take Manhattan" never manages to build up the kind of momentum that made the original "Muppet Movie" so energetic.

There are also a lot of cameo appearances by famous actors as in the previous two Muppet films. In the best ones, Joan Rivers works with Miss Piggy as a salesclerk at a cosmetics counter and Gregory Hines gets caught in an argument between Kermit and Piggy, but only a few of the cameos make any use of the actors' talents.

"The Muppets Take Manhattan" never really takes off, but the film will certainly please the younger members of the family and even adult Muppet fans can be amused by some of the zanier scenes.

"The Muppets Take Manhattan," rated G, is now showing at the UA Cine IV.

'Karate Kid' more than cliches

"The Karate Kid" starts off with cliches and ends predictably, but along the way there are some pleasant surprises.

New Jersey teen-ager Daniel, played by Ralph Macchio, has to move to California when his almost obnoxiously optimistic mother gets a better job there.

On only the second day in his new home, skinny Daniel gets badly beaten by a gang of local boys, who just happen to be young karate experts.

The fight, which takes place on a beach, is annoyingly similar to those old Charles Atlas bodybuilder ads in comic books where the 98-pound weakling gets sand kicked in his face.

Just when cliches like that make it seem as though "The Karate Kid" is going to be just a B-grade teen-ager movie about kids beating up on other kids, Noriyuki "Pat" Morita makes his surprising entrance.

Morita, who plays the maintenance man in Daniel's apartment complex, takes the boy under his wing and breathes life into the film.

The elderly repairman was born on Okinawa where he learned karate as a child and he agrees to teach Daniel the art of self-defense. However, he also teaches much more practical lessons on leading a balanced life.

Morita offers Daniel a gentle Oriental philosophy, but avoids getting bogged down in Eastern mysticism. He teaches karate by such off-beat methods as washing and waxing cars, sanding wood floors and painting fences.

The plot gradually builds toward a climactic fight sequence, much like "Rocky" did. This is more than just a coincidence; both "The Karate Kid" and the first "Rocky" film were directed by John G. Avildsen.

While Morita is by far the best thing about the film, the screenplay does accurately depict some typical adolescent worries and many of the indignities of being "the new kid in town."

In one very funny — and touching — scene, Daniel is terribly embarrassed in front of his girlfriend's wealthy parents when his mother's dilapitated station wagon refuses to start. It's the type of thing that almost everyone can remember happening at least once in their own youth.

The fight scene at the end is extremely predictable, but the build-up to it is strong enough that the audience cheered and applauded its end.

While "The Karate Kid" comes very close to becoming juvenile rip-off of "Rocky," Morita's quirky performance gives it an unexpected charm and warmth.

"The Karate Kid," rated PG, is now showing at the UA Cine IV.

ABC plans graphic view of games

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — This Friday, ABC Sports will begin 180 hours of television coverage of the Summer Olympic Games in Los Angeles. A lot of what viewers will see during that time — that is, when sprinters aren't sprinting, hurdlers aren't hurdling and someone isn't selling beer or radial tires — will be "graphics," a vast array of colorful visual images ranging from the familiar, five-ring Olympic logo (with the letters ABC intertwined) to animated diagrams of the 400-meter medley event in swimming.

For the past three years a team of artists and engineers has been cloistered on the fifth floor of the ABC studios at 70th Street and Broadway, preparing first for the Winter Olympics last February in Sarajevo and then the summer Games. For up to 20 hours a day, they have been assembling words, pictures and symbols on machines with space-age names like the Quantel Paintbox, the Dubner CDC (for Character Background Generator) and Chyron. Some of the resulting images turn somersaults a gold medal gymnast would be proud of.

These eye-catching graphics, made possible by recent advances in computer technology, are an obvious lure to viewers, many of whom are young and frequently exposed to the visual pyrotechnics served up by films and video arcade games. As such, their journalistic merit has often been questioned. Yet while they acknowledge a need to maintain an "up-to-date" image, those responsible for news and sports graphics on television steadfastly defend their use. "We started using graphics as a means of conveying information," said Hy Bley, graphic director of ABC Sports, "and that's still their primary function."

Though ABC is the only network televising the Olympics, it is not alone in its emphasis on graphics. All three networks have been at hard at work on material for their election-year news coverage, and NBC has, for the past year, been giving its news department what amounts to a graphics facelift. The network has increased its artistic staff by 30 percent, to more than 50, and invested in no fewer than nine Paintboxes. These devices, which allow an artist to draw directly onto a screen with an electronic stylus, cost about $150,000 apiece.

All of this was done, according to Thomas R. Wolzien, NBC vice president for news production and program development, in response to concerns voiced by network executives and officials of affiliate stations that, when it came to graphics, NBC was not, well, exciting enough. "Until about a year ago," Wolzein said in a recent interview at his office in Rockefeller Center, "NBC was considered pretty stodgy."

Not any more. Every evening now the "NBC Nightly News" comes flying onto the screen with the image of a rolling, blue-and-gold globe, over which appear digital letters spelling the name of the program, and many news reports are accompanied by vivid graphics. A story on the rising cost of child care, for instance, is accompanied by an animated drawing of a calculator, onto which statistics are projected. An election report from Connecticut opens with an animated map of the United States, which rotates onto its back (so to speak) while the Nutmeg State simultaneously rises up and changes color.

Wolzien and his staff are particularly proud of a spectacular, 30-second sequence that opens NBC's reports on the space shuttle Challenger. In it, videotape footage of the shuttle performing various manuevers — blasting off, soaring into the stratosphere, landing softly — is interspersed with shots of the astronauts at work in the spacecraft. The word "insterspersed" is used advisedly because it by no means does justice to the electronic hoops through which these various pictures jump, to dramatic background music specially composed by Henry Mancini.

"A million and a half dollars worth of equipment was used to put that together," said Wolzien at the end of the 30 seconds. That equipment included most of the big guns in NBC's graphics arsenal, among them a state-of-the-art computer animation machine known, appropriately enough, as the Mirage. According to Wolzien, the Mirage can "take a picture, squash it, roll it into a ball, explode it, anything you want."

In terms of graphics, television has come a long way from the Sputnik era, when one network's depiction of the satellite was a golf ball strung on a piece of coat-hanger wire against a dark cardboard background. To simulate stars, small holes were cut in the cardboard and a light was shone behind it. In fact, many of the significant advances in television graphics technology have come in the past four or five years, since the digital animation machines that the networks now rely on first became available.

These include the Dubner — named for its inventor, Harvey Dubner of Fort Lee, N.J. — which can be programmed to manipulate graphic images in a virtually endless variety of ways; Chyron, a machine that generates numbers and characters in all shapes and sizes, and the Paintbox. Of these, the latter is the most versatile in that it combines a sophisticated computer memory with the talents of the graphic artist: the artist draws with a stylus onto a "bit pad," a plastic board with electronic sensors underneath.

MCT hoping production will have 'Mass Appeal'

From Staff Reports

Next up at Theatre Midland is Midland Community Theatre's Aug. 3 production of Bill Davis' "Mass Appeal."

When it opened in New York in 1980, the play, staged by the Manhattan Theatre Club, was originally scheduled for a limited run, however, the production had to be extended twice. After a brief hiatus, "Mass Appeal" re-opened on Broadway and has been playing somewhere since then. MCT wasn't granted the rights to produce the play until a week before scheduled auditions.

"Mass Appeal" focuses on the relationship between a young fervent seminarian and a popular parish priest. The play deals with friendship, the generation gap, idealism verses pragmatism and love.

MCT's production features Jess Kozman in the roles of Father Tim Farley and Matt Mabe as the young seminarian, Mark Dolson. Kozman has been seen on MCT's stage in "Rue de L'Amour," "The Taming of the Shrew," "Tribute" and "Who's Happy Now?"

A recent graduate of Lee High School, where he won best actor awards for his performance of the title role in "Calgula," Mabe is making his MCT debut.

The production is being directed by Ted Strickland, MCT's assistant director. Set design is by Brett Batterson.

Other staff members include Marge Henry, stage manager; Mike Jordan, assistant stage manager; Ann Seyler and Doug Seyler, set construction; Louise Evans, chairman of the paint crew; Billie Sartain, supervising costumes; Jan Mann, gathering props; Jim Bartlett, running props for the show; Andy Salcedo, lights; Jim Beverley, sound; and Marilym Allen and Edwin Gibbs, publicity.

The production, which is being staged in Theatre Two, is scheduled for nine performances. It closes Aug. 18. For reservations call the theater's box office, 682-4111.

Dance classes to begin

Ballet Midland begins its last week of summer dance classes Monday.

Classes run Monday through Thursday from 5:30 to 7 p.m. at the Bingham Dance Center, Imperial Shopping Center. Cost is $17.50 per week.

Registration is open for Ballet Midland's annual two-week guest artist workshop.

Enrollment is open from junior level to adult. The workshop runs from July 30 through Aug. 9 and features two dancers from the Atlanta Ballet.

For more information on the summer dance classes or the guest artist workshop call 686-0731.

'Crimes' auditions set

Auditions for Beth Henley's Pulitzer Prize winning play "Crimes of the Heart" will be held July 29 and 30 at 7:30 p.m. in Theatre One at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

The following roles are available: Lenny McGrath, 30, the oldest of the McGrath sisters; Chick Boyle, 29, cousin to the McGraths; Doc Porter, 30, Meg McGrath's old boyfriend; Babe Botrelle, 24, the youngest McGrath sister; Meg McGrath, 27, the middle sister, the "wild one;" and Barnette Lloyd, 26, Babe's lawyer.

"Crimes of the Heart" opens Sept. 7 and runs through Sept. 22. For more information call Michael Spicer, 682-2544.

'Dry performance' set

A special "dry performance" of the 36th annual Summer Mummers is set for Aug. 16.

The performance is designed for all those who want to see the melodrama, "Rascality on the Rig," and enjoy the olio without the rowdiness of the usually well-lubricated crowd. Cokes, coffee and popcorn will be sold.

The 36th annual Summer Mummers will be onstage Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays through Sept. 1. For reservations for either "Dry Night" or the other performances call Theatre Midland's box office, 682-4111.

Bogdanovich working

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Director Peter Bogdanovich, who hasn't made a film since the 1980 murder of his actress-girlfriend, Dorothy Stratten, is back at work on "Mask," a movie starring Cher.

Bogdanovich spent most of the last four years writing a book about his relationship with Miss Stratten and the events that led to the former Playboy Playmate's death. Called "The Killing of the Unicorn," it is to be released Aug. 15, the fourth anniversary of Miss Stratten's shooting death at the hands of her husband, Paul Snider.

In the interim, two screen versions of the Stratten story have been released — one a TV movie starring Jamie Lee Curtis, and Bob Fosse's feature movie, "Star 80." Bogdanovich disliked both.

"I never thought the movie would work, and it didn't," he said. "It wasn't a true story, after all. That wasn't me in the picture; it wasn't (Playboy publisher Hugh) Hefner; it wasn't Dorothy."

Bogdanovich said he hasn't missed filmmaking that much, and that "Mask" — the story of a young man whose features harden due to an accumulation of calcium in the head — was "the first thing I've wanted to do in a long time."

Efficiency has its costs

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Promptness may be a virtue, but a director's speedy work apparently cost Richard Pryor a chance to converse with royalty.

Princess Anne of Great Britain was to have met Pryor on the set of his new film, "Brewster's Millions," when she stopped by Universal Studios during her recent visit to Los Angeles.

But director Walter Hill, working ahead of schedule, had on a previous day completed the scene the princess was to have viewed.

Instead, she met with Pryor's co-star, John Candy — and by at least one account was not overly distressed by Pryor's absence.

"I don't think she even knows who Richard Pryor is," said an observer. "I'm sure she was much more excited at meeting John Candy, who's a Canadian citizen."

Rockers raise funds

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gentlemen, start your guitars!

Rock's Steve Lukather and Fee Waybill made their debut run at the annual SCORE Baja International 500 mile off-road race recently.

Lukather, singer and guitarist for Toto, and Waybill, lead singer of the Tubes, are members of the Fitzgerald Hartley Rock 'n' Racing Team.

The team raises money for the Music Industry Chapter of the City of Hope through "Dollars for Miles" pledges.

"I've never partied for a better cause," said Lukather.

His face was flushed and he looked tdown at the heels as he sat forlornly on the barstool. Obviously, the Two of Hearts had seen better days. We invited him to join us for a drink and he was quick to accept. The talk got round to bridge, and this is the tale he told us:

"I wasn't not always in this sad condition. Once I was a member of a pack that belonged to a famous bridge expert who lived on Fifth Avenue. In my prime, I was handled by princes, caressed by some of the most beautiful women in the world, but never really loved — after all, I am only a deuce.

"However, every deuce has his day, tand mine came at a most opportune tmoment for my owner. It twas in a grudge match played for a tconsiderable amount of money, and tthere was little to choose between tthe two sides when his hand tcame along.

"My owner wasted no time in bouncing tinto four hearts, but he did not find a favorable dummy. It looked quite possible that he would lose three diamonds and a spade, and there was the lady of my suit to worry about as well.

"The expert to my left lead the queen of diamonds, which was ducked tall round. He cleverly cashed tthe ace of spades before exiting twith a club. My owner took the tace perforce, and there across the ttable from him were three good tricks in the black suits and no way to get to them. Defeat seemed imminent.

"When my owner cashed the ace and king of hearts, the expert at his left sized up the situation accurately. tHe followed to these trick with the tsix of hearts and the queen! To no tavail — my owner lovingly placed tme upon the table.

"Despite his unblocking, West's three twas forced to capture me. And tsince West had nothing left but tblack cards, he was forced to put tmy owner in dummy, and the two tdiamond losers went away on the ttable's winners.

"I can still remember the thrill I felt about being the key element in such a masterful plan. What is more, this hand proved to be the turning point of the match, which my owner won handily."

Raising child like playing board game

By GENEVIEVE ROWLES
King Features Syndicate

Raising a child is much like playing a board game. Only it's for high stakes, a kind of life-or-death Monopoly.

There you are, young marrieds full tof hope and zing, poised on Go. Then Baby arrives, putting you in a pink haze. Immediately, you move ahead six spaces. Home from the hospital — ahead another three. That tfirst night Baby cries for two hours. You are frantic, certain that something terminal ails it. Assailed by doubts, you drop back six spaces.

Somehow, you begin to learn the parental ropes. By the time the child is a year old you are veterans of the Baby Game. Go ahead ten spaces.

The Terrible Twos puts you back eight, but victory over the potty training tbugaboo zips you along another t10 and you get to pass Go to boot.

During the years before Child begins tschool you go ahead a couple, tback a couple...up back, up back, tsee-saw style. No really big deals, tBut when your Pride and Joy goes toff to school, all shiny clean, you tleap 11 spaces and get to build a thouse on Park Place.

Little League softball and a summons to an emergency teacher's conference teach put you back a few, tbut then an "A" in spelling zings tyou ahead three. A fall from the tgarage roof and the resultant broken tarm causes you to pay a forfeit. tBut the game is far from over.

A bouquet of flowers proferred with a wide grin on Mother's Day is good for seven forward jumps. But euphoria is brief. Braces on teeth, followed by megabills, plummet you back five.

Child enters the teen years. Back another five. Child stars at basketball. Leap ahead three. Child discovers "in" clothes. You loose the house on Park Place. Child voluntarily assumes tthe cleaning chores of car and dog. Leap ahead three and build a house on Mediterranean Avenue.

Overnight, progeny learns to drive said car and qualifies for driver's license. Parents go to jail without passing Go. It's all downhill for the next three years. You lose advantage with every roll of the dice. You spend tmost of your time in jail and can't throw doubles no matter how hard you try. A string of sleepless nights costs you what little skill at the game you thought you had acquired.

From time to time you do get to creep ahead a space or two. Occasionally Child seems to realize that you are a living, breathing person, not just a fixture placed in the house solely for his or her benefit. But no real progress is made.

High-school graduation day arrives. tA new dimension is injected tinto the game. Depending upon twhether or not honors and/or scholarships tare bestowed upon Progeny, tyour leap ahead can be anywhere tfrom eight to 12 spaces. At tany rate, it is the greatest spurt ahead tsince Child began first grade.

The day after graduation dawns like a huge maw with a question mark in it. Go back three spaces as punishment for your naive optimism of yesterday. Then Progeny goes off to college. You leap ahead 12 whole spaces and are released from jail to boot. You bask in a euphoria that dissolves when the first phone call requesting money comes. Go back four spaces. Student gets part-time job. Go ahead four.

The college years resemble the pre-school tones. You go forward, back, forward, back, in erratic jerks. You think you glimpse the end of the long game. You expect to have piles of paper money in front of you and to own six houses and three hotels and be permanently out of jail. You might even get to take a walk on the boardwalk.

As graduation from college approaches, tyou are convinced that the game is going to be won. It's about time. After all, you've been playing it for 20 odd years, haven't you?

But then the truth dawns. This game can't be won or lost. You should thave savored those leaps ahead, tthose good rolls of the dice, aware that the backward slides, the trips to jail, were sure to follow. Both euphoria and despair were inevitable, thowever transient.

Pregnant songwriter welcomes child to world

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — It was the kind of night a pregnant woman comes to know so well.

And singer-songwriter Karen Taylor-Good, then seven months pregnant, tried desperately to sleep.

"I tried my left side — nope; I tried my right side — nope; my back — ouch! My stomach — forget it," she said in an interview with The Associated Press.

"So I sat up...and began to think about what was going on inside of me. I found that I needed to write down what I was feeling."

It was 3:30 a.m. In 20 minutes, Ms. Taylor-Good wrote a lovely song for her unborn child, "Welcome to the World."

"I played it for my best friend — she cried," she said. "I played it for my husband — he cried. Then I played it for my Lamaze and child care classes, and they cried.

"Anybody who has ever been pregnant will associate with the lyrics."

The day before she wrote the song, Ms. Taylor-Good underwent an ultrasound examination, which produces electronic images of the fetus.

Ms. Taylor-Good gave birth to her first child, Rachael, on July 22.

Home sharing opens opportunity to varied people

By JEANNE MACKIN
King Features Syndicate

Shirley, 72 years old and widowed, thought she would have to sell her house and move to a nursing home last year when ill health made it almost impossible for her to do her cooking and cleaning.

It wasn't a move she looked forward to. But with increasing medical bills that were eating up her small income, decreasing physical strength and mobility, and no one to help out with the work and the bills, what else could she do?

Anne had different problems. Only 34, divorced, and with a 6-year-old daughter to care for, she was having a difficult time balancing a full-time job with the needs of her child.

Her salary was low and expenses were high. She couldn't afford to rent the type of house she wanted for herself and her daughter, and there wasn't enough money to pay an after-school babysitter.

Both of them heard of a new concept called homesharing, and located, through a social services agency, the organization that sponsored home sharing in their community.

"IT SOUNDED LIKE a good idea," Shirley recalls. "I would share my home with someone, in exchange for a small rent and labor. It was a last resort before giving up my home, and I was ready to try it.

"The house was too big for me, and I couldn't take care of it like I used to, but it's where I raised my family, and where my happiest memories were made. I wanted to stay in it as long as possible."

Shirley met with a staff member of her local Office for the Aging, and explained her needs and problems. She filled out a form indentifying the type of person she would like to share her home with, that person's age, and desirable traits and characteristics.

"Because of my health problems, we thought it would be helpful if I shared my home with a younger person — someone who could get around and do the things I couldn't do," Shirley says.

Several days later Anne called the same office to see if they would help her find a home-sharing situation.

"I was willing to help out with housework in exchange for a lower rent," she says. "I liked the idea of living with an older woman, someone who could be a friend to me and Carrie, my daughter." Anne went through a similar interview process, and a week later she and Shirley met for the first time.

"I was nervous," Anne remembers. "I was afraid Shirley wouldn't like little kids, or that she would be fussy and demanding."

"I WAS WORRIED that Anne would be loud and sloppy," Shirley recalls. "I had never before lived with anyone except my own family."

Both were wary at first, but after talking for a while about what they were looking for, they decided to give home sharing a try. Anne moved in with Shirley a month later.

"Home sharing is not really a new idea," says Patricia Baron Pollak, Ph.D., housing specialist with Cornell University. "It's common — almost traditional — for relatives and even friends to share a home. What is new, however, is for communities to be involved in home-sharing arrangements."

Community-sponsored home-sharing programs have sprung up across the country and are, Ms. Pollak and other experts say, a very important alternative for thousands of older homeowners who need help staying in their homes. Programs may be sponsored by a local Office for the Aging, a religious or civic group or any organization that aids the elderly.

In a society where people are living longer, and with many older people preferring to live in their own homes rather than moving to an institutional setting, home sharing is becoming a popular and important option.

"Sharing a home means sharing expenses," Ms. Pollak says. "For most older people, this means reduced housing costs. For many, it means they can remain independent in their communities."

MOST COMMUNITIES have a vested interest in helping these older homeowners. At a time when many younger people can't afford to buy housing, a community can either help the elderly keep their own homes, or face having empty, boarded-up houses.

"Home sharing can mean the difference between an empty house and a lived-in one, and between a well-maintained home or one that is neglected because of the expenses and labor that maintenance requires," Ms. Pollak says.

Currently, there are over 270 shared-housing programs in the country, according to the National Shared Housing Resource Center in Philadelphia. Many of the programs encourage inter-generational matches, such as the one that Shirley opted for — an older person sharing her home with a younger one.

Some programs, however, concentrate on matching up people of similar age. And while many programs place "shares" in homes already owned by the older person, other programs involved group purchase of a home which is then equally owned by its residents.

"Home-sharing programs differ as greatly as do the communities and groups that sponsor them," Pollak says.

Jessie Inz, Director of Project SHARE (Senior Housing at Reduced Expense) in Nassau County, N.Y., says that as there are many different types of home sharing programs, so are there many reasons why people participate in the programs.

"MANY COME IN for the financial aspect," she says. "They (the older homeowners) are having difficulty holding on to their homes because of rising taxes, fuel costs and other expenses. Many are doing it for the companionship. Or, maybe they just want somebody to be there at night."

One of the first home-sharing projects started in the United States, Project SHARE has been in existence since 1977 and has processed over 2,000 applications and matched over 400 persons. It has been a model for many of the other programs started more recently.

"Project SHARE is sponsored by the Department of Senior Citizen Affairs and requires that one of the people involved in the home-sharing arrangement be 60 years of age or older," Ms. Inz says. The other person must be physically and emotionally compatible with the older person.

"The actual negotiation of the matching process is between the people," she explains. "They work out the details of the living arrangement between themselves. But if a problem or misunderstanding comes up, our program is equipped to provide some counseling."

Ms. Inz, a certified social worker, likes to make it very clear what the Nassau County Project SHARE is not: a real-estate program that locates tenants or rental rooms for people just looking for a place to live.

"We're not a commercial organization," she says. "We offer opportunities for shared living. Many people, in addition to going through the sharing process of living together, develop close and friendly relationships. Not all do, however. It often depends on what each person needs and is looking for."

THE STAFF AT Project SHARE first interviews both the potential home provider and home seeker to get a basic understanding of their needs and characteristics, and then make a field site inspection of the home to be shared. With those preliminaries taken care of, the applicants then meet for the first time.

"The matching process can be similar to arranging a blind date through a dating service," Ms. Pollak says. "And the working out together of the living arrangements can cause the same inter-personal problems that marriage causes. Counseling for home-sharing participants can be similar to marital counseling."

Anne and Shirley, for instance, had some bad moments during the initial adjustment period.

"Shirley was very lonely and tended to want to sit and talk as soon as I got home from work," Anne remembers. "I'd be tired and a little irritable, and resentful that I had no time for myself."

Anne, however, was not as neat a housemate as Shirley expected. Damp towels thrown in a bathroom corner, dirty dishes left overnight in the sink, and coats thrown over chairs rather than hung up were what bothered Shirley.

If Anne lost some of her privacy, Shirley lost the feeling of control over her home.

REALIZING THAT they were better off together rather than trying to go it alone, they made it a point to discuss problems as soon as they came up, rather than letting them accumulate to the point of friction.

Shirley realized that Anne, while willing to be a friend and companion, needed some time for herself. Anne improved her housekeeping habits enough to win Shirley's appreciation, if not complete approval.

"You have to remember not to be petty about the little things," Shirley says. "That's an important rule in any sharing relationship. And it's worth it, to be able to keep your home."

Unlike Shirley, Joe, a retired widower, was more than willing to sell his home and move.

"I was lonely, and I was tired of all the work that goes with owning a home. I was ready to take it easy," he says.

He moved to the sunny climate of Florida for his retirement years, and now lives in another kind of home-sharing program. He, along with three other retired people, bought a home together and began a group residence. Joe, like the others in his home, has a private bedroom and shares a bath with one other. The kitchen, dining and living rooms are "common space," used and maintained by all the members of the house.

ALL EXPENSES, except for personal needs like clothing, travel and medical bills, are shared by the owner-members of the residence, and household chores are negotiated at weekly meetings. Each member pays an equal amount to a maid who comes in twice a week to clean.

"Some days it seems like there's always someone under foot," Joe admits. "Sometimes we fight over the television programs and who gets to watch what. Most of the time, though, this is a great way to live. I have a home without all the work usually associated with owning a home. And I live in a house that I probably couldn't have afforded on my own."

Because Joe's home-sharing arrangement is more formal than Shirley's and is based on a somewhat complex legal agreement, he worked closely with a lawyer before signing on the dotted line.

"I have a lot of money invested in this house," he says, "and I can't just walk away if it doesn't work out. We're all in this together, and have to look out for our private interests and also make it work as a group."

One of the more successful of these types of group residences is Share-A-Home in Winter Park, Fla. Share-A-Home houses are jointly owned households of residents who divide household responsibilities and expenses. Usually the householders are close in age and interests.

Since the first home was established in 1969 by Jim Gillies, Share-A-Home has incorporated and grown to include 10 different homes with a total of 125 residents living in them.

Publishers: What's the matter with books today?

By ED HUTSHING
Copley News Service

NEW YORK — What is happening in book publishing? Why do so many of the books being published die aborning? Why are there so many errors in new books — typographical, narrative and in fact? Why are indices either ineptly put together or non-existent? Why are books so poorly bound? What has happened to editing?

These are not only the questions of professional reviewers and critics. They are also are the mounting questions of the reading public.

THE MOST GLARING recent example of a publishing gaffe caused Random House to recall 58,000 copies of "Poor Little Rich Girl; The Life and Legend of Barbara Hutton" last December at a cost estimated at between $150,000 and $200,000. Author C. David Heymann had written that Dr. Edward A. Kantor had treated Hutton from the early 1940s into the 1970s and had prescribed heavy drug dosages for her in 1943 — when, Kantor's lawyers later pointed out, the doctor-to-be was only 14 years old. In fact, Dr. Kantor did not graduate from medical school until 1954; he finished his residency training in 1960 and didn't meet Hutton until 1969.

OTHER CASES in point:

— In a recent volume on J.P. Morgan, questionable editing allowed a financial coup in coffee to become a coup in cotton 20 pages later. And Morgan's first wife was ignored in the index.

— In a fictional account of Tom Mix's life, he was portrayed as having listened to radio news reports of World War I in late 1916, while living 500 miles below the border in Mexico. The first commercial broadcasting in North America didn't take place until 1922, in Pittsburgh.

— Less embarrassing but more frequent is the continuing misuse of words in many books, such as the confusion of compose and comprise, further and farther and other terms authors and editors should be able to distinguish between.

It has reached a point where one prominent agent has advised all her clients to have their manuscripts edited by professional free-lancers before sending them to any publishing house. "My reasoning is that they won't receive any editing once they are bought for publication."

What is wrong? When did it happen? How did it happen?

TO GET THE ANSWERS to these questions, it is necessary to talk to the men and women who hold key positions in major publishing houses. Individually, no one has all the answers, but collectively, they present an uncommonly informed profile of publishing, where it has been, where it is and where the future lies.

William Goodman, editorial director of the highly respected, eclectic small press, David Godine Publishers in Boston, acknowledged problems in the currentpublishing scene:

"Well-prepared books, well-published books are few in number. They seem to be shrinking in number. It costs a great deal of money to prepare a good book well ... to see that the copy editing is done with professional exactitude, that the rules of, say, the Chicago Style Book, are followed; and the index is a complicated thing that cannot be done by someone who just knows the alphabet. All these things take time and money.

"One of the things I think has happened in some places is to slacken that standard because it is expensive. In the desperate rush to somehow offset the rising costs of publishing which we cannot control — printing, paper, binding, what it costs to keep a salesman on the road — publishers look to see where somehow they can save money.

"And I think the temptation comes in by some publishers to accept what at one time would have been unthinkable, which is not to edit, copy edit or index as well. One of the signs of this kind of attempt to save money are those non-fiction books that do not have an index. This is much more common today than it was 20 years ago."

WILLIAM JOVANOVICH, chairman and chief executive officer of Harcourt Brace Jovanovich and an editor himself, points to the problems that begin with the author. In a phone interview from his office in Orlando, Fla., Jovanovich said:

"In some ways, publishers have betrayed their own great opportunity, in that we have a more literate population than we had 40 or 50 years ago and we haven't addressed ourselves to it. I think it's because everybody can read or write that almost everybody thinks he or she can write a book.

"I don't get 10,000 sonatas a year or 10,000 architect's renderings for a castle. But I do get 10,000 manuscripts or proposals for manuscripts. I think it's wonderful that everyone thinks he or she can write a book. But on the other hand, you have to have someone who knows what they want to publish.

"I think the curious thing is there isn't enough professionalism in editing now, or people who have the courage to say, 'That isn't even a book. It's an article or an essay;' or 'That's something to put in your diary;' or 'That's psychological therapy, that isn't even writing. ...'

"I think the world is too damned dangerous a place for ignorance to reign unopposed."

LESLIE POCKELL, director of St. Martin's Press Trade department, also saw the problem as originating with the authors:

"Education is not giving people the training in grammar. They are not unintelligent, and they are not less imaginative. But they cannot communicate. If they do not have the tools to express themselves, they are operating without a full toolbox.

"There's a loss at every level. The authors don't know how to write very well. Forget about style, they don't know grammar and punctuation. Structure and organization they don't know. They weren't taught."

If authors don't write well, the job of fixing things falls to an editor, making the relationship of the editor to the author a critical one. The initial contact between author and publisher is an acquisitions editor who is responsible for acquiring the author and manuscript for the publishing house.

RICHARD MAREK, who has his own colophon as a publisher with St. Martin's, examined the forces driving the acquisitions editor:

"The acquisitions editor is under constant pressure to acquire. There is no question that he is the star of the publishing house and he makes more money. He is the one who is relied upon to bring in the Clavells or the Micheners.

"Most bosses...only want the name and don't care too terribly much about the actual quality of the book, which doesn't seem, at least in my experience, to have made a single whit of difference in the sales. It's brand-name stuff."

JOSEPH CONSOLINO, president and publisher of Times Books, described the job:

"It is an eight-day week, which means they are stretched pretty heavily. And, I think, once the book is bought and edited, there still is an important factor. There is the care and maintenance of an author after the book is published. The publisher and the editor still have obligations to the author. Not to be a baby sitter for them or to act as their doctors, lawyers or dentists. But the relationship doesn't end the day the book is published.

"Unfortunately, we have the one-night-stand syndrome, where the author moves away from a publisher after one book, whether it was due to treatment or because his agent wants to pyramid his income on the next book or for whatever reasons. Close, strong relationships of authors and their publishers and editors is in the minority."

CHECKING OUT THE LIBRARY

Volume boasts mystery of charms

By JOHN W. DEATS

Not everyone loves a mystery, but there are those devoted to them who read little else.

No matter into which category you fall, you might enjoy "Murder Ink: The Mystery Reader's Companion," "perpetrated" by Dilys Winn in 1977. This oversized, well illustrated compendium is a virtual crash course in the mystery story, its history, authors of note, films and plays, and related subjects such as forensic science, the psychology of criminals and the mystery as literature. Most of the book is in the form of articles and essays by authors and famous readers of this genre, and often the style becomes tongue in cheek.

In "The Correct Use of the Blunt Instrument," for instance, we learn that the most famous fictional murder weapon was Roald Dahl's frozen leg of lamb, and the second most famous, Ngaio Marsh's magnum of champagne.

Those who feel that mysteries should never be read by children may change their minds after reading author Phyllis Whitney's advice in "Good Little Boys and Girls."

Among the many new mysteries which are particularly recommended is Rex Burns' "Strip Search." The auther, an English teacher at the University of Colorado at Denver, writes more like a veteran policeman, with his ability to create the stark atmosphere of Denver's Colfax Avenue, "one of the longest sex strips in the country." The hero is a dedicated Chicano cop, now on the trail of a sinister killer and racketeer whose victims are the dancers along the strip. Reviewer Richard Wathen, who has served in the Indiana Legislature for 12 years and is an avid reader of classic mysteries, states that in Burns' work "we have come to a new quality in crime stories that goes beyond good writing and technical competence."

Another English professor, Amanda Cross, is well known not only for her mysteries but for serious scholarly works. Her readers are prepared for highly intricate writing with very complex sentences, and even her characters often speak in perfect English. That is a rarity in a literary form known for the inevitable cliches and slang sprinkled throughout the typical dialogue. "Sweet Death, Kind Death" revolves around the apparent suicide of Patrice Umphelby, history professor at Clare College and not the most popular woman on campus. But suicide by walking into a lake is considered suspect by Umphelby's biographers, so they summon another English professor and part-time sleuth, Kate Fansler, to investigate.

For racing fans, Dick Francis usually offers up an interesting mix of crime, high society and the track. They will be pleased with "The Danger," in which a top Italian female jockey is kidnapped, prompting her father to commission Liberty Market Ltd., a British firm whose specialty is kidnapping cases. This is a superior kidnapping tale and even has some humorous moments. Francis lets us see better what kidnapping does to its victim, even to one as independent as Allesia Cenci. "The Danger" has a very subdued tone, the characters are very real to us and the plot is suitably intricate to make this book one of Francis' best.

"A Death in China" is one of those rare books, almost impossible to put down. Authors William D. Mongtalbano and Carl Hiaasen not only offer the reader a fast-paced, detailed story, but they help the reader see many similarities between the Chinese character and that of Westerners under similar circumstances. So often in recent literature only the differences are stressed. The story commences as American professor Thomas Stratton makes his first trip to China. In Beijing he runs into an old friend and mentor, David Wang, who is himself in China after a 40-year absence. But the happy reunion comes to an end as Wang dies of a heart attack, or, as they say at the American Embassy, "death by duck," a euphemism for overindulgence while on vacation. Gradually Stratton grows suspicious of the circumstances of his friend's death, leading him to discoveries of corruption in high places within the government. Wang's Chinese niece helps him as he is chased across the country by thugs hired by the Chinese government. The plot unravels slowly and keeps the reader riveted through to the last page.

Book offers provocative look at Veep's powers

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

A provocative book for 1984's focus on U.S. politics, "Vice-Presidential Power: Advice and Influence in the White House" by Paul C. Light (John Hopkins University: $19.95) claims that Walter Mondale's "low-profile, hand-hidden approach" — with a strategy of "setting policy priorities, building coalitions inside the White House, accepting limited victories, adapting from offense to defense" — paved the way for George Bush to become a senior adviser to Ronald Reagan. Light's description of the shutout of Hubert Humphrey and Nelson Rockefeller's removal from the policy process is candid and deft. Here is a lively account of how vice presidents changed from "errand boys, political hit men and professional mourners."

"The Great Cat Massacre and Other Episodes in French Cultural History" by Robert Darnton (Basic Books: $17.95; illustrated). If your concept of 17th- and 18th-century France centers around romantic musketeers and boudoir dalliance, this book is going to be a rude, fascinating shock. Witty, well-researched and beautifully written, it exposes a nation's culture through fairy tales, the diary of a bourgeois and meticulous files on anti-regime writers. It also reveals France in that period as a poor, brutal world where "everyone faced endless, limitless labor, from early childhood until the day of death." Cultural sensibilities are made most clear by a chapter on "The Great Cat Massacre," what the French then deemed a humorous and riotous event. Darnton's research makes any reader glad not to have shared in the Age of Enlightenment.

"PhotoGraphics" by Allen Hurlburt (Watson-Guptil: $22.50). A well-known art director's selection of wowie-zowie graphics and other camera-generated images, mainly from '60s Pop Art. His commentary is solid; the photos vivid and fun, embodying both basic techniques and striking innovation. His text also covers photo history, camera equipment, poster art, magazine design and such special effects as double exposure, collage and solarization. The work is substantial but feels dated, like a volume of top design 20 years old.

These family-style meals fun to prepare at less than $1 per serving

King Features Syndicate

Here are meals the whole family will love — and they're under $1 a serving.

PORK CHOPS DINNER
Continental Pork Chops
Spaetzle
Green Beans
Oranges

SPAETZLE

Water
1½ cups all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon salt
2 eggs

In 4-quart saucepan over high heat, heat 8 cups water to boiling.

Meanwhile, in medium bowl with spoon, beat flour, salt, eggs, and ⅔ cup water until smooth.

Reduce heat to medium. Over simmering water, with rubber spatula, press batter through spaetzle maker (or, colander or grater with large holes). Stir water gently so spaetzle do not stick together. Cook 2 to 3 minutes until tender but firm; drain. Serves four.

CONTINENTAL PORK CHOPS

2 tablespoons salad oil
1 garlic clove, sliced
4 pork loin shoulder chops
1 medium carrot, diced
1 medium celery stalk, diced
1 medium onion, diced
1 16-ounce can tomatoes
¼ cup cooking white wine
¾ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon basil

In 12-inch skillet over medium heat, in hot oil, cook garlic until golden; discard garlic.

In oil in skillet over medium-high heat, cook pork chops, two at a time, until browned on both sides; remove to plate. In drippings remaining in skillet over medium heat, cook carrot, celery and onion until tender, stirring often.

Return chops to skillet; add tomatoes with their liquid and remaining ingredients; over high heat, heat to boiling. Reduce heat to low; cover; simmer 45 minutes or until chops are tender, stirring often. Skim off fat from liquid in skillet.

EGGS BENEDICT DINNER
Eggs Benedict Special
Marinated Citrus Slices
Mixed Vegetables

EGGS BENEDICT SPECIAL

4 slices bacon
1 medium red pepper, sliced
1 medium green pepper, sliced
1 medium onion, sliced
2 English muffins, split
Water
4 eggs
Blender Hollandaise

In 10-inch skillet over medium-low heat, cook bacon until browned; remove to paper towels to drain. While still warm, roll bacon, one slice at a time to form a "rose"; secure with toothpick. Keep warm.

Remove all but 2 tablespoons bacon drippings from skillet. In drippings remaining in skillet over medium-high heat, cook peppers and onion until tender and lightly browned, stirring occasionally, about 15 minutes.

Meanwhile, toast English muffin halves; arrange on 4 dinner plates. Top muffin halves with pepper mixture; keep warm in 200 degree oven.

Poach eggs: In greased 10-inch skillet over high heat, heat 1 inch water to boiling. Reduce heat to low. One at a time, break eggs into saucer and slip into simmering water. Cook eggs 2 to 4 minutes until of desired firmness. When done, with slotted spoon, carefully remove eggs from water. Drain each egg (still held in spoon) on paper towels. Arrange eggs on pepper-topped muffins; keep warm.

To serve, spoon hollandaise sauce over eggs. Remove toothpicks from bacon roses. Garnish each egg with a bacon rose.

Blender Hollandaise: In small saucepan over low heat, heat ½ cup butter or margarine (1 stick) until melted; remove saucepan from heat.

In blender at medium speed, blend 3 egg yolks, 2 teaspoons lemon juice, and ⅛ teaspoon ground red pepper. Reduce blender speed to low; remove center of cover (or cover) and very slowly pour melted butter or margarine into mixture. Continue blending until well mixed.

MARINATED CITRUS SLICES

3 medium oranges
1 large grapefruit
½ cup orange marmalade

Remove peel and white membrane from oranges and grapefruit. Slice oranges and grapefruit crosswise into ¼-inch-thick slices. Spoon marmalade over fruit and refrigerate until ready to serve.

CORNED BEEF DINNER
Hot Reuben Salad
Parsley Potatoes
Green Beans
Rye Bread
Oatmeal Cookies

HOT REUBEN SALAD

1 tablespoon salad oil
1 medium onion, diced
1 16-ounce can sauerkraut, drained
1 12-ounce can corned beef, cut into ½-inch chunks
¼ cup water
2 tablespoons apple jelly
2 tablespoons bottled Thousand Island dressing
¼ teaspoon caraway seeds, crushed
4 ounces Swiss cheese, shredded

In 10-inch skillet over medium heat, in hot salad oil, cook onion until tender, stirring occasionally. Gently stir in sauerkraut, corned beef, water, apple jelly, Thousand Island dressing, and caraway seeds; sprinkle cheese on top. Cover skillet and cook until mixture is hot and cheese is melted, about 5 minutes. Serves six.

PARSLEY POTATOES

4 medium potatoes (1½ pounds)
Water
3 tablespoons butter or margarine
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoon minced parsley

In 3-quart saucepan over high heat, heat potatoes and enough water to cover to boiling. Reduce heat to medium-low; cover and cook 25 to 30 minutes until potatoes are fork-tender. Cool potatoes until easy to handle; peel; cut into bite-sized chunks. Return potatoes to saucepan.

To potatoes in saucepan, add butter or margarine, salt and pepper; cook over low heat until butter melts and potatoes are heated through, gently tossing potatoes with rubber spatula to coat with butter mixture. Sprinkle with parsley. Serves six.

QUICK MEXICAN DINNER
Burrito Stack
Pudding

BURRITO STACK

1 8-ounce can refried beans
¼ cup mild or hot taco sauce
¼ cup salad oil
4 8-inch flour tortillas
¼ medium head lettuce, shredded
1 8-ounce package cheese spread, shredded (2 cups)
2 large tomatoes, cut into pieces

In small saucepan over medium-low heat, heat refried beans and taco sauce until blended and heated through, stirring occasionally.

Meanwhile, in 10-inch skillet over medium heat, in hot salad oil, fry 1 tortilla at a time, about 30 seconds on each side until lightly browned and blistered. With tongs, remove tortilla to paper towels to drain.

On plate, place 1 tortilla; top with one-fourth bean mixture, one-fourth shredded lettuce, and one-fourth cheese. Repeat layering three times. Arrange tomatoes around stack. Cut stack into wedges to serve. Serves six.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon
Monday, July 23, 1984

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: New Baseball Hall of Famer Don Drysdale, TV host Bert Convy and all-time Dodger great Pee Wee Reese share your birthday. Also born on this date: mystery author Raymond Chandler and actor Arthur Treacher. Your feelings will be deeply aroused in the coming months. Remember that when the pressure is on, success depends on your controlling your emotions. Curb a tendency to speak impetuously. Developing a creative or artistic talent will bring rich rewards. Be candid with loved one and a domestic spat will blow over. Your quick mind and enthusiasm for new ideas make you a fascinating though unpredictable companion.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): People tell you how wonderful you are to do what you do. Believe them! Both productivity and profits rise. A blind date could lead to a strong new love. Be open with partner.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The mail brings glad tidings. Share any good financial news with those closest to your heart. Keep records and paperwork up to date. Falling behind could cost you both money and prestige.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Keep a low profile at work until you have a chance to check records and do more research. A detour will speed things up in the long run. Family ties grow stronger.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Start the day with a phone call and your spirit will remain high all morning. A financial matter can be settled in your favor. Move swiftly. Romance enjoys highly favorable influences.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your opinions may be ignored now. Do not give up; eventually you will get through to those who count. Self-confidence is the key to greater success. An exhilarating romance leaves you breathless!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Work hard and a bonus or promotion will soon be yours. Double-check all financial figures before signing an agreement. Something may be missing. Refuse to let someone pull wool over your eyes.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): It doesn't make sense to remain uninvolved when your vote could make a difference. Stand up for your beliefs! Travel is an essential part of your plan to increase business and income.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your personal charm helps you get your own way. Business is better, thanks to both your ideas and some new technology. Bring a friend home to dinner. A mature attitude wins widespread respect.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): This can be a red-letter day if you push all the right buttons. Partner may fail to understand your position. It is essential that you make a stronger case. Be your most persuasive.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Reach out to people. Your great faith and gallant spirit give strength to others. A child's admiration for you grows. Rejoice in the knowledge that your good works are gaining greater recognition.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Keep adding to that financial nest-egg. A marital relationship grows stronger when you share more of yourself. At work, the emphasis is on applying yourself and showing cooperative spirit.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Clarify your goals so that others can give you a hand. It is essential that you pursue a business deal with vigor. Greater financial security and peace of mind are possible. Show diligence.

Italy finally ready to honor Hemingway

ROME (AP) — Cuba has a Hemingway museum, Spain regularly hosts literary conferences on the late American writer, and Parisian survivors of the "Lost Generation" commemorate "Ernie."

But Italy, where Ernest Hemingway first saw the ravages of war and started to write, somehow never pulled together its memories and mementos of the American novelist.

Last month, with the help of members of Hemingway's family, Italians dedicated a small national park to the writer. And a month-long jazz, film, and classical music festival was held in the area which Hemingway called "the Florida of Italy."

Hemingway's son Jack and two of the writer's granddaughters, Margaux and Joan, flew over for the occasion along with Jerry Siefert, the mayor of Ketchum, Idaho, where the writer took his life in 1961.

Hemingway was not yet 20 when he drove an ambulance for the U.S. Red Cross in northern Italy along the Piave River, scene of one of the bloodiest battles of World War I. He was wounded in July 1918 near the town of Fossalta and 11 years later wrote the novel which brought him fame, "A Farewell To Arms," about an English nurse who falls in love with an American ambulance driver.

Later, he met one of the loves of his life, Adriana Ivancich, the model for Renata, one of the characters of "Across the River and Into the Trees." She died two years ago, but her brother Gianfranco, a Hemingway companion from the Cuban days, has put together such memorabilia as a typewriter, clipboards and pens in an exhibition at his villa in San Michele on the Adriatic coast.

"Italy is the key to understanding Hemingway," says Ivancich, now a retired businessman. "You can hunt big game, hang out with the bulls, and write about the Spanish Civil War, but you can never forget the horrors of war when you see them at 19."

After World War I, Hemingway returned frequently to Italy, although his description of dictator Benito Mussolini as "the biggest bluff in Europe" kept him banned during the height of fascism.

In 1954, the year he won the Nobel Prize for Literature, Hemingway came to hunt wild ducks along the Tagliamento River and the lagoons between Venice and Trieste. One day, on a peninsula between the Adriatic and a lagoon, he exclaimed to his friend Alberto Kechler: "This must be the Florida of Italy."

Thirty years later, Lignano Sabbiadoro has used the phrase to help it become the third beach resort of the country, behind Rimini and Lido di Jesolo, boasting over five million overnight stays in local hotels, mainly by Austrian, German and Italian tourists.

Hemingway never returned, and a piece of pine forest fronting on the Gulf of Venice was never built upon.
