Voters Change Opinion

BOSTON (AP) — Massachusetts voters who approved the tax-limiting Proposition 2½ by a 3-2 margin last fall would reject it if they could cast their ballots again, according to a statewide poll.

But the 500 people polled showed little interest in seeking to repeal the measure, which has forced municipal employee layoffs across the state. And many of those polled said they believe public officials are doing all they can to kill Proposition 2½.

The Boston Globe said in today's editions it obtained a copy of the poll, which it said was done by the Becker Reaserch Corp. for its estimated 40 private clients, most of them businesses.

El Paso Bank Robbed

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Police were searching today for a man who walked into a bank Wednesday, demanded money and calmly left with about $6,000.

Barbara Chaney, president of Western Bank, said police told bank employees the robbery suspect's description and method were similar to two robberies of financial institutions in February.

Ms. Chaney said no one was injured in the robbery and no weapon was displayed.

Police said a bank teller was approached by a man who handed her a $1 bill with a note taped to it. The note said the man would shoot the teller unless she gave him money without sounding an alarm.

American Shows A Profit

DALLAS (AP) — Passenger traffic was down but somehow profits were up for American Airlines Inc. during the first quarter of 1981, according to company reports.

Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Albert V. Casey said American improved to profit of $3.9 million for the period January-March of the current year, compared to a $41.9 million loss the same period last year.

That profit came despite the fact that revenue passenger-miles — the accepted industry measure of passenger traffic — declined more than 7 percent from the same period a year ago.

Casey attributed the improvement to the company's cost-containment measures that reduced the airline break-even factor from 63.3 percent of capacity to 57 percent during the past year.

The SDN Column

When you bring up the subject of human values, many opinions are likely to be offered. This is especially true when schools and other organizations that work with youth are involved. Nothing can stimulate an argument more quickly than an attempt to set social and moral standards for groups with membership from widely divergent philosophies.

Clarence Minton came across a list of values which an Ohio community's school board adopted following public hearings that surprisingly sparked very few objections.

Here is the list:

1. Acknowledging the importance of self-discipline, defined as the strength to do what we believe we should do, even when we would rather not do it.
2. Being trustworthy so that when we say we will or will not do something, we can be believed.
3. Telling the truth, especially when it hurts us to do so.
4. Being honest in all aspects of life, including in our business practices and in our relations with government.
5. Having the courage to resist group pressures to do what we believe, when alone, we should not do.
6. Being ourselves, but being our best selves.
7. Using honorable means, those that respect the rights of others, in seeking our individual and collective ends.
8. Conducting ourselves, where significant moral behavior is concerned, in the manner that does not fear exposure.
9. Having the courage to say, "I'm sorry. I was wrong."
10. Practicing good sportsmanship. Recognizing that although the will to win is important, winning is not all-important.
11. Maintaining courtesy in human relations, including the courtesy of really listening to others.
12. Treating others as we would wish to be treated, recognizing that this principle applies to persons of every class, race, nationality and religion.
13. Recognizing that no person is an island, that behavior that may seem to be of purely private concern often affects those about us and society itself.
14. Bearing in mind that how we conduct ourselves in times of adversity is the best test of our maturity and our mettle.
15. Doing work well, whatever the work may be.
16 Showing respect for the property of others--school property, business property, government property, everyone's property.
17. Giving obedience to law, except where religious convictions or deeply held moral principles forbid.
18. Respecting the democratic values of free speech, free press, fereedom of assembly, freedom of religion and due process of law. Recognizing that this principle applies to speech we abhor, groups we dislike, persons we despise.
19. Developing habits that promote physical and emotional health and refraining from activities destructive of those ends.
20. Abstaining from premature sexual experience and developing sexual attitudes compatible with the values of family life.
21. Recognizing that the most important thing in life is the kind of persons we are becoming, the qualities of character and moral behavior we are developing.

Rescue Crews Move Into Shaft...

Explosion Traps 15 Men In Mine

REDSTONE, Colo. (AP) — Rescue crews inched their way along a 7,200-foot sloping mine shaft early today, trying to reach 15 miners trapped by an explosion that swept through the lower limits of the Dutch Creek No. 1 coal mine on Colorado's Western Slope.

Seven men came out of the mine in two groups after the blast Wednesday afternoon. Four were uninjured, but three were admitted to Valley View Hospital in Glenwood Springs for treatment of burns, bruises and shock, officials said.

One of those who escaped unhurt, David Chiarello, said that when the explosion occurred, "air came at me sort of like a hurricane. It didn't knock me over but there was so much dust I turned around and tucked my head in."

Five people identified as relatives of the trapped men sat in parked cars at the foot of the 4⅛-mile entrance road to the mine. They avoided reporters, but rushed to hear any scraps of news from officials coming from the mine.

"We tell them to go home," said a mine security guard. "We tell them there's no use staying here. But when something like this happens, and it's someone in your family, you don't stop to think about things. You just get in your car and drive up here."

Snyder Band Captures Sweepstakes

The Snyder High School Symphonic Band, under direction of Sam Robertson, won another sweepstakes award Wednesday in University Interscholastic League contests at Abilene.

The musicians received Division I (superior) ratings in both concert playing and sight reading.

The SHS Concert Band received Division II (Excellent) ratings in both concert playing and sight reading. The concert band was directed by Cliff Franklin.

Robertson said the SHS Symphonic Band turned in the best performance of any band he taken to a contest and a judge came up and congratulated members of the band on their performance, which is considered unusual.

The Snyder band was the only one in its class to win a sweepstakes award.

Rainfall Here Totals 2.75

The rains subsided here today, but not before the Snyder area got a good soaking.

The official gauge in Snyder added .68 inch during the 24-hour period ending at 7 a. m. today, making a total of 2.75 inches this week.

A total of 1.90 inches was reported at the Lake J. B. Thomas dam. Although there was little runoff into the lake, reports were that the CRMWD reservoir might gain six inches or so. The Colorado River was still flowing about two or three feet deep this morning.

Space Telescope Due To Ride On Columbia

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — On a space shuttle cargo manifest for 1985 is the Space Telescope, eagerly-awaited by scientists as one of the their most promising missions ever.

Above the obscuring atmosphere, the 45-foot-long device will detect objects 50 times fainter than those seen by the best Earth-bound instruments. Astronomers will be able to see seven times deeper into space, and gaze at up to 350 times the volume of the Universe now visible.

The telescope will be carried aloft by Columbia, which performed near-flawlessly on its first space test this week, or by one of three other shuttle craft expected to be flying routinely into orbit by then.

Shuttle crews will rocket up periodically to service the telescope, changing lenses, retrieving film, adding the latest in technology.

Science eagerly awaits the age of the shuttle, though it is not getting all it wants. Budget cuts have forced the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to curtail some projects it had hoped to carry on the shuttle, including a Venus mapping device and a probe to Halley's Comet.

Columbia's potential as a military machine and a cargo carrier for industry — communications satellites, metals experiments and the like--have received most of the attention. But science will have its opportunity.

"The engineer and scientist are going to be the astronauts of tomorrow," says Christopher C. Kraft Jr., director of the Johnson Space Center here. "The real payoff out there is going to come from the people who can use that unique environment to produce things, to learn things."

Shuttles also will take up instruments to study dense dust regions trillions of miles away, where new suns may be forming. Other devices will collect X-ray emissions from black holes, quasars, pulsars and white drarfs as scientists seek to learn more about these puzzling celestial objects.

On some flights the chief occupant of a shuttle's 60-foot-long cargo bay will be Spacelab, designed to function as a spacecraft within a spacecraft. It is basically a cylinder about 13 feet in diameter, and either 9 or 18 feet long, depending on whether a single or a double laboratory unit is used.

As many as four biochemists, astronomers, doctors or other professionals can work there in a shirt-sleeve environment.

Holy Week Series Concludes Friday

Holy Week services sponsored by the Scurry County Ministerial Alliance will conclude Friday morning with the observance of a Tenebrae service at First United Methodist Church. The service will begin at 7 a. m. in the sanctuary.

The word "Tenebrae" means "darkness" in Latin. The service of "Darkness" is to remind Christians of the darkness and despair the followers of Jesus experienced after His death and before His resurrection.

During the course of the service candles are extinguished one by one as the events of Christ's passion are read from the gospels.

Reading the scriptures will be Mark Robertson the Rev. Monte Jones and the Rev. James Merrell. Mark Gaskill will sing "Were You There When They Crucified My Lord" and "An Old Rugged Cross."

Spokesmen for the Ministerial Alliance expressed appreciation to those who have attended the Holy Week service during the noon hour Monday through today. The public is invited to attend the Friday morning service also. A continental breakfast will be served following the service.

Reagan Stands Firm On Taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, beginning to re-emerge as chief fighter for his economic program, insists that congressional alternatives to his embattled three-year tax cut plan "are not the answer, they are the problem."

"Taxes are much too high to deal in half-measures," a convalescing president said in a written statement issued Wednesday, the deadline for filing personal income tax returns.

"I ask all Americans to join me in changing our tax system so that next April 15 we shall begin to celebrate tax reductions instead of simply one more predictable and painful tax increase," he said.

The one-page statement was issued as Reagan continued his recuperation in the White House living quarters from a bullet wound inflicted in an assassination attempt March 30.

Other administration officials, primarily Vice President George Bush, have been substituting for Reagan at appearances he might ordinarily be making to pitch for his economic program.

Aides say Reagan almost certainly will focus on his program when he delivers his first broadcast message since the assassination attempt.

A radio or television broadcast is possible, perhaps as early as the end of next week, the aides say. Another possibility is a nationally televised appeal for his economic program on April 27, a date that would coincide with the end of a two-week congressional recess.

Chamber To Hold Banquet Here May 19

The Snyder Chamber of Commerce has scheduled its annual banquet for the night of May 19.

The date has been announced by Dr. Robert Hargrove, the chamber's banquet chairman.

Speaker for the banquet will be Dr. Don Newbury, new president of Western Texas College. Dr. Newbury, who took over the reins at WTC on April 1, is a nationally-known speaker and before moving here filled scores of speaking engagements each year. The local banquet will be his first appearance at a community-wide event.

Says Commissioner...

Soft School Courses Hurting Oil Industry

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Railroad Commissioner Mack Wallace said today a crisis in engineering education that has developed over the past decade "is one of the most serious wounds our nation must heal."

Wallace told the statewide oil allowable hearing a 1980 federal report showed a trend of reducing coursework requirements for high school graduation.

He said the report stated, "School districts across the nation are likely to require more courses in social studies than in mathematics or science for high school graduation."

Wallace spoke briefly after the commission had routinely set the statewide production factor for May at 100 percent. As usual, however, the East Texas Field was restricted to 86 percent production to avoid possible waste.

"Faculty shortages and serious equipment obsolescence have been identified as some of the biggest problems facing engineering schools nationwide," Wallace said.

He said he has been told 37 percent of all college degrees in West Germany last year were in engineering, 40 percent of the degrees in East Germany were in engineering and 21 percent of all degrees in Japan were in engineering.

In the United States last year, only 6 percent of the degrees were in engineering.

Wallace said he applauds the Reagan administration's efforts to cut federal spending. "However, I caution the administration and the Congress not to 'eat our seed corn', as one scholar put it, by abandoning assistance to energy research and training programs."

He urged the oil and gas executives to encourage "both public and private funding for the training of scientists and engineers."

Major buyers of Texas crude oil submitted nominations for 2,567,969 barrels daily in May, a decrease of 22,147 barrels daily from April.

SNYDER TEMPERATURES: High Wednesday, 51 degrees; low, 42 degrees; reading at 7 a. m. today, 51 degrees; precipitation, .68; total precipitation for 1981 to date, 4.41.

WEST TEXAS: Decreasing cloudiness north today, becoming partly cloudy tonight and Friday. Mostly cloudy south with widely scattered showers or thundershowers through tonight. Highs 65 to 78. Lows 45 to 58. Highs Friday 75 to 88.

the monkey shortage

We are sorry to report another failure of U.S. foreign policy and that another Carter administration self-sufficiency idea spawned in 1978 has apparently gone to mash.

This time the failure involves the "National Primate Plan," launched during the critical days three years ago when India announced an embargo of monkey exports to the U.S.

As you remember, the world trembled and the full glare of media attention fell on India in April, 1978, when shipments of the rhesus monkey — critical to U.S. medical research — were stopped by the Indians at the instigation of the apparently powerful monkey lobby in Washington.

The Wall Street Journal, in a lengthy but tongue-in-cheek expose of the matter a few days ago, disclosed that Washington's response was the creation of the National Primate Plan designed to conserve and breed enough monkeys to bring the U.S. to "monkey self-sufficiency by 1982."

According to the WSJ, the quickly-formed U.S. Interagency Primate Steering Committee felt it had the problem well in hand in 1978. All it needed was about 12,000 monkeys to get the breeding program launched, and so the agency's eyes fell on neighboring monkey-rich Bangladesh.

Unfortunately, the monkey lobby got to Bangladesh first and the Dacca government aped India — it too announced an embargo. Bangladesh had somehow become convinced by something called the Primate Protection League, located in Summerville, S.C., that the U.S. was using the monkeys for experiments with the neutron bomb.

In a dispatch from Dacca, WSJ writer Barry Newman disclosed that Bangladesh government officials are now convinced Americans as a whole are seething over the monkey embargo and believe an international incident on the scale of the hostage crisis in Iran is brewing here.

Bangladesh files on the matter are labeled top secret. "This is a sensitive matter," Dacca's inspector general of forests told Newman in guarded words. "America will remember this," a monkey dealer told Newman in whispers.

We frankly don't know how critical the monkey shortage is here. America must apparently enlist the services of about 14,000 rhesus monkeys each year to keep U.S. medical researchers from going bananas, and with the embargo apparently having its effect — the cost of monkeys has now shot to $185 each — it's hard to say how the Reagan administration will respond.

scapegoat concept

Manhattan myopia was never more conspicuous than when some TV network executives frantically deleted the name "Hinckley" from pretaped episodes of "Great American Hero."

Immediately following the shooting of the president they renamed their hero "Mister H" and vowed that in future tapings they will give him an altogether new name.

Because the probably sick boy accused of trying to kill the president was named John Hinckley Jr., these professional sin, sex and murder merchants self-righteously reverted to the scapegoat concept of blaming, crucifying and burying somebody else.

Why did they not overtly incite a torch-bearing mob to descend on Hinckley, Ohio!

The Hinckley family of Evergreen, Colorado, understandably has been devastated by recent events involving their son.

The family, besieged by media and gawkers and threatened by poison-penmen had to move next door and then out of town altogether.

Mr. Hinckley Sr., stepped down from the presidency of the prospering company he founded. The family disassociated itself from friends, including members of Vice President Bush's family.

This is not reflective of some personal hypersensitivity relating to the name Hinckley. I cannot think of anyone I know by that name.

I am not personally acquainted with the Hinckleys listed in "Who's Who," though they have honored that name with many credits.

Rather my concern is that of historian.

One remembers that one Christian name was so soiled by one individual that no mother for two thousand years has named her son "Judas."

The Dr. Mudd who treated Lincoln's assassin, however innocently and despite eventual vindication, left that name synonymous with a persona non grata for a generation.

For a network to panic and delete the suddenly notorious name from the next night's telecast in one thing...

But to announce that the name Hinckley would be erased forever implies an indelible stain.

A network spokesperson told critic Gary Deeb, "We had to do something: we don't want any harsh criticism."

Boy, isn't that something! And from the industry that gave us "Soap" and "Newlywed Game" and "The $1.98 Beauty Contest."

I'm hoping that on deliberate reconsideration the programmers who panicked will recant.

This is a dreadful guilt-by-association reaction; the next assassin's name may be yours!

WASHINGTON (NEA)—The U.S. government, bowing to pressure from multinational corporations, is seeking to undermine an international treaty that already has been informally approved by virtually every nation on earth.

After 13 years of difficult negotiations involving more than 150 countries, the United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea was expected to conclude work this spring on the first comprehensive treaty governing access to the oceans that cover two-thirds of the planet.

But less than a week before the final drafting session was to begin this month in New York, the Reagan administration declared that it was determined to thwart efforts to expeditiously conclude those meetings and have the treaty ready for formal approval before the end of the year.

Unlike other initiatives to which President Reagan has raised objections, this country's tentative acceptance of the proposed treaty was hardly a Democratic scheme hatched during the administration of President Carter.

In 1958, during the administration of President Eisenhower, a Republican, the United States joined a small group of other nations in the first attempt to draft an international agreement on use of the high seas.

In 1970, during the administration of President Nixon, a Republican, the United States voted for a U.N. General Assembly resolution (approved 108-0) that established the foundation for future negotiations.

That historic resolution said, in part:

"The seabed and ocean floor, and the subsoil thereof, beyond the limits of national jurisdiction...as well as the resources of the area, are the common heritage of mankind. The area shall not be subject to appropriation by any means...and no state shall claim or exercise sovereignty."

The two men who served as leaders throughout the protracted negotiations, Elliot L. Richardson and George H. Aldrich, are Republicans.

Henry A. Kissinger, the principal foreign policy and national security adviser to two Republican presidents, warned in 1975, that the negotiations "may be the world's last chance" to avoid unnecessary confrontations on the high seas.

Ignoring that Republican heritage, Reagan has acceded to intense pressure from a group of powerful U.S. corporations that are participants in joint business ventures to exploit the resources on the ocean floor.

They are unwilling to accept a treaty provision that would divide among all nations the benefits derived from trillions of dollars worth of mineral-rich, potato-shaped rocks or nodules found at the bottom of the ocean.

Although the four major consortia already formed to conduct seabed mining activities include British, Canadian, Japanese, Belgian, Dutch and German companies among their partners, the U.S. corporations dominate the industry.

Included in that category are the Kennecott Copper Corp., United States Steel Corp., Sun Oil Co., Lockheed Missiles and Space Co. and Standard Oil Co. of Indiana.

In addition to those firms, opposition to the draft treaty has come from some of the most strident conservatives in Congress, notably Sen. Jesse A. Helms, R-N.C., and Rep. John B. Breaux, D-La.

The broad coalition supporting the treaty, however, has encompassed interest groups ranging from the Defense Department to leading environmental organizations.

If the treaty is sabotaged, also abandoned will be provisions governing freedom of movement in international sea lanes, scientific research, fishery management, marine pollution, fishing rights and mandatory dispute settlement.

"The breakdown of the current negotiations, a failure to reach a legal consensus," says Kissinger, " will lead to unrestrained military and commercial rivalry and mounting political turmoil."

In other words, the choice is between the Law of the Sea and the "law of the jungle."

my turn

by lois gleason

Adults seem to be getting more physical in their quarrelsomeness. It must have something to do with the after-effects of having watched "The Three Stooges" as children.

There was a rerun on the other night and there was more violence on that show than I've seen on television in a long time.

Those who have been taking television to task for their programming "nowadays" must have been hopping in their seats.

Aside from the usual nose twisting and ear pulling, there were several rather painful-looking whacks on the stooges' heads with cast-iron frying pans.

Maybe the lady who killed her husband with a frying pan got the idea from that movie. Maybe she should sue the producer.

Then there was that wrestler in the movie who faintly resembled King Kong. One of the stooges was pushed toward him and had his neck twisted and his ribs crushed in for his trouble. When the stooge was finally spurred into action, he gave the wrestler a bigger dose of the same.

At the rematch, the stooge had his foot twisted and mangled until, if it were for real, it would have been a gory mess.

Banging heads with hammers is about par for the stooges. Wonder how many adults picked up that idea from them.

Maybe it's that TV violence from 18 years ago that now causes adults not to be content with mere words in an ordinary argument.

There was the landlady who couldn't seem to get a message across to a tenant — so she knocked her on the head with a broom handle.

Maybe she got that idea from "The Real McCoys."

A girl in Colorado called ger boyfriend a turkey — so he shot her.

The wording was a little different but I could of swore I saw the same plot on an old B-movie.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Here is a very simple hand. South decides to open four spades and no one else can find a bid.

West opens the 10 of diamonds, East takes his ace and returns the four spot. South is on lead and if South is a simple soul, he promptly leads out his king of trumps.

West takes his ace and leads another diamond. East ruffs and is going to make his ace of clubs later along in the play.

A slightly devious South leads his eight of spades in the hope that if West holds ace and one spade, he will duck and give South a chance to get in two quick trump leads.

A bridge-playing South realizes that there is no one holding a gun to his head to force him to lead a trump at that time. He notes that there is a strong possibility that diamonds are breaking 5-2 against him and that his remaining high diamond can be ruffed. He then plays dummy's ace-king of hearts in order to discard that bothersome diamond. Then he goes after trumps and scores his rubber.

Of course, hearts might break 7-1. In that case, fate is against South and he is doomed from the start.

Brownstone Advises Reader On Oatmeal Cookie Recipe

By Cecily Brownstone
Associated Press
Food Writer

DEAR CECILY: I've tried a number of oatmeal cookie recipes but haven't found what I am looking for. My family wants a cookie that's crunchy and has more oatmeal than flour in it. — SEEKER.

DEAR SEEKER: An oatmeal cookie recipe that was a favorite in the 1950s may meet your needs. I was reminded of it recently when I saw a recipe for it in a cookbook that purported to be devoted to the cooking of the 1980s. When we retested the recipe that appeared in the 1950s, we updated it in order to have it easier than ever to make. The cookies really are crunchy and all my tasters rated them delicious. — C. B.

CRUNCHY OAT DROP COOKIES

1 cup fork-stirred all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
2 cups quick-cooking oats
2-3rds cup butter
1 cup firmly packed dark brown sugar
1 large egg
1 teaspoon vanilla
½ cup raisins, rinsed in hot water and drained

In a small bowl fork-stir together the flour and baking powder; stir in the oats.

In a 3-quart saucepan or stainless steel mixing bowl, over very low heat, melt the butter; quickly stir in the sugar and immediately remove from the heat. Vigorously stir in the egg and vanilla until blended. Add the flour-oat mixture and the raisins; mix well — the dough will be very thick.

Drop by level tablespoonfuls, about 2 inches apart, onto greased cookie sheets; with a fork, flatten each tablespoonful so it is about 2 inches in diameter; with your fingers tuck in jagged edges to shape dough into even rounds.

Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until edges are browned — 12 to 15 minutes. Let stand a few minutes, then with a wide spatula remove to a wire rack to cool completely. Store in a tightly covered container.

Makes about 3 dozen.

Government Encourages Buying Savings Bonds

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a new appeal to patriotism, the government is trying to win back an army-sized group of deserters — those Americans who have abandoned U.S. savings bonds.

With flags waving and military bands blaring, Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan told a rousing rally of federal workers Wednesday that they should buy bonds and convince their fellow employees to do the same "for your future and your country's future."

Delivering a sales pitch that described bonds as a good financial deal and a way to help the Reagan administration achieve its economic goals, Regan said a recent "rekindling of pride in our country" might help revitalize the bond program, which just experienced its worst year in more than a decade.

Regan himself conceded earlier this year that the bond program, an almost-legendary success during World War II, has fallen on hard times.

The reason is simple enough, he told Congress in February: People can get a better deal elsewhere. "The savings bond program has just gone through the worst two years in its history because of the relatively low statutory ceiling on the interest rate...compared to current market rates of interest," he said.

While private and government securities have delivered interest rates ranging up to 15 percent and more, the common Series EE bonds have risen to just 8 percent at full maturity after nine years.

Regan noted on Wednesday that he has authority to raise the 8 percent Series EE rate to 9 percent next month, but he didn't say whether he would.

Cities Have Joint Party

DETROIT (AP) — Neighboring Windsor, Ontario, and Detroit are throwing a summer party for more than a million guests.

The occasion is the joint celebration of Canada's Dominion Day (July 1) and America's Independence Day (July 4). Sponsors say it is the largest festival in North America.

Retired Teachers Meet At Senior Center

Thirty two members of the Scurry County Retired Teachers Association met April 9 at the Senior Center for a regular meeting. Hosting the affair were Nellie Smith, Edna Harris, Johnnie Bishop, Opal Spikes, and Gladys Spikes.

Presiding over the business meeting was Jewel Summers.

Silas and Mary Devenport, who attended the State Convention in Dallas March 25-27, reported favorably on the Retirement Bill, Senate Bill 322, that had passed the Senate and been sent to the House. President Summers detailed the provisions of the bill and urged each person present to write Representative Larry Don Shaw and Senator Ray Farabee and thank them for the work they have done to see this bill passed. The Devenports also displayed an Achievement Award won for outstanding service in District participation.

UT Looks For Funds From Different Liquid

FORT STOCKTON, Texas (AP) — The University of Texas, already wealthy from more than 2 million acres of oil-rich West Texas endowment land, is hoping the same land will yield another precious liquid in the future — wine.

Workers planted 170 acres of grapes in the desert off Interstate 10 between here and Bakersfield last month, establishing the largest infant vineyard in the state. School officials envision a fortune from the harvest for the university system eventually.

"It is by far the largest single planting that ever took place in Texas," said Billy Carr, university lands surface rights manager. "I've been in lots of projects, but this is by far the most exciting because of the potential."

At present the planting site is little more than a sea of thin wooden stakes driven into the bleak prairies of the Permian Basin. But planters believe those stakes may mark the beginning of a giant new industry in West Texas.

"We've never seen a hotter world market than the one for wine," Carr said.

Experimental university vineyards on school-owned acerage in Pecos, Culberson and Reeves counties have already grown grapes that are hardy, cold resistant and not gluttons for water. Carr says they are well suited to the sunny, dry climate here.

They also yield high profits — if you can stand the initial investment. Gene Drennan, vineyard project director, said it takes $4,500 to $6,000 per acre to get started — "assuming you own the land and equipment and are already in the farming business."

But — once the vines are mature, they can bring $750 to $1,000 per area per year, and Drennan said a healthy grapevine can produce grapes for up to 50 years.

He began planting the vineyard last month, hiring laborers in Fort Stockton for such chores besides planting as inspecting water pipes for leaks and distributing hoses for a low-pressure drip irrigation system.

A fence-building crew drove 80,000 stakes into the ground and dug holes for the baby plants. Land clearing and well-digging began in the area last year.

The 170 acres is just a start, said scientific advisor for the project Charles McKinney of Odessa. If it works here — and researchers will know after a couple of years — they plan to turn 40,000 to 60,000 acres of school-owned land into vineyards.

"One thousand acres yield a million gallons of wine. The statewide consumption for wine last year was 30 million gallons. So if we went ahead and planted the 60,000 acres, you'd have twice as much wine as the state consumes," said McKinney.

The trick, Carr said, is to get wineries to locate on school lands next to the vineyards, buy the locally grown grapes and send the wine to national and world markets.

"There are a lot of people who are interested," he said.

If the project fulfills the dreams of its planners, years from now wine connoisseurs in New York or Paris might sit down in a gourmet restaurant and demand "Pecos, vintage 1985."

Boss Swaps His Suit For Cook's Apron

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Francis Guess is one state official who likes to see what's cooking in the departments he runs.

So the state General Services commissioner swapped his suit for an apron, picked up a spatula and began scrambling eggs at the Legislative Plaza cafeteria.

"I think the most interesting thing I discovered was how long I could work around here without people noticing who I was," he said.

Guess, 34, said he also learned that the approximately 1,000 employees in his department often go unnoticed.

"We keep the lights on, keep the elevators running and keep the buildings clean, but nobody ever notices us," he said. "It's only when something goes wrong do you find a person that notices."

Guess, who has been commissioner for 15 months, said he turned food services worker Tuesday to see firsthand what a work day is like for some of his workers.

"I think the one thing it's given me an appreciation for is how hard people work because I'm tired - I am tired," he said.

"I think if there was any surprise, it was the fact that I actually did some work."

Robbers Take Wrong Turn

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Wrong turns are common enough, but few are so convenient.

Police were pursuing a car after an armed robbery Wednesday when the high-speed chase ended abruptly — the car zoomed into the city police parking lot.

Police Capt. Bob Chambers said the chase began shortly after an undisclosed sum of money was taken in a holdup at a convenience store.

Officer Dave Slocum spotted a car matching the description of the getaway vehicle and pursued it in his patrol car down Interstate 5, Chambers said.

The fugitive car took an exit for the downtown area and began a winding course through city streets, eventually whipping into a parking lot which happened to be swarming with police officers who were preparing to join the chase.

Chambers said two men were being held for investigation of armed robbery.

Child Dies Unexpectedly

Cody Head, two month-old daughter of Clint and Rhonda Head of 103 Milburn, was pronounced dead at Cogdell Memorial Hospital shortly after 7 p.m. Wednesday.

A suspected victim of crib death, she was taken to Abilene for an autopsy.

Among the livestock-guarding dogs of Europe and Central Asia are the Great Pyrenees from France, the komondor and kuvasz from Hungary, the Maremma of Italy, the Anatolian akbash from Turkey, and the Shar Planinetz from Yugoslavia. They are big dogs. A male akbash, for example, can weigh 150 pounds.

Accuser Of Hunt Bros. Indicted In Conspiracy

DALLAS (AP) — A man who accused Dallas' wealthy Hunt brothers of conspiring to corner the silver market last year has been indicted on charges he conspired to defraud the Hunt brothers in an Oklahoma land transaction.

Former Hunt Energy Co. vice president William B. Bledsoe and his brother, Sherman A. Bledsoe, were indicted by a federal grand jury for conspiring to commit "fraud by use of mail and fraud by use of wire communications."

The Bledsoes have not been available for comment.

The Bledsoe brothers are accused of forming Bledsoe Land and Cattle Co. to purchase ranch land for Nelson Bunker Hunt near Atoka, Okla., during a time when Bledsoe still worked for the Hunts.

However, the charge says Bledsoe kept two sets of books to persuade Bunker Hunt that land sale commissions were being paid by the sellers when, in fact, Hunt — the buyer — was unknowingly paying the commissions and Bledsoe was pocketing the extra cash.

The Bledsoe brothers got as much as $200,000 in commissions through the scheme, the indictment says.

Bledsoe last year testified before a congressional committee investigating the 1980 silver market collapse that Nelson Bunker Hunt and W. Herbert Hunt tried "to corner the world silver market."

Bunker Hunt later filed suit against Bledsoe for "personally benefitting from Hunt funds." That suit has not come to trial.

Bledsoe said he left the Hunt company in March 1980 because he "became concerned" about the way the Hunts were doing business, but Hunt officials later said Bledsoe was fired.

A Hunt family spokesman said the brothers, under investigation by the Security Exchange Commission and the Futures and Commodites Trading Commission, would not comment on the indictment.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Jay Effington, who is handling the case, also refused to comment, saying only that the indictment had been returned.

The Hunts hired Bledsoe in 1965 after he spent five years with Texaco, Inc. He rose from an oil and gas lease surveyor to his position as vice president before he left the company.

Last year a Dallas County grand jury declined to consider the fraud charges against the Bledsoes when evidence was presented to them.

Loren Still Owes Italy A Bundle

ROME (AP) — Sophia Loren, who still hasn't served the 30-day jail sentence she drew last summer on tax-related charges, still owes Italy $685,000 in back taxes, the finance ministry contends.

The ministry made the disclosure Wednesday as part of its campaign against tax evasion.

The actress' name was on a list of 200,000 Italian individuals and companies said to owe a total of $1.6 billion in back taxes.

Finance Minister Franco Reviglio said the figure given for Miss Loren takes into account her tax returns through 1974.

In addition to the jail term, Miss Loren, who lives in Paris, was ordered to pay a $12,000 fine last summer on charges that her legal advisers failed to file a tax return for her in 1963.

Her lawyers quoted her at the time as saying she was willing to return to Italy and go to jail.

Tire Thefts Under Probe By Officers

Wednesday afternoon and Thursday morning, police investigated reports of stolen truck tires, worked one minor accident, took a criminal mischief report and picked up a man for Driving While Intoxicated.

A man at the Beacon Motel called police this morning at 8:36 and reported two of the spare tires to his truck had been stolen. Investigating further, police discovered a total of five tires had been stolen at the Beacon from different companies. Value was set at $1400.

It was also learned that three truck tires had been taken from Jim's Diesel which is across the street from the Beacon. Total value of the three tires was set at $900.

At 4:05 p.m. Wednesday, a 1971 Ford driven by Elisabeth Newby hit a stop sign at 25th and El Paso. Damage to the sign was set at $25.

At 12:35 a.m. Thursday, a 22 year-old male was picked up in the 1300 block of 25th St. and charged with DWI.

Reporting the criminal mischief was B.D. Bruyere who said someone had thrown a beer bottle through the back window of his pickup. A pickup belonging to Sun Pipe Line was also damaged.

Dear Abby

Natural Childbirth Raises Natural Fears

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I are in our early 20s and plan to have at least one child in the future. We are curious about "natural childbirth," where the mother is fully conscious and is given nothing for pain. Also, the father is present to coach her breathing and stays to witness the actual birth.

Personally, I wouldn't care to be present in the delivery room, yet I've heard that the father who witnesses the birth of his child feels much closer to the child as well as to his wife.

Abby, my parents and my wife's had a total of 11 children between them. Neither her father nor mine was present when any of their children were born, and none of us seems to have suffered any deprivation of love.

Our friends who have experienced natural childbirth praise it highly. The whole idea of natural childbirth — the mother's being conscious without taking anything for pain, and the father's witnessing the entire procedure — seems repugnant to both my wife and me. Although my wife has a fairly high tolerance for pain, she would prefer to have some type of anesthetic, and I really don't think I would love my child less if I sat in the waiting room during the delivery.

Our friends can't believe that we still prefer the old-fashioned private-type delivery. Is there something wrong with our thinking?

CURIOUS IN N.H.

DEAR CURIOUS: There is nothing "wrong" with your thinking, but since you are curious about natural childbirth, you should learn more about it. Your doctor, or friends who have praised it, can provide you with some illuminating literature on the subject.

DEAR ABBY: A couple with whom my husband and I had been very close recently separated. (They weren't married, just living together.) The four of us had spent many wonderful times together. To make a long story short, Lisa has been using my husband's shoulder to cry on. Doug (my husband) has taken Lisa's side of it, and he is no longer friendly to Lisa's former boyfriend.

I always had the feeling that Doug had more than just a brotherly feeling about Lisa, although in the 10 years we have been married, he hasn't given me any reason to be jealous.

Doug visits Lisa frequently at her apartment and she calls him on the phone at home and at work, but she always includes both of us when she entertains. Should I be worried?

M.A. FROM MASS.

DEAR M.A.: Worrying is non-productive. But do keep your eyes open. It may not be your husband's shoulder Lisa is after.

DEAR ABBY: RICHARD, a divorced U.S. Army officer, said he was shocked at the number of women who expect sex on the first date in repayment for a lovely evening. It's true. And these women spoil it for the rest of us.

Many men expect women to "put out" or get out on the first date. I'm talking about professionals — doctors, lawyers, college students, etc. — who come from good families.

There are a lot of men who refuse to date a woman unless they get to know her sexually. Who needs this kind of garbage and abuse? Sex devoid of love is a form of prostitution; women are using their bodies for trade and in the process they're degrading themselves.

Don't worry, RICHARD, there are still plenty of women out there who believe in romantic love and are real ladies.

I'm happy to see that real gentlemen exist, too.

Parenthood Takes Toll

HOOKSETT, N.H. (AP) — No one could deny that parenthood has taken its toll on Lynda and Timothy Henry.

They were driving from Manchester to a Concord hospital, but arrived late — because Sara Dodd Henry, 7 pounds, 14½ ounces, arrived early.

As they neared the Hooksett toll booth Wednesday, Mrs. Henry told her husband she'd never make it to the hospital. Toll booth attendants called for help and Sara was born shortly thereafter in an ambulance at the side of the turnpike.

C.H. Mullins, turnpike director, said Sara is the first baby born at the toll plaza since it was built in 1957.

ASTRO-GRAPH

Your Birthday

April 17

Things should begin to look up for you this coming year financially. Some of the seeds you've been sowing may be getting ready to yield a big harvest.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Partnership arrangements should turn out to be rewarding for you today, especially if you are involved with someone who has a knack for business. Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Give vent to your artistic and creative urges today. You're capable of producing something which will please you and others as well.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) This could be an exciting day romantically for unattached Geminis. Someone with whom you will hit it off instantly may enter the picture.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Shop around today for an item you've been debating about buying because of its price. There's a possibility it may not be offered at a figure within your means.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You're easily motivated today concerning your material goals, but what is more important is that you cn come up with the right bright ideas to achieve them.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If your ears are tingling a bit today it could be because associates are saying nice things about you. You may hear of it later.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Just because others may feel your present hopes are a bit outlandish, don't let this discourage you from pursuing them. They're more realistic than your associates think.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Progress will come more easily today if you try to find enjoyment, even where serious objectives are concerned. Whistle while you work.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You have the ability today to take complicated ideas and suggestions and refine them to their root values. You can make sense of what others can't.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) There's a strong possibility you might be in just the right spot today at the right time to benefit from something good that another has going.

Vascular Surgeon Finds Medical Serendipity

NEW YORK (AP) — Someone has defined serendipity as looking in a haystack for a needle and discovering the farmer's daughter.

For Julius Jacobson, a surgeon, it was looking for a way to cut and rejoin a small artery in the neck of an animal — and seeing in his solution a revolutionary surgical technique.

Dr. Jacobson solved his problem by using a microscope, an answer that led to a sudden realization: What a surgeon can see, he can do.

With a microscope, Jacobson was the first to perceive, a surgeon can work on the myriad arteries, veins and nerves commonly thought too small to survive scalpel and suture. And he nourished this idea, demonstrating many applications, improvising micro-scale instruments, overcoming the resistance of skeptical colleagues.

"It was serendipity," he says now, looking back 20 years, puffing a cigar in the dark-paneled library of his Fifth Avenue apartment near the Mount Sinai Hospital, where he is director of vascular, or blood vessel, surgery. "But you have to have a prepared mind."

Jacobson's innovation, microvascular surgery, opened a frontier in medicine. It has led to reimplantation of severed limbs, even the replacement of a lost thumb with a big toe (the "thoe"), the reversal of vasectomies, the reattachment of a complete scalp shorn in an accident, the repair of clogged heart arteries, and dramatically improved chances of surviving an operation to remove a tumor or rescue an aneurism deep inside the brain.

It was an obvious idea, really, as innovations often seem in retrospect. Ear surgeons, who do their work through a tiny opening, had been using microscopes for decades. Yet the imaginative leap of focusing a microscope on larger areas of the body was not made until 1960, when Jacobson took up his first job.

Why? "Chance," the French scientist Louis Pasteur said, "favors only the prepared mind."

Fresh from 16 years of training to be a surgeon, Jacobson was young, only 33, and people do their best work when young, he believes. As the newlynamed director of surgical research at the University of Vermont Medical School, he had a place and means to work: laboratories and research grants.

And along the way to becoming a surgeon, picking up a master's degree in cell physiology, he had spent several summers peering through a microscope. It was second nature to him.

More important, though, "I was taught early on that half of what's in the textbooks is wrong — if you only knew which half," he says.

The English author Horace Walpole coined the term serendipity to express the gift of finding unexpected treasures, through chance and sagacity, while pursuing something else. Jacobson's breakthrough came as he pondered a basic research problem posed by two pharmacologists.

They were studying the effects of a drug on blood vessels and asked him to help disconnect the nerves surrounding the animal's carotid artery. He quickly saw that the only way to do this completely was to cut the artery and sew it back together.

"I became interested in why it couldn't be done, because you could cut a large artery and put it together without any trouble.

"I came to the conclusion that it was not that the artery was too small but that the eye could not see to tell the hand what to do."

He fiddled with magnifying glasses, but these didn't work well. Then he remembered the day he had wandered into an ear, nose and throat operating room, where an ear surgeon was using a microscope.

Jacobson borrowed one and looked at the animal's artery, magnified 40 times. "It was like looking through a telescope at the moon for the first time, just a whole wealth of detail that we didn't know existed." Severing and rejoining the artery was easy.

Jacobson recognized immediately what he had done, and he quickly put the microscope to previously inconceivable uses. "We were just grinding out the papers. Every structure — arteries, veins, nerves, ureters, vas deferens — every little tubular structure in the body that we could join together, we did."

Within a year, he was sewing together vessels one millimeter in diameter, roughly the size of paper clip wire. "The whole operating field is smaller than the head of a book match."

The Zeiss company in Germany now makes suitable microscopes.

Saipan Residents Fighting Identity Problem

SAIPAN, Northern Marianas (AP) — A hot-selling line of T-shirts here bears the boldly printed question: "Where the hell is Saipan?"

"A lot of people don't know if it's a place or a condition," says Rich Hoyt, of the local radio station, KSAI.

For those in doubt, the Chinese-owned, American-managed Hyatt-Regency hotel has a milepost in the front garden which locates the tiny Western Pacific island precisely: Tokyo 1,513 miles, Taipei 1,639 Manila 1,600, Los Angeles 7,620, New York 9,100, Honolulu 3,300.

Thousands of American GIs and their Japanese opponents who fought here in World War II don't need signposts to Saipan.

This island was one of the bloodiest battlegrounds of the Pacific war. More than 3,000 American Marines were killed and 11,000 wounded storming over the reef and onto the beaches in June 1944.

Only 600 of the 30,000 Japanese defenders survived. Hundreds of Japanese soldiers and civilians leapt to their deaths from a 1,000-foot cliff rather than face capture. It is now known as Suicide Cliff or Banzai Point.

Today, busloads of Japanese tourists visit a viewing point at the top of Suicide Cliff, and stand silently, observing the jungle below. They have their photographs taken beside rusting Japanese guns.

The Saipanese welcome them. They see Japanese tourism as the key to their economic future.

"This place is going to be the Caribbean of Japan," says Erwin Canham, former editor of the Christian Science Monitor and the last American assistant commissioner in the Northern Marianas.

He helped draft the constitution and organize the first elections for a local governor in 1975. He retired here to a house overlooking the lagoon and reef where the rusting turrets of American tanks still appear at low tide.

"Before the war this was a Japanese colony," Canham says. "There were 50,000 to 70,000 Japanese living here. It was a big town, even had a cable car running down the main street."

The war blew away every structure on the 47.5-squaremile island. The island was almost denuded of vegetation. It had to be re-seeded from the air.

Saipan's first bath house since World War II opened recently. More than 100,000 Japanese visitors, mostly young honeymooners, visited the island last year, bringing in $52 million.

"We are within the American family, but we are looking elsewhere if the Americans don't come. We don't have the option to refuse the Japanese," says Gov. Carlos S. Camacho, 44, governor of the Commonwealth of the Northern Marianas.

While the Japanese come for fun, the 15,000 inhabitants of the tiny group of 16 islands, of which eight are inhabited, are facing the problems of a newly emerging territory with no natural resources.

Discovered by Ferdinand Magellan in 1521, colonized by Spain until 1899, sold to Germany, captured by Japan in 1914, the Marianas were governed by the U.S. Navy from World War II until 1951.

Then they became part of the U.S. Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands known collectively as Micronesia.

The United States promoted the idea of a Micronesian federation. But the Northern Marianas people wrote their own constitution and became a commonwealth of the United States in 1976.

The United Nations must approve the arrangements before agreeing to the end of the trusteeship.

Almost no food is grown in the Northern Marianas. As a result, almost 60 percent of the population gets food surplus handouts, dried milk, eggs, and peanut butter from the U.S.

Hair Spray Can Help 'Flyaway'

DARIEN, Conn. (AP) — Static electricity, caused by lack of moisture in the environment, can cause your hair to "fly" and be uncontrollable.

A thin coating of hair spray with anti-static properties will prevent this common problem, said Priscilla Riley, a hair designer and consultant to the Aerosol Packaging Council.

Special Services Being Held At Trinity UMC

An "Adventure in Prayer Services" is now underway at Trinity United Methodist Church.

Presenting special messages during the series is Dr. Marshall Rhew, a retired pastor who now serves as associate director of development for McMurry college.

Dr. Rhew's first message was presented Wednesday night, and he will preach again at 7 p. m. tonight, following a church supper set for 6:30 p. m.

The Friday schedule includes breakfast at 7 a. m. at First United Methodist Church, prayer service at 2:30 p. m. at Dunn United Methodist Church, and another 7 p. m. service at Trinity.

DR. RHEW

Rev. Rhew is a native of Honey Grove, but grew up in Dallas where he entered the ministry in 1932. He attended Texas Tech and later transferred to Southern Methodist University where he received bachelors and masters degrees. McMurry College conferred the doctor of divinity degree on him in 1957. He has held appointments in Lubbock, Lueders, Vega, Abernathy, Roscoe, Borger, Stamford, Vernon, Sweetwater and Plainview. In addition, he has served as District Superintendent of the Stamford and Seymour Districts. He has served on a number of United Methodist boards, including the boards of trustees of McMurry and of Methodist Hospital at Lubbock. In 1960, he was an exchange pastor to Central Hall Methodist Church, Great Yarmouth, England.

The public is invited to attend the services, said the Rev. James Merrell, paator.

The motto of the state of Idaho, Esto Perpetua, means "Let It Be Forever."

Registration Deadline Near

Friday is the last day to register for the watercolor workshop scheduled for April 24-25 at Western Texas College.

Rob Erdle, assistant professor of art at North Texas State University, will be the instructor. Fees are $15 for both days or $10 for one day.

On both days, sessions will run from 9 a. m. to 12 noon and 1 p. m. to 4 p. m.

Persons wishing details about the workshop are to call the Fine Arts office at 573-8511, extension 234. A supply list will be furnished each participant upon payment of the registration fee.

Sure Cures Worthless

ATLANTA (AP) — You can sit in an abandoned radium mine or take a dose of Chinese herbs, but you will not cure your arthritis.

These are just some of the quack devices and "miracle" cures many arthritis patients turn to, says Dr. Frederick C. McDuffie of the Arthritis Foundation. They do no good and in some cases can do harm.

Although there is no known cure for arthritis, McDuffie says, the disease can be controlled with proper drugs. He also recommends exercise, and that patients learn about their disease and seek out proven treatment methods.

WTC LIVE CONTEST WINNERS—Lynda Cain took honorable mention in TV announcing and Ken Grimm placed second in broadcast newswriting at the Texas Intercollegiate Press Association convention. Several other WTC journalists were in the contests.

Bacall Says No Long Line

NEW YORK (AP) — It's not quite as easy as she once assured Humphrey Bogart. But Lauren Bacall, who told him in one film if he ever needed her to "just whistle," isn't as hard to get as the star-struck might imagine.

"People who don't know me think, 'She's got a long line of men around the block waiting to take her out.' Well, it isn't true, that's all," the husky-voiced actress is quoted as saying in the May issue of McCall's magazine.

"I don't know why actresses seem so intimidating," said Miss Bacall, currently starring in Broadway's "Woman of the Year." But, she added, "some men are very unsure of themselves, are just too frightened."

It's her perfectionism that frightens off men, Bogart's widow says, but she has "been burned quite a few times and I'm not really looking forward to being burned too many times again."

Moscow announced in 1958 the removal of former premier Nikolai Bulganin from the Soviet communist party presidium.

WTC Journalists Place In Contests

Two Western Texas College journalists won places in the live press contests staged by the Texas Intercollegiate Press Association during the 69th annual convention at Southwest Texas State University in San Marcos.

Ken Grimm of Abilene, staff artist for The Western Texan, WTC student newspaper, took second place in broadcast news writing, while Lynda Cain of Coral Springs, Fla., editor of Trailblazer, campus yearbook and assistant editor of The Western Texan, took honorable mention in television announcing.

Also representing WTC in live competition were Gary Atwood of Snyder, sports editor, headline writing; Billy Fowler of Jayton, photographer, radio announcing; Beth Pumphrey of Old Glory, staff writer, news writing; J. D. Helm of Abilene, editor of the Western Texan, editorial writing; Tracie Gilstrap of Snyder, assistant editor of the Western Texan, advertising copy writing and layout; Linda Belvin of Loraine, assistant editor of The Western Texan, feature writing, and Cain, commercial copy writing.

University journalists competing in the contests represented Southwest Texas State, Lamar, Stephen F. Austin State, Texas A&I, UT-Arlington, Sul Ross state, Wayland Baptist, Angelo State, UT Permian Basin, UT-Tyler, Hardin-Simmons, Texas Wesleyan, Howard Payne, McMurry and Abilene Christian.

Junior and community college students in the competition were from Amarillo, Lee (Baytown), Midland, South Plains (Levelland), Angelina (Lufkin), Howard (Big Spring), Southwest Texas (Uvalde), Bee County (Beeville), Eastfield (Dallas), Paris, Temple, Odessa, Kilgore, Tarrant County South (Fort Worth), Tarrant County Northwest (Fort Worth), Tarrant County Northeast (Fort Worth), Henderson County (Athens), McLennan (Waco), Cisco, North Harris (Houston), Richland (Dallas) and WTC.

"I am very proud of Ken and Lynda because of their very stiff competition, but I'm also proud of all our representatives in the contests. They are to be commended for their fine efforts against some of the best college journalists in the state," said Dr. Mike McBride, WTC publications adviser.

During an adviser's learning session led by Jan Rawson of Citrus College in Asuza, Calif., and Tom Kramer of Pierce College in Los Angeles, McBride was named to chair a state press committee on special services set up to investigate articulation and transfer, national advertising, recruiting practices and policy reference.

Keynote speakers for the conference were Joe Murray, publisher of the Pulitzer Prize-winning Lufkin Daily News; Arthur Ginsberg, former chief of the FCC Complaints and Compliance Division in Washington, and John Kelso, columnist for the Austin American-Statesman.

HEALTH

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

No longer rings the bell

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Before my prostate operation I had plenty of women after me. Since my operation I can't seem to hold a steady girlfriend. There were two I wanted to marry. They dumped me after I had sex with them. I want to know if it is because I'm shooting blanks and they get no feeling from me. No one will tell me why, only that I should find someone else, and that I should cool it with them.

I'm a perfect specimen, in good health, very good build, 5 feet 9, 173 pounds, with my head of hair and my own teeth. I'm clean cut and good looking.

They won't tell me but I believe they all dump me because I don't ring the bell anymore. Why can't they transplant a prostate like they do a heart so you can have a 100 percent climax. Incidentally, I'm 63 but I look 55.

DEAR READER — With all those good credentials, I'll get a lot of mail from women who would like to meet you. You don't sound like you are doing too bad.

I suppose we would all like to stay young forever and enjoy the pleasures of youth without its frustrations and problems. You really do not know that your responses are because of prostate surgery. It isn't unusual for a man to slow down a bit at your age. And maybe you would do a lot better with women who realized that you are 63 and not 28.

Your letter should give encouragement to many men who wonder if there is sex after prostate surgery. How you do depends some on the type of surgery and your general medical status. It is true that retrograde ejaculation is the rule. But that should not diminish the overall sensation.

To explain this more fully to you, I am sending you The Health Letter number 15-6, Prostate Gland Problems. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

In middle age and older, too much prostate gland is the problem, so I doubt there will be much enthusiasm about transplanting one. It wouldn't prevent the retrograde discharge anyway; that is related to valves at the outlet of the bladder. Be happy and enjoy your good looks, youthful appearance and the fact that you are still attractive to women.

DEAR DR. LAMB — What is Paget's disease? Is it untreatable? I noticed the additional notation on my doctor's statement, but I was given no new medications. I'm 76 years old. I have been jerking and itching. Is that part of Paget's disease?

DEAR READER — Paget's disease is a disease of the bone. Mostly the bone degenerates and then regenerates. The changes cause the area involved to be weak.

It occurs in many people without causing any symptoms at all and may be an incidental finding in an otherwise long life. In other instances it produces symptoms that vary according to which bones are damaged. If the vertebrae are involved, that may cause pain from pressure on the spinal nerves. If the skull is involved it may cause headaches.

During the last 10 years a lot of progress has been made in treating Paget's disease, even though we still don't know what causes it. Calcitonin, a hormone that inhibits bone resorption, is one of the agents used in many cases. There are other medicines as well. Often these will stop the pain if that is a feature of the involvement.

Family Law Class Delayed

Persons wishing to enroll are to pre-register by calling the continuing education office at 573-8511, extension 240.

RANK HIGH IN CONTESTS—This Snyder Junior High 8th Grade Band received a Division I (superior) rating in concert playing and a Division II (excellent) rating in sightreading in University Interscholastic League contests at Abilene. The band is directed by Scott Mason and Chrystal Franklin.

Vickie Accuses Daniel Of Weird Relationship

LIBERTY, Texas (AP) — Jean Daniel Murph, accused of having a "weird" relationship with her brother, Price Daniel Jr., said those accusations are the product of an overactive imagination and a "sick mind."

Daniel's widow, Vickie Daniel, took the witness stand again Wednesday at a child custody hearing Mrs. Murph filed to wrest custody of the Daniels' two youngest sons.

Asked by Mrs. Murph's attorney, J.C. "Zeke" Zbranek, if she thought the brother-sister relationship was weird, Mrs. Daniel replied that she did.

"He (Daniel) pushed his knee between her legs and would push up and kiss her," Mrs. Daniel said.

Mrs. Murph, who filed the custody suit after Mrs. Daniel was charged with murder in the Jan. 19 shooting death of her husband, hotly denied there was anything abnormal about her relationship with her brother.

" ... that is insanity," she said outside the courtroom. "It never occurred. It's just indicative of all the other stories she told. It's just imagination ... it's indicative of a sick mind."

Mrs. Daniel's accusatory testimony — in a hearing that already has produced sensational claims of child molesting, drug abuse, alcoholism and sexual deviancy — was followed by a shouting match between her attorney, Richard "Racehorse" Haynes, and Zbranek over the admissibility of a bag reported to contain some marijuana Daniel owned.

Haynes and a colleague in Mrs. Daniel's defense, Andrew Lannie, both testified they found the bag in a shed near Daniel's law office.

Zbranek objected to admitting the bag into evidence saying, "it's obvious the bag was illegally obtained."

Haynes replied that the "exclusionary rule" — a Texas statute that prohibits illegally obtained evidence from being used in a criminal trial — did not apply to civil cases.

Family Court Judge Sam S. Emison Jr. sent the jury out of the courtroom during the heated exchange and told the two attorneys to "show me some law" to help settle the legal question when the hearing resumes Thursday morning.

Earlier Wednesday, Dr. Grady Browning, a Tyler psychologist, testified that both Daniel children were "normal" and that their raising "would speak well for, either the mother or the father."

Some Angora sweaters are made of rabbit hair — the long, soft fur of the Angora rabbit. The animals originally were selected and bred for their luxuriant fur, probably in Turkey, according to National Geographic.

Cool Contest In Montreal...

Baseball Not Always So Hot

by The Associated Press

All baseball players dream of swinging a hot bat. On Wednesday in Montreal, even that didn't help them make it through the frosty day.

The record books will show that the Montreal Expos beat the Chicago Cubs 5-4 in their home opener, but the chill in the players' bones will be remembered long after the score is forgotten.

"I prayed we weren't going to play 13 or 14 innings out there," said Gary Carter, whose eighth-inning single capped a two-run rally that won the game for Montreal.

"I couldn't feel my hands, I couldn't feel my ears and my nose was running," Carter said. "I can't wait to get into the sauna. It was the coldest game I ever played in."

The game-time temperature was announced as 39 degrees, but third baseman Larry Parrish said the chewing tobacco in his back pocket froze and he found ice patches on the field. A biting wind made it feel 20 degrees colder.

"It was so cold that you'd get to the plate and wouldn't be able to feel the bat in your hand," said Andre Dawson, who singled home the tying run in the eighth and scored the winner on Carter's hit.

In other National League action, the New York Mets defeated St. Louis 5-3, Houston blanked Atlanta 2-0, Philadelphia edged Pittsburgh 4-3 in 11 innings, Cincinnati bombed San Diego 10-1 and Los Angeles took San Francisco 4-2 to remain unbeaten.

Chicago had a 4-3 lead going into the eighth inning and Cubs reliever Bill Caudill had retired 10 batters in a row before walking Rodney Scott with one out.

Scott stole second and Dawson then singled off reliever Dick Tidrow, 1-1, to score Scott and tie the game 4-4. An error on an attempted pickoff throw by Tidrow sent Dawson to third before Carter blooped a single to right-center field.

Stan Bahnsen, 1-0, was the winner in relief of Steve Rogers, pitching the last two innings.

Astros 2, Braves 0

Nolan Ryan struck out nine to pass Bob Gibson for third place on the all-time strikeout list and gave up only three hits in seven innings to outlast hard-luck Atlanta pitcher Tommy Boggs.

Boggs had a no-hitter for six innings, but he gave up a hit to Craig Reynolds in the seventh and surrendered two runs with a throwing error and a wild pitch.

Frank LaCorte pitched the last two innings, allowing only one hit for his first save.

A's Leap To 7-0 Start; Rangers Zap Indians

by The Associated Press

The Oakland A's pitchers are starting this season where they left off last year. And so are the Oakland hitters, particularly Tony Armas.

The A's, who set a major-league record last year for complete games with 94, got another complete game out of a starter when Rick Langford went the distance Wednesday night in a 5-3 victory over the California Angels. That's the sixth time in seven games this year that a starter has completed a game for the undefeated A's.

Meanwhile, Armas, hoping to match last season's home-run total of 35, slugged his fourth of the season.

"If 7-0 isn't rolling, nothing is," said Manager Billy Martin. "It's just great. The kids are excited and we're going home Friday to a sold-out crowd. I'd take 7-0 any time of the year."

Armas obviously has been one of the catalysts of the best-ever start in Oakland history.

"He threw me a fastball down the middle and I just was swinging hard," said Armas of his three-run shot off Andy Hassler in the eighth inning that capped a four-run rally after the A's had been down 3-0. "I couldn't believe he would pitch to me so late in the game with a right-hander up in the bullpen. Actually, I haven't had much luck against him before. He usually gets me out with his sinker."

In other AL action, the Seattle Mariners edged the Minnesota Twins 6-5; the Boston Red Sox beat the Baltimore Orioles 7-2; the Chicago White Sox stopped the Milwaukee Brewers 5-4; the Texas Rangers rocked the Cleveland Indians 8-0; the New York Yankees beat the Toronto Blue Jays 6-3 and the Detroit Tigers blanked the Kansas City Royals 4-0.

Rangers 8, Indians 0

Al Oliver knocked in three runs with a homer, a double and a fielder's choice grounder to back the solid pitching of Doc Medich and help Texas beat Cleveland. Medich, making his first start of the year, scattered five hits in 7⅓ innings before he tired in the eighth inning and yielded to reliever John Henry Johnson.

The game was costly for the Indians, who lost catcher Ron Hassey in a home-plate collision with Bump Wills in the seventh inning. Hassey suffered an injury to his left leg and was carried off on a stretcher and taken to a local hospital.

Slugging Tigers Boast .358 Team Bat Average

Snyder's Tigers, looking to wrap up a round-one District 2-AAAA baseball championship next week, are finding their success by shelling opponents this season.

Averaging almost 11 hits a game, the Tigers are batting .358 as a team - superior in anybody's book.

The bat strength - aided by constantly improved pitching - has pushed the locals to a 4-0 district round-one record. Snyder can sew up the round-one title with a victory here Tuesday against Pecos, or one on the road the following Friday at Lamesa.

Leading all Tiger hitters - those with 25 or more at bats - is Perry Echols, who has slammed two home runs in slugging at a .488 pace. Several other Bengals boast over .400 averages 22 games into the season, including Brent Roemisch, .418, Gary Edmaiston, .415, and Curtis Gafford, .434. Several others are in the high 300's, and still others who have been to the plate less than 25 times are in the 4's and 3's.

Tony Degrate, Snyder's top pitcher with a 6-1 record, is another heavy hitter, having blown six shots out of the park. Mike Roemisch has five homers to credit and Barry Davis and Brent Roemisch both have five. Completing Snyder's awesome 24 home runs in only 21 games are Echols and Neil Evans with two each and Jesse Hernandez with one.

VERNON -- Coach Winfred Shipp takes his varsity boys track team here tomorrow for a final tuneup before the April 24-25 District 2-AAAA Track and Field Meet.

Seven varsity teams are expected to compete in this year's annual Lion Relays, to be held at Lion Stadium here. Officials have scheduled a freshman and a varsity division. Snyder however, will compete only on the varsity level.

Teams entered are Snyder, Altus, Okla., Iowa Park, Wichita Falls Rider, Vernon, Wichita Falls High and Wichita Falls Hirschi.

The meet opens at 10 a.m. with field events and running preliminaries. Finals will start at 2 p.m.

Coach Shipp relayed that two primary concerns for the meet were the mile relay team and the running of Glenn Parham in the intermediate hurdles.

Shipp had planned to run Parham in the intermediates since the start of the season, but the sophomore has suffered nagging leg problems. Doctors allowed him to compete in other events, but apparently have now given him the okay to try the hurdles. One of Snyder's top point producers this season, Parham has won the high jump at two meets, and runs on the mile relay team.

Along with Parham in the relay are Raymond Jeffery, Keith Wallace and Matt Davis.

"We hope to get the relay down to a 25 (3:25)," said Shipp, "But I'd be pleased with a 30 (3:30)."

The foursome, which will be running together for only the second time this week, turned in a 3:35 last weekend.

Wallace has proven to be another strength for Snyder's young team this season, competing well in the 400 meters and long jump, among other events.

Shipp added sophomore Ross Bawcum threw the shot 45 feet twice in practice this week and the Tigers are looking for him to do well Friday also.

After a century of exploration, the United States has more than half a million producing oil wells. Saudi Arabia has only about 725. Yet, on the average, each Saudi well pumps 800 times as much oil as an American well. Altogether, the Saudi wells can outproduce American wells by more than a million barrels a day.

Spurs, Rockets To DecideSeries...

Texas Shootout Friday

by The Associated Press

In Texas, the visitin' folks still feel right at home.

Wednesday night, for the fourth time in six National Basketball Association playoff games between Houston and San Antonio, the hosts were most gracious. This time it was the Rockets, who allowed the Spurs to win 101-96.

That sends their Western Division semifinal series back to San Antonio for Friday night's decisive seventh game - and the Spurs hope the home-court hex will finally vanish.

"We've had such a strong home record all season, and now I hope it comes back to us," said George Gervin, who led the Spurs with 26 points. "It's time now for us to take advantage of our fans screaming at us to put it away."

In the NBA's other Western semifinal, Kansas City failed to wrap things up, losing 101-89 to Phoenix. The Kings lead the series 3-2. And in the remaining Eastern semifinal (the Boston Celtics won their series from Chicago in four straight), Philadelphia took a 3-2 lead with a 116-99 triumph over Milwaukee.

Moses Malone, who had 36 points and 10 rebounds for the Rockets, saw the game as "an opportunity to jump and strut and celebrate tonight. Things just didn't go our way. It seems like we've just got to do things the hard way."

That's the way it's been all year for the Rockets, trying to become the first team in 13 years to reach an NBA conference final with a losing record (40-42) in the regular season.

Calvin Murphy, who had 20 points, put Houston ahead 90-87 with 7 minutes to play, but Gervin, Paul Griffin and Mark Olberding hit successive baskets to put San Antonio in front to stay.

Suns 101, Kings 89

Truck Robinson scored 15 points and grabbed 20 rebounds to keep Phoenix's hopes alive. "We had to have that type of effort," he said. "There was no other alternative."

Walter Davis scored 16 of his 20 points in the first half, including six in a 19-2 Suns burst that gave them a 47-31 lead with 3:42 remaining in the second period. Kansas City cut the margin to 10 points in the fourth period before Robinson led a late charge that widened it to 20 with barely three minutes to play.

76ers 116, Bucks 99

Lionel Hollins and Maurice Cheeks scored 20 points apiece and Julius Erving had 19 as Philadelphia moved within one game of eliminating the Bucks and setting up yet another 76ers-Celtics confrontation.

Sidney Moncrief and Mickey Johnson each had 20 points for Milwaukee, which shaved a 15-point Philly lead to six points with about 8 minutes to play but couldn't get any closer.

Diamonds Win To Deadlock Series

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Forward Nancy Lieberman shook off an injury and scored 31 points to lead the Dallas Diamonds to a 106-93 victory over the Nebraska Wranglers in the Women's Professional Basketball League championship playoff series Wednesday night.

The decision left the teams tied 1-1 in the best-of-five series, which continues Friday night in Dallas.

Lieberman, who suffered an ankle injury early during a loss to the Wranglers Tuesday night, said it bothered her early in the game as she started toward her game-leading total. She hit on 11 of 22 field goal attempts and 9 of 12 free throws.

The Diamonds, in front 50-33 at the half, led by as many as 20 before Nebraska cut the margin to 5 late in the game. A free-throw spree locked it up for the Texas team.

Nebraska played without forward Charlotte Lewis, who suffered a leg injury Tuesday night. Rosie Walker led the Wranglers with 20 points.

CORRECTION: Agate results of the final WJCAC Golf Tournament which ran in Wednesday's edition incorrectly reported WTC's Richard White as tournament medalist. LINDA HOLUBEC
...signs with NTSU

Holubec Signs Letter With North Texas St.

Linda Holubec, a two-year starter for Western Texas College's Dusters, has signed a letter with North Texas State University in Denton, announced Coach Joe Cushing.

Holubec, a 5-10 sophomore from Eola, chose NTSU over several schools, including the University of Missouri.

"We're elated for Linda," said Cushing. "She'll definately help their program there. She's one of the most dedicated young ladies to the game of basketball I've ever run across. We're sorry to see her go but we're happy she's found a home. She's been a credit to Western Texas and Snyder during her past two years here."

Holubec, dubbed the "Snyder Spider", averaged 16 points and seven rebounds a game before suffering a knee injury which kept her on the bench for the last eight games of the season. Despite missing the games, she was named second team All-Conference in the WJCAC. Also chosen to the Howard College Tournament all-tournament team this year and named All-Conference as a freshman, Holubec was a co-captain for the 1980-81 campaign. She currently shares the Dusters' record of most field goals made in a single game, 13, set in the 1979-80 season.

A computer science major, she carries a 4.0 grade point average.

NTSU, with an enrollment of 17,000, has recently remodled its athletic facilities. The women's basketball program is under second-year coach Denise Smith.

SHSU Claims Golfing Title

AUSTIN (AP) - Bucky Smith of Southwest Texas took medalist honors with a 1-over-par 289 but Sam Houston held off Smith and his mates by three strokes for the team championship at the Lone Star Conference golf tournament Wednesday.

Smith won the individual crown despite a bogey-bogey finish at the Jimmy Clay Municipal Golf Course and beat runners-up Mark Whitaker, a Southwest Texas teammate, and Phil Estep of Sam Houston who both finished at 292.

The win gave Sam Houston its fourth straight LSC golf title and the right to compete for the NAIA national championship.

Sam Houston finished with a team total of 1,170 with Southwest Texas finishing second at 1,173.

Rounding out the team standings were Stephen F. Austin at 1,185; Angelo State with 1,228; Abilene Christian, 1,233; East Texas State, 1,233; Texas A&I, 1245; and Howard Payne, 1,382.

Martin Leads Hartford Open

WINDSOR LOCKS, Conn. (AP) — Steve Martin charted into the second round lead in the $95,000 Greater Hartford Open bowling tournament.

Martin, who was tied for 44th after one round of six games, started the second session with scores of 175 and 213, but recovered with games of 289, 278, 257 and 268, totalled 1,480 to boost his 12-game pinfall to 1,780, and assumed a three-pin lead over Mark Roth.

Judoists Set For Training

Four local judoists have been accepted to the U.S. Olympic Judo Training Camp, to be held July 12-26 in Colorado Springs, Colo., Dr. Shel Hillis, WTC judo coach, said.

The four are Eric Johnson, from Rogers, Ark.; Blake Riggs, Midland; Mark Thomas, Wichita Falls; all students at WTC, and Kenneth Levens, Stamford, a former WTC judo member. Hillis also plans to attend the camp.

The training camp is designed to prepare promising young judoists for international competition, Hillis said. There are camps for judo players of all ages at different times, and they offer "exceptional opportunities for intensive training under expert guidance."

Western Texas holds the Texas Collegiate Judo Championships and offers judo as a college credit physical education course as well as a Continuing Education course for non-students.

Rodgers Prepares For Boston Marathon Again

TULSA, Okla. (AP) - Bill Rodgers, seeking his fifth victory in the Boston Marathon and fourth in a row, is approaching the race with his usual trepidation.

"It will be no different than any other time at Boston," said the nation's No.1 marathoner. "I always get kind of afraid of a marathon. The marathon is such a hard race that you always worry. It's a gruelling event."

Rodgers, holder of the American record of 2 hours, 9 minutes, 27 seconds, set at Boston in 1979, added that it will take "total concentration" to win again. "It's an all-out effort. You've got to have the will, not just endurance."

Rodgers is concerned about his chances of winning this time because of the strength of the field and a siege of the flu he suffered two weeks ago, which slowed his training program.

"I thought before I got the flu I was fit enough for anywhere from a 2:09 to a 2:12 on a perfect day," he said after winning a 10-kilometer race last Saturday, his final tuneup for the marathon.

"I'd love to get a record," he continued. "On the other hand, there's always the possibility I could be dropping out of this race.

"It's going to be a very high quality race. It's going to be a real dogfight."

Rodgers figures that Japan's Toshihiko Seko will be his toughest competitor in the 26-mile, 385-yard event.

Seko has dominated the elite Fukuoka Marathon in Japan the way Rodgers has mastered Boston, which he won in 1975 and each of the past three years.

Melton Among Citrus Favorites

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Nancy Lopez-Melton and Beth Daniel, who have dominated the women's golf circuit for the past three years, are among the favorites in the Lady Citrus golf tournament starting today.

Not only that, they are paired together in the first two rounds in the $100,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association event that will draw 90 pros to the Rio Pinar Country Club.

Another strong prospect is Donna Caponi, the one-stroke winner of last week's LPGA tournament in Raleigh, N.C.

The 6,209-yard Rio Pinar Course can be treacherous, particularly in the wind. Par is 73.

"I feel pretty good about the way I'm playing," said Lopez-Melton, winner of Player of the Year awards and leading money winner in 1978 and 1979.

"The fairways aren't in real good shape but the course is good," said Lopez-Melton, a first-time entrant here. "It requires accuracy off the tee. And the greens are in real good shape."

Daniel earned the same two titles last year and will play in a threesome today and Friday with Lopez-Melton and Alice Miller.

Donna Horton White, who won by a stroke over Jane Blalock last year, is pregnant and will miss this year's tournament, officials said. But Blalock, winner of the first tournament in 1979, will try again.

The field includes seven of the top 10 money winners and 14 of the top 20.

From 1941 into the 1943 baseball season, outfielder Danny Litwhiler of the Philadelphia Phillies handled 426 chances without an error.

Astronauts Questioned By Battery Of Experts

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — With specialists firing questions and tape recorders spinning, Columbia's astronauts are going over all the technical details of their historic flight, hoping their answers will speed the day when the spaceship can start operations as a space-faring cargo ship.

John Young and Robert Crippen were to conclude the first phase of the week-long debriefing today, with discussions on the performance of Columbia's steering jets, electronics, computers and other systems.

They returned to Earth Tuesday — a perfect landing on a desert runway at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., concluding a near-flawless 2¼-day flight of the 80-ton spaceship.

What the astronauts tell the experts about the flight could help accelerate Columbia's switch from a test vehicle to an operational space freighter, carrying satellites and experiments into orbit for industry, scientists and the Pentagon.

The present schedule calls for three more Columbia test flights, each longer and more demanding on its systems. Because of the success of the maiden flight, National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials said they are considering cutting the last one.

That could move ahead by several months the first operational mission, a communications satellite now set for launching in September, 1982. NASA and the Pentagon plan eventually to operate a fleet of at least four shuttles, each capable of carrying up to seven persons and 65,000 pounds of cargo. Each would make 100 or more roundtrips into orbit.

Officials said the pinpoint landing on Tuesday has them thinking about landing the spaceship sooner than planned on a 15,000-foot runway at Cape Canaveral, Fla. That present is set for the fifth flight.

Rogers Dry Lake was selected as the prime landing site for the test flights because it is long and wide, leaving margin for error if touchdown is not perfect. But Young and Crippen set Columbia down "right on the money" according to NASA officials.

Technicians today were continuing their extensive inspection of the spaceship at Edwards. It is to leave there Tuesday strapped atop a special Boeing 747 jetliner. After an overnight stop at Tinker Air Force Base, Okla., Columbia will return to its launch site Wednesday — the first spacecraft ever to make such a trip.

The craft will be refurbished for its second test flight, a four-day mission set for September. The astronauts picked to fly the test, Joe Engle and Richard Truly, have been training for several months.

Young and Crippen are to receive physical examinations Friday. They'll take the weekend off, then return for three more days of debriefings and to write their pilot reports. They will tell the story of their flight at a news conference next Thursday, April 23.

Gramm Bucks Party's Appropriations Stand

CHARLES RICHARDS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — When the House Budget Committee revamped President Reagan's spending request last week, cutting appropriations for defense and allocating more funds for social programs, all but one of its 18 Democrats voted yes in what was almost a straight party vote at 17-13.

"I think they'll find out that I'm not alone," said the lone Democratic dissenter, Rep. Phil Gramm of Texas. "But of course they've known that all along. Thinking I was going to go along when they vote to raise the president's budget by $32 billion was just ridiculous."

He and 43 other conservative Democrats in the House belong to a relatively new coalition known as the Conservative Democratic Forum, which has banded generally behind President Reagan's call for more severe spending cuts.

Gramm says most of the 44 will join with an expected solid Republican vote and overcome the 26-vote Democratic edge in the House.

"We already have a substantial number of conservative Democrats who have given commitments to support the bipartisan Reagan budget" as opposed to the Democratic alternative offered by Rep. Jim Jones, D-Okla., the Budget Committee chairman, Gramm said in an interview.

Gramm and Rep. Delbert Latta of Ohio, the ranking Republican on the Budget Committee, submitted a budget with even more severe cuts than Reagan's, but it was beaten back in committee. That bill, Gramm said, was the result of extended consultation that included other conservative Democrats and David Stockman, the president's chief budget operative.

The bill will be offered again on the floor of the House, where Gramm said the CDF support should produce a victory.

Gramm, a second-term congressman from College Station, has come under fire for his maverick ways, particularly from the House Democratic leadership, which has urged Democrats to stay with the party line.

"That has never sold with me. When I came to Congress, I swore allegiance to the Constitution, not to the Democratic Party," said the 38-year-old former economics professor at Texas A&M.

"I've come under a little fire as a result, yes, but this is the third year I've been very active in the budget debate. The reason the opposition is so hot is not that I'm doing anything any differently, but their perception that this time the conservatives may win."

Gramm says the budget fight is "one of those things that comes along every two or three terms" when a congressman has to put party considerations aside.

"I believe this is the most important issue of the 97th Congress, and I believe the future of the country depends on this budget. I am not going to let partisan politics stand between me and what's good for the country," he added.

President's Mother Loses Title Fight

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — President Jean-Claude Duvalier's mother has lost the title of "First Lady of the Republic" to her new daughter-in-law.

The move announced by government proclamation Tuesday could be a major victory for the mulatto bride in the power struggle with her mother-in-law, a member of Haiti's black majority and widow of dictator Francois "Papa Doc" Duvalier.

Duvalier's mother, Simone Duvalier, was given the new title, "First Lady of the Revolution," for life.

A fight for influence in the palace has raged between the two women in recent months. In the last two months, Michelle Bennett Duvalier, 30, appeared to have gained the upper hand against her mother-in-law, who is in her mid 60s.

The 1952 Olympic high-jump champion, Walter Davis of the United States, had suffered from polio at the age of eight.

Senate Bill Would Hike Interest Rate

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texans who borrow money — whether from a pillar-of-the-community bank or a street corner lender — probably would pay higher interest rates under a bill approved by the Senate.

The Senate climaxed seven hours of debate Wednesday night by passing a proposal that would raise the interest rate ceiling on most loans, including credit card purchases, to 24 percent.

Home mortages would be excluded.

The vote to return the amended bill to the House was 24-4, with Sen. Ray Farabee not voting.

The ceiling would go to 28 percent on business loans of $250,000 or more. Farm loans were exempted from the higher commercial rate in an apparent attempt to attract the vote of rural senators.

"We're not sticking it to anybody except those who borrow money to make a purchase," said Sen. Betty Andujar, R-Fort Worth.

"We're not sticking it anybody," responded the bill sponsor, Sen. Grant Jones. "We are raising the maximum rate a person has to pay if he feels he must borrow money. ... Any ceiling is counter-productive."

The bill establishes a ceiling that would be tied to the six-month U.S. Treasury bill rate. When the rate is as low as 9 percent, the ceiling would be 18 percent. But when the T-bill rate is higher — as it is now — the ceiling would be twice the T-bill rate, up to a limit of 24 percent on personal loans.

Of 15 proposed amendments, only one that Jones opposed cleared the Senate and that one survived by a single vote. It would enable the holder of a charge or credit card such as VISA or Mastercard to pay off his balance in the first billing cycle without also having to pay interest from the date of purchase.

Jones, D-Abilene, accepted an amendment to prohibit a lender from discriminating on the basis of sex, race, color, religion or national origin.

The Senate, however, rejected Sen. Carl Parker's "a deal's a deal" amendment which would prohibit a store or financial institution from charging a new and higher interest rate on a charge account or credit card balance compiled when a lower rate was in effect.

Parker, D-Port Arthur, said Jones' bill reminded him of a childhood neighbor "who had the only basketball in town. The only way we could play with it was if we played by his rules, and he made them up as we went along — and he usually won."

A proposal requiring loan agreements to be presented in "easily understood sentences" failed, 26-3.

Rates for loans offered by consumer finance companies would remain as they are.
