Midland GOP blames politics

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel

While local Democratic Party leaders are reserving judgment on U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison's guilt or innocence, Republican leaders here are strongly supporting her and are calling the indictments "100 percent politically motivated."

Mrs. Hutchison, a Republican, faces four indictments — three felony and one misdemeanor — returned Monday by a grand jury. Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle, a Democrat, is accused by Mrs. Hutchison's supporters of playing politics for his advantage.

On Monday, Mrs. Hutchison released a statement calling the charges "another chapter in the sleazy campaign tactics

AUSTIN — U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison was indicted by a grand jury Monday on charges that she used her previous office as state treasurer for personal and political gain and destroyed records as part of a coverup.

Mrs. Hutchison, a Republican, denied any wrongdoing. She called the charges politically motivated.

"I will win in the end," the senator said. "I think the citizens of Texas see through this . . . they see that this is sleazy politics."

Mrs. Hutchison and two former Treasury aides were charged with official misconduct during her 2½-year tenure as treasurer.

The indictments followed a monthslong investigation by the Travis County grand jury.

Mrs. Hutchison, 50, defeated appointed Democratic Sen. Bob Krueger in a June 5 special election to become the first woman

President Clinton takes a bow after speaking at the 48th session of the United Nations General Assembly Monday.

Clinton calls for limits to U.S.-supported missions

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — President Clinton told the United Nations Monday the American people will support sending U.S. troops to keep peace around the world only if new missions are sharply limited. "The United Nations must know when to say 'no,' " he declared.

Noting that he is the first president born after creation of the organization, Clinton insisted on new rules for "new times" as he outlined his foreign policy views with a mixture of caution and high purpose.

Clinton is prepared to send as many as 25,000 American troops to Bosnia if peace terms can be worked out, and he defended keeping 4,700 U.S. peacekeepers in Somalia. But he told the representatives of more than 180 nations that the U.N. must limit its involvement in international fighting, beginning "by bringing the rigors of military and political analysis to every U.N. peace mission."

He also proposed a network of nuclear arms restraints, including a worldwide ban on stockpiling of weapons-

Commissioners take additional steps toward jail

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff writer

Midland's county commissioners took additional steps Monday toward sponsoring and acting as the host county for the privately financed, owned and operated Permian Basin Regional Jail.

In an unrelated matter, the court criticized Sheriff Gary Painter for "violating county policy" by either allowing or instructing three criminal investigators to continue to acquire overtime hours without replying to requests from the county commissioners about why the hours were being accumulated.

The new jail facility and the sheriff's office were the hot topics of the session and dominated most of the meeting.

Keith W. Cecil Jr., managing director for Corplan — which is the company proposing to build and operate the regional jail — discussed concerns from the commissioners while persuading them to take action and get the ball rolling.

Corplan originally planned to locate the regional jail in Ector County, but the county commissioners there backed out of the deal in order to build and operate their own facility.

"Other counties had indicated an interest to participate in the facility . . . we were surprised Ector did not go through with its plans," Cecil said.

Once Ector County officially dropped out, Midland County's commissioners expressed an interest in the facility.

County Judge Charles "Bro" Seltzer said he had received nothing but positive feedback from county residents regarding the prospect of locating a regional jail here.

The court concurred with two com-

Accreditation team holds public forum to review Midland Police Department

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

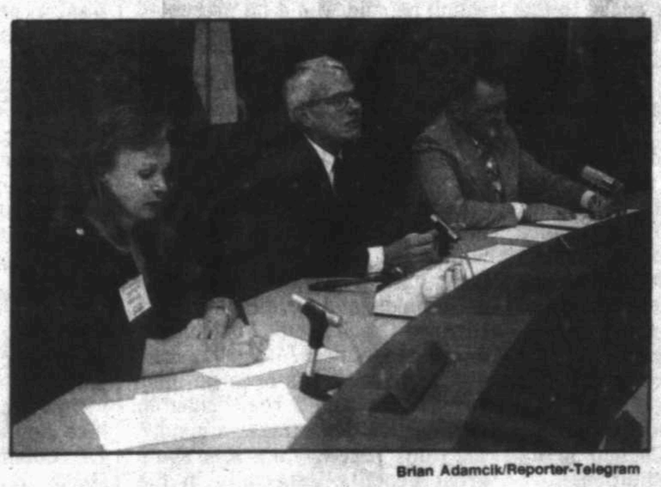

The three-member accreditation team chosen to review and assess the Midland Police Department this week heard nothing but praise for the department during a public forum Monday.

The forum was part of the team's on-site assessment of the department, which is in the process of trying to earn accreditation through the Commission on Accreditation for Law Enforcement Agencies (CALEA).

The department, which began the process four years ago, must meet 897 guidelines set by CALEA in order to become accredited.

The forum was presided over by team leader Chief of Police Thomas Sexton of Mount Pleasant, N.C., who said the comments made during the forum would be considered in the assessment and reported back to CALEA during its November commissioners' meeting. Other team members are accreditation manager Lt.

Mrs. Clinton to face tough questions in 3-day hearing

WASHINGTON — First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton can expect tough questions today as she begins several days of testimony before congressional committees about the health-care reform plan she helped fashion.

"She has not asked for any special treatment," said Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, one of five panels she will face. "She'll get the same courtesy and same hard questions as anyone."

Mrs. Clinton will first testify before the House Ways and Means Committee, which oversees taxes, Medicare and Medicaid. Later today, she will go before Dingell's committee,

Health-care coalition gives quality care to underinsured

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

Midland's health-care coalition's goal to meet the medical-care needs of its uninsured and underinsured adult citizens through neighborhood clinics has been "a long time coming, and I am sure glad I have lived long enough to see it," said Dr. Viola Coleman, a Midland physician who is medical director of the clinics.

The coalition of Memorial Hospital and Medical Center (MHM€), Casa de Amigos and the Community and Senior Services (CSS) opened at mid-year under a $43,000 United Way of Midland start-up grant and recently was infused with a $339,901 grant for fiscal year 1994 through the Primary Health Care Services Program (PHCSP) of the Texas Department of Health.

STEP: Commissioners discuss regional jail

missioners — Guy McCrary and Louisa Valencia — who expressed some concern that their constituents may not have been informed of all the issues surrounding the facility as well as curiosity from others about why Ector County rejected the plans.

Seltzer said Ector County had planned to have a hand in the control of the regional jail by providing the land and helping operate the facility. He said Midland County did not plan to act in that role, but would serve as the host county and help sponsor Corplan in getting financial assistance.

Cecil said the process will take longer than originally planned because Corplan will have to locate a site for the facility. However, he said two areas have tentatively been selected — one south of the airport and another near I-20 and Loop 250 — pending the approval and sale of the land.

Seltzer urged the commissioners to take action soon because "if we keep slow-rolling it, other counties may lose interest in it . . . and that would drive up the costs to Midland County."

Commissioner Henry Goulet asked Cecil if Ector County would utilize the facility at all since the county was building its own. He indicated that Ector County probably would not. He said if that was the case, the cost of services, per inmate, could increase about $1 per day.

Commissioners asked Cecil if he had contacted other counties to check if they were still interested, but he indicated he was waiting to make sure Midland County would act as its sponsor.

"We need your support . . . we need your sponsorship and that is all we are asking from you," Cecil told the court.

The court approved a resolution to act as a sponsor for the regional jail subject to the approval of the legal and financial issues; waiver of jurisdiction of operations of the facility by the sheriff; verification of participation by other counties; the identification of a legally authorized location in addition to a "catch all" of all other matters exercised with due diligence.

The resolution was mainly a formality to allow Corplan to begin its process to get the jail going.

The commissioners also approved retaining Jack Ladd as counsel to advise the court on matters related to the regional jail.

Seltzer said the court will also appoint a regional jail authority that will be similar to the County Housing Authority created in the 1980s. Seltzer said once the county appoints the members there will be no connection to the county from that point forward.

"Once the authority is created we break the chain between Midland County and that authority," Seltzer said. The jail authority will supervise the issuance of general obligation bonds to help finance the regional jail.

"We need to make sure that will work, being careful as we can and realize we need to keep moving forward so we don't lose ground," Seltzer added.

The other hot topic covered by the commissioners regarded the county sheriff. While considering the sheriff's office position classification for the next fiscal year, the commissioners discussed which employees in the sheriff's office would be exempt from overtime as well as the large sum of overtime already garnered by several employees.

The county has an overtime policy that was implemented in 1991 that states overtime is prohibited unless it is approved in advance or is documented within 10 days in the case of an emergency.

Seltzer said he has requested the sheriff to provide documentation specifying how the overtime hours have built up, but he said the sheriff has not replied to several memos regarding the growing amount of overtime accumulated by three criminal investigators.

Ms. Valencia said "if we have no documentation, we don't pay."

The judge said between $10,000-12,000 in overtime had been accrued and is still growing. The commissioners agreed to adopt the position classification as presented to them in a report from the sheriff, but will not fund two new positions — which have already been approved — pending the sheriff's compliance of the overtime records.

"All of this relates to the ongoing struggle about personnel between the sheriff and the commissioners' court," Seltzer said. He added that the 1994 fiscal year budget will operate with only a four percent reserve, so "we cannot allow any elected official or department head to bust the budget by working overtime."

Following the regular meeting, the court met in executive session — about other issues — at which time Painter was present and made aware of the court's ruling.

Afterward he said he believed he had been providing adequate information to the commissioners about the hours of his staff, but he would make every effort to abide by the court's decision.

"Some of the requests they've made are questionable as to whether or not we are already doing it," Painter said. "Now all of a sudden they are changing the rules . . . overtime has been accrued as a result of not having enough personnel, some of which was created by the commissioners' court."

He said each month the employees fill out a sheet that indicates hours worked, "comp" time, vacation and sick leave and more. Painter said that sheet is submitted to the county treasurer each month and he thought it would suffice the commissioners' request, because that is how it "has always been done."

However, the sheriff said he intended "to abide and obey (the commissioners' requests) in every respect."

"We want to make sure these (two new) positions are provided to protect and support the taxpayers," Painter said.

grade uranium. And yet he hinted he might abandon his three-month old ban on underground weapons blasts if China resumed its testing program.

At a news conference later with Japanese Prime Minister Morihiro Hosokawa, Clinton said the United States sent peacekeepers to Somalia in December "with our eyes open" but "may have underestimated" the difficulty of restoring political stability. "I still believe President Bush made the right decision," he said

He also listed conditions for deploying American forces to a NATO peacekeeping unit in Bosnia.

"I would want a clear understanding of what the command and control was and I would want the NATO commander in charge of the operations," Clinton said. "I would want a clear timetable for first review and ultimately for the right to terminate American involvement."

Clinton said there would have to be "a clear political strategy" for the peacekeeping mission, and the deployment would have to be endorsed by Congress.

"We would have to know what our financial responsibilities are," the president said. "Then we would have to know that others would do their part as well."

Elaborating on his speech, Clinton said none of the current peacekeeping missions was "ill founded" but that "there are limits to what we can do" in the future. "I want to see us go into these things with our eyes open," he said.

Clinton, in proposing curbs on mushrooming international peacekeeping ventures — there are now 17 involving 80,000 troops — appeared to be looking for a practical way out of a growing dispute with members of Congress who are questioning American intervention in foreign conflicts.

"The United Nations simply cannot become engaged in every one of the world's conflicts," Clinton said.

Still, he said, the U.N. must have "the technical means to run a modern world-class peacekeeping operation." And he pledged that the United States intended to "remain engaged and to lead" in post-Cold War world affairs.

He offered to pay within the next few weeks a $400 million U.S. debt for peacekeeping, but he also said the United States was paying too heavy a load. A senior U.S. official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the idea was to scale back from 30.4 percent to 25 percent and have Germany and Japan, among others, make up the difference.

Clinton said the United Nations must "weed out waste" and he suggested the appointment of an inspector general to investigate any abuses.

The more than 1,000 delegates who listened in the cavernous General Assembly hall gave the speech restrained applause.

During the day, Clinton crossed New York's First Avenue several times between the U.N. and the U.S. Mission, causing street closures that stretched 14 blocks and tied up traffic.

employed by Democrats during the U.S. Senate campaign this year . . . it is a new low in Texas politics."

Midland County Republicans expressed shock at the indictments.

Ernest Angelo, who has served on the National Republican Committee for many years, said Earle is "a very political person known to do things for a political purpose."

"Ronnie Earle is a Democrat and the grand jury was made up of Democrats," said Billie Ross, Midland County co-chairperson for Mrs. Hutchison's campaign.

Mrs. Hutchison said the grand jury system, although she respects it, is prone to "abuse when the Democratic political agenda is submitted to a grand jury in which not one member voted in the Republican primary last year and 10 voted in the Democratic primary."

Chris McCormack, a Midland lawyer who is chairman of the Midland County Democratic Party, said that he "actually, was very sorry to hear that a sitting United States senator from the state of Texas has been formally charged with a crime.

"I think that it is a sad day for all Texans, regardless of party affiliation," McCormack said on Monday night. "I personally intend to reserve judgment over whether she is innocent or guilty until she has had her day in court.

"Likewise, the people who accuse the prosecutors of Travis County of political motivation or a political witch-hunt should give them a chance to have their day in court to see if they can prove their charges or not."

Mrs. Hutchison was charged with official misconduct during her 2½-year tenure as state treasurer.

McCormack said it is in the "best interests in the state of Texas and Kay Bailey Hutchison for there to be a speedy trial, so that this matter can be put behind us quickly one or the other."

Janet Massey, a former Midland County Democratic Party chairman and an ex-State Democratic Executive Committee (SDEC) member, said that "this indictment does not prove she is guilty.

"Only a jury will determine that at a later day," Ms. Massey said.

Ms. Massey said that Mrs. Hutchison has accused Travis County District Attorney Ronald Earle of Austin of "mudslinging and just trying to get dirt on her because she is a Republican."

"I well remember when the same district attorney was investigating Democrat Jim Mattox when he was (Texas) attorney general and Democrat Gib Lewis when he was speaker of the House (of Representatives)," Ms. Massey recalled.

Midland County Judge Charles "Bro" Seltzer, who is a past chairman of the Midland County Republican Party, characterized Earle's prosecution of Mattox as lax and said he anticipated a "vigorous" prosecution of Mrs. Hutchison.

Angelo indicated he felt Earle was pursuing "what amounts to trivia . . . it's crazy to say no one made a political phone call on a state phone and to make a case out of those is ridiculous."

Angelo said he thought Earle's political motivations in prosecuting Mrs. Hutchison will "backfire against the D.A. and the Democratic Party when people realize it is a political vendetta."

Both Angelo and Midland County Republican Chairman Rick Davis said they believed the large margin Mrs. Hutchison won over U.S. Sen. Bob Krueger last May — after Earle's initial investigation was released to to the public just weeks before the election — sent "shockwaves to the Democratic party and especially the governor's mansion."

"She will be on the top of the ticket in '94 and (Gov. Ann) Richards is seeking re-election on that ballot," Davis said. "They are trying to take her (Mrs. Hutchison) out so she won't be such a formidable foe."

"His purpose is to hinder her re-election" Mrs. Ross said."I believe what the senator says ... She is not guilty of any of these accusations. She is such a super person. She is aware of her duties and privileges to serve the people."

"This indictment is designed solely to damage my re-election effort next year, by trying to tarnish my reputation and encouraging challengers," Mrs. Hutchison said. "The Democratic game plan will not work. I will vigorously contest the charges and I will win."

"She said she has done nothing wrong and I believe her," Davis said.

Casey S. Swope of Newport News, Va., and Lt. Jimmy E. Soblotne of Kokomo, Ind.

Both Midland City Mayor J.D. Faircloth and Midland City Manager Mike McGregor spoke to the team, each expressing support of the department in its push toward accreditation.

"This has been a very long process and everyone has worked very hard at the department," Faircloth said. "The accreditation is very important to the city. And, in the long run, it will be the city and its citizens who will benefit from this because the whole process has caused the department to focus on what it takes to be an effective police department."

McGregor told the group that the department has the full support of its community, city management and City Council in its journey to full accreditation.

"Five or six years ago, this department set out to upgrade several areas, including equipment, community support, training and organizational design," McGregor said. "Few departments have the same cutting-edge equipment coupled with the one man/one car approach that is so effective in reaching the community. The department has decentralized and allows more career opportunities for the officers. As a city manager, I fully support this department in what it is trying to do."

Several members of the Citizen's Police Academy Alumni Association were on hand to support the department, including Ernie Davis, who spoke to the team.

"We work closely with the officers to show them that there are citizens out there who want to get involved," Davis said. "This is a very productive organization."

Sexton commended the department's Citizen's Police Academy, which he said would be presented as an exemplary project to the commission.

"And, I personally plan on taking the idea back to my own department," he said. "I and the other members of the team are very impressed with this project."

Connie Ladd, a self-employed management consultant, told the team she had worked with the department several times on different projects and gave Police Chief Richard Czech credit for changes at the department.

"Chief Czech has been an innovative force and a real leader in turning this department around," she said. "The city has seen some great benefits, especially in the area of community-oriented policing."

Former Midland police officer Phillip Maxwell said he worked at the department when there was poor equipment and low morale and that he is pleased with how things have changed at the department.

"There have been a lot of improvements and an improvement in professionalism," he said. "The police department is definately headed in the right direction."

The assessement team will be at the department until Thursday. Residents who did not attend the meeting may voice their opinion to the team between 1-4 p.m. today at 685-7579.

CARE: Coalition gives treatment to under-insured

(From 1A)

"I think communities can (help their citizens) if they really want to serve the health needs of their constituents," said Dr. Coleman, who has been practicing medicine in Midland since 1951.

She is chief of the medical staff of Memorial Hospital.

"We (in America) did it before Medicare. Then we got Medicare, and we got Medicaid, and everything just seemingly went to pot. That's why we are having to fix it."

In recent years, Memorial Hospital opened its Community Health Care Clinic for indigent prenatal and pediatric patients to better care for the needs of the mothers and their children and at less expense to taxpayers.

With the opening of the Memorial Community Clinics for adults at Casa de Amigos and the Southeast Community Senior Center, now adult, prenatal and pediatric patients can receive more consistent and less-costly treatment than were they to go to the hospital's Emergency Room, Dr. Coleman said.

"And that is very, very expensive and fragmented medicine," Dr. Coleman said of Emergency Room treatment. "You go today (to the Emergency Room), and you see Dr. 'A'. And you go next week, and you see Dr. X."

The Memorial Community Clinics, Dr. Coleman said at a press conference Monday at the United Way headquarters, are for "any under-insured person who needs help with his medical problems."

"I am surely glad that we are able to put into place a system that is going to help our citizens without Uncle Sam mandating," she said. "Even with the new (Clinton administration) plan, I can't see this clinic changing very much. If you have a (Clinton health-care) card you can still go to the clinics."

Physicians, a nurse practitioner, registered nurses and a case manager and clerical staff travel between the two clinics providing medical care.

Medical services are available at Casa de Amigos from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Tuesday and Wednesday and from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Monday and Thursday at the Southeast Community Senior Center.

While appointments are requested, the clinics will accept walk-in patients.

The PHCSP grant will be used to fund primary health care for adults who fall below 150 percent of the federal poverty level.

"Community-oriented primary care offers the best long-term solution to both cost containment and universal access to all citizens," John H. Dombroski, PHCSP director, said in a prepared statement. "This concept works on the premise that by providing preventative and primary care, we are able to reach people while they are healthy and not just take care of them when they are already sick and require care that is more extensive and costly."

Jean Pittman, president of the Midland County Hospital District's board of directors, said that she was excited about the clinics for adults particularly in view of the success of the Community Health Care Clinic for prenatal and pediatric patients.

In almost a year's time, the Community Health Care Clinic has logged 23,379 visits.

"And it has kept a tremendous amount of the zero-to-17-year-old patients and the prenatal patients out of the Emergency Room," which, Mrs. Pittman said, costs the taxpayers about $140 per visit versus the $40 cost at the clinic.

And in almost a year's time, 1,500 indigent adult patients were admitted to the Emergency Room for hypertension, diabetes and heart problems.

Today, many of those patients could be treated at either of the adult clinics.

Syndii McCreary, the hospital's vice president of patient-care services, noted that the PHCSP grant will cover a "large majority" of clients but not all of them.

Lael Cordes-Pitts, executive director of Casa de Amigos, noted that diabetes and hypertension are primary concerns among the black and Hispanics populations and are "hereditary factors."

She noted the importance of getting people into the clinics for treatments before any illness or condition "becomes a crisis of major proportions."

The clients are instructed how to "properly care for their bodies, to eat properly, and how to receive the proper medical treatment," Mrs. Pitts said.

Connie Glover, director of program development at Community and Senior Services, said that with the coalition, "we are finally able to provide that affordable health care to those individuals in their own neighborhoods."

In Midland County's 106,000 population, 8.9 percent or almost 9,500 people are 60 years old or older.

And by "providing health care to those individuals when they are 18 and younger, we can teach them preventative health care, health maintenance," Ms. Glover said. "As they go along the life-span and eventually become older people, they have taken care of themselves all of those years, and they have a better quality of life."

which handles insurance and most health legislation.

Hardly a stranger to Capitol Hill, Mrs. Clinton has already spoken privately with 130 members of Congress about the administration's ambitious plan. Even Republicans have given her high marks for her knowledge, persuasiveness and ability to explain the complex plan in terms a layman can understand.

Her appearance today won't be the first time a first lady has taken an administration's case to Congress.

Presidential scholar Stephen Hess of the Brookings Institution said two other presidential wives testified before congressional committees. Eleanor Roosevelt spoke against racial discrimination in the District of Columbia and Rosalynn Carter answered questions on her chief interest, access to mental health care.

However, "this is substantially different," Hess said.

An Abkhazian volunteer helps his wounded comrade cross the Gumista river to get to a hospital away from the front line near the besieged city of Sukhumi last week. This is a photo taken by Andrei Soloviev for the Associated Press in Georgia. Soloviev was killed Monday by a sniper during an attack.

Yeltsin rules out compromise with opponents

MOSCOW (AP) — President Boris Yeltsin ruled out any compromise Monday with hard-line lawmakers who remained barricaded in parliament with dwindling support and no electricity, hot water or telephones.

Yeltsin's tough stand and constant pressure from hundreds of flak-jacketed riot police appeared to be eroding the will of his opponents, who were weakened by defections and miserable conditions inside the Russian White House, or parliament building.

Speaking confidently on national TV, Yeltsin rejected proposals for simultaneous presidential and parliamentary elections as a way to end the stand-off that began when he dissolved parliament last week.

He insisted on sticking to his plan for a parliamentary election in December, with presidential balloting six months later. He said compromise was "doubly dangerous" and could lead to conflict.

"No. I am not making such compromises with any organs any more. I am categorically against it," Yeltsin said.

The lawmakers appealed to Russia's armed forces to revolt and oust Yeltsin, but the army stood firmly with the president. The crowd of anti-Yeltsin demonstrators manning the barricades outside parliament dwindled early Monday to about 200 people — the fewest in a week — but grew to about 2,000 by day's end.

Police kept a tight cordon around the demonstrators, first restricting and then easing access to the parliament's grounds. The police pressure took its toll on the jittery lawmakers, many of whom have slept little in recent nights.

Although Yeltsin repeatedly has said the building would not be stormed, parliament speaker Ruslan Khasbulatov claimed the building's defenders had prevented an attack early Monday.

"It is possible that another attempt will be made tonight," he told the lawmakers.

Some legislators, worried about their personal finances and political futures as the prospects of victory dimmed, bolted the hard-line cause and accepted job offers from Yeltsin.

Seventy-six lawmakers accepted transfers to positions in the Yeltsin administration, and 114 more were prepared to negotiate their political futures, said Vyacheslav Volkov, Yeltsin's deputy chief of staff.

But former KGB chief Viktor Barannikov denied reports that he would switch sides and leave the parliament, which has named him security minister in its shadow government.

Guards inside the building piled up chairs and tables in the corridors after rumors of an imminent government attack swept the building. Such rumors have repeatedly gripped parliament.

Lawmakers claimed to have received telegrams of support from some army and navy units, but there was no sign of any military backing for the hard-liners.

Throughout the capital, Muscovites went to work as usual, and businesses and shops were open.

Golan settlers: Some plan to move; others dig in KATZRIN, Occupied Golan Heights (AP) — Nona Sadot left a career as an accountant to open a perfumery called "Dreams" in this Golan Heights town.

Now that she — like many of the 12,000 Jewish settlers in the Golan — sees the return of the territory to Syria as inevitable, she is abandoning the scent of "Dreams" to move back to Israel.

Few settlers disagreed that Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin was moving closer to compromise with Syria after his agreement with the PLO earlier this month.

But some were digging in. "I won't move," said housewife Ramona Bar-Lev.

The 556-square-mile territory, captured from Syria in the 1967 Mideast war, was once considered sacrosanct to Israelis. They saw the heights' vantage, used by the Syrians to shell Israel's northern towns prior to 1967, as crucial to security.

Countless memorials to fallen soldiers in the 1967 and 1973 wars dot the landscape, giving the Golan a deep emotional resonance for Israelis. It is also home to 12,000 Druse, the remnants of the 100,000 Syrians who lived in the Golan Heights before 1967.

Sadot, 35, is concerned more for future generations than past and is ready to move.

"Peace is worth anything. I have two young sons, 9 and 11," she said, their future compulsory military service understood. "I don't want to be a mourning mother."

The 1991 Gulf War, during which Iraq shelled central Israel with nearly 40 Scud missiles, convinced many Israelis that, with modern weapons systems, territory was not the buffer it once was.

Some already are lobbying for favorable terms of departure.

Abkhazians capture stronghold; Georgian leader goes into hiding

TBILISI, Georgia (AP) — Abkhazian separatists captured Sukhumi on Monday after 12 days of bitter combat, forcing Georgian leader Eduard Shevardnadze to flee the devastated city he had vowed to defend.

Abkhazian forces fought their way to the center of the city and raised their flag over City Hall, Shevarnadze said in a message to his office in Tbilisi, the Georgian capital.

The fall of Sukhumi, the Georgian government's last stronghold in the coastal province of Abkhazia, gave the separatists virtually complete control of the region.

More than 3,000 people have been killed and 100,000 made homeless in the yearlong war, one of the fiercest ethnic conflicts to rise from the ruins of the Soviet Union.

The Georgian government fears an Abkhazian victory could inspire other ethnic groups to revolt and could lead to civil war across the Caucusus Mountain region.

Andrei Soloviev, a 38-year-old Russian freelance photographer on assignment for The Associated Press, was killed by a sniper during Monday's attack, according to Abkhazian officials.

The message from Shevardnadze, who had personally led the defense of Sukhumi, blamed Russia for the defeat.

"Georgia lost an unequal battle," Shevardnadze was quoting as saying. "We could have saved Sukhumi yesterday, but only Russia could do this and we sent an appeal to Moscow for such help."

Shevardnadze's office said he had left Sukhumi and was somewhere in the Gulprish region, a few miles south of Sukhumi, but declined to say exactly where.

Shevardnadze's aides in Tbilisi said he might have to accept a Russian offer for evacuation, but would try to avoid that humiliating step.

Although Russia has officially maintained neutrality in the conflict, Georgia's government has accused the Russian military of supplying arms and other aid to Abkhazia.

Russia has both ships and aircraft in the region and evacuated 10,000 civilian refugees Monday.

Muslim president offers his people difficult choice

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Bosnia's Muslim president offered his people a bleak choice Monday: Sign an "unjust peace" or be starved into defeat by another winter of destruction.

Alija Izetbegovic, undecided on a peace package that would divide the multi-ethnic Bosnia he has fought to preserve, outlined the dilemma to an informal but crucial assembly of Muslims and other supporters.

The Bosnian Muslim Convention — some 350 people representing all of Bosnia's ethnic groups — met in a cramped hall at the shell-scarred Holiday Inn to debate the plan to divide Bosnia-Herzegovina into three ethnically based mini-states.

Muslim, who are the only members of the convention with voting rights, were expected to decide on the plan Tuesday before the full Parliament meets for a final vote, Sarajevo radio said. The convention's decision is likely to set the tone for Parliament's vote.

Addressing the convention, a weary-looking Izetbegovic stopped short of endorsing the plan to divide Bosnia into Serb, Croat and mostly Muslim mini-states.

But he left no doubt that rejecting the deal would mean more suffering and starvation and an even weaker bargaining position in the future.

"Although ... this peace plan does not necessarily guarantee peace, rejecting it means a certain continuation of the war" and "could even jeopardize the ... survival of the Muslim nation," Izetbegovic said.

"The only choice left to us is the choice between a just war and an unjust peace," he said.

Kindhearted and tolerant, they are willing to overlook a lot to preserve domestic harmony. Tennis and swimming will hold more appeal for these Libras than contact sports like football. True intellectuals, they spend most of their time in pursuit of knowledge. Although new acquaintances may find these Libras aloof, they are warm and outgoing with friends and family.

1 ♠	1 ◇	Pass	2 ◇
Dbl	3 NT	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: Three of ♠

Follow the bidding and play of this hand and decide who, if anyone made a critical error. It cropped up in a rubber-bridge game at the League Card Association in New York.

Since West had not yet bid, East's double of two diamonds was for takeout. South reckoned that North-South could make at least eight tricks at a no-trump contract, since North almost surely held the king of diamonds for the raise to two diamonds and had the advantage that the defense would be working more or less in the dark.

West led the fourth-best spade and declarer called for dummy's jack. East's king lost to the ace and, as the cards lay, declarer could claim nine tricks. South exited with the queen of hearts to East's ace and no matter what suit East chose to return the defenders could not get five tricks before declarer raked in nine.

It might seem that everyone did what they were supposed to do. However, if you look at all four hands you will see that, had East withheld the monarch at the first trick, declarer would not have made more than eight tricks.

But what if declarer held ace and another spade? Then declarer would always be entitled to two spade tricks. Since declarer surely held both the queen of hearts and queen of clubs, the only hope for the defenders was that West had started with five spades to the queen and declarer a bare ace. Had East played low to the first trick declarer would have been forced to cash out to avoid a three-trick set.

Singer Brooks' free lip-synch concert draws small crowd

DALLAS — Garth Brooks, the biggest selling recording artist of the decade in this country, has wrapped up his four-night stand at Texas Stadium, with only a small crowd for his performance — filmed for a television special.

The free show Sunday night attracted about 7,000 people, police said. It was a contrast to the previous three concerts, when 65,000 fans packed the stadium each night at $16 per ticket.

Encouraged by earlier successes, Brooks had added the series of concerts at Texas Stadium that began Thursday.

The final, free performance was added only so the film crew could shoot close-ups and other shots for an NBC-TV special scheduled for May, a promoter said earlier.

So for his fourth appearance, Brooks lip-synched to tapes recorded live during the first three concerts.

"It's a real docile crowd, what there is of it," said Irving police Capt. Leonard Carmack during the appearance, adding his officers had been prepared for a capacity crowd.

Brooks, a top seller in all forms of music this decade, has been nominated for his third straight entertainer of the year award.

With Brooks' success has come some trouble. Before the latest concert series, some of the stage structure at the stadium collapsed but repairs were made in time for the performances.

STEAMBOAT SPRINGS, Colo. — Nearly everything's turning up Brown in this western ski resort.

Since the dedication of the James Brown Soul Center of the Universe Bridge, merchants have cashed in with James Brown Roast coffee, James Brown Ale, James Brown T-shirts and even chewy James Brownies.

"I'm interested in seeing if there's going to be a pilgrimage to the bridge," said Brandt Vogt, wholesale manager at Mocha Molly's Coffee Saloon, "so people can stop in for a cup of James Brown coffee."

Despite the controversy over naming the bridge for Brown, a convicted felon who had never been in Steamboat Springs before the Sept. 15 dedication, his appearance charmed many townspeople, inspiring food spirits in a receptive segment of the community.

"Much of the controversy has died down, and people are having fun with it," said Sharon Roman, who serves up the James Brownies at what she now calls Sharon's Soul Center of the Universe Cafe.

The bridge replaced a span across the Yampa River that had been used for cattle drives from ranches west of town to stockyards along the Rio Grand Railroad. Many old-timers wanted the replacement to be called the New Stockbridge — or at least a name that honors the community's ranching and mining heritage. The name James Brown Soul Center of the Universe Bridge was proposed as a joke, but caught on and outpolled other names in a community vote.

ATHENS, Ohio — Diana Ross' sister is supreme, too.

Dr. Barbara Ross-Lee, dean of the Ohio University College of Osteopathic Medicine, is the first black woman to lead a U.S. medical school.

"I should make a movie about her life," Diana Ross said.

In a speech Friday, Ross-Lee, 51, recapped the hardships of growing up with five siblings in Detroit. She entered medical school in 1965 as a divorced parent.

She graduated in 1973, was in private practice for 10 years in Detroit and was assistant dean of Michigan State University College of Osteopathic Medicine before moving to Ohio University.

Ross, former lead singer of Motown's "Supremes," said the speech reminded her how much her sister has accomplished.

"When we talk, we don't talk about work as much as about family issues," Ross said.

LOS ANGELES — Joey Lawrence of "Blossom" knows he's the latest heartthrob of the bubblegum set, but he doesn't know why.

"I can't explain it," Lawrence said. "I still can't get over girls screaming and chanting and fainting."

The 17-year-old launched his career at age 5 with a rendition of "Give My Regards to Broadway" on the "Tonight Show." He went on to do TV commercials and was a "Gimme a Break" co-star for four years.

He now plays dim-witted Joey Russo on "Blossom." His first pop album, "Joey Lawrence," came out in February.

His fans are so crazy about him one girl recently begged him for the wad of gum he was chewing. He handed it over.

SYDNEY, Australia — Michael Jackson's plans for bigger, more spectacular shows here forced a delay in ticket sales.

"Massive new additions to the stage facilities have necessitated the complete redrafting of seating plans," promoter Kevin Jacobsen said.

The tickets were to go on sale Monday. No new date was announced.

Jackson, who has denied allegations of child sexual abuse under investigation in Los Angeles, canceled or postponed some recent concerts on his "Dangerous" tour.

Collection center depicting future

Odessa's new Household Hazardous Waste Collection Center — described as the first such facility of its kind in the nation — will undoubtedly serve as an example of how government can address difficult environmental concerns.

Built with a $259,000 grant from the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission, the facility will accept items deemed household hazardous wastes such as ammonia, drain cleaners, furniture polish, oven cleaners, septic tank cleaners, spot removers, aerosol sprays, nail polish removers, tub and tile cleaners, household batteries, photo chemicals, motor oil, tires and a host of other items that can seep from landfills into the water table. Those items are unsuitable for disposal in a landfill, but until now there were few other ways of disposing of those items safely in this area.

Odessa and Midland have helped lead the way in Texas in recycling efforts and control of hazardous wastes. That's good, even though more concerted effort is needed to prevent environmental damage both here and throughout the state.

Odessa Mayor Lorraine Perryman aptly characterized the environmental effort when she noted that West Texans must become stewards of the land even if "our forefathers weren't."

She's absolutely correct. Reasonable and realistic efforts to protect the environment from damage due to hazardous wastes are critical in order that past mistakes are not repeated. Construction of the Household Hazardous Waste Collection Center is an important step down that road.

It should serve as the impetus for further efforts by Texas cities to protect the environment from potentially damaging hazardous wastes. To not take that step would be negligence and send the message that this generation is unconcerned about future Texans.

Republican alternative also has smoke, mirrors

The Republican alternative to President Clinton's health care reform suggests that big changes . . . will probably be enacted . . . next year. . . .

The GOP package contains considerable economic and political realism as it designs a system that would, like the Clinton program, extend medical coverage to all Americans.

Its biggest assets, compared with the Clinton plan, are: (1) It places on individuals — not on employers — the obligation to obtain coverage — or be hit with a tax penalty. (2) It firmly opposes government price controls. (3) Its foundation is the creation of many competing "purchasing cooperatives" to enable individuals and small firms to buy insurance at good rates. . . .

All good. But the GOP scheme, while more fiscally responsible than the Democrats' because it doesn't mandate new benefits to the uninsured, and doesn't establish expensive new bureaucracies, also contains its fair share of smoke and mirrors.

'Disgraceful' U.S. illiteracy problem serves as challenge

The recent federal report on literacy should set alarm bells ringing across the nation.

It's nearly unbelievable — not to mention unacceptable — that almost half of U.S. adults can barely read, fill out bank deposit slips or perform many other basic tasks needed to function in this society.

The U.S. Education Department Survey found that:

— As many as 40 million of the nation's 191 million adults have only the lowest level of literacy-related skills, and another 50 million or so can function at a slightly higher level.

— Older adults were more likely than middle-aged and younger adults to have limited literacy skills.

— Blacks, Native Americans, Hispanics and Asians were more likely than whites to have performed in the lower two of the five performance levels. . . .

Because literacy is such an important issue, the Education Department's findings . . . should serve as a challenge for every American.

For the United States to have such high levels of illiteracy is nothing short of disgraceful.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Sept. 28, the 271st day of 1993. There are 94 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Sept. 28, 1066, William the Conqueror invaded England to claim the English throne.

On this date:

In 1542, Portuguese navigator Juan Rodriguez Cabrillo discovered what is now San Diego, Calif.

In 1781, American forces in the Revolutionary War, backed by a French fleet, began their siege of Yorktown Heights, Va.

In 1787, Congress voted to send the just-completed Constitution of the United States to state legislatures for their approval.

In 1850, flogging was abolished as a form of punishment in the U.S. Navy.

In 1924, two U.S. Army planes landed in Seattle, Wash., having completed the first round-the-world flight in 175 days.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

Clinton views health like Social Security

I've said it before, I'll say it again. Bill Clinton could sell life insurance to Dr. Kevorkian's patient list. His health care speech was splendid PR: Mrs. C. in vivid blue, seated next to Dr. Everett Koop, the Reagan administration's surgeon general; the Reaganesque anecdotes intended to illustrate points in the speech; the Reaganesque conclusion: "Thank you. And God bless America."

Murchison

Watching from Little Rock, Clinton may have loathed the Reagan '80s; even now he may be seeking through his policies to annihilate them. Yet he is savvy enough to have picked up during the "Decade of Greed" (i.e., the seven years of unparalleled economic expansion) some tricks of the political trade. He is off to a good start. Except for one thing.

Out from his bag, right at the end, jumped the cat. "Social Security" is the varmint's name. The Clintons want their proposed health care system to imitate the Social Security system.

As the president said Wednesday night, "(W)hen retirement was nearly synonymous with poverty, and older Americans died in our streets . . . Americans had the courage to change — to create a Social Security system that ensures that no Americans will be forgotten in their later years. I believe that 40 years from now, our grandchildren will . . . find it unthinkable that there was a time in our country when hardworking families lost their homes and savings simply because they changed jobs."

As various Americans will say on more closely inspecting the Clinton version of Social Security: Here we go again!

The government as all-seeing, all-knowing provider; the government there for us not just when we retire but when we are born and when we fall ill and when we die — such is the vision Clinton peddles. In the vision, there seems little indeed that government won't feel bound to do for us.

Oh, there's one thing: pay the bills. That's our job as taxpayers. The government has no money of its own. Its task, as Clinton conceives it, is to take the money we make and spend it for our benefit. Who decides what benefits us? The government decides.

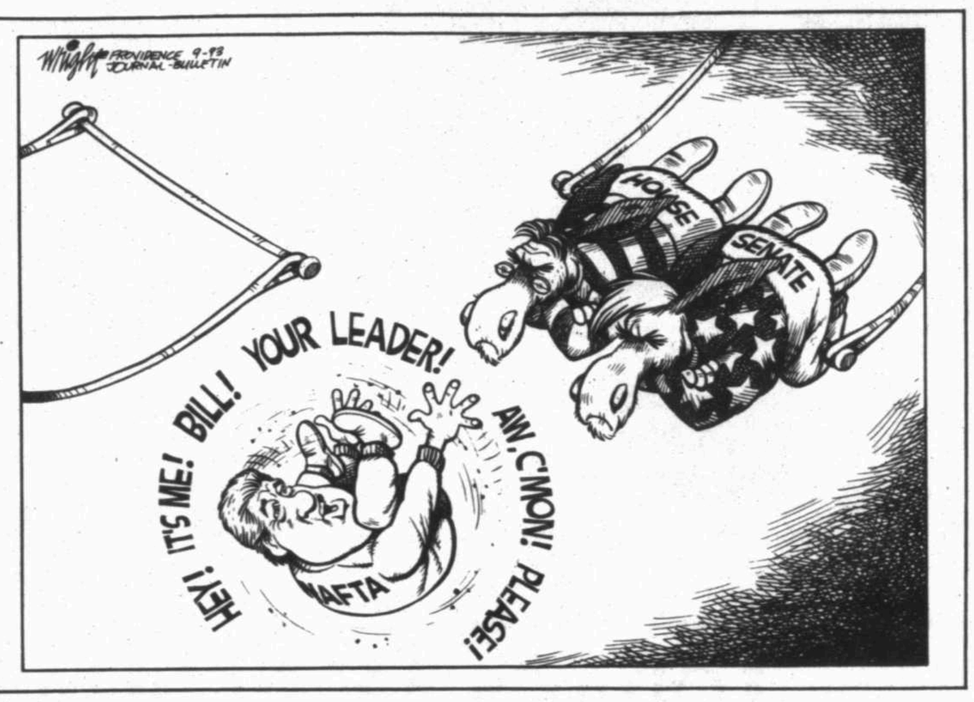

Only a pair of Yale lawyers, with next-to-zilch experience in the private sector, could propose creation of a health care system sure to burden, not relieve, the private sector. Health care — a la Clinton — resembles, as a matter of fact, some of the Dom Perignon leveraged buyouts that lawyers put together in the '80s: huge, bubbly benefits up front; huge, stale payments due a bit later.

The Social Security model is not vastly encouraging as a precedent for health care. Social Security's costs have overrun the most conservative projections. Congress "saved" the system once under Jimmy Carter then had to come back in the Reagan era and do the job all over again. Taxes have soared. The present rate is 15.3 percent, divided equally between employer and employee.

The most alarming feature of Social Security is its sacred cow status. Recipients regard it, not inaccurately, as a right. This means plans to rationalize its workings get nowhere. Alarm bells sound, and congressmen scurry for cover. This has merely accelerated inter-generational resentments: younger workers and elderly retirees questioning each other's parentage as despair grows over the government's ability to meet its long-term obligations.

CHARLEY REESE

Americans should look at big picture again

Perspective, whether in art or politics, means the same thing: seeing everything in its correct position relative to everything else.

In a picture, if we see someone in the background much, much taller than someone in the foreground, we know the perspective is wrong.

Reese

We ought also to see that when school systems in American cities are having difficulties opening for lack of money while the government spends billions in foreign countries, our political perspective is out of whack. Just as an artist would fail if he or she looked at only one small segment of the scene, so we often fail as citizens because we look too closely at only one small part of the whole.

Notice how many people are interested in only one issue of government: environment, gun control, abortion, taxes, education, drug war, Social Security, women's issues, civil rights, gay rights. The list is long and each topic has a pro group and con group obsessed only with that one issue.

Everything, however, is an interwoven part of one whole. We cannot put the parts in their proper perspective unless we learn to look at the whole picture.

Under some circumstances, foreign aid might be advisable; under other circumstances, inadvisable. Thomas Jefferson once said that whether a country has high tariffs or low tariffs is a matter of circumstances, depending on the needs of the country at the time.

Too many people, however, are ideologues and take a one-position-fits-all-circumstances approach. That's crazy. The only constant in human affairs is perpetual change. At all times, our policies and programs have to be appropriate to the circumstances as they exist. In fact, one definition of psychotic behavior is behavior that is inappropriate to the circumstances.

Ideologues are low-level psychotics who have allowed their belief systems to estrange and isolate them from reality. Reality changes; their beliefs don't. Thus they end up like Willy Loman in "Death of a Salesman" : desperately clinging to a past way of doing things that is no longer workable or acceptable.

If someone responded to a hug with a physical attack, we'd easily recognize they were crazy. Yet we have people advocating foreign aid in the face of domestic financial crises and others shipping jobs overseas in the face of continuing decline of employment opportunities. We have people claiming to be free traders who advocate lowering our tariffs even if other countries don't. They can't see the reality before their face: that Japan, practicing the protectionism they say will cause poverty, is better off than the U.S., practicing the free trade they claim will produce prosperity.

We have troops in Somalia at a cost approaching $1 billion while children in New York and Chicago can't go to school on time because the systems are short of money. That's crazy.

We have a president claiming we must support the U.N. because we have an obligation under the Charter while blocking the U.N. from acting in the Middle East. That's crazy. You can't support international law and international anarchy simultaneously.

We have a president who's levying new taxes and new environmental and other regulations on American business while saying business won't move to Mexico to escape all that until we guarantee their investment there by adopting the North American Free Trade Agreement. That's crazy.

So long as we have the vote, we can't have good government until we have good citizens. We can't expect government to put things in perspective if we don't do it first. We the people must first set priorities before we can impose them on government. We must care before the government will care. If we do not actively govern ourselves, we will be governed by whatever floats to the top — which is usually lightweight and smelly.

Looking at the whole picture is the first step.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Keep watch on Russian security apparatus

WASHINGTON — Two weeks ago, the president of Russia had a long telephone conversation with the president of the U.S. The Russian, who gave no hint of an intent to dissolve Parliament, wanted to know in detail about the progress of the aid package and repeal of trade restrictions; in turn, the American asked him to increase pressure on the Serbs and to withdraw troops from the Baltic States.

Safire

A few days later, asked to assess Boris Yeltsin's political position, Bill Clinton said: "He is in a weaker position than he was, politically, right after he was elected — because of his inability to work through an effective political compromise with his opponents." Should the U.S. be talking to his rival, Aleksandr Rutskoi? "I don't think we should be hedging our bets," replied Clinton.

Ten days later, Yeltsin's political standing eroding in the face of a budget showdown with the Soviet-era Parliament, the Russian president struck, dissolving the institution that opposed his reforms, and setting legislative elections in three months.

The document he signed was more carefully drawn than any of his previous decrees; it included such details as the wages for legislative staff until Dec. 13. It was no impulsive act.

In this time of nascent democracy and rampant corruption, Russian political power does not yet rest fully on the will of the people. The Red Army and the KGB still figure strongly in the struggle between free-market reformers and command-economy reactionaries. Consider the Yeltsin courtship of these elites:

On March 30, Defense Minister Pavel Grachev was interrogated by the anti-Yeltsin parliamentarian Ruslan Khasbulatov, in a way that many top Red Army officers considered insulting; the general was publicly accused of not giving straight answers. This soured many officers on the Parliament and its ally, Vice President Rutskoi, a combat pilot the generals consider an upstart.

In the referendum about a new constitution a month later, which Yeltsin's position won with 59 percent of the vote, fully 67 percent of the Red Army officers supported the president (whose acquiescence to their wage demands further endeared him to them). Gen. Grachev traveled to the U.S. and talked with President Clinton in the office of the national security adviser, Tony Lake.

Meanwhile the KGB, which has a new name but is still the KGB, was on the knife's edge, its leader leaning toward the agency's old Communist allies in Parliament. At the end of July Yeltsin fired Viktor Barannikov, whom a source calls "a friend who turned unreliable," as security minister.

Yeltsin's choice to replace the head of internal security was Nicolai Golushko, a longtime KGB officer in the directorate charged with putting down dissent. His appointment reassured the agents in the ranks, and because he had long been stationed in Ukraine, outside the orbit of the old-timers' Moscow KGB headquarters, Yeltsinites considered him more reliable.

Last week Yeltsin paid a visit to the Interior Ministry's Dzerzhinsky Division (named after "Iron Feliks" Dzerzhinsky, founder of Stalin's secret police), on combat alert a half-hour's ride from Moscow.

And last week the confrontation between the reform executive and the Red legislature came to a head over — of all things — the budget. Parliament proposed a foolhardy deficit of 25 percent of GNP, which it was ready to pass over Yeltsin's veto.

With his Red Army and KGB and Dzerzhinsky ducks all in a row, and his personal relationship with Washington secure, the Russian leader — assured that no Clinton bet on him would be hedged — made his move.

This is a calculated power play, long planned and extra-constitutional, that is likely to put too much power in the hands of the Russian chief executive. Are we wise to support it?

Yes, considering the alternative of political paralysis leading to economic catastrophe leading to social upheaval.

SENATOR: Grand jury indicts official

(From 1A)

senator in Texas history. She had been elected treasurer in 1990.

Since the investigation became public shortly after her June election, Mrs. Hutchison has been sharply critical of District Attorney Ronnie Earle, a Democrat who led the inquiry and once voiced interest in the Senate seat.

She and Republican officials have accused Earle of seeking to help Democrats who might challenge Mrs. Hutchison in next year's elections.

Earle has denied the allegation. Saadi Ferris, foreman of the grand jury and a former Republican candidate for sheriff in Travis County, on Monday also disputed the politics charge.

"The grand jury has deliberated on each and every occasion with independence of politics and political persuasion; independence of the district attorney and his staff; independence of the news media and all outside influences," he said.

Mrs. Hutchison was indicted on four felony counts and a misdemeanor charge.

She faces two felony counts of official misconduct and single felony counts of tampering with physical evidence and tampering with a governmental record. She faces a misdemeanor charge of official misconduct.

The charges carry a maximum punishment of 60 years in prison and $40,000 in fines.

"This is a somber occasion for all of us. But our duty and that of the grand jury is clear. In a true democracy, no one is above the law," Earle said in a statement.

Also named in the indictments were Michael Barron, former deputy treasurer, and David Criss, who was planning director for the Treasury.

Barron was charged with official misconduct, tampering with governmental records and tampering with physical evidence. Criss was charged with official misconduct.

"Mike Barron appeared before the grand jury and answered their questions truthfully and will do so again before a jury. We have nothing to hide," said attorney Chris Gunter, who is representing Barron.

When asked if Barron would be a candidate to testify on behalf of the state for a lesser sentence, Gunter replied:

"Right now, I have an open mind as to how best to defend the case. I think it's going to be a long time before we are called upon to make final decisions about how best to proceed. I will weigh every available option about how to defend the case."

Criss has an unlisted phone number in Dallas, and his attorney did not return phone calls by The Associated Press.

Mrs. Hutchison was accused by former Treasury workers of being an obsessive boss who once struck an employee out of frustration and who made a habit out of ordering workers to conduct personal and political errands.

Judge releases convicted officers for at least 2 weeks

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Officer Laurence Powell had already spent his first night in prison for the Rodney King beating and Sgt. Stacey Koon was just surrendering when a judge suddenly allowed them to go free Monday.

U.S. District Judge John G. Davies gave Powell and Koon about two weeks to appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court, setting Oct. 12 as the new date for them to start serving their 2½-year sentences.

Both men had faced a deadline of noon Monday for checking into the Dublin Federal Prison Camp, a converted military barracks without bars or fences 40 miles east of San Francisco.

Powell surrendered at the prison Sunday afternoon. Koon arrived at 11:30 a.m. Monday, around the time Davies issued his ruling, and hadn't yet been processed.

They left together in a car, about 3½ hours later, said prison official John Orla.

Attorney William Kopeny, representing the two, said he would file an emergency request Tuesday with U.S. Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, asking that the men be allowed to remain free on bail while they appeal their convictions and sentences. O'Connor oversees California matters.

Koon, Powell and two other white policemen were charged in the March 1991 beating of King, a black motorist stopped after a chase. A shocking videotape of the beating was broadcast repeatedly worldwide.

The officers' acquittals on state charges in 1992 led to deadly rioting in Los Angeles and other cities. The officers were tried this year on federal charges of violating King's civil rights. Koon and Powell were convicted; officers Theodore Briseno and Timothy Wind were aqcuitted.

In August, Davies gave Koon and Powell surprisingly lenient 30-month sentences that were criticized by prosecutors and King. Davies said King himself was to blame for many of the blows he suffered in the beating.

The judge refused to let the officers go free on bail while they appealed, and last week the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals rejected their request for a bail hearing.

Two of the appeals judges issued a strongly worded 10-page dissent arguing for bail, however, and in his ruling Monday, Davies said O'Connor should be given time to review their arguments and see if she is swayed by them.

U.S. Rep. Maxine Waters, a Democrat whose South Central district was hard hit by the 1992 riots, said that Davies "sent the wrong signal" by delaying the sentences.

"Judge Davies acted irresponsibly and is exacerbating an already tense situation," she said in a statement. "There is a perception in the African-American community that there is a double standard at work in our criminal justice system."

Kopeny, the officers' lawyer, said he didn't believe Davies gave them special treatment.

At the 244-bed prison camp, inmates are housed four to a room and work from 7 a.m. to 3:45 p.m. in such manual labor jobs as landscapers, cooks and roofers for 12 to 14 cents an hour.

Last week, Powell was described by attorney Michael Stone as "terrified" of prison. Powell remained out of sight in the last few weeks, even missing his police Board of Rights hearing, where a panel recommended that he be fired.

Koon, on the other hand, appeared on a call-in radio show and said he would enter prison with a "pure heart" and no fear, even though prison can be a harrowing place for police officers. On Sunday, Koon attended Roman Catholic Mass as usual at his church.

New York visitor dies in drive-by shooting on Miami highway

MIAMI (AP) — Just as travel agents from Germany were getting a VIP tour to persuade them to keep sending tourists to Florida, another out-of-state visitor was shot to death on a Miami highway.

The seemingly senseless killing unleashed a new flurry of negative publicity about crime against visitors in a state with a $31 billion a year tourist industry.

Miguel A. Sanchez, 40, of New York City, was shot to death Sunday night while going to a restaurant with his cousin and his cousin's wife.

A motorist pulled alongside his cousin's car and fired a single shot through the passenger window, hitting Sanchez in the head.

"At this point we really do not have a motive," said police spokesman Ralph Fernandez. No arrests were made, he said.

Sanchez was a parking attendant who sold cars on the side and decided to spend a two-week vacation while in Miami to deliver a van to relatives, said Detective Doug Stephens.

Sanchez's brother, Mario Fermin, and his mother, Maria Feliz, flew in from the Dominican Republic to meet with police. Fermin said his brother had been thinking about moving to Miami.

"He really liked it here, he wanted to stay," he said.

In New York, a relative said members of Sanchez's family had urged him not to go to Florida.

"They told him not to go. . . . I guess he didn't think it would happen to him," said Olga Morales, Sanchez's sister-in-law.

The attack follows the slayings of 10 foreign tourists in Florida in the past year.

The shooting couldn't have come at a worse time, said Aldo Rinaldi, president of Sun Tours Inc., which helped bring 22,000 Germans to Florida last year.

Rinaldi had 15 German travel agents in Key West on Monday as part of a campaign to calm European tourists frightened away by the violence.

"It's already on TV in Germany," groaned Rinaldi, whose new bookings are only half the 400 to 500 a month he once averaged. "We've been battling here left and right — I don't know what to do anymore."

One of those German travel agents called the anti-Florida publicity unfair.

"In the big cities, downtown, we have the same problem in Germany," said Sharon Douzart of Mannheim.

The killing is symptomatic of problems across the country, said state Sen. James Hargrett of Tampa. He and other black Florida legislators discussed urban violence in a symposium last week.

"The rest of the world has the chance to see its future by looking at Florida," Hargrett said. "Across the nation, in every metropolitan area, there is a Third World community — a little Somalia — with people running around in the street with guns."

Gov. Lawton Chiles has stumped the state over the past month, promising more security while emphasizing that violence against both tourists and Florida residents has dropped in recent years.

"The state seems to be under a microscope right now," complained the governor's spokesman, Ron Sachs.

ATF director announces retirement before release of report

WASHINGTON (AP) — His tenure scarred by the ill-fated raid on a Texas cult, the director of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms submitted his retirement Monday, days before the release of a report expected to criticize the actions that led to the deaths of four agents.

The agents were slain and 16 others wounded in the Feb. 28 raid to which the Branch Davidian group had inadvertently been alerted by a TV cameraman. About a half-dozen cult members also died in the Sunday morning shootout.

In a letter sent to Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen, Stephen E. Higgins, 55, did not specify the recommendations to be made by Treasury officials in the report, but made clear his opposition to them.

"Since I do not agree with all the conclusions reached and actions proposed pursuant to the Waco incident, and since you apparently support the merger of ATF into the FBI as proposed by the reinvention team, I only have two real choices as a career executive where I find myself in serious disagreement with both decisions. I can either ask to be reassigned to another position, or retire.

"This is to advise you that I have decided to retire effective Oct. 30, 1993," Higgins wrote.

Joan Logue-Kinder, a spokeswoman for the Treasury Department, said Bentsen has accepted Higgins' decision to retire and would release the report on the raid this week. She said Higgins was objecting to the report even though he had not received a copy.

"Rank-and-file ATF agents wanted the review so the truth would come out and ATF deserves a director who is willing to act on it," she said.

Assistant Treasury Secretary for Enforcement Ron Noble, who compiled the report to be released Thursday, would not comment Monday when asked about it and potential personnel recommendations.

However, published and broadcast reports have indicated Treasury officials likely would seek Higgins' retirement as well as that of two other high-ranking ATF officials — Associate Director for Law Enforcement Daniel Hartnett and Deputy Associate Director for Law Enforcement Edward "Dan" Conroy. Hartnett and Conroy had said long ago that they planned to retire this year after attaining higher retirement benefits accrued since federal law enforcement officials got pay raises three years ago, according to ATF spokesman Jack Killorin.

Other ATF managers were due for reassignments or criticism, according to various reports.

Higgins, who has been with the ATF for 32 years and director for the past 11 years, wrote to Bentsen that Treasury officials "apparently see what happened in Waco as an indication that ATF needs to make significant changes in direction and focus."

"In my view, Waco was a tragic event from which all of law enforcement can learn," he said. "But I believe that ATF was and continues to be an outstanding law enforcement agency, a view which I believe is widely shared throughout the law enforcement community."

The Feb. 28 raid led to a 51-day standoff with federal agents. The FBI quickly took over, and on April 19, with the approval of Attorney General Janet Reno, agents pumped tear gas into the complex through booms attached to tanks.

Shortly afterward, the wood buildings erupted in flames and burned to the ground in about an hour. Dozens of cultists died in the fire, although a number of them, including leader David Koresh, were found later to have been shot to death.

Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Judiciary crime subcommittee, said of Higgins: "It's a shame that his career had to end the way it did, despite the mistakes he made in Waco — and I think he'd be the first to say mistakes were made and the buck stops with him."

Schumer, a gun-control advocate, added, "Overall, the record will show that he was a very positive force."

At the same time, David Rucker, speaking for the Associated Conservatives of Texas, said "Higgins' self-imposed retirement does not go far enough."

"Congress and the investigative bodies within the Treasury Department will offer this up as a pound of flesh to those who have been critical of the government's activities in Waco, and we would like to see a criminal investigation of the bureau's activities along with the FBI's activities," he said.

Higgins sent all ATF offices a copy of his letter to Bentsen along with a "special message" to all employees.

"Your performance following the Waco tragedy was remarkable," Higgins wrote to the employees, "but I couldn't begin to capsulize in a message of this kind all of the other reasons I've developed such enormous respect and appreciation for how you do your jobs, often under tremendous pressure and criticism."

State wants to keep custody of Branch Davidian children

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas child welfare officials planned to ask a Waco judge Tuesday for permission to retain temporary legal custody of seven Branch Davidian children.

Authorities said they wanted to continue monitoring how the children are adjusting to their new homes.

"We want to be sure that everything is working out," said Stewart Davis, a spokesman for the Texas Department of Protective and Regulatory Services.

Twenty-one children were released by Branch Davidian leader David Koresh in the days following a Feb. 28 firefight with agents of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

They were the only children to leave the group before an April 19 fire that killed 81 church members and destroyed their sprawling home near Waco.

All but one of the 21 children have been placed with family members, and 12 are still under the "temporary managing conservatorship," of the state.

The Tuesday hearing before state District Judge Bill Logue involves seven of those final 12. The other five have hearings in October and January.

The state's request to keep legal custody of the children — at least for now — is meant to ensure that they are adjusting well with their new families, said agency spokeswoman Linda Edwards.

Under state conservatorship, the children also remain eligible for benefits they would not otherwise receive.

"We do provide in-home care, counseling and, if the child is eligible, Medicaid health services," Davis said. "Some or all of those can be cut off."

Officials expect to relinquish custody of all the children by early next year, Davis said.

Texas officials also planned to ask Logue to place the 10-year-old physically and mentally disabled son of Branch Davidian Douglas Wayne Martin in the care of his mother, Sheila Martin. Douglas Martin and four of his children died in the April 19 fire.

The Martin child has lived in foster care since he was released because his mother did not have the facilities to care for the boy.

Since then, Ms. Martin has rented a house and taken classes to meet the child's needs, Davis said.

In other developments on Monday, ATF director Stephen E. Higgins announced his retirement, just days before a report was to be released on the raid's handling.

Four agents from the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms were slain and 16 were wounded in the Feb. 28 raid on the Branch Davidian home. At least six group members also died in the Sunday morning shootout.

Corpus Christi schools consider video cameras

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Teachers who credit electronic surveillance for making children better behaved on buses are urging the school board to take the next step — placing cameras in classrooms and halls.

"We want to make sure it's a usable tool and not something to introduce just for the sake of introducing it," said Alfred Ortiz, security director for the Corpus Christi Independent School District.

The suggestion may be part of a report sent to the district officials next month. Ortiz said he also may ask the district to buy metal detectors and drug-detecting dogs.

"What we've got to look at is the affordability — the cost factors here. It's a rather expensive proposition," he said.

The teachers who suggested cameras on campus were impressed by the effect of surveillance systems on school bus riders, Ortiz said.

The videotape also would be valuable in evaluating student-teacher disputes, said Marvin Spears, principal at Driscoll Middle School in Corpus Christi.

"It could work both ways also. If there's a problem in the classroom, the videotape might show the teacher could be doing something wrong," Spears said.

Rising violence, discipline problems and crime on school campuses nationwide have prompted some larger metropolitan school districts to begin using metal detectors, drug sweeps and security guards.

Video surveillance systems are being installed in 10 high schools and one middle school in the Dallas Independent School District, security director C.W. Burruss said.

Houston Independent School District officials also began using a camera system at one school this year.

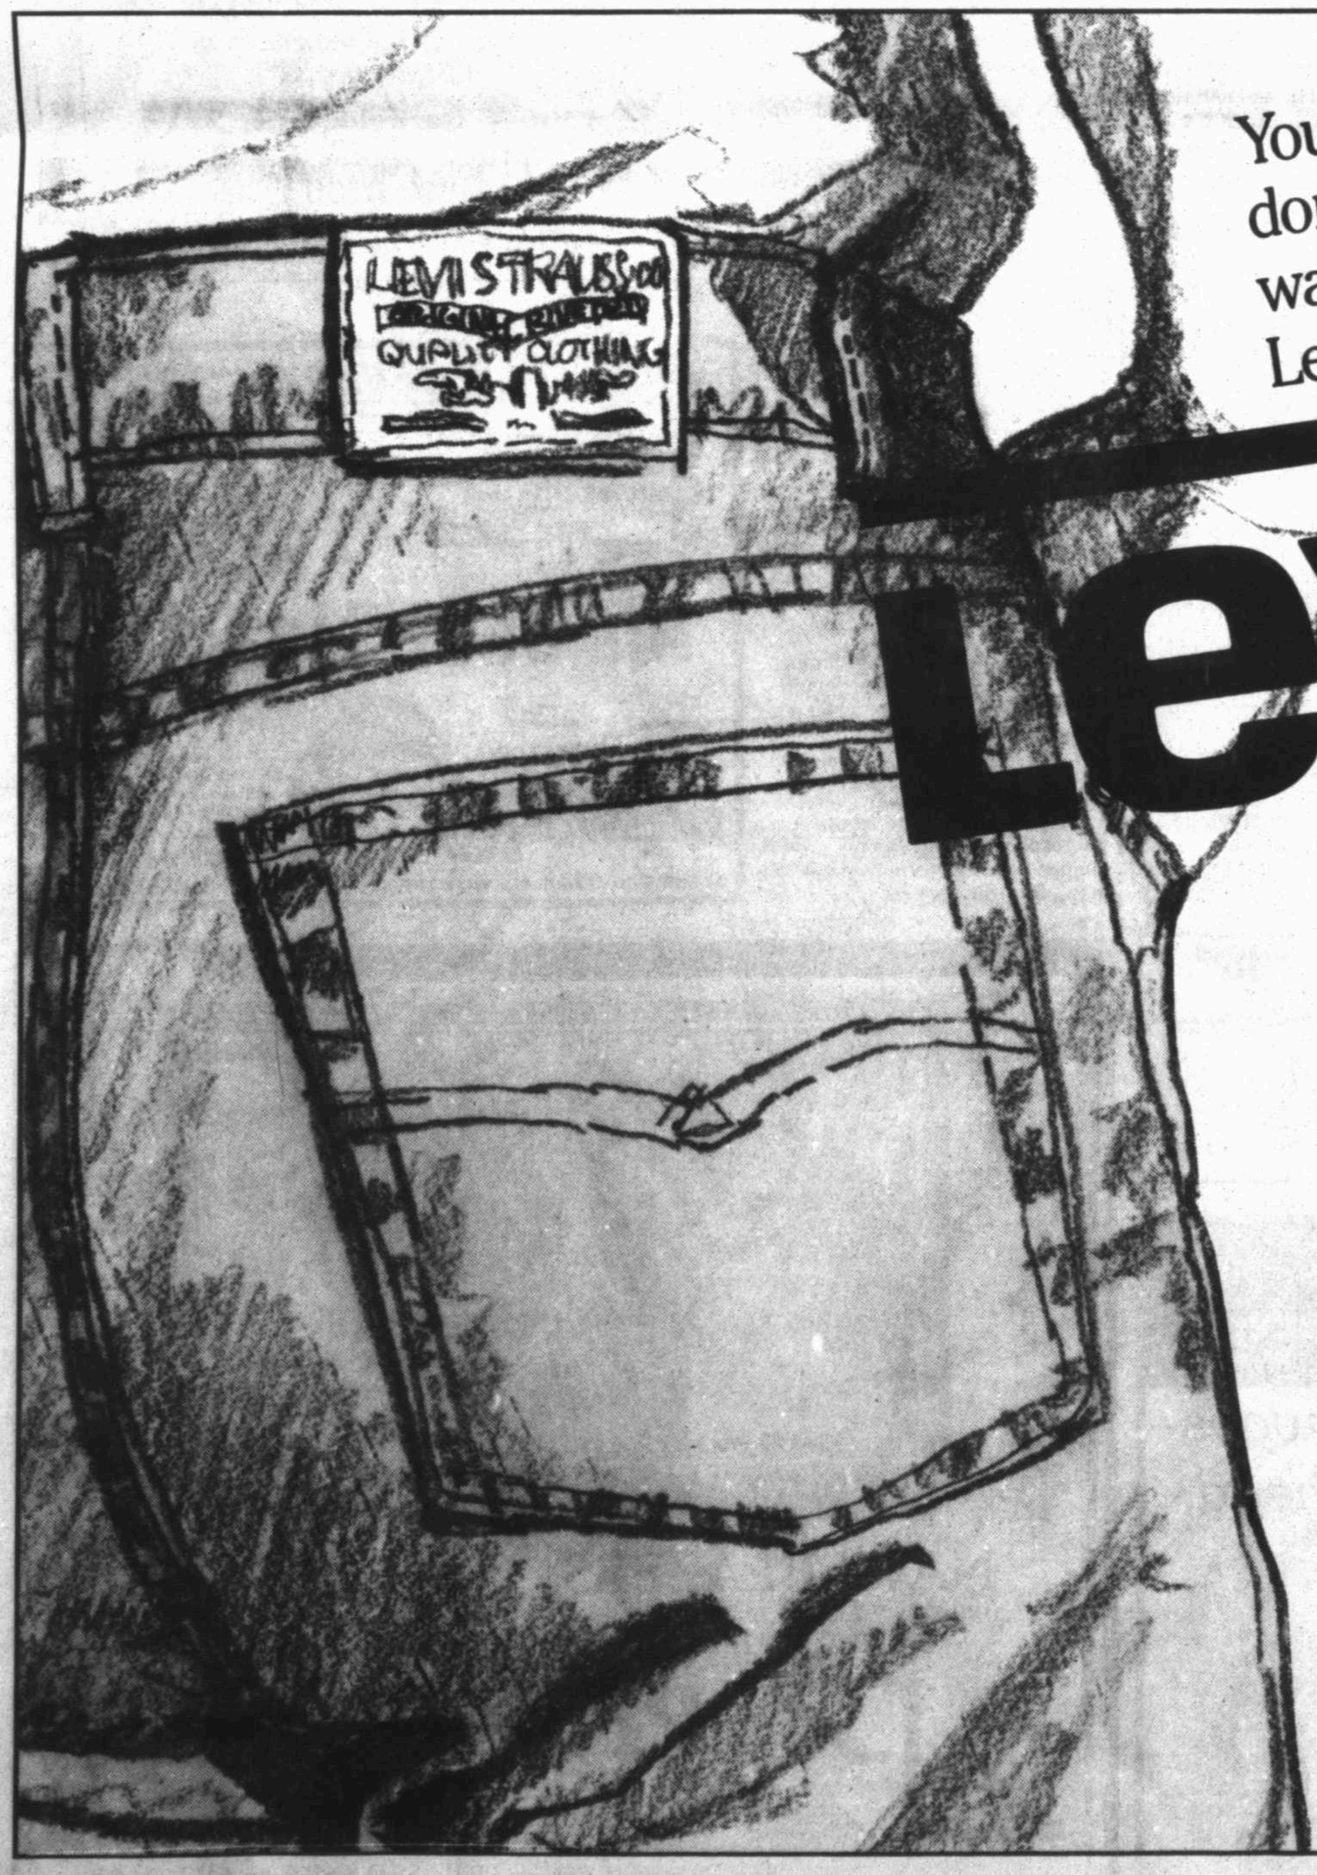

But some administrators at those schools say the cameras shouldn't be considered a panacea to school violence.

"I don't believe putting cameras and metal detectors all over the place is going to solve your problems," said Michael Stiles, principal of Sunset High School in Dallas.

"I mean, they've got security cameras at (convenience stores) and there are still robberies and shootings," Stiles said.

City to consider higher disposal rates

■ Council members to vote on proposal for increased costs of garbage pick-up.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

Subject to City Council approval today, garbage disposal rates will increase in order to pay higher landfill operation costs caused by stricter federal and state regulations.

Residential trash pick-up rates — included in water bills — will go from $7.75 a month to $10.25 per month. The price hike will affect about 28,000 residents and about 2,100 commercial customers.

City Council members tentatively approved the increase on a first reading. A final vote will be taken during today's regular meeting.

In addition, council members will consider a resolution that will charge private customers $23 per ton of garbage, up from $8 a ton. That increase will affect private haulers such as Permian Basin Disposal, which picks up trash in the county.

Joel Ford, general manager of Permian Basin Disposal, said their rates will increase an average of about 30 percent. The company serves more than 1,500 families and about 700 businesses, he said.

The city's anticipated rate increases stem from new guidelines that include how to construct a landfill pit. The new regulations require digging slope-sided holes instead of straight-sided holes, which will reduce the amount of space available. The holes also must include 2 feet of clay and a plastic liner along the bottom of each.

"Right now it costs us about a quarter-million dollars to dig a pit, and under the new regulations it will cost us one-and-a-quarter million to dig it," said Ken Jones, Utilities Director.

The new regulations also require the monitoring of methane gas and leachate (essentially ground seepage).

Unlike some of the other cities that must comply with the new guidelines, West Texas cities have generally lower methane gas production and leachate because of less rainfall, Jones said.

And Midland doesn't have any groundwater at the landfill site, located about seven miles southeast of the city on State Highway 158, he added.

Midland fills a pit over a year's time. The cost of the initial hole dug under the new regulations will cost $2.6 million because of the sloped side.

That cost is expected to be financed through the sale of bonds, to be paid off over seven years.

The new regulations also require landfills to be monitored for 30 years after closure. The city has begun setting aside funds to cover the cost.

The new guidelines are being implemented by the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission, formerly called the Texas Water Commission.

TUESDAY DAY WATCH

Vehicle rollover

An Odessa man was in critical condition Monday after his vehicle rolled onto its roof at the Highway 158 overpass on Highway 191.

According to a Department of Public Safety, a 1994 Porsche, driven by Dr. Arthur G. Johnson, 47, was eastbound on Highway 191 at about 1:10 p.m. Monday. The vehicle ran off the road to the left, striking a guardrail. The vehicle then went up on the guardrail, turned over on its roof and then skidded across the highway into a concrete guardrail. The vehicle slid about 300 feet before coming to a stop.

Narcotics charge

ODESSA — Three Odessa residents were arrested Friday by Permian Basin Drug Task Force officials for four narcotics offenses.

According to a report, officers executed a search warrant at 6:15 p.m. at 2404 W. 9th St. Approximately $100 worth of cocaine was found and officers arrested Steven P. Tolbert, 23, and Phyllis Jeanne Dearing, 22.

Tolbert and Ms. Dearing were both charged with possession of marijuana, possession of cocaine, possession of THC and possession of drug paraphernalia. Bond was set at $12,700 each.

In a separate incident, officers arrested 41-year-old Esparanza Garcia. He was charged with possession of marijuana, possession of cocaine, possession of THC and possession of drug paraphernalia. Bond information on Garcia was not available Monday.

INTRODUCING

Consultant speaks out on education

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

Elwood R. Thompson oversees a West Texas area encompassing 38,424 miles, and he has traveled almost every one of them.

"This is the second largest TSTA (Texas State Teachers Association) in the United States," said Thompson, a TSTA UniServ (Unified Services) consultant.

When not on the road, Thompson lives in Midland, which he says is "a city full of quality educators who deserve better pay."

A San Antonio native and family man, Thompson and his wife and three daughters, have been in Midland for a year. His daughters are enrolled in Midland public schools in fourth, fifth, and sixth grades. As a parent and consultant who focuses on the public schools, he makes no bones about the fact that he is in his job "for the kids."

"I care about their education and I care about the staff who educates the kids. If there is a problem at one of my daughter's schools," he said, drawing himself up to his full statuesque height,

TSTA: Consultant speaks out on education

(From 1B)

"I'm right there."

Thompson advocates for education staff and often acts as a mediator when there are staff disputes or grievances. He also acts as a resource for educators, and in his spare time, as a motivator for children described as "at risk."

His near-future plans include conducting an inservice for at-risk youth in Texarkana. He said students in trouble "have got to own up and stop blaming others for their problems."

"Environment has a major affect on people, but continuing to blame the environment is a cop-out," Thompson, said, noting that communities need to take the reins in providing opportunities for the economically disadvantaged, such as businesses allowing students to buy stock in the company or to benefit from profits.

"Young people need something more tangible to motivate them, something more than flipping burgers," Thompson said. "We need something like that in Midland."

Other things Thompson would like to see Midland embrace is a recycling program, a mass-transit system and less emphasis on football.

"You hear so much about Midland and Odessa being a metropolitan area, yet there is no mass transit system. A child needs access to safe transportation to stay after school for programs," he said. "The on-site after-school YMCA (and Camp Fire) programs are excellent. We need more of this."

Thompson said Midland Independent School District needs fewer administrators, better-paid teachers and less emphasis on school athletes.

"San Antonio has some of the highest paid teachers in the state. Why can't MISD provide more pay? And support personnel are really left dangling in the breeze (financially), but you won't see any tattered football uniforms."

Thompson, edging up to his 32nd birthday, allows that he speaks his mind. A lifelong member of the National Guard, who served in the Army infantry in ROTC while earning two bachelor's of arts degrees at Trinity University, the UniServ consultant said, "It's not my goal to break the bank or try to get every dollar we can out of every person. We actually save districts money (by representing teachers) omitting the civil attorney cost."

When attending grievance hearings, or mediating problems before they escalate, Thompson said "we try to solve the problem at the lowest level. Hopefully, taxpayers and the school board won't even have to hear about many of the problems."

One problem area teachers face is responding correctly when faced with violent students. Two weeks ago in Odessa, Thompson said a teacher was stabbed by a second-grader with a blade of glass.

"She told the student to go to the principal's office," he said. "But the student wouldn't go, so she tried to physically move the student, which you don't do. The teacher was shocked that a second-grader would stab her, but you just can't touch a student."

However, when it can be proved that a school employee has abused a child, Thompson said, "It's good-bye."

The mediator, arbitrator and bargainer said teachers would be better off if they had collective bargaining — commonly joked about by local educators as being "collective begging" — in the Permian Basin.

"Education will improve when people can take ownership of their jobs, when they can negotiate the terms of their employment," he said.

A former middle-school and high-school classroom teacher, Thompson said, "I appreciate what teachers do today, with the diversity of students they work with, it's a tough job."

SPIRIT: City to present award to Indiana community

(From 1B)

Those communities ranked No. 1 among 130 other entries from all over the United States, Nova Scotia and Scotland for the honor this year. Warren organizations vacated an outdated school building and provided ongoing support while Southern Wells volunteers donated labor and materials to bring the building up to code during the Christmas holidays after a fire destroyed the Southern Wells elementary school last December.

The Midland Community Spirit Award honors communities for their unselfish contributions to a worthy cause that is beyond ordinary community response and inspires people to come together. Past recipients include:

— Sioux City, Iowa (1989) for its response to a DC-10 plane crash;

— Yakima, Wash. (1990) for neighborhood anti-drug efforts;

— Bangor, Maine (1991) for hospitality to Operation Desert Storm troops returning to the United States.

The award originated after Midland received the volunteer efforts of hundreds of citizens during the 1987 rescue of Jessica McClure from an abandoned water well.

Finalists for the 1992-93 award were Baytown for converting a donated building into a police substation; Richmond, Va., for sustained relief efforts via truck convoys to Hurricane Andrew victims in Florida; and Medina City and North Kingsville, Ohio, for raising funds and then using thousands of volunteers to build two playgrounds in their communities.

The Community Spirit Award was administered this year by the Leadership Midland Alumni Association, a volunteer organization of trained community leaders sponsored by the Midland Chamber of Commerce. Members of the selection committee were: Rick Davis, president of Leadership Midland Alumni; Iris Foster, chairman of the committee; and Carole Adams, Joan Baskin, Cathy Byrd, Mona Craig, Pat Garcia, Harriet Herd, John Lewallen, Lynn Mashburn, Joy Matejek, James Roberts, Charles Spence and Carroll Thomas.

Sponsors of the award are Southwestern Bell, NationsBank, the Reporter-Telegram, Texas Commerce Bank, Midland Park Mall and Miller Beer.

Convicted killer scheduled for execution after midnight

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Prosecutors called Antonio Bonham a "blot on society." Bonham, a parolee with a long criminal record, said he only intended to scare a woman he abducted more than 12 years ago and that her killing was a big mistake driven by alcohol use.

Bonham, 33, was scheduled for lethal injection before dawn today for the 1981 killing of Marie McGowen, 62, a Houston business college instructor who was abducted, robbed, raped and then run over with her own car.

At the time of the slaying, Bonham had been on parole less than two months after serving three years of a 10-year prison term for robbery and auto theft.

Bonham asked the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles and Gov. Ann Richards to commute his death sentence to a life term without parole.

"I'm not who I was 12 years ago," Bonham said in a statement released Monday by his attorney, Michael Charlton. "The person who existed 12 years ago does not exist now."

Charlton, who said Bonham has had an impeccable record on death row, said the death sentence could be attributed to the fact Bonham was a poor, young black man who could not afford to hire his own attorney. He also said blacks improperly were kept off the trial jury in a case where the defendant was black and the victim white.

"Mr. Bonham's appeal for clemency raises again the issue of race discrimination in the application of the death penalty," Charlton said.

Bonham's execution would be the 15th this year in Texas, adding to a record for lethal injections in the state in a single year. It also would be the 69th since Texas resumed executions in 1982.

Bonham, whose lengthy criminal record began at age 14, told police he abducted the woman with the intention of stealing her car. He said he hit her in the head with a brick as she was walking from the parking lot at the now-defunct Massey Business College. After throwing her into the trunk, he drove around Houston, then raped her and drove to a secluded area.

After she got out of the car, he said intended to scare her by attempting to run her over. Her crushed body was found under the car about 11 hours after her abduction July 9, 1981.

To comply with the new regulations, the change-over must begin Oct. 9 and be completed by April 9.

The new rates anticipated to be imposed by the city will take affect the beginning of October.

Both rate increases are expected to be approved.

"We've been telling them (City Council) three years this is coming, so they are pretty much familiar with it," Jones said.

Houston librarian hits Lotto jackpot

AUSTIN (AP) — A Houston librarian who was the sole winner of Saturday's $17 million jackpot has played the same set of numbers since the first Lotto Texas drawing last November.

The numbers — 4, 7, 11, 14, 18 and 32 — represent the birthdates of winner Allen Haynes' mother and grandmother.

Haynes on Monday picked up the first installment of his winnings, a check for $861,501.12. He'll get another $854,000 every September for the next 19 years.

"I've been playing Lotto ever since the very first drawing ... You can't win if you don't play," said Haynes, a librarian with Houston's city library system.

He plans to keep working for a while. But his wife, Bernadette, said she closed down her child care business Sunday and will now devote more time to her youngest daughter and church.

"My first thought when Allen said we'd matched all six numbers was, 'You're lying,'" Mrs. Haynes said. "I called the Texas Lottery results line to verify the winning numbers."

The couple plan to share their winnings with their family

Haynes bought his winning ticket at a Stop N Go that earlier sold a jackpot prize-winner in the July 16 Lotto Texas drawing. The store gets a 1 percent bonus for selling the jackpot winning ticket.

The Houston area has produced 15 lotto jackpot winners out of 77, the most of any Texas region.

Safety and security by Crime Alert

Sheila Doucette had her AT&T home security system professionally installed by Crime Alert Inc. Designed to give the most complete home security possible, it has enabled her to say, "I know that I am always safe". For more information call 520-9669.

As the crime rate soars and the economy falls, more and more people are looking for an affordable and secure security system to help protect their families and possessions.

Fortunately, AT&T's Bell laboratories have developed a new type of security system that surpasses other systems with its unique level of protection.

This system is being marketed in Midland by Crime Alert Incorporated, a family owned Texas company which specializes in these systems.

Five months ago Sheila Doucette had an AT&T system installed in her four bedroom house in north-west Midland.

"I love it", she said, "it does so much more than other systems, I know that I'm always safe".

Each particular system is tailored to the customers individual needs, but the heart of the whole system is the Central Controller. This is the systems nerve center; it sends and receives signals from all of the protected areas, constantly monitoring them for any sign of a disturbance.

The system differs from other alarms because it can be programmed to take a number of actions as well as sounding an alarm.

The Central Controller can be linked to a central monitoring station which is manned 24-hours a day. In the event of an alarm being triggered, the monitoring station will check for a false alarm and then call the emergency services.

Because the system is constantly monitored, there are no false alarms that 'cry wolf'. Assistance is on its way very rapidly.

In short, the AT&T system offers blanket coverage. It can be adapted to provide not only protection from intruders, but by using smoke alarms and panic buttons, from fire, medical and environmental emergencies.

There are many special features to the AT&T 8000 and 8300 home security systems. These include:

• The system works on special radio frequencies, (a minimal amount of wiring to install or circumvent) • The system is constantly monitored (there is no risk of the alarm being ignored or the system breaking down),

• Easy to install and maintain.

Crime Alert Inc has recently opened a branch office at 4500 West Illinois in Midland. For more information about this fantastic security system call Kathy Azzopardi, the owner at 520-9669.

Miss Cayce's Christmas Store, a new look and a new location

Kathy Harrison and Becky McCraney, the owners of Miss Cayce's Christmas Store, have relocated their well known christmas store to larger premises, and they are celebrating with a Grand Opening on Friday October 1st.

The store, which has been established for over 9-years specializes in everything to do with Christmas, from the little things such as gorgeous christmas cards and gift wrap to larger theme displays and yard scenes.

Open from October through December, they stock a vast range of different decorations, lights and gifts to suit all people, styles and price ranges.

The emphasis at Miss Cayce's Christmas Store is variety, the store is designed to appeal to collectors as well as those people looking for something pretty for the family tree.

Speaking of trees, they stock a virtual forest of permanent trees that come in all shapes and sizes. Their choice of trees is a good example of the store's philosophy: the selection is the biggest and best in the Permian Basin.

The huge range of gifts and decorations on offer at Miss Cayce's Christmas is a testament to the amount of time Kathy and Becky spend finding them.

They travel to places as far away as Chicago and Dallas in order to give the people of Midland as much choice and variety as one would expect to find in a large metropolitan city.

There are traditional, hand-made nutcrackers from Germany, as well as indoor and outdoor lights: designer wreaths and centerpieces, and traditional tree decorations.

As part of the Grand Opening celebrations, Kathy and Becky have extended their opening hours and they are offering a 10% discount on all items purchased this week-end..

Free speech faces severe limits on some campuses

N.Y. Times News Service

On an April evening this year, three women stopped outside the student union building at Pennsylvania State University and began throwing thousands of copies of a conservative student-run newspaper into their car, plunging the campus into a debate over free speech and the limits of protest.

School officials say two of the women, who were later identified as Penn State students, objected to a cartoon in The Lionhearted, a conservative newspaper, depicting a female columnist at The Daily Collegian, the campus paper, in a bikini. In the cartoon, she sits on a bed whose headboard reads, "Feminist at Work."

Before the end of April newspaper thieves struck not only at Penn State, but also at the University of Pennsylvania and Dartmouth College.

The incidents seemed to show that, for a growing number of students as well as some teachers and administrators, freedom of speech depends on what is being said — a trend that legal scholars find unsettling.

"What's happening is some students are getting the message that to stop unpopular speech is to destroy it," said Robert D. Richards, an assistant professor of journalism and law at Penn State and director of the Pennsylvania Center for the First Amendment. "I think it sets a dangerous precedent."

Referring to what some have called the battle between good speech and hate speech, Richards said: "The First Amendment doesn't make that designation. If you do that, you have to have a censor."

According to the Student Press Law Center, a Washington-based nonprofit legal referral service that monitors such incidents, 15 college newspapers reported losses from last Jan. 1 through July 31, the highest number in its nearly 20-year history. It usually receives two or three reports a semester, said Mark Goodman, executive director of the center.

But in the face of what Goodman calls an "inadequate" response from law-enforcement officials, an increasing number of students seem to believe that stealing newspapers is an acceptable form of protest.

From a third to a half of the thefts can be categorized as "politically correct-related censorship," centering on allegations of racism and sexism, Goodman said. The others have been attempts to suppress stories about students involved in criminal activities. The number of stolen copies has ranged from 300 to 15,000.

On Sept. 14, the University of Pennsylvania decided not to take disciplinary action against nine black students who took nearly 14,000 copies of the student-run Daily Pennsylvanian in April. The students objected to a conservative columnist who criticized affirmative action.

In the Penn State incident, Shannon Coulter and Alisa Giardinelli, both 21-year-old Penn State graduates, have been charged with theft, receiving stolen property and conspiracy, all first-degree misdemeanors.

The third woman has not yet been identified, said Ray Gricar, the Centre County district attorney. About 200 copies of the paper were also burned off-campus, but that case remains unsolved.

Gricar has approved the suspects' application for a first-offender program which, if approved by the court, would suspend the case and place them on probation.

Mike Abrams, The Daily Collegian's editor in chief, says he believes the theft was a legitimate form of expression, not censorship. Indeed, in an editorial last June the paper argued that "the individual(s) who burned copies of The Lionhearted were demonstrating the same freedom of expression that allowed the newspaper to print its views."

Others agreed. Donna Hughes, a professor of women's studies at the university, called the theft a legitimate response to The Lionhearted's "two-year campaign of harassment" against women at Penn State, and added, "I think it was an act of protest considering the very personal, defaming attack of The Daily Collegian columnist in a full-page cartoon."

Michael DeThomas, 22, a senior at Penn State who is publisher of The Lionhearted, rejected these arguments. "What isn't symbolic free speech, then?" he said. "Can I just burn you? I don't like you, and I'm going to burn you."

Oron Strauss, editor in chief of The Dartmouth Review, a conservative student-run weekly that has run into similar problems this year, holds much the same view. In April, black students at Dartmouth confiscated copies of the paper in protest of its coverage of a black student charged with assault.

DEAR ABBY

Concern for mother is check on free rein

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a woman in my 50s with a mother in her mid-80s. My husband and I would like to retire in another year or so, and move to a Southern state.

Van Buren

The problem is my mother. She has her own apartment, and so far she is able to take care of herself. We talk two or three times a day, and I see her at least once a week. I'm afraid when I move, she'll be lost without me. I can't take her with me because my husband doesn't want that, and to be perfectly honest, I don't want her living with us.

Where do my obligations lie? I have grown children and a brother who has a family of his own.

I love my mother, but I also love my husband and want to retire with him alone. I can't seem to stop worrying about this situation with my mother. It's causing a lot of turmoil in my life at this time. Please help me. — IN TURMOIL

DEAR IN TURMOIL: Your mother seems to be doing well thus far, so don't try to look too far into the future.

You and your husband have earned the right to retire alone. If and when the time comes that your mother can no longer live alone, find a retirement home near enough to keep a watchful eye on her.

DEAR ABBY: I've never written to you, but I am an avid reader of your column in the Tacoma (Wash.) News Tribune and must share this with you and your readers.

I have a son who lives a long way from me, but he is in constant touch, and I visit him twice a year. I love his wife, and she is very good to me.

Well, this son just celebrated his 46th birthday, so I called him long-distance to wish him all the best. I was gone from home for several hours that day, and upon my return, I found a beautiful bouquet of red roses delivered by our local florist. The note attached read: "Thank you, Mother, for bringing me into this world. Love, Michael."

I kissed each flower, then I sat down and cried.

There is so much turmoil and unhappiness in this world today — so many unwanted pregnancies and abortions — that I felt I must share this joy that our children can give us across the miles. — MARY IN TACOMA

DEAR MARY: Thoughtful, loving children seldom just happen — the seeds were planted, and now you are reaping what you have sown. Congratulations, Mary.

DEAR ABBY: Here's another one for your funny name collection:

My brother-in-law, "Nacho" — the common nickname for Ignacio — met and introduced himself to a lady in Yosemite. The lady had never heard the name and had trouble remembering it, so Nacho told her to just remember the Mexican snack.

Hours later, when they parted, the lady said, "Glad to have met you, Mr. Taco!" — OSCAR POMPA, ARTESIA, CALIF.

Good advice for everyone — teens to seniors — is in "The Anger in All of Us and How to Deal With It." AT WIT'S END

Walk to altar is sometimes down mean street

By Erma Bombeck

Call me a spoilsport, but there are few places that provide more potential for violence than a wedding.

You've all read a story of a bridegroom who was caught fooling around with a bridesmaid at the reception and the bride shot him in the foot. And just the other day there was the story of a couple who were feeding wedding cake to each other, and he started cramming it into her mouth and she told him to take it easy. He continued to force-feed her, and when a fight ensued, the police were called. They're both due in court this month — assuming they're back from their honeymoon.

Bombeck

Outwardly, weddings should be a happy occasion. It's a party with friends, food and music. What could spoil it? Everyone is in a joyous mood, right?

Wrong. You've got your two families lined up in the church, the bride's on one side and the groom's on the other like the Jets and Sharks from "West Side Story." One innocent remark like, "I'll bet her mother swims out to meet troop ships," and they could blow.

There's the unhappy father of the bride who watches miserably as a group of wild children have a food fight with the shrimp ($14 a pound) and remembers how long he had to work for what this wedding cost.

Don't forget the disgruntled guest who plops down $47 for a pickle fork in the couple's pattern, only to have them open it and say, "Thank for the lock pick! We love it."

Traditions can be volatile. I've seen a bride lift her skirt to remove her blue garter and when she did, the band stopped playing and breathing. I've also seen female guests become quite ugly when the bouquet is thrown.

There's usually a group of unhapppy attendants to the bride who are one shower away from the street. For what they have put into this wedding, they could be cruising the Bahamas. All they have to show for it is a dress that came right out of Tammy Bakker's closet.

But mostly, you have a terrified bride and groom who are secretly convinced they are making the biggest mistake in their entire lives. They are looking at each other in a way they have never looked before. Did her eyes linger too long when she introduced the groom to her old boyfriend? Did he forget her name during the vows on purpose?

It's a long time to smile and hold in your stomach at the same time. It's an awesome commitment. The potential for a clash of personalities is there. Putting a large knife in the hands of the bride and bridegroom to cut a cake is not smart.

Erma Bombeck's column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

UTEP player OK

HONOLULU (AP) — University of Texas-El Paso football player Anwar Abor, who suffered a spinal injury in Saturday's game against the University of Hawaii, was released from the hospital and set to return to Texas Monday night.

Abor, a defensive lineman, suffered a bruised spine in the fourth quarter of the game after jamming his head into Hawaii running back Tupu Alualu.

UTEP trainer David Binder, who will accompany Abor back to Texas, said several Hawaii coaches and players visited the injured Abor during his confinement.

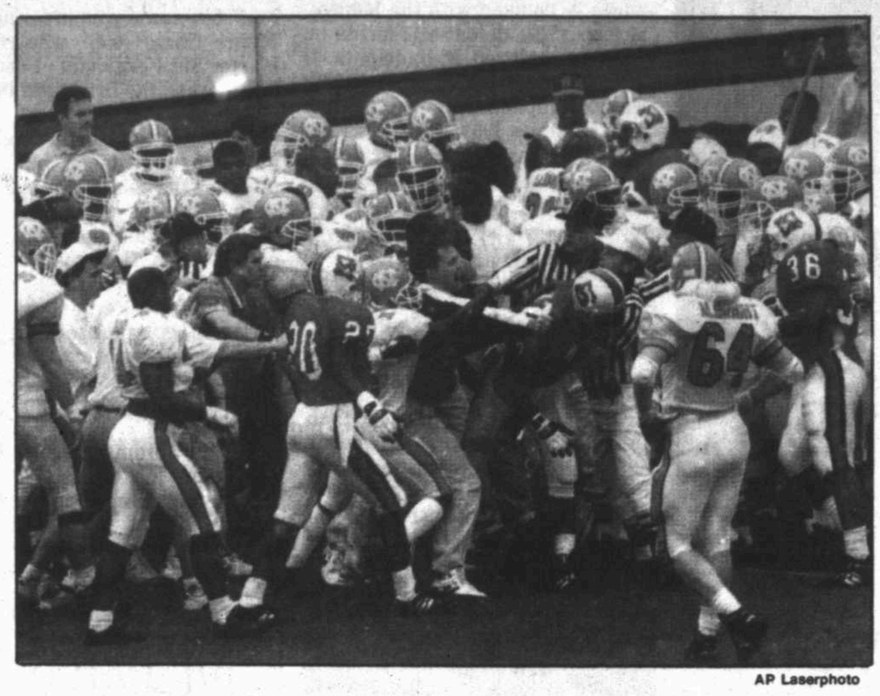

Hawaii won the Western Athletic Conference game, 52-0.

It can start anywhere, sometimes with a glare, maybe with a swear. One thing leads to another and suddenly the players forget about blocking and tackling and start trying out for Don King's next boxing extravaganza.

College football was filled with fights over the weekend with 21 players thrown out of games. Most prominent was the nationally televised game between Miami and Colorado when 12 players were ejected just before halftime.

Is ejection enough of deterrent? Ohio State coach John Cooper, past president of American Football Coaches Association, doesn't think so.

"A lot of things can be done," he said. "I think you'll see, if not this year then next year at the NCAA meetings, with the Presidents' Commission or with the ADs, there'll be some recommendations to control it."

Like what?

"I think there'll be some talk that if any player comes off the bench, maybe he'll be suspended for the next week's game," Cooper said. "I'd be in favor of that."

If that rule were in place, a lot of teams would be shorthanded this week.

Four players were thrown out in both the Duke-Virginia and Maryland-Virginia Tech games. Two fights broke out at the North Carolina-North Carolina State game, one during the game between players, the other after the game between assistant coaches. ACC commissioner Gene Corrigan was considering disciplinary action, particularly in the NC-NC State affair when Carolina assistant Donnie Thompson tackled NC State assistant Ted Cain and the two wrestled.

Red Devils takes over No. 1; Lee unchanged

■ Rankin dominates Class A competition; Midland Lee stays at No. 6 with win over Midland High.

By Jaime Aron
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — The Rankin defense has given up only six points in four games this year, reminding Red Devils coach Raul Sanchez of the school's 1990 Class 1A semifinalist.

But even as Rankin assumed the No. 1 spot in The Associated Press' high school football poll on Monday, Sanchez is still trying to figure out if the team really is that good.

"We haven't played a good football team yet," Sanchez said. "We need a good football game. I'm hoping this week or next week we can get it so we can find out if we can measure up."

A panel of sports writers and broadcasters around the state thought so, listing them No. 1 on 22 of 31 votes. Crawford, previously No. 4, moved up to second and Tenaha slipped to No. 6.

"We haven't played a good football team yet. We need a good football game... so we can find out if we can measure up."

—Raul Sanchez
Rankin head coach

Alvord dropped to ninth from third following a 49-24 loss to Lindsay. The rest of the class moved around only slightly.

In other classes, there was minor movement. New teams eeked into 5A and 4A, and three new teams hold the bottom three spots in 2A.

For Rankin to hold its post, the Red Devils face a unique challenge in the junior varsity at Midland, a Class 5A school.

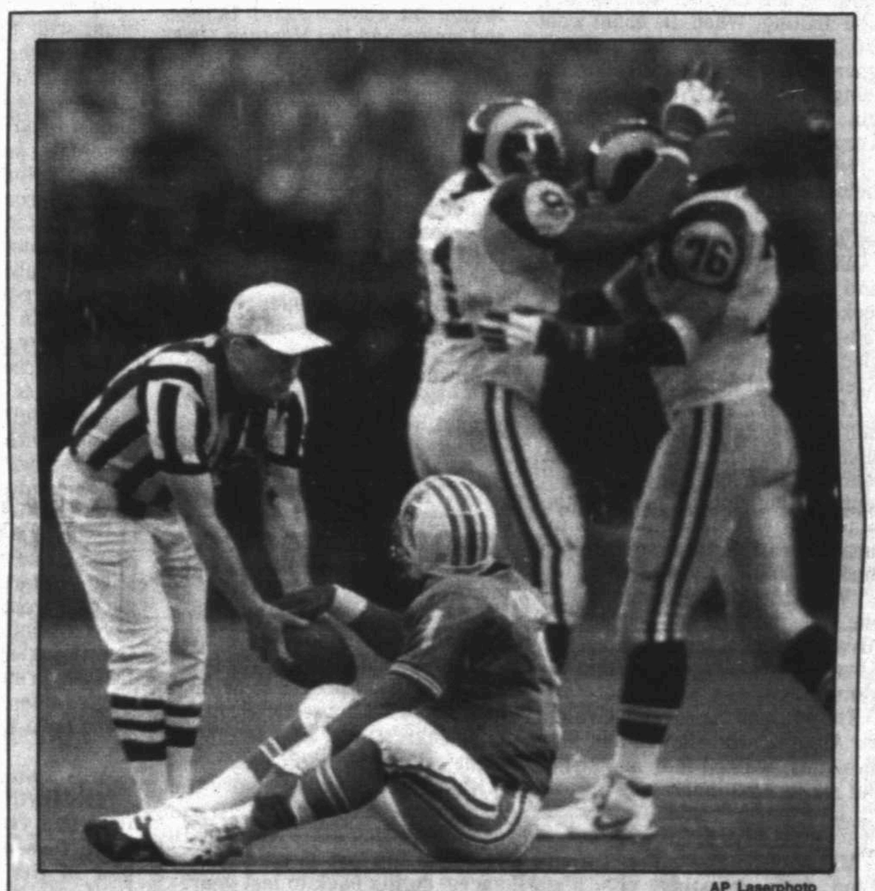

Sanchez expects the second-tier talent at that big school to face up well with the top 19 players in his small 1A program.

So far, Rankin has spanked Iraan 47-0, defeated Forsan 26-0, surrendered its only touchdown in a 53-6 victory over McCamey and last weekend thumped Water Valley 44-0.

The Red Devils' most recent victory, combined with Tenaha's 17-12 loss to Elysian Fields, helped them move up one spot to No. 1 for the first time in Sanchez's five years at Rankin.

Sanchez is in his second year as Rankin's head coach after spending his first three years there as an assistant under Troy Kennedy, who left before last year

Adams quiets talk of Pardee's firing

By Michael A. Lutz
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON — Houston Oilers owner Bud Adams on Monday dismissed as "ridiculous speculation" rampant rumors that coach Jack Pardee would be fired in the wake of a disappointing 1-3 start.

"There seemingly has been a lot of ridiculous speculation regarding the Oilers' current coaching situation," Adams said in a terse one-paragraph statement late Monday afternoon.

"I don't like issuing statements in reaction to wild rumors so I'll make this short and sweet. Jack Pardee is the head coach of the Houston Oilers and will remain as such, period."

Following Sunday's 28-13 loss to the Los Angeles Rams, outraged fans jammed phone lines at sports talk shows, many demanding Pardee's ouster. The Oilers' flagship radio station, KTRH, reported that two phone lines were knocked out

White Sox claim AL West crown

By Joe Mooshil
AP Sports Writer

CHICAGO — The Chicago White Sox, baseball's quiet achievers, used a three-run homer from Bo Jackson on Monday night to win the American League West.

Chicago defeated the Seattle Mariners 4-2, giving baseball its first division winner of the season and the White Sox their first division championship since 1983.

Jackson, who made an amazing comeback from hip replacement surgery, hit a three-run shot to snap a scoreless tie in the sixth inning. The homer, his 15th and second in two days, was a towering fly to left that barely made it into the first row of the left-field bleachers.

It sent the crowd of 42,116 white-socks waving fans into a frenzy and the White Sox to the playoffs. The White Sox open the best-of-7 series against Toronto next Tuesday at home as the Blue Jays clinched the AL East title at Milwaukee only a short time after the Sox clinched.

Steelers defense swarms Falcons

■ Four Falcon turnovers result in 21 Pittsburgh points.

By Ed Shearer
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA — This was supposed to be the night the Atlanta Falcons ended their 1993 futility. It didn't happen. In fact, it wasn't even close.

Neil O'Donnell, Barry Foster and a fierce Pittsburgh defense crushed the Falcons 45-17, handing winless Atlanta its seventh loss in a row on Monday Night Football and its fourth loss of the season.

The Steelers (2-2), 2½-point underdogs, converted four Bobby Hebert turnovers into three touchdowns and a field goal as Pittsburgh ended a string of eight losses by AFC opponents at Atlanta.

The Falcons finished with six turnovers to Pittsburgh's one.

Cornerback Rod Woodson was the main defensive star for Pittsburgh with three interceptions and a 30-yard punt return.

The Steelers dominated the second half, outscoring Atlanta 21-0 to turn a game that was close at halftime into a rout.

Two-thirds of the crowd of 65,477 fans had left the Georgia Dome when the Steelers took a 41-17 lead two minutes into the final quarter. They even began a chant normally heard a mile away — the Indian war chant of the baseball Braves.

O'Donnell, who completed 19 of 25 passes for 259 yards, threw scoring passes of 4 yards to Dwight Stone and 7 yards to Yancey Thigpen.

Foster had the first three-touchdown game of his career, scoring on runs of 30, 7 and 1 yard. He finished with 65 yards on 20 carries.

Kenny Davidson put the finishing touch on the embarrassing defeat when he scooped up Hebert's fumble and returned it 18 yards for a touchdown two minutes into the final quarter.

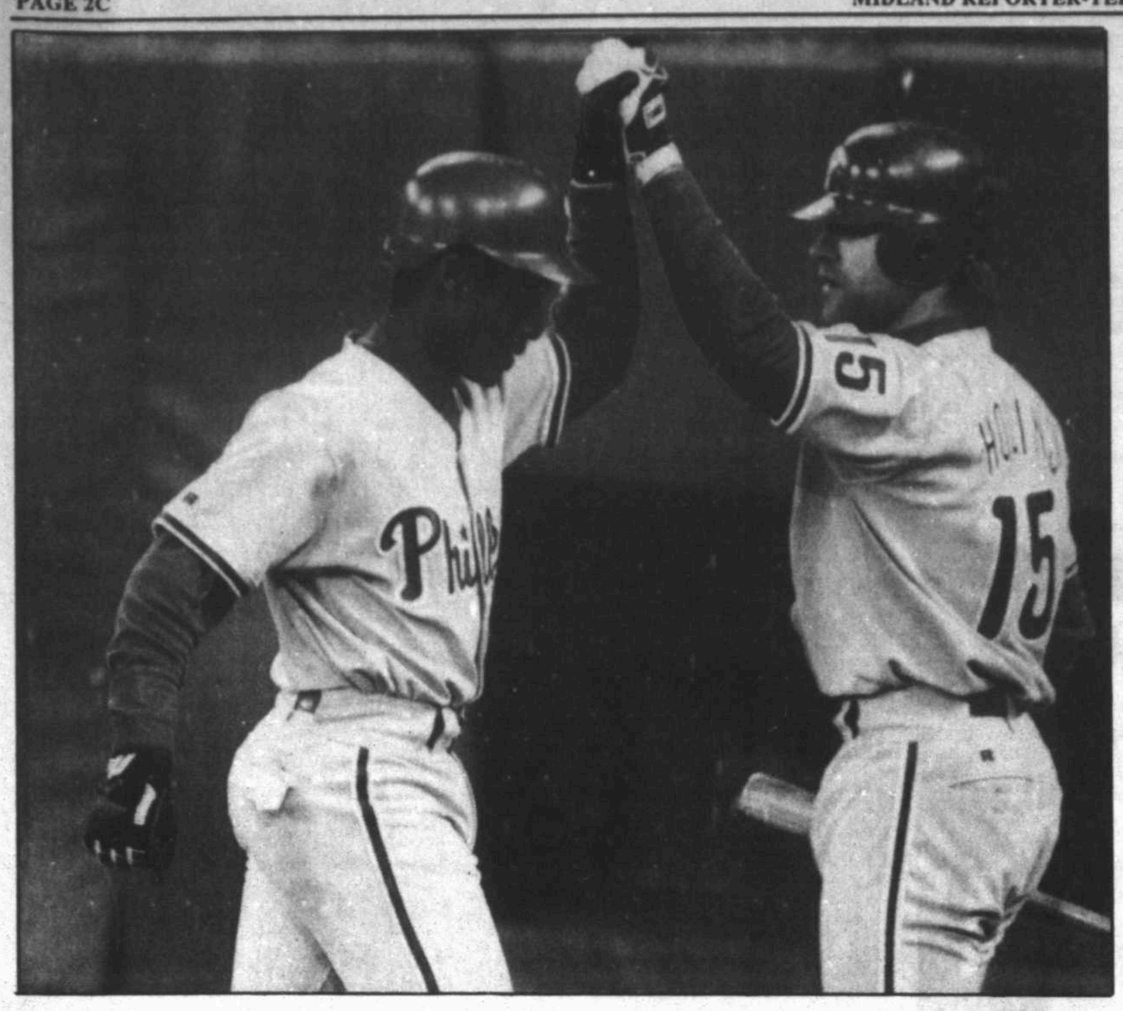

The Steelers also got a 21-yard field goal from Gary Anderson 50 seconds before halftime after Gerald Williams deflected an Hebert pass that Kevin

Phillies clinch tie for NL East crown with win over Pirates

Associated Press

■ NL Roundup

PITTSBURGH — The Philadelphia Phillies won in their least-favorite ballpark Monday night to clinch a tie for their first NL East title in 10 years with a 6-4 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

The Phillies rallied for four runs in the fourth inning, started by Mariano Duncan's 10th home run.

The victory — only the Phillies' fifth in their last 25 games in Pittsburgh — coupled with the Montreal Expos' 3-1 defeat at Florida on Monday, assured Philadelphia of at least a tie for their sixth NL East championship since division play began in 1969.

The NL East could be decided in Pittsburgh for the third consecutive season if the Phillies win once more in the four-game series or the Expos lose again in Florida. The Pirates clinched in Pittsburgh in 1991 and 1992.

Those division titles came largely at the expense of the Phillies, who were 2-7 in Pittsburgh in 1991 and 1-8 last year. Exactly a year ago, the Pirates clinched their third straight division title while Philadelphia looked on from last place, 26½ games behind.

Ben Rivera (13-9) earned the win, giving up three runs on five hits in 6 1-3 innings. He walked five and struck out seven.

Cardinals 4, Mets 3

NEW YORK — Gerald Perry's one-out pinch single in the ninth inning scored Ray Lankford from second as St. Louis rallied for a victory over New York.

Lankford opened the ninth with a walk and stole second as Erik Pappas struck out. Perry then delivered his game-winning single off Mauro Gozzo (0-1), who relieved starter Sid Fernandez. Fernandez had worked the first eight innings.

Rob Murphy (4-7), who faced only one batter in the eighth inning, was the winner. Mike Perez pitched the ninth for his sixth save.

St. Louis tied the game in the eighth when Geronimo Pena hit his fourth homer of the season on a 1-0 pitch from Fernandez.

Cardinals manager Joe Torre was ejected with two outs in the top of the first inning by plate umpire Greg Bonin for arguing balls and strikes.

Rookie Jeromy Burnitz hit his 13th homer for the Mets, a two-run shot in the sixth, to put New York ahead 3-2.

Marlins 3, Expos 1

MIAMI — Rookie Pat Rapp allowed only four hits in eight innings as Florida defeated Montreal to push the Expos to the brink of elimination in the NL East.

The Expos now can only tie for the division title after Philadelphia defeated Pittsburgh 6-4 Monday. Montreal is six games behind with six to play.

Montreal lost consecutive games for the first time since an Aug. 8-12 four-game losing streak

Rapp (4-5) lost his shutout after Darrin Fletcher tripled leading off the eighth inning. Pinch-runner Tim Spehr scored on a groundout by pinch-hitter John Vander Wal.

Rapp, who walked two and struck out three, has allowed only three runs over 20 innings in his last three starts.

Rich Rodriguez pitched the ninth for his 3rd save.

Florida went ahead in the first when Henry Cotto doubled and scored on Jeff Conine's single off loser Jeff Fassero (12-5).

Rapp doubled leading off the third inning and scored third baseman Sean Berry's two-out throwing error.

Walt Weiss drove in the final run with a bases-loaded infield single in the eighth against reliever Mel Rojas.

AL: Sox, Jays head to playoffs

From 1C

"I thought it was a pop fly and I slammed my bat down," Jackson said. "Then the ball kept drifting and drifting. When the count went 3-0, I looked at the bench and they gave me the swing sign. This is the icing on the cake. Now we have to put the candles on against Toronto."

The White Sox charged onto the field to celebrate when the final out was made and the fans kept on waving their socks in the seats.

Winner Wilson Alvarez (15-8) and Dave Fleming (11-5) were locked in a scoreless matchup of left-handers when Ellis Burks singled to open the sixth and Craig Grebeck beat out a bunt single.

After Frank Thomas and George Bell made outs, Jackson hit the 3-0 pitch high into the sky for what appeared to be a long out but the ball kept drifting until it made it the seats. The White Sox added an insurance run in the seventh on Burks' sacrifice fly.

"When Bo hit the homer everyone was jumping up and down," Alvarez said. "I felt like we got it. I knew we were going to win the game."

The win was the seventh straight for Alvarez, who allowed four hits, two runs, walked four and struck out six in 7 2-3 innings.

Blue Jays 2, Brewers 0

MILWAUKEE — The Toronto Blue Jays, bursting with high-priced talent and closing the season as baseball's hottest team, Monday night won the American League East for the third straight year.

■ AL Roundup

Former Milwaukee star Paul Molitor hit a home run in the second inning and Pat Hentgen (19-8) scattered seven hits in 6 2-3 innings as the Blue Jays beat the Brewers 2-0 for their 13th victory in 15 games. Toronto will play Chicago in the playoffs as the White Sox clinched the AL West title Monday with a victory.

Toronto took a 2-0 lead in the third as Ed Sprague, the hero of Game 2 of the World Series against Atlanta last year, singled, Pat Borders doubled and Devon White hit a sacrifice fly.

Milwaukee had second and third with two outs in the fifth but Hentgen got Robin Yount on a fly ball.

Yankees 9, Orioles 1

BALTIMORE — If Toronto were to win the AL East, they had to do it themselves.

New York beat the lifeless Baltimore Orioles 9-1.

Jim Leyritz hit his second three-run homer in as many days, staking the Yankees to a 5-1 third-inning lead. That proved to be more than enough offense for Scott Kamieniecki (10-7), who pitched eight innings of six-hit ball.

Kamieniecki, who struck out five and walked four, was 0-3 with one no-decision since Aug. 21. He is 2-16 in his last 26 road appearances, dating back to last year. Baltimore.

Harold Baines homered for the Orioles, who have lost five straight and 10 of 13. Baltimore was mathematically eliminated from contention Sunday.

Indians 6, Royals 5

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Jerry DiPoto hit Gary Gaetti on an 0-2 count with the bases loaded and two out in the ninth, giving Kansas City a victory over Cleveland.

DiPoto (4-4) started the ninth and walked Craig Wilson, who eventually scored from second on Mike Macfarlane's two-out single after a fierce collision at the plate that knocked the ball loose from catcher Sandy Alomar.

Mark Gubicza (5-8) got the victory by getting a double-play grounder in the top of the inning.

Both Royals runs in the ninth were unearned as the Indians committed three errors in the inning.

Albert Belle boosted his RBI total to 125 with a two-run homer and Jeff Treadway drove in three runs.

Cleveland starter Julian Tavarez shut out the Royals on two hits through three innings before running into trouble in the fourth. Mike Macfarlane led off with a single and went to second on Chris Gwynn's infield out. After Gary Gaetti singled, Bob Hamelin hit an RBI single into right and Jose Lind singled into center to bring Gaetti home for a 2-0 lead.

Twins 11, Angels 3

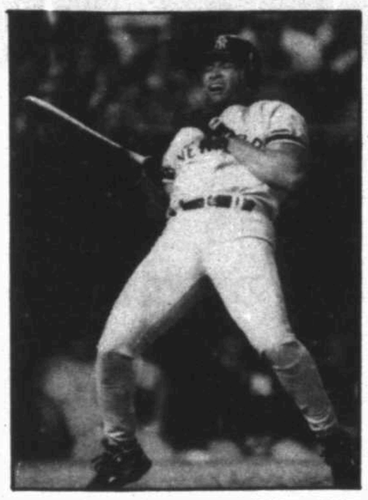

MINNEAPOLIS — Dave Winfield had two hits and drove in three runs as Minnesota used a pair of five-run innings to beat California.

Winfield had a two-run double in the third and and an RBI single in the seventh — both part of the five-run rallies. Brian Harper and Jeff Reboulet each had three hits for Minnesota, which has won five of its last six games.

Angels starter Chuck Finley (15-14) allowed 10 earned runs for the first time in 194 career starts and set a career high in losses. He allowed 11 hits, four walks and hit a batter.

Finley's ERA ballooned from 2.93 to 3.19. Trailing 6-3 in the seventh, Finley was relieved with with the bases loaded and the Twins leading 6-3. All three runners eventually scored.

California has the fewest road wins in the major leagues. The Angels are 25-50 away from Anaheim, including losses in six of their last seven on the road. The Angels left the bases loaded in the second a

Marlins' Santiago to miss rest of season

MIAMI (AP) — Florida Marlins catcher Benito Santiago will miss the last six games of the season after a pair of ganglion cysts were discovered in his left hand Monday.

The cysts were discovered during an examination by Dr. Anne Ouelette of the University of Miami Hospital. The Marlins said Santiago's hand will be in a splint for six weeks, after which he can begin off-season conditioning.

Santiago had been nursing a sore left hand, and rookie Bob Natal has started 10 of the last 11 games.

Santiago, 28, hit .230 in 139 games, with 13 home runs, six triples, 19 doubles, 10 stolen bases and 50 RBI.

Owls hope to break drought against 'Horns

AUSTIN (AP) — When Texas hosts Rice on Saturday, it will be a meeting of teams facing a little history.

The Longhorns' drubbing by Louisville dropped the team to 0-2-1, the first time since 1938 that they didn't win one of their first three games. The last time Texas was winless after three games, they finished 1-8.

In rolling over Iowa State, meanwhile, the Owls raised their mark to 3-1, their best start since 1967. A win over the Longhorns would end a losing streak to Texas that dates to 1965.

Texas Coach John Mackovic knows the score.

"Every game is a big game," he said of the matchup against Rice.

"I don't think it'll get any worse. We need to improve what we're doing and how we're doing it," he said.

Texas has allowed 98 points in three games, eight more than the senior-dominated 1979 defense allowed in 11 games. Fifty-three other Longhorn teams also gave up fewer than 98 points in a season.

"We really made some improvement in our tackling against Syracuse," Mackovic said. "Our tackling (against Louisville) was not very good. We have to re-emhpasize that. Also, our pursuit courses are not as good as they need to be."

Against Louisville, the Longhorns had one drive of 77 yards, including Anthony Holmes' 54-yard run, but had no other sustained drive beyond 42 yards.

"We just were never able to keep the ball long enough to make anything happen," Mackovic said.

"We have to try to continue to build whatever we can. We ran the ball successfully a couple of times, but we've got to get a passing attack so we can move it downfield."

Mackovic discounts the possibility of replacing redshirt freshman quarterback Shea Morenz with either James Brown or John Dutton, true freshmen who currently are being redshirted.

OILERS: Fans want Pardee fired as coach

From 1C

by the volume of calls. Columnists for both major Houston newspapers also called for Pardee to be fired.

At his weekly news conference Monday, Pardee was at his low-key best, even as he talked about his job security and the season's disastrous start. In fact, Pardee said, his evenhanded approach in the face of adversity may be his best asset in trying to end the tailspin.

"This is a confidence game and we've got to get our confidence back," Pardee said. "If you take suggestions from everyone in the world you end up worse. I'm pretty focused and determined that we're going to get it done."

Pardee said he had not talked with Adams since Sunday's game and didn't want a vote of confidence.

"You start getting statements like that here and there and that's a worse omen than anything else," Pardee said. "I wish we were 4-0 right now and they were talking about me being coach of the year.

"But we've been through hard times before and I'll get over it. I can stay focused enough not to worry about that and do what needs to be done."

Pardee isn't the only one under scrutiny in the organization.

Critics have called for the sputtering run-and-shoot offense to be scrapped. The four wide-out scheme has scored more than two touchdowns in a game just once in the last 13 regular season games.

Quarterback Warren Moon has thrown eight interceptions against only four touchdown passes and was benched for the first time in his career during Houston's loss to San Diego two weeks ago.

He stayed in the game Sunday and completed 19 of 42 passes for 310 yards and one touchdown, but he was sacked four times and threw two interceptions.

Even the defense, which had looked strong early in the season, seems to be collapsing. Rams quarterback Jim Everett found three uncovered receivers for touchdowns on Sunday as Los Angeles averaged 6.2 yards per play, including 11.3 yards per pass.

"After a game like that, everyone is shellshocked," Pardee said. "There are things that got better and something else breaks down. We have done nothing to earn the respect of the opponents, the fans or anyone else."

The Oilers really haven't been the same since last year's historic collapse in the AFC playoffs at Buffalo, where they blew a 35-3 lead and lost 41-38 in overtime.

"We haven't done a lot to regain our confidence since then," Pardee said.

Added receiver Haywood Jeffires, "It's embarrassing to have so many talented players and we're not coming up with the plays. And you can't put it on the coaches. We're the ones on the field."

Pardee said he's had no problem with his team's effort.

"This group is easier to work with than any group I've had," Pardee said. "I've heard no complaints. They practice hard. They're at the meetings. I guess I'd rather have a guy miss a meeting and then come out and kick ass on Sunday."

Shula praises Dolphins following Bills' game

DAVIE, Fla. (AP) — Don Shula usually becomes one tough film critic when watching tape of Miami-Buffalo games.

But he liked what he saw when he reviewed the Dolphins' 22-13 victory over the Bills. The outcome Sunday brought a four-way tie in the AFC East with Miami, Indianapolis, Buffalo and the New York Jets, all at 2-1.

"Overall, it was a lot of enjoyment looking at the tapes of the game," Shula said. "It was a very good effort, a very physical effort in all areas of the game."

The Bills had won 12 of the last 14 meetings dating to 1987, including last year's AFC championship game. Miami reversed the trend by producing a pass rush and a running game while shutting down Thurman Thomas.

Red Raiders shake off loss, look towards Aggie game

LUBBOCK (AP) — After three straight losses on the road, Texas Tech coach Spike Dykes is ready to kick off again at familiar Jones Stadium.

"Believe me, it'll be nice to be at home," Dykes said Monday.

The Red Raiders (1-3) play host Saturday to No. 14 Texas A&M (2-1). ABC will televise the 11 a.m. game.

While the Aggies were idle last week, Texas Tech let its Southwest Conference opener slip, 28-26, to Baylor. Tech edged the Bears most of the game but lost three fumbles and a 26-14 fourth-quarter lead.

"We just flat dab had some bad things happen to us," Dykes said. "That happens, and you've got to be able to overcome them to win close games."

To beat Texas A&M, he said, Tech must stop running backs Rodney Thomas and Leeland McElroy. Both were tough in the Aggies' last outing, a 73-0 rout over Missouri on Sept. 18.

Thomas — whose per-game average 138 yards ranks fifth in the nation — has rushed for 414 yards and six touchdowns on 64 carries.

"They've got a lot of weapons," Dykes said. "They can get the electricity to the dynamite, I promise you."

Tech's offensive jolts come from Byron "Bam" Morris. The 6-2, 224-pound running back has rushed for seven touchdowns and 138.3 yards per game, just ahead of Thomas.

On defense, meanwhile, Texas A&M has allowed its opponents an average 268 yards. Tech quarterback Robert Hall by himself usually passes for more than that — 282 yards — per game.

The Aggies are two-time defending SWC champions and have won 15 straight conference contests. Their victory over Tech last year came on the last play: a field goal that put the Aggies up 19-17.

"They're not just a bunch of good athletes that slop around," Dykes said. "They're well coached and they execute very, very precisely. They do a great job. Boy, do they ever play with a lot of effort and a lot of confidence."

FOOTBALL: Fights taint college football

From 1C

rnia junior colleges, Harbor and Pierce. A fight developed and Pierce assistant coach Pat Swift wound up in the hospital when an injured Harbor player struck him in the head with a crutch. Dion Mills, 19, was arrested for investigation of assault with a deadly weapon.

What's going on here?

Colorado athletic director Bill Marolt's was in the middle of the mess in the Miami game, calling the officiating by an all-Big East crew, "an embarrassment to college football ... and the integrity of the game." The comments could lead to sanctions by the Big Eight Conference, which prohibits talking about officiating.

Chuck Neinas, executive director of the College Football Association was at the Miami-Colorado game.

"There's so much flaunting and taunting going on," he said. "I would hope the coaches will help change the philosophy that players can prove their manhood by intimidation. I don't know why it's so popular to trash talk and to try and intimidate. I think the coaches must take a leadership role to eliminate that philosphy of being macho by intimidation.

"When I was commissioner of the Big Eight and Bob Devaney was coaching at Nebraska, he had the least penalized team in the conference. I asked him about it and he said he told his players if someone hit them, it took a bigger man not to retaliate and let the other guy get the 15-yard penalty. It makes common sense.

"We're already under the microscope. We have to remedy this quickly. I think the way to do it is the Devaney way."

Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz said in 24 years as a head coach he had never had a player involved in a fight during a game. Before games, perhaps, but not during them. The longstanding feud between Miami and Notre Dame games resulted in the series being scrapped. An altercation in the tunnel leading to the field at South Bend disrupted a Notre Dame-Southern Cal game a couple of years ago.

RANKIN: Red Devils atop Class A poll

From 1C

to coach Merkel.

Kennedy suffered a heart attack during his first practice there and died, but his spirit remains with Sanchez and Rankin.

"Troy laid a good foundation for us," Sanchez said. "We still do the things he did, like the Veer offense and split defense."

Rankin has reached the playoffs each of the last five years, advancing to the third round last year.

Nine offensive starters from that squad returned this year as did six on defense, leaving Sanchez to expect a lot from the offense and less from the defense. He's been pleasantly surprised by how dominating both have been.

"We've scored quite a few points, but our defense is what I'm really tickled for," he said. "I'd compare them with the defense we had three years ago. I think they had seven shutouts that season."

The amazing thing about Rankin's success is that the school has only 103 students — and two teams.

Sanchez this season is experimenting with a sub-varsity team of 15 players, leaving only 19 on the varsity. Two were injured last week, leaving only 17. Most 1A schools have at least 35 varsity players, Sanchez said.

The changes in the 2A poll saw last weekend's losers Groveton, Mart and Boling replaced by Refugio, Hubbard and Weimar.

The top six remained intact and Freer moved up to No. 8 from seventh.

There was some slight juggling in 3A, mostly caused by then-No. 2 Vernon's 14-6 loss to Pampa. The Lions dropped to No. 5, allowing Southlake Carroll to take an overwhelming 30 of 31 first-place votes.

West Orange-Stark fell from the 4A poll because of a 20-14 loss to Silsbee, allowing undefeated Jacksonville to sneak in at No. 10.

A similar swap occurred in 5A, where defending Division II champion Temple suffered its second loss and was replaced by undefeated Lewisville.

Converse Judson, which spanked Temple 28-0 in a first-ever meeting of reigning 5A champs, almost caught Dallas Carter for No. 3 but the Rockets remained second.

Former Cougar emerges from Lions' bench

■ Andre Ware leads Detroit to first TD since Week 1.

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — This should be one of Andre Ware's happiest hours as a pro.

Yet it isn't. Now, you have to wonder when Ware will have one as quarterback of the Detroit Lions.

Making only his fifth career start, the 1989 Heisman Trophy winner at Houston got the Lions' offense untracked. Detroit scored its first touchdowns since opening day and defeated the Phoenix Cardinals 26-20 on Sunday.

The victory capped a week of turmoil in which coach Wayne Fontes made Ware the starter, dropping incumbent Rodney Peete to third string behind Erik Kramer.

The situation was filled with intrigue and handled rather poorly. It appeared that team owner William Clay Ford called the shot, even though his coach denied it.

And just when Fontes had the opportunity to announce that Ware would start again, the coach said he would watch tapes of the Phoenix game and decide on Wednesday who the starting quarterback will be on Sunday at Tampa Bay.

Ware is confused and frustrated.

"Sometime it's time to quit treating me like a kid and realize I'm a 25-year-old man. Let's go!" he said.

Meanwhile, Ware has to pretend he's the man.

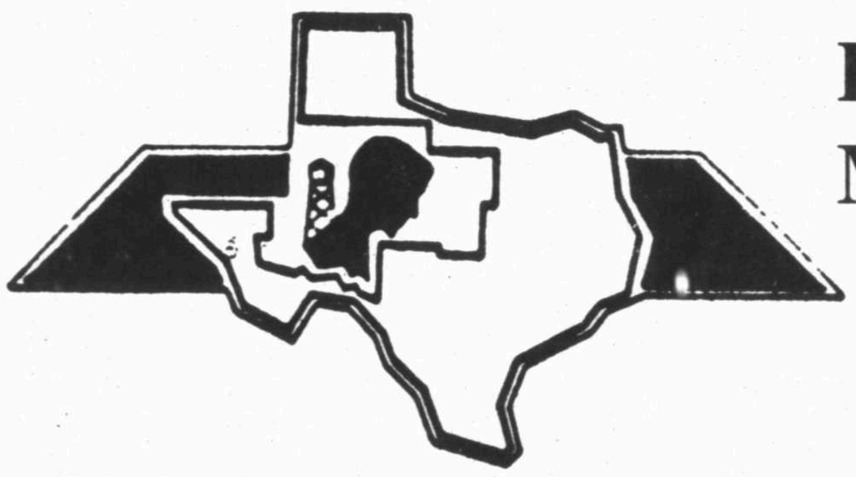

"You think this is a tryout?" he snapped in response to a question. "We're trying to get to the playoffs, and I'm the guy. I feel like I'm the one. I'm not interested in a quarterback controversy.

"If he won't give it to me, I'll put it on myself."

He shattered the single-season NCAA passing-yardage record during his final year at Houston. His 4,699 passing yards eclipsed the previous record of 4,571 set by Jim McMahon at BYU. Ware's 46 touchdown passes as a junior — his final college season — missed McMahon's NCAA mark by one.

Ware owns virtually every Houston and Southwest Conference game and season passing record, as well as 26 NCAA records.

"I get so tired of being overanalyzed," said Ware — 11-of-24 for 194 yards and a TD against the Cardinals. "It's not fair to say a guy screwed up if he's not out there to screw it up.

Prices recover

NEW YORK — Oil futures prices rose Monday as traders continued to focus on Geneva, where the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries was meeting to discuss production levels.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in November settled at $17.73 per barrel, up 16 cents at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

OPEC ministers agreed to limit overall production to 24.5 million barrels a day over the next three months, keeping output at current levels. That drove oil to $18.05 early in the session, traders said.

"But we came off later in the day, because they hadn't reached individual agreements within that quota," said Peter Beutel, an oil specialist at Brody, White & Co. "The bottom line here is people are waiting to see OPEC do it completely and put it together."

Dollar unchanged

NEW YORK — The dollar was mostly unchanged against other currencies on Monday as traders awaited the results of a U.S.-Japanese summit and watched the political situation in Russia.

Gold prices dropped. On the New York Commodity Exchange, gold for current delivery closed at $353.70 a troy ounce, off $3.70 from Friday.

In New York, the dollar finished at 106.05 yen, up from 105.85 on Friday.

In New York, the British pound was trading at $1.5135, more expensive than $1.5082 on Friday.

Other dollar rates in New York, compared to late Friday: 1.6290 German marks, down from 1.6395; 1.4220 Swiss francs, down from 1.4285; 5.6730 French francs, down from 5.7108; 1,575.00 Italian lire, down from 1,583.00; and 1.3259 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3196.

Stocks advance

NEW YORK — Falling interest rates renewed enthusiasm for stocks on Monday and share prices ended higher, led by oil and financial issues.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 24.59 points to 3,567.70.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 9 to 5 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 242.10 million shares, up slightly from 241.41 million in the previous session.

Oil stocks rose after the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries agreed on a fourth-quarter production ceiling. Oil prices rose on the news. Atlantic Richfield rose 2 to 112⅛.

Among other major market indicators, the Standard & Poors index of 500 stocks rose 4.17 to 461.80, while the NYSE's composite index rose 2.03 to 256.21.

OPEC agrees to cap production

■ Members set pumping cap on oil in attempt to drive prices up.

Associated Press

GENEVA — Saudi Arabia, the world's largest oil producer, came under pressure to freeze its crude oil production Monday after OPEC set an overall pumping cap in an attempt to drive up prices.

Ministers of the 12-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries said they would limit oil production to 24.5 million barrels a day over the next three months. That would hold output to current levels.

Oil prices have fallen to about $6 below the group's target of $21 a barrel, their lowest levels in three years.

The ministers still must decide production quotas for each nation.

"We have now solved 50 percent of the problem," said OPEC Secretary-General Subroto.

Prices on international oil markets rallied on the OPEC news. But analysts said they were skeptical that the new agreement would be followed. In the past, the cartel has had trouble getting members to honor their commitments on pumping levels.

The initial price rise "could translate into a stronger increase if they can prove they're sticking to it," said Pierre Terzian, editor of the Paris-based newsletter Petrostrategies.

By holding down production in the October-December quarter, the OPEC nations hope to mop up some of the excess oil on the market. They are counting on rising demand for oil for the winter heating season in North America and Europe.

In the July-September quarter, the group produced about a million barrels a day over its ceiling of 23.6 million barrels.

Saudi Arabia, which supplies about a third of OPEC's oil, was under pressure to hold pumping steady at its current quota of 8 million barrels a day, delegates said.

The United Arab Emirates, another key producer, also was considered a likely candidate for a production freeze at 2.2 million barrels a day.

By freezing the production of those two countries, Iran, Kuwait and Nigeria could be given more barrels. All three have been producing above their quotas.

Iran is pumping about 300,000 barrels above its limit of 3.3 million barrels a day. Delegates said it refused a new cap of roughly 3.5 million barrels a day.

Kuwait has insisted on a higher quota to recoup oil revenues lost during the Gulf War. Delegates said it was likely to be given a new quota of 2 million barrels a day, 400,000 barrels above its previous cap, but lower than its demand of 2.2 million barrels.

OPEC members are: Algeria, Gabon, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Kuwait, Libya, Nigeria, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, United Arab Emirates and Venezuela.

Compaq opens office in Beijing

BEIJING (AP) — Compaq Computer Corp. opened its first representative office in China on Monday, part of its effort to capture a bigger part of the country's growing personal computer market.

It also opened a two-day seminar on technology trends aimed at distributors and computer specialists. The seminar rooms at a hotel were filled to capacity with more than 1,000 people.

"We've given it (China) really top priority," said Eckhard Pfeiffer, Compaq's chief executive officer. "And the event today is another financial commitment. The response is tremendous."

Houston-based Compaq is among several U.S. computer makers, including AST Research Inc., Apple Computer Inc. and International Business Machines Corp., to expand operations in China in recent months.

Compaq signed a letter of intent in July to join with Stone Computer Group, China's leading computer company, in manufacturing personal computers at an existing Stone factory in Shenzhen, near Hong Kong.

Compaq is the No. 2 seller of PCs in China, behind AST, an independent market survey says.

Flooding in Midwest dampens home sales

WASHINGTON (AP) — A four-month string of rising sales of previously owned homes was snapped in August when the effects of heavy rains in the Midwest kept buyers from taking advantage of low mortgage rates.

"The Midwest was the culprit in this report," said economist David Lereah of the Mortgage Bankers Association. "They had the flood problems, so it was to be expected."

Home buying also slowed in the South, although much less than in the Midwest, and helped offset gains in the Northeast and West.

Sales of existing single-family homes nationally totaled a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 3.81 million, down 1.3 percent from 3.86 million in July, the National Association of Realtors reported Monday. It was the first decline in five months.

Still, sales during the first two months of the third quarter averaged 3.83 million, well above the 3.53 million average in the first quarter and 3.58 million in the next, Lereah said.

Solo Serve closes two Dallas stores

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Solo Serve Corp. said it is closing its two Dallas-area stores, which operated at a loss during the first half of the year.

The stores, located in Plano and Irving, Texas, will be closed Saturday, Solo Serve announced Monday.

The 65 employees at the two stores may be offered some transfer opportunities, but most will lose their jobs, said Timothy Grady, Solo Serve's chief financial officer.

For this first six months of fiscal 1993, Solo Serve said its direct pre-tax operating losses attributable to the two stores were about $384,000, or 4 cents per share.

"Management does not believe that the company's performance in the Dallas market can be significantly improved without opening additional stores to achieve greater market penetration, and given the highly competitive nature of the Dallas market, management believes that at the present time the company's resources are better utilized in other markets," the company said in a statement.

Solo Serve said it intends ot establish a pre-tax reserve this quarter of between $1 million and $1.5 million, or 11 cents to 16 cents per share, to cover write-offs related to the closings.

The San Antonio-based company operates a chain of off-price retail stores. After the Dallas closings, they will have 37 Solo Serve stores in Texas, Louisiana and Alabama and nine Half & More stores in Texas and Louisiana.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Few investment options are totally risk-free

By Bill Doyle

Q: When I retired seven years ago, I placed my pension money — the largest lump sum of money I ever expect to have — in an individual retirement account certificate of deposit bearing 9.2 percent interest. The CD matures in March, and I am in a panic.

What is a little old lady in tennis shoes to do, when interest rates will probably be a third of what she has been receiving?

Doyle

A: Unless you are willing to take on some risk, which I would not advise someone such as you to do, your investment choices narrow down to two — either U.S. Treasury securities or another CD. Everything else has some degree of risk.

To keep your money working, invest as soon as practical after your IRA CD matures. Four- and five-year Treasury notes usually are issued early every March, seven-year notes early every April. While the latter fit your investment time frame, Treasury notes pay less than CDs.

As I write this, Treasury notes and bonds due to mature in seven years are yielding 4.84 percent; the Bank Rate Monitor newsletter puts the average yield on five-year CDs at 5.36 percent. Keep in mind that is the average yield across the country. You probably can do better if you look around at various banks and savings and loan associations.

Those rates are way down from what you are getting from your present IRA CD. But they are not as drastically lower as you seem to think.

Interest rates went into a slide about four and a half years ago. Many gurus keep predicting that trend will reverse, but it hasn't happened yet. Although it will eventually, just when is pure guesswork.

While I refuse to play the interest forecasting game, I will go far enough out on the limb to say it is most unlikely rates will fall so far that, by next March, new five-year CDs will pay only a shade more than 3 percent. Your worries about receiving only one-third the interest on your present CD seem overblown.

Q: We are senior citizens who know nothing about stocks and bonds. We just obtained a $10,000 CD for six years at 6.25 percent.

Considering interest rates in general and because we want to be secure, with no ups and downs in the interest we collect, do you consider this a good investment?

A: Of course. The 6.25 percent is an excellent rate for six-year money in the current marketplace. You must have shopped around to do so well. Even U.S. Treasury bonds with 30-year maturities are yielding less.

If interest rates move higher over the next half-dozen years, you might feel you made a mistake. Not so! When you invest money for safety, you have to accept the interest that is available at the time you invest.

Q: I am a widower and propose to buy a CD, a bond or some other investment in my name and my son's name, with right of survivorship.

Am I correct in assuming, after my death, my son could redeem the investment before my will is probated and, if the investment would not go through probate, it would not be included in my estate for federal estate tax purposes?

A: All investments cannot be "redeemed" — turned back to the issuers for cash. Some must be sold to obtain money.

An investment in two names, with "and" between, with right of survivorship, requires both signatures to be redeemed or sold while both owners are living. When one of the owners dies, the survivor becomes the sole owner. But the survivor must produce the deceased owner's death certificate to redeem or sell.

An investment with "or" between two owners' names is in co-ownership form. Either owner can redeem or sell when both are alive. When one dies, the other can redeem or sell.

You are half-right in your assumption. Joint and co-ownership investments do not go through probate. However, because your money would buy the investment, it would be part of your estate for estate tax purposes.
