Gretzky retires

Wayne Gretzky announced his retirement from hockey Friday after two magnificent decades, perhaps no longer at the top of his game but certainly still its greatest player ever. Despite pleas from family and friends not to go, the 38-year-old Great One said his "gut" told him it was time./2B

Refugees had to wait on buses for hours while crossing the border into Macedonia and traveling to the camps. Kosovo's conflict has sent more than a half-million refugees spilling across borders, many saying Serb forces have expelled them.

Producers caught in merger tangle

■ CEOs of Altura, Arco-Permian talk about merger problems, focus on Permian Basin.

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

Altura and Arco-Permian, two of the biggest producers in the Permian Basin, are caught up in one of the biggest and most complex merger tangles in the history of the oil industry. How it will untangle could have a profound impact on the Permian Basin.

Altura, which produces 160,000 barrels of oil per day, was formed two years ago, when Amoco and Shell combined their Permian Basin assets. Then, last year, BP acquired Amoco, including its interest in the Altura venture. But Shell says it wants out of the Altura deal. Shell's desire to exit the partnership opens the door to a number of complicated options, according to those familiar with the partnership.

Shell's share in Altura could be bought by BP-Amoco, a large independent or anther major oil company; Altura could be sold in tact to another oil company or group of oil companies; or Shell may elect to stay in the partnership.

A likely buyer for the Shell assets or all of Altura would have been Arco-Permian, but that option was knocked out when Arco announced that it is entering into merger talks with BP-Amoco. That merger would give BP-Amoco-Arco ownership of Arco Permian, Amoco and Shell assets in the Permian Basin.

The announcement that Arco would seek to merge with BP-Amoco came at a time when Chevron and Arco-Permian were about to conclude an agree-

Keith Weiser, president of Arco-Permian, a Hearst Energy Award winner, said that the company makes money even when the price of oil falls below $10.

David Hamrick, president of Altura, thinks the company has the best of both worlds by being headquartered in Houston and working the Basin.

Petition drive

FOR A NEW SPORTS COMPLEX

Petition committee has more than enough signatures on kickoff of drive

By Jeff Stevens

The Citizens for a New Sports Complex took the word success to a new level Friday with the official kickoff of their petition drive.

"Our goal is to get the signatures needed to put it (a new sports complex referendum) on the ballot," Ken Marks, chairman of the petition committee, said from the entrance to Memorial Stadium at an 11:30 a.m. press conference.

Only 560 are needed to place the issue on the November ballot.

Marks then announced that 800 signatures already had been gathered from petitions circulated since late March.

"We want to get as many as we can get," Marks explained. "We feel like we need as many signatures as we can to make a better presentation to the City Council."

Marks also explained that his group's goals go beyond petition drives.

"We will strive to educate citizens on the need and benefits of a new sports complex."

The complex, including baseball, football and soccer fields, became an issue in late March.

At that time, Mayor Bobby Burns

Jurors hear Martin's grand jury testimony

By Rick López
Staff Writer

Jurors on Friday heard Garland "Butch" Martin's account of what happened the day his common-law wife and two children died in a fire at his south-side residence.

Prosecutor Elizabeth Byer and District Attorney investigator J.D. Luckie read to the court excerpts taken from Martin's testimony to a March 3, 1998, grand jury.

The defendant, 36, is on trial for the death of his spouse, Marcia Stephens, 24; their daughter, Kristin Martin, 18 months, and his stepson, Michael Brady Stephens, 3.

A December grand jury charged Martin with capital murder, but District Attorney Al Schorre is not seeking the death penalty. Schorre alleges that Martin killed his wife

After week of tornado, hail, rain, record lows, highs to climb into 80s by Sunday

By Richard Acosta
Staff Writer

Ah, April.

Birds are singing, flowers are in bloom, summer is right around the corner and after enduring freezing temperatures Midlanders can finally put away their jackets and sweaters. At least that is how it should be.

But this is West Texas and in typical West Texas-weather fashion, instead of sunny and warm with a high in the upper 80s, low temperatures are smashing 52-year-old records and winds are cold and gusty.

The National Weather Service reported Friday that the high dipped below the all-time lowest high for April 16 since the weather service began keeping temperature data.

Friday's high climbed to only 57. The previous lowest high temperature for April 16 was 59, set in 1947.

That record follows the record low set for this

OBITUARIES

Jan Jones

Jan Knickerbocker Jones died April 15, 1999, in a local hospital following a brief illness.

Mrs. Jones was born December 27, 1927, in Graham, Texas, to Andrew and Hazel Ellis Knickerbocker. She moved to Midland with her parents in 1933. Mrs. Jones was a 1945 graduate of Midland High School and attended Gulfpark College in Gulfport, Mississippi, and Texas Christian University in Fort Worth. She married J. Robert Jones in August 1984 in Midland.

Her husband, Mr. Jones, and her daughter and son-in-law, Andrea Knickerbocker and Michael T. Holtz of Lawrence, Kansas, survive her.

No services are planned. Family members will receive visitors from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m. on Monday, April 19, 1999, at her home.

The family requests that memorials be directed to Safe Place, the former Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children, or to a charity of one's choice.

Maurice Tripplehorn

Maurice P. Tripplehorn, 88, passed away in his home in Andrews Thursday, April 15, 1999, after a brief illness.

He was born December 15, 1910, in Findlay, Ohio. He was one of five children born to J.W. and Ida Tripplehorn. Maurice graduated from Oklahoma University with a degree in petroleum engineering. Following his studies, he ran the West Texas operations of his family's petroleum business. Maurice, along with his father, was the first to successfully drill an oil well in Andrews County in 1931. Maurice married the former Vaughan Kelly of Odessa on October 5, 1937, and they made Andrews their home soon after their marriage.

Vaughan preceded Maurice in death on April 11, 1995.

Maurice was a member of the First Christian Church.

Memorial services will be Saturday, April 17, 1999 at 11 a.m. in the First Christian Church with the Rev. Bob Zap officiating. Services are under the direction of McNett Funeral Home.

Maurice is survived by a son, Paul Tripplehorn and his wife, Charlotte, of Fort Worth, Texas; and by three grandchildren, Kelly Jr., Alexis Claire and Jacob; and two brothers, Kent Tripplehorn and Bill Tripplehorn, both of Stephenville, Texas.

LHS students learn workings of government

By Emily Baker

Even though most Lee High School government students are not yet old enough to vote, they are learning how Congress works.

Government students learned about the workings of government by holding a mock 106th Congress this week.

The students conducted Congress almost exactly like they do on Capitol Hill. According to government instructor Beth White, they worked through an approximately three-week process of researching topics, writing bills, gathering in standing committees and debating bills before voting on them. Bills ranged from the official rules of the Slug Bug game to mandatory transportation at bars.

"This helped show the kids how things are really done in Congress," government instructor Jane Kauffman said. "In real life some good bills don't pass and some not-so-good bills do pass."

There were some tell-tale signs that Congress at Lee High School was not the real thing. For instance, the fifth-period Congress adopted a different way of doing business.

Instead of the normal "aye" for acceptance and "nay" for rejection, students were required to say "moo" for acceptance and give off a high-pitched sound, much like a bird call, for rejection. Fifth-period students also would not be recognized by the House speaker unless he or she jumped up and down.

Despite the differences between mock Congress and the real Congress, the act of doing rather than watching seemed to be an effective way to teach the students about government.

"This (mock Congress) is much better for the students," Mrs. White said. "A hands-on experience such as this is a better learning process than a lecture or reading a book."

Several students agreed that the mock Congress was a better learning experience than taking notes and doing book work.

"We are learning the intricacies of government and how bills are passed," senior Jessi Vermillion said. "This gives us the chance to express ourselves, where if we didn't have this we would have to wait until we turned 18 to vote."

Fifth-period minority leader Trey Atwater agrees.

"It was interesting," he said. "By holding this mock Congress, we got a better idea of how government functions."

Not only does the Congress teach students about government, it teaches them skills they may need later on.

"The students learn how a bill becomes law but they also learn more practical things," Ms. Kauffman said. "They learn public speaking skills and parliamentary procedure, which is important at board meetings and things like that."

A big plus for the students was the chance to discuss current issues while having fun.

"This really gives us insight on current issues," junior Jeramiah Harris said. "This really gives us an opportunity to express ourselves."

NATO strikes Montenegro; Albanian refugee exodus resumes full force

By Veselin Toshkov
Associated Press

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — NATO blasted oil refineries, military barracks and airports in Kosovo, Montenegro and the Yugoslav capital on Friday, claiming one of the most successful nights in its nearly month-long air campaign against Yugoslavia.

Air raid sirens sounded again late Friday in cities across Serbia, warning of a 24th possible night of NATO attacks.

In what may be a final push by Yugoslav forces to rid Kosovo of its ethnic Albanians, thousands of refugees were driven into Albania and Macedonia — with tens of thousands more on their heels.

At least 5,000 refugees crossed into Macedonia on Friday, and another 8,000 arrived in Albania by late afternoon. UNHCR spokesman Ron Redmont said an enormous flood of desperate people — upwards of 100,000 new refugees — was believed bound for Macedonia alone.

On the Yugoslav-Albanian border Friday, Albanian and Serb forces exchanged fire for five hours, Albania's Interior Ministry said.

The area has long been the scene of fighting between Yugoslav forces and the rebel Kosovo Liberation Army, which uses northern Albania as a staging ground. But Albanian regular army troops have increasingly been drawn into the conflict — a development that ignites fears of a wider Balkan contagion.

Albanian officials said Serb forces "tried to enter our territory" near the northern hamlet of Bajram Curri, but were pushed back. No injuries were reported.

Shellfire was heard overnight Friday near Macedonia's Jazince crossing.

In Washington, State Department spokesman James P. Rubin said there is evidence of "mass killings and graves associated with those mass killings" in an area west of Pristina, the Kosovo capital.

Rubin also said that, according to independent sources and refugee accounts, Serb forces damaged or destroyed over 400 villages and towns inside Kosovo, 45 of them in the last week to 10 days.

Yugoslav officials said 19 civilians were injured in the latest wave of NATO airstrikes. Serb authorities, who describe virtually all NATO attacks as being aimed at civilian areas, claim 500 civilians have been killed and more than 4,000 hurt in the bombing campaign. Those figures could not be independently confirmed.

On Friday, Yugoslavia declared a day of mourning for what it said were 75 people killed Wednesday when a refugee convoy in southwest Kosovo was hit in a strike it blamed on NATO.

A full picture of the convoy attack has not yet emerged, although NATO has acknowledged hitting one civilian vehicle. On Friday, the alliance again expressed over the loss of life, but said it was time to move on.

A German newspaper, meanwhile, reported that ethnic Albanian leader Ibrahim Rugova was being held under house arrest in Pristina. Rugova was brought to Belgrade on Friday for a meeting with Serbian President Milan Milutinovic and Yugoslav Deputy Prime Minister Nikola Sajnovic.

Rugova did not appear before reporters afterward, but Yugoslav authorities issued a statement saying both sides had agreed that a halt to bombings was essential before any political settlement could be worked out.

Tens of thousands of refugees head toward Macedonian border

BRAZDA, Macedonia (AP) — The residents of entire villages from previously spared areas of Kosovo straggled into Macedonia on Friday, the leading edge of an estimated 100,000 refugees who are being herded out of the country by Yugoslav troops.

Arriving by the thousands in convoys of tractors and cars, refugees reported Serb forces had emptied and burned southeastern towns that had earlier escaped ruin. Serb forces also moved border control posts from three to six miles away from the Albanian border.

The pattern suggested the Serbs were clearing strategic swaths along the Macedonian border to defend the province in the event of a ground attack by NATO troops.

All 3,000 residents of Perlebnic, an ethnic Albanian village in southern Kosovo, were escorted out of town by Serb forces Tuesday, villagers said.

"We hadn't gone five kilometers when we saw the village burning," said Ramadan Syleymani, who collapsed with his neighbors in the Brazda refugee camp, Macedonia's largest. Two more hamlets were on the road behind theirs, he said.

"All the Albanian villages we've been through, we didn't see a single living soul," he said. "I think they're going to clear it out."

The U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees said it believed 100,000 refugees were on the move toward Macedonia; 15,000 have arrived over the last two days.

A Serb purge of western Kosovo was pressing ahead at a similar pace: Refugees were crossing the Morini border post into Albania at a rate of 1,000 an hour Friday. Conservative estimates topped 6,000 by evening, with reports of refugee columns stretching back nine miles.

The crush threatened to overwhelm the meager resources of Macedonia and Albania, two of the poorest in Europe.

Albania sent army trucks north to ferry refugees away from the crowded border camp at Kukes. At the crossing, refugees were handed cups of warm milk and beans to strengthen them after days on the road.

Many of the latest refugees arriving in Macedonia came from the region around Gnjilane (Guh-KNEE-la-nay), one of Kosovo's largest towns, with a prewar population of 70,000. Kosovo Albanians said Serbs had forced out 10 percent of the city's ethnic Albanians in the last week, ordering the rest to reopen shops, which had been shuttered for days while residents cowered at home.

UNHCR estimated 50,000 were on the road from Gnjilane and another 20,000 from nearby Urosevac.

WEATHER: Temperatures to climb into 80s by Sunday

(From 1A)

date. Friday morning's low was 31, breaking the old mark of 34 set in 1947.

This temperature trend started about Tuesday, the day the tornado touched down in southeast Midland.

Meteorologist Jack Ciccone with the National Weather Service said Friday that the chilly weather can be contributed to the tail end of the system that brought Tuesday's severe weather to town.

"We are on the back side of the system that brought in the tornado," Ciccone said. "Right now we are trying to get rid of the upper level low and we should see normal temperatures by Sunday."

Even though the sun has been shining, temperatures have been an average of 20 degrees below the normal for this time of year, according to weather service officials.

Ciccone said the cold air is coming from northern cold Canadian air and snowfall in the northern states.

According to the National Weather Service data, the normal temperatures for this time of year are highs in the 80s and lows in the 50s.

Today, the weather service is predicting highs near 60 with lows dipping down to around 35 to 40. By Sunday, however, the highs are predicted to be back up near 80 increasing into the 90s through Wednesday, with lows staying around 40-50.

Weather service officials said that although the evening and morning have been cold, it is highly unlikely that today's low will break the record for April 17, which is 27, set in 1947.

Ciccone said that the recent temperatures ranging about 20 degrees below normal is not unheard of after severe weather.

"Unusual, but not unprecedented," Ciccone said. "Lubbock got about an inch of snowfall (Friday) morning. Typically you do get lower temperatures after severe weather. It is a bit unusual for it to be 20 degrees below the normal, however."

Costilla cancels acquisition of Pioneer properties

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

Costilla Energy Inc. reported Friday that it had terminated its previously announced acquisition of more than $300 million in Permian Basin producing properties from Pioneer Natural Resources, but was continuing discussions related to another transaction.

In a press statement released Friday, the company also announced that in its recently filed 10-K form for the fiscal year ending December, Costilla would begin a program of asset dispositions and would extremely limit capital expenditures for the remainder of 1999 in order to deal with debt payments and capital deficit.

The company also reported that Costilla's independent accountants had added a paragraph to the auditor's report accompanying the Dec. 31 financial statement that expressed doubt the company could continue as a going concern.

Auditors said the credit payment and the uncertainty about asset sales had prompted the doubt.

For the fourth quarter of 1998, Costilla reported a negative cash flow of $300,000, or .03 cents per share. The company reported a net loss of $77.7 million or $7.67 per share, including a non-cash charge of $59.7 million as a result of impairment of oil and gas properties.

The impairment was described as a devaluation of oil and gas reserves as a result of low commodity prices.

"In spite of our company's strong production levels, commodity prices severely impeded our financial performance in the fourth quarter and throughout 1998," said Mike Grella, president and CEO of Costilla. "Our hedging activities continued to prove helpful in mitigating the impact of low oil prices, but could not fully offset the serious price declines that our industry experienced."

Costilla oil and gas revenues in 1998 totaled $62.8 million including $8.2 million from hedging activity.

MERGER: Outcome could have profound impact on Basin

(From 1A)

ment that would have combined the Permian Basin assets of the two companies in a new company, similar to Altura. After months of negotiation by both Chevron and Arco-Permian, that deal appears in trouble because of Chevron's reluctance to bring its assets into the three-way merger.

David Hamrick, president of Altura, and Keith Weiser, president of Arco-Permian, were keynote speakers at the Executive Oil Conference, Thursday and Friday at Midland Center. In speeches and personal interviews, both CEOs talked about their common problems, focus on the Permian Basin, management styles and merger problems.

Until he became president of Altura last year, David Hamrick never had worked in the Permian Basin. But today he is totally committed to the Basin.

Hamrick said Altura was a Permian Basin company and had no intention of stepping outside the Basin. "The Basin is our first order of business. We are a niche player, we have found our niche and it is the Permian Basin."

Hamrick said Altura was good at working the Basin and would stick with what it is good at. "We find more opportunity here in the Basin than we have money to take care of. Why should we look elsewhere?"

He noted, however, that Altura was now beginning to look for additional capital to handle opportunity in venture arrangements. One project is gas drilling in Terrell County.

Putting company headquarters in the Permian Basin, however, is another matter. "We realize a lot of people are upset, because we are not headquartered here, but we feel we have the best of two worlds with headquarters in Houston," Hamrick said.

He said it would be very costly to relocate Altura headquarters to Midland at this point. It would cost more than $10 million and "with low oil prices, a $10 million expense is hard to swallow."

He said Altura looked very seriously at moving to Midland, but with the difficulty of making the new company work, was more interested in continuity of employees. "We were told if we lost employees we could find just as good or better here, but we had to have continuity at that point.

"Altura feels it has the best of two worlds. We have 600 employees in the Permian Basin and 200 in Houston. There is a lot of business that happens in Houston, too."

He said rent may be cheaper in Midland, but would still require a seven-year payout. "We don't do anything that requires a seven-year payout."

Hamrick, who was raised in Tuscaloosa, Ala., said Altura would prove a dilemma for BP-Amoco. BP expects assets, around the world, to return 15 percent. But Altura, a high-cost operator in a mature area, may not be able to do that. "But when oil gets above $11 a barrel we are a money-making machine. We crank out the cash," said Hamrick, noting that Altura would have to compete against other assets worldwide.

Working through long-term ownership is a top order of business for Altura. Not only does Altura need to establish its own position and reprove its value in the BP-Amoco partnership, it must also deal with the possible pull out of Shell. "There are exit provisions, but this is something we did not anticipate. We are not quite sure how to do it. At the time Altura was formed, near-term exit strategies were not a high priority."

Hamrick said Altura had not adjusted budgets upward since oil prices began to increase, but would wait a little longer. "We want a little more comfort."

He said large oil companies like Altura, with major oil company parents, were good for the Permian Basin because they had the staying power to weather the ups and downs. "We can take a long-term view with these CO2 floods that sometimes produce a negative cash flow, when oil prices go under $12."

With two years of operations under his belt, Hamrick said Altura management was now better able to see the synergies of the company to identify opportunities and capture benefits. "We are capturing benefits even faster than we expected, and feel we can do an even better job."

He said the company was concentrating on safety, cost management, flood efficiency and new ways to do business in order to deliver benefits.

"Safety is great discipline. If you can't manage safety, you probably can't manage business. And if you operate in a mature Basin you have to learn to manage costs. You can't manage price," Hamrick said, noting that Altura excels in CO2 floods, waterfloods and deep waterfloods. "When you spend $75 million a year on CO2 gas and $75 million on electricity, managing cost becomes very important."

Keith Weiser, president and CEO Arco-Permian, agrees with Hamrick that the Permian Basin is a superb repository of opportunity.

"Five years ago, we were written off. We were told to milk the Permian Basin for five or six years, then get out." Weiser said that program of continuous shrinking through layoff and declining production was not a good plan, and Arco-Permian launched its own plan, called the "Coyote Culture."

The program called for lean, mean operating practices, an internal IPO mindset, fierce competition, and intense loyalty to the company and community.

Arco-Permian — which on Thursday received the Hearst Energy Award for Company Performance — has increased production and reserves every year for the past five years, and has put itself into a high-efficiency position whereby it can make money even when oil prices crash to $6 and $7.

"Some people don't believe it, but we really can make money at that price," Weiser said.

He said the company positioned itself for low oil prices from the start. "We don't overstaff. We work without a bench and a net, using outsourcing." Weiser said every employee at Arco-Permian has a passion for business development.

Said Weiser, who returned to the Permian Basin from Venezuela: "Overnight, using the 'Coyote Culture' to capture the many business opportunities in the Permian Basin, Arco-Permian managed to change the attitude in Los Angeles and became the crown jewel of Arco Corp. assets. We were supposed to have gotten $150 million to get us out of the Basin; instead we ended up getting $600 million."

Weiser attributes much of Arco-Permian's success to being headquartered in the Permian Basin.

"To capitalize upon opportunity, you have to be where the action is, and this is where the action is," Weiser said. "Our employees are not only devoted to the company, they are also devoted to Midland. This is their home. This is where they want to be, and they work hard to stay here. We don't have a lot of employees who want to move somewhere else."

Weiser said the quality of life in Midland was directly connected to company performance. He said the Coyote Culture calls for Arco-Permian to stay in its local market, stay in Midland, be decisive and move quickly.

Commenting on the proposed Chevron-Arco-Permian partnership, Wesier said, "We shared a lot of values about the Basin and other practices, and it was amazing how quickly we got together. I hope Chevron decides to stay with the deal, because the prize the two companies could attain together is very high."

If the partnership goes through, Weiser said it would be a tremendous thing for the Basin and Midland..

DRIVE: Committee gets 800 signatures for sports complex brought together some 40 Midlanders to discuss the idea, possible locations, cost estimates and funding sources.

According to Marks, the proposed sports complex would cost approximately $30 million to $35 million and would require a one-fourth of a cent increase to Midland's sales tax. The current sales tax of 7.75 percent would be raised to 8 percent if approved by Midland voters. Marks said it would take 12 to 15 years for the sales tax to pay off the new complex, at which time the tax would be removed.

Marks said the complex is needed to replace Memorial Stadium and Christensen Stadium.

"I've seen a lot of great football games at Memorial Stadium," Marks said. "But when I came to Midland the population was 54,000. Midland is twice that big now and we're still playing in the same stadium."

Memorial Stadium, which plays host to Midland Lee and Midland High football games and track meets, originally was built in 1947. The stadium seats 10,830.

Midland Independent School District Athletic Director Tim Whalen said one of the primary problems with Memorial Stadium is parking.

"It's absolute mayhem down here at Friday night football games. The games start at 7:30 but you can't get into park after 6:30. People are parking clear down at Sam Houston (Elementary School) and all up and down the streets."

Because of the parking problem, Whalen said, the stadium can't accommodate all the fans who want to attend games.

Additionally, because of outdated facilities, Midland didn't host a single playoff game during the 1998-99 football season.

"Who wants to come play in Midland when they can go to Ratliff Stadium (in Odessa) or Lubbock or Amarillo?" Whalen said.

Marks cited a Lubbock Avalanche Journal article that claimed Lubbock hosted 10 football playoff games last year. The games sold 127,000 tickets and at a conservative estimate of $20 per person spent in the community, "That's a $2.5 million economic impact on the community," Marks said.

Both men think that Midland is strategically located and would draw several of those playoff games if it had an adequate stadium.

"For its time, Memorial was a great stadium," Marks said. "But its time has long since passed."

The complex also would seek to replace the 4,500-seat Christensen Stadium, home of the Midland RockHounds.

RockHounds General Manager Monty Hoppel is also in support of the new complex. Hoppel has said in the past that Christensen currently doesn't meet Texas League standards and that there has been pressure to get a new stadium.

The new football stadium would seat 15,000 and the baseball field 6,000.

A site has not been selected yet, but Midland Air Park and a location off Highway 191 have been discussed.

"That would be up to the City Council to decide," Marks said.

Whalen added, "We don't care where they build it as long as they build it."

Also announced at Friday's press conference were members of the petition committee: Ken Marks, Bill Williams, Gary McCright, Doss Rogers and Tommy Ratliff.

Petitions will be due to the City Council by Aug. 1.

Additional information is available by contacting Bill Williams at 682-1671 or Ken Marks at 682-8647.

TRIAL: State to call more witnesses Monday

(From 1A)

because she had plans to take the children and leave him.

According to court transcripts, Martin stated that he and Ms. Stephens weren't having problems the last few days before her death.

"She was a great mother," Martin told the grand jury.

The day of the fire — Feb. 25, 1998 — Martin was suffering from the stomach flu and called in sick to work. Ms. Stephens made arrangements for herself, Martin and the children to have lunch at her mother's house at noon.

After their meal, the mother drove Ms. Stephens and her family back home during the early afternoon.

At about 4:30 p.m., Martin got a call from a friend, Stacey Carr, who asked the defendant to help him give a north Midland client an estimate for fence repairs.

Ms. Stephens was taking a nap on the sofa, but Martin woke her up at around 6:30 p.m. before he left with Carr. They returned to Martin's house about 45 minutes later to find his house engulfed in fire. Firefighters told Martin his family was still inside.

"I was in shock. All I could think about was those babies," Martin said in his grand jury testimony. "People were asking me questions, when I wasn't even there. All I could think about were my kids and my wife. She was so beautiful."

Martin said he tried going into the house to save his family, but he couldn't break open the door. He said that in the past, when he'd forgotten his house keys, he slammed his body against the door to force it open.

"There was a lot of pressure in back of it. It wouldn't open. I burned my hands when I tried pushing it," Martin said.

Martin told prosecutors he shouted for his trapped family, but all he could hear was the roar of the blaze. To prevent the defendant from injuring himself again, deputies handcuffed him and took him away from the scene, Martin said.

"There were like 30 of them on me," Martin said. "I just wanted to go back inside."

According to the transcripts, the grand jury had questions about Martin's alibi.

One panelist asked Martin if he left any appliances on before he left the house. He said his wife had a pot of beans cooking, but they were on an electric stove. The only other running appliances was a TV set and computer, Martin replied.

He had told the panel that he didn't lock his door often because his two trained rottweilers guarded the house from strangers. The grand jurors then asked Martin why he locked his front door before leaving with his friend.

He said he locked the door because his wife was asleep and alone. He added that his front door also had a two-key deadbolt, but it hadn't been used since a worn-out key had broken inside the indoor cylinder, he said.

Two Midland County sheriff's deputies — Sgt. Earl Stroup and Deputy Joe Watters — confirmed that Martin made several attempts to break into the smoky house, but then made a crude remark as he leaned on his father's shoulder and watched his house burn down.

"The statement he made to his father is 'I probably won't be f— -- her anymore,'" Stroup said. Watters said he heard the defendant make the same remark.

John Cook — one of Martin's attorneys — asked the deputies if the might have misconstrued his client's statement. But the deputies said they were only a few feet from Martin when they heard his comment.

"I was shocked because it wasn't called for," Watters said. "To this day, it's stayed in my mind."

Though Martin appeared to be panic-stricken, he never shed a tear, Stroup said.

"The more people that came to the scene, the more determined he seemed to get into the house," Stroup said.

The deputies also denied claims that they handcuffed Martin to a fence. They said they walked him a few yards from the burning home, sat him down and handcuffed one arm to the other.

Stroup also testified that he saw Martin run up to the burning house, break a soot-covered window with a ladder, fueling the blaze with a gush of oxygen. Instead of trying to climb into the window or look inside, Martin placed the ladder in the middle of the yard and walked away, Stroup said.

Cook claimed that his client broke the window under the impression that it would help the smoke escape and cool the house. Witnesses have testified that Martin was experienced with fire, because he worked as a welder.

Martin is also charged with murder, first-degree arson and manslaughter. The state will resume calling witnesses at 9 a.m. Monday in the 142nd District Court of Judge George "Jody" Gilles.

Baressi: Review of MISD by TEA generally positive

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

There were few surprises Friday when Texas Education officials reviewed their District Effectiveness and Compliance evaluation with members of the Midland Independent School District.

"It was generally positive," said Superintendent Joe Baressi after the 90-minute briefing on the routine evaluation, which focused on special education.

The review also looked at the district's bilingual, dyslexic, career and technical and federal title programs.

"I feel comfortable with the report," said Richard Chavira, TEA planner of accountability evaluations. "I feel we made some good recommendations."

Among the 15-member delegation's recommendations were that MISD take steps to increase minority involvement in its gifted and talented programs, focus on ensuring continuity in dealing with students in the cluster program, and improve documentation of its program evaluations and District and Campus Education Improvement programs.

"There are a couple of things that in my opinion were a matter of semantics," Baressi said, referring to the recommendation for more comprehensive documentation.

While the school district has the option of whether to address the recommendations, it is required to address the instances where the delegation said it is not in compliance with federal and state regulations.

"For the most part, we're in compliance; outside of special education, we're almost totally in compliance," Baressi said. "We'll have to make some corrections in our paperwork, especially with special education students."

In noting that African-Americans seemed to be over-represented and whites under-represented in special education programs, Baressi said, "they said we need to examine our demographics in special education to ensure there's no discriminatory bias."

One recommendation in the report that may not have been obvious, Baressi said, was a recommendation that some special education programs at Carver be moved to the high school campuses.

Chavira said that in a week of meeting with parents, district officials and touring different MISD campuses, the group found "MISD has a highly respected staff, a very dedicated staff. They love the children and they're into the programs. They're very professional people. All the children are being served."

A more complete evaluation will be sent to MISD in about 45 working days, after which the district has 15 days to respond. Then the two groups will work together to complete a final draft of the report, Chavira said.

South African crime wave triggers anger, frustration

By Andrew Selsky
Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — No one is safe amid South Africa's crime wave — not a school principal, not an ambassador, not even a top U.N. official.

"It's becoming a nightmare, truly a nightmare," Ambassador Gedeon Magete of Burundi said Friday, a day after his car was stolen at gunpoint from his residence in Pretoria and a week after someone pointed a pistol at him and grabbed his briefcase.

In just four days, a top photojournalist and a school principal joined the long list of those who have been murdered in recent months in South Africa, and a senior U.N. official from the United States was repeatedly raped.

South African police, who have been attacked in their own stations, can't cope with the crime wave, which threatens to derail South Africa's hopes of attracting foreign investors who could help boost the country's economy and create more jobs.

Crime in South Africa is especially high because its brutal, former apartheid system created a callous attitude toward the value of human life, and because economic apartheid remains, with many nonwhites lacking the education and skills needed to earn a living.

The ruling African National Congress also inherited a police force more trained to repress the black majority than to fight crime.

Although murders dropped by 2 percent in 1998, South Africa still has the world's third-highest murder rate — at 56.9 per 100,000 people — after Colombia and Swaziland, according to Interpol. A woman is three times more likely to be raped in South Africa than in the United States.

Deputy President Thabo Mbeki, favored to become president after June 2 elections, has vowed to make crime-fighting a priority. But that is doing little good for victims now.

The murder of elementary school principal Gwendoline Jele in the mostly black township of Soweto provoked a storm of outrage and was front-page news Friday.

Jele, 56, was shot to death Thursday after confronting intruders in her school. They grabbed her car keys, stripped the dying woman of her jewelry and fled in her car.

Counselors were being sent to the school to help traumatized staff and pupils. Jele's son Donald urged those who consider crime a solution to poverty to reject it.

"Instead of building us as a nation, it destroys us," he said.

Jele, a tough but compassionate principal who doled out soup to needy children, was killed the same day as top photojournalist John Rubython was buried. Rubython was stabbed to death Monday in his Cape Town home, allegedly by a 14-year-old intruder who was arrested days later.

A space in the Sowetan newspaper where a cartoon normally appears was blacked out on Friday.

"There is no funny cartoon today, as the cartoonist was attending the memorial service of a fellow journalist, someone who braved death in the (anti-apartheid) struggle, and survived only to become one of the 20,000 South Africans senselessly murdered each year in the new South Africa," cartoonist Jonathan Zapiro wrote bitterly.

Outraged callers to radio talk shows have urged the restoration of capital punishment, abolished after the ANC came to power. But Mbeki's office on Friday ruled that out, saying he "respects and abides by the letter and spirit of the constitution affirming the right to life."

Magete, whose Mercedes Benz was stolen from him Thursday by two gunmen, said he was conferring with Burundian and South African officials about improving his security.

"I'm quite shaken, because this is the second time in a week that I've been robbed by people with guns," he said in a phone interview.

A few blocks from Magete's home, a visiting U.N. official was raped on Thursday during the burglary of a U.N. residence. Five men have been arrested in the burglary and police Friday were awaiting the results of DNA tests to determine which one raped the American woman.

Four of the five are illegal aliens from neighboring Mozambique and the fifth is a South African, said police Inspector Heleen van Heerden. They were being held without bail.

The woman was raped twice by the same man, van Heerden said, dismissing initial press reports that she was gang-raped. The victim had been so distraught when first speaking to police that she was unable to say how many men had raped her.

The U.N. official was on a business trip and was staying in a U.N. house in a wealthy Pretoria neighborhood when she was attacked.

Shredding of live squirrels sparks furor

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — An apology from KLM Royal Dutch Airlines has done little to quell public outrage over the airline's admission that it slaughtered 440 illegally imported squirrels in a shredding machine.

KLM apologized Thursday for feeding the furry rodents live into an industrial meat-processing machine at Amsterdam's Schiphol Airport, but said it had little choice after failing to find them a new home.

The slaughter touched a nerve in the pet-crazy Netherlands, where the population of nearly 16 million owns 2.5 million cats, 1.4 million dogs and millions of hamsters and other animals.

"We are going to do everything possible to try to have this type of machine banned," said Mattheus Beyenberg, spokesman for the Dutch-based Organization for Pets. "It is illegal and someone has made a big mistake."

The squirrels, which arrived from China last week without proper documentation en route to a collector in Athens, Greece, were killed Monday. Animal rights groups denounced the slaughter as cruel, illegal and unnecessary, triggering a debate in Parliament on Thursday.

The Organization for Pets also charged that airline officials have used the same shredding machine to kill 200 other squirrels, several dozen water turtles and numerous rare parakeets and birds this month alone.

Beyenberg said the government's National Inspection Service for Livestock and Meat, the agency which KLM said advised it to use the shredder, of breaking animal protection laws.

In a statement Thursday, the airline said it "made a grave mistake on ethical grounds" when it killed the squirrels and said it "offers its most sincere apologies to animal lovers and all those offended by the events."

However, KLM also argued that it had simply abided by health regulations for live animal imports.

U.S. officials cite new evidence of Serb atrocities

By Anne Gearen
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration said Friday there is new, "compelling" evidence of fresh atrocities inside Kosovo that might explain in part an increase in the exodus from the besieged Serbian province.

The disclosure came as the administration readied a $5.9 billion emergency spending request and prepared to call up as many as 33,000 reserve forces for the Kosovo operation.

President Clinton defended the U.S. role in Kosovo during a fundraising appearance in Michigan. He asked how Americans would feel — "no matter how many apprehensions you have" — if asked to explain "why we couldn't lift a finger to anything about" the crisis in Kosovo.

At the State Department, spokesman James P. Rubin said, "There is ... evidence of mass killings and graves associated with those mass killings," west of Kosovo's capital, Pristina.

He had no information on the number killed but said it was more than a few dozen. The location is different from one where mass graves were reported last week, he said.

The new information, which Rubin called compelling, comes from refugee accounts and independent sources he would not identify. It was turned over to the international War Crimes Tribunal, where investigators are compiling records that could lead to prosecution of Serbian officers.

At the Pentagon, Maj. Gen. Charles Wald said he had heard similar reports of mass graves and had seen corroborating "overhead imagery," presumably from either satellites or NATO pilots.

Meanwhile, Secretary of State Madeleine Albright broadcast a brief message to the Serbian people Friday night to counter what she said were the falsehoods of their own government.

"NATO has no wish to conquer your people and expand eastward," she said. "We have recognized Kosovo as part of your country. But our nations cannot stand by while thousands of innocent people are killed or driven from their homes.

"And that is what Serb forces are doing in Kosovo. Your state media will not tell you this."

Albright's message was delivered in Serbo-Croatian, a language she learned when she lived in Yugoslavia for a time as a child.

The message was being disseminated into Serbia via Radio Liberty, Radio Free Europe and the Voice of America, all U.S. government broadcast facilities. Rubin said all independent media in Yugoslavia has been shut down and replaced with "shameless propaganda and vicious misinformation."

Defense Secretary William Cohen probably will ask Clinton early next week for authority to activate up to 33,000 reserve forces in support of the Kosovo conflict — the largest call-up since more than 200,000 reservists were activated during the 1991 Gulf War, government officials said. The president is likely to approve the request, officials said.

Cohen said he couldn't say precisely how many reservists might be needed but said, "I think it'll be a significant number."

Officials said the Pentagon also is preparing to issue a "stop loss" order that would prevent active-duty troops from leaving the military during the Kosovo crisis. This is meant to limit the need for additional reservists.

The reserve call-up will include up to 25,000 Air National Guard members in units that fly aerial refueling missions both from the United States and from Europe, according to U.S. defense officials.

Some civil-affairs specialists from the Army Reserve are likely to be included, too, the officials said.

On his trip to Michigan, Clinton traveled to the Selfridge Air National Guard Base to met with 50 volunteer reservists who were leaving Friday night for France to support the NATO campaign. The reservists are members of a the 927th Air Refueling Wing.

IRS moving to fire whistleblower agent despite pledge

By Curt Anderson
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Jennifer Long was a star witness, the first IRS agent to tell Congress about abuse of taxpayers without hiding her identity, and now steps are being taken to fire her after years of strong performance ratings.

The tax agency's commissioner is promising an investigation.

Long, a revenue agent in Houston for 16 years, said she believes the action is retaliation for her fall 1997 testimony before the Senate Finance Committee. She acknowledges, however, that she went public then in part because of grievances against her Internal Revenue Service managers.

"They are enraged," Long said in a telephone interview Friday. "They feel like I've betrayed the code of silence by testifying before Congress."

Long said she was abruptly summoned away from an audit Thursday — coincidentally, the same day Americans rushed to file their tax returns — to a meeting with her superiors. She was handed a 13-page memo describing her alleged poor performance.

"It was very upsetting. It was done in a very threatening way," she said. "It's clear that the conclusion has already been made."

Earlier this week, IRS Commissioner Charles Rossotti assured senators at a hearing that "we will take action" if retaliation against whistleblowers is substantiated. Some lawmakers expressed skepticism that reforms intended to make the IRS less heavy-handed will take hold with field managers who resist change.

Rossotti said Friday he was "extremely disturbed that we may have taken an action that could be retaliatory" and sent Deputy Commissioner Bob Wenzel to Houston to review the case. In addition, the Treasury Department's tax inspector general will investigate, Rossotti said in a statement.

"I will not tolerate retaliation against employees who come forward to testify before the Senate Finance Committee or who come forward to report allegations of wrongdoing," he said.

Finance Committee Chairman William Roth, R-Del., said he was outraged by the action against Long and will focus on the Houston district office in future hearings.

"This is a clear example of how some in the IRS's old management culture are using their power to destroy people, like Jennifer, who are trying to make the IRS a better place," Roth said.

The matter comes to light just as Rossotti is winning wide praise for his efforts to make the IRS less secretive, more responsive to taxpayers and more efficient. Rep. Rob Portman, R-Ohio, who co-chaired an IRS reform commission, said situations such as Long's raise questions about the long-term viability of the reforms.

"We're talking about changing the culture of a 100,000-employee bureaucracy that has been locked into an enforcement mentality," said Portman. "This concerns me."

The memo to Long from IRS Houston district manager Karie L. Gulley says Long's performance was judged "unacceptable" in June 1998, only a few months after she told Congress openly about how agents are held to numeric enforcement quotas that often result in violation of taxpayer rights.

Other IRS agents had testified behind a dark cloak and with their voices electronically modified. "She was the turning point," said Roth aide Bill Nixon. "She was the critical witness."

From 1993 through 1997, Long consistently got "fully successful" performance ratings, according to personnel records she provided.

The memo, however, says Long's work "remains unacceptable" and gives her 68 days to improve or face dismissal. It lists numerous specific examples of how she allegedly failed to prioritize her audits, didn't use her time wisely, made incomplete work plans and sometimes did not gather sufficient evidence.

"You will have the opportunity to demonstrate that you can perform at least the minimally successful level," Gulley's memo states. "I will be monitoring your performance closely."

But to Long, that means she will surely fail. "They're just going to ride me and make sure I don't have time to do things," she said. "I will not be given a chance to improve."

As gas prices soar, Americans reconsider long drives, gas-guzzlers

NEW YORK (AP) — Pamela Williams and her husband have been planning a summer vacation drive from their home in Philadelphia to Virginia Beach, Va., and New Orleans.

But after watching gas prices soar roughly 25 percent over the past six weeks, they've begun checking out train schedules.

Mrs. Williams said it was inevitable that the price would go up. "But I didn't think it would go up so fast and so much," she added.

Petroleum industry leaders say prices are merely returning to normal after months of unprecedented lows, but the sharp rise has provoked some Americans to change their gas-guzzling ways.

The latest nationwide review of 10,000 gas stations by the authoritative Lundberg Survey showed the average price was nearly $1.23 a gallon. Three weeks ago, it was $1.09, and in late February a stunningly low 99.8 cents.

California, where heavy demand and extra environmental regulations make gas especially expensive, has experienced the sharpest rise. Premium prices are now flirting with the $2 mark, prompting state Attorney General Bill Lockyer to open an investigation into what he calls price gouging by oil companies.

The big jumps were fueled by a combination of events: OPEC cuts in crude oil production, fires at California refineries and heavy travel during the Easter holiday.

Nell Crawford of Los Angeles drives a Volkswagen, but a few months ago, she and her husband found themselves tempted by trendy sport utility vehicles.

"My husband said, 'No way. These things are gas guzzlers. What are we going to do when gas prices go up?'" she said. "And sure enough, they did."

Now, she says they'll stick to the Volkswagen — no bargain at the pump, but more efficient than an SUV.

Fernando Mercado of Los Angeles drives a Ford Expedition SUV, but he said his family has curtailed the use of their second, smaller car. Now he, his wife and their three children pile into one car for trips to school and work.

"We have two cars, but now it's like we only have one. Even though it is an Expedition, it is cheaper than filling up another gas tank," said Mercado.

Some drivers say they won't change their behavior unless prices rise much higher. Steven Milaitis, who works in Manhattan, drives about 20 miles to work nearly every day from his home in northern New Jersey. He said he doesn't want to rely on buses or carpools.

"I have four kids," he said. "If I need to get home quickly for a game or a concert, I like having that freedom."

Modest increases in the price of gas rarely influence commuters to give up their daily drive, said Jean Stimolo, executive director of Rideworks Commuter Transportation Services, a New Haven, Conn., car pool coordinator.

"If it goes up a dollar a gallon, I think we'll see a change," she said. "But it's a good economy. Maybe people are less sensitive to gas prices."

Internal report highlights problems at Korean Air

By Glen Johnson
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Korean Air, blistered in a safety report by two of its pilots, lost its flight partnership with Delta Air Lines on Friday, a day after the foreign carrier had another fatal plane crash.

Two days earlier, Delta had said it stood by its "code-share" arrangement, despite the dissemination of an internal Korean Air report raising safety concerns at the carrier.

Under code-sharing, passengers traveling to Asia on a Delta ticket might make some legs of their trip on planes operated by Korean Air.

"Delta would not code-share with any carrier it did not believe to be safe," Delta spokesman Clay McConnell said Wednesday. He reaffirmed the statement after the crash Thursday of a Korean Air cargo jet in Shanghai, China.

But on Friday, Delta announced suspension of its partnership and said it would not book passengers on flights operated by Korean Air pending review of the airline's operations.

"Delta will begin immediately to contact Delta customers booked on KAL-operated flights to assist them in making alternative travel arrangements," the Atlanta-based carrier said.

Korean Air's internal safety review stemmed from the carrier's troublesome track record: More than 700 people killed in 20 years, among them 228 who died when a Korean Air 747 flew into a hill on Guam in August 1997 and 269 killed when a Soviet MiG fighter shot down KAL Flight 007 after the 747 strayed into the Soviet Union's airspace in September 1983.

By contrast, United Airlines, the world's biggest carrier, has had 140 passenger deaths in the same two decades.

Last year Korean Air picked 19 of its pilots to participate in an internal safety review. A report written by two of them highlighted a number of incidents:

—During an airport approach, a copilot responded to air traffic instructions intended for another plane and veered off course. The captain responded by hitting him on the back of the hand.

—While planning an airline flight, a crew did not discuss the expected weather or the amount of fuel necessary. Such decisions, they said, should be made by the captain alone.

Also in the report: In-flight newspaper reading by flight crews. Alternate landing sites not approved for the size of plane flown. Arguments between a pilot and a dispatcher about how much fuel to load for an ocean crossing.

The report surfaced recently on the Internet. While the airline confirmed its authenticity, Korean Air officials said the findings were exaggerated and out of line with observations made by the other 17 pilots in the safety review.

"They found some issues, but nowhere near the degree of these two pilots," said airline spokeswoman Penny Pfaelzer.

Bill Hardy, a captain and Korean Air's deputy director of flight operations, said: "What they ended up reporting in that document, they ended up pumping out, a lot of that is like barroom talk."

Hardy said Korean Air has had problems, but the Guam crash marked a turning point for the airline.

The accident prompted senior management to begin a $114 million safety overhaul, including a top-to-bottom review of Korean Air's flight operations. The carrier also recruited more experienced pilots from Western carriers and hired safety consultants from Delta.

"What's being done here is to take this airline and this flight operations department and make it state-of-the-art," Hardy said.

Korean Air's problems may stem in part from its rapid growth. Thirty years ago, it was an eight-plane local carrier. Using former pilots from South Korea's air force, it has exploded into the world's 13th-largest passenger airline.

In their report, the two pilots, whom Korean Air refused to name, said some problems are rooted in a culture in which pilots defer to their seniors, even when they make mistakes.

"Currently, in some Korean cockpits, there is a volatile cocktail of complacency, arrogance, apathy and a lack of self-discipline," the pilots wrote. "These attitudes must be removed from the flight deck at all costs."

The Federal Aviation Administration, which oversees safety of U.S. skies, said Korean officials are responsible for the safety of the airline. The agency could ground an individual plane for safety problems, but under international aviation treaties, South Korea's government has responsibility for maintaining the carrier's safety record.

The cause of Thursday's crash, which occurred shortly after takeoff, is under investigation, but an airline executive said it may have been the result of a terrorist act. It killed the three-member crew and at least five people on the ground.

There are other signs of lingering problems at Korean Air.

Last month, a company jet skidded off a runway while landing in Pohang, South Korea and split in two. Nineteen passengers were injured. In September, another plane overshot a runway, and a month before that, a Korean Air Boeing 747 skidded off a runway in Seoul and tore off its landing gear.

Texas' largest grandfathered facility agrees to emission cuts

By Renae Merle
Associated Press

AUSTIN — The eight largest sources of "grandfathered" emissions — industrial plants that have been exempt from some environmental regulation since 1971 — have pledged to reduce pollution from their facilities under a voluntary program.

The Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission, the state's environmental agency, made the announcement Friday after getting a commitment from the largest such plant: the coal-fired Alcoa Aluminum production plant in Rockdale.

"It is always important to get No. 1 signed and on board, and we have done it," said TNRCC Commissioner Ralph Marquez.

The Alcoa plant generates about 104,108 tons of pollution a year making up more than 10 percent of the 900,000 generated from all grandfathered plants, according to the TNRCC.

Jim Hodson, Alcoa spokesman, said he wasn't sure how much the company could reduce its emissions, but expects it to be substantial.

"We're beginning to really look at the mechanics of it," said Hodson.

Hodson said the company had already pledged to reduce emissions at two facilities, but decided to include the Rockdale power plant, which like the others was built in the 1950s, in response to a legislative effort to give them more flexibility in how they do it.

Gov. George W. Bush spearheaded an effort to allow polluters to voluntarily reduce emissions by upgrading their older facilities. The Senate approved a version of the plan this week, sending it to the House for consideration.

Environmentalists criticize that it gives the plants too much flexibility.

"It promotes the grandfathered plants even though they fail to meet the standards which all other plants are required to meet," said Tom Smith, director of Public Citizen.

"It's a social promotion program for polluters."

Those plants, which contribute about 36 percent of the state's industrial pollution, are "grandfathered" from regulations that require use of the best available equipment to lower air emissions.

There are more than 800 plants that are grandfathered from the most protective environmental regulations, but only a few have been trickling into the voluntary program, said Peter Altman, state director of Sustainable Energy and Economic Development Coalition.

"That's simply not fast enough to protect public health. At this rate it will take an additional 12 years and all we'll get is a fraction of the problem cleaned up," Altman said.

Besides Alcoa, the state has received commitments from the seven other plants that emit the most pollution. That includes four separate TU Electric power plants, the Cabot Corp. carbon black plant in Pampa, Mobil Oil's Beaumont refinery and the Degussa Corp. carbon black plant near Aransas Pass.

"The commitment from Alcoa and these other responsible companies mean that the sources of about 575,000 tons per year of air pollution — 63 percent of the grandfathered emissions in Texas — will undergo careful scrutiny," said Marquez.

Judge fines pilots union $45 million

DALLAS (AP) — The American Airlines pilots union was fined Thursday more than $45 million — nearly all of its net worth — for an illegal sickout that led to canceled flights for tens of thousands of people.

U.S. District Court Judge Joe Kendall had held the union in contempt after they refused his back to work order during the sickout in February.

He held hearings this week to determine compensatory damages for the 10-day sickout, during which American Airlines claimed it lost $57 million.

The union had disputed the claim, saying the sickout cost the air carrier less than $5 million.

Lady Rebels defeat San Angelo, take 4-5A softball championship

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Put it in the bag. Chalk it up. Count it. It's over, baby.

Midland Lee won the District 4-5A softball title for the second time in the last three years at the Lee diamond Friday afternoon, beating San Angelo Central by a 5-1 margin in come-from-behind fashion.

The victory gives Lee an 11-1 record in the 4-5A softball race, the same mark that was posted by the 1997 Lady Rebels when they won the first 4-5A title at Lee. The Lady Rebs are now playoff-bound for the fifth consecutive year and have never missed a playoff berth since 1995 when 4-5A began playing UIL softball.

The win also produces a double advantage since Lee now owns a first round bye in the state Class 5A softball playoffs. Lee will start play in the area playoff round on either April 30 or May 1 against a bi-district winner from El Paso. It also means that Lee won't have to play a district champion at least until the third round.

The district title also comes in the first year for coach Wes Overton, who took over when Perry Young resigned after last season. Still, this is the third district title in a row for Overton.

"We won the district championship last year when I was at Big Spring and were co-champs the year before," Overton said. "So, I guess I've won three in a row."

Rebels' Ivanhoe offers rare surprise as first day goes mostly as expected

By Stewart Doreen
Assistant Sports Editor

Even in his dreams, Midland Lee's Kolby Ivanhoe probably hasn't high jumped 6-foot, 7-inches often, but Friday during the first day of the District 4-5A Track Championships, he did just that.

Ivanhoe, a sophomore, was a huge Tall City surprise during a first day that saw most Midlanders follow their expected patterns.

Midland High's Luke Conder won the discus, Wes Solansky the pole vault title, and Lee's Steve Subia the shot put. The Bulldogs, who are seeking their first team title in district history, are just 11 points behind Odessa Permian and in contention for a first-ever district team title.

Ivanhoe and MHS' Weldon Cooks also qualified for regionals. Cooks took second in the long jump as did Ivanhoe in the high jump. But what a second Ivanhoe's was.

The 16-year-old Ivanhoe did more than just qualify for the Region I-5A meet, which will be held April 30-May 1 in Lubbock. He proved that there is still room for a overachiever among the district's best. Going into this weekend's meet, Ivanhoe's best mark was 6-2. When he cleared 6-7 Friday, that was an increase of five inches. Track fans will not see a more impressive display of improvement this weekend.

"I never thought he could have jumped 6-7. Nobody would have, but that is what it is all about. That is special," Lee track coach Kelvin Ratliff said of Ivanhoe's performance. "It is special when you get a kid coming into his event who is 9th or 10th, and he jumps five inches over his best."

Ivanhoe, who was competing in his first district meet, was equally surprised.

"I told coach Ratliff that my goal this year was 6-4," Ivanhoe said. "I wasn't expecting this at all. I hadn't gotten close this year, but he (Ratliff) and coach (Mike) Meeks were encouraging me and pushing me all year. I stepped it up this week."

Improvement in height aside, Ivanhoe also moved up the 4-5A pecking order in the high jump. Coming into this weekend, a top-2 finish was doubtful. Ivanhoe was ranked sixth, some six inches behind the top qualifier, but the event went along just like a dream. Cooper's Obele Acha Ngwodo, who ranked No. 1 going in, went out early.

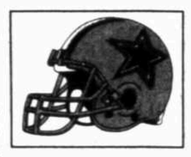
Cowboys' Lett fails drug test

By Jaime Aron
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — For the fourth time in five years, the Dallas Cowboys must prepare to play without Pro Bowl defensive tackle Leon Lett — and this time, it could be for good.



Lett is facing a punishment of at least a year after failing an NFL drug test for the third time, a league source who requested anonymity told The Associated Press on Friday. The violation also could carry a lifetime ban.

Lett has been enrolled in the NFL's substance-abuse program since 1995. He was suspended four games that season, then was suspended for the last three games of 1996 and the first 13 of 1997.

This past year was his first complete one 1994. Like that season, he made the Pro Bowl.

Lett, who seldom speaks to the media, has not commented. The team said it could not comment, citing league confidentiality rules.

Agent Jim Steiner, who refused to confirm or deny the reports, said the 30-year-old Lett has been hit hard by the news stories.

"It's not a pleasant thing to have your name being bantered about," Steiner said. "When you're involved in something like this and he's paid the price, you're embarrassed and you're embarrassed not only for yourself but for your teammates, the fans, the club, Jerry Jones — the whole ball of wax. It's not easy to deal with."

The New York Times cited an unidentified Cowboys official and a team player and the Fort Worth Star-Telegram cited an unidentified NFL source in reporting the failed drug test in Friday's editions.

The Times reported that NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue is reviewing an appeal filed by Lett that could challenge the validity of the test collection and processing arrangements. Tagliabue denied an appeal the last time he suspended Lett.

Steiner, however, said: "There is no appeal going on."

Linebacker Randall Godfrey said teammates are supportive of Lett, who has been tested an average of 10 times per month the past four seasons.

Lett, who underwent elbow surgery two weeks ago, would not be eligible to apply for reinstatement until 60 days before the one-year anniversary of his suspension.

The 6-foot-6, 300-pound Lett went from seventh-round draft pick from Emporia State in 1991 to Pro Bowl starter by 1994. Nicknamed "The Big Cat," Lett used his size, speed and strength to become a standout in the middle of a solid defensive line, both as a run-stopper and pass rusher.

He had 51 tackles, four sacks, 20 quarterback pressures and a team-high seven tackles for losses last season. His presence was considered a big reason the

Midland players suffer frustrating Friday at 4-5A tennis tournament

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

It simply was a day of near misses for the Midland tennis teams at the District 4-5A Tennis Championships played Friday at the Lee High Tennis Center.

Some came up short in the semifinals, while others got upset in the early rounds. What it all amounted to, was a frustrating day for both Midland High and Lee, both of which had high hopes coming into this weekend's tournament and qualifying for regionals.

Now both MHS and Lee must cross their fingers and hope for a playback match to get somebody to the Region 1-5A tournament in Lubbock on April 30-May 1.

Today at 9 a.m., Lee's Marshall Viney, Midland High's Toffee Wilson, and the Bulldogs' doubles team of Meryl McClung and Drew Branum will have to win both their third place match and a playback in order to qualify for regionals.

The big upsets of the day came in the boys doubles competition where both the Nos. 1 and 2 seeds were knocked off in the quarterfinals. And both of the top seeds happened to be from Midland.

The No. 1 seeded team from Lee in Trent Broach and Brian Breithaupt were upset by the Permian team of McClure Wallace and Jason Yelley, 7-5, 6-4. The No. 2 seeded team from MHS in Matt Gray and Marlin Geib was also bounced in the quarters by the Odessa High team of Adam Carson and Matt Hembree, 6-2, 6-2. It so happens that the duo of Wallace and Yelley will face the twosome of Carson and Hembree in today's 9 a.m. championship game.

"It just came down to a couple of points," said Lee coach Steve Buck about his team's early-round loss. "We lost to a team that's in the finals and they'll probably go to state.

"I would've liked to see Brian do well in his senior year. I'm really disappointed because he's really worked hard and deserved to win it. But it wasn't that way today."

The Bulldogs' Wilson and the team of McClung and Branum were a heartbeat away from making it to

Great One decides to end his unparalleled hockey career

By Ken Rappoport
AP Hockey Writer

NEW YORK — Everyone wanted just one more season. Everyone will get just one more game.

Wayne Gretzky announced his retirement from hockey Friday after two magnificent decades, despite pleas from family and friends not to go.

The 38-year-old Great One said his "gut" told him it was time. Left behind are scores of fans still asking for more and scores of records for generations to chase.

His last game, between his New York Rangers and the Pittsburgh Penguins in Madison Square Garden on Sunday, will close a personally frustrating season — and it will end an era.

"The last couple of weeks, a lot of people have been asking me why this is the time," a composed Gretzky said. "It's a gut feeling, something I believe is right."

His head told him, too.

"I started to feel fatigue — mentally and physically — that I never felt before."

"I hate the fact I have to retire," Gretzky said. "I have played for 35 years, since I was 3. Now I'm handing in my skates — I'm done."

Although there were plenty of sad faces among the Rangers executives accompanying him at the Madison Square Garden news conference, Gretzky did not want this to be "a downer," — and he kept his emotions in check.

"The emotional time will be Sunday when I take my skates off. I've been encouraging people to smile and be upbeat," he said. "That will be the tough time."

Gretzky sat with his wife, Janet, and two of their children — Ty and Trevor. Gretzky said his daughter, Paulina, did not want to come "because she thought she'd cry too much."

Video highlights of Gretzky's career were shown before he made it official, and he and his wife watched in rapt attention. Janet cast admiring glances at her husband every once in a while.

Gretzky spent part of the day talking with Charles Dolan, the head of Cablevision, which owns the Rangers, and he tried to talk him into staying.

AP Photo
Wayne Gretzky announces his retirement from pro hockey while standing in front of a giant photo of himself hoisting one of the four Stanley Cups he helped the Edmonton Oilers win.

"We had a nice conversation," Gretzky said. "He extended a hand out to me to stay with the team. I told him I hadn't wavered at all. I'm very confident about that now."

No one could change Gretzky's mind. Not his wife, not the prime minister of his native Canada, not even his idol, Gordie Howe, who advised Gretzky to wait at least a few more months.

"He's going to leave a big void," Howe said from his home in Florida. "He's a proud man. And when you're hurting, it makes you think."

Gretzky's departure marks the second time in three months that one of the world's premier athletes — and the best in his sport — has chosen retirement. But unlike Michael Jordan, who left after winning his sixth NBA championship, Gretzky ends his career with a disappointing Rangers team that didn't even make the playoffs this season.

"Everybody wants to go out like Michael Jordan did, but it's not a perfect world. ... It's not going to happen that way, not this year, but it is nice to be able to say people do want me to play more," Gretzky had said.

On Friday he said he thought Jordan left too early and that he missed watching him play.

Jordan and now Gretzky's departure certainly has made 1999 a year for losing sports heroes. Then there's the Yankee Clipper, Joe DiMaggio, who died last month at age 84.

Ultimately, Gretzky decided to leave sooner rather than later.

Classy and fair-haired with a charismatic smile, if Gretzky was a superstar in the United States, he was a virtual demigod in his home country.

Canadians have been aware of Gretzky since he was a peewee, and can recite such minutiae as the 196 goals he scored in 62 games at age 8, or the 378 goals in 82 games when he was all of 10.

With his magnificent skills and a humble, gentlemanly manner, Gretzky was a perfect goodwill ambassador for hockey. He has been the NHL's biggest box-office draw for most of his 20 years in the league, and never has been shy about that responsibility.

In 1,486 games with teams in Edmonton, Los Angeles, St. Louis and New York, Gretzky has 894 goals and 1,962 assists for 2,856 points — that's 1,006 more than runner-up Howe scored in his Hall of Fame career.

He owns roughly 60 records, is a 10-time scoring champion and a nine-time MVP.

Such achievements can't be predicted, not even for a teen-ager who breaks into the World Hockey Association and has no trouble keeping up with the rugged men of that league. By his second pro season, Gretzky and the Edmonton Oilers were part of the NHL, which merged with the WHA in part to get their budding star into its ranks.

The high-scoring Oilers featured such future Hall of Famers as Mark Messier, Paul Coffey, Jari Kurri and Grant Fuhr, but they always were Gretzky's team. And they replaced the hallowed Montreal Canadiens and Toronto Maple Leafs as Canada's team in winning four Stanley Cups in a five-year span from 1984-88.

Midland High vs. Abilene Cooper

When: 2 p.m.
Where: Midland High's Zachery Field.
Records: Midland High is 21-6 overall and 5-3 in District 4-5A. Cooper is 11-6-1 and 6-2.
4-5A Significance: There's plenty to be found here. A win by the Bulldogs would give them no worse than a tie for second in the district, and if Midland High wins and Midland Lee loses to Abilene High, there would be a three-way tie for first. If Cooper wins and Lee loses, the Cougars would take the district lead, and if Cooper and Lee both win, that would put both of them two games ahead of the third place Bulldogs.
Notes: Midland High was plagued by some inconsistency in the first half of district, but the Bulldogs have opened the second half of district looking like serious playoff contenders. Coming off an emotional 12-10 win over Lee, in which they rallied with six runs in the bottom of the seventh inning, the Bulldogs took care of business against overmatched Odessa High Tuesday with a 17-0 five inning run rule win. Despite the team's prodigious offensive output in that game, the highlight was the district debut of right-hander Mark Avila, who was pulled up from the junior varsity. Avila faced the minimum 15 batters in throwing a no-hitter in the shortened game, and earned himself a permanent place in the rotation... The first time MHS faced Cooper this season, it was one of the few pitchers duels in the district thus far, as the Cougars won in eight innings 2-1. Aaron Pullin took the tough loss against Cooper, and will likely start today, setting up a possible rematch with Cooper's Josh Adams.
Next: Midland High will resume its district schedule when it travels to San Angelo Central Tuesday at 4:30 p.m.

Midland Lee at Abilene High

When: 2 p.m.
Where: at Abilene High's Blackburn Field.
Records: Lee is 17-5 overall and 6-2 in District 4-5A. Abilene High is 9-7 and 3-4.
4-5A Significance: If Lee wins and Cooper loses to Midland High, the Rebels will be alone atop the district, but if they lose and Cooper wins, they'll be tied for second place with MHS. Abilene High needs this game far more. If the Eagles win and MHS loses to Cooper, they will be only a half-game out of third place. With a loss, Abilene High will need a lot of help to return to the playoffs.
Notes: Lee recovered from a six-run rally by Midland High last Saturday to paste Odessa Permian, 16-1, in a five-inning run-rule game Tuesday. The key to that win was an almost sadistic 14-run third inning by the Rebels, who sent 19 batters to the plate in the inning. Marc Matthews struck the biggest blows of all for Lee, hitting two home runs in the third, including a grand slam. Matthews, who drove in seven runs against Permian, has three homers in his last four at bats... The last time Lee and Abilene High played, the two teams played a typically tight and intense game. The Rebels scored three runs in the bottom of the seventh to pull out a 9-8 victory, with Matt Winston scoring the winning run from third on a controversial balk call against Brad Massey. It's likely Massey will pitch again in such a crucial game for the Eagles. Lee coach Jesse Benavidez hadn't yet committed to whom he was going to use, but it will likely be either Josh Ramos or Eric Neatherlin on the mound.
Next: The Rebels have an open date before returning to district action a week from today when they host Cooper at 2 p.m.

SOFTBALL: Lady Rebels claim title

(From 1B)

onship isn't something you get used to," Overton said.

Lee is also a unique team since there isn't a senior on the squad. However, both third baseman Jennifer Bryant and first baseman Sarah Dzubinski have been on both of Lee's district championship teams since they were varsity members since they were freshmen.

"Nobody thought we could win it this year, but we knew it all along," Bryant said. "When I was a freshman, there was more experience on that team with a lot of seniors, but this is a younger club and we are much closer this year than then. We get along really well and this feels really good."

Dzubinski added, "This one (title) is much more special to me. When I was a freshman, I didn't play that much.

"This is a real tight team this year. Everyone gets along together and I think we will do well in the playoffs. I think we'll go at least as far as we did last year (region semifinals) and maybe further."

When sophomore pitcher Mandy Hacker struck out Central's Jeannett Martinez for the last out of regular season play, the Lee team was showered with confetti by fans.

Also, Overton popped the cork on some Welch's grape juice in champagne style bottles, saying, "You can't have champagne, but you can have this."

The Lady Bobcats tested Lee early, taking a 1-0 lead in the first inning when Jana Johnson's double plated Adrienne Damian. Central, however, left runners on third and second as Hacker pitched out of a jam. Hacker gave up only one hit the rest of the way to Central, a single by Leighanne Lunsford in the fourth.

Lee took a 2-1 lead in the bottom of the third and that was all the Lady Rebels needed despite the fact they got three more runs in the fourth.

In the third, Bryant singled in Crista Hargrove to tie the game and freshman Erin Evans later scored what proved to be the winning run, scoring from third base on a wild pitch by Central pitcher Desire McGarvey.

"Coach (Overton) told me to go and I knew I needed to score to get the lead," Evans said. "I knew I needed to be safe, but I felt all the way that I would be safe."

Lee sent nine batters to the plate in the fourth inning for three more runs. Jessica Thompson and Evans each got an RBI with a bases-loaded walk off of McGarvey and Hargrove drove in another run with a single. It was an inning much like Lee's season. Just about everyone contributes in one way or another.

Overton admitted he was somewhat concerned when Central grabbed the first inning lead, but not because the team was behind.

"I felt we could hit her (McGarvey) eventually, but I'm surprised we hit the ball at all today. The kids were really nervous before this game with the district title on the line. That was my main concern."

Lee ended up with just six hits, but they made most of them count. And now they are counting titles. They now need two fingers.

District 4-5A Note: Abilene High, the defending District 4-5A champion, defeated Odessa Permian 11-8 in Odessa Friday to take second place. Abilene High will meet the No. 3 team of District 3-5A (either Lubbock Monterey or Lubbock High) in bi-district play. Permian, which didn't make the playoffs last year, will face the No. 2 team of District 3-5A in bi-district play.

Rodman wears out welcome in L.A.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles Lakers coach Kurt Rambis decided it was time for Dennis Rodman to leave, and never return.

Thus, the Rodman experiment with the Lakers was deemed a failure after seven bizarre weeks.

"I think it was justified," Lakers standout Kobe Bryant said Friday in the wake of Rodman's release by the team a night earlier. "When a guy shows up continuously late ... Yeah, it was definitely justified."

Rambis, who took over as coach of the Lakers on Feb. 26, the same day Rodman played his first game with the team, recommended to management that the seven-time NBA rebounding champion be cut loose after yet another incident Thursday.

According to Rambis, Rodman arrived late for the team's practice at Los Angeles Southwest College, and was slow getting ready because he couldn't find his socks and shoes.

Rambis sent him home, and later had a pointed conversation with club executives Jerry West and Mitch Kupchak.

"This is a time where we need an ultimate focus and concentration," Rambis said after Friday's practice and just before the Lakers left for Utah, where they'll face the Jazz on Saturday night. "I just think this is better for the team."

Rodman had not been given an ultimatum before Thursday, Rambis said, adding he was disappointed the move had to be made because of what Rodman had shown what he was capable of doing.

LETT: Cowboy star finds trouble again

(From 1B)

Cowboys run defense improved from 24th in 1997 to 12th in 1998.

Without Lett, the Dallas defense would suffer next season. The Cowboys, who also lost two defensive linemen in the expansion draft, will likely make the position a priority in the draft this weekend.

Before his drug problems surfaced in 1995, Lett's notoriety came from two mental lapses during high-profile games.

In the 1993 Super Bowl, Lett set a record for returning a fumble 64 yards — but he needed 65 for a touchdown. Thinking he'd score easily, Lett held the ball in one hand and was raising it in celebration when Buffalo's Don Beebe swatted it away at the goal line.

That November, on a snowy Thanksgiving Day game against the Miami Dolphins, Lett mistakenly tried picking up a missed field goal instead of letting it become a dead ball. He ended up knocking it to a Dolphin, setting up Miami's successful second chance kick for the victory.

Wichita rips 'Hounds despite hitting deficit

Staff Report

WICHITA, Kan. — The Midland RockHounds landed plenty of blows against the Wichita Wranglers Friday night, but none of them were for knockouts.

It was the RockHounds who suffered the TKO, falling behind early and unable to rally in a 12-5 loss. Quite simply, Midland couldn't translate outhitting the Wranglers 16-11 into any more than five runs.

Wichita got to RockHounds starter Chris Enochs (0-1) for six runs in the second inning. Sean McNally led off the inning with a home run off Enochs, but the big blow was a bases-loaded triple by Pat Hallmark, which gave the Wranglers a 4-0 lead.

The Wranglers were up 7-0 before the RockHounds responded offensively, but they made little of their opportunities in the fourth and fifth. They twice had the bases loaded with one out, but only could push across a run in the fifth on a sacrifice fly by Cody McKay.

While the 16 hits were a season high, Midland hurt itself by leaving 13 runners on base, another season high.

Trailing 8-2, the RockHounds had a chance to get back into the game in the top of the seventh. Adam Piatt, who was 3-for-5, tripled to drive home a run then Webster Garrison drove home Piatt with a single up the middle to cut it to 8-4. However, McKay hit into a double play to kill the potential uprising.

The Wranglers clinched the game in the bottom of the eighth when they sent 10 men to the plate to stretch the lead to 12-4 against Midland reliever Chris Nelson.

Enrique Calero (1-0) pitched five innings to earn the win for Wichita. Ken Ray pitched the final three innings to pick up the save, despite giving up eight hits and three earned runs.

The two teams will meet again today in a 5: 15 p.m. doubleheader which will conclude the series before the RockHounds return home to open their schedule at Christensen Stadium.

Today's Schedule

The following is the schedule for today's play at the District 4-5A Tennis Championships to be played at Lee High School. The championship and third place matches are scheduled at 9 a.m. If needed, the playback matches will be at 1 p.m.

Boys Singles — Championship: Chris Caceres (AC) vs. Clayton Morgan (PHS). Third Place: Marshall Viney (Lee) vs. Wes Longacre (AHS).

Boys Doubles — Championship: Wallace-Yelley (PHS) vs. Carson-Hembree (OHS). Third Place: Cox-Frizzell (AHS) vs. Narvid-Thurman (SAC).

Girls Singles — Championship: Lacy Johnson (AC) vs. Beverly Dawson (PHS). Third Place: Tracey Roark (AHS) vs. Toffee Wilson (MHS).

Girls Doubles — Championship: Cocoran-Hansen (PHS) vs. Stevens-Torrez (AHS). Third Place: McClung-Branum (MHS) vs. Voss-Black (SAC).

TENNIS: MHS' Wilson plays third-place match

(From 1B)

today's finals. Both results proved to be heartbreakers for MHS coach Tom Heiting's troops.

Wilson, the No. 4 seed, had No. 1 seed Lacy Johnson from Abilene Cooper down a set and down 4-2 in the second set before Johnson broke serve and breathed some new life to win the match, 2-6, 6-4, 6-1.

"Toffee won the first set and appeared to be playing at the same winning level in the second set when the momentum changed a little bit," Heiting said. "I think when the second set got away from her, she lost a little bit of self-confidence. She fought the whole time, don't get me wrong. Maybe deep down in the back of her mind you can tell she was playing not to lose instead of playing to win."

Wilson plays Abilene High's Tracey Roark today in the third place match.

In the semifinals of the girls doubles, McClung and Branum split the first two sets against Permian's duo of Tisha Cocoran and Katie Hansen, and had the Mojo pair down 5-3 in the third. But unforced errors propelled Cocoran and Hansen to a 6-7, 6-4, 7-5 win in a marathon and nail-biting match.

"The girls left everything out there on the court," Heiting said. "You can't say they didn't give it all they had.

"It all had to do with which way the ball bounced. There was good skill and there had to be a little bit of luck involved there. In the end, our team just made a few more unforced errors than they did. Point-wise, I bet we were even-Steven all the way."

McClung and Branum now play San Angelo Central's team of Emily Voss and Emilee Black, a team which took third in last year's district tournament.

"Anything can happen tomorrow," Heiting said. "I think their chances are good. Hopefully, things will swing our way. I would like the kids to go out there and do the best they can, and if we get a shot at the playback, well... we'll deal with that when it comes."

The highlight for the Rebels came from Viney, a sophomore, who lost in the semifinals against Abilene Cooper senior Chris Caceres, 6-1, 4-6, 6-1. Even though Viney lost his match, Buck was encouraged by what he saw in his young player.

"You go to the semifinals as a sophomore, you're not doing bad," Buck said. "He's still got a great chance at it tomorrow. I'm proud of Marshall to go three sets with Caceres."

Viney faces Abilene High's Wes Longacre in today's third place match. If Viney wins, he has to hope that Caceres defeats Permian's Clayton Morgan to force a playback.

"The neat thing about the playback — if Caceres can beat Morgan — and you have a senior against a sophomore and you've just lost a match, that can have a lot of mental effects," Buck said. "I'm not going to give up the ship yet by any means. Hopefully, we'll have some luck. We haven't had any today, hopefully, tomorrow will be a better day."

As far as the Lee girls, Buck said they were just up against some tough draws.

"We did as well as anybody here and we had as good a shot as anybody," Buck said.

All championship matches also begin at 9 a.m. today.

Loss knocks Lady Chaps out of WJCAC contention

Staff Report

EL PASO — The Midland College softball team is now forced into playing only for pride today in its inaugural season.

The Lady Chaps had to win all three of their games designated as Western Junior College Athletic Conference contests to make the Region V playoffs, but that won't happen, even with a doubleheader sweep today. El Paso Community College defeated Midland College 4-3 in the first game of a doubleheader Friday on pinch hit home run in the bottom of the seventh.

MC recovered to win the second game of the doubleheader 8-7 with a four-run rally in the top of the seventh, but that wasn't designated as a conference game.

In the first game, Midland College (43-17 overall, 3-7 in conference) took a 3-0 lead with a pair of runs in the top of the sixth inning after Jessica Cobos drove home a run with a single and Lauren Wallace doubled home a run. But the Lady Chaps couldn't make the lead hold up.

El Paso rallied for three runs in the bottom of the sixth off MC pitcher J.R. Chavira then got the home run in the bottom of the seventh to eliminate all of Midland College's postseason hopes.

In the second game, Midland College trailed 7-4 heading into the seventh. Francesco Salcedo led off the inning with a single, then Wallace hit a two-run homer to cut it to 7-6. Andrea Rodriguez, Renee Gonzalez, Jackie Ortega and Crystal Shelton all singled to eventually bring home the winning runs.

Tonya Thompson was the winning pitcher for Midland College.

The two teams will meet again in a doubleheader at 1 p.m.

Epley records 16 strikeouts

Alisha Epley, 9-2 on the year, struck out 16 batters and hurled a two-hitter Friday as the Lee junior varsity softball team beat San Angelo Central 7-1 Friday to end its season at 18-2 overall and 10-1 in district play.

Claire Howard led the offense with three hits. Melissa Montez, Brandi Roberts, Brandi Gillette and Jodi Sosa all had two hits. Roberts had a double.

Duncan's late free throws trip Blazers

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Suddenly, the San Antonio Spurs are within two games of Portland.

Tim Duncan scored 20 points and connected on two free throws with 3.2 seconds remaining to give the Spurs an 81-80 victory Friday night over the Trail Blazers.

The game matched the No. 2 and No. 3 seeds in the NBA's Western Conference, with San Antonio (27-12) pulling within two games of the Trail Blazers (29-10), who have lost three of the last four games.

"I just stepped up," said Duncan, who recorded his 29th double-double of the season by adding 12 rebounds. "The first one got the home roll and went in. The second one I just tried to make sure it felt good.

"It was a great win."

San Antonio, which has won 21 of its last 25 games, also received 20 points from David Robinson, while Sean Elliott added 15.

"This game is what we expected and I think it's what Portland expected too," San Antonio coach Gregg Popovich said. "You had two very good defensive teams going after each other for 48 minutes. It was a playoff atmosphere. It was good, hard basketball by two good teams. We were just more fortunate down the stretch."

Rasheed Wallace led Portland with 23 points, including 14 in the fourth quarter, while Isaiah Rider scored 14.

"Tonight was a great game, unfortunately we ended up on the wrong side," said Portland coach Mike Dunleavy, who saw his team lose back-to-back games for the first time this season. The Trail Blazers also lost 86-76 at Houston on Thursday.

"It would have been a sweet one to get, however shooting 33 percent you're surprised to even be there against a team like San Antonio. Against a lesser team I think we could have had a victory tonight."

After leading 77-70 with 1:38 to play in the fourth quarter, San Antonio was outscored 10-0 by the Trail Blazers, who grabbed an 80-77 lead on two free throws by Wallace with 45.4 seconds to play.

Following a driving basket by Robinson with 31.9 to play, Wallace misfired on a 11-foot jump shot. Robinson found Duncan breaking ahead of the field, and he was fouled by Greg Anthony.

Duncan, who was only 10 of 15 at the free throw line during the game, calmly sank both free throws.

Wallace's desperation 27-foot shot at the buzzer was an airball.

"David (Robinson) was huge for us tonight, especially in ways that people don't even notice," Popovich said. "He was the anchor for us. The great part about tonight is when Portland hit the 3-pointers back-to-back, we showed great character and did not drop our heads. We weren't ready to die. I really applaud their character."

Wallace, who also led Portland with 12 rebounds, shot 6-of-15 on the night.

"I just missed it," said Wallace of his final potential game-winning shot. "It was the shot we got, whether we wanted it or not."

The game matched two of the NBA's top-five defensive field goal teams, with San Antonio managing only 39 percent shooting from the field while Portland connected on only 33 percent.

"I give my team a lot of credit," Spurs guard Mario Elie said. "Portland is a very good team, they aren't 28-9 for no reason. We didn't quit and David did a good job scoring quickly for us."

■ Texas NBA Teams

Suns 92, Mavericks 85

PHOENIX — Jason Kidd continued to torment his former team, scoring 13 of his 24 points in the second half as the Phoenix Suns defeated the Dallas Mavericks 92-85 Friday night.

Kidd added 12 assists for his 22nd double-double of the season for the Suns, who beat the Mavericks for the ninth straight time. Phoenix has won 26 of the last 28 against Dallas and is 9-1 against the Mavericks since trading for Kidd in 1996.

Clifford Robinson scored 21 points and Pat Garrity added 20 for the Suns, who reached the .500 mark for the first time since March 25.

Dirk Nowitzki scored a career-high 29 points, Robert Pack had 17 and Gary Trent added 15 for the Mavericks, who have lost seven of their last 10.

Garrity scored 10 straight points in the first 5:05 of the third quarter as the Suns extended a five-point halftime lead to 62-54.

Rex Chapman and Robinson added consecutive fast-break dunks as Phoenix took a 68-57 with 4:20 left in the third quarter.

The Suns led by as many as 15 in the fourth quarter.

Garrity and Robinson each scored four points as the Suns ran out to an early 8-4 lead. The Mavericks answered as Nowitzki and Trent each scored five points to give the Dallas a 14-9 lead, their largest of the game.

Dallas still led by five with 2:03 left in the quarter, but Kidd scored seven straight points to pull the Suns within 25-24 at the end of the quarter.

Robinson scored four points and Kidd added a layup as the Suns used a 10-4 run to take a 43-36 lead with 3:42 left in the first half.

Notes: The Suns have held 13 consecutive opponents under 100 points.

McGwire sparks Cardinals despite Astros' unusual shift

HOUSTON (AP) — Not even four outfielders could keep Mark McGwire from getting on base.

McGwire doubled with second baseman Craig Biggio playing as a fourth outfielder, sparking a five-run rally that led the St. Louis Cardinals over the Houston Astros 5-3 Friday night.

McGwire led off the fourth inning with a liner to right-center as Biggio moved to a position between left and center field.

Eric Davis followed with a triple to center off Shane Reynolds (2-1) as centerfielder Carl Everett tried to make a diving catch and missed. McGwire scored to tie it at 1, and Fernando Tatis followed with a go-ahead single.

One out later, Eli Marrero hit an RBI triple, Joe McEwing singled in a run and Darren Oliver (1-1) hit an RBI double for his second hit of the game, putting St. Louis ahead 5-1.

Houston played McGwire straight up in the fifth but he reached on third baseman Ken Caminiti's throwing error. Scott Elarton struck out McGwire with a 94 mph fastball in the seventh with runners at first and second. McGwire, who went 1-for-5, hit into an inning-ending double play in the eighth.

McGwire has four homers this season — all solo shots.

Oliver allowed three runs and nine hits in 5 2-3 innings.

Midland High's Wes Solansky earned a spot at the Region I-5A Track Meet by winning the pole vault Friday. He cleared 14 feet, 6 inches.

TRACK: Five Tall City boys advance so far

(From 1B)

Also, Ivanhoe had an advantage on third-place Matt Halbert due to fewer misses after clearing 6-6, and then he rose over the bar at 6-7. He would eventually lose first to Central's Aaron Hall, not that it really mattered.

"I looked at the paper this morning and I was at the bottom (of the rankings)," Ivanhoe said. "I just came out here and tried to do my best.

"I felt in the rhythm today. I laid off (football's) off-season (workout) this week and came out here and felt really good. I hope he (Lee football coach John Parchman) does (forgive me)."

He probably will.

For the rest of the meet, it was just like many Midlanders would have expected.

MHS' Conder opened up with a win in the discus. The senior launched the discus a season's best 168-9. Conder, who won his first district title, showed his domination of the field with three of the top four throws overall.

"It was good. I relaxed and used my adrenaline for me and not against me," Conder said. "A lot of time I use it against me, but today it was working.

"I just hope we win this meet. I know our runners will take care of business."

Solansky helped the MHS effort for a first-ever district title, winning the pole vault, although he didn't have the form that carried him to a 16-6 clearance one week ago at the Tall City Relays. Solansky, who has been fighting a groin injury, tied Abilene High's Casey Perkins at 14-6 but won the title with fewer misses at a previous height.

"I had a lot of confidence, going into the meet. This was a big surprise," said Solansky, who won his first 4-5A title. "I just came out there, competed and did the best I could."

Lee's Subia left no doubt in winning the 4-5A shot put title. The junior heaved the shot 55-4 3/4. The mark was two-feet better than his previous best this season and was more than four feet better than Permian's Daniel Kerr.

"I was surprised the first time at practice I threw 56 feet and I told coach I will give everybody a big surprise," Subia said.

The MHS boys, which are in a position to battle for a first-ever title after scoring just eight points in the district meet as recently as 1996, are in second place. The first day of district is not a time where MHS could have won the meet, but the Bulldogs didn't hurt themselves in the running preliminaries.

The Bulldogs had top qualifiers in the 100 (Cooks), 200 (Raji Hickey) and 110 hurdles (Anrae Taylor) and will also be armed with the No. 1 ranked 400 and 1600 relays. The Bulldogs qualified two runners in the 110 hurdles, 100, 400, 300 hurdles and 200. Permian has fewer but should score points in the 800 and 1600 where MHS should be shut out.

"I figured us to be where we are," MHS coach Wes Cope said. "Now, it is just a matter of our two runners beating Permian's one (in each finals race) tomorrow."

The MHS girls got a top qualifying time from Shai Simpson. The Lady Bulldogs will have the No. 1-ranked relays in the 400 and 1600.

TODAY'S SCHEDULE: The meet continues at 11 a.m. with finals in the girls long jump and boys triple jump. The running finals get underway at 1:30 p.m.

Stewart claims Goody's pole

MARTINSVILLE, Va. (AP) — Rookie Tony Stewart took advantage of ideal conditions and smashed the track qualifying record with a speed of 95.275 mph Friday to earn the pole position for the Goody's Body Pain 500.

Stewart, who finished a testing session at Martinsville Speedway earlier this month dejected by his inability to get a handle on the .526-mile oval over two days, broke Ted Musgrave's record of 94.129 mph, set in 1994.

"After the two-day test we did here, I was hoping that I would be deathly ill and not have to come back here this weekend," Stewart said.

Revivals act to renew spirit

By Jimmy Patterson
Staff writer

Theologians and the spiritually faithful needn't look far for an example of just how profound an effect a revival can have on a person: Billy Graham.

One of the world's most respected evangelists and Christians, Graham has helped convert millions of people around the world. But he, too, experienced conversion while at a revival. It was during his teenage years in Charlotte, N.C., when Graham attended a revival by Dr. Mordecai Ham where Graham's life would change forever.

What is it about revivals that works to change people? And why do the religious gatherings work for some people and not others?

Obviously, people who go to a revival have to have an open heart and open mind. They have to go to a revival prepared to receive the messages that are being offered. The ministers or theologians who serve in the role of visiting evangelist usually must be a gifted speaker, with an ability to speak to a person and fill the needs of many different individuals who want to be spoken to.

Some ministers would say it is simply a matter of God at work,

Socalite who took vow of poverty to become second U.S.-born saint

By Joann Loviglio
Associated Press Writer

BENSALEM, Pa. — A socialite and heiress to one of Philadelphia's largest fortunes, Katharine Drexel could have had or done anything. What she chose instead as her life's work shocked high society but has her poised to become the second American-born saint.

The woman who lived a storybook youth of mansions, world travel and private tutors took a vow of poverty, entered the convent and used all of her $20 million inheritance to establish a missionary order dedicated to helping those treated the worst and regarded the least.

"She ... gave everything to God, including herself," said Sister Ruth Catherine Spain, who belongs to the Sisters of the Blessed Sacrament order founded by Mother Drexel and who lives in the order's motherhouse in Bensalem.

Supporters began touting her cause almost immediately after her death in 1955 at age 96. And a pair of mysterious healings — one confirmed, the other still being investigated — are drawing her closer to sainthood. She would be the only American-born saint besides Sisters of Charity founder Elizabeth Ann Seton, canonized in 1975.

Four other people with U.S. ties have reached beatification, which is the last step before sainthood: Mohawk Indian convert Kateri Tekakwitha; Belgian-born priest Damien de Veuster, who cared for lepers in Hawaii; Spanish-born priest Junipero Serra, who founded nine California missions; and

Religious groups find varied meanings from war in Kosovo

By Gustav Niebuhr
N.Y. Times News Service

The war in Kosovo is producing images of destruction that have lent special intensity to the conflict's ethnic and religious dimensions.

Members of the various religious groups touched by the war have read these images — villages burned to the ground, women and children driven from homes, crowds herded on to train wagons — nearly as texts bearing messages, and are interpreting them according to their particular history.

The images may be familiar but their readings are rarely the same, and for many contain riveting symbolism. They are either about the experiences of World War II, or the centuries of tension between Islam and the West, or even the long rift between the Western and Eastern branches of Christianity.

For some, the hundreds of thousands of people routed from their homes and forced to flee, often packed into train cars, have created scenes that recall the Nazi attacks on European Jews half a century ago.

For others, especially Serbs and those who feel a kinship with them, the NATO air strikes Sunday during the Orthodox Christian Easter call forth memories of the assault by German warplanes on Belgrade on Easter in 1941.

For still others, there is another way to look at the war, too, in the question raised by some U.S. Muslims about how committed the West will be to defending a largely Islamic minority, the Kosovar Albanians, in the heart of Europe.

"It cuts to the core of the issue of how Islam and the West are going to be compatible," Salam Al-Marayati, director of the Muslim Public Affairs Council, said

Lubbock to host retreat for troubled marriages

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Lubbock will host a weekend retreat for couples in troubled marriages, a program that has the support of a Midland church.

"I very much want to see it flourish in this area," said Rev. Jon Stasney, rector of St. Nicholas Episcopal Church of the Retrouvaille Weekend, April 30-May 2. "Before, the closest was in El Paso or Dallas and it's hard to make that drive."

Retrouvaille, French for 'rediscovery' is designed to help couples trying to save troubled marriages, Stasney said, by stripping the relationship to its spiritual core. The weekend is led by married couples who have been through the program, and a priest.

Forgiveness unites pastor, man who killed son

By Diego Ribadeneira
N.Y. Times News Service

In May 1988, the Rev. Walter H. Everett was furious as he listened to a Connecticut prosecutor explain why the man accused of killing Everett's son was about to agree to a plea bargain that would result in a five-year jail sentence.

Six years later, Everett performed the marriage ceremony for his son's convicted killer.

Today, Everett, 64, and Michael Carlucci, 39, the man who put a gun to Scott Everett's head inside a Bridgeport, Conn., apartment and pulled the trigger, are close friends who talk on the phone regularly.

What happened between Everett, pastor of the United Methodist Church of Hartford, and Carlucci, who works for a trucking company in Connecticut, is a powerful story of forgiveness, faith, and healing.

The men travel to colleges and churches, describing their journey together, hoping to provide a stark lesson on the possiblities of redemption and reconciliation even in the worst of circumstances.

Everett said he chose to forgive Carlucci because he could not bear the alternative — to live with the anger seething in him ever since he learned his son had been murdered.

"It seemed to me that the primary right of a victim's family is not to have the rest of their lives consumed with anger," explained Everett. "My son's life was taken. I don't want my life to be taken by my anger."

Forgiveness, Everett makes clear, does not mean in any way condoning what Carlucci did. It means, he said, "feeling good enough about yourself to want the process of healing to begin."

Everett's ordeal began July 26, 1987, as he sat in a restaurant in Virginia. He and other church volunteers were on their way to North Carolina to build homes for a Habitat for Humanity project.

In-laws and your marriage

Editor's Note: This is one in a series of articles Vincent Kituku has written on marriage and family).

Kituku

I come from a culture where the role of in-laws in their children's marriage was structured and expected. When a man marries, his wife cooks and does all other chores with his mother. The young wife learns the customs of her new family and also how to cater to her own family in the future when she has her own kitchen.

Father's or mothers-in-laws are the parents of your spouse, a part of your flesh. Thus, literally speaking, they are your parents. In the culture of the people of Kamba, where I was brought up, fathers and mothers-in-laws are referred to as "Dad" and "Mom." In my marriage workshops, I remind audiences that they need to send their in-law presents for their spouse's birthday. In-laws are the people through whom God brought the person you love into this world and the ones who bore the burden of raising him or her. They need appreciation and respect. This action also affirms to your spouse that you love and honor his or her parents. In most cases, in-laws can contribute significantly in helping you learn how to deal with marital challenges. Some in-laws help by taking the children to social events and other obligations, assisting in the upbringing of their grandchildren.

However, some parents' intrusion into their married children's lives could cause marital problems, and, if not addressed properly, could lead to divorce. Some in-laws may inadvertently act as if they are running your family. They arrange what is done on holidays, who is to be invited,

The Good Book: Nahum (Part 34 of 66)

Overview:
During the 8th and 7th century B.C. Assyria was the most powerful kingdom of the Biblical world. The Assyrians conquered many smaller kingdoms in the Middle East including the northern kingdom of Israel in 721 B.C. Assyrian dominance began to wane and eventually ended in 612 with the destruction of their capital, Nineveh. The prophet Nahum foretells the destruction of Nineveh. Nahum boldly proclaims that Assyria's downfall is a result of the Lord's judgment upon an unscrupulous, defiant nation. God is the avenger of cruelty and immorality.

Theme Passages:
1:7-8 "The Lord is good, a stronghold in a day of trouble; he protects those who take refuge in him, even in a rushing flood. He will make a full end of his adversaries, and will pursue his enemies into darkness."
3:18-19 "Your shepherds are asleep, O King of Assyria; your nobles slumber. Your people are scattered on the mountains with no one to gather them. There is no assuaging your hurt, your wound is mortal. All who hear the news about you clap their hands over you. For who has ever escaped your endless cruelty?"

REVIVALS: Personal testimony an important part of messages and the prayers of a church community that lead people to be reached at revivals.

"I think probably the greatest effect comes as a result of the preparation that goes into the time for revival," said Pete Campbell, of Cotton Flat Baptist Church. "We always spend a lot of time praying for the church and the people in the community and the evangelist coming in. There's an awful lot of prayer that goes into a revival."

Campbell worked feverishly into the night last Tuesday after a tornado ripped through the houses of many of his congregation members south of Midland. On Wednesday morning, Campbell was to begin serving at a Walk to Emmeus religious retreat in Stanton, another type of revival.

Campbell said God is capable of changing anyone's heart and though it's not always completely necessary for a person to go to a revival expecting a conversion experience, it can be helpful.

"If a person goes into it with a sense of expecting God to do something in their lives, he usually will," Campbell said. "God made us free moral agents and we have the right to either allow him to work in our lives or to say no. If we go into a revival with a no attitude, sometimes there's not a lot God can do."

Pastor D. Aubrey Knight has been preparing his Cuthbert Ave. Baptist Church for an upcoming revival in which Rev. Clayton Pennington, and Director of Music Dale Durham, from two Abilene churches, will be featured.

"What we pray for when we start a revival is that God's people might renew themselves and get closer to him," Knight said. "In doing so, we pray that we might be able to continue to do the work that he's called us to do."

Knight said he has seen families brought together as the result of the work a revival can do.

"I've heard so often where there is a revival, a person say, 'Well, I'm gonna try to be there for one night.' Our hope and prayer is that they come that night and they are so impressed by the Lord's message and messenger that they'll return every night. I've also seen in revivals where a dad and a son, who have been at odds for years and are sitting on opposite sides of the church – one on one side of the aisle and the other on the other side – I've seen them come together and hug and embrace and get their relationship back to where it should be," Knight said.

In the Catholic church, revivals are often referred to as missions. Apologists – people who explain and defend the faith – or priests from a particular order will come to a parish. Recently St. Stephen's Church hosted Tim Staples, a Catholic apologist and former Baptist.

Rev. James Bridges joked that Catholics have to call a revival minister a missionary, because Catholics won't come if the person is billed as an apologist.

"People come to missions even though they are deeply involved in their faith," Bridges said. "Even if those people work to promote their faith or spread it, they still want more. Even if they've got all they need in their faith experience, I would pray that there would be that hunger for even more. Some people look at other people and think that that person has something desirable in the way they are living out their faith or their prayer life and they want that same thing, too.

"Why I would go to a a retreat or a mission or a revival or a charismatic renewal program is I would be expecting to have more of something, and I don't think that is denying that what you have is authentic. I think that is modesty and humility."

Bridges said hearing another person's personal testimony is a key ingredient in experiencing the conversion effect that often comes during a mission or revival.

Campbell and Knight both agree that the images portrayed in secular media — be they in the movies or on TV — have cast evangelists and televangelists in a bad light.

"Televangelists are hard to separate from the real evangelist," Campbell said. "A televangelist is quite a different thing in that they spend a great deal of time on television and don't go into the local churches."

Knight said Graham has used television to the advantage of Christian witnessing everywhere.

"By him receiving the Lord at a revival, what a great impact his life has had on millions of people all over the world," Knight said. "I know a lot of great fulltime evangelists. Not only Billy Graham, but many others who are not in their professions for the media exposure or even for the money, but they've truly been called to carry God's message."

SAINT: Socialite established over 100 schools

(From 1C)

French-born nun Theodore Guerin, who founded the Sisters of Providence of St. Mary of the Woods in Indiana.

Mother Drexel is the closest to canonization of America's 29 candidates, most of whom are decades away from sainthood.

"There's no white smoke yet," said Monsignor Alexander Palmieri, vice postulator, or official advocate, for Mother Drexel's cause for sainthood, referring to the plume that signals when a new pope is chosen. He said he hoped canonization could come by the end of this year. She was beatified in 1988.

Katharine Drexel was born in 1858 to a family of great wealth. Her father, Francis Drexel, was a banking magnate and business partner of J.P. Morgan. Her uncle, Anthony Drexel, founded Drexel University. Young Katharine was a world traveler and a debutante but also was taught the importance of charity.

The Drexels, devout Roman Catholics, believed their wealth belonged to God, who entrusted it to them to care for the poor. In addition to making monetary donations, the family distributed food, clothing and money three times a week from their mansion in Philadelphia's Rittenhouse Square neighborhood.

When Francis Drexel died in 1885, the family fortune was worth $15 million, the equivalent of about $250 million today. Though she and her two sisters were pursued by many suitors, Katharine was drawn to religious life.

After she joined the Sisters of Mercy in Pittsburgh in 1889 at the age of 30, The Philadelphia Public Ledger ran the headline, "Miss Drexel Enters a Catholic Convent — Gives up Seven Million."

The woman who once dressed in the finest fashions now stitched her torn shoelaces back together.

"She dedicated her life to ministering to African American and Native American people, which was by no means a popular thing to do at that time," Palmieri said.

In 1891, she founded what was then called Blessed Sacrament Sisters for Indians and Colored People. The order's work was unpopular in the early years; undeterred, Mother Drexel urged the nuns to pray for those who opposed them.

The Ku Klux Klan once threatened to burn one of the order's Southern schools and its church if the sisters didn't leave.

"Lightning struck the (KKK) headquarters and burned it to the ground," Palmieri said.

In Mother Drexel's lifetime, the order established 12 American Indian schools and more than 100 rural and inner-city schools for blacks, including New Orleans' Xavier University, the only historically black Catholic college in the country.

At its height, 550 women belonged to the order. Today there are about 260.

The road to sainthood is a rough one.

After an exhaustive scrutiny of the would-be saint's life, the case for sainthood is reviewed by the Vatican's Congregation for the Causes of Saints, which consists of about 25 cardinals and bishops. If the committee and the pope approve, the candidate is designated "venerable."

Then the search begins for two miracles, which are confirmed through interviews with witnesses, theologians and medical experts. The first miracle earns the candidate the title "blessed" and the second, "saint."

In 1987, Mother Drexel was declared "venerable." In 1988, the Vatican confirmed Robert Gutherman was cured of deafness in one ear after praying to Mother Drexel. The church is investigating the case of an unidentified 6-year-old from the Philadelphia area whose hearing is said to have been similarly restored.

Among Mother Drexel's supporters are Cardinal Anthony Bevilacqua of Philadelphia, a member of the Congregation for the Causes of Saints.

Timing is a plus too: Pope John Paul II has canonized more people than all his predecessors in the 19th and 20th centuries combined, said Lawrence Cunningham, professor of theology at the University of Notre Dame.

"He sees the canonization of saints as an instrument of evangelization," Cunningham said.

KOSOVO: World churches have called for ceasefire in a telephone interview from the council's offices in Los Angeles. He described the Yugoslav army's drive against the Kosovar Albanians as "genocide," and said that if it succeeded, "then the future is very bleak for Muslims in the West and for pluralism in general."

(From 1C)

Helal Ahmed, who attended a small rally Sunday in Washington in support of the bombing, said, "I think what is happening in Kosovo is the same as what happened to the Jews under Hitler."

Sunday, during Easter celebrations at Holy Resurrection Cathedral in Chicago, a center of the Serbian Orthodox Church in the United States and Canada, worshipers were read a letter from Patriarch Pavle, in Belgrade, who called the NATO bombing "inhuman."

Marko Bojovich, who heads the cathedral's youth group, said people at the service "feel betrayed, especially because a lot of us religious leaders called for a cease-fire."

One of those attending, Bob Kornic, 57, an engineer from Shelbyville, Mich., noted the profound importance many Serbs attach to Kosovo, where a Serbian army was overwhelmed by invading Turkish forces in 1389. "It would be easier for the Jewish people to concede Jerusalem than for Serbia to concede Kosovo," he said. "That's our Holy Land."

Mick Spaic, 48, an engineer from Schaumburg, Ill., said he was born into a Serbian family in the city of Pec, in Kosovo, in 1951. "At that time, it was 50 percent Christian Serbs and 50 percent Albanians," he said. "When I was a little kid, 6 years old, I could have taken a half-mile short-cut through the Albanian neighborhood. I got beaten or chased so many times. Now you're portraying the Serbians as bad boys and the Albanians as good boys."

Recent pleas for humanitarian aid for the Kosovar Albanians included a full-page advertisement in The New York Times last week by the American Jewish World Service and the International Rescue Committee. It included a photograph of refugees crowding aboard a train, an image of people despised and dispossessed.

"The images are very, very powerful," said Rabbi A. James Rudin, interreligious affairs director at the American Jewish Committee. Among some Jews, reacting to the refugees' plight, Rudin said, "I've heard the phrase, 'They are us.' "

The war, too, has called attention to an old division within Christianity, between the Western churches and their Eastern counterparts.

Despite many important efforts by leaders of both branches to heal a breach dating to 1054 (when Pope Leo IX and Patriarch Michael Cerularius of Constantinople declared each other anathema), tensions between West and East have flared since the fall of Communism over Western missionaries' proselytizing in historically Orthodox nations.

And since the war over Kosovo began, expressions of sympathy with the Serbs have been evident in Russia and Greece. During Easter services in Greece Sunday, The Associated Press reported, anti-war protesters were evident and donations for the Serbs were collected.

From the start of the NATO campaign, tensions have also been felt within the World Council of Churches, which represents nearly 340 Protestant and Orthodox denominations. Without attempting to assign blame, the council has called for a cease-fire and a negotiated peace.

In a recent interview, the council's general-secretary, the Rev. Konrad Raiser, said the NATO bombing had aggravated tensions between Orthodox and non-Orthodox, although how much it would do so was a matter of speculation. But, he said, "From an Orthodox perspective, it is at least conspicuous that the main powers involved in the NATO action are, of course, powers shaped by a predominately Protestant ethos.

"In all political conflicts, whether acknowledged or not, there is a religious undercurrent," Raiser added, "because even in our secularized world, the neat separation of religion and politics doesn't work any more."

RETREAT: Retrouville weekend open to all faiths

(From 1C)

"It's successful because of the hope it gives couples who see people who have been through troubled relationships and made it through," Stasney said.

He said he first read about the program, begun in 1977 as a French language weekend in Quebec, Canada, in the book 'Marriage Savers' and recommended it to parish members whose marriages were troubled. A friend who is also a counselor also recommended it and the positive results reported by the couples prompted Stasney and his friend to support it.

Stasney recalled a couple who had been though several years of counseling without success but who found positive results from a Retrouvaille weekend in El Paso.

The emphasis of the weekend is on developing new communications techniques between the couple. The presenting couples share their personal stories, focusing on a specific area of a marriage relationship. The troubled partners then are given a chance to reflect on the presentation individually and then together in private. The couples will be encouraged to 'rediscover' each other by putting the past behind them.

Follow-up sessions are used to review communications techniques, teach new ones and help the couple apply the techniques to their marriage.

"This has been proven by its fruits — a lot of people have gotten benefits from the weekend," Stasney said.

Because Retrouvaille officials do not want cost to be a barrier to saving a marriage, no fixed fees are charged. The couple is asked to make an anonymous donation — what they can afford — to help finance future retreats and are asked to pay a small fee at registration for meals and accommodations.

Originally a Roman Catholic program, Retrouvaille is open to all faiths. It came to the United States in 1982 and has spread to Europe, Australia, South America and other countries beginning in 1991.

For more information, contact Rev. Stasney, at St. Nicholas Church.

Irish negotiator is honored for conflict resolution

NEW YORK (AP) — Rev. Roy Magee, a Presbyterian minister based in Northern Ireland who has worked to resolve sectarian conflict there, was named the recipient of the Peace Activist Award presented by theTanenbaum Center for Interreligious Understanding.

Magee, a senior research fellow at the University of Ulster, said religious groups should contribute more toward ending the centuries-old strife between Catholics and Protestants.

Churches have often made their members more entrenched in their positions, Magee said in an interview Tuesday, one day before the award ceremony in New York. Religious groups should risk preaching to people outside their circles, he said. He noted that his own decision to work with Protestant militant groups in the 1980s was initially unpopular with his church. In 1994, he helped broker a cease-fire involving these groups.

"When a church person is involved with people committing murder and mayhem, others in church are not happy about it," he says. "But I couldn't stand aloof from people, if they were asking me to challenge them."

Magee also said he favors bringing United Nations mediators to talks on the future of Northern Ireland, which resumed this week.

"No matter what the (politicians) decide, they've got to keep talking," he says. "They can't let the people die."

Catholic, Orthodox leaders set agenda

BALTIMORE (AP) — When Catholic and Orthodox Christian leaders meet in June, they will look for similarities of the two churches separated for almost a millennium.

Cardinal William Keeler and Archbishop Spyridon, primate of the Greek Orthodox Church, outlined plans at a meeting at the Basilica of the Assumption.

Keeler said, "The work now is to see where the church was before the division" between Roman Catholic and Orthodox Christian faiths in 1094. "We have to get to know each other better."

The meeting, their first ever in the Western Hemisphere, will take place at Mount St.

■ Religion Briefs

Mary's College in Emmitsburg, chosen for its rural seclusion and abundance of chapels and libraries, Keeler said.

Since 1988, Catholic-Orthodox dialogue has produced three joint statements on theological issues. A 1993 statement, produced at a meeting in Lebanon, was essentially an agreement by Catholics not to proselytize among the Orthodox, a tension-filled issue that has dominated the dialogue for most of the past decade.

Among issues to be addressed: The possibility of full communion between the two churches and the state of churches in Central and Eastern Europe since the collapse of communism.

The Orthodox Christian Church has 300 million followers worldwide. It ranks third in size among world Christian denominations, behind Roman Catholicism, with about 981.5 million and Protestantism, with about 404 million.

Idaho's Lutheran Vietnamese receive church

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — A church has been dedicated to help Vietnamese refugees in Idaho's Treasure Valley, who number up to 3,000.

"There is no other Christian group actively reaching out to them because they're not big enough," said the Rev. Dan Kramer, head of the Peace in Jesus Lutheran Church. He said he expected the church to help "with English classes, tutoring, even giving them coats to get through winter."

Kramer became involved in the cause while interning as vicar of two churches in Boise and Nampa, learning some of the language while helping church elder Robert Vinh Phan interpret a Bible study.

Phan said his fellow Vietnamese are more familiar with Buddhism and Catholicism than with the Lutheran religion, but, he added, they are willing to adapt if necessary.

"This is a place where people who don't know English can learn it, where people who are having trouble with welfare can get help, where people who need to get a driver's license can learn how," Phan said.

Priest loses his church, but not his congregation?

By Ben Dobbin
Associated Press Writer

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — Jim Callan's childhood dream of becoming a priest nearly evaporated when he refused to wear a Roman collar. In his view, the neckbands serve only to place the clergy on a pedestal.

"They almost didn't ordain me," he said, looking back to the issue that, 25 years later, hardly seems inflammatory. "They felt that that was a sign of deeper things."

It was. "I just didn't tell them," Callan said, loosing his infectious laugh.

To win over his superiors, he agreed to wear the black-and-white collar for hospital visits and funerals only.

Callan succeeded like few other young pastors in returning Roman Catholics to the fold. In 22 years at Corpus Christi Church in downtown Rochester, his congregation swelled from 200 to more than 3,000 by last summer.

How could a priest like this lose his church? What could make a pastor who was so popular among his congregants lose favor with the Catholic hierarchy? Why was Father Jim Callan excommunicated?

Driven by the gospel of Matthew, Callan made "uplifting the poor" the cornerstone of his ministry. He opened a free health center, a homeless shelter, halfway houses for former convicts, a hospice and even a clinic in Haiti. He set aside 12 percent of the weekly collection for the poor.

"Reaching people who are not in the pews, who will never be in the pews: That's really at the heart of Catholicism, but it isn't always encouraged by Catholic practice," he said.

Callan also began bending rules to make each worshipper in the pews feel equally welcome, not least single parents, mixed-faith couples, homosexuals and others "who have been really hurt by society and by the church."

"There's a need in every organization for a group at the edge," he said.

For him, that meant testing the church's boundaries on sacraments and liturgy: allowing women priestlike roles on the altar, inviting non-Catholics to share Holy Communion and, starting in 1993, blessing gay unions off church grounds.

After years of Vatican warnings, Callan was reassigned to a small-town parish in September and in December was suspended by his western New York diocese for persevering with practices contrary to church law.

Unwilling to fall back into line, Callan accepted an invitation from his former parishioners to join them in "alternate worship" at various Protestant churches while they searched out a permanent base.

This was no small flock: 1,400 people thronged a Christmas Eve Mass, and the weekly audience easily outnumbers those who stayed loyal to Corpus Christi.

Punishment came swiftly in February: Callan and any Catholic who joined the newly christened New Faith Community were declared to have excommunicated themselves for starting their own church.

"It's been a very sad time for me," reflected Callan, 51, sitting in his sparsely furnished apartment.

"Catholic means universal, all-embracing, all-encompassing, and we just tried to make the church what its name means," he said.

Bishop Matthew Clark of the Rochester-area diocese, a moderate in an increasingly conservative Catholic hierarchy, acknowledged sharing with Callan "a lot of common values and sympathies." But change can only come by consensus, he said.

"There's lots of leeway here within which to live the church's life but, like any other organization, there are some limits and those limits need to be observed," Clark said.

"We need always, and very critically, to challenge ourselves about what we look like to people, especially people who may be fragile or vulnerable or hurting in any way. But if you stop there, something's missing. ... Part of our work as a parish church is to gradually and lovingly acquaint people with our tradition, which is never contradictory to hospitality and healing."

The Rev. Tom Reese, editor of America magazine, a Jesuit weekly, said the issues Callan supporters pushed for seemed more important to them than union with the larger church.

"It's one thing to debate these things," he said. "It's another thing to unilaterally change them on your own. Other people are more willing to compromise or live with some ambiguity."

For Peg Rubley, 49, a divorced Catholic who joined Callan's church 16 years ago, the bureaucracy cannot define who she is. "Any organized religion is only there to be a vehicle, to help you get to know God and yourself and love your neighbor," she said.

For Callan, a child of the '60s, civil disobedience was always a legitimate way to force social change. He was jailed for five days in 1972 for protesting the Vietnam War. Soon after being ordained in 1974, he was suspended for two months for refusing to live in a new rectory he considered too luxurious.

Callan has seen the church adopt some of the ideas he pushed — such as altar girls. Despite Pope John Paul II's resistance, he thinks inter-Communion among Christian denominations and the ordination of women are inevitable, too.

He even expects to be welcomed back into the church. But he acknowledges, "It might take 10 to 20 years."

Callan was removed as the church's pastor because he conducts gay weddings, allows women an active role on the altar and serves Holy Communion to non-Roman Catholics in a downtown parish he has ministered for 22 years.

'We need always and very critically to challenge ourselves about what we look like to people, especially people who may be fragile or vulnerable or hurting in any way.'

KITUKU: Inlaws can sometimes hamper feelings of independence

(From 1C)

what is going to be cooked or even what your children will wear. Some feel you have taken "their child" from them. How can couples learn to live with in-laws as part of extended their family with respect, love and honor?

First, one has to bear in mind that the love for a parent, sibling and friend is different from the love of a spouse. The needs of a spouse surpass the needs of any other person. You are one flesh with your spouse, not with anyone else.

We learn, "Therefore shall a man leave his father and mother, and shall cleave unto his wife and shall be one flesh" (Genesis 2: 24). In order to cleave, there first must be a "leaving." This does not mean abandonment. It means reduction of the time spent with parents in order to give your spouse undivided attention. In order to get a good grip of your marriage relationship, there first must be a "letting go" of your full attention to your relationship with parents, siblings and associates.

For a young couple, in-laws or their influence can be a source of concern. Each one brings what he or she learned from his or her parents into the marriage. For a man, if his mother waited on his father, he probably will expect his wife to wait on him. Or a woman who grew up seeing father shopping for groceries may be surprised when her husband hesitates. My wife and I saved ourselves by recognizing that we were to develop our relationship somehow independently of what each of us had learned from our prior family units.

It is impossible not to bring some experiences one learned from parents into his or her marriage. Find out what your spouse can positively live with. Discuss it with him or her and adjust accordingly.

What if you live in the same town with your in-laws and they stop by anytime, and you both feel you need independence to develop and grow in your marriage? Shortly after my wife and I got married, we moved to another town. This was one of the best decisions we have ever made. We had the opportunity to devote our time to learn about one another without the influence from relatives and the friends each of us had before we got married.

Leave for another area where you can be on your own. This not only provides you with the opportunity to develop a closer relationship with your spouse, it helps you minimize the "bumps" you may land on with your in-laws when you live in the same town.

Franklin continues with edgy rap style despite detractors

By Sonia Murray
N.Y. Times News Service

ATLANTA — Kirk Franklin won't go so far as to thank the Rev. Henry Lyons, but he has reason to.

Since Lyons' wife set fire to one of his houses, sparking a yearlong inquiry into the activities of the former president of the National Baptist Convention USA, Franklin hasn't been the most controversial figure in the black church. Charges of Lyons' racketeering and theft have weighed a little more heavily on congregations' minds than Franklin's infusing rap music into his gospel message.

"And for that, all I can say is 'Amen,' " chuckles Franklin, 29, from his home in Dallas. "Thank you, Father!"

That sigh of relief comes after years of attacks from traditional gospel circles.

Franklin's 1993 breakthrough single, "The Reason Why I Sing," merely raised eyebrows in the music industry because it propelled his first gospel album ("Kirk Franklin & the Family") past the 1 million mark in sales. The song itself, a simple, stirring call-and-response centered on a piano, was clear in its praise of Jesus and posed no problem with the more upright in the pews.

Then Franklin, a kind of choral director and crowd-rouser, started borrowing from rapper Busta Rhymes in his improvisations. He incorporated the bass line from Parliament-Funkadelic's "One Nation Under a Groove" into his own "Stomp" and got all buddy-buddy with R. Kelly, the R&B singer known as "the bump-and-grind guy." Franklin had USA Today lauding this "new day in gospel," People magazine calling him the "apostle of gospel" and both urban contemporary and gospel radio stations playing his Grammy Award-winning music.

"But it also had some of the church folk upset," says CeCe Winans, also a frequent target of opponents of contemporary gospel. "People were saying, 'Why do they have to dance so much? Why do they dress that way?' I say, 'Kirk is singing His praises and the young people are hearing him. What's the problem?' "

"I think people say they want everyone to be a part of the church, that they want to embrace everyone, but they're hypocrites," declares Kelly, who performed on Franklin's recent single, "Lean on Me." "They just want everyone to worship God exactly the way they do."

Franklin himself won't weigh in on the subject. "I'm trying to please Him and only Him. If Jesus can go through all He endured, surely little ole me can take it."

So when the major TV networks passed up the first gospel pay-per-view concert, headlined by Franklin on Easter, "I praised Him on BET!" Franklin says triumphantly.

And, of the time a man turned away from Franklin in first class on an airplane because Franklin said he is in gospel music, Franklin says, "OK, he may think I'm a weirdo, but what matters most is what God thinks.

"So I just keep on praising Him! How I praise him."

FORGIVENESS: Minister couldn't stand living with 'seething anger' called out Everett's name. She told him he had a phone call. It was from the pastor of the church where Everett had spent the night. Everett had to call home urgently. It was an emergency.

(From 1C)

One of his sons answered and broke the news. Everett flew back home that same day to plan his son's funeral.

Carlucci, meanwhile, was quickly arrested. He declines to go into the details of how he and Scott ended up in an altercation in the building where Scott lived. But after he shot Scott, Carlucci called the police and said: "I shot someone in the head."

At his sentencing, Carlucci expressed remorse for the killing.

"I'm sorry for what I did," he told the court. "I'm sorry I killed Scott. I wish I could bring him back, but words can't do that. I know these sound like empty words, but I don't know what else to say."

Carlucci's words stirred something in Everett. He prayed for some guidance. Eventually, he decided to write Carlucci. In his letter, Everett described his fury, bewilderment, and frustration over Carlucci's deed.

But then he wrote: "Having said all that I want to thank you for what you said in court and despite how hard it is to write these words, I forgive you."

Carlucci said he was stunned. When he first saw the return address on the envelope, he was angry, believing Everett was writing to harass him. He never expected to be forgiven.

"No one had ever forgiven me for anything my whole life," said Carlucci, whose life up until Scott Everett's killing had been consumed with alcohol and drugs. He says he had been arrested more than 40 times.

"My life was so bad I didn't care what happened to me and I certainly didn't care what happened to anyone else," said Carlucci.

But that began to change when he was in prison for Everett's murder. Carlucci asked Everett to visit him. After putting it off for a while because he was not sure he could handle it, Everett did come see Carlucci. Their meeting ended in a hug.

"He showed me what unconditional love is," Carlucci said. Carlucci started attending Narcotics Anonymous meetings. Everett ended up testifying on Carlucci's behalf at his parole hearing. Carlucci left prison after serving nearly three years.

Today, he is married, owns a home, and is holding down a steady job.

"I think people are worth giving a shot to change," Carlucci said. "Whether they can change, it's up to them." He says speaking in public helps him remember where he came from and "to have gratitude for what I've been through and what I have."

For his part, Everett said, "This isn't the guy who killed my son. This is someone who has been changed by God."

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, April 17, 1999:

You are prone to changing your direction out of the blue this year. Where friends might act startled, your decisions will be quite logical. Let others know where you are coming from in discussions. In many ways, you are changing and becoming more optimistic. Always remember financial implications, however. Wherever you decide to put your energies, you are likely to succeed. If you are single, Cupid's arrow hits the bull's-eye. This could be a very special relationship for quite a few years. If attached, the two of you might have different interests, but the intimacy between you will grow if you work on communication. Allow your relationship to reach new heights. TAURUS can be a stick-in-the-mud.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

★★★★ Unexpected ideas could affect your resources. Be sure this is the path you want to be on. You don't want to wake up in a few days, stunned by your own actions. Verbalize your ideas. Others respond. Make calls; reach out. Tonight: Let popularity soar!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

★★★★★ You manage to bring out the best in people, for the most part. Still, you may trigger an authority figure. Surprise developments could have a domino effect. Air feelings and keep conversations flowing. Tonight: Do whatever makes you happy.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

★★★ Everyone needs a break, and you are no exception. Take some time off to think through what you want to do. News and changes put you on edge. A friend has a lot of opinions and information. You might be overwhelmed by everything. Isolate yourself, then formulate a game plan. Tonight: Be in control.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

★★★★ Others are determined to have it their way. You might not be comfortable with your present choices. A respected or important person in your life has a lot of insight. Do what you want. Stop pushing a difficult partner. Tonight: Join up with a special friend.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

★★★★ You could be jolted by a partner's actions. Don't take them too seriously. You like another's quirkiness, yet he unnerves you for the same reason. Perhaps you need to let go. Make plans for a get-together or to catch an art show, browse a craft show or go to a flea market. Tonight: Still out.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

★★★★ You are working on nervous energy. Pace yourself carefully, recognizing your limits. Another might not agree with you or your decisions. Learn to discuss both sides and to walk in another's shoes. Information that another reveals is important. Discuss the pros and cons. Tonight: Try a new setting.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

★★★★★ Understand where others are coming from. What jolts or surprises you clues you in about where you have misread another. Gather feedback from events. Another is more than willing to chat up a storm. Sort through what is important. Tonight: Dinner for two.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

★★★★ Others seem destined to change your plans and to take you in another direction. Ultimately, it is your choice. Don't let another discourage you. A partner tests your limits. Run errands, get some personal "musts" handled. Tonight: Don't buck the trends.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

★★★ You finally say "enough" and go off. You have been dutiful, centered and direct. Remember, it is the weekend; you deserve every moment of lightness and play. Sit down with a new friend or a child. Do what he wants, explore his hobbies. Tonight: The fun begins.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

★★★★★ You have every right to enjoy. Still, you might make an error in spending. An element of the unpredictable continues to mark your finances. Self-expression comes forth. You might want a more concrete relationship. Tonight: Heartfelt discussions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

★★★ You rebel against present demands. A family member makes requests that you simply don't want to honor. How can you decline gracefully and make it easier for everyone? Start up discussions, eyeing what you want. Don't try to hide your feelings. Tonight: Invite others over.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

★★★★ Talks allow others to open up to you. Sometimes even you don't know what to say. Gain information through inquiries. Revamp your budget; try another way of managing finances. Do some price comparison before making a big expenditure. A little indulgence picks up your spirit. Tonight: Visit with friends.

Gibson's wife has baby number 7

LOS ANGELES — It's another boy for Mel Gibson and wife Robyn.

The couple's seventh child — and sixth boy — was born Wednesday, Gibson publicist Alan Nierob said Friday.

The very private Gibson family refused to divulge any details, other than the birth was somewhere in California. The director, producer and star of the Academy Award-winning "Braveheart" has a home in Malibu.

The name of the newest Gibson?

"They haven't picked one," Nierob said.

NEW YORK — Michael Crichton is moving from movies and books into 3-D computer games.

Crichton is co-founding Timeline Studios with Michael Backes, who worked as the graphics supervisor on the "Jurassic Park" movie and as co-screenwriter with Crichton on "Rising Sun," the company said Friday.

Timeline will be collaborating with Virtus Corp., founded by David A. Smith, a computer special effects specialist. Both companies are based in Cary, N.C.

The first Timeline games are to be released on CD-ROM and DVD during the first half of 2000.

"As a computer gamer for the past 20 years, I've noticed a lot of 3-D games have featured large environments — big worlds, a few monsters, some puzzles — but limited interaction," Crichton said. "Timeline is going to change this standard through fast-paced gameplay in a tight, complex and highly interactive world."

LONDON — Prince William joined other young European royals at a christening for the infant son of the Crown Prince and Princess Pavlos of Greece.

The ceremony Thursday brought together royals from Sweden, Greece, Spain, Denmark, Yugoslavia and Monaco.

Some of the Greek royals live in exile in London, but 6-month-old Prince Konstantine Alexios will be raised in New York, where his parents live.

The ceremony marked the first time that the 16-year-old Prince William, grandson of Queen Elizabeth II, became a godparent.

LOS ANGELES — Hollywood shade tree mechanics Jay Leno and Tim Allen have long salivated over Beverly Hills car collector Bruce Meyer's stable of vehicles.

Meyer, whose garage includes Duesenbergs, hot rods, race cars and motorcycles, was presented with the Meguiar's Award as the collector car hobby person of the year at a Petersen Automotive Museum gala Thursday.

"Every time I go to Bruce's garage there is always something different and it's always good," said Leno, the 1997 Mequiar's Award winner. "He should have won the first year, but due to trickery and politics, I won."

In a videotaped tribute, Allen said: "I can't think of a bigger car freak — other than me."

Among the 500 people honoring Meyer was "Entertainment Tonight" hostess Mary Hart, ZZ Top's Billy F. Gibbons and racers Dan Gurney and Danny Sullivan.

LOS ANGELES — Johnny Carson says don't believe tabloid reports about his declining health.

Johnny Carson says don't believe tabloid reports about his declining health.

"I don't read them. They'll print anything, anyway," the reclusive Carson told Daily Variety columnist Army Archerd by telephone Thursday.

The 73-year-old former "Tonight' show host was released from Saint John's Health Center on April 9, three weeks after quadruple bypass heart surgery.

Supermarket tabloids have bannered stories saying a chain-smoking Carson was near death because lung disease was complicating his recovery.

"I quit seven years ago," Carson said.

Speaking from his bluffside Malibu estate, Carson said he was feeling fine and that he was up and walking around the house. He will soon start the standard physical rehabilitation, he said.

NEW YORK — Charlie Sheen is taking his baseball cards and going home.

The actor is removing his collection from the All-Star Cafe, where three former employees have been charged in the theft of some of the valuable cards.

Among the 27 cards stolen last year were a rare Honus Wagner card, a sheet of 25 unseparated 1934 cards and a 1933 card of Hall-of-Famer Napoleon LaJoie, the FBI said Thursday. All but two cards have been recovered.

"While I'm pleased that the investigation is a success thus far, I am deeply saddened that such precious artifacts have been mutilated in the hands of amateurs for the pursuit of greed," Sheen said.

The FBI says two employees stole cards in March and April 1998 from display cases in the "Charlie Sheen Room," then sold them to a memorabilia dealer with the help of a co-worker and another man.

Abundant Life Worship Center to play host to youth coffee shop tonight

Modeled loosely after the recent success of Happy Feet, an alcohol-, drug- and smoke-free night of dancing, Abundant Life Worship Center will host a youth coffee shop tonight from 7-11 p.m.

The facility will offer a "nice, safe environment that is alcohol free," according to Dene Redmon, wife of Abundant Life pastor, Kenneth Redmon.

"This is not just for our church youth," Mrs. Redmon said. "It's for all young people. We know teenagers especially that don't drive who have a hard time finding a place to hang out."

Mrs. Redmon said security will be provided by men who attend Abundant Life.

Christian music will be featured by a group from Shekinah Glory Church.

"My daughter and I have been wanting to do something like this for years," Mrs. Redmon said. "We were in Odessa and we noticed how the kids would drive up and down the street, sitting in their cars, and we thought how they must be thinking if only they had some place to go."

The evening of entertainment and socializing will be held in the education and youth wing of the church.

In addition to the band, the night will feature snacks, soft drinks, cappuccino, ping pong, air hockey and game playing.

"It will just be a good time for kids to get together and hang out," Mrs. Redmon said.

Mrs. Redmon said Abundant Life will plan to hold the event once a month, on the third Saturday.

"The church officials have been wanting us to do something for the young people," she said. "So it is with their approval. They've been very supportive of this for a long time.

"Thank you for giving us the opportunity to provide you quality & effective classified advertising!"

GENERAL INFORMATION:

To ensure the integrity of our newspaper, for the benefit of our readers and advertisers, the Midland Reporter-Telegram reserves the right the revise, reclassify, edit or refuse any advertising. We also reserve the right to convert all advertising into digital and/or audiotext formats within our other products and services.

Please check your ad the first day it appears, and, if you find a mistake, please call our office at 682-6222 so we can correct the error immediately. This will ensure that your ad is exactly what you want readers to see. If an error does occur, you can choose to rerun your ad once for free, or we'll gladly refund the cost of the portion of the ad affected by the error. If an ad is inadvertently omitted, we will assume liability up to the cost of the ad itself – consequently, we will publish your ad in our next available edition or refund the price you have paid.

Rate charges are determined at the time of placement. All ads accepted are subject to credit approval. Some classifications require payment in advance. Credit applications are required for business accounts.

We welcome your suggestions or comments. Please call: Ember Hasenkamp, Telephone Sales Supervisor, 687-8813.

Cool Savings

Anyone who has ever lived in a tropical area knows how hard it is to work in that climate. When it's hot, the air seems thick and people have a hard time catching their breath. This is also true for recreational vehicles.

These RV engines, mostly the Class A motorhomes, have to work harder in tropical areas too. I have never done an under-doghouse (engine cover) measurement, but from experience I can tell the temperature under the doghouse is well over 130 degrees.

When engines have to breathe air at 150 degrees or more, it makes them work harder and less efficiently. If engines can get cooler air, they are able to produce power more efficiently.

Newer RVs are better at getting cool air to the engine, but there is still room for improvement. Older RVs don't do such a good job, but they are also usually the easiest to work with to make them more efficient.

Look under the doghouse of your rig and see where the engine gets it air. In the example of my Class A, it is built on a Dodge chassis. When I pulled the doghouse cover up, I found the air cleaner intake pointed toward the driver's side of the engine.

The intake is the long tube coming out of the side of the air cleaner. In my case the air cleaner intake was taking in air that had passed through the engine oil cooler, the transmission oil cooler, the air conditioning condenser, the radiator and passed over the power steering pump and air conditioning compressor.

Aside from that, there was the steering gear box and power steering lines the air had to pass through as it came up from under the RV. By the time it got to the engine, the air had to be 160 degrees. That meant the air was thinner and had less oxygen.

Looking further I noticed the passenger side of the engine was fairly wide open. There was the alternator, but other than that, the area was open with very little to heat the air. In fact, the engine could get air that had not passed through the radiator. That means it was cooler and denser, and had more oxygen in it.

I pulled the air cleaner off and found there was no mechanical reason I could not remount it so the intake snout would be pointed to the passenger side of the engine, where it could get cooler air. At the same time I realized that I could run ducting from the air intake down to the RV's front bumper where it could get the coolest possible air.

The only thing preventing me from turning the air cleaner was a small pollution control hose that ran from the engine valve cover to the air cleaner. A quick trip to an auto parts store with the old hose rewarded me with a longer replacement.

While I was out, I went to the local hardware store and, after a little searching, found some aluminum heating ducting that was four inches in diameter, just large enough to fit over the air cleaner intake. It was compressed into a short tube that could be easily stretched and snaked down to where it could get the cooler outside air.

It took about an hour, including trips to the store, to remount my air cleaner so it would get cooler air. And how much good would it do? According to several automotive engineers, it should be a major improvement. But none said whether it would be two percent, five percent or what. I decided to make a study of the change.

I mapped out a 70-mile test route that contained both city, highway and interstate driving. Then I returned the air cleaner to its original position and drove the test route. I stayed as close to the speed limit as traffic would allow.

In my next column I will let you know how the changes worked in the real world, out on the highway.

Large & In Charge: '99 Ford F-250 Super Duty Crew Cab 4x4

The Midland New Car Association donated $500 to the Midland division of the American Red Cross of Southwet Texas to help Midlands recent tornado victoms. Shown recieving the Check from Don James is Donna Rounsaville, Executive Director.

By Ken Chester, Jr.

It seems there will be no end to the new truck models produced by the nation's auto makers, nor any waning of the American motorist's appetite for large trucks. Low fuel prices and a booming economy mated to high consumer confidence has unleashed this boom all through the decade of the 1990s.

As the undisputed truck leader, Ford is leaving nothing to chance, designing, developing and building more variations from its several truck platforms than any other truck maker. The latest creation seems to be a merger of the best attributes of several of its car and truck lines: the F-250 Super Duty Crew Cab 4x4.

Borrowing the space and comfort attributes from the Lincoln Town Car, the ruggedness of the F-350 Super Duty and joined to the ease, versatility, and weight class of the F-250 Super Duty, this unique truck model is making waves like no other.

Built in the automaker's Louisville, Ky., manufacturing complex, the F-250 Crew Cab offers consumers possibilities that formally required the purchase of the heavier and less maneuverable one-ton offerings that are still available in the marketplace. With four full-size doors and a cavernous cab that easily seats six adults, the F-250 Super Duty Crew Cab is available in either two or four-wheel drive, short or long bed and XL/XLT/Lariat trim levels.

Powerplant options include: the base 5.4L Triton V-8, 6.8L Triton V-10 and a 7.3L Power Stroke V-8 diesel. Power is transferred to the pavement through either the standard M5HD five-speed manual or ($995) optional 4R100 four-speed automatic transmission. The Power Stroke turbo diesel comes standard with a M60D six-speed manual transmission.

On the road, the V-10 engine/four-speed automatic equipped with the optional trailer towing package ($210) and 4x4 running gear did not hamper the ride. In fact, this large truck was very easy to drive down long expanses of Midwestern interstate.

Quiet, comfortable and fast, one could almost forget this Super Duty is designed to be a truck for commercial applications. In the cabin, Ford extended the chassis by four inches in order to build a very roomy cab. Displays and control are straightforward and functional — there are several "power points" to plug in additional electrical equipment, such as cellular phones and laptop computers.

The driver's view of the road is good, enhanced by a novel "cut away" side window design. The leather 40/20/40 bench seat in the Lariat model is very comfortable. The standard four-door configuration of the Crew Cab makes access to the rear bench as convenient as climbing into the back seat of a large sedan. Some areas for improvement are that the leather seats are not heated, making them very cold in the winter until the cab warms up and under-hood fluids that are not consistently marked and hard to reach due to the height of the 4x4 chassis. Closing the aluminum hood will prove to be a unique challenge for short drivers.

Properly equipped, the F-250 Super Duty Crew Cab has a maximum payload of 3,310 pounds and can tow a trailer with a maximum weight of 13,500 pounds.

By the Numbers

The engine performance numbers: 5.4L V8 - 235 hp @ 4,250 rpm and 335 lb/ft of torque @ 3,000 rpm; 6.8L V10 - 275 hp @ 4,250 rpm and 410 lb/ft of torque @ 2,650 rpm; and the 7.3L V8 turbo diesel - 235 hp @2,700 rpm and 500 lb/ft of torque @ 1,600 rpm.

Standard safety equipment for the F-250 Super Duty pickup includes: dual front airbags, with passenger side airbag deactivation switch and four-wheel disc brakes with rear anti-lock. Four-wheel anti-lock brakes are a $500 option, standard on dual rear drive models and a limited slip rear axle is $270 additional.

Retail sticker prices for the Ford F-250 Super Duty Crew Cab range from $22,750 for an XL two-wheel drive, short box to $28,840 for a four-wheel drive Lariat long box model. Destination charges add $640. Supplies are very tight and there are no rebates.

1999 | THE RX 300
Priced from $32,300
With 4WD & options shown $34,101

Introducing The First Luxury SUV That Doesn't Ride Like A Truck.

THE LEXUS RX 300. MOTOR TREND SPORT/UTILITY OF THE YEAR.

With its 220-horsepower engine and available four-wheel drive, the RX 300 is powerful enough to get you where you want to go. Yet its advanced independent suspension system gives you the luxurious ride you expect from a Lexus. And guarantees the competition a very bumpy ride.

Attention Oil Field Drillers, Roughnecks, Roustabouts & Laborers

How would you like to work in a drilling business that is not subject to the ups & downs of the oil markets?

Our company has permanent year round work & our employees have never suffered a layoff. We do horizontal directional drilling, auger boring, and tunneling under rivers, railroads, highways and other structures. We are headquartered in Nebraska, but our work is throughout the mid-west and southwest. Company travel is required. Any oil field, heavy construction or utility experience is helpful. A CDL and welding experience is a plus.
