Union Seeks More Clout

BAL HARBOUR, Fla. (AP) — AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland and the federation's 35-member executive council are opening discussions aimed at strengthening their political clout and plotting strategy to resist Reagan administration budget cuts in many of their most cherished federal programs.

The annual meeting beginning today in this Florida resort city comes amid concern that the once-mighty labor federation has lost much of its lobbying influence in the nation's capital, especially with Republicans controlling the White House and the Senate.

More Die In Latin America

By The Associated Press

The bodies of 14 young man, all showing signs of torture, were found in Guatemala, and 250 more people were reported killed in El Salvador's political violence continued without letup in the two neighboring Central American countries.

Guatemalan authorities said the 14 bodies found about 100 miles east of Guatemala City, the capital, on Sunday may have been the victims of rightist death squads that carry out almost daily assassinations in response to attacks by leftists trying to topple the military regime of Fernando Romeo Lucas Garcia. Death squad victims include a growing number of students, union and political leaders and professionals.

Gromyko May Be Replaced

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Andrei Gromyko will be removed soon as Soviet foreign minister and replaced by Anatoly Dobrynin, the longtime ambassador to Washington, a West German newspaper reported today.

The mass circulation Bild said Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev hoped the change in foreign ministers would lead to better relations with the United States.

Bild quoted an unidentified Western diplomat as saying the 71-year-old Gromyko "downright hates Americans."

Kermit Man's Trial Begins

BIG SPRING, Texas (AP) — More than 250 Howard County residents were called to the courthouse today as prospective jurors for the capital murder trial of a 19-year-old Kermit man.

Victor Carrasco Velasquez was indicted Dec. 9 on two counts of capital murder in the Nov. 15 stabbing deaths of Jeannie Marie Pardue, 51, and her 15-year-old daughter, LeeAnn Wallace.

He also was indicted for attempted capital murder in the stabbing of Molly Ann Wallace, Mrs. Pardue's daughter-in-law, who survived the attack. He has pleaded innocent on all three charges.

Misconduct Laws 'Foggy'

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Speaker Bill Clayton said Monday state laws on official misconduct have "foggy places" that need to be cleared up for the protection of legislators and government employees.

He told the House State Affairs Committee a legislator or official could break the law if his children took a state-owned pen from his dresser and used it in school.

Clayton is sponsoring a bill that would create a Public Servants Standards of Conduct Advisory Committee to review state ethics laws, boil them down to simple guidelines and recommend changes to the 1983 Legislature.

Tugboat Thieves Surrender

PORT ARTHUR, Texas (AP) — Two men were in jail today on kidnapping and assault charges after forcing a tugboat captain and his three-man crew out to sea.

Charged with aggravated kidnapping and aggravated robbery were Allen Cook, 38, no address given, and Delmus Hamilton, 43, of Canton, Texas. Justice of the Peace John Knowles set bond of $50,000 on each charge.

Authorities said two men, armed with a shotgun and knife, took over the 90-foot tug E.M. Black in the early morning hours Sunday.

They surrended to the captain after the tug, not a seagoing vessel, took on water in nine-foot swells about 40 miles from shore, authorities said.

Polish Talks To End One Strike

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Negotiations were expected to resume today to end one of the two major strikes persisting in Poland, a six-week-old sit-in by farmers demanding their own union. The government said an agreement was near in the other, a student sit-in at Lodz University.

Meanwhile, Communist Party chief Stanislaw Kania returned to Warsaw Sunday after a brief trip to Prague for talks with Czechoslovak President Gustav Husak on "the situation in their countries," the Czech news agency said. Husak's hard-line government has been one of the Warsaw Pact allies most concerned by the labor unrest in Poland.

Mieczyslaw Rakowski, Poland's new deputy premier for labor affairs, sent a government commission to negotiate with the farmers occupying a government building in the southern city of Rzeszow.

Lech Walesa, leader of the independent Solidarity labor federation, went to Rzeszow Sunday to counsel the farmers, who want the government to charter their organization Rural Solidarity as a legal labor union.

However, Walesa, after meeting the new government labor affairs chief on Saturday, said "this is not the right moment" to press the farmers' demands.

"I promised them I would discuss their problems and I won't let them down," he told reporters, "but it took us 10 years to be registered, so they can wait a while."

The Supreme Court ruled last Tuesday that farmers could not unionize because of a 1932 law declaring them self-employed. It recommended that Rural Solidarity, which claims to represent 600,000 of Poland's 3.3 million private farmers, register as an association. But an association would not have the right to strike or bargain collectively for its members.

Gas Glut May Force Refineries To Slow

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The United States' rapidly growing reserves of gasoline are so great that refineries may be forced to slow down or shut down and gas prices eventually may drop, an oil industry analyst says.

Dan Lundberg said oil-production runs at refineries are at "uneconomic rates" and gasoline stockpiles, fast approaching a record-breaking inventory, are so great that "the industry may have to drink it."

But his Lundberg Letter, a weekly oil industry periodical, stressed that "regardless of surpluses, certain increased costs must get through to the pump, so a decline in prices is not a reasonable prospect at this time."

The letter said consumer conservation of gasoline and continued production of fuel oil for winter heating were combining to create stocks of 277 million barrels of gas at refineries, in pipelines and at large terminals throughout the country.

Another oil industry publication official said Sunday that the nation has begun to control its consumption of petroleum products and could be on the way to easing the energy problem "without fully realizing it."

German Chacin, editor of the Energy Detente newsletter, said the U.S. economy has improved its energy efficiency 12 percent since the Arab oil embargo of 1973. He said that translates into a savings of 4.9 million barrels of oil a day.

"Since the petroleum price increases of 1973-74, conservation...has entered the scene with a vigor that many wouldn't have thought possible back in the 1960s and early '70s," Chacin said.

Energy Detente is a bilingual, twice-monthly publication that studies the energy situation in the Western Hemisphere. It is affiliated with the Lundberg Letter.

The Lundberg Letter, published Friday, said refinery production runs dropped to 72.7 percent of capacity in January from an already low 76.6 percent in December. Refiners, who generally like to run at about 90 percent capacity, are faced with "even greater slowdowns, perhaps shutdowns," the letter said.

Industry experts say production runs of less than 75 percent aren't profitable for most refineries.

Eddie Peterson School Candidate

Eddie Peterson, 39, filed this morning as a candidate for Place 6 on the Snyder School Board in the April 4 election.

Peterson, a pharmacist, is owner of Eddie Peterson's Pharmacy in Snyder.

He is seeking the place on the board now held by Bill Eiland, who has announced that he does not intend to seek re-election to the board.

Place 6 is one of two positions on the local school board to be filled in the election this year. Joseph D. Hinton, Snyder architect, announced earlier that he would seek Place 7. This post is now held by Ted Crenwelge, who also has announced that he will not seek re-election.

The election will be held at the Snyder City Hall simultaneously with the city election.

March 4 is the deadline for candidates to file with the board secretary at the school administration building.

Battle Of Budget Has Already Begun

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, armed with a massive prescription for curing the nation's economic ills, is returning from the peaceful mountains of Maryland to find the battle of the budget already begun.

With most of the details disclosed and a congressional lobbying effort in full swing, Reagan spent the weekend at the Camp David presidential retreat polishing the program he will outline Wednesday night.

Rep. Tony Hall, D-Ohio, said the fight over Reagan's plans is shaping up as "the biggest legislative battle in this country since President Franklin Roosevelt fashioned the New Deal."

On the early fronts:

—AFL-CIO leaders caucusing in Florida this week are mapping strategy to resist planned cutbacks in federal jobs and unemployment compensation programs.

Blast Precedes Pope's Arrival

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — An explosive device went off at Karachi's national stadium packed with 100,000 people today, minutes before Pope John Paul II arrived to celebrate a Mass. A doctor said the blast killed one man and injured two others.

The pope, making a brief stopover in this Moslem nation on his 12-day Far East trip, was apparently unaware of the explosion, in a stairwell leading to seating for foreign diplomats.

The doctor, who treated those injured, said "it was an explosion but we don't know what it was." American vice consul Tim Kane was in the area, and took off his shirt in the blood-spattered concrete stairwell to cover one of the victims. Witnesses said they appeared to be Pakistani men in their 20s.

The pope arrived at the stadium, normally used for cricket matches, under heavy security after a 21-gun salute and honor guard greeting at Karachi's international airport.

There, the 60-year-old pontiff told diplomats, church leaders and Pakistani president Gen. Mohammed Zia ul-Haq: "I pray that the mutual understanding and respect between Christians and Moslems will continue and grow deeper and find still better ways of cooperation and collaboration."

His major gesture of good will to the world's 800 million Moslems continued in the 90-minute stadium homily. John Paul told the cheering faithful Christ "alone is the source of life" but that their evangelical effort must be conducted "in a spirit of dialogue and respect to those in your country who do not know Christ."

The pope made the brief stopover in Pakistan, which has 750,000 Catholics.

Ask Us

Q.—How much (what percent) of the Snyder Public School budget is used for athletics, sports of all kinds, and equipment and coaches, buildings, etc., including stadium, tennis courts, gyms, etc.?

A.—Supt Bill J. Hood says the school does not have a break-down with this much detail, since there are no coaches in the system who do not also teach (even including the athletic director); gyms are used for required health and physical education courses as well as athletics and the costs are not prorated in the budget or in audit reports. However, if anyone wants to work on a break-out of all details, he is welcome to come to the administration building and use copies of the budget, audits, and other records, the superintendent said.

CC Board Session Set

Housing problems and banquet plans will top the agenda for a meeting of the Snyder Chamber of Commerce board Tuesday. The meeting is set for 4 p. m. in the chamber conference room.

Bill Warner, chamber manager, said the organization is continuing to assemble all information possible on methods for financing construction of rental housing, and this will be discussed at the meeting. Demands for rental housing are increasing steadily as activity in area oil fields picks up, Warner said

Also on the agenda are the manager's visitation report and retail trade promotion plans.

Dollar Gains In World Market

LONDON (AP) — The dollar posted fresh gains on world money markets today, showing some of the sharpest advances seen in months on the basis of indications of tough new economic policies from President Reagan.

The dollar hit a seven-year high against the French franc, touched its highest level in years against the sagging West German mark, the Swiss franc and Dutch guilder, and reached another unofficial all-time record against the Italian lira.

"The dollar is still riding the wave and may well stay strong during the week while the market waits for Ronald Reagan's economic speech," said one Swiss dealer.

Reagan's speech, scheduled for Wednesday, is expected to detail his plans for trimming the budget and curbing inflation.

The dollar boom on world markets was good news for Americans living or touring abroad, since their dollars go further. However, it may hurt U.S. exporters since it makes their products more expensive in foreign markets.

Most U.S. banks were closed today for the President's Day holiday.

Today's midmorning European dollar rates compared to late Friday:

—2.2485 West German marks, up from 2.2055 and the dollar's highest level against the mark since November 1977.

—2.0605 Swiss francs, up from 2.0085, highest level since December 1977.

—5.1888 French francs, up from 5.0850. The dollar was last this high on Jan. 30, 1974.

—2.4245 Dutch guilders, up from 2.3925, highest rate for four years.

—1,057.00 Italian lire, up from 1,040.50, an unofficial record high.

Fires In Tyler Schools Linked

TYLER, Texas (AP) — School officials discovered today that a fire was set in a middle school over the weekend and tied it to a fire which destroyed nearby John Tyler High School.

Authorities said Boulter Middle School, about a quarter-mile from John Tyler, suffered damage in its music room when sheet music was set afire. The blaze apparently burned itself out.

The school had been broken into and obsenities alluding to John Tyler High School were written on the walls, police said.

The Saturday fire at John Tyler destroyed three fourths of the school's classrooms and 90 percent of its office space.

Fire at at third school, Rice Elementary, was put out Saturday afternoon. Fire officials said some young boys were seen running away from the school. Damage was restricted to a restroom.

Officials said Sunday the Rice and John Tyler fires were not connected.

John Tyler's 2,300 students will share facilities with the 2,400 students at Robert E. Lee High School.

Three teen-agers, two of them former John Tyler students suspended in December, were arrested Sunday in connection with the high school fire and police said there may be one or two more arrests.

School officials confirmed that those students held in the John Tyler fire, which is a definite case of arson, had attended Boulter.

Appraisal Office On City Agenda

The Snyder City Council has scheduled a special session for 7 p. m. tonight at city hall.

Representatives of the Scurry County Appraisal District are scheduled to discuss office space problems with the council, and officials of Midwest Electric Cooperative are scheduled to present a rate increase request.

Ray Peveler, chief appraiser, and members of the appraisal district's board have been meeting recently with governing bodies of local taxing entities concerning office space for the appraiser and his staff. The district has been using space on the first floor of the courthouse, but this is no longer adequate and in addition it is needed by the county tax collector, the district officials have been advising the entities.

walk out on unions

If you like it in this part of the country, you are not by yourself. Most people do, and it would take a show of force to make them move.

The fact that people like it in Texas is no secret, but neither is it a secret that people are moving to other sunbelt states and staying. And, narrowing that down a bit more, they are moving to states that have right-to-work laws, and staying. People are speaking with their feet. They are walking right out of those states that tolerate the yoke of compulsory unionism and heading for the sunshine of the right-to-work states.

The United States Department of Labor has released its latest long-term employment figures and they once again show strong economic gains in RTW states.

According to figures from the labor department's bureau of labor statistics, workers in 20 right-to-work states enjoyed a net increase of 1,087,600 maufacturing jobs between 1969 and 1979. In five of those states, jobs increased by over one half. And in nearly 50 percent of all right-to-work states, manufacturing employment increased over one-third.

By contrast, the 30 states that permit compulsory unionism suffered a new loss of 271,000 manufacturing jobs. In one compulsory unionism state alone — New York — the 371,900-job deficit amounted to a loss of one out of every five manufacturing jobs that existed in 1969.

Over the same period, workers in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland and Illinois — all compulsory unionism states — saw more than one out of every 10 manufacturing jobs slide from their grasp.

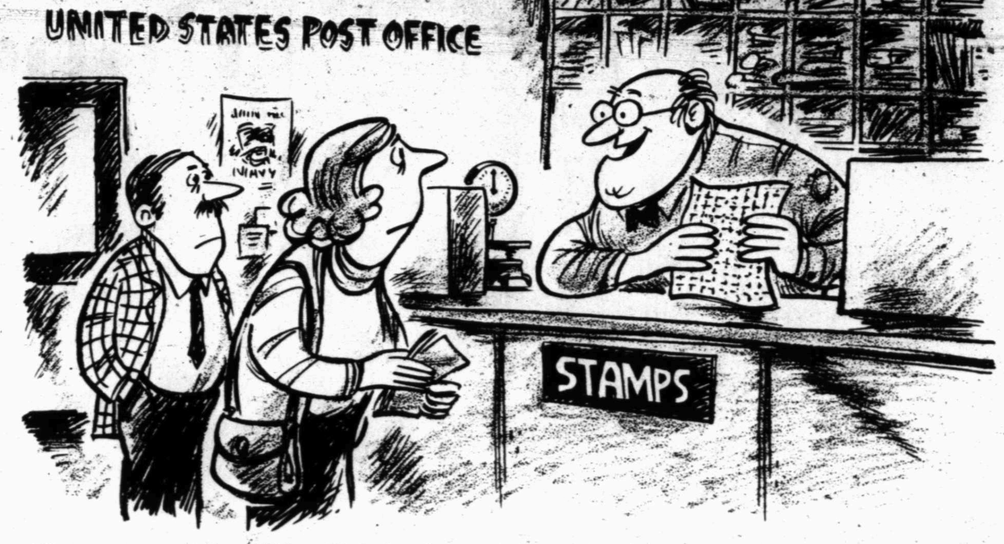

The conclusion is obvious. Compulsory unionism with its attendant burdens is taking a terrible toll on America's work force.

Where workers are free to sell their services on an open market and union organizers must merit the members' support, the economy prospers. But where workers are shackled by union demands and union membership is a condition of employment, workers lose their freedom and jobs alike.

Sustaining another long-standing trend, right-to-work states continued throughout the decade of the 70s to record levels of unemployment significantly lower than the national average. Their compulsory unionism counterparts, by contrast, posted jobless rates higher by nearly two percentage points than the right-to-work average.

The conclusion, again, is obvious. Freedom and economic prosperity go hand in hand.

Meanwhile, in 30 states, compulsory unionism continues to hold workers in economic and political bondage.

"The new rate?... OK... Think of a number between fifteen and twenty-one."

As they say, you can't please everyone. And the Reagan administration certainly has been doing its energetic best to provide new proof for that old truth during its initial weeks on the job.

Take the case of the bilingual education regulations, lovingly drafted by the Carter administration's Department of Education only to be summarily junked by the new secretary, Terrel Bell. The move has drawn both fervent praise, for relieving the public school system of a costly and overly complex burden, and bitter criticism, for shortchanging a sizable minority of the students in those schools.

Many on both sides, however, may be reading more into the development than is actually there. And they also may be less informed on the issue than they think. Under the confusing circumstances, a bit of historical perspective conveniently provided by an article in the current issue of "Foundation News," a bimonthly publication of the philanthropically oriented Council on Foundations, is particularly timely.

Contrary to apparently widespread belief, notes author Alan Pifer, president of the Carnegie Corp., instruction in languages other than English is not new in American education. It was common during the 19th century in communities with concentrations of recent immigrants from continental Europe.

Bilingual education did not become an issue until 1914 and then it was of a political rather than social or cultural nature. German, as a matter of patriotism, was out. Along with it went almost all instruction in any language other than English.

It was a dead issue for almost half a century, until the influx of Cubans into Florida in the 1960s again created large-scale problems of cultural assimilation. During the next decade, Pifer observes, the concept of bilingual education underwent a change. These were the years of the civil-rights movement and heightened interest in ethnic identity. Instruction in languages other than English, along with courses in minority-oriented subject matter, came to be regarded, at least by advocates, as less a service available than a right due.

Bilingual education also became a politically charged issue because of its obvious greatest benefit to one population group — Hispanics. The story is in the statistics. Federal funds support instruction in 74 languages, but Spanish programs absorb 65 percent of the money.

The reason is also obvious — because they are the most numerous, possibly 3 million of the estimated 3.6 million students in the nation in need of language assistance. Hispanics represent 32 percent of the Miami school population, 30 percent in New York, 45 percent in Los Angeles, 52 percent in San Antonio, 31 percent in Denver, 35 percent in Hartford.

The figures are from Pifer, who goes on to note that if the numbers are there so is the need because these students are typically two or three grade levels behind their age peers, only 30 percent complete high school, the dropout rate in some urban ghettos hits 85 percent and less than 7 percent complete college.

The federal government began to involve itself deeply in the problem little more than a decade ago with the Bilingual Education Act of 1968. Involvement grew rapidly, from expenditues of $7.5 million for 76 projects affecting some 26,000 students in 1969 to $107 million for 575 projects and 315,000 students in 1980.

There is more to the federal involvement than bureaucratic enthusiasm, There is also a landmark 1974 U.S. Supreme Court decision. In Lau vs. Nichols, the court held unanimously the Chinese-speaking students in San Francisco were entitled to special assistance from the school in overcoming their linguistic disadvantage. What went for Chinese went for every other language group.

It follows that the scrapping of one set of regulations has not decided the bilingual-education issue or settled controversy over the direction and degree of federal involvement. The 1968 act remains on the books, and the Lau decision remains the judicial last word.

New guidelines will be forthcoming. They may be more flexible, as promised by Secretary Bell, and thus more widely acceptable. But they are still certain to be the focus of some degree of controversy because of an old truth that translates into any language with no difficulty whatsoever: you can't please everyone.

at wit's end

If the American Family is becoming an endangered species, you can bet one of the things that killed it is the dinner hour.

When it was conceived, the dinner hour was to be a gathering of every member of the family who would sit around and exchange pleasantries and news of what each had done that day.

I know that's the way it's supposed to be because I saw it once on the Donna Reed Show.

We have never had a family dinner that did not sound like we were hosting a lynching. It was inevitable to touch upon who did what to whom, who did it first, and who would get a room to themselves after they were sentenced.

The criticism of "family meals" is that "this is not a fit topic to discuss at dinnertime." As I see it, no one seems to know what is a fit subject to talk about at the dinner table. There are few things that the entire family can get into.

Children tend to talk about things that take away your interest in food -- and living. At one meal alone, I heard a description of the underside of the tongue, a rumor of what popular food contained rat's nostrils, what pureed peas remind you of when you look at them from a distance, and what happens to the dog's stool when he eats leftover chicken.

Men prefer to talk about money. Within minutes they can make you feel guilty for asking for seconds in the salt. They also take the opportunity to lay on the family their famous lectures: "An 'E' on the Gas Guage Does Not Mean Evacuate," "Why Do We Heat the Front Porch by Gas in the Winter?" "Don't Reach Out and Touch Somebody Unless It's Collect," and the all-time favorite, "When I Go to the Poorhouse, I'll Have to Call a Cab to Get There."

Mothers use the togetherness of the meal to discuss their doormat status ("Why don't you just put a key under my tongue and stand on me?" and to tell their children that no one ever amounted to anything who smoothed a lumpy bed with a coat hanger.

I have come to the conclusion there are no "safe" topic areas at the family dinner table. No matter what you hit upon, every member of the family will react in character.

The other night, a guest said at our table, "I read where the Snail Darter is still on the endangered species list."

There was a moment of silence before one child said, "Aren't they the ones that bleed through the eyes when they die?"

My husband said, "When they go up to $10 a pound, knowing our kids, they'll develop a Snail Darter deficiency."

I said, "They aren't the only ones who have become endangered. So are women who pick up towels after a 16-year-old."

The family that eats together....shouldn't.

Your Birthday

February 17, 1981

This coming year you are likely to form several important partnerships. Two will be for social purposes. The third could be for business.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Partners may be a bit more competent than you are today in handling your collective interests. Instead of bucking their efforts, emphasize cooperation. Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) The duties for which you're responsible you'll deal with fully today. The bind could come by taking on the chores of the less-efficient.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) In your dealings with friends things will be going your way today, yet there's a possibility you could do something unwise and create ill-will.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Be supportive of family members today, especially in situations where others boast of accomplishments of their brood. Don't be one-upped.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Give compliments to friends today in situations meriting acknowledgment. Be sincere, however, because they'll resent being damned by faint praise.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your possibilities for personal gain look promising today, but there is also an indication you may not be willing to share that which others helped you acquire.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you are positive your way is right today, function as independently as possible. Associates who want to be helpful may actually turn out to be a hindrance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your ideas on ways to achieve things today will be quite good, but you might implement them counter-productively. Act, but also think.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You're popular with friends today and you'll make a desirable addition to any gathering, but you must be careful not to overstay your welcome.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) When it comes to protecting your self-interests today, you're more than capable of handling any situation. But you might not perform as well looking out for others.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You'll handle things in ways today which will win you admiration. Boasting about your accomplishments, however, will take the bloom off the rose.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) In managing complicated situations for others you're very adroit today, but take care not to be drawn into something sticky which could cost you money out of your own pocket.

needed: affordable homes

NEW YORK (AP) — Perhaps the greatest challenge to the construction industry is to create a house that people can afford. The demand is out there, proven by baskets of statistics. The houses are not.

With the new single-family house costing about $70,000, and with median household income close to $20,000, it is clear that a big gap exists between supply and demand, a gap of maybe $15,000 or so.

What is needed, based on the old rule of thumb, is a new house for $50,000, land included, but except in some sunbelt areas you have to look hard to find it. In most areas you won't find it at all.

What you will find is an enormous pent up demand waiting to be served. They are a huge group, the boom babies of the 1950s, and they desperately want houses. They don't need to be "sold" on the idea. Produce the house and they'll line up for it.

Well, that is, if they can get the financing, which in turn is the greatest challenge to the home mortgage industry today. But assuming the financing problem will be resolved — and it is being worked on — the builder who produces the affordable home will find more than 40 million people reaching age 30 — homebuying age — during the 1980s.

What to do? For one thing, the size of houses is shrinking, according to the National Association of Home Builders.

One Home Builder study, for example, showed that the average living space in new homes shrank to 1,667 square feet in the first quarter of 1980 from 1,704 square feet in the third quarter of 1979.

First prize for trying, however, appears to belong to a joint project of Rural America, a nonprofit organization, and the Department of Housing and Urban Development, which built a three-bedroom home in Metcalfe, Miss. for $16,600, land included.

Admittedly, sweat equity played a big role in the Metcalfe house. "If a contractor built the same design," said a spokesman for Rural America, "we estimate the home would cost $22,000, excluding land." Even so, such a house would meet most affordability standards.

Among the problems confronting the inexpensive house are high land prices, code-making bodies and local zoning authorities who view departures from convention as endangering values of existing homes.

Whatever, Rural America and HUD are planning 50 demonstration homes in different parts of the country by this fall.

mcaliskey to continue campaign

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Northern Ireland activist Bernadette Devlin McAliskey says she'll continue her fight for imprisoned members of the Irish Republican Army when she recovers from wounds received in an assassination attempt.

Mrs. McAliskey, who was hospitalized with seven bullet wounds after a Jan. 16 attack at her home, said she expects to be released in about two weeks.

"I am too stubborn to be terrified," she said in an interview with a Dublin newspaper, The Sunday World. "I will be as active as ever."

Mrs. McAliskey's husband, Michael, also was wounded in the attack, but their three children were unharmed.

The outlawed, mainly Roman Catholic IRA is fighting to unite Protestant-dominated Northern Ireland with the Republic of Ireland, which is overwhelmingly Catholic.

Versatile Squash Plant Chosen As 1981 Vegetable Of The Year

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

How come the squash was chosen as 1981 vegetable of the year by the National Garden Bureau?

Simply this, we are told by Jim Wilson, executive director of the non-profit bureau sponsored by seed merchants:

"Easy to grow in the garden, nutritious, low in calories ... you can eat it raw in salads, fried, boiled, steamed, added to soups and casseroles, baked or made into pies."

The squash is so adaptable that entire cookbooks are devoted to it.

"Virtually everyone likes summer squash, peeled, sliced, seasoned and topped with butter, or perhaps a little milk and a dab of honey," Wilson says. "And even the holdouts that swear, 'never' to winter squash might be convinced were it filled with bulk sausage and baked. While the oven is hot, pop in zucchini bread. Or maybe you would like roasted squash for a late night snack."

Wilson adds, "If that doesn't start your salivary glands working, you can always eat squash flowers ... dipped in batter and fried — Fritter Flowers?"

Squash is the fifth most popular vegetable in U.S. gardens, outranked only by tomatoes, beans, cucumbers and lettuce.

Ancestors of modern squash were first grown in the Southwestern U.S. and in Mexico. Stems, fruits and seeds found by archeologists in cliff dwellings indicate that man grew squash back in 6000 B.C. Native Indians cultivated a plant called "quassiens, sitroules, symnels or cimnels." The name squash perhaps was derived from the Massachusetts Indian word "askutasquash."

Squash is a member of the cucurbit family that includes cucumbers, watermelons and muskmelons, but the three won't cross with squash in gardens.

There are many classes of squash. Summer squash is generally eaten immature, when seeds are not fully developed and the rind is still tender. Winter types are harvested when fully mature and the rind is hard. They can be stored for winter use.

Summer types are crookneck and straightneck, scallop or patty pan, and zucchini or marrow. Winter types are acorn, butternut, turban and buttercup, Hubbard and delicious, and banana. Miscellaneous types are vegetable spaghetti, edible gourd or Hercules Club and oriental storage.

Squash can be grown easily anywhere in the U.S. Soak hard seeds 24 hours in water, dry on a paper towel and plant in neutral (pH 7) or slightly alkaline soil. These heavy feeders enjoy plant compost, animal manure or balanced garden fertilizer.

Depending on whether soil is light or heavy, plant the seeds 1 to 3 inches deep, thinning compact bush types to 24-30 inches apart, and vining types (runners) 36-40 inches between hills and 72-96 inches between rows. Bush types are recommended for small gardens. You can plant squash among corn. Squash have deep as well as shallow roots to be considered in watering. Ground watering is preferable since leaf or foliar irrigation encourages disease spread.

Handpicking, shallow hoeing or mulching are preferable to weed-control methods.

Squash have both male and female flowers and pollination transfer is necessary for good fruiting.

Eternal Torch Ignited For Commandos

HERMITAGE, Pa. (AP) — Army Maj. Gen. James Vaught says the commando raid he led to Iran trying to free the American hostages was a worthwhile effort and not "foolish" despite its failure.

At a freedom celebration for six of the 52 former hostages, Vaught pulled away a white satin cloth to unveil a monument dedicated to the eight commandos who died in the Iranian desert after the rescue mission was scrapped.

The six former hostages at the ceremony Saturday lit what is to be an eternal flame at the base of the monument.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Alan: "I see that your son Jim, playing with Dr. John Fisher of Dallas, finished a very close second to Hans Kreyns and Bob Slavenborg of the Netherlands in the 1966 Olympiad."

Oswald: "It was very close. A mere eight match points after 280 boards. There was a lot of luck involved. Both pairs had their full share, but Jim gives this hand to show how a brilliant bidding decision by Slavenborg gave the Dutch pair 33 out of a possible 34 match points on a key hand in the finals."

Alan: "That was skill. The luck came when the Dutch held the North-South cards so they could use their skill."

Oswald: "West opened a trump against the three-club contract. East took his ace and led a trump back to dummy's king. Kreyns discarded a diamond on the ace of hearts, ruffed back to his hand, drew West's last trump and played spades. He still had to lose four spade tricks for down one since he ran out of trumps before getting to clear the suit."

Alan: "What a brilliant pass. I can see other North-South pairs landing in game or maybe slam and going down for telephone numbers."

Losing 65¾"
5' 4" of fat

'Losing weight at Pat Walker's is fun'
So begins a letter from the vivacious Ms. Wise, who teaches second-grade pupils. She continues:
"Before going to Pat Walker's, I just ate without thinking. My eating habits have changed, thanks to the program. I know now how to eat the foods I enjoy without having ever to look again at the 65¾ inches and 37½ pounds I have lost."
Now that she weighs 113 pounds, it has been self-rewarding to shop for a size 9 instead of a 16, she adds.

'The Pat Walker girl'
Teaching school is demanding work, but Ms. Wise says she finds the days she visits Pat Walker's are her "relaxing" days. That's because "the treatments are refreshing and revitalizing" and "the counselors are a source of encouragement every week."
"My friends are amazed at my [weight] loss," she concludes. "They call me the Pat Walker girl. I kinda' like that."

Shaping up
If her friends call her the Pat Walker girl, we'd like to repay the compliment by calling her "the wise Ms. Wise," for she has defined very precisely what we consider some of the chief benefits of our program.
At every Pat Walker's salon, each patron is on an individualized plan that begins with a confidential figure analysis. The atmosphere is quiet, deliberately low-keyed and relaxing. A professional counselor helps you learn sensible eating habits—and supervises your program on the SYMMETRICON.

A Pat Walker exclusive
SYMMETRICON, found only at Pat Walker's, is the passive exercise equipment that safely and gently firms and tones body tissue, simultaneously improving your circulation and helping to correct your posture. Treatments are given in complete privacy, of course, and you can wear your regular street clothes.
You reduce safely—but effectively—as your measurements go down just where they need to do so.

Fed's Car Book Instant Success With Consumers

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

The federal government is trying to tell Americans everything they've ever wanted to know about automobiles with a 68-page guide called "The Car Book" that has become an instant hit with consumers.

Critics, including some industry sources, charge that the publication — now in its second printing — is inaccurate and unfair, particularly in its safety ratings.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration prepared the guide and defends it. Bob Boaz, a spokesman for the agency, said the book is designed to show that there ARE differences among various makes and models. It is designed to show, he said, that there ARE cars on the market today that combine safety and good mileage. "The choice between safety and fuel economy is not one that the consumer should have to make," Boaz said.

Critics of "The Car Book" say that the safety tests used were too limited because they involved only one type of crash, in which a car is driven, head-on, at a speed of 35 mph, into a concrete barqie. The critics also say that the flat "pass-fail" rating system used to grade the cars is unfair.

Boaz said "pass-fail" grades are not meant as a complete safety rating. They are simply intended to show comparative performance. He said the head-on crash was used as a standard for testing because it is a common type of accident. He said more than 60 percent of crashes involve a front-end collision of some type. "The Car Book" says that 55 percent of deaths and serious injuries occur in frontal crashes.

The publication is available at no charge from the Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colo., 81009. It includes information on domestic and imported automobiles in the categories of safety, fuel economy, maintenance and repair costs and insurance fees.

"The Car Book" appeared early in December. Two weeks later, all available copies — 450,000 of them — had been ordered, according to the Consumer Information Center. By the end of January, there was a backlog of 600,000 orders. The second printing, now being distributed, totals 1.5 million copies.

Early copies of the book were accompanied by an "errata" sheet, detailing 28 typographical and other mistakes. Boaz said the errors have been corrected in the second printing.

"The Car Book" also offers some general suggestions on purchasing an automobile, including a "buyer's checklist" of questions to ask.

Device May Prevent Future House Fires

DALLAS (AP) — George Spencer hasn't built a better mousetrap. But the world may be beating a path to his door anyway when he finally gets his invention plugged into the marketplace.

By simply reading two meters on the face of a plastic box plugged into a wall outlet, Spencer says he can tell whether the electrical wiring is faulty, thereby preventing a possible blaze in a home or office building.

"The thing that impresses me is that he (Spencer) can walk into any building, old or new, and tell you whether the wall outlet is safe to operate," said Dennis Griggs, a Dallas patent attorney.

Griggs said he received a bit of a shock himself when Spencer plugged in the invention at the attorney's office and found that the wiring behind an outlet could not safely carry electricity to a space heater without causing serious stress to hidden wires.

"I was surprised that a couple of our outlets are underrated for a heavy electrical load," Griggs added.

Electrical fires in Dallas caused more than $3 million in damages over the past year, said Dallas Fire Marshall Jerry Lambert.

Spencer, awaiting a patent and a sponsor for his device, says the invention could prevent some of those fires by detecting "hot spots" in wiring which ususally cannot be found by visual inspection.

He said he learned that after lightning struck the home of a friend in suburban Plano. Spencer said lightning traveled through the house without damaging any appliances and apparently without harming the wires, according to an inspection by the Plano Fire Department.

The recent boom in home insulation has compounded the problem of natural aging since most insulation is laid over wires, creating a thermal-blanket effect that causes the wires to overheat, he said.

Understanding asthma

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 63 years old and have what my doctor has diagnosed as intrinsic asthma. Cigarette smoke, perfumes and strong detergents seem to trigger my coughing spasms. I can sleep through the night but with my first contact with irritants my lungs will partially close and I will have a wheezing rattle in my throat, which will also affect my speech.

My doctor is a specialist in allergies and has put me through all the tests. He says there is nothing more that can be done for me and my best bet is to avoid the irritants that bother me. Of course that is impossible to do entirely.

Is there a place I could go that may have newer medical treatments? My doctor is competent but if there is a chance other treatments would help I would appreciate knowing about it.

DEAR READER — The chances are that your doctor has done all that can be done. However, it is quite natural that you would want to seek out anything that might enable you to do better. The solution for patients with this situation is to have a consultation. The American Medical Association actively encourages physicians to use consultations as a means of ensuring that patients get the best and the latest in medical management.

A good way to do this is to ask your doctor to refer you to a major clinic or medical center. That way their studies will be returned to him for your future care.

Now, your story is not quite typical. Intrinsic asthma is usually not associated with specific factors that you are allergic to, but rather it is triggered by some internal mechanism in your own body. External asthma is the more common type and is associated with allergic reactions. Your doctor is quite right that the best way to control asthma caused by specific allergies is to avoid those substances.

And there are several types of asthma. Some people have mixed forms. To give you a better understanding of asthma I am sending you The Health Letter number 8-6, Asthma. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Incidentally, be careful not to use aspirin or any products that contain aspirin as these can cause asthma attacks in many asthmatics. There are some new medications that are helpful in preventing attacks. Your doctor may have already tried them.

DEAR DR. LAMB — What role does iodine play in a reducing diet? My daughter has lost a lot of weight and this iodine pill is part of her diet plan. Can this be injurious?

DEAR READER — Iodine combines with substances including food in the stomach to produce iodides, a salt. Small amounts are used to loosen secretions and aid as an expectorant. And if a person is iodine deficient, causing low thyroid function, it helps restore normal thyroid function. Otherwise, it has no role in enabling people to lose weight, unless they take enough to irritate the digestive system and cause diarrhea.

In small amounts it is not likely to cause a problem but there is such a thing as chronic iodide toxicity, and some people are sensitive to iodine. Stopping the iodine or iodide usually solves the problem. Your daughter probably lost weight because her program limited her calories, not because of the iodine, unless she really did have a thyroid disorder that benefited.

Eating Forces Girl To Leave School

JACKSON TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — Petite, frail Amy Brown, suffering from a rare metabolic disorder that makes her ravenously hungry, has been so weak she was forced to abandon her high school classes.

Because of her condition — which forces the 5-foot-3, 92-pound woman to eat up to 30 dozen eggs a week — Ms. Brown and her boyfriend can't afford to go to movies.

But things are looking brighter. With the help of a tutor, the 19-year-old is preparing to graduate from high school, and she's engaged to be married to a sailor whom she met because of the publicity generated by her disorder.

"I'd say I'm very happy," she said.

She has been plagued for six years by malabsorption of the kidneys, an extremely rare disorder that requires her to eat constantly to replace potassium in her body.

Doctors expect her body to mature during the next two years, possibly ending the constant hunger that keeps her weekly food bill at $200.

Leukemia Victim Ties The Knot On Valentine

ZENA, Okla. (AP) — Claudia Jane Self hasn't cried much since she learned in December that she has leukemia.

But when she got married amid decorations donated by strangers, and set off on a honeymoon paid for by a mayor's family, the 18-year-old bride cried.

Miss Self wed 19-year-old Gene Jones on Valentine's Day in a little brown church bursting with people.

"You may kiss the bride," the Rev. Dolphus Blevins told the bridegroom after the couple exchanged vows before 180 friends and relatives at Zena Baptist Church.

Jones, his tan western boots contrasting with his powder-blue tux, kissed his new bride for what seemed an eternity.

"I just said KISS her, Gene," the preacher joked.

The church boomed with laughter.

The couple had planned to marry in the fall, but made plans for a Valentine wedding after Miss Self nearly died last month.

People who read of the couple in the Tulsa World donated hundreds of dollars.

Two women who own a wedding business in Coweta traveled to this little Delaware County community to provide candles and other church decorations at no charge.

"We don't want our names mentioned," one of the women said. "We just wanted to do it, but not for any publicity."

Grove Mayor Nellie Stover, her husband, Wilbur, and their daughter, Jo Ann Huffman, paid for a weekend honeymoon at Shangri La, a luxury resort 30 miles from the church.

"It has been wonderful for them," said Linda Johnson, one of Claudia's 15 brothers and sisters who beamed with pride.

The 14-minute ceremony tired the slender blonde. She stood straight throughout it, but sat at the reception as well-wishers streamed by with hugs and kisses.

"Her legs almost buckled during the wedding," said Darlena Self, a sister and the maid of honor.

"The doctor told us she is living on willpower," said Henry Phillips, the bride's stepfather, who led her down the aisle. "She's gonna fight it ... She's a fighter."

Today, after her honeymoon, Mrs. Jones will undergo a red blood cell count to determine if she must receive another life-sustaining transfusion at Grove General Hospital. She received four pints of blood there Jan. 5 and suffered a reaction which caused a 105-degree fever for two days.

'Crisco Kid' Dies Of Heart Failure

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — To little Michael Hammond, even a kiss was painful. The pressure of a touch could cause infection or death.

His mother was afraid he would die without knowing how much he was loved.

She was with him Saturday when the boy, dubbed "the Crisco Kid" by nurses who applied shortening to his skin as treatment for his rare disease, died of apparent heart failure at the age of 10.

Doctors said no autopsy was planned.

This week was to have been a big one for Michael. After spending nearly his entire life in institutions, he was making progress toward his goal of someday living in the outside world, and was to start attending school for the first time.

Since age 2, Michael had lived at the Sunland Training Center, a state institution for the mentally retarded. He was not retarded, but was taken because of his affliction, epidermolysis bullosa.

The inherited disease, which is incurable, strikes one newborn in 50,000. At birth, Michael had strange sores on his ankle and thumb. Within six days he was covered with what appeared to be third-degree burns.

The boy's skin had no defense mechanisms, and was too tender to stand the pressure of a touch. To ease the pain, nurses painted his body twice a day with Crisco shortening, the only treatment that helped.

The disease's severity had started to lessen on his arms and legs, and only his trunk and knees still were being wrapped in Crisco-soaked gauze. Michael had learned to feed himself and to operate an electric wheelchair.

Thunderbirds Here Tonight At 8; Dunaway Urges Community Support

Western Texas College and New Mexico Junior College, two teams fighting for a shot at the upcoming Regional Tournament, clash tonight at 8 in the confines of Scurry County Coliseum.

In a meeting earlier this year, in Hobbs, N.M., the teams put 237 points on the board enroute to a 127-110 NMJC victory. Western Texas remembers the defeat well, and plans to make up for it this time out.

"I thought they were the toughest team we've played all year when we played them there," said Westerner Coach Larry Dunaway, whose team comes off of a big 73-70 victory over Clarendon in Clarendon.

"I think Monday our kids will be fired up for them, and if we could get a big crowd out, it might really make a difference," he said. "We're can still get in the Regional Tournament, but we need to win our last four games."

Both Western Texas and NMJC are 6-8 in Western JC Athletic battles, tied with Amarillo College for fifth place in the standings. The top five teams in the WJCAC qualify for March's Regional Tournament in Brownwood.

The Thunderbirds sport a 14-13 season mark, fashioned by a conference-high 92.9 points averaged per game. Western Texas, 15-10, averages 87.5.

The 'Birds are paced by Jeff Roberson, who averages 17.1 points per game and leads the conference in rebounding with a 16.2 figure. Other top NMJC players are Ricky Green, 15.7 points and 9 rebounds; Mike Smith, 16.7 points and 11 assists, and Ricky Black, 72 steals on the season.

Roberson leads the conference in blocked shots as well, with a 56 total. He has canned an average of 59 percent of his field goals, 155 of 263, unofficially.

The Westerners, the conference's top field goal and freethrow shooting team, are keyed by Chuck North's 18.3 points, 6.9 bounds and 5.3 assists per outing. Freshman teammate Ceasar Scott pours in 16.5 points and 6.4 rebounds. Keith Denis tosses in a figure of 15.1 points and 5.7 rebounds.

WTC freshmen Dwayne Dickey, Clarence Cephas and Darren Lee have made a key diffrence in the team's recent success, and Dunaway also relies on Brett Smith, Troy Stevenson and Charles Gholson.

Western Texas scores 54 percent of its field goal shots and almost 70 percent of its freethrows, both tops in the WJCAC.

WTC PLAYS TONIGHT -- Western Texas College's Westerners entertain the Thunderbirds of New Mexico JC here this evening at 8 in Scurry County Coliseum. Dusters Tied For WJCAC Title!

Western Texas College's Dusters vaulted into a three-way tie for the Western Texas JC Athletic Conference championship as Howard College nailed Amarillo 70-61 in Big Spring Saturday.

The Dusters, who challenge TIAA champions Tarleton State University here tomorrow at 6 p.m. in the WTC Gym, are 22-5 on the season and 8-2 in conference play.

Saturday's outcome actually puts the Dusters ahead in the standings, if only temporarily. All three teams have two conference losses, but both Howard and Amarillo have only six wins each, while WTC boasts eight.

Western Texas finishes out the WJCAC regular season by traveling to Amarillo on Feb. 19, and to Borger (Frank Phillips College) on the 23rd. A victory over Amarillo would almost assure the Dusters of a tie for the conference championship this year, barring an unexpected upset during their meeting with Frank Phillips, a team that is currently 0-8 in loop competition. Meanwhile, Howard must travel to 7-3 Odessa on Thursday and to Amarillo on Feb. 26. The Hawk Queens also play at Levelland (South Plains College), and host Clarendon before closing out the regular season.

Tuesday's game here is a non-conference outing for the Dusters, but an important one nevertheless. Tarleton edged McMurry College 70-64 Saturday to win the TIAA title. The TexAnns defeated WTC earlier in the season in Stephenville, 67-63.

Duster coach Joe Cushing will likely miss both games this week. He was scheduled for back surgery in Big Spring today. Mickey Baird, student services director at the college, is filling in.

Tigers Are Bound For San Angelo

SAN ANGELO -- Snyder High School's Tigers, not able to look past any opponent as the race for a District 2-AAAA championship nears the tape, treks here Tuesday to take on the Chiefs of San Angelo Lake View.

Snyder made the Chiefs its eighth straight victim back on Jan. 24, racking the visitors 53-31 in Scurry County Coliseum. The Tigers have now won 14 in a row, and are 17-12 on the season.

Elsewhere in boy's 2-AAAA competition Tuesday, it's Sweetwater at Lamesa, Odessa Ector at Pecos and Monahans at Andrews. Fort Stockton is idle.

Girl's play concluded last Friday, with Monahans' Loboettes fashioning a perfect 16-0 loop record.

Snyder's boys, 5-0 in second-round play, tied for the first round title with Odessa Ector. Ector is 3-2 in second half play currently.

Lake View is out of the district running, at 1-3 in round two, 7-15 on the season.

Tomorrow's game is one of three left in the regular season for Snyder, which entertains Monahans on Friday, then buses to Andrews on Feb. 24. The Tigers have the final date, Feb. 27, open.

SWC Basketball Roundup...

Hogs Plaster Houston

by The Associated Press

Arkansas and Houston have all but assured themselves a bye to the Southwest Conference post-season basketball semi-finals in San Antonio. But the third place pass to the quarter-finals is another matter.

Thanks to Arkansas' 70-55 victory over the Cougars Saturday the teams are locked atop the SWC standings with 9-3 records. It will be a race to the wire for these two teams to decide the regular season champion.

Both teams will need outside help now that they have split their regular season series.

Texas Tech jumped back into the third place picture Saturday night with an important 56-53 victory over Baylor in Lubbock.

The Red Raider triumph locked the two teams in a tie for third place with 7-6 records while Rice, which suffered a 71-56 loss to the Texas Aggies, is just a half game back at 6-6.

Texas and Texas A&M are still in the hunt with 5-7 records.

While the first three teams get byes, the fourth through sixth place clubs get a homecourt berth in the first round of the tournament March 2.

Texas Christian, which downed Southern Methodist 52-44, is in eighth place at 5-8 followed by the Mustangs at 3-10.

In games Tuesday night, Arkansas travels to Texas A&M, Texas is at Baylor, SMU is at Rice, and Houston is at TCU.

On Saturday, A&M is at Texas, Rice is at Arkansas, Tech is at SMU and Baylor is at Houston.

Houston lost at Fayetteville Saturday when Coach Guy Lewis' decision to go to a delay game with the Cougars trailing backfired. Trailing by three points with 13:10 remaining, Lewis ordered a stall which lasted four minutes and 10 seconds before Lynden Rose launched an air ball.

Arkansas rebounded and ripped off nine straight points and romped to a 70-55 victory before a delighted soldout house in Fayetteville.

"I looked over at Coach Lewis and kinda wondered what he was doing," said Arkansas forward Keith Peterson. "We were ahead."

The victory tied the Razorbacks and Cougars atop the SWC ladder with 9-3 ledgers.

"I don't know if going to the stall helped them or hurt them but I know it helped us," said Arkansas center Scott Hastings. "I was tired and it gave us time to catch our breath."

Lewis defended his move, saying "Hell, that didn't lose the game...in a similar situation I'd still do it again."

Things weren't all roses in the Razorback locker-room.

Sophomore guard Darrell Walker, who had been yanked out of the game by Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton for not passing to a wide-open teammate, stormed from the lockeroom. Sutton said "He will be disciplined."

Tulsa Battles WSU Tonight

TULSA, Okla. (AP) - With revenge on its mind and the Missouri Valley Conference basketball title nearly in its grasp, Wichita State is at home against Tulsa in a crucial conference game tonight.

The No. 16 Shockers are 10-1 in the Valley and 19-2 overall. Wichita State has put together a 10-game winning streak since losing at Tulsa, 91-84, Jan. 10.

Both teams victimized defending Valley champion Bradley last week. Wichita State blasted Bradley, 87-65, Thursday night. Tulsa clobbered the Braves, 74-54, Saturday while Wichita State was idle.

Coupled with Creighton's 95-83 win over New Mexico State Saturday, that leaves a three-way logjam for second in the league. Tulsa, Bradley and Creighton are all 8-4. Drake is one game back at 7-5.

The top four teams in the Valley will have the home court advantage in the league's post-season tournament beginning March 3.

That is the primary object of contention in these last two weeks of the regular season. Barring a total collapse, Wichita State appears assured of its first Valley title since 1976.

Drake is at Creighton Thursday night and hosts Tulsa Saturday night in games that could go a long way toward deciding which teams play at home in the post-season tournament.

The tourney determines the league's representative in the NCAA playoffs.

Drake blasted Indiana State, 91-78, Saturday night to remain in contention for the home court spots on the eight-team bracket.

"We slowed our game down to limit the turnovers. We are preparing for the tourney," said Tulsa Coach Nolan Richardson.

West Texas State blasted Southern Illinois 97-57 on the loser's court Saturday night.

Erwin Wins Hawaiian Open

HONOLULU (AP) — Hale Irwin shot a 3-under-par 69 and scored a record-setting 6-stroke victory over 51-year-old Don January in the $235,000 Hawaiian Open golf tournament.

Irwin snapped a 19-month winless string with a 265 total, 23 strokes under par. He picked up $58,500 for his 12th PGA tour title.

January, who collected $35,000, fired a closing 68 and finished a shot ahead of Ben Crenshaw, Terry Diehl and Isao Aoki of Japan.

Holovak Assistant Oilers Manager

HOUSTON (AP) — When Mike Holovak packs his bags and heads for Houston to become assistant general manager for the Oilers, it will almost be like a homecoming for him.

Holovak's departure from the New England Patriots, where he has worked the past four years, to join Houston was announced by the Oilers on Sunday.

"I'm not coming into an operation that will be full of strangers," said Holovak, 61. "I have worked with Ed Biles, Dick Nolan and (Oiler assistant) Jim Shofner during various stages of my NFL career."

Petty Crew Uses Smarts To Take Daytona Prize

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — There is no question in the mind of Richard Petty that a different set of circumstances would have prevented him from winning his seventh Daytona 500 stock car race.

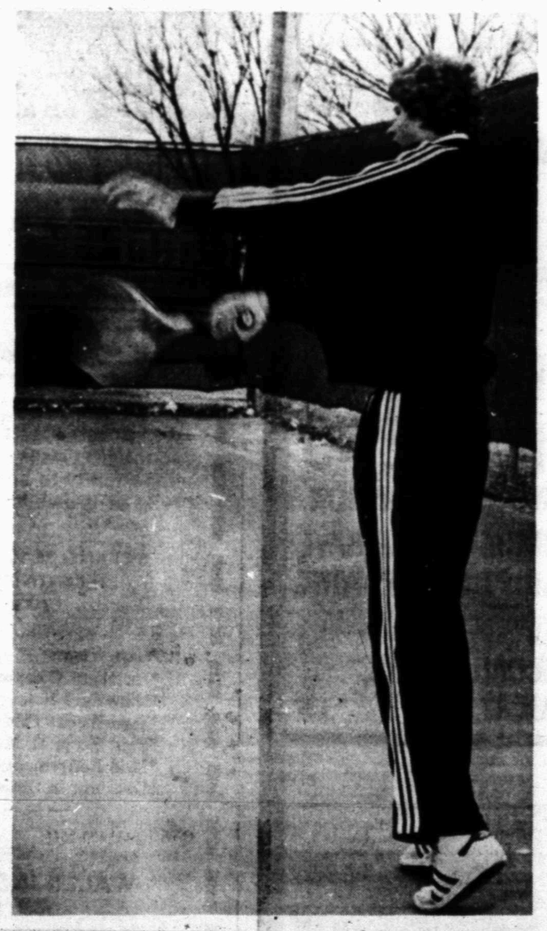

But he took advantage of a blunder by favorite Bobby Allison's pit crew, charged from behind to take the lead and held on to it thanks to a fast pit stop. The result was his 193rd NASCAR Grand Natonal victory and an old lesson for all to remember.

"When opportunity knocked we took advantage of it," said Petty, the seven-time national driving champion, who collected $90,575 Sunday for winning the 23rd renewal of the $780,000 event.

With 26 laps remaining in the 200-lap race on the 2.5-mile, high-banked oval, polesitter Allison's car ran out of gas and limped into the pits. Petty, running in fourth position, remained on the track as contenders Buddy Baker and Dale Earnhardt made their pit stops. A lap later new leader Ricky Rudd pitted, giving Petty the lead.

All had passed Allison as he was running out of fuel, filled his tank and changed tires. Petty meanwhile built a huge lead, then pitted his Buick Regal without a tire change and returned to racing with a 10-second lead.

"It was a case of follow the leader," Petty said of Rudd, Baker and Earnhardt, who finished third through fifth, respectively.

Saturday, the Tigers return to action, taking on Lamesa and Pecos at Lamesa. Snyder concludes its district team schedule Feb. 24 at Lake View (San Angelo). The Regional Team Tournament will be held at Sweetwater, Feb. 27-28.

CARD OF THANKS 060

WE, THE family of Heather Lane, wish to express our gratitude for all the people of Snyder for their expression of sympathy. We thank everyone for the flowers, the money that was taken for her medical care, and the food that was brought to our home. We especially want to thank the RN's of Cogdell Hospital and Dr. Paul Thompson for the special care that they gave our darling Heather. May God bless each and everyone of you.

Pushes Cemetery Tours

NEW YORK (AP) — Jeanne Capodilupo guides her Sedan de Ville through the narrow, winding lanes, past rows of miniature temples and palaces, explaining why everyone should visit Woodlawn cemetery.

"This is more than a cemetery," she says, looking out over more than 250,000 graves spread over 400 undulating acres of the north Brone. "It's an oasis of history, art, ecology, and incredible beauty.

"A cemetery IS for the dead, but I feel it's also very much for the living."

As the cemetery's director of public relations and community affairs, the 40-year-old Mrs. Capodilupo promotes Woodlawn as a kind of Central Park with graves. She organizes walking tours, school tours and headstone-rubbing tours. She has published a guide to Woodlawn ("more than 120 kinds of birds and 3,500 trees") and hands out free cemetery maps.

When two eagles were spotted in the cemetery she got the Audubon Society to issue a rare bird alert that attracted bird watchers from as far away as Canada.

During last year's gas crunch she sent out press releases urging people who found themselves stuck at home to ride the subway out to Woodlawn and walk around.

This past autumn, Mrs. Capodilupo used the funeral chapel to stage a one-woman play about the life of Nellie Bly, once a star newspaper reporter for publisher Joseph Pulitzer and now his neighbor at Woodlawn.

She has also arranged concerts featuring the music of Woodlawn's Duke Ellington and George M. Cohan. Her Fourth of July Cohan concerts usually attract more than 500 listeners.

"Most people wait for a sad occasion to come," she said. "For years Woodlawn lay here in all its splendor and no one ever promoted it."

Until Mrs. Capodilupo, Woodlawn had a reputation as a stuffy, upper-crust cemetery. The class that ran this country 50 years ago summered in Newport, wintered in Palm Beach and moldered in Woodlawn.

"We have our Merchant Princes Hall of Fame," she said. "Woolworth, Penney, Macy, Bonwit...THEY'RE ALL HERE."

And they are here in style. F.W. Woolworth and heirs, including Barbara Hutton, rest in the peace of an Egyptian temple with two sphinxes crouched out front. O.H.P. Belmont and his wife, the former Alva Vanderbilt, are housed in a replica of a Loire chateau chapel.

Woodlawn has five mayors of New York, five Civil War generals and at least six winners of the Medal of Honor.

But it has only one Jay Gould, whom even the generous Mrs. Capodilupo refers to as "the skunk of Wall Street." The robber baron Gould, a man as hated as he was wealthy, is buried in a large, unmarked, colonnaded temple on an isolated plot.

For two years after Gould's burial, guards protected him 24 hours a day — just as they had in life — because of the jewels the financier insisted on keeping with him. Finally they were removed at Woodlawn's request proving that even if you're Jay Gould, you can't take it with you.

Gould rests apart, but most Woodlawnites have neighbors, some of them ironic. J.C. Penney is around the corner from competitor F.W. Woolworth, and Vivian Beaumont's grave faces Oscar Hammerstein's. Cohan lies next to his old friend, producer Sam Harris.

Although the mausoleums are mostly impersonal, the gravestones have human charm and scale. A little flower recalling Mayor Fiorello La Guardia's nickname is chiseled on his gravestone. Jazzman W.C. Handy's bears the first few notes of his "St. Louis Blues."

Graves of the uncelebrated also raise questions, such as the tomb of William L. Murphy, "loved by thousands who knew him as Joseph Murphy."

Others are explicit, like the marker of the 15-year-old boy who "lost life by stab in falling on ink eraser (while) evading six young women trying to give him birthday kisses..."

Surprise residents include Bat Masterson, who died not as a gunfighter on a dusty Western street but as a sports editor at his desk in New York City.

Woodlawn's economic need to attract the masses also may destroy its rural romance. The trend, said Mrs. Capodilupo, is "community mausoleums," boxish buildings in which bodies or the remains of cremation — "cremains" — are piled up.

Cremation is the coming thing, she says. "Young people tend to think in that direction."

Doubts Cholesterol Bad For Heart

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Reports scolding Americans about the woes of high cholesterol as the path to heart disease have caused unneccesary panic, according to a Texas A&M University professor.

"For most Americans, there is no relationship between diet and coronary disease," said Dr. Raymond Reiser, professor emeritus of biochemistry at the Texas university.

"Yet, the campaign for us to alter our diet continues, when in actuality the threat exists for only about 30 percent of the population," he added.

Reiser is a noted lipids biochemist who, for several years, has conducted research at Texas A&M on the effects of diet and cholesterol.

Because of the present lack of knowledge regarding other heart disease risk factors such as hypertension, smoking, lack of excercise and genetics, Reiser said the emphasis placed on diet and blood lipids is premature and disproportionate.

"Not more than 20 percent of the people with high cholesterol levels would reduce their risk of heart disease if they followed diet recommendations," he said. "Perhaps 6 percent of the total population could reduce its serum cholesterol drastically enough to have any effect."

Reiser said medical associations and govermental agencies which issue advice while ignoring other factors are engaging in a dangerous practice.

"It could remove from the market some of the most nutritive foods available, such as meats, dairy products and eggs," he said.

Reiser explained that each year one out of 200 people above the age of 35 with average levels of cholesterol have heart attacks.

About 70 percent of the population falls in the category of having higher than normal cholesterol levels and three out out about 200 of these people are victims of heart disease, he added.

"Advertising campaigns have been so intense and so persistent that the word cholesterol has become almost synonymous with heart disease in most people's minds, not only the man in the street but also many physicians and nutritionists," Reiser said. "People have forgotten that evidence is conflicting and that, in the beginning, the prudent diet was a temporary measure until the conflict could be resolved."

Dear Abby

'Half' Woman Needs Wholly New Attitude

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Four years ago I had a mastectomy. It was a terrible shock because I had been in excellent health and never dreamed it could happen to me. I was 44 and very happily married to a wonderful man who couldn't have been more supportive during the ordeal.

When I recovered, my husband started to lose interest in me (physically), and I couldn't blame him. I felt like half a woman. Our marriage fell apart, and we were divorced two years later. Shortly after that, I had a second mastectomy.

I am still attractive, and men are attracted to me, but I don't know how to handle the possibility of another romantic relationship. In clothes, I look like a whole woman with a beautiful figure, but I feel guilty and deceitful because I know I am not.

I can't very well confess my deficiencies to a man on the first date. But if I don't warn him, he could feel cheated later on.

Abby, must I forget about romance and the possibility of remarriage because I am damaged? I love life and I'm self-supporting, but I need to be loved again.

SOMETHING MISSING

DEAR MISSING: As long as you perceive yourself as "damaged" — or "half a woman" — your chances for being loved again are slim.

Please contact your local chapter of the American Cancer Society. It will have a long list of women in your community who have been down the same road but have learned how to live full lives that included romance and remarriage. They will be glad to help you build your self-esteem. That is really all you're "missing."

DEAR ABBY: We have a 10-month-old daughter, our first child, and she's an adorable, healthy little girl.

The trouble is Vera, my sister-in-law, who has a 16-month-old daughter. Vera has constantly compared the progress of my child with hers since the day mine was born. Her daughter sat up, crawled, walked and talked at a certain age, and what's the matter with mine?

I am sick of these comparisons, but I don't want to start anything with her. Will you please tell her, Abby?

BUGGED

DEAR BUGGED: It would be better if you told her. Let her know that you are perfectly satisfied with your daughter's rate of progress. And should you have any questions about it, you'll consult your pediatrician.

DEAR MISS VAN BUREN: I wish to protest your column on suggested Christmas gifts for the elderly.

Thanks to you I was inundated with gift certificates and small tins of tuna and chicken!

I disagree with you 100 percent. I don't want my friends and family to think of me as an object of charity at Christmastime. Your practical gift suggestions, such as newspaper or magazine subscriptions, gift certificates and food, do not appeal to me at all. I would much rather have a frivolous, frilly nightgown. Then at least I'd know I am still considered alive and feminine! And if I must, I will eat a peanut butter sandwich for my Christmas dinner while wearing my frilly gown.

Please, stop speaking for the world, Abby. Who do you think you are — the omnipotent being? What colossal ego!

DISAPPROVINGLY YOURS IN CARLSBAD, CALIF.

Chamber To Buy Site To Keep Cowboy Hall

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Chamber of commerce officials have helped assure that the Cowboy Hall of Fame will stay here by agreeing to buy the site of a proposed apartment complex near the hall.

The developer of the proposed apartments agreed Sunday to sell the 12-acre site and move the project, Oklahoma City Chamber of Commerce officials said.

An agreement signed late Sunday says the chamber will pay the developer, Dr. Frank Cox, $200,000 for the land and another $200,000 for expenses and fees Cox had already incurred.

Cox had planned to build a 136-unit project, known as the Chaparral Townhouses, on the land near the center. One-fifth of the townhouses would have been eligible for federal rent subsidies.

Those plans prompted Dean Krakel, executive vice president of the Hall of Fame, to threaten to move the hall to one of 16 other western states that support it. Krakel complained that the city had promised to keep the area around the hall free of development.

State and local officials pledged to try to find a way to satisfy the Hall of Fame rather than see it move.

"Dr. Cox is making a sacrifice to do this," said Paul Strasbaugh, executive vice president of the chamber. "But in the long run, he'll be all right and I know Oklahoma City will be better off."

Cox and Krakel were not available for comment Sunday.

Strasbaugh said Cox will repay the chamber the $200,000 for expenses when his project is relocated and construction has begun. The new site proposed by the agreement would also require approval by the Oklahoma City Urban Renewal Authority, whose board meets this month.

Strasbaugh said construction of the housing project should be delayed about a year because of the relocation.
