At least 10 killed in tornadoes

HOUSTON (AP) — Waves of tornadoes and howling winds killed at least 10 people and injured more than five dozen in a savage sweep Friday across populous, rain-soaked southeast Texas.

The killer storms lashed a 150-mile area in and around the nation's fifth largest city before dawn, leaving hundreds homeless and thousands without power, then struck again throughout the afternoon.

Flooding was widespread within the six-county target area. The Red Cross estimated that about 1,000 families were left homeless.

"It looks like a war out there and we lost," said Houston Power & Lighting spokesman Graham Painter.

Twelve hours after the first wave of storms ravaged the region, another storm system blew through a mobile home park at Crosby, 30 miles northeast of Houston, killing one person and injuring several more, a Harris County deputy said.

In Nederland, a tornado with winds recorded at 110 mph ripped through a terminal building at the Jefferson County Airport, which serves the Beaumont-Port Arthur area, killing an unidentified man and injuring another, said Department of Public Safety spokesman David Wells.

He said authorities using heavy construction equipment moved parts of the damaged building to make sure no one was trapped beneath the debris.

The twister also overturned an unoccupied Metro Airlines commuter plane at about 3:15 p.m. and tore the roof of one of the two terminal buildings, said DPS communications supervisor David Rose, in Beaumont.

Another tornado hit a Port Arthur hospital eight miles from the airport, injuring three people — one seriously.

"We were hit by a tornado...one gentleman visitor had his left arm fractured and the artery cut. He is in surgery now. Two employees were treated and released," said St. Mary's Hospital spokeswoman Chris Hobart.

She said about 15 patients were moved into a hallway to protect them from flying glass as high winds, driving rain and hail battered the hospital.

"We had several employees who actually saw it come down and take off the east wing roof," she said.

Other afternoon tornadoes were spotted by National Weather Service observers south of the Astrodome in south Houston, at Sheldon between Houston and Crosby, and over Lake Livingston 50 miles north of Houston. The National Weather Service also reported a funnel cloud near Seabrook south of Houston.

The dead also included two young girls, ages 5 and 8, and several teen-agers.

"It looks like the same old story — trailer homes bore the brunt," said Charles Goodwin of the governor's Division of Emergency Mangement.

In Houston, police reported five persons arrested for looting.

The Department of Public Safety said an aerial survey indicated as many as 15 twisters plunged from the darkened skies and the National Weather Service confirmed five of them struck beween 2 a.m. and 6 a.m.

Authorities pinpointed the hardest hit area in Montgomery County, north of Houston, where two died, 12 were hospitalized and damage was extensive.

The twisters danced through a huge arc west and north of Houston, touching down in Harris, Waller, Montgomery, Austin, Chambers and Jefferson counties. The eight dead were found in seven scattered locations.

Rain continued to fall Friday and weather officials said the threat of more thunderstorms and tornadoes had not diminished.

Utility company spokesmen said the storm system toppled hundreds of poles and crumpled "two or three" of Houston's high-voltage towers, leaving an estimated 100,000 people without power.

"This is the worst damage we have seen that was not associated with a hurricane," said HP&L's Painter.

The weather service reported that winds reached an estimated 75 mph at some points and packed hail ranging from mothball to baseball size.

"It sounded like a 747 coming in for a landing," said Terry Haynes, whose trailer home at Klein, northwest of Houston, was overturned.

A neighbor, Glenda McCoy, 14, was killed when her tumbling trailer home "exploded" in a shower of glass and debris.

"My sister was pinned under a bed and stuff," said her brother Allen McCoy, 16, who crawled from the wreckage unharmed but near shock.

Montgomery County Sheriff Joe Corley, who surveyed the damage from a state helicopter, identified the fatalities in the New Caney-Porter area as Angela Hawkins Morgen, 22, and Bobby Lamar Waggoner, 50.

"We estimate about 350 homes damaged," Corley said. "From the air, it looks like there were three tornadoes in a three-mile area around New Caney and Porter, and each one cut a quarter-mile path."

Sheriff's officers in Waller County, just northwest of Houston, reported two trailer park residents, Danny William Rau, 15, of Prairie iew, and an unidentified girl, 8, of Sunnyside, were killed when a tornado blew away their homes.

"Both bodies were found 50 to 80 feet from their trailers," said a sheriff's dispatcher who declined to give his name.

Kelly Ruth Handsborough, 5, of Houston, was killed when a tree collapsed on the bedroom of her home, said Houston Fire Departmnt spokesman John Valentine.

"We had a lot of strong, heavy winds that took off roofs and knocked down trees, but you can't really say whether they were from a tornado because of the darkness," said Cpl. Tom Twardowsky of the Harris County sheriff's office.

Classes were cancelled in 11 school districts in and around Houston.

Trailer '...just folded'

PRAIRIE VIEW, Texas (AP) — Ray Schneider awoke alone on the ground and in a panic because he couldn't see his wife in what remained of their mobile home.

"I was lying in bed when the tornado flipped the trailer over. The thing just folded and the walls gave in and we were thrown out," said Schneider.

"I was on the ground and looked around in a panic because I couldn't find my wife. It seemed like forever. Everytime lightning flashed I stayed down and made my way over to a mobile home I could see was still standing. I kept looking out the door till I saw my wife stick her head up," he said.

Paulette Schneider suffered broken ribs and a split lip. Her husband escaped with only minor cuts and bruises to remind him of the twister that killed two neighborhood children — including one the tornado pulled from the grasp of his parents.

"I don't remember anything — and I don't want to remember anything," said Mrs. Schneider. "It was horrible."

Ten people perished and dozens were hurt when at least eight tornadoes and possibly as many as 15 sliced through six southeast Texas counties in two waves Friday.

The Prairie View twister destroyed at least eight of the approximately 15 mobile homes in the Meadowlakes Estates Park on Windmill Road, flattened a two-story house nearby, lifted the roof off a small frame house and then ripped the top off a brick service station as it climbed back into the predawn darkness.

"The first thing I knew it picked up the trailer and kept picking it up," said Curt Senton, 15, as he surveyed the destruction in the mobile home park that had been his home.

"It sounded like a hundred engines. We just got under the mattress," he said.

The twister lifted one mobile home and wrapped it around a telephone pole, it flipped others over, snapped the top of utility poles and left a trail of broken power lines and trees and littered the town with the debris of shattered homes and broken dreams.

A mahogany dresser, unscratched by the violence that freed it from a bedroom, stood upright in a field littered with wood and sheet metal. A television lay half submerged in a flooded ditch.

A mangled bicycle rested in the debris and a child's stuffed toy dangled from the ceiling in what was left of a mobile home.

Water from a broken main spurted up from the ground amid the rubble of another mobile home that was home to a 15-year-old boy killed by twister.

The boy, identified as Danny William Rau, "was pulled from the grasp of members of his family from a mobile home. He was found outside the trailer house, a matter of feet from the residence," said Department of Public Safety Lt. Larry Snider.

Authorities still have not released the identity of the 8-year-old girl killed in the same mobile home park.

"Both bodies were found 50 to 80 feet from their trailers," said a sheriff's dispatcher who declined to give his name.

Those killed include:

HOUSTON: Kelly Ruth Handsborough, 5, killed when a tree fell on her parents' house.

KLEIN: Glenda McCoy, 14, killed when a tornado overturned her trailer house.

NEW CANEY: Angela Hawkins Morgen, 22, and Bobby Lamar Waggoner, 50, details of the deaths not available.

PRAIRIE VIEW: Danny William Rau, 15, and Leguesa Venson, 7, killed when a tornado ripped through the mobile homes.

LIBERTY: Eugene W. Thomas, 63, Houston, killed when a tornado struck the mobile home where he was staying.

PHILLIPSBURG: Marsha Mummaw, 23, bled to death when a mobile home was struck by a tornado.

CROSBY: Carol Brown, 27, killed when a tornado struck her mobile home.

NEDERLAND: Arthur Bismark Vela Jr., 55, of Groves, killed as a tornado swept through the Jefferson County Airport.

Reagan's veto threat: 'I meant it then...'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, stung by Senate passage of a 1984 budget he opposes, said Friday that he would veto both tax increase legislation and spending bills that could "rekindle the fires of inflation and high interest rates."

"I will not support a budget resolution that raises taxes as we are coming out of a recession," the president said.

Then, referring to a veto threat he made during his news conference Tuesday night, he added: "I meant it then and I mean it now."

He issued the statement several hours after the GOP-controlled Senate defied him and its own GOP leadership in approving an $849.7 billion budget. The blueprint provides for tax increases of $9 billion next year and $73 billion over three years to reduce soaring federal deficits.

The plan, drafted by Sen. Slade Gorton, R-Wash., and endorsed by Democrats and moderate Republicans, envisions a defense spending increase of 6 percent after inflation for next year, far below the 10 percent the White House originally sought. It also sets domestic spending targets that are about $12 billion higher than what Reagan originally sought in January.

Under the plan, the deficit would be $178.6 billion in 1984, $167.7 billion in 1985, and $130.1 billion in 1988.

Deficits under an alternative budget, backed by the Senate Republican leadership and Reagan, would have climbed over $200 billion a year by the end of the decade.

Reagan offered his reaction as House and Senate negotiators said they would begin talks next week on a compromise, although no agreement is expected until after Congress returns from its Memorial Day recess.

The Democratic-controlled House voted in March for a budget providing more money for domestic spending and less for defense than the Senate budget, and a $30 billion tax increase next year.

Should a tax increase emerge in the final version, its xxx would be guided by the Ways and Means and Finance committees. Democrats and some Republicans want to raise tax revenues by altering the tax cut this year, but Reagan has vowed to veto any such move.

In the aftermath of the vote in the Senate, all sides agreed that Republican Leader Howard Baker played a key role in facilitating final approval, even though he supported a low-tax alternative budget with higher deficits and wound up voting against the plan finally adopted.

Tugged in one direction by Reagan, who was adamant against higher taxes, and in another by his determination to see the Senate fulfill an institutional obligation to pass a budget, Baker was "on the horns of an exquisite dilemma," declared Gorton shortly after the vote.

He resolved it by declaring on the Senate floor that he was determined the Senate approve some type of budget, and by making a key procedural motion that paved the way for reconsideration of Gorton's plan, several hours after it was first rejected.

Added Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., senior Democrat on the Budget Committee, "He sort of took the arm off some Republicans and then it passed." Several members of the Republican leadership team voted for the budget on a key test vote who had earlier opposed it.

Decontrol would increase gas price, study indicates

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new government study says President Reagan's proposal to decontrol natural gas in 1985 will increase consumer prices instead of reducing them, as the administration contends.

The Energy Information Administration report obtained Friday concludes that that Reagan's decontrol legislation would raise residential gas prices in 1985 by 6 percent over what they would be under existing law.

The new report sharply contradicts assertions by Energy Secretary Donald Hodel that the administration's bill would reduce consumer natural gas prices by 7 to 11 percent in 1985 while stimulating new production.

The administration immediately criticized the long-awaited study as "flawed and misleading" and said its discusion of the administration's proposal showed "a distressing lack of objectivity."

Gas reserves in 1990 would actually be higher under the current law than the administration's proposal though their relation to annual production would be slightly lower, according to the EIA figures.

By 1990, the 45 million residential consumers of natural gas would face bills 7 percent higher than they would face under the existing system of partial controls on natural gas prices at the wellhead, the EIA report says.

For the average American consumer, the annual natural gas bill in 1987 would be $672 a year under the current law compared with $757 under the administration's program.

The difference is the greatest in the Northeast and North Central states, which rely greatly on natural gas for winter heating. In the Northeast, the average annual consumer bill under the administration's decontrol program would jump to $914 by 1987 compared with $821 under the current scheme of partial controls.

In the North Central states, consumers can expect to pay $102 more a year for natural gas under the administration's proposal.

Forecast leaves area high, dry

Another day in the making of a Midland dust bowl may come and go today, as — once again — no rain to soothe the parched land seems promising.

So far this year, Midland has gauged a scant 1.67 inches of moisture, and most of that came in January's sleet, snows and freezing rain.

For today, the weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport has predicted a high in the mid-80s and northwesterly winds at 15 to 20 mph and gusty. The low tonight is to be in the mid-50s. The high Saturday is to be near 90.

Friday's high temperature of 89 degrees wasn't too close to the record high of 100 degrees on May 20 in 1939. The overnight low was 60 degrees, but the record low for a May 21 was 46 degrees in 1931.

Stone 'doubts' Salvadoran talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard Stone, nominated as President Reagan's troubleshooter in Central America, said Friday he seriously doubts negotiations among left- and right-wing factions in El Salvador can end the civil war there.

Testifying before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Stone said the key to peace in El Salvador is free elections with all rival factions taking part.

Stone, 54, painted a generally pessimistic picture of his likely success as a special U.S. emissary to Central America. "This is going to be a very difficult mission," said the former Democratic senator from Florida.

The panel is expected to confirm Stone's nomination without opposition next Tuesday, with a vote in the full Senate set to take place a day or two later.

As a senator, Stone sat on the committee and was a hard-liner against the communist government of Fidel Castro in Cuba. Elected to the Senate in 1974, Stone lost his seat in a primary election six years later.

Questioned by committee members about bringing communist guerrillas together with leaders of the right-wing Salvadoran government, Stone said: "I am not an optimist in this regard. The odds are so long against this kind of effort coming to fruition."

Stone said there are "strains of inflexibility" among all the different groups of all political extremes.

Liberal Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., asked Stone about Reagan's description of rebels in El Salvador as guerrillas, while characterizing those seeking to overthrow the communist government in Nicaragua as "freedom fighters."

"What we have to find out is if the guerrillas in El Salvador...are willing to take part in free elections," he said. "If they can, they can change their title."

In his testimony, Stone said:

—He would hold direct talks with guerrillas seeking to overthrow the right-wing El Salvador government.

—He has been told that Salvadorans accused of killing four American Roman Catholic nuns would be brought to trial by the end of this year.

The long delay in prosecuting those accused of ambushing the churchwomen has been a "proper sore point" in U.S. relations with the Salvadoran government, he said.

—Without the Panama Canal treaties turning the waterway over to the Panamanian government, there would be even more violence and civil war in most of Central America.

Reagan opposed Senate ratification of the treaties, but Stone said his views remain the same as when he voted to approve them as a member of the Senate.

—He opposes congressional efforts to require that negotiations among the divided factions in El Salvador be open to all subjects including elections, as a condition of continued U.S. military aid.

As a special envoy, Stone said his role in El Salvador, Nicaragua and other countries would be a relatively passive one, designed to "foster" negotiations rather than "preempt" them.

He said it would be "intrusive" for him to either force opponents of the Sandinista government in Nicaragua to the bargaining table or to make the leftist guerrillas in El Salvador talk with the government there.

Stone was asked by Sen. Claiborne Pell of Rhode Island, the senior Democrat on the committee, about his anti-Castro views.

Stone said Cuba is still seeking to export revolution to other Latin American nations. Later, Stone said he believes now — as he did when Jimmy Carter was president — that the United States should pressure the Soviet Union to remove a brigade of troops from Cuban soil.

Reagan pushes arms, aid policy

MIAMI (AP) — President Reagan, combining politics with a sales-pitch for his Central American policies, told anti-Castro Cubans on Friday that Congress will be writing "a prescription for disaster" if it fails to give arms to prevent the region from falling to leftist revolution.

"Our friends cannot be expected to stand unarmed against insurgents who have been armed to the teeth by the Soviet-Cuban-Nicaraguan axis," Reagan said in remarks noting the 81st anniversary of Cuba's independence.

In another of a series of campaign-style appearances designed to shore up support from Hispanics, Reagan asserted that Cuba is no longer independent and said, "we will not let this same fate befall others in the hemisphere, we will not permit the Soviets and their henchmen in Havana to deprive others of their freedom, and some day, Cuba itself will be free."

Reagan's harsh new attack on communism and Fidel Castro, the Cuban leader, was coupled with a warning to Congress that it must act now to prevent Central America from going down the same path.

"Today a new colonialism threatens the Americas," the president said. "Insurgents, armed and directed by a far away power, seek to impose a philosophy that is alien to everything in which we believe and goes against our birthright.

"It is a philosophy that holds truth and liberty in contempt and is a self-declared enemy of the worship of God," he said.

"Wherever put into practice it has brought depression and human deprivation," he said. "There is no clearer example of this than Cuba."

Reagan delivered his speech to the Cuban-American National Foundation, a non-profit institution, after a Cuban lunch at La Esquina de Tejas (The Texas Corner) in an area known as Little Havana. In the Dade County auditorium where he spoke and on the street where his motorcade passed, Reagan was met with large, enthusiastic and friendly crowds.

Robin Gray, a White House press aide, quoted police as saying an estimated 60,000 people surrounded the auditorium and that another 2,500 people were inside the building. Other observers, however, offered lower estimates of the crowd outside.

Reagan's speech was interrupted 27 times by applause, and he drew the loudest response when he denounced Castro and again when he pledged that Cuba someday would be free.

As he spoke, the audience broke into chants of "Freedom! Freedom!"

Eugenio Martinez, the convicted Watergate burglar who Reagan pardoned last week, sat at the front of the audience and applauded Reagan throughout the speech.

At one point, Reagan departed from his prepared text to say there were only two places where communism works: "In heaven, where they don't need it, and in hell, where they've already got it."

Reagan concluded his speech in Spanish with the slogan: "Viva Cuba Libre" and "Cuba, Si. Castro, No."

At the restaurant, Reagan ordered roast chicken, black beans with rice and friend bananas. A co-owner of the restaurant, Wilfredo Chamizo, said in advance that Reagan's lunch would be on the house.

At the restaurant, one person asked when he would be able to eat in a free Cuba. Reagan apparently did not understand the question, and replied, "I think they may have overestimated my ability a little bit here." He apparently was referring to the large amount of food.

The president, who received about 40 percent of the Hispanic vote in 1980, spent just a couple of hours in Dade County, where an estimated 581,000 Hispanics live. The Hispanic American population in the United States totals 14.6 million.

Reagan passed streets lined with thousands of Cuban-Americans as he was driven from the restaurant to the auditorium about a mile away. Many cheered and waved signs calling for freedom in Cuba and praising Reagan.

In his speech, Reagan called Cuba "a new fascist regime" which represses freedom of speech and press and sends young soldiers "to far away lands ... to do the bidding of a foreign government, defiling their hands with the blood of others, not serving their own interests, but propping up leaders who have no popular support."

He assailed the Castro economy as "a grotesque joke" that is "rapidly becoming one of the most economically backward in the region, thanks to the communist system."

For the second time in two weeks, Reagan also accused the Castro regime of involvement in the drug trade, "peddling drugs like criminals, profiting on the misery of the addicted."

He called on Castro for an accounting, asking: "Is this drug peddling simply the act of renegade officials, or is it officially sanctioned? The world deserves an answer."

Reagan said the time had arrived in Central America "to act reasonably and decisively to avert a crisis and prevent other people from suffering the same fate as your brothers and sisters in Cuba."

He called for Congress to approve his aid package for Central America as well his proposal for tax and trade advantages for U.S. companies that invest in the region. He also urged approval of legislation establishing Radio Marti, a proposed U.S. propaganda voice to originate from Florida.

...Just what was Reagan celebrating on Miami visit?

WASHINGTON (AP) — According to the White House, President Reagan was in Miami Friday to celebrate Cuba's "total independence from Spain" in 1902. However, major reference books say May 20, 1902, is the day the Republic of Cuba became independent — from the United States.

In 1898, the Cubans, aided by U.S. forces, defeated their Spanish rulers. In the intervening four years, the island was governed by a U.S. military government.

A White House "fact sheet" given to reporters said "Cuban independence is celebrated on May 20 in recognition of Cuba's total independence from Spain on that date in 1902."

Asked about that, Robin Gray, a White House press aide who prepared the sheet, said it was his understanding that the holiday commemorates both Cuba's independence from Spain in 1898 and the withdrawal of the American forces in 1902.

Admitting he is not an historian, Gray said it was his understanding that the Americans had no intention of remaining once a transition to Cuban rule was established.

The World Book Encyclopedia says: "In 1898, the United States helped defeat Spain in Cuba's struggle for independence. Spain then gave up all claims to Cuba, and a U.S. military government ruled the island until 1902."

The Encyclopedia Americana says that when Spain capitulated in August 1898, the United States "belittled the contribution of the Spanish insurrectos to the final victory over Spain and refused immediate recognition of the rebels' government. The U.S. occupation was constructive but uneven."

It said the republic became independent May 20, 1902.

Several burglaries reported

Diamonds, oil field equipment and television sets apparently caught the fancy thieves who took jewelry from an up-for-sale house, oilfield equipment from a parked car and the TVs from a bicycle shop.

Diane Evans, 28, of 3215 Sentinel Avenue told Midland police Friday that a diamond wedding ring and other jewelry valued at $2,500 were taken from a dresser in her house about mid-morning that day. Ms. Evans said she had left the house to visit a neighbor while a real estate agent showed the house to a Monahans woman. Upon her return, she discovered the jewelry missing.

Friday afternoon, Hugh Wiley of Euless reported that $4,190 in oilfield equipment was taken in the burglary of his car at the Holiday Inn Country Villa.

Bob Peyton reported that two electric typewriters, radios and other items were taken in the burglary of Peyton's Bikes at 414 Kent St.

End of jet sale embargo 'reward' for withdrawal plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration Friday rewarded Israel for agreeing to withdraw its troops from Lebanon by lifting an embargo on sale of advanced F-16 jet fighters and opening the way for possible production of some F-16 parts there.

The action, ending a nearly year-long halt in the sale process, was disclosed in a brief memorandum in which the Pentagon announced it had formally notified Congress that it proposed sale of the 75 F-16s, along with spare parts and related equipment, for about $2.7 billion.

The move was signaled earlier in the week when President Reagan told a news conference Tuesday that consultation between the State Department and Congress on the F-16 issue was "about to begin." On Thursday, White House officials said the sale would be unfrozen within a day or two.

Given the advance consultations with Congress, it appeared virtually certain the proposed sale would go through without a hitch. Congress has 30 days in which it may veto the sale.

The 75 new F-16s will double Israel's force of those supersonic, single-engine warplanes whose performance impressed U.S. military authorities when flown by Israeli pilots against Syrian-piloted Soviet MiGs in last year's air battles over Lebanon.

The first new deliveries probably will not begin until September 1986, officials said, because of the year's delay in proceeding with the sale formalities.

The deal contains one new element, barely mentioned in the brief announcement.

The Pentagon statement spoke of "potential co-production," which defense officials said means that the Israelis may get to manufacture parts of the plane in Israel. This could be a significant boost to Israel's economy, they said.

The Reagan administration actually had set in motion the proposed sale of the additional 75 F-16s last May by informally telling members of Congress of its intentions. But the formal notification was held up after Israel invaded Lebanon in early June, and U.S.-Israeli relations became strained as a result. The formal notification now has been taken.

"This proposed sale is consistent with the United States policy of ensuring that Israel has the means to defend itself within secure borders should it become necessary," the Pentagon statement said.

Defense officials said added impetus was given to the Reagan administration's decision to lift the embargo by a major buildup by the Soviets of of Syrian weaponry, including advanced MiG jet fighters, and by a growing Soviet military presence estimated now at about 5,000 men.

Particularly worrisome to U.S. and Israeli officials is the manning by the Soviets of long-range surface-to-air missiles, SAM-5s.

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, with her husband Denis (wearing glasses behind the premier), make their way through crowds of supporters at Thursday night's adoption meeting at her Finchley, London, constituency. Britian goes to the polls in a general election June 9.

Conservatives' margin shrinks before elections

LONDON (AP) — With three weeks left before Britain's general elections, the lead of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservatives is narrowing, according to opinion polls released today and Thursday

The poll of 1,100 voters by Market and Opinion Research International (MORI) published today in the Daily Express puts the Conservatives nine points ahead of the opposition Labor Party.

Government to propose stricter housing laws

WASHINGTON (AP) — Promising "tough enforcement and swift justice," the Reagan administration is proposing legislation to shore up the 15-year-old Fair Housing Act.

"It has become clear this act falls short of its promise because of a gap in its enforcement," Housing Secretary Samuel R. Pierce Jr. said Thursday.

Pierce said the existing law, which emphasizes efforts at conciliation, works fine as long as the person complaining and the landlord negotiate in good faith.

But when the Department of Housing and Urban Development is unable to work out a compromise "we have no place else to go," he said.

The administration's bill, to be formally introduced in a few days, would authorize the Justice Department to go to court in individual cases.

The present law authorizes such enforcement action only when a pattern of discrimination by an owner can be shown.

"The president's proposal gives the federal Fair Housing Act the strength it deserves," Pierce said in a speech to the National Press Club. "Tough enforcement and swift justice are at the heart of the bill."

The administration amendments also would provide civil penalties for the first time — up to $50,000 for a first offense and up to $100,000 for a second.

Taken together, said Pierce, those two major new elements keep "the burden of enforcement where it belongs, on the federal government rather than on the individual victim."

People who feel they have been discriminated against and get no relief from HUD-sponsored negotiations can sue for damages.

Pierce said that wouldn't change under the proposed bill, but their task would be easier because they could join in the federal suit and "piggy-back on the work done by the Justice Department."

The bill also would extend coverage to the handicapped.

The law already prohibits discrimination against anyone in the sale or rental of housing because of race, color, religion, sex or national origin.

The proposed new provision to protect the handicapped would spell out that landlords would not have to pay for special accommodations or rent to the handicapped if other tenants would be unreasonably inconvenienced.

Pierce said President Reagan, who promised "effective enforcement of our national fair housing laws" in his State of the Union speech last January, gave final approval to the proposed legislation Thursday.

The proposal was worked out over several months by Pierce and Attorney General William French Smith.

Presidents of Argentina, Paraguay assess damage

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — The presidents of Argentina and Paraguay have toured flooded areas of their countries to assess the impact of persistent rains that have displaced 195,000 people, wrecked buildings and ruined crops.

President Alfredo Stroessner of Paraguay visited several stricken towns south of the country's capital Asuncion on Thursday and placed army and navy offiicials in charge of flood control and evacuation, the government said.

At the same time, Argentine President Reynaldo Bignone flew to his country's flood-ravaged Formosa province, accompanied by Interior Minister Llamil Reston, Economy Minister Jorge Wehbe and other officials.

Constant rain pushed the Paraguay River, which forms part of the border separating northeast Argentina and southern Paraguay, to a height of nearly 34 feet in Formosa City, about two inches above a record high water mark set in 1905.

Formosa officials said floods had left 61,170 people homeless, closed 170 of the province's 450 schools and damaged up to half the crops for an estimated loss of $84 million.

The province of Chaco, bordering Formosa on the south, reported 30,000 homeless, 65 percent of its territory under water and crop and property damage of approximately $100,000.

In Asuncion water rose in the downtown dock area and invaded riverside parks and low-lying neighborhoods occupied by the city's poor.

Buffalo Bill's show was wild

Frontier life was glamorized

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — He was the prototype American superstar — a Pony Express rider, Army scout and buffalo hunter who rode out of the Old West and onto the world's stage to shape and embellish a romantic image of frontier life that endures to this day.

Cowboys, cattle drives and Indian fights were still facts of life in the Great Plains when William F. "Buffalo Bill" Cody opened his spectacular Wild West show here 100 years ago.

Cody performed in the show that played to more than 50 million people in 1,000 cities and a dozen countries until 1916, when he retired.

It was a spectacular production which at its height had 650 performers, but its driving force and biggest attraction was Cody.

"I saw the show in North Platte in 1911," said Nebraska historian and author Nellie Snyder Yost, 78. "There's only one thing I remember — Buffalo Bill himself and how handsome he was on that big white horse."

When "Buffalo Bill's Wild West and Congress of Rough Riders of the World" — the show's full title — toured Europe, Cody was "the best known and most photographed man in the world," said his 70-year-old grandson, Bill Cody, of Cody, Wyo.

"Buffalo Bill" got his nickname in 1867 while working to provide buffalo meat for workers on the Kansas Pacific Railroad. He had served as a Pony Express rider in his early teens before hiring on as hunter and scout for both the railroads and the U.S. Army.

Before the Wild West show became his sole means of income, Buffalo Bill Cody's exploits had already been romanticized in the "dime novels" of Ned Buntline and others.

Bill Cody says the show was an accurate portrayal of frontier life. Mrs. Yost agrees, up to a point.

"Much of it was accurate. But much of it was made very spectacular," she said. "It was all based on fact, but it really wasn't what everyday life was like. There was a lot of glamour put into it."

Special effects helped draw the crowds. Marauding Indians riding in circles around their intended victims, frequent shoot-'em-ups and the cavalry riding to the rescue were staples of Cody's extravaganza.

"They burned a log cabin in every show," Mrs. Yost said. "And there was fine scenery. He had some very realistic looking mountains that would be set up in the arena. Concealed in them were stairsteps, and a young Indian boy would come down from the top of the mountain on his horse — down those stairsteps — and people said it looked just like someone riding down a mountainside."

The cast was an attraction, too, including Sitting Bull, the Sioux chief who triumphed over Lt. Gen. George Custer at the Battle of the Little Big Horn and was later shot to death by federal police for resisting arrest.

Another star was sharpshooter Annie Oakley, "a little farm girl from Ohio," according to Bill Cody. "Granddad heard about her — someone told him she could shoot pretty good — and took her on in the show. He made her a star."

Her real name was Phoebe Ann Moses. From Woodland, Ohio, she joined Cody's show in 1885 at the age of 25 and became an instant hit. She also consistently outshot the Wild West's male sharpshooting star — "Cowboy Kid" Johnnie Baker.

The Congress of Rough Riders of the World included 250 Plains Indians and riders from several foreign countries.

Cody's partner, Nate Salsbury, hired French Zouaves, Russian Cossacks, South American gauchos, Mexican vaqueros and Arabs, among others, to make spectacular sweeps around the arena.

"They were the top riders of the world," Mrs. Yost said. "And they went 'round that arena just as hard and fast as they could."

Despite Cody's success, his income fluctuated wildly.

"He could be a millionaire one year and broke the next," Mrs. Yost said.

The year the show played the 1893 Chicago World's Fair, his grandfather returned to his North Platte home with $3 million, Bill Cody said.

"He gave a donation to every church in town, gave every saloon-keeper a gold watch, outfitted the fire department in new uniforms and provided the band with new uniforms. He also bought the mansion — the finest house in North Platte," Mrs. Yost said.

Neither Bill Cody nor Mrs. Yost could think of any entertainment today that matches the excitement stirred in a community by the arrival of the Wild West show.

"When he (Buffalo Bill) came to town, everybody dropped everything and went to see him," said Mrs. Yost. "I don't know of anything since that draws people in like that."

Lobster eater couldn't wait

SOUTH EASTON, Mass. (AP) — Storeowner Jim Crowley suspected theft when he found the door open at his fish shop on a day when he's usually closed, and three large lobsters missing. But then he found an unsigned note and two crisp $20 bills.

The note listed the weight of the lobsters, worth $35.20, and said, "You left the store open."

state in brief

White, Lewis 'pass peace pipe'

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White met with Speaker Gib Lewis in a peace-making session Friday and both appeared ready to try to fund teacher pay raises without a confrontation over a tax bill.

White has adamantly supported a 24 percent teacher pay increase and has proposed "luxury" tax increases to pay for it. Lewis, meanwhile, has firmly insisted the House will not pass any kind of tax measure.

Lewis told reporters he was confident White would not try to put a tax rider on an education funding measure expected to be debated on the House floor next week.

White's tax plan criticized

AUSTIN (AP) — A Houston legislator said Friday the price of Gov. Mark White's tax package "seems too high to me," and she asked chairman Ron Wilson of the Legislative Black Caucus "to think about the price we are being asked to pay."

Rep. Senfronia Thompson, D-Houston, said White has not proposed taxing high-technology industries or petrochemical complexes but has proposed taxing restaurants and bars and the products sold by restaurants and bars.

"I don't even have a single constituent who owns his own petrochemical refining plant," she said in a letter, and added, "I do have a lot of constituents who own bars, restaurants, package stores and convenience stores."

Desegregation 'inadequate'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund branded as "wholly inadequate" Friday a plan submitted by Texas officials to desegregate the state's public colleges and universities.

The fund urged the Department of Education to take legal action against Texas to force compliance with federal civil rights laws, a move one attorney said could ultimately result in a cutoff of federal aid for higher education in Texas.

The Texas desegregation plan was submitted to federal education officials earlier this month, after a U.S. District Court Judge John H. Pratt gave the state 45 days to produce an acceptable desegregation plan.

Bingo regulations debated

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill tightening regulation of charity bingo games aimed at stopping professionals from setting up bingo parlors won voice vote approval in the Texas House Friday.

The Legislature legalized bingo games played for charity two years ago, and Rep. Lloyd Criss, D-Texas City, said his bill, passed previously by the Senate, was recommended by Comptroller Bob Bullock to "tighten up the law and make the regulations more controllable."

The bill was sent back to the Senate for consideration of amendments.

The measure would limit the operation of a hall leased for bingo purposes to two games per night with a 30-minute intermission between games, which supporters of the bill said would prevent groups of people each getting a license and in effect keeping a bingo game going around the clock.

Finance commissioner named

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White Friday appointed Ralph Donald Reed of College Station to be a member of the Texas Finance commission.

Reed, 35, is executive vice president of Brazos Savings Association of Texas.

Former representative indicted

FRANKLIN, Texas (AP) — Former State Rep. David London, already facing charges of cattle theft in Hopkins County, was sought Friday by Texas Rangers on a similar accusation in Robertson County.

A county grand jury in this small county seat town about 35 miles north of College Station indicted London Tuesday in connection with the April 21 theft of four Hereford yearlings from Gene Loreant of Franklin.

Field agents for the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association joined in the search for London, who was defeated in his 1982 reelection attempt.

A man who answered the telephone at London's Austin residence said London was not there and said he could not say where he could be reached. Officers said they looked at several of London's former residences trying to find him.

London, 29, was accused last year of stealing five head of cattle from Wills Point rancher Ed Furrh. He was scheduled to go to trial last December in Sulphur Springs, but won a continuance after retaining State Rep. Clint Hackney of Houston to represent him. Legislator-lawyers are not required to go to trial with any case within 30 days before or after a session of the Texas legislature.

Robertson County sheriff's deputy Joe McNutt said a man matching London's description, driving a pickup truck with London's state Legislature license plates "SO 87," and pulling a trailer with three Hereford yearlings in it, was stopped in the Robertson County town of Hearne on the night of April 21.

The policeman who stopped the pickup said there were no tail lights on the trailer, but after a routine check, he let the vehicle and driver go, he said.

Hearne police learned the next morning that four head of cattle had been stolen from a pasture on a road on which London's pickup was stopped, McNutt said. Officers were told the pickup had been seen nearby on the afternoon of the theft, but without the trailer, McNutt said.

The stolen cattle had no brands or earmarks to identify them, McNutt said, but they had white plastic eartags with a series of numbers that match ear tags the Hearn police officer remembered seeing in the trailer pulled by London's pickup.

Quick action asked on teacher pay

AUSTIN (AP) — The president of a teacher's union said Friday the "teacher crisis" is so bad that it could — unless the Legislature raises salaries — sentence an entire generation of children to an "intellectual death."

"If we do not have immediate, effective action by this Legislature, we doom our own children to lives on welfare rolls and in unemployment lines," said John Cole of the Texas Federation of Teachers, AFL-CIO.

Rep. Hugo Berlanga, assistant House speaker, said he and Speaker Gib Lewis "have every reason to believe" that House-Senate budget writers will trim enough money from other state agency budgets to provide additional funds for teacher salaries.

Berlanga said, however, "it would be unfair, unrealistic and untrue" to tell teachers they can expect a 24 percent pay raise over two years.

That figure has been used by Gov. Mark White in his pledge to put "education first." White appeared on statewide television Thursday night to promote his $1.27 billion luxury tax package, which could be used for a teacher pay raise.

White also mentioned a "secret strategy" for pushing his proposed taxes through the Legislature.

Four top EPA officials resign

Ruckelshaus

WASHINGTON (AP) — William D. Ruckelshaus, moving quickly to put his own mark on the Environmental Protection Agency, recieved resignations Friday from four top EPA officials.

The resignations came from the dwindling ranks of holdovers from the regime of former Administrator Anne M. Burford. They brought to 18 the number of top officials who have left the agency since congressional investigations began in February.

Those leaving include the directors of the agency's air and water programs and the regional administrators in Boston and Philadelphia.

Agency sources, who asked not to be named, said that the resignations were requested by Ruckelshaus, who was sworn in as EPA admninistrator Wednesday.

Those leaving include the two remaining assistant administrators from Mrs. Burford's management team — Kathleen Bennett, director of the air program, and Frederic Eidsness Jr., head of the water program.

Ford closes West Coast plant

MILPITAS, Calif. (AP) — Ford's last assembly stronghold on the West Coast, a sprawling birthplace for 4½ million vehicles, closed Friday, wiping out 2,386 jobs.

A bright red Escort GT, the last car off the assembly line, rolled out at 1:05 p.m. A sign on its windshield read, "The last Ford car built in California." Workers cheered and flashed "V" for victory as the car passed glaring television lights.

The shutdown, which began gradually about six months ago, idled 2,386 workers on Friday, remnants of a workforce of 5,600 men and women who put together cars for the nation's largest market, California and other Western states.

Airline mechanic investigated

MIAMI (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration said Friday it is investigating a year-old marijuana case against one of two Eastern Airlines mechanics whose mistakes almost forced a jumbo jet to ditch in the Atlantic.

James Andrew Sunbury, 25, pleaded no contest to a misdemeanaor charge of marijuana possession a year ago this month. The judge entered a guilty plea but withheld adjudication, meaning Sunbury could ask later to have his record expunged.

Even though adjudication was withheld, the arrest could affect Sunbury's FAA license to work on commercial airliners, FAA spokesman Jack Barker said.

Gem swap deals questioned

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — At least $88 million in pending gem swaps have been canceled since police announced that the deals may involve overvalued stones, investigators say.

The deals fell through after Anaheim police announced at a news conference last week that the value of gems being traded for items like beachfront property and homes may have been misrepresented to property owners.

Police think the alleged multimillion-dollar racket may have claimed "thousands" of victims in as many as 25 states and six foreign countries, Detective Joe Karns said Thursday.

Doctors shouldn't fear AIDS

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — An unwarranted fear of catching the deadly immune disorder AIDS may prompt some doctors and nurses to be too cautious in treating its victims, a physician says.

These overly cautious medical personnel have "perhaps done a little less than they might have done" in helping their patients, Dr. Roy Steigbigel of the University of Rochester Medical Center said Thursday after a symposium attended by AIDS experts nationwide.

He didn't cite examples, but said he knew of some health-care workers who had expressed reluctance to treat AIDS patients.

Doctors and nurses treating AIDS patients are not endangering themselves, he said. The mysterious disorder known as AIDS — acquired immune deficiency syndrome — can be transmitted only by "intimate, close contact" such as sexual relations, not through medical treatment, the physician said.

Four caught after bus escape

UTICA, N.Y. (AP) — Four inmates escaped from a prison bus with a guard's handgun today as they were being transported on the New York State Thruway, but state police later recaptured them, authorities said.

Eighteen other inmates on the bus remained in custody.

One inmate was wounded when recaptured as he fled, apparently on foot, less than an hour after the escape, Corrections Department spokesman Louis Ganim said.

The three other inmates were retaken about an hour later after they had driven off in a stolen car.

Details of the escape remained sketchy, and it was not immediately known how the guard was overpowered.

Youngster, mother reunited

ARVADA, Colo. (AP) — Eland Cramlet, no longer a "little 6-year-old fugitive," is getting reacquainted with the mother he had not seen since his father snatched him 3½ years ago in a custody dispute.

School district votes to file for bankruptcy

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Plagued by deficits and pressed by unions for $3.5 million in overdue raises, trustees of California's eighth-largest school district have voted to file for bankruptcy.

Trustees of the San Jose Unified School District, voting just before midnight Thursday, directed their attorney to file for protection under Chapter 9 of the Federal Bankruptcy Act, a section that covers public agencies.

The decision — first of its kind by any school system in the state — has thrown administrators, teachers and students into confusion about the future of the district's 42 schools in this city 50 miles south of San Francisco.

The 32,100 students won't notice any immediate change. Classes will end as planned on June 15.

But some of their 1,400 teachers will get IOUs called registered warrants in place of their regular June paychecks, as the money remaining in the $74.6 million budget runs out.

"We don't really know" what the future holds, said Hilda Beck, assistant superintendent for personnel and employee relations.

"Nobody knows what's going to happen because this has never happened before," said Brian McKenna, director of the San Jose Teachers Association.

The problem in the district was born with the passage of the tax-slashing Proposition 13 in 1978, which limited property tax revenues available to schools, and exacerbated by strained labor relations that provoked a strike in 1980. Last year, a "guaranteed" funding package from the state failed to provide the money the district was relying on to pay raises.

Board President Linda Wilson said Friday the move is "not a way of getting out of our debts, it's a way to spread them out over time. We will go on having to make the tough decisions."

The unanimous vote came after the teachers' union insisted trustees pay a $3.5 million award representing months of deferred raises plus interest.

An arbitrator on May 13 told the district it must pay the negotiated 6.1 percent salary increases that the district withheld during the 1982-83 school year to balance its budget. The award brings the average teacher's salary to $29,949.

Faced with the arbitrator's order and the union's stand, the trustees directed Superintendent Lillian Barna to pay the award, continue her efforts to win a special apportionment from the state Legislature and to initiate bankruptcy proceedings.

The emergency state funding, if approved, would cover this past year's $3.5 million debt. But trustees also called for the bankruptcy filing because another round of negotiated pay raises in 1983-84 will put the district $12 million in the red. The union has refused to renegotiate those further raises.

California makes huge difference in pachyderm's life

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (AP) — Tina was like a lot of New Yorkers. Living in a space that was too small, she became unhappy, lost weight and lashed out at the people who cared for her.

Now she's moved to sunny California, gained 500 pounds and has a new outlook on life.

Tina, the 26-year-old elephant who got a bad reputation in New York's Central Park Zoo after she attacked two trainers, now leads the good life at Marine World-Africa U.S.A.

A few months ago, Tina went on the auction block because remodeling plans at the Central Park Zoo didn't include replacing her little compound. But she attracted few buyers, partly because the crabby behemoth had crushed the arm of one trainer, stomped on another's foot and had an unpleasant habit of flailing her trunk at humans.

SHE reportedly spoiled one sale by charging the visiting director of the Syracuse Zoo. A few circuses and Marine World were the only places that expressed an interest in buying Tina, according to David Blasko, Tina's trainer in Redwood City.

"We can always use another elephant," said Blasko, 28. Marine World won the bidding, spending a bargain $5,000 on Tina. She was shipped west in February.

The California sun seems to agree with her. She lumbers around with other elephants at the park south of San Francisco. She gets a stroll around the park every few days to teach her the grass is good to eat.

As a veteran of a concrete urban zoo, "She never knew grass before," Blasko said. He also has an explanation for Tina's bad reputation.

"She was probably pretty bored (in New York)...and got attention by being bad, just like spoiled kids," he said. "I don't think they mistreated her, but she was neglected from lack of knowledge."

HE ALSO suspects that some of her devilry may have been magnified as "Tina the Elephant" stories cropped up in newspapers and on television.

When Tina arrived, she was weak from lack of exercise and weight loss. That made her easier to approach, said Blasko, who said getting her used to people was half the battle.

Tina's hip bones still show, but a diet of a dozen loaves of sourdough bread every day, along with oranges and vegetables, is fattening her up. She still has about a ton to go to bring her up to a normal 10,500 pounds on a nine-foot frame.

And although she's calmed down considerably since her arrival, Tina still needs to be treated with a bit of caution.

"Respect her and she'll respect you...butall elephants have the potential for violence," Blasko said. "They have unbelievable strength."

Meanwhile, New Yorkers have not forgotten Tina.

Blasko — who was quoted in some New York news articles about Tina's new life — says he gets mail each week from her East Coast fans.

Brain aneurysm kills girl

HIX, W.Va. (AP) — Doctors have turned off a respirator that sustained an 8-year-old girl who seemed like most second-graders until one morning three weeks ago "she cried out like she was having a nightmare" and then slipped into a coma.

That morning, her mother said, "She cried out like she was having a nightmare. She hugged me real tight and said, 'My head, my head.' At first I thought she said her leg and I tried to get her to stretch out. Then she put her hand on the right side of her head."

Until then, Donna Ward's family didn't know that the girl had long suffered from a brain aneurysm, a sac caused by a weakening in the wall of an artery that could have ruptured at any moment.

"The doctors said Donna was born with it, and as she grew, it grew with her," said Anna Jane Ward, Donna's 38-year-old mother.

At about 6:30 a.m. on April 27 the sac finally burst and caused a massive hemmorhage on the right side of her brain, said Dr. Adnan Silk, who operated on Donna for more than four hours at Raleigh County Hospital. He said he removed a blood clot and the sac, but that "there was too much damage from the hemmorhage."

Donna fell into a coma from which she never awoke, and earlier this week her family authorized doctors to disconnect the life-support system. She died at 2:30 p.m., shortly after it was turned off.

"It's God's act, I guess. Why, I don't know. She went to school the day before and was out playing until 8 o'clock the night before," Mrs. Ward said. "For some reason it just happened to our little girl and our family."

Just before the respirator was turned off, Ward said his family had become resigned to Donna's death.

At least 16 persons killed in South African bombing

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — A car-bomb exploded outside air force headquarters in this South African capital at the rush hour Friday. Officials said 16 people were killed and 197 wounded.

The white-minority regime blamed black guerrillas for the blast, which it called the "biggest and ugliest" terrorist attack yet against the government.

Defense Minister Gen. Magnus Malan threatened military retaliation against black nationalists based in neighboring countries. "We've got to do something about it," he told reporters.

Police said the blast in the heart of South Africa's capital was so powerful that the engine of the car believed to have held the bomb was blown 165 feet through the air.

Nuns stabbed in Jerusalem

JERUSALEM (AP) — Two nuns, a mother and daughter, were found stabbed to death Friday at a convent of the "Red" Russian Orthodox Church in Jerusalem and Israeli authorities ordered a special inquiry into the double slaying.

Police and church authorities kept outsiders from entering the walled compound of the Church of St. John where Chief Inspector Moshe Alexandroni said the two women, 67 and 42 years old, were found dead of multiple stab wounds on the floor of their room.

Interior Minister Yosef Burg, who is in charge of the police and is also minister of religious affairs, said he ordered a special inquiry. Police spokesman Ziv Rotem said a team of Jerusalem's top detectives was formed and spent the day at the murder site. But he refused to say what they found.

Argentine guerrillas returning

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Argentina's military government said Friday that leftist guerrilla groups defeated in a 1970s war against subversion are making a comeback and have laid plans to kill labor and political leaders.

The government also accused the head of a prominent left-wing faction of the Peronist Party, Vicente Saadi, of maintaining close ties with exiled leaders of the Montoneros guerrilla group, and said the guerrillas may have given his newspaper, La Voz, financial support.

The charges were included in a three-part report analyzing "the situation of political elements with a tendency toward the revolutionary left," presented to reporters by army, navy and air force intelligence officials at a 15-minute meeting. No questions were permitted.

Afghanistan raids criticized

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States on Friday accused the Soviet Union of killing hundreds if not thousands of civilians in Aghanistan in bombing raids that amounted to "a slaughter...intolerable by any standard of civilized behavior."

John Hughes, the State Department's chief spokesman, said numerous reliable reports reaching Washington from Afghan refugees and other sources "leave no room for doubt" that casualties from the raids "certainly number many hundreds and are probably in the thousands."

Hughes said civilian casualties in the recent raids were especially heavy near Herat, Afghanistan's third-largest city, and in the areas north and west of Kabul, the Afghan capital.

Rebel strongholds bombed

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Air force Dragonfly attack planes bombed rebel strongholds in northern El Salvador on Friday, while 1,500 soldiers punched into guerrilla-held territory in an adjacent province, a military source said.

The leftists' clandestine Radio Venceremos said rebel mortar batteries opened fire on the Atlacatl Battalion as it pushed toward the city of Perquin in northeastern Morazan province. It said the guerrillas caused "numerous casualties," but did not elaborate.

In Chalatenango province immediately west of Morazan, U.S.-made A-37 Dragonfly attack planes bombed four rebel strongholds, said an air force source with access to government battle reports.

Syrian ambassador seeks end of U.S. 'interference'

By The Associated Press

Syria's U.N. ambassador demanded Friday that the United States stop "interfering" in the Middle East and that the Security Council impose sanctions on Israel or expel the Jewish state from the world body.

Meanwhile, Syria's foreign minister told a radio interviewer his government will not discuss withdrawing troops from Lebanon unless the Lebanese and the United States are ready to renegotiate the entire Israeli withdrawal pact.

Syria's ambassador to the United Nations, Dia-Allah El-Fattal, speaking at the opening of a Security Council debate on Israeli occupation of Arab territories, assailed the Reagan administration's decision to lift its embargo on the sale of 75 advanced F-16 jet fighters to Israel.

"These aircraft carry death and destruction since Israel is going to use these arms to expand its present aggression," El-Fattal said.

"If the Security Council wishes to regain its prestige and credibility then it has to impose mandatory sanctions against Israel in accordance with the (U.N.) Charter or to oust Israel from the organization, being a country that is not peace-loving," the Syrian envoy said.

Unless the council can implement unconditional Israeli withdrawal from occupied Arab territories and bring about Palestinian statehood and "unless Washington stops interfering in the area and curbs Israel, then peace will always elude us like a mirage," the Syrian ambassador concluded.

Loss of Britian's treasures could get worse

LONDON (AP) — A multimillion-dollar buying spree on the world's art market by the Getty Museum has sent shudders through Britain's art world and raised fears that the loss of the nation's art treasures to foreign museums or collectors could get worse.

The museum, located in Malibu, Calif., has already purchased major art works from British aristocrats forced to sell their collections to pay taxes. More are slated to go on the auction block.

The collections, ranging from old masters to porcelain miniatures, are among the biggest still in private hands in Western Europe.

THE GETTY HAS an annual income of $100 million from investments made by a billion-dollar trust fund set up by oil tycoon John Paul Getty who died in England in 1976.

Museum executives deny that its awesome buying power has disrupted the international art market. But Geraldine Norman, The Times of London's art correspondent, called Getty's year-long trail of acquisitions "the biggest spending spree in the history of museums."

Hugh Leggatt, a prominent London art dealer campaigning against foreign purchases, warned: "If this goes on much longer, Britain will be like France after the revolution — an artistic wasteland.

"This is the most serious thing to have happened to the art world for many years and could have an enormous impact on those art treasures still in Britain," Leggatt said during an interview.

HAROLD WILLIAMS, president and chief executive of the Getty Museum, sought to soothe fears when he visited London in February, pledging the museum's millions will not disrupt the art market.

"More art is being lost in Britain through poor conservation, or lack of conservation, than we could ever acquire, even if we spent our principal as well as our income," he said.

Getty left almost his entire fortune to the museum, a replica of the Roman Villa dei Papiri that stood on the slopes of Mount Vesuvius and was buried when the volcano erupted in the year 79.

The endowment was finally disentangled last year after years of family law suits. Under American tax laws, the museum must spend 75 percent of its annual income from trust fund investments to maintain its charitable status.

WILLIAMS SAID that amounts to around $75 million a year — four times what all Britain's museums have to spend.

He said much of that will be spent on expanding the museum into the world's biggest "art historical facility," with libraries and a computerized archive of all major art works for scholars.

But some British art lovers are not convinced. They take a gloomy view of forthcoming sales by several British aristocrats.

Leggatt, secretary of the Heritage in Danger, a lobbying group, said "just the threat of Getty is enough to send art prices shooting up, pushing art works sold in this country beyond the scope of British museums."

AMONG RECENT Getty acquisitions in Europe:

—"Pan and Echo," a painting by the 16th-century master Dosso Dossi, bought for $2.79 million from England's Marquess of Northampton last October.

—A collection of 144 illuminated German manuscripts dating from the 7th to 16th centuries bought from German chocolate magnate Peter Ludwig. The purchase price for the collection, described by New York Times art critic John Russell as "one of the finest holdings of its kind ever assembled," was not disclosed.

—A Giovanni da Bologna marble sculpture, "Bathsheba," for a reputed $3.7 million, located by London art dealer Danny Katz.

No 'butts' about suit, cop's gun too close for comfort

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — An undercover detective who says he was wounded in the buttocks when his gun fired while he adjusted it "for comfort" has sued the manufacturer of the weapon.

Allen Darzniek of the East Grand Rapids Police Department filed suit Wednesday in Kent County Circuit Court against Colt Industries Operating Corp. He claims Colt negligently misrepresented the handgun's suitability for police work.

Darzniek was in his car in June 1981 when the .45-caliber Colt Combat Commander handgun he had bought from a fellow officer went off. The gun had been hidden in the left rear waistband of his pants.

"The gun was pinching my side. I just reached over to adjust it for comfort, and as soon as I touched it, the pressure safety on the grip went off," Darzniek said. "Needless to say, I was surprised. The bullet put a four-inch scar on my left side."

Darzniek is seeking damages in excess of $10,000, his attorney, Frederick Boncher, said Thursday. The suit requests compensation for Darzniek's injuries, medical expenses and "humiliation and emotional stress, including embarrassment."

A Colt spokesman in New York, Peter Williamson, said Thursday that the company would have no comment because a suit has been filed.

The suit claims that Colt never warned potential buyers that the weapon was neither suitable for combat nor could be safely carried with a round in its chamber.

System safe; Concerns exist

WASHINGTON (AP) — Aviation traffic is being directed safely, but the "margin of safety" is less than desirable, says the board which has been studying the system since air controllers were fired en masse after a strike two years ago.

The National Transportation Safety Board, in a final report on air traffic control, warned Thursday that its investigation revealed a number of concerns, including that:

— Government may be phasing out restrictions on the volume of air traffic before enough controllers are available. The Federal Aviation Administration plans to end most flight restrictions by the end of the year.

— Supervisors are too busy directing traffic to pay attention to fatigue and stress among controllers.

— The Federal Aviation Administration still has not developed detailed directives on how to detect fatigue and stress among the controllers.

— The reporting of controller errors is inadequate allowing for "many reportable occurrences (to) ... go unreported." Such incidents involve errors like allowing planes to fly too close together.

The performance of air traffic controllers has been a major concern of the NTSB since 11,500 controllers were fired in August 1981 after an illegal strike. The controller workforce is not expected back at full strength until mid-1984. The NTSB routine function is to investigate airplane crashes.

The five-member board, after a lengthy investigation into the air traffic control system, acknowledged in its report that "based strictly on the absence since the (controller) strike of a significant number of accidents attributed to (air traffic control) factors, the atc system has been operated safely."

But the board in making a number of recommendations to the FAA said the "margin of safety is less than the safety board believes to be desirable."

Two board members, Francis McAdams and Donald Engen, said that while they agree with the general conclusions of the report, its tone "implies a lack of safety that is not supported by objective data of the day-to-day operation of the system."

FAA spokesman Edmund Pinto noted that the safety board's report acknowledged that not a single major aircraft accident has been attributed to the controller strike and subsequent efforts to rebuild the controller workforce.

ABC honors stars

NEW YORK (AP) — Hildy Parks has become something of a juggler. Not bad either. Maybe she could have played the Palace, that venerable valhalla of vaudeville near the corner of Broadway and 47th Street on Duffy Square.

Right now, Miss Parks is keeping aloft three television specials, which she has written and co-produced with her husband, Broadway showman Alexander Cohen.

The first, to be shown Sunday evening on ABC, honors the Palace Theater which, from 1913 until talkies took over in the late 1920s, was where any performer worth his greasepaint wanted to appear.

Two weeks later on CBS, she presides over the annual Tony Awards broadcast, a task she's handled for the past 16 years. And in September, NBC will broadcast the third, entitled "Best of Everything," a program based on the idea of winning and winners in various forms of competition.

FOR NOW, Miss Parks is concentrating on editing the Palace salute — entitled "Parade of Stars" and featuring well-known performers portraying headliners from the Palace's heyday.

For example, Rich Little appears as Jack Benny, Dinah Shore as Helen Morgan, Dick Cavett as Fred Allen, Shelley Winters as Sophie Tucker, Gregory Hines as Bill Robinson, Jeanne Moreau as Sarah Bernhardt and Dorothy Loudon as Fanny Brice. Others stars who actually played the Palace — George Burns, Milton Berle and Harry Belafonte — are there in person.

The program was taped May 2 at the Palace as a benefit for the Actors' Fund of America, raising more than $200,000 for the service organization.

But what the theater audience saw is not necessarily what television viewers will get. The theater version stretched to 3½ hours. On television, allowing for commercials, station breaks and promos, it will run approximately 92 minutes.

EVEN SO, there will be bonuses for the television viewers. Little's Benny routine wasn't seen by the theater audience. He taped it in front of an empty house and flew back to Las Vegas that same day for a nightclub engagement. But television viewers won't see Tony Randall's impersonation of comedian Frank Fay.

"It had to be cut, not because it wasn't done well. It was really very funny but because there was no way of editing it," to fit within the time limitations, Miss Parks says.

In the number, Randall, playing Fay, sang "Tea for Two," and then ridiculed the lines, "which when broken down are really kind of absurd," she says. "There's no way you could edit that because everybody knows (the lyrics to) 'Tea for Two.'"

The television version also has a story line to link the acts. In it, Michele Lee plays a contemporary musical comedy star coming to the Palace to do a show.

SHE MEETS a stagehand, played by Eddie Albert, who was first brought to the theater when he was 5 years old. It's his reminiscing and that of a wardrobe mistress, Jean Stapleton, and a press agent, played by Ed Asner, which conjurs up the entertainment.

In the theater, the audience was given a summary of the plot line by Cohen who acted as an informal master of ceremonies.

After the vaudeville circuit collapsed in the 1930s, the Palace switched to movies and occasional appearances by such big name personalities like Belafonte, Judy Garland and Danny Kaye.

Coalinga tries to pick up the pieces

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

COALINGA, Calif. — Gordon Oakley, a grizzled gentleman in cowboy attire who boasts that he is "the only Okie in Coalinga," planned to spend his days, managing what used to be this small town's claim to fame — the annual Horned Toad Derby.

But plans for that tourist draw tumbled like most of the town just two and a half weeks ago, when a 6.5 magnitude earthquake shattered at least six blocks of downtown, more than a third of the town's homes, and the lives of nearly all its 7,000 residents.

"Who in the world could have enjoyed it, under these circumstances?" asked Oakley, standing under a broad shade tree in Olsen Park.

So Oakley and about 700 other Coalingans met instead at the park on the edge of town to commiserate, compare disaster tales or simply, for a few hours, to forget.

For a time, their town meeting resembled an old-time revival, with Mayor Keith Scrivner exorting all to "fight, kick and scratch" to rebuild their town.

"We've all lost something, whether it's great-grandmother's antiques, our house or all our worldly possessions," said Scrivner, a tall and husky man decked out in jeans and snakeskin boots, his blue shirt bearing a button inscribed "It's Not My Fault."

"All we've got left is us...it's not a total disaster," he added. "We'll show the rest of the country how a small town can do it."

The line drew cheers and some townspeople said they were convinced that Coalinga would rebound. Lloyd J. Gayman, 73, reckoned that without the town meeting, the citizens would have spent the day "grumbling to ourselves." "Besides, we're getting away from the mess at home," he said with a grin.

There were some hints that the town's shock had gone into remission. At least seven entrepreneurs have summoned enough humor to market varieties of an "I survived the Coalinga quake" shirt, all of which were displayed at the town meeting.

Children alternately played peacefully and brawled; others egged on by adults joined a circle dance that writhed in time to the music of a country and western band imported from nearby Fresno.

But for many in the crowd, standing under trees in the 80-degree heat, no amount of togetherness could answer their basic question — namely whether they will be able to financially survive the quake.

Most in town have already discovered that their insurance policies will not cover their losses and that they are almost fully dependent on whatever financial assistance the federal government will provide.

There is growing resentment and fear that the government will not deliver.

"We've gotten money from everywhere but the federal government," said Scrivner, who noted that a federal Farmers Home Administration representative supposedly bearing low-interest loans has yet to show up in town.

The Chamber of Commerce has begun a novel campaign to woo financial support, selling memberships in the Coalinga Chamber of Commerce, dated May 2, 1983, presumably before the quake hit.

Since last week the chamber has collected nearly $2,000 worth of $25 and $50 memberships, enough to start a bank account dedicated to the rebirth of the crushed downtown business section.

The condemned sections of downtown Coalinga will be razed within 60 days, and reconstruction will begin immediately, Scrivner said.

But the merchants disrupted by the quake have yet to figure out how to continue their businesses in the meantime, and the homeowners wrestle with even more indecision and less aid.

Ron Lander, 39, a lifetime resident of Coalinga, bitterly decried the lack of help for homeowners like himself.

His $60,000 home was destroyed. "It was brick," he said, an explanation that suffices in a town where nearly all the brick structures toppled. Lander is willing to kick and scratch for aid, as the mayor suggested, but said he was told by emergency officials that the best he could hope for under federal guidelines is an 11.75 percent federal loan.

"You can get better loans at a bank," he said bitterly. "They didn't tell us anything new here."

Lakers wash away Spurs

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar poured in 28 points Friday night to lead the Los Angeles Lakers to a 101-100 win over the San Antonio Spurs that sent the Lakers to the National Basketball Association finals against the Philadelphia 76ers.

The Lakers, who led since early in the first quarter, held off a late rush by the Spurs to give them a 4-2 victory in the Western Conference final.

Los Angeles built a 13-point lead early in the third quarter and held off a closing minute rush by the Spurs. San Antonio pulled to within four at 98-94 when George Gervin, who led the Spurs with 25 points, hit two free throws with 2:22 to play.

The Lakers got their final field goal of the game 21 seconds later when Michael Cooper took a quick pass from Abdul-Jabbar and connected on a layup. Ten seconds later, guard Norm Nixon, who had 17 points, posted the Lakers' final and winning point when he hit on one of two free throws, leaving the Spurs five points behind.

The Spurs quickly pushed the ball up the floor and, two quick passes later, found 7-2 center Artis Gilmore, who netted 24 points, alone inside for an uncontested dunk.

San Antonio got the ball back when Abdul-Jabbar missed a hook shot from the right baseline with 52 seconds to play. Gervin split the Laker defense and lobbed in a short inside shot with 35 seconds to play — the game's final points.

Jamaal Wilkes forced up 15-foot jump shot that missed with 11 seconds left.

Midland Cubs erupt 20 times

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Cubs Manager Tom Harmon was saying, "It's nice to score 20 runs and win," after the Midland Cubs celebrated their return home with a 20-4 win over the Tulsa Drillers at Cubs Stadium Friday night.

After a 3-7 road trip in which runs were scored sparingly, the Cubs launched an 11-game homestand with their most runs since May 5 when, as Harmon recalled, the Cubs scored 19 runs, and lost 20-19 to El Paso.

After falling behind 2-0 in the second, the Cubs nudged home a run in the second and then took charge in the third with a five-run eruption in which Rick Baker ignited things with a lead off homer to right, his first of the season. By the time it was over, Tulsa had kicked in two costly errors, Bill Hatcher drilled a one-run double to right and Don Hyman laced a two-run double down the left field line.

After a scoreless first, Midland scored in every inning to make it easy for Darryl Banks, who notched his sixth win in eight decisions, and tired just in time to be showering when the sandstorm blew in over the left field fence in the home eighth, chasing a crowd of 1,698 home.

BUT THE way things started out, the righthander from Reno appeared to be looking at a long night after walking Bobby Ball and Steve Buechele to open the game. Ball stole second and third and scored as Dan Murphy grounded into a 6-4-3 double play. Then Chuck Canady took advantage of the gale blowing toward Big Spring for his first homer for another run in the second.

"Darryl got off to a shaky start," said Harmon, "And he never had good stuff, but he kept the ball down and pitched to spots. He's done that a couple of times when his stuff hasn't been the best."

Harmon's lineup juggling...Baker to leadoff, Hatcher to No. 3 and Tom Lombarski to No. 5...paid off. Baker had a homer double and four rbi. Hatcher hit a triple, double and single for two rbi while Lombarski delivered a single and double for two rbi. "Batting five gives Tom a chance to bat in more runs and the Hatcher has been hitting we can utilize his bat better in No. 3"

Batting between Hatcher and Lombarski, Randy LaVigne went 4-for-6 with three rbi as the Cubs raked four Driller pitchers for 19 hits. Starter Mitch Zwolensky, 3-3, lasted three innings and took the loss.

"Five of our losses on the road trip were a result of home runs. The other teams simply outhomered us," Harmon said before the game. Friday, Tulsa outhomered the Cubs, 2-1, but this time no one noticed. Tulsa managed just eight hits off Banks and Tim Millner, who pitched the ninth.

CUB PRINTS—Ron Richardson, 1-3, gets the nod in tonight's 7 p.m. game...Ken Pryce's return to action after two weeks on the Disabled List should ease the pitching burden...Texas League President Carl Sawatski and his wife, Dorothy, are in Midland for the weekend...Cubs managed only one homer, but hit six doubles and a triple in an impressive muscle display...

Holmes, Dokes retain elite status

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Larry Holmes, showing his age, weathered a firestorm in the ninth round and kept the World Boxing Council heavyweight championship with a split 12-round decision over tough Tim Witherspoon Friday night.

The 33-year-old Holmes' narrow escape came on the same card in which Michael Dokes retained the World Boxing Association crown with a 15-round draw against former champion Mike Weaver.

The WBC has decreed 12 rounds for all its championship fights, while the WBA sticks with the traditional 15.

Holmes was in serious trouble in the ninth, but his experience pulled him through.

Judge Chuck Minker scored it 115-113 for Holmes, while judge Chuck Hassett favored the champion 118-111. Judge Herb Santos favored Witherspoon 115-114.

The AP scored it 115-113 for Holmes.

Michael Dokes retained his World Boxing Association heavyweight championship Friday night by the narrowest of margins, a draw against former champion Mike Weaver.

Dokes didn't think it was that close.

"I think I landed the most significant punches, the most devastating punches," said the 24-year-old champion. "He never hurt me at all in the fight. I don't think he won it all. When he comes in, you look at his face. He's cut, bleeding."

Dokes used a punishing left jab to hold off Weaver's stalking tactics throughout and retain the title he won last Dec. 10 in a controversial bout that lasted just 63 seconds. Weaver cried "Fix!" after that fight, although he later apologized for the remark.

This time, they went the distance in a close, tight battle.

"I hurt him several times," said Dokes. "I hurt him in the last round. I think I pulled it out in the last two rounds."

And despite a strength-sapping 88-degree heat, Dokes said he had something left at the end.

"I could still go two more rounds," the champion said.

Weaver was distraught at losing again to Dokes.

"I thought I did win the fight," he said. "I was moving forward and Dokes was moving backwards. I came to fight. I know it myself — I'm a champion."

The bout was scored even by two of the judges — Harold Lederman of New York and Larry Hazzard of Hillside, N.J. The third judge, Jerry Roth of Las Vegas, scored it 145-141 for Dokes.

The Associated Press scored the fight 143-142, Weaver.

Friday night's rematch had been ordered by the WBA, and the two men fought 15 brilliant rounds in an outdoor arena constructed for this unique heavyweight championship double-header.

Larry Holmes, the World Boxing Council champion, defended his title later in the evening against young Tim Witherspoon.

For a few moments, it appeared that this rematch might end just as quickly as the original bout between Dokes and Weaver.

Both men came out smoking in the first round and Dokes trapped Weaver on the ropes, hurting the ex-champ with a left to the face. Weaver seemed in trouble, but fought out of it, recovering after a clinch to score a good left to the head that put Dokes on the defensive.

The fight settled into a battle of jabs with Weaver, trying to become only the third man in history to regain a heavyweight title, stalking Dokes. The champion retreated but continued to score steadily with a punishing left jab to the face.

Page closed Snipes' left eye in the seventh round and piled up points to capture the championship elimination bout.

Judge Duane Ford scored the fight 115-111 for Page, while judge Doug Tucker had Page ahead by 116-112. Judge Dalby Shirley had Page ahead 115-112.

With the win, Page won the right to take on WBC heavyeweight champion Larry Holmes, assuming Holmes defended his title against Tim Witherspoon in the nightcap to the card Friday night.

The Page-Snipes was sandwiched between the Michael Dokes-Mike Weaver World Boxing Association title fight and Holmes' defense of his WBC crown against Tim Witherspoon.

Marfa is given medical reprieve

BALTIMORE (AP) — Desert Wine and Marfa, second and third choices to favored Sunny's Halo, were given a reprieve Friday to use a controversial medication in today's $250,000-added Preakness Stakes.

Owners of Desert Wine won a court battle overturning the Maryland Racing Commission's ruling that Desert Wine not be allowed while being treated with Lasix, a diuretic effective in preventing hemorrhaging. The ruling also cleared the way for Marfa to run on the medication.

Desert Wine, the Kentucky Derby runnerup to Sunny's Halo, and Marfa, fifth in the Derby, had been ready to run regardless of the outcome of the court action.

A FIELD of 13 3-year-olds is set for the second leg of thoroughbred racing's Triple Crown, headed by Sunny's Halo, whose unsightly rash had subsided.

Judge Robert Hammerman, in Circuit Court of Baltimore City, ruled that the Maryland commission was "abritrary, capricious and unreasonable" in denying Lasix to Desert Wine because bleeding had been detected only internally, not through the nostrils.

The dispute centered on Maryland's regulations that only permit Lasix being used for horses observed by a state veterinarian bleeding while on the race track after a workout or a race. They also may be observed in a detention barn within an hour after the race.

Fred Sahadi, who owns Desert Wine with Dan Agnew, said, "I'm not going to stand by and do nothing if I'm able to do something. This is a top class colt and he deserves to run in the Preakness up to his capability.

"I think the commission applied the rule incorrectly and I'm proud of being part of changing it."

A horse must be certified as a "bleeder" in states which allow the medication.

In California, veterinarians also used the endoscopic method for determining bleeders. A scope is inserted into the horse's trachea to see if the horse is bleeding internally. Maryland does not allow that method.

EARLIER THIS week, the Maryland commission gave permission for longshots Paris Prince and Flag Admiral to run on Lasix.

There was a prospect of an off track with thundershowers predicted for today.

Sunny's Halo was listed at 2-1 in the early line for the 1 3-16-mile race, a sixteenth of a mile shorter than the Derby. Desert Wine was rated at 7-2 and Marfa at 4-1.

"Everything's fine surface-wise," said David Cross, the trainer of Sunny's Halo, whose rash has come and gone over the past few weeks. "I don't like his appearance, but this is no beauty contest. Health-wise, there's nothing physically wrong with him."

The Canadian-bred colt, owned by Toronto stockbroker David Foster, has won all three starts this year, capturing the Rebel Handicap and Arkansas Derby before the Derby.

Eddie Delahoussaye will ride Sunny's Halo out of the No. 11 post position and he is expected to be on the lead or close to it with longshots Bet Big and Parfaitement figured to be right there with him for about the first half-mile.

Time becomes major Indy factor

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Time trials for the 67th Indianapolis 500 are scheduled to begin today, a week late but with the same drivers — Rick Mears, Mike Mosley and Don Whittington — still the favorites to battle for the pole position.

Time has at the Indianapolis
Motor Speedway, with a complete washout of the first weekend of qualifications last Saturday and Sunday, leaving just two days to fill the 33-car lineup for the May 29 aace.

But rain could be a problem again and may extend the time trials to Monday, or later. The National Weather Service said there is a 40 percent c-car lineup for the May 29 race.

But rain could be a problem again and may extend the time trials to Monday, or later. The National Weather Service said there is a 40 percent chance of showers and thunderstorms both today and Sunday.

Sixty-one entries drew for first-day qualifying positions last week, and each of them is guaranteed an opportunity to attempt a four-lap, 10-mile qualification run, providing they present themselves at the starting line at the proper time.

The additional five days of practice this week helped some drivers gain speed, with defending champion and two-time winner Gordon Johncock, 1969 Indy winner Mario Andretti, Danny Ongais, and Indy-car rookie Derek Daly of Ireland working their cars up over 200 mph.

But it was costly for a few drivers, including three-time Indy winner Johnny Rutherford, Pete Halsmer and John Paul Jr., all of whom will miss this year's race because of injuries suffered in accidents.

Rutherford, a three-time Indy winner who had been struggling to get his new Wildcat racer up to 195, is in the hostital recovering from a broken left foot and right ankle suffered in his second crash since practice opened here May 7.

Halsmer, one of the drivers to reach 200 during the first week of practice, spent most of the second week in the same hospital after hitting the wall and suffering a partially collapsed lung and badly bruised heels.

Paul, an Indy-car rookie driving for Midland's VDS entry and another member of the 200-mph fraternity, shattered his left ankle in a crash last week.

VDS has replaced Paul with Geoff Brabham and Halsmer has replaced Johnny Parsons. The Patrick Racing Team, which already has Johncock and Chip Ganassi in team cars, was preparing a backup car and talking to several different drivers about the possibility of replacing Rutherford.

With 18 drivers at 200 mph or better, and a half dozen more above 198 mph in practice, it appears Mears' one and four-lap qualification records — 207.612 and 207.004 — as well as the record field average of 197.740, are in jeopardy. All of those marks were established last May.

"The time this week helped to get the car a lot more comfortable," said Andretti, who is driving a new Lola. "We've just had to try a lot of things to find the speed because this is a new car and we're really still doing development work. We can't even think about the pole position. I just want to get up somewhere near the front."

"The extra time gave everybody else a chance to erase the advantage that we came here with," said Mears, whose Penske Team put nearly 5,000 test miles on its new PC-11 racer prior to coming to the Speedway.

"But, there's nothing we can do about it. We've just been mainly concentrating on getting ready to race 500 miles. The pole is important, but you can't spend two weeks just working to start up front. The idea is to win the race."

Actually, Whittington had the fastest lap in practice, turning an electronically timed 205.198 mph during the first week, while Mears was hand-timed at 205.1 mph. Mosley had a 204.1 mph. Those three, along with rookie Teo Fabi of Italy and second-year Indy driver Bobby Rahal, have run consistently above 200 mph since practice opened.

Others who have been above the magic 200 mark this month include four-time Indy winner A.J. Foyt, former Speedway record-holder Tom Sneva, Kevin Cogan, three-time Indy winner Al Unser and his son, rookie Al Unser Jr., Tony Bettenhausen and Howdy Holmes.

ABC plans to televise part of the qualifications today on its Wide World of Sports program between 4 p.m. and 6 p.m. CDT.

Schlichter suspended

NEW YORK (AP) — Quarterback Art Schlichter of the Baltimore Colts, whose compulsion for gambling cost him thousands of dollars and his image as an All-American boy, has been suspended indefinitely by Commissioner Pete Rozelle for betting on National Football League games.

Schlichter, a 23-year-old former star at Ohio State University who failed in his rookie year to justify his selection as a first-round draft choice, could have been banded for life by the NFL, or he could simply have been fined.

INSTEAD, ROZELLE chose the middle road, benching Schlichter for the present time and promising to review his case and consider him for reinstatement before the 1984 season. It is the first time since 1963 that Rozelle has had to bench a player for gambling.

Before the 1963 season, Paul Hornung of the Green Bay Packers and Alex Karras of the Detroit Lions were suspended indefinitely — each wound up sitting out a year — for gambling on NFL games. Rozelle also fined five other Lions' players $2,000 apiece for placing $50 bets on the winning Packers in the 1962 championship game.

But Karras' bets didn't even total $1,000, and Hornung's didn't amount to much more — small change compared to the $389,000 that Schlichter admitted to gambling away on various sports events in the first 2½ months of this year.

"He's not done many things wrong in his life," Schlichter's father, Max, said when the story broke six weeks ago, "but I guess when he did it, he did it in a big way." And when he got in too deep, he turned to the law, helping the FBI to arrest four men on gambling charges.

SCHLICHTER, WHO met with Rozelle for four hours two weeks ago, told him then that he was willing to undergo treatment for his compulsive gambling. Friday, when Rozelle's decision was announced, Schlichter was in an unidentified hospital "undergoing intensive therapy," his lawyer, Jack Chester, said from Columbus, Ohio.

"On the conclusion of this in-patient treatment," Rozelle's statement said, "he will continue under intensive professional care. I commend him and his advisers for initiating these measures prior to my decision and sincerely hope that he can overcome his illness and eventually rehabilitate successfully."

Chet Simmons, commissioner of the infant United States Football League, recently expressed interest in Schlichter joining the USFL. Friday, he again said he did not know Schlichter's contractual obligations to the Colts and the NFL.

San Angelo falls to Bel Air, 8-5

EL PASO — The San Angelo Bobcats were eliminated from the state baseball playoffs as they dropped an 8-5 decision to El Paso Bel Air here Friday.

It was the second consecutive victory in the three-game miniseries for the Highlanders.

Although San Angelo outhit Bel Air, the Bobcats also committed five errors to the Highlanders' two.

Henry Klepac and Mike Torres homered for San Angelo.

OU's Switzer must stand trial

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A federal judge on Friday ruled University of Oklahoma head football coach Barry Switzer and eight co-defendants must be tried on charges of violating securities laws.

In February, the Securities and Exchange Commission accused Switzer, Oklahoma City oilman George Platt and 11 other men of illegally using "insider" information to buy more than $1 million worth of common stock of Phoenix Resources Co. The stock was bought in June 1981.

U.S. District Judge Dale E. Saffels of Kansas City, Mo., dismissed three of the defendants from the lawsuit Friday.

Saffels was brought in to preside over the case because all the federal judges in Oklahoma City are OU graduates and most are avid OU football fans.

Beck beats darkness for lead

ATLANTA (AP) — Chip Beck completed a 7-under-par 65 moments before darkness halted play and established a three-stroke lead Friday in the twice-delayed and uncompleted first round of the Georgia-Pacific Atlanta Golf Classic.

Thursday's play was washed out by steady rains, prompting officials to reduce the tournament to a three-day, 54-hole format.

Friday's action was interrupted by a thunderstorm which flooded a couple of greens and caused a 3-hour, 14-minute delay. That lost time eventually resulted in 26 players being stranded by darkness.

They marked their positions on the rain-slickened hills of the Atlanta Country Club course and are scheduled to return at daylight Saturday to complete first round play. The second round will follow immediately. The third, and final, round is set for Sunday.

Among them was Greg Powers, who was 4-under-par with two holes to go, and Mark McCumber, 3-under with two to go. Neither had a chance to overtake Beck, however.

"With it being cut to 54 holes, I figured I needed to get it in position early," said Beck, 26, a career non-winner now in his fifth year of PGA Tour competition.

He blistered his back nine in 30 and required only nine putts on that side. After starting from the 10th tee, he made the turn one under and chipped in for a birdie there. His only 2-putt on his last nine holes of play came on the final hole of the day.

He was lining up an 8-foot birdie putt when the siren sounded halting play for the day. Beck had the option of finishing the hole, and backed away from the putt. He lined it up again, then missed.

"Everything just started rolling into place," he said, "and I'd played well enough this year to maintain it."

Cal Peete slogged and sloshed to a 68 and was second alone among the finishers.

Lanny Wadkins, winner of two titles in his last five starts, topped a big group at 69. Also at that figure were Bob Eastwood, Canadian Dave Barr, Sammy Rachels, Joe Inman, Peter Jacobsen and Vance Heafner.

Stolen car doesn't bother Johnson

CLIFTON, N.J. (AP) — Chris Johnson, whose car was stolen earlier in the day, tied Donna White Friday for the first-round lead in the LPGA Chrysler-Plymouth Charity Classic with a 5-under-par 68.

Johnson, whose best finish on the tour this season has been a tie for sixth place, had four birdies and an eagle on the 6,389-yard Upper Montclair Country Club course.

The 25-year-old from Tucson, Ariz., who began her round on the back nine during a steady rain, sank a 65-yard shot with her sand wedge for an eagle on the par 5, 504-yard 18th hole.

White, who in 1980 captured the last LPGA tournament held at Upper Montclair, sank a six-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole to pull into a tie with Johnson. White completed the first round, which ended under sunny skies, with five birdies.

Amy Alcott, with four birdies and an eagle, was tied with Lori Huxhold at 3-under 70. Kathy Hite shot a 71.

Johnson, whose 1983 Mazda RX7 was stolen from the parking lot of her hotel in nearby Hasbrouck Heights, said she had to forget about her misfortune before the round began.

"I was glad it was raining so people thought it was rain on my face instead of tears," said Johnson, 39th on the money list.

Detroit Tiger third baseman Howard Johnson fails to snag a ground ball off the bat of Texas Ranger hitter Dave Hostetler Friday night. The Rangers protected their first place status with a 4-0 win.

Darwin blanks Tigers

By The Associated Press

Danny Darwin hurled a five-hitter and Larry Parrish belted a three-run homer in the third inning as the Texas Rangers beat the Detroit Tigers 4-0 Friday night.

Darwin, 3-3, struck out seven and walked five in only his second complete game of the season. It was Darwin's eighth start since being activated April 10 after recovering from a bleeding ulcer that put him on the disabled list.

Parrish's seventh homer of the season came after Jim Anderson reached base on a forceout grounder and Billy Sample walked off Detroit starter Jerry Ujdur, 0-4.

Ujdur was in trouble from the start, giving up four walks in the first 2 1-3 innings. Ujdur lasted 4⅔ innings before giving way to Juan Berenguer. Ujdur didn't walk any one, and finished with three strikeouts.

The Rangers picked up an insurance run in the fifth when Pete O'Brien singled and scored from first on Dave Hostetler's two-out double.

White Sox 9, Royals 6

Greg Luzinski, Tom Paciorek and Ron Kittle hit home runs to boost the Chicago White Sox to a 9-6 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

Britt Burns, 1-2, was the winner with relief help from Salome Barojas, as Chicago snapped a three-game losing streak and handed the sputtering Royals their 11th defeat in 16 games. The loser was Vida Blue, 0-3.

Tony Bernazard doubled leading off the Chicago first and eventually scored on a sacrifice fly by Harold Baines, breaking a 24-inning scoring drought. Paciorek's leadoff homer in the second gave Chicago a 2-0 lead. With two out in the fourth, Kittle walked and Lorenzo Gray and Rusty Kuntz hit infield singles to load the bases, and Jerry Dybzinski singled in two runs.

The Royals got a run in the second on Frank White's triple and Amos Otis' grounder. Hal McRae tripled home another run in the fourth and came home on Frank White's single to make it 4-3.

American League

In the fifth, Luzinski slugged a two-run homer, the slumping slugger's third homer of the year and first since April 19.

Blue Jays 7, Orioles 5

Jim Gott scattered four hits over five innings and Lloyd Moseby knocked in three runs to lead the Toronto Blue Jays to a 7-5 victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

Gott, 1-3, set 10 Orioles down in order during one stretch and struck out three. He was forced to leave the game with a blister on his throwing hand and three relievers held the Orioles to five hits the rest of the way.

Baltimore starter Dennis Martinez, 3-7, lasted only 3 and 1-3 innings. He gave up five runs, four of which were earned and walked two.

The Orioles scored three of their runs on homers. Ken Singleton hit his sixth of the season leading off the second, Dan Ford cracked his fifth of the year in the sixth and Jim Dwyer hit his second in a two-run ninth.

Twins 10, Red Sox 4

Gary Ward, John Castino, Mickey Hatcher and Tom Brunansky stroked three hits each Friday night to lead a 16-hit attack as the Minnesota Twins routed the Boston Red Sox 10-4.

The Twins scored four runs on five hits and a walk in the first inning and added two more runs in the third to take an early 6-1 lead. They later sewed it up with a four-run ninth on two-run homers by Gary Gaetti and Brunansky.

Ken Schrom, 2-0, a righthander called up from the minors early this month, earned the victory in his first major-league start with relief help from Rick Lysander, who collected his second save.

Dwight Evans, Wade Boggs and Dave Stapleton had three hits apiece for the Red Sox. Stapleton drove in three runs with two doubles and a single while Rich Gedman drove in the fourth Boston run with a double.

Bruce Hurst, 3-2, was the loser.

Braves halt Cardinal streak

By The Associated Press

Rookie Craig McMurtry and Terry Forster combined on a three-hitter and pinch hitter Bob Watson's sacrifice fly snapped a seventh-inning tie as Atlanta Braves beat St. Louis 2-1 Friday night and broke the Cardinals' seven-game winning streak.

McMurty and Forster were helped by five Atlanta double plays.

McMurtry, 6-1, won his sixth straight game with six strong innings. He only allowed first-inning singles to Lonnie Smith and Keith Hernandez. Forster picked up his fifth save by hurling the final three innings, permitting only George Hendrick's one-out infield single in the ninth.

Atlanta took a 1-0 lead in the second on Bruce Benedict's run-scoring single. The Cards tied it 1-1 in their half of the second when Ken Oberkfell walked and took third on shortstop Rafael Ramirez's fielding error. Oberkfell scored on Ozzie Smith's double-play grounder.

Glenn Hubbard opened the Braves' seventh with a double and went to third on Benedict's sacrifice. Watson, batting for McMurtry, lifted his sacrifice fly to left.

Mets 4, Dodgers 0

Neil Allen pitched a six-hitter in only his second start in four years and Hubie Brooks drove in two runs to lead the New York Mets to a 4-0 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Allen, 2-4, had made 208 relief appearances before starting his first game since 1979 last Saturday in a 6-2 victory over Pittsburgh. Friday night, he pitched the first complete game of his career — never having gone more than seven innings previously — and struck out a career-high seven batters. All the hits against Allen, who had lost four games in relief earlier this season, were singles.

National League

Pirates 4, Astros 3

Larry McWilliams pitched seven strong innings, Kent Tekulve recorded his first save of the season and Dale Berra blasted a two-run homer as the revamped Pittsburgh Pirates defeated the Houston Astros 4-3.

The Pirates, starting a totally right-handed lineup that left regulars Jason Thompson, Dave Parker, Johnny Ray and Mike Easler on the bench, jumped on loser Bob Knepper, 1-6, for three runs in the second inning.

McWilliams, 4-3, was coasting along with a two-hit shutout until the seventh, when Alan Ashby and pinch hitter Tim Tolman lined consecutive doubles. McWilliams was relieved by Tekulve after allowing Dickie Thon's leadoff homer in the eighth, his fourth of the season.

Reds 9, Cubs 4

Dave Concepcion's grand-slam homer capped a five-run eighth inning that powered the Cincinnati Reds to an 9-5 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Reliever Mike Proly, 1-1, walked pinch hitter Tom Foley to lead off the Cincinnati eighth and Duane Walker followed with a pinch-single. Gary Redus then beat out a bunt off reliever Bill Campbell to fill the bases.

Eddie Milner, who earlier had doubled and homered, walked to force in the tying run before Concepcion hit his first homer of the season and the fifth grand slam of his career. Reliever Bill Scherrer, 1-1, was credited with his first major-league win.

The Cubs Fergie Jenkins left in the fifth inning after striking out five. That gave him a career total of 3,120, putting him in sixth place on the all-time list ahead of Bob Gibson, who had 3,117.

San Diego 5, Philadelphia 0

Rookie Andy Hawkins pitched his first major-league shutout as the San Diego Padres blanked the Philadelphia Phillies 5-0.

Hawkins, 3-2, gave up five hits, struck out six and walked one. The Padres beat Steve Carlton, 6-3, who struck out four in eight innings and passed Walter Johnson to move into second place on the major league all-time strikeout list with 3,511, just 10 behind leader Nolan Ryan of the Houston Astros.

Expos 7, Giants 1

Steve Rogers hurled a four-hitter while Gary Carter slammed a two-run homer and Warren Cromartie added a two-run double as the Montreal Expos defeated the San Francisco Giants 7-1.

The Expos had won only one of their last six games, but they ripped San Francisco starter Fred Breining, 4-4, in taking a quick 5-0 lead.

Rogers, 6-1, retired the first 11 batters he faced before Jeff Leonard's RBI single in the fourth accounted for the Giants' run. Rogers went on to complete his fifth game, striking out nine and walking two.

UAW vice presidents given new assignments

DALLAS (AP) — The new United Auto Workers union president on Friday announced new job assignments for most of the UAW's six vice presidents.

Meanwhile, delegates at the final day of the UAW's 27th constitutional convention in Dallas overwhelmingly approved a pay raise for top officials and about 800 UAW workers as well as a plan to freeze those salaries until June 1985.

Owen Bieber, who was sworn in as president Thursday to replace retiring Douglas A. Fraser, announced that Donald Ephlin, 57, is the new vice president in charge of the union's General Motors Corp. department, a post Bieber held until he assumed the presidency.

The GM department is considered the most prestigious position among the vice presidents.

Ephlin had been vice president in charge of the Ford Motor Co. department.

He will be replaced in that post by Stephen Yokich, 47, former vice president in charge of the agricultural implements and skilled trades departments.

Besides the Ford assignment, Yokich retains his skilled trades responsibilities and oversee UAW organizing activities.

Marc Stepp, 60, retains his post as vice president of the Chrysler Corp. department. He drops his independent parts suppliers responsibilities but will oversee salaried workers' matters.

The newest vice president, Bill Casstevens, 54, former director of Region 2 in Cleveland, will head agricultural implements, Mack Truck and Volkswagen of America Inc. departments.

Odessa Komer, 57, retains her Bendix Corp., Budd Co. and Rockwell Automotive duties and also will supervise independent parts suppliers.

Robert White, 48, remains vice president and director of the Canadian UAW.

Before the convention, the union had a seventh vice presidency which supervised organizing activities. But that vice president, Martin Gerber, retired and the UAW deleted the position to reflect the union's smaller membership.

Delegates approved a 3 percent annual salary boost for Bieber from about $72,000 that Fraser had received to $74,094.

But Bieber won't get another pay raise for two years — until June 1985 — to reflect that GM and Ford workers gave up their 3 percent annual wage improvements for two years under their current contracts.

The 3 percent increase already was passed by the UAW's now 25-member executive board two weeks ago, according to UAW spokesman David Mitchell.

U.S. loses host bid for soccer World Cup

By The Associated Press

Many Mexicans reacted with enthusiasm and U.S. soccer officials with sadness Friday when it was announced that the 1986 World Cup would be held in Mexico.

Gene Edwards, president of the United States Soccer Federation, said, "We feel the United States was the strongest of the three candidates. Naturally, we are very disappointed."

The United States, which bid for the World Cup along with Canada and Mexico, was all but eliminated ever since officials of FIFA — soccer's world governing body — announced last month that they would only inspect sites in Mexico.

That decision was finalized Friday in Stockholm, Sweden, when FIFA's 20-member executive committee officially picked Mexico.

Richard Rottkov, a spokesman for the U.S. federation, said, "It would have behooved FIFA to award the World Cup to the United States. We were most qualified and we have a soccer market that is virtually untapped."

A 10-member U.S. delegation, headed by former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, was in Stockholm pleading the United States' case when FIFA made the final decision.

"We feel we submitted a very professional presentation," Edwards said. "Had we received the bid, it would have added tremendous impetus to further the growth and development of soccer in this country.

Hope honored for making it to 80

By TONY KORNHEISER
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — In a few days Bob Hope will be 80. (Or about 20 years younger than Milton Berle's act.)

Maestro, if you will...:

"Eighty? Eighty just means that you're going steady with your electric blanket. Eighty just means that your favorite food is prune souffle. Eighty just means that when you get up in the morning you turn on your Mixmaster — and hang on until your heart gets started."

Can we get a rim shot, please?

Thursday there was a Senate reception celebrating Hope's birthday, honoring his career and thanking him for the memories. Hope is in Washington to tape his birthday special at the Kennedy Center for airing on May 23, and earlier this week a Senate resolution called him "a part of American folklore...a genuine hero." After listening to Sen. Henry Jackson (D-Wash.) read the resolution, Hope, whose joke file is more massive than the national debt, swung into some political material: "Five years ago the House honored me when I turned 75. That's five years between honors — I wanna tell ya, that's a long time to be stuck in committee...Yeah, this is great, just great, a great thrill for me — a comedian being honored by his peers...But hey, it's wonderful to be here. I love Washington. I was walking through the Smithsonian this morning, and I don't want to say that I'm old, but somebody tried to grab me and stuff me in a glass cage — and what bothered me was that it was Claude Pepper.

Maggie Smith 'empty vessel' until she acts

By FLORENCE AVAKIAN
Hearst Feature Service

NEW YORK — "I'm like an empty vessel until I'm out there doing what I'm meant to do," says British actress and double Oscar-winner Maggie Smith.

"I think it's marvelous that the public here is endlessly fascinated with stars," she continues, blandly. "I suppose that means they're in great demand. But it's pretty hard. You feel almost driven to fabricate something to say because you're frightened of being so boring."

At 48, Maggie Smith is a strikingly beautiful woman, tall, shapely, with short red hair softly framing chiseled features. Clad in a black silk blouse dotted with colored patches and slim black slacks, she wears no makeup and has no retinue of publicists, agents or photographers. The suspicion grows that she may be real.

Sitting cross-legged on a huge couch in her hotel room, she smokes incessantly. Long, delicate fingers draw pictures accentuating her comments. She looks vulnerable but steel-willed, classy but warm; above all, fiercely independent. She's so unaffected it becomes difficult to remember that she's a reigning queen in her profession — a star.

She's won two Oscars, one in 1969 for best actress in "The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie" and another in 1978 for best supporting actress in "California Suite."

She continues: "There is something alarming about the number of people looking for autographs. And when they come at you, it's pretty scary. It doesn't happen to me, for God's sake. But even in a mild way, you're alarmed, frightened when you're in a shop or on the street and somebody recognizes you. In England you're left alone.

"I couldn't believe being whisked to the Today show, to radio shows, talking to this, to that. Then you realize also, and it's worrying, that it's something you have to do. It's part and parcel of the profession, and it's something I'm not used to or good at. It's not enough to say, 'I give a peformance every night. What do you want, blood?' Yes, they do indeed want blood."

It doesn't happen in England, she says. And why the difference beween England and America? "An added saleability I suppose," she says candidly. "It's sort of extraordinary. You are a product to be sold. The industry here does make an incredible amount of money. It happens a lot more today in Great Britain. But it will always be on a much smaller scale, not so overwhelming. We don't live in his 'do or die' situation and that takes a lot of pressure off. It's interesting that people are introduced as 'award-winning.' That's sort of wrong to me."

She explains the charisma of stardom simply. "If you plod on, keep working and move through all the things of the young, the middle aged, then you become revered in a way."

Maggie Smith says she's most at home in the theater. And indeed she has played a wide range of roles in England, Canada and the United States. But her special love is repertory theater despite its low salaries.

"You have to make some kind of commitment," she insists. "You can do nothing when you pop in and do a play. You have to work with a group of people. It's during the rehearsal period you get totally immersed."

And that's why an actor shouldn't play a stage role for more than three months, she explains. " If you go into a repertory system like there was in the (British) National Theater, you can play several roles. That's marvelous!"

Though she is a master of comedy, in particular caricature, she credits Sir Laurence Olivier for giving her the chance to star with him.

Georgia town offers Old West atmosphere

PARROTT, Ga. (AP) — This small town straddles Georgia Highway 55 the way a shipwreck victim clings to a life raft.

Once a bustling cotton town, Parrott now offers the visitor a sleepy, ghostly atmosphere of the Old West.

That's what drew motion picture producer Walter Hill to the town four years ago. He used it as a backdrop for a portion of his film, "The Long Riders," about the James-Younger outlaw gang.

For several weeks in 1979, Parrott became Northfield, Minn., and the scene for the 1876 "great raid" that marked the decline of the Jesse James gang's career when the townsfolk stood their ground against the outlaws.

The town's population of 250 rose to about 1,000 during the filming. But now, the lights, cameras and action are gone, and life in Parrott goes on as before — quietly.

The frontier spirit lives, however. Outlaws in Parrott are likely to get the same kind of reception the James-Younger gang got in Northfield.

When three men tried to hold up the post office several months ago, they were chased by 74-year-old John Lunsford, the postal clerk's husband.

Louise Lunsford did her part in stopping the robbers, too. "I told them I'd kill them in a minute," she said.

"We're just a quiet, little farming community, and that's the way everybody likes it," Mrs. Lunsford said. "People coming down the highway stop sometimes when they see the town. They just have to look."

What draws them are the Old West building front signs left by Hill's movie company. Once there, however, they visit the handful of stores on Main Street to look for antiques.

Chartered in 1889, the town bears the name of its founder, John Lawson Parrott, buried here in a small cemetery near Main Street.

Cook Brothers, a general merchandise store, is owned and operated by Frank Cook. It was built in 1904 by his father, and the business has been in the family ever since.

Cook stocks everything from hardware and clothing to posthole diggers and antiques.

"Over the years, we've just collected a lot of these things," he says. "We pick them up here and there." He said business is "pretty fair."

Cook remembers Parrott in its heyday, when the two cotton gins in town were still going strong. Back then, Main Street had two banks and a couple of doctors.

But labor-saving farm machinery changed all that.

"The farmers started using tractors, rather than mules, after motor vehicles became a way of life around here. I think it was around the late 1940s," Cook said.

"Anyways, the farm laborers were replaced by tractors and they just drifted down to Dawson and Albany. That's what killed this town."

Lawrence Powell, the owner and operator of L. Powell Grocery on Main Street, thinks Parrott is in no danger of becoming a ghost town.

"I think Parrott will survive because I feel people prefer to live in small towns," he said.

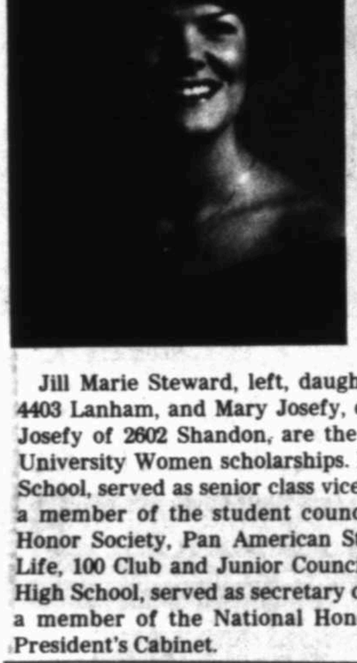
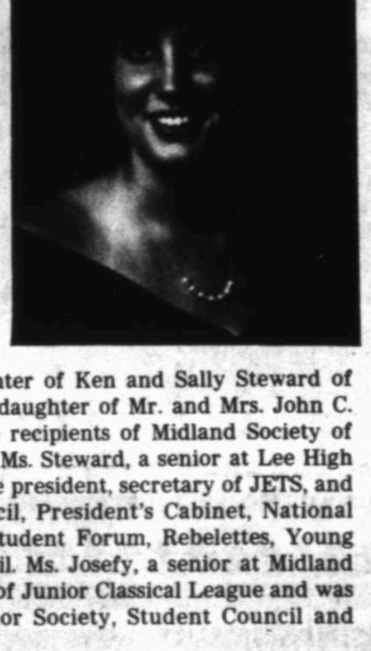
James Phillips, on his horse Chicken, cuts a calf from the herd at the Pleasure Island Stables near Port Arthur. Phillips says he's nothing but a cowboy, although there's few of them left. "There's several different kinds of cowboys," he said. "There's drugstore cowboys, dancin' cowboys, rodeo and workin' cowboys. I've always been the workin' cowboy type."





Jill Marie Steward, left, daughter of Ken and Sally Steward of 4403 Lanham, and Mary Josefy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Josefy of 2602 Shandon, are the recipients of Midland Society of University Women scholarships. Ms. Steward, a senior at Lee High School, served as senior class vice president, secretary of JETS, and a member of the student council, President's Cabinet, National Honor Society, Pan American Student Forum, Rebelettes, Young Life, 100 Club and Junior Council. Ms. Josefy, a senior at Midland High School, served as secretary of Junior Classical League and was a member of the National Honor Society, Student Council and President's Cabinet.

'I'm a kid who never grew up'

PORT ARTHUR (AP) — "I'm a kid who never grew up."

Enter James Phillips, about 49 years old. A horseman who loves to "work his cattle," Phillips has the look of a classic western cowboy.

Tall and slim, his face is tanned and wrinkled, worn by years in the sun and wind. He is a chain smoker, but never loses a word of his conversation even when he stops to light up. His eyes reveal an apparent contentment with himself and with his life, and he talks with an eagerness to be friendly and cordial, Texas-style.

Technically, he's maintenance supervisor for Pleasure Island, which means he and his staff keep the place clean, do repairs, cut grass.

But on a level where his soul jostles for its rightful place, he's a horseman. No more and no less.

He leased land on the island 10 years ago and built the Pleasure Island Stables. At that time he had only 12 stalls; today he has about 20 and boards horses for private owners.

There is no riding trail on the island, and no arrangements for the public to rent horses. Feed and upkeep costs are too high for that, he says. Phillips simply keeps the horses of city folk while they do their other jobs.

"You know, I never could understand how a preacher could be in the horse business. Know why? Cuz how can you train a horse without cussin'? Ever' horse I train will definitely relate to cussin'."

James Phillips, horseman

HE WAS BORN and raised in Cleveland, Texas, and grew up between the city and the country.

"My daddy died when I was four-years-old of all things, can you believe it, pneumonia. Nowdays, that's the best way to get cured...get a cold, get pneumonia, then they cure you." He chuckled. "That's a horrible thing to make a joke about.

"But anyway, we didn't have no horses but my relatives did and I grew up between the city and the country."

Asked if he could remember how young he was when he first mounted a horse, he chuckled again. "Oh, I don't have any idee (pronouncing it EYE-dee)."

Focus is on Phillips as he begins to talk to his horses. The animals listen to him, perk their ears and shake their heads. Even a dog, asleep nearby, gets up and begins to wag his tail as Phillips comes near.

"I like animals, all animals," he said, grinning. "Thing about city people is, I'm always amazed. They come out here and my dogs start comin' toward them and they start backing up.

"Well, people like myself, that was raised with dogs...I have no fear whatsoever of a dog. I could walk up in yer yard and a big ol' dog could start barkin', and I'd just say, 'Git out of the way and shut yer mouth or I'll kick yer head' and I guarantee you he'd go lay down somewhere.

"ANIMALS, strictly go by the sound of your voice. If there's one thing an animal can understand, it's fear. If you show fear, an animal'll think, 'Oh yeah, they be bad. Let me jest go on and mess with them,' but if you act like you ain't bothered, they'll back up. They'll think yer crazy and won't wanna bother you," he said.

"You know, I never could understand how a preacher could be in the horse business. Know why? Cuz how can you train a horse without cussin'? Ever' horse I train will definitely relate to cussin'," he said.

Phillips shifts from the subject of horses to heroes. His idol is Roy Rogers.

"Yeah, I kinda like Roy. Course, I go back further than television. I go back to Roy Rogers in the movies.

"As coincidence would have it, his birthday is the fourth of November and mine is the fifth of November, so I keep up with my age by keeping up with his," he said.

He goes on to tell how he once met Rogers at the Rogers museum in Victorville, Calif., "as luck would have it, I'm partial to Palominos cuz that's what Roy rode. I'm just like a kid."

There's a reason he's adopted Rogers as his own, aside from the rough and tough cowboy image, Palomino horses named Trigger, and all.

"COURSE, I'M always quoting from Roy Rogers, but he said once kids today don't have any heroes. I had heroes — Roy Rogers, Gene Autry.

"Things back then were cut and dry, there was a clean line between right and wrong. It was easy for a kid to identify with it. Back in my day, the good guy wore a white hat, rode a flashy-colored horse. The good guy always won.

"Nowadays, the bad guy might come out on top. Kids have bad guys as heroes. Who do they relate to?"

He stopped. "Course," he said, picking up where he left off, "I'm old-fashioned as hell. Excuse me. That's just the country showing up in me."

Phillips says he's nothing but a cowboy, but says there's few of them. He's done a few rodeos, he says, but that's not what a cowboy is, he explains.

"There's several different kinds of cowboys," he said. "There's drugstore cowboys, dancin' cowboys, rodeo and workin' cowboys. I've always been the workin' cowboy type.

"THE TRUE meaning of a cowboy," he said, "is a man who works a cow." That means he and his "cuttin'" horse can get a cow to do anything they want. "A good cuttin' horse, trained, will on his own, without no instructions, hold a cow in a certain place. That horse can stand in front of a cow and just do a war dance." That's a cowboy, he says.

As contrast, he described a "drugstore" cowboy: "He'll wear the fancy western clothes, ride in parades...but he ain't never worked a cow in his life."

Folks who claim to know Phillips' work but don't, are a source of amusement and annoyance.

"There was a guy once who came here. A city type. I could tell that right off, pretty rapid," he recalled. "I asked him what kind of horse he had, and he said a cuttin' horse. I said, 'Oh yeah?' I knew he didn't know much. And he said, yeah, and I asked him, said, 'well, how does he cut?' and the man said, 'Oh he cuts over here, cuts over there.' "I tried to be diplomatic," said Phillips, "but I laughed. Ever once in a while I let my true feelings show."

Privilege of a true cowboy who admits he's done just about everything in life a soul could ever want to.

"I'm just a kid who never grew up," he said.

Woman inspires 10-kilometer race

HEMET, Calif. (AP) — Bess James took up running six years ago when she was 67, replacing her injured son in a 10-kilometer race. She finished in one hour, 32 minutes — dead last out of 700 entrants.

Now, five age-class world records later, the 73-year-old woman has become something of an inspiration in the San Jacinto Valley.

"She is really something," Hemet City Councilman Donald Baskett said at a recent news conference announcing the Bess James Ramona-land 10K Run. "Considering her age and what she has accomplished, we thought we should honor this great lady."

The 10-kilometer (6.2-mile) race will take place June 11

Oklahoma gets tough with those willing to steal cable-TV services

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A bill imposing a stiff penalty on people who steal cable television services has been signed into law by Gov. George Nigh.

Under the new law, anyone obtaining cable TV service without paying the operator could be jailed for up to six months and fined up to $1,000.

The old penalty was up to six months in jail and a $100 fine.

The new law also makes it illegal to help or teach anyone how to obtain cable TV service without payment.

Arabs trade camels for truck, automobile

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Rarely these days do you see an Arab riding a camel in Saudi Arabia. Bedouin tribesmen now prefer to ride Japanese pickup trucks, and well-heeled urban Saudis lean toward more opulent vehicles.

"The pickup truck is the No. 1 vehicle in the outlying districts," said one Jidda-based dealer, explaining that the Bedouins use the trucks for a variety of practical chores — such as transporting camels.

City Saudis have different requirements. "They have large families and they have money," said another dealer, "so they want a big American car or a German prestige car."

Japanese automakers exported 144,897 light pickups to the kingdom last year. Mercedes, the German luxury carmaker, doubled its local share of the 35,000-car "high-line" market — passenger cars priced at $10,000 and up.

American makes, principally General Motors, lost ground overall in 1982 but still controlled 50 percent of the high-line market.

While the camel remains the enduring symbol of this desert kingdom, along with the oil derrick, the reality of travel today is strikingly four-wheeled rather than four-legged.

In fact, the sheer volume of vehicles here has become something of a problem.

The number of registered motor vehicles in the kingdom has risen from some 120,000 in 1970 to nearly 2.5 million in 1981-82, including roughly a million private cars and a like number of various types of trucks, according to published figures.

There are also more than 108,000 taxi cabs, 24,000 buses and 4,800 motocycles.

With the kingdom's population variously estimated at 5 million to 7 million Saudi nationals and 2 million to 3 million people of other nationalities, current figures would indicate there is one vehicle on the road for every three to four people, including women and children who are prohibited from driving. Many foreign workers are not licensed to drive.

The Saudi minister of transport said in a recent newspaper interview that Saudi Arabia has become a country of two-car families. Thirteen years ago only one in 10 Saudi families owned a car, he said.

Cars also last longer today than they used to. Local dealers report that cars are now operated for five or more years, whereas four years ago cars often collapsed after less than three years' use. Dealers cite better roads as the main reason for increased vehicle longevity.

The crush of vehicles, coupled with what the Middle East Economic Digest magazine termed "eccentric driving practices," has created a traffic situation that poses one of the major health hazards in the kingdom. Head-on collisions are a frequently reported cause of death.

Cassidy rides in memory

BETHLEHEM, Pa. (AP) — Harry Rinker rediscovered his boyhood in a cigar box.

The box contained Hopalong Cassidy bubble gum cards, which he found while rummaging through storage about a decade ago.

The cards are scenes from some of the many movies of the famed fictional cowboy — movies with titles guaranteed to fire a child's imagination.

Who could resist thrilling to "Dangerous Venture," "Devil's Playground," "Fool's Gold" and "The Dead Don't Dream"?

Certainly not the youngsters who grew up with "Hoppy" as he galloped across movies and radio into the brave new world of television in the late '40s and early '50s.

"He was my childhood hero," said Rinker, who remembers Hoppy with enthusiastic affection.

Rinker recalled gathering with his pals, pint-sized Hoppies from their hats down to their six-shooters. They dressed in black, like their idol, who belied the notion that good guys always wore white.

"My memories of Hopalong Cassidy are tremendously pleasant," said Rinker, who lives with his wife in western Lehigh County. His 200 bubble gum cards ("I personally chewed all the gum") became the nucleus of what evolved into a treasury of "Hoppy" memorabilia.

Fetuses sets clocks biologically

BOSTON (AP) — Biological clocks in the brains of fetuses are set and running long before birth, according to a report today by scientists who examined cells comprising the time-sensitive organs.

Rats in their mothers' wombs know what time it is, and other unborn mammals, including humans, probably have the same ability, researchers at Massachusetts General Hospital said in a report in today's edition of the journal Science.

Just why a fetus needs to know whether it's night or day is not clear, but the scientists speculate the clock gets babies synchronized with the outside world so they will be better prepared for their first days of life.

Drs. Steven M. Reppert and William J. Schwartz made their discovery by examining the bits of tissue in the fetuses' brains that serve as their built-in timepieces. In rats, and probably in humans, as well, the clock is a section of the hypothalamus called the suprachiasmatic nucleus.

Biological clocks make flowers bloom in the spring and lead birds to fly south in the fall. In mammals, they orchestrate an array of duties, including the secretion of hormones and the periods of sleeping and waking.

Marijuana use declining

WASHINGTON (AP) — A White House official says marijuana use is dropping in the United States as users become more aware of health risks and government agencies reduce the supply.

Carlton E. Turner, special assistant to the president for drug abuse policy, said Thursday that 40 states and the federal government now have programs to destroy U.S.-grown cannabis plants that produce marijuana.

Plants are being destroyed by mechanical means and by use of herbicides like paraquat. Paraquat spraying has been challenged in court as dangerous, but the lawsuits have been unsuccessful.

"The U.S. Department of Agriculture has been developing and pioneering ways to use paraquat effectively and efficiently," Turner told a House Government Operations subcommittee.

"Please be assured that we will use paraquat to destroy cannabis cultivation on federal lands whenever practical, feasible and environmentally sound."

Turner estimated that 2.4 million Americans stopped regular use of marijuana from 1979 to 1982.

The estimate includes 1.4 million Americans who stopped using the drug on a daily basis, he said.

Turner's office said the figures came from the National Institute on Drug Abuse.

In a survey conducted last year, the institute estimated 20 million Americans used marijuana in the previous month.

However, the figure was based on a sampling of households that did not count homeless people, members of the military and college students living on campus.

Air Force studying ways to make missiles safer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ways to strengthen existing Minuteman missile launch silos are being studied by the Air Force, which continues to push research on "superhardening" such bases earmarked for the huge new MX missile.

Lt. Gen. Lawrence A. Skantze, Air Force deputy chief of staff for research and development, told a briefing Thursday that the Air Force is looking at what "can be done to upgrade right now" Minuteman silos.

Meanwhile, Skantze said, the Air Force will be putting $200 million a year for the next three years into intensive research on "superhardening," which defense scientists hope will enable the MX silos to withstand the heavy shock from exploding Soviet nuclear warheads in the event of an attack.

In another development, two former top intelligence officials are disupting arguments by supporters of the MX that the new nuclear weapon will force the Soviet Union to make concessions in arms control talks.

Stansfield Turner, Central Intelligence Agency director during the Carter administration, and retired Adm. Noel Gaylor, former director of the National Security Agency, appeared Thursday before the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Skantze made no claim that any of the short-term improvements now being studied will significantly improve the survivability of the present Minuteman force of about 1,000 missiles.

"We believe that by the end of the decade survivability will be very low," said Skantze, who appeared at a briefing to discuss a paper provided by the Air Force to the Senate Armed Services Committee to assess the prospects for present Minuteman silos surviving under Soviet attack through 1989.

The Air Force research chief said the paper provided what he called a "band of uncertainties" ranging from a high estimate that 35 percent of the present U.S. land-based missile force would survive a Soviet attack this year down to a projection for survival of as low as 1 percent in 1989.

Skantze stressed that the 1 percent projection was a "worst case" assessment assuming a perfectly executed Soviet attack with 99 percent of the Soviet missiles getting off the ground and reaching their targets.

The Reagan administration, after meeting a stone wall in Congress, abandoned its plan to deploy the MX missiles in closely spaced new bases.

Instead, the administration proposed in effect an interim solution of putting the 100 MX missiles, with their 10 warheads each, in existing Minuteman silos near Francis Warren Air Force Base, Wyo., while undertaking development of a small new single-warhead missile for the 1990s.

Skantze mentioned the possibility of installing a more sophisticated system for isolating the Minuteman missiles inside the silos from shock damage resulting from the explosion of attacking warheads.

He acknowledged that any improvements in survivability as a result would probably be minimal, but he indicated he feels they are worthwhile.

Gaylor, meanwhile, told Congress on Thursday that, "We have an unsupported theory that an MX program will force the Soviets to bargain 'seriously.' No evidence credibly supports this idea."

"Every official Soviet statement, and the overwhelming consensus of our experts on the USSR, suggest the exact opposite," Gaylor said. "The Soviets will build correspondingly, and many billions of dollars and billions of rubles later we will each be even more vulnerable than we are now."

Turner said the chief result of building the MX would be "to make the Soviets nervous because they would think we want to develop a first strike posture."

President Reagan and other MX backers have said repeatedly that the new missile is needed to force Soviet concessions in talks aimed at reducing long-range nuclear weapons.

Commission finds police failed to help suspect

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A black man who died after being forcibly subdued during a 1981 arrest got "a measure of justice" from a finding that five white policemen failed to give him first aid, his mother says.

The officers — Thomas Eliopul, Robert Enters, Kenneth Kmichik, George Kalt and James Dekker — were named in a complaint stemming from the arrest of Ernest Lacy, 22, on the night of July 9, 1981.

The death sparked months of marches by protesters who chanted "police brutality" and accused authorities of failing to adequately investigate Lacy's death and discipline officers involved.

The Milwaukee Fire and Police Commission, after hearings that began March 17, ruled Thursday that the officers had violated department rules by failing to render first aid. It also found that Eliopul had used excessive force during the arrest. Kalt and Dekker had also been accused of using excessive force, but were cleared by the commission.

The commission is to consider June 8 what action to take against the officers. Possible penalties are dismissal, suspension without pay for up to 60 days and demotion in rank.

"We have not concluded that any of the officers are unfit for service," William I. Gore, chairman of the commission, said after Thursday's announcement. "The jury is still out on that."

Lacy's mother, Myrtle, who filed the complaint that resulted in the commission's action, said she was pleased by the result.

"We felt all along that the evidence was there," Mrs. Lacy said. "It has been a painful experience for my family. There can never be complete justice for Ernie because he is dead."

She said she hopes the finding will prevent similar incidents.

"God didn't put Ernie here to die in vain," she said. "I knew that eventually he would get a measure of justice."

Lacy had been stopped on a city street for questioning about a rape it was later determined he did not commit.

Kidnappers surrender

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Two men sought in the abduction of a western Maryland drug store clerk were jailed here today after surrendering to state police, 36 hours following the woman's safe release.

Olon Hill, Jr., 36, and James Edward Simpson, 39, turned themselves in Thursday evening at a convenience store in a rural area near Gettysburg, said Col. Edwin Karr of the Pennsylvania State Police.

The suspects faced a bail hearing today before a U.S. magistrate, said Andrew Manning, an FBI spokesman in Baltimore.

Decision overturned in libel case

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge has overturned a jury's verdict that a former son-in-law of Mobil Oil Corp. president William P. Tavoulareas slandered the business executive in comments he made to The Washington Post.

U.S. District Judge Oliver Gasch on Thursday threw out the jury's $5,000 damage award against Dr. Philip Piro, an eye surgeon who was once married to Tavoulareas' daughter, Patrice.

The case arose from comments Piro made in 1979 to Washington Post reporter Patrick Tyler and one-time special correspondent Sandy Golden during an interview.

Tyler later wrote a Nov. 30, 1979, article saying the elder Tavoulareas set up his son in 1974 as a partner in a London shipping firm.

The jury that ruled against Piro also decided that the Post libeled the Mobil president and awarded him $2.05 million in damages. But Gasch reversed that ruling earlier this month, saying there was no evidence to support the jury's verdict.

Gadgets galore shown at 'invention convention'

By BOB DVORCHAK
Associated Press Writer

MONROEVILLE, Pa. — Brian Gardner may have invented a better mousetrap, but he's not waiting for the world to beat a path to his door. He's trying to market it at an international invention convention.

Gardner, 42, showed off his Killer Katz mice exterminator Friday at a show called Technology-INPEX, for Invention and New Products Expo.

"I'm looking for someone to market the product for me in this country and the world," said Gardner, a sheet metal products designer in Brisbane who was named Australia's inventor of the year in 1980.

Gardner's device, which has a U.S. patent, is a one-piece design made of cardboard and powered by a rubber band. The jaws snap down to kill vermin, and the device can be thrown away.

It is billed as "the most humane, hygienic mousetrap ever invented" with a suggested retail price of 50 cents.

Gardner was one of 310 exhibitors at the week-long show, set up as a one-stop center so inventors can display new products to investors, manufacturers, distributors or marketing agents.

Among the contraptions shown were a metal device for uniformly squeezing toothpaste out of a tube, a pillow case worn over the top of one's head to keep warm at night, a three-way zipper, a TV set to entertain patients in a dentist's chair, a weed puller and a self-defense glove for women that can spray tear gas into an attacker's face or administer an electric jolt through sharp prods.

Through Thursday night, an estimated 6,000 people, most of them business people, had viewed the exhibits.

"The inventors couldn't have made this many contacts in five or six years," said show director Gary Brown.

"Inventors are people possessed. They become very attached to their product," he added. "There is no such thing as an ugly baby to a mother. And with these people, there's no such thing as a bad invention. Some invent as a hobby. Others totally believe they have an answer to a problem."

A.J. Powell of Pittsburgh was busy showing off his self-contained remote-controlled home entertainment unit that sells for $7,900. The Hedon Modern Play Back has a reclining chair plus options such as a stereo, tape deck, four-inch color TV or magazine rack. Sound activates flashing lights.

Stewart given hero's welcome

INDIANA, Pa. (AP) — Film legend James Stewart got a hero's welcome and a shower of gifts Friday when he returned on his 75th birthday to the small town where he was born.

"This is turning out to be an extraordinary birthday, and I've had my share of them," said Stewart during a ceremony on the steps of the town's red-brick courthouse.

In what could have been a scene out of one of his many films, Stewart was given plaques, a key to the city, birthday cards, a scrapbook and a large blue denim banner that read, "Jimmy Stewart for President."

"Me for president?" asked Stewart, who kissed Indiana's Jillian Butler, who was celebrating her first birthday. "I just can't talk fast enough to be a politician."

This delighted the crowd of about 400 who watched the ceremony from grandstand seats, courthouse windows and rooftop perches.

Stewart, standing alone, looked across the street to where his father's hardware store once stood and where many of his boyhood memories focus.

"The hardware store was so much a part of my life," he said. "There isn't a day that goes by that I don't think of something that happened there."

Stewart praised the small-town values he said he has carried with him throughout his life, and he reminisced about his father, Alexander, who taught him the importance of family and church.

Heart surgery set for 11-year-old girl

HOUSTON (AP) — Doctors hope surgery set for Tuesday to correct a congenital heart defect in Sharon Stohler, 11, of Anderson, Ind., will take the place of a heart transplant, her parents say.

"We were told it was possible, but not entirely likely, that this treatment may take the place of a heart transplant. The doctors are at least saying that the surgery could delay a heart transplant for a couple of years," Sharon's father, David Stohler, said Thursday.

Denton Cooley, a world renowned heart surgeon, will perform the operation.

Doctors at Riley Hospital for Children in Indianapolis said earlier this year that Sharon would not live through the end of the year without a heart transplant.

When she underwent tests in March for the first time at Texas Children's Hospital in Houston, doctors said her problem was inflammation of the heart caused by a degenerative heart disease.

White signs transplant aid bill

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White signed into law Friday a bill that would provide $41,000 in state money to help pay for a liver transplant for an 8-month-old Abilene baby.

Speaker Gib Lewis said his bill, which would establish a liver transplant pilot program through the State Department of Human Resources, would make it possible for "little Ashley Bailey to be the beneficiary of this program."

Lewis said he had talked to the baby's family Thursday night and "was advised that the child is still in a stable condition at the University of Minnesota Childrens' Hospital."

"I hope and pray that our efforts, plus those of private donors, will provide the assistance needed to save the life of this little girl," Lewis said in a statement.

White asked on May 12 that Texans contribute to the fund for the Abilene infant.

Here's one of those amazing pictures taken by our astronauts on the moon.

That's our Earth. Way out there! Seeing the world in such perspective, how small our problems seem—but how great our need for God's caring and concern.

This is the exciting message of religion: That the God who created a vast universe is concerned for every soul. That we can know Him in the outreach of our faith and serve Him in the bond of love. On this planet whirling through space we draw closer to Him and to one another as we gather each week in God's House.

Crestview sets ground breaking

Crestview Baptist Church, 3300 Thomas Ave., is having a ground breaking service Sunday at 7 p.m. for its Family Life Center.

The 35,000-square-foot building will include educational and recreational facilities. When completed, the center will provide space for seven adult Sunday School departments which will accommodate nearly 600 adults.

Recreational facilities will include an all purpose gymnasium, jogging track, weight room, game room and locker rooms and dressing areas. Space for arts and crafts, fellowships and banquets will also be provided.

RELIGION

Cost of the center, being constructed by Speed Fab-Crete International of Fort Worth, is estimated at $1.25 million. Financing is being handled by Briercroft Savings. Representatives from both firms will be at the ground breaking ceremonies.

Crestview's minister, the Rev. Kenneth L. Hall, invites the public to attend.

Rev. Frank Johnson

Pastor elected to head school in California

The Rev. Frank Johnson, pastor of Kelview Heights Baptist Church, recently was elected to the presidency of the Pacific Coast Baptist Bible College in San Dimas, Calif.

Located in the heart of the Los Angeles area on 150 acres, the school is one of the colleges organized by the Baptist Bible Fellowship to train and equip preachers and Christian workers.

Johnson graduated from Arlington Baptist seminary and earned his masters from Baptist Christian University where he was honored this May with a doctorate of letters degree.

He will be honored by the congregation of Kelview Sunday at 9 and 10:30 a.m. for his 22 years as minister here. A man who has seen Kelview grow from a few people in 1961 to its present membership of more than 4,000, Johnson said, "My first love and responsibility is to preach the Gospel and pastor this church. Being president of the college will just be an extension of this ministry."

Mysterious force celebrated Sunday

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Everything that is came from something that was before, and in the biblical perspective, all that exists originated from a unique, vitalizing source — the "Spirit" of God.

That mysterious, generating force is celebrated by Christians this Sunday in marking the birthday of the church.

The occasion is called Pentecost, meaning the 50th day, seven weeks after Easter, when the Spirit, like a fiery wind, shook the bewildered apostles out of their inertia and catapulted them into proclaiming openly a new thing.

The "new covenant," it was called, a "new testament" of a new, close connection between God and humanity.

"What does this mean?" wondered the mixed multitude of many races, nations and tongues gathered in Jerusalem, yet all hearing in their own languages the new message of the apostles.

"They are filled with new wine," commented baffled onlookers.

Whatever the strange stimulant, it galvanized the first upsurge of Christianity, with thousands of believers added that day to a faith that within 20 years filtered throughout the Roman Empire.

"I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh," the apostle Peter quoted the Jewish prophet Joel to the throng, "...and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams."

The day is dedicated to that intangible entity, the Spirit, which Christians consider the third "person" or aspect of one universal God, revealed in three ways as a trinity — Father, Son and Holy Spirit.

That third element of divine being, the "Spirit" or breath of God, is called the "giver of life."

Sometimes it is portrayed in Scripture as "wisdom," in the feminine gender, suggesting a motherly side of an encompassing, creative God, active in birth from the start — of the world itself.

"The earth was without form and void and darkness was upon the face of the deep," reads the Genesis account, "and the Spirit of God was moving over the face of the water."

That "Pneuma" or "Spirit," sometimes translated as breath or wind, also is described as present in the start of humanity, made "male and female" in God's image, animated by his "breath of life."

"I am come that you may have life," Jesus told his disciples. "It is the Spirit that gives life; the flesh is of no avail; the words that I have spoken to you are Spirit and life."

The six presidents of the World Council of Churches, in a 1983 Pentecost message, say that "today, the forces of death seem overwhelming," threatening the earth with nuclear annihilation.

"So many people feel empty because they have so much and are so little," the message adds. "So many have lost a sense of meaning in life, and spread meaninglessness around them by their acts and words of violence and death.

"It is in such a world that the church is called to proclaim in word and deed that God in Christ has filled our emptiness with life in the Spirit."

Church council rethinking goals

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) Under pressure to be more responsive to member denominations, the National Council of Churches is planning to rethink its goals.

A report by a panel studying the matter was made to a spring meeting of the 260-member governing board, representing 32 Protestant and Eastern Orthodox denominations with about 40 million members.

The Rev. Robert Neff of Elgin, Ill., head of a special commission on the council's future, said hundreds of Christians are being polled to develop a clearer vision of the council's role. Many, he said, are concerned with issues of "governance, accountability and authority."

He said informal contacts also have been made with Roman Catholics and some evangelicals not belonging to the council about their future ecumenical cooperation.

The council voiced "deepest gratitude to God" for the recently adopted pastoral letter of Roman Catholic bishops, condemning nuclear war and the arms race.

Women upset at nun's treatment

CHICAGO (AP) — Two national organizations of Roman Catholic women say they are "shocked and angered" at the "unjust treatment" of Agnes Mary Mansour who, under a Vatican ultimatum, had to resign as a nun in order to remain head of Michigan's social service agency.

The National Assembly of Women Religious and the National Coalition of American Nuns called for special prayers and protests this Sunday, saying the Vatican violated due process and "ignored the principle of freedom of conscience" in dealing with the case.

Group: Women's status worse

VALLEY FORGE, Pa. (AP) — The head of a task force named to "eliminate institutional sexism and empower women" in the American Baptist Churches says women's status has in some ways grown worse, rather than better.

The Rev. Barbara A. Freiert reports the total number of women on the denomination's executive staff and in top-level positions has declined since 1978 when the task force was appointed.

The Newspaper BIBLE

IT'S NOT WHAT YOU HEAR BUT HOW YOU LISTEN!

Jesus' apostles asked Him what the story (of the sower) meant.

He replied, "God has granted you to know the meaning of these parables, for they tell a great deal about the Kingdom of God. But these crowds hear the words and do not understand, just as the ancient prophets predicted.

"This is its meaning: the seed is God's message to men. The hard path where some seed fell represents the hard hearts of those who hear the words of God, but then the devil comes and steals the words away and prevents people from believing and being saved.

"The stony ground represents those who enjoy listening to sermons, but somehow the message never really gets through to them and doesn't take root and grow. They know the message is true, and sort of believe for awhile; but when the hot winds of persecution blow, they lose interest.

"The seed among the thorns represents those who listen and believe God's words but whose faith afterwards is choked out by worry and riches and the responsibilities and pleasures of life. And so they are never able to help anyone else to believe the Good News.

"But the good soil represents honest, goodhearted people. They listen to God's words and cling to them and steadily spread them to others who also soon believe."

(Another time He asked,) "Who ever heard of someone lighting a lamp and then covering it up to keep it from shining? No, lamps are mounted in the open where they can be seen. This illustrates the fact that someday everything shall be brought to light and made plain to all.

"So be careful how you listen; for whoever has, to him shall be given more; and whoever does not have, even what he thinks he has shall be taken away from him."
Luke 8:9-18

Running the agency is "one of the most important roles" in the U.S. church, says Bishop Daniel Reilly of Norwich, Conn., head of a board of 14 bishops who chose the new director.

Italian Premier Amintore Fanfani leaves the podium as Pope John Paul II acknowledges a cheering crowd on Friday in Milan.

After 565 years, Milan again gets papal visit

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Tens of thousands of faithful, many of them waiting three hours in a light rain, welcomed Pope John Paul II on Friday at the start of the first papal visit in 565 years to this financial and industrial center.

The pontiff, who had flown from Rome, toured the city in a white Alfa Romeo equipped with a cabin of bulletproof plexiglass and blessed the faithful as they stood along the route behind iron barriers erected by police.

About 10,000 police officers and soldiers guarded John Paul, who has survived two assassination attempts.Security forces rerouted private vehicles and public transportation, triggering big traffic jams.

The pontiff was greeted in the Piazza Cinque Giornate by Premier Amintore Fanfani and Milan's Socialist Mayor Carlo Tognoli. Fanfani dropped to his knees and kissed the pope's ring in a traditional gesture of religious fealty.

John Paul addressed the throng in a downtown square adorned with flowers and the Vatican colors of yellow and white.

Groups of youths carried large signs reading "Long Live the Pope" and "Welcome, you carry the word of the Lord," while other people peered onto the square from the windows of a five-story department store.

In an unscheduled addition to his speech, the pope thanked the Milanese for their warm welcome and concluded, "God be praised. I said this in Rome (when he appeared on a Vatican balcony as newly elected pope) and I wanted to say it in Milan as well."

The rain stopped as the pope made an appearance in the vast square in front of the Duomo, the local cathedral, and blessed more than 20,000 people in the square before entering the cathedral. Loudspeakers carried his words to others standing inside the glass-roofed Galleria alongside the square and in adjacent streets.

Earlier, the pope spoke to nearly 12,000 nuns at the city sports palace.

Unlike most of his predecessors, John Paul has traveled extensively, including 36 trips around Italy. His three days in Milan mark the first time a pontiff has visited northern Italy's largest city since Pope Martin V in 1418.

John Paul's itinerary includes a visit to the family home of Pope Pius XI at nearby Desio, a meeting with factory workers, and a Mass in the cathedral of Monza. Saturday night, he will become the first pontiff to attend a concert at the renowed La Scala opera house.

Judge says documents indicate Hubbard alive

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — Documents signed by Church of Scientology founder L. Ron Hubbard are convincing evidence that the controversial author is alive despite claims he is dead or incompetent, a judge said Friday.

Superior Court Judge David Hennigan said he was "convinced" Hubbard is alive after reading a seven-page declaration, signed by Hubbard, which says he keeps his whereabouts a secret because his life has been threatened.

The document, signed and fingerprinted by Hubbard and authenticated by handwriting and fingerprint experts, was filed with the court on Thursday.

"I am not a missing person," Hubbard, 72, wrote in the declaration. "I am in seclusion of my own choosing. My privacy is important to me, and I do not wish it or my affairs invaded...."

Hennigan is considering a civil lawsuit filed by Hubbard's estranged son, Ronald DeWolf, who contends his father is either dead or mentally incompetent. DeWolf has asked to be appointed a trustee for his father's financial affairs.

"It (the case) would have been resolved in your favor if it had not been for the declaration," Hennigan told DeWolf's lawyer, Wilkie Cheong. Hennigan gave Cheong three weeks to try to disprove the authenticity of the document. The judge plans a final ruling in the case at that time.

Cheong said he had not had time to fully review Hubbard's declaration, but thought it was "kind of funny that it appeared at the last moment under these circumstances."

He said there are "all sorts of reasons" why the document might be inadmissable as evidence in the suit. "Just for example, that declaration could have been typed up by someone else who then had Hubbard sign it, not knowing what he was doing... even assuming the signiture is authentic."

Mormon church leader gaining strength, son says

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Spencer W. Kimball, ailing president of the Mormon Church, appears to be getting slightly stronger but still leaves his apartment only rarely, his son says.

Kimball, 88, has been convalescing at home and didn't attend a meeting for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints' lay priesthood here last Sunday.

Kimball, considered a prophet of God by the church's 5.2 million members, missed the church's general conference in early April, and his sister-in-law said then he was at times disoriented and too weak to feed himself.

"I think he's a little bit stronger than he was at conference time," Edward Kimball, the church leader's son and biographer, said Thursday. "That was a low point. That was about as weak as he's been."

Kimball's health problems are "nothing specific," the son said. He said he is able to dress and walk around, although he rarely leaves his apartment in the church-owned Hotel Utah.

Church spokesman Don LeFevre quoted Kimball's personal secretary, D. Arthur Haycock, as saying Kimball continues to meet periodically with his family and with his counselors on church business.

Kimball and his wife Camilla recently visited the Salt Lake City home they occupied before they moved to the hotel after Kimball's release from a lengthy hospital stay in late 1981.

The visit was "one of his very rare outings outside the apartment," LeFevre said. Kimball is unable to accompany his wife to weekly church services.

Gordon B. Hinckley, 72, Kimball's second counselor in the governing First Presidency, told the priesthood audience Sunday that Kimball and his first counselor, 85-year-old Marion G. Romney, were unable to attend because they were struggling with problems of age.

With Kimball and Romney in frail health for months, Hinckley has represented the First Presidency at public functions normally attended by a church president.

Kimball became president in 1973 and for eight years traveled widely. He was known, despite numerous health problems, for his 12-hour work days.

Hi honey!
Just got back from Fairgate and I couldn't be more pleased! They have a townhome that's 'perfect' for us! You're gonna love the location too! It's in Northwest Midland close to lots of shopping, schools and Loop 250. I love the 3 bedroom, 2 bath floorplan. It's more than 1600 square feet! It's a beautiful home and just what we've been looking for. I'll let you handle the financing. Call 697-4151 and ask about Fairgate's "Nothing-Down" plan.
