Textbook Contracts Overthrown

MARRS ALLOWED TO CERTIFY OLD BOOKS FOR FALL

American Book Company's Injunction Request Denied by West

WILL MAKE APPEAL

Marrs to Place Orders for Text Books Under Old Contracts

By The Associated Press.

AUSTIN, August 14.—Text book contracts let by the state commission last December, were held to be invalid and application of the American Book company for permanent injunction against School Superintendent S. M. N. Marrs, restraining him from recognizing other contracts, was denied by Federal Judge Duval West at the conclusion of the hearing today.

Temporary Order Dissolved.

Judge West dissolved the temporary injunction which had been granted, following hearing in San Antonio recently, preventing Superintendent Marrs from certifying other books. This action leaves the state superintendent free to certify the old texts and he said he immediately will order necessary geography and reader texts provided for under former contracts.

Judge West had told attorneys, who appeared at the hearing today, that unless the plaintiff company could show that the text book contracts were finally approved by the book commission and not by the governor, as evidence indicated, he would dismiss the mandamus action. He withheld his final judgment however, until the hearing was concluded but ruled as he had indicated.

Notice Of Appeal Given.

Attorneys of the American Book company gave notice today that an appeal will be taken to the federal circuit court of appeals at New Orleans on the injunction decision of Judge West. It is understood that the appeal will not interfere with action of Superintendent of Education Marrs in ordering books for the fall school terms under old contracts.

Retailers In Wichita Predict Gasoline Cut

Gasoline is due for a cut here, according to retailers, who claim they have been expecting a decrease in price for the last week. Jobbers were non-committal, and reported heavy sales during the day. Several local refinery representatives were emphatic in saying there would be no cut within the next week or ten days.

The following wholesale prices were being quoted Tuesday: Casinghead gasoline at refinery, 8 1-8 to 9 cents; first run gasoline, 8 1-2 to 12 cents. Jobbers' prices for wagon and truck deliveries varied from 14 to 16 cents. Filling stations in all parts of the city were retailing the product at 19 cents.

INJUNCTION GRANTED AGAINST N. Y. KLAN

ELIZABETHTOWN, N. Y., Aug. 14.—Supreme Court Justice Ellis J. Declaring that the statutes clearly intended a certificate of incorporation "should be approved in the form in which it was filed and filed in the form in which it was approved," Justice Staley held that the act of incorporators of the klan and kamelia in altering the certificates of incorporation, after approval and after filing was "not only an illegal and unauthorized act but was "not only an illegal and unauthorized fraud upon the court."

Motorists Reap Heavy Benefits as Record Sales of Gasoline Reported Everywhere

By The Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 14.—American motorists from the Alleghanies to the Rockies today revived the quaint old custom of "rushing the can" as price slashing tactics of competitors in the gasoline industry brought about bargain prices, and retail gasoline dealers reported one of the greatest sales records in their history.

Cut Over 11 States.

The reduced prices in general extended from the Alleghaney mountains to the Rockies with consumers of the middle west and south reaping the benefit, although some sections were still unaffected. Few points along either the Atlantic or Pacific coasts reported any general reductions.

The price slashing, started by the Standard Oil company of Indiana, in South Dakota, after Governor W. H. MacMaster had ordered state depots to sell gasoline at 16 cents, was extended throughout the company's territory in 10 states and part of an eleventh today with a reduction of 6.6 cents. Independents, charging the cut of the Standard is unfair and ruinous, fell in line with reduced prices, although in many instances they were only five-cent cuts.

Reductions Elsewhere.

The Standard Oil company of New Jersey announced a two-cent reduction in West Virginia and the Standard Oil company of Nebraska and the Standard Oil company of Kentucky also reduced their prices. Alabama independents announced they would meet the cuts in that state, while the same announcement came from the Manhattan Oil company in Iowa, and the Continental Oil company, in Colorado, announced a three-cent cut.

New President Denies Vacation To Master Job

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—The requirements of the new presidency at the present juncture are so great that President Coolidge does not expect to leave Washington this summer or in any measure resume the vacation interrupted by the death of President Harding.

The new president, it was said today at the white house, recognizes that there are many details of the office he has taken over with which he is unfamiliar. The quickest and easiest way to become acquainted with these details, Coolidge feels, is by staying in Washington where the necessary information is available.

It was added that Coolidge has no intention of making any speaking trip within the next few months.

Governor of Texas Speaks Before Gathering at Chautauqua

ATTACKS REPUBLICANS

Tells of Booze Traffic Seen in Panama and Cuba

Special to The Record News.

CHAUTAUQUA, N. Y., Aug. 14.—Gov. Pat M. Neff of Texas this afternoon, in paying his political respects to Gov. Al Smith of New York delivered what may be the opening battle between the wet and dry wings of the democratic party for the control of the next democratic convention.

Neff's language was carefully curbed because he evidently had regard for the non-political nature of Chautauqua, but in effect, he said:

That Governor Smith was attempting to lead the Empire state into secession from the union.

Regarded Serious Violation.

That Smith's act in signing the anti-prohibition enforcement bill was the most serious violation of the states' rights since the battle of Fort Sumpter, but that the southern states began at Fort Sumpter a courageous fight while the action in New York is cowardly and hypocritical.

Neff paid his respects to the lack of enforcement of the republican party in control of the national government by declaring that the American soldiers and sailors in uniform are allowed to get drunk in the Panama canal zone in houses of ill repute, and that the freight cars of the American railroads are being used in the transportation of liquors from Havana to Nassau, Bahama, the center of the Atlantic coast booze traffic. Neff recently made a trip to Panama canal and Cuba.

Smith Coming to Texas?

Governor Smith has been invited to make a speech at the Dallas state fair. This may provide Smith an opportunity to reply to Neff's attack in Texas.

Neffs says that he personally witnessed these things on his recent trip to Panama and Cuba.

"In Cuba, less than a month ago, I saw many freight cars, bearing the names of well-known American railroads, sidetracked at one of the big breweries of that island, loaded with intoxicants to be carried to Nassau of the Bahamas, the wettest island of the sea, there to be retailed to illegal whisky vendors, plying their nefarious trade along our coast from Key West to Maine.

Should Confiscate Cars.

"What business has an American railroad, under the supervision of the interstate commerce commission, to make money out of a traffic outlawed on every acre of territory where falls the shadow of the American flag? Every American box car that lands in Cuba for this unlawful purpose should be confiscated by the American government to be carried far away and buried into the middle of the Caribbean sea. If need be, the entire Atlantic fleet should load her guns, unfurl Old Glory in all her strength and power, and see to it that the constitution of this nation is respected and held sacred on every foot of our Atlantic seaboard, from Plymouth Rock to Florida's keys.

"In the republic of Panama, a few days ago, my heart swelled with pride as I sailed through that wonderful canal, wrought by the genius of our people. While there, however, I blushed with shame as I saw American lads, wearing the honored uniform of American sailors and soldiers, in dens and dives of vice decorated with American flags, drunk and drinking to the everlasting dishonor of the government they represent.

Surprised at U. S.

"I remarked to my traveling companions that it was indeed strange that our government can banish disease, remove mountains and blast out channels that make possible the flowing together of two oceans, and yet is not strong enough to protect the clean, white lives of our American boys, while wearing he honored uniforms of sailors and soldiers, from the polluting, corrupting, destroying blight of the whisky traffic.

The address of Governor Nell, in part, follows:

Constant as time, slow as the ages, tragic as death, has been the making of the world's civilization. Through countless centuries of mingled glory and gloom, the children of men marched through rivers of tears and oceans of blood, by fallin gkingdoms and crumbling thrones, seeking the light and learning of a higher, a better civilization. Looking to this lofty height, millions of martyrs fought and

NO DANGER OF WATER FAMINE

So Says City Commissioner Slayton; Present Supply Until Sept. 15

"There is absoutely no danger of a water famine for Wichita Falls this summer."

So said Burton Stayton, commissioner of public utilities, when asked regarding the water situation here following persistent rumors that a shortage was imminent.

Second Pump Coming.

The new power line which will be constructed from Dundee to the diversion dam will be completed by the time the second 10,000,000-gallon pump that has been ordered arrives. A large crew of workmen will begin work tomorrow morning on the five-mile high line and it will be only a matter of a few days until it is completed, as all the post holes have already been dug.

The public utilities commissioner says there is enough water now on hand at Lake Wichita to supply Wichita Falls until September 15 or longer. Before then the actual process of bringing water from Lake Kemp to Wichita Falls is expected to have been finished with a week or 10 days to spare.

Water Coming 30 Miles.

The water will be brought a distance of about 30 miles when the process is finished. The dith will of course have to be seasoned when the water is first turned into it and this may take a week or 10 days unless it rains.

One of the 10,000,000-gallon pumps has already been set and will be put in operation as soon as the water line is completed whether the second pump is on hand then or not, according to Stayton. This one pump could supply the city for months and with two to be installed it is thought by the city officials that Wichita has been amply safeguarded.

Rum Runner Seizure Over Three-Mile Limit Held Legal In Court

Decision Given Down in Case of Vessel Caught Eight Miles From U. S. Shore

By The Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—Seizure of alien rum running vessels that hover outside the three-mile limit was held legal by Federal Judge Woodrough today. The decision was handed down in the case of the British ship Marion Mosher seized while transferring a liquor cargo to the American owned motor boat J. H. B., eight miles off the coast near Fire Island, July 27, 1922.

Caused Special Session.

Bonds of the Detroit Fidelity & Surety Co., given after the seizure of the craft as a guarantee that it would proceed to its supposed destination, St. John, N. B., were declared forfeited, it being contended that although the vessel arrived at the Canadian port, she did not have her cargo, thereby violating her agreement.

The Marion Mosher case brought about a special session of President Harding's cabinet and an exchange of conversation with Great Britain. The American government decided that the Marion Mosher and other foreign vessels received as rum runners should be released providing they proceed immediately to their avowed destinations.

Judge Woodrough today held that seizure of foreign ships engaged in smuggling liquor into this country was justifiable even though they were on the high seas.

DECISION AMONG WEIGHTIEST SINCE PROHIBITION

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—The decision of Federal Judge Woodrough at Brooklyn today that the seizure of foreign vessels hovering near the American coast, although outside the three-mile limit to land rum cargoes is justified, is regarded by officers of both the department of justice and the prohibition bureau as one of the most important handed down by the lower courts in connection with prohibition enforcement.

The craft involved in this case, the Marion Mosher, was one of a number seized off New York last summer under the "hovering act," which was re-enacted last year in the new tariff law and under which the United States assumed a "customs jurisdiction" extending 12 miles from shore

TULSA SOLDIERS SCARCELY SEEN

Martial Law Established By Walton Invisible Force

By The Associated Press.

TULSA, Okla., Aug. 14.—Several thousand Tulsans in the downtown district probably failed to see an olive drab uniform today, and Tulsa retired tonight after its first day of martial law, feeling that military rule as established here by Adjutant General B. H. Markham, was an almost invisible force.

No soldiers were stationed on principal corners of the business district during the day. Occasionally a motor truck bearing a dozen or more national guardsmen drove through the business streets, but they attracted little attention.

Flogging Probe Began.

Hand bills, labeled "proclamation," posted in conspicuous places along the sidewalks, and newsboys hawking "martial law" at noon, were the tangible evidences of the change in Tulsa daily life.

But at military headquarters established in the city hall Martial law was hardly an unseen force. Military authorities this afternoon began their investigation of the flogging of Nathan Hantman, which caused Gov J. C. Walton to place the city under military rule. Before adjournment was taken in the evening more than a dozen witnesses, including members of the Tulsa police department, had been called into a private room for interrogation.

Besides clearing Tulsa streets nightly by 11:30, a proclamation is sued today by Adjutant General Markham establishes a semi-strict local censorship on verbal and written criticism of the city, state or military authorities.

RESCUE CREWS BRING 37 MEN OUT OF SHAFTS

Final Death Total in Wyoming Mine Blast Estimated 100

THRONGS HYSTERICAL

100 Volunteer Workers Believe All Mine Survivors Found

By The Associated Press.

KEMMERER, Wyo., Aug. 14.—The rescue of three more miners entombed in Frontier mine No. 1 of the Kemmerer Coal company in an explosion early this morning, brought the total of survivors to 37. It was estimated late tonight that the final death toll would be approximately 100.

Explosion 170 Feet Down.

The explosion occurred in the vicinity of the 1,700-foot level of the mine. Tonight rescue workers had penetrated to nearly every quarter of the underground workings, and it was indicated they had brought out all the men remaining alive. Smoke blackened members of mine cars, buried in a cave-in on the 1,700-foot level of the workings in entry 15, gave rise to the belief that fire had followed the blast which tore sections of the roof, ripped up tracks on which "trip" cars are operated and dismantled the electric wiring of the mine, plunging the smoke-filled depths into darkness. The cause of the explosion is presumed to have been a blowout shot, according to a statement issued late today by the Kemmerer Coal company.

The company declared in a statement that no fire had followed the explosion. At the same time the company announced that rescue work was continuing and that the final figures on the number of victims in the district would not be known for a few hours.

Mourners Hysterical.

Great throngs of women and children, many of them widowed by the blast, gathered about the mouth of the shaft as the rescue work went on. Many were hysterical when "trip" cars carrying the survivors of the blast came to the surface, the crowd became almost uncontrollable, rushing forward in a mad effort to find their loved ones.

Fully 100 volunteer workers were in the lower depths of the mine tonight searching for the bodies of the dead and seeking for survivors.

Mine rescue car No. 2 of the United States bureau of mines arrived here this afternoon from Rock Springs, Wyo. ,where it was intercepted after leaving here early this morning, and members of the crew immediately entered the mine to assist in rescue work.

The men brought from the mine alive were found in entries No. 27 to 30. Nearly all of them were blackened by smoke and suffering from the effects of the inhalation of fumes, although there apparently had been very little gas in the workings after the blast.

Survivors Suffering.

Pitiful scenes were enacted at the mouth of the mine as relatives of the men who came out of the workings alive rushed into the arms of those awaiting them.

Alex Inama and Pete Tapero were two of the first men to come from the workings. They had been in a section of the mine near the shaft and made their way through the smoke and dust after the explosion, within a few hours. Both, however, were suffering from their experience.

The greatest damage to the interior of the mine was done on the fifteenth entry, where 15 cars had been buried by a cave-in which apparently followed the explosion. Rescue workers, who rushed into the mine as soon as the first indication of the disaster was given, found the debris blocking their way.

They hurriedly called for reinforcements and began the task of clearing the main slope. The work required several hours. Stretcher bearers, equipped with oxygen helmets and pulmotors, then made their way through the dismantled section and further into the interior.

Rescuers Discover Refuge.

On the entries between 27 and 30, the refuge of those brought out alive were found. Many had taken refuge in the rooms of the main slope, and were adopting such first aid measures as they knew to save themselves in event of poisonous gases sweeping through the mine.

One miner who had gone through three such explosions is credited with saving the lives of six comrades by instructing them in the method of averting inhalation of gas, and directing them to a safe portion of the mine.

The first intimation workers on the outside had that there had been a disaster, was given shortly after 8 o'clock when long streams of black smoke began to issue from the ventilating fans, used to keep fresh air in circulation.

An effort was immediately made to sound the electric danger alarm system with which the mine is equipped, but the explosion had torn down the wires.

Hurried calls were sent immediately to Kemmerer and volunteer workers rushed to the mine from other properties of the company.

Within a few minutes the first rescue workers went into the mine. It was filled with smoke. The first evidence they obtained of the extent of the disaster was on the fifteenth entry where they found the body of a pumpman. A short time later they encountered the wrecked "trip" cars.

Spuds Take Close One From Gassers, 4 to 2

WIGHT'S WILD HEAVE ALLOWS BARRETT AND BERGER TO GET ACROSS FOR WINNING SCORE

Hal Carlson Chalks Up Fifteenth Victory In Well Pitched Game; Tanner and Berger Star Again; Brillheart Is Unlucky; "Dub" Davis Catches for Gassers.

By BILLIE SMITH

Johnnie Wight's wild heave to the plate to head off a runner on Carlson's grounder let in two runs, enough to break the tie and give the Spudders the second game of the series with the Gassers yesterday by the score of 4 to 2.

Gassers errors and misplays coupled with hits by Tanner and Berger were the factors in giving the Spudders the game. Lefty Brillheart, acting manager, Bobby Stow's choice to stop the Spudders, twirled good enough to win, but unfortunately the breaks were against him. His support faltered just when it should have proved the strongest.

Hal Carlson, by winning yesterday's game, ran up his string of victories to 15, just two under the mark set by Rip Wheeler.

Carlson was accorded good support, while in the pinches he was unhittable. Once or twice the Gassers got men on base but Hal would so often come out unharmed. In the seventh, the Gassers filled the bases—Carlson purposely walked Simmons, filling the bases to get to Shirling. The Alabama collegian was an easy out. In order to convince the Gassers beyond a least bit of doubt, Carlson wound up the game by striking out Wight and Riley, the two heavy hitters of the visitors.

Buddy Continues.

Buddy Tanner continued the fast pace set yesterday. His fielding and hitting was sensational. He snared everything that came his way, and many of them were hard to handle. At the bat, he rapped out a double and a pair of singles in four times at bat.

Joe Berger also played an important role in the play entitled, "taking the gas out of the Gassers." Joe collected a double, two singles and scored a couple of runs, while his fielding was faultless. It was Berger's bunt in the eighth that upset the Gasser infield and paved the way for the winning scores.

Burns Out.

Joe Burns, the only regular catcher now with the Gasser team, developed something the day before that failed to agree with his internal machinery. As a result, the Gassers were found without a catcher, as Chaplin, the other receiver, has been ill for more than a month and is not with the club at the present.

With no maskman on his club, Bobby Stow took on young "Dub" Davis, a Wichita Falls semi-pro player, who helped bring the Twilight league championship to the Texas company. Considering the fact that yesterday's game was Davis' first in professional baseball, it can said that his debut was partly a success.

Davis Does Well.

Davis managed to get by alright, although he appeared a bit nervous on one or two occasions, allowing balls to get away from him. However none of them did any damage. The Spudders stole two bases off him. At the bat, he whanged a timely single scoring one of the Gassers total of two runs. On his other appearances at the plate, he hit the ball to the outfielders.

The Gassers came near scoring in the first inning. After two men had been done away with, Riley reached first on Cotter's error. Simmons third, singled to right, sending Riley to third. Tanner disturbed the miniature rally with a good stop and throw of Shirling's grounder.

After two men had been retired, Buddy Tanner secured the first hit off Brillheart by slamming one of his fast ones against the center field wall for two bases. The ball hit almost in the same place as his double the day before, and made the same kind of rebound. Cotter walked out Locker ended the round by popping out to Skinner.

The Spudders got off to a one run lead in the third. Brillheart fanned Grigsby and Coombs on slow balls, each batter allowing the third strike to be called. Grigsby protested his last strike violently. Tanner then came through with his second hit of the day, a hot one down to third base that almost undressed Wight. He stole second and scored on Cotter's double to left.

Shreveport staged a small rally in the fourth to tie the score. Simmons led off with a single; Shirling walked, and both moved up a notch on Stow's sacrifice. Simmons scored on Eichrodt's fly to right, and Shirling hoofed it in on Davis, scorching single down the left field line. Brillheart also rapped out a hit but Skinner ended further hostilities by popping out to Tanner.

Salm's crew tied the score in their half of the fourth. Berger opened up with a double and went to third on Bischoff's infield out. He scored on Carlson's single past third.

The two teams battled evenly until the seventh when the Gassers threatened to untie the score. After striking out Brillheart and Skinner, Wight singled and Riley doubled to the center field fence. Simmons was purposely walked, but Shirling flied out to Grigsby.

Big Eighth.

The Spudders won the game in the eighth. Barret singled past short, and went to third on Berger's perfect bunt down the third base line. Wight, waiting for the ball to roll foul, let Berger reach first. Berger went to second on Bischoff's fly to Simmons. Carlson knocked a hot one to Wight, who threw wide to home plate, allowing both Barret and Berger to score.

Carlson put on extra power in the ninth. Moore, hitting for Brillheart, was retired by Berger and Cotter.

PANTHERS TRIM STEERS TWICE

Joe Pate Performs Iron Man Stunt Holding Dallas to Two Runs

FORT WORTH, Texas, Aug. 14. Joe Pate performed the iron man stunt here today and let the Steers down with two runs in 16 innings. He is the second Cat pitcher to win two games in a single day. The Cats bunched their hits to win the first game, 4 to 1. In the second Pate's single and triple knocked in all three of the Cat runs. Lingle hit a home run in the seventh inning of the second game for the only Dallas run.

Take It Or Leave It

By BILLIE SMITH.

Spudders and Gassers again today at Athletic park.

* * *

A clean sweep of the Gassers series, and the same thing for the Cats in their tilts with the Steers will put the Spudders back in second place. A clean sweep with the Steers in their three day stay here, beginning Friday will put the Spudders well up in the race, although it now appears there will be little chance of stopping the Atzmen. Nothing short of a miracle will keep the Cats out of the Dixie series now.

* * *

But if we can't be first lets be sure to finish second in the pennant race. After the present home stay the Spudders take the road for one of, the longest road trips of the season. They play 16 games and meet every team in the league except Shreveport. After the road trip the season will be brought to a close at home, the last 14 games being played here.

* * *

Pitcher Earl Kunz, the right hander secured from the Pirates is due to appear at any time He was scheduled to show up yesterday, and may call around at the Spudder office this morning.

* * *

Meanwhile George Stueland is still around town, but will probably leave in a very short time for Chicago.

* * *

"Dub" Davis, the Texas company's catcher and manager, who piloted them to a championship in the Twilight league made his appearance with the Gassers yesterday. He managed to come through in fine shape, although he did exhibit a bit of nervousness on several occasions. Once or twice he let balls get away from him, but they did no damage. At the bat Davis showed up well, getting a single that scored a run and hitting the ball on his other trials. Just what kind of peg he has was not proven definitely, as in his only throw to catch a runner, stealing, the runner beat the throw by a fraction of a second.

* * *

Joe Burns, the only catcher now with the Gassers took ill Monday night and was forced to remain out of the lineup. Burns stated last night that he would probably get back into his uniform again today, but was very doubtful that he would be able to catch. Which all means that Davis will be seen back of the plate for the Gassers today.

* * *

Burns has borne the brunt of the receiving duties for more than a month. Catcher Chaplin the other Gassers catcher has been out of the game with illness, and was left at home when the club took the road. Outfielder Donaldson was supposed to be a catcher, but he too was left at home on account of illness.

* * *

Buddy Tanner continues to star both on the field and at bat. He stopped everything that came his way yesterday, and some of them weren't very easy and at bat his contribution included a double and two singles. He rapped out a double that came near going over the center field fence, the ball hitting at almost the same spot as did his two-baser the day before, and also took the same kind of rebound.

* * *

"Shorty" Adams was "a big boy" yesterday with the Cubs. The former Spudder infielder rapped out two home runs as his part to help in bringing a double victory to the Cubs over the Dodgers. In the first game Adams went to bat five times, getting a single and a homer, and repeated the performance in the last game in four chances.

* * *

"Heine" Meine will probably face the Gassers today, while young Harry O'Neill will probably try to curve ball the Gassers to victory.

Curing Your Golf Troubles

By Jim Barnes

By JIM BARNES.

Dear Mr. Barnes:

How can I go about correcting a fault that I have developed of slicing my short iron club strokes? I am having this trouble constantly on half shots, the ball frequently slicing off at a wide angle. Strangely enough I get very much better results with my long irons. Your help will be appreciated. B. B. M.

Answer:

I expect your trouble is due to playing these strokes rather too loosely. By that I mean you are not keeping your arms well enough under control. As a result of this habit you are likely taking the club back outside the line of flight and then cutting across the ball.

Try standing possibly a little more open, that is with your left foot drawn back slightly from the line of play, then keep your arms well into the body especially the right one. This will help you to bring the club back inside the line of flight, which will mean that you will hit from the inside of the line out rather than from the outside in, which is one of the chief causes for a slice.

In playing these strokes, also be careful not to hurry the backswing. Take the club back deliberately and then on the forward swing hit on through after the ball with the hands following out in the general direction of play until the arms are stretched to their full length. In taking the stance for these strokes see that the ball is close enough in that you can reach it comfortably with the club keeping the weight well back on the heels.

(Jim Barnes will suggest a remedy for your golf faults. Write him care of the sport editor, enclosing stamped envelope, if you want a personal reply.)

All Younger Set Enjoying Last Few Weeks Of Vacation

The sudden rise of temperature since Sunday has made Wichita folks long for those few cool, breezy days last week when the air was fresh and felt like rain. In spite of the heat, however, folks are picnicking and swimming in the gayest of spirits and the younger set are enjoying to the fullest these last few weeks before school starts again.

One of the most interesting of the guests was the attractive niece of Mrs. T. H. Lawson, Miss Ruth Reynolds of Bells Texas, who returned to her home Tuesday after a two weeks' visit.

The guests included Misses Marjorie Bright, Thelma Ernst, Ruth Stovall, Ruth Reynolds, Messrs. Wallace Bright, Don Bright, George Snow, Hugh McDowell, Drummond Harris and Mrs. J. D. Bright.

Today's Poem

THE TATTERED CATECHISM.

This tattered catechism weaves a spell,
Invoking from the long ago a child
Who deeming her fledging soul so sin-defiled,
She practised with a candle-flame at hell,
Burning small fingers that would still rebel,
And flinch from fire. Forsooth not all beguiled
By hymn and sermon, when her mother smiled
That smile was fashioning an infidel

"If I'm in hell," the baby logic ran,
"Mother will hear me cry and come for me,
If God says no—I don't believe he can Say no to mother." Then at that dear knee
She knelt demure, a little Puritan
Whose faith in love had wrecked theology.

The Hammer and Tongs Method of Regaining Love.

If you have lost Love, don't quietly sit down, and accept your fate. Get out your hammer and tongs, and any other instruments that will serve your purpose and together we will get after the allusive young fellow that calls himself, "Lost Passion, Indifference and Neglect."

We will go to the same trouble and use the same method to gain him back that we would to recover a valuable ring that is lost.

We will offer rewards of self-sacrifice, personal taste and pride.

And we will make appreciation the paramount thing in our lives when we have regained—Love.

Now, away; be up and doing—not a minute is to be lost. If we hurry we can overtake him, and like the cave man of old, club him and bring him back to us.

ZONAGALE

In Collaboration With Russell Gore Writes On

ABNER GOES TO A TAILOR.

The savage who first experimented with the decorative effects of a skillfully distributed blend of paint, feathers and lions' skin had no greater joy of discovery than came to Joe Abner last week when his tailor shoved him into the street—a well-dressed man.

Joe is Professor Abner. He teaches something or other in the college on the hill. Whatever it is on which he enlightens his classes, it certainly has nothing to do with clothes. For many years, Joe had showed an alarming absence of thought on sartorial subjects. An intelligent, kindly, unworldly, pleasantly dreamy ragbag.

Then he spruced up!

"I never thought anything about my altered appearance until the hat boy in the lobby patted the scarf I bought to match my new outfit," he told a group at the club "The hat boy always liked me. I was nice to him. And he was nice to me. But the angora wool scarf seemed to have the effect of justifying him in his previous good opinion. He called me 'Boss' as though he always wanted to, but had found until then no ground for it.

"Our president noticed me in a new way when I came in for the first time in the fresh raiment. I could see in his eye that I was a new being to him. You fellows aren't interested in what I teach, but you do know, of course, that everything ed—ational has a modern significance.

"The president, who is younger than I am, and was engaged for his so-called business efficiency, looked me over without seeming to be aware of any change in me, and then thought it worth while to draw me out on the contemporary angles of my departmental work. We ended by remodeling the course to meet some current needs.

"Women noticed me! Yes, you chaps can grin. But when you haven't been noticed for 15 or 20 years even a doddering professor likes that momentary attention which is a nice woman's way of saying that you might interest her. When one is nearly 50 and happily married there is no—let us say, no strictly utilitarian value—in this.

"But after theree estimable and pretty young women, who have bowed negligently to me for years, put a little extra accent in their morning's salutation, I felt more able to introduce the modern note into my course which the president had suggested. In fact, I overheard a light-minded male member of my class remark, in a stage whisper, within the next hour, 'The old boy's putting some pep into his lecture today.'

"And my wife: the effect of my wife is magical. She always liked me But she was rather passive about it. She likes me still, but it's a more acti—e liking. She squeezes my arm when we're out walking; she pats my hand when I hand her something. She giares at our women friends when they show symptoms of holding us too long for a chat.

"It is all rather amusing and instructive," pursues the innocent professor, smiling absent-mindedly at a group trying hard not to smile. "The effect of wearing apparel on the psychology of male and female alike, but—ahem—more particularly on the female, is a subject worthy of the profoundest philosopher. You business men probably have not read Thomas Carlyle's 'Sartor Resartus?' Ah, some of you have? A most interesting study—but I would modernize it—link it with our contemporary reactions—put a little—"

"Put a little pep into it, eh, professor?" slyly suggests one of the youngest and most snappily arrayed members of the group.

"Pep? Yes, Ah, an interesting and a provocative word. I understand a modern novel is written around it. Isn't 'Babbitt' devoted to some more or less superficial discussion of the prominence of pep in our American life? An enthralling word—this pep. The president in our discussion suggested that I put some pep into my lectures. I didn't know what he meant until he mentioned that I seemed to have injected pep into—well my general appearance."

The hall boys bow profoundly as the man we used to call "good old Doc Abner" draws on his admirable gloves and accepts the hireling's ceremonious gift of the admirable scarf.

"Old Doc is going out to give the ladies a treat," thoughtfully remarks our oldest.

"Old?" the youngest retorts. "I'll bet Mrs. Abner isn't calling him old any more! That tailor started something!"

OPENING FIGHT

fell, and full many a proud empire triumphed, and then mouldered to dust. Each generation and country, in turn, paid the price of its respective civilization as it lighted the torch of progress and passed it on to other hands.

"God's plans, like lilies pure and white, unfold," and mankind, in keeping with the divine purpose of the ages, struggled on, through sounding arms and bloody wars in search for a place where man, free and unhampered, could take his final stand to fight, triumphantly, the battles of human right. In the ripeness of time, in conformity with plans that had their genesis in the council chamber of skies, our Pilgram fathers landed on Plymouth Rock, and there gave to the world a new thought. That thought, the germ of a new civilization, was bought by the blood of patriots. That thought finally unfurled to the breezes of this western continent, the flag of a new republic.

After six thousand years of struggle and toil, civilization, finds its highest expression beneath this victorious, triumphant, American flag.

The Law.

The law is the foundation of every government. Without law there can be no liberty. Without liberty there can be no civilization. Where the law ends, the rule of the mob begins. We have no guarantee for life, and no security for property, except through the law. The law is binding on all. No wealth, no business, no honor, should lift one above the long, strong, impartial arm of the law. Whatever the cost, the government must enforce her laws, or, ultimately go on the rocks of anarchy and ruin.

A General Disrespect for the Law.

There can be seen today, in this country, on every hand, a general revolt against governmental authority. Disrespect for the law of the land rides upon the wings of every wind. Lawlessness is organized and commercialized. It is now an established industry.

Disrespect for the law has become so pronounced, and so widely diffused, that it has caused leaders of thought throughout the nation, publicly to take cognizance of it. President Harding, in his continental tour, devoted one of his most important speaking engagments, exclusively, to a discussion of law enforcement. "There can be no issue in this land," he said, "paramount to that of enforcement of the laws." He warned the people against the spirit of lawlessness that permeats, he declared, almost every phase of American life. The secretary of state and the attorney general of the United States, recently, in public addresses, appealed to the people to cooperate, to the end that we might have in this country, proper respect for the enforcement of the law.

The American Bar association, last year, adopted, unanimously, a report which stated that there had been growing in this country, for years, a gradual widening and deepening tide of lawlessness, and that more crimes are committed in the United States than in any other civilized land.

In the last analysis the burden of the blame must rest on the shoulders of the people who representatives make the law, and whose officers are elected to enforce them.

Suggest Cure.

The initial step toward a better observance of our laws consists in arousing the public conscience to a sense of the duty and the responsibility of citizenship. All antiquated laws should be wiped off the statute books; fossilized court procedure should be abolished; tedious technicalities which interfere with the judgement of the courts should be done away with; trial should be had immediately after the offense is committed; punishment for crime should be certain; sickening sentimentalists should cease molly-coddling criminals; red-handed murderers should not be petted as heroes; the escape from punishment of criminals after conviction should be made reasonably impossible; immunity should be given to no professional criminals; potential criminals should be made to know that if they violate the law, punishmnet will be swift and sure; the high-up criminals should be prosecuted and convicted as well as those in humble and obscure walks of life; those should be elected to office who do not themselves violate the laws nor connive with lawlessness; officers who, for any reason, fail or refuse to enforce the laws, should be, by proper legal procedure, speedily removed from office; the men of the country who really believe in law and order should not dodge jury service nor fail anywhere along the line to hold up the hands of those who are making an honest effort to enforce the laws of the country.

Non-Enforcement No Alibi.

No law should be repealed merely because its violators sometimes escape punishment. "Thou shalt not kill," is a law hoary with age. However, from the time Cain killed Abel, murder has been on the increase. It is conservatively estimated that we have in the United States, 10,000 homicides a year. During the nineteen months we were engaged in the world war, we lost 50,280 soldiers. It is almost half as dangerous to live at home, in time of peace, as it is to fight abroad, in time of war.

Mr. Joyce, chairman of the National Surety company is authority for the statement that last year, embezzlers in this country defrauded the people out of $100,000,000. Should we for that reason repeal the law against embezzlement? Embezzlers may think so.

Mr. Trezo, secretary of the National association of Credit Men, reports that during the past 12 months bankruptcy frauds exceede. $400,000,000. The United States Customs office estimates that seaport piracies and frauds in collecting customs last year aggregated $35,000,000. Forgeries for 1922 passed the $100,000,000 mark.

Instead of repealing these laws, they should al lbe strengthened and perfected. He is a spineless citizen a d an unworthy American who gives hope and encouragement to these l breakers and law-defyers by raising, in their behalf, the question as to the power of the government to enforce her constitutional and statutory laws. Whatever he American people will to do, they can do.

The Prohibition Amendment.

The prohibition amendment was adopted by precincts, by counties, by states, and, finally, by the nation. Out of the 2,543 counties in the United States, only 305 were wet in 1916. The people voted for national prohibition, 46 states ratified it, and congress, by a two-thirds vote, put the seal of its approval on it. That constitutional provision written by the people into the constitution of this nation is there to stay. If anyone thinks tion is there to stay. It is not the Eighteenth Amendment that is now on trial. It is the American republic. It is not the Volstead law. It is all law.

In the enforcement of the Eighteenth amendment each state has a duty to perform. For the first time in the history of this country, in providing for the enforcement of that law, concurrent power of the nation and the state was written into the constitution. The prohibition amendment is the law of the nation and of every state in the union. Therefore, each state should assume its responsibility and courageously discharge its duty. No state should now desert the prohibition cause and leave its enforcement exclusively to the federal government. It is the solemn duty of every state to help enforce the constitution of the nation. No state in this union whose public servants even claim to respect the memory of Thomas Jefferson, will compel the national government to usurp the police powers of that state by admitting an unwillingness to enforce the prohibition laws. Surely such a policy of negation tends to destroy the sovereignty of the state. Certainly no state, by refusing to enforce a law should compel the federal government in order to preserve the constitution to expand its functions to perform what the state is empowered and authorized to do. Such refusal would prove the state no longer in accordwith the constitution No state, consistent with its relation to the union and its sister states, can sulk in its tent, like Achilles of old, and leave the battle to its comrades, when the enemies of law and order seek, as against all the states and the general government to ignore and over-ride the fundamental law of the land. The state guilty of such disloyalty dims forever the lustre of its star, placed on the flag by the nation to emblem the sovereignty of that state. The doctrine of the rights of the state to refuse to co-operate and conform to the constitutional laws of the union, was once maintained with a fidelity and zeal as fine and unselfish as ever hallowed a cause. The followers of that doctrine, confident of the legality and justness of their cause, asserted their rights and defended them on the battle field. They resorted to the arbitrament of the battle field, and backed their belief with the boom of cannon and the roar of shot and shell, the result of that war settled the issue involved forever. We have but one constitution, and that constitution is sacred. Let every state whose star adorns the federal flag enforce those laws within her territory which must be enforced to preserve the constitution of the nation. Let no state, no executive, no officer no citizen give encouragement, even by a wet gesture, to the wet enemies of the constitution.

No Rum Running Industry on the Atlantic Coast.

There should be no rum running industry on the Atlantic coast. No agency of any kind, even though sailing beneath a foreign flag, should be permitted openly to flaunt the laws of this nation on American territory.

In Cuba, less than a month ago, I saw many freight cars, bearing the names of well known American railroads, side tracked at one of the big breweries of that island, loaded with intoxicants to be carried to Nassau of the Bahamas, the wettest island of the sea, there to be retailed to illegal whiskey vendors, plying their nefarious trade along our coast from Key West to Maine. What business has an American railroad, under the supervision of the interstate commerce commission, to make money out of a traffic outlawed on every acre of territory where falls the shadows of the American flag? Every American box car that lands in Cuba for this unlawful purpose should be confiscated by the American government to be carried far away and thrown into the middle of the Carribean sea. If need be, the entire Atlantic fleet should load her guns, unfurl old glory in all her strength and power, and see to it that the constitution of this nation is respected and held sacred on every foot of our Atlantic sea board, from Plymouth Rock to Florida's keys.

In the republic of Panama, a few days ago, my heart swelled with pride as I sailed through that wonderful canal, wrought out by the genius of our people. While there, however, I blushed with shame as I saw American lads, wearing the honored uniform of American sailors and soldiers in dens and dives of vice decorated with American flags, drunk and drinking to the everlasting dishonor of the government they represented. I remarked to my traveling companions that it was indeed strange that our government can banish disease, remove mountains, and blast out channels that make possible the flowing together of two oceans, and yet is not strong enough to protect the clean white lives of American boys, while wearing the honored uniforms of sailors nad soldiers, from the polluting corrupting, destroying blight of the whiskey traffic.

Let Red-Blooded Americans Answer.

Are we to say there is not enough power, strength, and authority in this republic to enforce her own constitutional inhibitions? Are we to admit that we are incapable of self-government? Are we to confess that the criminals who thrive on lawlessness and fatten on crime are to usurp the powers of this government? Shall the conquering and triumphant flag, that has never retreated, now fold its stripes and dip its stars to the black, bloody banner of the bootlegers? Are red-blooded Americans ready to admit that they are unwilling to pay the price of civilization? Let the minutemen of America, the worthy descendants of those who "fired the shot heard around the world," make answer. Let the answer come from executive offices and legislative halls. Let the answer come from the bench and bar of the nation. Let it come from the school room, and the busy marts of men. Let the women of America who always stand in opposition to the evils of the home, and who never desert a cause to which they have given allegiance make answer.

Shall We Keep the Faith?

These, my friends, are testing times for our country's flag, your flag and mine. Shall we not keep faith with the fathers who bought this civilization with their blood, and laid broad and deep the foundation stones of this republic? We belong not to ourselves but to generations yet unborn. Shall we not preserve the institutions that stand for American ideals and transmit them—strengthened—to those who come after us? Shall we not forget self as we pay the price of civilization and seek to serve and to save the highest, the noblest, and the best?

In God's great name, let us stand by Old Glory that has always paid with a willing libation the price of civilization. Let us bid her unfurl every star and every stripe in her proud folds and let them sing to an admiring world that this nation takes no backward steps, but stands ready at all times to pay the price for law, for liberty, for learning, and for all the pure and patriotic things that make a people both great and good.

THE NEXT GOVERNOR

Practically an entirely new line-up of political forces in Texas may be expected in the next gubernatorial race. Medicine is already in the making.

Tradition in Texas has it that an out going governor should not attempt to pick his successor. The race becomes a free for all in which the less said by the out going governor, the better. In fact an endorsement by an out going governor as a rule would prove a handicap for any candidate. In this sense a governor's race in Texas is exactly the opposite of a presidential race. An out going president generally turns over the National machine to a chosen candidate who has been friendly to him.

The old questions of prohibition and women's suffrage will be relegated to minor consideration. It is probably true that both men in the second primary, and there is almost certain to be a second primary, will favor prohibition and be quite respectful toward the women vote. The primary issue probably will be klan and anti-klan. The second issue in importance may be a relative "radical" tendencies of the candidates.

The swing is toward radicalism. The candidates attempting to corral the radical sentiment may even attack Neff as a conservative. At this writing it looks as if Rogers, who made a strong bid for the radical vote in campaigning against Neff last year, again will be in the running. It is possible that Senator Darwin of Paris who comes from the same section of the state as Rogers and who has been flirting with the same political following that voted for Rogers, may supplant Rogers. Darwin, of course, would like to be governor. If he can get Rogers out of the way he is almost certain to run.

The two Davidsons, the lieutenant governor from Marshall and the former lieutenant governor from Houston, are both active. They appeal for much the same vote. Both are anti-klan. Each denies that he is a "conservative" but neither will have the support of the tenant farmer and labor combination—the sort of vote that Rogers polled last year.

At the present moment the two Davidsons have not tossed a coin as to which should run. If but one Davidson runs, he probably will be in the second primary. If both Davidsons run one if not both are apt to be eliminated from the second primary.

The attitude of the klan has not as yet been formed. In North Texas there is much talk of Bill Hanger of Fort Worth and Louis Carpenter of Dallas as klan prospects. Also there is a rumor that some young man from Dallas with a war record will be selected—this sort of a chap with a clean open face who has reached some degree of prominence in the American Legion.

One rumor is to the effect that Hanger and Carpenter both will announce and that Hanger will stay in as Carpenter gracefully retires.

One rumor is as good as another. The best bet, however, is that there will be no united action by klan leaders until late in the first primary—that if klan strength is assembled, at least time will be allowed for any one who wants to get into the race—thus allowing the klan to select the man acceptable to it who has apparently made the strongest race.

There has been much argument as to whether the klan is getting stronger or weaker. There is no argument, however, to the proposition that radicalism is growing stronger. Twenty-five cents cotton may check radicalism. If cotton drops below twenty cents and wheat doesn't net the farmer at least a dollar, it is almost a foregone conclusion that a conservative can not be elected governor of Texas.

Of course, the date is young for the enumerating of the candidates. Joe Burkett of Eastland is a geographical strength in West Texas and West Texas is growing more geographically conscious as the years roll by. This part of the state has never had a governor. It wants one.

Thomasson less than two months ago wrote his friends from El Paso that he definitely would be in the race. He appears not to have retained the strength that he had shortly after leaving the speakership of the house. A much stronger man has developed out that way—former senate leader Dudley who is now mayor of El Paso. Dudley apparently has no gubernatorial ambition. Should he, bitten by the bug however, he may be found to be the best campaigner west of the Katy railroad.

MARTIAL LAW

We are not acquainted with Governor Walton, of Oklahoma, and do not pretend to know the workings of his mind. His job is that of being Governor of Oklahoma. It's not ours.

But, in all frankness, we fail to see the necessity for declaring martial law as freely as does this new governor of our neighbor state. Because one of its citizens has been abused, in the mind of the governor, and we are not acquainted with the details of the case, Governor Walton declares martial law, and shoos all of the good citizens, along with the bad, off the streets after a certain hour at night, and otherwise regulates their daily habits.

And this is not the first time Walton has done this. At Okmulgee and at Henrietta the same thing occurred. Nothing so far as the casual observer could see, was gained by it. An investigation followed, to be sure, but the investigation could have been made without the assistance of the militia.

Tulsa is a good town and the great majority of her people are law-abiding. If there was a riot there, and the worthy citizens of the town were in danger of being attacked openly on the public streets or shot down in their homes, there might be need for the militia. There has been no general uprising. Martial law is an emergency weapon and should not be used lightly. If the situation is as dangerous as the Oklahoma gevernor makes it appear, the news has never appeared in the public press.

THE SOUL - SCAR

By HELEN DUFF

Bill was impertinent—told me to mind my own business—tried to put me out of the barn. His actions suggested that he was hiding someone, and I told him I meant to search."

"Yes?"

"Well"—Miss Merilda regarded her audience caustically—"I searched. I went up to the hay loft, and the first thing I knew Bill tripped me into a pile of hay and sat on me—sat on me, mind you—exactly as though I had been a sack of meal."

"What did you do?"

"Do? What could I do? Just laid still while he trussed me up like a fowl and tied me to a post. But when he started to stick his filthy old handkerchief into my mouth. I bit him on the thumb—bit him till he bled.

"It was then the other man spoke up. First time I'd seen him. He offered Bill a clean white silk handkerchief, and after I was fixed so I couldn't speak, he began to urge me to give my word of honor not to tell anyone that he was there. I kept shaking my head and glaring at him; and at last he said, 'You have the Tillinghast nerve,' which was odd, because I hadn't told him my name. After that he kept fairly quiet. There were a couple of times he groaned, and once he said something to Bill about his leg and being out of luck. I gathered that Bill had agreed to get him away before anyone came to the barn. He seemed low in his mind. I feel sorry for that man."

"Would you know him if you saw him again?" O'Meara asked.

"I might and then again I mightn't. Remember, the hay loft is dark."

CHAPTER XXVIII—FACE TO FACE.

Mr. Burby, by a process of slow and ponderous reasoning, had induced a jury of six perspiring farmers in store clothes and Sunday shoes to bring in a verdict. The deceased had come to her death by an unknown weapon in the hands of a person or persons likewise unknown.

It was four o'clock, and the crowd dispersed slowly. It had been, all things considered, an agreeable outing.

And watch out for more doings! Yes: there came the policeman again and young Jones and several others. What was the matter with the last man? Couldn't he walk? Had someone shot him? This was going to be good!

Jones looked neither to right nor left. With a gesture he waved aside the two officers, and, bracing his foot on the running-board, reached into the tonneau, put his arms round the man huddled in one corner, and carried him unaided by the flight of steps to the porch.

There was something in the clerk's manner as he strode with his burden into the house that made the watchers fall back and leave his path clear. Easing the injured man into the leather armchair before the living room fireplace, he turned and faced the company.

"Where's Burby?"

"What's the row, son?" O'Meara had suavely ingratiated himself into the scene.

The clerk frowned.

"Who are you?"

"Fair enough. Allow me."

Jones made no move to take the card. His eyes swept it from a distance.

"Got you here pretty quick, didn't they?" sneeringly.

"You're wrong, boy—you're wrong. As far as I'm concerned, Central Office doesn't know this thing's happened." O'Meara waved his hand to include the One Pine Inn and its tragedy. "I'm in New Hampshire on something different—a private matter. But I can help you if you'll give me a chance."

"When your help's wanted, it'll be asked." Jones turned to the others. "Where's Burby?" And then, catching sight of the coroner pushing his way through the crowd, "I've brought back your man." With a swing from he hips, he indicated Bill standing sullenly between the two officers. "Clear the room and give him a chance to tell what he knows."

When all but the little group most interested had been eliminated. Mr. Burby turned to Bill.

"You know anything you say will be used against you," he warned. "Do you want to talk?"

"Say—do I want to talk?" Bill louged forward. "You couldn't stop me wid a muzzle. Them two birds ain't got nothin' on me. He's guilty"—glowering at the man in the armchair. "Guilty as hell—and they're tryin' to make me the goat!"

The door opened, and O'Meara, who had gone out a moment before, unobserved, appeared with the manacled Italian.

"If there's any talking to be done—here's someone who ought to be in on it," he suggested mildly.

At sight of the Italian, the man in the chair stiffened. His eyes blazed.

"So," he began fiercely, "so you did not go away——" And then, turning to the policemen: "Officers, THIS is the man you want. If it had not been for him, she—"

The Italian made a gesture of denial with his manacled hands.

"Stop!" he shrilled. "Stop before I keel you! I have suffer enough. I shall tell all—all! I am Quaglino—Julio Quaglino—of the Opera. I sing. The lady—the poor, poor lady"—he made a hurried sign of the cross—"is dead, but I no am responsible. It is—" His eyes shifted from the stranger to Jones and back to the stranger. "You no hear? This clerk, this in keeper's porter, this LAZARONE—already he make the full confession."

A dazed wonderment fell upon the stranger. As one gropes blindly through the darkness, he took a hesitating step toward Jones, his haggard face white.

"What's he saying?" he whispered.

A moment of silence followed.

CHAPTER XXIX—BILL TELLS A STORY.

It was Jones who spoke first.

"Search Bill!" he commanded sharply.

The chauffeur drew back with a snarl.

"You leave me be!" he began. "You took my gun from me at the station. You can't frisk me twice.

But the two officers were upon him. From inside his shirt they drew a long, flat linen package fastened like a bandage under his armpits, ripped it open and spilled the contents on the table. The missing diamonds!

"That don't mean nothin'!" Bill shouted in a fury at his captors. "I got 'em off'n her"—indicating Natalie "They was in the car out in the barn. She found 'em and he'"—he gestured toward the stranger—"seen her from the hay loft. He told me to nip 'em if I could—didn't you, boss?"

The stranger nodded.

"In part, what he says is true. I did tell him to get the diamond. But he came back empty-handed, told me he didn't succeed."

"That's enough to fix you, bo." The police officer brought out another pair of handcuffs, adding, with a grin, as he slipped them on Bill's wrist, "These here are all the jewelry you'll get out of this party, my bucko."

"That's O. K." Bill made no attempt to resist. "But you can't hang no murder on me. Here's where I blow the whole works."

He looked from one to the other of the three men with a meaning leer and threw out his chest. Beginning with the afternoon of the storm, he told of his visit to Lakeport in search of a mason to mend the broken chimney.

Drenched to the skin, his mission unsuccessful, he had stopped at a roadhouse, had scraped up acquaintance with another storm-stayed straggler—a man servant on a fishing trip with his master—had rustled drinks for both and listened to the grievances of his new-found friend.

His new friend's master was an unreasonable guy, wanted to stay on the water every minute. New York swells were all nuts.

Bill agreed with this classification, and, volunteered evidence on the subject. At the One Pine Inn, where HE worked, there was one of these very swells—a woman with two dogs—two little yapping mutts, one as white as snow, the other coal-black.

To Bill's surprise, his new friend hit the ceiling, demanded details, wanted to know what the woman looked like, when she had come, and who was with her.

"He said," Bill continued, "that he would bet she was the master's wife, doing the 'when the cat's away the mouse will play' act, and that, if we handled our cards right, we could shake her down for a bunch of dough. And so I agreed that if he'd come across the lake that night in their motor boat, I'd give him a chance to lamp the dame on the q. t. He slipped me a yellow-back to bind the bargain, and I come home."

CHAPTER XXX—THE PRINCESS-WOMAN AND THE STRANGER.

At this point in the narrative, the stranger shaded his face with his hand.

"I couldn't get over to Mink Harbor that night," Bill went on. "Things got so lively around here; so I sent John. When the kid come back, instead of the guy I was lookin' for, he brought him." He pointed at the figure in the armchair, and, turning to the others: "Say; get wise. That face at the window was his face. It was him that caused all the row."

There was a murmur from the group, a quick fitting together of his perplexing puzzle. Bill supplied more of the missing pieces—the hours just preceding the woman's death.

The stranger had escaped detection by running to the back of the house where porch was on a level with the ground and, from there up the hillside.

Later, he had made his way to the barn, and Bill had promised to bring him back to the inn after all the others had gone to bed.

So Goes It

By B. H.

There's a lot said about "comebacks" these days. Prizefighters, politicians, business men and others are credited at different times with "staging" or "failing to stage" a "comeback." We have been running over the list and we have arrived at the conclusion that the greatest of all "comebackers" is King Tut.

Rip Van Winkle did a pretty fair job in the comeback line, snoozing for 20 years and then coming out of it and looking the situation over with bleary eyes. But he didn't accomplish anything after his comeback. And he was only the brain child of Washington Irving.

Now, on the other hand, look at old Tut. He was the real thing in the beginning, and owing to the efficiency of Egyptian undertakers, he was pretty well preserved when they dug him up after 3,400 years. Slightly shriveled but still there.

And what is more, he stepped right out into this present day world, and told the dear women folks what sort of clothes to wear and how to do their hair. We contend he holds the record for a comeback. He not only came back, but he's still here, walking around on the streets, in spirit if not in flesh.

There was quite a bit of discussion as to whether a Port Arthur slayer would be hanged or electrocuted. He didn't seem to take any part in it. Had sorta lost interest, so to speak.

Why is it the young men raise paint brush moustaches to make them look older and the old ones shave their upper lip to bring back the appearance of youth? We just can't be satisfied, can we?

Many things in this country need changing, says Senator Magnus Johnson. Where, oh where, have we heard that before?

MOTHERS AND THEIR CHILDREN

Ship Ahoy.

One Mother Says:

My children passed some happy rainy day hours recently by playing that the porch was a ship's deck. One child was elected captain, another mate, and another sailor, and other jobs were found for children who strayed in during the afternoon. I was the passenger, doing the mending in a steamer chair, I merely suggested the game and they worked out the details cleverly themselves. In planning devices for lifeboats or the ship's bridge the time flew by.

WHAT TODAY MEANS

By MARY BLAKE LEO.

The Moon ruled by Venus, a movable sign; indicates danger to women in their health as well as affairs of the heart. A little restraint is needed and recommended, for one is apt to exceed the bonds of good judgment, being extravagant in words and actions also with the expenditure of money.

A child born today will be generous affectionate and imaginative, a good student and a joyous playmate.

You are sensitive and generous if today is your birthday and altogether a person of fine noble impulses and sympathies.

You have an extremely unusual type of understanding in that you appreciate another's point of view as well as you do your own, because you are completely honest with your own virtues and faults, and when you see them in others you know the enthusiasms and sorrows that are going through their minds.

Your nature is strongly esthetic. You appreciate beauty wherever you find it and you find it at all moments under unusual circumstances. It might be a beautiful song or a cinema comedy, but if something in it is surpassingly expressive you are stirred with ardor.

Whether a man or woman, your nature is distinctly matrimonial and youare unusually fond of children. Your married life will never be completely happy unless your ambition for children is realizedfor in their care you can give expression to the intensity of feeling which is stored within you.

Emotionally you do not feel completely yourself unless you are in love with someone, even though it be a love affair of an entirely intellectual caste. You need the sympathy and encouragement of intense affection. To do your best you need perfect appreciation.

Physically you are probably inclined to nervousness, over intensity and exhaustion. You should live a great deal in the open and be extremely careful to relax as often as possible.

Successful people born on your birthday are:

Willis R. Hawkins, journalist.

Meritt Gally, inventor.

More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

WARMED OVER WISDOM

When Franklin wrote his almanac
With history his mind was cluttered,
And so he put down every crack
That Greek and Roman birds had uttered.
All sayings that he thought were smart,
Without an effort at apology,
The keen old codger made a part
Of his uncredited a thology!
And not at all by conscience smitten,
He signed what other men had written!

He lifted stuff from Socrates,
He cribbed from both the Medes and Persians;
Of many a stale Confucian wheeze
He made but slightly altered versions.
In fact, the wisdom of the world,
From tome and text book, verse and colyum,
He gathered up and lightly hurled
Into the pages of his volume.
And though it all was pretty trite
The public said, "Old Ben is bright."

Nor did he ever hesitate
To vend his literary plunder,
Or even wince when folks would state
That they considered him a wonder!
But Benjamin was far from dumb—
He knew his philosophic brothers,
And that the chaps he stole it from
Had stolen it, in turn, from others.
And the example which he set
Is being freely followed yet!

IRRIGATION

By A. M. McPHERSON
Consulting Engineer
Kahn Bldg., Eighth and Indiana

Into What Sized Farms Should the Surplus Lands On the Irrigation Project Be Divided?

PEARS

The pear is related botanically to the apple. In some respects it is a more hardy tree than the apple while in other ways it is not.

It will grow in alkali soils and in diseased soils that will not grow apples. The pear grows here but the apple does not. The pear tree is subject to the destructive fire blight which does not bother the apple. This fire blight will practically ruin a pear orchard almost over night.

Pears as a fruit do not keep as well as apples but are better keepers than peaches. It stands shipping fairly well and can be kept in cold storage for a time.

There are a great many varieties of pears which ripen at different times during the season. Seedless pears have been developed but are not wholly desirable.

The Bartlett pear is an old and widely known pear and is the variety that seems to do best under our local conditions.

Pears for shipment are picked green but rapidly ripen. Picking green does not seem to affect the flavor of pears as in the case of many other fruits.

Pears are marketed as fresh fruit and are also evaporated and canned. Evaporators and canneries are a great advantage to any pear growing district.

Just how well pears will grow here under irrigation is of course not known as yet, but as they grow under rainfall conditions it is a reasonable presumption to believe that they will grow under irrigation.

Tomorrow we will give some statistics in regard to pear production.

DROUTH CAUSES COTTON BOOST

General Market Closes at 20 to 55 Points Gain on Drouth

By The Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—Nervousness over the European situation and talk of an increasing new crop movement, led to reaction from an opening advance in the cotton market today, but prices firmed up again, reaching the highest levels in the late trading on hot weather reports from the southwest and evidences of a better feeling in Wall street. December contracts, which had sold off from 24.10 to 23.67 during the early trading, advanced to 24.42 and closed at 24.40, with the general market closing firm at net gains of 20 to 55 points.

Crop Estimated 10,870,000

The market opened steady at an advance of 15 to 21 points in response to relatively steady cables and the continued dry weather in the southwest. There was a good deal of realizing or scattered liquidation during the early trading and the forenoon market was rather unsettled, selling down to 23.03 for October and 23.44 for January, or 20 to 24 points net lower. This decline was accompanied by more unfavorable comment on the European conditions generally and for a time the trade seemed to be turning from it to consideration of crop prospects, to the approaching movement of new cotton in the southwest and the complaints of a comparatively light spot demand. Selling was restricted by a continuation of bullish crop advices from the southwest, however, and the market firmed up during the middle of the day on the forecast for another two days of fair weather in that section and the detailed weather reports showing extremely high temperatures. October sold up to 24.42 and January to 24.16, and the close was within a few points of the best. A southern authority places the crop indication at 10,870,000 bales as of August 5.

Port receipts today 11,844; U. S. port stocks 177,313. Exports today 191 bales, making 60,592 so far this season.

Cottonseed Oil.

By The Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—After starting one to four points lower on the disappointing action of cotton, the market for cottonseed oil advanced rather sharply on buying for southern account and active covering of shorts, inspired by continued dry weather in the southwest and the late upturn in Wall street, and firming up in hog products. Closing bids were generally 9 to 20 points net higher. Sales 34,100 barrels. Prime crude nominal; prime summer yellow spot 10.00; September 10.03; December 8.90; March 9.10, all bid.

Raw Sugar Steady.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—Raw sugar was steady, but no sales were reported with refiners not inclined to make fresh commitments until the demand for their refined products becomes more active. Cubas were offered at 4 5-16 cost and freight, equal to 6.09 for centrifugal. Spot market closing: September 4.17; December 3.93; March 3.38; May 3.45.

The market for refined was unsettled and prices were unchanged to 10 points lower, with all refiners now listing fine granulated at 7.90 cents. The demand for refined sugar, however, continued light. Refined futures nominal. At the close there were sales of 30,000 bags of Cuban and 19,900 Philippines on the basis of 6.03 for centrifugal.

WHEAT TURNS AFTER ADVANCE

New Buying Lacks Vigor After Upturn of Six Cents

By The Associated Press.
CHICAGO, Aug. 14.—For the first time in nearly a week, the wheat market today took a decided downward course. European selling of future deliveries was a bearish factor and new buying lacked vigor in the face of six-cent recent upturn in values. The close was unsettled at 5-8 @3-4 to 1 5-8 cents net decline, with September 99½ to 99 5-8 and December 1.03 3-8 to 1.03½. Corn finished 5-8@3-4 to 1 1-8 cents down, and oats at 1-8 off to 1-4 gain, and provisions varied from a setback of 5 to a rise of 2½ cents.

Favorable crop reports from the central west eased the corn market. Good shipping demand upheld oats. Provisions were steadied by firmness of hogs.

Fort Worth Livestock.

By The Associated Press.
FORT WORTH, Aug. 14.—Buyers were out bidding at a moderately seasonable hour Tuesday regardless of the fact that they made liberal purchases Monday. Receipts amounted to 4,000 head of cattle and 2,000 calves. Practically the entire run was in the native division.

Beef steers were disposed of to a fairly good demand and the supply was not excessive, although ample to meet urgent requirements. A car of steer yearlings sold early at $8. Several cars of cattle cleared $5@6.

In the butcher stock division receipts ran almost exclusively to canners and cutters, about the only desirable cows or heifers available being obtained from mixed shipments. A string of cows on the canner order, but with a good sprinkling of cutters, brought $2.10. Good cows sold around $3.00 @3.25. Bulls went at the usual range of $2.00@3.25.

Conditions in the calf trade did not show any material change.

Stocker trading dragged at the usual rates. Fairly good steers are selling around $3.50@4.25.

Traders could not detect any improvement in the quality of hogs on sale, sows and unfinished pigs constituting the big end of the day's receipts, which amounted to 1,000 head. Sows remained about steady with the Monday decline, the best selling at $5.50@6.00 with common to fair sows going at $4@5. Pigs cleared at rates that were mostly 25 to 50 cents lower than Monday's opening basis, or 50 to 75 cents lower than at last week's close.

Sheep receipts were small, only 500 head being booked, and the run was late in reaching the yards.

GASOLINE WAR SHAKES STOCKS

Market Unsettled During Early Session But Makes Late Recovery

Features.

By The Associated Press.
Total stock sales 544,600 shares.

Twenty industrials averaged 89.10; net gain .15. High 1923, 105.38; low 86.91.

Twenty railroads averaged 78.31 net gain .21. High 1923, 90.63; low 76.78.

By The Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—Heavy selling of oil shares, based on the extension of the gasoline price-cutting war to 15 middle western and southern states, unsettled the early part of today's stock market but a brisk recovery set in towards the close with net gains exceeding net losses in the final quotations.

New Crude Cut Rumored.

Liquidation of the oil shares was accompanied by reports of another imminent cut in mid-continent crude prices and rumors that some of the smaller refining companies were on the verge of bankruptcy. New low records were established by Cosden, Sinclair common and preferred, Phillips, Producers and Refiner, Marland, Middle States, Transcontinental, Skelly White Eagle and Invincible, the extreme loss ranging from 1 to 3 points. Substantial recovery from the low prices of the day was made in most cases, however, before the close.

Wall street apparently is perplexed by recent developments in Europe. The reaction of the foreign exchanges which are generally regarded a good barometer of the trend of business and political thought abroad, were slightly unfavorable. Demand sterling held steady around $4.56 3-4, but French francs broke to 5.48 cents, another new low for all time, and Belgian francs registered a nominal loss. Both made partial recovery later while German marks actually showed a net gain of 13 points on the day.

Market Believed Sound.

The quick recovery in today's market was regarded in many quarters as proof of the market's sound technical position. Baldwin, which had sold as low as 112 5-8 during the morning, rallied later to 117, closing at 116 1-4 for a net gain of 2 5-8 on the day. United States Steel jumped from 87 5-8 to 89 7-8, showing a net gain of one point at the close.

American Can, Allied Chamical, U. S. Rubber common and first preferred, Studebaker and DuPont were among the shares to close at net gains of 2 to 3 points.

Rails, while not as active as industrials, also made good recoveries. St. Paul and Southern Pacific which had established new low records for the year of 24 1-8 and 84 1-4, respectively, actually closed at net gains of approximately a point each.

Call money opened at 4 3-4 per cent and then eased off to 4½ where it closed. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged with 5 1-4 per cent the ruling rate.

From Immigrant Lad To Editor Climb Made After Striking America in 1912

Harry Miller

Eleven years ago a stranger in the land; today, managing editor of a Bloomington, Ind., daily newspaper. And this at the age of 23!

Such is the remarkable story of Harry Miller, who holds that responsible position on the Bloomington Bulletin.

Landing in America in March, 1912, after several weeks' journey from Ukraine, Miller's family settled in Chicago. Harry entered the public schools there and received his diploma two years late. He then went into the employ of a Chicago book house while he attended his high school studies at night.

His first actual contact with newspaper work came in 1917, when he began to work as copy boy on the old Chicago Herald. His night's work over, he spent the greater portion of the day in a nearby school of journalism, thus combining theory and practice. Since then Miller has successfully held position as a reporter, editor of a weekly paper, city editor and his present one which he has administered for close to two years.

While Miller is not quite ready to admit that newspaper work is the easiest in the world, he says that it holds out the greatest attraction for the man who wants to do big things.

Frankie Bailey's Fame Now Hidden Behind Counter

Frankie Bailey, as she appeared years ago on the stage to thrill ..bored masculines.

DDelving way back into the dim and distant past, into the musty archives theatrical, back into the days when "dad" was just a youngster, "grandpap" was still "stepping" and tights threatened to demoralize the stage and at the same time pack the theaters brings memories of Frankie Bailey.

Frankie in her day was what the "glorified girls" of Ziggy's Follies are today.

She was the musical comedy favorite of her day.

For years while at the height of her career she was the toast of Broadway as well as the Main streets where a well-known pink magazine was wont to occupy a conspicuous place in village tonsorial parlors.

For Frankie had the shapeliest legs put on exhibition at the time.

Clothed in silk tights and with her snippy little swagger stick Frankie caused as many masculine hearts to go "pitty-patting" as a whole bevy of "glorified girls" do now.

Frankie was credited with more nerve than a burglar for daring to appear in tights and reform organizations immediately launched a campaign to educate the "dear peepul" into the dangers attendant upon Frankie's exhibitions.

But the education seemed to do little but teach the poor and the ignorant the way to the box office where Frankie was appearing.

But the years passed on and Tennyson's brook is about the only thing that goes on forever, so it is not surprising that Frankie passed out of the limelight.

But now after all these years she's hopped back into the glare. The famous legs which once thrilled Broadway now carry Frankie back and forth behind the counter of a drug store in Los Angeles.

Such is fame.

ELECTRA SEEKS WICHITA DIVERS

Crowd of 2,000 on Hand for Water Carnival Event

ELECTRA, Texas, August 14.—The management of the municipal pool has invited the "Fire and Flame" diving team from the American Legion in Wichita Falls, to put on their exhibition at the pool next Thursday evening.

The water carnival which was held at the pool last Friday, was reported highly successful. A crowd estimated at almost 2,000 crowded the enclosure to capacity to see the diving and swimming contests. Prizes had been awarded to the different events by the local merchants.

PRIZE LISTS READY FOR COMMUNITY FAIR

Prize lists for the coming community fair which will be held in Electra, Sept. 26 and 27, will be mailed out by the chamber of commerce the latter part of the week. Considerable interest has already been shown by the farmers. The supervision and management of the fair will be in charge of the farmers and all judges for live stock and farm exhibits are farmers. Present indications seems to indicate that the coming community fair will be much larger than the one held last year in every respect as more prizes will be offered. The fair will be held in the cotton warehouse.

FARMERS STORING WHEAT FOR HIGHER PRICES.

Present reports from many of the farmers, who have harvested their wheat, seems to indicate that many have stored their wheat in the local elevators and will hold for a raise. No assurance is given by any one that the price of wheat will advance but the farmers seem to think that it can't go much lower and those that can afford to do so are holding. However, the farmers, or many of them, are having their wheat stored and are advanced a part in cash. They are permitted to hold their wheat in storage until the first of May without additional charge.

NEW GIN SOON READY.

The machinery in the new Farmers and Merchants gin is rapidly being set up and should be ready for operation before the first of September.

AUSTIN, Aug. 14.—Jess Binkley and Bennie Mitchell, negroes, held in Travis county jail were today identified by Mrs. Will Keeling as the men who attacked her husband in his home near Jarrell last Friday night. Keeling was struck on the head with an ax and also shot through the leg. He is recovering. Sheriff Lee Allen of Williamson county Sunday secured a confession from the Binkley negro, he announced.

The chemical warfare service of United States army is experimenting with "sneeze gas," which may be mixed with illuminating gas so as to save lives by warning room occupants of the escape of gas.

50,000 VALUE ON FARM PLANT

Wichita and Iowa Park to Get Together on Finances

The experimental irrigation farm fully equipped will be worth approximately $50,000, with the necessary 160 acres as the greatest factor. Equipment for the cultivation, erection of barns, sheds and general improvements will cost several thousand dollars, according to summary of reports of the various civic bodies behind the project. Wichita Falls and Iowa Park chambers of commerce will act as a unit for the benefit of the enterprise. This was brought out during the meeting held at the chamber of commerce Tuesday morning.

Finances Arranged Later.

The experimental farm will be ultra-modern, having laborers' houses, barns, sheds and implements. A. & M. college officials gave the committee several tracts to select from. The farm will consist of 160 acres.

Additional finances will be arranged at joint meetings of boards of directors of Wichita Falls and Iowa Park chambers of commerce. An auditorium for community affairs is planned.

Those present at the conference were: Dr. B. Youngblood, Dr. B. O. Morgan, dean of the teaching staff, A. & M. college; A. N. Corner, assistant director of experimental stations; W. F. Carter, in charge of North Texas district A. & M. surveys; C. H. Clark, T. B. Noble, W. D. Cline, Herbert Harrison, R. A. Thompson and Guy R. Jones.

Four Soils Tabulated.

The following four kinds of soil were tabulated: Calumet, Miller, Yahola and Wichita. The Calumet is of a gray sandy appearance and is found on the John Hirshi farm. The Miller is a red sandy loam, a common soil in most parts of Texas, especially noted in the Brazos and Colorado river valleys. The Yahola is similar to the Miller, and has a sandy subsoil. The Wichita is catalogued as a sand peculiar to this vicinity and is a sandy loam without lime.

Wichita Police Gain New Claim To Immorality

"Police physiognomies photoed" might be the alliterative application to the circumstance that has changed the scenic interior of the police court from barrenness to mural art which makes the old hall now resemble the Hall of Fame.

That the members of the present police administration will have further claim to immortality in the annals of Wichita police records, pictures of department members from Commissioner John Young on down the line have been grouped and framed. George Hodgins, chief of police, and Will Allen, night chief, with Dave May, chief of detectives, form another important group.

The new picture in attractive frames were on display Tuesday and today will be hung on the wall where the handsome faces of the "law," rather than the noted strong arm of the law, will smile down on all who enter the station.

PRAYED FOR LIGHTS TO GO OUT

Irish Confetti Woman's Only Relief

Praying for the lights to go out was what a woman was doing when she came before the county attorney's department Monday morning complaining of her neighbor who insisted the latter kept her front and back yard illuminated all night.

The county attorney's department could find nothing but a popular song which shed light on the subject of lights going out. The state statutes had entirely overlooked the question of whether lights burning, in one neighbor's yard and shining all night in the eyes of the other neighbor, should be an offense or not.

The complaining woman said if there was no legal remedy of extinguishing the lights she thought by practice she could manipulate a brick to connect with the Maadas.

Strike Predicted

S. D. WARRINER.

The country apparently faces a coal strike in the anthracite fields September 1, as a result of the failure of anthracite operators and miners to reach an agreement at the joint wage conference in Atlantic City. The conference broke up when S. D. Warriner, spokesman of the operators, denied the demands of the miners' union for complete recognition, and offered to submit the question to arbitration. President Lewis of the United Mine Workers announced further negotiations would be futile.

U.S. Mail Pouch Found Rifled By Vernon Sheriff

Special to The Record News.

VERNON, Aug. 14.—When Sheriff Frank Edmondson found about 250 letters that had been opened, strewn over a field near Vernon and found checks in some of the letters, he started an investigation. It was revealed that a mail pouch which was being transferred from the Frisco to the Denver station to be loaded on the midnight train, had checked up short. Federal authorities were notified and the postoffice inspector's department is making an investigation. The mail pouch has not yet been found.

The mail, when brought off the Frisco in the late afternoon, is placed on a truck at the Denver station to be loaded on the night train. Officers think the pouch was taken from the truck by someone who expected to find money. No registered mail, however, was in the pouch, and, according to postal authorities, only a few dollars, at the most, could have been obtained from the pouch.

LOOK OUT FOR CHINESE EGGS!

Peddlers Unloading Spoiled Hen Fruit

That peddlers are unloading on Wichita Falls markets eggs that are sold as country eggs, but which are for the most part old and spoiled, was the opinion Tuesday of Dr. Lucey of the city health department.

Dr. Lucey suggests that merchants not buy eggs from peddlers unless each egg is candled before purchasing. If this is done the people of Wichita Falls will not be buying so many spoiled eggs, according to the health officer.

Dr. Lucey says the eggs brought in by the farmers themselves are usually fresh but those brought in by peddlers are usually kept for days before being put on the market.

FARMERS DIG SUB-LATERALS

Storage Dam Gates to Be Opened When Diversion Dam Completed

Farmers in the Wichita valley are at work digging sub-laterals to connect with the laterals of the south side canal. The work was started near the dam and is spreading daily. The district pays for the laterals, but the fee owner is expected to furnish the sub-laterals.

The water will be allowed to flow into the canal when it is eight feet below the diversion spillway. The canal was completed several weeks ago.

With the completion of the diversion dam spillway the river will be closed and the diversion lake will be allowed to fill. This will be done by opening gates of storage dam and letting the water through.
