Wal-Mart, Furr's reach agreement

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Business Editor

A five-acre Wal-Mart Supercenter will be built on the location currently occupied by Highland Mall no lter than Christmas next year, according to a verbal agreement with Furrs Cafeteria, a mall tenant.

"They assured us that we've got a deal," said Randy Egenbacher, vice president of Lubbock-based Furrs-Bishop's Cafeteria Inc. "We expect to have the written agreement signed within 30 days."

This morning, a Wal-Mart spokesperson at the company's headquarters in Bentonville, Ark., would not confirm whether a decision has been made or not, but said an announcement is soon expected.

"Probably within the next month we'll have something," she said.

According to the verbal agreement, Furrs will build a new restaurant in the parking lot of the Supercenter, facing U.S. 87, Egenbacher said. The new restaurant would be about the same size as the current cafeteria, which is 10,000 square feet, serves 1,000 people per day and employs 60. The intersection is the most highly trafficked in Big Spring.

"Our objective is to have our new store open by February of 1994," he said. "We're really excited about it. We're ready to get underway with our construction.

He said Wal-Mart plans to be open for the holidays next year. "They're shooting for Christmas of '94."

Furrs would foot the cost of building a new restaurant.

"It isn't coming without pain," Egenbacher said. "We think long term it's going to benefit the community of Big Spring and us."

Furrs, which has an eight-year lease at Highland Mall, and Wal-Mart have been negotiating since April. Negotiations began after city officials asked Wal-Mart to reconsider other locations for the supercenter besides the originally proposed site at Wasson and Thorpe streets, near residential areas. About 50 residents near Wasson and Thorpe protested rezoning.

According to city officials, Wal-Mart said Furrs in talks two years ago asked for $1 million to move out of the mall but Wal-Mart offered only $75,000. Wal-Mart also offered then to allow Furrs to locate a restaurant in the parking lot.

However, Egenbacher and other Furrs officials said they were not made an offer until April. "We hope that they're not using us as their scapegoats to fulfill their commitment to the Big Spring community," Egenbacher said.

Since April, a half dozen other verbal commitments were made by Wal-Mart, he said, but Wal-Mart backed out of each before anything was signed.

"They've again made us a commitment," Egenbacher said. "I think they're sincere."

Furr's customer Elisa Silva and boxboy Roy Mansfield wheel groceries out of the Furrs Supermarket Wednesday afternoon. The storewill close this afternoon, and reopen at 7 a.m. Wednesday as the newest Don's IGA store in Big Spring. Furr's and Newsom's Food Centers Inc. were finally able to cement a deal Monday that was announced several weeks ago.

Furr's to become IGA Wednesday morning

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Business Editor

Furr's Supermarket in College Park Shopping Center will close tonight after 5 p.m. and reopen at 7 a.m. Wednesday as Don's IGA — the third and largest IGA store in Big Spring.

"We have finally, finally, finally - this is like the boy who cried wolf - but we finally got things worked out," said Kent Newsom of Newsom Food Centers.

The grocery chain, which began seeking a new direction after H.E.B. Food Stores Inc. opened here in October, had earlier announced it bought two Furr's groceries, one in Snyder and the one in Big Spring.

That agreement hit a temporary snag, because the stores were part of a package deal with two stores in Odessa. But the Odessa stores were kept by Furr's.

"It is a big deal for us. This marks a culmination for a new direction for us," Newsom said. "We have growth plans beyond that and this is the first stop. I anticipate our growth to stay in the West Texas area."

The sales are part of Furr's five-year plan to maximize strength and profitability. "Big Spring does not fit our geographic market strategy," a Furr's officials said.

However, sales here were reportedly strong. A second Furr's grocery in Big Spring was closed early last year.

The two new stores are both about 35,000 square feet, Newsom said, compared to the 25,000-square-foot store on South Gregg and the 16,000-square-foot store on North Gregg.

The College Park grocery will honor all advertisements honored by Don's IGA on South Gregg, Newsom said, including ads in today's newspaper. It will also undergo changes in customer service and produce.

The goal, he said, is "put the level of service in that store that's been needed for some time."

And, he said, "Bring the produce departments, primarily the produce department, up to speed, and to improve on the meat department, which is already their strongest area."

Movie rentals, taken out last month by Furr's, will not return. The rentals were a promotional routine, Newsom said.

Although the store is under new ownership and has a new name, it'll be a while before the sign is changed, Newsom said. "I'm sure it'll be a month before we actually get the sign changes done."

Lions join flood aid collection

By GARY SHANKS

The Big Spring Evening Lions Club is collecting cleaning supplies to help the thousands of families left cleaning up in the wake of floods in the Mississippi River basin.

After weeks of some of the highest flood waters this century, many residents along the Mississippi are trying to restore their homes to livable conditions. Cleaning supplies are among the highest priorities, disinfecting homes soaked with sewage-contaminated flood water, according to Lions coordinator Bob Noyes.

Supplies are being gathered, donated by area residents, or purchased by Lions members, and are being added to a 100,000 pound shipment collected by San Angelo-area Lions Club members, Noyes said.

Needed cleaning supplies include mops, large street brooms, household brooms, garden hoses and nozzles, scrub brushes, rags, towels, paper supplies, all kinds of cleaning products, disinfectants and other cleaning products.

A collection box has been set up in the Lions building at 1607 E. Third St. The building is open week days from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. and weekends from noon to 5 p.m.

Flooding in nine Midwestern states through the month of July, caused widespread property damage and killed more than 40 people.

Waters overflowed municipal sewage systems and even washed coffins and human remains out of cemeteries. Total cost of the flooding damage is much more than

Police seek suspect in burglary, assault

HERALD STAFF REPORT

An elderly woman was attacked and bound Monday night during an aggravated robbery in the 400 block of Hillside, police reported.

Billie Marie Moore, 81, of Big Spring sustained minor injuries, including bruises and cuts, during the incident.

The robbery reportedly occurred around 11 p.m. at her home.

"Upon being awakened by noises, she discovered a male adult inside her home," the Big Spring Police Department report stated. "The offender confronted the victim, demanding money and jewelry."

When officers arrived at the scene, Moore said she had been assaulted and tied up with a telephone cord. The burglar made off with $140 in cash and a purse.

She later freed herself and called for help, officials said.

No arrests have been made in connection witht he case.

CGA awards scholarships to four youths

Dig this:

Slang Bible bringing religion to the street

The Associated Press

HOUSTON — In the beginning, the Earth was a fashion misfit and the Garden of Eden's serpent was one bad dude. Cain wasted Abel and Noah was one cool brother.

So goes P.K. McCary's new slang version of the Bible, one in which the Houston author aims to inspire hope in young blacks so often dispirited by poverty and violence.

The scripture according to the Black Bible Chronicles is lean, sinewy, and street-savvy. In slang, it's bad.

"I'm not a theological expert, but I do believe that God didn't stop talking when he talked to Moses on the Mountaintop," said Ms. McCary, a 40-year-old journalist and lifelong Bible lover. "I believe he's still talking."

Here's how He's saying it:

"Now when the Almighty was first down with His program, He made the heavens and the Earth. The Earth was a fashion misfit, being so uncool and dark, but the Spirit of the Almighty came down real tough, so that he simply said, 'Lighten up!'"

Later, when God decides to unleash floods over the Earth, here's how he breaks it to Noah:

"I'm fed up, Noah, with what's happenin' 'round here. These folks ain't what's happenin' anymore, so I'm gonna do what I gotta do, and end things once and for all. Man, I'm gonna blow the brothers clear outta the water."

Ms. McCary said the five Bible books she translated, Genesis through Deuteronomy, are true to the original. Several lessons are footnoted so readers can find them in a conventional Bible.

The difference is candid and up-to-date discussion on such topics as crime and sex.

"It was a bad thing to do the wild thing without a blessing from the Almighty. You had to be blessed," it says.

The 190-page book, which will be available in major bookstores nationwide Sept. 1, was started more than a decade ago as Ms. McCary, the daughter and granddaughter of Baptist ministers, taught Sunday school.

The single mother of three noticed how children were excited by Bible stories they could relate to, stories that included people they knew.

It's a matter of breaking down the heady language barrier posed by the King James Bible and its descendants, Ms. McCary said.

"The meaning in the Bible does not really change, but it does become appropriate for the times," she said.

"If we label Jesus as only the sandal-wearing, toga-clad, long-haired, white, blond, blue-eyed ... you're not going to reach 90 percent of the people because this world is made up of people of color."

To some Christian fundamentalists, however, her Bible is blasphemy worthy of eternal damnation. In slang, the sister's dissin' God, and that ain't cool.

"It's an abomination," said Houston Baptist preacher Carl Hodges. "I object strenuously to her language. She uses a lot of street language ... to supposedly try to reach youth and younger adults. That's the argument that the end justifies the means, and God condemns that.

"He wants us to do his work and He wants us to do it his way."

Joe Ratliff, a Baptist minister who presides over Ms. McCary's church in south Houston, said the slang approach is no different than Christian films or music. He added that any criticism is based in racism and elitism.

"To me the whole purpose is to reach people," Ratliff said.

Mosbacher says he won't run

Believes Bush will challenge Ann Richards

The Associated Press

Houston businessman Rob Mosbacher talks with the media Monday in Houston following a meeting with George W. Bush. Mosbacher said he will not run for Texas governor, but believes Bush would seek the GOP nomination. Bush left the meeting without speaking to reporters.

HOUSTON — Republican Rob Mosbacher says he is not running for Texas governor, and he believes that means just one thing — George W. Bush will run and win the GOP nomination.

Mosbacher had been considering running for governor next year. But after a 1 1/2-hour meeting Monday with Bush in Houston, Mosbacher announced he would not seek the GOP nomination to challenge Democratic Gov. Ann Richards.

"While I'm convinced ... that I could have beaten George. George is convinced that he could have beaten me," said Mosbacher, a Houston oilman.

"And the only thing that is absolutely clear is we would have spent a lot of money and a lot of time trying to prove it. And that's money that could be better spent on retiring Ann Richards."

Bush, who has not made public his political plans, left Mosbacher's downtown office without speaking to reporters.

But Mosbacher said there is "no doubt in my mind" that Bush would seek the Republican gubernatorial nomination.

Karl Rove, a political consultant for Bush, called Monday's meeting part of the process Bush is going through in deciding whether to run.

"He's not a candidate today, but I don't see anything that's going to keep him from becoming a candidate," Rove said.

With strong name recognition as son of former President Bush and managing partner of the Texas Rangers baseball team, Bush has been viewed as a top contender to try and beat Richards, who already is planning her re-election bid.

Mosbacher, son of former U.S. Commerce Secretary Bob Mosbacher, said he considered himself Bush's strongest opposition.

The GOP primary, he said, has come "pretty close" to ending now that he is out and Bush almost certainly is in. Both men believe Bush had a clear shot at the nomination, he said.

"There may be somebody, fringe-type, out there, but I think most of the serious candidates have folded up their tents," he said.

Mosbacher, 42, said Bush seemed relieved with the news he would not run.

He also said he would support Bush in the race and that he expects a formal announcement from Bush after the baseball season.

Besides Mosbacher and Bush, Dallas lawyer Tom Luce, a former adviser to Ross Perot's presidential campaign, has been mentioned as a possible GOP candidate.

But Luce told The Dallas Morning News on Monday that he also would not run. He described Bush as both a good friend and a "formidable opponent."

Also Monday in Austin, Louis Podesta, 42, said he planned to seek the GOP nomination for governor.

Podesta, a freelance writer and small business consultant from San Antonio, called himself a "Barry Goldwater-style" conservative.

"I'm here as an ordinary citizen who has never been involved with politics formally," he told a Capitol news conference.

Podesta filed a lawsuit that currently is before the Texas Supreme Court to invalidate a prison bond measure approved by voters because he said half of 25,300 prison beds financed by the measure were for substance abuse treatment.

Board backs rules on Capitol grounds

AUSTIN (AP) — Rollerblading, skating and skateboarding would be banned from the Capitol grounds under a rule endorsed by the State Preservation Board.

The change is being made "for the safety of the public," according to the rule.

The rule, among several passed Monday, still must be published in the Texas Register before being considered for final adoption, said Lori Kneisly, executive assistant at the board.

In other action, Gov. Ann Richards issued a funding challenge so taxpayers won't have to pay for tony trashcans in the Capitol extension to the tune of up to $900 apiece.

Richards, who heads the board, has privately raised $40,000 to make up half the cost of the trashcans in the underground Capitol extension, said her spokesman, Bill Cryer.

She challenged executive director Dealey Herndon of the State Preservation Board Monday to match that amount through private fund-raising.

The 80 to 90 trashcans in the extension cost $800 to $900 each, Ms. Herndon said. She said they cost so much "because they are very, very heavy-duty."

Additional trashcans slated for the Capitol itself are to be paid for with private funds, Ms. Herndon said.

Lottery efficiency saves $80 million

AUSTIN (AP) — By turning over many jobs to private business instead of building a big bureaucracy, the Texas Lottery was able to hand the state Treasury an $80 million surplus Monday, Comptroller John Sharp said.

Sharp said the lottery has been so efficient, other states are looking at Texas in setting up their own gambling games.

"We still get calls anytime there's a lottery starting up anywhere in the country," Sharp said. "There's no question it's the most efficiently run lottery in the country."

The lottery pays 5 percent of its revenues to retailers, about 50 percent as prizes and about 30 percent to the Treasury. Under state law, 15 percent was allowed for administrative costs.

But Sharp said the lottery, which employs only about 180 people, spent only about 8 percent on administration. The difference was the $80.9 million check written to the Treasury.

"It would have been a lot easier to hire 1,000 employees," Sharp said. Instead, the lottery utilized private companies for as many services as possible.

Rather than create its own transportation fleet to send tickets to retailers, Sharp said, the Texas Lottery used UPS. The same went for its communications system and advertising campaigns.

Shrimp boat sinks near Corpus Christi

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — The U.S. Coast Guard say it's trying to figure out how to retrieve a 32-foot shrimp boat that sank near Corpus Christi Beach, forcing the diversion of large vessels from the ship channel.

Lt. Dan Norton, assistant public affairs officer for the Coast Guard, said Monday that authorities were discussing salvage plans with the boat's owner.

The four crew members made it safely to shore on their own after the boat overturned Saturday night.

The wreck site hasn't been pinpointed, but Norton said the boat is believed to have settled on the sloping portion of the channel, which leads under Harbor Bridge into the Port of Corpus Christi.

Coast Guard officials are diverting ships with a draft of more than 30 feet until the shrimp boat is removed or until officials determine it poses no hazards.

Emily moves ashore

The Associated Press

HATTERAS, N.C. — Winds from Hurricane Emily brushed over North Carolina's barrier islands today as warnings to batten down the hatches were extended up the East Coast.

With Emily and its 100 mph winds expected to turn northward, forecasters this morning added the coasts of Virginia, Maryland and southern Delaware to the hurricane warning that already covered the top half of North Carolina.

Thousands of people — mostly vacationers — left the low-lying Outer Banks island chain to get out of Emily's way. Others stayed put, waiting to see exactly where the zigzagging storm would blow ashore.

"It's like playing checkers," said Troy Lapetina, emergency services coordinator for Norfolk, Va. "We wait for the storm to make a move, and then we make ours."

In Ocean City, Md., officials were to meet this morning to decide whether to evacuate the estimated 125,000 people staying at the Atlantic resort.

Wind began to pick up over the Outer Banks late Monday, reaching about 20 mph. It was expected to reach tropical storm force by midday and hurricane force by tonight, when the eye was expected to make landfall.

Fears mounted that Emily would grow stronger as it moved over the warm Gulf Stream, where hurricanes Hugo and Andrew became giants.

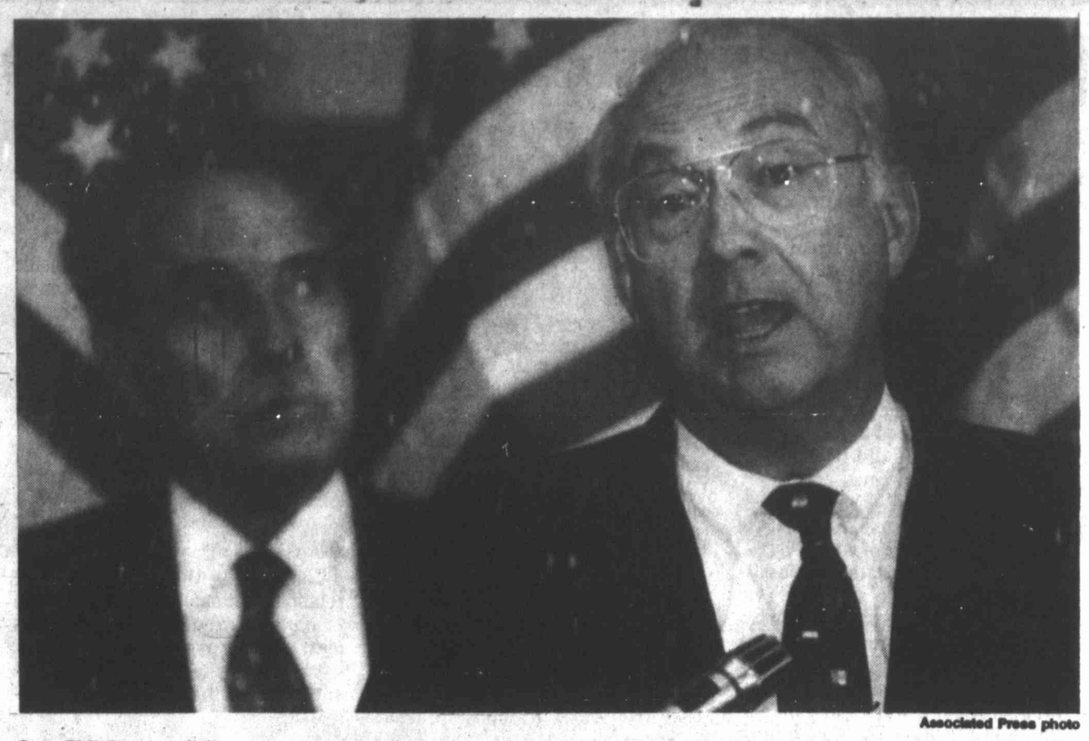

Radio announcers used apocalyptic terms in issuing a steady barrage of warnings. Tie down shovels and other yard equipment, one said, to keep them from becoming "missiles of destruction."

Some 70,000 of the 100,000 people in Dare County, which includes most of the Outer Banks, moved inland Monday, according to Ray Sturza, a county emergency management spokesman. The rest prepared to stick it out.

"I ain't gonna leave," said Billy Beasley, 51, a lifelong Outer Banks resident and owner of seafood restaurant in Colington. "I'm going to do the best I can."

At 5 a.m., Emily's center was about 155 miles southeast of Cape Hatteras, near latitude 33.2 degrees north and longitude 74.5 degrees west.

Emily was moving west-northwest at near 9 mph and was expected to turn northward today, the National Hurricane Center in Coral Gables, Fla., said.

GOP leaders discuss NAFTA with Salinas

The Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole and other Republicans returned Monday from Mexico saying President Carlos Salinas de Gortari is convinced U.S. political opposition won't block passage of a free trade agreement.

"Obviously he's very concerned about it, but he's also a very positive person and he still believes that because we're right we'll prevail," Dole said during a rally in San Antonio.

Dole of Kansas and Republican Sens. Phil Gramm of Texas, Orrin Hatch of Utah and Judd Gregg of New Hampshire plus Republican U.S. Rep. Henry Bonilla of San Antonio met with business leaders upon returning to Texas and toured the Holt Company's heavy equipment plant.

Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., also went with the group to Mexico.

Earlier, after meeting with Salinas, Dole said it would be "devastating" should President Clinton fail to win passage of the North American Free Trade Agreement, which would link Mexico, the United States and Canada in the world's largest trade zone.

The Republican senators suggested an easy Senate win for NAFTA would strengthen Clinton before a tougher House fight. U.S. Rep. David Bonior of Michigan, a key Democratic opponent of NAFTA, said Sunday as many as 75 percent of Democrats in the House oppose the agreement.

Bonilla, the only House representative on the Mexico trip, said he believes that estimate is high and that many House members have not yet committed on the issue.

Dole said his delegation warned Salinas "to get ready for a lot of hot rhetoric from some of the opponents that might be offensive to people in Mexico, might be offensive everywhere else."

Hatch suggested prejudice might be the motive of some NAFTA opponents.

"I hope that there is no prejudice towards the people of the south of the United States of America, and I'm concerned that maybe there is," Hatch said.

Dole said his group told Salinas the fight for NAFTA "is a non-partisan, bi-partisan effort."

Asked why no Democratic supporters of NAFTA in Congress were invited on the trip, Dole replied: "My view is they know how to get to Mexico City, and we know how to get to Mexico City." Many in the San Antonio rally crowd of about 200 cheered his remarks.

"Republicans were out front on this issue. We didn't need anybody else along. We went because we think in this case Republicans are going to furnish the margin of support," Dole said. "Next time we go we'll be happy to take a larger group and include Democrats and maybe even an independent."

Gramm said the trip shows Clinton that even though Republicans battled his spending and tax packages, they support him on free trade.

"Our objective today was to say, 'Mr. President, on this issue, where we believe you're right, we're not only with you, we're going to be out front leading,'" Gramm said.

About a dozen NAFTA opponents held protest signs in San Antonio as the delegation left the Holt Company aboard an Air Force bus.

The Mexico visit was described as an official government trip.

"We think it's well worth whatever the cost might be," Dole said. "We're talking about jobs, jobs, jobs, and that's important."

Why does pessimism persist?

What in the world justifies this headline in a national news magazine: TONIC FOR A SICK ECONOMY.

And the publication refers to ours!

Never in history have we had more American workers working than right now. Wall Street's Dow is setting all-time record highs.

Though some overfat corporations are streamlining, most Americans have never had it so good.

Yet this several-page article downplays the healthy slow-grow pace of our gross national product as "sluggish economic growth."

It was understandable in the months before the presidential election for segments of the media to parrot the Democratic party line that our country was in "recession" — but the election's behind us, and the pessimism persists.

Granted, scare headlines sell more magazines than the other kind, but this persistent mean-mouthing of our nation and its economic prospects could result in a genuine downturn.

There is a cure for prosperity.

The secret formula I am about to reveal has been lying around unnoticed for many years.

To my best knowledge, the first person to make use of this cure for prosperity was a Frenchman. He was not an economist. He was a portrait painter by profession.

The painter was sitting at a sidewalk cafe in Paris, sipping his favorite wine.

A wealthy builder had just given him an order for a portrait, and the artist was celebrating.

His small bottle finished, he was about to order another, when his eye fell on a headline of a copy of Figaro at the next table.

Paul Harvey

The headline said: "Hard Times Coming."

Instead of ordering his second bottle of wine, the artist called for his check.

"Is there anything wrong with the wine?" the proprietor asked.

"Nothing wrong," the artist replied, "but hard times are coming, and I must economize."

"Hard times?" said the landlord. "Then my wife must not order the silk dress she wanted."

"Hard times?" the dressmaker repeated when the order was canceled. "Then this is certainly no time to expand."

"Hard times!" the builder said, when the dressmaker canceled his building plans. "Then I cannot afford to have my portrait painted."

So he wrote to the artist and canceled the order.

After receiving the letter, the artist was dejected.

He want to his favorite cafe to console himself with a small bottle of wine.

On a nearby chair lay the same copy of Figaro that he had seen earlier.

"Hard Times Coming," the headlines said.

This time, he read the date.

New cable regulations take effect Wednesday

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's a confusing time for cable TV viewers.

Starting Wednesday, new regulations will make cable television cheaper for most viewers. But not for everyone. As many as a third of the nation's 58 million cable customers will pay more.

And at many cable companies, a complicated shakeup in rates will be accompanied by other changes, such as itemized billings, altered channel lineups and revamped cable packages.

"Almost everybody is going to see a change," said Briana Gowing, spokeswoman for the Federal Communications Commission. The changes come as the FCC begins enforcing the 1992 Cable Act, intended to make cable rates more fair.

Letterman unleashes softer, mellower show

NEW YORK (AP) — Smiling, serene David Letterman unleashed a mellower, off-center comedy in the plush confines of the renovated Ed Sullivan Theater for a triumphant debut in his first CBS "Late Show" — and a GREAT hair day.

"Remember that woman who kept breaking into my home?" an unusually well- coifed Letterman asked the studio audience that greeted him Monday afternoon with a standing ovation. "Now she's doing it an hour earlier."

So is Letterman.

On June 25 he quit his 11 1/2-year gig as host of NBC's "Late Night" to take the 11:35 p.m. time slot he coveted at NBC, but lost to his friend Jay Leno, successor to Johnny Carson as "Tonight" host last year.

Religious conference challenging for chefs

CHICAGO (AP) — With just five loaves and two fish, the Bible says, Jesus fed the multitude. The job isn't so easy for chefs at the Chicago hotel where thousands of religious leaders from throughout the world are converging.

From pork abstinence to water-washing stations and kosher utensils, a kitchen staff of 450 is working to meet the sometimes exacting dietary requirements for the Parliament of the World's Religions.

About 6,000 representatives of Protestantism, Hinduism, Judaism and other faiths are attending the nine-day conference, which ends Saturday.

"I imagine that I'm going to get some extremely unusual requests from religions I'm not familiar with," said Gene Anderson, director of the Palmer House Hilton Hotel's food and beverage operation.

Library of Congress opens literary journey

WASHINGTON (AP) — The craggy New England of Robert Frost, William Faulkner's sultry, backwoods South, the wide open Western spaces of Zane Grey — writers have always helped Americans define the land in which they live.

To illustrate that idea, the Library of Congress has pulled together a rich mixture of photographs, manuscripts, maps and first editions that takes visitors on a trip across America's literary landscape.

The original idea was to showcase the library's collection of literary maps, which point out where writers lived and worked. But the library has started with something small and added treasure after treasure from its vast holdings.

Take the orange-cardboard-covered spiral notebook that contains the first draft, in pencil, of Truman Capote's "In Cold Blood."

"The village of Holcomb," he writes in teeny-tiny, immaculate script, "stands on the high wheat plains of western Kansas, a lonesome area other Kansans call 'out there.'"

In red ink, Walt Whitman traces the paths of his journeys across the Great Lakes on a map, and describes his travels in a letter to a friend.

Another map shows the fictional world of Yoknapatawpha County, the setting for novels like "The Hamlet" and "Absalom! Absalom!" It was drawn in pen and ink by the author of those novels, William Faulkner.

Summer flood misery still with Des Moines

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Reinforced dikes protected the city's water treatment plant from the summer's second round of floods, while people in about 1,000 homes coped with different, smellier problem — backed up sewage.

A weekend deluge across the Midwest sent rivers and streams over their banks again. Officials had to use boats Monday to get to the waterworks, knocked out last month by record flooding. The shutdown left 250,000 residents without safe drinking water for 19 days.

Give CRMWD its due

A town hall meeting, designed to both inform and hear from the public, will be conducted by Colorado River Municipal Water District officials tonight at the Municipal Auditorium.

It can only be hoped that a large crowd of Big Spring residents are on hand when CRMWD Manager Owen H. Ivie, Jim Bill Little, one of four Big Spring directors on the district's board, and other representatives attempt to explain changes in water distribution slated to take place with the completion of the Lake O.H. Ivie pipeline to Odessa and Midland.

Big Spring Mayor Tim Blackshear recently wrote Ivie noting that the city's citizens complain about poor water quality more than anything else.

That letter detailed several council requests of the CRMWD, among them to schedule tonight's town hall meeting.

Some of the council's requests seem well founded, others based on misinformation.

One thing is certain, there is a need to clean the air, so to speak. Water district officials need to know what we're thinking and what we're willing to pay for.

And we, members of the city council included, perhaps need explanations from the CRMWD as to what it can and can't do.

It would help if we could all remember what it was like living in West Texas before the CRMWD began supplying our homes with potable water.

Unfortunately, many of us simply aren't old enough to remember the days before there was a Colorado River Municipal Water District.

But those with brown teeth, stained by water from those deep wells can remind us.

No offense intended

John A. Moseley

Something tells me that the rotund one is a pretty popular fellow with the Big Spring City Council these days.

Now, that's just a guess, mind you, but judging from the brouhaha created by that "Reimbursement jumps; Ivie winds up dumped" headline, nobody's said much to council members about quadrupling their monthly stipend.

Oops, there I go again. I'll bet I wasn't supposed to call that $50 per month that soon will become $200 monthly a stipend.

Stipend, you see, implies income. Whereas, this $200 a month the council's members are going to be getting, just as soon as they vote to approve it one more time, is "reimbursement."

"Reimbursement for what?" you ask?

Expenses ... undocumented expenses, that is.

Anyhow, seems there were so many people upset by the second deck of that headline "Ivie winds up dumped," few if any are complaining about the four-fold expense increase.

Staff writer Patrick Driscoll took the initial heat, doing his best to explain that he doesn't write the headlines, which was true. As a general rule, that's my job.

Driscoll finally tired of the drill and began transferring the calls to my desk, most of the callers complaining that I had shown disrespect for Owen Ivie, manager of the Colorado River Municipal Water District.

Ivie was also, until council members voted to replace him as one of their two representatives, president of Moore Development for Big Spring Inc.

He is also the man for whom the newest CRMWD reservoir is named.

I find it unfortunate that some misinterpreted the headline as lacking in respect for Mr. Ivie. To be honest, nothing could have been farther from my mind.

While I've never met him, perhaps the first and best reason for not disrespecting the man, it seems more than apparent that Mr. Ivie has done plenty that would be deserving of nothing but respect.

From my experience, they don't name lakes after horses' patoots ... especially when the man being so honored still walks among us.

What's more, it takes a man of considerable civic-minded character to continually deal with the seemingly endless string of rejections one encounters when serving as president of a community's industrial foundation.

Considering that I didn't know him, and was planning on writing this column, I asked an acquaintance who has had dealings with Mr. Ivie in the past about him.

"There's no question in my mind that he's dedicated and wants the best for this community," my friend said. "But when he puts his mind to doing something, he can be a bulldozer. You don't want to get in his way."

Makes sense, I thought, takes that frame of mind to build lakes in West Texas.

Come to think of it, it took that kind of attitude to build just about anything out here.

I wonder if our generation will go wanting in comparison one day?

'Conspiracy' talk taps deep fear

Mike Royko

A white business owner came to his office last Monday and said to his secretary: "Thank goodness they caught those two guys."

He was talking about the two young men who had been arrested in the murder of James Jordan, Michael's father.

The secretary, who is black, scowled, shook her head and said: "You don't really believe those boys did it, do you? It's a cover-up."

He was too stunned to ask her who she thought really did it, and who was arranging the "cover-up."

Later, he told me: "My goodness, look at all the evidence. And she still thinks it's some kind of white plot."

A couple of days later, my assistant was riding the subway. Two black women were sitting nearby. They were talking matter-of-factly about a conspiracy and a cover-up. It wasn't clear who the conspirators were, but they were sure of one thing: The accused killers hadn't done it.

So there appear to be two distinct reactions to the arrest of a young black thug and a young Lumbee Indian thug for the killing of James Jordan.

Many whites were relieved that the murders hadn't been committed by some redneck racists.

And many blacks refuse to believe that the murder was committed by the accused. They're still convinced the two men are being framed and whites are behind the killing.

Even after the police released information on evidence that sounds damning, skeptical calls kept coming in to Chicago's most popular black radio station.

Lon Dyson, the morning news anchorman at WGCI-AM, told a reporter: "We've had all kinds of callers who believe some hick sheriff murdered James Jordan and the whole investigation was just a cover-up for that.

"The car with no blood, the quick cremation. It all makes sense to some black people, and no matter what new evidence comes up, what new facts, they won't listen to me. I know a woman who, no matter what I bring up, she says: 'No, it's a conspiracy. There's nothing you can tell me to make me think otherwise.'

"Many blacks have roots in the South, and when they think of law enforcement down there, they think of the Klan. There's just kind of a natural distrust of authorities down there."

Perry Williams, the morning anchor on the station's FM broadcast, told a reporter that, as more evidence comes out, many blacks seem to be changing their minds about a cover-up. But others aren't persuaded.

"Traditionally, most African-Americans are against cremation, and just the fact that it happened so suddenly. It was seen as a real insult to the family and raises all kinds of questions. Would they have cremated the body of a white man so quickly?

"One theory is he was killed because people down there didn't like a black man driving such a nice car. He was seen as uppity. And we all know stories of black men in those little Southern towns. I know a man who changes his car when he gets to Memphis."

Considering the history of race relations, not only in the South but in much of this country, the suspicions aren't entirely unreasonable. Or they weren't until the arrests were made and some of the evidence was disclosed.

But why would it be hard to believe that a young black man — with a history of coldly violent behavior — would be involved in the shooting and robbing of a middle-aged black man? Especially when the victim was napping in a $46,000 car, which would indicate he might have a plump wallet.

Is there anything shocking about a black man shooting a black man? Not if you look at crime statistics and listen to black leaders talk about social problems. The single biggest threat to the life of a young black man is another young black man with a gun. Black on black crime. It's constantly talked about.

The only difference in this crime is that James Jordan wasn't young. But in the dark of night, while stalking a victim, who checks ID cards?

Amateur sleuths are heard on radio talk shows questioning the absence of blood in the car. They ask, how can you shoot someone and not have blood all over the place?

I even heard that question raised by the morning host on WBEZ, Chicago's public radio station, which prides itself on its journalistic standards.

The people who wonder about the lack of blood in the car have seen too many violent movies, where special effects always provide a big splatter.

But that question is easily answered by Dr. John Fildes, a senior trauma surgeon at Chicago's Cook County Hospital, and an expert in gunshot wounds.

"We see a number of mortal wounds that have either no blood or just a trickle. The hemorrhaging can be contained inside. All you would see is a round wound with just a trickle of blood. There can be two or three liters of blood internally and you may not see anything externally."

No, the trial will show there is no frameup, cover-up or conspiracy.

Except for the victim's famous name, it was just an everyday 1990s American crime. And that's what people should be worried about.

Iowa night - a flood of memories

Bob Greene

DES MOINES — There was this moment the other night at the Iowa State Fair, a moment that stood out like a gorgeous scene on a vividly colored picture postcard:

Lou Christie, the old-time rock 'n' roll singer who had a string of hits in the 1960s — "Two Faces Have I," "Lightnin' Strikes," "Rhapsody in the Rain" — had come back onto the stage in front of the massive grandstand for an encore. He was at the fair as part of a rock 'n' roll revival show; he had already sung all of his most famous songs, so for the encore he borrowed a ballad from another '60s group, the Association.

It was the sweet, gentle "Never My Love." There were almost 8,000 people in the grandstand on a warm and beauteous night, and most of them were on their feet, swaying to the music. In front of the grandstand, below the stage and off to the side, though, was the sight that was so pretty.

Twenty or 30 couples — people in their 30s and 40s and 50s — had come down to dance. They were waltzing, really; there's no word that describes it better. The husbands and wives held each other, and it was August of this terrible Iowa summer, and at least for this one moment the terrible part was over, pushed aside. Lou Christie, microphone in hand, sang "Never My Love," and the people waltzed, and the troubles were gone.

It was an illusion, of course; the troubles in Iowa are still very much with the citizens, and no one knows how long it will take to recover from the horrors of the floods. More bad weather seems always just a few hours away, and the tears of summer remain fresh. Now, however, on this balmy and perfect evening the love song echoed throughout the fairgrounds, and the couples held each other tightly and danced in the night, and there was peace and a measure of contentment.

"Iowans did not have a summer this year," said Kathie Swift, spokeswoman for the fair. "This is our chance to have a summer."

Apperently so. A state fair is always symbolic in the Midwest, but this year in Iowa the 11-day fair seems to mean something exceedingly special. "Iowa's celebration is a welcome break from fighting floods," the Des Moines Register editorialized; the crowds for the opening days of the fair have been large, and to wander the fairgrounds and observe the patrons jamming the various booths and shows and exhibits, it is hard to conceive that for 19 full days in July, the people of Des Moines had no drinking water.

"The fair is always a reunion for the people of Iowa," Swift said. "It is always Iowa's largest event, where we gather once a year to celebrate the best about our state. This year, though, it means more than usual."

From the big stage in front of the grandstand you could see the nighttime panorama of the fairgrounds: the garishly lighted rides on the 10-acre midway cranking high into the air, then swooping down toward ground level; the people heading toward the 20 acres of farm machinery on display; the farm families who had come for the enormous livestock exhibits, bringing sheep and cattle and swine and horses, almost 14,000 animals in all.

When the fair ends, the reminders of the disastrous summer will remain behind, and the work will go on. President Clinton, when he visited Des Moines during the height of the flooding, said: "I've never seen anything on this scale before — to my knowledge there's never been an American city without water that was this large for this long a period of time." Kathie Swift, of the state fair: "Some people were predicting that this was the year we would have to cancel the fair, but we knew that wasn't going to happen. The fair is too important to the people of Iowa."

Almost 8,000 of those Iowans were in the grandstand tonight. They were eating corn dogs and drinking beer and soda pop; they had arrived early for the entertainment, watching Fabian open the show with his old hits, and then dancing to Little Eva as she sang "The Loco-Motion," and clapping while Bobby Lewis sang his No. 1 hit from 1961, "Tossin' and Turnin'."

Rock 'n' roll revival shows like this one are always popular, because people love the music so much, but tonight was something especially fine, tonight there was something exceptional in the air. The evening's headliners, Jan and Dean, would be taking the stage in a few minutes to sing their good-time surf music, but right now Lou Christie was still in the midst of his encore.

"Never my love," he sang. "Never my love." And in front of him the couples waltzed, full of happiness, full of life. Full of summer, dancing in the starlight.

Arafat stumps Arab world on autonomy plan

The Associated Press

SAN'A, Yemen — Yasser Arafat, facing death threats from his radical opponents, started a swing through the Middle East on Monday to try to persuade Arab leaders to back an accord with Israel on Palestinian self-rule.

Israel's Cabinet approved the proposed plan for Palestinian autonomy in the Gaza Strip and the West Bank town of Jericho on Monday. But the plan has been met with reservations in Arab capitals.

Arafat, the plan's author, called it a "historical turning point" as he launched a tour of the region.

The accord is expected to be signed during the round of peace talks that opens Tuesday in Washington. It would be the first major breakthrough in the Middle East conflict since President Anwar Sadat of Egypt signed a peace treaty with the Jewish state in 1979.

Sadat was assassinated two years later by Islamic fundamentalists.

Arafat's opponents say he is making too many concessions to Israel without guarantees of an eventual independent homeland for Palestinians. The PLO chief has said the plan is only a first step toward wider self-rule across the territories occupied by Israel in 1967.

"We remind Arafat of the fate of Sadat," the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command said in a statement dictated by telephone to news agencies in Beirut.

The Damascus-based group, which is backed by Iran and aligned with Muslim fundamentalist factions, strongly opposes peace efforts. It said the proposed plan would lead to civil war and "Arafat and his entourage will pay the price."

In Tunis, the Palestinian news agency WAFA said the PLO won't be shaken by the threat. Ahmed Jibril, the PFLP-GC leader, "is a conspirator who has been used by different foreign governments to work against his own people," the news agency said.

In an interview with French television, Arafat's adviser, Bassam Abu Sharif, said: "There are always threats, but we're capable of protecting our president."

In Yemen, Arafat met with President Ali Abdullah Saleh and won the Yemeni leadership's backing of the self-rule proposal, according to an official Yemeni statement.

He also met with former President Carter, the architect of the 1979 treaty between Israel and Egypt, who was on a private visit in Yemen. Arafat told reporters the meeting with Carter was "friendly and constructive" and that he urged Carter to help explain Palestinian aspirations to the Clinton administration.

Egypt welcomed the plan and urged the Arabs to support it. "As long as the Palestinians and Israelis support this proposal, Arab parties should support it," Egyptian Foreign Minister Amr Moussa told reporters.

Arafat met Sunday with President Zine el-Abidine ben Ali of Tunisia, where the PLO has its headquarters, and was also due in Egypt for talks.

Arafat has faced considerable opposition from within the Palestine Liberation Organization. He secured the backing of the majority of the PLO's ruling 18-man Executive Committee Sunday after a stormy four-day meeting in Tunis.

But hard-line Executive Committee member Tayseer Khaled warned that the Palestinians faced "grave consequences" if they signed the agreement.

Israeli peace protestors close occupied territory

The Associated Press

JERICHO, Occupied West Bank — A strike called by Islamic fundamentalists and dissident PLO factions to protest the resumption of peace talks today in Washington closed most of the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Young strike enforcers in Gaza threw stones at more than 30 Arab-owned cars driven in defiance of the strike call, Arab reports said. Shops and businesses were closed throughout east Jerusalem and the West Bank as well.

The fundamentalist group Hamas warned its supporters would "cut the throat" of anyone who dared use a car. Hamas, which considers the peace talks a betrayal and wants to destroy Israel, is seen as the strongest threat to the plan for Palestinian self-rule, approved by Israel's Cabinet early today.

The only exception to the closure was in the West Bank town of Jericho, a town of 15,000, where Palestinians plan to administer the autonomy agreement. Shops closed but reopened two hours later.

"We heard that there was a strike ordered by Hamas but we opened because we support the peace talks," said Victor Halteh, 42, a clothing shop owner on the town's main square.

The strike came as Israel sent its negotiators to Washington with a mandate to sign the agreement on self-rule, marking the first breakthrough in two years of stalled peace talks.

The framework for autonomy was a first step toward ending 26 years of Israeli military rule in the West Bank and Gaza Strip. Sixteen ministers backed the plan and two abstained.

Ministers said they expected troops to pull out of Gaza and Jericho within six months.

"This is the beginning of the road that will bring peace after 100 years of conflict between us and the Palestinians," said Health Minister Haim Ramon after the five-hour Cabinet session.

The agreement was worked out in months of secret negotiations between Israeli leaders and senior PLO officials. Cabinet ministers suggested that a next step could be mutual recognition and the PLO's renunciation of violence.

The daily Haaretz newspaper quoted unnamed sources as saying that Uri Savir, the director-general of the Foreign Ministry, was in Europe for secret negotiations with PLO officials.

Neo-Nazi alliances forming?

The Associated Press

BERLIN — The chief of Germany's internal security agency says neo-Nazi groups have taken the first steps to forming a national network and that his agents are busy infiltrating them in a "massive" undercover operation.

But the acts of hatred go on unabated: gasoline bombs are hurled at yet another Turkish club and an Afghan immigrant's small grocery is firebombed, swastikas and "Foreigners Out" painted in black enamel on the wall.

Early today, about 100 refugees fled a burning asylum shelter in the western town of Detmold after it was apparently set on fire by right-wing extremists. Four of the newcomers suffered smoke inhalation.

Authorities say the anti-foreigner violence is largely unorganized — most of it, at least.

But Eckart Werthebach, director of the Office for the Protection of the Constitution, has noted for the first time the emergence of "action alliances" among previously splintered neo-Nazi groups and said his agency was responding with large-scale infiltration.

"These are the first steps toward a network," he told the ZDF television network Sunday. "The aim is, in fact, to form a united front."

Werthebach worries about another Solingen or Moelln, two western German towns now synonymous with ethnic hatred, where firebombings killed ethnic Turks.

A short drive from Berlin, an entire east German hamlet is under investigation for allegedly paying a neo-Nazi youth $1,200 to firebomb a vacant, newly built shelter for foreign asylum-seekers.

The mayor of Dolgenbrodt, the sylvan home of 300 people and lakeside holiday camps, denies the conspiracy charge, first reported in a Berlin newspaper report last week. But the pressure is on.

On Monday, the villagers' council explained in a statement why they remain opposed.

Security Council criticizes standoff with U.N. troops

The Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — The U.N. Security Council condemned the use of U.N. troops as pawns in the Bosnian war Monday as Spanish peacekeepers remained trapped in the Muslim sector of Mostar.

At least 53 Spanish troops have been unable to leave eastern Mostar since arriving early Thursday with an aid convoy. About 55,000 Muslims in the besieged city fear renewed Croat attacks if the U.N. soldiers leave.

"Suffering throughout Bosnia is no excuse for interference with the humanitarian actions of U.N. peacekeepers," said the council president, U.S. Ambassador Madeleine K. Albright, commenting to reporters following closed council consultations.

"Humanitarian supplies and efforts must no longer be used as weapons of war by victims, or anyone else."

In addition to the Muslim move against peacekeepers in Mostar, Bosnian Croats have balked at allowing Muslim wounded out of eastern Mostar or U.N. aid to reach them until wounded Croats are evacuated from Nova Bila in central Bosnia.

Croats seeking the evacuation of wounded from Nova Bila blocked the convoy's journey into Mostar last week.

Cedric Thornberry, the U.N. civil affairs chief for former Yugoslavia, went to Nova Bila Monday to investigate Croat claims that over 100 wounded Croats were in desperate need of aid.

Bosnian radio, meanwhile, reported Croat attacks on government forces around Mostar and said Serbs were also shelling the town. It said seven civilians were wounded. There was no immediate confirmation.

The Bosnian army in Sarajevo also reported that Croat militias used hundreds of captured Muslim civilians as a "human shield" on the front lines near Mostar. The Muslims escaped to the Bosnian side after the battles, it said. It also reported that Serbs were using the same tactic near Teslic in north-central Bosnia.

There was no confirmation. All three sides have made similar claims in the past.

Bosnian Croats were allied with the Muslim-led government army against the Serbs at the outset of the war. But that alliance dissolved over land grabs in central Bosnia and around Mostar, a southwestern city that the Croats want as the capital of a Bosnian Croat state.

A Croatian soldier on the west side of Mostar moves into position to fire into the Muslim east side Monday. U.N. troops are being detained on the east side by some of the local Muslim population in an attempt to prevent such attacks.

The peacekeepers remaining in Mostar had enough food for normal rations only through Monday, peacekeepers' spokesman Cmdr. Idesbald Van Biesebroeck said in Sarajevo.

U.N. officials outside Mostar said the problem would have to be solved in Geneva, where the warring factions have been meeting to discuss a peace plan to would divide Bosnia into Serb, Croat and Muslim mini-states.

The talks were to have resumed Monday, but were postponed to Tuesday because Bosnia's Muslim President, Alija Izetbegovic, could not arrive in time because of transportation difficulties from the besieged city of Sarajevo, said Geneva conference spokesman John Mills.

Izetbegovic said Monday that the plan offered the Muslims was "worse than war."

"I feel like a thirsty man who somebody is sending to a desert to look for water," Izetbegovic told Sarajevo radio before leaving for Geneva.

But a U.N. official, speaking on condition of anonymity, warned the Muslim-led government against seeking radical changes in the package proposed Aug. 20 by international mediators, saying any additional demands could wreck the whole agreement.

The agreement gives the Muslim-led government 31 percent of Bosnia, the Serbs 52 percent, and Croats 17 percent.

Jacqueline Bigar - Horoscope

FOR WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1993

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You feel as if you are coming from a position of weakness. Say little; just gather information. Surprises lurk around work and a boss. You will like the outcome. Keeping your feelers out will help you handle changes. Tonight: Talk with a boss if you can. **

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You can clear up an early-morning misunderstanding. Be creative and look for solutions that make both sides happy. Let go of rigid thinking patterns. Focus on getting what you want. Tonight: Go for it. *****

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A parent or associate is most demanding. You answer to a higher power today. A loved one or dear friend chimes in with ideas and support. Be ready to cement a business partnership. Work with another who is as changeable as quicksilver. Tonight: Make a must appearance. ****

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Recent snarling and hassling may continue. A partner comes up with a wild, exotic idea. Go for it! Let go of rigidity and you will discover a solution applicable to both of you. Tonight: Bask in another's caring. *****

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Talking about today's confusion won't help clear it up. Getting in there and physically straightening out recent hassles will. A partner is there for you. Be creative about a work project. Tonight: Work with a friend as late as you need to. *****

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Pinch yourself if you must. Today is for real, not a dream, as others seek out your company. Periods of reflection pay off now, as you are able to make clear choices. Careful, someone might misread your friendliness as more. Tonight: Be where the party is. *****

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You feel like the workhorse of the zodiac, and you are today. Use your endless energy to complete a project. Consider bringing more work home. You might need to restructure work life in order to gain a more independent feeling. Tonight: Brainstorm with a co-worker. ****

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your playful side is still present. What you consider a "hoot," another considers a problem. Be sensitive in communications. If you are receptive you will hear something quite unusual. Tonight: Go where the music is. *****

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A sense of calm pervades your domestic life. Finally, you are able to look at a financial investment more realistically. Realize how unusual your thinking is. Tonight: "Vet" at home. ****

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Gossip irritates you today; move right past it. Be sure about what you want from others. Later, delightful communications surround you. Express your multi-sided personality. Tonight: Realize how much you are changing. *****

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your hunches are right on about money, fun and your potential. You are causing yourself undue stress by worrying about problems that don't yet exist. Tonight: Buy something you absolutely must have. ****

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): What looked bad now is great. Be more playful with friends and open to new ideas. You've been too rigid. Let go of past thinking and be open. One friend delights you while another disappoints. Tonight: Be where the gang is. *****

IF SEPTEMBER 1 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Surprises will follow you this year, and just when you think everything is falling apart, it will pull together. Significant others in your daily life are unpredictable. Use your ingenuity to the maximum. Finances will flourish as long as you keep your priorities straight. If single, you could be confused by all your choices. If attached, walk in another's shoes. Let go of undue stress. PISCES adores you.

Dear Abby - Letters...

Fiancee lays down law for cop-to-be

DEAR ABBY: I am 24, have a four-year degree in criminal justice, have served three years in the U.S. Army with the military police, and am currently being hired as a Massachusetts state trooper. Police work is, and always will be, my heart's desire.

My problem: I am in love with (and engaged to) a wonderful woman from my college days. We went together all through college. She was a business administration major.

Abby, she has known for the last 3 1/2 years what I wanted to do with my life. Now, she refuses to marry me if I become a state trooper because of the high risk involved in this line of work. I have worked very hard for nearly seven years toward this job, but I also love my fiancee, and now I am very confused about what to do. (I have never interfered with her career choice.)

Should I take her advice and aim for a safer job in the criminal justice department, although I know deep down inside me I will never be happy unless I'm a street cop? — UNSURE IN FRAMINGHAM, MASS.

DEAR UNSURE: If you know "deep down inside you" that you'll never be happy unless you're a street cop, you could be engaged to the wrong woman. Be grateful that she is honest with you about her feelings. She seems to lack the tough stuff it takes to be a policeman's wife.

DEAR ABBY: I hope you won't think I'm an addle-minded old man who has gone soft in his old age. (I'll be 88 if I make it to mid-September.) I've enjoyed your column in the Lowell (Mass.) Sun, and know that you appreciate puns, so I am enclosing a poem for your enjoyment. I have kept this poem since I was a young man, and just came across it. There is no title, but it was written by William Dunkle of East Falmouth, Mass. — SAMUEL S. THORPE SR., TOWNSEND, MASS.

Where can a man buy a cap for his knee
Or a key to the lock of his hair?
Should your eyes be called an academy
Because there are pupils there?
In the crown of your head, what jewels are found?
Who travels the bridge of your nose?
Could you use in shingling the roof of your mouth
The nails on the ends of your toes?
Could the crook in your elbow be sent to jail?
If so, what did he do?
How can you sharpen your shoulder blades,
I'll be darned if I know, do you?
Can you sit in the shade of the palm of your hand
And play on the drum of your ear?
Do the calves of our legs eat the corn on our toes,
Then why does it grow on the ear?

DEAR SAMUEL S. THORPE SR.: That is a funny punny poem. Thanks for sending it. I don't know if Mr. Dunkle is still among the mortals, but thanks to any of his progeny who are presently among us.

HWP installs newly-elected officers

MARTHA E. FLORES
Regional Editor

Hispanic Women for Progress recently installed its 1993-1994 officers.

Diolanda Moore was re-elected as president. A Lamesa native, Moore moved to Big Spring in the late 1980s. She is employed by Howard College, working in counseling and testing.

Incoming vice president is Yolanda Gonzalez. She is a Big Spring native and employed by the Texas Employment Commission.

The newly-elected secretary is Fort Stockton native Yolanda Rascon, a resident of Big Spring for about two years. She is employed by the Big Spring Independent School District.

Delia Barraza was re-elected as the treasurer. Barraza, a Big Spring native, is employed by Howard College as a director's assistant at the Business Development Center.

Under Moore's leadership and with members' dedication, the organization worked toward becoming more involved in the community. It conducted financial aid workshops for college-bound students and a conversational Spanish mini-workshop for teachers, as well as tutoring sessions for elementary students. Members also sponsored a Hispanic Heritage Month essay contest and scholarship give-away.

For the fall, the organization awarded two $300 scholarships to students attending Howard College and Texas Tech University in Lubbock.

"My vision for the upcoming year is to continue to stay involved in the community," Moore said. "We know the importance of making ourselves known and offering any assistance we can to the community.

"Our commitment to education is very strong. We are still very concerned with the high drop out rate among Hispanics."

In May, HWP members teamed up with Big Spring High School librarian Joy Burnsed to promote Hispanic heritage in honor of the Cinco de Mayo anniversary and to increase the library's Hispanic section.

A display included artifacts, borrowed from the organizations' members, as well as other local Hispanics. Member Clara Hernandez contributed two posters from a local Diez-y-Seis de Septiembre celebration in 1954 and books published in Mexico during the turn of the century.

Member Carmen Brooks presented historical sketches about Mexicans and Mexican-Americans in the area. She also contributed a matate, stone corn grinder, which has been in her family for three generations.

During Hispanic Heritage Month (Sept. 15-Oct. 15), HWP members are teaming up with the Heritage Museum to organize a day-long celebration promoting local Hispanic heritage.

The event will include food, entertainment, storytellers, a car show and a month-long display. Contributions for the display are welcomed. Items needed include kitchen items, traditional clothing from different eras and family heirlooms.

Items must be turned in by Sept. 11.

For more information, call Margaret Trevino at 264-5021, Moore at 264-5116, Martha Hernandez at 263-1307, museum curator Angie Way at 287-8255 or Clara Hernandez at 263-4303.

Scholarships

ship awards is a landmark for the Chicano Golf Association.

Scholarships have been given in the past, but this is the first time the association has been able to award this amount, Alvarez said.

The 94-member association raises money for various projects in and around the city of Big Spring. There are nine members on the scholarship committee who chose the four scholarship recipients using several criteria.

Students being considered for the scholarships were screened according to their grades in school, goals in life, financial need and past accomplishments.

Although not a requirement, all four of the 1993 scholarship recipients are graduates of Big Spring High School. The students are attending Howard College, preparing for eventual transfer to universities.

Established in 1972, the CGA has been growing more active as a service organization in recent years.

Scholarships have been increasing, from four $200 scholarships in 1991, to $1,100 in total scholarships during 1992 and $4,000 this year, Alvarez said.

There also have been many other instances where the association helped members of the community.

In a recent CGA tournament, members raised about $750 for the United Way of Big Spring, and United Way received more in an earlier tournament.

"(The recent tournament) was not as successful as the first, but it was pretty good," Alvarez explained.

The CGA also has thousands of dollars for area residents in crisis. The group raised $900 for the Big Spring High School Steer Band's trip to Florida and $450 for the Hispanic Women's Association, as well as other projects, Alvarez said.

Members are preparing for the final tournament of the year. The Sept. 25 golf tournament will include a barbecue and dance.

$10 billion, according to Associated Press reports.

Hundreds of thousands of Midwesterners have moved back to their homes after fleeing the relentless flood waters. Many were evacuated as flood waters washed over river banks, washed out dams and overtook volunteer crews building emergency levees — rising faster than emergency crews could build.

Power is being restored to thousands of homes along the Mississippi River from Tennessee north to Iowa. Relief organizations from around the world, including large contingents from the Salvation Army have been working to help displaced people until they can return to their homes.

Three cheers for school spirit leaders

BSHS squad heads for nationals

"...training and educating today's finest cheerleaders."

National Cheerleader Association

'We really have a lot of pride in our squad, so we'll do really well this year.'

The Big Spring High School Varsity Cheerleader Squad has been selected to attend the December NCA National Championship in Dallas, following a "best team" rating from an NCA instructor this summer.

"We won't be just representing Big Spring High School but the whole county," said varsity spirit leader Brandie Belew. "It's going to be a lot of hard work, effort and time."

"I think we're really privileged that we were chosen to go," Heather Duncan said.

Other squad members are Stacie DeLeon, Amanda Griffin, Kendra Carey, Elisa Hinojos and Amy Miller.

The all-girl squad will attend for the second year in a row to compete with squads from all 50 states as well as places such as Germany and Puerto Rico.

Although the girls did not place in their division last winter, they deemed their participation a success.

During the competition, squads will be judged in cheer categories such as loudness, sharpness in motions, difficulty of routine and creativity.

"The competition is really intense," said Brandie, who attended the competition last school year.

"Our strong points last year were we had some really good tumblers and we have really great teamwork," said Elisa, who also attended last year. "We really have a lot of pride in our squad, so we'll do really well this year."

"We get a lot of ideas from the competition," she added. "We can learn them and bring them back to help motivate our crowd."

But, competing shouldn't hamper efforts to build goodwill.

"We'll make a lot of friends," Stacie said. "It's so important to be friendly with everyone."

To raise funds for the trip, the cheerleaders have conducted raffle ticket sales and are scheduling a mini-cheer camp in about a month.

After the spirit leaders complete fund-raising efforts, excitement for the championship event begins to intensify and so does preparation.

"An NCA instructor will be helping us choreograph our routine," Amy said. The routines will consist of dance, cheers and tumble routines.

"We're all positive about it," Amanda said.

The team has the most important ingredient to succeed during the competition, Kendra said.

"I feel like we're all very dedicated and love each other."

Spirit leaders sending message LOUD AND CLEAR!

By CONNIE SWINNEY
Staff Writer

"Two bits...Four bits...Six bits, a Dollar!

All for the Steers...Stand up and holler!"

With excitement building for the coming football season, cheerleaders are sharpening their routines and gearing up to boost the home team above the competition.

"B...S...H...S!"

"We're the spirit leaders," said Varsity spirit leader Amy Miller. "We stand for leaders in building spirit."

"Steers Fight!"

Since the beginning of athletic play, cheerleaders have served an important role in sparking enthusiasm, said BSHS sponsor Jill Wilbanks.

"Enthusiasm. Energy. Excitement. Leadership," said Jill, listing the qualities cheerleaders represent. "They are a support system. They build an increase in excitement (and) anticipation for the upcoming school year."

"Steers Fight!"

At pep rallies, such as the community-wide event Monday, cheerleaders deliver a message with as much energy as their routines.

"They can help get the school year off to a good start," Jill said.

"Steers Fight!"

The spirit leaders will perform each week in front of a crowd of hundreds of people who help them yell favorite cheers.

"Steers Fight!"

Building team spirit is one reason for cheering on the players, said freshman spirit leader Teresa Labbe, but not the only one.

"It's fun," she said. "It's exciting!"

All-star says being a cheerleader not as easy as it looks

By DEBBIE LINCECUM
Features Editor

When Forsan High School junior Laurie Light gets nervous, her stomach hurts.

So it was with a stomach ache that the varsity cheerleader tried out for the all-star squad at a cheerleading camp in San Angelo recently.

"My stomach hurt, and I was shaking bad," said Laurie, who earned a place on the team despite her nerves. "I didn't think I was going to make it. I even messed up on one part, so I thought, 'There goes my chance.'"

But Laurie's skills showed, and now she has a chance to go to London, England, with other all-stars over Christmas break.

"I've been to Louisiana, but that's the farthest I've been," Laurie said. "I just want to see what it's like over there. It's probably pretty different. I guess I'd feel like an exchange student for a week."

To earn the title "all-star," Laurie had to perform a jump, a cheer and a dance routine for a panel of judges. She chose her best jump, the "side hurdler," and learned the cheer and dance at the camp.

Hopefuls auditioned in groups of five, performing their jumps one at a time.

Laurie has something to say for anyone who thinks cheerleading is easy, or just "fluff."

"It's very hard work," she said. "You have to practice so much. Before I was a cheerleader, I thought all you did was get out there and jump around, but it's much more than that."

Forsan cheerleader Laurie Light gets a lift from Amber Ceniceros, as they top a pyramid made by the squad.

According to Laurie, a good cheerleader has determination and persistence throughout hours of practice.

Dancing is what Laurie says she does best, something she and the other Forsan varsity cheerleaders will show at the upcoming Howard County Fair. They plan to do a dance for the Battle of the Cheerleaders Sept. 7.

Being part of a cheering team may be a lot of work, but it has definite benefits, Laurie said.

"You get to meet a lot of people," she said. "Everybody on the squad becomes close. And going to London, well, that would be great!"

But in order to go, Laurie has to raise money - a few thousand dollars, in fact.

"It's going to cost $1,835 just to get over there, without food or other stuff," she said. She's written letters to businesses, asking for donations, and may have a car wash and - with help from her squad - a cheerleading clinic to raise money.

With less than four months to go, Laurie will probably be thinking of other ideas.

When she told her parents, Richard and Linda Light of Big Spring, they were excited, Laurie said.

"I think they were a little worried about the money part, though," she said.

If Laurie gets to go to London, she'll perform in the New Year's Day parade there.

Although college is definitely on the horizon for Laurie, she's not sure about her career plans yet. But she has one criteria for her job.

"I want to do something that makes a lot of money," she said. "Then I can travel all I want to."

Going batty

Scary creatures really beneficial, officers say

By DAN SHEEHAN
Thomson News Service

WILSON BOROUGH, Pa. — Bats in your belfry, bedroom or kitchen? Call a cop. Folks here do.

"We've been playing Batman and Robin," Officer Tim Sullivan said recently.

Sullivan and his colleagues have been called to chase 17 bats out of 17 homes this month. Bethlehem, Pa., Police have also had a smattering of bat calls lately.

"This is the time of year for it," Sullivan said. "I don't know why."

The leathery critters find their way in through open windows or other cracks and crevices.

Officers use tennis rackets, brooms or other tools to knock the bats down. Then — depending on the officer — they destroy the bats or release them.

Jackie Sweitzer said she probably wouldn't have batted an eye over finding a bat in her living room. They used to fly into her parents' house all the time when she was growing up, she said.

But it was a new experience to her husband, Dale, and 3-year-old son, Ryan. The two were watching television one night and heard fluttering at the side window.

Moments later, "a bat flew right out toward them on the couch," Sweitzer said.

Dale called police. He helped an officer pursue the bat around the ground floor of the house, up the stairs and into a bedroom, where they finally trapped it with a net.

"Ryan was scared ... he was crying pretty good," Sweitzer said. But the bat was spared. They tucked it in a box and re leased it outside.

Bats have had their share of bad press through history. They are mean-faced and nocturnal, and it is no coincidence that the vampire of legend takes wing as a bat.

But they are among the most helpful creatures when it comes to insect control. A single bat can devour 600 mosquitoes in an hour.

"As far as I'm concerned, the bats are welcome in my county," said Buddy Grucela of Northampton County Vector Control. "They're very beneficial."

Grucela said he even has blue prints for a "bat house," used to attract bats to insect-infested areas. But so far he hasn't built one.

Bats can transmit rabies, but almost never do, said Melissa Craig, a Bethlehem nurse coordinator who administers shots for animal bites.

Craig said she has yet to treat a bat bite. It's raccoons and stray dogs people have to watch out for, she said.

Wigged at school

Jason McLemore, 17, tries on a short wig he must wear to school in Houston. The senior was sent home last week for having hair that was too long according to the school's grooming policy. The principal said the wig was okay.

Good Marks for Young Writers

A Punctuation Guide

from The Mini Page by Betty Debnam © 1993 Universal Press Syndicate

Sept. 8 is International Literacy Day.

This special day is set aside to call attention to how important it is to be literate.

When we are literate, we can think, read, write and speak well.

The Mini Page celebrates this day with a guide to punctuation for kids.

Getting our thoughts down on paper is an important part of being literate.

Adding the correct punctuation marks makes our writing clearer.

Punctuation marks dress up our thoughts so they are easier for our readers to understand.

There are certain rules that you will learn for when and how to use these marks.

You don't want to use too many, but you also don't want to leave them out when they are needed.

The Mini Page asked punctuation marks to speak for themselves.

We have given you an example as well as a chance for you to practice. Then make up your own examples.

Period

I am a period, just a small black dot,
At the end of a sentence, forget me not!

EXAMPLE

We will go.

Sam likes milk

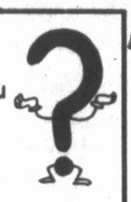

We periods will do just great,
When you want to abbreviate.

EXAMPLE

United States — U.S.

Virginia — Va

Question mark

I am a question mark and you use me,
When you are as curious as you can be.

EXAMPLE

What time is it?

Did you bring it

Exclamation mark

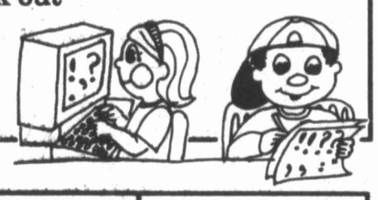

Use an exclamation mark when very glad,
Thrilled or upset, frightened or mad!

EXAMPLE

I am so sick!

Look out

We can type the punctuation marks on a computer.

Gus Goodsport's Report

Supersport: Deion Sanders

Height: 6-1 Birthdate: 8-9-67
Weight: 195 College: Florida State University

Deion Sanders is perhaps the busiest pro athlete. He is an outfielder for the Atlanta Braves, plus an All-Pro receiver for the Atlanta Falcons. He joined the Braves in 1991.

In 1991, while playing with the New York Yankees, he became the first athlete ever to hit a home run and score a touchdown in the same week!

As a Brave last year, Deion had a .304 batting average, with 54 runs, 8 doubles, 14 triples and 8 home runs. He had a 14-game hitting streak and helped the team win the National League championship.

Deion, who has a daughter, was on the baseball, football and track teams in college.

Comma

The busy comma is useful because
It tells us when we want to pause.
The comma has many uses, it is true,
But we will give you only a few.
Use a comma, please, please, please,
When listing things in a series!

EXAMPLE

Alpha Betty saw trees, flowers, plants and bugs.

Rookie cooks cakes candy muffins and bread.

(If you use the word "and," you don't need the comma.)

Always use a comma, my dear,
Between the date and the year!

EXAMPLE

May 23, 1965

Oct. 24 1929

The comma is also great,
Between a city and a state.

EXAMPLE

Richmond, Va.

Dallas Texas

Use a comma at the beginning and end,
When writing a letter to a friend.

EXAMPLE

Dear Sue,	Dear Betty
Love,	Love
Sam	Dick

There are other marks, too.
Here is a list for you!

: Colon	( ) Parentheses

from The Mini Page by Betty Debnam © 1993 Universal Press Syndicate

Apostrophe

An apostrophe hangs up there,
See it floating in the air!
This is an important apostrophe tip,
Use one and an "s" to show ownership.

Note: A noun is a word used to name a person, place or thing. Some nouns are singular, or name only one. Some nouns are plural and name more than one.

- To show ownership when one person, place or thing owns something, add an 's.

EXAMPLE

a girl's dress

a boys shirt

- To show ownership when more than one person, place or thing own something, add the ' after the s.

EXAMPLE

the girls' cat

the boys dog

- To show ownership when a word all by itself means more than one, add the 's.

EXAMPLE

the children's faces

the womens children

A contraction is two words put together,
Made shorter by leaving out a letter.
Use the up-in-the-air apostrophe,
To show where the letter used to be!

EXAMPLE

Cannot — can't do not — don t

Quotation marks

Quotation marks are the best way,
To give credit for what we say!

EXAMPLE

She said, "I will not go."

Bill said We are here

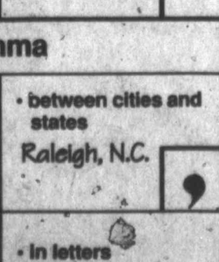

- What someone says is set off from the rest of the sentence by commas.
- Commas and periods are always inside the closing quotation marks.

Capital letters

While capital letters are not punctuation marks, they are an important key to clear writing.

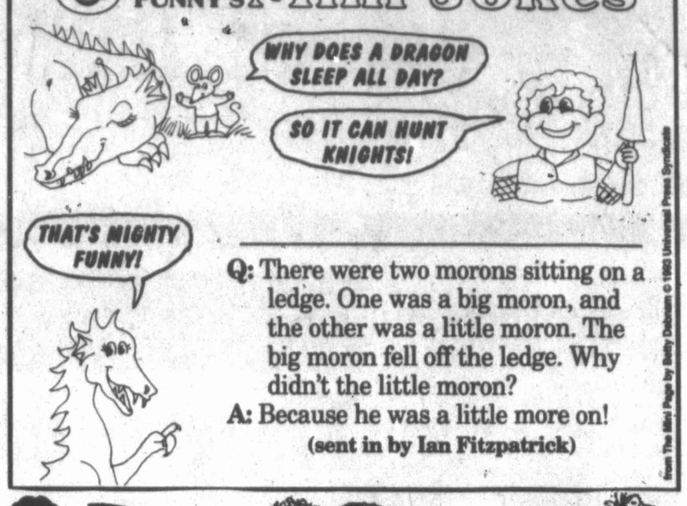

It is important and you had better,
Begin each sentence with a capital letter.
You certainly would get the blame,
If you forgot to capitalize a name!

GO ON A PUNCTUATION MARK HUNT. CIRCLE THEM IN YOUR MINI PAGE AND LOCAL PAPER. WHY NOT HAVE A RACE WITH A PARTNER TO SEE WHO CAN FIND THE MOST!

NFL cuts: Don't count some players out

By The Associated Press

As quickly as NFL teams cut their rosters, they start building them up again.

After paring down from 60 to 47 players on Monday, teams started at noon today to rebuild their rosters. In many cases, the players they add will be the same players they cut on Monday.

Or as safety Bill Bates of Dallas said Monday after being told he was getting a 24-hour pass: "It just gives me a day to play golf."

It was a strange day — the first "final" cut under the new labor contract, which allows players with more than four NFL seasons to become free agents without going through waivers.

Despite protests by the likes of Buffalo coach Marv Levy that it could hurt the good teams, it seems designed to preserve the status quo. Like Bates, few veterans seemed inclined to negotiate new contracts with new teams in new locales.

For Example:

The Washington Redskins cut seven veterans, including their only punter, Kelly Goodburn. But general manager Charley Casserly said six would be re-signed today and the seventh would probably come back next week.

The biggest waves were made by Dan Reeves, the new coach of the New York Giants. He did what Casserly did — dumped a group of veterans for recall — but he also waived talented linebacker Pepper Johnson, primarily because he didn't like Johnson's ego.

"You have someone who is physically talented, but he could care less about your football team and he is more worried about himself," Reeves said last week, without making specific reference to the often disgruntled Johnson.

"Is he going to be better for you in the long run than someone who has a little less physical ability, but really is a team guy who wants to do whatever it takes."

On Monday, after cutting two other starters from last year, defensive end Eric Dorsey and strong safety Lamar McGriggs, Reeves said:

"In order to move forward, we have to make some of these type decisions."

Another of these type decisions was made by Al Davis of the Los Angeles Raiders, who has always prided himself on picking up troubled players.

This time he got rid of one — quarterback Todd Marinovich, on whom the Raiders used their first-round draft pick just two years ago. Marinovich has had problems with drugs both before and after entering the NFL.

He also didn't shine on the field.

He completed 49 percent of his passes with five touchdowns and nine interceptions last year.

This year, he fell to fourth string behind Jeff Hostetler, 37-year-old Vince Evans and rookie Billy Joe Hobert. His father, Marv Marinovich, was a one-time Raiders assistant, a close friend of Davis, and had groomed his son from birth to play quarterback in the NFL.

Cowboys may bring Millen back

By The Associated Press

IRVING — Will Hugh Millen be back?

Coach Jimmy Johnson cut Millen and several other players on Monday, but said several released players would be brought back today, when NFL teams can expand their rosters to the final 53 players.

Millen, who signed a one-year $1 million contract with the Dallas Cowboys as quarterback insurance, was cut along with special teams star Bill Bates, fullback Tommie Agee and deep snapper center Dale Hellestrae.

"We'll bring back at least a half dozen. I'm confident some of our veterans will be back with us," Johnson said Monday.

The Cowboys cut to 45 Monday so they could look over the NFL cut list and perhaps help their tight end depth.

Johnson said "there is a possibility" the Cowboys would bring back Millen, who was beaten out for the second-string quarterback job by Jason Garrett.

"Jason Garrett just outperformed him. We'll have to see," Johnson said.

Millen completed 59 per cent of his passes and had two touchdowns and four interceptions.

Lady Steers place at Odessa tourney

Big Spring High School's freshmen, junior varsity and varsity volleyball squads played at the 16-team Ector County tournament Friday and Saturday.

The varsity team finished third in pool play and was eliminated in consolation play by Water Valley, a team that beat Big Spring in the season opener Aug. 19. Water Valley won 51-13, 16-14.

Kathy Smith had a strong tournament for the Lady Steers.

The JV team was fourth in pool play. Molly Smith and Natalie Newsom played well, but the Steers bowed out of the tournament with a 17-15, 15-13 loss to Lubbock Monterey.

The freshmen finished third in pool play and reached the consolation semifinals before a 10-15, 15-10, 15-10 loss to Midland Lee. Brandi Scott and Mandy Morrow had strong tournaments for the Lady Steers.

The JV and varsity are playing today in Midland, then the varsity goes to the Seminole Tournament on Friday and Saturday.

All three squads return to Steer Gym next Tuesday against Greenwood.

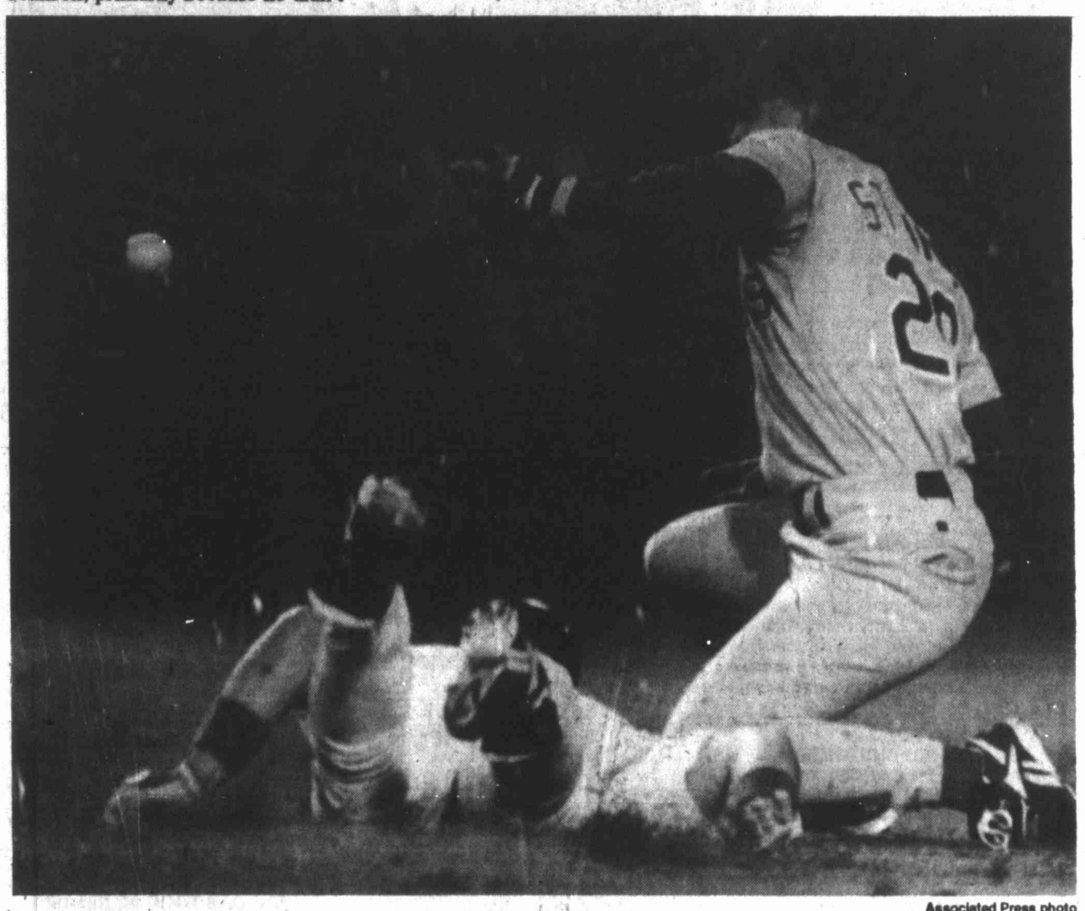

Big Spring soccer is ready for action

The Big Spring Youth Soccer Association has begun registering players for the fall season and will continue until Saturday.

Registration forms are available at the Big Spring YMCA. The cost is $15 per player.

Leagues are for boys and girls ges 4-11, but there will also be two under-14 teams, one for boys and one for girls.

For more information, call Josh at 267-8513.

Viola in tune as Sox down Texas

By The Associated Press

Boston's switch to a four-man rotation worked. Frank Viola won his fifth straight decision as the Red Sox beat Texas 7-3.

Reacting to a six-game losing streak that Viola ended last Thursday at Arlington, Boston manager Butch Hobson decided to use four starters in hopes of getting back into the AL East race. Viola (10-8) is the first of the four to pitch on three days rest, beating Kevin Brown (10-11) for the second time in five days.

Boston remained 5 1/2 games behind Toronto.

The Red Sox increased a 1-0 lead to 5-0 in the fifth with the help of Brown's balk, third baseman Jeff Huson's error and Scott Cooper's two-run double.

Elsewhere in the AL, it was Chicago 4, Minnesota 1; Milwaukee 2, Kansas City 1; and Detroit 13, Seattle 2.

Blue Jays 4
Athletics 2

Who says you can't go home again? Rickey Henderson actually did — twice — in his first visit to the Oakland Coliseum since being traded by the Athletics.

"Coming back here, I had a good time," said Henderson, who hit his 18th homer of the season and scored two runs to help the Toronto Blue Jays beat Oakland 4-2 on Monday night.

With the victory, the Blue Jays broke a tie with the idle New York Yankees for first place in the AL East.

White Sox 4
Twins 1

Alex Fernandez pitched seven innings of three-hit ball as Chicago continued its domination of Minnesota.

The White Sox, beating the Twins for the 10th time in 13 meetings this season, improved their lead in the AL West to 5 1/2 games over Texas.

Fernandez (16-6) won for the fourth time in five starts. Roberto Hernandez pitched the ninth for Chicago to record his 30th save in his 34th attempt.

Robin Ventura drove in two runs with a single and sacrifice fly as Scott Erickson (8-16) lost for the sixth time in eight starts.

The losses by Texas and Kansas City "is just that much of an extra bonus," Ventura said.

Brewers 2
Royals 1

Cal Eldred pitched a four-hitter and John Jaha doubled home the winning run in the ninth to lead Milwaukee over visiting Kansas City.

With one out in the ninth, Kevin Reimer singled off the glove of first baseman Wally Joyner. Darryl Hamilton ran for Reimer and Jaha hit a line drive off Tom Gordon (8-6).

The ball skidded past shortstop Greg Gagne into shallow left. Hamilton came around from first, beating the throw to the plate.

Eldred (15-12) took a two-hit shutout into the ninth before allowing Joyner's one-out home run, his 14th, which tied it 1-1.

Tigers 13
Mariners 2

Bill Gullickson won his sixth straight start and improved his career record against Seattle to 10-0 as Detroit beat the Mariners.

Benzinger powers Giants past Florida; Astros fall to Mets

By The Associated Press

The San Francisco Giants have a little momentum going into Atlanta, thanks to Todd Benzinger.

Benzinger hit home runs from both sides of the plate and Scott Sanderson pitched six strong innings Monday night to help San Francisco beat Florida 5-1 at Joe Robbie Stadium.

The NL West leaders increased their margin over the idle Braves to 4 1/2 games going into a three-game series beginning tonight. The Braves swept a three-game series in San Francisco last week.

Benzinger, filling in for the injured Will Clark at first base, hit a solo homer left-handed against Jack Armstrong (7-14) and hit a two-run shot right-handed against Rich Rodriguez.

"Todd has done a great job for us all season when Will was hurt," manager Dusty Baker said.

Benzinger has four home runs this season, including three in the past two games — both San Francisco victories.

"I can't imagine feeling any better at the plate than I do now," he said. "But I'll have to keep my cool and not try to hit two home runs in every game. It won't happen again this season."

Sanderson allowed six hits, no walks and one run to improve to 2-1 since being acquired by San Francisco on Aug. 3. Rod Beck pitched the ninth inning.

"I'm feeling more comfortable every time I'm out there," Sanderson said. "With a team like this, all you have to do is keep them in the game. That's what I'm trying to do."

Greg Maddux (15-9) will open the series for the Braves tonight against Bill Swift (17-6).

Elsewhere Monday, it was Chicago 10, Philadelphia 6 in 11 innings; New York 5, Houston 4; Cincinnati 10, St. Louis 3; and Montreal 6, Colorado 1.

Mets 5
Astros 4

Bobby Bonilla hit his 30th homer and Joe Orsulak's leadoff home run in the eighth inning off Xavier Hernandez (3-4) broke a 4-4 tie as New York sent visiting Houston to its fifth straight loss.

Mike Maddux (3-6) was the winner.

Cubs 10
Phillies 6

Rick Wilkins' grand slam with two outs in the 11th inning powered Chicago over first-place Philadelphia at Veterans Stadium. The Phils lead Montreal by 9 1/2 in the East.

Loser Roger Mason (4-11) struck out the first two batters in the 11th before Mark Grace, who earlier had a pair of run-scoring doubles, walked for the third time. Derrick May singled off of first baseman John Kruk's glove, and Sammy Sosa walked to load the bases before Wilkins hit his 25th homer.

Dan Plesac (2-1) pitched one inning for the victory in a game delayed by rain for one hour in the fourth inning.

Reds 10
Cardinals 3

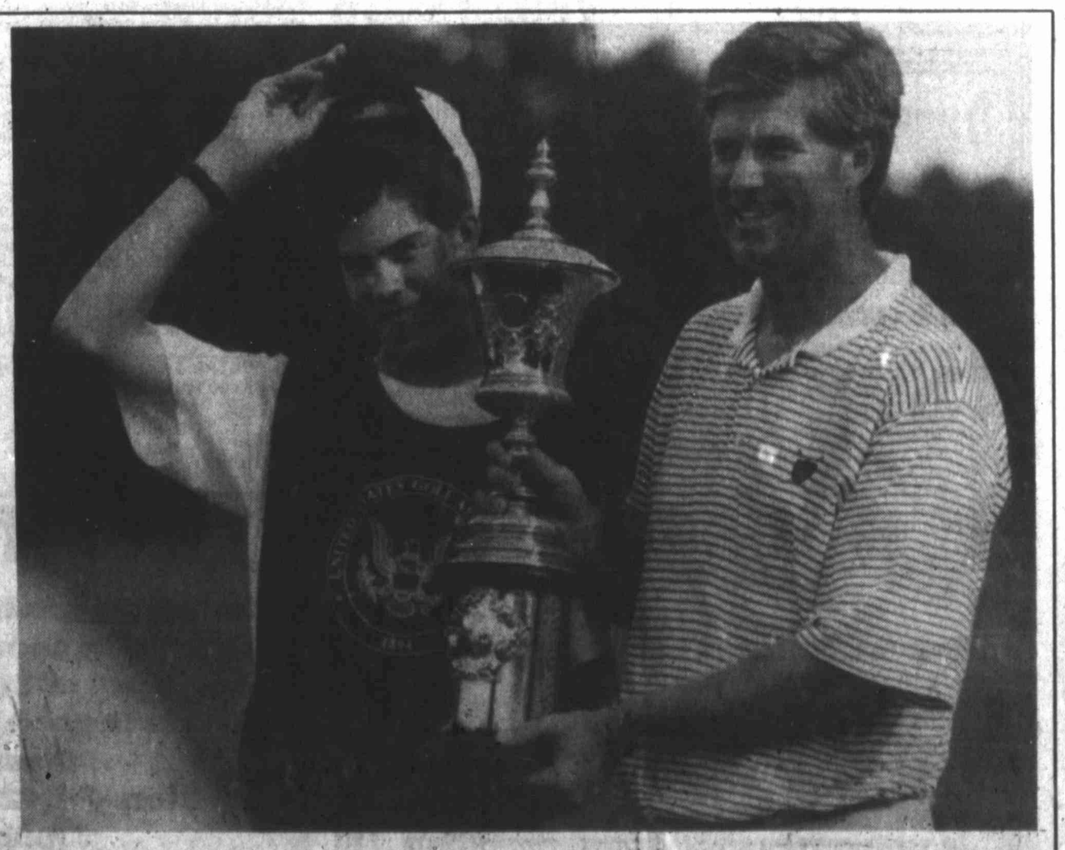

Thomas Howard hit a two-run homer off Rene Arocha (10-5) and singled twice, and Jose Rijo survived a shaky start as Cincinnati beat St. Louis at Busch Stadium. The fading Cardinals have lost eight of 10 games.

Rijo (12-7) allowed 10 hits and walked five, but gave up just two runs in six innings. He struck out five to raise his NL-leading total to 189.

Expos 6
Rockies 1

Jeff Fassero (10-3) pitched four-hit ball for 7 2-3 innings as Montreal beat Colorado. The Rockies set a single-season NL attendance record with a total of 3,617,863, breaking the previous mark of the Los Angeles Dodgers in 1982.

Darrin Fletcher drove in three runs for the Expos, who have won five straight games. Mo Sanford (1-2) was the losing pitcher, allowing four runs in 3 2-3 innings.

Public Notice

Southwestern Bell Telephone Company (SWBT) is asking the Public Utility Commission of Texas (PUC) for approval to offer Caller ID service in Texas. This service includes Calling Number Delivery, Calling Name Delivery and Anonymous Call Rejection (ACR). This service will be deployed statewide on a staggered, city-by-city basis, over a period of years in Texas in association with residence, business single and multiline services, but not PBX, Centrex or Plexar services, where facilities are available. Caller ID is an optional service which allows a subscriber to see date, time, and the phone number (Calling Number Delivery) and/or name associated with the number (Calling Name Delivery) of most direct dialed local calls and some select long distance calls before the telephone is answered. Anonymous Call Rejection is a Caller ID service which permits a subscriber to automatically reject calls from callers who have blocked their number/name. Per-call and per-line blocking will be available when the service is deployed. Detailed information on Caller ID service and how to block will be sent to each customer in their telephone bill during the next few weeks.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in this proceeding should notify the PUC before October 6, 1993. Other parties may seek to also obtain Caller ID service in association with PBX, Centrex and Plexar service. A request to intervene, participate or receive further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Blvd., Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information may also be obtained by calling the PUC Public Information Office at (512) 458-0256 or (512) 458-0221, teletypewriter for the deaf. For information regarding Caller ID service, residence customers should call 1-800-464-7928, and business customers should call 1-800-499-7928.

GREETING:

YOU ARE HEREBY COMMANDED to appear before the Honorable County Court of Howard County, at the Courthouse thereof, in Big Spring, Texas, by filing a written answer at or before 10:00 A.M. of the first Monday after the expiration of ten (10) days from the date of first publication of this Citation, the same being the 31st day of August, 1993, to Guardian's Application to Determine Heirship and an account for final settlement of the Estate of KYOKO M. JONES filed in said Court on March 22, 1988, styled IN THE ESTATE OF KYOKO M. JONES, A PERSON RECEIVING FEDERAL FUNDS.

A brief statement of the nature of this suit is as follows:

A final account by NATIONSBANK OF TEXAS, N.A., formerly doing business as NCNB Texas National Bank, the said NCNB Texas National Bank formerly doing business as First RepublicBank Lubbock, N.A., Guardian of the Estate of KYOKO M. JONES, and a suit brought pursuant to Section 48 of the Probate Code of the State of Texas, as amended, for the determination of heirship of KYOKO M. JONES, deceased, and for the distribution of funds remaining after a final accounting of the guardian in this cause, and after the allowance of all lawful claims for attorney fees and expenses and costs in connection with this proceeding.

If this citation is not served within ninety (90) days after the date of its issuance, it shall be returned unserved.

The officer executing this writ shall promptly serve the same according to requirements of law, and the mandates hereof, and make due return as the law directs.

ISSUED AND GIVEN UNDER MY HAND and the seal of said Court, at Big Spring, Texas, this the 10th day of August, 1993.

ATTEST:
MARGARET RAY, County Clerk
Howard County, Texas
By Wanda Anderson, Deputy
