Action Plan Pledged On Energy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter pledged Wednesday to join forces with Congress in assembling a major new energy package aimed at boosting U.S. fuel production, congressional leaders reported.

Among elements of the package will be new government subsidies for coal-derived fuels and legislation expediting the building of new pipelines, according to participants at a White House leadership meeting which focused on energy issues.

The measures will stress production rather than conservation. Carter's past proposals emphasizing conservation — including his standby plan for gasoline rationing — have been soundly rejected by Congress.

"Doing Something"

"This package is saying to the American people that we are doing something," said House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill.

Carter was urged to select a variety of energy-production bills now progressing through Congress as the basis for the new package instead of proposing completely new legislation himself, participants at the meeting told reporters.

A White House official said more discussions would be needed "before there is agreement on any specific legislation."

The official, who asked not to be identified, said Carter believes there is "a feeling in both houses of at least an indication of a working consensus, a realization that action has got to be taken, and we welcome that."

To Stiffen Tax

Meanwhile, Democrats on the House Ways and Means Committee reached informal agreement to stiffen Carter's proposed "windfall-profits" tax on oil revenues. However, the Democrats did not decide how the tightening should be done.

The committee begins work today on the proposed tax, which is designed to take away some of the windfall revenues that will flow to the oil companies as a result of Carter's decision to gradually remove federal controls from oil prices.

In a session described by O'Neill as "somber," the president and the congressional leadership reportedly agreed

Narcotics Testimony Heard By Grand Jury

By KAY BELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A FEDERAL grand jury investigating widespread narcotic trafficking on the South Plains is expected to continue taking testimony today.

The panel began its probe into alleged cocaine distribution in early May. About two weeks later, the grand jury recessed without taking any action and resumed its deliberations Monday.

More Than 50 Subpeonaed

More than 50 persons, including members of prominent Lubbock families, have been subpeonaed to testify before the federal panel.

The grand jury was prompted by an extensive Department of Public Safety and Drug Enforcement Administration undercover investigation, which included ground and air surveillance and the use of listening devices.

However, federal officials have refused comment on the jury and the method in which it is being conducted has given rise to much speculation.

Persons whose cases are being considered by a state grand jury usually are arrested and charged with an offense before the panel meets. A federal grand jury, however, most often considers evidence in a case before returning any indictments.

Such is the case with the federal panel here, and because of that, names of suspects in the narcotic trafficking operation have not been released.

In such instances, the federal panel returns sealed indictments, which do not reveal the identity of the person, upon its completion. Following the indictment, federal charges are filed and the suspect arrested.

Because of this procedure, not all persons subpeonaed to appear before the federal grand jury can be considered suspects in the investigation.

U.S. Attorney David Bass is presenting evidence to the federal grand jury. He has refused to comment on when the panel will complete its investigation.

A Lubbock County grand jury also convened Monday and reportedly also is considering numerous durg cases. The county panel is expected to return indictments today.

Senate Asserts Treaty Power

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a rebuke to President Carter, the Senate passed a resolution Wednesday that says its members must give their approval before the United States can terminate a mutual defense treaty with another nation.

That 59-35 vote coupled with a federal court decision Wednesday raised the possibility, critics claimed, that Carter's decision to end a defense pact with Taiwan next year can be successfully challenged.

U.S. District Judge Oliver Gasch earlier Wednesday dismissed a suit by 23 current members of Congress and one former member seeking to stop the president's action.

Gasch said that the controversy was "not yet ripe" for a legal decision on whether Carter's action was constitutional. But he said it will be if the Senate asserts its right to a voice in terminating treaties.

The Senate almost immediately obliged, voting that its approval is necessary before a mutual defense treaty with another nation can be terminated.

The action apparently caught the Senate's Democratic leadership off guard. They immediately made an attempt to soften the impact of the resolution. However an effort to exempt Carter's Taiwan decision collapsed after hours of debate. Supporters said they would try again next week.

The sense-of-the-Senate resolution aimed at reversing Carter's unilateral decision to end the Taiwan defense pact is legally non-binding, but it represents a politically embarrassing rebuke to Carter.

Defects In Design Probed In DC-10s

Travel Hit; Foreign Models Banned

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration said Wednesday that the DC-10 might have design defects and suspended the certificate of the troubled plane, grounding all 138 of the jetliners flown by U.S. carriers.

The agency also banned all foreign-operated DC-10s from flying in U.S. airspace. The FAA said foreign-owned DC-10s now on U.S. soil will be allowed to take off for an overseas destination, but they cannot carry passengers or cargo.

At Least One Week

FAA chief Langhorne M. Bond said the planes would remain on the ground until McDonnell Douglas Corp., the DC-10 manufacturer, proves the aircraft is safe. He said that would take at least a week and perhaps longer.

"It's going to be some time," Bond told a news conference. "I can't make a

It was the fourth time in a week that all or some of the DC-10s had been grounded in the aftermath of the May 25 crash of one of the big jets in Chicago. The American Airlines plane crashed and burned after an engine fell off during takeoff, killing 275 persons in the nation's worst aviation disaster.

New Cracks Found

The FAA grounded the jetliners Wednesday after fresh hairline cracks were found in the engine mounts of two of the big jets that had been inspected and cleared during one of the earlier groundings. The cracks were in the same area where a ten-inch crack was discovered on the jet that went down in Chicago.

The order was issued by Bond, who was informed of the new cracks while in London for a meeting with British aviation officials. He flew back to Washington immediately.

"Our team turned up a possible design problem in the aft rear bulkhead of the DC-10 engine mounting," he said. "I had no choice but to ground them.

"The consequences of this decision are very grave," Bond said. "It will affect every carrier flying DC-10s, the manufacturer and the traveling public. It was a very weighty, costly decision. I did not make it lightly, but my concern is safety and I don't think I could've taken any other course."

The new grounding came in the form of an emergency suspension of the DC-10's design certificate, which is required before the FAA certifies that an aircraft model is airworthy. Bond said that while the order covered the design of the entire plane, "we're concerned with the engine pylon assembly only."

He said FAA investigators are concerned about the "failsafe quality" of the aft bulkhead mounting, one of the points where the engine attaches to the wing. He said there might be a design deficiency in that section. Asked how such a deficiency might slip by FAA inspection, Bond replied, "If our suspicions are correct, it got through the process somehow. That's what we've got to figure out."

FAA spokesman Dennis Feldman said that when a manufacturer builds a new-model plane, it must conform to specifications, design, materials, testing and other criteria set by the FAA before it can market the aircraft.

He said the agency had approved certification of the DC-10 based on data submitted by McDonnell Douglas stating that the company had complied with the criteria.

"We accepted their reports," he said. "We don't know now whether the original data was proper."

In Long Beach, Calif., McDonnell Douglas called the latest FAA action "extreme and unwarranted." Spokesman Ray Towne said, "We are exploring every legal angle, including the possibility of going to court."

"McDonnell Douglas reaffirms its faith in the integrity of the DC-10 design," the plane maker said in a statement. "The company is making every effort to assure a prompt return to service

DISAPPEARED IN 1977

'Dead' Airman Alive Near Galveston

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — An Air Force sergeant, declared legally dead after mysteriously disappearing in 1977 from the service station where he moonlighted, is living near Galveston, authorities said Wednesday.

Staff Sgt. Wilmer W. Higgs Jr., who had been in the Air Force 12 years, disappeared New Year's Eve after what police thought had been a robbery-murder at the station.

Higgs faces theft charges and will be classifid as a deserter if he is indeed alive, San Antonio police and Lackland Air Force Base officials said.

Military officials must also determine if fraud was involved in connection with the undetermined amount of death benefits his wife later received.

Higgs was discovered missing from an all-night North Side Exxon station he manned alone. Some blood was spattered in the office and police said about $120 was missing from the cash register.

Higgs' car was later found partially submerged in the San Antonio River south of the city. The keys were in the ignition and the car had obviously been pushed or driven into about four feet of water, police said then. Officers said there was evidence of a struggle.

Higgs, a marksmanship instructor who police at the time said had a "good service record," was the subject of a statewide search. Exxon offered a $1,000 reward and dozens of Higgs' fellow airmen combed the brush around the area for Higgs' body. No body was found and on Jan. 20, 1978, the Air Force declared Higgs "officially deceased."

"Since then, both the robbery and homicide divisions have been investigating what the hell happened to him," said Police Lt. Virgil Roberson, who believes Higgs orchestrated his own disappearance.

"I have information that he is alive. The next step is to file theft charges against for the money missing from the gas station," said Roberson. He said the station owner will decide if he still wants to press charges.

"There is no question at all in my mind, from what we have determined, that Higgs is alive. I'm convinced of it," said the FBI agent who began the

Weather, Disease Hurt Cotton

By DUANE HOWELL
Avalanche-Journal Farm Editor

A PERIOD of "moderate weather" is needed to facilitate progress of a High Plains cotton crop hit by seedling disease and slow development on a major acreage, agricultural officials said Wednesday.

Estimates, described as "highly tentative," indicate that cotton on approximately 1 million or more acres has become infected with a seedling disease complex which threatens farmers with a significant reduction or loss of stands.

Cotton on another 1 million acres, although less vulnerable, "isn't in good condition," industry sources said.

Farmers in the 25-county Lubbock area were expected to plant 4.4 million to 4.5 million acres of cotton, up slightly from more than 4 million last year.

How much stands may be reduced could hinge on weather conditions during the next few days, agricultural officials said. A partial stand loss, depending upon the number of plants surviving, could be tolerated, they said.

Growing Weather Sparse

The seedling disease, often present in varying degrees early in the season, became established last month during wet, cool weather, which also retarded development of healthier plants. Most cotton has had only brief interludes of "good growing weather" since it was planted.

"What we need is a gradual return to open weather," said Dr. L. L. Ray, cotton scientist at the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station at Lubbock. "If it turns off hot all of a sudden, we will lose a lot of this cotton."

Ray said the crop as a whole is a week to 10 days late and "extremely variable." The crop in some southern areas is as much as two to three weeks later than farmers like.

This means, Ray said, that temperatures and weather conditions "will be especially critical" in late August and in September and October. That is a key period for fiber development in the bolls.

Good Crop Possible

"We still have possibilities of making a real good crop," Ray said, "but the probabilities of doing that are decreasing as we get later with this cotton."

A week or so of favorable weather, however, could bring a much improved complexion to the crop picture, he added.

The uncertain, variable crop conditions are reflected in Hockley County, where cotton probably is a little more advanced than in much of the area.

"Our crop is in about every kind of shape imaginable," said Hockley County Agent Bill Taylor of Levelland. "Some is looking pretty good, some isn't planted, some is dying from seedling disease, and some didn't make it up to a stand."

Taylor estimated that about 75 percent of the crop is up to an acceptable stand but emphasized that "there is no guarantee this will be maintained." He said another 15 percent has a weak stand and probably will be replanted and still another 10 percent is yet to be planted.

Hinging On Weather

The crop situation, he said, "is all up in the air right now. We could wind up with a whole bunch of this cotton too thin to leave or we could still be in pretty good shape on a lot of it at the end of the week — just depending on what the weather does."

Taylor said an abrupt shift to high temperatures — such as to above 90 degrees — in combination with low humidity of around 10 percent, intense sunshine and some wind could result in weakened cotton plants "dying like flies."

"We have a lot of fields where there is no way that one of every four stalks can live — the root has rotted off it," Taylor said. "Of the three remaining stalks, maybe one is questionable and two may have a pretty good chance."

Taylor said virtually all the crop has at least some seedling disease. But the percentage that might have to be replanted, he said, "depends entirely on the weather."

Mackey Leads Pack For MSU President

By RUTHANNE BROCKWAY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

AT LEAST six of the eight Michigan State University trustees cast votes for Texas Tech president Cecil Mackey during balloting Wednesday night on a new MSU president, inside sources told The Avalanche-Journal.

Earlier Wednesday, Mackey received the unanimous approval of the 17 members of the advisory selection committee at MSU, the A-J learned.

The official announcement naming Mackey as president of MSU is expected at a news conference in East Lansing this morning.

Salary Hike Reported

Sources also told the A-J that although MSU's acting president now earns $67,500, a salary of $75,000 is being considered for Mackey, whose Tech salary is $63,000.

Some Lansing residents were surprised to hear that the president of a West Texas university half the size of MSU would be chosen over a long list of candidates from bigger schools in Minnesota, Ohio, Kansas, Nebraska and other states.

But insiders say it is Mackey's varied background that makes him such an attractive candidate to the MSU board, which reportedly is split into two factions.

The trustees, who are elected at-large (rather than appointed by the governor as is the case in Texas) are divided in their viewpoint of what kind of president MSU needs.

One reason why the selection process has taken more than 19 months is because one group of trustees wants a scholarly president with an impressive academic background, while other board members want a businessman with experience in budget and financial matters to woo money from the state legislature and alumni.

Sen. E.L. Short of Tahoka told the A-J that Mackey certainly fills the bill for a president who works well with legislators.

"I've never known a person more articulate and able to communicate directly with legislative committee members than Dr. Mackey," Short said. "Committee members have privately told me that he does a more commendable job than any other university president (in the state).

"I have to really commend Dr. Mackey for his detailed knowledge of the structure of a university," Short continued.

"When it comes down to the legislature, it comes down to budgetary matters. Dr. Mackey is very knowledgeable.

Oz's Woodman Jack Haley Dies At 79

HOLLYWOOD(AP) — Jack Haley, who charmed millions as the Tin Woodman in the film classic "The Wizard of Oz," died Wednesday at UCLA Medical Center following a heart attack, the hospital said. He was 79.

Hospital spokeswoman Bonnie Whitham said Haley, who entered the hospital last Saturday after a heart attack, never recovered. He lapsed into critical condition on Monday and died at 3:04 p.m. CDT Wednesday.

As an actor and song and dance man, Haley starred in vaudeville, Broadway musicals and 50 films, but he remained most famous for his performance as the Tin Woodman in the 1939 movie. His last public appearance was April 9 at the Academy awards, when he joined with Ray Bolger, the Scarecrow in "The Wizard of Oz," to present an Oscar. The telecast was produced by Jack Haley Jr.

In New York, Margaret Hamilton, who played the wicked witch, said, "He was ... one of the dearest men I think I've ever known, fun always, and so helpful in every way, and I was very, very fond of him."

"He was always very cooperative and very gentle and I never heard him say anything unkind about anybody. He was just a very, very nice person."

The younger Haley also directed "Norwood," a 1972 movie which was the last in which his father appeared. In recent years, Haley Sr. had devoted himself to real estate development, charity organizations and to the American Guild

Warm Trend To Continue Across Area Today

The warming trend that followed heavy rains across the South Plains Tuesday is expected to intensify today as afternoon temperatures soar into the upper 90s and drop only to just below 70 tonight.

Temperatures that have remained unseasonably cool since the begining of June moved into the 80-degree range on Tuesday and then stretched to 86 by late Wednesday as a 20 percent chance for rain continued for the evening hours.

Wednesday's clear to fair skies, however, should become partly cloudy today as a cool front begins pushing into the Lubbock area.

Forecasters expect the front to reach the Lubbock vicinity by Friday, holding temperatures in the middle 80s.

A few showers and thunderstorms may return to the southern portions of West Texas during the weekend as another warming trend pushes temperatures to near 90 by Monday. Overnight lows should range in the 60s.

South to southwesterly winds are expected to continue drying saturated soils in the area through Friday.

Warm unstable air dominated much of the state and was triggering scattered showers and thunderstorms in much of east and southeast Texas. Temperature extremes at 4 p.m. ranged from Laredo's 95 to Amarillo's 78.

High Court Upholds Decision On Knorpp

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court agreed Wednesday with Potter County Attorney Kerry Knorpp that he cannot be removed from office on misconduct charges arising from a prior term in office.

The state alleged Knorpp on 24 occasions between Nov. 17, 1974, and April 21, 1976, deposited in his own bank account unused portions of money he had requisitioned for public projects.

Knorpp relied in his defense on the statute that says, "No officer in this state shall be removed from office for any act he may have committed prior to his election to office."

Knorpp was re-elected Nov. 2, 1976, and he contended the law barred his removal from office for acts he allegedly committed during his prior term.

The state said the law was tied to the "doctrine of forgiveness." It argued Knorpp had to show the acts charged to have been committed by him before his re-election were known to the electorate and were sanctioned or forgiven by them at the time of his re-election.

The trial court refused to accept Knorpp's plea that the law barred his prosecution and submitted the 24 alleged acts of official misconduct to the jury. The jury rejected all 24 allegations.

Floods Add To Wichitans' Woes

A-J News Services

Heavy rains, flash flooding and twisters created new miseries Wednesday for the tornado-ravaged Wichita Falls area and other parts of North Texas. There was one weather-related death in Central Texas.

Many Wichita Falls residents, still recovering from killer tornadoes that devastated the city April 10, may be forced to relocate after Tuesday night's flooding.

Three creeks, overflowing their banks after five inches of downpour, spilled into several residential areas rebuilding from tornado damage.

"I'm getting out. You can thank the Wichita Falls City Council for this," said Hope Cargal, surveying the damage to her home.

Miss Cargal pushed for a capital improvements bond program that would improve area creeks and prevent flooding. But city officials turned thumbs down on the plan's estimated $30-$40 million price tag.

The National Weather Service said the Wichita River had crested less than one foot above flood stage. But local residents were warned not to return to their homes until the river recedes.

Elsewhere across Texas, residents living adjacent to the Sabine, Neches, Trinity, San Jacinto, Brazos and Sulphur rivers also were warned to watch for flood conditions over the next several days.

Tornadoes touching down in Throckmorton, Montague and Jack counties around 6 p.m. Wednesday prompted weather officials to post tornado warnings for persons in those counties until 8 p.m. Nearby Archer and Clay counties also were included in the warning.

A tornado touching down about 4½ miles south of Throckmorton at 5:35 p.m. reportedly caused some damage in the area as it moved north-northeast toward Olney.

A twister was reported about five miles east of Palestine late Wednesday morning, putting Anderson and Cherokee counties of North Texas under a tornado warning. However, no heavy damage was reported.

A 53-year-old man died early Wednesday when high flood waters washed an automobile into a creek near LaGrange, the Department of Public Safety said.

The body of Willie Monroe of Oakland was recovered near FM 155 after flood waters swept the vehicle into a raging creek at 3:45 a.m.

The driver, identified as Alvin L. White of Belton, escaped injury.

Washington County residents were warned to be on the lookout for rising water through Wednesday after flooding in some portions of Southeast Texas tied up traffic on Brenham streets. Thunderstorms also were scattered from the Houston-Galveston area to Angleton.

Mid-afternoon highs in the Lubbock area Wednesday were mostly in the middle to high 80s. Winds were blowing mostly from the east and south at 5-20 mph.

The forecast called for partly cloudy skies with a chance of showers and thundershowers prevailing statewide. Flash flood watches remained effective for Southeast Texas and the lower Rio Grande Valley.

February-April Rainfall Climbed Above Normal

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Texas' dry-as-a-bone image had already taken a bath in higher than usual rainfall amounts before the heavy deluges of May and early June left their soggy mark.

A large number of big, slow moving upper level disturbances combined with moisture from the Gulf of Mexico to drench almost every section of Texas with spring rainfall amounts 20 percent to 50 percent higher than usual, said Kenneth Brundidge, head of meteorology at Texas A&M.

"This produces the instability that triggers the rain. We don't know why there are more of these slow-moving upper level disturbances, but they're the cause of the precipitation," said Brundidge.

Before the May rains, which pelted some areas with as much as 10 inches of rain, only two of the 15 weather reporting regions showed less than normal rainfall for February throuh April. And the state climatologist's office said most stations reported readings at least 20 percent higher.

And those percentages should float significantly higher when May and early June rains, which flooded some areas of the state, are calculated with the rest.

The National Weather Service forecast for next week indicates all of Texas and a slice of the United States extending from the Rio Grande to Maine and south to Georgia should continue to receive above normal rain.

Heavy downpours last month ranged from 1.5 inches in South Texas to 10.1 inches in Southeast Texas and are sure to boost current figures above average. But any long summertime dry spells could erase 'The Flood of '79' from the record books before it even finds a place, say the weathermen here.

During the last week of May and first week of June, several stations in Texas reported heavy rainfall totals including 9.1 inches at College Station, 8.8 at Valley Junction in East Texas; 8.2 inches at Smithville in Bastrop County and 7.7 inches at Georgetown north of Austin.

Data from the state Climatologist's Office shows last week's rainfall in East Texas was 3 to 4 inches above normal and 2 inches over normal totals in Central Texas.

Other unusually high totals for the May 21-June 4 period included 5 inches for Floydada, 4.8 in Lubbock, 4.4 for Matador, 6.8 inches at Bridgeport, 5.4 in Waco, 5.6 for Longview, 6.7 in Tyler, 5.3 for Wink, 3.3 in Alpine, 1.4 inches at Pecos, 6.2 in Austin, 5.2 at Columbus, 6.8 for Beaumont, 6.6 for Richmond and 7.2 inches at Wharton.

Exiled Nicaraguan Leader Says U.S. Supporting Somoza Regime

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — President Anastasio Somoza declared a state of siege Wednesday to help his government break a general strike and put down the spreading insurrection led by Sandinista guerrillas.

Heavy fighting raged in Leon, 54 miles northwest of Managua, and there were reports of continued battles in the south — near the Costa Rican border and in a half-dozen cities.

To the north, neighboring Honduras said its army raided and broke up a clandestine Sandinista guerrilla training camp near El Triunfo, 95 miles south of Tegucigalpa, near the Nicaraguan border.

An army spokesman said six soldiers were wounded in a battle that lastedseveral hours. He said about 80 guerrillas were arrested and 60 fled across the border into Nicaragua.

Somoza told The Associated Press in a telephone interview that the state of siege, a form of martial law, would enable the national guard to arrest people without warrants and hold them longer than the constitutionally mandated 24 hours.

He said domestic news media would be restricted and the movement of persons in the countryside controlled.

Military sources said reservists were being called up to active duty and ordered to Managua's National Stadium for processing, but the guard declined to elaborate.

Rodolfo Abaunza Salinas, editor of the Leon newspaper El Centroamericano, said by telephone at least 400 Sandinista National Liberation Front guerrillas, both men and women, controlled the city and the airport after three days of fighting. There were no reports here on Leon casualties.

"The guard was rocketing and strafing Leon," Abaunza said. "On Tuesday I counted at least 60 rockets fired by national guard airplanes."

(Journalists returning from Leon Tuesday said they saw a guard column of trucks loaded with heavily armed troops, escorted by two armored cars and a Sherman tank, approach the city.

But Abaunza said the column was having difficulty Wednesday penetrating to the city center, where witnesses said the rebels had soldiers pinned down in a guard garrison.

Heavy fighting was also reported in the southern cities of Matagalpa, Jinotepe, Diriamba and Chichigalpa, where at least 30 persons had been reported killed in earlier fighting.

The national guard said its forces "continue with sweeping success in the rebuff of the international brigade of communist mercenaries." Most battle areas have been closed to journalists seeking to verify claims by each side.

Few vehicles were on the street and there was little activity in the city's usually bustling markets. Most businesses, except those linked with the government, were closed.

Somoza said in the interview that the state of siege was needed because neighboring Costa Rica "has not been able to close their border, where they are resupplying and reinforcing the invasion we have been able to contain." He also accused Panama of aiding the rebels.

Costa Rica and Panama have denied they are aiding the Sandinistas in any way. Somoza last week said he might declare war on Costa Rica.

On Wednesday, Somoza denied he was about to declare war on Nicaragua's small southern neighbor. In a related development, Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo issued a statement warning that his country "will use every means within international law to prevent or check any act of aggression against Costa Rica."

The statement added Mexico was worried "by the Nicaraguan government's threats to extend war operations in Costa Rican territory."

Mexico broke diplomatic relations with Nicaragua last month because of what Lopez Portillo called a "horrendous genocide" being carried out by Somoza's 10,000-man national guard in putting down the guerrilla insurrection. Costa Rica broke relations with Somoza in November.

Somoza imposed a state of siege in Nicaragua last September during a guerrilla-led national uprising against his regime, but lifted it two months later. The Red Cross estimates more than 3,000 persons have died in fighting since the September rebellion.

Former Lottery Partners Now Involved In Lawsuit

CHICAGO (AP) — What started out as a friendly agreement between two elderly people to split any lottery winnings worked out fine until they turned lucky and came up with a $300,000 winning ticket.

Now, their friendship has turned sour and their little agreement is in the hands of lawyers and the court.

It was back in 1974, Circuit Court documents show, that Maxine Hayes, now 78, and George K. Smith, 88, agreed to buy two Illinois Lottery tickets each week and split whatever money they won.

After only three lottery drawings, they won $1,000 in August 1974 and qualified for the $300,000 Bonanza drawing.

Their luck prevailed and Mrs. Hayes and Smith, a retired salesman who rented a room in the widow's Bedford Park home, captured the grand prize the next month — $300,000, to be paid over 15 years at $20,000 per year.

Their pictures, smiling and chummy, graced the front pages of the newspapers.

Mrs. Hayes picked up the first check, and was recorded as the sole winner. For three years, she paid Smith his share of the winnings: $7,671 after taxes the first year, $7,467 in 1975, $6,695 in 1976 and $6,401 in 1977, said Smith's attorney, Jay Baier.

But in 1978, Baier said, Mrs. Hayes came to Smith, who had since moved to his daughter's house and then to a convalescent home, and asked him to sign an agreement saying the money she paid him was a gift. He refused, and didn't receive any more payments.

Mrs. Hayes' lawyer, Al Becker, will not comment.

Baier contends in his suit the couple had an oral agreement which Mrs. Hayes is bound to keep. He wants his client to get his share of the 1978 payment and whatever money is due him this year. He also wants the lottery records to reflect that Smith and Mrs. Hayes are co-winners.

"The real thing here is she made the bargain and didn't want to live by it," said Baier.

"Two older people go along having a nice relationship getting lucky and winning," he added. "Now, because of her desire to have it all, I think there is a resentment among the people that heard it on TV and in the papers. She can't even spend it all. She's involved in a lawsuit and I think it's scary to her."

Baier says Judge Joseph Wosik promised to rule on the case before Aug. 15, when the 1979 lottery payment is due.

Attorneys will take depositions from the couple in court June 20. He said the case is unusual because although there is no written agreement between the parties, various newspaper and television accounts may have documented their intentions of sharing the money.

RSA Faces Hour Of Travail

THE INFLUENCE scandal, which currently is headline news in South Africa and which has forced the resignation of President John Vorster, comes at a time when the key African nation is seeking to chart a new course at home and abroad.

Unfortunately for the RSA, its current travail won't go away immediately, and worse, will be used by the nation's enemies and critics abroad as a weapon to prove that apartheid and other RSA policies breeds all sorts of evil.

Basically, the scandal revolves around the alleged misuse of government funds in the RSA's information section, and the alleged attempt on the part of high officials, including Vorster, to cover up the acts.

VORSTER WAS prime minister for 12 years and as such was the active head of the government during the period in which the funds purportedly were used for purposes other than those intended.

He stepped down from the largely ceremonial post as president this week after a special 72-page commission report accused him of trying to cover up the multimillion dollar government scandal.

Also implicated in the scandal has been Connie Mulder, Vorster's former influential minister of information, and Eschel Rhoodie, former director of the department, who is reported to be in Europe. Absolved of any wrong-doing by the report were the present Prime Minister, Pieter W. Botha, and the RSA's minister of finance, Owen Horwood.

BASICALLY, THE report by a government-appointed commission headed by Judge Rudolf Erasmus, confirmed a year-long tide of revelations that certain members of the information department sought to operate a worldwide propaganda campaign riddled with political maneuvering, blackmail and cover-up.

It was also alleged that funds were used to start up the newspaper, The Citizen in South Africa, and that such funds may have been used in an attempt to purchase The Washington Star.

THERE IS NO question but that there has been a gross misuse of public confidence as well as some funds in South Africa.

And it is well that the central government in Pretoria and Cape Town is moving rapidly to bring the facts to the public's attention and to take action against those who are responsible. Not only have those involved RSA's laws, but they have put the nation in an embarrassing position at a time when it needs friends and support.

However, to use "infogate," as it is known in South Africa, to beat the white-ruled government over the head about the merits or demerits of apartheid or its stand against further Communist incursions into Southern Africa would also be a miscarriage of justice.

South Africa should be given time to clean its own house. Then be judged on how effective a job it has done.

Politics No Longer Funny

IN A WAY, IT'S a shame that Pat Paulsen isn't running for President again next year. Americans could use a politician who's funny because he's trying to be.

Paulsen, you'll recall, ran for President against incumbent Richard Nixon in 1972. He got 1,272 votes in the New Hampshire primary and says if he'd had $1 million to spend he might have won.

"I'd have made a good President if for no other reason than my lack of knowledge," the comedian told UPI's Vernon Scott.

Sorry, Pat, it's a good theory but Jimmy Carter already has disproved it.

IN DAYS OF YORE, Americans had no trouble laughing with—rather than at—their politicians. It's said, for example, that Abe Lincoln's wit is what carried him to the White House.

In more recent years, though, the candidates have taken themselves so seriously that the campaigns have been mostly humorless—if you don't count the jokes cracked by others about Gerald Ford's clumsiness.

Paulsen would change all that. If he were to run in 1980, he says, it would be as "a common, ordinary, simple savior of America's destiny." Platform planks would be like the one he stands on to cure poverty: "Shoot 400 beggars a week."

It might not get him many votes but it has one virtue the anti-poverty plans of other candidates do not have: The voters can understand it.

Mumble, Mumble

LET'S SEE NOW. The Federal Election Commission, after two and one-half years of footdragging, has finally decided that the Carter Campaign Committee owes the federal treasury $50,202.94.

That's because the FEC couldn't find any justification for the way President Carter's folks spent that portion of the $26 million in taxpayers' money they got for the general election campaign.

But the really ingenious part of this abuse of tax funds is yet to come, if White House Counsel Robert Lipshutz has his way.

He said he may ask the FEC to use taxpayers' funds to reimburse the Treasury for the taxpayers' funds the FEC says shouldn't have been used in the first place.

Oh, well, it makes about as much sense as some of the other recommendations coming out of the White House these days.

M. STANTON EVANS:

Today's 'Health Care Plan For All' Sick

WASHINGTON—Having noticed that the boat is sinking, Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., proposes to drill some holes to let the water out.

Such is the logic of the "Health Care for All Americans Act" unveiled by Kennedy last month. "The American health care system," Kennedy said, "is now strained to the breaking point by runaway costs.

"The issue of cost control must be faced now, and it can only be faced as part of a comprehensive system. The Health Care for All Americans Act represents the best chance to avoid national bankruptcy and to bring spiraling health costs under control."

Of all the reasons Kennedy might have advanced to promote his bill, this emphasis on "controlling costs" is undoubtedly the most bizarre.

While he nowhere alluded to the matter in his statement, the source of "runaway" health care costs is by this time well-known to serious students of the subject:

IT IS THE intervention of the Federal government in the medical economy—in particular, the federal influence in tilting medical reimbursements toward "third-party" payment.

Through the creation of Medicare and Medicaid a dozen years ago, the government unleashed an enormous surge of monetary demand upon what was, in relative terms, a fixed supply—bidding up all the factors of the medical economy.

It also instituted a system of cost-plus reimbursements, in which hospitals and physicians are paid according to their average daily costs of operation and reasonable and customary fees, a complicated way of saying, "to get more, spend more."

Most important, these programs skewed our health care system sharply toward a system in which health care is perceived as free, or nearly so, at the point of consumption—since somebody other than the patient pays the bill.

This "third party" factor, together with existing health insurance programs (also encouraged by Federal policy), means that more than 90 percent of hospital costs are now assumed by someone other than the patient—55 percent of them by government.

The net effect of all of this has been to create a cost explosion in the medical economy, especially in the hospital sector.

With neither patients nor providers concerned about price, the scramble for "quality" care has been intense, with everyone seeking the best technology and most sophisticated treatment.

In the five years preceding adoption of Medicare and Medicaid, physician fees increased at a rate of 2.9 percent annually, hospital charges by 6 percent. In the five years after adoption, the corresponding figures were 6.9 and 14.8 percent.

Most telling of all is the fact that, prior to enactment of Medicare and Medicaid, the hospital price index was actually lower than the Consumer Price Index, taking 1967 as the base year of comparison.

BUT IN THE decade after these proposals went into effect, hospital charges went up 300 percent, while consumer prices generally increased by 75 percent. The problem of "runaway costs," in sum, is strictly a creation of the Federal government.

In the face of all this, what does Sen. Kennedy propose? The answer, in a nutshell, is that he wants us to take every factor that has led to the existing problem and make it worse.

AND, TO MAKE sure he has left nothing out, he also proposes to remove all tests of income eligibility for Medicaid.

The result of all of this would be to fuel a cost explosion in medical care that would make our present problems seem paltry by comparison—a difficulty the senator suggests we can control by instituting what would be, in effect, a system of rationing.

Having perceived that the boat is listing, he blithely proposes to sink it outright.

ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK:

Carter Pushes SALT

NOVAK

WASHINGTON—The born-again Christian's view of the Soviet Union held by Jimmy Carter is coming into the open from behind closed doors of the White House East Room in ways disconcerting to those being pressed to back the new Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty (SALT II).

"The President is a man with peace in his heart," one influential Democratic senator who is undecided told us after Carter's East room session with senators the night of May 21. "What scares me more than anything else about SALT is that he seems convinced that the Russians have that same peace and good will in their hearts."

The senator's appraisal: President Carter—for reasons of background, upbringing and religious heritage—takes the Soviet leaders at face value when they profess longing for detente and peace between the superpowers.

A moderate Republican senator, also undecided and also present at the White House SALT dinner, saw the same phenomenon in Carter's sudden anger over questions about possible Soviet violations of SALT II.

This senator told us that during an otherwise masterful, "well-modulated" performance, the President "boiled over" on the cheating question—seemingly resentful that the Russians would be accused of such un-Christian conduct.

Carter flatly rejected charges, implicit in the questions from senators, that Moscow had cheated on SALT I.

MOREOVER, THE probable "maximum gain" by Soviet cheating would be a mere "2 percent," Carter said. That would never be worth the potential disgrace of being found out.

Carter's acceptance of Soviet integrity goes far beyond possible cheating. On the next afternoon, May 22, in another East Room SALT-selling session, the President appeared to his audience to make light of the Soviet Union's global political offensive, supported by Cuban and other revolutionary forces.

Present for a session lasting over two hours following lunch were a roomful of establishment figures, rich in elder statesmen—Henry Cabot Lodge, Dean Rusk, Adm. Thomas H. Moorer, David Packard and William Paley among others.

The President told them that "several" senators he had dined with the previous evening had expressed concern that the Russians were plotting war against the U.S. This was "irrational," Carter insisted, exposing an inability among these senators to deal with the real world.

THE SENATORS actually did not see Moscow making "war" on the U.S.; they had asked about inherent contradictions between SALT II and Soviet gains at the expense of the U.S. in Africa, Asia and the Arabian peninsula.

On the next day, Carter criticized these senators for thinking SALT could be used to restrain "peaceful competition" by the Soviet Union.

Carter's explanation of the Soviet desire for SALT II was in the same vein. The President said the Russians, having attained military parity or equality with the U.S., now wanted to cut military spending and attain equality in economic and political power.

In fact, there is nothing in the treaty that would slow the fantastic pace of Soviet arms-building.

The spiritual strain that has motivated Carter in many presidential undertakings showed through in his claim to the elder statesmen of overall U.S. strategic superiority despite deficiencies in certain calibers of weapons.

HE STARTLED his audience by asserting that the administration's support of human rights and opposition to racism is partly responsible for that superiority.

While Carter is generally effective in his extraordinary personal efforts to sell SALT, critical senators clearly irritate him.

At Wednesday's session following the senatorial dinner, he referred to timid senators seeking to amend the treaty rather than vote it up or down and to "outdated notions" about the Cold War by senators.

BUT ANOTHER form of mongering is now appearing: fearmongering. At Wednesday's session, Rabbi Alexander Schindler rose for a statement which one participant said had earmarks of being planted by the President's men.

Schindler, one of the nation's most respected Jewish leaders, told the assembled notables that the nation's reform congregations had decided to back SALT II because to do otherwise would open the world's door to a "holocaust."

The President nodded in agreement. To SALT skeptics, however, such a warning is no more valid as a reason to back SALT than Carter's idealistic generosity in attributing to the Kremlin the same good will that lies in his own heart.

HENRY J. TAYLOR:

Arms For What?

PRESIDENT CARTER said during his election campaign: "I will reduce United States arms deliveries to the rest of the world." But the arms race grows apace. He has shattered to bits nearly every election promise he made.

Three years ago President Carter assaulted his presidential predecessors by calling the arms race "unsavory," stating, "The United States is cynical in making it the world's leading arms salesman."

President Carter, acutely conscious about where the votes are, plunked for butter instead of arms. But this is double-talk at double-time.

In the midst of growing unemployment, war's potential rises. It remains mankind's historic pseudo-cure for economic and social ills. Since World War II, the world has spent an estimated $3.832 trillion on armaments!

TAKE ARGENTINA. Although since 1955 no Argentine government has lived out its constitutional term, the U.S. gave Argentina three giant cruisers and numerous torpedo and other auxiliary vessels.

The Sudan and Yemen have announced new arms sales by the U.S. of jet fighters and tanks.

Britain and France are sending Red China jet fighters and missiles, and Britain is making arms sales to "sweeten" its otherwise non-competitive exports. France makes every effort to aggressively sell arms—without any self-discipline.

NATO and the Warsaw Pact countries represent about 81 percent of the world's military expenditures. Excluding Red China, the so-called Third World spent around six percent. But last year there was a significant shift in world proportions. The big powers spent 71 percent; the newcomers were up to 14 percent—and growing strongly.

TODAY THE Third World represents the biggest growth in military expenditures.

Military expenditures in Africa alone have climbed from $1.4 billion in 1967 to more than $6 billion today. Common sense no longer rules the arms business.

Political stability, instead of being rooted in growing two blades of grass where only one grew before, is sunk in missile silos and under the tread of heavy tanks.

Once military build-ups pass a certain threshold, further increases appear self-generating. Fear and the free market take care of that.

Additionally, most nations in the world are back-to-back. A defensive military move in one direction today can be interpreted as a potential threat in another direction tomorrow.

YOU HEAR the argument that if the U.S. has no internal discipline it is difficult to ask the Soviet Union to join in a system of world controls.

Predominant in the aircraft industry, the United States dominates the world's arms market. Smaller nations like Britain, France, Italy, Sweden, etc., must challenge America's superiority. But President Carter has much room to maneuver.

Our country buys less than three percent of its military needs abroad. The Buy American Act is still on the books. But the Pentagon shows inertia toward it, a grevious fault of President Carter.

JAY HARRIS:

A Bit Of Culture

SANTA FE, N.M.—This historic city has an atmosphere and culture unmatched anywhere else in the nation.

It also can stake out some unique "firsts" and "only" claims among U.S. state capitals.

In getting reacquainted with Santa Fe the past weekend, we not only refreshed our memory on the history of the Southwest, but met some most interesting persons in the process.

Santa Fe sits in a saucer-like valley, with the towering Sangre de Cristo mountains to the north and northeast, the Sandias on the south, the Ortiz to the southeast and the Jemez to the west. In many ways, Santa Fe isn't "like" any other place in the world, a point of which it is proud.

ACCORDING TO an excellent book on the city, Santa Fe, The City Different, it is just that.

It is the highest capital city in the U.S. at an elevation of 7,000 feet. It is also the oldest, dating from 1610, and the only one without a large industry or major airport. And its railroad connection is a spur. And you thought the main Santa Fe rail line ran right through the place!

But, it is not these oddities that make Santa Fe what it is today, or what is has been. It is the people, the ones who call it home, who live, work and play here.

There seems to be an unwritten code in the homes, workshops, studios, eating places, museums that one should do one's best. Personal pride is an obvious standard.

WE SENSED this again and again as we met various artists and artisans in the city.

One such person is Ron Adams, a black who runs Hand Graphics, fine arts printers. Ron and his staff took the time to give his visitors a full demonstration of what goes into a first class etching or lithograph. Knowledgeable, articulate, Ron is typical of many who came to make it on their own and in turn gave something to Santa Fe.

An "oldtimer" in this respect is Boris Gilbertson, an internationally known sculptor. Boris and his wife live in one of the oldest houses in New Mexico.

Boris, a native of Russia and a compatriot of famed Russian painter Leon Gaspard, made it the hard way. What he says about his life, past and present, is interesting and frank.

"FOR ME," HE notes in an autobiography of sorts, "my work has always been an unselfconscious part of living, work that has been interrupted by practical necessity as well as the question: 'Why is an artist and what is an artist?'

"My existence has been much like a chess game with a formidable and very ethical opponent; the moves have been a very strange gambit indeed in retrospect..."

The outspoken Boris says he is "indebted for the toehold afforded me by the Section of Fine Arts of the Treasury Department in the '30s, for the real hope to a precarious existence in that even more precarious time..."

Boris finally wound up in Santa Fe in the "very old Spanish house filled with history and a calm purposefulness. It has given meaning and vitality to my feelings as an artist—to emerge with maturity that only doubt, observation and questioning produces...From this point on, I will let my work speak for itself. The message is a simple one, whose hope is to reveal something great in the quiet commonplace."

THE FOLK ART Museum in Santa Fe is one of the city's jewels.

Currently, it is being enlarged to handle the fabulous and permanent Girard Collection, one of the most fascinating assortment of "people" things we have ever seen, from foreign dolls to good luck charms to priceless cultural artifacts from around the world.

We met one Ann Speiss Mills, who can make a talk-show demonstration of her unique stitchery come alive with laughter. And there was Niki Threidkeld, whose finely detailed flower paintings are unusual and authentic, as is her life story which has roots among the Dutch and Indonesia.

Nestled in the hills just outside Santa Fe is the 140-year-old home and estate of Randall Davey, an early New Mexico painter of people, polo ponies and women. His gracious sister-in-law, Mrs. E. G. Cullum, was the hostess.

One of the more unusual stops was at the Shidoni Foundry, where we witnessed a bronze pour. We also saw "the makings" for a John Wayne bust, which we were told has spiraled in value from $1,000 to $4,000.

As a bonus we met Maurice Loriaux, a charming Frenchman turned Santa Fean, a painter, sculptor, teacher, gourmet cook and all-round charming fellow. His main forte is stained glass windows, examples of which may be found in many churches, buildings and homes. There were others, including Asturo Jaramaillo, whose Spanish restaurant in Chimayo does a thriving business in his grandfather's 200-year-old converted house. And Victor, the urbane proprietor of The Compound in Santa Fe, an experience in eating.

The visit was under the auspices of the Fine Arts Committee of the Women's Council of the West Texas Museum Assn. Mrs. Darlene Anderson is chairman of the Fine Arts group. Mrs. Louis (LaWanda) Murfee, a Lubbock artist of wide renown, put it all together and ran the show like a pro, down to "gourmet" food enroute.

There were 21 women and three men on the trip, including the able bus herder, Dave Thompson. Those who passed up the trip, including some menfolk, because it might be "too arty and cultural" missed something special. We ain't got much culture. But we have more than we had...

L.M. BOYD:

...Pass It On

THOSE VARIOUS potions that were hawked off the tailgates of covered wagons generations ago came to be known as patent medicines. They shouldn't have been so called, though. Hardly any of them were patented. Little wonder. To get a patent on such, the maker would have to list its ingredients. That the maker was seldom inclined to do.

Q. Do the Chinese in the People's Republic drink beer?

A. Of a special sort, yes. It's brewed from rice, and is called shao-hsing. It's the everyday drink with meals.

Interdenominational Evangelists Battle Fair Preaching Ruling

DALLAS (AP) — They called it a freedom rally.

A "Freedom of Speech, The Right to Preach" assembly to "enlist an army of freedom defenders," to reclaim the nation for wholesomeness and godliness and to show they are prepared and able to fight stringent bureaucratic regulations in the name of Jesus Christ.

And they came — more than 10,000 strong representing all denominations and packing the Dallas Convention Center to hear speakers who shared the stage, draped in red, white and blue cloth, with television evangelist James Robison.

"This is not a Southern Baptist issue. This is not an Independent Baptist issu," said Virginia televsion minister Jerry Falwell. "Tonight, the issue is survival."

The 35-year-old Robison, who runs an expanding evangelism enterprise outside Fort Worth, vowed to make his dispute with WFAA-TV in Dallas a national issue after the station's management canceled his weekly, 30-minute telecast three months ago.

However, station officials contend the action became necessary after the fundamentalist preacher made several disparaging remarks about homosexuals on a Feb. 25 broadcast.

Afterward, the station's attorney concluded those remarks violated the Fairness Doctrine governing use of public airwaves and rebuttal time had to be given to members of the local gay community.

Since then, Robison has insisted his right to preach the Bible has been infringed. And he has enlisted the aid of noted Houston defense attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes to press for an administrative hearing before the Federal Communications Commission in Washington.

"Is it fair for television to speak of evil but not to permit James to speak out against evil?" asked Haynes, who successfully defended Fort Worth industrialist Cullen Davis on a murder charge.

"If we accept the unjustified restraint of freedom by government, we will have lost the courage to believe," Haynes exclaimed. "When one right is denied, all are threatened. We will fight for the right to preach the truth to America."

Falwell and Dr. W.A. Criswell, pastor of the 20,000-member First Baptist Church of Dallas, followed the flamboyant attorney with sharp remarks about homosexuality.

"Perversion. It always has been. It ever shall be. In or out of the closet, it still has the smell of moths," Falwell said. "If James Robison loses, like dominoes, every gospel broadcaster will soon go down the tube with him."

Criswell issued a challenge to WFAA officials that brought the crowd to its feet with shouts of "Hallelujah" and "Amen."

"If you are proud of your decision, I challenge you to call a national convention of the perverts you champion and see if you like the friends you've made," he said.

Robison then added the final punch.

"Homosexuality, sodomy, sexual perversion...it was a sin when God rained fire on Sodom and Gomorrah....It was a sin on Feb. 25. It is a sin on June 5. God created Adam and Eve, not Adam and Edward," he shouted.

Robison admitted many people considered him a troublemaker. But, he explained, he was worse than a troublemaker, he was a reactionary.

"I react when the rights of Americans are violated. I react to murder. I react to murder in the name of abortion. I react to abortion in the name of women's rights. I react to welfare over work. I react to pot parties over birthday parties.

"And I'm ready to do something about it. Amen and Amen."

Comparing his battle with the 1963 assassination of President John F. Kennedy, Robison said, "the blackest day in human history may dawn in Dallas because of the indifference and silence of Christians. If we lose here, we lose all over America."

Robison concluded the four-hour rally with a call for victory for his cause, for the survival of the nation, and for the freedom to freely preach his sermons.

"Will you march with me to change to world by the power of God?"

FBI Assassination Sketches Remain Unidentified

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The FBI still has not identified the five men pictured in composite sketches and sought in connection with the May 29 assassination of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr., an official said Wednesday.

Meanwhile, it was reported Wednesday that District Attorney Bill White received a letter Tuesday that threatened him, U.S. Attorney Jamie Boyd and Assistant U.S. Attorney James Kerr.

Kerr was the target of an assassination attempt Nov. 21 and has since been protected constantly by federal marshals. He and Wood, 63, known as "Maximum John" for his stiff sentences in drug cases, had both been involved in narcotics smuggling cases in West Texas.

Boyd, also guarded by federal marshals in the wake of the Wood assassination, is spearheading a massive investigation, centered in El Paso, into an alleged multi-million dollar interstate narcotics smuggling operation.

White said he is taking the unsigned, handwritten letter seriously in light of the Kerr attack and Wood's slaying and turned it over to the FBI.

Special Agent Manuel Marquez said the FBI would also treat the threat seriously because it is a federal offense to send such a threat through the mail.

"We will also look into the threat as a part of the Wood investigation," he said.

Another federal source, however, said such a highly-publicized investition usually generates several threatening letters.

The FBI released three more composite sketches Wednesday to go with two issued last Friday. The first two were of men witnesses said were in the "immediate vicinity" the morning Wood was cut down by a single shot from a sniper as he left his townhouse for work.

The other three, said Marquez, were in the area either the morning of the slaying or an undetermined number of days before.

The FBI has mounted a massive investigation, sending in special investigators from Washington and mobilizing at least 40 agents and numerous other federal prsonnel. Rewards totaling $125,000 have prompted numerous calls to a 24-hour telephone number stablished to handle such tips.

Leak Exposes Worker To Big Radiation Dosage

LOS ALAMOS, N.M. (AP) — An employee at Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory received a radiation exposure of 13 rems more than a month ago when tritium escaped from an overheated container, laboratory officials said Wednesday.

The laboratory officials said .32 grams of tritium, a man-made form of radioactive hydrogen, was released on May 4 during an experiment in the laboratory's cryogenics unit.

The release caused an employee to receive a radiation exposure of about 13 rems, which exceeds the DOE annual exposure standard of five rems," the statement said. "Eight other LASL employees at the facility received measureable exposures that were less than 10 percent of the five-rem standard."

There are 1,000 millirems in a rem, a measure of radiation exposure. At one point during the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant accident near Harrisburg, Pa., March 28, the amount of radiation released was the equivalent of one millirem per hour, officials said.

Bill Richmond, a spokesman at the laboratory, said the tritium was vented into the atmosphere.

"Exposure to nearby laboratory workers and other facilities has been monitored and found to be neglible," the laboratory said.

Richmond said the employee who received the 13-rem dose was being monitored under the supervision of a doctor. He declined to release the name of the employee.

He said lab officials don't anticipate any health problems for the employee.

"He is being monitored regularly under supervision of physicians," Richmond said.

Dr. George Voelz, the lab's health division leader, said the accident posed no health risk to the public.

The lab didn't issue a statement concerning the incident until a reporter questioned a health group leader at the lab on Monday about a rumored leak.

"Sometimes when these things happen they happen on site and there is no risk to the public," Richmond said. "Sometimes they figure it's a routine inhouse kind of thing. I imagine somebody heard about it, asked about it and we answered the question.

"When it happens on site in one location you know who is involved and you can monitor them."

Richmond said the incident has been reported to the Department of Energy.

Richmond said a three-man team of laboratory employees has been named to investigate the incident.

Larry Scoggins, 25, of 4917 39th St. said he was working on the signal box when two Mexican-American men about 25 years old approached him from the rear and hit him with a baseball bat. The suspects removed $3 from Scoggin'swallet and fled in a dark green or blue Chevrolet.

Scoggins was treated and released at Methodist Hospital. The incident occurred about 1 a.m.

Police took three Lubbock youths into custody Wednesday after they were identified by a 10-year-old boy as the three who stole $5 from him.

The boy told police he was at the TG &Y Store at 1716 Parkway about 11 a.m. Wednesday when three black youths, all about 15 years old, grabbed him and took a $5 bill he was holding in his hand. The three fled on bicycles, police said.

A city police officer, Odis Wayne Harner, received minor injuries Tuesday when his police car and another vehicle collided at North Quirt Avenue and East Rice Street.

Harner's car and a pickup, driven by Earl Wayne Thetford, were both headed north on Quirt Avenue. Police said Thetford, 47, of 5440 14th St., attempted to turn right from the center lane when he struck Harner's car in the left side.

A resident of the 4900-block of Ninth Street said a man in a red and white car exposed himself to her about 4 p.m. Tuesday. The woman said she was working in her front yard when a car stopped in front of her house. The man stepped out wearing nothing but black-rimmed sunglasses, the woman reported.

Police attributed two attempted house burglaries in neighborhoods around Texas Tech University to a Mexican-American man of medium build. Eda Solis of 1926 6th Street and Anita Rowe of 1922 5th Street, Apt. 114, gave similar descriptions of a burglar who entered their homes between 11:45 p.m. a.m. Wednesday.

Six Injured In Car Wreck

MULESHOE (Special) — Six area residents were injured, two seriously, after a car-pickup truck collision about 1:15 p.m. Wednesday on Texas 214, 11 miles north of Muleshoe.

Angela Jesko, 16, of Muleshoe and her 11-year-old sister, Laura, were in serious condition late Wednesday at Lubbock's Methodist Hospital. The girls, who both reportedly suffered head injuries in the accident, were first taken to West Plains Medical Center in Muleshoe and transferred to the Lubbock hospital Wednesday afternoon.

Their mother, Brenda Collier Jesko, 35, and another sister, Ginger, 7, were in good condition late Wednesday at West Plains.

The driver of the pickup, Joe Nanez, 51, of Friona also was in good condition late Wednesday at the Muleshoe hospital, and his son, Jessie Manuel, 9, was treated at West Plains and later released.

Department of Public Safety reports show that Mrs. Jesko was going north on Texas 214 and Nanez was traveling south on the same highway when the accident occurred. Trooper Jim Bishop said the two vehicles struck almost head-on about 350 feet north of the intersection of Farm Road 145 and Texas 214.

Four Adolescents Convicted In California Murder Case

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Three girls and a boy, aged 12 and 13, have been convicted here of trying to murder a school teacher — because he gave them failing grades — by poisoning his coffee.

In a separate case, three teen-age boys were accused of trying to poison their foster mother.

Four Isleton Elementary School students were convicted Monday in Sacramento County Juvenile Court of trying to kill teacher Winston Jones on April 24 because they were angry over failing grades.

Authorities said the students admitted putting mercury from a thermometer in Jones' coffee thermos.

Jones and another teacher, Urban Gasperi, drank coffee from the thermos, but were not harmed, authorities said.

Disposition of the case involving the four Isleton students was delayed until June 15, pending probation reports. The maximum penalty would be commitment to the California Youth Authority until they are 21. The youngsters are now in the custody of parents and relatives.

The court ruled that allegations of conspiracy and attempted murder, which were submitted by the district attorney, were true. According to California law, juveniles implicated in crimes are not considered criminals, but rather are designated wards of the court who may be committed to one of the prison-like institutions of the authority.

Authorities did not release identites in either case.

In the second case, two brothers, aged 14 and 17, and a 15-year-old boy were arrested for investigation of a possible conspiracy to poison Clarise Rogers, 50, operator of a licensed group home for boys in Sacramento.

The brothers were accused of putting prescription drugs in the kettle Mrs. Rogers used to boil water for instant coffee.

Mrs. Rogers, who had suffered violent headaches for 10 days, said she called police after the 15-year-old boy saw her drinking coffee and said, "I didn't think they'd do it."

Police searched the brothers' room Monday and said they found a paper outlining plans to kill Mrs. Rogers and her husband, Ernest, 55.

Mrs. Rogers said the brothers had been hostile toward her since coming to the home in April, but she "never dreamed anything like this could happen."

The three boys were placed in Juvenile Hall pending a hearing before a Juvenile Court judge.

Morton School Wins In Court

An almost $4 million suit against current and past members of the Morton School Board came to an abrupt halt Tuesday afternoon when U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward instructed the jury to return a judgement favoring the school board.

Former Morton Junior High School principal Jim Middleton filed the suit, claiming his constitutional rights were violated when his contract was terminated in 1975, in August 1977.

Testimony in the trial began Monday, but at about 4:30 p.m. Tuesday, after the defendants' first witness had testified, Woodward directed the eight-member civil panel to return a verdict for the school board.

Middleton's attorney, H.J. Blanchard of Austin, presented his case against the school board Monday and most of Tuesday. Tuesday morning, Middleton, a former Morton Junior High School principal, took the stand and detailed the events leading to the lawsuit.

Middleton said his suspension on Nov. 3, 1975, was preceded by a regular school board session in which trustees discussed his emotional stability and moral character with four of his faculty members.

Middleton said he was not presented written charges nor specific reasons for his dismissal until Nov. 25, 1975, 18 days after he was suspended with pay.

Dallas Bank Displays Old Auto Believed Used By MacArthur

DALLAS (AP) — The car with the machine gun mounted on the dash is not intended as a deterrent to bank robbers.

But the 1942 Packard on display in the lobby of Preston State Bank has seen some action — as Gen. Douglas MacArthur's staff car during World War II.

The 2011 Clipper sedan that accompanied MacArthur through Australia, the Philippines and Japan still faced some close calls after it was retired from military duty in 1948.

Painted olive drab and with the dirt on the engine still intact, the staff car bears the white star and other U.S. military markings. Special features include flag mounts, driving blackout and convoy lamps and adjustable louvered headlight shutters. MacArthur's legendary corn cob pipe is said to have been found under the seat.

After its retirement, the car was given to MacArthur's driver, who lived in the Dallas area. Plans to repaint the car and use it as a family auto were delayed first by a busy body shop schedule, then by the unexpected death of its owner.

The car thus spent the first 20 of its golden years in an undignified, dirt-floored garage in Grand Prairie. In 1968, Packard enthusiast Don MacLellan, unaware of the car's history, arranged to buy the car from the driver's widow to use for parts.

When the mail brought papers from the woman detailing the auto's ownership and history, MacLellan knew it wasn't a parts car.

Finally, 31 years after its tour of duty, the Packard was headed for awell-deserved place of honor. In January, Don Auerbach and Jim Hollingsworth, members of the Classic Car Club of America, bought the car and put it on display in the bank.

Its final resting place will be in a museum, its owners say. But it's already getting a taste of its once-lost fame.

Nuclear Hotline Network Operating

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Direct emergency telephone lines have been established between the Nuclear Regulatory Commission and 68 licensed nuclear power reactors and 14 licensed nuclear fuel and equipment plants in the United States, it was announced Wednesday.

The lines, to be used in the event of an accident, were ordered as a result of communications problems experienced during the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant accident in Pennsylvania.

The NRC said all the lines were activated June 1, a month ahead of schedule. Each of the "dedicated" telephone lines makes it possible for operations personnel to talk immediately with the NRC's operations center here, now manned with technical personnel around the clock.

The NRC said the only two reactors not equipped with one of the direct lines are Pacific Gas and Electric Co.'s Humboldt Bay Nuclear Power Station near Eureka, Calif., and Unit 1 at Consolidated Edison Co.'s Indian Point Nuclear Power Station near Buchanan, N.Y. Both of these reactors have been shut down for more than a year.

The other facilities equipped with the new communications links are those operated by Babcock and Wilcox Co. at Apollo and Leechburg, Pa., and two at Lynchburg, Va.; Texas Instruments Co. at North Attleboro, Mass.; United Nuclear Corp. at Montville, Conn., and Wood River, R.I.; Westinghouse Electric Corp. at Cheswick, Pa.; Nuclear Fuel Services Inc. at Erwin, Tenn.; Kerr McGee Corp. at Crescent, Okla.; Exxon Nuclear at Richland, Wash.; General Atomics Co. at San Diego, Calif.; General Electric Co. at Vallecitos, Calif.; and Atomic International at Canoga Park, Calif.

Murder Prosecutor Named

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Deputy Salt Lake County Attorney David Yocom, due to resign his post next week, was named Wednesday as a special prosecutor to handle the murder trial of polygamist leader Ervil LeBaron.

The announcement was made by County Attorney Ted Cannon.

LeBaron, 54, was turned over to U.S. authorities Friday by Mexican officials at the border at Laredo. He waived extradition Monday to Utah, but remained Wednesday in the Webb County Jail in Texas.

Federal authorities have said U.S. marshals will bring LeBaron to Utah soon, but have not given a specific date, citing security reasons.

Yocom has spent the past two years investigating LeBaron and his followers. He resigned two days before LeBaron's arrest to return to private practice.

Yocom, who had asked Cannon to name him special prosecutor, said Wednesday his resignation won't take effect until June 15, after which he'll work for the county on a contract basis.

LeBaron is charged with murder and conspiracy to commit murder in the May 1977 death of Rulon Allred, a polygamist leader and naturopathic physician who was gunned down in his suburban Salt Lake office by two persons dressed as women.

The 71-year-old Allred, who had at least six wives and 40 children, led the Apostolic United Brethren, thought to be Utah's largest polygamist group with about 6,000 members.

LeBaron, said to have at least a dozen wives, is leader of the Church of the Lamb of God, a polygamist group with about 100 members in a number of western and southern states and Mexico.

Yocom prosecuted four LeBaron followers — including one of LeBaron's wives — who were acquitted in March of the Allred slaying. During that trial, the prosecutin alleged that LeBaron masterminded Allred's death to increase his wealth and power.

Vonda Evelyn White, another of LeBaron's wives, was convicted last month in San Diego, Calif., of killing Dean Grover Vest, who wanted to leave LeBaron's cult. LeBaron also is charged in Vest's death.

In addition, LeBaron faces attempted murder and conspiracy charges in an alleged plot to kill his brother, Verlan, during Allred's funeral. Verlan LeBaron heads the polygamist group the Church of the Firstborn of the Fullness of Times.

Ervil LeBaron also is charged with first-degree murder in the 1975 death of polygamist Robert Simons in eastern Utah.

Administration Seeks SALT Treaty Support

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration will make a pitch for big-city support of the strategic arms limitation treaty (SALT II) at the 47th annual meeting of the U.S. Conference of Mayors beginning Saturday in Pittsburgh.

With the U.S.-Soviet summit at Vienna approaching, Gen. George Seignious, director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, will address the mayors on the need for public support for the pact. Seignious will accompany President Carter to Vienna.

Vice President Walter F. Mondale, Secretary of Commerce Juanita Kreps, HUD Secretary Patricia Roberts Harris and Labor Secretary Ray Marshall also will address at the five-day meeting.

UNUSUAL HOBBY — George Bosley, 59, of Las Cruces, N.M., holds up a stump from a white oak tree that he found on a recent trip to Arizona. The features of the face attracted Bosley so much that he is looking out for other facial impressions from different trees. West Point Graduates Last All-Male Class

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP) — A jubilant class of 880 cadets in full dress white and gray was commissioned here Wednesday, the last all-male class in the history of the nation's oldest military academy.

Top class honors went to Bert K. Mizusawa, 22, of Hampton, Va., the "No. 1 Distinguished Cadet," and to Cadet First Capt. John J. Cook III, 22, of Dover, N.J., recipient of the Pershing Sword.

The order triggered the joyous cap-tossing and cheers from the newly commissioned second lieutenants.

Commencement speaker Charles W. Duncan Jr., deputy secretary of defense, told the graduating class of 1979 that they will be the "first line of defense" in a world where the major powers are "mutually vulnerable" to destruction from nuclear weapons.

"We do not seek war, but we must be ready for it," Duncan told the cadets on the 35th anniversary of D-Day, the Allied invasion of Normandy.

The ceremonies under clear skies before 18,000 spectators marked the last of the all-male, 177-year tradition at the academy, which in 1976 was rocked by the worst cheating scandal in its history.

Since then, a number of academic reforms have been instituted at the United States Military Academy, including the admission of women. Next year, 62 women are scheduled to become commissioned officers.

This year, several cadets were charged with possession of drugs, and graduation for six cadets was postponed pending the outcome of that investigation.

Although the tradition of the "class goat," the last academically ranked cadet, was abolished officially two years ago, a special round of applause was give to the last alphabetical graduate, Cadet Michael A. Zonfrelli, 21, of Bridgewater, Mass.

But the warmest applause and a standing ovation went to Cadet Eric Jay Schlossberg, of New Milford, Conn., who entered West Point seven years ago and left after two years because of academic problems. He applied for readmission, repeated a year and finally graduated three years behind his original class.

FDA Concludes Common Sleeping Aids May Be Cancer Causing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration is "working very hard" to eliminate methapyrilene, a cancer-causing antihistamine, from over-the-counter sleep aids and other drugs, outgoing FDA Commissioner Donald Kennedy said Wednesday.

Kennedy, who leaves office at the end of the month, told reporters he hopes to complete action on DES, cyclamate and several other controversial issues on his desk.

The National Cancer Institute concluded in April that methapyrilene, used for years as an active ingredient in Sominex, Excedrin P.M. and numerous nighttime sleep aids, causes liver cancer in rats and mice and should be presumed to do so in humans.

The FDA said at the time that it would evaluate the institute's data as quickly as possible and move to ban the substance if its analysis agreed with that of the cancer institute.

Kennedy said Wednesday his agency's review does bear out the institute findings, and "we're working very hard" to get methapyrilene out of the drug supply.

The Proprietary Association, a trade group whose members make 80 percent to 90 percent of the non-prescription products containing methapyrilene, has proposed to recall all sleep aids containing the substance from distributors and wholesalers.

But Wayne Pines, an FDA spokesman, said the agency has "not yet decided whether that is acceptable or whether a further recall at the retail level is necessary."

Jack Walden, a spokesman for the Proprietary Association, said most makers of over-the-counter sleep aid products already have stopped manufacturing drugs containing the suspect chemical and some already have begun to ship reformulated products.

Among the brands that have or soon will be reformulated, Walden said, are Sominex, Compoz, Sleep-Eze, Excedrin P.M. and Nytol. Production of Nervine, made by Miles Laboratories, was halted shortly after the cancer institute's findings were made public, Walden said.

Kennedy said the reformulation involves substituting pyrilamine, a chemically related but less potent antihistamine, for the traditional ingredient.

Methapyrilene once was used in many nonprescription cough and cold remedies as well as in some prescription drugs and the popular sleep aids, but it generally has disappeared from over-the-counter cough and cold products. The current issue of the Physician's Desk Reference still lists it as an ingredient of a handful of prescription drugs, including Histadyl, made by Eli Lilly and Co., and Citra Forte, made by Boyle & Co.

All nonprescription drugs are required to list their ingredients on the label, but prescription drugs aren't.

Kennedy said the FDA has asked the National Cancer Institute to run similar tests on pyrilamine, already used in many cough and cold remedies, to determine whether it, too, might cause cancer. He said there is no evidence now that it does.

Other issues awaiting Kennedy's decision include action on a tentative finding by an administrative law judge that the synthetic female hormone diethylstilbestrol (DES) should be banned from use as a growth stimulant in animal feeds.

The controversial drug, once used widely by women to prevent miscarriages but later found ineffective for that purpose, has since been reported to cause breast cancer in women and cancer or birth defects in their offspring.

Cyclamate, an artificial sweetener, once a common ingredient of diet soft drinks and table top sweeteners, was banned a decade ago when tests showed it might cause cancer in animals.

Abbott Laboratories, which manufactured it, has tried various legal and admnistrative maneuvers sice to bring it back on the market, especially in the wake of FDA efforts to ban saccharin, the only sugar substitute still permitted in foods. But Abbott so far has been unsuccessful.

Kennedy s on his desk a recommendation from an administrative law judge that cyclamate not be approved because it still has not been found safe for use as a food additive.

Boss Puts Lid On Plant's Porno Movies

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — Employees at the Draper Lake water plant have been told to refrain from watching pornographic movies during working hours.

Supervisor Darrell McClanahan was not quite that explicit in his recent memorandum, but he did refer to a variety of entertainment devices causing "work disruptions" and "casting the department in a bad light." He also asked that "non-job related movies" be ended.

The movie operation was reportedly closed after a chemist, who works part-time for the city, walked in on a showing, then bragged to friends about it.

Word leaked back to water department administrators.

"The chemist blew it all open," said a former plant employee. "He came in there to the lab room to take care of some work and they were showing the skin flicks. He went in and watched, then was all around downtown bragging how he had watched the good films out at Draper Lake. That's when McClanahan sent out the memo."

The memo stated:

"It has been brought to the attention of this department that in some areas the use of movie projectors, television sets, stereos, etc. has been carried to extremes and is causing work disruptions. Also, the fact that persons outside the department have learned of this is casting the department in a bad light.

"Therefore, the unauthorized use of television sets, the showing of non-job related movies, the installation of elaborate music systems, the playing of loud and raucous music over radios or any other related activities shall be strictly prohibited. Violations of this policy will result in disciplinary action being taken, which may include termination."

Northern Ireland Terrorist Attack Kills One Soldier

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Gunmen riding in a truck attacked the Belfast headquarters of the Ulster Defense Regiment with bombs and bullets today, killing one part-time soldier and wounding three others, a British army spokesman said.

The truck pulled up outside the headquarters, several shots were fired and there was an explosion, possibly from a hand grenade, the spokesman said. The attackers then sped off, firing on a nearby police patrol as they fled, he said.

The three wounded men were not believed to be seriously hurt.

There were no immediate claims of responsibility for the attack.

The UDR is a part-time force, consisting mostly of Protestants, that works with British troops and Royal Ulster Constabulary police in the province's security forces.

The death brought to 1,919 the number reported killed in Northern Ireland's sectarian troubles since 1969.

The militant Provisional wing of the mostly Catholic Irish Republican Army is waging its guerrilla campaign to drive the British out of Northern Ireland and unite the province with the Irish Republic.

Carrier Midway, Other U.S. Ships Leave Indian Ocean Station

WASHINGTON (AP) — The aircraft carrier Midway and six other U.S. ships left the Indian Ocean Wednesday, reducing American strength there to its lowest level since the Iranian crisis reached the boiling point in November.

The action comes at a time when the Carter administration is reported considering possible long-range options for maintaining U.S. forces in the turbulent oil-producing region of the Persian Gulf and Indian Ocean.

The move leaves the Soviets with at least a temporarily dominant naval position in the area.

Defense Department officials who asked not to be named indicated the United States probably will send another major naval force into the Indian Ocean this summer, as it has done periodically since 1972.

But the departure of the Midway, four escorting warships and two support vessels into the South China Sea indicates the United States does not plan to establish a permanent fleet in the Indian Ocean, at least for the present.

Maintaining a permanent fleet in those waters would mean reducing American naval strength in the Mediterranean and the Pacific and it is believed senior naval officers would object to this.

The U.S. fleet worldwide now totals about 450 ships, smallest since before World War II. A top admiral told a reporter several months ago that "there aren't excess ships in either the Pacific or the Atlantic Oceans to pick up the additional load" of an Indian Ocean fleet.

The withdrawal of the Midway group leaves the United States with four destroyers and frigates in the vast Indian Ocean-Persian Gulf-Arabian Sea area, including two destroyers that passed through the Suez Canal from the Mediterranean Wednesday to join temporarily the U.S. "Middle East force."

On the other hand, intelligence officials said the Russian navy has about 25 ships in that region.

Among the Soviet naval vessels cruising the Indian Ocean are the powerful aircraft carrier Minsk, one of the world's most heavily armed warships, two guided missile cruisers and the Ivan Rogov, Russia's biggest amphibious ship.

The Minsk and its accompanying ships have been in the Indian Ocean for nearly two months. U.S. naval officials expect them ultimately to join the Soviet Pacific fleet, but they have made no move in that direction so far.

Recently, Soviet planes based in South Yemen made passes over the Midway in what U.S. officials regarded as interference with U.S. flight operations. Defense Department spokesman Thomas Ross said the Russians stopped the practice after a formal U.S. protest. The United States and Russia have had an agreement since 1972 to avoid such incidents, which once were common.

The Indian Ocean area has become increangly important as the overthrow of Iran's shah, war between Marxist South Yemen and North Yemen and other unrest have raised questions about the security of U.S. oil supplies from the Persian Gulf area.

Defense Secretary Harold Brown and energy secretary James Schlesinger said in February the United States is prepared to use military force to protect the flow of oil from the Middle East.

President Carter has ruled out any permanent U.S. military bases in that area, but there have been studies by Pentagon staff officers on the way the United States might underscore its concern for stability in the area by military means.

Among other things, there has been consideration of periodic visits by U.S. warplanes to friendly countries as has been done in Saudi Arabia, and an expanded naval presence over the long term.

Staff experts also have been assessing methods by which the United States might project ground forces into the area if needed.

Defense officials said Carter and his top advisers would have to decide the political and cost implications of maintaining a significant military presence in the Indian Ocean-Persian Gulf area and that the impact on the defense budget could be considerable.

Contractor Sentenced For GSA Kickbacks

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Maryland contractor ws sentenced Wednesday to six months in prison and 2½ years on probation after conviction for paying an estimated $210,000 in kickbacks to employees of the scandal-plagued General Services Administration.

Robert Carroll Wear, 46, of Fairways Hills, Md., was the first contractor whom U.S. District Judge Oliver Gasch imprisoned for a role in the scandal.

Gasch has now given prison terms to three persons involved in the scandal and handed down probationary sentences for five other defendants. U.S. attorneys, who seek prison sentences in all GSA cases, have accused Gasch of leniency.

Wear pleaded guilty to one count of conspiracy to defraud the government, which carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Wear acknowledged that from Jan. 1, 1973, through Sept. 1, 1977, he received $370,000 in contracts to maintain and repair government buildings. Assistant U.S. Attorney William S. Block said $310,000 of the money was obtained fraudulently, with Wear receiving $100,000 and paying the rest in kickbacks.

Block said Wear inflated some contracts and in other cases was paid for non-existent work.

Carter, Schmidt Discuss Energy, Arms, Economy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter conferred Wednesday with West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt in talks expected to focus on energy, strategic arms negotiations and economics.

The meeting in the Cabinet Room occurred in an atmosphere in which Schmidt has repeatedly expressed doubts about Carter's leadership.

Schmidt, in the United States on a private visit, met with other administration officials earlier in the day. He was to fly to Columbia, S. C. late in the day to give a speech and also was to deliver the commencement address at Harvard University today.

The chancellor and the president greeted each other outside the door to the Oval Office, posed briefly for photographers, then adjourned with aides to the Cabinet Room for their talks.

The meeting occurs as the two prepared for an economic summit in Japan at the end of June, when the two leaders will meet again with heads of other Western industrial nations.

Before Schmidt's arrival, White House press secretary Jody Powell said the talks could be expected to encompass energy, the neutron bomb and the SALT II treaty that Carter will sign in Vienna in about 10 days with Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev.

On Wednesday morning, Schmidt, interviewed in New York on the NBC "Today" program, said the 35th anniversary of D-Day means less to him than two follow-up events that signaled American post-war generosity.

D-Day refers to June 6, 1944, the day the Allies invaded Europe, marking a turning point in World War II.

"There are two other dates right after the end of the war which I commemorate much more strongly; namely, the speech which the then-American secretary of state, James Byrnes, gave in 1946 in Stuttgart and another speech given in 1947 by his successor, George Marshall, at Harvard."

He said the first "told us Germans that there would be a place for us in the future world, (a) place even for the defeated Germans."

The second was the announcement of the Marshall Plan, "in which we were shown this great solidarity of the American nation, willing to help all the Europeans whose industries and cities had been destroyed, even including us Germans."

White House Leaks In Roof For A Change

WASHINGTON (AP) — Skylab is falling. So is President Carter's standing in the polls. And if that weren't enough for the president to worry about, the White House roof has been leaking.

Repairs to stop the leaks, three of them that were discovered a few months ago, are nearly completed — apparently without Carter ever having gotten wet.

Only one of the leaks is directly above the first family's residence. That one, on the walkway outside the solarium, drips into the Yellow Oval Room, the family's formal living room on the second floor.

"One of the maids discovered the leak over a weekend when the first family was not here," said chief White House usher Rex Scouten.

To keep the first family dry, that leak was repaired temporarily in late winter.

Another leak was found on the West Terrace, which serves as the roof of the White House press room. The terrace, with red terra cotta tile flooring, recently was used as an outdoor dining room for a state banquet.

The third leak was found at the North Portico, or the main White House entrance facing Pennsylvania Avenue. Water had seeped underneath the slate tile and deteriorated it.

"It's an old house and it's got the original walls," Scouten said. "The leaks are the most pesky thing."

Smart Mouse Award Goes To Engineers

NEW YORK (AP) — Three young electrical engineers swept top prizes Wednesday in the Amazing Micro Mouse Maze Contest, a national search for the fastest and smartest electric mouse.

Ron Dilbeck, Art Boland and Phil Stover shared $1,000 in a contest that pitted mechanical mice against an 8-foot-square maze.

The award was presented in a jammed hotel ballroom after an afternoon of time trials at the National Computer Conference here.

It was not a great day for the science of microelectronics. Nine of the 15 contestants were unable to complete the maze on any of three trials, and two others chugged, wheezed and stumbled to the finish line only on the thid try.

The failed ones either wore out their batteries nosing through dead ends or got confused and went in circles.

But Dilbeck and company's Moonlight Express negotiated the labyrinth in 1:40 the first time around. It shaved that to 31.16 seconds on the third try, by which time its tiny electronic brain had memorized the right sequence of twists and turns.

Their other entry, Moonlight Flash, lacked a computer and so was not eligible for the top award for the "smartest and fastest" mouse. But it turned in the fastest heat, 29.79 seconds, by hugging the right hand wall of the maze and clipping along at 25 inches per second.

Dilbeck, Boland and Stover began working on the mice last year while all were working at Battelle Northwest Laboratories in Richland, Wash. Stover has since resigned to take another job in a Los Angeles suburb. All are in their mid to late 20s.

Dilbeck said the three hadn't decided what to do with the prize, which, along with the contest, was sponsored by Spectrum Magazine.

"I think we might get all the people together who worked on it and go out and have a big blow-out on the town. We didn't do it for the money, I can tell you that," he said.

The winning mice bore little resemblance to the warm, fuzzy creatures they're named for. They look more like souped up slot-racing cars with computer "breadboards" for a head.

"It looks like a piece of junk. I know," said Dilbeck, "but people like this kind of stuff. It's an eye-catcher."

Fire Follows Gas Well Blowout

No injuries or property damage was reported. The blowout occurred about 12:30 a.m., according to the Department of Public Safety.

A spokesman for Red Adair, a Houston-based well fire fighting company, said a crew was en route to the site near this small community.

Two Crewmen Missing From Crippled Freighter

THUNDER BAY, Ontario (AP) — Two crewmen were still missing Wednesday as tugs towed the stricken freighter Cartiercliff Hall to Thunder Bay following a fire that killed at least four of the ship's 25 crewmen.

"It looked like a blast furnace when we reached it and it's still hot," said Patrick Connors, captain of the Canadian Coast Guard cutter Griffin, which helped escort the vessel to harbor.

The Canadian and U.S. Coast Guards launched separate investigations of Tuesday's early-morning blaze aboard the 730-foot freighter on Lake Superior, 10 miles from Copper Harbor, Mich.

The bodies of four dead crewmen were found Tuesday night, two in the engine room and two in living quarters of the freighter that was hauling a load of corn.

Nineteen crew members, five suffering burns, were plucked from life rafts near the burning ship.

U.S. Coast Guard Lt. Ken Johnson and a representative from the National Transportation Safety Board were to arrive on the scene Friday to inspect the ship.

One crewman, Joe Schaffer, a cook, reported that the ship had trouble with its generators.

"We had to shut off the newer generator and switch to the old one," Schaffer said. "Whether that was responsible, I don't know."

Paul Boisvert, 56, was listed in critical condition Wednesday with burns over more than 96 percent of his body.

In serious condition were the ship's captain, Raymond Boudreau, 49, of Quebec, with burns to more than a third of his body; crewman Jean-Claude Langlois, 44, with burns of more than 13 percent and crewman Francois Chouinard, 19, of Quebec with burns of 8 percent.

A fifth man, whose name was not disclosed, was treated for shock at Portage View Hospital in Hancock, Mich.

Missouri Amish Woman May Have Polio

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — An Amish woman was admitted to a Columbia hospital Tuesday with a suspected case of polio, the Missouri Division of Health said Wednesday.

The patient, admitted to the University of Missouri Medical Center, is a 20-year-old Amish woman from north-central Missouri. She is the first suspected polio case reported in Missouri since an outbreak of the disease in Pennsylvania in April.

Division officials say the woman visited Amish groups in Pennsylvania and Ohio in May. Both states have reported either confirmed or suspected cases of polio.

The woman became ill around June 1 following her return to Missouri, and when partial paralysis and other polio symptoms developed she was admitted to the hospital.

Division officials say it may take up to three weeks to confirm whether the case is actually polio.

RECORD

NEW YORK (AP) — The price of gold hit record levels Wednesday while the dollar gained ground abroad but dipped at home. The price gold, spurred by investors' fears of worldwide inflation from constricted supplies and higher prices for oil, reached $280.75 an ounce in London's morning trading. But it later fell back slightly, as some gold holders sold to collect their profits from a rise of more than $40 an ounce in two months, according to dealers.

Pope, Communist Government In Low-Key Clash

KRAKOW, Poland (AP) — Pope John Paul II flew Wednesday to this ancient city, scene of his years of confrontation with Poland's Communist government, after making an emotional appeal to workers to resist atheist calls to abandon religion.

The former Cardinal Karol Wojtyla served as archbishop of Krakow, in southern Poland, before being elevated to the papacy last October. It was here that he had sought greater religious freedom for the 30 million members of the Roman Catholic Church in Poland.

When the papal helicopter touched down in downtown Krakow, thousands of residents of the city of 500,000 and from nearby towns lined the streets 10-deep to catch a glimpse of him; some had stood for hours despite a constant drizzle.

On Sunday, the pope plans to celebrate a pontifical mass in honor of St. Stanislaw, a Pole martyred 900 years ago in a dispute over whether the church or state should be supreme.

During his visit to his homeland — and most strongly in the three days he was in the city of Czestochowa — the pope has challenged the Communist government to recognize religious rights and improve the conditions in which the church operates.

On Wednesday, a government spokesman expressed "surprise" at how much the pontiff was speaking out about matters that touched on politics. Later in the day, the pope preached against building the human spirit only on the basis of labor.

Speaking at a second mass in two days for Silesian workers, he said work was "the fundamental dimension of man's life on earth," but added:

"Do not let yourself be seduced by the temptation to think that man can fully find himself by denying God, erasing prayer from his life and remaining only a worker, deluding himself that what he produces can on its own fill the needs of the human heart."

In a farewell statement, he recalled previous visits to Czestochowa's Jasna Gora shrine, first as a young boy with his father and later "clandestinely during the terrible occupation" in World War II.

"The meaning of this pilgrimage is quite inexpressible," said the pontiff. "I shall not even try to find words to express what it has been for me and for us all."

The pope, speaking to thousands who had once been members of his diocese, was dressed in his traditional white robes. His voice was raspy but still strong after a rigorous series of speeches since his arrival in Poland Saturday.

It was his third appearance of this day alone in Czestochowa, where he had drawn large and enthusiastic crowds since arriving on Monday.

After one of those appearances, at noon, witnesses said plainclothes security guards jostled and shoved several people, including at least one priest and two Western photographers, while clearing a path for the pope.

A United Press International photographer and a French photographer working for Newsweek magazine were reported to have been roughed up, but the UPI photographer said he was not seriously hurt. It was not clear whether the security guards were from the Polish government or the Vatican.

The government official who said the extent of the pope's comments on church-state relations surprised him also disputed estimates by foreign reporters and church spokesmen of the size of crowds that had gathered to worship with the pope.

"The figures of you journalists are highly exaggerated," Stefan Staniszewski, a Foreign Ministry spokesman, told reporters. He estimated 120,000 to 200,000 pilgrims had come each day to attend the pontiff's public appearances. Foreign reporters and churchmen had estimated the figure at up to a half-million.

On Wednesday morning, the pope sang at an outdoor mass before a crowd that included thousands of schoolchildren playing hooky. Poles at the mass said they had been unsuccessful in attempts to get children excused from school. At noon, he addressed a gathering of priests and monks.

The pope's schedule called for evening prayer servies in Wawel Cathedral in a hilltop fortress overlooking Krakow, a 1,000-year-old city 120 miles south of Warsaw.

The cathedral is the site where Bishop Stanislaw was martyred 900 years ago. It is in the compound of Wawel Castle on a promontory overlooking the narrow, winding streets of the old town of Krakow on one side and a sweeping bend of the Vistula River on the other.

Nearby, on Franciszkanska Street, one of the city's oldest, is the episcopal palace where the pope maintained an apartment before his elevation. He also had lived there as a theology student in 1942, when he joined a clandestine archepiscopal seminary during the Nazi occupation.

Detailed Coverage (Sort Of) Given Pope

WARSAW (AP) — The government-controlled news media in Poland has been giving detailed coverage to the visit of Pope John Paul II — but not to his calls for freedom of religion and to his other comments on church-state relations.

The pope's visit has been front-page news in national newspapers, although it did yield the lead position to the opening of a children's hospital in one paper and to Italy's elections in another.

But the newspapers, like the Communist government that controls them, have been ignoring the pope's references to disputes between the church and state, and have stressed positive aspects of the visit.

Commentaries have generally emphasized that he was visiting his motherland, dwelling on the nationalism in the event.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Stefan Staniszewski, asked about the limited coverage at a news conference Wednesday, replied: "Trybuna Ludu is an organ of the Central Committee of the Communist Party. They write on the activities of the Communists. Does the Catholic press write on the activities of the Communists?"

At the news conference, Staniszewski also made the government's first official comment on the visit, saying he was "surprised" at how outspoken the pope had been on church-state relations. He and another government spokesman said the foreign press had inflated crowd sizes in its reports.

Polish television and radio, like the newspapers, have offered extensive coverage of the pope's visit but not of his remarks on church-state relations. In addition, some observers have said the electronic media have tended to downplay or show little of the size of the crowds.

Nicaragua Placed In State Of Siege

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — President Anastasio Somoza declared a three-month state of siege Wednesday to help his government break a general strike and put down the spreading insurrection led by Sandinista guerrillas.

Heavy fighting raged in Leon, 54 miles northwest of Managua, and there were reports of continued battles in the south — near the Costa Rican border and in a half-dozen cities.

To the north, neighboring Honduras said its army raided and broke up a clandestine Sandinista guerrilla training camp near El Triunfo, 95 miles south of Tegucigalpa, near the Nicaraguan border.

An army spokesman said six soldiers were wounded in a battle that last several hours. He said about 80 guerrillas were arrested and 60 fled across the border into Nicaragua.

Somoza told The Associated Press in a telephone interview that the state of siege, a form of martial law, would enable the national guard to arrest people without warrants and hold them longer than the constitutionally mandated 24 hours.

It also allows the police to search and arrest citizens, and transfers most trials for virtually any crime from civilian to military courts.

Somoza said domestic news media would be restricted and the movement of persons in the countryside controlled.

Foreign Minister Julio C. Quintana said an 8 p.m. to 4 a.m. curfew was ordered.

Military sources said reservists were being called up to active duty and ordered to Managua's National Stadium for processing, but the guard declined to elaborate.

Rodolfo Abaunza Salinas, editor of the Leon newspaper El Centroamericano, said by telephone at least 400 Sandinista National Liberation Front guerrillas, both men and women, controlled the city and the airport after three days of fighting. There were no reports here on Leon casualties.

60 Rockets Fired

"The guard was rocketing and strafing Leon," Abaunza said. "On Tuesday I counted at least 60 rockets fired by national guard airplanes."

Journalists returning from Leon Tuesday said they saw a guard column of trucks loaded with heavily armed troops, escorted by two armored cars and a Sherman tank, approach the city.

But Abaunza said the column was having difficulty Wednesday penetrating to the city center, where witnesses said the rebels had soldiers pinned down in a guard garrison.

Heavy fighting also was reported in the southern cities of Matagalpa, Jinotepe, Diriamba and Chichigalpa, where at least 30 persons had been reported killed in earlier fighting.

"Sweeping Success"

The national guard said its forces "continue with sweeping success in the rebuff of the international brigade of communist mercenaries." Most battle areas have been closed to journalists seeking to verify claims by each side.

In Managua, a general strike called by the rebels as part of their "final offensive" to topple Somoza's right-wing government and end his family's 42-year rule continued to paralyze the capital.

Few vehicles were on the street and there was little activity in the city's usually bustling markets. Most businesses, except those linked with the government, were closed.

Panama Accused

Somoza said in the interview that the state of siege was needed because neighboring Costa Rica "has not been able to close their border, where they are resupplying and reinforcing the invasion we have been able to contain." He also accused Panama of aiding the rebels.

Costa Rica and Panama have denied they are aiding the Sandinistas in any way. Somoza last week said he might declare war on Costa Rica.

On Wednesday, Somoza denied he was about to declare war on Nicaragua's small southern neighbor. In a related development, Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo issued a statement warning that his country "will use every means within international law to prevent or check any act of aggression against Costa Rica."

Mexico Worried

The statement added Mexico was worried "by the Nicaraguan government's threats to extend war operations in Costa Rican territory."

Mexico broke diplomatic relations with Nicaragua last month because of what Lopez Portillo called a "horrendous genocide" being carried out by Somoza's 10,000-man national guard in putting down the guerrilla insurrection. Costa Rica broke rlations with Somoza in November.

Somoza imposed a state of siege in Nicaragua last September during a guerrilla-led national uprising against his regime, but lifted it two months later. The Red Cross estimates more than 3,000 persons have died in fighting since the September rebellion.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and Turkey will sign a prisoner exchange treaty in Ankara today, the State Department announced Wednesday.

DC-10 WORK CONTINUES — Workers at the McDonnell-Douglas plant in Long Beach, Calif., continue work in the production of DC-10 aircraft Wednesday. The Federal Aviation Administration said Wednesday that the DC-10 might have design defects and suspended the certificate of the troubled plane, grounding all 138 of the jetliners flown by U.S. carriers. 'Dead' Airman Alive Near Galveston investigation in Southeast Texas about two months ago. The agent asked to remain anonymous.

The agent said the U.S. Attorney's office in San Antonio initially ruled that there was no federal violation falling under its jurisdiction and turned the case over to the Department of Defense and the San Antonio police. Roberson said local police know the man is near Galveston, where he is reportedly working as a carpenter, and plan to apprehend him when charges are filed.

"If he's found alive, he would be classified as a deserter," said Lackland spokesman Joe McAnally. Air Force officials could not immediately determine how much his family had received in death benefits.

Higgs' wife, Carolyn, and their two daughters, have since moved to Hawaii, said Roberson. "She never lived with him after the disappearance and she may not even know about this latest development," he said.

Higgs' father, W.W. Higgs Sr. of Vidor, told The San Antonio News that Mrs. Higgs lived in Vidor for more than a year after the disappearance before moving to Hawaii. He said his daughter-in-law had received death and insurance benefits, but added that he did not know how much.

Vidor police records show that a man named Wilmer W. Higgs Jr., matching the description of the missing sergeant "right down the line," was issued a traffic ticket there June 4, 1978, said Vidor Police Lt. Sam Kittrell. The FBI contacted Vidor police three weeks ago about the ticket, Kittrell said.

Higgs' father told The News he had not seen his son since the disappearance. "I never have believed he was dead," said W.W. Higgs Sr. "I have never convinced myself of that fact and I won't until I see the body."

Mrs. Higgs could not be located for comment.

Roberson said FBI reports showed Higgs worked for Brown & Root Construction Co. at the South Texas Nuclear Project near Bay City for several months after his disappearance, apparently using the alias "Johnny Newman." Brown & Root confirmed that a man by that name worked for them there.

Roberson, quoting an FBI report, said Higgs left that job and worked at a Texaco station in Beaumont before moving to the Galveston area to work as a carpenter.

President Asks Cuts In Federal Raises

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter asked Congress Wednesday to change the federal pay system and hold down salary increases for 2.1 million federal employees, saving the taxpayers an estimated $3 billion a year.

Military pay would remain largely unaffected. Administration officials dropped a proposal that would have held down pay for uniformed personnel after Pentagon officials protested.

Carter's package, strongly opposed by federal employee unions, was backed by Common Cause, two major business groups and associations of state governments and legislatures.

No federal worker would get a pay cut, but future pay raises would be held down until federal pay is closer to administration estimates of non-federal salaries.

Reduction Estimated

Carter's personnel director, Alan K. Campbell, said that when fully implemented in October, 1981 the proposals would hold federal pay 3 percent to 5 percent below what it would be under present pay formulas.

Prospects for passage of the plan are uncertain. The pay proposals are so controversial that Carter dropped a similar set from last year's bill to streamline federal hiring and firing procedures, which passed overwhelmingly.

Nevertheless, Campbell said "I believe we have a good chance of getting the (pay) legislation passed." He predicted congressional committees would report it out before the end of the year for floor action no later than early 1980.

Pensions Accounted For

The major proposal would take account of generous civil service pensions and other fringe benefits when setting federal pay at a level supposedly comparable to non-federal pay.

A similar proposal also would compare federal pay not only to pay in private business, as is now the case, but to an average that would include pay for state and local government workers, who now make up 13 percent of the work force.

The proposals would have the effect of holding down future federal pay levels, since federal fringe benefits are more generous than non-federal fringes and since state-local government pay averages less than federal.

$2.2 Billion Saving

Originally, administration officials had estimated a $4 billion annual saving from changes in laws that require federal pay to the comparable to that of a similar job in private industry, but this has now been scaled down to a $2.2 billion estimate, which Campbell said is based on "more conservative" calculations.

Another key part of the package would produce a $600 million estimated yearly saving by pegging pay for 500,000 blue-collar federal workers to the locally prevailing rate.

Presently, blue-collar workers are on a five-step pay scale with the top step pegged by law at 12 percent higher than the local prevailing wage.

Another $100 million would be saved by eliminating special cost-of-living allowances in Alaska and other high-cost U.S. areas.

This would not be needed, Campbell said, because the administration also is proposing to pay most white-collar federal workers the locally prevailing rate.

Presently, virtually all white-collar workers are paid under a single, nationwide scale that effectively pays them more than the going rate in the South, Southwest and other low-wage areas, but which makes recruiting difficult in New York City, Boston and other high-wage cities where the federal rate is below market rates.

Yearly military pay raises would no longer be pegged to annul white-collar increases, but would be pegged to the average increase n private-sector pay, not including fringes.

Campbell said he couldn't predict the precise impact on military pay raises, but expected it would not differ much from what would have resulted if the federal pay system remained unchanged.

Under the administration's original proposal military pay raises would have remained pegged to the revised white-collar pay formula, and so would have been held down. But Campbell said Pentagon officials expressed concern and the proposal was changed.

Area's Cotton Crop Hinges On Weather

ease in places," he said. "And we have some fields where about one stalk in four, or about 25 percent, will be lost, and that's not a big loss — there still would be enough of a stand left to make a decent crop."

Taylor said some cotton planted from 1977-crop seed is "looking relatively good, but we don't have much of that."

While too much heat and low humidity would be damaging in the near term, rains and cool temperatures would aggravate the seedling disease complex and further retard development of the already late crop.

"Those cold thunderstorms really hurt," Taylor said. "They sear over the soil and waterlog it, and that's what could make this seedling disease go ahead and take its toll."

A rain-free period with temperatures ranging from about the mid-80s to mid-60s, with good humidity and a moderate amount of sunshine, would be desirable, agricultural officials said.

Cotton planting was gaining speed Wednesday in southern areas where farmers earlier had insufficient moisture to produce stands. With no weather interruptions, planting there will be in full swing later this week.

"We're 'blacking' this county pretty fast," said Eddie Brown of Lamesa, executive director of the Dawson County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

Farmers are planting some fields a little wet, he said, but they are anxious to get the crop in the ground. Some are still waiting on drying in low-lying areas which may or may not get planted.

Some Cotton Replanted

Brown said Dawson County farmers, who have been expected to plant about 300,000 acres of cotton, were able to "save" about 35,000 acres of the fiber crop. He said some cotton is being replanted and about half the county is being planted for the first time.

Cotton on about five sections was hailed out Tuesday night in western Lamb County.

The final cotton planting date under the federal farm program expired Friday in Deaf Smith, Parmer and Castro counties and ended Tuesday in Swisher, Briscoe, Bailey, Lamb, Hale, Cochran and Floyd counties.

The period will expire Sunday in Hockley, Lubbock, Crosby, Motley and Dickens counties and on June 15 in the remainder of the 25-county area.

He knows how much time the legislature has available for such purposes and he gets down to detail and to the point."

Like Tech, MSU is a land grant university and depends on the state legislature for funds. Gaining money from the Michigan legislature for MSU and its three medical schools will be one of Mackey's top priorities if he is chosen president.

Short gave Mackey much of the credit for Tech's medical school receiving $3.5 million more from the Texas Legislature than originally recommended for the 1979-80 biennium by the Legislative Budget Board.

In an A-J survey of regents last spring, Mackey got mixed reviews. But one observer praised Mackey's administrative style, saying,"Mackey comes to the board meetings prepared like a lawyer for a court trial. He's done his research, he's ready for any question and he'll push the board for a decision in each case, if necessary."

Some of that pushing, however, drew some criticism of Tech's ninth president. When Tech students lobbied for liquor on campus, Mackey sided with them although regents defeated the proposal.

Stand Found Embarrassment

Some regents found Mackey's stance an embarrassment to the board. One member said it "made us look bad in the students' eyes."

Bill Dean, executive director of the Texas Tech Ex-Students Association, said Mackey worked well with his group, although he said Mackey would have probably preferred to have more control of the group.

"I personally found him very cooperative with us," Dean said. "He attended all our major events and has been very responsive and encouraging."

While East Lansing residents have been hearing Mackey's name as a candidate since late April, the news was a well-kept secret in Lubbock.

Most Tech regents could not be reached for comment Wednesday, but Don Workman of Lubbock said he was not aware of Mackey's plans to interview for the MSU job. Workman added that Mackey's secretary told him that regent chairman Robert Pfluger probably knew of Mackey's intensions to visit MSU this week.

Dr. Edgar Harden, 71, acting president of MSU, reportedly had dinner with Mackey Tuesday evening, although he said, "No comment" when asked about it.

Harden did tell The A-J that Mackey sounded like a good candidate and said, "I hope we can get him."

If Mackey is named MSU president, as The Detroit News reported in its Wednesday edition, he will live in Cowles House, a large two-story house on campus. The house was designed for entertaining and features white carpeting and a grand piano in its large living room. It includes multiple bedrooms and baths as well as a basement.

Mackey and his wife, Clare, have three children, two of whom live at home. Their oldest daughter is married.

Carter Vows Energy Plan With Solons

that a major new effort was needed to lessen U.S. reliance on oil imports.

Those in attendance reported that the president was glum about reports that oil on international spot markets has been selling for as high as $50 a barrel.

Reports that oil-exporting countries may be deliberating withholding supplies from the United States so they can achieve these high spot-market prices was also a chief topic of discussion at the session, O'Neill said.

"The president outlined the world situation," O'Neill said.

House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, told reporters the new energy package would be "a massive commitment to doing something."

Wright said there was a "positive consensus" among the president and those attending the session to assemble a package that would include, at the least, these three elements:

Fuels From Coal

— A rush program to develop synthetic fuels from coal that can replace oil imports. A bill authorizing $2 billion in federal price subsidies to plants that produce these fuels, already approved by the House Banking Committee, might be a starting point, Wright said.

— Legislation to expedite construction of pipelines to carry Alaska oil from the West Coast to the nation's inland — including one that would remove all remaining legal obstacles to construction of Sohio's troubled California-Texas pipeline proposal.

— Various other energy bills, possibly including one encouraging expanded use of "gasohol," that the president would select as being important to the nation's energy future and which congressional leaders would then give priority treatment.

Smooth Difficulties

Wright said Wednesday's meeting was an attempt to smooth over past difficulties on energy issues the president has had with the Democratic-controlled Congress.

"It should not be viewed as a heavyweight championship, with Carter in one corner and Congress in the other," Wright said.

"The American people are upset because they don't see the nation doing anything positive," he added.

He said major elements of the new energy initiative would be passed by Congress this year.

The White House session gave the president the "energy summit" that never developed last weekend when he called a group of House Democrats to Camp David to patch up past difficulties.

Joining the usual congressional leadership figures at Wednesday's breakfast meeting were lawmakers who deal with energy issues, including Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., chairman of the Senate Energy Committee; Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., chairman of the House Interior Committee, and Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the House Commerce energy and power subcommittee.

Probe Due On Design Of DC-10s

of the DC-10 and will take whatever steps are necessary to accomplish this."

The sudden FAA order, hand-delivered to McDonnell Douglas before dawn, caught air carriers by surprise, forcing cancellation of hundreds of flights, reshuffling of airplanes and disrupting plans of thousands of passengers. Some waited hours for alternate flights.

$35 Million Each

The grounded DC-10s are valued at $5 billion or about $35 million each.

The DC-10s, operated by eight U.S. airlines, carry between 60,000 and 70,000 passengers a day on 450 flights. That is about 9 percent of the 800,000 passengers who ride on the nation's airlines each day.

Foreign carriers that operate the DC-10 were not legally bound by the FAA order, but several — including West Germany's Lufthansa, Italy's Alitalia and Canada's Wardair — grounded their planes. The British Civil Aviation Authority withdrew the certificates for DC-10s in Britain, grounding the planes there.

Most seriously affected were long-haul routes such as New York and Miami to Los Angeles and flights to Hawaii from the West Coast.

Timing Of Order

The FAA's grounding order came just three hours before the agency was to return to court here to try to convince a judge that the three-engine jet was safe to fly.

On Tuesday, U.S. District Judge Aubrey E. Robinson initially issued — but later postponed execution of — a temporary order directing the FAA to ground the DC-10s. In staying his order, he said he wanted to give the agency a chance to defend the plane's safety.

FAA spokesman Jerry Doolittle said the fresh cracks, each two inches long, were discovered Tuesday night on two American Airlines DC-10s being inspected in San Francisco. The planes were undergoing 100-hour inspections, which were required in the wake of the Chicago crash.

Had Been Inspected

"Why this is so disturbing is that these two aircraft had gone through the inspection process" and were thought free of problems, he said.

The investigation of the DC-10 has focused on the engine mounting since the May 25 accident.

First, investigators on the crash site found that an important bolt was broken in the engine mounting assembly on the downed plane, as was the metal flange of another engine mount. These two points were ordered inspected and the DC-10s were grounded until they were.

Those inspections disclosed several new problems in the engine mounting assembly.

Nevada Votes Tax Repeal

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Nevadans have voted to keep slashing taxes, overwhelmingly approving repeal of the state's 24-year-old sales tax on food. The repeal will save consumers an estimated $27 million a year, starting July 1, officials said.

The 2 percent general sales tax was recalled in Tuesday's general election by a margin of more than 4 to 1.

Actor, Song-Dance Man Jack Haley Dies At 79

of Variety Artists (AGVA), the embattled union he once headed.

"You can't be happy here if you don't see any hope for people who are suffering, impoverished and in pain," he once remarked about his charitable activities. "Who am I to be so fortunate? My being so lucky, I want to give some of it back."

As is often the case with Hollywood celebrities, there is wide disagreement about his age. Although the hospital said his year of birth was 1900, hospital officials said they weren't absolutely sure about it. The authoritative reference books Who's Who and The Filmgoer's Companion say he was born Aug. 10, 1899, in Boston. Other reference sources say it was 1895, 1896, 1900 or 1902.

Haley seemed to have been blessed with the luck of the Irish since his birth in Boston. Son of a sea navigator, he made his debut as a singer at the age of 6, ran away to New York at 18 to go on the stage. After a period as a song plugger, he began playing vaudeville and made his Broadway debut in "Around the Town."

He teamed in vaudeville with Florence McFadden, whom he had met at the start of his career. She became Mrs. Haley, and they were married for 52 years. Besides Jack Jr., the pair had a daughter, Gloria.

Haley and McFadden first came to Hollywood in the early 1930s for a musical short. He returned to Broadway for "Take a Chance," in which his rendition of "You're an Old Smoothie" drew 13 encores on opening night. His bland style translated readily to the movies, and he first appeared for Paramount in "Follow Through" and "Here Comes The Groom."

The Haley career thrived at 20th Century-Fox, where he starred with Shirley Temple in "Poor Little Rich Girl" and in "Pigskin Parade" with Jack Oakie and young Judy Garland. Haley's favorite film was "Wake up and Live," in which he introduced the standard "Never in a Million Years." His other films included "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," 'Alexander's Ragtime Band," "Thanks for Everything" and "People Are Funny."

In later years Haley was often asked about his co-star of "The Wizard of Oz," Judy Garland. "She didn't get love and discipline; it broke my heart," said the actor. Ironically, Garland's daughter, Liza Minnelli, married — and later divorced — Jack Haley, Jr.

Iranian Officials, Rebels Negotiate To End Tensions, Violence

KHORAMSHAHR, Iran (AP) — Government officials and a leader of Iran's rebellious Arab population signed an eight-point agreement Wednesday aimed at ending a week of tension and violence in the southwestern province of Khuzestan, local sources said.

Arabs, an ethnic minority in this Persian nation, tried to take over the chief port city of Khoramshahr last Wednesday, demanding autonomy for Khuzestan's 2 million Arabs and a bigger slice of the profits from this oil-producing area.

Thirty-seven persons were reported killed and 200 wounded when revolutionary militiamen drove out the rebels in four days of bloody fighting.

Sources who declined to be identified said the accord includes a government commitment to choose officials strictly on the basis of their ability. The Arabs have complained that, although they are a majority in the province, they are governed by Persians from other areas. They claim job discrimination and say they want wider use of the Arabic language.

Arabs and Persians share the Moslem faith, although some Arabs are members of the Sunni sect of Islam and most Persians are Shiite Moslems.

In the agreement, the sources said, the government promised to arrest those responsible for the violence, "whether government officials or not," apparently guaranteeing a fair investigation. Iran blamed the violence on reactionary and counter-revolutionary elements, and agents of foreign powers, and claimed Iraq allowed weapons to reach Khuzestan during the fighting.

The sources said the agreement called for the government to care for the families of the fighting's victims, and said security of towns in the area was to be handled by local and rural police. During last week's violence large numbers of masked revolutionary guards loyal to the central government moved into the area from all over the country to help quell the rebellion.

Under the agreement, the sources said, political groups were to be controlled and largely limited to cultural activities.

The sources said the agreement was signed by Arab leader Sheik Mohammed Taher al-Shobeir Khaghani and the governors of Khoramshahr and neighboring Ahwaz. Khaghani was expected to present the accord for approval on Thursday to 2,000 Arab militants who have been sitting-in at a Khoramshahr mosque since last week.

The government, apparently as a sign of respect to Khaghani, expressed regret over two recent attacks on the Arab leader's house, in which the sheik claimed two members of his household were wounded, the sources said. They reported the government said it bears no responsibility for the attack.

In Tehran, newspapers reported the execution Tuesday of Charaghali Aghighi, a state policeman, who was convicted of killing anti-shah demonstrators last year. The shooting of Aghighi in the northeastern town of Torbat Haydarieh, brought to 270 the number of persons executed by the revolutionary courts since Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's regime was toppled last February by the revolution of Shiite Moslem religious leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

The alligator got its name when the Spanish first saw the reptile in the New World and called it "el lagarto," the lizard.

SMALL TRAVELERS — Cecil E. Moorhouse, a retired professional engineer in Cochrane, Alberta, had been taking pictures for 65 years when he shot, in color, this picture of two children that won a $500 Honor Award in the 1978 Kodak International Newspaper Snapshot Awards.

CONCENTRATION — This photo won a $100 special award for Kim Harter, 9, of Jackson, Mich., in the 1978 Kodak International Newspaper Snapshot Awards.

Old, Young Have Equal Photo Chance

The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal snapshot contest is open to all amateur photographers and winners in the Kodak International Newspaper Snapshot Awards,to which local top winners will be submitted, reflect a broad span of age, experience, occupations and interests.

Kim Hunter, a Jackson, Mich., fifth grader, had been taking pictures for five of her nine years. She reached the international judging with two of the eight photos submitted by the Detroit Free Press. Her black-and-white entry, a shot of her sister and her grandfather playing checkers, won a $100 Special Merit Award. Her color entry, taken as a part of her work for a Girl Scout merit badge in photography, received a certificate of merit.

Zoning Board Okays Large Annexation

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Despite concerns that Lubbock sewer lines are reaching capacity, the Planning and Zoning Commission recommended Wednesday that 720 acres south of the city be annexed.

That recommendation now will go to the Lubbock City Council.

Norton Baker and Leroy Elmore asked to have the property, bounded by 98th Street, 114th Street, University Avenue and Indiana Avenue, annexed more than a year ago.

However, consideration of the annexation request was postponed pending the formulation of an annexation policy by a commission subcommittee.

Planning Director Jim Bertram said the commission tentatively had adopted annexation guidelines, which the request met.

The annexation committee, called the Rural Land Use Study Committee, had agreed that ultimate boundaries on future city growth should be established. That would notify developers that areas not within the potential growth area would not be annexed by the city and would not receive city services or city water.

The committee established boundaries in Lubbock's "prime growth" areas north, west and south of the city. Within the boundaries, areas which already were developed, were in the process of developing or areas with the immediate potential for development would become immediate candidates for annexation, Bertram said.

The annexation request meets the last requirement, Bertram said, because the landowners had indicated "they are ready to turn it over to a developer and subdivide it."

Bertram said there remained a question whether any land should be annexed before the city is assured a third water source will be built. The city is contemplating construction of reservoirs at Post and Justiceburg, but voters likely will have to vote money for the project.

Also, he said residents of the annexed area would not be within the five-minute fire service response time unless the council approves money to build a fire station in far South Lubbock.

That is unlikely, he said, adding the next fire station probably will be built in Northwest Lubbock.

Because the area would not be within the five-minute response time, Bertram said fire insurance rates could increase for residents in the rest of the city.

However, the question remains unresolved whether city sewer lines in South Lubbock could handle the additional load after the area is developed.

Sam Wahl, director of water utilities, said a sewer "trunk line" needs to be constructed along 98th Street, but said no money has been appropriated for that purpose and it probably will require another bond issue.

"I'm afraid we've about used up all our existing capacity in lines that serve the area," he said.

But Wahl said he did not know positively the sewer capacity was inadequate to serve the area. That information will be available, he said, when the council considers the annexation request.

Baker compared his annexation request to that of residents of the Yellowhouse Canyon Addition in Southeast Lubbock, who were successful in being annexed into the city earlier this year.

Baker said that area was not in a prime growth zone, not close to a five-minute fire response zone and a "slum area" which is costing the city to clean up.

Since the council has appropriated money to widen and pave Indiana Avenue "within 200 yards of this property," Baker said council members had indicated they "anticipate development out there or they wouldn't be spending the money."

EDDIE RABBITT

JANIE FRICKE

Eddie Rabbitt To Perform At Fair

Eddie Rabbitt, who was a hit with audiences at the Panhandle South Plains Fair here last year, will return for the 62nd annual exposition, according to Steve L. Lewis, fair general manager.

Rabbitt, who has made nine consecutive No. 1 singles, will be here for an 8 p.m. show Sept. 25, Lewis said. The fair run is Sept. 22-29.

Rabbitt, recently named the best new male vocalist in country music, will be joined on the stage of Fair Park Coliseum by Janie Fricke, who was nominated for the newcomer of the year award at the 1979 Country Music Awards.

It's the third entertainment package to be annunced for this year's fair. Earlier, Lewis said Charley Pride will return for the ninth time for 5 p.m. and 8 p.m. shows on Sept. 23. Also, Dave and Sugar, with 1979 newcomer of the year John Conlee, will be here for an 8 p.m. show on Sept. 26.

Rabbitt recently was awarded the Silver Bullet Award by Country Music Magazine. From his first hit in 1975, "Forgive and Forget," Rabbitt's singles consistently have made the top 10 on the country charts.

Initially, however, he made his mark writing songs for other artists, such as "Kentucky Rain," the late Elvis Presley's 50th million-seller, and "Pure Love," Ronnie Milsap's hit.

Originally a background singer, Miss Fricke branched out on her own and her debut album was dubbed "Singer of Songs." Since then she has been nominated for best female country vocalist and won a bullet award for best female vocalist from Country Music Magazine.

Over the years, Miss Fricke has backed up such stars as Dolly Parton, Milsap, Lynn Anderson, Crystal Gayle, Johnny Paycheck, Johnny Duncan and Vern Gosdin.

Eleven shows are being arranged for the eight-day fair run, Lewis said. Other attractions will be announced in the near future.

All seats are reserved and ticket prices are $4, $5, and $6 for all shows.

Tickets may be reserved now by writing the fair association at P.O. Box 208, Lubbock, 79408. However, tickets will not be mailed to purchasers until they become available in mid-Auguest.

At that time they also will go on safe at six locations including the box office in Fair Park Coliseum.

Air Force Searches For Downed Pilots

CARRIZOZO, N.M. (UPI) — An Air Force search team Wednesday was looking for two pilots whose F-5E jet fighters crashed in rugged mountains during a training mission almost two months ago.

The wreckage of the two fighters, missing since April 12, was located Wednesday by a rancher. However, searchers were unable to locate the bodies of Capts. Thomas S. Pollock, 26, of Hermiston, Ore., and Michael C. Humphries, 29, of Dallas.

The pilots, both stationed at Nellis Air Force Base near Las Vegas, Nev., were returning to nearby Holloman Air Force Base from an air combat training mission over the White Sands Missile Range when they disappeared from radar.

Following the planes' disappearance, the Air Force conducted an extensive air and ground search over the vast White Sands range and nearby mountains but failed to find any trace of the aircraft or the pilots.

A spokesman for Holloman said the wreckage site was in the same general area where ground units and aircraft had previously searched for the jet fighters.

Holloman officials also would not speculate on the possibility the two jets collided and said only that a "board of qualified officers" had been dispatched to the crash scene northwest of Carrizozo.

Post Office Eyeing Civic Center Site

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The post office has checked into availability of property in the vicinity of the civic center for a new postal facility, but has made no offer for the land, Lubbock's top postal official said Wednesday.

Postmaster Elmer Reed Jr. said "we have made some inquiries into who owns what" and whether the land is available, but denied rumors that the postal service has requested purchase of the land from the City of Lubbock or from Urban Renewal.

The post office is seeking a site for a new downtown retail outlet. The main office at 1515 Ave. G would be used for administrative offices and mail processing, according to Reed.

He said he "personally would prefer the area of the civic center" for a new facility, but doesn't know how property in that area is zoned.

Reed said that Ken Wood from the field real estate and buildings office in Dallas was in Lubbock to "find out about the property" and contacted some businessmen in the downtown area. He said that Wood probably inquired about the zoning also.

Reed said that the post office had released a notice at the end of March requesting information about possible sites for the new building and asked that any offers be submitted by April 30.

The post office requested sites in an area bounded on the north by Third Street, on the south by 15th Street, on the east by Avenue K and on the west by Avenue R.

But since few offers were submitted, said Reed, he started checking into the availability of land surrounding the civic center.

According to Orville Alderson, director of Urban Renewal in Lubbock, Urban Renewal owns some of the land near the Civic Center and the city owns property north of the complex.

Reed added that before publicizing the post office's search for land, he had checked with the city planning office to "look at the general planning" for the downtown area. He said he also checked with the Chamber of Commerce to find out whether the building would be in conflict with any development in the downtown area.

He said that a letter from City Planning Director Jim Bertram indicated that the building would be in conflict in some areas with the overall plans for downtown business.

Reed said the original plans for the downtown area are old, but that the city "has not abandoned that plan. We may not be able to get into the perimeter area for downtown planning," he said.

He said he received no offers from the city or from Urban Renewal of land near the civic center and said that, "We can't go to the city until we find out about zoning and what's available."

The post office "is still open to suggestions" for land sites, said Reed, but if no land sites are found, "We'll start looking at some alternatives." He said he was not prepared to discuss those alternatives.

Reed said the new facility is needed because the main office is "overcrowded and there's not enough parking."

He said the post office wants to get closer to the downtown business section to "have complete window transaction facilities and to move our carrier operations there.

"The trend in most cities is to move away from downtown, but every box we rent here is full all the time," he said.

He added that sites in the preferred boundary area would "would be within three blocks of most everything" so that the post office would be accessible for more customers.

Concerning the civic center site Reed said, "Most of our customers are in the daytime and most of the civic center's are on the weekends and at night, so I can see no conflict there."

He said the cost of the building has not yet been estimated.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Bridge teacher Sumner Cotzin of Worcester, Mass., has a monthly publication called "Communication". Each month's issue includes a problem.

West opens the five of clubs. East takes his ace and shifts to the jack of spades. West overtakes with the queen after you (South) duck. West continues with the ace and a third spade which you ruff with dummy's queen.

Sumner asks how you should proceed.

You start some detective work by cashing dummy's queen of diamonds. Then you come to your hand with the queen of clubs. You aren't worried about a ruff. If West's club lead had been a singleton, he would have let East hold the first spade trick.

Now you lead out your two high diamonds. You aren't worried about West ruffing because dummy can overruff and you know that East won't be able to ruff. West follows to all three diamonds and you know he started with 7-1-2-3 distribution. Now you have solved all heart-suit problems.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY
DR. PAUL E. RUBLE

Dear Dr. Ruble: Years ago I was told x-rays showed I had stones in my gall bladder. I got only mild discomfort in my stomach but have never had a real attack, and I eat and drink what I please. Two doctors tell me the stones should be removed. Although I have faith in them, I am hesitant because I feel so well. I would appreciate your thoughts. Can stones be dissolved without surgery? — Mrs. R.B.

Last question first. Experimental drugs are being tried in some centers to dissolve stones, but results have been disappointing. Surgery is safe and effective, if you need it.

Your second question: You can believe the x-rays that showed the stones. You don't have to have attacks to prove they are there. You'd have distinct pain if infection developed or if the stones were small enough to get into the duct that empties bile into the small intestine. Nor does the fact that you can eat what you please mean too much. Recent studies have more or less discounted the connection between diet and gallstone pain.

So where does this leave you with regard to surgery? Experts disagree. Some favor removal to prevent traveling stones or infection, which is always a threat. My feeling is that they are best removed if they become troublesome and if the patient's health allows it. Those under 40 who have stones are likely to have trouble in the future. If you are over 60, other medical problems have to be considered.

For most, surgery is a precautionary step. If you believe Murphy's law, a gallstone emergency is likely to arise unexpectedly and under the worst of circumstances, as when you are far from home and your own doctors. It is considerations such as these which prompt some physicians to recommend this ounce of surgical prevention.

P.S. Gallstone pain does not have to be centered in the precise area of the gall bladder but may be radiated to nearby areas. Such as your back. See my booklet, "You And Your Gall Bladder," for a more detailed discussion. For a copy, send 35 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Ruble, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Dear Dr. Ruble: I have little skin ulcers with my varicose veins. They have spread above my knees. I have had the problem for some time now. Besides wearing support stockings, is there anything I can do? — B.J.F.

Skin ulcers with varicose veins are from poor circulation — a lack of nourishment in the area. It starts as a discoloration of the skin. Ulcers represent the later stage of the problem.

Varicose ulcers are usually limited to the lower leg, specifically to the insides of the ankles. If you have them higher up, you may need more treatment than support stockings. This can indicate a complicating infection of the skin. Have it looked at. It is possible that the material in the support stockings is aggravating the situation. Otherwise, it's best to wear the stockings during the day and depend on leg elevations at night or anytime you are sitting.

• •

Dear Dr. Ruble: My question involves mononucleosis. Are drugs ever given for a youngster who gets this? What causes it? — Mrs. P.R.

Drugs are not usually given, except for aspirin or some other mild medicine to relieve aches or sore throat. For the rare complications — hemolytic anemia (destruction of red blood cells) or nerve and heart damage — other medicines might be needed, cortisone for the blood problem, for example.

There is no medical cure for "mono" itself, which is caused by an organism called the Epstein-Barr virus. Usually rest and good nutrition are all that's needed, but return to activity should not begin until the physician gives the go-ahead. Recuperation is usually uncomplicated but may be lengthy.

Dear Dr. Ruble: I had my ears pierced for earrings and developed hard lumps at the opening. What should I do — forget about it or be examined? Is it dangerous? — Mrs. P.Y.

You can forget about it after the lumps have been looked at and confirmed as keloids. You are probably a dark-skinned person, and for that reason more prone to keloid formation.

Troubled with vericose veins? To make sure you are doing all you can, write to Dr. Ruble, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611 for a copy of his booklet, "How to Deal with Vericose Veins." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents.

Dr. Ruble welcomes reder mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann: I was struck by your answer to the woman whose husband snored. You said, "It isn't the snoring you mind — the problem goes much deeper than that." How right you are. I ax living proof.

I'm a light sleeper. If the cat sneezes in the next room I open my eyes. When I was married to my first husband, I couldn't tolerate the slightest noises at night, much less his snoring. Separate beds were the answer for a while. We soon slept in separate rooms. Things went from bad to worse. After seven years, I realized I was unhappy with everything. Getting the courage to ask for a divorce was the smartest thing I ever did.

My new husband is loving, considerate, affectionate, and snores up a storm. It's music to my ears. My anger in my first marriage was never directed, so I blamed everything else, unwilling to admit it was a lousy relationship. I've never been this happy in my life. My ex told everyone I was the most miserable witch he had ever met in his life. I find it funny. My new husband says I'm the nicest person he's ever known. — Needed Sunshine To Grow

Dear Sunshine: Don't we all? Thank you for sharing.

• • •

Dear Ann Landers: I have often wondered if you really have a sense of humor. When one reads you the guess is "yes," but the true test is the ability to recognize what is truly funny when someone else comes up with it.

Remember when you printed a letter from a truck driver who said he wore his wife's girdle and it helped his back a lot? That letter reminded me of a hilarious story. Dare you print it?

A couple of golf buddies were getting undressed to swim in a downtown club. One looked at the other in shocked disbelief. He rubbed his eyes and finally got the words out: "How long have you been wearing a girdle?" he asked.

The reply: "Ever since my wife found it in the glove compartment of our car." — Standard Club, Chicago

Dear Standard: Very funny. And now I hope this doesn't blow the poor guy's cover.

Dear Ann Landers: I realize your column isn't one that gives household hints, but you deal with such a wide variety of problems, and stains can be a real headache, so please let me share some of my "know-how" with you in exchange for the fine information you've shared with me over the years.

(1) DON'T use milk on spots or stains.

(2) DON'T use nail polish remover on any fabric.

(3) DON'T use moisture, water or heat on satins, sequins, shantung, moire, or taffeta.

(4) DON'T crush velvet when wet.

(5) DON'T ever try to remove the following stains — take them to the dry cleaners: perfume, iodine, cologne, silver nitrate, paint, medicinal spots.

(6) DON'T use commercial spot removers until you have read the instructions carefully and understand them well.

Happy School Superintendent Retires

By NANCY DORN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Landscaping the grounds of the high school in a tractor usually is not the duty of the superintendent of schools, but to Happy Superintendent Sam T. Bryan, it's just part of the job.

Bryan, who holds the record for the longest tenure among Panhandle superintendents with a 24-year record, will retire effective July 31. His successor has not been named.

"I've been accused of retiring for the last five or six years — it's time," Bryan, whose contract still has a year left, said.

One of Bryan's goals as superintendent was realized early this year when the Happy school district paid off the last bond of indebtedness. Happy is free of debt for the first time since 1919, Bryan said.

Mark Nichols, secretary-treasurer for the Happy School Board in the 1950's, said that the debt exceeded $100,000 in those days and Bryan was "highly instrumental" in freeing the district from debt.

As the unofficial "dean of Panhandle superintendents,", Bryan said that a successful superintendent has to be dedicated and willing to go beyond the call of duty.

"I'm very proud of the fact that in my 42 years of teaching I have never been absent or tardy because of illness," he said.

Another accomplishment he points to with pride is Happy's outstanding record in University Interscholastic League competition. Happy has won district competition in UIL literary events for 23 consecutive years. Bryan said that Happy, which has competed in both Class A and Class B divisions during his term, also has taken regional honors six times.

The 69-year-old educator said his greatest achievement as superintendent has been maintaining a well-balanced program in both academics and athletics.

"He changed a school known for turning out cowboys and football players into what it is now," said Nichols, citing Happy's UIL accomplishments and the high percentage of Happy students who have been successful in college.

Bryan is a graduate of Abilene Christian University, with a masters degree from Texas Tech University. He also attended the University of Colorado.

He and his wife, Mary Etta, who has headed the Happy music program for 20 years, plan to move to their farm in Tulia after Bryan's retirement.

When Swisher County Judge Louie Bonds retired early this year, there was talk of Bryan succeeding him. Bryan "looked into it" but decided not to take the position.

But even on a farm outside of Tulia, Bryan said he will still be in Swisher County, adding, "I'm not finished yet."

Service Gets New Supervisor

The Smithlawn Maternity Home of Lubbock has entered into an agreement to supervise the adoptive services operation of the New Mexico Christian Children's Home of Portales.

Charles Anderson, assistant superintendent of the New Mexico home, said that for the past three years the staff had been working with the Department of Human Services to get the facility licensed to provide adoption services.

The department licensed the home for adoption services May 31, with the provision that Smithlawn supervise the new operation for the first year.

Anderson said that for the first year, the staff will be interested primarily in recruiting adoptive families. "I project very few actual placements that first year since most of the time will be spent in setting up the operation," he said.

Howard Hulett, director of social services at Smithlawn, said the Smithlawn staff will assist the New Mexico home in placing their children and also place some of the Smithlawn children in New Mexico.

"We at Smithlawn are looking forward to a long association with the New Mexico home," Hulett added.

For the past 25 years, the New Mexico home has provided temporary shelter for homeless children, and Smithlawn has provided adoption services for the past 20 years.

Both homes are affiliated with the Church of Christ.

Pool Management School Planned

The Lubbock Health Department will present a "Swimming Pool Management School" June 16 from 8:15 a.m. to 4 p.m. in Room 101 of the Lubbock Civic Center.

The course will include instruction on sanitation in and around the pool, pool safety, bacteriology and waterborne diseases, algae control, disinfection and water filtration and recirculation. Also, the requirements of City Ordinance No. 3157, Regulation of Swimming Pools, will be discussed.

Pool supply dealers will provide information and displays.

There will be a $1 registration charge. For more information, contact Jane Bruton at the city health department, 762-6411.

SALYUT 6 CHANGES ORBIT

MOSCOW (AP) — The two cosmonauts aboard the Soviet space station Salyut 6 have completed carrying out a change in the station's orbit, the Soviet news agency Tass said Wednesday. Tass gave no reason for the orbital correction, accomplished Monday and Tuesday with the use of a rocket engine mounted on the unmanned cargo ship Progress 6, which docked with the Salyut last month. Last weekend informed sources reported that concern over the Salyut's condition had prompted officials to call off the planned launch of a Soviet-Hungarian team scheduled to join Soviet cosmonauts Vladimir Lyakhov and Valery Ryumin aboard the space laboratory.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:
Another of my retirement money-savers is making my own lace tablecloths. Not only do I use one every day on the table in our home, but have made much aqpreciated gifts for friends.

I buy 60-inch wide polyester-blend knitted lace at a fabric shop for under $10 for a large cloth. Cost, of course, will depend on the size of your table.

The ones in the stores were four or five times that much the last time I priced them. I quit looking...

First, measure your table. If it is 36 inches across you will have 24 inches of material left out of the original 60-inch for an overhang of 12 inches on each side.

Then, measure the length. Add 24 inches in order to have a 12-inch overhang on each end plus the amount of fabric needed for hems.

The cloth will be prettier if you can make the hem border correspond with the border design on the selvage sides, so you will need to check this also before cutting. Allow for the extra material needed at each end of the table.

These cloths launder great, dry quickly, and need no ironing. However, one should use caution when laundering them. Anything with hooks or buttons should never be put in the machine along with the lace.

But, with a little care, these cloths are very durable and will give good service for many years. — Mrs. Ruby Harris

Absolutely one of the greatest — especially if you have anot-so-popular-sized table (a large oval-shaped one, for instance.) Lace cloths to fit it are almost impossible to find — at any price!

Thanks to you, we can now just zip up our own — and save dollars besides! — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:
I burned a batch of cookies the other day and felt pretty burned up about it myself. But then I got a bright idea which happened to work. (Not all my bright ideas do...)

I got out my small hand grater and turned it to the side with the fine holes. Then, I gently grated the bottom of each cookie and all that charcoal came right off!

Now, if I could just think up a way to use the little mound of charcoal that's left from the cookies, I'd really feel bright! — Pat White

DEAR HELOISE:
If you want to avoid spending money on expensive flower pots for your yard and patio this summer, watch for sales on plastic pails, dishpans, wastebaskets, etc.

Break a clay pot in small pieces and put in the container, add potting soil and, last of all, your plants.

I use an ice pick to punch a few holes in the bottom of the pots for drainage. — Mrs. A.J. Laskoske

DEAR HELOISE:
To keep brass items clean, wash them frequently in sudsy water using a mild detergent. Don't place them in the dishwasher.

Lubbockite Wins Distinguished Hospital Administration Award

DALLAS (Special) — George M Brewer, president of Methodist Hospital, Lubbock, was named recipient of Texas Hospital Association's 15th annual Earl M. Collier award for distinguished hospital administration Wednesday night.

Brewer, president of Methodist Hospital since 1961, is a Fellow in the American College of Hospital Administrators. He was honored during the 50th annual convention of THA at the Dallas Convention Center.

In presenting the award, Roderic M. Bell, FACHA, chairman of the board of THA and administrator of Presbyterian Hospital in Dallas, cited Brewer "for his dedication, energy, initiative and ability, which have been applied unselfishly in service to his hospital, community and state."

Bell continued by saying, "The Texas Hospital Association owes a measure of its growth, strength and vitality to Mr. Brewer's untiring efforts and cooperation, during the past 18 years. He has served THA in many capacities from committee and council positions to being a trustee for six years.

GEORGE BREWER

"He is currently a member of the Texas Voluntary Cost Containment Review committee and is of great assistance in helping hospitals hold down the cost of health care."

Brewer has filled several positions in the Lubbock Hospital Council, the American Heart Association, the South Plains Health Systems Inc., and other health related organizations.

He was president of the New Mexico Hospital Association in 1953.

He has been active in church and civic affairs and is a member of the board of directors of the Rotary Club of Lubbock.

Earl M. Collier, administrator of Hendrick Memorial Hospital in Abilene for more than 40 years, was the first recipient of the award, given in 1965.

The award recognizes and encourages the integrity, leadership and competence in hospital administration in Texas Hospitals exemplified by Earl M. Collier.

Childress Farm-To-Market Road Studied

A-J Correspondent

CHILDRESS — Officials of the Planning and Zoning Commission are studying the possibility of a new farm-to-market road to alleviate traffic problems on the city's south side.

Dick Preston, chairman of the commission, said he has raised the possibility with the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation, County Commissioners and the City Council. Preston explained that such a road would remedy several traffic problems for residents of both the southwest and southeast sides of the city.

The road would connect U.S. Highway 83, also known as the Paducah Highway, with FM 2530 on the old Kirkland Highway.

"The way it is now, residents of southwest Childress have to go around Lake Scott to get to the southwest side, and vice versa," Preston said. "And the road would be a route for residents of the county, such as near Kirkland, to get to other areas such as CeeVee or Tell without having to use U.S. 287 in Childress."

U.S. Highway 287 is the major highway used by motorists bound for Amarillo and Wichita Falls.

Preston also noted that such a road would be useful as a route for cotton trailers from gins on the city's south side. Those trailers now must use city streets to move cotton.

Preston said he discussed the matter with the County Commissioners Court and they seemed to favor the idea, although they did not designate the project a number one priority.

The City Council, when approached by P&Z officials, said they would need more information about the exact route such a road would take in connection with city streets before they would form an opinion. The council approved a request that a letter be sent county officials recommending a study of the project.

"For my part, I want it emphasized that what we are recommending is a study," Alderman J.B. Holland said. "I don't want it to be construed that I'm in favor of the road until I know where they want it to go."

Preston said the entire length of such a road would be within Childress County, but that it would join a city street.

He estimated that the cost of such a project would be quite high but that he feels it would relieve the community's traffic problems in several areas.

"The most important thing to be done at this point," Preston said, "is to determine the amount of public interest in the project. Persons in favor of the road should speak out to county officials."

Court Awards Child $94,110

AUSTIN (AP) — A state district court jury says an infant girl's amputated left index finger is worth $94,110.

The city of Austin was sued for the loss of 13-month-old Julie Castillo's finger, which developed gangrene after a nurse used rubber bands instead of tape to secure gauze mittens on the child's hands.

District Court Judge Harley Clark says he will decide by Thursday if he agrees with the jury's decision of two weeks ago to award the damages.

Evidence at the two-day trial showed a nurse in city-owned Brackenridge Hospital placed mittens over the premature baby's hands in early May 1978 to keep her from tugging at intravenous tubes.

Instead of using tape to fasten the gloves, the nurse used rubber bands. Witnesses said one rubber band cut off circulation of blood to Julie's finger and gangrene developed. Two-thirds of the finger had to be amputated.

"Imagine when she puts on her wedding ring some day and looks at her hand," said attorney Suzanne Wood Brown, Julie's court-appointed guardian for the trial. Julie lives with her mother, Linda Castillo.

American Medical Association figures introduced at the trial said Julie's dismemberment was 11 percent total body disability.

If Clark signs the order Thursday, as scheduled, Julie will receive the money in 1996, when she is 18.

Cautious Optimism Greets Oil Strike

ATLANTIC CITY (AP) — Oilmen say they are encouraged by the first oil strike in the Baltimore Canyon Trough, but they said Wednesday that the discovery may be too little, too far from shore.

None of the five major companies which abandoned the mid-Atlantic area after 13 dry holes said they had changed their attitude because of the strike announced Tuesday by Tenneco Oil Exploration and Production Co.

"If this was on shore, it would be a hell of an oil find," said one expert. "But if you're talking huge production platforms and oil pipelines at $1½ million a mile, well, then it's just a drop in the bucket.

"It's just too early to tell whether this is a fluke or if it means they have a reservoir that's oil out there," said the expert, who asked not to be identified. "But it's the first flow of liquids in the Baltimore Canyon, and that's important."

"It's a time for cautious optimism," said Frank Basile, the Interior Department's regional manager for the Outer Continental Shelf.

Tenneco said it struck high-quality, "sweet" oil — crude oil low in polluting sulfur and requiring less refining — in its first wildcat well about 105 miles east of Atlantic City.

It is the first oil strike off the eastern United States. Rigs in the Gulf of Mexico and, to a lesser extent, in the Pacific Ocean off California, have been producing crude oil for years.

Confucius, the Chinese philosopher, was born in either 550 B.C. or 551 B.C.

Court Upholds Death Sentence In Probation Officer's Murder

AUSTIN (UPI) — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals upheld a death sentence Wednesday against a man convicted of the 1976 murder of a Montgomery County probation officer.

The court rejected the appeal of Joseph Blaine Starvaggi and ruled the jury at his trial had ample reason to believe he would continue to commit violent crimes and pose a continuing threat to society unless he is executed.

Starvaggi admitted going to the home of John Denson with three accomplices on the night of Nov. 19, 1976, to steal the juvenile probation officer's gun collection.

Denson and his wife and 14-year-old daughter were in the house watching television.

Starvaggi shot Denson when the officer struggled with one of the intruders and wrestled his gun away. Starvaggi said he shot Denson two more times to "keep him from suffering."

The accomplices urged Starvaggi to kill the woman and teen-ager but he refused saying he only killed "dopers and pigs."

Denson was a reserve deputy sheriff and part-time probation officer.

Starvaggi was on probation for burglary at the time of the murder and had a history of criminal activity and a bad conduct discharge from the military service following a court martial.

"The appellant's claim is that the foregoing evidence is insufficient to establish, beyond a reasonable doubt, that there is a possibility that the defendant would commit criminal acts of violence that would constitute a continuing threat to society,'" the appellate justices said Wednesday. "We disagree."

The appeals court also rejected defense arguments that the jury should have considered Starvaggi's claim that he had been popping "quays" and was intoxicated by the quaaluden pills at the time of the crime.

In other cases, the state's highest court for criminal matters:

•Ruled an Amarillo man was denied his constitutional right to confrontation by not being allowed to cross-examine a co-defendant in a $658,000 embezzlement case. The court struck down a 10-year prison sentence against Kelly Spain and ordered a new trial to give defense attorneys an opportunity to question an accomplice about whether he agreed to testify for the state in exchange for a reduced sentence for his part in the two-year scheme to defraud Producers Grain Corp.

•Overturned an 18-year sentence against Henry Joe Jernigan of Dallas in the strangulation murder of his wife. The court said the trial judge erred in admitting evidence that Jernigan knew another man telephoned and wrote to his wife when prosecutors could not show Jernigan knew his wife had been carrying on an extramarital affair.

•Ordered a new trial to determine whether Robert Charles Winfrey was sane at the time he was tried and convicted of the 1969 murder of a Galveston County woman. Winfrey was sentenced to life in prison for the shooting death of Ella May Johnson.

•Struck down a life sentence against Nicanor Cisneros Gonzales and ordered him retried on heroin possession charges because prosecutors presented evidence about comments Gonzales made before Deaf Smith deputy sheriffs warned him of his rights.

Supreme Court Upholds Claim In Labor Case

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court quoted the Bible, Shakespeare, television emcee Ed McMahon, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and others Wednesday in overruling an injured worker's plea for more money.

Justice Zollie Steakley, writing the dissent in the 7-2 opinion, said the Supreme Court should stick to its own former opinions.

The Industrial Accident Board awarded $4,977 to cement worker Arthur Reese Jr. after he sustained a "pop" in his back while standing in about six inches of cement on March 14, 1975.

The trial court reduced the award to $2,278, and Reese appealed. The court of civil appeals reversed the judgment because of improper jury arguments by the lawyer for Standard Fire Insurance Co.

The Supreme Court concluded the argument was neither improper nor harmful enough to reverse the trial court. It said by failing to object at the time of the statements, Reese had waived his complaint.

In the argument in question, Standard's lawyer said Reese "drove by a thousand doctors between the Astrodome and Spring Branch" to see a specific doctor. "Does not a sham or plot evolve out of all of this?"

"Hyperbole has long been one of the figurative techniques of oral advocacy," said Justice Jack Pope in the majority opinion, quoting such language Shakespeare's Juliet saying, "A thousand times good-night!" and McMahon's "A thousand welcomes to you" on the "Tonight Show" on NBC.

The majority also quoted from Psalms of the Bible and Sadat, who said, "Any act of terroism against Egypt will be repaid one thousand fold."

Steakley said, "The precedential or supportable value of the writings upon which the majority relies would seem questionable ... I suggest our own writings are more in point."

He said the jury arguments "were improper, without support in the evidence and by their very nature incurable."

Appeals Court Upholds Jurors

AUSTIN (AP) — The 3rd Court of Civil Appeals ruled Wednesday a divorced woman should give up custody of her 3-year-old daughter, partly because of statements by witnesses she asked to testify.

A child custody trial was held in August 1978 in Bell County, and the jury said the father, Donald Kelley, should be given custody of the child.

Trial Judge William Black disregarded the jury's finding, however, and entered judgment in favor of the the mother, Paula Kelley. The father appealed.

The appeals court said the mother had introduced testimony by a social worker and a clinical psychologist, both of whom concluded the mother should be granted custody.

The appeals court noted, however, the social worker also testified the mother's financial situation is not very stable as her new husband changed jobs frequently. The social worker expressed concern as to the woman's third marriage lasting, the court said.

According to the court, the mother also had had sexual relations with many men since she was in high school. It said trial testimony indicated the mother had been an active drug user since she was teenager. A minister who knew her well characterized her as a very unstable person.

The father is employed and lives with his mother, the court said.

"Since there was evidence to support the disregarded finding of the jury, we hold it was error for the trial court" to grant the motion in favor of the mother, the appeals court ruled.

It ordered the trial judge to give the father custody of the child and to allow the mother such access to the child as it "may deem proper."

Court Rejects Request For Rehearing

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Court of Criminal Appeals Wednesday issued a written opinion overruling a request for rehearing by Michael Grant Waller, whose three-year sentence for burglary of a vehicle in Lubbock County was upheld earlier by the court.

The court, in a decision rendered on behalf of all nine justices, said it was using the Waller case to overrule an earlier pronouncement and "to state that no objection before the jury to identification testimony is required when the testimony has been ruled admissible after a hearing outside the presence of the jury."

According to the court's earlier opinion, delivered by a three-justice panel, Waller objected to the identification of him by the women whose car he was accused of burglarizing.

Waller had filed a pretrial motion alleging that the eyewitness testimony was "tainted" by the victim having seen him in handcuffs, but the trial court held the identification was admissible.

DC-10 Groundings Bring Administrative Dissent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The DC-10 is like a boy who is expelled from school after getting by with warnings about his misadventures. The punishment should come as no shock, but it does anyway.

Not surprisingly, there was much middle-of-the-night agonizing when it came to grounding the big planes. It ws 3:30 Wednesday morning in Long Beach, Calif., — 6:30 a.m. in Washington — when the word went out to manufacturer McDonnell Douglas.

The sequence that led to the Federal Aviation Administration's "Emergency Order for Suspension" began at 4:45 p.m. Tuesday in Washington when a federal judge, Aubrey E. Robinson Jr., signed an order telling the government to ground the DC-10 fleet.

The big planes, capable of carrying up to 380 passengers, were not to fly " until such time as the cause for the loss of the left engine on American Airlines' DC-10 Flight 191 is identified," a process that normally requires months. Flight 191 was the jet that crashed at Chicago's O'Hare airport on May 25 claiming 275 lives. It was the third fatal DC-10 accident.

After the judge's ruling, the eight U.S airlines that fly DC-10s waited for a grounding order from the FAA. But no order was issued.

Reporters were told that the U.S Court of Appeals had been notified an application for a stay was coming. But it turned out that lawyers never actually contacted any appellate judge.

Instead, they tried Robinson again. A stay? No dice. An immediate rehearing? It had only been ahalf hour since Robinson's order and the judge refused, setting 9 a.m. Wednesday for the session.

"I could not understand what had transpired in a half hour," the judge said. "What a change? It was obvious to the court that nothing had changed."

The government attorneys conferred with their boss, Assistant Attorney General Barbara Babcock. A source said she was incensed at Robinson's order, calling it "outrageous."

In mid-evening Tuesday, the FAA still had made no effort to obey it.

"We were considering whether the proper way was to issue 138 telegrams or whether to issue another airworthiness directive, or whether it should be a suspension type of order," Assistant U.S. Attorney Boyce Lamberth would tell Robinson later.

U.S. airlines operate 138 DC-10s. An airworthiness directive can ground planes by demanding certain corrective steps.

"Did it ever occur to you to call attention to my order?" Judge Robinson asked.

"With all due respect, your order did not say 'I hereby direct you to ground these planes,'" Lamberth replied.

The judge retorted that his order should have been clear to anyone who can read "but if there is any question. I'll write it so it can be understood at any level."A little after 9 p.m. Tuesday came word from the FAA that it was drafting an order to comply with Robinson's directive. Planes would be grounded immediately, a spokesman said.

But at the same time, lawyers were on the telephone with the judge. He told them since a hearing was set for 9 a.m., they didn't need to rush the grounding.

The DC-10s had won a reprieve. It didn't last long.

Since the crash in Chicago, airlines had been told to reinspect their DC-10s after every 100 hours of flight or 10 days, whichever came earlier.

It was during such re-examinations in San Francisco Monday and Tuesday, that two American Airlines planes were fond to have cracccks in the engine mounting area — cracks that didn't show during the first inspection.

The FAA was told late Tuesday. It was the final blow.

Technical experts met after midnight Wednesday with Jonathan Howe, the acting chief counsel of the FAA.

"The final determination was reached at 3:30 a.m.," said Lamberth. "Either the earlier examination was faulty or a design defect caused the cracks subsequently.

FAA administrator Langhorne Bond had flown to Europe only on Monday night for a conference in London and for the Paris air show. He turned right around and came back to Washington.

At 3:30 a.m. in Long Beach, an order was handed to J.C. Brizendine, president of Douglas Aircraft. It spelled out the precautions taken since the Chicago crash:

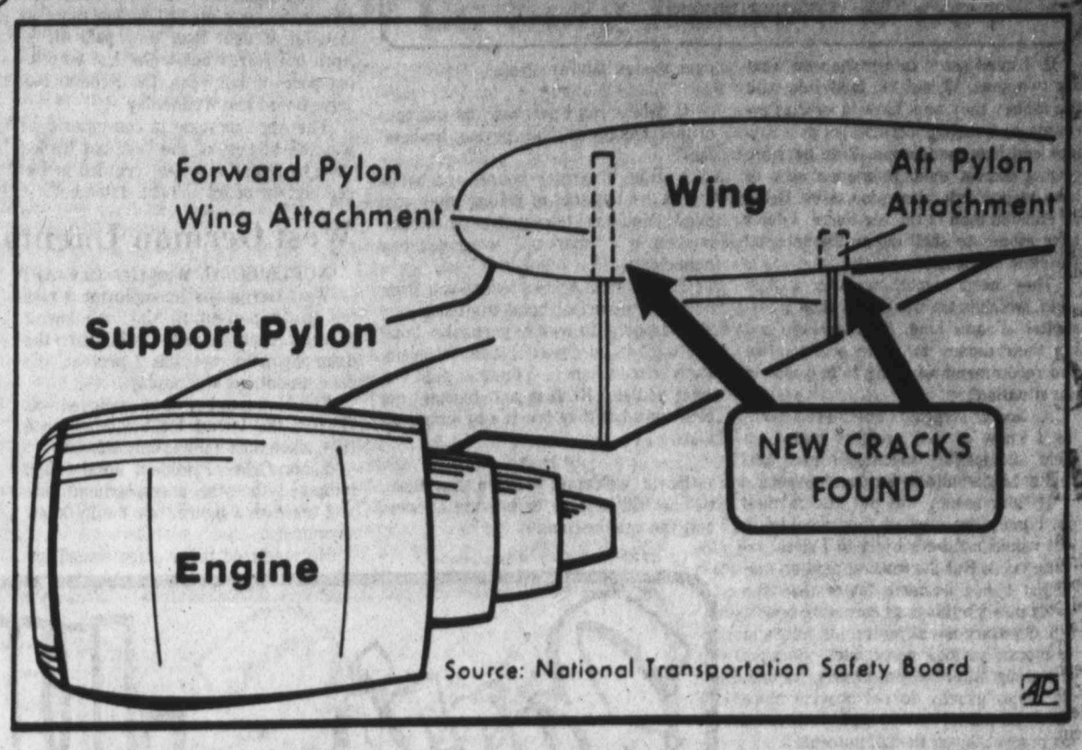
"The administrator has reason to believe that the Model DC-10 series aircraft may not meet the requirements ... in that it may not be of proper design, material, specification, construction and performance for safe operation or meet the minimum standards, the FAA order said.

McDonnell Douglas was quick to respond that the FAA action " is more sweeping and drastic than circumstances warrant" and blamed the problems on the way some airlines maintain their planes.

"We are exploring every legal avenue including the possibility of going to court," said McDonnell Douglas spokesman Ray Towne.



NEW CRACKS FOUND — The Federal Aviation Administration Wednesday suspended indefinitely the design certificate of the DC-10, grounding all 138 of the jetliners flown by the nation's airlines after new cracks were found along a thin lip in the engine pylon mounts, an American Airlines maintenance official said. 'Panic' Alleged In Groundings

LONDON (AP) — Sir Freddie Laker, the cut-rate airline pioneer, accused U.S. aviation authorities Wednesday of "panicking" in grounding all DC-10 jetliners.

"I am very disappointed because I don't think the American decision is based on technical facts," Laker told a reporter. "I believe that this grounding is totally unnecessary. If I had my way they would still be flying." Laker's six DC-10s, including those used for low-rate Skytrain flights to New York and Los Angeles, were grounded.

Their airworthiness certificates were temporarily withdrawn by the British Civil Aviation Authority in response to Wednesday's decision by the U.S. Federal Aviation Administration grounding the entire American-registered fleet of 138 DC-10s.

The FAA took the action after new cracks were found in the engine mountings of two of the aircraft, following the May 25 DC-10 crash at Chicago in which 275 people died.

Laker said British authorities had no choice but to suspend DC-10 operations after the FAA decision. He said the action will cost him 350,000 pounds — $728,000 — a day.

"I am very sorry that thousands of passengers are having their holidays ruined," Laker said. "We are hoping that within 24 hours the Americans will come to their senses on this."

Passengers Grounded Along With Planes

By DAVID L. LANGFORD
Associated Press Writer

Airlines rolled out reserve planes and rerouted thousands of passengers Wednesday as the sudden grounding of all U.S. DC-10s bumped 60,000 to 70,000 people from hundreds of flights.

Travelers grew wary, vacations were disrupted, and business appointments were missed as the 138 wide-bodied jets were ordered back to the hangars for more safety inspections.

"I wonder what else is flying around up there with cracks in it," mused Nick Kontras, a San Diego attorney, as he waited at Los Angeles International Airport for American Airlines to substitute a Boeing 707 for his flight.

On the other side of the ... 7, at John F. Kennedy Airport in New York, Peter Mattes of Long Beach, Calif., was among 151 passengers switched from a DC-10 to an American Airlines 707 for a flight to San Francisco.

"I wish they would ground them for good because this hit and miss, up again, down again, makes everybody nervous," he said.

The Air Transport Association said that of 800,000 persons flying in this country each day, between 60,000 and 70,000 ride DC-10s.

While hundreds of flights were canceled, the airlines dusted off reserve aircraft, such as those normally used for charter flights, and routed passengers on other carriers.

United Airlines, for example, which has 30 DC-10s in its fleet, had to scrub 125 flights but managed to substitute other airplanes for 13 of them.

A spokesman for Pan American World Airways, which operates only Boeing jets, said "Pan Am today reaffirmed that it would do all possible to accommodate passengers affected by the latest grounding of DC-10 aircraft." Pan Am is accepting reservations from passengers holding tickets on other airlines for both international and domestic flights.

Western Airlines uses nine DC-10s, mainly on long flights from Los Angeles to Hawaii, Mexico and Florida, and spokeswoman Linda Dozier said, "It's certainly fair to say at least 3,000 to 4,000 passengers will be affected." She said the shutdown will especially hurt the tourist business in Hawaii.

In Minneapolis, headquarters for Northwest Orient Airlines, lines of travelers at Minneapolis-St. Paul International Airport stretched from ticket counters across the lobby.

Northwest spokesman Roy Erickson said 39 of the airline's 219 daily flights normally are made on DC-10s. He said Northwest would use Boeing 747s and 727s wherever possible, but added, "You can't take that much capacity out of our fleet and not inconvenience some people."

The grounding also handicapped the nation's two largest charter services, Transinternational Airlines and World Airways. The order reduced the fleet operated by TIA, the world's biggest charter line, from 10 planes to seven and reduced the World fleet from 11 carriers to five, according to company officials.

A long line of DC-10s sat in a line at Miami International Airport, like great birds at roost, and Richard Hayes Meagher, a businessman trying to return home to Sydney, Australia, was fuming.

"The airlines ought to bloody well know what's happening before they start running passengers all over the bloody terminal," he grousted.

Most foreign airlines, which operate half of the wide-bodied jets built by McDonnell Douglas, also grounded their planes. That put Freddie Laker's Skytrain, which offers cut-rate fares between London and New York, temporarily out of business.

And officials for national airlines in Mexico, Belgium, Switzerland and Turkey said they had ordered their DC-10s grounded. A spokesman for the Venezuelan airline said its five DC-10s, grounded since an earlier FAA directive, would stay on the ground.

James E. Dunn, head of the Airline Passengers Association, said the defects discovered in the engine mounts on the DC-10s "have been alarming to everyone in the industry."

"The defects that have been noticed in the various parts of the engine support systems must lead one to the conclusion that if there is that much smoke there may be some fire," Dunn said Wednesday in an interview on NBC's "Today" show.

The sudden FAA order was based on the discovery of hairline cracks in the engine mounts of two DC-10s in San Francisco, planes whose engine mounts had already been inspected.

Joseph Daley, vice president of Continental Airlines, which had to ground 15 DC-10s, said his airline normally operates 50 flights a day out of Los Angeles. But, he said: "Everyone seems to be pretty well accommodated. We are moving people."

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I need some information on what our two sons, 12 and 14, should do with the money they now have in savings accounts and savings certificates at a savings and loan association. Both boys are getting almost enough interest now to have to pay federal income taxes. Being an enlisted man in the Air Force, I don't have money to shell out to the Internal Revenue Service.

They need something with a high yield, which is tax-free or provides a tax-shelter of some kind. Both boys are saving their money to go to college. Can you recommend anything to help out in our situation?

A. Sorry, sergeant, but there's nothing I know of that provides both high yield and tax-free income or even tax-shelter that is suitable for your two sons.

If their money was put into municipal bonds, the interest they would collect would not be subject to federal income taxes. But the interest paid on municipal bonds is much lower than the yields on such things as corporate bonds, U.S. Treasury bonds, notes and bills and six-month savings certificates. Because of the big difference in interest, municipal bonds usually do not provide more "keeping money" for people in income tax brackets lower than 32 percent.

Your boys are a long way from that. Even when they have to begin paying income taxes on their interest, they'll be better off with higher-yielding taxable interest.

I really don't understand your statement about you having to "shell out to the IRS" to meet your sons' tax obligations. Why not have the kids use their money to pay their taxes?

My advice would be to have the boys put their money in six-month savings certificates at the savings and loan association where they now have accounts. Those certificates are now yielding about 9.4 percent.

Q. A friend of mine purchased several Series E, U.S. Savings Bonds in 1946. The bonds were in her name "payable on death" to me. I cashed in the bonds several weeks after her recent death. To do this, I was required to present her death certificate and to sign my name and address on the back of the bonds.

In addition to the price she paid for the bonds, I received the interest that had accrued on the bonds. The interest amounted to more than $1,000. Is the Internal Revenue Service going to hold me responsible for reporting and paying federal income tax on that interest?

A. Yes, unless one of two things happened.

The first would be that your friend reported the interest on those bonds each year on her federal income tax return. But not many people do that. Instead, they wait until they cash their E bonds and then report all the accrued interest.

The second would be that the person who filed your deceased friend's final income tax return reported all that accrued interest on that tax return. If that happened, your friend's estate would have to pay the income tax on that accrued interest.

Assuming that neither of those things happened, you are responsible for reporting that interest on your tax return. If you collected E bond interest on which no federal income tax had been paid, the tax liability is yours.

• • •

Q. Where can I purchase tax-free municipal bonds without paying brokers' fees?

A. Both brokerage houses and banks are in the business of selling municipal bonds. You have to expect to pay a commission or a "mark-up" when you buy municipals.

There's nothing to prevent you from buying a municipal bond from someone who happens to own a particular bond you want to purchase. But that's an unlikely circumstance. You get paid for what you do. Brokers and bankers get paid for what they do. It's as simple as that.

Consumer Installment Debt Rose In April

WASHINGTON (AP) — American consumers took on $4.1 billion more in installment debt than they paid off in April but stayed below the fast borrowing pace of last year, the Federal Reserve Board said Wednesday.

The April increase in consumer debt was the highest of the year but trailed the $4.4 billion increase recorded in December, the board said in a statement.

If borrowing continues at the April pace, consumer debt will increase 17 percent this year. The increase in 1978 was 19 percent, government records show.

Consumer installment debt had risen $3.7 billion in March, $3.3 billion in February and $3.1 billion in January.

The April increase occurred despite a drop in the amount of new borrowing because consumers also reduced their debt payment, the Federal Reserve said.

Government economists have been watching consumer borrowing statistics closely because of the potential consequences for the national economy. Some fear Americans are taking on more debt than they can handle. Others are concerned that if Americans stop borrowing and begin repaying debts, it will reduce sales and slow the nation's economic growth.

The Federal Reserve statement indicated that consumer borrowing fell from $26.7 billion in March to $25.8 billion in April.

All categories showed declines, with automobile loans down from $7.79 billion in March to $7.72 billion in April; bank and store charge card use down from $9.7 billion to $8.9 billion and mobile home loans down from $516 million to $496 million.

Debt repayment, meanwhile, dropped from $22.9 billion in March to $21.7 billion in April, the report said.

"The increased growth in outstanding (debt) during April was most evident in the large 'other' credit category, which includes personal cash loans and a variety of goods-related credit," the board said.

The "other" category grew by $1.7 billion in April, about $300 million more than in the previous month.

Consumer debt stood at a record $282.4 billion in April, 18.7 percent higher than April 1978, the report indicated.

The Federal Reserve report covers short-and intermediate-term credit to pay for goods and services in two or more installments or to refinance old debts. It does not normally include mortgage loans.

West German Unemployment Drops Again

NUREMBURG, West Germany (AP) — West Germany's unemployment rate fell to 3.4 percent in May, the lowest percentage since October 1974, when the unemployment rate was 3 percent, the government said Wednesday.

The May number of unemployed was 775,100, the lowest for any May since 1974, when the total was only 475,000.

Labor Office President Josef Stingl remarked that the unemployment rate had touched a figure "we hardly knew anymore"

He predicted the average annual unemployment rate for 1979 could sink to between 3.8 percent and 3.9 percent from an average rate of 4.3 percent in 1978.

Stingl said the seasonally adjusted unemployment figures for May showed 861,000 persons out of work, down from 882,000 in April and 1.01 million in May 1978.

He said the May unemployment rate, which registered a 0.4 percentage point drop from April, showed West Germany's economic upswing was boosting employment.

Government Orders Kaiser To Divest Refractory Plants

WASHINGTON (AP) — Kaiser Aluminum and Chemical Corp., one of the nation's industrial giants, was ordered by the government Wednesday to divest two plants it acquired five years ago.

The Federal Trade Commission said the acquisition of the assets from the Lavino Division of International Minerals & Chemical Corp. could "substantially lessen competition."

The plants make basic refractories, which are insulating materials used primarily to line steel-making furnaces. They also are used in the glass, cement and copper industries.

The FTC said that at the time of the acquisition, Kaiser was No. 2 in sales of basic refractories and Lavino was fourth.

In Oakland, Calif., a spokesman for Kaiser said the company would contest the FTC's ruling. "We consider the acquisition both pro-competition and lawful, and we intend to appeal the decision," said the spokesman, who asked not to be identified.

The April 27, 1976, FTC complaint that started the case alleged that the acquisition "may substantially lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in the markets for the manufacture and sale of basic refractories, basic refractory bricks and shapes and basic refractory specialties."

Carter Gets Energy Pep Talk From Hill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Discouraged by energy problems, President Carter Wednesday was given an "upbeat" pep talk by congressional leaders, and then Republican and Democratic congressmen announced ambitious new initiatives for developing synthetic fuels.

"The president started out very discouraged this morning," said House Democratic leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, after he and other legislators finished their meeting at the White House. "He just did not see anything happening on energy."

But Wright said he and other leaders "talked upbeat."

"We said, 'Mr. President, don't be discouraged. We will take wtatever steps we have to, for the good of the country.'"

Wright said Carter appeared to like the ideas he and others outlined that included a complex program of federal purchase of synthetic fuels in steadily increasing amounts for defense needs.

That would assure a market for the fuels and make them eventually competitive with oil, enabling some import cuts, Wright said.

"More power to you," said Carter, according to Wright.

Meanwhile, a group of congressmen headed by Rep. James Jeffords, R-Vt., introduced a bill to require refineries to use increasing amounts of synthetic fuels to go into the production of gasoline.

"Like most Americans, we are tired of being at the mercy of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries," Jeffords said. "We want our nation to regain control over our own destiny. We propose to put a cap on what OPEC can charge us, by providing an alternative to buying their oil."

The bill would require refiners to phase in alternative fuels, starting in 1981, with amounts increasing to 10 percent of their total gasoline production by 1987. The fuels could include a wide range of products such as liquids from coal, oil from shale, or alcohol from various sources.

Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., chairman of the Senate Energy Committee, is working on a draft bill for government synthetics fuel purchases similar to the one described by Wright.

House action is covered in a bill by Rep. William Moorhead, D-Pa., already approved by the House Banking Committee. The bill would develop synthetic fuels to the equivalent of 500,000 barrels a day of oil within five years. Wright's idea is for a goal of 2.5 million barrels a day by 1995.

Other ideas by Wright, some still in the discussion stage, include a pipeline to send Alaskan oil from the West Coast toward Texas refineries, a carless-day a week, and a "fast track" approach to eliminate much red tape from high-priority energy plans.

Scientist Studies Male Infertility

PISCATAWAY, N.J. (AP) — A New Jersey scientist is using strobe lights to study the tails of sea urchin sperm in research that could help men with problems of infertility.

Stephen M. Penningroth, a biochemist, said Wednesday he has received a $20,000 grant from the Population Council of Rockefeller University in New York for a year-long project to examine how fast sperm cells move.

"If we can identify a drug capable of selectively inhibiting sperm motility, that could be the beginning of an anti-fertility drug, or male contraceptive," he said.

Oil Shortage Only Start Of Coming Energy Woes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An economist Wednesday told a Senate Banking subcommittee the oil shortage will be brief, but warned of prolonged energy problems in the 1980s.

"We believe the shortage will prove temporary," said Peter Toja, vice president and senior economist for Merrill Lynch Economics.

Iran has resumed production halted by a revolution in that country early this year, Toja said. Pending its arrival, he said, panic buying and hoarding, triggered last month in California, has magnified the gasoline shortage.

"The California syndrome spread to other regions of the country," Toja said. Meanwhile, he said, a recent American Petroleum Institute report gives a clue to where the gasoline disappeared to.

Toja said the figures "suggest that a major portion, if not all, of the year to year decline of ... stocks of gasoline could be attributed to a shift in inventories from conventional locations to 'mobile warehouses.'"

Toja said rising world oil prices make it unlikely Arab states will repeat their 1973 oil embargo unless there is a new catastrophe, such as another revolution in Iran.

But he warned world oil supplies will not continue to equal demand in the 1980s.

"We are looking toward a decade of shortages," Toja said.

Theodore R. Eck, chief economist for Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, also gave the subcommittee on economic stabilization a pessimistic long-term outlook.

"Throughout the decade of the 1980s, we are going to have a supply problem," Eck said.

Eck agreed with Toja that a lot of gasoline is being hoarded, either inside motorists' tanks or tanks of trucking firms, and car rental companies.

Subcommittee members asked Eck if there is any truth in the popular conception that oil companies are holding back gasoline for higher prices. Eck flatly denied it.

"We're not hiding it," he said. "Statistics demonstrate that we're not. Nobody has disputed that our inventories are low."

A third economist, Vice President Joseph E. Kasputys of Data Resources Inc., told the subcommittee he expects the oil shortage to last at least until next fall.

"It is our estimate that the petroleum shortfall is likely to remain at near 500,000 barrels a day at least through the summer driving season," Kasputys said.

"Supplies will be tight and shortages of gasoline and diesel fuel will occur in certain areas, but probably with diminishing severity as users adjust their inventories and buying practices."

Natural Gas Urged As Supplement To Burning Coal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The president of the American Gas Association suggested Wednesday the occasional use of natural gas as a clean supplemental fuel could allow more widespread use of coal as a primary fuel without violating clean air standards.

George H. Lawrence told a news conference that the industry association he heads estimated that by 1985 the burning of about 1 trillion cubic feet of natural gas a year could enable factories and power plants to burn about 190 million tons of coal per year which otherwise would be forbidden.

Federal clean air regulations require the use of "scrubbers" to reduce sharply the emissions of dust and sulfur oxides from coal-fired plants, and also impose local air quality standards which have the practical effect of barring coal-burning plants from dirty-air regions.

Lawrence said an association study found that the problem, in most of these regions, really amounted to only a few days each year when coal-fired plants could not operate — even with their scrubbers — without violating air quality standards.

Energy Issues Pace Gain

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market pushed higher for the third straight day Wednesday, with energy issues again leading the way. Trading was the heaviest in more than two months.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials gained 4.16 points to 835.50. New York Stock Exchange volume rose to 39.83 million shares from Tuesday's 35.05 million in the busiest session since April 4, when 41.94 million shares were traded. Advances led declines by about 2-1 among NYSE-listed issues.

Wall Steet's volume leader, and one of the biggest gainers among energy isues, was Great Basins Petroleum, which jumped 4¼ to 11⅜ on the American Stock Exchange.

The independent oil and gas producer, with sizable natural gas reserves in Canada, said it is considering selling a "substantial portion" of its assets or merging with another firm.

The NYSE's composite common-stock index rose .42 to 57.23.

New York (AP) — Wed.'s national prices for New York Stock Exchange issues as of NYSE close. Prices and volume consolidated for securities also traded on other markets.

RHODESIAN COMMANDOS SLAIN

SALISBURY, Zimbabwe Rhodesia (AP) — Three white Zimbabwe Rhodesian commandos were slain in Monday's ground-and-air attacks on guerrilla bases in neighboring Mozambique, the military command announced Wednesday. It was the biggest loss reported in 33 cross-border missions launched by the military in the 6-year-old war with black nationalist Rhodesian guerrillas. Bases struck by warplanes and ground troops were described by the military command as staging posts and supply dumps of Robert Mugabe's Zimbabwe African National Union guerrillas.

Evidence Of Water On Mars Discovered

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Four University of Massachusetts astronomers said Wednesday they have discovered evidence there is water on Mars.

The planet's surface has long been considered to be bone dry, but the astronomers said there appears to be evaporation from two giant oases near Mars' equator.

They based their conclusion on data from an Earth-based telescope and water-detection devices aboard the two Viking orbiters.

When two United States spacecraft landed on Mars almost three years ago, they found no trace of water at the landing sites. Telescopic observations taken later showed the rest of the planet was also dry.

But the astronomers said satellite studies indicated a layer of ice four-hundredths of an inch thick melts and evaporates into the Martian atmosphere during the warmest summer days.

The astronomers said the oases seem to play a significant role in generating dust storms that shroud the planet periodically.

The findings were presented at the 10th Annual Planetary Geology Principal Investigators' Meeting at Brown University.

Area House Members' Recent Major Roll Call Votes Noted

By Roll Call Report

WASHINGTON — Here's how area House members were recorded on major roll call votes May 24 through May 30.

"REVOLVING DOOR" The House approved, 327 for and 48 against, a bill (S 869) relaxing the stiff ethics-in-government law due to take effect in the executive branch July 1. The law is largely aimed at blocking the "revolving door" by which many officials leave government to take private-sector jobs closely related to their former government position. Critics say the revolving door opens the way to conflicts-of-interest.

In part, this bill relaxes the definition of "contact" between the ex-government official and his former government agency.

Supporters said the law is so rigid it is driving many dedicated and honest officials out of government. Rep. Millicent Fenwick, R-N.J., said: "I will be forced to vote for the liberalization until the day comes when we (members of Congress) are prepared to apply the rules that we condider appropriate for others to ourselves."

Rep. Romano Mazzoli, D-Ky., an opponent, said: "For those who come into government altruistically — and I am sure there are many — if there is this little bit of sacrifice it ought to simply be part of that altruism...."

Members voting "yea" wanted to relax the ethics law.

Reps. Charles Wilson, D-2, James Collins, R-3, Ray Roberts, D-4, Jim Mattox, D-5, Phil Gramm, D-6, Jack Brooks, D-9, James Wright, D-12, Jack Hightower, D-13, Joe Wyatt, D-14, Kika de la Garza, D-15, Richard White, D-16, Charles Stenholm, D-17, Mickey Leland, D-18, Kent Hance, D-19, Tom Loeffler, R-21, Abraham Kazen, D-23, Martin Frost, D-24, and Manuel Lujan, R-1 (N.M.), voted "yea."

Reps. Samuel Hall, D-1, Bill Archer, R-7, Jake Pickle, D-10, J. Marvin Leath, D-11, and Harold Runnels, D-2 (N.M.), did not vote.

ETHICS LAW The House rejected, 88 for and 292 against, an amendment to limit the contact the new ethics law (see above vote) permits between an ex-government official and his or her former federal agency.

The amendment said that, in addition to prohibiting for two years personal appearances by an ex-official before his ex-agency, the law should also prohibit "backroom" work. An example of backroom contact would be a lawyer writing arguments to be presented to the agency not by himself but by his law partner.

Rep. Bob Eckhardt, D-Tex., the sponsor, said "so long as he is working in the backroom, this is the biggest loophole in the entire bill."

Rep. Carlos J. Moorhead, R-Calif., an opponent, said that "in almost any job (a former government employe) could get in private industry, there could be some effect on preparations that might eventually be made to a governmental agency...."

Hall, Pickle, Leath, Wright and Runnels did not vote.

MID-EAST AID The House passed, 347 for and 28 against, a bill (HR 4035) authorizing $4.8 billion in grants and loans for Egypt and Israel. The aid, an addition to normal U.S. foreign aid outlays, was promised by the U.S. as part of the new Mid-East peace treaty. Israel would recieve $800 million in economic aid and $1.5 billion in military equipment. The bill was sent to conference with the Senate.

Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., a supporter, said: "If the United States is to play a mediating role in the negotiations, it must be reasonably responsive to the security requirements of Israel and Eqypt."

Rep. James P. Johnson, R-Colo., an opponent, argued: "We are paying ransom to them to stop fighting each other. It seems to me that peace should be an incentive to them-not our arms."

Members voting "yea" favored the aid to facilitate the Mid-East peace treaty.

Collins, Paul and Runnels voted "nay."

Wilson, Roberts, Eckhardt, Leland and Kazen did not vote.

BUDGET The House gave final approval, 202 for and 196 against, to the congressional "master plan" for the fiscal 1980 federal budget. The fiscal year begins Oct. 1. The budget plan is nonbinding, but sets ceilings and guidelines which the House and Senate are expected to obey as they approve actual spending bills later in the year. The plan anticipates $509 billion in revenue, a maximum of $532k billion in outlays, and an annual deficit of $23 billion. The total national debt thus would be $887.2 billion.

Supporters regarded the measure as imperfect but acceptable. Opponents were mostly conservatives objecting to the overall price tag and liberals who thoudht defense spending was emphasized too much and social programs not enough.

Hall, Wilson, Roberts, Mattox, Gramm, Eckhardt, Brooks, Pickle, Wright, Hightower, Wyatt, de la Garza, White Gonzalez, Kazen and Frost voted "yea."

Leath and Runnels did not vote.

Message To Washington

MESSAGE — We are a small retail business located in Plainview, selling home appliances. The reason I am writing you is that we have a growing problem with retail financing. With the growing cost of money, the finance companies are tightening their qualification for loans and this is injuring my trade. I would like to set up an in-store finance company which could be funded by any available source. Our first thought was the Small Business Administration. Could you help us get SBA financing for this? Please help us in our plight. — B.A., Plainview

SEN. BENTSEN RESPONDS — SBA advises me that they are not allowed to consider loans to any business engaged in lending or investment. The operation of a finance company generally requires substantial capital investment by the owner and the maintenance of large reserves for bad debt. The amount of money required is simply not available through SBA. However, should you need financial assistance for the operation of your home appliance store, the SBA can provide assistance through their small business loan program.

MESSAGE — I am writing you in reference to a problem with the Veterans Administration. I was sent, through the VA's blundering, $700 overpayment of educational benefits. I was unaware of it at the time, but the VA has reminded me by garnishing nearly a third of my monthly benefits. This is my only income and for them to cut it by a third is criminal. I would appreciate your assistance in correcting the situation. — J.K., San Antonio

SEN. BENTSEN RESPONDS — VA officials inform me that you have now repaid the $700 you owed and, through another error, an additional $171 as well. They are processing a special payment in that amount which you should receive shortly, if you don't already have it by the time this is printed. They apologize for the errors and for any difficulty they might have caused.

Teacher Gets Foundation Post

Dr. Idris R. Traylor Jr., a member of the history faculty at Texas Tech, has been appointed to the board of directors of the Texas Historical Foundation.

The foundation is a private, non-profit group raising funds to support preservation and conservation of Texas's historical heritage.

During the last 25 years the foundation, in cooperation with the state-supported Texas Historical Commission, saved or restored nearly 3,000 buildings and other historic structures, established almost 350 local and regional archives, opened 358 history museums and placed more than 6,000 Texas historical markets along state travel routes.

The foundation was organized in 1954 by several prominent Texans including the late Ima Hogg of Houston. Mrs. Charles L. Bybee of Houston is president of the board of directors. The 34-member board meets four times each year.

Tech Professor Slates Self-Help Seminar

Worry, alcohol or drugs can't hold a candle to self-help when it comes to getting it all together, in the view of one Texas Tech University professor who will direct a workshop this summer in rational self-counseling.

Participants will meet Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7 to 8:30 p.m., June 12, 14, 19, 21, 26 and 28. The workshop is offered through Texas Tech's division of continuing education. The fee is $30, and Dr. Paul Knipping of the Texas Tech health education faculty is the instructor.

Knipping and two colleagues have described their research in rational self-couseling in an article appearing in the January-February issue of "Health Values Achieving High Level Wellness." His co-authors are Dr. Maxie Maulsby Jr. who is the author of the book, "Help Yourself to Happiness," and Dr. Thomas C. Timmreck. Maulsby is a member of the psychiatry faculty at the University of Kentucky Medical Center in Lexington. Timmreck is on the Center for Health Services staff at Northern Arizona University, Flagstaff.

Knipping said the workshop will deal with applications of rational self-counseling to problems involving divorce, obesity, alcoholism, and other stress management.

"It is especially helpful," he said, "for persons with cardiovascular problems brought on by mismanagement of stress. Rational self-counseling is an effective way to minimize anger, anxiety, jealousy and other nonproductive emotions. While it works for postoperative heart patients, it should also provide a useful preventive approach to all pathology having an emotional base."

In their recent article the three authors urged that rational self-counseling be taught in public schools, as an approach to good mental health.

"Our TV-addicted society is probably the best informed, yet most dissatisfied, of any generation," they said. "The young and old both demonstrate their dissatisfaction with frequent illegal, immoral, antisocial and-or self-destructive behavior.

"Of the 150 million new prescriptions written each year, over half are for tranquilizers. Not surprisingly, the alcoholic beverage industry is one of the largest and most profitable in our country."

Their solution is to teach students "skill in the healthy use of their inner resources, skill in creating rational self-concepts and skill in making rational decisions and in formulating rational values and goals."

The workshop Knipping will teach will expand upon these concepts. To preregister or for more information, contact the division of continuing education at Texas Tech.

Joe Marine 'Fated' To Join You-Know-What

CAMP PENDLETON, Calif. (UPI) — If ever a man was destined to become a Joe Marine, it was Joe Marine.

When the 25-year-old Denver man saw his U.S. Marine Corps recruitment papers, he didn't even have to write his name in the spaces. It was already there on the sample form — "Joe Marine."

The son of Joe Marine Sr., who did a hitch in the army, Lance Corp. Marine admits there were problems during boot camp.

He was startled every time an officer shouted, "Hey marine!"

"John was talking to a Navy recruiter but he didn't sound too interesting. So I walked over to the Marine Corps recruiter and we started talking. He asked my name and I just reached for my driver's license because I knew he wouldn't believe me," Marine said.

"The guy got all excited," Marine said. "He even got out an enlistment form that was already filled out with the name 'Joe Marine' that they use as a sample. And the recruiter said, 'See, all you've got to do is sign in. Everything's already filled in.'"

Now assigned to Camp Pendleton's Communciations Center, Marine said he will return to Denver when he leaves the Corps in six months.

Senior Citizens Say They Enjoy Evenings At Noisy Discotheque

BRIDGEVILLE, Pa. (AP) — Wrapped in a red dress and dangling white beads, Theresa Sabatini jiggled ice cubes in her drink.

It was like any other night at the disco, with one exction — Mrs. Sabatini is 66 and most of the other 500 dancers were in their 70s.

"Tonight is my first time here, and it's just wonderful. It makes me feel sweet 16 all over again," she chortled as she shook her hips to the driving tempo of music from the film "Saturday Night Fever."

Most of the VIP club's senior dancers enjoy disco and many prefer the loud and staccato beat, said master of ceremonies Bill Sweetser. "They really don't want to listen to Guy Lombardo and all the old stuff. They want disco," he said.

"This just shows that we can do the same things that the young ones do — maybe even a lot more," said Mrs. Sabatini, who arrived at the VIP lounge in this Pittsburgh suburb with two busloads of friends.

"We're not carding anyone at the door, but everyone here is 55 and up. Mostare in their 70s and 80s," said Maggie Jayson, the owner's wife who organized the senior citizens nights at two VIP discos, held on the first Monday of the month.

Mrs. Jayson launched the special disco nights in December. She's since expanded the project to three of 13 other VIP lounges across the nation.

No admission is charged for the senior citizens, and all non-alcoholic beverages are free. Transportion from senior citizens centers was once provided, but the lounge had to drop the free rides when the crowd grew to nearly 10 times its original size.

SENIOR DISCO — Gene and Kay Rees dance at a Bridgeville, Pa., discotheque which on certain nights caters to over-55 patrons who turn out in startling numbers. (AP Laserphoto)

That hasn't discouraged elderly people, Mrs. Jayson said. Many centers now provide their own buses or vans, while other devotees ask their children for rides.

Many women, comprising about 75 percent of the crowd, don't have male partners, Sweetser said. So they disco in lines or dance together.

Regina Macsurak, 72, says she doesn't enjoy crowds, but she keeps coming back to disco. "The lights and loud music — it's all just beautiful."

Catherine Sheehan, 82, admitted she doesn't know much about disco. But she's learning.

"All I've been doing is jumping around," she said. "If everyone did the same thing, I could catch it a lot quicker — but I just keep watching and trying."

'Scuttlebutt' Spells End Of Line For Local Spelling Bee Entrant

A-J News Services

WASHINGTON — Michelle Evatt, the Avalanche-Journal's contestant in the National Spelling Bee, went out of the contest on her second word Wednesday.

Two area spellers outlasted Miss Evatt, but failed to make it into the finals. Rick Stout, 13, of Dumas was the 34th to fall and Julie George, 13, of Alpine was 59th.

Stout was adjudged to have missed "requital". Apparently he thought "requissel" had been called, but the judges ruled it a misspelling. Miss George, who almost made it into the top 50, missed "kulak."

J.V. King, 13, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., went much sooner. He put an "e" on the end of "caress" and walked off the floodlit stage to the hushed sympathy of 108 fellow competitors at the 52nd annual contest. He was the first speller to falter.

Fourteen-year-old Thor Garber of Delray Beach, Fla., whizzed through "imprudent," "precipice," "atrocious," "migraine" and "Esperanto" Wednesday, but stumbled on "shekel." He spelled it "sheckhle."

Thor, who finished 74th in last year's National Spelling Bee, still managed to outlast most of his competitors this time, so he's assured of finishing 34th.

All told, 63 girls and 46 boys from 39 states, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands competed. Sometime today, a single boy or girl — it most often is a girl — will remain, to claim the top prize, a $1,000 scolarship.

By the time the first day ended, 495 words had been used and only 18 girls and 14 boys remained in competition.

Those still in the running sailed through — or sometimes guessed — such words as "kibitzer," "loquacious," "klystron," "officialese" and "visceral."

Others were eliminated by "curmudgeon," "unicameral," "rococo," "freshet" and the like.

While the youngsters spelled before two microphones, parents tiptoed to the front of the Mayflower Hotel's Grand Ballroom to take snapshots of their offspring in the act of high concentration.

Next time up, he shut his eyes again and spelled "fourplex." He did it again to get through "cobalt" and remain in competition after three rounds. He became a crowd favorite.

But after lunch, he spelled "mimotyte" incorrectly — it came out "mimatite" — and he was knocked out on his fourth word.

Tim Combs, 13, of Vinita, Okla., was not so lucky. His thumbs stuck into his bluejean pockets, he tripped up on his first word, "psychedelic."

Peter Byrne, 12, of Nokomis, Fla., got through "mayhem" and "ferocious" but was eliminated by "catacomb." He put an "e" on the end.

Natalie J. Beddall, 11, of Caldwell, Ind., handled "felicity" with facility and "cortisone" without trouble, but ran afoul of "flotsam."

While she stood with arms crossed, the judges replayed a tape recording to ascertain that she spelled it "flotsom" in error.

The field of spellers was the largest ever. They are all regional champions, ranging in age from 10 to 14. Nine of them competed, and were eliminated, in last year's contest.

The spelling bee is sponsored by Scripps-Howard newspapers and local newspapers.

Here are the youngsters who fell by the wayside in the day of spelling, and the words they misspelled:

First round

1. J.V. King, 13, Fort Lauderdale, Fla., caress.
2. Lydia Jagomohan, 12, Brooklyn, N.Y., capitol.
3. Tim Combs, 13, Vinita, Okla., psychedelic.
4. Jackie Witmer, 14, Munster, Ind., rallilery.
5. Alison R. Sleight, 12, Palm Springs, Calif., bile.
6. Smitty Moore, 13, Union, Ky., timbrel.

Second round

7. Rudolfo Brown, 12, St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, moderne.
8. Jennifer Gimler, 14, Cumberland, Md., anticipatory.
9. David Atwood, 14, Moorestown, N. J., jabot.
10. Michelle Evatt, 13, Lubbock, scuttlebutt.
11. Denise O'Donnell, 14, Cleveland, Ohio, jaleo.
12. Herman Miller, 14, Harrodsburg, Ky., rales.
13. Julie Polter, 13, West Unit, Ohio, prosody.
14. Jon Josephson, 14, Big Timber, Mont., insufflator.
15. Marty Smith, 12, Mascoutah, Ill., serrefine.
16. Barbara Tobias, 13, Ozone Park, N.Y., stearic.
17. Keith Hennett, 13, Lexington, Va., fulgurant.

PEOPLE — PLACES — THINGS

Actor To Pay Back Taxes

LONDON (AP) — Veteran English character actor Wilfred Hyde White, 76, appeared before the London Bankruptcy Court on Wednesday and promised to pay about the equivalent of $13,260 in back taxes.

HYDE WHITE

The white-haired actor, who now lives in Palm Springs, Calif., had disputed a claim for twice that sum and said that morally he felt he owed nothing to the British taxman.

The court agreed to halve the original claim, and Hyde White promised to pay it "hopefully in three months. I then hope to apply for annulment of the bankruptcy," he said.

He said he is staying at the exclusive Savoy Hotel while appearing on television in London, and Thames Television, makers of the show, was picking up the tab.

When he returns to the United States, he has a contract with Paramount for a television series in which he will play a senior partner in a New York law firm, he said.

Kennedy Top Non-Candidate

BILL BROCK

Brock said he believes Kennedy will run for the Democratic presidential nomination, but added that the Massachusetts senator will lose popularity if he does.

"Ted is popular as long as he isn't running — when he becomes a candidate and his total record is examined, his popularity will drop," said Brock.

"With Carter, you have a president who doesn't do anything," Brock said. "With Kennedy, you have a president who would do the wrong things."

On the Republican side, Brock challenged speculation that former California Gov. Ronald Reagan is "slipping" in the race for the 1980 GOP nomination.

"I think he (Reagan) has the broadest, deepest support within the party of any potential candidate," said Brock, who added that "anybody who leaves (former President Gerald) Ford's name off the list of potential nominees is crazy."

Picky Neighbors Penalized

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — Alexandria police officer John Avery feels he's got even with the neighbors who forced him to give up his chickens.

Neighbors had complained that Avery kept two live chickens at his home. A city inspector found him in violation of a city ordinance that prohibits keeping wildlife on a property within 200 feet of a neighbor's lot.

With his chickens ordered out, Avery invited the inspector to take a tour of the neighborhood. Before the tour ended, the inspector wrote 21 citations for everything from discarded tree trimmings in backyards to garbage cans without covers.

Italy To Honor Sinatra

NEW YORK (AP) — Frank Sinatra is to receive the Italian government's highest civilian award in a ceremony next week in Los Angeles for his contributions in the field of arts and entertainment.

Minister Amadeo Cerchione will present the singer with the "Grande Ufficiale dell' Ordine al Merito della Repubblica Italiana" in a ceremony June 13 at the Italian consulate's residence, according to a statement released here.

Among Sinatra's contributions cited by Cerchione are his donation of "time and money by answering the appeals from the Italian and Italo-American organizations to raise funds to help children in need."

Solar Comfort Realized

NARRAGANSETT, R.I. (AP) — What is being billed as the country's first solar-powered comfort station opens in this seaside resort town Thursday.

The water at the wash basins in the $21,000, colonial-style building will be warmed to 140 degrees by the solar panels in the roof, which also will provide heat to ward off unseasonal chilliness.

Storm Damage Estimated

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Damage from Monday night's wind and rain storm that raked the Kansas City area, including the roof collapse at the Kemper Arena, may reach $5 million, according to estimates released Wednesday.

Heaviest hit was the Kemper Arena, with city officials estimating there at least at $1 million.

Disabled Work Program Rules Change Advances

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House agreed Wednesday to change the rules of the government's program for aged, blind and disabled persons so that those who want to work won't be penalized with severe benefit cuts.

The legislation, approved on a 374-3 vote, applies to the Supplemental Security Income program, which was initiated on behalf of disabled persons who prefer not to be totally dependent on the welfare program and wish to work when they can.

Shorts For Cabbies Okayed

BONN (UPI) — A Bonn judge Wednesday took into consideration the long and the short of it and ruled that the city's taxi cab drivers should be allowed to wear short pants while working on hot days.

Bonn's cab drivers cater to a capital crowd of diplomats and officials, and cab company owners thought long pants would be more decent for their classy customers.

In reviewing the case of taxi driver Winfried Kayser, who was barred from driving for 24 hours after he refused to change into long trousers, Judge Detlev Baier told the Bonn District Court that shorts were not indecent.

Kayser, 40, who was relieved from duty by the Central Bonn Taxi Radio Network after he refused to follow orders to stick to the garment rules, took the company to court.

Taxi company management said their diplomatic and official clients expected drivers to be properly dressed.

The judge said today's fashions dictate that short pants are proper for many occasions — and are not just for leisure wear.

15 Burgers Too Many

BELOIT, Wis. (AP) — High school physics teacher Tom Young was confident he could consume 15 hamburgers in half an hour.

"This is going to be quite boring," Young predicted as he sat down before his students. They had bought the hamburgers at a nearby drive-in after Young remarked casually he could match the 15-burger, 30-minute record quoted in the Guinness Book of World Records.

Young learned, however, that the 1976 world record is no cakewalk. "Now I know why the record has been standing for three years," he said when, after consuming six burgers in 12 minutes, he began staring philosophically at No. 7.

The seventh took him about five minutes to eat. After 25 minutes, Young was on burger No. 9 and fading. He never made it to No. 10.

Ziegler Lauds Newspapers

ERLANGER, Ky. (AP) — Ron Ziegler, former press secretary to Richard Nixon, returned to his high school alma mater to deliver the commencement address and told the graduates the best way to stay informed is to read newspapers.

RON ZIEGLER

Ziegler, 40, was an all-state football player during his years at Dixie Heights High School. He graduated in 1957 and last spoke at the school in 1972 as the youngest person ever to serve as a presidential secretary. This year, Ziegler's niece, Janice Young of Fort Wright, was among the graduates.

In his address, Ziegler said U.S. newspapers are "the finest printed" and said he knew "of no better source of information."

Now an executive with a New York engineering firm, Ziegler said he stays in touch with the former president. "We're still very good friends," he said.

GETS YOUR ATTENTION — A gas station on County Line Road in Calimesa, Calif., has gone metric and motorists catching the price posted on the Union 76 station's sign have to look twice. A second sign explains that the station is selling gas by the litre, which at 3.785 to the gallon, works out to be 98.3 cents per gallon for unleaded. (AP Laserphoto)

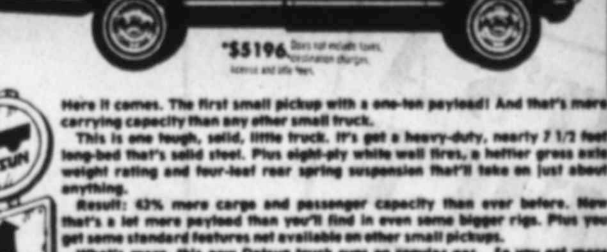
ANNOUNCING A DATSUN EXCLUSIVE... ONLY SMALL PICKUP WITH ONE-TON PAYLOAD.

DATSUN WE ARE DRIVEN



*$5196 Does not include taxes, destination charges, license and title fees.

This is one tough, solid, little truck. It's got a heavy-duty, nearly 7 1/2 foot long-bed that's solid steel. Plus eight-ply white wall tires, a heftier gross axle weight rating and four-leaf rear spring suspension that'll take on just about anything.

Result: 43% more cargo and passenger capacity than ever before. Now that's a lot more payload than you'll find in even some bigger rigs. Plus you get some standard features not available on other small pickups.

What's more, this new Datsun truck runs on regular gas. So you get more out of it, without putting more into it.

Come in and put our tough little pickup to the test. Let us show you how they're built to last and last. Compare our prices. Then get set to deal. We are driven to give you the best heavy-duty small truck your money can buy.

Raider Dies In Mishap

Texas Tech footballer Jim Wosoba, who was contending for a starting center berth when spring training ended, was killed in an industrial accident Wednesday morning at Louisville, Ky.

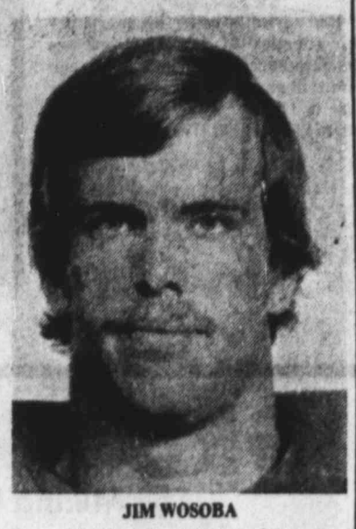
Funeral services for the former San Angelo athlete will be held at Louisville Friday. The burial service will be at 10 a.m. at the Middletown Christian Church there. At the same hour Friday, a memorial service will be held in his hometown of San Angelo at the Park Heights Baptist Church.

Tech officials were notified that Wosoba, 20, was working on a construction site when apparently struck by a truck. He died shortly after the accident. Raider coach Rex Dockery was informed.

"This is a tragedy not only for the Wosoba family but for everybody that knew Jim at Tech," Dockery said. "It's unbelieveable how quickly things like this can happen.

"He was the most improved offensive linemen we had this spring. He was definitely a starting candidate at center."

Prior to start of spring drills, guard Joe Walstad was shifted to center to replace the departed duo of Kim Taliaferro and Travis Mileur. However, the work of the 6-3, 230-pound Wosoba in the spring brought thoughts of moving Walstad back to guard.



JIM WOSOBA

Wosoba was listed as the second-team center at the end of drills but Tech coaches felt the battle for first spot was still under way.

Wosoba had played little his first year and was red shirted last fall.

"Jim's father told me that Jim had told him when he came home (to Louisville) for the summer that he was determined to start Sept. 8 when we play Southern Cal," Dockery said Wednesday.

'Bid' Hoping To Avoid Illness

NEW YORK (AP) — Two. Four. Six. Eight. Trainer Bud Delp doesn't care how many rivals Spectacular Bid draws when he trys to win the 1½-mile Belmont Stakes and the Triple Crown Saturday.

At least four 3-year-olds — Spectacular Bid, Golden Act, General Assembly and Screen King — are expected to contest the $200,000-added classic.

But there could be as many as five more — Coastal, unbeaten in three start this year who would have be supplemented to the race for $20,000; King Celebrity, fourth in the Kentucky Derby; Evasive John; Mystic Era, and Picturesque.

"My only concern is my horse getting ill," Delp said Wednesday after Spectacular Bid galloped two miles over the main Belmont Park track.

Spectacular Bid was to have been stabled in Barn 14. But because of there was some coughing there, he was moved to Barn 13, which is used by trainers Mack Miller and Lucien Laurin. Laurin trained Secretariaat to win the Triple Crown of the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont in 1973.

Illness struck Czaravich, who was expected by many to give Bid his toughest challenge, and will keep that colt out of the Belmont. Another Belmont probable, Strike The Main, suffered an impacted intestine recently and had to be destroyed.

But while he worries about the unforeseen, Delp is as confident as ever.

"My horse is going to be better for this race than he ever was," said Delp, whose personal prerace schedule includes a visit with jockey Ronnie Franklin Thursday night to The Best Little WhoreHouse in Texas. That's a Broadway play.

The one Belmont probable to work Wednesday was Golden Act, who finished third in the Derby and second in the Preakness. He went five-eighths of a mile in 1:01 3-5.

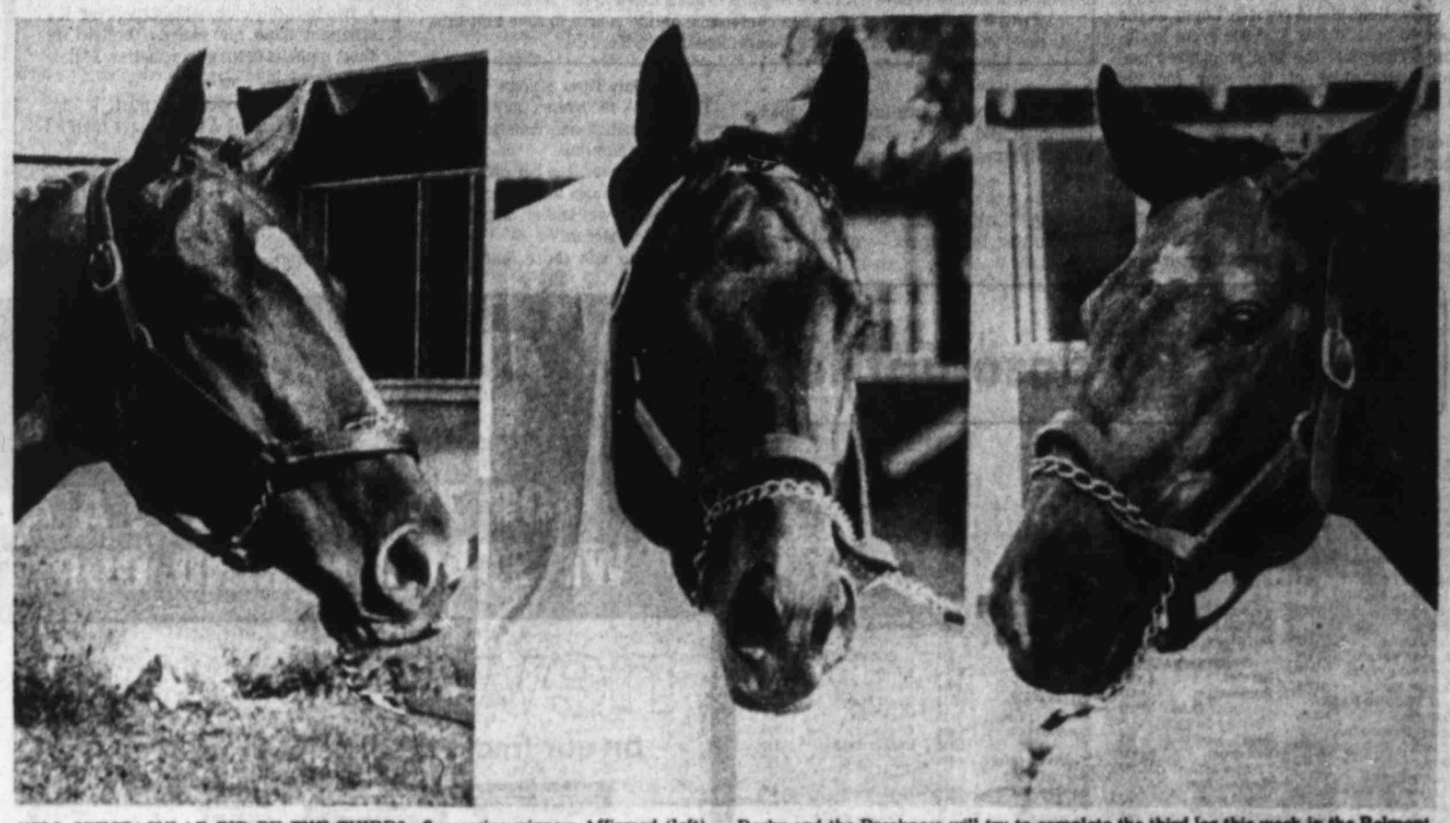
Golden Act is a one-run horse, and trainer Lorue Rettele said that will be his style Saturday although he could be a little closer to the race than he was in the Derby and Preakness. Rettele said he was happy to hear that General Assembly, the Derby runner-up who led after three-quarters of a mile in the Preakness, is going to race in the Belmont. He hopes that it will keep Franklin from setting his own pace on Spectacular Bid.

"I'd like to see a few of those others in there, too," said Rettele. "Anything but a three-horse field. That would be the worst thing."

General Assembly faded to finish fifth and last in the Preakness. Screen King, a disappointing sixth in the Derby, finshed third in the Preakness.

Screen King ad General Assembly are nvolved in jockey changes. Angel Cordero Jr., who rode Screen King in the Derby and Preakness, will ride General Assembly in the Belmont, replacing Laffit Pincay Jr. who will remain in California. Apprentice Cash Asmussen, who rode King Celebrity in the Derby, will have the mount on Svreen King.

"No comment," trainer Luis Barrera said when asked about Cordero's rough trip in the Preakness. Barrera said that Cordero was only committed to riding Screen King in the first two Triple Crown races.



WILL SPECTACULAR BID BE THE THIRD?—Successive winners Affirmed (left) and Seattle Slew (center) are now taking it easy after claiming Triple Crown honors in 1978 and 1977 respectively. Spectacular Bid, who has already won the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness will try to complete the third leg this week in the Belmont Stakes. The $200,000 race will be run at Belmont Park in New York. (AP Laserphoto)

Rangers Continue Losing Ways 4-3

By The Associated Press

Gorman Thomas belted his 13th home run of the year and Sixto Lezcano singled home the winning run in the fifth inning, leading the Milwaukee Brewers to a 4-3 victory over the Texas Rangers.

Texas scored all of its runs off Larry Sorensen, 8-5, on home runs. It was the Rangers third consecutive loss.

Bump Wills singled leading off the Texas first and was followed by John Grubb, who launched his ninth home run of the season, into the Milwaukee bullpen.

Thomas' homer, a two-run shot, tied the game in the Brewer second.

Snead, Player Head Atlanta Golf Field

ATLANTA (AP) — J.C. Snead has learned a couple of things in the past couple of seasons.

"I didn't know how good I was until I lost it," Snead said with his peculiarly shy, sef-depracating smile.

Back in 1976 he was at the top of his form. He won two tournaments and almost $200,000.

"But you always want to improve, keep moving up," Snead said. "So I took some lessons, made a little change in my swing."

South African Gary Player, who has a history of playing well in this event, is using the tournament to kick off his second swing around the American tour.

And he went into a deep, depressing slump that he's just now solving.

"It's not back yet, but it's closer than it has been in a long time," said the big, easy-going man who finished a solid third in his last start, a performance that established him as one of the men to beat in the $250,000 Atlanta Golf Classic. The tournament gets started Thursday on the 6,883 yards of hills that make up the Atlanta Country Club course.

GARY PLAYER

"Right now, I'm still trying to get back to where I was before," said Snead, a former minor league baseball player.

"I don't lie to myself. I know where my game is. I can't fool myself about that. And I know, when I'm playing good, I can play with anybody. But when I'm playing like I have the last couple of years, well, I can't get out of my own way.

"It's not much fun."

It's becoming a little more pleasant, however. The $20,300 check he picked up last week was his largest in three seasons and served as a strong indication Snead has his feet firmly planted on the road back.

Among the other major contenders for the $45,000 first prize are three men who have scored double victories this season, Masters champion Fuzzy Zoeller, Hubert Green and Lanny Wadkins. Also a strong contender is Hale Irwin, a two-time winner of this title.

Also in the 150-man field are such standouts as defending champion Jerry Heard, Andy Bean, Ben Crenshaw, Johnny Miller, Ray Floyd, Al Geiberger and Jerry McGee, a winner last week in Charlotte, N.C.

CBS will provide national television coverage of portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday.

Lopez Heads LPGA Tourney

MASON, Ohio (AP) — Nancy Lopez, abreast of her record-setting pace of a year ago, shakes off any pressure surrounding her bid this week for a fourth straight victory and second consecutive LPGA Championship title.

She came to the Nicklaus Golf Center as a 21-year-old rookie whiz last year. She had won her third straight tournament and went on to win five in a row and yearly earnings of more than $205,000, both unprecedented in the LPGA.

Maybe it's maturity. Maybe it's experience. Maybe it's her new married life, but Lopez says the pressure is not as great this time, even though she's on another streak and ranks as the game's top money winner with more than $118,000.

"Right now I don't feel any pressure. If I do win five in a row again, maybe there mighoi) pressure in the sixth tournament," Lopez said.

The Field Of 114

The field of 114 regards Lopez as the one to beat in this $150,000 event beginning Thursday, the first recognized major tournament of the year for the LPGA tourists.

"She's even gotten longer than last year," said veteran Judy Rankin, who had the single season LPGA money mark until Lopez arrived.

"Her length gives her more margin for error," Rankin said. "And she's probably the best putter this tour ever has seen."

"The rest of us have streaks of good putting," Carner said. "She never has a bad putting tournament — at least bad for her."

Only Three Majors

The LPGA recognizes only three majors, the Canadian and American Opens and this championship.

Lopez, however, has her own ideas of majors. She includes the Women's International, with which she launched her current victory streak.

"I want to win those four. I think they are the really big tournaments. I think a lot about making the Hall of Fame, too — whatever it takes," she said.

Lopez is shopping for a house in the Cincinnati area. Her husband, Tim Melton, has taken a job as the sports director at WCPO-TV in Cincinnati.

"We want to get into a house and raise a family," she said. "I'm pretty excited."

For That Reason

For that reason, Lopez says her LPGA career will not be a long one.

"I want to accomplish everything early, grab as fast as I can," said the winner of 14 tournaments in 22 months on tour. "There will come a day when I want to do something else."

She can explain her 1979 feats: five victories, three seconds and one ninth for more than $118,000.

"I'm really hitting my driver. I have a two-to-three club advantage over the others. I think my swing is better. My short game is getting a lot better. I know what I'm doing."

And then Lopez summed it up: "Mentally, I think I'm stronger than all the girls."

The pros are playing for a first prize of $22,500 on this par-72, 6,313-yard layout co-designed by Jack Nicklaus. Portions of the final rounds Saturday and Sunday will be carried by NBC-TV.

Ford Gets Advice

MASON, Ohio (AP) — Former President Gerald R. Ford says he learns more from Nancy Lopez' golf lessons than those offered by Jack Nicklaus and Tom Watkins for a simple reason.

"Her advice is better because I pay more attention to her," a smiling Ford said Wednesday after playing a pro-amateur round with the LPGA star.

Ford and Lopez headed a fivesome that also included Ohio governor James A. Rhodes, president William Keating of the Cincinnati Enquirer and Charles Mechem, chairman of the board of Taft broadcasting.

They were part of a field of 208 amateurs and 52 pros that played in the prelude to the $150,000 LPGA championships that starts Thursday at Nicklaus Golf Center.

Ford said he shot an 87 that should have been even lower.

"I missed two putts of three feet," he told a small gathering of newsmen aside the 18th green.

Lopez was playing with the former president for the fourth time and said she notices a big improvement in his game.

"Every time he has played better. He didn't hit anyone today," Lopez said.

Ford said his handicap had fallen from 18-plus when he left the White House in 1977 to 14 now. "And we're going to get it down to 12," he said.

Ford held the impromptu news conference on the course to save him time to meet an early evening speaking engagement in New York City.

"Her advice is better because I pay more attention to her. I missed two putts of three feet. My handicap has fallen from 18-plus when I was in the White House to 14 now. We're going to get it down to 12.—GERALD FORD

Baylor Recruit Picks Baseball

DALLAS (UPI)—Blue-chip high school quarterback Kyle Money, who had accepted a scholarship to play football at Baylor University this fall, has instead signed a professional baseball contract with the Philadelphia Phillies.

The Dallas Samuell High athlete was chosen in the second round of Tuesday's annual free agent draft. He signed for a bonus reportedly more than $50,000.

Money, 18, who would have been a freshman this fall at Baylor, was expected to challenge veteran quarterbacks Mickey Elam and Mike Brannan for the starting job.

"I had decided if the offer was right, I'd play baseball," Money said. "It has nothing to do with anything at Baylor. I appreciate everything Baylor has done."

Money was drafted as a righthanded pitcher. He batted .560 his junior year and .412 his senior year.

"We knew it would take something big to get him to sign and that's what happened," said Baylor football coach Grant Teaff.

Astonishing Upset Highlights French Tennis

PARIS (AP) — Towering Victor Pecci used his long each and deceptively gentle strokes to destroy Guillermo Vilas of Argentina 6-0, 6-2, 7-5 Wednesday and reach the semifinals of the French Open tennis championships.

It was an astonishing upset for the 6-foot-4 Paraguayan who never had made it out of the early rounds of a major tournament.

The No. 3 Seed

Vilas, the No.3 seed, has won this prestigious title once and been runner-up twice in the past four years. He is well known for his mastery of the slow clay surface.

Pecci next must face Jimmy Connors, who overcame fellow American Eddie Dibbs 6-2, 2-6, 6-4, 6-2 in a strange match, fu of dropped services and lost chances.

The other semifinal will match defending champion Bjorn Borg of Sweden against Vitas Gerulaitis of the United States. Both advanced to the semis Tuesday.

The Final

The final, with a first prize of $49,000 at stake, is set for Sunday.

Pecci, 23, the first player of note to come out of Paraguay, outserved and outvolleyed Vilas, and passed him with a stream of elegant strokes.

In the first set, which he ended with a mighty ace, Pecci completely dominated his more well-known rival. In the second set, Vilas held service in the opening game but did not win another game until the Paraguayan had a 5-1 lead.

Vilas broke service for the first time to lead 2-0 in the third, but Pecci broke back immediately and matched Vilas game for game until 5-5. Then he hit two beautiful returns, a forehand and a backhand, to gain the decisive service break.

"If Pecci plays like he did today, he has a great chance of not only beating Connors in the semifinals but also winning the title," Vilas said.

Vilas, 26, is the only Sout American ever to win the French crown. Pecci won the French junior title in 1973.

Connors-Dibbs Duel

The Connors-Dibbs duel was the most bizarre of the tournament. In the second and third sets, 11 of 18 gaes went aginst service.

The left-hander repeatedly hit long and netted his strokes in the early part of the match, but in the end his aggression prevailed over Dibbs' patience.

Altogether, 15 service games were lost in a match lasting 2 hours, 20 minutes. In three other games, Dibbs led 40-0 against service but could not get the decisive point.

Connors said, "I came back three times to win service games after trailing 0-40 and you can't do much better than that."

The women had a rest from singles play. In Thursday's semifinals, Chris Evert Lloyd, the favorite, is to play Australia's Dianne Fromholtz another Australian, Wendy Turnbull, is paired against Regina Marsikova of Czechoslovakia.

Connors Connects

To Semifinals

Celtics, Bird Agree On Figure

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Celtics of the National Basketball Association and Larry Bird's lawyer agree that the Indiana State University star will receive $650,000 per season as a pro, but a contract signing has been delayed until it is decided how and when he will be paid.

Attorney Bob Woolf met Wednesday with Celtics President Red Auerbach, who — in turn — talked by telephone with team owner Harry Mangurian about the deferred compensation aspects of the contract.

Sources close to the negotiations for the 6-foot-9 Bird, viewed as a key to rebuilding the Boston franchise, confirmed that the $650,000 per season figure — in a contract spanning five seasons — is settled.

Both sides were striving for a contract signing by the weekend, but several more days of negotiations were possible.

The salary is a compromise between the Celtics' previous offer of $600,000 and Woolf's proposal for $700,000. The figure also is half of what Woolf sought at the initial bargaining session this spring.

Thus, Bird would enter the NBA as the highest paid rookie in history and one of the top paid players in the league. The main demand by Bird — who has not participated in the talks and is at home in Indiana — and Woolf was that the player receive more than the $600,000 per year reportedly to be paid Michigan State's Earvin Johnson, who will be the No.1 choice of the Los Angeles Lakers in the NBA draft June 25.

Bird, who was drafted by the Celtics last year, have until the NBA draft on June 25th to sign the former Indiana State star.

It proved to be a wise choice.

After all, this season Bird was credited with taking Indiana State to the NCAA finals in Salt Lake City. Indiana State also held the top ranking for most of the season, which all proved to be weapons in Bird's favor at the bargaining table.

However, despite intense discussions, the Celtics and Bird were far apart on contract terms.

Reports circulated that the negotiations had stopped, and Celtic officials were quoted as saying that they no longer thought it was possible for Bird to play in Boston.

Ainsworth Knows Laws

PLAINVIEW — When you think of local hunting and fishing regulations or water safety requirements in Texas, the first person to come to mind is the area Texas game warden and Ronnie Ainsworth of Plainview is the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department representative for Hale and Floyd counties on the South Plains.

The two counties have as much variety of wildlife as any in northwest Texas including deer, quail, dove, pheasant, waterfowl and aoudad sheep.

Because district game wardens work closely with other local law enforcement departments, often the warden can be contacted by calling the local police department or sheriff's department. Although the game warden doesn't receive many calls reporting violations or asking for local information, officer Ainsworth can be contacted by calling 293-5688 in Plainview.

Ainsworth knows that his area covers many square miles and without the help of conscientious sportsmen and landowners, his job would be nearly impossible to perform The officer asks that all game, fish and water safety violations be reported to him as quickly as possible by every one.

A native of Vernon, Ainsworth has been with the law enforcement division of the P&WD for six years. He resides in Plainview with his wife, Barbara, and their two children, 11-year old Joey and 8-year old Kimberly.

NFL Owners Change 'Chop Block' Action

NEW YORK (AP) — National Football League owners, expected to outlaw the controversial "chop block," decided instead Wednesday only to recommend that the technique not be used, but stopped short of passing specific legislation against it.

Commissioner Pete Rozelle will write letters to each of thleague's 28 coaches expressing the NFL's concern over the potential danger of the "chop block" technique. The block, used by about half the NFL clubs last seaso, is employed against defensive ends or outside rushers with wide receivers or offensive backs double-teaming them.

At issue here is the safety factor. According to Don Weiss, executive director of the NFL, five clubs have reported one or more disabling injuries to defensive eds or outside rushers in the past two seasons as a result of chop blocks. Teams have used the block to increase the quality of quarterback protection.

The Detroit Lions, who had lost some defensive players with chop block injuries, recommended a rule against the technique. But Coach Monte Clark, who sat in on the owners' meeting along with Ted Marchibroda, coach of the Baltimore Colts, said he felt that the official expression of concern from Rozelle would have the desired effect.

"The feeling was that the coaches could handle it at their level," said Weiss. "It is hoped that they will not teach the technique."

And what if they do?

"We would express our concern about them using the technique," Weiss said. "There is no intention of imposing a specific penalty. If there were, a rule would have been passed."

The chop block is an ideomatic term to describe the maneuver in which the defensive player is first engaged by an offensive lineman, then finds an offensive back also blocking him below the waist. "A player is defenseless in that situation," Weiss said.

The league is continuing to work on the development of safer equipment with Byron Danzis of Houston, who designed the flak jacket which Oilers' quarterback Dan Pastorini found effective at the end of last season.

On other matters, the owners heard a Pro Bowl update, which indicates that ticket sales were moving well for the Jan. 27 game in Honolulu's Aloha Stadium, and were briefed on the progress of a new domed stadium in Minnesota with construction expected to begin this summer.

Third Baseman Brooks Robinson played more than two decades in Baltimore and led the American League in fielding 11 times.

Astros Extend Lead

By The Associated Press

Houston pinch-hitter Denny Walling clubbed a three-run homer in the seventh inning and Jose Cruz added a game-winning grounder in the eighth to rally the Astros to a 4-3 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

The victory, Houston's 10th in its last 12 games, boosted the Astros to a 2½-game lead over Cincinnati in the National League West Division.

Cesar Cedeno led off Houston's eighth with a single, stole second and went to third on Enos Cabell's single with one out. Cruz then forced Cabell at second but beat the double play attempt at first as Cedeno scored the winning run.

WHITE SOX 8, RED SOX 5

Lamar Johnson, Milt May and Eric Soderholm homered and the Chicago White Sox held on for an 8-5 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

Johnson hit a solo homer, his third, high off the light tower in left. May lined a two-run shot just inside the right-field foul pole in the sixth for his first homer and Soderholm belted his sixth homer with the bases empty in the seventh.

ORIOLES 3, ROYALS 0

Dennis Martinez allowed four hits, struck out nine and notched his eighth consecutive victory while pitching the Baltimore Orioles to a 3-0 decision over the Kansas City Royals./

Lee May's RBI double off Paul Splittorff, 8-5, scored the first Baltimore run, Dave Skaggs' single made it 2-0 in the fifth, and Gary Roenicke rapped his 11th home run in the sixth.

Martinez, 8-2, retired the first 10 Kansas City batters before George Brett singled in the fourth, and then set down seven more in a row prior to Willie Wilson's two-out single in the sixth.

YANKEES 3, TWINS 2

Jim Spencer's pinch single scored the winning run with two out in the ninth inning to give the New York Yankees a 3-2 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

New York's Ron Guidry, 6-4, who surrendered the tying run on Bob Randle's RBI single in the top of the ninth, earned the victory after limiting the Twins to five hits.

METS 5, REDS 3

Frank Taveras drove in two runs and Joel Youngblood and Doug Flynn each had run-scoring doubles during a four-run seventh inning as the New York Mets rallied for a 5-3 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

Flynn and Youngblood, both ex-Reds, drove in the tying and go-ahead runs and Taveras' single gave him his second and third RBI of the game.

Dale Murray, 3-5, another ex-Red, got credit for the victory after working one inning in relief of starter Jesse Orosco, who went the first five innings for his longest stint in his rookie year.

CUBS 3, PADRES 0

Rick Reuschel andBruce Sutter combined for a four-hitter and Dave Kingman continued his torrid hitting with a run-scoring triple, sparking the Chicago Cubs to a 3-0 victory over the San Diego Padres.

The Cubs got two runs off Randy Jones, 5-4, after two men were out in the first inning. Ted Sizemore was on

CARDS 6, GIANTS 5

Garry Templeton's RBI single in the eighth inning, his third hit of the game, gave the surging St. Louis Cardinals a 6-5 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

George Hendrick and Mike Tyson hit home runs for the Cards, who won their seventh straight. Jack Clark belted two homers and Larry Herndon added another for the Giants, who have lost 10 of their last 11 games.

EXPOS 12, BRAVES 2

Tony Perez, Ellis Valentine and Larry Parrish each got two hits in the fourth inning as the Montreal Expos sent 15 batters to the plate and scored 11 runs in a 12-2 rout of the Atlanta Braves.

Montreal trailed 2-0 when Perez led off with a single against Phil Niekro, 6-9. Before the inning was over, the Expos had collected nine hits and two walks, the Braves had committed three errors and a wild pitch, and every player in the Montreal lineup had scored at least once.

Valentine drove in three runs in the inning and Warren Cromartie had a two-run single while Perez, Dawson and winning pitcher Ross Grimsley, 5-4, each had run-scoring singles.

PIRATES 5, DODGERS 4

Bill Robinson's second home run of the game, a two-run smash off reliever Bob Welch, capped an eighth inning rally that lifted the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 5-4 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Dodger starter Jerry Reuss, acquired from Pittsburgh in an April trade, held a 4-1 lead going into the bottom of the eighth with the help of home runs by Reggie Smith, Steve Garvey and Dave Lopes off Pirate starter Ed Whitson.

After Steve Nicosia singled to lead off the Pirate eighth, pinch-hitter Manny Sanguillen hit a bouncer to Reuss, who threw the ball past second base into center field. Reuss was then relieved by another ex-Pirate, Terry Forster.

Then Robinson, who had a solo homer in the fourth, drove a pitch from Welch into the left field eats, scoring the go-ahead run behind Moreno. It was the 14th homer of the season for Robinson, equalling his season total for last year.

Welch fell to 4-3. Enrique Romo, 2-2, got the victory and Kent Tekulve earned his sixth save.

English Jockey Wins Derby

EPSOM, England (AP) — English champion jockey Willie Carson rode Troy to what he called the easiest victory ever in the 200th Epsom Derby Wednesday.

Carson proved he made the right decision in choosing Troy in preference to the Queen's horse Milford when the 5-1 longshot came home by seven lengths.

Athletic Changes

Davis Becomes Horn...

Lynn Davis, head women's basketball coach at Cooper, has resigned to accept a position as assistant women's basketball coach at the University of Texas, it was announced Wednesday in Austin.

Miss Davis, who had been at Cooper for one year, will assume her new duties this fall as an assistant head coach Jody Conradt.

Miss Davis replaces Marti Fuquay, who resigned to become head coach at Temple Junior College, according to Miss Conradt. The UT coach praised Miss Davis as a defensive specialist, and said she would be used extensively in recruiting.

Miss Davis is a 1978 graduate of West Texas State University and was a four-year starter guard at Canyon High School. During her high school career, Canyon ruled as state basketball champion.

...Walker Resigns Post

AMARILLO (Special)—Dee Walker, Athletic Director of the Amarillo Independent School District for the past 24 years, announced his retirement effective Aug. 31.

Dr. B.J. Stamps, Superintendent of the AISD, said applications for the AD position will be accepted through July 1. A replacement is expected to be named by Aug. 1, he added.

Walker earned both a bachelor's and master's degree from North Texas State University. He coached briefly at White Deer and Borger before joining the Marines in 1942. After his stint in the service, he joined Odus Mitchell's staff at Marshall High School. He later moved with Mitchell to NTSU.

After eight years of coaching at NTSU, Walker was hired as Amarillo's first AD.

Malone, Gervin Top NBA List

NEW YORK (AP) — Houston center Moses Malone, the National Basketball Association's most valuable player, and San Antonio guard George Gervin, the league's leading scorer, head the 1978-79 NBA All-League team, it was announced Wednesday.

Joining them on the elite squad were guard Paul Westphal of Phoenix, and forwards Marques Johnson of Milwaukee and Elvin Hayes of Washington.

The team, based on regular-season performance, was selected by a panel of 66 members of the media from the league's 22 cities. Each first-place vote counted two points and a second-team selection was worth one point.

The 6-foot-11 Malone, the NBA's leading rebounder with a 17.6 average and the No. 5 scorer with a 24.8 mark, collected the most points, 120.

Gervin, tbe scoring champion for the second consecutive season, with a 29.8 average, was next with 114 votes.

Johnson, third in scoring at 25.6 points, received 99 points, one point more than Hayes, who averaged 21.8 points.

By WILLIAM D. KERNS
A-J Entertainment Editor

As William Richert would have it in his new mystery-thriller "Winter Kills," a Catholic United States president named Timothy Keegan was gunned down in 1960 by at least two gunmen while his motorcade negotiated the downtown streets of Philadelphia. The Pickering Commission concludes that Willie Arnold, working alone, shot the president. But before Arnold can testify, he is shot and killed, even while surrounded by detectives and the press in police headquarters. The man who shoots Arnold is a nightclub owner named Joe Diamond, who was once in Cuba. Conspiracy is hinted at, but never proven.

Even so, in the 19 years since the assassination "more than 16 people have died under mysterious conditions."

Already, any fool can see the picture's thinly veiled references to the horrors of November 1963. Keegan is John F. Kennedy, of course.

A-J FILM REVIEW

The Pickering Commission is the Warren Commission. Willie Arnold is Lee Harvey Oswald, and Joe Diamond represents Jack Ruby.

And the movie itself? It's a sleazy, slick production which manages to cruelly trivialize the serious nature of true-life catastrophe, throwing in enough unrelated humor to hint at satire or parody, all the while treating its characters all too seriously.

Some (not all) of the advertising for the picture uses the tagline, "What 'M*A*S*H' did for the war, 'Winter Kills' does for the American dream." Yet this new film never decides whether it wants to be more like "Executive Action" or "Doctor Strangelove." The result is film personified as character assassin, two hours of exploitative nonsense designed to do little more than drag the Kennedy name through the dirt.

The film opens with the late president's half brother, played with style by Jeff Bridges, learning in 1979 that the Pickering Commission blew it, that there was indeed a conspiracy and more than one man had fired upon his brother on that fateful day. Just as suddenly as he begins to learn the truth, people around him are murdered. No one is whom he (or she) seems to be. A woman cyclist (the director's wife in a cameo) appears and, within seconds, men are shot or bombs explode. Maids turn out to be professional killers. And on and on. Bridges winds up seeking the truth behind it all, and that truth finally comes down to the selfishness of his billionaire father, played by John Huston.

Hungry for power and female flesh, it seems Dad accepted money from organized crime in order to get Timothy elected. When the president learned of this, he refused to return favors to the mob and so Dad had him killed. Are you listening, conspiracy fans? Here's a solution you probably never dreamed of! John F. Kennedy was killed by Joe Kennedy. That filmmakers could dare to even hint, much less confirm, such a solution is indicative only of sickness.

Mind you, there are many who might say, "Hey, it's only a parody." And there's times one comes close to agreeing. The film, after all, is full of lapses in logic and general silliness. While questioning a military industrialist in Oklahoma, Bridges sees his rented yellow Pinto fired upon by tanks. Huh? His mother is a prime example of a mental breakdown, overly worried about her sick dog before smothering it in her sleep. And his mistress, a beautiful metropolitan type who yelps like a puppy during lovemaking was, we're informed, also his brother's mistress. (We are, of course, supposed to ignore the fact that, since Timothy was killed 19 years back, it would be necessary for the president of the United States to be having an affair with an 8-year-old girl.)

And who in the heck is the character played by Richard Boone? He's introduced as the man who uncovers the conspiracy. Later, he lays lows and helps Bridges after a fellow witness "fell off the toilet and broke his neck." And yet, in a final scene, he manages a complete and unexplained reversal. This is just moments before another major character slides off the American flag and falls 50 stories to his death with as much serious fear and anxiety as Slim Pickens displayed while riding the bomb in "Doctor Strangelove."

Nevertheless, our occasional laughter rings hollow, since all parodies seem accidental. Writer-director Richert, working from a book by Richard Condon (who also penned "The Manchurian Candidate"), constantly treats his material as deadly accurate mystery and suspense. He wants attention from us, not laughter. John Huston even told one interviewer recently, "I'll tell you this. Joe Kennedy was a mean, vicious, evil man." And he plays his character accordingly.

Ironically, the credits for "Winter Kills" promise a high quality production. The cast includes Bridges, Huston, Boone, Anthony Perkins (typecast again), Eli Wallach, Dorothy Malone, Sterling Hayden, Tomas Milian and Toshiro Mifune. Elizabeth Taylor even shows up for an uncredited, unvoiced cameo as the woman who supplied the president with loose women. One of the finest cinematographers in the business, Vilmos Zsigmond, captures the lush desert and city static with aplomb. And the music is supplied by Maurice Jarre, occasionally reverting to the sweeping tones he once granted "Doctor Zhivago."

But the whole does not equal the sum of its parts.

"Winter Kills" is but a snake in the cinematic grass, a film without feelings or conscience. It is furthermore a film without direction. And that, most of all, is the killing factor. In short, Richert never decided whether he wanted to concentrate totally on dramatic action or high camp and, as a result, succeeded at neither.

NBC News' 'Segment Three' Secure

NEW YORK (AP) — Speculation that NBC might be about to shelve or, at the least, de-emphasize its acclaimed "Segment 3" news feature appears to be just that — speculation, founded, perhaps, on some recent changes in the "Nightly News" administration.

"We're having more long-form spots now than ever before," says Tom Wolzien, who took over as "Segment 3" producer in April. "Paul Greenberg is a person who believes in taking time to tell a story properly and thoroughly."

Little in television is secure for long, and rumors that "Segment 3" was on its way out were inevitable after Greenberg's appointment as executive producer of the "Nightly News" in March.

Then, too, "Nightly News" was — and still is — struggling to hold on to second place in the ratings behind CBS' "Evening News."

Indeed, Greenberg suggested in an earlier interview that the third segment of the nightly newscast might not always be the best spot for the long-form report.

Wolzien says he shares that reservation. "The name 'Segment 3' sometimes presents problems, because that spot in the newscast isn't always the best place for the report.

"But I believe the audience looks for it there. I've really been surprised," Wolzien says, "at the solid recognition of name and concept."

Greenberg did say, in fact, his overall objective would be to "explain each story to the viewer, to put emphasis on the portion of the story that shows how it affects peoples' lives." And that might be one definition for "Segment 3."

"Segment 3' lends itself to explaining major issues and problems of all sorts," says Wolzien, who joined NBC as a network field producer in Washington in February 1976, "and in relating them to people's lives.

"I've often thought if we can't answer the question, 'Who cares?' or, 'Who should care?' the story doesn't belong on the air. We always keep that in mind in producing 'Segment 3'."

"Segment 3" premiered in September 1977. From the start, "Segment 3" stories have dealt with a single topic, and features sometimes run two or more days. The slot often has been the platform for an investigative story.

One recent "Segment 3," for instance, was a five-part report on organized crime in the recording industry. "It was not a question of waterfront thugs beating up some guy," says Wolzien, "rather a look at the way organized crime controls artists and performances and recordings. And that hits you in the pocketbook."

But "Segment 3," says the producer, "also lends itself to stories that might not directly affect Americans, like Rhodesia. And there we try to show what people in that country, black and white, might be going through."

Tom Wolzien, at 32, has been in television since 1968, when he went to work as a reporter-photographer for KMGH, the CBS affiliate in Denver. He also worked for WLUK in Green Bay, Wis., and KMOX and KSD in St. Louis, and brings this perspective to his current job:

"I can remember several times, watching the network news in Denver and saying, 'Hey, man, nobody around here cares about that.'

"I keep that in mind when we're putting together something for 'Segment 3'."

Shortages Accelerate Bus Ridership Gains

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bus ridership was up even before the nation's bout with fuel shortages, the American Bus Association asserted Wednesday.

The industry group said 3 million more persons rode intercity buses in 1978 than in the previous year, adding that this represented an increase of just under 1 percent above the 1977 total.

It said 355 million persons rode intercity buses in 1978, of which approximately 55 percent were passengers on charter and tour buses. The association also said industry revenues increased by 6.6 percent in 1978, but the gain was more than offset by a 6.9 percent jump in operating costs.

Railroad Diesel Outlook Bleak

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Spokesmen for five major Midwestern and Western railroads say supplies of diesel fuel appear adequate for now, but the long-range outlook is questionable.

Joe McCartney, a Union Pacific representative, said the railroad has about half its normal supplies. Usually the railroad keeps a two-week supply, but it is down to seven days, said McCartney. A spokesman for the Chicago & North Western Railroad, James MacDonald, said of the situation, "It's tight. We're scrounging for diesel."

A representative of the Missouri Pacific in St. Louis said spot shortages are occurring over its 12-state system. Burlington Northern has approximately a 12-day supply, said a spokesman at the railroad's headquarters in St. Paul, Minn. Robert O'Brien of the Illinois Central said supplies were sufficient.

Proper Location Aids Business

CHINA, Maine (UPI) — Don't tell John Soifer that location isn't everything in the restaurant business.

When Soifer and his wife Debbie went to the Wong Soon Noodle Co. in Boston's Chinatown district to buy some eggroll skins for their new eatery, a woman peered warily down a narrow hallway at them and shouted "wholesale only."

"In China," he said as her eyes popped. "China, Maine."

Soifer said she was incredulous. "She giggled and screamed out something of amazement in Chinese. She couldn't believe there was a town in Maine named China.

"We showed her our menus and checks with the restaurant's name, the China Country Kitchen, and from then on she treated us like she'd known us all our lives.

"We bought a case of eggroll skins. She gave us a good deal."

Good Performances Provide Saving Grace For 'Voices'

"Voices." Directed by Robert Markowitz. Written by John Herzfeld. Songs and score by Jimmy Webb. Photographed by Alan Metzger. Edited by Danford B. Greene. Stars Michael Ontkean, Amy Irving, Alex Rocco and Barry Miller. Rated PG. At Showplace Six.

OK, time for roll call. We had a crippled Olympic skier in "The Other Side of the Mountain," and she even managed to show off new traumas and a new boyfriend in a sequel. We had a blind ice skater in "Ice Castles," a paraplegic war veteran in "Coming Home" and enough diseases to kill off Ali MacGraw in "Love Story," Robert De Niro in "Bang the Drum Slowly" and countless others in lesser films. We even had a woman finding love after having her face rearranged in a car accident in "The Promise." And now we're offered a new picture called "Voices," in which a pop singer meets a young deaf woman and love conquers all, and our first reaction is to shy away from the sap.

A-J FILM REVIEW

Still, "Voices" possesses a surprising charm. Sure, no one is going to label it flawless; it is sentimental, inconsistent and all too rosy. Yet, thanks to two marvelous performances by Michael Ontkean as Drew and Amy Irving as Rosemarie, this picture still manages to touch us. Indeed, "Voices" is not going to win any major awards, but it remains impossible to dispute its success as sheer entertainment.

The film's primary problem lies in screenwriter John Herzfeld attempting to cram too many stories, too many conflicts, into a solitary film. The growing attraction between Drew and Rosemarie holds the most import for us, but there is also an interesting tale to be told through Drew's family: four men trying to exist alone in Hoboken squalor.

Alex Rocco is the father with gambling fever, willing to bet his son's college education on the speed of a thoroughbred. Herbert Berghof is the grandfather who recognizes Drew's fears and fantasies. And Barry Miller, last seen as John Travolta's insecure and semi-suicidal friend in "Saturday Night Fever," is the kid brother and another confused punk. There is a story in their bond, their loyalty.

SOUND AND SILENCE — The new film "Voices" stars Michael Ontkean, left, as a pop singer and Amy Irving as the deaf woman with whom he falls in love. Though the plot sounds sappy enough to frighten many viewers away, A-J film critic William Kerns found the performances polished and the film charming enough to keep even the cynics entertained. Rated PG, "Voices" is currently playing at Showplace Six.

Unfortunately, screenwriter Herzfeld and director Robert Markowitz spend equal amounts of time with the family problems and the love story and, as a result, the pacing is too jumpy and we leave unfulfilled. No matter how many times the family may scream or yell or lick its wounds — the latter in a beautiful scene in which Manhattan is viewed at night from across the dirty Hudson — we are still wondering about the love story. And that is to the credit of the two stars.

"Cinderella don't live in Hoboken," Rocco says. But she's pretty close by. Ontkean sees her first from a distance, and their chemistry is evident. When he later learns the woman is deaf, Ontkean captures our attention and favor as he makes the expected blunders, considers the coward's way out and then hangs in there. This young Canadian actor first made his mark with a two-year stint on TV's "The Rookies," then earned raves with his unexpected striptease in the black comedy "Slapshot." His growth as an actor is even more visible here, and he's not half bad in his singing debut either.

Amy Irving, a 24-year-old beauty who made her reputation as the surviving entities in Brian De Palma's "Carrie" and "The Fury," displays just the right proportion of fear and hope as the deaf teacher who tries to stifle her secret desire to dance. I might add that, as a hearing viewer anyway, Miss Irving struck me as completely believable as an emoting, three-dimensional deaf woman.

The key to the film's success is the likeability of these two characters. We feel for them, we are concerned about them, we want to know what happens to them. By establishing this precedent early, Markowitz can stick in quite a few illogical scenes without fear of losing his viewers. Mind you, the film has a great many high points: Ontkean's irritable confusion when he first takes Miss Irving out for coffee, Rosemarie's first wonderful dance for her students, the first moment she reveals she cares enough to talk to Drew.

But, at the same time, one can't deny the onslaught of poorly conceived sequences and loose ends. It's not necessary to show us Drew singing in topless joints. We don't need the sly hints of organized criminal elements, or the younger brother's delinquency or the big family fistfight at a gang's clubhouse. We are confused as to why Ontkean forces Miss Irving to attempt to be a dancer, when she seems happy with her valuable role as a teacher of deaf children. But as long as he insists upon it, why can't the director show us the result of her final dance tryouts instead of fading to a dreamy dissolve?

Cutting off the soundtrack sporadically to place us in Rosemarie's world is only occasionally effective, and the ending is also of the sticky sweet variety. There's no denying a serious story could still be told by following this young couple through the next few years, letting us see how they cope with the problems which would surely arise.

Yet despite the inconsistencies and deficiencies, "Voices" still speaks loudly as an excellent romantic diversion. And it speaks with too much honest emotion to have to weather the storm of protests from the southern California deaf, who are angry because a deaf woman was not cast in the lead role. (How soon we forget Patty Duke in "The Miracle Worker.") Amy Irving is an actress, and she is very good in the role of a deaf woman in a film which speaks not to the mind, but to the heart.

As such, the film, through the performances of both Amy Irving and Michael Ontkean, gets in our blood. We enjoy watching these two characters on screen, and that rarity in itself seems worth the price of admission.

Town To Celebrate Bicentennial Despite 20-Year Error In Date Of Founding

MAUNABO, P.R. (UPI) — Just when the town of Maunabo was all set to celebrate its bicentennial, residents discovered that the town wasn't founded in 1779 at all, but in 1799.

But Mayor Samuel Garcia has decided to go right ahead with the celebration, whether it be to celebrate its 200th or its 180th birthday, and Ramon Arroyo, editor of the monthly newspaper La Esquina, supports the decision in an editorial, saying "future generations will thank us for it."

Maunabo, a town of about 11,000 persons in southeastern Puerto Rico where sugar cane growing, fishing and factory work are the main economic activities, had drawn up grandiose plans for its bicentennial, based on the archives of Spanish colonial historian Cayetano Coll y Toste, who wrote that Maunabo was founded in 1779.

Now the Puerto Rican Academy of History has discovered that the year of Maunabo's founding was 1799 and that the Spanish historian probably made a "typographical error."

"It's too late now to discover an error like that," Mayor Garcia said. "I'm not convinced of the date of our founding. Maybe the academy is wrong. In any event, it's not the fault of the municipal administration".

The mayor said he won't alter his plans for a bicentennial party, but Eleazar Ruiz, president of the town's cultural center, said what Maunabo will be celebrating will be its 180th birthday.

Local newspaper editor Arroyo wrote that he also had to agree that Maunabo was only 180 years old, "but I think that 180 years is sufficient cause anyway for all of us to celebrate the event together, and I suggest that all the organizations go right ahead with their celebration plans.

"Let's celebrate the 180th anniversary of the founding of our town," Arroyo wrote. "Let it be for the good of our town. Future generations will thank us for it."

Plant's Shutdown Still Undetermined

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A possible crack in a 14-inch diameter pipe fitting carrying non-radioactive water may keep the San Onofre nuclear power plant closed for an undetermined period, according to a Southern California Edison Co. spokesman. The plant is located about 65 miles south of Los Angeles.

Spokesman Stanley Cann said Tuesday that the discovery of the potential crack at the plant, which has been out of service since Friday for routine maintenance and inspection, had been reported to the federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

Cann said the piping is part of the feedwater system that transports non-radioactive water to the steam generator, producing steam which is used to drive the turbine generator to make electricity.

MONEY FOR OLYMPICS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The City Council has approved a request for more than $141 million in federal funds for the Olympics, an amount almost four times higher than the figure originally estimated for construction and refurbishment. The request approved Tuesday asks Congress and other federal agencies to earmark $141,511,356 for the 1984 summer Olympic Games. Funding includes an underground parking facility near the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum.

FILM TRIO — Young inventor Wesley Eure and his fiancee Valerie Bertinelli pose with pet dog Rascal, who in turn doubles as a mechanical watchdog, in the children's film "C.H.O.M.P.S." A-J film critic William Kerns says the film, rated PG and currently playing at Showplace Six, has little to offer and is better suited to the television medium.

'C.H.O.M.P.S.' Passes As Misplaced Saturday Morning TV Program

A-J FILM REVIEW

The film title "C.H.O.M.P.S." is an acronym for Canine Home Protection System, and the urge to take the easy way out and simply call the movie a dog is extremely hard to resist. Oh, there's no denying it's a horrid excuse for moviemaking, but the real mistake comes with the assumption it should be judged like any other motion picture — because "C.H.O.M.P.S.," at best, is simply misplaced Saturday morning television programming. It was produced by Joseph Barbera, the same man who gave us Yogi Bear and Huckleberry Hound and The Flintstones and, aside from the haphazard insertion of a minor four letter word to assure a PG rating, should have the same appeal.

In other words, parents shouldn't have to pay a higher price for "C.H.O.M.P.S." than the usual risk of exposing their children to manipulative commercials for sugar cerials.

Barbera, who came up with the original story and then co-wrote the screenplay with Dick Robbins and Duane Poole, is trying to click with a Six Million Dollar Benji here. His story revolves around the construction of a mechanical watchdog, an endearing Benji-lookalike which can jump through steel doors, use X-ray vision and knock over vans and trees and telephone poles. He has a little trouble listening to dog whistles and finding an open door, but then nobody's perfect, right?

The "C.H.O.M.P.S." dog is the invention of boy genius Wesley Eure, who wants to marry young Valerie Bertinelli. But he has to get the blessing of his boss — her father — who just happens to be the president of a failing burglar alarm company. Actually, the only conflicts in the film come from the competitors who want to steal either the plans for "C.H.O.M.P.S." or the actual dog. The bad guys are easily recognized and the crooks are slapstick bunglers played for laughs (which rarely arrive) by Red Buttons and Chuck McCann.

Mister Magoo himself, Jim Backus (who hasn't had an adult role on screen since "Rebel Without A Cause"), is another cheap villain the wee folk can boo.

And let's not fool ourselves. The good guys are all just as one dimensional and predictable. This movie certainly will not be considered a testing ground for young talent; no one is offered a challenge, only an opportunity for closeups.

But what of the special effects and the mechanical dog itself, you ask? Publicity notes state the real dog was obtained for $12.50 at the city pound, but the "C.H.O.M.P.S." mutt cost over $250,000 to piece together. Ah, but we skeptics were not born yesterday. A quarter of a million greenbacks for a dog statue filled with a few bright lights, a statue that doesn't move, that doesn't do anything? Hardly. So where did the money go? Well, it's hard to say. It sure wasn't spent on effects for the talking (real) dog in the neighborhood, an ugly black mongrel named Monster who has all the cuss words and spouts amusing threats like, "Give me that bone, turkey."

And again, the comparison is apt. This is poorly made, intelligence insulting, predictable, boring and often embarrassing material. In short, it would fit in perfectly with most of the Saturday morning television pablum. Putting it on the larger screen is simply removing it from its natural element.

Paramount Plans Huge 'Wrap' Party

The cast and crew of a film break open the champagne, call the caterers and throw a wingding to toast the success of the film and for a final round of good fellowship.

Wrap parties generally include the spouses, girlfriends, boyfriends and assorted love interests generated on locations. Part of the fun is watching location playboys and playgirls attempting to keep their spouses separated from their playmates.

The parties also give featured players and stagehands the opportunity to mingle with the stars who distribute gifts to their loyal compatriots.

In most cases wrap parties are strictly limited to those directly involved in the making of the film. The tab is picked up by the producer or studio.

Some pictures, acrimoniously made by feuding factions, go without a wrap party for fear of mayhem. It is not unknown for a disenchanted bit player with a few drinks under his belt to tell off an assistant director.

The jamboree, which had to cost a large fortune, accompanied the studio's announcement that it would release all seven films this summer:

"Players," with Ali MacGraw and Dean-Paul Martin; Clint Eastwood's "Escape from Alcatraz;" "Sidney Sheldon's Bloodline" starring Audrey Hepburn and Ben Gazarra; "North Dallas Forty" with Nick Nolte; "Sunburn," starring Farrah Fawcett-Majors; "Prophecy," starring Talia Shire and Robert Foxworth; and "Meatballs" with Bill Murray.

Paramount sent invitations to 1,500 Hollywoodians of varying degrees of importance. The guest list was a mixture of recording industry executives, television and movie executives and creators, the press and hangers-on by the score.

The studio decorated several of its standing street scenes to resemble a French Riviera resort town. Food stalls dispensed oysters on the half shell, Japanese tempura specialities, Mexican goodies, sandwiches and hot and cold hors d'oeuvres of every description.

The celebrants were never more than a few steps away from well-socked bars. An enormous stage was constructed for dancing under myriad lights. A second stage for entertainers was erected beneath a mammoth outdoor movie screen.

The studio had more than a party in mind. It was taping the gala for a television special which will be distributed through Paramount Television syndication in some 100 cities across the country to hype the seven movies.

The studio hired comedian Richard Pryor to entertain the guests, along with the Doobie Brothers, the rock group Earth, Wind and Fire, the Pointer Sisters and comedians Charlie Callas and Billy (You can call me Ray) Saluga who will be seen in the special.

Hollywood, usually an early-to-bed town, turned out en masse for the 10 p.m. starting time with an elegant Italian midnight supper served at the stroke of 12.

Guests included agents, press agents, producers, directors and studio bigwigs who, as might be expected, were found in quiet corners making deals.

Perhaps the biggest flurry of the night involved the brief appearance of Robert De Niro, a rare party attender who circulated unnoticed for half an hour. Once his presence was discovered, De Niro decamped.

Robin Wiliams and Pam Dawber of "Mork and Mindy" were there with such other TV Stars as Danny Devito, Richard Mulligan and Jeff Conoway.

Glamor girls included Jacqueline Bisset, Elizabeth Montgomery and Kim Darby. Ryan O'Neal's sprout, Tatum, was on hand looking very grown up.

Rock music ground out through the night, the dance floor filled to capacity with women dressed in an array of outfits from garish dresses cut to the waist to blue jeans and T-shirts.

Happily, even the stage hands and technicians were present for the biggest wrap party of them all.

Rolls Preferred To Waffles

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — Banker Bill Jennings admits a new Rolls Royce makes a better gift for large depositors than a waffle iron, but it does pose a few problems.

Like how to get it out of the bank lobby and to the client.

"We had to knock a hole in the wall to get (the display car) in," said Jennings, chairman of Penn Square Bank N.A.

Jennings said a local oilman was the first to accept the bank's offer of a Silver Shadow II in lieu of interest on a $1 million six-month certificate of deposit. He declined to identify the depositor.

"You have to admit, offering a Rolls Royce is a heck of a lot better than waffle irons," Jennings said.

Jack Lemmon Enjoying Back To Back Successes

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Every time I have to say a swear word, I feel kind of uneasy," admitted Jack Lemmon.

It wasn't that he had turned suddenly prudish. Not that at all. He simply was unnerved by rehearsing the hit play "Tribute" in a hall at the Hollywood Presbyterian Church, corner of Franklin and Highland avenues.

A curious place to rehearse a play, but the Huntington Hartford theater, where "Tribute" opens June 12, wasn't available. You'd think he wouldn't need rehearsals for a role he had already played for nine months with the same cast. But such is the Lemmon thoroughness. He was even taking the play for a one-week Denver break-in before the eight-week Hollywood run.

"But we'll have only two performances here before opening night with the critics," he said worriedly. "That's not enough time to break in the plants and lighting and everything. Something always goes wrong."

Everything seems to be going right with the Lemmon career, which he admitted has been a 30-year roller coaster ride. Lots of highs, but also plenty of lows.

"Not since the early 1960s have I enjoyed such back-to-back success," he commented. "That was when I had 'Some Like It Hot,' followed by 'The Apartment,' then 'Days of Wine and Roses' and 'Irma La Douce.'"

During the past year he scored a Broadway smash with "Tribute." Then came "The China Syndrome," which coincided with events at Three Mile Island and last month won Lemmon the Cannes Film Festival Award for best actor.

"My first time at Cannes, and it was a wild scene," he remarked. "It was amusing, too. You know there is always a group of critics at these festivals who resent the 'Hollywood' type of film, particularly if it has been a big hit; they have a certain built-in resistance.

"Most of the people liked the picture, but this handful of critics said it was ridiculous and far-fetched. I guess they hadn't been following the news."

Lemmon was a participant in the beginnings of "The China Syndrome," having long been an opponent of nuclear power.

"I held off taking other pictures for a long time, because I was afraid I might not be available for it," said the actor. "It seems that some of the best pictures I've had, like 'Wine and Roses' and 'Save the Tiger' and 'Syndrome,' have been projects that nobody wanted to make."

"We had one hell of a time getting 'Syndrome' made. But, you know, that worked to our advantage. If we had gone ahead earlier, we wouldn't have had Jane (Fonda). The television reporter was going to be played by Richard Dreyfus. When he had to drop out, somebody suggested casting the role with a woman. It seemed like a dumb Hollywood idea, but with Jane doing the part, it worked."

"Tribute," said Lemmon, has provided his best role ever — Stage, screen or television. That's saying a lot for the two-time Oscar-winner (support, "Mister Roberts," 1955; best actor, "Save the Tiger," 1973).

"Lucky as I've been in the roles I've had, none has ever combined comedy and drama so effectively," he said. "It encompasses every emotion, and (playwright) Bernie Slade knows exactly how to draw response from the audience. From the opening night in Boston, the play has never failed to draw a standing ovation.

"It's the longest part ever written for the theater; I'm onstage talking for all but six minutes. I liked it so much I was trying to find a way to cut out those six minutes."

The Morton Gottlieb production played to huge business on Broadway, but Lemmon had to quit after nine months because of exhaustion. A deal for the movie version is now being formulated, with shooting planned for late this year or early next.

"I have nothing else planned," said Lemmon. "I'd rather not work unless I can find something that will give me the same enthusiasm."

Seeing-Eye Dog Going Blind

DECATUR, Ga. (AP) — For seven years, Lottie has been Keith Roark's eyes. But soon Roark's guide dog will join him in darkness. Lottie is going blind.

The 9-year-old German shepherd is suffering from cataracts and can no longer be used as a guide dog, said Roark, 47, who lost his sight in military service.

Roark, who has waged a one-man campaign to insure that blind persons aren't denied accommodations because of their dogs, said Tuesday that he'd like to find a "retirement home" where "I won't have any worries about her, where she'll have love and affection."

But he says he will have to put Lottie to sleep if he can't find a good home and he already has bought a plot for Lottie in a pet cemetery.

"As far as a pet, she is not blind," said Roark. "Her vision is the same as a human now, but she can't be used as a guide dog."

But until he receives the new guide dog he has ordered, Roark said he continues to rely on Lottie.

"I use her cautiously," he said. "I have to be careful, walking down a street at night, because a car light can blind her and she could walk me off the curb. Going down stairs can be dangerous, because she can miss a step."

Roark said he has had several offers from people wanting to take Lottie as a pet, but he said finding the right home won't be easy.

"She can't be left alone; she has to be exercised 1½ to 3 miles a day; she has to be groomed every day, and she has to go to the vet every 90 days," he said. "I also have to have visiting rights."

Roark said he couldn't keep Lottie because she would be jealous of his new guide dog.

Man Sleeps Through, And Under, Freight Train

PETERSBURG, Va. (AP) — A 44-year-old man sleeping between the Seaboard Coast Line Railroad tracks here didn't get a scratch when three engines pulling 47 box cars ran over him Wednesday.

James Love didn't even wake up, police said. "I'd say it was miraculous," Petersburg Police Lt. Don Marin said. "He's lucky he wasn't torn all to pieces." Martin said the engineer of the southbound train saw a man lying between the tracks in the 4:30 a.m. darkness, but couldn't stop the train in time.

Royal Food Shop Felled By High Costs

LONDON (UPI) — After 130 years of providing quail eggs, truffles, caviar and other exotic delicacies for the tables of Buckingham Palace and gourmets everywhere, Jackson's of Piccadilly will close its doors July 7 — another victim of rising costs.

Jackson's, more formally known as Robert Jackson and Co. Ltd., Grocers, Wine and Tea Merchants, is as one newspaper sadly noted, "not just a food shop. It's an institution."

Its clients included not only the British royal family, whose crest adorns the doorway at 172 Piccadilly, but also the royal families of Denmark and the Netherlands, the wealthy and titled, and hundreds of thousands of ordinary mortals with a taste for elegant living.

"The particular type of food trading in which Robert Jackson and Co. has specialized depends on a high level of service," a company statement said.

"This has been increasingly costly in an industry where profit margins are traditionally low."

Although perhaps best known for its fancily tinned and packaged tea, Jackson's was also renowned for its caviar, truffles, pates, mustards, herbs and spices.

The worldwide tea business will not be affected by the closure. In fact, $400,000 is slated for investment in a new piece of machinery to produce that foreign oddity — the tea bag.

At the same time, the store found itself faced with renewing its lease at a rent "about 10 times the present value," according to manager Arthur Hancock.

The queen will not, of course, be forced to turn to a supermarket chain to purchase her corn flakes and milk. Two other London stores with famous food departments also carry the royal crest and supply the royal table.

"After all," said a Buckingham Palace spokesman, "there are always Fortnum's and Harrod's."

Safety Of Sodium Nitrite Questioned

WASHINGTON (AP) — Little is being said about the potential cancer hazards of sodium nitrite in bacon and other pork products, and that is probably good economic news for consumers and hog producers

But questions about the safety of nitrite in meat still exist, and its critics are bound to keep the issue alive and ready for public debate when the opportunity arises.

Also, bills have been introduced in Congress that could have a major impact on the future of nitrites used in meat products, including an administration proposal that would delay its ban even if the chemical is proved to cause cancer.

Meanwhile, beef prices are sky high and economists, including the administration's chief inflation fighter, Alfred Kahn, urge shoppers to buy more poultry and pork. These are in abundance and are considered bargains alongside T-bone steaks and top grades of hamburger.

This is sweet music to hog producers who, when the nitrite issue was still in full flower a few months ago, were worried that the government might soon ban the chemical outright, thus triggering precipitous declines in market prices.

Even without the uncertainties about nitrite's future, hog prices at the farm have dropped sharply this spring in response to producers' stepped-up output of hogs for the slaughter market.

So, with the downturn in hog prices, it is natural for producers to cross their fingers and hope the nitrite issue will continue its currently low profile.

Sodium nitrite is the traditional chemical used in the processing of bacon, ham and other products. It aids in the curing of meat, helps impart a rosy color and, its defenders point out, acts to prevent the formation of organisms that produce botulism, a deadly form of food poisoning.

But there is evidence that under certain conditions, such as bacon being fried at high heat, nitrite can form with other substances to produce nitrosamines which have been shown to cause cancer in laboratory animals.

Also, a study by a Massachusetts Institute of Technology scientist showed last summer that nitrite by itself can cause cancer. With review of the whole issue still going on, it may be late this year, at the earliest, before some of the major scientific questions are settled.

Current law forbids the use of any additive in the food supply if it is shown to cause cancer in laboratory animals or humans. The Justice Department has told USDA and the Food and Drug Administration that if — and the if is crucial to the situation — nitrite is proved to be a cause of cancer by itself the law requires it to be banned outright.

When the Justice opinion was announced on March 30, Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland and HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. announced a legislative proposal that would prohibit the two agencies from banning nitrite before May 1, 1980, or thereafter if the chemical is found to be safe.

The legislation also, if nitrite is found to be a cause of cancer, would provide for its gradual phasing out after next May 1 as effective new substitutes are developed.

The administration's bill was introduced by Rep. Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., chairman of the House Agriculture Committee at the request of Bergland and Califano. No hearings have been scheduled, however, and it may be much later this year before the measure is taken up.

Meat industry officials, who have had to comply with reduced allowable levels of nitrite in bacon processing, question the validity of the MIT study showing that the chemical is a cause of cancer by itself.

The American Meat Institute, for example, says "we are firmly convinced that sodium nitrite as used in cured meat is perfectly safe and definitely does not cause cancer."

Nitrosamines, which can form when nitrite-treated bacon is fried at high heat, are another matter and have been known since 1963 to cause cancer in test animals.

As a result, USDA — with the general agreement of the meat industry — reduced the amount of nitrite used in bacon so any resulting nitrosamines also would be diminished. The department monitors bacon processors regularly to guard against excessive nitrosamines and publishes the test results each week.

Through May 24, bacon from 535 plants was tested. Products from 462 plants were found to be in compliance with federal nitrosamine standards — an approval rate of 86.4 percent. An additional 64 plants flunked the preliminary tests but later were approved after they made changes in processing. Bacon from nine other plants is still under review.

Finding adequate substitutes for nitrite in bacon, however, is proving to be more difficult than some USDA officials initially thought.

For example, on May 16, 1978, the department proposed to reduce the amount of sodium nitrite in bacon still further by substituting another chemical, potassium sorbate, in the curing process. Its final approval was scheduled originally to take place in one year.

Plains Dairy Goat Show Set For Weekend

What do Nubians, Alpines and A.O.P.s have in common? First of all, they are all dairy goats and secondly, they are going to be judged Saturday and Sunday at the third annual South Plains Dairy Goat show, according to Mrs. Ann Swan, publicity chairman of the South Plains Dairy Goat Club.

Approximately 125 Nubians, Alpines and A.O.P.s (All Other Purebreds) will be judged beginning at 9 a.m. Saturday in the Swine Barn on the Panhandle South Plains Fairgrounds. Entires from across Texas, New Mexico and Oklahoma have entered competition in the show that will be judged by John and Jean Hurt of Selma, Ore.

Both junior and adult exhibitors will vie for trophies for conformation, dairy characteristics and breed features in the three breed divisions. A buck show is also scheduled.

The event is being sanctioned by the American Dairy Goat Association and the American Goat Society. For more information contact Jay Collier "Buddy" Adams, 806-746-6233 or Laura Faye Appleton, 806-328-5385.

NATIONAL COTTON COUNCIL PRESIDENT Hoke Leggett has applauded the action of the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in granting a stay of the cotton dust standard due to take effect in gins Sept. 4.

The stay, issued last week in New Orleans, was in response to a motion filed by the ginning industry. It delays enforcement of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration's standard requiring medical surveillance and respirators in gins pending a court decision on the case.

Leggett said the court action was "timely," since the ginning season is only weeks away in some areas of the Cotton Belt.

"It means gins will not face the impossible task of trying to comply with these burdensome requirements this season," he added.

WHILE THE COURT ORDER DIDN'T SPELL out the grounds on which the stay was granted, Leggett said the action was encouraging because the industry's petition had maintained that:

— The standard's enforcment would cause irreparable harm.
— The industry was likely to prevail in subsequent court proceedings.
— A stay would serve the public interest.

The council president said the stay serves the interests of gin owners and workers alike, pointing out that gin workers have not been shown to have any more respiratory problems than the general population.

"WHEN THE COURT RULES ON THE MERITS of the industry's case, we hope it will strike down this unjustified standard," Leggett said.

"And in the meantime, we hope the stay will cause the states which operate their own occupational safety and health plans to hold off any further action until the court decision."

Meanwhile, the dust standard affecting all other sectors of the cotton industry remains under a stay ordered last October by the District of Columbia appeals court pending judicial review.

A BILL CALLING FOR ESTABLISHMENT of a U. S. Grain Board has been introduced by Rep. James Weaver, D-Ore.

The board would determine prices at which grain could be sold to other countries. The measure would make the government's Commodity Credit Corp. the sole export seller of U. S. grain and soybeans, and it would require private exporters to buy their commodities from CCC and export on its terms.

Weaver contends that the United States, as a major grain exporter, could unilaterally raise world prices for grain with a controlled export system. He sees this approach as contributing substantially to a positive U. S. trade balance and increased producer income.

The National Council of Farmer Cooperatives opposes the board because it would eliminate the free market system for U. S. grain exports, without any assurances of improved returns for farmer-growers.

Among other opponents of the bill is the National Association of Wheat Growers.

IF FARMERS HAVE WHEAT COVER on set-aside acres or just wheat cover that has been shredded or clipped earlier and has come back and is heading, the wheat must be destroyed before the seed formation stage.

Roy W. Redding, executive director of the Crosby County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, in issuing that reminder, points out that farmers may turn on the wheat and not intend to harvest it.

"But wheat or any small grain that reaches dough stage is an NCA (normal cropland acreage) crop," he notes. "If we find wheat that has reached the dough stage it will be measured and counted as wheat and will require set-aside."

This could put farmers in a situation that would cause them to exceed their permitted acres and be out of compliance with the federal farm program, he adds.

If farmers have wheat cover, he emphasizes, they need to plow it up, disk it down, or shred it now.

COTTON FUTURES AT NEW YORK closed near lows Wednesday with sharply pared gains of five points in near July to 14 points in new-crop December.

Floor brokers said commission house profit taking and possible hedge selling in relatively thin conditions dominated afternoon dealings. California and Mid-South interests were hedging on December at around 63.60 cents.

Prices attained highs at 58 points up, basis July, on concern over continued wet weather in Texas and in the Delta. Up to 10 inches of rain have fallen in parts of the Rio Grande Valley since Friday. Insect populations have been building and cotton has been shedding.

Telcot's volume was 4,284 bales. Prices to farmers averaged 52.78 cents at 981 points over loan values. Buyers were rather selective, putting emphasis on the higher qualities.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Rumors that the Soviet Union or Eastern European nations may have bought U.S. soybeans or wheat sparked a powerful rally Wednesday in grain and soybean prices on the Chicago Board of Trade.

A variety of rumors circulated during heavy trading, sending wheat futures to new season's highs in all contracts and soybeans to new life-of-contract highs in all but the two nearby trading months.

Livestock Futures Finish Mixed In Chicago Trade

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 60 points lower to 50 higher in active trade of 40,916 cars Wednesday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. October was off the most with April at the best gain. The market ranged from 82 higher to equally lower in erratic trade.

The cash connected commission house was an active buyer but was also selling at times. Much of the support was technical after three limit losses in a row and came despite weakness in cash cattle and slow demand for beef. Prices for the latter held steady at noon, however.

There have been 34 deliveries thus far. Wholesale beef was unchanged at 99½ cents a pound, f.o.b. river points, which is a three-month low. Cash cattle were off $2 to up $1 with the best top $70 per hundredweight at Sioux Falls. Omaha's top was $69.85. Slaughter was 120,000 head. Receipts at the major markets today are expected to total 6,700 head.

Feeder cattle futures closed 70 lower to 40 higher on sales of 6,210 lots. August was the weakest with only May higher. The market at times was 110 lower to 110 higher.

Much of the support spilled over from the live cattle pit and traders also noted reduced cattle arrivals. Selling continued on weakness in cash cattle and slow beef demand as well as expected stiff competition from pork in the months ahead.

Cash feeder cattle were steady to off $5 with the best top $138 per hundredweight at San Antonio. About 3,400 head are expected today at the major terminals.

Hog futures closed 32 to 150 lower led by June through August at the limit decline. Earlier, December was also down limit. Sales totaled 6,351 contracts. New season's lows were posted in October through July.

Prices fell to one-year lows on aggressive local and commission house selling touched off by weakness in cash hogs and pork products. The heavy pace of kill this week brought pressure as did liquidation against the first delivery day today. Only February briefly gained 30.

Wholesale hams were unchanged to off 2 at 58 to 65 cents a pound, f.o.b. river, which is the lowest since April 1977. Cash hogs were off 50 cents to $1.50 with the best top $42.75 per hundredweight. Kill was 335,000 head. The major markets are expecting about 29,000 head today.

Pork belly (bacon) futures closed 32 to 200 lower paced by July and August at the limit decline. Volume was 5,911 contracts. All contracts except July posted new lows for the season.

The market quickly erased gains of 72 in February and tumbled to the lowest since March 1978. Sharply lower cash hogs and the break of 7½ cents in cash bellies pressured futures even though out of town sotrings were light.

Wholesale bacon was off 1½ to 2½ at 38 to 39 cents a pound, f.o.b. river, which is the lowest since December 1975.

Feeder Cattle Comments Sought

The U.S. Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Marketing Service (AMS) has called for public comments on a proposal to revise feeder cattle standards to use frame size and muscle thickness as grade factors.

Assistant Secretary of Agriculture P. R. Smith said a dramagic change in feeder cattle types now raised in the United States, coupled with the 1976 changes in slaughter cattle and beef carcass standards, are the key reasons for recommending the change.

Public comments on the proposal will be received until July 1.

"When the present standards were adopted in 1964," he said, "most cattle were British breeds or their crosses with similar body types. However, there are now more than 40 breeds in this country which are much more variable in body type."

Under the proposal, frame size would identify the weight at which feeder cattle are expected to produce carcasses of a given grade, such as U. S. Choice.

Thickness, would identify feeders for the effect that muscle thinkness has on the ultimate U. S. yield grade of its carcass.

Smith said the AMS has worked closely with many industry groups to develop the proposal.

"Some members of the beef industry," he said, "have expressed concern about the use of muscling as a grade factor and that thick muscling may cause production problems. This caused us to put less emphasis on muscle thickness than was originally proposed in a 1976 study draft.

Public comments on the proposal should be sent, in duplicate, to the hearing clerk, USDA, 1077-S, Washington, D. C., 20250. Phone (202) 447-5679.

Washington Fuel Lines Bug Motorists, Police

WASHINGTON (AP) — Longer-than-usual lines at gasoline stations in the nation's capital area are taxing the nerves of motorists and the patience of police who are generally avoiding issuing tickets to persons whose cars obstruct traffic.

Police say the lines aren't nearly as long as they were at the height of the 1974 gas shortage brought on by the Arab oil embargo.

Government Expanding Good Nutrition Drive

Dubbed the "Great American Nutrition Campaign," the government's newest effort to get people to watch their eating habits will be launched here today with a news conference held by Esther Peterson, President Carter's special assistant for consumer affairs.

At ceremonies slated to take place in front of the Agriculture Department, federal officials will unveil a "mobile advertisement" for good nutrition.

California Man 'Allergic To Everything'

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The food he eats, the house he lives in, even the air he breathes is poison to Scott Jablin. He is allergic to virtually everything.

His body cannot tolerate even the most common substances. A whiff of fresh air, a sip of tap water, even the paper and ink of the daily newspaper send his throat into a choking spasm and give him hallucinations or seizures.

Specialists say Jablin, 25, has built up such a high level of toxicity that he is unable to tolerate most of the things that make up the 20th century.

His doctors say pesticides, chemicals, preservatives and additives have overloaded his system. They do not know exactly why.

Jablin spends his days — and nights — in a friend's back yard, sitting in a wooden chair or sleeping on a wooden table. He is allergic to everything indoors. He breathes bottled air through a cotton mask with a charcoal filter. He bathes with a sponge and distilled water.

"I just sit here and hope I can breathe," Jablin said.

Jablin has suffered from various allergies all his life. But 2½ months ago, his sensitivity soared. He had to drop out of Shabot College in Oakland, where he was a straight-A student.

His allergist, Dr. Phyllis Safer, arranged for him to be treated at a special environmental section at the Brookhaven Medical Center in Dallas.

Jablin spent a month there. He returned home with a list of his allergies and serums to control them. He must give himself at least five injections a day in addition to periodic injections of adrenalin to control his symptoms.

It took four shots of adrenalin to get him through the flight to Dallas and six to get him back, Jablin said.

His weight tumbled 20 pounds in three weeks because he often gets sick after a few tiny bites of food. He drinks distilled water because he is allergic to chlorine in the city water supply. A major problem, he says, is a loss of memory.

"Sometimes I forget I am talking to somebody," he said. "I have to get away from the Bay area to a place where I can control my environment, but I don't know where to go or what to do."

Mrs. Saifer says Jablin's only hope is to go to a place where he can control his environment, perhaps to the ocean in Mendocino County. He also needs a safe home in which to live, similar to the trailers at Brookhaven made of ceramic and metal.

She says if he can lower the level of poisons in his body he may recover some tolerance and be able to return to a semblance of normal life. Jablin's friends have set up a Help Scott Jablin Fund at Northern California Savings and Loan in nearby Berkeley to help him get to such a place.

"There are going to be more and more people like me," Jablin said. "The more garbage we put into the world, the more people there will be whose bodies break down from it."

Klansman Convicted For Carrying Gun

DECATUR, Ala. (AP) — A Ku Klux Klansman was convicted Wednesday on a charge of violating Decatur's ordinance against carrying firearms within 1,000 feet of a public demonstration.

Kenneth Vernon Duncan, 34, of Selma was sentenced to six months in jail and fined $500 and $10 court costs. He was freed under $500 appeal bond.

Duncan was arrested May 27 during a Klan march. Officers said he was carrying a 30-30 carbine. The march was held the day after a confrontation between 50 black demonstrators and about 150 Klansmen erupted in gunfire. Four people were hospitalized with bullet wounds.

ROAD TO BE CLOSED

Repair work on the Fort Worth and Denver Railroad crossing today will close FM 835 between Spur 331 and Loop 289, east of Lubbock, to through traffic. Traffic will be detoured south of FM 835 along Spur 331 and Loop 289, according to a notice from the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

Large 'Gator Population May Allow Hide Sales

WASHINGTON (AP) — Once threatened with extinction, the American alligator population has mushroomed under protective regulations, prompting the government on Tuesday to consider approving the sale of 'gator hides abroad.

The Endangered Species Scientific Authority proposal would permit the hides of alligators legally killed in Florida and Louisiana to be exported to foreign tanners and fabricators, who use reptilian skins to make such items as shoes, handbags and belts.

The ESSA proposal, however, would permit alligator exports only if the foreign sale of hides would not harm the survival of the species and restrict the export only to alligators killed after June 28.

ESSA's proposal also would require all hides to be indelibly marked with identifying symbols and would limit exports only to foreign buyers, tanners or fabricators licensed by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Exports would be prohibited to France, Italy, Spain and Japan because the nations have failed to conform with trade regulations established by the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species, ESSA said.

The nation's alligator population in 1967 was estimated at 400,000 to 600,000. Biologists today estimate there are at least 800,000 alligators, with controlled hunts permitted in Louisiana.

DIABETIC CAMP UNDERWAY

The Lubbock Rotary Club and the Texas Tech Medical School Pediatrics faculty are sponsoring a camp for diabetic children this week at the Plains Baptist Encampment outside Floydada. "It's a local effort to give these children an opportunity to go camping," said Peggy Nodurft, spokeswoman for the project. She said that because of the children's special diets and limitations due to their physical conditions, many diabetic children are not accepted by regular camps.

YOUR PERSONAL BIORHYTHMS

By Bernard Gittelson, Author of "Biorhythm: A Personal Science"

The personal science of biorhythm can tell you how your day will go. Now you can judge the highs and lows of not only yourself, but loved ones and friends, and celebrities and stars. Biorhythm, our newest scientific discipline, is the study of the built-in natural cycles that powerfully influence our behavior.

BIORHYTHMS FOR JUNE 7 1979

PHYSICAL
Critical: 11, 22, 34 45, 57, 68 ..... Accident prone day
Highs: 12-21, 35-44, 58-67 ..... Good day for exercise
Lows: 1-10, 23-33, 46-56, 69-75 ..... Not prime time physically

EMOTIONAL
Critical: 5, 19, 33, 47, 61, 75 ..... Confusion likely
Highs: 6-18, 34-46, 62-74 ..... Your optimism abounds
Lows: 1-4, 20-32, 48-60, 76-85 ..... A depressing day

INTELLECTUAL
Critical: 2, 18, 35, 51, 68, 84 ..... Intellectual reserve best
Highs: 3-17, 36-50, 69-83 ..... Retention is simple
Lows: 1, 19-34, 52-67, 85-95 ..... Weigh decisions

Enter your own permanent numbers in the chart in the bottom right-hand corner. To figure your own permanent numbers, follow these three steps:

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Step 2: Now find the corresponding number for the month you were born. If your month is February, and your year numbers were preceded by a B, your month numbers would be 8 for Physical, 3 for Emotional and 31 for Intellectual. Enter your own numbers in the figure chart for Step 2.

Step 3: In the figure chart, enter your day of birth three times, one each for Physical (P), Emotional (E) and Intellectual (I). (If you were born on April 3, for instance, place a 3 in each column.)

Add the three columns to derive your permanent biorhythm numbers for your Physical, Emotional and Intellectual cycles. Now you can refer to today's rhythms.

Special Store Caters To Left-Handers

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — What do Rod Carew, Dorothy Hamill, Gerald Ford, Peter Fonda and Jackie Morlock have in common?

Mrs. Morlock owns and runs The Left Center, a store teeming with gadgets and tools designed to help lefties function better in a right-handed world.

The inventory includes left-handed scissors, baseball gloves and catchers mitts, an assortment of kitchen utensils including soup ladles and can openers, and watches designed to be worn on the right wrist with the stem on the left side for easy winding.

"I used to think I was just clumsy, but then I found out it was because I was using the wrong tools," said Mrs. Morlock, 45. "Right-handed parents, friends and teachers have difficulty understanding the problems left-handers face," she added.

For example, Mrs. Morlock used regular scissors most of her life before discovering an alternative was available. "When a left-handed person uses right-handed scissors, your thumb hurts and you can't cut as straight," she said.

The store, one of 20 or so in the world catering to left-handers, also offers school supplies for left-handed children. Big sellers include rulers that read "backward" to right-handed people, notebooks that open from front to back ("so your hand doesn't rest on the spiral,") and quick-drying ball point pens.

"Left-handers tend to smear their ink because their hand rests on their writing," Mrs. Morlock explained.

In past years, many parents and teachers routinely forced left-handed children to use their right hands for writing and eating. But psychologists say that switching children can cause stuttering, poor penmanship and life-long emotional problems.

"A lot of my customers say they've been put down or looked down on for being left-handed," she said. "They're elated to come in here and find that someone's been thinking of them."

Blind Woman Insists On Teaching Role

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A blind high school English teacher, suspended for alleged inability to teach sighted pupils, is refusing to give up her empty classroom or the job she obtained two years ago under a federal court order.

Judith Gurmankin, 35, was rated unqualified for tenure last March by Olney High School principal Mervin Krimins, the first step toward her eventual dismissal by the Philadelphia Board of Education.

But Miss Gurmankin has refused to accept that decision, just as she had refused to accept a 1970 board order turning down her job application. She has reported to her classroom every day, even though she is not now receiving a weekly paycheck and her pupils have been reassigned to a substitute.

"I don't intend to order her out of this school," Krimins said Tuesday. "The school year is almost over. Everybody is protective, but she feels everybody is persecuting her."

Krimins said that Miss Gurmankin had steadfastly objected to the assistance of a teacher's aide ever since she came to the northeast Philadelphia school after winning her job discrimination suit in 1977.

Neither Miss Gurmankin nor her lawyer would comment on whether any further legal action against school officials was contemplated to contest the suspension.

A published report says there are nearly 500 blind teachers working in the nation's public schools, plus another 1,000 with hearing impairments and some 2,000 who are orthopedically handicapped.

JUDITH GURMANKIN

Miss Gurmankin, who lost her sight as a teen-ager due to a congenital disease called retinitis pigmentosa, would not talk to a reporter.

"Out, get out of my classroom," she said. "I don't want to talk."

However, in an earlier interview, Miss Gurmankin indicated that her situation was difficult "since I was forced on the Philadelphia school system by a court order."

She also said her relationships with other members of the faculty were strained.

"Old attitudes toward the handicapped die hard and when a sighted person sees a blind person doing a job better than they it shakes their security," she said.

The principal said in his opinion "it is almost impossible for a blind teacher to teach English without help of some kind."

She came to class with class rolls and textbooks printed in Braille, and Krimins said that she claimed to have an outside volunteer read pupil compositions to her at home.

Krimins, whose school has 4,000 students, said he had received "a large number of complaints from pupils and parents who complained about Miss Gurmankin's teaching style."

"I tried to talk to her a thousand times about it, to help her and I'd suggest certain things," he added. "She wouldn't do it. She said what she was doing was right."

Writer Advises Premiere Etiquette

By JAY SHARBUTT

NEW YORK (AP) — My kid brother Billy the Weird is concerned that few ordinary folks — like him — get to attend opening nights on Broadway and partake of the glamour and excitement the swells enjoy.

What should he do, he wonders, if Cheryl Tiegs suddenly calls up and asks him to escort her to, say, the star-studded gala premiere of the new Salvador Dali musical, "I Remember Dada."

So I give him these tips for opening-night behavior on Broadway.

Most important is the correct attire for the first-nighter. Many wear those expensive crushed velvet tuxedoes, the dark blue ones, and a light blue shirt with white ruffles at the cuffs, collar and chest. Also mandatory are shiny patent leather pumps.

A proper premiere arrival also is important. A limousine stocked with caviar, champagne and a gossip columnist is acceptable, as is a horse-drawn carriage from which the horse has not been stolen.

Exiting the transport and approaching the theater, you hear cries of "Who he?" Flashbulbs sparkle, celebrity-crazed TV reporters jab microphones under your nose and often in.

At such times, never angrily tug your derby over your eyes and rush forward. A friend of mine did this, got turned around and wound up attending "Carmelina," which had closed two months earlier.

And don't glare at TV reporters and mutter, "No comment." The newshawks will bar the way, ask if you are Robert De Niro or Al Pacino, and demand to know what you intend to do about it.

Remember that real first-nighters never sit down immediately, if ever. They stand in little clusters of glitter, blocking the aisles. They cry "Dahling!" and hug and kiss each other a lot.

Stand with the nodders. Also murmur about this new musical said to be in dire trouble in Philadelphia. Don't mention the title, though. They may recall there is no such musical in tryouts there.

Herbie Hancock Defies Fans, Makes Disco Album

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Herbie Hancock's gone disco? Herbie Hancock, disciple of Miles Davis, cohort of Chick Corea, creator of the legendary "Headhunters" album? Say it ain't so, Herbie.

"The new album is disco," the wizard of the keyboards confirms. "And I like it. One of these days the idea will get around that Herbie Hancock is all kinds of music and people will stop trying to pigeonhole me.

"I'm not saying that 'Feets Don't Fail Me Now' is the definitive whatever it is. But I like the tunes and I like the words — it seems to be balanced in all different areas."

Okay, but why do you like disco? For a man who often has been on the cutting edge of musical change, it's certainly not much of a switch from what everyone else is doing.

"It excites me to have people dance to my music," the 39-year-old Hancock replies. "I've always been interested in different types of music — not just jazz — but in the past I was only interested in how they applied to jazz. Now I am exploring those areas. If you like the music, it makes sense to do it.

"Nobody made me do it. In fact, some people at the record company were against the switch. So that ought to dispel the myth I'm going disco because of commerical pressure."

Besides being the jazzman's first venture into the world of thumping drums, danceable rhythms and simple lyrics, the "Feets Dont Fail Me Now" album is notable for another reason — it features his voice for the first time.

At least it's his voice after it has gone through an electronic gimo called a vocorder, which feeds the words he sings through the synthesizer. They come out sounding like a warrior from "Battlestar Galactica."

"I'm not a singer," Hancock readily admits. "The quality is fine, but the vibrato is awful. Sometimes Im flat and sometimes I'm sharp. The vocoder synthesizes my voice and it comes out according to what I play, not what I sing."

Playing with gadgets, of course, is nothing new for Herbie Hancock. Ever since his "Mwandishi" album of a decade ago, he has embraced one sound-bending technique after another.

And cries of "Herbie's sold out" are not new either — "Headhunters" broke new ground in jazz sales but did nothing to enhance Hancock's standing with purists, who resented his move to funk.

But Hancock says he weathered such criticism when "Headhunters" came out and he can do it again. He has just finished a grueling three-month tour to promote his change in style, recently released another album of piano duets with Chick Corea and played on Joni Mitchell's album of collaborations with the late Charles Mingus.

Several outdoor jazz festivals are now on tap for the summer. Then it's probably back to the studio for another album along the same line as "Feets Don't Fail Me Now."

"Other musicians have told me I have a lot of guts to do what I Am doing," Hancock says proudly. "I think that an artist must dictate what he does. Nobody made me play piano — whatever talent I May have, nobody gave it to me and I'm going to use it as I see fit.

"The next album will come from the last one. Any sound can be music. It's up to the composer or performer to recognize the value of the sound and use it. And that's what I'm going to do."

U.S. Bar Delegation Plans Visit To USSR

WASHINGTON (AP) — An American Bar Association delegation headed by Attorney General Griffin Bell will make an 11-day visit to the Soviet Union later this month, it has been announced.

The ABA said the June 18-29 trip is being sponsored jointly by its International Legal Exchange and the Association of Soviet Lawyers.

According to a statement released here and by ABA headquarters in Chicago, the U.S. delegation will meet with officials of the Soviet government and members of the Soviet legal community "to discuss a wide range of legal issues." The topics include the role of law and legal institutions in the development of positive relations between the United States and the Soviet Union.

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The leader of a pro-Western group fighting to free the oil-rich African enclave of Cabinda from Angolan rule said Wednesday as many as 150,000 Cabindans — half the area's population — have fled to neighboring Zaire and Congo since 1975.

ABC To Rebroadcast Documentary Film About Debolts Family

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Who Are the DeBolts and Where Did They Get 19 Kids?" is now slightly outdated, but it made such an impression last December that ABC will show it again.

Dorothy and Robert DeBolt have adopted another child since the program aired first, and the network will note that in an introduction when it rebroadcasts the documentary at 7 p.m. EDT Suday.

The most recent addition to the family is a 13-year-old Mexican boy, a victim of polio and child abuse. Others include Korean-Caucasian boys, orphaned Vietnamese children wounded in the war, and a black youngster born without arms and legs, the first such child to be placed in the history of U.S. adoption.

Without distinguishing between their own children and those they adopted, Bob DeBolt says proudly that five have completed college, five are in college, and, "they did it all on their own." The parents contributed nothing. Two boys paralyzed from the waist down are supporting themselves outside the home.

"They're going to contribute to society, not take from society," he says of all 20.

DeBolt finds it slightly ironic that he achieved a degree of national recognition from the television program; the family does not own a television set.

"The kids talk about the day Daddy emasculated the TV set," he says. "I was going down to my workshop to get a pair of wire cutters since I was doing some work on an electrical outlet.

"I went through the family room where the kids were watching television and fighting over what program to watch. I told them that if they were still fighting when I came back, I'd do something about it.

"They were, and I reached down and cut the power cord with the wire cutters. They were shocked figuratively, and I was shocked literally. Also, I ruined the wire cutters."

DeBolt has told the story on talk shows several times and says, "The local stations rather like it. They know that one home doesn't influence their ratings."

One time, he says, a 9-year-old boy in Los Angeles heard him on a talk show and suggested to his father, a teleision distributor, that instead of paying his fare to Los Angeles from the home of his divorced mother in San Francisco, they should buy the DeBolts a TV Set.

They did, it arrived, and the DeBolts promptly gave it away.

The children, DeBolt says, griped for awhile but soon became resigned to getting along without television. "If a kid can't see, hear or walk, he can go anywhere by reading," DeBolt says. "If you say you spend six hours a day with your kids, and all you're doing is sitting there looking at the boob tube, you're not spending time with your kids."

Those who can hear, he says, spend a lot of time listening to the radio while reading. One of them rushed in to where he and his wife were sitting not long ago, and said there was a wonderful new program on radio. And what was it called? "Fibber McGee and Molly."

The television exposure has brought changes to the lives of Bob and Dorothy DeBolt. They have been given many awards and honors, and have received letters from two presidents.

DeBolt resigned his job as a Bay Area Rapid Transit manager, and the two formed an organization called Aid to Adoption of Special Kids. They lecture extensively and raise money for the organization.

Movie Producers Protest Cable Action

WASHINGTON (AP) — The motion picture industry pleaded with Congress Wednesday to bar cable television systems from plucking shows from the airwaves without obtaining prior consent, at a negotiated price, from program suppliers. Jack Valenti, president of the Motion Picture Association, told the Senate Commerce subcommittee on communications that "Cable is ... the only business in America where by law it can buy cheap and sell dear."

Echoing the earlier protests of the major commercial television networks, professional sport owners and other producers of television programming, Valenti declared that "something is amiss when the vast majority of cable systems pay more for postage ... than they pay for programs they need to stay in business."

Cable systems, now heavily into satellite technology, may now retransmit the programs of distant station virtually at will. When they do so, they are required to reimburse the program's owners by paying a flat fee set by the Copyright Act of 1978.

Program suppliers have complained that those fees are too low, allowing no room for individual bargaining. The networks and other originating broadcasters are unhappy that while they may pay a producer a premium price, cable gets the same program at a fraction of that.

Cable operators counter that if they had to negotiate beforehand with program suppliers, they likely wouldn't get the shows at all. And that, they say, would deprive many limited-market customers, such as those in small cities or those who can watch television only during odd hours, of the opportunity to diversify their entertainment.

Russell Karp, president of the Teleprompter Corp., the largest cable system, said that "in most cases, the cable systems are just too small to make it worthwhile for the major syndicators to bother selling them the product."

Forcing cable stations to obtain consent from suppliers "will mean that the American public will get less programming that it did before," said Karp. "I suggest that you have been given no valid reason to legislate this result."

But Valenti said, "Every objective observer has to admit that the price cable is paying for programming is almost comically low.

"In a business nearing $1.5 billion in revenues, cable is paying less than 1 percent for programming ... without the permission of the owners of that property, without negotiating the price," he said.

The Motion Picture Association has a membership of more than 80 companies which produce television programming, and syndicates more than 13,000 movies.

The subcommittee is headed by Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., the sponsor of one of two pending Senate bills aimed at deregulating the broadcast industry. Neither his nor the similar measure sponsored by Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., contains the retransmission consent requirement sought by Valenti and others. A third measure, pending in the House, does have that feature.

Rebellious Rich Kids Purchase Own Town

GORDA, Calif. (UPI) — If you travel along Highway 1 in California's picturesque Big Sur Country this summer, don't be surprised if you suddenly feel as if you're on the yellow brick road entering "Munchkinland."

You see, the mayor of tiny Gorda is only 5 feet tall, and the fire chief and other town officials are about the same size.

And they'll try their best to detain you in their remote, woodsy kingdom, plying you with food, souvenirs and tours of the town's "mass transit system" consisting of a wooden boardwalk running from one end of town to the other — About 75 yards.

"We don't have a police department," Mayor Dickie Cessna proclaimed, "because there is no crime in Gorda. But we do have a Fire Department. It consists of two hoses."

Cessna, 14, and his three sisters Tuesday became the youngest town owners in America as they raised their flag over Gorda, a 20-acre unincorporated community on the shores of the Pacific Ocean midway between Big Sur and San Simeon.

The Cessna children bought the town, population about 20, for an estimated $500,000 to $1 million. The price included Gorda's general store, a restaurant, gas station and seven houses in which the residents and employees of the town live.

From a rich movie contract, of course, that will chronicle the kids' never-ending struggle against California bureaucrats for their right to sell horse manure and kill gophers in peace.

The Cessna kids, who also include "NeNe," 11, Bette, 13, and June, 16, own Kidco Ltd. and run the business from their home near Ramona, Calif., 35 miles northeast of San Diego.

Their enterprise began innocently enough three years ago when they began collecting horse manure and wood shavings from their father's stables and sold it as compost.

But when state authorities learned the kids earned $30,000 in a single month, the Cessna family was hauled before the state Board of Equalization and told they would have to pay back taxes on the manure because they didn't have a sales license.

The kids won the battle and were given a license along with a suspension of back taxes, but their troubles with the law had only begun.

They developed a secret gopher killing formula and were exterminating the pests in the neighborhood for $1 a head when the state Health Department got wind of it. They were ordered to reveal the contents of the formula, given to them by an "old Indian," and they refused.

Dickie Cessna explained that Kidco bought the town as a tax shelter and to attract tourists. He said the corporation plans to build a 30-space recreational vehicle park in Gorda and will sell Kidco T-shirts at the general store.

"But we won't be living in Gorda," Dickie said. "We'll be here as much as we can during the summer, but we have to go back home to continue our manure and gopher business."
