Sharp measure would boost oil production

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

Texas Railroad Commissioner John Sharp Monday introduced a tax incentive bill that proposes to increase Texas oil production through new enhanced oil recovery projects.

The key feature of the bill, which is being sponsored by State Representative Rick Perry, D-Haskell, provides a 10-year, 50-percent severance tax exemption for oil produced from a new enhanced oil recovery projects in which the operator has demonstrated that production has been increased or a production decline halted.

Sharp said producers would have a four-year window in which to seek approval for such a project and three years to achieve beneficial results from a secondary waterflood or tertiary project. After the operator has proven that the project has been beneficial results by halting declining production or increasing production, the company would be able to claim the exemption for 10 years. Casinghead gas from a new recovery project would be taxed at the normal severance rate.

Sharp said he hoped the legislation, if passed, would go a long way toward halting declining production in Texas and recovering some of the estimated 117 billion barrels of Texas reserves still in the ground.

Production in Texas has fallen steadily in the past three years. In the first nine months of 1988, the state produced 2,098,000 barrels per day compared to 2,149,000 for the same period in 1987. Total Texas production to date is 50 billion barrels.

Palestinian state declared by PLO

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — The PLO's parliament-in-exile proclaimed an independent Palestinian state today, and PLO chief Yasser Arafat said the decision now puts "the ball ... in the American court."

The Palestine National Council made the declaration early today, approving a new political program that indirectly recognizes Israel.

Council delegates broke into applause and the occasion was immediately followed by quiet handshakes, kisses and an occasional tear.

At a news conference later, Arafat described the council meeting as the "intefadeh (uprising) session," referring to 11 months of unrest by Palestinians in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

"But it could also be the session of peace with the U.S. Administration and Israel," he said.

In a more threatening tone, he added: "Let it also be clear I can always come back to our (council) and declare that moderation does not pay."

"Our political statement contains moderation, flexibility and realism, which the West has been urging us to show, Arafat said. "The ball is now in the American court."

Earlier today, Israeli troops sealed off the West Bank and Gaza Strip, where Arab youths took to the streets to celebrate the declaration and underground leaders of the Palestinian uprising called a general strike.

■ Israel closes territories, limits celebrations — 1D

In the West Bank town of Bethlehem, under curfew for the first time since 1967, teen-agers ignored threats of fines and jail terms to run through the streets setting off fireworks and singing a nationalist song.

Arafat did not describe the new state's borders, except to say that a 1947 U.N. plan that provided for separate Jewish and Arab states in Palestine still provides the basis for "international legitimacy." The Palestinian territory referred to in the declaration presumably meant the West Bank and Gaza, captured by Israel in 1967 Middle East war.

Passage of the proclamation could mark a turning point in the four-decade struggle through repeated Arab-Israeli wars and recurrent guerrilla attacks. Israel gained independence in 1948, when British rule ended.

The Palestine Liberation Organization declaration will not necessarily have any immediate effect because the PLO is unable to challenge Israel for actual control, either in the occupied territories or in Israel proper.

PLO leaders consider it rather as a historic step toward creation of an independent state in the West Bank and Gaza.

Police and coroners dig outside the Sacramento boarding home where seven bodies have been found.

More bodies found at rooming house

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Police were expanding a search for bodies beyond the yard of a rooming house after digging up the sixth and seventh elderly victims from shallow graves there.

A warrant charging the boarding home's missing landlady with one count of murder was issued late Monday, said police Capt. Sam Somers.

Investigators using shovels, steel probes and a tractor found the two bodies wrapped in cloth or clothes in the yard of the two-story Victorian house, said police Sgt. Bob Burns.

The bodies, one unearthed in the front yard under a flower bed and the other in the side yard under a shed, are unidentified, like the five others.

Voter fraud alleged in Ward County

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Recent allegations of voter fraud in Ward County prompted Monahans Republicans to share a request for a formal investigation with their Midland neighbors Monday.

The Ward County GOP is questioning the origin of absentee-by-mail requests, said party chairman Jerry Cash, who added that Republicans don't want to void last Tuesday's general election nor does it plan to challenge election results.

"Our objective simply is to preserve the integrity of the voting process in Ward County and not to challenge any election results," Cash said during a news conference here Monday.

Cash said he hopes the Ward County District Attorney would begin investigating all allegations of voter fraud within the next two weeks.

The GOP chairman observed that voters and election workers independently brought the matters to the Republican Party's attention during absentee voting and on election day.

Of the 356 mail-in ballots requested, Cash pointed out that 197 originated in Precinct 1. About 56 percent of those 197 ballots came from a Barstow polling place, Cash said.

Commissioners strengthen library confidentiality

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Midland County Commissioners Monday voted to strengthen rules to keep public library records confidential.

By a unanimous vote, commissioners executed a policy that would prevent public disclosure of information pertaining to patrons who check out library materials — except when a grand jury issues a subpoena.

Protected under the document are registration records, including any information that the Midland County Public Library requires a resident to provide to become eligible to borrow books, periodicals and other material.

Circulation records, including all information that would identify a patron, also are deemed confidential under the policy.

In the event that a subpoena is issued, the county attorney would be notified and asked to examine the document for authenticity; the Intellectual Freedom of the American Library Association would be notified; and the county judge and commissioners would be apprised of the disclosure request.

The policy, which conforms to the recommendations of the Office of Intellectual Freedom of the American Library Association, was written and endorsed by members of the Midland County Library Advisory Committee, Librarian John Deats said.

In other action Monday, commissioners:

■ Canvassed returns of the November general election.

■ Tentatively approved a one-year contract renewal with Brown Energy Management Co.

■ Authorized the county auditor to request cost proposals for telephone communications equipment for the Midland County Rehabilitation Center.

Prison board votes to stop some furloughs

By DAVID PLESA
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Board of Corrections Monday unanimously voted to halt prison furloughs for violent criminals, drug dealers and habitual offenders.

The board voted to continue the nine-year-old furlough program, under certain restrictions, for inmates convicted of less serious crimes.

"I feel that the staff has run a good furlough program (with) an excellent success record, but to some of us some people just should not be eligible for furlough automatically," said board member Allan Polunsky, who proposed the changes.

Under the new policy, capital murderers, sex offenders, habitual criminals, drug dealers and repeat drug offenders are ineligible for furloughs from the Texas Department of Corrections.

Inmates serving time for murder can receive furloughs once they become eligible for parole. Those convicted of manslaughter or "crimes of passion" murders can be furloughed within six months of their parole eligibility, the board decided.

Seven of the board's nine members were present to vote on the tighter restrictions.

Although the state's furlough program has operated over the years with a near-perfect record, the issue sparked controversy after being publicized in the national presidential campaign.

President-elect George Bush and fellow Republican Texas Gov. Bill Clements repeatedly criticized Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, the Democrat's nominee, for allowing a murderer to walk away from a weekend pass and rape a Maryland woman and stab her husband.

While board Chairman Charles Terrell of Dallas has conceded that presidential politics brought the issue to his attention, he denied that politics influenced a board subcommittee's decision two weeks ago to freeze furloughs for violent criminals.

Bodies of two teens found near Twin Buttes Reservoir

From Staff Reports

SAN ANGELO — Tom Green County Sheriff's investigators today continued their probe into the double murder of a teen-age couple whose bodies were found near Twin Buttes Reservoir.

The skeletal remains of Shane Paul Stewart, 16, were found under thick brush near the south Concho pool of Twin Buttes about 1 p.m. Monday by officers, according to sheriff's Lt. Lou Hargraves. The remains, which were positively identified by Stewart's father, were found just 70 to 80 feet from where another body was found Saturday by two hunters, the officer said.

The remains found Saturday tentatively have been identified as those of 18-year-old Sally Ann McNeely, Hargraves said.

"That body, by the clothing, met the general description of her (Ms. McNeely)," he said of the first find. "We went back to pick up any evidence, and that's when we came up with the other body."

The teens had been missing since July 5. They were last seen about midnight at a fast food restaurant in San Angelo, according to investigators.

Because of the deterioration of the corpses, officers haven't speculated about a cause of death, but suicide has been ruled out and the deaths are being investigated as homicides, Hargraves said.

"The bodies were covered up," he said. "They were hidden. You don't kill yourself and then cover yourself up."

The remains have been sent to San Antonio to be studied. Until that examination is complete, investigators will not know what killed the couple, Hargraves said.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Cooler temperatures forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

Clear skies and cooler temperatures are in the forecast for tonight, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. The low will be in the upper 30s, north-northwesterly winds will gust from 10-20 mph.

Wednesday will be much the same with sunny skies and cooler temperatures. The high will be in the lower 60s and winds will blow from the north 5-15 m.p.h.

Monday's high of 81 was four degrees cooler than the record temperature of 85 set for that date in 1933. The overnight low of 59 was 35 degrees warmer than the record low of 24 set for this date in 1932.

STATE

A cold front sweeping southward through Texas today prompted a freeze warning in the Panhandle for tonight and the threat of strong thunderstorms elsewhere in the state.

An intense low-pressure system centered over eastern Colorado created a strong southerly wind flow across most of the Lone Star State, bringing warm, moist air from the Gulf of Mexico.

The frontal boundary stretched early today from the eastern Texas Panhandle across the South Plains into the Big Bend. Skies were mostly cloudy over the eastern two-thirds of Texas, with clear to partly cloudy conditions elsewhere.

Winds were strong and breezy from the south at 15 to 25 mph, with southwest gusts reaching 55 mph at Guadalupe Pass in West Texas.

Low temperatures were in the 50s and 60s over most of West Texas, with 40s in the northern Panhandle and 70s elsewhere. Extremes ranged from a cool 42 degrees at Dalhart to a mild 77 degrees at the Naval Air Station in Corpus Christi. A high wind warning was posted for mountain passes of Southwest Texas.

The National Weather Service said scattered showers and thunderstorms were possible in North and South Texas, with blowing dust from the Permian Basin northward. Some thunderstorms could be severe in the northern part of North Texas.

Temperatures should turn cooler tonight, with scattered showers and thunderstorms continuing over central and eastern sections, ending early Wednesday.

NATION

Heavy snow and high winds struck the Rocky Mountains and northern Plains, with more than a foot of snow falling at Jackson, Wyo., and in the northern Utah mountains.

The storm left snow in the mountains of Southern California on Monday and battered the region with high winds and rain, downing tree limbs and power lines.

A rogue wave in seas churned up by the storm swept over a jetty next to Morro Rock, 180 miles northwest of Los Angeles, killing two fishermen, according to the Morro Bay Police Department. A third fisherman managed to cling to the jetty but suffered a broken arm.

In Salt Lake City, a 17-year-old girl died Monday when she lost control of her car on a snow-slickened road and it slid into the path of a school bus.

In Wyoming, strong winds accompanying the snow created near-blizzard conditions in some areas. Winds up to 61 mph were reported in Laramie, with winds up to 55 mph in Casper.

Girl 'played dead' to escape assailant

TONASKET, Wash. (AP) — A 12-year-old girl who survived by playing dead after she was shot, beaten and left in a burning house is "one of the bravest, strongest little girls I know," says the county sheriff.

The girl, Brook Rottinghaus, finally sneaked from the burning house, which contained the bodies of her mother and stepfather, and was able to get help early Sunday, authorities said.

Okanogan County Sheriff Jim Weed said the girl awoke about 2 a.m. Sunday to the sound of gunfire. She called downstairs from the loft where she slept and a man she later identified as Lawrence R. Sullens told her the noise was a propane stove popping, Weed said.

Weed said the child saw her mother double over from a wound to the abdomen.

The man then climbed the stairs leading to the loft, shot the girl, kicked her in the face and went back downstairs and started two fires, police said.

Brook went downstairs and hid, but the man found her, pulled her into the living room, and kicked her in the face again.

"When she landed that time, she played dead with fires going on each side of her," Weed said.

Brook apparently waited a few minutes to be sure the man would not come back, then ran about a quarter mile through snow in the rural area in north-central Washington for help.

"This little gal was just exceptionally brave and had unbelievable presence of mind in dealing with this situation," Weed said.

The girl was listed in good condition today at North Valley Hospital in Tonasket, said Okanogan County Undersheriff Mike Murray. He said she was shot in the upper right arm, then the bullet grazed her chest and struck her upper left arm.

The girl's father joined her from California, authorities said.

Sullens, 25, was arrested Sunday night at his apartment in Everett. He remained in jail early today, but no charges had been filed, authorities said.

Killed were Charles Glanville, 45, and his wife, Betty, 40.

Weed said police did not have a motive for the shootings, but added that the suspect was being questioned and was cooperative.

"We feel really bad," Weed said. "It's so bizarre and she lost so much." He said police have visited the girl at the hospital, and some have taken teddy bears.

"I spent an hour with her. She's pretty upset but I don't think the shock has hit her yet," Weed said.

Sheriff's deputies say Sullens, a martial arts expert, had purchased a tae kwon do studio near Everett from the Glanvilles and had been to their home once before.

Tonasket is a town of 1,000 residents about 20 miles from the Canadian border.

U.S. has questions about PLO plan

By JOHN P. WALLACH
Foreign Editor
The Hearst Newspapers

WASHINGTON — State Department officials, reacting to a Palestinian plan for advancing the Mideast peace process by implicitly recognizing Israel, said on Monday the plan changes the dynamic in the region but is not explicit enough for U.S. officials.

The plan, which represents a victory for Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat, is expected to be formally adopted in Algiers by the 450-member Palestine National Council on Tuesday.

A U.S. official, speaking on condition of anonymity, called the plan "artful crafting (more) than a fundamental change.

"We are seeing some change." the official added, "It's something that looks a little better but is still ambiguous and has all sorts of trap doors."

In its Tuesday statement, the PNC is expected to declare an independent Palestinian state for the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip while renouncing terrorism and accepting existing United Nations' resolutions recognizing Israel's right to exist.

While it appears that the Palestinians are giving up their long-standing goal of destroying Israel, the U.S. official said the PNC cannot simply declare a Palestinian state without negotiating its borders.

The anticipated PNC action will consolidate Arafat's leading role among the Palestinians and seems intended to advance prospects for an international conference to set up an independent Palestinian homeland.

The new Palestinian stance is inadequate, according to the U.S. official, because it does not mention Israel by name, qualifies its renunciation of terrorism, and fails to unconditionally accept U.N. resolutions 242 and 338, which incorporates all the provisions of 242.

Resolution 242, adopted after the 1967 Arab-Israeli war, implicitly recognizes Israel by referring to the right of all states in the region to live in peace within secure and recognized borders. It also calls on Israel to give up the West Bank and Gaza Strip in return for recognition and peace treaties with each of its Arab neighbors.

In 1975, the United States, in order to secure an Israeli troop withdrawal from Egyptian territory, promised Israel that it would not negotiate with the PLO until it unambiguously accepts the three conditions that the U.S. official said the latest Palestinian initiative fails to meet.

In advance of the Palestinians meeting in Algiers, Israel rejected any results that might emerge.

Israel also has qualified its willingness to participate in a international Mideast peace conference by noting that it will not participate in such a conference if it tries to impose its will in the region.

The U.S. official said that a chief stumbling block to direct talks with Arafat is that such talks would contain an implicit U.S. recognition of the PLO and that would mean that if an international peace conference convenes, the PLO could arrive with the standing a state.

BODIES

"We'll continue to dig, and we won't stop digging until we've dug up every square inch of this yard," Burns said.

The landlady, Dorothea Montalvo Puente, 59, disappeared after police interviewed her Friday, the day they discovered the first body. Ms. Puente, who according to a social worker once said she took in elderly boarders as her way to repay society, was released for lack of evidence.

"Our first priority is to get her into custody," Burns said.

The Sacramento Bee reported today that police in Las Vegas had been told Puente may be there.

Investigators planned to excavate the rest of the yard at the rooming house and comb an adjacent lot that Ms. Puente gardened when it was vacant several years ago, Burns said.

In 1982, Ms. Puente was convicted of drugging and robbing three people in a bar, and sentenced to five years in prison, authorities said. She was paroled after 2½ years, said Christine May, a state Corrections Department spokeswoman.

Police said they were uncertain about the cause of death or even the sexes of the victims found Monday. No cause of death was determined for the other victims, police said.

The list of possible victims lengthened during the day.

"There are a lot more than eight names," Burns said, referring to the original list of occupants supplied by a social worker. "There's a big list of names. We've got detectives scurrying all over this city."

Ms. Puente also ran a board-and-care home up to nine years ago about eight blocks away. A separate team of investigators was interviewing tenants at that address but there were no immediate plans to dig there, Burns said.

Police Lt. Joe Enloe said investigators believed the elderly victims were killed for their Social Security checks. Payments continued to be sent after the disappearances and someone else cashed the checks, he said.

Police went to the house after neighbors reported a friend had been missing since August and a social worker said some of her clients were missing.

PLO

Israel rejected any change in its attitude toward the PLO even before the new policy was officially approved.

"It's not a problem of definition and formulations of various positions," said Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir. "We'll not negotiate with them because they're opposed to peace with Israel."

The declaration says: "The Palestine National Council, in the name of God, and in the name of the Palestinian Arab people, hereby proclaims the establishment of the state of Palestine on our Palestinian territory with its capital Jerusalem."

A less symbolic but equally important move was the new Palestinian political program, which clearly aims to overcome the major objections put forth by the United States as reasons for not dealing with the PLO.

The council, the PLO's highest policy-making body, issued a political declaration accepting U.N. Security Council Resolution 242 — which implicity recognizes Israel's right to exist.

The declaration also rejects terrorism, restricting PLO guerrilla action to military targets in the occupied territories, which 1.5 million Palestinians share uneasily with 70,000 Jewish settlers.

In Washington, the initial response was cautious. President Reagan said the PLO action could represent progress, but added there were "other problems that remain to be solved."

The United States has demanded the PLO recognize Israel and renounce terrorism before there could be any dealings.

Resolution 242 calls for Israeli withdrawal from territories it seized from Jordan and Egypt in the 1967 Middle East war. The PLO had in the past rejected it because of the recognition of the Jewish state and because it referred to the Palestinian question as a refugee problem.

The Palestine National Council's political declaration calls for the convening of an international Middle East peace conference under U.N. auspicies and with participation of the permanent member states of the U.N. Security Council and all parties to the conflict, including the PLO.

It also calls for a complete Israeli withdrawal from the West Bank, Gaza and Israeli-annexed Arab east Jerusalem, and for putting the occupied lands under U.N. supervision for a transitional period.

The third item on the agenda of the council was approval of a provisional government, to be formed at a later stage. That government would be mandated to negotiate a peace settlement.

VOTER

He also alleged that 47 mail-in ballots were sent to voters in Reeves County who claimed they would be out of Ward County on election day; 62 Barstow residents requested ballots by mail for other than out-of-county reasons; and some resident aliens and a convicted felon were permitted to vote.

"It appears peculiar that nine Barstow voters would plan to be out of the county at one address in Pecos, not only on election day but throughout the entire 13-day absentee by personal appearance voting period," said Cash.

"Although some of these particular challenges were properly rejected by the absentee ballot board due to an inability to immediately produce the necessary documentation, we believe that a more complete investigation is appropriate at this time," he added.

The GOP request for a formal inquiry follows the arrest Thursday of Ward County Commissioner-elect Ben Villalobos on charges that he knowingly registered an illegal alien to vote.

The 28-year-old Villalobos denies the charge filed by his Republican opponent Cliff Goble, whom he defeated in Tuesday's general election.

Villalobos, a former Monahans police officer and Ward County Sheriff's deputy, is the first Hispanic to be elected to the Commissioners' Court.

If convicted of the charge, a Class B misdemeanor, he could face up to 180 days in jail and a $1,000 fine.

TDC

Clements appointed Terrell and the other two subcommittee members, including Polunsky, to the prison board.

Since 1979, state prison officials said, 43,363 inmates have been furloughed. Of those, 362, or less than 1 percent, escaped.

Inmates can receive furloughs for up to seven days twice a year so they can attend weddings, make holiday visits or search for eventual employment. Inmates also can get temporary passes for emergency reasons.

Jim Lynaugh, TDC's executive director, said he didn't think the tigher restrictions would have a big impact on available space in the state's crowded prison system, which constantly hovers near the 95 percent capacity mark.

"Without sitting down and doing calculations, I would say that TDC will probably lose maybe 10 beds if I understand the policy," Lynaugh said.

Polunsky said he has received many calls from citizens and law officers wondering how the state can allow murderers, rapists and other criminals to roam free.

"This is a very difficult decision for myself," he said. "The furlough system has been a very effective tool in managing the system and assisting in the rehabilitation of many of the inmates in TDC."

OIL

Said Sharp: "Fifty percent of Texas production already comes from enhanced recovery projects and if estimates are in the ballpark, it is easy to conceive of additional production in the tens of millions of barrels as a result of this incentive." He feels the promise of a long-term tax incentive might serve as the economic icing to cause producers to initiate rather than sit on proposed projects.

At current prices, each additional million barrels of oil recovered adds $13 million to the economy and $299,000 in severance tax. Sharp said the incentive could cost the state $459,000 in severance taxes during its first two years, but the added revenue in the economy would more than offset the loss of revenue.

"This is a tax revenue bill," said Harry Spannaus, executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association. "There would be no direct loss of taxes, because this is income that would not have been created without the incentive."

Spannaus called the proposed legislation an excellent plan for increasing production through tertiary and secondary recovery, adding that major oil companies would be the main beneficiaries.

"If this bill becomes law, it will be the first legislation passed to bring relief to the Texas oil industry. It is overdue," said Spannaus. He said New Mexico, Louisiana and Oklahoma had already passed laws to provide severance tax relief to oil companies.

Sharp praised the Permian Basin Petroleum Association along with Texas Independent Producers & Royalty Owners, Texas Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Association and other industry associations for their assistance in developing the legislation.

East Texas still recovering from tornadoes year later

PALESTINE (AP) — Ann Myers lay in a Tyler nursing home, speechless, motionless and with little chance of recovery from the near-comatose state she has been in since a tornado one year ago ravaged her home and killed her husband.

"It might be a little hard to say, but it almost might be better if she were dead," said brother-in-law Jimmie Myers. "It won't change except for a miracle."

The tornado that flattened the Myers' home was one of a swarm of twisters and windstorms that ripped through East and southeast Texas on Nov. 15 and 16, 1987, killing 10 people, injuring more than 160 others, causing $35 million in damage and leaving scores of Texans homeless.

Mrs. Myers, 52, and her husband Johnnie Leroy Myers were in their brick home when the tornado hit. Mrs. Myers was trapped beneath the wreckage. Her husband, killed when the house was destroyed, was the only Anderson County resident to die in the tornadoes.

Ten Texas counties were declared federal disaster areas and their residents were given federal loans.

Palestine and Jacksonville, where two people were killed, were the hardest hit, with property damage that exceeded the combined damage of the remaining affected counties.

The twisters destroyed Marlene Smith's custom-designed home, which was built to accommodate her quadraplegic son, Donnie. With help from Sen. Phil Gramm, the unemployed widow received a $93,000 loan to rebuild the house.

"All that was left of the old house was the hallway we were in," Mrs. Smith said. "The roof folded over us like a teepee."

A business district on the west side of this city about 100 miles southeast of Dallas was virtually wiped out during the fatal storms. More than 100 businesses were damaged or destroyed in minutes.

During the past year, business owners have focused on rebuilding, recovering and repairing.

But many were forced to close, leaving bare lots along the business strip. Others still are awaiting revival. Others have moved.

Robert and Sherry Riley, managers of Palestine Truck & Trailer, worked all winter and spring out of a building with a tarp on the roof. In June, the business moved to a new building that was constructed behind the damaged building.

"It took the roof and the back wall down, but we never closed," Mrs. Riley said. "As soon as we shoveled the ceiling out, we were selling parts. It's now much better than it was before, but it's been a long, hard year."

Palestine building official Tom Thorsen said 65 building permits were issued during the past year for a total of $1.95 million to replace or repair commercial property damaged by the tornado.

Some damaged buildings are being rebuilt by volunteers and through fund-raisers.

Juan Trevino, pastor at First Presbyterian Church, is heading a community-wide effort to rebuild Camp Zion Missionary Baptist Church. At the church grounds, a rusted water heater and a weathered swivel chair stand amid debris of broken panel boards, pews and cinder blocks.

"It's going to be rebuilt with the help of the good Lord and the people," said Mabry Spencer. "My daddy established that church over there 50 years ago, and I really will be happy to see it back up there."

Spencer said he salvaged 10 pews after the storm.

Fourth- and fifth-grade students who once met at A.M. Story School now attend classes in a revamped building that was once a Kroger grocery store.

The destructive tornado hit the school while several teachers were still there. The front of the school, the cafeteria and the gymnasium were swept away and most of the 30 classrooms were destroyed.

No special commemoration was planned for the anniversary of last year's tornado, school officials said.

Sheriff-elect taking over from man who's held post since '51

PAMPA (AP) — Gray County's sheriff-elect admits he has a lot to learn about his new job.

Jimmy Free will be taking over a department that for the past 38 years has been run by one man.

Rufe Jordan, sheriff of the Texas Panhandle county since 1951, has been such a fixture in Gray County law enforcement that no one had challenged him for the job since 1968.

But Free, a 43-year-old building supervisor at the First Baptist Church, ousted Jordan in last week's election with a write-in candidacy that hardly anyone thought could succeed. Drug abuse was his primary issue.

"My chances were about 99-to-1 against me when we started this race out," Free said Monday.

His victory was especially surprising to Jordan, whose campaign efforts consisted mainly of get-out-the-vote letters sent to county residents a few days before the election.

"I didn't think they could win on a write-in ticket," he said. "I don't know just exactly what happened."

About 26,000 people reside in Gray County; 10,169 votes were cast in the presidential race, while 9,139 people voted in the sheriff's race. Free defeated Jordan by 673 votes.

Free launched his campaign this summer after Gray County, at Jordan's direction, became the only county in the Panhandle not to participate in a regional narcotics trafficking effort.

Twenty-five other counties joined the Panhandle Regional Narcotics Trafficking Task Force, which began operating early this year sharing more than $12 million in state and federal funds with other regional task forces.

Jordan said he worried about the expense and lack of safeguards in the program, which uses undercover officers to try to stem drug sales.

Pampa, the Gray County seat, joined the task force on its own in August.

Basing his campaign on the issue of drug problems, Free went door-to-door to ask for support and bought newspaper ads. His only previous experience in law enforcement has been as police officer and private investigator in Weatherford, Okla.

Free says his first priority will be to get Gray County included in the regional drug task force. After that, he isn't sure what other changes he'll make, he said.

"It's going to be very difficult," he said. "I don't think anyone could fill his (Jordan's) footsteps because people have respected him. But I'll do my best to fall in right behind him and get the same respect."

After 37 years, a change in leadership of the county's law enforcement will mark a major transition, said county judge Carl Kennedy.

"Sheriff Jordan was a stabling factor in our county government," he said. "We'll miss him. But since the voters have decided on a change, we'll do our best to help Mr. Free be the best sheriff he can be."

Bishops consider rejection of draft Vatican document

RELIGION

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Conference of Catholic Bishops is moving toward a showdown vote on whether to reject a draft Vatican document questioning the theological authority of such conferences.

The bishops softened the wording of their proposed reply to the Vatican document on Monday but pressed toward a scheduled Wednesday vote without changing their underlying judgment: "The draft is not suitable."

Despite frequent public compliments from both sides, relations have often been uneasy between the Vatican and bishops' conferences, particularly those such as the Americans' which have seemed to be growing in prestige in recent years.

Pope John Paul II has publicly supported many of the U.S. conference's efforts, including national pastoral letters that stirred controversy outside the church for their criticism of Reagan administration policies on nuclear arms and the U.S. economy.

However, there also has been criticism from high Vatican officials, who have asked for whom the bishops were speaking in commenting on matters of doctrine, and on what authority.

Also on Monday, acceding to a Vatican request, the bishops postponed a vote on another controversial item — but did so only grudgingly and with rare public complaints about the way church leaders in Rome had handled the situation.

While the bishops gave ground, they took pains to say they were not knuckling under to Vatican pressure.

"We have not bowed obsequiously to Rome in an untoward fashion," said Archbishop Oscar Lipscomb of Mobile, Ala., objecting to a reporter's suggestion that that was what had happened.

About 300 U.S. Roman Catholic cardinals, archbishops and bishops had been scheduled to vote today on new guidelines for settling disputes between theologians and bishops. But a letter from the Vatican's Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith complained that the guidelines would make the theologians and bishops equals in the settlement process.

Bishop Raymond Lessard of Savannah, Ga., chairman of the bishops' Committee on Doctrine, said he felt all that was "sufficiently addressed" in the guidelines document. However, he added that it seemed wise to postpone action until the bishops' June meeting.

Several bishops complained about the timing of the Vatican's complaint, including Cardinal Joseph Bernardin of Chicago, who said the intervention "might be perceived as confrontational or as belittling the episcopal conference, which I know is not intended."

Cardinal John O'Connor of New York said the Vatican agency was understaffed, a possible explanation for the last-minute nature of the objection. However, Archbishop John May of St. Louis, president of the U.S. bishops conference, said the Vatican had had the proposal for more than a year.

As for the draft Vatican document on bishops' conferences, a number of U.S. bishops apparently had been stung by news stories quoting in advance from the proposed rejection notice.

Church leader calls rivalries 'toxic cloud'

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Baptists must overcome a "toxic cloud" of dissension and work together in the church, says the president of the Louisiana Baptist Convention.

"The ugly specter of name-branding, slogans and intense rivalries hovers like a toxic cloud over our entire denomination," Dr. Calvin Phelps said during his presidential address Monday night.

Over the past 10 years, liberal and conservative factions have struggled to gain control of the Southern Baptist Convention — a controversy which has trickled down to some states.

Phelps said all members should stay loyal to the denomination in spite of diversity.

The convention was to elect a president and to receive a message from No Chang U, executive secretary of the Korean Baptist Convention, during today's sessions.

Supreme Court refuses to give fathers abortion rights

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, at least for now, is keeping out of the continuing national debate over abortion rights.

The justices on Monday refused to give husbands legal power to prevent their wives from terminating pregnancies.

Without comment, they rejected arguments by an Indiana man who said he had "fundamental rights and interests in his unborn child." The action left intact a state court ruling that upheld a mother's right to have an abortion.

There has been speculation that an increasingly conservative high court is prepared to take a new look at its landmark 1973 ruling, Roe vs. Wade, that legalized abortion nationwide.

The author of the 12-year-old court opinion, Justice Harry A. Blackmun, has said he believes there is "a very distinct possibility" Roe vs. Wade will be reversed during the court's current term.

But on Monday, the justices gave no signs they are eager to tackle an abortion controversy now.

The court let stand a ruling last July by the Indiana Supreme Court that said allowing a husband to block a wife's abortion is barred by past high court rulings.

The high court in 1976 struck down a Missouri law requiring spousal consent before a woman could obtain an abortion during the first 12 weeks of her pregnancy.

The Indiana case stems from an attempt last summer by Erin Andrew Conn of Elkhart, Ind., to prevent his estranged wife, Jennifer, from having an abortion.

A state trial judge issued a temporary order barring Mrs. Conn from having the operation, but a state appeals court threw out that order.

Gorbachev, Reagan schedule final meeting

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev announced today he will visit the United States early next month to address the United Nations. U.S. officials said he will also meet with President Reagan and, possibly, President-elect George Bush.

Indeed, Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady Gerasimov said in Moscow that a meeting with Bush, as well as Reagan, could be "assumed" for "a continuation of the U.S.-Soviet political dialogue that we believe should continue without artificial pause."

The announcement was made while Gorbachev attended a session on agricultural problems in the Russian city of Orel, south of Moscow, and was carried by the official Soviet news agency, Tass.

Gorbachev also will visit Britain and Cuba, the announcement said. U.S. officials said the visit to New York and a fifth meeting with Reagan would take place around Dec. 7.

"Mikhail Gorbachev intends to appear in New York at the session of the General Assembly of the U.N. to set forth the views of the Soviet Union on the most important problems of world development," Tass said.

Two members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee said today such a session could give Bush the chance to build on recent positive Soviet moves around the world.

A get-together would also give the two sides another chance to narrow the gap on a treaty to reduce long-range nuclear weapons arsenals and to ease tensions caused by Afghan rebel attacks on Soviet troops in Afghanistan and a slowdown in the Red Army's withdrawal from the country.

The treaty is bogged down with several technical problems that may not be easily solved. But on Afghanistan, the Soviets already have pledged to have all their forces out by Feb. 15.

Two weeks ago, citing attacks by the U.S.-armed rebels, the Soviets announced suspension of the withdrawal. Still, Gorbachev has not ruled out adhering to the deadline set in last spring's Geneva accords.

Interviewed today, Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., pointed to "some of the moves taking place in the Soviet Union, and its affect on Europe in particular and the third world in general," and said the New York meeting would give the president-elect "a significant opportunity..., to take positive advantage" of such developments.

Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., interviewed with Biden on the NBC-TV "Today" show, said Bush "has a number of fronts where there are major opportunities. Clearly, the Soviet Union and east-west relations is one, moving on human rights, trade, regional conflict resolution and arms control."

Two U.S. officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Gorbachev's visit would be in early December. A third source, also refusing to be identified, said Dec. 7 was the projected date.

A year ago, the Soviet Communist Party General Secretary made his first trip to the United States. At a Washington summit with Reagan, he signed an unprecedented treaty to abolish U.S. and Soviet intermediate-range nuclear weapons.

Reagan and Gorbachev have held four annual meetings since 1985, improving U.S.-Soviet relations on a number of fronts.

Bush plans to announce Cabinet this week

GULF STREAM, Fla. (AP) — After four days in the sun and surf, George Bush is tackling the more serious business of assembling his White House team, meeting with the chancellor of West Germany and trying to calm nervous world financial markets.

As speculation and maneuvering for jobs percolated in Washington, Bush indicated to reporters Monday that he likely will be announcing appointments to his Cabinet or other administration posts this week.

On the eve of his departure today for Washington, Bush was joined at a beachfront vacation home for dinner by New Hampshire Gov. John Sununu, a top campaign adviser mentioned as a candidate for White House chief of staff.

But Bush laughingly told reporters not to "read too much into" the visit by Sununu, who was the only political associate to see Bush on vacation.

Bush's planned visit with West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl today marked his first meeting with a foreign head of state since being elected president last Tuesday. Another could well be on tap in December, when — according to U.S. officials — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev plans to visit the United States and address the United Nations.

But Bush's press spokesman, Steve Hart, said it was too early to discuss that report.

"There has been no official announcement. It would be inappropriate for me to comment," he said.

However, U.S. officials who spoke in Washington on condition of anonymity said Monday that a Bush-Gorbachev meeting was expected.

Bush told reporters in a beachfront question-and-answer session that his meeting with Kohl, as well as one Thursday with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, would focus on "talking about where we go after I become president, but it should be viewed as a continuation of existing policy."

Bush also sought to reassure a nervous international financial community that the U.S. budget deficit will be a top priority at the start of his administration.

"It is a matter of great urgency...and I want to be in the forefront of trying to do something about it after I become president," he said.

Bush's campaign promise to reject any tax increases has led some analysts to question whether he is serious about reducing the deficit. He was been dogged by reports of a declining dollar abroad and a dramatic drop in the Dow Jones industrial average after his election.

The calming statements had an impact on financial trading Monday and today, however, as the dollar rebounded on most international financial markets after its downward spiral last week. Several traders credited the statements with calming fears that Bush's advisers want the U.S. currency to fall further.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which took a post-election loss of nearly 80 points last week, fell 1.95 on Monday to record its fourth consecutive losing session.

In Washington, the incoming chairman of the House Budget Committee said tax increases will be needed next year to make legally required cuts in the deficit.

"Anybody who's dealt with budget issues knows the size of the challenge is too large to exempt any areas," said Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Calif.

Bush, however, dismissed the financial unrest by saying, "These gyrations happen."

Bush said he will tackle the deficit "early on in my presidency" but added, "I do not want to start acting like I am president of the United States yet."

Meanwhile, leaders of the Bush transition team said he wants to assemble his presidential economic team quickly. He is expected to retain his longtime friend Nicholas Brady as treasury secretary. Others are expected to be former Deputy Treasury Secretary Richard Darman as budget director and Stanford University professor Michael Boskin as White House economics adviser.

Bush aides said that a list of three to five names is being drawn up for him to consider for each Cabinet post.

Bush also was asked about a report suggesting that his choice for secretary of state, James A. Baker III, would wield clout as a "deputy president."

Bush replied: "You haven't heard that here."

On reports that a three-person chief-of-staff arrangement was under consideration, Bush said, "Stay tuned. I'll have announcements on that pretty soon."

On other topics:

■ Bush sidestepped a question about whether he would name a woman to his Cabinet, coining a new word in the process. "I will anticipate there will be female representation in the Cabinet, but...I don't like to put it like that sounds kind of quotaistic."

■ He rejected allegations that government foreclosure warnings to 80,000 farmers were held up until after the election.

"I don't believe there's any political motivation related to agricultural policies at all," he said.

Naive Americans need to wise up

The word on Americans around the world is that we are a naive people. We are said to be immature, and at times even childish. It is argued that would be all right if we were not a superpower. But we are.

Now comes more evidence to support our critics. The General Accounting Office has issued a report saying that foreigners — suspected of being intelligence agents from the Soviet Union and its satellites, China, Iran and elsewhere — have been allowed access to sensitive American nuclear weapons laboratories because of lax security. Other nations which sent suspected agents to Energy Department labs at Los Alamos and Sandia in New Mexico and Livermore in California, are Iraq, India, Israel, Pakistan, Brazil and Argentina. All have or are in the process of developing nuclear weapons.

Energy Department officials admit to ignoring their own rules, namely waiting for the completion of visitor background checks. The officials claimed they had no firm indication that classified information had been disclosed to the agents. GAO put it more honestly, saying, "We could not determine if sensitive or classified information had been lost."

The Department now says its procedures will be changed. That's essential, but it's also a cop-out. Change the rules, yes, but the issue is not only changing the rules, but enforcing them.

About 6,700 foreigners were allowed to visit the labs, where U.S. scientists conduct advanced work on nuclear weapons, between January of 1986 and September of 1987. Some 222 were from Communist nations and 675 from other countries considered to be espionage or nuclear-proliferation risks.

Some of these foreigners stayed a week at some of the U.S. facilities. Needless to say, they were not there to discuss the New Mexico sunset or the California beach girls. The discussions involved talks that could be useful to nations constructing or improving nuclear weapons. It's as simple as that.

Some heads should roll at the Energy Department but they won't. The U.S. foreign service officers who oversaw the Soviet bugging of the new American embassy in Moscow were promoted and even given pay bonuses. None was disciplined. That seems typical. And sad.

No country in the world discloses more of its intelligence secrets than the United States. That is why we are called naive.

Unarmed VA guards want firearms

WASHINGTON — Ronald Hearn believed in protecting other people, but he couldn't protect himself.

Hearn was a police officer at a Veterans Administration hospital in the Bronx. He was shot and killed last summer as he stood guard at the entrance to the facility, unarmed.

Jack Anderson

The tragedy has renewed the rallying cry among police officers working at VA medical centers across the country. For more than a decade, they have begged the federal government to allow them to carry firearms for protection. To this day, the only weapon they are allowed to carry is a can of Mace.

VA officials say a hospital is no place for a gun. But there are plenty of guns in and near the hospitals — in the hands of psychotic former patients, drug dealers and robbers. VA hospitals are not run-of-the-mill medical centers. Many of them are in high-crime areas. They are a magnet for panhandlers and thieves. Some of the patients are volatile and easy targets for drug dealers. Last summer, the Los Angeles Herald-Examiner reported that heroine, cocaine and other drugs were openly traded among patients and employees at the VA hospital in Los Angeles.

Hearn's family and colleagues say it is unfair to make VA police officers work under such dangerous conditions without standard tools of the police trade.

"I think those men should be protected. It's unfair to them," Hearn's mother, Evelyn Skeete, told us.

Our associates Scott Sleek and Stewart Harris have been investigating the VA Security Service for several months. We have reported that the VA has recruited officers with poor qualifications, some with criminal backgrounds. There also have been reports that crimes at the hospitals aren't adequately investigated or properly reported and that training for the security force is lax. The dubious record of some officers, combined with the potential for violence, makes the VA security system ripe for an overhaul.

The VA police brass say that if its record is bad, their superiors at the VA should share the blame for poor recruiting and failure to treat the Security Service as a serious profession.

"There are a lot of professionally trained, highly qualified police officers out there (working for the VA) whose integrity is being questioned because of poor management," said Dan Painter, president of the federal police union in Richmond, Va.

The fact that VA cops can't carry guns is at the root of their low morale, said Painter, who is leading a campaign to have the rule changed. The police want a congressional hearing on the issue. The shooting deaths of Hearn and two other officers are their trump cards.

Hearn, 49, was shot to death on July 25 when he tried to stop two youths from entering the Bronx hospital. They had triggered a metal detector when they walked in the door. One of the youths fired five shots at Hearn, which went through the bullet-proof vest he had bought for himself, since the hospital wouldn't supply one. The youths ran away and were never apprehended.

Skeete said she worried about her son, but he was committed to his job. "He would say, 'Mom, it's my job. I have to protect people.' He never thought of himself. He thought of the people," she said.

Hearn was not the first VA officer to fall in the line of duty. In January 1986, Mark Decker, 30, and Leonard Wilcox, 36, were shot to death by a former mental patient when they confronted him in the parking lot of a VA hospital in Brecksville, Ohio, near Cleveland. The killer then ran into the hospital lobby, held a nurse at gunpoint and took a patient hostage until police overpowered him.

Wilcox's widow, Cynthia, told us her husband often talked about the need to carry a gun.

Many private hospitals let their security guards carry guns. But VA spokesman Don Smith told us that firearms aren't needed and could be dangerous in a tussle with a patient. "We recognize there are incidents where in hindsight the possession of a firearm might have prevented a tragedy," Smith said. "But the feeling is it's a dangerous element that's not needed as there are appropriate ways of dealing with these situations that don't require the use of weapons."

PAYING FOR AIDS — American taxpayers will pay at least $1.3 billion to fight the battle against AIDS next year. But the people on the front lines of that battle — the researchers, social workers and local public health professionals — think the federal budget should be as much as $1 billion higher. The General Accounting Office recently polled AIDS workers around the country. State and local public health officials thought that next year's federal budget for AIDS should be $1.7 billion, at the very least. If they were spending the money and were restricted to $1.3 billion, the public health workers said they would take away from the research budget to pay for more education, patient care and programs for intravenous drug users. As the budget now stands, 45 percent goes to research, 31 percent to public health control measures and education, 18 percent to tracking the spread of the disease and 5 percent on programs for drug users.

MINI-EDITORIAL — Last month in Kenya, humankind once again proved its short-sightedness by killing the last five white rhinos living on public land. Poachers carrying guns attacked a national park headquarters and wounded park rangers before slaughtering the rhinos. They took the rhino horns which will end up as someone's trinkets. Poachers sacrifice endangered animals to amass personal wealth. But a world without a wealth of animals is not worth living in. By the time the shortsighted poachers learn that lesson, it will be too late.

No way to pick team

It's not how you play the game, it's how you flip a coin!

Why bother with the games at all, if this is really how winners are decided? Let's just sit in front of the TV each week, watch the coaches flip a coin, and hear the winner of this week's game. No muss, no fuss, no bother. Of course the Cowboys might prefer this system. Can you imagine the World Series — night after night of "coin tossing?" And those "big men of wrestling" — tossing a coin? Now I ask you, is something wrong with this picture?

Supposedly the playoffs are a series of games played to determine a winner. Everyone knows what a winner is — the team that scores the most points. But we all know that's not how you determine a winner for going to the playoffs. Now the rules change, and it doesn't matter how good a team is, how great their scores were, or how many games they won. Now you simply toss a coin. Then we go back to the point system to determine a winner for the playoff games. Why? If the point system applies to the Friday night games and the final playoffs, why shouldn't it apply to something this important?

In this case the team with the most game points and wins was simply dropped — and not by the process of elimination. Who in their right minds could think this process is fair? It's hard to believe anyone would use a coin toss in the first place, and even harder to believe we've let this become a "tradition."

The Dawgs were fantastic this year! It's really a shame they didn't get a chance to finish what they started, but their scores tell it all — they were the winners!

Compliments also to the Midland High and Midland Freshmen bands for their performances at the UIL Marching Contest in Odessa last month. They gave a much better performance than their scores reflected, and 10 years of top ratings speaks well of them. They are part of a proud tradition — they are Midland Bulldogs.

Thanks, book collectors!

Once again the Friends of Midland County Library want to thank the hundreds of Midlanders for making their annual used book sale a rousing success — and also those book lovers who come from miles around every year.

For 21 years they have bought books by the bag, box, and basketful, showing everyone this is an area of avid readers. It is rewarding to see how many families come together, each seeking their individual treasures.

And the fact 56,458 people also have library cards, and borrowed 531,035 books last year doubly encourages the organization to have bigger and better sales each year so that we may buy special equipment and materials for the library for use by the public at no charge.

Through the years, the organization has bought electronic/audio items such as a TV and VCR for the Children's Room, computers and word processors with software, both technical and game-oriented which may be used free. We have redecorated the Children's Room, and carpeted the business section this year, and furnished our flourishing branch in the mall. The Science and Technology Department is constantly adding materials thanks to both industry gifts and Friends of Midland County Library donations. This is recycling the used for the new in the best tradition of the frontier.

We're already collecting books for next year at our Book Drop on the corner of Illinois and Weatherford every Wednesday from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m.

Thank you, Midland. See you next year.

Learning humility tough lesson for journalist

In all the post-election autopsies, the role of the media will be picked at by both groups of partisans. Neither side is likely to identify the real problem which is the same problem many churches have today.

Charley Reese

That problem, common to newsroom and church pew alike, is the difficulty of intelligent, active people acquiring the virtue of humility.

The proper role of journalism is essentially a passive one — to provide a data-base so that citizens may make their own decisions. This role of humble servant is difficult for proud people to accept. The tendency — and I have felt it like every other journalist — is to decide ourselves what is right and what is wrong and then stack the data in an attempt to persuade people to agree with us.

It is the same fault whether the people who do it are conservatives or liberals and it is, like a great many faults, born out of a desire to do good rather than out of any evil intent. And whether the people are conservatives or liberals, there is a common touch of elitism in it. Elitism is nothing more than doubt that other people are as intelligent as we are and therefore cannot be trusted to arrive at the same conclusions unless we nudge them a little bit in the right direction.

The element of pride comes into it because if we abandon the passive for the active role then we can take pride in the outcome. It requires true humility to stand aside from the fray and say, beyond providing the facts, I played no role in the outcome.

While I don't presume to tell anyone what is proper or improper religious behavior, certainly one traditional view of the role of Christianity is to provide succor to the hurting with no regard for why they hurt or who they are. This, too, is a passive and humble role.

The temptation, like that which tips the journalist away from his passive role of servant, is to join one side or the other of the civil war rather than be content to treat the wounded of both sides. Thus churchmen align themselves with revolutions and counter-revolutions. Again, the motivation is the desire to do good — to correct what they perceive to be the cause of hurts that exist.

The fault lies when Christians get so carried away that they find themselves rationalizing all the things, like murder, that their religion opposes. It is like the journalist who gets so carried away he suppresses free speech rather than defends it. In both cases, they swallow the ultimate tranquilizer — the rationalization that the end justifies the means, that present evil can be atoned by some future good.

All of this comes from pride, for it takes a monstrous ego to presume an understanding of the world and to presume the ability to make significant changes in the human condition. Now and then, spread over the centuries, a few individuals manage to do it, but they are rare.

I am not advocating passive acceptance of evil, but rather a rational choice of roles and an acceptance of the limitations of those roles. If I wish to be a social reformer or a political leader, I have no business occupying the role of journalist. If I wish to defeat this tyrant or that government, I belong in an army, not in a pulpit.

I can run political campaigns and advise candidates or I can be a journalist, but not both. The goals of each are in conflict. I can kill Marxists or kill anti-Marxists but I cannot justify either killing on the grounds of religious duty.

Millions of people in this century have died because egotistical men thought these deaths would serve this or that purpose in some grand scheme, not one of which has been worth a cat's life much less a human's.

But as a country singer might put it, Mama, it's hard to teach your boy to be humble.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

How can president alleviate federal deficit?

Although I don't have any grandchildren, and very little prospect for having any at the moment, I'm still concerned about what to do about the federal deficit. Those cute little toddlers of today are going to have to suffer for tomorrow.

Grizzard

Because of this concern, I have been giving much thought as to what to do about the deficit problem, and I've come up with a few ideas the new president might use during his administration.

Not all of these will work, of course, but nobody in Washington seems to have any solutions, either, and it's downright embarrassing to be the biggest debtor nation in the world.

Somehow I just can't handle the image of Uncle Sam on a street corner with a tin cup in his hand selling pencils.

It's time for drastic action.

Let us consider the following:

■ We just don't pay any of our bills. People have done this to me. I played golf with a guy once and won eight bucks.

He said, "I ain't paying."

I said, "Why not?"

He said, "I just ain't paying."

I could have pounced on him and attempted to beat the $8 out of him, but he was bigger than me.

I'm not certain who all we owe, but it's probably nobody who could do any pouncing on us.

If Japan, for instance, becomes upset about us not paying, we can just say, "It's what you get for Pearl Harbor and introducing sushi bars."

■ We call in all our debts, which is a joke since other countries have been using the "I ain't paying" trick on us for years.

Do you think Mexico is ever going to pay back any money they owe us? Of course not. So when the Mexicans don't pay up, we write out a marker for what they owe us and then give it to the West Germans for what we owe them.

"You can collect ours from the Mexicans," is what we say.

Since it works in gin rummy, why not in international financial dealings?

■ We declare war on Japan, West Germany and Italy and then surrender the next day and say, "We need some foreign aid for post-war reconstruction."

■ We tear up all the federal credit cards and make sure Nancy gives up hers when she leaves the White House. That ought to pay off anything we owe to Norway.

■ We sell all tall buildings on Manhattan to the Japanese. They'll own them all eventually anyway.

Then, we sell back the island itself to the Indians for the original $24 and walk away from the deal.

■ We sell Alaska to the Canadians and let them spend all that money to get the whales out next time.

■ We hold a fire sale in Yellowstone National Park.

There's one more thought — and that is, we go right on having a great time spending and borrowing recklessly as we've been doing and if our grandchildren don't like it, we tell them how we had to walk six miles, barefoot, in the snow to school every day and then write them out of our wills.

Pakistan now armed with nuclear weapons, study says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pakistan appears to have finally developed atomic weapons, increasing the threat of a nuclear war with India and representing a major setback to efforts to stem the spread of atomic weapons around the globe, says a study published today.

"After a decade of slow advances, Pakistan appears to have" joined a group of three other nations that have nuclear weapons but don't admit it, according to the review by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

The other countries in that category are Israel, India and South Africa, said the report, the fourth such survey published by the non-profit group that specializes in national security studies.

Five nations have said they possess nuclear weapons: the United States, the Soviet Union, China, Great Britain and France. A sixth, India, exploded a single atomic device in 1974 but said it was a non-military explosion.

Efforts to halt the spread of nuclear weapons generally have focused on the Middle East and South Asia, the report noted. Pakistan and India have been the chief source of concern, since the two countries have fought three wars in the 41 years since they were created by the separation of colonial India from Britain.

The report, titled "The Undeclared Bombs," was written by Leonard S. Spector, author of the three previous reports. Spector formerly worked on non-proliferation issues at the Nuclear Regulatory Commission and the Senate Energy and Natural Resources non-proliferation subcommittee.

In the past two years, Spector said, "convincing evidence emerged that Pakistan had crossed the nuclear weapons threshold and had acquired the essentials for its first nuclear weapons."

That evidence includes production of highly enriched uranium, a key component of atomic weapons; and European reports of a previously clandestine effort by Pakistan officials to smuggle sophisticated nuclear components out of West Germany.

The Pakistani program is a dilemma for the United States, Spector said in an interview, because Pakistan is a prime recipient of U.S. aid at the same time U.S. officials are pushing Pakistan not to develop atomic weapons.

Two years ago, President Reagan certified to Congress that Pakistan did not possess nuclear weapons, a certification required by Capitol Hill before the U.S. aid program could go ahead. But in recent months, U.S. officials have been less direct in asserting that the Pakistanis don't have atomic weapons.

Meanwhile, India has responded by quietly expanding its atomic weapons capability and has also worked on development of delivery systems, including medium-range rockets, the report said. India has the ingredients to build between 20 and 50 atomic weapons, it said.

For the future, Spector said, "most observers are looking for some sort of mechanism, some kind of regional arrangement, to bring India and Pakistan into negotiations. The concept is to find a way to persuade both antagonists to restrain themselves. It will be difficult, but it may be achievable."

The report also highlighted increasing dangers in the volatile Mideast, particularly in light of the spread of long-range missiles and chemical weapons among Arab enemies of Israel.

Israel has refused to admit to possessing nuclear weapons, but the report said the Israelis have "a substantial, undeclared nuclear arsenal of at least 50 to 60 nuclear devices — and perhaps significantly more — some of which are an advanced design."

The risk of nuclear escalation in a future Mideast war has "seriously increased," the study said, because of the improved capabilities of Arab nations to inflict damage through missiles and chemical weapons.

"Indeed, in 1988, Israeli leaders began implicitly referring to this possibility by declaring that Israel would have the ability to retaliate against an anti-city missile or chemical attack 'many times over,'" it said.

Transport workers to get drug tests

WASHINGTON (AP) — Millions of transportation workers including pilots and truckers will be subject to random drug tests under a new federal directive that is likely to be challenged in court before it goes into effect in December 1989.

The Transportation Department announced the broad-ranging drug testing requirements Monday, and immediately the head of the airline pilots' union promised to fight the regulation both in Congress and in the courts.

The testing requirements cover all types of transportation, including airlines, long-distance trucks and urban transit systems.

"The American people demand and expect a drug-free transportation system. These new rules will take us as far as practically possible toward that goal," Transportation Secretary Jim Burnley said at a news conference.

He acknowledged the tests likely will be challenged in the courts. The Supreme Court already has before it two separate drug-testing cases — including one involving post-accident testing of railroad workers — that are expected to be decided next year.

The series of federal regulations announced by Burnley call for transportation companies — airlines, trucking companies, railroads and commercial shipping companies — to have comprehensive testing programs in place by December 1989. Companies with 50 or fewer employees, including tens of thousands of over-the-road independent truckers, have another year to comply.

The Transportation Department estimated the testing will cost businesses more than $2.1 billion during the first 10 years, but Burnley said the testing will save the same companies about $8.7 billion in increased productivity, accident reductions and medical cost savings.

In addition to random tests, the regulations call for drug testing before employment if there is reasonable cause to suspect drug use, periodically such as during annual physicals, and after an accident. The drugs covered by the tests are marijuana, cocaine, opiates, amphetamines and PCP.

The random-testing provision, which requires that at least 50 percent of a given work force be tested during a single year, has attracted the strongest protests, especially from unions. They argue that such tests constitute an invasion of privacy, have minimal benefit and will subject thousands of workers to the consequences of "false positive" results.

"Random testing is a counterproductive, shotgun strategy that is at the same time an unwarranted invasion of privacy and of no significant value in the battle against drug abuse," said Henry Duffy, president of the 40,000-member Air Line Pilots Association.

The required testing programs cover:

- Nearly 3 million long-distance truckers, including independent drivers and those who work directly for large trucking companies. Intercity bus drivers also must be tested.
- More than 538,000 aviation employees, including 50,000 commercial pilots, 80,000 flight attendants and 300,000 airline mechanics. Air traffic controllers already are subject to similar testing requirements.
- About 90,000 railroad industry workers, including engineers, brakemen and train dispatchers.
- Nearly 200,000 urban transit workers, including subway and transit bus drivers and mechanics.
- About 200,000 merchant seamen and other mariners on commercial vessels that carry passengers or cargo. Fishermen are not covered by the rules.

Critics question whether the regulations can be enforced, at least as they pertain to independent long-distance truck drivers.

DOT officials said such independents will have to join in "testing pools" or be tested under a program operated by the company for which they do business. Officials acknowledged the rules do not require truckers to carry proof that they are participating in a testing program.

"The big question is how are you going to enforce it" in the case of the self-employed independents, said David Gordon, a spokesman for the American Trucking Associations, which represents the trucking companies.

Shuttle managers to set launch date

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Space shuttle managers will set a launch date Wednesday for a secret military mission to be flown by five astronauts aboard the space shuttle Atlantis.

The current target is Nov. 30, but Conrad Nagel, Atlantis' processing director, said Monday, "I think we're looking real hard now at Dec. 1" because of a few outstanding technical problems.

He said both dates would be submitted as options to shuttle managers who were to begin a two-day flight readiness review today.

Nagel spoke with reporters following the completion of a countdown simulation for the flight. The five astronauts who will fly the mission climbed aboard Atlantis for the final two hours to run through launch day procedures.

The exercise was termed "very successful" by Nagel, who reported the only significant problem involved communications with Mission Control Center in Houston. He said that would take one or two days to correct.

He also reported some trouble getting accustomed to a new communications system that will be used because the shuttle will be carrying a classified military payload.

The mission will be the second for the shuttle program since the Challenger explosion killed its seven crew members in January 1986. Following a 32-month standdown for major modifications, the program resumed on Sept. 29 with the successful launch of Discovery and a five-man crew.

Chairman says anti-tax plan won't work

WASHINGTON (AP) — The incoming chairman of the House Budget Committee says tax increases will be needed next year to make legally required cuts in the federal deficit, despite President-elect George Bush's anti-tax stance.

"Anybody who's dealt with budget issues knows the size of the challenge is too large to exempt any areas," Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Calif., said in an interview. "Once you say this area won't be considered, you paint yourself into a corner."

Panetta said new revenues will have to be part of any package for the required reduction of red ink by tens of billions of dollars, irregardless of Bush's oft-repeated campaign pledge "no new taxes."

Under the Gramm-Rudman balanced budget law, the deficit for the 1990 fiscal year — which begins Oct. 1 — is not to exceed $100 billion.

Last week, just two days after Bush was elected, the Reagan administration's Office of Management and Budget raised its 1990 deficit estimate to $132 billion. Panetta said he believes the shortfall will be even higher — closer to $140 billion or $150 billion.

If the deficit target is exceeded, the law requires automatic spending cuts to pare the red ink to $100 billion.

Panetta said Bush's well-known "read my lips" promise to oppose tax increases "create a potential for confrontation" between Democrats and Republicans.

"Republicans will feel a commitment was made that can't be breached in any way, and Democrats will say why should we vote for a tax increase if he has made that commitment," Panetta said.

Panetta, who takes over the budget panel when lawmakers return in January, said he believes Bush's willingness to compromise will be apparent when he submits his first budget to Congress, perhaps in February or March. President Reagan will present his final budget to Congress on Jan. 9, but lame duck presidents' final budgets can be rewritten.

"If Reagan submits his budget proposal and if it reflects the same Reagan priorities that he's submitted time and time again, that have been declared dead on arrival, and if Bush replays those same priorities, that will be a signal that we're in for more confrontation on the budget issue," Panetta said.

Mother reunited with baby, forgives woman

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — A mother reunited with her premature baby says she forgives the woman who allegedly posed as a nurse and took the 3-day-old boy from her arms at a hospital two weeks ago.

"If she took the baby because of a loss in her own life, I hope that she will have the opportunity to get some help," 32-year-old Annette Thomas-Jones said Monday, minutes after police returned her son.

"I forgive her."

Mrs. Thomas-Jones and her husband, Willie Jones, 39, showed off the child, Christopher Michael Jones, at a news conference at Doctors Hospital, where the baby was kidnapped Nov 1.

Police retrieved the infant Monday and arrested Acquinetta Rushon Smith, 32, at Ms. Smith's Hot Springs home, 50 miles away, following a tip to a hot line established after the kidnapping.

Ms. Smith, an unemployed nurses' aide with four children, was charged with kidnapping, said Hot Springs Police Lt. Bobby Thomas. An arraignment was set for today.

The infant, who was wearing a tiny white T-shirt reading "Welcome Home" at the news conference, appeared no worse for the ordeal.

"The baby obviously was well taken care of," said Dr. Terry Jefferson, a pediatrician. He said Christopher weighed 5 pounds, 6 ounces Monday, up from 4 pounds when he was kidnapped.

"She took very good care of the baby," said Mrs. Thomas-Jones.

Jefferson said he expected the child to go home today, assuming lab tests found no problems. The parents spent the night with the child at the hospital.

Mrs. Thomas-Jones, who has two daughters, said the prosecution of the kidnapper would not make the family feel any better, but that they would cooperate with authorities.

Detectives continued to question Ms. Smith late Monday but released no details on a motive.

NATION in brief

Photographer says photos not of Oswald

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A photographer says he's developed pictures that show two other men four floors above the one Lee Harvey Oswald supposedly occupied when President John F. Kennedy was shot 25 years ago.

Industrial photographer Robert Groden says he can't — and won't — draw any conclusions as to who the men might be.

"It's just enough simply to say we can be relatively sure by the shapes and color that none of them are Oswald," he said Monday night in a telephone interview from his home in Boothwyn, Delaware County.

The negatives from which the pictures were made have been available since the first investigation into Kennedy's death. But Groden said the negatives generally have been printed to show the eastern end of the building where Oswald supposedly was positioned.

11-year-old takes bus

NEW YORK (AP) — An 11-year-old boy who took a city bus on a seven-block joy ride bailed out of the moving bus before it collided head-on with an automobile, injuring the driver, officials said.

The boy, who was charged with juvenile delinquency, was treated for head and eye bruises. The name of the boy was withheld because of his age.

The youth climbed inside the 40-foot-bus at a maintenance yard in the borough of Brooklyn on Monday morning, said Bob Slovak, a spokesman for the Transit Authority.

The boy pulled the bus into the street, where it smashed into the side of a parked fire engine, crashed into the side of a parked truck, collided head-on with a car and then careened into a pillar beneath elevated subway tracks.

The 30-year-old injured driver was hospitalized in stable condition with a neck injury, officials said.

The boy, dubbed little Ralph Kramden by police, lives in a group home on Chauncey Street — the same Brooklyn street where the bus driver played by Jackie Gleason in television's "Honeymooners" lived, the New York Post reported today.

Surrogate pacts ruled OK

DETROIT (AP) — Couples unable to bear children can contract for a surrogate mother as long as the agreement does not provide money to a woman for giving up her parental rights, a judge ruled Monday.

The American Civil Liberties Union said the ruling by Wayne County Circuit Judge John Gillis was confusing but apparently means some surrogate contracts are valid in Michigan, where the nation's most active surrogacy lawyer practices.

The ACLU had sought to have the state law against pregnancy for pay overturned, but Gillis reaffirmed his Sept. 19 finding that the law was constitutional.

"This court," he wrote, "finds that the Michigan Legislature intended to prohibit all surrogate arrangements where the surrogate mother is compensated (other than actual medical expenses as a result of the pregnancy) and agrees to voluntarily relinquish her parental rights to the child.

"It is important to note that individuals may still legally enter into surrogate arrangements where there is no compensation paid to the mother (other than actual medical expenses). All other situations must be decided on a case-by-case basis."

New positions open

WASHINGTON (CNS) — More than 24,000 military jobs previously restricted to men have been opened to women by the four armed services this year, the Pentagon announced Monday.

Women have been assigned as pilots and aircrew members on Navy and Air Force reconnaissance and patrol aircraft and as construction workers in mobile construction units. The openings also have resulted in the first women Marines assigned to U.S. embassies overseas since assaults on several American diplomatic posts in the 1970s.

The new assignments for women are due to a review in personnel practices ordered by Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci in January after a report from the Task Force on Women in the Military found women were unnecessarily restricted in career opportunities by the services' interpretation of combat-exclusion rules.

Although the review triggered by the task force recommendations is complete, Armor said it "is a dynamic process."

Developer testifies he shifted stock to other people's names

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Odessa real-estate developer Louis Rochester acknowledged that he had shifted stock he owned in the old Odessa Savings Association to other people's names in a move to divest himself of control of the thrift when he was involved in profitable joint ventures with OSA.

"I had other stock," the 70-year-old Rochester testified in his own defense in federal court on Monday. "It was in other folks' names."

Rochester is being tried before a federal jury on a 25-count bank-fraud indictment, which includes the concealment of assets while he was involved in joint ventures with the thrift.

The jury, which was to hear closing arguments today, later was to begin deliberations in order to determine Rochester's guilt or innocence on the 25 counts. U.S. District Court Chief Judge Lucius D. Bunton is presiding over the trial.

"They (OSA directors) were the ones interested in joint ventures," Rochester testified. "I could have gone anywhere and gotten the (investment) money."

- Rochester told the lead prosecutor, Assistant U.S. Attorney Jim Blankinship, that a 1984 report of his holding 80,980 OSA shares was in error. Rochester said he had additional holdings in trust with others while he was an OSA stockholder and advisory director.

"It would be correct that it is inaccurate," he said of the reported figures. Rochester was ordered by banking regulators to reduce his holdings in the thrift to less than 10 percent or to less than 25 percent in the thrift's holding company before he entered into joint ventures with OSA.

Testimony indicated that Rochester-managed investments made OSA $9 million over a 10-year-period when the thrift was losing money in home-mortgage loans.

If convicted of all charges, Rochester could receive a 140-year sentence and $3.548-million in fines. The indictment alleges mail fraud, wire fraud, misapplication of bank funds, false entries, concealment of facts from the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, and racketeering.

Testimony indicated that Rochester's son, Paul, and others held Rochester's stock during the joint ventures.

"He was holding stock for you and sending you the dividends," Blankinship said of one of Rochester's nominees holding stock for him.

"I intended to give the stock to him," Rochester said.

Rochester also is charged with concealing his interest in an $8-million Arlington housing development, Stagecoach Estates, for which OSA had agreed to fund under the advisement of Rochester. OSA initially had agreed to lend $7.2 million to Stagecoach's developer, James Pruett of Arlington, and upped the loan to $8 million in 1984.

"I think it will be a good project," Rochester said under the cross-examination of Blankinship. "It's got some problems now because of the economy."

The prosecution is charging that Rochester, a millionaire Odessa developer and community leader, had a 25 percent interest in Stagecoach but neglected to tell the OSA board of his involvement, which the government says is a conflict of interest.

"They (board members) trusted you then?" asked Blankinship.

"They still do," Rochester replied.

Rochester said that he "didn't see that it was necessary" to tell the OSA board of his involvement.

"The deal was on the backside — not the front-side," Rochester explained. He said that he had secured his interest in Stagecoach after the OSA board had agreed to fund the project. "It just depends on how you look at it," said Rochester, who, in an joint venture with OSA 10 years earlier, had engineered the highly-successful University Gardens development on Odessa's east-side and in the neighborhood of The University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Rochester said OSA directors were aware that he had OSA stock in excess of that legally allowed for a shareholder to get involved in joint ventures with OSA. Former OSA directors denied they were aware of the excess holdings.

Blankinship noted that Rochester, one of 47 witnesses in the trial, holds membership in Rotary International, a fellowship of business and professional people.

Blankinship asked Rochester to list some of Rotary's guiding principles.

" 'Is it fair to all concerned?' " Rochester replied. And " 'Is it the truth?' That's the first one," he said.

Rochester denied that he had tried to "hide" from the OSA board his personal interests in Stagecoach Estates.

"I certainly didn't try to hide it — if that's what you are trying to get at," Rochester told the prosecutor.

Of his routing his OSA stock to others during the joint ventures, Rochester noted that he had turned over some stock to Luther May Jr.

"He's a banker. If he was uncomfortable with it, he should have told me," Rochester said.

Rochester accused Blankinship of "making a mountain out of a mole hill."

Of the "nominee stock" which he had entrusted to others, Rochester said he "eventually was going" to give away the stock.

"But the economy took a downturn," he said. "I might paper the walls with it now."

Jake Rhoads, ex-OSA director and semi-retired real-estate broker, said he had "no idea" that Rochester held stock in the names of others.

"When you deal with Mr. Rochester," he said, "you don't win many games. He's usually the winner."

Lawmen searching for shooting suspect

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A 27-year-old man was still being sought today on an arrest warrant issued by Peace Justice Manuel Valles in connection with the early Sunday fatal shooting of a 23-year-old southside Odessa man.

John Paul Carter, also known as Billy Ray Carter, 814 E. Odessa St., was found lying in the intersection of Woodlawn Avenue and East Odessa Street by police and fire department ambulance units dispatched to the area about 12:30 a.m. Sunday, according to Detective Sgt. Kevin Begley.

Carter was pronounced dead at the scene by Valles, who ordered an autopsy and later issued an arrest warrant for Willie D. Cleveland III on a charge of murder.

Carter was shot in the head apparently following an argument, according to Cpl. John McAhon. Investigating officers found no weapon at the scene of the shooting, he said.

Information distributed to other area law enforcement agencies described Cleveland as a black male, about 5-feet, 11-inches tall, weighing about 165 to 170 pounds, with hair cut short on the sides and back and left long on top of his head.

He was wearing a blue and white shirt, blue jeans and cowboy boots when last seen, said McAhon.

Police say Cleveland may be driving a four-door yellow Lincoln automobile and could be armed with a shotgun or handgun.

Memorial service for AIDS victims being planned

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Plans are under way in this part of the state to hold memorial services for relatives or friends who've died from AIDS, the deadly disease that has killed nearly 50,000 Americans.

The World Health Organization has declared Dec. 1 "World AIDS Day" to encourage those who have not yet done so to join the worldwide effort against the illness.

Major Ron Kerley of Odessa's Salvation Army said a meeting of the OASIS support group for people with AIDS was to be held there tonight to discuss plans for a Dec. 1 memorial service.

3 Lubbock inmates captured; One still sought

LUBBOCK (AP) — Four inmates of the Lubbock County Jail escaped Monday through a hole cut in a visiting room wall, said sheriff's deputies.

Three were back in custody Monday afternoon several hours after escaping, said sheriff's investigator Bill Ervin.

Raymond Flores, 24, charged with capital murder; Jesse Gonzalez, 31, charged with aggravated sexual assault, and David Davila, 24, charged with two counts of burglary, were apprehended at a house several blocks from the jail, said Ervin.

The other escapee, 38-year-old James Green, charged with kidnapping and robbery, was still being sought, said sheriff's deputy Virginia Tyson.

Officials said the hole had been cut from outside.

Odessa's Teen Court celebrating fifth anniversary

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The city's Teen Court program, which has been acclaimed nationwide and served as a model for similar programs started in many other areas of the United States and several foreign countries, celebrates its fifth anniversary today.

According to Teen Court Coordinator Natalie Rothstein, the occasion will be one of mixed emotions because Judge Ken G. Spencer of Crane will be leaving the program.

"We are very proud of this program," said Mrs. Rothstein, "but we are also quite saddened on this fifth birthday because Judge Spencer, who has been with the program since its inception and has been an inspiration to every youngster who has met him, will retire. The students and I will miss him greatly."

Representatives of the Odessa City Council, the Junior League of Odessa, the Ector County Independent School District, Ector County Commissioners Court and several community service agencies have been invited to attend the birthday celebration that will be held on the third floor of the courthouse at 5:30 p.m. today.

Since the program began five years ago...almost 3,900 young people have faced juries of their peers...

The Teen Court program has been a Junior League project since it first began and members continue to volunteer their time to help coordinate weekly court sessions.

The city of Odessa and ECISD have provided funding for the program and county commissioners have provided court facilities for Teen Court sessions, while various community service organization representatives have supervised the restitution hours performed by Teen Court defendants.

Since the program began five years ago, Mrs. Rothstein said, almost 3,900 young people have faced juries of their peers on various misdemeanor charges. Sentences meted out to defendants have included "more than 30,000 hours of service to the community."

Looking back over the program, Mrs. Rothstein said she is "most proud" of the thousands of teenagers who have volunteered their time to the Teen Court. Many of those volunteers have been teens who first appeared in court as defendants.

"Many of these young people now are pursuing careers in law, court reporting and law enforcement," she said. "And many young people who might have dropped out of school, have continued their studies because their parents received parent skills training through our Chemical Abuse and Education program."

The Teen Court coordinator noted that "more than 100" Teen Court programs in various stages of development throughout the world have been patterned after the Odessa program. Many cities, including Midland and Tokyo, Japan, she said, are imitating Odessa's Teen Court and hundreds of communities have sent representatives to observe actual court sessions and gather information for comparable programs in their own areas.

Wives discuss article about Challenger

HOUSTON (AP) — The wives of Challenger astronauts Mike Smith and Ellison Onizuka said they weren't surprised to read speculation that crew members may have still been alive until the cabin hit the ocean, but that an article detailing the blast was distressing.

"I think I always felt that Mike was alive because his PEAP (personal emergency air pack) was found still attached to his seat...breathed down three-fourths of the way, which was the same amount of time that it would've taken to impact," Jane Smith said Monday.

"It was in the on position and it is used only on demand, so he had to be breathing in order to receive the air. I have known in my heart always, I felt strongly that he was alive until that time."

At a Monday news conference at a hotel across the street from the Johnson Space Center, Mrs. Smith and Lorna Onizuka discussed an article that appeared in Tropic, The Miami Herald's Sunday magazine, that told of the new revelations.

Both women still live in the area. The article brought back painful memories of their loved ones, they said.

"It was very distressing to wake up and see that," Mrs. Smith said of the syndicated article, which appeared Sunday in Houston newspapers.

"It was very distressing to wake up and see that (the article). There were only a few surprises, some very distasteful revelations I felt were not in good taste, things I would not want my family to read. It's just very difficult to open up these wounds that have never mended for us."

— Jane Smith

"There were only a few surprises, some very distasteful revelations I felt were not in good taste, things I would not want my family to read. It's just very difficult to open up these wounds that have never mended for us."

Mrs. Onizuka said she hid the article from her children.

"I find it a little distressing to have gotten up Sunday morning and gotten no hints that it was going to be in the paper — to have to hurry and confiscate the paper from my children — and a little mystified as to why the article came out at all — now, forcing us as families to have to revisit the entire incident again," she said.

Tropic quoted anonymous NASA investigators who said the seven Challenger astronauts survived the blast that occurred 73 seconds after liftoff and died only when the cabin, possibly still pressurized, slammed into the Atlantic Ocean at 200 mph.

Tropic editor Tom Schroder said the article, which was submitted to the magazine a couple of months ago, "was a story that should be told."

Schroder said there were a lot of lingering questions about what happened to the astronauts, and the article provided some answers.

"It was the first time this had ever come out, and this is our job (to report the news)," he said.

Mrs. Onizuka said until reading the article she hadn't known that an astronaut's helmet containing part of a head was recovered.

Both women said they believed NASA did a good job in helping their families through the ordeal — providing them with information and sometimes protecting them.

"They supported us at every turn," Mrs. Smith said.

Added Mrs. Onizuka: "I don't know if anything was covered up, I hope not. It was an incident that nobody was prepared for...or how to handle it when it did happen."

Mrs. Onizuka also said she believes the public doesn't have to know everything about the astronauts' last moments.

"There are some things that I feel are personal," she said, citing autopsy reports, last words or graphic pictures of body parts as things she wouldn't want to be revealed to the public.

"I don't want them remembered in pieces, I don't want to remember them in pieces," she said.

Texans writing book about rumored Presley sightings

By TOM BOONE

RED OAK (AP) — Just the other day, Elvis Presley was walking out of a 7-Eleven store in Waxahachie singing "Blue Suede Shoes," and, well...wait a minute. No, he was at a garage sale in Seagoville when...but then again he's hiding out in Lancaster, or maybe he's holed up in a house behind the drugstore in Ovilla.

Or maybe, heaven forbid, he's dead.

Rumored sightings of Elvis have circulated nationwide almost since Aug. 16, 1977, the day he was pronounced dead, and have shown particular strength in recent months, with an increase in the Dallas area.

Whatever Presley's disposition, two men in the northern Ellis County community of Red Oak are having a great time listening to people who seriously and not-so-seriously believe they've witnessed the King of Rock 'n' Roll in recent weeks.

In fact, they hope to publish a book on what they uncover.

"I think more people have seen him since he died than they did when he was alive," said David Kelley, who with his real estate and home-building partner Glenn Gill thought it would be fun to compile "eyewitness reports" with the idea of finding a publisher. So they put ads in the personals column of the Dallas newspapers asking whether anyone had seen Elvis in Waxahachie about Oct. 10.

"I know it's crazy. I know it's off the wall," Kelley said. "I mean there are some real nuts out there when it comes to Elvis."

They got more than 100 responses, including some from people with voices bearing vague similarities to Presley's. They also got songs, threats, jokes and sought-after eyewitness accounts such as this one: "I saw Elvis in Seagoville at a garage sale, and he looked pretty good to me. He bought a ceramic elephant for $2.95."

"I think more people have seen him since he died than they did when he was alive...I know it's crazy. I know it's off the wall. I mean there are some real nuts out there when it comes to Elvis."

— David Kelley

A woman saw him at the Waxahachie Wal-Mart store and said, "I tell you he was the best-lookin' thing I ever seen in my life."

A Garland man said Elvis visited his home for a couple of days, and an Oak Cliff man said he talked to Elvis at some length at a cafe on Jefferson Boulevard.

"We was both at the counter drinking coffee, and he looked over at me and asked if I knew who he was," the man said in an interview. "I said I didn't think so, and I looked at him and thought he sure did look a lot like Elvis Presley. I guess I looked kind of surprised 'cause he said, 'Don't let on, now.'"

Like some of the others who left recorded messages for Kelley and Gill, the man asked that his name not be used, for fear friends might think he was crazy.

One who did not object to being identified was Johnny Harra, the most famous in a string of Elvis impersonators.

Harra told Kelley and Gill that Elvis telephoned him last year. Harra said the caller was able to answer personal questions that only Elvis could have answered, thus turning the impersonator into a believer in the real thing.

Harra's Dallas booking agent, Janet Breedlove, has been a believer for a long time, she says — ever since going to Memphis following Elvis' death and trying to find the paramedics who handled his body.

"I was told that they had just disappeared a couple of days afterward," she said.

Gill and Kelley have asked that any additional sighting information be mailed to them at P.O. Box 721, Red Oak 75154.

Gill says flatly, "I think he's alive," but Kelley is more conservative. "I'm 60-40," he says. "That's 60-40 that he's alive."

One anonymous caller apparently could put the whole matter to rest, if only he would. "I know exactly where he's hiding out. He's living in Lancaster, and he's had a small face lift," the caller said, adding, "What would be the reward, anyway?"

Passenger train service returns to College Station after 30 years

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — A train's arrival, wheels clicking and whistle sounding, marked the return of passenger service here after more than 30 years and put the word "station" back in the city's name.

Amtrak's Texas Eagle stopped briefly for ceremonies in College Station-Bryan and in Corsicana, along its 265-mile route Monday from Dallas to Houston.

About 500 people watched the train arrive at a temporary depot. The Joe Azcona Band of Dallas performed mariachi music in the lounge for the inaugural trip.

Amtrak, for the special trip, included its office car on the train as its caboose.

The car was most recently used by presidential hopeful Michael Dukakis when he campaigned in California's San Joaquin Valley, said Jim Larson, Amtrak's assistant vice president for operations.

"The car was used by three presidents," Larson said. John Kennedy, Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford all used the Amtrak car, he said.

The office car contains its own kitchen, a sleeping area and a work-conference room.

A Bryan man boarded the train at the College Station depot so he could get a look inside.

"Before I knew it, the thing started moving," said the man, who did not want to be identified. He rode to Houston on the train, then returned on the bus provided by Brazos Transit to take some of Amtrak's guests back to College Station.

Passenger service for the public begins today. With the new service, passengers may travel round trip to St. Louis, Mo., or Chicago for $149. Round trip tickets to Dallas are $26 and to Houston, $15.

Many who toured the sleek, silver Texas Eagle in its inaugural run were reminded of earlier train-travel experiences.

"I think it's great," said J.E. Loupot, a bookstore owner who remembered arriving in College Station in 1928 as a Texas A&M University freshman from Dallas.

"We've been looking forward to it for a long time," said Loupot, one of more than 100 Bryan-College Station residents who took the train's inaugural ride. "They'll (A&M students) use it, too."

Honey Dowdy, executive director of the Caldwell Chamber of Commerce, said Monday's train ride was an experience she would talk about for years.

"I rode the Texas Chief (a train from Houston to Waco) when I was a little girl," she said. "And I talked about it for 10 years.

"This is another great impression in my life."

AIDS

Likely to be included in the plans is a localization of the nationwide NAMES project in which people fashion quilt panels embroidered with the name of a friend or relative who has died from AIDS.

The panels are then sent to San Francisco, headquarters of the NAMES project, and added to the huge NAMES quilt that was recently unveiled in Washington, D.C.

In Abilene, the Big Country Support Group will hold an interfaith memorial service at Aldersgate United Methodist Church in Abilene for those who have died from AIDS.

Rev. Ed Paul, pastor of Abilene's Metropolitan Community Church, said today quilt panels designed by people from the Abilene area also will be displayed.

According to Paul, more than 20 people have died from AIDS in the Big Country area.

In West Texas, 29 known deaths have resulted from the fatal disease.

According to the World Health Organization, the memorial day is being held "to forge a spirit of compassion, understanding and tolerance by talking about AIDS, and a time to encourage those who have not yet done so, to join the worldwide effort against AIDS."

Eight chemicals hazardous

Although 65,000 commercial compounds — some of them proven carcinogens — enter the environment each year, only eight chemicals are listed as hazardous and regulated at their source by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, according to National Geographic.

Carpenter gets married on work break

HOUSTON (AP) — Johnny Hamblen and Kathryn Rogers chose to tie the knot during an unconventional wedding ceremony at the city's convention center.

The couple exchanged vows Monday while work-cap and blue-jean clad guests watched, some of whom were leaning on ladders, eating sandwiches and sipping sodas during the lunchtime ceremony.

Hamblen, a union carpenter in the midst of setting up a three-day pool and spa convention at the George R. Brown Convention Center in downtown Houston, snuck away from work shortly before noon to slip out of his jeans and into a black suit with a boutonniere.

While he paced, his bride was in a convention restroom changing into a tea-length, white, ruffled dress with pearls. Both are 30.

Moments later, to the accompaniment of buzz saws and hammers, several friends sang "Here Comes the Bride," while a trembling Ms. Rogers walked through construction rubble to meet a tearful Hamblen at a makeshift altar.

Hamblen said it was the only way he could fit a wedding into his schedule.

After the 10-minute ceremony, the couple toasted their vows with silver goblets brimming with 7Up.

The various occupational fields will be presented, by persons from those areas, in thirty minute sessions.

A slightly altered class schedule will follow this special event. The schedule for November 17 is:

9:50 a.m.: second session;

10:25 a.m.: third session;

Body indentified as Tom Green jail escapee

MIDWEST CITY, Okla. (AP) — Midwest City police are investigating the shooting death of a Tom Green County, Texas, jail escapee whose body was found late Monday in a local residence.

Police say the body apparently had been in the house in the Oklahoma City suburb since about Nov. 6.

Police said they were alerted to the death Monday by the Jackson County Illinois sheriff's office after a woman told that agency she had witnessed the murder on Nov. 6. Midwest City police said they were withholding identification of the victim, pending notification of relatives.

But a Tom Green County, Texas, sheriff's office spokesman identified the dead man as David Myers, 40.

Myers was one of three men who escaped Oct. 20 from the Tom Green County Jail in San Angelo, Texas.

Police said the other two escapees and two women, one a juvenile, were arrested in Carbondale, Ill., Wednesday after a chase that ended when the escapees' vehicle collided with a police car.

Carbondale police identified the escapees as Michael Ray Penny, 19, who according to Tom Green County deputy sheriff Ken Flemming, is wanted in that county for escaping while awaiting trial on charges of forgery, unlawful possession of a weapon and burglary, and Harold Nicholas Copelin, 19, who was awaiting transfer to a state prison to serve a 25-year sentence after being convicted of aggravated assault and escape.

Carbondale police said they also arrested a 15-year-old girl, who was not identified because of her age, and Ceceilia Walker, 23, both of San Angelo, Texas.

Carbondale police said the four are being held for allegedly being in possession of stolen property.

Carbondale police said Myers traveled with the others as far as Oklahoma, and his whereabouts were not known.

Midwest City police say the shooting apparently occurred after the woman complained to the other two men that the third escapee allegedly tried to sexually assault her.

Fashions are for 'formalities'

Elegant attire for men too

By CATHY CRYER-ASHER
Copley News Service

Stand corrected if "fashions for formal occasions" brings to mind only ornate bridal gowns, flowing evening gowns and fancy prom dresses.

Let there be no mistake.

Today, formal wear includes his attire as well as hers.

And his is giving hers a run for the attention in styling, design, detailing, fabrication, color and variety.

This year, a gentleman has many options from which to choose the perfect image for any formal occasion, be it his first or last prom, a friend's wedding or his own, or that all-important black-tie business affair.

Jackets feature stand-up or fold-down collars with shawl shaping, notch or peak lapels. A man likes either the cut and feel of a dinner jacket or the full dress approach of a cutaway complete with tails. Double-breasted tuxedos have gained popularity and add an elegant, Continental statement to formal wear.

Cotton, silk or pique shirts are best in white or ivory and are styled most often with wing or lay-down collars. Most feature pleated fronts for a more tailored look than once offered by the now passe (often unavailable) ruffled treatment.

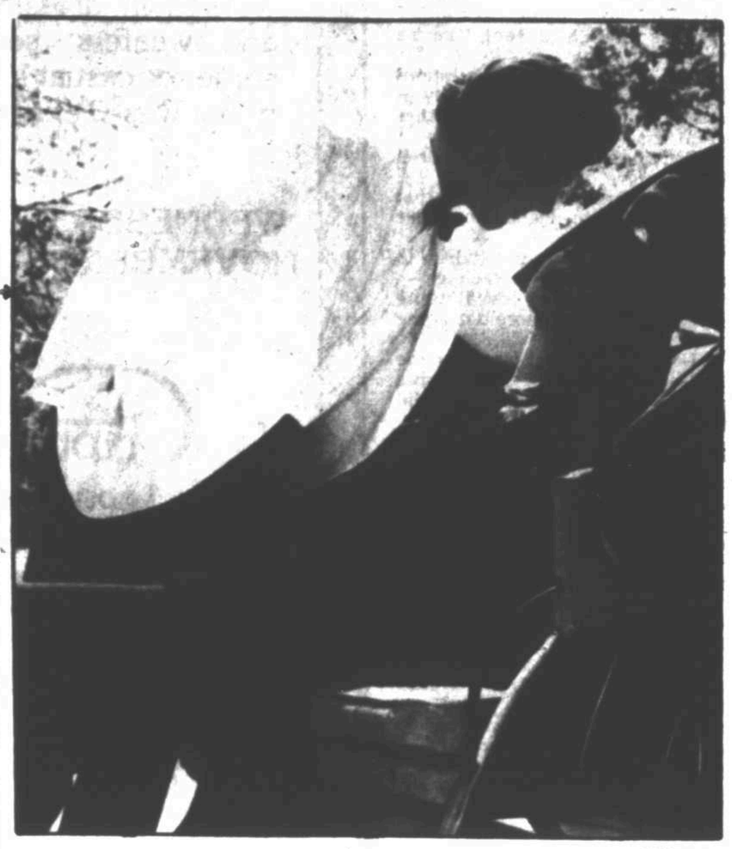

Ties knotted into butterfly- or diamond-shaped bows coordinate with cummerbunds or vests. (If a pocket square is used, in formal wear as in business attire, let it coordinate only. Do not match it to tie or cummerbund. Too much of a good thing, you know.)

These accessories heighten a sedate elegance or permit a bright splash of personality in solid or printed silk, satin, pique or wool. Ascots add an entirely different dimension to his overall look with luscious fabrications and colors.

Solids or patterned slacks finally offer the comfort of pleats as deep as any on sport slacks "the gentleman" wears out for popcorn and beer with "the boys."

Fabrications for the suit itself range from pure silk and wool to rayons, cottons, linens and blends of any of the above. Though most are of a solid color, the fabric may be woven with a tone-on-tone pattern of stripes, herringbone or even plaids to add texture and interest.

With this vast array of men's formal fashion choices, milady must understand she no longer has the corner on the market of designers' attention. Her escort has finally captured the creativity and flare men's fashion designers previously reserved for leisure wear.

This elegant white peak lapel dinner jacket is from the After Six Classic Collection.

Pierre Cardin, Christian Dior, Bill Blass, Robert Stock and Ceceilia Metheny are among big-name designers putting their stamp on the formal occasions of the world today.

One of the most innovative new looks is a young and spirited stand-up collar jacket, "Ce Soir," by Pierre Cardin. The satin collar sweeps to down-turned, flaring notch lapels. Out-of-the-ordinary accessories further add to the newness of the look.

For instance, the stand-up collar jacket in white wool could be worn over a red silk vest and tie by Lord West. Change the look entirely by choosing the jacket in black wool to be worn over Cardin's diagonally pleated wing collar shirt with a black, eight-pleat cummerbund and diamond-shaped tie. For extra dash, add a white scarf around the collar.

According to After Six Formals, the dinner jacket will be an "important bridge this season that can take a man from an afternoon cocktail party to a romantic candlelight dinner."

The choice between a shawl-collared jacket and one with a peak lapel is simply a matter of personal preference. The shawl collar is a more traditional look, while the peak lapel represents a younger, more European influence.

Traditionally, all tuxedos had shawl or peak lapels, and only later were notched lapels approved for the formal scene.

"Elegant simplicity is the key to the well-dressed man's formal look this spring," according to After Six.

Again this season, reminiscent of the 1940s, the broader shoulder line and slimmer waistline are in vogue.

At Gingiss Formalwear tails have made a comeback as the most popular style this season. Most often chosen in gray or white, Christian Dior's design is the favorite, according to Michelle Garcia, Gingiss employee.

Peach and pink accessories are hot for this year's proms, she said. Most young escorts are opting for the wing-tip shirt with pleated front detailing.

Tailcoats make fashionable comeback

Copley News Service

Pierre Lorillard IV, eccentric owner of world-renowned Lorillard Tobacco about 100 years ago, would be surprised to know tailcoats have made a comeback this season.

He and his son, Grizzy Lorillard, presented men with an option to tails for formal occasions 102 years ago at a bash in the Tuxedo Park Club in New York.

Grizzy burst in on the formal Autumn Ball modeling an alternate to the tailcoat his father designed for such occasions. Men, they decided, ought to be allowed the choice to wear something less formal and more comfortable than tails.

Pierre's creation was designed after the scarlet coat worn by fox hunters in riding to the hounds.

Indeed, Grizzy's new dress coat without tails could hardly be ignored when done up in scarlet satin!

The day after the ball, from which the new style took its name, a fashion columnist wrote:

"At the Tuxedo Club Ball, young Griswold Lorillard appeared in a tailless dress coat and waistcoat of scarlet satin, looking for all the world like a royal footman. There were several others of the abbreviated coats worn, which suggested to the onlookers that the boys ought to have been put in straitjackets long ago."

Despite the initial shock, the more comfortable formal style became an immediate success with the men of the era. Those first designs had either peak lapels or shawl collars.

Throughout 1986, the Men's Fashion Association sponsored special events honoring the 100th birthday of the tuxedo.

During those celebrations, Robert Beaty, president of the American Formalwear Association, noted that the tux had "lasted 100 years and it will last another 100 easily. It molds and changes with the times."

More and more men are choosing to own a tuxedo rather than renting one, he said. "They want to own their own tuxedo when they've reached a level of success in their life. There are more and more frequent occasions for use of a tux today because people are dressing up more."

The cost of a tux when it first became available in ready-to-wear in 1924 was $16, he said. "It put formal wear within the reach of the average workingman — a man who, thanks to Hollywood's silver screen going black tie, had discovered the classic elegance of dressing up."

The cost of a tuxedo today begins at about $165 and goes up according to fabric, design, designer and retailer's markup. Though more men are buying their formal wear, it still is more common to rent a tuxedo at a cost of from $50 to $90.

"The mood today is one of elegance," Beaty said. "Men are not fearful to show they've accomplished what they set out to and they're having a good time."

At the recent Men's Fashion Association Press Preview of Spring and Summer Fashions in Chicago, designers, retailers and models alike demonstrated the wide range of styles covered by "formal wear." The solid black tux was confidently worn by many, with subtle styling differentiations and variations in accessories.

But there also were designers wearing white and black fur dinner jackets; tuxedos made of jogging suit fleece; and fully cut, double-breasted jackets over baggy, deeply pleated trousers, worn with neither bow tie nor ascot, but rather a long tie in colorful, geometric design.

During the same preview in Dallas two years ago, experts in the industry celebrated the centennial of the tuxedo with interpretations in brocades, metallics and leathers and ties made of strings, paper clips and beads!

And why not? Grizzy and his father took that experimental chance 100 years ago. Neither creativity nor romance has died since then.

In fact, the American Formalwear Association recommends trying a tuxedo for "an escape, the fulfillment of a fantasy — the dream of being a star for the night."

So, gentlemen, give in to today's romanticism. Step out in a tuxedo and step into the spotlight ... not just as the escort to your date's strapless gown, ruffles, bows or crinolines ... but because you and your own formal wear deserve it.

Calvin Klein presents styles for spring '89

By LESLIE WATTS
Hearst News Service

NEW YORK — The Calvin Klein look for spring '89 is as clean-lined as they come.

Except for some brass buttons and a few CK monograms on sports wear, there is virtually no decoration, only luxurious fabrics in classy uncolors. In the lighter colors especially, it's a "creme Chantilly" look — rich and elegant.

The 45-year-old designer, who has been quoted as saying, "I like clothes that slide when the body moves," indulged this like. These clothes don't just slide — they slither and shimmer and slink.

The first designs on the runway were swimsuits. Clean and spare in navy, gun-metal, champagne, bronze and silver, the suits featured one-and two-piece styles in several different designs, including halters and tank tops. One two-piece style had a slightly raised waist, bringing the trunk portion up to end just under the rib cage.

Elegant daytime wear had no stop-the-presses surprises, although the calm colors and smooth lines were newsworthy in a season that so far has established much of its reputation on the bold use of color.

Silk georgette and crepe de chine blouses, cashmere sweaters and almost sheer wool crepe, linen and washed-silk jackets, pants and skirts were often presented in monochromatic combinations, further enhancing the rich look.

Many designs and color combinations were obviously nautical in inspiration. Sailor pants featured deep waist bands and twin rows of brass buttons that ran sailor-style down over each hip bone. This style would be repeated in pants and skirts in several variations and colors throughout the show.

In jackets, there were blazer styles, riding jackets, shawl collars and even elasticized-waist jackets. Blouses were full-cut in several designs, including a sailor style, and skirts were usually snug over the hips and derriere and hit well above the knee.

Colors initially included a cream referred to in Klein-ese as manila — known elsewhere as vanilla — plus navy and stone. As the show progressed, the spectrum branched out into earth tones of khaki, adobe and clay.

Klein's evening wear finale shone with gold and silver. Hemlines were either short-short or almost to the floor, and both looked equally sexy. The tops of the evening dresses were cut very low, and the backs were virtually non-existent, except for shoulder straps and tiny strips of fabric that showed at the sides.

DEAR ABBY

Memories of childhood incest torment woman

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to you because I can't tell this to anyone else.

I am carrying a terrible load of guilt from my past that I can't forgive myself for, and I can't forget. I committed incest with my brother when I was 11 years old and he was only 3. This happened only once, but I can't get it out of my mind. I am 50 years old and he is 42, and I don't know whether he remembers it or not. I am too ashamed even to ask his forgiveness. We do not live close to each other. I live in the Midwest and he lives in California. He is happily married with a nice family.

Without making this a book, I'll try to fill you in on some of the details. Our mother was sick much of the time when we were growing up. She was hospitalized several times for what they called "nervous breakdowns." Our father was a devoted husband and a loving father. Both parents are gone now.

I have been married to a recovering alcoholic for 30 years. He is in A.A. and I am in Al-Anon — that's probaby what brought all this to the surface. In trying to work the 12-step program, this guilt keeps coming up, and I don't know what to do with it.

Please help me, Abby. Most of the people who know me think I'm a nice person. Writing this has been one of the hardest things I've ever had to do. If you think printing my letter will help someone else, you may, but please, do not mention where it came from. — A TROUBLED WOMAN

DEAR TROUBLED: You are a nice person, and you have absolutely no reason to feel any guilt or shame. You did not commit "incest," my dear lady! You were a curious 11-year-old girl who went on a fact-finding expedition and did some preadolescent "exploring." Most children are curious about the opposite sex, and you merely satisfied your natural curiosity.

In all probability, your brother has no memory of this incident. If he has, he has probably dismissed it as a childhood game. Almost all children have played "doctor," or a game of "You show me yours and I'll show you mine." Believe me, it is nothing to worry about, so put it out of your mind and don't give it another thought.

If you aren't able to unload the unearned guilt, please see a professional counselor.

DEAR ABBY: My son was recently married. I am a widow struggling to make ends meet, so I was not able to help finance the wedding.

I just saw the wedding announcement about to be mailed. It says, "The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Smith" (made-up name), but there is no mention of my name as the mother of the groom.

My son asked his mother-in-law why my name was not mentioned. She told him that I had not contributed anything toward the wedding.

Is this proper etiquette? — INVISIBLE MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Your name should have been mentioned as the mother of the groom. You made a very important contribution to the wedding — the groom, without whom there would not have been a wedding.

DEAR ABBY: Please help me. My mother loves to sew, and she has enough fabric stored in her house to open a fabric store. She cannot resist a bargain. She could sew 24 hours a day for the next 100 years and not run out of fabric. She has a three-bedroom home, but sleeps on the living room couch because every bed in the house is piled high with fabric. Her attic is full, there is fabric behind the couch and in bags in the basement!

The house she lives in is owned by her elderly mother who also lives there. Two years ago, Grandma became ill, so Mom had to set up a bedroom for her in the dining room. I went over there last week and I was shocked. Now they have cockroaches! Grandma says they crawl on her while she is sleeping. (I saw them crawling around the laundry room.) Mom used to have an exterminator come regularly, but he doesn't come anymore. I think he told Mom there was nothing he could do until she cleaned up the mess. Abby, I've tried to help her clean up; I've built shelves in every room for her to store things on, and I've tried to reason with her to stop buying things she doesn't need, but she doesn't listen.

I can't stand seeing Grandma living like this. I don't have room to take her in myself, and I couldn't care for her during the day because I work. My sister now cares for Grandma during the day and gets her on the van for dialysis three times a week. Abby, you are our last resort! BUGGED IN ALLENTOWN, PA.

DEAR BUGGED: Your mother's compulsive buying is bad enough, but nonchalantly living in a roach-infested house could indicate a more serious problem. Please consider having your mother physically and psychiatrically examined — for her sake as well as Grandma's.

Meanwhile, telephone your local fire department and/or department of public health, tell them your problem and ask them to send an inspector over to "investigate" the suspected violations of safety and health. They will act on it and give your mother a warning and citation and a short period of time to clean up her act.

DEAR ABBY: As a divorced parent who was given joint custody of two children, I could write a book about what to do and what not to do, but I'll condense it:

First, the Do's:

- Do allow your child to ask questions about your divorce. It's unfair to make the child feel like an outsider.
- Do answer all their questions about your divorce as truthfully as possible, without making the other parent the "heavy."
- Do remember that your children need the love of both parents.
- Do assure your children that they are not to blame for your divorce.
- Do encourage your children to talk freely about their feelings — even if it's painful to you. Bottling up emotions is even more damaging to children.
- Do have a special place for the child's toys and belongings during visiting time. It will make the child feel more at home.

Now, the Don'ts:

- Don't bad-mouth the other parent to your child, or to anyone else in the presence of your child.
- Don't send messages to the other parent through the children.
- Don't ask children to keep secrets from your ex-spouse.
- Don't try to pump the children for information about your ex-spouse.
- Don't be overly generous (or less strict) in an effort to win your child's approval.

Don't tell your children what to think or feel. They are entitled to their own thoughts and feelings.

'Power' look returns to men's suits

Hearst News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — If Cary Grant and Walter Pidgeon owed their reputations for style to anything other than their innate suavity, the debt would surely be to the double-breasted suit.

Once again, a suit with two vertical rows of buttons and a generous, swooping lapel carries that extra soupcon of swagger, that pinch of panache, that tell the onlooker that here's a man with cachet — or at least cash.

"There's no question that the double-breasted suit has arrived," says New York designer Bill Blass, whose double-breasted business is up about 10 percent. "When men got used to double-breasted blazers they found the comfort of the double-breasted suit. It gives a sense of authority."

"In my mind, the double-breasted suit never left," says Savile Row tailor Edward Sexton, here on a trip from London. Double-breasted suits account for 70 percent of his business. But its surging popularity, he says, signals a return to serious dressing.

"It's really what's happening," says Ray Wills, fashion director for menswear at Macy's California. "It's such a classic look." Wills believes the double-breasted suit (more expensive than the single-breasted because more fabric is used) has more style, and credits its return to a general and pervasive mood of elegance. "It's the movie star quality."

Wills says the resurgence was started by Italian designers in the late 1970s and has become a full-blown trend.

"It's definitely back," says Linda Hopler, men's fashion director at Saks' headquarters in New York. Double-breasted suits make up 25 to 30 percent of Saks' current sales volume in men's clothing, a 15 percent increase over last year, she says.

The double-breasted suit historically has been regarded as a dressy look; some even say conservative. But today, retailers are divided on its aura.

At Macy's, for example, Wills shows the suits with mock turtlenecks as well as with pin-striped shirts and ties.

But Saks' Hopler says the double-breasted look signals a return to "serious" dressing for the older, more mature man.

Neiman Marcus' David Cardoza disagrees. "Though it's a dressier look, more young people buy it. It has a power look and you can wear it dressy with a tie or not so dressy without one."

Billy Bragman, who owns the San Francisco men's store BillyBlue, says the double-breasted is a classic — but not conservative — look. He is carrying 40 percent more double-breasted suits this season than last fall.

"The traditional guy has loosened up some," says Bragman. "Now, men are wearing suits in a sack fit with oversized shoulder, or with drape — a very unfitted look. It's not like the traditional buttoned-up suit of five years ago. It's not body conscious."

However the argument is settled, the fact remains that the double-breasted suit has a more elegant appeal than the single-breasted.

"It's a sexy look," says Bragman. "It makes a man look hunky."

The double-breasted suit is warmer because it has an extra layer of fabric. It will also carry a broader stripe and a plushier fabric. But the most distinct advantage is that it "hides a multitude of sins," says Wills. "It's a complete cover, like a shield. It keeps everything intact and neat."

Pampering priceless pleasure

By BARBARA DeWITT
Copley News Service

CNS Graphic

"I pamper myself whenever I can. I deserve it," ad agency executive Barbara Storm says after her massage at a salon.

"I'm starting to think of facials and massages as a necessity instead of a luxury, because I get a lot of stress headaches," adds her friend and co-worker, Kathy Ondrus, treating herself to a facial.

There's a lot more going on in beauty salons these days than a shampoo and cut. Ordinary women, not just Hollywood wives, have begun to enjoy personal pampering services with the attitude that while the services may be expensive (facials start at $35), they're worth it.

As stress in a competitive workplace and larger incomes reach more working women, services such as European facials (deep-pore cleansing), jade masks (minerals are supposed to be healing) and aromatherapy massages (herbs, fruits and exotic oils) are fast becoming routine beauty treatments.

"Fifteen years ago we had no facialists. Pedicures and custom makeup were just beginning to be popular. Then acrylic nails were the rage," says Darlene Sigworth, owner of Salon 4001 in Torrance, Calif., "and now there seems to be a real need to be touched."

WHILE SOME clients believe a facial is as relaxing as a glass of wine after a hard day at work, interior decorator Hana Zatloukal of West Los Angeles says she often thinks of it as an alternative to a new blouse.

"The blouse will be out of fashion in six months, but if I take care of my face, it will look good forever," she explains while getting her hair permed.

Vera Brown, the Tarzana skincare expert to stars such as Jane Seymour and Heather Locklear, has seen business increase to the point that she recently added a second Vera's Retreat location in Bel-Air.

"Skin care is giving something back to yourself," explains Brown. "A facial cleanses the skin, gives you an inner glow and has a positive effect on the entire nervous system."

At DuBunne salon in Torrance, owners Duke and Mickey Schneider also have noticed an increased interest in skin-care services.

"While we once had to promote our facials and other services, now ladies call us saying, 'I want to feel better,'" says Mickey Schneider, who adds that some of her clients are in their early 20s, and she wonders how they can afford the services.

Besides facials and body massages, DuBunne also offers the once-again trendy foot reflexology. While some salons offer it as a separate service, this salon includes it with pedicures.

More than just a foot massage, foot reflexology is based on ancient Egyptian and Oriental methods of healing and is founded on the belief that there are nerve endings in the foot (and hand) connected to every other part of the body. By manipulating the appropriate nerve ending, a therapist theoretically can improve the well-being of that body part. Other services for the hands and feet are paraffin treatments, a method of softening the skin with hot wax. The appendage is dipped in the wax and then wrapped in mitts or socks, which sometimes are electrically heated.

WHILE MUD baths and oatmeal masks have become passe, one of the newest luxury services for the mind and body is the $500 deep herbal peel that removes the upper layer of skin, lessens lines and stimulates blood flow, according to esthetician Luisa Sladek of the Lauren Chandler skin care salon located in Salon 4001.

And in the $60 category the fashionable monthly must-haves are exotic masks of ginseng and mint, strawberries and papaya and healing gemstone treatments of pulverized jade, gold and pearl, given in conjuction with a deep pore-cleansing facial. While the early '80s were years of image make-overs and color charting, the decade appears to be ending with an interest in old-fashioned skin care, something Europeans have practiced for generations.

Beauty and fashion make-overs, popularized on television talk shows, have been replaced by stress therapy and full days of personal services. Clients now come to the salon to be catered to, not made over, and it often begins with a glass of champagne, a gourmet meal and soothing music enhanced by the sounds of gently crashing waves.

Don't want to go back to the office with fruit on your face? Some full-service salons offer private showers and complimentary makeup applications.

AT WIT'S END

For reflecting reality, toys really 'R Us'

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

If you want to know where the country is headed, look to the toy departments.

For years, they have been the barometer for every new trend or direction taking place. They have been forerunners of the space program, technology and the women's revolution. Military toys have reflected our enemies and sex education brought us anatomically correct dolls. And I'll bet there isn't one of you who can't remember where you were and what you were doing the day you discovered Barbie "went corporate."

That's why I nearly fell out of my chair the other day when I was reading a toy catalog that featured a laundry and cleaning center for glamorous fashion dolls to care for their pretty clothing.

I'm serious. There was this doll with 30 pounds of flaxen hair and a body that defied gravity standing in front of an ironing board. Behind her was a washer, a vacuum cleaner that really worked, an iron that glowed when plugged into the socket, a bucket and pretend soap. (Batteries and skinny laundress not included.)

What kind of message is the toy industry sending out here? Am I to believe that young women are going to learn how to plug in an iron? Is polyester becoming an endangered species? Is it possible Barbie will go domestic on us? Barbie, who wears underwear with a "Dry Clean Only" label in them? Or are they trying to lure young people back to the utility room with designer appliances? I don't know what to think.

There's a theory that toys shape your children's lives. I believe it. When they came out with a baby doll that wet, burped, crawled, talked and whined, the birth rate ultimately declined. Those little play kitchens stocked with ovens to be cleaned, little boxes of mixes to be baked and tiny pans that had to be washed produced a generation of fast-food junkies. And face it, dollhouses that involved moving the furniture around all day drove yesterday's children to studio apartments.

It's an interesting concept, but frankly, in a world where Barbie changes heads to change the color of her hair, I don't think it will fly. It has taken women 200 years to get out of the utility room, and a pink bucket with a matching iron isn't going to get them back.

Nowadays, when you iron your husband's shirt, you ask if he plans to take his jacket off. Hand-washables go out of style waiting to be laundered. When you ask your kid to drop off his muddy gym shoes in the utility room, he asks, "Where is it?"

In the same catalog, I noticed there was a little boy in a red turbo Lamborghini. Put him in front of the ironing board and see how it plays.

Rules reviewed

Associated Press

Ladies Home Journal reviews the ground rules for applying lipstick to insure that it stays on the lips and off fingers, files, phones and everything a woman touches.

First, prime tips with foundation such as a lip-fix product or a same-shade-as-lipstick pencil. Next, choose matte lipsticks labeled as "long-lasting" or "featherproof." Blot lips with a single sheet of tissue after applying color, and then brush a translucent powder onto the lips through a tissue.

U.S. Education Secretary Lauro Cavazos, left, listens as National Geograhic President Gilbert Grosvenor addresses a class at Thomas Jefferson High School in Dallas Monday. Cavazos and Grosvenor visited the school as part of Geography Awareness Week.

Cavazos tells students it's important to know world in which they live

DALLAS (AP) — Geography Awareness Week 1988 has begun with a personal endorsement from Education Secretary Lauro Cavazos and Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the National Geographic Society.

"We are all neighbors...a global village," Grosvenor told a ninth-grade class at Thomas Jefferson High School.

Cavazos agreed, telling the students Monday, "We cannot live in a world we do not know."

Cavazos, president of Texas Tech until he accepted President Reagan's nomination in August to be education secretary, stressed the interdependency of people. There is more to geography than just knowing where a country is located on a map, Cavazos said.

Grosvenor, whose organization is based in Washington, D.C., illustrated the idea by explaining how a pencil is made. He traced the path by which cedar, graphite, latex, copper, zinc and other components are obtained from different parts of the world.

During the discussion, Grosvenor asked the 27 students to find various countries on inflatable globes. "Can you find Vancouver?" he asked.

In rapid succession, the students hunted for Taiwan, Alaska, Sri Lanka, Japan, Liberia, the Mississippi Delta, Mexico, Equatorial African countries, the Soviet Union, Bolivia, Greece, Indonesia and Malaysia.

Cavazos, at ease in the classroom, walked around to verify the students had found the right place.

Grosvenor ended his talk by telling the students that U.S. citizens must know geography if the United States is going to engage in trade with other nations.

"We must know who they are, where they live and we must know what their needs are," he said.

Cavazos then explained that interdependency is not only among countries.

"I am dependent on you, and you are dependent on me," he said.

The education secretary urged the students to fulfill their educational potential, saying, "I am poor," if they don't.

"You don't know how lucky you are to be here today in this classroom," he concluded.

When the students were invited to ask questions, Hector Diaz asked what waiting reporters wanted to know — would Cavazos remain on the cabinet in the Bush administration?

The education secretary laughed and said his commitment to the Reagan administration ends at noon, Jan. 20.

"I don't look beyond that time," Cavazos said.

Cavazos was nominated on Aug. 9 to become education secretary and was sworn in on Sept. 20 after confirmation by the Senate.

He is the first Hispanic to serve on a president's cabinet.

Diaz, 14, said after class that he hopes Cavazos will remain in office.

"I think he's a nice man," Diaz said.

Cavazos and Grosvenor later addressed an assembly of the school's 1,325-member student body, and Grosvenor presented the secretary with a copy of the National Geographic Society's new "Historical Atlas of the United States."

As its "centennial gift to the nation," the National Geographic Society is giving 35,000 copies of the atlas to schools with grades 9-12.

Upscale restaurant celebrates anniversary by serving homeless

DALLAS (AP) — A five-star restaurant celebrated its second anniversary by whipping up an upscale meal for 100 homeless people at a downtown shelter.

"We wanted to mark our anniversary in a way that really hits home," said Victor Gielisse, co-owner of Actuelle. "It's really scary to think this is happening so close to home. We were there at the shelter last week, and it gives you goose bumps to see the kids, the babies."

The gourmet fare was prepared by the restaurant's staff and served Sunday at the Downtown Dallas Family Shelter. Three waiters came in on their day off. "I didn't even have to ask," Gielisse said.

A typical dinner menu at the shelter consists of chicken-fried steak, mashed potatoes, canned corn and sheet cake.

On Sunday, the fare was more upscale: lima bean and black-eyed pea soup; green salad with basil-vinaigrette dressing; pecan- and bran-crusted boneless chicken halves; potato pancakes and praline-chocolate bread pudding. The meals would have cost about $45 each at Actuelle.

Among the grateful diners were Sylvia Allen of Miami, Fla., and her 2-year-old son DeQuan, who have lived at the shelter four days.

"The baby's father brought us here and just left us," Allen explained. The meal was "great," she said.

Death row inmate granted stay

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A Texas death row inmate scheduled to die by injection later this week for the 1976 strangulation and killing of a disabled Houston woman was granted an execution stay.

Billy Joe Woods, 41, was scheduled to be executed before dawn Friday.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals issued the stay pending the outcome of another Texas death row inmate's case to be heard by the U.S. Supreme Court, court spokesman Rick Wetzel said Monday.

Johnny Penry is challenging whether it is constitutional to execute mentally retarded inmates. The nation's high court is expected to hear the case next spring.

Woods was convicted of the Oct. 10, 1976, strangling and killing of Mabel E. Ehatt, 62. Evidence indicated Woods entered Ms. Ehatt's second-story apartment in southwest Houston, raped her and then smashed her head with a frying pan.

The victim's hair was found on his clothing, and he had her bracelet and a bottle of her pain medicine in his possession when arrested at the apartment complex by police, records show.

Ms. Ehatt suffered from cancer and was crippled.

'Goodnight Trail' patrols added

HOUSTON (AP) — A weekend accident that killed three teen-agers has prompted added patrols along the "Goodnight Trail," which hundreds of youth had adopted as a weekend party area.

Beatings, stabbings, public drunkenness and serious traffic accidents are on the rise along the North Houston route, which takes in a portion of Interstate 45, authorities said.

"We have had more major incidents, more major injuries here this year than we had in the past 20 years put together," one sheriff's deputy said during a Sunday morning patrol.

The two-car accident that caused the deaths of three teens may have been stemmed from one of the many drag races that have been common this fall, authorities said.

Goodnight Trail is a 1¼-mile road tucked behind a row of corrugated warehouses. It has long been used as a drag strip, authorities said, but danger has increased now that other youths have adopted the road as part of a wider crusing circle.

A&M research expenditures up

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Research expenditures at Texas A&M University for fiscal year 1988 are expected to exceed $245 million, a record, officials said Monday.

That means A&M could, for the first time, be among the top 10 institutions in the annual fall listings of the National Science Foundation.

Figures from the fiscal year ended Aug. 31 show an increase of approximately $26 million over 1986-87 for Texas A&M and its associated research agencies of The Texas A&M University System.

Final figures are expected to vary little from the initial tabulations when completed, university officials said.

Officials also said that the institution had risen dramatically in its volume of industry-sponsored research, moving to a national ranking of ninth in the 1986-87 fiscal year with $13.4 million. The previous year, A&M was 20th with $7.9 million.

Mauro discusses dumping law

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro said Texans need to be informed about regulations banning overboard dumping of plastic garbage that go into effect Dec. 31.

Mauro, in the Houston area Monday to speak on environmental problems at a forum, said changes to an international treaty prohibit ocean-going vessels from dumping plastic garbage at sea, in addition to restricting other waste disposal.

"We need to provide information about the new regulations to those who use the Gulf of Mexico, its bays and estuaries, the Laguna Madre and other coastal waterways,' Mauro said.

Mauro, who lobbied for passage of the treaty changes, said it will not cost much to comply with the new laws.

He said he would work with the U.S. Coast Guard to inform the public about the anti-dumping measures.

Texan charged in officer's stabbing

NEW YORK (AP) — A Duncanville, Texas man was among three people arrested in connection with a weekend incident that resulted in the stabbing of a Manhattan police officer.

The Texan was identified as Vincent Donovan, 21, of Duncanville.

The arrests came after a fracas Saturday at the Underground Discotheque in Manhattan. An off-duty New York Housing Authority police officer was wounded.

Officer Glover L. Hill III, who has been on the force since January 1983, was injured when he intervened in a scuffle between security people and the suspects, officials said.

Doctor organizes chapter of group that fights hunger

CARROLLTON (AP) — A local doctor who contends the world produces more than enough food to feed everyone has started the first area chapter of Results, a lobbying organization that wants to make third-world countries self-sufficient.

"We're flooded with food," said David Pillow, director of the emergency department at Trinity Medical Center in Carrollton. "We want Congress to know there is a group out here that is interested in non-partisan humanitarianism. We're a voice for the hungry, the homeless, the children."

Results was founded in 1979 to educate lawmakers and government figures about world hunger.

Pillow, 41, said 4 million people in the Third World die each year from dehydration alone, usually as the result of diarrhea. Yet simply adding a pinch of sugar and a pinch of salt to a liter of water increases by 25 times the body's ability to retain water.

The group's aim is to lobby for any action that helps poor people become self-sufficient. Pillow mentioned, for example, a bank in Bangladesh that granted a loan of $1 to a woman who had made her living as a beggar.

"With the dollar she bought some bangles and ribbons and began selling them door to door," said Pillow, 41. "It's amazing, but she's now self-sufficient."

Last year, Results was instrumental in the passage of the Microenterprise Act, which targeted $50 million in U.S. foreign aid for loans to the poorest of the poor.

It also played key roles in increasing aid to small farmers in developing nations and increasing the amount spent on child-nutrition and health programs in the Third World.

"For the most part we don't talk about (spending) new money," Pillow said. "We talk about redistributing the money that's already there."

Results has about 100 chapters nationwide, and there are chapters in Britain, West Germany, Australia and Canada, Pillow said. The Dallas group has five members besides Pillow: a pharmaceutical sales representative, an airline pilot, a massage therapist, a psychologist and the operator of a mission that educates low-income people.

"Our intent is to have a group in every congressional district in the Dallas area," Pillow said.

In addition to handling fire and flood claims Derington explained, "We handle water-damaged walls with dry wall and painting services, and we can refinish cabinets and replace carpet, draperies and upholstery."

"In addition, Carpet Flood Busters carries a full line of vinyl flooring, carpets and pads through our showroom in Odessa, Pinner Carpets. We even bring out samples to your home," said Derington.

Carpet Flood Busters welcomes inquiries regarding insurance claims, and is often referred to clients by claims offices. "We work with many of the best insurance companies in the area," Derington added. Free estimates are available, and a two year labor guarantee on all services is just part of the Carpet Flood Busters philosophy.

Derington said, "Many companies that undo water damage leave a bad, musty odor in the carpet because they don't completely dry out the carpet and the pad. If you need your pad replaced, we will recommend it, and can replace it for you."

Carpet Flood Busters utilizes mist cleaning because it doesn't damage carpets. Only powerful truck-mounted equipment is used, and Carpet Flood Busters uses its own electrical and water source. "All we take into the homes and businesses are our hoses," Derington said.

Carpet Flood Busters will move furniture and reset it on carpet protectors. If your furniture needs to be moved while work is being done, it will be moved to the company's warehouse, where it will be photographed for insurance claims.

Each technician is constantly reviewing and training for fire and flood restoration procedures. Films, lessons and examinations are part of the continuing review process.

Also, Carpet Flood Busters specializes in air-duct cleaning and dust and smoke damage. They actually clean the ducts instead of redistributing the dust around the duct work.

Derington reflected his own personal philosophy. "For the past 18 months, God has blessed this business with quality clientele. He's given me good people to do business with. With the state of the economy the past few years, God has enabled me and my employees to maintain a good standard of living, while at the same time provide a service to the area."

Carpet Flood Busters owner Tommy Derington will give you a quality job on flood and fire restoration, in addition to other home and business reconstructive services.

Call Carpet Flood Busters for your next cleaning, installation and repair needs. Call 697-5228 or 563-5509 for 24-hour service.

Cattleman's offers personable service, generous portions

Cattleman's Restaurant employees offer friendly service. From left are Marie Kinsey, Sweetie Jo Wallis, Maybell Fleming, Shirley Dry, J.R. Silvia, Ethel Bruton and Louise Landier.

Cattleman's Restaurant, located at 3300 N. Big Spring, boasts the "best steaks in town," and once you've tried them you're sure to agree.

"Cattleman's is the kind of place you can bring a business associate for lunch," says Bill Hinkle, owner. "Or the family for dinner."

This popular Midland restaurant has a tradition of personable service and generous portions that keep you coming back for more.

Along with steaks, chicken and seafood, Cattleman's clientele can enjoy homemade soup, which the staff prepares fresh twice a day.

Blueberry muffins, dinner rolls and cornbread are made from scratch every day.

And don't forget Cattleman's famous salad bar, well-known in Midland for its variety and size. Here you will find fresh items awaiting your selection. "We feel that every meal should start off with a fresh green salad," says Bill.

And don't forget to try Bill's beans. Bill purchases only Colorado pintos, grown on the western slope of the Rockies. They are cooked for a minimum of eight hours, for the best pot of beans you'll find in Texas.

While you enjoy your salad and await your meal, you won't want to miss sampling a delicious appetizer or two. Try the delicious onion rings or fried zucchini and set your appetite for the main course.

Although Cattleman's may boast of a fine selection of beef, chicken and seafood, Bill says the most popular choice is the six ounce filet. "The cut has no fat," he continues, "and like all of our entrees, it is prepared by the Whirl method." This special cooking process is 100 percent cholesterol free, explains Bill.

Heartier appetites will be satisfied with Cattleman's T-bone, sirloin, ribeye, club steaks, spaghetti, hamburgers or chicken fried steak.

Children are very special guests of Cattleman's, also. They will love the "Kiddie Corner" selections which are sized just for them. Cattleman's always includes red gelatin among their salad bar selections, especially for their younger customers.

If you have room for dessert, your meal will be complete with a tasty Cattleman's treat. Try some fresh apple pie, cherry cheesecake, ice cream or pecan pie.

Let Salon Unique's makeup specialist Susan Reid improve, polish your image

Makeup artist Susan Reid, of Salon Unique, will give you a total makeover that will keep you looking great this fall and winter. "Everyone is pretty in their own right," Susan said, "and I make up their face to follow what they naturally have."

Susan, who uses a realistic approach to makeup, will first decide your skin type. She will begin your makeover by cleansing your face. Then she takes your natural bone structure, hairstyle, body weight and the weight of your face in consideration. During the process of applying makeup Susan will explain each step so that, with practice, you will be able to replicate the procedures at home.

"Once you know how to apply cosmetics, you will be able to wear any color with confidence that you look your best," Susan noted. She explained that many women buy cosmetics that they seldom use, because they don't know how to apply them correctly. She uses color common sense, not colorization fashion trends. "I don't follow trends in makeup because everyone else does," Susan explained.

Susan is especially talented in the art of corrective makeup, used to cover imperfections and small flaws.

"I look at each face as a canvas," Susan said, "and I make it up like a piece of art."

"I listen very carefully to each of my clients," Susan said. "If you don't wear much makeup, I won't use much in your makeover. But I can show you how to use that small amount more effectively, for color depth. I will take the time to answer you questions concerning skin care and makeup."

A professional makeup lesson by Susan for $25.00 includes a mini-facial and a $15.00 free sample kit in a makeup bag. Special applications for parties and proms (no makeup lesson) are $10.00. She also will make up brides and their wedding parties. Call her for pricing information.

Also a talented hair styling professional, Susan is extremely knowledgeable about the hair and skin products she uses. "I cut hair to the way it grows, so you can fix it when you get home." All the products sold by Salon Unique are guaranteed 100 percent, including the full line of Sebastian cosmetics and Aveda hair products recommended by Susan. Susan also teaches classes on hair and skin care, and will speak to luncheons and groups for no charge. Just call her for information and scheduling.

"Hair and skin care should be very simple," said Susan. "And it can be if you know how to do it."

Call Susan now at Salon Unique, 697-8711, for your makeover, be it a makeup lesson or a new hair style. Salon Unique is open from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday.

Susan Reid, standing, applies makeup to Scarlette Butler, Salon Unique hairstylist. Let Susan give you a total makeover that will keep you looking polished and professional this holiday season.

Strange triumphs in 2-hole playoff

By GORDON S. WHITE Jr.
N.Y. Times News Service

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. — Curtis Strange, the United States Open champion, made history Monday with a magnificent 4-iron shot that stopped 18 inches from the pin at the beautiful 188-yard 17th hole at Pebble Beach.

The resulting tap-in birdie 2 beat Tom Kite on the second hole of a sudden-death playoff in the $5 million Nabisco Championship and made Strange the first man to win $1 million in a single year on the PGA Tour.

"I guess the first one to do it is the one everybody will talk about," Strange said. "But in a couple of years four or five guys will be doing it. It's kind of like Arnold Palmer becoming the first player to win $1 million in a career. Now there are 40 or 50 who've done it."

Actually, there are 98 million-dollar winners on the PGA Tour.

The Nabisco Championship is the richest tournament in the world, with $3 million in individual prizes — $2 million of the purse goes to charity — and is only open to the 30 top money winners of the season.

Strange's victory was worth $360,000 and made him the top money winner for the season, which, in turn, brought him a bonus of $175,000. With that $535,000, the 33-year-old Virginian reached $1,147,644 for the year, a year in which he won four times, three in playoffs.

He beat Nick Faldo of England in an 18-hole playoff to win the Open at The Country Club in Brookline, Mass., in June. He beat Greg Norman on the third hole of sudden death at the Independent Insurance Agent Open in Houston on May 1. Four weeks later Strange won the Memorial in the regulation 72 holes.

Kite won $216,000 for finishing second here and a bonus of $40,000 for a total of $256,000. He is the fifth player on the money list with $760,405.

AP picks Blue Devils No. 1

Associated Press

AP says Duke will be back. A Final Four team two of the last three seasons, the Blue Devils, who lost in to Kansas in last year's semifinals, received 33 first place votes to outdistance Georgetown for the No. 1 spot in the AP preseason college basketball poll.

The Hoyas had eight first place votes.

Duke, which last held the top ranking over the final three polls of the 1985-86 season — another in which it reached the Final Four — finished with 1,257 points from the nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters. The Hoays had 1,107 points.

Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski wasn't overly pleased at being No. 1.

"If you're ranked very high early, there's a tendency to think you've already accomplished something, and you really haven't accomplished anything," he said. "Those are just predictions. In practice settings, you have to be careful that there isn't a complacency that comes about."

Michigan, Louisville and Oklahoma — another Final Four team from last season — rounded out the Top Five in a voting that showed the quick turns of the fortunes of collegiate basketball programs.

Five teams from last season's final poll — Purdue, Kentucky, Bradley, Wyoming and Xavier, Ohio — did not even receive a vote in the preseason balloting and another, Kansas State, got just one.

Kansas, which wasn't expected to fare that well following the graduation of Danny Manning, the NBA's No. 1 draft choice and the player most responsible for the Jayhawks' title. However, a three-year probation for recruiting violations was handed down to Kansas and the Jayhawks will not defend their title in the NCAA tournament.

Nine of the teams in the preseason poll, including Georgetown, were unranked in the final poll of last season.

Temple was the top team in the final poll of last season, but the Owls, who lost to Duke in the regional finals, lost three starters from the 32-2 team that brought the school its first No. 1 ranking.

Georgetown and Louisville are the only members of the Top Ten not to have finished in the final Top Twenty of last season but Villanova, Georgia Tech, Missouri, Florida, Florida State, Ohio State and Stanford were not in that voting.

UNLV's Shark singing blues

By ROBERT MACY

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Nevada-Las Vegas basketball coach Jerry Tarkanian laments that his Runnin' Rebels can hardly be considered a candidate for best of the west, with six new faces among his top eight players.

Big West Conference coaches, ambushed by Tarkanian with frustrating consistency, tell the doleful coach to look elsewhere for sympathy.

As has been the case for most of the 1980s, UNLV is expected to remain the the best in the west again this season. Arizona, coming off a Final Four season, is considered most-likely to give UNLV a run for the honor.

Most national pre-season polls predict Tarkanian's Rebels will finish in the top 10, with rankings ranging from No. 4 to No. 9. The same polls post Pac-10 Arizona as the West's other Top 10 contender, with most rankings placing them below the Rebels.

Is Tarkanian's 1988-89 edition that good?

No way, he says.

"Six of our top eight kids are new," Tarkanian told writers at the annual Big West Conference media day last week. "I dare any writer to find any school in the last 20 years to be ranked as high as we are with six of their top eight kids being new."

Street and Smith's Basketball Yearbook puts it this way:

"Some programs don't rebuild, they reload, right? That being the case, one could say Tarkanian has crates of ammunition at his disposal."

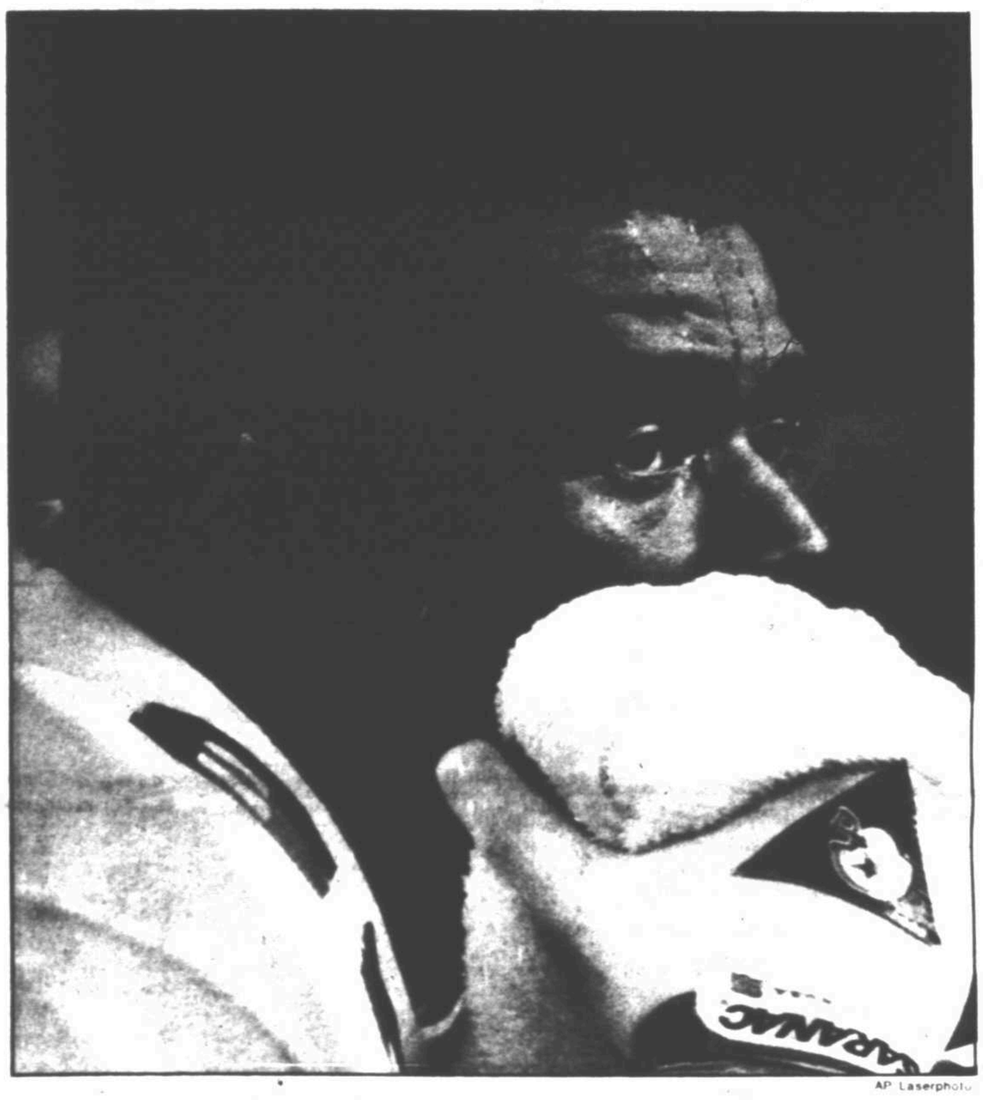

Before sending flowers to the beleagured Tarkanian, consider this:

— One of the two returning starters is Olympian Stacey Augmon.

— Newcomers David Butler and Moses Scurry were All-Americans last year at Mount San Jacinto Junior College in Pasadena, Texas while forward George Ackles was a pre-season All-American out of Garden City (Kan.) Junior College.

— And newcomer Greg Anthony has been hailed by Tarkanian as the point guard he'd most like to build a new team around.

Coach Lute Olson's Arizona Wildcats are seen as the team most likely to derail the Rebels for that honor.

Bills win, 31-6, to maintain pace

By DAVE GOLDBERG

MIAMI (AP) — Ronnie Harmon ran for one touchdown and caught a 16-yard pass from Jim Kelly for another and Robb Riddick had two 1-yard scoring runs as the Buffalo Bills maintained the NFL's best record by beating Miami 31-6 Monday night.

It was the sixth straight win for the Bills, 10-1, who maintained their lead of four games over New England and Indianapolis in the AFC East with five games to go.

The Bills, who intercepted Dan Marino three times, scored on their first possession of the game. They led 10-6 at halftime and, relying mainly on a defense led by Bruce Smith, Cornelius Bennett and Art Still that held Miami to just 33 yards rushing, the Bills handed the Dolphins their worst since 1970.

Then they put the game away with two touchdowns 2½ minutes apart in the third quarter.

The first score, with 5:33 left in the period, came on Riddick's 1-yard plunge at the end of an 80-yard drive aided by two Miami penalties. The second was a 6-yard run by Harmon set up by Bennett's interception and 30-yard return of a Marino pass on Miami's first play after the kickoff.

Riddick added his second TD 3:16 into the second quarter following a nine-play, 54-yard drive set up by free safety Mark Kelso's interception and 25-yard return. It was the third straight game in which Kelso had an interception and gave him seven for the season, second in the NFL.

The Bills' 10-1 record represents their best start since 1964 and the six-game winning streak is their longest since 1974. They lead 8-3 Cincinnati by two games in the race for the home-field advantage in the AFC playoffs.

Miami, meanwhile, fell to 5-6, leaving it behind six 6-5 teams and the 5-5-1 New York Jets in the bid for an AFC wild-card spot.

Top-rung Cards look to backup

By WALTER BERRY

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — The Phoenix Cardinals find themselves tied atop the NFC East standings at this late stage of a season for the first time since 1975.

Now, they're relying on backup quarterback Cliff Stoudt to help them stay there and make the playoffs for the first time since 1982 when the NFL franchise was in St. Louis.

Stoudt, a 10-year pro, will start his first game in three years when the Cardinals (7-4) play Sunday at Houston.

He was forced into the lineup after two-time Pro Bowler Neil Lomax suffered a partially torn medial collateral ligament in his left knee during last Sunday's 24-17 win over the New York Giants, who now share first place with Phoenix.

"IF IT'S my turn, I've got to prepare for it. That's what being a backup is all about," Stoudt said. "I'll get in a lot of practice this week and try to get ready. I feel bad for Neil. We're a better team when he's healthy. But it's my job to pick it up from here and keep the team going."

"Cliff has shown he can come in and play. He's a veteran," Lomax said. "I know Cliff's going to do the best job he can."

The 6-foot-4 Stoudt, subbing for Terry Bradshaw in 1983, led the Pittsburgh Steelers to the AFC Central title by throwing for 2,553 yards and 12 touchdowns.

He also led the USFL's Birmingham Stallions to consecutive conference championships in 1984 and 1985.

Acquired by the Cardinals in 1986, Stoudt has played sparingly.

LAST YEAR, he appeared in only one game and failed to complete his only pass as Lomax led the NFL in passing with 3,387 yards.

This season, an arthritic left hip forced Lomax to the sidelines during two games. Stoudt came off the bench and tossed a game-winning 42-yard touchdown in a 30-24 victory at Tampa Bay on Sept. 18, but threw two fourth-quarter interceptions in a 29-21 home loss to Cleveland on Oct. 23.

Overall this year, Stoudt is 19 of 37 for 261 yards and two touchdowns with two interceptions.

"I think he'll do a good job," Cardinals coach Gene Stallings said. "I'm very comfortable with him. The team might think it has to take up the slack with Neil not in there, but I think Cliff can do it himself."

Phoenix begins a crucial three-game road trip Sunday against the Oilers, who are 5-0 at the Houston Astrodome this season.

Games at Philadelphia and at the New York Giants follow before the Cardinals return home to face the Eagles and Green Bay Packers in the final two weeks.

BILL GRIMES

Devils, Owls should advance, but Buffs face trouble

Grimes

"Doo, doo, doo, another one bites the dust..."

With apologies to Freddie Mercury, several local and area football teams ended their seasons this past Friday.

Midland Lee dug itself a hole from which it could never escape; Greenwood had their chances foiled by a clip and a fumble deep in Denver City territory; and McCamey just couldn't move the ball against Reagan County.

But we like the RC Owls, too, and those Stanton Buffs just keep on winning with that Wishbone offense. In addition, Class 8-A powerhouses Rankin and Garden City join the playoff hunt after finishing their regular slate with lopsided wins.

DON'T EXPECT anything to change there. Look for Rankin and Garden City to advance into the Region I semifinals. But Stanton and Reagan County may have a bit tougher time getting into that regional semifinal round.

The Buffs put their seven-game win streak on the line against 8-2-1 Eastland at Shotwell Stadium in Abilene, while the Owls face undefeated DeLeon at Ballinger.

For you Class 5A football junkies, Odessa Permian is still in the playoff hunt and should have no trouble with El Paso Andress this coming week. (though we all said Lee would beat Amarillo Palo Duro, too.).

I don't think I did too powerfully bad last week. I though Greenwood would pull one out if QB Randy Donnell was able, but I was wrong.

Likewise, I thought McCamey's defense would be more dominating than that of a 20-6 loser. I couldn't lose there, though, for I picked Reagan County to defeat McCamey.

So here goes! Here are my picks for this week's slate of area platoff games. Keep in mind that I don't have any scientific formula for picking these games (nor am I under the influence of laughing gas.)

Rankin-Grandfalls

Let's run down some comparison scores. Grandfalls 14, Fort Davis 0. Rankin 40, Fort Davis 0; Irion County 31, Grandfalls 16; Rankin 27, Irion County 7.

Had enough?

This one may not even be close, though Grandfalls will undoubtedly be pumped after winning a three-way coin flip for the second playoff spot in District 5-A.

But facts are facts, and the fact is that Rankin has steamrolled just about everybody in sight en route to a 10-0 season, while Grandfalls stumbled to a 4-6 mark.

While Grandfalls reputedly has some foot speed, I'll go out on a limb to say that Rankin probably has more.

The Devils speared Grandfalls 27-0 in the third week of the season. Don't expect this game, at 8 p.m. Friday in Fort Stockton, to be any closer.

Rankin 35, Grandfalls 0.

Garden City-Sanderson

Sanderson came on to earn the District 5-A championship, but Garden City played Rankin almost as close as anybody before losing 28-8 while Sanderson got crushed by the Devs 42-0.

The Bearkats just have too many weapons for the Eagles. Here's saying Scott, Scott, Ramirez and Hillger, et. al., can bust loose offensively while grounding the Eagles on "D."

This is the easiest game for Midland-area fans to get to, being played at 7:30 p.m. Friday in McCamey. Should be a long trip home for Sanderson faithful.

Garden City 27, Sanderson 7

Stanton-Eastland

Both teams are coming off fairly decisive bi-district wins, but Eastland's 40-7 romp over Anson was a bit more compelling than Stanton's 24-12 win over the Winters Blizzards.

The Buffs have gotten by with a strong wishbone attack led by quarterback Randy Nevarez. But Winters quarterback Chris Rives found some holes in the Buffs' defensive backfield, so Eastland QB Phillip Montgomery may try to go that route.

Then again, all-state tailback Raiford Rattan ran for 156 yards against Anson. Might that be the ticket for the Mavericks?

Stanton has the advantage of having won seven straight games. But while momentum counts for so much, so does a balanced offensive attack.

These two teams battle each other at 8 p.m. Friday in Abilene's Shotwell Stadium. Here's saying Eastland will let tradition take over.

Eastland 20, Stanton 10.

Reagan County-DeLeon

Hey, boys and girls, you can bet the farm that Ronnie Reeger is telling his Big Lakers that four intercepted passes won't cut it against DeLeon, as it did against McCamey.

The Owls got past some tough teams like Greenwood and McCamey in pre-district play, but mostly won big in a weak District 6-2A. Meanwhile, DeLeon had to beat Eastland for the District 8-2A championship and the Bearcats have fellows that can run and pass.

So it's a question of whether a solid RC defense can stop a state-ranked offense. Here's saying that too many weeks of blowouts will shoot down the Owls, albeit not by much.

DeLeon 14, Reagan County 7.

AREA NOTES: Greenwood coach Bob Purser said Saturday that the Rangers shook their rap as a football-weak school with this year's 8-3 mark at District 4-3A championship.

"At least football is important here now," Purser said. The Rangers capped their first-ever bi-district playoff berth with a 13-6 loss to Denver City this past Friday.

Army's trip to Ireland revives memories of Irish series

By ED SCHUYLER Jr.
AP Sports Writer

For years, Army played against the Fighting Irish in a celebrated football rivalry.

Saturday, for the first time, the Cadets will play before the Real Irish when they meet Boston College in the 53,000-seat Lansdown Stadium at Dublin.

What the fans on the Auld Sod likely will see will be Army keeping the ball on the old sod. At least they will if the Cadets are in control of the game.

Army engaged in one of college football's most historic games — the 35-13 loss to Notre Dame in 1913 in which the Fighting Irish unveiled the forward pass as a major offensive weapon through the combination of Gus Dorais to Knute Rockne.

The Cadets have thrown the ball in interceding years — Leamon Hall put it up 344 times in 1976 — but this year's bunch seems to think a pass is something you get for a night off post.

Army failed to complete its only two passes in beating the Air Force Academy 28-15 and hit on only two of six in beating Vanderbilt 24-19.

In fact, for the season, the Cadets have completed only 18 of 48 passes for 419 yards, but they have marched to an 8-1 beat by averaging 371 yards a game and apparently are headed for the Sun Bowl against Alabama on Christmas Eve.

It's shades of Blanchard and Davis. Of course, 15 passes a game were a lot back in the 1940s when Doc Blanchard and Glenn Davis ran roughshod and, of course, these Cadets aren't the dominant Black Knights of the Blanchard-Davis years.

Still, it's nice to see Army doing well against a representative schedule in a year when Notre Dame has been ringing down the echos of glorious autumns of the past, some of which the Cadets figured in prominently beginning in 1913.

There was 1924, when Notre Dame beat Army 13-7 in the game in which sports writer Grantland Rice named the Four Horsemen. Also, 1928 was when the Irish won the "Win One for the Gipper" game 12-6. And the scoreless tie in 1946 following 59-0 and 48-0 battering by Army the previous two years.

The uninterrupted series, with 22 games at New York's Yankee Stadium, ended in 1947 with Notre Dame's 27-7 victory at South Bend, Ind., because officials of the two schools felt the game was getting too big. Nothing is too big these days when many events are hyped far beyond reality.

Since 1947 they have met 12 times, with Army winning only in 1958, 14-2.

In recent years, the two schools, by necessity, have been increasingly separated by the overall strength of their schedules.

However, in a way the game in Dublin will have one similarity to the past Army-Notre Dame contests. Notre Dame's "Subway Alumni," fans throughout the country who never got near the school's campus, always made the Fighting Irish the sentimental favorite.

The vast majority of the Real Irish have not been near the campus of Boston College, let alone seen an American football game, but Boston College was founded to educate young Irish men and women.

Guess who they'll be rooting for?

TED BATTLES

The Flip, they won't let it die

Battles

It looks like it will never end. Nobody is happy over the so called Flip. And you can't blame 'em.

Heads-I-win, tails-you-lose is no way to decide a football game, much less a district playoff representative.

Come to think of it, they don't decide games by coin flips. There are all sorts of options. You know.... penetrations, first downs, yards rushing, yards passing, highest completion percentage, best record overall with the enrollment of eligible males factored into the consideration, consecutive handsprings by a cheerleader or any combination there of.

ANYTHING is better than a coin flip.

How about designated arm-wrestlers selected from the teams involved?

Anything is better than a coin flip.

Is there anything more undignified or demeaning than a coach crawling on all fours to find out if his team won or lost.

But the three-way tie in District 4-5A this season isn't the first time the Flip has been the procedure employed to select a playoff representative and, since it wasn't changed the last time, well.....we'll see.....

BUT SINCE we seem to be stuck with a game of chance, even a coin Flip isn't the acceptable choice, especially when it comes to manufacturing a story. Where's the drama? Where's the pathos? Most of all, where's the suspense?

It's a lousy case of trigger the thumb and it's all over. If you are going to congregate in the wee hours, in the immortal words of Peggy Lee, isn't it fair to wonder "Is this all there is?"

How can you jerk any tears with a calloused coin Flip.

Make it last. Wring the last drop of drama from the proceedings. Each team could take a horse in the Breeder's Classic and instead of a bob on the nose, a playoff hope on the bangtail.

But a coin Flip, that's the worst kind of Las Vegas. In fact, a coin flip, that's something that might be against the law in Nevada, something beneath the dignity of man.

If we're going Las Vegas style, why not roll the dice. Can't you see the lead in the paper the next day, Midland High rolled snake eyes or Midland Lee came up with box cars or for Odessa Permian, it was a case of 7 come 11, as usual. I suppose someone would know what those terms signify.

OR HOW about a game of five-card stud....and in the pale circle cast by the dim yellow light hanging above the table, Odessa Permian shows a hand all of a kind...twos. Midland Lee has a straight face up and Midland High reaches out to draw its final card, the one necessary to fill a royal-flush. Can you imagine the story line in the ayem edition. It might be better than the district race.

Or how about 21, better known as black jack, the only game I am reasonably familiar with. It would offer the greatest combination of drama and suspense of all.

The coaches breathlessly debating an "I'll hold," or a "Hit Me" while the dealer fingers the deck, the characteristic I-can't-lose snarl curling his lips.

The dealer? He'd be the athletic director or superintendent of one of the competing schools.

How would he be determined?

A coin Flip, naturally, with all coins allowed to hit the floor as the flippers conduct the search for the telltale heads and tails.

Hey, and since we're going the casino route, we might dignify it somewhat by lending an appropriate name to the proceedings. Little Southwest Conference? Why not Little Circus-Circus, Texas style; or District 4-5A, Little Ceasar's Palace?...

But while we're at it, let's add some real class to the act. District 4-5A, Monte Carlo des les Colonies....

Ex-Viking Alan Page Camp alum of year

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Alan Page, former Minnesota Vikings all-pro defensive tackle and now an assistant attorney general with the state of Minnesota, has been named the Walter Camp Football Foundation's 1988 alumnus of the year.

Page was an All-American on the 1967 Walter Camp team while at Notre Dame. He was named to the all-pro team six times as a member of the Vikings and in 1971 became the first lineman to be named the NFL's most valuable player.

Page, who played for the Vikings from 1967-78 and for the Chicago Bears from 1978-81, was inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame earlier this year.

Cowboys locked in fight for Troy

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys are locked in a four-way fight for the right to draft UCLA quarterback Troy Aikman, and the difficulty of their remaining schedule suggests they could lose the rest of their games.

The Cowboys suffered the fourth-worst loss in their history, 43-3, to the Minnesota Vikings Sunday night. It was Dallas' seventh consecutive loss in its worst season since 1960.

The Cowboys' 2-9 record ties them with Detroit, Tampa Bay and Green Bay for the worst in the NFL, with five games remaining.

The worst team gets first pick in the NFL draft, and Dallas coach Tom Landry and club president Tex Schramm said they would take Aikman if they got the chance.

"You wouldn't pass on a talent like that no matter how many quarterbacks you have," Schramm said.

The Cowboys' remaining games are against teams with legitimate playoff chances: Cincinnati, 8-3; Houston, 7-4; Cleveland, 6-5; Washington, 6-5, and Philadelphia, 6-5.

Dallas was 2-8 with Steve Pelluer at quarterback, before Kevin Sweeney got a rough greeting from the Vikings Sunday night as a starter for the first time this year.

Sweeney was intercepted four times, sacked five times, and two of his fumbles were cashed into nine points by the swarming Vikings' defense.

"We got behind early and they pass-rushed every down," Sweeney said. "They were coming hard and I had to fight 'em off. We just ran into a purple wall and it was humiliating."

Sweeney completed only 10 of 28 passes for 93 yards as the Dallas offense went without a touchdown for the first time since 1985.

Dallas' sputtering offense accounted for 15 penalties, worth 131 yards.

Landry said he would decide Tuesday who would start against Cincinnati on Sunday in Texas Stadium.

"Kevin didn't have much of a chance the way they were pouring in on him," Landry said.

Sweeney said he would accept whatever decision Landry makes.

"I'll keep working hard whether it was my first starting shot or my last starting shot," Sweeney said.

Pelluer said he felt sorry for Sweeney because of Minnesota's pass rush.

"He worked hard and got beat around like a drum," Pelluer said. "Kevin did all he could do. He competed hard, but he couldn't even look up before they were on top of him."

Clippers waive pair

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rookie guard Tom Garrick and forward David Popson have been waived by the Los Angeles Clippers. Garrick, 6-foot-2, was the team's second-round draft pick from Rhode Island and the 45th player taken overall in the 1988 draft. He averaged 2.7 points while appearing in three of four season-opening road games. Popson, 6-10, was picked up Nov. 3 after being waived by the Detroit Pistons. He averaged one point in three games.

Mullins' 33 points paces Warrior win

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Chris Mullin scored 33 points, including the first six of a decisive 8-0 spurt Monday night that lifted the Golden State Warriors to a 100-96 victory over the New Jersey Nets.

The Warriors, who have defeated New Jersey six straight times at the Meadowlands since 1983, trailed 92-90 with 5:33 left before Mullin took over.

He made four consecutive free throws and then added a basket before two free throws by Manute Bol put the Warriors ahead 98-92 with three minutes remaining.

Consecutive baskets by John Bagley got New Jersey within two, but two free throws by Mitch Richmond concluded the scoring with 1:25 left.

Richmond finished with 21 points for Golden State. Reserve Lester Conner led New Jersey with 15 points, nine in the fourth quarter.

Golden State, 20-62 last season, improved to 4-2. The Warriors did not win their fourth game last year until Dec. 23, when they already had 18 losses.

Mullin, now tied for fourth among the league's scoring leaders with a 28.7 average, scored 17 points in the first 16:20, helping the Warriors to a 47-30 lead.

Hershiser unanimous pick

NEW YORK (AP) — The Dodgers' Orel Hershiser was picked unanimously as the right-handed pitcher on the 1988 AP Major League All-Star team.

Hershiser, the 1988 National League Cy Young Award winner and Most Valuable player of the NL playoffs and the World Series, received 165 points from a nationwide panel of writers and broadcasters.

Boston third baseman Wade Boggs, Oakland relief pitcher Dennis Eckersley were nearly unanimous selections as the American League filled eight of the 12 spots.

Detroit's Alan Trammell was the shortstop, Minnesota's Frank Viola the left-handed starter and Milwaukee's Paul Molitor the DH.

Oakland's Jose Canseco, Minnesota's Kirby Puckett and Boston's Mike Greenwell were the outfielders with San Francisco's Will Clark at first, Chicago Cub Ryne Sandberg at second, and San Diego's Benito Santiago the catcher.

Stars nudge Leafs, 5-4

TORONTO (AP) — Dave Gagner's third goal of the game, with three seconds left, gave the Minnesota North Stars their first road victory of the season with a 5-4 NHL win over the Toronto Maple Leafs Monday night.

The North Stars, who also broke a five-game winless streak, had an 0-6-2 record on the road prior to Monday night. The result sent the Maple Leafs to their sixth consecutive defeat.

Leafs goalie Ken Wregget was on his back after making two saves when Gagner flipped the puck into the open net from five feet out for his 12th goal of the season.

Minnesota led 2-0 on goals by Gagner and Brian Bellows, but Derek Laxdal and Vincent Damphousse replied for Toronto for a 2-2 tie after 40 minutes.

The North Stars regained the lead on Mark Hardy's first goal of the season one minute into the third period. Hardy shot from the point and the puck struck a stick and hit the post to the left of Wregget. The Maple Leafs' goalie turned to see where the puck was and it struck his catching mitt and dropped over the goal line.

Ed Olczyk made it 3-3 at 2:35. He was standing all alone in front of Jon Casey to whip a pass from Laxdal past the Minnesota goalie for his 10th of the season.

Toronto took its first lead, 4-3, on Damphousse's second power-play goal of the game at 6:29 of the third. With Craig Hartsburg sitting out a tripping penalty, Al Iafrate passed to Damphousse in the right wing faceoff circle and Damphousse slapped a drive under the cross bar for his 10th of the season.

Gagner's second goal of the game and 11th of the season at 14:37 of the third tied it at 4. Bellows skated beyond the Maple Leaf net, then passed out front where Gagner redirected the puck between Wregget's skates.

Opening lead: Queen of ♠

Avoidance play at the table is something like guarding the foul lines in the late innings of a baseball game. In the latter case, you are prepared to give up a single to protect against the possibility of an extra base hit. In the former, you are willing to surrender a trick to a particular player to keep his partner off lead.

In this sequence, South's two-heart rebid promises a six-card suit. North, therefore, judged his hand was quite suitable for game in hearts despite the fact that his hand was perfectly balanced.

West led the top of his club sequence, won by dummy's ace as declarer discarded a diamond. The reckless player cashes the ace-king of trumps; if they divide evenly, he is assured of an overtrick and can make a second overtrick if the ace of diamonds is with East.

The careful player realizes that he will probably have to lose a trump trick. He also counts that, even so, he has 10 tricks—five hearts, four spades and a club. The only danger to the hand is that East has the long trumps and, when he gains the lead, he can push a diamond through the king.

Once South has spotted the problem, the solution is simple enough. As long as East doesn't have all three missing honors, the contract is secure. At trick two declarer leads a low heart and, if East follows with the eight, he simply covers with the nine. If the cards are divided as above, West will win the trump trick, but he can do declarer no harm. Declarer wins any return, draws trumps and cashes his winners to fulfill his contract.

Pablo Picasso's 'Maternity' brings $24.75 million at Christie's auction

NEW YORK (AP) — An early Pablo Picasso painting showing a mother kissing her son sold at auction Monday for $24.75 million, a record for a 20th century piece and the third-highest price ever paid for a work of art.

"Maternity," from the artist's "blue period," was one of 28 post-Impressionist and modern works sold at Christie's in a sale that brought in $85,024,500.

"They did better than we could possibly dream," Christie's President Christopher J. Burge said. "This may well be the sale of the century." He had estimated they would go for about $50 million.

The $85 million was a record for a sale from a single owner. All 28 works were from the collection of William Goetz, a Hollywood motion picture executive, and his wife, Edith, the daughter of film mogul Louis B. Mayer.

The couple entertained lavishly at their Holmby Hills mansion in California, where their paintings hung until this summer. He died in 1969; she died in June at the age of 82.

After intense bidding, "Maternity" was sold to a private Latin American buyer whose winning bid was placed by telephone. The 1901 painting was expected to sell for $10 million. "It's a great, very rare picture," Burge said.

The painting depicts a blue-robed mother in a high-backed chair, with a scissors and sewing basket at her feet. The child has a ball in his hands. The auction house described the painting as a "majestic, tender but unsentimental affirmation of maternal love."

Some thought the bidding could have gone even higher. "I think if Van Gogh's 'Irises' went for $50 million, this should have gone as high," said Leila Taghinia-Milani, a member of the audience.

"Irises" sold for $53.9 million in November 1987. A few months earlier, Van Gogh's "Sunflowers" sold for $39.9 million.

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Gary Dahl, the creator of the "Pet Rock," says he has spent the last 13 years avoiding publicity and dealing with "a bunch of wackos."

Dahl was working as an advertising executive when he came up with the idea of selling the rocks in 1975. The Pet Rock vanished by Valentine's Day 1976, but not before Dahl had sold 1.5 million of them at $4 each.

"No one will ever do it again," Dahl said of the phenomenon that swept the country.

Dahl, 52, is still in advertising but won't say where. He avoided interviews for years because of what he called "a bunch of wackos" appearing out of nowhere with threats and lawsuits.

"It makes me a lot more cynical," he said. "It made me too high profile. There's a bizarre lunatic fringe who feel I owe them a living. I don't know if it's been an asset or a liability.

"Sometimes I look back and wonder if my life wouldn't have been simpler If I hadn't done it," he said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — With a huge Canadian Maple Leaf flag as a backdrop, film director Norman Jewison was honored by fellow Canadians as he received a star on Hollywood's Walk of Fame.

The 62-year-old Toronto native delighted the crowd of about 200 well-wishers Monday by declaring, "It's a great day, eh?"

The director of such films as "In The Heat of the Night," "The Russians Are Coming, The Russians Are Coming," "Fiddler On The Roof," "A Soldier's Story" and "Moonstruck" noted that fellow Canadians are well represented on the Walk of Fame. His noted that his star joins those of fellow countrymen Mary Pickford, Louis B. Mayer, Jack Warner, Buster Keaton, Yvonne DeCarlo, Fay Wray, William Shatner and Monty Hall.

"Up until today, I've been 'moonstruck.' Now I'm starstruck," he said.

Other Canadians present included Los Angeles Consul General Joan Windsor, Los Angeles Kings hockey star Wayne Gretzky, Hall and comedian Rich Little.

ASHLAND CITY, Tenn. (AP) — The $1.5 million home of country singer Mel Tillis was damaged by a grease fire that started after his wife left the kitchen to answer a telephone call, authorities said.

Judy Tillis had just started cooking Monday when the phone rang, said Ashland City Volunteer Fire Department Chief Donald Walker.

"She wasn't on very long. She had just started cooking and the phone rung, and that's when it happened," Walker said.

The couple and their young daughter escaped uninjured from the two-story log home, located on a 1,400-acre farm about 15 miles from Nashville, Walker said.

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Howard Rollins Jr., co-star of television's "In the Heat of the Night," has pleaded guilty to cocaine possession and agreed to make an anti-drug video for the state of Louisiana.

Rollins also pleaded guilty Monday to charges of driving while intoxicated and speeding.

State District Judge Freddie Pitcher placed Rollins, 38, on two years' probation and fined him $4,275.

Analysts: OPEC key to oil prices

By FAITH KEENAN
Hearst News Service

NEW YORK — U.S. oil analysts met in New York Monday, but all eyes were focused on Vienna, where an upcoming OPEC meeting will determine the immediate fate of the U.S. oil industry.

Analysts daring to project beyond the meeting Thursday of the cartel's Price Monitoring and Strategy Committee say oil prices are unlikely to increase in the short term. They may even fall again.

"For the next five years, we'll see rising world oil demand and downward pressure on prices," said John Lichtblau, president of the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation. "Any firming of prices will depend on cooperation within OPEC."

Whether united or divided, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Companies still determines world oil prices.

"The OPEC meetings are crucial," said Richard Morrow, chairman and chief executive officer of Amoco Corporation. "If OPEC continues to overproduce, we'll continue to see weak oil prices."

Overproduction by the cartel's members has flooded the world market with excess oil supplies, keeping prices down. Morrow called the strategy a "hardball" tactic of Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, and the United Arab Emirates. They hope that eventually other OPEC members who need oil revenues will cry uncle, honor quotas, and drive prices back up.

"They have some sticky issues to resolve," said Morrow. "Oil prices will likely remain at current levels until OPEC reaches an agreement on production restraints." Morrow is also chairman of the American Petroleum Institute, which is holding its annual conference here to analyze the state of the U.S. oil industry.

OPEC has already met several times this year to try to reach a binding quota agreement. All meetings have ended without a resolution.

"I'm optimistic they'll reach an agreement, but the question is just

MARKETS

Purchasers raise posting 50 cents

From Staff and Wire Reports

Permian Basin oil buyers moved to close the gap between posted prices and the near-month futures price this morning. Permian Corp., Sun Refining & Marketing Co. and Phillips Petroleum Co. raised the price they pay West Texas producers by 50 cents per barrel to $13.25 effective this morning.

Near month futures have fluctuated around the $14 mark for more than a week, while postings had remained stuck at $12.75 until today's move.

Other local buyers' representatives anticipated following suit with the increase, but had not done so by midmorning.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange Monday, energy futures moved higher in quiet trading led by refined products.

The December contract for unleaded gasoline rose 1.51 cents to 48.16 cents a gallon. The December contract for heating oil increased 0.62 cent to 44.63 cents a gallon.

The December contract for West Texas Intermediate opened 5 cents lower that Monday's close of $14.27 per barrel, which was up 32 cents from Friday's settlement price.

Traders said activity was light, with many participants attending the annual meeting of the American Petroleum Institute.

Speakers at the meeting, attended by more than 1,000 oil industry officials, were not optimistic about the prospects that OPEC would reach an agreement on limiting crude production at its upcoming meeting.

Dollar mixed awaiting trade report

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar was mixed this morning against many foreign currencies in European trading as traders said they were withdrawing from the market ahead of Wednesday's release of U.S. trade figures for September. Gold prices rose.

"We expect the (trade) report to show a gap of $10 billion to $11 billion," said a dealer at a major West German bank in Frankfurt. The August U.S. trade deficit was $12.18 billion.

In Tokyo, the dollar rose 0.25 yen to close at 123.25. Later, in London, it was quoted at 123.45 yen.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Monday:

—1.7457 West German marks, up from 1.7452

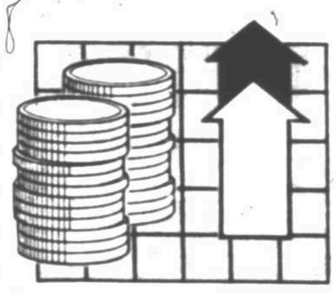

—1.4620 Swiss francs, down from 1.4645

—5.9605 French francs, down from 5.9615

—1.9663 Dutch guilders, down from 1.9735

—1,298.25 Italian lire, down from 1,303.50

In London, one British pound cost $1.8090, unchanged from late Monday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $422.70 a troy ounce, up from $420.95 bid late Monday. At midmorning Tuesday, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $422.80.

In Zurich, the bid price was $422.90, up from $420.00 bid late Monday. Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold rose $1.56 to close at a bid $424.07.

Post-election slump tops 62 points

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market drifted lower Monday, extending its post-election slump through a fourth consecutive session.

Trading remained quiet.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped 1.95 to 2,065.08, bringing its loss over the four trading days since the election last Tuesday to 62.41 points.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 8 to 5 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 561 up, 912 down and 486 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 142.90 million shares, against 135.50 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 166.99 million shares.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market lost $4.82 billion, or 0.18 percent, in value.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks dipped .20 to 151.04.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Sematech to dedicate facilities today

AUSTIN (AP) — Sematech, a high-tech consortium, will dedicate its multimillion-dollar facilities today, including a $75 million, state-of-the-art computer "clean room" and other developments aimed at revamping the U.S. semiconductor industry. More than 1,000 people are expected to attend the ceremonies. The consortium of 14 member companies, which located in Austin in January after a nationwide search, is formulating a 5-year plan to restore competitiveness in American semiconductors.

State court upholds Pennsylvania act

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pennsylvania Supreme Court, in a 7-1 decision, has upheld the constitutionality of the 1984 Oil and Gas Act, which greatly strengthened the state's powers to regulate oil and gas drilling.

Insurers strike back against regulation

BOSTON (AP) — Allstate Insurance Co. says it will stop doing business in Massachusetts due to losses from the state's tough insurance laws, echoing anger among insurers nationwide over changing regulatory climates.

Monday's surprise announcement came about a week after California voters threw the industry into turmoil by approving a controversial rate rollback on property casualty insurance, which encompasses automobile coverage.

Separately, the largest home and car insurer in California, State Farm Mutual Auto Insurance Co., said it has stopped writing new auto policies because of chaos surrounding rate-slashing Proposition 103.

Chubb 'damage control' apparently effective

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Chubb Corp.'s swift response to complaints from farmers and state regulators over its drought insurance may have saved the company from any lasting damage to its reputation and profit outlook, analysts say.

Chubb took a major step toward putting the matter behind it last week, when it announced a $48 million settlement to a class-action suit representing 8,000 farmers in 10 midwestern states.

Farmers had sued when applications for insurance over this summer's drought were denied.

BANKING

MCorp borrows millions

DALLAS (AP) — Liquidity problems have prompted a Texas bank holding company to borrow hundreds of millions of dollars from the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas, according to a published report.

The Dallas Morning News reported today, quoting banking inudstry sources, that MCorp accounted for the lion's share of the new borrowings in the latest reported figures. The sources said that would indicate large depositors have made withdrawals.

MCorp spokesman George McCane said Monday that the Dallas-based banking firm would be releasing no information about its deposit flows.

Figures released by the Federal Reserve Bank show borrowings from the discount window of the Dallas Fed rose nearly $1.2 billion in the two weeks ending Nov. 9, following a two-month declining trend.

The government loans are sought by banks only in emergencies. The Fed does not identify banks institutions that have received the loans.

Much of the $2.8 billion in last week's outstanding loans would still be attributed to NCNB Texas, which inherited Fed loans in July when it took over Texas institutions of First RepublicBank Corp., analysts said.

MCorp chairman Gene H. Bishop has sought to combine FDIC aid with new private capital to preserve the last of the big Texas-controlled banking firms.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. agreed earlier this month to consider Bishop's plan. The announcement came after a near showdown over disposition of about $250 million in liquid assets held by MCorp at the parent level.

Gonzalez says S&Ls top crisis

Gonzalez

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez says the savings and loan industry crisis would be his top priority as chairman of the House Banking Committee, but analysts say his expected selection to the post may delay a solution.

With the backing of House leaders, the 72-year-old Texas Democrat is considered the most likely successor to Rep. Fernand J. St Germain, D-R.I., defeated last week in his bid for a 15th term.

Gonzalez, a hot-tempered, outspoken maverick, is urging swift action before the poor condition of the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. becomes a "chaotic crisis."

He advocates establishing a $50 billion line of credit from the Treasury, to be partly repaid from the sale of loans and property from failed S&Ls.

"Nobody wants a taxpayer bailout ... but there are limits to what the industry can do and they've reached those limits," Gonzalez told the National Association of Mortgage Brokers on Monday.

Gonzalez later told reporters, "If it ever gets around that there's nothing insuring those accounts and deposits, you could have chaos."

Some analysts said they believed Gonzalez' sometimes confrontational style could further fragment an already divided House Banking Committee, thus complicating congressional efforts to find a solution to the S&L industry crisis.

"He's bright. He understands problems and he can be very direct with what he says," said Bert Ely, a financial institutions consultant in Alexandria, Va.

A new banking chairman is also taking over in the Senate, where Donald W. Riegle Jr., D-Mich., is expected to succeed William Proxmire, D-Wis., who is retiring.

The new Bush administration likely will fill the leadership vacuum left by the transition in Congress, according to R. Dan Brumbaugh, a savings industry consultant and former chief economist of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

But, he added, "it's hard not to believe this is going to slow momentum."

FDIC losses growing rapidly

New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — A new study by federal banking regulators has found that losses at the nation's insolvent savings and loan associations are growing at a rate that exceeds $15 billion a year.

The study, prepared by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., underscores the fact that the longer Congress and the administration wait to address the losses at some 500 hopelessly insolvent savings units, the greater the cost will ultimately be to the government and the industry.

The report, the first official confirmation of what analysts have been saying for a while, shows that the losses are mounting even more sharply than the $500 million to $1 billion a month that had been estimated.

In addition, a new study by McKinsey & Co., the consulting firm, indicates that the government could pay as much as 40 percent more to find merger partners for many of the nation's sickest savings units than if it simply took over the institutions, paid off insured depositors and liquidated the assets over time.

"The problem is that the government is trying to keep many of the institutions alive, and it will cost more than to liquidate them," said Lowell L. Bryan, a director at McKinsey and head of its North American banking practice.

"Our point is that the bank board is taking a bad problem and making it worse."

The two reports, the latest in a string of studies, come at a time when members of Congress, regulators and officials of the Reagan administration and advisers to President-elect George Bush are showing increased concern about the problem.

The crisis — the product of lax regulation, excessive speculation in Texas real estate and a depressed econony in the Southwest — is concentrated in large measure in Texas. Among the almost 500 insolvent units, the biggest problems are there and in surrounding states.

Retail sales get big increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retail sales, bolstered by big gains at department stores and auto dealerships, jumped 0.9 percent in October, the biggest increase in seven months, the government said today.

The Commerce Department said sales rose $1.2 billion to a seasonally adjusted $135.6 billion. In September, they fell by 0.3 percent after rising by a similar 0.3 percent in August.

The October increase was the steepest since March, when sales shot up 1.6 percent. Most economists had been expecting a milder rise of about 0.3 percent last month.

Retail sales are closely watched by analysts as a barometer of overall consumer demand. Consumer spending, including services, which are not included in the retail sales report, accounts for about two-thirds of the nation's economic activity.

Analysts have been divided in recent months over whether economic growth is slowing. Sluggish retail sales in September, along with weak job growth, led many to conclude that the Federal Reserve Board's effort to curb growth to non-inflationary levels through increases in interest rates was working.

However, the early indications are that the economy rebounded in October. In addition to the substantial gain in retail sales, the unemployment rate dropped, matching a 14-year low.

Auto sales in October jumped 1.7 percent to $29.2 billion, after falling 2.2 percent a month earlier. It was only the second increase since March.

Excluding the automotive category, which is the most volatile, sales rose 0.7 percent last month after a 0.2 percent increase in September.

Sales at department and other general merchandise stores shot up 2.4 percent to $15.6 billion last month, following a 0.8 percent gain in September. August sales had been depressed by hotter-than-normal weather.

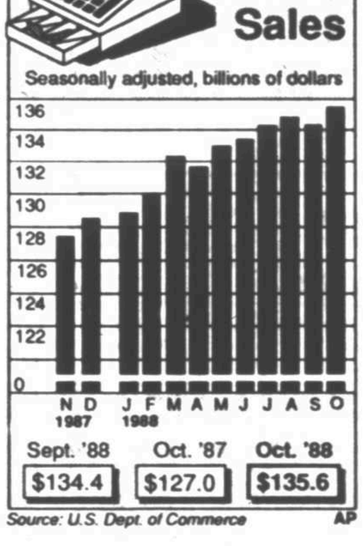

Sales of durable goods, "big ticket" items expected to last three or more years rose 0.9 percent last month, as did non-durable goods sales.

Hardware, garden and building supply stores reported no change in October after a 0.8 percent rise a month earlier.

Furniture stores posted a modest 0.2 percent gain after falling 0.3 percent in September.

Food and grocery stores reported a 1.1 percent gain, gasoline stations a 1.2 percent jump, specialty clothing stores a 1.3 percent increase, and drug stores a 0.6 percent rise.

The only category reporting a decline was restaurants and bars, down 0.2 percent after a 1.3 percent increase in September.

Industrial production up

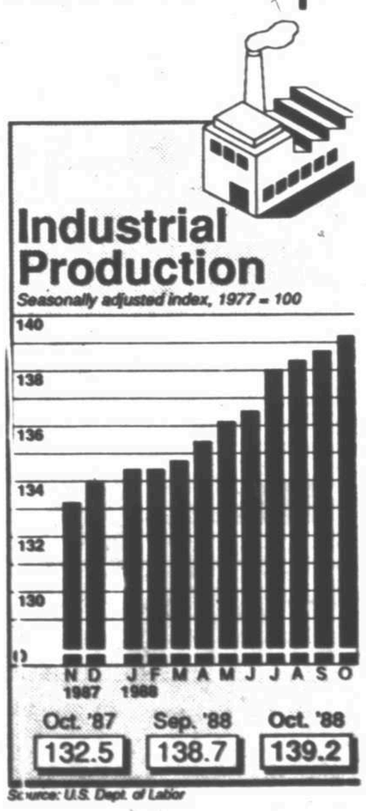

WASHINGTON (AP) — Production at the nation's factories, mines and utilities rose 0.4 percent in October, the strongest increase in three months, the government said today.

The Federal Reserve Board said its industrial production index last month rose to 139.2 percent of its 1977 base, reflecting increases in production of business equipment and automobiles.

The gain was in line with economists' expectations. It followed smaller increases of 0.2 percent in September and 0.3 percent in August, and a big jump of 1.1 percent in July.

The index has not declined since September 1987, a reflection of the strength in the manufacturing sector. A drop in the value of the dollar has triggered a surge in sales of U.S. goods overseas this year and a related boom in spending for capital equipment to expand and modernize factories.

However, economists have become worried that manufacturing may be growing too strongly, outstripping production capacity and leading to inflation. The relatively weak industrial production of August and September had calmed those fears somewhat. But signs of a rebound in October, including a decline in the unemployment rate and a strong increase in retail sales, have rekindled inflation concerns.

Courts take look at Florida OCS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today ordered a Florida court to restudy whether that state may tax income derived from the sale of oil extracted from the Outer Continental Shelf.

The court sent a case involving Shell Oil Co. back to the Florida Supreme Court for further study in light of the U.S. Supreme Court's ruling on Nov. 8 in a case from Iowa.

The justices ruled that Iowa may tax income derived from oil and natural gas taken from the Outer Continental Shelf.

The high court upheld an Iowa law that allows a state to impose a tax on that portion of a company's income calculated to come from the amount of business it does within that state.

In the Florida case, that state's highest court ruled in 1986 that the Florida tax applies to offshore oil refined and sold by an oil company within the 50 states — after it has been transferred to the mainland by pipeline from the offshore wells and platforms.

The state court said only income from oil actually sold on the platforms at sea is exempt from the Florida tax.

The Outer Continental Shelf is underwater land more than three miles off the shore of any state. The land is owned by the federal government, which leases it to private companies.

Shell said a 1953 federal law authorizing exploration and production of Outer Continental Shelf oil bars states from taxing any natural gas or oil derived from the offshore land regardless of where the products are sold.

"Any form of state levy, direct or indirect, would adversely affect the amounts of revenue available to the federal government" from the offshore leases, Shell said.

State taxes reduce the value of the federal leases, the company said.

It added that the Florida tax is "precisely the result Congress attempted to forbid" in exempting the oil from state taxes.

OIL & GAS DIGEST

Phillips realigns central Oklahoma operation

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) — About 40 of the Phillips Petroleum Co. workers in Oklahoma City will be transferred to Borger, Texas, as part of the company's restructuring of its Central Oklahoma area exploration and production division, the company said.

Phillips said it planned to restructure the exploration and production division as part of the company's efforts to improve profitability in that area.

The reorganization is expected to be complete early next year.

Permian Partners lose $4.4 million in quarter

HOUSTON (SWN) — Permian Partners, L.P. reported results for its third quarter ended Sept. 30, 1988 and full payment of quarterly cash distribution to preference unitholders.

The net loss for the quarter totaled $4,477,000 and the net loss per preference unit was 5 cents compared to $2,188,000 which yielded a net income of 3 cents per preference unit in the comparable quarter of the previous fiscal year.

Revenues for the quarter totaled $551 million compared to $684 million last year. Despite this net loss, cash flow for the quarter was positive due principally to lower working capital requirements.

James E. Haas, chairman and chief executive officer for the general partner stated, "Operating margins and net income continue at unacceptable levels. The fluctuations in crude oil prices and below normal profit margins that have plagued us in the past continued this quarter.

NRM reports higher revenue, smaller losses

DALLAS (SWN) — NRM Energy Co. L.P., reported higher revenues and smaller losses in the third quarter.

Revenues for the quarter ended Sept. 30 were $19.2 million compared with revenues of $14.7 million for the same period last year. Net loss was $6.3 million compared with the prior year third quarter net loss of $7.8 million.

Revenues for the current nine months were $61.6 million versus revenues of $42 million for the same period in 1987. Net loss was $17.7 million compared with a net loss of $31.7 million for the nine months ended Sept. 30, 1987.

Mitchell completes tight gas wells

THE WOODLANDS (SWN) — Mitchell Energy & Development Corp. reported the successful drilling of three natural gas wells in the Cotton Valley Lime formation of the North Personville Field, located in Limestone County in East Central Texas.

The Cotton Valley Lime is a "tight rock" formation that requires massive hydraulic fracturing to open channels through which the gas may be more easily produced.

The three new wells are the No. 2 Hawkins, the No. 3 Ferguson and the No. 3 Duke. The Hawkins well had initial production of 2.4 million cubic feet of gas per day (MMcfgd) through a 13/64-inch choke with 3,050 pounds per square inch (psi) of flowing tubing pressure through perforations at depths of 10,719 to 10,798 feet.

The Ferguson well produced 1 MMcfgd through a 22/64-inch choke with 750 psi of flowing tubing pressure from perforations at depths of 11,039 to 11,221 feet. The Duke well flowed 3 MMcfgd through an 11/64-inch choke with 3,075 psi of flowing tubing pressure from perforations at depths of 11,153 to 11,434 feet.

Mitchell has interests in approximately 45,000 acres of leases in the North Personville Field area, with more than 40 potential infill drilling locations.

OPEC

how soon?" said Morrow. He predicted oil prices would remain at about $14 per barrel (for West Texas Crude) for the near future. If OPEC cuts production — perhaps 3-to-4 months from now — prices could rise to $17, "plus or minus" in late 1989, he said.

Cyrus Tahmassebi, chief economist at Ashland Oil, Inc., predicted prices would remain in the $10-to-$15 range for the next 15 years.

"OPEC has ruined its chances to see the oil market firm up," he said. "Continued discord within the cartel won't go away as long as spare production capacity is there. The Iranians are not likely to accept the parity issue for OPEC unity. And the Iraqis have every intention of using their capacity."

The effect of continued low prices on the U.S. oil industry varies. Producers are hardest hit since low prices don't make increased exploration and drilling profitable.

"My advice to U.S. oil and gas producers would be 'Get out of the business,'" said William Brown, vice president of Kidder Peabody & Company.

Refiners are faring better.

"The situation still looks good for the U.S. refining industry," said Tahmassebi. "I'd advise a refining CEO to sit back and enjoy the good times." He also recommended that refiners seek joint ventures with producing countries.

The U.S. government "should keep their hands off for the time being," said Lichtblau. "If prices reach $8-to-$12, then take action in the area of taxation. Give incentives to companies that will drill for oil and that will likely have a long-term positive effect."

Morrow warned that an increasing U.S. dependence on oil imports will force the Bush administration to seriously address energy issues, unlike the Reagan administration.

Syndicated columnists Jack Germond and Robert Novak and Robert Strauss, co-chairman of the National Economic Commission, will discuss the impact of the presidential election on the oil industry at the conference's closing session today.

FDIC

So far this year, the bank board has liquidated or merged well over 100 institutions nationwide with an ultimate cost to the government of more than $23 billion.

While the Reagan administration has argued against using taxpayer money to solve the savings unit problem, a consensus seems to be growing that there are simply no pools of money large enough, outside the U.S. Treasury, to handle it.

The FDIC study indicates that an almost three-year delay in adequately addressing the problem has more than tripled the ultimate cost.

According to the FDIC study, the size of the loss has grown an average of $16.3 billion a year since the end of 1985. At that point, the agency that insures deposits at commercial and savings banks found that 310 savings units with assets of $94 billion were both insolvent and unprofitable.

The FDIC calculated that losses at that time were only $19.5 billion, equal to 20.7 percent of assets.

At the beginning of this year, the number of insolvent savings units had jumped to 489 with $223 billion in assets, and losses totaling $52.8 billion, representing 25.3 percent of assets.

But the problems continued to accelerate this year, so that almost 500 insolvent savings units with assets of $225 billion had an estimated loss of $68.9 billion as of last month.

Thus, the FDIC's loss estimate is considerably higher than the bank board's estimate of $45 billion to $50 billion to resolve the savings crisis.

FDIC officials said the institutions included in the group of 500 are both insolvent and losing money, and most analysts feel that they have no hope of recovery. The agency also includes insolvent institutions that have been liquidated or merged this year by the bank board.

That leaves a universe of as many as 400 weakened institutions that are either barely solvent and losing money, or insolvent and profitable. A large number of those units are likely to fail, increasing the ultimate loss.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

$1.8 billion in Treasury obligations uncashed

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I want to be certain all the U.S. Treasury bonds bought by my deceased relatives years ago have been cashed. Some of those bonds might have been thrown out after my relatives' deaths. Does the Treasury Department keep a record of uncashed bonds, decades after the bonds should have been redeemed?

Doyle

A. Yes. You can initiate your search by writing to the Correspondence and Claims Branch, Division of Customer Service, Bureau of the Public Debt, 300 13th Street, S.W., Washington, D.C. 20239-0001.

You should provide your relatives' names, addresses, Social Security numbers and any other information you have, such as maturity dates, issue dates, denominations and interest rates of the bonds you suspect your relatives owned. Serial numbers would be especially helpful. But it's doubtful you can come up with those.

The office listed above has been remarkably successful in providing information about lost, stolen or destroyed Treasury securities in "registered" form, which have the owners' names printed on the certificates and recorded on the Treasury Department's books.

Old securities in "bearer" form — with no name on the certificates or on the Treasury's books — are a different story. If you think your dead relatives might have had some of those, you'll have to search for records of the purchases. The last bearer Treasury securities were issued in 1982.

A spokesman for the Bureau of the Public Debt says almost $1.8 billion of Treasury debt obligations, including $1.3 billion of U.S. Savings Bonds, have passed maturity and have not been redeemed.

Q. When it started a couple of years ago, the Treasury Direct method of purchasing U.S. Treasury bills, notes and bonds through Federal Reserve Banks seemed to be the best way to go.

Ownership is in "book-entry" form, recorded on computers, so there is no worry about safeguarding certificates. Semiannual interest payments from notes and bonds, discounts on the purchase of T bills and the face value of all three types are automatically deposited in my bank account.

However, I have run into problems. My Treasury Direct statements of account showed I was to receive T bill discounts on April 21 and on July 7. My bank did not credit those payments to my account until April 22 and July 8.

I actually went to the district Federal Reserve Bank. I was told they never change the dates and that my local bank delayed crediting the money to my account. I phone my bank and they insisted the computer tape received from the Federal Reserve said not to credit the money until April 22 and July 8.

Who is using this money for the elapsed days — not only mine, but thousands of other people's? I have a feeling the Federal Reserve is at fault and I resent it. What do I do next?

A. Direct your resentment toward your local bank. When you have a Treasury Direct account, payments for interest, T bills discounts and/or matured securities are sent to the bank account you have designated on the dates due. The Federal Reserve sends the money electronically by automated clearing houses — ACH, for short.

Regulations specify that banks receiving Treasury Direct payments must credit their customers' accounts no later than the payment dates. The only exception to this rule is when your bank or the district Federal Reserve bank is closed. Then, crediting must be on the next business day. That did not apply in your case.

Summed up, the money reached your bank on time but your bank did not credit either of your two Treasury Direct payments to your account until a day later.

If your Treasury Direct payments are going into an interest-bearing account, you have good reason to be very unhappy with your bank — and to demand that you get interest for each of the two "lost" days.

Shultz talks up Contras, criticizes Sandinistas

New York Times News Service

SAN SALVADOR — Secretary of State George P. Shultz renewed criticism of Nicaragua Monday and reiterated support for the rebels fighting to overthrow the Sandinista government. But he stopped short of calling for renewed military aid to the insurgents.

In a speech to the General Assembly of the Organization of American States, which is meeting here this week, Shultz cited progress in the Americas in moving toward the "blessings of democratic government."

"This hemisphere is now a place of hope for most of its citizens," he said in the distributed text of his speech. "Tyrannies have toppled and militaries have returned to the barracks."

But he said the hemisphere's governments should "go out on a limb" to press "non-democratic neighbors to open up."

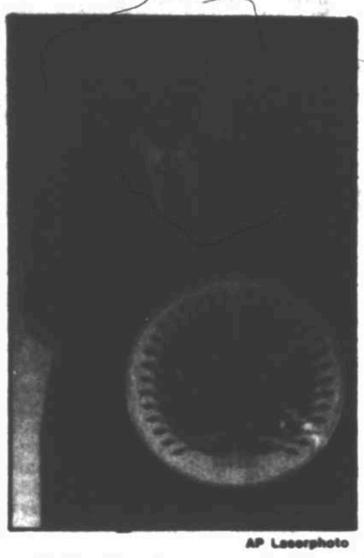

"The dictators and the totalitarians must be told that they are not free to subjugate their peoples," Shultz said, apparently referring to Nicaragua. "We need to confront these states with a diplomacy by democracies, for democracy."

At a brief news conference immediately after his speech, he reiterated United States support for the Nicaraguan rebels and noted president-elect George Bush strongly supported their cause.

"We believe that people who are ready to fight for decency, democracy, freedom and justice in their own country deserve our support," Shultz said when asked if he was calling for renewed military aid to the insurgents. "We'll continue to support them."

Bush has repeatedly said he approves of renewing the rebels' military aid, which was cut off last February. But administration officials have acknowledged he is less zealous in his support than Reagan.

Most of the rebels have retreated to base camps in Honduras, where they are receiving food, medicine and clothing. But rebel commanders say morale is flagging and desertion rising and they cannot keep the rebel army together for much longer.

U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz speaks to the General Assembly of the Organization of American States Monday in San Salvador, El Salvador.

Shultz's one-day visit to San Salvador began early Monday under intense if haphazard security. He was taken to the meeting in a convoy of armored jeeps, behind a decoy limousine.

Several helicopters flew just above and slightly behind the speeding procession. But the soldiers at the meeting site did not carefully search all packages taken into the area and they allowed many people to pass with only a cursory inspection.

In an opening speech, President Jose Napoleon Duarte of El Salvador called the meeting "the most important diplomatic event in the country's history."

Army moves to block Palestinian celebrations

BETHLEHEM, Occupied West Bank (AP) — The army sealed off the occupied lands today to block celebrations of Palestinian independence, but Arab youths defiantly took to the streets, shooting off firecrackers and singing a nationalist anthem.

Underground leaders of the Palestinian uprising called a general strike in the West Bank and Gaza Strip today to mark what the PLO's parliament-in-exile, meeting in Algeria, proclaimed as independence day.

In Bethlehem, under curfew for the first time since 1967, dozens of teen-agers ignored threats of fines and jail terms to run through streets lighting fireworks and singing the nationalist song, "My Homeland, My Homeland."

Army jeeps blocked town entrances and soldiers ordered residents to stay indoors. "Everybody who goes out will endanger his life," one soldier announced over a loudspeaker.

At Dheishe refugee camp, several cars belonging to Jewish settlers were stoned, their windows smashed. Smoke from burning tires rose from the camp, and Israeli soldiers could be heard firing rubber bullets for riot control.

In the Gaza Strip town of Khan Yunis, an 18-year-old Palestinian was shot by soldiers but the circumstances were not clear, hospital officials said.

In Israel, a 30-year-old Palestinian prisoner from Gaza was found strangled to death in his cell in the Ashkelon Jail, and police suspect he was slain by an Arab cellmate for allegedly collaborating with the Israeli authorities.

The army extended a curfew over the Gaza Strip's 650,000 residents for a fourth day and sealed the West Bank. The orders blocked residents of the territories from entering Israel and reporters from going to either occupied area without an army escort.

Police forces were deployed within Israel, where leaders of the 720,000 Israeli Arabs ordered a general strike to protest recent house demolitions.

In Israeli-annexed Arab east Jerusalem, an additional 1,000 police officers were deployed to prevent pro-PLO demonstrations, and authorities banned gatherings of more than 10 people.

In Israel's first official response to the declaration of independence, a Foreign Ministry statement called it "double talk." Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir predicted "political war" with the Palestinians over the declaration.

Shamir was quoted by the daily Yediot Ahronot as saying he would propose a new peace plan to Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak.

Shamir, who opposes a U.N.-sponsored international conference endorsed by the Arabs, wants peace negotiations with Palestinians and Arab states to be under the auspices of the United States and Soviet Union.

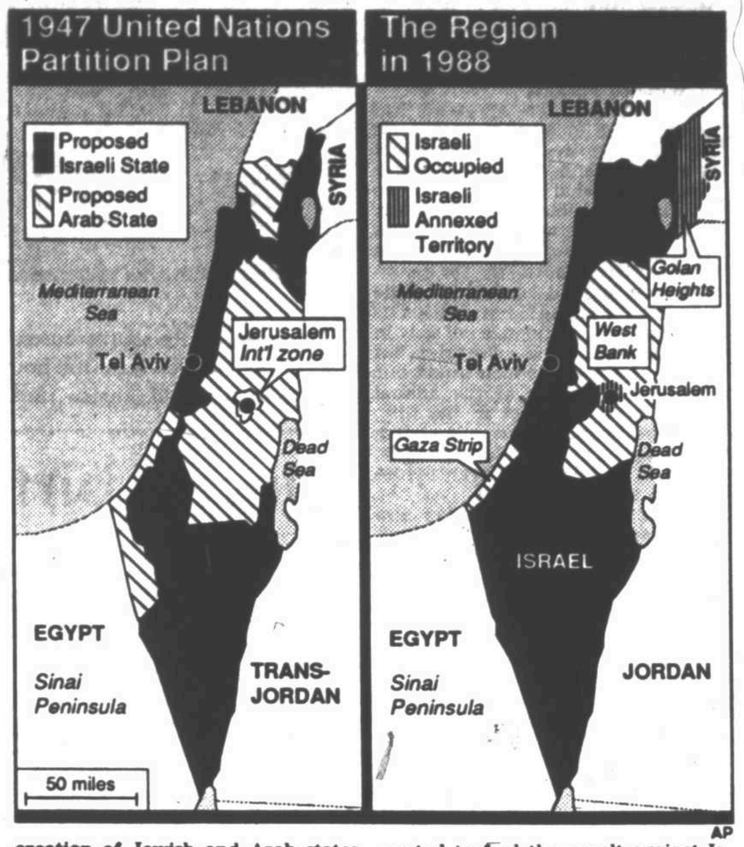

Zeev Hever, a settlers' leader from Hebron, said the Algiers declaration has "totally no meaning. Israel rules over the territory and decides what happens."

Sheik Mohammad Abu Teir, a Moslem religious leader, criticized the declaration's implicit recognition of Israel and repeated the fundamentalist stand that all of Palestine should be an Islamic state.

"We have been offering sacrifices for many years and now they recognize the state of the Jews. Where is the land of this state?" he said by telephone from Umm Touba village, near Bethlehem.

The fireworks, graffiti splashed on walls and raising of outlawed Palestine flags came despite an army announcement that Palestinians could face prison sentences of five years and fines of $10,000 for such actions.

In Bethlehem, a map picturing Palestine before the Jewish state's creation was painted on one wall, with this slogan: "Congratulations, Palestine." The map contradicted the independence declaration, which was based on a 1947 U.N. plan calling for creation of Jewish and Arab states side-by-side in Palestine.

The Algiers declaration was expected to fuel the revolt against Israel's 21-year rule in the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Human rights violations up in El Salvador, U.N. reports

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Human rights violations have risen sharply this year in El Salvador, where both the government and guerrillas are to blame for an increase in bloodshed, a U.N. report said Monday.

The report, which echoes a similar accusations made by Amnesty International last week, said death squads linked to the military have stepped up their violent tactics in 1988.

"An alarming number of politically motivated summary executions, including mass executions, have been carried out by members of the state apparatus, particularly the armed forces," said the U.N. report.

But it also said leftist guerrillas have persisted in assassinating people who collaborate with the armed forces.

It said guerrilla groups have "revived the equally disturbing practice of indiscriminate urban terrorism, which seriously endangers the lives and physical integrity of civilians."

It said that the rebels' "continuing systematic attacks on the country's economic infrastructure also seriously undermine the present and future enjoyment by Salvadoran citizens of important economic, social and cultural rights."

Meanwhile, Guillermo Ungo, an opposition candidate for president, told a news conference here Monday that there is "no chance to have a fair election when the army controls the main political structure."

Ungo is the presidential candidate of the Democratic Convergence, a coalition of three leftist parties.

He also is president of the Democratic Revolutionary Front, which is allied with the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, the umbrella organization of five guerrilla groups fighting the U.S.-backed government.

"In El Salvador, as in Chile, just because there are elections, doesn't mean there is democracy," Ungo said in English.

The increased activity of death squads comes at a time when President Jose Napoleon Duarte is suffering from cancer and leftist leaders are re-entering the country after guerrillas agreed to let their political wings participate in a March 1989 presidential election.

The U.N. report was prepared by Jose Antonio Pastor Ridruejo, special representative of the Commission on Human Rights, which requested an investigation. Ridruejo visited El Salvador Oct. 9-15.

The report said armed forces occasionally kill and injure civilians, but that guerrillas "continue to cause more civilian deaths and injuries than the army, as a result of the explosion of contact mines (and)...guerrilla fire."

In Washington, Amnesty International USA also noted what it said was "an alarming resurgence of death squad activity" in the country.

It said an average of 12 "death squad-style" killings per month occurred in El Salvador in 1987 and said that figure tripled during the first half of 1988, according to estimates by the Roman Catholic Church.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Thatcher will bid farewell to Reagan

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher flies to Washington today to bid goodbye to President Reagan and welcome President-elect George Bush to the ranks of Western leaders.

The British leader, who has marched in ideological step with Reagan since he took office eight years ago, thanked him in a speech Monday for what she said has been his main contribution to the West:

"Let us above all thank President Reagan for ending the West's retreat from world responsibility, for restoring the pride and leadership of the U.S., and for giving the West back its confidence — confidence not only in the success of free enterprise but also in the values which guide our societies." Speaking at the annual Lord Mayor's banquet in the City, London's financial area, she added: "He has left America stronger, prouder, greater than ever before and we thank him for it."

In the speech, Mrs. Thatcher also announced Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev would visit Britain Dec. 12-14. Around Dec. 7, Gorbachev is to visit the United Nations as well as meet with Reagan for a fifth time and possibly see Bush, U.S. officials say.

U.S. businessmen sought

BHOPAL, India (AP) — Arrest warrants were issued today for former Union Carbide chairman Warren Anderson and two other officials of the U.S. multinational in connection with the 1984 Bhopal gas disaster.

On Dec. 3, 1984, more than 3,100 people were killed and at least 20,000 injured when toxic gas leaked out of a tank at a pesticide plant operated by Union Carbide's Indian subsidiary.

Chief judicial magistrate R.C. Mishra issued the arrest warrants today after Anderson and the two Carbide officials failed to honor summonses to appear in the Bhopal magistrate's court to answer murder charges.

The summonses for Anderson and the two others were issued last December when the murder charges were filed in conjunction with the Indian government's still unresolved $3 billion damage suit against Union Carbide.

The arrest warrants were issued for Anderson; John MacDonald, assistant secretary of Union Carbide Corp., headquartered in Danbury, Conn., and Peter J. Whitley, attorney for Union Carbide Eastern Inc.

Mexico city's smog levels up

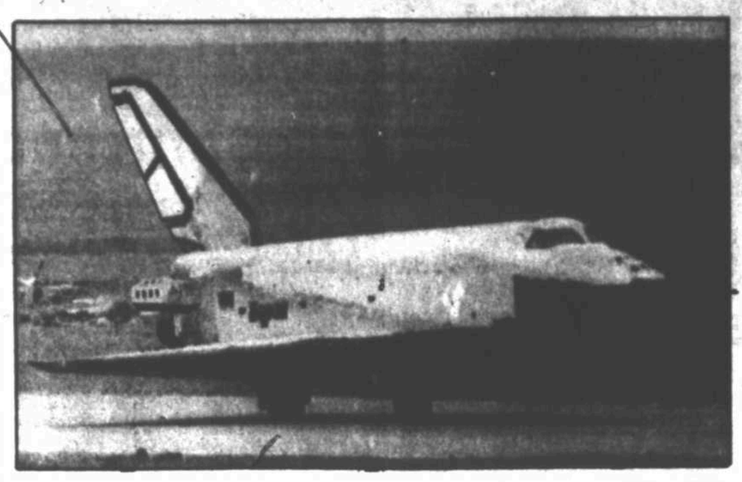

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Air pollution levels have soared in recent days, prompting ecologists to warn of health hazards while government officials say there is no cause for alarm.

Chilly, breezeless nights pushed up ozone levels to .25 parts per million in the southwestern section of this sprawling metropolitan area.

But federal environmental officials Monday said there was no need to worry about the thick cloud that reddened the eyes of capital dwellers and rendered invisible towering buildings as close as a mile away.

Local ecologists, however, called the levels "frightening." They complained the government should do more to combat pollution plaguing this city of 20 million.

Buran's success boosts Soviet space program

AP Laserphoto

The Soviet space shuttle Buran lands safely in Soviet Central Asia today, after its flawless, 3½-hour unmanned flight. It landed some eight miles from its launch pad.

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet space shuttle Buran orbited the Earth twice today and landed eight miles from its launch pad in Soviet Central Asia, ending with flawless precision its unmanned 3-hour, 25-minute maiden flight.

The successful flight puts the Soviets into the shuttle program alongside the United States. A major success for the Soviet space program, it comes after a series of problems including the near loss of cosmonauts on a joint Soviet-Afghan mission to the Mir space station in September.

The Buran, or "snowstorm" in Russian, touched down on a 2.8-mile concrete runway with a puff of dust from its rear wheels and rolled to a halt as three parachutes opened at its rear.

"The U.S.S.R. has successfully tested its first reusable space craft Buran," official Radio Moscow said, interrupting regular programming two minutes after touchdown.

The flight originally was scheduled for Oct. 29, but computers stopped that countdown with only 51 seconds left when an access arm failed to pull far enough away from the rocket. Officials said they had since redesigned the joint.

Within 30 minutes of today's landing, Soviet television showed the fully automated approach and touchdown of the delta-winged U.S. shuttle look-alike in the middle of the barren, brown steppe.

Radio Moscow said the flight, which had been in jeopardy because of cold, rainy weather, went according to schedule, and all on-board tests were completed.

Pointing to the January 1986 explosion of the U.S. shuttle Challenger that killed its seven crewmembers, Soviet officials say they will not make a manned flight until all the shuttle's systems are fully tested in unmanned flight.

They have not said when that might be.

Tass said President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, informed of the flight's success, said the flight was "one more confirmation of the kind of huge possibilities the Soviet Union has to solve any problem."

Buran separated as planned from the liquid fuel Energia booster minutes after it lifted off from the Baikonur Cosmodrome in a flame of yellow, with clouds of white steam lighting up the early morning sky.

About three-quarters of an hour later, Buran's own engines fired twice at an altitude of 99 miles, nudging the craft into its two orbits.

Television film shot from a jet aircraft showed the shuttle's dark silhouette against a pale blue-gray sky as it approached the landing site, then switched to closer shots as the shuttle landed like an aircraft.

The official Tass news agency said as it prepared to re-enter the atmosphere, the shuttle turned its tail forward, and switched on a retrofire engine. At an altitude of 24 miles, the craft turned again and began its approach like an airplane.

The weather service in Moscow reported that it had been raining in Baikonur three hours before the launch, and the temperature was 39 degrees.

Prince's birthday party tricolor tribute to his urban actions

New York Times News Service

BIRMINGHAM, England — Prince Charles celebrated his 40th birthday Monday in the inner city with more than 1,500 young Britons whose exuberant reception seemed the stuff reserved more for rock stars than for royalty.

Charles

The huge birthday party, in a once-derelict streetcar shed decorated with the national flag and red, white and blue balloons, was a tribute of sorts to the prince's activities in behalf of Britain's urban areas.

As a roving ambassador for the blighted inner cities, he has planted hope amid the ruins.

He chose to spend the onset of middle age with young people who have been helped by the Prince's Trust, his personal charity, and other organizations he spearheads.

He formed the trust 12 years ago in a move to provide grants, training, jobs and self-help programs that could develop the potential of disadvantaged youths.

The day seemed to be part of a continuing effort by the heir apparent to the British throne to define himself as an active prince who embraces the role of a people's advocate concerned about unemployment, urban regeneration, industrial redevelopment, race relations and other important social issues.

In short, the day's event suggested, he is not a frustrated, jobless king-in-waiting.

Looking like a political candidate as he inched his way through the crowd, stopping often to chat or shake hands, Prince Charles characterized the celebration as "one of those extremely enjoyable but incredibly embarrassing situations."

He added that he was "enormously touched" by the display of affection in the tram shed, which had been refurbished by youths employed by the prince's charity.

Displaying his quirky sense of humor, he then launched into a self-parody of a man who has been ridiculed in the British press for consulting gurus and admitting that he talks to plants.

"Only the other day, I was inquiring of a bed of old-fashioned roses forced to listen to my demented ramblings on the meaning of the universe," said Prince Charles, wearing a badge that read "Life Begins at Forty" in his lapel.

"And as I sat cross-legged in the lotus position on a gravel path in front of them, I was inquiring of them what they thought would happen on my birthday in a Birmingham tram shed. 'A tram shed?' they all replied. 'Yes, a tram shed.' 'Can't they find anything more salubrious in Birmingham?' asked one who had lost her petals and was looking decidedly the worse for wear.

" 'Apparently not,' " the prince said, continuing his odd fable. " 'They seem to have knocked most of it down. They can't find anything else.'

At this point, a row of prize leeks — cocky little things — lurking in a nearby vegetable patch chipped in to say that they expected the shed would be full of semi-naked Kalahari Bushmen doing a fertility dance and a troupe or two of Tibetan monks who had proceeded from Saffron Walden by levitation with advance copies of the tabloid newspapers which will be strewn in my path with ancient Buddhist greetings.

" 'Don't be ridiculous,' I said. 'They would not dare.' 'Oh, yes they would,' chorused half an acre of Brussels sprouts. 'There will also be an entire flock of pedigree gurus.' "

But then the prince told his audience: "Looking around I see that those idiotic plants had got it wrong again. I knew they would. Instead, you have given me one of the best birthday parties I could ever have hoped for."

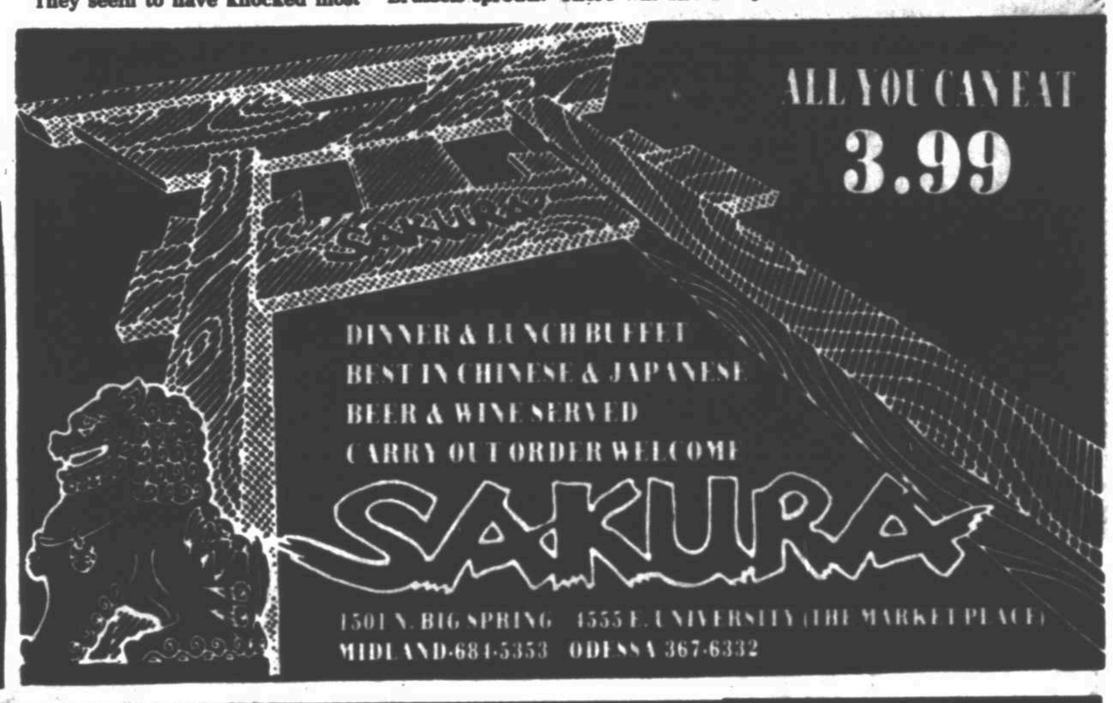

Earlier in the day, Prince Charles collected kisses from well-wishers on a tour of a Birmingham shopping center where he undertook a $70 million appeal for his Youth Business Trust, which helps young people set up businesses.

The government has agreed to match private donations to the appeal.

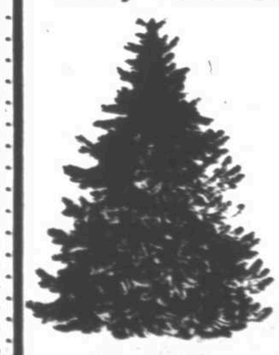

He's back! And this time...
