New and Modern Cotton

Gin For Muleshoe Assured

A new and modern cotton gin is practically assured for Muleshoe for the coming season, and plans are being worked out for the new plant which will be erected. A representative of one of the biggest Gin Companies in West Texas met with the Chamber of Commerce Wednesday night to discuss the location of the plant. He was very enthusiastic over the prospects of the Muleshoe territory, and stated that the plant would be of the very latest machinery. The representative has made a trip over the territory and stated that he believed it would be one of the best cotton sections in the West.

Another meeting will be held within the next day or two, at which time the details are expected to be worked out. Farmers are looking forward to a gin of the best class and many are preparing land this week for planting the new crop. Many acres are being irrigated in advance, and pumping plants will be brought into use all through the season.

Man Seriously Injured In Fall From Windmill Tower

W. E. Hughes, of near the Longview community, was seriously injured Thursday of last week when he fell 94 feet to the ground from a windmill tower on which he was working. Mr. Hughes became overbalanced when a piece of piping which he was pulling from the well unexpectedly came loose, striking him on the head. He landed on his feet, the force of the fall shattering the bones in his right foot. Both shoes were burst by the fall. Mr. Hughes was immediately rushed to the Lubbock Sanitarium. His condition is reported as good as could be expected under the circumstances. It is said that it may be necessary to remove the crushed foot.

Farm Book Offered Journal Readers

Through the courtesy of the Kokomo Steel Wire Company of Kokomo, Indiana, the Journal is enabled to give a special service to its farm readers. The Kokomo Company has just published a farmer's book on diversification which will be sent free of charge to the Kokomo Steel and Wire Company of Kokomo, Indiana, for the Journal readers.

After a thorough research in the problems of the farmer, the Educational Department of the Steel Company compiled authoritative information on how to make a farm pay bigger profits by diversification. The book is quite lengthy, comprising sixty-four pages, devoted exclusively to tried and proven methods of farm diversification that will give the farmer financial returns. The book is attractively bound for constant use and reference by farmers.

Planning in different parts of the country is taken up at length, giving detailed information concerning various management, relation of crops, and selection of stock for particular sections.

The Journal readers are urged to drop a card or letter to the Kokomo Steel and Wire Company, Kokomo, Indiana, for this free booklet.

Mrs. Lilla Daniel is spending a few days with her mother, Mrs. R. L. Faulkner.

There are nineteen buildings, all new, well lighted and ventilated. Sanitation is the best available, running water, chemical toilets, shower bath, and all the modern and correct tests of drinking water. There will be three ten day periods. First period opens June 13th. Scouts and parents desiring complete information should inquire of local leaders.

MANY OBJECT TO CHANGE IN NAME OF TOWN

There are some in our midst who would very much like to have the name of our town changed. Some have what they call very good reasons. Probably they are good reasons, but there has been one who was in favor of a change in the name we find about eight who are emphatically opposed to it. We wish to state that as far as the Journal is concerned, we are in favor of Muleshoe. To date we have been unable to get any of the parties who are in favor of a name change to suggest an "appropriate" one, and we doubt if they ever will.

The Journal has received some letters on the subject, one party inclosing a clipping of a newspaper report of Lindbergh turning his famous plane, "The Spirit of St. Louis" over to the Smithsonian Institute. With the plane is the symbol of the 110th Observation Squadron, Missouri National Guard. This symbol is a mule kicking high in the air, wearing aviator's goggles and helmet. The letter in question reads in part:

Editor, Muleshoe Journal, Dear Sir:

Note by the inclosed clipping that preserved with Lindbergh's plane in the Smithsonian Institute will be the emblem of the Missouri National Guard, viz: "A mule kicking high in the air." This should vindicate the name of "Muleshoe" and be some solace to a new name to suggest a change to the name of Muleshoe. A Reader.

ALUMNI AND EX-STUDENT REUNION, WAYLAND COLLEGE

Plainview, Texas, May 8.—Alumni and Ex-student of Wayland College will make a pilgrimage back to the Alma Mater, Saturday, May 19, during commencement exercises for the annual reunion and get-together party.

A banquet will be held at the Hotel Weyer, beginning at 8:30 Saturday evening, to be followed by talks of the past, present and future of Wayland College.

Several hundred former students are expected to gather at their old Alma Mater, causing much interest all over Texas and other states. Students will find the school in better financial condition than it has ever been with the debt recently lifted and plans for endowment well under way.

Charles Pierce, of Dallas, president of the Alumni and Ex-Students Association reports that much interest is being shown by students over the state. The reunion last year at Wayland was the best ever held in the district. It will soon be under way.

The reunion last year was declared a success and his co-workers are out to make the 1928 reunion one that will go down in the history of the school.

Reports of Saturday's Election Shows Drys in Control

Little interest was shown in the election of delegates to the Democratic convention here Saturday. Reports are that politics were brisk in other sections of the county however and according to newspaper reports the drys of Texas are controlling the election of candidates to the State convention. The following from the Lubbock Journal gives practically all developments in the elections Saturday:

Advocates of prohibition will have a plank in the democratic platform and a dry candidate for president will be in control of the democratic state convention at Beaumont, May 22.

This was made certain by returns from more than half of the conventions held in 233 counties of Texas yesterday which showed various factions of the Texas Democratic party united for a strong stand in support of the 18th amendment.

Reports from conventions of the Republican party in Texas also held yesterday indicated that Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce, was favored for the Republican presidential nomination.

Texas forty delegates to the national convention at Houston will be chosen at Beaumont, and indications are that Governor Dan Moody of Texas will be chosen as chairman of the delegation.

The returns showed that of 750 delegates out of 825 in the state convention 210 were uncommitted both as to prohibition and candidates; 390 were instructed for a prohibition plank; 81 were instructed to vote against any wet candidate; 33 were for Gov. Smith and 6 for Jesse Jones of Houston, Democratic national treasurer.

Of the 38 conventions of the state Republican party which returns were gathered, 26 gave specific instructions for Mr. Hoover to delegates to the Republican state convention at Dallas May 22.

The third annual May pageant of Texas Technological College will be presented on the athletic field the evening of Saturday, May 12, at 8:00 o'clock. Approximately 600 students of the college will take part in the affair which is under the direction of Eunice Cox, expression instructor.

The pageant, which is entitled "Within Reach of the Plains People," is to be divided into three divisions: Division one, featuring men of American and Texas history who have excelled in their lives characteristics of the pioneer; Division two, student and worthy of every Texas student and every citizen of the United States; Division two, portraying every department of the four schools of the college and Division three dealing with the seven educational products which Texas Technological College is endeavoring to inculcate in the lives of those who come under its influence.

The opening event of the pageant will be the crowning of the queen, Miss Merle Williams, of Lubbock who is to retain the activities of the evening. Mr. Armon G. Carter, president of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, and former member of the board of directors of the college, is sending out equipment for amplifying the speaking parts of the program.

Famous Dog At Brooks Theatre

"Wolf Fangs"—Another thrilling and colorful story of the adventures of a dog, starring "Thunder" the wonder dog discovered by Fox Films last year, comes to the Brooks Theatre Friday and Saturday.

The picture, according to reports, is a sensational gem, set against the gorgeous background of Mt. Baker National Park in Oregon, one of the most, but one of the most picturesque of the National Forest Reserves.

Charles Morton and Cary Lincoln, who play the human leads, are said to give exceptionally good performances, while the veteran actor, James Gordon, acquires his usual as does Frank Rice. This is one of the greatest dog pictures that has ever been filmed.

DOWN ON THE CONCHO

The Journal is in receipt of a letter from Mr. C. B. Williams, formerly in charge of drilling operations for the Humble Oil Company here, asking that his paper be changed to Concho, Texas. Concho is Mr. Williams' "old stamping ground" of which the editor is fairly well acquainted, and we understand that he means when he says to come down and help catch the "big ones." Concho is noted for its fish and all we have to say is for Mr. Williams to watch out, we're coming.

Post script attached to letter says:

Bear in mind that fishing on the Concho is for Muleshoe at large and not just the editor. Have been waiting for a good rain before moving back to the good town of Muleshoe.

Muleshoe is in the land of shallow water, and is being brought to the surface every day for growing crops. No need to wait for rain.

Much relief from dry weather was had last week when a good rain, measuring one-fourth of an inch fell over this section. Beginning late Thursday evening the rain fell slowly for an hour or better. SYNOPSIS

Immersed by the open-handed generosity of his father, Virginia gentleman, young Webster Broad is serving as a scout for the army under General Braddock preparing for the advance on Duquesne. He has just returned to Alexandria from a visit to Fort Mifflin, where, posing as a Frenchman, he has secured valuable information.

I worked my way into the taproom at the Royal George and made bold to put a question to a young soldier. He eyed me haughtily, and then began to address my feelings and fringed skirt, the nearest he could yet come to Indian life, and in a low voice, so as not to betray his identity, began to babble the available truth really seen as well Indians? That I killed any? Was it true the savages cooked and ate at their prisoners? At last I satisfied his goodness and finally learned what I had desired.

Governor Dinwiddie had returned from the Maryland shore and was at the Carlyle house together with others of the council. They were holding the last conference before the army marched.

Quitting the Royal George I hastened to conclude my business. The lumbering coach had disappeared by the time I reached the Carlyle house, but the horses of the escort were tethered under the vestibule roof of Lombardy poplars and I knew the council was still in session.

I was acquainted with the house in side and out, and it had changed none during my absence. Mr. Carlyle, a most gracious, kindly man, had perused us boys to explore it and make it figure prominently in some of our games. Once on a dare from Busby I had climbed out of a dormer window and crawled among the heavy-shrouded chimneys and was severely lectured by the owner.

I advanced toward the dark door and quickly found a young soldier disputing my approach with the sentinel growling for me to halt. His side-long glance at my rifle was ill-favored. My fringed skirt and leggings did not meet with his approval.

"I have news for his excellency Governor Dinwiddie," I told him. "This is General Braddock's head quarters. Go back to the rear guard woods-rat," he commanded.

"I have news for General Braddock," I persisted. He advanced the bayonet and, red with anger, I leaped back to escape being pricked. He came on as I retreated, and in this humiliating manner I was being driven to the rear gate and his massive carved frame when a familiar voice asked an explanation. The sentinel started over my shoulder and I knew he kept his bayonet at my breast.

Without turning my head I explained: "I am Webster Broad, Mr. Carlyle. I have news for the council if I am permitted to give it."

Mr. Carlyle stepped forward and said to the soldier: "I know this young man. He is one of our citizens and he comes from the western country. The council will wish to hear what he has to say."

But the red-coat knew his orders—and therein was a good soldier—and he would not give in an inch until a superior had passed on my application. He bowed out, and a sergeant appeared on the scene, and Mr. Carlyle repeated his indiscreetness of me. The sergeant ordered the sentinel back to his post and told us we were at liberty to proceed.

Word was carried inside and after several minutes, during which I heard the clinking of glasses and the muffled door of a faint, an officer opened the door and motioned for me to enter. I had expected Mr. Carlyle to accompany me, but he was not included in the invitation. He gave me a smile and a nod and passed down the hall and out into the garden.

My conductor motioned for me to halt just inside the door and await the pleasure of the august commander of all the king's soldiers in America General Braddock—of Irish descent many say, but his name is saxon "Broadcloth"—and Governor Dinwiddie on his right hand and Governor the Lacey of New York on his left.

The others around the board were Governors Shillineau of Massachusetts, Sharpe of Maryland, Dobbin of North Carolina, Morris of Pennsylvania. Near the foot of the table were Commodore Keppel, Sir John Mordaunt, British quartermaster general, and a prominent citizen I had seen several times in Philadelphia, Benjamin Franklin.

None paid any attention to me because a Canadian gentleman from Boston had ing the door. It is very possible some of them took me to be an Indian, or a half-breed; for among the forest folk I was known as Black Broad, and wind and sun had tanned my skin until, on first glance, I was as good as a red man as found Paw of the Wolf club, my thousandth friend. Mr. Franklin was warning General Braddock against his long-drawn-out line being taken by surprise. General Braddock did not relish the admission and haughtily replied:

"The savage may be a formidable enemy to your raw militia, but, but the king's regiments and disciplined troops it is impossible that they can make any impression."

I thought of the red-coats and the blue-coats discharged in blind valleys, and wondered.

Governor Dinwiddie leaned from his chair and scrutinized me closely, smiling slightly, and said:

"General Braddock, I believe I recognize an Alexandrian in the young

"In my opinion does not at once bring results, then you shall try your way, Sir John," said Mr. Franklin. "But let us see if the young man has anything new to report."

I rapidly stated:

"Inquire is temporarily under the command of Captain Beaulieu, of the marines. He has under him about one hundred and fifty Canadian and less than a hundred regulars. His Indian number between six hundred and a thousand, but they come and go in such a fashion that it's hard to give their number with any exactness. Beaulieu is heaping many gifts on the troops in the hope of drawing them from France the line on the side of France. The Indians are nervous and afraid to fight. They have been told our army will number many thousands. If it were not for Captain Beaulieu and his Indians, the leader of the Ottawas and Ojibwas, Captain Jacobs and Singlets of the Delaware, many of the Indians would have fled the hatchet and return to their villages."

"The fort cannot stand a siege and will not attempt it. Captain Beaulieu fears that William Johnson will succeed in holding the New York troops neutral even if he is not able to enlist them for active service in the Crown Point and Niagara expeditions."

"How is it that you know what this Beaulieu thinks, sirrah?" harshly interrupted General Braddock.

I explained how I had passed myself off at the fort as a Canadian forgerunner and how my Ojibwa friend had been accepted as a French Indian. The general stared at me suspiciously and demanded:

"Who vouches for this man, who talks French and fools an officer of the marines?"

Governor Dinwiddie promptly interposed:

"The general dropped his head and stared at his empty glass. As they seemed to be waiting for me to continue, I said:

"It is commonly believed in Pennsylvania that Carlisle would be vastly better as a frontier station than will's creek, as it is more accessible to Philadelphia and other centers of supplies. It is also believed that had his majesty's troops landed at Philadelphia the march to the heads of the Ohio would be shortened by six weeks and would have saved at least forty thousand pounds."

Governor Morris nodded in affirmation of this, but the general testily broke in:

"Enough of provincial fault-finding. Very plain the people of Pennsylvania do not care to bear any of the burdens of this campaign. Maryland and Virginia have promised two hundred and fifty wagons and eleven hundred horses, and thus far have delivered twenty wagons and two hundred poor horses. The provisions received from Maryland are worthless—broken down horses and spoiled rations."

"I have vouches for horses and wagons," quietly reminded Mr. Franklin.

eyes half closed, now spoke up and quietly said, "Pennsylvania will do her part, General. I will pledge that Virginia and Maryland were to furnish wagons and horses. Pennsylvania has not been informed that more was expected of her than has been given. The jealousy between the colonies are so unfortunate. As for the road, our committee is surveying it. Pennsylvania is firmly believe, General, that the old trading path, running due west from Philadelphia to Duquesne, is the road your army should take. It keeps to higher drier ground and crosses no streams of any size. The road Virginia insists on is a 'portage' road. We also believe the old trading path would accelerate the movement of supplies to your army, especially those from northern colonies. We believe it's an error to have the expedition start from and pass through Pennsylvania, where every farmer has a wagon but I promise you the necessary carts and mules by the time they are wanted, General."

Garbled in snuff-colored clothes and excited looking in those personal observations which he uttered and placed the eye, nevertheless Mr. Franklin impressed me as being a man of destiny, and by great odds the strongest man in the room. Not that I was a general Braddock in my comparisons.

Sir John St. Clair treated hard and cold he could obtain the wagons and horses from the line and the line in the back columns should Mr. Franklin fall. Sir John impressed me as being a man of much temper and I believed he would have been doing better than to use old-world methods in collecting whatever the army needed.

"If my appeal does not at once bring results, then you shall try your way, Sir John," said Mr. Franklin. "But let us see if the young man has anything new to report."

I rapidly stated:

"Inquire is temporarily under the command of Captain Beaulieu, of the marines. He has under him about one hundred and fifty Canadian and less than a hundred regulars. Bread of Guetersloh Boosted by Bismarck

Guetersloh was a town of some 1,500 inhabitants some years ago when one day during the maneuvers a young lieutenant took up his quarters there. This lieutenant came from Pomerania, where they also make black bread of fine quality, but he liked the peculiar flavor of the Westphalia article. His name was Bismarck.

In the year 1870 Bismarck was again traveling through Guetersloh, this time as chancellor. King William was with him, and when the train stopped the prime minister called out suddenly to the crowd that had come to meet them:

"Is there anyone who can get us some pumpernickel with butter?"

was made and it speedily became the fashion all over Germany. The craze for Westphalian pumpernickel spread far and wide, cunningly fostered by the bakers, who now baked for export only small one-pound loaves, for the purpose of making it look "more like a delicatessen" as they say.

The bakers of Guetersloh were worldly-wise, for from the same kneading troughs there go into the bread that the huge loaves (certainly of these going to the famous ones) weigh half a hundredweight and then, shaped of what was left, the loaves that are wrapped in paper and exported to all parts of the world to be sold as a delicatessen.

Every week has too many sights to step up into on all of them. —Newcastle (Ind.) Courier.

HOW TO BUILD UP MUSCLES

By J. J. TOEDT
Wilson Avenue "Y," Chicago.

"THE SPRINTER"

Position—Something like the sprinter at the start of a race, but with one leg extended.

Exercise—Extend flexed leg, as you flex yourself leg.

Position—Place yourself in a position as a runner does at the start of a race, but with one leg extended well back. You place your one foot between the hands, the other leg extended back.

Exercise—This is a dandy. We call it the "Best Exercise" in our gym classes because it is a little more useful than the first exercise. As you extend the flexed leg backward, you quickly flex the extended leg, placing foot between hands. We call this continuous alternation, extension and flexion of legs. All right, are you ready? Let's go. One—two—etc. Remember this as "The Sprinter."

The next five exercises are a special group adapted for the reduction of weight, and will also build up healthy tissue.

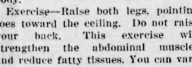

"DOUBLE-LEG-RAISE"

Position—Lie on back, hands under thighs.

Exercise—Raise both legs, pointing toes toward the ceiling. Do not raise your back. This exercise will strengthen the abdominal muscles and reduce fatty tissues. You can vary this by gradually lessening the raise of the legs until they are raised only with a few inches from the floor.

This latter method will reach all the deeper muscles of the abdomen. Also reaches many other muscles in legs and chest and arms. Do this about six times the first day until you have had plenty of abdominal work, and then increase it from day to day until you reach thirty-two counts.

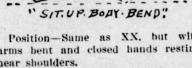

"SIT UP BODY-BEND"

Position—Same as XX, but with arms and closed hands resting near shoulders.

Exercise—Raise body to sitting position without raising head from floor.

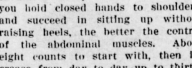

Position same as XX, lying on back with arms bent, hands closed and placed near shoulders. Exercise—Raise body to sitting position without raising head from floor. The closer you hold closed hands to shoulders, and succeed in sitting up without raising head, the greater the control of the abdominal muscles. About eight counts to start with, then increase from day to day up to thirty-two counts.

"THE SPREAD"

Position—Same as XX, lying on back with hands under thighs.

Exercise—Raise body to sitting position without raising head from floor. The closer you hold closed hands to shoulders, and succeed in sitting up without raising head, the greater the control of the abdominal muscles. About eight counts to start with, then increase from day to day up to thirty-two counts.

"LOOK AT TOES"

Position—Lying on back. Hands alongside of body.

Exercise—Raise head and look at toes.

Use the lying position as in the last exercise but with arms resting alongside of body. The exercise is to raise head and look at your toes. Do not raise the toes. You may tire quickly with this exercise and you need not perform it many times; about six counts or less will do. This will help equalize the circulation of the blood after a heavy exercise.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

MARY GRAHAM BONNER

NOT WANTED

Peter Goblin had driven Mr. Mumps, Mr. Measles, Mrs. Croup and Master Chicken Pox away from the children.

"I make children fat," said Mr. Mumps. "Of course I never bother about more than their cheeks. They grumble so after I've made them fat that I get disheartened."

"Good thing you do," said Peter Goblin. "You're certainly a mean enough."

Mr. Mumps knew Peter was right, so he didn't say another word in reply.

"We wanted to have you talk to us," said Mr. Measles, "because we cannot understand you."

"I try to protect the children from getting measles, mumps, chicken pox and croup."

"Of course they have to help me by trying to keep as well and strong as possible so they may escape you."

"Whenever one of you gets just up how badly we do feel. We can't keep you out entirely but we can help."

"And then good and kind doctors drive you away."

"We hate doctors," said Mr. Measles. "Well," said Mrs. Croup, "we shouldn't hate them so much, because we give them a lot of trouble, and we have to give trouble."

"That's so, we do," said Master Chicken Pox.

"But," said Mr. Measles, "people say—"

"Oh, don't catch the measles. And be careful not to catch the mumps. Don't go near anyone with a chicken pox or you might catch it."

"Now to catch a thing," continued Mr. Measles, "means to chase after it or try to get it in some way."

"If they don't like us why do they chase after it?"

"They say: 'Be careful not to catch Mr. Measles. Mumps.'"

"It is very silly, for if they really don't like us why do they chase after it?"

"Don't let Mr. Mumps catch you. It is rather an absurd expression," admitted Peter Goblin, "but stay away from children and talk about it for a good long while."

"That's what you must all do."

Budding Diplomat

Little Bobby, aged three, was so fond of playing with his toy automobile that he had on one occasion refused to part with it when it was time to go home. He had, therefore, been forbidden to ask for it when he called again.

But Bobby was a budding diplomat. On his next visit he asked, "How is your toy automobile running now?" and when he heard it was in good order remarked casually, "I don't want it. I just wanted to be sure nobody had burgled it!"

The silliness to say, he got the "auto bike."

A Figure Puzzle

Open a book at random, and select a word within the first ten lines, and within the tenth word from the end of the line. Mark the word. Now double the number of the page and multiply the sum by five. Then add 30. Then add the number of the line you have selected. Then add five. Multiply the sum by ten. Add the number of the word in the line. From this sum subtract 254 and the remainder will indicate in the units column the number of the line, and in the tens column the number of the word, and in the remaining figures the number of the page.

Jealous Little Joan

Little Joan, aged five, had always been somewhat jealous of her brother, Jackie, two years her junior. However, one day when playing some of the older children persisted in tormenting Jackie, Joan came to his rescue and mothered him beautifully.

Later she confided to her mother: "Mamma, I don't like Jackie very much, but when a boy is mean to him I like him a lot."

Children Not Allowed

The three boys wanted to go to see their aunt and her new baby, Mrs. Mother protested, but still they insisted.

"Why, children aren't allowed in the hospital," insisted Mother.

"Well," said Jack, "if they're not allowed, then how in the world did the baby, Mary, get in?"

Early Phone Conversation

The first long-distance telephone conversation was from Boston to Cambridge in 1876, and the length of the line was only two miles, according to the New Jersey public utility information committee. At the end of 1928 there were nearly 6,300,000 miles of telephone wire devoted exclusively to long-distance messages, which total about 100,000 every day. It means of transcontinental trunk lines and branches running north and south it is possible to carry on a long-distance telephone conversation between almost any two points within the United States as well as in Canada and Cuba.

MOTHER'S DAY

Mother's day, which is the second Sunday in May, falls on May 13 this year and will be observed throughout the United States in response to the annual proclamation by the President. As is well known, the object of the day is to recall memories of the mothers who have passed to the beyond and to pay special tributes of affection to those living. The badge for the day is the white carnation, emblematic of the purity, beauty and fidelity of a mother's love. By some the red carnation is worn in honor of living mothers.

Miss Anna Jarvis of Philadelphia, originated the idea of Mother's Day, which was observed in several cities in 1910, the custom being extended rapidly in the following years. In 1913 Congress passed a resolution offering Congressman J. Thos. Heflin of Alabama (now senator) recommending observance of the day by its members and by the executive departments at Washington. In 1914 Congress authorized the President to designate the second Sunday in May of each year as Mother's Day, the first proclamation under this authority being issued by President Wilson on May 9, 1914.

Diversified Farming Is Safe Farming

One-crop farming in the long run will make both farm and farmer poor, says the State-Block Agricultural Foundation. To make farming safe, a variety of crops must be grown and part of the crops must be marketed in the form of live stock and live-stock products.

Neither factories nor workmen can hope to prosper unless they are busy the year around. By growing a variety of crops, it becomes possible to arrange the farm operations so as to have field work from spring to fall, and feeling these crops will enable the farmer to turn his winter time into cash. Caring for live stock, including poultry, and for a garden provides useful work for the winter months of the family and gives them an opportunity to earn money and to lose something of their own.

The farmer who raises only one crop is rushed part of the year and idle the rest. Usually this type of farmer does not grow his own living end, therefore, is in debt when harvest time arrives. He must rush his crop to market irrespective of price. With a variety of crops, it is unlikely that all of them will be failures or low in price at once. Diversified farming, including the growing of the family living in the form of a garden, poultry and eggs, milk and meat, leads to a bank account instead of a store account.

Live stock production leads directly to growing a variety of crops, the foundation adds. These will include legumes which aid in maintaining fertility. Also, three-fourths of the fertility removed from the soil by the crop can be returned in the manure. For this reason, live stock farms almost invariably have higher yields per acre, which mean lower crop production costs. Live stock farming feeds the soil, while one-crop farming robs the soil.

If the one-crop farmers of the South, collectively, would grow their own food and feed, reducing to that extent the acreage and supply of cotton, the higher price which the staple would bring would go far toward compensating them for the smaller amount they would have for sale. They would receive nearly as much cash for cotton as they do under their present method and they would have much more cash left after taking care of necessary farm and family expenses. Thus, they could largely free themselves from fear of those win disasters, an excessive total crop and relatively low prices, or a crop failure with high prices and nothing to sell.

Few of us reflect as often as we should on the debt of love and gratitude we owe to our mothers. By thoughts and acts of sincere affection on Mother's Day, we not only honor them, but also honor ourselves.

Protect Your Investment in Your Model T Ford

THE Ford Motor Company is making a new car, but it is still proud of the Model T. It wants every owner of one of these cars to run it as long as possible at a minimum of expense.

Because of this policy and because of the investment that millions of motorists have in Model T cars, the Ford Motor Company will continue to make parts until, as Henry Ford himself says, "the last Model T is off the road."

More than eight million Model T Fords are still in active service, and many of them can be driven for two, three and five years and even longer.

So that you may get the greatest use over the longest period of time at the lowest cost, we suggest that you take your Model T Ford to the nearest Ford dealer and have him give you an estimate on the cost of any replacement parts that may be necessary.

You will find this the economical thing to do because a small expenditure may enable you to maintain or increase the value of the car and give you thousands of miles of additional service.

No matter where you live you can get these Ford parts at the same low prices as formerly and know they are made in the same way and of the same materials as those from which your car was originally assembled.

Labor cost is reasonable and a standard rate is charged for each operation so that you may know in advance exactly how much the complete job will cost.

GIFTS TO BRIDESMAIDS

Dear Sue:

Patsy's gifts to her bridesmaids came today, and I am so enthusiastic about it I thought I would write you at once in case you want to pass the idea on to your soon-to-be-married Cora. It is a perfectly lovely set of costume jewelry in turquoise, set in gold—necklace, bracelet, single brooch and large-stoned ring. Nothing could be more appropriate for our bridesmaids' costume of chiffon, shading from rose bodice to pale pink, petal-shaped hem. Could it? The matron of honor, her married sister, whose dress is all one shade of turquoise blue, received the same kind of a set—only in pretty topaz—you see, the colors contrasting. These sets of jewelry are now the fashion, of course, as gifts to bridal attendants, because one now wears ornaments specially chosen for each costume, and if a bride chooses your costume she must also select your jewelry. We had wondered why Patsy had remained silent on this important point, and here is her answer in a fine set of hand-made ornaments, coming from well known jeweler—a gift which we will cherish for years to come.

FARM PRODUCTS THAT LOOK MOST FAVORABLE

An analysis of the government report on the agricultural situation for this year shows that the outlook for dairy products, beef cattle, hogs, flax, and alfalfa and clover seed is favorable, and that moderate expansion of production is permissible, the Sears-Robuck Agricultural Foundation points out. In other words, the signal for these products reads "Go ahead."

In case of most other products, however, the signs direct farmers to keep production stationary, or even to back up a little, if they wish to avoid the penalty of low prices. Among the products against which the stop sign is raised, or which should not be increased in 1928, are corn, oats, wheat, hay, cotton, barley, hogs, poultry, sheep, potatoes, sweet potatoes, tobacco, rice, dry beans and peanuts. The same is true of such other crops as castor beans, cantaloupes and watermelons. Curdlum, rather than expansion, is needed in commercial plantings of strawberries, grapes, peaches, and citrus fruits. Plantings of apples are not justified except under exceptionally favorable conditions.

Unfortunately, the area in each of the five major crops in 1927 was small as large as or larger than was needed, so that it is not possible to shift from one of these products to another in order to bring about a better adjustment of production to demand. These five crops range in size from about 100 million acres of corn down to 10 million acres of cotton with some hay, wheat and oats coming in between.

No other crop occupies as much as 10 million acres, however. It is possible to correct for this overplanting of these minor crops by shifting acreage into the major crops without materially affecting the output of the latter.

It is true that weather conditions cause large variations in crop yields from year to year, and sometimes are responsible for surpluses which depress prices. In the long run, however, changes in acreage are most important. Over a period of years the decisions made by farmers, collectively, make up as acreage of various crops and size of breeding herds and flocks play a larger role than the weather in determining financial results.

In making plans for 1928, each farmer must consider the conditions relating to his own farm, the Foundation states. If prospects are favorable for any product, not all farmers should expand, and if it is unfavorable, it does not follow that all should reduce production. For example, even if no general increase in production of feed crops is justified, each farmer should endeavor to produce his own supply. Likewise, he should plan for a supply of food crops, eggs, milk and meats for home use, irrespective of the market outlook for those products.

HOW TO CARE FOR BABY CHICKS

College Station, Texas.—As soon as baby chicks are hatched they should be put in a warm and quiet place until they are thoroughly hungry, which is when they are about 48 to 72 hours old, according to information given out by Prof. D. H. Reid, head of the Poultry husbandry department, A. & M. College of Texas. Then the little chicks should be transferred to a wire brooder, where plenty of feed is available.

In most cases it will pay to use a commercial chick starter, unless plenty of skim milk is available for the chicks. A ration can be made up of sixty pounds of yellow corn meal, 20 pounds shorts, five pounds cotton seed meal, five pounds alfalfa meal, five pounds meat scraps, three pounds bone meal and two pounds lime oyster shell. At least eight pounds of dried buttermilk should be added to the ration if skim milk is not available for them at all times.

The brooder should be warm and comfortable, large enough that the chicks are not crowded, and of a type that is easily cleaned. Probably the cheapest form for Texas farmers is the oil heated brooder. Care should be taken that the wind does not blow on the brooder as oil brooders will quickly catch fire.

An added precaution for the health of the chicks is to put them on wire netting, one half inch mesh, so that all droppings go through and out of reach of the chicks.

A patch of green grass on clean soil is a great help in raising baby chicks.

COWBOYS RIDE TO NEW YORK

Traveling in true cowboy fashion, Bob Hightower, 23, and George Hollinsworth, 38, left here Monday on their cross-country ride from Magdalena, N. M., to New York.

Both men are riding mustang ponies and their equipment is being carried on a pack horse. They expect to reach New York about September 1.

They resumed their journey from here Monday after spending a few days at the home of Bob's parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Hightower, five miles east of this city.

This trip to pay the expenses of the trip by selling post card pictures of their outfit, and if the trip is completed successfully they will win a wager of about $2,000.

At the time of arriving here, they had covered 300 miles in ten days, and their plans are to average from 15 to 20 miles a day from here to the metropolis.—Farwell State Line Tribune.

MERCHANTS COME IN

There is a well known play by the name of "It Pays to Advertise," and it is used as a common slogan among newspaper men but quite often among merchants who are not advertisers, we hear it said, "That it is all right for the cities but it doesn't apply to the small towns."

One of the most conclusive stories we have heard on this matter was told by a fellow small-town publisher. He was publishing a sheet very popular to the Gazette in a town about the size of one. Among the merchants was one that did not believe in advertising but was a very good friend of the editor, whom we will call Mr. H.

and his merchant friend Mr. W. Mr. H was in his friend's store one day discussing advertising and Mr. W said he wanted to show him something. He was taken up in the attic and there hung several overcoats. W said, "Now there is one reason why we merchants have a hard time of it. I had those on display downstairs for a year and only sold one of them. They're not worth a damn."

In the locals of the next week's issue was seen the following item: "J. H. W. says he has a number of overcoats that are not worth a damn."

Mr. W saw it and immediately came over to find out about it. He was in a very angry mood and the editor had a great deal of trouble getting him to see the advertising value of those lines, but he left quite disgruntled.

Everything went along without mishap until the next issue of the paper was being set up. The merchant came in somewhat ashamed and said, "Put in this ad. That little local item brought many people to my store inquiring about coats who had never seen them inside of the place before and I have done more business than in any other week of the year."

Try it yourself and see if it will work as well for you, even if you do not have any worthless coats.—Lone, Washington Gazette.

CULTIVATION OF ALFALFA WILL PAY FARMERS WELL.

Farmers in many sections where alfalfa is a growing crop are reporting successful results with improved alfalfa cultivators. Blue grass and weeds are torn out without injuring the alfalfa, though the alfalfa is torn up considerably. As one farmer remarked, "My field sure looked sick for a few days after I went over it with the cultivator, but in a week or two the alfalfa was in fine shape."

The alfalfa roots grow deeper into the soil than the weeds and blue grass, hence are not torn out by the cultivation.

The cultivation is done early in the year, usually preceding or following the first cutting. Unless the season is very unfavorable, the second and third cuttings are thicker and weed free, according to those who have followed the practice of cultivating their alfalfa, while the growth of the seedling is greatly prolonged.

A cow which seems bent on showing other cows in other parts of Texas how they do things in Hereford, is that owned by L. T. Jay, farmer, living five miles west of here. Six years old and a heavy milker, the cow has given its owner no less than six better calves in the past twenty-three months.

According to Mr. Jay, during her first four years the cow had but two good offers for the profit cow and any of her offspring. "I do not choose to sell," is the only reply to bidders.—Hereford Brand.

TEXAS AND TEXANS

By Will H. Mayes

as Song Festivals

Commendable new movement every one wonders thought of before. Junior College, John T. College, at Stephenville, and North Texas Agricultural College at Arlington, through their Choral Clubs, have organized a state-wide choral association as a junior college activity, following a successful song festival at the Arlington school in which three junior colleges participated. All junior colleges in Texas will be invited to join the movement.

While choral, glee club, quartette and solo singing of all kinds will be encouraged, it is expected that special emphasis will be placed on the Texas songs, as the natural sequel of Texas collegiate participation. It is also easy to see that such a movement will give encouragement to and result in the greater production of typical Texas music, as well as the preservation of the Old Texas songs.

At the Arlington song festival several Texas songs were included in the program, such as: "Roll Along, Cowboy," and "Texas, our Texas."

The prediction was freely made that in a short time such song events as that at Arlington will take their place along with athletics in interest and enthusiasm as school activities.

Texas Gas Development

According to a survey by the Texas Public Service Information Bureau, there are now well over 8,000 miles of gas pipe mains connecting the cities and towns of the State, and the mileage is being extended daily. Since January, 1927, more than 150 cities, towns and communities have been lined with these mains and several thousand gas consumers have been added. In fact, this has been the most outstanding public utility development of the past few years, and the gas supply of Texas, as yet hardly been touched. Lines now extend from the Amarillo field to Kansas City, and to Denver, each now having numerous laterals under construction.

A glance at the gas main map made by the bureau shows that, despite the great mileage, not more than half the state has yet been covered, although most of the cities are now supplied with natural gas. El Paso being the largest city still using artificial gas. The pipe lines are gradually extending in that direction, and in short while El Paso and intermediate points will be supplied.

Factor Investments

Although the state makes reasonable efforts to protect the public against fraudulent and irresponsible industrial promotions, it is well for every place and especially the small towns, to be on guard against scheming get-rich-quick promoters, who are looking to Texas as a profitable field in which to find "suckers." By no means every factory movement should be encouraged, even though it may appear to be a good investment. The personal integrity and good faith of organizers is always a most important thing to be considered, and the demand for proposed industries in a locality should be closely studied.

Of ten manufacturing concerns seeking locations in San Antonio recently, the industrial department of the Chamber of Commerce turned down three that smacked too much of stock-selling propositions; three others were considered illogical; one was not needed there, but was referred to other localities in that trade territory; three will be encouraged. Perhaps the proof of three approvals of manufacturing propositions out of every ten submitted is a fair proportion.

Large Cattle Shipments

Cattle shipments representing a valuation of a million dollars or more was recently made from Brady in one week. There was one consignment of 12,000 steers to Oklahoma and Kansas points, more than 450 cars being required to handle the week's shipments out of the county. Cattle form only a small part of the many resources that are adding to the wealth of McCulloch county.

Laredo District Onions

Laredo will, it is estimated, ship about 1,200 cars of onions this season, which is only a part of the splendid crop handled between San Antonio and Laredo by the South Texas Onion Grower's Association. Prices at shipping points are ranging from $1.25 to $1.40 a crate for yellows and $1.50 to $1.55 for crystal wax.

Systematic and co-operative marketing have done much to make onion growing a profitable industry in Texas.

During the last ninety days more new Chevrolet cars were delivered in this community than in any similar period in Chevrolet history—and most of these new car sales involved the trade-in of the purchaser's previous car. As a result, we have at this time a wide selection of used cars that have been thoroughly reconditioned—and which may be identified by the red "O. K. that counts" tag. JESUS ENTERS JERUSALEM

LESSON TEXT—Mark 11:1-13.
 GOLDEN TEXT—Behold, thy King cometh unto thee; He is low, and having salvation.
 PRIMARY TOPIC—Hailing Jesus as King.
 JUNIOR TOPIC—Hailing Jesus as King.
 INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Kingdom of Jesus.
 YOUNG PEOPLE'S TOPIC—Jesus as Messiah.
 ADULT TOPIC—Jesus as Messiah.

I, Jesus Officially Presented to the Jewish Nation at Jeru. (vv. 1-11). This should not be designated the triumphal entry, for it was so only in outward appearance. The shouts were empty and meaningless. It was the promised King publicly offering Himself to the nation.

1. The preparation (vv. 1-6).
 (1) Two disciples sent for the ass (vv. 1-3).

He told them just where to go to find it, and how to answer the owner's inquiry. The providing of this animal was the working out of the divine plan according to Christ's foreknowledge.

(2) Obedience of the disciples (vv. 4-6). Without asking why, they go at His bidding. The command may have seemed strange and unreasonable, but they rendered explicit obedience.

2. The entry into Jerusalem (vv. 7-10).

(1) The disciples put their garments upon the ass and set the Lord upon it (v. 7). This act showed their recognition of Him as their King (II Kings 9:18).

(2) The multitude (vv. 8, 9). Some spread their garments in the way; others who had no garments to spare cut down branches and strewn them in the way, which was just as acceptable to Him. This entry was in fulfillment of a prophecy uttered some five hundred years before (Zech. 9:9).

They uttered the very cry which the prophet foretold. This is a clue to enable one to understand the significance which are fulfilled as yet. If the prediction of His first coming was thus literally fulfilled, must be believed that those who are coming will likewise be literally fulfilled. The prediction of Zechariah 14:3-11 will be just as literally fulfilled as that of Zechariah 9:9.

(3) The Lord's action (v. 10). Upon entering the temple, He looked around upon all things; but as it was evening He withdrew to Bethany with the twelve.

II. Jesus Exercising His Royal Authority (vv. 12-19).

1. The barren fig tree cursed (vv. 12-14).

The fig tree is typical of the Jewish nation. The fruit normally appears on the fig tree ahead of the leaves. The presence of the leaves is the assurance of fruit. This was an acted parable of the Lord's judgment on Israel for pretension of being the chosen people without the fruits thereof.

2. The temple cleansed (vv. 15-19). For the various sacrifices: In the temple, many oxen, sheep and doves were needed. Many persons came from the distant parts of the land; therefore it was impracticable for them to bring their sacrifices with them, so they brought money and bought the animals needed. This privilege the law had granted to them (Deut. 14:24-26), for the exchange was necessary. When evil men used it as an opportunity for gain it became an offense before God. It defiled His house. Jesus rode Himself a scourge of cords and drove out the money changers, overthrowing their tables and pouring out their money. By this act He declared Himself to be the Lord of the temple and one with God. That which God intended to be a "house of prayer for all nations" was made a "den of thieves." This action symbolized the call of the nation to repentance.

III. Jesus' Authority Challenged (vv. 20-23).

They challenged Him to show by what authority He accepted the honors of the Messiah, and who gave Him the authority to cast out the money changers. This seemed to place Jesus in a dilemma. He responded by a question which placed them in a counter dilemma. Since John was His forerunner, the divinity of His commission rested upon that of John. They were powerless to discredit John, because the people accepted him as God's prophet. If they had accepted John's message they would have been prepared to accept His. They weakly confessed that they could not answer the question.

Route to Glory

"He must increase, but I must decrease." This is your route to glory. Unless He increases in your life and you decrease, your life will be contrary to what He wants it to be. In fact, it will be useless. In all things He must have the pre-eminence if you would be fruitful for Him."

Worthy Qualities

A man cannot persistently admire worthy qualities and not eventually emulate of them.—Brown.

Ring Gets Shaved on Porch

By RING LARDNER

To the Editor:

I hope you boy and girl readers won't be bored on acct. of me writing the events on Long's Island every little while but really things do happen here that I don't believe they happen nowhere else. Like for inst. the other evening I was sitting at home working like a dog though I never yet seen a dog that does any real work, but any ways a prominent citizen who his named I won't mention, but was delegate at large to a convention of paper hangers and he called up and says I am coming over to see you and bring 2 friends. No I says piece of cake right now as I am working and besides which I ain't neither dressed or shaved. But he says we will be right over, so what was they left to do only for me to get dressed as soon as possible and did not have time to shave.

Well they come over and I met them on the porch and served them a couple of ice cold drinks of one kind another and one of his friends was a gal and the other was a man and he litro and dragged his rear and asked me where I kept the hot water and I says we live in a kind of out of the way place and don't have no hot water so he says all right I will shave you with ice water. So he shaved me there on the porch and the passers by was certainly astounded and said what a swell guy that must be to have a barber come and shave him on his own porch. Afterwards it developed that this party to who I had not been introduced was the prominent citizen's personal barber and the reason he had not introduced me to him was because he did not know his name.

Well either that night or the next night there was some company come in and one of them was Jules Schwob who is Florence Moore's husband and somebody suggested a game of bridge and as luck would have it I got Mr. Schwob for a partner and the dealer dealt and passed and it was my bid and I bid 2 spades and the lady on my left passed and my partner doubled.

As far as I was concerned that was a brand new convention and for a minute I was mystified. But the others did not seem to think nothing much about it so I redoubled and they left me in and I made 2 spades which was doubled and redoubled by my partner and I so we made a whole lot more than if we had just played it plain 2 spades. You know every day. Well the bridge game finely broke up in a terrible row and we decided to play charades at whom I am a master. The idea was to give the names of prominent people in Great Neck of whom they are a great many and I won't tell what other charades people give because they were not so good but will give you one of my own.

I says this is the name of a prominent actress who has been both on the stage and on the screen and always wears pretty clothes. Her name is in 5 syllables. The first syllable is the 12th letter in the alphabet and is a consonant. The second syllable was to visualize. The third syllable was the past tense of the preposition. The fourth syllable was a German and the fifth syllable was his boy.

After several hours they all give up. The answer was Elsie Ferguson. Virtually everybody laughed except Frank Craven.

Well one day we went over to the finals of a girls' tennis matches which they held them at Forest Hills and if you can find any forest or any hills you are a better man than I am. Elsie Cope but any ways that is what they call it and the finals was between a very young gal from El Paso and another not so young gal from Natchez and the El Paso gal kind of rumped in so I made the remark that youth will be served and her whom I laughingly call my wife said yes but it is even worse when she is doing the serving herself. Girls will be girls.

That is about all the news that has happened on Long's Island since I seen you last and I hope you ain't bored with it but if so will give you the promise that you won't hear nothing more about it for a wk. at the outside.

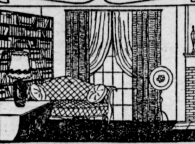

Youth

Youth are not necessarily happy; youth is. It means freedom, strength, courage, curiosity, adventure, growth, plasticity, mobility, action; disdain of danger and death and indifference to self; passion to discover life and create it anew. Youth faces the future, champs at the bit, dares great; counts no cost. Without conviction it will explore; without wisdom, it will experiment; without knowledge it will learn; without adventure, it will venture.

Youth is as remote from infancy as from senility. It created human culture and above can save the human race. Human immortality flowers with youth; enduring happiness abides in eternal youth. To be happy is to be young.—George A. Dorsey, in Cosmo-politan.

NEW DRAPERIES for A FEW CENTS

By Mae Martin

All of us realize nowadays how bright-colored draperies seem to invite people in, and how warm touches of color in spreads, cushions and runners help to make us love our own surroundings.

No woman need deny herself these touches of cheer, because they can easily be had at the expense of a few cents and a little planning. Curtains that are faded or drab in color can be made bright and pleasing with a package or so of Diamond Dyes. Then spreads, covers, runners, etc., can be tinted or dyed to match. Anyone can do it. Tinting with Diamond Dyes is as easy as bluing, and dyeing takes just a little more time. Brilliant new colors appear like magic, right over the old, faded colors. Diamond dyes give true, fadeless colors. They are the kind of dyes used when the cloth was made. Only Diamond Dyes produce perfect results. Insist on them and save disappointment.

My new book, "Color Craft," gives hundreds of dollar-saving suggestions for beautifying your home and clothes. Sixty-four pages, fully illustrated in colors. It's FREE. Just write Mae Martin, Home Service Department, Diamond Dyes, Burlington, Vermont.

Child Tires Quickly of Games or Sports

By holding a stopwatch on ten busy three-year-old boys and girls, a psychologist at McGill University, Montreal, has found that a child of this age is usually interested in one thing for just about eight minutes. After that, some new amusement or occupation must be produced. Even when three-year-olds at home or at nursery schools are most absorbed, they cannot be expected to spend more than half an hour at one kind of occupation, according to K. M. Bandman Bridges, who describes the experiment in a report to the Psychological Society. Boys in the experiment liked best building with large blocks, and other occupations in which they could use the entire body freely. The girls preferred sitting at a table watching colors or fitting cylinders into different kinds of holes. The girls showed an interest in a wider variety of activities than the boys and their interest in a task lasted a little longer, the psychologist reports.

Subways for Italian City

Milan, Italy, was bitten by the subway bug recently when means were sought to relieve traffic congestion in the city that has grown from 600,000 people in 1914 to 900,000 this year. The pedast, however, decided the cost of building subways like those of New York was too great and approved a plan for the construction, at an expense of about $275,000, of two tunnels which will carry the four principal tramways under the most congested district. The present cars will be used.

New Sport Cabriolet Now On Display At Valley Motor Co.

Valley Motor Company delivered its first new Chevrolet Convertible Sport Cabriolet on Monday of this week to Mr. C. H. Whitehead. This new model was announced in last week's paper, and like everything else that Chevrolet has done in the past four months, this new car has attracted wide attention.

The body of the new car is finished in Roman Red Duco, with black body beading, striped in gold and embellished with artistic touches of nickel. The upholstery is of black grained leather of the plain type. The entire job is, of course, done by Fisher craftsmen.

The top lets down and makes a dandy open car and the windows may be raised, which gives the effect of a side windshield wing.

The rumble seat makes this new car or two or four passenger model that offers practical comfort and convenience of the Sport Coupe plus the smartness and distinction of the Sport Roadster.

This new car will compare with cars selling at a much higher price and just a glance at it makes one wonder how Chevrolet can put so much quality into it at such a low price.

BOY MAKES GOOD RECORD IN POULTRY CONTEST

Not only in the field of poultry judging which Arlon Connell stood at the top in the recent poultry judging contest at Lubbock, but in his poultry work at home, he has made a real success. He carried a project of 75 pullets last year from which he sold $190.28 worth of eggs. This year he has a poultry breeding project of 60 hens and 4 cockerels from which he has already sold about $71 worth of hatching eggs and has grown more than two hundred baby chicks from his own stock. Arlon has ordered 25 pedigreed baby chicks at the cost of $1 each from hens that made a trap nest record of more than 300 eggs per year. From these pedigreed chicks he expects to establish a breeding pen next year and develop some outstanding egg producers. He will likely enter some of his pullets in the National Egg laying contest. Arlon has his flock separate from the remainder of the farm flock and does all the jobs connected with his project.—Silverton News.

Smart Sayings

A writer compares the human body to a violin. That explains why some men are always fiddling around.

The open car is less comfortable, but you don't absorb so much glass when you decide to pass the other fellow on a curve.

It's as hard for the modern boy to hold a girl without an auto as it is for him to find money for gasoline if he has none.

There are only two kinds of women who want pretty clothes—blondes and brunettes.

Man is rightfully called an animal. He growls like a bear when dinner isn't ready and purrs like a cat after he has had it.

That which is called "what the people want" is often something they take because they can't get anything better.

Henry Ford, making a speech in England, uttered 31 words and sat down. That demonstrates the advantages of a small gas tank.

A candidate's private life will tell you almost everything except how he stands on prohibition.

Another sad thought is that there is another generation now growing up that never saw and never will see a buggy whip decorated with a bow of red ribbon.

Once you have mastered the art of gossip, you don't need an auto to run down your neighbors.

High Yields Lower Cost of Growing Cotton

Planters who succeeded in growing 300 pounds or more of cotton per acre in the four years from 1922 to 1926 produced it at a cost equal to about half of the selling price, states the Sears Roebuck Agricultural Foundation. For yields ranging from 41 to 100 pounds, the cost averaged 28.3 cents, or nearly 40 per cent more than the selling price. This conclusion is based on production cost records for individual farms compiled by the United States Department of Agriculture.

The net cost of growing first cotton where 501 pounds or more were produced per acre averaged only 8.3 cents a pound during this four-year period. For yields ranging from 401 to 500 pounds, the cost averaged 9 cents; for 421 to 490 pounds, 10.5 cents; and for 381 to 420 pounds, 10.8 cents. The average price paid to farmers for these four crops of cotton was 20.9 cents a pound.

The average cost of production where the yield was 40 pounds per acre or less was 37 cents a pound. This was nearly three times as much as the cotton sold for.

Yield per acre and cost per pound are on a feeder basis. As the yield goes up, the cost goes down. To obtain higher yields, better farm practice is necessary. This means more
