FRIDAY NIGHT FOOTBALL

Resurging Wolves to Ballinger for Clash

Colorado High Wolves, bolstered by an impressive 53 to 0 victory last week, collide Friday night with Ballinger High in a standout pre-district contest.

The match in the Bearcats' Ballinger stadium will be tossed up between 2 clubs who lost their openers and then rebounded for triumphs.

Coach Sam Christy's Wolves will be gunning for revenge from last fall's humiliating 20 to 0 bombing the Bearcats gave the C-City crew before home-folks.

And the Bearcats are eager to improve the win record of their new coach, Bob Wright, son of old Felton (Pooch) Wright, who in yesteryears won acclaim as Ballinger's finest coach.

Wright, fresh from a career as assistant mentor at Howard Payne College, saw his AA Ballinger team lose 26 to 12 to state power 18-AA Brady, while outgaining the winners in their seasonal opener.

Last Friday against a strong San Saba eleven the Bearcats were in command all the way and earned a 6 to 0 decision.

Leading the Ballinger team this season is a fine line — especially around the tackles —and an experienced backfield that includes Tip Lee, the splendid passer and quarterback, and Dave Bevard.

Both Lee and Bevard had a hand in the scoring here last September when Ballinger, wobbling after the Wolves drove 3 times to the shadow of their goal, recovered and then hurried to 3 touchdowns.

However, the Bearcats will find out one thing for sure. There's a different spirit with

Day Old Infant Dies In Local Hospital

Graveside rites for Marsha Ann Hartsfield, day old infant daughter of Mrs. Lovie Ruth Bollen Hartsfield, were conducted Monday afternoon in Colorado City Cemetery.

The baby, born Saturday in the local hospital, died Sunday at 3 p. m.

Rev. Jimmy D. Law, pastor of Buford Baptist Church, officiated in final rites.

Survivors in addition to the mother are two brothers, Eddie and Donnie, and one sister, Kathy, all of the home.

Burial was under the direction of Kiker and Son Funeral Home.

All total, the City crew of regulars and subs, gained a total of 523 yards on offense while showing a defense that held Post to 72 yards rushing and 51 yards passing.

However, the Wolves will face a formidable passer in Lee at Ballinger. He gives the Bearcats the versatile offense from his quarterback position.

An indication of the Ballinger offense is observed in the fact that the Bearcats led in first downs, 9 to 7, and passing, 84 yards to 53, while losing to Brady.

3 Operations On Farm, Ranching Tour Thursday

Busses to Carry Group on Route

A farm and ranch tour, emphasizing good management and agriculture stability for Mitchell County economy, is scheduled next Thursday.

The event — planned for business men as well as ranchers and farmers — will stop at 3 locations south and southeast of Colorado City.

Sponsoring the tour will be board of supervisors of Mitchell County Soil Conservation District.

Transportation will be by busses and the entire trip will be completed in approximately 3 hours, according to A. V. Sheppard, head of the Soil Conservation Service staff here.

Stops on the tour will be at the W. E. (Bill) Harris farm, 9 miles south of Colorado City on State Highway 208; at the L. S. (Bunky) Girvin ranch, 12 miles southeast of Colorado City, and the Roscoe Hudgins farm.

Farmers, ranchers and business men joining the tour will meet Thursday at Civic House for an 8:45 a. m. departure in busses.

First stop will be at the Harris acreage, followed by the Girvin ranch and the Hudgins place.

Return to Colorado City will be by noon so that tour members will be home for lunch.

"This tour has been planned for brevity, but at the same time to provide a good overview look at key ranching and farming techniques," Sheppard said.

"Those who join the trip will have an opportunity to see good management in both farm and ranch. At the same time they will receive a fine impression as to how important good farm and ranch practices are to the economic stability of Colorado City and all Mitchell County."

At the Harris farm, the tour group will inspect the special demonstration plot for grain sorghum and cotton varieties planted in cooperation with Texas A&M Extension Service. County Agent Jack Burkhalter will explain the demonstration, pointing out the characteristics of the 4 varieties of cotton and 5 varieties of sorghums.

Sheppard, the SCS staffer will point out important features at the Girvin and Hudgins farm scenes.

Ranch sites, range vegetation, brush control and livestock development will be observed at Girvin ranch.

Cropping systems, irrigated cotton and diversified use of livestock on a small farm will be among the interest points of the Hudgins farming operation — one that has a fine record in curtailing root rot.

Radio Station KVMC will provide a sound truck for the tour — a facility that will allow Sheppard and Burkhalter to point out tour features with clarity and understanding for the entire tour group.

HOUSEWIFE IS SECOND

Grid Guess Prize To Glenn Thomas

Glenn Thomas, partner in 1416 Dallas, and Mrs. Pat Thomas Bros, won first place and 2 Tech football tickets in last weekend's Football Fun guessing contest.

But the gentleman grid fan just barely beat Mrs. Thomas Moore, 2146 Chestnut, for the honors.

Infact, only 2 points on the key game score separated the 2 guessers.

In third place was Bob Compton, 1305 Pine, who was just a few points down the line.

The top 3, Thomas, Mrs. Moore and Compton, missed only one game the Brownwood upset of San Angelo.

However, seven others also were correct in picking 10 of the winners — the same as the top 3. But they were just a little bit more off the key score game, Colorado City vs. San Antonio.

The baby was born Tuesday in the local hospital.

Rev. Paul Allspaugh, minister of First Pentecostal Holiness Church officiated.

Survivors are the parents, a brother, Lewis J. Hill Jr., and two sisters, Jo Ann Hill and Bertine Grace Hill, all of Colorado City.

It was under the direction of Kiker and Son Funeral Home.

OUTDOORS IN TEXAS

By VERN SANFORD
Fishermen are supposed to be a healthy lot.

However, there are some basic diseases that seem to strike fishermen... and fisherman only. None of these diseases are fatal. But, a knowledge of the ailments will be helpful to the angler who wants to become his healthy happy self again.

Let's take a look at the diseases.

First there's DORSALITIS or GILLITIS. Sometimes it is called "Fishy Fever." It is a well known ailment. Employers usually hear about it first.

Immediately following the afflicted person's self diagnosis, it is reported to the boss under a number of different names, all of them false.

Dorsalitis is highly contagious. Temperature increases immediately on contact with any other carrier of the disease.

Exhaustive research reveals that the most common carrier is a newspaper that prints pictures of long stringers of big bass, or stories about some individual who reports that fishing is extra good.

Universally recommended cure is to spend the day outdoors, on good fishing water, with something to occupy the mind... such as a fishing rod in the hand and plenty of bait in the bucket.

Let's look at another "Angler's Ailment."

In the language of medical science this one would be called Lepesosteus Sratula Nosis - Cyrolinus Carnio Elliptis. It's more often referred to as GARNOSIS CARPELIPTIS.

This illness generally develops after an unsuccessful fishing expedition. First symptom is a sour disposition. In extreme cases there is a desire to write nasty letters to the Game and Fish Commission, complaining about the rough fish population taking over the afflicted party's favorite fishing spot.

Diseases more prevalent among BASSABETICS (those with Serranidae Fever). It's an incurable disease requiring regular dosages of outdoor recreation.

Next is the dangerous HOOF-IN-MOUTH DISEASE. Generally you'll find those who are suffering downtown on Saturday afternoon with the wife.

You can recognize these ailments by their downcast look. Sometimes they appear dazed. Occasionally they will be found with large bumps protruding from the cranium.

Wife generally sees first indication of this disease when hubby tells her he can't go shopping with her because he must return to the office to complete some unfinished work.

Disease becomes acute and hits its peak when husband unthinkingly asks wife where she put his fishing rod. After effects of disease then strike quite suddenly.

TOP WATER PARANOIA is another ailment. Afflicted is the fisherman who insists, beyond all reason and season, on using artificial lures that float on the surface of the water. This regardless of the fact that he is catching absolutely nothing, while everyone else is landing the limit on anything and everything cast into the water.

Disease has a narcotic, habit-forming effect in that it makes the afflicted party increasingly stubborn about retaining the malady. Affliction strikes at the mind and forms a firm belief that the angling is the only true sportsman of the lot and that it is far better not to catch any fish at all than it would be to use any other method of fishing.

Always there is hope that this sufferer's ability to reason finally will conquer his mental block, because of his desire to join in the fun and do a little serappy tug-of-war with the fish himself.

A highly nervous type of ailment is SKITSOPHREQUITA. This sickness is characterized by the fisherman who is always in a hurry. He skitters his lure rapidly through the water. Usually his race is so fast that the fish tire before they can catch up with his lure, or they just run away from the fast moving, noisy object - in the opposite direction - at a furious pace.

Many an angler is afflicted with FIRST FISH GLOAT. Germs of this disease attack the first angler in the party who makes a catch. Some fishermen are able to shake the disease immediately. Others cannot.

First indication of affliction is a swelling in the chest, followed by a flapping of the mouth. From the latter emits numerous praises of the angler's ability, plus abundant advice to the novices whom he feels surround him. Some times there is considerable swelling of the head.

Reaction sets in among his buddies. They avoid him. This ailment is the reverse of NO FISH MYOPIA. It's a form of depression brought on by an unsuccessful outing.

Another ailing angler is the SWITCHILEPTIC. A person with this disease will not stick with one lure long enough to catch a fish. He changes lures almost as rapidly as he gets on damp.

He is the angler to whom the snap swivel is a most prized possession. His greatest desire is a complete assortment of all the lures made. He tries all the lures he has with him, on every fishing expedition.

A NIBLIC-YANKALOTIAC is one who undergoes extremely forceful jerking spells whenever he feels a nibble on the end of his fishing line. His is an unfortunate condition, as this affliction has caused him to pull his hook right out of the mouth of many a lunker.

Such cases have been conquered, but it takes a great deal of patience and fortitude.

All the above mentioned diseases are merely a few of the ailments with which fishermen are afflicted. Fishermen's diseases, like all others, need attention and understanding. Most everybody who has fished had had at least one of these ailments. Many relapse into these spells often.

Should you become afflicted, the most important step you can take is to make a quick diagnosis, then do something about it immediately. You can treat any of these cases yourself. You can be your own doctor.

Naturally, to take the cure you gotta go fishing!

If you doubt your ability to treat yourself, give your favorite doctor a ring. Chances are he'd like to go too.

Wesleyan Service Guild Meets At First Methodist Church

Mrs. Albert Erwin was devotion leader for the Wesleyan Service Guild of First Methodist Church which met Monday evening in fellowship hall.

For her subject, Mrs. Erwin chose "The Chart and Compass." The scripture was from Psalms 90:17. For the worship setting, she used a world map with Woman's Society and Guild emblems in the background.

Miss Nelda Garrett, leader, presented the program. She was assisted by three panelists, Mrs. Roy Dozier, Mrs. Ethel Hardegree and Mrs. Tom Glover.

Miss Garrett stated, in the introduction, that the Wesleyan Service Guild is the channel through which employed women have an opportunity to unite all women of the church in Christian living and service; to help develop and support Christian work among women and children around the world; to develop the spiritual life; to study the needs of the world; to take part in such service activities that will strengthen the local church and improve civic, community and world conditions.

Miss Marilyn Godwin presented a report on her trip to the School of Missions in Lubbock.

Special music for the occasion was provided by Miss Amelia Erwin.

Refreshments of cherry cream pie and coffee were served to 23 members and three guests, Miss Godwin, Miss Erwin, and Mrs. Oma Wood.

WITH CHOCOLATE

Sumptuous Summer

An all-chocolate cake, like this, is a handsome treat! And rich, unsweetened chocolate gives it a wonderful, true-chocolate flavor ... with allure enough to be a party by itself.

Tender chocolate-y-chocolate layers are lusciously topped with chocolate seven minute frosting—and those delicious-looking swirls on the very top are half moons of melted unsweetened chocolate, too.

Appropriately—this chocolate moon cake lets itself go all sumptuous for summer parties. So light it with candles—the better to celebrate the back-to-school season.

CHOCOLATE MOON CAKE

2 cups sifted cake flour 2 eggs, unbeaten
1 teaspoon soda 3 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted milk*
¾ teaspoon salt 1 teaspoon vanilla
½ cup shortening
1 1/3 cups sugar

*With vegetable shortening, use 1 cup plus 2 tablespoons milk. With butter or margarine, use 1 cup milk.

Sift flour once, measure, add soda and salt, and sift together three times. Cream shortening, add sugar gradually, and cream together until light and fluffy. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each. Add chocolate and blend. Then add flour, alternately with milk a small amount at a time, beating after each addition until smooth. Add vanilla; blend.

Pour batter into two round 9-inch layer pans, 1 ½ inches deep, which have been lined on bottoms with paper. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 25 to 30 minutes. Cool. Spread with your favorite light chocolate frosting. Then melt ½ square unsweetened chocolate with ½ teaspoon butter; cool. Make swirled effect on top of cake by dipping top of teaspoon in mixture and forming half-moon swirls in frosting.

AT PALACE THEATRE

"Portrait" in Black Showing Today

Crime and passion, skillfully wrought against a background of glamor and capped by one of the most dramatic twists the screen has ever seen, will alternately shock and thrill today's opening audience at the Palace Theatre as Universal-International unveils its superb suspense drama, "Portrait in Black."

A magnificent cast headed by Lana Turner, Anthony Quinn, Sandra Dee, Richard Basehart, John Saxon and Lloyd Nolan delivers inspiring performances to this lavishly-mounted production that must certainly be recorded in screen annals among Hollywood's greatest screen thrillers.

Miss Turner's great artistry in "Imitation of Life" is definitely surpassed by her poignant performance in "Portrait in Black." Lana's portrayal of the discontented wife who conspires with a lover against her husband is certainly of Academy Award calibre.

Sandra Dee, Hollywood's top teen-aged star, scores solidly as the sophisticated young step-daughter defending her fiancé, John Saxon, gaining stature and maturity in an adult role, proves why his legion of fans adore him.

"Portrait in Black," emblazoned by the superb color photography of Russell Metty, was adapted from a Broadway and London play by Ivan Goff and Ben Roberts, who also prepared the taut and exciting screenplay.

The rich and magnificent wardrobe by the enchanting Miss Turner in the new film adds another lustrous credit to the brilliant designing of Jean Louis, the most sought-after stylist in show business.

Mr. Louis provided her with 14 of the most gorgeous costumes ever to be seen on the screen.

Inspiration for the Bloomer Girls was Mrs. Amelia Jenks Bloomer, 19th century advocate of abolition, temperance and women's rights.

Local Minister on Alaska Revival Team

Alaska's Southern Baptist churches and missions from Ketchikan to Kotzebue and from Anchorage to Fort Yukon will conduct simultaneous revivals this fall.

James W. Carraway of Colorado City and three other Texans will be among the 36 pastors and 10 musicians from Southern Baptist churches in 13 states who will serve as evangelists and singers in the two-weeks crusade, according to Vernon Yearby of Dallas.

Dates for the crusade are Sept. 25-Oct. 9.

Yearby, who will direct the crusade, is an associate in the evangelism division of the denomination's Home Mission Board. He said the Alaska churches range in size from a handful to more than 1000 persons.

Carraway, former pastor of the local Calvary Baptist Church, will serve as singer in the Hamilton Acres Baptist Church, Fairbanks, Alaska.

The evangelists and singers, chosen because of their evangelistic ministry and the missionary concept of their churches, represent 13 states.

Their expenses to and from Alaska will be paid by their local churches and expenses while there by the Alaska churches.

This is the 11th annual simultaneous crusade in Alaska with all the Southern Baptist churches participating. Yearby says. The revival plan book, which was prepared by the Home Mission Board's evangelism division and which has been used successfully throughout the Southern Baptist Convention will be followed to the extent possible during this crusade.

The churches are divided into associations by location: (1) the Chugach association, located in the Anchorage-Seward area, holds one half of the churches; (2) the Tanana Valley association, which is far north and takes in Fairbanks and Fort Yukon, has 10 preaching stations; and (3) the Southeastern Area association includes Ketchikan, Sitka, Juneau, the capital, and has the remainder of the churches.

Personnel for the Alaska-wide crusade will leave their homes in Indiana, Alabama, North and South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Kentucky, Missouri, Georgia, Oklahoma, Louisiana, and Mississippi, on Sept. 23.

Other Texans participating in the crusade are: James T. Draper of Marshall, district secretary of missions, who will serve as evangelist in the First Baptist Church, Fairbanks; T. James Efrid, pastor of Tahoka's First Baptist Church, who will serve as evangelist in the First Baptist Church of Wrangell, and Vernon Yearby of Dallas, who will serve as evangelist in the First Baptist Church of Anchorage, Alaska.

Light FOR LIVING

LIGHTS THE WAY TO A MORE EFFICIENT KITCHEN

It's easier to read recipes . . . to make sure dishes are clean . . . to check details of food preparation . . . to find things in drawers and cabinets . . . when your kitchen lighting is properly planned. For proper lighting, most kitchens need a good center ceiling fixture with a 150-watt bulb for general room illumination . . . plus "local" lighting over sink, range and work counters to eliminate working in one's own shadow. A Texas Electric Service Company lighting specialist will be glad to answer your questions and give you suggestions for better lighting in your home.

Reason for leaving present farm? My landlord will not tell me for sure I can stay starts coming in.

In my opinion that's too late to rent. We have always rent-

Author Delves Into Personality

This novel, the last of Lawrence Durrell's Alexandria quartet, may be obtained from the Federation Library, as may the preceding members of the quartet.

By JOHN BRAND,
Record Book Reviewer.

It would be correct to call Clea the last chapter of a single book. This is, in effect, Lawrence Durrell's attitude towards it, as he sees his quartet as one work, one book.

It, thus, becomes necessary, in reviewing it, to refer to the quartet, which is composed, in order, of Justine, Balthazar, Mountolive, and Clea. They are not works written in sequel or serial form, as their relation is more like what Durrell calls the "sibling relationship".

In other words, they are like differing parts of a single room, varying members of a single family, or divergent facets of a single personality. They can be taken by themselves, but, taken separately, they stand in an incomplete and even erroneous sense.

It is only when the four are taken as a whole that one can appreciate each of them separately. If this fact is not understood, Clea itself, and any other member of the quartet, may be for the most part misunderstood and a waste of the reader's time. To see why this is so, we must see some of the happenings going on within the confines of the quartet.

Justine is perhaps the key, but only insofar as it is the first work in the quartet. In it, the author tells us what we need to know about the characters being portrayed, thus introducing us to their adventurous, mysterious, and very sad existence. We are shown the beginnings of a sordid and ill-fated love-affair between Justine and the "I" of the story (later seen to be a writer-diplomat named Darley).

This passionate and complicated affair is taking place at the expense and ignorance of the wealthy, kind-hearted Nessim, Justine's husband, Darley, in loving Justine, is not only betraying Nessim, but also Melissa, his dying wife. They love in hiding throughout the secretive and highly picturesque hovels and outlays of Alexandria, the city that also plays a part in shaping the lives of the novel's participants, as in it there is the interplay of fantasy and intrigue, of British and Egyptian diplomacy, of religious cult and frenzy, and much more.

As Justine and Darley love, they meet the physician-philosopher Balthazar and the painter Clea, who, while they are devoted to each other, are so in only the most casual, that is, non-physical sense. They are, we are told, utterly incapable of passionate love. Justine is thus the creation of persons who are beginning to fit together in some sort of a relationship.

At its close we are given what appears to be, but what is not, the final word regarding their fate, that is, their relationship. It is no exaggeration to say that Justine leaves the reader with some confusion, some feeling that he, in reading it, has wasted his time.

It is for this reason that Durrell's work is of importance, as what we are told and come to believe in Justine is either altered slightly or changed completely in the novels to come. Balthazar, to say the least, offers one surprise after another, as what we thought was true of Justine and Darley, of Nessim, of Balthazar and Clea, and finally of Pursewarden, the writer now looming as a major character, is found to be but partly true, or completely erroneous.

The work contains no surprise ending, but is itself a complete surprise. At this point the reader asks the question, why can't the writer make up his mind?, which leads him to the core of the quartet and its importance.

"Truth," Durrell tells us, "is what most contradicts itself in time." Thus his work, called "an investigation of modern love," is a work that leads the reader into either preliminary truth or outright error regarding either character or event. Taking Clea as an example, we find that in Justine, she is physically and emotionally unable to love. While she is close to Darley, closer to Balthazar, the closest to Justine, we find in the succeeding novels that she was, while not in love, much loved by Narouz, Nessim's hare-lipped brother; and in Clea, we finally find not once, but twice, the person of her real lover.

The value of Durrell's approach is that of learning to submit love to what he calls "the arbitration of time". This is why time as sequence means little to the writer, as the first three novels overlap without necessarily preceding or following the others.

This is to say that, in the work, as in human life, it takes time to love and to be loved, as it takes time to correct the false impressions we have of reality and of each other.

Clea herself says sadly, but truly, "How she was led to say, having revealed to Darley a truth of the most dis-comforting impact."

Darley's response is simply that "this new fact which I was enunciating was one that I had always known, but without being aware of the knowing!" And, if one phrase is repeated in several forms, it is that of Darley, who says, having been informed of a previously unknown fact about his first love, Justine, "We are after all totally ignorant of one another, presenting selected fictions to each other!"

The conclusion drawn, and to be drawn, is that human personality and human action is illusory, open to false impression and known only to him who has submitted to the "arbitration of time". And, in a sense, Durrell is right.

Much, or most of the action and the personality causing the action is illusory, or unknown at that moment to either the casual observer of the act or to the beloved of the actor. Durrell leads us into the maze of the human personality to prevent us from making the mistake of assuming that we, even though we be lovers, can know each other apart from the falsity of the wrong impression. While this is surely a strength of the work, it is likewise a weakness.

The reader begins to ask, "What next?", as the writer allows his method to get out of hand and digs up forgotten corpses of the memory, time and time again, in the most unexpected places of human life and activity.

The reader begins to anticipate even to guess correctly ahead of the move planned by the very methodical writer. More than this, however, is a prime flaw, which is itself based on the truth that the truth about human nature is hard, if at all possible, to grasp. To this we are led to ask, If life and human personality is itself so illusory, how is one to know when "the arbitration of time" actually takes place?

In other words, how are we to know for certain that what Durrell is telling us about Clea and Darley will not be altered or erased in a future novel?

So, while one must, being honest with himself, agree with the fundamental premise of the writer, that we know so little about even those whom we love, we must insist on something more than the arbitration of time for a further and more accurate revelation of our separate natures. What that is can of course be debated.

What it must be is at least a something, someone or sometime that includes not only the arbitrary movement of time, but all sides of man's existence as well, his relation to the life in him, beside him and beyond him.

While Durrell has attempted this (and an ambitious attempt it is), one sees at the last that he reduces what he is saying to a plea for man to wait, to love patiently while waiting to time to work out clearly the truth of love and man. But surely love, knowledgeable love, is dependent upon more, and consists of more than truth working itself out in time.

Veterans Keep Lining Up For Farms

In the face of mounting anxiety on how to save the family farm, the Veterans Land Board in Austin has some 40,000 veterans lined up waiting to buy Texas farm and ranch land.

This waiting list of 40,000 is now on file at the General Land Office, and requests currently are coming in at the rate of 250 a week. The whole program has been slowed down pending the outcome of a proposed constitutional amendment which will be voted on in the Nov. 8 general election.

The amendment would authorize the Legislature to lift the rate of interest it pays on State bonds sold to purchase land for resale to veterans from 3 per cent to 3 1/2 per cent. The Land Board at present has on hand $62,500,000 worth of these bonds which have failed to attract buyers because of the 3 per cent interest rate. Sale of these bonds at a higher rate of interest would once more accelerate the land buying program, proponents believe.

It is a fact that few of the veterans buying land through the program actually intend to live on or to make a living from their small tracts. For one thing, the limitations are too stringent. The maximum State loan is $7,500, although this may be applied to purchases up to but not to exceed $15,000. Except in extremely rare cases, this is far from enough to provide sufficient land or improvements to make a livelihood.

But the terms are attractive — the down payment required is only 5 per cent of the purchase price, and the veteran is given 40 years to pay the balance at an interest rate of 3 1/2 per cent. Through July this has resulted in the sale of 22,427 tracts through the Veterans Land Board, a total purchase price of $132,390,612 and a State investment amounting to $122,102,109. Of these 22,427 tracts, only 158 have been forfeited back to the State because of non-payment of loan installments. More than two million acres of land are involved.

Average price paid for the 22,427 tracts has been $70.03 per acre. The veteran is not required to live on the land he buys, and it is figured that the vast majority are buying as an investment or with plans of eventual retirement with income from elsewhere.

Statistics show that not more than 15 to 20 per cent of veterans requesting application forms actually complete the applications. Approximately 100 application forms are mailed out each week by the Land Board, but the weekly rate of return is only 15 to 20.

It may be that the idea of going back to the farm — in this period of the agriculture economic squeeze — loses some of its appeal when it comes to putting up the cash, even when the amount is small.

Pick Up Those Birds, Hunters Urged

Pick up those birds, warns the director of law enforcement, State Game and Fish Commission.

Some hunters are careless about recovering their kills when they go into the field to hunt doves and white wings. These people are detrimental to the honest and responsible hunters and fail to see the damage this causes to the bird crop.

The director encourages every hunter to make an honest attempt to search out any and all birds killed or wounded. He reminds shotgunners that picking a stand is important to the recovery of birds. First, don't shoot a bird if it will fall into heavy brush. It's best to let the bird escape than to waste it.

One reminder suggested by the warden chief is that even if a hunter fails to recover his birds, he had better keep a close count of them. Wardens will be in most areas, and they will apprehend a hunter for shooting more than his limit, whether he picks them up or not.

Those hunters who abide by the law and have faith in rules and regulations can help themselves by reminding irresponsible hunters who leave their birds lie that it's wrong, and can't be tolerated.

SHINNERY PHILOSOPHER

J. A. Isn't Certain He'll Vote Right

Editor's note: The Shinnery Plains Philosopher on his Johnson grass farm on Bone Hollow Creek ponders a serious matter this week, his letter reveals. He'll probably get over it.

Dear editor, There's one thing about history that I've never been able to understand. Well, that's just a manner of saying it, actually there are thousands of things about history I've never understood, and even more I don't even know about, but the thing that I'm referring to now is this: How is it that a fateful crossroads in history always looms up simultaneously with a Presidential election? As long as I can remember, I can't recall a time when, every fourth year or so, the fate of the world wasn't considered to be hanging on the outcome of the election in November.

I don't understand how this comes about, but it does, and what is even more surprising is how the American people always seem to make the right choice. At least they always must have, as so far the world never has collapsed yet after an election in the United States. When I haven't had anything else to do, I've often sat and pondered what would have happened to the world if all the defeated candidates for President had been elected and the successful ones had been defeated.

I figure the world would have collapsed 15 or 20 elections ago, but how it could have continued to collapse every four years thereafter, is a puzzling thought.

Understand, I'm not belittling the importance of the Presidential race, but I sometimes think the candidates and their supporters get a little out of touch with reality. The world is not nearly as collapsible as some people think.

These are critical times all right, and sometimes ought to be done about it, but so far I haven't been able to find anybody who knows exactly what.

For example, take Cuba and Castro. Up to now, the only thing I've read about the Cuban situation that any expert cares to go on record with is this: The United States takes a very serious view of the Cuban situation.

The only trouble with this is that Castro doesn't seem to take a very serious view of our serious view. This makes the situation even more serious, but no nearer solution. Or take the Congo, or China, etc.

I will do my best in November to keep the world from collapsing when I go to vote, but it's an awful responsibility to put on my shoulders, and I may not have the materials to do it with.

Yours faithfully,
J. A.

ANSWERS DALLAS CHAIRMAN

Governor Stands Pat Against 'Revolt' at State Demo Meet

By VERN SANFORD

He will not try to muzzle anyone who wants to complain about the National Democratic Party platform, says Gov. Price Daniel.

But the state Democratic convention in Dallas Sept. 20 is not the place, said the governor, to debate the pros and cons of the national platform. This convention, he said, is traditionally for the purpose of writing a state platform and certifying Democratic nominees for state office.

Edward J. Drake, chairman of the Dallas County delegation, wrote the governor that the Dallasites would like to have a "full and factual" discussion of the national platform at the Sept. 20 meeting.

Governor Daniel said there are planks in the National Democratic platform to which he is definitely opposed. But he said he didn't feel there was enough difference between the Democratic and Republican platforms to justify criticizing one without applying the same criticisms to the other.

Governor Daniel said he was definitely opposed to freeing the Texas Democratic electors, as proposed by some, to vote for whom they please. He said he felt it was a matter of "simple integrity" for the Democratic electors to vote for the Democratic candidates if the party carries the state.

Since the Los Angeles convention, the governor's position has been to work for the Democratic ticket without endorsing the total platform.

SCHOOLS NOT PENALIZED—A ruling by Atty. Gen. Will Wilson has provided a way out for Texas schools faced with conflicting state and federal orders regarding integration.

State law provides that a school system which integrates without approval of local voters loses state aid. Wilson ruled that this does not apply if the school is complying with a federal court order to integrate.

However, the ruling did not knock down the state law in question. Wilson said that schools that are not under federal court order and integrate without approval in a local election would still lose state aid and accreditation.

Immediately affected were two large school systems — in Houston and Dallas — both of whom are under court order to begin gradual integration plans.

SALES TAX TALK—Next year's money needs will be so staggering the Legislature will have to resort to sales taxing, general or selective, to keep the boat afloat.

This prediction is made by Sen. William S. Fly of Victoria, chairman of the Texas Commission on State and Local Tax Policy. Fly was defeated last May but contended his tax stand had nothing to do with it.

Those who do come back, said Fly, may face the need to raise as much as $108,000,000 in new money. This is the estimated new revenue needed if the Legislature enact bills to raise teacher pay and provide medical aid for older people — both programs with wide popular support.

Latest report by the tax

State Capital NEWS

study group shows that Texas families are now paying less state taxes than the national average. Annual state tax bite on a theoretical "average Texas family" is $115.89 a year. Nationally, the "average" family pays a state tax bill of $235.51 a year.

MEDICAL AID URGED—Legislation to provide state-federal payments for medical care for Texans on old age assistance has near-top priority on his list, says Governor Daniel.

He noted that there are in state mental hospitals some 3,000 older people who are not really mentally ill, but who have no other place to go.

A medical aid program that would make possible the care of these people in nursing homes or their own homes would be "a great step forward," said the governor.

Enactment of such a program, he told the statewide Conference on Aging, is "near the top of the list of unfinished business of this administration."

He noted that a constitutional amendment to make such a program possible was approved by Texas voters nearly two years ago.

INVESTMENT EASING—State Board of Education will ask the next Legislature to pass a law allowing investment of some of the permanent school fund in corporate stocks and bonds.

Object would be to obtain higher earnings from the $400,000,000 trust and provide a hedge against future inflation. Investment in corporate securities has already been allowed under the law for the University of Texas permanent fund, but the public school fund is limited to government bonds.

WASHINGTON REPORT

Our Farm Puzzle: The Grange View

By CLINTON DAVIDSON

Record Correspondent

What kind of a program do the farm organizations want? That's a question that has stumped Congress and puzzled a lot of other people.

To get the answer for readers of the more than 850 newspapers which use this column, we invited the heads of the three general farm organizations to give us their recommendations.

Since the 850,000-member National Grange is the oldest (93 years) of the general farm groups, the first report has been prepared by Herschel D. Newsom, whose title is Master of the National Grange.

Subsequent columns will report on the views of Charles Shuman, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, largest (1.6 million members) of the three, and James Patton, President of the Farmers Union.

"Farm income, at present levels, is not capable of generating the capital needed to continue the technological revolution that has made America an agriculture the most productive in the world."

"Clearly the compensation of farmers (less than half the national per family average), and of agriculture as a whole, is not proportionate to our contribution of the national welfare. It has not been for several years."

"We must find effective mechanisms to try to give farm prices and farm income some comparable lift above that determined by the free market, comparable, that is, to the lift which is given non-agricultural prices and wages by tariffs and import duties, and by laws which protect the rights of industrial wage earners to minimum wages and collective bargaining."

"It is imperative that we do something much more constructive about the problem of declining farm income (down 35% since 1952) than to simply perpetuate the argument over the level of price supports, for neither provides a full answer."

"We must attack the basic problem of the gap between farm operating costs and prices received by farmers. The real measure of a fair income for farmers is what is left after he has sold what he produced and paid the cost of production."

"Substantial progress has been made in tailoring certain commodity programs (such as wool, sugar and milk marketing) to fit the peculiarities of production, processing and distribution of those commodities."

"We have a diversity of farm problems which cannot be solved by a single, shotgun approach. This diversity, however, certainly does not compel us to move in the direction of resorting to the full, free market structure by simply lowering the level of price itself to raising that support level to a point that would theoretically provide an equitable income for all farmers."

"Slogans like 'let the government out of agriculture' are pure nonsense. We're going to continue to have farm legislation and programs just as we have business and labor legislation and programs."

"Farm legislation should be designed to help farmers achieve a reasonable degree of effective regulation of marketings, place responsibility for the control of surpluses in the hands of producers, secure income from consumers rather than taxpayers, and develop economic powers comparable to those used by organized labor and most industries through use of producer-managed marketing machinery that would place farmers in a better position to obtain a reasonable income from market sales—not the government."

Retailing Lesson In Waste Basket

By MADGE BELL

Record Staff Writer

One of the best lessons in retail advertising costs we have ever seen was contained in a letter from a weekly publisher to the manager of a store in a Mississippi town. The letter is quoted:

"Dear Hal: The enclosed package is filled with 59 postcards I picked up out of a waste basket in the post office this morning."

"It is, too bad that the announcement of your attractive summer sale received this treatment — especially considering the costs of the announcement to you."

"Counting the price of printing, postage, addressing, and handling it must have cost you $150 to send that card to 2,500 addresses. And of course you know such a notice is rarely seen by more than one person."

"Did you know that you could have a run a notice that size in the JOURNAL for only six dollars? The Journal notice would have gone to the same 2,500 addresses and three readers at each address would have had a chance to see it."

"Or, to look at it another way, did you realize that the card announcement cost 75 times as much per reader as an ad the same size would have cost in the Journal?"

"What if cost you to send out that postcard would have bought you a full page ad in the Journal, with all the accompanying prestige and three times as many readers. And you would have had enough left over to hire an extra clerk to help with the additional business."

"I know it is your store and your money. But I wonder if you ever thought of these things."

This is a letter, when you think about it, that could be written in any town — Colorado City, too.

Among Christians, the concept of life after death has a very special meaning. The conception of death is lost in the larger idea of eternal life.

Ideal, Not Time Marks Eternity

Among Christians, the concept of life after death has a very special meaning. The conception of death is lost in the larger idea of eternal life.

"The gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." (Romans 6:23)

It is the undying nature of the soul through the experience of the new life in Christ.

But this fact and experience has its definite foundation in history in the death and Resurrection of Jesus of Nazareth.

The foundation of the resurrection is in the resurrection.

eternal life of Jesus, Himself, and His words to His disciples. Because I live, ye shall live also." (John 14:19)

From this standpoint, the Resurrection is the very basis of the Christian faith. But the prior foundation is in the moral and spiritual in the life of God, and in the Godlike life of man.

Resurrection is not marked in terms of duration but in the quality of the living.

It is this that lifts the Christian conception of morality above the mass of superstitions and a materialistic view of the world.

WESTBROOK — Rev. Kenneth Andress, pastor of Westbrook Baptist Church, enrolled in the Southwestern Baptist Seminary in Fort Worth this week.
