American woman arrested in Tehran

By the Associated Press

The bodies of the American servicemen killed in the failed hostage rescue attempt in Iran arrived in Zurich, Switzerland, today and were transferred to U.S. custody for the journey home.

In Tehran, meanwhile, the newspaper Kayhan reported that an American woman had been arrested as an alleged CIA spy. She was not identified.

Iran's militia-like revolutionary guards contend they have documents proving that the woman was working for the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency, Kayhan said. The Iranian Foreign Ministry asked that she be handed over to its custody, it was reported.

In Washington, State Department spokesman said they were unfamiliar with the report and could not comment on it.

In a ceremony at a Zurich airport hangar, Greek Catholic Archbishop Hilarion Capudji, who accompanied the coffin on a Swissair flight from Tehran, formally transferred the Americans' remains to Swiss government and International Red Cross officials, who then passed them on to U.S. Ambassador Richard Vine.

A U.S. Air Force C-141 transport plane stood by to fly the remains back to the United States later today. Officials in Zurich said the plane would fly to Dover Air Force Base, Del.

Confusion persisted over the number of bodies. The United States has maintained consistently that eight men died in the April 25 rescue bid and has named them. But the Iranian official who supervised the recovery of the bodies said originally nine had been found, and last week Tehran Radio said a 10th body had been recovered from the desert site where the rescue mission was aborted.

Capudji, speaking with reporters, said the Iranians told him the nine coffins he was escorting contained nine bodies, and the ninth was the one reported found last week.

But the archbishop said some of the coffins contained only charred body parts or skeletal fragments. He said that to his knowledge only three bodies could be identified, and the others were beyond identification.

Capudji said he had been asked by the Iranians to handle the transfer "because I am a churchman," and Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini had told him the return of the bodies must be seen as "a humanitarian, spiritual, religious gesture that has no political significance."

Capudji, who spent three years in an Israeli jail for running guns to Palestinian terrorists and has become a friend of the Iranian revolution, said the bodies would be delivered to the families of the men in the United States, Radio Tehran reported.

The Americans were killed when a helicopter sliced into a C-130 transport as the American force was withdrawing from a desert landing strip 200 miles east of Tehran after the decision to abort the attempted rescue of the 53 American hostages, who today spent their 185th day in captivity.

The eight charred bodies were brought to Tehran in plastic bags last week, exhibited to reporters and television crews and then were put in wooden coffins.

MAN'S BODY REMOVED FROM THE IRANIAN EMBASSY, LONDON — The body of a man thrown from the Iranian Embassy in London, Monday is carried away by two men on a stretcher. Shots were heard at the embassy and a little while later the body was rolled down the embassy steps. Shortly after explosions rocked the embassy and it was set ablaze.

Public participation will be promoted, media rep relates

Details relating to "Newspaper Faces in Big Spring," a promotion being undertaken by the Herald starting June 3, were explained to representatives of an estimated 40 businesses in the community at a luncheon hosted by the Herald at the Ramada Inn Monday.

Lou Capone of Media Promotions Ltd., explained the details of the campaign to those present. The promotion encourages public participation. Those whose faces are featured in Herald ads each Tuesday through July 3 qualify for Super Bucks, which can be spent like cash at participating businesses.

Businessmen and their employees will be guests at a dinner May 29, at which time another seminar, this one entitled "Winning Customers in the 80s," will be held.

Capone will be here for an indefinite period to acquaint merchants with the campaign. He will coordinate his efforts with personnel of the Herald.

In a talk made before an estimated 58 people Monday, Capone said that merchandisers would aim their sales campaigns more toward those in the 30-to-50 year age group than to teenagers.

... addresses businessmen

There will be more households during the decade, according to Capone, because the crop of WW II babies are now grown and have started families of their own.

There will also be an increasing number of women in the work force, according to Capone. "A million women will join the labor force this year alone," Capone added.

The speaker predicted that 68 percent of the nation's women will be working by 1990. Single parent families will also increase, according to the speaker. "Where there are six million single parents in 1960, there are 25 million today."

More births will also occur in families with parents 20 to 34 years of age, according to Capone. The 65-year and older group is increasing in numbers and is expected to reach 42 million by 1990, Capone said.

"Only five percent of people in that group reside in nursing homes," Capone stated. "Retirees have money today. It's not like it was."

By 1990, the population in Texas likely will approach 18 million, according to Capone, whereas it is only 13.7 million now.

All these things are going to dictate marketing changes, according to the speaker.

The Herald was represented at the meeting by Tom Watson, publisher, and Oliver Cofer, director of advertising.

Halfway House funded in part by several different agencies

Clients of the Halfway House, which faces a bleak future unless its friends and supporters rally to erase $15,607 in old debts, are funded in part by several different agencies.

Texas Rehabilitation Commission clients are assessed half of their pay checks. They are required to put one fourth of their earnings in a savings account and use the other fourth to help pay living expenses.

The Halfway House offers classes on personal and social adjustment, to help residents prepare for problems when they move out on their own.

Clients checking in from the Big Spring State Hospital are assessed up to $116 a month, which goes toward their upkeep.

Residents of the Halfway House are taken shopping once a week and are assisted in making their purchases when necessary to help stay within their means.

Many enrollees arrive at the Halfway House with few possessions. They purchase their needs and build up their necessities while preparing to go out on their own.

The budget of the Halfway House is sufficient to operate the facility. It provides the necessities of food, rent, transportation, utilities and salaries of the staff. The goal is to raise enough money to pay off past debts.

The cost of operating the Halfway House is estimated at $8,500 a month. It has been impossible to stay within the budget due to the constant drain of payments to creditors.

The staff has been cut to the minimum. Officials must keep enough supervisory help on hand, however, to conform to requirements by the funding agencies.

Gifts in the 24-hour period ending at 10 a.m., today totaled $1,140, which represents the best day the drive has experienced since it opened.

Included among the gifts were checks for $500 from Leola Moffett Edwards and one for $200 from Odd Fellows Mullens Lodge 372. Mr. and Mrs. Clem McElreath, Mrs. Bob Piner and an anonymous donor each gave $100.

The total raised is $2,326.88, a little less than one eighth the amount needed to insure continued operation of the facility.

Commandos swing down ropes to end Iranian embassy siege

LONDON (AP) — British commandos swung down ropes from the roof of the Iranian Embassy and in a paralyzing hail of explosives and gunfire killed four Arab-Iranian terrorists, captured one other and rescued 19 hostages to end a six-day siege.

Meanwhile, a senior government minister said today Britain hopes that its commando rescue of the captives Monday may encourage Iran to free the 53 Americans held hostage by Iranian militants since Nov. 4.

"I hope it may lead those concerned in Iran, not just the government, to think afresh about this — to realize that the rules about diplomats and embassies and so on are not just a luxury," said Foreign Office Minister of State Douglas Hurd.

Police sought to learn who dispatched and armed the terrorists who had threatened to kill all their hostages and blow up the embassy unless Iran freed 91 Iranian Arabs imprisoned in oil-rich Khuzestan province.

The affiliation of the five gunmen — one was captured in the assault and was being questioned — remained a mystery. During the siege three autonomy-seeking Arab groups from Khuzestan threatened to follow up the embassy seizure with similar acts elsewhere.

Scotland Yard, which earlier said three of the five gunmen were killed in the commando assault, disclosed today that a fourth was dead on arrival at a hospital Monday.

Two Iranian hostages were killed and their deaths touched off the commando attack. Only one of the dead hostages was identified: press attache Abbas Lavasani, 25.

Three former hostages were still hospitalized today; one was in serious condition with gunshot wounds.

Home Secretary William Whitelaw said the daring assault showed "we in Britain are not prepared to tolerate terrorism."

Whitelaw said he ordered the raid after the gunmen dumped the body of the embassy's press attache out the embassy's front door shortly after 7 p.m.

"It was clear that failure to take further action was going to cost lives," the home secretary told a news conference.

Six or eight commandos from the Special Air Services set off a deafening explosion from the roof of the five-story town house just off Hyde Park at 7:23 p.m. Apparently it was a "stun grenade" — used by the West Germans to capture a hijacked airliner in Somalia in 1977 — to immobilize the gunmen. The commandos lowered themselves on ropes to the second floor of the building, both front and back, threw more explosives in the windows and then stormed in with automatic weapons blazing. At least eight of the men were inside within 40 seconds.

Sex discrimination suit naming county heard in New Orleans

A sex discrimination suit filed by Howard County Sheriff's Clerk Bernice Nail and Rachel Shaffer was heard in Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans, La., Monday.

The suit was filed about two years ago and has been in litigation since. The two women claim they do the same duties as deputies and should be paid the same by Howard County.

The difference might be $300 a month plus a $40 a month allowance for uniform and law enforcement certificate.

The women were represented in New Orleans by Gerald Garcia, Odessa, Howard County is being represented by Malcolm Schultz, Abilene. Results are pending. Both sides were given an hour each to present their cases.

County Judge Bill Tunes and County Attorney Harvey Hooser, County Commissioners Louis Brown and Bill Crooker were at the hearing in New Orleans.

Construction booms in city during April

Construction rose again in the city during April.

According to figures released by the city inspection office, construction during the month totaled $474,700, compared to $406,705 for the same month last year. This brings the total for the year-to-date to $2,314,289, still well over the $1,455,497.50 total for the same period last year.

Considerably boosting April's total was a $180,000 commercial addition at 111 E. 7th, commissioned by Gary Turner.

New homes also helped to bolster the month's total. One will be built at 2804 MacAuslan by Spring Country Builders at a cost of $78,000.

Another will be built at 2506 Ann by Reflection Homes with an estimated cost of $50,000. Novis Womack will construct a home at 2615 Crestline at an estimated cost of $42,500.

Institutional construction for the month included a new facility commissioned by the Hillcrest Baptist Church, 2000 West FM 700, at a cost of $47,000.

Gregg Street Cleanup Patrol issues tickets

Local police ticketed nine individuals for criminal trespass and five for public intoxication over the weekend on the Gregg Street Cleanup Patrol, a police department memorandum to City Manager Don Davis reads.

The 14 citations compare to a previous weekend of 99, where 88 were ticketed for criminal trespass and 11 arrested for public intoxication.

City Manager Don Davis said of the lower numbers from this weekend's dragnet, "It reflects some of the effectiveness of the push." He added the rainy weather had a part in the decrease.

To date 97 individuals have been cited for criminal trespass of Gregg Street businesses; 12 have been arrested for public intoxication and two others have been arrested for the charges of DWI and Driver With No Drivers License. One warrant arrest has been made.

Police here started an active campaign to control Gregg Street loitering on the weekend of April 26-27.

City Manager Davis had told the Herald previously the situation on the city's major thoroughfare was out of control.

"The situation on Gregg has gotten almost intolerable and out of hand," Davis said on April 29. "I have heard that beer bottles have been tossed at cars passing by, and of other various sorts of disturbances. The debris, trash and nuisances have become an overriding concern of the community."

Six months ago, Davis asked Chief of Police Stanley Bogard to contact businesses along Gregg to advise them of the criminal trespass laws and their responsibilities under these codes. City staff decided the weekend of April 25-26, to send the force into the action. On that weekend, Bogard used five extra police officers in three patrol cars.

This past weekend, Bogard used three extra men in two patrol cars

Action/reaction: Mountain roads

Q. What can be done about closing the roads on South Mountain?

A. Howard County Sheriff A.N. Standard said the roads on the mountain have been regularly patrolled since he has received other calls relative to the problem. There were once gates erected on the roads but their use were discontinued. Patrols have made contact with some people on the roads at night and warned that they were trespassing on private property.

Calendar: City council special

TODAY

V.F.W. Post 2013 and its auxiliary will meet at 7:30 p.m. in its Post Home on Driver Road for the installation of officers for the year 1980-81.

Capital improvements committee reports will be discussed at a special called meeting of the city council, 6:30 p.m. at city hall, Fourth and Nolan Streets.

Defensive driving class for senior citizens at the Senior Citizens Center, Building 487, Big Spring Industrial Park, 2-4 p.m.

WEDNESDAY

The Newcomer's Handicraft Club will meet at 9:30 a.m. in the home of Nicole St. Hilaire, 902 Mountain Park Dr., to continue their "Duster Dollies" project. All newcomers welcome.

THURSDAY

The West Texas Republican Women's Club will meet at noon at La Posada. Everyone interested is invited to attend.

Tops on TV: 'Big Show'

NBC claims that this is the biggest "Big Show" of the year. Airing at 8 p.m., it is hosted by Gene Kelly and Nancy Walker, with guests Placido Domingo, Mel Tillis, Monty Bragg, Georgia Engel and several others. Despite its claimed bigness, however, it may be a bomb, in which case you should switch immediately over to "Take The Money And Run" at 9 p.m. on Cable Channel 11. It features Woody Allen at his best.

Inside: Senator retired

SEN. BILL MOORE'S glare could reduce other senators to silence and his opposition could torpedo a bill without respect to its merits. His power in the Legislature was matched only by his arrogance in exercising it. See page 3-A.

DIRECTOR JOHN Campbell of Lone Star Gas Co. says his company is concerned that a federal program to save household energy may use more than it saves. He guaranteed it would cost consumers money. See page 5-A.

Outside: Wet odds

Chance of rain this afternoon through Wednesday. No important change in temperature. High today near 80, low tonight in the mid 50s. High Wednesday in the mid 80s. Winds will be from the south at 10 to 15 mph today and tonight. Chance of rain is 30 percent today and Wednesday, 50 percent tonight.

Equipment failure

Edwards Reservoir
spillovers gauged

By DON WOODS
Spillovers from the Edwards Reservoir near FM 700 have dumped one or two thousand gallons of water into a draw on as many as five occasions, according to City Manager Bill Brown.

Brown said, though, that cost was negligible, only about $3 per spillover.

No spillover has occurred for the last two months because someone has been checking the level four times a day, according to Ralph Coates, city water department employee. The last such occurrence was March 17.

The problem is the failure of a piece of equipment called a telemeter. It signals the level of the water via telephone cables. "There is some reason we can't get a signal from over there through the telephone lines," said Coates.

The reservoir elevation control is a 1969 model. Brown said Colorado River Municipal Water District had trouble with their 69 model as well, and had to replace it. He said the city's equipment will have to be replaced. Seven city reservoirs are on the telemeter system, said Coates.

Brown said the system of visually checking the level is "something a lot of cities do as a matter of course anyway." He said there is no one specifically hired to check the level but that it is a "second job" for those assigned to it.

Coates said the item is in the city budget, not for this coming year but for the following year. "There is potentially one in next year's budget and we have 'guessed' the cost at around $20,000," said Coates.

Coates explained the function of the reservoir is a means of keeping the pressure up in the water lines. When the water goes down the main lines, what isn't used flows into the reservoir. When the reservoir is full, the pump is cut off and the water flows back down the line. If the pump is not cut off the reservoir overflows.

Teen girl reported missing located in Colorado City

Paula Crowder, 14, who was reported missing Friday night, has been located in Colorado City.

According to reports, the Lovington, N.M. girl disappeared Friday night after telling relatives she was going to walk to the Sonic Drive-In to get a soft drink.

Members of the family informed local police this morning that Paula had been found in good health in Colorado City by a private citizen. The Colorado City Police were notified, and they notified the family here.

Cadillac thinking small

DETROIT (AP) — Cadillac, the luxury car division of General Motors Corp., is thinking small, an auto trade publication says.

A subcompact car will be offered by Cadillac as a 1982½ model. Ward's Automotive Reports said Monday. The car — reportedly called "petite" — would be a twin of the front-wheel drive replacement for the Chevrolet Monza and Pontiac Sunbird scheduled for introduction about a year from now, the publication said.

The new car would have a 99-inch wheelbase compared with 114 inches for Cadillac's present lineup of full-size cars.

Appeals justice to resign

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — State Appeals Court Justice Paul Halvonik has agreed to resign from the bench after pleading no contest to one count of possessing marijuana in a plea bargain.

His wife, Oakland lawyer, Deborah Halvonik also pleaded guilty Monday to the same charge — possessing more than one ounce of marijuana.

Both were sentenced by retired Supreme Court Justice Louis Burke to six months in jail, but the time was suspended for two years, and they were placed on probation for two years. Mr. Halvonik also was fined $500.

Coca-Cola sets record

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — The Coca-Cola Co. has reported record first-quarter earnings and sales, with a net income of $92.1 million, or 75 cents per share, and net sales of $1.2 billion.

The figures reported Monday represent an 8.1 percent increase in net income, compared with the 1979 first-quarter figure of $85.2 million, or 69 cents per share, and a 17.5 percent increase in net sales, compared with sales of $1.057 billion in the same period in 1979.

Board Chairman J. Paul Austin said the figures reflected greater sales of soft drinks, citrus and wine products, and higher U.S. syrup prices caused by higher sugar prices.

Rights ruling appealed

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — An Iowa Civil Rights Commission ruling ordering this city to pay back pay to firefighter Linda Eaton is being appealed in U.S. District Court.

City Manager Neil Berlin said the city filed the appeal Monday. The commission ruled the city discriminated against Miss Eaton by refusing to allow her to breastfeed her son Ian during her personal time on the job.

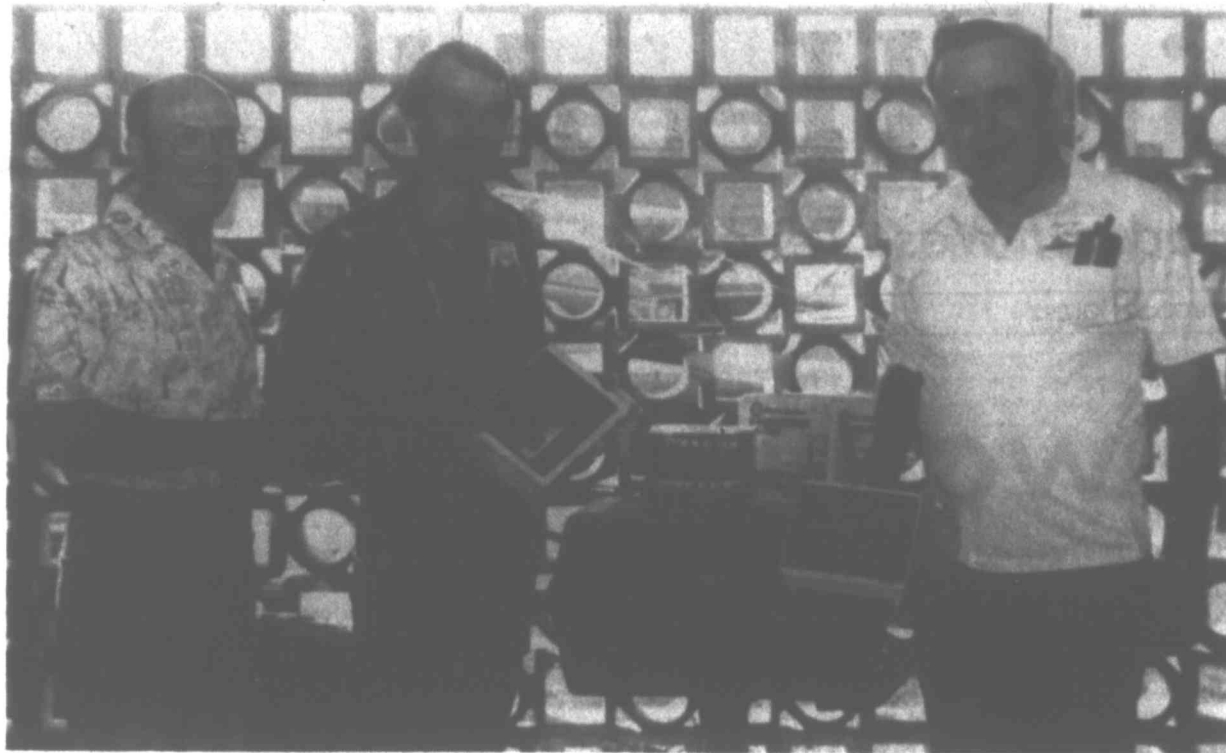

The city was ordered to pay Miss Eaton's attorney fees as well as several hundred dollars in back pay.

Kennedy, Bush not optimistic

Three state primaries set today

With Edward Kennedy and George Bush admitting that it looks like "a bad day for us," three states and the District of Columbia are paring out their presidential nominating delegates today.

The results from Indiana, North Carolina, Tennessee and the Capital seem almost certain to lift President Carter and Ronald Reagan closer to clinching their spots atop rival White House tickets.

Carter and Kennedy are going after 223 Democratic delegates today, with Reagan and Bush pursuing 140 Republican votes.

In addition, Colorado began a long process Monday night that will result in awarding 40 Democratic and 31 Republican delegates. But the outcome there won't be known for weeks.

The president's strategists predicted that after tonight's results and Colorado's outcome, Carter will have close to 90 percent of a nominating majority lined up or committed.

Carter already has 1,137 of the 1,666 delegates he needs for renomination. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy has 654. Republican Reagan was in an even more commanding position, with 636 of the 998 delegates he needs. Former United Nations Ambassador George Bush, his sole surviving rival, has only 138 delegates.

"Tuesday is going to be a bad day for us," Bush conceded on the eve of the primaries. He can't afford many bad days, for Reagan is within reach of the majority that would guarantee him the GOP nomination.

Bush wouldn't guess at his share of today's delegates, but he acknowledged it will be a minority. He campaigned hard in North Carolina and in Tennessee, but both are rated Reagan states.

Bush had one safe bet: Reagan is not entered in the District of Columbia primary.

That also was the most promising territory for Democrat Kennedy; he campaigned there Monday and accused Carter of adopting an "inhumane policy" that relies on increasing unemployment to curb inflation.

"I just hope the people here who aren't satisfied will send the Carter administration a message on primary day," Kennedy said at a Washington unemployment office. "Help us out."

A top Kennedy aide acknowledged that it didn't look good in the two southern states, or in Indiana. "Our prospects just aren't very good in those states," said Richard C. Drayne, an assistant to Kennedy.

But Kennedy strategists also insisted it was the last primary day they would face with the odds heavy against them. There are 16 to go, on four successive Tuesdays.

Bail for Brown
set at $15,000

Paul Justin Brown, 1401 Aylford, is in county jail on suspicion of burglary and attempted theft. Bond was set by Justice of the Peace Lewis Heflin at $15,000.

Brown was arrested May 1 and transferred to county jail Monday. He is suspected of the burglary at 1404 Aylford and an attempted theft at 1011 Scurry.

Police beat
Jack thieves strike

Thieves were busy in the city Monday.

George Russell, 1403 Tucson, believes a man in a blue and white pickup stole Russell's one-and-a-half ton floor jack while he was at the Big Spring Bus Terminal. The jack was valued at $200.

Four hubcaps were stolen from a 1978 Ford Thunderbird belonging to Mike Scarbrough, 2601 Larry. The theft took place while the car was parked in the lot of Coeden Oil and Chemical Company, Monday night. Loss was estimated at $300.

A man with an empty gas tank filled up with 40 gallons of unleaded fuel and a quart of oil at the Mobil Station at IS 20 and Lamesa Highway, 5:20 p.m. Monday. The driver then tried to pay with a credit card, but the owners found out that the card was no longer valid. The man reportedly became enraged and drove away without paying. Loss was estimated at $50.72.

Burglars pushed open a rear door at the Big Spring Independent School District Bus Barn, and stole several types of wrenches, a dwell meter and some hydraulic jacks. Cost of the items has not been estimated.

Burglars also pried the lock from the door of the residence of Eva Burkett, Southland Apartments, sometime within the last three weeks. The only thing stolen was a variety of food.

Vandals smashed the front plate glass window of the Tri-It Liquor Store, 3009 West Highway 80, sometime over the weekend. Damage was estimated at $135.

Someone used a club to break out the rear window of a 1955 Chevrolet pickup belonging to Terri Fuqua, 1222 E. 16th, Sunday night. Damage was estimated at $100.

Four mishaps were reported Monday.

A vehicle belonging to Susan H. Magarity, 2609 Ent, was struck by a vehicle that left the scene at Third and Runnels, 11:10 p.m.

Vehicles driven by V.E. Sorrells, 1707 State, and Reggie Shaw, 600 W. 15th, collided at 600 W. 17th, 5:40 p.m.

Deaths

Bill Ragsdale

W.C. (Bill) Ragsdale, 64, of Big Spring died at 10 a.m. Monday in M.D. Anderson hospital in Houston after a brief illness. Services will be at 10:30 a.m. Wednesday at Nalley-Pickle Rosewood Chapel.

The Rev. Harland Birdwell, rector of St. Mary's Episcopal Church, will officiate. Burial will be at Trinity Memorial Park.

Born May 6, 1915, in Weatherford, he came to Big Spring in 1937 and worked for the Texas and Pacific Railroad for 40 years before retiring as a conductor. He owned and operated Skipper Travel Agency for the last five years.

He married Dorothy Iden Dec. 23, 1966 in Hermleigh. He was an Episcopalian. He was a member of Big Spring Lodge No. 1340 A.F. and A.M., Waco Consistory of Scottish Rite, Suez Shrine Temple, Big Spring Club, Rotary Club and the Elks Lodge.

Survivors include his wife; a stepson, Jerry Iden of Ackery; a stepdaughter,

Fire for benefit of bird kills one, ruins homes

MIO, Mich. (AP) — A fire deliberately set for the benefit of a rare songbird had blackened 30 square miles of forestlands by early today, killing one firefighter, destroying dozens of homes and forcing about 1,000 people to flee.

U.S. Forest Service workers lit the fire Monday morning, trying to prepare breeding grounds for the rare "Bird of Fire," the tiny blue-and-yellow Kirtland's warbler whose only summer habitat is the Huron National Forest. But Forest Service recreation officer Robert Lockhardt said winds gusting up to 25 mph fanned the flames out of control.

"The conditions were right when we started the prescribed burn about four miles south of Mio, but the wind picked up after an hour and a half and the flames headed east," said Lockhardt.

The fire spread east from Mio in Oscoda County eastward toward Lake Huron through Alcona County and to the south through Ogemaw County. Lockhardt said at least 25,000 acres of forestland had been consumed by 7 a.m., when the fire was 75 percent under control.

One Forest Service biological technician, James L. Swiderski, 29, of Alto, was killed. Authorities said apparently he was overcome by smoke while operating a tractor digging fire lines.

A second person, identified by officials only as a motorcyclist, was hospitalized in fair condition today with burns.

Lockhardt said at least 200 firefighters were battling the Huron blaze, including crews from Minnesota and Wisconsin.

Additional manpower was on its way from Indiana and Missouri, he said.

State police evacuated the entire population of South Branch — about 1,000 persons — and warned residents in Jose Lake and Chain Lake they also should be prepared to leave, said Sgt. Gary Gokey. At least 33 homes and cabins were destroyed plus 42 sites at the Mack Lake campground, he said.

Some 250 evacuees at Hale High School were allowed to return to their homes about 11 p.m. Monday, said a Red Cross spokeswoman. Others continued to wait out the blaze at the VFW Hall and Lupton Town Hall, officials said.

The Kirtland's warblers, which numbered 422 at last count, thrive only in jack pine stands that grow when the heat from fire opens jack pine cones and releases seeds, forest service officials said. Fire also prepares the forest floor for their growth.

The tiny yellow-and-blue Kirtland's Warblers have not arrived from their winter home in the Bahamas; they are due in late May or early June. The entire population lives in the Huron National Forest during summer, said Bill Lowenstein, a spokesman for the Department of Natural Resources.

The fire would not necessarily make the area uninhabitable for the birds unless all the trees were lost, said Audubon Society spokesman Wilbur T. Bull.

Kirtland's Warblers numbered slightly more than 1,000 in 1961 but dropped to around 200 in 1971, Bull said. The population has increased slowly in the past decade.

Shorter return to report inheritance taxes planned

AUSTIN — State Comptroller Bob Bullock said he plans to change his agency's tax rules to allow beneficiaries to use a simpler, shorter return to report inheritance taxes.

The new rule, which is not expected to be formally adopted until mid-summer, will raise the dollar limit for taxpayers using the small estate return from $60,000 to $200,000.

"There will be less paperwork and, therefore, it will be easier and quicker to settle estates," Bullock said. The two-page short form being suggested can be used instead of a longer and more complicated form that sometimes runs as much as 15 pages, he said.

The rule will have no effect on tax exemptions that beneficiaries are entitled under state law.

Bullock said that an additional 8,000 inheritance returns a year would be eligible to file the short form. The Comptroller's office processes about 40,000 inheritance tax returns annually and about half of those are already settled with the filing of a simple declaration that no tax is due.

A surviving spouse, children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren, sons-in-law and daughters-in-law may inherit up to $200,000 before state inheritance tax is due.

Taxes are due and a tax return must be filed on all estates within nine months of the date of death.

West Texas receives some thundershowers

By the Associated Press

Texas skies were clear to partly cloudy today, although West and North Central Texas received a few scattered thundershowers and patchy morning fog blanketed the Coast.

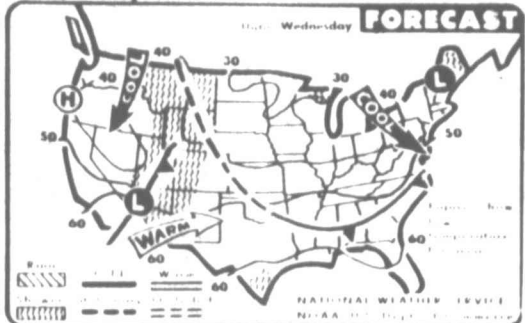

Precipitation was generally light, with Marfa receiving 1.9 of an inch, the National Weather Service reported.

Forecasters predicted partly cloudy skies and warm temperatures would continue through Wednesday.

FORECAST
WEST TEXAS — Partly cloudy with widely scattered mainly afternoon and nighttime thundershowers through Wednesday. Highs today and Wednesday 70s north to mid 90s Big Bend valleys. Lows tonight 40s mountains and extreme north to low 60s south.

EXTENDED FORECAST
WEST TEXAS — Chance of showers and thundershowers Thursday becoming partly cloudy with a decreasing threat of precipitation toward the weekend. Warm afternoons will continue. Highs will range from the middle 70s north to the upper 80s south and the upper 90s Big Bend valleys. Lows middle 40s mountains and northwest to lower 60s extreme southeast.

WEATHER FORECAST — Showers are predicted through early Wednesday for the Rocky Mountain region into the Southwest, according to the National Weather Service. Showers are also anticipated for southern Texas and part of Maine.

Emigration to deportation: No end in sight to Cuban influx

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — What started as the emigration of Cubans dissatisfied with their country is rapidly becoming the deportation of criminals and others who dissatisfy the Cuban government, U.S. immigration officials say.

Cubans who never asked to leave their homeland are turning up among the 16,000 refugees who have landed in South Florida, officials said.

"These people aren't emigrating, they're being deported," said a U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service officer who asked not to be identified.

There was no end in sight to the influx as refugees spilled into Key West Monday at a rate of up to 300 per hour. The Coast Guard estimated that more than 2,000 small boats piloted by Cuban-Americans, many of whom were trying to pick up relatives, still were tied up at the Cuban port of Mariel.

"There's only one man who knows how long this is going to go on, and we are not in direct communication with him," said William Trauth, spokesman for the Federal Emergency Management Agency. "I'm referring to the guy in Havana with the big cigar."

He was talking about Cuban President Fidel Castro.

At Eglin Air Force Base in North Florida, where a refugee processing center and "tent city" was set up last week, officials were preparing to allow the first of the Cubans who had been given clearance to leave today. The refugees were checked for criminal backgrounds and health problems.

President Carter pledged Monday to accept thousands more Cuban refugees and said he welcomed them with "open arms and an open heart." But one new arrival, fresh from a Cuban jail cell, said he wasn't sure he wanted to stay in the United States.

"My wife and two sons are still in Cuba. I don't know if they know I'm here," said Jorge Castillo, adding he may ask to go back if his family can't join him.

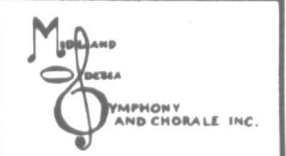

Castillo, jailed in Cuba under a "dangerous persons" category that includes draft dodgers and homosexuals, is one of a growing number of prison inmates among the refugees, immigration officials say.

"This is an emptying of prisons," said an INS officer, who asked not to be identified.

Carter's decision to accept an unlimited number of refugees marked a turnabout in federal policy toward the boatlift, which entered its third week today. The administration had tried to no avail to discourage the operation by threats of legal action and appeals to Cuban American leaders. When a plan was first worked out for the migration of 10,000 Cubans who took refuge at the Peruvian Embassy in Havana, the United States said it would take 3,500 refugees from the embassy.

But thousands of other Cubans have been crowding aboard the boats of the "Freedom Flotilla" for the 90-mile trip across the Florida Straits.

Will perform a Gala concert at 7:30 p.m. May 15 in Big Spring High School Auditorium. Tickets available at: Chamber of Commerce, Citizens Federal Credit Union and First Federal Savings and at the door. $4.00 general admission.

Lack of opposition helped to defeat Sen. Bill Moore

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Sen. Bill Moore's glare could reduce other senators to silence and his opposition could torpedo a bill without respect to its merits. His power in the Legislature was matched only by his arrogance in exercising it.

Moore, 61, dominated the Senate with his no-holds-barred temper and his unequalled power as chairman of the State Affairs Committee. No candidate had dared oppose him since 1966.

But, an aide said Monday, this lack of opposition meant Moore had not campaigned in his 19-county district for 14 years, and this lack of contact with his people contributed to his defeat in the Democratic primary.

Kent Caperton, a Bryan attorney born the year Moore became a Senator — 1949 — piled up a victory margin of almost 4,000 votes Saturday to retire the dean of the Senate.

A Moore campaign technician agreed to offer a frank analysis of Moore's defeat on the condition that his name not be used.

"It had been 14 years since he had run a race, and he had never run a race with modern accoutrements. He had never been on TV or used telephone banks. Bill was not good on TV, and the kid (Caperton) was," he said.

Moore did poorly in Montgomery County, which Houston suburban development had transformed into the district's largest county. There and in other counties as well, the campaign aide said, many conservative Democrats were lured into the Republican primary by George Bush's heavy television appeal for help against Ronald Reagan. Of those who stayed in the Democratic primary, "a lot of those people are young and did not even know who Moore was."

Finally, he said, "Moore was a victim of not only the crossover voting but of being there too long — the 'time for a change' syndrome."

The aide kept coming back to Moore's lack of contact with the people he represented as the biggest problem.

"Moore never to my knowledge put out a newsletter or press releases, things like that," he said.

Caperton says Moore's record as a senator and his constituents' perception that "31 years in the Senate is just too long" were the deciding factors.

The Moore campaign aide minimized Moore's record as a factor but was willing to concede Moore might have been hurt by Caperton's "harping" on at least three bills. One was Moore's vote in 1969 to put a sales tax on food. Another was his sponsorship in 1973 of a collective bargaining bill for firemen and policemen. Finally, the aide said, Caperton "may have caught on a little with the old people" by pointing out Moore's vote against a generic drug bill that was touted as a way to reduce the price of prescriptions.

Moore had been chairman of the Senate State Affairs Committee 12 years and probably would have kept the job as long as his friend, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, kept his

The committee received tax bills, measures dealing with touchy state policy matters and just about anything Hobby wanted to send to it.

Moore ran the committee pretty much as he wished, sometimes signalling other members how he expected them to vote on a bill by saying "Vote aye when your name is called."

"I'm a free soul," he once told a reporter. "Life would be hell if you had to worry about every decision you make and who it might offend. I call it the way I see it and never take it home with me."

He often cut off witnesses before his committee and defended his actions by saying, "Anything that can't be explained in 15 minutes is no good anyway."

Moore played things his own way, once killing a medical school bill by refusing to sign the committee report after the panel — untypically — overrode his wishes and voted it to the floor.

Last year, other senators had to step between him and arch-enemy Sen. A.R. Schwartz of Galveston to avert a possible fist fight during a meeting of Moore's committee.

Your electric bill has something in common with your grocery bill---inflation.

Inflation has made every can of corn, every carton of milk cost more today.

Everything it takes to produce and deliver groceries — fuel, equipment, etc. — is increasing in price.

The same is true of electricity. The cost of fuel to generate electricity is going up. So are the costs of power lines, transformers, poles and other equipment.

We're helping fight the effect of inflation on your electric bill by building new power plants that use cheaper lignite coal and nuclear fuels.

There are things you can do, as well. By using electricity wisely, just as you shop for groceries wisely, you can help hold down your electric bill.

By attending one of our free "Operation Tighten-Up" workshops, you can learn effective ways to conserve electricity.

Call us and arrange to attend a workshop in your neighborhood.

Poorer states gainer on richer ones

There's been an interesting change in the distribution of incomes in this nation.

Alaska tops the list in per capita income, followed by Nevada, California, Connecticut, Illinois, New Jersey, Wyoming, Delaware, Washington and Michigan in that order. The average person in those states receives for anywhere from $8,493 to $10,963 a year's time in those states. (That means wage earners and dependents alike figure in the statistics.)

(In Alaska, of course, one needs a lot more money to make ends meet than would their counterparts in any of the continental states — some say as much as 25 percent more, because of the scarcity of goods and the staggering cost of getting staples there.)

THE LIST SHOWS two changes in the last ten years: New York, for years the leader of the pack, is now down in 13th place among the states. Massachusetts, in the upper echelon until recently, has retreated to 17th place. Replacing New York and Massachusetts were Wyoming and Michigan.

There have also been changes taking place at the bottom of the ladder. Kentucky, Louisiana and West Virginia no longer are among the ten poorest states ($6,575-$5,529 per capita). They have been replaced by Maine, Utah and North Carolina in a ranking that now includes, from 50th on up, Mississippi, Arkansas, South Carolina, Alabama, Maine, Tennessee, Utah, Vermont, New Mexico and North Carolina.

THE CHANGE at the top and bottom and in the income categories between reflect the ongoing shift of economic vitality and population from the industrially declining Northeast and Midwest to the sunbelt states of the South and West.

What may be of greater significance is the steady narrowing of the gap between rich and poor states. States at the very end of the scale, according to the research firm which provided these figures, are gaining more rapidly than those at the upper end.

Forty years ago, per capita income in the bottom quintile of states was only 35 percent of those in the top group. By 1978, the year the latest statistics were compiled, income of the poorest had risen to 72 percent of the leading group as overall the national average moved steadily upward.

It could be a case of the rich getting richer and the poor making an honest effort to improve their station in life. It could also be a case in which the rich attracted more than their share of welfare cases.

Archaic system

Around the rim

Steve Hershberger

Presidents Richard Nixon and Jimmy Carter have demonstrated that the most nagging concern of the White House has been re-election. This is precisely why a change in our present system of allowing two terms in the presidency is archaic.

Consider Richard Nixon. Watergate probably would have never happened if Nixon's aides were not obsessed with re-election.

Take Jimmy Carter. He seems to have started campaigning for a second term to the White House the day he entered.

CARTER HAS ON occasion used the Iranian situation to his political advantage. The most notable case was a 7 a.m. (EST) news conference on the day of the Wisconsin primary, when Carter announced equivocally Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr would take control of the American hostages.

The two-term eligibility for the president is a hindrance for any man occupying the White House, for he all too often weighs the effects of whatever he does on his re-election prospects.

A single, 6-year term for a president is a remedy that has merit. A six-year duration in the oval office gives the man the opportunity to perform with future generations in mind, not the Gallup Poll.

Kenneth O'Donnell, an aide to President John F. Kennedy, wrote that Sen. Mike Mansfield (of Montana) advised JFK in 1963 to get out of Vietnam.

Kennedy replied, according to O'Donnell, he would like to do just that, but he would have to wait until after the 1964 presidential election. Kennedy feared the reaction of voters.

History tells us now that Vietnam was a grave mistake for this country. The country is still smarting from the repercussions of the Southeast Asia conflict.

This is precisely why the single term has so much merit. The president is able to use his foresight or the wisdom of another toward the good of the country. As it is now, the reactions of people with shorter vision overrule.

Another consideration is that the presidential campaigns are too lengthy now. The citizens of this country are being seemingly always besieged with presidential candidates. Because of the early starters, President Carter had to become an active candidate 10 months before his party's nomination and a year in advance of the November election.

"The process of selecting a president really needs some major changes," He added, "I think we ought to push for a 6-year term."

Opponents will argue that (1) a single term creates a lame duck situation in the executive branch; (2) and a single term would isolate the president from the people. The chief executive does need to consider the political implications of his acts.

IN THE FIRST place, the president has considerable power to wield up to the last days of his tenure. Political scientist tell us now the president is a lame duck the day he is elected to a second term.

Consider, however, that a president has at his disposal the power of veto, appointment, budget making and program initiation. He has these until his successor is sworn in.

President Lyndon Johnson signed into law two pieces of major legislation in his last months in office. These were the Equal Housing Act and the tax reform act.

The separation of powers between the three federal branches prevents the president from becoming insulated to the needs of the country. In order to pass a bill, implement a plan or make a treaty the president must work with a very political body, the U.S. Congress.

The president becomes powerful, but not all-powerful.

What the single term does is it gives the president the opportunity to write a durable, solid record for posterity.

An aide to President Johnson once said, "We must always remember that a president's noblest stirring is toward his place in history as a good, perhaps, great, president."

The founding fathers understood the possibility of change and provided our political system with the amendment mechanism. We have used it 26 times thus far. (27, when the Equal Rights Amendment is passed.)

The 6-year term is a remedy to an imperfect system for the moment experiencing, for every moment the president devotes to getting re-elected, the more he squanders a most precious treasure — our nation.

Noble failure

Joseph Kraft

Cyrus Vance represents many of the best things in America. As secretary of state, he set us all an example of honor and nobility. So it is sad that he has had to resign—especially in circumstances that make it plain the president was glad to see him go.

To a rare degree, however, Vance was the author of his fate. He framed policies that failed, and dealt cards to his enemies. He placed total trust in a president unsteady in his bearings.

The imprint Vance made on events is curiously large. He enunciated no coherent world view, and he surrounded himself with associates that lacked weight in the world, even in Washington.

But he legitimized the president's instinctive bent for moral righteousness as a guiding principle of American foreign policy. He lent his prestige to an emphasis on collective action through such bodies as the United Nations.

MOST OF THE big foreign policy events of the Carter administration represent his handiwork. He pushed hard for détente with Russia and the arms control agreement known as SALT II. He laid the groundwork for the Camp David accords between Egypt and Israel. He dedicated himself to reconciliation between the U.S. and the Third World.

As these developments came on stream all were duly celebrated. In retrospect they have turned to ashes. The Soviet invasion of Afghanistan has ended any early hope for another arms control accord. The Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty is reaching a dead end. Relations with the Third World find their symbol in the ghastly display of American corpses by the revolutionary regime in Iran.

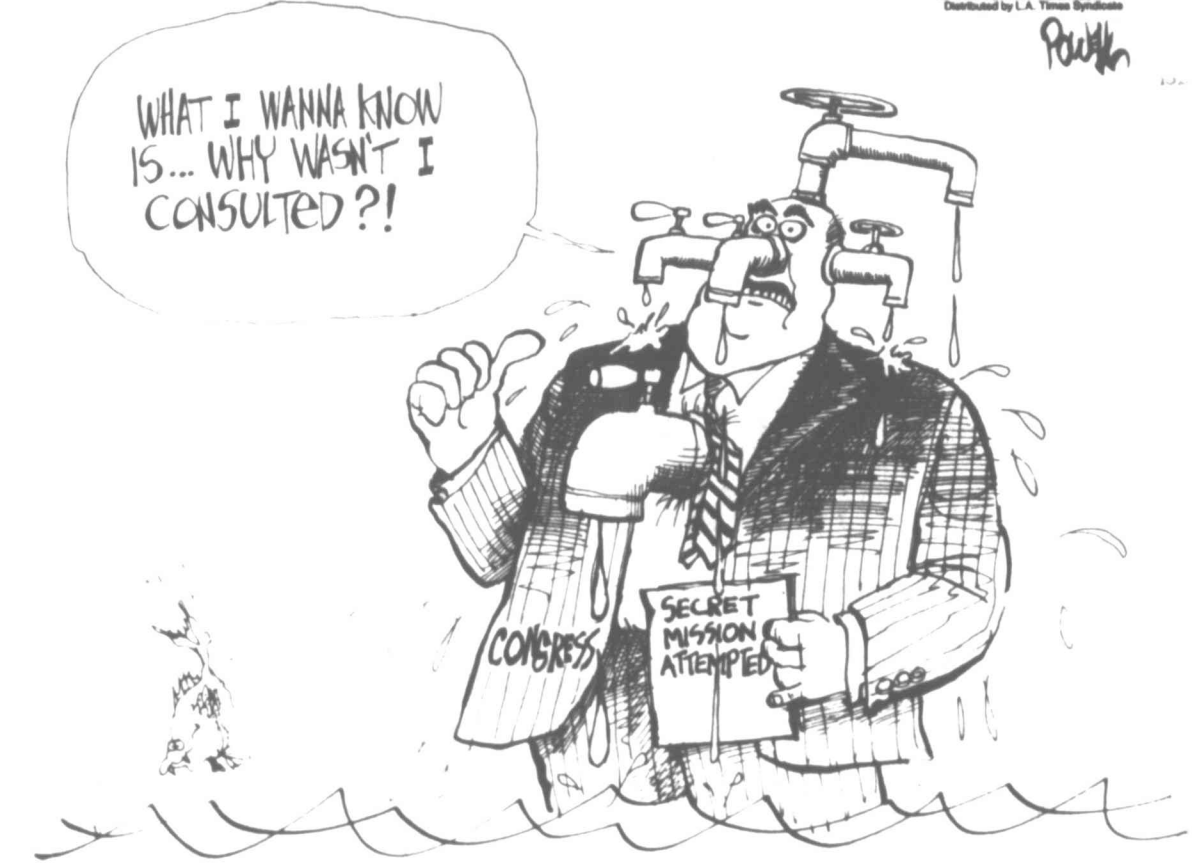

Partisans of the former secretary of state blame these unhappy endings on his bureaucratic rivals, notably the special assistant to the president, Zbigniew Brzezinski. As they tell it, Brzezinski delayed SALT II by dirty work on the inside while scaring off the Russians by overzealous courtship of the Chinese. He supposedly queered the Third World connection by exaggerating American setbacks. His ham-handed treatment of Israelis and Arabs is held responsible for killing chances of expanding the Camp David accords.

For in case after case, long after policies had run into the ground, the president stayed with the Vance approach. Mr. Carter hung in there for SALT II. DESPITE AN UNRELENTING Soviet military buildup compounded by truculent Russian behavior on Cuba, and assertive moves by Moscow in Vietnam, Yemen, Ethiopia and southern Africa.

Carter and Vance kept moving in tandem on the Near East despite recurrent failures highly costly in domestic politics. They talked up the Third World connection despite slaps from every quarter—including even Mexico.

EVENTS GROWING out of the seizure of the hostages finally forced the breach. Long drawn-out negotiations exposed both the ineffectiveness of mere moral rectitude and the emptiness of collective action at the U.N., or even through the allies. With attention focused on Iran, it was impossible to gloss over the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan. The behavior of the Iranian regime exposed the true character of Third World politics.

Faced with that debacle, Vance was naked. He had ignored the realities of power politics as played by foreign adversaries and opportunistic colleagues.

Congestion a companion of bad heart

Paul G. Donohue, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: My mother has a bad heart and is on a salt-restricted diet. She craves great amounts of water. Now her ankles and her stomach have enlarged. She is 75 and they say it is "dropsy." She finds it difficult to breathe. Please explain what this is and what causes it. Before her heart trouble she drank very little water. — Mrs. S.K.

"Dropsy" is a somewhat altered form of the Greek word for water. Perhaps the illness most often associated with accumulation of water in the body is congestive heart failure. This is, as the name implies, failure of the heart as a pump. I'll try to simplify the explanation of why this happens.

It begins with the inability of the heart to generate enough force to pump its blood out into the arteries. A consequence of this is a simultaneous "backup" of blood in the veins, which are supposed to lead blood back to the heart. The veins become overloaded with fluid that cannot be circulated properly because of the failing pump. As the backed-up blood and pressure in the veins increases, blood fluid starts to leak through their walls. This fluid can leak into the lungs (accounting for your mother's breathing difficulties), into the abdominal cavity (her distention) or into the legs (her ankles) — wherever the pressure is greatest.

To alleviate this situation, patients are placed on a salt- and water-restricted regimen. This prevents even greater accumulation of fluid. Diuretics (water pills) are given to allow the patient to urinate off some of this fluid. The failing heart is treated with digitalis drugs to make it stronger as a pump so that less of the blood will back up.

Your mother's thirst may be due to the fact that, although there is too much fluid in her body, there may be less in actual circulation. The fluid, as noted, is leaking out. The body senses this and reacts with the thirst sensation. Admittedly, there is too much fluid; it is in the wrong places. Your mother should improve when her medication and restrictions take effect.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I had thought that diverticulosis, those out-pouchings of the intestines you speak of, was only for old folks, but I have heard of a case of a quite young woman getting them — in her early 20s. How so? — Mrs. B.L.K.

It is more common in adults because it usually takes many years for the stress and strain to cause the weakenings that produce the tiny out-pouchings. However, you are correct in implying that it can occur in relatively young people. If it is detected then, it can be watched for signs of pouch infection (diverticulitis) and early treatment can avoid greater problems. For a more detailed discussion see the booklet, "Don't Let Diverticulosis Throw You." For a copy, send 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to me care of the Big Spring Herald.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Could you give us one of your inimitable dissertations on irregular heart beats? — A.V.

The topic is so vast that a small dissertation is impossible. The beats may be due to something as harmless as brief slowdowns synchronized with breathing patterns (sinus arrhythmia). Some conditions causing irregular beats are dangerous, like ventricular tachycardia. In that, the lower chambers of the heart (ventricles) have revolted against the dictator of the heart rhythm — the pacemaker. The ventricles have become their own pacemakers. The heart marches to a different drummer.

There are an assortment of other irregularities, some of which need no treatment — for example, an infrequent early beat. Others, such as atrial fibrillation (involving upper chambers), do require treatment.

If you have a specific question about a particular irregular beat, send that on and I can be more specific.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Tell me, please, on average how many hairs are on a human scalp and how many do we lose in a day on average? — Mrs. P.T.

Thanks for adding "on average" or you'd have had me up all night counting. On average, there are about 100,000 hairs on a human scalp. On average, we lose about 100 a day. I don't know who counted.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Is milk still considered good for a person with gastric ulcer? — B.W.

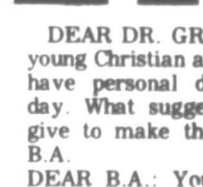

Milk will neutralize stomach acid temporarily and might produce temporary comfort. But milk also stimulates production of the acid later, and that tends to balance things out. What you avoid in ulcer diet is important, and that includes things like caffeinated beverage, aspirin, cigarettes and alcohol.

What are ulcers? How can you help yourself get rid of ulcers and stay rid of them? Read the booklet, "How to Heal Peptic Ulcers." For a copy write to Dr. Donohue in care of the Big Spring Herald, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I am a young Christian and would like to have personal devotions every day. What suggestions can you give to make them helpful? — B.A.

DEAR B.A.: You can do nothing more important than this; it will be the foundation of your spiritual growth. Remember that our Lord Jesus felt the need to get away and spend time in prayer. We read: "Very early in the morning, while it was still dark, Jesus got up, left the house and went off to a solitary place, where he prayed" (Mark 1:35). If Jesus needed times like this, how much more do we!

First of all, set aside a regular time and (if possible) a regular place for your personal time with God. You should choose a time when you will not be disturbed, and when you are alert. You certainly will want to take advantage of other opportunities you have for spiritual growth, such as a group Bible studies and church services, but these are not a substitute for time alone with God.

Your time with God should have at least three elements: Bible study, prayer and meditation. I suggest you take one of the Books of the Bible, and read a portion of it each day. (Start with one of the Gospels, such as John, or some of the New Testament letters if you are not familiar with the Bible. Don't feel that you have to read a large portion, but experiment to see what seems to be a good length — a chapter, several paragraphs, or a complete incident. As you read, be sure you understand what is being presented. But most of all, ask God to help you apply its truth to your life. What difference should the truth of this passage make in your life?

Then spend time in prayer. Many people find it helpful to keep a list of those people and needs for which they are praying. Remember to pray also about the Bible passage you have just read, that God would seal its truth to your heart. And spend a few minutes meditating on the passage you have read and the things for which you might pray. God bless you and draw you closer to Him during these times you have.

Scam failed

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — House Speaker Tip O'Neill was a high-priority target of the FBI's ABCAM investigation, according to sources close to the bribery caper.

In fact, the Massachusetts Democrat was such a tempting possibility that the Justice Department earmarked an unprecedented $75,000 in bribe money for him.

No actual offer was made to O'Neill by the FBI's phony, favor-seeking "Arabs," insiders told my associate Gary Cohn, for the simple reason that they were unable to lure the Speaker into the scam. But there's considerable evidence that they were dead-serious about ailing O'Neill — who has had strong differences with the Carter administration, and whose son is a vocal supporter of Sen. Ted Kennedy for president.

O'NEILL'S EMERGENCE as a target raises new and disturbing questions about the ABCAM operation. Justice Department officials have insisted that no members of Congress were pretargeted, or entrapped, but rather that the congressmen themselves made the overtures, usually after being contacted by one of the middlemen used by the FBI.

While it's true that O'Neill's name was first mentioned by one of the go-betweens, it is now clear that the middleman did it only to impress his wealthy "Arab" benefactors with his own importance. The middleman, a New Jersey building contractor named Joseph R. Silvestri, actually didn't know O'Neill at all.

But it's also true that the undercover agents pursued the O'Neill possibility with uncommon enthusiasm. They repeatedly pressed Silvestri to make good on his boast that he could produce O'Neill. They dangled the promise of a $50,000 payoff.

Silvestri, trying to stall the agents until he could find someone to introduce him to the Speaker, suggested that $50,000 wasn't big enough bait for such a big fish. They told him they'd consider a bigger offer, and four or five days later — apparently after checking with Justice Department brass in Washington — they authorized a payment to the Speaker of $75,000.

One of the big mysteries of the ABCAM operation is the zeal — or lack of it — that was shown in following up leads that pointed to various government officials. Some leaders were pursued; some were not.

them to other officials — including North Carolina Lt. Gov. James Green. The ABCAM agents said they weren't interested in Green, who happens to be a prominent member of the Carter re-election campaign in North Carolina. Instead, they pressured Silvestri again and again to set up a meeting with Speaker O'Neill, meeting with Speaker O'Neill.

Footnote: Silvestri refused to comment.

DOWN WITH PROFITS: President Carter had directed his anti-inflation program against the wage earners, small businessmen and small farmers. By pressing the Federal Reserve Board to boost interest rates and tighten the money supply, he has stimulated over-the-moon prices and profits.

The corporate giants are raking in profits up to 200 percent at the same time that Carter has brought pressure on unions to hold salary increases to 7 percent. Now that a recession is slowing the economy, the companies will close plants and lay off workers before they will cut prices and give up their record profits.

The most recklessly greedy are the oil companies, which have created phony gas shortages so they can squeeze motorists for higher prices. From secret corporate papers, I have established that oil supplies were more than adequate when motorists were lining up at the gas pumps last year.

The oil companies claim they need higher profits to pay for oil exploration. The cost of exploration, however, is deducted from the profits. So when Exxon admitted it piled up $2 billion in profits during the first quarter of 1980, this was $2 billion that was not spent to find new energy sources.

Last year, oil earnings soared out of orbit. Yet already this year, Exxon's profits have catapulted another 102 percent. Standard Oil of Ohio has increased profits an astounding 170 percent. This makes Texaco, at a mere 97.6 percent, look like a piker.

THE HORSE'S MOUTH: Tempers were rising at a recent appearance of Energy Secretary Charles Duncan before a House energy subcommittee to explain why certain documents on the proposed oil import fee were being withheld.

Chairman Toby Moffett, D-Conn., angrily accused Duncan of using executive privilege. Duncan tried to sidestep the accusation. Moffett then proposed a compromise.

"I'll have to talk it over with my colleagues," said Duncan. Just who, a subcommittee member asked, are "your colleagues?"

"The president," confessed Duncan a bit sheepishly.

But he stays tuned in Clements likes his job

By JIM DAVIS
Austin-Texas Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — Bill Clements says emphatically he won't leave the Governor's Mansion next year even if one of his Republican buddies becomes president and offers him a Cabinet post, such as secretary of state.

He may be less emphatic if such an offer ever comes, because the governor's love for foreign affairs is passionate.

Critics accuse him of dabbling in foreign affairs to the detriment of gubernatorial duties and to the dismay of foreign service professionals in Washington, D.C.

If the criticism bothers Clements, he shows it not. He probably truly believes that flying back and forth between Austin and Mexico and sniping at President Carter's foreign policy is his duty as governor.

As a deputy secretary of defense under Presidents Nixon and Ford (and therefore a participant on the National Security Council), Clements received a taste of dealing with international problems from the inside.

He already had experience in the private sector. SEDCO, the Dallas-based firm that he founded and made into the world's largest oil-drilling company, has branches around the world.

Clements traveled widely and personally negotiated many of the international deals involving SEDCO.

After his inauguration in January 1979, he launched an intense courtship of Mexico through its president and governors of states bordering on Texas. SEDCO's embarrassing role in the Mexican oil spill in the Gulf last year would have silenced a less confident individual.

But the governor is forging ahead on his own foreign affairs program with Mexico and sounds as though he believes his labeling of the oil spill as "much to do about nothing."

Last September he traveled to the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe, officially as a private citizen but with the air of an ambassador.

Soviet agricultural officials told Clements they couldn't guarantee a full tour of farming areas because he was only a tourist. Clements replied that, as the governor of Texas, he expected to see everything he wanted and would be very upset if he did not.

When his group of Texas farmers and ranchers reached the farms in southern Russia, Soviet officials said they could see everything.

That freedom gave the Texans valuable insight into the Soviet agricultural situation in the area, including a serious drought problem. U.S. embassy personnel quizzed the group members about their observations after they returned to Moscow.

That kind of hard-nosed dealing with the Soviets probably gives a good idea what kind of foreign policy any Republican administration would have with Clements as secretary of state.

Another clue came from remarks he gave last week to the Council on Foreign Relations, a private group, in New York City.

Clements called for a strong national defense and said:

"I understand that the Chinese word for crisis is composed of two characters. The first represents 'danger' and the second means 'opportunity.' The dangers of today are real — and the consequences of our failure are horrifying. But the opportunities for recovery and resurgence exist."

On the light side

Farmers 56, City boys 37

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Louisiana's "watermelon bill" is on its way to a friendly Agriculture committee after a preliminary victory in the effort to make the watermelon the official state fruit.

Under House rules, the measure should have gone to the Committee on Municipal, Parochial and Cultural Affairs. But Rep. Jamie Fair argued on Monday, "They are planted by farmers, cultivated by farmers and harvested by farmers."

His colleagues agreed and House Speaker John Hainke announced the vote: "That's farmers 56, city boys 37."

No beans and macaroni

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — Maybe it's because he married a woman 36 years younger, and maybe it's because he fathered 17 children, and maybe it's just heredity. But Louis Carter says he may have lived to be 107 years old because he avoided snap beans and macaroni.

"I don't know," the retired cook said during his birthday party Monday. "But when you score 107, you must be doing something right."

And, with the exception of the snap beans and macaroni, "I like to eat and like any other kind of food."

The Columbus native may have something else going for him. His little brother, Willie, is 104.

Honeymoon in a hospital

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Donna Arndt wasn't about to let a little case of acute appendicitis keep her from getting married.

Nine hours before her scheduled wedding Saturday, the 20-year-old Grand Rapids woman was in a hospital. She pleaded to be released for her 4 p.m. wedding.

Doctors gave in, treated her with several injections and told her to be out of her wedding gown and back into her hospital gown by 5 p.m.

The woman went to the church, married Joseph Cardinale, 24, posed for some pictures and returned to the hospital at 6 p.m., where she was promptly wheeled into surgery.

Hospital officials said she was doing fine Monday.

Saving energy may be using more, some feel

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Director John Campbell of Lone Star Gas Co. says his company is concerned that a federal program to save household energy may use more than it saves. He guaranteed it would cost consumers money.

Spokesmen for consumer groups criticized the program for a different reason, stating it would do little — if anything — to help Texans hold down natural gas and electric costs.

Campbell said Monday "all classes ... will have to pay higher gas rates to support this program."

He estimated the cost for the first year at $2 million, which would raise the gas bill for each of Lone Star's some 1.1 million customers by $2 a year.

Aart Millem, director of operations for the Community Action Agency of Hays, Caldwell and Blanco counties, said a proposed state plan implementing the federally imposed program "would do nothing for the poor in their struggle for survival."

The staff of the Texas Energy and Natural Resources Advisory Council took testimony on the Residential Conservation Service Program, which is part of the National Energy Conservation Policy Act.

Public hearings on the proposal also are scheduled for Irving on Tuesday, Houston on Wednesday and Lubbock on Thursday.

The federal act requires certain utilities — on request — to provide residential customers with suggestions for saving energy and to assist the customer in arranging for installation and financing of conservation measures.

Campbell said to inspect a customer's house Lone Star probably would have to hire 40 persons, "and that means purchasing 40 new vehicles whose gasoline consumption may well exceed the amount of energy saved by home owners who take full advantage of the RCS (Residential Conservation Service) Program."

...I was a complete novice in purchasing a funeral service."

Too often, this statement is accurate, because when funeral service is needed all the decisions have to be made in a matter of hours. There's no time to compare...no opportunity to discuss calmly and logically what should and what should not be included in the service.

That's why it's to your advantage to do these things in advance. Make your decisions and record them now to help your family at some unknown time in the future.

For complete information on pre-arranging the funeral, visit Nalley Pickle Funeral Home. There's never any charge or obligation.

RUIDOSO DOWNS!

THE FABULOUS
1980 RACING SEASON
BEGINS SATURDAY, MAY 10

Great racing returns to Ruidoso Downs starting next Saturday and Sunday, May 10-11!

It's a short, pleasant drive to fabulous racing, cool summer air and a truly impressive vacation community tucked away in a lush corner of the stunning Sacramento Mountains of Southern New Mexico. You'll love the gorgeous scenery and crisp mountain air, but best of all is the great racing.

This year, a magnificent 66-day meeting extends through Labor Day (Sept. 1). Racing is staged Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday afternoons. And no track anywhere has ever offered such a glittering stakes schedule packed with so many big-money races. Heading the list is the famed Triple Crown for 2-year-old quarter horses which is topped by the All-American Futurity — the glamour event of the season. The 440-yard classic carries a total purse of $1,280,000 (est.)! A sister event, the All-American Derby, offers a stunning gross purse of $1,250,000 (est.).

Make plans now to be at Ruidoso Downs for all the excitement of opening week. On Saturday, 3-year-olds run in the Kansas Derby Trials. The top qualifiers will be eligible for the $225,000 (est.) Kansas Derby at 400 yards. Sunday is highlighted by two great races, the $6,500 Inaugural at 6 furlongs and the $5,000-added Top Deck Stakes at 350 yards. First post is 1 p.m.

Write today for a free color brochure: P.O. Box 448, Ruidoso Downs, N.M. 86348, Phone 505/378-4431.

ERA wants to boycott Florida

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Tourist officials say it smacks of blackmail and opponents say it won't work, but backers of the Equal Rights Amendment are asking vacationers to stay away from Florida until the Legislature approves the ERA.

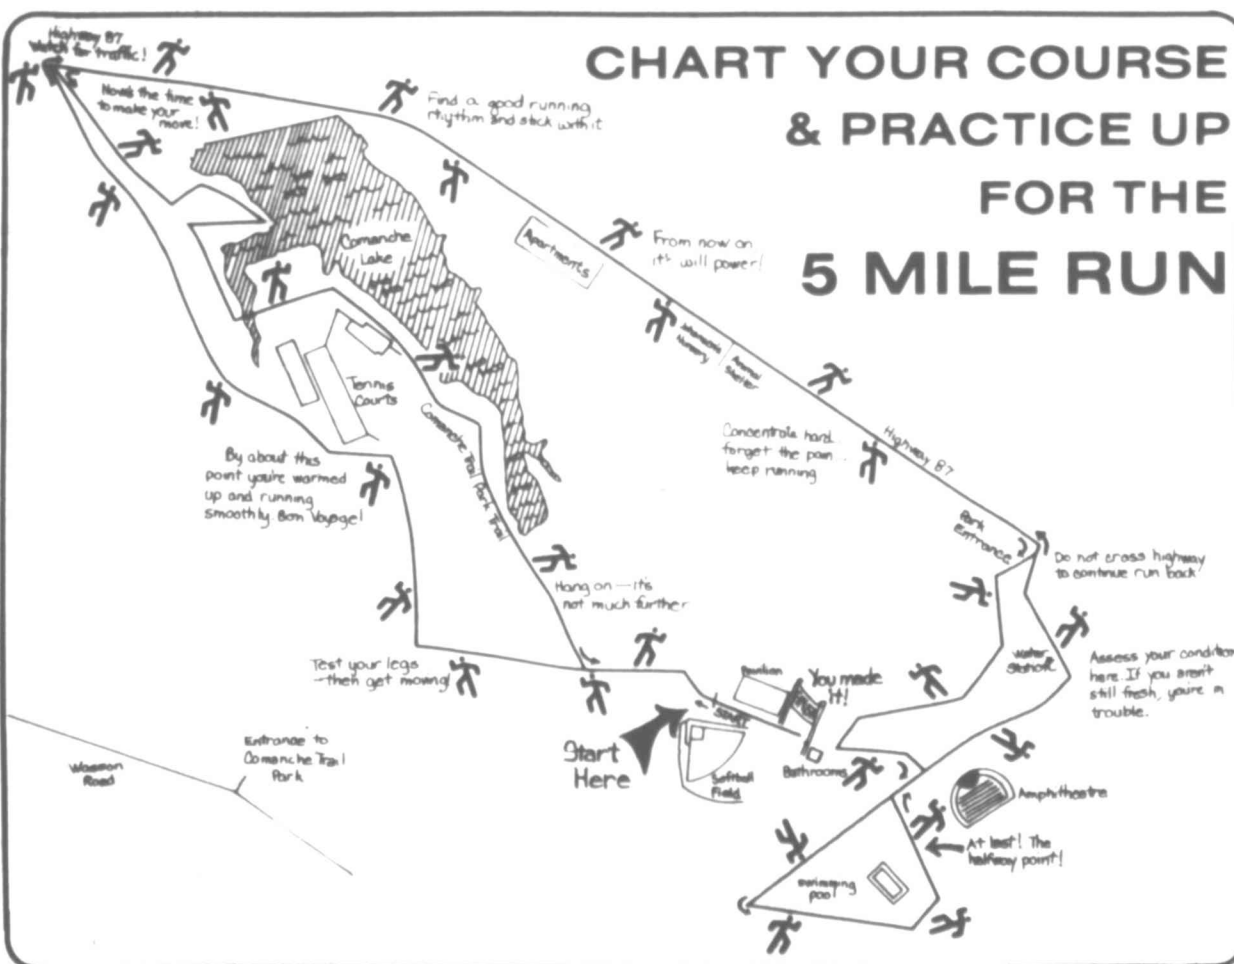

The National Organization for Women announced on Monday it would expand its Florida boycott from conventions to all tourism, and it delivered 4,000 cards from around the nation in support of the boycott to Gov. Bob Graham's office.

"When somebody pulls this kind of nonsense, it smacks of blackmail and I don't like it," said Warren Ericksen, executive director of the Miami Beach Convention Bureau. He said Miami Beach has lost $15 million in tentative booked convention business and millions in potential business from the previous stage of the boycott.

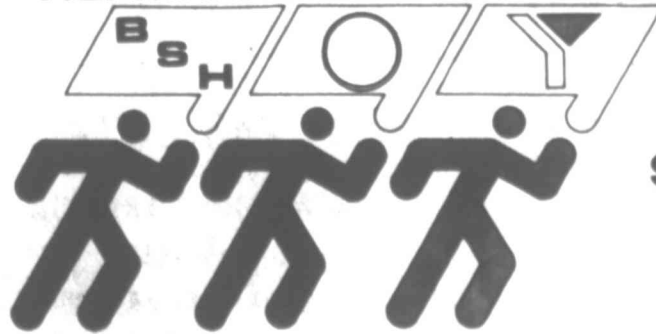

But the new tactic won't make much of a dent in the state's $16 billion tourism industry or in the Legislature, contends Senate President-designate W.D. Childers, a Pensacola Democrat.

"People who want to come to Florida to go to Disney World are going to come," he said.

"I think it will just go unnoticed as far as the Legislature is concerned. We are not going to vote based on tactics like that."

Canadians red-faced

OTTAWA (AP) — If Japanese Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira was offended, he didn't show it. But Canadian officials were red-faced when the armed forces marching band greeted Ohira with the "Colonel Bogey March" — the tune whistled by defiant British prisoners of war captured by the Japanese in the film "Bridge on the River Kwai."

Ohira had not yet arrived on Monday for the ceremonies on Parliament Hill when the band began to play, but assembled Japanese dignitaries heard strains of the march.

"We are extremely embarrassed," an armed forces spokesman said Monday. "In the long, meticulous planning for this visit, this particular portion slipped by," he said.

The Japanese delegation has said nothing about the incident, but Canadian officials said, "we've had hundreds of phone calls from reporters asking our reaction to this rather large gaffe."

Peter Sellers ailing

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Suffering from an undisclosed ailment, actor Peter Sellers has been taken to a Dublin hospital. His condition Monday was said to be "comfortable."

A spokeswoman at St. Vincent's Hospital would not confirm reports the comedian has suffered a heart attack.

Sellers, 54, had a heart attack in 1964, and was fitted with a pacemaker after an attack in 1977.

Refugee's brother popular

EGLIN AIR FORCE BASE, Fla. (AP) — Among the 2,000 Cuban refugees living in the tent city here is 71-year-old Regina Juana Cugat, sister of the popular Spanish-American band leader, Xavier Cugat.

One of the 10,800 Cubans who jammed the Peruvian Embassy in Havana last month, she and the family with whom she lives were ferried by boat to Key West over the weekend.

Xavier and three brothers — Francisco, Alberto and Enrique Cugat — all were born in Spain before their parents emigrated to Cuba. Miss Cugat lived in Havana all her life.

Asked how long it had been since she had seen her brothers, she said, "Too long."

Miss Cugat has lived for years with Carmen Garcia Borges, her husband, Florentino, and their 20-year-old son Florentino Jr.

THE ONE WAY

by B.W. BRIGGS

Good day everyone! I hope this past week has been a pleasant one for you, and that you have spent much time in thought concerning the issues we've been studying. This week our subject in regard to the UNITY concept of Ephesians four, is the spoke of ONE BAPTISM. The churches of Christ are probably known to you as strong proponents of ONE BAPTISM. We speak much about baptism, so much so that people might believe that we negate belief in Christ and the confession of that faith! However, this just isn't so! We believe the Bible teaches baptism for the remission of sins (Acts 2:38). We also believe that without faith in the Christ, one would simply be getting wet! Then why aren't people ready to accept ONE BAPTISM? You must admit that Ephesians 4:5 states that there is but ONE BAPTISM! You say, "but we do accept one baptism!" Then why, may I ask, are we not teaching the same doctrine on baptism that we are commanded to? (1 Cor. 1:10; Eph. 4:5; 1 Cor. 4:6). One church says that baptism is for membership into a congregation of people. Another church says it is for a sign that God has saved through faith. Still another says it is not for salvation, while another says that it indeed is for salvation. Even yet, one church says that it is immersion, while another says it is sprinkling or pouring. How can a person know? How can I be sure which is the truth concerning the ONE BAPTISM of Ephesians four? There is only one way, friend! Consider, if you will, the context of Acts 17:11 which reads, "Now these were more noble than those in Thessalonica, in that they received the word with all readiness of mind, examining the scriptures daily, whether these things were so." You have an obligation and privilege to examine and try every doctrine. (1 John 4:1f.; 2 Timothy 2:15; 1 Peter 3:15; Matthew 7:13f.). If a teaching would leave you to accept two or more baptisms, then you should know that it is a false teaching. If it would differ from the doctrine of the Bible, or seem to make the Bible contradict itself, then you must know it is false! (1 Cor. 14:33). For the next two weeks we will direct ourselves to this important doctrine. Let me state, first of all, what we in the churches of Christ believe baptism is not, according to scripture! Baptism is not a bath, a watering down. (1 Pet. 3:21). Baptism is not a sign that you have been saved. (Acts 2:38, 41, 47). Baptism is not sprinkling or pouring. (Matt. 3:13-17; Acts 8:36-39; Rom. 6:3-4; Col. 2:12; 3:1). Baptism is not "merely" to promote you into "a" church fellowship. (1 Cor. 12:13). Now, let's notice what baptism is! Baptist is an obedient act that brings you into salvation. (Acts 2:38, 41; 1 Pet. 3:21). Baptism is an immersion in water. (Matt. 3:13-17; Acts 8:36-39); a burial and resurrection. (Rom. 6:3-4; Col. 2:12); a washing away of sins. (Acts 22:16); an obedient act where your sins are remitted or sent away. (Acts 2:38); it is where the Lord purchases you for His own. (Acts 20:28; Rev. 1:5; Acts 22:16; Heb. 9:14; 1 Pet. 3:21); it is where you get into Christ and put on Christ. (Gal. 3:26-27); it is where you receive all spiritual blessings and begin a new life. (Gal. 3:27; Eph. 1:3; 2 Cor. 5:17; John 3:3-5; Titus 3:4-7; Acts 2:38). Study these passages for yourself. See if what you're being taught about baptism is true. We at the churches of Christ teach this directly because that is what is stated in the Bible without contradiction. If you see a contradiction in what I've said above, drop me a card or give me a call! Next week we will consider further study on this important doctrine. Remember, since there is ONE BAPTISM, and yet several are taught, someone is wrong! Either you are right and I am wrong... or you are wrong and I am right! I can tell you right now who is right! The one who says what God has said!!! We must listen to Him... I mean, He has earned the right hasn't he?! Until next week, study these passages and join me again next Tuesday!

By Robert Wallace, Ed. D

Dr. Wallace: I realize that you don't print letters from parents but I hope you make an exception for me.

I was inspired to write when I read the letter from a girl in West Memphis, Ark., who was upset at her mother who felt the girl's friend was a bad influence on her.

Two years ago I felt that my daughter's friend was a bad influence on her and I told her so. Well, my daughter didn't listen to me. This "friend" dared her to get "high" by sniffing the contents of a spray can. Within four minutes my daughter's lungs were coated by the spray and she was dead.

Sometimes mothers have their reasons. — Mother, Tacoma, Wash.

Mother: Your letter will reach many teens who will heed your very tragic message. Thank you for sharing. Dr. Wallace: My parents are divorced and I live with my mother. My dad sends her money to pay for our expenses so she doesn't need to work.

My problem is that we never do anything together. When I come home from school, she is usually sleeping. She always says that she is tired, but sometimes she feels good enough to go out and party.

I think if she can go out and "hang out" she could at least stay awake and be my friend during the day. Do you agree? — Nora, Battle Creek, Mich.

Nora: I certainly do! Your mother is a very poor example of a caring parent.

Future bride is feted in Coahoma

A miscellaneous bridal shower honoring Mary Boyce, bride-elect of Norman Wood, was held recently in the home of Mrs. Bobby Dodson, Coahoma.

The table was covered with beige cloth. Crystal and silver appointments were used. The centerpiece was a silk flower arrangement featuring bride's chosen color of blue.

Corsages were given to the bride, her mother, Mrs. Boyce and the prospective groom's mother, Mrs. Wood.

The hostess gift was a vacuum cleaner.

Other hostess included Mrs. Johnny Zittercroft, Mrs. Bill Milliken, Mrs. Grady Tindol, Mrs. Monroe Teeters, Mrs. W.A. Wilson, Mrs. E.A. Richters, Mrs. Tommy Wyrick, Mrs. B.J. Darden, Mrs. Guy White Jr., Mrs. Charles Parrish, Mrs. W.A. Fishback and Mrs. Bobby Dodson.

The couple plan to be wed May 31 in Waco at the Robinson Baptist Church.

Dear Abby

A Rule of Thumb For Teeth

DEAR ABBY: You told the mother of a 17-year-old boy who still sucked his thumb, "It's a harmless habit formed in infancy which provides the thumb sucker with a feeling of pleasure and gratification."

Thumb sucking is not always harmless. It can cause teeth to protrude, and in some cases it can cause the upper jaw to become deformed.

Some children who have sucked their thumbs in infancy escape without damaging their teeth or jaw formation, but if a child continues to suck his thumb after the age of 4, an orthodontist should be consulted.

OHIO ORTHODONTIST

DEAR ORTHODONTIST: Thank you for suggesting that a good rule of thumb to follow (excuse the pun) is: "Thumb sucking is harmless unless continued after the age of 4." Now let's hear it from a woman who's been at it for 36 years:

DEAR ABBY: I can't resist writing in regard to the mother of a 17-year-old thumb sucker. I thought your answer was excellent. I wish I had had that reassurance years ago.

I am a 36-year-old mother of three, and I still suck my thumb! When I was a baby my mother would shove my thumb into my mouth as a pacifier to quiet me. Too late she realized I formed the habit of thumb sucking, and she did everything she could think of to stop me. She painted my thumb with iodine, bandaged it, and even strapped my hands to the bedpost at night. Nothing worked. Whenever I grew tired (even in high school) I'd suck my thumb. The kids teased me unmercifully, but even that didn't make me quit. I just became more skillful in hiding my habit.

After I was married I tried hiding it from my husband, but sleeping in the same bed made it impossible. Eventually he found out, but luckily it didn't matter one bit to him.

To this very day I can't fall asleep unless I have my thumb in my mouth. I've tried hypnosis, but I'm one of those people who can't be hypnotized. I went to a psychiatrist and he said, "It's harmless. Forget it."

I'm curious. Am I the oldest thumb sucker on record?

Western Drifters camp at Colorado City park

The Western Drifters Camping Club held their April campout in Colorado City State Park April 18-20.

Neal and Virginia Bryant were the host couple. Twelve rigs were in attendance. Visiting couples included the Lee Roy Findleys, the Victor Jacksons, the Wes Kennemurs and the Buck Musgroves.

Weekend activities included games of '88', '42', fishing, hiking and bicycle riding.

A barbeque chicken dinner was held Saturday evening. Members visiting for the supper were the Vern Vignars, and the Welby Jacksons.

Sunday morning devotion was led by Virginia Bryant from Ecclesiastes 5:18-19. Time was the theme and Mrs. Bryant pointed out that time should be used wisely and enjoyed to the fullest in Christian service.

The April business meeting and pot luck supper was held April 29 in the Pioneer Natural Gas Flame Room. Evelyn Vigar presided and gave a report of a recent state committee meeting she attended.

Among the items in the report were the dates for the State Jamboree to be Oct. 15-18, 1981 in Llano City Park. The 1982 meeting will be in Waco, Tex.

A report of registration for the District Samboree, July 11-15 in Andrews Tex., showed 150 reserved at present. It will be limited to 245 rigs.

Hosts were secured for the club campouts in July, August, September and November.

Couples joining during April were Lee Roy and Ruth Findley, Victor and Melba Jackson and Wes and Carmen Kennemur.

Following adjournment of the business meeting, slides from the past year's activities were shown by Welby Jackson. Thirty-three members attended the meeting.

The club's May campout will be May 16-18 in Water Valley, Tex. with Milton and Polly Brown as host couple.

Responsibility of mother-to-be

Good nutrition should begin before birth

In this age of nutrition consciousness-raising, proper diet is essential to the physical and mental well-being of a vast group who remain passive on the issue: the unborn.

"Pregnant women have a responsibility to themselves and to their unborn babies to maintain the best nutritional pattern possible," says Dr. Sarah Short, a Professor of Nutrition at Syracuse University, author and mother of three.

According to Dr. Short, the best time for a mother-to-be to establish an ideal nutritional pattern is before she becomes pregnant.

She advises, "Greet pregnancy when you're in the peak of health — not overweight, not underweight, but with all systems 'go' for nurturing the child you'll bring into the world."

Women will do well to carefully plan their weight gains throughout their pregnancies, following their physicians' advice as closely as possible, Dr. Short says, adding, "Most doctors and nutritionists now believe that the average mother-to-be should ideally gain a total of 24-27 pounds throughout her pregnancy."

Dr. Short cautions women not to diet to lose weight during their pregnancies, for she believes their unborn children could suffer severely from an inadequate amount of essential nutrients.

Even more important than how much the mother-to-be eats, what she eats can profoundly affect her child's health as well as her own, says Dr. Short.

Again, she advises accordance with a doctor's recommendations for proper diet, and suggests that careful programming of nutrient intake will most likely require adequate amounts of calcium, protein and B vitamins as well as all the other essential nutrients. Many physicians will also advise supplementing the diet with iron and folacin (a B vitamin), she says, and drinking six to eight glasses of fluoridated water a day.

To de-bunk some modern-day old wives' tales which she feels confuse many a mother-to-be, Dr. Short says,

"In spite of what pregnant women may hear from their mothers and grandmothers about the need to limit their salt intake, we now know that the need for iodized salt actually increases during pregnancy."

For the special concerns of vegetarian mothers, she offers, "It's important to consult a doctor about the nutritional adequacy of the particular type of vegetarian diet to which the mother-to-be subscribes."

Some of these programs, such as the one which eliminates eggs and dairy products as well as meat, may not provide enough protein, iron, Vitamin B 12 and some other substances an unborn child needs. And the consequences could be tragic.

Smoking, drug use and drinking of alcoholic beverages can be health hazards for both a mother-to-be and her unborn child, according to Dr. Short. Smoking and even a moderate amount of daily alcohol intake have been linked to lowered birth weight in babies, she says. And it's important for a pregnant woman to consult her physician about any medication she plans to take, for in effect, her baby will be taking it, too.

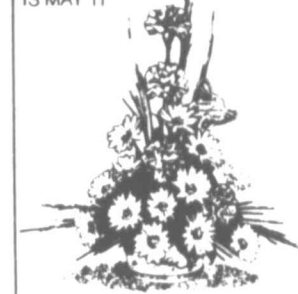

Even after the birth of her child, a mother may still feel bombarded by a plethora of old wives' tales about nutrition, says Dr. Short. So she explains, "The American Academy of Pediatrics has asserted that, in spite of myths to the contrary, mother's milk is the ideal sustenance for newborns.

And when a mother cannot, or chooses not, to breast-feed, commercially-prepared infant formula — which closely matches human milk in nutrient balance — is the best alternate form of nutrition for her baby.

Brent & Tracy Butler

Brent and Tracy Butler can be found delivering papers six days a week to homes on Route 266. Neighbors of the Butler family often see Brent and Tracy busily doing their job, providing customers with the service of delivering the daily Herald. Their subscribers live on Apache, Cactus, Chocaw, Comanche, Navajo, Yucca, the 2800-2900 blocks of Parkway and the 1800 block of Wasson Road.

Twelve-year-old Brent has been managing this route since August and his ten-year-old sister Tracy has been helping him. Deliveries and collections go much faster with both children working the route. It must be two heads (and two bodies) are better than one.

Brent and Tracy split the route profits. It enables them to buy things they otherwise couldn't get. Since there are very few jobs for youngsters their age, a Herald route is a great way for Brent and Tracy to obtain spending money for the extras they want.

Brent and Tracy have many of the same interests in school and other activities. Brent is a sixth grader at Goliad and Tracy is a fifth grader at Marcy. They both like to play basketball and piano, ride horses, and are active in Scouting. Brent is in the school band and in his spare time likes to shoot guns and look through telescopes. His sister Tracy enjoys cooking, singing and running.

Brent and Tracy live at 2702 Apache Drive with their parents, Mr. & Mrs. James Butler. If your son or daughter is interested in earning extra money, why not get the entire family involved in a Herald route. Call 263-7331 or stop by the Herald for a route application.

$20,000 GESTURE — Pittsburgh Pirate third baseman Bill Madlock, shown poking his glove in umpire Jerry Crawford's face last Thursday, has been suspended 15 days and fined $5,000 by the National League. Monday's punishment was the harshest ever handed out by the

For incident with umpire

Pirates Madlock handed record suspension

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The National League handed out its longest player suspension ever for a game incident when it punished Pittsburgh Pirates third baseman Bill Madlock for his run-in with an umpire.

On Monday, National League President Charles "Chub" Feeney suspended Madlock for 15 days, effective immediately, although the 29-year-old player likely will continue playing pending an appeal.

Others have been banned for longer periods, but the suspensions were either issued by clubs or for activities that originated off the field.

In arguing with home plate umpire Jerry Crawford over a third strike last Thursday, Madlock pushed his glove in the official's face. A league spokesman said the suspension was severe because it involved an umpire.

Feeney also fined Madlock $5,000, far less than he'll lose on his estimated $250,000 annual salary. With a daily paycheck of about $1,380, 15 days of unemployment could cost Madlock about $20,700.

"There is no way the man should do something like that to me," Madlock said after hearing of the punishment. "There was no intent to hurt him."

"He (Crawford) pointed his finger in my face, and I came back with my glove. I never denied having the glove in his face. It's not like I brought the glove back and just hit him," Madlock said.

Madlock feels penalties have been lighter for other players who had contact with officials.

"I guess I just would have been better off just taking a full run and ran over him because I've seen guys do that to umpires and they got $500 fines and three days suspension," said Madlock, who immediately appealed through the National League Players Association.

There's also a chance Feeney could reduce the suspension after hearing Madlock's appeal, perhaps June 5 or June 6 when the Pirates are to play the Mets.

Crawford, working the Braves-Phillies game in Philadelphia, had little to say when informed "He admitted that he did it, that's all," Crawford said.

An eight-day suspension against former San Francisco Giants pitcher Juan Marichal had stood since 1965 as the longest player suspension for an on-the-field incident. Marichal, who clubbed Los Angeles Dodgers catcher John Roseboro over the head with his bat, was fined $1,750.

Several Chicago White Sox players were suspended for life in the early 1900s in the infamous Black Sox Scandal, but that originated in an off-the-field gambling scheme in which the White Sox purposely lost the 1919 World Series.

Denny McLain of the Detroit Tigers was suspended by baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn for the last half of the 1970 season for gambling connections, and Brooklyn Dodgers Manager Leo Durocher was suspended for a year in 1948 for associating with gamblers.

In Madlock's case, Crawford called the player out on a swinging third strike to retire the Pirates with bases loaded against the Montreal Expos.

NBA coaches ready again to play musical chairs

By the Associated Press

The coaches' merry-go-round has begun to spin around the National Basketball Association, with Gene Shue and Dick Motta — each with over 500 league victories to his credit — looking for new horses to ride.

Shue has parted company with the San Diego Clippers "by mutual agreement," according to last week's announcement. Motta hasn't been released, but he has been given permission by the Washington Bullets, the team he guided to the championship a scant two seasons ago, to seek employment elsewhere.

In the semiclosed fraternity that is pro basketball, it's not unusual for coaches to move from one club to another. In fact, while it may sound like something out of Catch 22, pro head coaching experience is generally considered one of the prime requisites for landing a pro head coaching job.

Half the coaches in the league have coached other pro teams. Tom Nissalke of Utah has worked in Dallas, San Antonio, Utah (a different team), Seattle and Houston. Cotton Fitzsimmons has worked in Phoenix, Atlanta and Buffalo, with a brief stopover in Golden State's front office.

What jobs are open? Right now, Detroit, San Antonio and San Diego are without coaches, as well as the new Dallas expansion franchise. If Motta fulfills his desire to go west, that would open the Washington job.

After much speculation, Houston, Cleveland and Denver decided not to go shopping for new coaches. Three teams which might make changes soon are New York, Indiana and Golden State.

The Knicks are committed to Red Holzman for next season, but he's the oldest coach in the league and they're also committed to finding a successor. Pacers owner Sam Nassi has said he plans to reevaluate the status of Bobby Leonard, who doubles as coach and general manager at Indiana. Al Attles also wears both hats at Golden State, and after 11 seasons of coaching may soon be ready to limit himself to the front office.

Where do Shue and Motta fit in? Motta's roots are out West, which is why he's been mentioned in connection with both Dallas and San Antonio.

Mr. Silent silences Braves

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Steve Carlton almost became the first no-hit, no-error pitcher in the history of major league baseball.

Then again, who knows, if Carlton hadn't lost his no-hit attempt Monday night against the Atlanta Braves he might have broken a four-year silence with the media.

Carlton held the Braves hitless through 7-2-3 innings. He led 7-0 and the crowd of 26,165 was on its feet cheering every pitch. But Bill Nahorodny, a former member of the Phillies' organization, ripped a solid single to center with two out in the eighth to break the spell.

Before it was over, the Braves had three hits and one run — Dale Murphy's leadoff homer in the ninth — and Carlton had a 7-1 triumph, his fifth of the season against one loss. Carlton has maintained a stony silence with the media for four years. Nobody can find out why because he won't talk. When one newsman tried to break down the wall during spring training, he was greeted with a stare and "a policy is a policy."

Forgetting his personality quirk, Carlton pitched a masterful game in search of his first career no-hitter. He had never come closer than 61-3 innings before, although he holds the modern National League record of six one-hitters, the last one on April 26.

His fast ball was crackling and his slider had the Braves baffled. When they looked for either of those pitches, he broke off a curve just to keep them off-balance. Carlton struck out 11, walked five and chipped in with a single and two RBIs.

Elsewhere in the NL, the Montreal Expos clobbered the Houston Astros 10-1, the St. Louis Cardinals downed the San Francisco Giants and the New York Mets edged the Cincinnati Reds 3-2 in 10 innings.

Expos 10, Astros 1

Ron LeFlore collected four hits and drove in three runs to pace a 16-hit Montreal attack as the Expos battered previously unbeaten J.R. Richard and three relievers in a game delayed nearly three hours by rain in the first inning.

Richard retired only one of the seven batters he faced as LeFlore and Rodney Scott led off Montreal's four-run first inning with singles and a run with a double. After Gary Carter drew a one-out walk, Warren Cromartie ripped a two-run single. Ken Macha's single brought in another run before rain stopped the game for 2 hours and 53 minutes.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 7, 1980

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Don't ask favors of those in positions of authority or start anything new early in the day since difficult influences are in effect. Evening is fine for enjoying whatever appeals to you.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Avoid overly sensitive friends during daytime so you don't get into arguments. Concern yourself with important matters.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Not a good time to ask higher-ups for personal favors. You can advance now via your own efforts. Be logical.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You may want to duck an important responsibility but it's to your interest that you don't. Use extreme care in motion.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) A good day to make long-range plans to have more abundance in the future. Think constructively.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) An associate could be annoying, but control your temper. Safeguard your good name against any possible attacks today.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Handle boring tasks early in the day for best results. Discussions with associates are best late in the afternoon.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Don't neglect important business matters today. Show more friendliness to close ties instead of appearing so distant.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Be kind with a family tie instead of being critical. Go after personal aims in the evening and get excellent results.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Don't force any issues because production may be slow and tomorrow all improves. Plan for the days ahead.

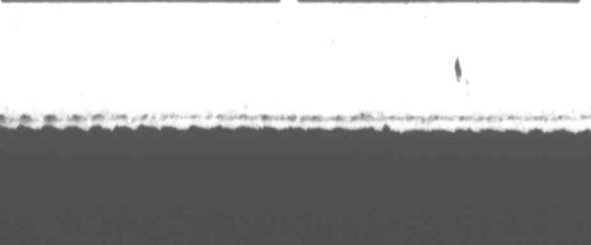

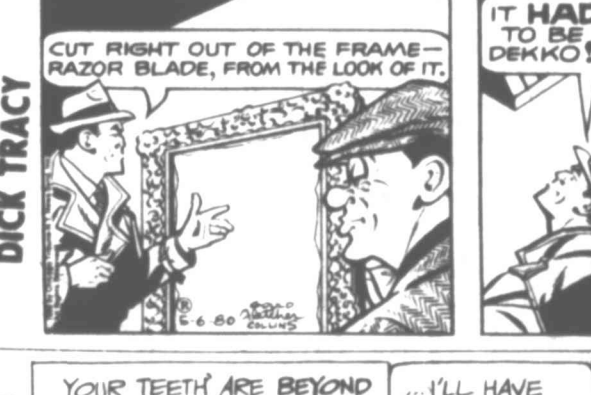

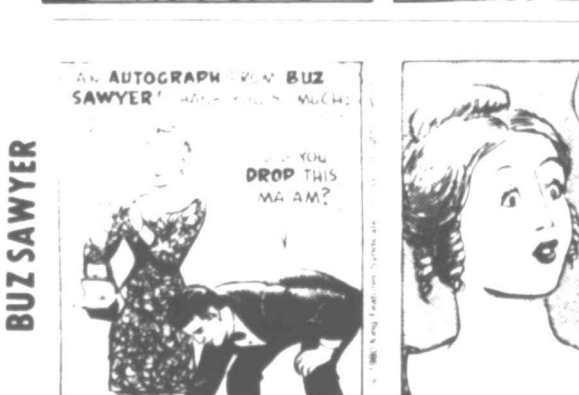

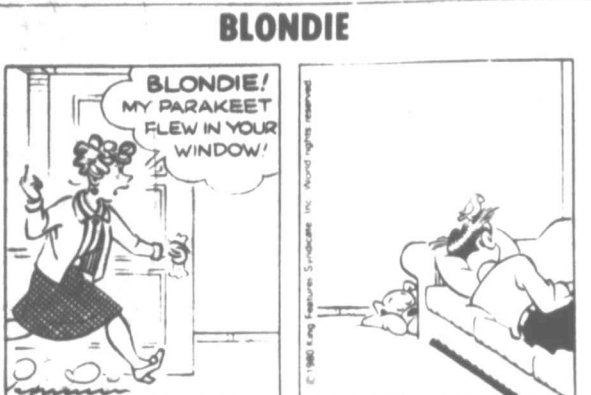

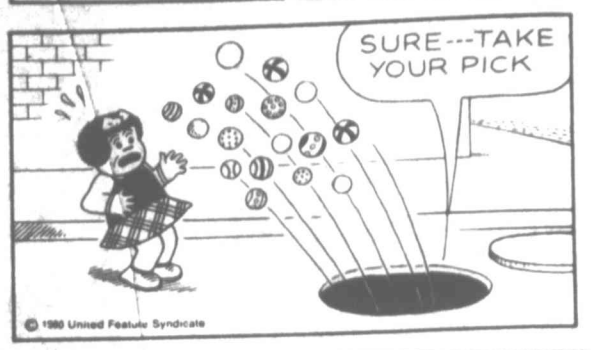

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) New and practical ideas you have should be put in operation without delay for best results. Safeguard your health.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Go to the right sources for the information you need. Try to be more objective when dealing with others.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Be sure to follow advice of older friends since it can be very helpful to you now. Show increased affection for loved ones.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will have an inventive mind, so be sure to give the finest education you can, and then this will be a most successful life. He sure to give ethical and religious training early in life. There's a leader in this chart.

Economists still gloomy

Prime rate slides further

NEW YORK (AP) — The cost of business borrowing is falling rapidly, with the prime rate down to 17½ percent at some banks, but economists doubt that will whet the corporate appetite for loans.

The effects of a slowdown in the nation's economy appear to be stifling the demand for loans, which finance such things as expansion, analysts say.

"The recession is sure to reduce loan growth," Gordon B. Pye, a vice president at Irving Trust Co. in New York, said Monday after the prime fell to a two-month low.

Morgan Guaranty Trust Co., the country's fifth-largest bank, led the downward move by cutting its prime one full point to 17½ percent. Some banks matched the new rate and others made smaller cuts to 18 percent, but most stayed at the prevailing rate of 18½ percent, which was set just last week.

The prime is the interest rate banks charge on loans to blue-chip customers, such as General Motors Corp. or Exxon Corp. Most other businesses pay at least one point above the prime.

Although it does not apply to interest rates on consumer loans, the prime is generally considered a key barometer of trends in all kinds of interest rates, including home mortgage rates.

The prime has declined 2½ points since mid-April in reaction to tumbling short-term interest rates, and economists say they expect further rate reductions as the economy moves deeper into recession and the demand for business loans eases.

"The prime could easily be down to the 15 or 16 percent range by the end of the month," said H. Erich Heinemann, a vice president of Morgan Stanley & Co., a New York investment firm.

A spokesman for No. 3-ranked Chase Manhattan Bank, which cut its prime ½ point to 18 percent Monday, said the bank's action reflected declines in short-term interest rates, which have lowered its cost of acquiring money for loans.

Doomsday rescheduled

DURANGO, Colo. (AP) — Due to analytical difficulties, the end of the world has been rescheduled for Wednesday, according to a religious sect.

The world was supposed to have ended last Tuesday afternoon, according to Charles Gaines, the 50-year-old leader of a sect that is an offshoot of the Baha'i faith. Baha'i leaders disclaim any connection with the group.

The prediction of a holocaust for April 29 at 5:55 p.m. MDT was in error because sect members were not interpreting Biblical time references correctly, Gaines said.

"There's going to be an atomic explosion Wednesday, or the death of the person that is going to cause World War III," Jensen said in an interview.

Gaines and others scattered throughout the Rocky Mountain region have built and stocked fall-out shelters in anticipation of the beginning of vast changes forecast in the Bible's Book of Revelations.

In Missoula, Mont., Leland Jensen, who calls himself the group's national leader, confirmed Gaines' prediction. The nuclear holocaust will begin, Jensen said, sometime between 6 and 8 a.m. MDT Wednesday.

Sect members in places such as Cody and Sheridan, Wyo., who were ready for last week's events, also will be prepared for Wednesday, Jensen said.

MARIA FAULKNER

Maria Faulkner joins sales force of firm

Maria Faulkner has joined the sales force of Home Realtors. After five years in her profession, she is qualified to handle all aspects of residential real estate.

In addition to completing the schooling necessary for licensing, Maria has completed three courses of the Texas Association of Realtors, which earned her the designation of Graduate of the Realtors Institute.

Married to a Big Spring native, Mike Faulkner, she, like her husband, is very civic minded. Currently, she is serving as president of the Beta Sigma Phi City Council. She was chairwoman of the Rattlesnake Round-Up Arts and Crafts Fair and the Miss Diamondback competition last month.

Earlier in her real estate career, Maria worked as a closing coordinator for a firm in Lubbock. This experience served to give her an excellent background in real estate finance. Last year, Maria found the time to teach real estate math at Howard College.

Mrs. Faulkner says she enjoys being in the real estate business because it gives her the opportunity to help people.

DOGGED CAMPAIGNER — Sen. Edward Kennedy joined District of Columbia Councilman David Clarke at a primary polling place in Washington this morning to solicit the support of early morning voters. A neighborhood dog found the commotion too much to resist.

Former Cosden official honored by alma mater

Dan Krausse, former vice president of Cosden Oil and Chemical Co., is one of four persons selected as 1980 Distinguished Alumnus Award winners by the University of Texas Ex-Students' Association.

DAN KRAUSSE

Others honored include U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, independent businessman Jack Gray and attorney Mark Martin.

Krausse is now president and chief executive of Earth Resources Company of Dallas. He was a charter member of the UT Engineering Foundation Advisory Council.

A former president of Champlin Petroleum Company of Fort Worth, Krausse is a past president of the Ex-Students Association and a past chairman of the UT Development Board. In 1962, Krausse received the Distinguished Engineering Graduate Award from the UT College of Engineering.

Bentsen has served as a voice for Texas in the Senate since 1970. He has recently made two contributions to the University of Texas: he fought tirelessly for exemptions to be placed on the Windfall Profits Tax which will mean millions in additional income for UT's Permanent Fund, and he helped establish the Lloyd M. Bentsen Chair at the LBJ School of Public Affairs. Bentsen received his law degree from UT in 1942.

He has been active in recruiting high school students for UT and has served as vice president of the Washington, D.C. Texas Exes.

Gray, of Austin, founder and former president of Grayco Constructors, Inc., has maintained close ties to The University of Texas throughout his life. As a student athlete, Gray was UT's first All America basketball player and later became the first Southwest Conference basketball player to be installed in the Texas Sports Hall of Fame.

At the age of 24, Gray was named head basketball coach at UT and led his team to an undefeated season. Retiring from coaching in 1951, Gray began a successful career as president of Grayco Constructors, eventually serving as president of the National Pipeline Contractors Association of the US and Canada. Gray is a life member of The Ex-Students' Association, a charter member of the Longhorn Club and vice president of the Texas Longhorn Education Foundation.

Martin, senior partner in the Dallas law firm of Strasburger & Price, is a trustee of The University of Texas Law School Foundation and is a member of the Development Board of The University of Texas at Dallas. Martin has served as chairman of the board of the State Bar of Texas and as president of the Dallas Bar Association. A member of the Chancellor's Council of the UT System, Martin is a life member of The Ex-Students' Association.

The awards ceremony will be held Friday night, Oct. 24, in the Lyndon Baines Johnson Library of The University of Texas at Austin.

Summer activities discussed at WSCC board meeting

The board of directors of the West Side Community Center met Monday night to discuss the center's summer programs, current programs, needs of the center and future events.

It was reported that 30 children from the West Side Community Center would be participating in the YMCA's summer program this year. The program has been very beneficial to children from the center in the past and includes such important programs as learning to swim. Earnie Garcia, director of the center, also said that 12 women were currently enrolled in the exercise program. The program is designed for those women wishing to lose weight and includes weekly weight checks and blood pressure screening.

Hiram Garcia, a member of the board and leader of the center's scout troop, said that the scouts from the center have been involved in numerous programs. The only problem they have encountered recently, he said, was in replacing the trailer that fell apart during a trip last year. He said that he had contacted a friend who would let the scouts have a pickup for their use in making a trailer from the bed of the pickup. Garcia was to check into the costs involved in taking the bed from the pickup and making it into a usable trailer.

The baseball programs at the center were discussed. The center has a men's softball league but had scratched the teenage program in the past because the board felt the leadership of the center's team was not what they wanted. However, the teenage team is now under a new coach and the board voted to spend the money necessary to purchase uniforms and equipment for the new team. The team will be under the direction of George Franklin and will be called the "West Side Center Tigers."

A request was received from the Day Care Center on the Big Spring Industrial Park for the use of the center's van two days a week. Jane Thomas, president of the center's board, suggested that Earnie Garcia work with the Day Care Center to see if such a plan was feasible. A similar request, which was approved by the board this time last year, had created problems for the center in getting the children to and from the YMCA for the summer programs.

Dolores Hull, treasurer, said that she had been contacted by the United Way requesting that two members of the West Side Community Center meet with them Monday, May 26, at 7:30 p.m. to discuss the center's budget for 1980. The United Way also asked that they present a current list of their board members at that meeting.

Madeline Boadle said that a Tasting Tea to raise funds for the center would be held May 18 from 3:05 p.m. to the First Methodist Church. The program is sponsored by the women from eleven Big Spring churches and has proven to be very successful in the past. There will be a charge of $1 at the door.

Thomas said that the Well Baby Clinic would be held Wednesday in the building adjacent to the center.
