By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

CRESTED BUTTE, Colo. (AP) — A 6-year-old boy struck by an avalanche along with his two young cousins as they played in a condominium driveway died late Sunday, about 12 hours after rescue workers found him buried under 5 to 8 feet of snow.

Taylor Huddleston, of Fort Worth, Texas, had been playing with Erwin Effler, 6, and Michael Effler, 4, of Toledo, Ohio, in the shoveled portion of a driveway at the Mountain Sunrise Condominiums when the snow roared down on them at 11:20 a.m. Sunday from a hill behind the building.

The boys' fathers were identified by Colorado authorities as Lauren Huddleston of Fort Worth, Texas, and Erwin Effler of Toledo.

The two Effler boys were buried near each other in 3 to 5 feet of snow and were pulled out within 15 minutes of the slide by volunteers who rushed to the scene, said Mount Crested Butte policeman Jeff Bates. But the Huddleston boy was buried some distance away, under 5 to 8 feet of snow and he was buried for about an hour.

Relief from this frigid blue norther won't come soon enough for many Midlanders — particularly the homeless — who are seeking shelter from the third straight day of record-breaking low temperatures.

"The high pressure system over Alaska is beginning to show signs of breaking apart. But when it does, it'll fall south," said Eddie Brite, a forecaster with the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

The NWS, therefore, is predicting a continuation of the big chill through mid-week along with cloudy skies and a slight chance of snow flurries.

The Tall City officially recorded its' third consecutive record low temperature this morning as the mercury dipped to nine degrees. That surpasses the previous record of 11 degrees, set on this date in 1982.

Bill Griffin, western regional manager of TU Electric Co., today said natural gas sources to some power plants across Texas have been curtailed. But other supplies of gas and the ability to burn fuel oil at these plants have kept them operational, he added.

Friday, Midlanders consumed 15,111 megawatts of electricity, which was an all-time high, Griffin said.

Water utility workers have been kept busy with frozen pipes at several residences and apartment complexes across the Tall City, and utility officials expect even more calls about burst pipes later this week.

'Mentors' spur students to their best

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Cecilia Tinoco has considered mirroring the actions of her three older siblings and dropping out of school to get a job and help her non-English-speaking parents pay their bills.

Jesus Barrera never thought about dropping out of school, but — until recently — had aspired to be a truck driver after graduating so he could "make money."

The goals and dreams of those two Midland high school students, however, have been rerouted with a little help from their "mentors," adult volunteers in a program sponsored by Casa de Amigos and the Midland Independent School District.

The Mentor Program is a facet of Casa's "Prevent Another Student Drop-Out" effort. It was designed to provide students identified by the district as dropout risks with a positive role model to preach the merits of staying in school.

Currently, 40 students in Midland are matched with mentors, but another 23 teens have yet to receive mentors.

"A mentor is a wise, faithful counselor who either purposefully or spontaneously guides a person to achieve their personal best," suggests Lynne Whitt, community relations director for Casa. "As every successful person will attest, somewhere along the way mentors played important roles in determining their destiny."

Explains Cecilia of her mentor, NCNB credit analyst Peggy Calderon: "Whenever I have a problem, I can talk to her about it. She gave me good advice to not drop out of school."

Ms. Calderon said she tells Cecilia that "there are so many open avenues out there. You have to think big to be a success."

When Bud Dole, an Exxon geophysicist, read Jesus' application for the Mentor program, he decided the 17-year-old could "aim a lot higher. If he has the potential, why not do more?"

As per Dole's advice, Jesus has decided: "Other jobs are easier (than being a truck driver) and you don't have to work as much."

Gisela Aguirre, 14, says her mentors have helped her "find more friends ... and share ... and taught me not to be shy. They're always there for me."

Her parents were divorced eight months ago, and that's when she started making failing grades, Gisela admitted, adding however, "I want to get a good education."

Along the way to learning the importance of a good education, the students and their mentors have fun.

Cecilia had never been to a high school football game until she and Ms. Calderon attended the fall match between Midland and San Angelo high schools.

Silversmithing is a skill Dole has taught Jesus since they've been together. Jesus has since made a belt buckle, rings for himself and his mother and a bolo tie for his father's Christmas present.

Gisela and the Goulets, as the other matches do, usually attend church on Sundays and go out to eat afterwards.

But the program doesn't benefit only the student; the mentors also reap much satisfaction from it.

"We share our life with them," said Henry Goulet, who, with his wife, Virginia, serves as a mentor to Gisela and another Midland girl. "We're learning from each other."

For instance, the Goulets learned that Gisela's traditional New Year's Day menu includes menudo, a stew made from tripe and hominy, and grapes.

Bush mulling over final S&L package

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush is putting together a plan to bail out the savings and loan industry, and many are predicting he'll ask taxpayers and financial institutions to share the cost of paying off billions of dollars in borrowing.

Bush, who spent the weekend at the presidential retreat in Camp David, Md., listening to advice from top advisers, could make his decision known as early as today.

White House aides, speaking on condition of anonymity, say they do not expect the final package to include a much-criticized proposal to levy a fee on depositors of about $2.50 for every $1,000 in their accounts.

Instead, trade association officials and members of Congress who have spoken with the Treasury Department predict the plan will feature these elements:

- Borrowing, in the form of bonds, of about $50 billion over the next three years.
- Money from a mixture of sources, including taxpayer dollars and insurance premiums from S&Ls and banks, to pay $7 billion to $9 billion in annual interest on the bonds.
- An administrative reshuffling that would include a separate apparatus to sell off insolvent S&Ls, a recapitalized insurance fund for healthy S&Ls and a regulatory agency, perhaps under the control of the Treasury Department.

There has been little disagreement over borrowing the S&L cleanup money. The much more difficult problem is figuring out how to pay the interest on the bonds.

Instead of the deposit fee, insurance premiums paid by the institutions — currently 83 cents per $1,000 for banks and $2.08 for S&Ls — probably will be increased.

The increase mentioned, at least before Bush reviewed the plan, would bring the premiums to about $1.80 per $1,000 for banks and $2.50 for S&Ls. That would raise about half the $7 billion to $9 billion needed each year.

Another option would be to siphon off interest earned from money deposited with the Federal Reserve. Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan has opposed this. He argues that the Fed pays its income into the general treasury anyway and that siphoning off interest would merely inflate the budget deficit.

Commercial bankers have vociferously opposed being made to help pay for problems in a competing industry. They do not want any mingling of their insurance fund, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., with the S&L fund, the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp.

Last Red Army convoys head north for home

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — The last Red Army convoys abandoned their garrisons and headed north for home today, Soviet officials said, bringing to an end a nine-year mission that cost more than 13,000 Soviet lives.

Hundreds of Soviet troops guarded the airport of the war-weary Afghan capital as military transports ferried in loads of grain and other supplies to help ease food shortages caused by guerrilla blockades.

In Moscow, the Communist Party newspaper Pravda reported "the last Soviet soldier left Kabul" Sunday. But Soviet officials in the city said about 1,000 troops would remain at the airport until the end of the week.

In neighboring Pakistan, Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze met with Pakistani officials but said today the talks failed to find a way to peacefully end the Afghan war. He said the Soviets will continue to support Afghanistan's Marxist government but would not send troops back into the country.

Under a U.N.-brokered accord, all Soviets forces are to be out by Feb. 15.

The diplomats, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the soldiers headed over the weekend toward Herat to meet a convoy there and were expected to reach the Soviet border Wednesday or Thursday.

Pravda said Soviet troops had by Sunday removed defensive checkpoints on the Salang Highway to about 50 miles north of Kabul at the end of a tunnel.

Death sparks FBI probe of Colorado City police

COLORADO CITY (AP) — The FBI will investigate the 1988 death of a man who was killed by officers attempting to arrest him, an agency spokesman said.

The FBI's civil rights division will be in Colorado City, about 85 miles east of Midland, to conduct the investigation into the May 13, 1988, shooting death of Sammy Gomez, said bureau spokesman Charles Steinmetz.

"We feel we have a responsibility to investigate any allegations involving the violation of a citizen's civil rights," Steinmetz said.

Colorado City Police Chief Bobby Sparks reiterated that his department has violated no laws and will "stand up to any investigation."

Sparks has said he and three other officers went to Gomez's aunt's house to arrest him on an alleged sexual assault charge when part-time officer Billy Ray Williamson and Lt. Pat Taylor, who were inside the residence, were attacked by Gomez. Police claim Gomez was wielding a knife.

Sparks has previously stated that Williamson was forced to shoot Gomez three times.

Dr. Patrick B. Besant-Matthews, the Dallas County medical examiner who performed the autopsy, said Gomez sustained gunshot wounds to the left side of the chest and in the back of the left shoulder.

It was a gunshot wound to the back of the head, however, that severed Gomez's spine and caused his death, Besant-Matthews said.

Jessie Gomez, at whose residence the shooting occurred, said she never saw a knife before or after Gomez was shot by police.

A Mitchell County grand jury refused to indict Williamson or Taylor.

Gomez's father, Marcario, said he welcomes the FBI investigation.

"This is going to help. The kind of thing that happened to my son is going on all over the United States," he said. "Members of law enforcement agencies are no different than anyone else, but when there has been wrongdoing, they need to be investigated by outside agencies — not themselves."

WEATHER SUMMARY

COLD

At the Clusters Apartments, for example, manager Cindy Inman reported that a broken water pipe had affected service to 12 buildings Sunday.

Of concern to Midland firefighters are those residents who might attempt to thaw frozen pipes with torches and other flammable devices.

"A lot of people with frozen pipes try to thaw them out with heat and blow torches. We have several fires each year because of this," Fire Marshal Jerry Petree said.

Weather-related fires were abundant this weekend. Investigators believe a transient trying to stay warm started a blaze in a vacant house, causing heavy damage Saturday.

Four units and 10 firefighters were called to the scene at 400 N. Marshall St. just after 4 p.m. Saturday and found the structure burning, according to reports. Evidence was found in a bedroom that the blaze had been set, probably by someone trying to keep warm, Fire Investigator Cheryl Kellogg said today.

It would be investigated despite the cold weather, Ms. Kellogg said.

Business was booming Sunday at various shelters across town as the city's homeless population sought refuge from the third straight night of record-breaking temperatures.

Maj. Harvey Harwell of the Salvation Army said nearly all of the Salvation Army shelter's 25 beds were occupied Sunday night. He added that the shelter will stay open 24 hours a day to accommodate the homeless.

Air transportation to and from Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, which came to a virtual standstill over the weekend, was back on track this morning.

An American Airlines spokesman said flights from Dallas to Midland were running on time today. On Friday and Saturday, those flights "had to be canceled due to icy runway conditions at D-FW."

Elsewhere across the Lone Star State, the Associated Press reported that public schools in Northern and Central Texas as well as Texas A&M and Sam Houston State University, canceled classes and activity schedules today.

In Austin, a 36-year-old paraplegic was found dead just before 8 a.m. Sunday. He was attempting to get out of his car and into a wheelchair when the wheelchair slid down an icy ramp and the man was unable to get up, police told the wire service.

In Decatur, members of the Bluebonnet Nudist Park, about 60 miles northeast of Dallas, were forced to bundle up in clothing Sunday as temperatures were in the teens and low 20s there.

Sterling, Coke, Irion and Tom Green counties: Tonight, mostly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of light snow or freezing drizzle. Very cold with a low in the mid-teens. Wind northeast 5 to 15 mph.

Tuesday, mostly cloudy and cold. High in the mid-30s. Wind northeast 10 to 15 mph.

BOY

Searchers from the Crested Butte Search and Rescue Team, the Crested Butte Fire Department, the ski patrol at the Crested Butte Ski Resort and others used probe poles and shovels to find and uncover the boy about 12:30 p.m.

The Effler brothers "were semi-conscious and were revived on the scene," said Bates.

But Huddleston "was transported to a local clinic. They worked on him there for a little bit ... he had a weak heartbeat and blood pressure, but was alive."

He was taken by Flight for Life helicopter to St. Mary's Hospital in Grand Junction, where a nursing supervisor said he died at about 11:30 p.m. Sunday.

Gunnison County Undersheriff Russ Locke said the boys were waiting for a bus to take them to the airport when the avalanche hit.

"The bus had just driven into the parking lot and their fathers had stepped out and yelled for them to 'come on' when the avalanche swept past a row of condominiums and into the parking area," Locke said.

'Lonesome Dove' takes flight

NEW YORK (AP) — The first night of CBS' highly touted Western miniseries "Lonesome Dove" soared above the competition.

Based on ratings from the 17 biggest markets, "Lonesome Dove" had a rating of 23.7 and a 34 share on the first of its four nights. NBC came in second with a made-for-TV movie, "Full Exposure: The Sex Tapes Scandal," which got a rating of 17.0 and a 25 share. On ABC, the Bette Midler theatrical film hit "Ruthless People" had a 14.2 and 21.

"Lonesome Dove," starring Robert Duvall, Tommy Lee Jones and Anjelica Huston, is based on the 1985 Pulitzer Prize-winning novel by Larry McMurtry. The $20 million, eight-hour miniseries airs through Wednesday.

Associated Press

■ Related story, Page 6A

Frigid air cloaked the nation today, turning highways into icy demolition derby courses and leaving snow in unlikely places.

The arctic front that spilled out of Alaska last week remained stalled over virtually the entire nation, forcing temperatures below normal just about everywhere but Florida. Forecasters said relief is at least several days away.

In Arkansas, churches canceled Sunday services to spare worshipers the danger of traveling on icy roads. More than a dozen schools were closed today in Nev Mexico.

The weather has contributed to at least 45 deaths, most of them on icy roads, in the lower 48 states since the air spread from Alaska on Tuesday.

Among the latest victims were three people killed Sunday night on icy roads in Kentucky and a man who froze to death beneath a freeway overpass in Salt Lake City earlier in the day.

Accidents on slick roads also were blamed for four deaths in Louisiana, including two people who died when an 18-wheel truck spun out of control on an icy bridge just east of Monroe and rammed their vehicles.

At least 13 cities posted record low temperatures today, according to early reports, and at 2 a.m. EST the official low for the lower 48 states was 44 degrees below zero at Craig, Colo. In California, Sacramento's 28 degrees early today broke a 90-year-old record for the date and San Francisco's 35 degrees shattered a 100-year-old record.

Sunday, low temperature records were reached or tied in at least 30 cities, from the Pacific to the Plains.

In Denver, it was 24 below zero Sunday, the city's coldest temperature in 26 years. At 1 p.m., the thermometer crept to 1 degree, breaking a 70-hour streak of subzero cold. The nation's low Sunday was 46 below zero at Wisdom, Mont.

It was minus 21 at South Lake Tahoe, Calif., and parts of the San Francisco Bay area remained coated in snow, astonishing longtime residents.

"You could only find a scene like this on a postcard," said Timothy Waters, a 77-year-old ranch resident at the Point Reyes National Seashore just north of the Golden Gate. "It's just extraordinarily beautiful. Our family can't remember snow like this in 40 years."

Persistent snow in Chicago forced the temporary closure of Midway Airport and the closure of two runways at O'Hare International Airport, causing 40 flight cancellations and numerous delays.

90 people summoned to jury pool in Arkansas murders

CLARKSVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Ninety people were summoned as potential jurors as the trial got under way today of a man accused of killing 14 family members.

R. Gene Simmons, 48, already is on death row after his murder conviction on May 12 for the Dec. 28, 1987, shooting of two people in Russellville, including a woman said to have refused his romantic advances.

The new trial is for the shooting and strangulation deaths of Simmons' wife, Becky, 46; their seven children; two of the children's spouses; and four of Simmons' grandchildren, one of whom relatives say he fathered by one of his daughters.

The bodies of Simmons' relatives were found Dec. 28-29, 1987, at Simmons' house near Russellville, which is 25 miles southeast of Clarksville. The trial was moved to Clarksville because of pretrial publicity.

The trial got under way today with defense motions, including an unsuccessful effort to let the jury decide whether the deaths of Simmons' relatives were part of the same criminal episode as the shootings in Russellville.

The defense had argued that to try Simmons for the 14 killings, after he has already been convicted of the two deaths in Russellville, violates his right not to be tried twice for the same crime. Circuit Court Judge John S. Patterson denied the motion to let the jury decide the issue, just as he had earlier rejected the argument himself.

Simmons was arrested in Russellville after a 40-minute shooting spree in which he wielded two .22-caliber revolvers, wounding six people at four businesses. Two of those victims died.

Authorities went to Simmons' house and, after several hours, broke into the house because the only door was barred from the inside but no one answered. They found five bodies in the house. The next day, they dug up seven bodies from a grave and found two more bodies, both babies, in the trunks of cars parked on Simmons' land.

It was the worst mass murder in state history and one of the worst in U.S. history.

Prosecutor John Bynum said he would ask for the death penalty.

BUSH

But, they probably would accept higher premiums for a limited period, say three years, if the money went to build up the FDIC, which has had its own less publicized and less severe problems after paying to close or merge 217 banks last year.

FDIC Chairman L. William Seidman told a group of Illinois bankers in Washington Friday that the fund will report a balance of about $14 billion for the end of 1988, down from $18.3 billion a year ago.

Even though the premiums paid by banks would stay with the FDIC, for budget purposes the money would count as revenue to the general fund. Under the arrangement envisioned by Budget Director Richard Darman, that would free up several billion dollars of taxpayer money, which could be spent without adding to the budget deficit, a government source said.

Another financing problem is how to sell the bonds without inflating the government's already huge $2.7 trillion national debt.

A way around that is to cover the principal of the bonds with several billion dollars in retained earnings at the regional Federal Home Loan Banks, which are owned by the industry. That way, only the annual interest paid on the bonds would be "on-budget."

As a way of easing the pressure to push more of the cost onto financial institutions, bank officials are pushing the notion that any spending from general revenue should be exempt from Gramm-Rudman budget deficit limits, because the S&L problem developed over a period of years.

However the money is raised, Congress and the administration are sure to assume more control over how it is spent. Members of Congress have complained bitterly about S&L regulators' power to write promissory notes committing the government to vast expenditures that the regulators cannot pay — in effect writing checks that Congress later will be forced to cover with appropriations.

The plan, at least before the weekend session, called for the FDIC to assume control of both the S&L insurance fund and the fund to liquidate the 350 remaining insolvent S&Ls.

A separate oversight board, perhaps headed by the Treasury secretary and including congressional appointees, would give the administration and Congress much more direct control of S&L rescues.

Richard C. Breeden, Bush's key adviser on S&Ls, has been pushing strongly to move what's left of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board into the Treasury Department, giving the administration much more direct control over S&L regulation.

That's similar to the system for commercial banks, where the regulatory agency, the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, is part of the Treasury.

Other likely recommendations would require S&L owners to put up more of their own money, force S&Ls to keep more cash reserves for liquidity, limit the amount they can loan to a single borrower and more strictly control who can buy or start an S&L.

Pravda said insurgents did not fire on Soviet convoys on the highway, the only land route to the Soviet border from Kabul. But four avalanches crashed down on retreating columns Sunday, killing three Soviet soldiers and injuring a fourth, the paper said.

Three officers were also injured by "terrorist grenades" in a Kabul suburb Sunday as the Soviets handed over motor vehicles to the Afghans, the newspaper said.

In the Soviet border city of Termez, where a Soviet airborne regiment arrived from Afganistan today, military spokesman Lt. Col. Igor Korolev said the last remaining Red Army soldiers were on the move toward the border.

He said Soviet soldiers were moving out of Balkh, Samangan, Baglan, Parvan and Herat provinces.

The troops of the 350th Parachute Regiment were greeted by thousands of residents, servicemen and relatives as they roared across the Friendship Bridge over the Amu River into Termez. The unit had been stationed in Afghanistan since 1984.

Andrei, a 20-year-old soldier from Moldavia, said the troops would be flown home sometime before Feb. 15. He said they had not been told exactly when.

Tass today reported that heavy shelling by guerrillas in Kabul province killed eight people. It said one person was killed and two wounded in shelling in the cities of Gardiz and Khost in Paktia province.

Rockets and rocket-propelled grenades also hit residential areas in the city of Herat and the airport in the southern city of Kandahar, Tass said.

With the Soviet pullout, those cities are held by the conscript army of President Najib, a force guerrilla commanders say is demoralized and crippled by desertion.

The highest-ranking French diplomat in Kabul, Charge d'Affaires Raymond Petit, his wife and three Austrian diplomats left the capital today for New Delhi. Also on the flight were relatives of Yugoslav, East German and Vietnamese diplomats.

Shevardnadze said his talks in Pakistan failed because insurgents refuse to share power with Najib. He told a news conference that Moscow would continue to support the Kabul government.

"If new complications happen, if there is continued fighting, the Soviet Union has obligations to that country," he said. However, the Soviet envoy added, "We are not thinking of any Soviet re-entry into Afghanistan."

The Soviet Union sent troops into Afghanistan in December 1979 to replace one Marxist regime with another and stayed to help fight the U.S.- and Pakistani-backed insurgents. The Kremlin says more than 13,000 Soviet troops were killed and 35,000 wounded in the conflict.

Israeli minister will ask U.S. to end dialogue with PLO

JERUSALEM (AP) — Foreign Minister Moshe Arens today accused the Palestine Liberation Organization of breaking its promise to refrain from terror and indicated Israel will ask the United States to end its dialogue with the PLO.

In Jerusalem, police fired tear gas and rubber bullets on the main shopping street of the city's Arab sector to disperse several dozen Palestinian stone-throwers who smashed cars and shop windows. A teen-ager was reported injured.

"Two days ago, we had an example of a terrorist act by a branch of the PLO," Arens said in a speech to the New York-based Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations.

He cited a clash Saturday in which Israeli troops killed five Palestinian fighters on the northern border of Israel's self-proclaimed security zone in south Lebanon.

The radical PLO factions of George Habash's Marxist Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine and the Syrian-backed Palestinian Liberation Front said their guerrillas were on a mission to attack Israeli positions.

"It puts more meaning in my life ... to have an influence on younger people," said Ms. Calderon.

And she has.

"I like myself more because I have a future ahead of me," Cecilia said. Making the bolo ties "made me feel big ... I guess (it gives him) pride the most," Jesus said.

"I hope that the program never ends and I want it to keep on going," Gisela says. "They're trying their best to make people get a good education."

Solidary begins talks with Polish government

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Representatives of Solidarity and the government today began unprecedented talks on the future of the trade union movement and changes in Poland's political system.

Walesa

Just before 2 p.m., Polish television began a special live broadcast to show the 57 representatives of the government, Solidarity, the official trade union OPZZ, the Peasants' Party, the Democratic Party and the Roman Catholic Church taking their seats in the Namiestnikowski palace.

The state-run PAP news agency said the talks officially began at 2:23 p.m., when television concluded its coverage.

The long-awaited talks are the first between Solidarity as an organization and the government since the union was suppressed by the martial law crackdown in December 1981. It was outlawed a year later.

Walesa was accompanied by his close adviser, Tadeusz Mazowiecki, and Wladyslaw Frasyniuk, the Solidarity leader in the southwestern city of Wroclaw.

Walesa said earlier he was optimistic about the talks.

"I'm happy I'm in Warsaw. And I will be even more happy if we break the first ice. ... I'm an optimist," he said. "Today, we will discuss general problems, but solutions to the main problems will be made at the technical tables."

Kiszczak first proposed the talks in August 1988, while strikes spread across Poland in the country's worst labor unrest in seven years.

The crucial issues concern the reinstatement of Solidarity and electoral reforms that could allow the opposition representation in government.

"We would like Solidarity to be legalized as quickly as possible and we would like it done all at once," said historian Bronislaw Geremek, a Solidarity delegate to the talks.

15 million Hindus immerse themselves in sacred rivers

ALLAHABAD, India (AP) — An estimated 15 million Hindus — holy men from their Himalayan cave homes, naked recluses from forest dens and ordinary pilgrims from across India — began immersing themselves at the confluence of two sacred rivers today.

Today's bathing is the high point of the seven-week Kumbh Mela festival, which according to the Guinness Book of World Records is the largest religious gathering on Earth.

The ceremonial bathing began at 4 a.m. with the blowing of conch shells and the chanting of hymns by the faithful, who believe a dip in the rivers on this astrologically auspicious day will free them from the cycle of reincarnation and allow them to achieve salavation.

Hindus believe that Lord Brahma, creator of the world in the Hindu religion and a member of the supreme trinity in the pantheon of Hindu gods, awakens at 4 a.m. and therefore the day should start at that hour.

The Kumbh Mela is celebrated every 12 years, according to the lunar calendar, at the time of a rare planetary convergence: Jupiter in Taurus, the sun and moon in Capricorn, and a series of complicated calculations of Hindu astrology.

But today takes on added significance, for it is also the day of the new moon, another good omen.

Two people died in the early hours of the mass bathing. A 50-year-old man collapsed on the river bank after his bath and soon died, and a woman drowned when her boat capsized, according to a police officer who spoke on condition of anonymity. In 1954, about 800 pilgrims died in a stampede at the holy festival.

"Either these people are crazy or there must be something we can't see or understand," said Nina Marshall, a 23-year-old student from Berkeley, Calif. who was among dozens of Americans that came to see the religious spectacle.

"It is vibrating," she said, pointing to the barefoot pilgrims trekking to the junction of the Ganges and Jamuna rivers.

New Paraguayan head denies links to drugs

ASUNCION, Paraguay (AP) — President Andres Rodriguez today said reports linking him to drug trafficking are false, and he said he will try to curtail cocaine shipments through his country.

Allegations that he protects or sponsors drug shipments "were spread by people trying to defame me," Rodriguez told foreign reporters at the National Palace. "I have nothing to do with it."

Stroessner

The 65-year-old army general took power Friday in a coup that ousted Gen. Alfredo Stroessner, who ruled for 34 years as president and commander-in-chief of the armed forces.

Stroessner left Paraguay Sunday to the jeers of "Dictator Get Out!" and went into exile in Brazil. He was in a remote farming town in central Brazil, and the foreign ministry said today he would remain there indefinitely.

As soon as Rodriguez was sworn in Friday, talk began about allegations he allowed drug traffickers to use Paraguay to move cocaine out of South America.

The Buenos Aires Herald commented in an editorial Saturday: "There are reasons to link him (Rodriguez) to the rampant corruption and even the drug trafficking under the Stroessner regime .... Yesterday's events (the coup) might not improve the system and could even make things worse if Rodriguez becomes the Manuel Noriega of the region."

Noriega, Panama's military ruler, was indicated on drug trafficking charges in the United States last year. He has denied the allegations.

A high-ranking foreign diplomat acknowledged rumors that Rodriguez allowed traffickers to use an airstrip he owns near the border with Bolivia, but said: "Absolutely no proof of that has ever been offered."

Sunday, Rodriguez pledged to "guarantee all freedoms and total democracy" in the nation of 4 million.

"I will call general elections within 90 days," he said moments after Stroessner's flight to exile lifted off.

On the observation deck at the President Stroessner International Airport, about 250 people hooted, jeered and clapped as the 76-year-old Stroessner and family members boarded a Paraguay Airlines Boeing 707.

Some, flashing the V for victory sign, chanted in unison, "Adios! Adios!"

The two black limousines that carried Stroessner's entourage to the airport were accompanied by truckloads of soldiers in combat gear.

Stroessner did not acknowledge the crowd and made no final gesture.

Stroessner flew to Campinas, 290 miles southwest of Rio de Janeiro, then took a Brazilian air force plane to the rural town of Itumbiara, 800 miles northwest of Rio, a Brazilian Foreign Ministry communique said.

The deposed dictator, accompanied by a son and daughter-in-law, three security guards, a Brazilian diplomat and 12 aides, was staying in a guest house owned by the government-run Furnas electric company, the communique said.

Brazilian Ambassador Orlando Carbonar told The Associated Press that his nation granted Stroessner asylum on humanitarian grounds. Stroessner owns a beachfront mansion in the Atlantic coastal resort of Guaratuba.

Foreign Minister Luis Maria Argana told reporters Sunday the government would issue a decree "within a few days" dissolving the two-house Congress, and would call for presidential and legislative elections within three months.

One opposition leader suggested that elections be delayed because his group and others needed time to organize to have any chance of defeating the entrenched Colorado Party, which has been in power since 1940.

"If Gen. Rodriguez is realistic, he should stay in power for a minimum of two years and make changes in the electoral law that will permit the organization of parties, and then call elections on the basis of equality," said Fernando Levi Rufinelli of the Liberal Party.

Under current law, the ruling Colorado Party is guaranteed two-thirds control of Congress, with the remaining third split between the two other political parties recognized by the former government.

Rodriguez attended a funeral Mass held Sunday night for the victims.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Antarctic spill 'experiment nobody wanted,' NSF says

NEW YORK (AP) — After decades of studying wildlife in an unspoiled area of Antarctica, scientists have begun a new, unwelcome line of research: the effects of an oil spill.

"This disaster is the experiment nobody wanted," said National Science Foundation spokesman Jack Talmadge.

By Tuesday, American cleanup crews are expected to reach the area affected by the sinking of an oil-laden supply ship, which ran aground Jan. 28 off the Antarctic Peninsula.

Scientists have already seen oil-covered and apparently lethargic seals, three dead penguins and disappearances of young nesting birds, said Ted DeLaca, chief scientist of the foundation's division of polar programs.

Thirty-eight of 40 penguins checked Friday bore traces of oil. Thousands of dead and dying krill, shrimplike crustaceans that are a key food for bigger animals, have shown up on beaches, DeLaca told reporters by telephone from Palmer Station, a research outpost near the spill.

Adelie penguin chicks are expected to leave their nests for the first time in a few days, swimming into contaminated waters. Other birds are being exposed to the oil as they land on water or dive into it to feed.

Hostage-taking banned?

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Rival Moslem militias in Lebanon have banned the kidnapping of foreigners as part of a peace pact, a senior Shiite Moslem cleric was quoted as saying.

Sheik Abdel Amir Kabalan, the Shiites' top religious judge, was quoted by the conservative daily newspaper al-Anwar Sunday as saying the agreement was part of a pact signed by the mainstream Amal militia and the fundamentalist Hezbollah group in Damascus, Syria last week.

"It is impermissible for anyone from now on to kidnap any foreigner, because the accord calls for preserving the United Nations peacekeeping forces and the foreign humanitarian organizations," Kabalan was quoted as saying.

"Foreigners should have a role in Lebanon," he said.

Art exhibit closed in China

BEIJING (AP) — Police temporarily closed Communist China's largest avant-garde art exhibit ever because organizers allowed performance art — which culminated in the firing of two BBs into a sculpture, an organizer said today.

Fei Dawei said the show would most likely reopen Friday after the end of the Spring Festival, China's four-day long lunar New Year holiday.

He said he did not believe the order was a sign of a new crackdown on art.

"They are just punishing us for the trouble we caused," he said. "I think the political element here is very small."

Fei said a woman wanted in connection with Sunday's shooting incident had been detained by police later that day.

Hess may have been murdered, paper says

LONDON (AP) — Photographs of the body of Rudolf Hess suggest Adolf Hitler's 93-year-old deputy may have been murdered at Spandau Prison in West Berlin in 1987.

The liberal weekly said it studied the pictures, which were brought to London by Hess' son, Wolf Rudiger Hess. Hess met Friday with Scotland Yard detectives investigating suggestions his father did not commit suicide, said the paper.

The photographs were part of a post-mortem report by Wolfgang Spann of Munich, who suggested the Nazi leader died as a result of "deliberate strangulation rather than hanging," the paper said. The first post-mortem, by James Cameron of London University, said Hess' death was a suicide by hanging.

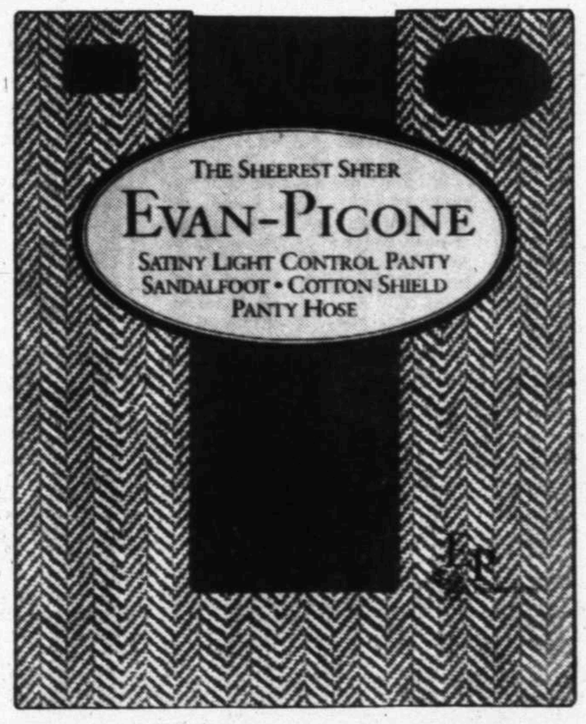

Dr. Hugh Thomas, a former British army doctor who examined the Spandau prisoner in 1973, was quoted as telling the Observer the photographs from Spann's examination show Hess was murdered.

In two books, Thomas has contended Hess was murdered in 1941 while flying to Scotland on a peace mission and an impersonator in a second plane was substituted by plotters among Hitler's deputies.

Missiles of October facts hold lesson

Fidel Castro hunkers down in a bomb shelter deep beneath the Cuban soil. He desperately wants Nikita Khrushchev to push The Button and unleash nuclear havoc on America's most populous cities.

In Washington, D.C., one of the cities targeted by the Cuban missiles, Robert McNamara leaves a briefing with President Kennedy. He strolls in the crisp October air, plagued by thoughts that he may never see another Saturday night.

These are just two of the haunting images that emerged during the weekend from an extraordinary gathering of key participants in the 1962 Cuban Missile Crisis. During the meeting in Moscow — sponsored by Harvard University's Nuclear Crisis Project — generals, diplomats and historians candidly dissected six tense days that first brought the world to the brink of nuclear war.

It was a meeting that could have occurred only in this era of glasnost, openness. What the participants discovered as they laid open the crisis offers a potent argument for why openness on both sides must continue.

Looking back on events now more than a quarter-century old, the participants were free to confess personal fears and tactical blunders. Top diplomats and military officials from the East and West admitted to the personal, human concerns that hung in their throats as they negotiated the fate of world peace. It is heartening to know they felt the potential horror as more than an abstraction, a global power game. Less heartening — and perhaps more telling — are the myriad false assumptions that life-and-death decisions were based on.

It was only during an informal lunch break at the conference that American officials learned of Castro's desperate message to Khrushchev, urging that the Cuban missiles be fired. Equally eye-opening were the major flaws exposed in American estimates of enemy troop strength. McNamara, the former U.S. defense secretary, acknowledged that in 1962 he thought he was up against a maximum of 110,000 Cuban and Soviet troops. But during the conference, it was revealed the troop strength was closer to 310,000.

These mistakes and others led Theodore C. Sorensen, former special council to Kennedy, to observe during his closing address that the "value of this conference is not how wise we all were, but how fallible we all are."

It's a lesson of history the world cannot afford to miss.

Frustrating news reports

In his Friday, Jan. 27 column headlined "Betrayal of journalism's greatest danger," Charley Reese delineated the reading public's frustration with journalists. We expect, but rarely get, "accurate, balanced reports of events and people." What we do get is biased political commentaries — some subtle, some blatant. From the only open and free Middle Eastern country (Israel), none of the 900 journalists can give us the real majority Palestinian viewpoint.

Why? Because Palestinians are afraid to talk to the press, except for the idealistic Moslem youths who have been promised paradise for martyrdom. Victims and political pawns of their own Arab brothers who have not a care about the individual lives and families ruined in order to achieve the one aim of the destruction of the Jewish state, the "average" Palestinian citizen, especially the educated professionals, live in fear of assassination.

Readers ask: What is a Palestinian and how did they get to be refugees? The Palestinian refugees were created by the Arabs themselves, according to the published memoirs of Haaled Al Azm, prime minister of Syria in 1948. Arab leaders urged the Palestinians to flee "temporarily" to make it easier for the Arabs to crush the newly-declared state. He admits it was a big mistake, because had the Palestinians remained, they could have formed a fifth column against Israel.

Israel took in 600,000 Jews from 1948-51 who were expelled from Arab nations, leaving all their possessions behind. But did the Arab nations take in their own brothers who left Israel when the five Arab nations attacked the day after nationhood was declared? No, they didn't and they haven't.

We daily are assailed with statistics of Palestinians killed and wounded by Israeli occupying troops in the uprising. Who headlines that since 1967 when Israel first entered the West Bank and Gaza, 3,000 Palestinians have been assassinated in these areas by their own people?

Palestinians who seem in any way pro-Israel, i.e, those who might come forward to negotiate face-to-face with the Israeli government, are murdered, dismembered, wrapped in Palestinian flags, and left on the doorsteps of their families. Friends in Israel who are long-time friends of Palestinians have stated this to me on many occasions. So it's impossible for the press in Israel to give an accurate picture, and Israel again gets clobbered in the media.

Business hires mediocrity

Recent news headlines are filled with widespread failures of gigantic financial institutions (not just locally ... due to the bad oil economy ... but nationally). Of course the trend is regrettable, but there's certainly no mystery about it. The fiscal vitality (and ailments) of any business large or small tend to reflect its wisdom in recruitment of personnel. The business community in general has been recruiting mediocrity and incompetence for several years.

Beginning about 20 years ago it became first illegal and then increasingly unpopular to hire a person on the basis of individual ability. Current employment practices are based almost entirely upon E.O.E. guidelines, in which individual ability is either completely ignored, or else it is treated as "unfair advantage."

Academic credits are officially sanctioned as "guideline" measurements of "employability." Contrary to popular myth, classrooms are probably the worst places to try to learn anything, but they are very effective "control environments"; and fairness does require standardization and control. Individual ability is difficult to control, and impossible to standardize; so the trend has been to regard it in the workplace as a conflict with "fairness" guidelines.

The downward trend of employment standards has established a "norm" ranging from the upper levels of mediocrity to the lower levels of incompetence. Employability decreases in direct proportion to any noticeable departure from the "norm." And anything that even mildly suggests a hint of superiority really scares the hell out of personnel managers.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

On Feb. 6, 1788, Massachusetts became the sixth state to ratify the U.S. Constitution.

On this date:

In 1756, America's third vice president, Aaron Burr, was born in Newark, N.J.

Politicos ignore approaching chaos

WASHINGTON — The U.S. government cannot continue squandering money and living on borrowed yen without risking a crash that could spread economic devastation, political chaos and incalculable misery.

Jack Anderson

Already, Japanese investors finance 30 percent of the U.S. budget deficit. They are also buying up America's farms, factories, banks and businesses at an alarming rate. The Japanese are astonished at how eager Americans are to sell their birthright for pottage.

Yet, President Bush is trying to tell associates that Japanese acquisitions in this country are good for America. Congress is preparing another irresponsible budget that will compound the debt problem. The nation's political leaders seem oblivious to the compelling evidence that a catastrophe is just around the bend if they don't curb spending.

Both the new president and the new Congress also seem quite content to finance their over-consumption by selling off America to foreign investors. If foreign acquisitions continue to increase at the same rate as they have during the past five years, the United States will be completely foreign-owned before America's leaders open their eyes.

The Japanese are eagerly investing the profits they earned here to buy U.S. properties. The fruited plains and amber waves of grain that Americans inherited from their ancestors are acquiring new owners. Yet, the greedy Americans continue to gorge themselves on Japanese imports.

They take their example from their leaders who, year after year, have spent more money than they have brought in. All too much of their tax revenue has gone for foolish and frivolous extravagances. Now, Congress is back at work on another overstuffed budget larded with waste.

Members of Congress expect to continue spreading manna from Washington around the country. They're busily preparing to bequeath a few million here and a few million there, with their usual reckless abandon. They are seeking an awesome array of special appropriations for places you have heard of and a few you haven't.

They are trying to initiate dozens of unnecessary projects, knowing that the planning costs won't add much to the budget now, but will obligate the taxpayers to pay huge construction costs later.

Once the beneficiaries get their mitts on some federal cash, enough is never sufficient. Then the add-ons begin. Soon, every project needs to expand, every staff needs more employees, every office needs more paper to shuffle.

And every member of Congress wants to soak the taxpayers for special endowments for constituents. For example, members in the Northeast want the taxpayers to contribute $606 million to Amtrak this year. Amtrak serves less than .5 percent of inter-city travelers; yet its passengers get an average subsidy of $30 per trip.

In fairness, the outgoing budget director, Joseph R. Wright Jr., has worked heroically with wastebuster J. Peter Grace to purge from the budget an impressive $110 billion in sheer waste. But the Grace Commission uncovered much more that only Congress can eliminate.

Meanwhile, the national debt will soon reach $2.5 trillion. The annual interest rate alone on this staggering debt is now $145 billion, which amounts to 15 percent of the federal budget. That means $145 billion in taxes collected this year cannot be spent to house the homeless, feed the hungry, educate the children or provide health care for the needy and elderly. The money must go to service the debt that our spendthrift leaders have run up.

And 30 percent of those interest payments will go to the Japanese who now hold a mortgage on America.

DOUBLE STANDARD — With all the federal rules and regulations against discriminatory hiring practices, one would expect the federal government to be a haven for women and minority workers. Not so. Government workers suffer from discrimination as much as people in the private sector. Discrimination is said to be particularly troublesome at the nation's foremost Army hospital, Walter Reed Medical Center in Washington, D.C. A female employee there told us she was criticized and demoted for mistakes that she made on the job. But when her male counterparts made the same mistakes, they were not disciplined. A special panel recently ruled in favor of the woman, saying she was a victim of sexual discrimination. The panel gave her back her managerial position.

MINI-EDITORIAL — The Immigration and Naturalization Service has a suggestion for stopping illegal alien traffic into California — dig a $2 million ditch. We'll ignore the fact that only the federal government could find a way to spend $2 million to dig a ditch. The issue here is how a 5-foot-deep ditch is going to stop illegal aliens. It might deter vehicle traffic, but does the INS really think that illegal immigrants won't wade? A much bigger ditch to the east gave Mexican immigrants the unfortunate epithet of "wetbacks." We call that ditch the Rio Grande, and it never stopped anyone who was determined to cross. It didn't cost $2 million, either.

Not enough tears shed for victims of crime

My buddy Harry said he was having dinner with his wife and he looked over the table at her and said, "Honey, I've got some great news for you."

Grizzard

"Sweetheart," Harry continued, "I know there are a lot of things you have to worry about. You're worried because I won't quit smoking, you're worried about the kids doing well in school, and you're worried about your hair turning gray.

"But there's one thing you'll never have to worry about if you live to be a thousand."

"And what is that?" his wife asked.

"You'll never have to worry about Ted Bundy torturing you and killing you 'cause they've done fried ol' Ted down in Florida."

Harry, needless to say, is in favor of capital punishment, as was the disc jockey in Florida who asked his listeners not to use any electric power at the time of Bundy's execution so, to paraphrase, "there would be plenty of juice at the prison to do the job on Ted."

Harry wasn't finished.

"Frying that murdering SOB was too fast. We ought to torture people like him.

"In fact, the president ought to go on television — several times so everybody would get the message — and say, 'Now, listen to me. We're tired of murder and we're tired of murderers.

" 'From now on, if you're found guilty of murder, we're going to take you from the courtroom immediately and beat you and burn you and do awful things to you for as long as we please, and then we're going to kill you in the same manner you killed your victim.'

"That would end making a mockery of justice like Bundy did. He should have been dead 10 years ago. I think if the president would do something like that, you'd notice a big drop in the murder rate."

"But there are some," I interrupted my friend, "who say capital punishment is not a deterrent."

"It deterred Ted Bundy," Harry said. "He's raped and murdered for the last time. Some fool from the American Civil Liberties Union was on television talking about how secure Bundy was in prison and how he wouldn't do any more killing.

"How many times did he escape before they fried him? Two? And talking about deterrence, after we dropped the A-bomb on the Japanese they had a little attitude adjustment and surrendered and ended World War II.

"Don't you think after that experience our enemies will think twice before they'll bomb Pearl Harbor again?"

I was running out of arguments.

"Here's another thing," said Harry. "We ought to make executions public. You wouldn't have to watch if you didn't want to, but I'd have paid to see Ted Bundy die. And I'm sure some of the parents of his victims would have enjoyed seeing him burn, too.

"We hear all this carrying-on about some slime-ball murderer's rights, but who's out there burning candles for the victims?"

I told Harry I might write down some of his thoughts and put them in the paper.

"I'll bet there's a lot of people out there who would agree with me," he said.

Even more than you think, Harry, and I'll bet on that.

CHARLEY REESE

Executions don't give revolving door justice

There are three good things about capital punishment. One, the killer gets to experience the same fear and agony he inflicted on others. Two, the recividism rate for excuted murderers is zero. Three, electricity (or rope or bullets or drugs) is cheaper than room and board.

Charley Reese

The average time served on a life sentence in the United States is about six years. Murderers can usually find ways to get out of prison. So far, none has gotten out of a grave.

In the case of Ted Bundy, for example, no woman or child need fear him anymore. If he had been caught, tried and executed after his first murder, some 30-odd people would not have suffered death at his hands. So long as he was alive, no one could be sure he would remain confined. There is always the possibility of escape or the possibility of a pardon by some knucklehead like Michael Dukakis.

Revolving door justice, as well as revolvers, are killing innocent Americans. There is no acceptable excuse for any citizen to be victimized by a criminal with a record of multiple felony convictions. When that happens, and it happens regularly, the justice system has become an accessory to the crime. The beauty of capital punishment is that the door doesn't revolve.

Citizens should realize, however, that they have more enemies than the criminal who victimizes them. People who pervert the court system to obstruct justice, as opponents of capital punishment do, are enemies. They are anti-democratic. They lost the political debate. Rather than accept the outcome, as the democratic philosophy demands, they attempt by legal maneuvers to thwart the carrying out of capital punishment.

Thus they are not only enemies of those who are victimized by crime but they are enemies of the democratic process as well. If the word enemy strikes you as too harsh, let me remind you that there is no greater threat to democracy than people who refuse to accept the democratic outcome of the legislative and election processes. If such an attitude is allowed to flourish, then democracy will die.

People who seek to thwart the democratic process frequently pose as idealists. So, too, did Nazis and fascists and now, communists. All evil is done in the name of some good.

Bureaucrats in the state prison system who dump violent criminals back onto the public as an easy way out are enemies of public safety. Innocent people should not be compelled to pay in blood and tears for the negligence of governors and legislators who stupidly did not expand the prison capacity when population growth clearly indicated it was necessary.

For that matter, innocent Americans should not pay with their lives for the surrender by state officials to the muddle-headed demands of federal judges. I'd love to be a sheriff for just one reason. Let a federal court order me to release prisoners and I'd do it, but I'd load them into a van and dump them out in the front yard of the federal judge's home. Let his honor see the reality of his theory.

If there has to be a choice of whether convicted felons suffer inconvenience of overcrowding or innocent people suffer rape and murder, it seems to me not a difficult call.

There is, however, a mysterious malady that has dissolved the backbones of many public officials. When the thought of inconvenience frightens people into a sweat, sacrifice for principle is out of the question.

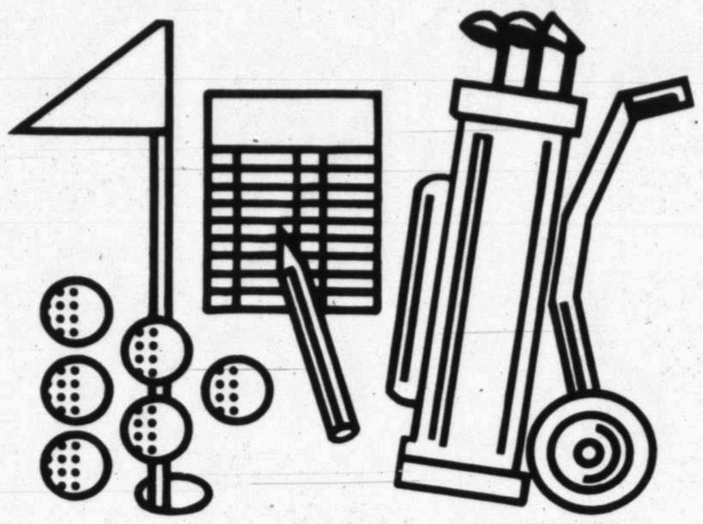

We will have a just society when all individuals are held accountable — the criminal, the police, the judges, the prison bureaucrats, the legislators, and the Nervous Nelly chorus of don't-hurt-the-bad-guys variety of do-gooders.

Killing killers is an exquisitely just solution to the problem of crime. The dead killer is not a drain on the taxpayer's resources, not a cancer in the soul of the victim's loved ones. He is what he deserves to be, a rotting corpse.

Winter golf: Cold weather approach

By JERRY TARDE
New York Times News Service

Several golfers at an Air Force base in Greenland once held a golf tournament atop Mount Dundas, 800 miles from the North Pole.

They each carried a piece of carpet that served as a teeing ground and putting green. History does not record the winner.

Fifteen years ago, a missionary founded a nine-hole course with sand greens off the coast of northern Canada in the Beaufort Sea, 400 miles inside the Arctic Circle. Membership today is more than 700.

Such is the addictive nature of golf.

There will be no waiting on the first tee. Only good golfers venture out this time of year.

And you don't have to ride a golf cart. You'll get frostbite if you do. Few feelings in life are so invigorating as a long walk on a brisk, wintry day on the golf course.

Golf is fun, enjoyable and satisfying to the soul when the temperature is in the 40s, or even when it dips to the low 30s if there is no wind.

But be sensible. People who play in more severe conditions are like motorcycle riders without helmets; they are to be avoided.

Joey Sindelar is one of the most experienced cold-weather players on the PGA Tour. Sindelar, the former junior, amateur and open champion of New York state, grew up in the Rochester area and played for Ohio State University.

"We always played right down to freezing as long as it wasn't windy," he said. "When I go home now, I'll still hit balls in the wintertime, but I like to wait till late afternoon when the wind dies down."

PLAYING ON a cold, windy day is the surest way to determine the best golfer, says Sindelar. A mis-hit will go farther off line and the curve on your ball will be exaggerated by the wind.

"The bleeding starts much earlier in the round in bad conditions," said Sindelar, referring to golfers' reactions to playing in bad weather.

"The guy who can accept that a lot of silly things are going to happen is the best bad-weather player. You're going to make bogies and worse out there, but so is everyone else. Patience is always the key in golf, but especially on a cold and windy day."

Bob Rotella, a sports psychologist who works with tour pros on their mental approach to the game, said you need a different mind-set when playing winter golf.

"You have to change your expectations," he said.

"Nobody's going to shoot a low score, so you can let it work to your advantage. Don't get down on yourself after a bad shot or hole. Many golfers concentrate on the weather and forget about their game. You just have to be twice as patient as normal.

"Keep reminding yourself to have fun," Rotella added. "It's a different kind of fun than you have in the summertime. But golf is a game of adjustments. If you can learn to cope with tough conditions, there will be a carry-over effect to the rest of the year."

The popular expression used on tour is "winning ugly." Forget about your form and concentrate on making the lowest possible score, regardless of how it's done.

ONCE YOU have this mind-set, your preparation for a round of winter golf begins before you leave the house.

Make sure you keep your clubs indoors overnight, not outside in the trunk of your car. Cold temperatures can harden and dry out rubber grips. Wooden clubs can become dehydrated, which leads to cracking. When it's cold, golf balls lose their resiliency and rob you of distance.

Don't overdress because it will restrict your swing. Wearing a hat is a must. A pair of oversized mittens is also essential; you want to be able to slip them on and off easily between shots.

Some golfers like wearing the new handwarmers, which last seven to eight hours. If your feet get cold, two pairs of socks are recommended. Long underwear, especially silk or the new superlightweight brand, is also good in extreme temperatures.

Many golfers wear a jacket or a Goretex rain suit, but most good players find any restriction around the shoulders unacceptable.

The best material for this kind of weather, of course, is cashmere. Tom Kite recommends a cashmere turtleneck. The ideal ensemble is a cotton turtleneck, a sleeveless cashmere sweater vest and a long-sleeve, double-ply cashmere sweater (one size bigger than normal). If that outfit doesn't keep you warm, it's too cold to play golf.

COURSE CONDITIONS are often unpredictable at this time of year. While some patches of ground may be frozen, others may be soggy. Greens tend to be hard but slow.

"Try to hit the ball cleanly through the round and avoid taking big divots," said Hank Johnson, a teacher in the Golf Digest Schools.

"Picture yourself hitting the ball off a block of ice; you don't want to shatter or chip the ice block."

On short approaches to unfrozen greens, Johnson advised pitching the ball onto the putting surface rather than playing runup chips.

"Too many things can happen on greens that are soft or lumpy," he said. "Favor lofted shots that fly most of the way to the hole. Wet greens will help make the ball stop more quickly than usual."

Once on the greens, you want to maintain the same fundamentals of putting that you always use, but a couple of changes might be required to adjust for the wind.

"Staying in balance is vital," said Tom Watson, who is a good bad-weather player. "I widen my stance and crouch a little to stabilize myself. When the wind's blowing on the green, I'm glad I'm 5-9 instead of 6-2, but sometimes I wish I weighed 50 pounds more."

Chuck Cook, a teaching pro in Austin, Tex., said you might want to strike down a bit more than normal with your putter to get the ball up and rolling on top of shaggy greens.

"That's the way the Japanese putt on their heavy Cori grass greens," he said. "They pop the ball like Gary Player."

ONE FINAL bromide to avoid is carrying a flask of brandy.

"Alcohol makes your blood come to the surface of the skin, making you feel warm," said DeeDee Owens, a Chicago-based teaching pro. "Actually, you aren't any warmer and you'll lose body heat faster. You're more likely to catch a cold."

Save the celebrating for the 19th hole. After a cold and windy round this time of year, you have proved you're no fair-weather golfer.

DEAR ABBY

Teen worried that little girl's crush could hurt her

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I've been helping a friend do some carpentry work at his house lately, and I've noticed that his 8-year-old daughter has a crush on me. I'm 18, so the most attention I paid to her was to let her help me with some small jobs and engage in some man-to-kid conversations during the breaks.

Today, while I was bent down tying my shoestring, she grabbed me around the neck and tried to kiss me! I quickly pulled away by standing up and getting out of her reach and went right back to work.

Other girls have had crushes on me and got rather aggressive, but I've never had a girl this young come on to me the way this girl did. Now I worry that one day she might do this to the wrong guy, and, for want of a better word, get herself raped.

I think nature is sending this little girl mixed signals, and I don't know whether to tell her parents or to tell her myself. I don't want to get her in trouble with her parents, but I'm not sure it's my place to tell her what could happen to her if she tries to kiss the wrong guy. What is your advice? — CONCERNED

DEAR CONCERNED: First tell her that you think she's a nice little girl, and you were quite upset when she tried to kiss you because she could get into a lot of trouble with that kind of behavior. Tell her that you don't have time to explain the danger of that kind of conduct, but you are going to ask her parents to have a talk with her. Then tell her parents.

This child doesn't need punishment — she needs to be warned. Please take my advice. If she were your child, I'm sure you'd want her to know.

DEAR ABBY: I had to write and tell you about my story of love and forgiveness. I am white and my wife is black. Fifteen years ago, when we got married, my mother disowned me and cursed my wife's existence. She never acknowledged any of my three children. She just cut me out of her life as though I had died.

Two and a half years ago, my mother was stricken with a debilitating form of cancer, and it was obvious that she would have to go to a nursing home. Although there are five of us siblings in the family, none of the other four volunteered to take her. My wife came forward and said no one in her family would go to a nursing home as long as we had a home.

At first it wasn't easy, but my wife and mother eventually developed a very special relationship. When my mother couldn't dress herself, my wife dressed her, and when Mom couldn't feed herself, my wife fed her. During those two years, my wife never complained.

Mom told my wife many times how sorry she was for all the years she wasted. Best of all, our children grew to know and love their grandmother before she died. I feel very blessed. Sign me ... BLESSED IN THE MIDWEST

DEAR BLESSED: Your letter calls to mind that wonderful definition of "forgiveness" by George Roemisch: "Forgiveness is the fragrance of the violet which still clings fast to the heel that crushed it."

Insect stings may have medical benefits

NEW YORK (AP) — For centuries, many South American people provoked insect stings in the belief that the venom helped alleviate painful symptoms of arthritis, says AIMplus magazine.

Researchers now confirm such stings may possess anti-inflammatory properties and are working to discover the elements in the venom responsible for this effect.

New York Times News Service

Coming up with a new idea in golf clubs occasionally means rethinking the old.

Callaway Golf of Carlsbad, Calif., recently introduced a line of irons whose design is rooted in the persimmon woods of a half century ago. But this time, the design has gone into irons first.

Callaway's S2H2 club, introduced last May in a set of nine irons, comes with a shaft that reaches to the sole of the club head. The head is crafted with a shortened, hollow hosel at its neck. The S2H2 concept will be available next month in woods.

When the through-shaft was first introduced 50 years ago, the design was thought to put more feel into the player's swing. But its popularity waned with the advent of metal woods because manufacturers were unable to fashion a metal club strong enough to put the shaft through to the sole.

Ely Callaway, the company president, said that his firm has put touch back into the golf club.

S2H2 stands for "short, straight, hollow hosel." The name refers to what Callaway considers to be the club's other advantage: the hosel, the area at the neck of the club head, is smaller and lighter than on conventional golf clubs.

By making it hollow, the company has shifted about 32 grams, or about 12 percent of the head weight, into the striking area of the blade.

Paul Tuttle, golf pro for World of Golf, a retail store in New York, predicted the S2H2 will be a big seller. He said the club makes the balls easier to hit, and to hit consistently. "The redistribution of weight in the head makes a wider sweet spot on a horizontal line," said Tuttle.

A set of nine irons with steel shafts ranges in price from $450-$550. Individual S2H2 woods with a steel shaft will cost about $110 each.

Firms urged to fight against terrorism

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Energy Department is privately urging energy companies to take extra precautions against terrorism, in part out of concern that Libya or Iran might strike at key U.S. energy facilities.

In addition, the National Security Council has created a special interagency task force to assess the vulnerability of domestic energy systems and to study possible U.S. responses to a wide variety of energy emergencies at home and abroad.

"Energy-related terrorism in the United States would be a particularly significant threat" in a military crisis involving the Soviet Union, said an internal Energy Department report obtained by The Associated Press.

"However, even in the absence of a superpower confrontation, there is the possibility that potential Third World adversaries could sponsor attacks on the energy infrastructure in the United States," the report said.

The report was prepared in December 1987 to describe the early stages of the department's accelerated effort to improve national energy security. It was deemed too sensitive to make public, although a sanitized version was presented to Congress last year, and a similarly limited edition was published last month.

Electric power companies, considered the most vulnerable segment of the energy industry, have begun acting on the Energy Department's anti-terrorism warnings, according to sources familiar with ongoing discussions between industry and government.

But other energy businesses, including the oil industry, have been reluctant to join the program, according to the sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The report said a natural disaster such as an earthquake or disruptions of world oil supplies are more likely to cause a national energy emergency, but that a terrorist incident would be more serious.

Among the initiatives taken to improve coordination with private energy companies was a program of special security training for company officials at the Energy Department's Central Training Academy at Albuquerque, N.M., the report said.

A key reason for the initiative, according to department officials and documents, is growing concern about "techno-terrorism," the use of hard-to-detect plastic explosives, hand-held missiles, electronic surveillance gear or other sophisticated devices to carry out politically motivated acts of sabotage.

The heightened alert also reflects a fear of retaliatory strikes by Libya and Iran, countries accused by the United States of supporting terrorism, the sources said. American bombers attacked Libya in April 1986, and Iranian oil facilities in the Persian Gulf were hit by U.S. forces in October 1987 and April 1988.

Taking its cue from the Energy Department, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission last December imposed new measures to strengthen protection against possible terrorist attacks at the few facilities it oversees that handle weapon-grade nuclear materials. However, the measures were not applied to nuclear power plants, which also are under NRC jurisdiction.

The Energy Department report said the most vulnerable segment of the energy system is the electric power grid, which is stretched across long distances in many remote, unprotected areas. Repairing or replacing critical power plant components such as generating stations can take weeks or months, it said.

Less vulnerable, but still a source of concern, are oil refineries and offshore production facilities, oil and natural gas pipelines and coal transport links.

The report noted that serious power disruptions have been carried out by terrorist organizations in Western Europe and parts of Africa and South America.

"In the past, these attacks generally were poorly designed and executed, but recent attacks by the same organizations have shown a higher level of technology and better planning," the report said.

Edward V. Badolato, deputy assistant secretary for energy emergencies, told Congress last year that the Energy Department began passing on intelligence agency "threat advisories" in 1987 to key industry trade organizations. He gave no details, however.

Badolato declined to be interviewed on the subject. He is scheduled to testify about the program Wednesday before the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee.

The internal Energy Department document said the threat advisories are transmitted to organizations such as the American Petroleum Institute, the American Gas Association, the National Coal Association and the North American Electric Reliability Council. The groups then pass on the warning to their members, the report said.

A source said the advisories are issued during a heightened state of international alert, such as the July 1988 downing of a civilian Iranian airliner by the USS Vincennes.

Gene Gorzelnik, director of communication at the electric council, confirmed that his organization was working with the Energy Department to assess security but would provide no details.

"It feels as if anything that is said about it...may give them (terrorists) some hints or bring others out of the woodwork," Gorzelnik said.

Officials said some industry executives have raised concern about possible antitrust and conflict-of-interest problems in cooperating directly with the government.

Prison uprising prompts 'captivity coverage' plan

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — As a broiling summer day dissolved into a sultry night at New York's Coxsackie state prison, Joseph Puma waited to see if five prison guards held hostage by prisoners would make it out alive.

After 14 hours, about midnight, the inmates released their hostages.

"This guy came out — a friend of mine — he was bloody, beaten, battered and he wore inmate clothing. He just collapsed in my arms, crying," said Puma, head of the state prison guards' union.

Puma saw the pain in the faces of the guards and their families and came up with an idea: The union, through Lloyd's of London, established a "captivity coverage" insurance plan, with benefits to be paid to survivors of prison uprisings.

It's believed to be the first time an insurance company has allowed such a policy, said Nels Carlson, a Lloyd's underwriter.

Union members held hostage at least 12 hours would be paid a sum equal to half their annual salary. In the case of death or injury, the insurance benefit paid to the guard or his family would be twice the salary. A New York prison guard's average annual pay: $27,500.

"It's kind of like your life insurance, where you hope it never gets paid out, but it happens," said Hardy Rauch, director of standards and accreditation for the American Correctional Association in Laurel, Md. "The concept is quite nice. It's an idea that could very easily be expanded to other states."

It's appropriate the idea should come from New York, a state still haunted by the 1971 riot at Attica, America's bloodiest prison uprising. Inmates took 39 hostages in a four-day standoff that ended in furious gunfire. Forty-three inmates and prison employees died.

No one died in August's Coxsackie uprising, but it changed the lives of the five guards involved.

Discovery crew prepares for delayed mission

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The crew of the shuttle Discovery, whose mission has been delayed until mid-March, arrived at Kennedy Space Center Sunday to participate in a practice countdown.

Meanwhile, workers at the launch pad prepared to replace turbopumps in the shuttle's three main engines. They also struggled to make Discovery's cargo, a $100 million satellite, fit into the payload bay.

The five astronauts swooped over the space center in T-38 military jets and touched down at the shuttle runway Sunday afternoon.

Sunny skies and temperatures in the 80s greeted the astronauts, who wriggled out of their heavy flight jackets as soon as they climbed out of the two-seater jets.

Shuttle commander Michael Coats commended the efforts of engineers and technicians who are replacing the three high-pressure oxygen turbopumps, which they fear could crack and cause an explosion in flight.

The turbopumps were manufactured by the same process as one turbopump on the shuttle Atlantis, which cracked during the December shuttle mission.

Investigators blamed moisture for that crack and recommended that Discovery turbopumps be replaced as a safety precaution.

The decision to replace the turbopumps forced NASA to delay Discovery's flight, which originally would have taken off last week.

"We know how hard everbody's been working and how much work there is to do, and we certainly appreciate all the work that is being done." Coats told reporters gathered at the shuttle runway.

Within an hour, Coats and his crew had taken a practice drive in a small armored tank designed to evacuate the launch pad in an emergency.

Coats and shuttle pilot John E. Blaha then boarded a shuttle training jet for landing practice.

Monday's activities include emergency escape drills at the launch pad. Tuesday morning, Coats, Blaha and mission specialists Robert C. Springer, James F. Buchli and James P. Bagian will board Discovery for a dress rehearsal of launch morning.

Four teens die in fishing shanty

"The cause of death for all four victims was lethal doses of carbon monoxide."

— Detective Leo Jadowski

MANITOWOC, Wis. (AP) — Scott Novak's luck catching walleyes won him top prizes in a weekend ice-fishing contest, but the outing turned tragic a few hours later for him and three fellow teen-agers encamped on frozen Harpt Lake.

All four were found dead of carbon monoxide poisoning Sunday in the wooden shanty where they had tried to keep warm with propane heaters as temperatures dipped below zero during the weekend contest.

"It was too airtight," said Sandy Koller, whose 16-year-old daughter, Sarah, was among the victims found in the newly built shack.

Mishicot High School, where all four teen-agers were students, planned to bring in extra counselors and hold a faculty meeting before school today to help other students cope with the tragedy, said Principal Terry Vanhimbergen.

"We're seeing some reaction from kids already," he said.

Novak, 17, captured first-, second- and third-place in the contest by catching the three largest fish, said August Stueck, a contest organizer.

His third-place catch was registered with contest officials at 11:50 p.m. Saturday — less than seven hours before the bodies were found.

The teens were overcome by carbon monoxide fumes from two portable propane heaters and a propane hot plate left running in the shanty, said Detective Leo Jadowski of the Manitowoc County Sheriff's Department.

The unpainted 7-foot-by-6½-foot wooden shanty was one of more than 50 such shelters on the frozen 70-acre lake about 85 miles north of Milwaukee. Temperatures near Manitowoc ranged from 16 below and 5 below zero overnight.

The victims were identified as Novak, Miss Koller, Cory A. Throndson, 16, and Shawn Shoulak, 16, said Rita Schultz, a sheriff's department dispatcher.

"The cause of death for all four victims was lethal doses of carbon monoxide," Jadowski said. "It's a small ice shanty unit and the carbon monoxide must have filled it."

Some of the fumes in the shanty also may have come from the corner of a synthetic sleeping bag that brushed against a heater and melted, officials said.

Five arrested in Amish robberies

LAWRENCEBURG, Tenn. (AP) — Residents are expressing relief because of the arrests of five people who are accused of holding up Amish farmers at gunpoint as they milked cows, drove buggies or made harnesses.

"Two of these men have confessed, and we've recovered some of the billfolds taken in the holdups," said Lawrence County Sheriff Tom Pyrdum. "I feel we've got all the people involved."

For many folks, life here centers on a job at the Murray-Ohio bicycle plant, the community's largest employer, or raising cattle and growing soybeans and corn.

They picnic at the David Crockett State Park, named for the Alamo hero whose presence permeates this town of 12,000 in the Tennessee hills south of Nashville. A statue honoring Crockett, who once operated a gristmill here, stands in the heart of downtown, and billboards extol the David Crockett Motel and Mini-Warehouses.

But that serenity was shattered last month when armed robbers began sticking up the Amish as they milked cows in barns or drove their buggies.

The holdups began Jan. 22 when two Amish farmers were robbed of $85 by three armed men in masks and camouflage outfits who burst into a barn in nearby Ethridge.

Five days later, three Amish men were robbed of about $140 in two separate holdups when a man leaped into their buggies, brandished a gun and demanded cash.

On Jan. 30, two men, one of them carrying a sawed-off shotgun, took $300 from an Amish harnessmaker as he worked in his shop on a farm north of Ethridge.

Residents were outraged by the robberies.

"The people who live here know the (Amish) and do business with them," said District Attorney General Mike Bottoms. "They don't ever cause anybody any trouble...They mind their own business and raise their families."

The Amish, a conservative offshoot of the Mennonite Church, are noted for a lifestyle that's dogmatic in its simplicity.

The women wear long dresses and bonnets; the men black, round hats, with dark blue jackets and pants. They disdain buttons as a sign of vanity.

Mideast leaders to meet with Bush

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush will meet in Tokyo later this month with King Hussein of Jordan and Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, and then at the White House in the spring with them and Israel Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, according to State Department officials.

The Tokyo talks will be held when Bush and the two Arab leaders attend the funeral of Emperor Hirohito of Japan. Details of the separate visits to Washington by Hussein, Mubarak and Shamir will be worked out over the next few weeks, U.S. officials speaking on condition of anonymity said Sunday.

The main topics are the future of restive Palestinians on the Israeli-held West Bank and in Gaza, and the role the United States will try to play in settling the 40-year-old Arab-Israeli conflict.

Hirohito's funeral, which will draw scores of world leaders to Tokyo, is accelerating Bush's introduction to murky Middle East diplomacy. U.S. policy is now under review by the new administration, but Secretary of State James Baker III said at his confirmation hearing last month that he is opposed to the establishment of an independent Palestinian state.

Mike Junker pours a chocolate-colored crack sealer into a wheelbarrow for street application.

Road crew foreman Ray Navarro keeps in contact with workers all over the city via two-way radio.

On the road again.

Who knows them better than the Midland Street Department, which five days a week can be found grading, sealing, widening and tapering the maze of winding blacktop throughways that make up our town.

With six to eight projects going on at any given time, it's a wonder just how this crew of 49 city workers are able to keep up with the traffic that wears them away.

This day, Street Foreman Ray Navarro is out and about — first inspecting a a shoulder widening project just east of town along Fairgrounds Road between Loop 250 and Highway 80, later west of town at a slurry road seal project just off Wadley Avenue.

It's a continual process, a process that never leaves Navarro's road crew short of work. There's plenty of that.

"Yes sir, there's more than enough to do," concurs Navarro, behind the wheel of his pickup. "We always have a steady flow of projects, but this isn't our busiest time."

Back at Fairgrounds Road, workers tear apart the west shoulder while transporting in tons of gravel and other sealcoat materials. "It's a well traveled road ... I know, I've gotten a ticket down here by the police," jokes Navarro.

But the work is serious, and when it's completed, motorists won't have to worry about falling into crevices that seem to creep up when water works its destructive force on either side of the pavement.

Of course, that's true of most streets in Midland, which at this time of the year contract under the bone-chilling cold. It's during those periods that workers can be found sealing thousands of cracks that seem to open up almost overnight.

A lot of the work many residents take for granted — but not Navarro, whose proud of his job and his crew, which this summer will seal over those cracking arterial streets with 1.2 million square yards of seal coat, an asphalt mixture used almost like varnish.

"We're always looking for new and better methods to prolong the street life out there ... everything we do out here is geared to preventive maintenance," said Navarro.

DEATHS

Don C. Wolfe

Services for Don C. Wolfe have been set for 11 a.m. Wednesday at the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Robert Kelly of St. Stephen's Catholic Church officiating.

Wolfe

Interment will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Wolfe died Saturday evening at his Midland residence.

He was born Aug. 31, 1914, in Richardson County, Neb., and moved with his family at an early age to Oklahoma City. He married Mozelle Langley on March 19, 1940, in Oklahoma City, and began working as a machinist for American Iron Works there. He later managed the M.C.M. Machine Co.

In 1947, he built and managed a machine shop in Duncan, Okla. He went to Saudi Arabia in 1949 to help build a machine shop in Kuwait for Kerr-Magee Oil Co.

In 1950, he moved to Snyder with his family, and worked for West Texas Machine Co. until he moved to Midland in 1956. He established Wolfe Tool Co., Wolfe Inspection Co., and built the Wolfe Machine & Pipe Threading Shop, all in Midland.

He worked in oil field service until his retirement in 1985.

Survivors include his wife, Mozelle Wolfe of Midland; two daughters, Elichia Venso of Houston and Sandra Tomlinson of Galveston; a brother, Francis Wolfe of Tucson, Ariz.; three sisters, Elichia Brown of Wewoka, Okla., Joan Poole of Tampa, Fla., and Virginia Ainsworth of Oklahoma City; two grandchildren; and three great-grandchildren.

He was preceded in death by a son, Jerry Wolfe, in 1987; a grandson, Tony Squires, in 1980; and a brother, Robert Wolfe, in 1984.

The family requests that memorials be directed to the Hospice of Midland, Inc., P.O. Box 2621, Midland, Tx., 79702.

Christopher Davidson

Funeral services for Christopher "Chris" Davidson, 8, of Midland have been set for 4 p.m. Tuesday at St. Nicholas Episcopal Church with Rev. Ellis E. Brust of Crockett, and formerly associate rector of St. Nicholas Episcopal Church, officiating.

Davidson

Interment will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of the Ellis Funeral Home.

Chris died early today at a local hospital.

He was born Sept. 15, 1980, in Midland, and lived here all of his life. He attended school at the Developmental Disabilities Center in Midland.

Survivors include his parents, Steve and Jan Davidson of Midland; a sister, Katie Winn Davidson of Midland; and grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. H.W. Davidson of Midland and Mr. and Mrs. A.M. Schiemenz of Austin.

The family requests that memorials be directed to the Developmental Disabilities Center, Inc., Box 5732, Midland, or to Opportunity Park, c/o MARC, 2701 N. A St., Midland, 79701.

Eddie Clinton Trice

Eddie Clinton Trice, 86, of Midland died Saturday at a local hospital.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Tuesday at the Sizemore Funeral Home Chapel of Memories with Rev. Ross Payne officiating. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park with Sizemore Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Trice was born on Dec. 10, 1902, in Sidney, Tex. He was married to Leora Evelyn Thompson in October of 1943 and they moved to Midland in 1946. He had been a house painter in this area for many years.

Survivors include his wife; one daughter, Wanda Jean Crowder of San Angelo; one son, Eddie C. Trice of Midland; three sisters, Ruth Geiger and Bessie Morris, both of Colorado City, and Elsie Hammonds of Alice; five grandchildren; six great-grandchildren; and six step-grandchildren.

Rex R. Perkins Jr.

Funeral services for Rex R. Perkins, Jr., of Midland have been set for 3 p.m. Tuesday at the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with Jim Fields, associate pastor of Cottonflat Baptist Church, officiating. He will be assisted by Rev. Gayle Reeves, pastor of the Calvary Assembly of God Church.

Masonic rites will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Perkins died Sunday night in Midland.

Arvil B. Craven

Funeral services for Arvil B. Craven of Midland were to be at 2 p.m. today at the Thomas Funeral Home Chapel with Eugene Greenwood and Clark Ford officiating.

Burial was to follow at Resthaven Mausoleum with Thomas Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Olivia Herrera

Olivia Herrera, 42, of Midland died Sunday night at a local hospital following a lengthy illness.

Services are pending with Thomas Funeral Home.

Bonnie H. Martin

Services for Mrs. Bonnie Hopson Martin of Midland are pending with Ellis Funeral Home.

She died Sunday afternoon at a Midland hospital.

Services are pending at Thomas Funeral Home.

SSC director faces mountainous task

STATE

WAXAHACHIE (AP) — Although Roy Schwitters spent his youth leading expeditions up Mount Rainier in Washington state, he sees the flat prairie of Ellis County as the most challenging ground he has ever confronted.

Schwitters last month became the director of the biggest physics project now on the federal government's agenda — the $5.89 billion super collider. If it receives funding, the super collider would be built on a site near Waxahachie, south of Dallas.

"It's an absolutely unique experience that doesn't come along every day," Schwitters, 44, said recently during his first visit to the site area. "The notion of creating a laboratory, and all that it means, is pretty heady stuff."

He comes to the job with no experience in running a big laboratory, although he has managed one important large scientific collaboration. His vision for the facility is still undefined, he told The Dallas Morning News.

Schwitters uprooted his family from the comforts of a Victorian house outside Boston, forsook a professorship at Harvard University and essentially abandoned physics research that is only now bearing fruit.

Universities Research Association, a Washington, D.C.-based consortium that will manage the collider, selected Schwitters for the job.

Unlike previous founding directors of U.S. high-energy projects, whose careers were carved by the Manhattan project, Schwitters is a new breed of physicist. He entered the field as it became a more "corporate," faceless scientific enterprise involving teams of physicists who work for months to run experiments in one expensive machine.

After completing a doctorate at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1971, Schwitters spent eight years at the Stanford Linear Accelerator Center near San Francisco, participating in the first confirmation of the subatomic particle called quarks — a discovery that won a Nobel Prize for the project's leading scientists.

He taught at Harvard while commuting to the Fermi National Accelerator Laboratory near Chicago, overseeing construction of the giant Collider Detector Facility for the 4-mile Tevatron accelerator, which involved hundreds of scientists and engineers.

As director of the super collider he must oversee thousands of scientists, engineers and technicians who will build the underground ring, 53 miles in circumference. In the ring, powerful magnets will guide two beams of protons toward collisions.

"Schwitters has an unusually good sense on how to work with other people," said Wolfgang K.H. Panofsky, the Stanford accelerator center's first director.

"That is quite unusual in science these days for somebody as young as he is. Because of the large collaborations in science, we have a hard time identifying leaders in the next generation."

Switter's youth was a key selling point, Panofsky said. The collider is scheduled for completion in 1998, but the machine won't produce fruitful physics for years.

"Among other things, you have to have a director who lives long enough to see it finished," Panofsky said. "We made a clear decision that, as a matter of policy, the torch should be passed to the young generation. In that generation, Schwitters was absolutely unique."

Schwitters hopes to have open access to the project, but his plans so far only include a commitment to preserve creek beds and perhaps to build a 53-mile bike path along the top of the collider's main ring.

During the next few months, Schwitters will find himself shaking hands with lawmakers and extolling the project's merits in congressional hearings. He will no doubt face considerable opposition to the fiscal 1990 request of $250 million in construction funds.

By the end of this year, Schwitters plans to have moved his family and to have recruited as many as 200 other scientists and engineers, which might mean convincing them of the virtues of rural Texas life.

Mardi Gras madness

Area police overloaded with guns

BIG SPRING (AP) — Big Spring police have run out of space for the nearly 300 guns they have accumulated over the years and are considering sending them to a smeltering pot in El Paso, Sgt Terry Chamnes said.

The guns, some of them in police possession as far back as 1966, have been accumulating in the police lockup room, he said.

Police recently received approval from 118th District Court Judge James Gregg for permission to sell or dispose of the weapons.

"This is nothing that's new. We just haven't done it in several years," Chamnes said.

The police department has the option to destroy the weapons, issue them to police officers or sell them, Chamnes said.

He said most of the weapons will be destroyed because police "don't want the guns back on the street." He added that many of the guns have to be destroyed because they have been altered or used in a crime. Police are not allowed to sell such weapons.

"The main part of the weapons are Saturday Night Specials" and guns that have had serial numbers removed, shotguns that have had barrels sawed off or weapons that have been otherwise tampered with, he said.

Many probably will be difficult to sell.

"Probably 90 percent of the guns are real cheap ones," he said.

Mother, children reunited after seven years

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A mother awarded $4.5 million in a suit against her husband and in-laws in connection with the abduction of her children was reunited with the younsters after a seven-year separation.

Bonnie Edwards, aided by the FBI, was reunited with her teen-age son and daughter over the weekend in Los Angeles. She and the children planned to return to Texas.

Authorities accuse the children's father, Noel Welrich, of taking the children from their elementary school in 1982 in violation of a court order. A warrant was issued for his arrest in December for unlawful flight to avoid prosecution.

Jake and Jennifer, who are now 14 and 13 years old, had not spoken with their mother since the day of the abduction.

Ms. Edwards sued Welrich, his mother, Opal, and other members of his family for interference with child custody. She alleged that the family aided in the abduction and later had contact with the children and failed to notify her.

An emotional trial last December ended with a $4.5 million verdict against Opal and Noel, who was absent for the trial. A motion for a new trial is pending.

Flume said an FBI agent became interested in the case at the time of the trial and helped track Weirich.

City manager opens police shooting probe

ARLINGTON (AP) — A special investigation has been launched by the Arlington city manager's office into the third fatal shooting involving one police officer.

Officials will be trying to determine why officer Brian Farrell, who was involved in two other fatal shootings since August, was serving an arrest warrant on a potentially violent suspect in Dallas and was not at his desk job in the department's forgery investigations unit.

"We're just mystified," said City Manager Bill Kirchhoff. "It was our understanding that he was assigned clerical duty."

Farrell, 25, fatally shot Michael Wayne Robinson, 21, on Wednesday in Dallas.

With two citizens groups pressing for Farrell's dismissal, the case is shaping into a political problem for the city.

Hazel Lewis, head of the city's black citizens advisory committee, said she fears Arlington could suffer the same racial tension existing between citizens and police in Dallas.

The victim killed Wednesday was an Anglo. In the other shootings, the victims were Hispanic and black.

"If either one of those two men had been white, something would have been done," Ms. Lewis said.

Members of the Mid-Cities Community Council began protesting within hours of the Robinson shooting.

"I'm asking that this officer be removed from the Police Department and that he not be permitted to enter law enforcement again," said Deborah Lott, president of the 60-member council. "This is not a minority issue. This is not a community issue."

Farrell's job is covered by civil service rules, so there may not be grounds for dismissal based solely on the number of shootings in which he was involved.

Firefighters put out dozens of fires; No injuries reported

From Staff Reports

Midland firefighters had a busy weekend, battling dozens of fires since Friday in frigid weather, according to reports.

Most of the blazes were grass fires, but several structure fires were reported as well. No injuries were reported.

Three units and nine firefighters were called to the scene of a blaze at 1511-A N. Main St. at 1:20 p.m. Saturday. When they arrived, the fire was spreading through the kitchen of the residence, according to reports.

Heavy damage to the kitchen and a closet was reported from the fire, which was caused by gas fumes that leaked from a water heater.

Investigators said a short in a hot tub heater caused a blaze that heavily damaged a home at #6 Metz Ct. Saturday afternoon.

Six units and 20 firefighters were called to the scene just after 11 a.m., and were hampered at the scene by a frozen water hydrant at the intersection of Ward Street and Metz Court, reports said.

The temperature at the time was 13 degrees, according to officials.

The short ignited a fire in a shed connected to the rear of the home, and quickly spread to the roof and attic.

At least a dozen grass fires whipped by brisk winds were reported Saturday and Sunday, but no major damage was reported.

ROAD

But sometimes, the crews can't move fast enough. That's when Navarro says the department learns in a hurry about residential pothole problems. It's also why last year, the city initiated its pothole hotline at 685-7299.

While the work is mundane at times, Navarro says no two days are alike. "It's never just routine. We're always looking for ways to improve on the jobs and even the morale."

Sometimes things heat up. Like in the summer, when workers lay down a batch of 375 degree hot mix, that on top of normal temperatures, make it seem at times like working in a blazing inferno. "I sometimes call that organized chaos by profession," joked Navarro. "But this job really brings out the best in people."

Ironically, the most difficult part about maintaining Midland's streets, according to Navarro, is community education. And that's where he says a lot of public relations comes in.

They do a lot of that at the street department in between controlling weeds, mowing channelways, grading alleyways and setting up pumps during heavy rain storms.

They are jacks of all trades — magicians in the art of street stitching, but always, as the song goes, "On The Road Again."

Report says economy fell in January

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The growth rate of the nation's economy fell sharply in January to its lowest level in two years, the National Association of Purchasing Management said in its monthly report, scheduled to be released Monday.

The drop followed two months of inventory buildup to hedge against inflation.

The decline may be a temporary downturn as companies decrease their inventory, an official with the group said.

Inventories fell sharply in January.

The growth in production and new orders also slipped last month.

The increase in production was at its lowest rate since September, and new orders grew at the slowest pace in two years. Employment, which has registered sharp gains over the last seven months, showed only a slight increase in January.

Prices were reported to rise, and vendor deliveries continued to slow, but at a slower pace than in most of the year.

The report is based on responses from managers at more than 250 companies representing 21 industries. Economists consider its findings a preliminary indicator of the previous month's economic performance.

The association's composite index, reflecting the slack in January, fell sharply to 53.2 percent, from 57.3 percent in December.

It was also down from January 1988, when the index measured 57.3 percent.

Despite the decline, January was the 28th consecutive month in which the seasonally adjusted index exceeded 50 percent.

Robert J. Bretz, chairman of the association's business survey committee and director of materials management at Pitney Bowes Inc., said that despite the decrease in the growth rate, the January decline might prove to be fleeting.

"One robin doesn't make a spring," Bretz said. "Inventories over the previous two months were growing and then they dropped in January."

The report noted that inventories, which had built up modestly in December to hedge against announced January price increases, were worked down in January.

But Bretz added that the January results "could be the first signs of a slowing economy and probably is a healthy sign if the object is to reduce inflation."

New orders rose in January for the 44th consecutive month, after normal seasonal variations were taken into account.

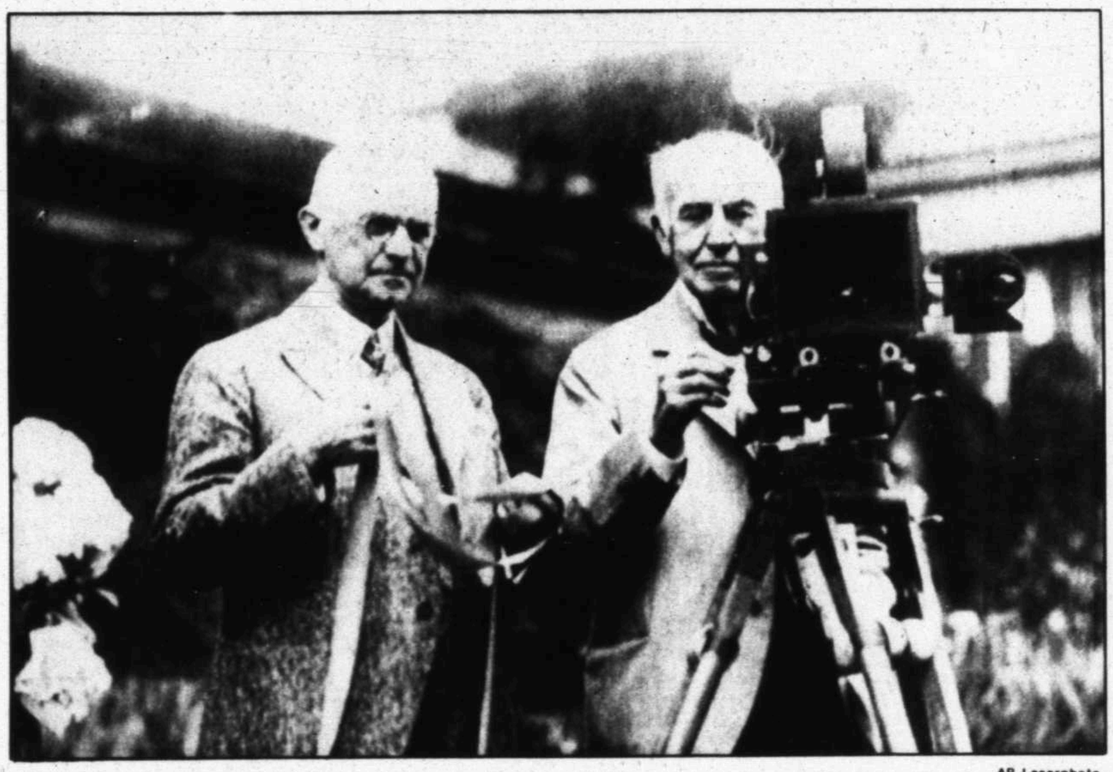

The index for new orders, however, fell to 54.5 percent, from 60 percent in December. The index was the lowest for new orders since October 1986.

Twenty-seven percent of the purchasers reported a jump in new orders, and 12 percent reported a decline, while the rest reported no change.

Export orders rose in January but at a slower pace than in December.

Kodak marks 100 years in movies

By RANDOLPH PICHT
AP Business Writer

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — It's a story fit for the movies.

Two of this country's greatest inventors, George Eastman and Thomas Edison, got together one day to discuss the motion picture industry they were helping create.

Eastman already had invented the process to make long rolls of film and Edison had patented his movie camera. Both were comparing notes and seeking refinements.

At one point, Eastman, founder of the Eastman Kodak Co., supposedly asked Edison how wide the camera film should be. Edison, holding thumb and forefinger about an inch apart, said, "About so wide."

That width, 1⅜ inches, better known as 35mm, became and remains the standard size for the black celluloid that's been used for a century to hold the dramas, comedies and happy endings that appear on the silver screen.

Who knows if the story is true. It's been told so many times, altered and edited, that it's impossible to determine exactly when or even if the conversation occurred, said Kodak spokesman Henry Kaska.

"You just have to say, 'Legend has it ...,'" Kaska said.

This year Kodak is celebrating its 100th anniversary making movie film, which in terms of miles manufactured is the photo giant's leading film product.

Please see KODAK, Page 4B

Kodak: The first 100 years

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Here are some highlights of Kodak's 100 years in the movie industry:

1889 — George Eastman invents flexible roll film. It's 200 feet long and today would be long enough to make a movie just over two minutes long. Thomas Edison is his first customer.

1931 — Kodak wins its first Oscar. The company will receive four more for technical achievements.

1948 — Kodak introduces triacetate safety-base film to replace nitrate-based film which was flammable, potentially explosive and, when stored improperly, deteriorated into a powder.

1982 — Kodak introduces a negative film that allows cinematographers to use less light when filming. The new film cuts production costs.

1989 — Kodak introduces a film said to perform even better in low-light situations and produce sharper images.

EPA rule hits rural gas pumps

HOUSTON (AP) — A new Environmental Protection Agency rule requiring owners of underground fuel storage tanks to carry $1 million in pollution insurance could shut down rural gasoline pumps, an oil marketers' group says.

Oil marketers in Austin last week warned that 3,000 rural gasoline outlets and service stations could be gone unless something is done to head off a crisis caused by the new federal requirement for liability insurance.

The Texas Oil Marketers Association is asking the state Legislature to institute a fee on stored petroleum, the Houston Chronicle reported Sunday. The money generated would be used to pay for pollution cleanup, presumably lowering insurance costs.

The Stuermer Store, a white, clapboard building in Ledbetter, 90 miles west of Houston, is one station that may be forced to shut down.

"We're sort of thinking we won't be able to handle gasoline anymore," said Lillian Stuermer Dyer, granddaughter of store founder E.P. Stuermer, who opened the establishment in 1891. "We're just a small convenience store so people don't run out of gas on the road."

The store has been filling empty tanks since 1912.

Scott Fisher, who represents the Texas Oil Marketers Association, estimates the average organization member will spend $309,000 to comply with the new federal regulations.

The question Texas legislators will be wrestling with is whether the preservation of far-flung and marginal gasoline stations like the Stuermer store justifies the imposition of another state fee, one that eventually is likely to be passed through to consumers as higher pump prices.

The fee, at six-tenths of a cent, would raise about $110 million, Fisher said. The typical consumer would pay about $3.20 a year.

Lee Jones, spokesman for the State Board of Insurance, said pollution insurance is not widely available because only one fully regulated company in the state provides it.

And pollution insurance rates vary from site to site. But a typical station probably would spend at least $15,000 a year for a $1 million policy.

Small operators have until October 1990 to comply with the new EPA regulations. Big companies — those with a net worth of at least $20 million or 1,000 underground tanks — had to show financial responsibility Jan. 24.

Texas has most empty office space

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas' major cities have some of the worst year-end office occupancy rates in the nation — including four of the nation's five emptiest suburban office markets, according to recent real estate surveys.

Austin, San Antonio and Dallas ranked among the five emptiest in the nation for downtown office buildings, said a study by Cushman and Wakefield of Texas Inc.

For suburban office buildings, Austin has the worst occupancy rate in the nation.

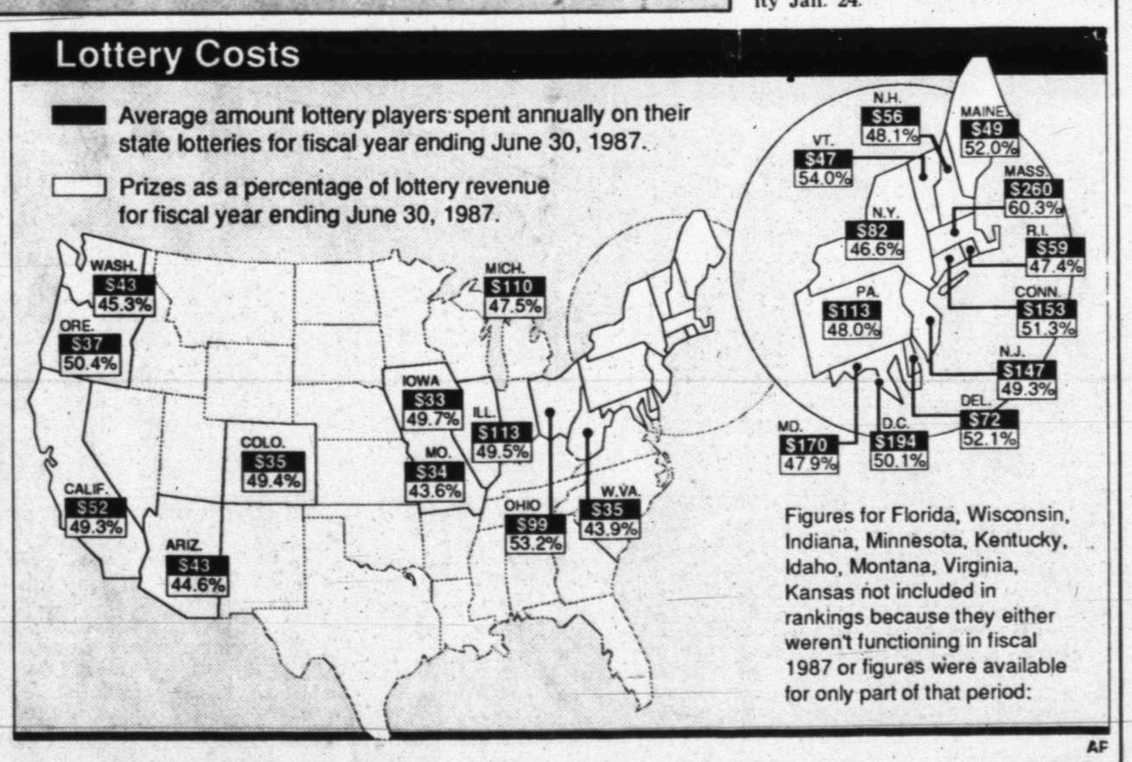

"It's going to be five to 10 years before you can say: 'Hey. The Texas office market is healthy again,'" Matthew S. Khourie, partner in the Houston office of Trammell Crow Co., told the Houston Chronicle.

San Antonio blotted the state's image with the biggest decline in downtown occupancy rates in the nation, about 4.4 percent between the third and fourth quarter, Cushman and Wakefield said. Dallas also reported declines in the period.

But Houston showed improvement in both suburban and downtown office markets in the fourth quarter of 1988, Cushman and Wakefield said.

Lotteries give no lessons in instant wealth

NEW YORK (AP) — Times were so tough for Monika Bogguess when she and her husband relocated to Tucson, Ariz., that she got a paper route and once sold blood to pay the bills.

Since winning the state's $1.35 million lottery jackpot last spring Mrs. Bogguess, 38, doesn't worry about making ends meet. Now she has a new set of financial problems: how to invest a windfall when you don't know the difference between a stock certificate and a gift certificate.

"I find it all very complicated," said Mrs. Bogguess. "Even though I used to deliver the Wall Street Journal I don't know how to read it."

OPEC rumors confound market

From Staff and Wire Reports

Energy futures continued Friday's slump begun amid conflicting reports from OPEC.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, the March contract for West Texas Intermediate lost another 13 cents this morning, on top of the 20 cents it lost to close Friday at $17.53 a barrel. The contract settled 22 cents higher Thursday after flipflopping throughout the week.

Heating oil and unleaded gasoline prices were among the refined products that declined on the exchange. The March contract for domestic heating oil settled 0.24 cent lower at 50.31 cents a gallon, while unleaded gasoline closed down 0.45 cent at 49.17 cents a gallon.

Analysts said crude prices had risen on Thursday, spurred by a report in an Arabic-language newspaper that Dubai was considering a 10 percent cut in its oil production starting March 1.

A second report on Friday contradicting the earlier statements pushed prices down, said Nauman Barakat, vice president of energy investments at Prudential-Bache Securities Inc.

"It shows the market is still very prone to rumors," Barakat said.

Investors have remained skittish despite OPEC's new agreement because in the past the cartel has had problems sticking to similar accords.

Analysts said the latest reports from Dubai provided further evidence that OPEC's agreement remains shaky.

Bullish dollar sentiment continues

LONDON (AP) — The dollar rose in early European trading today after last week's meeting of the Group of Seven industrialized countries failed to break the market's bullish sentiment, foreign currency dealers said. Gold prices also rose.

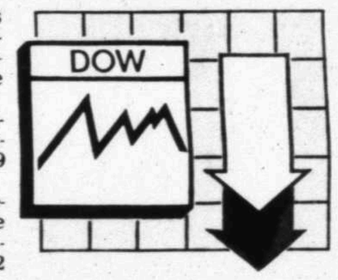

In Tokyo, the dollar rose 0.43 yen to close at 129.70. Later, in London, it was quoted at 129.85 yen.

In London, one British pound cost $1.7317, cheaper for buyers than $1.7410 late Friday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $390.65 a troy ounce, up from $388.25 bid late Friday. At midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $390.25.

Silver was quoted in London at a bid price of $5.81 a troy ounce, down from Friday's $5.83.

Market indecisive on jobless report

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices were little changed Friday in a indecisive appraisal of stronger-than-expected employment growth at the start of 1989.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped 2.50 to 2,331.25, reducing its gain for the week to 8.39 points.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 6 to 5 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 792 up, 642 down and 518 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 172.98 million shares, down from 183.43 million in the previous session.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market increased $3.25 billion, or 0.11 percent, in value.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks edged up .15 to 166.50.

Standard & Poor's industrial index rose .22 to 343.84, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was up .13 at 296.97.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market gained 1.19 to 406.35, climbing back above its close on the eve of Black Monday Oct. 19, 1987. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 324.88, up .36.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Banks criticized for 'slowing recovery'

HOUSTON (AP) — After being shellshocked by five years of economic upheaval, lending institutions are slowing the city's economic revival by making it impossible for many small businesses to borrow money, critics say.

A number of Houston small businessmen struggling from job to job say many deserve to have their loan requests rejected, but many seemingly have applications that would be approved anywhere but Houston, the Houston Chronicle reported Sunday.

"It is slowing down the recovery," said Susan Macy, assistant director of the University of Houston Small Business Development Center, an organization devoted to helping small businesses.

Many observers point to a capital shortage as the state's No. 1 economic problem. But the Rice Center, a research group at Rice University,came to the opposite conclusion. A controversial study contends capital is plentiful, but banks are reluctant to part with it.

Pennzoil: Burlington buy 'only investment'

HOUSTON (AP) — Pennzoil Co. revealed Sunday that it has acquired nearly 12 million shares of Burlington Resources Inc., but added that its 8 percent holdings of the Seattle, Wash.-based firm's outstanding stock are only an investment.

Pennzoil spokesman Bob Harper said his company on Friday filed a Schedule 13D required by federal security laws because it had exceeded 5 percent ownership of the stock of another company. "We're going to review the situation from time to time, and we may sell all or part of the stock."

Harper said Pennzoil is not looking to force a "merger, reorganization, liquidation, sale or transfer of a material amount of assets, or any change of management" in Burlington Resources.

Burlington Resources owns Meridian Oil Inc., and El Paso Natural Gas Co.

Ford paces stronger late January sales

DETROIT (AP) — Sales of U.S.-made cars and light trucks rose 5.6 percent in late January, bolstered by a strong performance by Ford Motor Co. and continued solid truck sales.

The automakers reported Friday they sold cars and light trucks at a daily rate of 41,798 vehicles during the Jan. 21-31 period this year, compared with a rate of 39,571 during the same period a year ago.

FTC conditionally approves Nabisco deal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Trade Commission agreed to allow the nation's biggest leveraged buyout to go through, provided the two corporations involved — which together account for one-eighth of the food sold in the nation's supermarkets — reduce their market shares of certain products.

The commission said Friday it would not challenge the $24.5 billion acquisition of RJR Nabisco by Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co. if KKR within a year sells some assets.

KKR on Friday extended its tender offer for RJR Nabisco shares until 10 a.m. EST Feb. 9, from midnight EST Monday.

Stock Market Loses

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed lower today, giving up some of its recent gains.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which started 1989 with five consecutive weeks of gains, fell 14.29 to 2,316.96 by noontime today on Wall Street.

Losers outnumbered gainers by about 9 to 5 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 449 up, 808 down and 534 unchanged.

Analysts said traders were leery of bidding very aggressively for stocks, suspecting that the market was due for a pause after its winter-long rally.

Some observers argue that the market's early-1989 gains may have stemmed largely from the so-called "January effect," which tends to push prices higher at the start of the year as tax selling pressures abate.

Investors also appeared a little confused about the state of the economy. A Labor Department report last week showed strong growth in payroll employment for January.

But a monthly survey of purchasing executives indicated that growth slowed in January from the rapid pace it set in December.

Burlington Resources jumped 8½ to 47¾ as the most active NYSE issue. Pennzoil Co. said it had acquired 8 percent of the company's stock.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks dropped .70 to 165.80. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 1.09 at 323.79.

Productivity up in 1988

WASHINGTON (AP) — The productivity of American workers increased 1.4 percent last year, the government said today, matching the average gains of the six previous years but falling short of the growth needed to meet the forecast on which President Bush is basing his budget.

Increased productivity — getting each worker to produce more each hour he or she is on the job — is vital to economic growth without inflation, particularly given the current squeeze in the labor market.

But the Labor Department reported non-farm productivity was unchanged in the fourth quarter of 1988 and was up 1.4 percent for the year. That marked an improvement over 1987 but was exactly in line with the 1.4 percent annual average in productivity gains since the end of the 1981-82 recession.

Output in the non-farm sector was up 5.1 percent for the year, but average hours worked climbed 3.6 percent, the department's Bureau of Labor Statistics reported.

Manufacturers reported a 3.2 percent productivity gain for 1988, down from 3.4 percent in 1987. Productivity in the business sector dropped 2.0 percent in the final quarter of 1988 and ended the year up 1.0 percent.

LOTTERY

Winning the lottery jackpot can be sweet dream but the temptations and mysteries of new-found wealth often become overwhelming.

Many prize recipients such as Mrs. Bogguess are plunged into the investment world blind. They're inundated with offers from financial brokers and a few fall prey to peddlers of bogus investments.

State lottery officials don't provide financial advice after all the hoopla dies down, except to sometimes explain tax liabilities and urge winners to hire a good accountant.

"The pressures of winning can be enormous," said Michael Naste, an independent financial planner from Baldwin, N.Y., and a $2.5 million lottery winner himself.

"People label you a millionaire and expect you to live a certain way," he said. "If you're not careful you can overextend yourself and end up in debt."

That's what happened to a construction worker who won $4 million in the New York lottery three years ago and became one of Naste's three dozen jackpot-winning clients.

After receiving a check for around $148,000 — the first of 20 annual after-tax installments — the middle-aged man quit his $38,000-a-year job, threw a party and put $10,000 down on each of 10 new Cadillacs.

"The only problem was he didn't realize he also needed money to live on for the year," Naste said.

In the next eight months, six of the luxury cars were repossessed and the New York man had to borrow $200,000 to hold him over in between lottery checks.

"A lot of people who play the lottery are not used to having money, so some of them do crazy things," said Naste, 37, who puts most of his winnings in real estate. "You've got to remember you're not really a millionaire when you first win. The money comes in over 20 years.

"People say, 'If I win the lottery I'll buy a baseball team.' They've got to be kidding. Banks won't even loan you money based on (future) lottery winnings."

Most big-lottery winners, though, are fairly conservative, according to interviews with winners, financial advisers and officials among the 32 state lotteries nationwide.

Michigan found in a survey two years ago that nearly three quarters of its $1 million-plus lottery winners had sought expert financial advice. The majority used their first check to pay bills or splurge on a new home or car, but later, most made long-term investments, saved for retirement, or established trust funds, the survey showed.

Mrs. Bogguess and her husband, David, 42, are among those whom accountants might call conservative. While she quit her job, he kept working as a municipal sewage-management official in Tucson, where they moved three years ago from Kansas.

The Bogguess' first $54,000 lottery check — nearly double their pre-lottery annual income — was partly used to pay off some credit-card debts, the $12,000 family jeep and buy a new pickup truck. Mrs. Bogguess put the rest in a two-year certificate of deposit and says she'll commit at least $20,000 a year to still-undetermined long-term investments.

"I'm trying to invest it wisely. I never had that much before and a couple of times I was down on hard times," she said, recalling the time she sold blood plasma to a local clinic for $30 a week.

John D. Flowers, an assistant high school principal from Barboursville, W.Va., has followed a similar play-it-safe pattern after winning $2 million in the West Virginia lottery in the spring of 1986.

Flowers, 40, who continues working but whose wife quit her job, said most of his first lottery check went toward buying a new house. On his accountant's advice, 10 percent was placed in a tax-deferred retirement annuity and another 10 percent was reserved for his three children's college education.

A small amount was invested in mutual funds and short-term tax-free municipal bonds. Flowers, like some other lottery winners interviewed, has avoided stocks.

"This has raised our overall standard of living and lowered our overall worry level," said Flowers.

Most prize recipients say their main goal is maintaining a higher living standard, long after the lottery checks cease.

Tax expert Jane Feola Scaccetti, who has counseled lottery winners, says that can easily be done through diversified investments. But her first advice is that clients take things slow.

"It's the same thing as with someone who inherits a lot of money," said Ms. Scaccetti, a tax partner with the Philadelphia accounting firm Laventhol & Horwath. "You usually try to slow the pace down, apply all the sound financial decision process ... as you would a wealthy individual who has earned money over a period of time."

For the first two years most lottery winners might want to keep the money in high-yielding CDs or Treasury bills, Ms. Scaccetti said. Some banks, such as Northern Trust Co. in Chicago, offer special accounts for clients who suddenly have $1 million or more and need a place to park it.

Of course, lottery winners also should be looking for ways to shelter themselves from taxes, such as tax-free municipal bonds or annuities, Ms. Scaccetti said.

Later on, "They need to ask themselves: 'Do I need to have a fixed return because I want to give up working, or do I want to continue working and put a fixed income amount set aside," she said.

Dick Zimmermann, 39, a former ABC News producer from the San Francisco Bay area, fell in both categories after winning $9.76 million in the California lottery a year ago.

Although his annual net income of $500,000 has kept himself and his wife out of the work force, they've been cautious.

Zimmermann opted for investments most likely to appreciate, like a new $425,000, 3-bedroom house and a 1964 Rolls Royce Silver Cloud III. For tax reasons Zimmermann obtained a 15-year home mortgage rather than paying cash.

"We're trying to be good stewards of this money," he said. "After all, this sort of thing doesn't even come once in a lifetime. Your chances of being struck by lightning are four times better."

KODAK

"1889 is the year we sold our first length of motion picture film — to Thomas Edison, that much we're sure of," Kaska said.

Edison opened a production company and released 5,000 movie titles — shorts of vaudeville acts or boxing matches — by 1900. He is credited with starting the entertainment form.

Kodak always has maintained a subtle role in the movie business, supplying generations of filmmakers, from pioneers like Edwin S. Porter, D.W. Griffith and Cecil B. DeMille to today's kingpins like Stephen Spielberg and Francis Ford Coppola.

For many years, Kodak was the only practical supplier of film to the burgeoning industry and today the company still dominates.

Its low profile dates to the days of Eastman, who refused to enter the movie production business and insisted on accepting cash in advance for movie film, never a share of profits.

"George Eastman didn't trust filmmakers. If a film lost money, he didn't want to lose with it," said Chris Horak, curator of film at the International Museum of Photography in Rochester, where Kodak is based.

Moviemakers constantly visited the company offering a percentage of their profits to Kodak in exchange for free film, but always have been rejected.

That policy remains in effect.

Horak said the no-free-film rule also applies to a Kodak program that supports young filmmakers who can't afford to buy film.

"They give them money and tell them to buy the film," Horak said.

Kodak's movie division also maintains a low profile within the company because the division generates about $350 million a year in sales, a fraction of the company's $17 billion in annual sales.

The magazine, published by the American Society of Cinematographers, has been interviewing moviemakers for 70 years and nearly all have said they use Kodak film.

"We do 12 issues a year and talk to at least three cinematographers in each issue. I would say we usually find one or two that don't use Kodak film. In 1988, we didn't have anyone," Turner said.

Horak said without Kodak in the early 1900s, there wouldn't have been a thriving movie business. Today Kodak is by far the leading seller of all movie film in America, although Fuji Photo-film Co., of Japan, and Agfa-Gevaert AG, of West Germany, have started winning acceptance.

"The foreign film has gained in quality over the past couple of years and as a result I think more people are starting to think about using it," said Fred Austin, vice president of Deluxe Laboratories Inc. in Hollywood, Calif.

DeLuxe printed about half of all the Hollywood movies last year, and Austin said about 80 percent of the film it uses is Kodak-made.

Fuji and Agfa films are attractive, Austin said, because a studio can usually get a discount by buying a certain amount of film, a practice Kodak refuses to offer.

So, while filmmakers may insist on using Kodak film to shoot movies, a studio may insist on another film to make the 1,000 copies sent to movie theaters worldwide.

"More and more over the years, it's the bottom line that counts," said Austin.

There are primarily two kinds of movie film: negative film, used in the camera when a movie is shot; and print film, which runs through a theater screen projector.

The average movie, at 90 feet of film a minute, is about about 90,000 to 120,000 feet long. However, much more is used en route to the final product.

Kodak estimates filmmakers use at least 20 times more negative film than the finished product requires, which means an average movie might use 1.8 million feet of film.

Kodak sells its most popular negative film in a 400-foot roll priced at about 34 cents a foot. Its most popular print film comes in a 4,000-foot roll costing about 6 cents a foot.

Increased competition may be one reason Kodak is blowing its horn about its long history in movies.

Although the company has won five Oscars, three Emmys and two special scientific awards for technical breakthroughs in the movie industry, Kodak still feels a little taken for granted, company officials said.

Kodak's role in the movie business is not unlike Texaco's or Mobil's role in the automobile industry, said Joerge Agin, vice president and general manager of Kodak's Motion Picture and Audiovisual Products Division.

ECONOMY

Among exporters, 28 percent reported higher orders, compared with 30 percent in December. The 5 percent reporting lower export orders is down from 6 percent in the previous month.

The report also indicated slowing production in January.

Although producion grew for the 30th consecutive month, the production index dropped in January to 56.2 percent, from 60.0 percent in December.

Twenty-seven percent of the purchasers reported increased production, while 12 percent reported reduced production.

Employment rose slightly in January. It was the eighth consecutive month the rate has increased after declines in employment in the three prior months.

The index for employment stood at 50.5 percent in January, down from 56.8 percent in December.

Inventories declined in January for the first time since October, when seasonal adjustments are considered. The index for inventories dropped to 45.5 percent, from 50.8 percent.

"Even though Houston's office market has shown improvement throughout 1988, the nation's occupancy rate still exceeds Houston's," said James E. Peters, senior vice president and branch manager of Cushman and Wakefield.

Cushman and Wakefield's survey showed the nation's downtowns ended the fourth quarter with an average 85 percent occupancy rate. That was better than Houston's downtown occupancy rate of 77.2 percent; Dallas' 73.9 percent; San Antonio's 72.6 percent and Austin's 69 percent.

The nation's suburban office markets have an average occupancy rate of 78.7 percent, Cushman and Wakefield said.

The five worst suburban markets in the nation were San Antonio with a 69.9 percent occupancy rate, followed by Dallas with 69.5 percent, Houston with 68.5 percent, Boca Raton, Fla., with 63.8 percent and Austin with 62.5 percent.

Texas cities have been burdened with high office vacancies in recent years because of a regional recession and overbuilding.

The oversupply of space created low prices. Houston has the cheapest office space of 49 cities surveyed in an international study by the Horne Co. and the Office Network.

That report showed Houston suburban office space was leasing for $10.50 per square foot, less than the average of $13.50 per square foot per year.

Other average downtown rental costs included: Dallas at $19.86; New York at $38.89; San Antonio at $14; Denver at $11; Chicago, $30.77; New Orleans at $16.50; Fort Worth at $14.50; and Boston at $38, the Office Network said.

Calcavecchia strikes again at LA

By GORDON S. WHITE Jr.
N.Y. Times News Service

PACIFIC PALISADES, Calif. — Mark Calcavecchia, with his long drives and fearless attack on pins, utilized a couple of little delicate chips into cups Sunday to complete his charge for his second victory on the PGA Tour in two weeks.

Winner of the Phoenix Open two weeks ago, Calcavecchia, 28, holed out from off the 18th green to conclude the third round this morning.

Then he chipped into the 12th hole to get even with Sandy Lyle in extremely cold weather. When Lyle three-putted the 14th, Calcavecchia took over the lead and went on to edge the Scot by a stroke in the $1 million Nissan Los Angeles Open at the Riviera Country Club.

Calcavecchia finished second to Lyle by one stroke when Lyle won last year's Masters.

Calcavecchia, who parred each of the last six holes, finished with three-under 68 for 12-under 272 and won $180,000. Sunday morning, he completed the last nine holes of the third round in the rain-delayed tournament with that chip into the cup at No. 18 to enter the final round two shots behind Lyle, the 54-hole leader.

The temperature was barely above freezing at the time, and it never rose much all day.

Hale Irwin, who was lucky to be playing at all this week after being struck over the right eye by a golf ball Wednesday, finished third, a stroke behind Lyle.

Calcavecchia became the second man to win two events on the 1989 tour, and this was only the fifth event of the year. Steve Jones won the first two tournaments but has failed to make the cut twice since then. Calcavecchia has a tie for fourth to go with his two victories, and has not missed a cut.

"It's a great start to the year," Calcavecchia said. "I didn't plan on it this way. I really didn't think I had it in me."

But the crowd-pleaser who goes for broke on all shots said: "I was chipping in all over the place. When I chipped into 12, I thought that's what you do when you win.

"The way I play golf, a lot of things can happen. I can win or I can miss the cut."

Referring to Lyle, who edged him by that shot in the Masters, Calcavecchia said: "He's a great player. I've played some of my best golf playing with Sandy. I just hope I can be playing up the 18th hole at the Masters with him this year."

Lyle, Calcavecchia, Irwin and Couples arrived this very cold morning in a tie for the lead. Couples had seven holes to play to complete his third round, and the other three were nine holes from the final round.

Lyle made the most of the early-morning golf, even though he said it took him three or four holes to begin driving properly because his hands were so cold.

The temperature was in the mid-30s when the men arrived at Riviera at sunrise. Even after the sun beamed down from a clear sky, it never got very warm.

Three birdies on the back nine put Lyle into the lead going into the final round shortly before noon. An 8-iron to two feet at the par-4 13th hole gave Lyle his first birdie and a 15-footer for birdie 3 at No. 15 gave him his second.

Then he hit a 9-iron third shot to a dozen feet from the hole at the par-5 17th and dropped the putt. He completed the round at 68 for a total of 202.

Calcavecchia moved into second place on a big swing of shots at No. 18, when he chipped into the cup for a birdie 3 and Irwin stumbled to a double-bogey 6 on that difficult finishing hole of 447 yards.

"It certainly was nice making a birdie there when I could easily have bogeyed," Calcavecchia said. "Now I'm going in only two shots back instead of being four shots behind Sandy."

Chaps face NMMI 7:30 tonight at Chap

From Staff Reports

Midland College hosts New Mexico Military Institute at 7:30 p.m. today at the Langford Chaparral Center and although the teams are in the second half of the Western Junior College Athletic Conference season, it's the first meeting of the year between the teams.

The December game was weathered out and will be played Feb. 18 at Roswell, N.M.

The Chaps, tied for second place with Howard College at 6-4, will not only be striving to keep pace with the Hawks, but will be endeavoring to bounce back from an overtime loss at Levelland Thursday.

Coach Reggie Franklin's Chaps came oh-so-close to a sensational week that would have thrust the team into the thick of the race for one of the top two spots.

Monday, led by Charles McCovery's 37 points, MC, trailing 17-4 at one point, stormed to a 102-93 victory over the Hawks.

Thursday, the Chaps came from 19 back in the second half to force overtime with second place South Plains College before losing 91-84.

The same night Howard was losing by three to first place Odessa College, so the status quo of the battle for third remained.

Sport Briefs

Porsche back in Daytona win circle

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — Porsche regained its hold on the Daytona 24 Hours as Derek Bell of Britain, Bob Wollek of France and American John Andretti Sunday won the closest finish in the 22-year history of the race.

The Porsche 962 prototype, a model no longer being produced, has won four of the last five 24-Hours. The winners, outlasting and outrunning state of the art Jaguar and Nissan prototypes, gave Porsche its 12th Daytona 24 Hours victory in 13 years.

A Jaguar XJR-9 broke Porsche's string last year and an XJR-9, co-driven by Price Cobb, John Nielsen of Denmark, Andy Wallace of Britain and Jan Lammers of The Netherlands, battled for the lead through the final four hours.

Several times, the British-built car crept within sight of the Porsche. But, each time an exchange of scheduled pit stops pushed the challenger back.

Tennis

FORT MYERS, Fla. — Already assured of victory in its first-round Davis Cup match with Paraguay, the United States completed a 5-0 sweep with a pair of singles victories Sunday. Andre Agassi defeated Francisco Gonzalez 6-2, 6-4 and Michael Chang beat Hugo Chapacu 5-7, 6-0, 6-1.

TOKYO — Martina Navratilova defeated Lori McNeil 6-7 (3-7), 6-3, 7-6 (7-5) in the championship match of the $300,000 Pan Pacific Open Sunday.

Football

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Joe Morrison, head football coach at South Carolina and a star for the New York Giants during the 1960s, died Sunday night of a heart attack. He was 51.

Morrison had been playing racquetball at the university and was found collapsed in the shower, Providence Hospital spokeswoman Dawn Catalano said.

Morrison played in the NFL for the Giants from 1959-72 as a running back and receiver. He compiled a 101-72-7 record in 16 seasons as head coach at Tennessee-Chattanooga, New Mexico and South Carolina, where he spent the last six seasons.

Iowa prolongs misery of Illini, 86-82

Associated Press

IOWA CITY, Iowa — Ed Horton had 26 points and 17 rebounds and Matt Bullard gave Iowa, 17-4 and 5-3, a big lift in his first game in eight weeks as the ninth-ranked Hawkeyes defeated No. 2 Illinois, 18-3 and 5-3, 86-82 in the Big Ten.

Iowa used a 17-2 run to rally from an eight-point deficit in the first half, then pulled away in the second half behind the scoring of Horton and B.J. Armstrong after Illinois had battled back to tie the game.

Horton, who has scored 20 or more points in 10 of the past 11 games, hit two straight baskets to break a 57-all tie midway through the second half. That started a 12-3 burst that gave Iowa a 69-60 lead with 7:21 left, and Illinois never got closer than three points after that.

Earlier in the day, the Des Moines Register reported that three Iowa basketball players were enrolled in drug treatment programs last summer. University officials, citing a federal statute and confidentiality policies, refused to identify the players, and Coach Tom Davis declined to comment on his team members' drug use.

College Basketball

Arizona 85, Wash. 68

SEATTLE — Sean Elliott scored 21 points and No. 4 Arizona, 17-2 and 11-1, finished with a flurry to beat Washington, 9-11 and 5-6, in the Pacific-10 Conference.

Gtown 69, Nova 55

PHILADELPHIA — Jaren Jackson scored 27 points, but it was a stifling man-to-man defense that lifted sixth-ranked Georgetown, 17-2 and 7-1, over Villanova, 12-10 and 6-3, Sunday in a Big East game.

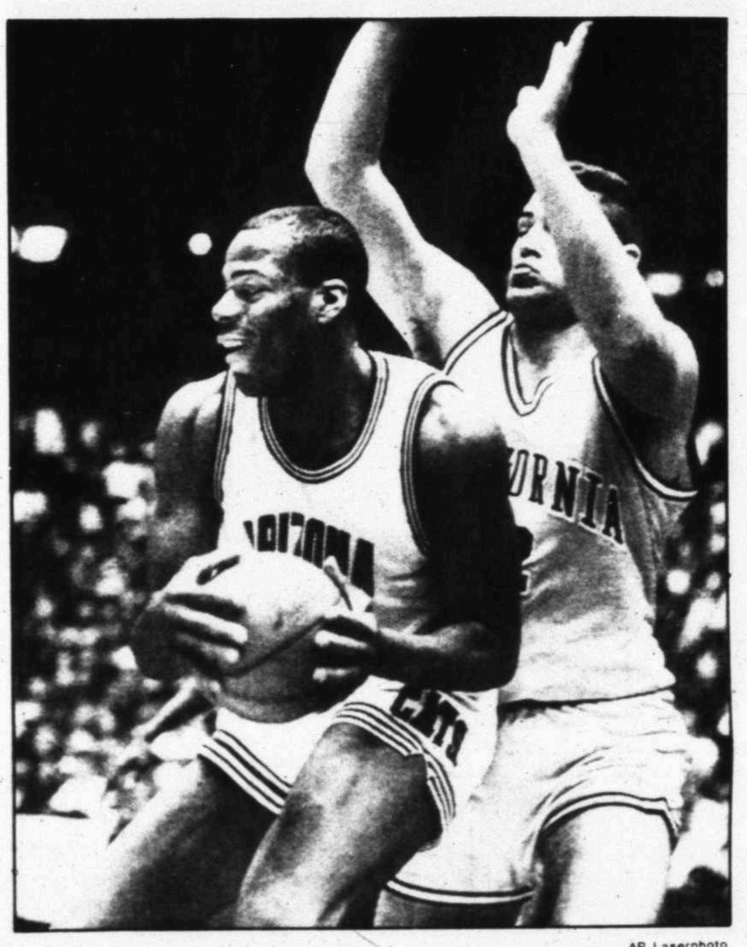

Alonzo Mourning, Georgetown's 6-foot-10-inch freshman who leads the nation in blocked shots with a 5.5 average, blocked eight as the Hoyas' defense bottled Villanova's inside game and forced the Wildcats to take low percentage outside shots. Freshman Dikembe Mutombo also blocked two, giving the Hoyas 10 for the game.

Rice 67, UH 66

HOUSTON — David Willie scored 18 points, including the field goal that put Rice, 9-11 and 3-6, ahead, to lead the Owls over crosstown rival Houston, 12-9 and 4-5, in a SWC game Sunday. The Cougars had a chance to win the game with five seconds left, but guard Derrick Daniels missed an 18-foot jump shot.

Chaps' pair loses in finals

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — In men's doubles, Slagler (Fla.) College's Per Asklund and Michael Malvebo, the defending NAIA doubles champs, edged Tonny Van de Pieterman and Amine Boustani of Midland (Texas) College, 4-6, 6-2, 6-4, in the men's doubles finals at the National Small College Tennis Championships Sunday.

Christina Bokelund of Southern Illinois-Edwardsville and Lander (S.C.) College's Wade McGuire won the women's and men's singles titles at the National Small College Tennis Championships Sunday at the 98th Street Racquet Club.

Bokelund will be in the women's National Indoor field thanks to her comeback 2-6, 6-4, 6-1 victory over Odessa (Texas) College's Melissa Nelson, who is ranked No. 1 among junior college tennis players.

Bokelund and George are ranked No. 1 in Division II and have won consecutive NCAA doubles titles, while Cass and Nelson are No. 1 in the junior college Volvo rankings.

The event is the only national championship in any sport which matches players from NCAA Divisions II and III, NAIA and junior college schools against one another, sponsors said.

McGuire's 6-2, 6-2 victory propelled him into the National Intercollegiate Indoor Championships Feb. 9-12 in Bloomington. That event features the top 32 Division I players in the country.

NE La. cagers spend night in bus

MONROE, La. (AP) — The road loss to South Texas wasn't the worst part of the trip for Northeast Louisiana's men's basketball team, which spent the night after the game stranded in a bus.

Both the men's and women's teams played Saturday in San Marcos, Texas. The women weren't scheduled to leave until Sunday, and put that departure off until at least Monday because of freezing rain and sleet.

They got about 35 miles, to Harwood, Texas, when the slick road forced them to the side of the road, where they spent the night.

"There were a bunch of trucks and stuff pulled over, so they just pulled in with them," said Bob Anderson, sports information director for Northeast Louisiana. He said the motor was kept running to keep the heater going.

In the morning, he said, the driver discovered that the brakes wouldn't work because condensed water had frozen in the bus's air pressure line.

"They talked with some of the truckers, and the truckers called police," he said.

State police called the Rev. Sam Douglas, pastor of the First Baptist Church in Gonzales, Texas — about 10 miles from Harwood — to ask if he could help the team to a motel in Gonzales.

Douglas and the church's youth director came out in a church van and station wagon, he said. They took the players and coaches to the motel, then came back and got their luggage, he said.

Weather permitting, the coaches hoped to get both teams back home Monday, he said. If the bus isn't fixed, he said, the men will travel with the women's team, which won its game 89-73.

Battles

"How can they call Bull Durham a baseball movie?" wisps of smoke spiraled from his ears. "Baseball! It wasn't about baseball. It was about sex."

The distraught sportswriter said "sex" like it was a four-letter word.

"What do you mean, it was about sex. It was a great baseball movie," the film about minor league baseball was defended and where has Patterson been all this time that he just got around to reviewing Bull Durham?

"That scene in the shower. I never saw anything like happen at Angel Stadium," he protested.

Still, Bull Durham caught the flavor of the minors, if for no other reasons than its on location sites and the behavior nuances that are so appropo of the minor leagues.

ROBERT REDFORD'S arc-light shattering home run in The Natural was pure hokum until Kirk Gibson spooked the skeptics in the recent World Series, by not only duplicating the feat, but limping it one step further into the realm of absurd fiction.

And now, along comes Eight Men Out, a tale of the 1919 Blacksox scandal, which was gone before there was an opportunity to review it.

Every one knows a football movie from the 1930s wasn't worth watching if Jack Oakie and Toby Wing weren't in it and this one would have become a dark screen if the name of Lyle Talbot hadn't appeared in the credits.

I was to work with Lyle and Gladys George, who made a film career as the tough, gravel-voiced blonde with the heart of gold, several years after the making of College Coach.

IT'S NOT what you think....well, on second thought, it's exactly what you think. Lyle and Gladys, as we called them, were starring in a Los Angeles stage production of Personal Appearance and I was a college-kid usher.

I'd always been told that Lyle was a "matinee idol", but in this film he was the villainous halfback. He had the pigeon-toed walk even then, but not quite the bulk he was to carry later.

USC's unbeaten Trojans of 1932 supplied the beef cake for the film and the Trojan squad included Marion Morrison and Ward Bond, the guy he used to beat up on when Marion became better known as the Duke of the westerns.

But they were just extras, walkons, the air of authenticity. The real heroes were a babyfaced Dick Powell, the star halfback, and the evil Talbot, who not only had his eyes on Dick's headlines, but the coach's wife.

THE COACH? Who else but Pat O'Brien.

The plot was simple enough. Pat was hired to compile an all winning season, beat over-bearing, arrogant State in the big game and thereby raise funds to construct a new stadium, one to replace the rundown relic that was being used and big enough to handle a decent crowd.

"Daa, I dunno."

"Psychology? Can't you make it something easier. I can't even spell it."

One team had our heroes down 6-0 at half. Pat stepped before the blackboard and, as only he and Knute Rockne could have delivered the lines, he pointed to No. 21 on the board.

Pat, surely my memory is fault-...Pat couldn't have played a role like this with Rockne in his future, suspected he'd overdone the pep talk when his players killed the offending 21 on the first play of the second half.

IT WAS enough to upset the faculty and powerful alumni, who were spurred into reluctant action.

All agreed Pat would have to go, but one cool voice emerged to calm the stormy waters. He suggested O'Brien be give another chance, "only he'll have to win with college boys." His players, it was decreed, would have to start attending classes.

YOU PROBABLY can guess the rest of the story. Powell, who had quit the team to concentrate on his studies, came down out of the stands to win the big game against State on the last play.

O'Brien not only retrieved his wife from Talbot, by this time exposed for the bounder he was, but with his mission accomplished, considered another college whose program was in disrepair. The perks included a handsome radio contract and new house that went with it, fully paid for by expectant alumni.

What was hard to swallow was the part about the stadium. Film clips of USC games were used and they were playing in the LA Coliseum, 106,000-capacity, which had been just completed for the 1932 Olympic games.

Lift Line

By PAUL WALLACE

Some terms may be common to frequent skiers, but to the first time visitor to the slopes, they may be Greek.

These terms refer to the conditions on ski slopes and have a decided effect on the amount of enjoyment or fear encountered on a trip down the mountain.

"New" is the term for the measure of natural snow which has fallen in the last 24 hours. T represents a very small amount of new snow.

"Hard Packed" is snow which can be chiseled out and used in your after-ski drinks (quite hard and very slick). Hard Packed snow requires the use of skis with an edge. Sharpening ski edges so that when your mind says turn and the message reaches your feet, the skis will cut into the snow and allow you to turn from a high speed downhill position to an area on the side of the trail where, hopefully, you can ski into a snowbank.

Picture Hard Pack as the rocklike pillow you took to camp or on campouts as a kid.

"Packed Powder" is an elusive term for snow that was once fresh and soft, but has been groomed and regroomed for days and is "fluffed up like an old feather pillow." For those who did not grow up during the heyday of feather pillows, this is somewhat soft, with some lumpy spots.

A Packed Powder slope is uniform over at least 80 percent of the trail. Skiers can feel "in control" until they reach the 20 percent of the trail which is harder or softer than the rest. This change can throw unwary skiers off balance and on their duff.

With this information firmly locked in the brain, you know that "powder/packed powder" describes the condition where a measurable amount of snow has fallen during a 24-48 hour period, and over a recent base of packed powder.

As a rule, snow information received from ski areas should be tempered with a little common sense. How can an area such as Aspen Highlands, with a trace of new snow, have the same slope conditions as Steamboat Springs, which had six inches of snow during the same period.

Remember, be prepared to adjust to changing conditions when you arrive to ski. However, almost any skiing condition is great, if you have waited a year or a lifetime for this experience.

UTEP's Haskins credits cheering

Associated Press

The coach at Texas-El Paso says it's the cheering that did it.

UTEP Coach Don Haskins told Miner fans at a special news conference that they would have to cheer louder at games.

The fans obliged, and the Miners went on to defeat the conference-leading Lobos 73-60, led by Tim Hardaway and Prince Stewart with 25 points each.

"The crowd tonight was out of sight," Haskins said. "It really helped us. Do you think they can follow it up next Saturday (against Wyoming)?" he asked.

It was a key game, because the Lobos could have almost wrapped up the Western Athletic Conference title with a victory.

In other games Saturday, Air Force defeated San Diego State 87-69, Colorado State beat Wyoming 58-48, and Miami, Fla., beat Brigham Young 107-86. Earlier in the week, Hawaii beat Wyoming 69-59, Colorado State beat San Diego State 67-47, and Utah defeated Brigham Young 90-89 on Thursday, New Mexico beat Miami 110-93 on Wednesday, Air Force beat Hawaii 86-79 on Tuesday and San Diego State beat Wyoming 69-61 on Monday.

New Mexico still leads the conference with seven wins and two losses in the conference, UTEP is second at 6-3, Colorado State is third at 6-4, followed by Air Force, 5-5, Hawaii, 5-5, Utah 4-4, Brigham Young 3-5, San Diego State 3-7, and Wyoming at 2-6.

Colorado State Coach Bob Grant and his team managed to dodge the shot clock to beat Wyoming in a low-scoring game, but Wyoming coach Benny Dees said the strategy almost worked.

Grant wasn't complaining.

"I thought Wyoming's game plan was excellent," he said. "I never dreamed he'd play me that way. We had to go inside, inside, inside and hope they didn't get a lead. They just needed a little more confidence."

For Air Force, it was Raymond Dudley who again led the team in scoring, for the 21st time this season.

Dudley had 35 points, helping the team to their 87-69 win over San Diego State.

Chad Kimble scored a career-high 22 points and became the first Air Force player other than Dudley to score 20 points in a game this season.

This week, Wyoming takes on New Mexico, Air Force is at UTEP, Utah travels to Hawaii and Brigham Young plays at San Diego State on Thursday, while Utah plays San Diego State, Air Force is at New Mexico, Wyoming plays UTEP, Brigham Young plays at Hawaii and Colorado State is at Oral Roberts on Saturday.

Walliser wins

VAIL, Colo. — Switzerland's Maria Walliser added a gold medal to her collection of trophies Sunday, winning the women's downhill by 1½ seconds over Canada's Karen Percy at the World Alpine Ski Championships.

Walliser, successfully defending the title she won at the last World Championships in 1987, burst down Vail Mountain's International course in 1 minute 46.50 seconds. Percy's time was 1:48.00, just one-hundredth of a second in front of bronze medalist Karin Dedler of West Germany. The United States' best hope, Pam Fletcher of Acton, Mass., finished off the pace at 1:49.67.

Boxing

LAS VEGAS — Marlon Starling of New York and Mark Breland of Hartford, Conn., each captured welterweight titles at the Caesars Palace Sports Pavilion Saturday night. Starling, 44-5-1, stopped Lloyd Honeyghan of Britain at 1:19 of the ninth round and became the World Boxing Council champion. Honeyghan is now 33-2.

Track

FAIRFAX, Va. — Jackie Joyner-Kersee set an American record of 7.81 seconds in the 60-meter hurdles Sunday at the Mobil One Invitational, breaking the record of 7.88 she set last year at the same meet.

Said Aouita of Morocco, who holds four world outdoor records, recorded a time of 13:22.56 in the 5,000 meters. Ireland's Marcus O'Sullivan took the mile in 3:58.06.

MOSCOW — Radion Gataullin broke his world indoor pole vault record Saturday by clearing 19 feet, 9 inches at the Winter Championships at Gomel in the Byelorussian republic.

Shivering Texans can count their blessings

Sure, it's cold and it ruined WT fishing over the weekend, but you've got to put things in their proper prospective. After all, it's cold in Amarillo all the time, even if you've just driven from the Colorado Rockies in July.

It was someplace like Caribou, Me., Cutbank, Mont., or maybe Fraser, Colo., two Texans awoke in their hunting cabin one morning and couldn't see out. It was covered by snow, the wind was howling and it was 30 below.

But rather than complain, one Texan turned to his pal and wowed, "If it's like this here, can you imagine what it must be like in Amarillo."

Last week, spring like temperatures contributed to increased fishing activity at Lakes J.B. Thomas and Lake Spence, but Friday Midlanders woke up thanking their lucky stars they weren't in Amarillo.

Before the icy blasts from the tundra hit West Texas, Daniel Milburn of Midland set a black bass record at Spence with a 10 pound six ouncer. Jan. 30 that record went by the boards when Odessa's C.M. Riggs pulled in an 11-3 monster out of Wildcat Fish A Rama.

At Spence, striped bass were in the intermediate range while white bass were on the move. Bill Morgan, Midland, took a 10 3/4 pound striper....John and Nelda Arcenaux of Midland took 100 white bass in a four-day seige... Tom Francis of Big Spring landed 25 crappie....Roy McLemdree, Big Spring, landed 9 and 12 1/2 stripers and Galyan Morgan, Midland, pulled in a 11 1/2 pound striper....

Hunting and Fishing Day will be Sept. 23 and the theme will be For the Tradition and For the Fun in recognition of the role that sportsmen play in our national heritage and the wholesome recreation enjoyed by millions.....

Edinboro goes 5 OTs to beat Cal, 128-122

EDINBORO, Pa. (AP) — It was a long night for Joe Miller, who played 63 of a possible 65 minutes, but it was a longer night for Edinboro as Miller led California, Pa., to a 128-122 victory in five overtimes, a record in the Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference.

Miller, a 6-foot-8 center and the league's leading scorer with a 24.2 average, scored a career-high 42 points for California Saturday night. But Tim Brown, who played 62 minutes, was the hero of the fifth overtime, scoring six points to give the Vulcans the victory after about 3½ hours of play.

California moved to 4-2 in the PSAC Western Division and 15-5 overall. Edinboro fell to 2-4 and 9-10.

The teams were called for a combined 76 fouls, with California going 46 of 64 from the line and Edinboro 28 of 35. Edinboro lost seven players to fouls; California lost three.

Freshman Erin Brown led Edinboro with 28 points, scoring all his points in regulation and fouling out in the second overtime.

The game was the longest in PSAC history. There have been several four-overtime games in the league, the most recent last season when West Chester defeated Kutztown 103-101 on Feb. 24, 1988.

Berg captures Japanese slalom

FUJIMI, Japan (AP) — Sweden's Mikael Berg beat Ewald Zirbisegger of Austria in the final Sunday and won the $30,800 Yanase-Pisten Cup slalom race, fourth of 10 duel slalom ski races on Japan's professional circuit.

Zirbisegger won the first race in 36.767 seconds, beating Berg by 0.51 seconds, but fell in the second race on a 360-meter (1,188-foot) course at Fujimi Panorama Ski in Nagano.

Brother vs. Brother in NHL all-star game

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — Joe and Brian Mullen saw a lot of their boyhood friends from New York's "Hell's Kitchen" go bad. As members of opposing sides in Tuesday night's NHL All-Star game, the hockey-playing brothers couldn't be going much better.

"It's definitely amazing, and having Brian there makes it twice as good," said Joe Mullen, Calgary Flames left wing who will be wearing a Campbell Conference uniform at the Northlands Coliseum.

Brian, right wing with the New York Rangers, will be playing for the Wales Conference.

THE TWO hockey-playing sons of Tom Mullen, one-time maintenance man at Madison Square Garden, have come a long way since growing up in one of New York's roughest sections.

"I saw a lot of guys going the other way," Joe said. "I know that a lot of my friends are either dead or in jail. My mom and dad deserve a lot of credit."

Fortunately for Joe and Brian, they not only had strong parental guidance and the close friendship of their brothers and sisters, but a friendly playground across the street from their home.

There, they honed their hockey skills on roller skates. Ice time was a little hard to come by in Hell's Kitchen on the west side of Manhattan.

As the big brother by five years, Joe set the example for Brian, and the pace as well.

BOTH Mullens came into the NHL touted as goal-scorers, but they took different paths.

Joe played at Boston College and for three seasons with Salt Lake of the Central Hockey League. In 1982, he became the only player ever to score 20 goals in the minors and 20 in the NHL in the same season, when he played with the St. Louis Blues.

Since then, Joe has scored 40 or more goals a season for five straight years and appears a cinch to make it six this year. He was traded to Calgary in 1986.

Brian, meanwhile, played for the Universty of Wisconsin and spent five seasons with the Winnipeg Jets. His trade to the Rangers two summers ago brought him home to the team he loved as a boy and for whom he worked as a stickboy.

LIKE HIS brother, Brian has evolved into a more complete player.

The Campbell Conference features three players from Los Angeles and three from Edmonton in the starting lineup: center Wayne Gretzky, defenseman Steve Duchesne and left wing Luc Robitaille from Los Angeles, and goaltender Grant Fuhr, defenseman Kevin Lowe and right wing Jari Kurri from Edmonton.

Lemieux had three goals and three assists in a record six-point performance last year in St. Louis, including the game-winner in overtime, to give the Wales Conference a 6-5 victory and a 10-2 lead in the series.

Only other victory for the Campbell Conference came in 1981, 4-1 in Los Angeles.

Black book reveals call girl ring in NFL

CLEVELAND (AP) — The claim by police that prostitutes from a call girl ring also worked in other National Football League cities has prompted Cleveland Browns officials to notify the NFL about the case.

The names of two Browns stars and a Cleveland Indians player appear in a black book seized by police from the alleged ringleader, the (Cleveland) Plain Dealer said Sunday.

Kevin Byrne, a Browns' spokesman, said the Browns' director of security, Ted Chappelle, telephoned NFL security personnel on Wednesday to alert them to allegations that have surfaced since the Jan. 13 arrest of Karen M. Panek, 37.

Panek, who pleaded innocent Friday to a charge of promoting prostitution, allegedly operated a ring involving some 40 suburban women under the guise of escort services in Cleveland and Akron.

PANEK'S lawyer, Stuart H. Lippe, has insisted that a black book containing about 100 names that was seized by police is only an address book.

Among the names in the black book are quarterback Bernie Kosar and cornerback Hanford Dixon of the Browns and Indians outfielder Mel Hall, The Plain Dealer said.

Browns officials suggested Dixon's name was in the book because of his involvement with a March of Dimes fund-raising auction in which Panek bid $600 for a date with him. They said Panek became angry when Dixon refused to go through with the date.

Browns owner Art Modell said he had agreed to talk about the appearance of players' names in the black book "because this involves the reputations of some very important people to us."

Byrne, who said he discussed the black book with Kosar last week, described the quarterback as extremely upset that his name had become associated with Panek by somehow getting into her black book. Byrne said Kosar had told him he didn't remember ever meeting Panek and didn't know why his name was in the book.

MODELL said he was told by Cleveland police that Panek and Kosar lived in the same condominium complex in Rocky River.

"First, I'm going to say that Bernie Kosar is the one man of the highest moral standards I know in my experience in my 28 years with the Cleveland Browns," said Modell.

"All we know about Kosar is that everybody and his brother wants to reach him," Modell said. "In 1988, he changed his telephone number 12 times. He changes his telephone number as often as I change shirts."

"Yes, I knew the lady (Panek)," he said. "We both lived in the Westlake Manor (in Rocky River) about three years ago. We were neighbors who said hi and bye to each other. I never saw her outside (socially)."

Taiwan, France, Canada gain finals

SINGAPORE (AP) — Taiwan, France and Canada won their regional tournaments Sunday, advancing to the finals of the DunhiCup world golf tournament.

Each also won $30,000 for their victories, by identical 2-1 scores. Taiwan upset top-seeded New Zealand in the Asia-Pacific zone, Canada beat Argentina for the American zone title and France stunned Sweden for the European zone's qualifying spot in the Sept. 26-Oct. 1 finals at St. Andrews, Scotland.

In the finals in Scotland, the winners here will join teams from Ireland, Scotland, England, Wales, Australia, Spain, the United States and Japan, all selected because of their performance last year.

In a four-team preliminary competition in Scotland to select two more teams for the finals, Colombia will play African zone winner Zimbabwe and South Korea will face Italy.

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — If Barry Sanders' father has his way, the Heisman Trophy winner won't return to Oklahoma State for his senior season.

"If he would ask me, I would tell him not to come back," William Sanders said Sunday night from his home in Wichita, Kan. "But he hasn't asked me."

Sanders says he has made a decision about whether to try his luck in the NFL but isn't saying what his decision is.

"I'm not discussing that right now," Sanders told The Associated Press by telephone Sunday night from Stillwater.

The elder Sanders said he doesn't believe his son has anything to gain by staying in college for another year.

"If he won the Heisman Trophy again this year, he couldn't get any more money or market himself any more than they are already," he said.

"I was always one to say it's important to go to school and get your education. But you go to school to get an eduction to get money, and I think Barry's the kind of person who would go back and get his degree."

rounding his son has "gotten out of hand" in Stillwater, making it difficult on Barry.

The elder Sanders said he had not talked with his son in a week, but plans to speak with him today.

"I'm gonna give him some advice," William Sanders said. "Whether he'll take it or not, I don't know."

The Dallas Morning News reported Sunday that Sanders, a true junior, has told one NFL team that he definitely will turn professional. Since Sanders has never redshirted, he would not be eligible for the regular NFL draft this spring unless he decides to challenge it in the courts. He could, however, apply for the summer supplemental draft.

Sanders, who set national records last season by rushing for 2,628 yards and scoring 39 touchdowns, previously had said he had no intention of leaving Oklahoma State even though the Cowboys recently were placed on four years' probation by the NCAA.

Asked whether it was unfair to say that he was wavering on his original statement that he would return, Sanders said, "It's unfair to make any opinions or speculation on it."

Asked when he would make a decision, he said, "I've already made it."

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 1989

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Changes in the economy favor your efforts. Look for an upswing in business. Restlessness and a desire for change will move you to action. You finally agree that it is time to make a break with the past. Those who have been busy sowing their wild oats now feel a need to settle down. A commitment seems more and more desirable. Get involved in politics and community service.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: musicman Eubie Blake, novelist Charles Dickens, actor Buster Crabbe, author Sinclair Lewis, Rev. Sun Myung Moon.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your hunches about a financial matter are right on target. A friend shares technical information that helps you increase profits. Someone offers you long-term security. There are probably several strings attached.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Mixed trends call for extra caution when handling business and financial matters. Creative and artistic projects could lead to a second income. Your personality is a big asset. Be your most charming self.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your honesty and sense of commitment will determine how well a long-term relationship fares. Be willing to extend yorself to a friend or relative who is in need.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Protect your ideas from those who might try to cash in on them. Drop a new "friend" who attempts to pressure you. Check your insurance coverage if expecting a new addition to the family.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Dress smartly and do your homework and you will feel confident at important meetings. Keep business entertainment expenses within reason. Romance is even sweeter the second time around. Avoid repeating earlier mistakes.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Make an inventory of your valuables and have them appraised. You may need to increase the insurance coverage. Looking your best at work pays unexpected dividends. Retirees find new ways to help out.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Travel is lucky for both business and romance. Be alert to unusual opportunities. An influential older person wants you to succeed. Welcome suggestions. Mate will respond to more TLC.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Promises will be kept. It is time to end one career and begin another. Travel helps you make up your mind about a current personal or professional relationship. Romance is in the air!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Loved one is in a cooperative mood. Ask for favors you have long wanted. Take advantage of a valuable suggestion made by an older person. Share the credit with the deserving.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A regrouping or new partnership could lead to a more productive and lucrative future. Be suspicious of someone who offers a sudden invitation. They could have ulterior motives. Watch your step!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): An authority figure wants to test your will power. Be on guard. Consult experts if you do not have the right answers. Apologizing when you are at fault will win you new respect.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You are able to reach out now and get the kind of help you need. Enormous changes lie ahead. Say exactly what you mean to avoid unnecessary embarrassment and expense. Clarity is essential.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A1043 ♡K ◇AK8742 ♣QJ
Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?
A.—While you have a very good hand, you have no fit for partner and your suit is not self-sufficient. For the moment, two diamonds is adequate. Beware of a potential misfit.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A1043 ♡5 ◇AKQJ42 ♣93
Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?
A.—This time you need have no fear about a possible misfit—your diamond suit stands on its own merits; it can serve as the trump suit even if partner is void! Jump to three diamonds to flash the slam signal at once, despite the fact that you have no support for partner.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KJ ♡A108643 ◇10 ♣A1092
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	2 ◇	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—What's the problem? Just rebid your six-card suit—two hearts. You are not strong enough to bid three clubs, which is a "high reverse" and shows extra values.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K6 ♡KQ107 ◇QJ762 ♣A7
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Even though it is unlikley that partner has four hearts, there is no reason why you should not complete the picture of your hand. Bid three hearts. You have no tenaces, so there is no reason why you should want to declare no trump, if that is to be the final resting place.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠762 ♡K10 ◇AQ93 ♣A654
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
3 ♣	Dbl	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—Since partner is likely to have length in both majors, chances for any large offensive bonanza should be discounted—we would be more interested if our red suits were reversed. It is simply a question of whether to convert for penalties. Although we are still 2-to-1 favorites to win the rubber, we feel a bid of three no trump has more to gain, but we don't fault anyone for electing to defend by passing.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AJ6 ♡1098 ◇543 ♣Q743
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♡	1 ♠	2 ◇	?

What action do you take?
A.—The modern way is to treat partner's overcall as if it were an opening bid. Since you would have raised an opening bid of one spade to two spades, make that bid now.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chance discovery of a cache of nearly forgotten photographs by Ansel Adams has yielded a new book with a haunting insider's view of the internment camps where more than 120,000 Japanese-Americans were held captive during World War II.

The insider was Adams himself, the renowned scenic photographer who left Yosemite National Park with his cameras in the fall of 1943 to visit an internment camp at Manzanar, in the windswept desert along the eastern edge of California's Sierra Nevada.

It was there that Adams made his first — and only — attempt to shoot a photo documentary. The photographer, sympathetic to the plight of the innocent inhabitants, published some of the pictures in "Born Free and Equal," a book he later wrote about Manzanar.

But the wartime public's reaction was hostile. Copies were burned in protest, and the photographer's shows were canceled. Adams let the copyright expire, and gave the negatives and hand-signed prints to the Library of Congress in the 1960s.

Wright came across a catalogue card listing the negatives of Adams' "Manzanar" pictures. Curious, he asked to see them.

"Up came about a dozen cases of 11-by-14 prints, about 240 of them, all hand-signed by Adams along with the negatives," Wright said.

"It was unbelievable. These pictures had been mentioned in several books about Adams, but I had only seen one or two of the published prints. Suddenly to see the whole collection was amazing."

Now, with access to rare and highly valuable photographs hidden away in a vault at the Library of Congress for two decades, Wright turned to friend John Armor, a constitutional lawyer who has studied the legal controversy over the wartime internment of Japanese-Americans.

Together, they reviewed piles of documents at the National Archives and the Library of Congress — some of them only recently declassified — and wrote a book illustrated with 90 of Adams' photographs from the Manzanar camp.

"Manzanar," containing a lengthy foreword by novelist John Hersey entitled "A Mistake of Terrifically Horrible Proportions," was published last November by Times Books, a division of Random House Inc.

All the principals who contributed to the book felt outrage at what happened to the more than 10,000 Americans of Japanese descent who were rounded up as security risks and shipped to Manzanar in the spring of 1942, a few months after Pearl Harbor.

Thousands more were herded into nine other "relocation centers" in California, Arizona, Utah, Colorado, Wyoming and Arkansas. They were crowded into tar-paper barracks, used communal toilets and had no telephones or automobiles, many of them staying there for 3½ years.

"So much we left behind," said one inmate, "but the most valuable thing I lost was my freedom."

Though invited to Manzanar by the camp director, an old friend, Adams was forbidden to photograph the barbed-wire fences or the guard towers with searchlights and machine guns that surrounded the camp city.

Last August, President Reagan signed legislation authorizing reparations of $20,000 in tax-free payments to each of the estimated 60,000 internment camp survivors. The Justice Department says it hopes to begin disbursing payments by next October.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ted Koppel said he welcomed a study released today that found his late-night news show, "Nightline," favors white conservative men as guests, but he added the report's authors were wrong to criticize the show.

The study of almost 2,500 guests on more than 850 episodes of the ABC-TV show found that 89 percent were men and 92 percent were white.

It also found that the 9-year-old news interview program virtually ignored labor unions, environmental and consumer advocates, anti-war activists, the working class and those who oppose U.S. foreign policy.

"I like studies like this," Koppel said. "I'm happy to see them, whether they are from the right or the left. They do give us an opportunity to re-examine what we do, how we do it.

STATE in brief

Study: Dallas, Tarrant counties most dangerous

DALLAS (AP) — With crime substantially on the rise, Tarrant and Dallas counties became more dangerous places to live in the 1980s, according to a newly-released study.

Criterion Inc., an Irving-based private demographic and economic consulting company, conducted a study examining population, income, crime and building trends in Dallas and Tarrant census tracts — 383 in Dallas and 190 in Tarrant.

The study updates a 1984 profile of Dallas County and is expanded for the first time to look at Tarrant County.

Total crime in Dallas County rose to 130.3 per 1,000 residents in 1987 from 98.7 per thousand in 1981, the study said. In Tarrant County, total crime jumped to 112.1 per thousand in 1987 from 88.8 per thousand in 1981.

The crime is concentrated within the city limits of Dallas and Fort Worth rather than in surrounding suburbs, according to the study. The area with the most crime is the Dallas Police Department's central division, which encompasses downtown and parts of Oak Cliff, east Dallas and south Dallas.

Fort Worth has more high-crime districts — those with 175 or more incidents per 1,000 people. But violent crime, including murder, rape, robbery and assault, is more widespread in Dallas, the study revealed.

AUSTIN (AP) — The second month of the 1989 Legislature starts this week, although lawmakers canceled today's sessions because of cold, icy weather.

Senate leaders were the first to announce Sunday that today's business would be postponed because of bad weather. House Speaker Gib Lewis later decided that the House would not convene, said Lewis press aide Tim Conger.

As Texas lawmakers enter their second month of work, more bills were being scheduled for a possible vote in the Senate and the House is concentrating on work in committees.

Another round of 1990-91 funding requests is expected from state agencies appearing before both Senate and House panels.

Senators, who have already passed a few bills to the House, had 10 proposals listed for action today.

The Senate Economic Development Committee will be looking at a bill that, according to Professional Insurance Agents of Texas, would Texas save consumers millions of dollars in car rental fees.

Wounded officer released

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — One man remained in a Brownsville hospital with multiple bullet wounds Sunday and two others were jailed in connection with a failed robbery attempt in which a law officer was wounded, authorities said.

Police officer Luis Ponce was injured in a Saturday gun battle and was released Sunday after being treated for a bullet wound in the right shoulder at Brownsville Medical Center, officials said.

The two uninjured suspects were charged with aggravated burglary and attempted robbery in connection with the incident at the Lopez Supermarket, police Sgt. Angel Gomez said.

Francisco Garcia, 21, and Guillermo Longoria Alverez, 22, both of Matamoros, Mexico, were being held at Brownsville city jail Sunday in lieu of $25,000 bond each on the burglary charge and $15,000 each on the attempted robbery charge, said police Sgt. Armando Martinez.

Jose L. Muniz, the injured suspect, remained hospitalized Sunday in serious condition, according to Martinez. Muniz, who suffered four bullet wounds, had been charged with aggravated robbery and burglary of a building, the sergeant said.

Discipline problems high

HOUSTON (AP) — Discipline problems within the Houston Independent School District are on the rise and teachers and school officials say some parents refuse to deal with their disruptive children.

Teachers say parents, who should be their partners, are at times ineffective or even obstacles in dealing with an unruly student.

"Probably all of them have no structure at home," Austin High School teacher Bernard Jackson said of the disruptive students. "When you pick up the telephone and say, 'I'm sorry, Mrs. Martinez, I'm having a serious problem with your kid, he's skipping class,' she'll tell you, 'I can't do anything with him.'"

"Sometimes, they just don't give a damn," he said. "One parent I called said, 'He doesn't live here anymore. I never see him anymore.' Sometimes the parents can't do anything."

Foundation helps students

ARANSAS PASS (AP) — They've just started school, but first graders in the Aransas Pass Independent School District already have money set aside for college.

Aransas Pass is shifting from a community known as the "Shrimping Capital of the World" to an educational center that guarantees financial aid to students who want to further their education.

Last month, school district officials and representatives of a private foundation announced a program to provide college and trade-school scholarships to public school children beginning with this school year's first-graders — the high school class of 2000.

Schools offering extensive security officer training

By NANCY STANCILL
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Texas trade schools are enrolling hundreds of students in costly security officer training courses that offer 10 times the amount of instruction required by the state and teach the use of riot batons, chemical agents and other techniques more appropriate to police work.

Six schools in Houston and nine in other Texas cities offer 300-hour programs to train security guards, though the Texas Board of Private Investigators requires only 30 hours of training for a security officer to be commissioned.

Some criminal justice experts and other officials contend that the schools are offering unnecessary and in some cases, dangerous instruction to stretch out those programs and tap federal funding. Federal programs require students to enroll in instructional programs of at least 300 hours to be eligible for grants.

"We don't allow anyone to carry big flashlights, use Mace and batons. I see that as a big red flag for serious liability."

— Jim Steinbeck
regional manager of ABM Security Services

And some contract security service officials say they would rather train their officers in-house than hire security guards with a "police" orientation.

"We don't allow anyone to carry big flashlights, use Mace and batons," said Jim Steinbeck, regional manager of ABM Security Services. "I see that as a big red flag for serious liability."

But trade school operators defended their training as thorough and said it helps their students get better jobs.

"Our course wasn't specifically designed for the sole reason of students getting a guaranteed student loan," said Roger Williams, vice president of Allied Education Corp. of California, which operates two Houston trade schools. "I don't know how the 300 hours was originally arrived at."

The 300-hour programs, which cost between $3,000 and $4,000, are heavily advertised, and some of the ads depict security officers strapping on gun belts and jumping into patrol cars with flashing lights and squealing tires.

Bob Kendrick, director of the University of Houston's Criminal Justice Center, said "The kind of person who is at tracted to that Dirty Harry image is the last person you'd want as a security guard," said Kendrick.

Curriculum materials bear out the policelike orientation, touting instruction in use of chemical agents, the riot baton and use of the flashlight in self-defense.

Houston Police Sgt. J.C. Mosier said he questions the need for that type of training.

"I don't know of a lot of instances where security guards would need defensive training with riot sticks and flashlights," he said.

Kendrick, who has researched and written extensively about security officer training, said most states require 30 hours to 40 hours of basic training for security officers.

Ken Nicolas, an investigator with the state board of private investigators, said nearly one-third of the security officers who apply to the state for commissions have criminal records. Those with convictions for felonies or misdemeanors involving moral turpitude are not commissioned. A commission allows a security officer to carry a firearm. Security guards who don't carry weapons are not required to have the 30-hour course.

Nicolas said the state board has approved about 200 security officer training programs.

District attorney proposes changes in jury selection

RICHMOND, Texas (AP) — A Fort Bend County prosecutor is hoping to get legislative support to change an existing statute and eliminate individual juror questioning in capital murder cases where the death penalty is not possible.

"It will save a considerable amount of time and money for taxpayers without compromising the rights of the defendant," said Sam Dick, Fort Bend County district attorney.

State Rep. Jim Tallas, R-Sugar Land, said it's a statute change that is long overdue.

"It's one of those things where you wonder why it wasn't done 20 years ago," Tallas said. "It's a terrible waste of county funds to start off with. And, in my opinion, it doesn't take anything away from the rights of the accused."

The proposed statute amendment would insert language that gives the state or the defendant the option of individual juror questioning in a capital felony case "in which the state's attorney has announced that he will qualify the jury for, or seek the death penalty."

Jurors in capital murder cases where death is not a possible punishment would be questioned as a group as they are in all other cases.

Dick pointed to the capital murder trial of former Bay City hairdresser Fran Turner where it took five weeks last year to pick a jury in retrial. It took less than half that time, he said, to try the case in which jurors — for a second time — found Ms. Turner guilty of the murder-for-hire of her oil consultant husband and sentenced her again to life in prison.

Because Ms. Turner, 45, received a life sentence in her first trial, it was the maximum punishment allowable in her retrial.

Dick said if the statute had been changed last year, the jury in Ms. Turner's case could have been selected in three days or less, he estimated.

Juries usually are selected from a panel of 40 to 100 people who are questioned in a group. In capital murder cases, prospective jurors are questioned individually.

SPELLING BEE 1989

The Reporter-Telegram will sponsor the 1989 Regional Spelling Bee April 15 at Midland College.

School spelling champions from Midland, Martin, Glasscock and Upton counties will compete for the top prize of an all-expenses-paid trip to the National Spelling Bee in Washington, D.C.

This daily column on words, their spellings, meanings and origins will be published through April 14. These words are typical of those used in bees but may not necessarily be used in competition.

priest — (noun) The word "priest" can be traced to the ancient Greek word "presbyteros," meaning elder, and literally, "leader of the herd." The word "priest" dates back to the early days of Christianity and today refers to those individusls who administer religious rituals and provide spiritual guidance. In the United States, a priest generally leads Catholic, Buddhist and Episcopal congregations. Other protcstant, Jewish and Moslem congregations call their religious leaders by other titles.

ATTRACTIVE, independent, professional, single, caucasian female, 45, no children, desires to meet sincere, intelligent, single male who is quietly self-confident does not smoke, and who wants emotional intimacy in his life. Have graduate degrees, flourishing, small business in Midland, and love dancing, traveling, theatre, and sharing candlelight dinners for two, sometimes cooked by me. I'm blond, 5'8" and slim. (MP-182)

RECENTLY single, 23 year old, brunette would like to meet caucasian man between 23-30 years. The man that answers this ad must be a stable person; like kids, like to go out as well as having quiet evenings at home. Would like to have lasting friendship. Please send recent photo and a list of your interests. (MP-183)

DISPLACED Northerners!! We have no family in town, but would enjoy the company of others. We like trying different restaurants, California wines, astronomy, snorkeling, reading and travel. We are a childless couple in our mid-thirties. Open to other interests. Irreverent sense of humor a plus. (MP-184)

LADY in mid 50's, very independent, self-supporting - owns home - enjoys traveling, gardening, history, museums, music, walking, reading, long phone conversations, quiet dinners at home or out, good cook, and likes dogs, fishing, pickups and Cadillacs. Would like to meet male caucasian 50-60, similar interests for friendship. Send phone number. I'll call. (MP-170)

TOO shy to go at it alone? So are we! Looking for a couple of caucasian, professional male buddies who are interested in good conversation, dancing, dining out and movies with two intelligent blond females who detest the bar scene! A sense of humor is a must! (MP-187)

VERY attractive, 40 year old full figured lady. Wants to meet nice gentleman in 40's or early 50's. I am a professional Person, I enjoy movies, quiet evenings, and some sports. I would like to meet someone with a sense of humor, well groomed, and nice manners. Looks are not important but security is. (MP-138)

SINGLE Hispanic Male, 30. Would like to meet interesting single females ages 27 to 35, for quiet evenings, dinners, a good movie, exchange interest ideas, or just a good friend. I'm a light smoker and social drinker. Send recent photo and phone number, describe self interests when responding. (MP-140)

BEAUTIFUL black woman (Physically and spiritually) 38, seeks a born-again, spirit-filled man 35 - 41, who loves sports, quiet times, physical fitness, and changes. Looking for that special someone who claims "El Shadai" as #1. (MP-139)

MALE, lower-mid 30's, modest, mildly attractive, non-native, non-smoker, likes movie going, 60's/70's Rock/Roll music, bike riding, swimming, speculative/free thinking with intermittent absurdity, sarcasm included an added bonus. Seeking a 25-35 year old slender/fit, child-free, non-smoker, non-religious, female with substantially similar interests/disinterests for most all the usual semi-meaningful relationship reasons. (MP-141)

PROFESSIONAL, well-educated woman, age 44, would like to meet interesting man, age 45-50, who likes variety, from tennis & aerobics to movies & theatre, from football to bridge & backgammon, no avid non-smokers please! Want caring, trusting relationship that could lead to marriage. (MP-143)

ATTRACTIVE, energetic, mature working woman interested in meeting personable man over 55 who has a good sense of humor. I like to travel, dance, cook, walk in the rain, build fires in the fireplace and watch football games. Would love to play golf and oil paint. Photo appreciated. (MP-144)

ATTRACTIVE female would like to meet an attractive male 26-35 who likes C&W music and movies. Please submit a photo and phone number when responding. (MP-145)

ROSES are red violets are blue. Need companionship and maybe its you. I am caucasian female in my 20's. I enjoy children and love the outdoors. I love Chows and playing pool; drinking mixed drinks and just shooting the bull. Easy to get along with typical class clown. Write me I won't let you down. (MP-146)

DIVORCED caucasian male, 41, 6'1", blue eyes ready to start life over again. Love to travel, stay at home, work around home & yard, hunting, fishing, movies & more. Wish to meet women 33-45 who want lifetime commitment. Reply with interests, type of work you do, phone number and photo if you have one. (MP-147)

30 YEAR old professional male seeks female for discreet romantic relationship. I am slim, energetic, romantic and fun loving with a good sense of humor. If you need a little T.L.C., please write me. (MP-148)

WOULD like to hear from single people of all ages to exchange ideas on how to cope with some of the dilemmas of being single in West Texas, (divorce, widowhood, single parenting, etc.) Maybe get your "input" on possibilities of organizing a free (or dirt cheap) singles club. (MP-149)

ARE there any females out there who wouldn't mind an inner-racial relationship? If so, I'm 6', cute but not conceited, young and professional minded. I enjoy sports, dancing and short trips. I don't drink or smoke, but can party. All young females that want a little color to brighten their life. Please respond. (MP-150)

SINGLE, professional, lady, 33, non-smoker, 5'9", attractive, no children, 1 dog. Would like to meet a special man. I enjoy a healthy lifestyle with an occasional indulgence, the outdoors, traveling, special dinners for two, movies, cold weather, and can be very happy just doing nothing with just the right man. If you're tall, single, 30-40, and share the same interests, I would like to meet you. (MP-155)

MALE 6' tall, dark hair, 175 lbs. seeks attractive female, 18-45 interested in hot tub parties, breakfast in bed, and wild nights, please send photo when responding. (MP-175)

VERY attractive caucasian female, 5'8", 120 lbs, 28 years old, seeks male for discreet relationship. Enjoys romantic evenings and movies. Please send phone number and let's get together! (MP-176)

DIVORCED 38 year old petite blond mother of two teens, considered attractive, intelligent and independent. Native West Texan with varied interests looking for caucasian male - early 30's to 40's with class, sense of humor, honest, romantic, sincere. Can enjoy a night on the town as much as a quiet evening at home. Photo if convenient, phone number. (MP-178)

ATTRACTIVE full-figured caucasian female, divorced, 34, 5'7". Like the outdoors, camping out, horse back riding, swimming, good movies or quite evenings at home. Would like to meet a non-smoker man 35-45. When replying send photo if possible. (MP-178)

CAUCASIAN male, 71, 5'11", 190 lbs, no alcohol or dope, S.S. plus small income, smoker but trying to quit. Not the circus type or show off. Mostly home type, one woman man. Has great possibilities of developing into permanent lifetime secure relationship, age not the most important factor. The woman makes the home. (MP-156)

WHITE male, age 37, attorney with major oil company in Midland seeks friendship and possible more. I like running (complete 5 marathons), bicycling, swimming, travel, television, and movies on the VCR. I either spend my time working out or being a couch potato. I'm 6', 165 pounds, sensitive, bashful, moustached, and interested in fun. (MP-157)

MALE, 40, lonely would like to meet single lady 35-42 for fun and romance. Bowling & fishing are some my interest. Phone & picture with reply. (MP-158)

IF you are a classy, stream-lined uninhibited, articulate educated lady who already has it made financially, who prefers fishing to dancing, who likes to share cooking in and dinning out alternating and couch potato football, mingled with quality romance, try me. No alcohol, tobacco users please. I'm 54, under 6', healthy, educated, positive ambitious, caucasian, plain and country. (MP-151)

I M new in Midland, 29 year old male, I smoke, but don't drink. I read science fiction voraciously and I am very interested in PC's. I abhor most physical exercise and I love to cook and eat. I'm looking for friends and intimates approximately my age with similar interests. (MP-152)

BRIGHT, attractive, young new mother would like to meet man who doesn't hate kids. I'm a tall, slim, green-eyed blond; loves sports, fitness, all music, and just laughing. Seeking attractive, physically fit man, early to mid-20's, who cares for more than just being "intimate". Are you curious? Because there's lots more. Send recent photo and phone number when responding. (MP-153)

WHITE female, 55, divorced, 5'5", 120 lbs. I enjoy the serenity of home life with movies, music, fire in fireplace, cookouts and reading. I also like traveling and sight seeing. I do smoke and drink socially. Seeking a companion with sincerity, and warmth, who enjoys conversation and a casual lifestyle. (MP-154)

HEAVY set, neat Christian lady, 50's with nice personality. Would like to become acquainted with intelligent healthy caucasian single man. Love to travel, enjoy learning new things and I play fourty-two. (MP-159)

WOULD like to meet single female 21-29 years. I'm 25 year old single man, 6'2", blue eyed blond, 185 lbs. I don't drink and not into the bar scene. I have been here for 2 years, but know very few people. If you are as lonely as I am, please send me a picture and I will do the same. (MP-160)

CAUCASIAN male, 45 years, blue eyes, brown hair, 165 lbs, 5'9", non-smoker, no drugs. Seeking one exclusive relationship with that one diamond of a lady for our remaining years together. Age and race not a factor. Home-centered, loyal, earnest and conservative. If this is you, then contact me please. When responding send photo if possible. (MP-161)

LONELY lady in late 60's. Still work part-time. I have brown hair & green eyes. Like to go sight seeing, travel, read & sew. I'm honestly sincere. Would like to meet a compassionate man, no drinker or drug user. (MP-166)

SINGLE male, considerate, successful professional in mid 30's, divorced father, not handsome, but good looking. Would like to meet an intelligent slim and attractive lady age 24 to 38. Kids ok. I like romance, travel, movies, theatre, books, rock & classical concerts. Possibilities range from dinner to eternity. Photo please. (MP-136)

YOUNG ambitious woman hopes to meet young single men between 20 and 30 years. Who enjoy dancing, dining out, movies and quiet evenings at home. I would love to meet you, send necessary information. (MP-137)

WANT to meet white family-oriented man, 38-48, who enjoys C&W dancing, travel, sports, cooking out and cozy evenings. Someone who sincerely desires a friend and companion. Smoker and social drinker okay. I am warm, witty, professional, attractive, well-educated, fun-loving, 5'6", green-eyed blond, single mom, 37. I hope you will write me soon. (MP-142)

MALE, lower-mid 30's, modest, mildly attractive, non-native, non-smoker, likes movie going, 60's/70's Rock/Roll music, bike riding, swimming, speculative/free thinking with intermittent absurdity, sarcasm included an added bonus.
