Beverly Shilling/Reporter-Telegram

Rescue efforts

Midland fire and police rescuers struggled unsuccessfully Wednesday afternoon to save 57-year-old Solomon Zepeda who was buried when the telephone cable trench he was working in collpased around him.

A construction worker from Big Spring was killed in northeast Midland Wednesday when a telephone cable ditch collapsed as he was working in it, police said.

Solomon Zepeda, 57, of 903 N. Goliad St. in Big Spring, was pronounced dead at the scene about 4:35 p.m. by Justice of the Peace Keith Jobe.

Zepeda was cleaning dirt out of a hole in the ditch located about a half mile north of Wadley Avenue off Lamesa Road when the wall caved in on him, about 3:50 p.m. Attempts by a backhoe operator to dig Zepeda out immediately after the cave-in were unsuccessful, Sgt. David Garcia, with the police department, said.

Preliminary attempts to dig the man out may have caused further injury, but Zepeda was probably already dead at the time, Garcia said. Failed attempts also may have buried Zepeda deeper and

Burglary reports decrease 36 percent

■ In the first half of 1990, residential and building burglaries decline sharply over the same period of the previous year, with officers crediting community awareness for a role in that trend.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Residential and building burglaries in Midland have dropped 36.5 percent in the first six months of 1990 compared with the same time period last year, according to a crime activity report by the Midland Police Department.

"We're thrilled and ecstatic to see that kind of decrease," Lt. Jerry Morris of the police department, said.

Morris said increased citizen awareness may be responsible for the decrease in addition to active police work and criminals remaining in penitentiaries.

The percentage of burglary offenses cleared by arrests also soared. In the first six months of 1990, 24 percent were cleared compared to only 11 percent in 1989.

A total of 674 burglaries were reported so far this year; 1,062 were reported in the same time period last year.

Although burglaries are second only to thefts in the number of crimes committed in Midland, Morris said burglaries are "probably our leading problem in property crimes" because theft encompasses a great variety of types.

In Midland County, the sheriff's office reports that residential and building burglaries rates stayed about the same. There were 129 burglaries with 20 cleared in the first half of 1990, compared to 123 last year with 25 cleared.

But the majority of this year's county burglaries occurred in April, May and June. Only 45 burglaries were committed in the first three months with a total of 84 in the last three.

"A lot of it relates back to people getting out of the penitentiary," Sheriff Gary Painter said. Painter added that the increase was also due to repeat offenses by the same burglars; two known suspects believed to be responsible for multiple burglaries have been apprehended and the burglary rate is expected to decrease accordingly.

Statistics for other crimes in the city and county did not vary significantly from this year to the same period last year with the exception of assaults.

The number of assaults was up in both

One charge

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A federal judge has dismissed three of four charges against a former Brownsville, Texas, honor student arrested in connection with 15 ritual slayings to protect a drug smuggling ring along the U.S.-Mexico border.

Honor student Sara Maria Aldrete Villareal, 25, was freed on her recognizance in the federal determination but is being held for trial on other state charges, her lawyer said Wednesday.

On May 6, 1989, Adolfo de Jesus Constanzo, 26, the alleged "godfather" of the cult, and his bodyguard were shot and killed as police closed in on their hideout in Mexico City.

Other members of the cult were arrested.,

The cult was accused of sacrificing its victims, including 21-year-old University of Texas student Mark Kilroy.

Barges collide

LINDEN, N.J. (AP) — A barge leaving an Exxon refinery struck a docked barge Wednesday and spilled about 37,000 gallons of oil, closing the spill-plagued Arthur Kill waterway, officials said.

At least half the oil escaped into the kill before booms could be set up, said Rick Fulton, a spokesman for the New Jersey Department of Environmental Protection.

Rivalry's role

Lee

NEW YORK (AP) — Sibling rivalry played a role in Spike Lee's latest film, "Mo' Better Blues."

The director's 29-year-old sister, Joie, stars in the film as Indigo, a teacher whose relationship with a trumpet player, portrayed by Denzel Washington, is challenged by another woman and his love for his music.

"We went at it all the time," Ms. Lee said in the Aug. 7 issue of US magazine.

But she loves the part her brother wrote for her.

"I think Spike has captured some sort of essence of me," she said. "And there are so few positive roles out there for women, let alone black women, that I'm grateful for it."

Lee's sister also had roles in his films "She's Gotta Have It," "School Daze" and "Do the Right Thing."

Friends feel polio victim chose to die

By Susan Hightower

DALLAS (AP) — One day after her 94-year-old father opened her iron lung, shot her to death, then committed suicide, family and friends of Alta Jeanne Drake said they're sure she wanted it that way.

In fact, they say the 61-year-old polio victim's fear of being institutionalized — her health was failing and her father's cancer was terminal — may have led her to devise the plan herself.

Sometime early Tuesday, retired oilman Ammy Harlin Drake opened the iron lung Jeanne had depended on for 39 years, shot her twice in the chest, returned to his lounge chair and shot himself with a .32-caliber revolver.

Family caretaker Helen Jackson found their bodies the next morning. They also found a note from Ammy Drake detailing funeral arrangements.

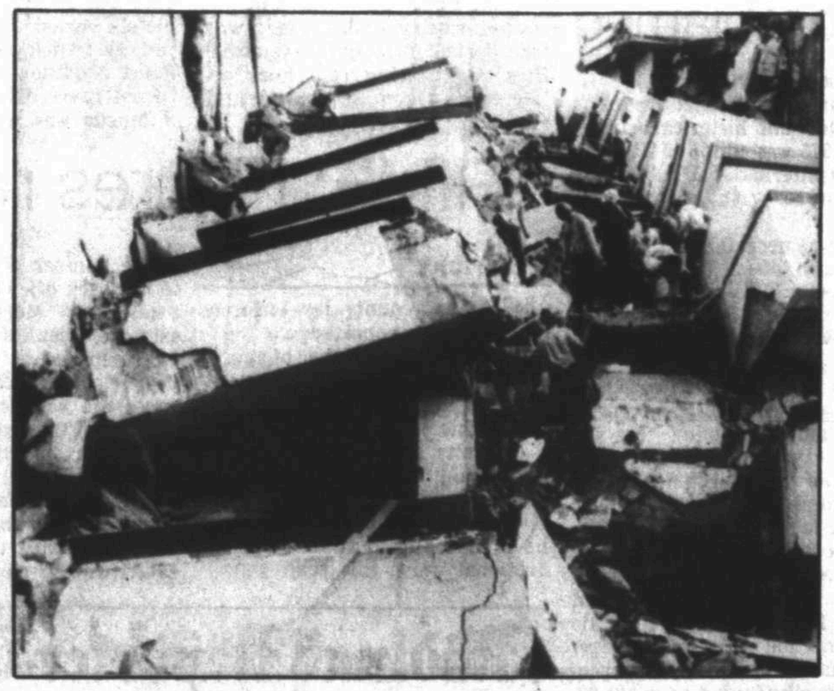

"The (note) indicated he couldn't take care of her anymore and that there was no one around to take care of her," said University Park Police Capt. E.L. Holman. University Park is a suburb of Dallas. The Dallas County Medical Examiners Office Wednesday ruled the death a homicide-suicide.

"They didn't want to be left one without the other. He took care of her so well," said longtime family friend and neighbor Elizabeth Spears, 79.

Ms. Drake was paralyzed by polio and had been confined to an iron lung since 1951, one year after she graduated from Southern Methodist University with majors in history and religion. She had married only six months before.

Her husband left her one week before Christmas 1956. Her mother, who learned she was going blind the same year Alta Jeanne contracted polio, died in 1973.

Crews working to clear roadway into hard-hit Baguio, Philippines

BAGUIO, Philippines (AP) — Strong aftershocks jolted earthquake-devastated areas in the north Wednesday as crews worked to clear a road in this hard-hit mountain resort. More bodies were dug out, raising the death toll to 376.

The number of dead was expected to rise sharply in Baguio, where hundreds of people were believed still trapped in rubble because of a lack of heavy equipment and emergency training.

She ordered officials to give top priority to clearing the roads so medicine, food and heavy equipment could be brought in. She also ordered city schools closed for a month.

Philippine families here await word

By Brian Pearson

The desperate struggle to free people trapped beneath buildings leveled after a strong earthquake hit the Philippines during the late 1960s left a vivid impression in Elizabeth De Guzman's mind.

Following the disaster, Mrs. De Guzman, a police officer there, used her hands to help sort through the rubble in search of victims.

Five years after she moved to Midland, Mrs. De Guzman has had to confront the memories of that experience.

She and her husband, Larry, are still awaiting word from her daughter and a number of relatives who live in Baguio, a Philippine city struck hard Monday by an earthquake which measured 7.7 on the Richter scale.

The quake, which left at least 279 people dead, was centered in the middle of Luzon island near Baguio, a city of more than 100,000.

"The city is incommunicado," Mrs. De Guzman said Wednesday. "I couldn't get hold of any member of the family."

Her youngest sister, two grandchildren and a number of nieces and nephews also reside in Baguio in addition to her daughter.

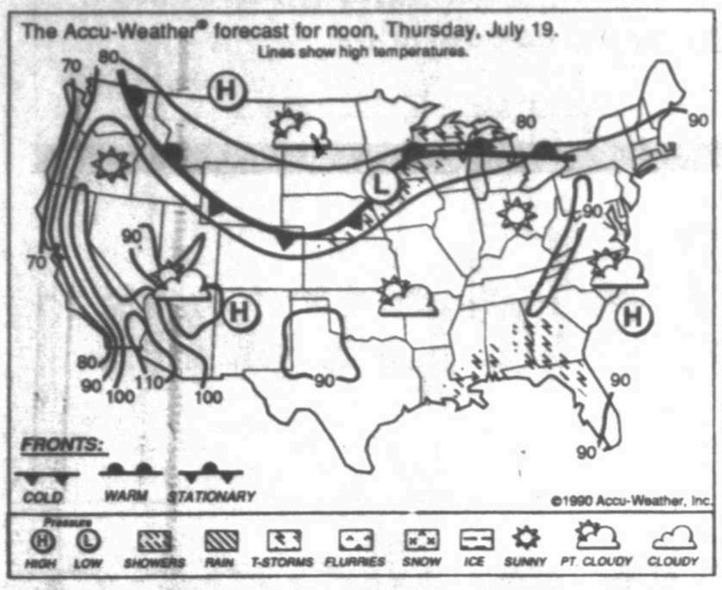

"We're all worried," she said. "We know my daughter might be in danger in the building she lives. It's a four-story building."

Mrs. De Guzman, 45, now a Midland Memorial Hospital security officer, said she remembers how slow rescue operations went when the earthquake

Weather Summary

High in lower 90s expected

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a high in the low 90s, a less than 20 percent chance of rain and winds from the southwest at 10 to 15 mph, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight is expected to be partly cloudy with a low near 70.

Friday will be partly cloudy and the high will be in the mid-90s.

Wednesday's high was 85 compared with the record high for that date of 111 in 1989. The overnight low was 71. Record low for that date was 61 back in 1947.

STATE

Heavy storms again prompted flash flood warnings and watches in South Central Texas Wednesday, with some highways still closed by high water.

The National Weather Service posted a flood warning for Val Verde County through Wednesday evening after storms capable of producing up to 2 inches of rain per hour moved north into the region.

Up to 6 inches of rain fell near Comstock earlier, the weather service said. The Texas Highway Department closed state Highways 163 and 189 and a farm-to-market road north of the area because of high water.

The flood watch area in the Hill Country extended along and west of a line from Carrizo Springs to Kerrville, including the Del Rio metropolitan area.

The upper-level, low-pressure area responsible for heavy rains that began Sunday was centered over West Central Texas. Forecasters expected the system to move west through Thursday.

Additional heavy rains could redevelop by early Thursday in western sections of the Hill Country, including Edwards, Uvalde, Real, Bandera and Kerr counties.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

Scientists track down sex gene

By Daniel Q. Haney
AP Science Writer

BOSTON — The body's sex trigger, the elusive gene that determines whether an egg will grow to be a boy or a girl, may have been found at last by scientists.

The gene is a switch that starts an embryo down the path to sexual development after eight weeks in the womb. Those who inherit the gene from their parents become male; those who don't become female.

Many scientists, though not all, believe that such a single master sex gene exists. But its precise location and nature have remained a mystery despite intense searching by several rival teams of researchers.

Tracking down the sex trigger might someday open ways of treating infertility and problems of sexual development. However, its greatest importance is likely to be the insight it will provide into one of the basic questions of biology.

The search competition seemed to be finished in 1987 when Dr. David Page of the Whitehead Institute in Cambridge, Mass., announced the apparent discovery of the gene, which he called ZFY. However, last December, a rival team from the Imperial Cancer Research Fund in London shot down the theory with strong evidence that Page's discovery is not the sex trigger, at least not all by itself.

Now, the London group has put forth its own nominee for the gene that makes a man a man and, by its absence, a woman a woman. In Thursday's issue of the British journal Nature, they announced the discovery of "sex-determining region Y," or SRY.

In their study, they say it is "proposed to be a candidate for the elusive testis-determining gene." But they are careful not to sound overly confident.

"The evidence is good so far, but I wouldn't stick my neck out until we have the rest of the data in," said Dr. Andrew Sinclair, the lead author of the latest research.

However, Page and some other researchers now speculate that a cluster of genes, not just one, is necessary for determining sex. If so, both his gene and the London group's discovery could turn out to be partners in triggering sexual differences.

Everyone is born with 46 strings of genes called chromosomes. Two of these, called X and Y, are the sex chromosomes. Women have two X's; men have an X and a Y. Scientists reason that the gene that makes men different from women must be located someplace on the Y.

Scientists have concentrated on apparent exceptions to the rule, so-called XX males. To all outward appearances, these people usually are physically normal men. But their cells contain the double X's of women. Through a genetic mix-up, one of their X's contains a tiny fragment of Y, enough to make them men.

The London group narrowed the search to a narrow stretch of the Y chromosome in which they have located one gene. They cite several reasons to think that this is, indeed, the long-sought sex gene:

- While men have the gene, women do not possess anything like it.
- The gene actively makes a protein in men's sex organs but not in other parts of the body.
- Other kinds of male mammals have similar genes.
- In mice, the gene is turned on at precisely the moment in development when sexual differences appear.

Critics of this work point out that some of the XX males who carry just the newly discovered gene have some, but not all, male sexual features.

"If you are still alive please tap," Mrs. Gonzales sobbed.

On Tuesday, Mrs. Aquino declared a state of emergency throughout the quake-stricken area north of Manila on the archipelago nation's main island, Luzon.

Two aftershocks early today measured 6.3 and 5.8 on the Richter scale, according to the U.S. Geological Service in Golden, Colo. Two more were reported later but precise readings were not immediately available.

No new damage was reported.

Figures compiled by the Office of Civil Defense and the Red Cross showed 360 people were killed and 773 injured from Monday's earthquake, which registered 7.7 on the Richter scale.

In addition, the Philex Mining Corp., reported 16 people were also killed at its residential compound in Benguet province, but they were not included in the official tallies. The company said 13 of the dead were children.

Officials said at least 82 of the fatalities died in Baguio, where four luxury hotels and 23 other buildings were severely damaged.

But presidential Press Secretary Tomas Gomez said Mrs. Aquino was told that 142 people died in Baguio, including two Americans, one South Korean, a Taiwanese and a Chinese. He gave no names.

U.S. officials could not confirm the report but said an official of the U.S. Agency for International Development was missing. About 1,500 Americans live in the town.

One Baguio funeral director, Filemon Relis, said his mortuary alone received nearly 70 bodies of quake victims. Bodies covered with blankets were lying outside his funeral parlor; there was no room inside.

Monday's quake, the strongest to strike the Philippines in 14 years, damaged Baguio's airport and triggered landslides which blocked the four highways leading to the resort.

Highway crews used bulldozers and dynamite today to clear some of the dozens of landslides blocking one of the roads to Baguio. Officials said they hoped to clear the debris later today so that much-needed supplies, including cranes, food and medicine, could reach the city.

The city of 120,000 people had no electricity and was running out of food. Only one service station was open and gasoline was being rationed.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Stanley Schrager said a 14-member military search and rescue team arrived today from Andrews Air Force Base near Washington, D.C., and would travel by helicopter to Baguio to join the search.

He said about 20 people injured in Baguio and Cabanatuan City were flown to a U.S. military hospital at Clark Air Base. More than 50 people were killed in Cabanatuan City, 60 miles north of Manila, when a six-story school collapsed.

Japan sent doctors, nurses and $180,000 in relief supplies, and Canada, Thailand, Switzerland, Singapore, Australia and South Korea also sent assistance.

In Dagupan, where 20 people died, firetrucks began delivering drinking water to 31 outlying villages whose water lines were destroyed by the quake.

Officials in the city of more than 100,000 inhabitants, 100 miles north of Manila, said it also was without electricity and that food and drinking water were running low.

Dagupan's business district sank one to two yards during Monday's quake, and mud and sea water were seeping out through fissures in the street.

Col. Bienvenido Liclican, spokesman for the military rescue team, appealed over Manila radio stations for tools, blood plasma, medicine and doctors to care for the injured.

Monday's quake was the worst to strike the Philippines since 1976, when a quake measuring 7.8 on the Richter scale killed 8,000 people.

The scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude. Thus a reading of 7.5 reflects an earthquake 10 times stronger than one of 6.5.

Mrs. De Guzman, however, isn't the only Midlander awaiting word from loved ones living in the Philippines.

Tom Edwin, 35, an electrical engineer with Texas Instruments of Midland, said his mother and two brothers also live in Baguio.

The brother and parents of his wife, Grace, also live in that city, Edwin said.

"We've been calling and calling," he said. "We haven't been able to contact them.

"Earthquakes aren't something new over there. We've always had earthquakes, but we've never had anything of this magnitude."

U.S. aid underscores cooperation, friction

CABANATUAN CITY, Philippines (AP) — Troops from a U.S. base arrived with cranes and a field hospital a day after Monday's earthquake, highlighting the cooperation and friction between the United States and the Philippines.

Many Filipinos said the U.S. relief effort shows the benefit of having American troops based in the Philippines. Other people, including most senators, have demanded the bases close, saying the Philippines must wean itself from its dependency on its superpower ally.

Next month U.S. and Philippine officials are scheduled to resume talks on extending the lease on the six U.S. bases.

SUICIDES: Woman's fear of institutionalization blamed

Ammy Drake took over.

He slept in a bed three feet from her in case she needed anything during the night. He prepared her meals, although two caretakers who lived behind the house could have done it.

And the two found hours of entertainment together, watching nature programs on TV, listening to "talking" books, discussing current events.

All say they found Ms. Drake an inspiration.

"You never came to see a sick person, ever. When people would say, 'I get kind of down and blue,' I'd say, 'It's time to go to Jeanne's,'" Ms. Spears said.

She said Ms. Drake kept busy despite her paralysis. Ms. Jackson, 57, family caretaker for 25 years, said she would help Jeanne type cards to friends and relatives and make scrapbooks of postcards sent to her from traveling friends into scrapbooks.

"That's the way she traveled," Ms. Spears said.

Drake helped make a large rack to hold a typewriter for his daughter. He also fashioned a winch to move her onto a special bed, where she could use a portable breathing machine and leave the iron lung during the day.

An electrician installed a voice-activated switch that allowed Ms. Drake to dial the operator when she yelled "yoo-hoo" into the machine. She had some movement in her toes, so switches were installed near her feet that allowed her to operate her television, shortwave radio and other equipment.

Ms. Drake used a mouth stick to type letters and historical articles, and in 1975 was editor of "Responaut," an international publication for people with respiratory problems.

"She was normal," said Ms. Drake's cousin Joeza Dailey, 65, of Fort Worth. "She had wide interests. Jeanne wanted to know about everything."

Friends say the only time in her life that she ever quit was when, after three years, she gave up trying to find a computer that she could use with her mouth stick.

But two years ago, her health began to worsen. She no longer was able to type and began having digestive problems.

Last week, her father learned that his lymphatic cancer had spread from his throat to his lungs, and that there was no hope. That same week, Drake's sister-in-law, Bruce Ruffner, died at age 92.

The Drakes still were making plans. One was that Ms. Jackson would move in with Jeanne when Ammy died.

That's why those close to the family were so stunned by the deaths.

"None of us expected it. We knew how sick he was, and we knew she was very sick too. She was having more and more problems," Ms. Dailey said.

"I guess that they just decided that it was just too much."

They said Drake was a stoic. He never complained about his own health or the things he gave up to care for Jeanne.

"Jeanne may have made the decision (to die), more," Ms. Dailey said. "My cousin had a horror of being in an institution, and she had no faith in any sort of help from the state, or any sort of governmental help," Ms. Dailey said.

A backhoe operator on the scene, Andrew Martinez, was transported to Midland Memorial Hospital, suffering from shock, police said. He was treated and released.

Midland Fire Department rescue workers using shovels and another backhoe operator spent about 1 hour and 45 minutes digging out Zepeda, who was completely buried. Efforts to free Zepeda were delayed because of the moist condition of the soil from recent rains, officials said.

Zepeda was working for Cline Construction & Paving Co., which was laying telephone cable for Southwestern Bell Telephone.

The incident was determined an accident, police said.

Zepeda was taken to Thomas Funeral Home and later transferred to Myers & Smith Funeral Home in Big Spring for arrangements.

CRIME: Figures reported for first half of year the city and county, law enforcement officials reported.

In the city, the number of aggravated assaults shot up 34.6 percent from 237 the first half of last year to 319 this year.

"Assaults generally tend to go up during the summer months with the hot weather," Morris said, adding that the rise may have been due to June being exceptional warm this year.

The number of assaults "begin to fall back off when the tempertures cool," Morris said. Morris said the assault statistics need to be compared at the end of the year to get an accurate picture because the weather hot spot may vary from the first six months to the last six months of the year.

Painter echoed Morris' contention that crime including assaults go up in the summer months.

In the county, there were 36 assaults with 28 cleared in the first half of 1989 compared to 58 with 55 cleared this year.

Eighty-six percent of assaults in the city were cleared last year and only 80 percent this year.

There is "not a whole lot we can do because assaults are (crimes) of passion and were usually called after the fact," Morris said. "They deal primarily with tempers, passion and alcohol," he said.

The overall number of crimes in the city decreased 12.5 percent in the first six months of 1990 from the same period last year. The first six months this year showed 27.2 crimes per 1,000 people compared with 31.4 crimes per 1,000 in the same period last year.

The total number of reports received by the criminal investigation division of the sheriff's department in the first half of 1989 was 695. This year there were 808.

Iraq equates oil overproduction, military aggression

WORLD

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraq warned fellow OPEC members on Wednesday that it views violations of the cartel's production quotas as virtual acts of war, and accused tiny Kuwait of stealing its oil for the past decade.

It was the latest instance of bellicose behavior by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, although until now his muscle-flexing has been aimed mainly at Israel and its chief ally, the United States.

The accusations also represent a dramatic escalation in Baghdad's campaign against fellow members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries who violate production quotas.

OPEC, which has been beset by disputes over production levels and prices, opens its mid-year meeting in Geneva next Thursday.

The collapse of oil prices, blamed largely on overproduction, has cost Iraq billions of dollars in lost revenue at a time when it is financially strapped because of its 1980-88 war with Iran.

Kuwait, which was one of Iraq's staunchest allies in that war, called an emergency legislative session to discuss the Iraqi accusations, and quickly began a diplomatic offensive to counter them. Iraq and Kuwait have long disagreed over their border.

Iraq's foreign minister, Tareq Aziz, claimed Kuwait had drilled oil wells in Iraq's southern Rumaila field and pumped oil worth $2.4 billion out of it since 1980. He said Baghdad expects Kuwait to pay it back.

"We showed patience and prudence," Aziz said in a letter to Arab League Secretary-General Chadli Klibi, which was read over official Baghdad Radio and on state-run television. "But things have developed to a level which we can no longer ignore."

The Iraqi foreign minister renewed Iraqi accusations of overproduction by Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates and said such actions were tantamount to "military aggression against Iraq."

"The attempts by the governments of Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates to flood the oil market ... is a premeditated and deliberate plan to weaken Iraq and undermine its economy and security," he declared.

On Tuesday, Saddam threatened to retaliate against Kuwait and the U.A.E. with force if necessary for quota violations. Iraq has a 1 million-man army. Kuwait, with a population of only 1.7 million, has an armed forces strength of 20,300.

In Kuwait City, the emirate's capital, the 75-member National Council legislature was called into closed-door session to discuss the Iraqi allegation.

Later, Kuwait's foreign minister, Sheik Sabah al-Ahmed, flew to Saudi Arabia, carrying a message for King Fahd. He also planned to visit other members of the six-nation Gulf Cooperation Council that groups Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Qatar, Bahrain, Oman and the United Arab Emirates, the official Kuwait news agency reported.

It said Kuwait had begn a "wide-scale campaign on the Arab level to explain its viewpoint on the Iraqi complaint against it."

Gulf diplomatic sources, insisiting on anonymity, said Saudi Arabia was considering summoning the Gulf Cooperation Council to an emergency meeting over the issue.

Overproduction has helped drive prices down from the OPEC benchmark of $18 a barrel to below $14 in recent weeks.

Kuwait's quota is 1.5 million barrels a day, but it has been producing as much as 1.9 million barrels daily. The U.A.E. has produced up to 2.1 million barrels a day in recent months, more than double its daily quota of 1.09 million barrels.

Iraq, with oil reserves estimated at 110 billion barrels, wants to eventually double its own production capacity to 7 million barrels a day and push prices up to the $25 level.

Saddam said Tuesday Iraq had lost $14 billion because of the price slump. Iraq's foreign debt is estimated at $60 billion to $70 billion.

Hance message important to U.S.

Few Americans, oil company executives included, know what will happen in the next few months in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries — OPEC. Bickering has evolved to a way of life within the cartel as OPEC members wrangle with production quotas and quota violations.

At times the industrial world appears poised on a precipice, ready to plunge over at the whim of the Arabs onto the jagged rocks of the chaos another oil price plunge would entail. It would be 1986 in the U.S. oil patch all over again.

Texas Railroad Commissioner Kent Hance knows the inner workings of OPEC and, as such, is a vital link between OPEC and the oil-consuming United States, having taken it upon himself since his appointment to the commission in 1987 to attend OPEC meetings and stay abreast of what is going on in the oil industry worldwide.

Hance has already indicated that he will be in attendance when the OPEC ministers meet in Geneva, Switzerland, Wednesday to see what occurs. He recently told Harry Spannaus, of the Midland-based Permian Basin Petroleum Association, "If OPEC disbands and there is an oil price crash it would be disastrous for the Permian Basin."

While many Americans may think it contradictory that the organization responsible for the 1972 Arab oil embargo and the oil glut of recent years must hold together in order to prevent an even worse economic calamity in the domestic oil industry, that scenario appears highly likely if the cartel breaks up.

Hance said if that occurs, it would result in an instant rush to gain market share, causing a flood of oil in the world and a price crash similar to the one experienced four years ago.

Of course, we hope that isn't the result. But it's good to have advance warning that it could be coming and we have that knowledge now because of Hance's willingness several years ago to step out to the OPEC meetings as an observer — in the interest of Texas and the United States.

The railroad commissioner, who will leave his post at the end of this year, has served admirably and his knowledge of the industry and the world oil market will be missed if he is not replaced.

The day is long past when the United States does not need to know trends in the world oil market. Changes in that market affect millions of lives and a replacement with Hance's understanding of the market needs to be found.

Hance has been a great messenger — even though the message has not always been pleasant to Americans.

Sakharov lived to fulfill his wish

EAST BERLIN — The great Soviet human rights champion, Andrei Sakharov, secretly turned down freedom in the United States four years ago because it meant he could not return to his beloved homeland. His fellow dissident Natan Sharansky unknowingly was traded instead of Sakharov.

Anderson

Mikhail Gorbachev had agreed to trade Sakharov for Soviet spies in prison in the West, but Sakharov willingly continued his exile in the closed city of Gorky where he was dying. He hoped he would live long enough to openly criticize the Soviet government as a Soviet citizen still standing on Soviet soil. He got his wish before he died last December.

We learned this previously untold story from reclusive East Berlin attorney Wolfgang Vogel. He has been the broker of almost every important spy and dissident exchange between East and West since 1962.

Work on exchanging both Sakharov and Sharansky was his top priority beginning in 1980, Vogel told us in a rare interview.

Sakharov was a brilliant nuclear physicist who developed the first Soviet hydrogen bomb. He received numerous awards for his work and enjoyed rare privileges and comforts. Then, in 1957, he began to raise his voice against atmospheric nuclear testing. By 1968, Sakharov had become the standard bearer for the fledgling Soviet human rights movement.

The KGB tapped his phone and harassed him in every possible way, including shutting off the elevator each time Sakharov went to a meeting of dissidents in a seventh-floor apartment. The KGB, knowing that Sakharov had a bad heart, hoped he would die from the hike up the stairs.

In 1975, Sakharov won the Nobel Peace Prize for his courage. The Soviets refused to let him accept it, labeling him "a Judas" and a "laboratory rat of the West."

On Jan. 20, 1980, the KGB seized Sakharov on a Moscow street. He and his wife were shipped to Gorky and put under constant guard. Sakharov wrote his memoirs there in longhand, and the KGB twice stole hundreds of pages. He painstakingly rewrote them. Twice he went on fasts, the first to get the Soviets to allow a relative to emigrate and the second to get urgent medical care for his wife in the West. In both cases, the Soviets gave in to his demands.

Soviet officials were greatly surprised when Sakharov turned down the chance to get out himself in 1985. The next name on the list was Sharansky who crossed the famed Glienicke Bridge into West Berlin on Feb. 11, 1986.

Sakharov was gambling that he would live, and his gamble paid off. In December 1986 the KGB installed a phone in his Gorky apartment for the first time. The next day Sakharov got his first and only call on it, from Gorbachev, telling him it was time to come home to Moscow.

Sakharov was elected a deputy to the new Soviet Congress, and he had his podium as a Soviet citizen. He used it indefatigably. Several times Gorbachev himself silenced Sakharov by cutting off his microphone or ordering him to sit down.

Then, last Dec. 14, Sakharov collapsed from a heart attack and died alone in his study only hours after delivering a ringing denunciation of the Communist Party monopoly.

Who knows but that Sakharov might have lived had he been able to come to the West four years ago for medical treatment. But he sensed that he would lose his moral authority and might be derided as an American puppet.

Instead, upon his death, the Washington Post opined, "For his courage, he suffered terrible retribution at the hands of a frightened Kremlin, but he hung on to welcome a new regime promising to fulfill some of the ideals he championed."

GREEN(BACK) MOVEMENT — Corporations around the world have suddenly discovered that ecology sells, but few are willing to match their sales campaigns with ecological action. Japanese corporations are being particularly vocal about their pseudo-environmental efforts, and yet Japan continues to be an abuser of the Earth. Japanese fishing companies think nothing of using huge driftnets. Japanese lumber companies practice massive and careless deforestation.

Smokers already doing fair share!

I am opposed to any further restrictions on smoking or additional increase in the exise tax on cigarettes.

Our elected officials should be fair in the treatment of all citizens, not just the ones that do not smoke. Federal legislators want to reduce the deficit, and think additional exise taxes on cigarettes is part of the answer. Our legislators in the state house think cigarette smokers should pay for the education of our children, and our local council members think cigarette smoking should be banned in all public places.

Why smokers? Does the federal, state, and local governments think smokers cannot vote? Do they think that just because they need additional revenues smokers can afford to foot the burden, and that no one else can or will?

Enough is enough! Currently, cigarette smokers pay approximately 43% of the cost on a carton of cigarettes in taxes. Eventually, if not already, this kind of taxation becomes regressive. Then where will the money come from? If the government needs more money, it should find a more equitable solution, like taxing everyone, not just a single group of citizens.

As far as banning smoking in public places in Midland, why? I would venture to say that common courtesy on behalf of smokers and non-smokers alike is the real answer. If my smoking offends you, ask me to put it out. In all probability I will.

If local businesses think smoking should be banned, then ban it. Why do they need an ordinance or excuse? Are cigarette smokers powerful enough to affect the profits of your business, or do you just want to blame the government and not take the heat? (No pun intended.)

All fair-minded readers should write their legislators and tell them how they feel on these unfair issues. I personally feel that smokers are doing more than their fair share.

Motorists didn't show adherence to three R's

Our First Christian Church is 100 years old this year and we are going to publish a history of that 100 years. I am chairman of that committee and I was tempted to stay home Sunday and work on the book. I am glad now that I decided to go to church.

Our minister is Dr. Ray Bristol and the title of his sermon was "We Spell Frrredom With Three R's." There is no freedom without rules, there is no freedom without responsibility and there is no freedom without reverence.

I wish everyone could have heard that sermon. I particularly wish those who drove across my lawn sometime during that night could have heard it. I would like to ask them what customs they follow, what rules they obey, what responsibility they accept and what reverence they show.

Telescope repair performed with mirrors?

When the $1.5 billion Hubble telescope went awry, the powers at NASA immediately called the telescope repairman. Naturally, they got a recording. "This is Ernie, the telescope repairman. I am not in right now. At the sound of the beep leave your name and information about your telescope and I'll get back to you as soon as I can."

Buchwald

Several days later the Hubble manager was still waiting to hear from Ernie. They called him at home.

"I was going to get to you today," Ernie said. "What's the problem?"

Ernie said, "Do you have a service contract?"

"No, I don't," replied the manager. "The telescope was under warranty for the first four million miles."

"That's only if the telescope falls into a black hole," Ernie explained. "You're going to have to pay for the repairs yourself."

"All right, but when can you get up there and work on it?"

"I don't have any telescopic mirrors in stock. I'll have to get them from Spokane. The way they're shipping these, it's going to take 14 weeks."

Ernie said, "Let me ask you a question. Who put in the mirror in the first place?"

"John Scarsi of Telescopes-R-Us," the manager answered.

"I thought as much," Ernie replied. "He sells every piece of cut-rate space hardware in the book. Ever since NASA has been trying to save money, nothing works. You would have been much better off going to Sears Roebuck."

"We don't need a lecture," the manager said. "All we want is the mirror fixed so we can get some photos on the Ted Koppel show."

"That would be better than nothing. When can you do it?"

"Tomorrow morning. I have to fix a flawed radio signal antenna on the space station, so I'll be in the neighborhood."

The next day when the manager didn't hear from Ernie he called him. "You promised to fix our mirror today."

Ernie said, "I forgot when I talked to you I had a golf game. I'll get on it tomorrow."

"Good luck. The way NASA is putting these things together you'd be lucky to find one who isn't tied up until 1995."

The manager asked, "Suppose you can't repair it in the sky? Can you lend us a mirror until you fix this one?"

"All my telescopic mirrors are out. I can rent you one for $50 million a month."

"That's outrageous."

"Don't get mad at me. You want to see the Milky Way — I don't," Ernie told him.

"Do I have your word you'll take a look at it tomorrow?" the manager demanded.

"Of course, you do," Ernie said. "A licensed repairman never lies."

GEORGE WILL

Jackson pursues both power, perquisites

WASHINGTON — Jesse Jackson finally has found an office other than the presidency worthy of him. He is negotiating with Sen. George Mitchell, the majority leader, to acquire the key to unlock the gates of social justice.

Will

Undaunted by the fact that the office does not yet exist and will have no power when it does, Jackson has announced his candidacy and taken his election as a formality not to be waited on. He has set out to settle something far more important to him than power: perquisites.

If (Jackson says demurely — if) elected, he will seek privileges enjoyed by real senators, including the right to roam the floor — and a desk there at which to sit when roaming stales — and space in a Senate office building. Speaking of access to his soon-to-be semi-colleagues, the real senators, Jackson says, "We certainly want to have access to them. We deserve it."

"We"? Is that the regal (papal?) plural? Who is two? "Me and my shadow"? Perhaps it is a state of mind.

His Shadowship will be a lobbyist for statehood for the District. He will be a play-acting senator for a make-believe state.

The District is only a city, and only of moderate size. It is the nation's 16th largest and, because of restrictions on its growth, it will continue to descend the list of largest cities as others grow. The Constitution provides for three kinds of entities: states, territories and the District. States are the fundamental entities of this federal system. Senators represent geographical areas containing diverse interests.

The District as a state would be different. It would be the only state with no rural interests whatever; no mining or other extraction industries; no fishing; almost no manufacturing. But lots of government.

The decay of Jackson's career into burlesque is part of a pattern of dereliction of leadership among prominent blacks. Benjamin Hooks, head of the NAACP, recently suggested to 3,000 convention delegates that the prosecution of Washington Mayor Marion Barry — star of videotape and Louis Farrakhan rallies — is part of the government's "incessant harassment of black elected officials." It was not the first time Hooks had cast that aspersion or the first time he had no evidence to support it.

The posturings of an ersatz "senator" or a conspiracy-monger like Hooks are multiplying as the need for unpleasantly truthful talk is becoming more pressing. Three truths are:

Many blacks and others suffer from what sociologists call insufficient "social capital," a deficit of the skills requisite for both economic competence and successful living.

Second, we know little about how to use social policy to generate the social capital that cures the behavior of poverty, when such capital has not been produced by the nurturing of an intact family.

Third, we know what does not help — demagoguery such as Hooks', or grandstanding such as His Shadowship's.

In 1796, when Tennessee was on the verge of statehood (which the District of Columbia hardly is), two Tennessee senators arrived prematurely. A contemporary letter says:

"One of their spurious senators has arrived, and a few days since went into the Senate and claimed his seat, by virtue of the credentials from our new sister Tennessee, as she is called, and the rights of man. As the former was a new kind of coin, and the latter has often been declared, and even counterfeited by rogues and rascals, a majority of the up-stair folks determined to take time to inspect both, and with some difficulty persuaded the bearer to leave them."

George Mitchell, please note.

N.Y. Times News Service

ROME — Every now and then a relatively small incident causes a country to examine its soul, and the sad tale of 6-year-old Vanessa Moretti has made Italy look inward this week. They do not like what they see, some Italians say.

On Saturday, Vanessa was driving to the beach with her father, Marco, when he fell dead at the wheel from a heart attack as they entered a tunnel along a stretch of highway near Florence.

Before dying, Moretti, who was only 33, managed to pull the car over to the tunnel wall and, according to press accounts, told his daughter to make her way home. Out she went into speeding traffic to seek help.

Cars whizzed by so fast that the gusts of wind they created repeatedly knocked the little girl down. Scratched, bleeding and in tears, she walked out of the tunnel and along the open highway, covering at least 1.2 miles over the next 30 minutes.

In that period, hundreds of cars passed, but not a single one stopped to help her until a motorist finally came to her aid and phoned the police. Saturday was the start of Italy's summertime exodus from the big cities, and, one newspaper wrote, "along the happy road of vacation there were no scheduled stops for attending to the pain of others."

The episode startled many Italians, and it landed on newspaper front pages along with commentaries about a country that, several writers suggested, may be getting too rich for its own good.

Italy's self-image — and outside reputation, for that matter — tends to be that of a warm country with caring people, especially where children are concerned. This was particularly true in less affluent but perhaps gentler days, some said, and so the weekend display of mass indifference left a foul taste in their mouths.

Vanessa is "a symbol of an Italy that we would like to ignore — a cold Italy, at times glacial, where in the best of cases each one thinks only about himself and a few others more or less close to him," a University of Padua sociologist, Sabino Acquaviva, wrote in the newspaper Corriere della Sera.

"We have begun to show the cold, glacial face for which only recently we used to rebuke other countries that once were richer than ours," Acquaviva said. He referred to Italy several times as "lex Bel Paese" — the once-beautiful land.

Spain, Cuba quarreling over those seeking asylum

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The crisis over Cuban asylum-seekers at embassies in Havana intensified Wednesday as Cuba criticized a Spanish official who called for a "peaceful transition to democracy" on the island.

Spain recalled its ambassador to Communist Cuba in the growing dispute between Spain and its former colony, which have historically enjoyed warm relations.

Also Wednesday, a Cuban court convicted 11 human rights activists of counter-revolutionary crimes. It handed down sentences ranging from three to 15 years, the official Cuban news agency reported.

The convictions were reached as Fidel Castro's hard-line government struggled to end a flow of refugees to embassies in Havana. At least 13 Cubans have reportedly holed up in embassies or residences of Spain, Czechoslovakia and Italy.

In a statement from the Office of Diplomatic Information, Spain said it had recalled Antonio Serrano de Haro for consultations. It accused Cuba of words "removed from the customary niceties of international co-existence."

The tensions broke into the open earlier in the day when Spain's foreign minister, Francisco Fernandez Ordonez, suggested to reporters that Castro knew his regime would crumble if he opened the door to all Cubans who want to leave. Cuba has 11 million residents.

"The situation in Havana is very nervous due to Cuba's isolation from the world and because of the extremely serious economic problems there," Fernandez Ordonez told Spanish National Radio. "No one wants a catastrophe there. What is needed is a peaceful transition to democracy."

Cuba retaliated later in the day, issuing its own statement saying Spain had violated Cuban and international law by harboring asylum-seekers. It said Cuba would never yield to "pressure or blackmail" by people seeking to leave the Caribbean island, said the official Cuban news agency, Prensa Latina.

WORLD in brief

7 more leave Soviet party

MOSCOW (AP) — Seven more members of the Soviet parliament announced today they were quitting the Communist Party.

The seven lawmakers said they were dropping out of the party "to facilitate the process of democratizing the country."

The current wave of defections follows Boris Yeltsin's announcement last week to the party's 28th congress that he was quitting the party.

Yeltsin, who is president of the Russian Federation, said he could not serve as the leader of a republic that was moving toward a multiparty system and still serve the demands of the Communist Party. Russia is the largest of the 15 Soviet republics.

Other prominent dropouts in recent days have been Moscow Mayor Gavriil Popov and Leningrad Mayor Anatoly Sobchak. Moscow and Leningrad are the country's largest cities.

The seven departing lawmakers were Sergei Stankevich, one of the leaders of the party's progressive Democratic Platform wing; Vladimir Tikhonov, leader of the cooperative small business movement; environmentalist Alexei Yablokov; journalist Valentin Logunov; scientist Yuri Ryzhov; economist Alexei Yemelyanov; and factory manager Mikhail Bocharov.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela returned home today after declaring his six-week tour of three continents a "tremendous success."

He arrived on a Mozambique Airlines Boeing 737 more than two hours late at Johannesburg's Jan Smuts Airport, where about 100 supporters waited to greet him on his 72nd birthday.

Mandela visited 14 nations in Europe, North America and Africa. He told reporters in Mozambique that he had achieved all his goals: urging foreign governments to maintain sanctions against South Africa, raising funds for the ANC and explaining the goals of his movement.

The Mozambican national news agency, AIM, said the two-hour delay in returning home was caused by technical difficulties with a Soviet-made aircraft loaned to Mandela by Mozambican President Joaquim Chissano.

Mandela and his entourage left for Johannesburg aboard a Boeing 737 of the Mozambique national airline, LAM.

Professor suspended

LYON, France (AP) — A university professor who questioned the existence of Nazi gas chambers lost a disciplinary hearing Wednesday and was suspended from his job for one year.

Bernard Notin will draw only half-salary during his suspension as an economics and law instructor at Jean Moulin University-Lyon III, the university's disciplinary committee ruled.

Notin is a leading member of Jean-Marie Le Pen's far-right National Front party, which favors expelling immigrants from France. Le Pen once called the Holocaust a "detail" of history.

The article Notin wrote for the review Economy and Society in January created a national uproar that led to a clash between the university and Mayor Michel Noir, who is bitterly opposed to the National Front.

The mayor threatened to cancel the city's plans to donate a building to the university, named for a leader of the Resistance, unless Notin was fired.

Bomb team killed

PARIS (AP) — Five bomb-squad experts were killed Wednesday when plastic explosives they were using blew up as they were trying to deactivate a buried cache of World War II artillery shells.

The men belonged to a special unit assigned to help dispose of more than 2,660 German shells found this month along a roadway outside Epervans, in east-central France.

Investigators said the plastic explosives were to be used to destroy the latest batch of shells extracted from the site, which is south of Dijon. It was not immediately known what caused the plastic explosives to detonate.

A civilian driving a bulldozer suffered slight burns and was hospitalized. He was reported in good condition.

The names of the five victims, who came from different parts of the country, were not immediately released.

Soviet spacemen diverted to emergency hatch

MOSCOW (AP) — Two spacewalking cosmonauts had to use an emergency hatch to re-enter their spacecraft because their normal porthole malfunctioned and their life support supplies were running out, Soviet media said Wednesday.

The incident, which Soviet television called life-threatening, occurred while Anatoly Solovyev and Alexander Balandin were trying to fix thermal insulation on the outside of their spacecraft.

It was the latest in a series of problems plaguing the cosmonauts' six-month mission.

Despite the danger, the cosmonauts joked about it afterward. Solovyev quipped that flight controllers "need to put road signs there" on the outside of the huge craft, Soviet television's evening news program Vremya said.

"Midnight Emergency in Outer Space," was the headline of a front-page story in Wednesday's Izvestia newspaper. The article raised the possibility human error could be behind the hatch problem and that the cosmonauts might have to take another spacewalk for more repairs before they can return to Earth safely.

"Was there a threat to the crew's lives? Yes, there was," Vremya said.

A U.S. specialist on the Soviet space program said the hatch problem may prevent Solovyev, the 42-year-old flight commander, and Balandin, the 36-year-old engineer, from taking another spacewalk.

The Soviet Union's manned space program, which for decades has been a source of national pride, has been plagued the past two years by equipment malfunctions, mistakes by cosmonauts and budget cuts.

The cosmonauts on Tuesday left Mir, the space station orbiting for four years, to fix thermal insulation around the capsule they must use to return to Earth.

Nearly half the insulation on the Soyuz TM-9 capsule, which is docked to Mir, has peeled off, news reports have said.

After repairing some of the damaged insulation, the cosmonauts, who were working without tethers or hoses connected to the ship, encountered the hatch problem.

"During their return to the spaceship, the crew experienced unexpected difficulties," Radio Moscow said. "The cosmonauts failed to shut the door of the entrance chamber and had to make use of an emergency door to enter the station."

James Oberg, author of several books on the Soviet space program, said although the cosmonauts managed to climb back into Mir safely, the hatch problem could complicate future spacewalks.

"The general crisis was not fully resolved," Oberg said in a telephone interview Wednesday from his Texas home.

He said the cosmonauts may be unable to take another spacewalk because equipment needed to recharge their spacesuits with air and other vital supplies is now inaccessible in the damaged airlock.

"No one is concerned here. It is an abnormal situation but controllable," Vsyeva Latyshev, a center spokesman, said in a telephone interview.

Izvestia said it took Solovyev and Balandin three hours to reach their damaged capsule after crawling out of Mir and scampering along its outer skin using fasteners like mountain climbers. They managed to fold part of the damaged insulation using clamps but another damaged piece wouldn't budge.

MISD says bus design not likely to change soon

■ National Transportation Safety Board rules that school buses should be designed with more exits.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Although the National Transportation Safety Board (NTSB) is calling for school buses to be designed with more exits, the changes are "probably far down the road," according to Eddie Hernandez.

Midland school buses are designed with a single rear emergency exit, said Hernandez, supervisor of transportation with Midland Independent School District (MISD).

A single emergency exit is all that federal regulations require of school buses. However, the NTSB said Tuesday that school buses should have more exits. The safety board's decision resulted from its investigation of the Sept. 21, 1989, bus accident near Alton which killed 21 students and injured 49.

The lack of emergency exits — there were only two — contributed to the number of deaths, the board said.

Federal regulations require more exits on mass transit buses than school buses. The NTSB said school bus regulations should conform, the same recommendation it made last year in its report on a May 1988 church bus and truck collision that killed 27 in Kentucky.

Many of the 27 victims of the Kentucky collision were killed by smoke inhalation when the bus erupted into flames. The fire was a result of an unprotected gas tank, according to earlier reports. The NTSB concluded that although the gas tank was a potentially lethal defect, more children might have survived if there had been more than one exit on the bus.

Hernandez, who has been involved with MISD transportation for 14 years, said he couldn't remember a single incident where the rear emergency exit was used on a Midland school bus. "We have had some minor fender benders, but no accident serious enough to ever require student evacuation," he said. "Our buses are built pretty sturdy."

In the Alton accident, the bus fell 25 feet into a water-filled pit, flipped on its front end and settled. The windshield was forced out and water rushed into the bus. The way the bus settled rendered the rear emergency door useless, the NTSB said.

Nineteen of the 21 students were killed by drowning. Another 49 of the 60 students on board and the driver were injured.

Safety board investigators blamed the truck driver, saying he was inattentive and should have been able to stop the truck despite a problem with faulty brakes. Although the accident resulted from the brakes not catching, the lack

Mauro says natural gas revenues up

■ Garry Mauro says legislation requiring fleet vehicles to begin using natural gas is producing results.

By Erin Blair
Staff Writer

Land Commissioner Garry Mauro, in Midland to oversee the University Lands lease sale Wednesday, took time out from opening sealed bids to promote Texas natural gas consumption.

Mauro said the General Land Office is already seeing the results of clean air legislation passed in 1989 requiring major metropolitan areas to begin switching their fleet vehicles to clean-burning compressed natural gas.

"Gas revenues were up 28 percent in 1989, making natural gas the biggest contributor to the Permanent School Fund," said Mauro.

He said last year was the first time in more than 100 years that gas had outstripped oil in contributions to the school fund, which benefits from the land lease sale.

"Last year we had the best response since 1985 to the lease sale and natural gas was the single biggest reason," Mauro said. "In the long-term it's the fuel of the future and the base for the Texas economy."

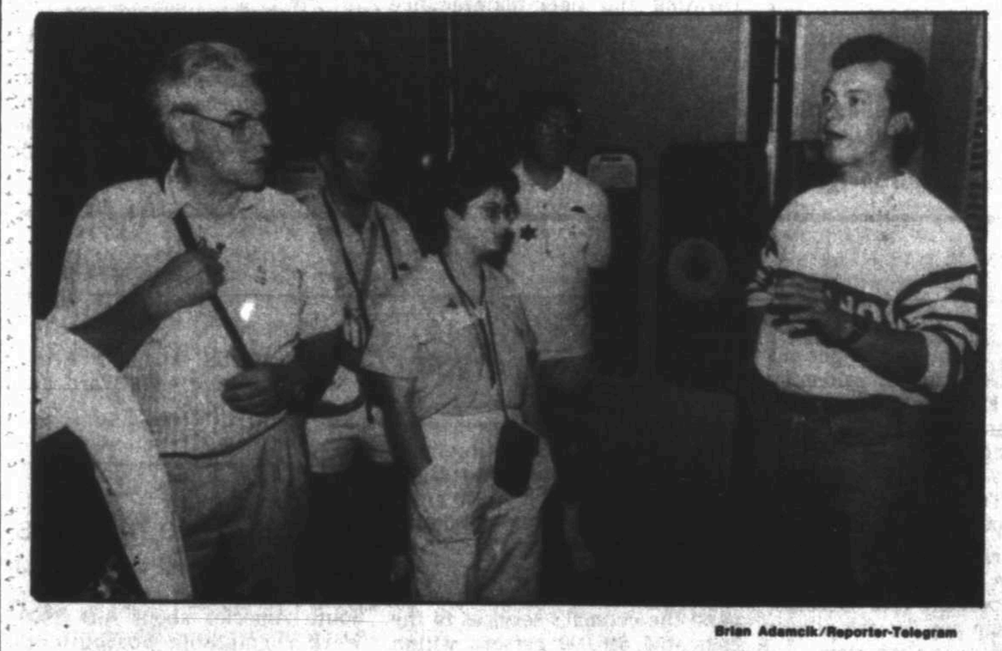

Mauro said each trillion cubic-foot increase in natural gas production creates 50,000 jobs and $3 billion in revenue.

"You can have your cake and eat it too," he said. "You can clean up the environment and improve the economy."

The rising significance of natural gas is also evidenced by a major motor company's plans to introduce a natural gas-fueled half-ton pickup in Houston next week, Mauro said.

Scandanavians tour local museum

Odessan Lars Harthelius, a native of Sweden, right, helped serve as a translator for a group of Scandanavian tourists at the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum Wednesday. Herthelius was located earlier this week when the Midland Chamber of Commerce's Convention and Visitors Bureau sounded the alarm for help in finding a Danish or Swedish speaking person in West Texas.

Ola Eidsvik thinks Texans might might be able to teach the world a thing or two about communication.

"They're so open and friendly (here)," said Eidsvik, who hails from Drammen, Norway. "In Europe, they are very shut. You can sit on a compartment on a train for hours and hours and hours without looking at one another, without saying a word. Here, it is open.

"I think that if people all over the world were like you are, and be open and talk together with an open mind, there'd be no war. Russia and America, you know, once they got talking, everything clears up."

Eidsvik, a 64-year-old municipal employee, was one of about 45 Scandinavian tourists in Midland Wednesday visiting the Petroleum Museum.

Tour leader Arne Gadeberg, from Denmark, said the group is touring the Western United States prior to traveling to Minnesota for a convention of the Y's Men International organization.

The service club is an offshoot of the YMCA and has a worldwide membership of about 25,000, Gadeberg said.

Gadeberg said he wanted to bring the tour group of Danes and Norwegians

Odessa assistant city manager named

■ Newest Odessa official is Midland's director of communications and information systems.

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

Finding someone to fill Ray Kendall's shoes will not be an easy task, Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor said Wednesday.

Kendall, the city's director of communications and information systems for almost two years, has been named Odessa's assistant city manager for finance. He will start his job Aug. 1.

McGregor said Kendall has been instrumental in setting up communications operations, including the enhanced 911 system, in the remodeled Loraine Center.

"I think he did a good job," McGregor said. "I think we have state-of the-art data processing and telecommunications systems. Ray was a big part of that."

Chuck Gibson, manager of communications operations, will s... as interim director until a permanent replacement is named, McGregor said. Applications will be taken within the next four weeks, he said.

Kendall, 49, is a three-year city of Midland veteran. Before becoming director of communications and information systems, he served as data processing and telecommunications consultant from 1987 to 1988.

He worked as a data processing director for various banks and savings and loans from 1970 to 1987.

Odessa City Manager Bill Brown, who announced Tuesday that Kendall had been hired for the post in his city, said he is lucky to have Kendall as an addition to his staff.

"We're looking forward to him coming on board," Brown said. "He has a pretty good reputation over there."

Kendall's job in Midland entailed overseeing the operation of computers, telephone pagers, radios and other city communication equipment.

ED TODD

Odessa man dedicates his life to Scouting

COLORADO CITY — The old man of Scouting is not really old. He's just 66, has been Scouting for 54 years, but feels 14.

Todd

He climbs mountains like a mountain goat, commands a canoe like a true-blue American Indian, and is attuned to Scouts as if he were a real father to them all.

"I try to instill in these youngsters the God and country (concepts) and to respect their fellow human beings as they would want to be respected," said the old Scout, Charles Ross.

Ross, who holes up in Odessa when he's not out on volunteer work with the Scouts up at the Scout Ranch in the Davis Mountains, down at the Aquatic Scout Camp on Lake Colorado City, or over in the mountains of Philmont Scout Ranch in New Mexico, is the High Adventure director for the Buffalo Trail Council of the Boy Scouts of America.

With a passion, he teaches the youngsters survival in the mountains and in the waters.

Mostly, his role is to guide Scouts in the art of living and growing up. He is their counselor.

"Of course, I get as much benefit as the kids do," Ross mused. "Don't get me wrong. I have a lot of fun. It's not all work. It's my hobby and pleasure to do it."

In recent years, Ross has experienced the joy of observing the Scouts return more fervently to patriotism and to reverence.

"The kids coming up now have more respect for God and country than we did three years ago, four years ago, and five years," reflected Ross. The youth are "forgetting" about the nation's disheartening wars — the Korean War and the Vietnam War. The influence of anti-war demonstrations turned many people, especially the youth, against the country and its politics.

"But now, they are coming back, wanting to participate in a flag ceremony. Before, you had to force them to go to a flag ceremony. Now, they volunteer for it."

One of the old Scout's biggest rewards is just talking with the young Scouts at the aquatic camp or up in the mountains. Some are from broken homes.

"They will come out here (to the lake) and up in the mountains. You will get to know them. And they will talk to you about problems that are just heart-breaking. They can talk about them to someone, and it sort of relieves the pressure on them."

Ross has dedicated his free time to Scouting in keeping a promise he made to God after he was wounded while he was in the U.S. Marine Corps in fighting Japanese warriors in the Pacific Theater during World War II.

By then, he was an Eagle Scout. He had climbed the ranks from Tenderfoot to Eagle Scout in his old hometown, Nederland, near the Texas Gulf Coast. His mother, Helen, a Latin teacher, was "believer" in youth organizations, got the Boy Scout troop organized there in 1928, and encouraged her sons to be Scouts. Ross joined the Scouts at age 12 in 1936.

Scouting in that old Dutch farming community, Ross learned first aid, which he took to the war with him. And for that, he has a lifetime of gratitude.

"On three different occasions, I felt through my Scout training I was able to save my own life," Ross said. The first time, at age 18, he was shot and used the Boy Scout first-aid technique to stop the bleeding and to save his life. He was wounded twice more.

"And I made a promise to God that if He would bring me back home to my family that I would dedicate my life to Scouting ... for what my Scoutmaster had done for me when I was growing up."

After the war and into marriage, Ross continues his volunteer Scout work.

"I was fortunate enough to marry a girl (Berdyne) who has worked with me to fulfill my obligation that I made," Ross said. "So, she never questions whenever I want to go camping or take the kids out or to work summer camp, because she knows what obligation I took." Ross is a retired maintenance supervisor for Arco Oil & Gas Co.

But "one of the big things I regret in my life," Ross said, "is that his Scoutmaster died while Ross was away at war, and he was unable to "thank him for what he had done for me" in teaching first aid.

And so, Ross reminds his Scouts to appreciate folks, including Scout leaders, who have helped them.

"A Scoutmaster spends an awful lot of time away from home, working with these boys, and they get very little thanks for it," Ross said.

"It's a lot of work, but it's well worth it.

Ross, the Old Scout who savors high adventures, seems so much at peace and in his element in the outdoors with the Scouts.

"And out here (at lakeside) and down in them mountains at night, you can I see billions of stars up there that you can't see in Midland or Odessa because of the lights," reflected Ross. "But here, they are just so pretty. And there are so many constellations you can point out to the boys. And Somebody made that up there."

DEATHS

Michael Jacobs

Services for Michael R. Jacobs, 25, of Midland are set for 3 p.m. today at Bellview Baptist Church with Rev. G.A. Magee officiating. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park.

Jacobs

He died Tuesday at Midland Memorial Hospital.

He was born Feb. 2, 1965, in Abilene. His family moved to Midland when he was 5 and he graduated from Lee High School in 1983. He attended Midland College.

He married Shelly Rockwell on June 20, 1987, in Midland. After their marriage they lived briefly in Fort Stockton where he was a member of the First Baptist Church.

In 1989, they returned to Midland. He was employed with Aprotex Corp. at the time of his death.

Survivors include: his wife; parents, Bill and Sara Jacobs of Midland; two brothers, Billy Jacobs Jr. and Mark Todd Jacobs of Midland; grandparents, Mildred Jacobs of Abilene, Jeff and Ann Harper of Midland and Mr. and Mrs. W.O. Rockwell of Las Cruces N.M.; and one niece.

Pallbearers will be Steve Robbins, Robert Jones, Keith Waldrop, Weldon Wilkerson, Clay Rice, David Ruiz and Vance Oliver. Honorary pallbearer is Pvt. Michael Oliver, stationed in Germany.

Trinidad Martinez

Funeral services for Trinidad T. Martinez, 69, are set for 10 a.m. today in the Thomas Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. J.B. Stewart officiating. Burial will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Thomas Funeral Home.

Pallbearers are Joe Aguayo, Robert Martinez, Jose Iglesias, Eddie Garces, Alberto Gonzales and Roque Arrendondo Jr.

Honorary pallbearers are Roque Arredondo Sr., Albert Martinez, Romon Martinez and Augustine Martinez.

Daniel C. Duran

ODESSA — Funeral services for Daniel C. Duran, 78, of Odessa are set for 10 a.m. Friday at Holy Redeemer Catholic Church.

Rosary will be recited at 7:30 p.m. today at Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. James Nugent officiating. Burial will be at Odessa Cemetery.

He died Wednesday at a local hospital.

He was born Feb. 10, 1912, in Tularosa, N.M., and married Imogene Hester in Hobbs, N.M. She preceded him in death on Aug. 19, 1989.

He was a retired farmer and a member of Holy Redeemer Catholic Church.

Survivors include six sons, Sam Duran of Fresno, Calif., Ezequiel Duran of El Centro, Calif., Ishmael Duran of Albuquerque, N.M.; Israel Duran of Gonzales; and Bernie Duran and Emil Duran, both of Seminole; five daughters, Isabelle Fernandez of Odessa, Virginia Tate of Midland, and Mary Helen Reyes, Mary Frances Talamantes and Martha Flores, all of Seminole; one brother, Arturo Duran of Tularosa; one sister, Concepcion "Nina" Duran of Tularosa; 36 grandchildren and 18 great-grandchildren.

Maria Harris

Services for Maria Harris, 38, of Midland are set for 11 a.m. Friday at the Thomas Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Manuel Hernandez officiating. Burial will follow under the direction of Thomas Funeral Home.

She died Tuesday at a local hospital after a lengthy illness.

Born April 19, 1952, in Mexico, she was a Baptist.

Survivors include her husband, John Harris; one son John Harris Jr.; two daughters, Wendy Jean Harris and Joanna Harris, all of Midland; and three brothers and three sisters.

Pallbearers will be Carl Nicholson, Sam Allen, Sam Allen Jr., Stacy Stroud, Jason Hulflander and Joe Dilty.

CITY: Odessa has new official

(From 1B)

In Odessa, he will coordinate and oversee accounting, municipal courts, purchasing, billing and collecting and computer services, Brown said.

Kendall, who is leaving his $56,000-a-year job here to earn $60,000 in Odessa, was one of four finalists among a pool of 21 applicants.

He was among five finalists for Midland's assistant city manager's post, for which Susan K. Thorpe was hired in May.

Kendall said leaving Midland for Odessa had nothing to do with not getting that job.

"I've enjoyed working for Midland," he said. "Midland has been very good for me.

"I've been wanting to expand my management experience. I thought it might be time to see if I could get into that."

Senate panel approves SSC appropriation

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate appropriations panel Wednesday gave the superconducting super collider $318 million for 1991, the level President Bush requested earlier this year.

The energy and water development subcommittee of the Senate Appropriations Committee granted the money without limits on foreign participation like those made in the House.

The full committee will vote Thursday on the funding, contained in a $20.9 billion energy and water measure.

The $8 billion super collider, to be built south of Dallas near Waxahachie, has breezed through the congressional funding process this year.

"We're well along the road toward full funding," said Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas.

Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., who chairs the subcommittee, said he doesn't expect the Senate to change the appropriation. The House approved the $318 million spending level last month. Of that, $169 million is devoted toward beginning construction.

But nearly all government appropriations are subject to the final spending goal of the so-called budget summit between administration and congressional leaders.

Bentsen, who is participating in the budget talks, said the $318 million spending level needs to be maintained to complete tests on the superconducting magnets, the collider's main component.

Johnston previously has expressed concern about the level of foreign participation in the super collider. But on Wednesday he said the spending bill sets no standard for foreign investment.

"We believe the project is worth doing even if (the Department of Energy) fails to get foreign participation," Johnston said. "The technology is one of the strongest reasons to do the project."

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, called the Senate's stance on foreign investment "a dramatic improvement."

"If the project is important enough to go ahead with foreign participation, it's important enough to go ahead without it," Gramm said.

The Senate bill encourages the Department of Energy, which is overseeing the super collider's development, to seek foreign investment but puts no restrictions on it.

A House bill that authorizes $5 billion in federal spending on the collider during the next five years limits the role of foreign companies and investors to one-third of any component or system.

The spirit of the Senate's measure calls for a majority of U.S. participation, Johnston said.

GAS: Mauro says gas can help economy, environment

(From 1B)

Harry Spannaus, executive vice-president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, speculated that General Motors will unveil the pickup, which will be marketed as a fleet vehicle to cities needing to comply with Texas Air Control Board ambient air requirements.

By September 1998, 90 percent of rapid transit vehicles in Texas cities with populations of 350,000 or more must be fueled by compressed natural gas. By September 2002, 90 percent of fleet vehicles in large cities must run on natural gas.

The city of Midland jumped on the natural gas bandwagon early when it converted six of its vehicles to compressed natural gas in 1985 as a pilot program.

Hank Kirk, the city's fleet director, said the experiment lasted nine months and would have lasted longer had the gas canisters not been recalled for safety problems.

"We had a few little impediments," Kirk said.

His main complaints about the natural gas centered on the small capacity of the canisters — each held the equivalent of seven gallons of gasoline — and the inconvenience of the refueling site at Industrial and Cotton Flat roads.

"You can't have people coming back several times a day to refuel," Kirk said.

Three of the experimental vehicles were water and sewer trucks and three were customer service trucks.

"You have to have a high mileage vehicle or a high gas consumer to get a pay back on natural gas," Kirk said.

He said the fuel's main superiority over gasoline is the cleaner emissions from natural gas-burning vehicles. It's safer and 25 percent cheaper than gasoline.

Natural gas also keeps motors clean, doesn't contaminate the oil and doesn't wear out spark plugs as quickly, Kirk said.

"I can tell no difference between natural gas and gasoline," Lawrence said.

"I've been told there's a slight loss of power, but in my application, I don't experience any loss."

His pickup has a gasoline tank to which he can shift when the natural gas canister is dry, which solves the problem of refueling.

The PBPA's Spannaus said he did not expect vehicular use of natural gas to have an effect on Midland and the Permian Basin for years.

"It won't make a large impact in West Texas unless the whole country goes to fleet usage," he said.

"Most of what we produce is being consumed. We need to get the prices higher to make it profitable for exploration and production."

BUS: NTSB rules in accident

(From 1B)

of emergency exits increased the number of victims, the board said.

"This is another accident that we think underscores the importance of additional emergency exits on school buses," said NTSB Chairman James Kolstad.

The board did not specifically say how many of the junior and senior high students would have lived had there been more exits, however.

The driver of the truck, Ruben Perez, attended the Tuesday NTSB hearing on the accident. His attorney, Bob Binder of Austin, refused to let him talk afterward because of a pending lawsuit.

But Binder said the NTSB was "compounding a tragedy to put the blame on the driver when he was given a truck with bad brakes."

"The brakes were failing. They were not in complete failure but they were failing. So he (Perez) downshifted, which is the proper procedure and applied the trailer brakes by hand," Binder said.

Kolstad said that there were "clear deficiencies" in the truck's brakes but that Perez "did not respond soon enough and he did not respond aggressively enough."

Investigators found the truck's brakes were operating at about two-thirds strength. But that was enough if Perez, as he claimed, applied them 300 feet before the collision, the board said.

The NTSB urged the bottling company to improve its driver training and fleet maintenance programs. Dan Fairley, a sales manager for the company, said it would be inappropriate to comment on the NTSB report.

Perez has been charged with 21 counts of manslaughter in the accident.

MUSEUM: Visitors say Texans friendly through the Southwest in order to show them a side of America they couldn't see in big cities like Boston and Hollywood.

"This way they really get a feeling (of) the vastness of this country," Gadeberg said. "It has some very interesting things as far as the history of America."

The Scandinavians arrived in Midland from Abilene, where they stayed overnight at a private ranch after earlier stints in San Antonio and Dallas.

Today, they head for New Mexico's Carlsbad Caverns. They also will visit Santa Fe, N.M., Mesa Verde in Colorado, Arizona's Grand Canyon and Las Vegas, Nev.

Edward Rowland, Petroleum Museum director, said foreign tour groups are not an uncommon sight at the facility.

"In the last four days we've had visitors from Egypt, London, Germany and Pakistan," he said. "There's a lot more international traffic in here than people realize."

He said people from more than 130 countries have visited the museum in its 15-year history. The museum is a favorite among representatives of foreign oil companies, he said.

Lisa Barker, Midland Chamber of Commerce tourism manager, said the chamber is trying to encourage foreigners to visit the Permian Basin.

"Texas is a major tourist attraction," said Mrs. Barker, who was at the museum Wednesday to help make the Scandinavians feel welcome. "It's the romance of of West Texas — there's a fascination with cowboys and Indians, there's a fascination with oil."

But for Ola Eidsvik, the oil and the Western mystique are not nearly as interesting as the people.

"The more you travel, the more you find out that people aren't so different," he said. "We are all alike, more or less. The trouble is, you make up your mind on a place (based) on movies and the telly and things like that."

Cola change flopped

The Coca-Cola Co. announced in 1985 it was changing the secret flavor formula of Coke, the world's best-selling soft drink. Adverse public reaction forced the company to resume selling the original formula.

WEST TEXAS IN BRIEF

MC funding won't be cut

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Although 30 of 49 Texas junior colleges will have their state funding cut, Midland College is one of the 19 colleges which will be unaffected, according to H.A. Tuck, MC spokesperson.

The State Auditor's Office released a report Monday which concluded that funding for junior colleges should be reduced by $2.1 million in the 1990-91 school year. The cut was announced as a result of inaccuracies found in enrollment and group insurance figures submitted by the two-year colleges.

"Basically if enrollment figures are reported after fall late registration, there shouldn't be any problem," Tuck said. "That is how Midland College reports enrollment. I'm not qualified to say what other colleges do."

Tuck said state funding is figured on a base year beginning with the fall semester and continuing for 12 months.

The state auditor also reported much of the information submitted for insurance funding was inaccurate. MC was not one of the colleges which had problems with insurance calculations. "We had no problems or difficulties with insurance," Tuck said.

Midland College will receive all of its $5,650,335 1990-91 appropriation, Tuck said.

Family members held

Staff Report

Midland police arrested a family Wednesday morning for aggravated robbery stemming from a shoplifting scheme that went sour Tuesday afternoon, police said.

Steve Lomeli Olguin Jr., 46, and his wife, Caroline Sue Olguin, 35, 601 Watson St., remained in jail Wednesday evening. Bond for her was set at $10,000 and his bond had not been set Wednesday night.

A 16-year-old juvenile also was arrested. He was being held at Culver Youth Home.

The three were reportedly shoplifting at Mervyn's Department Store, 3001 W. Loop 250, about 3:25 p.m. Tuesday when a security guard at the store approached the boy. At that time, Olguin reportedly stabbed guard David Sanchez under the right arm and the three fled in the scene.

Numerous items of stolen clothing were found at their residence, police said.

Plant price could go up

DALLAS (AP) — TU Electric says tougher design and construction standards could drive up the price of the Comanche Peak nuclear power plant as the utility prepares to resume work on the plant's second reactor.

The utility said Tuesday that the plant price could rise to $11 billion, well above previous estimates, but cautioned that the figure is still preliminary.

"Until we get a little further along, we won't be able to put out a definite cost estimate," said engineer Dave Fiorelli.

TU Electric outlined planned design changes and told Nuclear Regulatory Commission staff members Tuesday that Unit 2 could be operating by mid-1993.

TU Electric has applied to the state Public Utilities Commission for a 10.2 percent rate increase, partly to help pay for the plant's construction near Glen Rose.

Comanche Peak was originally scheduled to be completed in 1980 at a cost of $779 million. But in 1988, the utility put the plant's price tag at $9.1 billion and Fiorelli said the total project has already cost $9.5 billion.

The utility stopped construction of Unit 2 in the spring of 1988 to devote its resources to completing the first reactor. TU Electric officials expected construction on Unit 2 to resume late this year.

Council receives grant

Raw onions may cause burning in people prone to heartburn

By Jean Carper

If you are prone to heartburn, go easy on raw onions. So advises Dr. Mark Mellow, a gastroenterologist in Oklahoma City.

Carper

He and his colleagues heard so many complaints of heartburn after "spicy meals," that they decided to test a common ingredient of such meals: the onion.

On one day, they had 16 "heartburn subjects" and 16 "normal subjects" eat a plain hamburger. On another day they added a slice of raw onion.

The onions caused no distress in the normal subjects. But 40 percent to 50 percent of the heartburn subjects suffered painful, burning sensations caused by stomach acid backing up into the esophagus.

Surprisingly, says Dr. Mellow, in some cases the heartburn grew worse three hours after eating the onions. "That means they are plenty potent," he says. The theory is that in susceptible persons the onions relax the sphincter muscle that is supposed to keep acid from being regurgitated into the esophagus.

New tests hope to find out whether cooked onions are as bad. Dr. Mellow doesn't think so.

Newly discovered clot-fighters

You've heard it from experts — eat more fruits and vegetables to help ward off cancer. Now there's new evidence showing why the same advice may help deter heart disease.

Swedish scientists have discovered that eating fruits and vegetables tends to rev up the body's natural blood-clot-dissolving system, called the fibrinolytic system. A more active fibrinolytic system, experts say, helps discourage blood clots that can bring on both heart attacks and strokes.

In fact, several studies, including the famous Framingham Heart Study, find that low fibrinolytic activity may be as important as high cholesterol and high blood pressure in predicting heart disease.

In a new Swedish study, scientists examined 260 people ages 30 to 60 years. They found that those eating the most fruits and vegetables, including root vegetables, had the highest clot-thwarting fibrinolytic activity.

What magic ingredients in fruits and vegetables account for this anti-clot activity? Vitamin C and fiber, according to the Swedish research.

Twin victories for coffee

Fears that coffee raises cholesterol or causes irregular heart rhythms leading to heart attacks are dwindling. Two new studies find coffee not guilty.

At the University of Tennessee, researchers had 21 healthy men drink three or more cups of filter-brewed coffee a day for two months. The coffee had no effect on their cholesterol. It did not raise total cholesterol or bad-type LDL cholesterol, nor did it harm good-type HDL cholesterol.

Researchers suspect that filtering coffee, as most Americans do, removes any cholesterol-raising agents.

In Canadian experiments, 35 patients at Sunnybrook Medical Centre in Toronto who had suffered heart attacks five to 10 days earlier took 450 milligrams of caffeine — equal to drinking about five cups of coffee — on certain days. On separate days, they took a placebo — a "sugar pill." Doctors monitored their heartbeats for eight hours.

There was no sign that caffeine increased the frequency or severity of irregular heartbeats. Still researchers did not rule out that caffeine might provoke heartbeat disturbances in rare individuals who are particularly susceptible to arrhythmias.

Once headed for elimination, tuberculosis on the rise again

N.Y. Times News Service

Borne on a tide of AIDS, homelessness and drug and alcohol use, tuberculosis is re-emerging as a public health threat in the United States, particularly in inner cities.

Although the number of tuberculosis cases decreased steadily in the 1960s and '70s, prompting public health experts to predict the disease's near-elimination by the year 2000, that downward trend abruptly stopped in the mid-'80s.

Now, a worrisome rise in cases has begun.

The number of new cases in the United States rose 5 percent in 1989 from the previous year, to 23,495, about 9,000 more cases than federal health officials had projected early in the decade.

Even more alarming, the number of new cases increased 10 percent in New York City, to 2,545, and 35 percent in Newark, N.J., to 207 in 1989, the last year for which complete statistics are available.

"We're seeing some really disturbing patterns," said Dr. Dixie Snider, director of the Division of Tuberculosis Control at the Federal Centers for Disease Control.

"We thought we had the problem licked, so we let a number of tuberculosis programs lapse. We're obviously having to rethink that."

Experts say the tuberculosis revival is primarily linked to the AIDS epidemic, largely because people infected with the AIDS virus are unusually susceptible to TB.

But also, like anyone with active tuberculosis, these patients can spread the disease to others.

"I suspect a small number of the excess cases are close contacts of people infected with the AIDS virus, like family members," said Dr. Michael Iseman, a tuberculosis expert at the National Jewish Center for Immunology and Respiratory Medicine in Denver.

The tuberculosis resurgence is by far the most serious in the inner cities, where AIDS infection overlaps with other conditions associated with a high risk for tuberculosis: homelessness, malnutrition, drug use, alcoholism, crowded living conditions and immigration from underdeveloped countries where tuberculosis rates are high.

Some of these conditions weaken the immune system; others increase the risk of being exposed to the germ.

Tuberculosis is a chronic wasting disease caused by the mycobacterium tuberculosis, which is spread through the air, particularly in poorly ventilated spaces.

While many people carry the germ, the disease can be spread only by the small portion of those who have active tuberculosis, characterized by vigorous coughing and large pockets of the germ in the lung.

The disease can almost always be cured with medication.

But untreated, half of all the patients die within two years of the first symptoms.

Before drug treatments were available, TB was a leading cause of death in the United States, killing 88,000 people in 1930.

A healthy person who becomes infected with the tuberculosis germ has only a 10 percent chance of developing active tuberculosis over a lifetime.

In contrast, people who are simultaneously infected with tuberculosis and the human immunodeficiency virus, which causes AIDS, develop active TB at a rate of nearly 10 percent a year.

"It's not easy to get, but I think we have to be aware that no other HIV-related infection can spread as easily to the general public as tuberculosis, not by sharing needles but just breathing the same air," Iseman said.

"I don't want anyone restricted from work, but doctors have to maintain a high level of awareness and have to push for more screening and treatment. If you cough TB in an insurance office filled with robust people, none of them may get it, but if you do so in a nursing home or a nursery school, that won't be the case."

Incentives good now for those who want to quit smoking

N.Y. Times News Service

If you are one of the 50 million adult Americans who still smoke cigarettes, now is the best time to quit.

The incentives to end your affair with nicotine have never been greater.

Nationally, fewer than three adults in 10 smoke.

In many social circles, less than 10 percent of people still smoke, and even fewer dare to smoke in public.

And the places where smokers are permitted to light up are growing ever smaller and farther between.

RESTRICTIVE LEGISLATION and public pressures are increasingly turning smokers into social pariahs who must sneak off by themselves or ask others for permission to smoke.

The time is ripe to expedite the goal of the former surgeon general, C. Everett Koop: to create a smoke-free society by the year 2000.

The economy can no longer afford the 1,000 deaths a day and the even greater number of serious illnesses directly attributable to cigarette smoking.

The majority of Americans who are nonsmokers are no longer willing to have their own health jeopardized by the noxious habit of the minority.

The evidence that passive smoking is harmful is so convincing that the Environmental Protection Agency now lists it as a serious environmental hazard.

But how can so many people be weaned from cigarettes?

ALMOST EVERY smoker questioned in surveys believes the habit is personally harmful, and more than four smokers in five expresses a desire to quit.

Most have tried one or more times to break their addiction to nicotine; alas, they relapse, usually within a few days or weeks, but sometimes years later.

Typically it takes from four to 10 tries before a potential quitter finally makes it stick.

It is certainly not easy — many heavily addicted smokers say quitting was the hardest thing they have ever done, but all who really want to quit can find a way to become former smokers forever.

As one exasperated would-be quitter put it:

"There are as many ways to quit smoking as there are people who have quit, and I've tried them all! Now, I've got to find the one that was tailor-made for me."

In a fascinating and inspiring book, "The Last Puff" (W.W. Norton, $18.95), Dr. John W. Farquhar and Dr. Gene A. Spiller give 30 former smokers a chance to share the secrets of their success. The stories, told by men and women of all ages and walks of life, can be a source of inspiration, hope and helpful hints for smokers who have, like the storytellers, made repeated failed attempts to quit.

EACH FOUND a particular trigger that prompted yet another try, this time for keeps.

One man, a three-pack-a-day smoker for 30 years, finally quit cold turkey after his wife agreed to the purchase of a fancy new car if he agreed never to smoke in it. Then, as soon as the car arrived, the couple left on a three-week, crosscountry automobile trip.

One woman, a college teacher and writer for whom words and cigarettes were intricately entwined, finally decided to quit for good after seeing a woman smoker who appeared much older than her years and was beginning to "look like an ashtray", with wrinkled, gray skin, yellow teeth and fingers, and thin, limp hair.

A man who wrote advertising copy for a tobacco company said he quit "because it began to nauseate me that I was a slave to tobacco," adding, "My whole life revolved around being able to smoke." He had to leave concerts, the theater, movies, every 20 to 25 minutes to smoke and even resented sleeping because it meant he couldn't smoke.

Some were inspired to quit after watching a relative or friend die of lung cancer or struggle to live despite emphysema or recover after a heart attack or bypass surgery.

OTHERS WERE motivated by a positive self-image: "If I am really a man, I can quit on my own."

Or they imagined how much better they would look and smell once free of tobacco pollution.

But what nearly all had in common was a long "incubation period" — usually years of thinking they wanted to get the tobacco monkey off their backs, plus innumerable failed attempts.

They also all learned from their earlier failures.

For Elton W., a public relations specialist, it was a new attitude that spelled success.

"In all the previous attempts," he said, "I acted out of a spirit of self-sacrifice. I was giving up something that I liked and quitting was unpleasant. I felt like a martyr."

He practiced a new identity: that of a nonsmoker.

He imagined himself in all kinds of situations in which someone might offer a cigarette and then said out loud, "No thanks, I don't smoke." Not "I'm trying to quit" but "No, I don't smoke."

And he imagined himself to be a super-wholesome person, a squeaky clean Goody Two-Shoes, the kind of person no one would dare to offer a cigarette to.

Inmate asks for forgiveness

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A convicted male prostitute asked for forgiveness early Wednesday, moments before he was put to death for the multiple stabbing death of a Houston boat builder.

"I just ask everybody I ever hurt or done anything wrong to, to just forgive me for whatever wrongs I done to them," said Mikel Derrick, 33.

Derrick was pronounced dead at 12:17 a.m., six minutes after he was administered a lethal injection for the October 1980 slaying of Edward Sonnier.

Sonnier, 32, was stabbed 19 times at his Houston apartment before his car was stolen.

Derrick, from Buna, near Beaumont, said he was provoked into the slaying by a homosexual attack from Sonnier.

"I killed the man in self-defense," Derrick said in a recent interview. "I openly admit that."

Kay Burkhalter, the assistant district attorney who prosecuted Derrick, said Sonnier likely was not Derrick's only victim, although it was the only murder for which he was tried.

"He was a prostitute and would lure men to his apartment, kill them and take their property," she said.

Nearly a year after Sonnier's death, Derrick, serving four 10-year terms on an unrelated robbery conviction, wrote a letter to the Harris County District Attorney's office saying he had committed the Sonnier murder, stole Sonnier's car and stripped it for parts.

Derrick said in the letter that he had heard one of his three brothers could be wrongly charged in the theft of the car.

Quayle praies Texas GOP, criticizes Richards

AUSTIN (AP) — Vice President Dan Quayle on Wednesday praised Texas Republicans, criticized Democratic gubernatorial candidate Ann Richards and dismissed critics of NASA which has been plagued by setbacks.

In visits to Austin and San Antonio, Quayle also strongly defended President Bush's son, Neil Bush, who is under fire from Congressional Democrats for his role in the demise of a Colorado savings and loan.

Quayle said the attacks were "unfair and unjustifiable."

Neil Bush was a former director of Denver-based Silverado Savings & Loan. Federal regulators seized Silverado in December 1988. Its failure is expected to cost taxpayers more than $1 billion.

Speaking to Republicans who spent between $100 and $2,500 to attend an Austin fund-raiser for state attorney general hopeful J.E. "Buster" Brown, Quayle said Richards insulted President Bush in her keynote address during the 1988 Democratic National Convention in Atlanta.

Richards had joked during her speech that Bush was born with a "silver foot in his mouth."

Earlier, in response to reporters' questions about Neil Bush, Quayle said, "The only reason that he is taking a few lumps and the only reason that he is being scrutinized the way he is, is because he's the president's son.

"I know Neil Bush. He's a man of integrity. He's hard working. He's got a bright future, and I think it's most unfortunate that he has to go through this ordeal," Quayle said.

Quayle also said he was confident of Texas GOP gubernatorial candidate Clayton Williams' sensitivity toward women. Williams has been criticized for his remarks about women during the campaign.

"Whatever comments he may have made or may have not made in the past should not reflect poorly on his viewpoint toward women," Quayle said.

On NASA, Quayle who serves as chief of the president's National Space Council, described as "modest setbacks" the space agency's recent problems with fuel leaks in the space shuttles and mirror imperfections on the Hubble Space Telescope.

Cop killer says he has status on death row

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Condemned police killer Craig Ogan says fellow death row inmates grant him status because he shot a patrolman. But he wishes he had never committed the crime and still hopes to work someday for the Central Intelligence Agency.

"When you shoot a cop, they think you're a good guy," Ogan said Wednesday in his first interview since he arrived on death row. "I'm not happy about it. I wish I could turn back the clock."

Ogan, 35, was convicted last month of the Dec. 9 slaying of Officer James Boswell, 28. Boswell's partner testified Ogan walked up to them in a parking lot, said he needed immediate help, then shot Boswell after the officer told him to wait.

"Quite frankly, I'm very pro-police and I think they are having a rough time out there. But I think there's a small group out there who shouldn't be wearing a badge," Ogan said.

"I don't think I belong in jail, much less on death row. I did not realize I shot a policeman until after I shot him."

Ogan said he worked as an informant for the federal Drug Enforcement Administration, a job that could put him at odds with some of his new neighbors on death row.

"I would expect the potential for danger," he said. But he added that inmates told him they were aware of his case before he even arrived and that they were pulling for him to win.

"I haven't given up hope yet, but I don't have much confidence in the so-called Texas justice system," he said.

Ogan said he once operated an import business in St. Louis and hoped to get into the textile business. He could be put to work in the death row garment factory.

He said he became a DEA informant because he wanted to work for the CIA, a dream he still has.

I'm patriotic," he said. "I believe I have some things in my background, especially foreign languages."

He said since age 14 he had trouble with voyeurism and believed his ability to peek into windows and escape irate residents who saw him would serve him well in intelligence and espionage work.

"I got psychological help for my voyeur problem. I got it under control," he said.

Corpus Christi will vote on abortion issue

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Both sides in the abortion issue are promising a tough campaign as residents prepare to vote on whether life begins at conception.

Voters will be able to make that choice in a special election January 19. City Secretary Armando Chapa certified Tuesday that supporters of the so-called Human Family Amendment had gathered enough signatures to put the issue on a city-wide ballot.

The proposed amendment would appear as a preamble to the city's charter. It would not outlaw abortion, but is more a statement of philosophy, supporters said.

"The purpose (of the amendment) is to allow the people of Corpus Christi to give legal recognition to every member of the human family," said Tracy Cassidy, chairwoman of the Human Family Committee, an anti-abortion group that sponsored the petition drive.

"In spite of the fact that we can't give them legal protection, at least we can give them legal recognition in the human family."

Amanda Stukenberg, president of the abortion-rights group South Texans for Choice, predicted that the amendment will fail.

"There is a religious coalition trying to impose its views on a pluralistic society," Ms. Stukenberg said. "There will be opposition from a number of groups who find that offensive."

"It's just another instance of the pro-lifers trying to play hardball," she said. "This is not a black-and-white issue. People have a lot of ambivalent feelings about it. By trying to force (the amendment) down people's throats, I think they'll lose."

But pro-life leader Rex Moses said the amendment "certainly does have a chance of passing." Moses helped organize a campaign in Laredo that led the city council there to approve in April a resolution that life begins at conception.

"The biggest hurdle is to convince the people of Corpus Christi that it has a place in the city charter," said Moses, leader of Body of Christ Rescue, a local group.

"It's just another instance of the pro-lifers trying to play hardball. This is not a black-and-white issue. People have a lot of ambivalent feelings about it. By trying to force (the amendment) down people's throats, I think they'll lose."

How you dress is company business

By Pamela Redmond Satran
Copley News Service

You are good at your job. Your boss likes you. Your company wants to promote you.

If it weren't for this one small problem. It's your clothes. Your hair. Your jewelry.

Not that there is anything wrong with the way you look, but the company feels that if you are going to move ahead, you have to dress like the high-level executive it wants you to be.

In fact, the company has hired a consultant to remake your image. The firm will foot the image consultant's bill; you pay for the clothes. Think of it as executive training. Consider it a vote of confidence. Go through with it or kiss your chances of promotion goodbye.

An increasing number of workers — male and female — are being summoned by their boss or personnel director to be given just such a pitch. The "do it or else" message may be unstated, but it's there: Whether you are happy with how you dress, whether you put stock in the importance of image, the company thinks you need to change the way you look — and your job future depends on your going along with it.

What are the chances you will be "advised" to change your image? They are getting greater all the time, especially if:

You work for a large company in a non-glamour industry.

Big companies are the ones best able to foot an image consultant's bill — usually $2,000 and up for an individual makeover. Often, they are Fortune 500 firms, service-oriented businesses: banking, insurance, food products, accounting, hotels, health care.

WHY NOT THE "glamour" industries, such as entertainment, retailing and advertising, which are assumed to be the most image-conscious businesses of all? Because such firms usually not only tolerate but encourage individual and creative dress, explains one consultant, and often hire people who have a sophisticated image to begin with.

Most companies will only invest in the consultant's substantial fee for an employee who has a solid future with them. Usually, those people tapped are mid-level managers who have worked for their company for several years and are poised to move to the next level.

You work in a department headed by someone image-conscious.

The person who initiates an image-training program may not be your boss but your boss's boss's boss, although you may never know that is where the whole thing started. If the top boss obviously takes clothes and grooming seriously, those attitudes may filter down to you in the form of a visit to an image consultant.

You work for a company that is training-oriented in general.

Not surprisingly, the companies that hire image consultants tend to be leaders in the "corporate wellness" trend toward coaching and counseling employees on everything from public speaking to physical fitness.

Says Susan Bixler, president of The Professional Image in Atlanta, "They view image consulting as one more business skill they can offer their employees."

You have attended a group-image seminar sponsored by your company, or know your company has held such a seminar.

Corporations often use group seminars as a way to introduce the whole concept of image training to employees, and to prime individuals for private visits to consultants.

If you dismiss the idea that you could be told by your company to go to an image consultant because you have never heard of your firm sponsoring such individual training, think again.

EVEN IF YOUR company had been involved in image consulting for employees for years, you probably wouldn't know about it. Most companies don't want their efforts in this area publicized, even internally, and most individuals are wary of admitting to colleagues that they have been sent through an involuntary makeover.

While the practice has become as pervasive as, say, corporate-sponsored alcohol and drug rehabilitation, it often is viewed as just as private.

"No one wants to admit they had to get counseling to dress better," says the chief operating officer of a large Philadelphia hospital, who has sent three employees to image consultants over the past three years. He says he "couldn't be happier" with the results, but declined to have his or his company's name published in this article.

"Most people have the attitude, 'You ought to be able to figure out how to dress yourself, dummy.' But if you look around, you know that's not true."

CNS Photo

The phenomenal growth of corporate-image consulting can be gauged by the overall growth of the industry and the businesses of individual consultants.

A decade ago, there were 37 image consultants of all kinds, from those who coached executives in business etiquette to those who taught scarf-tying, according to Image Industry Publications, which publishes the Directory of Personal Image Consultants. Now there are more than 100 consultants who specialize in clothing alone, including 63 who do corporate wardrobe consulting.

Susan Bixler, whose company has about 800 corporate clients — including such giants as IBM, AT&T and Coca-Cola — says nearly every one of the companies at which she gives group seminars now requests follow-up individual consultations. Bixler estimates that of the 10,000 employees she speaks to each year, about 2,000 will go on for individual image consulting.

Joyce Grillo, who five years ago started her New York firm Impression Management with one corporate client, now has 25, and sees about 100 company-sponsored individuals a year.

ACCORDING TO Don Kaufman, who with his wife runs a Philadelphia image-consulting firm called Kaufman Professional Image Consultants, their corporate business has grown in five years to a projected 1,200 copmpany-sponsored individual clients.

What sort of sartorial sins can get you pegged for a session with an image consultant? That depends on your job, your company, your superior and your career track.

One employer said he targeted an employee whose appearance was inconsistent: suits one day, jeans the next.

A woman slated for a big promotion was sent because, as her boss put it, "Her career had broken from the ranks but her clothes hadn't."

Many people who end up at image consultants simply have no interest in clothes, dislike shopping and are basically oblivious to how people — including themselves — dress.

One male manager, who compares his session with an image consultant to a visit to the dentist ("You don't want to go, it hurts, but you know it's good for you"), says he has always abhorred the whole notion of judging people by appearances.

Staff Report

Guest designers Julie Duroche for After Five and Marcia Taft for Rose Taft Couture will highlight the 1990 Holiday/Resort Women's and Children's apparel market, Aug. 16-21, at the Dallas Apparel Mart.

This year's theme is "Celebrate in Dallas!"

Both Duroche and Taft are known for their elegant, affordable evening collections, which are Made-in-the-USA.

After Five is alive with the talented Julie Duroche. For the third year, Duroche will design 51 unique gowns for two production numbers in the Miss America Pageant in Atlantic City, which can be seen live Sept. 8.

This year's "Nihgtlife" theme will be carried out in Duroche's balck and white designs. Duroche and six state pageant winners will be in Dallas to visit with buyers as Duroche's Holiday 1990 collection is featured 6:30 p.m. Aug 18 for The Group III show.

Marcia Taft, the New York-based heart of Rose Taft Couture Fashions, will debut her 1990 Holiday collection Aug. 17 during Dallas' Formalities runway show for special occasion fashions.

Bright bags add color to fall fashions

By Carrie Donovan
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — If you're planning to experiment with color, one way to swing into it is with a bright bag.

It could be made of suede, satin, leather, fabric or nylon.

It could be any bold color. It could be quilted. But it should be small and have a chain-link shoulder strap.

A matching tassel swinging from the side would be nice, too. The last two accouterments make this firefly of a bag resemble the Chanel design that inspired a spawn of adaptations.

The Chanel boutique at 5 East 57th Street has the originals in quilted satin for day as well as evening.

These should keep coming in through August in pulsating shades like chartreuse, screaming green, red, pink, fuchsia and yellow. They range in price from $615 to $800.

Bloomingdale's plans to have a version by late August. The quilted nylon one, in fuchsia or orange with a suede tassel, is particularly splendid. It will sell for about $150.

In early September, Macy's will carry a scarlet suede box style with a curved top. The bag, which is expected to sell for about $125, will be quilted and studded with small golden buttons.

These small bags do not hold a lot, but they are very decorative. The idea is to carry your heavier gear in an additional tote.

If this carryall is also in a bright but different color, you're on your way to a strong style statement.

DEAR ABBY

Adopting dog has sad result

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Two months ago, my husband brought home a dog he'd been feeding at the construction site where he works. It was a beautiful male golden retriever, gentle and obedient, even though he was half-starved, filthy and covered with sores. We fed him, bathed him, loved him and kept him in the house at night.

Van Buren

Early one morning, our 9-year-old daughter was sitting on our bedroom floor petting him. She didn't startle him or hurt him — but he suddenly turned on her, biting her on the face, hand and arm! She threw herself at me, screaming and crying. I was half-asleep and the dog was still coming at us, snarling and growling. I threw my daughter to my husband and barred the way. The dog continued to attack me, so I kicked him to keep him away. He bit me on the leg and wouldn't let go.

Thank God my daugher's bites were superficial. We went immediately to the emergency room for tetanus shots and some small bandaging and disinfectants for her. Physically, she is fine. Emotionally, she still has nightmares and is afraid of dogs!

I wasn't so lucky. The bit on my leg was serious, and yesterday, after a month and a half, the final stitches are out. My leg is still very sore. He damaged not only the tissue, but the muscle, and I will always have a big "dip" and scar on my leg.

Abby, we've taken in a lot of animals over the years and never had this happen. I don't want to make people afraid to adopt animals. But I wish someone had reminded us that strange animals can be unpredictable — and therefore very dangerous. If I had thought of it, my daugher would have been much more closely supervised until we all knew this beautiful dog much better. — SHOULD HAVE KNOWN BETTER

DEAR SHOULD HAVE KNOWN BETTER: Don't blame yourself for what happened. You had no way of knowing what trauma the dog might have experienced before it found a home with you.

I would advise anyone considering adopting a stray or abandoned pet to have it examined by a veterinarian for possible medical or behavioral problems that may not be immediately apparent. (A rabies vaccination is a must!) And allow at least one month for the animal to adapt to its new surroundings before completely letting your guard down.

DEAR ABBY: You were off the mark when you stated that you and I pay for the many changes in stamp design. Stamp collecting is big business worldwide, and the millions of stamp collectors request a continuous flow of commemorative stamps to honor famous people, places and important events. Collectors purchase these stamps, which are never used for postage, and the sale of those stamps more than pays for the stamp design, and even makes a profit for the U.S. Postal Service. — MICHAEL J. DIGLIO

DEAR MICHAEL: You're right. And since I published that letter I have learned that thousands of stamp designs are submitted, most of which are rejected. Two recent rejects: a stamp with beer-flavored glue on the back, and a commemorative stamp to honor the first outhouse.

Don't put off writing thank-you notes, letters of sympathy, etc., because you don't know what to say. Get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. AT WIT'S END

Food is best bait for children

By Erma Bombeck

My husband said the other day, "We haven't seen our kids in a while."

"You want to see your kids?" I asked. "I can arrange it."

Bombeck

"You're not going to call and tell them we're changing the will again, are you? We've overdone that one."

"No, no. At least one of them will be here tonight for dinner. Trust me."

Sure enough. At 6 p.m. we heard a key in the door and our son walked in. My husband was astounded. "How did you do that?" he asked.

"It's easy. I defrosted and cooked two thin pork chops for dinner."

That's the way it's been ever since they got their own apartments. I cook enough spaghetti to feed Sicily and no one shows. I nuke two small pieces of leftover pizza for dinner and they fly in from out of state.

How do they know I've cooked for two? It's one of the great mysteries of child raising. Kids were equipped with radar long before it went commercial. They knew when there were bananas hidden behind the popcorn popper in the pantry. They knew when there was a candy bar in the meat keeper in the refrigerator. It was not possible for a leftover piece of pie to survive a child in search of breakfast. When a dish rattles, they hear it, no matter where they are.

When you think about it, mothers set themselves up for it. We've dedicated our lives to feeding our kids. Nothing went hungry. I fed a cold; I fed a fever. If an infant cried, I stuffed a bottle in her mouth. If a child fell off a bicycle, I promised him ice cream.

"You may not graduate? Have a piece of cake."

"Your car was totaled? Have you had lunch?"

"You're not overweight. You're too thin. Eat!"

We have created an image for ourselves of being able to feed a crowd on a pound of hamburger and bring forth food when the cupboards are bare. It has always been. My grandmother would scurry when we pulled into the driveway. She'd open cans with one hand and set four more places at the table with the other. My mother did the same thing when five of us parked in front of the house at dinnertime.

Now that I think about it ... maybe they just wanted to see us.

Staff Report

West Texas Miss T.E.E.N. Jennifer Michele Nichols, 17, of Midland recently competed in the Texas Miss T.E.E.N. pageant in Dallas and was named one of the top 10 finalists out of a field of 65 contestants from around the state. The winner of the Texas Miss T.E.E.N. crown was Letitia Ann Smith of San Antonio.

The five judging catagories were scholastic achievement, volunteer service, personal interview, formal presentation and either talent or speech.

Miss Nichols competed in the speech catagory. Her speech was titled "Society's Finest," with the theme being "teenagers encouraging excellence nationally."

Miss Nichols is the daughter of Jeanne Nichols of Midland and Joe Nichols of Los Gatos, Calf. She will be a senior at Midland High School in the fall.

DRESS: Cothing creates an image

(From 6B)

A woman executive says, "Many women grow up shopping and loving to put clothes together, but I didn't — and still don't. I'm very low-maintenance; I don't look in the mirror more than once a day. But what struck me when I went to the consultant is that even though I'm not looking at myself, others are looking at me."

Sometimes, however, the issues that keep upwardly mobile workers from dressing the part run deeper. Clothing choices can be evidence of complex feelings about family, power, money, autonomy and even sex.

A WOMAN WHO wears young-looking clothes may unconsciously like the fact that people are surprised by her competence; a man who wears a beard and a sport coat may want to be accepted for his individuality; a woman who dresses in sexy clothes may be more confident about trading on her looks than her brains.

The underlying problem for most people, according to Grillo, is class.

"People even admit that the reason they have trouble changing the way they dress is the way they were brought up. Those who dress poorly often grew up in working-class homes where they had no role models for professional dressing; those who dress too conservatively grew up in ultraconservative families where anything fashionable was seen as flashy, a bad thing."

Before the concept of image consulting took hold, says Kaufman, companies considered inappropriate dress to be evidence of a personality defect, a sign that the employee was rebellious or deliberately undermining his or her — and thus the company's — image.

Now, the widely held notion among employers and consultants alike is that most employees are making an effort to dress right, but some, for whatever reason, don't quite get it.

No one wakes up in the morning and decides not to look his or her best. What can be jarring is to discover that your best is just not good enough.

Image consulting — the very concept of clothes-as-image — is a relatively new field, emerging just in the past decade or so.

Originally, image was a rule-bound notion, a la "Dress for Success." It ignored such considerations as fashion and flattery and focused on conveying the "right" message with clothes.

For women, the definition of what was right was what most closely imitated the image of powerful men.

In general, says Joyce Grillo, "Companies today want women to look professional, yet more chic — to wear makeup, jewelry, fashionable clothes — as opposed to the standard conservative business suit."

Despite loosening of restrictions, image has, if anything, become a more powerful concept.

"More companies are recognizing that deals can be lost if a salesperson doesn't have the image expected of that company," says Bixler. "Fortunately, it's not a difficult problem to correct if the employee is willing."

This idea — that it's easier and more cost-effective to change the employee you have than to get a new one — has not only popularized image consulting, but also has led companies to extend the service to a wider range of employees.

While an increasing number of companies are running group image sessions for employees — it's less expensive and it sidesteps the awkwardness of singling out an individual — the real boom is in one-on-one consultations.

"In groups, people never think you're talking to them; they think you're talking to the person next to them who looks terrible," says Atlanta consultant Lynne Henderson. "The employees who benefit most from a group seminar are those who need it the least."

IN AN INDIVIDUAL consultation, of course, the focus is indisputably you. Corporate makeovers typically start with an extended interview, including a critique of your current wardrobe and a plan for your new one, and usually include a makeup lesson, a visit to the hairdresser and one or more shopping trips for everything from dresses and shoes to jewelry and pantyhose.

Nine times out of 10, says Grillo, money is a big issue — not that people can't afford new clothes, but they're uncomfortable with what they see as a luxury. And once they land in her office, she says, "they're afraid they're going to end up wearing someone else's image."

When employees who are sent to image consultants say the process is painful, or intrusive, or unfair, it's hard not to agree with them.

When their bosses proclaim that — painful or unfair — a proper image is key to success in the business world, they are right as well. When consultants transform someone's look and wardrobe in a way that impresses upper management, they are doing a service to that person — if not to his ego, at least to his career.

What is troubling, perhaps, is that image has assumed so much power, for many corporations and individuals alike. Today, accept it or not, you are what you look like you are.

While in the beginning image consultants may simply have decoded existing clothing messages, later it seemed as if they were actually creating those messages, promoting the importance of image.

"Image consultants convince upper management that what they do is important; then management looks for results," says psychologist Michael Solomon, Ph.D., head of the marketing department at Rutgers University, who has conducted studies on image and image consultants.

But however image became so important, the bottom line is that it is important.

"It's ridiculous to say it's not," says Susan Karp, vice president in a major bank's human resources department. "Your first reaction to a person is based on how he or she looks. If someone's unkempt, she could be a genius and you might never get to know it."

Collusion again

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball owners conspired against free agents for a third consecutive season, an arbitrator ruled Wednesday.
The Major League Baseball Players Association said it had received a copy of arbitrator George Nicolau's decision.
Arbitrators previously ruled that owners conspired against free agents following the 1985 and 1986 seasons. Wednesday's decision covered those players who became free agents after the 1987 season.
Among the 76 free agents in the Collusion III case are Jack Clark, Gary Gaetti, Dave Righetti, Dave Smith, Jack Morris, Mike Witt and Paul Molitor. Some may be able to become free agents again under the precedents established in the collusion cases.

Colt boycotts camp

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Eric Dickerson, the Indianapolis Colts' premier running back, reiterated his claim this week that he will not attend training camp.
Dickerson told The Indianapolis News on Tuesday that if the Colts expect him to be in camp next week, "they're going to be disappointed."
The camp opens Wednesday at Anderson University for rookies and free agents. Most veterans, including Dickerson, are expected to be in camp by July 26.
General Manager Jim Irsay says Dickerson will receive a "five-day" letter from the club if he isn't in camp then. Under the letter's conditions, a player is suspended for the season if he doesn't show up within five days.
"They might as well send it now. It'll give them a head start," said Dickerson, who has demanded either a trade or a $2 million a year contract. "But send it to Texas or California because I'm not going to be in Indiana."

Old-timers top list of Open favorites

Associated Press

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland — The old, the older and the oldest are in their element this week at the 119th British Open.

On every side, the references to time and times gone by are inescapable. And when it comes to picking a winner, even the bookies like the chances of an old-timer topping the list on Sunday.

The oldest of all the world's tournaments is being played at the oldest course in the world, the Royal and Ancient Golf Club of St. Andrews. Fronting the 18th fairway is the golf shop of Old Tom Morris, with a sign bearing the dates he and son Young Tom won the Open: 1861, '62, '65, '67, '68, '69, '70, '72.

And in a year in which older athletes are reigning in other sports — a ninth Wimbledon title for Martina Navratalova, a sixth no-hitter for Nolan Ryan — golf's over-the-hill gang has also been chasing in.

There's the trio of 40-year-olds, Lanny Wadkins, Tom Kite and Tom Watson; and slightly older Hale Irwin, 45, and Ray Floyd, 47.

There's even older Jack Nicklaus and Lee Trevino, a pair of 50-year-olds who insist they are something better than sentimental favorites in the tournament that begins Thursday.

And there's the oldest man in the field, Arnold Palmer, at 60 no threat to the title but providing an exercise in nostalgia with a farewell appearance in the Open on the course he first played in this championship 30 years ago.

Britain's legal bookies take a more businesslike and less sentimental view of things, however, and have installed Nick Faldo of England, ailing Ian Woosnam of Wales and unlucky Greg Norman of Australia as the men most likely to succeed.

At the same time, even the bookmakers are bowing to age. William Hill, one of the biggest betting shops, is offering 8-1 odds that the winner will be 40 years or older.

"Off what he's done the last few years, he's obviously the favorite," Kite said.

Faldo won the last two Masters and the 1987 British Open. He lost the 1988 U.S. Open in a playoff and was one stroke out of a playoff for the Open title a month ago.

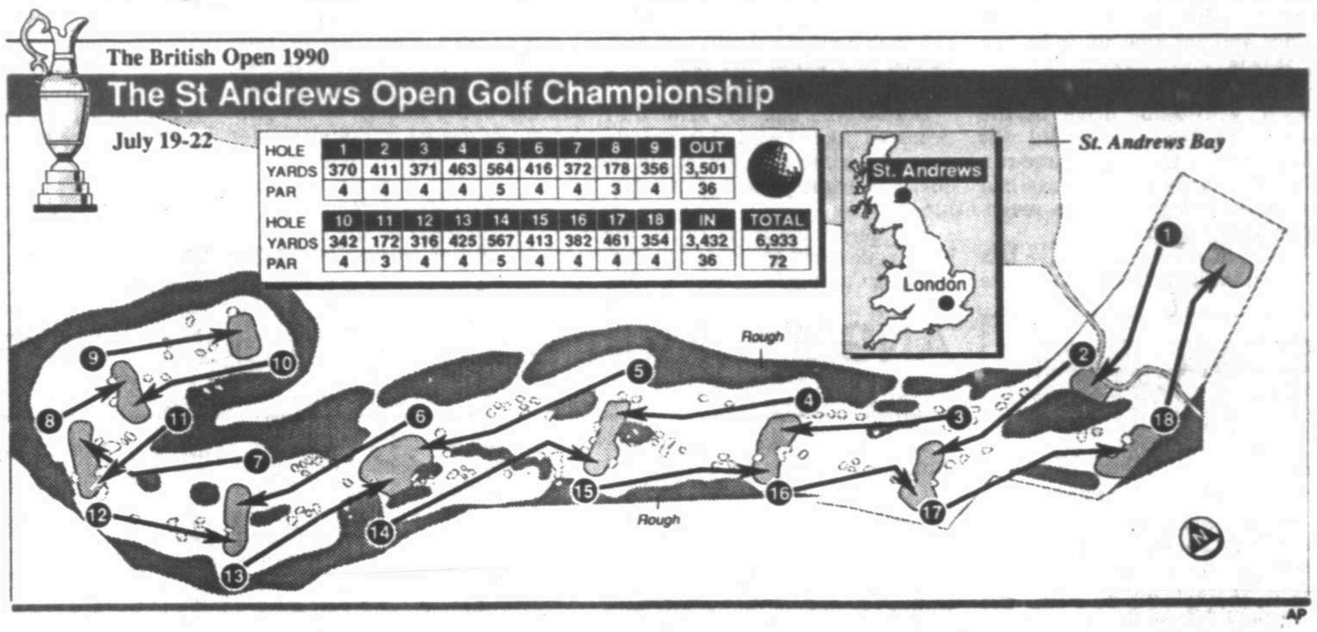

Woosnam, who packs enormous power into a 5-foot-5 frame, won the last two tournaments on the European tour and leads the European Order of Merit. His chances of gaining the major title he needs to advance among the great European stars are lessened, however, by a chronic back ailment.

The two Spanish stars, Jose-Maria Olazabal and three-time British Open winner Seve Ballesteros, also are having problems, though not of a physical nature.

Ballesteros said he's suffering from a lack of confidence. Olazabal is simply in a slump, "the worst I've played in years," he said.

Mark Calcavecchia, who last year became the first American to win the Open since 1984, and Curtis Strange are the apparent leaders of the United States' 51-man contingent.

Calcavecchia has not won since his British Open victory last year.

Farris Strambler, who has added 10 pounds to his frame since leading Midland Lee to the regional playoffs, has one prep game remaining.

Lee running back joins Texas elite

■ Farris Strambler becomes the eighth straight Rebel to earn an invitation to the Texas High School All-Star Game.

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

The 1989 Midland Lee Rebels desperately wanted to play in one more high school football game.
They never got the chance.
The Rebels, who sought a berth in the state championship game, were cut down in the regional playoff, 17-3 by Arlington Lamar. And for the seniors, Lee's 9-3 record officially put an end to their days on the prep gridiron.
For all but one.
Farris Strambler, Lee's combination thoroughbred and workhorse who forged a school-record 4,026 yards rushing on 531 carries, has a game yet to play. And he says he'll play it as if it were that one more game the Rebels had in mind a season ago.
Strambler is taking his act to Houston for the Texas High School All-Star Game that kicks off Aug. 2 in conjunction with the Texas High School Coaches Association's annual coaching school.
"It's like the state championship I didn't get to play in but wanted to," said Strambler, home from a summer session at Coffeyville (Kan.) Community College, where he is working to bring his classroom talents up with the Division I level of his football.
"I'm going to do my best and treat it like the championship and let the chips fall where they may."

Midland win ugly

By Bill Grimes
Staff Writer

When nothing else worked, the Midland Angels looked to Brandy Vann.
Coming in with one out and the bases loaded in the ninth inning, Vann struck out both Jackson Met batters that he faced to preserve a 10-9 win in Texas League action Wednesday at Angels Stadium.
Vann's heroics restored some sanity to a game characterized by sloppy fielding, wind-blown home runs, and mediocre relief pitching. But despite blowing the lead when Jackson scored four runs off three pitchers in the top of the eighth inning, the Haloes are 6-2 since the All-Star break after a 5-11 run immediately prior to the break
"This was just another Midland grinder," Midland skipper Eddie Rodriguez said. "Vann came in and shut them down."
Somebody had to. After starter Glenn Carter threw six strong innings on the heels of a three-run Met first inning, Robert Moore, David Martinez and Tim Meeks retired only three of the 13 batters they faced.
But Jackson, holder of the league's lowest team ERA going into Wednesday's game, fared little better on the mound. Howard Nichols gave Midland a 5-4 lead with his sixth homer in a Midland uniform.

Cowboys take the heat in Austin

■ Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson, who does not want a team that wilts in the fourth quarter, says of the Cowboys' new training site: "The hotter the better."

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

AUSTIN — The Dallas Cowboys opened their first-ever NFL training camp in Texas on Wednesday, foregoing the cool of California's sea breezes for the hope of forging a winner in Hill Country heat and humidity.
They thought of everything but the rain.
And the rains fell Wednesday, christening the official opening of the Cowboys' new camp.
The Cowboys, who suffered through a 1-15 season in 1989, never had to worry about rain in normally dry Thousand Oaks, Calif. Until this week, they weren't worrying about it in Austin, either. It had been weeks since rain fell.
But it rained for three straight days by the official opening, forcing the cancellation of a get-acquainted golf outing.
The Cowboys have two grass practice fields at St. Edward's University. Both will be soggy when two-a-day practices start today.
"The fields are in good condition and we'll be able to practice as scheduled on Thursday," coach Jimmy Johnson said. "The rain doesn't bother me. The most successful season I had at Miami we practiced in a monsoon almost every day. Then we went undefeated."
Johnson also likes Austin because temperatures are usually in the mid-90s in July. They averaged about 10 degrees less in Thousand Oaks.
"I'm a firm believer in conditioning a team in the heat," Johnson said earlier. "The hotter the better. I don't want a team that wilts in the fourth quarter. I think it makes you more mentally tough."
Johnson won a national championship at the University of Miami and he gave part of the credit to his team's conditioning under the hot Florida sun.
Johnson wasn't predicting an undefeated season for the Cowboys, but said,
"I feel good about the talent we have and believe we have a chance to win when we take the field. We couldn't say that a year ago."

Palmeiro, Witt burn Baltimore

Associated Press

Hot-hitting Rafael Palmeiro got four hits, including a home run, and Bobby Witt struck out 10 in winning his fourth consecutive game as the Texas Rangers beat the Baltimore Orioles 7-1 Wednesday night.

Palmeiro drove in three runs and went 4-for-5. He is 14-for-29 with 11 RBIs in his last seven games, and has nine hits in his last 13 at-bats.

Palmeiro's 10th homer of the season, a two-run drive in the third, gave Texas a 3-0 lead. His RBI single highlighted a three-run fifth that made it 6-0. Texas had lost three straight after a seven-game winning streak.

Witt (7-8), who allowed five hits in seven innings, has not lost since June 17 in rebounding after an 0-4 start. He was replaced by Brad Arnsberg in the eighth after throwing 127 pitches.

American

Red Sox 5, Twins 4

Boston tied an American League record by grounding into six double plays but still beat Minnesota in a game that featured a record 10 double plays.

Boston won one day after they defeated the Twins 1-0 despite grounding into a major league record two triple plays and one double play.

The 10 double plays broke the big-league mark of nine set by Boston and California on May 1, 1966.

Brewers 3, Angels 2

Dave Parker hit a two-run single in the first inning and Rob Deer homered in the second, leading Milwaukee over California.

Winner Mark Knudson (7-4) and loser Jim Abbott (6-8) each pitched shutouts in their last starts, but neither came close this time.

Athletics 4, Indians 1
Athletics 5, Indians 2

Jose Canseco hit two of Oakland's four home runs off Rod Nichols and Dave Stewart allowed six hits in 8⅓ innings as the Athletics completed a doubleheader sweep of Cleveland.

White Sox 7, Tigers 5

Sammy Sosa's two-run double — his second of the game — capped a three-run, ninth-inning comeback as Chicago beat Detroit.

Mariners 5, Blue Jays 2

Matt Young pitched his second career two-hitter and Pete O'Brien hit his first home run since May 2 as Seattle beat Toronto despite four errors by the Mariners.

Yankees 5, Royals 3

NEW YORK (AP) — Roberto Kelly delivered a two-out, two-run single in the eighth inning and Oscar Azocar singled, doubled and homered in his second major-league game Wednesday, leading the New York Yankees to a 5-3 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

Scott blanks Mets

Associated Press

Mike Scott pitched a four-hitter for Houston's first complete-game shutout this season and Javier Ortiz singled in the game's only run in the eighth inning as the Astros beat the New York Mets 1-0 Wednesday night.

Scott struck out four and walked none in his third complete game of the season and first shutout since June 2, 1989.

The loss, combined with Pittsburgh's 11-2 victory over San Francisco, dropped the Mets two games behind the Pirates in the NL East.

The Mets' last hit was their undoing. Scott and Frank Viola were locked in a scoreless duel when Todd Hundley, the eighth-place hitter, doubled with two outs. Manager Bud Harrelson elected to pinch-hit for Viola, but Scott retired Mackey Sasser for the third out.

Pirates 11, Giants 2

Jeff King drove in five runs, four with a grand slam, to back Doug Drabek's pitching and hitting as Pittsburgh ended a three-game losing streak by routing San Francisco.

Jose Lind and Sid Bream also homered as the Pirates, held to two runs and seven hits in the first two games of the series, had 13 hits against four pitchers.

Reds 8, Expos 7

O'Neill single to left, just over the glove of third baseman Tim Wallach, scored Barry Larkin, who tripled to right with two outs off Dave Schmidt (4-1).

National

Cubs 4, Padres 2

Phillies 4, Braves 3

Ricky Jordan's two-run double highlighted a three-run eighth inning that gave Philadelphia a victory over Atlanta.

Dodgers 6, Cardinals 1

Hubie Brooks had three hits, scored twice and drove in two runs as Los Angeles Dodgers beat St. Louis.

Brooks singled and scored in the sixth and eighth innings and added a two-run single in the ninth. Eddie Murray added a solo homer in the sixth inning off Jose DeLeon (6-9).

Ramon Martinez (11-4) went seven innings and allowed seven hits, walked two and struck out eight, including Willie McGee three times, bringing his major-league leading total to 142. Jay Howell pitched the final two innings.

ANGELS: Midland's four-run eighth sinks Mets

From 1C

Some insurance. The policy was canceled when Jackson touched Moore for four in the eighth on a pair of two-run homers. Martinez, 4-0, relieved Moore after the second homer and got the win despite allowing four of the five batters he faced to reach base.

The Angels made him a winner with four in the bottom of the eighth off Met reliever Aguedo Vasquez, 4-6. Doug Davis' leadoff triple and a two-run bloop single by Nichols were the big blows.

STAR: Back adds muscle

From 1C

It's a familiar story for Lee, which has landed one of its grid stars in the prestigious game eight years running. And no one should be more familiar to Lee fans than Strambler, the running back who entered the 1989 campaign with no fewer than 1,308 yards already to his credit and the loftiest of expectations for his future.

They were expectations well conceived. Strambler rewrote the Lee record book when he eclipsed the single-season touchdown mark of 25 with 31 as a senior. He scored an incredible six TDs in the Abilene Cooper clash alone.

His 375 carries in 1989 are a school best, as are the 2,718 yards that they produced.

"It was more fun than I thought football could ever get," Strambler described the 1989 campaign. "We were all friends, sweating together, working together and working with the same coaches we'd known forever.

Strambler didn't get as far as he wanted after the season either; his entry into the backfield at the University of Oklahoma was delayed by academic pitfalls. But he said his first summer session at Coffeyville was a success, and he hopes to meet Division I academic standards in just one year's time there.

"In high school you just turn stuff in for a grade, but in college you have a lot more time to concentrate on subjects one at a time without having to run off to the next one when the bell rings," he explained.

"And they say they're excited about having a guy from Texas come up there and play football because they say Texas has the best football players there are.

"Being from Texas, I'd have to agree with them."

Strambler will get to meet some of his peers — the highest quality players in the state — when he reports July 26 for the All-Star game. They will be the best he has played with, or against.

"It's a good opportunity to play in a game with the same caliber people," he said. "If I get my head torn off it will probably happen in college.

"I feel confident going into it. I just need to do a little more running," he said, adding that he's down a tenth of a second to 4.5 in the 40.

But the college food and accompanying weight room have done something to Strambler that no amount of running could have done. Strambler will go into the All-Star game carrying 205 pounds of sinew and muscle. That's 10 more pounds than he weighed when Lee made its regional appearance in the state playoffs and his 140-yard performance proved moot.

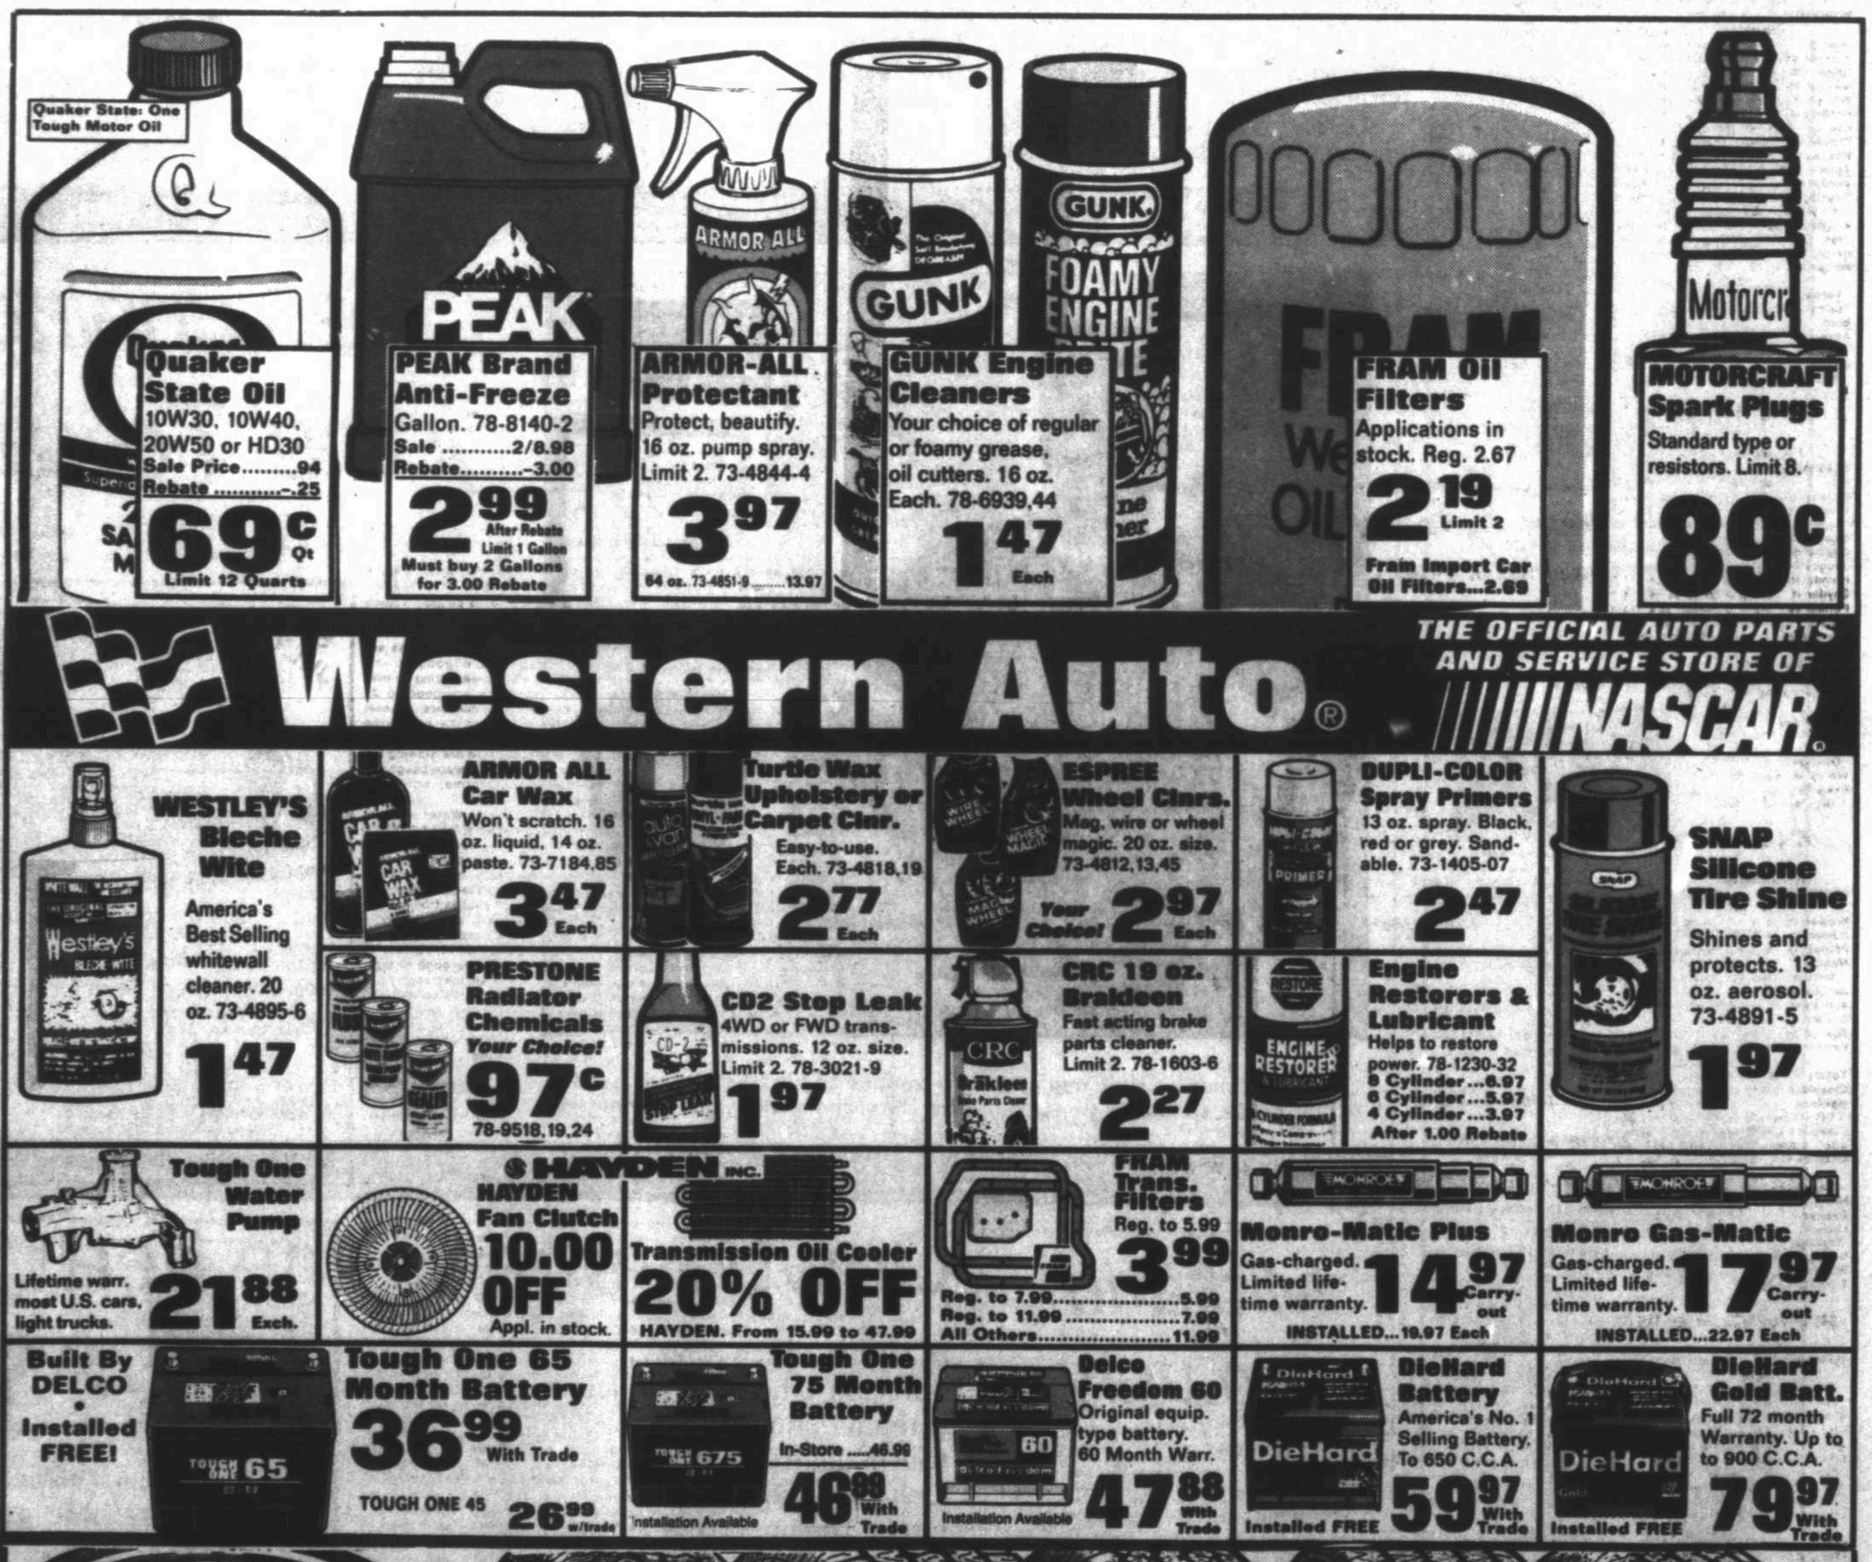

Strambler will not be a Permian Basin loner when he arrives in Houston. Odessa Permian, the undefeated 1989 state Class 5A champions, will be represented by wideout Lloyd Hill, who will be Strambler's roommate there.

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Arnold Palmer is suing a Japanese company for backing out of a $46 million deal to buy his Bay Hill Golf Club and using his name "to try to turn a quick profit."

Palmer is seeking $11 million, including $8 million in punitive damages, from WDI Systems Inc.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

THURSDAY, JULY 19, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: A hectic but fun-filled schedule will help you lay the foundation for important financial success. Overseas dealings could prove more time-consuming than anticipated in September. Trust and patience are crucial to romantic and marital bliss. Others will live up to your expectations, so show your love and confidence in December. Curb spending after New Year's Day. Your generosity toward others will be richly repaid next March or April.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A great day for buying and selling. Negotiations begun today can mean long-term financial gains. An old unsolved problem resurfaces, requiring special attention. Say "no" to credit card debt.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Answer important letters and return all phone calls promptly. Extra money may be forthcoming due to another person's error. Make certain it is yours to keep before spending it. Avoid dramatic changes.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Devote spare moments to solving small problems. Your financial situation improves. All looks fair and clear on the romantic horizon. Tenderness and a positive approach accomplish wonders.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Stick to your priorities if others try to make claims on your time. Be charming but firm with someone who is obstinate. Refuse to be hurried when considering a letter or contract.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Show more understanding about the needs of teen-agers. Your having confidence in them means more than your words of advice. Avoid making new demands on mate. Cut entertainment expenses.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Curb a tendency to be a loner and pay more attention to domestic matters. Creative work is satisfying and could lead to a second income. A new acquaintance shows admiration for your intellect.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Pay attention to tax matters. A new policy may be beneficial but will require some time to be put into effect. Do not rely on a prominent person's support in a crunch.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your special brand of common sense is in great demand today. Lend an ear to a friend's tale of woe. A platonic relationship with romantic undercurrents can be good for the ego.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Show tact and consideration when working alongside less-experienced people. If possible, postpone any travel plans. Rewards will be greater if you go later. Your energy level soars tonight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Today could mark a turning point in your life. Expand your business and forge new alliances. Talks with your romantic partner could lead to marriage. Family and friends applaud your choice.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Employer or higher-up may be in a difficult mood. Know it, and watch your step. Projects you handle alone can be especially rewarding. Develop creative pastimes to occupy hours when you are alone.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A stranger could play a major role in your career or business now. Try to interest your mate or partner in activities you can share. Plan a special rendezvous for tomorrow night!

TODAY'S CHILDREN have vivid imaginations and a strong interest in painting, music or writing. Count on these youngsters to change moods swiftly. Independent and courageous, these Cancerians may be reluctant to take advice from parents or teachers. They are interested in clothes and will want to wear the latest fashions. Their taste in books is eclectic. They make excellent debaters, thanks to their keen observations.

The bidding:

Opening lead: Nine of ◇

An avoidance play at bridge is much like the punt in football. In the latter, you turn over the ball to the enemy in what you hope will be good field position for your team. In the former, you try to surrender a trick to the player who can't hurt you.

North-South conducted a sound, old-fashioned auction. Since as little as the jack of hearts in partner's hand, or a lucky opening lead, could be enough for 10 tricks, South did not fool around with his rebid.

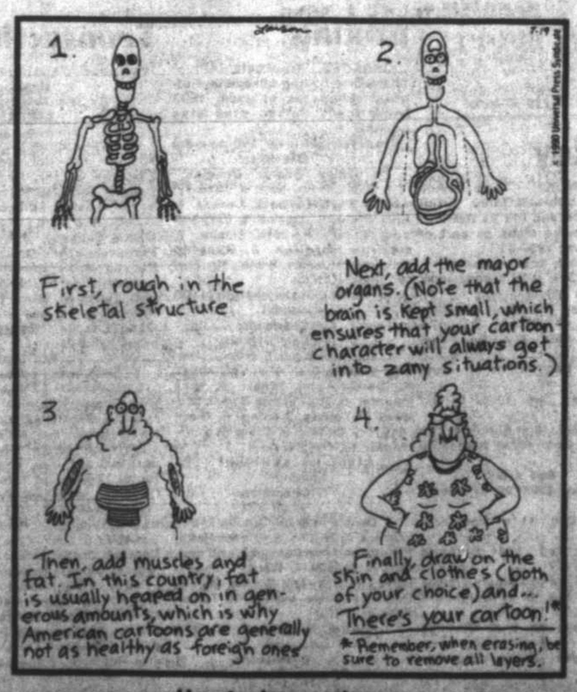

Declarer won the opening lead in hand and counted nine tricks. The fulfilling trick could come from either a heart ruff in dummy or a successful trump finesse, if the opponents were forced to lead the suit. To prevent the ruff, that's what they had to do, so at trick two declarer exited with a low heart. East won and shifted to a trump.

Declarer tried the finesse (going up with the ace would have been no better). West won and returned a trump, and eventually South had to surrender two more heart tricks—down one.

Better is to lead the king of hearts at trick two, in the hope of forcing West to win. If that player does so, and has only a doubleton trump, the defenders cannot lead spades without sacrificing their trump trick. As the cards lie, though, West can win and exit safely with a trump. But when declarer wins and leads another heart, the defenders are caught in an untenable position. If East is allowed to win the trick, declarer will get to ruff a heart, since East is out of trumps. And if West wins, he faces a choice of losing options—either sacrifice his trump trick or allow declarer to ruff a heart. Both lines yield the contract.

Madonna misses benefit to go jogging in Hyde Park

LONDON (AP) — Pop star Madonna went jogging in Hyde Park on Wednesday and missed out on an invitation to join fellow pop stars launching a charity record for Romanian orphans.

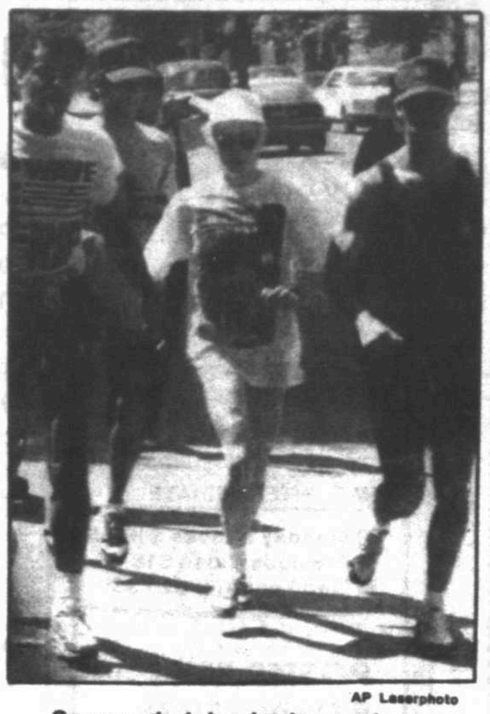

Madonna arrived in London on Wednesday and went for a run in the central London Park, surrounded by eight bodyguards and pursued by reporters, photographers and fans.

When the crowd got too close the bodyguards stepped in and the singer, wearing skin-tight yellow cycling shorts, a T-shirt and baseball cap, said: "Uh oh, this is going to get rough."

Olivia Harrison, chairwoman of the Romanian Angel Appeal, said she invited Madonna to join her husband, former Beatle George Harrison, and his fellow ex-Beatle Ringo Starr for the launch of the record "Nobody's Child."

The lunch-time event was held at the Hyde Park Hotel where Madonna is staying for her "Blonde Ambition" tour, but she did not show up.

Mrs. Harrison said the Romanian Angel Appeal raised $1.8 million, which will go to improve food, clothing, care and training at orphanages in Romania.

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (AP) — Dimitrios I, spiritual leader of 250 million Orthodox Christians, arrived here Wednesday to attend a service in the Ukrainian Orthodox Church's oldest American parish.

A crowd stood three deep on the sidewalk outside St. Mary's Ukrainian Orthodox Church to greet Dimitrios, the first Orthodox patriarch to come to the United States, home of 6 million Eastern Orthodox Christians.

Dimitrios, 75, waved to the crowd as he walked slowly up the steps to the church, which was built in 1917. Young girls dressed in traditional Ukrainian and Greek clothing scattered rose petals in his path.

Caray, in his 46th season as a sportscaster and ninth with the Cubs, broadcast Tuesday's San Diego-Chicago game from the bleachers in center field.

Caray began the tradition of working from the bleachers once a year during the 1970s when he was with the Chicago White Sox.

He kept doing it after joining the Cubs in 1982 but skipped it the last two years after suffering a stroke in February 1988.

"I feel great and I enjoy being out there with the fans, it's a lot of fun," he said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Veterans of the only joint Soviet-U.S. manned space mission held a reunion to mark the 15th anniversary of the flight and encouraged more international cooperation in space.

On July 17, 1975, an Apollo spacecraft docked with a Soviet Soyuz craft, orbiting the Earth in tandem at speeds of more than 18,000 mph. Four of the mission's five veterans met Tuesday to commemorate the history-making event.

Apollo-Soyuz "showed it is possible for people who have great differences to cooperate in space," cosmonaut Valery N. Kubasov said at a news conference at the Museum of Science and Industy.

Also present were retired Lt. Gen. Thomas P. Stafford, commander of the Apollo mission, astronaut Donald K. "Deke" Slayton and Maj. Gen. Alexi Leonov, the Soyuz commander. Leonov was the first person to walk in space and is chief of cosmonaut training in Moscow.

Oil lower

NEW YORK (AP) — Crude oil prices closed slightly lower Wednesday after advancing earlier in the session on rumors that Iraq was planning military action against Kuwait.

The August contract for West Texas Intermediate fell 10 cents to $18.55 a 42-gallon barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange after having risen as high as $18.85 earlier in the day while the current posting price held at $17.25.

Iraq accused Kuwait Wednesday of stealing oil worth $2.4 billion from Iraqi territory near their border. The accusation marked a sharp escalation in Iraq's campaign against fellow members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries who have exceeded production limits set by the cartel.

During Wednesday's trading, rumors circulated that Iraq was massing troops at its border with Kuwait. Investors snapped up oil contracts amid fears that a war could break out between the two countries and curtail the supply of oil coming out of the Persian Gulf region.

But as the session wore on, the rumors were not substantiated, the market calmed and the price of crude fell back.

Dollar up

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar ended mostly higher in choppy trading Wednesday after falling overseas, as congressional testimony from Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan failed to erase marketwide confusion over U.S. interest rates.

Dollar rates in Europe: 1.6440 German marks; 1.4085 Swiss francs; 5.5160 French francs; 1.8622 Dutch guilders; 1,203.75 Italian lire; and 1.1530 Canadian dollars.

Gold fell in London to a late bid price of $360.25 an ounce from $361.25 bid late Tuesday. On New York's Comex, silver bullion for current delivery settled at $4.884 a troy ounce, up 7 cents from late Tuesday.

Business facts

Iraq threatens force within OPEC

■ After earlier hinting at violence against fellow OPEC members who violate production quotas, Iraq has now made open threats of terrorism or war against those cartel members who violate quotas to drive oil prices down.

N.Y. Times News Service

CAIRO, Egypt — President Saddam Hussein of Iraq on Tuesday openly threatened to use force against Arab oil-exporting nations if they did not curb their excess production, which he said had weakened oil prices and hurt the Iraqi economy.

The Iraqi leader did not mention particular countries by name in his nationally broadcast address, but his warning was clearly aimed at Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates.

In the past few weeks, the Iraqi oil minister, Issam Abdul-Rahim al-Chalaby, has frequently singled out the two Arab nations, which have been producing oil at rates far above the quotas mandated by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, as the main culprits in the steep fall of oil prices in recent months.

In response to the Iraqi leader's comments, two Arab officials said that Baghdad might follow up on its threat with acts of terrorism or other forms of "intimidation" unless Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates abided by their production quotas.

Moreover, both Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates provided financial backing for Iraq's eight-year-long war against Iran, which ended in an armistice in 1988.

Two weeks ago, Iran and Iraq began to negotiate a final peace treaty with direct talks in Geneva.

Hussein's threat, according to analysts and senior members of other Arab governments, underscores the shifts that have occurred in the region in the aftermath of the Iran-Iraq war and the importance the Iraqi leader places on the recent push for higher prices by three of OPEC's leading producers — Saudi Arabia, Iran and Iraq.

Hussein charged that the oil production policies of the countries violating their quotas were the result of the influence of the United States, which seeks to obtain cheap oil and harm Iraq.

"The policies of some Arab rulers are American," the Iraqi leader was quoted as having said by news agencies from Baghdad.

Natural gas vehicles to be built

■ Gas companies will pay GM $1 million to build nation's first natural gas fleet.

Hearst News Service

HOUSTON – A consortium of California and Texas gas companies has agreed to pay General Motors Corp. more than $1 million to help fund research on the nation's first fleet of mass-produced natural-gas vehicles.

GM is the first Big Three automaker to make a move into the emerging natural-gas vehicle market. The money will be used to complete final research and testing on a line of midsized trucks powered by the clean-burning fuel.

The consortium is made up of about 10 gas utilities, distributors and pipeline companies, including Entex and Enron Corp. of Houston.

Other members of the consortium include San Diego Gas & Electric, Southern California Gas Co. and Lone Star Gas Co.

According to sources close to the consortium, the auto giant has agreed to initially produce 1,000 of the half-ton trucks by 1991. If that effort succeeds, officials say GM is prepared to increase its natural-gas truck production by more than five times and may even expand the program beyond midrange trucks.

The vehicles will be built at a GM truck plant in Michigan and converted to natural gas by PAS Inc., a Detroit-area supplier.

Details of the GM program, including the complete list of supporters, will be announced Tuesday during joint news conferences in Houston and Los Angeles. The morning briefings are being coordinated by the Texas General Land Office, which has helped link GM with the gas company consortium.

Bruce Hedman, assistant director of power generation for the Chicago-based Gas Research Institute, said the GM project marks an important step forward for the gas industry, which until now has found little support from investors with deep pockets for its natural-gas vehicle marketing effort.

"This is a very positive step," said Hedman. "It's a way to test what kind of market is out there for these kind of vehicles. It's a good precursor to an even bigger program."

Leasing time

Jannine Meir and Rick Doehne open bids Wednesday at the University Lands Lease Sale at the Midland Hilton Hotel. A spokesman for University Lands said the sale was excellent in terms of volume and interest. A total of 45,065 acres were offered for lease, and bids were received on 22,453 acres in 71 tracts.

The total paid for leases was $2,752,661 for an average of $122.38 per acre. The highest price paid was by Phillips Petroleum for $1,500 per acres for 165.4 acres in Andrews County.

Warning sent on 24-hour trading

■ An independent agency has told Congress that round-the-clock trading poses investor risks and may require global regulation.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Warning of serious risks to investors, institutions and the economy from round-the-clock trading in stocks and futures, an independent agency of Congress said Tuesday that it might fall to lawmakers to lay out regulatory policy toward the emerging global marketplace.

Whether the regulatory agencies share a common view is not clear, a report by the Office of Technology Assessment said, and it added that congressional action on global trading was as important as landmark legislation that created the Securities and Exchange Commission in 1934.

The securities commission, the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, the Federal Reserve Board and the Treasury Department share jurisdiction over stock and futures trading.

The technology for 24-hour trading is "poised for a takeoff," the agency said, but risks remain because a clear international regulatory system has not been developed.

The report is part of a continuing study by the congressional agency of the impact of technology on the stock and futures markets, a draft of which was harshly criticized by the securities and futures industries.

The draft questioned some fundamental practices of the two industries, including the specialist system of the New York Stock Exchange and the open outcry system of the futures exchanges.

Rep. Doug Barnard Jr., D-Ga., chairman of the House Government Operations Committee's Subcommittee on Commerce, Consumer and Monetary Affairs, asked for the report after the market crash of October 1987.

Representatives of the stock and futures exchanges said they had not seen the report and had no immediate comment.

SCOTT BURNS

The 'breadwinner' without life insurance

By Scott Burns

Q. I am a widow, 49 years old. My husband left me $15,000 insurance. After paying the funeral bill I had $11,000 left. I also have $10,000 in a CD and he has $20,000 in an IRA. Our son will be attending a state university in the fall but his Social Security checks cease in August of this year.

Burns

I earn only $9,000 working for a religious charitable institution but have life and health insurance with my job; I don't see much opportunity for an increase given that I am not trained and have been a homemaker.

My problem is a mortgage payment of $638, utilities of $250, and other expenses. I keep procrastinating about putting the house up for sale and the savings are dwindling. I need advice and direction but I am only getting confused at all these different opinions. — G.G., Glendale, Ariz.

A. In a traditional one breadwinner family there is an old saying — "The man who dies without life insurance doesn't die, he ABSCONDS." I hope other readers who are equally exposed will see the situation your husband's unexpected death has left you in.

Here is what you need to do:

1) PUT THE HOUSE UP FOR SALE. Sometimes it is a good idea to delay a sale to provide a period of adjustment. I wish it was otherwise but you are going to have to deal with a whole lot of losses at once and selling your house is going to be one of those losses. I don't know what your equity is but you are certain to be able to reduce your cost of shelter by renting an apartment or small townhouse. A reduction of $100 a month would be meaningful. More would be great.

2) MAKE AN IMMEDIATE PLAN TO ACQUIRE JOB SKILLS. You can double your income by training for, and getting, a middle level secretarial job. You can't afford to continue in the job you have.

3) TALK WITH YOUR SON. Ready or not, he must become an independent person. You can provide him with moral support, spiritual support, and encouragement... but you can't provide him with money. He will have to work his way through college and it may take him longer than he would like. But he won't be the first or the last to do it. If he was expecting complete parental support this will be difficult for him. But he will survive this... and so will you.

Q. I have purchased a plot of land in the Ozarks and I cannot sell it. Can you tell me what IRS forms I need to declare a loss on the property? — W.M., Falls, Ohio.

A. There are no such forms. You don't have a loss until it is REALIZED and to do that you need to have a sale. In lieu of a sale you could consider deeding the land back to the town or county as a charitable donation. That will get you out from under tax payments and will allow you to recover some of your investment through tax savings. What you recover, however, will depend on your tax bracket.

Q. I have $22,000 in a rollover pension plan. What do you suggest for a high return and also to get away from taxes? I would like to keep the principal and raise the interest. Should I put it in an IRA? — B. M., Fargo, North Dakota.

A. If your money is still in a pension plan and hasn't yet been rolled into an IRA you have the option of putting it in an IRA or doing Income Averaging. On $22,000 this will mean virtually no tax liability. After that, the money will be free to invest as you please, which means you could put in tax-free bonds.

Q. In a recent column you mentioned some software for investigating mutual funds — Mutual Fund Scoreboard. Please tell me the price and where to obtain it. My personal computer is IBM compatible. — J. O., Pine Island, Minn.

A. Readers with IBM compatible microcomputers can obtain this service by calling 800-553-3575; a sample of all fixed income funds OR all equity funds is $69.95; the quarterly subscription rate is $199 for fixed income or equities, $299 for both. The data comes from Morningstar, Inc., a Chicago based company that provides data on mutual funds. Readers who don't have micros but want information on mutual funds should check their print service, Mutual Fund Values. It is formatted very much like the well known Value Line investment survey for common stocks and costs $375 a year. You can subscribe by calling 800-876-5005. If you are not interested in spending that much on your own, check your public library and urge them to subscribe.

Scott Burns' column, syndicated by King Features, is a new feature of the Reporter-Telegram business pages and appears each Thursday and Sunday.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Invest that $40,000, avoid paying taxes

By Bill Doyle

Q. The company for which I work broke up its pension plan last year and we waited a long time for our money. I finally received my $40,000 check. My problem is what to do with it. The company said I will pay approximately 40 percent in taxes if I don't put the money into a rollover individual retirement account within 60 days.

What options do I have? What advice can you give me?

Doyle

A. Even though the tax mentioned almost certainly is on the high side and the actual bite will be a bit less severe, the company did mention your two basis options — assuming you were under age 50 on Jan. 1, 1986.

If you were 50 or older on that date, you can do anything you please with that money and get a bit of a tax break. In that case, one of the 1986 Tax Reform Act's very weird provisions allows you to use five-year averaging based on the federal income tax rates now in effect or 10-year averaging based on 1986 rates.

Both methods are complicated, so you probably will need an accountant. They tax lump-sum retirement plan money as if it were received over either five or ten years, thereby reducing tax dollars due.

However, if you were under age 50 by the date Congress chose when the tax law was written, you should get your pension plan money into a rollover IRA fast — certainly within 60 days after receiving it. Miss that deadline and the entire $40,000 will be taxed as ordinary income.

Unless you have a tremendous amount of other taxable income, not going the IRA route should result in the $40,000 being subject to 28 percent federal income tax. Your return address shows you live where there is a high state income tax, but you are not going to get socked for another 12 percent to reach the 40 percent your company indicated.

My advice is to open an IRA with a bank money market deposit account or a money market mutual fund. There it will earn reasonable interest until you decide where to place it for the long haul, for which you have a wide variety of choices. You can have IRAs at banks, savings and loan associations, credit unions, brokerage firms, mutual funds and insurance companies.

Take your pick. I lean toward mutual funds. But before making the decision, which has to be your own, visit a public library, obtain books on investments and IRAs and study them.

Q. A while back, I heard that a senator was trying to get a bill passed that would enable a first-time home buyer to use his or her pension money as a down payment on a home without penalty. Was that bill ever passed?

A. Nope. A number of proposals along those lines have been made in both houses of Congress. Some would allow tax-free use of IRA or other retirement plan money to pay higher education costs of taxpayers' children and, even, grandchildren.

None of those trial balloons got very far off the ground. And it's a cinch their sponsors knew that would be the case. My suspicious mind comes up with the thought that our overpaid lawgivers who floated those ideas were grandstanding to garner more votes when they stand for reelection.

Q. We are self-employed with no retirement benefits and, at present, no financial security. Our business has just begun to allow some investments and savings and we soon will inherit $20,000.

My husband doesn't like IRAs and wants to invest in land. What do you think?

A. That you should change your husband's way of thinking. You two should be socking away tax-deferred dollars for retirement. By failing to do so, you are making unnecessary gifts of taxes to Uncle Sam.

As self-employed people you can open either Keogh plans or simplified employee pension plans — both of which permit larger contributions than IRAs.

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?

Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:

1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 682-0861;enter your access code which is 78625*

2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticket symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticket guide, or by calling your local stock broker.

3) Once you've entered the numerical code for the ticket symbol, press the (*) star key and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update; which is a few minutes behind market activity.

4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticket symbol. You now have 2 options;
* You may request a quote for another stock by repeating steps 2 & 3.
* You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key (*). Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticket code.
* You may enter up to 10 ticket symbols per call.

5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.

ANALYSIS

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 20.05 points to 2,979.70 by 2 p.m. on Wall Street.

Losers outnumbered gainers by more than 5 to 2 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 413 up, 1,051 down and 493 unchanged.

Before the market opened the Labor Department reported that the consumer price index rose 0.5 percent in June, surpassing many estimates by brokerage-firm economists.

The news raised new worries about the choices facing the Federal Reserve, which has taken steps in the past week to relax its credit policy.

Greater-than-expected inflationary pressures would stand to restrict the Fed's options in its efforts to keep the economy growing and cushion it from the effects of a squeeze on the availability of bank credit.

Interest rates climbed in the credit markets following the CPI report, and the Dow Jones industrial average pulled back from the verge of the 3,000 level, which it had briefly crossed in each of the past three sessions.

A&M to market cabrito

Goat meat could be the fajita of the 1990s

KINGSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Marketing cabrito as the fajita of the 1990s and simultaneously providing an economic boost to landowners is the object of research under way at Texas A&I University.

It's not that researchers have anything against beef or chicken fajitas, but they believe cabrito — or goat — fajitas could be on menus and in meat markets in a couple of years or so.

"Cabrito is good meat, it's lean, it's natural and you don't have to feed goats expensive grain to make them grow," said Wayne Henselka of the Texas A&M University Extension Service.

"It's a food that people like," said Willy Hoefler, Texas A&I University professor of animal science.

And John Ford, a Kleberg County agriculture extension agent, said America's growing concern with health and environment could enhance the marketing possibilities for cabrito.

"People are not only becoming concerned about the earth's environment, but their own personal environment," Ford said. "Cabrito is known to be a leaner meat, and should be good for us, healthwise."

Cabrito is nothing new in South Texas. In fact, the meat from young goats was a major staple long before cattle became king, according to historians.

"Goat and sheep were raised along the Rio Grande and in South Texas extensively before 1885," said Jimmie Picquet, director of the John E. Conner Museum on the Texas A&I campus.

Picquet said both goat milk and meat were used by people working on the early Spanish land grant ranches.

The late Val Lehmann, who served as wildlife manager of the King Ranch for 27 years, wrote in his book, "Forgotten Legions, Sheep in the Rio Grande Plain of Texas," that in the mid-1880s there were more than 2.4 million sheep and goats in South Texas, compared with about 728,000 cattle.

"The land was too scrubby to raise much of anything besides sheep and goats. And when it came to survival, families depended on both the goat's milk and meat to live," Picquet said.

"The first water well on the Kennedy Ranch was drilled in 1885," Picquet said. "This enabled people to turn to cattle ranching and sheep and goats began to decline."

But if Henselka, Hoefler and Ford are successful, cabrito could see a resurgence as a popular dish in South Texas.

The three men are leading the research effort to develop a dependable cabrito supply before attempting to market the meat commercially on a large scale.

Texas A&M, Texas A&I, Kleberg County and the U.S. Stabilization and Conservation Service all are involved in the project, which Hoefler said operates on a shoestring budget.

"What we hope to do is bring the producers, processors and the marketers together on a steady supply basis," Hanselka said.

They also are conducting research on South Texas brush management, capitalizing on the goats' eating habits.

Hoefler and Ford said ideas for the research began about a year ago when they discussed ways to improve the economic future of South Texas landowners.

"A lot of people in South Texas own 40- or 50-acre tracts of land too small to run cattle or for a deer lease," Hoefler said. "But, you can raise goats on small tracts. We want to determine how many."

Ford, who recently came to Kingsville from North Texas, said he doesn't know of any similar study on cabrito being conducted anywhere.

"And, if someone had told me two years ago I would be helping research goat, I would have thought they were kidding," he said. "However, I have already received telephone calls from county agents in California inquiring about our research."

"Nobody knows how many goats there are in South Texas, but we need to know how many, where they are sold, etc., to help determine what management and marketing procedures to follow," Ford said.

Hoefler said he believes the research will reveal landowners can make money in raising goats, once the right mixture of goats per acre is determined.

"We have 80 acres which we will subdivide into five-acre plots. We will stock each plot with a varying number of goats," Hoefler said. "We will determine how long it takes the goats to destroy the vegetation, how high they can reach for brush, reproduction and other matters."

He also said records will be kept to determine how much it costs to maintain a goat herd and how much revenue can be expected.

Hoefler said the research team should have a basic data base compiled by February on the project.

"We won't know, however, when we will be able to provide a dependable market probably for two or three years," Homarketsaid.

Both Ford and Hoefler said there is a market for cabrito in the United States, especially in California, New York, Florida and Texas, where there are large Hispanic populations. They cited the Puerto Rican influence in New York, Cuban immigrants in Florida and Mexican-Americans in Texas and California as targets.

"We have the makings of a steady, potent market in the United States," Ford said.

The market, they believe, will improve if the supply of goat meat comes close to the demand.

"Right now, a milk-fed cabrito weighing between 12 and 15 pounds will cost about $50," Hoeffler said. "It is unbelievably high."

To make cabrito more palatable, Hanselka said, the A&M extension service also will concentrate on potential cabrito consumers, developing information bulletins, recipe books and conducting public seminars on how to cook cabrito.

FTC challenges ARCO purchase

NEWTOWN SQUARE, Pa. (SWN) — ARCO Chemical Co. (NYSE: RCM) announced today that the Federal Trade Commission has filed suit in Federal District Court in Washington to challenge ARCO Chemical's proposed acquisition of the propylene glycol and urethane polyether polyols businesses of Union Carbide Chemicals and Plastics Co. Inc. (NYSE: UK).

Hunt family belongings to auction

WESTLAKE, Texas (AP) — When Congress was investigating Nelson Bunker Hunt's role in the silver market crash a decade ago, the now-bankrupt oilman was asked his net worth.

"My Daddy always told me," Hunt reportedly drawled to the congressional committee, "that people who know how much they're worth generally aren't worth that much."

But Hunt now probably has a pretty good idea of how much he is worth. The accountants working to pay off his creditors are making sure of that.

On Saturday, the personal property of the ex-billionaire will be put up for public auction. Everything from salt-and-pepper shakers and wastebaskets to expensive bronze statues and porcelain figurines will be on the block.

The auction is a rare look at one of America's wealthiest families. The mystique of the Hunt name will accompany every bronze horse statue, every ashtray and desk that is carried from the Circle T.

The items go on display Friday.

Carter Pate, the trustee for the bankrupt estate, expects to take in up to $200,000 from the one-day sale.

"The public will really have a rare inside look into the lives of one of America's most interesting families," Pate told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Texas bankruptcy law allowed Bunker Hunt's family to keep $50,000 worth of possessions from their Dallas home, Kentucky horse farm and the Circle T.

Pate said he doesn't expect Hunt to attend the auction Saturday. But word has it that some of the furnishings may end up back with him. Some of the oilman's children and wealthy friends are expected to purchase items with the intention of returning them once the bankruptcy proceedings are finished.

Inflation up sharply, housing down in June

WASHINGTON (AP) — Surging food, housing and gasoline costs sent consumer prices soaring 0.5 percent in June, more than double the inflation rate of the past two months, the government reported Wednesday.

In other bad economic news, housing construction fell in June for the fifth consecutive month, pushing the level of building activity to its lowest point since the depths of the last recession.

"If you view it as a two-front war, we're getting hammered from both sides ... both on inflation and the growth front," said Martin Regalia, chief economist for the National Council of Savings Institutions.

Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan called the June inflation report "higher than we would like to see" but said much of the increase was due to a temporary jump in housing and gasoline costs and did not reflect an upturn in underlying inflationary pressures.

Greenspan said that despite some problems, the economy was performing reasonably well at present and "is not on the edge of either falling apart into a recession or about to take on highly inflationary characteristics."

He confirmed that the central bank had eased credit slightly last week and indicated the Fed stood ready to do so again to deflect any adverse effects on the economy from tax increases and spending cuts under consideration to reduce the huge budget deficit.

The inflation news caused jitters on Wall Street by raising fears that higher inflation will limit the Fed's ability to lower interest rates. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 18.07 points to 2,981.68.

The unexpectedly steep rise in the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index followed 0.2 percent increases in both April and May.

Through the first six months of the year, consumer prices have risen at an annual rate of 5.9 percent, well above the 4.6 percent for all of 1989.

The Commerce Department reported on Wednesday a drop of 2.3 percent in housing starts last month, with new homes and apartments being built at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1.18 million units. The June decline followed decreases of 0.9 percent in May, 6.9 percent in April, 12.2 percent in March and 5.1 percent in February.

Analysts called the June inflation figure a worrisome increase that demonstrates entrenched inflation. They had expected prices to keep recovering from a jolt early in the year when a cold snap sent the costs of fruits, vegetables and energy skyward.

"This was the time when we were supposed to be getting a good number in response to the surge from the first of the year. But the message is, inflation is very much still part of the scene, and there's no sign that it's abating," said Robert Dederick, chief economist at the Northern Trust Co. of Chicago.

Michael K. Evans, who heads an economic forecasting firm in Washington, said there was no reason to hope for better news any time soon on either inflation or sluggish economic activity.

"The problem is endemic — low productivity, lack of investment and a high budget deficit. These problems are not going to change overnight," Evans said.

In the inflation report, grocery store food prices, which had fallen in each of the past two months, rose 1 percent in June as prices went up for all of the major food categories.

Gasoline prices, which generally increase during the heavy-driving summer months, jumped 2.5 percent last month after falling 1.6 percent in May.

Housing costs climbed 0.6 percent, the largest increase in such costs since a 1 percent rise in May 1985.

Within the food category, which rose 0.7 percent overall, there was a sharp turnaround in the price of fruits and vegetables, which rose 1.5 percent after falling 2.4 percent in May.

Pork prices, up 4.0 percent in June, have risen sharply over the past nine months, climbing at an annual rate of 26.2 percent during that period. Poultry prices were up 1.3 percent while dairy prices, after dropping the past three months, rose 0.2 percent in June.

Energy costs overall were up 0.6 percent. The price of natural gas shot up 2.7 percent, but fuel oil dropped 4.2 percent and electricity fell 1.6 percent.

Prices for items outside the volatile food and energy sectors jumped 0.4 percent in June. Analysts consider this so-called "core" rate a better indicator of underlying inflation pressures in the economy.

Nixon visits birthplace to open library

YORBA LINDA, Calif. (AP) — After 16 years in political no man's land, Richard Nixon returned to his birthplace Wednesday to prepare for the formal opening of his library.

Nixon and his wife, Pat, arrived at the $21 million library at mid-afternoon for his first look at the exhibits and at the restored home where he was born in 1913.

He was applauded by a handful of tourists. Mrs. Nixon, who seldom appears in public, was handed a bouquet of flowers by some Girl Scouts who had planted a rose garden on the library grounds.

"I've never been concerned about his place in history," said Bruce Whelihan, who had worked in the Nixon White House press office.

Ken Khathigian, who wrote speeches both for Nixon and Ronald Reagan as president, was asked whether he ever expected such an edifice to be built honoring Nixon.

"I always knew it would happen, that it was just a matter of time," Khathigian said.

Nixon originally planned to have his library in San Clemente but the project got bogged down. Khathigian said the opening "was in keeping with the boss' career — perseverance."

Nixon began his memoirs by saying, "I was born in the house my father built."

The formal opening Thursday, to be attended by the three Republicans who followed him into the presidency, is another step back toward public life for Nixon, who resigned in 1974 when his Watergate burdens engulfed him.

"If anything, the opening of the library and the birthplace will draw more attention to Watergate because that is what most of those who are covering the event for the media are most interested in," Nixon told the Los Angeles Times.

"Over time, as their interest fades, and if the public continues to visit the museum, I would think that all the events covered will be seen in a more objective perspective," Nixon said in a written response to the newspaper's questions.

The exhibits span a public career of nearly a half century, beginning in 1946 when Nixon ran successfully for Congress from this Orange County district, through two years in the Senate, eight years as vice president and 5½ years as president.

They touch on Watergate, the scandal that began in 1972 with the burglary by White House agents of Democratic Party headquarters in Washington's Watergate office building and led to a cover-up of White House involvement.

Nixon, who was named an unindicted co-conspirator, resigned Aug. 9, 1974, when it became apparent he could not avoid impeachment by the House and conviction by the Senate.

Nixon shares with Franklin D. Roosevelt the record of being five times on the national ticket. That counts Roosevelt's unsuccessful try for vice president in 1920 and Nixon's failed attempt to beat John F. Kennedy in the 1960 presidential election.

President Bush was flying in to attend Thursday's ceremony. Former Presidents Reagan and Ford also planned to make speeches. The only other living president, Democrat Jimmy Carter, said he couldn't make it.

H.R. Haldeman, who was fired as chief of staff when Watergate heated up, is expected to be a guest. Library officials did not release a list, but it was made clear John Dean, the former Nixon counsel who revealed the Watergate scandal to prosecutors, was not on it.

Among presidents dating back to Herbert Hoover, Nixon is the only one who has not had a museum to house the artifacts of his career or the papers of his presidency. Reagan's, 50 miles away in Simi Valley, is scheduled to be opened next February.

Unlike the others, however, Nixon's will get no federal funds, by choice of the former president. He is also the only one among them to eschew Secret Service protection, saying the cost to the taxpayer is too high.

Nixon contributed $2 million to the library and has pledged the proceeds from the sale of his eighth and latest book, "In the Arena."

For the foreseeable future, the library will have no presidential documents, and when it does acquire them, they will only be copies. Congress seized the 42 million pages generated by the Nixon presidency, looking for Watergate evidence, and they remain in a nondescript National Archives warehouse in Alexandria, Va.

Nixon assistant John Taylor said the library may join with the Archives in putting 1.5 million pages of the so-called White House Special Files on digital discs. Those files, which are available to scholars in Alexandria, contain the most sensitive information, including much on Watergate.

TAYLORVILLE, Ill. (AP) — A rare cancer usually found in just nine of every million children struck three babies in this small central Illinois town, and residents suspect an abandoned coal factory is to blame.

The children, ranging in age from 6 months to 22 months, have been diagnosed with neuroblastoma, a cancer of the adrenal glands and sympathetic nervous system that occurs primarily in children under age 10. The sympathetic nervous system controls some automatic body functions.

State health experts are studying medical records and the incidence of cancer in Taylorville, a city of 11,000 people about 210 miles southwest of Chicago.

Florida executions still on hold

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court on Wednesday refused to lift a stay that could block Florida executions for months while the courts consider arguments that the electric chair is in torturously poor condition.

The 11th Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta, which issued the stay, postponed another execution scheduled for Thursday, and its statement indicated it would bar executions in Florida until the issue of the chair's functioning is settled.

Flames and smoke erupted from under the headpiece worn by Jesse Tafero when he was electrocuted in the 66-year-old electric chair May 4. Witnesses said Tafero didn't stop moving and breathing until after the third jolt of electricity.

Defense attorneys argue their clients face the same fate, which they characterize as cruel and unusual punishment, barred by the Eighth Amendment.

In late June, the appeals court stayed the execution of spouse-killer Judi Buenoano. On Monday it postponed the execution of James Hamblen, and said both stays were based on the same issue: "whether the execution machinery of Florida is operating properly."

On Wednesday, the court called off Thursday's execution of Jerry White, saying: "We believe it is likely that this court will grant stays in cases involving death by electrocution in Florida until Buenoano is decided by us." The Florida attorney general's office appealed Monday's order to the nation's high court Wednesday, but the U.S. Supreme Court unanimously refused to lift the stay.

Carolyn Snurkowski, the state's lead attorney in death sentences, said the Hamblen stay makes it doubtful any execution will take place in Florida until the court makes a decision.

Karl Menninger dies in Kansas

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — Dr. Karl Menninger, the dominant figure in American psychiatry for six decades and a major influence in prison and mental health reform nationally, died Wednesday of cancer. He would have been 97 on Sunday.

Menninger, who argued that insane people could be treated, died at Stormont-Vail Regional Medical Center, said Judy Craig, spokeswoman for Menninger, the psychiatric center he helped found in 1925. He was admitted to the hospital June 12 and diagnosed with abdominal cancer two weeks later.

Funeral plans were incomplete, but services were expected to be here on Saturday.

Menninger was one of the first psychiatrists to integrate psychoanalytic theory into their practice, said Dr. Elissa Benedek, president of the American Psychiatric Association of Washington, D.C.

"He wrote and spoke the language of the average American, making mental illnesses more understandable and less feared," she said.

Dr. Gertrude Ticho, a member of the American Psychoanalytical Association, also said from Washington, "His greatest contribution was the pioneering of psychoanalytical principles and thoughts."

Children's toy recalled

WASHINGTON (AP) — A New York toymaker on Wednesday recalled 7,600 "Bead Coaster" toys because the wooden beads may become detached and pose a fatal choking hazard to young children.

The three metal blue, yellow and red wires of the toys form a hill and valley roller-coaster shaped vertical field attached to a wooden base to create what a spokeswoman for the Consumer Product Safety Commission called "an activity toy."

Wooden beads of various shapes and colors are threaded through and move easily about the wires. It is these beads that may become detached and pose a potentially fatal choking hazard, said the commission.

The toy was imported from Taiwan by Associated Merchandising Corp. of New York and sold nationwide from September 1989 to March 1990 under the trade name "Creative Years," which appears on the wooden base.

Neither the commission nor the company are aware of any injuries associated with the toy but consumers are advised to take it away from children immediately and return to the store where purchased for a refund.

Garbo auction planned

NEW YORK (AP) — Greta Garbo's art and antique collection will be offered in November for a targeted $20 million, the auctioneer said Wednesday.

Garbo's estate authorized the Nov. 13-15 sale of about 250 lots. Her personal effects are not for sale.

Garbo, who died April 15 at age 84, kept the paintings, including three Renoirs; 18th-century French furniture; decorative rugs; rare books, and Continental, English and Chinese ceramics in her seven-room Manhattan co-op.

The Renoirs and perhaps 20 other paintings were hung in the drawing room, said John L. Marion, chairman of Sotheby's in North America, the auctioneer, and an acquaintance of Garbo since the 1960s.

Garbo bought the Renoirs in the 1940s and continued collecting through the 1960s. Marion said the reclusive actress frequented exhibitions and galleries at Parke-Bernet, which merged with Sotheby's in 1964.

The Renoirs are an 1889 portrait of the artist's nephew, Edmond; the 1906 "Gabrielle and Coco Lisant," depicting Renoir's youngest son, Coco, and a family friend; and "Confidence," an 1893 study of a young woman and a formally attired man.

Hammer says suit lies

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Industrialist Armand Hammer said Wednesday a $700 million lawsuit that seeks his prized art collection was full of lies, generated by the greed of his late wife's sole heir.

Hammer, the 92-year-old chairman of Occidental Petroleum Corp., responded in an interview to the lawsuit filed in state court by Joan Weiss, the niece of his late wife Frances. Through a spokesman, he had refused to comment when the suit was filed last week.

The suit says Hammer's fortune, and that of Occidental, was built on money provided by Frances, his third wife. It contends he tricked her into signing away her rights to property amassed during 33 years of marriage.

But Hammer said that waivers dating back to 1974 and tax returns from even farther back will clearly show a court his wife intended to give up her joint property rights under California law.

"This complaint is full of falsehoods, it's completely untrue and I'm sure that if and when the case reaches court we'll be able to prove to the satisfaction of the court that this is all contrived," Hammer said in the interview at Occidental's headquarters in Westwood.

Two arrested in manhole covers case

Suspects show up Wednesday with another truckload of scrap

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Police figured out the motive in the case of the missing manhole covers and Wednesday they arrested two suspects.

Some of the more than 185 purloined covers turned up at a scrap metals yard Tuesday, and Wednesday police arrested two men who showed up at the same yard with another truckload.

Some of the cast-iron covers ranging in weight from 50 pounds to 200 pounds were buried in truckloads of higher grade iron sold to the Downtown Metal Center to fetch a higher price, said center manager Robert Kelman.

"The manhole covers are pretty flat so they can hide them well," Kelman said Tuesday. "Basically, they just used them to weigh down the load."

The discovery of Los Angeles City manhole covers in piles of old pipes, truck bodies, and reinforcement bars solved the biggest mystery in the disappearance of some 30 manhole covers a day since early last week — what use were the things?

Since the covers by themselves were only worth $1.50 each at scrap yards, police and city officials could not figure out why anyone would bother trying to steal the heavy, unwieldy covers.

The thief was dubbed "Manhole Man," but police didn't know whether a single person or a gang of thieves was responsible.

Most of the covers reported stolen were 2-foot diameter cast iron covers placed over sidewalk storm drains, but the metals center received even larger, middle-of-the-road covers. Officials were worried a pedestrian could fall into the 2-foot holes, but so far no injuries have been reported.

McCartney caught up in meat fracas

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Former Beatle Paul McCartney said Wednesday he never planned to get caught up in a beef over meat-eating during his first concert in Iowa.

"We haven't come out on this tour to preach against meat," McCartney said at a news conference before the concert. "We're pro-corn, very pro-corn."

The concert created a stir throughout pork and beef country, along with a massive traffic jam in this central Iowa city of 45,600. Organizers expected the concert Wednesday night to draw 55,000.

McCartney and his wife, Linda, a keyboard player in his band, are vegetarians. No meat or fish is served to the 180 people traveling with McCartney.

Rare bird discovery renews questions about old forests

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — The first nest ever reported in Washington of a bird called a marbled murrelet has been found in old-growth hemlock, cheering ornithologists and stirring new questions about logging of old-growth forests.

"That's really exciting news," said Jim Pissot, executive director of the Audubon Society of Washington.

He said it will strengthen the society's drive to see the chubby little shorebird listed as threatened by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

The bird is fairly common elsewhere, and little is known about its nesting habits. But the Audubon petition, filed in January 1988, contends mounting biological evidence shows logging of coastal old-growth forests threatens the bird's nesting habitat.

Logging of millions of acres of public old-growth forest in Washington, Oregon and California already is threatened since the Fish and Wildlife Service declared the northern spotted owl a threatened species. The owl nests in old-growth forest.

Federal officials are working out a management plan to protect the owl and still take into account the affect on timber communities. Officials say reductions proposed in a federal scientific report could mean the loss of more than 20,000 jobs over the next decade.

The murrelet nest, containing one chick, was found last week by state Department of Wildlife researcher Tom Hamers roughly 25 miles inland from Port Susan in Snohomish County, department spokesman John Pierce said Wednesday.

Its parents apparently visit the nest only at dawn and dusk to feed the chick, he said.

"I can't tell you how exciting this is. Although we've had egg fragments turned in and fledglings found in the forest, this is the first nest found after years and years of searching," he said.

Pierce said the only other marbled murrelet nest found this year was in Oregon's Siuslaw National Forest.

Little is known about the nesting behavior of the brown and white, robin-size murrelet, according to a recent study by the state Department of Wildlife.

"Ornithologists have searched for its nests throughout its range from central California to the Bering Sea and from Kamchatka (Soviet Union) to northern Japan. Yet only 13 nests have been found," said the study, written by Lora L. Leschner and Eric B. Cummins.

"The nests that have been found and recent discoveries of marbled murrelets at inland locations in Oregon and California indicate that the species may be traveling inland to nest in old-growth forests," Leschner and Cummins wrote.

"The harvest of the last of the old-growth forests in coastal Washington, Oregon and California and the increased harvest of old-growth in British Columbia and Alaska could pose a serious threat to marbled murrelet populations," they said.

Barry prosecution rests after records testimony

WASHINGTON (AP) — The prosecution concluded its drug and perjury case against Mayor Marion Barry on Wednesday, and the judge quickly rejected most of the defense's motions for acquittal of the 14 charges.

U.S. District Court Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson said he would rule Thursday on whether to acquit the mayor on three misdemeanor cocaine possession charges — including the one arising from an FBI sting operation at a local hotel — and a misdemeanor cocaine conspiracy charge.

Barry's attorney, R. Kenneth Mundy, argued that witnesses who testified concerning those charges could not confirm the dates on which the government alleged crimes took place. Prosecutors said the witnesses estimated closely enough.

In concluding a case in which they portrayed Barry as a city leader distracted constantly by illegal involvement with drugs, prosecutors questioned a city police detective who has spent months compiling records of Barry's telephone logs.

The detective, James Pawlik, testified that more than 2,000 calls were placed from Marion Barry's car phone over a four-year span to homes or businesses of friends who have admitted or been accused of drug involvement with Barry.

The list covered calls, beginning in early 1986, to 10 people who have testified — or been accused in other witnesses' testimony — of supplying drugs to Barry, using drugs with him and seeing him use them, District of Columbia Detective James Pawlik said.

His testimony came as prosecutors neared an end to their month-long case in which they have portrayed the mayor as a regular drug user who lied to cover up illegal narcotics activity. R. Kenneth Mundy, Barry's attorney, has promised "lots of surprises" from the dozen defense witnesses he plans to call.

On cross-examination, Mundy attempted to put the calls into context by getting Pawlik to testify that Barry made at least 20,000 car telephone calls during the period for which the records were examined.

Pawlik also testified that the records do not make clear that it was Barry who actually placed the calls, or, in cases when calls were placed to a business, whether Barry was speaking to witnesses who have testified against him.

The detective said the records did not include local calls made from Barry's home. And there were also four months in 1986 for which the telephone company could not produce records for Barry's car telephone, the detective testified.

Pawlik told the court that Barry made 358 calls to former model Rasheeda Moore, 573 to former girlfriend Theresa Southerland, and 508 to another woman, Bettye Smith.

Moore, who cooperated with the Jan. 18 FBI sting operation that led to Barry's arrest, has testified that she used drugs with him over 100 times.

Southerland has testified that she used drugs repeatedly with Barry, and Smith, who described the mayor as "a close personal friend," made similar statements in court Tuesday.

The telephone records also show that Barry made 243 calls to restaurateur Hassan Mohammadi and 148 calls to local attorney Lloyd Moore. Mohammadi has testified that he and Barry used cocaine, marijuana and opium together, and Moore also outlined a history of cocaine use with Barry.

Pawlik also said Barry had made several calls to the Washington hotel room of Charles Lewis in December 1988. Lewis, now a convicted drug dealer, testified that he and the mayor smoked crack cocaine repeatedly during that month.

Barry, 54, has pleaded innocent to 10 misdemeanor counts of cocaine possession, one misdemeanor charge of conspiracy, and three felony counts of lying to a grand jury about his alleged drug use.

The judge, responding to a defense request that all the charges be dismissed, refused in regard to the three perjury charges and eight of the possession charges. He said he would deliberate on charges involving the testimony of Bettye Smith and Doris Crenshaw. The judge also reserved judgment on Mundy's request that the possession charge resulting from the sting operation be dropped because of what the defense called illegal entrapment.

LEGAL NOTICE

NOTICE OF OPPORTUNITY FOR A PUBLIC HEARING

The City of Midland Department of Airports intends to submit to the Federal Aviation Administration an application for federal funds for Midland International Airport. The Program consists of the following elements:

The extension of Runway 10/28 1,000 feet to the northwest; to extend the parallel taxiway; to relocate the approach lighting system glide slope; and to construct an acute angle taxiway.

Any persons may request that an open Public Hearing be held for the purpose of considering the elements and recommendations of the Program and its consistency with the goals and objectives of such urban planning as has been carried out for this area, and the environment. A copy of the Environmental Assessment for the project is available for review by the public in the City Secretary's office at Midland International Airport on the second floor of the Airline Terminal Building.

For a request for Public Hearing to be honored, a signed written request must be filed by mail or in person and received not later than 5:00 p.m. on August 21, 1990, at the offices of the Director of Airports, Midland International Airport, P.O. Box 60305, Midland, Texas 79711, telephone (915) 563-1460.
