Bush will head U.S. delegation to funeral

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan, expressing "condolences and sympathies" to the Soviet Union over the death of Yuri V. Andropov, decided Friday not to fly to Moscow for the state funeral but to send Vice President George Bush as head of the American delegation.

There had been many calls on Capitol Hill for Reagan to attend the funeral as a dramatic gesture to thaw U.S.-Soviet relations.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said Reagan had asked Bush to be his "personal representative" to Tuesday's funeral, and while in Moscow "to extend the condolences and best wishes of the American people to the people of the Soviet Union and to express to them our strong desire for peace."

Asked whether Bush might carry a message proposing a summit meeting with a new Soviet leader sometime in the future, a senior administration official said "that sort of speculation is sort of premature."

The official, refusing to be identified by name, noted that there is as yet no new leadership in the Kremlin and the official questioned to whom Bush might propose a summit.

Deputy White House press secretary Bob Sims said that "it's way too early to be talking about something like that (a summit)." But, he added, "If something transpires that would allow him to get better acquainted" with the new Soviet leader, "it's not out of the question."

Andropov profile, Page 4A

A White House official, speaking on the condition he remain anonymous, said it was not normal practice for an American president to attend a state funeral.

"I don't know of one (American president) who's gone to a Soviet leader's funeral," the official said.

He also said Reagan had decided not to go because "we'd like to see the leadership settle down a little bit," and because Reagan had meetings scheduled next week in Washington with King Hussein of Jordan and President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt.

Another senior administration official said the American delegation would consist of three people, including Bush. Secretary of State George P. Shultz also will not attend the funeral because he will remain in Washington to attend high-level meetings on the Mideast, the official said. The other two delegates may be announced today.

Shortly after the announcement of Andropov's death, administration officials had said it was highly unlikely that Reagan would attend the funeral but suggested that he might make the trip if a successor to Andropov were named quickly.

A senior administration official, who asked not to be identified, said Andropov's death would lead to "a period of introspection for the Soviet Union," and added "we don't look for any sudden change in Soviet policy."

The official said, "We're not pessimistic, we're not optimistic. We're just waiting" to see what emerges with the new Soviet leadership.

Reagan was awakened at 3:20 a.m. (5:20 a.m. CST) by a telephone call to his mountaintop ranch from White House deputy chief of staff Michael K. Deaver with news of Andropov's death. About six hours later Reagan also consulted by phone with Shultz, and talked again with Deaver.

Reagan did not attend the funeral of Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev in 1982, although Shultz recommended that he go.

Deaver briefed the president during the day on conflicting advice from various officials on whether he should attend Andropov's funeral.

Wholesale prices take biggest jump in 14 months

WASHINGTON (AP) — Skyrocketing food costs sent wholesale prices soaring 0.6 percent in January, the biggest gain in 14 months, the government reported Friday.

Economists shrugged off the results as a temporary surge caused by the harsh winter weather and not the start of another round of high inflation.

Higher costs for pork, beef and vegetables contributed to the stunning 2.7 percent jump in food prices last month, the sharpest one-month rise since August 1980.

Energy prices tumbled 1.2 percent, the sixth decline in seven months and the biggest drop since last April, the Labor Department said in its new report on the Producer Price Index for finished goods. Those prices, though, reflected December activity, and analysts predicted higher home heating oil costs would reverse that trend in the coming months.

Donald Ratajczak, economic forecaster at Georgia State University, warned that consumers would have "a couple of months of difficulty at the grocery store and (with their) utility bills."

Still, he, like other analysts, expected the sharp price pickup to last only a few months before moderating.

"It's nothing to get upset about. It's a one- to two-month blip," said Edward Yardeni, chief economist for Prudential-Bache Securities Inc. in New York.

At the White House, spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said, "This is just a one-month increase due primarily to the harsh winter and its impact on food supplies."

He noted that wholesale prices, when discounted for food costs, were unchanged over the past four months and said, "We're confident inflation remained under control" in January.

Even so, analysts predicted that overall wholesale prices could rise as much as 4 percent this year, well ahead of the tiny 0.6 percent gain of 1983, the best showing in two decades.

January's 0.6 percent increase in the wholesale price index, after seasonal adjustment, compared with a 0.1 percent gain in December and a 0.2 percent decline in November.

It was the biggest advance since the 0.6 percent of November 1982.

Price changes at the wholesale level are a good barometer of how food, energy and other commodity prices will move at the retail level.

Ratajczak said the food price increases reported Friday will show up at the checkout counter in the coming months.

Pacing the climb were price increases of 9.2 percent for pork, 7 percent for vegetables and 3.2 percent for beef.

Laxalt: Marines should get out of Lebanon

Paul Laxalt

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The Marines should "get out of Lebanon as quickly as possible," and even the ships lying in the Mediterranean off Lebanon "may not be safe enough" for the U.S. servicemen, says the architect of President Reagan's re-election campaign.

Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., said in an interview with The Associated Press Thursday night that the lesson the United States should learn from Lebanon is that "hereafter we think not once or twice but several times about ever putting an American military person on the ground in the Middle East."

Laxalt, a confidant of Reagan since he served as governor of Nevada while Reagan was governor of California in the late 1960s, said he wasn't speaking for the president.

"I constantly have this problem of what I say being translated into what the president is saying," said Laxalt, who also headed Reagan's election campaign in 1980 and his bid to wrest the Republican nomination from President Gerald Ford in 1976.

Reagan announced Tuesday that U.S. forces in Lebanon will be redeployed to ships offshore, but a timetable has not been announced. Reagan said the redeployment is intended to enhance the effectiveness of the multi-national forces in Lebanon.

In Santa Barbara, Calif., meanwhile, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger gave Reagan a proposed timetable for withdrawal of Marines from Beirut. Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes gave no details of the proposal, and said a final decision would not be made

Gulf Corp. board authorizes suit against group lead by Pickens

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Gulf Corp. said Friday it is suing a group of investors led by Texas oilman T. Boone Pickens Jr., charging "market manipulation and other violations of securities laws."

Gulf's board of directors, which authorized the suit, also said in a statement it "had become aware of a plan by the Pickens' Gulf Investors Group to acquire control of Gulf through a partial tender offer for 61 million additional common shares."

Pickens, publicly acknowledging such purchase plans for the first time, said Gulf's suit contained "the usual charge in these kinds of things" and showed that Gulf management feels "threatened."

"This is just entrenchment for management," Pickens, chairman of Mesa Petroleum Corp., said from Mesa headquarters in Amarillo, Texas. "This is Gulf management against all the Gulf stockholders."

Pickens said his investor group, which already owns 13.2 percent of Gulf's common stock, is "fairly close" to acquiring enough money to buy "about 51 percent" of Pittsburgh-based Gulf, the nation's fifth-largest oil producer.

The investor group has been raising money by soliciting large investors rather than making a public tender offer, Pickens said.

Rumors of Pickens' takeover plans helped push the price of Gulf stock as high as $57.75 a share on Feb. 3. The stock closed at $57 Friday, up 25 cents.

Pickens, however, contended that other Gulf stockholders would suffer from the lawsuit. He said a response to the suit had not yet been formulated.

"I haven't even talked to the lawyers about it," he said.

Gulf said its board has authorized management to increase to $6 billion the corporation's committed lines of credit.

Gulf spokesman Steve Maloney could not immediately say in what court the lawsuit was filed. He refused to comment further.

Woman kills herself after roommate dies

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — One week after her roommate and "very close friend" died of a heart attack, a Penn State University student killed herself with an overdose of drugs, authorities said Friday.

Police entered an off-campus apartment building Thursday and removed the body of Gail Ann Blumberg, 23, of Glenside, Pa. After an autopsy Friday, Centre County Coroner Robert Neff said, "The preliminary cause of death is suicide due to a precription drug overdose."

Authorities "are going on the assumption that there isn't foul play," Neff said. He would not say what drug killed the woman, or comment further on her death.

Miss Blumberg was "very close friends" with her roommate, Lisa Koper, 23, who died Feb. 3 after collapsing in the hallway of a campus building, according to Miss Koper's father, Leonard. The women met at Penn State and had roomed together previously.

Miss Koper, of Palmyra, Pa., "died of a massive heart attack," her father said. "She had a heart condition. She was born with it."

Doctors had said Miss Koper faced a continual risk, but her death was "a shock" nevertheless, Koper said.

Neighbors at the modern apartment building near the sprawling central Pennsylvania campus said they saw police in front of Miss Blumberg's door at mid-morning Thursday, but they did not know she had died. Police asked them no questions.

"We saw two cops there, but we didn't hear anything," said Wilson Royer, a Penn State student who lives across the hall. "I remember just last weekend seeing people moving things out of the room — plants and stuff."

Royer and other neighbors described the women as introverts. Many of the residents on the dead womens' floor knew each other, but none said they had been friendly with either Miss Koper or Miss Blumberg.

"I didn't know them. We didn't see them around much," Royer said.

"They were quiet," said Valerie Pastoria, who lives down the hall.

Miss Koper had earned an undergraduate degree in psychology, and was a pursuing a degree in special education. Miss Blumberg also was in the special education program.

Embassies around world increasing security

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. Embassy in Stockholm is using boulders. In London, 3-foot concrete shrubbery tubs are in place. And in Rome, a steel barrier will rise at the push of a button to block the main gate.

American embassies in many world capitals are putting up obstacles to discourage terrorist attacks like the one last April when a truck carrying dynamite slammed into the American Embassy in Beirut. Sixty-three people, including 17 Americans, died in the blast.

None of the barriers looks quite like the ugly cement-filled oil drums that served as bomb shields at the embassy in Saigon, but the days when anyone could walk into an American Embassy almost as easily as into a supermarket are past.

"Lots of our embassies around the world were built at a time when you didn't have walking or driving bombers all over the place. They've goo be upgraded in today's world," said an official at the U.S. Embassy on tree-lined Dag Hammarskjold Boulevard in Copenhagen.

The Danish police have lent cement-bottomed barricades to the American Embassy for temporary use while a permanent blockade is designed.

Most embassies are in highest-rent districts, so crude anti-tank barriers are out. The American Embassy in London, which occupies one section of elegant Grosvenor Square, has put 12 big shrubbery tubs in two staggered rows in front of the main entrance, and more tubs block side entrances.

AP Laserphoto

Twelve concrete shrubbery tubs positioned outside the American Embassy in London are used as an extra precaution against suicide bomb attacks similar to the one on the Aemrican Embassy in Beirut last April.

Some American embassies have resorted to sand-filled dump trucks like those that ringed the White House in Washington late last year before permanent barriers were installed.

Though the Mideast attacks, including a bombing at the U.S. Embassy in Kuwait on Dec. 12 that killed two people, have been blamed on pro-Iranian elements that oppose U.S. policy in the region, tightened security also appears necessary for other reasons.

In West Germany, where there have been widespread protests against the deployment of U.S. intermediate-range nuclear missiles, security at many American installations also has been increased. There are more armed guards, and trucks loaded with sand and sand-filled barrels partially block entrance roads to slow speeding vehicles.

In Denmark, two bricks were thrown through plate-glass windows during an anti-American demonstration the day after U.S. troops invaded Grenada.

Access to many embassies was tightened noticeably after Islamic revolutionaries took over the U.S. Embassy in Iran in 1979 and held 52 Americans hostage for 444 days.

Though it was acknowledged that the small contingents of Marine guards assigned to embassies would have little chance of blocking a large mob of people, bullet-proof glass and metal-detectors were installed in public areas in many embassies.

Visitors would have to pass through remote-controlled double doors, with an embassy staffer to escort them in and out of the building.

With the heavy casualties of the Beirut attacks, however, more severe measures have been taken outside the embassies — and not only in the Middle East and Europe.

The U.S. consulate in Hong Kong has a truck blocking the rear entrance. It was placed there in late December when a group of Iranians with false passports was arrested, sparking newspaper speculation that they were on a terrorist mission.

In Peking, cars and vans blocked entrances to the U.S. Embassy for a time after the Lebanon bombings, and security was also tightened at the legations of Britain, France and Italy — America's partners in the Lebanon peacekeeping force.

The embassy in Peru, which has been the target of bomb attacks by Maoist guerrillas, recently installed an iron grid in front.

In December, boulders were placed in a row on the lawns of the American Embassy in Stockholm to prevent vehicles from crashing into the building. The boulders were intended "for rock and flower garden improvement of the environment," an official said.

Elderly railroad worker has no plans to retire

TYLER (AP) — John Long became eligible for retirement and a pension from the Southern Pacific Railroad in 1956, but he has no plans to quit.

"I was brought up by my parents to find a steady job and keep at it," said Long, 87. "As long as I can give the company eight hours a day, I'll keep working."

Steam locomotives roared across Texas when Long went to work for the Cotton Belt railroad in 1914. Nearly 70 years later, with his longevity an industry legend, he scoffs at the idea of retirement.

Long now supervises nine railroad account clerks while enjoying "the challenge of coping with the modern world."

The Southern Pacific Railroad, which owns the Cotton Belt line, has 31,700 employees nationwide — but none older than Long.

"He's No. 1 on the seniority list," said Bob Hoppe, a spokesman for Southern Pacific's national headquarters in San Francisco. "John is a walking piece of history."

Long's career was derailed only once, when the Army drafted him during World War I. Long resumed his job after the war and could have retired in 1956 with a full pension.

"My family thinks I'm crazy," Long said. "But all my friends who retired years ago advised me to keep working."

"I was earning better money in a box factory, but my father said there was no future in it. He told me to join the railroad," Long told the Dallas Times Herald.

No end in sight for Ethiopia's drought, famine

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — Officials here see no end in sight to a drought that left millions of Ethiopians seriously short of food last year.

"Our view is that the drought will not end this year or next, and programs and contingencies are taking this into account," said a senior official of the government's Relief and Rehabilitation Commission (RRC).

Out of an estimated population of 40 million — there never has been a nationwide census — 7.3 million people faced serious food shortages in 1983 due to poor rainfall, "man-made disasters" and chronic low production on marginal agricultural lands, the commission said.

A 10 percent increase from harvests during the last six months was expected to ease the overall situation somewhat, but the RRC still sees 4.6 million people being affected by drought in 1984.

Moreover, conditions in the most badly stricken provinces of Tigre and Eritrea in the North — exacerbated by secessionist conflicts — are expected to deteriorate further. And drought struck a new area two months ago — Sidamo in southern Ethiopia.

Drought has afflicted wide areas of Africa for the last 15 years and the World Meteorological Organization in Geneva, Switzerland, says it is unable to forecast an end soon. Ethiopia has been among the worst-hit nations.

RELIEF WORKERS HERE SAID they presume the drought in the southern part of Sidamo will last at least until the next seasonal rains in eight to 10 months. Food shipments have begun, but the full extent of the problem there is still not known, they added.

Famine is no stranger to this ancient land on the Horn of Africa, which has suffered large-scale crop failures a dozen times during the past century and a half.

The first American diplomatic representative in Addis Ababa, Robert Skinner, reported in 1891 that only 8 percent of Ethiopia's cattle survived a drought then, while the antelope population was nearly wiped out.

An estimated 200,000 people starved to death in 1973, sparking the political upheaval the following year that saw the ouster of the Emperor Haile Selassie and his replacement by a Marxist military government. The emperor died in detention in 1975.

"Even with good harvests there is a food shortage," said Kenneth F. King, a Guyana-born economist and director of the United Nations Development Program's Addis Ababa office. Average protein consumption in Ethiopia is 20 percent below the minimum, creating chronic undernourishment, King said in an interview.

COMPLICATING DROUGHT conditions in the worst-off provinces of Tigre and Eritrea are "man-made disasters" in the form of the secessionist guerrilla insurgencies. Diplomats and foreign aid workers here said the conflicts have made relief shipments to famine victims virtually impossible.

U.N. and Western relief officials said only Finland acted on urgent appeals to help alleviate the relief effort's transport shortage by supplying two cross-country trucks. West European countries have responded by sending tires and spare parts to get 50 vehicles back on the road, but at least 250 heavy-duty and four-wheel-drive trucks are still required, the officials added.

Some Western countries apparently have been reluctant to give anything more than purely humanitarian assistance because of the government's Marxist policies and its close political and military ties with the Soviet Union and Cuba.

The United States, which had close relations with Ethiopia during the emperor's reign, phased out bilateral aid in 1979 but still provides "humanitarian assistance" by funneling funds to drought victims through international relief agencies.

The Reagan administration asked Congress for more than $5-million worth of food aid for Ethiopia in 1983 and $700,000 to enable Catholic Relief Services to transport the U.S. food supplies.

The Soviet Union supplies vehicles for the Ethiopian army but reportedly none for drought relief, and has given only one food shipment — 5,000 tons of Indian-grown rice, informed sources said.

TRANSPORT AND OTHER PROBLEMS, such as insecurity, rough terrain and financial restraints, have kept the RRC from reaching all but about 1.4 million people of the 7.3 million affected by drought last year.

It distributed 76,192 metric tons of food, but one commission official said that more than 10 times that amount is needed this year to cover the afflicted areas of Tigre, Eritrea, Wollo, eastern Gondar, northern Shoa and pockets of other provinces.

Most diplomats and relief officials concerned with the famine agreed in interviews that the government program, while hampered by a myriad of problems, is being run well under the circumstances.

Some compared it favorably with a massive but inefficient refugee feeding program in neighboring Somalia, where the U.S.-based voluntary organization CARE had to be called in by donor nations and agencies to take over logistics and distribution.

"The Ethiopians are doing it themselves," commented one foreign relief official, who added that periodic checks on deliveries are made by the World Food Program and the European Common Market.

"We have seen no evidence whatsoever, nor have we reason to believe, there has been diversion of food supplies," the source continued.

He speculated that allegations of divertsions might have risen from the fact that some donors permit the Ethiopian government to sell off a portion of a food shipment to raise funds to cover transport costs.

THE OFFICIAL ALSO CITED THE case of a delayed shipment which forced authorities to borrow from the state-run Agricultural Marketing Corp.

Cool weather forecast for weekend

Mother Nature seems to be teasing Midlanders with spring-like temperatures during the week and cooler weather over the weekend, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Skies today are expected to be partly cloudy and temperatures a little cooler with highs in the upper 60s anticipated. Winds from the west and southwest should increase to 15 to 25 mph.

Tonight and Sunday are expected to be fair and colder with lows near 30 and highs in the low 50s.

Friday's high of 75 fell nine degrees short of the record high of 84 set in 1976. An overnight low of 39 was still 28 above the 11 mark recorded in 1981.

NATION

A storm system in the central Rockies spawned up to 14 inches of snow in Nevada on Friday, as rain mixed with snow in the higher elevations swept acroes the Pacific Northwest.

Dense fog blanketed much of the area from Minnesota to Louisiana early Friday, and continued to plague portions of southern Minnesota later in the day.

Rain and a few thunderstorms blanketed the Ohio Valley south to the Gulf Coast, while fair skies and generally mild temperatures stretched from North Dakota to Texas and along the Atlantic Coast.

The mercury climbed into the 60s and 70s from the mid Atlantic Coast to Texas and the desert Southwest.

Temperatures around the nation at 2 p.m. EST ranged from 5 degrees in Caribou and Limestone, Maine, to 81 in Junction, Texas.

Today's forecast calls for rain along the Pacific Northwest coast and from southern New England to the mid-Atlantic states. Showers and thunderstorms were expected from Iowa and Nebraska to the central Gulf Coast, with light snow from eastern Wyoming to western Minnesota.

Highs in the 20s and 30s were predicted for the Intermountain Region, the eastern Rockies, northern Plains, upper Mississippi Valley and northern New England. The National Weather Service said highs in the 60s and 70s were headed for southern states from the Mid-Atlantic Coast to the southern Plains and desert Southwest, with highs in the 40s and 50s for the Pacific Coast, central Plains, Great Lakes, Ohio Valley and the remainder of the Northeast.

STATE

Skies were fair to partly cloudy across all of Texas on Friday afternoon and temperatures were mild.

Afternoon temperatures were in the 70s over most of the state, in the lower 80s in the lower Rio Grande Valley and South Texas and in the 60s in the Panhandle and parts of far West Texas.

The National Weather Service said high pressure is slowing drifting to the east across Texas as another trough worked its way across into West Texas Friday afternoon. The trough is located from a low centered in southern Colorado south across eastern New Mexico.

Winds were southerly at 5 to 15 mph over the Eastern half of Texas, shifting to southwest to west at between 15 and 25 mph over the western third of the state.

Forecasters said it will be partly cloudy to mostly cloudy statewide today and a chance of thundershowers will exists over the northern sections of South Texas.

Temperatures today will be mild over most of Texas with readings in the 70s. The mercury will climb into the 80s in extreme South Texas. Cooler temperatures, with readings only in the 50s, are expected today in northwestern Texas.

Andropov rule too short to leave mark

MOSCOW (AP) — Yuri Vladimirovich Andropov took over leadership of the Soviet Union after 15 years running the KGB and promised a revived economy and a cleaned-up bureaucracy. He started strong and made some tentative changes, but may not have ruled long enough to leave any real mark.

Accustomed to the obsessive secrecy of the KGB, Andropov was even more mysterious than his predecessors in the seat of Soviet power. There even are conflicting reports about whether Andropov's wife, Tatyana, is alive.

But the 15 months he was head of the Communist Party saw U.S.-Soviet relations steadily decline through a series of crises, including the Soviet downing of a South Korean jetliner last September with the loss of 269 lives.

The Communist Party was reshuffled, with dozens of top officials replaced. Many of the new officials were of the younger, more professional breed that Andropov said the Soviet Union needed.

WORLD ATTENTION focused personally on the 69-year-old leader throughout his tenure, first for his new style and seeming tirelessness and then because of the constant concerns about his health.

Andropov took office Nov. 11, 1982, following the death of President Leonid I. Brezhnev. At 68, Andropov was the oldest man ever to become general secretary of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union.

Andropov immediately made it clear he intended to change things. But he was plagued from the outset by health problems, the impossibility of making rapid changes in the cumbersome Soviet system, and reported resistance from Brezhnev's old guard in the Politburo.

In mid-1983, after keeping a fairly high public profile, Andropov dropped out of view. Reportedly bedridden with kidney problems that some sources said stemmed from diabetes, Andropov missed one important public event after another.

Kremlin spokesmen and other sources said, however, that he remained in charge of government affairs. Some sources said Andropov was running the Politburo from his country home, or "dacha," outside Moscow.

DURING THAT period, major public statements were issued in Andropov's name — including a Sept. 28, 1983, attack on U.S. foreign policy, and another in November explaining the Soviet walkout from the Geneva arms reduction talks.

Despite his illness, Andropov's leadership also carried out the most significant reshuffling and rejuvenation of the party apparatus in two decades. He also initiated some tentative economic experiments that began in the last month.

Andropov was born June 15, 1914, in the Stavropol village of Nagutskaya Station, to the family of a railroad worker, according to his official biography. At age 16 he became a telegraph operator, then worked as a movie projectionist and a Volga boatman.

He attended Petrozabodsk University but did not graduate, and before World War II joined the Communist Party. During and after the war he held party posts in the northern Soviet Union, near the border with Finland. His official biography said he was "an active participant in the partisan movement."

He drew the attention of the Soviet leadership for the first time in the early 1950s — the politically tumultuous days after Josef Stalin died.

AIDED BY gaps in bureaucracy left by Stalin's purges, Andropov rose and was sent to Budapest as a diplomat. In 1954, he became ambassador to Hungary and played a key role in the Soviet suppression of the 1956 Hungarian revolt.

Andropov was brought back to Moscow a year later and rewarded with the job of department head of the party apparatus dealing with parties in Eastern Europe.

Some analysts say the party credited Andropov with a consolidation of Soviet influence among the Eastern European satellites and he began moving upward in the top echelons of the party.

In 1961, he became a full Central Committee member without going through the usual candidate membership.

Six years later Stalin's daughter, Svetlana, defected and secret police Chief Vladimir Semichastny was demoted.

MANY ANALYSTS believe the party began casting about for a new KGB chief who could maintain party control over the secret police and spy system. Andropov fit the bill as a senior party operative who already had proved his administrative ability and his loyalty.

Andropov beefed up KGB intelligence abroad while helping Brezhnev maintain an iron grip on dissent at home and in Eastern Europe. Under Andropov, the KGB expanded to an estimated 500,000 members, including the frontier guards who patrol perhaps the tightest borders in the world.

Andropov was believed to have become a Brezhnev protege soon after the 1964 ouster of Nikita S. Khrushchev. It was Brezhnev who was said to have made Andropov KGB head in 1967 and then gave him full Politburo membership in 1973.

Few Kremlin watchers ever expected a KGB boss to become general secretary. But as Brezhnev grew older, Andropov began making the moves that brought him to power.

In May 1982, he left the KGB and took a post on the Central Committee Secretariat — a move that put him into the line of succession. He took over Nov. 11.

THE AILING Andropov took the unprecedented step of missing the two celebrations of Revolution Day on Nov. 5 and Nov. 7.

He then stayed away from the Communist Party Central Committee Plenum in late December, 1983, and the subsequent meeting of the Supreme Soviet, or nominal Parliament.

Attendance at these events is considered a protocol necessity for the Soviet leader, and Andropov's absence renewed the persistent concern about the state of his health.

At first, the Kremlin said he had "a cold." In January, Pravda editor Viktor Afanasyev confirmed rumors that Andropov had kidney problems. Still, the Soviets predicted Andropov would return to public view and that his influence was felt in the ruling circles.

By the end of January, the Kremlin under Andropov had completed a party reshuffle that saw dozens of top officials replaced. Ousted were 32 regional party bosses, seven of the 23 central committee chiefs and 22 members of the Supreme Soviet council of ministers. It was the biggest such move since Brezhnev took over the party in 1964.

THE CHANGES reflected a new style, and allowed the older men to retire quietly and with their privileges intact — even in some cases where they had failed in their responsibilities.

Officer Gerald Thomas Dickson, 30, of Odessa, was checking his .45-caliber automatic handgun in the pickup truck of Officer Sharon Lawrence about 1 p.m. According to police reports, the gun accidently discharged and hit Dickson in his left calf, clipping the bone.

Dickson and Lawrence were waiting to meet informants at an industrial office complex on the east service road of Interstate 20 between Grant Avenue and Dixie Street, police reports indicated.

Dickson was taken to the emergency room of Odessa Medical Center Hospital, where he is expected to remain for four or five days.

Dickson has been on the force for more than three years.

Bush will head U.S. delegation to Andropov's funeral

Former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and Zbigniew Brzezinski, national security adviser to former President Carter, both recommended that Reagan stay home, while there were widespread calls on Capitol Hill for Reagan to attend, in hopes of luring the Soviets back to arms control talks.

Speakes said the United States received no advance notice of Andropov's death before the official Kremlin announcement.

In a message to the Soviet's acting chief of state, Reagan expressed "condolences and sympathies" and the "deep and heartfelt desire of the American people for world peace."

Speakes, who relayed part of Reagan's message, said it also expressed the hope for "genuine cooperation with the Soviet Union to make the world better and join in peaceful purpose for all mankind."

In a separate statement, Speakes said, "At this time of transition in the Soviet Union, our two nations should look to the future in order to find ways to realize these goals" of eliminating the threat of force in international relations, reducing nuclear arms stockpiles and establishing a better relationship between the superpowers.

"In the nuclear age, there is no alternative to dialogue," Speakes said. "The United States hopes that the Soviet leader will work with us in this spirit and take advantage of the opportunities at hand to find common ground and establish a mutually beneficial relationship."

Wholesle prices take biggest jump in past 14 months

Poultry prices were up 2.9 percent, fish prices advanced 5.6 percent and coffee prices gained 2.6 percent.

The prices of fresh fruits tumbled 3.5 percent.

The food price gains were attributed mostly to December's chilly temperatures which damaged crops, disrupted the shipment of livestock to slaughter and reduced poultry flocks in farm areas of the country.

But meat prices also were higher because of the delayed effect of the summer's drought which forced producers to kill off their herds rather than pay more for feed. In the fall, those prices plunged but, with supplies down, they are starting to rise.

Also, poultry flocks in the Mid-Atlantic region have been hard hit by avian influenza, leading to higher egg prices.

The department's new report also said that in the past 12 months, poultry prices were up 24.5 percent, and vegetable prices soared 50.5 percent. Beef prices climbed 5 percent, and pork prices plummeted 8.8 percent.

Dennis Steadman, an agricultural economist at Chase Econometrics in Bala Cynwyd, Pa., predicted higher meat prices for the next several months to reflect the dwindling herds. But he looked for an easing of poultry and egg prices.

The effects of the cold winter also were expected to show up shortly in energy prices since analysts said the demand for home heating oil has drained off supplies.

The new report said home heating oil prices were down 3.4 percent and gasoline prices were off 1.6 percent. Natural gas costs were up 0.9 percent.

In the last year, energy prices fell 6.9 percent, gasoline prices were off 9.3 percent, and heating oil prices declined 10.8 percent.

before the Lebanese government and other governments involved in the multinational force are consulted.

The Marines should "get out of Lebanon as quickly as possible because their mission is almost completely frustrated and the ships may not be safe enough for them," Laxalt said.

Laxalt, who is general chairman of the Republican Party, had been a strong advocate of the Marine presence in Beirut.

"Without speaking for anybody, I would say we're in the intensive care, artificial respiration stage as far as Gemayel is concerned," he said, referring to the tottering government of Lebanese President Amin Gemayel. "I think we're giving him one last shot in order to put a coalition government together, stabilize his country and avert a Syrian takeover and unnecessary bombing of Beirut."

Asked whether time was growing short for bringing America's men and ships home, Laxalt replied, "Yes."

U.S. warships off the Lebanese coast this week bombarded targets in the hills overlooking Beirut.

As for stepped up shelling of Syrian and rebel positions in Lebanon, Laxalt said he thought it might be worthwhile if it kept Gemayel "politically viable."

"I would say that just looking at it from a great distance, the chances of that are pretty slim," Laxalt added.

Laxalt has long said that if America left Lebanon it would send the wrong signal to U.S. allies and moderates in the Middle East. That sentiment was echoed earlier this week by former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

"That's been our concern all along," Laxalt said. "But what signal do we send if we take the option of aggressively taking on the Syrians? I don't think that would be a very good signal either."

Laxalt said Marines were sent to Beirut in September of 1982 "with a policy based on a lot of assumptions."

"First and foremost was that our Marines on the ground would be a peacekeeping force," he said. "It was originally contemplated that they would be a physical presence, walking with the Lebanese patrols. That has changed entirely. Now they're dug in and under siege.

"We came in on the basis that with our multi-national presence, Gemayel could stabilize the country, secure it with sufficient brigades. Instead we now find that some of the brigades have defected and his efforts to form a coalition government are not doing too well — to say the least.

Gulf Corp. suing Pickens group

Pickens would not elaborate on whether a successful takeover of Gulf by his investor group would be followed by the establishment at Gulf of a royalty trust that would siphon income from Gulf's domestic oil and gas properties directly to stockholders.

"There may not be a royalty trust," he said.

Pickens' investor group began buying Gulf stock late last summer, and had amassed 12.5 percent of the common stock by Dec. 2, when a special stockholders meeting was held to vote on reincorporation in Delaware.

The move, which was approved by holders of 52.5 percent of outstanding shares and took effect last month, was designed to dilute the influence of Pickens' group by eliminating cumulative voting privileges that would have enabled the group to control several seats on the Gulf board. Cumulative voting is not allowed under Delaware law.

Chinese earning more in 'capitalism'

CANTON, China (AP) — Canton is humming under a system the Communist government refers to as "state capitalism" and many of its people are earning salaries far higher than other Chinese.

Workers at the Haizhu Wristwatch Factory don't look up when a visitor takes their picture: they're on piece work turning out watches for Hong Kong.

Top earners among the 544 employees in the backstreet factory make 180 yuan ($90) a month — 2½ times the national average for city workers in other parts of China.

New open-door trade policies, introduced by the government of Deng Ziaoping in Peking, closely link Canton and Hong Kong, 80 miles apart along the Pearl River. Workers in this ancient trading center are reaping the benefits.

The Haizhu watch factory is an example. Its capacity of 1.2 million electronic, 400,000 mechanical and 45,000 quartz watches a month for Hong Kong distributors makes it a money-spinner.

The Baogang garment factory in the same neighborhood began five years ago with 20 housewives sewing underwear in what once was a Roman Catholic church.

Expanded and air-conditioned, the plant now employs more than 200 women who produce men's suits and leisure jackets for the Hong Kong market.

"We have built 13 factories in all and earned processing fees of 2.36 million U.S. dollars," said Zhang Jinwang, manager of the Baogang Industrial Corp., overseer of a burgeoning empire of light industry that turns out clocks, earphones and anything else foreign investors want.

Canton authorities have cracked down on pornography and corruption, which they attributed to the proximity of Hong Kong, and no one here contends that standards of living are yet comparable to those in the British colony.

But the easing of strict regulations of the past has led to growing Hong Kong investment and sales in China, mostly via Canton.

At the same time, fewer Chinese are fleeing to Hong Kong. Last year the figure was 9,067 compared with 89,677 in 1979.

Hong Kong's crackdown on illegal immigrants is held partly responsible, but many Cantonese say the desire to cross the border is waning.

"The political situation here is stable and if you work hard you can earn more than 100 yuan ($50) a month while paying just 10 yuan ($5) rent," said Chen Weiliang of the Haizhu Foreign Trade Corp. "In Hong Kong you might have to pay 1,000 to 2,000 H.K. dollars ($125 to $250) for a room.

"Also their welfare system is not so good. If you fall ill, you're in trouble. We have free medical treatment for workers."

From plastic brooms — impossible to find in Peking — to Grundig TV sets, Canton seems awash with consumer goods when compared with elsewhere in China.

On the top floor of the Nanfang Dasha Department Store, youths clamor around space invader machines on display for local sale.

Young Chinese workers at one of Canton's thriving joint enterprises with Hong Kong assemble quartz watches for export recently. Under China's economic reforms, piece work is now allowed and some employees earn $90 a month, more than twice the national average.

A Western-style supermarket on Renmin Road sells wrapped meats, cans of passion fruit juice and packages of American-type gelatin dessert.

At wharfside before dawn, peasants sell their catches of carp for profit, having provided the state with a contracted amount at a lower price. Private vendors load vans and bicycle carts with the fish to sell in the streets.

Yin Chunyen, board chairman of the Guangdong Aquatic Products Corp., explained that after the government introduced the "responsibility system" in 1979, allowing peasants to earn more if they produced more, supplies of fish went from 20,000 tons to 80,000 tons a year, some of which is exported to Hong Kong.

The fish industry here is now worth 400 million yuan ($200 million) a year, Yin said, and the corporation turns a profit of 1 million yuan ($500,000).

Half goes to the state and much of the rest is spent on housing for the firm's 8,000 employees, a practice many work units are following to improve living standards.

One new apartment was allocated to a wholesale fish-shop worker, Jiang Zhun, 31, widowed two years ago when her fisherman husband died of cancer. She supports her 7-year-old son and mother-in-law on a salary of more than 100 yuan ($50) a month, she said.

Tourists visit Mao's birthplace

SHAOSHAN, China (AP) — Mao is gone, but the memory is there. And in Shaoshan, the rice belt village where the late Chinese leader grew up, memories of Mao Tse-tung draw hundreds of tourists a day.

The rambling "rich peasant" house of Mao's father — by the famed son's description hard-working but tyrannical — has been carefully restored. Curious communists and youngsters on a picnic outing show up here to view the primitive hearth and typical Hunan-style four-poster bed in which the young Mao slept.

Born in 1893, Mao learned rebellion early. His father demanded strict obedience and the two never got along. A quest for excitement and learning led young Mao first to the county seat, then to the provincial capital of Changsha.

At Changsha, Mao was one of the early enrollees at the First Normal School, a teacher training institution where he slept in a dorm and spent much of his meager allowance on newspapers. His fellow students later elected him leader of the dorm.

First Normal is still there, an imposing turn-of-the-century European-style structure. It's now a "key school" in China's educational system and receives extra money and other scarce resources so it may serve as a model.

Autry gets March 14 execution date

state

BEAUMONT (AP) — A judge Friday ordered Texas prison officials to strap convicted killer James David Autry back onto a gurney, insert needles into his arms and put him to death by poisonous injection before sunrise March 14.

Autry, dressed in gray trousers, a blue shirt and handcuffed, stared at the floor as state District Judge Leonard Giblin set the fourth execution date since November 1982.

About 100 spectators packed the small courtroom to hear the brief sentencing.

"I think this time it's going to happen, and I think he was thinking the same thing," Giblin said afterwards. "It bothered me to look at him."

Giblin has been on the bench for about 6½ years and Autry is the only convict he has sentenced to death.

"I believe in the death penalty and I believe he's getting everything he deserved," the judge said. "But when you're telling someone when he's going to die, if that doesn't bother you, then something's wrong."

Autry, a 29-year-old drifter from Amarillo who came within 30 minutes of execution last October, was convicted of killing a Port Arthur convenience store clerk during an April 20, 1980 robbery. Evidence showed that Autry killed Shirley Drouet rather than pay $2.70 cents for a six-pack of beer.

Autry has maintained he never fired the shots that killed Mrs. Drouet, a former Catholic priest and permanently crippled a Greek sailor.

Autry said nothing at the hearing Friday.

But his attorney, Stefan Presser, said he would ask the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans to review the case again and grant another stay.

"He told me he has an intense desire to live," Presser said.

Presser asked Giblin for leniency in setting the execution date, saying Autry's mother has hired Houston attorney Stan Schneider to ask the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles to commute her son's sentence.

"I got five days. The Texas statute says an execution has to be scheduled 30 days in advance and I got 35," he said.

Autry lay strapped to the gurney with intravenous needles in his arms when U.S. Supreme Court Justice Byron White granted a reprieve 24 minutes before the execution was to begin at 12:01 a.m. on Oct. 5.

Presser claimed in a hearing last month that Texas prison officials illegally put Autry on the gurney an hour before they should have. He said their actions caused Autry unnecessary pain and argued it would be cruel and unusual punishment to allow the state to put him to death.

Presser said he would make before the appeals court those same arguments, which were denied last week by a federal judge as "frivolous, baseless and totally absurd."

Presser said Texas Atttorney General Jim Mattox deliberately misled prison officials into keeping Autry on the gurney nearly an hour after White had granted the stay.

Prison officials who were inside the death chamber with Autry testified that they were told only a brief delay — and not a stay — had been granted.

Texas Assistant Attorney General Leslie Benitez said that the state delayed telling prison officials so they could decide whether to ask the entire Supreme Court to vacate the stay.

Last week, U.S. District Judge Robert Parker ruled state officials did not act maliciously or intend to inflict torture on Autry. But Presser said Parker was misinterpreting the law.

Adoption ring investigation scope enlarges

FORT WORTH (AP) — A third federal agency has entered the investigation into a private adoption network operating between Mexico and the United States.

Treasury Secretary Donald Regan has asked the Internal Revenue Service to join the FBI and the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service in determining if the adoption network has broken any laws, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram said today.

Regan's announcement came in a letter to Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kansas, who had asked Regan to include the IRS in a comprehensive, nationwide investigation.

Dole and five other senators, including Lloyd Bentsen introduced legislation Thursday in the senate to outlaw fraudulent international and interstate adoptions.

Adoption intermediaries Debbie Tanner of Willcox, Ariz.; Bryan Hall of El Paso, and Becci Kelley of New Market, Iowa, are the focus of the investigations, federal officials said.

At least 80 American couples in 18 states said they paid between $3,000 and $7,000 each to adopt Mexican children. The couples said they never received a child or a refund of their money.

Bentsen, himself an adoptive parent, called for swift passage to reverse the "seamy scenario" of international adoption fraud.

Bentsen said the adoption ring may have been involved in as many as 400 fraud cases in 20 states. "Unfortunately," he said, the group's activities represents "the tip of the iceberg in the largely unregulated world of international and interstate adoption."

The senator's daughter, Tina, was adopted from Norway approximately 30 years ago after Bentsen, then a young congressman, sponsored a private immigration bill permitting her admission into the country. She was described as "the billion-dollar baby" because Bentsen's bill was enacted as an amendment to a $1 billion tax bill, the Star-Telegram said.

The adoption bill would make it a federal crime, punishable by up to five years in prison and a $10,000 fine, to defraud adoptive couples. The bill would also prohibit unlicensed adoption intermediaries — with the exception of lawyers — from handling international or interstate adoptions.

The newspaper reported Thursday that an American woman said she helped obtain babies for the adoption network under investigation.

Fanny Hatch, 71, an American who has spent most of her life in Mexico, told the newspaper that between 1978 and 1980 she paid pregnant Mexican women in Hermosillo, Mexico, varying amounts of money in exchange for putting their children up for adoption.

Mrs. Hatch said that Ms. Tanner reimbursed her for the money she paid the Mexican women.

"I would tell her (Ms. Tanner) how much I spent and she would send it to me," said Mrs. Hatch, a long-time resident of Hermosillo, which is about 150 miles due south of Tucson, Ariz.

"I think I told her exactly how it was spent. There was never any disagreement on that."

Ms. Tanner, Hall and Ms. Kelley have maintained that their adoption network, which uses lawyers in Mexico and private adoption agencies in the United States to link adoptive couples with children, has broken no laws. Mrs. Tanner and Hall claim to have placed as many as 400 Mexican children with parents in the United States.

Ms. Kelley denied any knowledge that Mexican mothers were paid in exchange for giving up their children for adoption.

Missing Methodist minister found slain

DUBLIN (AP) — Texas Rangers were called in Friday to investigate the slaying of a Methodist minister, who had been missing for four days after leaving for a meeting of pastors in Dallas, authorities say.

The body of the Rev. John H. Basham, a 55-year-old father of three, was found by a Palo Pinto County constable Thursday night in his Volkswagen van along Interstate 20, authorities said.

An autopsy was scheduled Friday in Dallas, Palo County sheriff's dispatcher Susan Mills said.

Investigators said they did not know how the minister was killed or how long he had been dead when the van was discovered about 70 miles west of Fort Worth.

Basham's body was lying in the floor of the van, which was parked along the westbound lanes of the freeway, Ms. Mills said.

Basham was pastor of First United Methodist Church in Dublin, a town of about 2,800 in Erath County, 70 miles southwest of Fort Worth.

He left his home Monday afternoon to join Methodist ministers from Texas and seven other states at an annual meeting at Southern Methodist University's Perkins School of Theology.

Trooper's killer may be tried in other deaths

BRYAN (AP) — A Brazos County prosecutor says he's anxious to try Eliseo Moreno in his jurisdiction even though the defendant has already been sentenced to die for one killing.

Rodney Boyles, an assistant district attorney, said Thursday he was doing everything he could to see that Moreno, 24, stands trial in the slayings of Juan and Esther Garza.

The Garzas were shot to death in their College Station apartment late the afternoon of Oct. 11. Moreno is charged with capital murder in their deaths. The Garzas were related to Moreno's estranged wife, Blanca.

Moreno was convicted Tuesday of capital murder in the shooting later that day of state trooper Russell Boyd, 25. Boyd was killed about 40 miles south of College Station when he stopped Moreno on a routine traffic stop.

"Right now, we're working on getting him back to our jurisdiction," Boyles said of Moreno. "I'm going to do my best to bring him up here."

Boyles said he would try to have Moreno transferred from Waller County to the Brazos County Jail.

Moreno is also charged with murder in the slayings of three Hempstead residents killed at a house by the highway. The victims were Anne Bennatte, 70; Allie Wilkins, 79; and James Bennatt, 62.

City sued over wall

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A $12.5 million lawsuit has been filed against the City of San Antonio and some construction subcontractors by a man who says he was seriously injured when the wall of a downtown demolition project fell on him.

The suit by Charles B. Jaggers said he was walking downtown on Sept. 17 when the wall tumbled down on top of him, causing severe, painful and disabling injuries that have prevented him from working.

His wife, Florence M. Jaggers, contends she has suffered mental anguish because of her husband's injuries and inability to support her.

Named as defendants were subcontractors Olshan Demolition Co. Inc., Spaw-Glass Constructors Inc. and Mid-City Inc., Olshan employee Bennie Howell, and the city.

Astronauts on look out for pigs, gators

Shuttle to land on longest runway

nation

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Challenger's astronauts stowed gear Friday and got ready to wind up the first Florida-to-Florida space flight with a dawn landing on one of the world's longest paved runways. An alert was in effect on the strip: watch out for wild pigs and alligators.

If the weather remains good, the shuttle will land this morning at the Kennedy Space Center at 6:16 a.m. CST, heralded by a sonic boom heard over most of Florida.

Challenger will fire its braking rocket over the Indian Ocean west of Australia, its supersonic glide taking it across Baja California and a bit of Texas, south of Houston and across the delta south of New Orleans.

The touchdown on Runway 15, a 15,000-foot strip of concrete, will put the shuttle just four miles from the launch pad where it began its voyage on Feb. 3. The last preparation that will be made for the event is an anxious search of the runway for alligators and wild pigs, which abound in the area.

"If you hit an alligator or anything else with the orbiter, you would probably destroy the landing gear," said NASA's Bill Williams. "It's desgined for an obiter landing, not anything else."

The Florida Wildlife Commission was standing by to take care of any straying animals. The space center is part of a wildlife refuge and is populated, too, with bobcats and foxes.

During a Friday news conference, commander Vance Brand said that Bruce McCandless and Robert Stewart, who made history's first untethered space walks during the mission, were calling themselves Flash Gordon and Buck Rogers, after the comic strip characters. Who was Flash and who Buck, he didn't say.

But eight hours later, Brand confided to Mission Control that Bob Stewart was "Flash," and Bruce McCandless was "Buck."

"We've had a really useful, we've had a really productive mission in spite of the failures and minor setbacks that we have undergone," said astronaut Ronald McNair.

Brand said the crew was disappointed about the major failures of the 10th shuttle flight: two $75 million satellites that were supposed to climb to 22,300 miles but didn't; a $450,000 tracking balloon that burst; and the $100 million robot arm that didn't work when it was supposed to rotate a docking device.

But, he said, the two spectacular spacewalks were pluses.

"I think we've been on top of the world since they came off because those were very exciting things to pull off up here," Brand said. "I think we feel there's been some adversity, but a lot has been accomplished."

The space walkers were asked how it was, hanging out in space, 300 feet from the mother ship without a safety line, maneuvering with bursts of nitrogen gas from a $10 million backpack.

"My impressions were of the immensity of the entire universe, and looking around and seeing the circle of the Earth and the horizon and thinking, what a beautiful Earth, what a beautiful flying machine," said Stewart.

And his feelings? "Well, I thought of myself as an engineering test pilot evaluating a very high and fast flying machine of a quite unusual sign," said Stewart, an Army pilot.

Said McCandless: "I was most impressed by the spectacular panorama."

Stewart said the space walks proved the jet-packs' worth as a tool to be used in April when other astronauts will retrieve the ailing Solar Maximum satellite, repair it in the shuttle cargo bay and set it back into orbit.

Reporters at the Johnson Space Center in Houston asked the questions. Afterward, the crew shut down experiments and stowed gear. They checked their flight control systems and pronounced them in perfect working order.

The only previous attempt to land a shuttle in Florida, last June, was erased by fog and rain, with the flight diverted to Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., where eight of the nine earlier flights have ended. One mission returned to White Sands, N.M., because of wet runways in California.

NASA wants to start landing the shuttle at Cape Canaveral regularly to save money and cut down turnaround time between flights.

Boy 'coming back' after near-fatal accident

CHICAGO (AP) — Four-year-old Jimmy Tontlewicz isn't exactly talking up a storm, but the four words his mother heard him say have made her certain "my little Jimmy is coming back" after a near-fatal accident.

The blond boy was close to death on Jan. 15 when he was submerged for 20 minutes under the icy waters of Lake Michigan after a sledding accident. Now he is walking, eating and apparently has uttered a few words.

On Monday, a popsicle dripping down his fingers, Jimmy turned to his favorite nurse and said, "Take this." Mrs. Tontlewicz heard it, too.

"It's a miracle. Put it that way," Mrs. Tontlewicz, 30, said. "My little Jimmy is coming back."

But, she added, "We've still got to work on eating, and talking. We've really got to work on that one."

Last Sunday, Mrs. Tontlewicz said Jimmy mumbled, "What's that?" when looking at pictures posted near the fifth-floor nurses' station at Children's Memorial Hospital. He apparently has not, however, said anything since Monday, Gina Pryma, a hospital spokeswoman, said Friday.

"He's showing steady improvement," said Karen Shepherd, nursing coordinator at the hospital. "His walking has really improved. His responses to people are also improving and he'll hug on command. But he seems to respond better at some times than others."

Jimmy's walking has improved so much that he can walk around the hospital on his own. By Tuesday, his physical therapists had to ask his mother and nurses to curtail his corridor treks — for good reason.

"He was so busy walking, he was too tired for therapy," said Dr. Robert Tanz, his pediatrician. "He's even chasing me down the halls."

Study of effects of Agent Orange planned

PATERSON, N.J. (AP) — The nation's first comprehensive medical study on the effects of dioxin in Agent Orange on Vietnam veterans is to begin within a month at a hospital here, officials said Friday.

A battery of tests, financed by the state and expected to take six months, will be conducted by Dr. Henry Velez at the Barnert Memorial Hospital Center.

"We hope to learn what are the ill-health effects of dioxin, if any, on the human body, including physical and mental disorders," said Velez, director of the hospital's Center for Occupational and Preventative Health Care.

Dioxin is an unwanted byproduct in the production of Agent Orange and was contained in the chemical sprayed over about 8 percent of Vietnam during the war, Velez said.

"This has never been done before. It's very exciting," said Velez, who served in the U.S. Army in Vietnam as a combat soldier in 1968, but said he did not believe he had been exposed to Agent Orange.

The clinical study will involve a target group of Vietnam veterans exposed to the dioxin in Agent Orange and a control group of people who have not come in contact with dioxin, Velez said.

The veterans will be selected by the health committee of the New Jersey Agent Orange Commission, which has been trying to locate the approximately 90,000 state residents who served in Vietnam, said Velez. The selections are expected to begin with a month, he said.

The study was announced here at the monthly meeting of the commission, which was created by the Legislature in 1980. The commission has received $355,000 since it was formed, of which 40 percent was earmarked for studies, including the dioxin study. The exact cost of the study was not known.

The test subjects will remain at the hospital for three days so researchers can determine dioxin exposure and medical histories, Velez said.

After the hospital conducts the tests, which include blood samples analyzed by dioxin experts at a Swedish laboratory, Rutgers University officials will help compile statistics on the relation between dioxin exposure and disorders suspected of being caused by the chemical, Velez said.

Legislators don't want Meese

WASHINGTON (AP) — Twenty-five House Democrats asked their colleagues in the Senate on Friday to block the nomination of White House Counselor Edwin Meese III as attorney general.

In a letter to Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., the lawmakers said, "Mr. Meese's statements and record make it clear that he is unfit for this office."

The Democrats cited his "efforts to abolish the Legal Services Corporation, his role in dismantling the Civil Right Commission's independence, and his vocal opposition to affirmative action" as reasons for their stand.

"Clearly, the position should be held by someone who understands the plight of the less priviliged," their letter said. "Mr. Meese, who four weeks ago could not find hunger in America, is ill-suited to find justice for all in our country."

President Reagan nominated Meese for the post after William French Smith announced his resignation.

Those signing the letter were: Edward Markey and Barney Frank of Massachusetts; Julian Dixon, Augustus Hawkins and Ronald Dellums of California; Walter Fauntroy, District of Columbia; John Conyers and George Crockett of Michigan; John Seiberling, Katie Hall and Louis Stokes of Ohio; Gus Savage and Charles Hayes of Illinois; Edolphus Towns, Ted Weiss, Thomas Downey and Major Owens of New York; William H. Gray, Thomas Foglietta and Peter Kostmayer of Pennsylvania; Michael Barnes of Maryland; Mickey Leland of Texas; James Weaver of Oregon; Gerry Sikorski of Minnesota; and Harold Ford of Tennessee.

Former prime minister celebrating 90th birthday

LONDON (AP) — Nearly 90, Harold Macmillan still works his magic on Britain, brightening up bleak times with memories of a bygone glittering age.

The former prime minister has been out of politics for nearly 21 years, and he rarely appears in public. His health, says a secretary, is good, but his eyesight is fading and he passed his birthday quietly Friday.

Just to look at him is to be reminded of another time. The patrician face, the sage, drooping eyes, the white hair swept back grandly at the temples, the mustache that seems to reinforce the stiffest of upper lips — all these seem to embody a lost golden age of grandeur and empire.

Critics contend that it was all an adroit political pose, and indeed, Macmillan the prime minister was a bundle of paradoxes.

The grandson of a poor Scot, he married into the aristocracy. His seeming aloofness hid a ruthless political survival instinct. The Tory gentleman was a radical social reformer. Born before radio and automobiles, he championed the microchip as herald of a marvelously leisurely future.

He presided over the breakup of the British Empire while seeming to stand for everything it represented. And his two greatest ambitions, East-West detente and a leadership role for Britain in Europe, have gained meager returns.

In the heyday of his 1957-1963 premiership, an adoring press dubbed him "SuperMac," "WonderMac" and "Unflappable Uncle Harold," and he played the role to the hilt.

Some of his policies were visionary, others sadly shortsighted. His disdain for economics and refusal to take 2.5-percent inflation seriously are seen today as having set Britain on the road to 20-percent inflation and mass unemployment. Yet he remained firm in his belief that his benevolence and vision had eradicated social injustice and staved off communism.

He told the Evening Standard four months ago: "The mass of the people don't like being called the proletariat. They don't like being described as poor. They're not. They've got two cars and their own house and they have just come back from two weeks in Spain. We've achieved it. We've bourgeoisied them."

He was often accused of deliberately cultivating an old-fashioned manner to mask his shortcomings. "Under that rather casual and flippant exterior there was a casual and flippant interior," wrote Andrew Alexander in the Daily Mail.

Sir MacMillan

Macmillan readily admits that he never took life too seriously.

"Everybody seems slightly pompous to me now," he recently told a newspaper. "You must make good fun of life. You must make the best of it. Even in war we had a lot of jokes and fun. Even if there are troubles and difficulties, laugh them off and pray to God for help."

Macmillan was at the forefront of Western efforts to limit the spread of nuclear weapons, and staunchly backed President John F. Kennedy in his confrontation with the Soviet Union during the Cuban missile crisis of 1962.

Macmillan came to office in January 1957 with Britain reeling from the catastrophic British-French-Israeli invasion of Suez in 1956 and the resignation of Prime Minister Anthony Eden. His first move was to pin a sign on his door with a line from a Gilbert and Sullivan opera: "Quiet, calm deliberation disentangles every knot."

His administration, one of the longest in modern British history, brought prosperity and the welfare system to its peak and set the stage for the delights of swinging London and the Beatles. But it was marred by strife inside the Cabinet and a succession of scandals, climaxing in 1963 with the Profumo Affair, in which War Minister John Profumo was discovered to be sharing a prostitute with a Soviet military attache.

Totem poles lasted 50 years

British Columbia's Indian totem poles, usually hand-hewn from cedar trunks, were sometimes 80- to 100-feet tall and lasted an average of 50 to 80 years.

Town with past looks to future

CLOVER BEND, Ark. (AP) — Residents bent on historical preservation are working to keep this town, the celebrated subject of a popular turn-of-the-century fiction writer's pen, from becoming only a name in the history books.

Like many small towns, Clover Bend has changed greatly in its almost 200-year history. In the mid-1840s, Clover Bend was a populous town on the Black River. In later years, it became a thriving cotton plantation. The town enjoyed a period of economic tranquility in the 1940s under a New Deal program. School rooms were filled with children whose parents were among about 80 families given small tracts of land on which to farm.

But the program wasn't successful, and faced with a steady loss of population, the Clover Bend school closed this year, consolidating with Hoxie. The population dropped from a high of 500 to 50.

While some thought that meant the end of the tiny community, others have focused on vacant school buildings, which are to be renovated for a community center and a rural fire department. The 15-room plantation house that once belonged to Alice French, who wrote under the pen name Octave Thanet in the late 1800s and early 1900s, has been placed on the National Register of Historic Places and is sometimes open to sightseers.

A Frenchman chose an area along the Black River in Northeast Arkansas for a settlement that became an important river landing. Somewhere along the way, the settlement came to be known as Clover Bend, a name chosen because the river bends formed the shape of a giant clover leaf.

In 1840, Col. Samuel Robinson purchased Clover Bend from the federal government and made it a giant cotton plantation. By the end of the 19th century, Clover Bend was a self-sufficient plantation.

When Miss French made Clover Bend her winter home, the town became familiar to many Americans. Miss French and Jane Crawford, who owned part of the Clover Bend plantation, built the plantation house known as Thanford.

Iranian exiles don't think regime will last much longer

EDITOR'S NOTE: On Feb. 11, 1979, with the shah in exile, the Iranian government of Prime Minister Shapour Bakhtiar fell, opening the way for Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's Islamic revolution. Five years later, some of the principal actors, now exiles in France, look back in an effort to determine what, in their view, went wrong in Iran. Here is a report.

By GREG MacARTHUR

PARIS (AP) — The royalists blame the Americans, the constitutional monarchists blame the shah, the Islamic guerrillas blame the Marxists and former President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr blames the Iran-Iraq war.

Five years after the revolution that turned a strategically crucial pro-Western "island of stability" into a hostile Islamic republic, Iran remains the source of intense concern and debate.

Much of the debate about "what went wrong" takes place in France, among an estimated 13,000 Iranians in exile. Some of them, like former Prime Ministers Shapour Bakthiar and Ali Amini, opposed the late Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi but worked with him.

Others, like the shah's twin sister, Princess Ashraf, remain intensely loyal to him. Still others, like Bani-Sadr, helped engineer his downfall but were in turn blown away by the revolutionary whirlwind they created.

Finally, there is Massoud Rajavi, exiled leader of the Islamic Mujahadeen guerrillas, who fought the shah, the Americans and Bani-Sadr and now directs hit-and-run raids against the regime of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

Bani-Sadr and Rajavi have joined forces in a Paris-based National Council of Resistance. Amini and Bakhtiar direct separate resistance organizations here but have agreed to back the shah's son, Reza II, who wants to return to Iran as a constitutional monarch.

Princess Ashraf and her daughter are part of a small core of hard-line royalists in Paris — a city that serves as both refuge and killing ground in the continuing Iranian drama.

Last Tuesday, exiled Gen. Gholam Ali Oveissi, known as the "Butcher of Tehran" for his role in supressing mass demonstrations in 1978, was slain on a street in northern Paris by unknown gunmen.

Bakhtiar has escaped one assassination attempt in Paris. Bani-Sadr and Rajavi share a fortress-like compound outside the city. Princess Ashraf, who survived one assassination attempt but whose son was later shot dead in a Paris street, never goes out without her bodyguards.

All the exiles share an intense hatred for what they see as the "clerical fascism" of the Kohmeini regime. They are convinced that, after five years of war, repression and economic chaos, it cannot last much longer.

All, including Princess Ashraf, also indicated in separate interviews that the shah helped create the conditions which brought Khomeini to power.

"He was more frightened of a coup d'etat by his own army than of the revolutionaries," said Bani-Sadr, who fled to France on July 29, 1981, after being ousted from the presidency by Khomeini.

"He did not dare use the army to neutralize the people because he believed that if the army succeeded it would never cede power back to him," Bani-Sadr added. "The people soon understood that."

Amini, who was the shah's prime minister in 1961 and later a leader of the moderate opposition, says the shah needlessly antagonized his people by pushing his land reforms too fast and with too little thought.

"He wanted to do it all in his lifetime," the 77-year-old Amini said. "You can't simply break up the old estates and leave nothing in their place. You need farm cooperatives and credits. It takes time, but unfortunately he was in a hurry, and the result was thousands of unemployed peasants who crowded into the cities."

Ahmad Mirfendereski, who was foreign minister in Bakhtiar's 37-day government, said the shah's cancer, diagnosed in 1974 but long "kept a state secret," was another crucial element. The United States did not learn of the shah's illness until the revolution was well along.

"He was very sick in the last years, and as a result he was indecisive," Mirfenderski said.

The shah died in Egypt on July 27, 1980.

Princess Ashraf charges that President Jimmy Carter betrayed her brother, but adds that in the last years the shah should have cracked down.

"He shouldn't have freed all those dissidents," she said. "It was like water accumulating: eventually you have a flood."

With the flood came chaos.

"We had five decades of dicatatorship, the shah and his father," said Rajavi, the 36-year-old guerrilla leader who spent seven years in the last shah's prisons. "There were no institutions other than the monarchy, which was dying, and the network of mosques and mullahs which filled the vacuum."

Rajavi claims the Mujahadeen were unable to fill the void because they were weakened by a deep split in guerrilla ranks in 1975.

"Some people got Marxist," he added. "They said from now on we are no longer Islamic. But support for the Mujahadeen was also cultural, and the division gave the reactionary mullahs who had to support us before an excuse to oppose us...If it had not been for that split, the story of Iran could have been written in another way."

The constitutional monarchists say the United States was to blame. They claimed that Washington encouraged the shah to assume dictatorial powers.

"Everything radiated from him and toward him," career diplomat Mirfenderski said. "He was the center of gravity. And when he became sick the regime was like a boat without sails or a rudder in very high seas."

The army was incapable of acting, he added, because the shah had "filled it with officers who were mediocre but personally loyal to him. After the shah left, the army was decapitated."

Mirfendereski predicted: "It will be very bloody, I'm afraid. And after 500,000 killed in the Iran-Iraq war, 12,000 executed, 2½ million forced to emmigrate, the economy in ruins, what purpose did it serve, this revolution?"

Chinese consumers demanding better goods

PEKING (AP) — China's consumer boom outraced production in 1983 as people demanded more and better food, clothing and durable goods, a government official said Friday in a review of the year.

"At present, many people are demanding new commodities of greater variety and quality," Xu Gang, deputy director of the State Statistical Bureau, told a news conference.

Inferior brands are being left on the shelves — a new phenomenon in China — while "superior brands" of high quality are underproduced, Xu said.

He also reported that "consumption increased at a higher rate than desired" and that production could not keep pace with demand.

Xu's words underlined evidence visible from the bustling streets of Canton to the farming heartland of China; people are spending their increased earnings on washing machines, color TVs, refrigerators and stereos.

Xu also gave preliminary figures which said China had a 1983 foreign trade surplus of $1 billion.

Exports totalled $22.3 billion, up 6.3 percent over 1982, and imports reached $21.3 billion, up 17.6 percent.

Xu said China's greater agricultural self-sufficiency was the reason for declines of 19.6 percent, 51.1 percent and 38.4 percent in imports of grain, cotton and edible oil, respectively.

China's bumper grain harvest last year was 380 million metric tons, up 25 million tons, or 7 percent, Xu said. Last month officials estimated the harvest at 370 million tons.

It was a "thriving and prosperous" year for the rural economy, thanks to the responsibility system which is increasing peasants' pay and productivity, Xu said.

The system, introduced by Deng Xiaoping's regime, replaces Mao Tsetung's egalitarianism with more pay for more work.

Per capita income among China's 800 million peasants rose more than 10 percent in 1983 to surpass $150 a year, Xu said. Some farmers engaging in private enterprise as well as state contracts made $2,500 to $5,000, according to the official press.

The nation now has 114.82 million urban workers, Xu said. Many earn about $450 a year and pay less than 10 percent of it in rent and utilities. The common practice of extended families in one home produces more disposable income.

A Snow Flake refrigerator, the most popular Chinese brand, costs $325, and a color television set about $600.

Despite the huge price in relation to income, Xu said television sets, both color and black and white, were in particularly short supply.

In recent weeks, hundreds of Peking residents have been seen waiting outside stores in sub-freezing temperatures to buy refrigerators as new shipments arrive.

A survey by the Peking Statistical Bureau said that of every 100 city households, 90 have television sets, 68 electric fans, 38 tape recorders, 27 washing machines, 21 cameras and six refrigerators.

Xu said the economy as a whole suffered "various forms of waste" last year, lacked sufficient transport, energy and raw materials, and distribution channels were sometimes blocked.

Man arrested for setting fire

YONKERS, N.Y. (AP) — A man charged with trying to steal a passenger jet at Westchester County Airport last December has been arrested again, accused of setting fire to his family's home, police said.

Matthew Fortuniewicz, 23, allegedly set fire Thursday to the two-family house where he lives with his parents, said police Capt. Owen McClain. The fire caused $30,000 damage.

Fortuniewicz had been free on $2,500 bail while awaiting trial on charges of criminal trespass and attempted larceny for allegedly trying to take off in an Air Florida jet last Dec. 15, reportedly saying he wanted to go to North Carolina.

Students' fathers' appeals rejected

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — The state Supreme Court has rejected appeals by six fathers of Faith Christian School students who were jailed last November for refusing to answer questions about the illegal school.

The judges said Thursday the men had no basis for appeal because they could cleanse themselves of contempt and be released if they answered questions put to them by the Cass County District Court.

The lower court issued an injunction in 1979 barring further operation of the school until it complied with state education requirements and hired state-certified teachers. The state Supreme Court affirmed that injunction in 1981.

Man put on probation for fake will

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An airline executive has been fined $5,000 and given four years' probation for trying to pass off a phony will doling out the estate of the late billionaire Howard Hughes.

Harold W. Mallet, 52, of Canyon Country, a sales executive for Aspen Airlines, was sentenced Thursday on his Dec. 20 guilty plea to one count of conspiracy to commit grand theft and forgery and one count of perjury.

Co-defendant Martha Jo Graves, 54, faces similar charges in a preliminary hearing Feb. 23. The fake will left 80 percent of Hughes' estate to the Miami-based Howard Hughes Medical Institute and 20 percent to the Acme Mining Co., a Nevada firm that Ms. Graves owns.

Campers told to leave grounds

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — About 50 people who have been camping on the lawn of the state Capitol to demonstrate the plight of the homeless are being told to move on.

The Department of General Services said Thursday the tents would have to be removed by this morning. The department had issued them two permits, and let them stay nearly three weeks.

Nine campers reportedly found jobs during the demonstration, two found suitable shelter, and two young runaways were referred to a treatment program.

Scout tackles woman's assailant

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The fleeing man had about 40 pounds on Martin Munoz, but being outweighed didn't stop the 19-year-old Explorer Scout from chasing him down and tackling him after a frantic woman said she'd just been raped.

Rickie Hubbard, 23, remained in the Los Angeles County Jail on Friday in lieu of $10,000 bond for investigation of rape, and sheriff's deputies credited Munoz's determination in putting him there.

Munoz, a volunteer at the sheriff's station in the northeastern suburb of Altadena, was working out in its gym Wednesday night when he heard screams outside, Deputy Mason Kenny said.

Dashing outside, he saw a man assaulting a woman and when he ran to help, the man ran. Kenny said Munoz tackled the man two blocks away and held him until a sheriff's car arrived.

The woman told deputies she was attacked while walking home. She was treated at a local hospital and released.

Sheriff's Deputy Jeffrey Landbreth, who directs Explorer Scout volunteers at the Altadena station, described Munoz as "a quiet young man" who didn't hesitate to pursue the assailant despite his smaller stature.

"Martin is a tall, thin boy and the suspect weighed about 40 pounds more than him," Landbreth noted.

Police find infant's mutilated body

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — The death of a baby, whose mutiliated body was found Friday, a day after the infant's severed left foot was carried to a home by a dog, has been tentatively classified as a homicide, police said.

The body of the baby boy, whose umbilical cord was still attached, was found Friday morning along a fence in the backyard of a house in a north Jackson subdivision, said Sgt. Chip Pippen, a spokesman for the Jackson Police Department.

Police had searched for more than two hours Thursday through bushes, trash cans and a drainage ditch before calling off the search until daylight.

Pippen said the child appeared to be fully developed, but that both legs were missing, "probably severed by dogs." He said the second leg was found near the body.

Police said it appeared the child had been where it was found for about 1½ days, police said, but a time of death had not been determined.

The death has been classified as a homicide pending an autopsy that should determine if the infant was alive or dead when it was abandoned, Pippen said.

The dog that found the foot on Thursday belonged to the family of 6-year-old Altonio Tyler, who was the first to see the animal when it returned home.

The dog "had it in his mouth when he brought it over here," said the boy. "He was trying to eat it. I told him to put it down."

The brown, mixed-breed dog dropped the foot on the carport, Altonio said, and the boy went inside to tell of his discovery.

"I couldn't believe it," said his mother, Dorothy Tyler. "I thought it was a 'coon's foot. My father hunts a lot of 'coons. I've got the jitters."

Mrs. Tyler said "fresh blood" was on the foot, which authorities said had been severed about 1½ inches above the ankle.

Police tried to get the dog to lead them to where it found the foot, but the animal refused to leave the Tylers' yard.

Homicide detective Robert Jordan said neighbors reported they had not seen anything suspicious in the area, and did not know of anyone who was at full-term of pregnancy.

Funeral home employees remove the body of a newborn infant from the backyard of a Jackson, Miss., home Friday after the mutilated remains were found by police officers. The search began Thursday after a family in the neighborhood reported their dog found part of a baby's foot.

Two more men indicted in marijuana smuggling ring

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Two more men accused of being part of a Gulf Coast dope smuggling ring that brought in marijuana by multimillion dollar shiploads have been indicted by a federal grand jury.

They were William Thad Page Jr., a fugitive whose hometown was not known; and David G. Wooley of Baton Rouge, La., free after posting a $20,000 cash bond in Beaumont, Texas.

Wooley was charged with conspiring to import 31 tons of marijuana in 1980 and 1981. Page was charged with conspiring to import 41 tons of marijuana, and with possession with intent to distribute.

Thursday's indictments stem from the Drug Enforcement Administration's "Operation Gemstone," which Assistant U.S. Attorney Al Winters said has resulted in over 50 convictions thus far.

The code name for the investigation was adopted because several business fronts set up by the smuggling ring were jewelry shops.

Despite the big shipments and the hundreds of millions of dollars involved, DEA agents said they had no inkling that the smuggling ring existed until a Pensacola, Fla., truck driver, hired to haul loads of marijuana to various inland points, had an attack of conscience and volunteered as an undercover operative.

Boy's system battling cells, doctor says

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston's "Bubble Boy" probably suffered from vomiting and diarrhea because his own immune system, inactive since birth, emerged to battle cells planted in him in the hopes of developing immunity, his doctor said Friday.

Dr. William Shearer, the personal physician of the boy known only as David, said he is virtually certain his 12-year-old patient has not developed graft vs. host disease, an affliction that often strikes patients who have undergone bone marrow transplants.

Shearer, at a news conference, said tests for that syndrome are incomplete, but insisted the timing is wrong for David's ailment to be that disease.

"Usually in graft vs. host, you have a much earlier presentation," Shearer said. "It usually occurs at about 10 days. David's symptoms began at more like 80 days. The time sequence is mighty unusual."

He said tests have not conclusively demonstrated what is wrong with David. But Shearer said one strong possibility is that the boy's long-dormant immunity has been spurred into action.

"It could be that the tiny bit of immunity that David did have is resisting" the infusion of bone marrow, Shearer said. He said the diarrhea, vomiting and fever the boy has experienced may be symptoms of "a kind of war."

He said he has never read about such an occurrence and is "not certain of the mechanism" which would trigger it.

The doctor described himself as "very optimistic."

"I like the way things are going," he said.

Shearer said doctors have noted normal levels of immunoglobulins in David's system, as well as other disease-fighting organisms. But he said tests have not entirely demonstrated that the Oct. 20 infusion of outside bone marrow from David's 15-year-old sister, Katherine, has successfully developed an immune system inside the boy.

Shearer called the change in David's system "profound."

Of the four patients suffering from Severe Combined Immune Deficiency Syndrome who were not otherwise ill when they had the kind of bone marrow transplants David had, Shearer said all four have improved or become well.

David was taken out of his plastic germ-free bubble, his home since just a few moments after birth, on Tuesday because "it became impossible to diagnose David's problems and to care for him" inside the bubble, the doctor said.

Shearer said David is still afforded a great degree of protection against microorganisms, his food remains sterilized and, except for kissing his mother upon his emergence from the bubble, he still has not touched the bare skin of another human being.

According to Shearer, the only reason he is not sure of the success of the bone marrow transplant is because he has been unable to find female lymphocytes in David's system. Those should be detected because the marrow donation came from his sister. The doctor said he expected to know within a month whether those female lymphocytes are present.

Hospital spokeswoman Susannah Griffin said earlier the boy needed to receive liquids intravenously for several hours and it was impossible to "get an IV pole in that unit (bubble)."

"There was more of a danger leaving him inside" than in bringing David into the dirty outside world, she said.

David's parents, whose names also have been withheld, released a statement through the hospital Thursday, saying they supported Shearer's decision to remove their son from the bubble.

"We are elated and very optimistic. To touch our son for the first time was overwhelming," the statement said.

The donor marrow had been treated with monoclonal antibodies, which are designed to kill mature T-cells. T-cells are key antibodies in the body's defense against disease. But doctors said transplanted mature T-cells might attack their new body, mistaking it for an outside infection.

David, who was treated for a deficient immune system, is reported to be in good condition three days after leaving his bubble, according to his team of doctors, from left, Murdina Desmond, William Shearer and Ralph Feigin. David is now being treated in a sterile isolation room at Texas Children's Hospital in Houston.

Doctor: Drug didn't cause symptoms

GEORGETOWN (AP) — A toxicologist testified Friday that the symptoms noted in a little girl before she died could not have been caused by the drug nurse Genene Jones allegedly used to kill her.

Dr. Eric Comstock of Houston said the seizures reported in Chelsea McClellan were the opposite of the effect usually produced by succinylcholine, the drug Ms. Jones, 33, is accused of injecting Sept. 17, 1982, shortly before the child died.

"You cannot have it both ways," Comstock testified. "You cannot have succinylcholine and convulsions at the time you have the peak effects of succinycholine." He said it was "an impossible combination."

Prosecution medical experts have said the 15-month-old girl's symptoms seemed consistent with an injection of the muscle-relaxing drug.

A prosecution witnesses has said the motive for the alleged killing was Ms. Jones' desire to show Kerrville hospital officials they needed a pediatric intensive care unit. Ms. Jones, a licensed vocational nurse, also is charged with injuring five other children she treated while working for Dr. Kathleen Holland.

Under cross-examination, Comstock agreed that the drug would be a useful method of torture because it "allows people to suffocate with the full awareness that they are suffocating."

Earlier Friday, an Austin nursing professor, Angela Clark, laid the groundwork for the defense's effort to show that Chelsea was not murdered, but died of natural causes, saying she had a long history of medical problems.

Mrs. Clark, brought in by the defense to review Chelsea's medical record, told jurors about the various health problems the girl battled during her brief life. The problems started before birth, when doctors detected a "slow and irregular" heart rate just before Chelsea was delivered on June 15, 1981 in an emergency Caesarean section.

During that delivery, Petti McClellan, Chelsea's mother, was given a dose of succinylcholine, the drug allegedly used by Ms. Jones to kill Chelsea. Poison experts have testified that traces of the drug were found in tissues taken from Chelsea's body.

Mrs. Clark's review of the records also showed Chelsea suffered a disorder, common in premature infants, called respiratory distress syndrome.

Chagra pleads not guilty to charges he hired killer

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Convicted drug kingpin Jamiel "Jimmy" Chagra pleaded innocent Friday to charges that he masterminded the 1978 attempted murder of a federal prosecutor.

The two-count indictment accuses him of hiring a gunman to kill Assistant U.S. Attorney James Kerr, who was directing an investigation into drug trafficking by the Chagra family.

Chagra was acquitted last year of plotting and paying for the 1979 assassination of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr., but convicted of obstructing justice in the investigation into Wood's death.

The attacks on Wood and Kerr took place only six months and six blocks apart, and Kerr often prosecuted drug cases in the judge's court.

Chagra's attorney, Oscar Goodman of Las Vegas, Nev., said he would ask for a change of venue in the Kerr trial, which tentatively has been set for April 30.

"I love San Antonio," Goodman said, "but every time I mention the name Chagra to a taxi driver, waitress or bartender it elicits a certain response that I think is less than friendly."

Goodman said he planned to file motions for a venue change and a speedy trial within 10 days.

The man accused of actually firing the shots at Kerr on Nov. 21, 1978 — James R. Kearns — pleaded innocent to the charges Wednesday.

Kerr, who had been driving to work at the federal courthouse, ducked under the dashboard as some 20 bullets ripped into the hood and windshield of his car.

Chagra made no statements during Friday's arraignment, answering only "yes, sir" to routine questions posed by U.S. Magistrate Robert B. O'Connor.

Big Brother watches over school

Lufkin school has day out of '1984'

LUFKIN (AP) — By the time the clock had struck 13, the day was no longer fun.

Even the good news that a victory on the Western Front meant an increase in the chocolate ration by 1/100 of an ounce wasn't enough to put a smile on the children's faces.

Students at St. Cyprian's Episcopal School not only live in 1984, they lived "1984," George Orwell's classic novel about life in a totalitarian state.

Each sixth and seventh grade student's name was replaced with a number, faces were ordered expressionless and emotions — except during the two minutes of hate against the enemies of Oceania — were restricted to a minimum.

Language teacher Arlene Lyons said she thought of the activity because students reading the book had trouble understanding it.

"They just couldn't understand how someone could make you do something you didn't want to do."

Finally, they understood. The activity included every facet of the of the normal school day.

The 30 minutes of daily chapel was turned into 30 minutes of meditation, during which Comrade 1010 — teacher John Northcutt — explained to the students why freedom is slavery, war is peace and ignorance is strength.

During health class taught by L96, aka Perry Swindle, students learned that, under Big Brother, use of drugs by the secret police was good.

"Do you think that the use of drugs by the secret police is good?" Swindle asked a student.

"Not really," the student replied.

"It is good," Swindle said.

In a language class taught by Mrs. Lyons, known as 468375 for the day, students were given a spelling test on "archaic" words, including religion, family, brotherhood, marriage, concern and love.

After the test, Mrs. Lyons spelled words correctly and asked students to grade their own tests.

"Those of you who have missed the most are our best candidates today," she told the students. "We want to wipe out all memory of these words from your mind."

Each class began with the same ritual, all students standing with right arms raised in a Nazi-like salute.

"The I does not exist," they said in unison after the teacher. "Freedom is slavery. There is no right, there is no wrong. War is peace. There is only the will of Big Brother."

And, though students may have broken the spell a few times during the day, the teachers did not. A reporter visiting one of the classrooms was ordered to produce his pass from the Ministry of Truth. When he could not, he was ordered to leave to get one.

Even lunch was served in "1984" fashion. Instead of the normal sandwiches or plate lunch, students ate what Winston ate in Orwell's novel — stewed cabbage, potatoes and onions cooked in a less-than-appetizing manner. With that they were allowed one slice of bread — 1/50th of-an-ounce larger than the day before because of high grain production reports — a half glass of tea and a small chocolate kiss.

Lunchtime entertainment also was strictly controlled by Big Brother. The Ministry of Truth decided at the last minute that music planned for a dance would not be appropriate and substituted its own music instead. When the dance was over, Comrade 1010 told the students when to clap and when to stop clapping.

After lunch, Northcutt said he was surprised the effect the exercise had on both students and teachers.

"We told them they would have to be actors," he said, "and for the first hour or so you could tell they were acting. But then, you just felt it change. Suddenly, nobody wanted to smile any more. It was total melancholy."

Northcutt said teachers also were learning what it would be like to live in a "1984" world.

"So many times you wanted to open up, you just wanted to do something natural, but you knew you couldn't. It's been really tough."

Park commitee has 13-year-old member

LOCKESBURG — The only difference between Travis Liggins and the 15 other members of the city park committee is his age. The other committee members are adults, Liggins is 13. He is the youngest member of a park committee in the state.

"Usually there are a bunch of 80-year-old women trying to tell kids what they want to do," said Ida Margaret Stone, who nominated Travis for the post. "Every park committee in the state should have a young person on it."

Mrs. Stone says city parks are for young people and she believes they deserve representation on park committees. But she did not nominate Travis just because he is young.

Being on the committee is not an honorary thing. Committee members work in the park cutting brush, raking leaves and making minor repairs.

Travis was doing the work without being on the committee, she said.

"His mother and daddy were on the committee and he usually came to the meetings with them, but he also works hard at the park," Mrs. Stone said.

Every time the committee worked on the park, Travis was there, she said.

Donna Gallaher, city secretary, said Mrs. Stone had nominated Travis this year and the other members were all for the idea.

"There were no questions asked. It was just done...A motion was made, a second came and Travis was elected," Mrs. Gallaher said.

Travis says he spends more time working at the park during the summer months than at other times of the year. "During the school semester, I usually don't have much time. I still go to the meetings and work on weekends," he said.

Nordic distance races are skiied in 15, 30 and 50 kilometers for men and 5, 10 and 20 kilometers for women. Courses are laid out with approximately equal amounts of flat, uphill and downhill terrain. Shorter courses are intended to have more difficult terrain.

Skiiers are timed individually and start at 30 second intervals. Competitors follow a marked track. They may scrape and wax their skis during the race but without outside help; a broken ski or one with damaged bindings may be replaced and both poles may be replaced during a race. Winners have the fastest times.

Soviets mourn Andropov

British duo skate record performance

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — While Soviet athletes mourned the death of their leader, the Winter Olympics went on Friday, with a graceful British couple dancing on ice in a record-setting performance and snow creating more chaos.

Following the announcement that Soviet President Yuri V. Andropov had died, the International Olympic Committee sent condolences to the Soviet sports minister, then declared that the Olympics should continue uninterrupted. A memorial service was held Friday night at the Olympic village.

Meanwhile, two Soviet cross-country skiers won the gold and silver medals in the men's 30-meter race, two East Germans won gold and silver in the women's 500-meter speed skating event, while the men's 500 went to a rising Soviet star.

THEY HAVE yet to win gold, but it was a British couple from Nottingham, England, who dazzled in the compulsory ice dance.

Jayne Torvill and Christopher Dean, a good bet to win gold, skated off with three perfect 6.0s in one segment of their compulsory program. They are the first couple ever to get perfect 6.0s in compulsory dance at an international event.

"They're thrilled to bits," Betty Callaway, their coach, said. "They should be. They are the first ever to get 6.0s."

Heavy snow again interrupted downhill events, and once again it meant a delay in Californian Bill Johnson's quest for a gold medal in the men's downhill.

The men's events on Mount Bjelasnica were postponed until Sunday, while the women's downhill on the much calmer Mount Jahorina, which was scheduled for Saturday, was postponed until Monday.

Karin Enke, who won the gold medal Thursday in the 1,500-meter speed skating, and said she might try for four gold medals here, had to settle for a silver in the 500-event Friday. Her teammate Christa Rothenburger, the world record holder, took the gold in 41.02 seconds, a new Olympic record.

Sergei Fokichev, 22, of the Soviet Union, won the gold medal in the men's 500 speed skating. Yoshihiro Kitazawa of Japan took the silver, while Gaetan Boucher of Canada won the bronze.

SOVIET NIKOLAJ Zimiatov, who has battled illness and injury since Lake Placid where he won three gold medals, took his fourth gold medal in the 30-kilometer cross-country race, just 27 seconds better than his teammate, Alexander Zavialov. Sweden's Gunde Svan won the bronze.

Bill Koch, 28, of Eugene, Ore., who suffered from an asthma-like condition last week, finished 21st but said he was satisfied.

"It's the effort that counts more than the gold medal" he said. "I feel like a winner."

Dan Simoneau, also of Eugene, finished 29th. Jim Gaslanes, of Brattleboro, Vt., was 36th and Kevin Brochman, of Stillwater, Minn., was 48th in the 72-man field.

In luge, the East Germans continued their strong hold on the top spots in women's competition after the second runs. Steffi Martin, a commercial clerk, held onto first place with a run of 41.863 seconds and topped the standings.

The East Germans also dominated the first two of four two-man bobsled runs.

Rooker, Davis shoot down Bobcats; Bulldogs win 79-65

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

Midland High returned to form Friday night as Chris Rooker scored 25 points to lead the Bulldogs to a 79-65 District 4-5A win over San Angelo's Bobcats.

Darrell Davis added 20 points and 10 rebounds to help MHS to its' 25th win of the 83-84 season against seven defeats. More importantly, MHS moved to 8-4 in the district, a game behind tied front-runners Odessa Permian and Abilene High. Permian disposed of Abilene Cooper, 65-54, while AHS survived a double-overtime scare by the red-hot Odessa Bronchos, 82-78.

Looming on the horizon is a Tuesday showdown between MHS and Abilene High, with the loser most likely to be left in the cold when post-season play begins in two weeks. AHS managed an 85-84 win over MHS here earlier this year, and the Eagles hold that victory as the difference now between second place and a playoff spot and third place and nothing.

MHS went to their money men in the crunch Friday, and Rooker especially came through after a disappointing season low of four points Tuesday. In that game, MHS was an upset victim at Odessa, a loss that set up the Bulldogs' current situation.

BUT NOT Friday. "I'm not the type to do this, but I told them yesterday they were going to win," said MHS coach Jack Stephenson. "I motivated them for this one. I told them they weren't going to lose, and that was it."

It became evident that that was it late in the third quarter. MHS had pretty much taken control of the ballgame, but Angelo (10-16, 5-7) made their run. The 'Cats came roaring back from a nine-point, 49-40 deficit late in the third to make it 50-48 MHS. Kenneth Johnson missed a bonus opportunity, but Fred Franklin tapped the miss back in. Rooker did virtually the same thing after Chris Herbert missed the back end of a bonus, and MHS took off.

Herbert opened the final frame with a bank shot, and MHS pressured Angelo into three quick turnovers. Herbert hit Johnson inside for an easy two, then Rooker went crazy, scoring like a machine gun. First came a great feed from Herbert, who tied a school season mark in assists (with 219 total), then Rooker took another dish from Franklin.

Rooker kept working, hitting a floating lane jumper and then taking a pass from Eric Brunson for another layup. MHS called time out. With 3:59 to play, the Bulldogs had erased everything positive San Angelo had done for itself to that point.

DAVIS WAS also quite spectacular on both ends of the floor. He was whistled for a technical foul after grabbing the rim on a missed dunk attempt, but that was probably the only thing he did wrong. Davis cleaned the boards with Rooker, and the duo had 10 and nine respectively.

"He's not the greatest player in the world," Stephenson said of Davis, "But nobody gives a better effort. When I was telling them yesterday they were going to win, Darrell had this look on his face. He was going, 'Yeah, that's right, let's go get 'em'. He's something."

And the 'Dogs will need everything when they visit AHS Tuesday.

IN JUNIOR varsity action, coach Rick Sample's Bullpups held on for 51-49 win over Angelo. Gil Brassard was the JV's only double-figure scorer with 10, but the 'Pups had all they needed to run their seasonal record to 16-13 on the year and 8-4 against district JVs.

Permian, AHS still on top of 4-5A

From Staff Reports

Odessa Permian and Abilene High retained their shares of first place Friday night, but not before getting a little spooked by District 4-5A foes.

The Eagles had the unenviable task of stopping the league's hottest team, the Odessa High Bronchos. OHS had been on a four-game roll entering the test, and gave Abilene a real ride before falling 82-78 in double overtime. AHS is now tied with Permian at 9-3 in the district. The Eagles are 20-9 overall.

Meanwhile, 18-8 Odessa Permian kept a tight grasp on the district's first place spot with a 65-54 win over Abilene Cooper.

MIDLAND LEE also didn't have a cakewalk, although their opponent was 2-26 Big Spring. The Steers are 0-12 within the district, but at least made Lee be careful in a 49-43 yawner. The Rebels still entertain slim playoff hopes with a 7-5 mark, but only shadows come slimmer.

Derek Westbrook's 18 points and Alvin Henry's 13 provided a large amount of the Rebel offense, but it was adequate. The Rebs next face Cooper before ending the year against Midland High.

Abilene has in-town games left against MHS and Cooper. Permian faces the lowly Steers before challenging Odessa High.

And there are still miles to go before 4-5A basketball coaches sleep.

Media helps create the Evil

It's strange that sports writers are so quick to deplore the evils of college recruiting. Yet, it's also the media that creates some of that evil, the Blue Chippers, the Top 25 in Texas, the Top 50 in the Nation. Who are they and where will they go?

For three weeks, the R-T sports desk has been hounded with phone calls over "Who's gonna get whom?" One of the calls came from Florida, of all places.

It isn't often Midland experiences the hazards of recruiting. As a rule, a prospect is hastily signed by a pursuing college, the incident is duly noted and celebrated and then filed for future reference, hopefully for that day when he blossoms into stardom.

LAST WEEK for Midland's Randy Stewart family, all the attention that had been bestowed on their strapping son Coy suddenly turned sour.

A Fort Worth writer called the Stewart household on an obvious story...why did Coy pick TCU over Arkansas when his father not only played for the Razorbacks' national championship team back in the 1960s but was a teammate of Ken Hatfield, who had just been hired away from Air Force Academy to restore respectability to the UA football program?

No matter how you look at it, it's definitely a story. I'm still curious as to the actual mechanics of Coy's choice. What was it that prompted him to buck family tradition? Despite the sound and fury, it was hinted at, perhaps, but never really stated.

Both Coy and TCU assistant Ray Sewalt felt they were quoted out of context as to the extent of the supposed rift created in the Stewart family by the choice of TCU.

Without trying to judge the merits of who was right or who said what, the resulting piece was typical of the Evils of College Recruiting saga that is proving so popular. It's something everybody's doing, seeking the different angle, and you've got to admit this definitely had an intriguing side to it.

It may win the guy a writing prize. In the process, it also caused the Stewarts misery, embarrassment and mental anguish. The story ran all over the state.

In fact, the story of a family tornasunder over the choice of a college is so good, it's hard to believe. This is ready-made stuff for the De-Emphasize Football mob.

Most of Midland, judging by the phone calls, was outraged by the intrusion of personal privacy, the washing of family linen in public.

I DON'T know about the Evils of College Recruiting, but it has always been the feeling here that signings were overdone. So much is made of them and so often so little comes of them.

As Ray Sewalt commented, "The proof of the pudding is in the junior year. You never really know. A 17-18-year-old kid, he really isn't all that sure what he wants at that age and it's an age when they are so susceptible to side-tracking outside influences—conflict with a coach, a girl friend, a struggle with the books....not to mention a career-shortening injury. It's all so overemphasized. The pressure is almost unfair."

IF MIDLAND continues as a state football power, it may have to give a course in dealing with the big city media. This is something that Midland never really had to contend with before. But then a Midland team had never been to the state finals before. Talking with a-story hungry writer from a metropolitan area, eager to outdo a rival, isn't like confiding in a friend like Terry Williamson, Bob Brundage, Ed Clements...

If there is any comfort in the trying time for the Stewarts, it has to be that their Midland neighbors aren't ready to accept everything they read as cold, hard fact. And for those who aren't really sure how much is fact and how much is fancy, the intrusion was still resented.

And, Coy, make sure the reporter is face-to-face next time you stick that tongue in cheek.

Miller leads Sarasota

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — Alice Miller conquered tricky winds Friday to fire a 4-under par 68 and take a two-stroke lead over Lauri Peterson after two rounds of the $175,000 LPGA Sarasota Classic.

Miller, who also shot a 68 to share the first-day lead with Australia's Jane Lock, pulled ahead with consecutive birdies on the eighth and ninth holes and finished the day with a 36-hole total of 8-under-par 136 on the 6,124-yard Bent Tree Golf and Racquet Club course.

Peterson, who like Miller played collegiately at Arizona State, carded a 69 for the second straight day for a 6-under, 138 total at the tournament's mid-point.

Lock, chasing her first tour victory, and Anne-Marie Palli, who carded a career-low 66, followed at 139, three strokes off Miller's pace.

Amy Alcott, the winner of this event in 1981, Chris Johnson and Jerilyn Britz were next at 140, while Sandra Spuzich and Cathy Morse were five shots back at 141.

"It's nice to be leading, but the thing I've got to do is make sure I keep my mind on those things I need to keep it on," said Miller, a one-time LPGA winner in her seventh year on the circuit.

"I'll be nervous the next two days," she added. "I always thought if you get into contention enough times you won't be, but that's not true."

Miller sank a 20-foot putt for a birdie on the first hole and after three-putting from 40 feet for a bogey on No. 4 she regained a share of the lead with a birdie on the par 3, 155-yard No. 5.

On No. 8 and No. 9 she dropped putts of 10 and two feet, respectively, to take over the top spot on the leaderboard. She followed with two more birdies on the back side, but said she struggled.

"The front nine was sort of textbook," Miller said. "I hit nine greens and made four birdies. The back nine was different.

"I was nervous all day, but I was playing well and got pumped up," she added. "I started thinking about how well I was doing. I don't think I got over confident, but I started to struggle."

Peterson's round included four birdies and one bogey, while Palli, who started the day five shots behind Miller and Lock, enjoyed a bogeyless round that featured six birdies.

Patty Sheehan, winner of last week's Elizabeth Arden Classic, Kathy Whitworth, Pat Bradley, JoAnne Carner and Nancy Lopez were among a group clustered at 2-under-par 142, but within six strokes of the lead.

The cut was established at 4-over-par 148 and 71 players in the original field of 147 survived to continue the chase for Sunday's first-place check of $26,250.

Hoyt signs one year Chisox deal

CHICAGO (AP) — Cy Young award winner LaMarr Hoyt signed a one-year contract Friday with the Chicago White Sox for $900,000 and is looking for better things and bigger contracts in the future.

"Basically this is just to get things settled for now before starting negotiations for a long-term contract," said Hoyt in a telephone interview from Sarasota, Fla., where he is already working out.

"I wasn't looking forward to arbitration," said Hoyt, who wasn't that far off in his negotiations with General Manager Roland Hemond. Hoyt was asking for $945,000 and the Sox offered $825,000 before they reached an agreement.

Hoyt posted a 24-10 record last season while winning his last 13 decisions and also hurling the only White Sox victory in the American League playoffs against Baltimore.

Harris nips Allison for pole slot

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Ferrel Harris nipped Davey Allison by .011-second to take the pole position Friday for the 21st annual Daytona ARCA 200 stock car race.

Harris, a veteran racer from Pikeville, Ky., and the defending champion in this race, won his third pole here by turning his fast qualifying lap on Daytona International Speedway's 2.5-mile, high-banked oval in 46.136 seconds. That translates to 195.075 mph.

Both were nearly 3 mph faster than any other qualifier.

The ARCA race will be run between pole qualifying for the Feb. 19 Daytona 500 Grand National stock car race and the Busch Clash, a rich 50-mile sprint for last year's pole winners.

Judge's ruling favors Sims, Lions

DETROIT (AP) — A federal judge ruled Friday that running back Billy Sims must play with the National Football League's Detroit Lions, rather than the Houston Gamblers of the United States Football League.

The ruling by U.S. District Judge Robert E. DeMascio came a week after final arguments in a lawsuit filed by Sims against the Gamblers.

"We're delighted Judge DeMascio has ruled in favor of Billy Sims and the Lions. We are especially happy for the local football fans," said Lions General Manager Russ Thomas.

"It is also heartening to see a legal ruling address itself to the responsibility of a player's agent in football. With Billy we are looking forward to an outstanding 1984 season."

However, Sims argued in the suit that his former agent and co-owner of the Gamblers, Jerry Argovitz, had misrepresented him in negotiations with the Lions and withheld information, prompting him to sign with Houston.

An unidentifed spokesman at the Gamblers' offices in Houston said Argovitz was in a meeting with club owners and not immediately available for comment.

In the decision DeMascio said: "The careless fashion in which Argovitz went about ascertaining the highest price for Sims' service convinces us of the wisdom of the maxim, 'No man can faithfully serve two masters,' whose interests are in conflict.

"There was significant financial differences between the USFL and the NFL not only in terms of the relative financial stability of the leagues, but also in terms of the fringe benefits available to Sims," DeMascio added in the 20-page opinion.

The judge also said, "Argovitz was not encouraging a bidding war that could have advantageous results for Sims."

Sims had signed a five-year, $3.5 million contract with the Gamblers on July 1 and an undated agreement with the USFL expansion team in November. But on Dec. 16, he signed a five-year pact worth $4.5 million with the Lions.

East Germans dominate two-man bob sled runs

Wolfgang Hoppe, a 25-year-old soldier, and his teammate Dietmar Schauerhammer, put their East German sled in first place after the first two runs Friday. The medals will be awarded after the final two runs Saturday.

NEWS OF Andropov's death swept through the Winter Olympic city about noon and immediately raised the question of whether the Games would be officially interrupted.

The only time an Olympics game has been formally halted or postponed was in Munich in 1972, when 11 Israeli athletes and coaches were killed in a terrorist attack. Competition was suspended for one day.

Under Yugoslav law, one day of mourning is held for the death of a prominent foreign leader. Yugoslav offials had not made a decision when to observe this day, but past practice has been to wait until the day of the funeral.

Several wore red and black ribbons on their team uniforms, but none had black arm bands — a usual sign of mourning in the Soviet Union.

Andropov was eulogized by Soviet hockey goalie Vladislav Tretiak, speed skater Natalia Petruseva, luge racer Sergei Danilin and Soviet sports committee chairman Marat Gramov.

The service was the first official sign of mourning among the Soviet athletes — some of whom were not informed about Andropov's death until after they completed afternoon competitions.

Asked after the service how the team was reacting to Andropov's death, a Soviet athlete replied, "What kind of reaction can the Soviet people have?"

The U.S. Olympic committee also sent its condolences to the Soviet delegation at the Winter Olympics. The letter was signed by William E. Simon, president of the committee, and F. Don Miller, secretary general.

PETER UEBERROTH, head of the Los Angeles Olympic Committee, said he did not believe the death of Andropov would affect Soviet participation in the Summer Games in Los Angeles.

Earlier this week, the senior Soviet member of the IOC praised the LAOOC for doing an "excellent job."

It was the strongest praise yet from the Soviet Union for the Summer Games.

Weather has been one reason for poor ratings on ABC's prime-time telecasts of Winter Olympic coverage, for which they paid $91.5 million, network officials said.

One event, the men's downhill, was delayed by weather and two losses by the U.S. hockey team has cut into their planned coverage.

Aguirre paces Mavs to victory

NBA

DALLAS (AP) — Mark Aguirre scored 20 of his game-high 30 points in the first half as the Dallas Mavericks built a 17-point lead on the way to a 115-96 win over the Kansas City Kings Friday night in National Basketball Association play.

The Kings, who trailed 67-50 late in the second quarter, pulled within eight points in the fourth quarter but reserve forward Dale Ellis hit two straight baskets to put Dallas up 94-82 with 9:53 to play.

The Kings, 20-29, got 29 points from forward Eddie Johnson as their road record dropped to 6-19. Rolando Blackman scored 24 points and Ellis had 17 for the Mavericks, 27-24, who raised their home mark to 19-5.

Celtics 114, Rockets 101

Kevin McHale scored 30 points and Robert Parish added 23 Friday night as the Boston Celtics beat the Houston Rockets 114-101.

Gerald Henderson contributed 18 points while Larry Bird added 17, while grabbing 14 rebounds and handing out 12 assists as the Celtics spoiled the first Boston Garden appearance of Houston Coach Bill Fitch since he quit as Boston coach last May.

Ralph Sampson scored six points in helping the Rockets to a 28-23 first period lead but then was overpowered by Parish, McHale and company. Sampson finished with just 12 points.

Cavaliers 95, SuperSonics 90

John Bagley and Cliff Robinson each scored 20 points to lead the Cleveland Cavaliers to their fifth victory in the last six games, a 95-90 decision over the Seattle SuperSonics.

Cleveland led 73-68 entering the final quarter. A pair of foul shots by Seattle's Scooter McCray pulled the Sonics within 79-78 with eight minutes remaining.

Cleveland's Lonnie Shelton then scored on an inside move and Bagley hit a jump shot to push the Cavaliers' lead back to five.

Pistons 134, Warriors 116

Bill Laimbeer scored 28 points and grabbed 16 rebounds Friday night to power the Detroit Pistons to a 134-116 triumph over the Golden State Warriors.

Golden State, which trailed by as many as 19 points early in the third quarter, pulled to within eight points of the Pistons with 2:03 remaining in the period.

But Detroit scored 27 of the next 39 points to build a 118-95 lead with 5:29 left in the game as Laimbeer capped the Pistons' rally with a tip-in of a missed Kelly Tripucka shot.

Bulls 100, 76ers 91

Orlando Woolidge scored 25 points and Quintin Dailey 23 as the Chicago Bulls pulled away in the fourth quarter to beat the Philadelphia 76ers 100-91.

David Greenwood collected 18 points and 17 rebounds while Ennis Whatley contributed 13 points and eight assists for the winners.

Julius Erving had 21 points and Andrew Toney, who missed his first eight shots, had 18 for the 76ers.

Bullets 96, Lakers 93

Frank Johnson slapped the ball away from Earvin "Magic" Johnson as Los Angeles tried to set up a game-winning shot and Rick Mahorn scored after the turnover for Washington with two seconds left, giving the Bullets defeated the Los Angeles Lakers 96-93.

The defeat snapped an eight-game winning streak for the Lakers, who overcame an early 19-point deficit and then blew a 10-point lead in the second half. Washington has won six of its last eight games, the last three in a row.

Spurs 132, Bucks 127

Fred Roberts' baseline jumper with 37 seconds to go put San Antonio ahead to stay in a 132-127 victory over the Milwaukee Bucks that snapped the Spurs' six-game losing streak.

Milwaukee had charged ahead 123-119 with 3:42 to play after a 13-4 run that included eight points by Junior Bridgeman.

Peete solves wind for Hawaiian Open lead

HONOLULU (AP) — Calvin Peete, golf's most accurate player, solved gusty winds for a 3-under-par 69 and took sole control of the second round lead Friday in the $500,000 Hawaiian Open, while troubled Tom Watson once again was a victim of the cut.

Peete, who has led the Tour in greens hit in regulation and drives in the fairway for three years in a row, completed two trips over the 6,881-yard Waialae Country Club course in 134, 10-under-par, one in front of the field and 14 ahead of Watson.

Watson, suddenly mired in the worst slump of his career, struggled to a 76 and finished 36 holes in 148, 4-over-par.

Watson, who started the 1984 campaign with a victory in the Match Play Championship, now has missed the cut in three consecutive starts, a career-first. The five-time British Open champion and five-time Player of the Year had missed two consecutive cuts on four occasions in a career that dates back to the fall of 1971. But never before had he missed three in a row.

"I'm just not doing anything very well," he said.

His problems this warm, windy day were varied in nature. He hit a drive out of bounds. He three-putted. He left one in a bunker.

Peete, too, had his problems with the gusty tradewinds and said, "It was sort of a scrambly type of round, kind of a struggle."

A SINGLE stroke off the pace were Fred Couples and Bernhard Langer, a West German who won five international titles in 1983 and is making his first start of the season.

Canada could end medalless skid

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — It has been 16 years since Canada won a hockey medal at the Winter Olympics, 32 since it took the gold. A victory against Finland could jeopardize those streaks.

"At the start a lot of people back home weren't optimistic about it," said Canadian forward Dave Donnelly. "We have a good shot at getting into the medal round, as good a chance as anybody."

In today's other games, the United States played Norway, Italy took on Poland, Austria met Czechoslovakia, the Soviet Union battled Yugoslavia and Sweden faced West Germany.

Canadian Coach Dave King rates his team as only the fourth best in Group B, talent-wise.

But in the five-game preliminary phase, the Canadians started the day tied for first place with Czechoslovakia and Finland, all with 2-0 records. The United States, Norway and Austria were 0-2 and have virtually no chance of reaching the medal round. The top two teams in each group qualify for that.

In Group A, the Soviet Union, Sweden and West Germany began today's action with 2-0 marks, while Poland, Italy and Yugoslavia were 0-2.

CANADA'S 4-2 victory against the United States Tuesday should boost their confidence against the Finns. Today's winner would have an inside track with powerful Czechoslovakia for the two Group B berths.

"We needed that victory against the U.S. It gave us kind of a kick in the pants. We needed that for our confidence," said assistant coach Jean Perron. "The coaching staff feels that the U.S. hockey club is a better club than the Finns. That's the way we approached the tournament but right now the Finns are rolling."

Finland was subpar in beating Austria 4-3, then clobbered Norway 16-2.

"We were surprised they scored that many goals because we really didn't think they were that strong of an offensive club," Donnelly said. "It just shows that we have to play that much stronger of a game."

The Canadians' success has been as surprising as the Americans' failure. The team representing the nation which won the hockey gold medal in 1980 is playing for pride and an extremely slim chance at a medal. It also hopes to avert the first winless Olympics for any American hockey squad.

THE UNITED States must win its remaining games against Norway, Austria and Finland, then hope Canada, Czechoslovakia and Finland suffer a couple of upsets each.

"It's not over yet, and even if it was over we've still got games to play. It's no fun, I'll tell you that," said U.S. coach Lou Vairo. "I'm just trying to keep the guys from allowing disappointment to turn into depression. There's absolutely nothing for us to be ashamed of."

The United States should beat Norway today and Austria Monday before facing Finland Wednesday in what figures to be a tossup.

"We're not out of it yet. We need help from a lot of people but if we win our next three, things could turn out that we'd be in the medal round," said David A. Jensen, who scored both goals against Canada. "We're still playing for ourselves and we're representing the U.S. and that's enough to motivate us."

Vairo planned to switch from Marc Behrend, the goalie in the first two games, to Bob Mason for the meeting with Norway.

The Soviet Union, which beat Poland 12-1 and Italy 5-1, is the class of Group A. The Sweden-West Germany winner would be in the driver's seat for the second medal-round berth from that group.

Leading 4-0 after the first period Thursday, the Soviets were mediocre the rest of the way and were stymied by outstanding goaltending.

"I thought we played very well," said Italian Coach Alberto Darin. "The Soviets are a very strong team that seems to be able to turn it on and off."

TO WIN the gold medal it captured in 1964, 1968, 1972 and 1976, the Soviet Union almost certainly will have to beat Czechoslovakia and can't afford an off day against the most impressive team so far in the Olympics.

"They're better than any other team we've faced," Jensen said. "I don't think there is much of any weakness on the Czech team. Them against the Russians will be a very good game. I give them a real good chance. Whoever gets the bounces in that game will win."

Jets-Nordiques postponed

WINNIPEG, Manitoba (AP) — Friday night's National Hockey League game between Quebec and the Winnipeg Jets was postponed because fog prevented the Nordiques from arriving at the arena on time.

The game was rescheduled for Sunday afternoon, March 11.

The Nordiques were supposed to arrive in Winnipeg on Thursday night but fog prevented their plane from landing and they had to spend the night in Calgary, Alberta. The Nordiques tried to fly in Friday but the fog forced their plane to go to Regina, Saskaskatchewan. They tried again later and wound up in Saskatoon.

The Nordiques are scheduled to play in Toronto on Saturday night.

Living, dead heroes honored for their acts

By KATHY WILHELM
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH — A concrete finisher who was hospitalized for a week after rescuing a wheelchair-bound woman and a baby from a burning house was among 15 people named to receive Carnegie Medals for heroism.

"To be frank with you, I was scared to death," said Melvin Torrence, 35, of Mineral Springs, N.C. "I was a tool, an instrument being used. I'm glad God could use me at that time."

Torrence had to enter the smoke-filled, one-story house twice on March 16, 1982, to rescue Natasha M. Capers, then 27, and Ryan S. Bailey, then 1, among the several children being cared for by his sister-in-law. Miss Capers, his brother's foster daughter, has since died of pneumonia, Torrence said.

The 15 Carnegie heroes, from 11 states and Canada, or their survivors each received $2,500 Thursday in addition to the medals. Three of the heroes died in their attempts to save others from fire, drowning or a moving vehicle.

"I didn't know if I would live or die when I went in to get Ryan, but I knew I had to go." Torrence said. "The way that baby was crying, I couldn't have lived with myself if I hadn't gone back for him."

All three people were treated for smoke inhalation and minor injuries.

Of the heroes who survived, most seriously injured was Ralph A. Newman, 68, a high school English teacher from Milwaukee, Wis.

Girl's donation earns her right to feed deer, elk

MONTROSE, Colo. (AP) — A 5-year-old girl who donated her life savings, a jar containing $17.12 in coins, to help hungry deer and elk got to ride on a haywagon and feed some of the animals as a reward for her generosity.

Jill Brickson, a kindergarten pupil at Johnson Elementary School, walked into the state Division of Wildlife office in Montrose with the jar last month. Accompanied by her mother, Jill said she wanted the money to be used to feed the hungry animals.

Office staff members were so surprised they forgot to ask Jill's name before she left.

When she was located a week later, wildlife officers invited her to go with them to feed deer and elk at Billy Creek State Wildlife Area, 15 miles south of Montrose.

So this week, Jill rode on the haywagon and kicked hay to hundreds of elk and tossed feed pellets to hungry deer.

"We felt we kind of neglected her since she was one of the very first donors," said Bob Rosette, regional manager for the division's southwest region, "so we decided to do something special for her."

Jill, the daughter of Edie and Randy Brickson, had saved the coins over a long period of time, but said she wasn't saving for anything in particular.

She said she had visited Billy Creek on other occasions to see the deer and elk and wanted to help them.

Is it better to marry or remain single?

Well over a third of all American adults at the present time are single. If the trend continues as expected, one half of the population will be comprised of single adults by the end of this decade.

The Many Faces of Happiness

Happy day!
Money in the mailbox!
But does it have to be money? How about a letter from someone who loves you? Or four tickets to the next World Series? Or an invitation from good friends to dinner?
And surely, good things don't have to come by mail. They could come in kind words from a friend. Or in your boss saying, "I'm giving you a raise." Or as an "A" grade on a carefully-researched term paper.
But what is the "best" happiness? Where can we find it?
The best happiness is a letter from God, saying that His Son is your invitation to His Kingdom.
Where can you find this letter? In the Bible and in church this Sunday and every Sunday.

Documentary explores Jimmy Swaggart's ministry

RELIGION

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK — Television evangelist Jimmy Swaggart, whose background, methods and style rarely have been detailed in the media, is given a searching look by a new documentary being aired next week.

But Swaggart doesn't want to talk about it. At his multimillion-dollar headquarters at Baton Rouge, La., a spokesman said the only word from him was "no comment."

Asked for just simple facts about Swaggart's operations, the spokesman, David Van Gorder, declined to provide any information, even such innocuous bits as Swaggart's age.

He is 48, and, according to the new documentary, a high school dropout with no formal theological training, but who has become "one of the most popular and powerful" TV preachers in the world.

Several TV stations, in Boston and Atlanta, have dropped his show, refusing to sell him time, charging distorted swipes at Roman Catholicism and Judaism. But he's still seen and heard on about 550 outlets nationwide.

The hour-long "Frontline" documentary, "Give me that big-time religion," is being presented by the Public Broadcasting Service Monday evening in most areas.

It says Swaggart has the biggest audience of any electronic evangelist, with more than 2 million watching him weekly according to the independent rating service, Arbitron. Counting audiences in 32 other countries, his staff says his annual audience totals 500 million.

A "preacher, entertainer, businessman," Swaggart is described. The documentary samples his preaching, explores his huge World Ministry Center outside Baton Rouge and interviews him and admiring supporters.

"We live modestly," he says, adding that he "could be a billionaire" if he sought it, but "everything goes into the ministry. The family is not enriching itself."

The salary of him and his wife, who serves as treasurer of his enterprise, is put at "more than $100,000," relatively small in comparison to the organization's cited annual budget of more than $75 million.

"They're under severe economic pressure," says sociologist William Martin of Rice University, a one-time minister himself, a graduate of Harvard Divinity School and commentator in the documentary.

Swaggart is shown repeatedly pleading for contributions. "We desperately need help," he says. "Many can write a check for $1,000 or more. We need it. We need a miracle. Make out your check and then double it."

Unlike evangelist Billy Graham and some other TV evangelists, Swaggart's organization does not belong to the Evangelical Council for Financial Accountability, which requires various standards, such as regular, audited financial reports, the documentary says.

Swaggart last spring dedicated the first $5 million building of his planned $22 million, computerized headquarters complex on a 100-acre site, including a production center, marketing warehouse and planned worship auditorium.

About 400 employes work there, handling the 10,000 pieces of mail weekly, counting the incoming contributions, putting out a monthly magazine, The Evangelist, with 800,000 circulation, filling orders for books and albums of gospel music recorded by Swaggart himself. He sings and plays the piano.

"I've sold more long-playing albums than anybody on earth," he says.

Swaggart, a cousin of rock-country singers Jerry Lee Lewis and Mickey Gilley, is a minister of the Assemblies of God, a Pentecostal denomination. Born in Ferriday, La., he began preaching as a traveling evangelist at age 17.

"More and more Catholics are coming to Jesus," he says in one of his services shown in the documentary. "They're tired of superstition, tired of false doctrine. They're being saved by Jesus."

Catholic Bishop Stanley Ott of Baton Rouge last summer met with Swaggart to try to reduce misunderstanding, but said afterward that Swaggart continues to hold views and make statements that misrepresent Catholicism. Ott said he still hoped for progress in resolving the problem.

One of the Atlanta stations that dropped Swaggart is owned by the Christian Broadcasting Network of the temperate, Yale-educated TV evangelist Pat Robertson.

In scenes of Swaggart's services, including hand-clapping, swaying crowds, he makes the typical evangelical appeal for decisions, but with highly emotional overtones, sometimes tearfully.

"You're on the toboggan slide to hell," he declares. "If you let him, Jesus will come in. He'll save you from sin. He'll cleanse you and make you whole." In the audience, people sob as the lines move forward to commit themselves.

Comments one follower: "One thing I like about him is that he preaches the Bible and tells the truth."

Although Swaggart on some past occasions has been willing to answer reporter's questions, he apparently has become chagrined at the news media. In a documentary scene, he calls the news media "enemies trying to destroy the country." He says:

"The news media is going to have to answer to God Almighty for the deceit and evil they are promoting."

St. Luke's Methodist Church celebrating Heritage Sunday

Members of St. Luke's United Methodist Church are holding Heritage Sunday celebrations this Sunday.

The celebrations are centered around the theme of reclaiming their pasts as United Methodists. The hymnody, liturgy and eucharist will all be in the spirit of the Wesleyan tradition.

The church family will attend the Heritage Sunday Supper in the church's fellowship hall at 6 p.m. Special guest will be the new members of St. Luke's.

Supper will be followed by a Wesleyan worship service in the sanctuary beginning at 7 p.m. This service will combine early Methodist hymns, prayers and responses, those used within the Methodist Church during the past 200 years.

The Rev. Jarrell Sharp, pastor, will be preaching at the three worship services for Heritage Sunday. Service times will be 8:30 and 10:50 a.m. and 7 p.m. He will be assisted by Bert Bostic, minister of program and music, and the Rev. Kenneth James, associate pastor.

Special music for Heritage Sunday will be presented by the church's chapel and chancel choirs. Accompanists will be Debby Vester, Janeen Atkins and Mona Ruth Dickson. A duet, "I See the Morning Breaking," will be sung by Alison and Bruce Peeler. The two will be accompanied by Ann Parker on flute.

Funds sought for WSNet

DALLAS (AP) — United Methodist bishops in Texas and New Mexico will direct a two-year, $190,000 campaign to pay the debts of a regional satellite television netowrk that has been stalled by a lack of funds.

Methodist officials decided this week to examine how the Wesleyan Satellite Network, called WSNet, can survive with a more limited mission than the 24-hour-a-day cable programming planned when it was formed in 1982, network president Robert Roberston said Thursday.

Finances for WSNet, precarious for some time, became desperate last month when the non-profit Texas Methodist Foundation declared it could not finance indefintely the division's budget deficts.

Robertson said the network will be forced to rely more on local churches that already are involved in television, Robertson said.

"If it flies, it'll be from the bottom up, not the top down," he said. "We need to go to the local churches and supply a service for them they cannot provide for themselves," namely putting the churches' programs on a regional network, he said.

WSNet officials had hoped to pay part of its $190,000 debt to the foundation with $100,000 to be raised in a campaign last year, but the effort raised less than $25,000.

A task force is scheduled to report on the options for the network when its parent body, the Media Division of the United Methodist Communications Council, meets again in March.

The network and the council are operated by Methodists in Texas and New Mexico.

Bush peddling Reagan's policies

WASHINGTON — As a traveling salesman, Vice President George Bush is in a class by himself. He has logged 452,022 miles on the road — the equivalent of 18 times around the globe — peddling President Reagan's policies and collecting millions of dollars for Republican coffers.

He has spent 1,151 hours on airplanes — that's 48 full days — traveling to 48 states, three U.S. possessions and 52 foreign countries.

Time for a rest?

Not a chance. Not in a presidential election year when his boss is running for a second term and Bush remains the No. 2 man on the team.

Reagan's political strategists are counting on Bush to serve as the chief stand-in for the president around the country until Reagan begins campaigning hard following the Republican convention in August.

"The best way for an incumbent president to run for president, particularly one who's unopposed for the nomination, is to be a good president," said White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III.

"At the same time, you have to have a presence in order to build spirit, in order to build organization, to increase voter registration, to get your troops fired up," Baker added. "If the president is not available to do a lot of that, the vice president is the very best surrogate to accomplish it."

He went to Europe twice in 1983 to consult on arms control negotiations. His motorcade was pelted with rocks and paint-filled balloons by anti-nuclear protesters in West Germany. In Beirut, he saw the horror of the bomb-wracked Marine camp where 241 serivcemen were killed. In El Salvador, he demanded that right-wing death squads be reined in.

Back home, he was booed by blacks for defending the administration's civil rights record. Twice he cast the tie-breaking vote in the Senate for production of nerve gas. His three-year total in fund raising climbed to $35.45 million, plus about $5 million from direct mail appeals.

He's also regarded as a superb campaigner.

"There is no doubt he will be the star surrogate of the campaign," said John Buckley, a campaign spokesman. He estimated Bush will make appearances in at least 35 states.

"He's as good a spokesman for President Reagan as exists," Buckley said.

In Baker's view, Bush is "very, very good.... He's vigorous. He knows the issues. He's able to cover a lot of ground in a short period of time. He knows politics and he knows campaigning."

What Bush does best — and does over and over again — is praise the Reagan record.

Delivering a pep talk to campaign workers 14 hours after Reagan's re-election announcement, the vice president called Reagan "an incredible president" and said his "skills in leading are simply unexcelled. You know, he knows where he wants to take the country."

The vice president will carry the president's torch in mid-February to Iowa and New Hampshire, where Democrats are stealing all the headlines battling among themselves for their party's nomination.

After that, Bush will make appearances in each primary election state, shortly before or after each election, to remind Americans that the Democrats aren't the only show in town.

"I'm going to be doing a fair amount of traveling," says Bush. "I expect I'll have a very active role in taking the message out across this country. And I hope so. I like it, am enthusiastic about it, believe in it and want to do it."

After the political conventions, Bush says, "I'll probably be doing incessant campaigning."

Edward Rollins, director of Reagan's campaign, said, "I don't anticipate the president being out campaigning extensively in the next six months.... I would anticipate the major campaign efforts as far as travel would be carried on by the vice president."

Egypt seeking more tourists

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Egypt, once a cultural playground for the wealthy, is trying to change its image by offering not only its ancient monuments but beaches and recreational facilities to tourists from all over the world.

But, whereas drawing visitors to the Giza pyramids, Abu Simbel temples and King Tut's tomb was easy, the Egyptian government is facing problems competing with other, better established and well known seaside resorts.

"Egypt no longer attracts only the rich elite of the world. Now there is mass tourism, all kinds of people, not just cultural tourism — more and more young people," Mohammed Nassim, chairman of the Egyptian General Authority for the Promotion of Tourism, told The Associated Press.

"Egypt has enormous capabilities. It offers beaches, desert, recreational sports, plus the ancient Egyptian monuments," he said. "We are now working on providing these services."

Egypt has a mild climate year round and extensive though largely undeveloped beaches on the Red and Mediterranean seas. But officials admit the beach areas often lack sufficient fresh water.

Fossil collection gets rare addition

LICKDALE, Pa. (AP) — Jim Gerhart may have a first on his hands, but he downplays that possibility, saying it is probably just something he has never seen before. But there is always that slight chance of a new discovery.

Marine fossils have made the formation an international gathering place for scientists, according to Gerhart, a hydrologist with the Water Resources Division of the U.S. Geological Survey in Harrisburg.

Gerhart has been collecting "rocks" at Martinsburg for years. His collection, however, is special since it contains some of the best preserved fossil specimens of marine life that existed millions of years ago when the Swatara Gap area was covered by water.

His most recent find could add to the list of rare genera to which the site can lay claim. Gerhart's newest acquisition is a specimen about one-quarter-inch in diameter whose ends almost touch to form a complete circle.

"I have no idea what it is," he says. "Unknown forms of marine life have been discovered here before. And I'm sure there are more specimens to be found. Mine could be something new, or it could be a more perfect version of a previous discovery. That would be nice, too."

The formation has yielded some of the oldest life forms known, he says. Conditions in the area 400 million years ago made it very conducive for an abundance of marine plants and animals, and for the subsequent preservation of those life forms' remains after some became extinct.

At that time, the Appalachian Mountain region was covered by a vast sea which stretched to the northwest and northeast from a coastline several miles southeast of the formation, Gerhart says.

According to Gerhart, the combination of fine sediments, calm waters and rapid burial has allowed for the preservation of "articulated fossils," whose skeletal parts are still connected. Many of the more delicate features of the organisms such as compound eyes and spines remain.

A fossil is an external mold of an organism's hard parts, such as shells or skeletons. As the sediment covering the remains hardened and became rock, the shells and skeletal materials eventually dissolved, leaving them a bright orange color that makes the fossils easier to find, he says.

"There are a lot of shell species here, similar to the clams and oysters you see today," Gerhart says. "One of the most common finds at Martinsburg is the trilobite, which became extinct about 200 million years ago. They were very abundant back then, and the formaton has yielded some detailed trilobite fossils."

It is the starfish, however, that Gerhart finds most interesting.

He says the formation is one of the few ideal sites in the nation for starfish fossils. "On a good day, with some luck, you can find some good ones — if you know what to look for," he says.

It was at Martinsburg that the late Dr. John Price, once curator of Franklin and Marshall College's North Museum, found the "petrastor pricei," an extremely rare variety of starfish, he said.

The site is also known for its vertical beds. According to geological theory, the Appalachian chain was formed by the gradual union of two continents. That fusion, says Gerhart, buckled the horizontal layers of sediment and rock, slowly pushing them into a vertical position to form folds which many geologists come to Martinsburg to study.

Collecting has been prohibited for the most part along the upper slope of the formation because of the danger of debris falling to the southbound lanes of Interstate 81, which bisects the formation, Gerhart says. The lower slope, beneath the underpass, is still open but is heavily strewn with debris.

"When you think about it, these fossils have been through a lot," he says. "I find it difficult to comprehend their age at times, and have to keep telling myself this happened 4 million centuries ago.

"I'm the first person ever to see these specimens. That's absolutely incredible."

Big doesn't mean better

At 50 pounds, the pet lion is outgrowing his high-rise apartment and his litter box, too.

That poses problems for his owners, Jane Brinson and Jennifer Price, who want to find a new home for the 23-week-old prince of beasts.

Damu, who has the potential of reaching 300 pounds, was acquired "on a whim" from a couple moving out of town. He now is for sale. Price: a negotiable $900, Ms. Brinson said.

Damu still has his claws and all his teeth, and has been using a sofa for a scratch pad and he produced a leak in a water bed.

But Ms. Brinson says a couple of pounds of hamburger and some well-aged steaks have kept his appetite satisfied.

Assassinated politican's brother emerges as major political figure

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Five months after his brother was assassinated at the Manila International Airport, Agapito "Butz" Aquino is emerging as a major opposition figure in the Philippines.

A former plastics manufacturer and onetime actor in a cough syrup commercial, Aquino, 44, wasn't widely known before Benigno Aquino's Aug. 21 killing, and has little political experience.

No other opposition leader has so far appeared likely to fill Benigno Aquino's role as President Ferdinand E. Marcos' chief rival. Marcos, 66, has indicated he will run for re-election in the 1987 election, and some local observers are projecting Agapito Aquino as an opposition candidate. But Aquino says he is not ready to run for office.

Benigno Aquino had been jailed for eight years by Marcos, who was then ruling under martial law. Martial law was lifted in 1981, and last summer Aquino ended three years of voluntary exile in the United States, vowing to help opposition efforts against Marcos. But the 50-year-old former senator was gunned down at the Manila airport on arrival. His killing has not been solved.

Agapito Aquino's picture has appeared on magazine covers. A tabloid published by the opposition-oriented Mr. And Ms. magazine dealing almost exclusively with the aftermath of the assassination featured Aquino declaring, "If Ninoy could only see me now."

He has acknowledged that some of the affection for his older brother has been transferred to him.

An article in the tabloid quoted him as saying he has three major assets: "First, I look like Ninoy. Second, I sound like Ninoy. And third, I don't have a first lady," a reference to first lady Imelda Marcos, a target of much opposition criticism.

On Sunday, a dramatic march ended with Aquino and a circle of 20 followers gathering at the airport tarmac where his brother fell. Aquino read a pledge to carry on his brother's fight.

Police had backed down and allowed the marchers through a blockade after Aquino insisted on taking at least 1,000 people to the irport and a small delegation to the tarmac itself.

A week earlier, he won a similar confrontation with riot police, negotiating with three generals to let him lead a march through Manila. It grew into the biggest opposition showing since Aquino's funeral with hundreds of thousands lining streets on joining the march.

Aquino, father of three, has been separated from his wife, but she has joined some of his rallies. Aquino and other members of his family, including the late senator's mother, son and widow, have been giving speeches at rallies and civic clubs all over the islands.

The family members bring more enthusiastic reaction than the dozens of former senators, congressmen or constitutional convention delegates among the opposition who have failed to regain power during Marcos' 16-year rule.

Agapito "Butz" Aquino (center wearing a Muslim headdress), brother of assassinated leader Benigno Aquino, speaks in this 1983 file photo before 3,000 anti-government demonstrators including Moslems at the financial district of Manila. Five months after his brother was assassinated at the Manila International Airport, Agapito is emerging as a major Philippine opposition figure.

Last month, Aquino organized a conference of quarreling opposition groups, with the result that a 15-member council of leaders was formed.

A lawyer, who asked not to be identified, said there has been malicious speculation that Marcos might be allowing Aquino victories in his confrontations with military blockades to build up the image of an inexperienced man he thinks he can handle.

During the most recent showdown between Aquino supporters and riot police, as Aquino spoke to the crowd from atop a small truck, an opposition lawyer turned to a police colonel and said, "I hope he doesn't become another Bobby Kennedy."

His reference to the late American senator who died from an assassin's bullet after the assassination of his brother, President John F. Kennedy, brought no reaction from the officer.

Militant activists go after British fishermen

LONDON (AP) — Britain's militant animal rights activists have taken on fox hunters, hare chasers, pheasant shooters, badger baiters, turkey breeders, fur traders, seal cullers, Cambridge scientists and chicken farmers.

Now they're going after sport fishermen.

Trooping to the aid of the trout, the pike, the bream and all their speechless cousins is the Hunt Saboteurs' Association, a clandestine army that has been waging bush war against hunters of fox and hare for two decades.

Fishing, they say, is among the cruelest of blood sports, Izaak Walton and his idyllic 1653 classic "The Compleat Angler" notwithstanding.

On the other side are Britain's 3.5 million registered anglers, who — in the words of a headline in Angling Times — have vowed, "We Shall Not Be Moved."

Hunt Saboteurs, in the latest issue of its magazine, Howl, advised its 3,500 members on how to post false health warnings in the woods, drop sonic devices in the water and feed fish so they lose interest in bait.

The British love of animals is legendary. The Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, established in 1824, is the oldest such organization in the world.

Since the 1920s, scores of animal rights groups have operated throughout the country under anti-blood sport, animal protection and anti-vivisection banners.

Masked raiders have attacked leading research laboratories, setting free dogs, cats, monkeys and rabbits.

At nearly all fox hunts, saboteurs lurk in the woods, blowing horns and beating bushes.

Extremists have even sent letter bombs, including one in 1982 that burst into flames at 10 Downing St., the prime minister's residence.

Magazine found libelous in restaurant review; No damages set

HOUSTON (AP) — A Harris County jury found a magazine was malicious in its review of a Houston restaurant but puzzled attorneys by setting no monetary damages.

Jurors in the libel suit found Thursday that a Houston City magazine review of La Colombe D'Or, a posh Houston restaurant, caused financial harm to the restauarant and its owner in joking about a waiter's mispronunciation.

A June 1981 review in Houston City quoted a waiter as saying "mary jane," a slang term for marijuana, was used in preparing some of the restaurant's dishes.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Sunday, February 12, 1984

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: President Abraham Lincoln, naturalist-author Charles Darwin, WW II leader Gen. Omar Bradley, and quick-witted Alice Roosevelt Longworth were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: actor Lorne Greene, basketball commentator Bill Russell, director Franco Zeffirelli and baseball commentator Joe Garagiola. Those unhappy in their present jobs should look around. The possibilities are endless. Short trips prove more successful than long ones. Count on a financial situation to show steady improvement. You get a chance to correct a past mistake.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Cooperative ventures are the most fun. Let those near and dear to you know how much you care. A support group is as near as the phone. Do not brood in silence.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Things go pretty much the way you want now. Gain the support of good friends over a relaxing dinner. Children respond in a positive way when you give them more freedom.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Assistance comes from an unlikely source. Accept a last-minute invitation. You get a chance to mix with influential people. Use persuasion. Overreacting to a child's misbehavior will make things worse.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your enthusiasm for a special pursuit runs high. Get together with those who share your interests. Romance begins to look quite promising. Take advantage of a quiet moment to ask a question.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A good friend gives your confidence a big boost. Strangers play a role in a social decision. A health worry is unfounded. Common sense helps you avoid a costly error or accident.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Do what you can to upgrade your living quarters. A new love gives you fresh insights regarding the past. Spend the evening with family members who are not always nearby.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Family arguments subside once you discuss a problem openly. No one can be right all the time. A good day to review your finances and write letters. A trip will work out wonderfully.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A Sunday sermon hits home, suggesting the perfect solution to a personal problem. Forget any social commitments and spend a quiet day with loved ones. You need time to collect your thoughts.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Member of opposite sex has attracted your attention. The next move is yours. Do not reveal too much too soon. Offer your services to someone who needs them.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your compassionate nature draws others to you. Try not to become too involved in their problems. A new lifestyle does wonders for your ego. Entertaining for business purposes proves highly successful.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your intuitive powers are particularly sharp today. Stay away from troublesome people. A receptive attitude makes you an excellent companion. Show a loved one just how you feel. Set a date!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You are offered the perfect opportunity to put your theories into practice. Have confidence. Others may get the wrong idea if you act too humble. Loved one shares a delightful surprise.

Rock 'n' roll reposes in bayside city

By LISA LEVITT

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Rock 'n' roll heaven is a modest set of rooms behind an unassuming door marked No. 14. And while music fans may be dying to get in, the man with the key can tell you that won't be necessary.

"You can come here. I can come here. All it takes is interest, a specific idea of what you want — and an appointment," says Paul Grushkin, the bearded general manager of the Bay Area Music Archives, a rock 'n' roll repository that may be the only one of its kind in the world.

Country and western music is hoarded in Nashville, Tenn., Broadway show tunes are squirreled away in New York and rock art is sold in Los Angeles.

But only San Francisco has master tapes from the final week of the Fillmore West, 60 hours of rock impresario Bill Graham talking about his life in music and a piece of a sheet from the Palo Alto motel bed where one of the Beatles slept during the group's last visit to the United States.

"THAT'S the magic of a place like this — it has a chance to have poster art, stage decorations, books, records, tapes," says Grushkin, who built the archives five years ago around his own album and book collection through BAM (Bay Area Music) magazine publisher Dennis Erokan, who founded the archives and serves as its president.

Since then, it has swelled to 25,000 albums ranging from beebop to new wave, 5,000 tapes and thousands of books, posters and bits of memorabilia.

Every Wednesday night, an hour-long nostalgia show on local radio is produced by the archives. And each year, the cream of the Bay area music industry gathers for the Bammies, a sold-out regional music awards ceremony that raises thousands to benefit the library. Last year's show raised $40,000 and brought together such musical names as Huey Lewis and the News, the Greg Kihn Band and Tommy Tutone.

"I KNOW of four, maybe five attempts at opening rock archives," says Grushkin, ignoring the constantly ringing phone on his desk. "They all failed within a year, and I'll tell you why.

"It's as if you need a community like San Francisco to nurture a library for a period of time until everybody begins to believe in it."

When he finally picks up the phone, it might be a local television station asking for reference books on the Beatles for an upcoming special, the family of a now-dead rocker who wants his collection preserved or a high school kid who wants to hear the music that will make her understand what grooving through the summer of '68 really meant.

"This fellow calls me up about two years ago," Grushkin recalled. "He says, 'I'm now a consulting engineer, I have three kids. For many, many years I've cut my hair, I lead a very straight life. But there was a time when music was it for me, and I collected all the books I could on the subject.'"

"This is what I mean," says Grushkin. "Nothing has been thrown away. It all exists in somebody's hands — from Country Joe's first record to a Quicksilver kite."

The repository is built on several major collections, including that of KSAN, a former rock station that went country, and the collections of late local newspaper music critics John L. Wasserman and Conrad Silvert.

"It seems like every day, we get another donation," Grushkin says. "I keep thinking it's not possible for it all to exist, and yet it does. And I think it's because people have a genuine reverence for the musical scene."

He opens a file drawer and suddenly seems more like a kid at Christmas than a keeper of rock history.

"I'm going to show you some tre-e-a-a-sures," he says, pulling out a poster for a James Brown concert that proclaims: "A show for the entire family! Children under 12, 99 cents."

Owner of ritzy boutique suing Zsa Zsa

Zsa Zsa Gabor

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The owner of a ritzy boutique is suing entertainer Zsa Zsa Gabor, claiming she hasn't paid for such decorative items as a "pig platter" and a "monkey bowl" she bought two years ago.

The suit filed Thursday said Miss Gabor shopped at Begatelle Interiors on Palm Beach's fashionable Worth Avenue for items to decorate a home she had bought in the area.

Bagatelle Interiors owner Virginia Milholland contends Miss Gabor never paid the $5,335 bill for the 50 items she took home.

The suit says some of the items Miss Gabor chose were: "one pig platter... one monkey bowl...one frog...one black and white dog...one swan...one yellow calico cat...one frog table...one small ceramic monkey...(and) two bird lamps."

Miss Gabor denied the charges.

"I think they're trying to blackmail me because I'm so famous," she told The Miami Herald in a story published Friday.

"We paid it. We have the returned check," she said.

LONDON (AP) — Former British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan observed his 90th birthday Friday and Buckingham Palace announced that Queen Elizabeth II has made him an earl.

H. MacMillan

He is the first person in 21 years to have been made an earl, a hereditary title that is a traditional honor for retired British prime ministers.

Macmillan retired as Prime Minister in 1963 after holding the office since 1957.

The earldom makes him a peer of the realm, entitling him to a seat in the House of Lords, which means he could return to parliamentary life after nearly 21 years away from politics.

This is thought unlikely, however, at least on a regular basis, as the former Conservative prime minister rarely appears in public. Aides say his health is good but his eyesight is poor.

The earldom will pass on his death to his son Maurice, 63, a House of Commons member in the ruling Conservative Party. Macmillan's earldom entitles his son to the title of viscount.

As prime minister, Macmillan presided over a period of rising hopes and prosperity as Britain shed the last remnants of post-war austerity and shortages. He was affectionately dubbed "Supermac" and "unflappable."

NEW YORK (AP) — She says she is extremely nearsighted, but that handicap didn't prevent 18-year-old Paulina Porizkova from making the cover of Sports Illustrated's homage to bathing beauties.

Each year, the magazine comes out with a swimsuit issue that is snapped up by winter-weary fans. This year the magazine took top models to the Caribbean islands of Aruba, Bonaire and Curacao to pose in the water or on sunny beaches.

During the trip Miss Porizkova, who says she sees about "like a bat," demonstrated that being accustomed to poor vision has its good points. On one shooting day before sunup, she was able to apply her makeup while riding in a darkened van.

"I knew where the circles under my eyes were, and I did my mascara when we stopped for a traffic light," she said.

Other models had more adventurous incidents.

Carol Alt was posing on a beach when she noticed three inflatable boats "circling like moths." The fleet turned out to be three Dutch marines who promptly staged an invasion.

When three models posed with a French frigate in the background in Bonaire harbor, a sailor jumped fully clothed into the water to join the models. The magazine said he was "apparently feeling no pain."

Barge crewmen 'get ill' from being stranded

KEOKUK, Iowa (AP) — Crewmen on the towboat Phyllis are getting grouchy — they call it "getting ill" — after being stranded on the ice-clogged Mississippi River for two months. And they're not alone.

About 25 barge-hauling towboats have been halted on the mighty river since early December, when the U.S. Coast Guard ordered Lock 19 closed because of heavy ice buildup.

"Yeah, we're getting very short-tempered. But we call it 'getting ill,'" said J.P. Sherill, 39, the captain of the Phyllis. "This boat gets real small when you're not moving."

The Phyllis, a 140-foot, 4,200-horsepower towboat, is one of an estimated 25 stranded towboats hauling some 500 corn- and soybean-laden barges. They have been sitting in the 46-mile "pool" between Lock 18 near Burlington and Lock 19 near Keokuk since mid-December, said assistant lockmaster Ray English, who estimates there are 150 men aboard the vessels.

He said the barge companies were "pushing their luck," trying to get through the lock system in mid-December, but added that they would have made it if winter hadn't come so early.

"Everybody tried to get in a late last run and Mother Nature sort of beat us to the punch," said Joseph Janos of Troy, Mo., relief captain on the Ann Blessey. "As soon as we got stuck, we knew it would be a long winter."

Janos is one of the lucky ones because his employer, Jefferson Barracks Marine Service of St. Louis, is one of the few that lets its crews go ashore.

"One good thing about being stuck is we've gotten to see Keokuk. Usually, we just get to see the towns from the river," Janos said.

Janos and engineer Scott Knapp, of Carbondale, Ill., spend their days helping break up ice near the lock, doing maintenance on the towboat and checking their barges. At night, they watch television, play cards and read.

"I've never played so much solitaire in my life," Janos said, explaining that a certain lethargy has set in. "You know you've got a lot to do, but you also know that everything can wait until tomorrow."

The crew of the Phyllis is not allowed ashore. Sherrill said he's kept his men busy overhauling one of the towboat's engines and painting, but he's running out of chores for them.

"Now that we've run out of things to paint, we're getting pretty perturbed and pretty bored," he said. "We're just sitting around now, lying to each other. We tell stories and dream a lot."

Sherrill said the crew gets to see a newspaper about once a week when supplies are delivered from a Keokuk store.

The only entertainment is limited to two channels on the television and a country music radio station.

Since the Phyllis is now operating with a skeleton crew, Sherill has been given the additional duty of cooking for the five men aboard.

"I'd rather be moving than sitting here cooking. As soon as she (the ice) can be busted through, we're going to bust through," Sherrill said.

Rumors race from towboat to towboat daily about when the lock will be clear enough to pass through, but the date depends on the weather.

The weather has been warming these past few weeks, and Janos speculated that he might be out in eight or 10 days. Sherrill said he's heard the lock will open Feb. 20.

But for the men who have spent weeks on the boat, the really important date is the day their 30-day hitches end.

"All I'm looking forward to is the 18th, so I can go home," said engineer Larry Williams of Savannah, Tenn.

Tabloid Variety includes glossary of show biz slang

NEW YORK (AP) — Variety, the showbiz weekly that lays claim to bringing "soap opera," "payola" and "disk jockey" into the lexicon, bows in its latest frame with some boffo info on its peculiar brand of English.

For the first time in its 78-year history, the Gotham-based tabloid this week included a glossary of the snappy slang, oddball expressions and abbreviations that fill its pages.

In Variety parlance, a Western film is an "oater," a martial arts film is a "chopsocky," and a musical about a show business celebrity is "a celeb bio tuner."

An indoor theater is a "hardtop," a drive-in theater is an "ozoner," a publicist is a "praiser," and record companies are "diskeries." Tickets are "ducats," small children are "moppets," a favorite film is a "fave."

Such jargon makes for an "inimitable journalistic style (that is) truly unique, in the literal sense of the word," said the newspaper, an entertainment industry staple with a worldwide circulation of about 50,000.

The new mini-dictionary in Wednesday's edition is designed to help the growing number of non-American readers understand Variety's showbiz-flavored Americanisms, according to Frank Meyer, managing editor. He said he plans to update it three or four times a year.

Varietese "is really your basic showbiz talk," Meyer said in an interview. "It's the kind of shorthand that's been used in showbiz for a long time. Some of them we invented; others we picked up from the industry."

In Variety's pages, a director may be a "helmer," a female director becomes a "femme" director, and the chief executive is the "topper." Home video casettes especially for children are "kideo" or "kidvid."

"Gotham" is New York City, a film "bows" when it opens, a period of time is a "frame" or an "inning," "b.o." means cash taken in at the box office, "info" is information, and to quit one's job is "to ankle."

There are some no-no words, too. Money is never called "money;" it's always "coin" or "bucks." Movies are never called movies or flicks. Instead, they are "films," "pictures," "reels," "pix" or "pics."

Variety frowns on calling anyone a star. But a film in which, say, Dudley Moore is the lead actor might be called a "Dudley Moore starrer."

The latest trend at Variety is to relegate the slang to headlines, opting for standard English in the body of its stories, according to Peter Besas, who compiled the glossary.

"It has been the headlines, with their abbreviations and acronyms, more than the meat of the articles themselves that have occasionally proved incomprehensible to some readers," Besas writes.

In those headlines, Variety's creative energy emerges.

A story about New York City night clubs spending more on advertising to increase business carried this headline: "Gotham Niteries Spending Bucks to Grab Crowds."

The Super Bowl kept weekend movie-goers away from the box office one weekend last month, but "Silkwood" still managed to do well.

Variety ran that story under this headline:

"Bowl Flushes B.O. Into Pic Downturn; 'Silkwood' Glowing."

Midlander pledges for professorship

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The University of Texas System Board of Regents accepted a pledge of $25,000 Friday from a Midland man to establish a professorship in computer science at The University of Texas.

The pledge was from William B. Blakemore II, of Midland, a trustee of the West Foundation, which donated $37,500 and pledged an equal amount Friday to establish the unnamed professorship.

The professorship will be named later, a spokesman for the regents said.

Blakemore is also vice president and trustee of the J.M. West Texas Corp. He is a member of the executive committee of the UT Chancellor's Council, the UT Permian Basin Development Board and the UT Austin McDonald Observatory.

The regents were meeting in Houston Friday.

Formerly called the Scout Exposition, the Scout-O-Rama provides an opportunity to learn about all aspects of Scouting. Packs, troops and posts will create displays on craft making, games, cooking, camping, law enforcement and more.

Tickets are on sale for $1 and may be purchased from any uniformed Cub, Scout or Explorer. Proceeds from the show will directly benefit area Scouting through such activities as summer camp, day camp, community service projects and much more.

Memorial endowment will honor Allen Trobaugh

The United Way of Midland approved a memorial endowment honoring Allen K. Trobaugh through the Midland Community Trust this week.

"The memorial has been established to honor the memory of 'Moose' Trobaugh's love for his community; to sustain the spirit of his dedication; to continue the tradition of his good works and to ensure he will be remembered by generations yet to come," the resolution stated.

During each of the many years of Trobaugh's volunteer service in the United Way of Midland, he was in the forefront of the special gifts division of the annual campaign. In 1979, he served as president of the board of directors, becoming chairman of the agency relations task force of the long range planning committee in 1980. In 1981, he was named to the president's advisory committee.

Income from the Trobaugh Memorial Endowment will be distributed annually to community agencies serving Midland and its vicinity. All community agencies will be eligible to apply.

The Midland Community Trust was founded in 1983 by the United Way of Midland to provide the community with a charitable foundation for deferred gifts (such as trusts and annuities), legacies, bequests, memorials, endowments and advised funds.

Chairman of the Midland Community Trust executive committee is George W. Bush. William C. Morrow is chairman of the distribution committee.

Assets of the Midland Community Trust at the end of 1983 were $322,133. The trust makes grants to charitable organizations providing service in the arts, culture, education, research and the human services. It is not limited to United Way agencies.

Persons interested in making a contribution to the Allen K. Trobaugh Memorial Endowment may send gifts to the Midland Community Trust, P.O. Box 10424, Midland, Texas 79702, or contact Candace H. Stoltz at 682-4704.

Contributions are tax deductible and will be acknowledged to the family.

Enrollment at UTPB reaches all-time high

Enrollment at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin reached an all-time high as 1,978 students enrolled for courses this spring.

UTPB Registar Robert Warmann said the new figure is about 7 percent over last spring's figure of 1,954 and slightly above last fall's record. About 47 percent of the students are undergraduates and 53 percent are graduates.

A new graduate program in geology and new undergraduate programs in marketing, finance and land management are bringing in new students, Warmann said.

On the graduate level, the trend has been toward technical fields — particularly business, accounting and geology. "Undergraduates have been attracted to accounting, management and engineering. The liberal arts also remain popular — particularly psychology and criminal justice," he said.

Warmann noted the student body ranges in age from 18 to 70 and is 53.5 percent female and 46.5 percent male.
