That, in a nut-shell, is the experience of J. L. Dean, civil engineer of the Humble Oil and Refining company, who appeared in Lubbock today with an eight-foot boat lashed to the side of his touring car.

According to Mr. Dean, the boat has never been christened but he promised to hold christening ceremonies if someone will furnish the champagne. QUEEN MARIE ACTUALLY HERE

OFFICIAL WELCOMES GALORE, BUT POPULACE CHARY OF CHEERS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18 (AP)—Queen Marie of Romania and her royal party arrived in the capitol late today in a special train.

Secretary and Mrs. Kellogg were at the station to extend welcome in behalf of the American government.

Upon leaving the train her majesty passed thru a double line of marines to the Presidential suite. Her greetings were exchanged formally and the song band played the Rumanian National anthem and the Star Spangled Banner.

Cavalry Escort

A war strength squadron of cavalry, the highest of military honors, formed the escort to the Rumanian Legation. The route of the royal party led through the capitol grounds, down Pennsylvania Avenue and thru Executive Avenue at the east of the White House.

No cheer greeted queen Marie at New York when she arrived earlier in the day as she was handed into her automobile by Grover Wheeler, chairman of Mayor Walker's reception committee, but ripples of murmured exclamations came from the crowd gathered at the Battery.

Cheering At Last

As the entourage moved into City Hall plaza, the first volume of cheering was heard. All traffic was stopped for many surrounding blocks.

In City Hall, decorated with flags and bunting, Queen Marie, Princess Elena and Prince Nicholas were taken into the Governor's room, where Mayor Walker gave the city's welcome.

Queen Marie seated herself upon a temporary throne especially prepared for her. The Star Spangled Banner was sung.

As the royal party entered from the City Hall, the crowd outside, found its full voice and offered an ovation. The reception at City Hall had been preceded by two others, both on the Leveaue. The first was the official welcome to the United States given by assistant secretary of State J. Butler Wright, in the name of President Coolidge. The second was that of approximately 200 men and women reporters, who were granted the first and possibly the last—public interview the queen will permit.

Eighteen Thousand More Acres Leased By Humble Co. in Lubbock County for Future Oil and Gas Development

The records of the office of county clerk yesterday showed an addition of 18,149 acres to the list of Lubbock county land held under oil and gas lease by the Humble Oil company, of Houston. Forty-three separate leases, ranging from 30 to 4,000 acres were included in the lease filings, the land being from four to twenty miles distant, northwest and northeast of Lubbock.

As of the majority of the leases filed here by the company, Clyde Vincent completed the contracts and then assigned the leases to the company.

70,000 Leases

This now makes the total number of acres held under lease here by the company to more than 40,000 acres, a greater part of which have been filed during the past three months. With a number of individuals holding small contracts and with the 181,449 acres completed the company, the total number of leases in the county is now approximately 70,000 acres.

Ten Year Term

Each of the leases yesterday specified that unless operations for drilling were not commenced on said land on or before one year from date, the lease shall terminate as to both parties unless on or before such anniversary date lease shall pay rentals on said land. Ten years is allowed to the exploitation of the oil, gas and minerals in 18 of the leases, while 25 of them only allowed exploitation for oil and gas.

The leases yesterday were taken in the checkerboard plan frequently used by large oil companies, and cover several miles of territory, tracts being taken intermittently.

A number of the farms included in the leases of yesterday belong to old timers who have seen this section pass from a large ranching territory to an agricultural center.

FORMER GOVERNOR SAYS DOESN'T KNOW LATEST ACCUSER

WINDER CHARGE IS THAT HE WAS ASKED $7,500 FOR ROAD JOB

Politics, Cries Jim

SENATORIAL HIGH WAY PROBE GETS GOING WITH A VIM

AUSTIN, Texas, Oct. 18 (AP)—Stating that he does not even know J. D. Winder, of Belleville, who testified before the house investigating committee Monday that Ferguson asked him $7,500 for a road contract, former Governor James E. Ferguson issued a stout statement late Monday denying the charge. "This is an infamous, cheap, political falsehood," the former governor said. "I do not know J. D. Winder and would not if I should meet him in the road," the statement said. "I never talked to him about a contract in my life and any statement by him or by anybody else that I ever demanded or received the payment of any sum for obtaining any contract with the highway department is just a half-faced political falsehood made for political purposes, and everybody can just as understand. Any statement that I ever demanded money in any kind of bills or received money in any kind of bills is equally false, and I denounce Winder and any of those who seek to circulate his statement as a falsifier, and I only wish I could give the public in my own way a proper description of the man who makes this charge."

Smith Also Denies

Eugene Smith, chairman of the highway commission, issued a statement denying the testimony of W. G. Hill, public accountant of Austin, that any present was given him. Hill had testified that he had given to Smith, when Smith was secretary to the commission, $250 in connection with payment of warrant for $4,000 for accounting work done on county depositories of the automobile funds. Smith also stated that the highway commission did not keep more than 10 per cent of the maintenance work done. This was in reference to the testimony of J. D. Winder, contractor.

Ferguson and Smith issued the statements after afternoon papers appeared on the street.

SAYS NACOGDOCHES MAN TOOK MONEY FOR ROAD CONTRACT

AUSTIN, Texas, Oct. 18 (AP)—Charge that Oscar Slay, state highway supervisor for Nacogdoches county, accepted money from the Panola Construction Company, county maintenance contractors, was made before the executive investigating commissions Monday in the testimony of Wyman Williams of Nacogdoches.

Winder testified that Slay is still in the employ of the highway department.

The investigation, which was authorized September 15 at the fall session of the 39th legislature, focused the first day on the highway department. Prosecution of alleged irregular highway contracts largely was responsible for the dramatic gubernatorial nomination of Attorney General Dan Moody.

Winder's Story

Declaring he feared his testimony would result in the highway department "breaking" high on an Austin county road project, J. D. Winder, Belleville contractor said that in April, 1925, James E. Ferguson, former governor, husband and chief adviser of Governor Miriam A. Ferguson, offered to obtain for him maintenance contracts in five counties for 10 per cent of the contract price.

Winder had bid $75,118 and he said Ferguson told him he could get the contract by paying him $7,500 in five and ten dollar bills. Winder said he told Ferguson he never had stolen anything, and did not intend to start. Only Ferguson and he were in the office of Frank Lanham, at that time chairman of the highway commission, when Ferguson's offer was made, Winder said.

W. G. Hill, public accountant of Austin, testified he paid $250 to Eugene Smith, at the time secretary and now chairman of the commission, to collect $2,000 for auditing automobile registration funds.

"Any witnesses who know about state affairs within scope of the house resolution ordering the inquiry is welcome to appear before the commission, chairman Lee Satterwhite told The Associated Press. "The commission pleads with all honest and patriotic citizens to come forward with any information that benefits Texas."

"Society? I'll Take Job," Blueblood Author Says

Isabel Cotton Smith

By HORTENSE SAUNDERS
NEA Service Writer

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—Temperament and active women need to have lots of work to do, and if their home and family doesn't use up all their excess energy—and usually it doesn't—they should have jobs of some kind. So says Isabel Cotton Smith, herself one of the restless class. Though she belongs to one of the old aristocratic families of New York, and knows 400 by their first names, she knows her way around in the business world. She's in Dun's as well as the Social Register.

"As a child," she recalls, "I was always unhappy because I never had enough to do. I couldn't possibly keep myself occupied, and I frequently got into trouble. As I grew older I was unable to take social life seriously, and it was not until I needed the money and went to work that I really became happy because I had an camp her activity."

Was Fired Twice
Mrs. Smith has made a great adventure of her business career and allowed no conventional notions of what a first family lady cannot do to camp her activity.

"My first venture was that of saleswoman in an exclusive New York shop. At the end of two weeks my employer asked me not to return, and as a final gesture, he said I was impossible—I believe he went so far as to imply that I was an idiot. I stayed two months on my next job but it was not a period of unalloyed joy to me or the firm.

So I went into business. I rented a house in Washington, got in touch with a seamstress that I knew had opened my own dressmaking establishment—managed it for seven years, until I left Washington, and by that time, being a business woman was in my blood.

So when we moved to Texas during the war, where there was nothing for me to do, I started writing a cook book. Believe it or not, I was nine years writing that volume which has recently come out as "The Blue Book of Cookery."

"All my love for cooking went into it. During that time I experimented with some two thousand recipes, besides what came up in the regular course of the day's eating routine. And I never again want to see eggs and mixing bowl looking menacingly at me."

When she returned to New York after the war, Mrs. Smith plunged into new business activities. She became a professional marketer, and the business, she admits, was a flop. Buying vegetables and meats for one hundred women was just a hundred times as buying for one.

From that on she operated an employment bureau, then she went into real estate on a large scale and is one of the most successful women in the business.

"I didn't go into business for fun," she admits. If I hadn't needed a little money to keep the gas from being turned off, I don't suppose I should have made quite the effort I did, at the start.

She Prefers Work
"I've made the most ridiculous mistakes and tried the most outlandish schemes. Having had no business training of any kind, no disciplinary college course, or no capital, some of the time, I've not been able to see the road very plainly—but after various digressions in the fields and highways I have been able to limp back to it.

"Society? Well, ambition and money will always create what we call society. Today, many of the old families are the new poor. Who can tell who will be in power tomorrow? But business goes on, and the business woman, who has the job she likes and that brings in the income she needs—well, she should worry about society."

The Woman's Day

The average college girl is 23 before she has her first baby, we are told. This in startling contrast to the average non-college girl's age of 21 when she has her first baby. Deans of coeds explain that after preparing herself for a "career," most college girls are reluctant to enter matrimony until "the career bug" has run its course.

The alumnae secretary of a large mid-western university says that less than 5 per cent of girl graduates of the past 10 years have married within a year of graduation. Most of them go two, three and four years. Many of course, but not the majority, never marry at all.

Few statistics released in recent years carry so much food for thought as these. Dozens of old social questions blend herein. The old social question of a mother's youth. Both men of medicine and social science once said that a young mother was best for a child, and that many years between a mother's and child's ages were to be desired.

Today we do not swallow this old edict at one gulp, but stop to ask whether a mother matured by "career" may not mean more to a child born to her at 26 than a mother married at 20 or 30, unacquainted with the working world, constantly comparing its joys with her own lot to the disadvantage of the latter, and wishing that "I was out of it all."

"If I had married at 22, the minute I stepped out of school," a married friend said to me not long ago "I would have made a miserable wife and mother. I would have been one of these hackneyed story book creatures who think their lot is drab and stifling compared to life 'outside the home.' I would have grown bitter at Bill for keeping me from my art work."

Now that I'm 28 and have tasted

your child will thrive on

Cooks light white and flaky!

this "career business" to the full, I know its lacks and faults, and have some basis of comparison for home life. I may be 29 before I am a mother, but I know I'll be a better mother than the whining dissatisfied one I would have been at 23."

There's another question, too, in these interesting figures. It means the natural supremacy in numbers of the younger and untrained woman's child. With this non-college mother's five year start on her college sister, she will probably raise four children to the other's one. Some folks prate about the college girl falling down on the job, not contributing fully to the race, etc. The question is, of course, whether or not her output will be one of quality rather than quantity, or vice versa. Maybe so, maybe not!

What are girls doing in these "career" years, is a pertinent query answered by a questionnaire submitted to girls of this same mid-western college. Teaching comes first, then liberal art work in some form, social work, library, home economics, business medicine and law.

Not wasted years in wifehood and motherhood preparation, surely, though many men in picking wives still insist that "the less they know, the better wives they make," and who ignore the capable "career woman" for a weak-pated gold digger?

MEMBERS OF TENTH DISTRICT
WILL BE GUESTS OF CITY
OCTOBER 24-26

BEAUMONT, Texas, Oct. 18.—One of the most phenomenal conventions in history will be held in Beaumont, October 24, 25 and 26, when the Beaumont Advertising Club, composed of forty members, twenty of which are active, will give the Tenth District Advertising Clubs the greatest convention ever held in the district or under any auspices.

All doubt as to the success of the convention was removed when it was reported at a general meeting of committee yesterday that more money had been raised among the citizenship of the city to care for the convention than had been asked for.

Notwithstanding the fact that the Beaumont Ad Club has a small membership, it is determined to pull one of the biggest conventions ever known in the history of the organization. The programs have been printed and broadcasted to every part of the state, and sufficient funds have been provided to give the delegates one of the greatest entertainments they have ever had in the history of the organization.

Sunday morning will be consumed with the registration of guests and a trip down the Neches River and the Beaumont Ship Channel. The boat "Gale" will carry the passengers and all the docks have been re-finished, and a special provision has been made for all necessary entertainment. The business program of the convention is very full, and has listed some of the most representative advertising men in America.

It is noted that one of the outstanding features of the program of the first day will be the address of Bob Monney, of the B. & O. Cash Store at Temple, Oklahoma, entitled, "How We Conduct a Metropolitan Store in a Small Town."

Another outstanding figure on the program is L. A. Rogers, Secretary of the International Association of Display Men of Chicago, who will speak on the subject, "The Value of Display to Retailers and to the Community." These lectures of Mr. Rogers show conclusively that the show windows of any city are the "eyes" of the community, and it is his assertion that you can judge the character of a town or city by the nature of its show windows.

With reference to local talent, mention should be made of A. M. Homenet, Retail Manager of Sears, Roebuck & Co., of Dallas, who will speak to the convention on the subject, "What Are the Essential Differences Between Retail Store Merchandising and Direct Mail Merchandising?"

Twenty-five other important numbers are on the program, with as many celebrities of the advertising world assigned to the various subjects. All in all, it is the belief of the advertising men who have seen the program that it is one of the most all-embracing and one of the most comprehensive that has ever been undertaken by any convention of the Tenth District.

Peculiar will this convention be in that a small advertising club with a limited membership is attempting one of the largest conventions ever held. The secret is that the citizenship of the city has contributed largely to the expense account, and is engaging wholeheartedly in the effort to entertain this convention.

"FIRE" BUT IT WAS AN INTERNAL ONE

INMUN LEADS FIREMEN TO ARREST DRUNKEN INTRUDER

When the third "burr up" call was phoned in to police headquarters late Monday afternoon, Sergeant J. T. Inmun forgot all about being a desk man and answered the call in person. A drunk man and he was thoroughly aroused, said Mr. Inmun, made an attempt to enter a Lubbock home in the 2200 block on Main, he made a fatal error. Of course he did not know what he was doing, and the woman who owned the home didn't know what he might do.

For some the desk officer was unable to locate a policeman. He took the second call and tried again to find an officer, but to no avail. Then came the third and last call. Mr. Inmun left his desk, and in company with one of the fire boys drove to the scene of excitement. The man was off the porch when they arrived, but he had the woman thoroughly excited.

Carpenters working nearby aided the officer and fireman in loading the "drunk" into a car. He was carried to police headquarters and lodged in jail. At a late hour tonight he had not regained consciousness.

TECH INVITED TO STUDENT FEDERATION MEET

An invitation was received yesterday by the president of the student association to attend the Second Annual Congress of the Student Federation of America, which meets at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Michigan, December 2, 3 and 4. The Tech is allowed two representatives as it is a co-educational institution. It is not known yet whether a representative will be sent from here or not matters pertaining to the financing of the trip will have to be arranged.

The Student Federation, according to the opinion of the officials and members of the organization, purports to appraise the value of charges made against modern colleges and universities, such as: American education has been called superficial and standardized, under-graduate have been charged with lack of vision and maturity, over-organization of extra-curricular activities, the commercialism of athletics, and the false values of undergraduate life. The federation has taken up the task of vitalizing American education.

TECH SILO BEING FILLED

Tech students are participating in a new branch of work this week, that of filling the silo in the dairy barn. The silo is being filled with sorghum which will be used in the dairy during the winter. Seven or eight boys are working daily tromping the product as it is put into the bin. One hundred and forty tons of the feed will be placed in the bin, all of it having been raised on the Tech farm by Tech students.

APPLICATIONS COMING IN TO PI GAMMA MU

Since the announcement of an organization of a chapter of Pi Gamma Mu, national honor social science society, numerous applications have been handed in by the students for membership in the organization. According to the regulations of the order, a student to become eligible for membership must have as much as three courses credit in any social science with an average grade of over 85. A number of students in the Tech are eligible for the society and will likely become members at the next meeting, provided they are passed upon by the committee in charge of the organization.

Madame Metzenauer, a Metropolitan Opera star, who is scheduled to sing here at the Tech artist course was heard Sunday night by a number of Lubbock people over the radio, broadcasting from New York City. According to those who heard her, the program was one of the most highly entertaining and artistic ever heard by local radio fans.

The people will be assured of a real treat when she appears here.

M. J. LOWERY RETURNS FROM RIO JANEIRO, S. A.

H. J. Lowrey, who returned to Rio Janeiro, South America, with his daughter, Mrs. Virgil Kershner in July, arrived back in Lubbock Sunday.

Mr. Lowrey and his daughter sailed from New Orleans and landed first in Port Arthur, Texas. From there they sailed 1,000 miles east, going through the Florida straits; turned southeast another 1,000 miles and then sailed southwest to Pernambuco, their first stop. From there they followed the coast, making several stops, finally landing at Santos, where they boarded a train for Rio Janeiro, Mrs. Kershner's home. They were 40 days making the trip and were delayed a few days in the Gulf of Mexico waiting for the storm that hit Miami to pass. Mr. Lowrey spent 35 days on the boat returning to New Orleans, this time sailing along the South American coast and coming through the Caribbean sea.

PEP SQUAD TO FEATURE AT FT. WORTH

The Tech pep squad will be one of the features of the Fort Worth trip, according to plans laid by members of that organization. With the arrival of the uniforms of the organization in the near future, everything will be set for the trip. Daily drill periods have been set aside for the squad and the boys and girls will go through drills which will be staged on the field between halves of the games. A double formation is planned, that of a "T". The squad will also work in harmony with the band, which will be one of the greatest units of the trip.

MULLICAN OPENS FALL TERM COURT

GRAND JURY IS EMpaneled; HEAVY DOCKET IS SET

The appearance docket for the regular fall term of district court was called here Monday afternoon by District Judge Clark M. Mullican, following empanelling of the grand jury and delivery of the Judge's charges to the body Monday morning, and the court took up its regular routine, facing one of the heaviest dockets in its history.

Judge Mullican, in his charge to the grand jury, admonished the official investigating of all law violations in the county, telling them that they are duly authorized officers of the court, and are empowered to call anyone before them for questioning that is deemed necessary for proper functioning of the law machinery.

The judge, in defining the difference between a felony and a misdemeanor, urged the jurors to not quickly away their time and the time of the public with trivial matters that are of no importance, and rapped what he said was an increase of drinking, especially among the younger set of the city, notably college and high school boys. Such cases are hard to handle, he said, but guilty ones should be punished, and he urged that after investigation of these cases, the principals be turned over to county or city officials for attention.

This week of the court will be consumed in trial of appearance and non-appearance cases and the jury civil docket will be called next week. The last two weeks of the term will be given over to trial of criminal cases, of which there are many that have had no attention in recent months.

The grand jury for the term is composed of the following: with Hubert L. Allen as foreman; R. H. Martin, E. R. Green, C. S. Inman, T. L. Holt, J. T. Overby, Sam E. Starnes, Bob Crump, E. R. Davis, Will Murray, Ray Grisham and Ward Crim.

WILL THE PEOPLE WAKE UP?

We believe there is really no difference now of opinion any longer, as to what remedy for the low price of cotton is, but just who, how and when this remedy is to be applied seems to be the main thing. Are the powers to be going to wake up in time to save the situation, or shall they dilly dally along and wait till the farmers have been forced to sell their cotton at the give-away figures, or leave it in the fields to rot. The main trouble seems to be that one fellow is waiting for the other. No one seems to feel it his duty to take the lead.

The Cotton States Protective League is making an appeal to the cotton growers to hold their cotton. That is well and good, but the farmer must also have some source to go to secure money to pay the pickers, the ginners and take care of some of his pressing obligations. There must be some concerted action in this matter. Every county should have an organization of some kind to take charge of the cotton and handle the money that should be brought into the country from the organization that propose to finance this crop this year. Meetings have been held throughout the South to devise means for this, and bankers and big business have agreed that they can furnish several millions of dollars to take care of this cotton, but there will be no relief come from this unless the money and the farmer can have contact somehow. Why not our bankers get in touch with the concerns that propose to furnish the money and handle the cotton for the farmers. This will start the ball to rolling, and will bring thousands of dollars into the community that otherwise would be lost to the farmers, and naturally to the business men and the banks. The Protection League has sent the Avalanche the following letter, which we shall reproduce to let the readers of this paper see what these fellows think of the plan of holding and controlling the acreage for another year:

"The banks all over the South, backed by the Federal Reserve, now unlimited finances available to prevent forced sale of cotton, which has always compelled low prices.

We urge and emphatically advise all owners to cease selling entirely until the price bid is at least 20 cents, middling basis, drive down a stake to go to and refuse to sell for less. The price will begin to advance immediately after the movement is under way with a determination to not sell for less than 20 cents.

The banks will refuse money to over-produce cotton, but still finance growing grain and feed. This will really and automatically reduce the acreage planted to cotton in 1927, which will assure a smaller crop and make holding a sound and profitable investment.

We now have every facility to get a fair price by having a say in it. It is in our hands, so we must stop selling and be sure of a profit by holding. Cotton may be property of the mortgaged and helpless farmer, but it is the asset of all, the amount of the asset depends upon the price, hence all should assist in keeping it off the market to advance the price.

Many copies of this letter is being sent to the press, it should reach every town. Some one in every town seeing it should call a few together and appoint a committee to urge every farmer to hold his cotton for at least 20c. He should also see every man in town who can buy one or more bales of cotton and get all who will to say how many they will buy and hold for a minimum of 20 cents. The cotton to be bought from those who will not hold and bought at the street price to be held for at least 20 cents. Cities should be called upon and all interested parties urged to buy as many bales as possible, placing their orders with their customers or the committee of the various towns. Call it the "buy-a-bale" movement, the Cotton States Protective League movement or what not, take the cotton off the market for a premium price of 20 cents.

The cotton states protective League is not a co-operative marketing association, but a co-operative price-making one, educational in practice. It believes the price of cotton needs attention first, then marketing. It is composed of men who have had experience in all movements of the past to advance the price of cotton, in which they value of eight crops they participated in brought more than four billion dollars more than they would have without it.

Holding, whether of bought cotton or by the grower, should be correlated so that its strength would be fully exerted in advancing the price.

"A MAN IS KNOWN BY THE COMPANY HE KEEPS"

We cannot always choose our company. We must be judged by the things we choose, not by the things that are forced upon us. No man chooses his features, but he does choose his expression and the expression on his face is a fairer index of his character than his features. A man must be judged by many things than the company he keeps. A man is known by the way he conducts himself when he is away from his home town, or off on a vacation. We are what we are when we do as we please. A man is judged, not by the clothes he wears but by the way he wears them, and the care he gives them. Cheap clothing well brushed and carefully pressed, makes a better impression than expensive clothing carelessly worn. Carelessness is expensive, too. A man is known by the things he laughs at. If the foul, the lewd, the vulgar and the indecent excite him to mirth it is because he exults in filth. We laugh at the things we think are funny. No clean-minded man ever sees anything funny in nastiness. One may judge by the phonograph records in the collection at home. The wax of the record is helpless. It must reproduce whatever is impressed upon it. But we do not have to buy the thing we do not approve of. A man is judged by the respect that he shows to inferiors, dependents, the poor and the powerless. The gentleman sees something sacred in every human soul. No accident of class or caste ever blinds him to the dignity of humanity. Only the fop enjoys the despicable art of condescending.

"BEAUTY IS BUT SKIN DEEP"

To be exact, beauty goes as deep as the heart. Hair dye, lip sticks, cosmetics and rouge can produce style, but only character can create beauty. The most captivating beauty is not that which is put on but that which comes out. The Red Cross nurse in her plain uniform and wearing her insignia of service is the best dressed woman in the world. No mannikin or artist's model with expensive toilet and extravagant make-up, can compare with her as she goes with sympathetic heart and healing in her hands. The most beautiful woman in France is Madame Curie with her calloused hands and lined face for hers was a charm of character and idealism. No beauty of sophistication can compare with the beauty of innocence, and the beauty of holiness knows no successful imitator. The beauty which is skin deep is a counterfeit. The beauty that does not fade is that which is made secure by character. The rouged and peeled face of the "smart set" is not to be compared with the sweet smiling face of mother in the midst of the "home set." Beauty is a divine gift only given to those who have a mind in tune with God.

DOING WORK WELL

There is satisfaction in doing one's work well. It always pays. The editor of this paper read a story in the afternoon paper of this city yesterday of a news boy, who had won the distinction of having delivered papers on his route for a period of more than sixty days, without a single complaint from any of his customers. There must be a great deal of satisfaction in this for this young man, and we know that the customers appreciate the good service rendered. This boy no doubt has taken special care to do his work well. He no doubt was careful and thoughtful, and had an interest in his work. It does not take a real smart fellow to know that this young man will succeed whatever he undertakes, for he has the necessary elements in his make up to succeed. Doing ones work well is not only a satisfaction to the one who does it, but it is something that is greatly appreciated by all who are served by him.

RELIGION SURE TO LIVE

A very distinguished college president has recently assured his students that religion will live. It is rather striking that he thought it necessary to make such a statement.

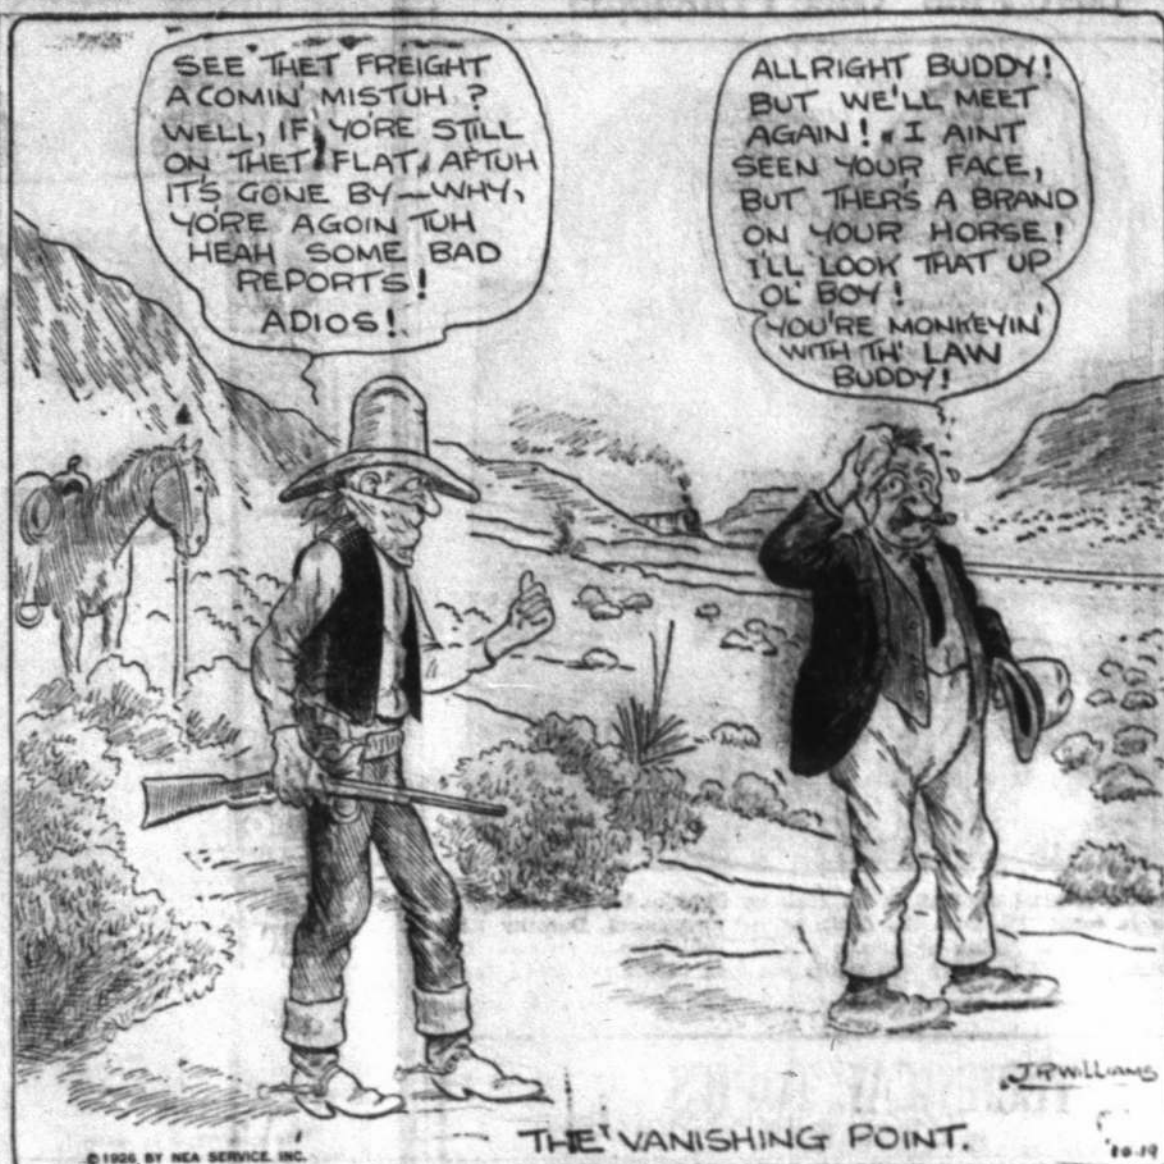

Religion will certainly live. What worries most people is not the demise of religion but the uprooting of certain particular religious tents. Religion, in the future will surely be better than it is today in the hearts of present day men and women.

When you see a man worried about what will happen to religion you can rest assured that what worries him is what might happen to his own brand of religious thought. Just like the Eskimos worship their special totem poles the average citizen today bows down to his own special religious teachings. As a rule, he is interested not in religion but in his church, its teachings, and its prejudices. The world has a long way to move before the complete religious revelation will be acceptable to all men. When that will be is by no means certain, unless there are in our midst, citizens who have a peculiar insight into the Divine mind, and understand it better than everybody else.

Churches and creeds should be secondary. The one creed that is important is the creed that is laid down as an example for all people to live by. Christ-like life. We are not one that believes any special brand of religion church creed will save anyone unless there is much of the Christ spirit woven into it. It is the man with the love of God in his heart, who has no other god before him, who has no graven images, who takes not the name of the Lord thy God in vain, who remembers the Sabbath day and keep it holy, who honoreth father and mother the man who does not kill, commit adultery, nor steal, nor bear false witness against his neighbor, that shall stand in the day of judgment, and who shall receive the blessings of the God of heaven, and not the one who adheres only to individual church names and creeds. It is not the road we travel so much, but the place where we are going, and the place to which the roads leads that is of more importance whether the road be Methodist, Baptist, Presbyterian or what-not.

Sure, true religion will live, but churches may die.

OUT OUR WAY

THE VANISHING POINT.

SO THINK WE

We think that some folks forget to boost their own home town.

We think when people get to the point that everything someone else has is better than what they have are in a good state of mind to get into a lot of trouble everywhere they go.

We think this is the time that money and nothing but money will talk. Money is the only thing on earth that will save the situation just now in regard to the low price of cotton. Arrange to advance fifty dollars per bale on cotton and store it till there is a market for it, and that will put everybody to gathering the crop and will put five hundred million dollars in circulation. We believe that will help the South. It is the only solution, gentlemen, and now get down to brass tacks.

We think it takes very little time to do a kind favor every day of our life. Each kind favor helps us and at least one other. Let's try it.

We think it is about time for some guy to begin predicting that next winter will be the coldest winter in the history of the world. Someone said we would not have any summer this year, but those who have just passed through it will remember that we had some very warm numbers in the list of days and weeks that constituted the summer season of 1926.

We think that if health is wealth, then we are wealthy. Anyway, we would not swap health for wealth even up.

We think that music and laughter are town things that all nations can understand.

We think that some people have so many friends that the loss of one does not seem to bother them a great deal, or at least they do not seem to specially mind it.

We think that about the only people who really appreciate good health is the sick ones.

We think it is not so much the price that you pay for a thing, but the quality that you get.

We think that the average Frenchman seems to have a happy idea that he is big enough to manage American business, and everything else. That's how badly France is fooled in herself.

We think that the average youth no longer bid his "dime" good-night. He says good-morning, if he leaves at all.

We think that few American business men suffer from broken hearts, but financial paralysis is a popular disease and killeth many a fellow off.

IT IS REPORTED

It is reported that one of Lubbock's who has discovered the difference between an automobile and a wagon. He says the main difference is that the wagon is guided by a tongue in front while the automobile has the tongue on the back seat.

It is reported that the Denver road proposition is still on the table. The Interstate Commerce Commission has possibly forgotten that there is a railroad proposition from the South Plains.

It is reported that there was a traveler in Lubbock. He was in an auto and a small sized road wagon. We saw the owners of these two machines repeated the auto as long as it would travel for water and tomobile, and had strapped on the side then changed off and crossed the lakes in their boat.

It is reported that the highway committee is now down to investigating.

It is reported that when a fellow has a good vocabulary he can discard all of the big hard words and substitute something that is easier and more simple. That makes him more appreciated too.

It is reported that there is considerable complaint of boys hanging on to moving cars as they pass down the streets of the city. This is a violation of the laws of the state and should be stopped.

It is reported that a Houston man has been fined two hundred dollars for driving an automobile while drunk. This is no doubt quite a relief to the speeders who seem to be paying an most of the fines money.

It is reported that Mrs. Jack Donnelly is not so down east. She still has Jack and Jack still has the "Jack" so there.

It is reported that fanaticism is one who becomes mad when the opposition talks "good sense."

It is reported that all of Lubbock churches were well filled with people yesterday.

It is reported that the school children are enjoying the few days of dry weather. They do not have to stand in mud now to line up for entering the building.

It is reported that a Tabaka had been tired of the gold fish he decided he would drown them. When last heard from the fish were still enjoying good health.

SOUTH PLAINS PRESS

NEIGHBORS

Slater Blanton, Southland and Slater are close neighbors by geographical location. Each is closer to the other than to any other neighboring town. The interests of the two towns are much in common and lie largely in the same channels, for what helps one will help more or less good to the other.

There is every reason why Southland and Slater should be the best of friends. Friendship already exists between the two towns, to be sure. But, that friendship should be more firmly established.

Being friends and close neighbors, there are many ways in which each town can help the other in a neighborly, friendly way. We all need to get better acquainted. The old saying, "get acquainted with your neighbor, you might like him," would probably be applicable to this case if changed to read "get better acquainted with your neighbor, you might like him."

Being neighbors is a great thing, especially in a community way. Being neighbors helps to develop. Communities that stand together in the advancement of the community are always the very best, for there is that element of friendliness that counts for much in the promotion of everything that is uplifting. Having the good will of every town around you has much to do with the growth of any town. Of course some of them grow larger than others but that need not necessarily cause any jealousy or discord, which is important in their place. Individuals can often do more than the other fellow, but each has a part in community building. Each town in the county or the community also has an important part in the development program. We are glad to note the friendliness that Slater and Southland are mutually agreed upon. May it continue and grow into that proportion that will cement the entire territory around those two places into one great moving, thriving community, where prosperity will abound.

Gay Heart of Montparnasse Still Is Home of World's Great Artists and Authors

(By NEA Service)
PARIS, Oct. 18.—It has been attacked bitterly by its enemies—the witty arrows of dozens of writers have been sped against it—but Montparnasse is still the center of the world of art.

Montparnasse is that section of Paris bounded roughly by the Avenue de l'Observatoire and the Rue de Rennes on one side and by the Seine and the Avenue de Orleans on the other.

The Carrefour Vavin, where the Boulevards Raspail and Montparnasse meet, is the pulsing heart of Paris art center. In this district, cluster the cafes and studios of art students from the world over.

And seated under the fully striped awnings which shade the Terrace of the Cafe du Dome, the Rotonde and the Select, sit the nations of the world, the writers, the painters and the sculptors from everywhere.

The Cafes Dome and Rotonde are favorites with the Americans. The Dome is frequented by the artists, students and literary folk, who gather on its terrace in the mornings for their cup of cafe creme (so-called) and to discuss the latest gossip of the Quarter.

The Rotonde, on the other hand, is the night-time rendezvous of those tourists in search of atmosphere, who sit at the same time like to season it with luxury. An expensive dinner, an "almost" jazz orchestra and a smooth dancing floor is offered by the Rotonde to these seekers after Bohemian life, and they go home after several hours of this wild life of the Latin Quarter with "something to write home about."

Perhaps on their way they have glimpsed a few members of the "Horde of Montparnasse," a group of painters who make the Rotonde their headquarters. Many of these artists are quite garbed. Their boards and flowing locks would cause a sensitive barber to faint. Now and then the "Horde" holds a grand reunion, sometimes to save the franc and at others just out of sheer exuberance of spirits.

The reunion parade is invariably led by Grawoski, the cowboy of Montparnasse, who, although he has never seen America, has adopted the picturesque dress of our western cowboy, even to the spurs.

They Never Cross
Meanwhile, from the opposite side of the street the "Domiers" look on, if at all, with an indulgent smile.

One may, upon occasion, drop into any of the tiny French bars in the Quarter, or sometimes into the "Chai Vikings" where the descendants of the Norsemen hold their nightly revels, but never by any chance would one be found in the rival cafe.

In the evenings the cognoscenti desert their beloved Dome for the Bar du Dingo, around the corner on the Rue Delambre. Here one orders full American food and drinks, its salt stacks around the bar, or sits about the piano.

At 2 o'clock, when the genial Dutch proprietor closes up shop, the party is adjourned to the Cafe Select, on the corner of the Rue Vavin, which is open all night.

Among the best known of the painters may be mentioned Picasso, the leader of the latest modernist school; Paul Gauguin, the famous Tahitian; Paul Cezanne, the young Dutchman; Jerry Thompson, a New Yorker, celebrated for his portraits, while two well known painters from Philadelphia who are making their marks in the art world are Tommy Jones and Howard Ashton Patterson.

The best known of the sculptors is the great Brancusi, followed at a modest distance by Roy Schickel and Green is Gallienne, daughter of the famous poet and sister of the actress, Eva La Gallienne.

The literary number among their ranks such well-known names as that of the poet Ezra Pound, Chester Dunning, the promising young poet Charles Norman, and last but not least, Conrad Bercovitch, whose tales of slum life have found a wide and appreciative audience in America.

The latest recruit in the musical world, this side of the Atlantic, is the poet Ezra Pound. He has written an opera based on the life of Prince Villon, using that eminent Bohemian's verses for the libretto, while his inspiration for the music came from the songs of medieval troubadours, which he found in French museums, inscribed upon old parchment.

The youngest American composer, as well as one of the most promising, is George Antheil, whose "Ballet Mechanique" lately caused a profound sensation in the musical circles of Paris. Damrosch built this unassuming young man as America's greatest composer and will present Antheil's "Symphony in F" in New York this winter, while Szukowski will present it in Philadelphia.

ADAM AND EVE

Said Eve to Adam: "All fruits we've tried
Except the ones of the tree denied.
I can't for the life of me understand
Why the good Lord issued that strange command."

If one of those apples we choose to take What possible difference could it make?
"I wouldn't," said Adam, "the Lord said not."

Eve answered: "We'll tell him that we forgot.
Besides if we leave it that fruit will rot."

"Forget it!" said Adam, "We've fruit
"I know," answered Eve, "but I want

BILL McKECHNIE LOSES JOB AS MANAGER PITTSBURGH PIRATES; "CITIZENS WANTED A CHANGE" SAYS OWNER

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 18. (AP).—Bill McKechnie, manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates, has been relieved of his duties by the club's owners. The club's owners, the Citizens, have decided to make a change in management. McKechnie was relieved of his duties after a conference with the owners. He was not required to report for work next week.

Dreyfuss, after a conference with McKechnie late today, announced that he told the Pirates that "the people of Pittsburgh want a change and we must give it to them." Dreyfuss added that he had no one in sight for the managerial position next season but hoped to land a good man shortly. He said that he advised McKechnie of his decision early so that he might look for another berth.

McKechnie took over the Pirates managerial reins in 1922 when George Gibson resigned on short notice. At the time, he was a coach and assistant to Gibson.

McKechnie's release was based on several reasons.

His stock went sky high in 1925 when he piloted the club to a National League pennant and thence to the world's title over the Washington Senators. Then came the hectic season of 1926, when the Pirates, after a good start, were torn asunder by international discord. The trouble centered about the management. Some players were alleged to have led a movement to oust the veteran Fred Clarke, vice president of the club and McKechnie's assistant, from the bench. This resulted in the release of Max Carey, captain and star outfielder, to Brooklyn for the waiver price, and the unconditional release of Babe Adams and Carson Higbee.

At the time of the upheaval Barney Dreyfuss was in Europe. When he returned he said nothing other than that he hoped by Clarke, McKechnie and his son, Sam Dreyfuss, in their decision to turn loose Carey, Adams and Higbee.

It was the general opinion among the followers of the game, however, that the international strife had ended McKechnie's career as Pirates pilot. Few fans expected him to return as first base next season, and before the 1925

THE NUT CRACKER by Joe Williams

We agree with Judge Gary that the five-day working week is impractical. . . . Indeed, there are times when we think a two-day working week is ridiculous.

This reminds us of Mr. O'Goofy's famous motto which hangs over his desk, "Seven not just until tomorrow that which can just as handily be put off altogether."

Judge Gary is also right when he says there is too much loafing in this country. . . . Particularly by Yankee base-runners in a world series.

We see by the papers that Old Man Browning was willing to lay down his life for Peaches. . . . But the trouble with that was Peaches couldn't wear it.

Theatrical producers who go out on a limb as the saying goes, invariably wind up putting on those undraped revues.

St. Louis is in the midst of a celebration called "The Velled Prophet." . . . Supposedly it is dedicated to the unknown individual who predicted the Cardinals would win the pennant this year.

Washington wouldn't let Dutch Ruether start a world series game last year and St. Louis wouldn't let him finish one this year.

Chicago used to be the greatest patching industry city in the world. . . . But that was before the St. Louis club owner showed how to pack 35,000 fans in a cigar box.

That low, plaintive crooning you hear is Old Man Browning doing his best by "I Wonder Where My Baby Is Tonight?"

Shuffle Callahan, the Chicago welterweight contender, has gone back to his moving van. . . . He ought to be able to deliver the goods that way.

The redeeming feature about the Dempsey-Karna trial, which is now in progress, is that there is no law making it compulsory for readers to pay any attention to the thing.

PRETTY GIRLS IN BARNES' CIRCUS

EQUINE BALLET, HERE FRIDAY WILL BE DREAM OF BEAUTY

What would you do if you saw a beautiful girl from the Land of Nod riding an exquisite golden horse?

Well, that is what you will see when the Al G. Barnes Big 4-ring Circus comes to Lubbock next Friday, with the resplendent "Equine Ballet," featuring one hundred handsome horses and one hundred fair women.

In the gorgeous, sensational extravaganza which opens the big program, horses of pure, natural golden color, ridden by girls of extraordinary beauty, will dance before you. This is the dream that Al G. Barnes has brought to a wondrous reality—a dream of gathering together the 100 most beautiful girls and horses in the world and presenting to the public an offering which would eclipse anything previously staged.

These splendid steeds, valued at $112,000, are only a part of the trained horses of the show. More than 2000 educated wild animals, including Lotus, the largest and only performing blood-sweating hippopotamus on earth, will be seen when the big top goes up at Lubbock.

You will also see more than a hundred "sunkist" bathing beauties of Southern California in the ballet choruses of "Nebuchadnezzar at the Court of Queen Anne," the gorgeous pageant that opens the gigantic program. Many of these pretty girls have played principal parts in the latest motion picture productions this year.

SOCIALISTY RAP RUMANIAN QUEEN

CRITICISE NEW YORK FOR GROVELLING BEFORE
ROYALTY

NEW YORK, Oct. 18. (AP).—Speakers at a meeting held by the International Labor Defense today declared the real visit of Marie of Rumania to this country is to obtain money to aid Rumania in completing forcible domination over Bessarabia with the ultimate purpose of allowing American oil interests to gain an advantage over her competitors in the south Russian fields. The meeting was held after Queen Marie left for Washington.

Secretary of State Kellogg was denounced for "fawning to royalty while refusing to admit to this country's contemptuous Karolyi of Hungary, a true Democrat."

A resolution was adopted condemning the queen as the representative of a Government which persecuted workers and peasants and censuring the U. S. Government for welcoming her to this country.

Judge Jacob Panken, socialist candidate for governor of New York state, today in a statement criticized city, state, and national officers for their "action in groveling before the queen of the most corruptly governed country in Europe."

Judge Panken issued a statement saying he was "against the unprecedented scenes enacted at City Hall and at Washington," attended by a "series of Masada genocidations."

"It is as far cry from the days of George Washington and Abraham Lincoln," he said, who denounced rule by kings in no uncertain terms to these days when Jimmie Walker and Gov. Smith, who boast of their rise from the sidewalks of New York, go out of their way to kowtow to a representative of this royalty system."

Coach Solemn and Drake Stars

DES MOINES, Oct. 18.—Followers of the Drake University football eleven are anticipating a great season this fall, one of the best in a long time, in fact.

A year ago Coach Olin Solemn produced a pretty fair team. It won nine games and lost three. The biggest achievement was the defeat of Nebraska, 14-0. This campaign Drake cohorts hope to see their warriors skip through opposing aggregations in ever better fashion.

One of Solemn's outstanding stars is Gail Fry, Captain-quarterback. Fry is a versatile grinder, being a good ball carrier, a full punter and expert passer. He's a brainy leader, too.

Three other boys appearing to give more than ordinary promise are Ronald Anderson, guard, and Barney Meyers and Chuck Delmege, ends. They are sophomores but seem to have their jobs nailed at this early date.

Drake has a tough schedule this fall, meeting Nebraska, Navy, Kansas, Iowa State and Notre Dame among others. It'll take a real team to come through a winner for the Des Moines institution this season.

TWO CHAMPIONS OF SQUARED CIRCLE ARE RULED OUT AS BOXING CZARS MEET AND NAME PUGILISTIC TITLE HOLDERS

DETROIT, Oct. 18. (AP).—Depositor Phil Rosenberg as bantamweight title holder and declaring the featherweight title vacant through the inability of Kid Kapan to make the weight, the National Boxing Association today approved a list of world champions.

The list follows:
Heavyweight—Gene Tunney.
Light Heavyweight—Jack Delaney.
Middleweight—Tiger Flowers.
Welterweight—Pete Latas.
Lightweight—Sammy Mandell.
Featherweight—Opea.
Bantamweight—Bud Taylor.
Flyweight—Fidel LaBarba.

An argument arose members of the association here for their annual convention, over the endorsement of Taylor for bantamweight title holder. The convention earlier had supported the action of the Illinois Boxing commission in suspending Rosenberg for life and transferring his crown to Taylor.

When the championship list came out for action, however, there were expressions that titles should be worn in the ring and not awarded by a New York governing body.

The association also voted to seek the repeal of the law prohibiting the interstate shipment of boxing contests. It is an effort to find means of financing the work of the national association, the question decided to charge an annual fee of $100 for all boxers coming within the jurisdiction of the association, Canada and Cuba that comprise the association. It was also decided that hereafter all forfeit checks posted by boxers must be certified.

The commissioners expressed indignation over a slandering from Topeka, Kansas, last week quoting "Lester E."

YALE HARVARD SCRAP TIME HONORED METHODS IN BUILDING GRID MACHINES; IF THEY TALLY HIGH, THIS IS REASON

NEW YORK, Oct. 18. (AP).—Yale and Harvard, if they find the places in the football situation that they're aiming for this season, can attribute it to the most radical shift in the grid-iron policy these two ancient institutions have ever affected.

Tradition and time-honored methods have been scrapped in the building of the 1926 squads of the Blue and the Crimson. In the turn-over, Yale is already among the leaders of the Eastern pack, as a result of a decisive defeat of the 1925 champion Dartmouth, while Harvard, after a bad start, is adjusting itself to better things.

The forward pass is the chief element in the transformation. Yale and Harvard have altogether scorned the use of the aerial game as it has developed by leaps and bounds in recent campaigns but they have been leaders among the old guard in keeping the emphasis on the rushing type of game. It was significant Saturday therefore, that Harvard's triumph over William and Mary, as well as Yale's smashing victory over Dartmouth were due largely to the effective use of the pass.

Yale, in beating Dartmouth at the latter's own passing, gave evidence of the fine handwork of Major V. E. Fritchard, old army star who engineered many a cadet aerial attack. Fritchard is assisting head coach Tad Jones at New Haven this fall.

So far, Yale seems several feet ahead of her ancient rival, Harvard, but there will be a good opportunity to compare the two next Saturday at Cambridge when the Crimson tackles Dartmouth. On form, the Big Green eleven, which is developing slowly, will be a favorite, but Harvard may spring a surprise.

Harvard's battle with Dartmouth's Indians holds this week's spotlight among the old "rivalries" but Yale faces sturdy opposition from the undefeated Brown team at New Haven. Princeton will have a chance to reorganize its forces against Lehigh, which has lost all four games played so far.

Overdoing?
Hurry, Worry and Overwork Bring Heavy Sins.

MODERN life throws a heavy burden on our bodily machinery. The eliminative organs, especially the kidneys, are apt to become sluggish. Retention of excess uric acid and other poisonous waste often gives rise to a dull, languid feeling and, sometimes, toxic backaches and headaches. That the kidneys are not functioning perfectly is often shown by burning or scanty passage of secretions. More and more people are learning to assist their kidneys by the occasional use of Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic. Ask your neighbor!

MYSTERY COVERS GANGSTER'S DEATH

CORONERS INQUEST FAILS TO SOLVE CHICAGO'S LAT-EST MURDER

CHICAGO, Oct. 18.—A coroner's inquest today into the death of John Dano, whose bullet-riddled body was thrown from an automobile along a suburban highway last night met the usual silence which has characterized all attempts to solve Chicago's "gangland" murders. Information obtained tended to confirm the belief of police that Dano had been "taken for a ride" as a result of conflicting bootleg operations with some rival organization. It was developed that Dano had at one time been associated with the late "Genna" Gang.

The only other development today in the attempt to stem the tide of gang warfare came when police announced that Sam Pellar and Bennie Jacobs, alleged gangsters who were wounded in a machine gun battle a week ago in which "Little Hymie" Weiss, leader of one of the rival bootlegging organizations was killed, will be charged with the murder of Weiss. Both men were charged by witnesses with having shot into the body of their chief as he lay wounded. Police believe they did this in the belief that they were being double crossed when assaulted by machine gun bullets from the second story of a flat and shots from a passing automobile.

Government Makes River Shipping Pay

NEW MANAGEMENT ERASES DEFICITS OF BARGE LINES

BY CHARLES P. STEWART
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—River shipping on a large scale has been put on a paying basis again in the U. S.—and by an arm of the federal government.

Thus far in 1926 the Inland Waterways Corporation operating government-owned tug and barge freight service on the Mississippi and Warrior rivers, shows a net profit of $55,632.

Credit for the accomplishment belongs to Brig. Gen. Thomas Q. Ashburn, the waterways corporation's chairman.

The fleet which Ashburn manages comprises about 150 boats—tugs, barges and self-propelled barges. Freight of every character is transported.

The Background

The Inland Waterways Corporation was formed three years ago. It took over the properties and functions of the former Inland and Coastwise Waterways Service.

In 1923, the last full year of the latter body's existence, the river fleet lost $935,000.

In 1924, during part of which the new corporation was in control, it lost $322,000.

In 1925 General Ashburn cut the loss to $34,513.

And now comes profit.

Many Parts Served

On the Mississippi, the government boats serve New Orleans, Vicksburg, Memphis, Cairo, St. Louis and lesser ports.

There is coastwise service between New Orleans and Mobile, and up the Warrior River of Alabama.

Ultimately, the corporation will spread its service to the Ohio and Missouri Rivers and their important tributaries and to Atlantic and Pacific coast streams such as the Hudson and Sacramento.

The present fleet had its start during the World War. With the railroads burdened beyond their capacity, the Railroad Administration placed a string of barges and tugs on the Mississippi. There was no consideration of profit or loss. Uncle Sam simply wanted freight moved, regardless of cost.

The war ended, the Railroad Administration went out of business, and river transportation passed into the hands of the Inland and Coastwise Waterways Service.

To the Bow Woes

It failed to thrive. The railroads regarded it with loathing. Its management made plans which called for congressional appropriations. These were refused to as "pork barrel legislation."

The service headed for the bow woe.

But Gen. Ashburn remained optimistic.

"Let's make a corporation of it and have the secretary of war hold the stock," he suggested. "I'll run it and demonstrate that it can be made to pay."

Congress acceded and set the Inland Waterways Corporation up in business, with $3,000,000 to buy the stock.

Uses Only $1,500,000

Ashburn has half of that $2,000,000 still in hand. The rest he used to pay off debts and get a flying start.

He went to the railroads.

"If we develop a big river traffic we shan't cut in on your business but increase it—handling outgoing and incoming freight from and to river ports," he said.

"The Inland Waterways Corporation wants a fair split on joint freights."

He took the matter up with the Interstate Commerce Commission, too, and finally got a favorable ruling.

In the meantime the railroads were falling in line.

Prediction Comes True

Their business increased, as Ashburn predicted it would.

The midwest had never before afforded a market for raw sisal, sugar, cotton, alfalfa and coffee. It cost too much to send them so far, in their raw state, by rail. The river boats brought them and the railroads distributed them inland. They are developing midwestern industries. A transformation of the Mississippi valley is promised in the next few years.

Ashburn's corporation is serving 31 states today and has dockers with 165 railroads.

The government barges carry 2909 tons of freight apiece and draw eight feet of water. Their average speed, including stops is eight days from St. Louis to New Orleans and 15 days upstream over the same route.

They save shippers, Gen. Ashburn estimates, an average of 20 per cent on freight charges.

There are 16,000 miles of potentially navigable waterways in the central United States, Ashburn adds—the region included between the Twin Cities and New Orleans, Montana and Pittsburgh. This doesn't take into account streams flowing into the Atlantic and Pacific.

The general isn't particularly interested in canals—they cost too much to build, he says. The waterways he is cognized with are those which nature created—free.

"They talk about Europe's utilization of her waterways," snorts the general. "And how far we lag behind! Why, Europe sends her experts to America right along to study and learn from what we've done."

DALLAS CLUB TAKES UP RESPONSIBILITY FOR CHILDREN'S PLAY

(By the Associated Press)
DALLAS, Texas, Oct. 18.—A truck load of goats, two pigs, one donkey, and a persistent philanthropist helped to put red roses in the cheeks of more than a thousand orphans in Dallas during the last summer.

When the Salesmanship club of Dallas decided that its chief excuse for existence was the welfare of parentless children, the only equipment it possessed for the work was Dr. David J. Wortsman—and a quantity of nerve. Dr. Wortsman was 99 per cent of the equipment.

In business hours, Wortsman is an optician. But this is only incidental to his main purpose in life, which is to take little children who haven't anything, not even a mother or father, and make their dreams come true.

Gives Vacations
The club took upon itself the responsibility of giving every orphan child in Dallas a summer vacation. Wortsman, as head of the committee, induced the city to donate 25 acres on the shores of Bachman's lake, near Dallas.

There was no money in the club treasury to pay for clearing the land, so here's where the goats came in. Frank Holland has a goat farm. Dr. Wortsman called upon him one day to bargain for 25 goats at wholesale prices. Holland said sure he'd sell 'em cheap. A few days later, Wortsman sent a truck to fetch the goats. When it returned, Wortsman discovered Holland had played a trick on him, for there were 50 goats in the truck instead of 25. Holland had donated the 25 extra as his share of the enterprise.

The real joke appeared, however, when a few months later the 50 ruminants had multiplied to 100, but this proved a solution to the problem of clearing the land. They ate every root, twig, and branch in sight, so the club members didn't have much to do when they went out to finish the job.

Lumber Donated
Lumber was donated by a lumber company, painted by a paint company, the plumbers' union paid for the plumbing and the carpenter's union donated each member one dollar and thus was built the orphan's clubhouse by the side of the lake. Dr. Wortsman went about town where street paving was being done and gathered up 20 loads of dirt which the city wanted hauled away. With this, he built a swimming pool and fountain. Steel row boats were donated by a newspaper.

Orphanages in and about Dallas send their children to the camp for two weeks at a time. The children are taken out in automobiles of the club members, and by this means the members get close to child life. After a man has had a little orphan climb over him, he is said to have a better understanding of life. These trips are merry holiday occasions for both the kids and their benefactors.

Have Much Pastime
The children swim, go boating, have games, eat plenty, play with the goats, and ride the donkey. The lone donkey has been ridden more than the New York subway, but he never registers a kick, and his customers have never complained of the service.

Dr. Wortsman got two pigs donated from somewhere. Then these two donated him five little pigs, which he sold for $35 to buy things for the kids. The goats eat all the garbage, and when they become too numerous, he sells off a few, and buys more food to make more garbage. Goat milk also is used for the children. The boys and girls bring all the stray cats and dogs they can find, so the camp is full of pets.

The enterprise, which started several years ago from nothing but 25 acres, 50 goats, and Dr. Wortsman's ingenuity, now has a dormitory, an auditorium, a bathhouse, swimming pool, and its own gas plant and waterworks.

SAYS SCHOOL LAND RUINING COUNTY

A. H. KING PROTESTS TAX-FREE TERRITORY IN THROCKMORTON COUNTY

Special to The Avalanche.

STAMFORD, Oct. 18.—Throckmorton county is being ruined by the presence of 50,000 acres of non-taxable so-called school lands owned by other counties in its territory, according to A. H. King, member of the legislature, and joint author of the proposed amendment allowing taxation on such property in Texas.

This vast acreage in Throckmorton county is retarding the development of the region and unjustly forcing Throckmorton citizens to suffer the burden for support of education in its own district and in education of children 400 and 500 miles away according to King who explained the situation to Publicity Manager E. H. Whitehead of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce. The West Texas regional organization is standing directly in favor of the proposed amendment to be voted on in November which will allow taxation of the so-called school lands.

King says that Throckmorton county must build roads through its territory to link it up with progressive regions nearby and to do this needs much money. The 44,000 acres of so-called school lands in the county will profit from the construction of strategic highways, the legislature member stated, yet these lands bring in no taxes or money to help in the building of such roads. In addition to this crying injustice, King pointed out that the so-called school lands are rented out to farmers and ranchmen who pay no taxes, yet who send their children to Throckmorton schools with out contributing one penny to their support. The lease money from the so-called school lands reverting back to counties holding the property in Throckmorton, makes Throckmorton indirectly pay also in education of children in the counties hundreds of miles away, King pointed out.

At the present time some 12 to 15 Texas counties are holding so-called lands in other counties; the others which owned such properties sold the lands long ago seeing the injustice of it. King says that those districts owning school lands in other counties could sell their lands and make more from the interest on the sale price than is brought in through leasing it.

The amendment proposed by King is to be submitted to the vote of Texas citizens in November of this year. The bill allows the taxation of the so-called school lands, but effects only 12 or 14 counties of the state, those holding property in another county, and does not act upon college or university property. King is putting forth every effort to see that the people of Texas understand the justice of the proposed amendment and act upon it accordingly. The West Texas Chamber of Commerce is backing the stand taken by him.

LIBERTY BONDS HIDDEN ASSETS

NATIONWIDE SEARCH FOR BOND SALESMAN OPENS AS BANK CLOSES

(By the Associated Press)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 18.—The liberty bonds for which the Brotherhood Savings and Trust company and several individuals paid $320,000 to Charlie Knapp, missing bond salesman, were part of alleged hidden assets of John A. Bell, former local bank head, recently convicted of embezzlement, the Pittsburgh Gazette-Times today declares. Police have been informed by Bernice Diamond of Pittsburgh. Bell was president of the Carnegie Trust company, which failed a year ago.

The bonds, part of alleged hidden assets valued at $3,000,000 were being sold by several men, including Knapp and Diamond, through a prominent attorney, the newspaper asserts. Diamond, according to the Gazette-Times was released by police after questioning.

last Friday after he had received the $320,000 in pre-payment for the bonds which he was to deliver at about half price. He never delivered the bonds.

The bank, a labor institution, has been closed pending investigation by state banking department officials, but its officers insisted there were sufficient assets to pay all depositors in full.

It A. McCrady, president of the bank, who has been released under a $125,000 bond on various charges in connection with the case, defended his action in turning over the money to Knapp before the bonds had been delivered.

Two Words Held Story
In a statement issued last night, McCrady said the "whole story" solves itself into two words, misplaced confidence.

POST, Oct. 18.—The largest demonstration in the history of the town took place here Thursday when all Post turned out to welcome home George (Scotty) Samson, Garza County Agricultural agent, who took off first honors for this section in winning the highest award for agricultural displays at the State Fair of Texas at Dallas.

Garza county captured first prize on its tasteful and artistic exhibit of small grains and sorghums. The grain sorghums alone, scored 193 points out of a possible 200, the highest rating ever given at the Fair. Forty-seven out of fifty points on forage feed were made, and 72 points out of 75 on alfalfa. The same displays won first prize at Abilene and Lubbock for Garza county.

"Scotty" Samson, who arranged the Garza county exhibit, returned from Dallas Thursday and was greeted by an enthusiastic throng of 1500 people with the band. A big banquet was given in his honor during the evening. Samson is secretary of the Post Chamber of Commerce, and has won recognition as one of the best exhibitors in the state. Following the ovation given him, the whole section rallied to the support of the Chamber of Commerce in that region in a way unknown before.

DAILY MARKET

Financial Letter

WALL ST., New York, Oct. 18.—Nothing has occurred to alter the favorable outlook in the business world but, on the contrary, there is every reason to suppose that there will be a satisfactory development of business throughout the autumn months.

The fact that the fundamental economic base for the structure of market prices. There has been no reason to regard that base as having shifted, but rather a renewal of ground for thinking that it is as firm as ever.

What is going on in the market then is merely a rectification of conditions that had been allowed to develop too optimistically during the latter part of the summer.

Production Still Expanding
Production continues to expand in most branches and demand is as good as ever.

Judge Gary's forecast of the month's production was very nearly accurate. The rate of "unfilled orders" being a little over 51,000 tons, which leaves orders on the books amounting to 3,582,000 tons.

This is not far from the figure which existed at the corresponding date a year ago. Large ordering of steel rails for 1932 delivery has been in progress the new bookings running at the rate of something like 150,000 tons a week.

This has been a highly encouraging factor. There is also continued large production in other basic fields. Textiles, especially cottons, are doing uncommonly well, with an excellent volume of production and a disposition on the part of the dealers to buy raw cotton freely, now that the price is so low on the open market.

Automobile demand has been stimulated by the revisions of prices for next season's models that have taken place here and there and sales are reported as very good.

In some cases at record levels. Caraveling figures continue to maintain their high totals and the movement of the products to primary markets has been uncommonly heavy.

Retail trade indexes as made public this week have been unusually satisfactory. The actual consumer

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 18. (AP)—The cotton market alternated between periods of activity and comparative quiet today. At the start trading was brisk owing to selling due to an accumulation of over Sunday selling orders and to the dry weather map and lower Liverpool prices. By the middle of the morning prices had eased off 35 to 40 points from Saturday's close. The market then became steadier on covering due to a storm warning stating that the tropical disturbance in the Caribbean sea was moving northward with increasing intensity. Traders feared that should the storm strike any portion of the cotton belt it would injure open cotton. By the middle of the afternoon prices had rallied 10 to 15 points from the lows. The market continued to improve in the late trading, making new highs in the final trading 15 to 25 points up from the lows. The close was a shade below the high, showing net losses for the day of 15 to 25 points.

Liverpool came in about 4 penny points lower than due and this combined with a dry weather map and considerable hedge selling caused an opening dip of 17 to 39 points. By the end of the second hour, December had traded down to 12.55, January to 12.63 and March to 12.80, or 35 to 40 points below the previous close.

The market rallied during the afternoon on further storm news and on the heavy exports for the day and by the middle of the afternoon December had traded up to 12.75, January to 12.82 and March to 12.90, or 15 to 25 points up from the lows. This recovery was added to in the late trading, January advancing to 12.95 and March to 12.99, new high, and 18 to 25 points up from the lows. The close was a shade under the high. Exports for the day totaled 180,508 bales.

PATENTS GRANTED TO TEXAS FOLKS
COMPILED BY MUNN & CO., PATENT ATTORNEYS

Of 743 patents issued in the last week, Texas inventors obtained 9. That these inventions are worth while is attested by the number of patents that already have been assigned for manufacture and sale. In other cases the inventors are planning to manufacture them themselves or still are negotiating for assignments or royalties.

That following information is compiled by Munn & Co., of New York, Washington, Chicago, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Howard Michler, and John D. Non-Abacher, of New Ulm, Apparatus for facilitating the lining of transmission tanks. MORNING AVALANCHE NOW A MEMBER OF ASSOCIATED PRESS; LUBBOCK IS PROTECTED BY A. P. DAY AND NIGHT

The Lubbock Morning Avalanche, the only morning newspaper between Amarillo and Abilene, and between Wichita Falls and Albuquerque, makes its bow today carrying for the first time complete news dispatches by the Associated Press. While the Avalanche has been appearing regularly as a daily newspaper for almost four years it has been served throughout by wire service from another news gathering association. Its membership in the Associated Press, the world's largest and oldest news gathering organization dates from today.

The addition of the Avalanche to the Associated Press gives Lubbock and the South Plains both day and night leased wire service by the Associated Press. The Lubbock Daily Journal, an afternoon newspaper, being a day wire member.

Strong in West Texas

International, national, state and sectional news by the Associated Press will give the Avalanche-Journal Publishing Company believes, the best news service available to morning paper readers in this vicinity. From a sectional standpoint, particularly, with Associated Press papers located in Amarillo, Abilene, San Angelo, Vernon, Wichita Falls, Fort Worth, El Paso, Brownwood, Brownsville, and other places in West Texas a better "coverage" is maintained by the Associated Press than by any other news gathering organization and that fact alone makes the Avalanche's membership in the Associated Press a decided advantage from the reader's standpoint. The prestige, efficiency and acknowledged leadership of the Associated Press in all other lines of service will also mean a better Avalanche.

Operator R. G. Chinn, of Kansas City, telegrapher in charge of the night wire service by the Associated Press, arrived in Lubbock yesterday and assumed his duties for this issue of the paper.

MUCH COTTON TO BE SNAPPED; FEAR

PLAINVIEW MANY SAY BIG RAINS NECESSITATE SUCH ACTION

Special to The Avalanche

ABILENE, Oct. 18.—Ninety per cent of the cotton crop on the Plains about Plainview will have to be snapped, according to R. G. B. Fain, prominent realtor of that place.

"The Plainview country has had more rain than ever known before," he said. "Lakes are full and running into others. The biggest maize crop in years has been grown and is bringing around $7 and $8 a ton. Much of it is sprouting in the fields due to the severe rains."

Fain said that more wheat is being planted this fall than ever before with prospects bright that the yield will be heavy regardless of whether further rain falls. Farmers, he says, realize that cotton has proved to be a non-revenue producing crop and are turning en masse to sowing of wheat. The farmers who made wheat their staple crop this year, he says, realized great profit.

has as a part of its return the necessity of sending in news happenings of importance to other papers. For instance, suppose there is a murder in Abilene tonight. The Abilene Morning News, member of the Associated Press, sends in the story and all of the other West Texas papers receive it. The same condition holds good in all of the other cities of West Texas, or anywhere else in the world where the Associated Press has a member paper, thus assuring the dissemination of news from all parts of the globe.

The Associated Press differs from all other organizations of its kind in that it cannot be "purchased." A paper is not a client but after being duly elected to membership is an integral part of the organization.

Reader is Protected

Failure to protect the Associated Press on big news breaks or the sending in of untrue articles meets with immediate punishment in the way of fines or in some cases the withdrawal of membership rights. This fact, as can be easily seen, protects the reader from unscrupulous news fakers and assures him that he will get "all the news all the time."

The Associated Press specializes on a style of articles which protects the homes of its readers. In the handling of sensational stories its members and special writers coach their reports in language which is not objectionable even to the most fastidious and in a manner that younger readers are not led from the right ideals in perusing the report.

In a thousand and one different ways the Associated Press through its years of service, has built up its leadership which will be recognizable by the readers in a very short time.

FROM SOAP TO EGGS

Wide Assortment of Farm Products Wins Prize At Stamford Fair

Special to The Avalanche

STAMFORD, Oct. 18.—A tastefully arranged exhibit ranging from lye soap and duck eggs to a loaf of whole wheat bread made from home ground flour, won first prize of $25 for Karl Wolfe, at the Community Fair here this week. The "Wolfe's Farm" agricultural booth contains 49 different articles artistically arranged and is a veritable preachment of diversification.

Seven years ago Karl Wolfe and his wife moved to a farm five miles north of Stamford and were told that they would starve to death. Today they own a model farm home and clear a snug margin of profit each year from their varied farm products. Dairying, livestock raising and truck gardening are all practiced by the farmer who has been converted to the West Texas Chamber of Commerce doctrine of diversification.

Among the articles included in the prize winning Wolfe farm exhibit are duck and hen eggs, tomatoes, potatoes, okra, onions, asparagus, corn, lettuce, rhubarb, cucumbers, turnips, black-eyed and English peas, pop corn, beets, canteloupes, watermelons, pumpkins, figs, strawberries and blackberries, butter and milk, wheat, oats, millet, cotton, grain sorghums, hay and orange feeds, preserves, home canned meats and flowers.

Besides winning the $25 prize for the best agricultural booth display, Wolfe and his wife won a number of individual exhibit prizes.

Bankers' Head

Melvin A. Taylor, president of the First National Bank of Chicago, is expected to become president of the American Bankers' association at its convention in Los Angeles early this month. He is now first vice president.

FARMERS IN SOME CASES TURN STOCK INTO COTTON

Special to The Avalanche

ABILENE, Oct. 18.—Extraordinary cases have been reported where farmers of Central West Texas are turning their stock into their white fields of cotton, but the great majority of farmers are resolved to enter the staple, according to reports received here. The rainy weather of the last three days has seriously interrupted gathering of the staple and probably lowered the grade considerably.

In line with the cotton acreage reduction campaign general over the country farmers in this territory are preparing to sow a large acreage to wheat in view of the propitious season now stored in the earth.

Air service between Egypt and India is to be inaugurated by January 1.

ALL THEY WANTED WAS DAMAGES

GOODMAN CAN'T GET EITHER OF COLLIDING PARTIES TO FILE CHARGE

"Judge, I think I should have damages for my car," pleaded a woman at the city hall late yesterday. "I was just driving down Main slowly and on my side of the street when his truck struck me. It almost ruined my new car, hurt my leg and tore my stocking."

"Why, Judge, I am not kicking, but that woman knows she was in the wrong. I was driving west on Main and she was so far over on my side I could not miss her. I thought once I would drive over the curb into a yard, but it all came so quickly I did not have time."

"Do either of you wish to file a complaint?" asked Judge Goodman.

"I think he should pay for my car," said the woman.

"I don't think so," said the man.

"This is a criminal court—do either of you wish to file a complaint?" again asked the judge.

"I think he ought to pay me damages," said the woman.

"I don't think so," said the man.

"Well I am not in position to try damage suits—this is a criminal court, and unless one of you file charges, I don't care to hear the evidence, stated the judge.

"I know, said the woman, but I think he was wrong and should pay me damages."

But why go any further. The judge could not act. Neither of them would file a complaint, and unless the woman's husband takes action nothing will come of the case.

Harris for a two-story brick at the corner of Chestnut and South Third, to cost $24,900. Permits this week have reached $47,400.

ABILENE MEN SAN'T GO TO RUMNELS FAIR ACCOUNT ROADS

Special to The Avalanche

ABILENE, Oct. 18.—Heavy rains general over this area prevented the large caravan of Abilene visitors to the Rumnels county fair, now in progress to make the trip. The Central West Texas district convention of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, scheduled for the same day, was called off until some time in November. President J. D. Sandifer of Simmons University and President Hartsell Baxter of Abilene Christian College were to have been principal speakers.

An urn, believed to be 3,000 years old, and containing the bones of probably a pre-Roman celebrity, has been unearthed at Bichover, England.
