Nationalists Free . . . Fleet Raises China Shield

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5 —UP— President Eisenhower's order that the U. S. Seventh Fleet stop shielding Red China has been put into effect, it was learned Thursday.

Authoritative sources said formal instructions to abandon the "neutrality patrol" of Formosa were dispatched to the Far East a few hours after Mr. Eisenhower informed Congress of his plan.

A Senate leader suggested meanwhile that removal of the Seventh Fleet barrier to Chinese Nationalist operations might result in Formosa-based air attacks on Red rail lines.

Mr. Eisenhower announced in his State of the Union message Monday that he was "issuing instructions that the Seventh Fleet no longer be employed to shield Communist China."

His press secretary, James C. Hagerty, said Wednesday that White House policy was to say nothing about actual issuance of the order. But it was learned from other sources that the Joint Chiefs of Staff dispatched the order to the Seventh Fleet late Monday.

Adm. Arthur W. Radford, Pacific Fleet commander, who has refused to see reporters since his White House visit Monday morning, was believed to be working on matters related to the Seventh Fleet order. An advocate of a naval blockade of the Red China coast, Radford is scheduled to return to his Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, headquarters in a few days.

The suggestion that "de-neutralization" of Formosa might result in Nationalist Chinese air attacks against mainland communications came from chairman Alexander Wiley of the Senate Foreign Relations committee.

Supplies Reds in Korea
He referred to a rail line which he said supplies Communists in Korea and Indo-China.

"If Chiang Kai-Shek has any strength at all, he's getting it from the rail line," Wiley said.

Nationalist China at present has only piston-engine aircraft but should soon begin to receive jet-propelled fighters. In addition to cutting rail supply lines, Wiley said, the U. S. might use its MIG-15 jets from the Manchurian bases from which they venture into North Korea.

The Red Jets at present are con-

Canadian River Bill En Route To Austin

PLAINVIEW — A bill creating the Canadian River Municipal Water Authority, by-passing any action of the State Board of Water Engineers, this morning was on its way to State Senator Grady Hazlewood for introduction into the State Legislature.

The action approving the bill was taken yesterday at a meeting of the 12 cities interested in the proposed $85,000,000 Canadian River project in Plainview.

Before any money could be raised for construction of the dam and aqueduct system a legal entity such as a water district would have to be organized and set up. This, of course, would have to be first approved by the voters in the 12 cities comprising the proposed district.

At the present time the State Board of Water Engineers has the question of holding such an election "under advisement" following a hearing in Austin Jan. 13 for that purpose.

The bill which would automatically set up the district, provided it is approved by the electorate, would bypass any decision made by the water engineers and be in fact a law unto itself.

Membership on the Canadian River Municipal Water Authority is to be composed of representatives from each city—one member for cities under 10,000 and two members from cities with more than 10,000 population.

There is to be no price differential for water between the cities because of the distance from the dam. The district would not (See CANADIAN, Page 7)

Agent Dies In Africa

NAIROBI, Kenya, Feb. 5 —UP— Stephen J. (Steve) Hannagan, the press agent who put glamour in the publicity business, died of a heart attack Thursday in his hotel room. Hannagan, 53, arrived here Tuesday by plane on a tour of Europe, Near East and Africa for one of his many public relations clients, a soft-drink bottling firm.

A Nairobi doctor who was summoned to Hannagan's room told authorities he found the press agent dead in his bathroom.

Hannagan's body will be flown to New York Saturday.

Hannagan left New York late last month on a trip that took him to London, Beirut and Cairo before the hop to Nairobi. He had planned to visit Johannesburg, South Africa; Leopoldville, Belgium Congo; and Lisbon, Portugal, before returning to New York.

Hannagan used his early experience as a newspaperman and his natural flair for publicity to build one of the most successful publicity agencies in the country. His clients included such diverse institutions as the Union Pacific railroad and the Stork Club.

Accidents Hard On Parked Cars

Within two hours two automobile collisions, resulting in total estimated damages of $750, were reported in the city limits—each of them involving a parked vehicle.

Leonard O. Cole, 47, of 418 Hill, collided with a properly parked vehicle owned by Delmer D. Davis, 822 E. Bryant, at 5:40 p.m. Wednesday on South Barnes, south of East Denver, according to city police.

Cole's truck was headed north on South Barnes and was in the midst of a right turn onto East Denver when Cole stopped in the middle of an intersection, started backing up on the wrong side of the street and collided with Davis' car.

Cole was cited for driving on the wrong side of the street. Reggie L. Mayo, 38, of 1138 N. Russell, was dented the dashboard of his car at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday on Browning, east of Gillespie, when he reached over to the right side, pulled the wheel, and his car collided with the rear of a parked vehicle owned by C. B. Nichols, 513 Duquette.

According to police, Nichols' car was knocked away from the curb up onto the sidewalk, resulting in $500 damages to Mayo's car and $150 to Nichols'.

A Major Hurdle . . . Bank Okayed In Canadian

CANADIAN (Special) — Canadian was one step nearer to having a new bank today following approval late yesterday in Austin of a charter submitted by the First State Bank of Canadian. The only remaining hurdle is approval by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Approval was granted by J. M. Faulkner, chairman of the State Banking Commission at 4:30 p.m. Wednesday after an all-day hearing.

Officers of the new bank include Frank McMordie, president, and J. D. Glenn, now a vice president of the First National day.

Jordan's Father Is Hospitalized

A former constable and deputy sheriff in Pampa—the father of Sheriff Rufe Jordan—is seriously ill in Lubbock from a severe stroke and injuries received in a fall.

Frank Jordan, 61, of Lubbock, was committed to the hospital Friday afternoon because of a heart attack and fell out of a third-story hospital window Sunday afternoon, the sheriff said today.

Sheriff Jordan returned from Lubbock Wednesday afternoon and expects to go back sometime Friday.

Navy Lifts Secrecy Ban On New Twin-Jet Fighter

SEOUL, Feb. 5 —UP—The U. S. Navy lifted the secrecy ban Thursday on the new Marine "Skynight" twin-jet night fighter and said it already had knocked six Communist MIG-15s and a propeller-driven war plane out of the Korean skies.

However, a chugging propeller-driven Corsair stole the show in Korea when its pilot damaged a speedy Russian-built MIG-15 jet. Capt. Carlton Green, of Presque Isle, Me., was credited with damaging the MIG. Green and three other comparatively slow fighter-bombers tangled with four jets.

The Navy said the new "Sky-

'Kiss Of Death' Suspect Hunted In Amarillo

AMARILLO, Feb. 5 —UP— Authorities searched Amarillo rooming houses and hotels Thursday on a tip that a pretty German war bride, wanted in the "kiss of death" murder of her estranged husband, had arrived here on a bus from Los Angeles.

Police said an intensive search had been under way since about noon Wednesday when a bus driver reported that one of his passengers answered the description of 32-year-old Hildegarde Garmel Pelton.

"We checked every cafe and bar in Amarillo Wednesday night," an officer said. "Now we're concentrating on hotels and rooming houses. We haven't picked up a lead, but we think the woman is still here."

The missing woman is wanted for questioning in the death of William Thomas Pelton, 26, whose body was found Monday near Niles, Calif., punctured with eight bullets from a .22 pistol. Officers said Pelton's forehead bore lipstick smears which indicated he had been kissed after he was killed.

The couple had recently been divorced.

W. G. Bell of Amarillo, a Greyhound bus driver, said he picked up a woman resembling Mrs. Pelton at Albuquerque with a group of Oklahoma City — to Los Angeles passengers. Bell was shown a photograph of the missing suspect and said that his woman passenger resembled Mrs. Pelton "very much."

California authorities believed that Mrs. Pelton was enroute by bus from Los Angeles to Oklahoma City, but two detectives who stood watch at the Oklahoma City bus station all day Wednesday said she didn't show up.

'Little' Front Is Expected

A "little" cold front is expected to move over Pampa and the entire state tonight, dropping temperatures and producing thundershowers in all but this area.

Pampa — and the nation — continued to enjoy "one of the mildest winters in recent years," according to the United Press.

Local mercury slipped from a Wednesday afternoon high of 68 degrees to an early morning low today of 42 and had climbed back up to 51 by 11 a.m.

Prediction for the Panhandle today was cool and fair, but thundershowers were forecast for North Central Texas today and East and South Central Texas Friday.

Over the nation, strong southerly winds were blowing through its breadbasket and promised to push the mercury into the 50s as far north as Wisconsin, the UP reported.

Texas, however, had its cool front coming in from the north, but it was a mild one and was expected to cause only five to 10-degree temperature drops.

Normally cold sections of the nation weren't. Chicago had not had a "good snow" all winter, the UP said, and New England's frigid Wednesday — was warming today under partly cloudy skies.

A bit of snow, though, might be on the way.

A telebinocular (eye testing) machine was presented area schools today by the Epsilon Sigma Alpha sorority. The machine is to be used for an annual routine screening of student vision, according to Mrs. W. F. Walsh, county schools nurse.

Formal presentation was made by Mrs. Guy LeMond, ESA president, at 9:45 a.m. today in the county schools superintendent's office. Receiving the machine for the schools were B. R. Nuckols, county schools superintendent, Knox Kinard, city schools superintendent, and Mrs. Clifford Jones, City Council Parent-Teachers Association vice president.

Purchase of the telebinocular machine was made with proceeds from the ESA fall style show, according to Mrs. LeMond. Details of the purchase were carried out by Mrs. John M. Nutting, style show chairman.

Included in the vision checks, to be made by Mrs. Walsh, will be checking of simultaneous perception, vertical imbalance, lateral imbalance, fusion, usable vision, depth perception and color perception.

The telebinocular is the second piece of senses check-up equipment given the schools by the ESA sorority. According to Nuckols, the schools were presented a audiometer two years ago which is used to make annual checks of pupils' hearing.

Price Drop Blamed For Lower Incomes

Ralph Thomas, Gray County farm agent, today blamed dropping farm prices on the decline in cattle and agriculture commodities market prices instead of on the poor crop production the last five years.

"I would say there is no connection with crop production," said Thomas. "In spite of poor crops the last five years."

In reference to the predicted drop, Ezra T. Benson, secretary of agriculture, was to hold his first press conference in Washington, D. C., today with promises of "broad statements of policy."

The statements were apparently to be in answer to congressional criticism chiefly for his silence on plans to halt declining farm prices.

Retail prices yet remaining on a high and even increasing level were explained by Agricultural Bureau economists as due to high marketing charges which wiped out almost all the advantage consumers might have expected.

Oris V. Wells, chief of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, Washington Wednesday, predicted the 5 per cent drop in farmers' (See PRICE, Page 7)

Danger Still Threatens . . . Sea Begins To Retreat From Stricken Holland's Lowlands

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 5 —UP— The sea began to retreat from Holland's flooded lowlands Thursday but danger still threatened. Thousands of boats, planes and amphibious vehicles worked to rescue thousands of persons whose lives were in peril in areas where dikes were being further undermined.

Revised figures gave a total of 1,770 persons killed in the hurricane-driven flood that hit the Netherlands, Great Britain, Belgium, Germany and France Sunday.

It was feared that the final total would be more than 2,000 after the many persons missing were accounted for.

Latest death toll figures were: Netherlands 1,320, Great Britain 423, Belgium 20, Germany 7.

Unofficial figures put the total at more than 2,000.

Water levels were falling on both sides of the North Sea coast, after a night of gales which threatened fresh disaster for the flooded areas of Holland and Britain.

CIO Demands Death; Expire In 48 Hours

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5 —UP— CIO President Walter P. Reuther Thursday urged President Eisenhower to scrap wage controls immediately — a move expected within 48 hours unless Mr. Eisenhower objects.

It was learned that government stabilization officials plan to de-control wages in all industries within 48 hours unless the White House vetoes their plans.

Reuther's request went to Mr. Eisenhower as these plans were in the works. However, White House press secretary James G. Hagerty would say only that termination of controls is "still under study and consideration" and that no definite orders had been issued yet.

Reuther said "hundreds of thousands of workers are being denied wage benefits" because the Wage Stabilization Board, anticipating the end of controls, has stopped work on pending contract considerations.

"In view of the pending termination of controls," Reuther said, "continued processing of petitions by the board would appear to be futile."

Informed sources said orders also are in the works — again subject to presidential approval — to lift price ceilings by the end of this week on cattle, all kinds of meat, restaurant meals, household textiles, children's clothing and furniture.

Most of them are now selling well below ceilings. Price Stabilizer Joseph Freehill announced Wednesday that controls will be taken off meats at all levels and a "number" of other commodities this week, probably work on pending contract considerations.

Lifting Of Meat Curbs Not Likely To Affect Prices

NEW YORK, Feb. 5 —UP— The government's decision to remove price controls from meat will have little effect on the cost of beefsteak but will be a great morale booster for butchers, according to a group of meat market operators.

"Prices already are way below the price ceilings," said Joseph Weinberger, owner of an uptown meat market. "The public is startled now to use a very powerful weapon—public opinion. They had stopped buying meat when it got so high."

Weinberger complained about price stabilization because "all I got was a lot of legal stuff that was very difficult to read and harder to understand."

"If you ask me the government was paying a lot of inspectors who never did anything," he said. Another butcher claimed the price controls "did more harm than good." He added that with a "wide open market right now" the housewife has little to fear so far as the food budget was concerned.

June Haver Plans To Enter Convent . . . Dancing Star To Become Nun

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 5 —UP— something that some of you perhaps will find difficult to understand, I have thought it well to make a public statement. Miss Haver declared in the statement, "To Prepare Myself."

"I am going away to prepare myself by several years of prayer and study for something I have been contemplating for the last two years. I am determined to be a sister of charity. . . to consecrate my life to the service of God in His sick and in His children."

In a statement issued through 20th Century Fox studio where she recently completed her latest picture, a musical comedy, the actress confirmed earlier reports that she intended to give up her film career and $3500-a-week salary for the life of a nun.

Her statement was addressed to "all my friends," and indicated her determination to enter a convent.

Pin-Up Girl Comes To Life In Illusionist's Act Due Here

Just fifteen days from now a girl of the United States — and Pampa is one of the tops — will come to life on the stage of the junior high school auditorium.

For the Lee Grabel Magic Show, sponsored by the Pampa Kiwanis Club, will play a lone performance the night of Feb. 20.

"Packed with a little bit of everything, this first-class professional show" has played the Pacific Coast and one of its acts involving a revolving piano — has appeared on the nation's television screen, according to Clinton Evans, local Kiwanis president.

Following a Broadway run that brought him the plaudits of critics, Lee Grabel and his show are now on a transcontinental tour.

Coming direct from the music halls of Europe and America's largest theaters, this "stage show of the century" will hit Pampa with a freight car of special settings, costumes and lighting effects — plus tons of illusions. And the original Broadway cast is scheduled to be on hand when the pin-up girl comes to life.

PRINCE AND PRINCESS — Shown here are two of the main characters — Ann Buchanan and Richard Starrett in "Prince and Princess," a Hans Christian Andersen fairy-tale play of dance and drama which is scheduled to be presented at 4 p.m., Feb. 16 in the junior high school auditorium.

Fairy Tale Scheduled In Pampa... Better Entertainment For Children Is Producer's Goal

A fairy-tale play of dance and drama — designed for both children and their parents — is on its way to Pampa.

"Prince and Princess," written by Hans Christian Andersen, and adapted for the stage by Edwin Strawbridge, will be presented at 4 p.m., Feb. 16 in the junior high school auditorium.

Sponsored by the Pampa branch of the American Association of University Women, this example of Strawbridge's "Children's Theater" reflects his "awareness of the need for better entertainment for children."

Echoing this feeling, Mrs. Loyal Davies, publicity manager, said that "parents should attend this play with their children instead of letting them get what entertainment they usually do — and, too, there's no problem of baby-sitting."

Strawbridge's years of stage experience, Mrs. Davies said, have brought him a thorough understanding of what it takes to entertain children and hold their attention.

Among his accomplishments are years of acting on Broadway; study in Paris; 25 performances in Tokyo's Imperial Theater; musical comedies and operas with his own company in the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, with Leopold Stokowski conducting the Philadelphia orchestra; and an appearance in New York's Lewisohn Stadium where he led his company with the New York Philharmonic accompanying.

Seeing the need for "artistic entertainment for children" while taking his ballet company through the country, Strawbridge left Broadway and the field of opera and concert dancing and began developing and producing his "dance-dramas."

Among them have been "Daniel Boone," "The Snow Maiden," "Simple Simon," "The Frog Prince" (in Pampa last year) and now "Prince and Princess."

Agriculture Head Lets No Grass Grow Under His Feet

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — New Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson is being widely acclaimed here for being the first member of the Eisenhower administration to pitch hay. His reorganization plan for the big Department of Agriculture was announced on his first day in office.

The most significant point about Secretary Benson's plan to put 20 agencies in the Department of Agriculture into four main administrative groups is that it is only the first step of a much broader reorganization to come later.

What Secretary Benson has done so far doesn't cut a single employee off the federal payroll and doesn't save a single dollar. In fact, it may cost the government a little more. For three of the four new top administrators have been given responsibilities that should entitle them to rank and pay as assistant secretaries at $15,000 a year. Actually they have gone to work as administrative assistants at $10,800 a year.

They are John H. Davis, new head of the commodity marketing group of agencies; Romeo E. Short, head of the credit agencies; and Richard D. Apelin, head of the administrative agencies. J. Earl Coke, who will head up the research and extension services, has the title and pay of assistant secretary now.

Need More Assistant Secretaries? Two years ago, when President Truman sent up a Department of Agriculture reorganization plan based on Hoover Commission recommendations, two more assistant secretaries were asked for. Congress turned it down. Last year Secretary of Agriculture Brannan asked for one more assistant secretary. Congress turned that down too. What the new Congress will do about adding three more assistant secretaries remains to be seen.

Involved in the further reorganization plans for Department of Agriculture are other ticklish problems for Congress. Most important of all is an idea for complete merger of all soil conservation activities under John H. Davis.

There have been two conservation programs. Soil Conservation Service — SCS — took care of terracing, building ponds and prevention of erosion by permanent works. The Agricultural Conservation program — ACP — made direct payments to farmers for liming and fertilizing their soil.

This year ACP payments are costing $250 million. During the war they got up to $600 million. American Farm Bureau and other organizations tried to cut these payments to $100 million last year but Congress refused to go along. In the offering is a plan to eliminate ACP payments altogether. Along with this shift in emphasis on conservation work there are plans for decentralization of authority over conservation planning. They would take direction away from Washington and give it to the states.

To Revamp Setup Still other plans under consideration involve a change in organization of the Department of Agriculture's county committee structure. There are now 9000 of these committees — three for each of the farm counties. They are paid $7 a day for government work.

Up to now they have been under direction of state committees elected by the county committees.

All these reforms in Department of Agriculture were too much to present in one package. This is why Secretary Benson's new reorganization plan took only the first step in regrouping 20 agencies.

The inside story of the complete reorganization plan is that it has been put together by Temple University experts assigned to continue the Hoover Commission work. The Temple report on Department of Agriculture was turned over to Secretary Benson. He in turn took it up with President Eisenhower's new 14-man Agriculture Advisory Committee under Dean William I. Myers of Cornell.

The job of revamping the Temple report was given to John H. Davis of Boston, formerly executive vice president of the American Wool Marketing Corp. Mr. Davis is a member of the Advisory Committee and under the new setup he will be head of the Commodity marketing group of agencies. It is really the Davis plan which now goes into effect.

THE LINCOLN COUNTRY

Sketched on the Spot by Ralph Lane

NO. 1—THE OLD MILL

Abraham Lincoln's first view of New Salem, Ill., was its grist mill located on the Sangamon River. Lincoln, then a lanky youth of 21, was employed by Denton Offutt to help float a boat of trade goods to New Orleans. The boat stuck fast on the mill dam. Offutt liked New Salem and opened a trading post there and later Lincoln joined him. After much research the mill was re-created in 1941 with flawless authenticity on its original site. And since the river had changed its course, the rebuilders dug a pond and pumped Sangamon River water into it.

The Day She Shot Her Husband . . . Says Mrs. Parsons Talked Of Movies

WICHITA FALLS, Tex., Feb. 5.—UP—Mrs. Mary Jean Parsons talked about movies and new curtains for her apartment without showing "a flicker of emotion" on the day she shot her husband in the head, a witness testified at the Tulsa society's murder trial.

Mrs. Tom C. Field testified Wednesday that Mrs. Parsons visited her apartment several times on the day of Feb. 4 and never gave any indication "that anything was wrong."

She came over the first time about 10:30 a.m. and brought a vacuum cleaner that I had asked to borrow the night before," Mrs. Field said. "We talked about a lot of things, about making curtains for her apartment and more or less agreed to go to a movie together that night."

Husband Killed Medical testimony has shown that Lt. Richard O. Parsons, Pleasantville, N. Y., was killed sometime between 7 a.m. and 11 a.m. Feb. 1. Mrs. Field and her husband, an Army lieutenant, lived in the same apartment house as the Parsons.

The witness said that once during the day she went into the Parsons' apartment "to talk about the curtains some more" but that she didn't go into the bedroom where the lieutenant's body lay.

"Later in the day Mrs. Parsons came over again wanting to buy a cake," she said. "Then about 5:30 that day she came over and said she and Dick couldn't go to the movies because her parents (Mr. and Mrs. Burton Flegler of Tulsa) were coming down."

Mrs. Field was one of a series of witnesses called as the defense attempted to prove that the 23-year-old Mrs. Parsons was of unsound mind when she shot her husband as he lay sleeping.

"Of Unsound Mind" Two neighbors of the Fleglers, Dr. C. Clyde Hoggerd, pastor of the Tulsa Episcopal Church who married the Parsons Jan. 2, 1952, and Mrs. Margaret Logan, house mother of the dormitory in which she lived at the University of Oklahoma, all testified they believed the defendant was of "unsound mind."

The defense also read a deposition from Mrs. Parsons' mother, Mrs. Harriet Parsons of Pleasantville, in which she said she was "definitely of the opinion Mary Jean was of unsound mind at the time."

Two letters written by the slain man's mother to the Fleglers were introduced. In one of them Mrs. Parsons wrote: "I know you and Dick are going through the most terrible ordeal. I suffer with you and our prayers are as much for your little Mary Jean as for our darling Dick."

Another deposition was read from Mrs. Peggy F. Cheddie of Norman, who was Mrs. Parsons' roommate at the University of Oklahoma. Mrs. Cheddie said Mrs. Parsons once talked to her about her condition.

Needed Help "She told me she was mentally sick, that she couldn't be like other girls and that she needed help," she said.

A Tulsa friend of Mrs. Parsons testified that she thought the defendant was insane at the time of her first wedding, to William Tucker of Tulsa.

Mrs. Olive Marie Alderman said that about six months after Mrs. Parsons' first marriage "she began to act as if she were in another world."

THERE'S NO POLICE LIKE HOLMES—Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's fictional detective, Sherlock Holmes, portrayed by Kenneth MacMillan makes his debut at London's Sadler's Wells Ballet by leaving over a "goat" to rescue a "damsel in distress." In the Great Detective Ballet, Holmes labors under a new handicap in that he is unable to see. He has to keep close with the music while, "listening after them."

Endure Seven Years Of Hardship For Nothing . . .

Sea Wipes Out Dutch Financial Freedom

By WADE JONES
NEA Staff Correspondent
THE HAGUE — (NEA)—Tough, tiny, water-soaked Holland has just fought and lost another battle with her ancient enemy, the sea. And now she faces another battle, to regain her financial strength.

Loss from the week-end storm will "run into hundreds of millions," according to a government spokesman.

"It puts us right back where we were after the war in 1945," he added grimly.

There's real tragedy in that last statement, for only five days before the storm struck, Holland had announced that her recovery from World War II had reached a point where she would not need any more United States economic dollar aid this year.

Those seven long, lean years since the war had seen this little water-beleaguered nation of 10,000,000 people fight its way back from a state of near-paralysis to one of thriving productivity.

And it was done the hard way—no miracle short cuts or "have your cake and eat it" methods. It came through hard work, tight regulations, self denial and brains. How often can this country, historically plagued by invasions of the sea continue to bounce back?

The answer was to be seen in the faces and actions of Dutch men, women and children as they fought along the country's 1,500 miles of dikes to block the attack of the sea.

I watched that battle in the Rotterdam and Dordrecht areas. It was raining and the gale from the northwest lashed the rain flat into the grim faces of the men wrestling sandbags, the women weeping as they carried babies and clothing from their endangered homes, the evacuees plodding toward long rows of busses which would carry them from the danger area.

There were grimaces and a few tears but no panic. Men in bright yellow rubber boots toiled steadily, as if they'd been at it for years, filling sandbags, heaving them off trucks and slapping them into weak points along the dikes.

In the midst of the swift jumble of straining men and grinding trucks stood a little boy of seven, bareheaded in the gale and rain, calmly working a small hand pump in the street. The modest trickle he produced emptied into the gutter and eventually added itself to the seas of water on all sides.

Electricity had gone so home radios weren't working. With the intuitiveness born of centuries of fighting the sea, men knew what to expect but it was only a guess.

Out on the gray, wind-ripped dikes in the flatlands the most dramatic battle was fought.

Here one saw great gaps in the dikes with water pouring through. Over there in a clump of trees was a farmhouse, and a boat was trying to evacuate a family. Seven people were drowned there.

The Dutch have three types of dikes which they call "wakkers, sleepers and dreamers." The wakkers are the first line of defense, the sleepers the reserve line and the dreamers the last stronghold. The dike where I observed was a dreamer.

Out toward the sleepers and wakkers, with great gaps in them, stretched miles of water as far as the eye could reach. Only back of us was dry land.

A truck stopped and two soldiers ran down the back side of the dreamer and tried to remove the woman sobbing. "This is our family from their home."

"Where do you want us to go?" home and we stay here."

A grown son stood beside her and agreed. The soldiers jumped back in their truck and drove off.

Dutchmen, long used to floods and their danger, are no different from people I have seen in America's great flood areas along the Missouri, Mississippi and Ohio rivers. None wanted to leave his home. Some just wouldn't.

Fort Worth Says Fat Stock Show May Set A Record

FORT WORTH, Feb. 5—UP—All but two matinee rodeo performances were sold out as the 57th Southwestern Exposition and Fat Stock Show passed the halfway mark and officials said Thursday spring-like weather should assure a new exposition attendance record.

Last year's attendance of 380,000 persons was a record and exposition spokesmen announced at the opening of the 1953 show that they were aiming for another new mark.

Championship livestock judging continued, meanwhile, with a Sunbeam Farm entry from Miami, Okla., — Elaine 6th — winning honors as grand champion female Angus in the fifth day of judging Wednesday. Reserve champion was Luxury-Maid FLS II, shown by Ralph L. Smith of Chillicothe, Mo.

Prince 105th of SAF was named grand champion Angus bull, after first winning the junior championship. The 1,300-pound animal is owned jointly by Simon Angus farm of Madison, Kan., and Hays Angus ranch of Kerrville, Tex.

Prize Reserve, also of Sunbeam farm, was judged reserve grand champion bull.

PHK Dandy Miss 24th, shown by Painter Hereford ranch of Denver, Colo., was named champion Hereford female. A. T. McDannald of Houston recently purchased the Colorado ranch property.

Reserve champion female Hereford was NW also Larryana 4th, shown by Milky Way Hereford ranch of Phoenix, Ariz.

Don't Let Error
Ruin Your Hand

By OSWALD JACOBY
Written for NEA Service

In most hands you can afford to make a small mistake. Not every slip is fatal, and you may occasionally play a hand carelessly and still live to tell the tale.

In today's hand, however, declarer had no such luck. He made one false move and woke up to find himself dead.

West opened the queen of diamonds, and dummy won with the king. South, quite properly congratulated himself on reaching an excellent slam contract. It wasn't easy to bid, but it was practically a lay-down with a normal trump break.

At the second-trick declarer cashed dummy's ace of hearts, discovering the bad news. He continued by leading a low trump from dummy and won a finesse with the eight of hearts. South next led the queen of spades, overtaking with dummy's king. East held off, but took the next round of spades with his ace.

East returned a diamond and dummy won with the king. South now made his fatal error by cashing the top clubs and ruffing a club with dummy's king of hearts. East promptly discarded his last spade on the third round of clubs, and it was all over but the shouting.

Declarer was in the dummy for the last time and therefore had to try to cash dummy's last spade. East could now ruff, however, and there was no way for South to dispose of his last club. Down one at a cold slam contract!

The correct play was very simple. South should have cashed dummy's last spade before touching the clubs. East would have been forced to follow suit on the third round of spades, and South could have discarded a club.

After this play, it would be easy to cash the top clubs and ruff a club with dummy's king of trumps. A second trump finesse through East would then produce the rest of the tricks.

Trousers On Women Drew A Big Laugh

NEW YORK, Feb. 5—UP—Spectators laughed when the first woman wore trousers at a formal evening function. But the laughter has subsided and the evening pants have stayed to earn respectability.

Maybe leg-hugging pants worn under a cutaway skirt will never replace strapless evening gowns, but the young designer who made the first pair is swamped with business.

One well known southern department store has ordered evening pants for spring and summer. Juliana Larson, the singer who first wore trousers at the opening of the Metropolitan Opera last November will have a dozen different designs when she opens at a swank midtown supper club next month.

Find Them Appealing
"They're not slacks, you know," Miss Larson said, when she was asked for the general male reaction. "Most men find them very, ah, appealing. A few are violently against them."

Her husband flatly refused to attend the opera with her that first night, "but now he's decided they're all right after all," the singer said.

Zita McClintock, a 23-year-old designer who just opened her own shop a year ago, is responsible for most of the evening trousers seen here. She started out working with fabrics like black silk and black velvet.

New Designs
"I never thought they'd catch on like this," she admitted. Her latest pair hung on a rack in the living room of her East Side town house which she turned into her place of business too. The new pants were made of shiny black straw cloth, tapered tightly to the knees. The sleeveless top also was of straw cloth, but the overskirt was of black velvet lined with electric blue satin.

The summer line will include things like linen and pleated tulle in black and white combinations. Movie actress Elaine Stewart bought a set of black silk shantung pants and white pleated chiffon skirt to wear to a movie premiere here recently.

Zita, as the young designer will be known when she moves into her new shop this spring, insists that the fad is not mannish, but extremely feminine.

Merten HD. Club Meets In V. Day Residence

Mrs. P. J. Boyd gave the program for the Merten Home Demonstration Club when the members met in the home of Mrs. V. Day recently.

Several different patterns and styles were shown on knotting and tying belts. The first simple form is started with three strands of cord. Then steps were given in making wider belts by starting with two center cords and joining them with either plastic or wooden beads with the two inside cords.

Mrs. Boyd said that it was very simple and inexpensive to match any dress you choose with a belt made in this way.

Mrs. V. Smith gave the council report. Mrs. V. Day was elected representative to the Texas Home Demonstration Association from the Merten Club. Mrs. Archie Maness gave plans for a supper and canasta party to be held in the home of Mrs. D. A. Rife Feb. 6 at 6 p.m.

Refreshments were served to Mmes. John Brandon, P. J. Boyd, T. G. Groves, A. M. Nash, D. A. Rife, V. Smith, Jack Prather, J. C. Steward, Archie Maness, V. Day and one new member, D. N. Brandon. Visitors included Mmes. L. L. Watt, George Dick, M. T. Buck, J. D. Skaggs, and J. L. Holler.

The next meeting of the group will be held in the T. G. Groves home on Feb. 17.

Meeting Planned

Club Meets In Rieghart Home

Twentieth Century Allegro met in the home of Mrs. Harold Rinehart, 1610 Williston, Mrs. Jimmy Thompson was co-hostess. Mrs. Jerry Thomas and Mrs. J. W. Graham gave the program on medicine.

Members decided to have a bake sale with Mrs. Malcolm Wyatt in charge. The proceeds will go to the heart drive. Members suggested that anyone wishing to contribute to this bake sale may give cakes, cookies and pies.

Mrs. Thomas and Mrs. Graham gave sketches from the lives of two famous doctors. Dr. Ben Eiseman was a medical ambassador to Thailand on a three month mission to raise the standards of health and medical education there and Burma and Formosa. At the age of 34, he is an instructor in surgery at Washington University School of Medicine. As Dr. Eiseman traveled through the country, he initiated plans for the most up-to-date medicine and surgery to become a permanent part of Thailand's medical services.

Dr. Eiseman was one of the greatest ambassadors of good will that America ever sent abroad. Joseph P. Hackel has become an extremely important factor in medical science. As head of the Medical Film Guild, he has produced thousands of pictures in the past twenty years, bringing the latest medical advances virtually to the doctor's door. This service cost the doctors nothing, since organizations interested in fostering medical education have set aside grants to support Hackel's work.

"Doc" Hackel began his career in 1921 as a movie photographer and engineer but was, detoured into the medical field in 1930 when his mother died of heart disease. He began studying the field and discovered the doctors in one part of the country were ignorant of techniques developed months before somewhere else. He decided then to use his camera to help science.

Scott Halls Have Work To Show For Time

Usually a wife persuades a husband to start a hobby but the exception is the rule in the Scott Hall home, northeast of town.

Mr. and Mrs. Hall spend all of their free time with hobbies. Mrs. Hall is currently interested in copper work and has made many items for her home such as copper planters, pictures and bookends. She plans to make lamps and jewelry boxes. She has varied her copper work by adding a quilted background.

Mr. Hall, who finished the inside of their home, is working on leather and makes belts, bill folds, holsters and chaps. He also makes the tools that Mrs. Hall uses in her copper work. These hobbies have grown so much that Mr. Hall is building a studio adjacent to their garage for their work.

Mrs. Julian Key Entertains Club

Members of the Parent Education Club met Tuesday afternoon in the home of Mrs. Julian Key for the program given by Mrs. Rex Rose, Mrs. Dale Culwell and Mrs. Ed. Williams.

Mrs. Rose gave a short reading, "Etiquette For The Teen-Ager." Mrs. Culwell said that sloppy clothes and sloppy ways always go together. The families who come to dinner with unkempt hair, unscrubbed nails and looking sloppy in general have table manners to match. Comfortable clothes and clothes for the occasion are essential to a teenager for perfect behavior.

Some of the don'ts Mrs. Culwell suggested are don't put hands on people when talking to them. Don't cough in someone's face. Don't call older people by first names. Don't forget to rise when a lady enters a room. Don't forget to say "thank you."

While it is bad form for a boy to take a girl's arm on the street, he may guide her in a dark place. A boy of 15 is not expected to provide transportation. A girl's parents must either take them to the social or the boy and girl should walk. The reason for this is the girl's parent's concern with who is driving hence the responsibility.

Once good manners are followed it becomes a habit. The child will be at ease with his good manners.

Mrs. Williams spoke on "Your Child and God." She said that no one could begin to take the place of parents in Christian education of children. Parents are the determining factor of the leaders of tomorrow and this education is more important than a bank account.

A good firm education in Christianity is the basis of a child's security.

Parents teach by their attitudes and approach of life. If a child doesn't hear anyone speak of God, he is quick to adopt that attitude. Parents must be constant in their religion.

Mrs. Bob Vail, a new member.

Dr. Wyatt Stresses Need For Thorough Heart Examination

In a prepared question and answer program for Rotary Club, Dr. Michael Wyatt, chairman of the Gray County Heart Association, offered little-known facts concerning heart disease.

The Pampa doctor told Rotarians every person should have a thorough medical examination once a year, including an electrocardiograph test.

Heart disease, in its numerous forms, kills more people in any year than does any other disease — polio, cancer, or tuberculosis.

Dr. Wyatt declared, last year in Pampa, 180 deaths were recorded and of these 82 were directly caused by heart disease in one form or another, he added.

During his preliminary talk, Dr.

Wyatt predicted that within five years the National Heart Fund would be bigger than the annual polio drive. "It is a question of getting people educated to the fact that heart disease is the number one killer and that the research program now going on to combat heart ailments is a really big thing," he said.

The national Heart Fund campaign is now underway over the entire nation, aiming at a goal of $10,000,000. Out of every dollar collected in Gray County, 40 cents remains here to pay for medical care of heart patients who cannot afford to take care of themselves.

During the meeting Bill Herr, junior Rotarian for January, introduced his successor, Don Wilson, who will be junior Rotarian for February.

Paul Belschneider, president of Rotary, announced the annual district meeting will be held in Borger on March 5, 6 and 7.

net income this year as still rising costs take a further bite out of the farmers' cash returns.

Thomas said cattle producers market prices have dropped approximately 40 per cent the last few months. Meanwhile, Benson was being heavily criticized by San Mike Monroey (D-Okla.) for "sitting idly by" as cattle prices slid, and for saying cattlemen are showing "unwarranted pessimism" and should stop rushing their cattle to market.

Monroey said he fears a "huge collapse" in farm economic strength.

And Thomas expressed dire expectations for area farmers' wheat crops this year unless the Panhandle receives almost continuous moisture.

BUOYING UP UNDER STRAIN. Salvage workers take to a breeches buoy to span the 200 yards from the shipwrecked Egyptian freighter Virginia, grounded off the coast of the Isle of Wight. Shipping experts wrote the ship off as a complete loss, but one firm decided to make the salvage attempt. Garrison Seeks Reinstatement Of Texas Narcotics Division

AUSTIN, Feb. 5.—UP—Col. Homer Garrison Jr., believing that no one "will question that we have a narcotics problem," formally requested the 33rd Texas Legislature to restore the narcotics division of the Department of Public Safety.

Appropriations for the DPS Narcotics Division were stricken in 1958.

Garrison, who testified Wednesday before a House appropriations subcommittee on state departments, also urged the Legislature to give him money to hire 130 additional highway patrolmen to boost the force to 699 men — in order to meet "at least one-half the minimum requirements."

The state police chief also asked for longevity pay for employees for his department, pointing out that a newly-graduated highway patrol private now made the same salary as a patrolman with 20 years service.

Reconvenes Today

Members of the House and Senate reconvened Thursday for expected short sessions before adjourning for their usual long weekend. Both houses met only briefly Wednesday.

Proposed legislation continued to flood the bill hoppers, however.

Rep. Earl Hall of Rio Vista and Stanley Caulfield of El Paso introduced another in a growing list of tax bills — a proposed 10 per cent increase in the levy on beer, wine and whiskey.

They estimated it would raise about $1.7 million a year and the lawmakers earmarked the additional funds for financing a state hospital for alcoholics.

Sen. A. J. Rogers of Childress introduced in the upper chamber a bill which would set stiff penalties of upwards to $1,000 in fines and three-to-six-month jail sentences or both for retailers or distributors of lewd literature and "girlie" magazines in Texas.

Cover Lure False

Rogers said his measure also was aimed at "false advertising," such as pocket-sized books whose contents don't follow through with what is shown on the cover.

In brief morning sessions Wednesday:

The House approved a bill by Rep. Richard Stark of Gainesville permitting counties over 70,000 population to set up substations for payment of automobile license fees. The present ceiling is 74,000.

Members of the House voted a one-week postponement on a bill by Rep. Marshall O. Bell of San Antonio empowering home rule cities to exercise exclusive control over drilling of water wells or ditches.

The House also killed a proposal by Rep. Will Smith of Beaumont to set up a special committee to inspect the Texas School for the Deaf.

Garrison, in urging that the Department of Public Safety Narcotics Division be revived, said it would be composed of a chief, six inspectors and one secretary.

Wednesday night's 50-mile wind beat itself out Thursday morning and the sun shone for the first time in five days, but it was still freezing cold and occasionally windy.

Horse Meat Probe Moves To El Paso

EL PASO, Feb. 5.—UP—Police investigated a report Thursday that a Kermit, Tex., meat wholesaler, who supplied retailers in 30 West Texas counties, bought more than 8,000 pounds of horse meat in El Paso County.

The El Paso sheriff's office said it was making the check at the request of Winkler County Sheriff L. V. Eddins.

Eddins said he was advised that the wholesaler, Tom Gordy, bought horse meat from a San Elizario packing plant that sells it for dog food. Gordy has been charged on five counts of transferring horse meat to another person for sale for human consumption.

The manager of the San Elizario plant said that Gordy visited his firm seven times in the past eight months. He said Gordy bought more than 3,000 pounds of horse meat on six of the trips and 5,000 pounds on the last trip, Jan. 19, all for 11 cents a pound.

Sells For Animals

The El Paso county plant sells horse meat wholesale to a number of other companies to process for animal feed, Eddins said.

Gordy was charged Wednesday at Pecos, in Reeves county, on five counts of transferring horse meat for sale to humans.

Monday he was charged at Kermit, in Winkler county, on one count of selling horse meat for human consumption and another count of transferring it to retailers who sold it to humans.

Winkler County Attorney John Lee said Gordy would be tried in the county court-at-law Feb. 18 on the first charges.

Lee, meanwhile, said he wanted to correct an earlier statement

JACOBY ON CANASTA

Misplaced Cards Cause Row

By OSWALD JACOBY

Written for NEA Service

"Please help us on this," asks an Ohio correspondent. "We completed three games of Canasta without anything unusual happening. During the fourth and last game someone mentioned that we seemed to get to the end of the stock earlier than usual, but the remark passed unnoticed."

"After the game was over and the score had been figured, our hostess went into the kitchen and found that on a previous visit to that room just before the last game started, she had left several cards there."

"Now the losers still liable for that last game? The missing cards were not discovered until the game was completely over and scored."

The score counts, and the losers are liable exactly as though the game had been played with the complete deck. This is an unfortunate situation, but the rules are quite clear on the subject. It is quite fair to everybody, since everybody had the same chance to win even though some of the cards were missing from the deck.

Q—Is it ever permissible to meld four wild cards in a single meld? For example, suppose you want to meld out and have an extra wild card to dispose of. If you add it to a particular meld that already has three wild cards without counting that meld as a canasta, are you allowed to put that wild card down?

A—No. You are never under any circumstances allowed to use four wild cards with any meld. This should never happen except through somebody's mistake. I should also point out that it is never correct to make this kind of mistake on purpose.

Q—Are you allowed to meld out with two black threes and a wild card?

A—No, this is not permitted. The only melds that you can make with black threes are three black threes and four black threes. There are no other possibilities.

Q—How often are you allowed to freeze the pack in the game of Canasta? Is there any limit to the number of wild cards that can

Gas Substitutes For Mud In Novel Oil Field Experiment

A novel method of completing gas wells has been introduced as an experiment in the Panhandle and its originators here say it trims considerably the time spent in drilling.

The new technique, employed by Cree Drilling Company in a gas well just completed near Amarillo for C. P. and Erwin Purley, substitutes natural gas for mud.

This completions process was used earlier on two wells in Hutchinson County—one near Fritch and the other near Sanford—and on another Gray County gas well, the Cree-Schwartz No. 1 Dickey "B."

Conventional drilling process is used down to the point where production pipe is set. Then the operator disconnects his mud pump and ties into a natural gas line. In the conventional process, a mud solution is pumped down the drill pipe and carries rock cuttings back to the surface into the slush pit.

In the new technique, gas is injected at a pressure of 150 pounds through the line that had been carrying the mud to the drill pipe. This injected gas then blows the cuttings out of the hole.

This process can eliminate one of the headaches of rotary drilling in low pressure areas in the Panhandle field. The mud used in the rotary process too often forms a coating over the producing formation. However, by dispensing with the mud while drilling the producing formation—dolomite and granite wash in the Panhandle—the danger of mudding off the formation is eliminated.

Of course, when cable tools are used, there is no danger of a coated formation since no mud is used.

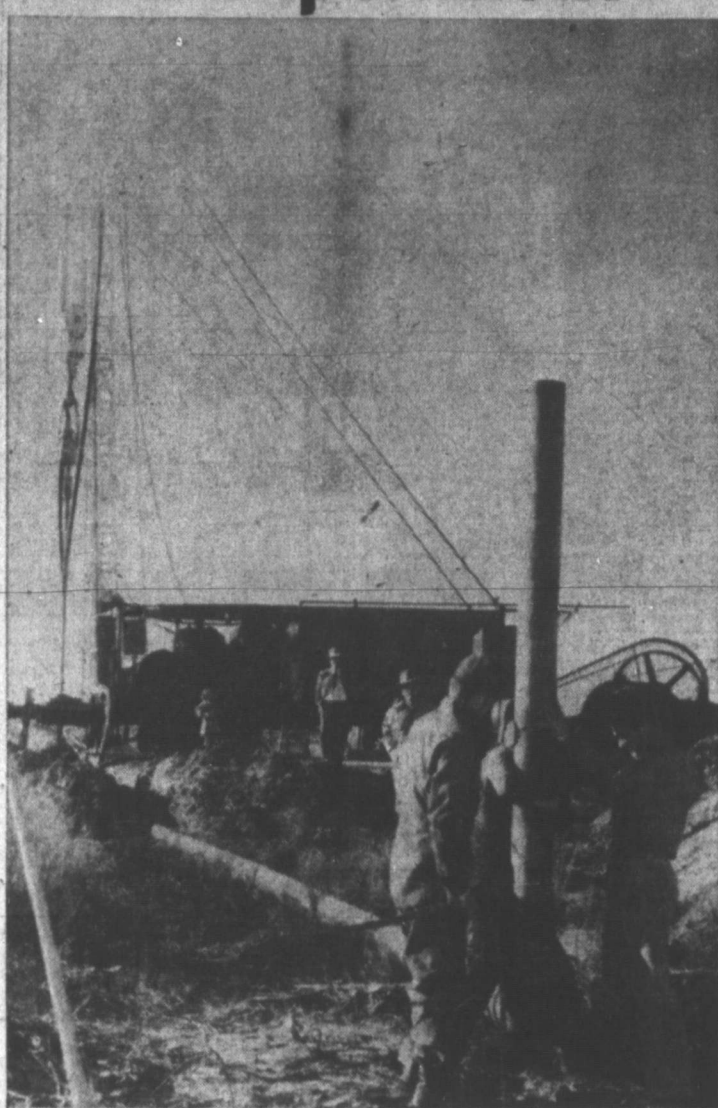

In this area, cable tools have been used almost exclusively for drilling gas wells because of the expense involved in use of rotary. Also there was the mud problem to contend with.

This is how the drilling process was used on the Purley. Operators rigged up the rotary rig using mud to dispose of the rock fragments. At 2,195 feet, operators set 7-inch production pipe, moved off the mud pump, tied in the natural gas line into what formerly had been the mud line, opened a gas escape and disposal line and then resumed operations.

The well was drilled into the producing formation found in this particular well at about 2,220 feet. At this point the gas began blowing down from the escape pipe and a riser was put on the end of the escape. Then the well was drilled in.

Principal advantage of the experiment is the speed of operations. It may take cable tools from one to two weeks to drill a gas well. The rotary can cut time at least 50 per cent—just a matter of a few days. In cable tool operations, the well may remain uncompleted for perhaps a week. A rotary can complete the job in two days.

There may be some advantage too in the fact that a rotary rig equipped to use gas instead of mud will leave a much cleaner hole and possibly eliminate the use of chemicals—this is particularly true in the Hutchinson County area. Chemical treating has little effect in the East Field in Gray County.

Conservation also enters into the picture. With the use of a rotary, operators can complete the well much faster and therefore, waste only a fraction as much gas as would escape in a cable tool operation.

Speed and a clean hole seem to be the primary advantages to the use of the gas.

So far, Cree has only one small rig converted to gas. Conversion involves fire—proofing the rig and making some changes in the ignition system of the rig power units. There is, of course, the ever-present danger of fire and explosion when natural gas is used. In addition, insurance companies demand the rig be well vented.

Just how big a job it might be to convert a large rig has not been determined.

In earlier wells, operators had flared the gas escaping from the disposal line. But, since there was so much grassland around the Purley test, the gas was allowed to escape in its natural state, carrying with it, of course, the cuttings from the formations being drilled.

Back on Diet

CHICAGO, Feb. 5.—"Blossom," a Brookfield zoo skunk, was back on her favorite diet Thursday after a successful "hunger strike." Director Robert Bean ordered a daily ration of spaghetti for Blossom when her donor, queried by zoo men when she refused ordinary fare, revealed she was raised on spaghetti.

Overweight can be a menace to health, but common sense should be the watchword to get rid of the extra pounds. A rigid diet over a protracted period of time can also do harm. Why not try the Barconate way as countless others have done with remarkable results? Barconate contains no harmful drugs. In fact, it contains ingredients to make you feel better. Just go to your drugstore and ask for four ounces of Barconate. Pour into a pint bottle or jar and add 18 ounces of grapefruit juice. Then take 2 tablespoonsful twice a day. That's all there is to it. If the very first bottle doesn't show you the way to take off bulky fat, return the empty bottle for your money back.

Roberts, GOP Oil Can Man Makes Machine Run Smoothly

By PETER EDSON
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — Out in Kansas where he came from, they call Charles W. Roberts, the new Republican National Committee chairman, "an oil can man."

But don't get this wrong. There is no evil connotation meant. What they do mean is that he's a smoothie. He gets things done without friction or fireworks or feuding, rightin' and rousin'.

He has a reputation for being able to bring two opposing political factions together and make them pull as a team. In the last presidential campaign he showed his genius for this by making the new and coltish Citizens - for Eisenhower group of amateurs work in harness with the plodding, elephantine Old Guard, and vice versa.

Everybody now knows the result. And there you have perhaps the best reason as to why he was unanimously chosen Republican National Committee chairman, to succeed Arthur E. Summerfield.

"Wes" Roberts is something unusual for a political "boss." The cartoonists will never be able to caricature him as big and beefy with a high silk hat on his head and a long cigar in his mouth.

Chairman Roberts is about five-feet ten, and he weighs not much more than 150 pounds wringing wet with hard-work perspiration.

He is a wiry, quarterback type of man. He runs to grays - gray hair, now thinning at the top as betrays his 49 years. Gray - blue eyes. He likes gray clothes.

He is extremely quiet. People who worked with him all through the long campaign and the pre-convention primary fight, before that say that he never once lost his temper. And everyone knows there were plenty of good excuses and reasons justifying a political boss in blowing his top.

"Citizens-for-Eisenhower" Head That Wes Roberts has survived this past year without a crackup is something of a miracle. He was brought to Washington last January by Kansas Senators Frank Carlson and Harry Darby, as executive director of the Citizens-for-Eisenhower movement.

He has worked day and night ever since. His immediate staff complains protectively that he sat in his office and at his telephone till two and three in the morning and was back again at eight or nine. He ate his meals off a tray at his desk. He lived in the hotels where he made his headquarters and he never left them.

Being a Kansas dry, he never touched hard liquor. But he always had a supply of soft drinks around and he chain-smoked during all his waking hours.

His helpers warned him continually that if he didn't quit this routine he would collapse, but he kept going. With Herbert Brownell at the Conrad Hilton in Chicago and with Arthur Summerfield at the Washington Hotel in the capital thereafter, he lived on politics. He is Mr. Politics, personified.

The whole mad year did come to a climax of confusion at the inauguration, with nearly every one of the half-million visitors, it seemed, wanting something from

Missouri Asks Bill For Texas Annexation

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Feb. 4 —UP—A Missouri lawmaker has proposed that Texas be given the right to petition "in a spirit of humility" for annexation to the "great state of Missouri."

The bill, sponsored by Democratic Rep. Oliver Molen, said that the last "desperate" effort of Texas to become as great as Missouri was based on its "future tideland millions."

The Texas House of Representatives last week asked President Eisenhower to give Missouri to the Army and Air Force since former President Truman had given the tideland oil of Texas and other coastal states to the Navy.

American meat production has increased 37 per cent during the past 20 years while the number of persons living on ranches has dropped about 33 per cent.

Wofford Coach Is Wyoming Mentor

LARAMIE, Wyo., Feb. 5 —UP— Little change in Wyoming's single-wing football style was anticipated under the coaching of Phil Dickens, whose appointment was announced Wednesday.

Dickens, former football coach at tiny Wofford College, succeeds Bowden Wyatt, Wyoming coach for the past six years and now head coach at the University of Arkansas.

Dickens, like Wyatt, learned his football at the University of Tennessee under Gen. Bob Neyland and the tournament has ended you have played with forty or fifty different experts and can therefore tell stories for weeks about the games of each partner.

Just as in any match point game, the bidding is often highly competitive, with many close decisions for both sides. In today's hand, played in last year's Individual Tournament, Harry Fishbein, famous New York expert, wisely decided to sacrifice at five spades when his vulnerable opponent bid up to five hearts.

West opened the queen of hearts, and East overtook with the king in order to return the queen of diamonds through declarer. Fishbein won the second trick with the ace of diamonds, after studying the situation thoroughly.

It was clear to declarer that he had to lose one trick in each red suit and at least one club. It was therefore impossible to make the contract, but it was still important to get the best possible result.

If South attacked the clubs by himself he was bound to lose two tricks in this suit. For example, if South led the ten of clubs, West would cover with the queen, thus forcing out dummy's ace. Dummy's jack would then be trapped, and the defenders would surely make two club tricks.

The only way to avoid the loss of two club tricks was to make the defenders attack that suit. After winning the second trick with the ace of diamonds, therefore, Fishbein drew one round of trumps, ruffed his last heart in dummy, and then gave up a diamond trick to the defenders.

It didn't matter which defender won the trick. If the opponent on lead happened to return a diamond or a heart, dummy could ruff while South discarded a club loser. And if either defender attacked clubs, South could surely hold the loss in that suit to one trick.

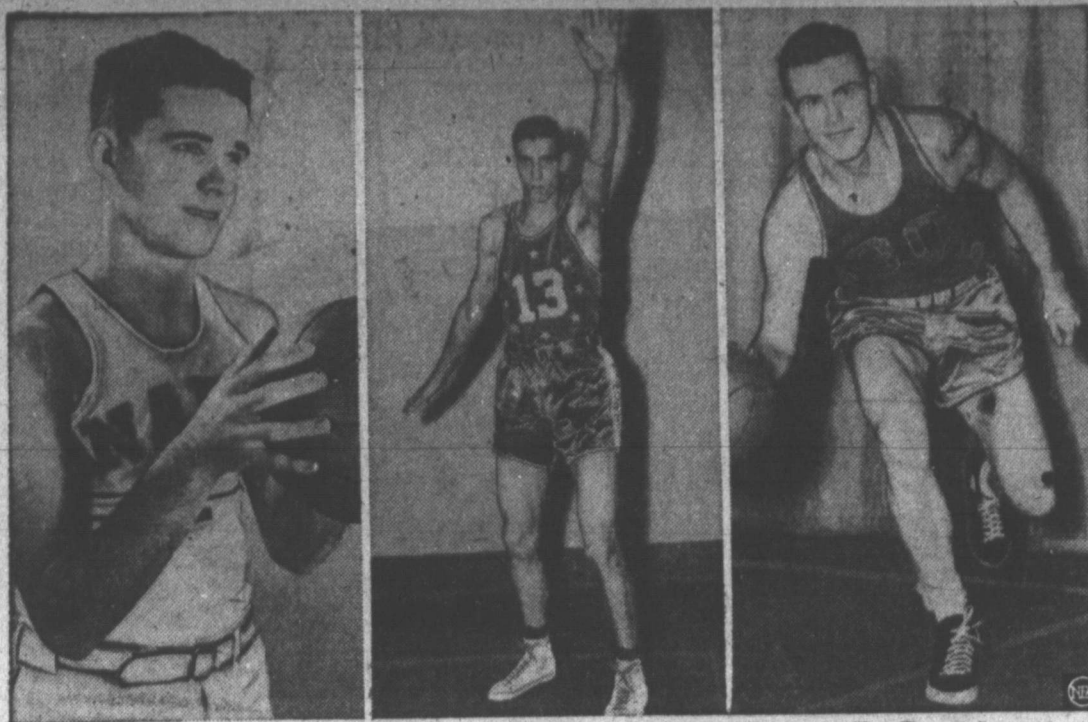

By playing the hand in this way Fishbein got an excellent score with a loss of only 100 points. At many other tables East was permitted to play the hand at five hearts and made his vulnerable game for a score of 550 points.

Girls Suspended
TOKYO, Feb. 5 —UP—Forty-five girls were suspended from Jogakkoan, Japan's most exclusive girls' school, because they waved their hair instead of keeping it braided in pigtails. The school's president said, "If we leave them alone they become gaudy and their is the fear they will attract the attention of delinquents."

Houston 5 Fools M-Valley Experts

HOUSTON, Feb. 5 —UP—The University of Houston, which dumbfounded the experts with its champion Missouri Valley football team, now is baffling its opponents in basketball, too—and making a prophet out of Coach Alden Pasche.

Before the Cougars played their first game this year, Pasche said his team would be a slow-starting outfit that would surprise a lot of people by the end of the season.

It didn't take long for his first statement to be proved. Houston opened with a long road trip in which it was humiliated by powerful Tulsa, 91-60, split two games with Detroit, lost to Wichita by a lopsided score, and returned home with a four-game losing streak.

Lose to St. Louis
They promptly dropped a 71-70 tilt to St. Louis at home.

Then Pasche's second prediction began to take shape and Thursday Houston was the conference's top "giant killer" and the big reason why Oklahoma A&M rests atop the conference standings.

Tulsa's Golden Hurricane, which was receiving national recognition, moved into town for its final "breather" with the Cougars and departed a defeated and wiser team, 61-56.

Just a "hot" night for the Cougars was one version—until last week. Then Houston dropped in on St. Louis, which had handily beaten the Cougars before. Houston took that one, 71-70, on the strength of some slick shooting by towering Elton (Bebo) Cotton and Jack Mosher, who has stayed in the top three among scoring leaders in the conference.

Gets Firm Support
Pasche's prediction got some firm support, too, at the beginning of the second semester. Jack Bell, a brilliant long shot-shooter, returned to the lineup after being sidelined for the first semester by a leg injury.

BALTIMORE, Md., Feb. 5 —UP—Joseph G. Lenoir's troubles began last August when thieves stole his metal prefabricated building from its foundation.

Although Bob Feller of the Cleveland Indians did not have a good year in 1952, he managed to pitch his 11th one-hitter.

Later the thieves returned and stole the foundation.

Wednesday Lenoir was fined $100 for failing to fill the hole where the building once stood.

White Sox Get Ferris Fain On Dotted Line

CHICAGO, Feb. 5 —UP—The Chicago White Sox chalked up "signed" Thursday on another key player in their bid for the 1953 American League pennant.

General manager Frank C. Lane announced it took a "two minute" telephone conversation Wednesday for first baseman Ferris Fain to agree to his contract for the season.

Fain, American League batting champion for the past two seasons, was acquired by the White Sox Jan. 28 in a five-player trade with Philadelphia.

Others in Trade
Along with him to the White Sox came second baseman Robert M. Wilson, among the five unsigned Sox players, while Philadelphia received first baseman Eddie Robinson, utility infielder and Joe DeMaestri and outfielder Ed McGhee.

"Fain's the guy we were after," Lane said, "and he's definitely our first baseman. I'm happy to have him under contract and I'm looking forward to having an outstanding year with him."

Fain, who hit .327 last year and .344 in 1951, reciprocated Lane's kind words.

"I hope I can justify the White Sox' faith in me," a club spokesman quoted him, "by continuing to have the type of season which I had in 1951 and 1952."

Indian Sing Rosen
In Cleveland, meanwhile, general manager Hank Greenberg announced the signing of third baseman Al Rosen, the 26th player to come to terms with the Indians.

Rosen led the American League with 105 runs batted in last season and averaged a .302 average with 25 home runs. He is believed to have signed for $20,000.

On other fronts, third baseman Bill Serena, a .274-hitter in 1952, signed with the Cubs; relief pitcher Jack Crimian, who had an 8-3 record and 2.10 ERA for Rochester, signed with the Cardinals; pitcher Bob Hall came to terms with the Pirates and outfielder Bob Nieman, who hit .289 for the Browns, signed with the Tigers.

The Athletics announced that Sherry Robertson, who batted .250 in 44 games last season, had been given his unconditional release.

Layne Gunning To KO LaStarza

SALT LAKE CITY, Feb. 5 —UP—Rowdy Rex Layne, grimly determined to knock out Roland LaStarza in their heavyweight match at Madison Square Garden Feb. 13, wound up his training bouts Thursday afternoon with four vicious but business-like rounds of sparring.

The Layne contingent will leave by plane Thursday night for New York.

Training camp speculation on the outcome of the fight ranged from the extreme of "Layne won't last five rounds" to "Ol' Rowdy Rex sure looks sharp for this one."

According to manager Marv Jensen, "Rex has never wanted to win so much as this time. He's determined to knock that guy Starza out."

Close Battle For Individual Honors

NEW YORK, Feb. 5 —UP—There was no sign of loosening up Thursday in the crowded race for national individual scoring honors in major college basketball, and it's likely that the battle will carry right into the post-season tournaments for the second straight year.

The three season-long leaders—Ernie Beck of Pennsylvania, Walt Dukes of Seton Hall and Johnny O'Brien of Seattle—still were running in that order, with 27.1, 27.0 and 26.4 points a game respectively.

And still within reach are Washington's Bob Houbregs, with 25.3, and Frank Selvy, of Furman, with 25.2, in games through last Saturday, NCAA service bureau statistics showed Thursday.

That's similar to the situation that existed last year, when Clyde Lovellette of Kansas, Dick Groat of Duke, Chuck Darling of Iowa and Bob Pettit of LSU were within a point of one another in the average right through February, until the tournaments began. Then Lovellette pulled away from everyone with a 34.1-point performance in four NCAA games.

Three of last year's leaders are out of school and the fourth, Pettit, is now sixth with the average missing several games because of pneumonia. Selvy, who has made the greatest gain in recent weeks, was fifth a year ago, and currently forms half of the most productive two-man punch in the country. He and Neil Gordon have accounted for 48.1 points a game, and Gordon, in bringing his average to 22.9 and twelfth place, averaged 32.7 in his last seven starts.

In accuracy, the top men are Chuck Hoxie, of Niagara, and John Doherty of Virginia. Hoxie has a .582 per cent of his shots made.

The St. Louis Cardinals came up with four fine rookie pitchers last season in Stu Miller, Ed Yuba, Harvey Radtke and Wilmer Mizell.

Harrison, 23-year-old Los Angeles youngster who ranks sixth among the light heavyweights, has been battered for eight straight rounds by his wiser and heavier rival. He had been on the canvas once and his left eye was closed tight.

"I'm ready for a little fight any time now," Charles said. "And I think I should be the first one to get a shot at the Marciano-Walcott winner. I plan to keep fighting at least once a month until the championship fight comes."

Charles 187, was declared winner after Dr. Joseph Cahalan, Michigan State Boxing Commission physician, declared that Harrison, 181-14 pounds, was unable to continue.

On other fronts, third baseman Bill Serena, a .274-hitter in 1952, signed with the Cubs; relief pitcher Jack Crimian, who had an 8-3 record and 2.10 ERA for Rochester, signed with the Cardinals; pitcher Bob Hall came to terms with the Pirates and outfielder Bob Nieman, who hit .289 for the Browns, signed with the Tigers.

The Athletics announced that Sherry Robertson, who batted .250 in 44 games last season, had been given his unconditional release.

Layne Gunning To KO LaStarza

SALT LAKE CITY, Feb. 5 —UP—Rowdy Rex Layne, grimly determined to knock out Roland LaStarza in their heavyweight match at Madison Square Garden Feb. 13, wound up his training bouts Thursday afternoon with four vicious but business-like rounds of sparring.

The Layne contingent will leave by plane Thursday night for New York.

Training camp speculation on the outcome of the fight ranged from the extreme of "Layne won't last five rounds" to "Ol' Rowdy Rex sure looks sharp for this one."

According to manager Marv Jensen, "Rex has never wanted to win so much as this time. He's determined to knock that guy Starza out."

Stork Plays A Joke

The statisticians who chart the flight of the stork have missed the boat.

Since 1946, there has been a steady decline in the marriage rate. 1952, the experts predicted, would see a drop in the birth rate.

But according to national figures compiled by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, a new record was set in 1952 of 3,875,000 births. Last year was the sixth in succession in which the baby crop was in excess of three and a half million bundles!

What is happening, the company's experts explain, is that the old-fashioned custom of large families is gaining in popularity. The 1952 crop, in view of the decline in marriage, reflects a large number of second, third and fourth children.

Last year's infant mortality rate, it was pointed out, also was the lowest of record, so that the chances of survival for the 1952 arrival is better than ever before.

For many business lines, all this activity on the part of the stork is as good news as it is for individual parents. Early last year when retail sales as a whole were lagging, sales of infants' and children's wear were showing gains. The toy business last Christmas was never better.

The entire building industry will benefit. Apparently, too, the market of the future for homebuilders will be in large homes. The great majority of homes built since the end of the war have been four and five room dwellings, often dining roomless, and obviously inadequate for families of even moderate size.

All homeowners, of course, won't be able to go out and buy a large home as the need arises. The difference in cost between three and four bedroom homes is often more than the cost of just one room. Larger homes usually are located on more expensive lots and are built with less general thought of economy in the planning. Therefore, it is predicted, remodeling and "adding to" will have a great vogue in the next few years.

And in the matter of home remodeling, an increasing number of young parents are finding, under the pressure of economic necessity, that they can swing a hammer and wield a paint brush as well as — well, almost as well as a professional.

College Labor Market

New college graduates are being offered higher salaries than ever before, but there still won't be enough men to meet the demand, according to a nationwide survey by Dr. Frank S. Endicott, Northwestern University director of placement.

Endicott has studied the college labor market annually for seven years.

A study of 176 major corporations showed that the average starting salary now is $304 a month. The average was $235 in 1948.

Most businessmen think they get their money's worth at present salaries paid college men, but about 39 per cent of the personnel directors disagree, contending that the starting rate is too high compared with that paid older employees.

Industry hopes to hire 25 per cent more technical men than previously despite the shortage of engineering graduates.

Endicott pointed out that about 75 per cent of all college seniors are due for induction into the armed services, but many companies are willing to hire a man despite imminent induction because experience shows that 83 per cent of all college men entering service eventually return to their former companies.

The over-all demand for non-technical graduates is up slightly — about eight per cent — mostly in sales, merchandising and general business. However, a third of the companies said they plan to hire fewer non-technical graduates and Endicott thinks this may indicate a "levelling-off" in the demand for non-technical men in 1954.

Endicott said he found that, on the average, each of the 176 companies had to interview 151 seniors for every 1 man employed. The companies had to make 24 job offers to find 10 who would accept.

Competition

It has been observed that our economic system is a circle divided into three arcs — production, distribution, and consumption.

Distribution is the link between the producer and the consumer. Everything in our economy centers around the retailer. Everything is geared to meet the moment when a consumer walks into a retail establishment and looks around to choose an article.

This country is famed for its miracles of mass-production. The miracles of mass-distribution are equally outstanding. Two-thirds of our businesses are retail stores.

All the incredible production of our farms and factories is funneled into them and through them to the consuming public.

Retailing, moreover, is a near-perfect example of what makes this country tick. It includes every conceivable kind of store. Some are very large, some are very small. Some are individually owned and some are part of chain systems. All have one thing in common. They must compete for the customer's favor every business day — and they must please him with their prices or their services or some such inducement if they are to survive.

Visitors from abroad — and especially those from so-called "primitive" countries — are usually amazed when they first enter a typical American retail store. The abundance and attractiveness of the goods on display seem all but unbelievable. What they are seeing is competitive enterprise in action.

BETTER JOBS

By R. C. HOILES
"Engineers — Scientific And Social"

I am continuing to quote from Ben Morell's address before the Society of Automotive Engineers on the subject of "Engineers — Scientific and Social."

As stated in the first issue, Ben Morell is Chairman of the Board of Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation and is one of the few big business men who can vividly defend free enterprise and show its advantages.

Under the heading of "The Right to Plan" he states:

"Now, I do not deny to any person the right to make any plan he chooses — whether it be a plan to fly to the moon or a plan to create a superior human being. But I do deny to the planner the right to force me, or any other person, to conform to his plan."

"We scientific engineers do not need laws to force people to adopt our plans or to buy our products. I believe that each of us is willing to leave the decision to the competitive market where all persons have complete freedom to buy or not to buy, to join or not to join, to invest or not to invest."

"But these would-be managers-at-large of society are not willing to extend freedom of choice to others than themselves. They must have the power of government — the police force — behind their plans or they are helpless. They know that in almost all cases a free people in a free market would reject their wares. That is why they want to abolish the market economy and force people to conform to their plans or to suffer the penalty of fines and imprisonment."

"For example, I am an unwilling 'stockholder' in the Tennessee Valley Authority. I continue to pay money into that project for the simple reason that the police force will use violence upon me should I refuse. I am willing to sell my share of TVA, and of all similar welfare projects, at a large discount. In fact, I would give my equity to these humanitarians if they would only stop forcing me to subsidize their schemes."

"They claim they can 'prove conclusively' that the Tennessee Valley Authority is a great financial success which regularly returns a profit to the people of America. If this is so, why do they come to Congress almost every year for additional appropriations? Why do they not offer stock in the open market where the people can have a choice?"

"The answer is simple: A free people would reject the stock. If this were not so, there would have been no reason to make their participation compulsory in the first instance."

"These promoters with the public purse have been planning a Missouri Valley Authority and various other such authorities for many years. And they have been using your money to propagandize the gullible into believing that the projects are 'economically sound'; that they will pay back far more than they cost. If this is so, why do they demand that the police force, government, recruit their stockholders?"

Good Intentions

"Now, these social busy-bodies may have the best intentions in the world. Their personal lives may be above reproach. Their primary motive may be only to 'do good for the people.' I question neither their intentions nor their sincerity. But I do question their belief that good can be accomplished through the use of violence. To illustrate my point, let us consider the French Revolution. The people rebelled against a government that forced them to conform to its decrees on wages, prices, profits, employment, housing, and similar matters."

"Now, it would be logical to suppose that the revolutionists against a government of favoritism would reject favoritism and entrust the market and economic relationships to a market and a society where freedom of choice was controlling."

"It is true that some effort was made in this direction in the early stages of the French Revolution. But soon there came to power Robespierre — a man of unquestioned personal integrity and habits — a dedicated humanitarian. He became the foremost 'social engineer' of his day. Here is his master plan for re-creating the people of France."

"In our country," he said, "we desire to establish morality, honesty, principles, duties, reason, contempt of vice, pride, greatness of soul, love of glory, good people, merit, genius, truth, happiness, greatness of man, generosity, strength — in short, we desire to substitute all the virtues of a republic for all the vices of a monarchy."

"Who can disagree with those noble objectives? Certainly, I do not, any more than I disagree with those of most of our social planners. But Robespierre had no faith in people. He rejected any thought that the people would develop those desirable virtues by their own choice if left free to do so. So, he decided to establish virtue by the use of violence; to use the power of government to force all people to conform to his plan for making them better. He became known as the 'humanitarian with the guillotine.' Those who refused to conform to his concepts of morality and economic behavior were fined or imprisoned or executed."

"When it came his own turn to bow to the guillotine, his defense was that of all humanitarians who rely on the force of government for the accomplishment of their good works. He said that his every act had been 'for the good of the people'; that he was only trying to help them to peace, prosperity, and happiness."

National Whirligig Tariff Looms As Controversial Issue Between Ike, Congress

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON — A major and immediate cause of controversy between President Eisenhower and Congress is the tariff.

While not free traders, they favor a sharp reduction of duties for selfish and idealistic reasons. Both Eisenhower and Dulles, in their recent speeches, indicated that they shared this sentiment.

Freer Trade Backers — The list of organizations backing and opposing freer trade measures the scope and seriousness of the conflict. It is, perhaps, the first time that a Republican President has had to face such a split in his ranks on this issue.

Normal Trade vs. Financial Aid — A principal assignment for the traveling Dulles-Stassen mission is to ascertain whether grants and loans of billions — $40 billion since the end of World War II — can be replaced by larger American purchases of foreign goods.

Inked at their present role of American warlords, Churchill, May, Adenauer and de Gasperi want to rebuild their nations by resumption of normal trade rather than financial aid. So do Japanese.

Even the opponents of a more generous trade arrangement such as lower tariffs complain against the heavy economic and military obligations the United States has assumed in the collective security program. But they do not like the only alternative, which is greatly expanded imports.

The Doctor Says

By EDWIN J. JOHNSON, M.D.

The expression "limpy" as applied to the British, and particularly to British sailors, has an interesting origin.

Years ago many sailors in the British Navy and Merchant Marine had to be at sea for many months at a time, during which they were often completely deprived of fresh fruits and vegetables. As a result, many suffered from a disease known as scurvy.

Someone discovered that if a sufficient quantity of limes (or lemons) was carried on board ship and the sailors made to take these at reasonably frequent intervals, scurvy became far less frequent — hence the name "limpy."

It is, of course, known now that scurvy is brought on by an insufficient supply of vitamin C, or ascorbic acid in the diet. It can be prevented, consequently, by citrus fruits, which contain large quantities of this vitamin.

The vitamin is also present in green vegetables, fresh fruit juices, tomatoes, some root vegetables, and in small amounts in milk. The disease can be avoided by including enough of these foods in the diet.

Scurvy comes on slowly. Loss of weight, a feeling of weakness, vague pains in the legs, and paleness of the skin are typical. Soon the gums begin to become swollen and spongy, and bleed easily when brushed or rubbed. The changes in the gums may become so bad that the teeth loosen and fall out.

If vitamin C remains away from the diet for a long time, the bone of the jaw can actually decay. The breath becomes foul and the tongue swollen and red. Bleeding under the mucous membrane of the mouth is common. Gradually the skin becomes more dry and rough.

Swelling around the ankles is common, the heart palpitates and its beat becomes more feeble and irregular; mental depression is characteristic. These symptoms come with advanced scurvy and are not seen so often now that we know how they can be prevented.

In mild forms, there may be only inconspicuous signs, such as poor healing of wounds, a tendency to certain infectious diseases, easy bleeding when cut, and increased susceptibility to ulcers of the stomach.

LOOKING SIDWAYS

By WHITNEY BOLTON

Every now and then a man has to throw caution to the winds and brave all manner of perils to get a story worth telling. This one I got backstage at the Century Theater where Jose Greco was getting ready to shut down a local appearance of his Spanish dancing troupe and take once more to the road. Jose is an old Brooklyn boy who has done more to restore the fires and flames of authentic Spanish dancing than anyone since Argentina who, indeed, was his sponsor.

What I wanted to see, I saw, and what I wanted to see, I saw. A pint-sized female object with a swirl of black hair on the head end of her and feet flashed so fast they looked like a blur.

Against Wilson's automobile or Humphrey's various steel and solid properties are located in all Republican territory. Both Detroit and Cleveland went heavily Democratic last November.

With Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act expiring on June 12, Ike must soon decide whether he will be a Republican President or a world leader.

Fair Enough.... Pegler Scores Another Scoop With Story Of $81,500 Pay-Off

By WESTBROOK PEGLER
(Copyright, 1953, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Some stories ripen slowly. This one has taken about 25 years since Tex Rickard first told it to me.

William E. McCormack, the notorious Mr. Big of the New York waterfront, took the stand before the New York State Crime Commission last Thursday and said the story of his extortion of $81,500 from Rickard by means of a shake-down at the time of the Dempsey-Firpo fight was "an alcoholic's dream."

The story he referred to was mine. It was published on Oct. 3, 1951.

The next day, last Friday, Francis X. McQuade, a retired New York magistrate who was a partner in the New York Giants at the time of the shake-down, sat himself in the same chair that Mr. Big had occupied and identified McCormack as the one who not only extorted the money from Rickard, but returned it to him. McCormack, in his magisterial chambers.

The Dempsey-Firpo fight was pulled off in the Polo Grounds and Rickard promoted the show in a business arrangement the details of which are immaterial here. The important facts are that Bill McCormack, with a reputation for physical strength and brutality so

Ad in Guilford, Maine, Register: "For Sale: One new milk goat, very gentle and a nice milker, $25. Have to sell her to an individual. Can't sell her to the Government because they have got so many more goats than they already have a bigger surplus problem than potatoes."

"Will, better stop looking at the milk goat that you're married to. Will — listen, brother, you can still look at a menu, even though you're on a diet."

from the caves outside Granada, and I haven't seen anything like her since old Escudero came over here 20-odd years ago and set the woods afire. Until I saw Gracia del Sacramento I felt Escudero would do me for a lifetime and when I got to see Gitano, the Gypsy bullfighter, in action I knew my cup was running over. I later got to be good friends with fiery little Gitano in Mexico City and he even taught me a few passes with a cape just so I could go to the matadors' cafe in Mexico City and not have to blush for incompetence. Escudero and I once swapped a couple of glasses of Manzanilla and he showed me how to kick heels against the floor in true Flamenco style, but that ended when I broke my heel and would have been hard put to it to crush a dandelion under same.

But a third Gypsy, apparently, was in my tea leaves, and I would say that Gracia is the one. She ought to be the sensation of America inside a year and if properly handled and shown to the public will be. This is a true Gypsy whirlwind doing what comes naturally.

The dancing woods are filled with bizarre and usually untruthful stories describing how a great dancer was found. The true story usually is that a great dancer was found in a professional dance studio beating his or her brains out trying to master one of the most difficult of all the arts. They don't come off obscure sidewalks or from Park Avenue or railroad tunnels. They come from long and unrelenting work in a dismal, cold and drafty barn of a place where the piano is out of tune and the air smells of perspiring dancers. So you can put aside all the pretty yarns about the unusual origins.

Even Gracia hasn't an unusual origin. Not for her. She was born and brought up in the gypsy caves outside Granada in Spain and I imagine that she fell asleep in infancy to the clomp of hard-soled feet and the soft concatenation of gypsy dialect. She is now an extremely young girl who was dancing in the firelight between two caves when Greco came walking along not looking for dancers or conversation. He wanted to watch gypsies at a juerga, performing for their own amusement the old flamenco rhythms. He stopped to watch this girl because in spite of what you hear — not all gypsy dancers are wonderful, some are all right and some are plain terrible. More of the latter than the former. Being a Spanish gypsy doesn't automatically create a great dancer. But Gracia was special. Greco watched her for ten minutes and was fascinated enough to look into her family connections, knowing that he could not offer her a job direct. He found a grandfather acting as her guardian and chaperone. Yes, the old man said, Gracia might go to New York with the troupe if grandpa came along. Greco doesn't like to pay two salaries for one performer, so he demurred. But then he discovered that grandpa, Manuel Hidalgo, was a hot hand with a gypsy guitar. So he made Manuel a guitarist for the troupe and brought both of them along. Audiences are seeing Gracia as she is: an untamed, a little spiteful who has had no training but has an enormous talent for creativity and improvisation along the lines of a city on fire. To see her do a bit of a tap to see uninhibited gypsy dancing at its most spectacular and eruptive.

A year hence you'll remember, maybe, that I tipped you off to her.

fearsome that one great ex-champion heavyweight and other men of famous physical prowess go in fear of him, has been identified from the stand, under oath, after all this time as the graffer who shook down Rickard and thus betrayed the trust and friendship of Gov. Al Smith.

Smith had put McCormack into the License Commission as a loyal friend for the sole purpose of protecting his administration from scandal. Smith hated prizefighting, but Jimmy Walker, his junior in the Tammany political machine, was a fan and had put through the law which legalized fighting after a lapse of four years.

Smith didn't trust Walker or his friends. He knew corruption was a natural condition in the racket. But he figured that his friend, good old Bill McCormack, the waterfront slugger, and his former partner in a trucking business, would be just the man to keep things clean. He knew the crooks; he was a hard-fisted, direct action man. The racketeers would take no liberties with him.

Not long before he died, I called on Smith, the retired to his insecure job as manager of the Empire State Building, and asked him the straight of it. He told me the facts, much the same as Judge McQuade testified last Friday. And Smith added that he had Bill McCormack off his list for double-crossing him and never acknowledged him again.

Bearing in mind that McCormack denied all, you are now invited to read excerpts from McQuade's testimony.

He qualified by saying that he had been a magistrate from 1911 until 1928 and treasurer of the National Exhibition Company, the owner of the Polo Grounds, from 1919 to 1928. He knew McCormack when McCormack was "Licensing Commissioner" with authority over the issuance of licenses for prize-fights. Charlie Stoneham, an old bucket-shop and race-track operator, was "head" of the company.

McQuade said there was "conversation" between him and Stoneham about the gross receipts of the Dempsey-Firpo fight and, asked for the "substance" thereof, said Stoneham "sealed me into his office and told me about Rickard handing over to the Licensing Commission — Commissioner — $81,500 which, in Stoneham's opinion, he had no right to do."

"Did Mr. Stoneham tell you what that $81,500 represented in connection with the gross receipts so far as the National Exhibition Company was concerned?"

"Yes sir."

"Was it 25 per cent of the gross receipts?"

"Substantially that. Now just whether it was 25 per cent I'm not clear on."

There may be new history arising here. Newspaper records of the time put the gross receipts at $1,815,000. While this does include the movies and radio, those were peanut auxillaries in those days. Ed Mulrooney, who was Police Commissioner under Jimmy Walker and has known about this episode all these years and who is now a member of the very time mission which usually is hearing the testimony, tells with amusement of a deal on Rickard's part which may have distorted the true figures. He said Tex sold a lot of tickets from wagons in the streets at the last hour. The records of these sales necessarily were very informal.

Continuing, McQuade said he told Stoneham he would try to get the money back. Stoneham, he said, had told him that there would have been no license unless Rickard put up the money.

McQuade said he called McCormack to his magisterial chambers a short time after the fight and "demanded" that he return to him within two hours the $81,500 which he had received from Tex Rickard for his permission to let the fight go on. He didn't say anything, but went out and got the $81,500 within two hours and returned it to me.

Smith told me he sent word to McCormack ordering him to return the money to Tex and told him he was through both as his friend and as license commissioner. Jim Farley is skittish in discussing sensitive matters, but he says Charlie Murphy, the chief of Tammany Hall, got into the act and passed the word. In this crisis, Smith picked Farley to be a member of the Boxing Commission and in so doing he sent him to Walker who told him the whole story as he knew it.

Rickard told me the money was his own, putting the figure at $80,000. He said that when he asked McCormack to give it back, McCormack told him he had handed it to McQuade in a taxicab and sent him to McQuade. Tex said he called on McQuade and Stoneham in their office and that McQuade offered to fight him for it.

McQuade, though old, sick and feeble now, was a tough brawler in his days. Part of his nose is missing and the story went that somebody had bitten it off.

Tex said he offered to fight McQu

Chiang's Troops Considered 'Bargain In World Strategy'

EDITOR'S NOTE: The author of world-wide planning, says Gen. William Chase, head of American Military Aid Group in Formosa, is a personal friend of the top Chinese Nationalist personalities. By GERALDINE FITCH, NEA Special Correspondent, TAIPEI, Formosa. (NEA) — The Nationalist troops on Formosa are a bargain in strategic value toward Indo-China.

THE FACES OF CHIANG'S MEN — "For a few hundred dollars per man per year, a first-class fighting force of half a million men."

"For a few hundred dollars per man per year," he explained, "you can have a first-class fighting force of half a million men."

Gen. Chase would make no guess as to where Nationalist forces might first be used—in Korea, Indo-China, or for an invasion of the Chinese mainland. His job is to get the 500,000 soldiers ready, and that's no small task. But he was relaxed and affable after five days of strenuous military conferences with his own staff officers and those of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

"The Chinese navy and air force could lay an effective blockade along the China coast within a matter of hours," Gen. Chase said.

There are strong indications that something of a "bootleg blockade" is probably going on even now. The Chinese Nationalist Navy was quick to reach the sinking merchant ship Avanti off the Red coast and rescue its personnel not long ago. The Chinese Air Force was on its toes when a Chinese Communist tried to hijack a Philippine Air Lines plane this winter.

"There's a high potential here," Gen. Chase told NEA. "How soon this team is ready to play in the big league depends on Washington. When the time comes for action we're going to need a lot of ammunition soonest."

This sentiment is echoed in a statement to 600 Chinese and American officers and newsmen last December when he said: "We have received some hardware this past year. We're going to receive a lot more of it this next year. I think business will be picking up this year, and I think you know what I mean."

Some of that "pick-up in business" is now indicated in reports of Nationalist guerrilla forces already operating on or close to the mainland under direct command from Formosa.

In his interview, Gen. Chase said he felt that President Eisenhower "definitely" felt the strategic importance of Formosa. When Gen. Chase met the new President in Korea, he said, he had "every opportunity to brief him on all phases of the situation in Formosa."

Last October Chiang Kai-shek retired some 131 generals and admirals who were over-age, physically unfit, or had reached maximum term of service. It is the new younger officers who will lead the next move of the Nationalist troops.

Asked if these new generals had learned the importance of co-operation, or would be inclined to fight individual brands of war, Gen. Chase said "the high command, through the school system, is getting the modern viewpoint. As for the younger officers, he said, "they're tops."

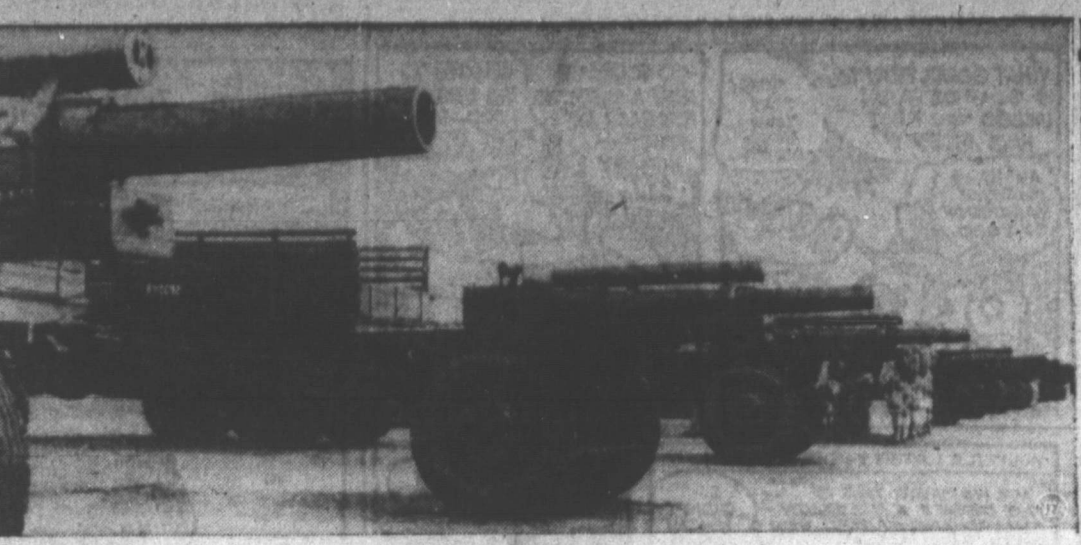

Tax Lien Filed
BEAUMONT, Feb. 5.—UP—An income tax lien for $773,207.30 has been filed against Mrs. Ellen English Whitehead, formerly of Houston and now the wife of a North Carolina manufacturer. The government said Mrs. Whitehead owed that sum on income received during the years 1942 through 1946.

Fatal Collision
DALLAS, Feb. 5.—UP—A Dallas man died when his automobile collided head-on with another car south of Grand Prairie in Dallas county Wednesday. Police said they had ordered an autopsy to see if the victim, Edward Clinton Lewis, 5, died of a heart attack. Lewis had been stricken several times before, they said.

Good Performance
SALTA, Argentina, Feb. 5.—UP—Radio actor Pepe Margin gave such a convincing performance as a villain in a radio mystery show that a group of irate citizens beat him into unconsciousness when he left the studio.

Body Found
DALLAS, Feb. 5.—UP—The body of a Dallas Negro was found Wednesday on the Rock Island railroad tracks near Inwood Road in Dallas county. Police said he apparently started across the tracks Tuesday night and was run over by a Fort Worth & Denver passenger train.

Remembers Marilyn When She Was Plain

WITH U. S. 3RD DIVISION, Korea, Feb. 5.—UP—Pvt. Gerry Grismar of Kaukauna, Wis., remembers Marilyn Monroe from the fifth grade, but she is not his pinup girl.

His wife is, he said.

"I sat next to Marilyn when we were in the fifth grade," he said. "She was a quiet little girl and didn't flirt with any of the boys and none of the boys gave her any special attention."

Marilyn may be beautiful now, Grismar said, but in the fifth grade "she was very plain looking."

Worker Killed

DALLAS, Feb. 5.—UP—Roy Albert Allen, 61-year-old Dallas electrical contractor was killed and his wife seriously injured Wednesday when their car collided at an intersection with a dump truck. The impact of the collision knocked Allen into the street and the truck ran over him. He was Dallas' fourth traffic victim in 1953.

Airman And Air Force Show Differences In Opinion

By HARMON W. NICHOLS
WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—UP—At hand is a letter from an Air Force ground mechanic who has all kinds of gripes about Guam, where he is stationed.

The message was addressed to me, and I showed it to the Air Force. The services commonly do not bust a man because he gripes, but his name is not used here anyway. Here are the airman's complaints and answers by the Air Force.

Airman: Ninety per cent of the Air Force personnel on Guam have volunteered for action in Korea duty to escape the boredom here.

Air Force: It should be noted that even if the volunteer rate is higher from Guam (which we do not know, for sure) it should be remembered that the tour of duty in Korea is shorter — only 12 months. And at the present time Korea is nearly as safe as Bolling Air Force Base (in Washington, D.C.), as far as enemy action is concerned for A. F. ground personnel.

Cases of Insanity
Airman: Since I have been here 11 months, I have seen an awful lot of men go home with discharge of various types, the most popular being medical. There are also cases of insanity. One guy I know purposely broke a law just so he could get a dishonorable discharge and get out of here. He got it all right, plus $8 to 12 months in the stockade.

Air Force: The man has no knowledge of how many men are discharged for medical or insanity or other reasons, since such cases are evacuated to the U.S. from overseas stations and hospitalized, returned to duty or discharged. However, our rate of such evacuations from Guam is as low as any similar area.

Airman: All our food has to be shipped in cold storage. Our eggs and milk come powdered. The water tastes like 100 per cent iodine.

Imported Royalty Is Giving A Toney Air To Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 5.—UP—Imported foreign royalty is giving Hollywood a toney atmosphere. Even a genuine Arabian prince has turned up washing cars in a hotel parking lot.

Queens, dukes and other blue-bloods from across the oceans are becoming settlers of the celluloid jungle along with the movie folk, sun worshippers and vegetarians in long, white beads.

The Arabian prince is Eidi Muly Hassan Abdullah Ben Sisi Muly Ali Mohammed Cheriff, or Hassan Ali, for short. He washes and parks Cadillacs and limousines at the Beverly Wilshire hotel for the princely salary of $62.50 a week, plus tips.

He never lets the customers know, however, his claims that his great uncle was the assassinated King Abdullah of Transjordan or that he's a direct descendant of Mohammed.

"When in Rome—" shrugged the 21-year-old prince, who hides his

Deeds, Not Words . . . Lifting Of Neutrality Ban Raises Lots Of Fuss, Fury

By PHIL NEWSON
United Press Foreign Analyst
A lot of fuss and fury, as well as what seems to be wishful thinking, has resulted from President Eisenhower's announcement lifting the "neutrality" ban on Formosa. It was a first step in his "deeds not words" policy and it was:

1. An attempt to wrest world initiative from the Communists and give it to our side.
2. A needed shot in the arm for the American public which is tired of the Korean stalemate.

Reactions on the homefront and from abroad went to the extremes of optimism and pessimism. Neither extreme seems justified. From here on, it is likely that the President's future steps will be determined by the success of the action already taken.

Don't Mean New Steps

Thus points one and two do not necessarily lead—as has been forecast—to points three and four which are:

1. That a U. S. naval blockade of the Red China coast is imminent.
2. Or that we plan an immediate all-out offensive in Korea.

When former President Truman ordered the U. S. Seventh Fleet to brown crowd is the queen of Egypt, Nadi, mother of Farouk, Nazi, her daughter and son-in-law and their new-born baby live in an Italian-style white stucco mansion in fashionable Benedict Canyon. They loil by their pool and give patio parties like the other Californians.

Once when I called on the queen there were empty soda bottles stacked by the side door, and her son-in-law answered the doorbell in a pair of brief, blue bathing trunks.

But the "star" of the crest-and-neutrality" Formosa, the order was designed more than anything else to protect Formosa and the Nationalist Chinese from attack from the mainland by the Chinese Reds.

Later on, the order had the opposite effect in that it was assurance to the Reds that they could attack us in Korea without fear of attack from Formosa on their flank. President Eisenhower's order removes that guaranty.

Aside from the international complications, a sea blockade of Red China could not be put into effect simply by signing a piece of paper.

More Ships Needed
It would require a great many more ships than the fleet now has in service. Even if we wanted to do it, our "mohtball" fleet could not go into service overnight.

Furthermore, there would be the question of the Russian-controlled ports of Dairen and Port Arthur—not to mention British Hong Kong. Unless those ports also were blockaded, any naval blockade would be useless.

But we are not likely to take a chance on drawing Russia actively into the conflict now; nor would Reds an excuse to take over Hong we initiate any action giving the Kong until after long and serious consultation with the British.

An allied offensive in Korea is possible—but again not right now. We simply don't have the troops there to do it. But, more South Koreans are coming into the line all the time and a later action, combined with an amphibious assault in the neighborhood of the North Korean capital of Pyongyang at Korea's narrow waist, does seem possible.

JOHNSON ★ IN HOLLYWOOD ★

By

NEA Staff

Correspondent
HOLLYWOOD—(NEA) — Exclusively Yours: The love story of Ernie Pyle and his wife, written by his long-time friend, Paige Cavannaugh, is being blueprinted for the screen as a possible sequel to "The Story of G. I. Joe."

Producer Lester Cowan and Cavannaugh are huddling on the idea with Herb Shriner playing the role of Cavannaugh as well as narrating the film. Herb's making his debut for Cowan in "Main Street to Broadway." Burgess Meredith created the Pyle role but Cowan says he'll need a younger actor if he films the sequel.

Doctors have given Jerry Lewis a warning that if he again injures his knee he'll risk permanent stiffness. He'll probably wear a brace when doing his strenuous comedy routines.

The flash from the "Mogambo" location site in darkest Africa is that Clark Gable and Grace Kelly, one of the dolls in the film, are in a romantic whirl. Zsa Zsa Gabor, hubby George Sanders and David Niven will be co-starred in "The Little Hut," to be filmed in England. It's a love triangle on a desert island. Now it's the department store industry wailing that movies are libeling the retail trade with too many gum-chewing sales clerks and pompous floor-walkers.

Waker Upper?
As a TV panel show guest, Sonny Tufts was tossed this problem by a housewife: "My husband goes to sleep at the movies. What should I do?"

"Buy him a bag of popcorn," flipped Tufts.

"No Escape," a murder mystery thriller, is Sonny's second movie since his return from England and three others are being discussed. He's beaming:

"The same guys who sat around sneering, 'SONNY TUFTS!' haven't worked in six months."

Attention Errol Flynn, Frank Sinatra and Tommy Manville:

Katy Jurando, the Mexican star who zoomed to prominence in "High Noon," says she wants to marry an American man.

"They are so deerfoot from Mexican men," she tells it. "They stay home and pay attention to their wives. American men are one-way men — they stay put and stay faithful."

Arthur Blake, the impressionist, is lamenting:

"The stars of today study Shakespeare. Their hero is Oscar or bust. But give me those old silent beauties. Who hollered and threw things and cussed.

But alas, they are gone. And those beds shaped like a swan. Are all gathering cobwebs and dust."

Hedy Lamarr fired her attorney, who combed the money haystacks without success to find financing for her film property, "The Book of Esther." Lana Turner's telling pals that she and daughter, Cheryl, are off to Europe in February. Alec Guinness will drop in on Hollywood this year. Not for a film, though. He'll be finishing up his Canadian tour in a British stage hit.

Downcast Eyes

Jack Benny was asked to pose with Marie Wilson at a restaurant.

"Aw, Jack, you dropped your eyes when the shutter clicked, you looked down," protested the lenser.

"Where else are you supposed to look when you're with Marie Wilson?" dead-panned Benny.

Get ready to scream, Hollywood. Sir Michael Balcon, who produced British comedies, is getting ready to film "The Love Lottery." It's about an English actor who is imported by Hollywood and becomes "artistically corrupted!"

Jimmy Stewart and speed flier Joe De Bona will take another crack at the coast-to-coast speed record. De Bona set the record in Stewart's plane in 1951, then Paul Mantz cracked it.

It's back to a gun-totin' man-ambulator Joe Barbara Stanwyck in "Blowing Wild" after she completes her goodie-goodie character in "All I Desire."
