Demonstrators vow to demolish airport

By TERRY A. ANDERSON

TOKYO (AP) — Riot police stormed a blockhouse on private land near the runway of Japan's new airport today to try to remove a steel tower built on it by protesters to block the flight path. It was the third day of rioting by thousands of Japanese who oppose the new airport.

Demonstrators occupied and wrecked the airport's control tower in bloody fighting Sunday and vowed to continue their attacks on the $1 billion field, which had been scheduled to open Thursday. Airport authorities say the opening of the field at Narita 41 miles northeast of Tokyo probably will have to be delayed again.

Narita Airport was built to take the load of international air traffic off Tokyo's Haneda Airport, which is to be used primarily for domestic flights. The foes of the airport include environmentalists, farmers who were forced to sell their land for the field and radical students and leftists who see it as an anti-government issue and claim the airport might be used for military purposes.

"We'll employ everything we can. We'll fight until we see the airport abolished," said Issaku Tomura, the leader of the Anti-Airport League.

Airport officials said attackers smashed radar, communications and meteorology equipment in the control room.

The four-story blockhouse police attacked today was built on private land to aid the anti-airport movement and to serve as a foundation for the 60-foot tower that blocks the flight path.

Also today, about two dozen police climbed the boom of a large crane and plucked four radicals from the tower. Then they started cutting a hole in the blockhouse wall to get those inside.

Demonstrations, riots, attacks and other blocking tactics have already delayed the opening of the airport for six years, and five persons have been killed in battles there.

At least 20 persons were injured Sunday when some 6,500 militants clashed repeatedly with some of the 13,000 riot police guarding the airport while 8,000 more demonstrated in the town of Narita, three miles away. Police said 115 persons were arrested.

The clothing of a demonstrator at the new Tokyo International Airport catches fire Sunday when contents of a fire bomb he is attempting to throw are spilled. His condition remains undetermined.

Empain released, now in seclusion

By PAUL CHUTKOW

PARIS (AP) — The kidnappers of Edouard-Jean Empain kept the Belgian industrialist hooded, ill-fed and chained to a bed during nine weeks in captivity and cut off the tip of his little finger to send to authorities as proof he was being held, French police said today.

Empain, chairman of one of the Empain-Schneider industrial group, one of Europe's largest, was released on the outskirts of Paris Sunday night. He was in seclusion at his Paris apartment today.

Police Director Jean Ducret told a news conference that three days after he was abducted, Empain's kidnappers sliced off the tip of his little finger and sent it to police to convince authorities they had the 40-year-old Belgian nobleman.

There had been unconfirmed reports of such a mutilation.

The wound was left to heal by itself, Ducret said. He said Empain was kept chained to a small bed in such a way that he could not stretch out.

"He suffered greatly," Ducret said. "Happily, Baron Empain is a very solid man and he endured these awful conditions."

After his release, Empain looked exhausted but said he was in good health, according to Police Commissioner Pierre Ottavioli.

He was freed two days after police ambushed five of the kidnappers as they were about to pick up an $8.6 million ransom payment.

Three of the pickup gang escaped without the money, one was killed and another was wounded and captured. The captive, 36-year-old Alain Caillol, telephoned other members of the gang Sunday night to urge them to free Empain, the police said.

Police Commissioner Pierre Ottavioli said as many as 10 men are now believed to have participated in the kidnapping and that Empain was moved several times during his captivity. He told the police he didn't know where he had been held.

Edouard-Jean Empain

The kidnappers freed the baron Sunday night on the southeast side of Paris and gave him a few francs. He took the subway to the Place de l'Opera, telephoned his wife and she and the police collected him shortly after.

Empain went into seclusion with his wife and family in their Avenue Foch apartment. A police cordon kept throngs of reporters and photographers back.

Ottavioli said Empain had been mutilated, but gave no details. This apparently confirmed earlier reports that the kidnappers had sent one of the baron's fingertips to the police as proof that they were holding him.

Some miners honoring pickets

By The Associated Press

Most of the nation's soft coal miners put on hard hats, switched on headlamps and headed back down into the pits and shafts for the midnight and 8 a.m. shifts today for the first time in 3½ months.

Most mines reopened peacefully after settlement of the strike by 160,000 United Mine Workers members, but not all of the mines could operate. Some remained shut while 10,000 mine construction workers sought a separate agreement with coal operators. Union bargainers urged their members not to picket.

Mines in Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Ohio, Pennsylvania and West Virginia remained struck as mine construction workers set up picket lines that miners refused to cross.

A spokesman for the Westmoreland Coal Co. in Virginia said the turnout for the 8 a.m. shift was "very much better than usual." He said absenteeism on Monday normally ran about 8 percent, but all but 1 percent of the workers showed up today.

Bethlehem Steel reported a good showing at its 28 mines, three mines owned by Helvita Coal in western Pennsylvania were shut, three mines in Indiana failed to open and a like number in Alabama.

In Homer City, Pa., several hundred miners were halted by four grim-faced pickets carrying small cardboard signs at the Helvetia Coal Co.'s Lucerne No. 6 portal.

Angry at losing a day's pay and the $100 return-to-work bonus, groups of miners stomped their boots on the asphalt roadway at the mine gate and shouted at the pickets.

"We went out on strike at the same time as they did and we've got the same rights to a contract as them," said James Lyon, president of the 800-member construction Local 1600 based in Ebensburg, Pa.

"We supported them and I'm sure they'll support us," Lyon said.

Two pickets outside a Island Creek Coal Co. mine in Kentucky made miners "turn around," a company spokesman said.

"We don't have a contract, and that's the way it's got to be," said John Simpson, president of construction Local 1830.

Bryan Moak, a spokesman for Illinois' largest construction local, said Sunday his men were refusing to allow regular miners to enter the pits. He warned against the consequences should regular miners try to cross picket lines. "Our people are hostile."

Consolidation Coal Co., with headquarters in Pittsburgh, said pickets at 11 of its 51 mines in West Virginia, Pennsylvania and Ohio kept some 2,500 miners off the job.

But where miners did report for the 12:01 shift, there was a feeling of relief and thanksgiving.

Although the men who showed up for work early Monday at Raccoon No. 3 near Wilkesville, Ohio, belonged to a local that voted down the new contract, they joked while preparing for work.

"It's good to see them come back," said Ron Young, personnel supervisor at the Southern Ohio Coal Co. mine. "It's good to be back to the business of mining and getting everything together again."

Commissioner attacks method of selection

Republican County Commissioner Win Brown this morning attacked the "highly unusual procedure" his fellow commissioners designed for selecting an interim county judge.

Last week, the commissioners voted to hold a public hearing Tuesday to interview candidates to fill the post vacated when former County Judge Barbara Culver was elevated to district judge.

Brown was out of town when the meeting and procedure were set.

"The proposal is for a judicial proceeding, complete with subpoena powers, with sworn testimony to be recorded by a court reporter. This amounts to a trial of the candidates," Brown said in a prepared statement.

He pointed out that none of the commissioners has judicial experience, but said they have "constituted themselves as judge and jury."

Citing statements made by commissioners in news stories, Brown said several have indicated prejudice in the matter of who should be the next county judge.

"Should those commissioners who have prejudice disqualify themselves there will be no quorum. Should they not, the proceeding will be a charade at the taxpayers' expense," Brown said.

He counted himself among those who are prejudiced.

Brown called on the commissioners to turn over the "interviewing phase" to the Midland County Bar Association or a neutral citizens commission.

"The commissioners could then act or not act upon the recommendation of the interviewing body as they see fit," he added.

The appointment by the commissioners will be in effect until after the November general election.

The two candidates vying for the post in that election — Democrat Blake Hansen and Republican William Ahders — have indicated they will appear to be interviewed at Tuesday's hearing.

Commissioner Charlie Welch, one of three Democrats on the court, this morning declined to comment on Brown's suggestions.

He also would not comment on whether he might have preconceived ideas about who should be selected county judge.

Efforts to reach commissioners Jack Leonard and Durward Wright were unsuccessful.

Commissioner Durward Wright said the state constitution requires the commissioners to fill the vacancy and he thinks "we ought to do what the law says."

Wright said he "doesn't have any feeling" about whether the commissioners might be prejudiced.

Attempts to reach Commissioner Jack Leonard were unsuccessful.

Living alone or not, misery can be result

Misery is living amid loneliness. That existence, too, can get your nerves and your entire being into a pit that has no seemingly simple solution.

Ah, dear misery can be a blessed event. The pain of it may bear the fruit of creativity.

The anonymous "they" sometimes say that true poets and philosophers are born out of the near insufferable.

It's interesting, sometimes uplifting, to read about the suppressed human spirit that overcomes the grave and declares, "I have conquered."

Again, it makes for good reading. But few there are who will suffer through the misery and strife to prove that they — the human spirit and intellect — are greater than the downward force that would kill their will, their ideas and ideals, and their spirit.

A spiritual death is a greater death than decay of the physical being.

•

Samuel Butler, the English writer who dwelt satirically on the Victorian period, observed in his book "The Way of All Flesh" that a person is happy unless he is consciously miserable.

The realist might say that happiness, like misery, is relative. And the cynic might argue that every condition on earth is relative.

About the easiest — and least responsible — thing on earth is armchair criticism. It's just like the "Monday morning quarterback" who for minutes, hours or even days ponders a decisive action taken in a split second by the real quarterback in the field.

And there's nothing morally wrong or amiss about that. Historians have been doing the same thing for centuries. The difference has been in their choice of subjects and the bearing of their subjects' actions, or lack of action, on mankind.

Misery can be torturing yourself with thoughts on what might have been.

New urban strategy revealed by Carter

By JONATHAN WOLMAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter today announced an $8.3-billion urban strategy designed to assist distressed cities and aid healthier communities to manage sturdy and efficient growth.

The urban plan involves efforts to stimulate investment and create jobs in economically troubled areas, programs to revitalize urban neighborhoods and a commitment to improve 40 existing programs.

In a policy message prepared for delivery to state and local leaders, Carter asked Congress to create a National Development Bank to provide investment subsidies for companies that build or expand in distressed areas.

He also seeks tax credits to reward businesses that hire the hard-core unemployed and firms that locate or expand in decaying areas.

The urban plan, if approved by Congress, would include $2.7 billion in additional spending for urban programs; $1 billion over 30 years for interest subsidies, and $2.2 billion for loan guarantees — not a budget item. In addition, three tax proposals would cost the Treasury about $2.4 billion.

Carter's plan involves most of his Cabinet departments along with independent agencies such as the Environmental Protection Agency and ACTION, the federal organization handling volunteer programs.

Much of Carter's urban blueprint is designed to cost no new money. An estimated $85 billion already goes from the federal Treasury to state and local governments, administration officials say.

An attempt to improve existing programs is a large element in the Carter plan, said Stuart Eizenstat, the president's chief domestic adviser. "We turned the government upside down to find everything that is having an adverse impact on urban areas," he said, pointing to 160 changes in 40 federal programs.

One example he cited was a commitment to double government purchasing from minority-owned businesses.

In the past, many federal programs have hurt the cities by subsidizing sprawl. To put a stop to this, Carter is requiring that agencies prepare an urban impact analysis of major proposals.

The urban strategy also involves the EPA in several programs to help cities and businesses meet clean-air and clean-water standards.

Midland man killed

A Midland man was killed and his wife and son injured Sunday in a traffic accident at the intersection of County Road 120 and FM 715, southeast of Midland.

The accident occurred at 6:05 p.m. Charles Lindy Davidson, 46, of Route 1, Box 73A was pronounced dead about an hour later at Midland Memorial Hospital. Gayle Davidson, 39, was listed this morning in serious condition in the intensive care unit of Midland Memorial. Russell Davidson, 9, was treated and released Sunday.

A Department of Public Safety spokesman said the Davidsons were northbound on FM 715. A truck-trailer driven by Mickey J. Oxford, 23, of Odessa was westbound on County Road 120. The two vehicles collided at the intersection of the two roads.

Men found stabbed

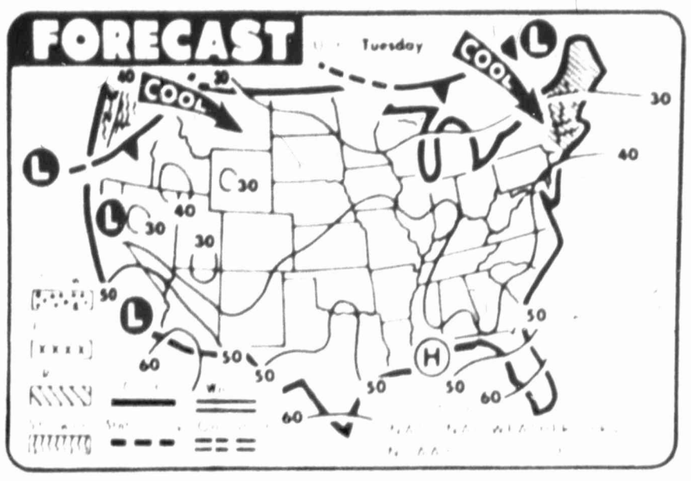

ODESSA — Stab wounds caused the death of one man and injuries to two others early this morning after an incident in an Odessa lounge.

Roberto Rojo Munoz, 29, of Odessa died from five stab wounds, Odessa police said, and Lalo Quinos, 22, and Salvador Aldaco, 19, were in fair condition this morning in Medical Center Hospital.

Police said the incident started inside El Casino Lounge in the 500 block of South Grant Street. Munoz' body was found in the alley in the 400 block of South Lee Street, police said. The two wounded men were found in a car, police indicated.

Police said no arrests have been made, and the incident still is under investigation.

Arabs gathering to reunify ranks

By The Associated Press

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Arab diplomats gathered in Cairo today to try to reunify Arab ranks now that President Anwar Sadat's peace talks with Israel have stalled.

But the five nations taking the toughest line against Egypt's peace overtures boycotted the Arab League meeting.

In Israel, the Cabinet closed ranks behind Prime Minister Menachem Begin and again unanimously endorsed his proposals for peace with the Arabs, despite U.S. pressure to soften that stand in order to revive the Egyptian-Israeli talks.

Firing continued in southern Lebanon meanwhile, and a Swedish U.N. reconnaissance patrol was caught in a crossfire. But no injuries were reported.

In Jerusalem Sunday, Israeli Cabinet spokesman Arieh Naor said after the weekly cabinet meeting the ministers still believe Begin's proposal for Palestinian autonomy on the West Bank of the Jordan River and a continuation of Israeli control until some future time is a fair basis on which to continue peace talks with Egypt.

The spokesman said the cabinet unanimously endorsed Begin's handling of his recent talks with President Carter, in which the prime minister insisted Israel will not withdraw from the West Bank of the Jordan River and that Jewish settlements established by Israel in the occupied territories must remain.

Naor added that the government "restates its commitment to the achievement of a total and comprehensive peace in the Middle East."

Naor also reported there had been discussion of the reports from Washington that a senior U.S. official said Begin's removal from office was necessary for the contiunation of peace talks. Every minister who mentioned the reports "rejected them with open contempt," the spokesman said.

Naor said Begin would report to the Knesset, the Israeli parliament, later this week on his talks with Carter. But opposition leader Shimon Peres said his Labor Party probably would not submit a motion of no confidence in the government as had been expected because it was certain to be defeated by the government majority. "We are not for making empty gestures," Peres said.

In Cairo, President Anwar Sadat said Egypt and Israel are "speaking two different languages," but he still feels a Middle East peace settlement can be reached.

Sadat told a group of visiting American university presidents Egypt got rid of "all the problems of bitterness, hatred and all the complexes" in the 1973 war, but Israel's language "is that they need our land and our sovereignity for security."

In Beirut, the Palestine Liberation Organization claimed that its guerrillas fought "running battles" all night to repulse Israeli armored attacks on Palestinian positions in the foothills of Mount Hermon. There was no confirmation from the Israelis or from neutral observers.

Hunger strike in jail ends with Sunday meal

The hunger strike at the Midland County Jail ended Sunday night with meatloaf, new potatoes, english peas, bread and iced tea, Chief Jailer Tony Roye said this morning.

"Everybody decided to eat," he said.

The hunger strike, which at one time involved 34 of 45 prisoners in the jail, began Tuesday. Sheriff Dallas Smith said earlier he thought the heart of the strike was his decision about two months ago to ban smoking in the jail.

In a letter March 18 to The Midland Reporter-Telegram, the prisoners asked for better prepared and nutritionally balanced food, recreational facilities, newspapers in each tank and single cell, improved visitation rights, "adequate" medical and dental examinations for inmates, free access to public media, access to legal aid materials and "all basic rights offered to any citizen of the United States."

Roye said, "This didn't help the prisoners a whole lot that I know of. We have taken a lot of the things they have talked about into consideration, but we cannot just change everything overnight."

Smith said this was the longest hunger strike involving the most prisoners during his term as sheriff.

"But we never changed anything. We are operating in accordance with the standards, and we didn't change any of our manners of operation and we are not going to," he said.

"We are not going to consider building basketball courts, serving fried eggs, bacon and sausage at breakfast, or allowing smoking or color television.

"The food they ate when they started eating again was the very same food we were serving when the group that was participating in the strike began. Basically what we did throughout was to check with everyone to see if they wanted to eat.

"As long as they just simply chose not to eat, I cannot see anything wrong with that. That's their choice," Smith said.

Smith added that no privileges were withdrawn from those participating in the strike.

"My instructions were to continue as usual until they began to tear things up or destroy equipment within the jail system. At no time that I know of was anything destroyed," he said.

"We have people in the county jail due to their own actions, and the bulk of the people in the county jail are charged with felony crimes. And if they (prisoners) are here for any length of time, like many of these are, they are charged with very serious crimes, such as armed robbery, murder and rape.

"These same people are the ones that are making demands for luxuries, as such, that would have to paid for by the Midland County taxpayers," Smith said.

Misery may bear own fruit

this perspective. Each mind occasionally should become an island unto itself.

You can be separate from others while living with others — even with a companion who might not greatly please you.

It's a matter, far more simply said than done, of nurturing the mind with knowledge and then molding that knowledge as if you were a creator.

You could call it a form of escape or an act of creativity.

Alone or not, man is bestowed with certain, and limited, god-like traits.

And the greatest of these is the ability to control the mind, which is a work of unmatched genius.

Gladys Willingham, 75, died early today in a Midland hospital. She lived at 712 W. Michigan Ave.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Tuesday in St. Ann's Catholic Church with the Rev. Ed Vrazel, officiating. Burial will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park directed by Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Willingham was born March 10, 1903, in Bryan. Her family moved to Midland when she was 2 years old. She was a graduate of Midland High School and attended Baylor University in Waco. She returned to Midland and married the late Clyde Willingham.

Survivors include a son, John H. Barton of Fort Worth; a daughter, Jean M. Fisher of Corpus Christi; a sister, Alice Johnson of Midland, and six grandchildren.

Harold Edwards

DALLAS — Dr. Harold J. Edwards of Dallas and formerly of Arkansas City, Kan., died Saturday in Dallas. He was the father of Mrs. A. D. Kloxin of Midland.

Services will be at 10 a.m. Wednesday in the First Presbyterian Church in Arkansas City, Kan. Burial will be in Memorial Lawn Cemetery in Arkansas City directed by Sparkman-Hillcrest funeral home in Dallas.

Other survivors include his wife, a son, four grandchildren and a great-grandchild.

High court to review benefits to strikers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court agreed today to decide whether states are free to pay unemployment benefits to striking workers.

The justices said they will hear an appeal from the New York Telephone Co. aimed at overturning a New York state law allowing payment of such benefits in strikes lasting longer than eight weeks.

Their eventual decision could have a major national impact on labor-management relations. Many states have similar laws.

New York Telephone sued the state in 1973, contending that the law allowing strikers to collect unemployment benefits was in conflict with federal laws ordering governmental neutrality in labor disputes.

Because New York's unemployment compensation payments came exclusively from employers, the phone company's suit said, the law was forcing employers to finance their own strikers.

Some $49 million in unemployment benefits were paid to some 33,000 striking members of the Communications Workers of America during a seven-month strike against New York Telephone in 1971-72.

A federal trial judge struck down the state law's provision allowing benefits for strikers. He ruled that the supremacy clause giving preference to federal laws rendered the state law unconstitutional.

The 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals overturned that ruling last November, deciding that Congress had given states the freedom to pass their own laws on such matters.

In seeking Supreme Court review, lawyers for the telephone company said the New York law represents state intervention on behalf of striking workers and "tips the economic scales in their favor."

Warm weather begins week

As spring vacation comes to an end and a new work week begins in Midland, skies should continue to be fair with temperatures expected to get warmer through Tuesday, according to the weatherman.

The low temperature tonight should drop to the upper 40s with southerly winds diminishing to 5 to 15 mph. Tuesday's high temperature is predicted to reach the upper 70s.

Sunday's high temperature was 74 degrees, and the overnight low temperature was 46 degrees, the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal said.

All area towns reported fair skies and rather warm temperatures this morning.

John Dean as journalist prefers asking questions

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The most talked-about new radio journalist in town is a disbarred lawyer with a notorious past — John Dean.

"I'd much rather ask the questions than answer them. It's more fun," says the onetime adviser to President Richard M. Nixon who answered lots of questions at the Watergate hearings five years ago.

For three minutes each day on his syndicated radio show, "The Right To Know," the 39-year-old Dean interviews a famous figure or comments on issues in the news.

The once conservative Dean has changed his style and politics.

He is no longer a Republican. "I registered as an independent when I came out here," he says, "which isn't that big a switch for me ... I always split my ticket."

In well-tailored bluejeans and a wine colored sweater — the horn-rimmed glasses are the only giveaway — his new image might be called "laid back."

He tapes his shows in the book-lined study of the hillside home he and his wife Mo bought when they moved here from Washington.

Watergate, the subject of his best-selling memoir "Blind Ambition," has been a recurring theme in his radio show.

"I have an inside track," Dean says wryly.

He spent four months in prison in 1974 for his role in the scandal. "It was a chance to take a harder look at myself and not exactly like what I saw," he says.

"Ten years ago, this would have been an all-consuming thing. I might have been out here trying to replace Cronkite."

African states call on Britain, U.S. to hold summit

By DAVID K. OTTAWAY
The Washington Post

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania — The five "front-line" African states, together with the Patriotic Front — the guerrilla alliance in Rhodesia — called on Britain and the United States Sunday to convene another conference to continue discussions of the Anglo-American proposals for a settlement of the worsening Rhodesian conflict.

At the end of a two-day summit meeting here the Africans also demanded that the two Western powers state clearly their position toward their own proposals and either seek to push forward the stalemated negotiations or publicly renounce them.

Altogether, the summit did not seem to have advanced the search for a breakthrough in the deadlocked negotiations over either Rhodesia or Namibia (South West Africa). In the latter case, western diplomats here seemed to feel it was too early to expect any dramatic new development until the real strength or weakness of the new transitional government in Rhodesia became clearer.

The "front-line" states and Patriotic Front called on "all progressive and anti-colonialist states" to support their struggle against the multi-racial interim government established formally Tuesday in Salisbury. They also asked for a tightening and widening of United Nations economic sanctions on the new regime.

While they did not reject the American proposal for a new peace conference bringing together both Rhodesia's internal and external nationalist leaders, neither did they indicate any support.

In addition, there was no mention of Namibia anywhere in the four-page communique. It was the Namibia issue that primarily brought U.S. Ambassador Andrew Young to the Tanzanian capital to be present for the summit meeting.

Young's first reaction to the seemingly scant results of the conference here was that the "front-line" states had issued "a challenge" to Britain and the United States, but, that the communique contained no specific suggestions as to how the Western powers should go about convoking another meeting on the British-American proposals.

"It is in fact the details that are most important in terms of where we go from here," he said hinting that a more detailed explanation of what the five "front-line" states had really decided would be conveyed shortly to the two Western governments through private channels. "We have to negotiate privately," Young said.

Young met here Sunday with Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere to be briefed on the progress of the conference. But Young failed to see the three other presidents attending the conference: Samora Machel of Mozambique, Seretse Khama of Botswana and Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia. The fifth president, Agostinho Neto of Angola, did not attend, apparently because of pressing problems at home.

However, Young earlier had held talks in Lusaka with Kaunda, Joshua Nkomo of the Patriotic Front and Sam Nujoma, president of the Southwest African People's Organization, the militant nationalist group in Namibia.

The U.S. ambassador had hoped that the "front-line" states could play a role in pressing Nujoma to agree to the final Western proposals for a settlement in South African-administered Namibia, but they are still not ready and thus could not be discussed at the summit here.

Altogether, it did not appear that Young's mission had been as successful as he had hoped, partly because he had no concrete proposals to sell here, and partly because the major preoccupation of the conference turned out to be Rhodesia rather than Namibia.

Young and his party are scheduled to travel to Arusha in northern Tanzania today and from there to go by road to Nairobi, where they will catch a plane for Lagos Tuesday in time for President Carter's visit to Nigeria later in the week.

Rights resolutions still lack action

WASHINGTON (AP) — It has been 11 years since two human rights resolutions were introduced in the United Nations, a year since President Carter endorsed them and six months since he signed them.

But the U.S. Senate has taken no action on the documents, which are equivalent to treaties. And fewer than one third of the U.N. members have approved them.

On the surface the resolutions, like Carter's own human rights declarations, seem like a simple matter.

Odessa man among academy graduates

An Odessa law officer, Kenneth A. Turner, was among those honored in graduation ceremonies at the Federal Bureau of Investigation's National Academy at Quantico, Va., Friday, according to Atty. Gen. Griffin B. Bell.

Fire station vote

Whether or not Crier Park will gain voter approval as the location for Midland's proposed new central fire station will be determined, among other things, in Saturday's city election.

Members of the city council are in unanimous agreement that this is THE location for the new central station, which would replace the present facility in downtown Midland. There are those citizens, however who are of an entirely different opinion, and for a variety of reasons.

So, it will be up to the voters to decide the controversial issue.

The Reporter-Telegram previously has voiced its opposition, in the belief that Crier Park is not the best location for the fire station. It has not changed its mind in the matter.

The city council's views favoring the location also have been publicized. The council members also are standing firm, insofar as is known.

Crier Park, bounded by Wall and Texas avenues and H and I streets, is situated in a largely residential area, with schools, churches and the Masonic Temple located in the general vicinity. It should be remembered in this case that this is not a neighborhood fire station but a central station. There is a difference.

Wall and Texas avenues are among the city's busiest thoroughfares. The heavy traffic thus will be competing with fire trucks and ambulances, heading in all directions at all hours of the day and night. The city council, however, does not see this as a detrimental factor.

The council's views favoring the location are based largely on a professional study made two or three years ago. It could be that the study now is outdated, due to the rapid growth and development downtown and elsewhere in the city since the survey was made.

City officials also have pointed out that Crier Park already is owned by the city, while other locations in the area would cost from $250,000 to $330,000. With land prices as they are, perhaps the city should consider keeping Crier Park and purchasing less expensive property in the vicinity of the present central fire station as a site for the planned facility.

A public hearing on the proposed location was held on Feb. 28, following which the council determined that there is no feasible alternative to the proposed site and that a minimal amount of harm will be done to the site under the plan, as proposed.

Immediately thereafter, the council set the April 1 date for the election, and this is where the matter now stands.

This is a tremendously important issue, one which should have the interest of all citizens. The final decision rests with YOU and the other Midland voters.

It's YOUR city, YOUR fire department and YOUR vote.

Money woes linger

G. William Miller, recently confirmed as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, has paid his predecessor a compliment.

There apparently will be little change in the policies endorsed and initiated by Arthur Burns.

Miller agrees with Burns' theme that the growth in the nation's money supply must be slowed "in time" if inflation is to be controlled. There is, unfortunately, no timetable to achieve the goal.

And inflation lingers on, with wholesale prices showing a 1.1 percent increase in February.

Miller has no allusions that his job will be easy. He acknowledges the need to stimulate business investment, to stabilize the value of the dollar in world markets and to moderate wages and prices in industry.

The interrelated objectives must be approached simultaneously.

Miller has displayed a ready recognition of the money problems with which he must deal. His goal of "prudent monetary management" will have public approval.

CHARLEY REESE:

Self-defense said only excuse for using force

By CHARLEY REESE
Sun Belt Syndicate

ORLANDO, Fla. — World government is not an impossibility. I wish with all my heart it were.

A world government is no different than a national government. It is an institution of force which compels, with its police powers, individuals to obey its rules.

Now that's a whole course in government condensed to one sentence. That's all government is, was, or ever will be and it doesn't matter whether you're talking about Rome, Washington, or Moscow.

When you talk about how effective or ineffective government is you are talking about the efficiency of its police apparatus. Can it compel individuals to obey its rules?

Everything else — philosophy, ethics, economics and history — is involved in the question, Which rules?

Man learned what government is in the dark past the first time one individual applied a club to the skull of another and discovered that force and fear could be used to coerce other human beings into performing labor and to deprive them of the products of their labor.

Since that day, clubbers have been attempting to rationalize the use of force. Security for the group, divine right, the glory of the group, the economic well-being of the group — they've all been tried and are still being used.

Along the way, however, a miracle of insight occurred. Some nameless patron saint of freedom said none of those excuses is justifiable; in fact, there is no excuse for using force except self-defense.

There, in one sentence, is the whole glory of the American Revolution which was founded on the concept that a person comes into the world free of any obligation to another and with no right to compel another individual to do his bidding.

That's an idea that is truly revolutionary, earth-shaking, heaven-tilting, magnificent, stupendous, and radical. The day it was published it reverberated around the planet and on that very day, the clubbers and their apologists began an attempt to kill it.

And they are still trying and they can think of 14,493 "reasons" why it's unworkable, out of date, and should be discarded and that is the bottom line of the world government question.

Which set of rules is a world government going to enforce? Those in the American Constitution? Is it going to be based on the idea that all men are free? Or on the older idea that the group's welfare takes precedence over the individual's?

Only a fool would think that any world government within our lifetimes would be anything but a totalitarian, collectivist dictatorship. A huge majority of the world's nations are collectivist dictatorships. A major portion of the world's military power is controlled by them.

Do you think they are going to give up their power? Turn in their guns? Free their slaves? Of course not. They hope they can trick us into turning in our guns and becoming their slaves.

The price of a world government is the U.S. Constitution and your freedom. Don't kid yourself that it is anything less.

Most of these clever people know that Americans would never vote for world government if the price is stated honestly so they are trying to disguise it. They claim the price is world peace or they claim only world government can prevent ecological disaster. They talk of interdependence.

They are telling you lies.

A world government is possible. All that is necessary is to turn over the control of the major military forces to a world command. The U.S. could surrender its army and its sovereignty by signing a treaty which would need only the same number of votes that passed the Panama Canal neutrality treaty. The U.S. could be wiped out with the stroke of a pen.

You ought to think about that. Over 100 congressmen and senators signed a Declaration of Interdependence drafted by a pro-world government outfit in Philadelphia in 1976.

If you like being a free American citizen you'd better listen carefully to what your elected officials are saying and watch what they are doing.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

'Koreagate' worldwide in scope

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — There is startling new evidence that the Korean connection may have reached into other countries, including the Arab sheikdoms and the former Greek dictatorship.

We learned in the early 1970s that Korean entrepreneur Tongsun Park and Rep. Richard Hanna, D.-Calif., were racketing around the Mediterranean. We reported on April 1, 1974 on their travels to Yemen, Saudi Arabia and Egypt.

We have now learned that this odd couple also stopped in Greece, which was then under the thumbs of a military junta. Previously, Hanna had taken a public stand against the Greek colonels. In May, 1969, for example, he wrote to several officials to express his "strong objections" to a proposed World Bank loan to Greece.

Subsequently, Hanna came under the influence of Tongsun Park, according to Justice Department documents. He was in Park's pocket in July, 1971, when he made a mysterious visit to Athens.

While in Greece, he suddenly reversed his attitude toward the Greek dictatorship. He decried "American interference in the internal affairs" of Greece. In private meetings with U.S. diplomats, Hanna excoriated a prominent Greek exiled leader in the United States.

He was Elias Demetracopoulos, a Greek journalist driven from his homeland by the junta in 1967. He set up shop in a tiny hotel room in Washington and proceeded to lambaste the colonels from afar. He complained about the military junta to congressmen on Capitol Hill. One who befriended him was the same Hanna who denounced him in 1971.

Meanwhile, Hanna's boon companion, Tongsun Park, had apparently developed some enigmatic ties to the Nixon administration. As early as June, 1971, the State Department had informed then Attorney General John Mitchell in a confidential memorandum that Park had "a highly questionable" background.

"We know for a fact," continued the Korean experts, "that Park offered to contribute to the campaign funds of several congressmen and have suspicions that he has been involved in many other irregularities as a lobbyist." Mitchell promised a full-scale FBI investigation, but it turned out to be nothing more than a routine search of the records.

A few years later, Park quietly teamed up with Spiro Agnew, who had been drummed out of the vice presidency, to pursue international business deals. Park's private papers contain cryptic references to joint Agnew-Park ventures in the Middle East.

Thus it appears that Tongsun Park, who was already friendly with Richard Hanna, also had high-level connections in the Nixon White House.

And this, perhaps, best explains why Hanna did a surprise turnabout on Greece and Elias Demetracopoulos.

Nixon and his associates staunchly supported the Greek dictatorship and were angered by Demetracopoulos' efforts to do it in. So abiding was Nixon's hatred for the exiled leader that he connived with John Mitchell to have Demetracopoulos sent home to certain torture and possible death.

By July, 1971, Hanna had become a Demetracopoulos enemy and a convert to the dictatorship's cause. Following Hanna's visit to Athens, U.S. Ambassador Henry Tasca dispatched an extraordinary secret cable to Attorney General Mitchell and Secretary of State William Rogers.

"My deputy has recently been informed by Congressman Richard Hanna ... that (Elias) Demetracopoulos has been giving financial assistance to various Congressmen," cabled pro-junta Tasca. The ambassador went on to accuse Demetracopoulos of attempting to "damage our relations with Greece, loosen our NATO alliance and weaken the U.S. security position in the Eastern Mediterranean." The exiled leader, said Tasca, was a "dangerous and a mysterious enemy.

Hanna did not return our calls. Had we been able to speak with him, we would have asked why he suddenly turned around on Greece and Demetracopoulos. Was it Tongsun Park's influence? Did he and Park hope to land some business deals with the Greeks? Was he paid off by Greek interests? Or, more interestingly, did the Nixon White House use its knowledge of Hanna's dealings with Park to persuade the congressman to support the Administration's position on Greece?

We were unable to reach Henry Tasca in Rome, where he is now in private business.

Footnote: The charge that he was giving "financial assistance" to congressmen, Demetracopoulos told my associate Joe Spear, was a "ridiculous lie." He explained that in his job as Washington representative of Brimberg & Co., a Wall Street firm, he often invited politicians to speak at corporate gatherings. He provided documentary evidence that the modest honorariums paid to the speakers were handled by the firm, not by him. A CIA study of Demetracopoulos, meanwhile, concluded that "there are no hard facts in the record" to show that he ever worked for any foreign government against Greece or the United States or "has ever been involved in criminal activities."

Mark Russell says

Now that passage of the Panama Canal treaties is a twogone conclusion (half of a foregone conclusion) I predict the following: the 32 senators who voted "no" will form a separate tiny country — Reagania.

•

Under King Ronald I, Reagania's flag will depict a covered wagon going over a cliff with the motto "We Made No Deals."

•

On December 31, 1999, the DRR (Daughters of the Reaganian Revolution) will gather at the Panama Canal to sing hymns, lock arms and chant "We shall undercome."

•

Then, in what will be a DRR tradition, they will drown John Wayne in effigy.

INSIDE REPORT:

Can President Carter beat Prime Minister Begin?

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

Evans

Novak

WASHINGTON — Two questionable political weapons have been unsheathed by President Carter for possible use against Israel's Prime Minister Menahem Begin if — no matter what he says — he diddles the President and the United Nations on the demand for a rapid pullout of Israeli troops from Lebanon.

Yet, despite deadly serious purpose, the effectiveness of either weapon or of any other exercise of presidential power over Israel's prime minister is not yet certain. Indeed, the generally low state of U.S. influence, as contrasted with 21 years ago when President Eisenhower successfully ordered Israel to withdraw from its first Sinai invasion, affects the way Israel looks at the U.S. as much as it affects any other country.

The first of Mr. Carter's weapons is straightforward: a law long on the books requiring a total ban on any more U.S. military aid to any country that has used American weapons against a foreign nation, except for self-defense. Begin claims that the invasion and takeover of one-tenth of Lebanon was for "self-defense" — but it will be termed offensive by President Carter if Begin doesn't quickly act on the Security Council order to get out.

The second weapon is more ambiguous but — as with the first — it could pose problems for Begin: a spelling out in detail of the U.S. position for an overall Mideast settlement.

Tenaciously resisted by all previous Israeli governments as equivalent to a hated "imposed" settlement, such a spelling out of the American position would put Begin on the political defensive.

"Carter means business this time," one administration official told us. "He feels more strongly than the so-called Arabists (pro-Arab diplomats) in the State Department."

Inside the White House, Mr. Carter's top aides talked bravely about the fact that "we are not defenseless" as they awaited Begin's arrival. But in hard fact, the mood was a bit apprehensive. Some with a long memory recalled nostalgically the way Eisenhower went on national television on Feb. 20, 1957, with his no-compromise demand that Israel withdraw from every inch of the Sinai it seized in 1956.

Stating that Israel "insists on firm guarantees" as a condition of withdrawal, Eisenhower said he would be "untrue" to his office if he endorsed "the proposition that a nation which invades another should be permitted to exact conditions for withdrawal."

The invasion of Lebanon, dictated by the same security concerns that led to that first invasion of the Sinai, has now taken Israeli troops to the Litani River. Some administration aides fear that Begin, a tough bargainer, will employ a series of stratagems to exploit the strong new military position his troops occupy, and his equally new and strong political base following the March 11 terrorist attack.

One stratagem: an immediate, partial withdrawal to a line six miles north of the Israeli border. That was to be the original farthest point of the Israeli advance into Lebanon. By dramatizing a quick readiness to pull back that far — despite the risks of Arab guerrillas penetrating the area to be vacated — Begin would come across as accommodating, making it politically embarrassing for Mr. Carter to bring overt pressure to go all the way immediately.

A far graver stratagem now feared by some Carter Mideast advisers would be a Begin offer for withdrawal from Lebanon, but linked to a demand that the President stop pressuring Israel to change its policy never to give up the West Bank.

That was the Carter administration's top target when the Begin visit was originally planned. Before the terrorist attack of March 11, the President had approved a confidential agenda strongly pressing Begin to agree on eventual withdrawal from the West Bank and on abandoning Jewish settlements in the Sinai as part of an overall Sinai withdrawal plan. That agenda proposed a no-holds-barred Carter attack in the privacy of the Oval Office against Begin's obduracy on the West Bank and the settlements.

The plan was to lay out with great severity U.S. demands for enough flexibility by Begin to bring Egyptian President Anwar Sadat back into the negotiating game. No commitments were to be asked of Begin during his visit; only that he take back Mr. Carter's urgent appeals to his cabinet for a complete review of Israel's basic positions.

Now presidential advisers worry that if Begin yields anything, it will somehow be tied in to his newest conquest of southern Lebanon. Compared to Eisenhower's authoritative call for Israel to get off the Sinai 21 years ago, backed by his great prestige as President, Mr. Carter has little more than the threat of an arms cutoff which Congress might reject and the political leverage of an "imposed" U.S. plan that Israel would surely reject.

Little wonder, then, that Mr. Carter and his aides long for a return of the presidential power and prestige of two decades ago.

BROWNFIELD — Services for Jack Barr, 57, of Brownfield and formerly of Howard County were to be at 2 p.m. today in the First Baptist Church here with the Rev. Pat Cummins, pastor, officiating and the Rev. Clarence Branch of the Calvary Baptist Church here assisting.

Burial was to be in Terry County Memorial Cemetery directed by Brownfield Funeral Home.

Barr died Sunday in a Brownfield hospital following an apparent heart attack.

A Clyde native, he moved to Vincent in Howard County where he grew up and attended school. He was a U.S. Army medic during World War II. He married Pearl Read Feb. 11, 1951, in Big Spring. They lived in Vincent until 1956 when they moved to Lovington, N.M. The couple moved to Brownfield in 1957.

Barr was a production foreman with Joseph O'Neill Jr. Oil Co. He was a 32nd degree Mason with a membership in Coahoma. He was a Baptist.

Survivors include his wife; a son, Randy Barr of the home; two daughters, Debra Barr and Mrs. Jackie Worth, both of Brownfield; his mother, Mrs. Luther Barr of Big Spring; two brothers, James "Buddy" Barr and Vernie Barr, both of Vincent, and three sisters, Mrs. George Glenn and Mrs. Calvin Smith, both of Stanton, and Norma Bearden of Big Spring.

Russian fishermen resort to factories

EDITOR'S NOTE — This is one of a series of occasional dispatches from Associated Press correspondents traveling about the Soviet Union.

By THOMAS KENT

RIGA, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Some of the old salts of Riga's fishing fleet are manning canning factories now.

One reason they are not at sea is the 200-mile fishing zones marked off around the world in recent years by the United States, the European Common Market countries, Iceland, Sweden, Japan and others, according to an official of the 9th of May Fishermen's Cooperative in Riga.

The cooperative, one of the most prosperous in the Soviet Baltic states of Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia, had 500 fishermen at sea on 32 ships three years ago. They caught an average of 25,000 tons a year in the Atlantic, the Baltic Sea and the Gulf of Riga.

This year, there are 300 fishermen out on 25 ships and their catch will be down by 40 percent.

The cooperative rushed a fish processing plant into operation in an 18-month period to keep up its profits and keep its members at work. Sailors who used to fish for a living are working in the plant, doing work once reserved mainly for women.

Now they leave their bungalows shortly before 9 a.m. instead of 4 a.m. and are home every night for dinner.

"It's not really so much worse than fishing," said one man who exchanged his oilskins for the white smock of a canner. "At least I get to spend some more time with my family."

"Of course, there are sailors who really love the sea, who want to go back to it," said the vice chairman of the cooperative, Vladislav P. Buklovsky. "For them, we try to stay in touch with other fishing and sailing organizations in case any jobs come up."

Sitting in his small office with charts on the wall showing the disposition of the association's small fleet, Buklovsky blamed the reduction in the catch on the increasing number of protected fishing zones around the world and the depletion of fish stocks.

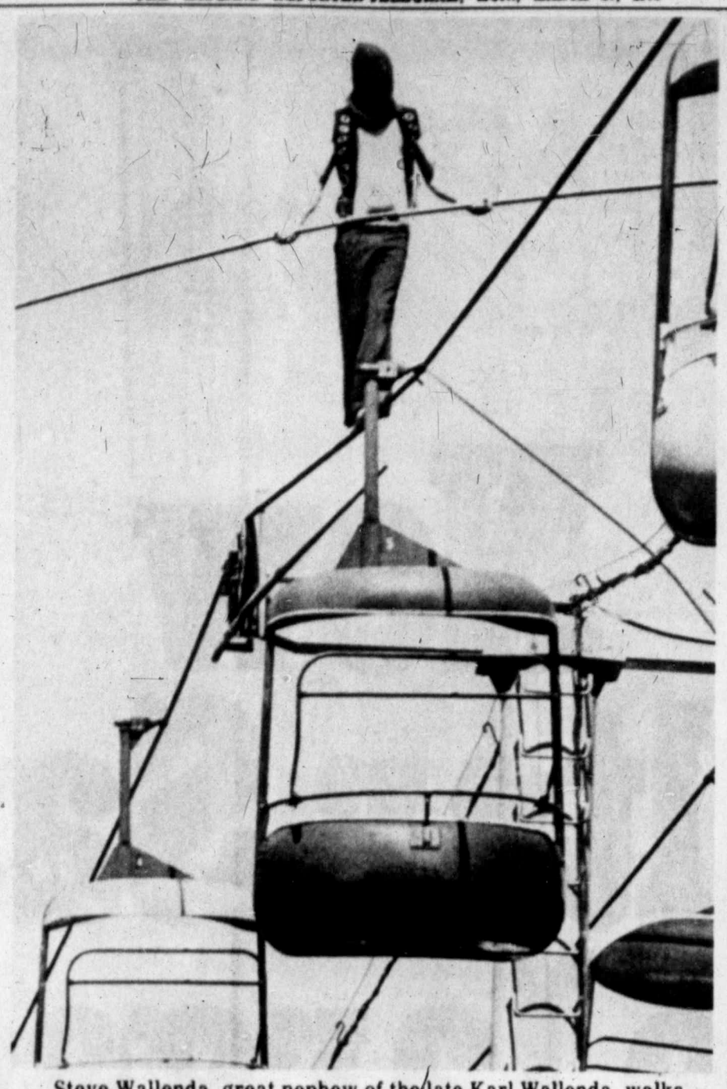

Fishing is becoming more competitive at the same time that the Soviet fleet — the world's biggest — is under pressure from the nation's economic planners to increase catches drastically.

The government is demanding that the nation raise its total output of fish products 30 to 32 percent during the 1976-80 Five Year Plan. Fish consumption by the average citizen is programmed to grow from 37 to 46 pounds. Since meat is often scarce, the Soviet citizen gets about 20 percent of his protein from fish.

The 1977 target of 10.3 million tons of fish was met in 1977, but that was 200,000 tons less than the catch in 1976.

Like other Soviet fishing associations, the 9th of May cooperative has tried to compensate for restricted and competitive conditions at sea by using new equipment to find and catch fish more quickly.

Members have also discussed moving to new fishing grounds, including the Barents Sea, where the Soviet Union and Norway agreed this year on fishing zone boundaries.

Friends, fans view body of Wallenda in sports arena

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — Some were friends. Most were fans. All who filed past Karl Wallenda's bronze coffin were reminded of his 58 years on the high wire by the shadow of a 24-foot balance pole hung overhead in tribute.

Wallenda's body was on view for six hours Sunday in the Robarts Sports Arena — the scene of many performances by the 73-year-old circus star. Burial services were scheduled for today.

The pole hanging over the casket was like the one he clutched last Wednesday as he fell to his death, blown from a high-wire strung between two hotels in San Juan, Puerto Rico, by a gust of wind.

Wallenda, who survived a number of accidents in his long career, plummeted 10 stories to his death.

His body was brought back to Sarasota — the winter home of many circus performers.

Circus performers from around the world sent flowers to adorn Wallenda's casket. The native of Magdeburg, now in East Germany, was praised by peers as the greatest of the high-wire walkers.

Urine chemical treats cancer

HOUSTON (AP) — A chemical extracted from human urine is being used in the controversial treatment of a 17-year-old cancer victim for whom other forms of treatment have proved unsuccessful.

"It's the worst kind (of cancer) you can have," Cliff Taylor of Denver said Sunday from his hospital bed. "They call it Synogial Cell Sarcoma. It started in the joint of my right arm. I was playing baseball when I was 12 and one day I tried to throw the ball and it felt like something was just blocking my arm."

Two months later, doctors amputated the arm, and conventional treatments held off the disease until 1976.

"He took the conventional treatments — amputation, radiation and chemotherapy," said Taylor's 41-year-old widowed mother, Linda Hudson. "He couldn't take chemotherapy any more because it made him sick. He just felt he couldn't tolerate it. He just felt life wasn't worth living."

Dr. Stanislaw R. Burzinski, the youth's doctor, said he extracts chemicals called peptides from the urine. Those chemicals have no adverse effects on normal tissues but inhibit the growth of cancer cells, he said.

Taylor's condition means he must have about 40 gallons of human urine a day, and a Houston church is sponsoring a collection effort within its congregation.

"He's getting pretty massive doses," his mother said.

Burzinski admitted the urine treatment is controversial, but said that is because "what is new and simple is quite controversial."

"The theory behind the treatment is that each tissue has a specific chemical that protects it from cancer," he said. "If a person has a deficiency in that chemical, he may get cancer."

The doctor said he believes each tissue is protected by a different compound. Those compounds can be found in the tissue and in smaller quantities of the blood and urine, he said.

Border town foreseen as haven for gamblers

CIUDAD ACUNA, Mexico (AP) — A Mexican government official says the resort area near Lake Amistad on the border near Del Rio, Texas, could ride a combination of relaxed religious views and a sagging economy into status as a haven for gamblers.

Jesus Ramon, a spokesman for the governor of the Mexican state of Coahuila, said horse and dog betting could be followed by Las Vegas-style casinos before the year is out.

The Lake Amistad area is one of those being considered for such a venture, Ramon said.

He told the San Antonio Express and News horse and dog betting would probably be the first step.

"Top officials are beginning to consider it," Ramon said. "The top people in government have commented it is not impossible to open more dog tracks.

"I think it would be done in stages," Ramon said. "I think we would have horse racing and dog racing first. The results would then be analyzed and then the possibility of casino gambling would be considered."

Elias Cardenas, director of tourism for Coahuila, said legalized gambling is also being considered by other Mexican cities.

"I think they may be making studies in Acapulco," Cardenas said. Ramon said Cancun and Baja California were also looking at the idea.

"The government would be most likely to look for resort places which are already functioning, which have rooms and hotels, but need some economic help," he said.

20 years of community service in Midland have earned him the privilege of continuing on the Hospital Board.

"After serving on the hospital's Board of Trustees, I realized we could no longer provide the level of health care Midland needs through the support of a small number of generous contributors. To attract new doctors we needed to modernize our facilities. As one of the five original Hospital District directors, I hope to work toward a successful conclusion of our renovation program."

Bill Franklin has served Midland over the past 20 years, contributing his leadership to the YMCA, United Way, Chamber of Commerce, and many charitable organizations. His four years on the Hospital Board have prepared him for the work that lies ahead. As a professional banker, Bill brings financial knowledge that will be valuable in charting the course of medical care in Midland.

Hot battles shape up in giant 21st Congressional District campaigns

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A hot campaign is shaping up for the Republican and Democratic nominations in Texas' huge 21st Congressional District — an area that is larger than 19 of the United States.

The battle is for the U.S. House seat being vacated by Rep. Bob Krueger, who is seeking the Democratic nomination for the U.S. Senate seat now held by Republican John Tower.

Krueger is finishing his second two-year term in the House.

Five Democrats are campaigning for their party's nomination in the May primary. Four Republicans are seeking the GOP nomination.

The 21st District race is the only real battle among the three congressional races in the San Antonio area.

In the 20th District which lies entirely inside San Antonio longtime Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, a Democrat, is assured reelection to his ninth consecutive term. He has no opposition in either his party primary or the November general election.

Rep. Abraham Kazen, also a Democrat, is a prohibitive favorite to win renomination and reelection to a seventh term in the 23rd District, which includes an area south and east and west of San Antonio. He faces a newcomer in the primary. There are no Republican candidates and Raza Unida candidate is unopposed in the primary.

But the 21st District is assured a new face in Washington when the 96th Congress begins next January. The district includes all of 28 counties and parts of four more including northern Bexar County (San Antonio). It sprawls over 47,262 square miles — much of it sparsely populated brush and desert area.

Former State Sen. Nelson Wolff is considered by most observers to be the leader in the Democratic primary contest. He lost in 1974 to Krueger but this year claims to have the financing and party organization necessary to win.

Other Democratic candidates include Hondo Mayor Woodrow Glasscock, banker Paul Dahlgren and educators Steve Clark and Joe Sullivan.

In the Republican primary for the 21st District Bobby Locke is seeking his party's nomination for the second time. He won the nomination in 1976 but lost to Krueger in the general election.

The GOP primary favorite is newcomer Tom Loeffler, a lawyer and rancher from Kerrville and a one-time aide to Tower who once also worked as a congressional liaison in the Ford White House. Loeffler claims the backing of the district's GOP leadership.

Other Republican candidates are San Antonio lawyer Neil Calnan, 35, a former assistant U.S. attorney who lost the 1976 nomination battle to Locke; and veterinarian Wallace Larson, another newcomer to politics.

All the candidates in both primaries assert their conservatism.

Looking at the 21st District candidates and their positions:

DEMOCRATS

Wolff, a 37-year-old rancher and lawyer who lives in the San Antonio suburb of Leon Springs, has traveled extensively in the district which includes San Angelo, Del Rio and half of the Big Bend area. He maintains the United States must eliminate wasteful bureaucracies and strengthen its defense. He supports development of atomic energy supplies. Wolff says imported beef products should be clearly labeled for consumers and that export markets should be expanded.

Glasscock has made development of water resources in the district one of his chief themes. He has called for a comprehensive water plan to help not only agriculture to urban areas as well. He supports a phased deregulation of natural gas prices in the nation. He states that government spending is the major cause of inflation. He also supports a strong national defense, a strong Social Security program and reduced federal taxes and bureaucracy.

Dahlgren says he believes inflation is the most serious problem facing the nation today and that the federal government should establish an "anti-inflation policy." He has called for a permanent income tax reduction. He supports a gradual deregulation of natural gas prices to be overseen by regulatory agencies that would prevent windfall profits. He supports "welfare reform" and promises to keep close contact with his constituency through regional offices.

Clark, a native of San Antonio making his first bid for public office, supports a decentralization of government and local control of public schools. He wants stronger fixed prison terms for convicted criminals. He says he supports "free enterprise" and critizes "liberals" who have tried to "subvert the meaning of the word 'poverty.'"

Sullivan, 49, who lost primary battles to Krueger in 1974 and 1976, is a psychology teacher at San Antonio College. He says he intends to keep running until elected and would like to apply some psychology on the U.S. Congress. He favors deregulation "of just about all business." He supports a strong national defense.

REPUBLICANS

Loeffler, 31, has stirred some controversy by supporting West Texas ranchers who claim they have to kill federally protected golden eagles to protect their livestock. He is stressing his experience in Washington working for Tower and former President Ford. He claims to have fought already to protect Texas interests in business agriculture and petroleum. He contends he is the only candidate with day-to-day Washington experience.

Locke, 38, the unsuccessful GOP nomineee in 1976, opposes ratification of the Panama Canal treaty. A businessman, he takes a hard conservative line on most issues: reduce federal taxes, tougher sentences for criminals, a stronger military, deregulation of oil and gas prices and a mandatory balanced federal budget. He says the United States should use its agricultural strength as "a major tool" of its foreign policy.

General Lee had second thoughts

CHICAGO (AP) — Although General Robert E. Lee fought valiantly for the Confederacy in the War between the States, he was privately opposed to slavery and did not favor secession from the Union.

Lee, whose Jan. 9 birthday anniversary is a legal holiday in most Southern states, felt that slavery had an evil effect on masters as well as slaves, according to The World Book Encyclopedia. Long before the outbreak of the Civil War, he set free the few slaves he had inherited.

As to secession, Lee expressed hatred over the idea of a divided nation, and had difficulty deciding whether to stand by his native state of Virginia or remain with the Union, even though President Lincoln offered him the field command of the U.S. Army, the encyclopedia says.

But Lee came to feel that his state was protecting its liberty, freedom and legal principles. He chose to fight what the South regarded as a second war of independence — much as Washington, whom Lee greatly admired, had fought against the British, World Book reports.

Independent... And Interested

Tom Sloan believes in preserving and protecting the individual rights of every citizen and every family unit...and, except in the areas of police and fire services, that means less government rather than more. Tom Sloan is an independent thinker, and is not the candidate of any group or political clique. He cares about Midland and all its people. He is dedicated to building a better Midland...to improving city services, but at the least possible expense to taxpayers. This can be accomplished by more expert planning and budgeting, and by more efficient use of personnel, facilities and equipment. As always, common sense will get the job done.

Think what your neighbors will say when you install Gas air conditioning...NOW!

Your neighbors may talk a bit and raise a few eyebrows when they see Gas air conditioning installed at your house on a cold, wintery day. Let 'em! They will appreciate your good judgement on the first warm days when your home is cool and comfortable while others are still waiting for installation. Call us now for a free cooling survey. No obligation.

Think what they'll say in 10 years... when it's still going strong, still in warranty!

10 YEAR NO SWEAT WARRANTY

*Manufacturer's ten year limited warranty covers all defects in material and workmanship on the sealed refrigeration unit for ten years from date of installation of the air conditioner when it is installed in a single family residence. All other parts are warranted for one year from date of installation.

After a decade of seeing you enjoy cool, comfortable, trouble-free summers, your neighbors can only say "Wow!" Gas air conditioning lasts and lasts without any loss of cooling capacity. There are fewer moving parts . . . and no compressor . . . to wear out. And, Gas air conditioners are built by craftsmen using more stainless steel than in any other unit. Those are the reasons why we can offer a ten-year warranty*. Install Gas air conditioning now and forget about expensive maintenance to your cooling system for at least 10 years!

No good bird yaks too much

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

MOUNT COOK, New Zealand (AP) — High up here in the southern Alps where Sir Edmund Hilary trained for his conquest of Everest, one would expect to sleep like the big glacier just out of the lodge window surrounded only by the silent snows and a soft murmur of pines.

But the dawn came up like thunder, the thunderous racket made by the kea bird, which is a mountain parrot gifted with the voice box of a hard rock sound amplifier. It was a little after 4 in the morning when this feathery foghorn began its shrill screaching.

If this bird were capable of mimicking human speech like any decent parrot, it would be fluent in the obscenities of many lands, judging from its popularity with the tourists who come here from all over the world.

"No good bird, too much yakyak," said the gentleman from Japan seated opposite me at the breakfast table. Oddly, the morning paper, The Mountain Scene, carried a classified ad from a Japanese photographic team seeking "information on the latest sighting of the moa bird."

I wondered if my friend across the way was on the trail of this large flightless fowl, which looks like something designed by Howard Hughes and was supposedly extinct, but at least has the decency not to be bellowing under people's windows in the early hours of the morning.

Keas, moas and kiwis. The bird life alone made one realize what an extraordinary country New Zealand is.

Lake Wakatipu comes across as an answer to Scotland's Loch Ness. The 52-mile S-shaped glacial lake, with depths of more than 120 feet, has the odd habit of "breathing," rising and falling six inches every 15 minutes.

Scientists think it has something to do with wind currents in the canyon. The Maori people know for sure there is a huge monster down there with a slow heart beat that causes these tidal pulsations.

The Maoris, however, with their beautiful singing voices and fantastic wood carvings of fetish figures with their tongues hanging out, make New Zealand like no other place around the tourist track, as Captain Cook found out when they tried to sink his square rigger with their spears.

This is the only place I ever visited where the native guide invites you to drop around the village about sunset and have a bath with her family. You can bring your laundry along too, and drop it in the thermal pond with everyone else's and even boil yourself a ham if you can spear one on the way over.

It's even safe now and very rewarding to drop by a Maori village for dinner, although in Captain Cook's day it was never quite certain whether one would wind up as the guest of honor or the plat du jour.

Baja California area real paradise for beachcombers

By EARL GUSTKEY
The Los Angeles Times

MALARRIMO BEACH, Baja California — Midway down the Baja California peninsula, a spur of land juts into the Pacific like a hook, forming the huge Bay of Sebastian Vicaina.

There, along the bay's 50-mile southern shore, waves break as far as a half-mile seaward and wash up on one of the great beachcombing areas of the world, Malarrimo Beach.

At Malarrimo, you can find whale bones and torpedoes, seal skeletons and 100-year-old bottles, porpoise skeletons and U.S. Navy mops, human bodies and redwood logs, turtle skeletons and hatch covers.

In a way, Malarrimo is both the ocean's graveyard and the seaman's junkyard.

You can even find bottles with notes in them.

"We've released hundreds of drift bottles off California for the past 20 years and dozens have been returned to us from Malarrimo," says Dr. Joseph L. Reid, a Scripps Institute oceanographer.

There are two reasons why Malarrimo is a beachomber's dream:

—It's remote. The dirt road that turns off from Baja's transpeninsular highway near Guerrero Negro, is 85 miles long, a bumpy five-to-eight-hour ride. Chances are, an object you reach down to pick up — an old bottle, a life vest — has been lying untouched for years.

—The shoreline is a catchment for the Pacific's south-sweeping California current, which carries man's flotsam and the ocean's dead creatures past 25-mile-long Cedros Island, into the bay and onto the sands of Malarrimo.

The easy way in is to fly from Guerrero Negro. A local pilot, Francisco Morales, will fly in beachcombers and return them for $66. Planes land on the beach or at a dirt airstrip near a seasonal lobster village. Boats can also be used from Guerrero Negro.

The beach is startlingly flat, with an enormous tidal zone ranging up to a half-mile. Probably because of the strong winds the dry sand is soft, ground fine like powder. It's rough going for beachcombers — your feet sink in up to your ankles. Small, swift lizards dart about between the dunes.

Morales flew a Los Angeles Times writer and a photographer to Malarrimo one recent afternoon and in 2 1-2 hours they found: a decomposing whale carcass, a yacht (Satan's Bride, Los Angeles) that washed ashore in 1972, redwood logs up to 60 feet, a Standard Oil automatic transmission fluid drum, a seal skeleton, an intact military explosive canister stamped "electric fuse," a cow skeleton, dozens of A.1 sauce and catsup bottles, a jar of Johnson and Johnson wheat germ oil capsules, part of an airplane wing, dozens of whale vertebrae and thousands of shells.

You could fill a pickup truck with "keepable" shells at Malarrimo without having to move it. Clam, speckled scallop, star, smooth turban and wavy top shells are everywhere, some up to four inches across.

Driftwood abounds, some of it beautifully sculptured by wind and sand. One piece, perhaps several hundred pounds, resmbled a boulder from as close as 10 feet. A rock? A whale skull? No, it was wood, so twisted and contoured by the wind.

Bottles are common. Oddly, the two most commonly seen types are A.1. sauce and catsup bottles. Dr. Reid, the Scripps oceanographer, has a theory about this.

"I've noticed at Malarrimo you rarely see a liquor bottle, but A.1. sauce and catsup bottles by the hundred. I think what happens is when a man at sea finishes off a whisky bottle, it's almost a manly act to toss it overboard without capping it. So it sinks. But when a cook gets down to the bottom of a catsup bottle, it's almost human nature to cap it before discarding it. It would be somehow uncouth to throw an uncapped catsup bottle overboard."

"I found a bottle once that had a note in it from some grade-school class in Pasadena (Calif.), Munoz said. "It was dated five years prior to when I found it. I also found a Scripps bottle once, and mailed back the card that was inside.

"I've found several human corpses there. Once I found a 12-foot torpedo making a squeaking sound inside. I got just close enough to hear that. I've found boat masts, too."

Years ago, Munoz found a perfectly good 9-foot-long rubber boat he still uses. It's parked outside his home, alongside a collection of oars. He also likes to show off a wooden-handled ore-pouring ladle, assembled with wooden nails.

The centerpiece of his bottle collection is a turn-of-the-century, blue-frosted ink bottle, eight inches high, with a pouring spout. Engraved on the bottom: "S.S. Stafford's Ink — Made in U.S.A."

Munoz's wife is a devotee of scrimshaw, the art of whale bone carving. She carves little whales out of whale bones.

"But it has to be fresh bone," she explained. "If it's too old, too dried out, it chips and flakes. If I hear that a whale has washed up on Malarrimo, I try to have someone bring me back a rib."

Beachcombing in virgin territory like Malarrimo can raise your excitement to a fever pitch. You slog over the sand dunes, wondering what's over the next one. What's in that crate next to the whale carcass? Is that a hatch cover over there? You pull a bottle out of the sand that looks 50 years old and discard one you've been carrying that looks only 20 or so.

Hours go by like minutes. Suddenly, you're exhausted. The pilot signals it's time to leave. The 2 1-2 hours has seemed like 20 minutes.

The small plane lifts noisily off the beach and banks west, over the hissing surf. Malarrimo Beach stretches into the mist, toward its end, Point Eugenia. You're struck with the thought: "Nowhere in North America is there a beach like this."

Proxmire draws bead on Yankees

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — When the New York Yankees make a deal, they don't fool around. They didn't win 31 American League pennants by getting the short end of their bargains.

And those shrewd trading habits now have made them a political issue, at least with Sen. William Proxmire, Democrat of Wisconsin, home of the unfortunate Milwaukee Brewers.

Proxmire broke into the Senate lineup the other day to accuse the Yankees of ripping off New York City and to suggest that, at least indirectly, that means the U.S. Treasury is helping them buy up baseball's superstars.

Analysis

While he is not usually a heavy hitter, Proxmire is in the congressional cleanup slot on legislation to extend federal loan guarantees to help keep New York City solvent.

His Senate Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs Committee will manage the Senate version of the bill. Congress will have to decide what to do by June 30, when the current loan arrangement expires. Given his performance in past seasons, it's evident that Proxmire, skeptical about the whole arrangement, is only warming up on the Yankees.

His complaint is with the Yankees' contract with New York City for the rent at Yankee Stadium. He says they're getting the stadium some years for less than a batboy's salary.

"The Yankee contract looks like a transparent giveaway," he said.

It's too bad he wasn't around when the rest of the league needed him. The Yankee traders have been picking up bargains for years.

They founded their dynasty after buying Babe Ruth from the Boston Red Sox for $100,000 in cash and a $350,000 loan. They made the old Kansas City Athletics into a virtual farm team, picking up players almost at will to fill the few holes in their lineup. They wangled super relief pitcher Sparky Lyle from Boston for two journeyman infielders.

They seldom have come up on the short end of a deal. And they seem to have made one of their better deals with City Hall for the rent money on the renovated Yankee Stadium.

Proxmire said it appears that "some people up there, either because they are greedy, inept or corrupt, are ripping off the majority, and federal help will just prolong the ripoff and make it that much tougher to crack down."

The lease gives the city a cut of the gate and concessions at the stadium, but the Yankees can deduct maintenance costs against the rent.

As a result, Proxmire said, the Yankees are paying less than $150,000 for their world championship season last year. He contends they should have paid nearly $1 million.

"To be a party through New York City's dim-witted contract to making the Yankees richer still so that the Yankees can pay the huge salaries to take the best players away from us, that no red-blooded baseball fan outside New York City will ever permit," Proxmire said.

It might be good politics for New York to deal off a pitcher or two to the Brewers.

Bible now in 1,631 languages

NEW YORK (AP) — At least one book of the Bible had been published in 1,631 of the world's languages and distinct dialects by the end of 1977, according to the American Bible Society.

The society's annual Scripture language count indicates that the Bible is now available in 266 languages, the New Testament in 420 and portions of Scripture in 945.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Cancer tendency runs in families

Dear Dr. Solomon: Can cancer be inherited? There have been two cases of breast cancer in my wife's family, and I'd like to know if this affects her chance of getting it.—Don W.

Dear Don: Only a few rare kinds of cancer are actually inheritable. However, there is what is called a family tendency when a certain kind of cancer occurs more often than normal among blood relatives. This has been found to be true of breast cancer as well as cancer of the colon, lung, stomach and prostate. "Family" here means not only parents and children but includes uncles and aunts and cousins and grandchildren.

When this kind of familial tendency, or clustering, is noticed, other members of the family should take certain precautions—and what that especially means is regular medical examinations. In your wife's case, she should mention the incidence of breast cancer to her doctor if she has not already done so, and ask him if she needs more careful or more frequent checks than what she is getting at present. Self-examination, of course, is very important, so make sure your wife does that at least once or twice a month.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My little grandson is two months old, and I am convinced he does not hear as well as he should. Are there any simple indications you know of that one could go by—just to be sure?—D.L.

Dear D.L.: Even very young babies respond to sounds and voices—by stopping in their movement, for example, and looking in the direction from which the sound is coming. So if it seems your little grandson does not react to sound normally, I would certainly check now with a pediatrician. It is important to diagnose any hearing impairment as soon as possible. Otherwise, the child's development may be slowed, especially when it come to learning to talk.

There are a number of tests which specialists give to infants no more than a month old in order to find out how much and what kind of hearing impairment there is—if any. For instance, there is a relatively new machine, the respiratory audiometer, that is connected to a baby's ear and chest and detects a hearing defect by the baby's breathing. Measuring the brain waves is another, but older, technique.

Total deafness in a child is rare. If, however, there is a hearing deficiency, the parents must make a special effort to keep talking to the child and exposing him to normal household sounds, as the preschool years are the key ones in the child's development.

Longevity study set

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Soviet anthropologists were at the University of Kansas here recently, laying the groundwork for an information exchange program between the Soviet Union and the United States.

The program would allow aging and longevity researchers in both countries to coordinate their efforts and to standardize methods of measurement and investigation.

The Soviet research team, composed of about 40 investigators, has already received funding for the project from its government. The U.S. team has still to obtain a grant from an institute of aging before the program can start.

These recipes use leftover ham

Everyone raved about your Easter ham dinner. That was yesterday.

Today the problem is how to use up all of the leftover ham and still keep everyone glowing.

Here's a new recipe that should help accomplish that mission. Ham 'N Egg Roll-up dresses up your leftover ham bits in an omelet-like creation that's surprisingly easy to make. Just bake the no-fuss omelet in a shallow pan, top with a savory ham mixture, and roll-up jelly roll fashion. Serve with a tasty sauce that's easily made with an envelope of chicken gravy mix and lemon juice.

For a complete meal, serve with sliced tomatoes and cucumbers, buttered rolls, fruited gelatin, and coffee, tea or milk.

Another clever leftover idea is Oriental Potato Bake. It's a one-dish meal that combines packaged potatoes au gratin with canned Chinese vegetables and leftover ham. Round out the meal with a tossed salad, fresh fruit cup and cookies, and a beverage.

HAM 'N EGG ROLL-UP

1 package (10-oz.) frozen chopped spinach

4 eggs, separated
¼ cup butter or margarine, melted
¼ teaspoon salt
1 envelope chicken gravy mix
1 to 1½ cups diced cooked ham
1 teaspoon lemon juice
1 cup shredded cheddar or American cheese

Cook spinach following directions on package; drain very well. Generously grease 13 x 9-inch pan; line bottom with waxed paper. Grease paper generously. Beat egg whites until stiff peaks form. Beat egg yolks until fluffy; stir in spinach, melted butter, and salt. Fold in egg white. Spread in prepared pan. Bake at 350 degrees for about 10 minutes, until firm to the touch. Meanwhile, prepare chicken gravy following directions on envelope. Combine one-half the gravy with ham and lemon juice; heat 2 to 3 minutes. Loosen edges of the baked ham mixture with knife; turn out onto sheet of waxed paper. Remove paper from top of roll; spread with ham mixture. Sprinkle with cheese. Roll as for jelly roll starting with 9-inch side, by lifting waxed paper. Continue to lift, rolling to a jellyroll-shape onto serving platter. Slice and serve with gravy. 4 to 6 servings. QUICK METHOD: Spread egg mixture in well-greased 9-inch pie pan; sprinkle with cheese. Bake at 350 degrees for 20 minutes. Combine ham with the entire gravy mixture; spoon over wedges of baked egg.

ORIENTAL POTATO BAKE

1 package (5½-oz) Potatoes Au Gratin.
1 can (1-lb.) Chinese vegetables, undrained
1 cup slivered cooked ham
½ cup chow mein noodles
1 tablespoon soy sauce

Prepare potatoes as directed on package, using 2-quart casserole. Before baking, stir in vegetables, ham, and soy sauce; sprinkle with noodles. Bake at 400 degrees for 50 to 60 minutes, or until potatoes are tender when pierced with a fork. 5 servings.

LIFESTYLE

CLIP 'N COOK

BUTTERSCOTCH APPLES

Peel, core and quarter 8 Washington Golden Delicious apples. Arrange in shallow baking pan. Mix ¼ cup flour, cup brown sugar and ¼ cup butter or margarine until mixture resembles coarse crumbs. Add 1 teaspoon vanilla and 1 cup of water. Mix well. Spread over apples and cover with foil. Bake at 350 degrees for 1 hour. Makes 6 servings.

CINNAMON APPLE MOLD

Cinnamon Apple Mold is a colorful salad for a spring buffet. Combine ½ cup red cinnamon candies and 3 cups water. Bring to boil and simmer until candies are dissolved. Pour over 1 package (6 oz.) strawberry-flavor gelatin. Stir until dissolved. Chill until partially set. Fold in 2 cups chopped Washington Golden Delicious apples, 2 cups minature marshmallows and 1 cup chopped pecans. Turn into an oiled 2-quart mold. Chill until firm. Unmold on lettuce-lined plate. Makes 12 servings.

CANDIED GOLDENS AND CARROTS

This tempting vegetable dish is good choice to serve with ham. Cook 8 large carrots, sliced, in boiling salted water until just tender. Drain. Layer carrots in buttered 1-quart casserole with 2 Washington Golden Delicious apples, peeled, cored and sliced. Sprinkle with mixture of ¼ cup each granulated and brown sugar and 1 teaspoon cinnamon. Dot with 2 tablespoons butter or margarine. Bake at 325 degrees for 45 minutes. Makes 4 servings.

DEAR ABBY

'You're all wet' about shower privacy, says Abby

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Thanks for your understanding reply to that 13-year-old girl who said she nearly died of embarrassment when taking gang showers after gym. I hope her mother follows your advice and goes to the principal to demand some privacy for her daughter.

I was raised to be modest, and showering with other girls was a terrible ordeal for me. I'm married now and have a child, and I'm still modest.—FRESNO MOM

DEAR MOM: Thanks, but most of my mail on the shower problem said, "You're all wet!" Some samples:

DEAR ABBY: Instead of sympathizing with that shy girl, you should have encouraged her to examine her reasons for being ashamed of her body. Your answer was kind, but dumb. If she ever marries, she'll be the type who undresses in the closet and can't make love with the lights on.—NO HANG-UPS IN HOLYOKE

DEAR ABBY: I know exactly how that 13-year-old girl felt because I felt the same way, but it was worse for me because I was a boy!

Not only could I not gang shower, I couldn't even strip in front of other boys, so on gym days I wore my gym shorts under my pants.

I should have faced the fact that I had a problem and taken measures to overcome it in my youth. But I didn't, and it hung on for 15 years. You should have advised that shy girl to get counseling.—CHICKEN

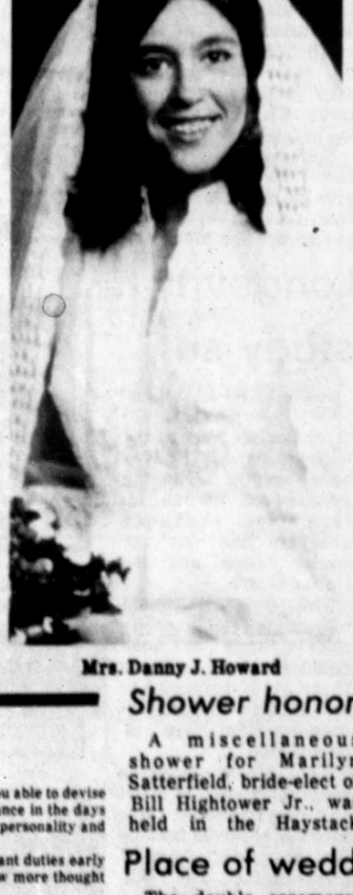

DEAR ABBY: Good grief! Why did you give comfort to that young girl who was ashamed of her body? If she doesn't get over it, between her natural instincts and her inhibitions, she's sure to wind up on a psychiatrist's couch.

Our kids were brought up in a nudist park, and they all have healthy attitudes about nudity and sex.—BODIES ARE BEAUTIFUL

DEAR ABBY: I must disagree with your answer to the teenager who hated group showers. I, too, was terribly embarrassed when confronted with group showers in junior high. My mother wanted to go to school to defend my right to privacy, but I begged her not to because I was afraid the other kids would tease me if I got special treatment. Now I'm glad she didn't go, because by the end of high school I overcame my feeling of "shame" about my body.—NOT ASHAMED OF ME

Are your problems too heavy to handle alone? Let Abby help you. For a personal, unpublished reply, write: ABBY in care of this newspaper. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Tammie Thomson, Danny Howard recite vows in church ceremony

Mrs. Danny J. Howard

Tammie Jo Thomson of Midland and Danny J. Howard of Midland were married at 4 p.m. Saturday in North A and Tennessee Street Church of Christ. William F. Walker officiated the double ring rites.

The bride is the daughter of Donald Thomson of Midland and Mrs. Helen Todd of South Padre Island. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Howard of Route 2.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of sheer candlelight organza designed with a fitted bodice. Wide lace and ribbon edged the V-neckline and trimmed the bodice. The same edging encircled the bishop sleeves, cuffs and the skirt that ended in a chapel-length train.

She wore a headpiece covered with matching lace and ribbon. It also edged the three-tiered fingertip veil.

She carried a bouquet of tangerine carnations and baby's breath.

The bride's attendants were Laura Midkiff, matron of honor; Lisa Merritt, maid of honor; Pattye Howard, the bridegroom's sister, and Karen Daves, bridesmaids, and Roselie Van, bridesmatron, all of Midland.

Dwain Howard, the bridegroom's brother of Midland, was best man. Groomsmen were David Lucas, the bridegroom's cousin; Tim Traweek and Albert Traweek, all of Midland, and Johnny Midkiff of Midkiff.

Bonnie Bryant, the bridegroom's niece of Midland, was flower girl. Ring bearer was Stacey Bryant, the bridegroom's nephew of Midland. Ushers were Craig Thomson, the bride's brother of Midland; Mark Green, Andy Schumann and Keith Myers, all of Midland.

Music was furnished by Bobbie Jo Howard, the bridegroom's sister, and the church choir.

A reception was held in the Fellowship Hall before the couple left on a trip to Cloudcroft, N.M. They will reside on Route 2, east of Midland.

Birth announced

GREAT FALLS, Mont.—Sgt. and Mrs. Brandon Merworth of Great Falls, formerly of Midland, Texas, announce the birth Feb. 28 of a daughter, Melinda Lee.

Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Fred Phillips and Mr. and Mrs. Hoot Gibson, all of Midland; Mr. and Mrs. Rector Chalmers of Odessa, Texas and Glenn Merworth of Arkansas.

Shower honors Marilyn Satterfield

A miscellaneous shower for Marilyn Satterfield, bride-elect of Bill Hightower Jr., was held in the Haystack Apartments clubhouse. Hostesses were Cindy Coleman and Mrs. Grant Billingsley. The honoree's chosen colors of yellow and white were used.

Place of wedding corrected

The double ceremony uniting in marriage Suzanna Olgin to Charles S. Peacock of Odessa and Gloria Olgin to Ron C. Keck, also of Odessa, will be held April 6 in the Las Palmas Ballroom in Midland and not Odessa as previously reported.

The sisters are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Eddie R. Olgin of 1200 E. Garden Lane.

The Reporter-Telegram regrets the error.

Now 6 Dress Sizes Smaller, I Can Tell It All.

Ms. Evelyn Hudgins of Columbus, Georgia tells her own story. NOW

Dear Mirror:

After our conversation in the department store dressingroom a few months ago, I walked right out empty handed. I took no time in calling Pat Walker-I was determined to never buy a larger size dress again. You know it's funny but until you told me all the sizes that I'd picked out were too small, I really had not thought of myself as fat.

I came back in the store the other day just to let you see how I looked since I lost from a size 16 to a size 10. You just wouldn't believe how I have toned and firmed.

Do you remember that I could hardly get my arm over my head while trying on dresses? I explained to you about my bursitis shoulder - well, now I can reach high with no pain. I have also seen much improvement in all my joints, my posture and my general well being. The compliments I have been receiving have been very nice, too. The passive treatments at Pat Walkers are just wonderful.

I'm sorry you were so busy and could not watch me try on all those beautiful size 10 clothes. It was such a joy and pleasure this time to shop for clothes that I knew would look good on me. The next time you have a friend come to see you with the same problems just have them call Pat Walker and see what they can do for them.

Pat Walker's can work for you too!

The entire process is so pleasant, so easy, and so inexpensive, you'll wish you had found the Pat Walker's method years ago.

Your Friend

P.S. Will be back in to see you again as soon as I lose a few more pounds.

A Standard Oil Co. spill team technician checks over a "cannon" to scare away water fowl from an oil spill. The noise-making device is part of more than 7,000 pounds of retrieval equipment contained on the company's 18-foot mobile unit which is dispatched to oil and chemical spills.

Standard Oil Co. spill team works to keep U.S. as nature 'intended it'

CHICAGO, Ill. — Where ther's a spill, ther's a way. Standard Oil Co. of Indiana has a way which blends team performance with advanced technology.

First conceived in 1973, Standard's current oil and chemical spill response program was created to meet spill conditions which might arise on or near inland waterways — where 75 percent of Standard's operations exist.

The company reasoned, says Dr. James P. Marum, Standard's coordinator-spill response and prevention, that major spills at sea, while spectacular in volume, were no more threatening to the ecosystems than lesser spills in the fresh waters of the U.S.

The program combines the interdisciplinary approach of a team, the Spill Technical Support Group (STSG), with the latest equipment and gear.

"The important keys to the operation," says Marum, "are its flexibility and mobility. We want a program which can provide technical advice and assistance for the big and small spills alike."

With this in mind, Standard supports the STSG with a network of vans, trucks, boats, and special cleanup devices and materials ready to go into action on an hour's notice anywhere Standard operates.

The "flagship" of the fleet, Marum explains, is the emergency mobile environmental control unit which is housed in the Chicago area at Standard's Naperville research Center.

It is an 18-foot Dodge van crammed with 7,000 pounds of oil retrieval equipment and rigged to pull a trailer carrying two shallow draft boats equipped with outboard motors.

While making five to seven "spill trips" annually throughout the Midwest, the unit also serves as a model for other vehicles used by the company's more distant operating groups.

The van has both mobile and walkie-talkie radios, pumps and oil skimming devices, a portable vacuum oil recovery system, collection and transfer hoses, 400 feet of containment boom, absorbent materials, stakes and chicken wire for creek damming, and inflatable 1,500-gallon containers. The van even includes a noise-making device, which looks and sounds like a cannon, to scare away waterfowl which might otherwise have landed on the spill.

As part of the equipment, Standard scientists have developed several award-winning pollution control devices, including the Brush Belt Oil Retriever. The smallest "retriever" unit recovers heavy oil from the surface of the water at the rate of 2,000 gallons per hour.

But the heart of the program, Marum insists, is the STSG team. And the team is composed of chemists, biologists, soils specialists, engineering and containment consultants, petroleum analysts, and general technicians.

Blumenthal requests threat from President

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal has formally urged President Carter to announce that the administration will impose special levies on oil imports unless Congress passes a tax on crude oil by May 1.

The special import fee would serve the same and as the president's proposed crude-oil equalization tax: reduce domestic oil consumption by raising the price of the fuel.

Blumenthal outlined his concern about oil imports and the need for action in a long memo to the president late last week, sources familiar with the memo said.

Congress has been deadlocked on a massive energy bill since well before Christmas.

Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., head of the Senate conferees on the tax portion of Carter's energy proposals, already has said the tax on crude oil is dead in the Senate. The Carter proposal would tax domestic oil (now under price controls) in order to bring the price up to world levels.

The tax on imports would be designed to achieve the same increase in overall fuel prices that a tax on domestic oil would generate.

Before Congress deals with the tax portions of Carter's energy package, Congress must iron out its differences on lifting price controls on natural gas.

Although other administration economic officials are said to share Blumenthal's concern about discouraging oil consumption, none have joined him in formally urging a presidential announcement for fear such an act would end chances for passage of a crude oil tax.

New Federal Reserve Board Chairman G. William Miller, however, has said the president cannot afford to wait very long before taking steps on his own to curb oil consumption.

In testimony before Congress last week and in a meeting with a small group of reporters this week, Miller said Carter must do something within a matter of weeks.

Blumenthal and Miller fear the dollar will continue to decline on world markets unless investors are convinced the nation has taken steps to reduce its dependence on foreign oil thereby trimming its massive trade deficit) and to curb what seems to be accelerating inflation.

Miller said a $5-a-barrel fee on imported oil would add 0.2 percent or 0.3 percent to inflation; the declining dollar already has added between 0.5 percent and 0.75 points to the inflation rate and will add more if the decline is not arrested. A falling dollar makes imports more expensive.

Sources familiar with Blumenthal's memo said he also expressed his growing concern about the recent acceleration of inflation.

Earlier last week, Blumenthal and Charles L. Schultze, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, wrote a memorandum to the president outlining Carter's options for dealing with rising prices.

The memorandum was based on earlier ones prepared by Barry Bosworth, director of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, and on discussions of the Cabinet-level economic policy group.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said Thursday that the president has not yet decided on his inflation strategy or when he will announce it.

Powell said Carter had received "various sundry proposals" from advisers, but said there is a "distinction between suggestions to the president and decisions by the president."

Blumenthal and Schultze told Carter that, in order to make his voluntary proposals work — in which labor and business moderate their demands this year enough to trim one-half percent from the underlying inflation rate of 6 percent to 7 percent — the government should take some actions on its own.

They suggested, among others things, trimming a pay raise for federal workers and directing agencies to consider the inflationary effect of their actions.

Carter signed an executive order Thursday morning on regulatory reform that, among other things, orders executive branch agencies to make an economic assessment of their decisions. In signing the order, he mentioned the contribution that government regulations make to inflation.

Monk forces dwindle

The Los Angeles Times

IVOLGINSK, Soviet Union — Before the Bolshevik Revolution in 1917, there were 16,000 Buddhist monks in Russia. Today, under the officially atheistic government, there are perhaps 60.

No one knows how many Soviet citizens profess to be buddhists, but most of them are thought to be here in the mountainous republic of Buryat, on the border with Mongolia.

One of the nation's two Buddhist temples — once there were 40 — is located here. The president of the Central Religious Board of buddhism in the Soviet Union has his headquarters here.

About 100 of the faithful turned up at the ornate Buddhist temple recently for the Feast of the White Moon. They lined the temple's walls and prayed as two dozen monks read aloud from ancient manuscripts.

Not even J.D. Gomboyev, the 81-year-old patriarch of Soviet Buddhists, could say how many Buddhists there are in this country.

Gale force winds still hamper cleanup crews

By PETER MATTIACE

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Gale force winds and heavy seas more than 100 miles offshore continued to plague the Exxon drill ship Glomar Pacific as crewmen worked to sink the first East Coast oil well sometime today.

National Weather Service officials here said a low-pressure system off the coast today could put the Glomar Pacific in heavy thunderstorms, fog, wind gusts of 35 miles per hour and 15-foot seas.

"It's hard to get started in heavy seas with the ship heaving," said Crandall Jones, Exxon's manager of offshore exploration. "There's nothing dangerous about it, it's just slow."

Exxon spokesman Joseph Tucker said if poor weather predictions held, it could be this evening before the vessel could begin drilling.

Engineers and surveyors spent their first weekend off this resort taking readings from satellites in an effort to position the ship within 250 feet of a spot geologists say offers the best chance of finding offshore oil and gas.

"It may appear that we're having problems, but actually this operation is going very, very smoothly," said an Exxon engineer who asked not to be identified. "You're very lucky if you can go in there and drill right away."

Officials had hoped the Glomar Pacific, which arrived offshore shortly after midnight Thursday, could begin drilling sometime Saturday. The drilling operation is costing Exxon $110,000 a day.

The seas and radio interference with five navigation satellites have slowed efforts to precisely position the 451-foot ship within feet of a spot geologists say is the most likely to hold oil and gas deposits.

Engineers said federal regulations require clear radio readings from at least 20 satellite passes to determine the location of the ship.

Eight large deep water anchors are firmly holding the Glomar Pacific to the sandy bottom 398 feet below the sea's surface. The anchors are designed to hold the vessel steady during drilling.

When the survey crews are satisfied of their location, they must then position the vessel on the precise spot they want to drill by tightening and loosening cables to the ship's anchors.

The first step of the drilling will be the lowering of a 12-foot square steel box to serve as a guide when crewmen finally lower a 36-inch drill bit to punch the first hole in the ocean floor.

Jones said the handling of this box, called a "guide base," is critical to the drilling of the first well. "It's like threading a needle," he said.

The first well is scheduled to take 90 days to drill to a depth of 14,000 feet.

Experts predict that 1.4 billion barrels of oil and 9.4 trillion cubic feet of gas may lie under the seabed off New Jersey and Delaware.

The oil industry had paid $1.1 billion to the federal government for the right to look for energy deposits on 93 offshore tracts. Exxon paid $72.1 million for the one 9-square-mike tract where the Glomar Pacific is anchored.

$30 million tab placed on oil spill

BREST, France (AP) — French officials say they expect the cost of the cleanup and damage claims from the Amoco Cadiz oil spill to far exceed $30 million, the maximum insurance companies are required to pay for such a pollution disaster.

Amoco, the American oil company that owned the supertanker, insured the ship for $12 million. The oil, owned by Shell, is insured for $20 million. Experts say there are no legal steps France can take to claim damages above $30 million, the limit set by an international agreement which France ratified.

Christian Gerondeau, national civil defense director, said he felt sure the government would be "talking to people" about the cost of the cleanup and damages from the worst oil spill in history.

Citing examples of the cleanup costs, he said the fleet of vessels spraying chemicals on the oil slick at sea is costing $2 million a day, and six oyster farmers estimate their losses will reach $1.3 million. But he would make no estimate of the total.

As the pounding waves sent geysers of crude oil 20 feet into the air from the wreck's tanks, French officials were considering dynamiting the hull to release the last 8.8 million gallons estimated to be still aboard.

Attempts to pump out the remaining oil have been stymied by continuous gales. Officials want to get it all out so it can be dispersed or cleaned up, fearing that otherwise it will be source of long-time persistent pollution along the Brittany coast.

Since the tanker ran aground March 17, an estimated 56 million gallons of oil have spewed from the ship to wash up on the beaches or formed a huge oil slick floating offshore about 90 miles to the east of the wreck.

Mitchell, Andrews get new field producers

A new project and a new well have been reported in Mitchell County, and an Andrews field has gained a new oiler.

Barron Kidd of Midland No. 7 Coleman Estate is to be drilled as a 3,300-foot test in the Coleman Ranch, North field of Mitchell County, in the Cuthbert townsite.

The project is 2.150 feet from north and 2,450 feet from east lines of section 68, block 97, H&TC survey and 890 feet southwest of production.

MITCHELL WELL

Sun Oil Co. No. 4-A J. F. McCabe has been completed in the Mameson, North (Strawn) field of Mitchell County.

On 24-hour potential test, the well flowed 114 barrels of 43-gravity oil and no water, through a 10/64-inch choke and perforations from 6,073 to 6,206 feet. The pay was treated with 750 gallons of acid and fractured with 150,000 gallons.

Hole is bottomed at 6,238 feet and 5½-inch casing is set at total depth. The plugged back depth is 6,206 feet.

BTA Oil Producers of Midland No. 1 7803 JV-P Great Plains has en completed as a flowing well in the Glasco, East (Devonian) field of Andrews County.

Operator reported a daily potential of 484 barrels of 38.8-gravity oil, through a 10/64-inch choke and from open hole from 12,594 to 12,611 feet. The gas-oil ratio was too small to measure.

Completion came after a 250-gallon acid treatment.

Hole is bottomed at 12,611 12,611 feet and seven-inch casing is set at 12,594 feet.

No. 1 7803 JV-P Great Plains is the second well from the Devonian in the field. It is a northwest offset to the other producer.

Wellsite is 660 feet from south and 1,320 feet from east lines of section 6, block 6, University Lands survey and 16 miles northeast of Andrews.

PARKER WILDCAT

E&E Producing Co. of Lubbock No. 1 B. H. Park is to be drilled as a 4,000-foot wildcat in Parker County, two miles south of Weatherford.

It is 3,850 feet southeast of 2,545-foot oil production in an unnamed area.

EASTLAND TEST

Kahan Energy Corp. of Cisco No. 1 Gardner has peaked as a 4,000-foot wildcat in Eastland County, seven miles southwest of Scranton.

Site is 467 feet from north and east lines of section 130, block 3, H&TC survey, abstract 1834. It is 8,400 feet northeast of 3,630-foot oil production in the Regular Field.

Market declines moderately

NEW YORK (AP) — Expectations of more adverse news on inflation helped push stock prices into a moderate decline today.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was down 1.91 at 754.59.

Losers opened up a 3-2 lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said there was some favorable response among investors to the end of the winterlong coal strike.

But they also said traders were anticipating bad news Tuesday when the government makes its monthly report on the trend of consumer prices.

G. William Miller, the new chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, indicated last week that he would push for tighter credit if the recent acceleration in the pace of inflation continues.

American Telephone preferred B stock led the active list, unchanged at 48⅞. A 300,000-share block traded at 49.

Sears Roebuck lost ⅜ to 22¾ in active trading. The stock has been under pressure since the company's report last week of a 19.5 percent quarterly earnings decline.

The NYSE's composite index of more than 1,500 common stocks dropped .20 to 49.66. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .06 at 127.95.

Volume on the Big Board slowed to 7.95 million shares in the first two hours from 8.44 million in the comparable period last Thursday, before the long Easter weekend.

Accident kills area woman

FORT STOCKTON — A 50-year-old Fort Stockton woman was pronounced dead at the scene of a one-vehicle accident early Sunday morning.

Investigating Department of Public Safety troopers said Annis Rose Ellis was northbound on FM 1053 when her vehicle apparently ran off the right side of the road. The troopers said Ms. Ellis overcorrected. Her vehicle ran off the left shoulder and then rolled, a DPS spokesman said.

The accident occurred 4.1 miles north of Fort Stockton at 4:30 a.m. Ms. Ellis was pronounced dead at the scene at 6 a.m. by Fort Stockton Peace Justice Fred Capers.

Man's condition termed 'poor'

ODESSA — A 22-year-old Odessa was listed this morning in poor condition in Medical Center Hospital in Odessa after the motorcycle he was riding overturned Saturday night.

Billy Ray Uhlhorn reportedly received a skull fracture, a broken left wrist and facial lacerations. Police said Uhlhorn apparently lost control of the motorcycle and was thrown from the vehicle.

Midlander hurt in accident

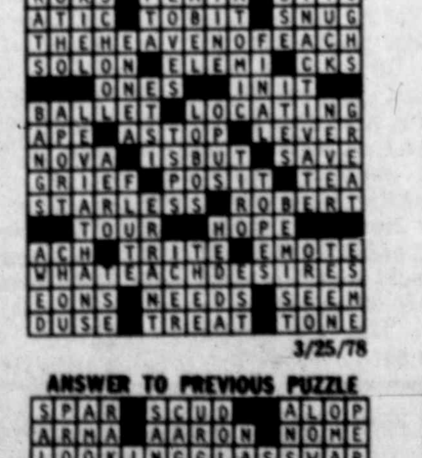

A 38-year-old Midlander, Pete Ybarra, was listed this morning in satisfactory condition in Midland Memorial Hospital following a one-vehicle accident at 2:45 a.m. Sunday on Interstate Highway 20.

A Department of Public Safety spokesman said today that Ybarra was eastbound on Interstate 20, pulling a semi-trailer with 160 barrels of oil. He apparently swerved to the right to miss another vehicle, left the roadway and overturned on the shoulder, the spokesman said.

Moscow hails miner 'victory'

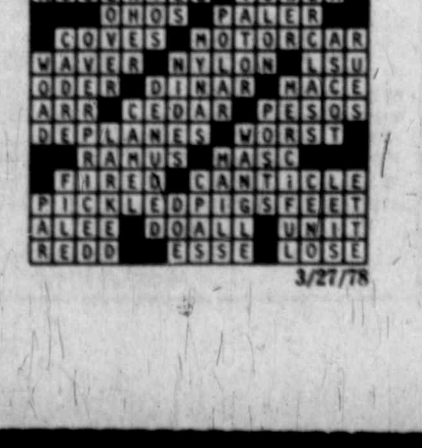

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet news agency Tass characterized the end of the U.S. coal strike today as a "strikers' success," and said that "in persistent struggle the strikers secured a number of concessions from trust owners."

Panel sets date on rate request

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Public Utility Commission today set May 22 as the date it will begin its hearing on Southwestern Bell Telephone's request for rates that would increase its annual revenue by $214.3 million.

The commission also gave its staff until May 15 to submit independent findings on Bell's revenue requirements.

The staff typically recommends rates that are considerably below those requested by utility companies.

A long list of parties including the attorney general and the Texas Municipal League was given permission to participate in the case in opposition to Bell's proposed increase.

Board Chairman George Cowden instructed Bell to provide whatever information is sought by the opposing parties and not to quibble over lack of clarity in some requests.

Paul Gray, Communications Workers of America spokesman, asked the commission if Bell could be ordered to bring to the hearing a standard telephone, cord and jack. Cowden said if Bell objected the matter would be subject to a hearing before the commission.

Gray later explained the unusual request, saying it would enable the CWA to show "how simple it is for a customer to go to Sears or Radio Shack and buy a phone made in Japan and plug it in to the jack provided by the company."

Gray said the demonstration would address Bell's proposal to double installation charges, while giving customers a 65-cent monthly rebate if they owned their own telephones.

"The higher they go on that charge, the more incentive it gives the customer to buy a phone from some competitor...The fewer premise visits they make, the fewer installers they need," said Gray.

College accepts aid applications

ODESSA — Financial aid applications now are being taken for the 1978-79 school year from Odessa College students and prospective students, Norine Bledsoe, financial aid officer, said.

"We don't want money problems to keep anyone from attending Odessa College," she said.

Interested persons may apply at the college financial aid office, located in room 106 of Easkin Hall. Applications include information about the family income tax for last year, she said.

She said many different types of financial aid are available to meet specific needs and reward individual accomplishments. She said she will help explain any details regarding applications and will help persons decide which type of financial aid is best for them.

Vandals wreak havoc in east Midland home

Vandals Saturday night wreaked havoc in an east Midland home, destroying or damaging more than $1,500 in household furnishings.

Barbara Ann Gray Woods told police that sometime between 6:15 and 11:45 p.m. Sunday someone entered her house in the 1300 block of East Parker Avenue and destroyed an aquarium, a television set, window, sewing machine and house plant. Damaged were two glass panes in the door of a built-in range, carpeting and the kitchen walls.

Police said entry was gained through a side window.

Pastor pleads guilty

Big Spring minister Roy E. Honea this morning pleaded guilty in federal court in Midland to one charge of subscribing to a false tax return in 1973.

The U.S. Attorney's office announced that as part of a plea bargain a second count against Honea was dropped.

Judge John H. Wood delayed sentencing until he receives a pre-sentence report and continued bond until sentencing.

Maximum sentence possible is three years imprisonment and a fine of $5,000 plus cost of prosecution.

Man robs grocery

A man patting his coat pocket Sunday night robbed the Pronto Pantry, a drive-in grocery store at 1117 Andrews Highway, of an undisclosed amount of cash.

Store clerk Russell Lee Hight told police he was working alone when a man in his mid-30s entered the store, threatened him and took the money from the register.

Detective Lt. Earl Luckey said today that no weapon was displayed during the robbery, but that the man tried to convey the impression of a weapon by patting his coat pocket.

Network acquires book for mini-series

LOS ANGELES (AP) — NBC has acquired the book "My Thirty Years Backstairs at the White House" for a mini-series about a maid and her mother who served eight first families.

The series will be based on the personal story by Lillian Rogers Parks, and her mother, Maggie Rogers, who served as maids at the White House

Absentee voting ends

Tuesday is the last day for absentee voting for the April 1 school board, city, college district and hospital district elections.

Persons who will be out of Midland County on election day may vote at the school administration building from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday.

Bush scheduled to speak

Congressional candidate George W. Bush will speak Tuesday to the Optimist Club of Midland's noon meeting in the Best Western Motel.

Hickox offices to open

A campaign headquarters in Midland for Joe Hickox, Republican candidate for Congress in the 19th District, will be opened at noon Wednesday, a spokesman for Hickox said today.

The headquarters will be at 422 Andrews Highway.

Let us reason together.

There's never been a better time.

Reason 1: The Peugeot 604 is one of the most comfortable luxury cars in the world. It owes its superb ride to a four-wheel independent suspension that's engineered to work in complete harmony with over-sized springs and shocks, and fully reclining orthopedic seats.

Reason 2: Unlike most cars, the 604 offers unsurpassed handling without sacrificing comfort. Motor Trend magazine put it best—"You just naturally assume that a car that rides this comfortably must have to give up something in the handling department. Not so. It leans a bit, but clings like a limpet in both fast and slow curves."

Reason 3: Safety is at the forefront of the 604's design. It has an energy absorbing body—front and rear. With the entire frame of unibody construction, welded at 7,000 points for added strength. In the interior, the occupants are completely surrounded in foam padding.

Reason 4: Unparalleled quality control. Not only does every 604 have tens of thousands of checkpoints subject to rigid quality control, but each car is individually test-driven over Peugeot's special test track.

Reason 5: There's never been a better time to come in and talk to us.

Devils feel pressure is on Kentucky

By DAVID DUPREE
The Washington Post

ST. LOUIS — It is being billed as a game between Kentucky's muscle and Duke's finesse, but Monday night's NCAA championship final (NBC-TV, 8:15 p.m. CST) will be more a game of Kentucky cool versus Duke enthusiasm. Kentucky experience versus Duke youth and Kentucky's hard-working, serious-minded men grinding it out against carefree kids from Duke.

Few NCAA finals in recent years have matched teams with such diverse makeups. Duke starts two freshmen, two sophomores (one of them only 18 years old), and a junior. The last few seasons have been lean ones for the Blue Devils and they were supposed to be a team of the future, not of the present.

Kentucky, however, has been the team all year, picked No. 1 before a game was played. The Wildcats are a big, veteran team and the tradition-rich basketball school made it to the NCAA final as recently as 1975.

DUKE HAS nothing to lose. The Blue Devils are cocky enough to feel that it is a sure thing that they will be back again next year and probably for years after that. They don't have a care in the world and they act and play like it.

All of the pressure is on Kentucky.

"From the first day the season started, we've heard 10,000 times a week that we are supposed to be the next national champions, and that's a lot of pressure to live with," said Kentucky Coach Joe B. Hall.

"We can feel the pressure, but I think it has made the tournament a little easier for us," said forward Rick Robey. "We're used to everything now."

After their semifinal victories Saturday, both teams stuck to character. Duke had a victory celebration right there at midcourt while Kentucky ran to the seclusion of its dressing room.

"WE HAVEN'T celebrated all year after a win," said Hall. "We want to win it all and then celebrate."

"We've told outselves all year long that we aren't going to be happy until we win it all," said Robey, "and that's what we've been working for.

"Duke is young and playing with youthful exuberance. They are slapping people on the back and hugging each other a lot. That's fine, but we aren't that way. We just take a different approach. We played and acted like they do when we were freshmen, but we aren't freshmen anymore. We're having fun, but we just take things a little more serious.

"We've been thinking national championship all year long. As a result, we may not have enjoyed ourselves as much as we could have during the season, but we will enjoy it the rest of our lives if we win."

DUKE IS loving every minute of the entire experience.

"Our enthusiasm is just great to be around," said Coach Bill Foster. "We've had our ups and downs, but we've always stuck together. I love the enthusiasm part of our play and I just hope we can keep it up. It's a big part of our success."

Kentucky (29-2) beat Arkansas, 64-59, in the semifinals with Jack Givens scoring 23 points and getting nine rebounds. The Wildcats surrprised the Razorbacks with their quickness and used it to push Arkansas out of its offense.

Duke (27-6) got 29 points from Mike Gminski, 22 and 12 rebounds from Eugene Banks and 20 points from Jim Spanarkel to beat Notre Dame, 90-86, in the other semifinal.

Duke, the best free-throw shooting team in the nation won the game at the foul line by making 32 of 37 foul shots.

By DOUG TUCKER

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Would a Kentucky victory in tonight's NCAA championship game be the last time the Wildcats take the floor under Coach Joe B. Hall?

Hall himself hinted at the possibility Sunday after declaring: "This season was without celebration for us."

"So much has been expected of us," Hall said at a midmorning news conference. "We've had only two losses this year and still there has been so much pressure. It's been real tough."

Hall's senior-laden team, ranked No. 1 practically the entire season, was rated a solid favorite over a young Duke squad in tonight's finals, and Hall was asked later if he might retire with the championship.

"I wouldn't answer that right now," he said. "I just don't know."

Later in the day, after his remarks stirred up quite a fuss in Lexington, Ky., Hall denied he would resign and, in a terse statement issued through the Kentucky sports information office, branded such conjecture "absolutely false."

"I will not resign, win or lose tomorrow night," Hall's statement said.

Hall, however, did not deny making the remarks that led to the conjecture. He told Lexington, Ky., writers he did not remember exactly what he said.

Since succeeding the late Adolph Rupp six years ago, Hall has fashioned a sparkling 21.7 victory average and taken the Wildcats to the NCAA tournament four times. But the ultimate trophy, the NCAA championship, has thus far eluded him and the insistent Kentucky fans.

"The only way we can have a successful year is to win the NCAA," he said. "It's strange that you can have this much pressure in an academic setting."

A year ago, when Kentucky bowed to North Carolina in the finals of the East Regional, Hall endured rumors of his impending resignation. This week in St. Louis, hundreds of Kentucky fans have been wearing "I'm a Joe B. Fan" buttons on their lapels.

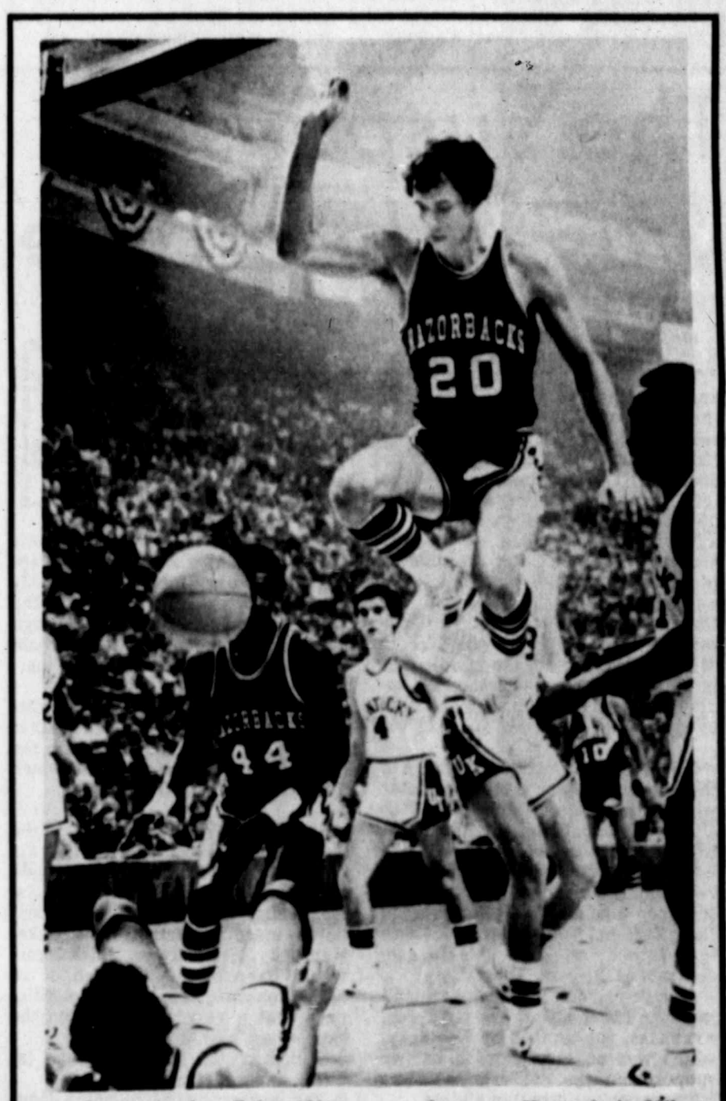

"We won the Southeastern Conference championship and when we came back to Lexington we didn't even celebrate then," he said. "When we started practice this fall, people close to our program began the year saying, 'We know you're going to win the NCAA.' Not, 'We hope you win the NCAA,' but, 'We know you're going to win the NCAA.'

"Our players respond to this and by the time we get to a big tournament, our kids are hardened to this kind of thing and weren't bothered by the pressure."

Some fans, he added, "just can't shoulder defeat. We're a winning club. But we can handle defeat if we have to. But some people can't."

"The Kentucky tradition was built 48 years ago by Adolph Rupp, who said he didn't want a program built on castles of sand. Our program is not built that way. That's one of the reasons for the tremendous pressure.

"These kids have carried on that tradition of class which has become synonymous with Kentucky basketball. They've won every championship except this one. So you see the pressure of opportunity we have going into this final game."

Third at Ontario won't go to head of Jim Hall's crew

By PAUL DOMOWITCH

Jim Hall has been around the sport of motor racing long enough to realize that one race does not success or failure make. He wasn't ready to put a gun to his head last week after his Chaparral-Lola racing team's disappointing 10th place finish at Phoenix, and by the same token, the 42-year-old Midlander isn't going to let Sunday's third place finish in the Datsun 200 at Ontario (Calif.) Motor Speedway mislead him into any false belief that this USAC championship circuit is a piece of cake.

But all in all, there was room for a little jubilation. Only a little though.

"We certainly made quite an improvement," Hall said after the race. "The car ran pretty strong the entire race, the pits stops went well, and while Al (Unser) did have some minor handling problems with the car, we were pleased with the results.

"We've still got a ways to go yet. But things are looking up."

AT THE very least, they're looking quite a bit better than they did a week ago. The team's USAC debut in Phoenix was a difficult experience from beginning to end. The pinion in the car's transmission broke during practice, and only a borrowed spare part from Team McLaren enabled Unser to qualify the car later.

But it was only a reprieve. In the race the next day, the pinion broke again and Unser was forced out just 10 laps from the finish.

Ontario was a different story though. Hall made a few minor adjustments in the exhaust system after Phoenix and the car never ran better.

Unser flirted with second place for a brief time late in the race, before giving way to Tom Sneva on the 64th lap of this 80 lap race. Sneva finished second, 6.69 seconds behind winner Danny Ongais, after being assessed a 32-second penalty for passing the pace car under the yellow flag.

The next USAC championship race, the Coors 200 at College Station, is almost three weeks away, but the Chaparral-Lola team have plenty to keep them busy. They'll take the car up to Indianapolis for a tire test on April 3 for four days, and there's also work to be done on the team's second Cosworth V-8 powered car, which will be arriving in Midland from England any day now.

Ontario finish marred by dispute in scoring

By JERRY GARRETT

ONTARIO, Calif. (AP) — Some races are over as soon as the green flag is dropped. Others aren't finished until long after the checkered flag has been put away.

Such was the case in both of the twin 200-mile U.S. Auto Club races at Ontario Motor Speedway on Sunday.

In a 200-mile Indianapolis car race, hard-charging Danny Ongais took a 6.69-second victory over Tom Sneva, but a scoring dispute boiled for hours after the race.

In the 200-mile stock car portion of the program, A.J. Foyt idled away from the field at the start, leaving only the final margin of victory in doubt.

"I'd hoped I could get out in front and take it a little easier, but there were too many yellow flags for that," said Foyt, who now leads both the Indy car and stock car point standings. "I had to work pretty darn hard out there, mainly because of all the yellow.

"EVERY TIME I'd get a lead built up, there'd be a yellow flag and everyone would pack up."

Even when the field would bunch up behind the caution car, Foyt had the horsepower in his Chevrolet Camaro to put distance between himself and the rest as soon as the green flag came back out.

"I got caught once on the packup where I had to work all the way through the crowd, but I got up there without too much trouble," Foyt said.

It turned out those eight laps were the only ones Foyt didn't lead in the 80-lap chase around Ontario Motor Speedway's 2.5- mile oval. The race finished under yellow, with Foyt's lead protected. Jim Thirkettle was second with Jim Insolo third. Original runnerup Ivan Baldwin was docked a lap, which knocked him down to eighth place, for passing Foyt during the final caution.

Penalties kept the ledger open on the Indy car race until long after the national television cameras had switched off.

Sneva, the pole position starter with a gaudy world record qualifying speed of 202.384 miles per hour, finished second after an up-and-down race that saw him go first to last to first again three times.

SNEVA HAD trouble getting his car in gear on the start, and it dropped him to the rear of the 24-car field. He worked quickly back to seventh but made an unscheduled pit stop that put him near the back again.

At 60 miles, though, he had roared up into the lead. When a caution period started shortly after that, however, Sneva passed the caution car.

"The light wasn't on on the pace car and no one held his hand out to hold me back, so I went by," Sneva explained.

For the infraction, officials called him in to the pits and held his car there until all the cars he had passed could get by him again.

Sneva's team argued against the penalty, saying Sneva should have won the race. But third-place finisher Al Unser and Foyt, in fourth, complained they should be scored in front of Sneva.

Navratilova draws top seed in Slims

OAKLAND (AP) — Martina Navratilova and Evonne Goolagong have been top-seeded for the $150,000 women's tennis championships starting Wednesday at the Oakland Coliseum.

Navratilova and Goolagong will head two groups of four players who will participate in round-robin competition through Saturday.

Digger wants consolation tilt done-in ST. LOUIS (AP) — The consolation prize in the NCAA basketball playoffs is no consolation to Digger Phelps.

"I hope in the future we can figure a way of bypassing the consolation game," says the Notre Dame coach. "It's an emotional letdown and unfair to the kids involved."

Phelps, part of a growing legion of basketball coaches who are making a stand against the third-place game at the NCAA championships, underscored one of his pet peeves Sunday.

Speaking at a news conference prior to tonight's championship finals, Phelps made the motion to abolish the virtually meaningless contest. And Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton seconded the motion.

"I FEEL it's unfair to have it," said Phelps, whose Fighting Irish meet Sutton's Razorbacks in the preliminary contest prior to the title game between Kentucky and Duke. "It's unfair for everyone concerned.

"We've bypassed consolation games in the regionals and it's fair to the teams involved. I'm in this situation and I know it's fair to the teams involved here, too. Maybe now that we're playing the All-Star game on Sunday, we could play it as a preliminary to the championship game. Playing the East-West game then could really add a lot of color and flavor to the players involved and the crowd."

Phelps' reference was to an all-star game sponsored by the National Association of Basketball Coaches, played Sunday at Kiel Auditorium.

Asked what he'd rather do than play the consolation game, Phelps quipped: "Let's go to Busch Gardens ... I gave up beer for Lent and I can start again."

Kentucky, Duke thumbnail sketches

ST.LOUIS (AP) — The probable starting lineups and how the players shape up for Monday night's NCAA basketball championship:

DUKE

Jim Spanarkel (34) 6-5 junior guard — The elder statesman of the youthful Blue Devils, Spanarkel is considered Duke's finest defensive player ...highly intelligent ...a floor leader as well as play-maker ...scored 30 or more points four times this year and once hit 32 straight from the foul line.

Gene Banks (20) 6-7 freshman forward — Nicknamed "Tinkerbell" because of his grace and effervescent personality, Banks proved himself one of the greatest freshman in the country by averaging almost 17 points and nine rebounds per game ...'

Mike Gminski (43) 6-11 sophomore center — One of the brightest collegiate athletes in the nation, he graduated from high school a year early and still is just 18 years old ...Duke's top rebounder, with more than 11 per game, while scoring almost 20 points ...

John Harrell (22) 6-0 sophomore guard — Not a great shooter, except at the foul line, where he hit 32 of 40 this year for an .800 average ...value lies in his ball-handling and defensive prowess ...rang up 29 steals this year.

Kenny Dennard (33) 6-7 freshman forward — Started every game as a freshman and was third in assists with 57 and second in steals with 38 ...

KENTUCKY

Jack Givens (21) 6-4 senior forward — Will cap a brilliant college career against Duke ... a three-year starter and Wildcats' No. 2 all-time scoring leader ...strong and quick, the southpaw-shooting Givens led the Wildcats this year with 17.7 points per game and was second with 6.7 rebounds and 72 assists.

Rick Robey (53) 6-10 forwardcenter — A streaky player who was disappointing the first

Luttrell, Rivera in Houston semis

HOUSTON — Reg Luttrell and Jose Rivera defeated Rice University's David Patterson and Jim Manning, 6-4, 6-7, 6-1 here Sunday in the quarterfinals of men's doubles event in the Houston Open Tennis Tournament, and earned a berth in today's semifinals.

Luttrell and Rivera are the only Midland College netters still alive in this tough holiday tourney. Ron Cetrone and Mike Burch were beaten in the third round of the doubles competition Sunday by Kim Kettleson and Ross Silverman, 6-4, 6-3, and Ann Layman and Blanca Barriga saw their title hopes wiped out in the women's doubles quarterfinals, as the pair was beaten by Becky Roberts and Marty Corley of San Angelo, 6-3, 3-6, 6-2.

Reg Luttrell got as Far as the quarterfinals in the men's singles competition, but was eliminated Sunday by Lubbock's Doug Davis in straight sets, 6-3, 6-3.

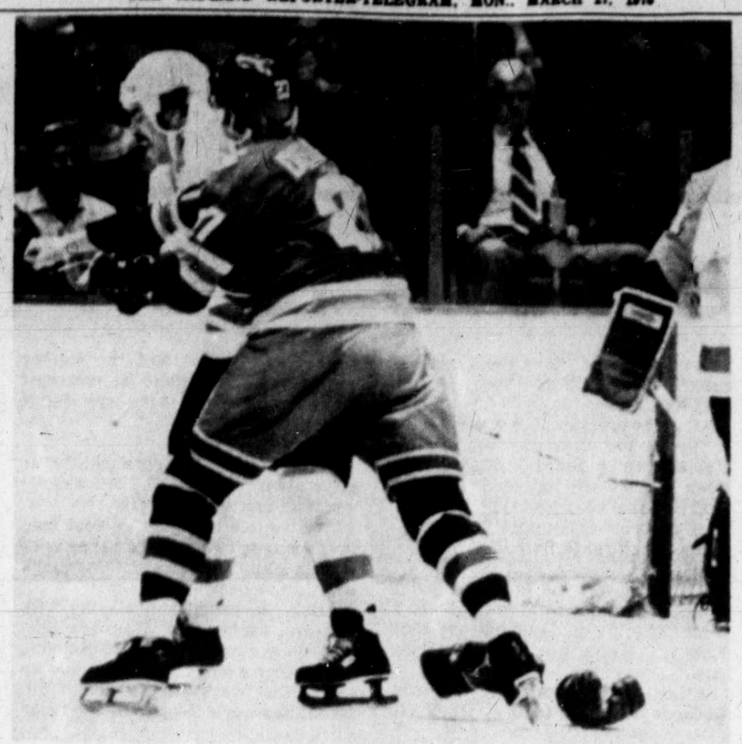

Luttrell, a sophomore from Perth, Australia, and Rivera, a freshman out of El Paso, pulled off one of the biggest upsets of the tournament in the third round Sunday, when they surprised the top-seeded tandem of Chris Bobbett and Jim Ronberg, 7-5, 7-6. Bobbett and Ronberg are competing professionals from the Houston area.

Owners hold key to A's

OAKLAND (AP) — Major league baseball owners might be able to provide the key to unlock the snafu which has prevented the Oakland A's from moving to Denver, an official says.

Bob Kennedy, general manager of the Chicago Cubs, said Sunday there is a possibility the owners could kick in more than the $1 million they have agreed to pay to help the A's out of their lease.

"I would think we'll have a decision by tomorrow (Monday) afternoon," said Kennedy, a former manager of the Oakland club.

Irwin sums up 'great collapse'

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Hale Irwin, one of a number of self-destructing challengers, may have summed it up best in the wind-blown windup of the Heritage Golf Classic.

"I would like to thank my fellow competitors," Irwin said, straight-faced as could be, "for falling on their butts and allowing me to finish second. I don't feel that I deserve it, but I'll accept it."

Winner Hubert Green was a little more diplomatic about one of the great mass collapses in recent golf history.

"SOME FINE quality golfers had their troubles out there," Green said after he'd successfully bored his low, line-drive shots through a fickle, changing wind that destroyed the confidence and composure of some of gof's greatest names.

Hubert came from five shots off the pace Sunday with a solid, 4-under-par 67 and won by 3 strokes. He made up 9 strokes on third-round leader Larry Nelson. He won with room and time to spare, standing as a winner by the 18th green while the final groups straggled in during heavy rain.

His winning score was 277, 7 under par on the 6,655-yard Harbor Town Golf Links, rapidly gaining a reputation as one of the nation's best.

It was worth $45,000 from the total purse of $225,000 and sent Green past the $1 million milestone, making him only the 16th golfer in history to reach that figure.

"ABSURD," snorted Green, now a two-time winner this year and a two-time winner of the Heritage title that annually is growing in prestige and importance.

"It's absurd to talk about $1 million when players like (Sam) Snead and (Ben) Hogan, who have won five times as many tournaments as I have, will never achieve that figure. It's nice to have. And I'll keep it. But it's not an indication of proper play."

Hubert, now the winner of 14 career titles, pushed his season's earnings to $117,499 and joined Jack Nicklaus and Tom Watson as the only multiple winners of the year. He moved past Watson into second place on the year's money list.

Green, well in front of the other challengers, played his back nine in 32 and let the pressure, the wind off Calibogue Sound and the deceptive difficulties of the mini-monster links take care of the others.

NELSON, Lou Graham and Australian David Graham all led or shared the lead at one time. A group including Irwin, Ben Crenshaw and PGA champ Lanny Wadkins all made at least one major bid. All faltered. Wadkins and the two Grahams (no relation) all had 41s on the back nine. Crenshaw suffered steady erosion from wildly erratic tee shots. Irwin's last chance disappeared with a 3-putt bogey on the 17th.

Nelson, the last man with a chance to catch Green, stumbled to a 3-put, double-bogey 7 on the par-5 15th.

Scribe says Wilt bumped too many rims

By DAVE KINDRED
The Washington Post

LOS ANGELES — This day we fall into combat with Wilt Chamberlain. At issue is women's basketball. Chamberlain says it's exciting and deserves to be on television and ought to be playing to full houses. Anybody who is 7-feet and weighs 277 pounds commands attention. So I listened thoughfully. Now, out of his reach and locked in a hotel room, I can say Wilt has hit his head on too many rims.

All this came up when the University of Maryland women's basketball team beat Wayland Baptist, 90-85, in a semifinal game of the national championship tournament. There, in a front-row seat, bigger than a building, was Wilt Chamberlain, the all-time leading scorer, all-time leading rebounder, all-time world's LARGEST-male chauvinist.

AND WHAT, in the name of Naismith and Cousy and all that's holy in roundball heaven, what was The Dipper doing at a women's basketball game? In his autobiography, Chamberlain revealed a seeming devotion to the idea that women are utilitarian objects on earth only for his sexual pleasure. So I asked what brought him to courtside.

"I like basketball, my man," Chamberlain said. "This is tremendous. These girls can play. This is as good as watching the Lakers. If I'm going to watch the Lakers, I'll watch this.

"That little guard for Maryland (Tara Heiss) was up and down the floor all night long. She never stopped. And I was impressed with their center (Kris Kirchner), she was very intense. You can't tell me that No. 13, the redhead (Debbie Jones), can't play basketball."

ALMOST 8,000 customers had paid from $3 to $5 a ticket in the 13,000-seat Pauley Pavilion. The empty seats bothered Chamberlain.

"I don't see why they don't fill it now," he said. "They will as soon as you guys give them the press they deserve. If they could have the quarter-finals of the men's tournament on television, there's no reason they shouldn't get the semis of the women on. You can't tell me that wasn't an exciting basketball game tonight."

No, I couldn't. Cowardice was why.

Now, from behind my locked door, I can say it was not an exciting game. Not to a guy who has been paid to see a thousand men's games. Undoubtedly, the 8,000 customers had fun. They made a lot of noise as Maryland came from behind in the last seven minutes to win. In victory, the Maryland women danced on the court, hugging each other. It was a wonderful scene.

AND THAT'S what I liked most about the night. These women are as yet unspoiled by the Big Time. A certain naivete accompanies them. The first thing Kris Kirchner did after scoring 30 points against Wayland was dash off the court and get Wilt Chamberlain's autograph. When is the last time you saw a Big Time hero go into the crowd to get an autograph?

The suspense was unbearable

When the NCAA basketball semifinals got underway Saturday, the suspense was unbearable. In fact, it was so excruciating, we just didn't know whether we'd make it through the afternoon.

The Mrs. said we were being childish and to just ignore it, but we couldn't. It was something we were totally unprepared for and we just didn't know how to handle it.

There it was as big as life and smack in the middle of the floor, a map of Indiana. The NCAA tournament was being played in the Checkerdome, which is smack in the middle of St. Louis... which is in Missouri, maybe not the middle, but in Missouri, nonetheless. And Indiana? That isn't even the next state over.

CURT GOWDY may not be much in the state of Kansas these days after what he did to some names in the KU-UCLA game, but, bless him, he came to the rescue before the whole day was ruined, explaining the floor had been imported from the University of Indiana because the Checkerdome floor had some dead pots in it. With that settled, we were able to concentrate on the game at hand.

As it turned out, there really wasn't much to cheer about. The SWC rep, Arkansas, got bumped by Kentucky, which was no surprise to most, we suppose, but what did surprise us was our reaction to Notre Dame's loss.

When Arkansas took the floor against Kentucky, the reaction was, "Hey, who are these guys?" Thanks to the Southwest Conference's selective censoring of its TV Laugh-of-the-Week, we really hadn't watched much SWC action.

DESPITE A giant-sized leap forward in basketball the last two years, the SWC office seems determined to keep the sport at the back-of-the-bus, if its TV policy is any indication. First, it deliberately and with malice aforethought ignored every attractive regular-season matchup to bring in its place the worst game possible on its weekly TV show. Then, with interest raging in the SWC tournament, it banned any TV, arguing lamely it wanted to insure a crowd in Houston and maybe in 10 or 15 years it would be possible to televise the finals.

So, outside of a couple of NCAA appearances, we really hadn't watched Arkansas that much.

Without realizing it, Notre Dame became our team during the regular season, appearing almost weekly on Sunday TV against the biggest and toughest bullies in the nation.

THE IRISH loss was especially disappointing since it was a Duke team that was in the semifinals only by the grace of the University of Rhode Island's generosity. The Rams led Duke by three in the closing seconds and had possession, but URI was capable of doing what it had to do to lose.

The Rams didn't go into a four-corner. They didn't protect the ball, they came down court and kept throwing it up at the hoop until they turned routine victory into a miraculous defeat.

TED BATTLES

BATTLE SCENE

The Blue Devils reached the semis against Penn and Villanova, apparently playing up to their capabilities at last against the Wildcats and then coming through with a superb effort against the Irish, who played their worst of the tournament.

Kentucky's win over Arkansas spoiled what would have been another SWC vs. ACC matchup similar to the finals of the recent NIT in which Texas beat North Carolina State.

SO WHAT is left, probably is the least attractive of the finals possibilities. The ACC vs. SWC would have been a natural. Arkansas vs. Notre Dame, even in consolation, holds more attraction than Duke-Kentucky. Kentucky vs. Notre Dame would have been a rematch of an early season game when the Wildcats beat a very green, pardon the expression, Irish team.

Still, it might just be the most exciting game of all.

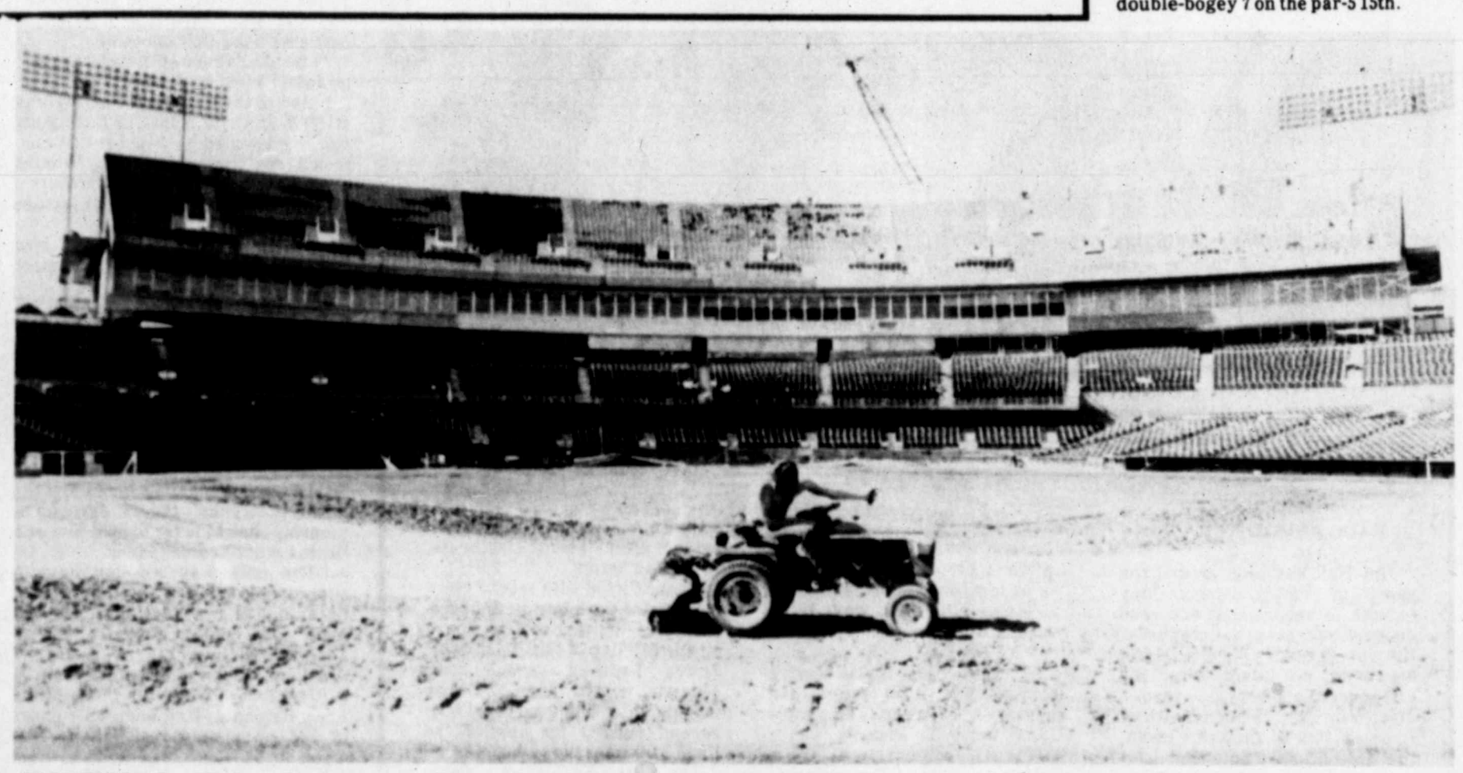

The impression of impending doom for Arkansas came early, for example when 6-11 Steve Schall was tagged with his fourth personal in the early moments and the Hogs' other big man, Jim Counce, got his Fourth with about five minutes left in the half.

Arkansas probably couldn't have beaten Kentucky in any case, but when James Lee roared down court lost possession of the ball and then streamrollered Counce and a foul was called against Counce instead of traveling, you knew the hand-writing was on the wall.

Nelson loses tip of index finger

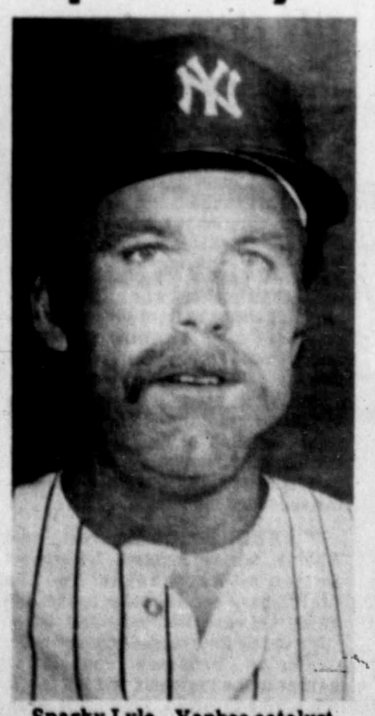

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Lindsey Nelson, one of the New York Mets' broadcasters since the National League baseball team's inception in 1962, suffered the loss of the tip of his left index finger in an accident Sunday.

Nelson was to receive further treatments on the injury, which apparently will necessitate skin grafts.

Sparky assumes Reggie's role

Sparky Lyle...Yankee catalyst

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Sparky Lyle has decided to take over the catalyst role with the highly volatile New York Yankees. Since Reggie Jackson has got as sugary as his new candybar, Sparky — measuring up to his nickname — has elected to keep sparks flying from the bullpen.

"A lot of times the damn manager doesn't know when to bring us in," the ace relief pitcher, 1977 Cy Young Award winner, tells Sport Magazine in an interview that is certain to ingratiate him with skipper Billy Martin.

"They usually create a bigger mess and make it harder for you."

Traditionally, Lyle has been the team's blithe spirit. Now he's developed a few sharp fangs as well, and no one — not even the highest boss, George Steinbrenner — is immune from his bite.

SPARKY HAS spent a "sore toe" spring, grousing about the crowded Yankees bullpen and insisting he wants to be traded.

Now, with an assist from his new teammate Rich Gossage, he is tweaking the nose of the firebrand Martin.

"Managers almost always wait too long," Sparky says, firing scattershot full range. "If they bring me in with a man on first and nobody out, I've got a a great chance ... but if, as usually happens, he waits till there are guys on second and third, no outs, I'm in trouble.

"If we end up getting out of it, the manager says to himself, 'I brought him in just in time.' He thinks he's a damn genius."

IF DISSENSION wins baseball pennants, forget the Pittsburgh Pirates. This is one of the loosest, happiest, most solidified teams in the majors.

They call the manager, Chuck Tanner, "Mr. Optimism." For the affable Tanner, every day comes up roses even when the winds are chill and blustery and there are tornado alerts such as at the Bradenton, Fla., training camp earlier this month.

The Pirates worked out in impossible conditions and came into the clubhouse, drenched to the bone.

"Let's see what the skipper has to say about this," Dave Parker whispered to Willie Stargell.

"This is great," he told his shivering underlings. "Just think — we're this much ahead of the other guys. When we break to go North, we'll be ready for the tough weather there. The poor guys who have had nothing but sunshine — they won't know how to act."

Butch Lee's 18 paces East win

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Butch Lee, after riding the bench for nearly half a period, knew what to do when he returned.

The irrepressible Marquette whiz, college basketball's player of the year, crammed 18 points into the final 11½ minutes and steered the East to a 93-87 victory in Sunday's 16th Coaches All-Star game.

"He's a lot more mature now," said former Marquette Coach Al McGuire after watching Lee demolish his West squad with 29 points.

"He has confidence," McGuire said. "We made a run at them. Normally, in a game like this you have trouble taking the ball out of bounds. But I was very, very surprised and pleased by the way these guys played."

Lee, who scored 11 points before intermission, ~~sided~~ his time early in the second half as the West, employing a fullcourt press, wiped out a 50-37 East lead.

But then, after Rickey Lee of Oregon State gave the West a 68-65 edge, Lee returned and took matters into his own hands.

UK in sixth finals

ST. LOUIS (AP) — In more ways than one, Kentucky is the grizzled veteran compared to the youthful newcomer Duke in Monday night's NCAA championship game.

Top-ranked Kentucky is making its sixth appearance in a title game, while the Blue Devils have appeared only once and didn't win.

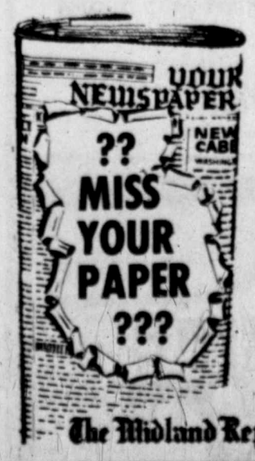

The Wildcats, in their tradition-rich basketball history, won four of their six title games.

Under the legendary Adolph Rupp, the Wildcats won the NCAA in 1948, '49, '51 and '58. Rupp's teams whipped Baylor 58-42 for their first title and later downed Oklahoma State 46-36 Kansas State 68-58 and Seattle 84-72.

In 1966, Rupp's Wildcats bowed to Texas Western, now Texas-El Paso, 72-65, and in 1975 a UCLA powerhouse defeated Kentucky 92-85.

Duke will be making only its second appearance in an NCAA title game. In 1964, the Blue Devils were drubbed by UCLA 98-83.

In line with the schools' tournament history, the teams they put on the court Monday night are of contrasting experience levels. Kentucky's starting five consists of three seniors, a junior and a sophomore, while Duke will start two freshmen, two sophomores and a junior.

Conroe hottest bass lake in Texas

BY JON CHASE

Another East Texas reservoir is starting to make big bass headlines. The newest and most productive major impoundment in Texas at this time is Lake Conroe, in Conroe.

I have heard some impressive reports on stringers of fish liberally sprinkled with six to eight pound bass coming from this hotspot. These reports have it that Conroe bass fishing is just about to hit that legendary "peak" that all lakes go through from five to eight years after the lake has been filled.

Everyone who fished Sam Rayburn and Toledo Bend when these were in their prime, realizes that the fishing has gone downhill since this relatively short span of superior fishing. Lakes are a lot like people in this respect, as they go through childhood, middle age and then inevitably slow down with old age.

The middle aged period is usually the most productive, whether it be for catching a big bass or bringing home a big paycheck.

At first glance it would seem that Lake Conroe should be the perfect choice for a fishing trip at this time. But there is one very big drawback. Lake Conroe is only an hour away from downtown Houston on IH 45 North.

I have talked to quite a few people who made the mistake of trying to fish Conroe on a weekend or holiday. From what they said you could just about walk across the lake at any point by using bass boats for stepping stones.

The Houston crowd hits the lake in force on the weekends and finding undisturbed fishing water is almost impossible.

THE ONLY way I know of to fish Conroe on a weekend is to sleep during the day and fish at night. This type of program should put some fish in the boat, but it will sure make "blue Monday" a lot bluer when trying to get your days and nights back into the proper perspective.

I would strongly suggest a weekday trip if you decide to fish Lake Conroe and even fishing during the week you will encounter a lot of Houston folks out on the lake. Even with the crowds though, most fishermen are catching bass and the percentage of eight pounders or better is the best that I have seen in a long time.

Joe Doggett of the Houston Chronicle outdoor staff, was on Lake Conroe a couple of weeks ago and he said that he and one of his fishing buddies, J. C. Evans, put together a fine stringer of bass in the two to four pound category. They fished spinner baits in two to 10 feet of water and caught bass where the water was considerably less than virgin. The bass don't seem to mind the crowds as much as the fishermen do and are more than willing to do battle with lures that come their way.

COMING THROUGH Brady a couple of weeks ago, I stopped at the reservoir to see if there was anything exciting going on and saw a good stringer of bass come in around 5:30 p.m. The largest fish weighed six pounds and was caught in the shallows around 5 p.m. The fish are staying deep during the day and as the shallows warm up are moving to the shoreline in the later afternoon. I expect fishing to be excellent as of this writing and hope to hear some reports from you on your fishing trips.

Speaking of Brady Lake, Carl Pool and his wife have lost their lease on the Marina due to a higher bid and will no longer be operating the lake's concessions. The Pools are fine folks who always went

Vols end frustration by winning swim title

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Ray Bussard's Tennessee team had shown amazing — and frustrating — consistency, finishing either second or third in the NCAA Swimming and Diving Championships the past six years.

But this weekend, the coonskin cap-wearing, head-shaved Vols ended that long period of frustration, handily winning their first NCAA title.

"Winning the NCAA is a dream of a lifetime," Bussard said Saturday after his team's victory. "Dethroning Southern California, one of the real powerhouses in swimming, is a thrill, because they have a great coach and a great program.

"We had a great deal of leadership from our seniors," added Brussard. "That's the key to our success. If we have a good recruiting year and with the people we have coming back, we should have a very good year next time around. We are the rabbit now, not the hound."

Southern Cal had won the NCAA title for the last four years, but finished fifth in the 1978 tournament at Belmont Plaza Pool.

Beattie makes NY take notice

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

With the National Collegiate Basketball Championship up for grabs tonight, it's only proper that big Jim Beattie should be in the headlines.

However, Beattie is getting his sports mixed up. An All-New England cager at Dartmouth in 1974, MVP of the Kodak Classic in '75 and Dartmouth's captain-elect for the 75-76 season, Beattie is slowly but surely hurling his way onto the star-studded but ailing pitching staff of the world champion New York Yankees.

Catfish Hunter, coming off a bad year, has diabetes. Sore-shouldered Don Gullett hasn't thrown a ball in anger this spring. Ron Guidry, behind schedule because of a bout with the flu, has been hit hard. Andy Messersmith is sidelined with a shoulder separation.

AND THE 6-foot-6, 210-pound Beattie is taking advantage of the situation. The hard-throwing right-hander fired five strong innings Sunday — one run, four hits, one walk, three strikeouts — and the Yankees rallied for six runs in the bottom of the ninth inning to defeat the New York Mets 9-6.

Despite worlds of promise, Beattie was ticketed for Tacoma of the Pacific Coast League after a 9-8 record with three minor league clubs last season, his third in pro ball.

Or was he?

"I kept telling myself New York from the start," he said. "As long as they keep giving you chances, you're still in it. I haven't done any counting down to see if they have a spot for me. If they need a starter, I think I can fill that role. I'm in a good frame of mind. I just want to play."

BEATTIE turned a 1-1 game over to Guidry in the sixth inning but the Mets led 6-3 with two out in the bottom of the ninth, one man aboard and rookie Mardie Cornejo on the mound. But in rapid succession, Roy White doubled, so did Cliff Johnson for two runs, Fred Stanley tied the game with a single, George Zeber walked and Paul Blair deposited Cornejo's first delivery over the left field fence for a three-run homer.

Elsewhere:

—John Montefusco pitched seven innings and Bill Madlock homered to lead the San Francisco Giants over the Milwaukee Brewers 3-1.

—The Los Angeles Dodgers won their fourth game in a row, pounding the Houston Astros 12-1 as Steve Garvey drove in four runs and Burt Hooton allowed three hits and an unearned run in six innings.

—Ted Cox' three-run homer in the eighth inning lifted the Boston Red Sox over the Chicago White Sox 4-3 and two-run blasts by Darrell Porter and Clint Hurdle helped the Kansas City Royals outlast the Baltimore Orioles 13-8.

—The Texas Rangers made it 4-0 in one-run games, edging the Cincinnati Reds 3-2 on Claudell Washington's seventh-inning sacrifice fly. Dave Johnson doubled home the winning run in the eighth inning as the Philadelphia Phillies edged the Pittsburgh Pirates 3-2.

—Minnesota's Rob Wilfong, who homered earlier, tripled home the decisive run in the 11th inning, giving the Twins a 7-6 triumph over the Atlanta Braves. Dave Roberts, Paul Reuschel and Dennis Lamp combined on a six-hit shutout as the Chicago Cubs downed the San Diego Padres 3-0.

—The St. Louis Cardinals nipped the Detroit Tigers 3-2 on Ted Simmons' pinch single in the 11th inning, and Chris Speier delivered a run-scoring pinch single in the 13th as the Montreal Expos shaded the Toronto Blue Jays 5-4.

—Bobby Grich singled home the winning run to give the California Angels a 6-5 10-inning victory over the Cleveland Indians, and Tony Armas hit a two-run homer in the Oakland A's 6-4 triumph over the Seattle Mariners.

Lyle is new sparkplug

Jeff Borowiak, 31st in world rankings, in the WCT tournament at Las Vegas accents the flaws in the present men's tennis tour. It is ridiculous.

Money now is the driving factor. Personal records and tournament prestige are worthless. The new tournament structure has the name players leaping all over the place to fill commitments. Rarely do the top players come face to face.

When they do, winning and losing become immaterial. The guarantees and contracts are so lucrative they can take their appearance money and run. Left holding the bag: the sponsors and the fans.

Sponsors who put up large sums of money soon will grow weary of such fly-by-night operations and will withdraw support.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Borg, Evert post net wins

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Bjorn Borg defeated Vitas Gerulaitis, 6-5, 5-6, 6-4, 6-5 to win the $200,000 Tournament of Champions.

Borg's passing shots were the difference in the match as Gerulaitis played well at the net when he could get to the ball. But Borg's accuracy down the lines kept Gerulaitis on the defensive. It was Gerulaitis' sixth consecutive loss to Borg.

PHILADELPHIA — Chris Evert defeated Billie Jean King in a women's tournament.

Evert shut out King in the first set, closing it out when she returned a forehand down the line past her opponent. In the final set, Evert closed out the match in the 10th game from 15-all. She reached match point with a shot down the line and won it in the next exchange, marking her 13th career victory over King.

Aussie wins at Singapore

SINGAPORE — Terry Gale of Australia fired a 3-under-par 68 to win the Singapore Open golf championship by one stroke over Mya Aye of Burma for his first major victory on the Asian circuit.

Gale finished with a 278 total to win the first-prize check of $6,925.

BU takes NCAA ice utitle

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — Boston University, with sophomore Tony Meagher scoring two key goals, survived a penalty-riddled first period and beat Boston College 5-3, returning the NCAA hockey championship to the East after an absence of five years.

Pam Tryon captures crown

CITY OF COMMERCE, Calif., — Pam Tryon of the Santa Clara, California Aquamaids won the soloist title in the AAU National Indoor Synchronized Swimming Championships and shared the duet title with her teammate, Michele Barone.

At the end of the three-day meet, Tryon had 132.920 points in the soloist judging. She and Barone had 131.845 points to win the duet title.

Poland beats out Japanese

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — Poland, which posted a 6-0-1 recond, won the Group B World Ice Hockey Tournament and advanced into the elite A Group.

Japan finished second in the tournament and also moved into the A Group while Italy and Yugoslavia, the last two teams, dropped to the C Group.

Shelter Half edges Naskra

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Pa. — Resound, $8.80, nosed out Parnis to capture the $57,050 Gettysburg Handicap at Keystone Race Track.

HALLANDALE, Fla. — Bowl Game, $10.20, came from behind to beat True Statement by two lengths in the $150,000 Gulfstream Park Handicap at Gulfstream Park.

Conroe hottest bass lake

out of their way to make a stay on Brady Lake and enjoyable one and I am really sorry to see them go.

I don't know who outbid them, but hope that whoever it is, continues to operate the Brady Lake facilities in the fine manner that the Pools did.

REPORTS FROM all area lakes indicate that the bass and crappie are making their move to the shallow water at least once during the day and that the spring spawn for both species should be on any time now.

As for area lakes, I think that Lake Spence is going to be the sleeper for big bass this year. The striped bass fishing on Spence has caused a lot of us to overlook the respectable stringers of black bass coming from this reservoir and I feel that this spring will bring a new lake record and that this record will be broken many times before the year is out.

I have watched a lot of lakes go through the cycle of fair to excellent bass fishing and , according to what I have observed, Lake Spence is due for its excellent period.

Lake Spence is close enough for area fishermen to really give it a chance and I will be surprised if bass fishing doesn't go on a sudden boom.

The fish are there and this is the time of year that they will be found in the shallows. The novice fisherman has just about as good a chance as the expert when the fish are on the next.

If you have any fishing reports, give me a call at 697-1423.

Diet Center helps you win at losing

New in Midland is Diet Center, Inc. We are fortunate to have two locations, which will enable Diet Center to serve our city better. Diet Center No. 1, located at 409 Kent, opened its doors six months ago, and Diet Center No. 2, at 1200 Whitney, opened last month.

Diet Centers have been operating all over the United States and Canada for the past ten years and will soon begin in Mexico as well. Their program with a carefully planned diet including protein, carbohydrates, fats, minerals and vitamins, is especially designed for a sensible weight loss. The diets are designed to establish and maintain good eating habits.

The Diet Center was founded on the principles of promoting good health through eating well-balanced diets given under the direction of trained counsellors who are guided by a code of ethics and philosophy which guide the entire Diet Center Corporation. Honesty and integrity are foremost reasons for the unprecedented growth of the Diet Centers in the past few years.

The Diet Center offers a quick weight-loss program, and it's completely safe. No drugs or fad supplements are involved. A 100% natural food supplement is provided to clients, included in the cost of the program, which curbs the appetite, keeps up a good energy level, and helps keep the dieter feeling well. Following a four-week program, you could expect to lose from 6 to 10 pounds. On an eight-week program, you would lose from 10 to 17 pounds, and on a twelve-week program, you could lose from 17 to 26 pounds. In each case, you would actually lose the weight during the first half of the program and then follow a stabilization and maintenance program for the last half. This is one of the reasons why the Diet Center programs are so successful.

Shown above are Carol Miller, at left, and Margaret Forster, R. N., trained and certified counsellors for Diet Centers No. 1 and No. 2. The two Diet Centers are located at 409 Kent and 1200 Whitney. Let them help you learn "How to win at the Losing Game."

If you want to learn how to eat to maintain a good, healthy body, give the Diet Center a call. Carol Miller will be glad to help you at Diet Center No. 1. The number there is 684-5081. Or call Margaret Forster, R. N., for Diet Center No. 2 at 694-3421. Both of these women have received special training in Rexburg, Idaho and are certified counsellors for the Diet Center Program. They are eager to help you "win at the losing game."

Democrats denied race referendum

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — An attempt by supporters of horse race betting to test Democratic voter sentiment on the issue has been blocked temporarily by State District Judge Jim Dear.

Dear issued a temporary restraining order to keep a betting referendum off the May 6 Democratic Party primary ballot.

He also set a hearing for Thursday on a request for an injunction that would stop the referendum unless it were restored by a higher court.

The State Democratic Executive Committee voted March 13 to put the non-binding referendum on the ballot after racing supporters presented petitions containing more than 96,000 signatures.

A similar referendum has been placed on the Republican primary ballot by the GOP executive committee.

By law a referendum must be placed on the Democratic ballot if more than 74,000 signatures are presented, according to Susan Allen, chairman of the SDEC's legal affairs subcommittee.

But SDEC member Harold Hammett of Fort Worth alleged in a suit to block the referendum that the petition lacked enough valid signatures. Hammett was joined in the suit by Carol Kolsti of Austin.

Their lawyer, Randall Wood of Austin, said the Texas Election Code requires the SDEC to run a sample to see if enough of the signatures are valid.

K and C Industrial develops new district

C. W. Chancellor, Jr. and Tom King, owners of K and C Industrial, are pleased to offer Midland a new industrial district. This new subdivision offers flexible, functional space for a wide range of requirements for service and or office facilities. Metal or tilt-wall industrial buildings suitable for warehouses, shops for either light or heavy manufacturing, and other similar industries will be available. Modular space units, fitted to your needs, are also to be available. There will be ample parking facilities for employees and customers.

Located near Cotton Flat Road on Francis Avenue, the new industrial area will be very convenient to downtown Midland— just one mile and a half from the Midland County Courthouse—and will have easy access to Interstate 20 and to Industrial Street.

K and C Industrial will sell lots and build you a warehouse or office building to your specifications. They will also finance it if you wish on a 3 to 5 year lease.

King and Chancellor, owners of K and C Industrial, will be happy to talk to anyone interested in obtaining more details. Phone King at 682-6000 or Chancellor at 683-2040. They are confident that they can meet your particular business' requirements.

Midland welcomes this new addition. There has been a great need in this area for such facilities, and until now only a limited number has been available. K and C Industrial takes pride in helping to meet our growing city's needs.

Governments provide 'back talk' channels

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Newsfeatures Writer

An elderly woman in Woonsocket, R.I., doesn't know what to do about her flooded basement. The Rhode Island Citizen's Information Service finds her a plumber.

A housewife in Louisiana can't get a refund on a rotten potato. Employees of the governor's office on Consumer Protection take up a collection and send her the money.

A woman in Montana says she wants to shoot her husband. An employee of the state Citizen's Advocate Office talks her out of it.

Talking back to government is an old American habit, but in recent years volume and decibel count have risen as more channels have been provided.

If a lot of complaints aren't solved, the complainants at least let off steam. "A good share of the task is just listening," says Gladys McCoy, who has just completed a three-year stint as ombudsman in Oregon (She doesn't want to be called ombudswoman.) "People need somebody to take time to hear their side of the story."

More than half the 50 states and a number of major cities have some form of office to deal with public complaints.

They range in scope from a $2 million-a-year cabinet level public advocate's office in New Jersey that can intervene in public utility rate cases to tollfree telephone numbers in many states that simply refer callers to another government agency.

Some are caught in political wrangling themselves, as in Missouri, where the Democratic governor and the Republican lieutenant governor each provides his own consumer complaint bureau.

"Let's face it," says Stanley C. Van Ness, New Jersey's public advocate. "Ombudsmen are a bit faddish these days."

In the low budget ombudsman operations, where the basic tool is usually a toll-free telephone number, complaints tend to be basic.

Typical is an Ohio woman who complained to that state's newly created consumer counsel's office when the Columbia Gas Co. charged her for service beyond a cut-off date she had requested because she was moving. After a phone call from the office, the utility accepted her argument.

Often the consumer offices run up against the state's own bureaucracy, and that can take a while.

In Oregon, for example, it took six months for the ombudsman's office to persuade the state's Vocational Rehabilitation Division to buy a new model van for a man confined to a wheelchair. The model specified by the state did not contain equipment the handicapped man needed.

But the state agency balked. Rules were rules, it said, and the Department of General Services listed only the one model in its rules. After numerous phone calls and meetings, the agency gave in.

In the early 1970s, the former mayors of New Jersey's two largest cities were in jail; a former state treasurer and two former secretaries of state were under indictment and government in general was held in disrepute. It was in part to remedy that distrust that an independent public advocate's office was created in 1974 from the framework of the office of the public defender. Van Ness, who was public defender, was appointed to the expanded job by Gov. Brendan T. Byrne.

The office runs the usual complaint hotline, but it also has broad powers that let it intervene, for example, in requests by public utilities for rate increases and assess the utilities for lawyer and consultant fees. It has one early victory in that area — a decision by the state Public Utilities Commission to negate a request for a $150 million telephone rate increase.

In 1973, Missouri Lt. Gov. William Phelps, a Republican serving under a Republican governor, set up a consumer complaint service using student interns and depending primarily on the mails. In January, 1977, a Democrat, Joseph Teasdale became governor and decided he, too, should be in the ombudsman business.

So Teasdale cut Phelps' budget and set up his own operation, a toll-free action line with two employees. Along with consumer queries, Teasdale's line gets voter opinion on state issues and a goodly number of anonymous complaints from state employees about their own working conditions.

"What can you do with a small budget?" asks Van Ness, who has by far the biggest budget of any ombudsman. "If you give a state $200,000 a year, all you can do is put in a phone line and hire a couple of people to man it."

See the popular Good Times Van at Nickel-Chrysler-Plymouth-Dodge, 3705 W. Wall. Nickel has been a Good Times dealer, representing the Midland-Odessa-Big Spring area, ever since the Good Times Van came out in 1972. You'll love the comfortable ride it offers and its fine features such as: four swiveling and reclining captain's chairs, back bench seat which converts into a bed, air conditioning both in front and in back, insulated headliner, floor and paneling, back cargo area including a wet bar and clothes closet, indirect lighting, superior all-around vision with sun-screened glass, special tires and chrome wheels, and a center console with AM-FM radio and 8-track tape deck with stereo sound speakers in front and back.

Good Times is the best selling of all converted van units, and at Nickel you'll find they always have from 3 to 12 in stock for immediate delivery.

Man trains insects

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jim Dannaldson, 62, has an unusual occupation. He trains insects for television and film.

"Behavior control is a better description than train," says his wife, Beth, who often works as his assistant. "Train sounds like teaching a dog tricks. With insects, you know their habits, you know how to handle them, and you know what can be expected of them."

When director George Stevens called upon him to work on "Gunga Din" some 40 years ago, Dannaldson was curator of reptiles at the University of Southern California. He helped turn harmless gopher snakes into cobras by attaching fake hoods around the snakes' necks, then raising them up cobra-like with hidden bamboo poles. He imported iguanas and other reptiles for Hal Roach's original "One Million Years, B.C."

His latest assignment was Robert Aldrich's "Choirboys," for which multitude of he handled a duck and a cockroaches.

Town re-created

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — More than 200 historic artifacts, documents and original graphics are used to re-create the Town of Kansas during the 1860s in "Frontier Community," the newest permanent exhibit at the Kansas City Museum of History and Science.

During that era, the city was a thriving river port and a pioneer outfitting point.

THE LONELY LADY OF SAN CLEMENTE: PART II

Pat battles for health, becomes virtual recluse

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following excerpt is adapted from the book, "The Lonely Lady of San Clemente: The Story of Pat Nixon," (c) 1978 by Lester David. Reprinted by permission of Thomas Y. Crowell Co. The full-length book will be published by Crowell in late summer.

By LESTER DAVID

Thelma Catherine Patricia Nixon, the country's first lady from 1969 to 1974, became a virtual recluse after Richard Nixon resigned as the 37th president of the United States. She disappeared from public view, secluded behind the high walls and impenetrable trees and shrubbery of San Clemente.

Helen McCain Smith, her press secretary up to the time of the resignation, said to me after a recent conversation with Pat: "She doesn't leave often. She's just not well. Her blood pressure has not stabilized. She gets very tired because the pressure fluctuates, and she cannot stand much excitement."

Jack Brennan, Nixon's aide-de-camp, who sees the family daily, told the San Clemente Republican Club not long ago: "She's not recovering as rapidly as we would like." And Roy Day, Nixon's first campaign manager in the race which launched his career in politics—against Jerry Voorhis, in 1946—told me sadly: "She's a recluse. It's a damned shame. She's a great lady." Day, now 77, still lives in the district and has kept in close touch over the years with the family.

There was always something magnificently tough and durable about Pat Nixon. "I do or I die," she once said. "I never cancel out."

At the time of her greatest trials—the death of her parents when she was still a teen-ager, her struggles to earn a living as a young girl during the Great Depression, the blows that had come as the wife of a hard-charging politician who could arouse a large segment of the population to fury—she was poised, self-possessed and, above all, rock-hard. One was convinced that Pat Nixon could never give way under any conceivable pressure, for she had taken almost the worst there was and didn't cancel out.

In her late 20s she had married Richard Nixon. Once she did so and became aware of his single-tracked passion for power and office, she consciously and deliberately programmed herself to help him achieve his ambitions, submerging her own self, her own desires.

It was an awesome decision that was to alter her life almost completely. Julie Nixon Eisenhower said to me: "Mother made many sacrifices," but the full extent of what Pat Nixon did can only be seen by looking at the tragic turn her life took in its seventh decade.

Pat Nixon believed in the simple axiom that a husband leads and a wife follows. This was conventional behavoir in the prefeminist years when she grew up and got married, bred into her not only by the culture of the times but the example of her parents.

Success in politics was Nixon's goal and he was her husband, and so she made herself into the very model of a political wife, spectacularly dutiful, standing behind him, shoring him up, shaking the hands he missed in the long reception lines, defending him.

She became known pejoratively as Plastic Pat, Antiseptic Pat, Pat the Robot, Pat the Plu-Perfect, because of the permanent smile that stretched her lips but did not light up her eyes, the hair that was always in place, the shining face that never showed a bead of perspiration or a smudge of soot, the creaseless and spotless dresses and suits, her absolute tirelessness. She would remain for hours at state dinners, the smile constant, never excusing herself to go to the ladies' room, which meant that nobody else could go, either.

For most of her years in politics, she said as little as she could in public because she was terrified of making mistakes. While great events were happening in the nation and the world, she would make only small talk with people of all levels, taking care to express no views of substance, lest they turn a single voter against Richard Nixon. Only in the last years did she dare speak out in public on some issues.

But privately, she was not plastic at all. There were deep emotional currents in her. At home or with friends she trusted, she was a wholly different Pat Nixon than appeared in public. Privately, too, the tight rein she imposed upon herself would sometimes slip and then even outsiders could see her fears, tears, anger and—though it was hard to believe—the true lightness of her spirit.

Julie put it best: "Nobody really understands mother. I feel that she kind of lost faith that journalists would interpret things as they really are, and just didn't want to reveal herself at all."

When the dam was bursting in 1974, she had been the coolest and most sensible Nixon in the family quarters, the one with the greatest self-discipline. The president had his black moods. Julie was often overly emotional, Tricia was withdrawn. David Eisenhower and Edward Cox, the sons-in-law, were distraught at times. But Pat was granitic.

David said it best in the midst of the turmoil: "Mrs. Nixon is always there with a shoulder to lean on."

But the president's downfall cracked the granite and her illness—she had never been ill—widened the breach.

Following her husband's resignation, it was difficult for her to talk about the presidency without bursting into tears.

She will not talk about Watergate and its aftermath. Even the family does not discuss it now, because they all know how she has been affected.

"She was devasted, and still is," says Earl Mazo, the journalist who traveled with Nixon on four continents, assisted him with his book, "Six Crises," and wrote the first Nixon biography in 1960. Mazo and his wife Rita have been family friends for 20 years.

"I would imagine," Mazo told me one evening at his home in the Chevy Chase section of Washington, "that she must have been hurt even worse than he."

"What makes you feel that way?" I asked.

Mazo's reply was quiet and shattering. "She had the stroke, didn't she?" he said.

Virginia Counts, a classmate of Pat's at USC, is one of the few old friends who has visited her at San Clemente.

Says Mrs. Counts: "She is always glad to see me. We laugh and walk around the estate and talk small talk about old times."

But never about the events that brought Nixon down. Nor does Mrs. Nixon ever mention any of the individuals involved in Watergate. "I am certain the hurt still runs deep," Mrs. Counts says. "It will take a long, long while to get over that kind of pain."

In June of 1975, on the 35th anniversary of their marriage, Pat Nixon emerged for a rare drive with her husband around Dana Point. He had proposed to her there, on the beach, looking out at the ocean. They drove around Golden Lantern Street, marveling at the changes that had taken place, the new homes and shopping centers built in what they had remembered as an uninhabited area.

Before her stroke they would sometimes go to one of his favorite restraurants, El Adobe in San Juan Capistrano, eight miles to the north. She had even once gone into town to a local hardware store to buy things she needed for the house.

Following her stroke, her outside visits have been so rare that the uniformed guards stationed at the gates night and day can hardly recall them. One says: "In 14 months, I've seen her come out twice," Another saw her leave only once in the same period.

Once, in the late spring of 1977, she was driven out in a black limousine, on her way to visit Julie and David at Capistrano Beach. A guard smiled at her and she smiled back. The she lifted her left arm and waved to him.

It was an impressive act of bravery. Pat Nixon knows that the world knows her left side had been partly paralyzed. She was demonstrating, even to a lone elderly guard, that she was undefeated.

In June of 1977, she showed even greater courage. Julie had gone to the Beverly Wilshire Hotel to promote a book she had written about famous people she had known, and had invited her mother to lunch. Pat called in a hairdresser, dressed carefully in a beige pants suit and was driven to Los Angeles, leaving behind the cane she was then still using.

She spoke briefly to the manager who greeted her and took the elevator to Julie's suite. At the entrance to the suite she encountered UPI reporter Roberta G. Wax, who complimented her on her hairdo. Mrs. Nixon replied: "Thank you very much," and walked by into Julie's room.

"She looked positively beautiful," Roberta Wax told me afterward. "And she walked straight into the suite with a good stride and no limp whatever."

It was a magnificent gesture. "Even if I were dying," Pat Nixon had once said, "I wouldn't let anyone know."

Camp gives children in Denver public schools experience in great outdoors

JAMESTOWN, Colo. (AP) — Standing knee deep in the glistening silence of new fallen snow, a group of bundled-up third graders listened intently as Jim Wright pointed out the telltale signs around the tree:

A bird had eaten on the branch above them. A deer had walked by in the early morning stillness. A forest fire had burned nearby several years ago.

Down the trail another group of youngsters watched as James Bustos showed them how he used to make arrows from a particular type of dried bush. Bustos, proud of his Spanish and Apache Indian heritage, showed how to make a turkey call from a piece of dried reed and told of a soothing salve made of tree sap, mutton grease and sulphur.

Wright is a teacher and Bustos a bus driver for the Denver Public School System. Their classroom is a 650-acre preserve 8,100 feet above sea level in the Colorado Rockies. It was given to the school system by an anonymous donor.

Fifth graders have the opportunity to spend three days in Balarat, which means "a place to camp" in the language of the Australian aborigines. High school students earn summer credits, rising at 5:30 a.m. for conservation work.

Wright, who holds a doctorate in education and ecology, began teaching at Balarat when it opened in 1970. At first, he said, it may seem silly to take children who live within half an hour of the Rockies into the mountains. But he estimates that half of the students are only driven through the mountains — enroute to a ski resort, campground or hotel.

A girl named Marquita, who moved to Denver eight years ago from Chicago, said she had never walked in the woods before. Her classmate, Tommy, said the only time he ever got out of the car in the mountains was when his mother wanted to take a picture.

Wright begins sharpening students' powers of observation and perspective the moment the specially equipped mountain bus moves away from the school.

He roams the aisle, asking questions about everything from street signs to why buildings are not so tall in the mountain foothill community of Boulder. (Winds of 100 miles an hour are frequent there.)

Students without adequate boots for the deep snow, or mittens or hats, are given them from an emergency supply in the bus and each student receives a small back pack to carry his lunch — and free his hands.

The preserve includes pine forests, aspen groves, mountains, valleys, a pond and marshes, and is bordered by Roosevelt National Forest. Meadows, marshes and the pond delight youngsters when the snow is gone.

BRIDGE

False safety play can prove expensive

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Some enemy of the human race has been going to and fro in the earth, misleading bridge players about the right way to play a suit like the spades in today's hand. Perhaps he has already misled you.

The defenders stashed away three heart tricks before South could get started. Then they got out safely with a diamond, and south needed the rest of the tricks.

South thought he knew how to play the spades. "I'll take the ace first," he said to himself, "just in case somebody has a singleton queen."

Somebody did have a singleton queen, but South's play didn't help him. West still had to make a trump trick. South's false safety play had cost him game and rubber.

HELP FROM DUMMY

The correct way to play for all four spade tricks is to begin by leading a low spade from dummy. If East plays low, you finesse with the jack. If this loses to the singleton queen, shed no tears; you were not going to win all four spade tricks no matter how you played the suit.

As it happens, it is East who shows up with the singleton queen, and you can capture it with the king. Cash the jack of spades to make sure of what is going on, and then lead a low spade to finesse with dummy's nine.

DAILY QUESTION

As dealer, you hold: SA942; HK63; DK4; CKJ94. What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid one club. If partner responds in a red suit, you can bid one spade; if he responds in spades, you can raise; and if he bids 1 NT, you can pass.
