White House to scale back Rwandan strategy

Return of refugees puts troops on hold

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration will not send combat soldiers into central Africa but plans to dispatch fewer than 1,000 support troops to help relief efforts in the region, Defense Secretary William Perry said today.

Perry, speaking at a technology conference, said the "very positive development" of hundreds of thousands of refugees returning home to Rwanda has prompted the administration to change its strategy.

"We are modifying our plans based on this dramatic change," Perry said.

Airlift control teams have been sent to three airfields in Africa to help provide relief supplies. Those teams will work out of Kigali, Rwanda; Mombasa, Kenya, and Entebbe, Uganda, he said.

"The U.S. contribution will be less than 1,000 and these will be support, logistics, not combat troops," Perry said.

He said a final decision on the Canadian-led multinational military relief effort will be made Thursday in Stuttgart, Germany.

The administration was on the verge last week of sending in 1,000 combat-ready paratroopers to seize an airport for relief supplies plus 3,000 support troops in other nations.

Perry said the situation in Africa "still remains very fluid" and the administration stands ready to step up its efforts if needed. He said there is still much uncertainty surrounding refugees who remain in eastern Zaire.

The United States also plans to provide $140 million to help the refugees leaving Zaire.

"Clearly there is no need now to maintain an armed corridor out of that country. That problem is solved," said one official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Rwanda insisted today that an international force of soldiers no longer is needed because hundreds of thousands of refugees had returned from their 2½-year exile in Zaire.

Still uncertain is the fate of as many as 700,000 refugees in eastern Zaire who face death, international relief agencies said.

The United States initially resisted prodding by France and other European nations to move quickly to commit American troops. But last week Clinton offered to contribute U.S. troops to a multinational force led by Canada.

U.S. officials announced on Monday plans to provide $140 million for the relief effort.

J. Brian Atwood, administrator of the U.S. Agency for International Development, said the money would be used primarily in Rwanda to support programs helping unaccompanied children, as well as supplying food, medicine and trucks to transport refugees.

Founder's Day Award...

Baremore receives PTK honor

Deborah Baremore, secretary for counseling, received the Founder's Day Award this morning at Western Texas College.

The annual award ceremony is held by the Psi Zeta chapter of Phi Theta Kappa.

Baremore has been employed at Western Texas for 10 years, and in addition to her regular duties, provides much of the logistical support for Phi Theta Kappa. A native of Coahoma, she holds an associate degree from Howard College, where she was a PTK member.

"Deborah is sort of the information center at Western Texas," said Carolyn Osborn, who made the presentation of the plaque. Osborn is a counselor and senior advisor for PTK at Western Texas.

Jonathan Carroll, executive board member with PTK and a sophomore, announced the winner.

Baremore is member of handbell chorus and plays for the pep band during ballgames.

Founder's Day marks the 1918 founding of Phi Theta Kappa at Stephens College in Missouri. The award has been given at WTC since 1983. Names of all honorees are inscribed on a plaque permanently hung in the student center.

The late Franklin Pruitt received the first award. Last year's recipients were Dr. Duane Hood, dean of student services, and Ray Robbins, head of the criminal justice department. Both retired last year.

A reception was held in the Student Center following the presentation.

THE SDN COLUMN

By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Knowledge is free, but you must provide your own container."

The guy is described as a slob, a cheapskate, a cheater, greedy and gassy.

It may sound like the early-morning coffee crowd, but that's how employees described the worst boss of 1996.

It was the fourth year that Jim Miller, author of "Best Boss, Worst Boss," has conducted a nation-wide contest. The best-selling author poured through more than 300 entries before coming up with the winner (or loser).

The worst of the worst came from Yankee land, but his idenity was not revealed since the employee who nominated him still needs his job, at least for now.

Here's what the entry had to say about Mr. Nasty, submitted in the format of a help wanted ad:

"Most Wanted List: Office manager. Successful candidate must be able to schedule fake business trips to spend time with another woman...Forcibly kiss secretary on the lips. Wear the same clothes all week...Cough in employees' faces, and pass gas and act as though this is normal behavior."

There's more. "Rig company raffles and keep merchandise for self. Rub against employees whenever possible...separate a fast food order to the correct employees by taking a bite out of each sandwich to determine its contents...

No wonder the guy has gas!

The employee who submitted the winning nomination won a free trip to Hawaii. It's going to be interesting to see if Mr. Bad Guy can figure it out when the employee takes off on vacation or if the boss is cunning enough to steal the trip for himself.

There can be two sides to the employee-employer relationship. There's a story about a persistent salesman who refused to leave when the secretary told him the boss was out.

After a couple of hours, weary of being a prisoner in his own office, the boss told the secretary to send in the salesman.

"My secretary told you I was out," he said, "How'd you know I was in?"

"Easy," explained the salesman. "Your secretary was working."

Court OKs vehicle bids

Scurry County Commissioners Court, meeting in special session Monday afternoon, approved a bid from Wilson Motors for the purchase of two vehicles for the sheriff's office.

The bid was for two police-equipped 1997 Ford Crown Victorias at a cost of $19,873 each or a total of $39,746.

Some $43,000 had been budgeted for the vehicles.

Commissioners will meet again at 1 p.m. Thursday in special session to seek proposals for an airport mechanic and fixed base operator.

The court is seeking to replace Gary Haltom, who contracted 13 months ago to use the county hangar to operate a private business. He has since moved to Tyler.

Tony Gray of Gray Aviation has told the court he would be interested in submitting a proposal. Monday afternoon, local farmer and businessman David Shifflett confirmed he is also interested. Shifflett had also submitted a bid 13 months ago.

Commissioners will open and consider proposals at their Dec. 16 meeting.

Chamber approves coliseum pact

Snyder Chamber of Commerce board on Monday approved a projected three-year coliseum contract and $1,500 in hotel/motel funds for decorations and new sound equipment.

The coliseum contract will now be presented to commissioners court for consideration.

The contract calls for the chamber to receive a $185,000 subsidy for management, operations, day-to-day maintenance of the facility, as well as development and promotion of events.

It stipulates that the county is responsible for any catastrophic capital repairs and equipment replacements exceeding the sum of $1,000. The contract also states the county will assume all maintenance and repair cost associated with the Department of Public Safety offices, located in the coliseum annex building.

The document also stipulates that the county agree to make replacements to bring the sound system to "an acceptable level" or make monthly payments on the existing sound system until a new one is installed and functioning.

Board members approved $1,500 in hotel/motel funds to provide lighting and music in the downtown area during the Christmas season and possibly other holidays.

Chamber board members briefly outlined upcoming events, including the Western Texas College Thanksgiving basketball tournament, Nov. 28-30; lighting of the courthouse on Nov. 29; the Lighted Christmas Parade, Christmas Ball and Santa Land on Dec. 7 Christmas; the broadway musical Pinocchio on Dec. 14; and the chamber open house on Dec. 19.

Walls Industry was named business of the month with a reception date pending.

Fowler said income from playoff games netted approximately $500. After discussion, the board voted not to sponsor playoff games the weekend following Thanksgiving due to the full staff and volunteer schedules.

Fowler also noted that Daniel Espinosa has been hired to replace a former employee at the coliseum.

In other discussion Monday, Computer Solutions owner Drew Bullard informed the board of the possibilites available to the chamber in promoting Snyder over the Internet.

Attending were board members Jack Greene, Howard Limmer, Art Feinsod, Daryl Thomas, Jeffrey Martin, Ann McCabe and Rob Sanders, president. Staff included Fowler, Sandra Barbosa and Mary Westmoreland.

Oklahoma men taken into custody

Two Oklahoma men remain in Midland County jail today in lieu of $50,000 bonds on third degree felony charges of impersonating a police officer.

James Michael Petry, 38, and Michael Montgomery, 32, both of Oklahoma City, were arrested in Snyder at 1:45 p.m. Monday following the issuance of the warrants out of Midland County after allegedly abducting William Earnest Lord of Midland Sunday morning.

Lord had been taken into custody by Scurry County deputies Sunday night at the Great Western Motel. He remains in the local jail on felony warrants out of Stillwater, Okla. for felony theft by check charges.

Petry and Montgomery, who were allegedly working for a bonding company out of Oklahoma City, had apparently entered the residence of Lord in Midland with guns drawn and papers identifying them as police officers.

The trio were headed back to Oklahoma when their vehicle broke down and they obtained a room at the local motel. Lord was given permission to call his mother, who is a police officer, in Guthrie, Okla., in hopes of obtaining the bond money. She then notified deputies in Midland of the alleged kidnapping and warrants were issued.

The two were taken to Midland last night. The FBI is also investigating the incident, and the Midland County sheriff's department is continuing to investigate also.

Relatives want to hear ValuJet audio tape

MIAMI (AP) — A transcript of passengers screaming "Fire! Fire! Fire!" moments before ValuJet Flight 592 nose-dived into the Everglades isn't enough for some relatives. They want to hear their loved ones' final terrifying moments.

"I've got to know if that woman who was screaming was my mother," said Amanda Myers, whose parents were killed in the crash.

The National Transportation Safety Board released a transcript of the cockpit recording on Monday, the opening day of its hearing into the May 11 crash, which killed all 110 people aboard. The weeklong hearing resumes today.

Shouts from passengers were recorded three times after fire swept into the cabin, and at one point women were heard screaming "Fire! Fire! Fire! Fire!" according to the transcript.

"I imagined it was my mother," Maria Rivera said. "I didn't think of anything else. I just cried and cried and cried."

The NTSB does not release the audio tapes, primarily to protect the crews' privacy. Tapes have been issued in the past, but only under a court order.

"I'm going to Washington after this to try to get them to change the law," said Richard Kessler, an Atlanta lawyer whose wife was killed.

In most crashes, voices of the cockpit crew are the only ones taped. But in this case, passengers could be heard because the cockpit door was opened after the fire started.

Six minutes after takeoff from Miami International Airport, the pilot can be heard telling the co-pilot: "We got some electrical problems. ... We're losing everything."

A flight attendant can be heard yelling, "We need oxygen. We can't get oxygen back there."

The last recorded voice from the plane was that of a crew member telling the tower, "We need the, uh, closest airport available."

The chilling eight-minute tape ends with the cockpit and cabin falling silent, leaving the sound of rushing air, perhaps from a cockpit window that had been opened to let the smoke out.

Gwendolyn Marks, a Miami nurse whose son was killed, also wants to hear the tape.

"It may be painful, but it was my child, and I want to hear what was going through his mind, what was going on in those last minutes," she said.

Another victim may have called his wife on a cellular phone in the final moments of the flight, according to NTSB documents. But despite repeated requests, the woman declined to be interviewed by crash investigators.

Two ValuJet maintenance supervisors and two executives with SabreTech Corp., which maintained ValuJet aircraft in Miami, testified at the hearing Monday. The maintenance officials discussed the handling of oxygen-generating canisters suspected of starting the fire in the cargo hold.

The canisters, which contain a mixture of chemicals, can generate heat up to 500 degrees when they are triggered to provide oxygen to passenger emergency masks.

House of Commons nixes complete ban

LONDON (AP) — British lawmakers have rejected calls for a total ban on handguns following the shooting massacre at a Scottish kindergarten, agreeing instead to allow .22-caliber weapons to remain legal.

On a 306-281 vote Monday night, the House of Commons turned down an amendment to outlaw all handguns, clearing the way for certain passage of the government's bill on a partial ban later this month.

Disappointed parents of some of the 16 children killed in the March 13 massacre in Dunblane shouted "Shame!"

The new law, expected to take effect in late December, would ban an estimated 160,000 weapons. Owners will be required to surrender the handguns and will receive compensation from the government.

Only gun clubs will be allowed to use the .22-caliber weapons.

Thomas Hamilton, the gunman whose shooting rampage also killed a teacher at the Dunblane kindergarten, had been a licensed gun club member and legally held two .357-caliber Smith & Wesson revolvers and two 9mm Browning pistols, which he used in the massacre.

Families of the victims and their supporters said the partial ban was not enough. Dunblane teacher Eileen Harrild, who was wounded during the massacre, told reporters they would continue their campaign for a complete ban.

"We are not finished yet," she said.

John Crozier, whose 5-year-old daughter Emma was one of the children killed, said lawmakers would be ostracized for continuing to support demands by shooting club members for .22-caliber weapons to remain legal.

With national elections to be held by May, the Conservatives have weak support in opinion polls compared to the opposition Labor Party, which supported a complete handgun ban.

Letters to the Editor

A warm thanks

Dear Editor:

On behalf of the Lockney Independent School District, Lockney High School and the Longhorn Band, I would like to thank your EMS, police department and hospital for the great care they gave our kids Friday night.

Upon arrival to the high school Friday evening, one of our school buses was hit with a rock. A window was busted and five of our high school band students were injured. There was a gentleman at the gate of the field, whose name I did not get, who called the police on his cellular phone — thank you, sir, for your time and concern.

A police officer was sent and arrived within minutes. This gentleman was courteous and very professional. Thank you, sir! Tammy Shirley, Cindy Josey, Albert "Snuffy" Cannon, Kristin Cox and Troy Hall were the EMTs who took care of the kids at the field. Thank you folks for the incredible job you did with our kids. You were professional and compassionate to our students, parents, administrators and myself. Thank you, Kristin, for finding me during the game and updating me on the condition of my students. I really appreciate the extra effort these emergency personnel gave Friday night.

Also, the students and sponsors who were transported to the hospital said they were treated just as well by the hospital personnel. Thanks to all who worked with our students and sponsors.

All of us have members of our community we are not very proud of, like the person who threw the rock. However, as your emergency personnel showed, we also have many, many more community members of which we are extremely proud. Snyder, you are very fortunate to have such a great group working for the protection and care of your community.

Sincerely,
Jimmie Exline

Cronkite has noted asteroid named for him

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Walter Cronkite may one day have another kind of a global impact.

An asteroid that could someday crash into Earth was renamed Monday in honor of America's trusted former newsman. The California Institute of Technology announced that the asteroid formerly known as 1990 WA would be called 6318 Cronkite.

The renaming was timed to coincide with Cronkite's campus visit to give a lecture.

The asteroid, a piece of space debris that orbits in a belt between Mars and Jupiter about 30 million miles from Earth, was discovered by astronomer Eleanor F. Helin, who holds the right to name it.

"This is a member of a class of asteroids that are normally named, by tradition, for gods and goddesses," Helin said. "It is extremely rare that a near-Earth asteroid be named for a living person."

Alpha Centauri, the nearest star to our own sun and the third-brightest star in the sky, is never visible north of 30 degrees latitutde.

The Israeli connection

By Phillip Alder

Another independently published bridge magazine in the United States is Bridge Today. The editors, Pamela and Matt Granovetter, started it from their home in Jamaica, Queens. A few years ago they moved to Israel, but by using the Internet, fax machines and the mail, they seem to have no trouble producing six issues a year. The material aims primarily at the duplicate player, but there is a lot of variety.

Here is a deal from this year's July-August issue. How should South play in two spades? West leads the club 10, East winning with the king and cashing the ace before switching to the spade 10.

South's opening bid is a weak two, showing a decent six-card suit and some 6 to 10 high-card points.

With four top losers in the minors, South must avoid two trump losers. Normally, one would finesse the spade queen (or cash the ace before leading up to the queen), but here that cannot be the right play. Why?

East has produced the two top club honors. Also, if West had the ace and king of diamonds, surely he would have led one of them rather than a club. So, East is also marked with a top diamond, yet he passed as dealer. This means West must have the spade king.

Declarer should win East's crafty switch with the spade ace and continue with a low spade. When the king falls out of the air, the contract is made.

Snyder dominates all-district tennis

Snyder High School team tennis walked way with nine out of 18 first team all-district selections as well as four second team all-district.

In boys' singles, Adrain Gonzales, Jaime Juarez, Brett Gibson and Ty Jones received first team status, all with 5-0 records. Vicki Vargas was named first team in girls' singles with a 4-1 mark.

Being named second team all-district in girls' singles were Laura Gonzales, Lidia Rodriguez and Angela Sanchez.

In boys' doubles, three teams were selected first team. Adrain Gonzales and Juarez comprised one team with the other teams made up of Brett Gibson and Todd Hall and Zack Briseno and Ty Jones. All three teams went through district play undefeated.

The girls' doubles team of Laura Gonzales and Sanches were selected first team while Cailey Coffee and Vargas were second team. Both of the girls' doubles teams were 4-1.

As a team, the boys won district with a 5-0 record while the girls won the top spot with a 4-1 mark. As a combined team, they were 5-0.

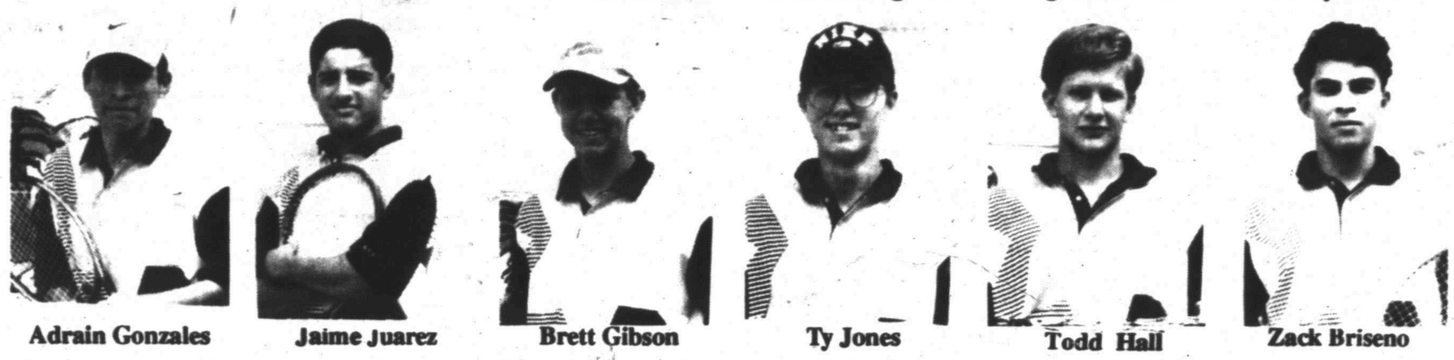

"I believe we took away more all-district spots than any other school," said coach Chad Redwine. "I'm real proud of our kids. This is a tribute to the hard-work they put in this fall and reinforces the feeling of 'it was worth it all.'"

The tennis players are currently in off-season where they work out with weight, resistance training, hit and work on correcting minor flaws in their strokes. They will hit the courts for the spring individual season in January.

Chris Boniol 21, Green Bay 6

IRVING (AP) — If Green Bay and Dallas meet in the playoffs for the fourth consecutive year, it will be easy for the Packers to have the proper incentive.

Besides losing to Dallas eight consecutive times, the Packers can now use the rallying cry: "Remember the Chris Boniol incident."

"We know we will play Dallas again, and we have five more games to determine where we're going to play them," defensive end Sean Jones said. "If we win our next five, they'll have fun up in Lambeau Field."

Boniol kicked an NFL record-tying seven field goals as the Cowboys beat the Packers 21-6 Monday night, but it was the last one that set the Packers on edge.

The last field goal came from 28 yards with 20 seconds left in the game to match the NFL mark shared by Jim Bakken and Rich Karlis. The kick came after Troy Aikman took a knee and the Cowboys called timeout to get Boniol onto the field. Aikman tried to wave the field goal team off the field.

"I respect Aikman for doing that," Jones said.

Aikman wouldn't talk about it after the game, saying only, "I'm glad our defense played as well as it did so that field goals were enough."

Reggie White and several other Packers, not knowing Boniol was going for a record, charged the Dallas bench, but order was restored after a minor skirmish in which three players were kicked out of the game.

"I was upset, but what can I do about it?" White said. "That was not important. They beat us is what it all boils down to."

"Anytime a guy is that close to kicking a record for field goals, I don't care if we're winning or losing, you have to give a guy the opportunity," Dallas running back Emmitt Smith said. "Who knows when he'll have an opportunity to kick seven field goals again? You have to give a guy the chance."

Dallas coach Barry Switzer said he was sorry the incident overshadowed a great performance by the Cowboys defense. He said kicking coach Steve Hoffman told him about the chance for the record.

"I wouldn't deny your son, my son, anyone's son a chance to make an NFL record," said Switzer, who earlier this year turned down a suggestion by owner Jerry Jones that he run up the score against Miami and former Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson.

"I made the decision and he sure deserved it, because he won the game with his foot. Someone's got to make the decision, and it was me. You can never have sympathy for anyone in this league. If our kicking coach hadn't told me he could set an NFL record, we wouldn't have done it!"

Boniol was caught in the center of the storm. He was as cool as he was on the field with his 7-for-7 game.

"I just wanted to go out and do my thing," Boniol said. "I'm sorry it dampened things, but I still had to smile. One Green Bay player even came over and congratulated me. It's something I'm proud of."

Westerners lose home opener, 56-30

The home opener for Western Texas College was not what the Lady Westerners wanted as they dropped a 56-30 decision to Midland College in the Scurry County Coliseum Monday.

Not only was it the home opener, it was also the first conference game for both teams.

WTC kept the game close the first half, but the second half saw the Lady Chaparrals pull away and take the win.

The Lady Westerners did not have anyone in double figures. Angelica Brooks, sophomore from Hobbs, N.M., was high point with eight.

Celestine Outuoro and Caitlin Behrens each had five, Jennifer Peters four, Shanna Gathright three, Freda McKnight and Kelley Wilson and Dionna Russel connected on a free throw.

WTC was three of seven at the charity stripe and connected on three three-point baskets with Brooks hitting two and Behrens one.

Ndiasse Ndiaye led the way for Midland with 12. Valeria Santos added 10.

The Lady Westerners (1-4, 0-1) will look to get back in the winning column Thursday when they travel to Odessa for a 7:30 p.m. battle with the Lady Wranglers from Odessa College.

In other conference action last night, Howard College downed New Mexico Junior College 78-57 and South Plains took a 84-57 triumph over Odessa College.

Lou Holtz makes resignation official

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Lou Holtz resigned today as expected and endorsed any one of his assistants as his successor.

He will personally announce his resignation at his 1 p.m. weekly news conference. The resignation takes effect after the season, Holtz's 11th at Notre Dame.

"I cannot honestly give you a reason for my resignation, except to say I feel it is the right thing to do," he said in a statement. "People will say there has to be more to it than this, but believe me, there isn't.

"I have no desire to become the all-time winningest coach at Notre Dame. The record belongs to Knute Rockne or some other coach in the future. I am comfortable leaving here with his record intact."

Holtz is 99-29-2 at Notre Dame — six wins shy of tying Rockne's Irish school victory record — and 215-94-7 overall.

Despite rumors that he quit so he could take another shot at the NFL, where he coached the New York Jets to a 3-10 record in 1976 before resigning with one game left, he said he has no immediate agenda. One scenario has him coaching the Minnesota Vikings if Dennis Green leaves.

"I have absolutely no plans for the future," he said. "What I will do in the future will be dependent upon the opportunities available to me. But at the present time I have no options, nor do I anticipate any."

Holtz, 59, said he is in good health. A frail-looking man, he's had a series of health problems while at Notre Dame. He had emergency surgery last fall to relieve pressure on his spinal cord, a condition that could have caused paralysis if left untreated.

While he has no idea who will replace him, Holtz said he hopes it would be one of his assistants. Among the top contenders to take over college football's glamour job are Northwestern's Gary Barnett and Irish defensive coordinator Bob Davie.

Irish offensive coordinator Dave Roberts, the former coach at Northeast Louisiana, has made it clear he wants to return to head coaching.

"I hope it is one of my able assistants," Holtz said of his replacement. "If not, I hope the new coach will give serious consideration to retaining our assistant coaches, as they are a special group of people."

New evidence revealed in Routier murder case

KERRVILLE (AP) — Analysis of blood and hair from Darlie Routier's Dallas-area home may bolster her contention that an intruder killed her two sons, according to a court filing.

Some findings in a DNA expert's report "may be consistent with one or more of the stories previously told by the defendant," prosecutors stated in the new court documents filed Monday.

Mrs. Routier, 26, is charged with capital murder in the June 6 stabbing deaths of 5-year-old Damon and 6-year-old Devon. She claims an intruder wearing dark clothing stabbed her sons to death then wounded her before fleeing through a window at their home in the suburb of Rowlett.

Prosecutors have contended there was no intruder and that Mrs. Routier killed the children and injured herself.

"We still feel we have a good case," said Rowlett police Sgt. Dean Poos, declining to comment on specific evidence. "If somebody walks into our front door and gives us good evidence that she didn't do it, we are going to act on it."

The newly released evidence indicates a hair found on the window in question does not belong to Mrs. Routier and that other hairs not matching those of the Routier family were found in the home.

Also, DNA tests indicate Mrs. Routier's nightshirt and pillow appear to contain only her blood, not that of Damon or Devon.

"The nightgown is very crucial," said LuAnn Black, Mrs. Routier's aunt. "If she did it, you would think she would have the boys' blood on her."

But a source close to the prosecution discounted the absence of the boys' blood on the nightshirt.

"The fact that she stabbed the kids doesn't necessarily mean she is going to get blood on her nightshirt," the source told The Dallas Morning News.

Also included in the evidence list were:

—Two partial palm prints discovered on the bottom portion of the window that remain unidentified.

—A knife and a screwdriver found in a neighbor's back yard on June 6.

—A report called into the Rowlett Police Department five days after the attack by a neighbor who said someone wearing dark clothes and carrying a knife or screwdriver tried to break into her house on June 6.

A defense attorney declined to comment specifically on the new evidence.

"There is a lot of material here, and we're beginning to attempt to digest it and follow up on it," said defense attorney Richard Mosty of Kerrville. The case was moved to Kerr County because of pre-trial publicity in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

Assistant District Attorney Greg Davis of Dallas County disclosed the evidence to defense attorneys as required by law. First Assistant District Attorney Norm Kinne said prosecutors believe the state's case is strong.

"Y'all haven't heard any of the case yet," Kinne said. "All I can say is wait until the trial."

Testimony is scheduled to begin Jan. 6. On Monday, the last of four alternate jurors was selected. The five-man, seven-woman main jury panel had already been seated.

Mrs. Routier's husband, Darin, figures into the new evidence. A white sock found near the Routier home containing the blood of Damon and Devon also has on it cloth fibers matching fibers from Darin Routier's shoes, court records show.

And hair with the same characteristics of his hair was found on the knife identified as the murder weapon, the records state.

"I've nothing to be afraid of, just like Darlie has nothing to be afraid of. The truth will be told. They're wrong," Routier said when The Morning News reported last week on the new evidence linked to him.

Darin Routier has not been charged with any crime. But prosecutors said recent analysis of physical evidence suggests he may have participated in the crime or coverup.

Man charged in four killings drowns

LAURENS, S.C. (AP) — Johnny and Bertha Satterwhite had been separated a week after 12 years of marriage when the millworker left a chilling note to his wife, a mother of four: She would be all alone in 1997.

Mrs. Satterwhite arrived home to find the note — and the bullet-riddled bodies of her children in bed with their pajamas on.

"She was screaming, saying, 'I can't believe he did this. I can't believe he did this to me,'" next-door neighbor Kellie Adams said.

Authorities believe Satterwhite, described by neighbors as a wonderful father who would play with the children in the yard, killed the three boys and the girl and then drowned himself. His body was found Monday in a pond a few miles from the family home.

Mrs. Satterwhite had been living away from the home for at least a week when a mutual friend of the couple called to say that Satterwhite had left "four packages" there for her, said Laurens Police Chief Rooin Morse. The friend was apparently unaware of the killings, he added.

When Mrs. Satterwhite got home Sunday afternoon, she discovered the bodies of Mary Gary, 16, Terrance Gary, 14, Johnny Gary, 13, and Christopher Satterwhite, 10. Satterwhite was the father of Christopher and the stepfather of the other three, police said.

The boys had each been shot twice in the head and the girl was shot three times, Morse said. He did not know an exact time of death but said the children could have been killed as early as Thursday since they were not at school Friday.

Satterwhite, 37, was last seen alive on Friday, when he had asked the personnel director at Clinton Mills, the textile mill where he worked, to remove his wife as beneficiary of his life insurance policy, Morse said. It was unclear what led to the couple's breakup after about 12 years of marriage.

A search of the small one-story brick and wood house turned up a handgun, which was bought Thursday at a local pawn shop, along with a box of bullets. Police also found Satterwhite's note to his wife in the living room.

"Basically it told her to have a Merry Christmas, used some profanity and said she would be alone in '97," Morse said.

Authorities issued warrants charging Satterwhite with murder before finding his truck (with a bumper sticker proclaiming "I'm a proud parent of a terrific kid") about 10 miles northeast of Laurens on Monday. Police used bloodhounds to search the woods nearby, and pulled his body from a pond near a reservoir five hours later.

No cause of death had been determined, but there were no indications of foul play. An autopsy was scheduled for today.

The tragedy shocked neighbors who remember seeing Satterwhite playing with the children in their yard in this rural community 75 miles northwest of Columbia.

"It's unbelievable, because you see them all the time," said Helen Turner, who lives next door. "That man would get out there in that yard over there and wrestle with those little boys. You couldn't ask for a better father."

She said she heard shots Thursday or Friday night but thought nothing of it because many neighbors own guns and practice shooting.

Fergie jokes with David Letterman

NEW YORK (AP) — The Duchess of York, who has complained of rough treatment from the British media, told David Letterman that she can let her hair down in the United States.

"I guess you sort of give me a second chance over here. ...I suppose you cut a chick a bit of flak," the former Sarah Ferguson said Monday on CBS' "Late Show with David Letterman."

No good deed goes unpunished:

Meter feeder gets hauled off to jail

CINCINNATI (AP) — Sylvia Stayton was on her way to court to file for bankruptcy when she fed 15 cents into two expired parking meters to spare drivers she didn't even know a ticket.

The 62-year-old grandmother, who said she was just trying to help out some strangers, was arrested on Oct. 24 and faces up to four months in jail and $1,000 in fines.

"Somebody was going to get a ticket, and I was trying to avoid that," Stayton said. "I would want somebody to do that for me."

Stayton has become something of a folk hero in Cincinnati and has received about $350 in small bills from people donating to what she calls her "legal abuse fund."

A church group that has been anonymously feeding parking meters for years as part of a random-acts-of-kindness campaign printed up T-shirts that read: "Sylvia Stayton ... guilty of kindness."

The Cincinnati Enquirer ran a cartoon of a "Cincinnati's 10 Most Wanted" poster depicting the "meter-feeding granny" along with such scofflaws as people who yell "Bingo" prematurely.

In a letter to the editor, one writer commended police efforts "to stamp out this kind of decency" because "it's getting so a person can't walk down Ludlow (Avenue) without civilized behavior being shoved in his or her face."

Police won't talk about the case, and prosecutors said they will proceed as normal, despite the outpouring of support. A judge will hear arguments Friday.

Stayton was filing for bankruptcy for the spray-manufacturing business she and her husband have run for 20 years. But she had enough money to spare a few nickels when she saw an officer writing parking tickets.

She was caught violating an obscure 1958 meter-feeding ordinance designed to keep office workers from hogging storefront spaces all day, and was charged with disorderly conduct and obstructing official business.

Arresting officer Edward Johnson said in the police report that he warned Stayton that putting more money into an expired meter is illegal.

"You've got to be kidding," she replied.

He wasn't. He slapped the handcuffs on her.

"I screamed because he kept pulling my arm up," she said.

Stayton said that she isn't thrilled with her newfound celebrity, but added: "I'll tell you what I really am enjoying — seeing the wonderful hearts of people that are coming forward to talk to me. ...That has just lifted my heart beyond words."

'Good kids' face murder charges

NEWARK, Del. (AP) — A man wanted in the death of a newborn boy — who was dumped in a trash bin outside a motel — hasn't come to grips with the crime, which could bring him a death sentence, his lawyer said.

Brian Peterson Jr., 18, is charged with murder along with his 18-year-old girlfriend, Amy Grossberg, the baby's mother. Grossberg, arrested Monday, was ordered held without bail and must undergo a psychiatric evaluation. Both could get a death sentence if convicted.

Peterson, who was expected to surrender soon, doesn't fully understand the seriousness of the charges, his lawyer, Joseph A. Hurley, told The News Journal of Wilmington. He met with Peterson and his parents on Sunday.

"Nothing is registering," Hurley said of Peterson's reaction to the charges. "You tell a boy who is just out of high school that they want to stick a needle in his arm and put poison through it, and he thinks 'This just can't be happening.'"

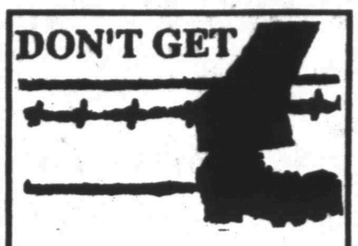

Peterson was believed to be the baby's father. Newark Police Detective Steve Fox said investigators planned to conduct a test to determine if the child was Peterson's.

The couple, high school sweethearts from well-to-do families, went off to college with promising futures. She went to the University of Delaware in Newark, he to Gettysburg College, less than three hours away in Pennsylvania.

Last week, Peterson made the three-hour drive from Gettysburg, picked up Grossberg at her dormitory and checked into a $56-a-night motel in Newark.

Prosecutors are trying to learn just what happened in that motel room, but Peterson has allegedly admitted leaving the newborn in the trash in a gray plastic bag after helping deliver the baby Nov. 12.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: During the holidays, many communities sponsor programs in which people buy new toys or clothes for needy children. Many of these children come from homes where there are no books.

An ongoing cycle of illiteracy haunts children on the edges of poverty. When teachers ask their students to bring a favorite book to class to share, these children show up with an advertisement or a coupon book because they have no books at home.

Abby, please help these children learn to love books and reading. If your readers are buying toys or clothes for needy children, please ask them to consider tucking in one or two children's books.

D.W. IN RENO, NEV.

DEAR D.W.: I'm sure many readers will agree it's a great idea. Books make excellent gifts.

DEAR ABBY: Whoever gave you the misinformation regarding dinner table protocol that you passed on to "Serious in Boston" needs retraining themselves.

I'm a former embassy butler, and please know that the signal conveyed to a trained server, as you described the positioning of cutlery and plate (knife and fork together diagonally across the upper right rim of the plate), would be that the diner would appreciate being offered another helping.

To indicate that you are finished and wish the plate removed, the cutlery should be placed straight upon the plate, perpendicular to the diner. as clock hands at half past six, with the knife upon the right with the blade edge toward the fork.

If you are being attended by properly trained staff, it can avoid embarrassment to know what signals you are sending to the server.

Most sincerely at your service ...

RUGGLES OF RED GAP

DEAR RUGGLES: Thank you for speaking up. Concerned that I had misled my readers, I consulted several more etiquette books. "The New Emily Post's Etiquette," by Elizabeth L. Post, states: "When you have finished the main course, the knife and fork are placed beside each other on the dinner plate diagonally from upper left to lower right. (Emphasis mine.) The handles extend slightly over the edge of the plate."

"The Amy Vanderbilt Complete Book of Etiquette Entirely Rewritten and Updated," by Nancy Tuckerman and Nancy Dunnan, says, "Put your fork and knife across the center of your plate on a diagonal slant when you have finished eating."

Letitia Baldrige, whom I telephoned, told me that the flatware should be placed on the right rim of the plate, straight up and down — not diagonally.

I can only conclude that the best way to signal that you have finished eating is to speak up and tell the server that you would like your plate removed.

Read on for a thought-provoking letter from a reader who offers a different perspective:

DEAR ABBY: While I have never written to you before, the letter from "Serious in Boston" — whose English-born and reared ladyfriend criticized him for pushing his plate to the center of the table when he had finished eating — really got under my skin.

In view of what is going on in this world today, just how important is it to place the knife and fork in a certain way in order to signal the server to remove your plate? Give me a break! I say, "Tell the lady to go back to England and eat with the Queen!"

I get a lot more upset about how few people have food to put on their plates, plates to put on their tables and roofs over their heads.

Who's right? Pap tests, home birthing

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Your opinions are completely inane. I wanted to say something stronger but, as a doctor, thought better of it.

You have spoken out against Pap tests for post-hysterectomy patients. Wrong. You said that women have given birth for centuries without doctors and that home births are entirely safe. Wrong. You even said that male gynecologists "had" babies, not the mothers themselves. Ridiculous. You haven't a clue about medical matters and have failed to use medical science. Your column is driven by a false ideology. Please publish your trashy diatribes in some psychobabble publication. I dare you to print this letter.

DEAR DOCTOR: Wow! You really gave it to me, didn't you? Well, I did print your letter. Now let's examine your objections.

The Pap test checks for cancer of the cervix, which is the opening of the uterus. At the time of a hysterectomy, the uterus (and the cervix) are usually removed. So what's left to "Pap"? I'll admit that rare cases of vaginal cancer can be diagnosed by Pap-testing post-hysterectomy women, but these patients usually have symptoms, such as bleeding or discharge.

To me, it doesn't seem cost-effective to test ALL such women. I think that gynecologists could be more selective — and my view is shared by many authorities.

I never wrote that home birthing is safe. There are risks, of course, in any birth. However, many young mothers feel more comfortable having their babies at home and — as long as they accept the risks (such as hemorrhage), employ an experienced midwife and have suitable M.D. backup — I see no reason why they shouldn't.

I still think that many older obstetricians "had" babies. Back in the 1940s, '50s, and '60s, pregnant women had zero options. They were told "Honey — or dear (the accepted name-calling to keep adult women in their place), don't you worry about this birth. I'll take care of it."

So the women were admitted to hospital, knocked out with general anesthetics (or given a lower-body-numbing spinal anesthetic), the doctor "had" the baby, and the new mother was given a chance to hold it briefly (if she were awake) before the infant was trundled off to the newborn nursery. That's just the way it was. And the fathers were consigned to the waiting room, where they handed out cigars.

Today, all that has (mercifully) changed. New mothers and their husbands are now encouraged to participate in the wondrous process of birthing. Natural childbirth and home deliveries have become routine. Licensed mid-wives can successfully assist in most births.

There is minimal anesthesia — a blessing, because the newborns are not affected by the powerful drugs previously given to their mothers. Even hospitals have re-designed their delivery suites to be more home-like and user-friendly. In short, there is unmistakable evidence that women are having their own babies, with obstetrical care to assist only.

Moreover, with increased knowledge about obstetrical problems and the ubiquitous use of ultrasound examinations to detect birth defects or placental abnormalities, many birth-related health hazards can be predicted, treated and solved. Of course, not every woman experiences a problem-free pregnancy and delivery. Such women should undergo hospital deliveries under close monitoring and M.D. supervision.

Thus, I see no reason to alter my opinions. Pregnant women need choices that are safe and economical, not some male doctor who unfairly insists on hospital deliveries because 1. it's more convenient for him, 2. he doesn't want to lose control, 3. hospitals need the income, and 4. he might miss out on the substantial delivery fee.

I look forward to your future comments, doctor.

One dead, three missing in landslide

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A house was swept away in a mudslide, high water blocked highways and thousands were left without electricity after storms pounded the region. One occupant of the house was dead and three others missing.

The storm that hit the Northwest on Monday dumped a foot or more of snow in the mountains and eastern sections of Oregon and Washington, and as much as 6.66 inches of rain along the coast at North Bend, Ore.

"The ground just couldn't handle it any more," said Douglas County sheriff's Capt. Robert Stratton. "There's a tremendous amount of mud."

"This is horrible," said Patrice McVey, whose house in Dexter, east of Eugene, had become an island surrounded by 4 feet of water.

A landslide smashed into a rural house near Hubbard Creek in southern Oregon. A man's body was recovered but three women were missing, Stratton said. The man's child escaped.

Recovery work in the area had to wait until daybreak, Stratton said.

"There's slides on the road and one of the roads washed out a bit.... We have deputies stranded between slides," he said.

Radiation survivors reach settlement

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government has agreed to pay $4.8 million to the victims of Cold War-era radiation experiments, an Energy Department official said today.

Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary was to announce the settlement in New York.

"This settlement goes to the very heart of the moral accountability the government owes it citizens," O'Leary said in prepared remarks. "We are grateful to the families for the tough lessons they have taught us about trust, responsibility and accountability between the government and the people."

The agreement represents the final settlement in 12 of 18 human radiation experiment cases involving the injection of plutonium and uranium, said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity. Nine of the 12 took place at the University of Rochester in upstate New York.

One surviving subject was a woman injected with uranium, the official said. The rest of the money will go to the families of 11 people injected with plutonium who have died.

The Presidential Advisory Committee on Human Radiation Experiments recommended that the families of victims be compensated.

The Clinton administration is drafting a report on human radiation experiments to be released within two months.

In addition to the 12 cases, another plutonium claim was settled earlier this summer.

Missing woman has been located

A Snyder woman who failed to meet a Spartan Transportation bus on a return trip from Lubbock last Tuesday is back in Snyder and "okay", said Cpl. Brian Peterson of the Snyder Police Department.

Alfreda Ann Johnson was located on the square Monday, said Peterson.

"She advised me everything was okay with her and she just decided to make other plans to get home from Lubbock," said Peterson.

A missing persons report had been filed on Johnson Friday. The woman had taken the bus to Lubbock on Tuesday, but had failed to meet it for the return trip from University Medical Center.

Vandalism investigated by Snyder peace officers

Responding to acts of vandalism and criminal mischief dominated local law enforcement activity Monday.

An officer was requested at Jack's Used Cars at 8:27 a.m. in reference to tires being cut on the car lot. An offense report for criminal mischief was submitted.

Ray Heath requested to speak to a deputy at 10:49 a.m. in reference to a vehicle passing him last Friday on Round Top Road and shooting a BB gun and breaking a window. No report was requested by Heath, but he wanted the sheriff's office to be aware of the incident.

An officer was requested at Burnett Safety Services at 2:48 p.m. in reference to vandalism to an air compressor. An offense report for criminal mischief was submitted.

In other activity, a minor two-vehicle accident occurred at 11:22 a.m. in the 4500 block of College Avenue. Involved were a 1996 Ford pickup driven by Jeremy Reyes of Westbrook and a 1992 Oldsmobile driven by Marshall Spence of 2702 33rd St.

A report for Class B theft was submitted at 12:15 p.m. in reference to Abagail Escobedo reporting the theft of a puppy from 600 34th St.

A bicycle that was reported stolen on Friday was located at 12:05 this morning at the Golden Terrace Apartments.

Crystal returns

LOS ANGELES (AP) — After shying away from the Oscars for two years, Billy Crystal is coming back for another turn as host.

"Once Barry Scheck turned it down, I had a feeling they'd come to me," Crystal said, referring to one of O.J. Simpson's lawyers. "Send any Oscar jokes to my web site at www.whyistheshowsolong.com.'
