Further Action Awaits Commission Decision

Central Tax Office Issue Now Depends on City

The issue of a central tax appraisal and collection office in Deaf Smith County now rests with the city of Hereford, members of the Deaf Smith County District Tax Appraisal Board concluded during a called meeting held at city hall Thursday night.

The city remains the only major taxing entity in Deaf Smith County which has not indicated its intent to participate in a full concept approach involving a central appraisal and collection office for all entities here.

Already the county commission, the Hereford Independent School District and the Walcott School District have indicated intentions to participate in the full concept approach, but Tax Appraisal Board Chairman Bruce Coleman informed those in attendance at last night's meeting that no action can be taken on contracts for taxing entities or establishment of central files until such time as the city indicates its intention in the matter.

City Commissioner Wes Fisher, who was on hand at last night's meeting, reported that the tax board issue will be placed on the agenda for the next city commission meeting, scheduled for Oct. 6.

Those in attendance at last night's meeting were informed that in the event that the city indicates intent to participate in the full concept approach, a central appraisal and collection office could be in operation here as early as February of 1981.

Considerable discussion was focused on the need for a computer program for the tax rolls as the central taxing procedure is initiated here.

Consideration was being given to entering into a computer program for the taxing procedure immediately, but members of the appraisal board were urged to reconsider that action for the immediate future by James McMorries, a local ad-valorem tax consultant.

"At this point I think you would be spending taxpayer money unwisely by going into a computer. A re-appraisal will be necessary, probably in 1982, and in my opinion you'll need the re-appraisal before going into a computer with the values," stated McMorries.

"Currently you're in an old outdated grading system, because of inflation, and that's the problem. You can do the same thing you're setting out to do by simply using the county tax records, without spending $14,000 to go into a computer. You can use the county appraisal cards and keep them updated until you get ready to do whatever you plan on. I just don't see spending taxpayer dollars unwisely, and in my opinion you wouldn't be gaining anything by going into a computer at this point," stated McMorries.

The local tax consultant's comments sparked interest among the board members present and prompted renewed consideration of just when a central appraisal and collection office could go into operation here.

Board member James Gentry questioned HISD and city tax officials Fred Fox and Cliff Arnold on the ideal time period in which to shut down existing tax offices and enter into a central office.

Fox and Arnold agreed that the month of February would probably prove a suitable time period because the majority of the tax work for the entities would be wrapped up at that time.

With members of the tax board and representatives of various taxing entities warming to the idea of utilizing the county's appraisal cards along with information from HISD on residents in outlying counties who are within the local school district, Fox commented that the central approach, utilizing the county appraisal cards, would likely prove workable.

"It would be less of a problem and probably save six to eight weeks by using the county cards and pulling the school cards we need until we can get a new schedule set up for a computer," stated Fox.

"There's no doubt you can go the full concept in Deaf Smith County and save the taxpayers some money," McMorries commented.

With tax board members and local entity representatives made aware that they have the means of carrying out central appraisal and collection, conversation then turned to when and where.

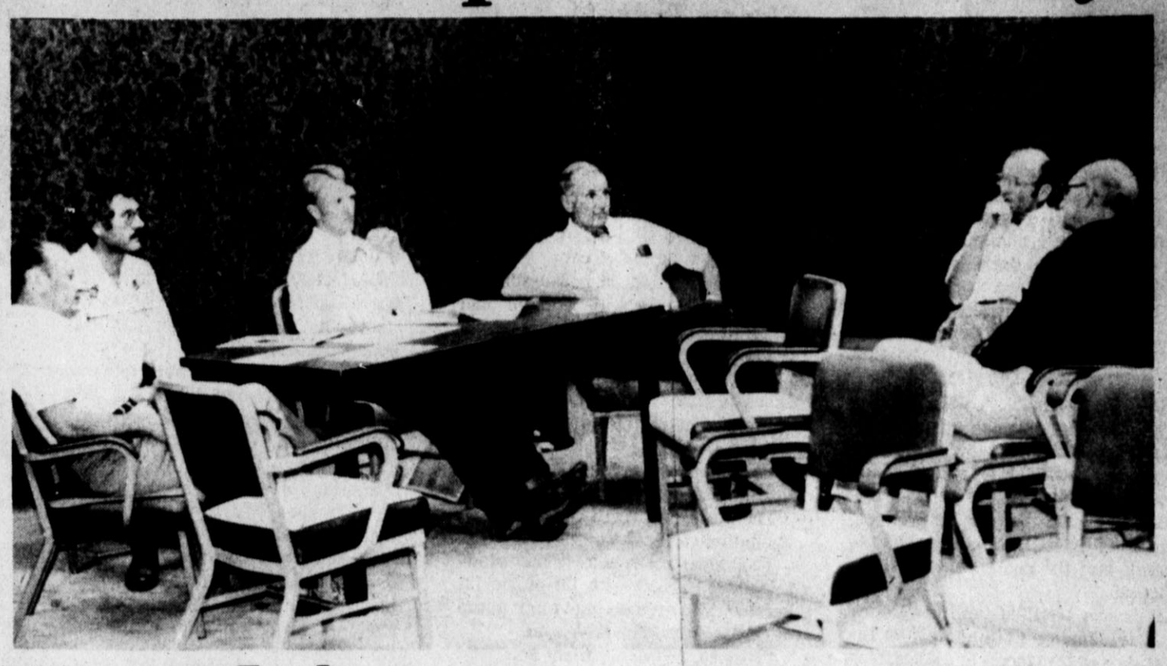

"To best utilize the work force, a central office needs to be in one place," commented Fox, following a suggestion by HISD Supt. Harrell Holder that perhaps separate appraisal and collection offices should be established to make better use of office space already available.

Those present speculated on prospective central office sites, including the basement of the old Central School, and agreed that an office location will remain a major consideration.

"It appears that we are waiting for a decision from the city. Then we can consider contracts and a time table. If the city agrees to a full concept central office and we don't use the computer immediately, we could be looking at opening a central office sometime in the early spring," commented Coleman.

Tax appraisal board members then made plans to meet again Oct. 9 at city hall, following action by the city commission Oct. 6 on the central tax office issue.

Other individuals attending last night's meeting included Dan Hall, Frank Zinser and Melvin Jayroe.

Discussing Tax Issue

Members of the Deaf Smith County District Tax Appraisal Board consider options of whether to enter into a computer program or utilize county tax cards in launching a central appraisal and collection office here during a session Thursday night. FBI Informant Begins Brilab Case Testimony

HOUSTON (AP)— Joseph Hauser, an FBI informant and key witness in the Texas Brilab trials, is telling his story with testimony and tapes of an alleged insurance kickback scheme that led to the indictment of Texas House Speaker Billy Clayton.

Hauser, a short, stocky man, with bushy black eyebrows and prison pallor, is tracing tape-by-tape his meetings with Texas labor leaders, Clayton, and Austin attorneys Donald Ray and Randall Wood.

Clayton, Ray and Wood are on trial in a Houston federal court on charges of extortion, racketeering, bribery and conspiracy.

Hauser, posing as a representative of the Prudential Insurance Co., secretly taped several telephone and in-person conversations involving the defendants and L.G. Moore, regional director of the International Operating Engineers Union.

Moore, indicted with the other three by a federal grand jury, is to be tried later.

During his first 90 minutes on the stand, Hauser traced his activities from the time he agreed to help the government in the Brilab probe to telephone conversations with Harold Grubbs, education director for Houston Pipe Fitters Local 211, and Bernard Rapoport, a Waco, Texas, insurance executive.

His testimony eventually will lead to a meeting with Moore and Clayton, the heart of the government's case.

The prosecutors claim Clayton, at that Nov. 8, 1979, meeting accepted a $5,000 bribe from Moore to reopen bidding on a multimillion dollar-a-year state employees health insurance program.

Clayton, a veteran of 20 years in the legislature and with hopes of running for governor in 1982, said he thought the money was a campaign contribution and planned to return it to Moore at a later date.

In one untaped talk with Rapoport, Hauser said the insurance executive told him that Grubbs was a "wheeler-dealer who would go for a 50-50 deal" on insurance kickbacks.

Hauser said Rapoport told him Grubbs was not like some other until officials who "want 80 to 90 percent."

Asked to explain, Hauser said some union leaders, such as the later George Meany, president of the AFL-CIO, would buy your insurance plan if he could get 80 to 90 percent of your commission.

"If you made a $10,000 commission, then he wanted $9,000 and you got $1,000."

Grubbs, the informant said, would settle for a 50 percent return.

Grubbs appeared before the Brilab grand jury in Houston last March but has not been indicted and has been called as a government witness.

The same goes for Sherman Fricks, an official of the Pipe Fitters union and a former secretary-treasurer of the Texas AFL-CIO.

Bentsen Asks DOE For Study on Aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen has asked the Department of Education to study whether Texas is eligible for federal aid to offset the expense of providing free education to illegal alien children.

"In this instance, it is the failure of the federal government to adopt a workable immigration policy that has exacerbated the illegal alien situation and will have a direct effect on school financing in my state," the Texas Democrat wrote in a letter to Education Secretary Shirley Hufstedler.

Bentsen said Thursday, however, that illegal alien children apparently are not flooding into Texas schools this year despite a federal court order that prohibits their exclusion.

He said the full impact will not be clear until more complete figures become available.

"We've had considerable concern expressed by a number of school administrators in Texas," Bentsen said at a news conference. "We have to get more positive numbers to

President's News Conference Prompts Ire, Network Concern

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's nationally broadcast news conference raised not only some expected ire from his Republican opponent — whose aides called the performance a "political commercial" — but also some surprising concern by television network executives.

Carter, who has refused to take part in a televised debate Sunday between presidential candidates Ronald Reagan and John Anderson, held sway before the TV cameras Thursday for about 30 minutes, four of them devoted to an opening statement in which he gave a "good news" report on his administration.

He talked about the administration's efforts on Mideast negotiations, the economy, normalization with China, the hostages in Iran, auto imports, energy, and nuclear arms talks with the Soviets.

When it got down to questions, the preamble was mostly dropped and the president was asked repeatedly about recent campaign statements in which he linked Republican nominee Reagan's pronouncements on states' rights and the Ku Klux Klan with racism and hatred.

Four out of 12 questions dealt with that, prompting Carter to say he does not consider Reagan a racist and to reject any assertion that he is running a mean campaign.

"I think my campaign is very moderate in its tone," he said.

But what concerned the Reagan camp was the opening statement. Reagan's campaign director, William Casey, called it "an obvious partisan announcement" and asked that the Republican be given equal time under the Federal Communications Act.

Network news executives seemed concerned, too. CBS News President William Leonard said the statement was "pretty obviously self-serving. I was a little bit shaken, frankly."

And David Burke, vice president of ABC News, said it "did not distinguish the press conference in the traditional sense. And we will keep that in mind when requests are made in the future."

The equal-time law specifies that broadcasters who permit candidates to "use" their stations must give an equal opportunity to other candidates for the same office. An exception is coverage of "bona fide news events."

Despite the opening statement, the president's 59th news conferece since taking office was dominated by Cartr's campaign conduct.

In Atlanta on Tuesday — two weeks after Reagan had mentioned the Klan — Carter told a partisan audience of black southerners that the campaignhas seen "the stirrings of hate and the rebirth of code words like 'states rights'" and the Klan.

"Hatred has no place in this country," Carter added. "Racism has no place in this country."

But when pressed on the matter Thursday, the president said he did not believe Reagan was "running a campaign of racism or hatred and I think my campaign is very moderate in its tone."

"I did not raise the issue of the Klan nor did I raise the issue of states' rights," he said. "And I believe it's best to leave these words, which are code words to many people in our country who suffered from discrimination in

Coping is Day-to-Day Thing for Young Widow

AGNES TAYLOR

By ALLISON RYAN
Women's Editor

For Agnes Taylor, a young widow of 24 with a two-year old son, the philosophy of life is taking one day at a time without worrying about a situation that will invariably arise until it does.

"There are a lot of problems a single parent has to face everyday, so I really can't let myself worry about what may happen and what I will do when it does happen," she said.

Mrs. Taylor's husband, Ken died in March of 1979 in a scuba diving accident in Santa Rosa, N.M. At the time, she was working as a legal secretary in Lubbock to pay for his education at Texas Tech University. Her son David, was 7 months old.

"Ken was a senior electrical engineering major. I had received my degree in May of 1978, so I was working to help pay for his education. His death was a major crisis for me, but I had my family for support, and I did have my degree so I was not helpless or completely on my own," she stated.

Mrs. Taylor began working as the assistant county extension agent for Deaf Smith County in May of 1979. Her work is demanding of her time, for not only does she keep regular office hours, but is often busy at night and on weekends for 4-H meetings and activities.

"At first I felt guilty about the amount of time I needed for work instead of spending that time with David. Then I realized I can't feel guilty because there is nothing else I can do. I have to work in order to provide for myself and him," she said.

Mrs. Taylor said she tries to take her son with her to night meetings and has given presentations holding him and juggling posters at the same time.

"It is hard finding a babysitter you can trust. I'm totally responsible for David. I don't have a husband to share this with so there are problems like potty training-something no one ever really thinks about," she continued.

"I can't really ask my babysitter to do this, and I just changed sitters so David is trying to adjust to that. I need more time to train him myself," she remarked.

She also must face the situation of David becoming ill. According to Mrs. Taylor, her son had pneumonia and the babysitter was afraid to keep him, therefore a decision between the job and mothering had to be made.

She explained there is an advantage to a babysitter in that David is exposed to some type of family atmosphere.

"The sitter I had before and the one I have now both have husbands that come home for lunch or at least sometime during the day, so David is exposed to the idea of husband and wife," she said.

She also deals with financial problems. According to Mrs. Taylor, a single parent, receiving minimum wage "can't make it" without some type of assistance.

David receives some Social Security payments which helps balance out the month, she reported.

Financial problems can range from buying major appliances, obtaining life and medical insurance to establishing credit.

"Major appliances such as a stove or washer or dryer are important to the single parent, but many cannot afford them without credit" said Mrs. Taylor.

"A woman sometimes has trouble in establishing credit, because most establishments feel a man is more stable than a woman," she added.

Mrs. Taylor said major credit cards are usually hard to obtain if credit has not been established previously.

"I have car payments to make, but this is not considered enough credit to rate a major credit card. A similar situation stands true if I want to buy a house. Because I have only one child and my yearly salary is above the poverty line for most lending institutions, I cannot easily obtain a loan," she said.

However, there are ways a person can protect themselves in case a situation such a death or divorce occurs she states.

"The thing I feel is most important for couples is life insurance. Ken died without any because we had decided to wait to buy insurance until he was out of school. People don't think they will need life insurance," stated Mrs. Taylor.

She said a legal will is also important if the couple owns property or a substantial amount of furniture or jewelry. Without a will, the wife receives one-half of the property and the rest is equally divided between the children.

Companionship is another problem single parents must face, and Mrs. Taylor admits there have been lonely times.

"I have joined a bowling league and a dance group, but it is still hard to fit in sometimes. The dating situation is awkward. Men have a hard time handling the idea of dating someone with a child. When you go on a date, I have to find a sitter and when I do I worry about if I pay for the sitter or does he, do I take her home or does he?" she said.

She said she misses companionship when she has had a bad day or a good day and there is no one there to talk to about the days occurrances.

Tension in the home is hard to handle as well, states the young widow.

"I don't have someone that can give David the attention he deserves if I'm in a bad mood and don't want to spend time with him. Or, maybe he doesn't want to spend time with me but there is no one

Suit in Death Of Teen Opens

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — An eyewitness says a teen-ager slain by a sheriff's deputy in January 1978 shoved the officer's shotgun away but never grabbed the barrel as the deputy claims.

The testimony contradicts previous statements made by Deputy Sergio Guzman concerning the shooting death of Danny Vasquez, 17.

Jose Zaragoza, 21, testified Thursday that he was leaning against Guzman's squad car and saw the deputy shoot the teen-ager with a 12-gauge shotgun at point-blank range.

Guzman said the gun went off accidentally after Vasquez grabbed the barrel, and the death was ruled accidental.

Zaragoza testified for the "Danny Vasquez Justice Committee" on the first day of testimony in a $1 million civil lawsuit filed in U.S. District Court here against Guzman and the county.

Both sides agree that Vasquez was shot after he approached Guzman, protested that Zaragoza was innocent and demanded the deputy free him. But accounts differ from that point.

Zaragoza said Vasquez was standing about two feet in front of the muzzle of the gun when he was shot. He was asked where Vasquez' hands were when shotgun discharged.

"Hanging at his sides," he replied.

"Was he touching the gun?"

"No, sir," replied Zaragoza, who was 18 at the time of the incident.

Eleven Typhoid Cases Confirmed

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Eleven cases of typhoid fever have been confirmed in an outbreak that the Texas Department of Health says has been traced to YMCA Camp Grady Spruce on the shores of Possum Kingdom Lake in Palo Pinto County.

The department said Thursday 26 other summer campers have had "symptoms compatible with a typhoid infection."

The department said the confirmed cases included 10 campers and one nurse who had attended the Aug. 5-19 camp session. Ten of the cases — nine campers and the nurse — occurred at the main camp.

The other confirmed case occurred at another camp.

The department said it has made telephone contact with 101 of the 130 persons who attended the main camp during the mid-August session.

Of those, the department said, "50 campers are well, 14 have had symptoms clearly not related to a typhoid infection, 26 campers had symptoms compatible with a typhoid infection, nine campers have been confirmed as having typhoid fever, and two suspected cases proved to be negative."

The department said its investigation is still going on, and parents of children who attended camp July 22-Aug. 5, as well as the later session, also are being informed of the situation.

Revenge Apparently Sparked Blaze

HOUSTON (AP) — Revenge for the shooting death of a former club manager apparently sparked a blaze that gutted a vacant nude modeling studio, investigators said.

Fire ripped through the Diamond Lil modeling studio Thursday afternoon in northeast Harris County, said Fire Chief Roy Wimberly. Less than a month ago, Wimberly said, the studio was damaged by fire.

No one was injured, and no damage estimates were revealed, authorities said.

Volunteer firemen from five fire departments managed to control the blaze Thursday within 15 minutes, but "hot spots" flared up for more than an hour, Wimberly said.

Owner Henry Campbell received several threatening telephone calls shortly before the fire, said Sgt. Bill Kesseler of the Harris County Sheriff's Department.

Similar threats preceded a fire on Aug. 23 that destroyed part of the building, he said.

Kesseler said the threats indicated "someone is trying to put him out of business" in revenge for the Aug. 16 shooting death of James Phillip Rowland, 26.

Rowland exchanged gunfire in the studio parking lot with an employee over a $90 debt, authorities said. He was shot in the neck with a .38-caliber pistol and died.

Border Patrol Frustrated

By MACK SISK
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Frustrated Border Patrol agents complain they can't perform their duties in Texas because they have been handcuffed by a Justice Department ban on illegal alien searches.

"Nobody is concerned about enforcing the law anymore. We're just trying to keep our sanity," fumed Richard Casillas, INS district director in the 81-county San Antonio area.

Apprehensions of illegal aliens along the 900-mile Texas-Mexico border dropped sharply this summer after the Justice Department curtailed searches of businesses, ranches and farms during the census count.

Declines in arrests at all five main Border Patrol stations ranged from 34 percent in El Paso to 66 percent throughout the Panhandle. In all, government records show 9,254 fewer aliens were arrested in the five sectors last month than during August 1979.

Initially the Justice Department ordered Border Patrol and Immigration and Naturalization Service agents to stop searching for aliens from April 1 to July 1.

But Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti and Acting INS Commissioner David Crosland have extended the search restrictions indefinitely, causing widespread frustration among field agents.

"I just completed a trip through the various stations and there is really a sense of frustration," said Deputy Chief James H. Selbe of the Border Patrol Headquarters at McAllen.

"They're frustrated because they're paid to do a job and the law provides for them to do a job, but policy from the department through the attorney general has frustrated them," he continued. "It's just that one area, the census frustration problem."

Selbe said alien apprehensions in his area were down 1,000 a month since the restrictions began, with 2,177 aliens caught during August compared to 3,564 during August 1979.

Casillas said his office was undermanned, morale was low and alien arrests had dropped to 25 percent of last year's figures.

The 10 Border Patrol stations in the 77-county Marfa District of West Texas caught 1,040 aliens during August, a 44 percent drop from a year earlier. But officer Charles Elmore said the drop was even more severe in the Amarillo-Lubbock-Big Spring area, where apprehensions were averaging about one-third of normal.

INS spokesman Verne Jarvis said in Washington that the search restriction was extended because discussions are underway between the Justice Department and INS over the entire enforcement policy, not just business sweeps.

Ku Klux Klan Becoming Issue of Campaigners

ATLANTA (AP) — Outside the Ebenezer Baptist Church, President Carter paused to say that anyone who injected the obnoxious blight of the Ku Klux Klan into the presidential campaign was making a serious mistake.

Then he went inside to preach politics — and to renew his own discussion of the Klan as an issue against Ronald Reagan.

He did it adroitly and indirectly, saying it was the Republican nominee who raised the Klan issue in the first place. Actually, it was a Democrat, campaigning for Carter.

It was vintage Carter: renounce an issue, deny an inference and then make sure no one within hearing forgets about it.

In Cleveland, for example, Carter accused Reagan of risking a new arms race that would heighten the peril of nuclear war. "I don't want to be misunderstood," he added. "I'm not insinuating that my opponent is for war and against peace."

In this case, the issue was Reagan and race, the audience a gathering of southern black leaders, come to the church where Martin Luther King Jr. preached to talk about the campaign and plan a get-out-the-vote effort.

The turnout of black voters across the South could be crucial to Carter as he seeks to fend off the conservative Reagan and hold his home territory on Nov. 4.

"You've seen in this campaign the stirrings of hate and the rebirth of code words like 'states' rights' in a speech in Mississippi, in a campaign reference to the Ku Klux Klan relating to the South.

"That is a message that creates a cloud on the political horizon," Carter said. "Hatred has no place in this country. Racism has no place in this country."

Reagan indeed used the phrase "states' rights," once a synonym for opposition to civil rights legislation, in an Aug. 3 speech in Philadelphia, Miss. He said he was for turning some federal programs back to the states.

On Labor Day, he criticized Carter for opening his campaign in Tuscumbia, Ala., erroneously calling it "the city that gave birth to and is the parent body of the Ku Klux Klan." He issued an apology, of sorts, for what the Democrats called a slur against the South.

The Klan did endorse Reagan and the Republican platform. Reagan renounced the endorsement on Aug. 6, saying he had just learned of it and resented the use of his name.

So the topic was there, ripe for the campaign picking.

It was a Democrat, Secretary of Health and Human Resources Patricia Roberts Harris, who made the Klan a direct campaign issue. On Aug. 5, she told the Black Congress on Health and Law that as Reagan speaks, "many will see the spectre of a white sheet behind him."

In earlier testimony Thursday, FBI agent William Wiechert said that during the eight-month investigation Hauser was paid a total of $55,000 for services, rental on an apartment and living costs.

The agent also said that the Texas Brilab investigation had cost $55,925 in expenses.

Clayton's attorney, Roy Minton, probed deep in his questioning of FBI agent Michael Wachs, who worked undercover with Hauser in the Brilab sting.

At one point, Minton asked, "Isn't it possible that Hauser told you one of the biggest lies you've ever heard? Did it ever occur to you that you were listening to a con artist and a liar?"

The agent answered, "No, it didn't then and it doesn't now."

understand the magnitude of the problem. ... If it becomes of the magnitude that some fear, then we're going to need some assistance."

The senator said federal aid would not be in order unless warranted by the numbers.

President Carter, campaigning in Texas earlier this week, said federal laws do not provide for aiding the state to handle education for illegal alien children.

The president added that he thought it would be the state's responsibility.

Bentsen's letter to the Department of Education, sent last month, asked the secretary to "stand ready to provide emergency assistance to the individual school districts in my state" if funding problems developed.

A federal judge in Houston last summer declared unconstitutional a Texas law barring state funds from being used to educate illegal alien children.

Rep. Jim Mattox, D-Texas, has introduced a bill that would provide federal aid to any school district offering free education to illegal alien children as a result of a federal court order.

Prospects are uncertain for a hearing on the Dallas congressman's bill before the congressional session ends later this year.

On related immigration issues, Bentsen said counterfeit-proof social security cards as identification would be a first step toward solving the nation's immigration problems.

He said Texas state Rep. Matt Garcia's chances for confirmation as Immigration and Naturalization Service commissioner depended on Republican members of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

"The Democratic members are ready to move on it, as I understand it," Bentsen said.

The committee's approval of the San Antonio Democrat's nomination is needed before proceeding to the Senate floor for a confirmation vote.

Republicans on the panel have asked for additional time to investigate Garcia.

When it was pointed out that Carter's secretary of Health and Human Services, Patricia Roberts Harris, first questioned Reagan's endorsement by the Ku Klux Klan — an endorsement that Reagan already had rejected at the time — the president said:

"I am not blaming Governor Reagan. That is precisely the point. The press seems to be raising this point."

He also said: "I do not indulge in attacking the personal integrity of my opponents and hope I never shall."

While his campaign director was concerned about getting equal time, Reagan still was trying to get Carter to join the League of Women Voters-sponsored debate Sunday night between him and independent candidate Anderson.

The former California governor, in a statement, said the news conference was "Jimmy Carter's desperate attempt to fill the empty chair at Sunday night's debate."

"It is time for Mr. Carter to stop hiding in the Rose Garden and participate in open debate where I can have the opportunity to refute his false and partisan version of his record," Reagan declared.

Carter insists he wants a one-on-one debate with Reagan before he debates other candidates. He said he would debate Reagan at the White House if the GOP candidate agreed.

Questioned about public opinion polls that now show him approximately even with Reagan, Carter predicted a "sobering" among Americans voters as Election Day approaches.

"The issues begin to become paramount," he said. "The personal characteristics of the candidates...become less important."

There were also these developments on the political scene Thursday:

—The U.S. Supreme Court ruled that Anderson's name must appear on the general election ballot in Ohio. The court upheld an opinion that found Ohio's March 20 filing deadline for independent candidates unconstitutional because Republican and Democratic candidates did not have to file until later.

—Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie said the administration plans $1 trillion in defense spending by 1985 and assailed the Republicans for saying that was not enough. It was an unusually political statement for a secretary of state.

Marilyn Makes For Good Movie

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — If Marilyn Monroe had not lived, Hollywood surely would have made her up.

Hers is a story that's too good for moviemakers to pass by. Eighteen years after her death, Marilyn Monroe, the last great sex symbol, still captivates audiences.

She combined a voluptuous sensuality with small-girl charm and innocence, lived a life haunted by demons, and died tragically at the age of 36 from an overdose of pills.

Her story was first told in "After the Fall," the play written by her former husband, playwright Arthur Miller. "The Sex Symbol," a thinly disguised fiction, followed a few years later on ABC. Earlier this year, a chapter of NBC's "Moviola," from the book by Garson Kanin, told of her doomed love affair with agent Johnny Hyde.

"Marilyn: The Untold Story," adapted from the book by Norman Mailer, is more serious than Kanin's bauble, but spiked with good humor and a deep affection for Miss Monroe.

ABC will broadcast the three-hour film 8-11 p.m. EDT Sunday.

It is a beautiful film which offers some insight to a woman bent on self-destruction. It is not exploitive, although it easily could have been. Its star, Catherine Hicks, has a good grasp on the character and gives Miss Monroe a credible interpretation rather than an imitation.

Miss Hicks, whose blonde hair was darkening after its platinum hue for her role in "Marilyn," had never been in a movie before she was cast in "Marilyn." She was in the soap opera "Ryan's Hope" and played the model in "Tribute" with Lemmon on Broadway for seven months. She had a recurring role as the school principal in the CBS series "The Bad News Bears."

"I saw Marilyn more as an innocent child than a woman seductress," Miss Hicks said. "That's the interpretation I gave at the reading. I think her development was aborted at 7 or 8. I think what made Marilyn so lovable was that she let the child come out with spontaneity and joy.

"The flip side, of course, was her childishness. As much fun as children can can have, they're very suspceptible to nightmares."

Miss Hicks said she did little research for the role, other than looking at David Wolper's documentary on Miss Monroe.

"I had played Maggie in 'After the Fall' in college and I hadn't gotten it out of my system," she said. "The documentary gave me the voice. Her last happy moment was when she was with her mother. ... Her voice remained in childhood."

Public Sceptical Of Upward Economy

NEW YORK (AP) — Here we are on the road to recovery, according to the statistics, and some of the people who should be happy about it all are gloomily, sourly, sometimes angrily saying it doesn't mean a thing.

There's nothing to cheer about, housing officials say, even though housing starts rose in August for the third month in a row. "It's a disaster," growled an executive of a mortgage lending association.

Detroit seems likely to improve sales in light of the new, economy cars that are finally off the drawing board and into production. "No conclusions; just wait and see," said a grumpy sales executive.

Factories operated at 74.5 percent of capacity last month, the first rise in 10 months, the government said. "Don't make a lot out of it; it rose only one-tenth of one percent," said another government man.

The stock market again has risen above 900 points on the Dow Jones industrial average. "Nothing to cheer about," said a mail-order purveyor of gloom. "Based on the 1970 dollar it's only half that."

Does anyone have confidence in the "recovery?" Does anyone, aside from those whose political fortunes are involved, believe it's for real?

Sure, you can find some who believe, lots perhaps, but when you strip the veneer of optimism you often find them full of doubts and tensions. Even Chrysler's Lee Iacocca might be susceptible to those failings.

The housing people, for example, are depressed about rising interest rates and low savings, a combination some of them say is almost certain to pull the rug from under their market. The damage is already felt.

Millions, of course, were happy to see the jobless rate fall to 7.6 percent in August from 7.8 percent in July. But they've seen this sort of thing before; they fear the worst numbers haven't yet appeared.

It takes time, the statisticians say, for industry to gear up and begin rehiring. And if the recession is over, why is Congress talking about about extended jobless benefits and an antirecession program?

Police Report Slow Night

City police had a relatively disturbance-free night Friday with the exception of on call to the 300 block of Ave. K concerning a family dispute.

Police received a number of prowler calls Thursday night and made one arrest for DWI early this morning on north Ave. K.

Officers investigated one minor traffic accident Thursday and issued 13 traffic citations.

Mrs. Taylor says she hopes to re-marry someday, but adds, "It will be like having two families. David will always be special to me, because of everything that has happened."

"There are still times I miss Ken, and I'll always have a special feeling for him. Death, unlike divorce, is so final, but you know you have to go on," she commented.

SENIOR CITIZENS ASSOCIATION
...concerned for the needs of others

Senior Citizens: Caring about People

Joe had given up, on life, that is. He was hospitalized. Joe was not only sick, but tired. Tired of the constant struggle of one day after another.

Joe's physician made a phone call. One call that alerted some concerned human beings to the needs of another.

These concerned people were from the Hereford Senior Citizens Association and they began visiting Joe at the hospital. When he was released, they visited him at home.

When he was stronger, they loaded him on the bus and took him to the center, where he enjoyed the fellowship of other older people. He also began riding a stationary bicycle at the center and ate lunch with his friends there.

Now Joe loads himself on that Senior Citizens bus, and gets around the center on his own. His doctor says Joe is in better shape than he's been in years.

Independence is just one accomplishment that people pride themselves in, who are active at the Senior Citizens Center. Also, there radiates an individual sense of dignity and worth and the feeling of being a part of their community.

Hereford Senior Citizens Association, a United Way agency, was organized in 1975 and is under the directorship of Margorie Daniels. The staff includes 9 full and part-time people and approximately 30 volunteers.

Any given day at the Center will find men and women (age 55 plus) playing dominoes, eating in the recently remodeled cafeteria, quilting blankets, learning to paint and possibly playing kazoos!

Hereford Senior Citizens Association provides a truly golden opportunity for our local citizens in their golden years.

You can be a part of this by remembering to "Give Until It Helps, Vote Fair Share...Everyone Wins"...The United Way.

Be A Friend, Have A Friend

Workshop Training Center Opens

By JOAN DWYER

A group of excited people stood around a semicircle this morning as they heard and watched a dream come true.

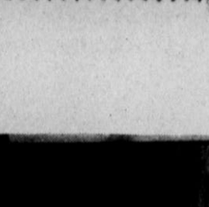

The peope were the clients at the Hereford Workshop Training Center and the dream was their new facility.

We can laugh and joke now about calf-high sewer water, a condemned well, and working in heavy coats because the icy north wind was blowing through the building. Those were their working conditions that most of us could not tolerate. But they did. Probably because of their faith in the citizens of Hereford and a dream that was kept in clear view.

Ann Landers

Mature Travelers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I was concerned about your advice to the 18-year-old who wants to go to Australia. My daughter, at 18, was level-headed, mature (I thought) and already an experienced traveler. She had held several responsible summer jobs away from home. Our family is stable–no major upheavals.

However, at 18 (just out of high school) she traveled on her own to Sweden and Norway and stayed with a family we knew well. "Laura" started to go with a charming Norwegian man and became pregnant.

Feeling that she had "flunked" this first great leap into independence, Laura came home, secretly had an abortion and then told us about it. So, dear Ann, don't be so quick to tell an 18-year-old it's OK to go to Australia. Our daughter is living proof that it's not always a "wonderful experience."--Mother Of A Daughter Who Paid

DEAR MOTHER: Thank you for sharing. The next letter is evidence that a great deal depends on the individual.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Your reply to the 18-year-old who wants to go to Australia was great.

I am a 17-year-old high school student. Last year I flew by myself from Sioux City, Iowa, to Denver, Colo., changed planes and continued to Seattle, Wash. I returned by myself, too. Nothing has ever given me so much self-confidence. The trip proved to me (and my parents) that I can manage on my own.

Next year, after turning 18, I will fly to Europe. Once there, I will travel with my aunt. I hope the girl who wrote to you gets to go. It would be nice if more teenagers had her chance. – Lucky

DEAR LUCKY: You are obviously a responsible, mature, balanced, trustworthy person. Some kids at 17 are flakes, and it would be risky to let them travel alone.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Can you stand one more letter about dentures being removed prior to surgery? Please, please squeeze it in. It's important.

I have been an operating room nurse for seven years and have encountered this problem numerous times. Patients are understandably reluctant to remove their dentures, especially in front of family members. I have brought many patients to the operating room with their dentures in place and an empty denture cup on the shelf of the cart.

Before the patient is anesthetized the dentures are removed, put in the cup and marked with the patient's name and room number. They are returned immediately to the patient's room, either by myself or a nurse's aide. If the patient is especially adamant about not being seen without dentures, I take them to the recovery room where they are given to the patient as soon as he or she is sufficiently alert.

Surgery is traumatic enough without the added worry of being seen with no teeth. There is no excuse for a nurse to upset a patient unnecessarily.

True, dentures must be removed before a general anesthesia–for the patient's safety. But, Ann, there are ways to do it and still maintain the patient's dignity. It may mean an extra trip to the floor and a little inconvenience--so what? A nurse's duty is to serve.–One Who Loves Her Work

DEAR NURSE: Your kindness and consideration could serve as a model for nurses everywhere. Bless you for your kind heart. The world needs more people like you.

Young Mothers Study Club Plans Ladies' Night Out

Young Mothers Study Club has announced their "Ladies Night Out," for Oct. 6. The special night will consist of a decorating program by Ethan Allen's in the Concord House and a dinner at the Crystal Confectionery in Amarillo. This was decided recently during their regular meeting at the First National Bank.

Following roll call, which was answered with "the person you most admire," the minutes of the last meeting were read and the treasurer's report given.

Members discussed selling "merribells," again this year at their annual Christmas Bake Sale at Sugarland Mall. "Merribells" are hand-painted decorative bells.

New yearbooks and by-laws were reviewed before the club was dismissed for refreshments.

Members present were Jan Dudley, Dee Dee Coker, Kathy Haney, Kathy Boyd, Leota Kelso, Darla Stone, Jody Josephson, Maureen Self, Jo Schilling, Sherry Wilson, Donna McGee, Tracy Coker, Janie Street and Debbie Holmes.

The Newspaper Bible

GOD DOESN'T BREAK HIS PROMISES

Then what's the use of being a Jew? Are there any special benefits for them from God? Is there any value in the Jewish circumcision ceremony?

Yes, being a Jew has many advantages. First of all, God trusted them with His laws (so that they could know and do His will).

True, some of them were unfaithful, but just because they broke their promises to God, does that mean God will break His promises to those who love Him?

Of course not! Though everyone else in the world is a liar, God is not. Do you remember what the book of Psalms says about this? That God's words will always prove true and right, no matter who questions them.

"But," some say, "our breaking faith with God is good, our sins serve a good purpose, for people will notice how good God is when they see how bad we are. Is it fair, then, for Him to punish us when our sins are helping Him?" (That is the way some people talk.)

God forbid! Then what kind of God would He be, to overlook sin? How could He ever condemn anyone?

For He could not judge and condemn me as a sinner if my dishonesty brought Him glory by pointing up His honesty in contrast to my lies.

If you follow through with that idea you come to this: the worse we are, the better God likes it! But the damnation of those who say such things is just. Yet some claim that this is what I preach!

Small Talk

Area Impresses Belgium Family

By SUE COLEMAN

Size and sunshine are two of the things in the southwest that most impress a family visiting here from Belgium.

Libert and Iram DeWinter and their 18-year-old son, Eddy, have been guests since Sept. 2 of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Jensen at El Reno, Okla., and came with their hosts to Hereford this week to visit Mrs. Jensen's brother and sister-in-law, Jack and Irene McKinster.

They live in Begijnindij, which they describe as a village about 35 miles from Brussels. They first met the Jensens when the Oklahoma couple was traveling in Belgium in 1971, and since then the two families have visited back and forth.

DeWinter calls Oklahoma and Texas "big, beautiful country, with friendly people and sunshine most the time."

The Belgian family says rain is the rule in their home country, and they like the constant sunshine although their homeland is "much greener" because of the moisture.

Expressing his opinion of this area, the visitor added "for the newspaper" that he always wants to mention the appreciation he feels to American people for the part America played in keeping Belgium free in two world wars.

Belgians have a friendly feeling for Americans, he said, as they remember the help their country received in difficult times.

Eddy is the most fluent in English of the visitors, although DeWinter understands the language and speaks well enough to be understood. Petite and pretty Mrs DeWinter knows little English, so she listens while the others talk.

She could express pleasure in her vacation travels, though, in a way that was easily understood, but she had to rely on translators when she answered a question about comparing housekeeping in this country and hers.

She spends much more time at her housework, she said, largely because all cooking is done at home without benefit of convenience foods from the store. Belgian families seldom eat out, her husband added, because restaurant meals are quite expensive.

Father and son are both railroad employees, in a country where the railroads are much more important than they are now in America. DeWinter is an office employee with a railroad company and Eddy will go to work soon as a train conductor.

He graduated in June from high school and said an examination must be passed before he could become a conductor. School is a more serious business in Belgium than in America, he explained, with classes in session from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. daily from September to June.

Languages are important subjects and he speaks four. In addition to his native tongue, Dutch or Flemish, he speaks French which is the language of about half of Belgium, also German and English.

Sports have no part in Belgian schools; they are strictly outside interests. Every village has its football team, they play basketball and tennis, Eddy said, and his father added that cycle races are very popular since nearly everyone rides bicycles.

Football, Eddy said is the game we call soccer. After seeing the recent WTSU-OSU football game, he insists that our version should be called "bodyball."

Not a sports participant himself, Eddy says he likes to watch television, talk with friends and listen to music for pasttimes. He prefers modern and pop music including country-western.

Walking or cycling provides plenty of exercise for most Belgians, the DeWinters say, as those are the ways most people go to school or work unless they ride trains to work. Many own cars but mostly small cars, not driven so much because the price of gasoline is about $3 a gallon.

Another thing smaller as a rule in Belgium is living quarters, the visitors say. They live in a separate house rather than an apartment, but it is not so roomy as American homes. More compact living is necessary in a country that is about a fifth the size of Oklahoma in area, with a population of 10 million.

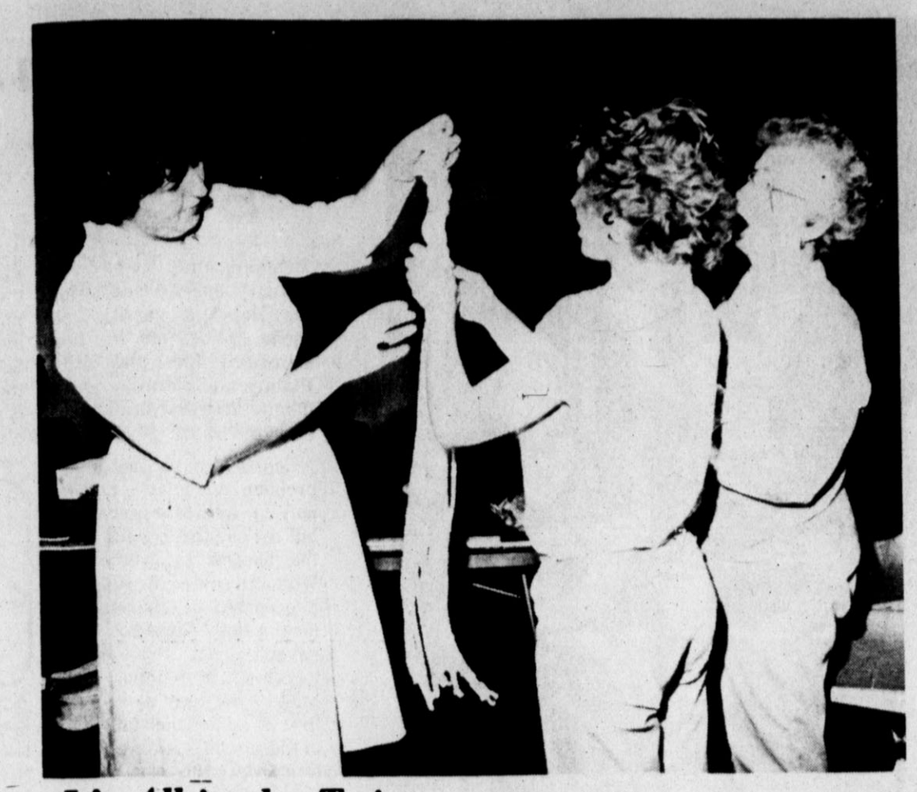

It's only about three-quarters of a mile across their town, DeWinter said, and it has a population of 6,000. Villages are close together, too, so he feels that this area is "a lonely country" with its widely scattered homes and towns.

The family was surprised at the huge fields of corn and maize here. DeWinter said 100 acres is a big farm in Belgium and 60 cows a big herd. They were interested in feedlots they visited Wednesday morning and in Palo Duro Canyon which they saw first at night, then went back to take pictures Wednesday afternoon.

The Jensens and their guests were to go from Hereford to Carlsbad, N.M., then up into Colorado to see other parts of the southwest.

This is the first visit to America for Mrs. DeWinter and Eddy, but DeWinter and his older son, Francis, came to El Reno in 1975 to return a visit by the Jensens the previous year.

Acquaintance between the families began when they were all on a train from Brussels to Holland in 1971, and the touring Americans got into a conversation with Francis and Eddy. After the 1975 visit, Francis asked Jensen to come to Belgium in 1978 to be best man at his wedding. He and his wife were Oklahoma visitors last summer.

Ireland People Hooked on 'Dallas'

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

"I Shot J.R." — Bumper sticker on a car parked on a Dublin, Ireland, street.

"I Shot The Guy Who Says He Shot J.R." — Bumper sticker on another car, parked on the same Dublin street.

CONG, Ireland (AP) — Michael Ryan is a big, gentle, red-faced man who has spent his 60-plus years endeavoring to tempt brown trout out of the big lakes in these parts.

His technique is "dapping," not unlike fly fishing, except the fisherman dosn't have to cast. The omnipresent breeze sweeping across Lake Corrib does all the work, leaving the fisherman with time to talk. And Ryan does love to talk.

On this day, his subjects range from mayflies ("They're a trout's favorite lunch, but they die fast") to technique ("Wait 'til the water breaks then one-two-three and set the hook").

And J.R. Ewing.

The terrible incongruence wasn't especially pleasant, but it was irresistable. Here was a fellow who in 60-some years of living had never seen reason to venture beyond Galway, 23 miles away. He had avoided the temptations of Dublin, only a three-hour train ride, and what others might consider real work.

But "Dallas" had hooked him. He knew all the dark machinations of the family Ewing, all about J.R., Bobby, Miss Ellie and the Sue Ellen (who is his candidate as the culprit in the infamous shooting). He claims that Mrs. Ryan likes to watch the show, an obvious pretense. That used to be my excuse.

Religion in the News

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli scientists have developed a special switch, incorporating a complex electronic circuit, which is to be used only one day a week in cases of dire need.

What does the switch do? It turns on a food warmer.

The Sabbath switch is one of dozens of inventions by the Institute for Science and Halacha, which seeks technological gimmicks to help orthodox Jews live normal lives while abiding by 2,000-year-old religious law, called Halacha in Hebrew.

By a bizarre marriage of Talmudic reasoning and electronic wizardry, the switch and other gadgets in a recent exhibition by the institute circumvent Biblical proscriptions against work on the Sabbath and other arcane regulations.

"For us, technology is a double-edged sword," said Chaim Friedberg, one of the institute"s technical experts. "It causes problems, but it also provides the solutions for problems."

The exhibition displays everything from hospital nurse-call systems and telephones that are permissible to use on the Sabbath, to attachments to industrial cooking systems which solve problems posed by Judaism"s strict prohibitions against mixing milk and meat.

An example of the kind of problems orthodox Jews face is the Biblical prohibition against lighting or extinguishing a fire on Saturday. Rabbis interpret the rule as forbidding electric lights, automobiles, glowing heating coils and other appliances. So how does one run a hospital or army during the Sabbath?

The institute found the solution, Friedberg said, in a little-known rule in the Talmud, a 5th-century religious law book.

It says that if a breeze from an open window threatens to blow out the ritual Sabbath candles, it is permitted to shut the window, even though that will make the candles burn more brightly. The scientists and rabbis of the institute put their heads together, and came up with the "gramma switch."

"The name comes from the ancient Hebrew word meaning "causation," explained Friedberg, "It applies the principle of preventing a preventive action."

The switch looks and works pretty much like an ordinary light switch, but it gets around the Biblical rule against lighting a fire on the Sabbath. The switch can be incorporated into essential hospital equipment, like food warmers, a security fence, or for that matter, says Friedberg, a Saturn space rocket. It costs $30.

"The switch still doesn't solve all the religious legal problems," said Friedberg. "You should still check with a rabbi about its use, and it should only be used in cases of dire need."

GARDEN GROVE, Calif. (AP) — Five years after planning for it began, a monumental, glass-sided "Crystal Cathedral" was offically opened and dedicated last Sunday by the congregation of the Rev. Robert Schuller.

The structure, combining contemporary architecture with the grandeur of medieval cathedrals, cost $16.5 million. It will seat 2,862, with 90-foot-tall doors opening to additional drive-in worshippers. One side of the building consists of 12,000 windows of silver-colored glass.

The opening came on the 25th anniversary of the start of Schuller's ministry which began from the roof of a snack bar in an abandoned drive-in theater.

The ministry has grown to include televised services, pastoral training conferences and overseas mission projects. He is a clergyman of the Reformed Church in America. The denomination is of Dutch heritage and is one of the country's oldest Protestant denominations.

On the average, American hunters shoot from six to 12 million waterfowl each year and more than two million deer.

HHS Linksters Open Against Plainview

Consistency was the primary spector shadowing the Hereford varsity golf squad, going into its first scheduled link play with Plainview on Saturday according to first-year head coach Jerry Wilbourn.

Consistency is our main problem this year – not the only one we'll face probably – but the one that's going to be the hardest to overcome," Wilbourn said of the squad as it prepared to embark on a new season Saturday. "We haven't been able to get together and function as a group – one may do well the first round and then fall apart in the second – and we've got to alleviate that sort of play before distict starts.

The Hereford link crew, suffering from some shortages in personnel due to football and other fall sports, still returns a full squad of experienced players even though only three actually saw varsity experience in last year's play.

Squad members who return for another year of varisty action include Frankie Garcia (who ranked in the top 15 of the district field after play concluded last year and who is currently toting a 80 average), Greg Robinson (in the top twenty of the district lineup and holding a 76 average), Tony Flores and Scott Skinner. Bob Foster, the fifth member of the varsity team, comes into varsity play fresh from the junior varsity ranks.

Those HHS linksters expected to post duty on the B team are; David Dudding, Brett Barrick, Paul Jorde, Micheal Craig and Roger Hodges.

"It will take us a while – probably until next spring before we get things operating as a cohesive unit," Wilbourn said. "We've got some talented players, but they need to just get their heads in the game and be able to play in every conceivable situation that comes up plus learn to play together as a whole."

Wilbourn said the squad would get a taste of what the district thoroughfare might shape-up to be, as the squad paired off against (his nominee for the team to beat in district play) Plainview this weekend.

"I think we're going to see how the district is going to look this year a little bit when we play Plainview," he said. "I really look for Plainview to be the toughest opponent we and other district teams will have to contend with this year. They haven't lost any of their starting team which finished second in the district last year. Of course they're coming into play Saturday without some of their players – just like us because of football, but by the time district play starts they should be the team to beat."

The Whiteface golf team is scheduled to play Plainview at Plainview Saturday and then will conclude the dual-match affair here the following week as the squad plays host to that same Plainview team.

Obscure Buckeyes Rise Under Bruce's Coaching

By DICK BRINSTER
AP Sports Writer

When Earle Bruce replaced the legendary Woody Hayes at Ohio State many conversant with college football figured the Buckeyes would attract less attention nationally.

And it would be hard to argue that they didn't when the pollsters forgot to rank Ohio State in the Top Twenty last season. With the tempermental Hayes cooling his heels not far from the giant horseshoe—where he rose to fame in Columbus, Ohio, the Buckeyes quietly rose from obscurity to an eventual No.4 ranking.

Under Bruce no sideline markers were fractured, no officials grabbed and no linebackers punched out in the heat of battle. He had managed to make the coach anything but the center of controversy.

A year later Ohio State, 11-1 last season, attracted enough attention to grab the top spot in the preseason national rankings. But don't blame Bruce. He's doing his best to focus that attention elsewhere.

On Saturday his second-ranked Buckeyes, 1-0 after a come-from-behind, 31-21 victory over Syracuse, entertain Big Ten foe Minnesota, 1-0. And Bruce has managed to turn the spotlight on the opposition.

"He broke every recruiting rule — car use, things of that nature," Bruce said of Gopher Coach Joe Salem. "But I don't think we can call him on that."

The reason simply put is that Salem has housed and supported his starting quarterback since the lad — his son Tim — was in diapers.

And with one week gone in the 1980 season it seems the investment has paid off handsomely. Salem, who will go on display Saturday before a national television audience, scored his team's first touchdown in Minnesota's opening-game victory and completed 13 of 16 passes for 162 yards and a touchdown.

He sparked the Gophers to a 38-14 victory over Ohio University — not to be confused with Ohio State University. And no danger of Joe Salem mistaking the two Ohio schools.

"We don't match up to them man-to-man," he said.

Can Minnesota win? Salem was asked.

"We need the breaks, a perfect game with no fumbles and no interceptions," he said in painting a dismal picture. "And even then we'll need some mistakes by them."

Elsewhere on Saturday, top-ranked Alabama travels to Mississippi and No.4 Southern California entertains No.20. South Carolina in night games, fifth-ranked Pittsburgh visits Kansas, No.6 Nebraska hosts Iowa, No.7 Texas meets Utah State under the lights, eighth-ranked Notre Dame hosts No.14 Michigan, No.9 Florida State entertains East Carolina at night and 10th-ranked Georgia hosts Clemson.

Also, No.11 Stanford visits Boston College while No.12 Penn State is at Texas A&M in night games; No.15 Missouri entertains Illinois, 16th-ranked Washington hosts Auburn; No.17 Arkansas entertains Oklahoma State while No.18 Houston is home against Miami, (Fla.) in night games and 19-ranked Auburn hosts Duke.

Third-ranked Oklahoma and No.13 North Carolina are idle.

Bruce's light-hearted approach to the encounter with the Salem family is one Clemson Coach Danny Ford would like to duplicate. But his Tigers, 1-0, have a perplexing problem in the presence of Georgia's sensational freshman running back Herschel Walker.

"Walker's effect on the Clemson defense cannot be measured only in statistics," Ford said of the 6-foot-2, 215-sprinter from Wrightsville, Ga., who has scored five touchdowns and rushed for 229 yards in two games despite sitting out a total of 40 minutes for the Bulldogs, 2-0.

"He is capable of making big plays himself (as evidenced by a 76-yard touchdown run against Texas A&M,)" said Ford, who was among the finalists in recruiting battle for Walker's services. That hardly has gone unnoticed among Clemson fans, who must be ranked first in the nation in bumper stickers.

Their latest reads: "Herschel Who?" They may know by Saturday night.

The battle of the USCs (Southern California and South Carolina) is expected to attract attention. The Southern Cal Trojans, 1-0, must stop Geroge Rogers and the offense of the Gamecocks, 2-0, who rolled over Wichita State 73-0 last Saturday.

Pittsburgh, 1-0, dropped a couple of notches last week after sweating out an error-filled, 14-6 victory over Boston College. Jackie Sherill's Panthers must drastically reduce their nine-turnover performance when they play Kansas.

The Notre Dame-Michigan battle in South Bend has Coach Dan Devine of the Irish, 1-0, wondering what Bo Schembechler of Michigan, 1-0, will offer in the way of surprises. Devine said Schembechler ran 10 different sets against the Irish last season after showing little against Northwestern, which Schembechler repeated in the Wolverine opener.

The other Top Ten teams, led by Alabama, are expected to have little trouble Saturday. Crimson Tide Coach Bear Bryant will be after career victory No. 298 when Alabama, 1-0, opposes Ole Miss, 1-0, coached by former Bama quarterback Steve Sloan.

White, Stabler, Pastorini Make Stabs in Jobs

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

They are familiar faces in unfamiliar places. They belong to Danny White, Ken Stabler and Dan Pastorini, and they'd love to be able to show the homefolks a thing or two.

White, Roger Staubach's successor as quarterback of the Dallas Cowboys, makes his regular-season home debut Sunday in Texas Stadium — and if he'd had the chance the odds are he couldn't have come up with a tougher National Conference team against which to do it.

Tampa Bay, the NFC's premier defensive team in 1979, ranks third overall in 1980, behind only Chicago and Philadelphia — but that includes the best pass defense in the league. On offense, though, the Bucs are dead last in the league.

Despite this, they're 2-0, coming off their emotional 10-9 victory over Los Angeles on Sept. 11 while the Cowboys, having won an equally emotional game 17-3 in Washington under White's low-key quarterbacking, are trying to shunt aside the memories of last Sunday's 41-20 debacle in Denver.

"I think we will know more about our team after Sunday's game," said Coach Tom Landry. "We're somewhere in between the Washington win and the Denver loss."

Stabler, traded by Oakland to Houston in a straight-up swap for Pastorini, has been hot and cold in his first two games with the Oilers. In the opener, in Pittsburgh, he was intercepted five times in a 31-17 loss. But last Monday night in Cleveland he was surgeon-precise as his passing and ball-control signal-calling beat the Browns 16-7. On Sunday against visiting Baltimore he has a chance to personally show the Oilers' fans what he's got.

Pastorini, too, has had an inconsistent start with his new team. After throwing for 317 yards and two touchdowns in the Raiders' season-opening 27-14 victory in Kansas City, he was intercepted three times in San-Diego last week and had to leave the game with a bruised knee in the final minute of regulation play. It took a TD pass by his replacement, Jim Plunkett, to force overtime, then Pastorini returned and the Raiders lost 30-24 in the extra period. Now they take on the visiting Redskins.

Sunday's other games are Miami at Atlanta, Green Bay at Los Angeles, Pittsburgh at Cincinnati, San Francisco at the New York Jets, St. Louis at Detroit, Minnesota at Chicago, Kansas City at Cleveland, Buffalo at New Orleans, New England at Seattle and San Diego at Denver. On Monday night it's the New York Giants at Philadelphia.

Don Strock will be making his first start of the season at quarterback for Miami, replacing Bob Griese. Coach Don Shula, looking for a way to get the Dolphins' offense moving (it ranks 12th overall and 13th in passing in the American Conference), has benched his 14-year veteran in favor of the strong-armed Strock, who has spent most of his seven years in the NFL riding the bench.

Strock started several games last season but when Miami stalled and needed some big victories to clinch the AFC East title, it was Griese who came off the bench and guided them to the top.

American League Roundup

New York's Finest Beat Toronto, 8-7

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The Toronto Blue Jays are playing the role of "spoilers" these days — but the only thing they spoiled Thursday night was Manager Bobby Mattick's appetite.

"All he had to do was get three outs," Mattick said of Dave Stieb, who was trying to protect a four-run lead in the 10th inning over the New York Yankees, "but sometimes that's hard to do."

It was not only hard for Stieb, it was impossible. He let the never-say-die Yankees catch up with four runs. Then, New York's finest went on to beat the Blue Jays 8-7 in 13 innings.

The dramatic Yankee comeback came in the completion of a game that was suspended by rain Wednesday night and preceded a 2-1 loss to the Blue Jays in the regularly-scheduled game.

The split left the American League East leaders with a five-game lead over Baltimore after the Orioles defeated the Detroit Tigers 7-3.

Elsewhere in the AL, Boston beat Cleveland 8-3; Kansas City downed California 5-2; Texas outscored Oakland 10-6; Milwaukee beat Minnesota twice, 9-8 and 5-0, and Chicago edged Seattle 5-4.

Willie Randolph's three-run triple capped New York's four-run rally in the 10th against Stieb. Then the Yankees won the game two innings later when Bucky Dent doubled home Johnny Oates from first base with two out.

The game had been halted by rain the night before after Toronto scored two runs in the top of the 10th off Ron Davis on a third-ltrike passed ball by catcher Rick Cerone, Ernie Whitt's single and a three-base error on the play by right fielder Reggie Jackson.

When play resumed Thursday night, the Blue Jays added two more runs on Roy Howell's two-run, inside-the-park homer.

The Blue Jays won the regularly-scheduled game behind the two-hit pitching of rookie Luis Leal, who was a last-minute replacement for Stieb. Mattick had originally counted on Stieb to start the regular game, but changed his plans after the pitcher was roughed up by the Yankees.

The loss was only the second for the Yankees in 17 games this month.

Orioles 7, Tigers 3

Dan Graham pulled Baltimore into a tie with a leadoff home run in the seventh inning and then Ken Singleton's two-run single put the Orioles ahead of Detroit for good.

Scott McGregor, 19-7, allowed 11 hits but won his fifth game in a row with 11-3 innings of relief help from Tim Stoddard. Stoddard notched his 23rd save after fanning pinch hitter Champ Summers with two runners aboard in the eighth.

Red Sox 8, Indians 3

Jim Rice drove in a four runs with a double and a single and Gary Hancock belted a two-run homer, powering Boston over Cleveland.

Right-hander Steve Crawford, just called up from the minors, pitched a complete game for the Red Sox in his first major league start. Crawford, who was rewarded with a starting berth after two fine relief performances, allowed 12 hits but bailed out of one-out, bases-loaded jams without allowing a run in the first and the sixth.

Royals 5, Angels 2

Willie Wilson set an AL record for consecutive stolen bases and George Brett rapped two hits to raise his average to .398 as Kansas City beat California.

Wilson followed his run-scoring single in the second inning by stealing second and third base to run his consecutive stolen-base string to 28 and erase the old mark of 27 set by Ron LeFlore in 1978 with Detroit. Wilson, who finished the game with two singles, has 70 stolen bases for the season.

Rangers 10, A's 6

Mickey Rivers went 4-for-6, setting a club record for hits in a season, to lead Texas past Oakland behind Danny Darwin's strong relief pitching.

Rivers, who had 184 hits twice for the New York Yankees, raised his season total to 204. His two hits Wednesday night had tied the Ranger record of 200 set last year by Buddy Bell. Rivers' average climbed three points to .331, also his highest ever.

Brewers 9-5, Twins 8-0

Gorman Thomas lined a two-run homer with two out in the ninth inning to rally Milwaukee over Minnesota in the first game of their doubleheader.

Ben Oglivie hit a two-run homer and Lary Sorensen scattered six hits to lead Milwaukee's second-game victory.

White Sox 5, Mariners 4

Chet Lemon scored the winning run in the ninth on a grounder by Harold Baines as Chicago edged Seattle.

Lemon walked with one out and was doubled to third by pinch hitter Rusty Kuntz. Baines then hit a bouncer to second baseman Julio Cruz, but his throw to the plate wasn't in time to get Lemon.

Going Into 3-Game Series

Dodgers Hold Advantage

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Dodgers, who lead the National League West by one game over Houston, would appear to have a distinct advantage tonight when they open a three-game series with the still-hopeful Cincinnati Reds.

Jerry Reuss, who has beaten the Reds four times this season and has won 11 of 12 decisions against the contending clubs in the NL, will start on the mound for Los Angeles, against Cincinnati's Paul Moskau.

The Dodgers retained their one-game edge by defeating San Diego 7-3 Thursday night, with their biggest offense in two weeks.

In the only other NL games played Thursday, Houston beat Cincinnati 10-2 and Atlanta sneaked by San Francisco 2-1.

Los Angeles clubbed three Padre pitchers for 13 hits, three of them homers. Most productive were Steve Garvey and Dusty Baker, who combined for only eight hits in 55 at-bats on Los Angeles' recent trip to Houston, Cincinnati and Atlanta.

Ron Cey and Mickey Hatcher hit consecutive homers in the eighth inning off the Padres' Mike Armstrong.

The Dodgers had a 5-1 lead and starter Bob Welch had restricted San Diego to four hits over seven innings. But in the eighth, the Padres filled the bases with only one out and Bobby Castillo took over. He gave up a bloop single to Dave Winfield that scored two runs, but retired Broderick Perkins on a dribbler back to the mound and struck out Luis Salazar to get out of the inning.

Castillo, who has won his last four decisions, earned his fifth save and has allowed only four earned runs in his last 13 appearances.

Welch, 13-9, gave up three runs on six hits, including Perkins' second home run. The victory was his third straight.

Rick Wise, 6-8, took the loss, giving up five runs on seven hits in 41-3 innings.

Reuss, 17-5, will attempt to match his career high in victories tonight. He won 18 games in 1975 at Pittsburgh. Moskau is 9-7.

Astros 10, Reds 2

A two-run homer by Joe Morgan off loser Frank Pastore, 11-7, was the big blow in the Astros' rout of the Reds. Morgan's seventh-inning clout, scoring Dave Bergman, who had tied the game with a run-scoring single, made a winner out of Houston starter Ken Forsch, 12-12.

The Astros trailed 2-1 when Alan Ashby doubled and Bergman delivered as a pinch hitter for Forsch. Joe Sambito came on in relief to notch his 16th save of the season.

Braves 2, Giants 1

The Braves won for the sixth time in their last seven games thanks to a two-run homer by Chris Chambliss and clutch relief pitching by Rick Camp. Bob Horner singled with two out in the fourth off loser Al Hargesheimer, 4-5, and Chambliss followed with his 16th home run to account for all the Atlanta scoring and give the victory to Rick Matula, 11-12.

CINCINNATI (AP) — Joe Morgan, who took his free agency to Houston, stomped on the fingers of his former teammates, the Cincinnati Reds, dangling on the edge of the lead in the National League West.

"The Reds are absolutely not out of the race, but to be perfectly truthful about it, they certainly don't have a good shot," said Morgan, who two run home run helped drub the Reds 10-2 and put the Astros back in contention with the Los Angeles Dodgers.

"We had them where we wanted them but they got away. That's happened to us a lot this year," lamented Cincinnati third baseman Ray Knight.

The Reds returned from a 10-4 road trip last week, only to lose five of seven at home. Now they head for Los Angeles tonight.

"Our job is just a little tougher than it was," said Reds Manager John McNamara. "By this weekend we should know for sure where we stand" in the race for the division championship.

Morgan and Jose Cruz each blasted homers as the Astros scored nine runs in the last three innings.

"I don't think that I try any harder against the Reds than I do against the others," said Morgan, who played on five championship teams in Cincinnati.

"This is what the game of baseball is all about. This is the reason you do those two extra pushups in spring training. It's all so that you can be in top shape for these last few weeks of the season when the pressure is great. You just have to be ready for the things that happen down the stretch," Morgan said.

Dave Bergman opened the seventh inning rally with a pinch hit, game tying single for winning pitcher Ken Forsch, 12-12.

"Those lsst three innings took it all right out of us," McNamara said. The Reds led 2-1 going into the seventh.

"Until that hit by Bergman, Frank Pastroe had everything under control," McNamara said.

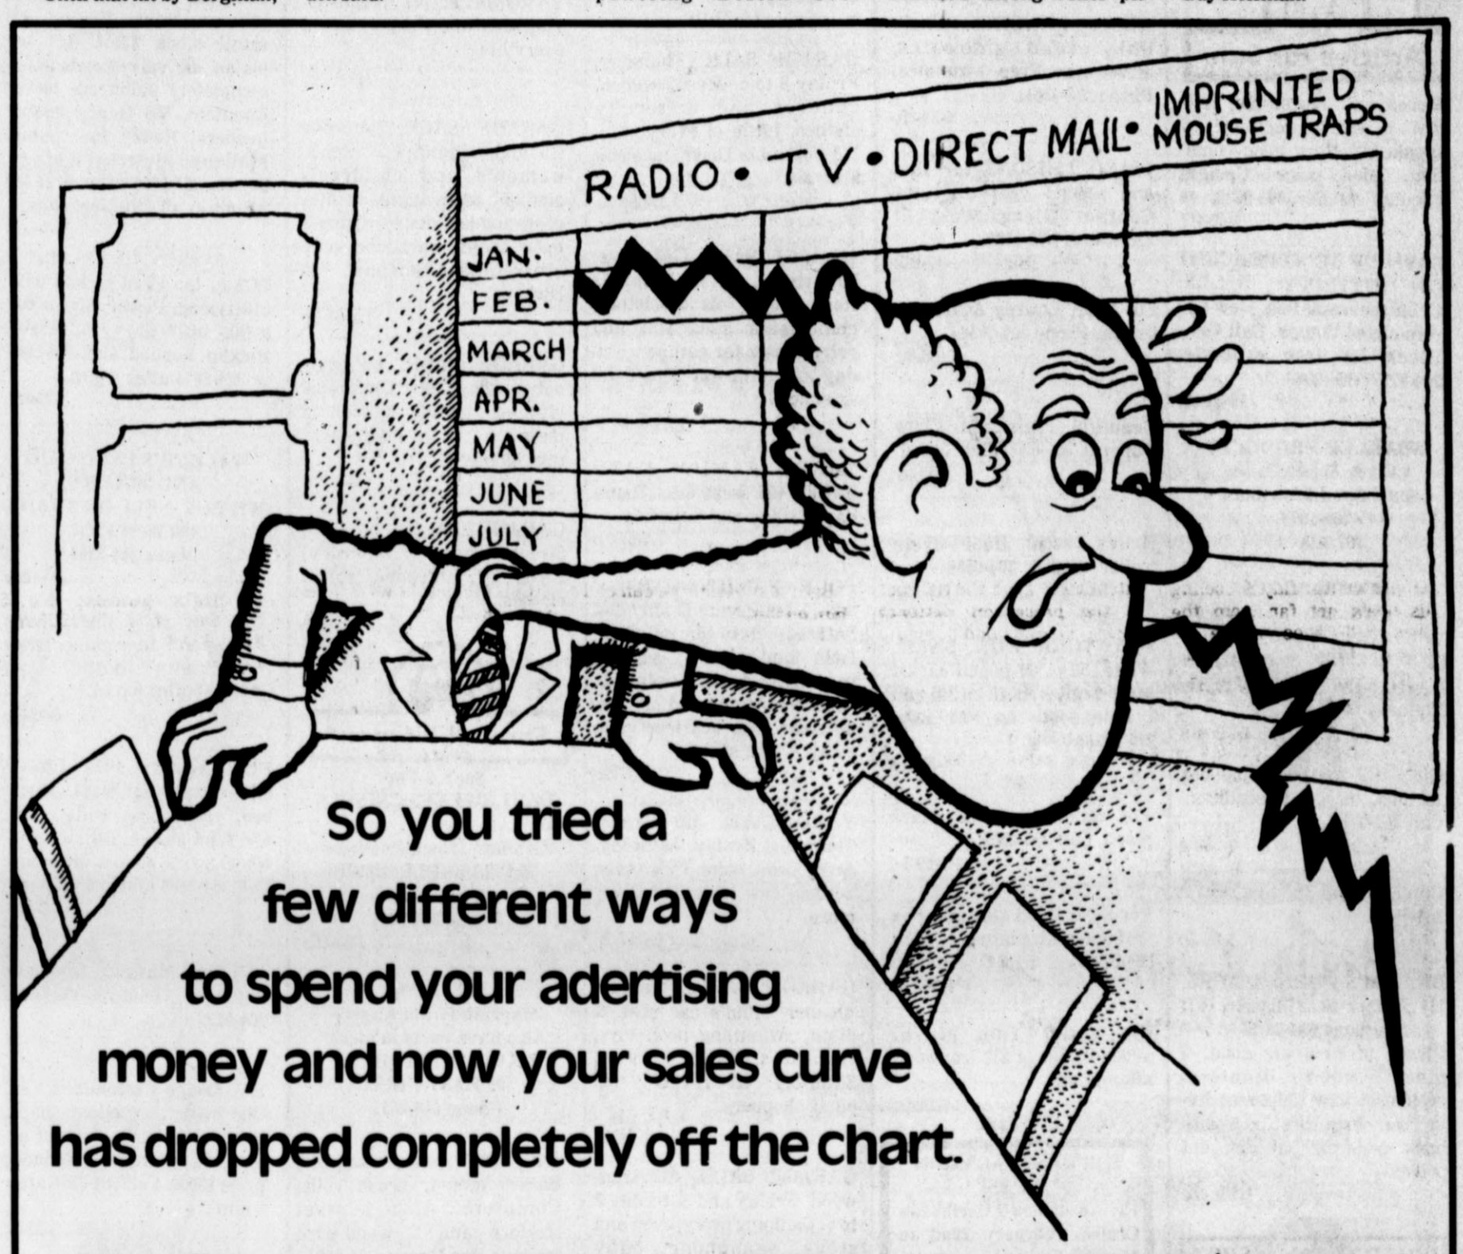

"We plan to win the league unless someone does something to stop us," said Astros Manager Bill Virdon, whose team travels to San Diego.

"We needed this win today. It was probably our key game of the season so far. You could call it a big win," Virdon said.

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Not always simple surgery

DEAR DR. LAMB — I went to see three eye doctors and the third one told me I had a cataract in my right eye making it difficult to read or sew. He said I would need an operation and after eight weeks of treatment with antibiotics I could get glasses or contact lenses.

I had the operation and went to his office regularly for treatment. One day he was away but he left no message as to whom I could see while he was out of town.

I was awakened at 2 a.m. with a terrific pain in my right eye. I woke up screaming with pain and did not know what to do. All I could get was the answering service. I wasn't able to find and see another ophthalmologist until three o'clock the next afternoon. I was almost out of my mind. The nurse made me wait in his office until he had seen his other patients.

As soon as he saw me he sent me right to the hospital as an emergency.

In the emergency room he told me he was going to give me a local anesthetic because he had to work on my eye. I almost died from the three needles he gave me, one under the eye, one at the temple and one above the eye. I screamed from the pain. Then he put a long needle inside my eye. What he did I don't know. The next day he did the same thing and I prayed, "Dear God, keep me from all this pain. I can't bear it." During the next several days I was given every antibiotic on the market and other ophthalmologists also saw me. On the fifth day he told me I would never be able to see in this eye again and I'm blind.

When my doctor returned and came to the hospital I asked him what had happened to my eye. Before the operation I could at least see some and now I was totally blind.

This doctor never told me about the risk of cataract surgery. If I had known I would never have done it. I'm still taking medicine and I don't know if I'll ever be finished going to his office. I went into his office healthy and now I am a vegetable. I can't see, I lose my balance when I try to walk and someone has to go with me until I go to bed. I've lost my strength and my desire to live. I thought of killing myself many times as I have nothing to live for. I was so active before the operation.

I want other people to know that you can have such problems. It's not as simple as you might think.

DEAR READER — Fortunately, very few people who have cataract surgery have the kinds of complications that you have described. I have put your letter in my column because I do want to remind people that what appears to be a simple operation isn't always so simple. An operation is only simple if no complications occur.

Another point your letter makes is why everyone should have a family doctor and know in advance what to do if for any reason he is not available. Had you previously found a family doctor, when you had a problem in the middle of the night you could have called him. He could have helped you find another eye specialist even at that hour of the morning.

That's all past history now and I hope that you get along better from now on.

For your general information, I am sending you The Health Letter number 13-6, Your Cataracts are Coming. Other individuals who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I'm a 45-year-old female and I have trouble with recurring xanthoma in the eye area. What causes this? I take four grains of thyroid in addition to four Atromid-S tablets every day. I have a high cholesterol and triglyceride count. Do thse high levels cause xanthomas? Will diet control this? Does smoking cause these? I am a half-a-pack a day smoker. I do need to lose 20 pounds and I'm on a diet prescribed by my physician. I'd appreciate any information you could give me about this problem.

DEAR READER — Yes, xanthomas are accumulations of cholesterol underneath the skin and commonly they occur in little plaques or patches under the surface of the skin of the eyelids or in that area. You can have larger amounts of cholesterol accumulations and nodules other places in the body.

Commonly, these are associated with a high cholesterol level and the tendency to form them is usually inherited. That's why it's frequently important to study the entire family group when such evidences of abnormal fat and cholesterol metabolism are observed.

I presume that you're taking thyroid because you have low thyroid function. Four grains of thyroid on a daily basis is a pretty good dose. Individuals who have low thyroid function are prone to have high cholesterol levels.

Yes, diet is one of the tools used to help control the level of cholesterol and does help in such cases. The type of diet used is discussed in The Health Letter number 15-4, Diet to Prevent Heart Attacks and Strokes which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

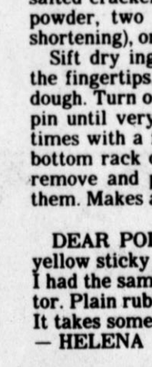

Usually dietary measures alone are not adequate to lower the cholesterol sufficiently in individuals who have xanthoma. That's why you're also getting some medicine. Since you're overweight, I must stress the importance of getting rid of every excess pound of fat you can if you want to get your cholesterol and blood fat levels down to normal.

DEAR DR. LAMB — A friend of mine gave me a lot of vitamins but I would like your opinion before taking them.

DEAR READER — If you are eating a balanced diet and have no problems in digestion and have no diseases you really do not need additional vitamins. However, I don't object to people taking an all purpose daily vitamin pill without excessive amounts of vitamins in them. These are sometimes helpful to people who do not eat adequately for one reason or another.

The list you gave me looks like your vitamins will not be harmful. The water soluble vitamins in reasonable amounts above your daily requirements are simply flushed out by your kidneys. The two vitamins we really worry about are vitamin A and D. These are fat soluble vitamins and can be stored in body fat. They are the most likely sources of vitamin toxicity.

There have also been some questions raised about the adverse effects of vitamin E but in small amounts as a dietary supplement it is not likely to be harmful. Larger amounts on a regular basis is questionable.

POLLY'S POINTERS

Polly Cramer

Roll-on detergent

DEAR POLLY — I fill old clean roll-on deodorant bottles with liquid detergent for "rolling" on collars and cuffs before putting them in the laundry. I give these to friends, as they are a neat and thrifty way to "spot" laundry.

Someone marked a red leather or good quality vinyl chair with an indelible felt tip pen. Can you suggest a way to remove these marks? — ROSALIE

DEAR ROSALIE — Indelible ink is made to last, so you have a real problem on that score. You don't know whether your chair is vinyl or leather either.

Anything you try is risky. The effect of the product on the chair should be tested first in an inconspicuous spot. Ballpoint ink can be removed from vinyl with hair spray. Petroleum jelly could be rubbed on and then wiped off, hopefully taking the ink with it. Many inks have a glycerine base, so that could be tried. Leave it on 15-20 minutes and then wash off with liquid detergent. Do not look for miracles. — POLLY

DEAR READERS — Our thanks to every one of you — and it was a tremendous number — who sent in recipes for making crackers. The following recipe is quick, easy and made with things found in any kitchen. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — and Vivian — I can remember my father and sister making crackers by the following recipe in the 1930s on a kerosene stove over a kerosene oven. To make salted crackers, use one cup flour, one level teaspoon baking powder, two level tablespoons shortening (I use vegetable shortening), one-eighth teaspoon salt and one-half cup water.

Sift dry ingredients together and work shortening in with the fingertips. Add enough water to make a mixture like pie dough. Turn out on slightly-floured board and roll with rolling pin until very thin. Cut into squares and prick each several times with a fork. Sprinkle with salt. Put in pan and bake on bottom rack of oven set at 400 degrees for 10 minutes. Then remove and place on top rack, and increase heat to brown them. Makes about two dozen. — DOROTHY

DEAR POLLY — I am answering the reader who has a yellow sticky stain left in her bathtub after removing a decal. I had the same problem with such a spot left on my refrigerator. Plain rubbing alcohol and a soft cloth did the trick for me. It takes some rubbing but there are no traces of glue or stain. — HELENA

FAITH WILL PROVIDE YOU WITH STRENGTH

For some time, we have been regaled with dire predictions of recession, depression and other ominous terms that depict a general worsening of our economic situation; all of which must cause many of us to wonder if our own source of life's basic needs might soon be in jeopardy. The fancy words would indeed appear to forecast a grim future when translated into terms of next week's groceries or next month's rent. Throughout history, in time of trouble man has always turned to religion as a last resort, even when it should have been his first. There is no better time than now to go to your Church and pray to God for His ever-present help and guidance.

"But seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you."
— Matthew 6:33
