Bush names Texan ambassador to Moscow

■ Bush seeks to forge bipartisan support for his dealings with Soviet Union.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — President Bush named Robert S. Strauss, a close friend, Democratic doyen and master of the political and business deal, as ambassador to Moscow on Tuesday, moving to cement his ties to Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev and foster business contacts at a pivotal moment in Soviet-American relations.

The announcement, which was made by Bush in a hastily arranged appearance in the White House Rose Garden and which stunned diplomatic ranks in Washington, signaled the president's personal stake in relations with Gorbachev and his eagerness to "do business" with Moscow, officials said.

It was also an attempt to find a bridge to Democratic lawmakers at a time when Bush is moving to extend new financial aid to Moscow, the officials continued.

Bush hoped that naming a hard-boiled capitalist as ambassador would help draw Soviet-American relations into a more predictable phase, in which business deals and economic issues are becoming as important as the military and diplomatic dimensions of the superpower relationship, the officials said.

Picketers, including Lorraine Mavelich, below, protest the Supreme Court decision barring federally funded clinics from discussing abortion with clients.

Demonstrators decry high court's 'gag' rule against health clinics

By David Morris

About 16 people, some of them wearing symbolic gags, marched in Midland on Tuesday to protest regulations prohibiting federally funded health clinics from discussing abortion with clients.

Marchers voiced their displeasure with a May 23 U.S. Supreme Court decision that will mean the loss of federal Title X funds to family-planning clinics that choose not to follow the regulations.

Those clinics include those operated by Planned Parenthood of West Texas, which organized Tuesday's march. Officials said the regional organization will lose $182,000, or about 12 percent of its annual budget.

Protesters, who spent about an hour and 15 minutes picketing in front of U.S. Rep. Lamar Smith's office at 201 West Wall Ave., decried the Supreme Court ruling as discriminatory and a violation of free-speech rights.

Jan Foust, public affairs director for West Texas Planned Parenthood, said picketers hoped their action would send a message to Congress.

"We want to both protest the gag rule and we want to urge Congressman Smith to vote for House Rule 392 and to vote for reactivation of Title X with no restrictions," Ms. Foust said.

Smith, R-San Antonio, was in Washington on Tuesday and unavailable for comment.

Ms. Foust said HR 392, the Pregnancy Counseling Act, would allow federally funded clinics to discuss abortion with clients.

The act would override Reagan administration regulations enacted in 1988 that forbid such clinics from listing abortion as an option for pregnant women or telling them where

Trustees tap Pa. educator to head Midland College

Daniel

Midland College Board of Trustees selected David E. Daniel of Pennsylvania as the college's third president Tuesday.

MC board trustees voted unanimously to select Daniel to replace Jess Parrish who is retiring from his presidential position on Aug. 31. In a special 9 a.m. meeting Tuesday, Ralph Way nominated Daniel and Charlene Romero Wurtz seconded the nomination. None of the other five candidates for the presidency were nominated for the position.

"I think we've made a great choice," said John Cooper, MC board president. Cooper said that "from the initial group of more than 100 candidates, the board closely examined the applications of more than 20."

The board then conducted personal interviews with six candidates, who also participated in brief open forums with MC faculty.

"We feel that Dr. Daniel fills all of the criteria that we had established for the top candidates," Cooper said.

In a prepared statement given to media representatives, Daniel was quoted as saying, "My wife, DeeDee, and I are

'Born to save' baby gives sister marrow

■ More children being conceived to be tissue donors.

Anissa Ayala holds her sister Marissa.

Doctors at the City of Hope Medical Center in Duarte, Calif., Tuesday transplanted bone marrow into Anissa Ayala, a 19-year-old girl who is dying of leukemia.

The marrow came from her baby sister, Marissa. Their parents say they conceived Marissa to provide bone marrow to save Anissa's life.

Marissa was expected to be released today, but doctors said Anissa would be hospitalized at least four more weeks. The main problems she faces in her recovery are the possibility of rejection of the new cells, and infection until the new marrow begins producing disease-fighting cells.

Doctors and ethicists say this is the first time a family has publicly admitted conceiving a child to serve as an organ donor. But many others have done so privately.

Just-released transcripts shed light on Nixon years

Nixon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard Nixon believed he would be protected rather than harmed by the White House taping system that ultimately proved his downfall, according to his remarks on just-released transcripts of some of the recordings.

"I always wondered about that taping equipment but I'm damn glad we have it, aren't you?" Nixon asked chief of staff H.R. Haldeman on April 25, 1973 — a time when the Watergate scandal was breaking wide open.

Haldeman, who had been listening to the recordings, concurred and called the tapes "very helpful," the National Archives' transcript of that discussion shows.

"Yes. It's helpful because while it has some things in there that, ah, we prefer we wouldn't have said," Nixon replied, "we also have some things in there that we know ... were pretty good, I mean."

Nixon wrote something similar about that conversation in his 1978 memoirs.

But the 60 hours of tapes — 47 of them new

Midlanders pack diplomatic bags for Chinese sister city

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

A group of local notables once again is scheduled to pack up their diplomatic bags and head to China to exchange economic and cultural ideas with Midland's sister city.

Between 20 and 25 Midlanders, including Mayor Carroll Thomas and a number of business representatives, will leave June 16 for Dongying in eastern China.

The visit will come on the fifth anniversary of the establishment of sister-city relations between Midland and Dongying.

Dongying, whose economy also leans heavily upon the oil industry, is located in the province of Shandong, home to more than 76 million people. Dongying's population is about the same as Midland's, but there are about 1.4 people in the surrounding area.

"This is one of the largest oil-producing areas of China," said Barry Beck, a local attorney who is

WEATHER SUMMARY

Via Associated Press GraphicsNet

You might awaken to fog

Today's forecast calls for patchy low early morning cloudiness or fog otherwise partly cloudy, high in the mid-90s, southeast winds 10 to 20 mph, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight will be cloudy with a low near 65 and a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms.

Thursday is expected to be cloudy with a high between 85 and 90, and a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms.

After an overnight low of 63, Tuesday's high was 95 compared with the record high for that date of 103 in 1933. The record low for today's date was 54 set in 1970.

STATE

Scattered thunderstorms were reported along the Texas coast Tuesday, and the humidity resulted in heat indexes of over 100 degrees at several cities, the National Weather Service said.

The heat index hit 106 degrees at Corpus Christi, 103 at Victoria and 99 at San Antonio.

Skies were partly cloudy across South Texas late Tuesday afternoon as a high-pressure ridge continued to build.

Temperatures in mid-afternoon ranged from 81 at Dalhart, in the northwest corner of the Texas Panhandle, to 99 at Brownsville, the southernmost spot in the state.

For today, the forecast is for late night and early morning cloudiness in South Texas, with the possibility of isolated afternoonand evening thunderstorms. Highs today should be in the 80s along the coast, 90s elsewhere, and near 100 on the Rio Grande plain.

NATION

Rain and storms were scattered across the northern Plains to the Mississippi Valley on Tuesday, causing lowland flooding in Iowa and Minnesota.

Slow-moving thunderstorms dumped up to 10 inches of rain in south-central Minnesota, flooding roads and basements, stalling cars and forcing authorities to sandbag along rivers and pump out sewers and a school.

"I'm afraid to go to work," Amboy resident Sharon Phillips said as she struggled to get 15 inches of water out of her basement. "I'm afraid I'll come home and it'll have floated away."

Parts of U.S. 59 in the Fulda area were closed by standing water and many stalled cars, and the Fulda Fire Department was called Monday night to handle water pumps at Fulda High School.

"The best mode of transportation in Fulda is a boat," said high school computer teacher Mike Nangle

A band of heavy rain also swept across central Iowa early Tuesday, flooding roads, fields and homes and trapping one woman in the basement of her home. Linda Mackin of Clemons, a city of 175 people 45 miles northeast of Des Moines, had to be rescued by her husband, Jack Mackin, when rushing water closed a door on her leg.

"The water would have been over her head if I hadn't got her out," Mackin said.

DONOR: Leukemia patient gets marrow of sister

(From 1A)

Parents have had babies to provide bone marrow for siblings and relatives or even, in one case, a kidney. Some parents have sought prenatal diagnosis to insure the fetus had genetically compatible tissues necessary to serve as a donor, intending to abort it if not.

In a recent survey of bone marrow transplant centers, 40 cases were uncovered in which families had confided to doctors that they were conceiving babies to serve as donors. But these parents have shunned publicity, leery of letting the world pry into their ordeals.

In the case of the Ayalas, their decision to conceive a child as an organ donor was declared in public for all interested parties to examine.

Ethicists and doctors are asking whether conceiving a child as a source of donated organs violates the principle that individuals should be brought into the world and cherished for their own sake and no other motive.

Others argue that the children who are conceived to donate organs are deeply loved and that it is unfair to point fingers at parents who have a child to save another person's life. From the point of view of the child, it is certainly better to have been conceived to donate rather than to have never been conceived at all.

It may even be justifiable to abort a fetus of the wrong tissue type some experts say, but others say they cannot condone this.

At first, said Dr. Steven Forman, the City of Hope transplant specialist who is caring for Anissa, transplant experts were saying, "What's the big deal? This happens all the time."

But as the case gained attention, Forman said, he began to ask himself why he found it acceptable to conceive a child to be a donor and why, if it was so acceptable, doctors and parents had kept quiet about it until now.

In conceiving Marissa, the Ayalas were seeking to escape from a desperate dilemma. Their daughter Anissa has chronic myelogenous leukemia, a disease that kills 80 percent to 90 percent of patients within five years of diagnosis.

When Anissa was diagnosed four years ago, she and her family began searching for someone whose tissue type was compatible with hers and who would be willing to donate marrow.

There is little risk to the marrow donor, other than discomfort. The donor is anesthetized while doctors poke long needles into their hip bones and withdraw precious tubes of the dark red marrow.

The patient, meanwhile, has undergone four days of intensive, whole body irradiation followed by high doses of chemotherapy so as to destroy completely every cell of their own cancerous marrow. As soon as the donor's marrow is drawn, it is dripped into the patient's bloodstream.

But the Ayalas could not find a compatible donor. Neither parent had the right tissue type, nor did their son, Airon, who is 20. A nationwide search found none.

The Ayalas, who live in Walnut, Calif., announced last February their decision to conceive a baby as the best hope of finding compatible marrow for Anissa. Abe Ayala, the father, had to have a vasectomy reversed. The mother, Mary Ayala, was 42 when she conceived.

PROTEST: 'This is a rule against poor people'

to get one.

The regulations were challenged in court by the city and state of New York and by Dr. Irving Rust, medical director of a Planned Parenthood family planning clinic in the city's South Bronx neighborhood.

The 1988 ban had not been enforced pending resolution of legal challenges. Now, however, it can be enforced. Barring passage of counter-legislation, the ban will go into effect 60 days after the Supreme Court's ruling.

The federal government funds about 4,000 clinics serving more than 4 million low-income women each year. About 8,000 of those women are served by West Texas Planned Parenthood, according to organization figures.

It is low-income women depending on federally funded clinics who will suffer the most as a result of the regulations, protesters said.

Joy Gregg, an Odessa insurance agent and Planned Parenthood board member, said Planned Parenthood would rather give up federal dollars than to be forbidden from telling patients about abortion.

That means poor women, whose care at Planned Parenthood clinics had been subsidized by Title X money, will now have to pay for clinic services themselves.

"In my opinion, this is a rule against poor people," Ms. Gregg said.

But Mark Mosely, president of the Midland pro-life group Texans United For Life, suggested otherwise. He said in an interview Tuesday that if Planned Parenthood was truly concerned about women's health, the organization would take federal dollars and stop discussing abortion with clients.

Instead, he said, the group would rather maintain its ability to encourage poor people to have abortions and thereby reduce the poor population.

Protesters countered that Planned Parenthood health-care workers do not encourage abortion for anyone — they simply tell pregnant women about the option and offer referral services.

Being able to do that is more important than receiving federal money, they argued, because women should know their choices include abortion. And the choice for abortion, they said, may in some cases be the best one in terms of health.

"Even if a woman has a life-threatening pregnancy, we cannot give her that option," Ms. Foust said. "We are not allowed to mention that word to her."

Rules against talking about abortion violate health-care workers' First Amendment free-speech rights and amount to a gag order, she said.

"This is not strictly a women's issue. When you're talking free speech, you're talking everyone's issue."

Kevin Skipper, a Planned Parenthood board member and the sole male participant in Tuesday's protest, agreed.

"I'm here basically to protest censorship," he said. "We're pro-choice, we're not necessarily pro-abortion. Let people make up their own minds. But to outlaw talking about it is censorship."

He said he wasn't sure whether Rep. Smith would respond to the march.

"I've lived here seven years, and I haven't seen much picketing in Midland," he said. "So, maybe in a relative sense it might send a clear message how we feel about the issue."

Some bystanders, however, seemed somewhat confused about the meaning of the protest, which lasted from 11:30 a.m. till about 12:45 p.m.

"We were trying to determine who they were picketing," said Rick Sprague, a juror on his lunch break, who watched the protest from Bicentennial Plaza in front of the Midland County Courthouse. "I think it was staged for the media entirely. If they were dedicated to their cause, they'd still be there after the media left."

Picketers from Planned Parenthood are scheduled to protest at the Odessa offices of U.S. Rep. Larry Cobest, R-Lubbock, at 419 W. 4th St. at 11:30 a.m. today.

TAPES: Nixon believed he would be protected

to the public — offered a fuller account of Nixon's views, at the time, on the taping system.

The National Archives, which has custody of the Nixon materials, never before released any of some 880 hours of tape recordings made in the White House. But the public had previous access to 33 conversations — covering 13 hours — used as evidence in the various Watergate hearings and trials of the mid-1970s.

The transcripts of conversations released Tuesday come from the prosecution files, but were not used during the trials.

In his conversation, Nixon evaluated what was on the tapes. He found damaging the discussions he had with counsel John Dean on March 21, 1973 — the so-called "cancer on the presidency" talk where he was told hush money had been paid to the Watergate burglars.

But he said, too, that what he had heard contained no direct evidence he approved or initiated payoffs. In fact, the tape that led to Nixon's resignation — the so-called "smoking gun" — was a conversation he had with Haldeman six days after the burglary when the president approved using the CIA to derail an FBI investigation.

" 'This is wrong,' and, ah, 'blackmail,' and 'how much is this gonna cost,' and so forth and so on,' " Nixon said in summarizing what he regarded as his own damaging remarks on the recordings. "Then, on the other hand, I said, 'Well, we could get that, but how would you handle it' ... I don't know how you analyze it but I don't know. ..."

Haldeman responded: "If that all comes out, it's, it's another hard thing to explain but I think it's explainable."

"Right," Nixon said.

Haldeman listened to some of the tapes in April 1973, three months before their existence became known to the public. The conversations took place in the Oval Office, in the Cabinet Room and at the presidential retreat, Camp David. They were recorded by hidden microphones and on telephone lines.

The scandal exploded on July 16 when Nixon aide Alexander Butterfield told a Senate panel investigating the Watergate break-in and subsequent cover-up about the taping system.

After listening to recordings for the first time on June 4, Nixon concluded that White House counsel John Dean, by then cooperating with prosecutors, had no evidence linking the president with crimes.

"I listened to every damn thing, and Bob, this son of a b— is bluffing," Nixon boasted to Haldeman. After telling Haldeman that the tapes he reviewed "have nothing with Watergate," Nixon offered a telling aside:

"I went through this agony for eight hours, nine hours today. I did nothing else. Just damn near broke me down. But, you know how tough it is to listen to that stuff."

Nixon resigned the presidency on Aug. 9, 1974.

PACK: Midland delegation to head for China

(From 1A)

scheduled to make this year's trip. "We have a number of things in common from an economic standpoint."

The delegation will spend six days in Dongying and surrounding area before touring other parts of China, including Beijing and Shanghai.

One goal of the visit, which will end July 3, is to attempt to set up sister-like relations between Texas and the Shandong province, Beck said.

"A portion of our time will be spent meeting with the governor of that province," he said.

Texas' end of the relationship, Beck said, must be set up through a special relations committee of the Texas House of Representatives.

Another purpose of the China visit is to exchange petroleum production ideas, Beck said. He said the Midland delegation, though, likely will be giving more information than it receives, he said.

"Texas is seeing more and more of a need for marketing our expertise," he said. "We have the greatest oil and gas expertise right here in Midland."

Culture also will be a point of conversation, Beck said, as well as a gamut of other topics.

"I think one of the principle benefits of our relationship is it promotes understanding between two extremely diverse cultures," Beck said.

A Midland delegation, including the mayor, civic organization leaders, business representatives and University of Texas of the Permian Basin officials, visited Dongying in June 1986.

But while a Midland delegation has traveled to China only once, Dongying representatives have come here several times.

The relationship also has included a mutual exchange of students. Students from the Dongying area have been attending Midland College and UTPB. Midland students, meanwhile, have been attending Chinese institutions.

The cities also have exchanged art works.

"I think we've developed a greater appreciation for the Chinese culture and some of their problems," Beck said of the relationship. "It's been a very broad-based education."

Thomas, who made the 1986 trip, said he plans to observe Chinese municipal and province government in action and examine Dongying's water and sewer system.

In 1986, the Dongying government was relocating its government offices, and Thomas said it will be interesting to see how the move went.

"They were packing up and moving the heart of their city to a new area," Thomas said.

The Dongying government is footing the bill for Thomas' trip, while other members of the Midland delegation will pay for the visit out of their own pockets.

MC: Trustees select Daniel of Pennsylvania

delighted to be coming to Midland. Midland College is well-known academically throughout the country. ... It is a particular honor to be selected to succeed Jess Parrish, who is well-known as one of the leaders in the field of comprehensive community-college education."

Daniel, 54, now serves as executive director of both the Pennsylvania Commission for Community Colleges and the Pennsylvania Federation of Community College Trustees in Harrisburg, Pa. He is the former president of Wilkes Community College in Wilkesboro, NC.

He received his Bachelor of Arts degree from Furman University of Greenville, S.C., his M.Div. from Colgate-Rochester of Rochester, N.Y., and his Ed.D. in Community College Education from North Carolina State University.

Daniel also serves as chief executive officer for the two community college organizations in Pennsylvania, representing interests of the community colleges at the state level and maintaining liaisons at both state and national levels.

He is chair of the American Association of Community and Junior Colleges. He is a former classroom teacher and a recipient of a Fulbright Award to China. Daniel was selected as one of the nation's foremost community-college educators in transformational leadership and is the author of numerous articles about education and the community-college movement.

The incoming president is expected to begin his duties Aug. 1, during a period of transition with Parrish. Completing 10 years as MC president, Parrish will retire Aug. 31.

An MC faculty committee recommended hiring candidate Paul Anthony Zeiss of Colorado or Glen Mayle of Oregon. Faculty committee representatives had no comment on the board decision.

STRAUSS: Bush selects pre-eminent powerbroker from Texas

(From 1A)

Strauss, 72, whose nomination was made final only Tuesday morning, after Bush received the assent of Gorbachev, would be only the second envoy to Moscow since World War II who was not a career diplomat or a high-ranking military officer.

In 1979, another time when the United States hoped to foster business ties to Moscow, President Jimmy Carter named former IBM Chairman Thomas J. Watson Jr. as ambassador to the Kremlin. The invasion of Afghanistan that December soured those efforts.

In picking Strauss to replace Ambassador Jack F. Matlock Jr., Bush passed over the diplomat initially favored by the State Department, Edward P. Djerejian, who is currently ambassador to Syria.

Officials said Bush wanted to break the long string of professionals with limited political connections who served in Moscow during the tense years of the Cold War and choose a consummate insider who can act in a personal way as the U.S. link to the Soviet Union during much warmer times in the relationship.

"When Gorbachev talks to Strauss, he'll be talking to Bush," one official said.

Bush made it clear Strauss' personal connections and experience in politics outweighed his lack of experience in Soviet relations.

"I frankly can think of nobody, no one more qualified or more talented, to bring to this representation what we need: contacts with high officials, a knowledge of America, a guarantee that two ships — big ships, important ships — won't pass in the night for lack of understanding," Bush said.

At a brief, almost jocular news conference given by three Texas comrades, Bush, Strauss and Secretary of State James A. Baker III, Baker said the selection was "a big plus" for "the emerging and continually, positively forward-moving relationship between the United States and the Soviet Union."

Reflecting the swiftness of the appointment, Strauss said, "I have no statement to make other than a week ago, if anyone had told me I would standing here, I would have thought they were crazy."

Noting that he was a member of the opposition party, he added: "I certainly will come out as a Democrat. And in the meantime, I'll do my damndest, Mr. President, to represent this nation as you and the secretary would want me to."

But critics of Strauss seized on his political background and connections with international business as a Washington lawyer to question the appointment at a time when there is concern here about Soviet policy toward the Baltic republics.

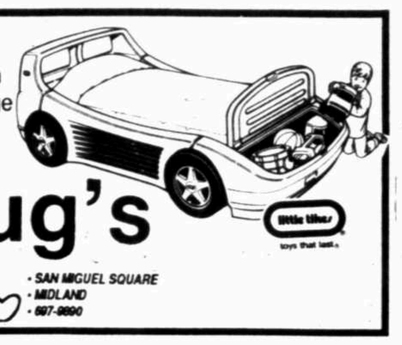

"This is the wrong appointment at the wrong time," said John P. Cregan, president of the U.S. Business and Industrial Council, a conservative group. "Now more than ever, we need someone who is well-versed in U.S.-Soviet relations and instead we've got a guy who is well versed in the art of the deal."

Although Strauss has long been an important figure in the Democratic Party, and the White House was counting on that to help weather future squalls over its Soviet policy, it remains to be seen how helpful he will be in this respect.

His primary function will be to serve as liaison to the Kremlin and as an adviser to the president and to American businesses interested in dealing with the Soviet Union.

Strauss, a former Democratic Party chairman and a man with decades of deep involvement in presidential campaigns, will be in the unfamiliar and perhaps uncomfortable position of sitting out the 1992 election — thousands of miles from the political action and silenced by a pledge to promote Bush administration policy.

House shuns "pure" alternative to leaders' rights bill

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The House of Representatives on Tuesday night defeated one alternative to the Democratic leadership's civil rights bill and debated another, President Bush's proposal to amend job discrimination laws.

Leaders in both parties said they expected the Bush proposal to be defeated, more or less on party lines, and the Democratic measure to be adopted Wednesday.

But they were uncertain about how many votes it would get, and how close it would come to the two-thirds majority required to override Bush's threatened veto of the measure, which he insists is a "quota bill."

The measure that was defeated was termed "the pure bill" by Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., because it included none of the compromises adopted in the leadership's version in the hope of getting that two-thirds majority. The vote was 277-152.

In particular, Ms. Schroeder and others advocated their substitute because it did not include any limit on damages that could be won by women in sex discrimination cases. The Democratic leadership bill would limit punitive damages; the Bush bill would bar punitive damages altogether.

As an overture to Wednesday's crucial votes, House Speaker Thomas S. Foley said he did not believe supporters had the two-thirds majority they would eventually need. That would be 290 votes if every member of the full House voted; last year's civil rights bill got 273.

But Foley said he expected to have the two-thirds by the time the bill comes back from the Senate, where further compromises are likely if it is to be adopted. Nine moderate Senate Republicans on Tuesday introduced a series of bills aimed at bridging the gap between the administration and its antagonists.

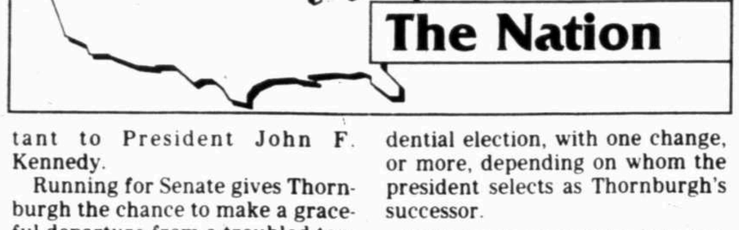

On Tuesday night Rep. Robert H. Michel of Illinois, the Republican minority leader, said Bush's bill "stresses fairness over quotas, conciliation over litigation, unity over divisiveness."

But Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., who heads the Judiciary Subcommittee on Civil and Constitutional Rights, said that bill would make it "very easy for an employer to justify discriminatory practices."

Much of Tuesday's debate was devoted not to Bush's proposal but to whether the Democratic leadership's bill would lead to quotas in hiring and promotion.

Rep. Henry J. Hyde, R-Ill., said it would because "the bill's presumption of guilt and high hurdle of proof will force employers to hire by the numbers."

Thornburgh to resign, run for Senate seat

WASHINGTON (NYT) — President Bush announced Tuesday that Attorney General Dick Thornburgh would resign from the Cabinet by the end of July to run for the Senate from Pennsylvania.

The decision, which had been expected, reflects the importance that the White House attaches to retaking a Senate seat long held by Republicans but which fell into Democratic hands after Sen. John Heinz was killed in an airplane crash on April 4.

Regaining the seat is essential to Republican aspirations to gaining control of the Senate in 1992. But political analysts in Pennsylvania said Tuesday that Thornburgh would face spirited Democratic opposition in November in an election to decide who will serve the remainder of Heinz's term, which expires in 1994.

Thornburgh will face Harris Wofford, who was appointed to the seat by Gov. Robert P. Casey, a Democrat, and was nominated to be the candidate in November by the State Democratic Party. Wofford is a former civil rights assistant to President John F. Kennedy.

Running for Senate gives Thornburgh the chance to make a graceful departure from a troubled tenure as an attorney general. His nearly three-year stewardship of the Justice Department has been at times undercut by an imperious managerial style and personnel problems that have weakened his influence at the White House.

The departure will give Bush the opportunity to shuffle his Cabinet in advance of the 1992 presidential election, with one change, or more, depending on whom the president selects as Thornburgh's successor.

Bush made no mention of a successor on Tuesday, but administration officials have said that among the possible contenders for post are Samuel K. Skinner, transportation secretary; Gov. John Ashcroft of Missouri; Carla A. Hills, U.S. trade representative; Sen. Warren B. Rudman, Republican of New Hampshire; C. Boyden Gray, White House legal counsel; and George Deukmejian, former Republican governor of California.

Some Democratic senators said Thornburgh should resign immediately. Sen. Howard M. Metzenbaum of Ohio, a member of the Judiciary Committee, which oversees the department, said Thornburgh's decision to remain as Attorney General was "outrageous."

"While in office as the nation's chief law-enforcement official, the attorney general is the last person in government who should be a political candidate," he said. "The power of the office to influence and intimidate makes this an obvious conflict."

Fundamentalists capture Southern Baptist presidency

ATLANTA (AP) — Fundamentalists captured the Southern Baptist Convention presidency without opposition Tuesday, taking undisputed control of the nation's largest Protestant denomination.

With little dissent, Morris H. Chapman, pastor of First Baptist Church in Wichita Falls, Texas, was re-elected president after urging the convention to "just say no" to those who don't believe in the literal truth of the Bible.

"For those of us who believe the Bible is the ... inerrant word of God, the issue in our convention is settled. For those among us who do not believe it, the issue will never be settled," Chapman, 50, said in his presidential address.

With the victory, fundamentalists — who have derived their strength from opposing an entrenched bureaucracy — assumed the mantle of the establishment within the 15 million-member denomination.

'For those of us who believe the Bible is the ... inerrant word of God, the issue in our convention is settled.'

re-elected president Morris H. Chapman

For 12 years they've defeated moderate presidential candidates but their only unopposed candidacy was that of the Rev. James Draper in 1983.

"I would hope the struggle is over," Chapman said after his election.

"The most immediate challenge is to help us come of age in our leadership responsibilities," he said.

But fundamentalists at the three-day gathering showed little room for compromise now that they are on the inside.

Delegates cut off funding for the Baptist Joint Committee on Public Affairs, an inter-Baptist lobbying group on church-state issues. Fundamentalists had long criticized the group for stands opposing school prayer and tuition tax credits for private schools.

Church leadership had proposed allocating $50,000 to the Washington-based lobbying group that is funded by a coalition of Baptist denominations, but offered no defense of the budget after the motion to delete the funding was presented.

In his address, Chapman spoke often against compromising with convention moderates, thousands of whom established their own group — the Cooperative Baptist Fellowship — last month in Atlanta.

"May God give Southern Baptists the fearless faith to just say no when anyone tries to compromise our conviction about the word of God," Chapman said.

Nancy Ammerman, a sociologist at Emory University, said the events Tuesday indicated the "so-called Purity Party" is staking out its terrain against any efforts at compromise.

"Whether they'll be able to sustain that in the actual running of the agencies and organizations is another matter," she said.

The denomination, which prided itself on more than doubling its membership and annual 10 percent increases in church budgets in the 1970s, has grown less than 1 percent in recent years.

U.S. to sell arms to gulf nations

WASHINGTON (NYT) — In the second major weapons deal since President Bush pledged last week to curb the Middle East arms race, Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said Tuesday the United States would sell attack helicopters to the United Arab Emirates and Bahrain.

Pentagon officials said the United States planned to sell 20 Apache gunships to the United Arab Emirates and eight to Bahrain. They would be the first gulf nations to buy the Army's most advanced attack helicopters.

Administration officials and military contractors said the White House was also considering selling 337 M1-A1 tanks and about 160 Bradley fighting vehicles to the United Arab Emirates in a deal, that including the Apaches, would total more than $2.1 billion. The helicopter portion is worth about $500 million, a Pentagon official said.

Cheney's announcement comes less than a week after he said the United States would give Israel 10 used F-15 fighters and would continue supplying three-quarters of the funds for an American-Israeli anti-ballistic missile, the Arrow. The United States also said it was stockpiling American military equipment in Israel to use in a regional conflict.

The proposed helicopter sale to the two gulf countries, which requires congressional approval, threw into greater relief the seeming contradiction between the administration's twin goals of arms control in the Middle East and meeting the security needs of Washington's allies in the region.

Cheney said, however, they were not divergent goals.

"It is not inconsistent to say, on the one hand, we're interested in arms control and, on the other hand, we want to make certain our friends can defend themselves," Cheney told reporters on his plane returning to Washington after a 10-day trip to Europe, Israel and Egypt.

Cheney said the United States "cannot fall into the trap" of saying that "arms control means we don't provide any arms to the Middle East."

Both the United Arab Emirates and Bahrain are considered likely hosts for a forward headquarters of the U.S. Central Command, which headed American forces in the gulf war.

Pentagon officials emphasized Congress was informally notified last October of the possible sale of Apaches to the United Arab Emirates.

Supporters of Israel in Congress, who fear sales of advanced weapons to Arab countries erode Israel's military technological edge in the Middle East, expressed outrage at the proposed sale.

"It's distressing that this is the administration's version of arms control in the Middle East," said Rep. Mel Levine, D-Calif., "Any sale at this time is bad policy and should be stopped."

Youngest pilot remains part child

One would think there are no thrills left in the world of "ordinary" flight today what with the high-tech aircraft that helped remove Iraq as a major military threat in only six weeks, shuttle flights that make outer space flight appear simple, and flights that circumnavigate the Earth relegated to "old hat" status.

So Daniel Shanklin's cross-country flight from historic Lindbergh Field in San Diego, Calif. to First Flight Airport at Kill Devil Hills, near Kitty Hawk, N.C., might seem like no big deal were it not for one thing. Daniel's age. He's only 7.

That's 7 years old.

OK, flying probably isn't all that difficult anyway and with modern aircraft technology it really amounts to little more than throwing a few switches and pushing a couple of buttons. But, still, a part of your subconscious keeps saying, "Come on, this kid shouldn't be flying. He can't even drive!"

Daniel, of course, is a Texan and some people may have the idea that since everything is bigger and better in the Lone Star State, he, too, may be bigger in stature than an ordinary 7 year old. Don't think it even for a minute. He uses a booster seat and back cushion to raise him above the dash of the Cessna 172 and when landing the craft he surveys the landing strip out a side window since the nose of the airplane is up at that time.

This is not intended to make light of Daniel's accomplishment. What he he done is extraordinary. But it makes one wonder, if he accomplishes this when he's 7 what will he do when he's 30?

When the young pilot was asked what he wanted to do once the cross-country flight was over, he told reporters he wanted to "go to the beach."

Good. Life is too fast-paced today and with younger people accomplishing greater feats almost every day, it's good to know there are still some aspects of childhood and good old-fashioned fun that are still around.

Clozapine's cost isn't only factor

Clozapine, a highly effective new treatment, promises relief for thousands of schizophrenics, and federal administrators merit praise for insisting that all states make it available to the poor under Medicaid. It can save millions and reclaim lives.

Concerns remain that the drug's manufacturer, Sandoz Pharmaceuticals, is trying to profiteer from the desperation of mental patients and their families. But that no longer seems a compelling reason to deny patients the drug.

Psychiatrists say clozapine works wonders, often enabling hospital-bound patients to find jobs and lead nearly normal lives. It also promises new help for the homeless mentally ill, most of whom suffer from schizophrenia.

While patients on clozapine don't suffer a common side effect of other schizophrenia drugs, a small percentage are subject to a fatal blood disorder.

For that reason, Sandoz originally sold the drug only to those who agreed to contract for blood monitoring with a company called Caremark.

That "tie-in" raised the price of clozapine treatment to $8,900 a year. It also exempted clozapine from a recent federal law mandating Medicaid coverage of prescription drugs.

But Sandoz, under pressure from an antitrust suit brought by 35 states and an investigation by the Federal Trade Commission, now says it's abandoning the Caremark requirement.

Instead, it will allow patients and doctors to arrange for their own blood monitoring. That should reduce the cost to about $6,500.

The price could still be excessive: critics point out that Sandoz sells the drug in Europe for as little as half that. The company explains that drug prices in Europe are subject to government controls; U.S. regulations limit the market to patients who have tried other drugs first.

In any case, the pricing question ought not to block access to the drug under Medicaid. Every time clozapine enables a patient to vacate a state hospital bed, the public saves as much as 10 times the present cost of the drug.

When it rescues a patient from a life of confused desperation on the street, there's even nobler benefit.

Poland struggles with church, state

WARSAW — The founding fathers of Poland's revolution are in the throes of replaying one of the epic events in the American Revolution — the drafting of a constitution — and are finding the passions as hot now as they were in Philadelphia 200 years ago.

Anderson

The dispute centers on an age-old American constitutional question: separation of church and state. Somewhere between his peasant proverbs and humorous homilies, Polish President Lech Walesa told us he favored separation of the two institutions but will oppose codifying it in the constitution expected to be completed this fall.

Already, political leaders are drawing battle lines: Leftist parties are objecting to Catholic intrusion into Polish political life. The scheduled visit of Pope John Paul II, a native Pole, is expected to fuel the controversy.

Critics, such as the eloquent Jacek Kuron, a longtime Walesa adviser and former minister of labor, believe that the church should not be imposed on the people. As in the United States, abortion looms as a litmus test issue: Kuron and others have been appalled that the Walesa government was ready to make it illegal without first holding a national referendum. Poland's vice minister of health, who wanted all birth control methods including condoms made illegal, represented that country's pro-life movement. Poles identify themselves as Roman Catholic overwhelmingly. During the Communist years, the church embodied both nationalism and anti-communism.

Walesa carries the balancing scales of church and state on his shoulders, and unconvincingly argues that the conflict exists outside Poland only. Pressed on the question, Walesa finally took this approach — that it wasn't necessary to include religion in law. He explained:

"Legislation will not resolve matters of conscience. You would get just the opposite effect. Our church will not do anything which would be imposed, and which would lose them support."

For his own personal life, he leaves little room for question. Walesa was quick to note that he remains a devout Catholic as president, even more so now as he reaches out for spiritual aid. "I've got a priest here in Belvedere (Palace) and I feel very good about it. How many foolish things would I have done if he had not been here," he said. "Because I am reminded: 'Oh, Jesus, God looks at me.' And even when I do it under the table, I know that God sees it. And, therefore, I don't do it."

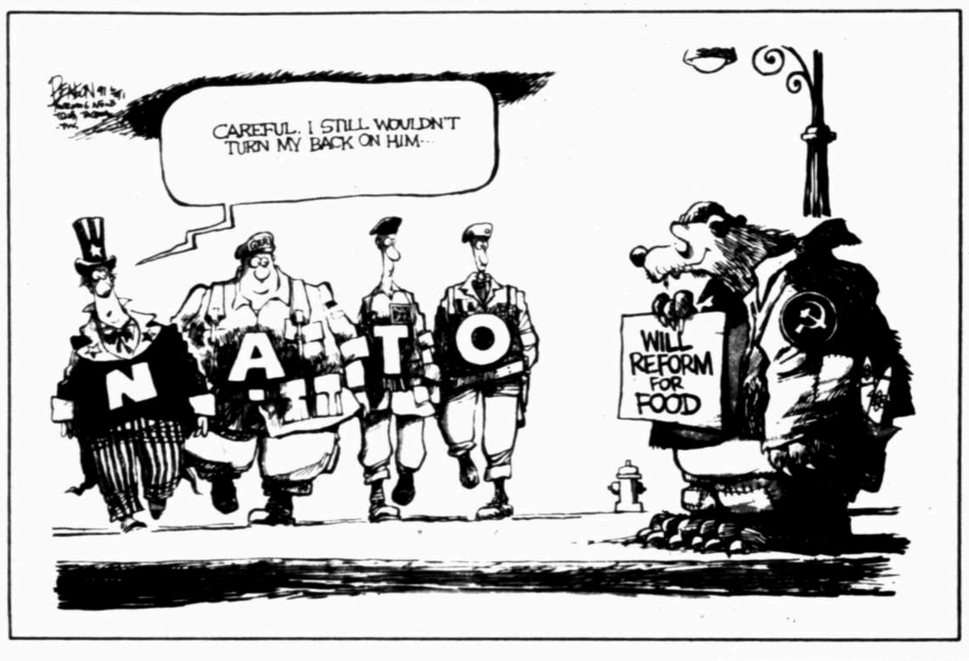

Walesa's deeds provide more detail to his hazy pronouncements. When he chose the first non-Communist prime minister of Poland in 1989 there were three finalists. One was Kuron, and one was Bronislaw Geremek, who is described as the "James Madison" of the Polish constitutional process. But Polish sources believe it was the "Catholicness" of the third candidate, Tadeusz Mazowiecki, that won him the slot. Geremek is a non-practicing Jew and Kuron, falsely rumored to be Jewish, was simply deemed "not Catholic enough" for Walesa's and the church's support at the time.

Poles are intimately familiar with what happened the last time the Catholic Church enjoyed supremacy during pre-World War II days. Church leaders were irresponsible, reactionary and openly anti-Semitic in their nationalistic zeal. The Polish Primate at the time charged in one pastoral letter that Jews were "godless ... subversives (who) are embezzlers and usurers and who engage in the white slave trade."

AFTER HOURS — The Securities and Exchange Commission is allowing the New York Stock Exchange to experiment in after-hours trading sessions. It is being billed as the first step toward round-the-clock trading, and a way to keep time with global markets in London and Tokyo. It makes the world yet a little smaller, and raises many questions about a financial system that may not be able to take a breather before reacting to events and economic conditions around the world.

MINI-EDITORIAL — Since losing the Senators in the early 1970s, the nation's capital has been without the nation's pastime, professional baseball. Now major-league baseball is expanding, and Washington, D.C., is on a short list of cities contending for a franchise. In what perhaps is a sign of the times, Japanese investors are coming to the apparent rescue of a local group whose fund raising has encountered difficulties. It seems like another strike against American business, and a home run for Japan.

Heaven knows where the Court will go next

A group of us were having a cookout in K. K. Bigelow's back yard. The guests were equally divided between those who believed that they should have a choice about how their hamburgers were cooked, and those who maintained that there was only one way to cook them.

Buchwald

When Bigelow, a pro-choice lawyer, asked everyone whether they wanted them rare, medium or well done, Keith Fulk, an anti-choice advocate, declared that Bigelow had no right to tell his guests what kind of grilled hamburgers were available.

Bigelow retorted, "I can too, as long as there is no government money involved. When it comes to meat, many people need guidance about what's cooking. I'm not just talking about hamburger — I'm talking about mustard, relish and sliced onions. Each burger must be treated as an individual problem."

Dave Miller, a vegetarian lawyer (almost everyone who shows up at a cookout in Washington is a lawyer), took exception to Bigelow's response.

"Everything in this town involves federal money. That chopped steak was U.S. government inspected. Therefore, a citizen cannot advise another on how to eat it."

"Says who?"

Waldorf answered, "The Supreme Court. If you recall, in McDonald's v. Cheese Burger, McDonald's planned to open a free hamburger advisory service for members of the public who couldn't make up their minds.

Cheese Burger objected saying that such a service would require tax dollars and, since it was aimed at teen-agers, would be unfair competition.

"The Court ruled in favor of Cheese Burger by 5 to 4, with Justice Souter casting the swing vote."

Pro-choice advocate Virginia Newhouse said bitterly, "With Souter on the bench, we'll never have freedom of choice at a cookout again."

"Why did Souter vote for the other side?"

"Because he's not married — and everyone knows he hates cookouts," David Turner, another lawyer explained.

S. David Brookes said, "Then let's get him married. If he's married, he won't have time to spend on so many stupid Supreme Court decisions."

Bigelow added, "Maybe his wife would beat some sense into him."

Teitelbaum, who was also a "guess-what," laughed, "You can't force a Supreme Court Justice to marry if he doesn't want to."

Bigelow disagreed, "You can if you're a friend of the court."

"As I see it," Newhouse said, "the pro-choice people have to take a stand. If we don't raise our voices now, then freedom of speech has had it. Heaven knows where the Supreme Court will go next."

"What are you trying to say?"

"They could soon rule that we can't ask for guidance concerning what topping we're allowed to have on our pizzas," Newhouse told the group.

"They would be right," said anti-choice guest Bill Reinbeck. "Everyone knows that the only good topping for pizza is pepperoni."

Grand bargain is guaranteed to be a loser

WASHINGTON — After some badgering, an official U.S. source responsible for knowing the extent of Moscow's current subsidy of communism in Cuba disgorged this figure for 1990: $4.5 billion.

Safire

That does not include the aid that the folks who gave the world Chernobyl are giving Fidel Castro to install uninspected nuclear reactors a stone's throw from Florida.

Let's assume that our bailout establishment — including Kansas Sen. Bob Dole, who never met a grain credit he didn't like — succeeds in pouring $1.5 billion in unsecured credit down the Kremlin drain. President Bush, alternately looking stern and professing much anguish, will soon do that as a "humanitarian gesture" to put bread on Moscow's tables.

That means U.S. taxpayers will be reimbursing the Kremlin for one-third of its current annual subsidy to hard-line Communist Cuba. We will be underwriting Moscow's continuance of the Cold War.

Does that make sense? Are we really ready to increase our deficit, or to raise our taxes, or to crack down on our students to repay loans — to enable Mikhail Gorbachev to keep a Communist foothold in the Caribbean?

Here is a proposal stunning in its simplicity: If Kremlin humanitarians want to feed their people next month, let them cut off all aid to Cuba this month. Then they will be able to buy our grain and meet their food crisis.

The bailout establishment sniffs at such thinking as simplistic. At Harvard, the current management of the Charles River Gang is mapping a giveaway of far greater sophistication: a "Grand Bargain" of a quarter of a trillion dollars or so, over five years, in return for Soviet promises of reform.

The Grand Bargain-hunters are all nice guys. Graham Allison of the JFK School would have been national security adviser in the Dukakistocracy; Robert Blackwill is a classy scholar afflicted with the fear of "who lost Gorbachev?"; Grigory Yavlinsky is a 39-year-old economist trotted out by Gorbachev when reform is in season (and who shows a nice understanding of Western ways by reportedly cutting himself in on the bundle he seeks).

Their notion of capitalist-paid crutches for a bailout of the Communist system seems ludicrous; it is divorced from political reality and economic logic. The "Grand Bargain" is significant, however, because it sets a far-out price on helping keep Gorbachev in power. This will permit the "sensible" types to move in and settle for a cheaper bailout: a petite bargain.

Bush and Secretary Baker, split-the-difference types, will put on a horrified look at the Harvard stalking horse. Then they will insist the ransom put on reform should be less, with more Soviet promises of a loosening of the command economy, perhaps throwing in fewer shootings of Baltic border guards. Maybe, as the sweetener before the limited-modified-bailout, we'll get a small reduction of Soviet arms spending and the Castro subsidy.

Already, Bush is giving way gracefully: nice-again Gorbachev will be invited to the G-7 summit meeting to rattle his tin cup like a menacing beggar and be given quick fixes to help him stay in power.

That entire approach is a historic mistake. Richard Nixon, writing in the Washington Post, persuasively denounces bailout proposals as "counterproductive Western painkillers" that would postpone the drastic economic and political changes needed to save the Soviet peoples.

Communism with a reformist face is a fake. Pouring in public money from the West to shore up five more years of half-measures in the Kremlin is a guaranteed loser.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, June 5, the 156th day of 1991. There are 209 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On June 5, 1968, at 12:16 a.m. PDT, Sen. Robert F. Kennedy was shot and mortally wounded at the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles shortly after claiming victory in California's Democratic presidential primary. Kennedy's assassin, Sirhan Bishara Sirhan, was immediately arrested.

On this date:

In 1723, economist Adam Smith was born in Kirkcaldy, Scotland.

In 1783, Joseph and Jacques Montgolfier publicly demonstrated their hot-air balloon in a 10-minute flight over Annonay, France.

In 1883, economist John Maynard Keynes was born in Cambridge, England.

In 1884, Civil War hero Gen. William T. Sherman refused the Republican presidential nomination with the words, "I will not accept if nominated and will not serve if elected."

In 1888, the Democratic national convention in St. Louis nominated President Cleveland for a second term (He lost to Benjamin Harrison, but was elected president again in 1892).

In 1917, about 10 million American men began registering for the draft in World War I.

In 1933, the United States went off the gold standard.

In 1940, the Battle of France began during World War II.

In 1947, Secretary of State George C. Marshall gave a speech at Harvard University outlining a program of aid for Europe that would become known as "The Marshall Plan."

Ethiopian ammo dump explodes

The World

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — A military ammunition depot exploded in a series of thunderous blasts early Tuesday, burning almost a square mile of factories, shops and ramshackle homes. Scores were feared dead.

Officials said it could take days to establish the final toll in the blasts, which the interim government of the Ethiopian People's Revolutionary Democratic Front blamed on saboteurs.

It did not name a specific organization, and no one claimed responsibility.

By nightfall, more than 100 people had been hospitalized and at least five were known dead, including a television soundman. More victims were arriving at medical facilities by the hour.

The British Broadcasting Corporation reported late Tuesday that the explosion had killed at least 100 people. The BBC said their figure came from the Ethiopian Red Cross.

The capital and much of Ethiopia's countryside had been beset by unrest for weeks, much of it blamed on deserting soldiers of the ousted government and on young, armed thugs.

The explosions came one week after the the main rebel group shot its way into Addis Ababa and took over the government following the flight into exile of former President Mengistu Haile Mariam.

Two other ammunition dumps blew up during the rebel takeover, one at the Imperial Palace and another on the southestern outskirts of the city. Dr. Tebebe Yemane Berehan of the Red Cross said Tuesday that 800 people were killed in the latter explosion, a far higher toll than had been previously reported.

Red Cross volunteers, aided by residents and soldiers, were carrying out the search for victims in the area shattered and burned by Tuesday's explosions. Officials said the task could take at least two days to complete.

Tebebe, the chairman of the Addis Ababa chapter of the Red Cross, led a small group of reporters around the devastated area. He said victims found so far had been on the perimeter of the blast area.

"When we get into the village it will be much worse. The congestion was very high," he said. "I think many people are buried in those houses. ... In coming days, the casualty toll will be much greater than the one we have now."

Tebebe said the depot was the largest of four such ammunition dumps maintained by the former government in Addis Ababa. "It was crazy to have it in an area like this," he said.

Hunde Bedane, 53, a night watchman at a nearby storage depot owned by the French petroleum company AGIP, said there was shooting at the ammunition dump before the first pre-dawn explosion.

"There was shooting ... and then burning started and then came the explosions and then more explosions," he said as he awaited treatment for minor shrapnel wounds at a hospital.

Addis Metafari, 26, her face contorted with pain, told of being wounded in the right leg and seeing a neighbor decapitated by flying shrapnel in the initial explosion.

"When I woke up I saw the fire close to the ammunition dump," she said. "I saw someone in front of me with their neck cut and their head thrown away and I felt my legs stop moving."

"The whole area was in flames," she said from a bed in the Balcha Red Cross Hospital. "Even houses built of stones were on fire."

The neighborhood in which the military depot was located is known as Nefa Silk.

Tekle Woin Assefu, head of relief services for the interim government, told reporters: "It was sabotage definitely, that's what our people say."

Algerian president declares state of siege amid rioting

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — The president declared a state of emergency in Algeria early Wednesday and armored cars rolled into the capital to quell nearly two weeks of violent protests by a Muslim fundamentalist party.

President Chadli Bendjedid also postponed legislative elections scheduled for later this month, and announced the resignation of his prime minister.

Armored personnel carriers crossed the main intersection in downtown Algiers at 2 a.m., apparently headed toward poorer quarters that are strongholds of the fundamentalist Islamic Salvation Front.

Police fired salvos of tear gas at bands of demonstrators, who hurled firebombs made of gasoline-filled bottles at police stations and the Justice Hall.

At least seven people were reported killed in clashes Tuesday between police and stone-throwing demonstrators of the Islamic Salvation Front, which seeks an Islamic state in Algeria.

The protesters were pushed back but others set up barricades at main arteries around the capital. Near the Place des Martyrs, a major public square, the fundamentalists tried to enter the Public Treasury building but were driven back by police.

On Tuesday, in the worst violence since protests began 12 days ago, at least seven people were reported killed in clashes between police and stone-throwing demonstrators of the Islamic Salvation Front.

The front seeks an Islamic state in Algeria. It had demanded presidential elections to replace Bendjedid to coincide with the June 27 parliamentary elections that were canceled by Wednesday's decree.

The vote was to have been the first multiparty parliament election in Algeria since the country gained independence from France in 1962.

Mouloud Hamrouche, the resigning premier, had taken over the government in September 1989 and led a reform program that eased the country's hard-line Marxist economic and social policies. Bendjedid is the chief of state and supreme authority in Algeria.

On Tuesday, clouds of choking tear gas fumes hung over downtown Algiers as helmeted police carrying shields repeatedly charged tens of thousands of marchers. About 700 people were admitted to hospitals for treatment of respiratory ailments.

Interior Minister Mohammed Salah Mohammedi charged that foreigners had infiltrated the demonstrations and promoting violence.

"Those who attack security forces are no longer only militants of the Islamic Salvation Front," the minister said. He said he was surprised that those seeking the application of Islamic law "walk alongside adepts of Trotsky."

The government on Monday had issued tough orders aimed at ending the protest marches. The Interior Ministry asked shopkeepers and public utilities not to cooperate with the strike, so services would continue.

■ China: Mao's widow committed suicide

BEIJING — Jiang Qing, the widow of Mao Tse-tung and herself a leader of China during some of its most tumultuous years, has committed suicide, the government announced Tuesday night. She was 77.

Ms. Jiang was serving a life prison sentence for her role as leader of the Gang of Four. That name was given to the group of radical Communist leaders whose closeness to the all-powerful Mao enabled them to speak in his name and carry out what they said were his policies during the Cultural Revolution from 1966 to 1976.

Ms. Jiang killed herself in the early hours of May 14, the official New China News Agency reported. The three-paragraph dispatch did not say how she had committed suicide or why.

The delay in announcing her death almost certainly was linked to the government's concern about possible protests leading up to the second anniversary Tuesday of the army crackdown on the Tiananmen Square democracy movement.

■ Mexican government reorganizes police

MEXICO CITY — Intensifying a broad crackdown on corruption in federal law enforcement agencies, Mexico's new attorney general announced Tuesday a nationwide reorganization of the Federal Judicial Police, including the creation of special anti-corruption and internal affairs units.

Declaring that the government is committed to rooting out the corruption and abuses that have long tainted Mexican law enforcement efforts, Attorney General Ignacio Morales Lechuga said all federal police units would be reorganized and placed under the direct, strengthened control of a civilian deputy attorney general appointed by President Carlos Salinas de Gortari.

Morales said two new high-level civilian officials would supervise all police operations in Mexico's sensitive border areas. He also announced the creation of a new, independent federal police unit that will be on call to protect any citizens who denounce, or are victims of, crimes and other abuses committed by federal agents.

■ Kuwaitis call for democratic changes

KUWAIT CITY — In the first public protest since the Persian Gulf war, about a thousand Kuwaitis gathered at a mosque Tuesday night to call for faster democratic changes and to reject the government's recent decrees as unconstitutional.

The opposition gathering was illegal, but police did not appear unless they were in plain clothes, and the government did nothing to interfere with the meeting, which had been advertised only by word of mouth.

Two days ago the government decreed that new parliamentary elections would be held in October 1992, and the gathering was largely meant to object to such a slow schedule of change, and to the convening in July of a National Council under the tight control of the royal family. Kuwait is now under martial law.

Dozens of prominent Kuwaitis were there: leaders of opposition political groups, businessmen, members of the constitutional Parliament that was dissolved in 1986, and intellectuals. Adopting a deliberately non-confrontational tactic, one they said was typically Kuwaiti, they made no speeches but simply stood about talking politics, exchanging news, and laying plans.

■ IRA deaths threaten peace talks

LONDON — An ambush by British commandos that cut down three Irish guerrillas in a rain of bullets on Monday has inflamed tensions among rival political groups in Northern Ireland and cast deepening shadows over peace talks now under way in Belfast on the future of the troubled province.

The attack by an undercover unit of the British Special Air Service commandos, coming two days after an Irish Republican Army bomb killed three Ulster Defense Regiment soliders, has also reignited a long-standing debate about whether the British are employing "shoot to kill" tactics against suspected terrorists in Northern Ireland.

Dynagen, TACB, TWC reach agreement

■ If petrochemical plant had not agreed to terms, it would have been tried for violating rules and regulations.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Dynagen, the Odessa petrochemical company that has been hit by enforcement action by the Texas Air Control Board (TACB) and the Texas Water Commission (TWC), on Tuesday again agreed to clean up its synthetic-rubber-producing operations that have been causing pollution.

The agreement between Dynagen's Houston lawyers and Texas Attorney General's Environment Protection Division lawyers who represent TACB and TWC came following negotiations in Austin and Odessa late last week, Monday and Tuesday morning.

Had an agreement not been reached, Dynagen was to be tried for alleged violations — more than 600 — of the Texas Clean Air Act and TACB rules and regulations.

"It's a good agreement," said Tim Gorman, manager of the Dynagen plant, which produces synthetic rubber for General Tire & Rubber Company, the world's fourth largest tire maker. Dynagen, which has more than 200 employees, annually funds an $8-million payroll.

The agreement brings up issues proposed by TWC and TACB.

"Fortunately," said David Preister, assistant attorney general who has been heading up the case against Dynagen, "we have had the assistance of the Texas Water Commission. Their input has been invaluable in bringing about this agreement."

Representing Dynagen are Houston lawyers Stephen Tipps and Jim Smith.

Issues in the agreement primarily concern the cleaning up of wastewater and controlling chemical spills; capturing butadiene and styrene in process and recovery streams, including latex streams; removing solids from wastewater; analyzing solar-pond influent; refrain from rinsing out chemical drums; cleaning up pits; cleaning up sludge, and installing the wastewater treatment plant.

Neil Carman, TACB investigator, since 1981 has been probing Dynagen's alleged air pollution by the now shut-down incinerator, crumb-rubber dryers, the old wastewater treatment plant, and solar ponds.

"We are very optimistic about this document," Carman said of the 15-page agreement. "It shows the massive nature of the wastewater problem far beyond the solar ponds."

Carman noted that "water is the

Judge dismisses woman's lawsuit against county

■ Bunton says sheriff's office not liable in shooting of Midlander by her estranged boyfriend.

By David Morris
Staff Writer

The Midland County Sheriff's Office was not liable for the 1988 shooting of Lola Jones, a federal judge has ruled.

U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton III signed an order May 23 dismissing Ms. Jones' lawsuit against Midland County. She claimed in the lawsuit that sheriff's deputies ignored her pleas for protection against her estranged boyfriend, who eventually shot her.

County Attorney Mark Dettman, who filed a motion to dismiss the lawsuit April 16, said he was pleased with Bunton's order and added that the county probably will attempt to recover attorneys' fees from Ms. Jones.

"We felt it was a frivolous lawsuit to begin with," Dettman said.

The lawsuit, originally filed Dec. 10, 1990, in 142nd State District Court, was removed to federal court in April because the plaintiff alleged civil rights violations on the county's part.

Named as defendants were Midland County, the sheriff's office, Sheriff Gary Painter, and deputies Jerry Lee and Gary Lynn McLaughlin Jr.

Ms. Jones, 43, claimed in the lawsuit that the sheriff's office should have protected her against harassment by her ex-boyfriend, Gary Fay Allison, who shot her in the head with a .25-caliber pistol on Dec. 9, 1988.

Allison is serving 20 years for attempted murder in connection with the shooting. He pleaded guilty to the crime in May 1990 in 142nd District Court.

Bunton ruled that the Midland County Sheriff's office was not under "any constitutional obligation" to protect Ms. Jones from Allison.

"The constitution serves to prevent governmental officials from affirmatively abusing their power," Bunton wrote in the order. "It neither establishes a minimal level of safety to be provided citizens nor guarantees the government will protect its citizens from harm by private actors."

Ms. Jones' attorney, Chris McCormack, said he was disappointed that the case had been dismissed and said he would try to determine what other legal recourse his client might have.

"I never thought it was a frivolous lawsuit," said McCormack, who did not file a response to the defense's dismissal motion. "I think there were some bona fide, legitimate issues that were addressed in the lawsuit."

Ms. Jones, who has suffered from partial blindness and severe headaches since the shooting, declined to comment on the dismissal.

Official who helped relocate CAF to Midland dies in Abilene

ABILENE (AP) — Abilene Christian University vice chancellor C.L. Kay died after a bout with cancer.

Kay was 64. He died Monday night at Hendrick Medical Center, said ACU spokeswoman Michelle Morris.

Kay, president of the American Air Power Heritage Foundation affiliated with the Confederate Air Force, was instrumental in helping the CAF relocate from Harlingen to Midland, Ms. Morris said.

Kay had been a major fund raiser for ACU as vice chancellor since 1982.

Prior to that time, Kay was an administrator at Lubbock Christian College, according to Ms. Morris.

Funeral arrangements were pending.

State treasurer to conduct 'Capital Forum'

■ Kay Bailey Hutchison plans a series of seminars in which she will discuss methods of stimulating the state and local economy.

Staff Report

State Treasurer Kay Bailey Hutchison, in an effort to promote and stimulate local economic expansion, will be in Midland-Odessa next Wednesday, June 11, for the first in a series of statewide economic development seminars.

Hutchison

During the seminar, or "Capital Forum," Mrs. Hutchison will outline major initiatives aimed at stimulating the state and local economy.

"Our goal at the state level is to encourage, assist and promote economic growth and expansion across Texas," Mrs. Hutchison said. "I am confident these initiatives will serve as a catalyst in this effort by bringing together the business and investment communities."

In Midland-Odessa, the state treasury's "Capital Forum" will be held from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Center for Energy and Economic Diversification (CEED), located at State Highway 191 and FM 1788. The CEED is a division of the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Joining Mrs. Hutchison at the Midland-Odessa forum will be representatives from the Texas Department of Agriculture, the Texas Department of Commerce and the local chambers of commerce. The public is invited to attend.

The purpose of the forum, Mrs. Hutchison said, is to present, discuss and exchange information regarding economic development proposals and initiatives.

Those initiatives include:

■ Purchase by the State Treasury of up to $50 million in Small Business Administration (SBA) loans to finance manufacturing, commercial and retail projects in Texas.

■ For the first time, the State Treasury will begin accepting SBA-guaranteed loans as collateral for state deposits. This initiative is expected to encourage Texas banks to make more SBA loans.

■ Streamlining of the SBA loan process. The State Treasury will work with the SBA to develop a computer software package to help simplify and expedite the SBA loan process.

■ Commitment by the State Treasury of up to $125 million for Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) investments to help finance foreign purchases of Texas agriculture products.

■ Commitment by the State Treasury of up to $25 million in Foreign Credit Insurance Agency (FCIA) loans to foreign entities to buy Texas capital goods. These loans are initially targeted toward the sale of oil exploration and production equipment.

The forum is free, but an optional lunch will be provided for $12 with advanced reservations. Seating is limited to the first 100 reservations.

Contact the Midland chamber at 683-3381 for reservations.

Education organization endorses income tax

■ Texas Association of School Boards says with state government facing a funding crisis, restructuring the tax system will ensure quality education for all students.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

The Texas Association of School Boards (TASB) is endorsing a state income tax to help cure budget ills.

Texas state government is facing its worst funding crisis in years. In order to ensure quality public education for all students in the state, it's time to restructure the tax system, according to TASB representatives.

A panel of school finance experts presented restructuring options to school administrators in a three-hour seminar Tuesday.

The seminar "Texas Taxes: Everybody's Business" presented an overview of the current tax picture and revenue shortfall.

"The overview of the state's economic outlook for the next two years is generally on the positive side," said Jim Shear, tax services coordinator of Ray, Wood and Fine in Austin.

"We (Texans) have gone through some rough times with drastic effects on state revenue," Shear said. "But the Texas economy as a whole has improved in part because we have adjusted to those changes."

Shear said one of the "bad things on the horizon" is the closing of military bases in the state.

In order to restructure the tax system, the TASB unanimously adopted an addendeum to a restructuring policy in March which includes "some measure of property tax relief, a reduction in the sales tax rate, elimination of the franchise tax and adoption of a modest-rate personal and corporate income taxes."

The board's action followed an announcement by Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock that he will actively campaign for corporate and personal income taxes to help solve Texas' burgeoning budget problems.

A TASB report indicated that the franchise tax, a tax levied on investment "is outdated and outmoded and unproductive. It taxes only corporations — not partnerships and other business entities — ignoring a large segment of the business community. It is based on the physical assets of companies despite the fact that today's marketplace relies on services and the flow of information. And, because of heavy litigation, the tax is an increasingly unstable revenue source."

"The franchise tax was put in place in 1908," Shear said. "It made sense then."

Chris Shields, vice president of governmental affairs for the Texas Chamber of Commerce, said there "is money to be saved in higher education and public education. Not all education dollars are spent efficiently."

Shields said the spending lobby's answer to the almost $7 billion shortfall the Texas state government may be facing is a major tax bill.

He said spending cuts could be implemented with the following recommendations:

■ State agency consolidations and management audits.

■ Eliminate overfunding and merge retirement funds.

■ Maximize state fund income.

■ Minimize state financing costs.

■ Require a full disclosure of higher education funding and salaries.

■ Consolidate and undedicate most state funds.

■ Integrate human services programs.

TASB recommendations also include preserving the property tax as a part of the revenue structure.

The primary recommendation of the TASB is to use the proceeds from an income tax to substantially reduce the property and sales taxes.

"It has often been said that an income tax should be considered only when there is a funding crisis or a consensus on its adoption," said a TASB tax restructuring policy statement. "The Texas Legislature faces an estimated $4.9 billion revenue shortfall — an amount re-

HOLIDAY: Group says there's time for Columbus, King

(From 1B)

Day.

King Day has been an "optional" state holiday, on which employees can skip work if they make up for it by working on another holiday. Columbus Day has been a full state holiday, which is seen as more prestigious, even though it has been 10 years since the Texas Legislature appropriated holiday pay for employees who take Columbus Day off.

"Abolishing Columbus Day is a wonderful idea," commented Jack Weatherford, an anti-Columbus professor of anthropology at MacAlester College in St. Paul, Minn.

In a telephone interview, he denied that his objections were based on the pro-Viking sympathies of Minnesota, which has designated Oct. 10 as "Leif Erickson Day" and Columbus Day as "Explorers Day."

Instead, said Weatherford, it was time to end the "sadly ironic" coincidence that the only two national holidays named after individuals celebrate "Christopher Columbus, who started the trans-Atlantic slave trade, and Dr. King, who led us in dealing with its tragic legacy."

The foundation, which sees Columbus as a brave Italian commissioned by a bold Spanish queen, disagrees. It says a 365-day year is long enough to include holidays for both King and Columbus.

To scrap the older holiday one year before Texas and other states celebrate the 500th anniversary of the arrival of the Old World explorer in the New World would be especially "insulting not only to Italian Americans, but also to the Hispanic community," the telegram said.

Richards is unlikely to veto the bill, said one of the governor's press secretaries, Chuck McDonald. In fact, he said, "She has indicated on a number of occasions that she firmly supports it."

Such a stand is not without its own political dangers. In neighboring Arizona, the Legislature 13 months ago tried to end two years of political furor over a similar bill by re-establishing Columbus Day as a paid holiday for state employees. But in the fall, Arizona voters kept the issue alive by voting heavily against a proposal to substitute King Day for Columbus Day and narrowly against a alternative proposal to add King Day on its own.

As a result, the National Football League withdrew its plans to hold the 1993 Super Bowl in Phoenix.

After that, Texans who had been trying for years to upgrade King Day in their state argued that substituting King Day for Columbus Day on the Texas list of "full" holidays might increase Houston's chances of hosting the 1995 Super Bowl.

As it happened, Houston's Super Bowl bid fell short. But the bill went forward.

If Richards signs the bill, the next fight in Texas will come when the state Legislature reconvenes in July to consider the budget for the two-year period that begins Sept. 1. The Legislature will have to decide whether to fund holiday pay for King Day.

quired just to keep state services at their current level. If these estimates are revised to include reasonable growth in population, new prison capacity, and $1.2 billion for education, Texas may be facing a deficit as high as $6.9 billion. Clearly, Texas state government is facing its worst funding crisis in years."

In an article published in "Texas Lone Star" magazine, a TASB publication, Bullock said, "Texans need to open their eyes and ears to the facts about an income tax before they open their pocketbooks to sky-high increases in school property taxes."

Bullock noted that "Texas already has almost every tax known to mankind, and in most instances — such as our combined state and local sales taxes — our rates are among the highest in the nation."

The lieutentant govenor said the alernative to higher school property taxes is a state income tax.

Other speakers at the seminar included Jim Nelson of the TASB, Buck Wood, attorney at Ray, Wood and Fine; and Catherine Clark, acting director of the Texas Center for Educational Research of Austin. A panel included State Representative Gary Watkins, Midland School superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr., and Bill Goodman, assistant superintendent for finance of Ector County Independent School District, and Shields.

The seminar was sponsored by the TASB, the Texas Chamber of Commerce, Texas Association of Business, Texas Association of Taxpayers, Texas Association of School Administrators, Texas Association of Counties and the Texas Association of School Business Officials.

USDA: 'Killer' bees sting man

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — A Brownsville man became the first person reported attacked by Africanized bees in the United States, federal officials confirmed Tuesday.

A U.S. Department of Agriculture research lab in Beltsville, Md., confirmed Tuesday that Jesus Cenobio "Sonny" Diaz was stung by the "killer" bees, so-called because of their tendency to launch mass attacks on intruders.

Diaz said the bees "came by the hundreds," stinging him 18 times around the head and arms last month.

Diaz, 35, said he was mowing grass at the Siesta Mobile Home Park in Brownsville on May 20 when he was attacked and stung repeatedly by bees.

He was given a shot for pain at Valley Regional Hospital in Brownsville and allowed to go home, Harlingen station KGBT-TV reported.

"I was cutting fodder with a small tractor, when I hit that nest in the earth. They swarmed out of there, and they kept going after me. They chased me for about 250 feet," Diaz told The Associated Press in Spanish during a telephone interview Tuesday night.

"Many of them were swarming around me. I cut some branches and tried to chase them away. They kept coming at me, many settling on the place that was most exposed — my head. I kept squashing them with the palm of my hand," Diaz said.

"...These came by the hundreds, hundreds and hundreds. They stung me 18 times. I went to the doctor, and he gave me an injection to ease the pain. I'm all right now, thank God!"

The bees, said to have come from underground drainage pipes, were destroyed, and samples were sent to USDA labs for testing, officials said.

The USDA's Animal, Plant and Health Inspection Service said Tuesday the samples were confirmed in tests Monday as Africanized wild bees.

DEATHS

Ben Woods Jr.

Services for Ben Woods Jr. of Midland have been set for 3 p.m. Thursday at Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with Rev. Bob Porterfield, pastor of West Kentucky Baptist Church, officiating. A masonic graveside service will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Woods died Monday at his residence.

He was born Feb. 10, 1925, in Corsicana and was raised in the West Texas area.

Woods enlisted in the U.S. Army and served during the Normandy invasion. After an honorable discharge, he began work with Exxon as a lease operator until his retirement in 1986.

He was a member of the Acatia Lodge No. 1414, Suez Shrine Temple of San Angelo and Midland Shriners Club.

Survivors include his wife, Lillian L. Woods of Midland; two sons, Randy Ben Woods of Odessa, and Michael Woods of Big Spring; three daughters, Penny Irene Smith of Odessa, Nancy Stewart of Pittsburg, Texas, and Judith Teising of Portland, Ore.; nine grandchildren, two nieces and a nephew.

Maynard Welch

KERMIT — Services for Maynard Franklin "Ken" Welch, 67, of Kermit are set for 10 a.m. today at First United Methodist Church in Kermit with the Rev. Bob Sawyer officiating. Interment will be at Kermit Cemetery.

Welch died Tuesday at a Kermit hospital.

He was born Sept. 23, 1923, in Lockney. He married Emma Jean Nettleton on Oct. 17, 1946, in San Angelo.

Welch was a retired radio broadcaster active in broadcasting from 1951-88 in Big Spring, Monahans and Carlsbad, N.M. He was co-owner and operator of KERB-AM radio with his wife in Kermit from 1968-88.

Welch was a World War II U.S. Army Air Corp veteran. He was a Methodist and a 23-year resident of Kermit.

Welch was preceded in death by a son, Doug Welch.

Survivors include his wife, Emma Welch of Kermit; a daughter, Maggie Brown of Kermit; his mother, Ophelia Welch of Midland; two brothers, Jim Welch and Paul Welch, both of Midland; a sister, Doris Haney of Midland; and three grandchildren.

Corinne Scruggs

BURNET — Services for Corinne Scruggs, 87, are scheduled for 10 a.m. Thursday at the Edgar Funeral Home. Burial will follow in Lakeland Hills Cemetery.

Ms. Scruggs died Monday. Born Nov. 11, 1903, in Scranton, Penn., she was a retired school teacher and a member of the First Baptist Church of Burnet.

Survivors include two daughters, Kathleen Speed of Oklahoma City and Marsha Lebkowski of Austin; one brother, Sherwood Allen of Mexico; and two grandchildren.

DYNAGEN: Plant reaches agreement

(From 1B)

largest chemical used in volume in making SBR (styrene-butadiene rubber) crumb rubber and also is the largest waste (product)" at Dynagen's plant. He said that 1.2 gallons of water is required to make one pound of rubber.

Dynagen, which makes black, brown and white rubber, has been "averaging well over 200 million pounds of crumb rubber every year," Carman said.

Water is a "vital component" in the manufacturing of rubber.

Issues to be brought out by the TWC in its amended petition to the 1989 Dynagen-TACB lawsuit apparently will include probes into possible groundwater contamination and storm-water runoff.

Already, TWC has drilled monitor water wells at the Dynagen site just south of Odessa's city limits.

Until recently, TWC had not been included in the TACB's 1989 lawsuit against Dynagen, although, as Gorman noted, the TWC has "always been a part of some of the enforcement actions" on wastewater at the Dynagen plant.

In mid-May, Dynagen and the TACB, through the Texas Attorney General, had reached an agreement. However, it was not finalized due to TWC's request to be included in the lawsuit.

Dynagen's parent company, the Akron, Ohio-based and German-own General Tire, already has committed millions of dollars to the construction of a state-of-the-art wastewater treatment plant. The plant, to be operational by late 1993, is to clean out chemical wastes and sludge to rid the plant of a major sources of air pollutions — the sludge in Dynagen's 165 acres of solar water-evaporation ponds.

"I would like to get this resolved faster," Gorman said Tuesday, "but a lot of these (improvements) are long-term projects."

While litigations continue and while Dynagen does groundwork on its new wastewater treatment plant and on sludge removal from its solar ponds, both Dynagen employees and downwind neighbors of Dynagen are concerned about Dynagen's operations and impact on the community.

Peggy Curry, a 36-year-old mother of six children, said that she is eager for "them (Dynagen's powers) to clean up their act, because if they lived in the neighborhood, they would want the same things themselves."

Mrs. Curry said that she has experienced "headaches and nausea" from odors alleging emanating from Dynagen's solar ponds.

"They should do unto us what they would want done unto them," she said.

Freddie Sanchez, a 35-year-old maintenance craftsman who is president of the United Rubber Workers union at Dynagen, said that the pollution problems at Dynagen have been "blown out of proportion.

"I don't think it's an environmental thing they are after," Sanchez said. "It think it has turned into politics and greed."

Dynagen's principal attackers on the company's pollution problems have been TACB investigators in Odessa.

It is "definitely not the (Texas) Water Commission," said Sanchez. "I think they have been manipulated to getting involved by the (Texas) Air Control Board."

TACB's Carman, he said, "has got a vendetta, I believe," against Dynagen.

Sanchez said that "it all goes back" to 1989 when Joe Mudd, then Dynagen's plant manager, once had denied Carman access to the plant.

"They were interfering with our investigations by not letting us enter and conduct inspections and take photographs and samples," Carman said. "If the plant had nothing to hide, why did they stop me from going into the plant?"

Carman said Mudd had tried to dissuade him from citing Dynagen with violations.

The Texas Clean Air Act calls for civil penalties of up to $10,000 per violation per day.

"The only thing I have a vendetta against," Carman said, "is nuisance-air pollution. That's my vendetta. People have a right to clean air by Texas law."

Carman, however, denied that he was working out of vengeance but rather out of duty to the TACB based on air-pollution complaints, duty to the Texas Clean Air Act, and duty to the environment.

Under Tim Gorman's leadership, the company has "pumped million of dollars into modernization of the plant," Sanchez said. New crumb-rubber dryer systems have been added. Studies are under way to rid the ponds of an estimated 20 million gallons of sludge. Plans are underway to build the multi-million-dollar wastewater treatment plant.

The odor, that some have called an "obnoxious" stench, from the Dynagen plant has come from the solar ponds, which are "not toxic," Sanchez said.

"It's just foul smelling — just like what a stagnant pond would smell like."

Dynagen's treatment of the ponds has "cut down on the smell tremendously," he said.

Suspect in triple murder charged in 2 other slayings

FORT WORTH (AP) — A convicted killer charged in last week's slayings of a pregnant 10-year-old girl and her two great-aunts is a suspect in the December shotgun slayings of a woman and her brother, police said.

Edward Lewis LaGrone, 34, of Arlington, has been suspected in the double slaying for some time but evidence is insufficient to arrest him, said police Lt. Alvin Allcon.

"There are similarities in the offenses," Allcon said. "We are not going to comment on why he was a suspect or is a suspect."

LaGrone was charged with capital murder last week in the slaying of 10-year-old Keisha Lloyd. Officials filed two new capital murder charges against him Monday in the deaths of Keisha's great-aunts, 83-year-old Zenobia Anderson and 80-year-old Carola Lloyd, who was blind and deaf. All three died of shotgun wounds in the May 30 attack.

Police also charged him with attempted capital murder in the wounding of Keisha's uncle, Dempsey Lloyd, 48, in the attack.

Keisha's mother, Pamela Lloyd, and her two other children escaped from the house when the bloody rampage began.

Police believe the motive for the slayings was retaliation for the complaint to the police that LaGrone raped the 10-year-old girl and made her pregnant.

Ms. Lloyd said her daughter told her that LaGrone had sexually assaulted her for more than a year. Ms. Lloyd said her daughter was 17 weeks pregnant when she died.

LaGrone, who had once been a boyfriend of Keisha's mother, has been charged with raping the child.

LaGrone remained jailed Tuesday in lieu of $3.45 million bail.

In the earlier attack, a man with a 12-gauge shotgun burst into the Fort Worth apartment of Clifton Demerson, 39, on Dec. 29 and killed him and his sister, Mary Demerson Daniel, 40.

No weapon has been located in either case, but the December killings bear several similarities to the May 30 slayings, Allcon said.

Sexual assault allegations were raised in the earlier case, as well, Allcon said. He said LaGrone had once dated Ms. Daniel's daughter. There also were allegations that he had been sexually assaulting another family member, Allcon said.

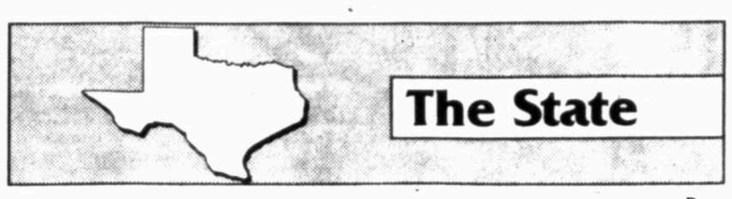

Police received a sexual assault complaint against LaGrone on May 25, alleging he had repeatedly raped Keisha. But he was not immediately arrested on that charge because of a heavy caseload, police said.

Pamela Lloyd said LaGrone offered her $1,500 on May 27 to drop the sexual assault complaint she had filed against him. Relatives say Keisha told them LaGrone threatened to kill her and her family if she told anyone about the sexual assaults.

LaGrone's attorney, Charles Baldwin, said LaGrone maintains his innocence.

"I think they're grasping at straws," Baldwin said of a possible connection between the two cases. "I don't think they have a great deal of evidence and they're trying him in the newspapers."

Baldwin filed a motion to force police to show what evidence supported the arrest and why LaGrone should remain in jail.

Children receiving rabies vaccinations

SULLIVAN CITY (AP) — At least three Rio Grande Valley children are receiving rabies vaccinations as a precaution after playing with a dead bat at school, health officials said Tuesday.

A total of 32 children touched the bat and all of their parents have been advised to consult a doctor about the possible rabies threat.

'You know how kids are with creepy, crawly things. They started playing with it and throwing it at one another.'

— Dr. Charles Wilson

The fourth- and fifth-grade students at Benavides Elementary School tossed the bat around the playground May 27, said Dr. Charles Wilson, head of the Hidalgo County Health Department. Wilson said a boy had found the bat and brought it to school.

"You know how kids are with creepy, crawly things. They started playing with it and throwing it at one another," Wilson said. "The school nurse found out about it and realized the possible dangers."

Bats can carry the rabies virus, which is fatal to humans when they are not vaccinated. In South Texas, there have been 24 confirmed cases of rabies in animals so far this year.

The bat was sent to the Texas Department of Health, but tests were inconclusive because the animal had been dead too long, Wilson said.

"So we don't really know if the bat was rabid or not," he said. "But with rabies you don't take any chances. It's 100 percent fatal. Once you get it you die."

The children's parents were notified in writing last Friday of the possible health threat. Benavides Elementary is in northern Hidalgo County in far South Texas.

If the bat had rabies, the deadly virus could have been passed to a child if dried saliva came into contact with a scratch or open sore, Wilson said.

But he added that even if the bat was rabid, the virus likely was not alive by the time the children got hold of the animal.

"Chances are, if you play the odds, none of the kids were probably exposed to rabies," he said. "But with something that's 100 percent fatal, you don't play the odds."

Wilson said three children began receiving the series of five injections on Monday. He did not have specific details about the children, except that one boy had an open cut on his finger when he picked up the bat.

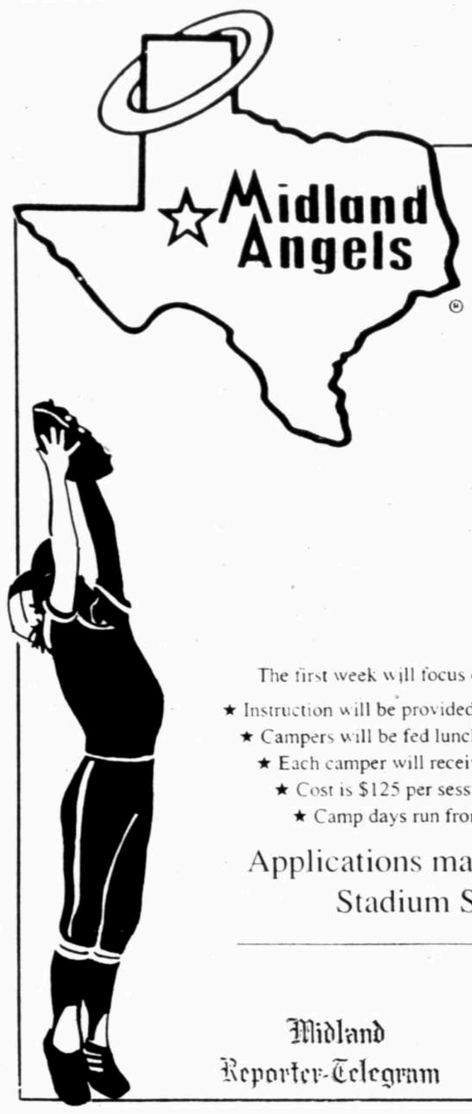

One child was being treated by a private doctor, while the other two were getting vaccines from the health department.

The series of shots cost between $300 and $400 for children. Wilson said parents unable to pay could get their children vaccinated for free.

"Those are the only three I know of. We haven't had a lot of calls," Wilson said Tuesday. "I think that most of them (parents) have determined that their kids weren't really exposed. We're not looking at a mass vaccination of all 32 children."

Unlike the old vaccine, Wilson said the injections generally are not painful. The gamma globulin injections are administered to the buttocks, while the actual rabies shots are in the arm. The shots are given over a month-long period.

In the past, a rabies vaccination consisted of 21 painful shots in the stomach.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 5, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: If you can consolidate the authority that has already been given to you, the coming year will be one of your best ever! Taking a serious, practical approach to your goals helps you make the right decisions in late fall. Self-employment activities can boost your income. Romance and a thoughtful mate enrich your life in December. Your desire to help other people will bring you new respect and popularity in spring of 1992.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: journalist Bill Moyers, actress Nancy Stafford, actor Robert Lansing, Mexican hero Pancho Villa.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Spending in moderation is fine so long as there always is something left for emergencies. Business enjoys favorable influences. Make career choices with total confidence.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Catch up on your phone calls and important paperwork. A desire to mingle more freely could come to the fore early this evening. Touch base with people who appreciate your unique talents.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Some of you could be coming into substantial funds soon. Avoid pointless arguments with family. It is time to "share and share alike"! Romantic fever climbs tonight. Protect your reputation.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Sometimes two people can enjoy each other's company better in silence. Too much conversation can be overwhelming. In family matters, be willing to make short-term sacrifices for long-term rewards.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Worrying over where your money is going leads you to manage it a bit more carefully. It pays to save. Return to your previous conservative habits. Romantic partner is supportive.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The direct approach is the surest way to solve a personal dilemma. Be imaginative when deciding how to cut expenses. A confidential deal promises you a special benefit or bonus.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Unexpected developments could cause you to change your whole game plan today. Your chances for a promotion depend on how well you concentrate on assigned tasks. Tackle chores one at a time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov.21): Creative thinking helps you introduce a new project with great fanfare. Final approval depends on how well you have done your homework. You enter a period of transition that will benefit your career.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Avoid taking any unnecessary risks now. Keep people guessing about your plans. Loved ones will protect your best interests. Save money for the future. Postpone buying non-essential items.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Deception is possible on the romantic front. A powerful physical attraction could blind you. Go all out to increase your earnings and establish a stronger position in business.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Join forces with those who support your ideas and concepts. Interruptions could hamper progress at work. Be certain your income is keeping up with the cost of living. Romance looks terrific this week.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Be more careful in your dealings with strangers. Someone who appears to be honest may be quite underhanded. Try to sidestep any unpleasant emotional confrontations. Plan a weekend retreat.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are bright, affectionate and hungry for approval. Concerned parents will shower them with praise. These Geminis' excellent memories make them good candidates for careers in law or medicine. Their keen sensitivity to other people's needs will endear them to their friends. Tolerant and forgiving, these children find it almost impossible to hold a grudge.

The bidding:

| 4 ♡ | Pass | Pass | Pass |

Opening lead: Four of ◇

When declarer has only one way to tackle the hand, he will either succeed or go down depending on the lie of the cards. A shrewd defender, however, can sometimes give declarer a choice of plays and, in those circumstances, even the best declarers rate to go wrong about half the time.

Despite an off-setting four-loser hand and four quick tricks, the South hand was far short, in terms of high cards, of a demand bid. An opening bid of one heart and a jump to game described the playing potential better, so South opted for that auction.

Since spades had been bid by North, West chose a diamond as the opening lead. Declarer tried the queen from dummy, then captured East's king with the ace. South crossed to the table with the ace of spades to lead a trump, covering East's ten with the queen and losing to West's ace. After cashing the jack of diamonds, West continued with a diamond. Declarer ruffed, banged down the king of trumps and, when the jack came tumbling down, declarer happily drew the last trump and conceded a club trick. Making four-odd.

It seems a normal enough result, yet one of the defenders made a possibly fatal slip. Did you spot the culprit and the misdeed?

It happened at trick three, when South led a trump from the board to the queen. West should have allowed declarer to win the trick.

This routine holdup would have given declarer the chance to go wrong. South could now play East for A 10 rather than hope the defender held J 10. Indeed, the Principle of Restricted Choice suggested that East's holding was the former. In that case, the way to land the contract would have been for declarer to continue with a low trump. As the cards lay, that would have resulted in down one.

L.A. police pull over Bradley for speeding in a city vehicle

LA MIRADA, Calif. — Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley has been cited for driving 20 mph over the speed limit while in a city vehicle, authorities said.

Bradley

Bradley was cited by sheriff's deputies for driving 60 mph in a 40 mph zone in La Mirada, about 20 miles southeast of downtown Los Angeles.

Bradley spokesman Bill Chandler said Monday that the mayor would not contest the citation. Bradley was traveling alone from a private event when he was stopped, Chandler said.

"Just like countless other conscientious drivers, Mayor Bradley neglected his speedometer for a moment," Chandler said.

The typical fine for such an infraction is $71.50.

NEW YORK — Regis Philbin and Kathie Lee Gifford have been named the new hosts of September's Miss America Pageant. But what of yesteryear host Bert Parks? Will he be back as a guest, as he was last year?

Maybe he will, maybe not, said Leonard Horn, board chairman of the Miss American Organization and executive producer of the 71st annual Miss America show that NBC will broadcast live on Sept. 14 from Atlantic City, N.J.

Plans still are being made for the two-hour show and "it's possible" the 76-year-old Parks will be on the show, Horn told reporters Tuesday.

Philbin is the fifth male host or co-host the pageant has had since its broadcasts began in 1954, but Parks is the best known host because of his longevity on the show.

He was host from 1955 to 1979. He was fired in 1980 for being too old, and was succeeded by Ron Ely. The firing touched off nationwide sympathy for Parks, and a letter-writing campaign organized by Johnny Carson.

Philbin and Gifford, whose syndicated talk show began in 1988, will succeed last year's Miss America hosts, Gary Collins and Phyllis George.

SAN FRANCISCO — Rock promoter Bill Graham is courting some of the biggest names in music to perform at a concert to benefit California's schools.

"No disrespect to the Kurds' problem and the Bangladesh problem, but the difference between jungle life and civilized life is education," said Graham.

Organizing a benefit for education is in some ways getting back to his roots. In 1975, with the help of Bob Dylan, Santana and the Grateful Dead, Graham raised $400,000 for San Francisco's school athletics programs.

His first benefit back in 1966 raised $16,000 to buy a school bus for a Berkeley alternative school. He also was involved with the Live Aid for Africa and the Amnesty International Tours benefits.

He launched his latest campaign on Sunday, inviting guitarist Carlos Santana, Jerry Garcia of the Grateful Dead, and Paul Kantner of Jefferson Starship to discuss the state of the schools with state educators.

Graham's plans call for a march on state lawmakers in Sacramento "as soon as possible," and a rock benefit in October.

SAN FRANCISCO — Oscar winner William Hurt will appear in the American Conservatory Theater production of "Good," playing a well-intentioned man who becomes a Nazi.

Hurt

The C.P. Taylor play opens at the Stage Door Theater next April and will be directed by Jack Fletcher, a Juilliard classmate of Hurt, ACT announced Monday.

Hurt, 41, won an Oscar as best actor for his role in the movie "Kiss of the Spider Woman." His movies slated for release later this year include "The Doctor," in which he plays a physician who becomes a patient.

NEW YORK — Triumphant after winning his third Tony Award on Sunday night, Hinton Battle walked from the Minskoff Theater over to the gala supper at the Marriott Marquis and was promptly refused entry.

Hinton, of "Miss Saigon," won for outstanding performance by a featured actor in a musical. But he had not received a ticket for the party given for the nominees and about 1,000 other guests.

A guard finally let him go upstairs to a reservations table after several guests recognized him. But Joel Wyman, head of security for the event, was unmoved. Pete Sanders, spokesman for Battle said, "By the time someone from the press office arrived, he had walked out."

The actor said he did not want to discuss the incident. Guests arriving at the same time said that Battle received a rude reception. Tony officials said Monday that they did not know how the omission occurred.

"I know that Mr. Battle had an unpleasant experience, and I'm very sorry about that," Wyman said Monday.

'Chefs' cookbook geared for broad audience

HYDE PARK, N.Y. (AP) — The last 20 years have brought dramatic changes to the ways Americans think about food, cooking and dining out.

From the first flurry of excitement over "all things Italian" to the current love affair with "spa cuisine," the choices facing anyone who loves to cook and eat have never been more interesting or varied.

However, for those who learned to cook when fresh vegetables were an exception — and fish was served in sticks — this can be an exciting but bewildering time.

The latest edition of "The New Professional Chef" by the Culinary Institute of America (Van Nostrand Reinhold, $49.95) is designed to demystify contemporary cooking — and to help people become better cooks. It demonstrates how the trendiest new dishes and the most classic preparation techniques have their roots in the fundamentals of cooking — fresh ingredients and sound techniques.

"The New Professional Chef" has 700 recipes, 900 photographs, 80 color illustrations and 50 black-and-white illustrations. Charts are included on kitchen ratios, conversions of weights and measures, and seasonality of produce.

Tim Ryan, the Culinary Institute's vice president of education, says reading and using the 869-page book is "almost like having a chef drop by the house to lend a hand with dinner."

Among the chapters in the book: Fruits, Vegetables and Herbs; Poultry Fabricating Meats, Poultry, and Fish; Vegetable Cookery, which describes the steps involved in blanching and refreshing vegetables; and "Mise en Place" (advance preparation), which describes the techniques for cutting, mincing and "sweating" vegetables.

A recipe for Grilled Chicken Breast is just one of the dishes included in The latest edition of "The New Professional Chef" by the Culinary Institute of America.

The message stressed throughout "The New Professional Chef" is that recipes are guides that should be used with flexibility — and a focus on the freshest and most delicious foods available on any given day.

Once the freshest and finest ingredients have been acquired, they must be joined with the ideal preparation techniques to produce the best results from cooking, the Institute says.

Technique is what matters most.

"A chef isn't a walking encyclopedia of recipes," Ryan says. "He or she is someone who has learned the basics of how to roast, grill, poach, and to make baked goods and pastries."

Each of the chapters devoted to cooking techniques uses detailed descriptions — from the point of advance preparation, to the assembly of ingredients, and, finally, to the finishing touches.

A description of how to determine when foods are properly cooked, and how to evaluate the quality of finished dishes, is included in the book's explanations of each of the major cooking methods.

There are also step-by-step photographs and a short form of the techniques for quick reference. Several recipes are included for practicing the methods.

Readers will be able to test their knowledge with recipes for contemporary offerings as Red Pepper Coulis, classics such as Wiener Schnitzel or Yankee Pot Roast, or international favorites like Paella and Couscous.

Whatever the choice may be, the lessons in "The New Professional Chef" will enable the professional and dedicated amateur alike to use any recipe from virtually any source with confidence.

GRILLED CHICKEN BREAST WITH FENNEL

(Adapted from "The New Professional Chef")

Olive oil as needed
2 cloves garlic, crushed
½ teaspoon fennel seeds, cracked
Salt and pepper to taste
4 chicken supremes (4 boneless chicken breasts with the joint of one wing attached), or 4 boneless and skinless chicken breasts
4 teaspoons shallots, minced
1 tablespoon butter
2 cups fennel, cut into strips and blanched until tender
Pernod to taste
Salt and pepper to taste

For the marinade, combine the olive oil, garlic, fennel seeds, salt and pepper. Add the chicken; allow it to marinate briefly. Reserve the marinade.

Grill the chicken breasts over direct heat on high, basting it occasionally with the marinade, until done, about 3 to 4 minutes per side. If the chicken needs more cooking, it should be moved to a cooler section of the grill.

Cook the shallots in 1 tablespoon butter over low or moderate heat in a covered pot until they are translucent; add the fennel and saute until heated through. Add a splash of Pernod. Season the fennel to taste with salt and pepper.

Serve the chicken on a bed of fennel. Garnish it with fennel leaves, if desired. Makes 4 servings.

Notes: Celery, jicama, asparagus or cucumbers may be substituted for the fennel. Chicken supreme must be custom cut by a butcher at the market.

CONSUMING INTERESTS

Tiny Toons tumble in taste

By Linda Anderson

My kids l-o-v-e Tiny Toons, a new cartoon show whose heros look like younger, smaller versions of Bugs Bunny, Porky Pig, etc. (They aren't — they have their own names and their own personalities, but they sure do look like the older cartoon characters.) Evidently a lot of other kids like the new characters too, because a lot of non-cartoon products now feature Buster Bunny, Calamity Coyote, Furrball and all their little buddies.

Anderson

Take, for example, Tiny Toon Adventures breakfast cereal. (No, I'm not kidding. I guess if Barbie, Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles and Bill and Ted of Excellent Adventure fame can have their own cereals, so can Tiny Toons.) This corn, oats and rice cereal is made by Quaker.

Of course when my kids saw Tiny Toon Adventures cereal in the supermarket, they had to have a box. And of course we had to check it out for taste, price and advertising accuracy.

A 9-ounce box of the cereal, which is supposed to contain the usual "12 essential vitamins and minerals" that a lot of cereals claim to contain, cost $2.79.

Label advertising is more for Tiny Toons characters and their fan cards (included on the back of the box) than it is for the cereal itself. One bit of label advertising for the cereal showed two of the cartoon characters talking about the product. One, who looks like a tough guy, says: "Hey! There's not much Sugar in this Cereal!" The other, who looks like the Tasmanian Devil must have looked when he was younger and wore a propeller beanie, answers: "Yeah, but it's got more vitamins and minerals than a 1957 Chevy!" Well, there's no doubting the truth of that statement.

Other label advertising is a chart that shows that Tiny Toon Adventures contains 10 grams of sugar per serving, as compared to Honey Nut Cheerios (also 10 grams), Kellogg's Frosted Flakes and Lucky Charms (11); Fruity Pebbles, Kellogg's Raisin Bran and Trix (12); Froot Loops (13); Apple Jacks (14;) and Honey Smacks (16). Other label advertising was about Tiny Toons the cartoons, not the cereal.

The cereal itself was shaped like Ts, Os, and Ns, so each spoonful can spell out "TOON" if you want it to. Wow.

In the taste test, the cereal was a bust. After about one bowlful each, my kids didn't want to eat any more of the cereal. They didn't like the way it tasted. One adult who actually sampled the cereal agreed with the kids: "It tastes like Captain Crunch with NurtaSweet," he said.

The children love Tiny Toons and want to watch the show every chance they get, but the cereal was not a success at my house. I guess maybe the company should stick to cartoons.

Price listed is from a local supermarket. Price at other locations may vary.

Eat-all-you-want diet is healthy — honest

By Mary MacVean

NEW YORK (AP) — There can't be any diet around these days — for health or weight loss — that doesn't call for cutting fat. But a new study suggests that you can at least get your fill of everything else and still drop pounds.

Researchers at Cornell University allowed two groups of healthy women to eat as much as they wanted, with only the fat under control. One group ate a diet 20 percent to 25 percent fat; the other got 35 percent to 40 percent of their calories from fat.

After 11 weeks, the low-fat eaters lost 5½ pounds, twice as much as the control group.

"The fact that they found a difference is fairly powerful evidence. You would expect people would screw up and eat high-fat foods," said Dr. Richard L. Atkinson, associate chief of staff for research and development at the Veterans Administration Medical Center in Hampton, Va.

"What it means is that rather than count calories, the only — and it's not so easy — thing you have to do is to eat foods containing low fat," said David A. Levitsy, one of the study's authors and a professor of nutrition and psychology at Cornell. "Consume as much as you want and the necessary consequence is that you consume fewer calories."

WHAT'S BEHIND this is caloric density: A gram of protein or carbohydrate has four calories, while a gram of fat has nine. So, as Atkinson said, eating a pound of fat-free watermelon makes you feel different from eating a pound of high-fat cheesecake.

Levitsky said his research asks, "How long can you keep tricking the body" by providing it with fewer calories? It doesn't completely answer.

By the end of 11 weeks, participants had made up for 35 percent of the "missing" calories, according to the study, published in the May issue of the American Journal of Clinical Nutrition and funded by Bristol-Myers Squib-Mead Johnson and the National Institutes of Health.

Levitsky plans another study, to last up to a year, to find out whether the body's metabolic rate decreases with the calorie decrease, thereby slowing the rate of weight loss.

Health authorities have consistently admonished Americans that their diets are too fatty: Guidelines suggest a diet with no more than 30 percent of calories from fat. But while surveys show people know this, they are not eating as if they do.

"If I had to choose one thing, if you dramatically reduce the amount of fat in your diet, that covers a whole lot of other sins," Atkinson said.

Levitsky's advice: "Be aware of the fat content of foods, and try to minimize it. Don't count the grams of fat. Just choose the foods that have the lowest fat. Read labels. Minimize meat and meat products. Don't eliminate them, because then you'll crave it."

SUCH CRAVINGS — and denying them — contribute to Americans' inability to cut down on fat, Levistky said, despite awareness that too much fat contributes to obesity, heart disease, diabetes and cancers.

But in his study, because participants could eat as much as they wanted, they did not crave high-fat foods, he said.

"There was no specific craving for Haagen-Dazs ice cream, as opposed to the low-fat ice cream that was available," he said. "As long as you keep yourself satisfied with a reasonable volume of food, and let your body determine how much you want to eat, there are no specific desires."

The study did not use foods made with fake fats. Both groups ate the same menus, with one group getting low-fat versions. Menus included cookies, muffins and pizza, among other foods.

The low-fat group ate about 250 fewer calories a day than the control group's 2,000 or so calories.

The 13 participants were assigned to one of the two food groups for 11 weeks, and after a seven-week "cooling off period," the groups were switched. They ate only food from the Human Nutrtion Research Unit at Cornell, but could eat when and how much they wanted. Food intake was carefully monitored, and participants were asked to maintain their usual exercise levels.

"The results are reasonable, and they're consistent with what other people have proposed and what has been shown in rats," said Karen Segal, an associate professor at Mount Sinai Medical Center in New York.

LEVITSKY SAID he did not test his theory on himself, because he already eats very little fat. "Being a vegetarian helps," he said.

You'd like a rich dessert

But you're watching calories and fat.

Here's a frappe that fills the bill:

1. Place in a blender or food processor: ½ medium banana, 1 cup skimmed milk, ½ teaspoon vanilla, ½ tablespoon carob powder and 4 ice cubes.
2. Hold down lid and process until the mixture is thick and frothy, about three minutes. Pour into tall glasses. To your good health.

Research center devoted to study of food safety

CHICAGO (AP) — Researchers are working on ways to make fish last longer in the store, to detect toxins better in chicken and to package food safely in recycled plastic at a new center for food safety.

The National Center of Food Safety and Technology, sponsored by two universities, 33 corporations and the federal government, houses 30 government researchers on the campus of the Illinois Institute of Technology, said Isabel Wolf, center spokeswoman. Two professors have been hired to teach a master's program in food safety beginning this fall.

"We need to understand the new relationship between packaging and the food it contains," David A. Kessler, commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration, said.

Kessler said the government should help industry as much as it can.

DEAR ABBY

Career in modeling is out of reach for petite teen

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My daughter, "Amy," is having a terrible time because although she is a beautiful girl, she's short. At 17, she's only 5 foot 1 inch, and she feels as though she is being left out of the modeling world because the agencies will not hire girls her size. She feels less than beautiful, and it is hurting her self-esteem.

Van Buren

Do you know of any modeling agency that will take a girl of Amy's petite size? — AMY'S CONCERNED MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Your daughter needs to know that beauty comes in all sizes, and there are careers other than modeling.

I spoke to Nina Blanchard, owner of one of the top modeling agencies in the country, and she agrees with Amy, there is no market in modeling for a girl who is 5 foot 1 inch. (Even "petite" models are 5 foot 4 to 5 foot 6.)

Blanchard said: "Tell Amy to dry her tears and learn to act because there is no height requirement in acting or commercials. And the rewards are just as good and sometimes better."

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago, my boyfriend beat me up. He said he was sorry, so I gave him another chance. The second time it happened, I made him move out. A week later, he came after me.

Fearing for my life, I ran outside, thinking I was safe with so many neighbors around. (I lived in a mobile home park.) I was wrong. Nobody helped me.

He started beating on me, and I ran from trailer to trailer with him chasing me as I screamed at the top of my lungs, "Somebody, please call the police!" He caught me, knocked me to the ground and beat me unconscious. It was a summer day and everyone had the windows open. I was screaming so loud, I could have been heard a block away.

Abby, I wasn't asking people to risk their lives. I just wanted someone to pick up a phone and call the police. One neighbor even closed his door because my screams disturbed him! When I confronted him later, he said, "I didn't want to get involved."

I still have nightmares about that terrible experience — not the beating, but pleading for help while everyone looked the other way.

To make a long story short, I pressed charges against the man. He was put away for two years and ordered not to return to this community. — ILLINOIS VICTIM

DEAR VICTIM: I would like to believe that people are basically good, but there is too much evidence to the contrary to accept that theory. What a sad commentary on the nature of mankind.

"Man's inhumanity to man
"Makes countless thousands mourn!"
— Robert Burns, 1759-1796

What teen-agers need to know about sex, drugs, AIDS, and getting along with their peers and parents is now in Abby's updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Corporate, Banking & Business

Q. How does Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC) Insurance work and how much of my deposit is covered?

A. FDIC insurance is provided automatically through the FDIC by all member banks to their depositors. Each "insured deposit" in a member bank is insured for up to $100,000. An insured deposit does not mean an amount in a single account. It means any funds on deposit at a single member bank held in the same capacity and the same right. This means that all deposits by one person in one FDIC- insured bank in his own name and for similar purposes may be combined for FDIC purposes. Individual accounts may be combined, but joint accounts may not be attributed to any joint account party's individual deposits. Joint accounts may be combined if thereare multiple accounts with the same joint owners. Additionally, Individual Retirement Accounts (IRA'S) and Trust accounts are not combined with an individual's accounts.

Family Law

Q. My ex-spouse has refused to give me my children time and time again for my holiday visitations. Is there any solution to my problem?

A. Section 14.51 of the Texas Family Code provides one way to help secure compliance with a court order for possession of a child. It provides that if a person under court order refuses access or possession to a child on two or more occasions, the court, after notice and hearing, may order the person to execute a bond or deposit security with the court, said bond or security deposit being conditioned on compliance with the court order permitting possession of the child. The bond or security shall be made payable to the person entitled to possession of the child.

The court, after notice and hearing, may forfeit all or part of the bond or security deposit upon proof that on one or more occassions the person has violated the court order for possession of the child.

Estate Planning And Probate

Q. If I live in Texas and own oil and gas properties in New Mexico and Oklahoma, does my Will effectively transfer title to my New Mexico and Oklahoma properties upon my death?

A. Upon your death, your Will must be admitted to probate in Texas in order to pass title to your real estate located in Texas. However, a Will probated in Texas has no legal effect on real estate, including oil and gas, you own in other states. As a result, the Will must also be probated in such other states. This is known as ancillary probate. Ancillary probate can be expensive and result in delays in the transfer of assets to the beneficiaries named in your Will. Several estate planning techniques are available to avoid ancillary probate. You should consult your estate planning attorney to determine whether you should consider implementing one of these techniques.

Wrinkle Cream Great Success

Millions of jars of the exciting EB5 Wrinkle Cream, developed by Pharmacist Robert Heldfond, have been sold to women who are reporting wonderful results.

Pharmacist Heldfond

His EB5 Wrinkle Cream is not only perfect for the woman who may already have the dreaded signs of looking older...crow's feet, facial lines, dry skin, and other symptoms of aging skin...but is also perfect for the woman who may only have a few lines and is worried about looking old too soon.

EB5 acts like five creams in one jar...a Wrinkle Cream (to help facial lines appear smoother), a Moisturizer, a Day Cream, a Night Cream, and Makeup Base... all in one. Your skin will feel marvelous: softer, velvety and younger looking.

If you feel that your skin is appearing to age too quickly, go into the cosmetic department of JCPenney and buy a jar of EB5 Wrinkle Cream today.

A GIFT FROM PHARMACIST HELDFOND

NEW! EB5 FOOTCARE BALM

Pharmacist Heldfond realized that when your feet hurt you feel miserable all over. That is why he developed his new EB5 Footcare Balm. "I worked years on my feet filling prescriptions and my EB5 Footcare Balm made my feet feel wonderful, helped my calloused, sore feet, and left them feeling soft and refreshed! Try my EB5 Footcare Balm. You will love it!"

Beverly Shilling/Reporter-Telegram

Stephen Canon, Midland High School valedictorian, and Amanda Lee Clausen, MHS salutatorian, both have hopes of eventually attending medical school.

MHS seniors look toward medicine

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Midland High School's two top graduating students have set their mortarboards on attending medical school.

Stephen Canon, the MHS valedictorian, is planning on attending Texas A&M University and majoring in biochemistry.

"Midland has been really good to me, but I am looking forward to starting a new phase in my life and new challenges," he said.

Stephen said he sent off his fellow graduates with a few tips on goals and utilizing potential, something he is going to need to do to get through medical school in order to become a doctor.

"I really like science and biochemistry," he said, "I may not have much of a social life for awhile, but it will be worth it."

The graduate said, when not studying, he enjoys "playing sports, and fishing — which is kind of hard to do in West Texas."

His peer, MHS salutatorian Amanda Lee Clausen, plans on majoring in psychology at Austin College in Sherman before continuing on to medical school and a career as a neurosurgeon.

"I will be starting over at Austin College," Amanda said, and added that "starting over" was the theme of her address to graduating MHS seniors.

"Going to college is like starting over," she said. "You can't carry over your success. You have to reprove yourself and you have another opportunity to prove yourself if you didn't succeed in high school."

Amanda realized her penchant for science when she didn't get squeamish dissecting rats in sixth grade science. "The nervous system was my favorite part," she said.

The graduate has garnered numerous scholastic honors during her academic career. She said she is ready to apply herself to her studies, including four or five years of medical internship.

"I didn't get tired of school," she said, "probably because I was involved in church, school choir, and other activities. If all I did was school, then I might get tired of it."

Amanda has been a member of the National Honor Society for two years, a competing member of the 1990-91 Academic Decathlon Team and was recognized for her outstanding academic record by the Lions Club. She was named Girl of the Month by the American Association of University Women and National Presbyterian Scholar. She was a member of Latin Club, the MHS Drill team in 1988-89, the All-Region Choir and Area Choir.

The graduate was also a member and spokesperson for the Gold 'n' Glory pop ensemble. She competed in the Junior Classical League vocal competition and was named Outstanding Junior in Latin Award in 1988-89.

She has received superior ratings in solo and ensemble competitions, and is active in church youth group activities for Trinity Presbyterian Church. Her church activities include participating in both adult and youth choirs, serving on the PCE Search Committee (which searched for an associate pastor/director of education) and has served on the Synod Planning Team, a national planning team for summer conferences.

Stephen is a Midland College Top 5% Scholarship recipient. He was named Outstanding Senior in Honors Biology II, and United Interscholastic League Scholar. He was president of the National Honor Society, Spanish Club Top Dawg and MHS Easter Seals president.

The graduate received the Presidential Academic Fitness Award, the Principal's Leadership Award, the Bausch & Lomb Honorary Science Award and academic award letters for four years.

He is a member of the National Model Organization of American States General Assembly, Student Council, Fellowship of Christian Athletes, Young Life,

Lee High School valedictorian Monita Poudyal and Todd Giese, LHS salutatorian, have long records of achievement from their high school days.

LHS' top graduates plan medical careers

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

The top seniors at Lee High School both have elected to make their marks in the medical field.

LHS valedictorian Monita Poudyal said her enthusiasm for biochemistry was the deciding factor in choosing to attend Baylor University in the fall.

"I'm taking pre-med and plan to attend medical school later," Monita said.

Todd Giese, LHS salutatorian, is already attending a biomedical summer program at M.D. Anderson Cancer Center in Houston. He plans to major in biochemistry at Rice University in the fall.

Monita said that weathering controversial issues during the year at LHS taught her the importance of student involvement.

GHS students set high ideals

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Greenwood High School's two top students said that living in a small rural community has taught them the importance of small town values, such as keeping their priorities straight.

Jennifer Strait, GHS valedictorian, said her commencement address focused on "applying wisdom to knowledge and setting proper priorities in life."

"For example, if I had a certain project due before another, I knew which one should be done first," she said. "If I have a commitment to babysit, and a party comes up that I want to go to, then I better stay with the prior commitment."

Jennifer's future commitment is to earn a degree in accounting and business administration at Lubbock Christian University.

Then she plans to become an accountant, or pursue a career in banking or finance.

Fellow graduate and GHS salutatorian Joe Burnett has set his sights on succeeding in the field of pharmaceutical law.

"I plan to major in pre-pharmacy at Angelo State University," he said, "then transfer to Southwestern Oklahoma State University in Weatherford, Okla., to get a bachelors of science in pharmacy."

After earning his bachelors degree, Joe said he plans to enroll in law school and pursue an education in patent law. "I would like to specialize in patent law. Both fields — pharmacy and law — interest me."

Like his peer, Joe's priority in life is to adhere to high ideals.

In his salutatorian address, he advised his fellow graduates to "always remember you answer to God first, your conscience second and everyone else last.

"And knowing this, stand firmly in what you believe. Never compromise your integrity. It's the only thing you can really control in your life. No one can take it from you," he said.

Jennifer and Joe each competed in United Interscholastic League competitions during their academic careers.

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

Valedictorian Jennifer Strait and salutatorian Joe Burnett pause for a moment outside Greenwood High School during the final days of the school year.

Jennifer said she drew a topic and had 30 minutes to prepare a speech on the subject she drew. Her challenge was to verbally expound upon "the event which most characterized the '80s."

She won first place for her speech which focused on the rescue of Midland's Jessica McClure from a backyard well.

"I talked about how everyone joined forces to help — how it became a worldwide event," she said.

Joe was a regional qualifier in the UIL Ready Writing competition for his persuasive essay against gun control restrictions. "We drew a topic and chose to write an essay for or against the topic," he said. "It wasn't a question of being right or wrong, but of how persuasive you were."

Both graduates said they will be living outside of their homes for the first time.

"This will be my first time leaving home," Jennifer said. "I have been living in Greenwood for 13 years."

"Being away from my parents will be an adjustment," Joe said, "but I am ready to make it."

Jennifer received the Optimist Youth Appreciation Award, the Rotary Youth Leadership Award, the Greenwood Academic Achievement Award, the Rotary Youth Merit Award, the ACT Excellence Award, and the Hugh O'Brian Youth Leadership Award.

She was named Daybreak Rotary Club Student of the Week and Outstanding Student in World Geography, Honors Algebra II, and English I.

She received several superior prose awards in the Angelo State University Foreign Language Festival and several superior piano duo awards in the Duet

LHS: Valedictorian says she's learned involvement important

(From 1D)

In her valedictorian speech — which drew its theme from Plato's quote, "The unexamined life is not worth living" — she examined two issues which were important to LHS seniors this past school year.

"I spoke about the Confederate flag issue and the U.S. crisis in the Persian Gulf," Monita said. "Even though they were controversial issues, students shouldn't be afraid of expressing their views, writing editorials and attending school board meetings."

The graduate said she attended several school board open forums and board meetings concerning the Confederate flag issue.

Todd said the theme of his salutatorian address was taken from the quote, "He who would leap high must take a long run."

Todd, the former editor-in-chief of the high school's newspaper, is leaping from journalism to a career in medicine.

Although his academic background has prepared him for both fields, he said, "I have always been interested in science and I am better at it than journalism." He said his sister, a recent Texas A&M graduate, is planning to be a high school science teacher.

"I have been preparing myself for 13 years to take this leap," Todd said.

"I think college will be a continuation of high school," Monita said. "But we will be much more independent and responsible in college for the choices

GHS alumnus returns from gulf in time to see brother graduate

Staff Report

One Greenwood High School graduate received a surprise during the recent GHS graduation ceremonies.

When Eric Gladish received his diploma there was a special person in attendance.

His older brother, OS3 Michael Gladish, a Greenwood alumnus, made a surprise appearance. He had just returned home from the Gulf War aboard the U.S.S. Okinawa now stationed in San Diego, Calif., where he will return in a couple of weeks.

The family had not seen Michael since before the war started.

He flew home to surprise them on graduation night and to spend some time with Eric, who leaves later this month to join the U.S. Marine Corps.

Staff Report

The City of Midland Swim Team will be hosting the 1991 Texas Commerce Bank Summer Invitational Long Course Swim Meet Friday through Sunday at the Doug Russell Pool on Midland Drive.

The City of Plano, the defending state champion team, will be at the meet as will strong teams from Round Rock and El Paso. In addition, teams from Odessa, Amarillo, Lubbock, Abilene, San Angelo and points in between are entered in the three-day, age-group competition.

The meet will be split into two sessions with swimmers 12 and under hitting the pool in the morning while the 13 and over grop will swim in the afternoons.

Long distance events will be held Friday night at 6 p.m.

Saturday's 12-under competition begins at 9 a.m. for the first session and the second session for 13-over swimmers will begin at 12:15 p.m. Sunday's schedule is the same as Saturday.

Hebert signs

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Disgruntled quarterback Bobby Hebert on Tuesday ended a 1½-year holdout and signed a contract with the New Orleans Saints.

The Saints called a news conference to announce the signing, which was confirmed by a team spokesman and by the quarterback himself.

Hebert, who sat out the entire 1990 season after demanding to be traded in January, signed a two-year contract with no option, according to reports.

The development threw the Saints' quarterback picture into chaos. The team traded with Dallas in 1990 for Steve Walsh, who started most of New Orleans' games last season and immediately was labeled the Saints' quarterback of the future.

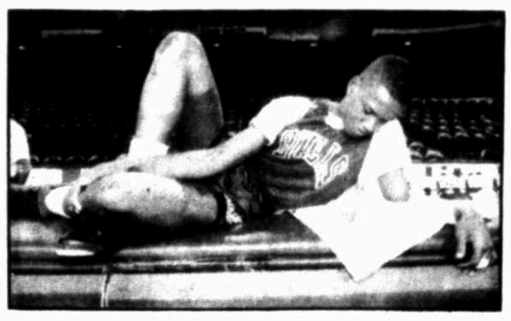

Hebert left the Saints practice facility on Jan. 3, 1990, and said he would never sign another contract with the team.

B.J. Armstrong takes his morning paper on the scorer's table before practice.

■ Los Angeles hopes it can translate its success on the road into a 2-0 edge over Chicago in Game 2 of the NBA Finals tonight.

Associated Press

CHICAGO — The Los Angeles Lakers believe they have the poise, talent and experience to win again tonight in front of the boisterous crowd at Chicago Stadium.

Reputed to have the loudest fans in the NBA, the Chicago Bulls saw their league-record 15-game playoff home winning streak snapped Sunday when the Lakers won Game 1 of the Finals 93-91.

How do the Lakers, 5-2 on the road in the postseason, avoid coming unglued in the face of all that hostility?

"We know that no one in the crowd can come on the floor and do something to us, so it's what the teams do on the court," James Worthy said. "Our mental preparation to play on the road is the key.

"The nucleus of the team, the core of us, knows what to expect. We try to use the hostile crowd as an incentive. The situation is not foreign to us."

The most experienced Los Angeles players — Magic Johnson, Worthy and Byron Scott — learned a lot about playing on the road in three Finals against the Boston Celtics and the mystique of Boston Garden.

"The building doesn't make the game," Worthy said. "The fans and atmosphere make the game. Some of the most fun games are on the road."

Vlade Divac, the Lakers' second-year center from Yugoslavia, is playing in his first Finals, but said European basketball prepared him for places like Chicago Stadium.

"The crowds in Europe are crazier than here," Divac said. "They throw everything on the floor there, even chairs. Winning on the road is easier here, even in Chicago."

"We've been successful on the road because we're totally focused," guard Byron Scott said. "We don't listen to anyone saying what we can and can't do on the other team's floor."

Magic Johnson, who had 19 points, 11 assists and 10 rebounds in the opener, said his mental preparation is much different for road games than home games.

"As a point guard, I have to control the situation more on the road," Johnson said. "Every turnover, every possession, is more important on the road because every mistake is magnified by the crowd. Since I'm the leader of the team, I have to remember all those things."

Even if the Lakers lose Wednesday night, they would have a chance to win the best-of-7 series with three consecutive victories at home.

Bulls put on brakes

Associated Press

CHICAGO — It worked for the Los Angeles Lakers. Now the Chicago Bulls will try it.

The Bulls, trailing 1-0 in the NBA Finals, plan to use Los Angeles' formula of controlling the tempo, establishing a post-up game and forcing the opponent to shoot from the outside.

Those were key factors in the Lakers' 93-91 victory Sunday. Game 2 of the best-of-7 series is Wednesday night in Chicago.

"They sagged and made us take outside shots," Bulls forward Horace Grant said. "We have to do the exact same thing to them."

Those are tougher than the high percentage inside shots Los Angeles thrived on in the opener. More misses mean more chances for defensive rebounds that can generate the running game the Bulls prefer.

Chicago had trouble hitting their outside shots even when they were open Sunday. Guard John Paxson, a strong perimeter shooter, made his first two, then missed four of his last five.

He's a better shooter when the Bulls are running. But with Magic Johnson orchestrating the Lakers' deliberate offense and getting the ball to teammates for good shots, speeding up the tempo won't be easy.

"Hopefully, they'll miss some shots and we can rebound and run," Paxson said, "but if Magic has the ball in his hands, he's great at doing what he wants and getting it to people who can score.

"Maybe we'll press a little bit more and try to make other (Lakers) make decisions on the run and get it more of a frenetic pace."

Brevard CC leads early

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

Brevard college took advantage of ideal weather and course conditions to take a four stroke lead after one round in the National Junior College Athletic Association golf tournament Tuesday at The Club at Mission Dorado.

Brevard, of Cocoa, Fla., shot a 3-over-par, 291 on the par-72 course. Host Midland College, the country's No. 1 ranked JUCO team, and Central Alabama Community College, ranked No. 2, were four shots behind and tied for second after the first 18 holes. Florida Community College, Navarro College and Scottsdale Community College stood in a three-way tie for fourth, each knotted at 296.

"I actually thought somebody would shoot par today," Brevard coach Floyd Horgen commented after his team's opening round performance in rare wind-free conditions. "We've been playing really well, though, in the last couple of months."

Brevard Community College is ranked No. 3 nationally in the latest coaches' poll.

First round jitters may have caused Midland College to come out of the gates as slowly as it did. MC's four freshmen — Darren Eckhardt, J.C. Hernandez, Shaun Bishop and Steve Armstrong — combined to shoot 13-over par on the front nine. The medalist-leading play of sophomore Andrew Coltart, who shot a 69, and the back-nine shooting of the entire team kept the Chaps in strong contention.

"I think our freshmen may have been a little nervous," MC golf coach Delnor Poss said. "We got off to a terrible

Tarkanian's time nearly up

■ Nevada-Las Vegas' embattled coach will reportedly be allowed to stay just one more year.

Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Jerry Tarkanian, known for his winning ways and his bitter battles with the NCAA, will leave UNLV after next season, sources close to the school's basketball program said.

Three sources who spoke on the condition of anonymity said Tuesday that a deal had been worked out with Tarkanian in which he would coach only one of the two years remaining on his contract.

Tarkanian

Tarkanian denied a deal had been finalized and said he planned to meet "in the next day or two" with UNLV president Robert Maxson to discuss his future.

The Nevada Regents met for five hours with Tarkanian on Monday at his request, then later said Maxson had full authority to handle the Tarkanian matter.

"I'm very torn up inside," Tarkanian said of recent problems, including the publication of photos showing three players on his 1990 national championship team with a convicted sports fixer.

Sources said in interviews with The Associated Press on Tuesday that keeping Tarkanian for another year will allow UNLV "an orderly transition."

"It will allow the university to go out and hire a big-name coach," said one source. "If you do something quickly, you

San Antonio deflates Angels

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

Dennis Springer shucked the kid gloves and came at the Angels with bare knuckles Tuesday night, and most of his blows were effective.

Springer, San Antonio's veteran knuckleballer, got plenty of help from a supporting cast that pounded out 17 hits.

■ California signs Valenzuela to big league contract/4E

But he didn't need nearly that many.

The Angels managed just six hits off Springer through 8⅓ innings, and the Missions began this six-game series with an 8-1 victory at Angels Stadium.

The Missions' success put a damper on Midland's triumphant return from a 7-3 road trip, and it made a loser of Don Vidmar (4-1), who had won all four of his previous starts in the Texas League this year.

The Angels entered the game as one of the hottest teams in the TL with a 14-6 record in their last 20 games, but those wins came against meager hitting teams in the Eastern Division. San Antonio is in last place in the West, and the Missions are looking over third-place Midland — which they suddenly trail by just 2½ games — with greedy eyes.

"We played well against a couple of teams in the other division, but now we're playing in our division and every game will determine a game one way or the other in the standings," Angels skipper Don Long said.

"I thought his (Springer's) knuckleball was sharp. For the most part he threw it for strikes, but we'll have to play better because our next 11 games are with clubs in our division."

Robinson takes job

BALTIMORE (AP) — Frank Robinson, fired last month as manager of the Baltimore Orioles, will be back with the team Monday as an assistant general manager.

"We're pleased that Frank will continue to be an important member of the Orioles family," Roland Hemond, executive vice president and general manager, said Tuesday.

Robinson was on vacation and could not be reached for comment.

Ed Keating, his Cleveland-based agent for about 15 years, said Robinson would take a pay cut.

"I don't want to get into salaries, but obviously he's not going to get paid at the same level he was as a manager," Keating said.

"That's not to say his responsibilities won't be as great. It's simply that the compensation levels for baseball executives for the most part at the assistant general manager level do not match up with those that a major league manager receives."

Robinson's contract stipulated he would become assistant general manager in case he was removed as manager. Negotiations between Robinson and the team focused on defining his duties more than on money.

Becker sweeps Chang

Boris Becker sets in for a backhand against Michael Chang Tuesday at the French Open.

Associated Press

PARIS — Mixing power and clay-court finesse, Boris Becker overwhelmed former champion Michael Chang in straight sets Tuesday to set up a French Open semifinal showdown with Andre Agassi.

Becker complemented his booming serve-and-volley game with steady baseline play to defeat the 1989 champion 6-4, 6-4, 6-2 and reach the semifinals for the third time in five years.

Agassi needed only 75 minutes to demolish Jakob Hlasek 6-3, 6-1, 6-1, losing only seven points on his serve in the final two sets.

Women's third seed Gabriela Sabatini overcame two match points against Jana Novotna and won 10 of the last 11 games to earn a semifinal spot against defending champion Monica Seles.

Steffi Graf and Arantxa Sanchez Vicario will meet in Thursday's other semifinal.

Becker was nearly flawless as he continued to tailor his grass-court game to the slow clay. His serve was only broken once by Chang, one of the best service returners in tennis.

"It was perfect ... almost perfect," he said. "I knew from the beginning what I had to do. I had to put my strength — my power — over his strength, his legs. That's exactly what I did, from the first point on. As the match went on, it got better and better."

Chang, who beat Jimmy Connors and French favorite Guy Forget in two emotionally draining matches to reach the quarterfinals, said he was helpless against Becker.

"I think today Boris just played too well. He didn't miss a whole lot of groundstrokes," Chang said. "I don't think I did anything majorly wrong, I just think he played consistently. And when the shot was there he went for it."

Agassi won even more easily, capturing 14 of the final 16 games against Hlasek. The fourth-seeded Agassi, who lost in the final last year, took advantage of the Swiss player's repeated backhand errors.

"I think he had a lot more to do with the score today than I did," Agassi said. "He wasn't playing as well as he could. I was just keeping the ball in play. "He appeared to give my passing shots too much respect. He should have come in more and made me hit big shots rather than just returning the ball."

Hlasek, who prefers hard courts, was playing in his first Grand Slam quarterfinal.

HARRISON, N.Y. — The PGA Tour hit the off-button on its television monitors.

The controversial instant replay for pro golf tournaments is a thing of the past, Commissioner Deane Beman said Tuesday.

Beman said the Tour's Policy Board ruled unanimously "that the players be fully responsible for their actions and scores.

"This is very, very consistent with the way the game always has been played."

In effect, it puts the administration of the rules of golf and the calling of penalties back in the hands of the players themselves.

The action was fully supported by the game's touring pros, the great majority of whom have objected to the use of the instant replay for rules enforcement.

"It had to be done," said Jeff Sluman, who as a member of the players advisory council was at the board meeting.

"There was a very, very strong, universal feeling" on the part of the players, Beman said.

start, but the way we came back on the back nine shows how much character we have."

Hernandez summed up not only his round, but perhaps his four freshmen teammates' rounds as well: "It was 15 holes of the best golf I've played all year, and then three holes of nothing."

Eckhardt opened the day with three straight bogeys, but recovered to shoot 1-under for the final 15 holes to finish at 2-over, 74.

"We started off pretty ordinary," Eckhardt said. "We're not that bad at the start usually.

"But it's a four day tournament. All you really want to do is stay close the first two days."

Coltart, who got just 4½ hours of sleep the night before the tournament began, was one stroke in front of Scottsdale's Chris Ferguson and McLennan Community College's Mikko Ratanen to head the medalist competition.

"It'll do considering I just got off the plane," Coltart said of his opening round 69 Tuesday at Mission. "I need a chance to catch up on my sleep."

Coltart had just returned to Midland Monday night from his home country of Scotland where he was competing for a spot on the Walker Cup team, one of amateur golf's highest achievements. Although teams won't be announced until later this month, Coltart said he felt he stood a good chance of landing a spot.

NJCAA tournament play continues today at 7 a.m. when full-scholarship, Division I teams tee off at Green Tree Country Club. MC is expected to tee off between 10 a.m. and 11 a.m.

Division II (partial scholarship schools) and Division III (non-scholarship schools) tee off at The Club at Mission Dorado starting at 7:30 a.m.

Hadelman finally gets ace

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

In last fall's Odessa College Invitational golf tournament, Central Alabama's Keith Hadelman stood perched in the 17th hole tee box at The Club at Mission Dorado, hoping to just get his tee-shot close to the pin.

In Hadelman's words, "one more turn of the ball" would have meant a hole-in-one on the par-three, 160-yarder.

Tuesday afternoon, Hadelman got that extra turn, to notch his first career ace.

"The biggest irony of it all," Hadelman said, "was last fall (at the OC Invitational), the same hole, same distance on it, same pin placement, same club, I lipped it out.

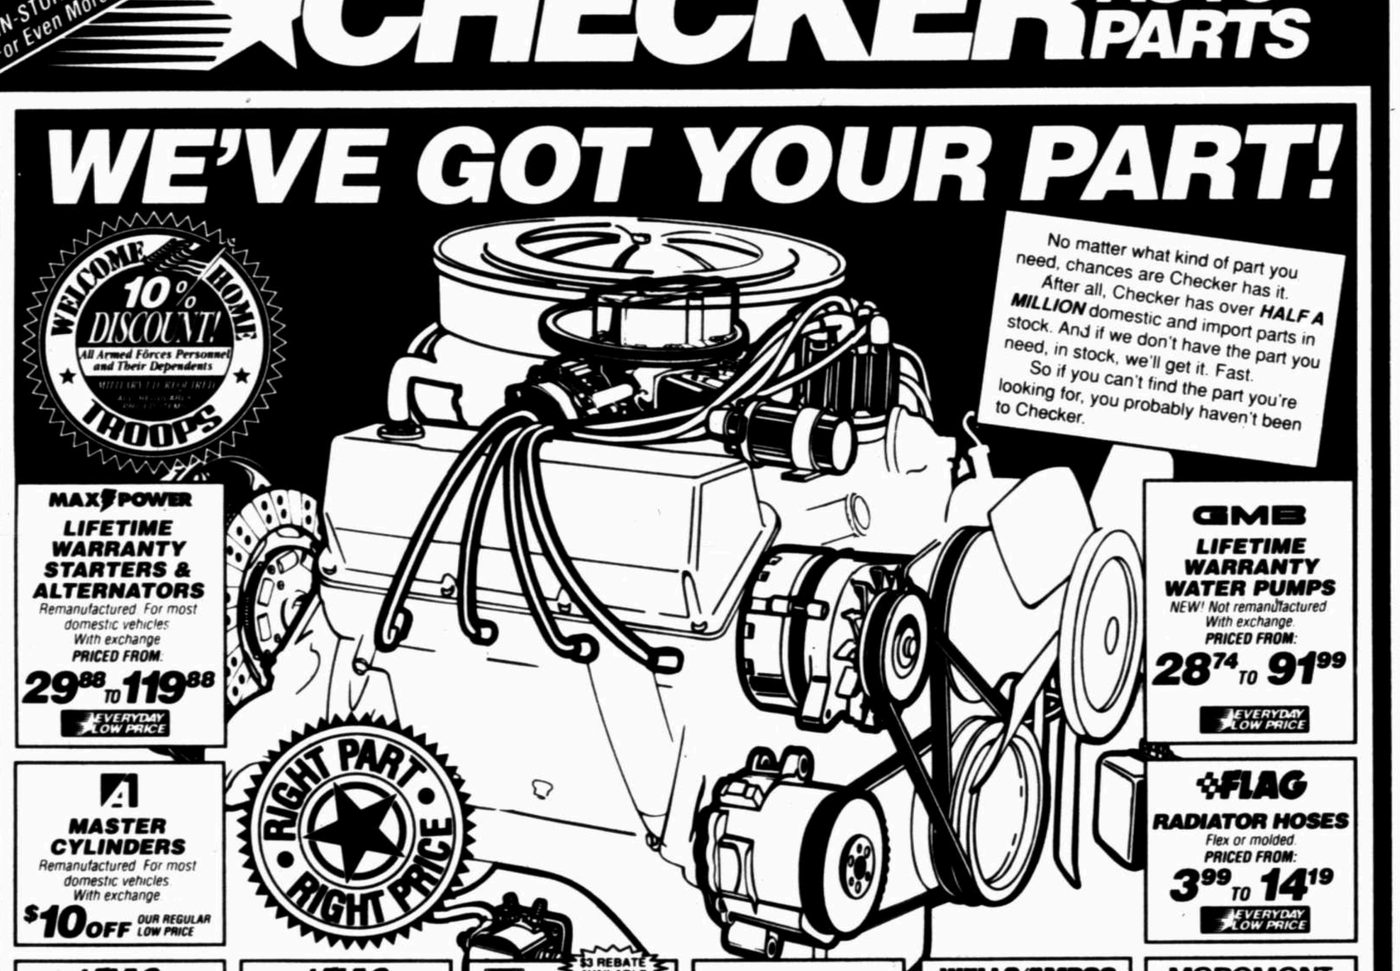

"It came this close to a hole in one," Hadelman added, holding up his thumb and forefinger less than an inch of space in between them.

Hadelman, who was two shots shy of top medalist honors after 18 holes at the NJCAA tournament, used an eight-iron again Tuesday on the hole — since it worked so well for him before.

Giants snap Buc streak

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Will Clark broke out of a slump by going 3-for-5 with a three-run homer and four RBIs and the San Francisco Giants ended Pittsburgh's nine-game winning streak by beating the Pirates 5-3 Tuesday night.

Clark ended Pirates starter Zane Smith's 16-inning scoreless streak with a homer in the first inning, then drove in the go-ahead run with a single in the fourth after Barry Bonds' two-run homer in the third inning tied the score. Clark was 3-for-36 entering the game.

HOUSTON — Tom Runnells got a victory in his first game as a major league manager as Delino DeShields hit a two-run homer to lead Montreal to a victory over Houston.

Runnells, who started the season as the Expos' third-base coach, was promoted on Monday after the Expos fired Buck Rodgers.

National

Padres 7, Cubs 1

CHICAGO — Darrin Jackson had two singles and drove in two runs in a seven-run second inning and Andy Benes pitched eight scoreless innings as San Diego defeated the Chicago Cubs for its fifth straight victory.

It was San Diego's longest winning streak since last Sept. 14-19, while Chicago's three-game winning streak was snapped.

Mets 4, Reds 2

CINCINNATI — David Cone allowed four hits and struck out a season-high 13 in eight innings to lead the New York Mets to a victory over Cincinnati.

Cone (6-3) allowed only a pair of unearned runs after overcoming a shaky first inning. The right-hander has given up just three earned runs in his last three starts.

Cardinals 3, Dodgers 2

ST. LOUIS — Milt Thompson, whose ninth-inning sacrifice fly cost Orel Hershiser his first victory in more than a year, tripled in two runs in the 11th to give St. Louis victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Hershiser, making his second start after a shoulder operation that sidelined him for most of last season, pitched the first 6 1-3 innings for Los Angeles, shutting out St. Louis on two hits before leaving with a tight hamstring and a 1-0 lead.

Braves 9, Phillies 5

ATLANTA — Tom Glavine won his seventh straight game to become the major leagues' first nine-game winner and Jeff Blauser drove in a career-high six runs as Atlanta beat Philadelphia.

OMAHA, Neb. — John Burke won the battle of All-American pitchers on Tuesday as his Florida Gators provided just enough help in a 2-1 victory over Fresno State and Bobby Jones in an elimination game at the College World Series.

The loss sends No. 8 seed Fresno State home with a 42-23 record. Florida (51-20) meets fourth-seeded Louisiana State (53-18) in one of Wednesday's semifinals. LSU is unbeaten in two CWS game, owning an 8-1 opening win over Southeastern Conference rival Florida.

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Fernando Valenzuela, hoping to recapture the mound magic he had with the Dodgers, will make his first start for the California Angels on Friday night.

Valenzuela, who did not allow an earned run in three appearances in the Angels' minor league system, will make his American League debut against the Detroit Tigers at Anaheim Stadium.

Vidmar, 4-1, allowed 10 hits and three earned runs in five complete innings. The Missions took a 1-0 lead on Brian Traxler's RBI single in the first inning, and following a pair of Traxler RBI doubles in the sixth and eighth innings, San Antonio had the final score in hand.

But lead-off man Eric Young was even busier than Traxler. Young was 4-for-5 with a pair of stolen bases and he scored twice, once on his second home run of the year.

Rangers sliding other way

Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Danny Tartabull returned from injury with a decisive homer, and Mike Boddicker again baffled Texas as the Kansas City Royals won 4-1 Tuesday night to end the Rangers' seven-game road winning streak.

Tartabull, in his first game since being hit in the hand May 27, broke a 1-1 tie by homering off Jose Guzman (0-2) in the seventh inning. The loss was the first for Texas on the road since May 11.

Boddicker (4-4) gave up four hits — all doubles — for his first victory since May 12 while raising his lifetime record against Texas to 13-4. He struck out four and walked two in eight innings, retiring the last 16 Rangers he faced.

Jeff Montgomery pitched the ninth for his 10th save.

Yankees 5, Blue Jays 3

NEW YORK — Mel Hall's run-scoring single snapped a sixth-inning tie, and Don Mattingly returned from an injury with a key homer as the surging New York Yankees rallied to beat Toronto.

Scott Sanderson (7-2) got off to a shaky start, but settled down and retired 11 in a row at one point. He gave up three runs on eight hits in 6 2-3 innings before John Habyan relieved. Steve Farr got the last three outs for his fourth save.

With the Blue Jays leading 3-0, Mattingly sparked the comeback with two outs in the fourth when he a 1-2 pitch from Todd Stottlemyre (5-2) into the right-field porch for his fourth home run and the Yankees' first hit. Mattingly had missed the previous six games because of a dislocated right pinky.

American

White Sox 4, Indians 1

CLEVELAND — Jack McDowell took the American League lead in complete games, and Frank Thomas had two RBIs as the Chicago White Sox ended Cleveland's four-game winning streak.

McDowell (6-3) allowed four hits while striking out eight and walking one in his fourth complete game. He was 0-1 with a 6.00 ERA in his previous four starts.

The 25-year-old right-hander did not allow a hit until Chris James singled in the fourth, and did not allow a runner past first until Brook Jacoby singled and advanced on a groundout in the fifth.

Mariners 8, Tigers 6

DETROIT — Henry Cotto hit a two-run homer and scored four times and as Seattle beat Detroit, handing the Tigers their seventh straight defeat.

The Mariners won for the fourth time in five games, and Brian Holman (6-5) got his second straight victory despite allowing six runs in 5 1-3 innings.

$20-barrel floor price 'gains steam'

Fee on imported oil 'crucial' to U.S. economy, Gephardt says

AUSTIN (AP) — Legislation to set a $20-per-barrel floor price for oil through an import fee is picking up steam in Congress, U.S. House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt told oil industry officials.

Gephardt, speaking to the Texas Independent Producers & Royalty Owners Association, also said President Bush's national energy strategy falls short of helping the economy or reducing U.S. dependence on foreign oil.

He said a fee on imported oil to set a floor price is crucial for the nation's economy and security.

"It's not hops or barley. It's a security asset. We need an energy policy in the United States that is in the self-interest of the United States on that national defense requirement alone," the Missouri Democrat said.

His comments Monday came before the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries opened its summer conference in Vienna, Austria.

The average price of OPEC crudes was $17.68 a barrel last week, after surging past $37 a barrel in October. The average for the year so far was $18.58 a barrel, compared to $22.26 for the same period in 1990.

Prices for light American and European crudes are generally several dollars higher.

OPEC agrees to hold output steady

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — OPEC ministers agreed Tuesday to hold oil production steady in the coming months, the Iranian oil minister said, a move that was aimed at raising prices during the high-demand summer season.

The minister, Gholamreza Aqazadeh, said all 13 ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries agreed to maintain a production ceiling at 22.3 million barrels a day in the July-September period.

The move, an extension of their cap in the April-June quarter, is expected to bump crude prices a bit.

The cartel currently produces about 22 million barrels of oil a day, but demand is expected to rise in the coming months as the sluggish world economy strengthens somewhat and summer demand for fuel grows.

Sadek Boussena, Algeria's minister of mines, opened the summer conference earlier in the day by making a pitch for higher crude prices, complaining the cartel had lost $7 billion in earnings because of low prices from April to June.

He urged them to take "appropriate decisions for the restoration of the $21 minimum reference price."

Prices retreat

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil futures retreated Tuesday, even though OPEC said it was maintaining a cap on production to try pushing the price higher this summer.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in July settled at $21.02 per barrel, down 11 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

The market had been lifeless for about a week as traders wondered what might come of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries meeting in Vienna, Austria. After the oil ministers adjourned, Iran said the cartel had agreed to maintain its production level of 22.3 million barrels a day into the third quarter of 1991.

OPEC hopes that will lead to higher prices as demand picks up, but the futures market did not go along with that line of thinking.

Oil futures eased on perceptions that U.S. supplies were rising, after they were propped up earlier by concerns that the oil ministers might come up with some kind of surprise action.

Natural gas futures were mostly lower. Gas for delivery in July settled at $1.329 per 1,000 cubic feet, down .4 cent.

After the oil market was closed, the American Petroleum Institute reported that supplies for oil and refined products were all higher for the week ending Friday.

The supply of crude oil was at 349.6 million barrels, compared with 347.2 million a week earlier and 384.4 million a year earlier. The supply of gasoline was at 213.2 million barrels, compared with 209.8 million a week earlier and 216.5 million a year earlier.

Gold prices were little changed from late Monday's levels.

The British pound gained against the dollar Tuesday, rising to $1.7000 in New York from $1.6970 late Monday.

The dollar fell to 138.85 yen in New York from 139.15 late Monday.

Highland stops paying bills; pulls out of Texas

PLYMOUTH, Mich. (AP) — Highland Superstores Inc., one of the nation's largest electronics chains, said Tuesday it has stopped paying its creditors and is closing 32 stores in Texas and New England to stave off bankruptcy.

Analysts said a saturated electronics market with few new products led the suburban Detroit-based chain to take the drastic steps. The company estimated it will have up to $70 million in restructuring costs for its second quarter.

Highland said in a statement that the move will allow the company to focus on its core markets in the Midwest, with 50 stores in Michigan, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois. Stores in Texas, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Rhode Island will close.

Company spokeswoman Danette Wineberg failed to return calls Tuesday.

The company announced it is trying to restructure its $79-million debt to banks and bondholders and has suspended payments pending the outcome of bank discussions.

But it warned that if restructuring efforts aren't completed in the near future, Highland could be forced to seek protection from its creditors under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code.

The company said it expects to report substantial losses when its first-quarter results are released later this month due to soft sales.

"What you're seeing is a continuation of the shake out of the industry that started three or four years ago," said Edwin Underwood, analyst for Scott & Stringfellow Inc. of Richmond, Va. "The product category is saturated. Consumer electronics sales have been relatively flat over the last few years.

"The bottom line is no new products."

Underwood said the closings will drop Highland's ranking among the major electronics chains.

"The group is being whittled down," Underwood said. "I think we'll get down to a number of players with strong enough balance sheets that will continue to be the dominating players."

Martin Brachstein, senior editor of Television Digest, a weekly consumer electronics trade newsletter, said Highland was expected to pull out of Texas or New England — but not both.

Levin seeks bigger shareholder voice on pay

WASHINGTON (AP) — Salaries of big-business executives are "spiraling out of control," Sen. Carl Levin said Tuesday as he introduced legislation to give shareholders a bigger voice in setting the pay of top company officers.

The bill would allow stockholder votes on salaries and other compensation of chief executive officers and directors. It also would require broader disclosure of pay packages.

Stockholders "ought to have the right to question inappropriate executive pay at their annual shareholder meetings," Levin, a Michigan Democrat, said. "After all, it is their money."

Levin is chairman of the Senate Oversight of Government Management Subcommittee, which held a hearing on the issue last month.

At the hearing, Graef S. Crystal, an expert on executive compensation, testified that the average chief executive at a major U.S. corporation receives 110 times the pay of the company's average worker.

By comparison, the top executive at a Japanese corporation earns around 17 times the pay of an average Japanese worker. In Germany, the gap is 23 times.

The typical chief executive of a major U.S. corporation, defined as having $1 billion or more in assets, earned $2.8 million in 1989.

Many companies gave their executives huge pay raises in the 1980s, even as their profits slumped and wages of hourly workers fell below the inflation rate, Levin said.

"It's one thing to have spectacular pay for spectacular performance," he said. "Yet we are witnessing huge pay for poor performance all over corporate America."

Executives' pay is not determined directly by shareholders but by the board of directors, who are elected by shareholders but often nominated by management.

The Securities and Exchange Commission hinders stockholders who want to put the brakes on executive pay, Levin said. Although SEC rules enable any shareholder with at least $1,000 worth of stock to obtain a vote on a proposal, they make an exception for pay issues.

An SEC spokesman declined to comment Tuesday. Linda Quinn, head of the SEC's Division of Corporation Finance, acknowledged at last month's hearing that the agency traditionally sees corporate compensation as exempt from intervention.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

ANALYSIS

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market settled at mostly mixed levels Tuesday after successfully absorbing a bout of profit-taking.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped 7.38 to 3,027.95.

But advancing issues evenly matched declining ones in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 789 up, 789 down and 507 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 180.46 million shares, up from 173.99 million in the previous session.

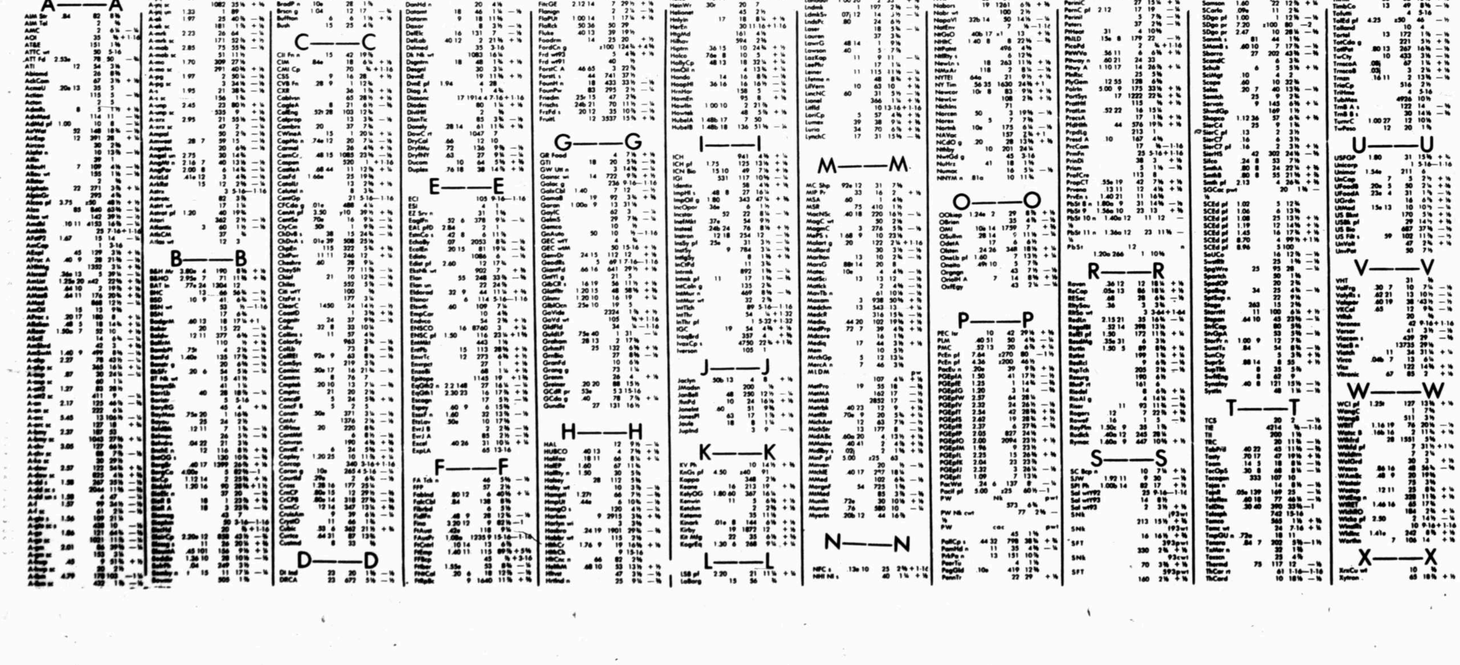

Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 220.04 million shares.

Stocks headed sharply lower on the opening bell, with the Dow losing about 25 points in a decline exacerbated by program trading. Prices stalled at depressed levels for most of the session until a late round of buying lifted the market from its worst levels.

Analysts were not surprised by the decline, considering the Dow had posted gains in nine out of the previous 10 sessions.

Activity in various industry sectors was particularly pronounced. Cyclical stocks — including technology, chemical, retailing, paper and steel companies —did poorly while non-cyclical issues like those of food and financial services companies recovered.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Grandpa did well with grandchildrens' assets

By Bill Doyle

Q. I purchased stock for my grandchildren when they were young. In each case, the shares were registered in my name, as custodian for a grandchild's name, under the gift to minors act of the state in which we live and the child's Social Security number was used. The dividends were used to buy U.S. Savings Bonds in their names.

Doyle

Now that all four are adults, I want to change the registration and turn the certificates over to them. The stocks belong to my grandchildren and never were mine. Do I have a problem?

A. None whatsoever. To date, you have administered the grandchildren's assets in your custodianship properly and well. Now, you can complete the chore by turning the stocks over to those young adults, as should be done when a former minor reaches the age of majority. The age varies from 18 to 21 in different states.

That transfer is handled by the transfer agent for each stock. You will find the transfer agent's name, correct address and telephone number in the company's annual report to stockholders.

Some transfer agents accept an affidavit from the custodian, stating the young person has become an adult. Others require a copy of the birth certificate or other proof of age before transferring shares out of gift to minors act registration into the former minor's name.

Phone the transfer agents to check that out. And send the certificates by registered mail, return receipt requested. Insure each mailing for 3 percent of the shares' market value. That will pay for the surety bond needed to obtain replacement certificates, just in case the original certificates are lost in the mail.

Q. My son and I have all our stocks and bonds as "joint tenants, with right of survivorship." I definitely want to avoid probate and one article I read said joint tenancy avoids probate. Another article said you cannot avoid probate, even with joint tenancy.

Which is correct?

A. The first article. Securities, real estate and other things in joint ownership, trust form and beneficiary form do not go through probate — the often time-consuming and expensive court process.

Unless the second article was way off the wall, I suspect you misunderstood it. More likely, it explained that things kept out of probate do not escape "death taxes." The federal government has an estate tax. All 50 states have estate and/or inheritance taxes.

If what you leave behind is large enough, those levies will be due. The federal bite starts on estates in excess of $600,000. But one spouse can leave to the other unlimited amounts free of federal estate tax. There's no way the death tax rules of all stocks can be crammed into this apace.

Q. You wrote the co-ownership form — two names, with the word "or" between them — can be used on U.S. Treasury and U.S. Savings Bonds and on most bank accounts. But you said it cannot be used on stocks.

Four years ago, when my husband passed away, I had the registration on all our stocks changed — half in my name "or" my daughter's name and half in my name "or" my son's name. The dividend checks are made out as each stock is registered. To me, this is co-ownership. Assuming I die first, the surviving co-owner automatically gets the stock. Either co-owner can cash a dividend check and either can sell the stock.

Is this right?

A. You are correct on two counts. Co-ownership provides conclusive right of survivorship. When one co-owner dies, the survivor becomes the sole owner.

Because the dividend checks have the word "or" between the two names, either can cash them.

However, selling stock registered that way could be a problem. Rules of the Stock Transfer Association prohibit registering stock in co-ownership form. Experts in that field say no transfer agent with an ounce of brainpower will register stock that way.

GEPHARDT: Legislation picks up steam in Congress

(From 5E)

strategy presented in February does not adequately address filling the Strategic Petroleum Reserve, which is needed to prevent price shocks.

He said that if the U.S. had used the reserve after Iraq invaded Kuwait last August, oil prices, which shot up for several weeks, may have remained steady.

Gephardt urged TIPRO members to support his legislation for a floor price for oil, and added that northeastern states, which typically fight proposals that could increase the cost of home heating oil, are starting to support the measure.

"I think we've got a good chance," Gephardt said. "People have begun to understand this issue better."

Stacey Smyre, chairman of TIPRO's energy policy committee, said the goals of Bush's energy strategy cannot be met without first stabilizing oil prices.

"The administration talks about goals but no way to get there. There's a bumper crop in the field and no truck to get it to market," Smyre said.

OPEC: New move is aimed at raising summer prices

(From 5E)

The average price of an OPEC basket of crudes was $17.68 a barrel last week, after hitting $37 a barrel in October. The average for the year so far was $18.58 a barrel, compared to $22.26 for the same period in 1990.

Prices for light American and European crudes are generally several dollars higher.

The ministerial agreement came after private bargaining over production levels in July, August and September. The OPEC emissaries had been expected to leave the overall production ceiling level unchanged at 22.3 million barrels a day.

In March, OPEC agreed to a voluntary 5 percent cut in production to keep prices from plunging in the normally weak April-June quarter.

OPEC Secretary-General Subroto said the group decided to put off until late September discussions on an output ceiling for the last three months of the year. "Waiting until September ... will give us a better feel for the situation," he said.

By then, the ministers should have a better idea whether Iraq and Kuwait, sidelined by the Persian Gulf crisis, will be able to pump oil for export in the October-December quarter.

Iraq's new oil minister, Osama Abdul Razzak al-Hiti, said Monday that his country could quickly boost its production from about 450,000 barrels a day to more than 1 million once U.N. sanctions are lifted.

An economic embargo was imposed on Iraq shortly after its August invasion of Kuwait. The prohibitions are to be eased over time as Baghdad complies with conditions spelled out by the United Nations.

Iranian Oil Minister Gholamreza Aqazadeh, whose country is the cartel's second largest producer, joined Boussena in complaining about weak prices.

He said the cartel would have to slash production to get prices back up. He said Iran would not accept a higher ceiling on output if it meant lower prices.

But Hisham Nazer, Saudi Arabia's influential minister, said the kingdom could not accept a cut in production. He said his country supported the reference price but not by "deliberate creation of a shortage" of oil in the world market.

MIDLAND, TX 79701

PART-TIME INCOME AVAILABLE
The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with qualified, responsible individuals.
OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?
Yes! Our current carrier force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a carrier, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a carrier?
Depending on the size of the distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!

How long does it take?
The actually delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carrier's choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?
6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

Do I ever get a day off?
The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!

RESERVE YOUR DISTRIBUTORSHIP NOW!
