Clergy Begged To Save Hauptmann

ADVISOR ASKS LUTHERANS TO HELP GERMAN

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 21—(U.P.)—Bruno Richard Hauptmann's spiritual advisor today appealed to Lutheran clergymen throughout the country to intercede in an effort to save the Lindbergh baby slayer from the electric chair.

A form letter to a "considerable number of ministers in the United States" was sent out by Rev. John Mathieson begging their aid.

Rev. Mathieson, who has talked to Hauptmann frequently, consistently has censured Hauptmann as innocent of the crime.

Although Rev. Mathieson was away today, it was said at his home the clergy were requested to give their "support as Christians" to the fight Hauptmann is making against execution.

Meanwhile sources close to Governor Harold Hoffman admitted that unless Dr. John Condon, chief witness against the carpenter, returns voluntarily to this country, little can be done to clarify "apparent discrepancies" in his story of the Lindbergh baby kidnapping.

Non-Union Men Defy National Guardsmen

AKRON, Ohio, Feb. 21—(U.P.)—Non-striking tire builders defied national guards today, marched into the Akron armory, and demonstrated against union picketing that has kept them from jobs in the Good-year Tire and Rubber company's three main plants for four days.

MANGUM, Okla., Feb. 21—(U.P.)—A negro suspected of the brutal beating of Mrs. Alice Wilson, 31, and her six-year-old daughter was reported shot and captured today by a posse of 300 citizens.

The capture was reported simultaneously with the death in a hospital of Alice Othello Wilson, the girl, who suffered head injuries when a negro entered the Wilson home yesterday, apparently with robbery as his motive.

Plows Rip Through Snow Mountains in Rescue Job

HIGHWAY PARK NYA JOB WILL OPEN TUESDAY

Plans have been made to start work on the improvement and beautification of a roadside park near the west city limits of Cisco on Tuesday. This is a National Youth Administration project and is being sponsored by the Texas highway department.

The park improvement work is a part of a county-wide program for improvement of existing recreation areas and facilities such as roadside parks, school bus stops, gravel school walk, all on state highway rights-of-ways. Federal funds for this project will total $1,684. It will employ 80 youths.

All youths between the ages of 16 and 25 years from relief families are eligible for this work. Heads of families who are working on WPA projects are urged to have their children register for this work.

In order to be eligible for this work youths must be certified by the Relief office and register with NRS. A representative from the National Reemployment service and a representative of the Employment division of WPA will be in Cisco at the Chamber of Commerce office all day Monday to register and assign youths to this project.

Youths are allowed to work 46 hours per month and will be paid from $1.33 to $2.00 per day for the six days work. Youths will be allowed to work the 46 hours in six consecutive days.

MALAYAN NUDISTS HONOLULU — (U.P.)—Existence of a Malayan nudist and religious cult here has been revealed by police. Two 35-year-old Filipino cultists who said they ate nothing but grass and honey were found in cave on the Waianae coast.

Through mountainous drifts, plows slowly sliced their way to free scores of stranded motorists in a near-record snowfall that accompanied sub-zero weather in a great area from northwest to the east coast, this scene near Algonquin, Ill., being a typical one of rescue. Rail and highway traffic was paralyzed, schools were closed, and blocked roads brought grave peril of fuel families in many communities.

CLOUDS HOVER OVER TEXAS AS COLD LEAVES

As the cold wave moves slowly out of Texas Friday farmers looked forward to much needed rain. The weather bureau attempted to do its part by predicting cloudy and warmer weather Friday night and Saturday.

Rain was falling in most portions of East Texas and along the coast but it was not of sufficient extent to do much good.

Amarillo continued to report the lowest temperature, with a reading of 22. Abilene had 28, with a misting rain falling. Dallas and Fort Worth had a trace of rain, with a temperature of 35.

DROUTH IN U.S. FORECAST FOR 3 MORE YEARS

SAN MARINO, Cal., Feb. 21—(U.P.)—The disastrous drouths of the past few years may be expected to continue until about 1939, if the "weather cycle" theory holds true.

After that, for a period of 10 to 20 years, they will become less frequent and less severe.

Finally, with the return of a normal cycle of moisture, American farmers can hope to have complete relief from drouth for a period of 150 years or more.

These are the conclusions of Halbert P. Gillette, who after years of scientific study of the "weather cycles," Gillette has become the American Meteorological Society.

Studied Tree Rings Gillette's final conclusions of the existence of weather cycles were based upon intensive studies of the tree-ring thickness of the giant Sequoias in California and the Arizona pine. Other contributing elements were found in the study of the annual silt layers, or varves, of ancient glacial lakes, and the time intervals between recessional moraines deposited in the last Ice Age.

In his ten-year study of weather cycles, Gillette has become convinced that all great wars and migrations are caused by climatic conditions. Italy's present war in Ethiopia, for example, he believes is the direct result of the fact that Italy has suffered the past few years from drouths the same as the United States.

Estimates Ice Age Date In his further research of the question of weather cycles, Gillette believes he has established the crest of the last great ice age which he places at 16,300 years, B. C. This, he says, was followed by a warm dry crest about 3,300 B. C., and there will be another Ice Age crest about 10,300 A. D., according to his computations.

Gillette, who was born in Waverly, Ia., was graduated from Columbia University, and followed the profession of mining engineers until he retired, 10 years ago.

SCHOOL TO BE OPENED TODAY FOR PATRONS

Open house was to be held at the Cisco West Ward school building this afternoon at 3:30, with all patrons of the Cisco schools invited to attend, according to Superintendent R. N. Cluck.

Workmen were to complete repairs on the building, which has not been used since last fall, this afternoon, so that desks could be moved back to the school Saturday. Cluck pointed out that patrons could obtain a better idea of the work on the school today than they could by waiting until Saturday or next week.

School officials said today that the pupils probably would return to the building Monday morning.

There still remains some work to be done at the school, Cluck said, including the laying of walks and beautification of grounds, but enough has been completed to allow pupils to move back to their regular classrooms.

Grades formerly housed in the West Ward had to be shifted to the grammar school, high school, and East Ward when work began on the building.

Work on the plans for repairs began last August 31. The seats were moved out of the building and actual repair work began on October 29.

Gonzales Begins Celebration Plans

GONZALES, Feb. 21—(U.P.)—Citizens have begun preparations for celebration of "Lexington of Texas Day" at the Texas Centennial Exposition in Dallas on next October 2.

Centennial officials at Dallas have designated the date for observance of the "first shot" of the Texas Revolution against Mexico, which was fired on Oct. 2, 1835.

Request that the city of Yoakum, 35 miles southeast of here, be allowed to participate in observance of Gonzales Day was made by Horace Wimbley, Sr., chairman of the Yoakum Board of Commissioners. City Manager L. W. Sheckles and other officials.

Other nearby cities were expected to join in representing Gonzales at the Central Exposition.

Cranberry Glades Opened by CCC Road

MARLINGTON W. Va., Feb. 21—(U.P.)—Cranberry Glades, West Virginia's scenic wonder which heretofore has been a veritable wilderness, is open to tourist travel through completion by CCC workmen of a road from Richmond, W. Va., through the glades, and on to Marlinton. Civilian Conservation Corps officials announce.

Cranberry Glades, situated in the high region of western Pocahontas county, in reality is only one glade, containing some 300 to 400 acres of dense forest which abound in game. Within the glade there are five open spaces. Each open space is separated from the others by winding, sluggish streams.

The area, known as the "wilderness of Pocahontas county," is drained by hundreds of clear, trout laden mountain brooks that flow into the Cranberry, Gauley, Elk and Williams rivers.

It is said there is no area of equal extent in West Virginia that is of greater importance for its influence on water flow than the Cranberry Glades which lay in an elevation of 3,400 feet above the sea and are surrounded by mountains rising from 1,000 to 1,500 feet.

Of never ending sources of delight to the tourist, and more so to the student and collector, are the varied forms of plant and animal life. Two thousand varieties of orchids bloom in colorful contrast upon the metallic sheen of the moss carpet. As many as 32 orchids have been counted in a square foot.

Progressive Demos Protest Miller As Head of Campaign

AUSTIN, Feb. 21 (U.P.)—Merman Wright, Amelillo, state secretary of the "progressive democrats of Texas, made public today resolutions protesting designation of Roy Miller, Houston and Corpus Christi, as director of organization and finance in the national democratic campaign in Texas.

Amazement was expressed at the choice because Miller's representing sulphur interests "Texas democrats of liberal sensibilities and Jeffersonian principles are shocked by this stunning blow to idealism," said the resolution adopted at an executive committee meeting yesterday.

They referred to Miller as a "lobbyist" opposed to progressive legislation.

The resolution suggested Miller be replaced by a democrat whose activities and affiliations will not "embarrass liberal democracy."

The Junior Chamber of Commerce, while a separate organization and affiliated with the state Junior Chamber of Commerce, will be working in cooperation and under the sponsorship of the Senior Chamber of Commerce of Cisco.

Murder Charge Is Filed After Fire

HOUSTON, Feb. 21—(U.P.)—E. D. Calvin, resident of a tourist camp was charged with murder today in connection with the death of Chambers Johnson, 28, in a cabin fire which also claimed his wife's life.

The charge was filed after officers received a report from a chemist that stains found on a pillow retrieved from the fire and on Calvin's overalls were caused by blood. Calvin told officers he made a fire in a stove and left for a few minutes. The building caught fire and Mrs. Calvin, 35, and Johnson, who lived with them, were trapped inside.

SCHOOLS ARE CLOSED, MANY CHILDREN ILL

(Copyright 1936 by United Press) WASHINGTON, Feb. 21—(U.P.)—Disease epidemics attributable to one of the most severe winters of the century caused stringent quarantines affecting communities throughout the entire nation today.

The federal public health service announced that spinal meningitis reached its highest prevalence in five years today as two Virginia towns and a surrounding mine county ordered rigid quarantine against it.

Influenza, pneumonia, and mumps forced universities in Mississippi, Texas and Ohio to close.

Public health authorities did not ascribe the meningitis directly to severity of the winter but pointed out in a warning to residents of affected communities that avoidance of excessive cold was one of the two primary means of avoiding it. The other is avoiding crowds.

Danger spots today were: Big Stone Gap, Va., and Appalachia, Va. — Schools, theaters, churches closed to halt meningitis.

Oxford, Miss. — University of Mississippi closed by influenza.

Starkville, Miss. — Mississippi State College closed by influenza.

Longview, Tex. — 1,000 of 3,400 school children, ill of influenza, pneumonia, or mumps.

Austin, Tex. — Schools closed since Monday by influenza 188 cases in University of Texas.

Coshocton Ohio — 1,500 ill of intestinal influenza, including 600 school children and 16 teachers; public schools closed.

Although influenza wrought many times more havoc than any other disease, federal authorities were most concerned over the prevalence of spinal meningitis, for which only partially effective treatments have been devised in years of study.

CISCO SCHOOLS ATTENDANCE BETTER

Superintendent R. N. Cluck this afternoon announced that the Cisco schools' attendance today was better than that yesterday, although there were a few more cases of mumps reported.

Yesterday 15 per cent of the enrollment of all the schools in the city was absent.

TOWNSENDERS DEMAND PART FOR INQUIRY

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21—(U.P.)—Representation of the Townsend bloc on the house committee investigating old age pensions was demanded today by Representative John McGoorty, d., Cal., leader of the Townsend congressional group.

Friction developed between McGoorty and Dr. F. E. Townsend concerning a reported statement by Townsend that he did not favor a third party Townsend presidential candidate in the election.

McGoorty had announced he would permit his name to be used on the California ballot as a presidential candidate for the ticket merely to send a delegation to the national convention seeking a Townsend plan plank in the democratic platform.

Selling Old Muntions

Statement before the senate munitions committee yesterday that any "revolutionary" could purchase old machine guns from the United States army and, after reconditioning them, could use them in an effort to overthrow the government brought home to many a thought which had not occurred before.

The statement brought home the fact that a revolution, operated on this basis, could be financed at a fraction of the cost that is usually attached to such an undertaking. The man who testified to the above statement went further to say that he had bought 3,500 of the old guns for about 12 cents each. It was estimated that when new they had cost the government approximately $2,000,000 for the lot. That means that he had been able to buy $2,000,000 worth of munitions for $420. Had he been planning to lead a revolution against the United States government, he could have made the nation virtually finance his uprising, for the cost of repairing the guns would have been only a fraction of the price of new weapons.

Naturally most of us do not contemplate an uprising from any source. But it is not entirely unthinkable. Certainly we would not like to see the United States government furnish guns for some revolutionary organization to use against it.

The department of justice has continually sought to ban the sale of machine guns to private citizens. The department of justice is a part of the United States government. Yet another part of the same government, the war department, itself is selling old machine guns to anyone who wants to buy them as scrap iron, if the testimony of the witness before the munitions probers can be taken as a fact.

It matters little that the old guns are not suitable for use by gangsters, which is the real reason for banning machine guns. It is not unthinkable that a powerful gang—perhaps a political gang—might like to set them on tripods and blast away at the original users.

If the army wears out its machine guns—and that is inevitable—and feels that it must sell them as scrap iron to realize a little return on the investment, it should certainly take the precaution to see that the guns are actually scrap iron and not potential weapons.

Of course, the statement of the witness may be greatly exaggerated. It is to be hoped that it is. But whether it is or not, there is great food for thought in it.

Hauptmann's Future

The future had a dark and very brief appearance for Bruno Richard Hauptmann yesterday, with only another intervention by Governor Harold Hoffman held out as a possible means of prolonging his life after the week of March 30. Governor Hoffman, who has expressed his doubts that

The Burning Question of Agriculture

Hauptmann and Hauptmann alone was to blame for the Lindbergh kidnaping and murder, may grant another reprieve, which he may do under the New Jersey law. At the same time, however, the governor has not indicated that he intends to do this.

The outstanding criminal lawyer of the United States has walked out of the case, convinced that Hauptmann is guilty. The New Jersey supreme court and the state court of pardons and appeals have both ruled against the Bronx carpenter.

Dr. John Condon, the chief prosecution witness at the murder trial, who testified that Hauptmann alone kidnaped and murdered the baby, has told the people of the United States that he will give new evidence in a national publication. About the time that Jafsie's series of articles began appearing, however, the talkative school teacher packed his baggage and his daughter off to Panama, where he cannot immediately be reached for a statement to the New Jersey executive.

Whatever is the fate of Hauptmann, the case is likely in the next month or so to stir up a political disturbance that may rock the entire nation.

REHABILITATION OF CRIPPLES IS AIM OF HEALTH DEPARTMENT

By RICHARD M. MOREHEAD
United Press Staff Correspondent
AUSTIN, Feb. 21.—(UP)—Rehabilitating crippled children is a task that goes on in good times and bad, although depression added to the duties of J. J. Brown, chief public officer providing such aid in Texas. Brown is secretary of the Texas Society for Crippled Children, a private agency, and director of the crippled children's division of the state department of education. Depression brought a considerable increase in the number of children suffering from rickets and other diseases caused from undernourishment and lack of pre-natal care for mothers, Brown said. But the ravages of infantile paralysis and other diseases which leave children permanently marked are not confined to any economic period. Sixty per cent of all cases handled by the state and the society are from infantile paralysis. Legal definition of a crippled child is "any person of normal mentality, under 21 year of age, whose physical functions or movements are impaired by reason of a joint, bone, or muscle defect or deformity to the extent that the child is or may be expected to be totally or partially incapacitated for education or remunerative occupation." In this classification fall some 30,000 Texas youngsters. Half of them must depend on the state to help correct their impediments and to train them for useful places in society. Brown's tiny Austin office is plagued with statistics and pictures of youngsters needing help. Bus loads of cripples are gathered weekly in Texas towns and cities, then carried to hospitals for treatment.

The state director of such work points to the history of aiding such unfortunate. During Greece's "Golden Age" crippled and deformed were destroyed. A thousand years later they were feared as evil spirits. Five hundred years ago, the physically handicapped were ostracized.

Today the state not only literally "puts cripples on their feet," but provides vocational training. Persons more than 16 years of age are eligible for state vocational training. In many cases training may be done best under actual working conditions. Brown therefore makes arrangements for putting such cripples at work in offices, stores, shops, factories, or mills.

'FEAST BEFORE YOU FIGHT' RULE AT TIME OF TEXAS REVOLUTION

DALLAS, Feb. 21.—(UP)—When Texas rebelled against Mexico and went to war to win her independence in 1836 the rule was, "Feast before you fight instead of fight before you feast."

A historian's account of the arrival of a company of 75 New Orleans Grays at Nacogdoches, Texas, reveals a banquet served in their honor by the town, with the following items on the menu:

Roast bear, racoon, squirrel, and wild turkey; two large hind-quarters and the backbone of an ox; chicken and dumplings, baked and mashed Irish potatoes, corn bread, biscuits, stewed corn, beans, squash, cabbage, honey, persimmons, hickory nuts, pecans and pumpkin pie.

The table decorations consisted of a huge black bear recently slaughtered, "hide, bones, meat and claws," holding between his tusks a home-made white flag inscribed "Constitution of 1824." Revocation of that constitution by the Mexican government was one of the factors that fomented the Texas Revolution.

The historian said "copious quantities of champagne" accompanied the feast and that the guests did not depart "until the morning after, when the Grays galloped off to fight without a wink of sleep."

MAKE YOUR HOME COMFORTABLE

• WEATHER STRIP all windows and doors. This will keep out drafts of cold wind and will also keep out the dust when the spring winds begin. Most every house in Cisco has been subject to window frame and door frame shrinkage and as a consequence, cold air continually sweeps in and makes the fuel bill pile up when you try to stay comfortable. This weather stripping is easily put on and gets results. Our carpenters can put it on for you economically, or you can do it yourself. Weather stripping is economical and efficient, and will soon pay for itself. Call us for FREE information or demonstration.

CRUISE TO NOWHERE

BEGIN HERE TODAY
JANE WESTON feels her dreams have come true when she sets out on a three weeks ocean cruise, accepted in payment for the salary due her when the magazine for which she worked as typist suspended publication.
Others on board are: NORA LANE, famous actress and owner of the Kokinar diamond; wealthy eccentric MRS. DOREMUS; DUTCH LENS and MANNIE JACKSON, blackmillers; TINO ROSSI, opera singer; KEN MARTIN and LINDA BAYES, film show entertainers.
Jane and Dirk are much attracted to each other. She confided to him that she is merely a typist out of a job and he tells her he is not the playboy he has been thought to be.
A misunderstanding arises when each confesses to having dreamed of meeting much more glamorous companions.
NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER IX

JANE moved away from Dirk, on the ship's hurricane deck, leaving him with his own hurt and injured pride. Hot tears stung her cheeks, but she wouldn't let Dirk see them.

Now they were both aware of a woman, heavily veiled and in autumn furs, who walked along the rail, pausing at intervals. She was alone. For a moment she stood and looked out over the huge swells in the sea.
Jane watched her breathless. Her figure was of the cast which should remain forever in black velvet—as now in a silhouette against the early evening. There was something imposing about her appearance.

The figure of a man was rapidly approaching her. It appeared as if he were going to speak, and she turned to him revealing her face. She merely looked at the man with an ironic smile. The man walked away hurriedly, disconcerted before her smile. He had picked the wrong number!

Jane felt herself trembling. "You saw that!" she breathed, low, to Dirk. "It makes us see ourselves as we are. I'm a pickup, and you're the kind of a man who does." She saw that he was irked. Frowns creased his forehead, and a hand went through his blond hair. "Aren't we a little too serious?" he begged. "After all, you're a swell girl. I'm a fellow—of sorts, even if I'm not a moon-struck opera star. But if that's the way you feel about us, goodnight, Miss Weston—"

"Goodnight, Mr. Strom." Jane walked away, her head held proudly erect. Disillusionment had been painful, but there were no tears now. She had the feeling that they had both merely indulged in baby words. When she got to her room she flung herself down on the berth, and lay there, very still.

AFTER she was gone Dirk stood by the rail, nursing his injured pride. He didn't see why Jane should be so touchy about a romantic notion. He had lived long enough close to Nature to know realities. But he guessed he had let his imagination play a little on this cruise. He had wanted to know the sun and the moon and the earth and the stars.

He found himself watching the woman in velvet who stood looking out over the water. He felt oppressed by her pose, and for a moment he forgot the vanity which Jane had courted in him.

The woman had a medallion-like profile. He saw her stretch her arms out over the water, and her lips moved almost imperceptibly. But the words somehow reached his ears.
"I don't know what I have done," she said, "to deserve all this unhappiness." She said it in a deep, throaty voice that was less theatrical than convincing.

Dirk was sympathetic and sorry for her. This was the penalty for his honesty of sentiment in all his moods. He felt impelled to speak to her, but she moved away from him down the rail. He followed her, not knowing why, until she was lost in the maze of passage ways.
For a moment he had almost forgotten Jane Weston! But he still remembered that he had hurt her with his frankness, and he was sorry for that. She had done something to him already. Kisses under this moonlight would alter any man's personality.

He was walking along Deck B, toying with the idea that he was really in love with Jane when he met the purser talking with the veiled woman. He stopped on the rail to avoid the very meeting he had been seeking and lit a cigarette.
"I can't sleep in my room for the men in the next suite," she said. "I've even had strange knocks on my door tonight. I'm a little afraid. And now they're playing poker next door, and saying things which are less shocking than loud. I took this cruise simply to rest my nerves, and get away from that sort of thing. But I don't like to annoy. They are quite possibly tired business men. Can't you give me another suite on board?"

THE ship was tilted. The purser was sorry he didn't have another suite. And it was obvious that he did not wish to disturb the poker players from whom his large tips would come.

Then Dirk acted on impulse. He stepped up to the purser quickly and tipped his fingers to his head. "I beg your pardon. Would Suite AA do for Madame?" he said, smiling. "I'm lost in it. Honestly, I'd gladly exchange. I won't mind the poker players. I never go to bed before 2 in the morning, anyway."

The purser stared at him. "You have Suite AA, alone? That's the best suite on board," he said. "The royal suite."

The woman lifted her veil and smiled at Dirk. "You are very kind," she said. "But I don't really deserve a royal suite."

For the first time Dirk saw her face clearly. It was the most intelligent face he had ever seen. It was the actress married and unmarried and unhappily married again, Nora Lane.
"I'm Nora Lane," she said, simply. "I tried to keep my room number a secret, but it was no use. Tonight every person on shipboard knew I was in Suite AD. I could hear them as they passed by on deck, saying: 'That's her state room—Nora Lane.' Perhaps it would help to change. I only want a little quiet. Will you gentlemen help me keep the secret?" she begged, smiling. "And I do thank you, Mr.—"

Nunn also said that the Daily News has been selected to carry Conoco advertising this year, and that his company has again approved one of the largest sales promotion budgets in its history.
"Continental's faith in the dividend earning power of newspaper advertising is founded upon sales increases directly traceable to this medium," said Nunn. "Last year,

JANE got up from the berth in her stateroom and looked at her eyes in the mirror. "Shame on you, Jane, for that sort of thing!" she said. "I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll just—"

And she proceeded to do just that. She put on her best bid and tucker, which was the slinky evening gown she had actually fought over, torn out of the hands of a smartly-dressed girl at a Tuesday morning sale, price $4.98. Then she made herself up in a way that would put Myra Loy to shame. She got out her dancing pumps, flung a borrowed cape over her shoulders and went upstairs to dance.

She was almost breathless when she passed through the Venetian Room on the way to the dancing floor. She didn't know who she was going to dance with, and she didn't care. No mere good-looking boy like Dirk Strom was going to make her unhappy.

Before she was half way across the room, filled with people in evening clothes, she realized what a sensation she caused. Her face was a little flushed with determination, and it was this extra fire in her which made her the cynosure of all eyes.

Her eyes fell on the table where sat the small dancer, Linda Hayes and her partner Ken Martin. They were toying with drinks before their time to go on as entertainers.

Jane saw another man at the table, a dark, exceedingly handsome young man whose head was crowned with black curls. In that same flash she saw him touch Linda's hand under the table, and motion with his head toward her.

Linda looked around at Ken, a bit nervously, and then bowed to Jane, following it up with a beaming nod. Jane walked toward them uncertainly, wondering if she was doing the right thing.
"This is Tino Rossi," she heard Linda saying, as through a fog. "You may have heard him on the radio. Or at the opera. He's the one and only famous baritone," she concluded with a little flourish. Ken, standing, frowned at this proceeding.

Tino had stood up, and gallantly leaped over to take Jane's hand, bringing it to his lips for a gesture of flattery which left Jane in a pleasant flush. Everyone in the crowded room was looking at her. At Tino's invitation she sat down.

"Won't you have a brandy?" he said, "while we are waiting to dance. And may I not claim the first dance?"

She said, "Yes," even as her eyes caught those of Dirk Strom, who sat across the room at a table with the detective. Her head went up with a soaring gesture of bravado. Dirk was looking at her respectfully, as if to say: "Well, I see you got your famous opera star. Moonlight and kisses on the Italian lake!"

for example, there was a marked improvement in Company earnings, despite excessive gasoline taxes and other adverse factors. Sales of Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil also reached an all-time high.
"Business is definitely on the up-grade. And we are confident that aggressive newspaper advertising, quality products and a high standard of service will make this the most outstanding year in our history."
