Pampa Students Plan Science Fair Exhibits

Pampa school students who like to dream up scientific projects, both in and out of class, will have a chance to win awards, and perhaps national recognition when the Pampa Science Fair is held here Friday and Saturday.

Mrs. Elaine Ledbetter, science instructor at Pampa High School and general chairman of the fair, said Saturday students in all of 12 grades of the Pampa school system have been invited to enter exhibits in the event to be held in the girls' gymnasium at the Pampa high school building.

The Science Fair is being sponsored to encourage young people to consider scientific careers, according to Mrs. Ledbetter.

According to Mrs. Ledbetter, 428 entries have been received for this year's show which will be open to the public from 12 noon to 9 p.m. Friday and from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday. Mrs. Ledbetter said all projects should be in place by 6 p.m. Thursday.

The following rules will be used by judges in the local fair as a basis for scoring, with a perfect score being 100 points:

Creative ability, value 30 points. Does the exhibit show originality in plan and execution? Does it demonstrate new or improved ways of expressing or communicating scientific ideas?

Scientific thought, value 30 points. Does the exhibit disclose organized procedures, making comparisons by showing likenesses and differences?

Thoroughness, value 10 points. Does the exhibit tell a complete and concise story about the project? Is the proper emphasis given to important items?

Skill, value 10 points. Is the workmanship good? Under normal working conditions, is the exhibit likely to demand frequent repairs?

Clarity and dramatic value, value 20 points. Will the average person understand what is being displayed? Are guide marks, labels descriptions neatly presented? Is the exhibit more attractive than others in the same field?

Catagories in this year's fair will include physical, biological and earth divisions. First, second and third place winners in each division will receive place ribbons. Each student entered in the contest will receive a certificate of participation, according to Mrs. Ledbetter.

Individual first, second and third place winners in the local fair will be eligible to compete in the Panhandle Science Fair to be held in Amarillo March 29 through April 1.

MoD Campaign Nets $5,643.39 In Gray County

Pampa, Lefors and McLean residents funneled $5,643.39 into the National Foundation during the January March of Dimes campaign, Jerry Simms, county chairman, announced Saturday.

Of this amount Pampans donated $4,534.09, Lefors, $359.30 and McLean residents, $750.

A breakdown of funds gathered in varied projects in Pampa was also issued by Mark Buzzard, city chairman for the drive to aid polio, arthritis and birth defect victims. They include:

The Mothers' March, $2,207.26; Bucket Brigade, $1,446.48; coin collectors, $108.01; mailers, $592.80; and special events, $179.54.

Simms said about 50 per cent of the funds received will be used in the local March of Dmes chapter and 50 per cent will be turned over to the National Foundation for research.

Investigators Discard 'Hot' Questionnaire

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Senators conducting an inquiry into alleged military censorship discarded a controversial questionnaire on communism and may well abandon all such group testing, informed sources said Saturday.

They said the questionnaire, which created a furor after secretly being given to some Marines and airmen here, was useless because of the publicity it received. The questionnaire technique is also opposed by some participants in the study, they said.

Members of the subcommittee are expected to meet next week to discuss the controversy created by the Marine quiz and to decide where to go now. This is in light of President Kennedy's action invoking executive privilege and directing state and defense department reviewers not to answer on specific speech deletions.

Undersecretary of State George Ball was said to be eager to appear before the subcommittee to outline the State Department's speech review policies. The Department's role in censorship has been sharply attacked by Sen. Strom Thurmond, D - S.C., who claims department speech change reflected a "no-win" policy in the cold war.

Thurmond also wants the subcommittee to continue with the military phase of the speech censorship inquiry. Several witnesses are still to be heard, including Gen. George H. Decker, Army chief of staff.

The subcommittee also will undoubtedly discuss charges that a letter to one of his aides was taken from the briefcase of a subcommittee investigator at Marine headquarters here. Gen. David M. Shoup, Marine commandant, declined comment on what was being referred to as "the case of the purloined letter."

Tickets Go On Sale For Lions Club Annual Show

Rehearsals for the annual Lions Club minstrels, "Dixie Jubilee," go into their fourth week Tuesday night in Pampa Junior High School auditorium.

Tickets for the stage production to be presented on Thursday and Friday nights, Feb. 22 and 23, may be purchased from any member of the club. These later may be exchanged for reserved seats.

Proceeds from the sale of tickets will be used to aid the Lions Club camp for crippled children at Kerrville and to buy glasses for the underprivileged in Pampa.

This year's minstrel show will be one of the most elaborate in all of the productions staged by the Lions during the past quarter of a century, according to Ed Flood, business manager, and Max Presnell, show director.

The cast for this year's minstrels is made up of 50 to 60 persons from Pampa including leading men and women, end men, vocalists, musicians, interlocutor and the minstrel chorus. Rehearsals are held Tuesday and Thursday nights.

De Gaulle Will Start Algerian Peace Talks

PARIS (UPI) — President Charles de Gaulle will begin the final and decisive phase of peace talks with the Algerian rebels "almost at once" despite right-wing extremist violence and Communist-backed strikes and riots, responsible government sources said Saturday.

The French Communist party, which spearheaded a bloody riot Thursday night to protest violence by the outlawed Secret Army Organization (OAS), defied De Gaulle further by calling for a series of strikes and demonstrations Monday to protest "police violence."

The left-wing groups' fury was spurred by the alleged OAS kidnaping of 19-year-old Marc-Andre Schwartz, son of a prominent left-wing leader, and a cousin of Premier Michel Debre. Young Schwartz turned up safe and sound Saturday and said he was kidnaped at gunpoint.

The government was cracking down on both the right and the left. The Interior Ministry announced it would ban all demonstrations Monday and accused the Communists of throwing in 3,000 trained shock troops as a weapon of subversion.

In Algiers, 5,000 French troops, gendarmes and police swarmed through the European working district of Bab-el-Oued and arrested 21 suspects of the OAS and found 192 weapons. But elsewhere in Algeria OAS violence added to the death toll now approaching the 750 mark since Jan. 1.

The French army in Algeria has battled the rebel liberation movement for seven long and costly years. De Gaulle is determined to end the war and build up France's continental armed might.

Four members of the rebel government - in - exile and other rebel officials were gathering in Switzerland and government sources said Algerian Affairs Minister Louis Joxe was reported preparing to meet with them. The Tunisian semi-official news agency said a cease - fire agreement "is on the point of being initiated."

It appeared possible a cease-fire could be reached in a matter of weeks or even days. A number of major issues remain to be settled, and the key issue is that of the citizenship of the 1.1 million Europeans who live in Algeria with 8 million Arabs.

Orbit Try Next Wednesday Is 'On Schedule'

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI) — Encouraging tests on a newly repaired rocket Saturday gave scientists a tentative "go-ahead" for another attempt to launch America's first astronaut into orbit next Wednesday.

Informed sources said top officials of the nation's $400 million Mercury man-into-space program had overridden efforts by at least one organization to remove the balky Atlas booster and substitute another for the orbital flight of John H. Glenn Jr.

Repairs on the rocket, Atlas No. 109-D, were completed this week and scientists took careful aim on a Valentine's Day firing date for the rocket trip that should send the 40-year-old Marine litutenant colonel on a three-orbit trip if all goes well.

Half of the previous delays have been called during the final, critical four days of checks and counter-checks on the 93-foot combination of Atlas booster and Mercury space capsule. Saturday morning, scientists started another of the four-day periods.

"Right now," said one source, "we seem to be in good shape. But you never can tell. There's an awful lot before us . . ."

During the past few days, some scientists had insisted that rocket No. 109-D be removed from the firing pad and a new rocket put in its place because of modifications made in the missile after a series of troubles during the past few weeks.

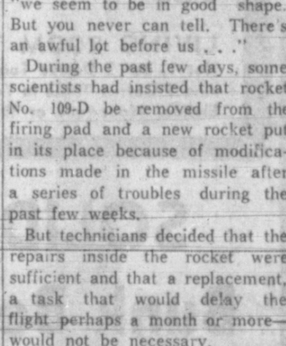

But technicians decided that the repairs inside the rocket were sufficient and that a replacement, a task that would delay the flight perhaps a month or more—would not be necessary.

Also looming as a threat—perhaps more seriously than at any previous time during the past two months—was the weather. Skies must be at least two thirds clear at the Cape and weather has to be almost perfect over a large part of the mid Atlantic before scientists will give the final firing commands to send Glenn on his way.

With rare exceptions, Febuary and the early part of March bring the worst periods of weather to the Cape Canaveral area on Florida's east coast. During the past week, torrential rains and high winds have raked the Cape.

The federal space agency will

There Are 8,899 Eligible Voters In County For '62

Jack Back, Gray County Tax Collector, announced Saturday that 8,899 out of some 10,000 eligible county voters purchased their poll tax receipts or exemption slips for the 1962 election year.

The tax collector said 7,149 poll tax receipts and 1,750 exemptions were issued.

Half of Gray County's offices will be up for grabs in the coming May primary election and there will also be elections on the state level.

OAS Preparing To Expel Red Cuba

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Organization of American States (OAS) will meet Wednesday to prepare the formal expulsion of Cuba's Fidel Castro regime from the inter-American system.

The 21-nation OAS council is not expected to vote on the ouster Wednesday but will take formal notice of the resolution of the foreign ministers at Punta Del Este ordering such action.

The inter - American defense board is expected to formally oust the Cuban regime from its military organization.

It is anticipated that Mexico and Brazil, and possibly Chile, Ecuador and Bolivia, will again present to the council legal objections for expeling Cuba.

Local Youth Hit By Car; Condition OK

Bobby Parks, 2 - year - old son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Parks, 546 S. Reid, was reported in good condition late Saturday night by hospital officials where he is recovering from injuries received when struck by an automobile Friday afternoon.

Sheriff's officers who investigated the accident said a car driven by Nancy Carol Westover, Perryton, was parked in the driveway of the Parks home while she was visiting the family. Officers said the Westover girl told them she did not see the youngster when she backed out of the driveway to leave.

Parks told officers the boy was knocked to the ground but was not run over. He reported the Westover car did not stop after hitting the boy.

Officers siad a search was started for the car and driver.

The automobile was found by patrolling officers about three hours after the accident, parked near the Oasis Club, 1304 S. Barnes.

The Westover girl was charged with aggravated assault with a motor vehicle Saturday and was fined $100 and costs when she pleaded guilty to the charge before County Judge Bill Craig. The complaint was signed by Alfred Parks, father of the boy.

Members present were Lanny Roberts, Phil Young, Lawrence Jones, Bill Harris, Randy and McDonald.

U-2 Pilot Freed In Red Swap-Out

By MERRIMAN SMITH
UPI White House Reporter

WASHINGTON (UPI) — American U2 pilot Francis Gary Powers emerged from nearly two years imprisonment behind the Iron Curtain Saturday and secretly flew home toward an uncertain future and exhaustive questioning about his ill-fated espionage mission over Russia.

A few hours after he was freed in exchange for Soviet master spy Dudolph Abel, he was on his way back to the United States. But the circumstances surrounding his flight and destination were so secret that not even his family was able to greet him.

The 35-year-old flier was reported tired but happy when he was freed by the Russians on a lonely bridge in Berlin early Saturday morning. His family — including wife, mother and father—had joyously hoped to see him Saturday. But the reunion was put off at least until Sunday.

Before letting him appear in public, U. S. authorities planned to question Powers intensively about his U2 mission in May, 1960, which led to the blow-up of the Paris summit meeting and resulted in one of the great diplomatic incidents of the cold war.

No red - carpet welcome was prepared and President Kennedy apparently planned to stay in the background. But Powers, who talked freely at his Moscow trial, did not face prosecution for revealing secrets in his testimony. The State Department made that clear following his conviction.

Still unanswered were hosts of questions surrounding the U2 incident, including the central one—how Powers' plane went down. The Russians claimed they hit it with a rocket. But Powers refused to confirm that during his trial.

It was considered unlikely that he would ever be used in intelligence work again. Also left up in the air was where he would live. His wife told reporters: "I don't care where we live. That's up to Gary. I don't have him home yet, but I'll keep him home this time."

The Russians claimed that Powers, imprisoned for aerial espionage in August, 1960, was released "to improve relations between the Soviet Union and the United States." But State Department officials cautioned that it had no major cold war significance.

In a series of fiction-like developments that began unfolding before dawn, Moscow freed both Powers and Frederic L. Pryor, a young American student who had been held by East German authorities since August, 1961.

In return, the Soviets got back Abel who was convicted in 1957 and sentenced to 30 years in the Atlanta federal penitentiary for conspiring to send U. S. defense and nuclear secrets to Russia.

Powers, whose spying mission over the Soviet Union sparked one of the most spectacular diplomatic incidents of the cold war—a bitter exchange between former President Eisenhower and Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev—flew back to the United States almost

American Motors President Seeks Governor's Post

DETROIT (UPI)—George Romney, president of American Motors Corp. and prominently mentioned as a 1964 presidential darkhorse, Saturday announced he is a Republican candidate for governor of Michigan.

Romney, who has already forced the state Republican Party to accept his terms after saying the party has been controlled by "big business," said he will launch a "citizen campaign to get Michigan rolling."

Romney, 54, said he will meet with the board of directors of American Motors Monday to ask for a leave of absence from his posts of AMC president and board chairman.

He resigned, immediately after his announcement of candidacy, from the "Citizens for Michigan," the "third political force" organization which he formed three years ago to try to resolve the deadlock between Michigan Republicans and Democrats over state money matters.

Until less than a year ago, Romney had not made public his political party affiliation.

Romney was given immediate endorsements as the Republican candidate for governor by national and state GOP leaders. He has been mentioned by former President Eisenhower, by 1960 nominee Richard M. Nixon and by Sen. Barry Goldwater, Republican conservative leader, as a possible 1964 presidential contender.

Romney, a member and lay minister of the Mormon Church of the Latter Day Saints, is a teetotaling, non-smoking, 18-hour-a-day industrialist who took over

Texas Tech Ex-Students Plan Banquet For Feb. 24

Dr. William M. Pearce, academic vice president of Texas Technological College, will be guest speaker at a Pampa banquet February 24 for ex-students and friends of Texas Tech. The banquet will be held at 7 p.m. in Pampa Hall at the Celanese Chemical Plant.

Dr. Pearce will speak on Tech's recent academic achievements and on plans that have been made for scholastic improvements during the next few years.

Special guests who plan to attend the banquet will include J. E. Chambers, president of the Texas Tech Ex-Student Association, and Wayne James, executive secretary of the association. Chambers and James both reside in Lubbock.

Gene Steel, president of the Top-of-Texas Chapter, and Ed Knox, secretary, said efforts are being made to stimulate the interest of Texas Tech friends in this area. Primary purpose of the Top-of-Texas group, they stated, is to bring as many people together as possible who have Texas Tech as a common interest.

The first effort to reorganize the local club was made in August 1961 when about 30 ex-students and friends of Tech met at the Don Morrison Ranch north of Pampa for a ranch - style Barbeque. At this meeting need for a Tech Club in the area was outlined.

In planning the February 24th banquet, the program committee, composed of Knox, Jack White, and Steel has been concerned with designing a program that would appeal to as many people as possible. The cost of this activity has also been carefully controlled and to enable all to attend, the group has announced that everyone attending the banquet will automatically become active members of the Top-of-Texas Club without further dues or assessments.

In designing the program, Dr. Pearce was asked to be speaker to the group because of his unequaled enthusiasm and interest in Texas Tech's welfare. As a native of Plainview, Dr. Pearce holds an Associate of Arts Degree from Kemper Military Academy, Bachelor of Arts Degree from Texas Tech, and Doctor of Philosophy from the University of Texas.

DR. WILLIAM M. PEARCE
. . . To Speak In Pampa

Dr. Pearce first served on the Teeh faculty from 1938 until 1947. He taught on the University of Texas faculty while working on his PhD there and returned to Texas Tech in 1949. He became History Department Head in 1955 and was named to the Associate Deanship of the Graduate School in 1959.

As a man of wide personal interests and abilities, he was appointed Academic Vice President of Texas Tech in 1960. In this capacity, Dr. Pearce is in charge of a re-evaluation of Tech's entire program. This study is aimed at improving the quality of Tech's training, research, and public services.

In making reservations for the banquet, Ed Knox has asked those interested to contact him at MO 4-4968 or Gene Steel at MO 5-3103.

Paper Says Lucky Luciano Died Of Cyanide Poisoning

ROME (UPI)—The Rome newspaper Telesera claimed yesterday that Lucky Luciano died from cyanide poisoning instead of a heart attack.

The newspaper, which also said several days ago that the former New York vice king was working for the FBI, said in a front page dispatch:

"Lucky Luciano did not die from a heart attack. An exploratory medical examination showed in the veins of the ex-gangster traces of...potassium cynaide."

The head of the legal medical institute which carried out the autopsy in Naples later issued a formal denial of the Telesera story. It said it simply was a "sensationalist story without foundation."

WASHINGTON (UPI) —President Kennedy could take some heat off of his United Nations bond-purchase plan if he would reduce the United States investment.

Kennedy probably wil do that. The method would be by limiting the United States purchase to a fixed proportion of what other nations will invest. The original Kennedy proposal was that the United States should buy $100 million of a $200 million U. N. bond issue.

If Great Britain, the Commonwealth and other Western-aligned nations together purchased less than $100 million of U. N. bonds, Kennedy could suggest that the United States merely match their aggregate purchase. That probably would improve the prospects for the purchase of U. N. bonds by the United States. Sen. Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R-Ia.) is urging this matching idea.

Sen. George D. Aiken (R-Vt.) wants Congress to delay action on the bond proposal until other nations have indicated all of their financial intentions toward the United Nations. The President may be quite willing to agree to Hickenlooper's proposal, and perhaps to Aiken's.

The United Nations is bankrupt, as is. It will begin to go out of business unless it is bailed out by the proposed bond issue. The decision of Congress, therefore, is whether the United Nations shall continue to function or fade gradually away as did the late League of Nations.

A column of type is required to list the members that have welshed on their financial commitments to the United Nations. The crisis arises, however, because so many have refused to pay assessments for the enormously expensive adventures of the United Nations in the Congo.

The budget for Congo military operations last year was $100 million with another $100 million for economic and administrative assistance. These facts are aggravated in the United States by much opposition among Americans to the Kennedy-United Nations Congo policy. This is a policy of compelling the secessionist province of Katanga to resume its place within the coalition Congolese government with headquarters at Leopoldville.

This coalition government was and still is infiltrated by Communists. Sen. Thomas J. Dodd (D-Conn.) has called the roll of those Communist from time to time for the information of the Senate.

House Probers Say Air Crash Was Preventable

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House investigators have decided the Imperial Airlines crash at Richmond, Va., last Nov. 8 "could have been prevented."

They criticized the government for having allowed the trouble-plagued line to continue flying.

A three-man armed services subcommittee headed by Rep. Porter Hardy, D-Va., said federal aviation experts spent 1,250 man-hours examining Imperial operations in 10 months prior to the crash in which 74 Army recruits and three crewmen died.

It said subcommittee members found it "difficult to undersand" why the line's certificate was not revoked until some time after the crash.

The Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) two days ago, laid main blame for the tragedy on faulty cockpit procedures.

The Hardy subcommittee, in partial concurrence with this, said "lack of crew discipline" contributed to confusion and indecision aboard the plane in the moments before the crash. It also criticized "poor" airline management.

The subcommittee was critical also of the CAB and the Federal Aviation Agency (FAA) for having allowed the airline, with a record of substandard maintenance practices to continue operations.

"The subcommittee leaves to FAA and CAB the finding as to whether there had been any specific violation of the rules or regulations of either agency, but the subcommittee is of the opinion that this tragedy could have been prevented," the group said in its report.

Department Store Sales Increase

DALLAS (UPI) — Department store sales in the 11th Federal Reserve District rose an average of 12 per cent in the week ended Feb. 3, compared with the same week of 1961, the Dallas Federal Reserve Bank said yesterday.

Houston sales were up 36 per cent and San Antonio rose 30 per cent. Dallas sales were up 12 per cent and Fort Worth up 7. El Paso sales declined 12 per cent.

Sen. Tower Protests Efforts To Brand Conservatives 'Extremists'

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (UPI)—Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., protested Saturday what he called an administration effort to brand as "right wing extremists" all conservative elements in the country.

Tower, the first Republican senator from Texas since Reconstruction days, said he found the John Birch Society "wanting" and that he did not agree with everything resigned Maj. Gen. Edwin Walker has done.

"But to me the real threats are the liberal extriemists who have become alienated from the American establishment," he told a news conference. He said there are 31 or 32 members of the Americans for Democratic Action in high government posts who "see themselves as the prophets, the administrators and the planners of a new order."

Of the Birch Society, Tower said, "I believe their leadership is misguided, their judgment bad. They magnify some issues they shouldn't and minimize others."

Tower said he had advised Walker against running for governor of Texas because he feared it might result in bogging down the Senate hearings in "muzzling" of the military in partisan politics.

Tower said he believed military leaders by virtue of their background and training "singularly qualified" to speak on the threat of Communism. But he said they should not stray into partisan politics or urge the defeat or election of any specific candidate.

Tower said Walker "was relieved for putting Birch propaganda in his pro-blue program" and that the issue of partisan politics came up later. He said he had studied Walker's program and had not found any Birch material in it.

The Texan, a 36-year-old former political science professor, found one area of agreement with the administration. He said he was "inclined to agree with the President's proposal" on tariff cutting.

"I believe there should be flexibility," he said. "I think we will have to roll with the punch on the European Common Market." But he cautioned there would have to be "escape hatches."

● Powers

as soon as he was placed in the hands of American authorities.

But the time of his arrival and his future whereabouts were shrouded in secrecy as tight as that which first surrounded his espionage flight over Russia.

White House Press Secretary Pierre Salinger, who announced the exchange at 3:17 a.m. EST, would say only that he was en route home and would arrive some time Saturday or Sunday.

He said flatly that there would be no announcement of the time or place of arrival.

Powers' father said he had been told by a State Department representative that he would not be able to see his son Saturday. He said it was thought best for the pilot to get some rest rather than be thrown into an immediate meeting with his family.

Similarly, a family spokesman said 27-year-old Mrs. Barbara Powers would wait until Sunday before flying to Washington to welcome her husband home. Mrs. Powers was all dressed to leave and her luggage was in the car at her Milledgeville, Ga., home when the announcement was made. The spokesman said that she "was just getting over an attack of influenza and doesn't feel up to making the trip Saturday."

As another example of official secrecy, an Air Force spokesman here said it was "classified information" about if, when and where Air Force planes would be used to fly the Powers family to meet the returning pilot.

It was known, however, that U. S. officials planned to give Powers time for a family reunion and then conduct an exhaustive interview before letting him go home. He is not expected to be available for questioning by the press before 10 days or two weeks.

Powers, Moscow reports said, was released last Thursday from Vladimir prision, 110 miles east of the Russian capital. He had served less than two years of the 10-year espionage term handed down by a Soviet court on Aug. 19, 1960.

Abel had been released from Atlanta last Wednesday and taken to New York. He was flown to Europe only after U. S. authorities had assurances that Powers definitely would be set free.

The remarkable series of events that led to the trade began when Abel's wife sought clemency for her husband and wrote Kennedy before his inauguration. Negotiations were conducted in large part by Abel's U. S.-appointed attorney, James B. Donovan.

Informed sources said the President had never discussed the case with any Soviet official. And there were no plans for him to interview Powers as he did when two RB47 pilots were set free by the Russians soon after his inauguration.

The RB47 pilots were on a military mission. Powers was not.

Similarly, in their announcements on Powers' release, the Soviets made no mention of Abel, who was considered a top spy.

Powers wife, Barbara, had been told previously that her husband was about to be released. Actual news that he was free, she said, was "the greatest happiness I have ever known."

Her big white frame house in Milledgeville, Ga., was a scene of frantic activity. One of the first persons to be summoned to her house was a hairdresser.

"He's on his way, I can't sleep," Barbara cried. She had been given a mild sedative to help her get some rest, but the excitement was such that it had no effect.

At Norton, Va., home of the flier's parents, Shoemaker Oliver Powers declared, "I was hoping it would happen, but I didn't have no idea when." When a UPI reporter first called him with the news, the elder Powers had to be convinced it wasn't a practical joke.

Man Is Fined For Carrying Weapon

Glenn Dale Pharis, 26, 517½ N. Russell, was fined $100 and costs Saturday when he pleaded guilty before County Judge Bill Craig on a charge of unlawfully carring firearms.

Police said Pharis was arrested at 10:30 p.m. Friday night in a local bar after they had received a report that Pharis was carrying a gun.

Investigating officers said Pharis was carrying a .22 caliber pistol strapped to his belt.

red-ink swamped American Motors Corp. in 1954 and built it into a profit-maker in five years.

He did it after stumping the country to preach the virtues and reasons for his "compact car," a term he takes credit for, and then watching the Big Three carmakers enter the field after he turned the corner from $70 million in operations losses to a profit in 1958.

He will be running against Democratic Gov. John B. Swainson, who today called Romney's announcement, coming after months of speculation and political activity, "the longest countdown in Michigan's history."

Wainson said, "it is curious that some one who has complained so much about the Republican Party is now anxious to become its leader."

But Romney told one of the biggest news conferences ever staged in Michigan politics that he will work with the Republican organization and that he made his decision to run because he can do more under the Republican banner than as a non-partisan.

Romney also said he will continue as a Republican delegate and a vice president of the constitutional convention now trying to write a new constituion for Michigan by March 31. "I will be an active candidate only after completion of my constitutional convention responsibilities," Romney said.

Democrats, who have already charged Romney with using the convention as a launching platform for his political ambitions, also attacked again on this flank. State Democratic Chairman John J. (Joe) Collins said Romney's candidacy for governor "raises serious questions" about his position in the convention.

Michigan National Democratic Committeeman Neil Staebler gave Romney another mention for the presidency, stating, "it is difficult to tell whether he is a Republican candidate for governor or the presidency."

Romney said, "it is going to be a tough campaign."

Romney will run for governor in a state where Democrats have held the governor's office for 14 years, six two-year terms under G. Mennen Williams and the current term under Swainson.

The Democrats have controlled all elective state administrative offices since 1958.

$2,000 Bond Set In Forgery Case

Thomas Byrd, of Crowell, was being held in county jail under $2,000 bond late Saturday night on charges of forgery and passing of worthless checks.

Bond was set Saturday by J. W. (Bill) Graham, Justice of the Peace.

Sheriff's officers said Byrd was arrested Friday afternoon in Crowell and brought to Pampa where he will be indicted by the grand jury when they convene.

Articles Are Stolen From Car Thursday

Police late Saturday night were investigating a report received Friday afternoon from Paul Harbaugh Jr., Perryton, that someone had stolen about $500 worth of articles from his automobile Thursday night.

Harbaugh told police he had parked his car in front of the Blue Bonnett night club about 11 p.m. Thursday night, and when he returned shortly after midnight the articals were gone. He said a guitar valued at $350 and clothing at $195 were taken.

Kennedy Gets His Swim Certificate

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Boy Scouts gave President Kennedy their "mile swim" certificate the other day for his heroic 3 mile swim towing a wounded crewman in World War II.

Kennedy made the swim through enemy waters after his PT boat was rammed by a Japanese destroyer. The President burst into laughter when he read the inscription on the certificate:

"This is to certify that John Fitzgerald Kennedy swam a full mile under safe conditions and has qualified for the 'mile Swim BSA'."

Synthetic Fiber Tires Soon To Be On Market

DETROIT (UPI) — Tires made of polyester, the new synthetic fiber being used in clothes, will be placed on the market late this year, it was learned Saturday.

Fred J. Kovac, head of tire fabrication for Goodyear, confirmed his firm is in advanced development and testing stages in preparing a line of premium tires with polyester cord.

The tires should be in the hands of dealers this fall, according to industry officials.

Currently, most of the fabric bodies that give tires their shape, strength and bruise resistance are made with either nylon cord or a rayon cord. Cotton, which had 95 per cent of the tire cord market until about 20 years ago, now has only 4 per cent.

Goodyear very likely will produce the cord at its plants in Point Pleasant, W.Va., and Cartersville, Ga., probably between one and three million pounds of polyester cord will go into tires next year and from 25 to 30 million pounds by 1965.

New Reserve Plan Is Aimed At Elite Group

By RAY CROMLEY

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara and his planners aim to establish an elite Army Reserve corps of about half a million officers and men.

This elite group would clear their personal business and family affairs to be ready for immediate call in a Berlin threat or in a Korean-type limited war. Reservists who could not so order their personal business and family affairs would be dropped from the elite "priority" group and put into low-priority units or reserve pools.

The elite force would include:

203,000 officers and men in six divisions.

32,000 in nine brigades.

155,000 in an assortment of signal, engineer, transportation, tank, chemical, intelligence and other specialized units.

65,000 in units organized to open army bases, and train new recruits.

7,400 in "one-site" air defense battalions, mostly Nike outfits next to cities and other major target areas.

Some 60,000 to 80,000 specialists —non - commissioned officers and other enlisted reserves with particular skills — who wou'd be assigned to Army units and would train with Army units each summer.

A limited pool of general - purpose reserves to otherwise fill the holes in Regular Army and Reserve units in time of emergencies.

The new Reserve p'ans have been develcped by a team under Maj. Gen. Ned D. Moore, head of the Directorate for Reserve Affairs and Readiness Planning, under the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Manpower, Carlisle P. Runge. These plans were primarily worked out by the Department of Defense, not the Army.

A good deal of what McNamara and Runge hope to accomplish will need congressional approval.

Tampering with the Army National Guard and the Army Reserve traditionally has been like dealing with a very hot potato.

Under the McNamara - Runge plan "priority" Reserve units would be brought up very close to full strength. They'd be supplied with a full complement of weapons. They'd have a goodly supply of full-time Regular Army technicians assigned to insure that training, weapons and equipment were in first class shape.

McNamara's aides figure that these elite units would eventually be ready for deployment within two or three months. This is quite a backoff from the three week deployment originally scheduled for two Reserve Divisions by McNamara's theoreticians.

A second group of reservists, the mobilization designees, would remain unchanged under the new program. These are officers assigned to fill specific slots in time of war, such as Signal Corps, Engineers, Chemical Corps, Transportation Corps.

The remainder of the Army reservists, 1½-million strong, would, under the new plan, be called up only for all-out intercontinental wars or other extreme emergencies. The nonpriority divisions would be expected to be ready for deployment six to nine months after being called up.

This new program would cut the drill pay strength of the Army National Guard and the Army Reserve by 30,000 — down to 670,000. In addition, 138,000 reservists now having 48 paid drills a year would be cut to 24 paid drills annually.

Though no final decision has been made, the McNamara planners are toying with the idea of eliminating about 10 of the 73 Army National Guard and Army Reserve Divisions.

Bubble Gum Maker Is FTC Target

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Trade Commission (FTC) Thursday accused the nation's biggest manufacturer of bubble gum of illegally monopolizing the sale of cards bearing pictures of big league baseball players.

It filed the complaint against Topps Chewing Gum, Inc., of Brooklyn, N.Y.

The FTC said that Topps has exclusive picture card contracts with 414 of the 521 baseball players in the major leagues. The 7 bubble gum holdouts were not identified.

According to the FTC, the company also has signed up virtually all of about 1,500 minor league players of major league calibre or potential.

The FTC omplaint said the company has used threats of legal action and secret payments to baseball players' agents to frustrate the efforts of its competitors to use the players' pictures on similar cards.

The company was accused of signing up minor league players for $5 to contracts that bind them from granting picture card rights to anyone other than Topps.

Cabot Safety Dinner Honors 61

Proper attitudes for safe working and living in today's industrial age were stressed by N. Dudley Steele, director of Cabot Corporation research and development, as he addressed some 150 carbon black department employes at the company's annual safety dinner Friday night in Coronado Inn.

Steele's talk to the Cabot group preceded the presentation of safety awards to 61 employes.

Awards presented were emblematic of 835 years worked without lost time accident by the sixty-one Cabot personnel from Pampa and the Oklahoma Panhandle.

Reno Stinson, Industrial Relations Department director, received a 35 - year safety certificate from Hugh Burdette, Western Region manager, to head a list of safety recognition for years worked without accident in five-year intervals. Booker T. Mohon, of the Cabot Schafer plant at Skellytown, was presented a 30 - year certificate by Burdette and seven employes received quarter - century certificates from the regional manager. The seven 25 - year certificate honorees, all from Pampa, were John D. Merchant, Harry D. McWaters, O. B. Worley, Elben N. Bozarth, Neal McBroom, Harold C. Weidler and George E. Friauf. Other certificates presented by Burdette following the dinner were in 20, 15, ten and five year groupings.

Special guests at the banquet included Dr. J. L. Chase of Pampa, C. E. Cullum and Carl D. Adcock of the Company's West Texas gasoline department, and Clyde Lemmons and E. J. O'Brient of Pampa.

John W. Gray was recognized as having been accepted during 1961 into the "Wise Owl Club o America," an organization sponsored in the interests of promoting industrial eye protection. Joe Slater of Pampa was given a replica of his tandem truck in recognition of having driven over 1,000,000 miles without accident or traffic violation during a period of more than 25 - years.

Arrangements for the annual Safety Banquet were made by Don M. Conley of the Safety and Insurance Section of the Industrial Relations department. S. Jay Meador of the Safety and Insurance department, acted as master of ceremonies.

Stock Exchange To Pick Board Of Governors

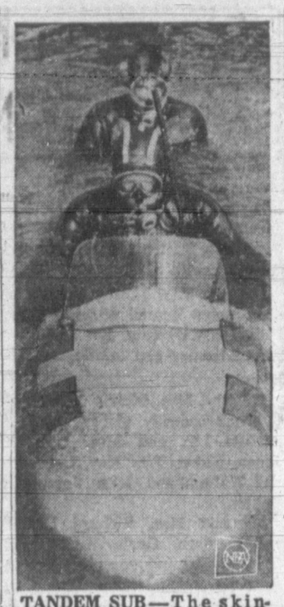

NEW YORK (UPI)—The statement last week by Edwin T. Posner, president pro tem of the American Stock Exchange, nation's second largest, was a notice that the ASE's new board of governors, to be chosen at Monday's election, was going to be a busy one.

Posner is the only one named by the ASE nominating committee for the chairmanship of the board. Over the past few weeks, a number of veteran exchange members have been nominated as governors.

After the elections, the board with which Posner works will have an entirely different membership, and, probably, changed agenda from the one which faced his predecessor Joseph F. Reilly in February a year ago.

Posner noted that "it has been established that our rules are more than adequate," and that the present board has been busy at tightening their administration. Without referring to it directly, Posner could point to the final section of the critical report issued by the Securities and Exchange Commission's staff on Jan. 5 which said that "in certain respects the rules of the exchange are stronger than those of other exchanges and in recent months there has been a veritable flood of new provisions."

The SEC report also said that "undoubtedly there are many areas where the substantive rules still require substantial improvement," and Posner gave some idea of the task the new governors will be asked to shoulder when he said that in moving toward an exchange organization, "constitutional amendments in those areas will be announced as soon as possible."

Understanding Parents Needed In These Days Of Budding Scientists

By PATRICIA McCORMACK

NEW YORK (UPI) — A child who's going to add up in science needs understanding parents.

The mom of a future Edison complains not when she dusts the rock pile a toddler keeps in his bedroom.

She contains the creepy feelings when a grade schooler's curiosity leads to a worm collection.

By the time the young scientist enters teen-age there's even a good chance the understanding parents helpfully will move furniture out of the family room so Junior or Janie can have more elbow room for some fantastic invention under construction.

One index of the payoff for such understanding comes from the biographical sketches of 40 teen-agers recently judged the nation's outstanding high school science buffs. They're all winners in the 21st annual science search.

The boy and girl geniuses in science lead lives as varied as the mysteries they probe. They're far from a bunch of squares who hunch over microscopes when they're not hitting the books.

Probing the biographies, one finds the young scientists have in common a fixed vocational goal—some as early as at age 15. Among them there is interest also in music and participation in school activities apart from the strictly science-oriented ones.

Take Barry Paul Cook, 16, of Revere, Mass. He built a rudimentary mechanical "animal" whose activities can be programmed on magnetic recording tape.

His robot vehicle is guided by him through a control panel and performs an infinite sequence of pre-selected actions with unvarying repetition.

A decade from now he would like to do "independent research in solid state physics because I enjoy coordinating my mind and hands."

Carol Lee Foley, of Waverly, Pa., is a 17-year-old science buff whose school activities include the editor's post of the school paper and chairman of the cheerleading committee.

Her hobbies include photography, painting, sewing, reading and writing poetry and short stories.

She conditioned flatworms and guppies to respond to the stimuli of light flashes and shocks of electricity and sound.

The 40 talented high school seniors were chosen from an original field of more than 23,000 students as the nation's most promising future scientists.

SWISS RETREAT—Actress Elizabeth Taylor and her husband, Eddie Fisher, have purchased this chalet in the Swiss winter and summer sports resort Gstaad. The chalet has every modern convenience and will be named "Liz."

Making Movies In Italy Poses Some Problems

VERONA, Italy (UPI) — Animals, machines and Italian extras are driving director Martin Ritt out of his mind.

"None of them do the right thing at the right time," said Ritt. He is in this city of Romeo and Juliet shooting the final scenes of 20th Century Fox's "Adventures of a Young Man," based on the Nick Adams stories of Ernest Hemingway.

"The dog trouble started back in Michigan where we made most of the film," explained the hefty, crew-cut director. "This beautiful Irish setter was supposed to welcome Adams (played by Richard Beymer) home. He wouldn't get near him.

"But the payoff on everything came in Italy. The World War I ambulances wouldn't run, and when they did they wouldn't stop, the Italian extras got drunk — everything went wrong."

Ritt said: "There was a scene where Adams was to jump on a motorcycle and dash off. He jumped on the motorcycle all right, but he dashed nowhere. It wouldn't run. We finally gave up and had to pull the motorcycle out of the scene with a long rope."

"But the extras, oh my, the extras," Ritt sighed. "We had 200 local people to make a battle scene. It was cold as the devil so we gave them some grappa (a local drink) to use as anti-freeze.

"They certainly didn't freeze to death. By the time we were ready to shoot they had grappa instead of blood in their veins. We finally had to wait until the next day so they could sober up enough to shoot the scene.

"And there was one lovely old guy who was supposed to be killed. Everything was set up, bombs exploding around, men charging up the hill. This guy is given his cue to fall down dead. Instead, he twists his face, looks up, then down, reels around like a drunk and finally makes a fall that would do justice to the worst ham in vaudeville.

"I asked him what he was trying to do. And what does he tell me. That's the way it was in the great war. He was there and so far as he was concerned that's the way it was."

Even the professional actors are having a bad time.

The 22-year-old Beymer, as Nick Adams, was supposed to drive an ambulance through mortar fire to a bombed-out house, where his Major — Ricardo Montalban — is injured.

Once again bombs are bursting as Beymer dashed — if one can dash in an ancient World War I Fiat ambulance — up to the house. As the sergeant with him, American actor Mel Wells, leaped from the ambulance, Beymer slammed on the brakes.

Nothing happened. On the wet grass the ambulance kept right on going, scattering onlookers and almost running down a camera.

Beymer finally got the ambulance stopped — about 30 feet from where it was supposed to have stopped — and dashed back into the scene. Meanwhile, Wells, in jumping from the ambulance, pulled a shoulder out of joint.

Beymer ran up to an extra who was playing the part of a dead soldier, and threw off his helmet to examine the man — as the script called for. But his heavy steel helmet caught the man in the face and knocked him cold.

DANGEROUS MISSION — Members of the first expedition from Earth to the mysterious planet Uranus prepare to meet the unknown dangers of another world in this exciting scene from the science-fiction thriller, "Journey To The 7th Planet," currently showing at the LaVista theatre. The picture is photographed in color and stars John Agar and Greta Thyssen.

Dorothy Takes Demise Of 'Roaring 20s' In Stride

By RICK DU BROW

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Television's Dorothy Provine, who put new life into an old dance — the Charleston — is out of a steady video job for the first time in several years.

The reason: That old TV bugaboo, low ratings, has killed her popular series, "The Roaring 20s."

At the same time, some friends say she was shaken by the news that Frank Sinatra, her frequent companion not long ago, will marry dancer Juliet Prowse.

But if the 27-year-old blonde is down in the dumps, she's not showing it. A veteran of two fallen TV series — the first was "The Alaskans" — she already is planning big things for herself.

"Can you believe it?" she exuded in the Warner Bros. commissary. "I'm going to headline at the London Palladium with a regular act of my own! And I'm going to have an hour TV spectacular in London. My gosh, just to be in the show at the Palladium is exciting. But to headline —wow!"

Miss Provine, a native of San Francisco and later resident of Seattle, wore an overcoat over a nightgown during a lunch break from the "Hawaiian Eye" TV series, in which she was guest-starring.

"I'd take the coat off except that I'm inhibited — quite a lot," she said.

What happened to "The Roaring 20s?"

"I just don't know," she said. "I find the whole ratings thing strange. We're just about No. 1 in England and Australia, and we're about to do very well in Japan and Hong Kong.

"We seem to be very popular. People know me. We've influenced in part the return of music of the 20s and part of the magazine layouts. Peopel write and ask about their clothes and hair. I know we've had a tremendous influence.

"In addition, my record has been on the charts for 33 weeks, which is pretty good. And there's a great demand for personal appearance tours.

"But maybe in the end it's all better for me. I can make more money now, do feature movies and work easier. This TV grind is too much. Quite honestly, I don't know why you've got to beat your brains out to make a living. I'd like the luxury of having a couple of weeks to study a part."

Sluggers Mantle And Maris To Make Movie

By JOSEPH FINNIGAN

UPI Hollywood Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Patricia Barry, an actress whose ignorance of baseball is remarkable, stars in a picture with New York Yankee sluggers Mickey Mantle and Roger Maris.

Mantle and Maris probably can't act so everybody starts off even. If the Yankees just show up and Miss Barry recites lines, the movie "Safe at Home" should draw some customers.

Most athletes, excepting rigged basketball players, are not known for their acting ability. The nearest they get to acting is an occasional razor blade or cigar commercial.

Chances are this movie won't be another "Pride of the Yankees" but Miss Barry is looking forward to visiting Florida where Mr. Maris and Mr. Mantle will be waiting with bats at the ready. y bleb even more mixed up than

The ballplayers will probably be even more mixed up than Patricia when they take a look at the script.

"The story is that I run a fishing fleet at Fort Lauderdale," said Miss Barry. Right away you wonder why two Yankee stars would be hanging around the docks.

It turns out that Maris and Mantle aren't fishing at all, they are in Florida for spring training and get swept up in the saga of Miss Barry's fishing fleet.

It's pretty hard to mix a couple of home run hitters with some fishermen and come up with a movie, but don't worry, Hollywood can do anything.

It seems that Miss Barry's boyfriend is a widower whose son, a baseball buff, brags that Mantle and Maris are old family friends, a canard.

The boy runs off to the Yankee training camp, explains his lie to the ballplayers and says he's promised that the sluggers will show up for the kiddie club banquet.

Being red blooded—players, Maris and Mantle are shocked at the thought of a little boy fibbing. And they don't like the idea of going to a banquet on that basis, not to mention that they're tired of the dinner circuit anyway.

After a lecture to the boy about honesty, Maris and Mantle break down and visit the team feed, so the kid's trip won't be a complete washout.

Before Patricia leaves for Florida, she'll have to learn something about baseball besides the fact that people eat peanuts while watching it.

"I know Abner Doubleday invented baseball," she said, exhibiting a sliver of knowledge. "I got that from Bob Newhart's record."

Miss Barry's ignorance of the national pasttime is matched by her lack of knowledge about fishing, but she insists the movie will fill theaters.

"It's a real family picture and will make pots of money," said Miss Barry thinking of her bank account and letting somebody else worry about the World Series.

One-Man Trio

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — A current recording of a trio singing a hot arrangement of "Bye Bye Baby" has only one singer—Robert Conrad.

In one voice Conrad sings the melody and in two others harmony. They were recorded separately and put together.

Sing-Along Craze Hit By Broadside

NEW YORK (UPI) — It had to happen sooner or later but someone pulled Mitch Miller's beard.

The culprits are musician Al Alberts and former newspaper man Bix Reichner. They got together and the result was "Sing Sing Sing-Along" with Al Alberts and the Lifers Chorus (Jubilee JGM 2040).

Reichner, who covered crime stories for a Philadelphia newspaper for many years has written some outlandish lyrics to established tunes. All of Reichner's lyrics have a jailhouse theme.

Some of the fancier numbers on this fast-moving LP are "How Are Things in Dannemora," "Far Above the Hudson's Waters," "Merrily We Climb the Wall," "Romeo's In Joliet" and "They Broke My Nose With a Rubber Hose."

This is the best broadside against the 'Sing Along" craze yet, and Alberts and his chorus make it a recording worth many hearings.

AN INDEPENDENT FREEDOM NEWSPAPER

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by any government, with the gift of freedom, and that it is every man's duty to God to preserve his own liberty and respect the liberty of others. Freedom is self-control, no more, no less.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guides expressed in the Ten Commandments, the Golden Rule and the Declaration of Independence.

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. For only when man understands Freedom and is free to control himself and all he produces, can he develop to his utmost capabilites in harmony with the above moral principles.

Human Rights

Are there such things as human rights?

We have always maintained that there are.

Lately there seems to be two rather widely held views which relate to human rights which seem to us to miss the mark. And this is true, even tho one of these views agrees with us as to the existence of human rights.

There is a view, held principally by men of scientific background, that no such thing as a human right exists. A human right, as they see it, is a conceptual ideal having no real existence in fact. It is just a fancy, a set of principles evolved by men and normally arrived at thru political action.

This view leads to the conclusion that rights are what the politicians say they are. If the party in power says that everyone has a right to life, that makes it so: if the party in power says that some men have a right to life but that others do not, why, then, that is true.

In other words, rights are merely an expression of political custom of the time and place where they are embodied either as laws or grants of political privilege.

The other generally accepted view finds its base in theology. Here it is claimed that men have rights because the Creator especially endowed men with something that no other living thing has. But here, again, man is the recipient of rights on the basis of authority, this time the authority of God.

So, the concept of rights in two antithetical groups maintains either their existence or their nonexistence, on the basis of authority. Rights are what God says they are; or rights are what politicians say they are. Unless or until God or king has spoken, no rights exist.

We agree with the theologians in their conclusions without agreeing to their line of reasoning. And we agree with the men of scientific reasoning in their efforts of logic, but not with their conclusions.

It seems to us that rights spring from the nature of things as they are.

If one wishes to say that things as they are exist because God created them as they are, we have no quarrel. On the other hand, if one wishes to say that things are what they are as a result of natural selection which may rule out the necessity of God as a miraculous Creator, again we have no quarrel. We simply say that things are what they are and that rights spring from this reality.

In essence, the concept of rights is an abstraction. It is the belief that there must be a correct and proper relationship between all living creatures of a single species. Insofar as men are concerned, we would say that each man has a right to be a man. This is his nature. He has a right to be what he is.

But we would go further than this. We would opine that a dog has a right to be a dog; that a lion has a right to be a lion; that a blade of grass has a right to be a blade of grass. Rights as we see them exist within the special boundary.

Men who understand rights in this framework of reference would recognize that a man has a right to conquer a dog, a lion, or a blade of grass. Rights do not exist across the boundaries provided by the various species. In other words, a man would be considered to be wholly moral if, in the process of his being a man, he found it necessary to destroy a dog, a lion or a blade of grass.

At the moment, we are not discussing the property relationship. Assuming that no man owned the dog, the lion or the grass, any man would be within his rights as a man, to destroy or not to destroy, according to his choice, the dog, the lion or the grass.

Man qua man has rights. Man is never in a conflict of rights when he exercises his will across the boundaries of species, provided another man is not involved in some way, thru the property concept.

We will continue this discussion below.

Do Lions Have Rights

Let us consider, for the purpose of expanding our thinking in this area, the rights of non-humans. Let us begin by considering the rights of a lion.

Lions do not have political organizations, so far as we know. They are accustomed to organize in family groups, and occasionally they will organize beyond one family into a sort of working relationship among others of their kind. Such an aggregation of lions is called a pride. But there is no formal political organization that can be determined.

So, if we can establish the rights of lions we should certainly be able to establish that such rights do NOT come from any political structure. We would consider a lion within his rights as a lion, to attack and kill another animal. Indeed, we would say that such an action on the part of the lion was in harmony with the nature of the lion. He acts as lions act.

If the lion attacked and killed a man, we might grieve. And we might organize a band of hunters to track down the lion and kill it. But we would not entertain a kind of moral indignation at the activity of the lion. Actually, we might have a sort of moral indignation insofar as the lion's victim was concerned. We would hold that the man who became a lion's meal was himself somewhat at fault. He should have known the nature of lions. He should have protected himself against such a dreadful contingency. We do not feel hatred for the lion.

Even tho a lion killed a man, we would view the lion as being an entirely "moral" lion. We might kill the lion. In doing so, we might even admire it as a particularly brave and clever member of its species.

Now, what would we think of a lion that went around killing other lions? Or what would we think of a lion if he went around organizing lions into some kind of a political organization so that the head lion could sit in the sun all day while other lions went out and hunted for him and brought him his food? More particularly, what would be the reaction of the other lions toward this strange, unlionlike lion in their midst? Even tho lions may not have a rational thinking process of the kind man has, they have a profoundly accurate instinct.

It is quite likely that such a lion would be set upon by others of his own kind and destroyed as quickly as possible. They might not reason it out, but they would instinctively know that this strange lion would have forfeited his RIGHTS as a lion. He would be acting in contravention of his own nature. And by so acting he would be endangering all other lions. The lions' instincts would help them. They wouldn't stand for it.

In other words, looking at this great carnivore, we would have to say that lion rights are precisely the same as human rights within the genus pantera leo.

A lion has a right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. His rights are encompassed within a lion framework of reference. He has a right to kill to eat, for this is lion-nature. He has a right to choose his hunting ground, and this is lion-liberty. He has a right to the satisfaction he can obtain by being what he is. And this is the way the lion pursues his own lion-happiness.

Thus, the lion has a right to make war on all other species, but not upon lions. Within a moral concept, the lion who made war on his own species would be acting in violation of the rights of lions. The lion who made war on deer or buffalo, or rabbits or man, is acting within his rights. He is simply fulfilling his own nature. He has a right to try to do this.

Do lions' rights come from God? This depends on your own terminology and what you mean when you say God. If you think of God as the Creator of nature, then, surely, the lion's rights come from God for they are a part of his nature. A lion is what he is. He has a right to be.

If we begin to think of human rights the same way we might think of lion rights, we may begin to view the concept of rights in an entirely different framework.

We will continue this discussion of rights tomorrow.

Hankerings

By HENRY McLEMORE

When I depart from this world, I want this carved on my tombstone:

"He finally put the doll house together."

No matter how long I live, or what I accomplish in the future, the assembling of the Do-It-Yourself doll house, which a man who passes for a friend gave my daughter for Christmas, will stand as my greatest achievement.

I started work on it Christmas morning. I finished it late yesterday afternoon.

When one considers my complete lack of ability to read the instructions on a package of instant cocoa, the completion of the doll house ranks with the building of the Pyramids, the hanging of the Babylon Gardens, the stringing of the Golden Gate Bridge, and the nailing of the final spike in the transcontinental railroad.

It isn't a little doll house. By scrunching a bit, I could get inside the living room, and there is room on the top floor for a St. Bernard dog and his family.

When I opened the box on Christmas, and took out the sheet of instructions, I felt that at last I had found my life work. The instruction sheet was half the size of a counterpane and covered with what must be millions of words on what to do and how to do it.

My daughter was impatient. She wanted it right away. I advised patience, and told her her father had studied dentistry in school and so naturally would find the erection of a dwelling a bit difficult.

I worked four days and nights getting the roof together. I never want to hear the words "fold along dotted line," "crease," or "insert C into D" again.

I took a full week getting the first floor together, and then found that I had put one of the windows smack in the middle of the floor. I took out the window and replaced it with a door, which didn't look right, either.

The walls were fairly simple. I had them folded, creased, inserted and glued in two weeks.

The chimney took two solid nights, the staircase three, and the front porch almost as long.

At the end of a month the doll house looked as if it had been struck by a cyclone. It was dirty, tugged and pulled out of shape, and the doors wouldn't stay put.

Today, finished, it stands in my daughter's room. Well, it doesn't stand. It leans against the wall, and the lightest touch sends it toppling forward.

A week before it was finished, I lost the instruction sheet. So I had to put in the partitions by guesswork — and one look at them and you would know that I guessed wrong all along the line.

The furniture had to be put together, too, and it still isn't finished. I have two beds, a dresser, a rocking chair, and a bureau to go. But as I told my daughter, a doll worth her salt can learn to live in a partly furnished house that tilts, and whose chimney keeps falling off.

Next Christmas I am sending the friend who sent me the doll house a 44-foot python. Not one that has to be put together, but one that will crawl out of his box on Christmas morning ready to embrace my friend in his coils and do him in for good.

Here Are A-B-C-Ds Of Kennedy Farm Program

By PETER EDSON

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The most arresting statement in President Kennedy's omnibus farm message to Congress was that, "In spite of a 65-million increase in population by 1980, our farms will be able to produce all we need with 50 million fewer acres than we have in crop land today."

This assumes that the American technological advances in agriculture will continue for the next 20 years at the same rates as in the last 20 years.

The conclusions drawn from this assumption are that the existing $9 billion worth of farm surpluses will have to be reduced to reasonable year-to-year carry-overs, and that land in cultivation will have to be reduced in acreage so that it produces no more than can be consumed.

This is what the new administration farm plan proposes to accomplish by drastic measures.

The nature of the reforms proposed is indicatd by the goal of increasing farm income by 25 per cent within the next five years without increasing subsidies to farmers or prices charged consumers. It will be a neat trick if they can do it.

With United States population increasing the way it is, there is no promise that Department of Agriculture appropriations will decrease. But it is implied that tax dollars will be channeled into more productive uses than paying storage costs on surpluses.

Agriculture Secretary Orville L. Freeman will be out beating the bushes to sell his program to the farmers during most of February and as long thereafter as necessary. The package he is presenting there and to Congress to back up the President's message is a 50-page booklet of text and charts labeled, "Food and Agriculture—a Program for the '60s."

On the cover is a flat, diamond-shaped seal for the program labeled, "Agriculture." Its four quarters illustrate the A-B-C-D's of the plan.

There is a horn of plenty for abundance, a scale for balance, a couple of pine trees for conservation, a power line for development.

—The idea behind the "abundance" part of the program is that more is being produced by efficient American agriculture than can be consumed. New legislation is therefore recommended to enable the United States to share its abundance with needy foreign countries through liberalized sales and grants, and with the needy at home through expanded school lunch and stamp plans.

—The "balance" part of the program is intended to cut production of commodities now in serious oversupply and bring them into line with what is needed and what can be consumed.

—The conservation goal is to achieve a more efficient use of land resources. Grain production woud be cut and more acreage diverted into tree farming, grass lands, hunting, fishing and recreation green belts around metropolitan areas. Loans would be given to farmers to convert their land for enjoyment of the people.

—The "development" in the program means the development of human resources in farm families through better education and by bringing new industries into marginal farm land areas, to provide better incomes for farm people instead of driving them into cities.

The specifics of these programs are too long and complex to present here in any detail. In summary they call for new wheat, feed grain and dairy programs to be approved or rejected by farmers through voting in national referendums.

Cotton and sugar programs will come in separate legislative proposals within a month or so. And the President also promises another message on land resource utilization.

The dairy program would become effective as soon as it can be enacted and ratified. Others would be made effective for the crops harvested in 1963.

These programs will be criticized as unrealistic, visionary, radical, revolutionary and as imposing the most stringent controls ever proposed for American agriculture.

But if they can achieve only a fraction of the goals sought, they might at least wipe out some of the abuses in present farm programs that have been allowed to drift too long uncorrected. The alternative — removal of all controls — would probably bring farm price breaks and ruin for many farmers.

The Nation's Press

FRAMEWORK SHOWS

(Industrial News Review)

In pioneer days if you saw a man cutting logs and notching them at each end, cutting poles suitable for rafters, and splitting shakes, you naturally came to the conclusion he was going to build a cabin

Well, times aren't any different today. You watch individuals or groups of individuals doing certain things and you draw your conclusions as to their objectives, whether it is a man digging a drainage ditch or Russia building atomic weapons.

So when you see the Interior Department, the Reclamation Bureau, Rural Electrification Administration, federal and state officials promoting multi-hundred million dollar programs to put government into tax-exempt electric power production and distribution projects, you naturally assume they favor socialization of the electric industry.

It is difficult to reconcile such a program with a nation which claims its capitalistic, private enterprise system is superior to a socialized economy. We are in a questionable position in the eyes of others when we start practicing the opposite of what we preach.

The good people who favor government ownership of any industry in the United States, whether it be grocery stores or power plants, object strenuously to being referred to as socialists, but according to the dictionary, government in business is socialism and it doesn't make any difference in what country it is practiced.

"CIVIL RIGHTS" MISTAKE

(Christian Economics)

By a vote of four to two the Civil Rights Commission is recommending Congressional action to nullify the right of the states to determine the conditions under which their citizens may exercise the right to vote and to confer this important duty upon the Federal government.

In our judgment this proposal is not only unconstitutional but is another gigantic strike toward the destruction of the significance of our states and the centralization of all power and authority in Washington.

In the long run and all things considered, there is no reason to believe that the Federal government will act more wisely in the interest of our citizens than the several state governments. Generally speaking, larger political units are less likely to safeguard the rights of the people and to promote their well-being and prosperity than are the smaller units of government.

No doubt there are instances where the Federal government might use more wisdom than some of our states, but as a rule, state governments being closer to the people, will more accurately interpret their best judgments.

Continued centralization is the rock upon which free self-government has foundered again and again. If the independence and sovereignty of the states be completely destroyed, and we have already proceeded far in that direction, we will have changed completely our republican form of government and have greatly accelerated our pace toward the government tyranny which the American people so dread.

TRUTH-FORUM

With Ed Delaney

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the FBI since 1924, serving under six of our presidents, cannot be classed as an extremist, an alarmist or a person who makes unsubstantiated assertions. Hoover is not deluded by statements of congressional leaders, or those who assume such roles, by the heads of the State Department, the Defense Department or even the President, when any or all of them endeavor to convince our people that the major threat to our national security is from abroad. Our danger is from within, as the FBI chief has repeatedly warned.

It is authoratively stated that in the FBI files is information which casts the shadow of doubt as to the loyalty of between 2,000 and 2,500 Federal employes. It is something to reflect upon when we consider that the vast majority of these security risks are protected in their jobs because they are in the Civil Service system. Persons in that classification appear to enjoy the status of "untouchables" who may not be summarily fired from their jobs, except in extraordinary circumstances. Commenting on this problem, Sen. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina said recently that if President Kennedy asked Congress for legislation which would permit him to fire such security risks, undoubtedly Congress would give it to him.

Unfortunately some of our presidents have either ignored or refused to act on the information given them by the FBI concerning persons classed as security risks. President Roosevelt "was furious" according to former congressman Martin Dies, when he told Roosevelt of the communist collaborators then in federal jobs. Harry Truman refused to discharge Harry Dexter White, the assistant secretary of the Treasury even though the FBI gave him positive evidence that White was a communist espionage agent. Instead of firing the man, Truman named him at $17,000 a year as U.S. executive director of the International Monetary Fund. The Senate confirmed the nomination because Truman omitted mentioning to the Senate that White was a Soviet agent, which was later proved.

As far back as 1957, J. Edgar Hoover tried to convince the State Department that Fidel Catro was a communist, as did Arthur Gardner, our ambassador to Cuba from 1953 to 1957. Our former ambassador to Mexico, Robert C. Hill has attested that the FBI reports on Castro were conveniently mislaid by a man in the State Department by the name of William Wieland, who is still in that department. Recently that name was called to the attention of President Kennedy at a press conference in Washington, by the woman newspaper reporter, Mrs. Sarah McClendon, who referred to Wieland and another man she named as "security risks." From the reaction of the President she seemed to have touched on a sensative subject. Perhaps Mr. Kennedy had not seen the FBI report on Castro which that State Department man is said to have shunted into the discard. That was during the Eisenhower administration.

The communist threat to this country is from within, as J. Edgar Hoover has repeatedly emphasized. Three previous administrations are on record as having failed to take appropriate action on information furnished by the FBI concerning communists or their agents in vital government positions, the results of which have been disastrous for us. Is the present administration going to ignore the warnings of J. Edgar Hoover, regarded by millions of our people as the most dedicated pro-American in Washington? If so, the people will know where to place the blame.

Quiet Shakeup of CIA by McCone; Several Military Men Weighed for Top Posts

WASHINGTON — Director John McCone is taking full advantage of the overwhelming confirmation vote given him by the Senate to quietly shake up the super-secret Central Intelligence Agency.

As a headline-making starter, he has won President Kennedy's approval to transfer to another agency the CIA's No. 3 man, Richard Bissell, who masterminded the Cuban invasion fiasco.

The unexpected departure of Bissell, an economist and former head of the Mutual Security Agency who joined the CIA five years ago, comes in the wake of last month's sudden retirement of Deputy CIA Director Charles Cabell. He was the agency's No. 2 man and the father of the U-2 plane operation.

To fill these strategic CIA command positions, McCone is considering a number of top-flight military men, including:

VICE ADMIRAL JOHN T. HAYWARD, Deputy Chief of Naval Operations for Development, who is under orders to become commander of the Navy's Carrier Division Two.

LIEUTENANT GENERAL ARTHUR G. TRUDEAU, outspoken Army research chief and former head of Army Intelligence.

LIEUTENANT GENERAL C. V. R. SCHUYLER, Army, Ret., Commissioner, Office of General Services, New York State's Civil Defense Commission, and CIA consultant.

LIEUTENANT GENERAL JOSEPH CARROLL, Air Force, head of the new Defense Intelligence Agency.

President Kennedy is reported "leaning" toward the selection of Admiral Hayward as McCone's deputy director. Hayward's name, along with General Trudeau's, was submitted to the President by McCone.

The President will make the final decision, since he must send the new Deputy Director's name to the Senate for confirmation, after he confers with McCone and a number of other advisers this week.

ATOMIC EXPERT — Admiral Hayward, an expert in the field of atomic weapons and missiles, was recommended for the No. 2 position by the Navy. He has the backing of Secretary of State Rusk and Ambassador Adlai Stevenson, U.S. representative at the United Nations.

General Trudeau, a central figure in the Senate's investigation of the "muzzling" of military officers, was recommended by the Army. Considered one of the top military intelligence experts on active duty, Trudeau has the backing of Senators Henry Jackson, D, Wash., Stuart Symington, D, Mo., Richard Russell, D, Ga., George Aiken, R, Vt. Kenneth Keating, R, N.Y.

General Schuyler who spends part of his time serving on a three-man CIA operations board, is being backed for the No. 2 position by New York's Governor Nelson Rockefeller and former CIA director Allen Dulles.

Lieutenant General Carro, a former FBI official, was recommended by the Air Force.

CHANGING THE GUARD—The transfer of Bissell, the CIA Deputy Director for covert operations, was triggered by the role he played in the ill-fated Cuban invasion.

When the CIA was given the Cuban assignment by former President Eisenhower, Bissell was put in charge of liaison with the Cuban exiles who later made the invasion.

Bissell set up training camps, some disguised as cattle ranches, in Guatemala and Nicaragua. He also got the CIA to put up $40 million for the covert operation and helped select as invasion leader Captain Manuel Artime, who had been with Castro in the Sierra Maestra but later broke with him.

According to White House records, Bissell put forward the final argument that convinced the President the invasion should be undertaken. As the CIA "case officer" for the operation, Bissell argued that the Cuban rebels were at a peak in training and determination. He took the position it was "now or never."

Congressional leaders who supported McCone's confirmation are watching closely to see what he does about Robert Amory, the Deputy Director for Overt Intelligence. In this position, he runs the CIA's Board of National Estimates.

These legislators point out that there has been little change the last ten years in the actual personalities or the thinking of the people who make up the Board.

It is their general opinion that the Board needs some new blood since its estimates have been the basis for many of this country's soft policies toward the Sino-Soviet bloc.

INSIDE THE CIA — CIA Director John McCone has reserved for himself the subjects he knows best — estimates of Soviet nuclear and missile capabilities. McCone believes that Russia and the U.S. are "neck and neck" in the development of atomic weapons. . . Senator Stuart Symington is writing an article for a national magazine in which he plans to blast past CIA estimates of Soviet missiles. He will charge that the estimates were very inaccurate. . . Speaker John McCormack, D, Mass., has warned the White House that sentiment in the House is growing for the establishment of a joint congressional "watchdog" committee to police the CIA.

Historical Whodunit: Who's Got Original Lincoln Proclamation?

By LOUIS CASSELS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Who has the original of Abraham Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation?

That seemingly innocent inquiry was received at the UPI bureau in Washington recently. It embarked a reporter on what turned out to be a fascinating piece of historical detective work.

Before he had finished tracking down the priceless historical document, he had been assured by reputable historians that it:

—was destroyed in the Great Chicago Fire in 1871;

—is stored in a vault at the New York State Library in Albany;

—has been on public exhibit for many years in the National Archives building in Washington.

Moreover, all three answers proved to be correct, in a sense. It all depends on how you define "original."

The problem is complicated by the fact that Lincoln actually issued two Emancipation Proclamations.

The first was dated Sept. 23, 1862. It declared that on Jan. 1, 1863, "all persons held as slaves within any state or designated part of a state, the people whereof shall then be in rebellion against the United States, shall be then, henceforth and forever free."

Historians call this the "preliminary" or "promissory" Emancipation Proclamation. It was a warning to the Confederate states that unless they quit fighting by Jan. 1, their slaves would be proclaimed free.

This threat produced no results, so on Jan. 1, 1863, Lincoln issued a second Proclamation, which contained similar language to the first, but ended with the declaration that "all persons held as slaves within said designated states, and parts of states, are and henceforth shall be free."

Historians have been arguing for 99 years as to which of these proclamations is the really significant one. Neither of them actually "freed the slaves," since both were aimed solely at states which were, by definition, "in rebellion" against Lincoln's authority.

The question of what happened to the "original" proclamation is further complicated by the fact that Lincoln wrote each version in longhand and turned his rough draft over to a professional penman to be engrossed. The engrossed versions were then signed by Lincoln, counter-signed by Secretary of State William H. Seward and sealed with the Great Seal of the United States.

The rough draft of the Sept. 23 proclamation in Lincoln's own handwriting was sold at auction shortly after the end of the Civil War, at a bazaar given in Albany, N.Y., to raise funds for relief of wounded Union veterans. It was purchased for $1,000 by Gerrit Smith, an ardent abolitionist leader. Later he resold it to New York State for the same price.

The document was almost destroyed by a fire which swept through the New York state capitol building on March 29, 1911. A state official risked his life to save it from the blazing building. Since that time, it has been kept in a vault in the State Library, where it could be seen only by special request.

At the urging of the state Civil War Centennial Commission, plans now are under way to place the document on public display in a permanent shrine in the rotunda of the State Library.

Lincoln's handwritten first draft of the Jan. 1 proclamation was also sold to a private collector, at a relief bazaar in Chicago. A few years later it was destroyed, along with Mrs. O'Leary's barn and most of the city, in the Great Fire of Oct. 8-11, 1871.

The engrossed copies of both proclamations — which are the "originals" in the sense of being the official versions — are on display at the National Archives in Washington.

Texas Experiences 'Seige' Of Industrial Expansion

AUSTIN (UPI)—"A siege of industrial expansion in Texas" last year resulted in the planned investment of more than $1 billion, the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research said Saturday.

Twenty firms invested more than $500 million of the total, the bureau said, the equivalent of an outlay of $50 by every one of the nine million citizens of the state.

"In virtually every corner of the state, industry pledged millions of dollars in an effort to strengthen productive capacity," the bureau added in a report, by James J. Kelly, managing editor of the Texas Business Review.

While few of the large projects are completed in the same year they are begun, he said, the commencement of an industrial project brings the most vigorous financial activity. And the announcement of a new plant induces other investment.

As an example, Kelly cited the new industry expected to come to the the Houston area as the $60 million space laboratory of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration is completed.

"Although the center will not engage in manufacturing, its physical presence in Houston will undoubtedly attract many satellite firms in the manufacture of electronic instruments and components," the bureau said.

The report said the state's electrical power industry is expanding to serve growing industry and population. The largest power generating unit in the southwest, to cost $27.6 million, is under construction in Fort Worth by the Texas Electric Service Co.

Other major industrial projects under way in 1961:

—An $80 million petrochemical complex at Odessa by El Paso Natural Gas Co. and Rexall Drug Co.

—Another $80 million petrochemical plant by Monsanto Chemical Co. at Chocolate Bayou in Brazoria County.

—Carling Brewing Company's $20 million plant at Fort Worth, and a $5 million container plant there by Crown Cork and Seal Co.

—Addition of a $20 million seamless pipe extrusion mill to the Lone Star Steel Co. plant at Daingerfield.

—A $14 million rolling mill in Wylie, near Dallas, by the Quaker States Metals Co.

One-Time School Dormitories Now House Research On Viruses

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (UPI) — Basement rooms where food once was stored for a dormitory's residents now house a laboratory for the study of how viruses get into cells and, once there, how they grow.

Small storage rooms serve as walk-in incubators in which animal viruses and cells are kept at controlled temperatures. Large meat refrigerators have been converted into freezers to keep the cells and viruses at temperatures as low as minus 120 degrees Fahrenheit.

Dr. Ernest H. Ludwig, professor of bacteriology at Pennsylvania State University, said the living cells must be preserved because they are needed in the study of such viruses as those causing measles and polio.

"Formerly we had to use a whole animal for cell study," Ludwig said. "The technique of tissue culture, which is about 10 years old, now allows us to grow animal cells in a bottle."

The virology laboratory is located in McAllister Hall, a dormitory which housed students for many years. With the building of newer residence halls, "Mac" Hall, as it is affectionately known, has been converted into faculty offices.

The lab is basically interested in how a virus gets into a living cell and then makes more viruses, Ludwig said. Virologists at the University colaborate with other researchers, drug firms, and hospitals so that data found here may be useful in developing means to prevent the diseases viruses cause, he said.

In order to know how viruses infect cells, we need to know what cells do by themselves while growing, Ludwig said.

"For example," he said, "how do they handle fats, proteins or sugar-glucose?

"After we know how the cell carries on its own uninterrupted life processes, then we put viruses into that situation and look at the same processes.

"For every one virus that infects a cell, we get 1,000 back. Obviously the cell bio-chemical machinery is changed. All the cell's own processes. The cells may be energies are not directed to their destroyed. Consequently, this invasion results in diseases."

King Kong Junior Set To Make Mark As Yank

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — Young Charlie Keller said today he doesn't mind it a bit being the son of Kong.

King Kong, that is. Which is what his father was known as in the days he was one of the mightiest of the New York Yankee fence busters.

But no matter what the comparisons, young Charlie said as he put on Yankee flannels for the first time at the opening of the New York training camp, it's something he has to do.

"Dad told me to do what it was that I really wanted to do," explained the 22-year-old husky from Frederick, Md. "He said it's better to try it and fail than not to try and regret it the rest of my life."

It's been more than a decade since "King Kong" left the big leagues. A stocky man who appeared to have been hacked out of granite, Keller's appearance terrorized pitchers as they looked down to the plate where he crouched menacingly at bat. Then came an operation for a ruptured disc and, while he finished up at Detroit, it never was the same so he stepped out in 1961.

"We raise harness horses, you know, pacers and trotters," said young Charlie. "We have about 35 head and the three of us, Dad and I and my brother, Don, who also is in the Yankee chain, hope to enlarge it one of these days."

There would be, it might be supposed, a great deal of baseball talk on the Keller farm.

"Not at all," grinned young Charlie. "Mostly we talk about horses."

A first baseman, King Kong's son has all the equipment to make it big "in a couple of years," according to Yankee general manager Roy Hamey. Six feet, two and one-half inches tall and weighing a solid 191 pounds, young Charlie has the same thing going for him that his dad had—a big bat.

"He's one of those real nonchalant guys," said Hamey analytically. "He swings the bat real good and has fine power. He doesn't have the arm for the outfield but that bat might carry him quite a ways."

Young Charlie, who has been married three years and has a two-year-old son, got off to a slow start in organized ball because of a bad back. He hit only .291 at St. Petersburg in 1959 and then in 1960 batted .304 for Fargo Moorhead.

"I had the back operated on December of 1959," he recalls. "It still handicapped me some in 1960 because I didn't have any power but last year I felt that I was all over the operation."

He should have. Because young Charlie led the Eastern League at Binghamton with 38 doubles and 17 triples and won the batting title with a .349 average. He rapped out 19 home runs to boot.

"They're all too tense in the beginning," pointed out batting coach Joe DiMaggio, who was a teammate of Charlie's dad. "But a kid like this has an even greater load on him. That record he had last season might set him on fire."

But young Charlie isn't blaming anything on the old man.

"Sure, the fans get on me once in a while," he shrugged. "But I don't pay it any attention. I do the best I can. My dad broke in with the Yankees in 1939, the year I was born. But we're all a new crop now and what our fathers did isn't going to help or hinder us. It's strictly up to us."

Texas Indoor Track Season Comes To Halt Next Week

ODESSA (UPI)—The Texas indoor track season rolls to a halt next week end in the Ector County Coliseum.

The Sand Hills American Business Club of Odessa is sponsoring the Saturday night event, which has attracted entries from eight colleges and 16 high schools.

McMurry, Howard Payne, Texas Tech, Howard County Junior College, Odessa Junior College and Sul Ross will have teams competing under their banners, while Texas A&M, Texas Tech and Hardin-Simmons will have some athletes competing unattached.

Among the latter group are such former area schoolboy greats as Andrews' Ted Nelson and R. E. Merritt, now at Texas A&M.

Odessa's three high schools and Andrews, Crane, Kermit, Midland's two schools, Fort Stockton, Grandfalls, Colorado City, San Angelo, Brownfield, Pecos and Brownfield's Union High will be in the schoolboy division.

THIS ONE'LL SHAKE HIM UP

Wildlife Will Be Capitol Exhibit

United Press International

A kaleidoscopic exhibit of Texas wildlife as near to the real thing as possible without making it a zoo is being planned to brighten the lobby of the state's new office building the capitol complex.

To be financed by the Game and Fish Commission's special appropriation approved by the Legislature, the exhibit will have a completion target date about a year from now. Officials hope to have the exhibit in place when the building under construction opens.

The unusual combination of living and static exhibits will be the result of planning by a special committee named by Gov. Price Daniel to give Texans and tourists a limited-space look at the variety of wildlife in Texas.

Across a planned 60-foot-wide exhibit case that will run 20 feet deep, a viewer can see the mule deer and javelina of West Texas, the whitetail and turkey of Central Texas, and the bobcat and raccoon of East Texas — Taxidermy set in natural habitat. But the exhibit will take a living dimension from shrubbery and a stream meandering through the exhibit.

Planners hope to plant real shrubbery to show, perhaps, the prickly pear and chaparral of West Texas, the cedar of Central Texas, and the post oak of East Texas.

Big League Players Look To Big Seven

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI)—Baseball now is every bit as good as it was in his or any other era, Joe DiMaggio insisted today, but being big business has "taken the fun out of it."

"They don't seem to have the fun we had," asserted the one-time Yankee Clipper who now is an honorary batting coach at the training camp of the world champions. "Everybody is too busy being a business man."

That, he says, is because of the "big seven."

"That's about all they have on the average," said DiMag, still looking fit after more than a decade on the sidelines. "Seven years to make hay while the sun shines. They have to capitalize on it while they're playing and the opportunities are greater now than ever."

There are a great number of factors, he explained, in addition to ever-increasing salary levels.

"Television has become a terrific market," said the handsome Californian whose once black hair has turned a flattering steel grey. "Then, too, they now get paid well for speaking engagements, everybody seems to have an agent, and the endorsement market is red hot."

DiMag isn't knocking it. He doesn't have to. For years he was the pride of the Yankees, the man who made them tick, and there is some debate as to whether he or Ted Williams was the highest salaried star in the game.

Yet, he admitted, the players today have it much better than the players of yesterday.

"As a whole, the major leaguers now are as good as those of any era," he analyzed. "These current Yankees are an exceptional team and I'm not one to say we were better or worse. It's impossible to compare two teams of two different eras."

"But," he added, "you can't get away from the fact that everything has changed for the better. Okay, so you ask, how can equipment change? Easy. The bats are lighter with the 32 to 33 ounce bat in vogue so they can give it the quick swing. That's because everybody wants to go for the fences."

Joltin' Joe picked up a glove which had a large webbing of leather between thumb and forefinger.

"See this?" he asked. "Well, we had smaller gloves with maybe an inch and a half of webbing. This thing is a trap. Go in there in the trainer's room and you'll see a whirlpool machine, diathermy equipment, ultra-sonic muscle toning machines, weight charts and equipment to give the players all kinds of shots.

"And look at this plush locker room." He waved an arm around the Yankee clubhouse, light, roomy and airy. "The first day I came to spring training with the Yankees we doubled up two to a locker. Tony Lazzeri took me around to meet all the players and we didn't have to move 20 feet."

Joe grins at the recollection.

"Red Ruffing said to me, 'So you hit .298 in the Coast League, huh? Well, with a new ball on every pitch, up here you ought to hit .400.' I was a shy kid, so I just got red in the face."

That day when he first put on the Yankee flannels stand out, lo these many years later, as the brightest day of Joe's baseball life.

"On the field, I guess that 1941 hitting streak of 56 straight games is the biggest playing thrill," says the hawk-faced man whose innumerable diamond heroics put him in the Hall of Fame. "But that first day with the Yankees, that was something I'll always treasure."

Shockers Speared By Lancer Cagers, 60-48

By DICK RABE
Daily News Sports Editor

LUBBOCK — Monterey's Plainsmen continued to stalk through District 3-AAAA as the cage giants of the Panhandle Friday night with a convincing 67-55 victory over Pampa's Harvesters in the Monterey gym.

The Plainsmen, who once again were held at bay through the first three quarters, exploded with a vengence in the final go round with 25 points to ice the contest away and send the Harvesters down to their ninth loss in loop play this year. They have won three.

Monterey continued to maintain its league lead over second place Borger with their eleventh win of the year. They have lost one. Borger kept pace with a 60-41 thrashing of Tascosa to give them a 10-2 record in district.

The game started out like one of the major upsets of the year in the making. The Harvesters jumped off to a thin one point lead in the early moments of the quarter but the Plainsmen began to gather momentum toward the end of the first period and held a 15 - 6 lead at the end of the first go round.

The Harvesters struck for five points in a row in the second quarter but the Plainsmen continued to hit away with uncanny accuracy and held a 28 - 22 lead at the half.

Pampa narrowed the lead to 29-27 in the third quarter, but that's as close as it was to get as the boys from Lubbock rallied to hold a 42 - 35 lead at the end of the third quarter.

The Plainsmen then sewed it up with their big fourth quarter, spearheaded by Russ Wilkinson's 10 points. Wilkinson ended up with high point honors for the Plainsmen, garnering 17 points for the night. Jerry Morgan and John Crippen each had 14 while Billy Tapp rattled the boards with 13 points.

For the Harvesters, Randy Matson was the whole show. The big 6 - 6 post man had his finest hour in district play with 27 points to eclipse his 26 - point total against Palo Duro in the opening game of the season in district.

The rugged junior also tied his district point total of last season at 212 points. Matson has two more games to better last year's mark and also to snare the district scoring title. Going into the game, Randy was fourth in scoring in loop play and is sure to move up to the number three spot after Friday night's action.

Matson poured in ten field goals and seven out of ten free throws to account for his point total. Matson sank 15 points in the first half and then pitched in 12 more in the second half in his point tying effort.

Wayne Kreis had 12 points to share in the Harvester offensive attack. Kreis was also hot from the line, connecting with six out of eight.

Overall, the Harvesters connected with 17 out of 25 from the line for a blistering .680 percentage.

The Shockers also received a rude welcome in their contest with the Lancers, dropping a 60-48 decision.

The Shockers started off rather slow, trailing 8 - 3 at the end of the first quarter and 28 - 10 at the half. In the fourth quarter the locals began hitting with more regularity and narrowed it down to 51 - 44. Their resurgence was short - lived however as the Lancers lowered their spears and won going away.

Donnie Ayers led the Shockers from the floor with 16 points while Kenny Hebert tossed in 13 more to share scoring laurels.

The loss left the Shockers with a 7-5 record in loop play and a 17 - 6 record overall.

Other results Friday night found Palo Duro rapping Lubbock, 77 - 57 and Plainview easing past Amarillo, 60 - 57. Amarillo and Pampa now are deadlocked in the cellar with 3 - 9 records, a dispute they will settle Tuesday night in the Harvester fieldhouse when both teams collide in their next cage encounter.

NAACP Asks For AAU Ring Help

DALLAS (UPI)—The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People asked the Amateur Athletic Union Saturday to intervene in behalf of a Negro fighter from Del Rio, Tex. who has been denied entry in the state Golden Gloves tournament at Fort Worth.

The request was made by Clarence A. Laws, NAACP southwest regional secretary, in a telegram to AAU president Louis J. Fisher in High Point, N.C. Laws asked Fisher to take steps to permit the fighter to take part in the tournament.

The Negro fighter is Marshall Bean, a featherweight who won the regional Golden Gloves crown at San Antonio. Laws said Bean had been advised he could not appear in the state tournament becuase he is a Negro.

The state finals are sponsored by the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, and get underway Feb. 15.

Laws said Negroes were barred from the finals last year, and that arrangements were made for Negro fighters to compete in the Iowa state finals at Des Moines.

"For the AAU to sanction this or any athletic event which has a known policy of racial discrimination," Laws said, "is to aid and abet racial bigotry and endangers the primary purpose of amateur sports."

Flem Hall, sports editor of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, was quoted in the Del Rio News-Herald as saying "this is a pretty sticky question," and that "we're following local custom."

Hall was quoted as saying officials of regional tournaments were told they coud run their tournaments as they wished, but were advised in advance of the racial barrier in the state tournament at Fort Worth.

Four To Receive Athletic Awards

DALLAS (UPI)—All four honorees—Darrell Royal, Norm Cash, James Saxton and L. L. (Red) Lewis—will be on hand to personally accept their awards next Friday night from the Texas Sports Writers Association.

The occasion will be the annual Sports Achievement Dinner at the Dallas downtown YMCA, jointly sponsored by the sports writers and the downtown YMCA's Saturday Morning Quarterbacks Club.

Royal, who coached the Texas Longhorns to a Southwest Conference co-championship in football and to a Cotton Bowl victory over Mississippi, was voted the dual honors of Texas Senior College Coach of the Year and Southwesterner of the Year for his 1961 achievements.

Cash, a former Sul Ross State College star from Justiceburg who now ranches near Eldorado, Tex., was named Texas Pro Athlete of the Year for winning the American League batting championship with the Detroit Tigers.

Saxton, a concensus all-America halfback and the sparkplug of Royal's third- ranked Longhorns was voted the state's Amateur Athlete of the Year award.

Lewis was named the Texas Junior College Coach of the Year for his job of piloting Howard County JC at Big Spring to the national track and field championship.

Wilbur Evans, sports publicist of the Southwest Conference and president of the sports writers group, will present the honorees with plaques symbolic of their awards.

Female Golfers Are Doing A Double Burn

PALM BEACH, Fla. (UPI)—The lady golf pros are doing a double burn today.

Fourteen of them took on Sam Snead in a four round tournament on a par three course and, leading him by two shots with one round to go and all even with only seven holes to play, they blew it by five shots.

Which gave them two major disappointments this year.

The first was that Mickey Wright, the belting blonde from Dallas who was all even with Samuel Jackson just seven holes from home, wasn't named the woman athlete of the year in the various polls conducted here and there.

Just how Mickey did manage to blow the deuce isn't quite clear to anybody, particularly the women wedge artists. And, it might be added, in this corner.

Mickey, herself, is a real McGuire about it.

"I hope they never give it to me," quoth the dynamiter from Dallas who was beaten by track star Wilma Rudolph in most of those eenie meenie, minie, moe pin-sticking contests. "If they ever did, I wouldn't acknowledge it. Let's say I'm just not interested."

When you consider that Mickey on the fairways last year captured 10 tournaments, was the leading money winner in women's golf, and pulled a tremendous slam by capturing the U.S. Women's Open, the Ladies' Professional Golfers Association championship and the Titleholders tournament, it's small wonder that she carries a chip on her shoulder.

The lady pros don't always see eye to eye. But in this instance they are 100 per cent behind the pretty gal who wallops a ball farther than most men.

"Mickey certainly should have been anybody's top athlete of the year," said Marilynn Smith. "It's almost as if the people who voted, whoever they were, didn't know what was going on."

There was agreement from Ruth Jessen, the classic blonde from Seattle, who was leading Snead by two shots on the heels of a four under par 50 as they started the final round in this par three tournament.

"People forget that we play all year, and every day. What do you have to do to be considered an athlete?"

Louise Suggs, who beat Snead by two shots in this same tournament last year, figured that Mickey was cheated out of her just deserts "because for some reason people don't seem to be paying as much attention to women's golf as they used to do."

But Betty Jameson summed it up for all of them when she allowed: "It's as if the people who voted in any of those things don't know what's going on in the sports world."

Betty had another remark concerning Snead's victory, as close as it was up to the final seven holes.

"To say that we're disappointed," she acknowledged, "is the understatement of the year."

Considering Mickey's failure, as she finished second again, it was a case of double a-n-d nothing.

Colts Shell Out Millions First Year

HOUSTON (UPI) — It's two months to the day before the first ball will be thrown, but the Houston Colt 45s already have shelled out $8 million in bringing major league baseball to Houston.

That figure was revealed Friday by former Houston mayor Roy Hofheinz, one of the major stockholders in the Houston Sports Association, as the club nears the April 10 National League opener here.

Hofheinz said the association originally put up $2.5 million and its 12 stockholders pledged a similar amount. An additional $3 million has been spent, Hofheinz said, "because we're in this all the way."

The Colts' 32,000-capacity temporary stadium, originally estimated to cost less than 71 million, is costing about that amount, and the club spent $1.85 milion in buying players in the league pool.

Pitchers Might Have To Cope With Ump's Watch

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) —Another gimmick hovered over the sports world Saturday — a proposed time clock in the left field fence to make sure that the pitcher delivers the ball within the 20-second limit.

This is the brain child of Bill Sayles, general manager for Portland of the Pacific Coast League. He says that it would add "showmanship" to the sport and speed up the game.

But several major league players of past and present feel that the idea belongs at the bottom of the Columbia River. Along with the clock.

Sayles actually is within the law. Paragraph 8.04 in baseball's rules provides that a pitcher get off a delivery within 20 seconds after he has the sphere or the umpire can call a ball. The rule only is in force with the bases empty.

Dewey Soriano, the coast league president and a former major league hurler himself, started the idea recently when he announced that he would equip his umpires this season with stop watches to be pulled on tardy hurlers.

There would be exceptions, however. The count down, Soriano said, would halt if a pitcher requested a new ball or discussed strategy with the catcher or other team members. Otherwise, the 20-second rule would be in effect.

Sayles then disclosed that he was getting an estimate on the cost of installing a time clock in his left field fence.

"It will put a little showmanship back into the game and make the crowd participate," he says. "And a slow pitcher will have the fans on him when — say — he has held the ball for 16 second."

Now let's hear what some of the players think.

"The idea is absolutely silly," says Carl Hubbel, the Hall of Fame southpaw who now is farm director for the San Francisco Giants. "It's the worst thing that could happen to baseball. One of the advantages of this game is that there is no time element. The better team can win without being thwarted by the clock, as happens in football and basketball."

"It might result in arguments, especially at crucia points of a game, that would slow things up even more," says Don Mossi, the Detroit Tigers lefty. "They've never really enforced the 20 second rule in the majors."

Walter Mails, former Cleveland huring star, said the time limit was tried in the coast league during the presidency of W. C. Tuttle some 25 years ago.

"And the idea fell flat," Mails said. "It isn't the pitcher who slows up a game — unless he is slowly walking to the plate from the bench to strike out. It's the changing of relief pitchers and other factors."

Okay, Mr. Sayles. Take it from there.

Six Basketball Stars Enshrined Into Hall

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (UPI)—Six top figures in basketball's deceased, Saturday were named to the sport's new Hall of Fame, increasing membership to 50.

The group was headed by the late Frank (Pop) Morgenweck, a promoter described as the "Connie Mack of pro basketball." He died in 1941 after 32 years of operating clubs in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, Pa.; Camden, Elizabeth, Paterson and Passaic, N.J.; Springfield and Framingham, Mass.; Kingston, Poughkeepsie, Cohoes and Rochester, N.Y.; Chicago and Ft. Wayne.

Others named by the Hall of Fame's honors committee were college coach Harland Orville (Pat) Page, college player John Ashworth (Cat) Thompson, AAU star Jack McCracken, pro player Barney Sedran, and Lynn Wilbur St. John, a member and chairman for 25 years of basketball's joint rules committee while serving as athletic director at Wooster, Ohio Wesleyan and Ohio State.

Morgenweck, who retired from active basketball promotion in 1932, was credited with developing such professional stars as Johnny Beckman, Benny Borgman, Maurice Tome, George Henschel, Carl and Mickey Hustra, Rusty Saunders and George Artus and once managed the Chicago Bruins for owner George Halas.

Page, 75, of Watervliet, Mich. coached four sports at Chicago from 1911 to 1920 when he became Butler University coach and won the national AAU basketball title in 1924.

He served as coach at Indiana University from 1925 to 1930 and at the College of Idaho from 1937 to 1939. His career record was 200 wins, 127 losses. In addition, he was a veteran batting practice pitcher for both the Chicago Cubs and the Chicago White Sox.

Thompson, 54, of Idaho Falls, Idaho, graduated from Montana State in 1930. Though he was only five feet, 10 inches tall, he led his team to a 36-2 record in 1928-29 and was a Rocky Mountain Conference choice all four years he played.

McCracken, from Northwest Missouri, died in 1958 after a career that included selections as AAU All-America player in 1932, 1935, 1937, 1938, 1939, 1940, 1942 and 1945. He played for such AAU teams as Piggly Wiggly Phillips Denver Nuggety, Safeways, American Leion and Ambrose.

Sedran, 71, of New York City, was only 5 feet, 4 inches tall but was one of early pro basketbal's top stars, playing between 1911 and 1926 with the Ceveland Rosenblums, New York Whirlwinds, Newburgh Albany and Utica, N.Y. Fort Wayne, Ind., Carbondale, Pa., Philadelphia Jaspers Bridgport, Conn. before serving as coach from 1930 to 1946 of such clubs as the Brooklyn Jewels, Kate Smith's Celtics, Wilmington (De.) Bombers and the New York Gothams.

St. John died in 1959 after serving as a member of the joint rules committee from 1912 to 1937 and its chairman from 1918. He was described as "a master in diplomach, performed a monumental task in unifying all basketball groups under one playing code."

Colonial Has 25 Entered In Annual Meet

FORT WORTH (UPI)—Colonial National Invitation golf tournament officials filled their 54-player field for the May 10-13 affair to the halfway mark Saturday with acceptances from all 25 tour champions crowned since the 1981 event.

Colonial's own semi-retired veterans Ben Hogan and Byron Nelson had been invited earlier to compete again in the $40,000 tourney to bring the entry list to 27.

Colonial officials extended invitations last week at Palm Springs, Calif., to the 25 pros who have won the 33 tournaments played since last May.

All accepted, including Doug Sanders, winner of four titles; Gay Brewer Jr., winner of three and Doug Ford, Gene Littler and Arnold Palmer, who have won two each.

Others in the latest list of acceptances include Jack Burke, Joe Campbell, Bill Casper, Bruce Crampton, Jacky Cupit, Jim Ferrier, Jack Flec, Jay Hebert, Dave Hill, Tommy Jacobs, Don January, George Knudson, Dave Marr, Billy Maxwell, Bob McCallister, Cary Middlecoff, Eric, Monti, Gary Player, Phil Rodgers and Earl Stewart.

Lee Seventh Wins Pair Of Contests

Lee's seventh grade cagers carded a pair of victories over Phillips Friday.

In the Lee Seventh "A" game, the locals won 32-12. Lee led at the half, 39-2.

Jack Thompson had 25 and James Matney 10 points to lead the locals in scoring. The win gives Lee a 7-0 record in loop play.

Lee seventh's "B" team also won, 24-2.

Lee seventh plays Pampa Junior High Thursday in the final game of the season.

Wilson Will Try To Be Mediator

CHICAGO (UPI)—Tug Wilson, president of the U. S. olympic committee, Sunday will attempt to mediate the dispute between the AAU and the NCAA to eliminate a roadblock which could affect the abilities of the 1964 olympic team.

Eight representatives of each warring group will meet with Wilson for a two-day session, and Wilson indicated there would be no announcement of any action until Monday.

The NCAA-AAU dispute centers on control of international representation in basketball, gymnastics and track, and Wilson hoped that some agreement could be made between the two groups to guarantee recognition of the best possible United States teams for olympic competition.

The AAU previously has controlled all such U. S. teams but the NCAA recently has begun a campaign for representation on the boards controlling these sports, as well as seeking representations for high schools, the armed forces, and YMCA.

White Deer Cops Title

White Deer's Bucks clinched the district championship Friday night with a 59-44 victory over Gruver.

The win gives the Bucks a 9-0 record in loop play with one game yet to play, with Sunray Tuesday in White Deer.

Jimmy Thurmond had 15 and Gerald Bichsel 12 to lead the winners. Vernon had 18 and Harris 16 to pace the losers.

White Deer's Does dropped their game, however, 62-55, Juana Jo Moore had 32 points for the losers while Gammill had 36 for the winners to capture high point honors.

Travis Ekes By Houston, 12-11

Travis eked out a narrow 12-11 victory over Sam Houston Saturday morning in Pee Wee cage action.

Johnny Epperson and Larry Roberts each had five points to pace the winners.

United Grid Loop Is Good Training

CHICAGO (UPI) — There is a place for low pressure professional football, George Gareff believes and he said today he expects to find it with his United Football League.

Gareff, commissioner of the infant circuit heading into its second year of operation with at least eight teams, was here to attend the ceremonial signing of veteran Chicago Bears defensive end Ed Sprinkle as coach of the seventh UFL team, the Chicago Bulls.

"Nobody made money last year," Gareff said, "and I'd say the average loss was $20,000. But that's because I insisted on husband and wife accounting. How much came in and how much went out. No amortization of funds. Nothing for equipment. No davenport you can use five years.

"I think maybe three or four teams can make money or break even this year, because their equipment will be paid for."

Gareff, a Columbus, Ohio, attorney, said the UFL was his idea and he sold the notion of a franchise to six cities last year, Columbus, Grand Rapids, Indianapolis, Akron, Cleveland and Louisville. In addition to Chicago for 1962, Harrisburg, Pa., and Wheeling, W.Va., woul d be in the league. "I don't think we can go with more than 12 teams," he said.

Chicago franchise holder Bob Angus, who said he expected to lose money this year, purchased the UFL franchise for $5,000 and like every other owner put up a $5,000 "completion of the season" bond and a $25,000 bond that he wouldn't jump the league.

Angus, who has operated the Chicago Hornets in the semi-pro Tri-State League for two seasons, said he applied for the UFL franchise because he couldn't get "an answer" from the American Football League, to whom he also applied.

"Joe Foss (AFL commissioner) sent Angus to me," Gareff said. "He also sent me the Harrisburg-Hershey people last September."

Gareff said he believed his UFL could go three ways—become a third major league, develop into a farm system for the NFL and the AFL, or remain an independent minor league.

"We've sent 19 players this year up to the NFL or the AFL," he said, "and there'll be more. We use the NFL player contract without an option clause, except to the team he plays with. There's no trading or selling of players, and after one season the player is a free agent if he can make a deal with a major league team.

"We insist that each team be capitalized for $75,000 to $100,000 and each visiting team is guaranteed $500 per game against 10 cents for each adult admission. Last year we drew between 150,000 and 200,000 for 30 games."

This year, Gareff said, the league will play a 12-game schedule starting Sept. 8 and ending Nov. 24 with the title game between divisional champions one week later.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (UPI)—A total of 80 college football games were played indoors at the local Convention Hall between 1930 and 1939.

Rifle Experts Will Vie In Annual Rifle Tourney

Pampa's ninth annual invitational junior rifle tournament will be held Saturday morning starting at 9 a.m. at the Pampa Rifle and Pistol club.

The club, which is located at Recreation park, is one-half mile east of the Pampa city limits on highway 60.

Any individual junior, or any four-person team of juniors under 19 years of age, either boys or girls is eligible to compete. The team must be sponsored either by an adult or an organization. Membership in the National Rifle association is not required to enter the tournament. Any junior boy or girl may fire as an individual, competing for the individual awards.

There is no entry fee or charge for targets. Entrants must furnish their own ammunition, however. Firing is limited to any .22 calibre rim rifle that can be fired single shot. So-called automatics are not allowed.

Ten shots will be fired from the prone, kneeling, sitting and standing positions at the regulation distance of 50 feet. Coaching will be permitted with the NRA governing all action.

The Addington trophy, the Sportsman Store trophy, the Pampa Hardware trophy and the Pampa No. 2 team trophy will be awarded to other team and individual winners. A new trophy this year, presented by the First National Bank, will be presented to the top junior shooter this year from Pampa.

The trophies are presented for one year. Riboons are also given to each member of the winning team, and to high, second and third individuals and high girl shooters.

The range is one of the finest in the Panhandle area. It is well lighted and heated, has tiled firing points and target carriers and an all-weather road leads to the door. Floor mats and sighting scopes will be available, but firers should bring their own scope if they have one.

Last year's team winners were the Childress American Legion teams number one and two. Individual winners were Gary Hassell, Childress, first and Allen Hamilton, Childress, second place.

Kaskel After Wait Built Own Course

MIAMI, Fla. (NEA) Alfred L. Kaskel got teed off because he couldn't tee off in the Miami-Miami Beach area. After waiting in line for more than two hours several times, New York financier Kaskel decided to build a golf course of his own.

The result is Doral, the most luxurious resort hotel and country club constructed in South Florida in nearly 40 years. It is the most ambitious resort project to be built in the western environs of Miami since the famous Miami Biltmore launched its imported Venetian gondolas on the canals of Coral Gables in the late 1920's.

In late years we have developed the habit of opening golf courses half way around the world. It was about a year ago that we accompanied Samuel Jackson Snead to historic Caesarea, equidistant between Tel Aviv and Haifa, where the incredible hillbilly beat Harry Weetman, the British Walker Cup player, in a match launching the first major course ever in Israel and the entire ancient Middle East.

En route home we dropped out of the clouds in Rome, where Snead played a match inaugurating the Olgiata Club, laid out on the farm 12 miles from the Eternal City from whence came the incomparable thoroughbred Ribot, Gene Sarazen, who more recently made a television picture at Olgiata, says the clubhouse there is the finest he has ever seen. One lot at Olgiata sold for $40,000.

The surest way to success for a realty undertaking is to build a golf course first, then build homes around it. That did the trick in Las Vegas, Nev., and many other places. Dan Topping, co-owner of the baseball New York Yankees, recently paid $80,000 for a lot bordering on Lyford Cay in Nassau.

Palm Springs Calif., practically was built around golf courses. Laurance S. Rockefeller is now building courses in Honolulu.

Doral's 1,200-acre preserve is situated four miles west of the Miami International Airport. It's extraordinary how many golf courses are located near airports —Wentworth in England, Prestwick in Scotland, St. Cloud in Paris — to name three more that come to mind offhand.

Alfred Kaskel isn't the first golfer to build his own course because he grew tired of queueing up to pay a greens fee. George Morton Levy, the New York attorney and Roosevelt Raceway magnate, did the same thing up the pike a piece in Fort Lauderdale. A second new addition to the Greater Miami area golf clubs is the Country Club of Miami. And still there aren't nearly enough courses to accommodate all who would like to play during the height of the season.

Some 300 new courses a year have swollen the total in the United States to more than 6,000, and still people wait their turn.

Alfred Kaskel transformed a wilderness into three lush courses in nine months. The fabulous Polish immigrant is going to advertise them with the richest tournament in Florida history—the $50,000 PGA-Doral Invitational and $5,000 Pro-Am March 21-25.

Steers Begin Pre-Season Diamond Play

AUSTIN (UPI) — Coach Bibb Falk begins putting his University of Texas baseball team through pre-season workouts Thursday, with only one starter missing from last year's Southwest Conference championship team.

Second baseman Phil Hipps, who graduated, may be replaced by Pat Rigby, who won all-conference honors as a third baseman last spring.

In a chain reaction of position changes, David Skinner may move from center field to Rigby's third base.

The only outfield post apparently wrapped up is left field, where 1961 al-American Chuck Knutson is back.

Buddy New and Lew Brazeton both are available at first base, but Falk is expected to use Brazelton in right field.

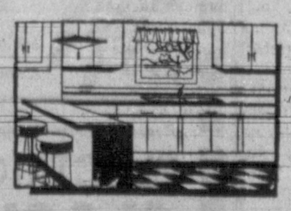

The Longhorn pitching staff will be led by two returning seniors, Tom Belcher and Bob Callaway. Both have twice made the all-conference team.

Foreign Student Influx Swamping English Schools

LONDON (UPI) — In the past 10 years the social face of Britain has been radically altered by the huge influx of students from all over the world who have come to study or train in British schools and hospitals.

Today one person in every 500 of the population of the United Kingdom is a foreign student and most of these come from Africa and Asia.

There are a number of centers of learning in Britain where native British are in the minority. The same is true in many hospitals, especially in the large cities.

In London's famous Inns of Court, such as The Temple and Lincolns Inn, where lawyers are trained, British students were in the minority as long ago as 1959. In that year the total student body was 1,251, of which 409 were from the United Kingdom, 438 from Africa and a similar number from Asia.

According to official figures, the current annual intake of trainee nurses in Britain is 50,000. Of these, 8,000 come from Commonwealth and British colonial countries, roughly 6,000 from Africa and the West Indies.

Britain's National Health Service has opened the door wide to young doctors from the Commonwealth to train in junior posts in Britain's hospitals. The exact number is not known, since Commonwealth citizens need no labor permits in Britain and race and origin of doctors and nurses are not recorded by the Ministry of Health.

It has been unofficially estimated that approximately 37 per cent of the doctors holding junior posts in London hospitals are Africans; in Manchester about 49 per cent, in Leeds 50 per cent and in Liverpool 36 per cent. The Ministry of Health said it could not confirm those estimates but a spokesman said they "could be right."

There are over 55,000 foreign undergraduate students studying in Britain at the moment, most of them from the under-developed counries. But these official figures do not include part-time students or those resident for under six months. Nor do they include the thousands of professional men and women who come to Britain for further study.

Of these 55,000 foreign students, approximately 40,000 come from Commonwealth countries and over 16,000 of them from Africa.

Of the African full - time students, 2,600 are attending university, 4,200 technical colleges, 1,700 studying law, 450 teacher training, 8,000 nursing, 3,900 practical training and the others attending private colleges and institutions.

These overseas students have doubled in numbers in the last five years and are still increasing, with those from Ghana and Nigeria heading the list.

The official figures give 3,800 students from Ghana and 6,800 from Nigeria at present in Britain. But this number can be doubled if the part time and private students are included.

There are another 7,000 - students from the West Indies and other British Caribbean dependencies.

From the Asian countries of the Commonwealth the official figure is 10,000. But another 5,000 are believed to be "working students" and not officially recorded.

"Know-how" has now become Britain's chief export. Last June Prime Minister Harold Macmillan set up the new Ministry of Technical Cooperation with Dennis Vosper as Minister to coordinate this work of supplying "know-how" to the under - developed countries.

While most of the foreign students in Britain come at their own expense or are sponsored by their governments or organizations in their own countries, the British Government also has various schemes as part of its aid to under-developed countries.

Last year the Government brought 400 high - grade steel workers from India and trained them in British steel plants for the new Durgapur Steel factory.

Education authorities expect the influx of foreign students to double in the next five years. But British educational institutions already are bursting at the seams. The Government is now encouraging the setting up of technical colleges and universities in the new Commonwealth countries to draw off the flow of junior students to Britain.

Worldwide production of oxygen has reached 73,00 tons a day, about half of which is used in the manufacture of chemicals, chiefly ammonia.

British Labor Leader Against Nuclear Tests

LONDON (UPI) — Opposition Labor party Leader Hugh Gaitskell is making plans today to take directly to President Kennedy his objections to American nuclear tests on Britain's Christmas Island in the Pacific Ocean.

Gaitskell said he would object to the agreement announced in Washington Thursday whereby the island will be open to U.S. testing and a British underground explosion will be permitted in Nevada.

The Labor leader leaves for a parliamentary conference in Bermuda next week. He said from there he will go to Washington and New York to meet with Kennedy, United Nations Delegate Adlai Stevenson and other American leaders.

Five independent Labor members of parliament Thursday night offered a motion to condemn the government's decision to permit the U.S. tests on British territory.

TINY, LITTLE red polka-dots are all the rage in the younger-set these days . . . and the fashion is rather easily acquired . . . all the younger ones have to do is be exposed . . . unlike other stylish trends, the fashionable one is required to stay indoors where no one can see how stylish he or she has become . . . but, luckily, measles are about as quickly passing as most other radical fashion phases . . . and isn't that nice when you have a group of small fry convalescing from them at the same time!

OVER THE RIM of our coffe cup the other morning out at the Coronado Inn . . . we saw a group of individuals . . . among them Bob Curry . . . Melvin Munn . . . Gene Shelhamer . . . and Joe Gordon . . . traipsing out of a conference, where they have been discussing Boy Scout business . . . we think it is most commendable when a group of business men, who have their own careers and businesses to keep pace with, will take time out from these pursuits to help the business and career men of tomorrow through such a character-building organization as Boy Scouting . . . these men are good Scouts indeed . . . Randy Harris is a new little friend that we have acquired . . . and through him we have heard of another outstanding boy's organization called the Junior Optimist Club . . . Bill Harris is one of the adult leaders of this group . . . the club awards what is called a "Citizenship Award" to each of the members who can qualify for it . . . and qualifications are noteworthy . . . first, the youngster must have a note from his teacher that he is doing well in school . . . then from memory the young Optimist must know the population of the United States . . . the population of Texas . . . the population of Pampa . . . the name of the mayor of Pampa . . . the name of the president of the United States . . . and the name of the governor of Texas . . . and then do research and give a speech on a subject selected by the boy . . . after meeting all of these qualifications he is awarded the Junior Optimist Citizens' Award . . . and deservedly so, we think . . . there are a few we could answer off hand . . . but some of the other facts would send us flying to an encyclopedia!

ANOTHER OUTSTANDING event took place in our city this week! . . . a city who thinks young and thinks OF its young! . . . and that was the annual Career Clinic designed for Pampa High School students sponsored by the Altrusa Club . . . the Junior Chamber of Commerce and the Pampa Chamber of Commerce under the guiding hands of Cameron Marsh, high school principal and Evelyn Milam, high school counselor . . . quite a lot of planning and thought goes into this clinic . . . in fact, months of it . . . and no sooner is one completed . . . than an evaluation is taken and plans for the next one are set in motion . . . the high school students themselves select the career fields that they would like to know more about . . . so they can take the courses in high school and college that will cut down the preparation time for their careers . . . and cut out the floundering years . . . then the clinic sponsors and advisors set about securing the best qualified people in these fields to come to the high school and discuss the careers with the students . . . the clinic has been held for four years . . . and already its effective results are echoed from students now away at college, who had attended the clinics during their high school days.

THEATER SCENES . . . from the wings . . . rehearsals for the Lion's Club Minstrels are shaping up beautifully and we say this after seeing the picture of Beatrice Clements, one of the minstrels singers, in the paper the other day! . . . and wasn't the one of Sheriff Rufe Jordan handsome? . . . this is one event that we eagerly anticipate from year to year . . . when some of our more dignified and staid citizens cast dignity aside to bring us the atmosphere . . . flavor . . . humor and gay abandon of good old "show-boat" days . . . the minstrels are always colorful, refreshing, tuneful and funny . . . haven't missed a performance yet and don't intend to, unless, of course, the measles become fashionable in our house . . . Max Presnell, the director, might be having a few misgivings right about now about everything being ready on Feb. 22-23 . . . but, cheer up, Max, things always look the darkest before the curtain goes up and the footlights go on . . . after Monday night, we have a new esteem for Pampa Little Theater after viewing the nationally televised version of "Arsenic and Old Lace", which the local group presented recently . . . so much of the humor and tender treatment was missing from the televised version . . . our local actresses, actors and director come out winners in this amateur-professional bout! . . . Mary Sue and Joe Black had a group of Little Theater members out to their home on North Sumner for Coffee and Cookies snacks while viewing the show . . . and we can just imagine the comments . . . pro and con that were made . . . this is a gay and serious group that needs and deserves our whole-hearted support . . . so we are hoping they'll hurry and get their next show on the boards . . . David Bar-Illan, the young Israeli pianist, that music lovers have been hearing so much about, is the next starred attraction on the Pampa Community Concert program . . . Bar-Illan will appear here tomorrow night in Pampa Junior High Auditorium at eight o'clock . . . he will be the final artist in the current series . . . this week the Concert group will begin renewals of old memberships for next season and start a campaign for new ones to fill the vacancies caused by people moving away from town.

Hash-Gober Say Vows In Double-Ring Service

Mrs. Lloyd Gober
. . . . nee Roberta Shirley Hash

CANADIAN (Spl) — Nuptial vows were exchanged in the Church of Christ in Childress on Friday evening by Miss Roberts Shirley Hash of Childress and Lloyd Gober of Canadian. The formal double - ring ceremony was read at 7 o'clock by Henry E. Speck Jr., minister of the North Side Church of Christ in Abilene, before a candle archway flanked by baskets of white mums.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Robert Hash of Childress. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Perry Gober.

Ceremonial music was provided by members of the A Capella Chorus of Abilene Christian College who sang "I Love You", A Wedding Prayer", and the processional, and recessional "Whither Thou Goest". The benediction by the minister was continued by the Chorus with "Be With Us Lord".

Candles were lighted by Don Newhouse of Roby and Glenn Hibbs of Borger.

Given in marriage by her mother, the bride was gowned in white satin. The bodice and sleeves were of Chantilly lace and featured an Empire waistline. The floor - length skirt terminated in a chapel train.

The finger tip veil was attached to a tiara decorated with seed pearls and net. With a white Bible, the bride carried a bouquet of Frenched carnations centered with a white orchid and tied with white satin streamers.

Miss Linda Lou Scudder of Fort Worth was maid of honor and Miss Monta Groves of Farmersville was bridesmaid. Both attendants wore frocks of blue cotton satin with rounded necklines, tucked waistlines and full skirts. Their hats were of veiling and their corsages were Frenched white carnations.

Bob Gober of West Texas State College at Canyon attended his brother as best man. Clois Beaty of Texas Tech at Lubbock was groomsman. Ushers were Don Batts of Alice, Richard Myers of Alice, Don Newhouse and Glenn Hibbs.

Mrs. Hash, for her daughter's wedding, wore a Royal Blue wool sheath with white accessories. Mrs. Gober, mother of the bridegroom, was attired in a navy and white dress with white accessories. Both mothers wore corsages of white feathered carnations.

Mrs. Hash was hostess at a reception in the church annex immediately following the ceremony. Guests were registered by Miss Betty Gober of Canadian, sister of the bridegroom.

Assisting at the reception were Miss Ann Cotton of Shreveport, La., Miss Peggy Thompson of Howe, and Miss Judy Aslobrook of Alice, who, with the wedding attendants, are students at Abilene Christian College.

For her wedding trip, Mrs. Gober wore a fitted black suit with white pillbox hat and black accessories. Her corsage was the orchid from her bridal bouquet.

The couple will be at home at 542½ East North 16th Street in Abilene.

The bride was valedictorian of the 1958 graduating class of Childress High School and is a senior music major at ACC. She is a member of A Capella Chorus, Beta Rho Social Club, Kappa Delta Pi Honor Society in Education, Campus Service Organization and Woman's Honor Club. She will be teaching in the Music Department at the Campus Elementary School and will continue her studies at ACC where she will receive her BA in Music Education in August.

Mr. Gober graduated from Canadian High School in 1958. He is a member of the Sub - T. 10 Club, Industrial Arts Club, Alpha Phi Omega service organization at ACC. He will be laboratory assistant in the Industrial Arts Department and continue his studies at ACC. He will receive his BS in May.

Military Speaker Slated At Lee PTA Dads' Night

Robert E. Lee Junior High PTA will observe its annual Fathers' Night on Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the school auditorium. PTA Fathers will preside at the meeting, according to Mrs. J. T. Cornutt, unit president.

The evening's speaker will be Brigadier General Selden Simpson, an Amarillo attorney, who is currently the assistant commander of the 36th Infantry Division, Texas National Guard. He will discuss "Effective Learning For Community Strength In This Aerospace Age."

Amarillo's highest ranking active reservist, Gen. Simpson is the son of the late Col. E. A. Simpson, himself a hero of World War I.

Many honors have come to Gen. Simpson in the military field, including the distinction of being one of Texas' most-decorated soldiers. During World War II, as an officer of the 36th Division, he was awarded every major United States decoration for merit with the exception of the Congressional Medal of Honor.

His awards include the Distinguished Service Cross, Silver Star, Bronze Star, Legion of Merit, Purple Heart with oak leaf cluster and the French Croix de Guerre with star.

A native of the Panhandle area (he was born in Clarendon) Gen. Simpson has lived in Amarillo since 1926, having received much of his elementary schooling there. He attended New Mexico Military Institute and West Texas State College and received his BA degree from the University of Texas in 1936. In 1939, he was awarded a degree in law by University of Colorado Law School and was admitted to the bar shortly thereafter.

He joined the law firm in which his father was a senior partner, but his civilian career was interrupted in 1940, when the National Guard was called up just before World War II. It was almost six years later before General Simpson had need of his law books again.

Since the end of World War II, his time has been divided between law practice and military work.

He was commissioned in the National Guard in 1940. Five years later with six campaigns and two combat landings on his record, he emerged from World War II, as a lieutenant colonel.

All of his combat service was with the 142 Infantry Regiment, the unit which now is the First Battle Group, 142nd Infantry. With the reorganization of the Texas National Guard in 1947, he became a colonel and commander of the 142nd Infantry Regiment.

To be included in the program will be selections by the Lee Junior High Band under the direction of Joe DiCosimo.

Refreshments will be served in the cafeteria following the program.

'Gracious Living' HD Club Program

LEFORS (Spl) — A program on "Gracious Living" was presented by Mrs. Cedar Torres and Mrs. B. J. Diehl at th erecent meeting of the Lefors Home Demonstration Club held in the home of Mrs. O. O. Bishop.

The speakers discussed table-settings and centerpieces for a dining table.

During the business meeting, conducted by Mrs. A. J. Rollins, president, club members approved extending an invitation to have Achievement Day in Lefors this year.

Mrs F, H. Chitwood was welcomed as a new member.

Plans for serving at the Junior Livestock Show to be held in Pampa beginning Mar. 3 were discussed.

The club collect was read by Mrs. Charles Roberts and roll call was answered with "My Favorite Centerpiece."

Secretary's report was read by Mrs. O. O. Bishop. The club agreed to order a film on the United States and Canada Peace Garden to be shown at a later date.

Refreshments were served during the social hour. Attending, not previously mentioned were Mmes. John Lantz, Debbie Torres and Jan Roberts.

Highland WMU Has Bible Study

Highland Baptist Women's Missionary Union met Wednesday morning in the church for mission study.

Mrs. D. W. Tracy opened the meeting with prayer followed by a business session conducted by Mrs. H. E. Winegeart, president.

Secretary's report was given by Mrs. Morris Belote.

It was announced that mission study would be presented in the church on Feb. 21 at 10 a.m.

Mrs. Ronald Scott and Mrs. Joe Allison were named the new Girls' Axuiliary directors. Mrs. Ida Moore was elected nursery chairman.

Mrs. L. F. Karlin, program chairman, presented a program on "Neither Are Your Ways My Ways."

Prayer calendar was read by Mrs. Joe Allison. Special prayer was offered by Mrs. Leroy Allen.

Following the program, a luncheon was held in the fellowship hall.

Attending were Mmes. D. W. Tracy, Joe Allison, William Fain, Henry Maple, Gerald Garrison, Leroy Allen, H. E. Winegeart, Eunice Hunt, Ida Moore, Ray Jackson, Harry Muns, Morris Belote and L. F. Karlin.

Analogy Of 'Animal Farm'-Atomic Bomb Drawn By TC Cotillion Club Reviewer

Mrs. Ralph McKinney presented "Animal Farm" written by George Orwell at the Tuesday afternoon meeting of Twentieth Century Cotillion Club held in the home of Mrs. Don Lane, 2212 N. Christy.

In opening the review, Mrs. McKinney stated "The book is a political fable of our times; the author uses very simple symbols. . . animals. The farm animals are dissatisfied with the unequal treatment they receive from the incompetent owner of the farm. They rebel and drive him from the farm."

"All humans are barred from the farm and a model socialistic community is organized with all the animals being equal. Later, it becomes obvious that the pigs are getting more to eat, more leisure time and more authority than the other animals. The pigs become the leaders of the community and begin to associate with the forbidden humans. . .negotiating with them and entertaining them. The pigs begin to walk on two legs and wear human clothes. They even kill the other animals who do not obey their orders."

"When the other animals remind the pigs that all the animals are equal, the pigs reply, "Yes, but some are more equal than others." In the end, the pigs cannot be distinguished from humans."

In continuing remarks, Mrs. McKinney brought out "C. M. Woodhouse of "The Times Literary Supplement (London) suggests that there is an arbitrary coincidence that brought the completion of Orwell's "Animal Farm" and the completion of the atomic bomb to light at the same time. The text of "Animal Farm" bears the dates November, 1943 and February, 1944, months when the Manhattan project was also moving toward a climax."

Mr. Woodhouse wrote, "It was a coincidence that must have given Orwell a sad, ironic satisfaction for there are those who have argued that, looked at in a wider historical context, the first atomic bombs were aimed at a quite different political target which had nothing to do with the Japanese war; and there are others who have convinced themselves that "Animal Farm" was also aimed at a political target. Orwell would surely have argued that this personal enemy was no single individual or government, it was the system of the world capable of producing and using atomic bombs."

Members attending were Mmes. W. B. Adair, Alvan Agan, Gene R. Barber, Thelma Bray, James T. Brown, Jim Campbell, Frank Carter Jr., Lee Fraser, James Gallemore, Don Lane, Ralph McKinney, W. D. Price Jr., Jack White, Howard Greenlee, Sam Anderson and Buddy Cockrell.

Miss Helen Lorene Crawford

The engagement and approaching marriage of Miss Helen Lorene Crawford to J. L. Furgason, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Furgason, 309 W. Tuke, is being announced by the bride-elect's mother, Mrs. Rose L. Crawford, 621 N. Roberta. Wedding vows will be solemnized on March 3 in a ceremony planned in the home of the bride.

Brushing clean hair with a soiled brush is like spattering mud on a clean white dress. So be sure to wash your brush at least as often as you shampoo your hair.

Mrs. Bill Carter

Recent Bride Feted At Nuptial Shower

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph McGee of Skellytown announce the marriage of their daughter, Deana to Bill Carter, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Carter, 213 N. Sumner. Wedding vows were solemnized on Dec. 21 in the First Baptist Church in Skellytown. The couple is at home at 911 N. Duncan.

Mrs. Carter was honored with a bridal shower recently in the home of Mrs. L. R. Archer, 214 N. Sumner. Assisting hostesses were Mrs. Arnold Karbo and Mrs. Ott Shewmaker.

Corsages of white carnations were presented to the honoree; her mother, Mrs. Ralph McGee and to the bridegroom's mother, Mrs. W. A. Carter.

Approximately 60 guests attended or sent gifts.

Art And Music Enhance Development Of Healthy Personality: PE Speaker

Parent Education Club met Tuesday afternoon in the home of Mrs. W. B. McIntyre for a program presented by Mrs. Tom Snow.

She presented excerpts from two papers pertaining to her discussion, 'The Contribution of Art and Music In Personality Development."

Mrs. Snow said, "When a child is told that in art there can be no mistakes, he participates freely. In art, a child can express his ideas in his own individual way. Art can move children from dependence to interdependence."

"The child," she continued, "thinks, feels, and expresses himself independently when he realizes that art is a way to tell."

Mrs. Snow illustrated how art can be employed to promote self-expression, cooperativeness, creativity and social adaptability."

In discussing the contribution of music to the personality development of the child, Mrs. Snow quoted from several authorities, all of whom believe music is a major factor in mental and emotional development. She told how music can elicit certain psychosomatic reactions within the spheres of circulation and respiration and influence the mood and other psychological conditions in a large group of people.

In concluding remarks, Mrs. Snow discussed singing, listening, rhythms, creative dancing and other ways of using music to enhance the development of a healthy personality.

Members attending were Mmes. William Arrington, Bob Carmichael, A. J. Carubbi, W. J. Derington, Warren Fatheree, Bill Gething, Gene Hall, Julian Key, Rex McAnelly, W. B. McIntyre, Robert Neely, Jack Osborne, Jim Osborne, E. R. Sidwell, Tom Snow, C. E. Steele, Glenn Tarpley, Elmer D. Wilson.

It was announced that the Feb. 20 meeting will be in the home of Mrs. Bill Gething, 2217 Williston.

Mrs. Morse Feted At Baby Shower

Following a business meeting of the Homemakers Class of Barrett Baptist Chapel held in the home of Mrs. Jimmie Morse, 105 E. Ford at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday evening, members surprised Mrs. Morse with a Pink and Blue Shower.

Attending were Mmes. J. M. Hill, A. E. Burns, Bill Hall, David Putman, Bill Henry, Eldon Smith, Bob Bettis, Garland Wimberly and Bill Simpson.

It was announced that the class will meet next with Mrs. David Putman on Mar. 6 at 7:30 p.m.

School Testing Program Topic For Austin Guest

The Stephen F. Austin PTA met in the school auditorium Thursday for the February meeting with president Mrs. M. McDaniel presiding at the business meeting. Mrs. E. E. Shelhamer gave the spiritual thought. The recommendation of the executive board to accept the resignation of Mrs. Wiley Davis vice president, and to elect, by acclamation, Mrs. Michael Wilson to fill the position, was approved by the unit.

Mrs. Julian Key gave a report on the Exceptional Childrens' program and expressed need for puzzles, games, books, paper dolls, buttons, fabrics, and slap sticks. Such items may be brought to D. V. Biggers' office, where a box will be available for them. They will then be taken to the class.

Mr. Biggers, Mrs. Foster Elder, Mrs. L. S. Riley, and Mrs. Floyd Crow were elected to the nominating committee to nominate PTA officers for next year. The room count was won by the fifth grade.

Mrs. McDaniel announced that the next meeting, March 8, will be an evening meeting with the husbands conducting the procedure. She urged all parents to visit school during Texas Education Week, March 5-9.

Mr. Biggers, principal, announced that cabinets have been built for costumes and asked that anyone desiring to donate costumes may now send them to school. They may then be used by all students.

He urged everyone to attend the Pampa Classroom Teacher's Association Public Relations Reception to be held Feb. 26 at 7:30 in Lee Junior High. Mrs. Elizabeth Little of Corpus Christi, president of the Texas Classroom Teachers' Association, will be guest speaker. Mr. Biggers also invited members to attend the Science Fair to be held in the high school Feb. 16-17.

The door prize, a cake baked by Mrs. Warren Fatheree, was won by Mrs. Joe Donaldson.

Mrs. Wilson introduced the program speaker, McHenry Lane curriculum co-ordinator, whose topic was, "The Testing Program in Pampa Schools."

"Pampa's testing program, as it now stands, is the result of fairly recent revision," he said. "A study of our testing program was begun about five years ago by the Curriculum Council, a large committee composed of administrators and teachers from all Pampa school units," stated Mr. Lane. "The study was continued by a Permanent Guidance Committee also composed of principals and teachers representing all levels of instruction in the schools. Following two years of study, the present plan was adopted. It went into effect about three years ago."

Mr. Lane then explained what standardized tests were given in various grades. Mental ability tests and Achievement tests constitute most of the testing program." He also gave a partial list of uses made of the test results.

"We feel that a standardized test is a valuable tool if correctly used and interpreted. We do not feel that any standardized test is infallible; that it can provide the complete answer to all of our educational problems. We know that tests are subject to error- that test results can vary; that test results alone are not enough. However, we should not forget that a great deal has been learned during this century about the measurement of learning; that test results can furnish us with some very important indicators of probable success; and that test results when used with teacher evaluations can work for greater advantage to the pupils than either can do alone."

Mr. Lane said "It is certain that a student will come in contact with some standardized tests as long as he is in school and college, and it is likely that he will also have some contact with them in his adult life. The armed services use tests quite extensively and industry makes some use of tests.

Mr. Lane concluded, "One problem, which must be of great concern to you as parents and to us as teachers, is not directly connected with testing. We know that most of us, children and adults, are just normal people of average ability. Perhaps high average or low average, but just about average. We know that an average child, or an average adult, can accomplish just about anything he sets out to accomplish if he will really use the ability he has. The averge student who will really try can attain high success in school or college. The average adult, who has learned to make the best us eof his ability, can achieve far more than average success as a citizen."

"During these times we hear and read much about giftedness in children , and properly so, but let us not forget that one of the greatest gifts a child (or an adult) can have is a normal amount of ability plus a sincere desire to make full use of that ability."

County Agent Talks To PG Club Meet

Foster Whaley, Gray County agricultural agent, was guest speaker at the Monday morning meeting of the Pampa Garden Club held in the Pampa Youth and Community Center.

Following an introduction by Mrs. Thelma Bray, Mr. Whaley discussed "Agricultural Myths." A question and answer period followed the discussion.

During a brief business meeting, conducted by Mrs. Waldon Moore, it was announced that Orion James of James Feed Store had made a gift of several hundred bulbs for the garden clubs' use in park projects.

Mrs. W. E. Melton and Mrs. James McCune were hostesses during the social hour. Refreshments were served from a table appointed in a Valentine motif created by Mrs. Moore

Mardi Gras Pancake Supper To Have Trial Run On Tuesday At Men's Club

The annual Mardi Gras Pancake Supper planned by St. Matthews Episcopal Church will be held on Mar. 6, Shrove Tuesday, in the parish house, 727 W. Browning and sponsored jointly by the Men's Club with their wives assisting.

A Trial Run will be held Tuesday, Feb. 13 at 7:30 p.m. at the regular meeting of the Men's Club. At this time details will be worked out for the actual event.

Clem Followell, general chairman, has appointed the following committees: Messrs. and Mmes. Carl Thomas, procurement; James Hart, coffee; Carl Thomas, Lance Kenner and Lewis Belanger, bacon; Fred Richmond, batter; Bill Ragsdale, Jim Dailey, C. R. Howard, Carl Thomas, pancake flippers; Walt Jordan, Clem Followell, Bill Dingus, food serving; the Rev. and Mrs. William E. West, tickets; Al Knox and Horace Watkins, tablesetting; Jack Cooper, syrup and butter; Paul Hinton, Bob Fugate, Mrs. Sally Hamlett and Senior High Youth Group, clean - up; Dr. and Mrs. Frank Hatcher, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Root, the Junior High Youth Group, cleaning tables.

Tickets will be $1 for adults and 50 cents for children 12 and under. There will be prizes awarded to the four persons selling the most tickets. A King and Queen will be crowned for the two selling the most tickets and two attendants will be selected from the next two high ticket sellers.

The public is invited and tickets may be secured from any member of the Men's Club, Youth Groups, church office or at the door. Pancakes will be served from 5 p.m. until 7:30 p.m.

If a store sent your bridal gift and you do not receive a thank-you note in about a month, it's quite all right to check with the bride on the gift's arrival.

Pulitzer Prize Novel Reviewed For William B. Travis PTA Members

Mrs. J. R. Sutphens
... Guest Reviewer

Mrs. J. R. Sutphens of Borger was guest reviewer at William B. Travis PTA meeting held Thursday afternoon in the school auditorium.

For the review, Mrs. Sutphen chose Harper Lee's Pulitzer Prize Winning novel, "To Kill A Mockingbird."

Presented in the first person, as though the reviewer herself had lived the story, it was at times humorous, questioning, poignant, stirring and always interesting. As an introduction, Mrs. Sutphens asked those present to notice how different the life of a child in the 30's is from the life a child leads today.

Portraying the characters of 'Scout", her father, brother, friends and others not so friendly, Mrs. Sutphens made the characters so clear that those present felt they, too, might have grown up in the same little town where the story takes place.

Among the guests attending were Mrs. George B. Cree Jr., PTA City Council president; Mrs. Bill Cree of Abilene and Mrs. Rufe Jordan.

Preceding the program, Girl Scout Troop 20 was in charge of the flag ceremony followed by invocation given by Mrs. Robert Allen.

During the business meeting, conducted by Mrs. John Gentry, unit president, reports were given by Mrs. John Cundith, treasurer, Mrs. Brantly Hudson, secretary and Mrs. E. H. Wyman, City Council delegate.

Mrs. Hudson, Wendell Altmiller, school principal and Mrs. Bob Allen were appointed to the nominating committee to select a slate of officers for 1962-1963.

Mrs. F. R. Brooks was awarded the door prize.

It was announced that Feb. 17 is PTA Founders' Day.

Mrs. Gentry called attention to Boy Scout Week and reported that Travis PTA sponsors seven Cub Scout Dens with 65 boys registered. "There are six committeemen and fourteen Den Mothers and assistants," she said. "It is a regular feature of our PTA meetings to have a flag ceremony conducted by a Scout Troop or Den Pack."

It was announced that the next PTA meeting will be on Mar. 1, instead of the second Thursday, due to Public School Week.

New Book By Amarillo Author Contains Collection Of Six Stories, One Novelette

By HELENE HUFF

THE MAN WHO TOLD THE TRUTH, By Loula Grace Erdman. 273 pp. New York. Dodd, Mead & Company. $3.95.

Loula Grace Erdman's readers will be delighted with her most recently published book, THE MAN WHO TOLD THE TRUTH, because it is a collection of six short stories and one novelette. Each has been previously published in top magazines. This collection will enable Miss Erdman's fans to enjoy her stories without the bother of digging through stacks of dog-eared magazines.

Loula Grace Erdman
new book out

Miss Erdman has the sensitive, perceptive ability to move the reader emotionally in each of the stories. With her keen insight into human nature, she has written such poignant stories that you, the reader, are readily carried along in the stream of events. She skillfully prompts you to feel sympathy, humor and admiration for her characters.

As in each of her books, the reader feels as though he knows Miss Erdman personally because her belief in good over evil, in sympathy over condemnation and in courage over fear somehow makes the reader a better person for the reading.

The novelette, "The Man Who Told the Truth," was published in the fall of 1961 in Redbook Magazine. It is a dramatic story of a man who arrived as a stranger in a town and who, through his understanding and kindness, is drawn into the town's problems. Because of him each person in the town is indebted to him only to have him leave unexpectedly when he is "accepted." The ending will leave the reader with a warm feeling.

"The Boy in the Back Seat," published several years ago in The Ladies Home Journal, perhaps is one of Miss Erdman's better known short stories. As in each of her short stories, this one reveals the character's problems and joys and hopes in such a manner that the reader becomes the fictional person. It is not unusual for the reader to finish one of Miss Erdman's stories by saying, "Of course. It couldn't have ended any other way."

The Amarillo author has written extensively about the Texas Panhandle, her "adopted" home. Born in Missouri, Miss Erdman came to Amarillo, as a school teacher. She later became a staff member of the English Department of West Texas State College, where she now teaches an advanced class in creative writing. Her success in this field is noted by the sales of many of her students in both short fiction and non-fiction and in book - length markets.

Winner of the Dodd, Mead - Redbook prize of $10,000 in 1947 for THE YEARS OF THE LOCUST, Miss Erdman has written seven adult novels, many which have been book club selections. She also has written three young people's books and numerous short stories and articles. Miss Erdman is also a sought-after lecturer throughout the United States.

It is refreshing to find such a book as THE MAN WHO TOLD THE TRUTH — a book for family reading that can go on the bookshelf within children's reach. You will chuckle, shed a tear and treasure Miss Erdman's collection of short stories and the novelette.

Founder's Day Topic For Baker

The B. M. Baker Parent Teacher Association met Thursday, in the school auditorium for its February meeting.

Mrs. Orvel Ferguson presided during the business session. The devotional was presented by Mrs. Irl Smith, and stressed the "4-Rs" of an Effective Devotional Life. The four important topics were listed as "Rest, Relax, Realize, and Resolve".

As February is the month celebrating the founding of the National Congress of PTA, Mrs. Hazel Parker, a third grade teacher, presented a program honoring the Founders of PTA and stated, "We are looking to the children for a continuation of the ideals set forth by the organization."

Mrs. Leon Holmes, youth protection chairman, asked each member to check the news stands in the store where she did her shopping to see if undesirable literature was being placed on display. She stressed the fact that quite often store managers would clean up the display of magazines if tht patrons complained of the objectionable reading matter available to children.

The room count was won by Mrs. D. L. Mackie's room, and the cake baked by Mrs. O. G. Powell was won by Mrs. J. L. Hampton.

Refreshments were served during the social hour. A silver offering was made for extension work of the Parent - Teacher Association in Texas.

Dear Abby....

Formal Mountain From Informal Molehill

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband and received a wedding invitation from a friend of mine whose son was being married. Written on the invitation was a note, "Say, Mable, this is for the whole family." Abby, our six children are all married and have children of their own, all living miles apart, and my friend expected me to get them all together. Just for her sake, I telephoned each one and not one would accept an invitation like that. My husband said he didn't blame them. Then he got stubborn and refused to go, so I had to say home because it would have looked bad to go without him.

Now my friend is down on me. These people could well have afforded an invitation for each family. Was I wrong?

BUSTED FRIENDSHIP

DEAR BUSTED: I don't blame your children for not attending. Perhaps you should have called your friend and suggested she send each of your married children an invitation if she wanted them at the wedding. You and your husband should have attended. Why make a formal mountain out of an informal molehill?

DEAR ABBY: When a girl asks a boy to a girl-ask-boy party, is she supposed to pick him up, pay for everything and see him home?

BIG ARGUMENT

DEAR BIG: No. The girl asks the boy if he will ESCORT her. After that, the date is on him.

DEAR ABBY: My wife died a month ago and I am 57 years old. She was a good wife, and I know she wouldn't care if I got married again. I am a lonely man, and anyone who went through what I did would understand.

I met a woman at a drive-in. It was funny how we met. She is 52 and her husband has been dead for about four years. We sure did hit it off great! We want to get married. We know pwople will say we knew each other before my wife died, but it hasn't true. We figure they will talk about us if we get married in two months or two years from now. I think we will make it three months, and let them talk. I would like your advice.

WANTS TO MARRY

DEAR WANTS: The customary wait before re-marrying is one year. But wait as long as your conscience dictates.

CONFIDENTIAL TO JANET: Marry him anyway. Every med student has a skeleton in his closet.

How is the world treating you? Unload your problems on Abby, care of this paper.

For Abby's booklet, "How To Have A Lovely Wedding," send 50 cents to Abby, Box 3365, Beverly Hills, Calif.

Top Of Texas Community 4H Club Selects Community Service Project

The Top - of - Texas Community 4 - H Club met Thursday evening at 7:30 in the Court House Annex.

Phyllis Dalsing, vice - president, presided during the business session. The club decided to clean up the seats at the Live Stock Show as their Community Service Project for this year. It was brought out that quite often observers had to stand during the showing of the livestock, because of the seats being in a soiled state. A date prior to the show was set for the club members to meet and clean up the stands.

Various ways of raising money for club expenses was discussed by the club. Some members felt that a club dues should be charged, until a money - making project could be worked out. A box supper for a future date was discussed, but it was decided to table the discussions until the next meeting, when perhaps a greater precentage of the membership would be present.

Gail Green presented a devotional stressing the importance of being a good club member. Several announcements were made concerning entries in the Stock Show to be held in the Spring.

Mrs. Darrel Hoggset presented five minutes of Parliamentary Procedure Instruction, and stressed the fact that the course in Parliamentary Procedure could be used as a Club Subject - matter Course.

During the recreational hour, various games were played, with both club members and adult leaders taking part. Each person present was urged to remind their friends who are members of the club to be sure and attend the next meeting, which will be the second Thursday in March. About 35 persons attended.

Twentieth Century Allegro Club Hears Review Of "Right Of Trial By Jury"

Twentieth Century Allegro met Tuesday afternoon in the home of Mrs. Bill T. Braly, 2406 Navajo with Mrs. David W. Price as co-hostess.

Mrs. Curt B. Beck showed pictures that were taken by her husband while he was in Japan last year.

Mrs. W. P. Bridges gave a review on "The Right of Trial By Jury". Mrs. Bridges stated that "jury service is one of the highest duties of citizenship and its practice makes a reality of liberty under the law, justice and preservation of freedom under the law. Neglect of this duty destroys the things for which we have waged total wars. We must protect in the courtroom what we have won on the battleground."

"A courtrom trial is a serious and important matter," she said, "and it is conducted in accord with rules that enable the parties to receive a correct hearing. Trials often present tense and dramatic situations that transcend the wildest fiction; but the purpose of the trial should always be to discover the truth and administer justice. This central thought should not become lost in a contest of learning, skill or fact. The object of a Texas Court trial is Justice."

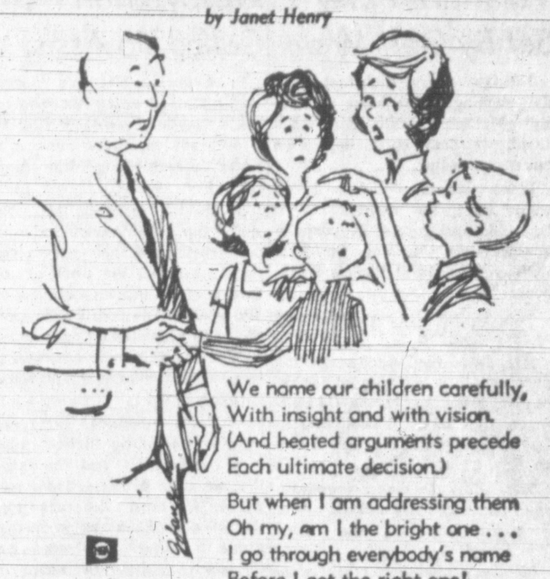

During the business meeting, conducted by Mrs. R. E. Reid, president, it was announced that the next meeting will be a program on "What's New in Industry" by John Gentry. The meeting will be in Mrs. J. W. Hugg's home, 2526 Christine, with Mrs. Wyatt Lemons as co-hostess.

Members attending the meeting were Mmes. Curt Beck, Bill Braly, W. P. Bridges, J. W. Cundith, Carl Hills, J. W. Hugg, John H. Horn, II, Brantley Hudson, Wyatt Lemons, David W. Price, J. R. Reeve, R. E. Reid.

Valentine Party Set By Opti-Mrs.

The Opti - Mrs. Club met Tuesday evening in the home of Mrs. Bill McDonald with Mrs. Bill Dodd, president, conducting the business meeting.

Plans were completed for a Valentine Party for members and husbands and guests in conjunction with the Morning Opti-Mrs. Club on Feb. 14 at Poole's Steakhouse.

Mrs. Dwain Orr was welcomed as new member.

Mrs. Dodd read a letter inviting members to a public relations reception given by Pampa Classroom Teachers Association at Robert E. Lee Junior High School on Feb. 26 at 7:30 p.m.

Mrs. Cliff Dunham, program chairman, read the poems, "I'm Fine, How Are You" and "How You Spend Your Day".

Members attending other than those mentioned were Mmes. Virgil Frashier, W. A. Gipson, Tom Glover, Homer Hollars, Bill Jenkins, Truman Lowrance, Wm. Leonard, Kent McDonald, R. L. Parsley, John Pharr, Norma Schale, Bill Stephens, Henry Schale, Bill Stephens, Henry Stephens, Lloyd Summers, and Newt Secrest.

Presbyterian Women's Association Called To Assist With New Work

Presbyterian Women's Association met Wednesday morning at 9 a.m. in the Fellowship Hall for a program on "Let's Face the Facts" presented by Mrs. A. D. Hills.

In opening remarks, Mrs. Hill said "Our own Association has been challenged this year to contribute towards the work of the Board of Christian Education. The goal of this board is to teach gospel to people of all ages and to involve themselves in communicating the gospel to other persons."

"But money isn't the whole story," she continued. "It is very easy for us to say "I had rather give the money" and then feel that we have discharged our obligation. We must do more than that. We need to be concerned about the church, its needs and the needs of those to whom it seeks to minister."

"If the church is to be obedient to this commission to share the gospel, there are two major areas in which it must be informed. First, it must be informed about the gospel and the time in which it lives. Secondly, social changes are constantly making new demands upon the churches, asking sometimes that programs be changed or strengthened to meet the needs of the people in the church, in the community, asking sometimes that old ways of doing things be abandoned and new ones begun."

"Here are some of the facts that we need to look at: There are more people in churches to day than ever before, according to statistics. From 1926 to 1959, the population of the United States increased 53 per cent. In the same period of time, church membership increased 16 per cent. Sunday School enrollment increased 9 per cent."

"People are on the move. They have been moving from farms to cities and from cities to suburbs. Trailers and mobile homes fill a need for this kind of situation. The migrant workers, who follow the crops, go from one community to another. The largest percentage of migrant workers are children under 17 years of age; children who do not fit easily into the public school program. Juvenile delinquency has increased. There are many more facts which the church is called upon to face."

Mrs. John McKnerney assisted Mrs. Hills in the group discussion which followed.

Mrs. Warren Beale, led the worship service and dedication of pledges.

During the business meeting, conducted by Mrs. Homer Johnson, two guests, Mrs. Robert Doley and Mrs. Lewis McCloy were introduced.

Mrs. Earl Casey and Mrs. Robert Orr were hostesses during the Coffee Hour

Worthwhile Club Speaker Discusses "Centerpieces For The Serving Table"

Worthwhile Home Demonstration Club met Friday morning in the home of Mrs. N. B. Cude, 526 S. Ballard.

During a business meeting conducted by Mrs. Roy Tinsley, roll call was answered with "One Way I Use Left - Over Food."

The Gray County HD Council report was given by Mrs. Dewey Lunsford in which standing council plans were read and approved.

Mrs. J. L. Carlton was nominated Texas Home Demonstration Association chairman for the club.

The group voted to send flowers to a former member, who will be honored on her 92nd birthday.

Mrs. Shelby Hood presented a program on "Centerpieces For the Serving Table" in which she stated that the decoration of a table is an "introduction to what may follow and it will be governed by the occasion it is to illustrate. One should avoid inappropriate decorations and over - decoration with the use of too many flowers."

"For the family table," she said, "nothing is as charming as arranged fruit or a single floating, stemless flower."

Refreshments were served during the social hour.

It was announced that Mrs. Hood will be hostess for an all-day meeting to be held Feb. 16 beginning at 9:30 a.m. in her home south of the city.

Attending were Mmes. O. A. Wagner, N. L. Welton, Boyd Brown, L. M. Bryant, B. J. Kennedy and daughter, Mary Kay, John McKnerney, Clara Smith, Matilda Smith.

. . . the beginning of a Love affair

It just seems appropriate that Thomas A. Edison was born on February 11th, just three days short of Valentine's day because his great love for electricity — his scientific research in developing the first electric light bulb makes a most romantic story — one that is constantly told and retold to inspire others to great achievements.

Reddy salutes a great American — Thomas A. Edison.

★ Polly's Quiz ★

By Polly Cramer

For 1962, the home furnishings taste-setters are forecasting the use of more pattern everywhere: on walls, floors, ceilings and upholstered pieces.

Trend watchers and followers who have been dwelling in plain and pristine interiors may welcome this renewed interest in pattern. A word of caution seems necessary however, as the combination of several varying designs in one room is a tricky matter. Leave that for the experienced professional decorator.

The average home decorator who likes pattern and gobs of it might well select a matching fabric and wallpaper and use lots of both for a well co-ordinated, cozy room. But beware of patterned wallpaper plus a figured rug or chintzy slip covers and a patterned carpet. The use of pattern is definitely a trend but one to follow with discretion.

Dear Polly: I am in the dark with my living room. The room is so dark that I can't imagine what color to use on walls and chairs. I have steam heat and radiators come to the windows. Should I have short drapes? Rug is old and varicolored. Sofa is beige. I like Early American.—"In the Dark."

Dear "In the Dark": Clear yellow walls should bring you from the dark into a world of brilliant sunshine. Paint woodwork and radiators to match the walls. Sill-length draw curtains the same color will further the illusion of floods of sunshine and will not appear conspicuously short. Pep up that beige sofa with a slip cover made of an eagle-patterned print in blue, golden yellow and a bit of dull red. Two blue chairs and a dull red seat on an occasional chair will have your room all the way out of the dark.

Dear Polly: We have just moved into a newly decorated older home. Walls in the front room are pink with white ceiling. Rug is sage green and a chair is cherry wine. Adjoining playroom is white on the lower half with aqua on top. Floors are neutral tile. We need drapes for the front room window and my living room set needs slip covers. Playroom also needs drapes and a davenport slip cover. I thought of a Colonial pattern on beige. Would something else give more zest?—T. M.

Dear T. M.: Your "front" room must be small as there is only one window so you might do well to match curtains to the wall colors. Slip covers could be a gay floral chintz with wine, pink and white flowers and green leaves on a white or pale green ground. Forget that beige stuff for the playroom. Be different and have fabric roller shades made of striped cotton in aqua, brown, gold and even a bit of pink as a carry-over from the living room. Use white cafe curtains on the lower half of each window. Slip cover the sofa in the same striped fabric as the shades.

Dear Reader: A heavy volume of mail doesn't permit Mrs. Cramer to answer her letters and post cards individually. But she will comment in her column on decorating probems of general interest. She cannot undertake to return floor plans or fabric swatches which are enclosed with letters.

Miss Tawanna Dianne Dykes

Mr and Mrs. C. C. Dykes of Skellytown are announcing the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Tawanna Dianne to Woodrow Hyde Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Woodrow Hyde Sr. of Pampa. An early June wedding is being planned.

Ladies Auxiliary To Pampa Post 1657 Makes Contribution To March Of Dimes

Ladies Auxiliary to Pampa Post 1657, Veterans of Foreign Wars, met Tuesday evening at 7:30 in the VFW Hall with Mrs. Jess Beard, president, presiding.

It was reported that a contribution of $34 had been made to the March of Dimes Fund, according to the team captains Mrs. Vernon Stuckey and Mrs. Mack Taylor.

Plans were made for a rummage sale to be held Feb. 24 in the VFW Hall. Members were asked to bring rummage to the VFW Hall on Feb. 23 or phone Mrs. O. F. Kreimeier, chairman.

Report was made of the District Nine Convention, which will be held Feb. 17 - 18 in Texline.

It was announced that a donation of $10 from District Nine had been given to purchase a new stove for the VFW National Home.

Honor Roll requirements were met by making a contribution to the local Heart Fund and to the Palsy Fund Drive. A flag was ordered to be given to the Exceptional Children's program or to a scout troop as an Americanism project.

It was announced that Secret Pals will be revealed at the next meeting and there will be a gift exchange.

Members attending wert Mmes. J. M. Douglass, Earl Eckroat, Frank Hudgil, O. F. Kreimeier, C. D. Malone, E. Savage, Joe Slater, Vernon Stuckey, Mack Taylor, A. L. Walling, Carl Wright, Chester Williams, and Frank Yates.

The next meeting will be a social on Feb. 21 at 7:30 p.m. in the home of Mrs. Stuckey, 2323 Christine.

Tribute To Parent-Teachers Ass'n Founders Urged At Council Meet

City Council PTA met in Sam Houston School on Tuesday at 9:30 a.m. with Mrs. George Cree Jr., president, presiding.

Following committee reports, Mrs. Cree announced that the Pampa Classroom Teacher Association's Reception will be held Feb. 26 at 7:30 p.m. in Lee Junior High School. "Mrs. Elizabeth Little of Corpus Christi, president of the Texas Classroom Teachers Association, will be guest speaker. All members are urged to attend and the public is invited," Mrs. Cree announced.

"February is the month, when throughout Texas and the United States, where there is a local PTA unit, there will be unity of thought and action in paying tribute to the founders of our National Congress of Parents and Teachers," Mrs. Cree stated. "This is the time when we pause to acknowledge our appreciation to those women of courage and vision. When we take time to examine our past achievements and, building on that memory, review our pledge to be an organization of courage, whose greatest concern is the welfare of all children."

It was announced the Public School Week will be Mar. 5-9; as well as Teachers' Appreciation Week. All parents are urged to visit schools during this time.

A nominating committee to select officers for the 1862-1963 council year were named as Jack Edmondson, chairman, Mrs. Carlton Nance, Mrs. O. G. Ferguson, Mrs. E. R. Southard and Mrs. M. McDaniel.

Twenty-eight members attended the council meeting.

ENGAGED

Miss Evelyn Louise Conrad

GROOM (Spl)—Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Conrad announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Evelyn Louise, to James B. King, son of Mrs. Bonnie King, also of Groom, and the late William H. King. Wedding vows will be solemnized on Feb. 24 at four o'clock in St. Mary's Church in Groom. Friends are invited.

ASK THE DESIGNER by gaile dugas

Dear Gaile: I haven't been at ease since the celebration of a New Year's Eve party. The reason is that I've been skeptical of my attire. I wore a black crepe dress with long sleeves. It was cut in a low V front and V back. The skirt was draped and had a rhinestone pin at the side of the waist. My shoes were gold. I wore a gold and rhinestone bracelet and gold Paris drop earrings.

This was my newest dress and my husband insisted that I wear it. I had wanted to wear my red lace. Will you please tell me if my clothes were right for the occasion. I also would like to know if I would be right in searing a semidress hat with a fur jacket. That hat has a turned-up front brim, flapper sort of style. I had in mind wearing gold semidress jewelry. The jacket is brown in color, the hat a few shades lighter. Will be most thankful for your answer.—Mrs. M. W.

Dear Mrs. M. W: For help on this particular problem, I went to designer Ceil Chapman, who does beautiful late day and evening clothes. She says:

"You do not give your approximate age nor do you say if the party was a private one or held at a club. Assuming that you are in your middle to late 30s and that the party was held in someone's home, I'd say that the black dress was the right choice. I think I would have eliminated the bracelet, however. As for your question about the hat, it sounds as if it might pair very nicely with the jacket."

To her advice, let me add this: By and large, it's best never to wear clothes in which we do not feel comfortable or at our best. I'm sure that if you sit down and explain this to your husband, telling him that you were ill at ease during the party, he will understand in the future.

Dear Gaile: I have bought a navy blue wool dress for spring. But it has a crossed-over front (called surplice, I believe) and I feel that I need something to fill in that neckline area. What do you suggest? A necklace would not look right nor would it fill in the entire area since the cut is rather low. (It is an afternoon dress.)—Mrs. L. N.

Dear Mrs. L. N.: I agree with you that a necklace would not be adequate here. So I talked with Sylvia Block, designer for Glentex scarves. This is what she says:

"This is such a common problem that I've designed just the scarf to fill the need. It's called a portrait scarf. It is circular in shape, like a ring. It fills in the neckline completely and can be anchored at one side with a handsome pin.

New Mission Topic Planned By WMU

Plans for new mission book study were made at the executive board meeting of the Women's Missionary Union of Barrett Baptist Chapel on Tuesday evening at 6:30 p.m.

It is planned that mission book study "Glimpses Of Glory" will be started on Feb. 21 with a salad luncheon.

Mrs. A. E. Burns, vice president, presided during the meeting which opened with prayer by Mrs. H. R. Jennings.

The group also set a goal for Home Missions.

Attending the board meeting were Mmes. L. M. Scribner, R. L. Powell, L. E. Anderson, James Nipp, Roberts Bettis and Eldon Smith.

The NIGHT CIRCLE of Barrett Baptist WMU met in the chapel on Friday at 7:30 p.m. with Mrs. R. L. Powell, chairman, in charge of the meeting. Mrs. T. E. Anderson offered opening prayer followed by a program on "What Woman's Missionary Union Is And Does" prtsented by Mrs. Scribner. Meeting closed with prayer by Mrs. R. L. Powell. Mrs. H. R. Jennings was the other member attending.

The DAY CIRCLE met in the chapel on Wednesday at 10 a.m. with Mrs. A. E. Burns vice president, presiding. Mrs. Raymond Dean lead opening prayer. Mrs. James Nipp, program chairman, presented the program on "Neither Are Your Ways My Ways" concerning migrant workers. Mrs. Burns read the call to prayer and offered prayer.

Attending were Mmes. A. B. Baker, Eldon Smith, Jimmy Morse, Bob Shoman, G. A. Wimberly, Robert Bettis and Virga Stackhouse.

Professional Hairdressers To Note National Beauty Salon Week Locally

Members of Unit 81, Texas Association of Accredited Beauty Culture of the National Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association will be celebrating the 12th annual National Beauty Salon Week, Feb. 11-17, an annual observance which has more than a share of thoughtful aspects for the community.

This week, local beauty salons will burst forth with gay blue and yellow balloons, a slightly-starting outward symbol of a great many behind-the-scenes factors not usually associated with milady's appearance.

Local professional hairdressers dedicate this special "Week" to their patrons, of course. But they also dedicate the Week to community welfare and a public study of one of America's most up-and-coming industries, according to Mrs. Jackie Tynes, president of the Top o' Texas Unit 81 in Pampa.

Members of Unit 81 have donated their time and professional talent to introduce new hair styles to underprivileged junior high and senior high school students, who were selected by the schools' student counselors. Representatives of the local unit also attended and participated in a career-day clinic held Wednesday in Pampa High School.

The National Beauty Salon Week slogan, "Get A Lift With a New Hairdo" will evidently be supported by events planned to give a boost to everybody's out look. It is safe to predict that the week's activities will result in new Spring hairdo's for many a local lady. . .and that, in turn, should give a boost to the spirits of this city's sharpeyed masculine population, too.

ROAD HOG—It's a tight squeeze for this 14th century house as it is moved 300 feet to the top of the hill in Exeter, England. It was making way for a new road, but first the existing road had to make way for the oldest house in Exeter.

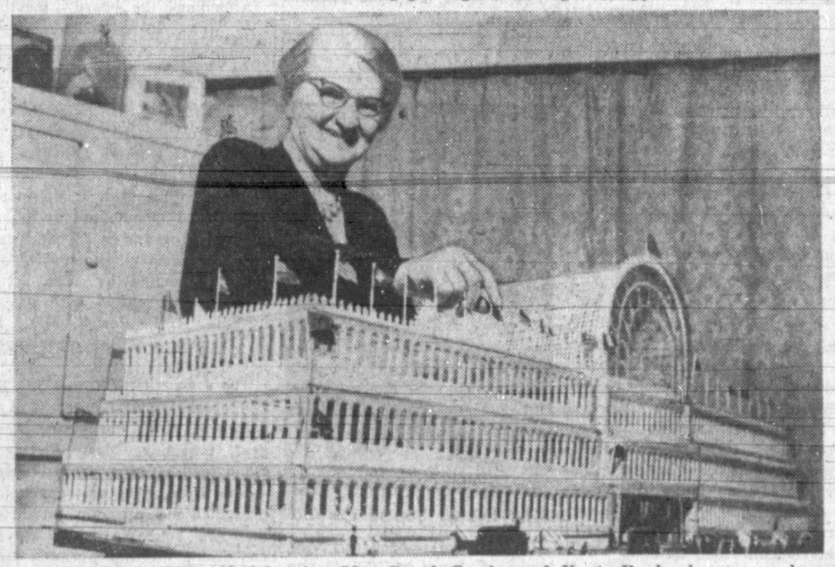

JUNIOR'S READY — Four-year-old Mark Gomez Jr., of Sunnyvale, Calif., is ready to defend the home front against all attackers on the cookie jar. He used his mother's hairnet to give his helmet that commando look.

'DRAGONFLY-WING SILHOUETTE'—The Roman collection for spring includes this red-printed deep blue chiffon cocktail sheath with jacket panels that float down each side. The flowing gown gives a dragonfly appearance.

VIEW FROM BELOW—A workman looks up into the plastic dome of the Marin County Administration Building near San Francisco. Designed by the late Frank Lloyd Wright, the $4.6 million complex will eventually be keyed into a civic center with a library and auditorium.

111 YEARS LATER—Model-maker Mrs. Beryl Goodge, of Kent, England, surveys her six-month effort: a five-foot-long replica of the Crystal Palace of London. The original Crystal Palace was opened by Queen Victoria at the Great Exhibition in 1851.

AT HOME IN THE FOAM—Here is a new toy for grown-ups. The little Viennese snowman on skis will "ski" on any liquid, but the plastic character feels at home in beer.

THAT'S THE TICKET—These 15-foot-long travel tickets are for Mr. and Mrs. Frederick E. Hines, of Pacific Palisades, Calif., who are making a seven-month around-the-world trip. Sydney T. Spice triumphantly holds the tickets to the Orient, Philippines, Australia, India, the Middle East and Europe after five hours of writing.

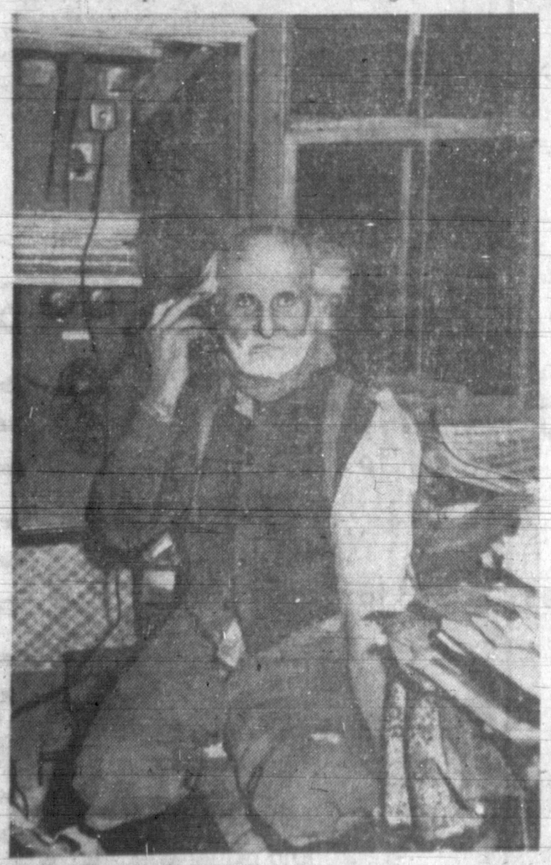

MOST TRAVELED — Anthony Quinn logged enough miles in 1961 to win the Alitalia Marco Polo Award as the year's most traveled actor. His business trips took him to Greece for "The Guns of Navarone," to Broadway for "Becket," to Rome for "Barabbas," to Jordan for "Lawrence of Arabia," and back to New York for "Requiem for a Heavyweight."

BIG DAY FOR LITTLE GIRLS—Hina Matsuri (annual Doll Festival) is a big day for the little girls of Japan. The children hold parties for their sets of ceremonial dolls, which are handed down from generation to generation. There are usually 15 or more exquisite figures, headed by an emperor and empress and courtiers in costume.

HOW TO BE WELL-THATCHED WITHOUT REALLY TRYING—That's not a hat; two-week-old Andrea Morse succeeded nicely in inheriting daddy's cowlick. Mommy and Andrea were visiting proud poppa Robert Morse backstage at Broadway's "How to Succeed, etc."

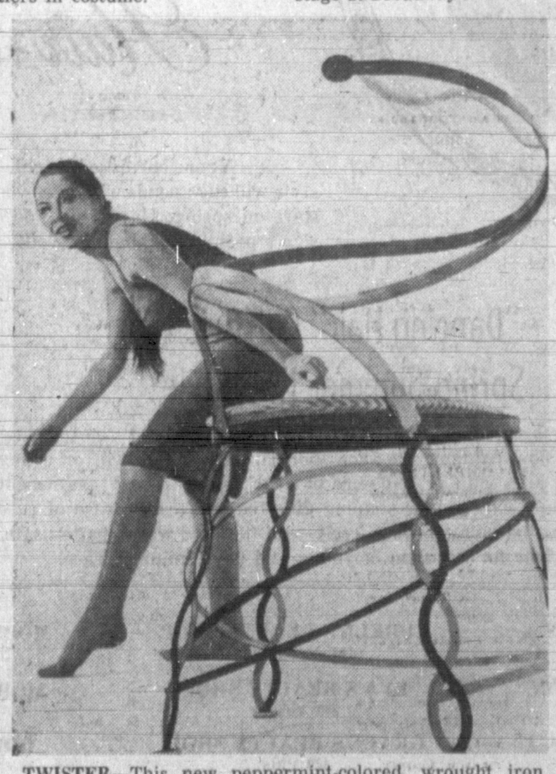

'HERMIT OF HIDDEN HOLLOW' — Perley Swett, 73, known as the "hermit of Hidden Hollow," sits in his cluttered Stoddard, N. H., home with the old hand-cranked telephone that has been in his house since 1907. Perley has a real antipathy to modern "togetherness" standards.

RIDE HIM, SOUTH AFRICAN COWBOY—This two-legged beast of burden holds his head high as he gives a ranch hand a free ride on the Highgate Ostrich Farm in Oudtshoorn, South Africa. First stop, the Last Chance Saloon.

'KEEP YOUR CHIN UP'—Composer Richard Rodgers appears to be giving actress Diahann Carroll a facelift without a beauty operator's license. The two were attending rehearsals of Rodgers' musical, "No Strings," in New York. Miss Carroll perked up.

TWISTER—This new peppermint-colored, wrought iron Twist Chair, claimed to be the most original chair ever invented, is "guaranteed" to teach its user how to dance the Twist. Designed by da Vinci of Hettrick, the spiraled arms force the sitter to twist into the chair, as dancer Nai Bonet so aptly demonstrates. What could be next?

ACTIVE LIFE — Mrs. Carl Marty, of Monroe, Wis., is still the family cook at the ripe old age of 100. She is up at 6 a.m. every day to prepare the meals for her two daughters who live with her, and she retires at 10 p.m. She was near death when she was 62.

IPAA Calls For Action On Oil Imports Policy

WASHINGTON (Spl) — The Independent Petroleum Association of America has urged the Office of Emergency Planning to expedite and conclude the petroleum study under the direction of OEP "as early as possible" and well in advance of the mid-1962 target date.

The resolution authorized by IPAA's Executive Committee was sent to the OEP director and to the inter-departmental committee studying U. S. petroleum requirements and supplies. In an accompanying letter, IPAA President Harold Decker of Houston, pledged the association's cooperation in "any way that will be helpful."

The resolution said no other matter of national policy as to petroleum has been examined more intensively or comprehensively.

"The subject of oil imports and their relation to national security has been studied exhaustively by Congressional committees, cabinet committees, government agencies, state bodies, industry-government advisory groups and the petroleum industry itself over a long period of years," the resolution said.

It pointed out that these studies and actual experience "have documented the essentiality of adequate supplies of oil and gas within the United States" as vital to national and freeworld security. The resolution said the delay in reducing oil imports while yet another study is conducted as a matter of great concern.

"The long-range aspects of petroleum investments, both at home and abroad, and the long-range considerations bearing on both the domestic economy and foreign relations require an assured national policy as to oil imports," the resolution said.

New System Gives Oil Men Data On The Double-Quick

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — It takes about 30 minutes of reading for oil technicians to learn the latest in their business.

The University of Tulsa has installed a unique new system which abstracts some 500 magazines for data and reports on oil business, from under the ground to the refinery.

Dr. E. T. Guerrero, head of the TU petroleum engineering department, said his library is the most complete concerning the search for oil, drilling, completion of wells, production of oil and transportation.

From the refinery to the customer is handled by a similar service offered by the American Petroleum Institute.

Guerrero's library dates back 30 years, Standard Oil Co., Indiana, donated the index from which the University has started its service.

The library receives magazines in 10 languages, including 38 Russian publications. Vital articles are indexed and technicians can read brief summaries of subjects that meet their interest. If more information is needed, they can hunt out the original article.

Pampan Receives Service Award

Kell A. Sorenson, superintendent of Shell Oil Company's Bryan Gas Plant at Skellytown, has been awarded a service pin with three diamonds in recognition of his 35th anniversary with the company.

Sorenson, a native of Cranfills Gap, Texas, joined Shell at Pampa in 1927. He later served as assistant plant superintendent at the Wasson Gas Plant in West Texas, and in 1952 moved to Canada as superintendent of the Jumping Pound Gas Plant. He returned to Texas as superintendent of the Bryan plant in 1958.

Sorenson and his wife, Joan, reside at 2425 Christine St. He is an elder in the First Presbyterian Church.

TIPRO And IPAA In Agreement On Pegging Imports

AUSTIN (Spl) — Officials of Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association have emphasized accord with the IPAA executive committee's decision to seek legislation which would peg total oil imports to a definite percentage of domestic production.

"This is precisely what we and other members of the Liaison Committee of producer associations over the nation agreed upon," said Tipro President James F. West. "As a matter of fact our sessions last week in Washington demonstrated virtually complete accord on a program which would, first, reduce the current level of crude oil and non-residual products and, second, provide that total oil imports in the future grow only in some specific percentage relationship to the growth of domestic production. Moreover, we found general accord on even the details of such legislation.

"However, no specific proposals were finalized pending the meeting of the IPAA executive committee and further consultation with coal industry representatives.

"We see no reason, therefore, that a united front among all groups interested in reasonable restraints on oil imports cannot be presented. Proposals to accomplish this objective can be made ready in the near future. We feel certain that some in Congress will wish to introduce bills along these lines, and that appropriate consultation will be held with officials of the Executive Department. It is our hope that the President will agree that the National Security Clause of the Trade Bill be amended as necessary to accomplish this important objective.

"It should be stressed that nothing in our proposals would prevent a stable growth of imports, but that in the future restraints must be provided in the law adequate to prevent imports from absorbing the total market growth at the expense of the defense-vital domestic producing industry and coal producing areas of our nation.

"As in previous years, independent producers have demonstrated that they are united in the essentials necessary to restore vigor to our home industry, despite the apparent desire of those opposing import restraints to make it appear that basic cleavages exist. Our best efforts in Tipro will be directed toward achieving this vital goal," said West.

Sun Oil Moves Into Alabama

CITRONELLE, Ala. (UPI)—The huge Citronelle oil field added its 209th producing well today, the sixth new producer of the year.

The G. H. Jett Drilling Co. of Shreveport, La., brought in the new well about 3¼ miles east-southeast of the Donovan discovery well.

The new well was drilled to a depth of 11,470 feet, but the production casing was set at 11,251 feet.

Meanwhile, the Sun Oil Co., of Dallas, Tex., made its long-heralded appearance in the field.

The company, which has farmed out several thousand acres of leases at Citronelle, has received its first permits to drill here. Sun was given permits for two drillings, both about 3½ miles east-south-east of the Donovan well.

Phillips Division Chief To Address Engineers' Meeting

W. A. ROBERTS
... AIME Speaker

W. A. Roberts of Oklahoma City, Okla., division superintendent of the Central Division of Phillips Petroleum Co., will be the after - dinner speaker at the Panhandle Section of the Society of Petroleum Engineers of the Society of Petroleum Engineers of the American Institute of Metalurgical Engineers' meeting to be held Thursday, beginning at 6 p.m., in the Starlight Room of the Coronado Inn.

N. E. Turnbo, AIME chapter president, said members are asked to note that the meeting date was changed, for this time only, to Thursday in order to secure the speaker from Oklahoma City.

AIME members are expected to attend from Amarillo, Borger and Pampa.

Roberts will discuss the current concept of the structure of the earth and the need to confirm or deny presently accepted theories and review the mechanical problems encountered in the proposed drilling to the Moho (oceanic formation) and some of the means and techniques which have been developed to solve these problems.

He also will review the experimental drilling phase of the Moho Project as it was conducted earlier this year in the vicinity of Guadalupe Island. As a concluding discussion, the speaker will outline the future of the Moho Project as he sees it.

Roberts, born and educated in Pittsburg, Pa., received a Bachelor of Science degree in Chemical Engineering from Carnegie Institute of Technology in 1937. Since that time, he has been employed by Phillips Petroleum Co. in various assignments throughout the Mid - Continent and West Coast areas with the exception of a little over four years military leave of absence during World War II when he served as Line Officer for the Engineer Corps and as bomber pilot and operations officer in the air force.

During assignment on the West Coast, he became interested in design, construction and operation of floating drilling rigs and was appointed to the panel on drilling techniques of the AMSOC committee at its inception.

As division superintendent for Phillips, Roberts is responsible for all drilling production operations in Oklahoma, Northern Arkansas and North Central Texas.

During a brief business meeting, Cal Shaw, program chairman, will announce plans for the AIME dance to be held April 13.

Rural Re-decoration

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Farm families generally spend less sprucing up their homes than urban people do, the Census Bureau reports.

Only $165 is spent on each existing farm dwelling in a year. This compares with a national average of $256.

Petroleum Story Will Be Told In Exhibits

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — The U.S. petroleum story, from the Drake era of 1859 to the modern period of research and conservation will soon be told in the industry's own exhibit in the Smithsonian institution in Washington, D. C.

Dr. P. W. Bishop, curator of arts and industries for the Smithsonian, will meet here Feb. 14 with a subcommittee of the American Petroleum Institute to discuss proposed exhibits to be placed in the hall of petroleum in the soon - to - be - completed museum of history and technology.

Plans call for four divisions of exhibits — drilling, well production, reservoir engineering and exploration.

The API subcommittee, appointed at the request of Smithsonian officials, has been working nearly a year on suggested exhibit ideas to be submitted to the Smithsonian for final selection and approval. T. O. Allen, Jersey Production Research Co., Tulsa, is subcommittee chairman

The proposed drilling section will include working models and exhibits illustrating the evolution of equipment from early cable tool rigs of the Drake period through rotary rigs of the Spindletop and Woodin derrick periods, to today's folding mast type. It will also show the development of bits, drilling fluids, cementing, and drill stem testing and coring methods.

Proposed well production exhibits range from early day pumps to modern well stimulation methods such as hydraulic fracturing. One exhibit will show a well head in cross sections reveaing several strings of pipe.

Proposed exhibits in the reservoir engineering division will include lighted and animated panels showing the evolution of man's ideas about underground oil pools and his different methods of getting it out of the ground. One proposed section will show the place of oil and gas in relation to the national economy.

Under exploration proposed exhibits will include early indications of petroleum — recalling, for example, the pitch that Noah used to caulk his ark. It will include, of course, displays illustrating modern geophysical methods.

The new Smithsonian addition will give the petroleum industry 5,000 or more square feet of space. Up to now, the industry has been represented in Smitshoian by a fragmentary exhibit, including a model of an early brick oil still and a flow diagram nodel of a modern refinery.

NEEDHAM, Mass. (UPI) —Rev. John H. Westerhoff III of the Needham Congregational Church rides a bicycle as he makes his parish visits.

He estimates that he covers at least 20 miles a week on his two-wheeler, "It's time-saving getting through traffic," he said, "and I can always find a parking spot."

Hawaii's famous grass skirt, originally imported from Samoa in the 19th century, now is made in New Jersey.

When loaded, the container is lifted by the truck into what normally is the truck's body area and transported to its destination.

Bobbsey Twins, Tom Swift Still Popular With The Young Readers

NEW YORK (UPI) — In the normal course of events, Flossie and Freddie should be 63 years old and Bert and Nan a spry 69.

But being the Bobbsey Twins, they are not a day older today than they were when they stepped into the pages of fiction in 1904.

It was 54 books and many adventures ago that Grosset and Dunlap introduced the Bobbsey Twins to young readers, under the authorship of Laura Lee Hope.

Mrs. Hope still is pounding away at a typewriter — presumably a modern one — and according to the publishers, she is not a day older, either.

The total circulation of the Bobbsey Twin series is a well -kept publishing secret, but it is not violating any confidences to disclose that the volumes are selling today as well as ever before.

So are some other venerable series, principally the adventures of Tom Swift, Nancy Drew and the Hardy Boys. Tom Swift is the only one who has aged. But there is Tom Swift Jr., who has taken over where his father left off when he suddenly grew up and was married in 1939. A paper shortage and other mishaps knocked the elder Swift out of print, but he returned 10 years later with an 18-year-old atomic scientist for a son to thrive on adventures in a flying laboratory and aboard an atomic submarine and a rocket ship

Tom Jr. bet the U.S. Navy by a year in getting a nuclear submarine into the sea and his rocket ship reached the moon two years before the Russians fired a shot that hit the same mark.

The author of the original Tom Swift series, which featured an air ship and a flying boat, was Victor Appleton. The new series bears the byline of Victor Appleton II.

Nancy Drew, still 18 after 30 years of solving mysteries for her attorney father, and the Hardy Boys, perennial teen-aged sleuths, are as popular as ever with a younger generation being educated to become adult who-dunit fans. The 40th Hardy book, "The Mystery of the Desert Giant," came out last year.

In the case of the Bobbsey Twins, many of the early books in the series became so outdated that they have been rewritten with modern situations to suit today's young readers. That means the entire set still is in print, available and up-to-date.

The writers of all the series have been required to bone up on science and geography as a result of the increased sophistication and knowledge of young people.

Travel is emphasized in the new Bobbsey Twins, with one book taking them to New England historical sites and another to the Tower of London. Nancy Drew traveled to Hong Kong for her most recent adventure, titled "Mystery of the Fire Dragon," and the Hardy boys fly their own airplane on secret missions.

"In the old Tom Swift, there was lots of adventure, but little science," reported an editor assigned to keep Victor Appleton II hard at work. "Today the books are scientifically accurate because the kids are so smart. You can't have any mistakes today. Thirty years ago, kids accepted this sort of thing as fairy tale. Today they want facts."

Does JFK Think Rockefeller Would Be A Tough Opponent?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Kennedy's news conference spoof about Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller being more of a conservative than Sen. Barry Goldwater should be read in the light of this capital's peculiar illumination.

This capital is illuminated by politics. In that light, the news conference swipe at Rockefeller definitely reveals Kennedy's hunch that Rockefeller, the governor of New York, is likely in 1964 to be the Republican presidential nominee. It reveals more.

It reveals an idea forming in Kennedy's mind that Rockefeller might be a tough man to beat. Considered as a tactical maneuver in the endless political battle, Kennedy was and is seeking to protect his own liberal, left-wing, racial, independent flock from Rockefeller raiders.

There probably will be more rather than less of that. Rockefeller is a candidate this year for reelection as governor. He was elected in 1958 with a margin of 580,000 votes. Rockefeller needs to do much better than that this year for a proper blast-off toward 1964. It has been suggested that to consolidate his position in the Republican party, Rockefeller needs a victory margin of 750,000 to 1,000,000 votes.

Rockefeller is trying to bring this about. Kennedy is trying to prevent it.

To win reelection this year by the desired margin, Rockefeller must attract independents, liberals, Negroes and others who voted in 1960 in New York City for Kennedy.

These groups also voted for Kennedy in other great urban areas. If they had voted for Richard M. Nixon instead, Nixon would have been elected president of the United States.

It follows that if Rockefeller can attract these voters in New York City this year, he might expect to attract the same type of voters in 1964 in other great cities. If Rockefeller is dreaming about such things as that, it is reasonable to believe that Kennedy is thinking about the same.

That news conference crack was, in fact, a salute from a political pro to a potential opponent who could become potentially very dangerous to Kenedy's reelection plans. The suggestion that Rockefeller is more conservative than Goldwater will not bear analysis. It is, of course, nonsense.

Rockefeller is attempting to march down both sides of the street at the same time and along the middle, as well, as most successful politicians must do. He will find Kennedy's footprints there, too. But Rockefeller retains his credentials as a left-of-center Republican despite his opposition to Kennedy's project for a new Cabinet department of urban affairs. It was on that issue that Kennedy sought to tag Rockefeller as a conservative.

The Negro issue is involved in the urban affairs dispute, but that will not rub off on Rockefeller. He is a member of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. He also is one of the few Republicans in high places who believe Kennedy can be licked.

Writer Is Trying To 'Weasel Out' On Slight Error

By DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Not since I was a student under the late Miss Pringle, my high school principal, have I faced such a challenge.

One day when I was late for classes I was called into Miss Pringle's office and confronted with a demand to explain my tardiness.

"There was a lot of ice on he ground this morning," I told her. "Every time I took a step forward I slipped back two steps."

"Then how did you ever get here at all?" asked Miss Pringle, thinking that she had me trapped.

"I turned around and started back home," I replied.

Admittedly this story wouldn't hold up under expert cross-examination, but it is still regarded by some of my former classmates, particularly the ones now in prison, as a classic alibi.

My talent for weaseling out of tight situations is now being tested again as a result of something I wrote recently about the ill-starred moon shot at Cape Canaveral.

Attempting to defend our rocketeers for having missed the moon by 20,000 miles, I presented figures to show that they were firing from a distance 100 times the size of the target.

Shortly thereafter, I received a note of commendation from a fellow mathematician. He said, the area of the moon's surface is 722 times greater than the distance from the earth to the moon. Therefore, my figure was 1,720,000 per cent inaccurate.

Had I misfigured by only 1,719,000 per cent, I might have passed it off as a slip of the pencil. We mathematicians allow ourselves a certain tolerance.

But that extra 1,000 per cent makes the margin of error too large to ignore and will require some explanation on my part.

The best I can offer is that my calculation of the size-to-distance ratio must have been computed at a time when we had a new moon, or possibly during an eclipse.

I estimate that a new moon is about 720,000 per cent smaller than a full moon; at least, it looks that way. That would account for all but 1,000,000 per cent of the discrepancy.

During an eclipse, of course, the moon becomes invisible. That would account for the other 1,000,000 per cent.

If this explanation isn't satisfactory, there may be another reason why my computation was off by 1,720,000 per cent. It could be that I missed something important in math class that day I was late for school.

Van Heflin Stars In Movie Being Made In Manila

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Van Heflin, who spent all of last year away from picture-making, is returning to the international film circuit with a starring role in a movie being filmed in Manila.

Heflin said he "just sat" during 1961. Usually, he is one of Hollywood's most traveled actors, working in pictures that take him to Italy, Austria, Yugoslavia and now the Philippines.

His role in "To Be A Man" out in the islands is the first work Heflin had done since he completed an NBC-TV special, "U.S. Number One American Profile," to be aired March 29.

It's been more than four years since Heflin made a picture in the United States. During most of that time he traveles between his Brentwood home near Hollywood and Europe.

Unlike some actors who moved to Europe as a tax advantage, Heflin always maintained a home here.

Van's refusal to move his family, consisting of former actress Francis Neal and their three children, to Europe is based on his desire to have the youngsters raised in America.

"I don't think it's fair to a family to uproot them simply because it's profitable for you to do so," he said. "As long as I can afford it, I want to supply whatever happiness I can for those kids."

Illinois Man Is Named Director

AUSTIN (UPI)— Dr. George Beto, president of the Concordia Theological Seminary at Springfield, Ill., today was hired as director of the Texas Prison System.

Beto, who had earlier turned down the position, was hired at an annual salary of $18,500. He replaces O. B. Ellis, who died last year. He will take the job March 1.

Beto's acceptance of the job was announced by H. H. Coffield, chairman of the Board of Corrections.

Coffield said Beto would also be asked to serve concurrently as chief of chaplains.

Beto was a member of the Texas Board of Corrections and chairman of its inmate committee for six years prior to taking the job with the theological seminary two years ago.

Tennis was introduced into the United States by Miss May E. Outerbridge, who spent the winter of 1874 in Bermuda and saw the game played by British officers there.

Old Gams are Best

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Columbia Pictures is passing over pin - up pictures of Brigitte Bardot, Marilyn Monroe and Jayne Mansfield for Betty Grable and Rita Hayworth.

The studio has asked for copies of the World War II vintage pictures to pin over Stev eMcQueen's

Don't Be Fooled by the Bellowing...

Look For The Bull Behind The Horns

With the arrival of Spring, mail boxes are being stuffed with advertising from "byway" lumber yards, all making a great noise in color and words. These mailbox stuffers apparently offer building materials at attarctive prices. Your local lumber dealer suggests as a friend that you look for the bull behind the horns. Noise is often used to distract attention from facts.

For instance, you might be lured by the price on clear redwood car siding. Do you know if this is flat grain, vertical grain or vertical heart grain siding? You should know before you drive 50 or 100 miles for a 'bargain'" Flat grain siding is susceptible to checking and spliting. Maybe the "bargain" isn't really a bargain.

Look for the bull behind the horns on "good medium grade" dimension lumber. Do you know if the dimension lumber is Douglas fir, white fir, hemlock, spruce or just plain lodge pole pine. There is a big difference. You should know what you are paying for, and your local lumber dealer will tell you the truth. He will be right there to back up his word, too!

Would you know whether lumber you obtained from a "bargain" bin was kiln dried or green? If you haul home a load of green lumber, better get it nailed down in a hurry. If you don't, you'll have a pile of skis or oversize barrel staves on your hands.

The horns blast about exterior doors. Lots of noise, but nothing about whether the doors are solid core or hollow core. There's a big difference.

Thinking about galvanized steel roofing? You could be buying factory rejects. Lengths and widths on factory rejects vary. Maybe your wife will help "quilt" the patchwork pieces.

Look for the bull behinds the horns. Sometimes so-called cut prices are not low prices at all. Grade for grade and quality for quality, you can usually buy better from your friend and neighbor . . . and you won't waste time and trucking costs.

HEART BEATS—LIT UP—With a new monitoring device, it is possible now to check a patient's heart action visually and audibly. Here, patient Jackie Walker's left arm is wired to the indicator which registers heart beats either by beeps or a blinking white light. Should the heart stop, a red light comes on and a loud buzzer summons help.

21st Century Utopia — If The Bomb Permits

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI) — The theme exhibit for Seattle's 1962 World's Fair will show fair-goers the kind of Utopia possible in Century 21, if man chooses not to destroy himself.

The world of tomorrow will be housed in an unique, tent-shaped colisseum of steel and aluminum, so constructed that it rises to an 11-story hieght at its peak with no inner supports to absorb space or obstruct views.

"Century 21" — The Threshold and the Threat," will depict the cities, landscapes, homes and total environment for man in the next century. The danger of nuclear destruction will not be pictured, but designers of the show have constructed it in such a way that the threat will follow viewers like a shadow.

The show will be projected onto 3,250 aluminum cubes, cleverly bolted so they will seem to float in gravity - defying patterns above the colisseum floor.

Spectators, 100 at a time, will view the show by taking a "bubbleator," a huge, transparent elevator, to platforms. They will see the entire show on the "cloud" of four - foot cubes in 21 minutes. A new show will begin every two minutes, 40 seconds.

The theme show is being put together by Donald Deskey Associates, Inc., New York. William Joachim, executive director of the show, says the electronic requirements are so exact that "we're actually building an electronic computer."

Alfred Stern, show producer, says the theme will create a solitary, detached atmosphere showing "the promise of man's dreams, time ticking away, the threat before the threshold."

Approximately 4,000 effects will be presented during the 21 - minute show. Lights will range from deep colors to pastels, music from jazz to symphonic themes, while vivid scenes of man at work and play in all seasons of the next century are projected.

Stern says the entire show will be controlled by precise timing on electronic tape. "Light, sound and motion will motivate people to move through the show. We will be reaching them in a very intimate, emotional way."

The whole show, including the colisseum, which will become a giant sports palace for the city after the fair, will cost more than $6 million with the state financing this part of the fair.

The theme exhibit requires more than 500 miles of wires which will carry and distribute 11,000 electrical impulses every hour, 140 loudspeakers, 374 projected film effects and enough electricity to supply a small town.

Protestant Aid Overseas Shows Increase In 1961

NEW YORK (Spl) — Protestant churches in the United States shipped 346,586,118 pounds of food, clothing, medicines and other relief supplies for free distribution to the destitute in 52 countries abroad during 1961.

This — an increase of 15 2-3 per cent over the 1960 schedule — was announced today at the offices of Church World Service, the relief and rehabilitation agency of major Protestant and Eastern Orthdox churches in America, 475 Riverside Drive, New York City.

The 1961 shipment of relief goods, valued at $26,900,118, compares with the 1960 total of 299,593,590 pounds worth $26,485,718.

Foodstuffs accounted for the bulk of the 1961 total shipment, with 339,048,915 pounds valued at $18,605,070. Of this total U.S. Government - donated surplus food stocks distributed through the SOS (Share Our Surplus) program amounted to 333,893,961 pounds, valued at $18,197,893.

The balance of 5,154,954 pounds of foodstuffs worth $407,177 came from CROP (Christian Rural Overseas Program).

Clothing shipped overseas came to 5,990,649 pounds with a value of $6,257,972. Medicines valued at $1,777,495 accounted for 991,954 pounds of the year's total. Miscellaneous relief materials amounted to 554,600 pounds, with a value of $239,581.

Distribution of these supplies through Church World Service in 52 countries was financed by contributions in response to One Great Hour of Sharing and similar appeals of the denominations; from the Share Our Surplus appeals of the denominations; from the Share Our Surplus appeal and commodity collections of CROP, and through other contributed clothing and commodity efforts of CWS and its constituent denominations.

Distressed areas to which major 1961 relief supplies were shipped included Africa, for distribution to war victims and refugees in the Congo, Ruanda - Urundi, Algeria and Tunisia; to drouth sufferers in Kenya, and to schools, clinics, hospitals and leper colonies in Ghana, Liberia and Nigeria.

A large portion of the total assistance was also given to Arab refugees scattered through Jordan, Egypt, Gaza, Israel and Lebanon, and to destitute mountain villagers in Greece.

Also given material relief were victims of natural disasters and political upheaval in Burma, India, Hong Kong and Korea.

In the area of Latin America and the Caribbean, aid was given to drouth and earthquake victims in Chile and to Cuban refugees in Jamaica.

Publisher Assails Left-Wing Press In Address Here Friday

"It is almost impossible to find out who in government are communists, so tight has the cover been pulled around these people," said J. C. Phillips, publisher of the Borger News - Herald, at Friday's meeting of the Pampa Kiwanis Club.

Speaking on freedom of the press, Phillips lambasted the great horde of Washington reporters who take the carbon copy press releases and use them as the basis for their stories. The speaker also warned of the tendency for reporters to give slanted views on controversial subjects where their personal views are strongly involved. In spite of these shortcomings, Phillips said that the United States has the best and the freest press in the world today.

Referring to the press as all forms of communication, Phillips said a great danger existed in many of the text books our young people use in schools because of the tendency to depreciate the American heritage and exalt the One - World idea. The portraying of the founding fathers as economic opportunists was an example given of the view many text books take.

Phillips lashed out at the Council on Foreign Relations and the United World Federalists because of their desire to desolve American sovereignty in favor of a One-World government, oriented to the Socialist - Communist line. Allied with these organizations is the Americans for Democratic Action, a group whose members are very numerous within the present administration. Virtually nothing is made in the way of news regarding these extremist organizations because they are extremists of the left. On the other hand, conservatives are smeared and attacked almost constantly, Phillips stated.

As an example of how we have become dulled to actions favorable to the Communists, Phillips stated, they are now accepted in such groups as the World Council of Churches in spite of the undeniable fact that Communism is atheistic and the only persons who could function within the shell of a religious organization would be Communist agents. This, according to the speaker, shows just how powerful the Communists are in influencing the non - Communist left who have fronted for the conspiracy ever since attempts were made to destroy Martin Dies, Joe McCarthy and now the House Un - American Activities Committee.

Price Supports Without Controls Called 'Torture'

ATLANTA (UPI) — Agriculture Scretary Orville Freeman said Secretary Orville Freeman says that furthtr farm price supports without accompanying production controls proposed by the Kennedy administration would be "slow torture."

Freeman told about 2,000 Dixie farm leaders here that "nobody's forcing the program down your throats. In fact, we don't want to drive people out of the country with a "cat of nine tails" program."

But, he said, "something's got to be done about the tremendous amount of money that the government and the public have been spending in the past to absorb the excess production of grain and feed."

Price supports are "slow torture without a good supply-management program," he said.

The secretary said any farm program must be based on acceptance of the fact that American farmers can outproduce market needs and that agriculture itself cannot achieve a balance between supply and demand.

"Now," he told the farm leaders, "it's up to you—the people with the grass roots contacts—to do the convincing."

Experiment Uses Guns Of Navarone

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — A New York University professor and his students are using the movie "The Guns of Navarone" as part of an experiment to discover taste similarities among people of different languages and cultures.

Movie exhibitors in such cities as London, Helsinki, Bangkok and Buenos Aires were mailed questionnaires asking them to rate audience reaction to the film's basic elements of entertainment, including performances, photography, screenplay and music. The findings will be published by Professor Robert Gessner, of NYU's television, motion picture and radio department.

CRACKERS IN SHELTER

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (UPI)—Civil Defense Director Robert Bates has stocked the fallout shelter in the basement of the state office building with 36,000 pounds of crackers.

APPROVES BIKINI

SANDOWN, Isle of Wight, England (UPI) — Businessman Ivan Cooper, 73, told a meeting he thought the bikini-clad girl on the cover of the local guidebook was too "sexy."

His colleagues disagreed and one called it "a breath of fresh air."

PLANS NAME CHANGE

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UPI)—German exchange student Knut Heise, 28, who plans to take the state bar exam this month, is considering adding the letter "E" to his first name.

"After all, some people might not want a lawyer to represent them if he is a 'Knut,'" Heise said.
