Bush, Clinton rush aides to Texan's office

Candidates plot figures for victory map

■ Billionaire could throw wrench into unusual political campaign year.

By Evan Ramstad
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five weeks from Election Day, it is easy for the confident camp of Democrat Bill Clinton to draw an electoral victory map. Coming up with a winning blueprint for George Bush is a bit trickier — but still doable.

National polls aside, the Nov. 3 election hinges on the outcome in 50 states, and the ability of one candidate to assemble the winning electoral majority of 270.

The expected re-entry of Dallas businessman Ross Perot into the mix may influence the outcome in some places. But most analysts suggest it probably will not radically alter the electoral landscape.

Clinton enjoys a lead over Bush even in states that have been part of the recent GOP presidential base, such as California, Illinois and Michigan.

"He seems to have certainly broken through what we considered in the past to be the strongholds of the Republican Party," said California pollster Mark di Camillo. His organization's California Poll puts Clinton 19 points in DALLAS — Monday promises to be a day like no other in American politics — top aides of the president and his Democratic rival are flying to the headquarters of a sometimes-challenger to defend their proposals before him and his supporters.

Afterward, Ross Perot's people will meet with their man, then he will go on national television and, presumably, give some indication whether or not he will re-enter the presidential race.

The goals of the Bush and Clinton camps are clear enough. They need to impress Perot's backers with their own plans to revive the economy and reduce the budget deficit — without offending anyone by speaking ill of Perot's proposals.

United States remains silent in world arena

WASHINGTON — President Bush's new world order, which assigns leadership to the United States as the surviving superpower, clearly did not apply this week to the European currency turmoil. While the United States government stood by, the Germans marched to their own agenda.

Onset of fall leaves allergic reactions

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

Twice a year — during the fall and spring — allergies triggered by pollens typically increase, causing sneezing, runny noses, itchy watery eyes and wheezing.

In Midland, those who suffer such allergies are just past the onset of the fall season.

On Labor Day there was a distinct increase in allergies "almost like you turned on a switch," Dr. John Bray, a Midland allergist, said.

But reports differ on whether this fall has started out more severe than seasons past.

"Overall it's about average, (although) we are clearly at a time of year when people are having problems," Bray said.

"I thought this year would be considerably higher than usual because of all that rain," he said.

But "it's too early to say for sure," Bray added.

Heavier rainfall in the last four years has contributed to the problem overall in recent years, he said.

Dr. Stephen Wiesenfeld, another Midland allergist, said he has noticed an increase in reactions so far this season.

"In the last week, we've had a tremendous increase in the number of people who have been affected, and we expect it to

The Republican candidate has turned an uphill campaign against former Railroad Commission Chairwoman Lena Guerrero into what some observers now say is a tossup, and he did it with Lone Star flair: He threw mud that stuck.

Simple research by Williamson's campaign last month uncovered information that Guerrero was not a University of Texas honors graduate as she had long claimed. Records show she dropped out of school 19 hours short of a degree and

Autumn weather makes appearance in city

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

The cooler autumn weather that greeted the first few days of fall in Midland should return this week despite a brief warm-up Friday and Saturday, the National Weather Service said.

"We should see another cool front by Monday and mild conditions will continue through the end of the week. It's simply autumn and it's making its presence known," an observer at the NWS said.

Last week high day-time temperatures struggled to reach the upper 70s while Midland residents broke out the long-sleeve apparel and light jackets for the evenings.

Friday afternoon, however, high temperatures returned to a more summer-like 93 degrees.

But high school football fans in Midland and Odessa Friday night enjoyed pleasant low-to-mid-70 degree weather.

Next Friday, however, football fans should dress warmer as low evening temperatures should drop to the lower 60s, the NWS said.

"The weather isn't setting any records — high or low. We're falling right smack dab in the middle of what is normal," the NWS said.

Some manage to borrow bit of bliss

EDITOR'S NOTE — British playwright George Bernard Shaw wrote nearly a century ago that a lifetime of happiness "would be hell on Earth." Perhaps, but few can resist the pursuit. This last of a three-part series, "Are We Happier?," explores how a handful of Americans have searched for — and found — some measure of happiness.

By Leslie Dreyfous
Associated Press writer

Like a coy lover, happiness seems to dodge its most ardent suitors. For all the billions of dollars spent, advertisements placed, self-help groups joined, marriages dissected, "wounded children" uncovered — for all our national fascination with it, joy still cannot be owned.

Sketched here, however, are the lives of a few people who have managed to borrow a bit.

Ann and Robert Echols take pleasure in their American Dream.

Eloise Rose finds peace in her Bible and relationship with God.

Sheryl Unger draws satisfaction from a strong, disciplined body.

ANALYSIS: United States officials keep low profile in new world order

sia was not repeated by the administration this week at the semiannual gathering of the world's finance ministers and central bank presidents — a meeting that is frequently a platform from which to push America's foreign economic goals. The White House was silent on Russia.

Behind the American reticence is the diminishing power of the United States to shape Europe's economies — a loss of influence made more explicit than ever by the European currency turmoil. That turmoil suggests a world dividing into spheres, with Germany the superpower in Western Europe, the United States in the Western Hemisphere and Japan in Asia and the Pacific. Russia has so far resisted any superpower's control.

Several other reasons help explain the low-key American presence at the meetings here. The main one was the presidential election. With Bush concentrating his campaign rhetoric on solutions for the domestic economic crisis, his strategists have apparently decided not to draw public attention to foreign problems — particularly problems that have not responded to American pressure.

"The administration is obviously involved in a domestic agenda," a senior administration official said, suggesting that at least until Nov. 3, Bush officials are likely to say little about foreign economic issues. The election strategy has soft-pedaled references to the new world order that President Bush proclaimed during the Persian Gulf crisis.

In that spirit, Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady and David C. Mulford, under secretary for International Affairs, had publicly badgered the Germans to lower interest rates, with Mulford even getting into a squabble with German officials last spring.

The Americans argued, in effect, that only after the Germans, with their increasingly dominant economy, lowered rates could other European nations lower theirs. The American goal was to get Europeans to stimulate their economies, making them more prosperous so that Europe would purchase more American goods and help the United States out of its hard times.

The Bush administration similarly refrained from inserting itself into the growing conflict in Russia — a conflict that America seems powerless to control. The Russians are divided between those who want to qualify for Western loans by cutting government spending, closing inefficient companies and laying off workers, and those who want a go-slow policy to save jobs — even if that means little foreign funding.

The Bush administration, at the April IMF and World Bank meeting, had declared that a historic moment had arrived and the West should quickly channel funds to the former Soviet Union — and Russia, in particular — to save it from falling back into communism. The assumption was that President Boris N. Yeltsin's Russian government would soon take the steps to qualify for the foreign loans, an assumption that no longer holds.

COOL: Autumn comes to town

(From 1A)

The forecast for today calls for sunny skies with a high in the mid-80s and southeast to east wind at five to 15 miles per hour. Tonight should be clear with a low in the lower 50s, the NWS said.

Monday should be sunny with a high in the mid-80s.

After an overnight low of 60, Saturday's high reached 83 compared to the record high for that date of 105 set in 1977. The record low for that date is 42 set in 1989.

The extended Tuesday through Thursday forecast calls for clear skies with highs in the mid-70s to lower 80s and lows in the lower 50s.

STATE

Cooler, drier air poured into North Texas Saturday behind an eastward-moving cold front, with showers and thunderstorms expected as it continues through the state.

The weak front stretched from Sherman to Dallas and then southwestward to Brownwood late Saturday afternoon, the National Weather Service said.

High temperatures ranged from the upper 70s behind the front to the 90s in South Texas.

Winds were light and variable east of the front and northerly to northeasterly at 10 to 15 mph, with gusts above 20 mph west of the front. Winds also shifted to the north in the Hill Country and Edwards Plateau as a trough line leading the front moved across the area.

NATION

Tropical Storm Danielle lost much of its strength Saturday as it moved inland after soaking the mid-Atlantic states. Waves whipped by the storm were blamed for at least one death off New Jersey.

Rain showers were scattered across much of the rest of the nation. Record cold gripped parts of Alaska.

Danielle was downgraded from a tropical storm to a depression, after coming ashore late Friday over Maryland. The storm dumped 2 inches of rain in six hours at Salisbury, Md.

Waves churned by the storm swamped a sailboat early Saturday off the New Jersey coast, leaving one boater dead and another missing, state police said.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

front of Bush in a state that last voted Democratic in 1964.

But strategists in both camps are quick to note that five weeks is a long time in the life of a campaign and that many elections are not decided until the final days.

With Clinton's 10- to 15-percentage point lead in most national polls, "you want to color everything on the map blue, the color that's usually used for Democrats," said Democratic pollster Peter Hart. "It's a mistake. The difficulty is recognizing that the race is going to narrow and states are going to tighten up."

Clinton's forces point to big leads on the West Coast, in the Northeast and in many Midwestern industrial states.

Bush's camp all but cedes California (54 electoral votes) to Clinton, but counts on wins in Texas (32) and Florida (25) and relatively solid support in the rest of the South, the mountain states and through the Great Plains.

The Bush campaign also views as "must wins" at least three of these five industrial-belt battlegrounds: New Jersey (15), Pennsylvania (23), Ohio (21), Michigan (18) and Illinois (22).

"We can win fairly easily without California," said Charles Black, a senior Bush adviser. "A Democrat has a hard time doing it without California."

Black said "there are a lot of combinations" that can bring Bush a victory without California, especially "if we have Texas and Florida and solidify our traditional base. We'll do fine in the South except in Arkansas and perhaps Tennessee."

But political analyst Stuart Rothenberg suggests the potential exists for "a major Clinton victory — something in the 53 percent to 55 category, with a big Electoral College margin." He cited state polls showing Bush in trouble in Michigan, Missouri (11), New Jersey, Ohio, Texas, Indiana (12) and even GOP bastion New Hampshire (4).

"If you give Clinton the entire Northeast, all of the upper industrial Midwest with the possible exception of Ohio, the entire Pacific Coast, and a smattering of states in the South and Midwest farm states, you've got a big Democratic victory," Rothenberg said.

Most analysts don't expect a Perot re-emergence to either throw the election into the House of Representatives or to change the race's outcome otherwise. However, Perot could make it harder for Bush to win in Texas, Florida and North Carolina (14) by splitting the conservative vote.

Elsewhere, Perot could wind up helping Bush in states such as California and in Midwestern states where the vote may be close, said Frank Luntz, who was Perot's pollster.

"If Perot gets back into the race, states like Colorado (8) and New Mexico (5) could get back into the Bush camp," Luntz said, suggesting that Clinton's current lead in these usually GOP states reflects more anti-Bush than pro-Clinton sentiment.

A lot has to happen between now and Election Day for Bush to be able to turn the GOP dream map into reality.

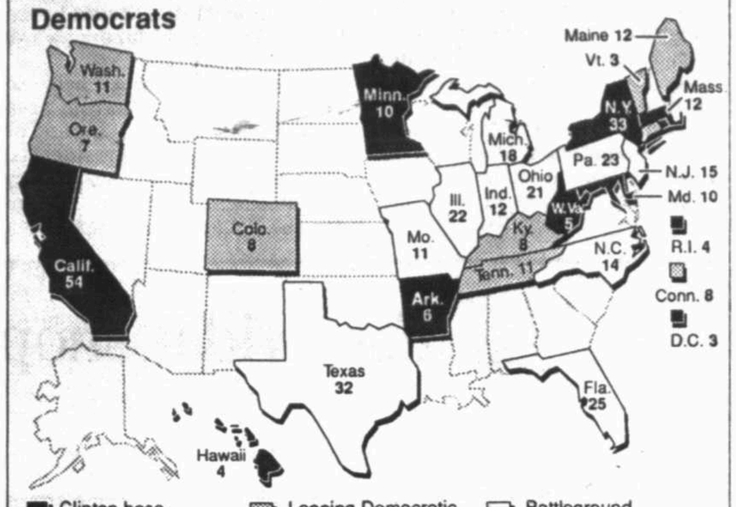

"Bush doesn't seem to be able to get over 42 percent and Bill Clinton doesn't fall much below 50 percent" in polls taken over the past weeks, said Andrew Kohut, president of Princeton Survey Research.

"You shouldn't assume that he (Bush) is absolutely out of it, but he doesn't seem to have gained any ground in the month of September," Kohut said. "So something's got to give, something's got to change" for Bush to win.

PEROT: Campaigns fly aides to billionaire's office

(From 1A)

They're showing respect, too, in their choices of the people they are sending to Dallas.

President Bush on Saturday added Housing Secretary Jack Kemp to the GOP team that already included National Security Adviser Brent Scowcroft, campaign chairman Robert Teeter, and Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas.

One Bush campaign aide said it was even possible there would be a visit from Bush, who was already scheduled to be in Dallas. No meeting with Perot appears on the president's schedule, but spokeswoman Torie Clarke said, "I don't know, I can't rule it out."

Ironically, Kemp believes less than many Republicans in the importance of deficit reduction for successful economic policy.

Representing Democrat Bill Clinton will be campaign chairman Mickey Kantor, retired Joint Chiefs of Staff Chairman William Crowe, Sen. David Boren of Oklahoma and civil rights leader Vernon Jordan.

But Perot has more than the feelings of fervent supporters to consider in deciding whether to revive the presidential candidacy he abandoned last month.

He has said that if his backers from the across the nation tell him, " 'It's a dirty job, Ross, but you've got to do it,' then I belong to them."

But there's also his image, the issues he wants addressed, the media scrutiny he would again face and the effect he would have on who would actually win if he got back in.

Leaders of his 50-state ballot drive say they will urge Perot to get back in at the meetings in Dallas.

Analysts say he can't win in November but may well rejoin the race at least in a limited way to keep attention on the issues he thinks are important — and on himself. Aides, too, suggest he will revive his candidacy in some form.

What effect Perot thinks his re-entry would have on the race is unclear. When he left in July, he said a main reason was that he didn't want to disrupt an election he couldn't win.

"What I would be interested in learning from him is if he now feels that's less of a problem because of his diminished prospects or he feels that it remains a problem but is outweighed by inattention to the issues," said Bruce Buchanan, a political scientist at the University of Texas.

Analysts generally believe that Perot will hurt Bush's chances in Texas and Florida but may work against Clinton in California, all prize electoral states.

"We can assume he is much more interested in defeating George Bush than electing him and yet he has absolutely no reason to know that that would be the outcome," said Stephen Hess, political analyst at the Brookings Institution. "What clearly will happen is he can't win."

Jim Squires, who was media adviser for Perot, said the Texan knows that but may feel forced to run anyway "because those volunteers won't allow him not to."

But Hess said Perot's volunteers "are the fig leaf that he uses to do what he wants to do anyway."

"He will get back in, I think, for one overwhelming reason and that is his ego and the degree he may have felt bruised by the response to his getting out," Hess said.

Perot had faced several weeks of blistering news coverage before his departure and was particularly stung by his portrayal afterward. One national newsmagazine labeled him "The Quitter" on its cover.

Ed Rollins, Perot's former campaign manager, also said the billionaire would rejoin the race — but only to satisfy his powerful ego.

Perot would get less scrutiny than before, analysts say, because there is little time before the election and his chance of winning is now seen as virtually zero.

ALLERGIES: Doctors speculate on severity of season

get worse," Wiesenfeld said.

"Red-berry junipers began pollinating this weekend ... (which) really seems to get a lot of people with asthma," he said.

In addition, "weeds are probably at an all-time high ... and the molds continue to be high," Wiesenfeld said.

"It's shaping up to be one of the worse falls in a long time," he said.

Wiesenfeld attributes the increased allergens to El Nino, or Pacific ocean warming that brings moisture and warmth across northern Mexico and parts of Texas, which ripens conditions for pollination.

"All the vegetation has gone crazy, has overgrown," he said.

The fall season usually begins sometime between mid-August and mid-September, peaks in October and dwindles anywhere from the first week of November to Thanksgiving, according to allergists.

The first freeze usually stops weeds and grasses from pollinating and cuts down on molds.

Although the allergy seasons are in the fall and spring, Midlanders never totally escape their allergies.

"The trouble around here is there is always something pollinating year round," Wiesenfeld said.

"We don't have the dramatic seasons you see north of us. We've got something cooking all year round," he added.

In addition to the pollens, dust plagues Midlanders susceptible to allergies, according to local specialists.

About 25 percent of the population suffers from mild allergies and about 5 percent have serious allergies, Dr. Bray said based on researcher estimates.

According to Ronald Pollock, director of cardio-pulmonary and neurology services at Memorial Hospital and Medical Center, allergic reactions range from mild — sneezing with eye and nose irritation — to severe, which can cause hospitalization.

"Probably the majority can be handled at home," he said.

People are affected by pollens and dust essentially because of defense mechanisms are triggered to fight the asthma, Pollock said.

"In a sense (the body) overreacts to the invader. In some people this becomes an overwhelming process," he said.

Treatment of allergies include over-the-counter antihistamines for mild reactions, prescribed use of steroid-based nasal sprays for moderate cases, and immunization, or shots, for severe cases.

As for preventive medicine, avoiding allergens and staying in an air-conditioned area may help.

But avoiding allergens is not fool-proof prevention.

Someone who has an allergic reaction to an environmental factor such as a particular pollen may move to a different part of the country and the allergies cease — but only temporarily, Pollock said. Within a few years an individual will develop allergies due to other culprits, he said.

"You can't run away from your allergies," Pollock said.

In addition, some allergens can't be escaped.

"Talking about something like dust, dust is everywhere," he said.

OILMAN: Williamson readies for 'Texas style' political battle was a "C" student.

Though she vows to win the job back, Guerrero resigned her post Thursday, less than two weeks after newspapers first reported the discrepancy.

Williamson knows the battle leading to the Nov. 3 general election will get nastier.

"I anticipate her getting in the gutter quickly," Williamson said Friday at his small, disheveled Dallas campaign office. "I'm sure they're going to be attacking and attacking, but you should keep your allegations based on the facts. We have. She hasn't."

Williamson says he'll fight right back against charges that he is too closely connected to the oil and gas industry and has benefited from his father-in-law's friendship with President Bush.

The slick, gray-haired 35-year-old says he's no stranger to hard work. He grew up in rural Snow Lake, Ark., about a mile from the Mississippi River in eastern Arkansas, where his family farmed cotton, wheat and soybeans.

"It was tough," Williamson said. "My daddy used to say we worked from can to can't, from daylight to dark-30. That was true."

After high school, Williamson attended Arkansas State University in Jonesboro for two years before finishing his bachelor's degree in political science at the University of Arkansas. He stayed there for law school, where he is fond of saying he "set the curve" in a course on oil and gas law.

It was during law school that he met Holly Holt, who would become his wife after graduation in 1982.

They moved to Midland, Holly's hometown, where Williamson worked as an oil and gas attorney at Turpin, Smith, Dyer and Saxe.

■ Related story/3D; Editorial/8B

In 1985, just before the bust that toppled oil empires across the state, he decided to start and run Barry A. Williamson Oil Properties by himself, without even being able to afford a secretary.

"A lot of people said 'Barry, look at you. You got in the business when it's going down,' " he said. "I said, 'No.' My view of the world is I'm on the bottom and now everybody's down here with me. Now we can all compete going up."

Williamson also was easing into politics, volunteering for the Reagan-Bush ticket in 1984. He spent the next three years climbing up the GOP ladder, eventually serving as the state co-chairman for Bush's campaign in 1987.

A year later President Reagan named him director of the Energy Department's Office of Policy, Planning and Analysis.

President Bush in 1989 named him director of the Interior Department's Minerals Management Service, where he managed oil drilling on the 1.4 billion-acre outer continental shelf.

Detractors say the federal appointments had more to do with Williamson's connections than his expertise. His father-in-law, Bobby Holt, is one of the most powerful oilmen in Texas and Bush's national campaign finance chairman.

But Williamson says he knows of no influence wielded on his behalf by Holt.

"I don't know exactly how it helped or how it hurt," he said. "I didn't tell him. I didn't want him to know. I wanted to cut my own deal."

De Klerk, Mandela announce 'progress' in resolving crisis

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — President F.W. de Klerk and ANC leader Nelson Mandela on Saturday announced progress toward resolving the country's political crisis and curbing violence, but said they had not removed all obstacles to resuming full-scale constitutional talks.

The two leaders, meeting for the first time in three months, said they expected that negotiations on a multiracial government to replace white minority rule would resume in the near future. But no date was set.

The ANC suspended the talks in June over chronic fighting in black townships. More than 8,000 people have died in township disturbances since de Klerk took power in 1989.

Natal, which also includes the KwaZulu homeland, has been the scene of frequent clashes between supporters of the African National Congress and the rival Zulu-dominated Inkatha Freedom Party.

Inkatha and the ANC have accused each other of planning attacks today at an annual Zulu festival at KwaMashu, near Durban, Natal.

The South African army chief, Lt. Gen. Georg Meiring, said Friday that ANC fighters had entered KwaMashu and would dress as South African police officers in a bid to blame the expected violence on government forces.

The ANC on Saturday denied the allegation as "outrageous propaganda."

An ANC march in the Ciskei homeland earlier this month left 28 protesters dead and almost 200 wounded when homeland soldiers opened fire on demonstrators.

On Saturday, de Klerk said his eight hours of talks with Mandela would "take us forward to resumption of negotiations" in the near future.

Mandela agreed that considerable progress had been made, especially on ending political violence, but stressed there was still no agreement on significant issues.

"There is obviously much work still to be done," he said.

While both sides hoped for a breakthrough, they acknowledged Saturday that the differences were too great to be resolved in a single day of talks. The ANC broke off regular talks with the government in June to protest violence in the townships it blamed on the government and Inkatha.

Before the talks collapsed, the two sides were close to an agreement on establishing a multiparty interim government that would include blacks in the national leadership for the first time.

De Klerk intends to maintain control during a transition to full democracy. He also wants to prevent domination by the black majority under a new constitution.

The ANC contends that he is seeking a white minority veto in a future government in order to block social changes needed to redress inequities created by apartheid.

The Mandela-de Klerk summit was announced Friday after the government said it would free 150 political prisoners and consider the release of other detainees.

The government agreed in 1990 to release political prisoners and has freed more than 1,000 since then. But the ANC has said more than 400 remained jailed.

Until Friday, de Klerk's government had said the others did not qualify as political prisoners because they committed violent acts, including murder.

"All South Africans want us to succeed," de Klerk said before the talks resumed. "Our country needs us to succeed today."

De Klerk and Mandela both said it was important for South Africa to move quickly toward multiracial rule.

"I hope that when next we meet, we will be able to agree on dates for elections for a constituent assembly and the installation of an interim government," Mandela said.

De Klerk said he would urge other white political parties to join in negotiations. Both right-wing and left-wing groups have boycotted previous talks.

Japan funds reforesting

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Japan, the world's leading importer of rainforest lumber, has signaled resolve to fight Latin American deforestation by funding a huge tree-planting project in Mexico to combat smog and ecological damage.

Only two years ago during global Earth Day celebrations, the Japan Tropical Forest Action Network held a "rock for the rain forest" concert to publicize Japan's position as the top importer from the rain forest.

But on Friday, Japan signed an agreement here extending $84 million in credits to Mexico to plant 100 million trees in the central countryside, and in the volcano-rimmed valley trapping Mexico City's smoggy sprawl of 81 million.

It all stemmed from a Rio Earth Summit pledge by Japan to help reverse the deforestation that has wiped out as 70 percent of many Mexican forest tracts and huge reserves elsewhere in Latin America.

"The stage is set: we WILL plant 100 million trees across our republic within the next two years. We are embarking on an undertaking without precedent," said President Carlos Salinas de Gortari in a statement.

Friday's signing was billed as a novel experiment by an industrialized nation helping a developing nation to give back the trees responsible for cleansing the air of pollutants and giving back oxygen.

And the credit-signing ceremony was given top billing at the National Palace, with Japanese Finance Minister Tsutomu Hata in attendance — even if Salinas could not attend because of a domestic trip elsewhere.

Mexico's hardwood and tropical forests in no way rival the scope of Brazil's Amazon. But the post-Earth Summit initiative is seen as a potentially fruitful harbinger of better cooperation between nations on ecological problems of a global scale.

This assistance is "a sign of Japan's commitment" to helping nations like ours in "avoiding conflicts between economic development and environmental protection," said Mexican Finance Minister Pedro Aspe.

The international community signaled its support for the Japanese government credits by helping to expedite the financing through assistance of the World Bank and Inter American Development Bank.

The dwindling of forests by urban sprawl, ranching and lumbering has caused severe erosion, threatened thousands of endangered plant and animal species and helped make Mexico City's smog perhaps the world's worst.

Environmentalists even fear lumbering will soon obliterate the nesting grounds of Monarch butterflies that fly by the millions each winter from Canada to the forests of Michoacan, 150 miles west of Mexico City.

Meanwhile, ranching and lumbering in the Yucatan rain forests of Chiapas are imperiling the homes of thousands of endangered species including jaguars, tapirs, ocelots, macaws and spider monkeys.

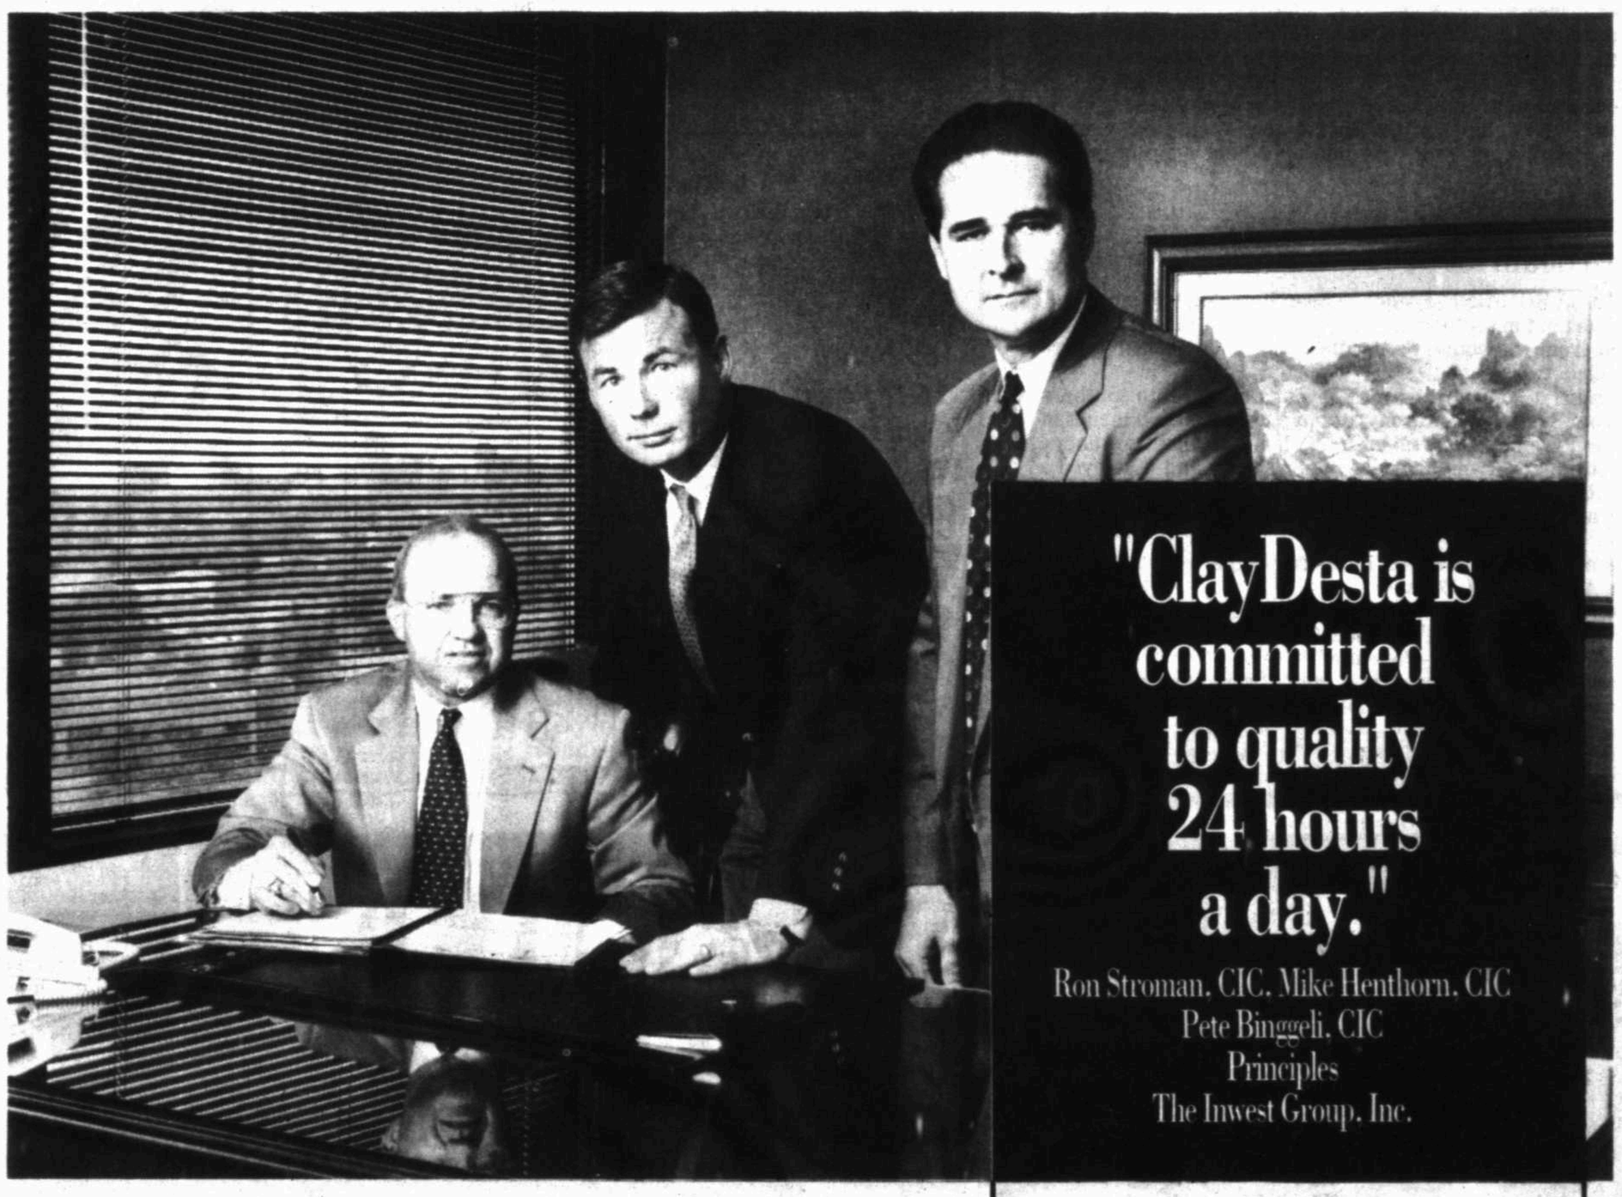

"We estimate that the rain forest has shrunk by 70 percent in the last 30 years, mostly due to logging and clearing for farming," environmentalist and Mexican author Homero Aridjis said recently.

The tree planting is to take place in the state of Michoacan, the state of Mexico surrounding the capital and in and around the capital's federal district proper.

The favorable financing by Japan's government is expected to lead to planting of more than 135,000 trees on the outskirts of Mexico City in the next seven months alone — including eucalyptus, pine and ash.

It is yet another step in Salinas' ambitious bid not only to lift his nation into the ranks of the developed world economically, but also raise its environmental standards like other richer nations.

■ Attackers kill ten in black township in Natal

DURBAN, South Africa — Unidentified attackers killed 10 people Saturday in a black township in southeastern Natal Province, the government-run South African Broadcasting Corp. reported.

It said 15 huts and two motor vehicles were destroyed in the attack by about 30 armed people in Gengeshe, 50 miles west of the coastal city of Durban.

The violence came on the eve of a Zulu celebration in the nearby KwaZulu black homeland that in the past has been followed by fighting between supporters of rival black groups.

Natal, which includes the KwaZulu homeland, has been the scene of frequent clashes between supporters of the African National Congress and the rival Zulu-dominated Inkatha Freedom Party, a conservative group.

A power struggle between the groups has been blamed for political violence that has killed thousands of blacks since the mid-1980s and stymied talks with the white-led government on reform.

■ German bus crashes into locomotive, kills 16

BUDAPEST, Hungary — A locomotive plowed into a German tourist van southwest of Budapest on Saturday, killing 16 people and injuring three, police said.

The crash occurred shortly before 5:00 p.m. in Agard, a small town about 60 miles southwest of the Hungarian capital.

The van driver, one of the injured, said the setting sun obscured a red flashing light indicating the locomotive was coming, according to Police Lt. Janos Szanyi. Szanyi told Hungarian television the crossing had no barrier.

The locomotive driver, whose name was not given, said on Hungarian radio he applied the brakes after seeing the vehicle. But the locomotive, moving at 60 miles per hour and not pulling train cars, couldn't stop in time.

■ Flood death toll rises to 38; new storm kills 2

VAISON-LA-ROMAINE, France — Searchers dug two more bodies from the mud in southern France on Saturday, raising to 38 the death toll from the country's deadliest floods on record as new storms killed two people.

Heavy rains accompanied by high winds moved into southern France from Spain late Saturday, dumping more than 6 inches of rain on the Pyrenees department of Aude in less than two hours.

Water surged over the banks of the Sals river and destroyed a house in Rennes-Les-Bains, about 30 miles north of Carcassonne, killing two women and leaving another person missing, officials said.

Emergency accommodations for 1,500 people were being prepared in Avignon and Orange.

Officials feared that heavy rainfall forecast for today would not be absorbed by the region's drenched terrain and might trigger new flooding in northern Vaucluse.

The national weather service said rainfall could exceed 6 inches in some areas and warned of violent winds of up to 60 mph.

Challenger promises capitalism if elected

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Opposition candidate Emil Constantinescu said Saturday that if elected president today he would sweep away Communist holdovers in government and support a referendum on restoring monarchy.

"Romania will be capitalist," he pledged in an interview with The Associated Press at his campaign headquarters. "There is no middle course."

Constantinescu, 53, leads incumbent Ion Iliescu in some pre-election polls. But with four other candidates also running, the two will likely be forced into an Oct. 11 runoff.

Constantinescu's Democratic Convention, an alliance of 17 anti-Communist parties, is likely to get a majority of the vote for the 471-seat parliament.

Romanians are hoping the second general election since the bloody Dec. 1989 revolution will win their country respect as an established democracy.

The first campaign was marred by demonstrations, charges of intimidation and accusations by the opposition that the victorious National Salvation front was a front for crypto-Communists.

Constantinescu — a geology professor and university dean — had harsh words for Iliescu, the one-time Communist minister who came to power during the revolution and was overwhelmingly elected president five months later.

Constantinescu said "there's not much difference" between Iliescu and Nicolae Ceausescu, the Communist dictator toppled and executed during the uprising.

Iliescu, who now claims to be a social democrat, "cannot exceed the limitations of his Communist thinking," Constantinescu said.

He suggested that the governments since the revolution have been corrupt and that some officials could be prosecuted.

"These governments lacked openness," he said. "They published no data, not even the budgets."

The government also "blocked access to the ... truth about the revolution" and other violent episodes of recent years, such as rioting by pro-Iliescu miners in Bucharest.

More than 1,000 Romanians were killed during the riots in the days after Ceausescu's fall, and critics say the government is covering up involvement by some of its members. The government has denied that accusation.

If elected, Constantinescu said, his government's first act would be to "expose the truth."

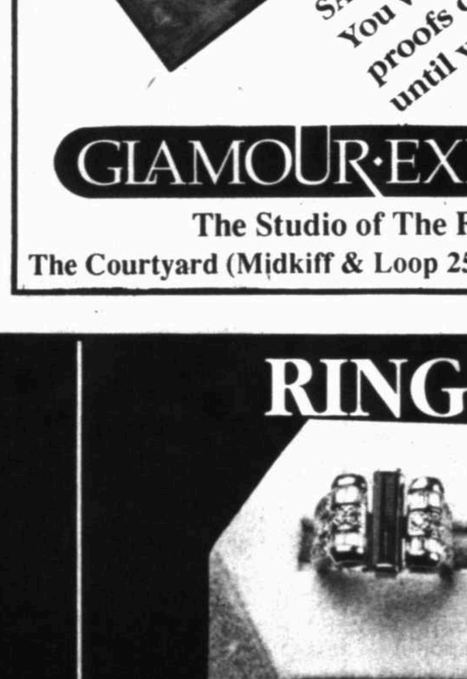

He also wants to overhaul the state bureaucracy, which he said remains in the hands of Communist holdovers.

Feud flares between Arafat, Abu Nidal

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The long and bloody feud between PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat and his archenemy, terrorist mastermind Abu Nidal, has flared again.

Abu Nidal is trying to torpedo the Arab-Israeli peace talks, and 10 Palestinian officials have been killed and two critically wounded in Lebanon and Europe in a spate of reprisal attacks by the rival factions.

The Palestine Liberation Organization has also sentenced to death three Abu Nidal men convicted by a guerrilla court for slaying Arafat loyalists.

The spiraling violence has driven underground the top officials of Arafat's mainstream Fatah, the largest PLO faction, and Abu Nidal's Fatah-Revolutionary Council. Many have abandoned their offices in Beirut and the south. Others have gone abroad.

Neither side is willing to talk about the bloodletting. However, Fatah has accused Abu Nidal's group of "seeking to plunge the Palestinians into a horrid bloodbath ... and launching a suspicious campaign ... prepared by regional and international parties with the aim of undermining Palestinian capacities."

The latest spate of killings began June 8, when Atef Bseiso, the PLO's intelligence chief, was shot dead outside a Paris hotel. Among the other fatalities: Col. Anwar Madi, Fatah's militia commander in south Lebanon, killed June 30, and Walid Khaled, Abu Nidal's top aide and official spokesman in Lebanon, gunned down in Beirut July 23.

Arafat's guerrillas cracked down on Abu Nidal's activists in south Lebanon Sept. 9. About 75 people were killed and 200 wounded in the three-day confrontation.

The bloodshed, and the threat of intensified opposition from the radicals, has added to the PLO's woes caused by its backing for Saddam Hussein and political isolation.

The PLO's main bankrollers — Saudi Arabia and the other Gulf Arab states — cut off funding to Arafat in 1990.

Arafat said last week that much of the funding is now being channeled to Abu Nidal and other extremists.

A well-informed official from a PLO faction that is neutral in the feuding said the violence is linked to the U.S.-sponsored peace talks. The official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Arafat seemed willing to offer concessions that are unacceptable to many Palestinians, and that Abu Nidal was trying to undermine that.

The Palestinians are talking with Israeli about possible self-rule in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip. But radicals inside and outside the PLO, including Fatah-RC, oppose that.

The PLO shows no sign of deviating from its current policy, even though it is physically excluded from the talks and has to deal through Palestinians from the occupied territories.

Limited autonomy is far short of the independent Palestinian homeland the PLO demands and does not allow for the return of the 3.5 million-strong Palestinian diaspora.

The hardliners want the dismantling of Israel and the return of all pre-1948 Palestine.

Myanmar to lift martial law decrees

BANGKOK, Thailand (NYT) — The government of Myanmar, formerly Burma, announced on Saturday that it would lift the last of the martial law decrees it imposed in 1989 to crush a nascent democracy movement.

Diplomats described the action as primarily cosmetic and unlikely to satisfy critics of the government, although they acknowledged that it could result in a small improvement in the human rights situation in Myanmar.

The move, which was announced on state radio, is the most recent in a series of changes that are apparently part of a strategy pursued by the military government to end its status as an international pariah.

Since last spring, the government has released hundreds of political prisoners and allowed family visits to the nation's most famous dissident, Daw Aung San Suu Kyi, the Nobel Peace Prize laureate who has been under house arrest since July 1989.

Even with the announcement on Saturday, there is no doubt among diplomats that the military intends to continue holding onto power in Myanmar for years to come.

Still, the state radio said that Saturday's decree would end the judicial powers of military commanders, and that civilians would no longer be tried by military tribunals, known in Myanmar for dispensing quick justice.

"It may be a cosmetic change, but it's useful cosmetics," an Asian diplomat said of the announcement. "For a civilian accused of a crime, it's almost certainly better to have at least the facade of a civilian trial. The civilian system has at least a little due process built into it."

In September 1988, soldiers killed hundreds of democracy demonstrators on the streets of Yangon, the Burmese capital formerly named Rangoon. That same month a military administration was established under a junta calling itself the State Law and Order Restoration Council.

The junta lifted martial law in some areas of Myanmar before Saturday's announcement. Under the new decree, diplomats said, martial law will now be ended in the military districts that include Yangon and Mandalay, Myanmar's second-largest city. The two cities had been strongholds of the democracy movement, which has been all but silenced in the past four years.

Last April, the government began releasing political prisoners, including associates and friends of Mrs. Aung San Suu Kyi, and since then more than 500 people have gone free, including U Nu, Myanmar's last democratically elected prime minister. Universities, closed for most of the last four years, are being reopened this fall.

Vance-Owen mission tightens focus on 'ethnic cleansing'

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Peace envoys Cyrus Vance and Lord Owen said Saturday they had clear evidence that Muslims had been forced from their homes by Serbs and attacked as they fled.

Owen said he and Vance heard witness accounts of "systematic shelling" of 3,000 to 4,000 Muslim refugees who were driven from the northern Bosnian town of Banja Luka after being stripped of money and possessions.

"There were casualties, and some people lost their lives. There is no question that this sort of thing cannot be allowed to go on," said Owen, a European Community envoy. He did not give a specific casualty figure.

Owen said he and Vance, a U.N. envoy, would look into using U.N. troops to protect refugee convoys. The two chair peace talks in Geneva on former Yugoslavia.

Their hurried trip to Banja Luka on Friday came amid new reports of atrocities and U.N. moves toward possible war crimes trials. The U.N. Human Rights Commission decided last month to begin gathering evidence for potential prosecutions, and the U.N. Security Council is working on a resolution that could lead to such trials.

The international community has been shocked by reports of so-called "ethnic cleansing," the practice of forcing one ethnic group from an area to strengthen another group's claims to it.

All sides in Bosnia's civil war are accused of the practice, but foreign officials put most of the blame on Serbs, who have captured two-thirds of the republic since its Muslim-Croat majority voted for independence from Serb-dominated Yugoslavia on Feb. 29.

At least 10,000 have died in the fighting.

In Sarajevo, the Health Ministry said the casualty toll in the past 24 hours was 54 killed and 285 wounded in Bosnia, including 21 killed and 104 wounded in the capital.

The Belgrade-based Tanjug news agency, quoting Serbian sources, said Croatian troops had killed an unspecified number of Serb civilians in a three-day attack on Milici, 35 miles northeast of Sarajevo. Eight Serb fighters and scores of Croat attackers were killed, according to Tanjug.

The Bosnian military information office said two jets attacked two factories in Vitez, a Croat-held town about 40 miles northwest of Sarajevo. Sarajevo radio reported that a dynamite factory was damaged in the attack, and that residents were told to stay in their homes because of a possible leak of poison gas.

Only about 20 percent of Sarajevo has electricity, and U.N. officials said it was impossible to repair a damaged transformer because fighters ignore ceasefires called to permit repair crews to work.

U.N. peacekeepers said fighting in Stup, a western Sarajevo suburb near the airport, prevented the evacuation of three of seven U.N. soldiers who were wounded Thursday when their armored car hit a mine.

Owen and Vance spoke to reporters in Zagreb, the Croatian capital, on Saturday before leaving for Geneva. On Friday Vance, a former U.S. secretary of state, said Serb leaders denied pressuring people to leave, but added, "We've not been fooled."

Owen said clergy of three faiths in Banja Luka — Muslim, Roman Catholic and Eastern Orthodox — had confirmed that convoys of people had been removed from Serb-held areas.

"Yesterday in Banja Luka we were given clear evidence of ethnic cleansing in Bosanski Petrovac and Kljuc," he said, naming two towns about 25 miles west of Banja Luka. He noted that 16 Serbs had been killed in Bosanski Petrovac, "which undoubtedly ignited the atmosphere."

Report: France, Germany to move ahead with union

BONN, Germany (AP) — Germany and France have agreed to move ahead on forming a common monetary policy and a joint central bank even if other European Community nations do not, a newsmagazine said Saturday.

A government spokeswoman called the report in Der Spiegel magazine a "fabrication."

The report, which said plans for the Franco-German monetary union had been worked out in detail, comes amid growing signs that Germany and France are leading a drive for a "two-speed" European integration.

The Bonn newspaper Die Welt said earlier this week that Chancellor Helmut Kohl and President Francois Mitterrand agreed at a meeting in Paris last week on rapid integration with the Netherlands, Belgium and Luxembourg. Reluctant partners such as Denmark and Britain would integrate more slowly.

That report was also denied by the Bonn government.

Spiegel said the deal had been worked out by Kohl and Mitterrand and that the two leaders were determined to go ahead even without the other 10 EC partners.

The magazine said the German mark and French franc would be firmly linked through a fixed exchange rate and that monetary policy would be set by an independent central bank, based in Frankfurt and chaired by a Frenchman.

Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg would be welcome, as well as Austria and Switzerland, which are not members of the EC, Spiegel said.

On Friday German lawmakers began debating the Maastricht treaty on European union. In a speech to Parliament, Kohl said he would push for the treaty to be ratified by Jan. 1, as set out in the accord.

Doubts about the future of the treaty rose after Danish voters rejected it in June and French voters approved it last Sunday by only a slim margin.

Workers protest reduced pensions

ROME (AP) — More than 150,000 retirees and aging workers from across Italy poured into the capital Saturday to protest a government plan to reduce pensions and raise retirement ages in order to cut a staggering budget deficit.

The peaceful demonstration was part of a series of protests in the past week in reaction to the plan.

About 2,000 buses and four special trains brought protesters to Rome, and three marches converged on San Giovanni Square — the city's traditional leftist protest site — for speeches by union leaders.

"If it will be necessary, we will resort to one or two general strikes until we bend the resistance of our adversaries," Bruno Trentin, leader of the CGIL labor confederation, told the crowd.

In an interview on state-run television RAI-2, Socialist Prime Minister Giuliano Amato said he understood the pensioners' pain. He said his government would "adapt their pensions to the cost of living" but would not weaken the emergency package.

The cuts in benefits are part of the government's emergency program to slash $76 billion from the country's deficit, predicted to hit $150 billion this year. The plan, yet to be submitted to Parliament, includes tax increases and cuts in health care.

The austerity plan would block early retirements in 1993, abolish November's indexation of state pensions to inflation and raise the mandatory retirement age for public workers to 62. The age now is 55 for women and 60 for men.

The deficit and financial crisis are largely due to government spending aimed at keeping the favor of voters, including large sums devoted to pensions and liberal health care benefits.

Attorney: Kevorkian assists in suicide of 52-year-old woman

■ Suicide machine inventor has assisted in five suicides.

Associated Press

SOUTHFIELD, Mich. — Suicide machine inventor Dr. Jack Kevorkian assisted in the suicide Saturday of a 52-year-old woman who had terminal lung cancer, Kevorkian's attorney said.

Lois F. Hawes, of Warren, died at about 10:45 a.m., after placing a mask over her face and turning on a canister of carbon monoxide, attorney Geoffrey Fieger said at a news conference in his Southfield office. Hawes' last words were, "Please give me the gas," Fieger said.

Hawes' death was Kevorkian's fifth assisted suicide and came 10 days after Kevorkian vowed to the Michigan State Medical Society to continue assisted suicides. His comments came after the society rejected his request for immediate help in handling his patients.

His medical license was suspended in November 1991, after he helped a Portland, Ore. woman kill herself.

Kevorkian, 63, of the Detroit suburb of Royal Oak, was not present at the news conference Saturday, and Fieger said he would not be making a statement.

Kevorkian has been charged with murder in three of the four assisted suicides, but the charges were later dropped because Michigan has no law against assisted suicide.

Oakland County Circuit Judge David Breck, in throwing out murder charges in two October 1991 deaths, this summer urged Kevorkian to refrain from helping anyone else die until he solicited the help of the medical society in resolving the issue.

In June 1990, Kevorkian helped Janet Adkins of Portland, Ore., kill herself. He was present when Marjorie Wantz, 58, of Sodus and Sherry Miller, 43, of Roseville ended their lives in October 1991. Wantz suffered from chronic pelvic pain. Miller had multiple sclerosis.

Kevorkian was also at the side of multiple sclerosis patient Susan Williams, 54, when she killed herself May 15 at her home in Clawson. Fieger has said Kevorkian provided the carbon monoxide she inhaled.

Fieger said he did not expect any charges to be filed against Kevorkian in the latest case.

Oakland County Prosecutor Richard Thompson was not at his home Saturday evening and did not immediately return a phone call seeking comment. There was no answer at his office.

Fieger described police who arrived at the scene as "extremely polite and compassionate." Waterford Township police had no comment on the case.

Kevorkian decided to assist in the suicide after studying Hawes' medical records and a report by an oncologist, Fieger said. Hawes also met Friday with a psychiatrist who told Kevorkian that "mental competence was not a problem," Fieger said.

Hawes contacted Kevorkian about two weeks ago, Fieger said. Her cancer had spread to her brain and she had been given only three months to live when she was diagnosed in April, he said.

Two of Hawes' sons, two sisters and a niece also were present at the suicide, which Fieger said was committed at the Waterford Township home of Neal Nicol. Fieger described Nicol as a supporter of Kevorkian. A message left at Nicol's home Saturday was not immediately returned.

A third son had suffered brain injury in a traffic accident and was not present at the suicide, Fieger said. Hawes' daughter also was not present, but Fieger did not say where she was. Hawes' is divorced, and her ex-husband was not present, Fieger said.

U.S. to supply helicopters to Israel to help maintain 'military edge'

ARLINGTON, Ohio (AP) — The Bush administration said Saturday it will send an unspecified number of Apache and Blackhawk helicopters to Israel as part of the United States' commitment to maintain Israel's "qualitative military edge."

The White House also said a certain amount of American-owned defense equipment will be located in Israel as part of an agreement reached between President Bush and Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

Congress granted authority two years ago for the administration to "draw down" as much as $700 million in equipment from active duty stock for transfer to Israel, said Judy Smith, deputy White House press secretary.

The announcement was made as Bush campaigned by train in Ohio.

In Jerusalem, Oded Ben-Ami, an advisor to Rabin, said details of the agreement were initially discussed between Rabin and Bush in the United States last month and were finalized through diplomatic channels Friday.

Smith said the fiscal 1991 authorization also covered the pre-positioning of up to $300 million U.S. owned equipment In Israel.

"Most of the equipment will be delivered within the next week," she said.

F-15 jet fighters were transferred to Israel earlier this year and more than $100 million in supplies have been placed there.

Two weeks ago, in a campaign stop in St. Louis where the F-15 is made by the McDonnell Douglas Corp., the president announced that he supported the sale of 72 F-15 fighters to Saudi Arabia, promising at the same time that Israel would not suffer militarily by the action.

Saturday's announcement apparently was part of that promise.

"These initiatives represent a significant effort in reaffirming the United States long standing commitment to a strategic partnership with Israel," the White House said.

Mars mission heralds more U.S.-Russian cooperation

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The launch of the first American spacecraft sent to Mars in 17 years heralds an era of unprecedented U.S.-Russian cooperation in space.

Eleven Russians belong to the spacecraft's science team, and the orbiter may help relay pictures and data from Russian probes scheduled to land on Mars in 1995 and 1997, said scientist Arden Albee.

"Each side thinks it can continue Mars exploration by cooperating in a time of declining resources," he said. "The climate is such that they can't continue if they have to do it all themselves."

The 5,700-pound Mars Observer was 243,000 miles from Earth on Saturday, the second day of its 11-month, $980 million voyage to the Red Planet. It was launched Friday from Cape Canaveral, Fla., but the mission now is controlled from NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory, where Albee is the project's chief scientist.

"The spacecraft is healthy and is cruising on its way to Mars," lab spokeswoman Mary Hardin said. Its armlike antenna boom was properly extended after some initial balkiness, she said.

Once the $511 million spacecraft goes into orbit around Mars, it will map the planet's geology and climate. It's carrying a French-Russian radio designed to relay data from landing craft, robot rover vehicles and an experiment-laden balloon that are to be deployed by twin Russian Mars orbiters.

Russia plans to launch the orbiters in October 1994 and November 1996, said the Pasadena-based Planetary Society, an international space exploration advocacy group and partner in the Russian mission. The orbiters would reach Mars in September 1995 and October 1997.

Mars Observer would greatly increase the amount of data relayed to Earth by the Russian surface armada because it will fly over the landing craft more frequently than will the Russian orbiters.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration is considering providing money for the 1994 Russian mission in exchange for getting an engineering model of a Russian rover, which NASA would study as it develops its own robotic exploration vehicles, Albee said.

He said the two nations agreed to share data from the Mars Observer and the later Mars missions.

"This is the closest collaboration that we've ever had with the Russians on interplanetary exploration," said analyst John Pike of the Federation of American Scientists.

American scientists are participating in the later Mars missions, said Bruce Murray, the Planetary Society's vice president and former director of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

With Soviet Union's collapse, President Bush signed a space cooperation agreement with Russian President Boris Yeltsin in June, long after cooperation began on Mars Observer and, to a lesser extent, other missions.

Bush and Yeltsin agreed a cosmonaut will fly on a 1993 U.S. space shuttle flight, NASA will put an astronaut on the Russian Mir space station, and a shuttle and Mir will dock in 1994 or 1995.

NASA, Lockheed and Russian space companies also are working together on plans to use Soyuz-TM spacecraft as an emergency escape vehicle for U.S. space station crews.

Kennedy bio alleges drug use, sparks credibility war

WASHINGTON (AP) — A book by former administrative assistant Richard E. Burke describes Sen. Edward Kennedy as a cocaine user in the 1970s who once snorted the drug with two of his children. A spokesman for Kennedy flatly denied the allegations.

Burke writes in "The Senator: My Ten Years With Ted Kennedy," that cocaine helped the senator "keep on top of an ever-demanding social life." Burke said he himself used cocaine and that Kennedy "never tried to hide his usage from me. Far from it."

Kennedy in a statement Saturday called the book, "a collection of bizarre and untrue stories. It is an outrageous example of say-anything, sell-anything, publish anything for a buck."

"Senator Kennedy has never done illegal drugs," said Kennedy spokesman Paul Donovan, who called the book "a work of fiction."

The senator's personal attorney issued a dossier detailing the bizarre 1981 hoax in which Burke admitted concocting an alleged assault and death threats aimed at himself. The episode cost Burke his job on the Kennedy staff and led to his conviction for illegal possession of a pistol. A year ago, Burke filed a petition for personal bankruptcy in New York and identified 47 creditors to whom he owed $3.3 million.

"I must own up to this. But I am not the only one who must own up," writes Burke, whose book focuses on Kennedy's personal life.

Burke depicts Kennedy as an avid partygoer, womanizer and cocaine user. Most of the examples of cocaine use are secondhand stories told to Burke by people given aliases in the book. But in one instance, Burke describes snorting cocaine with Kennedy and two women at the senator's home.

Burke describes how the four used a rolled up $100 bill and took turns inhaling cocaine, and then tried to keep the noise down so as not to wake Kennedy's children sleeping in nearby rooms.

"One way he kept his energy up was, increasingly, through cocaine," Burke wrote. "My own intake had accelerated parallel to his, though I tried to limit it to weekends.

"The Senator never tried to hide his usage from me. Far from it. Time and time again he'd ask" a girlfriend to get in touch with "Richard the bartender, or, if Richard didn't have any, my own connection."

Another girlfriend and composite character, Cindy Marks, provides perhaps the most damaging allegation: that Kennedy snorted cocaine with his daughter, Kara and son Teddy.

Burke writes that when a friend of Kara Kennedy's brought cocaine to the senator's McLean home, Kennedy decided — on prompting from Cindy, the composite character — to confront Kara and son Teddy.

Burke quoted Marks as saying that instead of confronting them, "he ended up doing some lines of coke with them."

Burke writes that "I sat there" listening to Cindy's story, "thinking he had finally gone off into 'The Twilight Zone.'"

Kara Kennedy Allen and Teddy Kennedy, in a statement released through their father's Senate office, said Burke's allegations are untrue.

"Although we have not read Rick Burke's book, we have heard his accusation that we used cocaine with our father. That is a lie. We have never used any illegal drug with our father.

"It seems this book is full of many similar fabrications, distortions and lies. We are not going to comment any further on this kind of garbage."

New York City to sell co-op apartments to working poor

By Maria Newman
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — The New York City Housing Authority will begin selling 730 cooperative apartments next month to the working poor in the most ambitious effort by a city using federal money earmarked for permanent housing.

The effort puts New York City ahead of other cities around the country that have applied for the funds, federal officials said.

New York City's program, based on one that has become the cornerstone of the Bush administration's housing policy, would allow current and future public housing residents to buy one-, two-or three-bedroom co-ops in 38 buildings in seven developments in the South Bronx and Manhattan. The program is structured to allow the authority to take advantage of the federal home ownership program without decreasing its housing stock or building new apartments.

The city program uses money from a Bush administration program intended to encourage the sale of existing public housing projects or new apartments to public housing residents, who, the theory goes, would become empowered by home ownership and would be more likely to take better care of their surroundings.

Though the administration's idea is being considered by housing authorities from Miami to Los Angeles, federal housing officials say that New York City is where the most ambitious program is under way.

Instead of selling existing projects to tenants, the New York City Housing Authority has purchased several vacant buildings for the program. Four thousand families have already applied for the apartments, with all of the applicants from public housing projects or from the authority's waiting list of more than 200,000 families.

"With home ownership, we want folks to understand that their fate is in their hands," said Sally Hernandez-Pinero, executive director of the Housing Authority, the largest in the country. "The response has been phenomenal, more than we expected."

The plan has met with praise from many housing advocates, who view it as a long overdue effort to provide permanent housing for the poor.

"This is a creative way of the city and the housing authority working together and meeting a need by tinkering with a federal program," said Joseph B. Rose, executive director of the Citizens Housing and Planning Council, a non-profit group.

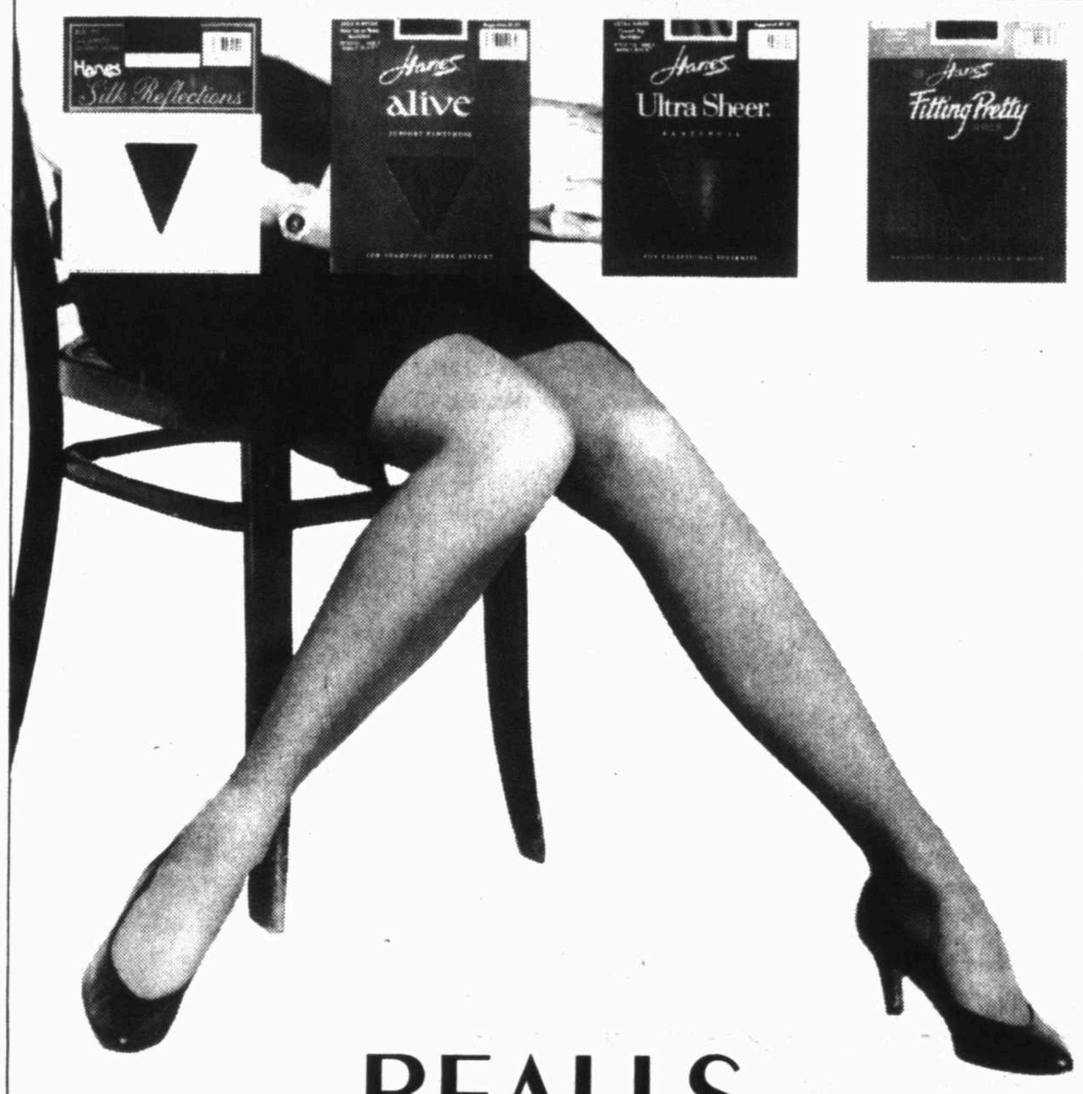

The administration's idea of selling public housing projects to tenants evolved from a pilot program conducted in the late 1970s and early 1980s, when 18 cities across the country experimented with home ownership among public housing residents. Some of those programs were very successful, while others, like the one in Miami, failed after several years, mainly because of problems with financing and poor management.

■ GM, UAW plan to resume strike talks today

LANSING, Mich. — General Motors Corp. and the United Auto Workers returned to the bargaining table Saturday in an effort to end a day-old strike that halted production of the auto giant's second-best-selling car.

Talks adjourned Saturday afternoon and are scheduled to resume at 1 p.m. today, GM spokeswoman Linda Cook said. She would not comment on the progress of the negotiations.

A secretary at the union's offices said everyone authorized to comment had left for the day.

About 4,200 members of UAW Local 602 walked off the job Friday at the Lansing body plant that makes the outer body of the Pontiac Grand Am.

The strike over unsolved local grievances quickly forced the shutdown of the nearby Lansing chassis plant where the Grand Am and the slower-selling Oldsmobile Achieva and Buick Skylark are assembled, idling another 3,000 other workers.

■ Relief concert features Estefan, tent city hookup

MIAMI — Singer Gloria Estefan headlined an all-star hurricane benefit Saturday that was carried by satellite from a sold-out stadium to more than 3,000 people in tents left homeless by Hurricane Andrew.

Paul Simon, Whoopi Goldberg, Andy Garcia and the veteran folk-rock group Crosby, Stills & Nash were among the performers scheduled for the fund-raising concert, which already has netted more than $1 million from ticket sales.

The all-star lineup included Jimmy Buffett, Ziggy Marley, Bobcat Goldthwait, Sinbad, Clarence Clemons, Weird Al Yankovic and a host of salsa and mambo stars including Celia Cruz, Ruben Blades and Tito Puente.

Elaborate satellite links between Miami's Joe Robbie Stadium and tent cities 30 miles south in Homestead enabled the performers and hurricane victims to see and talk to one another.

Up to 8,000 military personnel were expected to watch the concert from Homestead as well.

All 54,000 tickets for the stadium show — priced at $10, $25 and $100 — sold out in advance.

■ Danielle dies; forecasters keep eye on hurricanes

MIAMI — Tropical Storm Danielle died Saturday after soaking the mid-Atlantic states, and forecasters shifted their attention to Hurricane Charley heading for the Azores and another storm deep in the north Atlantic.

Danielle came ashore late Friday over Maryland's eastern shore, dumped 2 inches of rain in six hours at Salisbury, Md., and weakened Saturday into showers over Pennsylvania.

Danielle washed out miles of man-made beach along the New Jersey shore, but otherwise left little damage in its wake.

Meanwhile, Charley churned with 75 mph winds on a track that was expected to take it close to the Azores today, said Lixion Avila at the National Hurricane Center in suburban Coral Gables.

Forecasters were also watching Tropical Storm Bonnie, which was moving east at 3 mph with winds near 40 mph. Some strengthening was predicted by today.

Child custody case sets precedent

By Mitchell Landsberg
Associated Press Writer

If Heather hates her homework, can she sue?

The correct answer is that the question is absurd. But that was the sort of outlandish scenario being suggested last week after a 12-year-old Florida boy went to court to "divorce" his parents.

More sober critics warned that American families might be threatened by less frivolous lawsuits filed by angry children who consider their parents abusive. But that appears to be a minority view. Although legal experts mostly agree that young Gregory Kingsley's case established an important legal precedent, few expect it to have much practical effect.

"It isn't that big a deal," insisted Sanford Katz, a Boston College law professor who specializes in children's issues.

David Liederman, executive director of the Child Welfare League of America, said he expected other children to follow Gregory's lead, but added: "Will it happen much? I don't think so."

Gregory's case was compelling on several levels. It involved a legal doctrine promoted by Hillary Clinton, bureaucratic bungling and a heart-rending story of love and abandonment. And the whole saga was played out nationally on CNN and Court TV.

The facts of the case, briefly, were these: Gregory, who has been in and out of foster care three times, asked to be adopted by his most recent foster family despite his biological mother's desire to have him back. He claimed that she abused and neglected him and should be stripped of her parental rights; she maintained that Florida social workers thwarted her efforts to stay in touch with her son, and that she's capable of being a good mother.

After a two-day hearing in Orlando, a circuit court judge on Friday came down on Gregory's side, granting his wish to be adopted by the foster family he's lived with for nearly a year.

What made the case unusual, and possibly unique, was that Gregory "hired" a lawyer on his own (she accepted the case free of charge). Usually, such cases are brought by state agencies or by adults representing a child. In this case, the lawyer was working for the child, rather than in the child's behalf.

It's a technical but significant distinction.

"That is the line that we have crossed, and it's an important line," Liederman said. Still, he said, "I don't think it's as dramatic as some would make it — because the whole field has been moving in the direction of making sure children have advocates or representatives in court."

For that change, some people ascribe credit — or blame — to the wife of Democratic presidential candidate Bill Clinton. Mrs. Clinton is former board chairwoman of the Children's Defense Fund, a Washington-based advocacy group.

Mrs. Clinton, a lawyer, wrote influential law journal articles in the 1970s about children's rights. Among other things, she argued that children, once considered chattel in America, have legal rights and sometimes may require independent legal counsel when their interests differ from those of their parents.

Her views were mildly radical at the time, but have since become standard legal doctrine in more than 100 countries, said Howard Davidson, director of the American Bar Association's Center on Children and the Law.

"I think Gregory's case points out exactly what Hillary Clinton was writing about," he said.

That is precisely the point made by conservative critics of Mrs. Clinton, such as Patrick Buchanan, who told delegates to the Republican National Convention that "Hillary believes that 12-year-olds should have a right to sue their parents."

Charmaine Crouse Yoest, a policy analyst for the conservative Family Research Council in Washington, said Gregory's case reflected the "far-left" agenda of Mrs. Clinton. It is, Mrs. Yoest said, a view that children "don't need the protection of adults — loving adults — when they're facing important life decisions."

Bush: Clinton will go after middle-class for tax hikes

MARYSVILLE, Ohio (AP) — President Bush whistlestopped through the heartland on Saturday in search of Harry Truman's old campaign magic, and charged that Bill Clinton would "go after the middle class" for tax hikes to pay for his promises.

"Bill Clinton's taxes are wrong for America," Bush said from the bunting-draped rear platform of a train dubbed "Spirit of America." "Bill Clinton's Arkansas record is wrong for America, and anyway you cut it, Bill Clinton is wrong to be president of the United States."

He said Clinton's tax and spending programs don't add up and would require him to raise taxes on everyone with taxable income of over $36,600 a year to pay for "all these promises."

Clinton, who says his program would raise taxes only on those with incomes over $200,000, reacted strongly. He said of Bush: "He has no credibility on taxes and he can't count. Everything he said is wrong."

Trailing in the polls, Bush hoped his two-day trip aboard a special 21-car train — making eight stops in Ohio and Michigan over two days — would evoke memories of Truman's come-from-behind Democratic campaign of 1948. Through suburbia, rural settings and small towns he, first lady Barbara Bush and their retinue rolled on a glorious fall day, and groups of people turned out along the way to catch a glimpse.

Some waved, some smiled, some simply watched. One held up a hand-painted sign that bespoke the president's political jeopardy. "No job," it said.

Bush made his evocative trip as Clinton was stumping in normally Republican northern New England, a manifestation of the confidence his campaign feels about the race for the White House.

In New Hampshire, where his campaign began moving again after nearly falling apart last February, Clinton said he had learned firsthand from that state's residents about Americans' economic woes.

'Bill Clinton's taxes are wrong for America. Bill Clinton's Arkansas record is wrong for America, and anyway you cut it, Bill Clinton is wrong to be president of the United States.'

—President Bush

"You formed the heart and soul and fabric of my understanding of what is happening to this country today," Clinton said in Manchester on Saturday. "The thing I got out of New Hampshire that I carry with me to the present day is the absolute conviction that the American people are ready for fundamental change."

Forced to answer new questions about his military draft record, Clinton said he had done nothing wrong and complained that home-state Republicans were suddenly remembering things for political reasons.

New published reports quoted two Republicans as saying they arranged a meeting for Clinton with the director of the Arkansas Selective Service office in 1969. He said he couldn't remember if he met with the man or sought to have an induction notice canceled by letter but was sure he followed "whatever the rules were at the time."

The two candidates sought support as Ross Perot maintained his silence about entering the race. Associates have said they expect the Texas businessman, whose name appears on all 50 state ballots, to make at least a limited campaign effort, and perhaps make an announcement when he appears on Larry King's television program Monday night.

Bush and Clinton are dispatching delegations to Dallas on Monday to meet with Perot supporters to discuss the deficit. Campaign officials said Housing Secretary Jack Kemp would join the GOP delegation. Ironically, Kemp has long said that deficits are of relatively little importance when it comes to formulating economic policy.

Polls suggested anew that Perot could not win the election. A Newsweek survey gave him 9 percent in a three-way race, while a Time Magazine-CNN poll said 13 percent if he remains inactive, 17 percent if he announces his candidacy.

Detroit strike moves toward compromise

DETROIT (NYT) — Administrators and teachers have resolved all but one of the issues that have kept the nation's seventh-largest school system on strike for 26 days. But the two-year contract that was near agreement Saturday carries bitter medicine: layoffs and budget cuts are necessary to offset a wage increase, and that is likely to fuel more anger among parents and students.

The 10,500-member Detroit Federation of Teachers and school district officials compromised Thursday on a raise of 4 percent in the first year and 3 percent in the second year, and Saturday they agreed on buying more textbooks for grades one through five.

The sticking point is class size, with the teachers demanding that classes be reduced by an average of one student every year for the next decade, from the current averages of 34 in the lower grades and 35 in grades 5 through 12. That would involve hiring 90 to 115 new teachers a year, and administrators say it would be too expensive.

Both sides said Saturday afternoon that they expected a final agreement soon and added that the city's 168,000 students could probably return to school as early as Tuesday.

But teachers and school officials have been coming under biting criticism from students and working parents, many of whom scrambled to find alternatives. "I'm mad at the teachers," said Venus McCrary, a single unemployed mother of two daughters in elementary school, whom she took with her on job interviews and to night school classes.

Oilers face Chargers, restless fans

■ Houston tries to quiet the run-and-shoot naysayers when it hosts San Diego today.

Associated Press

HOUSTON — The perception that the Houston Oilers aren't playing as well this season as they did at the start a year ago is incorrect.

At least that's how Warren Moon sees it.

"We lost our first game, so I guess if we won the first game, nobody would say we've struggled," Moon said. "Definitely the last two weeks have been more must-win situations than in the past because we usually win our opener."

The Oilers take a 2-1 record into today's game in the Astrodome against winless San Diego, but the fans are restless. The Oilers, who had a 7-1 first half en route to their first AFC Central Division title in 1991, were booed at times before they defeated Kansas City 23-20 in overtime last week.

"I think the team overall is playing better at this point than we did last year," Moon said. "I don't think we've struggled. We haven't played our best ball, but because we lost the first one it puts you in a situation where you don't want to drop down."

■ Chargers at Oilers, noon, NBC (Cable channel 9)

The Oilers may be victims of their high-scoring offense, which started last season with victories over the Los Angeles Raiders (47-17) and Cincinnati (30-7). This season they've been beaten by Pittsburgh (29-24) in the opener and defeated Indianapolis (20-10) and the Chiefs.

Fans complained throughout the week on radio talk shows about the faltering run-and-shoot, although the Oilers rank No. 1 in the NFL in passing and No. 4 in total offense.

"It's the way teams have been playing us," Moon said. "When they drop seven or eight guys off in coverage, it's hard to find those seams. We had a couple of blowout games last year, but we got some turnovers that put those games out of reach."

Ah, turnovers, a sore subject with the Oilers. Moon has seven interceptions in three games and the Oilers' giveaway-takeaway ratio is minus-4.

"We've done a lot of things to hurt ourselves," defensive end William Fuller said. "The biggest difference from last year is the turnovers on both sides of the ball.

"Offensively, we've had turnovers and defensively we haven't gotten the turnovers."

Red Raiders blow away BU, 36-17

■ Texas Tech wins its SWC opener for just the second time since 1983 as Lubbock bids Baylor coach Grant Teaff farewell.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant sports editor

LUBBOCK — It was a new way to start out Southwest Conference play for the Texas Tech Red Raiders, this 36-17 win over the Baylor Bears Saturday night at Jones Stadium. The win marked only the second time since 1983 that the Red Raiders have opened the SWC schedule with a win.

Byron "Bam" Morris rushed for 162 yards and scored two touchdowns as the Red Raiders established themselves as the early favorites in what some are calling the "SWC Runner-up Sweepstakes."

The loss was Baylor's first in conference play on the road since 1989, breaking what had been a streak of nine straight wins. In addition, Baylor had won 10 of its last 13 previous meetings between the two teams — dating back to 1979.

Tech is now 2-2 overall and 1-0 in SWC play; Baylor fell to 1-3 and 0-1 in Grant Teaff's final season as head coach at the Waco school.

"They played well and deserved to win," Teaff said of Tech's effort. "They have a chance to challenge for the conference championship now."

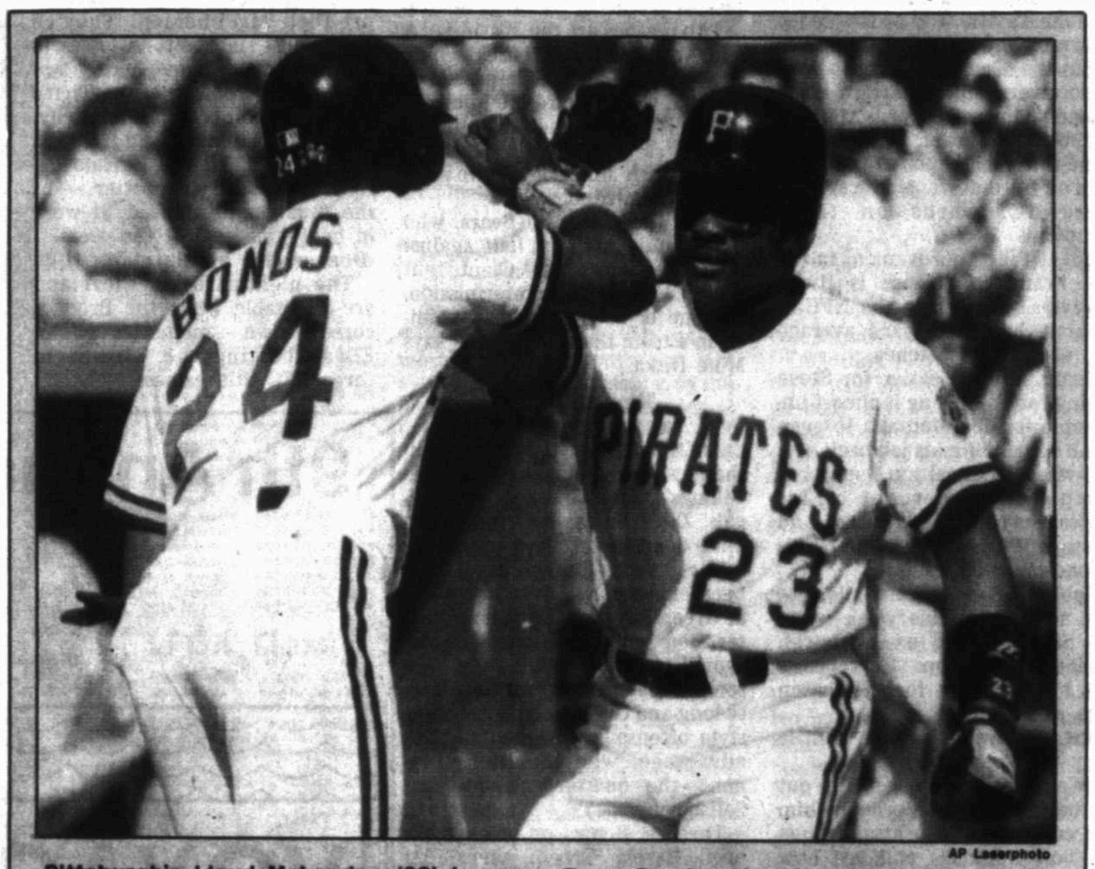

Tech's defense shined, particularly in the second half when Baylor was held to just 146 yards. At game's end, the Bears had 305 total offensive yards, compared to Tech's 528.

"Defensively, we made a lot of great plays in the game," Tech head coach Spike Dykes said. "Other than looking a little porous at the end of the first half, and on the first drive of the game, we made some great plays."

Two of Morris' touchdowns came in the first half, scores he was grateful for after accounting for two turnovers into Baylor's end zone in the game's first 30 minutes.

Morris scored on a 14-yard run off right tackle on the first drive of the second quarter, and again with just 33 ticks left Pittsburgh's Lloyd McLendon (23) is congratulated on his first-inning grand slam by Barry Bonds, who hit a two-run homer in the second inning.

Bucs clinch at least a tie

■ Pittsburgh can claim its third straight NL East title today.

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — The Pittsburgh Pirates are having a good month, Barry Bonds is enjoying an even better one — and the New York Mets probably feel like it took a month to play just this one game.

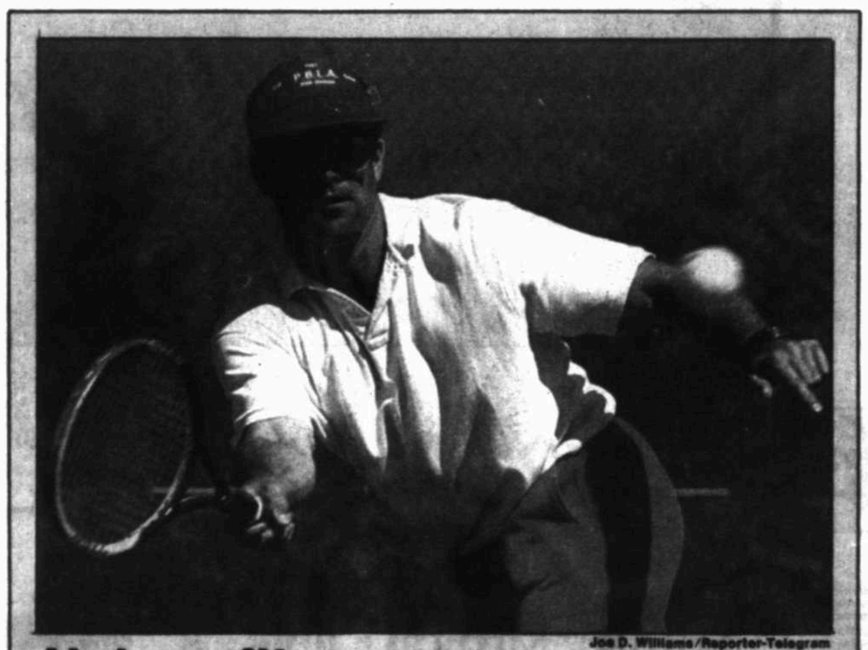

The Pirates clinched at least a tie for the NL East championship on Saturday by burying the New York Mets 19-2 behind a pair of six-run innings, Lloyd McClendon's grand slam and Barry Bonds' homer.

"There were a couple of dunk shots in there, but basically they just whacked us around," Mets manager Jeff Torborg said. "It just numbs you when the runs come like that."

The next Pirates' victory or Montreal loss will assure Pittsburgh of becoming the first NL East team to win three consecutive division championships since Philadelphia in 1976-78. The Pirates also won three in a row from 1970-72.

The Expos prevented the Pirates from clinch-

Lady Rebel spikers slip past Permian

By Joe Wyatt
Staff writer

Even with three volleyball teams bound for the postseason for the first time in league history, District 4-5A matches of late have been more like battles for survival than strolls to the state playoffs.

And that's what Midland Lee did Saturday in beating Odessa Permian — survive.

"We needed this win just to stay in it at all," said Lee coach Anita Corder after the Lady Rebels polished off Permian 15-4, 13-15, 15-7 in the Lee gymnasium, adding to the logjam of teams in the middle of the 4-5A pack.

The much needed victory upped Lee's mark to 2-3 in 4-5A, 14-6 overall, while Permian fell back to 2-2, 5-11.

In other league matches Saturday, Midland High beat Odessa High 4-15, 15-13, 15-10 to move into a tie for second place with Permian at 2-2, and Abilene High remained undefeated in league play (4-0) with a 16-14, 15-9 decision over San Angelo (1-3).

Second-place Abliene Cooper was idle and stays at 3-1.

For the Lady Rebels, Saturday's match was one of ups, downs and ups. Lee fell behind 4-1 early in the first game, but rattled off the next 14 points to win it.

Heather Huff served the final eight winning points, and Tanisha Mills polished off the Panthers with a game-winner down the heart of the Permian defense.

But the Panthers resisted a sweep by capturing a seesaw battle in Game 2. This one was tied at 8-8 and 13-13 before Permian used a pair of unreturnable serves to squeeze out the victory, 15-13.

That set the stage for Game 3, and like the first game, Lee fell behind 4-1 in the early going. But once again the Lady Rebels responded on their home floor, ty-

Connors, Navratilova haul in plenty of cash

Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — It wasn't just another tennis match for Jimmy Connors and Martina Navratilova.

There was more at stake — at least in their minds — than the hefty chunk of dough that went to the winner.

Connors got $500,000 for a 7-5, 6-2 victory outdoors at Caesars Palace. Both players walked away with their pride intact.

"I was more nevous than in any match I have been in because of the buildup," said the 35-year-old Navratilova, the winner of 160 singles championships, including nine Wimbledon titles.

"The buildup was so incredible that the occasion became bigger in my mind than it actually was."

"I really didn't think about it until I ran into Bobby Riggs two or three days ago," the 40-year-old Connors said.

The 73-year-old Riggs, a one-time tennis champion and hustler, was beaten by Billie Jean King 19 years ago. Riggs predicted a blowout victory for Connors.

Connors, a winner of 109 singles titles, including five U.S. Opens, was a 6-1 favorite.

Adding to the pressure, Navratilova said, was the fact that "a lot of people had bet a lot of money on the match."

Lou D'Amico, the Caesars Palace oddsmaker, said more money was bet on that match than any of the Grand Slam tournaments ever.

Connors reportedly bet $60,000 on himself.

Right off the bat, Connors had his service broken. But he broke back in the sixth game, then won the first set when Navratilova double-faulted on set point. It was all Connors in the second set, finishing the 88-minute match.

The sellout crowd of 13,882, which settled into the serious mood established by the players, left happy.

"This proves people still like tennis," Connors said. "It proved they want to be

49ers-Saints game highlights NFL's Week Four

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

In each of their three games, the San Francisco 49ers have scored 31 points. In their three games, the New Orleans Saints have allowed just 28.

So what we have at the Superdome tonight is another typical Saints-49ers game: irresistible force vs. immovable object with the NFC West lead on the line.

"One of our goals is to not give up a big play, the easy touch, the big one," says coach Jim Mora of New Orleans, which beat Atlanta 10-7 last week to improve to 2-1. "That's certainly important this week."

True enough, although the Saints actually have more big TD plays this season than the 49ers, who also are 2-1. The Saints had three plays of over 50 yards in their only home game, a 28-6 win over the Bears two weeks ago.

San Francisco, meanwhile, just moves up and down the field — its only offensive TD of more than 50 yards was a 54-yard TD reception by John Taylor, who broke his leg last week and is out for six weeks.

But the 49ers just seem to plug in receivers. Mike Sherrard is averaging almost 20 yards a catch and Odessa Turner, who will assume Sherrard's spot as the third man on third down, is averaging a mere 31.3 yards on three receptions.

But the big improvement in the San Francisco offense is Ricky Watters. He's fifth in the NFC in rushing, has a 5.2 yard average and also has 10 catches.

That's made it easier for Steve Young, who's making it almost impossible for Joe Montana to even think of claiming his job back — if and when he's healthy. Young has completed 68 percent of his passes, has run for 103 yards — an average of 8.6 — and is the NFL's second-ranked passer.

Bobby Hebert, meanwhile, got one new target this week when the Saints signed ex-Pittsburgh holdout Louis Lipps. He replaces Floyd Turner, out for the season with a broken leg.

But this week may be a little early to expect much.

"We'll just have to get him out on the practice field, practice him and coach him," Mora said. "Just see how he looks and see how quickly he picks things up."

In other games today, Atlanta is at Chicago; Buffalo at New England; Denver at Cleveland; Minnesota at Cincinnati; San Diego at Houston; Tampa Bay at Detroit; Miami at Seattle; the New York Jets at the Los Angeles Rams, and Pittsburgh at Green Bay.

The Los Angeles Raiders are at Kansas City Monday night and the NFC East plus Indianapolis are off.

at Green Bay (1-2)

Until this year, this was one of those computer rivalries — Vince Lombardi's Packers of the '60s against Chuck Noll's Steelers of the '70s, teams that have six Super Bowl titles between them.

Mike Holmgren's Packers aren't in that category yet, but Bill Cowher's Steelers are raising expectations weekly in Pittsburgh.

Which, of course, has Cowher nervously lapsing into CoachSpeak.

"What we've done to date doesn't mean a thing if we don't take care of business ahead of us," he says. "The more you win, the more you get people looking at you and wondering what you're doing right."

Holmgren finally did something right last week, when his charges came from behind to beat Cincinnati 24-23 on Brett Favre's touchdown pass to Kitrick Taylor with 19 seconds left. Favre (rhymes with starve) may have made Don Majkowski's injury irrelevant.

Atlanta (1-2) at Chicago (1-2)

What happened to that explosive Atlanta offense, which has just 44 points in three games?

Two reasons are the Washington and New Orleans defenses, which shut them down the past two weeks. Two more are the injury to Michael Haynes and the holdout by Andre Rison, which has deprived Chris Miller of his two most dangerous weapons.

Then there are the Bears, who played a decent first half against both the Saints and Giants but didn't show up after intermission. "I've never been more disappointed in a team than I am now," says Mike Ditka.

Minnesota (2-1)
at Cincinnati (2-1)

Another one of those games in the new-coach round robin — the Vikings' Dennis Green vs. the Bengals' Dave Shula, both of whom have done better than expected.

The Bengals, though, may have been exposed by Favre last week in Green Bay. Defensive coordinator Ron Lynn's schemes are designed to take advantage of personnel weaknesses. That only lasts so long and Green's San Francisco-style offense is designed to take advantage, whether Rich Gannon's the quarterback or Sean Salisbury.

The best Bengal on offense has been Harold Green, whose 321 yards (a 5.3) average are third in the NFL. Not so Boomer Esiason, who is averaging just 132 yards a game passing.

Tampa Bay (2-1) at Detroit (1-2)

A problem for the Bucs — Detroit has won 10 straight at home; Tampa Bay has lost 15 straight on the road. All but last week's 26-20 loss in Minnesota, of course, came before the Bucs had Sam Wyche and orange pants.

The Lions have yet to get Barry Sanders loose — he was just 14 for 34 last week in Washington; has just 100 yards in the last two weeks and is averaging just 3.5 yards a carry against defenses stacked to stop him. Much of the problem is the offensive line — Mike Haight, signed this week, is a stopgap at best.

Los Angeles Raiders (0-3) at Kansas City (2-1) (Monday night)

The Raiders are tied for second in the league on offense; rated sixth on defense and are 0-3, which tells you how much statistics mean.

Todd Marinovich remains at quarterback — of his four starts, three will have come against the Chiefs, two of those on national television. In his last two, he's thrown three interceptions apiece — last week in a 395-yard performance against Cleveland and last January in a 10-6 playoff loss at Arrowhead.

Dave Krieg is getting along just fine in the Kansas City offense — with all the running, he's thrown just 74 times in three games. And coach Marty Schottenheimer is more than satisfied, even after last week's overtime loss in Houston.

at New England (0-2)

Believe it or not, the Patriots have beaten the Bills in Foxboro two of the last three times they've played, including 16-13 last season.

The Patriots are playing back to pre-Dick MacPherson. They've scored just six points in losses to Seattle and the Rams, hardly two of the NFL's powerhouses. That's 106 fewer points than Jim Kelly, Thurman Thomas and friends have scored and the Buffalo defense is also playing better — of the 38 points its allowed, 31 were in one game against the 49ers.

Denver (2-1) at Cleveland (1-2)

The nightmares in Cleveland are inevitable when the Broncos come to town — memories of John Elway beating the Browns in three AFC title games.

Elway managed just 59 yards for the Broncos last week and Todd Philcox managed to throw for 200 as the Browns beat the Raiders 28-16 — 177 to Eric Metcalf, who had all four touchdowns. Philcox, who was replacing the injured Bernie Kosar, broke his hand and he'll be replaced this week by Mike Tomczak, signed just 10 days ago.

On the other hand, in the 30-0 loss to Philadelphia, Elway was playing one of the league's best defense without weapons — his best receivers on injured reserve and a rookie free agent trying to block Clyde Simmons.

Miami (2-0) at Seattle (1-2)

Don Shula hasn' started 3-0 since 1984, although he's done it eight times in his career and he's caught son Dave with two wins. He's also never beaten Tom Flores, who was 6-0 against him with the Raiders.

The Dolphins are getting what they need, balance on offense, but the running comes not from Bobby Humphrey but Mark Higgs, who has no star quality but just produces. The Seahawks got defense last week from a Miami product, Cortez Kennedy, who wrecked New England in a 10-6 victory.

New York Jets (0-3)
at Los Angeles Rams (1-2)

The Rams finish their four-week run through the AFC East with this game; th Jets, with Browning Nagle back a quarterback, try to find some way to prove that the 5-0 exhibition season wasn't a mirage.

Bruce Coslet d. in't apologize for guaranteeing a win last week against the 49ers - - even the 31-14 score was deceptive because San Francisco called things off at 31-0. The Rams, meanwhile, lost 26-10 in Miami and have to go back to the tougher NFC after this week.

Cowboys using extra week to analyze Eagles

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas offensive coordinator Norv Turner says two weeks between games is a long time for the Cowboys to watch Philadelphia's great defense on tape.

"It's crazy," Turner said. "They've got such a good group of players and they're coached so well, it really has been fun to watch them. You admire them for being as great as they are."

Defensive coordinator Dave Wannstedt has gone deep into the archives in his preparation for the upcoming game.

"You can only study so much of what they're doing now," he told The Dallas Morning News. "What we have done is go back and look at Randall (Cunningham) two or three years ago, see the kinds of things he's done in the past. That's the advantage the extra week gives you."

Both Dallas and Philadelphia are unbeaten after three NFL games. Both have this weekend off, then meet on Monday Night TV on Oct. 5.

Wannstedt says Cunningham, even after major knee surgery, has a passer rating of 141.2.

"In the past with him it was hit or miss," Wannstedt said.

OILERS: Houston not taking winless Chargers too lightly

(From 1B)

Fuller expects another difficult day for the Oilers on offense and defense against the Chargers, tied for second in the league in total defense and ranked second against the run, eighth against the pass.

"They move the ball well, they haven't played bad defensively and it's really hard to believe that these guys are 0-3," Fuller said. "We just have to make sure they get to 0-4 and not get untracked against us.

"I don't think we'll have any problems getting ready. You look at the film and it's right there. They are a good football team. I'm not just shooting you guys. They are a scary team."

The Chargers are trying to overcome the second-half blahs. They've been outscored 44-10 in the second half this season. Pittsburgh had 16 unanswered points in last week's 23-6 victory.

"We're still pumped up and very excited," running back Marion Butts said. "We're still working together and trying to excel. The coaches are really pushing us. All we need is a victory."

San Diego will present the second big-back attack against the Oilers in as many weeks, with Butts and Rod Bernstine in the backfield. Bernstine is the leading rusher with 193 yards on 33 carries and Butts has 138 yards on 36 carries.

"We try to run the ball and keep the other team off-balance and make them respect that," San Diego coach Bobby Ross said. "If we can do that, maybe we can keep the ball out of Warren Moon's hands."

Daly stays in front at PGA B.C. Open

Associated Press

ENDICOTT, N.Y. — Patience isn't John Daly's best attribute, so he was doubly pleased to outlast both the weather and Nolan Henke to take the lead after Saturday's third-round of the B.C. Open.

"I held my patience real well. Usually, I don't if it takes that long to play golf," said Daly, who shot a 4-under-par 67, with a two-stroke lead after a rain-delayed battle with Henke.

"Front and back, it seemed liked we waiting on every shot. We were out there six or seven hours. That's a long day," said Daly, who was at 13-under 200 after 54 holes.

Daly and Henke, the 1990 B.C. Open champion, were tied until the final hole when Daly sank a 12-foot birdie putt and Henke bogeyed, dropping him back into a second-place tie with rookie Phil Mickelson at 202.

"In the beginning of the round, I made a lot of good putts, a couple of good par putts," said Henke, who wound up with a 68. "All in all, my putter was really hot for the first 12 holes. That got me going but it kind of slowed down a bit and I made some bogeys coming in."

First-round leader Ken Green was three strokes back after a 69, while Jay Haas and Joel Edwards were four back. Haas shot a 67 and Edwards had a 69.

A two-hour rain delay called to allow officials to clear standing water from several greens on the 6,996-yard En-Joie Golf Club course did little to bother Henke, who began the day as one of three players trailing Daly by a stroke.

Daly had putted out on the second hole when the interruption came. When play resumed, Henke and Green finished the hole. Henke then reeled off three consecutive birdies.

He sank a 6-footer on the par-5 No. 3 after hitting his approach shot in a bunker. His birdie from the fringe of No. 4 put him at 10-under and broke a brief four-way tie with Daly, Green and Mickelson.

Henke made a 12-foot uphill birdie putt on No. 5, another par-5. Daly kept pace with a short birdie of his own and moved back into a tie with Henke at 12-under two holes later when he sank a 35-foot birdie putt.

Henke took back the lead with back-to-back birdies on Nos. 11 and 12, but Daly didn't let him pull away. After pulling his approach into the gallery on No. 12, Daly chipped within 2 feet and putted for a birdie that put him at 12-under and he got even when Henke bogeyed No. 13.

Mickelson outlasted some early up-and-down play, finishing with consecutive birdies on his final three holes to move into second place. He played even on the first 15 holes, negating two birdies with a pair of bogeys.

"The front side was frustrating because I kept running it over the edge. I hit a lot of good shots. The last three holes it clicked," Mickelson said.

Green lost ground on the leaders, after beginning the day one stroke behind Daly.

Stephenson leads field at LPGA Classic tourney

BUENA PARK, Calif. (AP) — Jan Stephenson, winless since 1987, shot a 5-under-par 67 to take a two-stroke lead over Donna Andrews after the third round of the LPGA Classic on Saturday.

The 40-year-old Stephenson, a 16-time winner in 19 seasons on the LPGA tour, has a 9-under 207 total on the 6,352-yard Los Coyotes Country Club Course. Andrews shot a 68.

"I've got bronchitis," Stephenson said, "I almost withdrew from the tournament on Thursday, but I was lucky and had an early round Thursday so I stayed around."

Stephenson recorded only one par — at the par-4 14th — through her final 10 holes.

"The back nine today was definitely an up-and-down round," Stephenson said. "I'm hitting my irons great, but I'm not putting so well. I did make a 20-foot birdie putt at the 11th hole, but with my very good irons I was close to the flag most of the day.'

The rest of the birdie putts Stephenson made were inside 5 feet except for a 10-footer at the par-5, 488-yard 13th.

Meg Mallon's 69 tied her with second-round co-leader Betsy King for third place at 210. King shot a 72.

Kathy Postlewait, who tied Stephenson for the low round of the day, was tied for fifth with Cindy Schreyer at 211. Schreyer posted a 71.

Stephenson's illness affected her preparation for the tournament.

"I didn't play a practice round or even one practice hole," she said. "And I haven't hit any balls on the driving range or practiced my putting."

Stephenson's career earnings stand at $1,990,284. She seems a certainty to become the ninth player in LPGA history to earn $2 million, needing only to finish 10th or better Sunday to reach that plateau.

"I'm aware that I am very close to the $2 million mark," she said. "In fact, I told my caddy Thursday that that was one of the reasons I was going to play. Plus, I've been playing very well lately."

Stephenson finished tied for third two weeks ago in the Ping-Cellular tournament in Portland, Ore.

Andrews had four birdies and no bogeys and made three lengthy par-saving putts. A 19-footer at No. 7, a 20-footer at No. 11 and a 13-footer at No. 16.

"I hit the ball solidly today," said the 25-year old Andrews. "I'm really rolling the putts well this week and they are falling. That's the difference from good and bad weeks."

Defending champion Pat Bradley fired a 74 to leave her at 215.

Aoki fends off Floyd

ALPHARETTA, Ga. (AP) — Japan's Isao Aoki birdied four of his last five holes Saturday for a 6-under-par 66 and a two-round total of 136 to grab a 1-stroke lead in the $800,000 Senior Tour's Nationwide Championship.

Aoki, who turned 50 on Aug. 31 and is playing in only his fourth senior tournament, needed his fast finish to fend off Raymond Floyd, who shot a course-record 64 for a 137 over the par-72, 6,781-yard Country Club of the South course.

Floyd, making only his third start on the over-50 tour, made PGA history last week by winning the GTE North Classic to become the first golfer to win tournaments on both the regular and Senior PGA Tours in the same year.

Jim Dent and Bob Brue were tied for third at 138. Dent had a 68 and Brue a 69 over the hilly course on a day in which a misty rain fell throughout the round and temperatures remained in the 60s.

Jim Colbert was alone at 139 after a 68 while defending champion Mike Hill, first-round leader Dale Douglass and Walt Zembriski were another shot back at 140. Hill had a 68, Douglass a 72 and Zembriski a 69.

Jack Nicklaus had a 75 and was at 148 in the field of 78 which included the top 14 money-winners except No. 1 Lee Trevino, who was playing in Japan.

Aoki, who was third to Floyd last week, finished with seven birdies and one bogey. He had birdie putts of 20, 15, 5 and 45 feet on Nos. 14-17.

Floyd, who broke Dent's course-record 66, set during last year's event, had nine birdies and a bogey in his round after an opening 73.

Dent was the leader at 8-under before bogeys on Nos. 15 and 17.

Aussy Dibnah leads Women's British Open

WOBURN, England (AP) — Australian Corinne Dibnah fired a 69 on Saturday, with five birdies in a seven-hole stretch, and took a one-stroke lead over U.S. Open champion Patty Sheehan after two rounds of the British Women's Open.

Sheehan shot a 72 for a 140 total. The tournament was reduced to 54 holes because of a rainout Friday.

Sheehan's drive at the 390-yard seventh hole hit the mother of Laura Davies, a British player who won the U.S. Open in 1987. The ball was headed for a stand of trees when it hit the women, who was uninjured. Sheehan continue through and parred the hole.

"I didn't know it was Laura's mother until afterwards, but I gather she was all right," said Sheehan. "It was a lucky break for me."

Davies also hit a spectator with a ball. The man needed stitches in a head wound. Davies shot a 76 and was 10 shots off the pace.

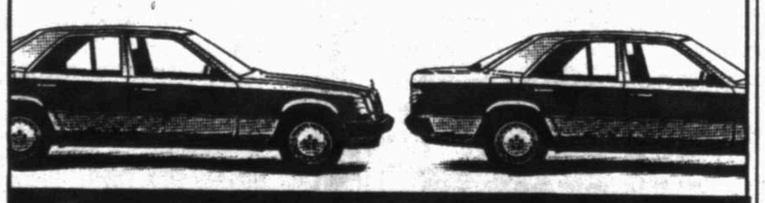

Behind Dibnah and Sheehan were Americans Dottie Mochrie and Patti Rizzo and Marie-Laure De Lorenzi of France, who were tied at 142.

Mochrie, who leads the U.S. money-winnng list this season, had the best round of the day, a 68.

Rizzo carded a 70, while De Lorenzi shot her second 71 in a row.

Mustangs pound Three Way, 56-7

THREE WAY — The Midland Christian Mustangs rolled over Three Way here Friday night by a 56-7 margin, keeping their perfect record intact.

Andy Awtry ran for two touchdowns and hauled in one of Neil Truex's two TD passes as the Mustangs rang up a 38-0 halftime edge, then coasted to the victory that moved them to 4-0 for the year.

Linebacker Kyle Jackson returned an interception 50 yards for one Mustang TD, and he punctuated Brian Fairchild's 60-yard kickoff return with a one-yard TD plunge late in the fourth quarter.

Jody Duncan also scored twice for Midland Christian, which allowed just 74 total yards while racking up 183 on offense.

Clay Gunter's 35-yard run gave MC a 16-0 lead early in the game. The Eagles fumbled five times, losing the ball twice.

U.S. dispenses with Sweden in semis

Davis Cup

MINNEAPOLIS — Moments after their daddy shined at center court, Kevin and Sean McEnroe were the center of attention.

"Cut it out!" Kevin told Sean as his father, John, tried to conduct a post-victory press conference Saturday. Sean's response? "You cut it out!"

Pete Sampras — who had just teamed with the elder McEnroe for a five-set victory over Sweden's Stefan Edberg and Anders Jarryd, putting the United States into the Davis Cup final — smiled broadly as he watched the kids argue with relentless intensity.

"They've gotta be McEnroes," Sampras said.

He knew. McEnroes don't go down quietly.

John certainly didn't, keeping the normally stoic Sampras emotionally high and playing his best tennis in the fourth and fifth sets as the first-time doubles partners rallied from a two-set-to-one deficit.

"In the fourth and fifth sets, in the exchanges you have to win, John basically won them all," U.S. captain Tom Gorman said. "For John to end the match serving was fitting."

Fitting indeed, because McEnroe is Mr. U.S. Davis Cup.

When Edberg, the world's top-ranked player, couldn't return McEnroe's hard serve to his forehand, McEnroe earned his 58th Davis Cup victory — 20 more than any other American.

"You could tell John really wanted to win," Edberg said.

McEnroe almost didn't get the chance.

Because he and Sampras had practiced poorly all week, Gorman said late Friday that a change was being contemplated. But the Americans decided before Saturday's match to stay with McEnroe, one of the best doubles players ever, and Sampras, the No. 3 player in the world.

"We had considerable discussion about it. Probably the uniqueness of this team is the frankness, the honesty and the openness that they have," Gorman said.

"It's ultimately my choice, but I certainly am consulting with the players because I don't want somebody out there who doesn't want to be out there. It just came down to John. I said, 'John, the ball's on your racquet. Do you want it?' He said, 'I want it.' And everybody said, 'You guys go for it.' "

Even though they were horrendous in practice?

"I don't like to leave my best tennis on the practice court," McEnroe said. "And I can safely say I didn't."

The 6-1, 6-7 (2-7), 4-6, 6-3, 6-3 victory gave the Americans a 3-0 lead in the best-of-5 semifinal, rendering today's singles matches meaningless.

Courier is supposed to play Edberg, but Magnus Larsson might take Edberg's place. Agassi will finish the tournament against Nicklas Kulti. The matches will be best-of-3 after both captains agreed to the shorter format.

In the final, the United States will meet Switzerland — which leads Brazil 3-0 in its semifinal — Dec. 4-6 in Fort Worth.

Will McEnroe and Sampras be togther again?

"After that? Are you kidding? I'd love to," McEnroe said. "You don't want to change a winning formula."

After Saturday's final point, he and Sampras hugged at the net, a bonding of the 33-year-old star of tennis past and the 21-year-old hope of tennis future.

It was redemption for both.

Along with Peter Fleming, McEnroe lost doubles to Edberg and Jarryd in the 1984 final, giving Sweden the cup. Sampras dropped his two singles matches in last year's championship-round loss in France; just two weeks ago, he lost to Edberg in the U.S. Open final.

At first, the decision to keep McEnroe and Sampras together looked brilliant, as the pair broke Edberg and Jarryd three times in a first set that took only 26 minutes.

"We started off playing unbelievable tennis," Sampras said. "But when we lost the tiebreak in the second set, we got a little down on ourselves and had a bad game at 5-4 in the third."

Sampras lost both his serves in the tiebreaker. The third set was on serve at 4-4 until Sampras double-faulted on break point, giving Sweden the lead.

"It felt like the U.S. Open all over again," Sampras said. "I had 11 double-faults against Edberg. That was what was going on in my mind."

But during the 15-minute break between the third and fourth sets, McEnroe got into Sampras' mind. The pep talk and psych-up session worked, as the duo dominated the final two sets.

"He's one of the more intense players I've ever played with. That feeds off to me," Sampras said. "If John saw my head going down a little bit, he'd tell me to get a little more pumped up. That's good for a player like me because I'm pretty casual."

In the fourth set, McEnroe and Sampras re-established control by breaking Jarryd to take a 2-1 lead. Sampras fought off a break point in the next game, eventually prevailing with two straight service winners. Later, Sampras' ace gave the United States a 5-3 lead. And when Edberg failed to convert on a serve-and-volley attempt, he was broken and the match was even.

McEnroe and Sampras took a 3-0 lead to start the fifth set. They allowed only two points while holding their serves and broke Edberg on Sampras' volley.

From there, the United States only had to hold serve, which McEnroe did twice and Sampras did once; they lost only three points in the process.

The U.S. team, seeking only its second Davis Cup title since 1982, had taken its two-match lead Friday night when Courier beat Kulti and Agassi defeated Edberg.

Martinsville proves to be tough egg for Allisons

MARTINSVILLE, Va. (AP) — Of all places that could prove pivotal in Davey Allison's effort to win a NASCAR stock car championship, it would have to be Martinsville Speedway.

The .526-mile egg-shaped oval has proved to be a very difficult place for the Allison family, and the last thing 31-year-old Davey needs right now is an extra challenge.

Neither Davey nor his father, longtime NASCAR star Bobby Allison, have won at Martinsville, and the younger Allison trails Bill Elliott by 154 points with six races remaining on the Winston Cup schedule.

"Martinsville to me has always been a challenge," he said. "I've seen my dad go through some heartbreakers here. This is the one track he never won at, of the ones he ran 10 years or longer. This is just one that seemed to escape him.

"He led one race here to the white flag and the engine blew up and he couldn't even coast back around to the checkered (flag). So that was a pretty frustrating day for our family.

"But no Alabama gang member has ever won a Winston Cup race here. Neil Bonnett never won a Winston Cup race here either. We'd like to change that. It adds a little bit more of a challenge to do somethat that none of our gang has ever done," added Allison, of Hueytown, Ala.

Kyle Petty will start from the pole in today's 500-mile race, with Elliott 16th and Allison, who didn't qualify for the 31-car field until the second round of time trials, 22nd.

MATCH: Both would play again

part of a show. It proves they want to be part of an extravaganza."

Despite the case of nerves, Navratilova said, "I'd like to do it again."

"I'd do it again, but we'd have to cut the court down a little," Connors said. "I don't mind one serve so much, but that court was brutal."

Connors was allowed only one serve, which meant if he faulted, it was a point for Navratilova. He had only five faults to eight double-faults for Navratilova.

Natvratilova also played to a wider court. She was given an extra 2 feet, 3 inches on each side (half of the doubles alleys).

"That's a lot of ground to cover for a 40-year-old guy," Connors said.

Both players got appearance fees, which were not revealed. Estimates ranged from $200,000 to $500,000 apiece.

Dodgers lose record sum, owner says

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Los Angeles Dodgers owner Peter O'Malley said recently that his team will lose more money this year than in any previous season since moving from Brooklyn following the 1957 season.

That sounds suprising, since the Dodgers are among the top four teams in revenue and will sell about 3 million tickets (no-shows are at several hundred thousand this season).

"Obviously, we'd want to find out if that's true, and if that's true, what the cause factors are — and in particular, whether the compensation system for players has much to do with it," said Donald Fehr, head of the Major League Baseball Players Association. "I hope, certainly, that it's not true. Anyone who's been around baseball for any length of time has to have had a lot of respect for the sustained success — not necessarily on the field — that this franchise has had. And I see no reason not to expect that in the future. But nothing is perfect and goes on forever.

"The economy's troubled. And it's more troubled, from what I read, in Los Angeles than it is in lots of other places. Maybe that's a part of it, maybe it isn't. But whether the player compensation system is very much a part of the problem with the Dodgers is a different question. And, obviously, it has to be examined."

Baseball notes

Story of George

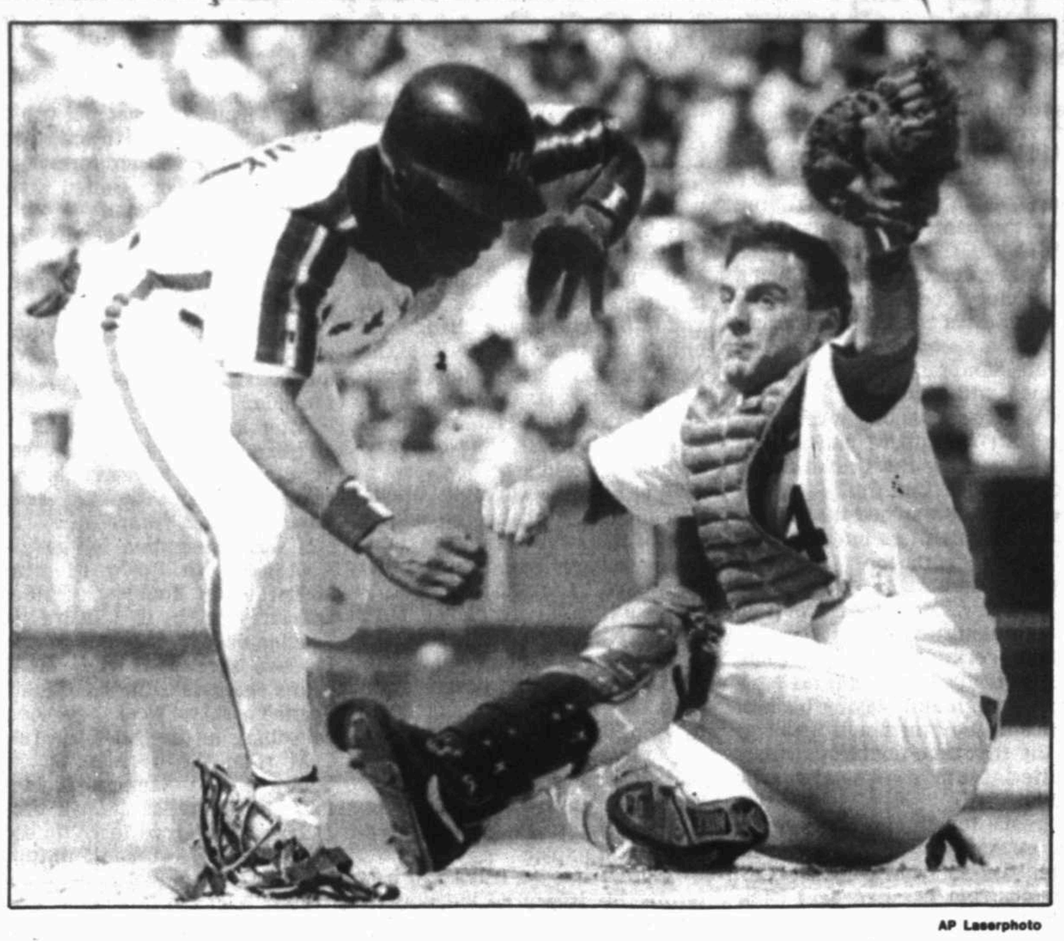

George Steinbrenner met Monday with an official of the New York Yankees' cable television network, but had permission from the commissioner's office.

The agreement signed by Steinbrenner and former commissioner Fay Vincent on July 30, 1990, states that, "Mr. Steinbrenner shall not ... associate or communicate with any major league club (including the New York Yankees) or its personnel or any person having business or financial dealings with the New York Yankees, in connection with any matter involving the New York Yankees or baseball."

But the agreement, which remains in force until March 1, also states that "the prohibitions enumerated in paragraph six, above, shall not be revoked or amended without the prior written approval of the commissioner."

Rocky Mountain Search

Among those rumored to be on general manager Bob Gebhard's list for manager of the Colorado Rockies are former Milwaukee Brewers manager Tom Trebelhorn, Denver Zephyrs manager Tony Muser, Pittsburgh Pirates coach Bill Virdon and California Angels coach Jon Wathan.

ing Saturday by beating the Chicago Cubs 12-0.

"This was fun, but this team is looking to bigger and better things," said McClendon, who is on the verge of playing for his fourth straight NL East champion. He also played for the '89 Cubs.

"This will be three in a row for us, and we've come out on the short end (in the NL playoffs) every time," McClendon said. "Now, we just want to get this over with and focus on taking that next step beyond."

The Mets took a step backwards, playing more like the '62 Mets than the $44 million team that was supposed to win the NL East in a walkover. They've lost 12 of 14 to the Pirates — but never as badly as this.

The Pirates led 6-1 after one inning, 12-1 after two and 16-1 after four, and the Mets finally threw in the towel by pitching infielder Bill Pecota in the eighth.

Expos 12, Cubs 0

MONTREAL — Chris Nabholz pitched his second career shutout and the Montreal Expos prevented Pittsburgh from clinching the NL East championship.

The Pirates needed a victory against New York and a loss by second-place Montreal to win their third straight division title.

Nabholz (11-11) gave up four hits and struck out 10. He walked two and retired the last 12 batters in his first complete game this season.

Shawn Boskie (5-11) allowed five runs on nine hits in six innings. The Cubs lost their fifth in a row.

The Expos scored three times in the second after loading the bases with no outs.

Astros 5, Dodgers 4

LOS ANGELES — Eddie Taubensee's two-run single in the eighth inning and Doug Jones' team record-tying 32nd save led Houston over Los Angeles.

Jones, who saved 112 games for Cleveland in a three-year span before signing a minor league contract with the Astros last January, matched Dave Smith's 1986 mark with two innings of one-hit relief. He preserved the victory for Xavier Hernandez (9-1), who pitched a hitless seventh inning but fell behind on an unearned run.

Giants 8, Reds 3

SAN FRANCISCO — Cincinnati's nine-game winning streak was stopped when Steve Hosey hit his first major league homer.

Atlanta's magic number for winning the NL West title was cut to four by the Reds' loss. The Braves played a night game at San Diego.

Hosey led off the fifth inning by connecting against Greg Swindell (12-7). The homer tied the score at 1 and began a three-run rally.

The Giants added two runs in the fifth after Craig Colbert singled and moved up on a sacrifice. John Patterson hit an RBI single and eventually scored on a stolen base and an error.

Swindell, who had not yielded more than two earned runs in a game since Aug. 6, was chased when the Giants added two more runs in the sixth inning.

Phillies 3, Cardinals 1
Phillies 10, Cardinals 0

PHILADELPHIA — Ben Rivera pitched a five-hitter for his first major league shutout and Philadelphia completed a doubleheader sweep of St. Louis.

The Phillies have won a season-high six straight games. They beat the Cardinals 3-1 in the opener on Curt Schilling's four-hitter.

Rivera (7-4) struck out seven and walked four in his fourth complete game of the season. Donovan Osborne (9-10) gave up 11 hits in six innings and eight runs, only four of them earned.

Braves 2, Padres 1

SAN DIEGO — The Atlanta Braves reduced their magic number to three for clinching the NL West title by beating the San Diego Padres as Lonnie Smith singled home the tie-breaking run with two outs in the 10th inning.

The Braves, shut out in their previous two games, moved 5½ games ahead of the Cincinnati Reds, who lost 8-3 at San Francisco. Atlanta won for only the fifth time in 12 games.

Baseball coins never really did catch on

N.Y. Times News Service

As October approaches, the Mets are out of the pennant race and the Yankees look as though they would be happy just to play .500 ball. But back in 1964, the Yanks were in the World Series against the St. Louis Cardinals. And the Topps Co., famous for its baseball cards if not its chewing gum, began marketing baseball coins.

Topps distributed thousands of coins featuring 164 players. It didn't fabricate them but farmed out the work to several companies. The finished coins were shipped to Topps and inserted into a package as a bonus with a baseball card and a stick of gum.

The coins, the size of a 50-cent piece, proved less than popular. Part of the problem was that they had a tendency to tarnish and then corrode. The coins, with a portrait on the obverse and statistics about the player on the reverse, were discontinued after 1964.

It seemed as though company enthusiasm for the baseball-coin idea dropped faster faster than a good knuckle ball. And for seven years, Topps stuck with its tried-and-true baseball cards.

But in 1971, the coin project was called to the mound again. The problem with the corrosion had been solved, and a new set of coins was distributed, featuring 153 players. But the coins still had problems with consumer acceptance. Strike two.

One might think that Topps would have decided that enough was enough and have stuck with its sure winner, baseball cards. They had been popular since 1951, when they were first issued. (The company once had a monopoly in the baseball-card field, but after going through battles in court, other companies now compete.)

In 1988, the company revived the coin idea once again with a set of just 60 coins, wrapped three to a package and sold without the gum. The company repeated in 1989, and in 1990 it sold the whole set of 60 as a single collection.

While some baseball cards are worth thousands of dollars, the market for baseball coins is slim to nonexistent. A few collectors still seek a coin here or there to fill a collection, but such collectors are few in number, and many baseball-card dealers don't even handle the coins. But that doesn't faze the company, which considered the coins just a novelty item.

Topps, based in Brooklyn, N.Y., is still one of the largest makers of gum. It does not divulge production figures, but Timothy R. Boyle, a company spokesman, said that the yearly production is over a billion pieces. And Topps is still the pre-eminent distributor of baseball cards.

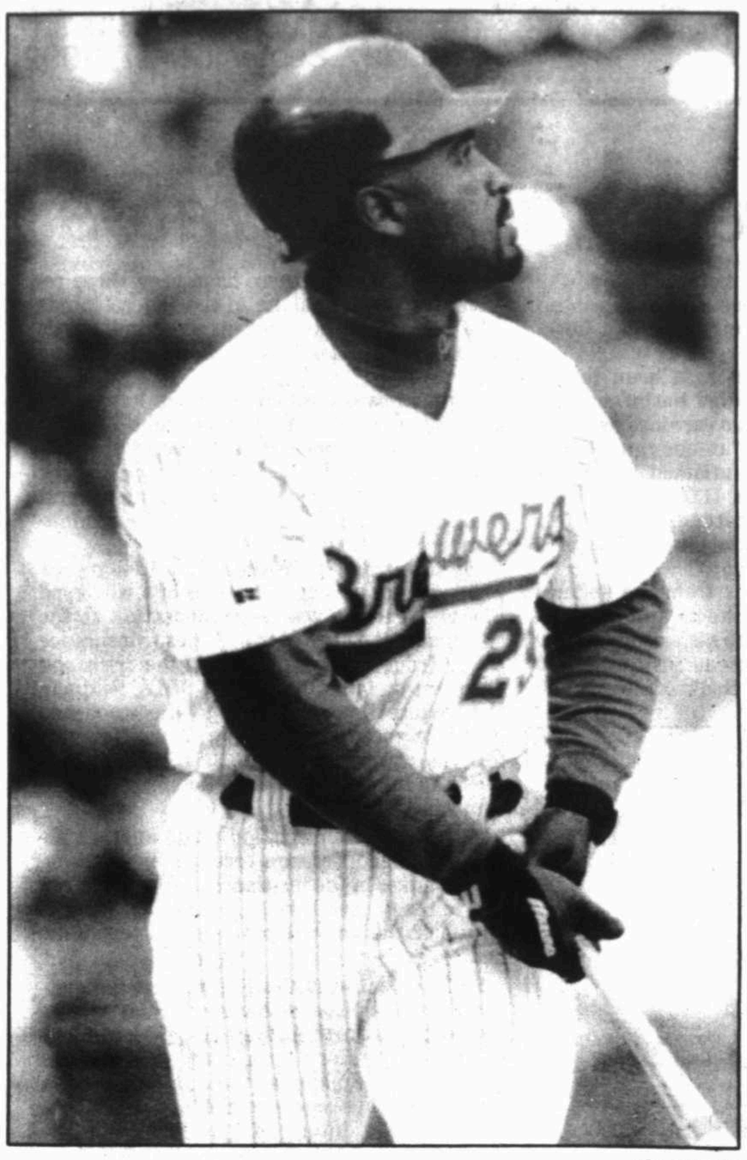

As for the coins, the company apparently considered three strikes enough. The last year of production was 1990, and there are no plans to resurrect the coins, barring a sudden surge of popularity and demand. In other words, they're ooouuuuuttttt!

Vaughn's homer puts Oakland celebration on hold

Milwaukee pulls to within 2½ games of the Blue Jays

Greg Vaughn of the Brewers watches the flight of his game-winning home run in the sixth inning of Milwaukee's meeting Saturday against Oakland.

Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — The Milwaukee Brewers, still in a championship chase of their own, put Oakland's AL West title celebration on hold again Saturday, beating the Athletics 2-1 on Greg Vaughn's sixth-inning homer.

Oakland's magic number remained at one. A loss by second-place Minnesota on Saturday night against Kansas City would give the Athletics their fourth AL West title in five years.

The Brewers, meanwhile, moved within 2½ games of Toronto in the AL East with seven games left after the first-place Blue Jays were beaten 2-1 in Yankee Stadium. Milwaukee beat Oakland for the second straight day; the A's still clinched a tie for the AL West title Friday night when Minnesota lost.

After failing eight previous times to extend a four-game winning streak to five, the Brewers finally did it, beating Oakland's hottest pitcher Ron Darling (15-10). He had won three straight and seven of his previous eight decisions.

Vaughn drove his 22nd homer of the season into the left field bleachers with one out in the sixth, breaking a 1-all tie. The win went to Jesse Orosco (3-1), who went 1 2-3 innings with the aid of two double plays.

Diving catches by Vaughn in the seventh and Darryl Hamilton in the eighth robbed Walt Weiss and Ruben Sierra of extra base hits.

Yankees 2, Blue Jays 1

NEW YORK — Toronto's drive toward the AL East title stalled Saturday when New York beat the Blue Jays on Danny Tartabull's two-run homer.

Toronto, which began the day with a 3½-game lead over the Milwaukee Brewers, has a magic number of five for its second straight division title and its third in four years.

New York stopped its 10-game losing streak against the Blue Jays by beating Juan Guzman (15-5), who lost consecutive decisions for only the third time in his career. Tartabull's third-inning homer was only the sixth off Guzman this year, and the first since Aug. 3.

Bob Wickman (5-1) won for the fifth time in six career starts, giving up six hits in seven innings, striking out four and walking one. Rich Monteleone pitched a perfect eighth and Steve Farr finished for his 28th save in 34 chances.

Tartabull's homer, his 24th of the season, followed a single by Don Mattingly.

Mariners 8, Rangers 4

ARLINGTON — Dann Howitt snapped an 0-for-43 slump with an RBI triple that began a six-run rally in the fourth inning and led Seattle over Texas.

Howitt's last hit had been on June 7 while he played for Oakland. He was cut by the A's in July, signed as a free agent with Seattle and had been 0 for 12 with the Mariners.

The longest hitless streak in major league history was an 0-for-70 slump by pitcher Bob Buhl in 1962 while with the Milwaukee Braves and Chicago Cubs.

Howitt flied out to end the first inning with the bases loaded. But he got even against Roger Pavlik (4-4) in the fourth with a triple that tied it at 1. Bret Boone followed with a two-run homer, his third, and Ken Griffey Jr. later capped the burst with an RBI single.

Red Sox 7, Orioles 3
Orioles 2, Red Sox 0

BALTIMORE (AP) — Craig Lefferts allowed five hits in 7⅓ innings to earn his first American League victory, and Baltimore split a doubleheader with Boston

The Red Sox scored four runs in the 14th inning to win the first game 7-3.

The split moved the Orioles closer to elimination in the AL East. Any combination of Toronto wins and Baltimore losses totaling two will drop the Orioles out of the running.

Baltimore has lost 12 of 19 and has not scored more than four runs in 20 straight games, its longest such drought since 1954.

Lefferts (1-2), in his fourth start since joining the Orioles in a trade with the San Diego Padres on Aug. 31, did not allow a runner to reach second base. Gregg Olson got the last five outs for his 35th save.

Indians 7, Tigers 4

DETROIT — Jesse Levis' first major league homer broke a 4-4 tie in the sixth inning and Cleveland went on to a victory over Detroit.

Levis' upper-deck shot to right came against Kurt Knudsen just a half-inning after the Tigers had tied the game with two runs in the fifth.

Cleveland added two runs in the eighth on a double by Carlos Martinez, who was pinch-hitting for Levis.

Jack Armstrong (6-15) allowed two hits and struck out five in four shutout innings for the victory. Steve Olin came on with two on and two out in the eighth and finished for his 28th save.

Knudsen (2-3) allowed three runs in four innings.

Cleveland took a 2-0 lead in the second when Albert Belle and Mark Whiten singled and Brook Jacoby and Levis got two-out RBI singles off David Haas.

Angels 1, White Sox 0

CHICAGO — Chuck Finley shut out Chicago for seven innings and the California Angels ended a five-game losing streak.

There was a 24-minute delay in the fourth inning and a 33-minute interruption in the eighth. After play resumed for three pitches, there was another delay for 25 minutes.

Finley (6-12) gave up four hits. Steve Frey got two outs for his third save.

Alex Fernandez (8-11) took the loss.

Twins 9, Royals 2

MINNEAPOLIS — Kirby Puckett and the World Series champion Minnesota Twins staved off elimination, beating George Brett and the Royals.

A loss by the Twins would've given Oakland the AL West championship for the fourth time in five years. Instead, the Athletics' magic number remained at one.

Brett's magic number, meanwhile, moved to 2,996. He got two more hits, and needs just four to join Robin Yount as a new member of the 3,000-hit club.

Puckett singled twice for his 200th hit of the season.

Heavy metal music fans abuse Athletic turf

Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — Groundskeepers labored Saturday to re-sod the Oakland Coliseum outfield in time for the Athletics' next home game following a rampage by turf-tossing heavy metal music fans.

The regular Coliseum crew and 15 reinforcements began unloading huge rolls of bluegrass to cover a 25,000-square-foot area ripped up by fans during breaks at Thursday night's "Day On The Green Concert."

Concert goers ripped up a protective blanket and threw torn-out chunks of sod on each other between sets by Guns N' Roses, Ice-T with Body Count and Metallica. The bands reportedly paid $50,000 to cover the damage.

Head groundskeeper Mark Razum said the field would be playable by Tuesday night, when the A's are to host the Texas Rangers. But he said there could be some bad bounces.

"It's just a big hassle. The last homestand will be a little rough, but it should be OK by the playoffs," Razum said.

The A's are one victory away from clinching the AL West title. The first playoff game at the Coliseum would be on Oct. 10.

Regular groundskeeper David Madeiros was upset by the damage.

"It's a sad thing," Madeiros said. "This was an awesome field. This was the best field in baseball. Ask any player," he said.

About 62,000 people attended the concert. Oakland Coliseum executive Robert Quintella said the damage was intentional but not malicious.

"It was just a big game out there, you know, like how kids start a food fight."

Guerrero's move is best for Texas

Lena Guerrero's decision to step down as chairman of the Texas Railroad Commission in the wake of revelations that she had misrepresented herself for a dozen years as an honors graduate of the University of Texas was a wise move, both for the people of Texas and Guerrero's political future.

The decision she announced Thursday, which included her acknowledgement that she will remain as the Democratic Party's nominee for the seat on the Railroad Commission in the November General Election, will remove her from the commission — and, no doubt she hopes, from the political hot-seat Guerrero has been on the past few weeks. Oilman Barry Williamson of Dallas, Guerrero's Republican Party opponent, says her character will remain an issue in the contest, as well it should.

Gov. Ann Richards is consulting with her staff and other Railroad Commission members to determine whether she should appoint a replacement for Guerrero before the November election. But Richards, who appointed Guerrero to a vacant seat on the commission shortly after taking office nearly two years ago, should not appoint a replacement at this time. With only a little more than five weeks remaining before the Nov. 3 election, naming a replacement for Guerrero would be a political exercise. Both of the other commission members — Jim Nugent and Bob Krueger — are experienced and capable public servants who can handle the commission's regulatory workload until the election.

Once the voters of Texas have made their decision on who should fill the position on the commission, then Gov. Richards certainly should appoint that individual to the RRC so the new commissioner can begin to assist Nugent and Krueger.

The Guerrero incident is another indication of the standard to which public servants in this nation must adhere. Ms. Guerrero has now admitted her misrepresentations about her scholastic achievements at UT and receiving a degree from that institution. As we've noted before, there is no shame in her not having completed her degree; numerous others are in the same boat with her.

But in allowing her staff to promulgate the erroneous fact, Ms. Guerrero displayed a flaw in her character. Now the voters of Texas must determine whether they want a person with such a flaw in public office.

Richards' political glitter may wear off

For nearly two years, Gov. Ann Richards has ridden the crest of her political popularity, buoyed by her witty remarks about George Bush and Midland oilman Clayton Williams Jr. She has relished in the fruits of that popularity and now is even mentioned as a possible future presidential contender.

However, it's time for Political Lesson No. 1 and that is: Lena Guerrero.

After the former chairman of the Texas Railroad Commission came under fire for repeatedly lying about the college degree she never received from The University of Texas, Richards stood stalwartly beside Guerrero until the very last. It appeared to be a noble gesture.

In reality, however, the Guerrero appointment and degree episode will likely come back to haunt the silver-haired governor. She can't escape the political reality that she is only as credible as the people she appoints to positions in her administration. And the Guerrero incident illustrates that Gov. Richards is far too long on personal friendship and far too short on dotting the i's and crossing the t's of good government. It showed she doesn't always do her homework, just as Guerrero wasn't sure how many hours of college credit she had completed.

Of course, it wasn't that Guerrero didn't earn her degree. The entire complaint is that she lied about her college standing . . . repeatedly . . . and in doing so, deceived the people of the state.

There's no question that Richards has a knack for playing to the cameras and coming across with one-liners that leave her political opponents sizzling. That makes politics a little more fun for the masses, and no doubt for the politicians.

But cute quips and motorcycle photographs only go so far. We'd like to see what happens when the luster wears off and we might just be getting a glimpse of that now.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, Sept. 27, the 271st day of 1992. There are 95 days left in the year. Rosh Hashana, the Jewish New Year, begins at sunset.

Today's highlight in history:

Fifty years ago, on Sept. 27, 1942, Glenn Miller and his Orchestra performed together for the last time, at the Central Theater in Passaic, N.J., before Miller's entry into the U.S. Army. The band's selections included "In the Mood," "American Patrol," "The Star-Spangled Banner," and, of course, "Moonlight Serenade."

On this date:

In 1779, John Adams was named to negotiate the Revolutionary War's peace terms with Britain.

Elderly, savers oppose low interest rates

WASHINGTON — George Bush states he doesn't know anybody who is against low interest rates. William Seidman, the former chief regulator of the banking industry during the Bush administration, brands that as one of "the most asinine statements I've ever heard."

Anderson

"The old people have had their savings robbed to benefit the banks, to boost the banks profits," says Seidman. "They have taken the money from the old people and the savers and put it on the bottom line of the banks. The Federal Reserve is reducing interest rates far below where they would be in normal markets."

Seidman hails low rates as a boon to the balance sheets of beleaguered businesses and borrowers. But he terms the earnings evaporation facing the elderly as "an emerging political issue" — one that is inflamed by record bank profits. The nation's 11,685 banks have earned nearly $16 billion through June of this year, a windfall owing to the lowest rates paid to depositors in generations.

All money decisions flow from the Federal Reserve Board, which despite its vaunted independence, Seidman regards historically as one of the most politically driven institutions in Washington. He doesn't chalk off to coincidence the fact that there have been three reductions this year alone in the federal funds rate — nor does he spare his sometime tennis partner and friend Alan Greenspan from criticism.

Seidman says the Fed chairman has shown uncommon charity in letting rates drop to avoid being "blamed if Bush loses" this November. "What the Fed is doing, and George Bush loves it, is setting low short-term interest rates. The Fed is complying with the administration," Seidman says.

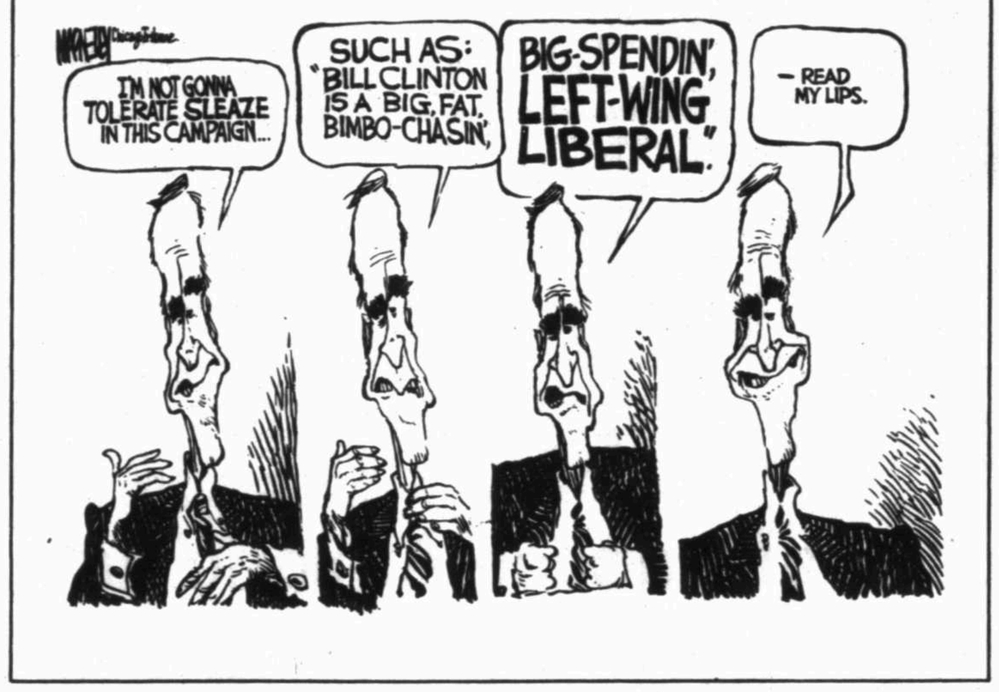

These are the ruminations of a lifelong Republican, not the rabid rantings of a wild-eyed liberal. Nearly a year after departing as the chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., from which he managed the crisis and clean up of failed banks and S&Ls, Seidman took White House officials to the woodshed during a recent interview with us. Nonetheless, he expects to vote for Bush, despite serving as an informal adviser to Ross Perot earlier this summer.

The Bush administration made another politically tinged decision recently by opposing heftier hikes in the insurance premiums banks pay to the deposit insurance fund, agreeing to only half the amount proposed by regulators last May.

Seidman enthusiastically embraces the eleventh-hour compromise hammered out by Acting FDIC Chairman Andrew Hove, who fought off Treasury efforts to nix any increase this election year. So long as the economy doesn't slip into another recession, Seidman is optimistic about the future of the FDIC and the industry.

In the meantime, the elderly are on their own. "Every saver, every Gray Panther, everybody who has their money in the bank is damn well against low interest rates," Seidman claims. "It's their accounts that are being paid at a third of what they got a couple of years ago. There's been a huge transfer of wealth here."

WILLIAM SAFIRE

The Iraqgate scandal cover-up continues

CHICAGO — Some realistic Senate Republicans, aghast at the prospect of Mario Cuomo or Robert Morgenthau as attorney general, have decided that it would be better to have a non-partisan special prosecutor look into the Iraqgate scandal. That was why they are joining Carl Levin, a Democrat, and Bill Cohen, a Republican, in backing that law's extension.

Safire

I believe a grand jury will be empaneled next year to probe James Baker's backdoor financing of Saddam Hussein's war machine. It will take sworn testimony about how Agriculture, Commerce and State and White House officials lied to Congress, altered and shredded evidence, and conspired to conceal these acts.

That Iraqgate grand jury will target Attorneys General Dick Thornburgh and William Barr and their henchpersons to determine if — influenced by Secretary James A. Baker III and Brent Scowcroft, in the furtherance of Bush's infamous National Security Directive 26 — they obstructed justice.

I could be wrong; Iraqgate could be swept under the rug, just as Barr has tried to do in refusing Congress' call for independent counsel.

But if my conjecture is accurate, here are a few of the lines of inquiry the grand jury will pursue:

1. After it became known that Iraqi officials were stealing from our grain financing, did Baker and Scowcroft — with the intent of resuming sales to a corrupt and non-creditworthy borrower — prevent public disclosure of the suspension of the program?

The Senate Agriculture Committee chairman, Pat Leahy, this week obtained the answer to a question I submitted 30 months ago. "Fear of offending the Iraqis," he writes, "... motivated the Department of State and National Security Council from announcing a suspension." Evidence: Alan Raul, the Agriculture counsel, wrote on April 2, 1990, that State had asked that Agriculture "not use the term 'suspend.' ..."

Notes taken by a Treasury official reveal that one month later "Scowcroft called (Agriculture Secretary Clayton) Yeutter and asked him not to put out press release today saying terminating program."

2. As part of a conspiracy to conceal the misdirection of funds, did government officials conceal or shred documents?

"Our research indicates," writes Leahy, "that General Scowcroft also sent a letter about the Iraqi GSM program to Secretary Yeutter that day. USDA has not provided us with any such document." Yeutter is suspected of taking this evidence of intervention with him to his White House sinecure.

On evidence suppression, a grand jury will ask: In the FBI raid on Atlanta's Lavoro bank, were the visitors' sign-in book and the branch manager's desk calendar seized? If so, were they destroyed or mislaid?

3. In their campaign to "build a wall" to keep the investigation from stopping the flow of funds to Baghdad, did Bush administration officials influence Atlanta prosecutors?

Although Barr has generously forgiven the White House for two improper calls to the harassed prosecutor, a less partisan investigator will ask White House counsel Boyden Gray: Did he know of the first call, yet permit another inquiry from on high into a local criminal prosecution?

Baker will be asked: How many times did his lawyers call Atlanta to discover prosecutorial intent? Did he receive reports of these repeated intercessions? Did he use his inside knowledge of a criminal case to induce Yeutter to ignore his fiduciary responsibility?

Coverup-General Barr will be asked, among much else: Why did the prosecutor, Gail McKenzie, tell Thomas Baxter of the Federal Reserve to butt out of her prosecution? Who then prevailed on Treasury to tell the New York Fed chief, E. Gerald Corrigan, that this politically sensitive investigation was none of the Fed's business?

Quite a case. Can't wait.

William Safire's column is distributed by New York Times News Service.

RUSSELL BAKER

'Affordable housing' can't work in New York

NEW YORK — Susan T. of Amsterdam Avenue is interested in "affordable housing." Her curiosity was piqued by Donald Trump a few months back when he was talking about one of those grandiose many-thousand-unit housing projects that engage the world's Trumps.

Baker

At that time Trump said that, if the public would subsidize it, he would include "affordable housing" in this Babylon planned for Manhattan's West Side. Just a moment, my good Trump, said Susan T. (Here I paraphrase her letter to me.) What's this with the "affordable housing"?

Was the master builder telling us that those thousands of other apartments to be built, the unsubsidized ones, would be unaffordable? If so, what is the point of building apartments people can't afford?

Ms. T. says these are probably designed for the same people who can't afford health insurance and medical care either. Here, regrettably, she betrays a cynical spirit, resulting perhaps from an impecunious condition which denies her the benefits of the most advanced medical science.

Is my suspicion correct, Susan T.? If so, stop giving in to this sour envy simply because some of your fellow creatures are young enough, healthy enough, employed enough and rich enough to afford health insurance.

President Bush has suggested that if Congress would only cut the capital gains tax, the impecunious would soon be back at work fully capable of feeding the health-insurance octopus and the liver bile of all would once again flow at the rate of four pints a day, and so forth.

Admittedly, the president is sometimes wrong, but optimism, no matter how foolish, does more to brighten the day than an embittered spirit, Ms. T. Read your Voltaire: "Candide." All is for the best in this best of all possible health-care and unaffordable-housing situations.

As for "affordable housing," let's all hope Trump does not build any in Manhattan, for few things are more galling to New Yorkers than the suspicion that someone they know has an affordable apartment.

Everyone in Manhattan — well, almost everyone — lives in space so ridiculously unaffordable that he is ashamed to tell visitors from out of town how unaffordable it is.

He hears tales of affordable housing in Manhattan and sometimes meets someone who is rumored to live in it, but he cannot afford to believe it. Believing it would be emotionally unbearable.

What sustains the New Yorker's civility is the conviction that there is no affordable housing. He clings to this conviction despite documentary evidence that here and there rent control still preserves a two-bedroom apartment renting for less than $2,000 per month.

In my New York career, I occasionally heard stories of such people and hated them, not just sprouting tusks but frothing noisily.

It was maddening to think of people who had not only settled in New York to enjoy the theater and the opera and the ballet and the fine restaurants, but also had enough money left after paying the rent to go to the theater, the opera, the ballet and fine restaurants.

What made New York life tolerable was the certainty that such people and such housing existed only in malicious rumor and that all those people at the theaters, opera, ballet and restaurants were from New Jersey.

If the existence of New Yorkers with affordable apartments were confirmed, the rage of injustice created by evidence of such unjust privilege might provoke levels of violence that would repel even the National Rifle Association.

In short, Susan T., Trump's offer to build some affordable housing if the public will only subsidize him is the ultimate in developer chutzpah. Not only does he threaten to create a privileged class that will put New Yorkers into raging flights of envy — no, not content with that threat — he also says New Yorkers will have to pay for it.

Only in America, as Shakespeare said, can a man go so swiftly from dura[illegible]ce-free debtor's penury to mastery of unaff[illegible]rdable housing. Read your Bard, Ms. T.: "O brave new world that has such people in't!" — "The Tempest."

United Way needs city's support

By "Marshal" Jess Parrish

Jess Parrish, former president of Midland College, is 1992 campaign chairman of United Way of Midland.

It's tough out there, and no one knows it better than the 17 United Way agencies who give support to 36,000 Midlanders. Every day they fight to defend their clients from the Hopeless Gang — hunger, abuse, homelessness, illiteracy and drugs. But it will take support from a lot of people to win this gunbattle.

United Way of Midland is deputizing folks to help out. They have kicked off the 1992-93 campaign with the goal of raising $2,755,000 to help people in this community. As "Marshall" of this effort, I'm rounding up all the people I can find for my posse to run the Hopeless Gang out of this territory.

"How the West is Won . . . The United Way" is the campaign theme because we know Midlanders will continue their tradition of pulling together and helping each other. When Midland was just getting started, people survived only by being united — whether it was helping each other after a disaster or standing shoulder to shoulder in a fire brigade.

Each year the agencies tell of numerous success stories of people who have fought the Hopeless Gang and won. It's stories like Dolores Duran who volunteered at Casa de Amigos and gained enough confidence to seek a job, or volunteers like Bob Corley who helps youngsters going through the judicial system, or a Boy Scout like Barney McCasland IV who became blind through a near-fatal choking accident but rejoined a Boy Scout troop, or Dee and Jennifer Davis who have helped make a big difference in the life of Little Brother DeQuane.

The Hopeless Gang has been trying to destroy those successes and tear down United Way. The truth is that 99 cents out of every dollar stays in Midland to help Midlanders. And the one cent that leaves is returned many times in services from United Way of America.

And our agencies are as listed: American Red Cross; Big Brothers/Big Sisters; Boy Scouts of America, Buffalo Trail Council; Boys and Girls Club of Midland; Camp Fire Boys and Girls; Casa de Amigos which includes Citywide Community Services; Community and Senior Services; Family Services of Midland, including Permian Basin Child Abuse Prevention Program; Freewill Foster Home; Midland Need to Read; Midland/Lee Youth Centers, Inc.; Midland Rape Crisis Center; Palmer Drug Abuse Program; Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children; Permian Basin Girl Scouts; Salvation Army; and YMCA youth programs.

Tough times are not new to Midland. This city was started in tough times and has survived many other perils. But it took all of us pulling together to make it. And that's what it will take in this campaign if United Way is to reach its goal. We will look down every alley, under every bush, behind every locoweed for those dollars. But we can win this gunfight.

Saddle up and join my posse. Let's show everyone how the western spirit of giving and cooperation still thrives in Midland. It's how the West is won in Midland . . . the United Way.

Teacher wants MHS to keep up its spirits

I witnessed an amazing spectacle on a recent Friday night at the Midland High vs. Andrews football game in Andrews. The scoreboard read 47-7 late in the fourth quarter — not in MHS' favor — and the crowd should have been desolate. Not so, however. The sizable crowd cheered enthusiastically, dauntlessly supporting their young men on the field. The cheerleaders, drill team, and band all performed as if victory were imminent; and their spirit was infectious.

Keep up the good work, MHS fans! I have the privilege of teaching several of the MHS football players. They are young men of character and determination who represent their school well. With their fans' continued support and the guidance of our talented coaching staff, I am confident that better days in the win-/loss column lie ahead.

Woman tells problems with coaches' actions

On Friday, Sept. 11, I went to my first Lee football game and while I enjoyed the football, I was thoroughly appalled at the behavior of the coaches.

Example: the defense had made a mistake; the defensive coordinator/coach was so mad that he was berating the players — one player in particular. He had his face very close the the player and was screaming at him. I cannot lip read so don't know what he was saying but I'm sure if I could I would have buried my face in shame. There was another coach who was screaming like a banshee. Don't these people know that the old adage "You catch more flies with honey than with vinegar" still holds true?

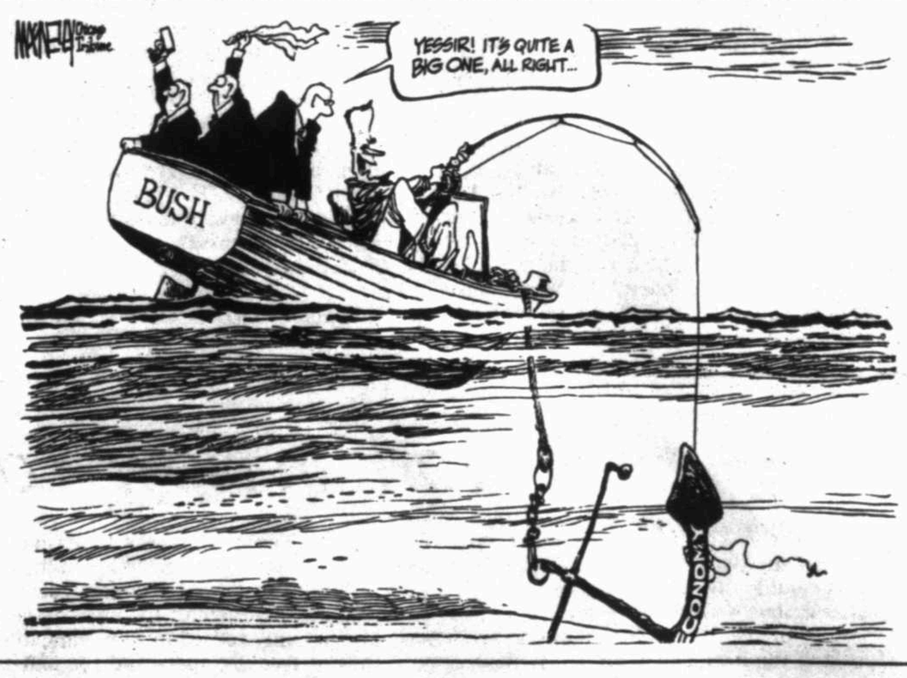

These are formative years for the young people. Good sportsmanship is an asset they learn from good coaches.

While I am not saying that the coaches aren't good, what I am saying is that profanity in any way, shape or form is not allowed (see the student handbook); belittling a student and taking away his dignity is also definitely a no-no.

I don't have a son playing football, thank goodness. Do the parents of these players not care that their children are being robbed of their dignity or are they just so intent that winning is everything that they could care less about the feelings of their sons?

I am told that this is the norm in all sports, that cussing and belittling is done all the time. I feel that if the students have to live by the rules and regulations in the student handbook, why not the coaches?

Guerrero probably just made a mistake

Poor Lena Guerrero, she's been getting a lot of bad press lately. Which is unusual for a liberal Democrat, especially one hand picked and appointed by our "White Hot Mama" of a governor, Ann Richards.

I can just imagine Lena's surprise and "gasp" embarrassment when she found out that not only was she not a member of Phi Beta Kappa but to add insult to injury, Lena didn't graduate from college either. For 12 long years she mistakenly believed she was an honor graduate of The University of Texas.

Now some folks out there are asking how could anyone make such a dumb mistake? Some are saying that Lena is just plain dishonest. You people out there (and you know who you are), need to quit casting those stones and remember mistakes happen, even things like forgetting to graduate from college and thinking that you're a member of an honor society like Phi Beta Kappa. So what ifPhi Beta Kappa doesn't honor journalism students, is that important?

I'm sure she thought the diploma and sorority key were in the mail; remember Austin is a big town, some things take time. And as for thinking she's dishonest, shame on ya'll for even thinking such a mean thing. Queen Ann wouldn't appoint someone to a high political office that would tell us an untruth. Now would she?

With our freedoms come responsibility

I would like to add my opinion to the "residency flap" article in the Reporter-Telegram Tuesday, Sept. 22.

Some people are missing the point. As American citizens, we have many freedoms and we are able to choose where we live and where we send our kids to college, but with these freedoms come responsibilities. We don't choose whether or not we stop at a stop sign. We don't choose whether or not we pay our taxes. If we don't agree with laws, we go through proper channels and change them. We can't pick and choose which rules to obey.

Our students have not been given the option to choose their schools. I, my husband, two brothers, one sister, three sisters-in-law, two brothers-in-law, two nieces and one nephew all graduated from Lee High School. I now live closer to Lee than I did when I went to school there, but we are in the Midland High District. My oldest son attends Midland Freshman High School. This wasn't necessarily my choice, but we weren't told we had an option.

We need to teach our children that whether we like it or not, we have to follow rules all our lives. We don't need to teach them to deceive anyone for their own purposes. Rules are fair if they apply to all.

I support the men who have taken action on rumors that have been going around for a long time. I hope these questions can be resolved and everyone can live with the results.

Trustee hopes parents will accept retraction

In the article "MISD board: 3 athletes can't play" in the Sept. 24 Reporter-Telegram you quote me directly as saying, " 'For years people have talked about cheating going on. It has to stop,' Willis said. 'What angers me is when a family will lie for a kid. We should be teaching integrity and values to these students — at home and at school. We can't knowingly allow this to go on without facing UIL enacting sanctions.' "

Further you quoted me directly as saying, " 'I feel for the families and the kids (denied Rebel participation),' Willis said. 'But we have to play fair rather than run the risk of disqualifying an entire team's effort. Playing fair doesn't hurt anybody. Playing unfair can hurt a bunch of people.' "

The same article also names these Midland students and their families in regard to board of education action regarding eligibility to participate in athletics. Some members of the Midland community are interpreting my comments as reported in your article as directly accusing the three named families and their students of being liars, cheats, and playing unfair.

Please accept this retraction. I, Gary Willis, did not mean to infer or say that Mrs. Watters, Lance Watters, Mr. and Mrs. Thurman, John Thurman, Mr. and Mrs. Acosta, or Benny Acosta are liars cheats and playing unfair.

Woman appreciates Opportunity Knocks

As volunteer coordinator for Chaparral Corps of Midland College, I was fortunate during the developmental stages to have the assistance of Opportunity Knocks, a newly established committee of Junior League of Midland, Inc.

Opportunity Knocks was created to assist other non-profit community agencies and organizations in Midland with short term help for their projects.

I would like to sincerely thank Susan South and her committee including Gretchen Bakke, Kay Bynum and Ellen Hinson. Their expertise and enthusiasm were extremely beneficial and helpful.

Stanton woman tires of hearing presidential lies

Well, it looks like the Bush-wackers are at it again. I thought I had heard the worst of lies and sleaze in the campaigns of 1984 and 1988, but that was nothing to compare to what's going on in the Bush arena now! In listening to the Bush and Quayle outpouring on family values and morality, I have to wonder if either think of the children, mothers and fathers, grandparents too, who are buried in mass graves in Panama — put there by Bush's cold war, or so called "just cause." I would think those hundreds of innocent people had family values. Only one grave has been opened by the efforts of Ramsey Clark, exposing 127 bodies. I'm sure the other graves will never be found because the corrupt, money-laundering heads of government wouldn't allow it.

Of course, this abuse is not as great as the devastation in Iraq in destroying the electric plants and water treatment facilities, which have caused massive civilian untold misery — especially among young children. A Harvard medical team visited the area and reported that children under 1 year old suffered from severe diarrhea and dehydration. Also, 170,000 under the age of 5 years will die from cholera, typhoid, malnutrition and gastroenteritis because of poor hygiene, contaminated water and lack of medical supplies — all that suffering in addition to the bombing of civilian vehicles on highways and dwellings. How can anyone call such needless slaughter a "just cause!"

It has always amazed me that intelligent people such as we have in our great country can be brainwashed into believing such lies and propaganda as put out by greedy, power-hungry individuals before the Gulf War, creating a wave of hatred that I couldn't believe. In 12 years we have had four unnecessary invasions, causing the degradation of other countries and the slaughter of thousands of innocent human beings (including thousands of our young men), spending billions of dollars . . . and please tell me for what?

Our economy is shot, our industries are moving to greener pastures, our debt is incomprehensible — and now after 12 years Mr. GoodWrench wants four more years to fix our woes. Do we want the same old game played on us again?

Man wonders about 'get involved' slogan

Midland County Precinct 3 County Commissioner candidate Jo Ann Carr's campaign slogan "Get Involved" raises serious questions.

Just when do you get involved?

Do you "Get Involved" and seek political office when your spouse is employed as a sectional administrator and serves on the budgetary committee which you will fund?

Or do you "Get Involved" and vote only when your spouse again is a candidate for sheriff. Inquiry with the election administration will reveal her last ballot cast was during her spouse's campaign for sheriff.

And when do you "Get Involved" and change parties, when you cannot carry your former party's ticket? Mrs. Carr has voted as a Democrat.

It is evident Mrs. Carr only "Gets Involved" when she has a vested interest.

I believe it is time to "Get out the vote" and re-elect Ms. Louisa Valencia to the commissioners court.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Everything, everybody with 'Dixie' in its name is offensive

I certainly agree with all those who protested the playing of "Dixie" at a football game in the new Georgia Dome.

Although slavery isn't mentioned in the song it still makes people think of the Old South where every white person owned African American slaves.

Grizzard

"Dixie" is definitely a politically incorrect piece of music. Even the word is offensive to some, and I apologize to those who are offended by my use of it.

But I'm proud to say my alma mater, the University of Georgia, whose current football team has come down with a major case of fumbleitis, years ago rid itself of any connection with the song or the word you-know-what (see I didn't use the word that time, I despise offending people).

The Georgia band used to play the song at football games. But not anymore. The only place they still play the song is at the University of Mississippi.

They also wave Confederate flags and they allow prayer before a football game.

I'm not certain how long it will be before members of the Speech Police move in and shut down such reprehensible behavior, but it could be any day now — or at least a couple of days after President Clinton's inauguration.

Georgia not only stopped playing the song, it even changed the name of the band, formerly known as the Dixie Redcoat Band. It became simply the Redcoat Band.

That prompted my stepbrother, Ludlow Porch, the famous radio talk show personality, to fire off a letter to the editor suggesting the following:

"I applaud the dropping of 'Dixie' from the name of the University of Georgia band, but let us not stop there.

"How can we allow the word 'red,' which stands for communism? And what about the word 'redcoat' itself, which is an affront to the memory of all those Americans who fought against the Redcoats in the Revolutionary War?

"And, 'band.' Pancho Villa had a 'band' of desperados and we had to send brave young soldiers into Mexico after him. So, 'band' should go, too, and that just leaves 'the,' which is a dumb name for a large number of musicians, so I guess they're just out of a name altogether."

I believe if we really try we can wipe away all symbols of the Old South forever.

There's a company in Savannah called Dixie Crystals Sugar. Sorry, it's just Crystal Sugar from now on, and don't give me any grief about it.

There's also a Dixie Freight Lines, which heretofore will be known as Freight Lines. And there's even a Dixie Highway in the South. It should be referred to from now on only as Highway. As in, "Well, you take Highway, then go down three blocks and. . . ."

There are even some people named Dixie, believe it or not. They will have to get new first names or go by their middle names. And if anybody named Dixie lives on Dixie Highway and worked for Dixie Freight Line the Speech Police will likely demand they be shot.

And if the song and word "Dixie" are symbolic of the Old South, I guess we ought to stop using "Old South" as well.

Instead of saying "Old South" perhaps we can refer to it as "Back Then," and we can roll our eyes when we use it so everybody will know we aren't talking about when dinosaurs roamed the earth, but when slave holders used to go around singing songs like "Dixie."

Rap songs about killing innocent people, incidentally, are just fine.

Arizona puts scare in Miami before falling 8-7

Associated Press

MIAMI — Steve McLaughlin was barely wide right with a 51-yard field goal on the final play, and top-ranked Miami survived its closest call at the Orange Bowl since 1985 to beat the Wildcats 8-7.

Arizona (1-2-1) was a 27-point underdog.

The Hurricanes (3-0) nearly succumbed to missed tackles, missed field goals and a running game that was also missing. Miami's only touchdown — and the game's final points — came on Gino Torretta's 2-yard pass to Dietrich Clausell with 3:50 left in the third quarter.

Arizona forced a punt and took over at its 35 with 3:38 left. The Wildcats moved to the Miami 35 but chose to run just one play — a quarterback sneak — in the final minute before lining up for McLaughlin's kick.

The sophomore's attempt was straight and had plenty of distance but was just wide.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Freshman Tamarick Vanover returned his first collegiate kickoff 96 yards and also caught an 18-yard touchdown pass to lead third-ranked Florida State to an Atlantic Coast Conference victory over Wake Forest.

Sean Jackson added an 88-yard touchdown run — the third longest from scrimmage in Florida State history — as the Seminoles completed their first month in the ACC by outscoring their league opponents by a 141-61 margin.

The Seminoles (4-0, 4-0) missed several other scoring opportunities in their tuneup for next week's game at top-ranked Miami. The schools will meet for the third straight year with both carrying undefeated records.

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Reggie Brooks rushed for 205 yards and scored three touchdowns on rain-softened turf as sixth-ranked Notre Dame crushed Purdue.

The Irish (3-0-1) battered the Boilermakers all game with a potent running attack that gained 458 yards. Notre Dame finally exploded for three TDs in the third quarter after a steady drizzle lifted.

Brooks rushed 63 yards for a touchdown on the second play of a 35-second drive that gave the Irish a 21-0 lead. Jerome Bettis ran 24 yards on the next possession, bringing a quick end to a 43-second drive that began after the Irish forced Purdue (1-2) to punt from its 1.

The Crimson Tide (4-0) won its 14th straight game despite an anemic offense, drawing jeers from the home fans after managing only a 6-0 lead on two field goals by Michael Proctor through three periods.

Boos turned to cheers when Palmer, who was suspended following two drunken-driving arrests, took a punt at the 37 and broke free along the right sideline for a touchdown with 8:18 left.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Johnny Majors' return to the Tennessee head coaching helm was a successful one as the No. 8 Volunteers pounded Cincinnati.

Majors, who missed the first three games while recovering from heart bypass surgery, wore a headset and coached the team from the press box. Philip Fulmer, the interim coach during Majors' absence, ran things on the sideline.

Heath Shuler accounted for two touchdowns and Shawn Summers returned a punt 77 yards for another for Tennessee (4-0).

The Vols were not especially sharp on offensive, but won with defense and special teams play — both theirs and Cincinnati's.

Tennessee's leading rusher was Aaron Hayden, even though he didn't get a carry until the fourth quarter.

No. 10 Colorado 28, Iowa 12

BOULDER, Colo. — Freshman Koy Detmer threw three second-half touchdown passes and linebacker Ron Woolfork tied a school record with five sacks, leading 10th-ranked Colorado past Iowa.

Detmer, who rescued the Buffaloes (4-0) with two TD passes in the second half of last week's 21-20 comeback victory over Minnesota, replaced struggling Kordell Stewart at the start of the second half.

With 9:46 left in the third period, Detmer, the younger brother of 1990 Heisman Trophy winner Ty Detmer, nimbly sidestepped the pass rush and hit tight end Christian Fauria on a 10-yard TD throw to put Colorado ahead 14-6.

No. 11 UCLA 35, No. 21 San Diego St. 7

PASADENA, Calif. — Daron Washington and Kevin Williams scored touchdowns in the opening four minutes of play and 11th-ranked UCLA shut down Marshall Faulk and No. 21 San Diego State.

Faulk, who gained 519 yards in San Diego State's first two games this season, was limited to 118 yards on 23 carries by the Bruins, who have a 15-0-1 record against the Aztecs (1-1-1).

Faulk gained only 54 yards on 20 carries before breaking loose for a 46-yard scoring run with 10:51 left in the game to keep San Diego State from being shut out for the first time since 1985.

No. 15 Nebraska 45, Arizona St. 24

LINCOLN, Neb. — Nebraska took advantage of five Arizona State turnovers, including tackle Bruce Moore's 54-yard interception return for a touchdown, to beat the Sun Devils.

The Cornhuskers (3-1) rebounded from last week's 29-14 loss to No. 2 Washington. Arizona State, which had seven turnovers against Nebraska in an 18-9 loss a year ago, dropped to 1-2.

Nebraska used a pair of turnovers to build a 24-10 halftime lead.

Associated Press

DALLAS — Dan Freiburger threw two touchdown passes and the Southern Methodist Mustangs ended six years of frustration with an emotional 21-9 victory over the Texas Christian on Saturday.

The victory snapped SMU's 25-game Southwest Conference losing streak. The Mustangs, 3-1 overall and 1-0 in SWC play, hadn't won a league game since Nov. 15, 1986 at Texas Tech.

The three straight victories since a season-opening loss to Tulane also is the school's best since 1986. SMU was just one loss short of tying the SWC record for futility set by Rice in 1981-86.

TCU, 0-2-1 and 0-1, remains winless under new coach Pat Sullivan.

Freiburger rallied the Mustangs in the second half, completing a 13-yard pass to James Whitmore to set up an 11-yard touchdown run by Kevin Shepard that gave SMU a 14-9 lead.

The Mustangs made it 21-9 on their next possession as Freiburger completed a 32-yard pass to Korey Beard and a 9-yard scoring pass to Mick Rossley, who fell in the end zone before getting up for the catch.

Freiburger, a senior, had a career-best day, completing 31 of 51 passes for 372 yards.

No. 4 Michigan crushes UH, 61-7

Associated Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — It took just 12 seconds for Michigan's Tyrone Wheatley to begin a rout of Houston.

Wheatley returned the opening kickoff 99 yards for a touchdown and the fourth-ranked Wolverines scored 35 points in the second quarter in a 61-7 romp over the Cougars on Saturday.

It matched the record yield by Houston, which was beaten 61-14 by Texas Tech in 1954.

Todd Collins, making his second straight start in place of injured Elvis Grbac, threw four touchdown passes for the Wolverines (2-0-1). The defense, led by safety Shonte Peoples, forced Houston (1-2) into three turnovers.

Collins, who completed 17 of 24 passes for 205 yards with one interception, had TD tosses of 18 and 23 yards to tight end Tony McGee, hooked up with freshman Mercury Hayes for a 43-yard score, and threw a 12-yard strike to Jesse Johnson. Wheatley, who missed last week's game with a groin injury, also scored on a 7-yard run.

Jay Riemersma, a redshirt freshman, threw a 14-yard TD pass to freshman Amani Toomer in the fourth quarter, and Ed Davis scored from 11 yards.

Jimmy Klingler threw a 25-yard TD pass to Ron Peters with 3:42 left in the game.

The Cougars alternated Donald Douglas and Klingler at quarterback in their run-and-shoot offense. Both were hurried repeatedly by Michigan's blitzing defense.

TECH: Raiders visit College Station next week in the first half.

"I think everything came together tonight," Morris said of the Red Raiders' offensive and defensive efforts. "It looked great and everybody did their jobs."

Robert Hall threw for 231 yards, completing 17-of-27 on the night, including a seven yard scoring strike to Bruce Hill in the third quarter, and a six-yarder to Derrell Mitchell in the fourth.

Tech placekicker Jon Davis added field goals of 27 and 38 yards, and Shawn Banks tackled Baylor quarterback J.J. Joe in the end zone to complete Tech's scoring.

Baylor running back Robert Strait and Joe scored on runs of 13 and two yards, and Trey Weir kicked a 27 yard field goal to account for the Bears' scoring.

Tech's first turnover in Baylor's end zone came with 2:12 left in the first quarter on a halfback option pass by Morris, a ball intercepted by the Bears' Scotty Lewis.

And with 9:30 left in the second quarter, Morris busted up the middle and fumbled into the end zone from the one yard. Baylor's Raynor Finley recovered the loose ball for a touchback.

"If you're not in control, you can lose confidence," Dykes said of Tech's ability to stay in the game even after the early turnovers. "You've got to have a lot of stick-ability to do that. We had a hard time in the first half in the scoring zone. My thoughts at the time were 'I hope it's not a case of here we go again.'"

Morris called his miscues a matter of miscommunication and the ball slipping out of his hand on the halfback pass.

Tech stopped what could have been a game-tying drive in the second quarter when Joe threw his first interception of the year, a pass intended for Melvin Bonner but picked up by Red Raider junior Donny Brooks.

"This kind of game gives you a chance to be a col.ender in the conference," Dykes said. "You lose your first two or three ball games, then all you're doing is playing for pride.

"This was a great team win. It was a lot of fun, especially after last week (Tech lost to Oregon, 16-13).

"We have a tough chore ahead of us next week against Texas A&M, and a tough road ahead of us, but this win will help us go a long way in helping us prepare for that."

Odessa Permian graduate Lloyd Hill moved into third place on the all-time Texas Tech receving chart with 1,504 career yards. Against Baylor, Hill grabbed nine passes for 90 yards.

"It's tough to end it this way (at Tech)," Teaff said. "We've always competed well with them and we have great respect for each other. But now, we're turning our eyes toward that juggernaut in Dallas, SMU. They're really coming on strong."

Tech's visit to Texas A&M next Saturday has been changed to a 12:10 p.m. kickoff to accommodate television. The game will be shown on Raycom, cable channel 5 locally.

Gardere breaks Layne record

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Texas quarterback Peter Gardere threw three touchdowns Saturday night to break Bobby Layne's 45-year-old school career record and carry the Longhorns to a 33-15 victory win over I-AA North Texas.

Gardere, who entered the game with 23 career touchdown passes, broke Layne's record on a 55-yard play to freshman wide receiver Lovell Pinkney with 5:25 left in the second quarter. His 26th touchdown followed TD throws of 14 and 9 yards.

The victory was Texas' first, lifting the Longhorns to 1-2, while North Texas fell to 1-3 in their third straight road game.

Gardere, a senior who has started since the fourth game of his freshman season, was 14 of 19 for 201 yards. He sat out most of the second half as freshman quarterback Shea Morenz made his debut. Morenz finished 5-of-9 for 65 yards, no touchdowns and one interception.

Gardere's first touchdown pass capped an 83-yard drive on the Longhorns' second possession when he flipped a 9-yarder to junior wide receiver Cosmo Palmieri — his first play of the season.

With four minutes gone in the second quarter, Gardere hit flanker Justin McLemore for a 14-yard touchdown that tied Layne's record.

Layne's 25 touchdown passes came between 1944 and 1947. The All American went on to a 15-year professional career, eight with the Detroit Lions. He also played with the Chicago Bears, New York Bulldogs and Pittsburgh Steelers.

Mike Adams returned a North Texas punt 59 yards for another touchdown, Texas' first punt return for a score since 1987, giving the Longhorns a 33-10 lead midway through the third quarter. But the point-after attempt was blocked, and Keith Wilkerson returned it for two points.

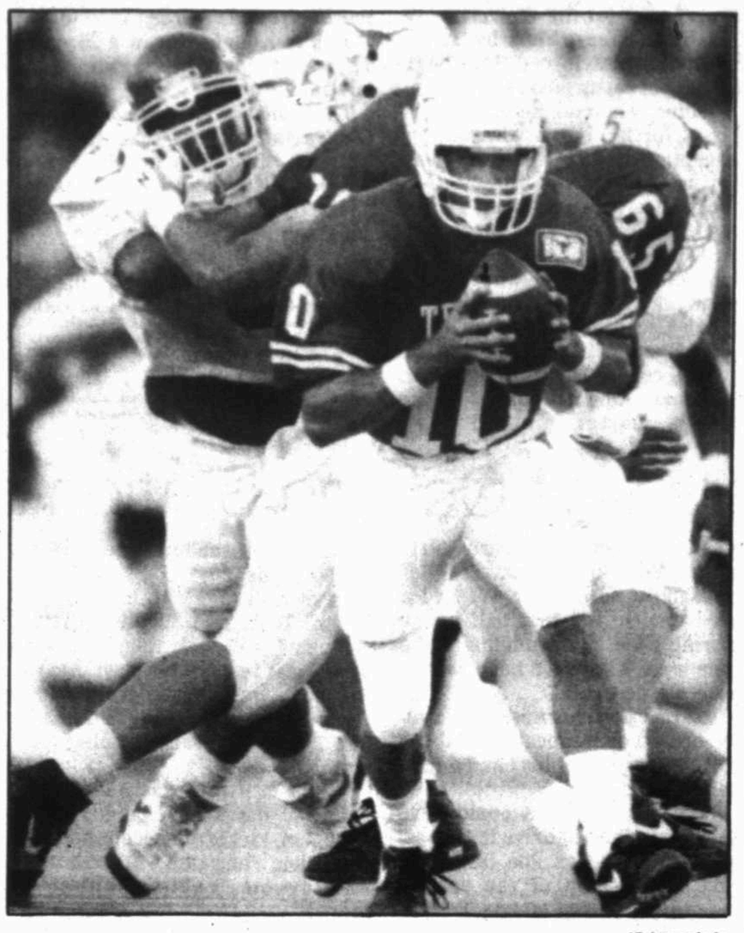

Texas kicker Scott Szeredy added field goals of 40 and 29 yards.

North Texas scored first on a 39-yard field goal by Richard DeFelice, after Gardere fumbled at his own 22 on a broken first play. DeFelice added a 24-yarder in the fourth quarter.

Running back Terrance Brown scored the Eagles' only touchdown on a 14-yard run early in the third quarter.

The Longhorns have won all six meetings with the North Texas, a series that began in 1976.

The victory also was John Mackovic's first at Texas and his 75th victory as a head coach — 45 with college teams and 30 with the NFL's Kansas City Chiefs.

Rice's Cobb shucks SHSU

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Rice's Trevor Cobb rushed for 223 yards and scored three touchdowns and Bert Emanuel christened his first college start with an 80-yard touchdown pass, leading the Owls to a 45-14 victory over Sam Houston State Saturday.

Emanuel, replacing injured Josh LaRocca, hit Louis Balady with his scoring bomb with 3:17 to play in the first quarter, giving Rice its first lead in a game this season after losses to the Air Force and Duke.

Rice scored the most points for an Owl team since a 55-0 victory over Virginia Military Institute in 1969. Sam Houston is 2-1.

Cobb, held to 187 yards in Rice's first two games, had 157 rushing yards and two touchdowns in helping the Owls to their 21-7 halftime lead. He finished with 23 carries and sat out the fourth quarter.

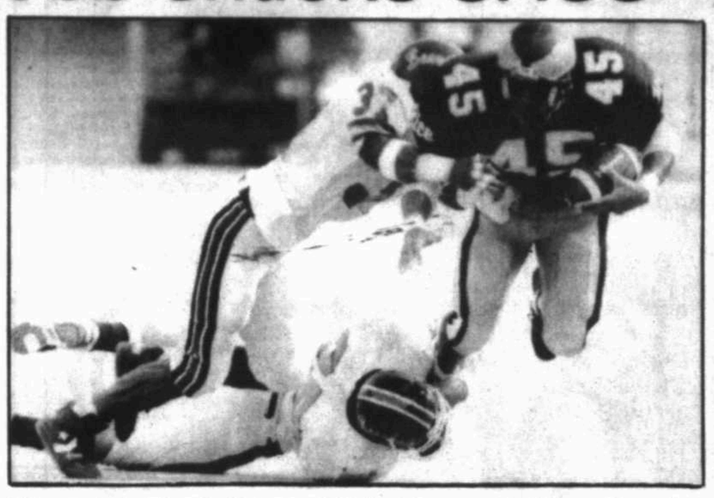

Rice's defense joined the scoring derby in the second half. Kerry Lewis returned a fumble by Charles Harris 63 yards for a touchdown and defensive end Michael Shirk returned an interception 46 yards in the fourth quarter.

Darrell Richardson kicked a 28-yard field goal and Cobb ran five yards for his final touchdown.

Cobb's first touchdown came on the first play of the second quarter when Emanuel rushed 14 yards and then lateraled to Cobb, trailing down the sidelines, for the final 28 yards.

The touchdown started a string of three touchdowns in a 1:13 span.

Sam Houston State scored on the first play of its next drive when Ashley Van Meter completed a 71-yard touchdown pass to Blake Vincent

Rice running back Trevor (45) Cobb smashed Sam Houston State for 223 yards and three touchdowns.

HAPPY: Some find happiness in American Dream; others in God

the potion, a guaranteed recipe for happiness. Each has only a fragment, a little knowledge of what works and doesn't in his or her own imperfect world.

"I've been poor and I've been rich. Rich is better." — vaudevillian Sophie Tucker.

LONGVIEW — At last, Robert Echols leans back from the dinner table. A contented sigh ripples up through his suspenders and spreads out in a smile over his hound-dog face.

Only the sharp blue eyes suggest a shrewd businessman. Tonight, basking in the afterglow of shrimp gumbo and bourbon, Echols is a kid again. He is running wild hogs and raising hell at the old homestead in Kildare Junction.

It was just his daddy and him, fishing and chasing rabbits and coaxing juicy watermelons from the wild east Texas ground. No women, electricity or running water. "Young man," his schoolteacher used to say, "you'll never be good for anything but ditch-digging."

Echols, now 51, pretended not to care. But inside, he took his matronly teacher's tsk-tsking as a challenge. "Before I was 10, I said to my dad, 'Dad, I'm gonna be a millionaire.' " And so he is, several times over.

He found his pot of gold in Amway Corp., a $3 billion direct sales company that markets soap and a variety of other consumer products through independent distributors who, like Echols and his wife, Ann, also recruit new distributors.

The worldwide network is identified with a zealous free enterprise philosophy and motivational meetings not unlike religious revivals. But the Echols aren't evangelists.

AP Laserphoto

Eloise Rose

"People think Amway is a cult or a huge group of cheerleaders," Mrs. Echols says "But it's not. It's just a bunch of people who have a common interest. It's just a vehicle to happiness."

Amway profits have paid for a palatial new home done in Architectural Digest white. Hard work has earned them a swimming pool, a boat and a few sporty cars for tooling around this old oil boomtown.

But do not misunderstand. "The money is not happiness. It's been wonderful," Echols says. "but what I've loved are the challenges, the people, the chance for personal growth in this corporation."

It's a long way from 1969, when he had two dozen W-2 forms and callouses from as many welding, pipe-cutting, carpentry and oil roughnecking jobs up and down the Mississippi River. Long a die-hard Democrat — "You might say socialistic, even communistic" — Echols was disillusioned with his union, "bitter at the system" and tired of sharing a 10-foot trailer home with his first wife, their four young kids and miscellaneous relatives.

The marriage was troubled, and his future looked bleak. He had no education or high-placed friends. Not even a decent set of clothes to wear on job interviews. Echols had nothing to lose when a friend asked him to an Amway recruitment meeting. "I figured I could earn a few extra bucks."

With Horatio Alger style, he did a lot more than that.

His wife looks on lovingly, a manicured vision, proud and protective of her husband, partner, friend. Like her pink sweater, the ballet slippers and coif, the Echols' capitalist dream nearly seems airbrushed to perfection.

The night has worn on, and the Echols are about talked out. Over a last cup of coffee, Echols leans forward to confide, "My son died of AIDS not long ago." The boisterous storyteller has vanished.

"He was 28," Mrs. Echols nearly whispers, "a beautiful boy."

"People blame their unhappiness on God, family, race, you name it. Like any of those things guarantee anything," Echols says. "There are no guarantees. Happiness is about how well you can rise up from your knees."

"It is wanting to know the end that makes us believe in God, or witchcraft, believe, at least, in something." — author Truman Capote.

NEW ORLEANS — At midday, the drapes are drawn in Eloise Rose's meticulous living room. Framed photos of young relatives smile out from atop the piano, the mantle, the coffee table — all of which are freshly dusted.

Miss Rose, as she is known to all, is a retired teacher whose home reflects her no-nonsense character right down to the plastic-covered ocher settee. She has never married, nor has she ever been alone.

"God is my companion," says Miss Rose, who looks a decade younger than her 77 years. She has been up since before dawn, talking to him as she does every day. "He is my happiness. Without him, there is no lasting peace.

"Those people on TV! I watch what they say and can't believe they're happy. Not too long ago, I think it was on Oprah, there were these couples who were into this — uh, what do they call it — swinging? It seems to me people go so far to find happiness. It's out of hand. Go back to the Bible."

It seems so basic, she says. But in this noisy world, the Word is harder and harder to hear, too often drowned out by cursing, angry voices, gunfire down the street. These are, she says, very troubling times.

But listen closely. There are voices like those raised each Sunday at New Zion Baptist Church. Miss Rose will have shed her plaid housedress. Gap-toothed children wear yellow ribbons in their hair.

SEARCH: Some draw satisfaction from exercising body, mind, soul

(From 1C)

Society are all in white: white hats, white dresses, white gloves. The men are in coat and tie; mostly older men, some of whose sons are hanging out at the nearby strip mall or in jail.

"We live in a society today where people feel, 'If I want it, I'll get it. And it doesn't matter how,'" Miss Rose says. "I'm close to a lot of the young people at church. And I tell them: 'Happiness isn't asking, expecting, grabbing. It's having faith. God has a plan.'"

"Society tells you that fulfillment comes from gaining material goods. But something deep inside you recognizes that there's got to be more to life. And that longing is the longing to love yourself." — TV host Oprah Winfrey.

GREENCASTLE, Pa. — The parking lot out back of the Quality Inn off Interstate 81 is jammed with pickup trucks and well-waxed Camaros at 6:15 on Monday night. Young people have come from miles around.

They've come not for a Kiwanis meeting or business seminar or to tip a drink at happy hour. Like Sheryl Unger, they've come for the weights and track and steam rooms at the Sports Inn health club.

The men are in sweatpants, weightlifters' belts, Stanley Kowalski-style sleeveless T-shirts and biceps made for all-star wrestling. They are draped here and there over free-weight racks, warming up and welcoming each other with high fives.

The women are mostly dressed in leotards, with headbands and blonde hair and tans purchased at a salon in the mall just down the road. Ms. Unger is taking back-to-back aerobics classes, staring determinedly into the mirror, keeping up with the instructor to the driving beat of a crossover rap song.

"It makes you feel better about yourself," says Ms. Unger, 31, who has trimmed a good few inches from her hips and thighs. "It's made me a lot happier. I mean, it's what most of us want, right? A perfect man and a perfect bod."

Ms. Unger, a wry and realistic office assistant, isn't fool enough to count on either. Even if she had both, she figures the perfect life still wouldn't be guaranteed. "I'd come up with some other problem. It's human nature," she says.

So she doesn't shoot for ideality. She draws satisfaction from herself in the here and now, by disciplining her body and setting sights high. Her best shot is good enough, though self-acceptance doesn't come easy.

"I'm a very insecure person," Ms. Unger admits. "A woman with no teeth could be standing next to me and I'd say she looks better than I do."

It's the self-esteem thing.

Gloria Steinem has brought it into vogue with a best-selling book. In California, they created a special government commission to promote it. Garry Trudeau has even lampooned it in his "Doonesbury" comic strip.

Ms. Unger believes there's something to all the talk. She is feeling closer to happiness than ever before. Having a body that is "toned, much stronger, more powerful" is part of it. And so is her fiance, a guy with the Incredible Hulk's pecs and a teddy bear's manner. But it's more than those things.

Working out has given Ms. Unger a sense of some control in an insecure world. Her biological clock may be ticking. The recession drags on, political upheaval continues, the environment's health seems in decline. She can do little about any of it.

But building a healthy, strong body is something she can do.

"Working out makes you feel like you're taking action. Even if you're not, you feel like you are," she says. "It's psychological. The world's problems don't go away, but you feel more focused, motivated, in control."

"You may be a rock star and you may work in Woolworth's, but you have to apply the truth to all your pursuits. To know yourself, you've got to let go of everything you've clung to." — singer Sinead O'Connor.

BIG SUR, Calif. — John Kohls, 48, already is cross-legged on the floor among a growing semicircle of strangers. His shoes are off and, briefly, in one supple motion, he stretches out his legs to touch his toes.

These are the first awkward minutes of an Esalen Institute weekend workshop in which the first exercise requires participant to complete pro-and-con assessments of their lives, known loosely as "bliss grids."

Though a veteran of at least 30 such visits over the last 15 years, Kohls is not yet at home with the group assembling in this carpeted cottage at the edge of the Pacific Ocean. Anyway, he hasn't come for the seminar.

He's driven five hours south from his home and psychology practice in Sacramento chiefly for a deep breath of the salty air, to hear the surf and marvel at the clots of Monarch butterflies in the cypress trees that shield this venerable human potential center from travelers along Highway 1.

It is here that Kohls first began to find himself in a cold shock of recognition back in 1978. "I came because of a New Year's resolution I'd made. I came for a weekend and it changed my life," he says, his blue eyes dancing behind gold-rimmed glasses. "It was like an explosion in my head."

For a Midwestern guy who had always "done the right things," this was a world away from convention, a world of alternative spirituality and self-awareness. It was like glimpsing reality for the first time.

"I'd married a nice Catholic girl and had three kids," says Kohls, who spent his early years in Cincinnati under the tutelage of Jesuit priests.

"After a few visits here, I began to feel I'd misspent my life as a schmuck. What I've let out now is the truth. This place encourages you to go another step, to try telling the truth, even things that are goofy or scary."

Catholic repression was out. Kohls was ready to try the gamut of therapies pioneered here. Breathing exercises and Gestalt, massage and psychosynthesis. He meditates in a special meditation room at home now, and has thrown off "co-dependency" with his wife, from whom he was divorced in 1985.

BLISS: Americans pursue elusive contentment

"There is a part of me that says I should have stayed with her, been more loving and caring," he says. "But I left my home because I hated myself. We're so accomplishment-oriented in this society. I couldn't live in those narrow boundaries.

"Now I feel more peaceful. My feelings are like waves," Kohls says. "Am I happy? It's never your feelings that make you happy. It's your feelings about the feelings. I'm comfortable with myself now."

"The idea of life is to give and receive, and if you didn't have anybody on earth to give to or receive from, then you'd have a very sad life." — trumpet master Dizzy Gillespie.

HAGERSTOWN, Md. — On Monday night at Nick's, an incongruously plush bar-restaurant tucked among factories on the outskirts of town, men from the area gather for their weekly Rotary Club meeting.

They begin to drift in shortly after office closing hours, solidly middle-class men with businesses to run and families to support.

"I've read 'Iron John' and all that stuff and I've really tried to get in touch," says Steve Updegrave, 44. "But this — the Rotary meeting — this is our bonding. We have a drink and talk. Beating drums? Is that really bonding?"

Not really, many men will say. Even though Robert Bly's book has been on the best-seller list for more than a year, his theories are fantasies for the majority of men struggling to get by today.

It's baffling enough just trying to understand their post-feminist wives and street-smart kids. Many are consumed with keeping a salary coming in and food on the table in recessionary times. Most haven't much time for drums.

"I want to be strong, and that means repressing some things," says Updegrave, who is married with a 17-year-old son and 14-year-old daughter. "'Iron John' says get in touch with yourself. And some of that is good. But a lot of it is bull. Sometimes you just have to get on with life."

He's wearing a suit and snazzy tie, bottle-rim glasses and an easy manner. Updegrave doesn't seem like a full-time Lutheran minister or the product of a strict German upbringing. But he is.

"I still get aggravated," he says. But that's the point, in a way. Life ain't like the movies or magazine ads produced on Madison Avenue. "We forget that, though," he says.

"It's all these expectations. Thirty years ago in the Lutheran ministry, you gave the Word and the sacraments. Now everyone expects you to be a family counselor and child psychologist and general referee. We expect perfection, perfect happiness."

In a frenetic world in which "everyone has Carnation Instant for breakfast and dinner on the fly," it's the time together with family and good friends that sustain Updegrave.

His teen-age son and daughter are part of what Updegrave calls "the entitled generation." Children of baby boomers who take for granted the self-awareness and self-fulfillment their parents fought to claim and grandparents rarely considered.

What they don't know and will likely discover the hard way, Updegrave says, is what he discovered for himself through trial-and-error self-education after serving in Vietnam and returning to make his way through the "Me Decade."

"The yuppies have discovered it, too. You go after money and material possessions. That's the end. But what happens when you achieve that end? And what happens if you don't?" Updegrave asks leadingly.

"Either way, you probably won't be happy. You can't measure happiness. Nobody's happy," he says. "You have to find contentment, ask yourself if you can deal with the day-to-day. If you can, then you're closer than many."

"No, folks, there's only one answer to the Mystery of Life. You do as much of it as you can." — British humorist Spike Milligan.

SAUSALITO, Calif. — It is another in a string of deep blue days in Marin County. The San Francisco Bay is bright and Alcatraz Island rises out of it, brown and barren and faraway from Diane Black.

And not so far away. The abandoned federal prison, once considered one of the meanest, is now only a banal tourist attraction, the friendly shadow of a fearsome place. It is a little like the shadow that exists in her life.

At 33, Diane Black is battling a heroin addiction. The daughter of a "good family" in this well-to-do area, she is an unemployed widow. Her young husband died not long ago. An overdose. "He knew better," she says.

"My husband and I, we both grew up in nice families. We had good upbringings, advantages. We should have been A-OK," she says. "But Americans have a way of being miserable. Especially younger ones.

"Our parents gave us so much that we've had to look elsewhere for some wrenches to throw in," says Ms. Black, lighting up a cigarette. She is part of a generation that grew up amid material plenty and the promise of spiritual bliss. What started 30 years ago as a small, cutting-edge human potential movement has today spread throughout the culture.

In the city projects, people are tuned in to hear about incest on 'Oprah.' In the airports, businessmen and women snag a copy of Gloria Steinem's best-selling "Revolution From Within," hoping to glean something from the famous feminist's journey to self-esteem.

In temples, converted Buddhists and Muslims follow a spiritual path away from Western tradition. Therapeutic couches in suburbs and small towns are filled with people — more than three times as many as ever before — seeking counsel and healing.

"You look at it all and wonder, maybe ignorance really is the key to bliss," Ms. Black says, only half-joking. "I'm an addict in recovery. I've tried self-help, appealed to the subconscious mind. I've tried it all. My parents don't believe in any of that crap. Are they happier?"

The vexing thing is, it's beyond calculation.

What is one person's "denial" is another's "let sleeping dogs lie." What is one person's freedom is for another an economic impossibility. It's hard to drop out and "find yourself" when you're living on the streets.

"I've had the chance to know so much about myself. I've learned about the power of positive thinking and the power of the subconscious. Has it stopped me from using (heroin)? No. Has is made me happier? I don't think so.

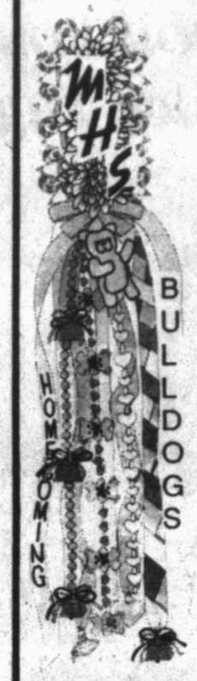

"I don't have any better control of happiness or unhappiness," Ms. Black says. "I just understand myself better. I understand why I'm miserable.

THE WAR

Serbian forces now control most of what was once Yugoslavia

FORCES IN THE CONFLICT

30,000 Serbs organized in combat units, and a similar number of armed irregulars (usually serving as village guards), some of whom are volunteers from Serbia and Montenegro. The Serbs have at least 100 tanks, 200 armored personnel carriers and several hundred pieces of field artillery left behind by the retreating Yugoslav army.

20,000 Croats - members of both the Croatian Defense Council (the majority) and the Croatian Defense Forces (minority). Many are volunteers or regulars from Croatia. Fairly well armed but not as well as the Serbs.

Up to 20,000 rag-tag troops loyal to the Bosnian government in Sarajevo, including Muslims, Croats and Serbs, with another 20,000 of other lightly armed or even unarmed government soldiers in other parts of Bosnia.

The Yugoslav army has withdrawn all of its troops from Bosnia, so that they are no longer directly involved in the conflict, although they are still believed to be providing substantial logistical support to the Serbian side.

Croatia and Yugoslavia are estimated to have about 80,000 soldiers each.

Map by Michael Leary, GraphicsBuilders

Causes

After Tito's death in 1980, central authority in Yugoslavia slowly unraveled. The republics demanded more authority. In 1990, free elections swept nationalists to power. The two largest republics, Serbia and Croatia, soon were at loggerheads. Croatia accused Serbs of trying to dominate the rest of the republics. Serbs accused Croats and their Slovenian neighbors of trying to ruin the federation by seceding. The mighty, Serb-led federal army backed Serbia, while the federal government of reformist Premier Ante Markovic, a Croat, found itself powerless. Croatia and Slovenia seceded on June 25, 1991, and fighting began in Slovenia within days.

Human costs

Fighting was fairly brief in Slovenia, and the Yugoslav army withdrew, guaranteeing the small republic's independence. But the war moved to Croatia, claiming at least 10,000 lives and forcing hundreds of thousands of people — both Serbs and Croats — from their homes. Fighting in Bosnia began after Muslims and Croats approved independence in a referendum last Feb. 29. More than 8,000 people have been killed in Bosnia, and some estimates say the toll may be 50,000. Serb irregular forces, using weapons left behind by the federal military, now control 60 percent of Bosnian territory; Croat militias patrol 30 percent. The Bosnian government has little sway outside Sarajevo and a few other central Bosnian areas. Tales of murder, beatings, rape, mutilations and other atrocities have come from all sides in the conflict. More than 2 million of the former federation's 24 million people are refugees.

Economic costs

The breakup of Yugoslavia has damaged the economies of all of the republics. War has destroyed the economies of Serbia, Croatia and Bosnia-Herzegovina. Even relatively prosperous Slovenia, which escaped physical war damage, has lost its once-guaranteed Yugoslav markets. Serb-led Yugoslavia financed its military by printing money, and inflation peaked at 100 percent a month. Croatia's booming tourist industry along the Adriatic coast is in shambles, its hotels crammed with refugees fleeing the war. In Bosnia, a war zone, informal markets have taken the place of a functioning economy. Six currencies exist on the territory of the former Yugoslavia. Traditional trade routes are blocked. The republics have not yet settled their claims against each other or divided the former federation's foreign debt of $18 billion.

Outside involvement

The European Community began a mediation effort in July 1991. More than a dozen cease-fires failed to stop the fighting in Croatia before a U.N.-sponsored agreement largely halted it last January. Thousands of U.N. peacekeepers were deployed in contested areas of Croatia. They were supposed to demilitarize the zones and oversee the withdrawal of the former Yugoslav army. Under the U.N. mandate, however, Croatian laws were not to apply in the disputed zones, something that irked the republic's government in Zagreb. The United Nations, meanwhile, was unable to stop forced evictions of non-Serbs by Serbian militias. European Community and U.N. officials also tried without success to halt the fighting in Bosnia. U.N. peacekeepers took control of Sarajevo's Serbian-held airport and re-opened it June 29. It became a vital lifeline for the besieged capital, bringing in badly needed food and medicine. But EC monitors, U.N. peacekeepers and humanitarian officials all were targets for combatants. On Aug. 13, the U.N. Security Council authorized the use of force to deliver relief supplies in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

CRISIS IN THE BALKANS

Who are the Serbs?

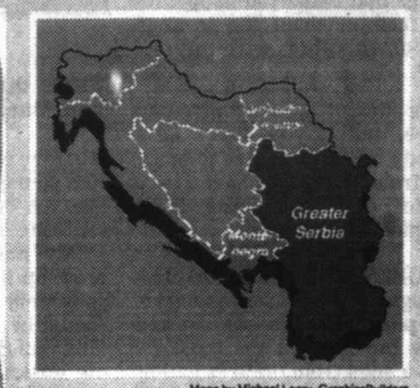

Centuries of warfare define the struggle for a greater Serbia

WHERE THE SERBS LIVE

GREATER SERBIA BEFORE WWI

Maps by Michael Leary, GraphicsBuilders

Most of today's Yugoslavia was part of the Austro-Hungarian Empire, ruled by the Hapsburgs. But a large section was a separate state called Greater Serbia. Montenegro was also independent, but allied with Serbia.The province of Vojvodina was tacked on to Serbia by the Treaty of Versailles ending World War I, and with the inclusion of Bosnia, Croatia,, Macedonia and Slovenia, modern-day Yugoslavia was formed.

What they want

TODAY'S SERBS REMEMBER THE slaughter of hundreds of thousands of their ethnic kin by Croatia's fascist government in a brutal civil war during World War II. They fear Serbs outside Serbia would become second-class citizens if Yugoslavia collapsed and demand they be protected. Serb nationalists advocate a "Greater Serbia" — expansion of Serb territory so that all Serbs live in one state.

The people

Serbs came to the Balkans in the 6th and 7th centuries as part of the Slavic migration from beyond the Carpathian Mountains. They became Christians in the 9th century and have their own autonomous Serbian Orthodox Church. They speak a language similar to those of neighboring Slavic groups, such as the Croats and Bulgarians, and use the Cyrillic alphabet common to Orthodox Slavic groups.

The history

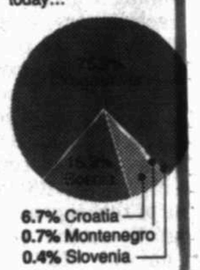

Serbs built an empire stretching from the Aegean Sea in the south to the Danube River in the north and stretching east to parts of Asia Minor in the 14th century. They were defeated by Ottoman Turks at the battle of Kosovo Polje in 1389, beginning 500 years of Turkish domination that finally was thrown off in near-constant warfare in the second half of the 19th century. The anniversary of the battle of Kosovo Polje, June 28, is one of the most important Serb holidays, symbolizing their stubborn resistance to the Turks. They take pride in having fought on the side of Western allies in the 20th century's two world wars — conflicts in which Serbs suffered huge casualties.

The religion

Orthodoxy, like monarchy, traditionally has been one of the pillars of Serbian society. It preserved Serb culture during Turkish rule. Although the church does not have a strong tradition of outright resistance to civil authority, earlier this year Patriarch Pavle and the church leadership spoke out for the resignation of Serbia's president, Slobodan Milosevic, a former Communist.

Where they live

There are approximately 8.5 million Serbs (out of a total population of 25 million) in the region that was Yugoslavia before the breakup. Here is where they live today...

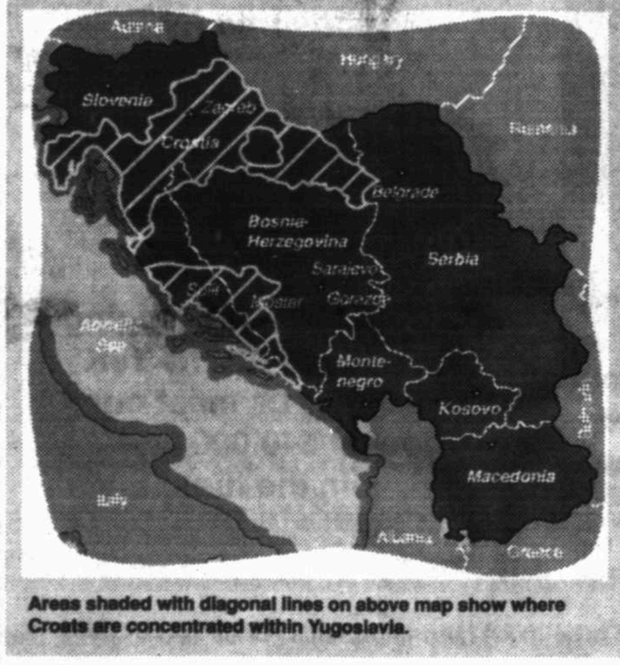

CRISIS IN THE BALKANS

Who are the Croats?

WHERE THE CROATS LIVE

FROM EMPIRE TO MODERN STATE

Maps by Michael Leary, GraphicsBuilders

A large portion of modern Yugoslavia (including Croatia) was part of the Austro-Hungarian Empire before World War I.

What they want

CROATS COMPLAINED OF WHAT they felt was Serb domination of Yugoslavia. After negotiations among the formerly Communist federation's republics failed, Croatia declared independence on June 25, 1991. In fighting that followed, the Croats lost control of one-third of the former Yugoslav republic of Croatia to the Serbs. Government policy now is aimed at regaining those territories. Ultranationalists want to restore some of the territory once held by the Nazi puppet state, including parts of Bosnia-Herzegovina and Serbia.

The people

A Slavic people, they came to the Balkans at the same time as the Serbs, more than a millennium ago, and their language is nearly identical. They settled a boomerang-shaped piece of land bordered by the Danube River in the east and the Adriatic Sea coast in the west and south. They became Roman Catholic and use Latin script. Long subjects of the Austro-Hungarian Empire, the Croats absorbed Central European culture.

The history

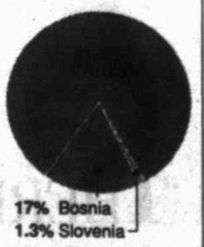

Croats had their own kingdom until the year 1102, when they became part of the Hungarian kingdom. While the Serbs were dominated by Ottoman Turks for centuries, Croats remained subjects of the Hapsburg Empire until the end of World War I, when the Kingdom of Serbs, Croats and Slovenes was formed under a Serbian dynasty on the ashes of the Austro-Hungarian and Ottoman empires. Early in the 20th century, Croats were among the most vocal supporters of the idea of a union of southern — or "Yugo" — Slavs. They thought merger with the Serbs and Slovenes was preferable to continued domination by the Hapsburgs, or by Italy. But soon after, Croats began to accuse Serbs of treating the new kingdom as an expanded Serbia. In 1928, popular Croatian leader Stjepan Radic was assassinated. A royal dictatorship was founded and the country's name was changed to the Kingdom of Yugoslavia. Croatian resentment continued, and during World War II Croat ultranationalists formed a Nazi puppet state, whose eastern border stretched to Belgrade. Hundreds of thousands of Serbs, Jews and Gypsies were killed in concentration camps.

The religion

Croats have been Roman Catholics for centuries. Like the Serbs, their national identity is bound up with their religion. Church officials have strongly backed the drive to re-establish Croatian statehood.

Where they live

There are approximately 4.5 million Croats (out of a total population of 25 million) in the region that was Yugoslavia before the breakup. Here is where they live today...

CRISIS IN THE BALKANS

Who are the Muslims?

WHERE THE MUSLIMS LIVE

Maps by Michael Leary, GraphicsBuilders

The Ottoman Empire overran much of Yugoslavia during the 15th and 16th centuries. The area was broken up at the Congress of Berlin in 1878, after much of the country erupted in fighting as the Ottoman Empire lost influence.

What they want

During negotiations over the future of the Yugoslav federation, Bosnian Muslims tried to find a formula to keep the country together. That failed. Now they want a unified and independent Bosnia, fearing that if it is split between Serbs and Croats, they will be the losers — left with only 10 percent of the territory. Muslims are the dominant group in Bosnia — comprising 44 percent of the population of 4.3 million — but they are concentrated in smaller, mainly urban areas.

The people

Like Serbs and Croats, the Muslims of the former Yugoslavia are Slavs who have lived in the Balkans for more than a millennium. Most live in Bosnia, but some also live in the old Ottoman Turkish region of Novi Pazar, now divided between Serbia and the republic of Montenegro. Under Ottoman rule, the Muslims' ancestors converted to Islam. They speak a distinct regional dialect of Serbo-Croat that has incorporated Turkish words and expressions.

The history

Serb and Croat nationalists each claim the Muslims as ethnic kin who changed religion. Other historical accounts say the Muslims are descendents of a heretic sect, the Bogomils, who embraced the Islamic faith of invading Turks to escape persecution by both Western and Eastern Christians. Few are of Turkish descent. By the 17th century, the Bosnian city of Sarajevo was a major European center whose cosmopolitanism and Eastern flair earned it the nickname "the second Damascus." As the Ottoman Empire crumbled, Bosnia was up for grabs. It was coveted by the Kingdom of Serbia, but was awarded to the Hapsburg empire at the 1878 Berlin Congress. Hapsburg troops had to fight their way into the mountainous territory, however. Hapsburg officials tried to create a sense of Bosnian nationalism, which was supported by Muslims but opposed by Serbs and Croats. The Muslims, like the Serbs and Croats, suffered heavy casualties during World War II. Many were massacred by Serb fighters. After the war, the founder of Communist Yugoslavia, Josip Broz Tito, suppressed nationalism. But in the late 1960s, as a brief wave of liberalization swept through Yugoslavia, Tito granted the Muslims national status.

The religion

Islam has a history of almost 500 years in Bosnia, where the landscape is dotted by village minarets. Yugoslavia's Muslims, who live principally in Bosnia's cities and towns, have had a reputation for moderation and tolerance.

Where they live

There are approximately 2.25 million Muslims (out of a total population of 25 million) in the region that was Yugoslavia before the breakup. Here is where they live today...

Entire family is involved in United Way

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first in a series of articles on local citizens who have been impacted by the United Way of Midland. This year's campaign, now under way, is attempting to raise $2,755,000 for 17 agencies.

By Linda Thorsen Bond

The Bill Rodriguez family was chosen for the kick-off videotape for the 1992 United Way campaign for many reasons. Those reasons are Bill, Sandy, Diane, Bennie, Billy, Jenna, Brittany, Tommy, Joshua, Jackie and Jacob.

All the members of the Rodriguez family are involved, in some way, in helping others through the United Way.

Bill and Sandy moved to Midland 30 years ago from Snyder when they got married.

"I was a country girl," Sandy said. "My father was a farmer, and Midland seemed so big to me that I thought I'd never find my way around."

Bill was the first to volunteer. Owner of Bill's Fence Craft, Bill has always been a handyman who used to do "all sorts of volunteer repairs" for Casa de Amigos. While volunteering for three different boards — the airport, planning and zoning, and the board of adjustments — Bill met Jane Wolf, executive director of the United Way. She got Bill started on the United Way Board.

Sandy, meanwhile, stayed home and raised their children — Diane, Bennie and Billy. When the children were old enough for her to get out of the house, she was not sure there would be a place for her.

"Bill would say 'get out there and volunteer,'" Sandy said. "I'd been at home so long I felt shy, but since I started volunteering, I've met so many wonderful people that it's changed me."

She started at the Salvation Army, helped at the American Cancer Society and at the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children. In June, she became a staff member at the United Way's Information and Referral Line.

"I'm helping people on the phone line," she said. "I never thought I could do anything like this. We help homeless people, mothers abandoned with children, people who can't pay their utilities, families that are out of food, who need transportation ... you name it. If I don't know the answer I will do my best to try to find it. I've learned to stay calm in an emergency. When I'd been here three weeks, I got a call from a person who was planning to commit suicide. I had been warned how hard it would be, but that first time I wasn't calm!"

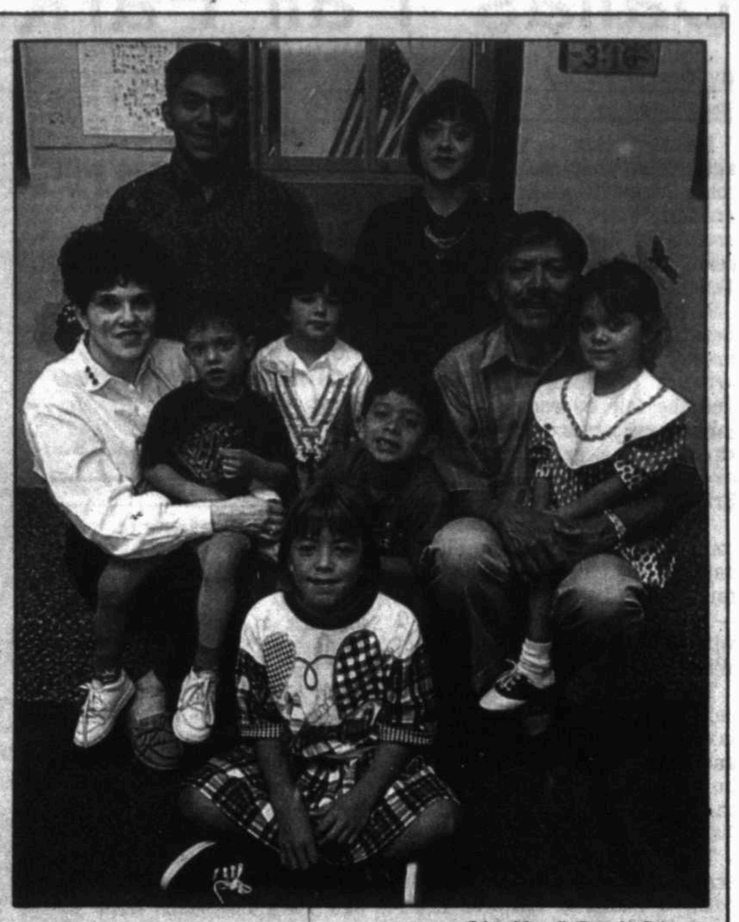

Sandy's mother, Senona Garcia, did volunteer work after they moved here from Snyder.

"My mother couldn't drive but would walk to Casa and volunteer in the morning, come home and fix lunch for Dad, then run over to St. Andrews do some work there in the afternoon." Sandy said.

Diane Bloemendahl, the Rodriguez' oldest daughter, started volunteering with Meals on Wheels by delivering hot food to the elderly and disabled. She later joined the agency's staff. She and husband Tom's three daughters, Jenna, 8, Brittany, 4, and Tommy, 2, participate in the family's activities such as their bus ministry for Kelview Baptist Church and Project Blueprint.

Second daughter Bennie is a former member of the board of the Petro Plains Council of Campfire, Inc. and now does its

Odessa temple begins new year with new rabbi

■ Donald Ledy's assignment to Odessa is part of his post-graduate work required to become a rabbi.

ODESSA — Temple Beth El will celebrate the Jewish New Year with a new rabbi.

Donald Ledy, a second year post-graduate student at the Hebrew Union College in Cincinnati, has been assigned to the congregation as an interim rabbi for a year.

"To be honest, I probably would have picked the Odessa congregation," Ledy said. "I lived in San Angelo for three years and am familiar with the area. I feel lucky to going somewhere familiar."

The 35-year-old has already made one official visit to the congregation this month, but his big responsibility begins this evening with one of the Jewish high holidays — Rosh Hashanah.

"I will only be at the congregation on a tri-weekly basis," Ledy said. "And, I am responsible for all the high holidays."

Rosh Hashanah marks the Jewish New Year and the beginning of the 10 Days of Penitence.

"It is a traditional time for soul-searching," Ledy said. "To get in touch with God and where your life is going."

The 10 days end with Yom Kippur, the Jewish fast day for atonement for sins. It is the most solemn day in the Jewish calendar, marked by 24 hours of fasting.

Ledy's internship is part of the five-year post graduate work required to be a rabbi.

"Your are working toward a master's in Hebrew Letter, the equivalent of a master's of divinty," he said. "The first year is spent in Israel and the second is spent at an assigned congregation."

The congregation can choose to sign the rabbi on for subsequent years, he said.

The last three years are spent in the study of the classics of Jewish traditions, practical courses such as counseling, other internships and, finally, in a concentrated field of interest.

Haley autograph party to highlight events at library

By Bill Modisett
Staff Writer

Fans of historian J. Evetts Haley can welcome the newest addition to their collections of Haley books this week. The Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library will unveil "On His Native Heath ... In His Natural Element, A Collection of the Essays" at an autograph party from 4-6 p.m. Friday.

The 91-year-old historian and author of such works as "Charles Goodnight: Cowman & Plainsman," "Jeff Milton, A Good Man With a Gun," "George W. Littlefield, Texan" and "A Texan Looks at Lyndon: A Study in Illegitimate Power," is scheduled to be present for the autograph party.

Librarian Frances Stapp says "On His Native Heath" is expected to be popular because it contains many essays written by Haley from the late 1920's through 1989, including several works either previously unpublished or published privately.

The book's dust jacket features a drawing by the late Harold Bugbee, an artist who was a friend of Haley and who illustrated many of his books. Bugbee drawings also appear on four section covers inside the book.

A special collector's edition of the volume with a silver medallion will sell for $500. Only 50 copies will be sold. A trustee's edition with a bronze medallion will sell for $250, with only 100 copies to be produced. The book is also available in a regular edition at $30 each, with more than 840 copies available. After Oct. 4, the regular edition will sell for $40.

"On His Native Heath" contains Haley's biographies on Ab Blocker, Ben Ficklin, Martha Summerhayes and Santanta, as well as "Ode to Nita," a tribute to the historian's first wife, and an unpublished work titled "Eulogy for Papa."

While library officials are enthusiastic about the new book, it only marks a part of the overall event at Haley Library.

A barbecue will be held on the library's grounds from 6:30 until 8:30 p.m. Friday. Beginning at 9 a.m. Saturday and continuing until 4 p.m. will be a historical seminar on the works of J. Evetts Haley. Serving on the seminar panel

A day at the fair

Ferris-wheel riders got a bird's eye view of the sizeable crowd at St. Ann's Family Fair Saturday afternoon. The annual event features food and game booths, the Odds & Ends Garage Sale as well the Best of Texas carnival.

GARY OTT

'Bending the facts' is no longer acceptable behavior

Oh, dear, I do believe it is time for me to review my personal resume. Where did I leave that silly thing, anyway? Ah, yes, here it is, right next to my college diploma, which, by the way, is legitimate. Or, at least it was the last time I checked, which was about 15 years ago.

Ott

But enough of that.

Back to the resume. Indeed, it is probably best that we all pull those things out of storage and make sure we haven't stretched the truth just a tad. There seems to be a renewed emphasis on accuracy in these matters. Nosy tattle-tales are poking around to make sure we haven't lied about how great we are.

What a pity.

Resumes were one of the last great opportunities for us to make ourselves sound better than we really are. It used to be that a person could exaggerate his accomplishments — within reason, of course — without fear of being caught. It was expected. It was nothing more than a harmless little white lie, not unlike telling a woman you "just love" her new hairstyle when, in fact, you think it looks like warmed-over death.

So what? There was no harm done. You merely told her what she wanted to hear. She felt good about your kind words, and so did you.

It's no different with resumes.

Here's a quick example.

Let's say a job opens up in your field of expertise and you decide to make a run at it. Step No. 1 is to mail in your resume. Obviously, you want to sound as impressive as possible, so you bend the facts ever so slightly. Instead of being a dropout from some nondescript state college, for example, you suddenly become a brillant 3.8 graduate with a degree in chemical engineering from an exclusive university in New England, where, when you were not too busy closing up the library each night, you managed to find time to be president of the student body and editor of the campus newspaper.

OK, we're talking a big white lie.

But who cares? Everyone does it. It's as American as apple pie.

And it goes beyond job hunting, too.

There are those occasions when a civic organization will ask you to give an after-dinner talk. The first thing the program chairman will say is, "Can you provide me with a brief resume so I can have some background on you for the introduction?"

"No problem," you respond. Then, as that person hangs up the telephone, you immediately break into a panic and start conjuring up fancy words in a desperate attempt to make yourself appear worthy of being the guest speaker. Instead of listing "watching Dick Van Dyke reruns" as your hobby, you suddenly remember that obsession you acquired in college for translating the great works of Yugoslavian novelists into English.

Hey, what they don't know won't hurt them.

Besides, the truth can be ugly. If they knew how boring you really are, they might be tempted to play with their left over mashed potatoes instead of listening to your words of wit and wisdom.

Thus, the white lie is told, the resume enhanced, the truth embellished.

It is the wonderful world of make-believe where reality is whatever you want it to be. It is a happy place full of bright colors and dancing elephants.

But, alas, that is all about to change. No longer is "bending the facts" acceptable behavior. Truth squads are on the prowl, digging through the past in a relentless crusade "to set the record straight."

So be careful.

If you are a dud, accept it. Don't pretend to be something — or someone — you are not. In the end, they will get you.

The truth will be told.

Besides, watching Dick Van Dyke reruns can be a great hobby.

Workers apply cosmetics to Dallas' Fair Park

By Darryl Ewing
Associated Press writer

This year's Spirit of Discovery theme will take some park visitors on a trek through space with a National Aeronautics and Space Administration video and display of space-age artifacts.

DALLAS (AP) — City workers again have conjured up some October magic to mask Fair Park's cracking walls, fading facades and crumbling infrastructure as they ready for the annual State Fair of Texas.

A little paint and landscaping here and a banner there, and — presto! — the cracks and fading artwork disappear, temporarily, and the fair is ready for the 3.5 million visitors expected to stroll through the gates during the event's 24-day run, beginning Friday.

"Traditionally we have managed some magic, judiciously placing banners and colorful canvas — behind it may be a very large crack — but we manage to hide it for a while," said spokeswoman Nancy Wiley.

Two months ago, Dallas voters rejected a one-year half-cent sales tax to pay for major roof, wiring and structural improvements to 20 buildings at Fair Park, home of the Cotton Bowl and the State Fair.

That tax boost would have generated some $60 million for the park, a National Historic Landmark, but it also would have given Dallas the highest sales tax among the nation's largest cities.

Still, the show must go on. This year, $1.5 million has been spent on patchwork repairs and improvements, including colorful benches for rest areas, sidewalk and street repairs and a fresh coat of turquoise paint for the Coliseum, where livestock events are held.

Eddie Hueston, executive general manager of Fair Park, said most of the improvements are cosmetic.

"We're not having any kind of capital improvement projects going on," he said. "Certainly, we make sure the buildings are working and that everything is working as far as lighting and plumbing, but basically we're talking about things like setting up booths and tents and painting."

This year, paint, banners, foliage and white light-covered trees will go a long way in sprucing up Fair Park, which has some buildings dating back to 1905.

Even so, "behind the banners and the fresh coat of spot paint, the problems still exist," Ms. Wiley said.

"What we're talking about is water accumulation after heavy rain that will leak down and run down and ruin ceilings," she said. "What we worry about is something leaking through on an exhibit. It's a cosmetic issue now, not chunks of the roofs falling in on people."

Much of the classic faded artwork at the park, which includes the "Spirit of the Centennial" mural, dates back to Texas' 100th birthday in 1936.

Many of the giant Art Deco murals were painted over with cream-colored paint after World War II because officials thought the artwork was too gaudy, Ms. Wiley said.

The murals are now showing through, along with ceiling cracks. Fair Park historians hope to restore the artwork to its 1936 glory.

The State Fair has a budget of about $12 million, and generates up to $14 million from the fair. Any additional revenue is reinvested into the park for improvements, such as airconditioning and new restrooms for the Centennial Building.

This year's Spirit of Discovery theme will take some park visitors on a trek through space with a National Aeronautics and Space Administration video and display of space-age artifacts. Those who remain behind can plunge into the underwater world at the Sharks! exhibit or examine the bronze and pottery artifacts of a lost civilization at The Etruscans display.

The jewelry, costumes and furnishings of an 18th century Russian empress await visitors to the Catherine the Great exhibit, while toe-tapping tunes from Broadway will blare during the "Will Rogers Follies" at the Music Hall.

Of course, there will be the usual amusement rides, automobile displays and livestock shows, including a rat and mice category.

The Longhorns and Sooners will clash once again during the annual Texas-Oklahoma football matchup at the Cotton Bowl. Two weeks later, country music singer Clint Black will perform at the Cotton Bowl with Billy Dean and Little Texas.

Big Tex, a 52-foot cowboy, will overlook the Midway's 60 rides as he has since his debut in 1952.

Historian J. Evetts Haley, center, will have an autograph party this week for the release of his new work, "On His Native Heath . . . In His Natural Element, a Collection of Essays." Looking on are Beth Schneider, former librarian, and Byron Price, executive director of the National Cowboy Hall of Fame in Oklahoma City.

will be M.E. Bradford, Harwood Hinton, Charles Blanton, Ken Huddleston, Dudley Cramer, Michael Cox and Beth E. Schneider.

Also opening this weekend at the library is a saddle exhibit by Amarillo saddle maker Bob Marrs. That exhibit will continue for a month, Ms. Stapp said.

Rounding out the events will be a "Young and Upcoming Art Show and Sale," featuring the artwork of Judy Childress, Tom Grice, Leo Garza, Justin Wells, Tom Lockhart, Lorenzo Chavez, Bill Mittag, Myrna Lambson, James Trigg, James Tshetter, Jody Ellison, Kevin MacPherson, Carole Sue Broughton, Spike Ress, Becky Anthony, Scott Rogers, Bill Curry, Michael Wood, Wayne Hyde, Byron Fullerton, David Plourde, Melanie Fain, George Strickland, Victor Armstrong and Jason Scull.

According to Ms. Stapp, all of the artists for this art show and sale were recommended by the regular artists who participate in the library's spring show and sale.

Cost of attending the entire "Weekend at Haley Library" event is $50 per person. Other ticket prices are: historical seminar, $20 per person or $35 per couple; barbecue, $10 per person; art show and sale, $25 per person.

Officer's son shoots himself

ROUND ROCK (AP) — The 12-year-old son of an Austin police officer died Saturday after accidentally shooting himself in the face while playing with his father's service revolver, authorities said.

Bradley Wayne Mount, son of Austin traffic investigator John Mount, was pronounced dead shortly before 1 p.m. at Brackenridge Hospital, officials said.

Round Rock police Capt. Chris Bratton said the gun, a .357 Magnum, was stored at the top of the officer's closet.

The boy "went and got the gun to show it to a friend when it accidentally discharged," Bratton said.

Pilot of small plane dies in crash

FREDERICKSBURG (AP) — The pilot of a small plane died Saturday when the craft crashed at a Central Texas airport, authorities said.

The victim, who was not immediately identified, was the lone occupant of the single-engine craft. A Gillespie County sheriff's spokeswoman said the plane crashed at Gillespie County Airport, just outside of Fredericksburg.

The pilot was practicing touch-and-go landings at the airport when he crashed, the Federal Aviation Administration said.

"It crashed about 500 feet from the airport on a golf course," said FAA spokesman Wayne Beckmann at the Fort Worth regional office.

Feed For Need cook-off set

Staff report

The eighth annual Feed For Need chili, brisket, fajita and rib cook-off is set for Saturday at the Midland County Exhibit Building.

Sponsored by the Permian Basin Cook-Off Inc., the cook-off has generated more than $85,000 in past years for a variety of nonprofit agencies.

Primary recipients of this year's proceeds will be the Epilepsy Association of West Texas, the Make-A-Wish Foundation, the Allison Cancer Center's Look-Good, Feel-Good Shop and the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Committee.

Activities get under way at 8 a.m. with a cooks' meeting and really get moving at 8:30 a.m. with the fifth annual Red Hot Chili Pot Trot. Registration for the TAC-sanctioned 15-kilometer and 2-mile races is $13 until Wednesday and $15 thereafter. Contact Carla Warden at 697-1066 for race information.

Gates open to the public at 11 a.m. with food served from 1 p.m. until 6 p.m. or until all the food is gone.

Chili teams are required to supply three gallons of chili, other cookers must provide 25 pounds of brisket, fajita meat or pork ribs. In addition, entry fees are $50 per initial team entry and $25 for each additional class.

Judging in cooking and showmanship categories of the CASI-sanctioned cook-off will be from 11:30 a.m. until 4 p.m., with the awards presentation at 5 p.m.

Admission of $5 includes dancing to Texas Express from 7:30-11:30 p.m. Children under 6 and people over 65 will be admitted for $2.

Entry deadline for cooking teams of up to six members is Tuesday. For information, contact Judy Makowsky, 686-4613 or Mike Thornton, 684-5531.

Accident victim in stable condition

Staff report

ODESSA — A 38-year-old man was in stable condition at Medical Center Hospital Saturday night after running into a train Friday night, Department of Public Safety officials said.

Juan Ramirez drove his 1977 Dodge vehicle into an empty Union Pacific railroad car Friday night at the Rexene plant on South Grandview Avenue. He was pinned in his car for one hour before rescue workers used a saw to free him through the passenger side. He suffered leg injuries.

Investigators are looking into claims that the train siding was not marked by flares. Rexene employees were unloading another railroad car at the time of the accident, DPS officials said.

"The first two years are like your prerequisites, your required courses," he said. "The last years are like electives."

In addition to his duties at the temple, Ledy will be delivering a mini-lecture at Trinity School and conducting a panel discussion with a Presbyterian pastor.

"I am very interested in inter-faith issues," Ledy said. "I served in the Navy prior to entering my graduate work. I was involved in chaplaincy there, not as a chaplain, but in organizing things. There were a lot of inter-faith activities."

Ledy will also be bringing his new wife Clara, whom he met last summer at a Jewish summer camp in Waco and married this year.

"Clara is Israeli," Ledy said. "She will be living in the United States for the first time. But, it will be a good experience. We will be getting good hospitality from the families we stay with. I feel very lucky and honored."

UNITED: Family never thought it would need help public relations. She's also on the board of the Red Cross and a member of the Midland Chamber Volunteer Host Group in addition to her work for Wagner & Brown.

Son Billy is a student at Midland College and a volunteer at agencies such as the Cerebral Palsy Center. In one of his college classes, Billy was required to write a paper about Midland agencies. He began to research the United Way agency, Family Services, and the help they give to parents with problems. Almost immediately after that, he found he needed the course. His three children, who had been living with their mother, came to live with him in his parent's house.

"We never thought we would need help with parenting," Sandy said. "Our children had been so good. But when Billy's little ones came to live with us, it was very hard. They were afraid of the dark, they had nightmares, they huddled in the corner of their rooms. The parenting classes taught us how to have patience. Our kids hadn't been through what these three had, and it was a learning experience for us."

Joshua, 6, Jackie, 4, and Jacob, 3, have been living with their grandparents and father two years now.

"We didn't expect to need any of the agencies here in town," Sandy said. "We always thought we'd be the ones to help other people. But raising these three grandchildren has been totally different from anything we dreamed could happen.

"Joshua is always telling kids what the United Way has done for him and his brother and sister. He's been in counseling at Family Services since he was four, and he's learned things he needed to do to fit into our family and with other children. He hit because he had been hit, he couldn't sleep because he was afraid, he was traumatized.

"And for us, for Billy and Bill and I, the parenting course helped so much we all took it twice. Family Services also sent a parenting couple to our home to help us learn by example."

The six grandchildren can often be seen with Bill and Sandy as they volunteer at Casa de Amigos or the Boys and Girls Club. They visit nursing homes together and know that hugs are good medicine for lonely people.

All 11 Rodriguezes, plus son-in-law Tom, were in attendance when the Project Blueprint class spent a recent Saturday at the Boys and Girls Club for the club's membership drive.

That's the attitude that made the Rodriguez family stars of the 1992 United Way video, written by Joe Milam, filmed by Clyde Aly and prepared in the studios of KTPX-TV.

"We like to do things together," Sandy said. "We've had good help in so many things, and we want to return that help. Volunteering is a way of life for us."

Dunlap's marks 50th anniverary

By Darren J. Waggoner

J.B. Hoskins — a 92-year-old pioneer at Dunlap Co. and the first general manager of the Midland store — may have missed the store's 50th anniversary Saturday with a minor illness, but his abscence didn't stop employees from honoring him.

"His insight and dedication are the reasons we're here. People, over the years, learned to rely on Dunlap's for quality and honesty — that's why they keep coming back," said one 18-year employee of the store.

Dunlap's will continue to recognize Hoskins with a storewide Golden Anniversary sale until Oct. 3.

Fifty years ago, the Dunlap Co. bought Addison Wadley Co. in Midland. Hoskins, one of the principal owners of Addison Wadley, was named general manager of the new store.

He has been affiliated with the company ever since.

"Mr. Hoskins is still active in an advisory capacity with the corporate offices. He's still very much a part of the company," said Bill Bartlett, manager of Dunlap's.

Hoskins serves as an officer on the board of directors and is a major stockholder of the Dunlap Co.

Hoskins moved from Midland in 1945 to manage a Dunlap store in Lubbock.

In 1966, he became executive vice-president of the Dunlap Co.

In 1977, the general offices were moved to Fort Worth but Hoskins elected to stay in Lubbock to oversee the company's interest there.

Founded in 1890 by Hillard G.W. Dunlap, who first sold goods from the back of a wagon in Indian Territory, Oklahoma, the company has remained largely regional in the Southwest — although stores in Maine and Michigan have opened in the last decade.

Dunlap opened his first store, Blue Star, his cousin Harvey Taylor. Soon afterwards, it became Dunlap and Taylor and eventually just Dunlap's when Dunlap bought out his cousin.

Texas Society to Prevent Blindness to 'roast Bunton'

Staff report

Judge Lucius D. Bunton III will be honored by the Texas Society to Prevent Blindness at its 1992 "People of Vision Dinner and Roast" Oct. 27 at the Petroleum Club in Midland.

Bunton

Bunton is U.S. district chief judge for the Western District of Texas.

Proceeds from the celebrity roast will benefit the Midland Regional Office of the Texas Society to Prevent Blindness and the 23 counties it serves with sight-saving programs. The programs include free vision screenings for children, glaucoma screenings for adults, vision screening certification, as well as eye health and eye safety programs.

Serving as roastmaster will be State District Judge Pat Baskin. Joining him as roasters will be Connell Ashley, Bob Bledsoe, Ted Kerr and Jack Tidwell.

Bunton is licensed to practice in the Supreme Court of the U.S., 5th and 8th Circuit Courts of Appeals, Western, Northern and Southern Districts of Texas. He also was certified as a specialist in personal injury and civil trial law. In addition, he has served on numerous local and statewide boards and committees, both professionally and personally.

For additional information on the roast, call 683-0003. Sponsor tables are available and tickets can be obtained at $100 per person.

Guerrero's home-town backers rally

MISSION (AP) — Lena Guerrero, forced by controversy to step down from the powerful Texas Railroad Commission, came home Saturday to begin rebuilding in the town that has refused to abandon her.

"I think that when you go through a storm the first thing you want to check before you start rebuilding is how your foundation is," said Ms. Guerrero, sitting on the front porch of her mother's house while the street before her filled with supporters.

"Today I really wanted to come home because these are the people who know me best. These are the people who can judge me best."

Ms. Guerrero resigned Thursday as temporary chairman of the Railroad Commission, the panel that regulates Texas' oil and gas industry, after admitting that she lied for 12 years about having obtained a college degree.

She immediately declared she would remain the Democratic candidate for the post in the Nov. 3 election, and re-initiated her campaign that same night before cheering supporters in Falfurrias, a small town about 60 miles north of McAllen.

On Saturday, she held a street rally to apologize to her hometown and to set about reconquering South Texas.

"We're going to shore up our base in South Texas because that is where our support is," she said.

"If they can't forgive you at home," she added shortly before addressing the crowd, "they can't forgive you."

The people who gathered before the Guerrero home did seem ready to move past the controversy that tarnished the rising Democratic Party star, a protege of Gov. Ann Richards.

The crowd of about 200 cheered as Guerrero spoke from the flatbed trailer set up in her mother's front yard as a stage.

"We're here because she's one of ours," said Humberto Silva, a attorney from Donna. "She was raised much like all of us were raised, in barrios. . . . We can identify with her because she can identify with us."

"Obviously (the controversy) is going to raise some questions about her credibility," he said. "Everyone's going to have faults."

Several people did say that there had been some disappointment when the controversy surrounding Ms. Guerrero's academic history surfaced. But most said their support never wavered.

EDUCATION IN BRIEF

It's Homecoming time for the Purple and Gold. Midland High School's homecoming theme is "Building a Better Bulldog."

Festivities will kick-off with a 6 p.m. homecoming parade Thursday. The parade will begin at Bowie Elementary School, 805 Elk Ave.

The parade will travel north down "A" Street to Illinois Street, and west on Illinois to MHS. A bonfire and rally is scheduled to take place on campus after the parade ends.

Homecoming game is Friday night and is a non-district game between MHS and Amarillo High School.

Judith Cochran, faculty member at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, recently published her sixth book, "Reading in the Content Areas for Junior High and High School." She will sign her books Oct. 22 at Pages and Prints bookstore.

Published by Allyn & Bacon, a division of Simon & Schuster Inc., the guide shows how to integrate reading skills into specific instruction areas such as science, social studies, literature and mathematics.

Ms. Cochran, a Fulbright scholar, is associate professor of education and is the director of the graduate reading program at UTPB.

Spirit Week at UTPB begins Monday at noon with a parade by school clubs and departments.

Events will continue each day at noon through Friday. Tuesday's spirit activities will feature an egg toss and pie eating contest. Wednesday's events will include the dizzy bat game and a tricycle race. Thursday's events are passing an orange and a red wagon race. Friday's events are tossing a water-filled ball and a marshmallow eating contest.

Events will conclude with a 6:45 p.m. Saturday reunion dinner in the UTPB courtyard. For more information call (915) 367-2207.

E. Grace Osadchuk of Midland will be inducted into the Northeastern State University Music Hall of Fame during Homecoming ceremonies Oct. 24 in Tahlequah, Okla.

Ms. Osadchuk received her undergraduate degree in vocal music education from NSU in 1953. She received her master's degree from the University of North Texas and Ph.D. from the University of Oklahoma.

She has served as a music instructor at all levels of public education and currently is supervisor of music for Midland.

In that position, she coordinates the activities of 60 teachers of music, art and theater. She is in demand as a workshop clinician for band, choir, orchestra, speech, drama and debate.

She also is responsible for planning staff development, recruiting, interviewing and hiring of fine arts personnel. She has served on the National Steering Committee for Student Members of the Music Educators National Conference and as such has been an officer at local, state, divisional and national levels.

As an inductee, she joins Captain J.D. McDonald, Dr. Henri Minsky, Betty Durham Price and Zula Belle Dobbins. The NSU Music Hall of Fame was founded in 1988 by the Northeastern student chapter of Music Educators National Conference to honor outstanding music educators who have graduated from NSU.

Midland public school students will be out in school crosswalks at odd hours of the day Wednesday. This is because Wednesday is the first of six Early Dismissal days this school year.

To comply with state regulations on teacher inservice activities, Midland Independent School District will dismiss classes two hours early six days throughout the year.

Three and four-year-olds and half-day kindergarten pupils will be dismissed at 11 a.m.

Head Start and Migrant pupils will be dismissed at noon.

Full-day kindergarten students and first, second, and third graders will be dismissed at 12:30 p.m.

Fourth and fifth graders will be dismissed at 1:40 p.m.

Sixth graders will be dismissed at 1:10 p.m.

Lee Freshman High School students will be out at 1 p.m. and Midland Freshman High School students — along with the two high schools — will be dismissed at 1:30 p.m. Coleman High School students will be released at 2 p.m.

United Way Shining Stars

NAME: K. Michael Conaway
OCCUPATION: Senior Vice President with Texas Commerce Bank of Midland
VOLUNTEER POSITION: Vice President of United Way Board, President-Elect of 1993 Needs Assessment

Mike was asked to join the campaign cabinet to head up the Education Division of the United Way and has been involved with the annual campaign ever since.

"From an organizational standpoint, the United Way is the most effective way of reaching and helping people in this community," he says. "It's the one agency that reaches the most folks through its annual campaign and allocations process of funding through the member agencies.

The highlight of Mike's volunteer career was playing a leadership role in reaching and exceeding the goal of the 91-92 campaign. "The success of last year's campaign was not my success," says Mike, "but the success of thousands of volunteer hours."

As vice president of the board, Mike and the other members supervise the operation of United Way, which includes, among other responsibilities, overseeing the publicity process, the annual campaign, and the allocations procedures.

As chairman-elect of the 1993 Needs Assessment, Mike says, "I'm looking forward to this process next year because it will help us define and plan where United Way is going in the future."

"The United Way Of Midland serves 36,000 Midlanders through the following agencies and programs: American Red Cross, Big Brothers/Big Sisters, Boy Scouts of America, Boys' and Girls" Club of Midland, Camp Fire, Casa de Amigos, Citywide Community services, Community and Senior Services of Midland, Family Services, Permian Basin Child Abuse Prevention Program, Freewill Foster Home, Midland/Lee Youth Centers, Midland Rape Crises Center, Midland Need To Read, Palmer Drug Abuse Program, Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and their Children, Permian Basin Girl Scouts, Salvation Army Corps and Day Care Center, YMCA's

CHECKING OUT THE LIBRARIES

Friends of Library prepare for annual book sale

By Sandra Wegner

The Friends of the Library are preparing for their annual book sale, October 15-18. Their fist order of business is a book drive this week.

Now is the best opportunity to get rid of the extra books cluttering up your life without guilt. Just bring them to the northwest corner of Illinois and Weatherford Streets Monday through Friday between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. (The Reporter-Telegram allows the Friends space to store books at this location and we're grateful!)

Volunteers will be there to accept, sort, pack and get the books ready to transport out to the County Exhibit Building on Highway 80 (now Business I-20) east of Midland for the sale.

The book drive is in time to help you make room for all the good stuff you are going to take home from the sale two weeks later. Of course, if you want to get first and best pick of the goodies, plan to attend the opening night, Oct. 15, at 6 p.m. Being first costs $2 at the door but you'll decide it is worth it.

Folks know what a good deal this is; they are always lined up waiting to be first in the door of the County Exhibit Building. Hardcover books sell for 50 cents, paperback for 25 cents and the better books, including petroleum materials, are individually priced.

There are always plenty of good books left for Friday, Saturday and Sunday, but you'll never know what you missed Thursday. Sale hours on Friday are noon until 9 p.m.; Saturday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday, 1 p.m. to 3 p.m.

Used magazines are not included in the annual sale. Those are sold by the Friends at the downtown and Centennial Branch Libraries. Since the Friends began selling donated magazines for 10 cents each at the downtown library in April of 1991, $4,000 has been raised. Thank you folks and keep bringing the donations.

The new 7th edition of the McCraw-Hill Encyclopedia of Science and Technology is on the shelf in the downtown library reference section. It has been five years since the last edition and even though the library purchases annual yearbooks, it was time for a complete update. This 20-volume set boasts 21 Nobel Laureates among its 3,000 contributors. The 6th edition will be moved to the checkout shelf.

Emerson and Henderson Elementary Schools tied for the largest number of students to sign up for the library's summer reading program. More than an 1,000 children joined the "Globe Trekkers" to read books or have books read to them. They checked out nearly 10,000 books and 1,600 attended programs. Certificates, ribbons, and T-shirt transfers were awarded to successful readers.

Maybe Christopher Columbus wasn't the first to the New World but he certainly marked the path better than anyone else. To celebrate the 500th anniversary of Columbus' arrival, the downtown library has acquired some special books.

Rand McNally's Atlas of Columbus and the Great Discoveries by Kenneth Nebenzahl is a gift to the library from a patron. This is a lovely collection of maps, dated before and after 1492.

"Discovery: Exploration Through the Centuries" by Eric Flaum, a lavishly illustrated oversized book, is not limited to Columbus' exploits, but celebrates man's search into the unknown from ancient civilizations to the present.

The Christopher Columbus Encyclopedia is two volumes of alphabetical entries on topics related to Columbus and his times. These are reference volumes; the Nebenzahl and Flaum books may be checked out.

Building Bulletin: Library addition construction continues mostly at ground level including the foundation, underground lines, and elevator shafts. Library visitors, especially the children, and staff are enjoying watching the progress from the south window. We are not too fond of the jackhammers but we endure the noise.

Hospital names nursing head

Staff report

Peggy Rupe, a native of Carlsbad, N.M., has been named the new director of nursing for the Rehabilitation Hospital of Midland-Odessa.

Rupe

This move marks a return to the Midland-Odessa area for Ms. Rupe, who first worked here in 1988.

"Nursing has always been a rewarding career for me," she said.

Although she said it was difficult for her to leave Midland, in 1990 she was recruited to open a physical rehabilitation facility in Fort Worth. That opportunity provided her with a management position she had been seeking and allowed her to enhance her rehabilitation skills.

"As director of nursing for the Fort Worth Rehabilitation Hospital, I worked with patients on a very intense level of care," Ms. Rupe said. "Rehabilitation is different from all other facets of nursing because it touches every physical and emotional aspect of a patient's life."

Then in May of this year, she received an offer to return to Midland.

"The prospect of returning to the Midland-Odessa communities was an offer I couldn't refuse," she said.

"Moving back to Midland-Odessa brings me closer to my family and my husband's family," she added. "This area is small enough that you feel like a real part of the community, but big enough to provide cultural and educational opportunities for my children."

Ms. Rupe will reside in Midland with her husband, Mike, and three children, Charlie, 16; Damie, 13; and Michael, 9.

Community college journalists to convene in Midland

Staff report

Aspiring journalists from throughout Texas are to gather in Midland Thursday and Friday for the 1992 convention of the Texas Community College Journalism Association.

Headquarters for the conference is the Midland Hilton.

"We are using mostly local and 'home-grown' talent for our various presentations," said Bob Templeton, Midland College's Allison Professor of Journalism, who will serve as conference chair. Templeton also is vice president of the TCCJA.

The convention opens Thursday evening with registration, a reception for student advisors and business meetings of both the TCCJA and the Texas Intercollegiate Press Association.

Ten sessions are being held Friday. Students are to attend two in the morning and two in the afternoon.

James Roberts, publisher of the Andrews News and the owner of Roberts Group of Newspapers, is to be the Friday luncheon speaker.

The TCCJA awards banquet is set for 7 p.m. Friday.

Those attending the conference have the option of to Prude Ranch near Fort Davis Saturday and Sunday.

First morning sessions include: Newspaper Critique, Jim Servatius, editor, and Gary Ott, managing editor, Reporter-Telegram; or The Latest in Desktop Publishing, Randall Roberts, regional distributor of computer systems, Andrews.

During the second morning session, students may choose from: The Big Picture of Newspaper Photography, presented by Curt Wilcott, photographer for the Reporter-Telegram, and John Faught, Odessa American photographer; Working in the Small Broadcast Market, presented by Tina Sanders, KOSA-TV reporter; Kurt Kisen, KOSA-TV sportscaster; and Lisa Barker, KODM Radio newscaster; or Covering the Sports Beat with Bill Price, Reporter-Telegram sports writer.

First afternoon session offers a choice of: Spicing Up Newspaper Page Designs, Olaf Frandsen, the editor of the Odessa American; Creative Advertising Designs, Sara Plaster, Southwest Texas State University instructor and former Purdue University publications advisor; or Freedom of the Student Press, a panel discussion with David Daniel, Midland College president; Joyce Prock, UT-Pan American publications advisor; Jacqueline Whitaker, Lee College student editor; and Debi Spencer, SWTSU student editor.

Second afternoon sessions include: Internship Opportunities for Students, with Gilbert Martinez, UT-Pan American student editor; Freelance Writing Strategies for Students, Mary Frances Beverly, Midland free-lance writer; Newspaper Advertising Techniques, Mario Pena, Reporter-Telegram, advertising manager; and Improving Student Publications Photography, Jeff Henderson, SWTSU publications advisor and photography instructor.

Templeton noted that John Faught, Tina Sanders, Lisa Barker, and Debi Spencer were former journalism students at Midland College.

Elise Coombes, Midland College student publications advisor, and members of the current Midland College student publications staffs would assist with the conference.

Jack Sherman Chevrolet repeats 'Driving for Education' program

Staff report

Jack Sherman Chevrolet has announced it will repeat its "Driving for Education" program this year for area schools.

"Because of the phenomenal success of this program last year, we are definitely scheduling a repeat performance," Jack Sherman said. "This program is part of a nationwide effort of Chevrolet dealers who are stimulating volunteer community activity in support of local schools and the improvement of education in America."

During the 1991-'92 school year, Jack Sherman Chevrolet provided a number of advanced classroom tools to area schools through its "Driving for Education" program.

"Our dealership has found that the 'Driving for Education' program has proved to be an effective way to provide important and much-needed leading-edge learning equipment to our own local schools without resorting to tax dollars in these days of tight budgets and scarce money," Sherman said.

"Since there is no pressure to buy and the school's awards are based on the numbers of volunteers participating, the whole affair has had the effect of energizing the community in support of schools. It has had the added benefit of heightening public awareness of our local school needs," he added.

During the coming school year, the local dealership will be making available a number of enhancements to the "Driving for Education" program. In addition to Apple computers and Magnavox audio/visual equipment, the company will be adding the Encyclopedia Britannica, plus Texas Instruments calculators and a collection of Wilson sporting goods as new award selections.

The equipment already provided has been greeted with enthusiasm by teachers, administrators and students, Sherman said. He cited this enthusiasm as an indication of the serious equipment needs that persist in many schools, but also as a sign of the effectiveness of the "Driving for Education" program in meeting those needs.

"Almost every day we hear or read about the pressing challenges that our schools, teachers, and, ultimately, our children face," Sherman said. "The challenges are intensifying. That's what makes this program so appropriate right now. It is an idea whose time is here."

Nationwide, the program has attracted some 300,000 volunteers.

School tells Apache student to cut his hair

■ Father says 5-year-old's braids are part of Indian culture, religion.

Associated Press

DALLAS — A school district's order that an Indian student lop off his braided hair has cut into his religious freedom, the boy's parents say.

Itsa-Lichii Gomez, a 5-year-old Apache, was told Friday not to return to McWhorter Elementary School until he had gotten a haircut.

Gregory Gomez, the boy's father, contends the braids are part of Indian religious and cultural beliefs.

"My mother on her death bed asked me not to cut my hair because it was the most visible, tangible representation of our history, our culture, our way of life, our religion," he told WFAA-TV. "It's very hard for us to separate one from another."

The Mesquite Independent School District says there are no exceptions under its 25-year-old dress code. It prohibits hair longer than collar-length.

"We think it helps children fit into society better," said Dixie Parris of the east Dallas suburb's district. "For instance, if you go to work for EDS, you're going to dress in a certain way. And that's just part of growing up, is some degree of conformity."

She referred to Dallas-based Electronic Data Systems, which was founded by billionaire Ross Perot. The businessman, who is considering running for president, had established a rigorous dress code at the company.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled in 1972 "there is no constitutionally protected right to wear one's hair in elementary and secondary schools in the length and style that suits the wearer."

Other school districts are more lenient. The Dallas Independent School District has not required Indian students to get haircuts, said Leo Wesley of the DISD American Indian Education Program.

He said Indians there wear hair over their collars.

Gomez wants to cut short the hair length disagreement by teaching his son at home. The boy says the Mesquite school's decision has hurt his feelings.

Female bank robbery suspect shocks police

MESQUITE (AP) — Police thought they'd caught their man.

But the bank robbery suspect dubbed "Cowboy Bob" has turned out to be "Babette."

Peggy Jo Tallas, 48, remained jailed Saturday on two counts of robbery. Bond was set at $100,000 on each count.

The Garland woman was arrested outside her apartment Friday, just after two Mesquite banks were robbed by a long-haired, bearded robber wearing sunglasses and a cowboy hat. A witness had caught the license plate number of the getaway car.

FBI Agent Marjorie Poche said authorities found cowboy disguises and "a lot" of money in Ms. Tallas' apartment.

Investigators said they think Ms. Tallas is responsible for at least five bank robberies since December. They had thought the suspect was a man because Cowboy Bob never talked during the holdups.

"They're still shocked," Ms. Poche said.

Free trade agreement meeting to be next month, papers say

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — President Bush will meet in early October in San Antonio with the heads of state of Mexico and Canada to initial the text of the North American Free Trade Agreement, according to published reports.

The San Antonio Express-News and the San Antonio Light reported in Saturday's editions that the meeting probably will be about Oct. 7 between Bush, Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari and Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney.

According to the Light, Mulroney's press secretary confirmed that his government has alerted some San Antonio hotels for a possible meeting of the heads of state in early October.

The Express-News said it was told the meeting is expected to last about two hours.

San Antonio Mayor Nelson Wolff said he is unable to comment on the plans.

Mexico's consul general said any announcements relating to Salinas' schedule would have to come from the president's residence in Mexico City.

Mark Entwistle, Mulroney's press secretary, said Friday in Ottawa that the three heads of state are trying to find a mutually agreeable time and place to approve the final draft of the proposed free trade agreement.

"They're continuing to pull together the legal text on the NAFTA, and there is talk now of organizing something to have the agreement initialed," Entwistle said.

At least one local hotel official said representatives of all three governments had called inquiring about the possibility of accommodating the heads of state and their official entourages.

Entwistle said a San Antonio site for the meeting is not certain. Regarding a Mexican news report that the meeting could take place Oct. 8-9, Entwistle said that was only one of the set of dates suggested for the meeting.

Washington sources said Salinas has scheduled an Oct. 7-8 trip to New York and Virginia and could be hoping to add the three-nation summit to his stateside agenda.

The Houston Post reported Thursday that White House sources had confirmed planning was under way for an early October meeting of the Canadian, Mexican and United States heads of state. That report quoted a Mexican news report as stating the meeting could take place in Houston.

A presidential signing ceremony, to be held next month, would be ceremonial. Under fast-track authority granted by Congress, the earliest Bush could sign the agreement would be Dec. 17.

But an October free-trade summit might be seen by Bush as an opportunity to challenge Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton, to define his position on the proposed pact.

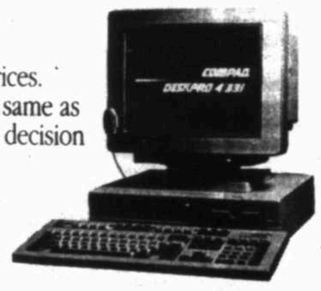

Clinton has said he favors the concept of free trade with Mexico, but has expressed reservations about details in the agreement worked out by the Bush administration.

If you still think clones are a lot cheaper than COMPAQ®, you probably still think all resellers are the same too.

But you'd be wrong on both counts.

COMPAQ® has lowered prices. Now you pay only about the same as you would for a clone. Your decision is a no-brainer. Case closed.

Where you buy now becomes the issue. And the answer is based on the same reasoning that sets COMPAQ apart from clones — long-term performance.

The COMPAQ DESKPRO 486/33i is only one of the many COMPAQ products available at ValCom. Features include 4MB of high-speed memory, the QVision 1024 Graphics Controller, graphics accelerator and three 8/16-bit ISA slots.

COMPAQ

But it's our investment in world class support services that spells the difference. Installation, training, service contracts, over 2000 Systems Engineers, advanced configuration and connectivity expertise, state-of-the-art networking and integration support, leasing, 800 number consulting — these are only a portion of our total support network. This is our corporate obsession — more than products — solutions.

So when you select COMPAQ for performance beyond the clones, select the source whose performance makes clones of other resellers.

ValCom — value beyond the machines.

In today's reselling marketplace all the major players offer two things: price and availability. But with most, that's where their story ends. At ValCom, it's where our story begins. Because we're part of the billion dollar InaCom organization, our buying muscle and on-hand inventories take a back seat to no one.

GALLOPING TOWARD OUR GOAL-THE UNITED WAY

Marshal Jess Parrish and his posse are trying to raise $2,755,000 which will be used to run the Hopeless Gang out of Midland County. You know the gang– Hunger, Abuse, Homelessness, Illiteracy and Drugs. But Parrish and his posse have a lot of obstacles to overcome.

The Hopeless Gang is ready to ambush Marshal Jess and his men at every turn, and they need your help. Just like a hundred years ago, Midlanders have got to pull together to help their friends and neighbors.

So far, Marshal Jess and his deputies have raised $832,703. That's 30.2 percent of the goal. However, he only has until Nov. 10 to raise that money or the Hopeless Gang will take over the county.

The United Way–it's how the West is being won.

FEMALE PERSONAL ADS
The following ads have been placed by females looking to meet males

Professional black female seeking a sincere male to spend time with. My hobbies include playing volleyball, bowling, reading and painting. I love meeting people and I'm always willing to try new things. So if there is a nice guy out there who doesn't have a wife, children, criminal record and between the ages of 24 - 36. Respond. All letters will be answered. MP-559.

This "good ole" Caucasian female, born in the 50's is looking for a "good ole" down to earth Caucasian male, 40 - 55, who wants a loving permanent relationship. Life is too short to be alone so lets get acquainted. Looks not important but honest and loyalty are. Please write and leave phone number. You will not be disappointed. Will answer all replies. MP-560

Multifaceted, attractive, intelligent lady enjoys laughing, holding hands, cuddling, togetherness seeks gentleman 45 plus with a quest for adventure. Believes there is more to life than 9 to 5; spontaneity, compassion, romance, honesty, thoughtfulness are a part of his makeup. Seeking same? Then please write with address and phone and let's get together. All answered. MP-580

62-year-old lady just looking for a nice man to meet. Just send phone number. MP-570

Are you 45 - 55 sincere, caring & know how to make a lady happy? Do you enjoy quiet romantic evenings, fireplaces and soft music, good cooking, spectator sports, C & W dancing and place high value on honesty, committment & work hard at being a true freind? If so, let me know. All replies answered. MP-574.

Single Caucasian female, 20, 5'9" tall, 130 lbs, mature, honest, reliable, trustworthy, non-drinker or smoker. I enjoy traveling, animals, the ocean, spending time together, church activities. I am looking for a 20 - 30 year old Caucasian man who is clean-cut, sense of humor, has similar interests, and looking for a possible relationship. Send a letter and include a picture if possible. All inquiries answered. MP-576.

Would like to meet a Christian man (senior citizen age); no drinking or smoking. Some one who is tall, enjoys going places and is kind and loving. I have lots of places to go but my big house is too much for one. I am a senior citizen and have nice car. I am 5'8, 147 lbs, brown hair, blue eyes. I was in business for years but now retired. I am very secure and would like to meet someone. All replies answered. MP-577.

Nothing beats a failure but a try. So write to me and let's correspond and maybe possibly more too. An attractive 23 year old brown eyed, brunette, 5'6" slim-trim figure, athletic, enthusiastic female who wants to meet compassionate, serious minded, sincere male who is outgoing, understandable and is willing to try to find happiness. Let's explore each other and build that chemistry between each other and I guaranteed it will be worth your wait. Will love you for yourself. A key to a relationship or getting to know someone is communication so let's not play games and together we can fill that empty void. Please include address in letter as well as envelope or mailing address. Age not important. MP-578

Looking for professional female who never got around to having a family, who, now, would like to marry, have children, but yet continue her career. I am a greying blonde, 6'3", 190 lbs, run 30 miles per week (bet I can outrun you), eat healthy, do not smoke cigarettes, nor drink alcohol, but do like rock music and "Rockin' Hard", a professional Caucasian male with the family experience, health, money & time to enjoy a second family. If you have high standards and are ready to enjoy all facets of the procreation process, come on, write me. All talk kept secret. (Yes, I am handsome and sexy). MP-572

I've placed and answered an ad or two, met some very nice women, but alas, not the right one yet. She should be about in her mid 50s, slim, educated, easygoing, romantic, liberal, tolerant, non-religious, unencumbered. I'm pretty much like the above. Also I'm 5'9, 178, Caucasian, 65, employed and moderately comfortable. I smoke, have an occasional drink and probably a few other bad habits but generally a nice guy. Hope to hear from a special lady who feels there might be good chemistry. MP-573.

28 year old Caucasian male, blonde, green eyes, six ft., 165 lbs, that is intelligent, good looking and enjoys staying fit. Other interests include bicycling, bowling, crosswords or just quiet evenings at home. Looking for that special woman with similar interests that can be honest, no "games" played. If you're the woman I seek, please envoy your phone and photo with your response. MP-575.

Single professionally employed black male, 29, would like to meet a single black female who is career oriented. Age is not a factor. I enjoy listening to R&B and Jazz, movies and athletics. Must be open minded and have a great sense of humor. Please respond with phone number and Bio. Hope we meet soon! MP-579

A lady wanted to share a fun relationship as friends and buddies without conflict. She should be free to travel to far off places for long periods of time. Let's go tropical, hike the white sand beaches, catch and release Bill Fish in clean water where we can see the sea floor 50 feet below. I am a degreed professional, athletic 50's, non-smoker, no drugs. Have RV and unsinkable boat. Need a lovely, slender, intelligent lady to make my world complete. Please write - I will reply. The Right Mix

Photography by Curt Wilcott

By Sonja Merrick

An absolutely ideal combination of comfort and tradition, warmth and sophistication is found in this delightful Plantation Hills home. The Satillo tile foyer floor glows. Straight ahead lies a large, dramatic living area. Walls warm, rich wood. The white-painted ceiling is pitched and wood-beamed. One wall houses a white brick fireplace flanked by floor-to-ceiling windows. The windows look out to a lighted, covered deck and a beautifully landscaped back yard. Tucked within a closet in one corner of the living area is a complete wet bar.

To the right of the entry lies a lovely formal dining area. One wall is dominated by a beautiful bay window that nearly reaches ceiling height. Charming, dramatic striped wallpaper graces the wall. A glimmering chandelier sparkles overhead.

A large, sunny kitchen is located just beyond the formal dining area. It boasts a center work island with Jenn-air grill, a multitude of raised-paneled cabinets, dishwasher, disposal, self-cleaning oven, built-in microwave and a large pantry.

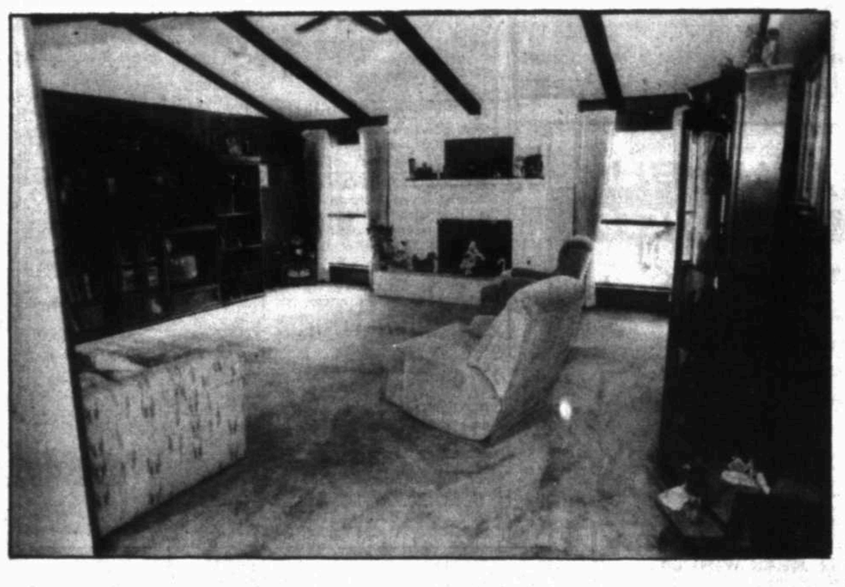

A bar area separates it from a large, beautifully papered breakfast area. Nearby lies a sizeable utility room with enough space for an upright freezer and its own storage closet.

A left turn from the foyer leads to two very large bedrooms joined by a Jack-and-Jill bath. In the hall, find another half bath and beyond that a huge master suite. Large enough to accommodate a sitting area, the master bedroom is graced with many large floor-to-ceiling windows and a door that leads to the patio. The master bath has a double vanity and separate shower.

Other amenities in this three-bedroom, three-bath home include ceiling fans, insulated windows, water softener, two-car garage with automatic opener and a sprinkler system.

The back yard is fenced and lushly landscaped with oak, redbud and pear trees. Also beds full of bushes, strawberries, tomatoes, vegetables, mint and flowers abound.

This home is being offered by Don Harvey Realtors for $89,900.

This home will be open from 2 to 4 p.m.

Homeowners fight increasing crime

This is the first part of a three-part series.

Bad news in our communities has been good news for home security system companies. Many of us who grew up sleeping with the windows open and the front door unlocked are now familiar with the spectrum of motion detectors, sirens and touch pads available.

Despite the advance of technology, law enforcement officials point out that the best methods of home protection are still the simplest. A small investment in hardware and effort can be a great value in peace of mind and your family's security.

Police statistics show that the majority of burglars enter your home the way you do — through the door.

Most intruders will be discouraged by a double cylinder deadbolt lock. For maximum effectiveness the lock and strikeplate should be made of case-hardened steel.

It's also a good idea to reinforce your door frames with woodscrews to further discourage kickins.

"The frustrating thing for police officers is that there are so many resistance," said Jim Maddux, a director of community relations for the police department in an affluent suburban area.

Sliding glass patio doors are a primary entrance point for thieves. Any one of the following suggestions will help, but police recommend all three together to fortify these entrances.

Many homes already have a "charlie bar" in place. The metal bar fits securely against the sliding door to prevent sliding unless it's moved from the inside.

But often the doors can still be lifted off-track from the outside. Four simple woodscrews driven into the track above the door can blunt that approach.

Add a barrel bolt lock and you've thwarted every possibility but the noisy crash of a rock through the glass door.

There are three "Ds" to keep in mind. Deny entry, detect any problem situation and delay the process.

Roof inspections call for binoculars, ladder

Associated Press

Many homeowners rarely think twice about what goes over their heads, until raindrops start falling on their heads. But even if you don't notice any immediate problems, it's wise to make a roof inspection a regular part of your home's exterior maintenance program.

Roof damage arises from a variety of causes. But many homeowners plant the seeds of roof deterioration from inside the house by not installing adequate insulation, vapor barriers and ventilation in their ceilings or attics. This permits warm moist air to rise to the underside of the roof.

Condensing there, it can rot the rafters and eventually even the roof deck. It also damages the roofing itself. Roofing materials also perish from constant exposure to the elements.

For a thorough roof inspection, both in the spring and in the fall, the only tools you'll need are a flashlight, screwdriver, putty knife, binoculars and a ladder.

After a hard rain, go up to the attic to examine the underside of the roof deck. Poke with your knife and screwdriver to locate wet, darkened or deteriorating wood on the ceiling beams or rafters. If you find any, trace the moisture path back to its origin.

This may be tough; the steeper the roof's pitch, the farther the moisture can travel from its entry point to where it is collected. Next, turn off the lights and look for pinholes or cracks of daylight in the roof surface. When you find the leak, measure its location in relation to a reference point, like a chimney or vent stack. This will help in locating it from the top of the roof.

Aside from checking the shingles, you should also inspect the flashing and the rain gear. Flashing is the thin metal bands that form a watertight seal where the chimneys, vents, dormers, skylights, and vertical walls meet or enter the roof. Rain gear — the roof's downspouts and gutters — channels water from the roof to the ground.

In doing so, it prevents water stains on siding, trim and masonry and reduces the chance of decay and ice damage to those parts. Rain gear also lessens the chances of water dripping from the side of the roof and eroding soil where it lands and from leaking into the basement.

While standing on the ground, search the roof with your binoculars. Look for obvious trouble spots, like missing, cracked or warped shingles. Then, search for loose flashing or rust stains on the flashing caused by corroding nails.

Pay especially close attention to flashing around chimneys, vent stacks and in roof valleys. Check for cracks in the roofing tar that is often used with the flashing or that has been applied over leaks. Unclog gutters if necessary.

Different types of roofing show characteristic signs of wear.

Asphalt shingles may crack, warp or show bald spots where mineral granules have worn away. Wood shingles and shakes often cup and become brittle by exposure to the sun. Tile and slate frequently chip, crack or come loose. Built-up roofs can reveal bare patches from blown-away gravel or curled roofing felt.

Once you find the trouble, how do you decide if it needs a quick patch-up or professional attention?

If your exterior inspection turns up a few missing, loose or split shingles, defective flashings or clogged gutters, you can probably handle it, providing the roof isn't too steep or too high.

But you may discover decayed rafters or large areas of bad shingles. In these cases, call in a qualified roofing professional to evaluate the damage and suggest possible cures.

KENT OIL, INC. KENT KWIK CONVENIENCE STORES

WHY KENT OIL COMPANY?
Kent Oil (operating Kent Kwik convenience stores) is a West Texas-based company, thirty five years old and still growing. We offer many benefits to our employees. These benefits include:
- Company-assisted medical, dental and life insurance
- Paid vacations
- Sick pay program
- Tuition reimbursement program
- Special incentive programs for all employees
- Profit-sharing and retirement plan
- Intensive new hire training
- Structured continual management training
- Flexible scheduling
- Full and part time hours available
- Work close to home
- Affiliation with Odessa 66 credit union

We attempt whenever possible to promote from within. All of our current store managers, middle and upper management started with the company at the entry level. It is possible to move up quickly based on your experience and level of education.
Working in a convenience store is both exciting and challenging. You have to be outgoing and enjoy serving the public, while at the same time be a self-starter, as you receive very little on the job supervision.
If you are considering a career in the retail industry, give Kent Oil your consideration. Please apply at your nearest Kent Kwick Convenience Store.

ALL MY SONS

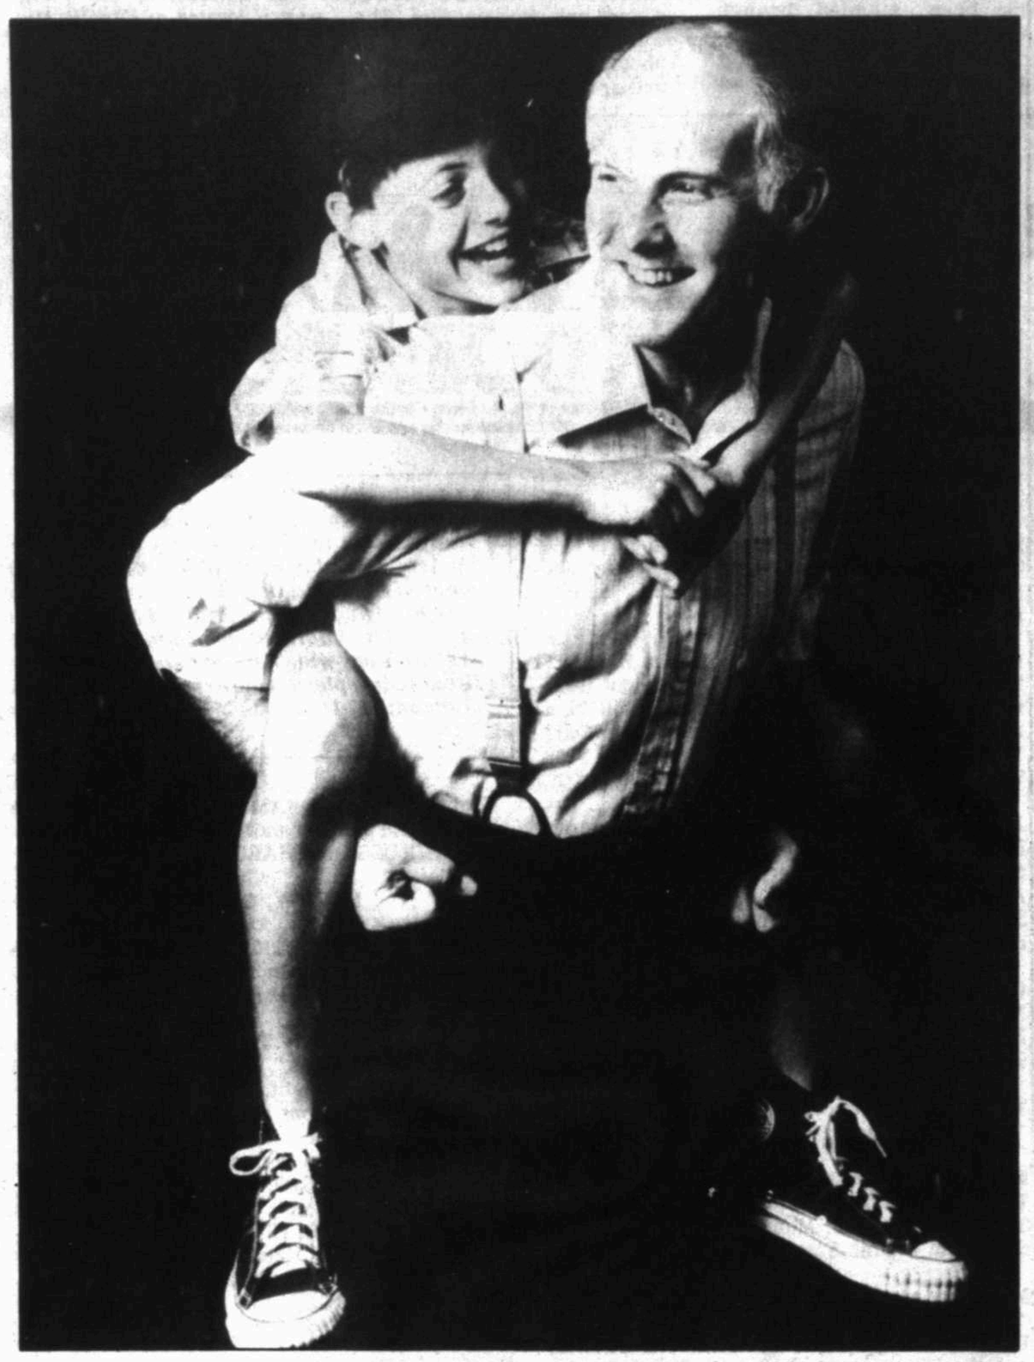

By Georgia Todd Temple

Photos by Joe D. Williams

Kate (Marilyn Allen) comforts Joe (Bill Warren).

Sue (Kelly Newsome) nags husband Dr. Bayliss (Mark Lancaster).

Bert (Shane Scribner) gets a piggy-back ride from Joe (Bill Warren).

Arthur Miller's "All My Sons" is a period piece that takes audiences back in time to 1947. Yet, Jerry Watson, director for the Midland College-Midland Community Theatre production, said he could have set this drama in the years following any modern war.

"I could have set this play three years after Vietnam, three years after Korea, or three years after Desert Storm because the values that are dealt with are in all those situations," Watson said. "It's a timeless piece. It poses (the question): 'What does war do to people back home?'"

The play centers around an American family involved in the airplane-parts business during the war. "They sent out some cracked cylinder heads from their plants which caused 21 American planes to go down," Watson said. "The dilemma is —Did the father cover this up or did he send them out unknowingly? "

Another trauma wrapped inside the drama is the missing-in-action status of Joe and Kate Keller's pilot son. "The mother is in denial saying the son is still alive. She will not accept the reality the son might be dead after three years," Watson said.

George (Mitch McKinley) tries to calm down Ann (Denise Boehm-Walters) about her marriage.

Her other son, who also went off to war, wishes his mother would live more in reality. "He is in love with the missing-in-action brother's girlfriend, and she is in love with him, and they feel that he (the other brother) is dead," Watson. "But Mother is trying to keep them apart because she is saving this girl for the dead boy."

Watson describes the Keller family as a dysfunctional family with family secrets. "Everyone in the family has a secret. So we had 'dysfunctional family' written by Arthur Miller before we had the term."

Watson said the play also looks at certain moral values. "Is it all right to cheat if you're helping your family? Is it all right to do an immoral act if it helps your family?"

During the Miller play, the audience begins to wonder if the father is guilty. The son wonders the same thing. "If he is (guilty), what's to be done about it?" Watson said. "(His) partner is in jail for the act."

"All My Sons" is to be presented Friday through Oct. 17 in Mabee Theatre Two, Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

The play, co-produced by Nancy and Buddy Anguish and Betty and Hal Kempf, is

Museum of the Southwest extends photo exhibit

Staff report

"Kings, Khalifs and Conquistadores: Photographs of an Architectural Heritage," an exhibition of photographs by Carolyn Brown now showing at the Museum of the Southwest, has been extended through Oct. 11.

The sepia toned gelatin silver prints and cibachrome color prints are of architecture and landscape in Egypt, Spain, Iraq, Israel, Jordan, Mexico, Syria and Turkey.

Brown, a professional photographer of architecture and interiors, has traveled to many of the countries where she recorded ancient sites on film. The Iraqi government invited her to photograph archaeological sites and architectural masterpieces in 1990.

Her photographs are in corporate, personal and museum collections. She currently is exhibiting at the Dallas Museum of Art and has recently exhibited at FotoFest in Houston.

The Museum of the Southwest is located at 1705 W. Missouri Ave. Hours are 10 a.m.-5 p.m. Tuesday-Saturday, and 2-5 p.m. on Sundays.

Hitchcock-Hall receives Summer Mummers award

Staff report

Susie Hitchcock-Hall received the "Distinguished Summer Mummers Award for Lifetime Achievement" during the group's annual meeting last week.

Ms. Hall has dedicated six years to the position of Mummers producer. To make her job more difficult, the transition was made from the old American Legion Hall, located behind the Midland County Public Library, to the Yucca Theatre during that time.

In addition, she appeared as the "femme fatale" on the stage for a decade.

The 1991 recipient was Harry Harrison.

Elected to three-year terms on the board were Suzanne Voltz and Terry Potter. Kathy Keller was appointed to fill an unexpired term.

Newly elected officers are Harrison, president; Mark Kimball, vice president; Mrs. Keller, secretary; and Barbara Fritz, treasurer.

HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 27, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Unexpected news of great importance comes your way. Real estate may be the best place to invest your money this December. Taking a refresher course in early 1993 could help you surge ahead of the competition. You will love all the praise you receive next April! Trust your intuition if asked to do an unusual favor for someone. Check the references of anyone you hire to work in your home.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Wilford Brimley, slugger Mike Schmidt, actress Jayne Meadows, golfer Kathy Whitworth.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Taking a risk makes a dream come true. Build a partnership on a strong foundation. You need to be at the top of your game tomorrow, responsible and ready. Turn in early tonight.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Are you having problems with an ally? Work things out together and you could become lifelong friends. Adventure beckons! Share expenses if you and a pal decide to travel a long distance.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Sprucing up your home takes less time than anticipated. Change gears this afternoon and get together with old friends. Romantic fireworks are in the air. Be careful not to get burned.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your weekend is filled with promising relationships, social events and a delightful secret. Home and family concerns deserve top priority. Be considerate.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A good day to get away from it all! Choose your companions carefully. Build people up with praise instead of knocking them down. Your world is expanding; be willing to branch out.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Team spirit prevails now. A church or community group proves especially congenial; good friends work toward a common goal. Managing your time efficiently will help everyone concerned.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A trip provides a welcome change of scenery today. There is a lot you can learn while exploring a new locale. Meeting people from different backgrounds gives you a fresh perspective.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You cannot afford to take any financial chances now. Play it safe and make certain your associates do, too. There is no way you can win everyone's approval.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): If confusion reigns, be patient. The pieces of a puzzle will eventually fall into place. Favors should roll in tonight, or opportunities to earn them.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Make winter vacation reservations and continue saving your money. A good mood affects everything you do. Your enthusiasm is contagious. Seek loved ones' opinions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Pull up your socks and acknowledge how much good there is in the world. Your personal magnetism draws all the right people to you this weekend.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Go for depth of knowledge when picking out something to read or watch today. Exercise makes you feel great. Test a relationship before agreeing to tie the knot.

Opening lead: Ace of ♡

If you were looking for a hand to illustrate basic elimination play, you could hardly do better than this one from the recent European Junior Championships. The event was won by Italy, with Germany second ahead of Norway.

North's heart cue-bid was a game force and three spades was simply a forcing bid in case South was interested in slam. A three-no-trump rebid by North, however, had much to recommend it, and would have saved South considerable effort.

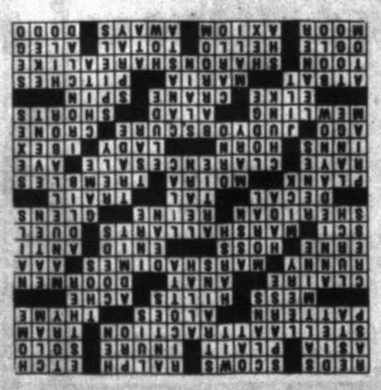

After the lead of ace of hearts and another, declarer's only problem was to avoid losing two club tricks. South demonstrated that the contract could be claimed.

With the heart suit already cleared, declarer drew trumps in two rounds, cashed the king of spades and overtook the queen of spades with the ace. A spade ruffed in the closed hand stripped the other major from the combined holding, and the stage was set.

The queen of clubs was led and, had West followed low, the lady would have been run to East. If that defender won the king, there would have been no safe exit. East would either have to return a club, assuring declarer of a second club trick, or a major suit, which would permit declarer to discard the table's club loser while ruffing in hand. As it was, West covered the queen of clubs, and declarer lost only one club trick.

Art Association to host Fall Art Exhibition

Staff report

The Midland Art Association will host its annual juried Fall Art Exhibition in the McCormick Gallery of the Allison Fine Arts Building on the Midland College campus beginning Oct. 8.

The show is an effort to bring to the public an awareness of what is being done in the contemporary art field today. The juror for the exhibition is Bob Anderson, who currently is a lecturer and instructor at the University of Texas at Austin. He formerly was an instructor at California State University and has exhibited his work throughout California.

The opening reception and awards ceremony will be held at 7 p.m. on Oct. 8. The show will continue through Oct. 24. The public is invited to attend.

Planetarium to host 'The Dawn of Astronomy'

Staff report

"The Dawn of Astronomy," a survey of astronomical contributions of ancient civilizations, will be held each Sunday between now and Nov. 29 at the Marian Blakemore Planetarium of the Museum of the Southwest.

The programs begin at 2 and 3:30 p.m.

"The Dawn of Astronomy" was developed by the Hansen Planetarium of Salt Lake City, Utah. The show examines the observations made by early peoples as they began to record changes in the night sky.

Around 2500 B.C., the Egypians developed a calendar almost as accurate as the one used today. Many constellations known today were observed and named by Babylonians nearly 4,000 years ago.

Meanwhile, the plantarium's "West Texas Skies" program continues each Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. The traditional star show outlines what is visible in the current West Texas night sky. The show is updated monthly as the skies change.

Both planetarium shows are free to museum members. Admission for non-members is $2, and $1 for children.

Warfields display art

Staff report

Art work of Bob and Gloria Warfield is on display at First City Band for the remainder of this month.

The exhibit is sponsored by the Midland Arts Association. After retiring from a long standing career in the Permian Basin as a geologist, Warfield studied at Midland College under John Harmon and Warren Taylor.

In the fall of 1990, Mrs. Warfield also has studied at MC.

The exhibit may be viewed during banking hours.

SONS: Production marks Watsons' debut as director for MCT part of MCT's membership series. For those purchasing single admission tickets, the price is $6 and $8. As always, MC students who make a reservation and present their MC identification card may get in free.

Watson said "All My Sons," Miller's first successful play, is just as intriguing and studied as "Death of a Salesman."

"It's kind of an Everyman play," said the director, who was last seen on MCT's stage as the butler in "Annie."

Although "All My Sons" marks Watson's directorial debut at MCT, the MC instructor (who has a master's degree in theater), is no newcomer to directing. He was educational theater director at Wayland Baptist University and director of theater at McMurry College in Abilene.

"I burned out because of 10 years of working in a small theater situation where I not only taught the courses but directed three or four productions a year without professional help — just my students."

In recent years, Watson has been involved in developing MC's speech, radio and television and theater departments and has taught some courses in all three departments.

"Now I have a new goal," he said. "I've decided now that my burnout is over and my creative juices are flowing. I feel it's time for me to try to build Midland College's theater department by getting involved myself and getting my students involved more in production so that they can learn theater firsthand."

Watson said MCT and MC are involved in staging two annual productions, with "All My Sons" being the fall production assigned to MC. Making the distinction between community theater and educational theater he says,"I'm involved in educational theater where we train students to go out and perhaps be teachers, or better audience members, or if they want to, go into the profession. That is called educational theater.

"Across the gully is community theater, which gives the community an opportunity to participate in theater backstage and on stage and provides the community entertainment. Our goal is to merge the two."

Watson is using as many MC students and faculty members as he can in the drama.

He said the cast includes former MC students Jodi McElligott and David Kloesel, part-time MC French teacher Denise Boehm Walters, and current MC student Mitchell McKinley.

The stage manager, Matt Dennis (former member of Pickwick Players) and assistant stage manager, Laeaurra Grant, are MC students. MC student Terry Sackett is in charge of sound and Will Coombes, son of MC teacher Elise Coombes, is in charge of lights.

Watson said his "Introduction to Theater" class "is painting sets and gathering props and helping to run this show. We're trying to give them practical experience in theater."

Veteran performers in the cast include Marilyn Allen as the mother, Kate Keller; and Bill Warren as the father, Joe Keller.

"Our younger inexperienced actors are going to get to work with veterans in a practical situation and not just studying from a text book," Watson said.

Also in the cast are Roy Miller as Chris Keller, Ann Deever, Mark Lancaster, Kelly Newsom and Shane Scribner.

Cartoonist finds inspiration in childhood dreams

RICHARDSON (AP) — When Mike Judge was growing up in Albuquerque, N.M., he never had grandiose daydreams about being a cartoonist.

Judge, who now makes homemade cartoons for MTV, didn't envision himself as an adult performing professional animation tasks. He didn't dream about being the next Walt Disney.

But as a child, he often dreamed in cartoons.

"Once, I dreamed about the cartoon crow from this Ed Black Chevrolet ad that I used to see all the time. In the commercial, the crow was just sitting there," Judge said in an interview. "But I had this dream that this cartoon crow was 100 feet tall, walking down the street with a pitchfork in his hand, stabbing people.

"It was weird."

Judge said he later found the source of this nightmare. "I had gotten part of that dream from one of those Renaissance paintings that I'd seen in one of my dad's art books."

The 29-year-old animator, who lives in the Dallas suburb of Richardson, isn't having revelations about disorderly birds anymore. One of Judge's cartoons, "Frog Baseball," is airing on MTV's Liquid Television.

The idea for "Frog Baseball" came to Judge when he overheard a friend talking.

"I remember hearing this guy asking someone, 'Have you ever played frog baseball?' the first thing that popped into my mind was a bunch of guys taking a frog and using it as a baseball," Judge said. "I don't know if that's what he meant. It stuck in my mind."

Judge sketched the protagonists for "Frog Baseball" — Beavis and Butthead — and later plugged the concept into the cartoon.

"It is sick," he said of the cartoon's title and theme. "But Beavis and Butthead, they're not two guys to be admired."

Judge said he usually creates the voices for the characters first, then develops the characters, sketches them, and puts them in a situation.

"All of my cartoons are based on something I've seen somewhere. I try to stay way from being too 'cartoony.' I try to make things more realistic. But not too realistic."

That approach helped Judge showcase his work in two traveling animation shows, the 4th Annual Celebration and the 1992 Festival of Animation. In addition, MTV purchased two other Judge cartoons, "Office Space: Featuring Milton" and "The Honky Problem." A few seconds from "Frog Baseball" and "The Honkey Problem" appeared on the MTV Music Awards earlier this month.

Another Judge cartoon, "Huh?," depicts a beer-guzzling couch-potato character watching a televised health food ad. Judge said he came up with the soundtrack one day while driving home.

"That Whole Foods store commercial came on the radio while I was driving," he explained. "It starts off kind of like 'Huh?' does. The ad says, 'Sure you think about what you eat — but do you ever think about what you're feeding your children?' It really made me mad.

"Those health food store people are using parental guilt to sell things. They think they're so above Madison Avenue, and here they are using the same sleazy approach. So that same day, I recorded the voice (of the health food store character in Huh?). Later, I toned it down a little bit."

In "Office Space: Featuring Milton," Judge offers a possessive workplace employee coupled with a condescending manager character. "Office Space," which Judge started making in September 1990, aired on The Comedy Channel. It was his first cartoon.

"I based that office manager character on every boss I ever had in California,' Judge said.

The cartoonist said that for "The Honky Problem," — a slice-of-life vignette set in a trailer park — he created the main character's voice by making fun of musicians on The Nashville Network.

"I was thinking about all these guys on TNN. They come out there, and they're always saying how it's 'really great to be here,'" he said. "Everybody is just so glad to be there all the time."

Judge said he was glad to be in San Diego for the 1992 Festival of Animation during a midnight showing of "Frog Baseball" in April.

"It was sold out," he said. "A bunch of people were singing along with the air guitar that Beavis and Butthead do in the cartoon. That really seems to reach people. It felt great to see the audience do that."

'Songs of My People' exhibit opens

NEW YORK (NYT) — An exhibition of 150 photographs that reflect the joys and pains of black people in the United States opened this week at the Museum of the City of New York. The show, "Songs of My People," will remain through Jan. 3.

"This exhibit tells the story that hasn't been told too often, and that is of success," said Martin Payson, vice chairman of Time Warner Inc., sponsor of the project. "It destroys the Willie Horton stereotypes and shows people living their regular lives."

The photographs show blacks in a variety of undertakings, including doctors and New York rap groups.

Thirteen of the 53 photographers featured in the exhibit are from the New York area including Michelle Agins and Chester Higgins Jr. of The New York Times, Jacques Chenet of Newsweek, George Chinsee of Women's Wear Daily and Ozier Muhammad of New York Newsday.

The exhibition is part of a project, sponsored by Time Warner, that includes a book with the same title as the exhibition recently published by Little, Brown & Co. and an HBO special. The project was conceived by Eric Easter, D. Michael Cheers and Dudley M. Brooks of New African Visions Inc., a Washington-based organization dedicated to providing a balanced view of African Americans through visual arts.

BRIEFING

Rigs gain

A Parker rig drilling for Amoco in better times. Both the Permian Basin and U.S. rig counts were higher for the week ended September 18, according to Baker Hughes Inc., but remain among the lowest in history.

The Basin count climbed 11 to 98 for the week; a year ago the count was 92.

In the U.S., the count surged 33 to 720. A year ago the national count was 770.

FERC access

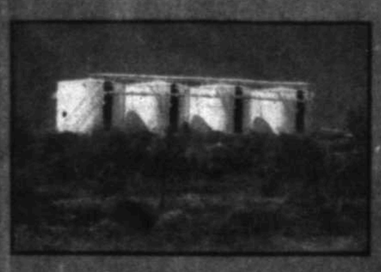

Beginning October 15, natural gas producers and others interested in the proceedings of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission will be able to retrive dockets and other informationa tion daily by computer from FERC.

It is part of a program initiated by Chairman Martin Allday to bring information more rapidly to the public. "In this computerized age it is vital that the public receives information as fast as it can be input into computers," said Allday.

To participate in the information retrival program, a request must be made to the Office of Secretary, Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, Room 3110, 825 N. Capitol St., NE, Washington, DC 20426.

IPAA meet

The 63rd Annual Meeting of the Independent Petroleum Association of America (IPAA) will be held November 12-15 at the Reno Hilton, Reno/Lake Tahoe, Nevada. The gathering of the membership of the nation's only national trade association representing U.S. independent crude oil and natural gas producers and explorers will feature a presentation by Edward J. Rollins, Political strategist to H. Ross Perot, Ronald Reagan, Gerald Ford and Richard Nixon, and remarks by a number of other prominent government, foreign, financial, and industry leaders.

Crude futures hovered in a $21.80-$22 range for the week, with an announced that Iran would increase its production by 400,000 barrels daily providing the only real news of the week

Valero hit

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Valero Energy Corp. said it had created a voluntary early retirement plan as it aims for a leaner organization and greater cost efficiencies.

About 175 of Valero's 1,695 employees qualify for the plan, the company said.

Has the bubble busted?

■ Some feel the agony may be over for depressed gas industry.

N.Y. Times News Service

DALLAS — For natural gas producers in the United States, the last few years have been a famine of biblical proportions. Prices have been so low that hundreds of companies have been driven out of business and thousands of workers have lost their jobs.

Now, suddenly, gas prices are at a post-1985 high. They were jolted upward most recently when Hurricane Andrew tore through the Gulf of Mexico last month, knocking out about 5 percent of the nation's gas output for several weeks.

But the hurricane was only the latest of several events that have caused spot prices for natural gas to double in only six months. What is more, gas producers now believe that the confluence of a number of long-term trends will keep prices comfortably above the low-water marks of recent years.

"We are getting back very close to a balance in supply and demand in natural gas," said Kenneth L. Lay, chairman and chief executive of the Enron Corp., operator of the nation's biggest pipeline and a large independent gas producer.

Analysts say the markets are favoring producers because of a combination of factors that have been either limiting supplies or increasing demand.

Gas supply will be adequate

■ Heating bills may be higher, but gas supplies will be adequate

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Damage from Hurricane Andrew and concerns about a cold winter have pushed natural gas markets to record levels and home heating costs likely will rise this winter, say industry officials.

"We expect any such (residential) bill increases to be minimal," Michael Baly, president of the American Gas Association, told reporters.

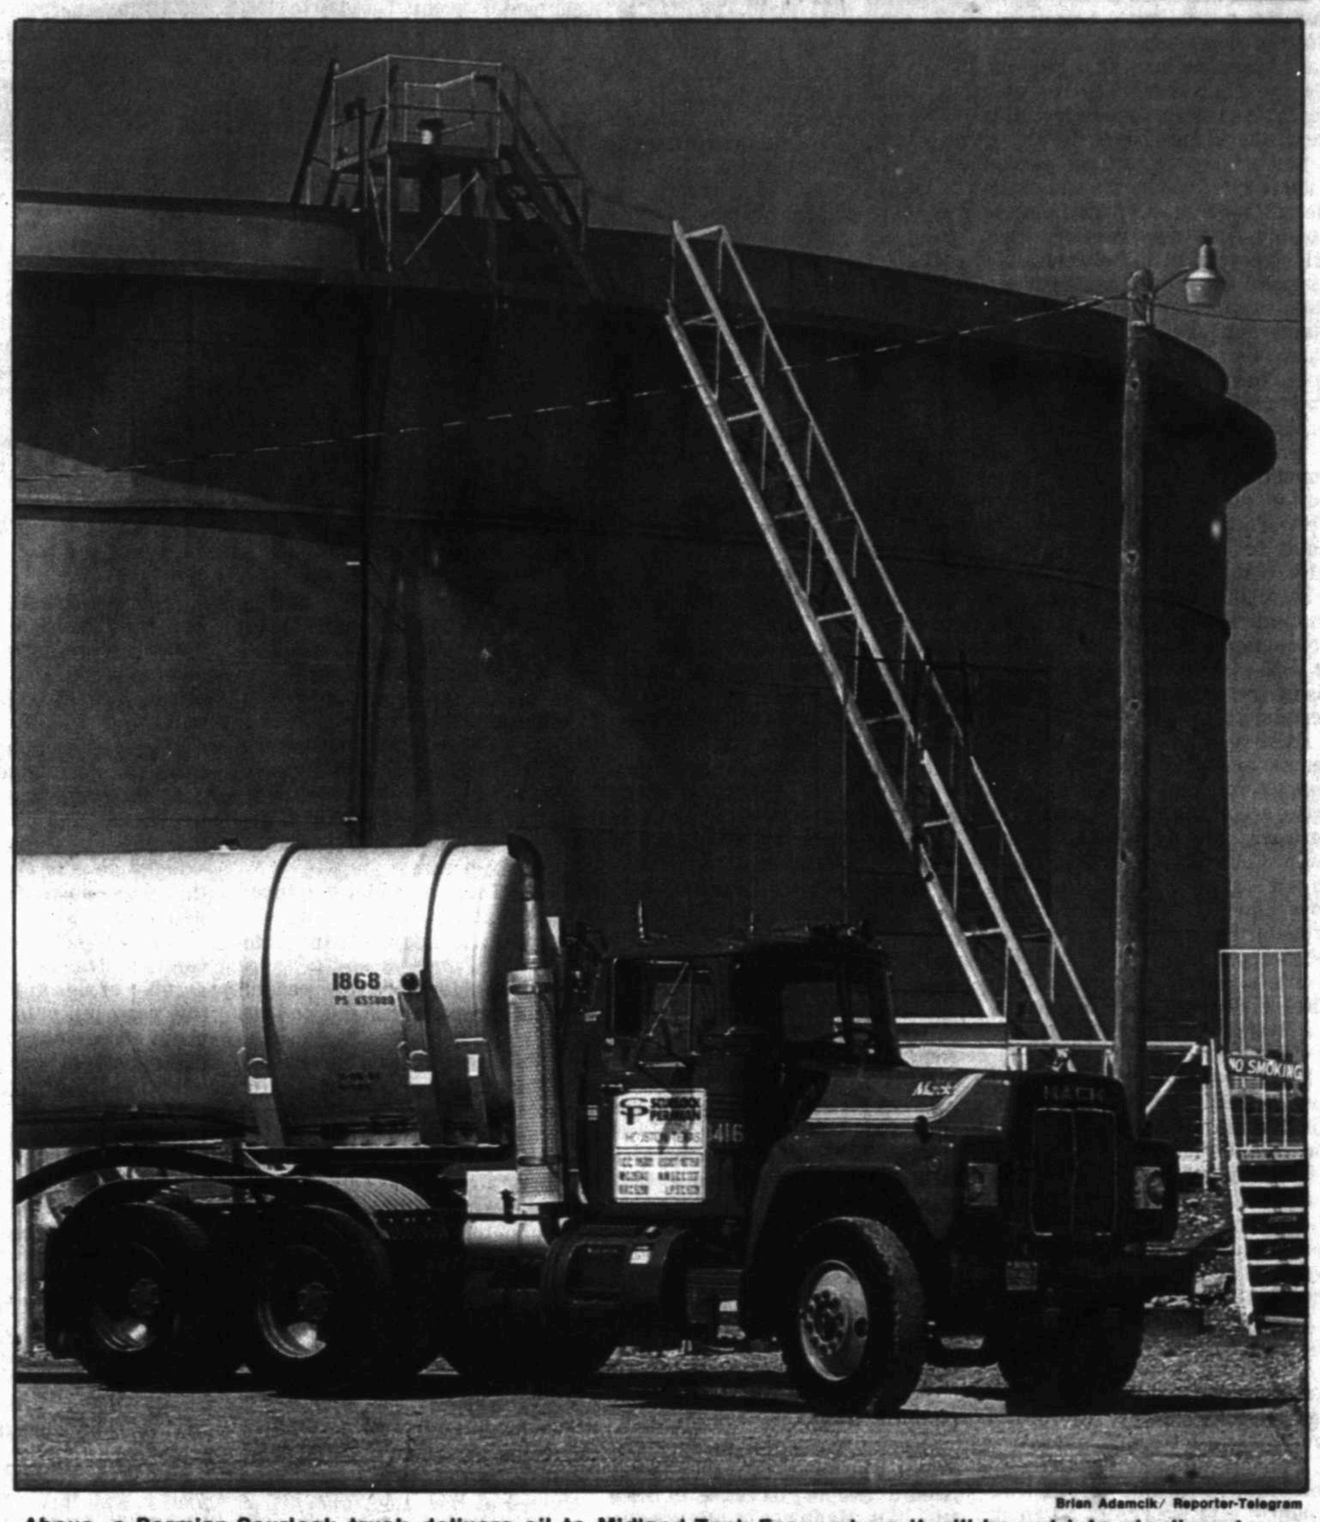

Natural gas futures prices have increased in recent weeks partly because of concern about supply interruptions from storm damage and because of a forecast of a colder-than-average winter.

Natural gas prices soared 19.4 cents per 1,000 cubic feet Tuesday on the New York Mercantile Exchange, the leading market for energy-futures contracts, to set an all-time high, settling at $2.646. The previous record final price was $2.618 on Nov. 26, 1990.

Baly said "there is an adequate supply of natural gas to satisfy a 1992-93 peak winter heating season month even if consumption were to exceed the record high."

The industry group issued its annual winter supply outlook report estimating there will be 2,565 billion cubic feet available in January, or about 100 billion cubic feet more than the record high monthly demand recorded during the

Tank farm is pipeline hub

By Melia McEwen
Staff writer

A cluster of oil storage tanks on East Highway 80 have become a Midland landmark.

Into and out of these storage tanks flows a large portion of the nation's domestically-produced crude, en route to refineries in other parts of the country.

In reality, the Midland Tank Farm is a cluster of tank farms owned by Arco, Mobil, Chevron and Basin Pipe Line.

According to Mac Gilliland, operations supervisor with Chevron Pipe Line, the company's original tank farm was established in 1927 "and was a major installation at the time, with about 10 tanks initially. After World War II started, we began adding tanks until we added the last tank around 1958."

He says the tank farm underwent a significant upgrade in 1925, when a 24-inch pipe line was laid in that goes to the Gulf Coast and the existing large capacity pump station was also put in.

Gilliland adds that there are no plans to add new tanks in the foreseeable future.

At the present time, Chevron's tank farm has 20 tanks ranging in size from 55,000 barrels to 176,000 barrels with a total storage capacity of 1,840,000 barrels and pumping capacity of 360,000 barrels per day and employs 15.

"We do business with about 35 different oil companies on a daily basis," says Gilliland, "writing ticks and oil trading, all that goes on in this type of establishment. It varies from month to month, but this is a major operation. We do a lot of oil trading with other companies."

The pipeline gathers crude from all over West Texas, according to Gilliland, with thousands of miles of pipeline leading into and culminating at the tank farm.

The area he and his workers cover ranges from southeast New Mexico and Pyote in the west down to around McCamey in the south.

From here, the crude is shipped down a 24-inch pipeline belonging to the Mesa Pipe Line system to Colorado City, where it ties into a large pump station similar in size to the one here and with similar tankage, Gilliland says.

From Colorado City, the crude travels 460 miles to the Gulf coast on a 26-inch pipeline, where it ties into Chevron's refinery in Port Arthur.

He notes that "we have many places that we spill crude along the way; the first of which is we furnish a major portion of the crude for the Fina refinery in Big Spring."

Along the way to the Port Arthur refinery, the pipeline goes through Wortham near Waco, where there is a 20-inch pipeline that ties into it and ships crude to the north and east, tying off into other systems at Longview and eventually serves the Chicago area.

The pipeline that continues into the Port Arthur area has spills into Louisiana and refineries in that area that have ties to major product lines that feed the east coast with products such as diesel and gasoline, Gilliland says.

In addition to the crude oil line, Chevron has a major LPG system that gathers LPG from throughout West Texas and New Mexico, transporting it to the coast along the same general path as the crude oil. Gilliland calls it one of the largest if not the largest LPG system in West Texas.

There is also a pipeline that runs from the Fina refinery to Chevron's products terminal adjacent to the Mesa terminal.

An operation almost as big as Chevron's belongs to Mobil Pipe Line, which has 21 active storage tanks with a storage capacity of 1.5 million barrels.

Of course, says Bill Bush, area manager "it's not normal to have the storage full all the time. Our on-hand is considerably less than that."

Mobil's facility was built in 1927 or 1928, Bush isn't sure of the year, and he

Energy bill adrift in rough political waters

Pitts

Question: What was nearly four years in the making? Is rumored to be close? But may never happen?

Answer: The elusive National Energy Strategy.

Whether or not the democrats will allow the President to have this bill, which could possibly earn him a few points in an election year, is a question that weighed heavy on the administration this week.

Despite a plea from the President to put aside petty differences and give the nation an energy bill, negotiations on the energy bill stalled this week among the 134 conferees of the House and Senate, and Energy Secretary James Watkins now gives it no better than a 50-50 chance of passing. "I had been optimistic of NES passing, but now Congress is about to adjourn and there is still lots of work to be done."

Watkins called the actions discouraging. "We have been working on this bill since the President announced his strategy 560 days ago. This bill is long overdue."

The question is: Is it a legitimate lack of concensus that is stalling the bill or is it politics — democratic foot dragging. The second question is: Will it hurt the democrats or republicans.

A source at the Department of Energy told me that there was yet no clear cut sign that the democrats were foot-dragging: "We feel that we have genuine bipartisan support for the bill, but we will have a better idea at the end of this week."

He said there were still several sticky issues to be resolved, namely expansion of the moratorium on offshore drilling and proration of natural gas. The House wants to expand the moratorium, the President does not. Our source, which asks not to be identified, tells us the President probably regrets his decision on the Outer Continental Shelf drilling ban, just as he regrets his giving in to "more new taxes." He noted: "I can't speak for the president, but I think he has been informed on more than one occassion that it was the wrong decision."

The president announced a sweeping 10-year ban on offshore leasing for the West Coast and most of the East Coast in 1990. Now, one can only wonder what advice the president got or what he was thinking when he endorsed the ban, which has earned him the wrath of his friends in the oil industry, the scorn of conservatives and the ridicule of his enemies. It won him zero points with the environmental crowd.

Mockingly, Albert Gore is fond of saying that he "supports the president in his offshore drilling ban."

When Henson Moore moved from the Department of Energy to the White House, Watkins made the statement that Moore would be able to give the president "better energy advise." It is too bad that Moore or somebody could not have been on hand to advise the president on OCS, because it is certainly taking its toll on an energy policy.

If the energy bill does not pass this year and goes until next year, the big loser will be the independent producers who stand to lose $1 billion in relief over a five year period through repeal of alternative minimum tax. The AMT has been a tremendous disincentive to the production of domestic oil and gas. "Our

BUBBLE: Is this the year for natural gas?

(From 1E)

R. Gamble Baldwin, managing partner of Natural Gas Partners, an investment firm in Greenwich, Conn., said prices could spike above $2.50 per 1,000 cubic feet if the winter is particularly cold.

Gas consumption in the United States has increased in each of the last five years, partly because industrial users and utilities found gas cheaper to burn than fuel oil. By most accounts, gas use will reach 20 trillion cubic feet this year, the highest since 1979.

Some forecasts put the annual total at 23 trillion by the end of the decade, with most of the increase coming from new gas-fired electric power plants. Between 1978 and 1988, Congress banned gas as a fuel source for new industrial plants and new electrical power plants because of fears of shortages. Gas plants are cheaper to build and operate than coal or oil-fired plants and they pollute less.

While production has risen enough to permit the use of gas in power plants, drillers have not been finding enough new gas fields for reserves to keep pace with rising production.

In 1991 additions to reserves amounted to just 70 percent of production. With drilling activity at a 50-year low and with output rising, reserve replacements will certainly be even lower this year.

Existing total proven gas reserves amount to an eight-year supply at current consumption rates, according to the Energy Department. But the National Petroleum Council, an industry-sponsored group that advises government energy officials, says probable gas reserves exceed a 50-year supply, and it maintains that if prices remain high enough to finance drilling and production, the level of reserves could quickly be increased.

Rising crude oil prices this year have helped to bolster gas prices. Many manufacturers and utilities can burn either gas or No. 6 fuel oil, whichever is cheaper. With the price of light domestic crude oil hovering near $22 a barrel, gas has had a clear price advantage over fuel oil until it soared past $2 per 1,000 cubic feet in late August.

After falling in some areas below $1 per 1,000 cubic feet — the lowest winter price in 15 years — last February, when the weather was unusually warm, gas prices have marched steadily upward.

"The gas situation has finally bottomed out and is turning around," said George P. Mitchell, chairman and chief executive of the Mitchell Energy and Development Corp.

The rise can be attributed in varying degrees to a cool spring, which caused demand for gas for heating to stay high; hot summer temperatures in the Southeast, where gas-powered electricity typically runs the air-conditioners; voluntary drilling cutbacks by some producers who were disgusted by low winter prices; new rules in Texas and Oklahoma that squeezed some output, and the June report that the nation's drilling activity had fallen to the lowest level in 50 years, with only 596 rigs exploring for oil and gas.

The peak was 4,530 rigs at the end of 1981, and last year the average number of rigs was 861.

The spot contract for natural gas deliveries in October settled on Friday on the New York Mercantile Exchange at $2.328 per 1,000 cubic feet, up 18 cents for the week. It was the first time gas prices crossed the $2.20 level in the month of September since 1985. Prices then were heading down, however, a prelude to bankruptcies and job cutbacks.

For now, analysts say the long slump in gas prices is over. "We've been waiting five years for this," said Ronald J. Barone, a managing director at Kidder, Peabody & Co., who follows the gas industry.

The common stocks of some domestic gas producers, including Anadarko Petroleum, Enron Oil and Gas and Noble Affiliates, have risen by more than 40 percent this year.

A group of seven domestic gas producers that Barone follows is up 30.9 percent so far in 1992 and the pipeline sector has gained 19.4 percent, compared with a gain of seven-tenths of 1 percent for the Standard & Poor's 500-stock index.

"I don't think gas prices will go up much further from here, but I don't think they will plunge either," Barone said.

Rising prices have stirred a modest revival in drilling. "We have picked up our speed a little bit," said F. Don Covey, president of exploration and production at Mitchell Energy and Development, whose headquarters are in The Woodlands, Texas.

The rig count is up nearly 100 since June, and drilling service companies like the Western Co. of North America, which completed a bankruptcy reorganization in 1989, are experiencing solid increases in orders.

"It is a direct reflection of much stronger natural gas prices," said George Hogarty, director of investor relations for Western, based in Houston. The company lost nearly $2 million in the second quarter, "but clearly we'll do better than that" in the current quarter, he added.

John J. Murphy, chairman and chief executive of Dresser Industries, the big Dallas-based oilfield service company, said many of his customers, which include leading natural gas producers, are planning to expand drilling programs but have not acted yet.

Most producers will not be convinced that gas prices have moved into a higher range until next February or March, the beginning of the period of slackest demand.

"If the gas price remains strong in the early spring, that will be a catalyst to draw more capital into the industry," said Tom Robinson, head of North American natural gas research at Cambridge Energy Research Associates, a consulting firm in Cambridge, Mass.

Meanwhile, few producers or analysts believe that long-term gas prices will burst through the level that would set off a sharp increase in drilling and exploration, a point between $2.50 and $3.

"There will be more activity, but it will not be a surge," said Murphy of Dresser. He said the total number of drilling rigs was not likely to increase much next year because federal laws that subsidized the drilling of shallow coal-gas wells expire in December and many of those rigs will be idled.

Despite the jump in spot gas prices, consumers probably do not need to fear big increases in their fuel bills. Many gas utilities hedge against abrupt price changes with a blend of contracts ranging from two years to 10 years or more, although some still buy much of their gas from month to month.

"It's too early to say, but we would not anticipate a great change in prices" for residential customers this winter, said Martin Gipten, a spokesman for Consolidated Edison.

The utility's 900,000 residential customers in New York City and parts of Westchester County received average bills of $205.21 for gas heat last December. It was the third lowest bill for any December since 1983.

Executives in the gas industry say that several provisions of the National Energy Security Act, the much-debated energy bill now under review by a House-Senate conference committee, will accelerate gas consumption if the bill becomes law.

The Clean Air Act of 1990, which ordered sulfur emissions at electric power plants to be reduced by the year 2000, has helped stir demand for gas as a substitute for coal, said T. Boone Pickens, chairman of Mesa Inc., a big independent gas producer in Dallas.

Virtually all gas consumed by Americans is produced in North America, with Canadian imports expected to supply 10 percent of domestic demand this year. But for oil, imports accounted for 46 percent of supplies this year through August, with Persian Gulf countries shipping 10 percent of total supplies, the American Petroleum Institute said.

Oil's share of the United States' $65.4 billion trade deficit last year was $43.2 billion, or 66.7 percent, the Commerce Department said.

WEEK IN REVIEW

Gas prices take biggest one day leap

Hearst News Service

HOUSTON – Natural gas futures prices took their largest one-day leap ever, giving disheartened producers and marketers new hope that better prices are here to stay.

Gas for October delivery jumped 19.4 cents Tuesday to close at $2.646 per thousand cubic feet in trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Gas experts say this week's buying spree is sparked by concerns that winter gas inventories are too low and that offshore platforms and pipelines damaged by Hurricane Andrew last month will keep supplies tight this winter.

According to the Mercantile Exchange, Tuesday's close is the highest price on record for a next-month-delivery contract since the natural gas contract began trading in April 1990.

Whether prices will charge ahead again today or hiccup back down is anyone's guess, gas market experts say.

Prices have surged almost 32 cents per 1,000 cubic feet since Monday.

"In a market where people are worried about supply, the psychology is to buy now," said Ann-Louise Hittle, energy futures analyst for Lehman Bros. in New York.

Gas analysts and marketers acknowledge that fears of a winter shortage, rather than very high demand expectations, are pushing October prices skyward, but industry experts also believe the market is looking fundamentally tight for the winter.

Storage tanks were not as full as they were this time last year. After Hurricane Andrew ripped through the Gulf, the lost production forced Gulf Coast interstate pipelines to pull gas out of storage at a time when they should be filling tanks.

Estimates of how much daily gas production remains out of commission vary widely. The federal Minerals Management Service believes 1 billion to 1.5 billion cubic feet a day is still being lost, but the American Gas Association said Tuesday the number is closer to 600 million cubic feet a day.

Natural Gas Clearinghouse, a Houston-based independent gas marketing company, estimates the loss is 800 million to 900 million cubic feet a day.

"That's pretty significant," said Steve Bergstrom, executive vice president for the company.

Even though gas prices have shown an incredible rebound since the first of the year, when they were barely over $1, gas producers and service companies that drill and maintain the wells aren't likely to start spending heavily soon.

"We're very happy about it," said Keith Freeman, Santa Fe Energy Resources' vice president for gas marketing and supply. But the company is unlikely to start fleshing out its 1993 capital budget based on October prices, he added.

Bob Rose, president of Diamond M Corp., a leading offshore drilling contractor, said Tuesday he hopes rosy predictions offered by some analysts speaking to the International Association of Drilling Contractors' annual meeting here come true. But he doesn't plan to pull any rigs out of mothballs or move equipment overseas without a contract based on prices of the last few days.

Houston investment banker Matthew Simmons of Simmons Company International said that after predicting doom and gloom for years, he believes the service industry has finally turned the corner, based on much firmer natural gas prices and rapidly shrinking energy production capacity surpluses.

Rig fleet hits lowest level since 1974

HOUSTON — The U.S. drilling rig fleet fell this year to its lowest level since 1974 and should slide even further in 1993, according to the prediction of one major oilfield manufacturer.

But another major oil service provider expects a little improvement in drilling activity next year, thanks to higher natural-gas prices and a promised federal income tax break.

Reed Tool Co., a Houston-based drill bit maker, said in its annual rig census Monday that the number of U.S. onshore and offshore rigs looking for work this year fell by 11.3 percent, or 255 rigs, to 1,996 rigs.

"We expect to see a record new low number of rigs available for work next year in the U.S.," said Reed President Roy Caldwell.

Caldwell said a federal tax-subsidy program that has kept as many as 175 rigs at work drilling hard-to-get-at natural gas expires at the end of the year and may not be renewed.

"This is the first time since 1974 that the U.S. has had fewer than 2,000 rigs available for drilling, and only 229 above the all-time census low set in 1973," Caldwell said.

"The past year has been disastrous for many contractors."

At the same time the rig fleet has shrunk, the percentage of remaining rigs actually working skidded to less than 60 percent this year, down from nearly 66 percent in 1991.

Caldwell believes that if U.S. contract drillers retire a similar number of rigs in 1993 as they did this year, utilization will jump to about 69 percent, but he still expects 1993 to be another very tough year.

The offshore rig fleet took the worst beating this year, showing a 24 percent attrition rate, according to the Reed census.

"The U.S. marine fleet has now fallen by 50 percent since 1987" and is only eight rigs above the low set in 1974, Caldwell said.

Houston-based Reed Tool is a division of Camco International, a diversified oil-field service and manufacturing company.

Baker Hughes, another major Houston-based oil-field service company, is looking for a slight improvement in the number of rigs working in 1993, according to Vice President Ike Kerridge.

Baker Hughes expects the average U.S. rig count onshore and offshore to grow from an average 687 active rigs projected for this year to 725 in 1993 — up 5.5 percent.

The Canadian rig count should grow from an average 84 this year to about 100 this year, Kerridge said, and the international count should increase from 872 in 1992 to 900 in 1993.

Kerridge acknowledged that the first half of 1993 will be very slow, even if Congress extends the tax-subsidy program for companies that drill for hard-to-drill gas, known in Washington as "Section 29" gas, because companies are not counting on its renewal in their 1993 planning.

His company expects a very healthy jump in the second half, however, as operating companies begin to enjoy the benefits of changes in the alternative minimum tax, which is being mulled by Congress and is expected to pass. This is a tax designed to ensure that upper income taxpayers pay some taxes, that greatly reduces the value of many of tax breaks earned by independent oilmen.

If natural-gas prices hold up through next year, it should also help push up drilling late next year.

Kerridge said his company is puzzled that the international rig count has been so weak this year. "It's gone down each of the last nine months," Kerridge said.

It could be that the majors have been so preoccupied this year with restructuring programs that they delayed planned overseas drilling programs, he said.

HUB: Pipelines carry crude throughout country adds that the crude pipeline from Midland to Corsicana was constructed at the same time.

(From 1G)

Bush estimates that, between main-line and off-tank farm deliveries, he is responsible for handling, in his area, about 150,000 barrels of crude a day.

The main function of the pipeline is to ship the crude that comes here from Seminole in the northwest and producing areas in the west such as the Spraberry and Kermit areas on to DeLeon and then to Corsicana, picking up additional volumes of crude along the way.

From Corsicana, the pipeline turns south to Beaumont or north to other refineries.

Bush's area extends from Midland to Eastland down to Coyanosa. His area, he says contains 1,300 mile of what he calls main line.

And while volume may not be what it was, Bush cited as an example of how much of the Permian Basin's crude comes through the Midland Tank Farm, production from Gaines County, the state's top producing county. In June, according to the Texas Railroad Commission, the county produced 3,366,611 barrels of crude.

"Between us and the other companies up there," Bush says, "we handle it all."

In addition to shipping off crude, the company has connection points with other tank farms in the area and can either deliver or receive crude from other companies.

Bob Anderson, manager of crude systems in Midland for Arco Pipe Line, agrees that there is a lot of movement of barrels between companies at the Tank Farm.

The company's tank farm, built in the 1920s, has 11 active tanks and a storage capacity of about 900,000 barrels.

"Midland is the center of the Permian Basin, as far as Arco's concerned," Anderson says. The company is a part-owner of the Basin system, the major artery between the Permian Basin and Cushing, Okla., which is traded on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Anderson said movement through his tank farm is about 200,000 barrels a day "But a lot of it is in trade; one barrel could be traded several times, so there may not be that much coming in, but that much traded."

Arco's tank farm acts as a hub for the company's gathering systems, north in Seminole and Denver City and south in Crane. The crude is shipped to Midland, where it is either traded or sent on to Cushing.

PITTS: Energy bill uncertain

domestic oil and gas producers need capital to invest and produce energy for America."

If the energy bill does not make it out before Congress adjourns, it will be a bitter disappointment to the president. And, it will also be a disapointment to Watkins who has spent most of the Bush term trying to build a National Energy Strategy. First, there were the tours across country collecting input from the energy industry. Then, there were the months of writing and fine-tuning of the document to please producers, consumers and environmentalists, before the president finally announced it as policy on February 20, 1991.

The fact that it has taken this long to get a vital piece of legislation, that along the way has been gutted beyond recognition, is a national disgrace. Gridlock lives on.

SUPPLY: Will be adequate

winter of 1979.

"No national supply shortfall is likely to occur," said Baly.

Nicholas Bush, president of the Natural Gas Supply Association, said supply and demand "are moving closer into balance" in the natural gas industry. He discounted the possibility of sharp price increases, noting that if gas prices jump, some commercial customers, who can use more than one fuel, will shift away from gas and force prices down.

The Interior Department's Minerals Management Service estimates that between 1 billion and 1.5 billion cubic feet of natural gas production per day continues to be lost because of storm damage in the Gulf of Mexico. The industry puts the figure at about half that amount, or about 600 million cubic feet per day.

Hurricane Andrew damaged or destroyed an estimated 241 offshore rigs, including the loss of about 20 major platforms in the gulf, according to the Interior Department. There are 3,900 drilling rigs off the Louisiana-Texas coast.

Louisiana's offshore production represents about 20 percent of total U.S. production.

Modest hike seen in winter gas prices

■ Record natural gas prices should have a moderate impact on home heating costs this winter.

By Dan Blake

NEW YORK (AP) — Damage from Hurricane Andrew and concerns about a cold winter have pushed natural gas to record levels and home heating costs likely will rise this winter, industry officials and market analysts said.

But the increase in consumer prices should be well below dramatic climbs in the speculators' market for energy, where the price of natural gas has more than doubled over last winter, the American Gas Association said this week.

"The increase in the futures market does not indicate any substantial increase in residential heating prices," said Michael Baly, president of the gas association. "We expect any (heating) bill increase to be minimal."

The size of any increase depends on the severity of this winter's weather. But even with the damage from Andrew, supplies should be plentiful, Baly said. There is only a loose connection between actual cash prices and the prices in the market for energy futures, which represent the cost of contracts for future delivery. These contracts are bought and sold by professional speculators, and can be a sensitive barometer of where cash prices are headed.

Cash prices, which have a more direct effect on what consumers pay for the gas, have risen less steeply than futures prices.

Hurricane Andrew temporarily knocked out about 5 percent of the country's natural gas production capacity and the damage is still under repair. But the cash price increase has been kept under control by ample supplies in storage and fixed-price contracts with pipeline companies.

On the futures market, however, speculators have bid up the price of natural gas, fearing shortages and supply disruptions from the hurricane. Forecasts for a colder-than-average winter have also pushed the price higher.

Since Andrew passed over Florida largely intact and moved toward the gas-producing central Gulf of Mexico Aug. 28, natural gas prices for near-term delivery have climbed 33 percent.

Of the more than 60-cent climb since Andrew, hurricane-related damage has been responsible for about 30 cents, said Edward Kennedy, a natural gas trader and analyst in Coconut Grove, Fla.

Demand for natural gas has risen about 4.5 percent this year, despite recession and the warm winter, Ronald J. Barone, a market analyst at Kidder, Peabody & Co., said. The higher demand has come against a drop in drilling resulting from low prices last winter. That adds up to a general price increase for natural gas regardless of the hurricane.

In January, when it became evident that last winter would be mild and there would be less demand for natural gas, the futures price plunged to about $1.05. The average cash price is currently about $1.55, up from $1.29 in January, Barone said.

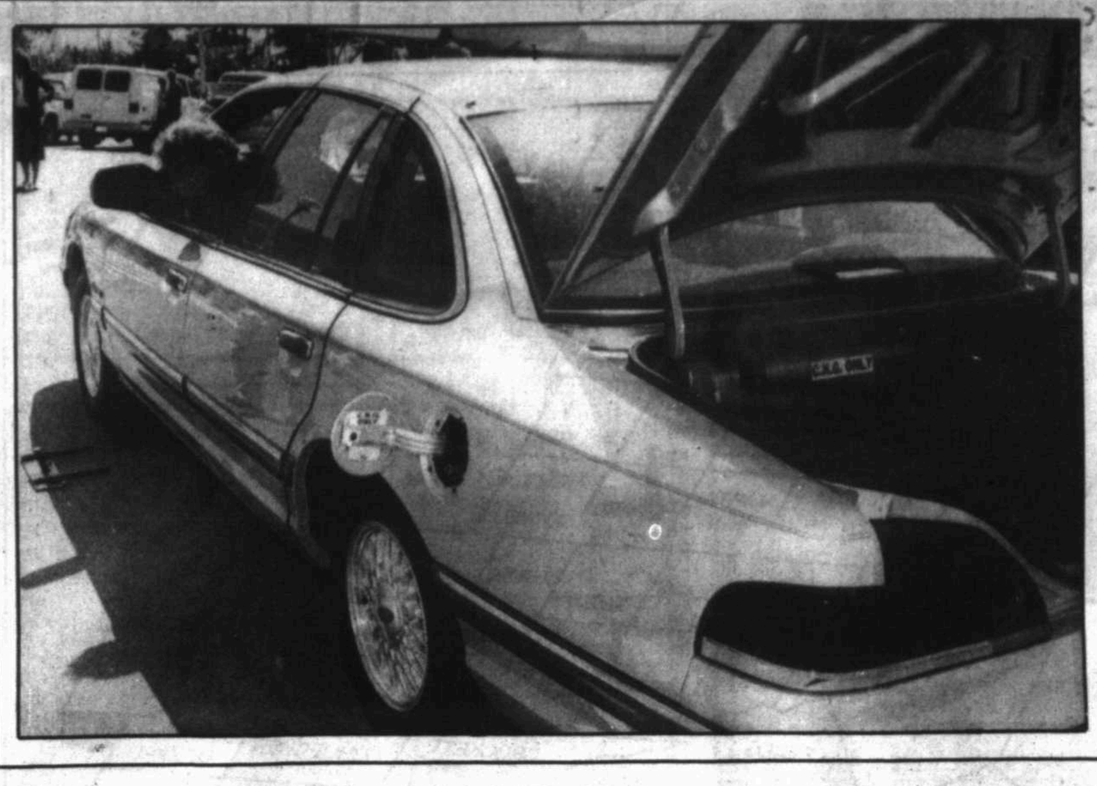

"The market's gotten a little bit ahead of itself," Kennedy said of the futures price. "It's come too far too fast."

The Interior Department's Minerals Management Service estimates between 1.25 billion and 1.5 billion cubic feet of natural gas production per day continues to be lost because of storm damage in the Gulf of Mexico. The industry puts the figure at about half that amount, or about 600 million cubic feet per day.

The Minerals Management Service figures it could take up to two months to fix the remaining damage and that any long-term effects would be insignificant.

Hurricane Andrew damaged or destroyed an estimated 241 offshore rigs, including the loss of about 20 major platforms in the gulf, the service said. There are 3,900 drilling rigs off the Louisiana-Texas coast.

Baly said that about 60 percent of this winter's January natural gas supplies likely will come from conventional production, an additional 30 percent from supplies already in storage by local distributors and the rest from Canadian and liquefied natural gas imports.

Indonesia hoping to attract oil firms

■ Indonesia makes moves to attract foreign oil companies.

By Anne Pearson
Hearst News Service

GENEVA – Indonesia, one of the most demanding landlords in the international oil patch, is offering a move-in special starting this month.

The parade of foreign oil companies trekking to neighboring Vietnam, Malaysia and Myanmar (Burma), along with the republics of the former Soviet Union, prompted Indonesia last week to ease its terms a bit in hopes that Western companies won't drop this Southeast Asian island country off their prospect lists.

Indonesia's minister of mines and energy, Ginandjar Kartasasmita, said the new incentives don't represent a major overhaul in his country's tax and royalty system, but they're enticing enough to improve its competitive posture.

"I think we are competitive enough, because of our geographical position (in relation to customers) and the stability of Indonesia and the region – and the fact that geographically and geologically, Indonesia is not a difficult area to work in," Ginandjar said.

"The changes are substantial," said Gordon Barrows, whose New York-based Barrows Co. tracks the oil and gas contract terms of producing countries all over the world.

"Indonesia has begun to decline, and this is an effort to stimulate new exploration and production," Barrows said. "It is a continuation of a similar move the government began in 1989."

Indonesia, which produces 2 billion cubic feet of gas a day and 1.3 million barrels of oil, historically has taken 85 percent of the money oil companies get from producing oil and gas in its jungles and national waters through taxes and royalties.

Government officials say they cannot estimate how much the government take will drop until they have some new production base from which to make that calculation.

"The ministry of finance wants to know that, too," said Umar Said, adviser to the Indonesian energy ministry.

Indonesia has been a profitable production province for many Houston oil companies, such as Union Texas Petroleum. Conoco is building a major offshore development there as well.

Chevron and Texaco have had a huge joint venture in Indonesia for decades called Caltex.

The new incentives are aimed mainly at increasing Indonesia's natural gas production, Ginandjar said. They're also aimed at encouraging more activity in the eastern part of the country.

They won't apply to existing wells, but they will apply to new production that operating companies bring on in old fields as well as production in new fields, both onshore and offshore. They also give some breaks to companies like Caltex that extend the life of existing contracts.

The breaks are biggest for deep water offshore developments and fields in very remote areas that are expensive to develop. They include:

–A reduction in the number of years over which operators may depreciate their investment. Depreciation used to be spread over the life of the field, assuming reserves were expected to last at least seven years. Now operators can recover the costs in half that time.

–An increase in the investment credit companies can claim against revenues from some developments. Companies claim a credit of as much as 125 percent for developments in water depths of more than 4,500 feet.

–An increase in the equity share foreign operators receive – as much as 45 percent of the equity for new gas projects in deep water.

–Elimination of the government's graduated system of taking an increasing equity stake as the field produces more, a system that penalizes success.

The new incentives don't eliminate one of the harshest elements of Indonesia's terms, but they at least soften it.

After a field has been in production five years, companies were forced to sell the Indonesian state oil company Pertamina 25 percent of their production for one-tenth of the price that oil would fetch on the open market. The new rules raise the payment rate to 15 percent.

"We have gradually improved the conditions, but we cannot do it overnight," Ginandjar said.

"Three years ago, it was only 20 cents a barrel. In 1990, we raised it to 10 percent, and now it is 15 percent."

8 percent of Pennzoil Sulphur workers retiring

CARLSBAD, N.M. (AP) — About 8 percent of the Pennzoil Sulphur Co. work force will retire Sept. 30 as part of a company buyout, a company official said.

Pennzoil vice president Phil Tyree said the number of employees taking the buyout is higher than expected. He could not say whether layoffs also will be necessary.

"We are going to sit back and see how things go," said Tyree, the supervisor of the company's Culberson County, Texas, facility, about 70 miles south of here. Many of the Culberson employees live in Carlsbad.

Tyree said 27 of the 30 Culberson employees eligible for the early retirements took them. Company-wide, 38 of 41 eligible employees took the early retirement offer.

The offer was announced Aug. 4 in an effort to avoid layoffs among the company's more than 450 employees. Deadline for employees to accept was midnight Friday.

During the past year, Tyree said his firm has had to slash prices by one-third, from $140 a long ton to $98. That kind of reduction, he said, "would make anybody wiggle a little."

The prices of sulfur, a chemical used in phosphorous fertilizer, declined so dramatically because of a major influx of cheaper sulfur introduced into the American market, mostly by Canadian companies, he said.

Railroad Commission touts record plugging effort

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Railroad Commission had a record 1,324 abandoned wells plugged this last fiscal year, Chairman Lena Guerrero said.

The previous record was 714 abandoned wells plugged by the commission in 1986, Ms. Guerrero said.

The commission spent $5.7 million for well plugging and nearly $48,000 for cleaning up oilfield pollution during the year that ended Aug. 31. In 1986, the commission spent over $2.5 million to plug abandoned wells.

Fees, penalties and other payments collected from the oil and gas industry fuel the fund.

Since the well plugging program started in 1984, more than 5,300 abandoned wells have been plugged at a cost of more than $21.8 million, Ms. Guerrero said.

Unocal reports 1,145 leaving workforce

LOS ANGELES (NYT) — Unocal Corp. officials said that 1,145 workers resigned or took early retirement under a restructuring plan that will cost the petroleum products marketer $25 million in the third quarter.

Los Angeles-based Unocal said the employees left the company Aug. 31 as part of a corporatewide streamlining announced in April.

It is also part of a industrywide trend. The U.S. oil industry has cut about 40,000 jobs this year to compensate for lower oil prices and demand.

Unocal's job reduction is part of its effort to improve cash flow by $200 million a year beginning in 1993 and to reduce debt, said chairman Richard J. Stegemeier.

The move is necessary because the company will embark on a three-year, $500 million program to increase development of domestic crude oil and gas reserves in 1993, he said.

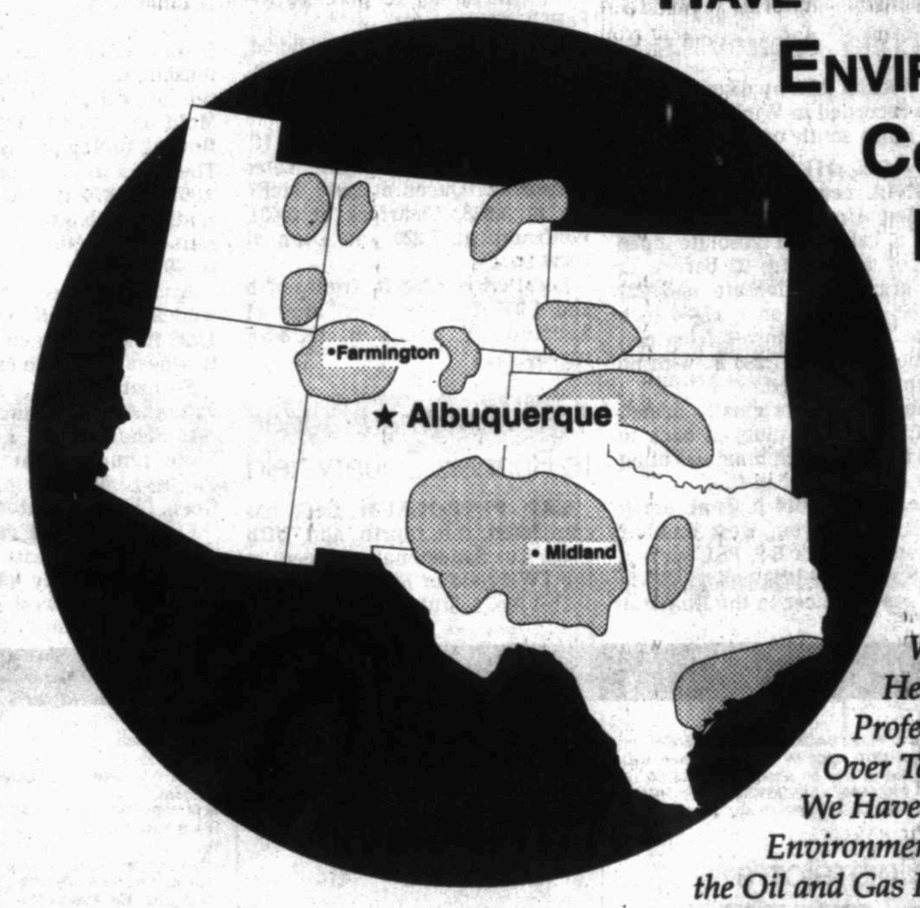

"We have an inventory of relatively low-risk projects here in the United States that we feel can be developed profitably, even at prices below current levels," Stegemeier said in a statement.

Unocal has trimmed its 17,600-person work force by about 6 percent, and has consolidated into two main divisions.

So far in 1992, Unocal has raised $325 million by selling its polymers and chemicals distribution businesses, its product terminals network in the southeastern United States, and other nonstrategic assets.

The company expects to generate an additional $700 million after taxes over the next 18 months from the sale of additional assets, including geothermal energy operations assets in the California's Imperial Valley, and is negotiating the sale of its PureGro Co. subsidiary and its nationwide Auto/Truck-Stop system.

ACTIVITY HIGHLIGHTS

Lea County find flows 520 barrels

Staff report

CHARLES B. GILLESPIE JR. has recorded a Strawn discovery in Lea County, N.M., a half-mile northeast of 10,350 ft. Wolfcamp product on in the Townsend field, a quarter-mile south of the company's earlier Strawn discovery, the No. 1 Hamilton Federal.

On potential test, the No. 1 Speight Fee flowed 520 barrels of crude, 1.08 Mmcfd on a 14/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 1,750 psi. The well flowed from perforations 11,424 to 11,548 ft., no treatment reported.

Permitted as an 11,800 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 11,800 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged back to 11,751 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from north and 2,310 ft. from west lines of Section 1, T16s, R35e.

Gillespie completed the No. 1 Hamilton Federal in June to flow 408 barrels of crude and 1.2 Mmcfd on a 12/64 inch choke from perforations 11,500 to 11,570 ft.

Recompletion project yields Silurian find

An abandoned Howard County well has been reentered and completed as a Silurian discovery, nine miles west of Big Spring.

BLAIR EXPLORATION INC. reentered the No. 1 Wilkinson-Broaddus, completing it to flow 248 barrels of 45 gravity crude on an 8/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 900 psi. Production was natural from open hole interval 10,388 to 10,443 ft.

Scheduled as a 10,500 ft. wildcat workover, the well was cleaned out to 10,443 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 10,340 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,466 ft., include the Yates at 1,744 ft., San Andres at 3,006, Strawn at 9,548, Upper Mississippian at 9,834, Woodford at 10,259, and Silurian at 10,349 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from south and east lines of Section 20, Block 34, T-1-N, Abst. 1344. Bottom hole location is 235.96 ft. from south and 1,002.66 ft. from east lines of the surface location. True vertical depth is 10,269.13 ft.

The well was originally drilled by Oryx Energy Co. as the No. 1 Wilkinson and abandoned in September 1989 at 10,470 ft.

Winkler reentry nets Wichita Albany find

A Wichita Albany discovery has been recorded in Winkler County, five miles south of Kermit.

UNION OIL CO. OF CALIFORNIA reentered the No. 1 E.W. Cowden Unit, completing it to flow a calculated absolute open flow of 2.7 Mmcfd, 92 barrels of 43.1 gravity condensate and 321 barrels of water on a 17/64 inch choke. The well flowed from perforations 7,210 to 7,238 ft. with no treatment reported.

The well was originally drilled to 11,524 ft. and plugged back to 7,354 ft. A five inch liner was hung from 9,491 to 11,524 ft.

Location is 2,014 ft. from north and 2,002 ft. from west lines of Section 26, Block B-5, PSL survey.

The well was originally a Devonian gas producer in the Emperor field, producing from perforations 9,090 to 9,225 ft.

Upton field gains 555-barrel extender

The Triumph field of Upton County has gained its third Wolfcamp producer and half-mile extension, 2.5 miles northwest of Rankin.

CHEVRON U.S.A. INC. completed the No. 1 Arco-Coleman "14" to flow 555 barrels of 40.6 gravity crude, 511 Mcfd and 24 barrels of water on a 16/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 900 psi. The well flowed from perforations 8,524 to 8,541 ft., which had been acidized with 2,200 gallons of 15 percent NeFeHCL acid.

Permitted as a 10,300 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 8,838 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged back to 8,734 ft.

On ground elevation of 2,450 ft., formation tops include the Yates at 2,025 ft., Queen at 2,910, McElroy at 3,528, Clearfork at 5,431, Wolfcamp at 7,220 and Dean at 7,338 ft.

Location is 2,353 ft. from north and 1,957 ft. from west lines of Section 14, Block B, GC&SF survey.

Two confirmers added to Runnels County field

TKP PETROLEUM INC. has completed the fourth and fifth Cross Cut Sandstone producers in the TWP field of Runnels County.

The No. 1 Stubblefield, the second extension, was tested to flow 168 barrels of 39 gravity crude and 84 Mcfd on a 16/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 480 psi. The well flowed from perforations 3,865 to 3,872 ft., which had been acidized with 300 gallons 15 percent and fractured with 25 sacks 20/40 sand.

Permitted as a 4,500 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 4,196 ft. and plugged back to 4,072 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set.

The well topped the Palo Pinto at 3,674 ft., Capps at 3,936 and Goen at 4,160 ft. on ground elevation of 1,750 ft.

Location is 1,222 ft. from south and 467 ft. from east lines of Robert Owens survey 436, Abst. 394, seven miles northwest of Ballinger.

The No. 1 Stubblefield "A", the fifth confirmer and western extension, was finaled to flow 96 barrels of 38.9 gravity crude and 64 Mcfd on a 10/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 600 psi. The well flowed from perforations 3,867 to 3,874 ft., which had been acidized with 300 gallons of 15 percent and fractured with 25 sacks 20/40 sand.

Also permitted as a 4,500 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 4,226 ft. and plugged back to 4,090 ft. where 4 1/2 inch casing was set.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 1,754 ft., include the Serratt Sandstone at 2,750 ft., Palo Pinto Limestone at 3,680, Upper Capps Limestone at 3,945, and Goen Limestone at 4,155 ft.

Location is 2,362 ft. from south and 440 ft. from east lines of Robert Owens survey 436, Abst. 394, six miles northwest of Ballinger.

Union Texas stake sold by Allied

MORRISTOWN, N.J. (AP) — Allied Signal Inc. said it plans to sell its entire stake in Union Texas Petroleum Holdings Inc., amounting to 33.3 million shares of common stock worth roughly $600 million.

The company also said that the board of directors of Houston-based Union Texas Petroleum has agreed to buy back $355 million in preferred stock and warrants held by Allied-Signal.

A spokesman for Allied-Signal said the total proceeds from the sales would be $955 million, with a pre-tax gain of $350 million.

Allied-Signal said the revenue from the stock sale will be used to reduce debt, accelerate measures to increase productivity, and other corporate purposes.

Union Texas Petroleum is expected to file a registration statement with the Securities and Exchange Commission later this week for the offer, which should be completed in the fourth quarter.

Allied Signal is an advanced technology company with business in aerospace, automotive products and engineered materials.

We stack the deck in your favor.

By developing and patenting our Continuous Mix Gel (CMG) System, Smith Energy Services created the industry standard for liquid fracturing gel systems.

This saves you time and money by improving well performance and delivering high quality gel "on-the-fly" with no wasted materrials or disposal problems.

And there is no tank-to-tank viscosity or pH variance as with batch-mixed gels.

We have a full range of products including refined guar, HPG and CMHPG which have been formulated to yield maximum hydration in a minimum amount of time, even at lower temperatures.

The dynamics of our system allow tapered gel loadings with flexible viscosity at the highest rate in the industry. And with the in-line viscometer and mass flowmeter for exact measurements, it is the best monitored and most easily controlled fracturing gel system.

So when you want uniform, high quality gel mixed "on-the'fly," without paying for unused materials, try our CMG System. It's all part of our commitment to excellence.

And you'll have the ace in the hole

Smith Energy Services. We work best under pressure.

HOW ARE AMERICANS HELPING TO REFINE RUSSIA'S OIL PRODUCTION?

Crude production techniques have kept the republics from successfully developing their oil resources. Now, American companies are helping to make these fields produce. To find out how and why, you need to read We/Mbl, the first independent Russian-American newspaper. Our staff of Russian and American journalists brings you exclusive coverage of all the key issues affecting both continents. Whether it's business, economics, politics or culture, We/Mbl gives you a perspective you can't find anywhere else.

And here's a special offer you won't find anywhere else. Subscribe to the English-language edition of We/Mbl today, and receive 26 issues for only $1 an issue. You'll enjoy the convenience of delivery by mail, and you'll save $6.50 off the newsstand price. Just complete and mail in the attached form, or call 1-800/289-8747 toll-free.

OPEC must compromise between Saudi, Iranian

■ OPEC members must reach a balance between the moderate Saudis and the price hawk Iranians.

By Anne Pearson
Hearst News Service

GENEVA — Thirteen men gather four times a year at posh European hotels to debate OPEC price targets and production pacts, but the final deal is a compromise between just two men — Saudi Arabia's Hisham Nazer and Iran's Gholamreza Aghazadeh.

Iran and Saudi Arabia are the international oil cartel's two largest and most powerful voices — Nazer representing the handful of rich members that want to sell more oil, and Aghazadeh representing poor members seeking a higher price for their more limited resources.

Their personal ways and backgrounds are as different as the disparate policy positions of their countries, differences that have ignited nasty exchanges at recent meetings of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Nazer, 60, dons all the trappings of a wealthy Westerner at meetings, although he wears the traditional flowing Arab garb when in his own country. The finely cut suits, perfect English, slicked-back hair and pencil moustache give him an almost Marlon Brando "Godfather" look.

Nazer travels with a sprawling retinue that usually includes two Saudi princes; slickly groomed, mostly American bodyguards, and sometimes his wife and young children.

The son of a wealthy Arab businessman, Nazer was schooled in Egypt and America; he holds a master's degree in political science from the University of California at Los Angeles.

Saudi Arabia is home to about 15 percent of the world's total oil reserves, and its daily output of 8.5 million barrels a day satisfies about 13 percent of the world's total demand.

His main ally within OPEC is the United Arab Emirates, a collection of tiny but rich gulf sheikhdoms.

Hisham Nazer

Gholamreza Agazadeh

Kuwait used to be in Saudi Arabia's camp as well, but now that it is struggling to recover from Saddam Hussein's destruction, officials want higher production and higher prices.

The forceful and sometimes sarcastic Saudi minister has held cabinet posts for more than 20 years and served three kings. He is one of a handful of OPEC ministers who doesn't have to worry about job security due to the political whims of the electorate, considering the fact that he serves at the pleasure of King Fahd. That is, as long as he does the king's bidding. Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, the last oil minister, lost his job when he forgot who the boss was.

Not so Aghazadeh, who could be out of a job if Iranian President Hashemi Rafsanjani loses control of the government in 1993 elections.

Aghazadeh, 43, is the leading voice of the not-so-powerful OPEC majority, who look to higher oil prices to dig them out of their economic quagmire.

Iran is a giant developing Persian Gulf country that has grown poorer since the Islamic revolution.

Rafsanjani and his chief lieutenants are struggling to modernize and internationalize Iran's economy, but they often find the powerful mullahs nipping at their heels, complaining that their reforms smack of evil Western influence.

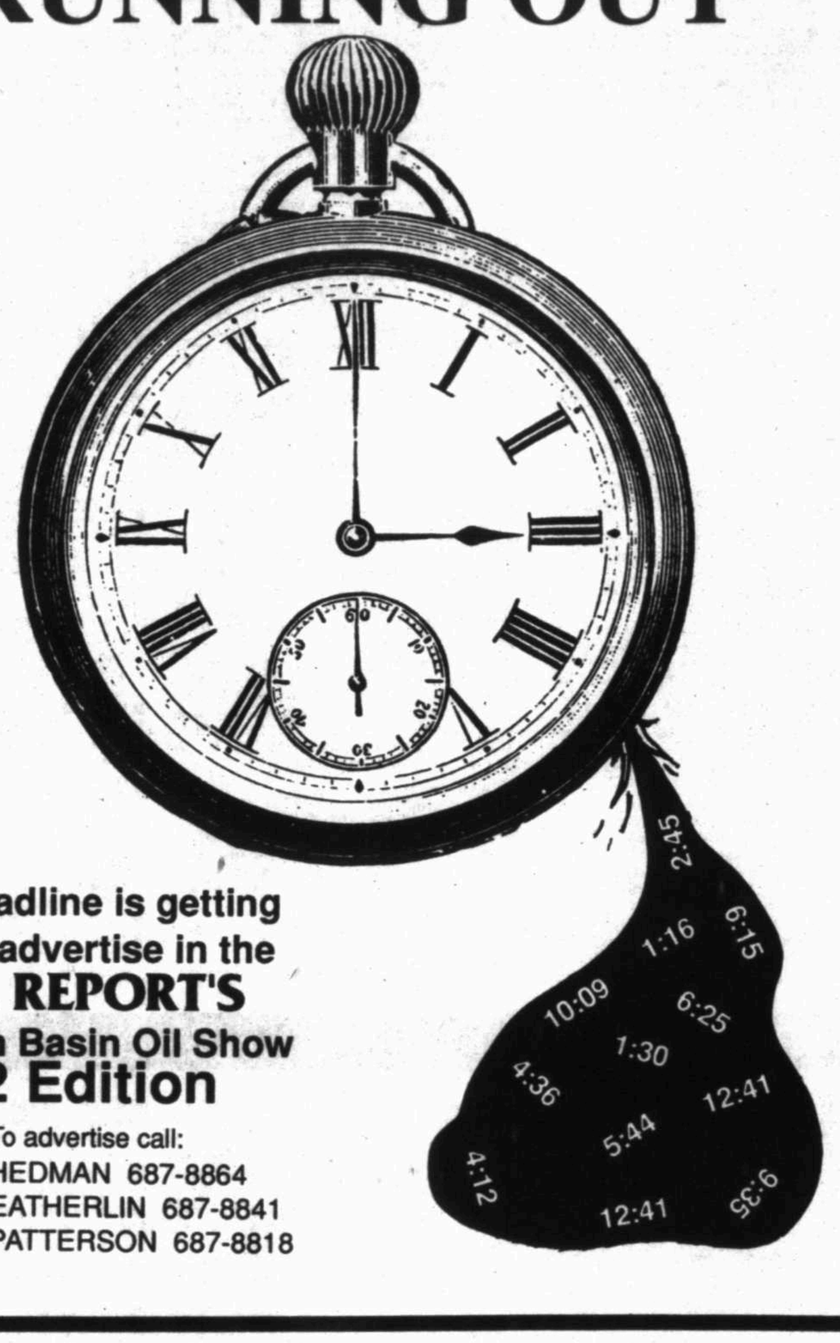

Where Nazer dons a very Western veneer during his public showings at OPEC, Aghazadeh maintains the outward trappings of Iran's anti-western Islamic government. He wears the close-clipped beard and plain, dark suit and collarless shirt that became the uniform of Iran after the 1979 revolution.

True to the custom of his theocratic bosses, the softer-spoken Aghazadeh invokes the name of God in formal remarks to the press. Because of his shaky English, he usually relies during large press conferences on an interpreter to translate from Farsi, the national language of Iran.

His entourage is a fraction of the size of Nazer's.

A member of the Founding Council of the Islamic Republican Party, Aghazadeh began his career in public life in 1979 as editor in chief of the Islamic Republic Newspaper.

With school back in full swing and routines set, many people already are looking forward to a chance to "get away from it all." But with busy schedules, work and school, out-of-town trips are often out of the question.

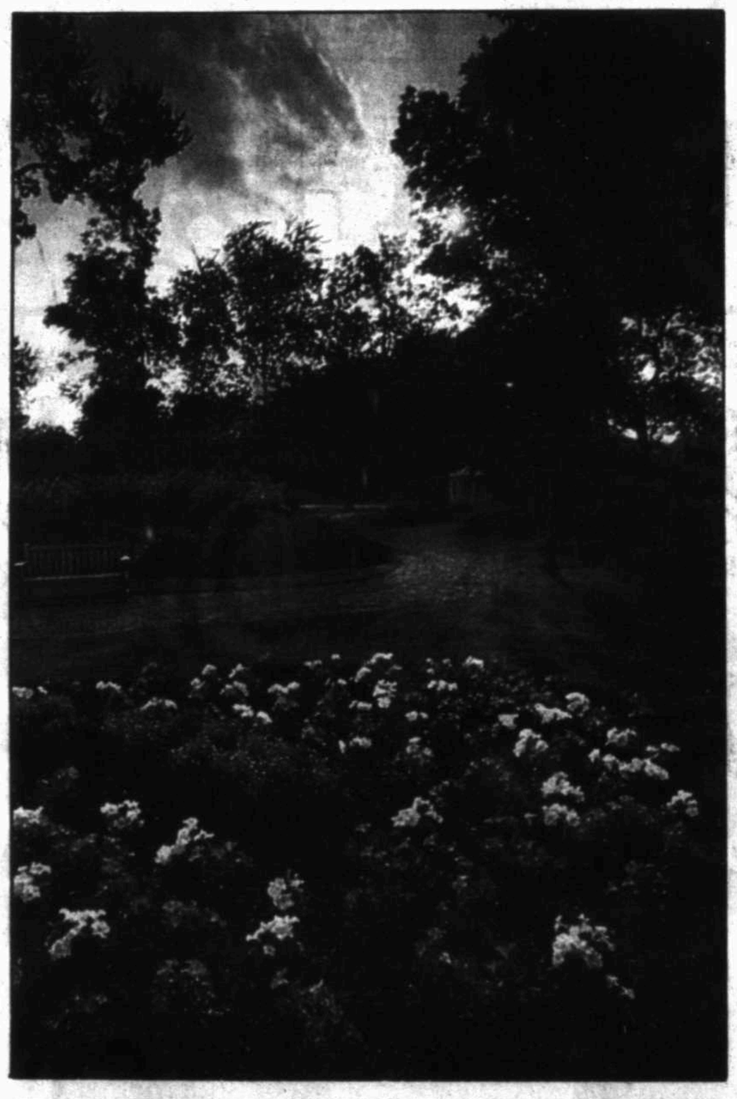

However, Dallas is just a 50 minute flight away, making it an easy weekend destination. And with the State Fair of Texas happening Oct. 2-25, the Catherine the Great exhibit on display through Nov. 29 (along with several other exhibits at Fair Park), the Texas vs. Oklahoma football game Oct. 10 and the Dallas Cowboys winning again with several home games still to come, almost any fall weekend is a great time to go to Big D.

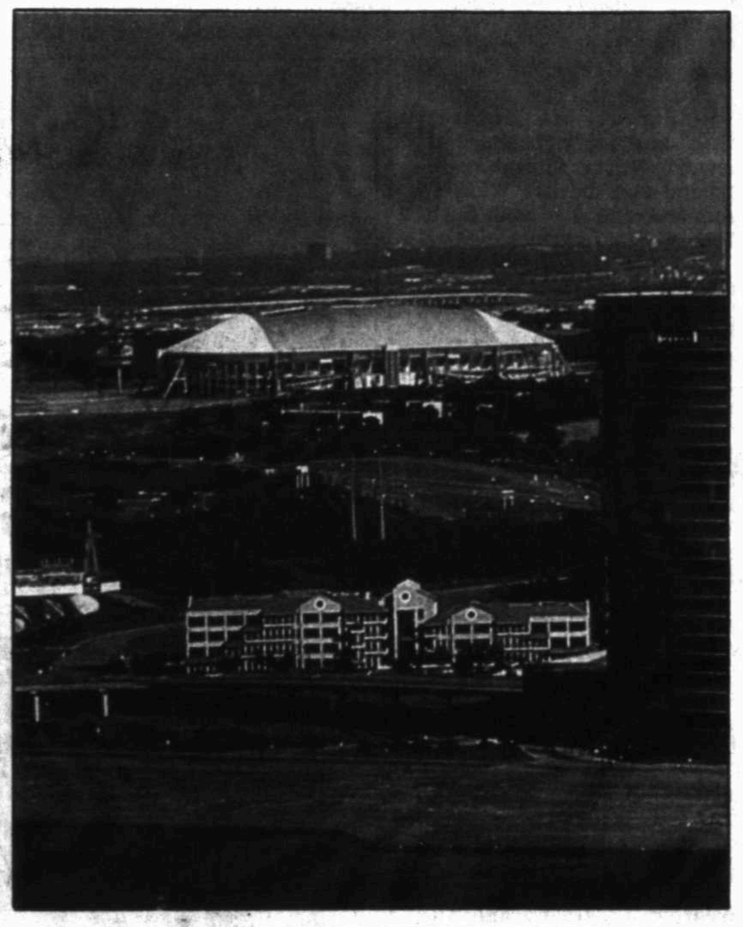

Even through the winter, Dallas is a busy place with numerous holiday related activities on schedule.

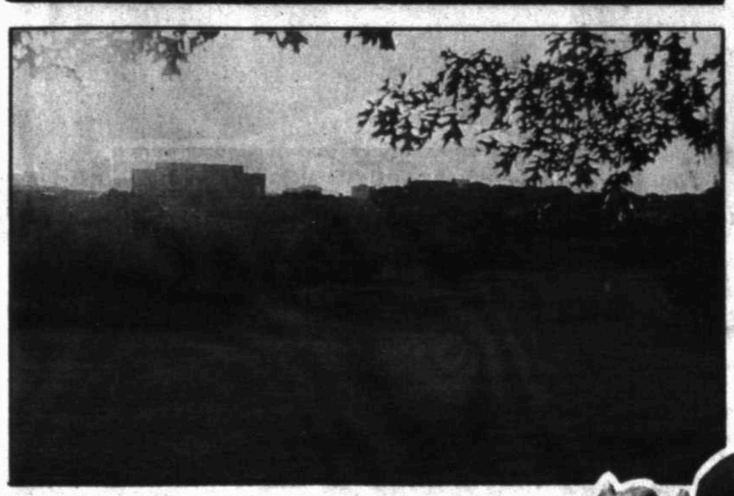

Starting this weekend, everything will be "bigger and better in Texas" with the beginning of the State Fair of Texas. The exposition sprawls over 277 acres of historic Fair Park, where visitors are greeted by Big Tex, the smiling 52-foot cowboy, and have the opportunity to ride the Texas Star, the tallest Ferris wheel in the western hemisphere.

Guests also will have the opportunity to see exhibits, such as a new car show that spreads over two major exhibit halls, a stadium laser light show, carnival rides, livestock and horse shows, handwork and crafts, the latest in the world of electronics, animal shows, the best of Broadway at the Music Hall, games, entertainment and food, food, food.

General admission is $8; senior citizens and children $4 and under age 3 are admitted free.

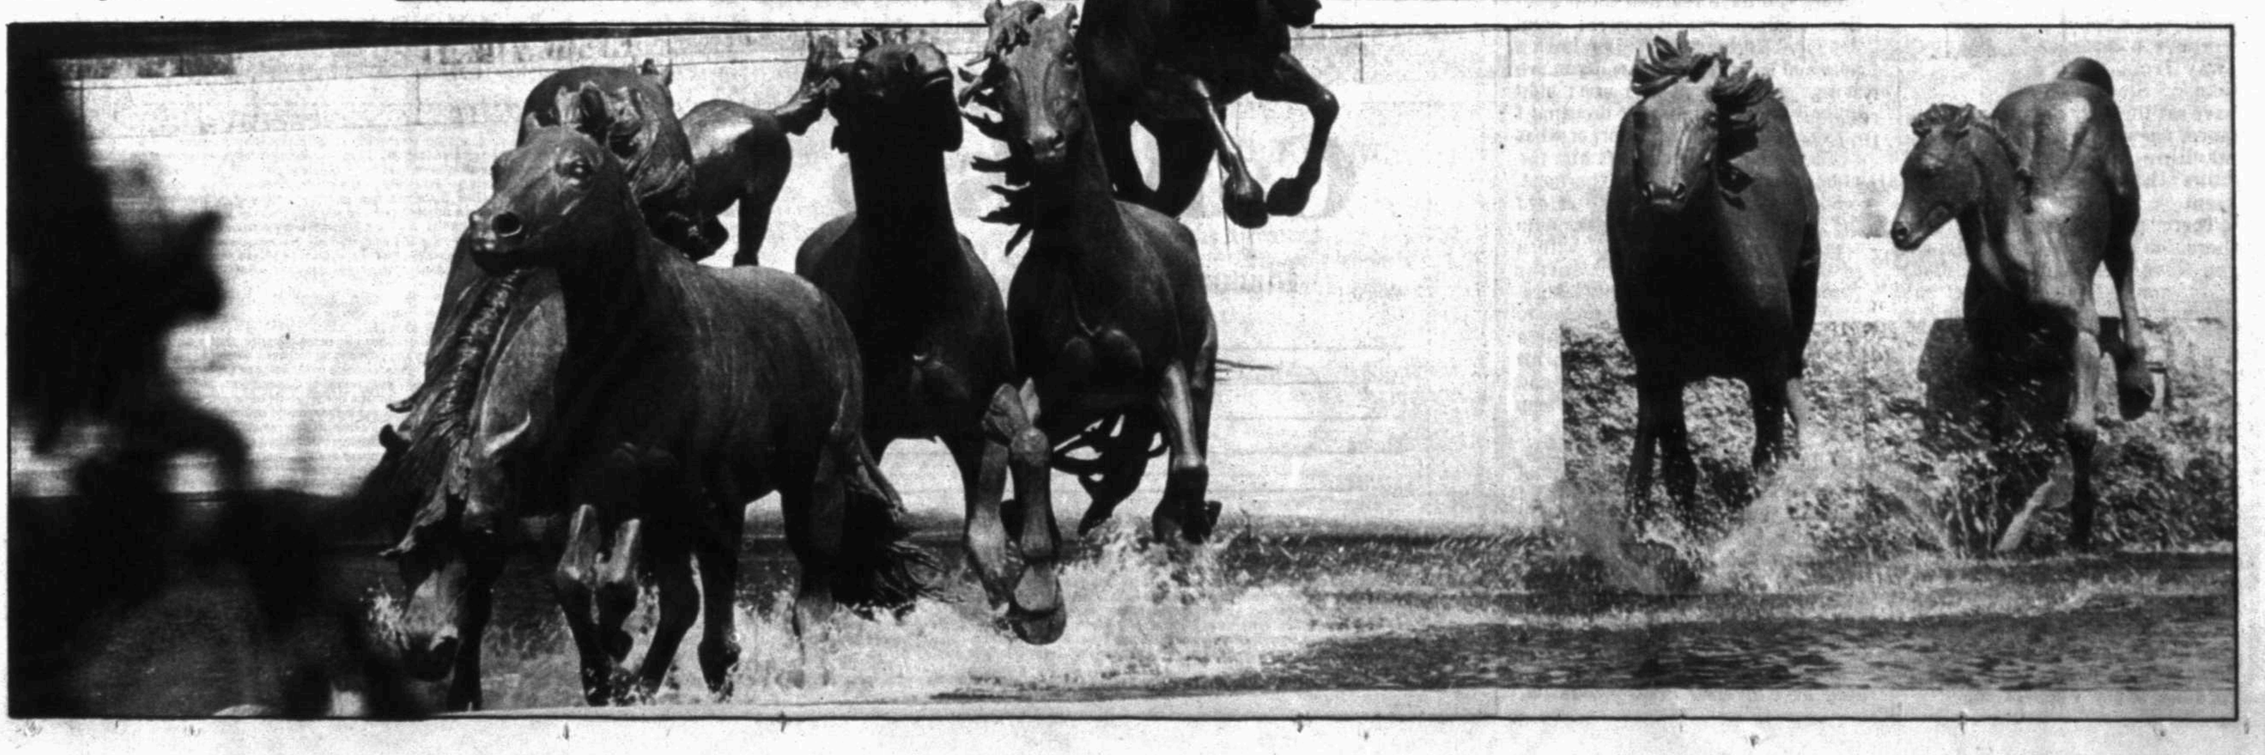

But if you fly Southwest Airlines during September or October, simply hang onto your airline ticket receipt and present it at the gate to get into the State Fair of Texas absolutely free. Grounds are open seven days a week Oct. 2-25.

While visiting the State Fair, or even for a month after the Fair closes, visitors have their final opportunity to see "Catherine the Great: Treasures of Imperial Russia." Dallas is the exhibit's final destination in the U.S., after being shown in only Memphis and Los Angeles.

The exhibit, presented by the Dallas Historical Society, is in the Centennial Building of Fair Park. With paintings, textiles, jewel-encrusted artifacts, Faberge eggs, clothing, weapons and furniture of 18th-century Russia, the exhibit provides a look at the opulence and advancement of Imperial rule during Catherine the Great's reign.

Please see DALLAS/4H

Dallas and its surrounding area offers visitors a bounty of things to do, including dining and dancing atop the Hyatt Reunion Tower with a panoramic view of downtown (top); walking through the Dallas Arboretum (top center left) or attending a Dallas Cowboy football game at Cowboy Stadium in Irving (top center right); watching a PGA tour stop such as the GTE Byron Nelson Golf Classic at the Four Seasons in Las Colinas (bottom center left) or shopping along the canal and seeing the "Mustangs of Las Colinas," the world's largest equestrian sculpture and the "Mustang Sculpture Exhibit," showing the creation of the sculpture (below), or visiting Southfork Ranch (bottom center right), former site of the television series "Dallas."

Couples host party at MCT

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

Nancy and Buddy Anguish and Betty and Hal Kempf hosted a delightful party recently at Theatre Midland.

McKnight-Harrison

Friends of the two couples filled the auditorium for a special Midland Community Theatre presentation of "The Taffetas." The play, which ended a three-weekend run Saturday evening, took the audience on a musical journey through the decade of the 1950s and definitely evoked many memories for those persons who were around during that period.

The evening's festivities began with cocktails at seven o'clock and the curtain at 7:30 following welcoming remarks by the hosts.

At intermission, guests adjourned to the theatre lobby for a delicious buffet. A conversation piece was the current theatre exhibit featuring the necktie collection of Midlanders Arlen Edgar and Dick Ragan. Over 350 of their ties were on display.

Following the performance, guests enjoyed dessert with the cast and crew.

Spotted in the throng were Fredda and Randall Lundy, Millowee and Carvel Mills, Jean and Tom Welch, Penny and Jerry Hudgeons, Gwyn and Don Sparks, Gladys and Scott Hickman and Lena and John Ochsner.

NEITHER A TORNADO sighting east of Midland nor violent thunderstorm activity just prior to the party prevented the "Return of the Almost Annual Barbeque" hosted by Kathryn and Max Crunk in the backyard of their home recently.

Kathryn, a native of Wyoming, claims the rain dances of the Shoshone Indians were going on in her home state that day and little did she know how powerful they were.

Some 150 persons enjoyed visiting with old friends over dinner. Among those attending were Genevieve and Harry Libby, Shirley and Monty Gist, Gretchen and Frank Bell, Cathryn and Arch Lair, Colleen and Vince Scury, Mary Lou and Mark Wilson, Mary Elizabeth and Frank Ittner and Kathy and Stacy Meeks.

TO BENEFIT their various youth projects, members of the Midland Rotary Club held a barbecue and western dance last weekend at Midland Center.

Following a silent auction and dinner, the assemblage, which numbered close to 600, danced to the music of Jody Nix and The Texas Cowboys.

Adding to the Old West flavor were the table decorations, large cacti cutouts in clay pots on red and white checked table runners.

Winner of the coveted grand prize, two airline tickets to San Francisco, was Mary Lou (Mrs. John) Midkiff.

Among those enjoying the evening were Cecelia and Bob Davis, Ann and Dick Dunbar, Wyvonne and Keith Spradlin, Marjorie and Dan Kozak, Sharon and Wilson Heidelberg, Joan and Mac McDonald and Ann and Billy Cooper.

OUR FOND FAREWELLS go with Dixie DeWees, who has taken early retirement and returned to her hometown of Washington Courthouse, Ohio.

Dixie was active on the Midland arts scene since moving here in 1981. She was well-known in Midland Community Theatre, Summer Mummers and West Texas Jazz Society circles. In addition, she served as director of the Sweet Adelines women's barbershop chorus.

LISA BEERBOWER and Carl Hubbard, who were married in Stanton this past June, were honored with a belated wedding reception party recently at the home of Christine and Gerald Hubbard.

Lovely fall mums in bronze and white decorated the party rooms.

The bride is the daughter of Jo Ann Roufs of Fort Scott, Kan. Parents of the bridegroom are Gerald and Christine Hubbard of Midland and Elaine Sennett of Tacoma, Wash. Grandparents of the bride are Jackie and Dewey McCracken of Fort Scott. The groom's grandparents are Herbert "Hub" and Jerry Hubbard of Kermit, Betty Simmons of Midland and the late Winfred Simmons, and Joe and Ruth West of San Angelo.

The newlyweds are at home in Midland.

MEDINA MOORE was honored recently on her 92nd birthday by her four children and their spouses, Pauline and Paul Myers, Wilma and Richard Lehman of Ponca City, Okla., Billie L. and Annie Moore of Amarillo and Ruth (Mrs. Kenneth) Dygert, and by friends Celia and Albert Cardenas.

Punch and cake were served to friends who stopped by to wish her a happy birthday.

Mrs. Moore was born in Van Alstyne, Texas, on Sept. 14, 1900. She resided there until she married William Moore in 1920. They lived in Hale County and the Dawn Community. She moved to Midland in 1978 to live with her daughter. She currently resides with Ruth.

The honoree has eight grandchildren, 13 great-grandchildren and one great-great-grandchild. Also part of her family are two lovely Snousers, her "granddogs," Harley and Sadie.

Employees of Gandy's Dairy, HM&C, United Marketing Services, the Abilene Reporter News/Midland Reporter Telegram/Odessa American/San Angelo Standard Times and their respective distributors, retailers, sales reps, advertising and promotional agencies and the immediate families of each are not eligible. Winners will be required to sign and return an affidavit of eligibility and a liability release within 21 days of notification. Non-compliance with this condition will result in selection of an alternate winner. In the event of a tie, an additional 50 word essay will be required on the same basis as the qualifying essay event.

To obtain an official winners' list, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope postmarked by December 31, 1992 to Winners List, Dept. No. 921724, Lubbock, TX 79971-1724.

Entries must be submitted in entrant's own name. Essays must not have been published and/or cannot have won prizes or awards in other contests, and must not be restricted in any way. Submission of essay gives Gandy's Dairy and said newspaper sponsors the right to modify, edit, publish, and/or use essay in any way without, consideration or payment to entrant.

AT WIT'S END

Every 'beep' of my heart

By Erma Bombeck

When you're my age, you don't buy green bananas, start long novels or listen to answering machine messages. I don't know why people who spend no time at home are frustrated comedians, but it seems the whole world is a beep away from the Comedy Store. I have sat through more answering machine auditions than an agent.

Bombeck

There are the shockers: "Hello there. I'm out social climbing, but if you leave your name and number and if you're anybody, I'll get back to you." There are the ones that intimidate: "Leave a message. If you don't, you'll regret it for the rest of your life. Maybe not today or tomorrow, but if I were you I'd take my phone off the hook."

The answering machine has become the No. 1 means of communication within the last decade. It has also become the spotlight for every closet performer who is afraid of crowds and every class clown who never outgrew his need for an audience. Some messages can be bought, but for the most part it has become a race to be funnier than your friends. Some people even change the recordings every week or so.

I call my kids and prepare to grow old. My daughter has a tape of a psychologist who rambles on interminably until she breaks in with her message and beep. One of my sons imitates voices, which have run the gamut from Gandhi to a bad Ronald Reagan. Last week, I got a voice laced with helium to make him sound like Donald Duck. His message: "You have reached the law offices of Bernstein, Weinstein, Bombeck and Springsteen. If you have a personal injury, press one; if you are suing, press two; if you need help quickly, press three." By the time I sat through all of that, I forgot what I called for and instead left him the phone number of a good therapist.

Some professionals can't afford the luxury of cute messages. Who wants to call a pediatrician with a problem at midnight to suffer through, "Hi there. I'm in my laboratory in the basement now trying to breathe life into a 7-foot man with a bolt in his head and a seam in his face, but if you leave your name and number at the sound of the beep ..."?

Companies that sell answering machines say they reduce anger among callers. I'm not sure. The other day I was so annoyed that I couldn't talk to a human that I yelled into the receiver, "This is Erma's answering machine. If you aren't home, then how come you picked up?"

DEAR ABBY

Raising disabled child has special rewards

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: October has traditionally been Down Syndrome Awareness Month, and has been so declared by the U.S. Congress.

Van Buren

Because I have so often heard from parents or grandparents of babies born with various disabilities, I offer the following, which has become a favorite:

WELCOME TO HOLLAND
By Emily Pearl Kingsley

"I am often asked to describe the experience of raising a child with a disability — to try to help people who have not shared that unique experience to understand it, to imagine how it would feel. It's like this ...

"When you're going to have a baby, it's like planning a fabulous vacation trip — to Italy. You buy a bunch of guidebooks and make your wonderful plans. The Coliseum. The Michaelangelo David. The gondolas in Venice. You may learn some handy phrases in Italian. It's all very exciting.

"After months of eager anticipation, the day finally arrives. You pack your bags and off you go. Several hours later, the plane lands. The stewardness comes in and says, 'Welcome to Holland.'

"'Holland?!' you say, 'What do you mean, Holland? I signed up for Italy! I'm supposed to be in Italy. All my life I've dreamed of going to Italy.'

"But there's been a change in the flight plan. They've landed in Holland and there you must stay.

"The important thing is that they haven't taken you to a horrible, disgusting, filthy place, full of pestilence, famine and disease. It's just a different place.

"So you must go out and buy new guidebooks. And you must learn a whole new language. And you will meet a whole new group of people you would never have met.

"It's just a different place. It's slower-paced than Italy, less flashy than Italy. But after you've been there for a while and you catch your breath, you look around, and you begin to notice that Holland has windmills, Holland has tulips, Holland even has Rembrandts.

"But everyone you know is busy coming and going from Italy, and they're all bragging about what a wonderful time they had there. And for the rest of your life, you will say, 'Yes, that's where I was supposed to go. That's what I had planned.'

"And the pain of that will never, ever, ever go away, because the loss of that dream is a very significant loss.

"But if you spend your life mourning the fact that you didn't get to Italy, you may never be free to enjoy the very special, the very lovely things about Holland."

READERS: For information on Down Syndrome, and to be put in touch with the local Down Syndrome organization, contact the National Down Syndrome Congress, 1800 Dempster St., Park Ridge, Ill. 60068-1146; phone: 1 (800) 232-6372. Its hotline offers access to a wealth of information on any subject related to Down Syndrome. A telephone call can provide that difficult-to-find information or assist you in establishing contact with others in a similar situation.

What teen-agers need to know about sex, drugs, AIDS, and getting along with their peers and parents is now in Abby's updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." SEEDS FOR THOUGHT

Planting peppers is pleasing

By Deborah A. Benge

You're not in the state of Texas long before you discover peppers are very important. Food dishes of all kinds are prepared with various types of peppers, like bell, jalapeno, long green chile, cayenne, pimento, banana, habanero and the list goes on.

Benge

Not the most popular pepper but certainly one of the best, is the long green chile, a pepper referred to as chile. This is the pepper that is used to make the favorite Mexican dish, chile rellenos. It's also the type of pepper that's used in chile ristras, the long string of red chilies commonly seen hanging in the sun on some New Mexico and Texas homes.

Long green chile is most commonly planted from transplants in the spring. It is related to all other peppers, tomatoes, eggplant and potatoes and their culture is somewhat similar. They are all warm season vegetables that grow well in hot, dry growing conditions with cultural practices like proper watering, fertilizing and mulching.

Long green chile produce a thick walled, flattened pod that is six to eight inches long, about two inches broad and of course hollow inside except for the seeds. All of these characteristics, including the degree of pungency, will vary with variety.

The heat associated with long green chile comes from an alkaloid called capsaicin. It appears as a band of yellow to orange pustules along the inner walls of the pod concentrated heaviest near the seeds. The pungency of chile is controlled genetically, so there should be a variety that will fit every taste.

Some of the green chile varieties available include Nu-Mex Big Jim, Nu-Mex R. Naky, Sandia A, New Mexico No. 6-4 and Anaheim There are many other varieties but these are some good ones to choose from.

Green chile is one of those unusual vegetables that can be harvested green mature or in a red mature stage. Green chile can be harvested when the pods have reached mature size, feel smooth and firm, not yielding to pressure. If left on the plant these green fruit will turn brilliant red in the late summer sun. Once they turn red, they can be left on the plant to dry or they can be dried in the sun on a string called a chile ristra.

A chile ristra is an excellent way to preserve red chile for use later on and at the same time it can be very decorative. These gorgeous strings of red chile are often used as decoration on the porches and entries of homes. In addition to the red chilies they can be decorated with ornamental corn, corn husk, four winged saltbush, gourds and other dried native plant material.

The Texas Agricultural Extension Service and the Permian Basin Master Gardener will be hosting workshops for the public on making these brilliant string of red chile. If you would like to learn how to make your own chile ristra, make plans to join us Oct. 8. The workshops will be taught at 9 a.m., 2 p.m. and 7 p.m. at the Midland County Extension office at 2445 E. Business 20 (next to the Midland County Exhibit Building).

At the workshop you will construct your own chile ristra decorated with ornamental corn, corn husks or any decorations you would like to add. We will teach you how to make and decorate your own chile ristra and you will have a finished product ready to add charm to your front entry or patio.

You must be pre-registered with the Midland County Extension office by Oct. 1. Pre-registration fee is $20 per person and this will cover the cost of one bushel of red chile, string for constructing your ristra, three ears of ornamental corn and instruction booklet.

To pre-register for this class write the Midland County Extension office, Attn: Chile, P.O. Box 1070, Midland, Texas 79702.

Checks or money orders should be made payable to P.B. Master Gardeners. When you write in to pre-register, be sure to indicate which workshop you want to attend on Oct. 8 — 9 a.m., 2 p.m. or 7 p.m. workshops will last one to one-and-a-half hours.

Be sure to try growing and using green chile. They are great fresh, blistered and peeled, in a vast number of dishes. And don't miss stringing some red chile this fall for use and decoration.

Deborah Benge is the extension horticulture agent for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in Midland and Ector counties.

DALLAS: Big D has a lot to do

(From 1H)

The "crown jewel" of the exhibit is the State Carriage, also known as Catherine's Coronation Carriage. Many have seen photos of this magnificent 22-foot rococo carriage, but photos can't compare with its true beauty. The exhibit has more than 300 pieces of 18th century Russian artworks and artifacts from the State Hermitage Museum in St. Petersburg.

Tickets are $8 for adults, $4.50 for children 4-12 years of age, and 3 and under are free. For information, call (214) 565-4450. For ticket sales, call 1-800-654-9545.

Also within Fair Park visitors can stop at the Science Place where "The Etruscans: Legacy to a Lost Civilization" will be, featuring 178 artifacts dating from 750 to 250 B.C., from the tombs of Etruria. These relics naver have been seen outside Vatican museums.

Open Oct. 1, the exhibit lasts through Jan. 31, 1993. Admission is free with a State Fair ticket; otherwise, $8 for adults, $6 for children 3-16 years old and senior citizens, and free for children under 3. For tickets, call 1-800-654-9545.

The Dallas Museum of Natural History, in Fair Park, is hosting "Sharks: Facts & Fantasy" Oct. 2 through Jan. 3. The exhibit examines the anatomy, biology, history and behavior of these creatures and will be open seven days a week. Admission is $2-$4, but free with State Fair admission.

The Texas/OU weekend pits the Longhorns of the University of Texas at Austin against the Sooners of Oklahoma University in a football rivalry that spans years.

Each year the game is played during the State Fair of Texas and fans fill the Cotton Bowl's 72,000 seat capacity in a sea of red (for OU) and orange (for UT).

A getaway from the hustle and bustle of the city is just a step away at the Dallas Arboretum. It is 66 acres of lush habitation off the banks of White Rock Lake and home to the historic DeGolyer house. "Colorfall" Dallas Japan celebration Oct. 3-25 will feature masses of colorful chrysanthemums, and numerous weekend demonstrations and exhibits.

Ghouls and goblins will lurk amid the winding paths of the Dallas Arboretum Oct. 30-31, as well as many other holiday-themed events throughout the year. Admission is $6, senior citizens $5 and

ANNIVERSARIES

Johnsons celebrate 65 years together

Mr. and Mrs. Louie A. Johnson of Midland celebrated their 65th wedding anniversary at a family reunion in August. The couple's children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren attended.

Hosts were the couple's daughters and their husbands, Barbara and Windell Thomason and Helen and E.D. Scarth.

Johnson and the former Dorothy Crawshaw were married Sept. 21, 1927, in Fredonia, Kan. They have two children, Helen Scarth of Burleson and Barbara Thomason of Midland, as well as six grandchildren and 10 great-grandchildren.

The couple has lived in many states and Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands and Brazil. They have lived mostly in Texas since 1960.

They have been active in construction and ranching businesses, and are members of Bellview Baptist Church.

Mr. and Mrs. Louie A. Johnson

Couple's 50th anniversary honored

Bill and Jo Dickey of Midland were guests of honor at a 50th anniversary reception Saturday at the clubhouse of Los Colinas Apartments. Hosts were the couple's children and grandchildren.

Dickey and the former Jo Bridgeman were married Sept. 28, 1942, in Clovis, N.M. They have three children — Charlie Dickey and Robert Dickey of San Antonio, and Sherry Floyd of Midland — as well as nine grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

The Dickeys lived in San Luis Obispo, Calif., from 1946 to 1962, when they moved to Midland. Dickey is a retired body shop foreman. He worked for Elder Chevrolet 1962-64; for Rogers Ford 1964-84; and Jack Sherman Chevrolet 1988-92. Mrs. Dickey worked for Panther City Office Supply 1972-91.

Bill and Jo Dickey

Both are members of the Moose Lodge.

Couple celebrates 45th anniversary

Jim and Dorothy H. Zimmerman of Midland celebrated their 45th wedding anniversary Saturday. Zimmerman and the former Dorothy H. Browning were married Sept. 26, 1947, in Norman, Okla.

Mrs. Zimmerman attended Tulsa Business College and worked at Douglas Aircraft plant in Tulsa during World War II. Zimmerman attended Texas Western University in El Paso and earned a bachelor of science degree in geology from the University of Oklahoma. He earned a master's degree in geology from the University of Texas at Austin in 1949, and the couple moved to Midland in 1950.

Zimmerman worked for University of Texas Lands for 30 years and was the geologist in charge for 15 years. He was in charge of building the Hal P. Bybee building at 808 W. Wall. He has been an independent geologist since 1979.

Zimmerman has been a member of Jaycees (serving as vice president one year), was vice president of West Texas Geological Society, president of Midland Downtown Rotary Club, Rotary Club newsman and reader for 13 years, member of Planning and Zoning Commission for three years, member of City Plan Committee, and commander of Midland Naval Reserve Co. for several years. His wife has been a Jayceette, a geneologist, charter member of Santa Rita Club, and member of Rotary Anns, Midland Rose Society and Landman's Auxiliary.

Both are charter members of Tall City Sams.

BIG D: Fall sports busy schedule

children $3, with a $2 charge for parking. Age 6 and under are admitted free. The Arboretum is open seven days a week. For more information or a schedule of events, call (214) 327-8263.

Just north of Big D is a site that shouldn't be missed by television fans, Southfork Ranch, one of the world's most famous ranches where the long-running television series "Dallas" was filmed.

The 41-acre ranch was closed in January 1991, but recently has been in the public eye due to its sale at auction to Rex Maughan, a successful Arizona business man. With numerous renovations completed, Southfork was reopened for daily visitors Aug. 19.

There still are many renovations staged for throughout 1993, including an improved visitors' center, better parking facilities, a Tram Tour, a renovated "Ewing Mansion," new and improved meeting and event facilities, a "Miss Ellie's Deli," a western store, and a museum dedicated to the history of the television show.

Plans are for the ranch to be open year-round. Admission prices are $4 for adults, $2 for children. Following the completion of renovations in 1993, a price change is planned. For more information, call (214) 442-7800.

Another topic in Dallas which has received the attention of the film and television industry is the death of President John F. Kennedy. A special exhibit call "The Sixth Floor," located in the Dallas Country Administration Building on Elm — once known as the School Book Depository — chronicles the life and death of JFK.

The assassination of President Kennedy has been the topic recent films, books and television shows with the releases of the movies "JFK" and "Ruby," the book "JFK: Conspiracy of Silence" by Charles Crenshaw, and the season premier of the television series "Quantum Leap."

If this is a subject of interest or dear to your heart, plan to spend at least a half-day or more here. The exhibit includes photographs, memorabilia, tapes and videos. Tickets are $4.

For something a little lighter, visit the new West End Historic District in Dallas which extends from Market Street to Pacific to McKinney. The district is an eclectic mix of shops, nightclubs and restaurants, a perfect place for dinner and dancing, or a visit to a comedy or piano bar.

The events and attractions mentioned only touch on the sites, sounds and happenings of the metroplex area. For more information, contact the Dallas Convention & Visitors Bureau at (214) 746-6688, or write to 1201 Elm Street, Suite 2000, Dallas, Texas, 75270.

Mrs. Collier reported chapter rating as "Three Star."

The friendship basket was given to Cindy Bownds from Cindy Ranson. Kim Collier demonstrated how to make Kolanches and shared the recipe with the members. The hostess gift was won by Angela Mitchell.

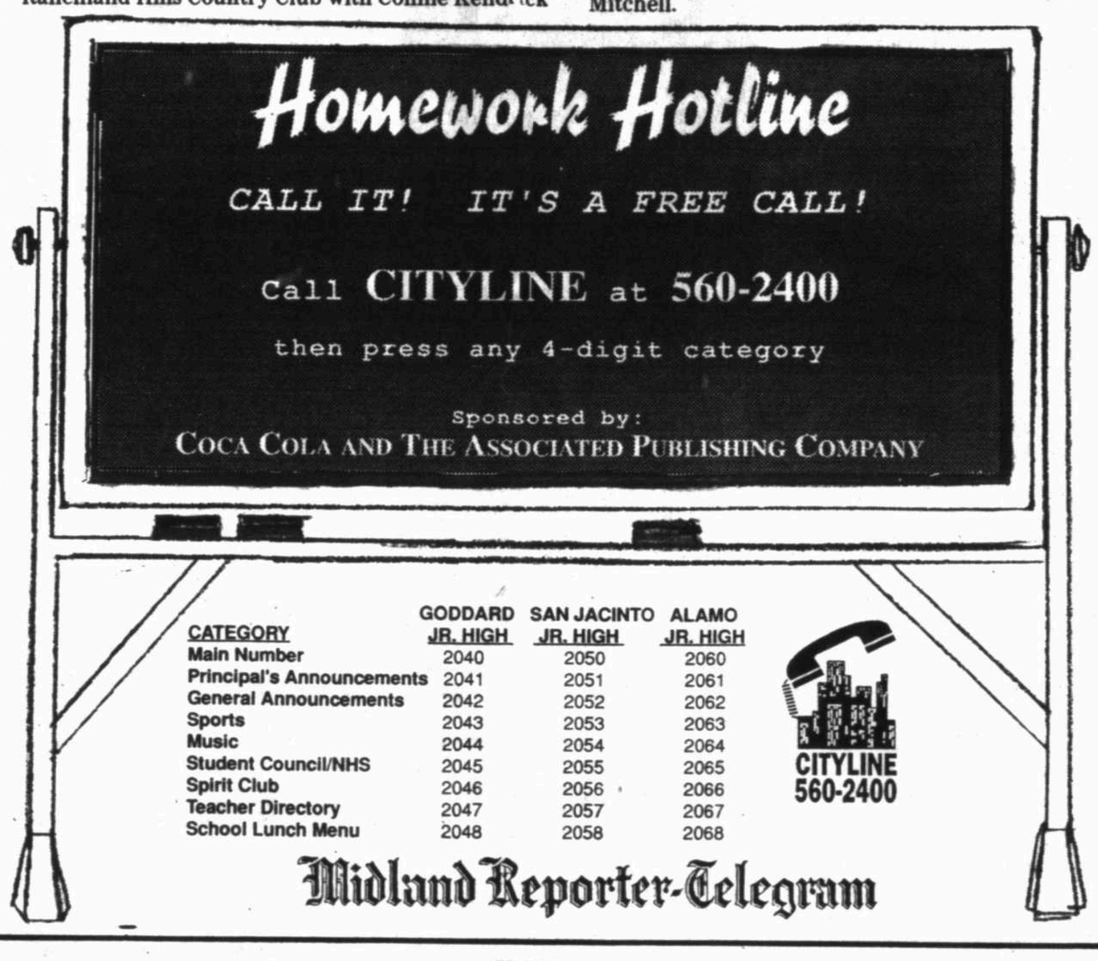

Ultraviolet light can be harmful to eyes too

HOUSTON (AP) — Ultraviolet light not only causes skin damage but it also may harm the eye, says a researcher at Houston's Baylor College of Medicine.

According to Dr. Laurence Rapp, who is studying how ultraviolet light ages eye cells, his research may help doctors treat disorders such as cataracts and macular degeneration, which he describes as "major vision disorders that can be age-related."

Rapp is measuring the effects of UV light in the eyes of rats, examining cells in the retinas to evaluate damage and to determine the light's influence on the aging process.

He recommends using sunglasses with UV protection.

The First Midland YMCA, now the Central Branch YMCA. 800 N. Big Spring.

THE YMCA A HABIT OF THE HEART

What is the YMCA?

The YMCA is the largest nonprofit community service organization in America. YMCA's work to strengthen families and to help people develop values and behavior that are consistent with Christian principles. Y's are for people of all faiths, races, abilities, ages, and incomes. No one is turned away for inability to pay. The YMCA's strength is in the people it brings together.

What is the Midland YMCA

The Midland YMCA is people, people who associate themselves together through membership for the purpose of providing character development experiences through its many programs and services. YMCA programs are available to Midlanders of all ages and beliefs who find a spirit of community service and human concern based on enduring Christian values.

What does the YMCA do?

The YMCA builds character, self-esteem, cultural diversity, values and leadership. The Y does these things using programs, services and well-equipped facilities.

How did the YMCA start?

The YMCA began in 1844 in London, England. It started with a group of 12 young men who formed a bible study group to focus on their Christian values in a city where living conditions at the time were appalling. The intent of the fledgling "Young Men's Christian Assocation' was to provide these young men a healthy balance of body, mind and spirit. At the end of four years, over 6,000 young men had been influenced by their association with this organization.

In 1851, the first YMCA in the United States was organized in Boston, Mass. Just over 100 years later, in 1953, the YMCA came to Midland, Texas.

Following the tradition of service to youth, the first YMCA program in Midland was a Hi-Y club at Midland High School. Hi-Y is a program for teens based on the concept of community service. This program was followed quickly by several youth sports activities and an after school program for youngsters, called Gra-Y. A parent/child program called Indian Guides soon became very popular in Midland.

From 1954 to 1956 the Midland YMCA was housed in the Gas Building at 2111/2 N. Colorado Street. In 1956 the Y moved briefly to the Furr Market building at Texas Avenue and Marienfeld Street. In September of 1956, the YMCA moved to a donated house at 806 N. Big Spring.

By 1957, the Board of Directors had determined that a greater need existed for YMCA services in Midland. They kicked off a fund raising drive that year to raise the $775,000 to help them build their new facility at 800 N. Big Spring. Many Midlanders said it was too much, it couldn't be done at the time. However, they underestimated the determination of the small group that started the YMCA program in Midland. The group didn't stay small and neither did the YMCA program in Midland. The ground breaking ceremony was held on May 25, 1959. The building was officially dedicated on November 10, 1960. Regular programming started on November 14, 1960.

The YMCA has never looked back. As the YMCA of Midland prepares to celebrate its 40th anniversary it is the largest YMCA per capita in the United States. Boasting four full facility branches, Central, Alamo, Northeast and Town West; and eastside program center, Washington; a full facility Child Development Center, and a 320 acre Day Camp site, the Midland YMCA continues to offer services to all of Midland.

The YMCA continues to grow and serve the needs of Midland. Essentially preventative in nature, the YMCA offers wholesome, values driven programs as alternative activities to everyone in the community.

Young and old, boys and girls, men and women, share the inclusiveness of the Y. Guided by volunteers who share a common vision, the Midland YMCA will continue to change to meet the needs of the community. The YMCA of Midland is truly a 'habit of the heart'.

YMCA FACTS

The Midland YMCA is a charitable non-profit organization governed by a local Board of Directors. Volunteers set policy for the YMCA staff to carry out.

The Midland Y is one of 958 YMCA's in the United States. These units operated 1,120 branches, units and camps last year. These units were run by 62,271 volunteer policy makers serving on Y boards and committees. These volunteers worked with 9,161 paid professional staff members.

The Midland YMCA has over 300 volunteers serving on boards and committees. The staff is made up of 18 professional staff members and over 130 other full and part time staff.

MIDLAND YMCA TRIVIA

"Operating budget 1958 - $42,000"

"Operating budget 1992/93 - $2,587,490"

"First President of the Board- Roy McKee"

"The Midland YMCA offers 105 fitness classes every week."

"The YMCA is responsible for the beginning of basektball, volleyball, the Peace Corps, resident camping, and the USO."

"The YMCA is the largest provider of child care in Midland, and in the United States."

"The Chairman of the Charter Membership Committee was George H. W. Bush."

THE YMCA AND THE UNITED WAY

The Midland YMCA is a United Way agency. The Y is on a purchase of service arrangement with the United Way. The United Way is currently supporting part of five separate YMCA programs. Programs receiving United Way support are Youth Sports, the Child Development Center, Eastside Youth Services, Eastside Adult Services and School-Age Child Care.

YMCA Child Care

Peace Of Mind For Parents

YMCA child care programs are based on two key goals. First, to provide a safe, secure environment for children who need all day or afterschool care. Second, to let kids have fun while experiencing new friends and activities in a values driven environment.

Peace of mind for parents, fun for kids. The Midland Y offers these things at six locations in Midland.

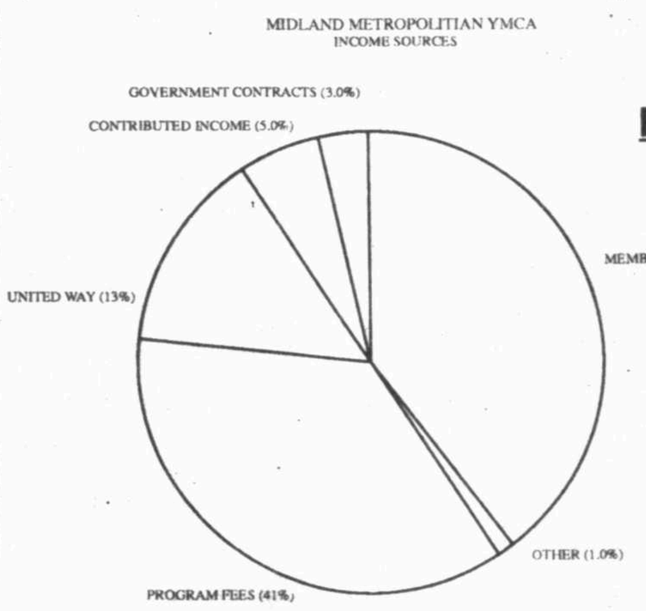

The Child Development Center is located at 815 S. Carver. This center cares for newborns through 12 year olds. The center serves breakfast, lunch and an afternnoon snack and is licensed for 120 children. A pre-school readiness program and age-appropriate activities are key components for the Child Development Center.

The Alamo YMCA at 901 N. Midland Drive and the Northeast YMCA at 2300 Butternut offer after school care for grades K-6 during the school year. Children are picked up at school and taken to the Y for a full range of activities every week.

The YMCA is also offering school-based child care at Bowie, Ben Milam and De Zavala Elementary Schools this year. Students walk directly from their classrooms to the YMCA program site. Well-trained staff greet them and lead them in a variety of activities everyday.

YMCA child care program components include recreational games and activities, sports skills, environmental issues, socialization skills, arts-n-crafts, snacks/nutrition, homework/tutoring, and community awareness.

All of the YMCA child care sites are licensed by the Texas Department of Human Services. Financial assistance is available.

INS Renueva Formulario de Verification y Elegibilidad de Empleo para Trabajadores Extranjeros

por Mella McEwen

El Servicio de Inmigración y Naturalización espera clarificar reglas y regulaciones tratando con trabajadores extranjeros en los Estados Unidos.

INS recientemente ha renovado una nueva versión de la Forma I-9, la Forma de Verificación y Elegibilidad de Empleo debe ser llenada por todos los empleados cuando empiezan ha trabajar. La forma fue iniciada por la Reforma de Inmigración y el Acto de Control de 1986.

De acuerdo a Art Moreno, Portavoz de Negocios Públicos para la INS en Harlingen, patrones deben comenzar usando la nueva I-9 para Noviembre o enfrentar multas por violación de cuidado de archivos. Las formas son disponibles por la Unidad de Sanciones a Patrones de la Oficina de INS del área.

Moreno estuvo en Midland a invitación de la Camara Hispana de Comercio de Midland para discutir cambios, dic él que la nueva forma trata con discriminación y simplifica el proceso de la verificación y elegibilidad para los patrones y los empleados.

Elvia Hernandez, Presidenta de MHCC, dice que ella trajo a Moreno a Midland porque los cambios tendrán un impacto en la gran población Hispana de la ciudad.

Moreno dice que la nueva forma claramente indica cuales documentos puede y no puede requerir el patrón.

INS revamps employment eligibility verification form for foreign workers

by Mella McEwen

The Immigration and Naturalization Service hopes to clarify rules and regulations dealing with foreign workers in the United States.

The INS has just unveiled a new version of Form I-9, the Employment Eligibility Verification form to be filled out by all employees when they start work. The form was instituted by the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986.

According to Art Moreno, public affairs spokesman for the INS in Harlingen, employers must begin using the new I-9 by November or face fines for record-keeping violations. The forms are available from the Employer Sanctions Unit of the area INS office.

Moreno, was in Midland to discuss the changes at the invitation of the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, said the new form deals with discrimination and simplifies the eligibility verification process for both employers and

por Jeffrey McDonald

Para el hombre, fueron dos cosas su gran realización y su gran caída. Para el mundo, fue el comienzo y el final.

Los 500 años que habían pasado desde que Cristóbal Colón y su tripulación primero sentaron pie sobre el hemisferio occidental ha hecho mucho para obscurecer detalles de el hombre y su misión. Y no debe ser sorprendente que tanto debate-y controversia-se ha levantado en los siglos siguientes a la travesía.

Por supuesto, estamos recordando en nuevas características cada 12 de Octubre, que Colón realmente no 'descubrió' América. Ese honor fue reservado para grupos de cazadores prehistóricos quienes, 12 0 14,000 años atrás, siguieron su presa cruzando un puente de tierra que conectaba Asia y Norte América durante la ultima edad de hielo. Estos grupos de cazadores se desparramarían por todo el hemisferio occidental, siendo ascendientes de los Indios Americanos, incluyendo los Taitinos quienes recibieron a Colón y su tripulación en la Isla de San Salvador.

Tampoco Colón fue el primer Europeo en visitar el 'Nuevo Mundo'. Ese honor va a los hermanos Escandinavos, Leif y Thorvald Ericsson, quienes, mas tarde en el décimo siglo, se colocaron en lo que es hoy Newfoudland (Nueva Tierra Encontrada).

Pero seria una corta aventura vivida y, atrapados entre la Muerte Negra en el Viejo Mundo y los mortales escaramuzas con nativos (llamados encogedores de cabezas) en el Nuevo Mundo, fue abandonada, para nunca ser renovada.

Pero la importancia histórica de individuales y sus acciones es medida, en parte, por las consecuencias de estas acciones. Fue Colón-no los Vikingos- quien estableció una permanente y bien documentado contacto entre los dos mundos. Y, gracias a la publicación de literatura e imprenta por el Viejo Mundo, había contacto que no pasaría a ser leyenda.

En términos de hoy, se puede decir que Colón tenia 'buena prensa'. Pero también se puede decir que fue la travesía de Colón la cual trajo dos mundos al alcance uno del otro.

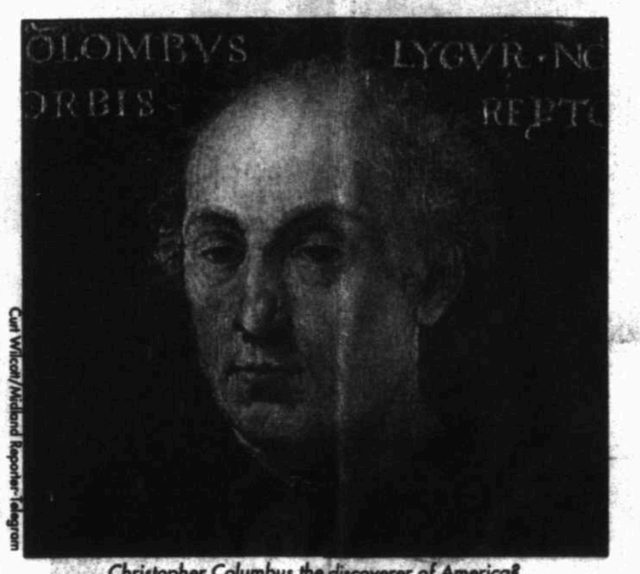

Esta travesía empezó tarde en el verano de 1492, así como tres barcas se hicieron a la mar desde el puerto Español Palos de la Frontera. La navegación insignia de la pequeña flota de marina, La Santa Maria, era comandada por Colón mientras que la mas pequeña La Niña y La Pinta eran comandadas por Vicente y Martin Pinzon, respectivamente.

Ellos navegaron con las bendiciones y -mas importante-el apoyo financiero del Rey Fernando y la Reina Isabel de España. En muchos modos, teniendo su apoyo ha sido una gran prueba de la ingenuidad y sufrimiento de Colón que de la travesía del océano que siguió. Por ocho años, él y su hermano Bartolomé habían solicitado no solamente a la Corte Real de España, pero también las cortes del Rey Carlos VIII de Francia, Rey Enrique VII de Inglaterra, y el Rey Juan II de Portugal.

No era que Colón tuviera dificultad en convencer a los monarcas y sus consejeros de que el mundo era redondo. Esto era algo qué había sido demostrado por el Griego geográfico Eratostenes en el tercer siglo BC, y era generalmente aceptado por casi todo el Viejo Mundo. Tampoco era la idea de que pudiera navegar hacia el Oeste para alcanzar las tierras de Asia de el Este. Un portugués real atento una expedición, la cual- sin éxito-en 1485.

La mayor causa de la duda real seria familiar en las cabezas del gobierno de hoy en dia-Costa! Había ya una gran variedad de costosos esfuerzos bajo camino por establecer rutas de intercambio con ganancias con el lejano Este, por tierra y mar. Casi todos estos esfuerzos

Christopher Columbus the discoverer of America?

Amerigo Vespucci, after whom the American Continents are named

The Voyage of Christopher Columbus

by Jeffrey McDonald

For the man, it was both his greatest achievement and his greatest failure. For the world, it was both the beginning and the end.

The 500 years that have passed since Christopher Columbus and his crew first set foot upon the western hemisphere have done much to obscure details of the man and his mission. So it should not be surprising that so much debate - and controversy - has risen in the centuries following the voyage.

Of course, we are reminded in news features every October 12th, that Columbus did not really "discover" America. That honor was reserved for prehistoric bands of hunters who, 12 to 14,000 years ago, followed their prey across a land bridge that connected Asia and North America during the last ice age. These bands of hunters would spread throughout the western hemisphere, becoming the ancestors of the American Indians, including the Tainos who greeted Columbus and his crew on the island of San Salvador.

Nor was Columbus the first European to visit the "New World". That honor would go to the Scandinavian brothers, Leif and Thorvald Ericsson, who, late in the 10th century, settled in what is today Newfoundland. But it would be a short-lived venture and, caught between the Black Death in the Old World and deadly skirmishes with natives (called Skraelings) in the New World, it was abandoned, never to be renewed.

But the historical importance of individuals and their actions is measured, in part, by the consequences of those actions. It was Columbus - not the Vikings - who established a permanent and well-documented contact between the two worlds. And thanks to the spread of literacy and printing throughout the Old World, it was a contact that would not pass into legend. In today's terms, you might say Columbus had "good press". But you would also say that it was Columbus whose voyage of discovery first brought two worlds within the range of each other.

That voyage began late in the summer of 1492, as three ships sailed from the Spanish port of Palos de la Frontera. The flagship of the tiny fleet, the Santa Maria, was commanded by Columbus while the smaller Nina and Pinta were commanded by Vicente and Martin Pinzon, respectively.

They sailed with the blessings and - more importantly - the financial support of King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella of Spain. In many ways, getting this support had been a greater test of Columbus' ingenuity and endurance than the ocean voyage that followed. For eight years, he and his brother Bartholomew had lobbied not only the royal court of Spain, but also the courts of King Charles VIII of France, King Henry VII of England, and King John II of Portugal

It was not that Columbus had difficulty convincing the monarchs and their advisors that the world was round. This was something that had been demonstrated by the Greek geographer Eratosthenes in the third century BC, and it was generally accepted throughout much of the Old World. Nor was it the idea that one might sail west to reach the Asian lands of the east. A royal Potuguese expedition had attempted this unsuccessfully in 1945.

The main cause for royal hesitation would be familiar to today's heads of government - cost! There were already a great many expensive efforts underway by the royal courts of Europe to establish profitable trade routes with the Far East, by land and sea. Nearly all of these efforts were directed toward the east, which was known, rather than to the

El Día Que Pancho Villa Visito a Colón

por José Antonio Burciaga

En este año del Quingentésimo Aniversario, cuando todos los pueblos que llevan el nombre de Cristóbal Colón están gritando y aullando en espera al 12 de Octubre, no se ha dado mucha atención a la comunidad minúscula de Columbus, Nuevo México.

Columbus, con una población de 600 personas es tan pequeña que las afueras de la población son también las zonas internas. La biblioteca poblana, de un solo salón, tiene un letrero garrapateado que dice: "La Sra. Pierce esta recuperándose bien. No hay libros nuevos todavía."

Al otro lado de la verja fronteriza se halla Palomas, estado de Chihuahua, México, con una población de 2,000 personas.

Fue aquí donde ocurrió la ultima invasión a los Estados Unidos continentales por parte de una fuerza militar extranjera hace 76 años. El jueves 9 de 1916, a las 4:25 de la mañana, aproximadamente 1,000 soldados al mando del General mexicano Francisco Villa, atacaron a esta población ferroviaria pequeña. (El ultimo paso por Columbus en 1962.)

"Villa Ataca A Columbus, Nuevo México," voceaba la edición del día siguiente de "The Deminig Graphic," periódico del pueblo vecino. El mismo describía de que modo los villistas entraron a caballo en el pueblo con gritos de "¡Viva Villa! ¡Viva México! ¡Muerte a los gringos!"

Quince residentes de Columbus resultaron muertos y nueve heridos, informo el periódico. El mismo alegaba que 100 mexicanos resultaron muertos. Otros informes situaban a la cantidad de villistas en 2,000 y al total de muertos por ambas partes en 160.

El Decimo-Tercer Batallón de Caballería de los Estados Unidos fue tomado por sorpresa, a pesar de los rumores y las advertencias reiteradas de los mexicano-americanos locales, tales como Juan Favela, capataz de la Compañía de Tierras y Ganado de Palomas. El día anterior al ataque, el periódico "The El Paso Times" había llegado a publicar un articulo corto en que decía que Pancho Villa y sus hombres se hallaban cerca de Columbus. (¿Se acuerdan de Pearl Harbor y de Kuwait?)

Se ofrecen muchas teorías para explicar la invasión de Pancho Villa. El Presidente Woodrow Wilson había cambiado su apoyo hacia Venustiano Carranza y había prohibido la venta de armas y municiones a Villa. La redada era para jurar venganza y capturar alimentos, armamentos, municiones y caballos. Villa se proponía también saquear a un tren que llegaba, cargado de efectivo muy necesario, pero el tren no llevaba mas que carbón.

Otra teoría es que el ataque fue para vengarse de un comerciante de Columbus que había dejado de entregar una partida de armas y municiones. Todavía otra: Que los Estados Unidos habían permitido a las tropas mexicanas de General Obregón el viajar a través de Arizona y dentro de Agua Prieta, México, para perseguir a Villa.

Un relato extravagante dijo que el Presidente Wilson le pago a Villa $80,000 para invadir a Columbus, en preparación para la entrada inevitable de los Estados Unidos en la Primera Guerra Mundial. La intriga diplomática no es nada nuevo.

Presuntamente, las tiendas y casas mexicanas habían sido dejadas sin tocar por los hombres de Villa. Después de la redada, todos los mexicanos y mexicano-americanos fueron sacados de la población.

Dentro de un mes de la invasión, seis villistas fueron juzgados y declarados culpables, al mismo tiempo, por el asesinato del mismo hombre, Charles D. Miller. A los seis se les colgó "hasta que murieran."

Otro presunto villista, el niño Jesús Piaz, de 12 años de edad, fue enjuiciado por el mismo asesinato, pero nunca fue a juicio. El había estado esperando por su padre, a quien se

The Day Pancho Villa Visited Columbus

by José Antonio Burciaga

In this year of the Quincentennial, when every town named "Columbus" is hooting and hollering its way to Oct. 12, not much attention has been given to the tiny border community of Columbus, N.M.

Columbus, population 600, is so small that the outskirts of town are also the inskirts. The one-room library has a scrawled message that reads, "Mrs. Pierce is recuperating well. No new books yet!"

On the other side of the border fence is Palomas, Chihuahua, Mexico, population 2,000. It was here that the last invasion of the continental United States by a foreign military force took place 76 years ago. On Thursday, March 9, 1916, at 4:25 a.m., approximately 1,000 troops under command of Mexican General Francisco Villa attacked this little railroad town. (The last train passed through Columbus in 1962.)

"Villa Attacks Columbus, N.M." screamed the next day's edition of "The Deming Graphic," the neighboring town's newspaper. It described how the Villistas rode into town with yells of "¡Viva Villa! ¡Viva Mexico! ¡Muerte a los Gringos!"

Fifteen Columbus residents were killed and nine wounded, the paper reported. It claimed that 100 Mexicans were killed. Other reports put the number of Villistas at 2,000 and total dead on both sides at 160.

The U.S. 13th Cavalry was caught by surprise despite rumors and repeated warnings from local Mexican-Americans such as Juan Favela, a foreman for the Palomas Land and Cattle Company. The day before the attack, the El Paso Times had even published a small news item stating the Pancho Villa and his men were near Columbus. (Remember Pearl Harbor and Kuwait.)

Many theories are offered to explain Pancho Villa's invasion. President Woodrow Wilson had switched his support for President Venustiano Carranza and forbade the sale of weapons and ammunition to Villa. The raid was to swear vengeance and capture food, armament, ammunition and horses. Villa also intended to loot an incoming train loaded with much-needed cash, but the train carried nothing but coal.

Another theory is that the raid was to revenge a Columbus businessman who had failed to deliver a sale of arms and ammunition. Still another: the United States had allowed Mexican General Obregon's troops to travel through Arizona and into Agua Prieta, Mexico, to chase after Villa. One bizarre story had President Wilson paying Villa $80,000 to invade Columbus in preparation for the inevitable U.S. entry into World War I. Diplomatic intrigue is nothing new.

Supposedly, Mexican stores and houses had

Es un mundo del que para muchos de nosotros pueda ser inadvertido. Un exótico mundo que mezcla arte y negocio, un mundo interesante de viaje internacional y competición. Es un mundo donde Santos, uno de los estilistas de pelo guiando la nación, es un maestro.

Una guía de su salón de Odessa revela paredes llenas con reconocimientos y momentos de una carrera distinguida.

"Esta medallas aquí, he ganado cinco campeonatos nacionales de estilos de peinados en el campo de estilos de peinados para hombres," dice Santos, uno de solamente cuatro Hispanos ha ganar el codiciado titulo nacional. "Gane el campeonato (Texas) del Estado tres veces, el Tri-State dos veces, y en los campeonatos mundial e internacional, he ganado quinto y noveno, pero ahí había 400 contrarios de 40 paises!"

Una carrera que ha llevado a Santos a Nueva York, Londres, Viena, y muchos otros centros mundiales, empezando en el Sur de Odessa.

"Mira, a la edad de 14, empecé en la escuela de barbero," recuerda Santos. "Yo empecé trabajando en las barberías por $2.50. Nosotros como niños nos juntábamos, por supuesto, discutíamos que íbamos ha ser cuando creciéramos. Mis amigos decían que ellos irían a este colegio o aquel colegio. Yo no tenia nada que decir."

"Entonces me encontré una revista que hablaba sobre los campeonatos, mira, decía la revista, Gana la ciudad, Gana el estado, Gana la nación, Gana el mundo!"

Esto me motivo de empezar ha participar en competición." "Y entonces les dije a mis amigos, "Sabes? Yo voy ha ser campeón mundial cortando pelo! Por supuesto, aun en 1992, muchísima gente no sabe que hay campeonatos en el negocio del pelo. Y se burlaron de mi."

Pero se lleva mas que el animo de amigos para sobresalir, Santos cree.

"Habilidad es lo que todos poseemos, tu sabes, motivación es como tu usas tu habilidad, y actitud es que tan bien tu usas tu habilidad," explica Santos. "Tu entusiasmo es lo que te dará esa extra fuerza.

No importa lo que sea lo que tu quieras hacer, ve y haz lo mejor de tu mejor."

Pero Santos previene que educación es crítico y el cita programas locales del Colegio de Odessa y Aladdin Beauty College. Los cuales están haciendo tremendas contribuciones a el campo de estilistas de pelo.

El también previene que estos entrando en el campo, incluyendo estilistas rentando espacios en salones, deben desarrollar destreza en negocios como administración, finanzas, y compra-venta.

"Aunque sean renteros, ellos necesitan ser propiamente documentados, sus propios anuncios, su propia línea privada de teléfonos, todos sus permisos y cosas como estas. Esto los forzara ha ser buenas personas de negocios," dice Santos. "Y este interés va para proteger nuestra profesión. Si el negocio esta organizado apropiadamente, entonces será una oportunidad para cualquiera de verdad un progreso hacia el futuro. Y si no esta, estamos lastimándonos nosotros mismos."

Pero con la destreza, el entusiasmo, la educación y el trabajo arduo, esta la satisfacción y aun mas el orgullo de un trabajo muy bien hecho, de acuerdo a Santos, quienes clientes tiene incluidos Miss Teen Texas, Miss Texas, y Miss U.S.A. Rodeo.

"Bueno, la satisfacción de mi trabajo es como un deporte para mi. Yo vengo ha trabajar, pero vengo ha hacer algo que me divierte tanto, que siento que estoy siendo pagado por algo que me gusta hacer, como un jugador de football, un jugador de basketball, esta clase de ideas."

"Soy muy afortunado. Hay muy poca gente en este mundo que les gusta su trabajo, y siento que realmente la completa satisfacción que tengo es de lo que estoy haciendo."

Santos, with one of the many awards he has won in state, national and world competitions.

Hispanic Business... is good business

By Amarante Cordova

It's a world whose existence many of us may be unaware of. An exotic world that mixes art and business. An exciting world of international travel and competition. It's a world where Santos, one of the nation's leading hair stylists, is a master.

A tour of his Odessa salon reveals walls filled with the awards and momentos of a distinguished career.

"I've won five national hairstyling championships in the men's hairdressing field," said Santos, one of only four Hispanics to win the coveted national title. "I won the [Texas] state championship three times, the tri-state championship twice, and in the world, in international championships, I've won fifth and ninth, but there were 400 contestants from 40 countries!"

A career that has taken Santos to New York, London, Vienna, and many other world centers, began in south Odessa.

"You see, at the age of 14, I started at the barber school," recalled Santos. "I start working in the barber shops for $2.50. As we kids got together, of course, we'd discuss what you're going to be when you grow up. My friends were saying they were going to this college or that college. I had nothing to say."

"Then I found this magazine that talked about the championships, you see. It said, 'Win the city, win the state, win the nation, win the world!' That motivated me to start participating in competition."

"So then I told my friends, 'You know? I'm going to be a world hair-cutting champion.' Of course, even in 1992, a lot of people don't know that there are championships in the hair business. So they made fun of me."

But it takes more than just the 'encouragement' of friends to succeed, Santos believes.

"Ability is what we all possess, you know. Motivation is how you use your ability, and attitude is how well you use your ability," explained Santos. "Your enthusiasm is what will give you that extra drive. No matter what it is you want to do, go out and do your very best."

But Santos warns that education is crucial and he cites local programs at Odessa College and Aladdin Beauty College, which are making tremendous contributions to the hair styling field.

He also warns that those entering the field, including individual stylists renting space in salons, must develop business skills like management, finance, and marketing.

"Even if they're renters, they need to be properly documented, their own signs, their own private phone lines, all their permits and things like that. That will force them to be good business people," said Santos. "And that concern goes to protect our profession. If the business is organized properly, then it will be an opportunity for everybody to really progress toward the future. If it's not, we're hurting ourselves."

But with the skill, the enthusiasm, the education, and the hard work, there is the satisfaction and even the thrill of a job well done, according to Santos, whose clients have included Miss Teen Texas, Miss Texas, and Miss U.S.A. Rodeo.

"Well, the satisfaction of my job is like a sport to me. I come to work, but I come to do something I enjoy so much, that I feel I'm getting paid for something I like to do, like a football player, a basketball player, that type of idea."

"I'm very fortunate. There are very few people in this world that like their job, and I feel that's really the complete satisfaction I get of what I'm doing."

obligo a unirse al ataque. Ellos se habían propuesto escapar a este país para que Jesús pudiera estudiar aquí. El padre resulto muerto y Jesús fue herido en una pierna, la que fue amputada después.

Una semana después de la invasión, el Coronel Slocum, del "Combatiente" Decimo-Tercer Batallón, llevo a cabo una expedición punitiva dentro de México, en busca del ejercito de Villa. Los periódicos de todo el estado informaron sobre los rumores de planes para anexarse otro pedazo del territorio septentrional de México.

El Decimo-Tercer Batallón de Caballería, la sola unidad de la expedición formada por negros, sufrió dificultades extremada. Desde el 17 de Marzo hasta el 13 de Mayo de 1916, recibió pocos suministros, o ninguno. Sus caballos sufrieron de exposición a la intemperie y hambre, por falta de forrajes.

En Septiembre de 1916, se ordeno al General John J. Pershing que entrara en México para perseguir a Villa. Pershing fracaso en su caceria, a pesar do los aviones y vehículos motorizados que se utilizo. La "guerra" fue la primera en que se haya empleado aviones para misiones de reconocimiento y bombardeo. El General Pershing fue trasladado al teatro de operaciones de la Primera Guerra Mundial poco después.

En este verano, para conmemorar la invasión de Pancho Villa y el Quingentésimo Aniversario, unos cuantos escritores y artistas chicanos, mexicanos y multi-culturales de los estados fronterizos de los Estados Unidos y de México están preparándose para acampar en el Parque del Desierto "Pancho Villa" del Estado de Nuevo México y visitar a Palomas, estado de Chihuahua. En el tercer fin de semana de Agosto, ellos se reunirán para un evento llamado "Barbecuen Columbus" (Asando a Colón), una festividad de culturas que comprenderá lecturas poéticas, canciones y el rasgado de guitarras. El Queen's Centennial ("Centenario de la Reina") será celebrado con la colgadura de una piñata y las criticas al hombre que alega haber descubierto a las Américas.

El pueblo de Palomas, que lleva adecuadamente el nombre del símbolo internacional de la paz, servirá como lugar de reunión para hablar sobre un Tratado de Libre Cultura; los participantes debatirán el firmar una Declaración de Inter-Dependencia Cultural.

Las naciones no viven solamente de "tratados de libre comercio" mercantiles. Viven por el material cultural de sus sociedades.

El Ascenso De La Política Hispana: III El Comodín: El Partido de La Raza Unida

por José de la Isla

El partido de La Raza Unida, nacido de una atmósfera política agresiva, fue fundado por José Angel Gutiérrez. El partido se convirtió después en una pieza importante de la campaña presidencial de 1972.

La leyenda empezó en 1967, cuando la Fundación Ford otorgo $630,000 al Consejo de La Raza del Suroeste. Este, a su vez, doto de fondos al Consejo de la Unidad Mexicano-Americana de San Antonio. Gutiérrez, que estaba en la junta de directores del Consejo de la Unidad, formó la Organización Juvenil Mexicano-Americana (siglas en ingles MAYO).

> "When President Kennedy and Bobby Kennedy died, the Democratic Party died for the Mexican American in Texas"

Gutiérrez, en un tono amenazador característico de la época, dijo que la Fundación Ford "no tuvo muchas alternativas, o bien adelantaban el dinero y, nos conectaban con el sistema, o desbaratábamos todo lo que estuviera allá fuera."

A instancias del Comisionado Albert Peña, del Condado Bexar, el Consejo de la Unidad dio apoyo clandestino al oponente republicano del Representante Henry B. González. Se insto a varios miembros del Consejo de la Unidad a entrar en la contienda para el consejo municipal. En la primavera de 1969, Gonzalez ataco a la Fundación Ford por haber apoyado a los "Bilbos Morenos y al 'nuevo racismo'. Poco después de eso, Peña y Gutiérrez fueron llamados a Nueva York, donde un funcionario de la fundación les dijo en términos bien claros que no habría mas apoyo para MAYO. Punto.

Desde Crystal City, Texas, su punto de residencia, Gutiérrez contemplo una nueva dirección. El organizo un boicot estudiantil contra los cursos de acción raciales discriminatorios de la escuela local. Después, en 1970, el formo La Raza Unida como una alternativa al Partido Demócrata de Texas, predominantemente conservador. La relación amorosa entre los mexicano-americanos y el Partido Demócrata del estado se había vuelto áspero. Un funcionario sindical dijo sencillamente: "Cuando el Presidente Kennedy y Bob Kennedy murieron, el Partido Demócrata murió para los mexicano-americanos de Texas."

Para la primavera de 1970, los candidatos de La Raza Unida ganaron el control de la junta de instrucción publica de Crystal City y plazas en Carrizo Springs y Cotulla igualmente. En el otoño, sin embargo, los chicanos desertaron de La Raza Unida y votaron por el Partido Demócrata.

Gutiérrez procuro entonces expandirse fuera de su base del sur de Texas. No había diferencia entre Lloyd Bentsen y George Bush, alego Gutiérrez, los mexicano-americanos deberían boicotear las elecciones en su conjunto.

Coincidentalmente, en unas elecciones especiales en el Distrito 48' de la Asamblea, de Los Angeles, en aquel año, el demócrata chicano Richard Alatorre era el favorito claro en un grupo de 12 candidatos que comprendía al republicano Bill Brophy y a Raul Ruiz, de La Raza Unida. Ruiz duplico su votación total de las elecciones primarias en unas elecciones decisivas para dar el escaño a Brophy.

En el Comité de Nixon para reelegir al Presidente (siglas en ingles CRP), Alex Armendariz uso una encuesta de preferencia para proponer una estrategia que debilitara a los puntos fuertes demócratas mediante el desvió de votos a La Raza Unida. El escribió: "Los republicanos están en una buena posición para ayudar a atraer hacia La Raza al 62% (de los electores hispanos) que ya aprueban a dicho partido. Cualquier ayuda que se les de no seria identificable como republicana... El 19.4% que no aprueban a La Raza pueden ser los mas conservadores del grupo, haciéndolos un blanco natural de los republicanos.

"Nuestro trabajo será el de tratar de cristalizar al 33% de las personas de habla hispana que nunca han oído de La Raza o que no tienen opinión sobre ella, hacia La Raza, el Partido Republicano o haciendo que se queden en sus casas. "De este modo, la campaña de reelección fue puesta en colaboración directa con el Programa de Responsabilidad de Nixon. Dentro de la Casa Blanca, Charles Colson, ayudado por William Marumoto, A.F. Rodriguez y Carlos Conde, manejaban a los grupos de intereses especiales. El Comité sobre Oportunidades del Gabinete Presidencial disfrutaba de una relación especial con la fuerza de trabajo.

El nombre de la fuerza de trabajo, a la que se conocía por "La Mafia Morena" fue cambiado en Mayo de 1972 a sugerencia de Colson. El auxiliar de la Casa Blanca Fred Malek había instado de modo semejante: "Hagan el favor de abandonar el título de "mafia. Parecería mal si alguna vez saliera de aquí."

En Junio de 1971, un miembro del personal de Malek había recomendado que el control del Presidente debería extenderse hacia fuera para determinar quien obtendría subvenciones políticamente importantes. Una estrategia comenzó a tomar forma.

Para Junio de 1972, Malek informo al ayudante presidencial H.R. Haldeman que el Programa de Responsabilidad había sido llevado a la practica. Malek fue enviado entonces al Comité para reelegir al Presidente, a fin de supervisar el programa de reacción de los electores, que comprendía a la división de habla hispana encabezada por Armendariz.

Aun en esta fecha temprana, el personal de Malek había intervenido en 12 asuntos. De cinco que el destaco ante Haldeman, tres se referían a los mexicano-americanos: En uno, el Departamento Federal del Trabajo invirtió una decisión anterior e hizo una concesión de $2.2 millones al Consejo para el Desarrollo del Valle Inferior del Río Grande, que estaba "a favor del gobierno" silenciando a una voz negativa mientras que tiraba de la alfombra sobre la cual se hallaba la Oficina de Oportunidad Económica. El sistema de la "Responsabilidad" inyecto la política a todo nivel importante del gobierno, en conformidad con las preferencias de la campaña electoral.

Un ves antes de las elecciones, el candidato presidencial demócrata, George McGovern, acuso que fuentes republicanas habían ofrecido dinero para desalentar al voto hispano. Su acusación incluía una referencia finamente velada a José Angel Gutiérrez y un proyecto sanitario en Crystal City. Gutiérrez llamo a McGovern "mentiroso reprobable."

Diez meses antes, Colson había escrito a Haldeman: "Creo que hay una oportunidad política fértil en dar algún apoyo secreto, financiero o de organización, a La Raza Unida." El argumentaba que: "El dinero que se gasta de este modo puede ser tan eficaz, so no es mas eficaz, que el dinero que se gaste para nuestra propia publicidad o promoción."

Haldeman recomendo entonces al Secretario de Justicia, John Mitchell, que al tomar posesión como administrador de la campaña presidencial, considerara "la dotación encubierta de fondos... a cambio de un acuerdo para que La Raza Unida postule a candidatos presidenciales en California y Texas."

Ninguno se postulo, pero La Raza Unida participo en la contienda para el gobierno estatal de Texas. La controversia sobre la subvención para Crystal City había comenzado después que el Gobernador demócrata, Preston Smith, se negó a aprobar los planes de la OEO para un proyecto sanitario, "de modo que vimos a los republicanos y ellos rechazaron (al veto de Smith)", dijo Gutiérrez. Cierto, pero solo después de apremiar al director de la OEO, Phillip Sanchez, para que lo revocara.

Diciendo que Gutiérrez procuraba activamente el dinero de los republicanos, Armendariz recomendo un aporte de $8,000 a Ramsey Muñiz, candidato de La Raza Unida a la gobernación estatal de Texas. Se informo que Malek reacciono así: "Parece demasiado barato. Los principios de La Raza Unida deberían (valer) mas que eso."

Malek tenia razón. No sonaba como La Raza Unida el venderse por un proyecto sanitario o una contribución insignificante para la campaña. Algo había salido mal.

The Rise of Hispanic Politics: III, Wild Card: La Raza Unida Party

by José de la Isla

La Raza Unida Party, born out of an aggressive political atmosphere, was founded by José Angel Gutiérrez. The party later became an important pawn of the 1972 presidential campaign.

The saga began in 1967, when the Ford Foundation granted $630,000 to the Southwest Council of La Raza. It, in turn, funded San Antonio's Mexican American Unity Council. Gutierrez, on the Unity Council's board of directors, formed the Mexican-American Youth Organization (MAYO).

Gutierrez, in a menacing tone characteristic of the time, said the Ford Foundation "didn't have much choice, Either you come across with the money and, plug us into the system or we just tear the hell out of everything out there."

At Bexar County Commissioner Albert Peña's urging, the Unity Council gave clandestine support to Congressman Henry B. Gonzalez's Republican opponent. Several Unity Council members were urged to enter the San Antonio City Council race. In spring 1969, Gonzalez attacked the Ford Foundation for having supported the "Brown Bilbos" and the "new racism." Soon thereafter, Peña and Gutierrez were summoned to New York, where a foundation official told them in no uncertain terms that there would be no more support for MAYO. Period.

From Crystal City, Texas, his hometown, Gutierrez pondered a new direction. He organized a student boycott against the local school's discriminatory racial policies. Then, in 1970, he formed La Raza Unida as an alternative to the predominantly conservative Texas Democratic party. The love affair between Mexican Americans and the state Democratic party had turned acrimonious. One labor official said simply, "When President Kennedy and Bob Kennedy died, the Democratic Party died for the Mexican Americans in Texas."

By spring 1970, Raza Unida candidates won control of Crystal City's school board and positions in Carrizo Springs and Cotulla, as well. In the fall, however, Chicanos deserted Raza Unida and voted Democratic.

Gutierrez then sought to expand outside his South Texas base. There was no difference between Lloyd Bentsen and George Bush in the U.S. Senate race, he claimed, Mexican Americans should boycott the election altogether.

Coincidentally, in a special election in Los Angeles' 48th Assembly District that year, Chicano Democrat Richard Alatorre was the clear favorite in a field of 12 that included Republican Bill Brophy and Raza Unida's Raul Ruiz. Ruiz doubled his primary total in a runoff to give Brophy the seat.

At Nixon's Committee to Re-Elect the President (CRP), Alex Armendariz used a preference poll to propose a strategy to weaken Democratic strongholds by diverting votes to Raza Unida. He wrote, "Republicans are in a good position to help attract to La Raza the 62 percent (of Hispanic voters) who already approve of that party. Any help given them would not be identifiable as Republican... The 19.4 percent who disapprove of La Raza may be the most conservative of the group, making them a natural Republican target...

> "Cuando el Presidente Kennedy y Bobby Kennedy murieron, el Partido Demócrata murió para los Mexicano-Americanos de Texas"

"It will be our job to try to crystallize the remaining 33 percent of the Spanish-speaking who have never heard of La Raza or who have no opinion of it, toward La Raza, the Republican Party, or staying at home." In this way, the reelection campaign was brought into direct collaboration with Nixon's Responsiveness Program. Inside the White House, Charles Colson, aided by William Marumoto, A.F. Rodriguez and Carlos Conde, managed special interest groups. The President's Cabinet Committee on Opportunity for the Spanish-Speaking enjoyed a special relationship to the task force.

Known as the "Brown Mafia," the task force's name was changed in May 1972 at Colson's suggestion. White House aide Fred Malek had similarly urged, "Please drop mafia title. It would look bad if it ever got out."

In June 1971, a Malek staffer had recommended that the President's control should extend as far as determining who would get politically important grants. A strategy began taking shape.

By June 1972, Malek reported to presidential assistant H.R. Haldeman that the Responsiveness Program had been implemented. Malek was then sent to the Committee to Re-Elect the President to oversee the voters' response program, which included the Spanish-speaking division headed by Armendariz.

Even by this early date, Malek's staff had intervened in 12 issues. Of five that he highlighted to Haldeman, three concerned Mexican Americans. In one, the U.S. Department of Labor reversed an earlier decision and made a $2.2 million award to the "pro-administration" Lower Rio Grande Valley Development Council, silencing a negative voice while pulling the rug from under the Office of Economic Opportunity, which administered the federal government's anti-poverty effort. The "Responsiveness" system politicized every important level of government to make them conform with the election campaign's priorities.

One month before the election, Democratic presidential candidate George McGovern charged that Republican sources had offered money to discourage the Hispanic vote. His charge include a thinly veiled reference to José Angel Gutierrez and a health project in Crystal City. Gutierrez called McGovern a "damn liar."

Ten months earlier, Colson had written Haldeman, "I think there is a fertile political opportunity in giving some sub rosa financial and/or organizational support to La Raza Unida." He argued, "Money spent this way can be as effective, if not more so, than money spent for our own advertising or promotion."

Haldeman then recommended to Attorney General John Mitchell that, upon taking over as presidential campaign manager, he consider "undercover funding... in exchange for an agreement that La Raza Unida runs presidential candidates in California and Texas."

None ran, but Raza Unida did enter the Texas gubernatorial race. The Crystal City grant controversy had started after the Democratic Gov. Preston Smith refused to approve OEO plans for a health project, "so we saw the Republicans and they overrode (Smith's veto)," said Gutierrez. True, but only after pressuring OEO director Philip Sanchez to override it.

Saying Gutierrez actively sought Republican money, Armendariz recommended an $8,000 contribution to Ramsey Muniz, Raza Unida's Texas gubernatorial candidate. Malek reported reacted, it "seems too cheap. Raza Unida principles should be (worth) more than that." Malek was right. It was not like La Raza Unida to sell out for a health project or an insignificant campaign contribution. Something had gone wrong.

fueron directamente hacia el Este, el cual era conocido, en vez de el desconocido Oeste.

En efecto, pueda haber sido el éxito Portugués en abrir una ruta marina a el Este que finalmente convenció a los Españoles ha financiar una expedición para desarrollar una ruta propia a el Oeste.

Fue una expedición totalmente diferente a cualquier otra que había sido ensayado antes. Exploraciones por mar eran comunes pero estos raramente se alejaron de tierra, prefiriendo seguir las líneas costaneras, tales como la expedición Portugués a Africa y mas allá, o cruzar pequeños trechos de mar abierto, tales como el Mediterráneo. Nunca antes nadie había ensayado a cruzar tal gigante expansión al abierto, aguas desconocidas como el Océano Atlántico.

Seria un prospecto con miedo para casi todos, y para la tripulación de Colón esta no era la excepción. La tripulación no fue hecha de criminales convictos, como ha sido sugerido por algunos historiadores, pero de capaces marineros, muchos de ellos nacidos y criados en familias marineras.

Pero los marineros eran bastante supersticiosos, y su descontento creció cada día que pasaban en mar abierto, con provisiones de agua fresca y la deteriorada condición de sus navegaciones, con vientos que podían llevarlos lejos en lo desconocido, y entonces desaparecer, y con falsas vistas de tierra.

Es evidencia de la fuerza y el valor de Colón que era capaz de evitar la abierta insubordinación en su creciente y desesperada situación. Era una situación que vino al final temprano en la mañana de Octubre 12, después de 33 días en el mar abierto, cuando el vigilante abordo de La Pinta miro tierra, esta vez no era un espejismo.

En los meses que siguieron, Colón tomo sus marineros de una isla a la otra, explorando lo que hoy conocemos como las Bahamas, Cuba, Haití, y la República Dominicana, declarando todo en el nombre del Reino Cristiano de España. También observo y colecto una variedad de plantas y animales, muchos de los cuales eran de una clase desconocida en el Viejo Mundo.

Pero la expedición también tuvo su parte de desventura. Enfermedades eran una constante tensión sobre la fuerza de su tripulación. En Diciembre, La Santa Maria fue perdida en la Costa de Haití. Temprano en 1493, Colón hizo planes para regreso a España. Un brusco cambio fue establecido y 39 de sus tripulantes se quedaron atrás. Al tiempo que Colón regresaría, cerca de un año mas tarde, todos ellos estarán muertos, algunos víctimas de enfermedades, otros víctimas de peleas con los nativos.

Entre el exótico 'cargo' que Colón traería a su país era un pequeño grupo de indios Taitinos, los primeros de cientos que irían ha ser esclavos en los años que segarían.

El viaje de regreso a España tuvo su propia parte de peligros antes que La Niña y La Pinta llegaran a el puerto de Palos de la Frontera, cerca de siete meses después de salir. Colón el marinero, la peste de la corte real, era ahora Colón el héroe y Almirante del Océano. Honrado en la corte de Fernando y Isabela, él ahora no tenia dificultad de asegurar su regreso a la segunda expedición, esta ahora con 17 navegaciones, regresar al Oeste y contactar a los gobernantes de los imperios de Asia que él había errado la primera visita.

Esta aquí que Colón hizo su mas grande error. Mientras él estaba bien en creer que uno podía alcanzar Asia navegando Oeste desde Europa, él estaba equivocado en sobre estimar el tamaño del Continente Asiático, y sobre estimando el tamaño del océano que él necesitaría cruzar para alcanzar Asía (como calculos caían en la cantidad propuesta por expertos de hoy en día) por la existencia de otra cantidad de continentes, desconocidos para escolares en el Viejo Mundo, tapando su pasada hacia Asia.

Cuando Colón primero alcanzo la isla de San Salvador en lo que ahora es el Caribe, él creyó que estaba en una pequeña isla de la isla mayor de Asia, o por los Indios y los nativos de ser Indios.

Colón regresaría otra vez a su mundo, siempre creyendo que "Real de Catey" (China) o la isla de Cypango (Japón) estaban nada mas detrás del horizonte. Él moriría en 1506, todavía creyendo que él llego a Asia, aunque el resto de el mundo desde mucho antes había aceptado el hecho de que un enteramente nuevo mundo había sido alcanzado.

Esta fue la parte de la triste legacia de Cristóbal Colón. Mientras él ciertamente se le reconoce como uno de los grandes marineros de su edad, su creencia obstinada en su teoría de Asia, en conjunto con su enorme mala administración del reino colonial que se le había otorgado, lo hizo un desterrado de Europa y América.

Era un olvidado por creadores de mapas cuando el Nuevo Mundo fue nombrado América, por el ultimo explorador Amerigo Vespucci, en vez de Colombia o algo honrando a Colón.

En los pasados cinco siglos, la imagen de Colón ha mirado algunos cambios, héroe y villano, imaginario y loco. El verdadero Colón estaba probablemente entre, ni como magnífico, ni como tan terrible como algunos nos han hecho creer.

Es bastante decir que Colón era un promedio de hombre con notable cualidades, quien alcanzo algo que nadie había hecho antes. Era algo que requería visión, y mas que un poco de valor. Era una apuesta en contra con muy buenas ventajas, y él lo sabia. Pero él le hizo la lucha como quiera, y él sobresalió. Y en esta realización, había grandeza.

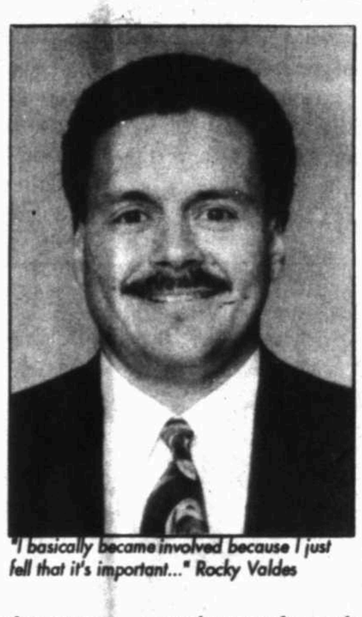

Haciendo la diferencia... al estilo United Way

Como voluntario con el United Way de Midland Rocky Valdes esta orgulloso de ser parte de un envolmento Hispano que esta creciendo en actividades del United Way.

"Yo creo que ha habido ciertamente una tendencia, tanto como la comunidad Hispana esta interesada, hacia el de tomar un papel mas activo," dice Valdes, un ingeniero técnico de petróleos con T. Scott Hickman & Associates. "Quisiera que el publico en general se diera cuenta que el Hispano no es solamente beneficiario de las contribuciones que son hechas fondos, al igual que en términos de servicios, pero que nosotros también estamos envueltos en la otra orilla. Nosotros también estamos donando los fondos monetarios también, y el tiempo y el servicio de comunidad."

Los propios servicios de Valdes trabajan con dos cosas, la presente necesidad y las futuras esperanzas de la comunidad. El sirve en dos, la designación de Distribuciones del United Way y el Comité de Actividades del Project Blueprint.

"Nosotros (Los asignadores de distribuciones) tomamos una buena y dura mirada a las necesidades de las agencias que están sirviendo," explica Valdes. "Especialmente este año, va ha ser suplemente crítico de que cada agencia tome una buena, y dura mirada a el modo que están operando. Porque el dinero que ha sido contribuido, tu sabes, es dinero que tiene que ser muy bien usado."

"I basically became involved because I just fell that it's important..." Rocky Valdes

"Y cuando tu sabes, nosotros no hemos recortado en nuestros objetivos. Entonces tenemos una responsabilidad mas pesada de estar seguros de que agencias realmente demuestren una necesidad por el dinero que están pidiendo. Y queremos estar seguros de que, cuando el dinero sea distribuido, ellos lo están utilizando del modo que ellos dijeron lo iban ha hacer."

Y en esto es cuando el Project Blueprint entra, educando a los voluntarios y a los jefes que hagan a la comunidad trabajar por medio de servicios públicos. Valdes, el mismo es un alumno del Project Blueprint!

"Básicamente me envolví porque siento que es importante, cuando tu puedes, de contribuir tiempo y servicio, así como dinero, a la comunidad, a las necesidades de la comunidad.

"Sobre todo, es esto lo que realmente me motivo. Una vez que me hize un graduado del Blueprint, me expuse a otras areas. Y me ha dado muy buena vista de como nuestras agencias locales operan, y realmente me fascina."

"Y como el publico general Hispano empieza ha percibir que hay jefes Hispanos envueltos en estas agencias, entonces ciertamente yendo ha animarlos ha salir y ser envueltos como voluntarios."

Como voluntario con el United Way de Odessa, Pete Almanza esta aplicando habilidades profesionales que el aprendió en la industria de la difusión de radio para servir a la comunidad.

"Yo sirvo en la Mesa Directiva del United Way y también sirvo en el Comité de Comunicaciones del United Way," dice Almanza. "La responsabilidad del comité de comunicaciones es de poner juntos todos los materiales de difusión. Nosotros pusimos juntos los comerciales de televisión para este año. También pusimos juntos una presentación de 11 minutos para ellos para usarlos en los negocios, para enseñarles sobre lo que se trata el United Way."

Los servicios de Almanza ilustran un punto de importante, de lo que es el voluntarismo, es una importante contribución a el éxito de el United Way y sus agencias.

"Yo los animo de que cada uno de ustedes se envuelva," dice Almanza, quien ha sido voluntario por cuatro años. "Tu sabes, algunas veces el dinero no es todo, algunas veces siendo voluntario ayuda a estas agencias y es de mucho beneficio."

En edición a su trabajo en el comité de comunicaciones, Almanza también esta en la Mesa de Consejeros de First Call For Help (Primera Llamada Por Ayuda), un programa de el United Way que conecta personas con servicios.

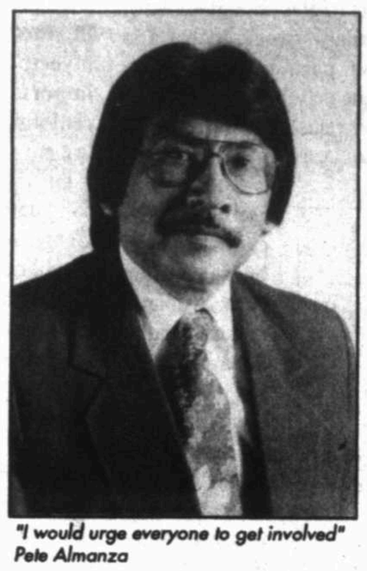

"Cuando alguien tiene un problema o una necesidad, y no sabe como resolver el problema, ellos llaman First Call For Help" explica Almanza. El agrego que First Call For Help recibe cientos de llamadas cada mes, y refiere estas llamadas a la apropiada oficina o agencia por ayuda.

Su presente servicio, combinado con su pasado servicio en el comité de actividades, han dado a Almanza una apreciación por la importancia del United Way en eficientemente enfrentando las necesidades de la comunidad entera.

"Yo pienso que el levantamiento de fondos que hacemos es muy eficiente porque mas del dinero va a las agencias mismas en vez de, tu sabes, costos de administración. Y pienso que este es un muy eficaz modo para personas de dar, y tocar una gran cantidad de personas a una misma vez.

Making the difference... the United Way

As a volunteer with the United Way of Odessa, Pete Almanza is applying the professional skills he learned in the broadcast radio industry to serve the community.

"I would urge everyone to get involved" Pete Almanza

"I serve on the United Way Board of Directors, and also serve on the United Way Communications Committee," said Almanza, who is general manager for KOZA/KERB Radio. "The responsibility of the Communications Committee is to put together all the printed materials and the broadcasting materials. We put together the television commercials for this year. We also put together an 11-minute presentation for them to use at businesses, to show what United way is about."

Almanza's service illustrates an important point, that volunteerism is an important contribution to the success of the United Way and it's agencies.

"I would urge everyone to get involved," said Almanza, who has been a United Way volunteer for four years. "You know, sometimes money's not everything. Sometimes volunteering to help these agencies is very beneficial."

In addition to his work on the Communications Committee, Almanza is also on the Advisory Board of First Call For Help, a United Way program that connects people with services.

"When someone has a problem or a need, and don't know how to get the problem solved, they call First Call For Help," Almanza explained. He added that First Call For Help receives hundreds of calls each month, and refers those calls to the appropriate office or agency for help.

His present service, combined with his past service on the Allocations Committee, has given Almanza an appreciation for the importance of the United Way in efficiently meeting the needs of the entire community.

"I think that the fundraising that we do is very efficient since most of the money goes to the agencies themselves, instead of, you know, administrative costs. So I think that this is a very efficient way for people to give, and to reach a lot of people at one time.

As a volunteer with the United Way of Midland, Rocky Valdes is proud to be a part of the growing Hispanic involvement in United Way activities.

"I think there's certainly been a trend to, as far as the Hispanic community is concerned, toward taking a more active role," said Valdes, a petroleum engineering technician with T. Scott Hickman & Associates. "I would like the public in general to realize that the Hispanic is not only benefactor of the contributions that are made monetarily, as well as time in terms of service, but we're also involved on the other end. We're also involved in donating the funds as well, and the time and the community service."

Valdes' own service works with both the present needs and the future hopes of the community. He serves on both the United Way Allocations Panel and the Project Blueprint Steering Committee.

"We [the Allocations Panel] take a good, hard look at the needs that the agencies are serving," Valdes explained. "Especially this year, it's going to be extra-critical that every agency takes a good, hard look at the way they operate. Because the monies that are being contributed, you know, are monies that have to be well-spent."

"And as you well know, we haven't cut back on our goal. So we've got a heavier responsibility to make sure that the agencies really demonstrate a need for the money that they're asking for. And we want to make sure that, when the money is dispersed, they're utilizing it the way they said they would."

And this is where Project Blueprint comes in, training the volunteers and the leaders that make the community work through public service. Valdes is himself a Project Blueprint alumnus.

"I basically became involved because I just feel that it's important, when you can, to contribute time and service, as well as money, to the community, the needs of the community. Overall, that's what really motivated me. Once I became a Blueprint graduate, I became exposed to other areas. And it's given me a real good look at how our local agencies operate, and I really enjoy it."

"And as the general Hispanic public begins to perceive that there are Hispanic leaders involved in these agencies, then it's certainly going to encourage them to come out and become more involved as volunteers."

unknown west. In fact, it may have been the Portuguese success in opening a sea route to the east that finally convinced the Spaniards to finance an expedition to develop a route of their own to the west.

It was an expedition unlike any that had ever been attempted before. Explorations by sea were common, but these had rarely gone far from land, preferring to follow coastlines, such as the Portuguese expeditions to Africa and beyond, or cross smaller expanses of open water, such as the Mediterranean. Never before had anyone attempted to cross such a large expanse of open, unknown water as the Atlantic Ocean.

It would be a frightening prospect for most, and Columbus' crew was no exception. The crew was not made up of convicted criminals, as has been suggested by some histories, but by able sailors, many of them born and raised in sailing families. But sailors were a superstitious lot, and their discontent grew with each day that passed in open water, with dwindling supplies of fresh water and the deteriorating condition of their ships, with winds that would drive them deeper into the unknown, then disappear, and with false sightings of land.

It is evidence of the strength and the courage of Columbus that he was able to avoid open mutiny in this increasingly desperate situation. It was a situation that came to an end early on the morning of October 12th, after 33 days on the open sea, when a lookout aboard the Pinta sighted land, and this time it was no mirage.

In the months that followed, Columbus took his fleet from one island to the next, exploring what we know today as the Bahamas, Cuba, Haiti, and Dominican Republic, claiming it all in the name of the Christian kingdom of Spain. He also observed and collected a variety of plants and animals, many of which were of a type unknown in the Old World.

But the expedition also had it's share of misfortune. Sickness was a constant strain upon the strength of his crew. In December, the Santa Maria was lost off the coast of Haiti. Early in 1493, Columbus made plans for his return to Spain. A crude settlement was established and 39 of his crew remained behind. By the time Columbus would return, nearly a year later, they would all be dead, some the victims of sickness, others the victims of fighting with the natives. Among the exotic 'cargo' that Columbus would bring home was a small group of Taino Indians, the first of hundreds that would be sent into European slavery in the years to come.

The return trip to Spain had it's own share of perils before the Nina and Pinta arrived at the port of Palos de la Frontera, nearly seven months after their departure. Columbus the sailor, the pest of the royal court, was now Columbus the hero and Admiral of the Ocean Sea. Honored at the court of Ferdinand and Isabella, he now had no difficulty securing their backing of a second expedition, this one with 17 ships, to return west and to contact the rulers of the Asian empires that he had missed on his first visit.

It is here that Columbus made his greatest mistake. While he was right in believing that one could reach Asia by sailing west from Europe, he was wrong in overestimating the size of the Asian continent, and underestimating the size of the ocean he would need to cross to reach Asia (although his estimates did fall within the range proposed by leading experts of the day). And nothing had prepared him (or anyone else, for that matter) for the existence of another mass of continents, unknown to scholars in the Old World, blocking his path to Asia. When Columbus had first reached the island of San Salvador in what is today the Caribbean, he believed it to be an island off the coast of the Asian mainland, or the Indies, and the natives to be Indians.

Columbus would return again and again to this world, always believing that the "realm of Cathay" (China) or the "Isle of Cypango" (Japan) was just beyond the horizon. He would die in 1506, still believing that he had reached Asia, though the rest of the world had long since accepted the fact that an entirely new world had been reached.

This was the part of the sad legacy of Christopher Columbus. While he certainly ranks as one of the great mariners of his age, his obstinate belief in his Asian theory, coupled with his gross mismanagement of the colonial realm that had been granted him, made him an outcast in both Europe and America.

He was even neglected by mapmakers when the New World was named America, for the later explorer Amerigo Vespucci, rather than Columbia or something honoring Columbus.

In the past five centuries, the image of Columbus has seen many changes, hero and villain, visionary and madman. The true Columbus was probably somewhere in between, neither as magnificent, nor as terrible as some would have you believe.

It is enough to say that Columbus was an average man with some remarkable skills, who accomplished something that had never been done before. It was something that required vision, and more than a little courage. It was a gamble against great odds, and he knew it. But he tried anyway, and he succeeded. And in that achievement, there was greatness.

La Jamaica de San Juan por Amarante Cordova

Fe y familia son parte de la fundación sobre la cual La Virgen de San Juan Iglesia Católica fue edificada.

Tu lo puedes mirar en las programas de la iglesia y en el festival anual que ayuda apoyar estos programas.

"De las cosas en las que nos concentramos, probablemente las mas fuertes son nuestros programas regulares de educación que se llevan en todos los niños," dice Padre Wilde. "Pero entonces nosotros tenemos otro que es equivalente para preparación de uno de los sacramentos para nuestros niños, la primera comunión, por la cual también envolvemos a los padres de familia."

En efecto, educación religiosa y instrucción fue uno de los primeros servicios ofrecidos en San Juan a la comunidad católica del Sur de Midland.

"Esta fue empezada por Saint Ann's (Iglesia Católica) con un pequeño catecismo, edificio educacional, en 1967," explica Padre Wilde. "Y luego fue servido , por la Guadalupe, La Señora de Guadalupe (Iglesia Católica), y para misa, y una vez si y otra no, hasta 1978, cuando tuvieron misa constantemente.

En 1980 seria un significante tiempo para San Juan, no solamente en la expansión de los servicios que se ofrecían pero también en establecer una identidad propia.

"Y esta expansión entonces, de agregar una cocina en esta facilidad. Y también en el 84, fue hecha una parroquia, y fue separada de la Guadalupe como una parroquia. En el 85, ellos construyeron la presente iglesia," dice Wilde, quien vino a San Juan un año mas tarde. "He estado aquí desde Octubre del 86, ya casi los 6 años aquí."

Al tiempo de la llegada de Wilde, una de las mas populares tradiciones de Iglesia San Juan era ya tres años de acostumbrarse. Esto era la Jamaica de San Juan, un festival anual que sirve no solo para atrae a la comunidad unidad en celebración, pero también para levantar fondos monetarios para actividades y programas de la iglesia.

"Este festival empezó en el 83, con solamente 4 o 5 horas de festival, con personas poniendo todo en pie, los puestos de juegos, los puestos de comida," recuerda Wilde. "Y desde ahí se desarrollo en un evento de 3 días."

"Jamaica puede ser interpretada como una fiesta." explica él. "Pero una fiesta es una cosa grande. Nosotros estamos probablemente en la fase de fiesta ahora. Al tiempo que empezamos, era básicamente Jamaica en la mente de algunas personas, era solo un pequeño festival."

En addicion para levantar fondos monetarios para programas de la iglesia, la Jamaica también ofrece una oportunidad para la comunidad entera de trabajar juntos, preparando el festival, el cual toma lugar en el fin de semana del Día del Trabajo (Labor Day), en los patios de la iglesia. De acuerdo a Wilde, son estas preparaciones para el festival por organizadores del mismo que hacen este evento posible.

"Tenemos un organizador general, y un co-organizador y un organizador para todos los juegos, organizadores para todos los puestos de comida, un organizador para entretenimiento para el concurso de Reina. Y hay un numero de personas envueltas. Esto los hace trabajar, tu sabes, atrae a la comunidad unida."

Y cuando el trabajo ya paso, es tiempo para amigos y vecinos ha venir juntos ha celebrar el presente con comida y juegos, música y entretenimiento, y de levantar fondos monetarios para el futuro. Y la Jamaica de San Juan es una maravillosa oportunidad de hacer todo esto.

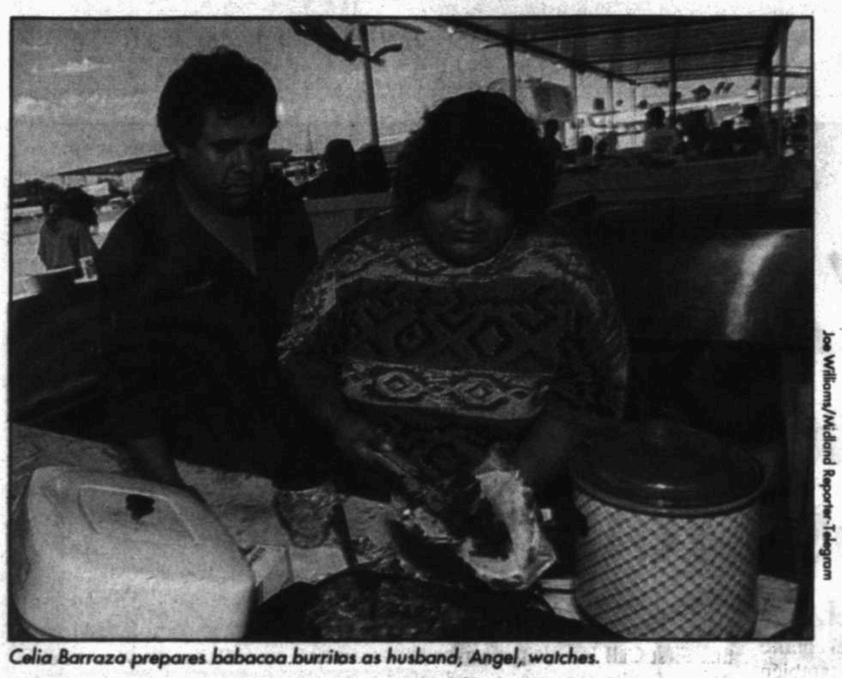

"La asistencia este año no fue regularmente buena. Fue un poquito baja, pero tuvimos una buena asistencia," dice Wilde. "Yo creo que estamos empezando ha conocernos, tu sabes, 'Este es un buen tiempo. Vengan y tengan un buen tiempo.' Pero básicamente orientada familiarmente para dejarlos tener un buen tiempo."

The Jamaica of San Juan by Amarante Cordova

Faith and family are part of the foundation upon which La Virgen de San Juan Catholic Church is built. You can see it in the programs of the church, and in the annual festival that helps to support those programs.

"Of the things we focus on, probably the strongest ones are our regular religious education program that takes in all the children," said Father Alvin Wilde. "But then we have another one that's equivalent for preparation for one of the sacraments for our children, first communion, by which we also involve the parents."

In fact, religious education and instruction was one of the first services offered by San Juan to the Catholic community of south Midland.

"This one was started by Saint Ann's [Catholic Church], with a little catechal, educational building, in 1967," explained Father Wilde. "Then it was served by Guadalupe, La Senora de Guadalupe [Catholic Church], and for mass, off and on, until about 1978, when they had mass constantly."

The 1980's would be a significant time for San Juan, not only in the expansion of the services it offered, but also in establishing an identity of it's own.

"And that expanded then, to add a kitchen onto that facility. And also in '84, it was made a parish, it was cut off from Guadalupe as a parish. In '85, they built the present church," said Wilde, who came to San Juan a year later. "I've been here since October of '86. So I've been here almost six years."

By the time of Wilde's arrival, one of San Juan's more popular traditions was already three years old. This was the San Juan Jamaica, an annual festival that served not only to bring the community together in celebration, but also to raise funds for church activities and programs.

"That festival started in '83, with just a 4 to 5 hour festival, with people putting everything together, the food booths, and the game booths," recalled Wilde. "And from there it developed into a 3 day event."

"Jamaica can be interpreted as a fiesta," he explained. "But a fiesta is a grand thing. We're probably at fiesta-phase now. At the time it started, it was basically a Jamaica. In some people's minds, it was just a small festival."

In addition to raising funds for church programs, the Jamaica also provides an opportunity for the entire community to work together, preparing for the festival, which takes place Labor Day weekends on the church grounds. According to Wilde, it is these preparations by festival organizers that make the event possible.

"You have a general chairman, co-chairman, and a chairman for all the games, food booths, entertainment and for the queen contest. So there are a number of people involved. It does make them work, you know, pulls the community together."

And when the work is past, it's time for friends and neighbors to come together to celebrate the present with food and games, music and entertainment, and to raise funds for the future. And the San Juan Jamaica is a wonderful opportunity to do just that.

"Attendance this year was fairly good. It was down a little bit, but I guess, like everybody's saying, the economy's down." said Wilde. "I think we are beginning to be known. It's basically family-orientated, but this is a event to come out and have a good time.

Patrones no pueden requerir mas o diferentes documentos de los que son requeridos por INS ni tampoco pueden ellos especificar cuales documentos pueden ellos aceptar.

En adición a la renovada I-9 la INS ha descubierto una nueva tarjeta de residencia o "green card".

"Hay 17 diferentes versiones de green card." dice Moreno. Dice que las diferentes versiones pueden causar confusión entre los patrones.

La nueva tarjeta tiene la fotografía del empleado, huella de dedo, y la firma. Moreno dice que tarjetas expedidas antes de 1977 deben ser reemplazadas. Dice que dueños de estas tarjetas tienen hasta Agosto de 1993 para obtener una nueva tarjeta, la cual será buena por 10 años.

Moreno dice que la nueva tarjeta ira ha asegurar que los residentes legales sigan elegibles para empleo, beneficios del seguro social y rápida entrada de regreso a los Estados Unidos después de viajar.

Una razón para la renovada tarjeta, dice él es para impedir fraude en estos documentos. "Con la formación de la nueva tarjeta y acciones de seguridad, esto debe detener operaciones ilícitas," dice él.. "Estamos tratando de borrar todos estos trabajando ilegalmente o estos que usan documentos prestados."

Queremos remover al trabajador desautorizado. Moreno dice que dueños de tarjetas no deben tener temor de que aplicando por una tarjeta nueva se revocara o de que se les causara ser deportados.

"Deportación no es el factor. Nosotros comprendemos que sus tarjetas no están caducadas como resultado de sus acciones pero de una iniciativa de INS que tomo para ayudar a patrones y para controlar fraude de documentación."

Elvia Hernandez, president of the MHCC, said she brought Moreno to Midland because the changes would have an impact on the city's sizable Hispanic population.

Moreno said the new form clearly spells out what documents an employer can and cannot request. Employers cannot require more or different documents than are required by the INS nor can they specify which documents they will accept.

In addition to a revamped I-9, the INS has unveiled a new resident alien card or "green card."

"There are 17 different versions of the green card," Moreno said. He said the different versions can cause confusion among employers.

The new card has the employee's photograph, fingerprint and signature. Moreno said cards issued before 1977 should be replaced. He said cardholders have until August 1993 to get a new card, which is good for 10 years.

Moreno said the new card will ensure that resident aliens remain eligible for employment, social benefits and speedy entry back into the United States after traveling.

One reason for the revamped card, he said, is to discourage document fraud. "With the new card's formats and security features, it should curtail illicit operations," he said. "We're trying to weed out those working illegally or using borrowed documents. We want to remove the unauthorized worker."

Moreno said cardholders should not be afraid that applying for a new card would cause their status to be revoked or cause them to be deported.

"Deportation is not a factor. We realize their card is not outdated as a result of their actions but of an initiative the INS took to help employers and to address document fraud."

Further information about the new green card is available by calling 1-800-755-0777.

been left untouched by Villa's men. After the raid, all Mexicans and Mexican-Americans were run out of town. Within a month of the invasion, six Villistas were tried and convicted, at the same time, for the murder of the same man, Charles D. Miller. All six were hung "until dead."

Another alleged Villista, 12-year-old Jesus Piaz, was indicted for the same murder, but never went to trial. He had been waiting for his father, who had been forced to join the raid. They had planned to escape to this country so Jesus could study here. The father was killed and Jesus was shot in the leg, which was eventually amputated.

One week after the invasion, Colonel Slocum of the "Fighting 13th" Cavalry led a punitive expedition into Mexico in search of Villa's army. Stateside newspapers reported rumors of plans to annex more of Mexico's northern territory.

The 10th Cavalry, the only "Negro" cavalry in the expedition, suffered extreme hardships. From March 17 until May 13, 1916, it received little or no supplies. Its horses suffered exposure and hunger from lack of forage.

In September 1916, Gen. John J. Pershing was ordered into Mexico in pursuit of Villa. Pershing failed in his manhunt, despite the airplanes and motor vehicles employed. The "war" was the first in which airplanes were utilized for reconnaissance and bombing missions.

Gen. Pershing was transferred to the European battles of World War I shortly thereafter.

This summer, to commemorate Pancho Villa's invasion and the Quincentennial, a few Chicano, Mexican and multicultural writers and artists from U.S. border states and Mexico are preparing to camp at the Pancho Villa New Mexico State Desert Park and visit Palomas, Chihuahua. On the third weekend of August they will gather for "Barbecuén Columbus," a celebration of cultures that will include poetic readings, songs and strumming guitars. The "Queen's Centennial" will be celebrated with the hanging of a piñata and roast of the man who claims to have discovered America.

The town of Palomas, which appropriately translates to the international peace symbol of doves, will serve as a meeting place to talk about a "Tratado de Libre Cultura" (a free cultural trade agreement); participants will consider signing a Declaration of *Cultural Interdependence. Nations do not live by commercial "free trade agreements" alone. They live by the cultural fabric of their societies..

(José Antonio Burciaga, an artist and writer at Stanford University, Calif., will be among those "Barbecuén Columbus.")
