Spirit of Cooperation In Making Bridge Possible Draws Commendation

Special to The Record News.

VERNON, Texas, May 26.—The bonds of friendship and commerce between Texas and Oklahoma were strengthened this afternoon when the $122,500 bridge across Red river, 20 miles north of here, was dedicated with a formal program featuring dignitaries of both states.

More than 5,000 people from three states attended the program which started at 4 o'clock and extended until well into the night.

Importance Emphasized

Characterized as the connecting link between two states and as the bridging of the last unbridged stream on the Canada-to-Gulf highway, the importance of the bridge in the progress of Southwestern Oklahoma and Northwestern Texas was emphasized by every speaker.

W. J. Milburn, Sayre, Okla., manager of the Western Oklahoma Chamber of Commerce, voiced the general theme when he emphasized the bridge as an important link in one of the avenues of travel, north and south, which are meaning so much in the development of the Southwest.

Many Notables

Speakers on the program included in addition to Mr. Milburn, Congressman J. V. McClintic of Snyder, Okla.; Judge J. V. Townsend of Wilbarger county; C. W. Snyder of Altus, Okla., chairman of the Altus Chamber of Commerce roads committee; H. Burks, Brownwood, secretary of the Texas division of the Canada-to-Gulf Highway association; Judge J. F. McKell of the highway commission; Lew Wentz, ousted member of the commission; and Judge Joe Wheat of Seymour, representing the Texas Highway commission. W. F. Hearne of Mangum, Okla., international president of the Canada-to-Gulf association, presided at the program.

Pioneer Atmosphere

A huge crowd was present at the bridge throughout the afternoon, and milled about over the span and between it and the speakers' stand located in some nearby trees. A pioneer atmosphere was added to the occasion by the presence of a number of saddle horses and wagons, reminding the visitor that the new bridge was only a few miles from the pioneer Doans crossing over Red river.

Wentz Takes Thrusts

Most of the speakers lauded organizations, boards and individuals for the cooperative spirit which had made the bridge possible, but zest was added to the occasion when Lew Wentz, ousted member of the Oklahoma highway commission, broke in on the love-feast aspects of the program to take some sharp thrusts at the commission and the Oklahoma administration.

Declaring that he was attending while on "a temporary furlough" from the commission, Wentz criticised the expenditure of large sums of money for paving and advocated the construction of improved all-weather roads throughout the state.

Hawks Cites Bad Roads

Encouragement for the Canada-to-Gulf highway program in Texas and Oklahoma was offered by speakers representing the highway commissions of both states. Sam Hawks, chairman of the Oklahoma commission asserted that while riding over the dirt road between Altus and the bridge it occurred to him that this stretch was the only unimproved gap on the highway not included in this year's program of the commission, and said, "it might as well be in there it won't cost but a little more. The length of time before something will be done about it will depend upon the time required by the engineers to perfect details."

Wilbarger-Baylor Hopes

Joe Wheat of Seymour, the representative of the Texas commission, brought encouragement in expressing the hope that the "people of Wilbarger and Baylor counties soon will meet in the Waggoner pasture and celebrate the completion of a paved road linking those two counties."

Efforts are now under way to have the highway paved between the two cities, but some delay has

Twp Democratic Chiefs Sandwich In a Little Fun As Guests of Press

It was a "Texas barbecue" that Washington's National Press club staged, and right at home at an affair of that kind was Speaker John Garner (right). He's showing folks how this dish from his native state really ought to be eaten. Equaling him in enthusiasm if not in technique was Gov. Sterling Criticized For Appointment of Thompson

AUSTIN, May 26. (UP)—Hubert O. Johnson of Houston, defeated candidate for state railroad commissioner in 1930, tonight issued a criticism of Gov. Ross S. Sterling for not appointing him to the post which has become vacant by the resignation of Pat M. Neff, winner of the 1930 election. The governor has named Mayor E. O. Thompson of Amarillo to serve in Neff's place. Johnson said the governor ignored the wish of 109,000 people who voted for him for the place and that he will contest for it with Thompson in the next election.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 26. (US)—Reports that Will Rogers Jr., son of the cowboy comedian, and Ray Lyman Wilbur Jr., son of the secretary of the interior, participated in a water fight at Stanford university were denied today by Wilbur.

Expressing surprise at the story, he stated that the Breakers and El Toro clubs had staged such a battle, but that he and Rogers had been bystanders only.

Former Mangum, Okla., City Manager Makes Bond in Beer Smuggling Case

Veteran War Flier Brings Plane Down at San Angelo After Customs Officers Give Chase From Mexican Border

SAN ANGELO, Texas, May 26. (UP)—William T. Ponder, flyer whose reckless courage once sent him into combat against 13 German planes, was released here tonight on $1,500 bond on a charge of aerial liquor smuggling from Mexico. He laid his troubles to taking a "sporting chance."

His bondsmen were Dr. Webb Walker and A. P. Barrett, a director of American Airways, who flew here from Fort Worth, where Ponder, the second greatest American ace of the world war, has lived in recent years. Ponder and his bondsmen took off for Fort Worth at 7:40 p. m.

Ponder, a graduate of Dartmouth, had been in custody of federal authorities here since he was arrested with a plane load of beer at the airport here late last night. The arrest followed an exhibition of his wartime daredeviltry in a thrilling moonlight chase over the Big Bend country. Customs Officer D. S. Conner of San Antonio was the pursuer, in a tiny treasury department plane piloted by Bobbie Dual.

Airport attendants said they were asked to keep the arrest out of the newspapers because government agents hoped to gain a confession from Ponder that he was one of a "ring." Ponder said this was ridiculous.

Took "Sporting Chance"

He blamed taking a "sporting chance" for his arrest, admitted ownership of the plane and that he had the beer, but would make no comment on his motive in having it. He said federal agents presented him with several confession documents which he refused to sign.

"I'm not pleading guilty to anything," said the famed ace. "I simply took a sporting chance. It was just a bit of tough luck. It is absurd that I agreed to give evidence against any one. The 'ring' part is ridiculous."

Came Down for Gas

The specific charge against Ponder is that of "unlawfully receiving and facilitating in the transporta-

Garner's Relief Bill Completed As Mills Declares Against Bonds

WASHINGTON, May 26. (AP)—Bearing the approval of house Democrats, the $2,100,000,000 Garner relief bill was completed tonight almost coincidentally with the enunciation of a statement from administration quarters that a public works program would be a "shock to public confidence."

The Garner bill carries a $1,047,000,000 public works provision. It also would provide $100,000,000 to be administered by President Hoover for direct relief and would add $1,000,000,000 to the capital of the Reconstruction corporation for loans to states, cities, counties, individuals and corporations that could furnish proper security.

The expression of administration opposition to a public works program came from Secretary Mills in a statement dealing specifically with the program advanced several nights ago by former Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York.

He said "Public works means public borrowing, an unbalanced budget and a shock to public confidence."

The Garner measure does not specifically provide for a bond issue but Speaker Garner explained to his colleagues in a two-hour session behind closed doors that the treasury already was authorized to issue bonds up to $28,000,000,000 and to issue treasury bills, certificates and notes up to $10,000,000,000

Youths Hurt in Crush To Hear 'Spicy' Testimony

LONDON, May 26. (AP)—Several young men were painfully crushed today while attempting to push into Church House, Westminster, to hear the Rev. H. F. Davidson, 62-year-old rector of Stiffkey, defend himself against charges of immorality.

Hundreds of persons, attracted by the spicy testimony of the last few days, were locked out by police. Inside, the clergyman sought to explain a photograph showing him with a young girl who, the prosecution indicated, was nude except for a partial draping with a shawl.

Mr. Davidson denied with considerable heat that he knew the girl was naked except for the shawl. He said he thought she wore a bathing suit.

Murray Restores Oil Field Military Rule To Insure Proration

OKLAHOMA CITY, May 26. (UP)—Three thousand Oklahoma oil wells were under martial law again tonight, less than a week after Gov. William H. (Alfalfa Bill) Murray's military rule had been lifted by a rebellious lieutenant governor.

Governor Murray revoked Lieut. Gov. Robert Burns' action late today and placed the state's flush oil field under his military rule, imposed Aug. 4, 1931, to increase the price of crude petroleum.

Penalty Nullified

Gov. Murray said the recent decision of the United States supreme court in upholding power of the corporation commission to prorate oil production but nullifying the penalty clause of the law, made the action necessary.

"This gives the state a good proration law, but robs the act of power to enforce it," the executive said. "I think the supreme court was 'right as a rabbit' when it said the penalty provision was too vague.

"The ultimate result of all this will be that I will have to prorate and enforce, at least until the legislature passes a new law giving the commission that power."

Burns Order Revoked

The order of Burns was revoked and held for naught," and Murray's order of last year again put into full force. It is subject to his amendment made two months after the military lid was clamped on the oil fields and the price of petroleum went slowly upward to where it now is selling at a top of $1 a barrel.

Murray's first order shut in all producing wells; the amended order permitted prorated production but martial law was retained. A skeleton force of national guard officers, headed by Lieut. Col. Cicero I. Murray, checked production under supervision of the state oil umpire.

When the governor was in New York in the interest of his campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination, Burns revoked the military rule order. It was no longer necessary in view of the supreme court's ruling, he said.

SENATE STEPS UP TAX VOTES

Sales Tax Test May Come Saturday

WASHINGTON, May 26. (US)—After substantially rewriting the new revenue bill, the senate adjourned tonight with proponents claiming victory for the general manufacturers' excise tax.

The sales tax test will probably come Saturday with consideration of the amendment of Senator Walsh, Democrat, of Massachusetts calling for a general excise tax at a rate of 1¾ per cent.

Indications that President Hoover will come out with a public appeal for the general manufacturers' tax were received at the capitol.

House leaders have sent word to the senate that the house will approve the sales tax if it is voted by the senate and sent to conference, Senator Reed of Pennsylvania, declared.

Senate Shows Speed

This assurance, it was said, has swung over wavering senators.

Taking the bit in its teeth, the senate made more progress on the tax bill at today's session than at any previous time. A total of $176,000,000 in excise and special taxes was added to the measure.

The bill, however, is still $48,000,000 behind the house figures, because of the senate's slashes in the automobile, tire and tube and admission taxes.

As the bill stands tonight, the senate has voted $669,500,000 in taxes.

New Excise Taxes

Nine new excise taxes, previously stricken out, were restored. They include cosmetics, jewelry, sporting goods, and cameras, firearms, mechanical refrigerators, matches, candy, soft drinks and motor boats. They will produce an estimated revenue of $57,000,000.

The committee's new recommendation for a tax of 2½ per cent on tires and four per cent on tubes, was approved. The yield is $33,000,-

Fickle Wind Delays Non-Stop Tokyo Flight

SEATTLE, May 26. (AP)—A fickle wind which flirted with airport indicators from every direction except that needed for a take-off delayed Nathan C. Browne, New York flier, today in his projected non-stop flight to Tokyo.

A falling barometer gave Charles O. Schick, metorologist at Boeing field, hope that when a south wind does come it will be of sufficient velocity to help launch Browne's heavily loaded monoplane into the air on its 5,000-mile jump.

The aviator went to his hotel to rest.

Oil Companies Force Allred To Rewrite Ouster Suit Petition

AUSTIN, May 26. (UP)—Oil companies defending themselves from Attorney General James V. Allred's $17,850,000 penalty suit won a ruling from District Judge J. D. Moore here late today that the attorney general's petition charged two distinct conspiracies to violate the anti-trust laws and must be amended to charge but one.

The effect of the ruling is that acquisition of stock in Texas companies by outside oil concerns can be used in the pending suit only in an attempt to show that the outside companies were working through the agency of subsidiaries in the alleged conspiracy to violate the anti-trust law through an oil code of ethics.

The petition, before the change which Judge Moore ordered today, had charged that the acquisition of such stock in 1919 was a part of a general conspiracy which culminated in the adoption of the oil code in 1928 and 1929. This code, Allred charges, had as its object control of the marketing of petroleum products.

Many of the defendant oil companies were not existant in 1919, their attorneys said, so could not be guilty of a conspiracy then.

Numerous other exceptions were overruled by Judge Moore. Others are to be considered tomorrow.

MAYOR HURLS ACCUSATION OF PERSECUTION

Witness Testifies He Had No Interest in Deals Of R. T. Sherwood

JIMMY CHEERED

New York's Executive Gets Greatest Ovation By Admiring Crowd

By SEYMOUR BERKSON

NEW YORK, May 26. (US)—Mayor James J. Walker's two-day inquisition ended in a wild finale late today with evidence that his missing fiscal agent, Russell T. Sherwood, banked $700,225 since Walker became mayor.

Vehemently, perspiringly, the mayor denied he had any connection with Sherwood's accounts but was forced to admit during a relentless barrage of questions from Samuel Seabury that Sherwood had in fact performed many and diverse financial services for him.

Ovation Accorded

When his two-day ordeal before the Hofstadter legislative investigating committee concluded late this afternoon the mayor stepped from the witness stand—a weary, wilting figure—into one of the wildest ovations in his career.

Not only did the sweltering crowds packed into the hearing chamber stand up and cheer him but as he left the courthouse steps to enter his car, a shower of roses was heaped upon him by a group of women admirers joined by cheering thousands who had been unable to get into the courtroom.

Seabury Not Through

But while the white-haired inquisitor, Seabury, dismissed Walker from the stand at 5:15 p. m. today, he clearly indicated that he is by no means through with his investigation of the chief executive.

Immediately after Walker left the hearing, T. E. Murphy, former office manager of Hornblower & Weeks, was called to the stand and testified that the day before Walker left for Europe, Aug. 10, 1927, Sherwood drew $263,838 from a secret brokerage account with the firm.

The national political implications of Walker's inquisition became poignantly apparent during today's session.

Minority Joins Walker

Walker himself openly charged Seabury with planning to confront Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic presidential aspirant, with charges demanding the removal of Walker just as the governor removed former Sheriff Thomas W. (Tin Box) Farley, another Tammany potentate.

And the four Democratic minority members on the legislative committee—designated by the dominantly Republican legislature to investigate the dominantly Democratic New York City government—joined in vigorously.

Called Puppets

They charged that the five Republicans on the committee were mere puppets in the hands of Seabury, an anti-Tammany Democrat, and that Seabury had been designated as chief counsel by W. Kingsland Macy, Republican state chairman, long before the members of the committee were even appointed.

The evidence about Sherwood's $700,225 deposits in 12 bank and brokerage accounts between Jan. 1, 1926, the day Mayor Walker took office, and Aug. 5, 1931, the day Sherwood was subpoenaed before the committee, was the big surprise bomb in the Seabury arsenal.

Of the deposits, $472,092 was in cash.

Produced Sharp Clash

Seabury pointed out that during most of the five-year period involved, Sherwood was apparently a $3,500 a year accountant until in 1930, he managed to get a $10,000 job with the Bank of Manhattan.

The surprise evidence produced at once the sharpest clash thus far between Mayor Walker and Seabury; and between the Democratic minority and the Republican majority on the committee itself.

New York's dapper chief executive abandoned the nimble wit with which he had been parrying Seabury's questions and shouted charges of persecution and charges

SEABURY AND WALKER CLASH

Roses Flung at Mayor As Second Day Ends

that Seabury was "trying to make headlines."

The mayor declared:

"I know nothing about Sherwood's personal affairs, his personal bank accounts, nor his personal operations.

Crowds Thunder Approval

"I did not have one penny's interest in it nor one moment's knowledge of it and I am telling you that under my oath and all the insinuations and political motives in the world can't write that into anybody's mind."

This brought a thunder of applause and cheers from the audience followed by all four of the Democratic minority members of the committee jumping up to object to continuation of the testimony.

Pandemonium reigned for fully five minutes. The Democrats harangued about "politics" "persecution," and "headlines."

Spectators Sympathetic

More than 400 persons, demonstratively sympathetic to "Jimmy" Walker, were jammed into the courtroom in the sweltering heat.

And while they screamed, yelled, and roared disapproval of the new evidence, thousands of their less fortunate fellow citizens herded into lines by the police in the corridors outside, joined in the demonstration.

The diminutive chairman of the committee, State Senator Samuel A. Hofstadter, pounded his gavel continuously until the noise quited down.

Then Seabury who had stood quietly with his arms folded across his chest while the crowds shouted, suddenly swung into the evidence that Sherwood had withdrawn $263,838 from a secret brokerage account the day before Walker sailed for Europe in 1927.

Walker in Outburst

This account at Hornblower & Weeks was kept under the name of "Investment Trustee Account." No sooner had Seabury introduced the documents about thas transaction than Mayor Walker gave vent to another outburst. He shouted:

"Why don't you complete the inference and make a real scenario of it. I left for Europe the next day and I suppose the plot is that I took it to Europe. And yet I had to sell my soul for $10,000 to the Equitable Coach company to get a $10,000 letter of credit."

Seabury plunged into a series of transactions linking Sherwood definitely to various financial activities for Mayor Walker.

He showed how checks payable out of one of Sherwood's bank accounts went to pay various expenses of the mayor's wife and the mayor's widowed sister, Mrs. Nan Walker Burke.

He further linked this bank account to the mayor by showing that coupons from $5,000 worth of Consolidated Gas company bonds in Mrs. Walker's name were cashed into Sherwood's bank account.

Asked Whereabouts

The mayor explained that in each case that a check was issued by Sherwood on the latter's bank that it was merely a matter of convenience and that he always reimbursed his financial agent with cash.

Then Seabury asked pointblank whether the mayor knew the present whereabouts of Sherwood who has been missing ever since a subpoena was issued for him.

Walker replied:

"I wish I knew where Sherwood was because I probably wouldn't have gone through these two hot days because I would have him here."

Performed Clerical Work

The mayor said he first met Sherwood 15 years ago and that after Walker became a member of the law firm where Sherwood was an accountant, the latter came to perform "various clerical services for me."

Explaining that after he became mayor, Sherwood continued to handle "personal matters," for him, Walker declared:

"I did not feel justified in using any city employe to perform personal services for me, so I allowed them to be handled through the law office where Mr. Sherwood was accountant."

Specifically, Walker admitted that Sherwood handled several of the benevolent stock market transactions, to which he fell heir.

Other Earnings

And in this connection, the mayor revealed that the joint account of Paul Block, publisher, out of which Mayor Walker made $246,692 profit without a cent's investment, was not by any means the only generosity by which he benefited.

He declared that the $26,000 in bonds he received from J. A. Sisto, a broker interested in the taxicab business, was due to a similarly munificent opportunity to participate in a pool in Cosden Oil stock —likewise without any investment on his part.

Not Unusual

Two other similar opportunities brought him $20,000 more, the mayor testified. He sought to point out that in the palmy days of the big bull market such relationships between friends were "not unusual."

Seabury showed payments of $15,000 Sherwood made by check on his bank for Mayor Walker's widowed sister and $6,008 for maintenance of the yacht Mary W. for Mrs. Walker.

Walker argued there was nothing unusual about this. He said Sherwood had handled banking matters for him for some time, brought financial papers to him to sign almost every day, and even made deposits for Walker in the mayor's own bank accounts.

No Direct Connection

All day long the ghost-like figure of Sherwood flitted in and out of the testimony.

But when the session concluded the only actual connection Seabury had drawn between the missing financial agent's $700,225 in deposits and Mayor Walker himself was one of inference.

Whether this will be strong enough to warrant charges before Governor Roosevelt against the mayor, Seabury refused to say but he definitely indicated he plans to place some more witnesses on the stand in connection with the mayor's finances.

More Witnesses Today

Two who are likely to be called tomorrow, he said, are Paul Block, the publishers who made Walker a $246,692 profit from a joint stock account without any investment by the mayor; and J. Allan Smith, one of the equitable bus franchise backers who gave the mayor a $10,000 letter of credit shortly before his European trip.

When today's session had ended, there was an indeliable picture emblazoned on the memories of all who attended.

At the judges' bench of the largest courtroom in the courthouse sat the nine members of the legislative committee—five Republicans and four Democrats—constantly wrangling among themselves.

Met Onslaughts

Directly to their right in the witness chair facing the "audience," "Jimmy" Walker, lean, handsome mayor of America's biggest metropolis, met onslaught after onslaught from the Seabury barrage.

Seabury stood up almost throughout the proceedings firing questions at the dapper mayor. From time to time, one of his youthful legal assistants would rush over to him with a suggested question written on yellow paper.

At one point during the inquisition, Walker angrily reproved one of these assistants, William G. Mulligan, whom he accused of "sneering" at him in the midst of his answer to a question.

But the most dramatic incident in the entire two days took place when Seabury began to introduce the evidence about Sherwood's $700,225 deposits during the time Walker has been mayor.

Walker shouted:

"This isn't a preliminary to an inquiry but to an inquest."

At another point, he added:

"This is nothing but preliminary to presenting charges against me before the governor for my removal."

Seabury Complains

The four horsemen of the Democratic minority suddenly swung into action with a medley of shouts, while Seabury complained to the chairman that the witness "is making a stump speech."

Their shouts came as follows:

Senator McNaboe: "You can't wish a man in jail and out of office. You got to have evidence."

Assemblyman Cuvillier: "Seabury wants the mayor's political life."

Senator Dunnigan: "If he is ever removed, he will be re-elected by the people of New York City by the greatest vote he ever got. Republican State Chairman Macy appointed Seabury and that's why the Republicans sit here like puppets and let him run the show."

Assemblyman Steingut: "Why in Russia's darkest days there was nothing like this."

It was as if this were the signal for an explosion.

The crowds shouted and cheered for nearly five minutes before the chairman's gavel finally restored order.

Outbursts Continue

Seabury proceeded to question Walker but before very long there was another outburst. And so it continued intermittently throughout the five hours Walker spent on the witness stand today.

Mayor Walker himself appeared to object to his political colleagues coming to his rescue and frequently admonished them:

"Let me answer the questions, please, that's what I'm here for."

The new surprise evidence followed a day in which Walker had voluntarily, even eagerly given details in transactions relating to the "generosity" of various friends in handing him large sums of money.

This generosity in two days' questioning had been shown to reach a total of nearly $300,000. In addition to the $246,000 benificence of Paul Block, the publisher, shown yesterday, Walker told today of gifts of $26,000, $10,000 and $10,000 from various persons who were fond of him.

Walker Turns Tables

His testimony regarding one of these, the $26,000 gift which Seabury had tried to show was from a broker dealing in taxicab stocks at a time Walker was favoring certain taxicab regulation, appeared to be a boomerang.

Walker, boldly seizing the bull by the horns, denounced what he termed insinuations of bribery and read portions of a veto message delivered six months after the gift, in which he blocked an attempted taxicab rate raise which, he said, would have brought annual increased profit of $1,000,000 to one company alone.

After he was elected, Walker said, rather than use the time of a city employe for his personal accounts, he turned them over to Sherwood to handle in the law office.

Payment to Sister

Over vigorous protests of the minority members, Seabury got Walker to admit that Sherwood not only made frequent payments of money for Mrs. Walker out of a special account in Sherwood's own name, but also paid out of the same account approximately $15,000 to Mrs. Anne Walker Burke, a widowed sister of the mayor.

Seabury also brought out that Sherwood had paid out $6,000 for a "yacht" which the mayor declared was only a "steam launch."

In connection with Seabury's questions about the $15,000 fee for "special legal services," which Abraham H. Schwartz, theatrical and realty magnate had testified to paying the mayor, Walker entered into an explanation that the larger part of this was turned over to Sherwood.

Walker said he had appeared before the board of standards and appeals—an investigation of which was the forerunner of the present investigation—on a matter connected with modification of a zoning ordinance.

Walker, questioned about the safety deposit box in the joint name of Walker and Sherwood, said that he did not sign for it, and did not use it at any time except on one occasion when for a few days he kept some papers there involved in some litigation.

Seabury brought out that five shares of Consolidated Gas company stock had been cashed partly in Walker's and partly in Sherwood's name.

Walker explained that his wife had bought the stock without his knowledge and much to his distress when he learned about it, because she "saw fit to invest in a public utility doing business with the city of which her husband was mayor."

Principals Annoyed

Walker repeatedly appeared to be annoyed by the exuberant interruptions of his Democratic colleagues on the committee and once sharply asked them to let him answer, but had no effect upon their interruptions.

Seabury, who has had the help of a number of bright young attorneys in marshaling his evidence, appeared annoyed two or three times today by their well-intentioned assistance in prompting him.

At one point, Walker sharply reproved one of them, William G. Mulligan, for "sneering" at him. The session continued after the mayor had admonished him to "wipe the sneer off his face."

tion of certain imported merchandise to wit: 627 bottles of Carta Blanca beer." He waived preliminary hearing.

Ponder was in custody of federal officers but was not placed in jail.

He was arrested last night when Customs Agent Conner and Dual brought their plane down in front of his when he landed at the airport here. Ponder said he came down for gas, that he had been flying high and did not know he was being pursued.

Customs Agent A. P. Cummings and other federal officers from Eagle Pass came here by automobile after the arrest. All hearings in the case were before U. S. Commissioner Jesse Couch.

Distinguished War Service

Airport attendants said Ponder's big blue biplane had enough gas for five hours flying and that they believed he feigned a landing here in an attempt to shake off the smaller plane of the agents, after a war-like pursuit from the border.

Ponder's war-time accomplishments began in the Lafayette escadrille, in which he enlisted early in the war after leaving Dartmouth. He later transferred to the American air forces, and was credited with bringing down 11 enemy planes. He won a distinguished service cross for going to the aid of an allied plane beset by 13 German craft. After the war he became city manager of Mangum, Okla., resigning to become an aircraft agent at Fort Worth and to engage in private flying.

SNAP-DASH-ACTION

TEXACO

FIRE-CHIEF

GASOLINE

Here is a gasoline that was originally developed to put snap, dash, action in fire engines. The U. S. Government specified this type of motor fuel for use in its own emergency vehicles—"ambulances, fire engines, naval and military equipment."

(Excerpt from Federal pamphlet VV-M-571, July 21, 1931)

Texaco Fire-Chief gasoline is alive with power—power you can feel right under the accelerator of your own car—power that means snap, dash, action in any engine, old or new.

Mass production of this remarkable new power-gasoline was made possible only by advanced Texaco refining methods. It has an Octane Rating that is outstanding. In all 'round performance it is "way out in front." Yet Texaco Fire-Chief gasoline costs no more than ordinary old-fashioned gasolines.

And if you prefer driving with a premium gasoline remember that Texaco Fire-Chief plus Ethyl equals Texaco-Ethyl, now more than ever the leading premium gasoline.

Government Witnesses Testify in Lottery Case

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas, May 26. (AP)—Several government witnesses in federal court today told of sending $1 each to purchase tickets in a lottery allegedly operated through radio station XED at Reynosa, Mexico.

Will Horwitz of Houston, owner of the station, his wife, Milton G. Hall, Manuel C. Guerra, Manuel B. Gonzales and Alfonso Dominguez were on trial for asserted misue of the United States mails in connection with the lottery.

Postal Inspector H. H. Black of Houston testified he heard broadcasts pertaining to the lottery. He read a list of 26 purported Mexican "government inspectors" to whom it was announced over station XED that money could be sent to obtain tickets.

He said he investigated the list of persons named and found that only three of them existed. A defense motion objecting to that phase of Black's testimony was sustained by Judge T. M. Kennerly.

Government witnesses who said they had sent money with which to buy tickets were Frank Young of Corpus Christi, Mrs. Nettie Lichtenstein and Mrs. Selma Levy.

Postmaster Gilbert McGloin took the stand to identify certain letters he had seized in the mails. The government claimed that money to buy tickets in the lottery was sent through the mails, thus violating the law.

DRYS WARN TWO MAJOR PARTIES

'Limit' of Prohi Planks Is Prescribed

WASHINGTON, May 26. (AP)—Organized drys warned both political parties today a referendum plank in their convention platforms next month would be "futile, at present."

They also said the "extreme limit" to which the Republicans and Democrats could go on this question without infringing the rights of the people would be a declaration that repeal or modification should be determined by the citizens themselves "free from the pressure of any political party platform."

In an open letter to members of congress, Bishop James Cannon Jr., chairman of the board of temperance and social service of the Methodist Episcopal church, South, fired the opening gun in a battle to be waged here next week by 39 dry organizations to prevent moist planks being adopted at the two Chicago conclaves.

Substantially, Bishop Cannon said the 18th amendment was adopted as a non-political measure without any previous party platform declaration on the subject; there is no constitutional provision for a popular referendum; that when the people desire a change or a referendum they can obtain it by electing senators, representatives, and members of state legislatures or conventions favoring a change or a referendum, and that the parties should pledge themselves to a "vigorous, efficient enforcement," of the 18th amendment.

Should either or both conventions "take unfair and unprecedented action on the prohibition question," the letter concluded, the drys would insist that the people ignore the platforms and elect senators and representatives to represent their views and later would "confer as to what course to pursue for the best interests of the prohibition cause."

GAS ROYALTY OWNERS SUE

First Court Fight Over Price Starts

AMARILLO, Texas, May 26. (AP)—Panhandle Gas royalty owners today instituted suit for a higher price for their gas.

The first of what may be a series of suits was filed by the E. B. Johnson & Sons estate against the Texoma Natural Gas company, asking that the royalty owners be paid on a basis of 10 cents per thousand cubic feet, compared with a first offer of two cents which later was hiked to three and one-half cents.

The petition further champions the right of the royalty owners to share in the income from gasoline extracted from the natural gas, and asks that the gas be measured under the same atmospheric pressure at both ends of the pipe line, which it is claimed would increase the volume about 10 per cent.

Although the suit was filed by individuals for the recovery of less than $3,000 in royalty on gas used from one well since last October, it is supported by the Panhandle Gas Royalty Owners association.

The suit was filed in 84th district court at Stinnett, Hutchinson county.

Charging that the pipe line company is receiving 10 cents a thousand cubic feet from the sale of gas, the royalty owners plead that they should receive full royalty on that basis. They further charge that the pipe line company has consistently refused to pay them any share of the proceeds from the sale of gasoline.

What-a-Man Hudson Loses $168 Debt Suit to Maid

LOS ANGELES, May 26. (US)—Guy Edward (What-a-Man) Hudson, husband of Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, who in turn is the mother of Aimee Semple McPherson Hutton, evangelist, must repay $168.14 loaned to him by Bess Bordeaux, according to a judgment returned today.

Hudson, who figured in a moonlight, by-the-lake marriage in Washington, did not appear in court and Miss Bordeaux won by default. She testified that during the summer of 1930 she loaned Hudson money in small amounts, which he promised to pay back. Included in her claim was $25 for a Gladstone bag which Hudson assertedly converted to his own use.

"What-a-Man" hitchhiked to San Francisco after borrowing $2.35 from Miss Bordeaux, she charged. While he was on the trip she wired him small sums to hotels along the way, the woman said.

Amelia Chats With British Flying Pair

LONDON, May 26. (US)—Mrs. Amelia Earhart Putnam spent several hours today with Britain's "flying fiances," Amy Johnson and J. A. Mollison, giving Mollison some pointers on transatlantic flying. He plans an east-to-west crossing this summer.

Miss Johnson, first woman to fly from England to Australia, wants to accompany her fiance on the hop, but so far Mollison has remained steadfastly against it.

Mrs. Putnam, first woman to fly the Atlantic alone, received the British couple in the American embassy, where she has been the guest of Ambassador Mellon since her arrival in London.

Afterwards she lunched at the Royal Aero club and went on a sight-seeing tour. Tonight she was the guest of honor at the annual council dinner of the Royal Aeronautical society, the first woman guest at such a function.

Mrs. Putnam has postponed her trip to Paris until June 1, explaining she has accepted an invitation to fly to Brooklands Saturday to participate in a civilian flyers' meet.

Japan Sending Farm Colonists to Brazil

LOS ANGELES, May 26. (US)—Japan is colonizing Brazil and other South American countries as rapidly as ships can carry the emigrants there, according to Capt. T. Kamiashi, master of the liner Buenos Maru which arrived at San Pedro today.

The ship carried 1,000 Japanese to Sau Paulo, Brazil. There they will be given land for farming. Only Japanese are allowed to enter the country to stay, the captain said. There are 115,000 Japanese in Brazil now, he declared.

EX-SHERIFF OF GRAY IS FREED

Six Acquitted in Pampa Liquor Case

AMARILLO, Texas, May 25. (AP)—A verdict of acquittal was returned in United States district court here late today for former Sheriff E. S. Graves of Gray county and five others, charged with conspiracy to violate the prohibition laws.

Besides Graves, those of the original 16 whose cases reached the jury were Scott Rheudasil and Herman Wachtendorf, former deputies; Roy Albritton, alleged leading bootlegger, O. C. Williams, and Ben Bolton.

The jury was out about 15 minutes.

Instructed verdicts were entered, when the jury was charged, for Billie Bass, W. Murph Smith, Weldon Wilson, former deputy, and Granville Parrish, former constable.

Motions for dismissal and instructed verdicts already had eliminated six of the defendants, including three former deputy sheriffs.

The alleged conspiracy, which involved 21 men, was charged by the government to have existed during the oil boom at Pampa from 1926 to 1931.

Negress Jailed In Theft Case

A complaint was filed in district court Thursday against Bertha Harris, negress, on charges of receiving and concealing stolen property, Police Chief Dick Morris said. She was arrested Wednesday by city officers for investigation in connection with the loss of $45 in money and a $10 check, reported by another negro.

A burglary of the North Side Tire shop, 606 Wichita, reported at 9 o'clock Thursday morning, failed to net thieves any loot after a screen had been cut and a window smashed, police said. Detectives O. A. Roberson and Luke Hart arrested a negro man in the Missouri-Kansas-Texas railway yards Thursday morning in connection with the loss of grain doors.

Loss of a quantity of ignition tools was reported to police Thursday night by D. B. Biggers, 1009 Fifth.

A quantity of "home brew" was taken by officers Thursday morning when they were called to locate the owner of a trunk left on a vacant lot. The trunk contained clothing and several bottles of the "brew" and a nearby resident reported theft of the property from his residence shortly afterward.

COURT ORDERS MONEY SEARCH

$75,000 Impounded Funds Mysteriously Lost

LOS ANGELES, May 26. (US)—With the revelation today that $75,000 in currency, entrusted to the care of the county clerk until its ownership was determined by the courts, had mysteriously vanished from a safety deposit box, the grand jury began an immediate investigation.

An order was issued by the district attorney's office for police to find and detain for questioning Chief Deputy County Clerk L. A. Hill, supposedly en route to Los Angeles to report for work Tuesday.

Money Impounded

The money was impounded after it was paid to Morris Lavine, attorney and former newspaperman, by Charles H. Crawford in an attempted extortion plot two years ago. Lavine, arrested and convicted, sued to keep the money. Last week the federal court ordered $10,000 of it turned over to the trustees of the Wagy company and the remainder paid to the estate of Crawford, a politician who was murdered last May.

County Clerk L. E. Lampton said that shortly before the murder Hill told him that, in compliance with a court order, he had returned the money to Crawford. Lampton said he found the money was missing after reading of the federal court order and learning that it was the only authorization ever given to release it from his custody.

Secret Search

A secret, frantic investigation was started by county authorities in an effort to find the $75,000 in currency. When news of the loss leaked out today, it was admitted and the matter turned over to the grand jurors.

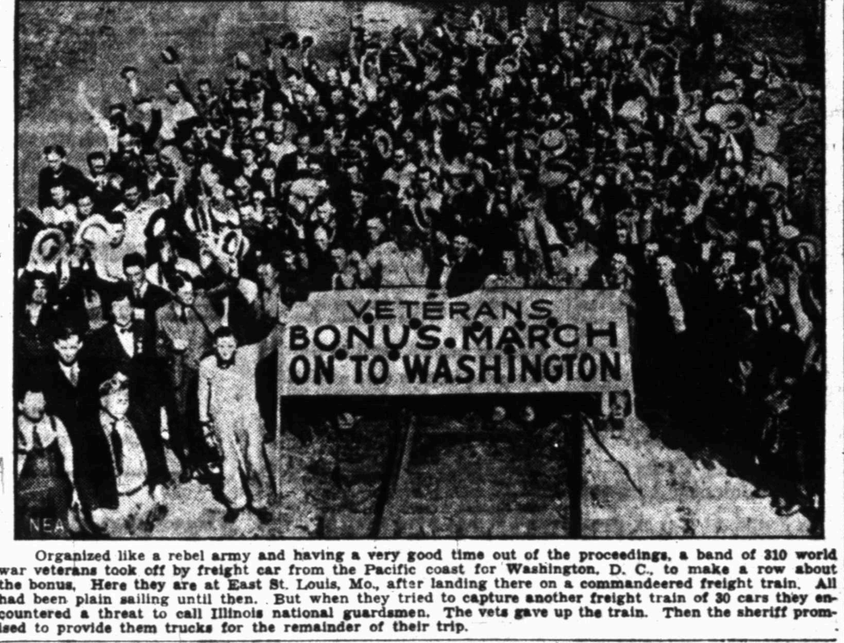

Attorneys for the Crawford estate made repeated unsuccessful demands for the return of the money, and were bitter in their comments today. They stated that Lampton and Hill, respectively bonded for $25,000 and $10,000, will be sued unless the money is found.

Lincoln County Highway Injunction Case Delayed

OKLAHOMA CITY, May 26. (UP)—An injunction hearing, brought by Lincoln county taxpayers to prevent the state highway commission from letting grading and drainage contracts on 34 miles of highway 48 in Lincoln county, today was postponed until June 8 by District Judge Sam Hooker.

The suit will be tried as a permanent injunction when resumed. If the taxpayers are successful, the state will be required to pave highway 18 through the county.

Bonus Army Quiets As Troops Are Called

Organized like a rebel army and having a very good time out of the proceedings, a band of 310 world war veterans took off by freight car from the Pacific coast for Washington, D. C., to make a row about the bonus. Here they are at East St. Louis, Mo., after landing there on a commandeered freight train. All had been plain sailing until then. But when they tried to capture another freight train of 30 cars they encountered a threat to call Illinois national guardsmen. The vets gave up the train. Then the sheriff promised to provide them trucks for the remainder of their trip.

Irrigation To Be Salvation Of Hardeman County, Expert Says

Special to The Record News.

QUANAH, Texas, May 26.—Truck farming and irrigation would be the salvation of Hardeman county, is the opinion of J. O. Stovall, federal loan supervisor for this district, who has been here for several days on an inspection trip over the county.

Mr. Stovall said from the Gulf to New Mexico he had seen no country that looked as barren as the soil around Acme, four miles west of Quanah, where the large cement plaster mills of the Certainteed Products company are located. These mills pump millions of gallons annually from the gyp mines supplying their mills, and this water is being extensively used, and has been for years, for irrigation purposes. The gardens he found at Acme were as abundant in production as any he had seen in the state, Mr. Stovall stated.

Tile System Best

In his opinion irrigation could best be handled by the tile system. At Acme Ransom Davis has used the cement block to tile his garden, and Mr. Stovall said he would value the garden today at several hundred dollars. There is less than one-half acre in the tract.

In Acme there are gardens that have been irrigated with gyp water for 29 years, and still the soil is productive. The use of the gyp water has not caked and hardened the soil as is the popular belief. There are other garden plots in the county that have been irrigated and worked for nearly 40 years and still produce. One of these is on the Sam Miller farm in the northwest part of the county.

Cost Small

The county demonstration agent, Miss Elsie Phillips, has a form to be used in the manufacture of tile for gardens, and for lawns in town. This tile can be made for less than one cent per foot, and will last almost indefinitely, while the plaster tile used at Acme deteriorates by absorption. The Acme tile used is refuse and culls from the hollow sound proof building tile plant.

Practically every home demonstration club in Hardeman county has a "garden demonstrator" and many of these gardens are irrigated.

Those where surface irrigation is used there is being produced celery, lettuce, cauliflower, asparagus, along with the usual vegetables, onions, beets, carrots, squash, potatoes, peas, beans, etc. Much of this produce has been considered impossible to raise in the county, but is being proven will do well on barren soil and watered with gyp water.

One of the outstanding gardens in variety and production is that of Carl Vestal at Acme. Cauliflower, celery, carrots, and other vegetables rivaling those produced in the Rio Grande valley grow in this garden, and were displayed at different times in downtown sections of Quanah during 1931. Vestal uses "mine water" by surface method.

Mr. Stovall said he would like to see what could be done by employing the same method on more fertile soil, and with tile system.

There are a few small tracts irrigated with the tile system, and it is expected a much wider use of this method will be adopted by farmers and residents in town who have wells or private water supplies.

SENATE DROPS JUDGE'S CASE

Wilkerson Unable to Come To Washington

WASHINGTON, May 26. (AP)—For this session at least, it is now unlikely that the senate will confirm the nomination of Judge James H. Wilkerson to the United States circuit court.

Sentencer of Al Capone, the gang lord, Wilkerson has been under fire of labor organizations for past decisions they regard as unfair and oppressive. The judiciary sub-committee which has studied the nomination all through this session finally asked the jurist to appear for a personal statement on his past acts and views.

He advised this group yesterday he will not be able to come for several weeks because of a long and important case now before him. Members of the committee indicated they would not vote on the nomination before hearing him.

If unconfirmed now, President Hoover will have a chance to give Wilkerson a recess appointment as soon as congress adjourns.

CRIME BLAMED TO PROHIBITION

Pershing Attacks Dry Law Of U. S. in Speech

PARIS, May 26. (AP)—Gen. John J. Pershing declared today that prohibition in the United States is the basis of racketeering and that it never would have been adopted if the masses of the people had voted on it.

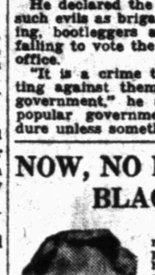

The general made these assertions in a pungently-phrased speech before the American club at a luncheon given in his honor. He evoked roars of approval from his auditors.

Vigorously attacking what he described as conditions of lawlessness in the United States, the general blamed them on the listlessness and apathy of the American people themselves.

He declared the voters permitted such evils as brigandage, racketeering, bootleggers and gangsters by failing to vote the proper men into office.

"It is a crime they are committing against themselves and their government," he said. "How can popular government hope to endure unless something is done?"

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral waters, all laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul. Your skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, purely vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at all stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

JURY INDICTS JOHN H. CURTIS

That's Hint Dropped By Prosecutor

FLEMINGTON, N. J., May 26. (US)—John Hughes Curtis, Norfolk shipbuilder, was indicted by the Hunterdon county grand jury today for the gigantic hoax he has confessed to in connection with his purported negotiations with the kidnapers of the son of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, it was unofficially reported.

The official decision of the grand jury will not be made public until Saturday, when the report will be submitted to Supreme Court Justice Thomas W. Trenchard.

Three Witnesses

The grand jury heard only three witnesses. They were Capt. John J. Lamb and Lieut. Walter Keaton, both of the New Jersey state police, and Inspector Harry Walsh, of the Jersey City police.

After a vote had been taken, Prosecutor Anthony M. Hauck Jr., emerged from the grand jury room and said:

"I am very happy."

"Did the grand jury indict?" he was asked.

"I cannot answer that question. The action of the grand jury cannot be disclosed until it makes its report to the court."

Prosecutor Hauck announced that Colonel Lindbergh would probably be called as a witness if Curtis is brought to trial. He added:

"I have a large list of witnesses to be called—if there is a trial."

Search Continues

Asked if he would call Mrs. Lindbergh, he said:

"No, it would not be necessary to call Mrs. Lindbergh."

Meanwhile police continued their search for the kidnapers and murderers of the Lindbergh baby, but reported no appreciable progress.

The Bronx grand jury, inquiring into the $50,000 ransom payment by Dr. John F. "Jafsie" Condon, was adjourned until June 2, when it will continue its investigation.

"Jafsie," in his mountain camp near Becket, Mass., took time off to reveal that "John," the mysterious Scandinavian to whom he paid $50,000 of Colonel Lindbergh's money, had three distinguishing marks on his face.

He would not describe the marks saying that he had given the information to the Bronx grand jury.

Declaring that bus and motor-truck services are jeopardizing their positions, railway employes have appealed to farmers of County Wicklow, Irish Free State, to patronize railway instead of motor lines.

Texan Faces Charge In Baby Insurance

SAN FRANCISCO, May 26. (US)—Cecil H. Cunningham is under arrest here today for the federal authorities in Texas on what government officers declare is a "brand new one."

Cunningham is charged with using the mails to defraud in connection with a "baby" insurance scheme.

He is alleged to have been connected with an organization known as the Greater Metropolitan Birth Endowment, association, which accepted premiums of $1.25 a month and promised that if a baby were born they would pay the parents the face value of the policy.

Government contends this plan is nothing more than a lottery. He will fight removal to Texas.

BOARD FACES GRAIN ACT

Chicago Trade Board May Have License Revoked

WASHINGTON, May 26. (AP)—The Chicago board of trade faces invocation of the grain futures act as a result of its decision rejecting the application of the Farmers National Grain corporation for membership in its clearing corporation and the suspension yesterday of its subsidiary, the Updike Grain company, from similar membership.

Attorneys of the agriculture and justice departments are considering the legal questions involved. An order citing the board of trade to show cause why its designation as a contract market should not be revoked is expected to be issued soon.

Hyde Silent

The hearing would be held before a commission of three, the secretary of agriculture, secretary of commerce and the attorney general.

Secretary Hyde declined to comment on the board of trade's action, pointing out that he is a member of the commission which must hear the charges and render a decision.

The Farmers National filed an application with the secretary last month, asking that the board of trade be closed on the grounds of "discrimination." The grain futures act provides that farmers' cooperatives shall be given the same trading privileges as private dealers. The prospective hearing, therefore, is regarded here as a show down between the old line grain trade and cooperatives fostered by the farm board.

100 KILLED IN NICARAGUA

Guards and Sandino Rebels Engage in Battle

COLON, C. Z., May 26. (US)—Nicaraguan insurgents and national guards, the latter officered by American marines, clashed twice today in Jinotega province, with deaths on both sides totaling almost 100 in unofficial estimates, it was reported here from Bluefields.

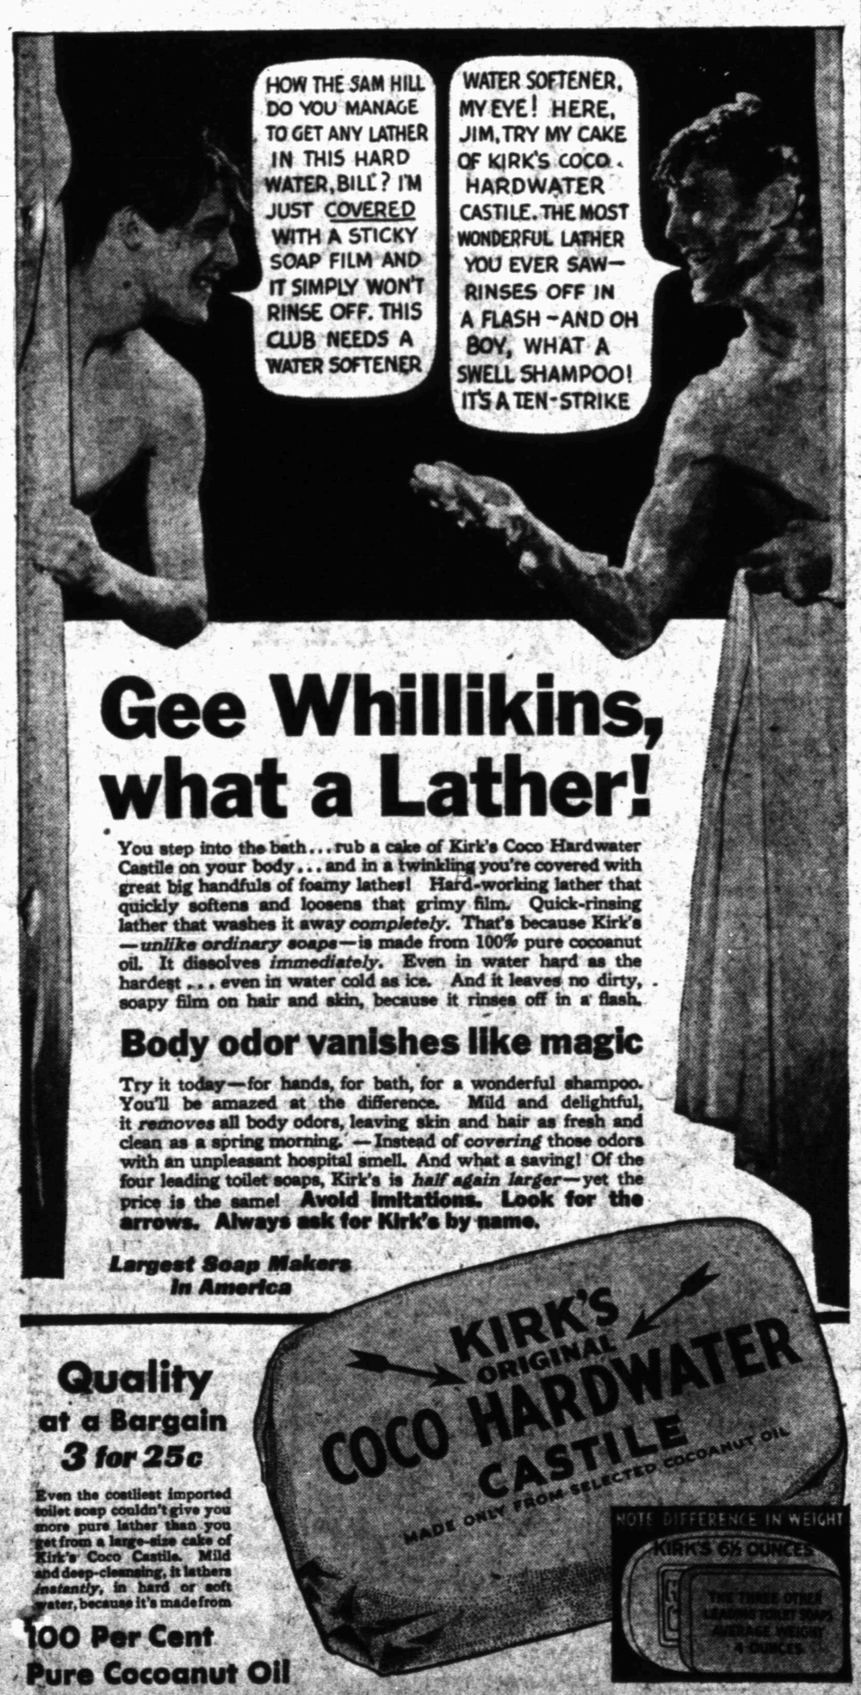

More than 50 of the Nicaraguan rebels, operating in the absence of but under the direction of "General" Augusto Sandino, were killed in a major engagement this morning the reports stated.

National guards surprised a sleeping Sandinista encampment and captured valuable stores of munitions and foodstuffs. No losses were incurred in the morning engagement, it was stated, by the national guards.

The Sandinistas rallied in the afternoon over a large sector of Jinotega province, routing the guardsmen and inflicting heavy casualties with hidden machine guns.

Federal reinforcements were hurrying to the Jinotega battlefront late tonight from Managua and Bluefields, dispatches stated. It was not learned if any of the slain guardsmen were the American officers.

Gee Whillikins, what a Lather!

You step into the bath... rub a cake of Kirk's Coco Hardwater Castile on your body... and in a twinkling you're covered with great big handfuls of foamy lathes! Hard-working lather that quickly softens and loosens that grimy film. Quick-rinsing lather that washes it away completely. That's because Kirk's —unlike ordinary soaps—is made from 100% pure cocoanut oil. It dissolves immediately. Even in water hard as the hardest... even in water cold as ice. And it leaves no dirty, soapy film on hair and skin, because it rinses off in a flash.

Body odor vanishes like magic

Try it today—for hands, for bath, for a wonderful shampoo. You'll be amazed at the difference. Mild and delightful, it removes all body odors, leaving skin and hair as fresh and clean as a spring morning. —Instead of covering those odors with an unpleasant hospital smell. And what a saving! Of the four leading toilet soaps, Kirk's is half again larger—yet the price is the same! Avoid imitations. Look for the arrows. Always ask for Kirk's by name.

Garden Club Closes Season At May Luncheon Program

With 60 members and guests attending the closing luncheon of the Garden club at the Woman's Forum clubhouse Thursday, the enthusiasm shown over the informal flower exhibit, in charge of Mrs. Floyd Randel, flower show chairman, seemed proof that the love of beauty is the most contagious feeling among a group of women. Beside the assortment of vases and bowls of spring blossoms that made the table lovely, the entire front of the large stage in the auditorium was glorified with exquisite asortments of special flowers cut from the members of gardens.

Mrs. J. C. Mytinger was in the chair for the final session and Mrs. S. E. Trevathan said the invocation. Following the introduction of a number of guests and the reading of the minutes of the last meeting, announcements were made as follows: Mrs. R. G. Scheurer announced the family garden contest sponsored each year by the civic department and stated that Mesdames M. A. Beckman and C. D. Shamburger would be in charge of entries.

Club Finance

Mrs. E. B. Lehrack, chairman of the Better Homes and Gardens magazine, said that all the funds in the garden club treasury had come from the commissions on that magazine and that the garden club had never asked the general forum for any fund. She reported a nice sum to be turned into the treasury.

Mrs. Floyd Randel, junior chairman, showed the artistic birdhouse donated by Mrs. C. E. McCutchen, which was won in the junior garden contest by Ben Franklin school. She announced that junior garden club members were saving larkspur and poppy seed for beautifying the highways and requested that members give them packages in the autumn. She said that she received 3,000 junior garden club buttons and had only about 600, showing a membership of 2,400.

Mrs. Newton Maer announced that the cook book was in the hands of the printers and would be ready for distribution about July 1. She explained why it could not be printer in Wichita Falls as it had to be handled by a publishing house.

Mrs. W. W. Cook, conservation chairman, introduced Mrs. J. M. Isbell, county chairman of beautification and conservation who said that she had told the county demonstration clubs of the cooperation extended by the garden club and emphasized the conservation and beautification work done by these clubs.

With junior work and conservation work her two main objectives, Mrs. Mytinger said that a message from Dr. F. R. Collard, board member of the Camp Fire council, asking the cooperation of the club in sponsoring a seed contest in that body, had come as a pleasant ending of the year's work. She presented Mrs. Cook who told of the plan.

The seeds will be gathered by the different Camp Fire groups and the groups who have the most seed will be awarded prizes of $3, $2 and $1. The seed will be given to the park department and C. C. Bunnenberg, superintendent, will cooperate in planting seed where it is most needed. The movement is for the purpose of teaching the value of the tiny larkspur and poppy seed, and what beautification means. The garden club voted to sponsor it.

Convention Report

Mrs. Peyton F. Gwynn, delegate to the state garden club conference at Mineral Wells gave a detailed report of the meeting, outlining the special features which appealed to her. She announced that Texas has the largest junior garden club enrollment in America, numbering more than 46,000. She told of the conservation work shown in an exhibit in Mineral Wells and of the slides of Texas garden among which those of the lily pond at the Walter Campbell home and Mrs. C. E. McCutchen's rose garden were notable.

Mrs. Gwynn said that it was her wish that pictures might be taken of all the Wichita Falls beauty spots to be shown in colors when the state conference meets at Waco next year.

Flower Shows

Mrs. Gwynn also told of flower shows which she attended in Fort Worth and Dallas. She spoke of special roses that had been noted in the Fort Worth show and of the iris that had been featured in Dallas. She has a record of iris for members of the club who wish to secure special" bulbs. Special mention was made of the 2,400 roses in the garden of Mrs. Ira Hampton, an amateur gardener who lives between Fort Worth and Dallas.

Members present who attended the conference at Mineral Wells told of features that especially appealed to them. Mrs. Rhea Howard particularly stressed the beauty of the colored slides that showed Waco's beauty spots. Mesdames Q. B. Lee and Homer Lee both spoke of the national conservation work; Mrs. Luther Wright spoke of the outstanding rose of the year named by Mrs. Hampton, the "Irish Hope." Mrs. C. E. McCutchen was most enthusiastic over the ball park that has been beautified in Mineral Wells, with Mr. John Miller conceiving and planning the work. She spoke of the many beautiful shrubs and finally of the grape vines that grew up the sides of the grandstand.

Flower Exhibit

Mrs. Floyd Randel was particularly interested in the junior work. Mrs. Randel, as exhibit chairman, pointed out the flowers that had been brought by various members for the May meeting. There were perennial sweet peas and cape jasmines from Mrs. J. N. Catter's garden; a bowl of assorted larkspur centering the long table; a bowl of roses and jasmine; one of cornflowers; one of Dame Edith Helen roses in a blue crystal container; larkspur and old fashioned sweet pinks, all from Mrs. Rhea Howard's garden; a long basket filled with elder daisies and a tall one filled with yellow daisies from the garden of Mrs. L. B. Moore, Bellevue; a magnificent blue bowl filled with popples, caleopsis, cereopsis and larkspur from Mrs. C. E. McCutchen; a bowl of calendula and scabiosis and a silver vase of elder daisies from Mrs. Ben G. Oneal; coreopsis and statis from Mrs. Luther Wright; a splendid bowl of Indian fire wheel from Mrs. O. E. Maer; a low bowl of creamy yellow and purple pansies from Mrs. Robert E. Basham; a purple bowl of assorted purple and orchid poppies from Mrs. Peyton F. Gwynn; purple larkspur with red verbenas and a bowl of salmon polyanthus roses from Mrs. Bert Bean; a tiered container from Mrs. C. E. Beavers containing columbine, nasturtiums, for-get-me-nots, calendula, pink roses, sweet peas, touch-me-nots, snapdragon, coreopsis and larkspur; a great crystal container from Mrs. W. P. Ferguson holding snapdragon, roses, poppies, gladioli, stock, zinnia and larkspur; a bowl of calendula and stock from Mrs. Charles Daniel; tamerisk and poinciana from Mrs. J. C. Mytinger; nasturtiums from Mrs. T. P. Duncan's garden; an amber bowl of daisies from Mrs. Newton Maer; pond lilies from Mrs. Walter Campbell; larkspur from Mrs. William Young; thistles and statis from Mrs. Mytinger; flowering willows, poppies and larkspur, Mrs. Gwynn and a great bowl of callopsis from Mrs. J. F. Bailey.

Officers Presented

Mrs. J. C. Mytinger made a charming talk expressing her appreciation of the cooperation that had been given her in office. She presented her retiring officers and Mrs. C. E. McCutchen gave a clever resume of the work of the year in the report that was presented at the state conference at Mineral Wells. The programs given were outlined and it was announced that the club has 95 active and 70 associate members.

Mrs. Mytinger then presented the new president, Mrs. Peyton Gwynn, urging the continued cooperation of the department for her.

Mrs. Gwynn presented the officers elected with her in March and announced some of her objectives for the coming season.

It was tentatively planned that another informal show of flowers will be held in June and a luncheon following will be purely a get-to-gether affair, with no program.

Covers were laid for Mesdames S. E. Trevathan, T. M. Conrey, Q. B. Lee, J. B. Nall, Homer Lee, Paul Mathers, J. E. H. Railey, C. E. Beavers, C. C. Kirby, Walter K. Campbell, C. J. Barnard, E. R. PEEPS AT PEOPLE

By MRS. L. N. CASON

Somewhere the other day, we read a psychiatrist's warning that mental troubles resulting from the world war and from the period of depression had not nearly reached their peak. We hope it won't encourage any one to take a rest from the game of life. We try to take a firmer grasp on our own mentality as we consider the subject. Having weathered the storms we have already known, why be a quitter?

◇ ◇ ◇

There are so many mental diseases that are not considered disease that mental attitudes are difficult to analyze. While you and I are looking at this and that person and considering him a "nut" (slang serves best), on some subject, he may be regarding us in the same way.

◇ ◇ ◇

We have, personally, only one defense. We are just wise enough to know that we are ignorant on many subjects and the thoughts we advance are merely an expression of our own personal feeling; never intended as a guide for others. Like most women, we get pleasure from talking.

◇ ◇ ◇

Things are so different in this era than B. D. (and we wish to thank the person who coined the new abreviation meaning "before the depression"). But we remember quite well back in 1919, just before the debacle, we personally knew some dozen persons who had to spend a time in retirement, to emerge quite sane and rested again. As it was so in our locality, it must have been so all over the country. Which removes the "depression" as a reason for going what the English call "balmy."

◇ ◇ ◇

We are in no sense a Pollyanna. Pollyannas make us really furious. Optimism of the mouth only is not a pleasant thing. If you have toothache you don't want to be cheered. But we cannot help but feel that in spite of the maze that confronts the world, millions are carrying on as bravely as ever; fighting a brave fight against heavy odds; carrying the years with shoulders back; waiting and working and hoping and trusting.

◇ ◇ ◇

If a woman refused to go on with her housework because it is never finished, home would be a pleasant place. It is not finished; what is done one day must be done again the next. But homes function much more happily when members of the family work together. The same situation confronts us in the national and international situation.

◇ ◇ ◇

We have no remedy to propose. Thanks be, we are wise enough to refrain from that. But it is a time of the year, and of the years, when Americans must think on it. Republicans and Democrats are about to nominate a candidate for president. As usual members of our party have begun to fight among themselves.

◇ ◇ ◇

"The Great Leader" has not been unanimously chosen. We wish that Democrats could be more harmonious. The greatest extremists in the world are within our own ranks. We believe in a government by the people, for the people. There are rabid wets and rabid drys. Mention beer to some people and they immediately begin to talk of the "saloon on every corner." Yet they make beer and may believe in wine. Still, they say, the 18th amendment must be defended. And one plank can split our party.

◇ ◇ ◇

There's a happy medium in every- thing. No matter who shall be president, the great mass of the people have still to learn the lesson of the past decade." It can be learned better if we refuse to be morbid.

◇ ◇ ◇

It has been a hard lesson. We danced on the heights and we fell into the abyss. The whole world was set on each man getting a little more riches than his brother. And yet today, with you, and you—and you—time is moving along in just the same way. Not as much money; but food and shelter. Birth and death remain unchanged. Our next president will not instantly change things. We begin at rock bottom. We must take care whom we put into any office. We must carry on as bravely as England has done, and for ourself, if only we can hold tight, we believe that adjustment will come. "Experience," Ben Franklin said (was it in your copybook also?) is a dear teacher, but fools can learn in no other."

Sodalitan Class Has Interesting Monthly Party

Mrs. T. F. Baker was hostess at her home on Victory Thursday afternoon to members of the Sodalitan class of the First Baptist church who met for their monthly party. The house was pretty with spring flowers in pastel shades.

Mrs. Charles Parker, president of the class, presided during a short business meeting when reports were heard from chairmen and officers.

Mrs. Charles Daniel made a fascinating talk on her recent trip to Honolulu and many points in the orient.

Boiling Water Essential For Making Good Tea

By EMILY POST

I have been asked to give directions for tea making.

The most important item of the tea service is boiling water, meaning that the teakettle must be boiling hard. You then heat the pot by rinsing it with a little boiling water, and pour off into slop jar. Then put a rounded teaspoonful of tea leaves to a cup, pour on a small quantity of actually boiling water. Let it stand about 30 seconds, pour on additional boiling water—and pour at once for those who like it "weak" or let it wait a minute or two for those who like it strong. You are supposed to put the sugar in first and then pour the tea and then add the cream or the lemon.

When the tea has stood until too strong, merely reduce the amount you pour into each cup and fill with boiling water. This tea extract will make good tea if the water added be boiling—and vile tea if the water be merely hot. At the end of 10 to 15 minutes, fresh tea should be made.

Tea can of course be made in the kitchen, but it must be carried into the living room the moment the water has been poured over it, and drunk at once. Never dilute tea with water that is not boiling, if the person you are pouring for cares anything about the flavor of tea. (Personally I don't care at all so long as it is very weak, but for those who do care, and for whom you provide good tea, these directions are essential.)

It is well of course to have a small amount of especially good tea in the house. It will keep for years in any metal airtight container. But it is of greater importance to make it properly than to provide any special brand.

Unless you are inviting people to tea, it is not important what you serve with it. Any cake you have, or thin bread and butter. Don't serve soda crackers, cold and dry. Butter them first and then toast them, if you can. Or keep other varieties of tea crackers or cakes in the house.

Any urgent request to which a personal reply from Mrs. Post is requested must be accompanied by a self-addressed and stamped envelope.

Our Children

Sharing Home

One of the causes of friction between parents and their adolescent children is the refusal of the grown-up people to share home with the children. The father and mother built the home little by little. They wove themselves into every table and chair, every rug and hanging and ornament. They look with almost reverent affection at the piano for which they saved and planned through many months. The dining room set was brought with self sacrifices—concerts, trips, gifts to dear ones, all had to be forgotten if the table and sideboard were to grace the house. Anniversaries and holidays and high days shadowed with days not so high have been knitted into the fabric of home. Then, like a thunderclap from a clear sky, the children for whom all this was done, want to take charge. They claim this home. Whose is it?

That is the question. Whose home is this? You cannot have a home if one member of the family is left out of it. The moment one child or one parent is excluded from the home ownership the spirit which is the home vanishes and all that is left is a skeleton, grizzly enough. There is nothing so forlorn as the house from which home has fled. The whole group must be counted in, father and mother and the most unreasonable of the children as well.

This makes it hard for the parents who have applied themselves to building up the home with never a thought of the day when the children would lay claim to a share in it. They have to adjust themselves to this new idea. The living room must be changed to meet the demands of the dancing group. Father can not sit by the fire and read and smoke as he used to do when the children stayed in the study room during their lessons. He must give place to the group and take his turn in the study room. There is no other way.

Bedtime for the grownups, the tired father and mother, comes early. Not so for the adolescent boys and girls. They want to stay up late. They want to turn on the radio and listen, or drown it out with their own voices. They want to dance and play cards and then have a supper. What's to be done? You'll have to compromise because home must be shared. The children must be met more than half way. This is as trying a period as teething time. You had to rise in the night and stand by again and again. This is another teething time, that's all. You'll have to see it through with as little pain to yourself as possible. Remember this as you grumble and sigh.

The children are getting ready to leave home. Soon the house will be empty. Soon the spirit of home will have to spread its wings to cover a wide area of space and affection. All that will be left of this home you built will be its memories. It is better to make them as cheerful and as happy as you can, for your own sake.

Hard, is it. Didn't you do the same thing? And your father and mother before you? Share home with the children, spread it as far as you can so as to get into the habit of it for soon it will cover a much bigger group and far wider span. What you share you keep is true in this instance if not in all others.

TRUCKS CARRY 'BONUS ARMY'

States to Furnish Rides For Vets' March

WASHINGTON, Ind., May 26. (US)—Convoyed by state police, the "bonus army" of more than 350 world war veterans moved triumphantly on its way across Indiana today in 27 rumbling national guard motor trucks.

Indications were that they would not be held up again as they were in East St. Louis, but that their progress to Washington, D. C., would be speeded up by the authorities of each state through which they are to pass. They intend to petition congress for immediate payment of the cash bonus.

They are expected to reach the Ohio line early tomorrow. There they will be "dumped" by the Indiana authorities on the orders of Gov. Harry G. Leslie. Transportation to hasten their passage through Ohio is expected to be on hand and Gov. William G. Conley of West Virginia was quoted in dispatches today as promising the veterans a "lift" into Pennsylvania.

Twenty-one per cent of the deaf persons in Germany were victims of scarlet fever.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE SIMPSON

WASHINGTON, May 27.—Probably the greatest contrast in the Washington political scene is that between the two national committees, Republican and Democrat.

WALTER F. BROWN

The Democratic machine is always doing something, rallying the party clans as at the Jefferson day show, putting out broadsides of publicity on this or that topic.

Its Republican counterpart, despite the fact that its chairman, Senator Simeon D. Fess, is right here in Washington, is not visibly active at all.

Yet under the surface, there is a powerful current of gossip going on about coming changes in the Republican campaign management staff.

Everybody from Fess down is in agreement that he is but a sort of limited-time parking place for chairmanship honors.

The name of Postmaster General Brown has been mentioned most frequently as Fess' probable successor, although War Secretary Pat Hurley got a good deal of a ride after his oratorical efforts at the winter session of the national committee.

Outside the Family

Today's gossip, however, not as yet reaching the surface of the news authoritatively, indicates that members of the G. O. P. national committee themselves are debating privately the desirability of avoiding any member of the Hoover official family in selecting the man to head the committee during the coming campaign.

And in that connection that stout veteran of committee service from Kansas, David W. Mulvane, is being much talked of.

He has represented his state on the national committee nearly a quarter century all told, although not consecutively.

Whether these suggestions are being relayed to President Hoover, as the almost certain nominee, is not clear. Tradition gives presidential nominees the right to pick their own committee heads.

Points being raised in Mulvane's behalf, however, are that he is a Republican old guardsman highly popular with his national committee colleagues, of vast practical experience and sure to get smooth-working cooperation from the party machine.

In addition, a vexing party situation in Kansas, is brought into the picture.

Trouble in Kansas

It is an aftermath of the election of former Senator Curtis to the vice presidency and the party confusion over his successor that ultimately lost the seat to the Democrats in 1930.

Whispered doubts about Curtis' renomination to renew the Hoover-Curtis ticket, turns on that intra-party friction in Kansas.

The supporters of Mulvane for the post of national chairman, The Bystander has heard, believe it would help materially at election time not in Kansas alone but in the corn belt states generally.

And the importance they attach to measures to repair party fences in that region is exemplified by selection of Senator Dickinson of Iowa as convention keynoter.

'Gossip' Blamed for Story of Accident

OKLAHOMA CITY, May 26. (UP)—Gov. W. H. Murray today characterized as "gossip" reports concerning an auto accident in which chairman Sam R. Hawks of the state highway commission crashed through a barricade at Canute, last week.

Murray said he had ordered Lockwood Jones, Washita county attorney, to report his investigations to Lieut. Gov. Robert Burns and send a copy to him.

Burns ordered Jones to make the investigation, saying he wanted full information on the circumstances surrounding the accident.

All our foreign wars have started in April, but the Democrats hold their conventions in June.

It may be true that few businesses in the United States are running at a profit, but Burgoo King certainly has proved the case otherwise for the horses.

Senator Borah says the gold dollar is no longer an honest one. Maybe that's why it's in hiding.

A Lesson From 1929

ALMOST every day something happens to give us a clearer vision of the sort of civilization that we had in this country before the 1929 crash.

Most recent were the tales about easy money in Wall street, told to the senate committee in Washington by a series of witnesses.

These stories make a strange, rather surprising picture.

The Raskob pool, it seems, cleaned up $5,000,000 in a week. A group of other traders organized by a free-lance put through an operation that netted the free-lance a million in five weeks, although he had not put up any of his own money. Another company whose stock was being manipulated by a big pool managed to pay out dividends of $1,500,000 on net profits of $1,000,000.

And so it went. High finance seems to have been just a little bit higher, in those gay days, than most of us ever realized. Now that it is too late, we are learning things.

We are learning, for instance, that our famous prosperity had a hectic, unhealthy tinge to it. It was too turbulent, too febrile; it made us lose sight of the fact that what goes up is apt to come down, sooner or later—with a bang.

It will be a good thing if we can keep all of that in mind. For we are very apt, these days, to long wistfully for a return of the bright days of 1928 to 1929, to look back on the prosperity of those years as something to which we must return just as soon as we have found out how to clamber out of this depression; and the days of easy money are not, really, worth returning to.

For those days paved the way for these days in which we are suffering now. The time when a group of clever market manipulators could knock off $5,000,000 in a week, the time when a trader could clear a million without investing a cent of his own, were directly responsible for the time of 8,000,000 unemployed.

When we look ahead to prosperity, let's look ahead to a saner kind; a kind that won't strew as much easy money about Wall street, but that will be a little bit more enduring.

A Good Idea?

CONGRESSMAN MAAS of Minnesota seems to have popped to the surface with a very bright idea.

He has proposed that the office of postmaster be abolished in all cities where postal receipts run over $18,00 a year. In that way, he says, the government will save no less than $10,000,000 a year.

He explains his proposal as follows:

First class postmasters, and many second class postmasters as well, he says, are almost all political campaign workers. They get their jobs because they have served the dominant party. The actual work of running their offices is done by an assistant postmaster or superintendent of mails, who is a civil service employe.

Consequently, Mr. Maas suggests that the postmasters be dispensed with. The postoffices would be run just as they are run now, and the taxpayers would be relieved of the necessity of rewarding faithful political hacks.

It sounds like a pretty fair sort of idea.

Let's Face the Facts

FROM the welfare council of New York comes word that for the first time in history, the family welfare societies of that city are being compelled by lack of funds to turn away destitute families that are coming to them for help. Some of these societies have been on the job for more than 50 years.

This bit of news, of course, is not repeated with the idea of disseminating pessimism. The country has quite enough of that already. But the fact is worth looking at, for it indicates that private charity has—in some localities—already extended itself to the very limit without being able to do all the work that there is for it to do.

Considering this fact, and considering also the fact that New York's problem is not much different from the problems of other cities, one is impelled to wonder if the federal treasury will not eventually have to be tapped in the battle with unemployment and poverty.

SO THEY SAY!

We should look to the future and profit by mistakes of the past. History shows that we have been through trying times before.—Dudley S. Humphrey, 80-year-old popcorn king, Cleveland.

◆ ◆ ◆

We have been stripped of many material things, but the best remain—love, the pursuit of truth, home, friends, sympathy, beauty of nature.—Dr. Frank S. C. Wicks, Unitarian minister, Indianapolis.

◆ ◆ ◆

We are confessedly the most lawless educated nation in the world, with gangs of criminals, racketeers and gunmen roaming our streets, seemingly more powerful than the police.—A. Caswell Ellis, director of Cleveland college, Western Reserve university.

◆ ◆ ◆

It is inconceivable that either Smith or Roosevelt groups in California would consider an alliance with the McAdoo contingent, which is bone dry.—James D. Meredith, California Roosevelt leader.

It would be a better idea to wipe out crime than to wipe out crime pictures.—Ernst Lubitsch, movie director.

(During illness of Mr. Winchell this column is being conducted by Paul Yawitz)

Things That Go Over Nobody's Head

(Unless you're buried 6 feet deep)

That there are more inmates of insane asiyums in New York state than in any 16 other states combined. (Well, there are more columnists in New York than in any 16 other states, too).

That when a hippopotamus is excited he exudes blood through the pores of his skin. (But when you see blood in a hippopotamus' eye, don't make the mistake of thinking he's just having a little sweat).

That Schopenhauer, the German philosopher, never paid a bill that had his name spelled incorrectly. (Well, I'm going to be different and refuse to pay those that spell mine correctly).

That an ancient custom in Morocco compelled the bridegroom to throw a raw egg at his bride. (And I know negligent husbands who have thrown their brides at bad eggs).

That a cockroach has 3,000 teeth. (And never heard of Amos 'n' Andy).

That Nero considered himself the greatest poet of all time and had the death sentence passed on all contemporary poets who challenged him.

That hydrophobia is not caused by canine saliva, as is commonly believed, but by phlegm contained in the bronchial tubes of the animal. (So if you're dying of hydrophobia, that's the reason).

That George M. Cohan thinks it unlucky to write his manuscripts on anything but yellow paper. (But when it comes to flags, he favors red, white and blue).

That when crows are feeding they always place a sentinel on look-out duty.

That there is three cents' worth of gold in every ton of water. (Proving that there's gold in them thar gills).

That if you get caught in quicksand, you can save yourself by lying flat on your back and rolling to the edge. (Did you ever try it? —Ed).

That in many states embalmers are not permitted to serve on juries. (They might be too anxious).

That Oscar Wilde was considered the greatest dandy of his day despite the fact that he seldom bathed. (Well, who doesn't slip up on a Saturday every now and then?) You may, but I don't.—Ed.

That the chemical value of the human body has dropped from 97 cents in 1929 to 59 cents today. (But I still know a lot of guys who aren't worth 30 cents).

That the reason the Olympic games were never held in the United States before was the refusal of foreign nations to finance the long trips.

That elephants weep the same as human beings when they are unhappy.

That the fashion in the time of Sir Walter Raleigh was to cut dainty holes in coat sleeves so your friends could see your pretty underwear. (Today the fellow with holes in his coat sleeve gets a preferred place in the bread line).

That thin people really suffer more from the heat than stout people. (That stout people suffer mostly from the thin people).

That the first use made of gunpowder in England was to blow criminals to death through the mouth of a cannon. (They later made it into lollipops for naughty children).

That a bushel of timothy contains 55,000,000 seeds. (I counted them myself so as to make certain you'd get the right information). So that's your excuse for being away last week?—Ed.

That dragon flies can fly both forward and backward without turning.

That due to heat expansion, the Eiffel Tower is 7½ inches taller in summer than in winter. (Could it be the heat that makes my head larger in the hot weather). No alibis, please.—Ed.

That the portraits of living people are never used in engravings on bank notes. (Well, there are plenty of statesmen today whose pictures could be used without violating the tradition).

The best eating oysters are three years old. (And some restaurateurs have the same idea about chickens).

That in 1847 it was legal to bisect a 10-cent United States stamp and use half for 5-cent purposes.

That in Spain, Christmas gifts are only given to servants. (And over here even the servants will not get them this year).

Vital statistics show that clergymen, as a class, live the longest. And that the wives of clergymen live longer than any other group of women.

That money in the South Sea Islands is made from porpoise teeth. (There must be a gag about money talking somewhere in this line). Well, find it!—Ed.

That Thomajan is the authority for the statement that an egg wrapped in cellophane will remain fresh for years.

That Tartars put steak under their saddles and bump against it for 24 hours before they consider it palatable. (What, no tartar sauce?)

Chinese Postal Strike Settled by Agreement

SHANGHAI, May 26. (INS)—An agreement between postal workers and the national postoffice was signed this morning. It was expected to bring to an early end the nationwide strike which has paralyzed communications in six leading cities for the past few days.

The workers walked out protesting extremely low wages, charging the postoffice had squandered funds on projects outside the postal service.

BELIEVE IT OR NOT - - - - - By Robert L. Ripley

EXPLANATION OF YESTERDAY'S CARTOON

THE 8-YEAR-OLD MOTHER—Chinese marriages are not a matter of personal preference or choice, but are usually arranged by go-betweens between the prospective parents. It is even possible to arrange a marriage of children before they are born, and after they are dead. Child marriages are not unusual, but I was astounded during my stay in Canton, China, this spring to hear of a tiny Cantonese girl who was a mother at the age of 8.

THE BALUTE EGGS OF THE PHILIPPINES—In the native markets of the Philippines "balutes" are distinguished from fresh eggs by their bright and varied coloring, presenting an appearance like American Easter eggs. My queries regarding them resulted in a demonstration of how they are prepared. The egg is prepared just before it is ready to hatch, and the contents eaten wholly. My own attempt to eat one was not entirely successful, though they are regarded as a great delicacy by the Filipinos.

TOMORROW—The Winged frog.

Q.—Is it true that it rains inside the Goodyear Zeppelin dock at Akron when it is clear outside?—F. E.

Q.—By whom was the warrant for the arrest of Al Capone issued and signed?—H. L.

A.—George E. P. Johnson, United States district attorney, says that there was no warrant for arrest on complaint in the Capone case. Indictments were returned and bench warrants issued on the indictments.

Q.—How are bets made on the races at New York tracks where they do not have the pari-mutuels? —H. B.

A.—The betting system at New York tracks is known as oral betting. In order to place a bet, the bettor must have established credit with the bookmaker, or be introduced by some one who vouches for him. The bookmaker quotes the odds orally and the bettor makes a memorandum of his bet. Some of the bets are settled immediately after the race; others are settled by check the following day. It is said that the losses from welshing are insignificant in the aggregate.

Q.—Does a sculptor actually cut a marble statue himself?—C. R. H.

A.—A sculptor executes a model; an artisan called a stone-cutter is usually the one to reproduce this model in marble. Except for a few finishing touches, the sculptor does not touch the marble reproduction of his model. For example, the stone-cutters who are famous as the Piccirilli brothers actually carved the figure of Lincoln by Daniel Chester French, which is in the Lincoln memorial. It is true that certain of these brothers are so fine that they are above the artisan class and are among the well known sculptors of the modern American school.

Q.—Was the president of the Irish Free State born in Ireland? —F. C.

A.—The present president of the council of the Irish Free State is Eamon de Valera. He was born in the United States of Irish mother and Spanish father. His father died when he was 2 years old. De Valera was taken to Ireland and brought up by his mother's people.

Q.—How did it come about that the London Times was called the Thunderer?—E. O.

A.—It was so facetiously spoken of in the middle of the 19th century in allusion to an article by one of its editors, Edward Sterling, which began, "We thundered forth the other day."

Q.—Why are units of the Typographical Union called chapels?— K. B. M.

A.—In England the word, chapel, was applied to a printing office, also to a meeting or association of journeymen of a printing office, for promoting and enforcing order among themselves and for settling disputes. These meetings were presided over by a "father of the chapel." The term is said to have originated in the fact that printing was first carried on in England by Caxton in a chapel attached to or near Westminster abbey. It was customary at that time to do the work of printing in chapels attached to abbeys. R. Holme, in 1688, says, "Every printing house is termed a chappel."

NO MONOPOLY

Despite misleading claims to the contrary, the public knows that there is no monopoly on genuine, pure aspirin. St. Joseph's Aspirin is genuine aspirin, as pure as money, any amount of money, can buy. Its economical price of 10c for 12 tablets proves conclusively that it is neither economical nor necessary to pay more for the precaution of safety and effectiveness. In addition, St. Joseph's Genuine Pure Aspirin is wrapped in moisture-proof cellophane to preserve the purity and full strength of each tablet. Be safe, be sensible and always ask for the original, genuine, pure cellophane-wrapped aspirin, the largest selling aspirin in the world for 10c —St. Joseph's. Why pay more?

GARNER DENIES HAT IN RING

Texan Has No Intention Of Seeking Presidency

WASHINGTON, May 26. (AP)—Speaker Garner still has no intention of throwing his hat into the presidential ring and is on record as hoping for a Democratic national convention "harmonious in every respect."

In three brief letters to Joseph H. Leib, of South Bend, Ind., all written since the Garner victory in the California primary, Mr. Garner has repeated his previous declarations, but has added no further statement respecting his candidacy.

Attending to Duty

As given to the Associated Press by Mr. Leib, these letters say:

On May 7: "I am, of course, aware of the movement that has been inaugurated by my friends in Texas and elsewhere, but I have no connection therewith. The duties and responsibilities of the speakership require all my time and thought, and I would be doing an injustice to the country and myself if I permitted anything to distract my attention from these duties."

On May 12: "I am taking no part in any preconvention campaigns and, like yourself, I am very hopeful that the convention will be harmonious in every respect."

On May 17: "I have no intention of throwing my hat into the ring," followed by a reiteration that he is giving his entire time and thought to the duties of the speakership.

School Faculty At Archer City Elected

Special to The Record News

ARCHER CITY, Texas, May 26.—The board of the Archer City independent school district has re-elected Supt. Harry V. Pearston and a full staff of teachers. Teachers elected represent the faculty of the 1931-32 term, with the exception of instructors for the sixth and seventh grades.

A number of married women employed last year were protested in a recently filed petition. Married women re-elected to the faculty include Mrs. O. M. Wylie, Mrs. Dink Hull, Mrs. G. R. McNeil and Mrs. Charles C. Hooper.

The petition seeking to remove married women from employment by the school contained 100 names, but on investigation it was found that only a small number of the petitioners were patrons of the schools. A number of the latter, it was said, subsequently claimed they had signed without giving the matter due consideration.

'Fired' Carpenter's Case Comes Under Inquiry

OKLAHOMA CITY, May 26. (UP)—Chairman W. C. Hughes of the state board of affairs said today he would investigate complaints of Albert Whitten, former head carpenter at the state hospital at Supply, that he was "illegally" discharged.

Whitten wrote Hughes and Gov. W. H. Murray, complaining he was removed without notice and without an apparent reason. He made accusations of alleged conditions at the hospital.

Hughes said he would investigate anything that warranted an inquiry, or anything "that has not already been investigated."

NOWLIN'S BRILLIANT VICTORY PUTS MORELAND IN SHADE

The Rambler's Corner

By FRED THOMPSON

Awarded Letters

A number of Northwest Texans earned varsity and freshman letters in athletics at Texas university the past season. The list includes Hubert Dennis of Memphis and Wallace Myers of Jacksboro, both of whom got varsity letters in baseball; B. W. Spearman of Jermyn, varsity letter men in track; and Olen Gaskin, awarded a freshman letter in baseball.

Speaking of college baseball, Lefty Grove, Connie Mack's ace southpaw, sat himself down behind the usual black cigar the other day and emitted something besides smoke. He said the college diamond is the principal source of professional pitchers these days, since the sandlots, in general, have all but disappeared.

Going on further, he said the college products were not good fastball pitchers, such as the standlots develops, and predicted that in a few years a good fastball heaver would be hard to find.

Grove himself is a sandlot graduate and it goes without saying he is one of the greatest fastball pitchers of all time.

The college graduates, he said, rely more on the curve ball than the steaming fast one.

Tom Conlan happens to be an exception. He is a college graduate, but he can mix a snappy fastball with his curves.

Homeless

The erstwhile Malone Beauty shop team of the Commercial league will continue to function, at least temporarily, it was announced yesterday. The beauty shop discontinued its sponsorship of the club Wednesday. Under a new name the club will try to finish out the first half. Meanwhile its members are seeking a new sponsor. Individuals or business houses interested in sponsoring this team should get in touch with Joe Deal, in care of the Times Publishing company.

The costs of sponsoring an amateur club are nominal and the benefits many. For one thing, the sponsor can pride himself with assisting the amateurs of his city.

The team is runner-up to the league-leading Noble-Little nine.

I Need One Too

Speaking of sponsors, I'd like to have one myself, or maybe two or three. I'm an amateur myself, an amateur horn blower. Now there's a piece of music I like. It's supposed to be played by seven instruments. It's what the long-haired boys call a Septet. I can blow the horn, that's one instrument. But I need a violin, a viola, a cello, a string bass, a clarinet and a bassoon.

I think I can find musicians able to play, or play at, all of the instruments except a bassoon. I'd appreciate it if my pals would question all people who look a little queer, unshaven, down-at-the-mouth and wearing a bow tie, and ask 'em if they are bassoon players. If you find one have him arrested immediately. I'll bail him out and then we'll have some music.

We'll play the Septet as the opening number of our baseball tournament.

And of course, have Bill Huff throw the first ball—at the conductor's head.

The Cisco Case

Something daffy is always going on in the Oil Belt football district of the Texas Interscholastic league, and now Cisco takes the cake by dragging their suspension from the league to a district court.

Cisco was found guilty of using an ineligible player by both the Oil Belt district committee and the league's executive committee.

It is hard to see how a district judge can improve on the decision of these committeemen, who if not versed in football are at least in constant touch with it, and with the rules of the league.

Of course the judge may know something about football. He may have lettered at dear old Humperdink in '98, or thereabouts. But calling on any court to settle a question that has already been settled by the highest league authorities sounds foolish.

To top it off, Cisco asks for "damages." Seems like the other teams in the district ought to be asking for that.

DALLAS YOUTH WINS IN RALLY

Bulldog Finish Ranks Him As Tourney Favorite

By BILL PARKER

TEXARKANA, Ark., May 26. (AP)—Twenty-four matches were played today in the championship flight of the Texas Golf association's state tournament, but it remained for young Louis Nowlin of Dallas to stage a bulldog finish in his second round match and steal the thunder of the day.

This in spite of the fact that the brilliance of Gus Moreland, defending champion and tournament medalist from Dallas, carried him through two easy victories with the loss of but one hole.

Nowlin, whose 36-hole par 146 was only good enough to finish second to Moreland in the medalist round, almost faded from the tournament today when he was two down and three to go against Al Barbee of Waco. But Nowlin shot one under par the next three holes to win the trio and remain in the tournament with a one up victory.

It was one of the greatest comebacks of the day, and immediately made Nowlin a favorite in the lower bracket along with Charles Dexter of Dallas, former state champion.

Wins Morning Match

In his morning match Nowlin had to shoot par golf to eliminate Dudley Golding of Dallas, 3 and 1, after being square at the turn.

As for Moreland, he was in top form, rarely missing a shot. In the 27 holes he played today, eliminating two redoubtable opponents, he allowed them to win only one hole. In his morning match Gus eliminated Neil Smith of Dallas, 6 and 5. In the afternoon round he came back to defeat William Clark of Texarkana, 5 and 4.

Byron Nelson of Fort Worth turned in a sensational round of golf this afternoon to beat L. Franks of Dallas, 4 and 3. Nelson started with a five on the first hole, one over par. He settled down and was never over fours thereafter. He took a birdie on every par five the rest of the way.

In his morning match Nelson won from George Rotan of Houston, former state champion, 2 and 1.

Nelson Meets Smith

Tomorrow Nelson meets Reynolds Smith of Dallas, runner up last year. Smith defeated Leland Hamman of Paris today, one up, in a 19-hole match. Smith reached the turn three down, but his game improved coming in. In his afternoon round Smith breezed his way to victory over Robert Hawley of Texarkana, 7 and 6.

Charles Dexter of Dallas came through his rounds today in fine style, defeating Arthur Temple, 4 and 3, in the morning and beating Johnny Ayon of Dallas, 2 and 1, in the afternoon.

Leonard Atwell, after taking his first match from Joe Wilkes by default, came through this afternoon with a one up victory over John Falconer of Dallas. Falconer, a former Dallas Country club champion and Southern Methodist university Southwest conference star, had been favored to win. His defeat came as the only big upset of the day.

Today's Pairings

Quarterfinals and semifinals will be played tomorrow. Pairings in the title brackets follow:

Upper Bracket

Gus Moreland, Dallas, vs. Leonard Atwell, Marshall.

Byron Nelson, Fort Worth, vs. Reynolds Smith, Dallas.

Lower Bracket

Louis Nowlin, Dallas, vs. Charles Campbell, Tyler.

W. R. Long, Austin, vs. Charles Dexter, Dallas.

HOUSTON SELECTED FOR 1933 TOURNEY

TEXARKANA, Ark., May 26. (AP)—The 1933 Texas Golf association state championship tournament will be held at Houston. This announcement was made here today by Charles L. Dexter of Dallas, official of the association.

George V. Rotan of Houston, former state champion, was elected president.

Mickey Walker Barely Edges Out 10-Round Decision Over Uzcudun

NEW YORK, May 26. (AP)—The title hopes of Mickey Walker, as tough a little man as ever tackled a big one, all but smashed up tonight on that old rock of the Pyrenees, Paulino Uzcudun.

Mickey barely lasted through to the decision in 10 mauling rounds, but he walked from the ring after the decision with a crowd of 8,000 howling for the granite-headed Spaniard and booing him.

Off to a slow, even start, Walker tired after the third round, let Paulino pull up on even terms through the seventh and then went out to start a winning splurge with a punch that turned the crowd against him. After winning the eighth round with a swinging, two-fisted attack, Mickey kept on going after the bell.

The Spaniard started it, perhaps, by hitting Walker with a left hook to the body just after the gong sounded, but he dropped his hands and stepped back. As he did, while Referee Willie Lewis started in to separate them, Mickey swung a right from his heels, and split the Basque's left eyebrow in a semicircle.

A clear cut victory would have lifted Walker into a match with Ernie Schaaf, Boston sailor, for the right to challenge next for the heavyweight title. It is expected now, however, that Walker and Paulino will be re-matched during the outdoor season.

CYCLONE FOX MEETS KUFFER

Dallas Fireman to Make Second Mat Appearance

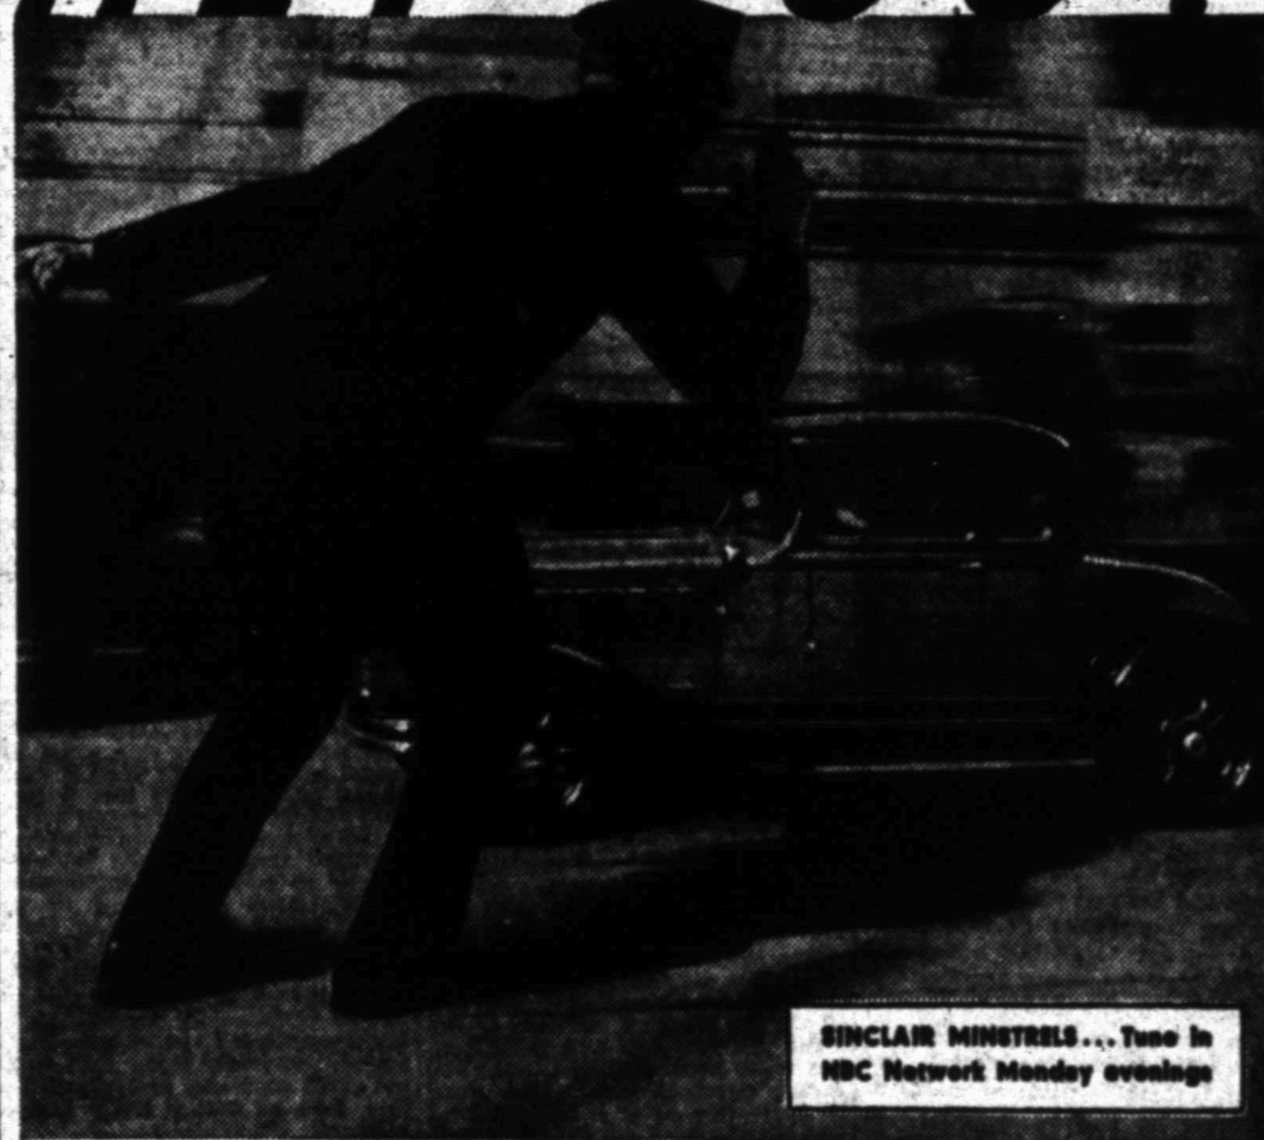

Cyclone Fox, the Dallas fireman, will make his second appearance in Wichita Falls tonight when he meets Fred Kuffer on the main event of Promoter Whitey Govro's weekly mat entertainment. Fox last week conquered Dude Chick, and installed himself as a great favorite here. Kuffer hails from Portland, Ore., and made his first appearance with Kid Murdock here a couple of weeks ago.

Chief War Eagle, full-blooded Pennsylvania Indian will make his initial bow before local fans when he takes on Billy Burns, of Springfield, Mo., on the semifinal. Both have great records behind them and a good battle is being expected. Burns has wrestled here twice, losing to Frenchy LaRue and holding Govro to a draw. There will also be preliminary match added to the card.

"BRING 'EM BACK ALIVE"

By FRANK BUCK with EDWARD ANTHONY

TO BEGIN WITH . . .

It might be well to state at the outset that my aim is not to write a book that will add one more volume to the world's collection of natural histories or the existing treatises on the habits of wild animals. Whatever I have to say about the peculiarities of different species is incidental to my adventures in the field of collecting.

For 18 exciting years I have been gathering live animals, reptiles and birds for the zoos, the circuses and the dealers. I have brought back to America thousands of specimens. A great many of these were collected for the New York Zoological park, the Philadelphia Zoological gardens, the Dallas zoo, the San Diego Zoological park, the Milwaukee zoo and the smaller zoos located in Memphis, Kansas City, San Antonio, Minneapolis and other cities. Many others were absorbed by the Ringling Bros.-Barnum & Bailey circus, the Al G. Barnes Wild Animal show, the Sells-Floto circus, the Christy Brothers circus, the Hagenbeck-Wallace circus and other similar organizations. A good percentage of these specimens were sold direct to the zoo authorities and circus owners, the rest through dealers.

I have had more than my share of thrills, including narrow escapes. Yet I am frank to say that these close calls do not represent a love of looking death in the eye. I am not that kind of adventurer. I take no unnecessary risks. When a man operates on as big a scale as I do he doesn't have to look for trouble. No matter how careful one is, something is bound to go wrong when live animals and reptiles are handled wholesale. It is then that experience counts.

When I listed all the specimens with which I've returned to America since I started bringing 'em back alive I found myself wondering that I hadn't had more anxious moments. There were plenty, as I have indicated, but on the whole I consider myself lucky. So many live creatures, if they had tried real hard, could have made much more trouble for me.

Here's the list: 39 elephants; 60 tigers (Royal Bengal, Malayan and Manchurian); 28 spotted leopards; 20 black leopards; 10 clouded leopards; 4 Himalayan snow leopards; 20 hyenas; 32 orang-utans; 31 gibbon apes (white-handed, silvery, agile, Hoolock's and siamang); over 5,000 monkeys of different varieties; 20 tapirs; 120 Asiatic antelope and deer, including black buck, nilgai antelope, Indian gazelle, axis deer, barking deer, hog deer, sambor, etc.; 9 anoas or pigmy water buffalo; 1 sladang or Malayan gaur; 1 babirussa (rarest of wild swine); 2 African cape buffalo; 18 African antelope, including sable, waterbuck and the rare white oryx of the Sudan; 2 giraffes; 40 wild goats and sheep, including Markhor goats, Barbary sheep, Malayan serow and Punjab sheep; 11 camels; 40 kangaroos and wallobies; 2 Indian rhinoceros (the rarest and most valuable wild animals in America as this is written); 40 bears, including Malayan honey bears, Himalayan black bears and Indian sloth bears; 90 large pythons (over 20 feet in length); 1 king cobra (largest ever captured alive); over 100 small snakes, including half-grown pythons, cobras, vipers and other varieties; 5 giant monitor lizards; 15 crocodiles; over 500 small mammals of different species, including civet cats, Asiatic squirrels, binturongs, wild hogs, musangs, porcupines, marble cats, ant-eaters, etc.; over 100,000 birds, ranging all the way from the big ostrich-like cassowaries of the Panpan islands down to Australian finches as small as humming birds, and including cockatoos, parrots, birds of Paradise, swans, cranes, peafowl, Himalayan song-thrushes, and such rare pheasants as the Impeyan, argus, tragophan, blood fireback, Bulwar's and Prince of Wales.

There are scientists who have never left the great centers of civilization whose categorical knowledge of animals, reptiles and birds, based on years of delving into all the available records dealing with origin and other phases, exceeds my own. I know a man on the staff of a great museum who by the hour can trace back for centuries the feathered ancestors of birds that I have collected by the thousands for the American pet-shop market and the ancient forefathers of wild animals I have brought back by the score for the zoos and circuses. This man is an authority even though he has never left the United States. He is primarily a student.

I am a student too but in a different way. I have had to make a study of such hard-boiled details of the collecting business as the best way to get a snarling tiger out of a pit into a cage without getting messed up in the process, how to transfer a murderous king cobra from a crude native container to a modern snake box, how to—

But perhaps I'd better launch my story.

CHAPTER I

Tapir On a Rampage

Almost any animal is dangerous when aroused. In 1926 I came close to being killed by a tapir, the meekest of animals.

I was in Sumatra assembling a group of specimens that included some pythons, Sumatra hornbills, langur monkeys, civet cats, porcupines, a siamang gibbon and a tapir.

Normally it would have been safe to bet that the pythons would make more trouble for me than the rest of this collection put together. But this was not a normal situation. It was the tapir that won the trouble sweepstakes, breezing in with several lengths to spare.

The experience proved to me all over again how foolish it is to generalize about animals. I've seen two tigers, for instance, animals of the same sex and age and caught at the same time, display utterly different characteristics. One grew so tame that after a few weeks I was putting my hand inside its cage and stroking the back of its neck; the other became more and more vicious, until the process of feeding it involved real danger and required absolute caution.

It isn't much less intelligent to generalize about animals than it is to generalize about people. It's about as sensible to say, "Elephants are kind," or "elephants are mean," or "tapirs can be trusted," or "tapirs can't be trusted," as it is to say flatly that all human being are noble, or the opposite of that proposition. One finds almost as much variety in animal character as one does in human character.

Of course, there are certain basic things that are true of animals just as there are certain fundamentals that apply to most people but this does not alter the fact that the minute a man starts generalizing about animals he displays his inexperience. Perhaps the nearest one can come to a generalization is to say that most animals are dangerous when they think they're in danger. And, after all, that is less a generalization about animals than it is a basic fact of life, involving human beings and the animal kingdom both.

The tiger that strikes at the man who is feeding him through the bars has decided that this man is an enemy with designs on his life; the gentler tiger has something in his make-up that resigns him to his captivity and tells him he has nothing to fear from the two-legged creature who is looking after him. Eventually the rougher specimen, when he discovers that his keeper is not some one he will one day have to fight for his life, tones down too and becomes manageable.

Of all the animals in the Malayan jungle the tapir is probably the least dangerous. He is much less formidable, for instance than the wild boar which has tusks that are capable of ripping open an unwary enemy in a fight.

The tapir in addition to having no tusks is also clawless. Each front foot has four hoof-like toes, each back foot three; and these are hardly weapons. He has big powerful teeth but since he is known to be a vegeterian these are feared by neither man nor beast. One is about as conscious of them as one is of the teeth, however capable, of the average horse, cow or deer.

The tapir is a strange creature, in a class by itself. It is the only animal on earth today that has come down the ages in its present form. Evolution has left it untouched. It was as it is today thousands and thousands of years ago when the camel was no bigger than a greyhound and the horse was a four-toed animal the size of a fox terrier. It has always been to my mind such a placid symbol of age and tradition, so perfect an embodiment of the quiet mellowness of the years, that I could have as easily imagined myself being suddenly attacked by the sphinx as by a tapir.

I couldn't have given less thought to the troublesome possibilities of my specimen if he had been a packrabbit. The only thing that made me at all conscious of him was the fact that he had a badly barked back.

He was a full grown Malayan tapir, weighing about 600 pounds. I had secured him to fill an order from an animal dealer in Kansas City who supplies the zoos of the smaller cities. It hardly pays me to round up the scattering orders of the very small zoos and such transactions are usually made through a dealer.

For the full length of the back, along the spine, the skin of this animal was badly barked. He had walked into a trap that was a log-fenced enclosure with a gate that snapped to. (The inside of the trap and the approach to it had been baited with tapioca root, a favorite delicacy of the tapir tribe.) In his frantic efforts to escape he had plunged about blindly and succeeded in scraping whole patches of skin off his spine.

In terms of my business this meant that I had to do a job of healing on that back, for after all, I had an order for an animal with a whole skin. I wanted to apply some ointment when I first noticed the animal's condition in Sumatra but the conditions were not favorable there nor on the little Dutch boat on which I brought my collection back to Singapore.

On the outskirts of Singapore is the small town of Katong where I maintained a compound. There I instructed Dahlam Ali, the Malay who served me on expeditions in and around the Malayan district—(just as Lal Bahudar assisted me on collecting trips where a knowledge of Hindustani and Hindus was essential)—to build a small pen for the tapir. He and another boy in my employ built one about 20 feet square. They drove posts into the ground and with two-by-four planks built an enclosure about five feet high, a height which the animal could not jump. When three sides were up I drove the animal in from his cramped native cage, and with Ali hastily nailed up the opening while the other boy kept our captive cornered with a pole. Never had I seen a more harmless looking tapir. It seemed as I regarded him that it had been wholly unnecessary to keep him cornered while we nailed him in. He was completely absorbed in the business of contorting himself so that he could scratch his irritated back, which was itching, against the planks of the enclosure.

No gate was made in the pen as this seemed unnecessary labor. The spaces between the planks (through which the animal was fed) provided a good foot-hold and it was a simple matter to climb over. I did so, as casually as if I were entering a cow pasture. In my hand I carried a pound can of zinc ointment.

Ali was with the other boy feeding a great collection of birds which I had stored in a shelter 200 feet away, a collection that included a big cage of hill minas. These are coal black chattering birds with yellow wattles, some members of the species possessing the doubtful gift of gab even to a greater extent than parrots.

I scooped up a handful of the ointment, and, walking over to where this member of the animal kingdom's oldest family was scratching himself against a plank, slapped it over his back with as much detachment as if I were a bricklayer slapping some mortar on a brick. Bricks aren't very dangerous (unless heaved at one) and neither are tapirs . . . unless . . .

As I slapped that fistful of ointment over the tapir's spine he started running, I following as best I could, with my hand over his back like a bareback rider preparing to leap aboard his charger. Suddenly the animal whirled around, dropped back a few feet and charged straight at me, burying his head in my stomach and knocking the wind out of me as his 600 pounds sent me sprawling on my back. I had hardly hit the ground when the meekest of animals jumped on me, his front feet bearing down on my chest, his hind feet on the ground.

I started swinging over on one side in an effort to get up. This inspired the jungle's greatest example of humility to hoist his hind legs over my lower end, in the process dealing me a painful and weakening blow in a delicate region. It was a palpable foul but as there was no referee present this pacifist proceeded to stomp up and down all over me, bruising me in a dozen places.

I didn't exactly enjoy what was happening to me but neither did I become alarmed until the animal's 600 pounds began to feel like a ton. It's hard to take a tapir seriously until something happens that forces you to do so. In all my previous dealings with the species it had lived up to its reputation for harmlessness, so it took me a few minutes to get it through my head that this tapir was more than nettled; that the infuriated creature had murder in his heart.

It's hard to figure out what happened inside that animal's sluggish brain when I applied that first big daub of ointment. The salve doubtless caused some irritation but this hardly could have been enough to convince the beast that he was in the presence of an enemy . . .

The tapir had me painfully pinned down. I could feel his breath on my face. Not a sound came from him, except his heavy breathing. His eyes had a look that made my flesh creep. I had never seen such hate in a tapir's expression.

My first attempts to whirl around and free myself having failed, I poised myself for a great effort into which I put every ounce of strength I had. In swinging around I succeeded in partly freeing one shoulder, but this accomplished nothing, for the enraged beast pounded me flat again, moving up a few inches closer to my head in the process.

And then I had a moment of horror. Opening his big mouth, the animal bared his powerful teeth and reached to get hold of my face. It didn't take much computing to see that that awful mouth was capable of taking in the width of my head. Once he got my face between those jaws it would be an easy matter to pull the flesh off.

As I looked straight down the throat of this panting brute, I realized my danger and the next thing I knew I was yelling—yelling for all I was worth. I'm not ashamed to admit it. I had no desire to have the meat ripped off my face by this vegetarian on a rampage.

With all the lung power I could summon I fairly shrieked, "Ali! Ali!"—at the same time freeing one leg by a tremendous effort. As the animal strained forward, his teeth coming nearer and nearer, I got my right knee under his lower jaw and reaching up, got hold of both his ears with my hands. He started furiously swinging his head right and left in an effort to shake me off but I held on for dear life, my knee keeping his teeth and my face apart.

And then the demented creature started dragging me all over the enclosure, jumping off me to make it easier for him to take me for a ride. Every time I made an effort to get up he'd pound me flat against the turf with his front feet.

"Ali! Ali!" I yelled myself hoarse. Why didn't he come running over? Where the hell was he? . . . And then I answered my own question. I had sent Ali to care for my birds. He was in the bird shelter, looking after them. . . . With a sudden vehemence, I found myself cursing my collection of hill minas. These boisterous birds—(all other birds seem quiet by comparison)—were probably chattering away at such a rate that it was impossible for Ali to hear my cries.

I felt the power going out of my fingers and in desperation I strove to tighten my hold on the crazed creature's ears. And, with one of those unnatural bursts of strength that come when destruction is staring one out of countenance, I stiffened my knee against the tapir's chin. With renewed fury he started dragging me all around the lot, adding new lacerations to my sore and battered body.

"Ali! Ali! Ali!" I put everything I had into this final cry.

I was beginning to wonder how long I could hang on. My back was aching as it had never ached in all my days, and my chest was sore from the pounding of those hoofs. I would have to scramble to my feet somehow and get over that fence. Having survived encounters with tigers and leopards I had no intention of being wiped out by a damned tapir, an animal that had always seemed to me a sort of giant cockroach, with as much spirit and personality, under normal circumstances, as that loathsome bug.

My weakening fingers clutched the tapir's ears in a final frenzy of self-preservation and my knee, doing its best to seem a firm and determined knee, managed to maintain its wobbly intercession between me and the teeth of the four-legged lunatic that was trying to destroy me as Ali at last came running up, excitedly shouting, "Apa ini, tuan? Apa ini?" (What is this, master?)

It wasn't necessary for me to answer Ali's question. Screaming for the other boy to come over and help him, he grabbed a board—one of the pieces of lumber left over after the pen had been built—and started beating the animal over the head with it. The other boy, who was at the far end of the compound, finally heard his screams and came tearing over.

With even more presence of mind than Ali—(a real surprise to me, for over a period of years Ali had displayed more resourcefulness in emergencies than any native I had ever employed anywhere in Asia)—the newcomer grabbed a two-by-four scantling and shoved it into the open mouth of the would-be killer, the animal biting down on it. The surest way of saving my features was to put something besides my wornout knee between me and those vicious teeth, and the scantling did the trick.

The animal, one piece of lumber between his teeth and another being brought down on his head, backed away a few paces. As he did, Ali reached through the fence and grabbed my arm, pulling me further away from the maddened creature. At this point the other boy jumped over the fence, and, while Ali beat the animal off with his board, lifted me to my feet. Almost falling against it in my weakened condition, I grabbed the top of the fence, putting one foot in an open space between the boards about a foot from the ground. Then this boy who served as Ali's assistant—(although in this stirring operation he was really the leader and Ali the assistant)—gave me a great boost, which, combined with my own efforts, sent me toppling over the fence onto the ground on the other side where I landed in a limp heap. A mass of bruises, I lay there for half an hour before I could summon the strength to move.

When I stood up at last it was with the aid of Ali and the other Malay, who hustled me off to bed. The battering I had received left me black and blue from head to foot and it was three days before I could get up.

The day after I was laid up for repairs, Ali, who was looking after me, sat beside the open window of my room chewing betel nut and using for his cuspidor that portion of Katong which lay beneath my window. Ali was hardly ever without a good gob of this eastern equivalent for chewing tobacco and he spat frequently. It seemed to help his thinking.

Ali was puzzled about that tapir. To him, as to me, the tapir was a perfect exemplification of the peaceful attitude toward life. The normal role of the animal was running away from fights instead of getting into them.

All had more to say about tapirs that day than he usually has to say about everything in the course of a whole week. Under normal circumstances he did most of his talking through the medium of gestures—a shrug of the shoulders, a movement of the hand, a toss of the head. A few facial expressions rounded out his vocabulary.

Although he didn't bother selecting the right words, he spoke English understandably. But most of the time he was able to express himself without words.

Today, however, he needed words to unburden himself—words supplemented by a wrinkling up of his nose, his favorite method of expressing displeasure. Normally if I asked him what he thought, let us say, of some animal that I was thinking of taking off a trader's hands, he would wrinkle up his nose if he thought the creature a poor specimen. If he thought it a good buy, he would beam all over. No words.

That nose of his was as wrinkled as an octogenarian prune as he started discussing that tapir. The animal had the devil in him, a whole tribe of devils. He spat vehemently to emphasize his point.

Ali seemed more picturesque to me than ever as he sat by that window speculating on how all those devils had got inside that tapir. He was dressed in an outfit that was standard for him unless he was at work on a dirty job. It consisted of an immaculate white starched baju, which is a shirt much like the top of a pajama jacket and worn over the sarong or shirt, which today was a red and blue affair, cut very full. On his head he wore a black velvet Mohammedan cap.

Ali wasn't in the habit of getting particularly excited about anything. His philosophy was the philosophy of "Tidak apa?" (Which in Malay means, "What does it matter?")

The soul of conscientiousness, he yet reserved the right to a resigned outlook. Things happened. That was life. Why examine anything too closely?

In considering the tapir that had tried to annihilate me, he made an exception to his "Tidak apa?" rule. It did matter. Tapirs had no business acting that way. One had enough problems in life with animals and people that were frankly one's enemies without having to face sudden attacks from what one had a right to regard as peaceful sources.

Over and over we discussed the whole race of tapirs, making many points, relevant and irrelevant.

The reader may be acquainted with the fact that tigers, leopards and other carnivora regard the tapir as a very choice dish. The tapir, needless to say, is familiar with his popularity in these quarters as a table delicacy; and he uses every resource at his command to keep out of the way of his enemies. Nature has come to his assistance in making it possible for him to stay under water for several minutes at a stretch. Consequently his normal habitat is near a river. When pursued by some killer ambitious to dine off his chops, he calmly steps into his convenient river, walking along its bottom and passing the time in the gentle pursuit of pulling up the roots of water lilies and other aquatic plants. He is as fond of these morsels as the tiger is of tapir meat.

After nibbling away for a few minutes, he comes to the surface, swimming off to some other point where there are more tasty roots to eat.

But when the jungle fruits are ripe, the tapir, unable to resist these dainties, forsakes his river. He makes for the higher ground where rambutan, checo, jack fruit and other jungle palate-ticklers fall to the ground.

Here in territory where he is easy prey for carnivora on the prowl, he vies with other herbivorous animals for his favorite delicacies. Cautiously emerging from the brush, he comes out into the more open spaces of the jungle where the fruit-bearing trees are found. In his movements is the accumulated timidity of thousands of generations of tapirs; all of them hunted animals.

Fear of attack is always uppermost in his mind. He isn't even free from it when he is near the water. More than one Dyak savage has made a meal off the remains of tapir he has found buried in the mud along the margin of a river swamp, the victim of an assault by a giant bull crocodile that seized its prey in the water, held it under until it was drowned and then tore it to pieces.

Practically everything Ali and I said on the subject—and our experience with tapirs had been wide—contributed to the point that it was unusual for a tapir, one of the least courageous of the perpetually hunted animals, to make an attack such as the one to which I had been subjected.

This being so, didn't the tuan believe that the animal was full of devils? How could a tapir act that way otherwise?

I tried to tell Ali, in simple language, that the animal's conduct represented the aggressiveness born of perpetual fear. The creature had got it into his head that I was trying to destroy him; so he tried to destroy me. If there had been a river to run to, the tapir would have headed for that instead of me. It was as simple as all that.

Ali wrinkled up his nose. He was displeased.

He kept after me until, to end the discussion, I told him that he was probably right. The creature must be full of devils.

Ali beamed. He knew all along that I would see his point. Of course the animal was full of devils!

But he wasn't finished yet.

Did the tuan think it wise to ship to America an animal so full of devils? Would it not make trouble for me?

This was carrying a joke too far. I finally convinced Ali that an animal so full of devils should be shipped out of Asia, which was already over-stocked with devils, with all possible haste.

For the good of my soul and that tapir's back, I was determined to resume my operations with the zinc ointment. This I did, but I confess that I ministered to his skinned back from the outside of the pen. I wrapped some rags around the end of a long stick and tied them securely in place. Then I put some ointment on the rags and with this home-made apparatus succeeded in giving him a thorough smearing. A series of these treatments proved effective and before long the tapir's back was healed. A few months later I delivered him to the Kansas City dealer who had ordered him for a small mid-western zoo. There he proved as easy to handle as a kitten.

COX NAMED FOR SECOND PLACE

Ohioan Boosted as Mate Of Roosevelt

By EDWARD L. RODDAN

WASHINGTON, May 26. (US)—The existence of a well-defined movement to nominate former Gov. James M. Cox, of Ohio, as a candidate for the vice presidency on the Democratic ticket, was disclosed today.

According to reports current among party leaders, Cox has been approached and is willing to accept second place on the ticket if tendered.

The Cox supporters are urging his nomination on the ground that it will go far toward healing the breach between the Roosevelt and anti-Roosevelt factions and so enable the party to enter the campaign with a united front.

Residence Favorable

From a vote-getting standpoint, they point out that his residence in the pivotal state of Ohio places Cox high up on the list of "available" material for the vice presidential post.

A combination ticket of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York as the presidential nominee, and Cox as his running mate would be unique in American politics. These two men, in reverse order, were the nominees of the party in 1920, going down to defeat in one of the worst debacles in Democratic history.

The ticket of Cox and Roosevelt, ardent supporters of the League of Nations, was snowed under by the late President Harding and his running mate, Calvin Coolidge.

Cox "Receptive"

Nevertheless the Cox movement is being pushed with vigor. The former Ohio governor has been unusually active in politics this year, several of his speeches indicating that he was in a "receptive mood" towards the presidential nomination should the convention turn to him.

The fact that he is willing to accept second place on the ticket was a bit surprising at first. Party leaders recalled, however, that the habit of spurning the vice presidency is far less common than it was a few years ago.

For the past several months, the Democrats have been looking towards Ohio and Illinois for a vice presidential nominee, regardless of who gets first place on the ticket. Several names were suggested including Governor White and Senator Bulkley of Ohio, and Melvin Traylor, Chicago banker.

TOO TRUSTING

$142 Left With Customs Office in 1872 Has Disappeared

CINCINNATI, May 26. (AP)—Charles H. Payne of Canon City, Colo., would like the government to find the little "nest egg" he put in its care a while ago.

In 1872 while a hand on the packet C. B. Church, he was injured and sent to a government hospital at Memphis, Tenn.

Officers of the boat deposited his wages of $142 with the customs office here, as the law provided at that time.

But Payne wasn't in any particulary need of the money 60 years ago and left it for a "nest egg." Now he needs it and wrote J. A. Gayman, deputy customs collector here, to look it up.

Gayman said he couldn't find it so far. Even congress may have to pass a special act before Payne can collect.

The guards found Edward Nelson and Roy Knight, robbers sentenced from Cook county, trying to put out the flames. The fire was put out and the still was, too, while Nelson and Knight went to the penitentiary hospital for a day before entering solitary confinement tomorrow.

LABORATORY YIELDS NEW FACTS ON KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN

Its "Bulk" and Vitamin B Help Relieve Constipation; Also Has Blood-building Iron

New laboratory experiments demonstrate that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN has sufficient "bulk" to exercise the intestines, as well as Vitamin B to help tone the intestinal tract.

In addition, Kellogg's ALL-BRAN supplies twice as much blood-building iron as an equal amount by weight of beef liver.

Now you can overcome common constipation by this pleasant "cereal way," and banish the headaches, backaches, loss of appetite and energy that so frequently result.

No need to worry along with pills and drugs, which often lead to harmful habits.

Instead, just eat two tablespoonfuls daily of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN—adequate for most types of constipation. If your intestinal trouble is not relieved this way, see your doctor. The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that of lettuce. Inside the body, it forms a soft mass, which gently clears the intestines of wastes.

Special processes make ALL-BRAN finer, softer, more palatable. It is not habit-forming. Equally tasty as a cereal, or used in cooking. Recipes on the red-and-green package. At all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

CHEESE Yellow Cream Pound..... 13c

Do your family this good turn . . .

Use CRISCO—it's pure and digestible—it isn't a "loaded" fat

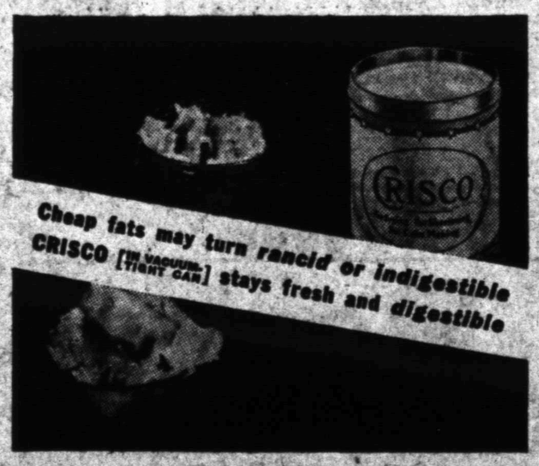

For your own good, as well as your family's, you will be glad to know that Crisco is not a "loaded" fat. Crisco is digestible!

When we say that Crisco is not "loaded," we mean this:—Not one single speck of indigestible fat has been added to Crisco to give it "body." No heavy, hard fat has been mixed in with Crisco to "load" it and make it solid.

By Crisco's own secret process, fine digestible oils—and nothing else—are turned into creamy, digestible Crisco. That's why Crisco is the fat that never separates—never gets greasy or streaky. Crisco keeps digestible! Remember Crisco is not a "loaded" fat.

Open a can of fresh, wholesome Crisco. See how sweet and fresh it tastes all by itself. Notice how fresh and inviting it smells.

Now try pure, creamy Crisco in a flaky Crisco pie-crust. Your husband will love this Spiced Peach Pie. He'll want a second piece—and he'll eat it safely! Crisco is digestible.

SPICED PEACH OR PEAR PIE

THE FILLING:
1 large can peaches, (halves) or pears
½ cup brown sugar
½ cup vinegar
½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon allspice

Stick 2 cloves in each peach or pear. Add the ingredients to the fruit and boil slowly for 10 minutes.

CRISCO PIE-CRUST:
2 cups flour
½ teaspoon salt
6 to 8 tablespoons cold water
⅔ cup Crisco

Sift flour and salt together. Cut in Crisco with two knives until the consistency of small peas. Crisco is the sweet-tasting digestible shortening. If you want a tender, flaky, digestible crust be sure you use Crisco. Crisco is not a "loaded" fat. Now add only enough water to hold mixture together. Roll ⅛ inch thick. Fit into pie-pan. Arrange pickled peaches or pears in the pan lined with Crisco pastry. Add ½ cup pickled peach or pear syrup. If it is too thin, thicken with 1 tablespoon flour. Cover with a whole crust or strips arranged in criss-cross pattern. Sprinkle crust with cinnamon and powdered sugar. Put in hot oven (425° F.) for 10 minutes. Reduce heat to 350° F. for 15 minutes or until crust is delicately brown.

Crisco is the registered trade-mark of a shortening manufactured by the Procter & Gamble Company.

Why does CRISCO digest easily? It is not a "loaded" fat

BANK BANDIT KILLS SELF

Cornered by Posse, Robber Commits Suicide

NUMA, Iowa, May 26. (INS)—One of the two bank bandits who robbed the Citizens State and Savings bank at Cincinnati of $4,000 this morning killed himself this afternoon when a posse surrounded the pair near here. The other was captured.

The men were identified as Louis Walk, of Des Moines, and Frank G. Weining of Burlington. They escaped from the Polk county jail two weeks ago.

Weining committed suicide by shooting himself as the posse closed in around the fugitives.

Premier MacDonald Talks With U. S. Officials

LOSSIE MOUTH, Scotland, May 26. (AP)—It was learned authoritatively tonight that Premier Ramsay MacDonald had a long telephone conversation with one or more high American officials in Washington last night.

The nature of the conversation or precisely with whom the prime minister talked was undisclosed, but it was understood that the topic was world economic conditions.

School Ma'am Held as Bank Robbery Suspect

SULPHUR, Okla., May 26. (UP)—A woman school teacher, Mrs. Molly Johnson, 30, of Connerville, and Lendal Cox, of Duncan, Ariz., were held here today for questioning in connection with the recent robbery of the Hot Springs, N. M., National bank. Lendal's brother, Breezy, is being held in Arizona, officials said.

OFFICERS SEEK IOWA MEDICO

Cancer Doctor Accused Of Violation

DES MOINES, Iowa, May 26. (AP)—Attorney General Fletcher's office announced today that Norman Baker at Muscatine, enjoined last year from operation of the Baker institute, is being sought on a warrant charging him with conspiracy to violate the state medical practice acts.

Baker is believed to be in Mexico. Gov. Dan Turner has issued requisition papers on Texas authorities which the governor of that state has honored, Fletcher said, explaining that Baker can be returned to Iowa if he crosses the border into Texas.

Search for Baker was started recently when Sheriff Fred Nesper and County Attorney Harold Wilson of Muscatine county went to Texas.

They reported that Baker was across the border in Laredo, Mexico, where the warrant is not effective.

Baker is reported to be negotiating for establishment of a radio station.

Gerald O. Blake, assistant attorney general, said the charge is based on Baker's alleged continued control of the Baker cancer treatment institute in Muscatine. He leased the hospital to others in 1931 when the supreme court enjoined him from practicing medicine without a license.

A new process has been perfected to make the basic color of Portland cement tan instead of gray.

ARAKI INSURES JAP EXPANSION

Militarist Named Cabinet Member at Last Minute

TOKYO, May 26. (US)—Continuance of Japan's expansion in Manchuria and her military domination of the Far East were assured today by the last minute inclusion of Gen. Sadao Araki in the national emergency cabinet of Viscount Admiral Saito.

Araki was re-installed as minister of war in the coalition government that received its emblems of office from Emperor Hirohito at the imperial palace this afternoon, two hours after Saito announced that his four days of labor to form a government succeeding that of the assassinated Premier Inukai had been crowned with success.

Responsible for Invasion

Araki is generally held responsible for Japan's "blood and iron" policy that all but caused a new world conflict by the invasion of Shanghai.

He has pledged himself to maintain discipline in his branch of the services and to lend himself to the prosecution of the 17 army and naval officers who confessed to Inujai's assassination, May 15.

His presence in the new government, however, lends considerable doubt to the ministry's ability to crush the rising Fascist movement.

Four members of Inukai's Seiyukai party, three representatives of the opposition Minseito party, and five so-called non-partisan make up the new government.

About 90 per cent of China's 450,000,000 people are classed as poor.

CRAZED MAN STABS GIRLS

Maniac Charges Children With Knife

CLEVELAND, Ohio, May 26 (US)—A crazed "Jack the Ripper" stabbed an 8-year-old school girl today and critically slashed two others in a terrified group of children.

He dashed away brandishing his knife, but was captured by a police man directing school traffic at a nearby crossing. The officer had difficulty in getting his prisoner away from the mob which collected and was threatening violence.

The man muttering incoherently of his "call" to kill millions of people, said he was "Mystery Jake" when authorities sought to learn his identity. He was identified as Jack Gordon, 35, police said.

The girl he killed was Elaine Mackin. The girls injured were Rose Parker, 8, and Lena de Sand, 12.

George H. Hedges, entered as No. 13 in a motorcycle race at Camberley, England, collapsed after climbing a hill known as "Devil's Drop," and died soon afterward.

In trying to solve cases in the two cities, Edinburgh, Scotland, sent finger prints of 704 persons to Scotland Yard, London, last year.

R.F.C. Finds Way To Avert Failure Of Railroads And Other Businesses

Negotiations Under Way for Exchange of Securities To Lighten Interest Burden and Stimulate Activity

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

The Reconstruction Finance corporation, the $2,000,000,000 organization created by congress at the insistance of President Hoover to set an example to all other American business in leading the way out of depression, has found a workable scheme for saving probably a score of railroads and innumerable other properties from collapse under too burdensome interest charges.

The corporation is reported even now to be negotiating with railroad corporations suffering temporary financial difficulties for an exchange of securities which will lighten interest charges for a while and safeguard the body of the property in the interests of the creditors.

Plan Explained

The plan is as follows: The railroads of the country have a heavy bonded indebtedness outstanding although one which is regarded as sound in reasonably normal times. The heavy falling off in prices, and the selling wave which has swept the country, have dashed the quotations of many of these bonds downward. Moreover, the general slackness of business has injured the earnings of the carriers seriously. The highways built at public expense have taken, through passenger bus and motor truck traffic, a vast amount of business away from the carriers which had to construct their lines at private expense. No taxes have to be paid in many states and counties for the highway rights of way but the railroads are the largest taxpayers in the country.

Business Taken Away

Pipe lines pumping oil and gas for long distances have taken hauling business away from the rail lines. A vast amount of coal carrying has been displaced, at the expense of the railroads, by the construction of high tension transmission lines over long distances for the transportation of electrical energy. A new pipe line development is encroaching on the grain-carrying business of the roads. Wheat is being sent through pipe lines for a mere fraction of the cost of shipping by rail and even by water.

The grain is fed into the pipe line mouth and then a stream of compressed air is turned on. The grain continues to feed in at the shipping point and is carried along, suspended in the swift air current, falling out, hundreds of miles distant, at the point of destination. The time saving is tremendous but the money saving is as great. A wheat pipe line will send wheat over a given distance for 2 cents a bushel whereas the cost of railway transportation would be nearer 20 cents.

Would Reduce Expense

Realizing such extraordinary facts to have placed the railroads at a disadvantage, the Reconstruction Finance corporation has found a way for them to reduce their interest expense. It proposes to buy their bonds, giving debentures of the corporation in payment. Railroad bonds pay 4 and 5 per cent and this crushing burden of outgo is swamping the carrier corporations. The average market price of bonds of this character is around 50 per cent of face value.

It is proposed that the railroads buy, in at the market as many of these bonds as they can and advances will be made to them by the corporation to assist them in so doing. In addition, the railroads are to address their stockholders offering to arrange for a switch of their deteriorated bonds to the reconstruction body, which will give the bondholder, in return, the corporation debentures.

Load Removed

It will mean a loss of interest to the bondholder but he can, by making this exchange, be certain of at least 3 per cent of his money as the corporation debentures will have the backing of the treasury. A large part of the interest load will be taken off the shoulders of the carriers.

The corporation and the railroad, in proposing this refinancing on a lower interest basis, are expected to offer to reluctant bondholders the alternative of railroad receiverships, forced by inability to pay the whole interest. In the event of such receiverships the bondholders would get nothing instead of the 3 per cent government debenture.

Move Necessary

Such an emergency move is regarded as necessary, in view of the losses the railroads have suffered, to stave off a score or more receiverships which would mean far-reaching losses, likely to grow into general panic. The latter effect would be due to the fact that many trust funds are invested in railroad bonds. The insurance companies have something like $4,000,000,000 of them. Were these to deteriorate in value further, the insurance companies themselves would suffer loss of the public's confidence with possible dire results.

On Feb. 20, 1893, the Philadelphia and Reading railroad failed. This collapse of one railroad's credit precipitated the panic of 1893 which swept the country. It has been estimated that anywhere from 20 to 30 railroads are on the verge of failure and receivership in the United States today. This move of the reconstruction finance corporation has been timed to ward off such an eventuality.

Efforts to Ease Credit

The matter penetrates farther than the railroad situation. It will have been noted that special efforts are being made by the federal reserve banks and other leaders of finance to ease credit. Facilities for getting more money into circulation are being tuned up. Above all, the adopiton on the part of creditors of a more lenient policy and the establishment of a sort of tacit moratorium or scaling down of present fixed obligations is being recommended as the means of sustaining American credit.

Activity Needed

Leaders from the White House to every branch of American life recognize that what the country needs is stimulated activity rather than a further closing of the throttle of business. The reconstruction finance corporation policy in relation to railroad credit applies with equal force to all kinds of property from office buildings and dwellings to peanut stands. If the revenue-producing property is taken by creditors out of the hands of its operators, creditors and debtors alike would lose. If, by scaling down the fixed capital charge demands, in line with the decline in the general price level, the properties can be held in the category of going concerns, all parties stand to win, for all experience of depressions points to the temporary character of such phenomena.

Turn of Tide Expected

A turn in the depression tide is expected to come from these fresh financial developments. No mortgage holder really wants to stoke the furnace and run the elevators of an office building or apartment house, and no banker is eager to don overalls and ply an oil can on the Salt River line or any other line. They would rather have their interest and eventually recover their principal. They are now realizing that the only way to get it is to give the debtors, who have any chance of making good, time enough to pay up.

Street cars and factories in Leicester, England, were stopped recently when a rat got into an electric cable, short-circuited it, and was electrocuted.

Seeing its reflection in a store window, a ram in a flock of sheep being driven through Berwick, England, jumped through the glass.

Final Testimony Given In Grain Rate Plea

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 26. (UP)—Final testimony in the Interstate Commerce commission hearing here on proposed increases in grain rates was taken today.

The two examiners planned to return to Washington immediately to complete arrangements for a hearing to be held on the Pacific coast during the summer.

E. M. Lane, Kansas City statistician, placed on the stand by Clyde M. Reed, attorney for the farm organizations, testified that despite dwindling business, the roads had increased their capitalization to such an extent that it was difficult to earn an income on the full amount.

'Sharp Business Pick-Up' Predicted by Governor

WASHINGTON, May 26. (AP)—Governor Brucker of Michigan said today after a call at the White House he felt there would be a "sharp pick-up in business" if congress would balance the budget and go home.

Governor Brucker said that the president is "measurably stronger in Michigan" than he was 30 or 60 days ago because the people felt that the president was making an energetic and intelligent effort to bring about measures to relieve the economic situation.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Sleepy, Hungry and Fat

Question—Mrs. W. writes: "I am 35 years old and weigh 204 pounds. I am always sleepy and hungry. I attempted the orange fast, but by afternoon was weak and famished. My knees and hip joints pop and squeak and have been stiff for a couple of years. How may I reduce quickly to normal? I am embarrassed to go among people—I feel they are saying, "Look at that horrible fat woman."

Answer: Did you take the spring cleansing diet which I wrote about this month? If not, I will be glad to send you the entire cleansing diet course which ran over a period of a week. I am sure it is exactly what you need. Next time you write be sure to give your name and address.

Sneezing Each Morning

Question—Miss Diane asks: "Please tell me through your column what causes sneezing and a cold every morning, regardless of season whether summer or winter?"

Answer: You must be suffering from a chronic state of catarrh which makes the irritating discharge in your nose and makes you sneeze each morning. If you will send me your full name and address, I will be glad to send you some special articles on the cause and cure of catarrhal disorders.

Oysters

Question—Mr. Pete I. asks: "Should one chew oysters, or is there any harm in swallowing them whole, as so many do?"

Answer: It is not necessary to chew oysters or any other kind of protein food, as the stomach juices digest proteins that have not been well masticated, and still such foods will no doubt be more quickly digested if they are partially broken up by chewing.

Baylor To Harvest Huge Grain Crop

Special to The Record News

SEYMOUR, Texas, May 26.—Harvest of wheat, barley and oats will begin in Baylor county this week according to reports of leading grain farmers. A large part of the fall oat crop has already been cut, and it is evident that the rest will be harvested in less than a week. Harvest of wheat and barley should be well under way by the first of June.

According to estimates made by County Agent P. C. Colgin there will be near 200,000 bushels more of the three grains harvested in Baylor this year than last, when the yield reached near one million bushels. The gain is due to an increase in acreage brought on by the reduction in cotton.

Cotton planting has been going forward and is already up in some parts of the county. Feed crops are in excellent condition.

Two Nashville Attorneys Disbarred, Face Prison

NASHVILLE, Tenn., May 26. (INS)—Disbarred from practice in federal courts, two Nashville attorneys today faced prison sentences on convicitions of conspiracy to violate the national bankruptcy laws.

T. Watson Batts was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary and J. J. Gore received a six-month sentence under the convictions. Both were fined $1,000.

United States District Judge Harry B. Anderson, in passing sentence termed the pair "shysters" and refused their motions of new trials.

The attorneys were convicted on charges brought by William A. Stephenson, 72, who said he was swindled out of $3,500 when Batts filed a bankruptcy plea for Stephenson to escape a $800 repair bill on his home, then advised him to call in Gore to "fix things" when a referee in bankruptcy discovered hidden assets.

Celotex Co. Officers Face Accounting Suit

CHICAGO, May 26. (INS)—Bror G. Dahlberg and other officers of the Celotex company today faced a suit for accounting of $3,000,000 of the firm's funds.

The suit was started in superior court by Christ and Charoline Larsen, holders of 50 shares of the company's common stock. They charge that the company's employes were used in other enterprises in which Dahlberg was interested, that the company's funds in some cases were diverted to these enterprises illegally, and that because of mismanagement the Celotex company showed a deficit of $130,000 instead of a profit last year.

Middle West Utilities May Pass Dividend

NEW YORK, May 26. (AP)—Formal action was taken today to eliminate dividends on two more units of the Middle West Utilities Co.

Directors of the National Electric Power company omitted the quarterly dividends of $1.50 on the 6 per cent preferred and $1.75 on the 7 per cent preferred stock ordinarily payable on July 1.

The National Public Service corporation omitted the quarterly dividends of 40 cents on the class "A" and class "B" common stocks, 87½ cents on the $3.50 preferred stock and $1.75 on the series "A" 7 per cent preferred stock.

Capone Seeks Review By U. S. Supreme Court

WASHINGTON, May 26. (AP)—Al Capone, the Chicago gangster now serving a sentence in the Atlanta penitentiary for evasion of federal income taxes, today asked the supreme court to reconsider its recent action refusing to review his case.

Advice To Investors

By Charles W. Storm—Editor of the "News Service of Wall Street"

R. E. S.—Any recent information on Kroger Gocery will be appreciated.

Answer—Gross revenues of Kroger Grocery and Baking for the first 12 weeks of this year were 14 per cent smaller than those of the similar 1931 period, and the gap between 1932 results and those of a year earlier has been widening slowly. In the three four-week periods of the current year the discrepancy has been successively 14.1 per cent, 14.4 per cent and 15 per cent on an average store basis, dollar sales have been about 10 per cent below 12 months ago, or less than the decline in food prices. The increasingly unfavorable relation of gross revenues to tonnage handled is restricting profit margins below the level recorded in the first 24 weeks of 1931. Earnings for the first 24 weeks of this year, it is thought, will not greatly exceed the equivalent of 65 cents a common share. Dividend requirements, at the annual rate of $1, are being covered, however, according to official advice.

Miss L. M., Wichita Falls, Texas. I should like to put about $300 in a good stock, one that is not too high-priced. Can you advise me? I work for a living and do not want to take too much of a chance.

Answer—There is only one place for your limited capital, and that is the savings bank. Three hundred dollars is not enough for investment. If your plan is to try to increase the amount by buying "low-priced" stocks, eventually you may find that it has disappeared.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, May 26. (AP)—An early decline in cotton today was followed by rallies in trade buying and covering promoted by reports of a steadier tone in the afternoon stock market and continued light offerings from the South.

July sold up from 5.52 to 5.65 and closed at 5.60, with the general market closing steady at net declines of 4 to 7 points. The liquidation here through houses with Liverpool connections during the early trading was estimated by some observers at between 20 and 25 thousand bales, and the decline in the Livrepool market was accompanied by an announcement that Hornby, Hemelryk & Co., one of the old Liverpool houses, had suspended payments.

A favorable view of the weather reports showing showery conditions but generally higher temperatures in the South, may have contributed to the early decline, but offerings were light after the early pressure had run its course. Rather a more favorable construction of some of the afternoon news from Washington, concerning the budget balancing prospects was mentioned in connection with the late advance.

Futures closed steady. 4@7 low. Spot quiet; middling, 5.65.

Markets Turn Upward Abruptly Just As Everybody Expected Dive

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, May 26. (US)—Just when nearly everybody in speculative Wall street today was fearful that the markets would experience another of the proverbial "nosedives," the abruptly about-faced.

At the close, stocks on the average were able to show modest net gains over the preceding close in railroad and industrial departments. Utilities while rallying with the other groups closed slightly lower.

Bond quotations participated in the recovery and final prices in this market while in record low territory were down only modestly from the previous day. In all sections of the stock list new average low prices were recorded and during the morning trading pessimism reached violent proportions. It seemed as though a complete surrender had been made to fear.

Hitherto responsible brokers and speculators were talking of frightful happenings, without any justification for their extreme pessimism beyond an unreasonable fear.

There is no questioning the immediate cause of the rally. Announcement at Washington that the general sales tax had a fair chance of being enacted by congress, despite the original voting down of the tax, had an electrical effect on the market. Offerings seemed to cease and a new spirit of hope immediately developed. Even previous opponents of this tax legislation were tremendously impressed by the market's response to the news, and it is only fair to guess that numerous news friends were won to the sales tax today.

The market has been waiting for adoption of a sane tax program by congress and even the promise of reasonable policy toward a balanced or near-balanced budget receives an exceedingly warm reception. That congress can fail to be impressed by the demonstration today in support of the sales tax is inconceivable.

Throughout the morning there were indisputable signs that liquidation had swelled to a rather discouraging volume. While short-selling may have contributed some small proportions of the offerings, it was quite apparent that the greater part of the selling was outright liquidation, of forced or necessitous kind. This seemed concentrated especially against the tobacco shares, in which incidentally the selling was so persistent as to close them lower for the day despite the general recovery.

The very volume of selling suggested more than bear pressure; in fact, the total for the day, 1,900,000 shares in all stocks, was the largest in six weeks.

Many independent thinkers, men of deep knowledge in the securities markets, have been planning to take advantage of opportunities, particularly in bonds, as they are uncovered by the bankers' frightened selling.

There is considerable uncertainty whether there is in operation a "bankers bond pool," but the independent market factors are hardly anxious to wait for a bankers' group to acquire whatever choice issues may exist.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, May 26. (AP)—Forecasts of unseasonably cold weather tonight with possible frosts as far south as Kansas restored backbone to the wheat market today after sharp early breaks.

Prices on wheat fell temporarily to almost 3 cents under Monday's high point, influenced by soaking rains both in spring and winter crop territory, about two inches at places in the Dakotas. Later, though, a blizzard was reported northwest, and there were estimates that domestic spring wheat acreage would show a decrease of 15 per cent compared with last year.

Wheat closed unsettled, ⅜@⅝c under yesterday's finish, corn ¼@⅜c down, oats ⅛@¼c off, and provisions unchanged to 7 cents lower.

The late recovery of wheat prices was partly owing to indications that pit traders had oversold the market and was also ascribed in part to strength which developed in securities. Earlier, a bearish factor as to wheat was a report that a Liverpool cotton house had suspended business. Meanwhile, crop news was still mainly bullish and Southwest advices being that moisture deficit was extraordinary compared to normal, and had not been rectified by rains.

A usually conservative interest sent an estimate of only 146,000,000 bushels wheat production this season in the four chief hard winter states, giving Kansas 74,000,-000, Oklahoma 31,000,000, Texas 26,000,000 and Nebraska 15,000,000. This would mean the shortest crop since 1925, when those states raised 143,000,000, and the price of wheat in December that year rose to $1.41½. As the day drew to an end, wheat offerings became scarce, and there was evidence that speculative holders who earlier had liquidated were reinstating their lines.

Corn and oats paralleled wheat action. Corn belt weather conditions were expected to be of much benefit to new crops of feed grains.

Provisions were draggy, influenced by heaviness of hog values.

Jury's Answers to 30 Issues In Suit Baffle Court

Neither Judge, Lawyer Nor Jury Knows Who Won Case

"Button, button, who's got the button" used to be a game for children, but it was played by members of the local bar in the 78th district court Thursday afternoon.

The game was occasioned by the return of a jury in the suit of J. W. Zink against G. W. Hanna for $876 damages, the action having arisen from a collision between two cars near Burkburnett several months ago. The trial began Wednesday morning; attorneys' arguments were completed at noon Thursday, and the jury retired with about 30 special issues to be decided.

Late Thursday afternoon, the answers of the jury were submitted to Judge W. W. Cook by J. Ray Corder, foreman. Each of the 30-odd questions had been answered. The lengthy document was read aloud by the court.

One thing was certain—the jury was convinced that both parties to the suit likewise had been parties to the accident, for each was found guilty of contributory negligence. Yet in each instance, this negligence was found not to have been the proximate cause of the accident. The accident was declared to have been preventable, yet each party to it was innocent of having caused the crash.

The court, obviously baffled, laid the written decision on the table before opposing lawyers. After a brief study, the plaintiff's counsel admitted that his client apparently had won no judgment. Thereupon it was passed to defense attorneys, with the suggestion that they decide who should write up the judgment—but what judgment? There being no light immediately forthcoming, the plaintiff's attorney then hurried to the district clerk's office where members of the jury were receiving their stipend.

Just what kind of a decision had they meant to give, anyway? Was the plaintiff entitled to compensation for damages sustained, or was he not?

Then it was that the plaintiff's counsel became just a beginner again in his understanding of juries.

"Well, as near as we could figure it 'out,'" said members of the jury, "neither one of them got over on the left side of the road; each one kept to the right. We don't see how they ran into each other at all."

'SHORT' IN WIRE STARTS BLAZE

Rosenblatt Residence Damaged in Fire

Electrical wiring at the home of Dr. William Rosenblatt, 2202 Lucille, was damaged in a blaze at 3:31 o'clock Thursday afternoon as a result of a short at the switch caused by pennies placed in the fuse sockets, firemen reported. Insulation was burned from the wiring throughout the house and to the main line tapped by the wires.

A unit of the fire department answered an alarm in the 1700 block on Woodrow at 7:32 o'clock Thursday night as a result of a grass fire.

A blaze originating at the water heater at the home of E. A. McCarty, 3105 Hollywood, was extinguished before a unit of the department answered the alarm at 7:05 o'clock Thursday morning.

Bus Company Named In Suits for $20,500

Two suits asking $20,500 damages from the Wichita Falls Bus company were filed in district court here Thursday as a result of a collision on North Broadway in this city on April 9.

Miss Elsie Klutts brought suit for $5,500, alleging material damages to her automobile and personal injuries as a result of the crash. Her petition alleges that her car was struck on its right side from the rear by a northbound bus belonging to the defendant concern as she turned from North Eighth street into North Broadway.

Mrs. Christine Schear asks $15,000 damages for personal injuries. According to her petition she was a guest and companion of Miss Klutts when the latter's car was hit.

Services Friday for Harrold Cotton Buyer

Funeral services for G. M. Stringer, 41, of Harrold will be held in that community Friday. Mr. Stringer died Thursday morning at 10:30 o'clock at a Wichita Falls hospital. He was well known as a cotton buyer in this state, a business he had followed for many years.

AUSTIN, May 26. (AP)—The Texas Railroad commission heard today claims of applicants for permits to operate trucks over state highways from Texas ports to interior towns independent of the commission's rates, based on a claim it is an interstate service they would perform.

Freight handled by the trucks would be taken from ships and transported to interior points in Texas.

That question was up some years ago when the courts ruled such freight was in interstate traffic and that the state commission's rates did not apply.

Missed Your Paper?
What is more annoying than to get up in the morning, or go home in the evening, and find that your paper is not there? This may be caused by a playful dog in the neighborhood; a neighbor sometimes picks it up to read, expecting to return it before you arrive; or perhaps it was picked up by a passer-by; and occasionally it is an oversight of the newspaper boy. We maintain a delivery service to take care of situations of this kind. Should you miss a copy let us know and a copy will be sent out by special messenger, before 8:30 a. m. or 7:30 p. m. and 10 a. m. on Sunday.
