WASHINGTON — In a major military response to the devastation in Bangladesh from the recent cyclone, the United States has dispatched thousands of Marines and dozens of helicopters as part of an amphibious task force to bolster relief operations there, White House and Pentagon officials said on Saturday.

The officials said the effort was in response to an appeal from Bangladesh that foreign countries play a bigger role in getting food, medicine, and clothing to survivors of the cyclone. The storm killed more than 138,000 people, according to the latest official count.

The first American teams were scheduled to arrive on Saturday night in Dhaka, Bangladesh's capital.

Necessary evil

A recent move by state district judges in Smith County to eliminate plea bargains in their courts is not likely to be duplicated here, Midland County officials said last week. Prosecutors, judges and defense attorneys agreed: Because of crowded criminal dockets, plea bargains have become an integral part of the judicial system. "I think everybody is of the opinion that they are a necessary evil," said Midland District Attorney Al Schorre. /1C

ATLANTA — Moderate Southern Baptists closed their meeting here Saturday with an air of independence, but remained uncertain over whether they will break away from the fundamentalist-controlled Southern Baptist Convention. The moderate faction, which has been battling with fundamentalists for 12 years over control of the nation's largest Protestant denomination, approved a constitution, voted to fund its own missionary system, authorized a "relevant" literature program and elected a woman as president-elect. /7A

UTPB set for signing

University to gain four-year status today

Controversy not new for UTPB

By Chris Van Wagenen
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Ten years ago, former University of Texas of the Permian Basin President Dr. V.R. Cardozer was calling for four-year status.

Cardozer, who resigned his post in 1982, mused later that his unpopular stand had created a climate that split factions on the status issue — an issue he predicted would win favor in the end.

But the quest for a four-year institution began years earlier, in the mid-1960s, when a number of area citizens decided the Permian Basin needed a full-fledged college.

Legislation eventually was drawn in favor of shifting Odessa College from two-year to four-year status, but was defeated when then-Gov. John Connally vetoed that plan in 1967.

Connally said at the time that no new colleges would be created until the newly developed Coordinating Board of the Texas College and Uni-

ODESSA — It becomes official today: UTPB turns four-year.

Gov. Ann Richards is scheduled to be in Odessa at 3 p.m. to sign a bill that will make the University of Texas of the Permian Basin a four-year institution.

The bill-signing is set to occur in the school courtyard. It originally had been scheduled for 3:30 p.m., but was moved up to accommodate Ms. Richards' schedule. She is making a 20-minute stopover in Odessa for the signing.

Rep. Gary Watkins, D-Odessa, and Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, the sponsors of the expansion bill in their respective chambers, will be on hand for the ceremony.

Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, opposed the bill, as did officials at Midland College. They claimed four-year status for UTPB, which now will be allowed to add freshmen and sophomore students, would hurt Midland College enrollment and duplicate services and programs already available at area community colleges.

UTPB officials have been attempting to expand the Odessa school for several years. They came close once before, in 1990, when the bill passed both the House and Senate, but died when then-Gov. Bill Clements vetoed the legislation.

In addition to Ms. Richards, Watkins and Montford, other dignitaries expected to be on hand for the bill-signing are

Saudis say they'll talk with Israel

By Barry Schweld
AP Diplomatic writer

DAMASCUS, Syria — Saudi Arabia and its Persian Gulf allies pledged Saturday to participate in direct talks with Israel, breaking what Secretary of State James A. Baker called a "major taboo" that has thwarted peace efforts in the Middle East.

Baker announced the decision by the six-nation Gulf Cooperation Council to deal directly with Israel for the first time on secondary regional issues such as water scarcity and to send an emissary to observe the opening of peace talks with other Arab nations if they occur.

President Bush on Saturday phoned Saudi King Fahd to thank him for the council's action, which the president said he viewed as a positive step, according to a brief White House statement.

"We think this is an important decision," Baker said upon his arrival here to begin a fourth round of shuttle diplomacy trying to set up a regional peace conference in the aftermath of the Persian Gulf War.

City slickers get course in honky tonkin'

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a most unlikely setting, the cultural heart of the nation's capital, people are learning how to dance to honky tonk music.

At the venerable John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, about 25 people are meeting for four consecutive Mondays to learn the basics of kicker dancin'.

The cultural center is sponsoring the dance classes to give Washingtonians a chance to learn the Texas Two-Step, the Cotton-Eyed Joe, and other Country & Western dance steps in time for the Texas Festival in June, an 11-day showcase of Texas music, theater and dance on Kennedy Center stages.

Smith posts bond; calls report a 'lie'

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — William Kennedy Smith surrendered on charges of rape and battery Saturday, and after being booked he called a police investigator's account "an outrageous lie."

Smith, the 30-year-old nephew of Sen. Edward Kennedy, was taken in handcuffs from the Palm Beach police station to the county jail before being released on $10,000 bail a few minutes later.

He was accompanied by his mother, Jean Kennedy Smith, an attorney, and an old college friend who lives in West Palm Beach.

Smith was charged Thursday with sexual battery, tantamount to rape, and with battery. A 29-year-old woman from Jupiter, Fla., told police she was raped March 30 after meeting Smith in a bar and driving him to his family estate.

After being freed, Smith, a fourth-year medical student at Georgetown University in Washington, discussed a nine-page police affidavit that detailed the charges.

"The version of events in that report is an outrageous lie," he said. "They represent an attack on me and on my family and on the truth. I'm very much looking forward to a trial where I can testify and the truth can come out."

ODESSA — School can be a good place to learn about drug dealers — especially if you happen to be an undercover law-enforcement agent.

"The best way to get to the root of the problem is to get right into it — to go undercover," said Kathy, a narcotics agent who posed as a student at Odessa High School during the fall semester of 1990.

When Kathy began her first day of classes on Sept. 4, only the school principal, the Ector County Independent School District superintendent and law enforcement officials knew her true identity.

Oil industry proves it can cook

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

The fifth annual Energy Appreciation Week concluded Saturday with the largest PBPA Blow Out to date.

There were 42 cooking teams which turned out for this year's event, more than double the 19 teams which participated last year. "We had a lot more oil companies which participated this year, and that added a lot," said Charlie McCoy, a Blow Out official.

Harry Spannaus, executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, which sponsors the Blow Out and Energy Appreciation Week, said teams came from throughout the Permian Basin, from as far away as Sonora, Orla and Littlefield.

In addition to the cookoff, which had three categories

— fajitas, brisket and ribs — there was entertainment throughout the day and a traditional barbecue plate luncheon for the public.

Most of the ribs and briskets for the luncheon were prepared by M-I Drilling Fluids and Bob Williamson, head cook, said his team began cooking several hundred pounds of briskets at 2:30 a.m. for the luncheon. Members of the M-I cooking team included: Chuck Kleinert, Gerald Huff, Sonny Farquhar and Carl Emerson.

Entertainers included: Susie Hitchcock Western Dancers, Middle Eastern Dancers and the Tall City Cloggers. Sarge Thompson of Monahans was the winner of the World's Ugliest Roughneck Contest sponsored by the Mid-

Experts predict lean times following recession

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP) — In a forecast certain to raise alarms at the White House, the nation's top business leaders said Saturday the current economic hard times will be followed by an extended period of lean times.

The Business Council, 100 executives from the country's largest companies, said the nation's first recession in eight years should be over at least by the end of the year, but they appealed for lower interest rates to make that forecast more certain.

Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan, who was briefed on the executives' rather pessimistic outlook, gave no indication whether he would heed their call for lower rates, according to participants in Saturday's closed-door meeting.

"He was his usual inscrutable self," said American Express chairman James D. Robinson III. "But I think he listened carefully to what the business group was saying about the state of their own business affairs, which is not very optimistic."

The Business Council forecast, prepared by 20 corporate economists, was far gloomier than the Bush administration's own forecast.

While Greenspan didn't tip his hand, many of the executives said they expected further rate cuts if the economy fails to show signs of a rebound.

The Business Council forecast, prepared by 20 corporate economists, was far gloomier than the Bush administration's own forecast.

The administration projects an end to the recession during the April-June quarter, with the economy rebounding quickly to fairly robust growth rates.

In their assessment, the corporate leaders warned that business activity coming out of the slump will be far below the pace of a normal recovery period. They said the huge buildup of government, business and consumer debt during the 1980s would act to depress activity for some time.

The council predicted economic growth in the first 12 months of recovery would be less than half the 6.75 percent normal average for the period right after a recession ends.

That would mean sub-par growth rates at least through 1992, a period when President Bush had hoped for robust activity to push the unemployment rate down and keep the economy from becoming an issue in the presidential campaign.

If anything, the business leaders themselves were more pessimistic than their chief economists.

While 16 of the council's 20 economists said they expected the recession to be over by June, some business leaders said the upturn could well be later, with the most downbeat saying a slump could last into next year.

"Economists don't have any responsibility," said Robert E. Allen, chairman of AT&T. "Those of us who have to go on the line tend to be a little more cautious."

And John F. Welch Jr., chief executive of General Electric and the president of the Business Council, said "the economy is weak and where it goes from here is questionable."

Norman Ornstein, a political scientist who attended the council's two days of meetings, said many of the business leaders were worried because they can't see where the country will find the momentum to lift it out of recession, especially given the high levels of debt and the credit-crunch caused by financially strapped banks refusing to make new loans.

"The nervousness here is neither surprising nor inappropriate," Ornstein said.

"The scenario that would be most nerve-racking for the Bush administration is that we make a bit of a recovery and then drop into recession again," he said. "Given the fragility of the financial system, that is possible."

In their forecast, the executives saw the jobless rate, currently at 6.6 percent, topping 7 percent this summer and then showing little improvement through 1992 as anemic growth and layoffs by state and local governments depress the employment picture.

The jobless rate declined to 5.2 percent during the 1982-90 expansion, the second longest in U.S. history.

While Greenspan left by a back door to avoid reporters, participants said he acknowledged the weakness the council described, but said there were some hopeful signs in such areas as housing.

AGREE: Decision breaks 'major taboo,' Baker says

(From 1A)

"... It demonstrates that the Arab governments will attend the conference," he said. "We will break at least one major taboo in the sense that we will have Arab states sitting down and negotiating with Israel."

However, the Saudis and their council allies — Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates, Qatar, Oman and Bahrain — did not budge in their resistance to negotiating a peace agreement with Israel.

They will not be at the table for any direct negotiations on ending the 43-year Arab-Israeli dispute. The bargaining is to be conducted on the Arab side by Jordan, Syria and Palestinians.

The announcement was distributed in English and in Arabic to reporters traveling with Baker. It also was announced in Luxembourg where European and Persian Gulf foreign ministers were meeting.

"In realization of the efforts of Mr. Baker it (the GCC) has expressed its readiness to participate in the conference as an observer," Qatar's Foreign Minister, Mubarak Bin Ali Al-Khater told reporters.

The observer who would attend the ceremonial opening of the conference is Abdullah Bishara of Kuwait, the secretary-general of the Gulf Cooperation Council.

The council said in a statement that its member nations wanted "to put an end to the Arab-Israeli conflict and to reach a just solution to the Palestinian question."

All six countries would participate in the "working groups" dealing with water problems, weapons proliferation and the environment, it said.

In Jerusalem, the Israeli Foreign Ministry had no immediate comment. But a senior Israeli official, reached by telephone, said the idea of the Saudis joining a second stage of talks on regional issues "was always in the air."

Until now the Israelis have been told the Saudis have only said "maybe" to the plan, said the official, speaking on the condition of anonymity. "This would be different, it would mean a yes," he said.

The development was the first bit of good news to U.S. officials trying to initiate peace talks since Baker's last trip to the region two weeks ago ended in disagreement over the formula for holding a conference.

Meanwhile, an administration official disclosed that Baker had suffered a setback in trying to break an Arab boycott of hundreds of firms that transact business in Israel.

The official, who briefed reporters on the understanding they would not disclose his name, said Baker had tried to arrange a deal to suspend the boycott in exchange for a halt to Israeli settlements on the West Bank and in Gaza.

"We haven't got anything from either side," the official said. Baker begins his talks here on

State parole board under fire from lawmakers

AUSTIN (AP) — The besieged Board of Pardons and Paroles is the latest victim in Texas' chronic prison overcrowding saga.

Under fire from lawmakers for paroling killers and other violent criminals from the state prison system, the chairman of the 18-member board, James Granberry, resigned this week.

Sen. Ted Lyon, D-Rockwall, chairman of the Senate Criminal Justice Committee, led a public airing into parole practices and blamed the Pardons and Parole Board for poor judgment in voting to turn loose dangerous criminals.

Lyon, 43, a former policeman in Mesquite, says he jumped into the fray because he was shocked by accounts of those who had been paroled, some of whose death penalties had been commuted to life sentences and then were later released.

"Our whole criminal justice system is in a state of chaos, and some of the biggest problems that have created this chaos are the people who have been on the Board of Pardons and Paroles," he said. "They have a bunch of people over there that don't have the foggiest sense of what the criminal justice system is about," Lyon said.

The parole controversy prompted the Senate to pass a bill that would allow jurors to assess a sentence of life in prison without the possibility of parole. The House has approved a bill that would allow parole for a person sentenced to life in prison only after serving 30 years.

The State

But Granberry told lawmakers to quit applying "Band-Aid" solutions to the state's criminal justice system.

Critics of the life without parole bill say it will saddle taxpayers with having to pay for the incarceration of inmates who are past the high crime years of youth. Also, they fear that inmates with no chance of ever leaving prison will be extreme disciplinary problems.

In addition, these prisoners could wind up taking space that could have been used for more violent inmates.

With immense pressure to keep criminals marching through the front door of the prison system, the back door has been left wide open.

As of Tuesday, May 7, 46,621 inmates were in state prison, 245 short of a federal court-ordered ceiling that would trigger the early release of some inmates. Meanwhile, about 9,000 inmates awaiting transfer to state prisons are backlogged in county jails.

The board must approve parole for about 150 inmates per day to make room for another 150 inmates.

When sentenced, an inmate is given a parole eligibility date as dictated by state law. Once paroled, the person is required to report monthly to a parole officer, who keeps track of where the parolee lives and works, and monitors compliance with other parole requirements.

In fiscal year 1990, 71,074 cases were considered for parole and 59 percent — 42,163 — received it. That's an 11 percent increase in the number of inmates paroled from 1989.

The pipeline from prison to freedom is greased with numerous state laws to reduce the time a person spends in prison.

Military chaplain's body found in car back seat

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — Police are treating the death of a military chaplain, stationed at Sheppard Air Force Base, as a homicide, a spokesman said.

Capt. Gerald Eugene Curley, 37, of Wichita Falls, was found in the back seat of his car Friday morning, according to Sgt. Robert Sowards.

Sowards said although dried blood stained Curley's head and face, there was no visible signs of injury. Sowards said the cause of Curley's death is not known.

City workers discovered the car located under the Interstate 44 overpass near the north side of the Wichita River.

Curley came to Wichita Falls, his first assignment with the Air Force, in February. He was a chaplain with the 3750th Air Base Group at the military base.

Curley's body was taken to the Tarrant County Medical Examiner's Office where an autopsy will be performed.

TCU freshman shot during armed robbery

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A Texas Christian University freshman who was talking to his parents from a pay phone at a tire store Friday night was fatally shot during an armed robbery, police said.

Robert Campbell, 18, was telling his mother in Tennessee that he "thought he aced" his classes this semester at TCU when an armed robbery suspect slammed down the receiver of the phone, police said.

Campbell was shot and killed as he tried to stop the suspect who had just robbed him and emptied the store's cash register, police said.

He suffered a single gunshot wound to his upper back and died at John Peter Smith Hospital at 7:06 p.m., about an hour after being shot, a hospital spokesman said.

The victim's father, Larry Campbell of Harrison, Tenn., said that his son, an honors student who hoped to go to law school, had taken his last final exam Friday and was planning to drive home Monday.

The suspect remained at large Saturday.

WEATHER SUMMARY

The Accu-Weather® forecast for noon May 12.
Lines show high temperatures.

Cloudy early, clearing late

Today is expected to be mostly cloudy, later clearing, with a 20 percent chance of thundershowers and a high near 90 with 15 to 20 mph and gusty south winds, the National Weather Service in Midland said.

Tonight will be mostly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of rain and a low near 60, NWS said. Sunday will be partly cloudy with a high near 90.

The record high of 101 for Saturday's date was set in 1984, while the record low for today's date was 41 in 1931. Saturday's high was 94, with a low of 71.

STATE

It was mostly hot and humid across Texas on Saturday under cloudy to partly cloudy skies. Skies over Far West Texas were sunny and the air was noticeably drier.

Elsewhere, surface high pressure over East Texas allowed moist air from the Gulf of Mexico to flow over the state.

South to southeast winds were generally 10 to 20 mph range. However, winds gusted up to 25 mph at Abilene.

Temperatures were warm with most readings in the mid- to upper 80s. The extremes at mid-afternoon ranged from 81 degrees at Amarillo in the Panhandle to 97 degrees at Laredo on the Rio Grande plains.

Some showers formed in the morning over the Hill Country but quickly dissipated. No shower or thunderstorm activity had developed by Saturday afternoon.

A dry line moving into West Texas Saturday afternoon prompted the issuance of a tornado watch until 11 p.m. for the Panhandle, Plains and Permian Basin.

Forecasters said today would again be warm and muggy with a chance of thunderstorms under partly cloudy to mostly cloudy skies statewide. High temperatures are expected to be in the 80s and 90s.

NATION

Wet weather moved up the Mississippi Valley on Saturday and rain also fell over the Southeast.

There was a threat of severe thunderstorms during the night along the western edge of the Plains from New Mexico to Montana, the National Weather Service said.

At midday, showers and thunderstorms associated with an upper atmosphere weather system slowly moving up the Mississippi Valley were scattered from southern Arkansas to west-central Alabama, and from Tennessee to central Illinois and eastern Missouri.

Flooding continued in northeastern Louisiana, southern Arkansas and northern Mississippi, where heavy rain has been falling since the middle of April.

Other showers and thunderstorms were scattered from northern Florida to eastern South Carolina.

Heaviest rainfall during the six hours up to 1 p.m. CDT was 1.10 inches in northern Florida at the Jacksonville Naval Air Station.

Elsewhere, light rain and drizzle were scattered over parts of the Northwest, with snow reported at some higher elevations.

Thunderstorms hit the northwestern corner of Nebraska during the night, causing flooding around the town of Crawford. Campers were chased from nearby Fort Robinson State Park, where two men escaped the flood by spending the night in a tree.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

SMITH: I'm very much looking forward to a trial

(From 1A)

His lawyers had said he planned to surrender this week, but he came into town Saturday morning instead. Even with the change in schedule, he was greeted by a mob of reporters and photographers.

He was fingerprinted, photographed and booked at the police station, then was taken by police in handcuffs to the Palm Beach County Jail, about a 15-minute drive away.

There, he posted $10,000 bond in a cashier's check and made a brief statement to reporters after leaving the building. He appeared composed but his hands were shaking.

He said he was advised not to comment further until after the trial. No trial date has been set, but arraignment was tentatively scheduled for June 14. Smith does not have to be present at the arraignment.

Smith ignored reporters' shout-out questions as he and his mother walked to the car, but did thank them for getting out of his way.

of the cultural complex listened to Beethoven's Symphony No. 2, Vivaldi's Guita Concerto in D and Haydn's Overture to La Fedelta Premiata and "Texans for a night" stomped, two-stepped and shuffled their way through Bob Wills' Sugarfoot Rag.

The dance lessons have drawn a diverse mix of federal workers, retirees and a smattering of for-real Texans, who seemed stiff and somewhat skeptical as instructor Herb Fredrickson fired up the Calico Polka.

Fredrickson, a Chicago native with an unabashed admiration for Texas, exhorted his pupils to cross the Potomac and enter a Lone Star state of mind. "Go free, men! Go free!" he yelled above the music. "If you're not free on a dance floor, you're somebody's slave. You have freedom — do it!"

Tom McClimon, a 37-year-old executive with the U.S. Conference of Mayors, loosened up by tucking the end of his geometric print tie into his dress shirt.

McClimon, who spends his days educating mayors on the latest developments in municipal finance and other urban issues, said he welcomes the change of pace he gets from his weekly dance class.

"It's fun. It's relaxing," he said. "It gives you something else to think about."

UTPB: School first authorized as upper-level

versity System had completed a "need" study for the state.

Two years later, the coordinating board voiced opposition toward creating additional four-year schools.

However, the board was in favor of creating more upper-level institutions serving junior and senior graduate students.

So, in the fall of 1968, the board decided to experiment with the concept, selecting the Permian Basin as one of four test sites.

Following an intensive two-month study, an agreement was presented by the Midland and Odessa chambers of commerce to establish an upper-level university between the two cities.

A proposal recommended the university be built on 640 acres of land donated by Clarence Scharbauer, located south of Interstate 20 and west of Farm-to-Market Road 1788 — halfway between the two cities.

On May 27, 1969, a bill written by Ace Pickens of Odessa and Dick Slack of Pecos was passed authorizing the creation of the school.

The bill required that a site be selected by Dec. 31, 1969, and stated the college should be located within 12 miles of Odessa College on land determined by the University of Texas System Board of Regents.

The bill was approved on June 10, 1969, followed four days later by a vote of the Midland City Council, which approved paying all costs for utility extensions to the Scharbauer site.

It looked good — at least on paper.

But the agreement eventually was scrapped by Odessa politicians and civic leaders, leaving bad feelings on both sides of the issue.

Midlanders felt betrayed.

On Aug. 1, 1969, the UT-System regents voted to place the university at its present location in Odessa.

Midland attorney Martin Alladay, who was president of the Midland Chamber of Commerce at the time, said that while it was unfortunate that relations between the

Although she had worked undercover before, it was the first time Kathy played the part of a student.

"I was pretty confident about it. I'd had a lot of training," Kathy said. She was employed by the Permian Basin Drug Task Force.

"I fit in pretty good — that was easy. I was passing for 18," the 21-year-old said.

As a student, Kathy had to register and go to class just like anyone else. "It was really weird, but I got used to it after a couple of weeks," she said.

But instead of studying for her math, English, biology, Spanish or photography classes, Kathy played the part of a drug user.

"I ran around with all the druggies. ... I had a bad reputation," she said. That included neglecting her homework.

"I did my work in class but I just had bad grades — C's and D's. I was passing probably because I had been through it before," she said.

It didn't take long for Kathy to

Parrish sees no immediate impact of 4-year UTPB on Midland College

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

Midland College leaders put their differences aside Saturday and expressed support for the University of Texas of the Permian Basin's four-year endeavors.

With only an imminent Gov. Ann Richards signature standing between a two-year and four-year UTPB, MC officials said they hope the institution is successful.

"I haven't changed my mind over concerning the reason or need behind it," President Jess Parrish said. "But things are different now."

"It's here and it's a reality. We'll work in every way we can to make UTPB successful and Midland College successful."

Parrish, who is retiring this fall, said he does not see a strong possibility of MC losing students to UTPB.

"I don't expect any immediate impact on Midland College's enrollment. I don't anticipate any changes at all in our recruiting efforts," he said.

MC President Parrish

"There are many strong community colleges that have four-year universities nearby. We want every education institution in this area to be strong."

Parrish said he expects MC academic as well as vocational programs to remain successful.

Parker Humes, a Midland College trustee, echoed Parrish's sentiments.

"I wish them all the best at UTPB," Humes said. "I think we will still have a place, a very important place."

"I expect us to continue to grow and prosper. We have a lot of things going for us."

Perhaps the college's biggest weapon to keep up enrollment is a lucrative Abell-Hanger Foundation scholarship available to all graduating high schoolers in Midland County.

Every student graduating from Greenwood, Lee and Midland high schools can receive a full two-year scholarship to Midland College.

As long as the students maintain their grades, the scholarship will pay for tuition and books for both years.

Trustee Fred S. Wright said that although he does not see a four-year UTPB drastically hurting Midland College, the university may find the going difficult.

"I think they're going to be sorry," Wright said. "They've got a tough row to hoe, financially and everything else."

"I guess it's something we'll just have to live with. It's going to hurt Odessa College more than it's going to hurt us."

On its anniversary two years ago, current president Dr. Duane Leach observed in an interview with the Reporter-Telegram that UTPB truly was filling a need for the region.

"This area is undergoing a vast transformation. This is history — but it doesn't look that way sometimes when you're going through it."

Little did Leach realize that history was about to be made again with UTPB's move from a two- to a four-year school — this, at an institution that has made controversy work in its favor.

area. Many people in this area haven't attended a four-year institution. They don't realize what the attraction of a full-fledged four-year university would be."

Leach also said four-year status would facilitate the process of receiving grants. "It will give the campus a new identity, which is extremely important when obtaining grants," he said. "People 2,000 miles away just don't understand what an upper-level institution (for juniors and seniors only) is all about."

After her undercover investigation, Kathy said the openness and accessibility of drugs at Odessa High probably is representative of most high schools.

Her experiences spread some new light on the school drug scene, however.

"The main thing that stood out is that some of the parents use the drugs with their kids," Kathy said.

Kathy also said she was alarmed to find so much methamphetamine being used.

And her work confirmed some old insight into drug use among youngsters.

"They come from all types of families. ... Most of it (why they use drugs) is peer pressure."

Former principal pleads no contest to molestation charges

DALLAS (AP) — A former Seagoville Middle School principal has pleaded no contest to four child molestation charges after learning the district attorney's office had two witnesses willing to testify the educator molested them years ago, a prosecutor said.

When Louis E. Moore, Jr., 63, entered the plea Friday, he would not comment on whether the testimony from the new witnesses was the reason for his plea.

But Assistant District Attorney Larry Jarrett says Moore was told several weeks ago that two men, now in their early 20s, had come forward. They informed Jarrett's office and other authorities they had been molested in 1983, shortly after Moore became principal.

Moore said on Friday, his primary reason for entering the plea was to put an end to the matter.

The two unidentified men contacted authorities after Moore's March trial on three molestation charges ended in a mistrial after jurors became deadlocked over conflicting testimony about the boys' credibility.

Three former students testified at the March trial that Moore fondled them on difference occasions in 1989 when each one, complaining of stomach problems, went to the school's clinic.

Moore had claimed the charges were the result of conspiracy plot, engineered by a teacher and one of his accusers, to remove him from his post.

As a result of the plea, Moore received five years probation, a $2,000 fine. He must also undergo a psychologist's evaluation and is prohibited from having contact with any youths under the age of 17 unless another adult is present. Moore, who could have faced up to 20 years in prison and a $10,000 fine on each count, could not be reached for comment on his case Friday.

Remark causes furor

HOUSTON (AP) — Harris County District Attorney John B. Holmes Jr. says he will not discipline prosecutor Ira Jones, who told young prosecutors the best jurors are "Oreos — black on the outside, white on the inside."

Holmes said Friday he could not in good conscience suspend or fire Jones.

"Who am I to be advising or telling people about what they say," said Holmes, who himself has a reputation for verbal accidents. "I'm probably the worst offender in the world."

"I'm confident that if Ira had given any amount of thought to that damn-fool observation he wouldn't have made it. I don't think it reveals some innate prejudice on his part."

Jones, head of the district attorney's major narcotics offenders squad, kept the audience in a training session laughing Thursday by saying he tries to keep women in "fandango dresses," men with earrings and folks with bleached hair and too many children off his juries.

But there was no laughter when Jones said "Oreos" make the best jurors.

STATE IN BRIEF

■ Texas couple, son killed in traffic accident

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A St. Mary's University professor, his wife and a son were killed in a New Mexico traffic accident as they approached a roadblock set up to apprehend a woman who stole a 1-day-old infant from a hospital.

Bollera M. Machia, 57, a biology professor, his wife and their son died early Friday on Interstate 10 near Las Cruces when their vehicle rear-ended a tractor-trailer rig, a spokesman for the New Mexico State Police said.

The car, driven by Aniel Machia, 22, struck the truck about 7:45 a.m. as it was slowing to approach the roadblock. Judith Machia, 47, also was killed in the wreck.

■ Dow to build waste-water treatment plant

FREEPORT, Texas (AP) — Dow Chemical plans to build a $100 million waste-water treatment facility at its chemical plant here.

Construction is scheduled to begin shortly on the facility, which would replace the plant's existing treatment plant. The waste-water facility is expected to be completed by late 1993.

The company is awaiting approval of a tax abatement application from Brazoria County that would delay taxes on the improvements. A hearing on that application is set for Monday.

■ Texan tries again for flights in Colorado

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. (AP) — Despite certain neighborhood opposition, Texas businessman John Andrews will make a third attempt to bring commercial flights to Centennial Airport.

Andrews will meet with the airport board next month to discuss his plan, which includes providing daily passenger service with 100-passenger jets to such cities as San Antonio, San Francisco and Salt Lake City. "It's the same plan I've been trying to establish for the past four years," he said.

Book describes black gunfighters in Indian Territory

DALLAS (AP) — Two of the toughest gunfighters in the Indian Territory a century ago were from Texas. And both were black.

"Indian Territory was the wild west of the Wild West," said author Arthur T. Burton, dean of multicultural affairs at Loyola University in Chicago.

The book, published by Eakin Press in Austin, is a highly detailed look at the subject of black gunfighters that is made entertaining by the liberal quoting of newspaper accounts from the period.

"With the arrival of gamblers, prostitutes, whisky peddlers and drifters who lived by the gun, criminal violence (in the Territory) took a drastic leap upward," accelerated by the absence of local law enforcement agencies, Burton said.

The Indian Territory, originally most of present-day Oklahoma, was carved out by the U.S. government in 1830 to house the Indians who had been moved from their homes East of the Mississippi River.

In 1870, the Territory's population was about 68,152, mostly Indians. That number included 6,378 blacks and 2,407 whites.

There were no white settlements, but five black towns had been established.

Most of the blacks had been slaves owned by the Indians and brought west in the 1830s. After 1865, the slaves became free men, Burton said.

Burton, who is black, says he wrote the book because he remembers believing that there were no black cowboys.

He recalls seeing a 1930s Western musical called "Harlem on the Prairie."

"My first reaction was to feel embarrassed, because everyone knew there were no black cowboys, he says.

Later, while visiting relatives in Oklahoma, he heard stories to the contrary, sparking his interest in further research.

Burton searched libraries for old newspapers and the rare book that documented the role of blacks in the Old West.

Boy charged in stabbing of teacher

BAYTOWN, Texas (AP) — A 14-year-old boy has been charged with injuring an elderly person in connection with the stabbing of his science teacher on the day of her retirement party.

A hearing was scheduled for Monday for the Highlands Junior High School seventh-grader, whose name was not released because he is a juvenile. The court will determine whether he should remain in the Harris County Juvenile Detention Center until his case is resolved.

Milk price increase granted

ALBANY, N.Y. — An emergency price increase of seven cents a gallon for milk produced by New York dairy farmers was announced Saturday by the state Department of Agriculture and Markets.

The price increase was made in conformity with a bill passed by the Legislature last week and signed into law by Gov. Mario M. Cuomo to protect dairy farmers, whose income from milk has fallen by more than 20 percent in the last year, while their costs have gone up.

"A whole lot of people are going to be milking in September who, without this law, would have been calling in the auctioneer," said the commissioner of agriculture and markets, Richard T. McGuire.

Farmers facing worst disaster in half century

BONITA, La. (AP) — It's the height of the cotton planting season, but instead of being in the fields, Duke Shackleford spends his days talking with fellow farmers whose fertile land is under water.

Farmers across flood-stricken northeastern Louisiana are facing possible financial disaster that will trickle down to the economies of their agriculture-based parishes.

Shackleford said farmers have been reduced to the point of just hoping to throw a crop together that will enable them to pay their bills and break even.

"It's like a country man once said: 'I don't want any cheese. I just want out of the trap,'" he said.

At least 275,000 acres of Morehouse Parish farmland has been under water since heavy rain in April backed up bayous and the Ouachita River. In less than 24 hours in late April, the area received more than 11 inches of rain.

"This is the worst shape our country has been in since 1927," Shackleford said.

He said his family farming operation, which is based on cotton and peanuts, will survive. But smaller operators have their backs to the wall, he said.

"The people who are well financed can recover in a year or two," Shackleford said. "But if a farmer is borderline, he's not going to be able to do it again."

The agricultural extension service at Louisiana State University recommended that farmers wait no later than May 15 to plant cotton. A later planting will translate into lower yields, more problems with insects and the chance of an early frost catching the crop.

Farmland also has been flooded in neighboring southern Arkansas and northern Mississippi, and water has intruded into thousands of homes in the three states. According to the Red Cross, 8,952 homes in 22 Louisiana parishes have been hit by high water.

Downstream from Bonita, crews worked Saturday to fix part of the Ouachita River levee south of Monroe that began leaking for the second time in three days Friday. The levee was in no danger of breaking, officials said.

Heavy rain also has taken a toll on southeastern Louisiana, where floods hit Ascension, St. James and St. Mary parishes.

Shackleford's son, John, said that even though the crop has not been planted, farmers already have an extensive investment. The Shacklefords have spent about $100 an acre for land preparation, fertilizer and chemicals. In addition, some farmers are required to pay their land rent before starting work, another major expense that may not be recouped, he said.

NATION IN BRIEF

■ U.S. ready to end aid to Afghan rebels

WASHINGTON — In a growing recognition that an 11-year policy aimed at overthrowing the Soviet-backed government of Afghanistan is outdated, the Bush administration has not requested funds for the Afghan rebels in its proposed 1992 budget, senior administration officials say.

In interviews last week, the officials stressed that the administration reserved the right to request funds for the program as the budget process continues over the next two months. And Congress can still recommend a continuation of the program on its own.

Although some administration officials remain committed to sending funds to the rebels, the move reflects increasing frustration that the Afghan policy is outdated and hard to defend.

"The administration is tiring of the war," said a senior administration official involved in developing the policy.

■ Idahoans hope to stop waste shipments

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Idaho's effort to block the resumption of radioactive waste shipments into the state has been taken before a federal appeals court.

A three-judge panel of the 9th U.S. Circuit of Appeals in San Francisco is expected Tuesday to consider Idaho's request for an emergency stay to block shipments of waste from a decommissioned nuclear power plant in Colorado.

Shipments could start the 690-mile trip from Platteville, Colo., to the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory as early as May 20. But the state says that would expose Idaho residents to the threat of radiation.

The state's motion for an emergency stay, backed up by 50 pages of depositions and exhibits, was filed with the 9th Circuit on Friday, just hours after the state was notified that the Department of Energy plans to start accepting waste shipments at the laboratory site in southeastern Idaho.

■ Assisted suicide pushed back into spotlight

DETROIT (AP) — It was supposed to be simple. Bertram Harper, his terminally ill wife, Virginia, and her daughter flew from California to Michigan so Mrs. Harper could commit suicide.

Unlike California, Michigan laws didn't prevent assisted suicide. The Harpers agreed on it. Mrs. Harper, 69, had prepared for it, choosing a procedure and "recipe" of sleeping pills published by The Hemlock Society, a suicide support group based in Eugene, Ore.

"We wanted to come here and do it quietly, peacefully," Harper, 73, said Friday, hours after a jury acquitted him of second-degree murder in his wife's death.

Friday's verdict sent both sides clamoring for clarification of the law. "Hundreds of people every year illegally help loved ones die and lawmakers should now take time to carefully modify the laws," said Derek Humphry, president and founder of the Hemlock Society.

■ House leaders shore up women's rights bill

WASHINGTON — Seeking to shore up support among Southern members of Congress, House Democratic leaders are asking supporters of a civil rights bill to accept limits on jury awards to female victims of employment discrimination.

Such a move would be a significant retreat for the bill's supporters, who tried this year to shift the focus of the debate to women's rights to avoid the issue of quotas.

Compiled from Reporter-Telegram wire services.

Quayle says he was ready

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Dan Quayle had no doubts about what he should do if President Bush's health had required that he assume the powers of the presidency, he said in an interview released Saturday.

"I felt very comfortable that we had prepared for something like this and there wasn't a lot of hurrying around saying 'What do we do now?' Everyone knew what to do," Quayle told U.S. News and World Report.

When he learned the president had been taken to the hospital last Saturday from the presidential retreat in Camp David, Md., Quayle continued his plans to host a National Space Society reception at his home.

The next day, the White House announced that it was preparing for the possibility Bush would have to be incapacitated for a medical procedure and that presidential power would be temporarily transferred to Quayle under the 25th Amendment.

"The president has taken the 25th Amendment very seriously. He has made sure people know what to do in case the amendment has to be invoked," Quayle said in the interview.

As it turned out, the procedure that would have required Bush to be under anesthesia for a short time did not have to be carried out.

"At no time was it suggested to me that it (Bush's illness) was serious," Quayle said. "I had made a calculated decision from the very beginning that I would stay to my schedule unless there was a reason not to."

Quayle also said he loves being vice president, despite his low popularity ratings.

Boy pens a rap tune for Mother's Day, wins prize

BOTHELL, Wash. (AP) — It's not your typical ballad, but an 11-year-old's love for his mother comes through loud and clear in the rap tune "Yo, Mother, Let's Cook It."

Tyler Rhoades wrote the song and won a half-carat diamond pendant for his mother, Charlene, in the Northshore School District's "Why My Mom Deserves a Diamond" Mother's Day contest.

"I wanted to be creative and put my heart into it," said Tyler, a fifth-grader at Arrowhead Elementary School.

Tyler wrote his lyrics to the music of the rap hit "Ice, Ice Baby," one of his favorite tunes.

The song goes:
"Yo mother, Let's cook it!
Cook rice and gravy,
Rice and gravy.
Just don't stop! You're the best! So listen.
I wrote this song and it's really kickin'
Your love grabs ahold of me tight.
'Cause you're my mom and you do it just right.
You raised me since a baby.
I don't mean maybe.

Gorbachev says Soviet Union near chaos

LONDON (AP) — Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev said his country is in great turmoil and that the superpowers could be headed for another Cold War because of pressure by American conservatives.

"Chaos can be easily created," Gorbachev said in an interview with The Sunday Times. "We are on the verge of chaos, because we are abandoning a command economy and because we are moving towards a situation where all the various actors will be free."

"If we stop the process, we could have to reimpose the command system," the Soviet leader was quoted as saying.

In an interview last week with Rupert Murdoch, chief executive of News International, which owns the Sunday Times, Gorbachev said American conservatives are turning U.S. policies against the Soviet Union.

"American farmers are being told that they cannot have credit for grain exports to us," he said. "The United States has vetoed exports of computers to us. The right wing in America is not just trying to put pressure on us, it has succeeded in making changes in American policy."

Gorbachev suggested that Japan was acting in part on American advice when it gave him a cool reception during his visit last month.

"Nixon and Kissinger and Brezhnev have become more active, because of the Gulf War and because of the difficult situation we have with perestroika. They think their time has come again," he said.

Gorbachev was referring to former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and former National Security Advisory Zbigniew Brzezinski. Perestroika is Gorbachev's policy of social and political reform.

"If we allow the U.S.-Soviet relationship to deteriorate there will be a new Cold War," he was quoted as saying. "Or at least rainy weather."

"We and the United States are doomed to be tied together," he said. "Maybe the U.S. feels it does not need a strong Soviet Union — but we feel we need a strong United States. It is the guiding axis of international relations."

China party chief due in Moscow

BEIJING — (NYT) When the Soviet president, Mikhail S. Gorbachev, visited Beijing two years ago, the Chinese welcomed him with embarrassed smiles, but when China's Communist Party leader, Jiang Zemin, travels to the Soviet Union on Wednesday, the roles will be somewhat reversed.

Jiang's four-day trip will give the Chinese a chance to redress the memory of Gorbachev's visit to Beijing, still clouded by images of protesting students and the military crackdown in Tiananmen Square. These days, China's political and economic situation appears stable, while it is the Soviet Union that faces a host of challenges.

More important, however, for China this trip is the culmination of a long process of normalizing relations with the only major communist power left in the world. In many ways, it represents the mending of party ties.

Jiang will be the first Chinese Communist Party leader to visit the Soviet Union since Chairman Mao Zedong went in 1957.

"China's trying to save socialism," said David L. Shambaugh, a professor of Chinese politics at the University of London. "It represents a Chinese attempt to play the Soviet card and resurrect the strategic triangle as Sino-American relations deteriorate."

In a dispatch on Friday evening, the official New China News Agency called the coming visit "an event of great significance in the history of the Sino-Soviet relations."

In the last year, both China and the Soviet Union have been bolstering the relationship, strained for three decades until Gorbachev met the senior leader, Deng Xiaoping, in May 1989. Obstacles in the relationship remain, however, such as disputes over the 4,500-mile border.

Nonetheless, in the last 18 months, there have been a flurry of visits between the two countries, including Prime Minister Li Peng's visit in April last year. Officials have negotiated agreements in a wide range of fields, from military exchanges to technological and scientific programs.

Last week, Soviet Defense Minister Dmitry T. Yazov concluded a trip to China that had been postponed several times. Neither the Soviets nor the Chinese have revealed details of the talks, but they are believed to have focused on the sale of Soviet aircraft, a squadron of fighter-interceptors, and the stationing of troops of both countries in border areas.

The dispute over the border, especially in China's western region, is likely to persist. The New China News Agency said that the two sides had reached a draft agreement on China's eastern border and had agreed to limit their military forces in the border areas.

Conditions improving for release of hostages

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syria's vice president said Saturday that conditions have improved for the release of Westerners held in Lebanon. Britain appealed for freedom of hostage Jack Mann on the second anniversary of his abduction. The Syrian official, Abdul-Halim Khaddam, said circumstances for a possible release of the 13 Westerners missing in Lebanon were "more positive" than in the past.

"But we've learned that the hostage-holders have demands," Khaddam said. "They want Israel to free the Lebanese prisoners it holds."

Sheikh Hasina (right), leader of the opposition in Bangladesh Parliament, comforts a crying tornado victim in Gazipur, Bangladesh on Saturday. The woman lost her husband and a son in the tornado that struck on Thursday. Bangladesh is still reeling from an April 29 cyclone that took the lives of over 138,000.

Death toll from Bangladesh cyclone rises past 138,000

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — Bangladesh said Saturday that 138,000 people died in the cyclone that ravaged its southeastern coast, and news reports said surging rivers had driven another 150,000 people from their homes.

At least eight people drowned Saturday in the flooding that swept away thousands of homes, newspapers said.

Also Saturday, a moderate earthquake shook the hills of eastern Bangladesh, the latest in a numbing chain of natural disasters to strike this impoverished land since the April 30 killer cyclone. There were no immediate reports of damage or casualties from the quake, which measured 4.9 on the Richter scale.

At least 118 people have died in tornadoes and floods since the cyclone and accompanying tidal wave rushed ashore from the Bay of Bengal.

'Operation Gallant Provider' plan trucks Kurds homeward

BALOKA BRIDGE, Iraq — Sweating from the weight of their tents and tea kettles, Kurds plodded down a mountain path Saturday as their return from Turkey grew into a human wave.

British marines in khaki uniforms handed the returning Kurds cups of sugar water as they walked the last 90 steps across the final bridge into Iraq after the long, taxing walk from a Turkish refugee camp.

The refugees rested in the shade for a while, then climbed aboard American-leased dump trucks for their free ride back toward an allied-staffed "way station" seven miles farther inside the allied-occupied security zone of northern Iraq.

It was the first day of Operation Gallant Provider, an allied military plan to return 206,000 Kurds from Turkish refugee camps within the next two or three weeks.

For many it was a joyless return. "We will return to an empty house, a damaged house, but what can we do?" said Nahruri Mustafa, 47, who said her home in the town of Sarsenk had been looted by Iraqi soldiers.

Judging from the human flow at this and a half dozen other unofficial border crossings, the allied forces are making headway toward their goal of emptying the camps in Turkey before June 1.

"We had 1,000 people pass here by noon, and then we stopped counting," said British Royal Marine 1st Lt. Tim Cook. "The priority had to be giving them food and water."

What lies ahead for the Kurds now that they are back in Iraq is a far murkier problem.

To the dismay of the allied refugee planners, thousands of Kurds are beginning to cluster in new, unsanitary tent clusters in the foothills.

Burt Reynolds advises graduates to 'be bold, not wimpy'

EVENING SHADE, Ark. (AP) — Burt Reynolds urged a small-town group of graduating high school students to "be bold, not wimpy."

The star of television's "Evening Shade," a show loosely based on life in this northeast Arkansas town of 400, was commencement speaker Friday for 20 or so seniors at Evening Shade School.

He told them not to forget their small-town roots.

Teen mothers thank moms

BALTIMORE (AP) — Mother's Day at a school for teen-age mothers can be a time for reflection. And tears. And tissues. And papertowels.

Officials at the Laurence G. Paquin Junior-Senior High School used the opportunity to foster relations between the girls and their own mothers. During an assembly Friday, two dozen teen-agers and their mothers took time out to tell each other how they felt.

"Today may be the first time you hear them say, 'Mama, I love you,'" said principal Rosetta Stith. "You want a tissue?" asked school nurse Cathy Henderson. "It gets right tearful." She had several takers.

Stith stood at the podium and held up her own box of tissues. "When these run out, we have Bounty," she said.

The Mother's Day assembly is an annual affair at the school for pregnant teen-agers and new mothers. Stith came up with the idea a decade ago, saying that in her students' neighborhoods, love was not a household word.

"I thank you for all that you've done for me and I thank you for what you've done for her," one student told her mother, who cradled her granddaughter. "Because like I told you already, I couldn't have made it without you."

One exchange between a daughter and her mother, who had survived a car accident, drew laughter as well as tears.

"I know I'm not the best child in the world, but I love you," the daughter said.

"And I know you're not the best child in the world," the mother answered. "But I'm grateful that God spared my life to see you have a beautiful child and I'd like to say happy Mother's Day to you."

The school is a refuge for 300 expectant students and new mothers aged 12 to 19. Because so few cities have such schools, about 10 percent are from out of state, Stith said.

Mail handler accused of stealing cards

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A mail handler at the Postal Service's General Mail Facility was accused Saturday of stealing about 100 Mother's Day cards.

The suspect, whose name was not released, gave a statement to authorities and was placed on emergency suspension pending an indictment by a federal grand jury, said postal inspector Charles Lanks.

Inspectors had been investigating such thefts because discarded greeting cards — sometimes in bunches of five or 10 — had been found recently in various locations around the city.

All had been opened and then thrown away.

"A lot of people send money, or tickets, to their mothers so they can come visit them," Lanks said.

The investigation was continuing but "the indication is that we've got the biggest fish," he said.

The same city mail facility has been the subject of a federal investigation into the theft of up to $1 million in stamps and postal merchandise.

No criminal charges have been filed in the case.

Widows honored

PALM HARBOR, Fla. (AP) — Judy Fine is laying out the silver, her best china and her lace tablecloth for a breakfast to honor 10 widows with "nowhere else to go" on Mother's Day.

Mrs. Fine, 48, got the idea when she noticed several widows sitting together at her church one Sunday. She realized they had no family around to celebrate special occasions.

"I've got to tell you something. When you finally really do what they call make it, whatever that means, what you want is a house in a town like this. You've made it," Reynolds said.

Reynolds, a native of Jupiter, Fla., received a key to the city and a letter jacket. The commencement drew about 1,000 people.

The actor, who stars as coach Wood Newton in the CBS series, advised the graduates not make excuses for their mistakes.

"Be bold, not wimpy," he said.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country singer Vern Gosdin hopes to fill the marquee of his new Alabama music park with some of the industry's biggest names.

His Rocket City Country Music Amphitheater is scheduled to open Aug. 4 on 53 acres in Ardmore, just across the line from Tennessee.

"I like Nashville, but there's just something about the folks down here," said Gosdin, who lives in Tennessee near Ardmore. "They're laid back."

Gosdin, 56, plans to perform on the park's opening day with George Jones, Dean Dillon and Heart of Dixie.

The amphitheater will hold 10,000 to 15,000 people, but no seats will be installed initially to make room for lawn chairs and coolers.

Gosdin's "Chiseled in Stone" was the Country Music Association's song of the year in 1989.

FARGO, N.D. (AP) — Dr. Ruth Westheimer knows just whom to blame for bedroom problems.

"I told Johnny Carson that he was singlehandedly responsible for Americans' lousy sex lives," she said. "People are watching him instead of having sex."

PUEBLO, Colo. (AP) — Barbara Bush counseled new graduates of Pueblo Community College to be kind.

"Never lose sight of the fact that the most important yardstick of your success will be how you treat other people — your family, friends and co-workers and even strangers you meet along the way," the first lady said during the school's commencement Friday night.

"Being a parent, a daughter, a son, a sister, a brother or somebody's best friend is the most important role you play in this life," Mrs. Bush said.

About 3,000 people, including several hundred graduates, gave her standing ovations at the start and finish of her brief speech.

In 1987, then-Vice President George Bush visited Pueblo.

Mrs. Bush, a literacy advocate, has written the preface of a new book edited by the college's president, Tony Zeiss.

Dogs advance to area

■ Midland High survives a ninth-inning scare to defeat Lubbock Monterey in the 10th inning of the deciding bi-district game.

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

LUBBOCK — Midland High marched its 1-0 bi-district series lead into Lubbock's Lowrey Field Saturday only to feel the bite of a 7-1 defeat and the immediacy of a rubber game with ninth-ranked Lubbock Monterey.

And the Bulldogs might easily have begun looking ahead to next baseball season when Monterey loaded the bases with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning of Game 3.

Instead they looked to junior right-hander Brian Rounding, and the playoff veteran did not blink.

Rounding worked out of the jam to keep the game even at 3-3, and Dewayne Culpepper drove in two runs in the top of the 10th with his third double of the game to push Midland High past the Plainsmen in dramatic fashion, as the Bulldogs claimed a 5-3 win and advanced to the area round of the playoffs.

MHS, 15-10, will take on the winner of the El Paso Coronado-El Paso Socorro series next weekend at a time and site to be determined Monday.

"This was a great win. It was a great game for the people to watch," MHS head coach Rick Wood said after the Bulldogs survived the 10-inning war of attrition in which Monterey's pitching staff dwindled until Tony Gonzales — the starter — returned as the Plainsmen's fifth and losing hurler.

"Brian (Rounding) came on and had a whale of a ball game. He's really staring to come into his own," said Wood, the first year mentor whose charges carried on the Bulldog tradition of never having lost to Monterey in a bi-district playoff.

Monterey jumped on Culpepper for all seven runs and Michael Davidson limited the Bulldogs to two hits in Saturday's 7-1 opener.

But Culpepper made up for the lackluster pitching performance with a 3-for-6 nightcap, scattering his three doubles all over the outfield for four RBI.

"I've got to admit my heart was beating pretty hard when I went to bat in the 10th," said Culpepper, who drove in Jimmy Stanton each time he doubled.

"The first pitch I swung at was pretty high, but I sat back on the second pitch and got the double," he said. "But the main thing is we won."

paw almost didn't get a chance to provide the dramatic ending.

Monterey's Joey Gonzales drew a lead-off walk off Rounding to start the bottom of the ninth. Tony Gonzales sacrificed his brother to second, and Rounding intentionally walked Heath Andrews. Then, Rounding misfired for a wild pitch that advanced the runners, and he had to intentionally pass Chris Shuffield to load the bases with one out in the sudden-death frame.

Ponies two-time Rebels

■ Lubbock Coronado turns the tables on Midland Lee, sweeping a doubleheader to capture their bi-district series.

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

LUBBOCK — But for the vagaries of Lady Luck, Midland Lee might have won its bi-district baseball playoff against Lubbock Coronado. At least that's the way the home-field advantage worked out.

Last week's coin-flip decided Coronado would host Saturday's possible doubleheader in the best-of-three series.

Following Lee's opening win Friday in Midland was the Rebel hope of a series sweep — and the reality that Coronado is a much different team in its home park at O'Banion Field.

The Mustangs displayed the same hitting ability that got them seven runs in a 9-7 loss Friday, but also received the pitching at home that was absent in Game 1 to defeat Lee twice here Saturday and advance into the area playoff round.

Coronado's 8-1 and 13-3 wins over the Rebels pit the Ponies against El Paso Del Valle at a time and site to be determined, while Lee finishes the season with a 19-10 record.

"They were just ready to play today and we weren't, and I have to take the blame for that," said Lee head coach Jesse Benavidez. "We came to play one game and they were set to play two."

And knowing that anything short of a doubleheader sweep would eliminate them, the Mustangs found the familiarity of their home field to their liking, as possible Rebel home runs at Lee's Johnson Field were turned into harmless flyouts inside O'Banion's deeper fences.

"Obviously it was great to play, two here. I'll put it this way, if we had gotten beat here Friday then had to win two there it would have been tough," said Mustang head coach John Dudley, whose team moved to 19-12 with the two wins.

"You would think it would be a great ball park for us, and we have won most of our big games here, but we have also lost some key games here, especially one to (Lubbock) Monterey," Dudley said. "But we usually play pretty well here."

Dudley also was the preeminent member of the Wagner Wicks fan club Saturday. After Wicks hit a pair of two-run homers Friday, Dudley saw a spark that carried over to Saturday.

Though Wicks did not homer and went 2-for-8 at the plate in the two games, his pitching in the day's opener was decisive.

Wicks (8-3) fed the Rebs a steady diet of wicked curveballs to spread five hits over seven innings for the single Lee run, which was unearned. Wicks ended the game with one walk and seven strikeouts.

"He had really been hit hard his last few outings, but he was a different person this week with what he did yesterday (Friday) and the great job he did on the mound today," Dudley said.

In the finale, Steve Cristian (4-3) also gave the Mustangs a solid start, though Dudley yanked him in the fifth after Cristian had given up a solo homer to Reb third baseman Keith Bell that made the score 11-2.

Bell's shot, along with a run scored by Brad Sanders on a passed ball, kept the Rebs from being 10-run-ruled for the time being, but it was only a matter of time. After going scoreless in the top of the sixth, Lee saw Coronado pull out two more scores in the bottom of the sixth, as Nick Todd slapped the game-winner to left field to score

Stanton's Stallings takes two state titles

■ Midland Lee's Jovan Tellez and Traci Logan come up short in their events at the University Interscholastic League State Track Meet in Austin.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

AUSTIN — Stanton sophomore Jeremy Stallings won both the 800 and 1600-meter races here Saturday night in the state high school track meet while the Abilene High girls brought District 4-5A a rare double victory, winning both the 800 and 1600 relays.

But there wasn't much good news on the local front as Midland Lee's Traci Logan and Jovan Tellez failed to place in their respective events.

Abilene High won the 800 relay in 1:38.5, a best this year; Stallings captured the 800-meter crown in Class 2A, beating Fred Yarbrough of Timpson, who was seeking his third consecutive state title in that event.

The Lady Eagles appeared to be in trouble heading into the anchor leg of LaRhonda Kendrick, but Kendrick won at the tape.

"I knew I was behind when I got the baton and I was just thinking catch-up and get in front somehow," Kendrick said.

Thelma McDow held off a Fort Worth Dunbar rally to win at the tape in the 1600 relay as the team posted a 3:48.8. "We weren't expected to win the 1600, so that was the most fun. We made sure we used the same baton that we used in the 800. We've got to find a special place for this baton," said McDow.

Stallings already knew the sting of defeat at the hands of Yarbrough, finishing third here last year as a freshman in the 800. A year of planning paid off. It was a controlled test of revenge and almost predestined kind of win, out-kicking Yarbrough down the final stretch for a 1:54.0.

"I ran a perfect race. I was fifth after one lap, but I ran the first lap in 56 seconds and that's right where I wanted it to be," Stallings said. "I was behind (Yarbrough) off the final curve, but I knew what to expect from last year. The difference from last year to this year is that I'm stronger. I was thinking Yarbrough all the way."

Asked what he still had left to prove, he had a quick answer.

"Win the 1600 — tonight." He did, and it was perhaps his biggest accomplishment of the meet. He was favored to win the 800, but he was a dark best in the 1600, but won in 4:24.2. "I thought I could win, but I admit I wasn't as confident about the 1600 as I was in the 800. The 800 is my race. This was a shock. I wanted to just medal, but I saw I had a chance to win and my whole body went numb," Stallings said.

Odessa High's sprint relay team had high hopes of winning here and it did turn in a season best 40.3, but Killen had a 40.0 to win while OHS was third behind Willowridge, who dropped the baton and still finished second.

"We were running hard and I don't know what happened," said OHS' Fred Givens. "It was our best time, but we thought we could win this thing."

Odessa High junior Ryan Ledlow placed third in the high jump with a 6-10 on an event decided on misses.

"I guess I just choked," Ledlow said. "I wanted to win. I was jumping higher earlier in the year and I got weaker as the track season went on. Running in basketball got me loose, but this won't happen next year. I want to win everything. My goal is the national record of 7-6 and I think I can get it."

Abilene High's Alex Holland, who converted from the 400 to the 800 this year, gave District 4-5A another medal with a third place in 1:53.0.

"I was right where I wanted to be after 600 meters. I was leading, but I just didn't have enough to finish it," Holland said. "Still, the time is my best and I feel pretty good about the whole experience."

Things were much tougher for the two Midlanders. Logan finished seventh out of eight in the 300 hurdles with a 45.5 while Tellez was eighth with a 52.0 in the shot put. Neither earned any points, but the two juniors had their eyes opened by competing against some of the state's best.

Tellez saw the 270-pound Sam Adams throw 65-7 and Huntsville 300-plus pound giant Cesar O'Neal dwarf the field.

"I've never felt that small in all my life," said Tellez, who weighs 250 pounds himself. "I've never thought of myself as being small, but this is something else. I've never been in a meet when people were this big or throw this far. I just choked up. I've never seen anybody throw 65-feet before."

Logan said she was embarrassed with her seventh place in the hurdles. "I'm not even going home after this," Logan said. "That's the worse race I've ever run. I've never felt so slow in all my life. It's a lot like at the regionals when I was a sophomore and lost. Well, I've been here now and I know what it takes and I'll be back next year."

Kendrick also had fifth place in the 200 while OHS' Brad Givens was sixth in the 200. Odessa Permian's Robert John was fifth in the high hurdles with a 1.45.

Permian high jumper Brandi Craig had her usual 5-4, but tied for sixth. Abilene High's Jay Lowry was fifth in the long jump with a 22-9/4.

In Class 3A, Reagan County freshman Elicia Thompson won the shot put with a 40-6/4 after being projected to finish fourth at best.

An estimated crowd of 30,000 was on hand for the meet, leading Lee's Logan to say, "This is really something. There's more people here than there is for a Lee-Permian game."

Killen, led by DeCarlo Terry's anchor leg in the 400-meter relay and his second-place finish in the 200-meter dash, upstaged defending champion Sugar Land Willowridge to win its fourth state Class 5A title at the University Interscholastic League track and field meet Saturday night.

Willowridge, primed for a run at the national record of 39.9 in the 400-meter relay, suffered from bad handoffs, while Killen gave the baton to Terry with a lead for the final leg. He held off Willowridge's Mike Miller at the tape for a Class 5A record 40.0 time.

Willowridge was second at 40.1. Willowridge still had a chance to win its second straight title in the 200-meters, and Miller did his part by winning the event in 20.8. But Terry almost overtook him at the finish for a second place 20.9 finish and enough points for the team trophy.

Killen won state titles in 1978, 1979 and 1980.

Killen finished with 54 points to Willowridge's 50.

Fort Worth Dunbar, with a second-place finish in the 1,600-meter relay, captured the girls Class 5A state title.

Jasper set the national record in the 400-meter relay in Friday night's Class 4A finals.

Missions take 7-6 win in series rubber match

Staff Report

SAN ANTONIO — Midland and San Antonio closed out their five-game Texas League series here Saturday, as the Missions came from behind to claim a 7-6 win over the Angels in a 3-2 edge in the series.

The Angels will take a travel day before heading home to begin a 10-game home stand Monday, beginning against the Jackson Generals at 7 p.m. in Angels Stadium.

Midland then came back with a 11-8, but still came away with the defeat that means now for the season. The Missions are 12-17, while El Paso (21-9) and Wichita (18-11) battle for bragging rights in the Western Division.

Marcus Lawton and Mark Howie both had multiple-hit nights for Midland, as Lawton went 2-for-5 at the plate while Howie was 2-for-3.

The Angels jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the top of the first, and lead a fragile 3-2 edge after three complete innings. Then the Missions scored two runs in the fourth and the teams traded runs in the sixth.

Midland then came back with a

Penguin victory sets up 'Miracle on Ice II'

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Mark Recchi scored the biggest goal in Pittsburgh hockey history with a 4-20 left as the Penguins rallied from a two-goal deficit to beat the Boston Bruins 5-3 Saturday night and earn their first trip to the Stanley Cup finals.

Recchi's shot from the right circle dot off Gord Roberts' pass from the red line completed Pittsburgh's fourth straight win in the series and set up "Miracle on Ice II" — the first Stanley Cup final between two teams from the same division.

The Penguins, who had missed the playoffs for seven times in eight years prior to this season, will meet the Minnesota North Stars for the Cup beginning Wednesday in Pittsburgh. Pittsburgh and Minnesota both joined the NHL as expansion teams in 1967.

Minnesota, which finished only fourth in the Norris Division during the season and had the 10th-best record in the 21-team NHL, swept by regular-season points leader Chicago, No. 2 St. Louis and Chicago, No. 3, to reach the finals.

Pittsburgh's first championship series is nearly as unexpected. The Penguins were a .500 team for most of the season until Mario Lemieux's return and a late-season trade that brought them Ulf Samuelsson and Ron Francis from Hartford helped them to their first Patrick Division championship.

The Penguins then eliminated New Jersey and Washington to spotted Boston a two-game lead before outscoring the Bruins 22-7 during their fourth straight victories.

The victory touched off a huge celebration in the Civic Arena stands reminiscent of that when the Pittsburgh Steelers earned their first trip to the Super Bowl in 1974.

Lemieux had an empty-net goal, his 11th of the playoffs, at 19:38 and set up two earlier Pittsburgh goals as the Penguins refused to fold after falling behind 2-0 to a team they'd rarely beaten until this series.

Roberts not only set up the series-clinching goal, he gave Pittsburgh a 3-2 lead with his first post-season goal at 11:08 by scoring from the slot off Recchi's feed from Lemieux's drop pass.

Celtics shatter Pistons by 32

Associated Press

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — The lopsided score didn't impress Boston coach Chris Ford so much. It was the way the Celtics kept pouring it on.

The Celtics snapped a nine-game losing streak at Detroit, routing the Pistons 115-83 Saturday to take a 2-1 lead in the Eastern Conference playoff series.

"It wasn't the margin of victory that was important," Ford said. "That was just a number. I liked the fact that we stayed focused for 48 minutes and that everybody contributed and had a hand in the victory."

Reggie Lewis scored 21 points and Brian Shaw added 19 as the Celtics recorded their most lopsided playoff victory ever on the road. It topped the Celtics' 135-110 blowout win over Detroit in 1988.

"The reason why we win, and I've said this from day one, is that we definitely have more than the 'Big Three' (Larry Bird, Robert Parish, Kevin McHale)," Ford said. "Larry is not the only guy we go to. Other guys contribute. Larry still gets his fair share of shots, but so does everybody else."

As it turned out, the Celtics could have won without anyone taking a shot in the fourth quarter. Boston led 90-62 after three periods.

"It's perfect," Lewis said. "If you ever want a dream game, this would be it. I am surprised the way Detroit shot."

The Pistons, who had shot only 39.2 percent in the first two games, were even worse in Game 3, hitting 33.3 percent from the field. Detroit also missed 19 of 36 free throws.

"We haven't shot well in the whole series, but I think Boston's defense has a lot to do with that," Detroit coach Chuck Daly said. "We played with a lot of intensity in Boston, but today it looked like somebody let the air out of the balloon. We went flat and just got tattooed."

The Celtics shot 53 percent and had a 58-50 rebounding edge. The biggest key was the play of Boston's guard rotation of Lewis, Brian Shaw and Dee Brown. They outscored the Pistons' rotation of Isiah Thomas, Joe Dumars and Vinnie Johnson 53-24. And the Celtics' bench outscored Detroit's reserves 45-37.

"Nothing is easy during the playoffs," said Detroit's John Salley, who scored eight of his 12 points in the first half. "You can usually tell during warmups. We were very relaxed to-night. If I could explain that, I'd probably win the Nobel Peace Prize."

James Edwards was Detroit's leading scorer with only 13 points.

The Celtics losing streak at Detroit included eight games in The Palace since the Pistons moved there two years ago.

Jazz 107, Trail Blazers 101

SALT LAKE CITY — Karl Malone never bought all that stuff about the Portland Trail

Blazers sweeping the Utah Jazz in the playoffs. Down 2-0 going into Saturday's Salt Palace matchup, Malone keyed Utah's 107-101 Western Conference semifinal victory.

The Jazz hope to knot the series at 2-2 with a Game 4 win here Sunday night. Game 5 is set for Tuesday in Portland, where the Trail Blazers won the first two games of the series.

"Everybody said they were going to beat us. When we were down 2-0, people were down on us," said Malone, who led the Jazz with 30 points and 21 rebounds.

"But we believe in ourselves, basically, when no one else does," he added.

In a rough and tumble game that frequently sent players skidding to the floor, the Jazz outrebounded Portland 56-46.

"It's going to be a physical series. We know that, and we're not going to back down from anyone," said Jeff Malone, who finished with 25 points.

John Stockton, who had 18 points and 15 assists, refused to dwell on the victory.

"We have to get another one tomorrow and then it's back to Portland to give it a shot there," he said.

Portland coach Rick Adelman said his players would be ready for Sunday's game, determined to leave Utah with a split.

"We just didn't play well offensively," the coach said, noting the Trail Blazers' 38 percent shooting on 34 of 90 shots.

Detroit's Dennis Rodman (10), and Boston's Larry Bird battle for position while waiting for a rebound.

Houston's A.J. Foyt for his 34th Indy

Houston's A.J. Foyt, right, is congratulated after qualifying for his 34th Indy.

Foyt qualifies for 34th run

■ All four Andrettis — including John, driving the Midland-based Hall/VDS entry — qualify for the race, the first time four members of the same family have qualified in the same year.

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — An emotional A.J. Foyt, recuperating from the worst injuries of his career, made an impressive comeback Saturday and qualified for his 34th and final start in the Indianapolis 500.

His effort thrilled a huge and cheering crowd, brought tears to the tough Texan's eyes and was nearly good enough to capture the pole position for what he already has said will be his farewell race at Indianapolis.

The only driver faster than Foyt on the first of the four days of qualifications was Rick Mears, who extended his own record of Indy poles to six.

The 56-year-old Foyt, the oldest known driver in Indy history and last a front-row starter in 1982, will start the May 26 race between Mears and Mario Andretti.

Foyt, through luck of the draw, was at the head of the qualifying line for the opening round of time trials for the 75th Indy race. With about 250,000 spectators cheering him on, the four-time Indy winner drove his Chevrolet-powered Lola to a four-lap, 10-mile average of 222.443 mph.

Mears bettered that with a run at 224.113 in a Penske 91 Chevy, raising his own record for Indy poles to six. The performance, about 2 mph slower than his best laps in practice, was worth $150,000 in cash and prizes.

Former winners Andretti, Bobby Rahal and Danny Sullivan were among those who qualified early and were unhappy, with Andretti's Lola-

Indy 500 Lineup

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The tentative, partial lineup for the May 26 Indianapolis 500, listing driver, hometown or country, chassis-engine and 4-lap qualification average speed in mph (qualifications continue Sunday and May 19-18; R-Rookie):

- Row 1
1. Rick Mears, Bakersfield, Calif., No. 3, Penske-Chevrolet, 224.113.
2. A.J. Foyt, Houston, Texas, No. 14, Lola-Chevrolet, 222.443.
3. Mario Andretti, Nazareth, Pa., No. 6, Lola-Chevrolet, 221.818.
Row 2
4. Bobby Rahal, Dublin, Ohio, No. 18, Lola-Chevrolet, 221.401.
5. Michael Andretti, Nazareth, Pa., No. 10, Lola-Chevrolet, 220.943.
6. Al Unser Jr., Albuquerque, N.M., No. 2, Lola-Chevrolet, 219.823.
Row 3
7. John Andretti, Indianapolis, No. 4, Lola-Chevrolet, 219.059.
8. Jim Crawford, Scotland, No. 26, Lola-Buick, 218.947.
9. Danny Sullivan, Vail, Colo., No. 20, Lola-Alfa Romeo, 218.343.
10. Eddie Cheever, Vail, Colo., No. 8, Lola-Chevrolet, 218.122.
11. R. Jeff Andretti, Nazareth, Pa., No. 88, Lola-Cosworth, 217.632.
12. Scott Goodyear, Canada, No. 15, Lola-Judd, 216.751.

Chevrolet making it at 221.818, Rahal's Lola-Chevy at 221.401, and Sullivan's Lola-Alfa Romeo at 218.343.

Andretti, who qualified for his 26th Indy, second only to Foyt, said, "We were down on (turbocharger) boost for some reason. I don't know why. My popoff valve kept coming off."

One thing that pleased Andretti, however, was the fact that his sons Michael and Jeff and nephew John all joined him in the tentative lineup, marking the first time that four members of the same family qualified at Indy in the same year.

Michael qualified at 220.943, John, driving the Midland-based Hall/VDS Chevrolet, at 219.059, and Jeff, a rookie who was bumped from the lineup in his first try a year ago, at 217.632.

Other qualifiers included defending Indy-car series champion Al Unser Jr. at 218.947, Jim Crawford of Scotland at 218.947, Eddie Cheever at 218.122, and Canadian Scott Goodyear at 216.751.

Qualifications continue Sunday and again next weekend.

Trevino stumbles but still leads

Associated Press

FRISCO, Tex. — Lee Trevino seldom questions the wisdom of long-time caddy Herman Mitchell.

"Herman weighs 300," Trevino said. "What am I going to do to him?"

But Mitchell's error in club selection Saturday contributed to a double-bogey, limiting Trevino to a one-shot lead entering Sunday's final round of the Reunion Pro-Am Seniors tournament.

Trevino, a Dallas native attempting to win his first pro event in front of the hometown fans, survived a bogey on the final hole to shoot an even-par 72.

PGA Seniors

The round left him at 139, and with 13 golfers no more than two strokes behind.

Trevino began the round on the back nine with a pair of birdies, then ran into trouble on No. 3, his 12th hole.

Mitchell estimated the distance of Trevino's second shot at 141 yards and handed Trevino a pitching wedge. Trevino said he hit the shot perfectly, and the ball plopped into the back bunker.

"I love the guy," Trevino said. "But Herman told me 141 to the pin. I was one club too long. I paced it off and it was 130 to the flag. Once you get in that back bunker there's no way to get it up and down."

Trevino said he was miffed at Mitchell for most of the rest of the round, but won't carry a grudge.

"I got my chili hot for about five holes, but anybody can make a mistake," Trevino said. "It just happened."

Trevino's 5-under, two-day total of 139 is one shot better than a group of five led by Gene Littler, who set a competition course record Saturday with a 65. Littler started the day at 2-over but birdied five of his first seven holes to charge into contention.

John Brodie also enters the final round of the 36-hole event at 140. Brodie missed a chance for a share of the lead with a bogey on his final hole for a round of 70.

Dale Douglass, Tommy Aaron and Jim Colbert are also at 140.

Trevino overcame gusty winds to keep his lead. He said his round would have been better except for a balky putter.

A group of eight is tied at 3-under 141, including Jim Ferree, who started the day one shot off the lead but faded with a 73.

Storms hamper play at PGA's Atlanta Classic

Associated Press

MARIETTA, Ga. — A thunderstorm forced suspension of the third round of the Atlanta Classic just after Mike Springer made a birdie putt on the second hole.

Tom Kite, who had moved into a tie with Springer with a birdie on the first hole, still faced a 12-foot birdie putt on the second when play was suspended.

Players marked their spots on the Atlanta Country Club course and will pick up from there when the third round resumes on Sunday, with the final round to follow.

Play was suspended at 2:30 p.m. EDT and it rained steadily until PGA Tour officials announced at 6:13 p.m. that play would resume on Sunday.

"We'll try and resume at 7 a.m. tomorrow," tournament director Mike Shea said. "I hope it works." Shea said if weather permits the completion of the third round the fourth round would be played in threesomes going off from the first and 10th tees.

Springer had a 14-under-par total and Kite was 13-under when play was suspended.

Houston's Steve Finley (12) steals second base in the third inning as St. Louis' Jose Oquendo loses control of the ball.

Drabek loses 6th for Pirates

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — National League Cy Young Award winner Doug Drabek equaled his loss total for last season when Ron Gant hit a two-run homer in the eighth inning, giving the Atlanta Braves a 3-2 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Drabek (1-6) was 22-6 last season. His only victory this year was on April 14 against Montreal. He started off 1-8 in 1987 before finishing 11-12.

Pittsburgh, which had won four straight, led 2-1 when pinch-hitter Lonnie Smith led off the eighth with a single. Otis Nixon grounded out and Gant hit his third home run of the season.

Drabek, 11-0 against the NL West last season, pitched a five-hitter for his first complete game this year. He struck out seven and walked four.

Charlie Leibrandt (3-3) allowed six hits in seven innings and struck out six as Atlanta won for the sixth time in eight games. Kent Mercker got four outs for his third save, completing the seven-hitter.

Some fans were listening to the Pittsburgh Penguins' NHL playoff game against Boston and applauded at strange times, prompting Drabek to stop once in mid-pitch with no runners on.

Atlanta third baseman Terry Pendleton was ejected in the first inning for arguing a called third strike with plate umpire Greg Bonin.

Astros 6, Cardinals 1
HOUSTON — Mark Portugal and Jim Corsi combined on a three-hitter and Craig Biggio hit a three-run double, leading the Houston Astros past the St. Louis Cardinals.

Portugal (4-1) pitched seven innings, giving up one run on three hits. He struck out six and walked two. Corsi finished with perfect relief.

Jose DeLeon (1-3) lasted only 4 1/3 innings. He allowed two runs on five hits, struck out six and walked five.

Houston led 2-1 when it loaded the bases in the sixth inning against Mike Perez on singles by Karl Rhodes and Casey Candaele and an intentional walk to pinch hitter Ken Oberkfell. Biggio doubled off Juan Agosto and Ken Caminiti tripled.

Luis Gonzalez hit his third home run of the season in the Houston second. The Astros made it 2-0 in the fourth when Rhodes walked, Candaele doubled and Portugal had a sacrifice fly.

Reds 12, Cubs 2
CHICAGO — Paul O'Neill homered twice and drove in six runs and Eric Davis also homered twice as the Cincinnati Reds routed the Chicago Cubs. O'Neill, who was 4-for-5, hit a run-scoring double in the fourth, a three-run double in the fifth, a leadoff homer in the seventh and a two-run homer in the ninth. The six RBIs matched his career high, set June 7, 1989, against San Francisco. It was the fifth multiple-homer game of his career.

Davis hit solo home runs in the fourth and sixth innings for the 13th multi-homer game of his career. O'Neill has six home runs this season and Davis has four.

Jose Rijo (2-2) drove in three runs for the Reds, who ended a four-game losing streak. Rijo allowed eight hits in eight innings, struck out five and walked none.

Mets 6, Giants 2
SAN FRANCISCO — Hubie Brooks broke a seventh-inning tie with a leadoff home run and Tommy Herr had four hits as the New York Mets beat San Francisco and sent the Giants to their ninth loss in 11 games.

Ron Darling (2-2) allowed five hits in seven innings, including home runs by Will Clark and Robby Thompson. Darling struck out three and walked one. Alejandro Pena finished with two-hit relief for his second save.

Don Robinson (0-2) gave up three runs and five hits in six innings.

Herr's first home run of the season, a leadoff drive in the fourth, gave the Mets the lead, but the Giants tied it in the bottom half on Clark's leadoff homer.

Expos 5, Padres 1
SAN DIEGO — Marquis Grissom hit a three-run homer after a close call, leading Dennis Martinez and the Montreal Expos past the San Diego Padres.

Martinez (5-2) gave up seven hits, including Fred McGriff's home run, in winning his third consecutive start. He walked none, struck out five and lowered his ERA to 1.71.

The game was scoreless in the third inning when Montreal put a runner on second with two outs. Delino DeShields hit a grounder to first base that McGriff bobbled, and DeShields beat the tag.

Dodgers 3, Phillies 2
LOS ANGELES — Mike Morgan stopped Philadelphia for seven innings and the Los Angeles Dodgers turned three errors into two runs to beat the Phillies.

Morgan (4-2) gave up one run on six hits and left with a 1.38 ERA, second in the National League to Pete Harnisch's 1.33 ERA. Morgan struck out four and issued one intentional walk.

Jay Howell pitched the ninth for his fourth save. Dale Murphy led off the inning with his fifth home run.

Bosox continue mastery of Rangers

Associated Press

BOSTON — Ellis Burks broke an 0-for-11 slump in bases-loaded situations with a two-run single as the Boston Red Sox beat the Texas Rangers 5-4 behind the relief pitching of Joe Hesketh and Jeff Reardon.

Dana Kiecker (2-0) allowed six hits and four walks in 5 1/3 innings. Hesketh held Texas hitless for two innings after a three-run sixth and Reardon pitched 1 1/3 perfect innings his 10th save.

Carlos Quintana had three singles, and Burks and Jack Clark had two hits each as Boston won for the seventh time eight games. The Red Sox have won 10 of 12 and 16 of 20.

Kevin Brown (2-3) gave up five runs and 10 hits in 4 2/3 innings.

Texas, which has lost four straight for the second time this year, took a 1-0 in the second on Juan Gonzalez's RBI single, but Boston went ahead 3-1 in the bottom of the innings on John Marzano's run-scoring single, Luis Rivera's RBI single and Wade Boggs's run-scoring double.

Boston added two runs in the fourth on a two-run single by Burks, who was 0-for-7 with the bases loaded this year and 0-for-11 since Aug. 12.

Kiecker was helped by three double plays before he needed help in the sixth, when Ruben Sierra hit an RBI single and Julio Franco hit a run-scoring double.

Hesketh replaced Kiecker and the Rangers added an unearned run as Franco stole third and scored on a throwing error by Marzano, the catcher.

Blue Jays 5, White Sox 2
TORONTO — Dave Stieb won his fourth consecutive decision and improved his career record against Chicago to 21-4 as the Toronto Blue Jays beat the Chicago White Sox.

Glenallen Hill hit a two-run homer and tripled for the Blue Jays, who have won three of their last four.

Stieb (4-2) allowed two runs and five hits in seven innings, struck out four and walked two. Duane Ward, the third Toronto pitcher, pitched the ninth for his 10th save in 11 opportunities.

Athletics 10, Yankees 2

NEW YORK — Dave Henderson hit his league-leading ninth homer and drove in five runs as the Oakland Athletics held New York to two hits and routed the Yankees.

Oakland, which lost to the Yankees 5-3 Friday night, has won 17 of its last 18 games against New York.

Steve Howe, brought up from the minors on Friday, pitched the ninth inning for the Yankees, his first major league appearance since Oct. 4, 1987, with the Texas Rangers. Howe, suspended six times for alcohol and drug abuse, didn't allow a hit, struck out one and walked one.

Angels 2, Indians 1

CLEVELAND — Jim Abbott gave up five hits in seven innings — three of them infield singles — and Cleveland's sloppy fielding cost it two runs as the California Angels beat the Indians.

Abbott (2-4) struck out four and walked three as he won his second straight start after opening the season with four losses. Jeff Robinson pitched one inning and Bryan Harvey finished the five-hitter for his eighth save. Rookie Mark Lewis had three hits for the Indians, who have lost four straight.

Greg Swindell (1-4) gave up two unearned runs and eight hits in his first complete game. The Indians have scored two runs or fewer in five of Swindell's seven starts.

Twins 5, Tigers 4

MINNEAPOLIS — Brian Harper's bunt squirted through the right side of Detroit's charging infield, scoring Kirby Puckett from second base in the seventh inning and sending the Minnesota Twins past the Tigers.

With the game tied at 4, Puckett led off the seventh with a double against Mike Henneman (3-1) and Chili Davis was intentionally walked. Harper, trying to sacrifice, pushed a bunt toward Henneman and first baseman Cecil Fielder. The ball scooted between them and by the time shortstop Alan Trammell retrieved it, Puckett beat the throw home.

Harper's bunt was his fourth hit of the game and raised his batting average to a major-league leading .377.

Royals 4, Brewers 2

MILWAUKEE — Tom Gordon shut down Milwaukee for eight innings and Kirk Gibson homered as the Kansas City Royals sent the Brewers to their sixth straight loss.

Gordon (2-2), making his third start of the season, won for the first time since April 20. He gave up five hits, struck out eight and walked one.

Jeff Montgomery pitched a scoreless ninth for his seventh save. The Brewers have scored only four runs in their last 38 innings.

Kansas City scored two in the first off Bill Wegman (0-1). Brian McRae and Nelson Lirio opened with singles and advanced on a wild pitch.

Associated Press

BOSTON — Joe DiMaggio and Ted Williams greeted each other with hugs Saturday in an emotional reunion at Fenway Park 50 years after two of the greatest individual seasons in baseball history.

DiMaggio, who hit safely in 56 consecutive games for the New York Yankees in 1941, and Williams, the last to hit .400 with a .406 average for the Boston Red Sox the same year, were given a special introduction before an old-timers' game.

DiMaggio, the famed "Yankee Clipper" now 76, and Williams, the "Splendid Splinter" who is 72, made grand entrances in separate golf carts through a gate under the centerfield bleachers.

The two Hall of Famers met at home plate, got out of the carts and embraced as a packed crowd of some 35,000 cheered.

DiMaggio and Williams then went their separate ways. They will be honored Sunday in a special ceremony for their feats one-half century ago.

In the old timers game, the "Upper Deck Heroes" beat the "Red Sox Heroes" 9-5 with Jose Cardenal going 3-3 with a pair of doubles in the three-inning exhibition.

Upper Deck scored two runs in the first inning off Joe Sam-bito, the first coming on Reggie Jackson's RBI triple into a vacant center field. Center fielder Jimmy Piersall was caught out of position, having gone over to the bullpen in right to chat with a friend.

Gaylord Perry pitched a 1-2-3 first inning against the Red Sox alumni, and was not challenged for throwing the illegal spitball by either the hitters or retired umpires Hank Soar and Jerry Neudecker.

Perry singled and Cardenal hit a two-run double off the wall in left for a 6-0 Upper Deck lead in the second. The Red Sox came back with five runs against Wilbur Wood and John Hiller, Cecil Cooper driving in two with a 380-foot double.

The Upper Deck team added three more runs off 1967 Cy Young Award winner Jim Lonborg in the third before Tug McGraw blanked the Red Sox on one hit in the bottom half of the inning.

BULLDOGS: Plainsmen go one, two, three in seventh

(From 1B)

But Rounding, who earned his first varsity action a year ago in the rubber game of an area play-off series with El Paso Burges, settled down. He got a bouncer to third baseman James Madrid, whose throw to catcher Jeff Casbeer forced Gonzales at the plate.

And Clint Bryant ended the inning with a grounder that Madrid turned into a harmless force at second.

"We had a chance to win it in the ninth with one out and the bases loaded, but when you don't score with the middle of your lineup — and we had our three, four and five hitters up there — it just kills you," said Monterey coach Bobby Moegle.

Mark Gary came on to start the top of the 10th for Monterey, and he got in trouble immediately by walking Casbeer. After Richie Greth's sacrifice, Stanton walked.

Tony Gonzales then returned to the mound only to pack the bags with a walk to Rounding, and Culpepper followed with his game-winning hit.

Rounding sat down the Plainsmen in order in the bottom of the 10th.

The Bulldogs drew first blood in the deciding game, taking a 2-0 lead on RBI doubles to right field by Stanton and Culpepper in the top of the second inning.

The Plainsmen narrowed the gap with Isaac Lee's RBI single in the second, and they went ahead 3-2 with three hits and three stolen bases in the fourth.

Madrid, the winner of Game 1 Friday in Midland, came on to pitch 2½ scoreless innings, enjoying Culpepper's second RBI double which knotted the game at 3-3 in the sixth.

Rounding — who started the game, went to right field then returned in the eighth to go the distance — and Madrid limited the Plainsmen to just one hit after the fourth inning.

The Bulldogs thought they had the lead when Tyler Beard tried to slip under the tag at home on Jeremy Burton's single in the top of the seventh, but Beard was ruled out, prolonging the tie for three more innings.

REBELS: Wicks' curveballs keep Midland Lee at bay

(From 1B)

Roger White.

Sophomore Julian Urquidez started Saturday's first game on the mound, but he appeared to be another casualty of Lee's two-week wait for a playoff game. Urquidez was chased after 2½ innings as he gave up five hits, five earned runs, walked five, struck out three, threw a trio of wild pitches and hit a Mustang batter.

He was replaced by Mark Dworsky, who was effective for the remainder of the game, shutting Coronado down to a single run.

The second game of the day saw Brian Tomlin start for the Rebels, and he also lasted just 2½ innings, allowing six hits and seven runs, though only two were earned. Sophomore Brian Cordova entered in relief and finished the six-inning game with five hits and six runs allowed. Again, only half of Cordova's runs were earned, as Lee committed six errors in the second game.

"I'm not going to take anything away from our kids, because they had a terrific year," Benavidez said of the District 4-5A champion Rebels, who entered the series ranked No. 8. "Coronado was a whole lot different team today. Their 3, 4, and 5 hitters are tough to get out."

Those hitters — center fielder Billy Lightner, first baseman Chip Reed and Wicks — combined for a 7-for-21 (.333) effort in Saturday's games and accounted for all seven RBI in Friday's affair.

Heckler pays for joke about keg party

Associated Press

CLEVELAND — Indians outfielder Albert Belle, who spent 10 weeks last summer in an alcohol rehabilitation program, threw a baseball at a heckler in the left-field stands Saturday, hitting him in the chest.

The fan, Jeff Pillar, 33, of Cleveland, told the umpiring crew he was kidding Belle about throwing a keg party. Belle picked up a foul ball hit by California's Ron Tingley in the seventh inning, turned and heaved it hard at Pillar from a distance of about 15 feet, hitting Pillar in the chest.

Pillar had a welt where the ball hit him. He was examined at the Cleveland Stadium first-aid station but apparently was not hurt seriously.

"I don't have to answer," Belle said when asked about the incident. He refused to say anything else.

The Indians issued an apology on Belle's behalf. "I apologize for my actions this afternoon. I know they are unacceptable," Belle said in the statement read by spokesman Bob DiBiasio. "I am sorry I did it and it will not happen again."

Umpire Dale Ford talked with Belle as he came off the field in the seventh inning.

"He (Belle) said the guy said something to him and he threw the ball at him," Ford said. "If any of us had seen him throw the ball, we'd have had to eject him. I was going back to my position, and out of the corner of my eye, I saw something going on. It never dawned on me a big-league ball-player would throw a ball in the stands."

Cincinnati relief pitcher Rob Dibble was suspended for four games by the National League for throwing a ball into the stands after a tough outing April 28. Dibble turned and heaved the ball into the center field stands from behind the pitcher's mound, hitting a woman on the elbow. Dibble's toss was not aimed at anyone.

Pillar said he only yelled at Belle once during the game, before the seventh inning began.

"I was joking. I like the guy," Pillar said. "He's a brain full of dynamite."

Ford said the umpires would report Belle's actions to the American League office. The Indians said they also intended to take disciplinary action, but they did not specify what it might entail.

Witnesses said Pillar was in the third or fourth row of the stands in left when Belle threw at him. Some fans booed but many others cheered when Belle returned to the field in the eighth inning.

It was the first behavioral incident involving Belle at the major-league level, though he developed a reputation for moodiness and temper tantrums in college at Louisiana State and in the minor leagues.

Belle is hitting .307, and he leads the Indians with six home runs.

Howe pitches briefly in return

Associated Press

NEW YORK — A 14-pitch mop-up appearance in a 10-2 loss might not seem to be a significant achievement. Steve Howe thought it was tremendous.

"I made it. If I don't pitch another inning, I got back," Howe said after he pitched the ninth in the New York Yankees' 10-2 loss to the Oakland Athletics on Saturday.

Howe, suspended six times for drug and alcohol abuse, had not appeared in the majors since Oct. 4, 1987, when he was with the Texas Rangers. Howe was the National League Rookie of the Year in 1981 as the relief ace of the Los Angeles Dodgers. Since then, he's been the minor leagues, Japan and numerous hospitals and rehabilitation clinics. Jamie Quirk was the first hitter Howe faced, and Howe struck him out.

"The last time I faced Jamie, I think I hit him in the back," Howe said, "so he was probably wondering what was going to happen this time."

Was Howe nervous to be facing big leaguer batters again?

"If I have butterflies in my stomach as a relief pitcher, I'm in real trouble," Howe said. "But I won't tell you I wasn't worried when I was lying in the hospital with nitro under my tongue, getting ready to kick it."

"Everything up to this point has been a kick," he said. "I've just been enjoying myself. There really hasn't been any pressure."

Crosby takes turn at LPGA top

CHESAPEAKE, Va. (AP) — Elaine Crosby took a one-shot edge after Saturday's third round of the Crestar-Farm Fresh Classic as most of the front-runners faltered in swirling winds.

Crosby's 1-under 71 left her at 209, 7-under, heading into Sunday's final round of the $400,000 event at Greenbrier Country Club.

Tammie Green, one shot ahead of Crosby after two rounds, birdied two of her last three holes to salvage a 1-over 73 and was at 210.

Rosie Jones birdied two of her last four en route to a 70. She was alone at 212.

Midland, college entering new era

Gov. Ann Richards is to be in Odessa today to sign a bill passed last week which elevated the University of Texas of the Permian Basin (UTPB) to full four-year status.

The decision to expand UTPB to four years was one that will affect all three institutions of higher learning in Odessa and adjacent Midland — UTPB, Odessa College and Midland College. The future of all three institutions will be determined largely by their willingness to change when necessary and to work together to provide the people of the Permian Basin a quality educational menu.

But elevating UTPB to four-year status should not damage either the future prospects for Midland College or the special relationship that institution has enjoyed with the people of the Midland community. That relationship will continue and be as important in the future as it was in the past despite the change.

H.A. Tuck, public relations director for Midland College, virtually said as much this week when asked about the vote on the UTPB expansion saying, "We don't intend to change anything we are doing. Most of our students come from Midland County and we anticipate that our students will continue to come from Midland County. There is no reason for them to commute 40 miles per day to Odessa and back for a course they can get at Midland College at a less expensive tuition rate."

Midland College actually began in September 1969 as the Midland campus of the Permian Junior College system. In 1972 the college was re-created with formation of the Midland College District and since that time has worked in tandem with the community to provide educational courses that will mesh with local needs.

Nowhere has that relationship been reflected better than in the professional requirements of Memorial Hospital and Medical Center (formerly Midland Memorial Hospital) and the medical science course offerings at Midland College, including the two-year associate degree in applied science.

Another indication of the support offered Midland College by the people of Midland is the scholarship program offered to graduating seniors of any high school in Midland County. Since the fall of 1986, the Abell-Hanger Foundation has provided scholarships to local graduating seniors that pay the costs of tuition and fees at Midland College, a program that has helped not only hundreds of local students during these tough economic times but also the community and the college.

Through the years, Midland College and the community have worked together to build a tradition of excellence. It is a proud tradition which should not be diluted by the change at UTPB. Ostensibly, four-year status for UTPB can benefit both Midland College and the entire Permian Basin area, but to achieve such a result will require both commitment and compromise.

If all concerned work toward that goal, then this change will mark the beginning of a new era for higher education in the Permian Basin.

Alexander correct on accreditation

Education Secretary Lamar Alexander earned lots of ink with his plan to reform American schooling. But another decision of his, made with less fanfare, may be just as consequential.

Alexander issued a memorandum recently questioning the criteria used by the Middle States Association of Colleges and Schools in accrediting colleges and universities.

Middle States had delayed reaccrediting Bernard Baruch College in New York for several reasons, but one in particular caught Alexander's eye.

According to Middle States, Baruch had "a paucity of minority representation on the faculty and in the administration." Similarly, the organization threatened to deny accreditation to Westminster Theological Seminary unless it included a woman on its governing board.

This brings us into the currently campus buzzword, "diversity."

Alexander asks: "Should an accrediting agency dictate to institutions whether or how they should balance their students, faculty, administration and governing boards by race, ethnicity, gender or age?"

His answer: No. He's right.

'Fast-track' on trade benefits both nations

Much is at stake in the current debate about the "fast-track" procedure, by which the executive branch can negotiate a trade agreement without amendment in Congress and Congress can then accept or turn down the agreement in toto.

President Bush wants the fast track extended (as it will be June 1 unless Congress decides otherwise). Some members of Congress, mostly Democrats, disagree.

We urge that the fast track not be sidetracked, for a number of reasons:

- It is needed if agreements are to be reached with other nations because other nations want to be on firm ground in their negotiations with U.S. representatives.
- Congress' interests and responsibilities are properly protected under the fast-track procedure.

■ In the case of the Mexican free-trade pact, criticism of the fast-track procedure is actually a round-the-bush attack on the idea of a free-trade agreement. We think that opposition is fear-borne and shortsighted.

A North American trade agreement is an idea whose time has come. In time, a Western Hemisphere trade pact may be a good idea, but for now, Mexico is the place to begin.

In the long run, the trade pact will mean more jobs and the fulfillment of economic promise on both sides of the border. The fast track makes it easier to accomplish all this. Leave it be.

Austria seeks a solid, new identity

VIENNA, Austria — The people of the Austrian capital city are fed up with being a kind of Disneyland without the rides — a sparkling clean, old-world fantasy village taken seriously only by tourists and movie makers.

In the cataclysmic change across Europe, the Viennese and other Austrians are ready to fight for their place as a wizened middleman between Western capitalism and the emerging democracies of Eastern Europe.

The person for the job is Austrian Chancellor Franz Vranitzky, a sometimes-socialist who heads a coalition government and has a knack for tapping into the Austrian psyche — a psyche that has been called schizophrenic.

Anderson

Historians say the terror of the Nazi domination forged a distinct Austrian. Before World War II, the Austrians wholeheartedly supported Hitler's "Anschluss," or annexation of Austria into the Third Reich. They longed for the power of the old Austro-Hungarian Empire and thought Hitler could bring it back.

But he imprisoned their politicians in concentration camps and made Austria party to an international nightmare.

After the war, internationalism seemed to be the ticket for Austria. Socialist Chancellor Bruno Kreisky built a huge and expensive "United Nations city" in Vienna where the U.N. houses some of its functions.

As communism began to collapse, Vranitzky figured out that Austria's precious neutral position between East and West was no longer useful. He began quietly subverting it, and then openly battled for membership in the European Economic Community, which would put Austria firmly in the Western camp. Some small European states secretly oppose including Austria because they fear Austria will join with Germany to create a lopsided power base in the EEC.

American and Austrian officials say Vranitzky knows the only future for his country lies in jumping into the Western camp with both feet, and probably trying to make Austria the banking center for Eastern Europeans who want to make it in the West. Vranitzky is busy privatizing banks and businesses that were originally put under state control as a way of keeping the Soviets and others from claiming them as the spoils of World War II.

One American diplomat told us that banking may be the only option for Austria. "The country has no other place to go because they are demographically aging and have little industry."

There is another, more subtle aspect of the Austrian character that could be useful in the new Europe. Austrians are great equivocators and centralizers. They held together an empire comprising half of Europe for centuries.

Now, at a time when restless Eastern European nations are aching for less togetherness, the Austrians could act as networkers. But they must first suppress their own nationalist urges. The prime purveyor of those urges is Jörg Haider, leader of the right-wing Freedom Party, once a repository for post-war Nazis. This tub-thumper is no Nazi himself, but his party appeals to Aryanism, and his anti-immigration platform slogan was exclusionary racism: "Vienna must not become Chicago."

Vranitzky also feels there is danger in letting too many Romanians, Poles, Czechs, Hungarians, Yugoslavians and even Soviets stream into Austria looking for jobs that don't exist in a country that is too expensive for them to survive in.

Vranitzky's views and actions bode well for Austria. They suggest a realistic view of the future that is not found in the more naive and exuberant Eastern European states. It is realism which Europe could use more of right now.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Vytautas Landsbergis for Nobel Laureate

WASHINGTON — Through an area under curfew where 66 were arrested the night before, past boarded-up shops, recently looted, with shards of glass clattering the sidewalk; into the very eye of defiance of authority I made my perilous way to breakfast with Vytautas Landsbergis, president of the Republic of Lithuania.

This was in Washington, D.C., of course, capital of the most stable government in the world. Did Landsbergis, who made his stand against Mikhail Gorbachev's black-bereaved goons in Vilnius four months ago, feel at home?

"Certain similarities exist," he allowed, "but I feel at home in a different sense." Later, he said: "This is the home of freedom. Everybody seeking freedom looks to the U.S."

This modest patriot offers no bombast, no heroic poses; he believes the Baltics are of right independent and ought to be treated that way.

"But the Western democracies speak over our shoulders to the face behind us," he says. "They don't look us in the eye."

On Wednesday, in a significant symbolic act, President Bush looked the Baltics in the eye, greeting the leaders of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania in the Oval Office.

No longer do we cling to the passive posture of not accepting the Hitler-Stalin conquest. We are step-by-stepping toward outright recognition of the captive states, which infuriates the leftover imperialists in Moscow.

In helping to move Baltic independence from de jure to de facto, Bush is executing the classic "pushmipullyu" maneuver. This involves talking out of heads at both ends of the mythical animal.

Thus from the front head he loudly lauds the "enormous" accomplishments of Gorbachev, and flashes the signal that $1.5 billion of U.S. taxpayers' money is soon to go down the Soviet command-economy drain to appease the old apparatchiks.

Meanwhile, the back head of Bush is planning to name Robert Gates (who Gorbachev thinks is out to get him) as director of Central Intelligence. That back head also poses for a picture with the Baltic leaders, which helps weaken Moscow's grip on three captive nations.

As further evidence of his back head's iron resolve, Bush will send Curtis Kamman, a deputy assistant secretary of state (whose protocol seat at a diplomatic dinner is deep in the butlers' pantry) to the Baltic capitals to show the U.S. flag.

Is pushmipullyu diplomacy — dazzlingly acting against our words — the best way to achieve our ends? Oval officers love it because historians damnably praise feints. Sometimes two-facedness works, but most of the time it confuses everybody by muddying our purpose.

Landsbergis, with independence his fixed goal, would prefer us to use our credit guarantees to encourage companies to invest in his country, and to establish a Baltic development bank. Richard Nixon, returning from his Soviet tour, agreed: we should be helping the reforming hands in the republics, not pressing credits into the dead hand of the Gorbocracy.

But the trio of Baltic leaders in the White House on Wednesday did not presume to advise against our giving billions in baksheesh to a Soviet central government bankrupted by arms spending; they were grateful for the photo op and eager to develop connective tissue. The steady accretion of foreign recognition is their bloodless road to independence.

Moving beyond symbolism, we should warn the Kremlin that any economic punishment of the Baltics would trigger our counter-coercion. We should also lean on the Soviets to accept the Baltics as observers at CSCE meetings this summer. (Last year the United States supinely allowed the Soviets to lock out the Baltics.) And next March, at Helsinki II, we should link our attendance to their full participation as European nations.

Momentum is all. Norway's Nobel committee, to make up for its abysmal judgment of the recent past, should restore the luster of the Peace Prize this October by awarding it to Vytautas Landsbergis, symbol of Baltic independence.

That long-overdue return to self-determination by three little nations has always been the key to the relaxation of Soviet internal imperial rule. Keep the heat on; free the Baltics, change the world.

The one downside to being vice president

NEW YORK — Suppose Vice President Quayle never really wanted to be President. There are plenty of people who don't, including some politicians.

What could be more natural for a civilized person than to recoil from the brutal destruction of privacy, the incessant haggling, the inescapable armed escorts, the constant companionship of sycophants and careerists, the abuse of gossip, the contempt of cartoonists, the cheerless prospect of a life lived in the clutches of poll-takers, economists, lawyers, bomb makers ...

It wouldn't be shameful if Quayle had not lusted for the presidency. It would speak of him as a civilized man who had his priorities straight. They say he likes golf and is very good at it. Maybe he dreamed of becoming good enough to win the big prizes, amazing all humanity at Augusta, St. Andrew's and similar shrines.

So there he is, moving along comfortably in politics, serving an apprenticeship in the House of Representatives, then on to the Senate. Money and telegenic genes can get you that far, and why not make the trip? The Senate still confers stature of a sort, and maybe he'd started thinking, well, my golf is never going to get up to the Jack Nicklaus level.

The Senate, after all, is something to do that seems honorable if not the thrill that being Jack Nicklaus would be. It's entirely possible the idea of being president has never crossed Quayle's mind up to this point.

If it has, he has probably looked around at the hordes of ambition-sodden, man-eating competitors for the job, some of whom may even have been very competent, and decided he'd stay with the Senate and the golf.

Then, the earth stood still. George Bush asks how you'd like to be vice president. Are you going to say no?

Being vice president is a great honor. It will make your family very proud of you. It will expand your opportunities to meet, even to play with, the top-flight golfers.

All right, sure you don't feel qualified to become president should the big fellow take a fatal turn, which is the one downside of the job, but apart from that it's an office in which inadequacy won't matter because there's no work to be inadequate at.

I don't say this is entirely how Quayle reasoned when Bush made the big offer, but it's the way the average person would probably react, and Quayle exudes a sense of averageness. He was so utterly average, in fact, that the press promptly turned him into a running joke, there being nothing the average American is quicker to laugh at than his own frailties, once they are disguised to look like somebody else's.

This suddenly made him a politician to contend with since Americans who despise the press — and they are many — tend to love politicians to whom the press is cruel.

In a twinkling, as political time is counted, Quayle found himself not only located a mere heartbeat from greatness, but also beloved by the masses as a victim of the loathsome media.

At this stage, it's harder to imagine how Quayle might have been responding to the quixotic operations of a whimsical Destiny. We can assume he read the newspapers, which said greatness had been bestowed upon him by Bush because he was an ideological mossback and, therefore, capable of calming certain Republicans so conservative that they regarded Bush as a wanton liberal.

I am a teacher with Midland Independent School District and this week has been a special week for all teachers. Parents and children have shown us how much they appreciate what we do. I would like to take this time to thank all of those parents who volunteer their time in the public schools.

Every year I have been fortunate to have at least one reliable parent helping in my classroom, as well as several parents who do things for me at home. Children love when their parents become involved in their classroom. It not only shows they care, it also sends home the message that school is important. Because of their valuable help, I am able to individualize, enrich, and expand what chil-

State schools need to shoulder tax load

The bill to divide all the tax money equally among Midland Independent School Districts has caused many pros and cons between the wealthy districts and the struggling ones.

It is my opinion that state-supported schools do not stop at the high school level, but go right on through state-supported colleges and universities.

There are so many of these higher education schools across the state of Texas such as: Texas A&M University, The University of Texas in Austin, Houston University, Texas Tech University, North Texas State, Arlington State, West Texas State, and on and on.

Of all these universities, two of them control more tax money than all the rest combined. Texas A&M University and The University of Texas control not millions but billions of tax dollars.

It is just as fair to strip these two schools as it is to strip West Texas towns such as Denver City, Andrews, Midland, Sudan, and a multitude of others across the state.

The Texas State Senate and the Texas Legislature of congressman have a high nucleus of alumni from these two schools of great wealth. This letter will not please these politicians just as the state bill did not please people in the wealthier school districts.

Where do we go from here?

Foreign affairs and the 'Quayle Factor'

By Leslie H. Gelb

"A sphinx without a riddle" is how Bismarck described Napoleon III. As much could be said about Dan Quayle, ever awkwardly posed with a plastered, slight smile.

No instant laundry lists of unheralded accomplishments as vice president, dutifully leaked by his staff, will make Quayle more than a nice and competent guy.

No mere testimonials will alter public perceptions of him. No opportunity short of actual succession will likely permit him to prove himself a political heavyweight.

Dan Quayle is no buffoon, as many in the media unfairly portray him. He is an average American and an average politician who, though he carries an argument well, strikes people as a kid. Even when his words are nicely manicured, he does not inspire confidence.

If the profound uneasiness about Quayle endures, President Bush will face a tough dilemma: To dump his veep is to ignite stories that Bush is worrying about his health and re-election prospects. To keep his veep is to hand the Democrats a club that could do damage in a close election.

Bet on George Bush, loyal and stubborn, to stick with Dan Quayle in 1992. Bet on it even if the Democrats miraculously pull within a few percentage points of victory.

There was something primal that caused Bush to select Quayle against almost all advice in the first place. And the powerful thrusts of election politics will bind him even more tightly to his running mate in the coming months.

Deep, deep down, the Quayle candidacy serves the none-too-disguised interests of Democrats, many Republicans, neoconservatives and, in ways still not fully understood by onlookers, of Bush himself.

The Democrats need Dan Quayle. He is right up there with Air Sununu and taxing the rich as one of their brightest issues. The party of Carter and Dukakis may not be able to agree on civil rights, trade or war, but it rallies as one to the cry of "President Quayle."

What's more, the Democrats know that the more they lambaste Quayle, the more Bush and the Republicans will have to cling to him. Republicans have already been rallying around their beleaguered colleague, though many privately whisper their wish to be relieved of this duty.

As for Republican hopefuls looking far ahead to 1996, they would rather contend with a weak vice president like Quayle than a strong one like Jack Kemp, James Baker or Dick Cheney.

Neoliberals, neoconservatives and unipolarists also will fight hard to keep Quayle on the ticket. They have co-opted him and remade him in their own image.

He is their eyes and ears inside the White House. He distrusts Mikhail Gorbachev and is more pro-Israel than Yitzhak Shamir. This, for them, makes an ideal president.

Neither Bush nor Quayle can draw much comfort from the public opinion polls, but the results are not all bad for the dynamic duo. In a USA Today poll taken on Monday, 51 percent say they would like the president to name a new running mate, and 46 percent say that Quayle is not qualified to be president.

But 43 percent say he is qualified to sit in the Oval Office. That represents a huge jump from 19 percent only a month ago and shows that some large number of the American people are prepared to rally around the existing team.

All the calculations, then, end where they began — with George Bush. It is hard to believe that Bush thought in 1990 that Dan Quayle, whatever his virtues, was the best man for the job.

Now, having earned his own place and having experienced an irregular heartbeat, George Bush owes it to the country to review his judgment. If he truly feels that Dan Quayle is the best Republican to succeed him, no amount of hoopla will change his mind or is likely to defeat a Bush-Quayle ticket in 1992. If he harbors doubts, he has the sacred duty to think of America first.

Raising taxes is the easy way out

By Tom Craddick

There is a lot of talk around the Capitol and in the news media about maintaining the current level of services from state government in the next budget cycle. Government experts contend that at least $4.59 billion of additional revenue must be found to finance these services. The easiest way to finance this deficit is to raise existing taxes or create a new tax like the state income tax.

The people promoting tax increases are more concerned about maintaining a government bureaucracy than the impact increased government spending will have on the people required to pay the bills — the taxpayers of Texas. The taxes paid by the 17 million people living in Texas fund whatever programs government leaders authorize. True, some of the money comes from federal sources, but those federal funds really come out of the same pockets as the state monies. In 1990, the average price per Texas resident for state programs was $1,342. If state leaders increase spending by $4.59 billion to fund all the "deficiencies" in state government, it will cost every man, woman and child in this state an extra $270. For a family of four that cost will be an additional $1,080.

What will be the impact on Texas families if government leaders take the easy route of increasing their tax burden? How will families maintain their current level of services? Perhaps the breadwinner in the family could ask for a pay raise to cover his or her new obligation. Of course that will create an additional cost for the businessperson who must then raise the price of his or her goods and services in order to maintain a current level of profits.

Most likely the families will do what government should do. They will tighten their belts and reduce their discretionary spending. Families will buy fewer new clothes, less steak and more ground beef, stay at home and travel less — generally, cut their retail spending. These reductions in spending will impact every business in Texas. It will hurt restaurants, clothing stores, specialty shops, grocery stores, dry cleaning, department stores, gas stations, etcetera, all across Texas.

Increased government spending will take billions of dollars out of the private sector marketplace and dump it into a bureaucratic "black hole." If this money remains in the private sector marketplace it will create jobs and fuel economic development. Instead, state leaders want to invest it in a welfare system that has already grown 192 percent in the last eight years.

In the period from 1982 to 1990 state government spending in Texas skyrocketed 88 percent. During that same period the population was up 10.47 percent, the rate of inflation increased 33.16 percent, per capita personal income grew 44.7 percent and public school enrollment rose 23.64 percent.

At the rate we are going the state budget will exceed $100 billion by the turn of the century. The best way to stop this trend is to approve a budget within the revenue currently available to the state. This will force state government to become more efficient — to "tighten its belt."

State leaders need to ask a few Texas families if they are willing to sacrifice an additional $1,080 in Texas to maintain the current level of services from state government. Odds favor a swift kick in the next election for leaders who don't listen now.

Rep. Tom Craddick (R-Midland) is chairman of the Republican Caucus in the Texas House of Representatives and the House Committee on Public Health.

Adversity brings out the best in Bush, the all-American man

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor in Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

NEW YORK — May all my readers join me this Sunday in a prayer of thankfulness that President Bush's heart problem was not critical. His release from the hospital Monday and return to work at the White House were miraculously quick.

Discovery that the irregular heartbeat was caused by a usually easy treatable thyroid ailment means that, barring some unexpected development, the president should have no difficulty running for re-election next year and, I believe, winning, to serve our country with great leadership for another four years.

When the president returned to the White House Monday morning after two nights at the Bethesda Naval Medical Center he started to resume normal work. At that time his doctors said his heartbeat could be kept normal with monitoring and medication, but the situation turned out to be more complicated. The first two medications given him did not stop the irregular heartbeat from recurring for a few minutes Tuesday evening.

Hearst

From the beginning, his doctors had tested him for a thyroid problem, and by Tuesday evening, just as Bush was having another heart flutter, they announced to the press that he had an overactive thyroid gland. Bush was back in the hospital Wednesday for more tests.

Afterward, Dr. Burton Lee, the president's personal physician, said Bush would be taking it "pretty easy" for a while, particularly slowing down his normally vigorous physical activity. Lee, the president's personal physician, said the thyroid problem was "easily" and "virtually 100 percent treatable." The president, meanwhile, said he felt "perfect." On Thursday, he began treatment to bring the thyroid condition under control.

Confronted by what could have been a grave threat to his life, the president showed qualities of character that epitomize the finest attributes of humanity. When shortness of breath and fatigue stopped his jogging at Camp David Saturday afternoon last weekend, he reflected the kind of courage he had when, after becoming at age 18 the youngest commissioned Navy pilot in World War II, he fought the Japanese in the Pacific Ocean.

When it was determined at the Camp David infirmary that he had an irregular heartbeat and he was about to be helicoptered to the Bethesda hospital, he joked about whether he might get a two-week vacation out of the situation. He was alert, calm and in so little distress that he walked to the helicopter and took with him a briefcase of work. After an hour of tests at the Naval hospital, he insisted on eating a steak dinner.

On Sunday morning after a second night of continued irregular heartbeat and while the doctors were considering whether he should have an electric shock procedure, the indomitably spirited George Bush opened the fourth-floor window of his hospital room and with a cheerful, smiling face held an impromptu session with the reporters on the ground. He shouted that he was "feeling pretty good," and said, "Don't worry about me." At that point he did not know whether he would have to have the electric shock treatment, which could be dangerous. Asked by a reporter if he still had the irregular heartbeat, he laughingly replied, "Can't you hear it?" Ignoring someone who was trying to get him away from the window, he leaned out and said, "Let me out of here." That was real grace under pressure.

Bush insisted on leaving the hospital early Monday morning, and he walked into the Oval Office about 9:20 a.m. to applause from about 150 White House aides standing in the Rose Garden. After greeting them, Bush jokingly said, "All right, back to work." And he was soon back to work, meeting later in the morning with former Soviet Foreign Minister Edward Shevardnadze who credited the president with being "one of the main organizers" of improved relations with the Soviet Union.

By Monday afternoon, White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said the president had resumed his normal work schedule wearing an electrical monitoring device. Tuesday evening the heartbeat was briefly irregular again, and he was given an anticoagulant drug as a precaution against blood clots. After more thyroid tests at the hospital Wednesday and Thursday, he was diagnosed as having Graves' disease, ironically the same hyperthyroid disorder that afflicts his wife Barbara.

George Bush is hard-working, quick-witted, physically-fit-minded, genial but, if necessary, firmly determined. To me, he exemplifies the traditional all-American man. We need this popular leader to bring an end to the recession, as he brought an end to Saddam Hussein's aggression and helped bring an end to communist domination of Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union.

Senior activities slate fundraiser

Staff Report

"Hit a Homerun for the Homebound," a celebrity exhibition softball game that serves as a fundraiser for the Community and Senior Services, is slated for 4:45 p.m. next Sunday at Angels Stadium.

The $3 ticket enables those in attendance to remain for the Midland Angels-Arkansas Travelers game that will follow immediately after the charity event.

The softball game will pit "The Odessa Omnipotents," coached by Mayor Lorraine Bonner, against the "Mean Midland Machine," coached by Mayor Carroll Thomas.

Programs supported by Community and Senior Services include Meals-on-Wheels, the Visiting Nurse Service indigent program and the local senior centers.

During the game, there will be numerous drawings. The main prize will be a four-day, three-night trip to Las Vegas for two donated by Southwest Airlines and the Excalibur Hotel.

Ticket locations include:

In Midland: Community and Senior Services, 3301 Sinclair; the Dellwood Senior Center, 3303 W. Illinois; and Southeast Community Senior Center, 1803 E. Indiana.

In Odessa: the Visiting Nurse Service, 1015 N. Dixie; and the Girl's Club of Odessa, 900 S. Grant.

For additional information, call 563-2733.

Groups sponsor free film tickets

Staff Report

American Movie Classics (AMC), Dimension Cable and Community and Senior Services will sponsor the special flag-waving musical "Star Spangled Rhythm" at 7 p.m. Thursday at the North Park Cinema.

Free tickets are available by going by or calling Dimension Cable at 694-7721.

The purpose of the event is to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the USO and to honor retired servicemen.

Those attending will get the opportunity to meet AMC's on-air host Bob Dorian.

Organizations to meet in Austin for Friends of Arts Day events

Staff Report

AUSTIN — Friends of Texas Arts, the Texas Arts Council, and Austin arts organizations are inviting representatives of arts organizations from communities across the state to meet at the State Capitol Thursday for a Friends of Texas Arts Day.

This celebration of the arts in Texas will include a panel discussion on arts funding, visits with state legislators and a rally and reception on the grounds of the State Capitol.

Friends of Texas Arts Day will begin at 1 p.m. at the Radisson Plaza Hotel, downtown Austin, with an arts advocacy convocation featuring a panel of state representatives and senators.

After the advocacy convocation, an Arts Rally will begin on the south side of the capitol at 4:30 p.m. The Arts Day festivities will conclude with a reception on the Capitol grounds hosted by the Texas Association of Symphony Orchestras and Zachary Scott Theatre of Austin.

Those wishing more information may call the Texas Arts Council, 1-512-327-5282.

Plea bargains are 'necessary evil'

■ Midland County officials report that due to crowded criminal dockets, agreements have become an integral part of the judicial system.

By David Morris
Staff Writer

A recent move by state district judges in Smith County to eliminate plea bargains in their courts is not likely to be duplicated here, Midland County officials said last week.

Prosecutors, judges and defense attorneys agreed: Because of crowded criminal dockets, plea bargains have become an integral part of the judicial system.

"I think everybody is of the opinion that they are a necessary evil," said Midland District Attorney Al Schorre. "Everybody would prefer that there would be a full-blown hearing in every case. The reality is that we don't have enough courts... to be able to do that, and the cost would be astronomical to have enough judges and prosecutors to do that."

Last month, the three district court judges in Smith County in East Texas banned plea bargains from their courtrooms in an apparent "get tough" effort that some critics say will bring the wheels of justice grinding to a halt.

Plea bargains — or plea agreements, as they are often referred to — are touted as a means of moving defendants through the system quickly and avoiding costly and time-consuming jury trials.

Plea agreements work like this: In return for a defendant's guilty plea, prosecutors offer to recommend a particular sentence to the judge handling the case.

The judge does not have to abide by the terms of the plea bargain, but if he rejects it, the defendant can change his plea. Defendants who plead guilty are not allowed to appeal their sentences.

It's up to the prosecutor and the defense attorney to hammer out the terms of the plea agreement, which may include recommendations by the prosecutor to dismiss certain charges.

Prosecutors have a great deal of discretion in offering plea agreements, Schorre said.

They usually try to take such factors as the seriousness of the crime and the defendant's criminal history into account when offering terms. In the Kids' College classes set for summer

■ Registration for programs is scheduled Wednesday at the Student Center.

Staff Report

No sooner do children get out of school than they begin to wonder what they'll do during the summer. Midland College can occupy part of that time with programs for children who have finished first through eighth grades.

Kids' College is for those who have completed first through sixth grades, while Teens On Campus is for those who have completed the seventh and eighth grades.

Registration for both programs is scheduled Wednesday at the Student Center.

For the first time registration fees may be paid with Visa or Mastercard, as well as personal check or cash.

Most children received bulletins and have pre-registered. Those who did not pre-register may begin registration at 5:45 p.m. for Kids' College. Registration for Kids' College is scheduled from 2-7 p.m., while TOC registration is planned for 7-8 p.m. Late registration for both programs will be conducted at the Continuing Education Office in the Administration Building May 21-23.

Kids' College will have Session I Monday through Thursday beginning June 17 and ending June 27. Session II is July 15-25. Children may register for one, two, or three classes during each session. The TOC sessions are one week, June 10-13 or July 8-11.

Kids' College has classes at three times during each session: 12:40 to 2 p.m., 2:10-3:30 p.m., and 3:40-5 p.m. Teens On Campus class times are 1-3 p.m. and 3-5 p.m.

Classes for grades 1 through 3 include Ballet, Baseball, Basketball, Cartooning, Cheerleading, Handbuilt Clay, Clowning Around, Dr. Seuss to Judy Blume, Cooking, Drama, Drawing, Earth Science, Fossils, French, Golf, Jazz, Journey to Africa, Juggling/YoYo, Keyboarding/Computer, Math, Modeling, Money, Origami, Piano, Printmaking, Quilting, Reading, Sign Language, Skating/Frisbee, Small World, Soccer, Sorcerer's Apprentice, Space Stations, Spanish, Stories on Your Own, Street Hockey, Tae Kwon Do, Tennis, Weight Training, and World of Crafts.

Classes for grades 4 through 6 are: Acting, Archery, Babysitting, Ballet, Baseball, Baseball Card Collecting, Buttons and Bows, Clay, Computers, Cooking, Dances with Indians, Drama, Drawing, Earth Science, Fossils, French, Genealogy, Golf, Guitar/Ukulele, Indoor Games, Jam and Jazz, Jewels by You, Journey to Africa, Juggling, Mexican Culture, Modeling, Personal Development, Piano, Photography, Radio/TV, Reading, Reporting, Sign Language, Sorcerer's Apprentice, Space Stations, Tennis, Volleyball, Wacky Wayside School, Weight Training, and Woodcarving.

For the Teens On Campus, classes include: Baseball Card Collecting, Basic Aid Training, Cheerleading, Handbuilt Clay and Pottery, Computers for Good Grades, Dances With In-

Hundreds attend bash

Staff Report

ODESSA — A whole bunch of former babies and their parents got together Saturday and had a birthday bash courtesy of Women's and Children's Hospital.

All the children, born at Women's and Children's since it opened 15 years ago were invited to a birthday party held in Progressive Park, located adjacent to the 520 E. Sixth St. hospital.

More than 500 children and parents had gathered in the park within an hour after the carnival-like festivities kicked off about 1 p.m. Hundreds more were expected to drop by before the 13th-annual event came to its 4 p.m. close.

"It's like a celebration," said Kayla Mosler, who helped coordinate the party. "It gets bigger every year and we get a better turnout every year."

Puppet shows, self-defense exhibitions, livestock, fire trucks, music and a variety of cartoon heroes were part of the event.

There also were stick-horse races for children and hospital-bed races for adults.

Odessan Joe Tucker, 36, said he could not believe he waited nine years after his son Chris' birth at Women's and Children's before

Special moments come in all sizes and colors

At first glance, nothing seemed out of the ordinary. It was a typical day at the laundromat.

The usual cast of characters were present. A handful of young mothers shouting threats at their small children. Single men acting bored as they watched the dryer toss their clothes in a circular motion. An elderly couple in the corner carrying on a quiet conversation between themselves. A middle-aged woman watching a soap opera on the television set. A teen-ager cursing the Pac Man machine as it relentlessly ate his quarters.

It was, like I say, a typical day at the laundromat.

Then an old man walked in. He looked like everyone's grandfather, the kind of gentleman who takes great delight in spoiling his grandchildren. He was overweight, but not grotesquely so. Just a little plump. He was wearing gray slacks and an open-collar sports shirt. Beneath it, you could make out the lines of one of those old-fashioned undershirts that men over 50 generally wear, the type that would be called a tank-top in today's world of fashion.

He smiled at everyone and tossed his dirty clothes in a washer.

I liked him right off the bat — he reminded me of my own grandfather — so I gave him a nod and said "howdy." He returned my gesture with a wink and a slap on the back. "How's it going, sport?"

Old men who call me "sport" are almost as much fun as old waitresses who call me "hon."

Both, I feel reasonably certain, have a special place waiting for them in heaven.

After inserting his coins in the machine, the old man sat down and began working a crossword puzzle. He seemed at peace with himself.

Then the whirlwind hit.

He was about four-years-old. His voice was quite loud and he had enough energy to keep the strip in Las Vegas lit for two weeks.

He was a little black child.

His favorite activity was to run at a high rate of speed from one end of the room to the other, screaming at the top of his lungs while dodging those of us waiting for our clothes to dry.

About midway through his jaunt he would attempt to do a cartwheel. Unfortunately, his tiny little arms would not hold up the weight of his body and, as a result, he would tumble down onto his head.

This, as you might expect, would result in agonizing wails of discontent.

The mother showed no mercy.

"Robert, if you don't get over here in two seconds I'm going to tan your hide," is what she said.

Mothers who use the phrase "tan your hide" when scolding an unruly child are almost as special as old men who say "sport" and old waitresses who say "hon." I loved them all.

The small child, fighting back tears, struggled to his feet and glanced around for sympathy. Our eyes met. I shrugged my shoulders and smiled sheepishly. So did the elderly couple in the corner.

"I mean it, Robert," the mother said. "Get over here. Right now."

He did.

But first he looked up at the old man who by this time had put away his crossword puzzle and was listening to the one-sided mother-son conversation. He patted the child on the head and said, "You'd better do what your mama says, little fella."

The child wiped away his tears and replied, "I just wanted to play."

"I know," the old man said. "But you need to obey your mother. She knows best."

"She's mean to me," the child said.

"Don't say that," the old man smiled. "She loves you."

The expression on the kid's face indicated he wasn't too sure of that, and he returned and started to walk away. The old man reached into his pocket and pulled out two quarters.

He winked at the little fellow and said, "Here, sport. go buy you a candy bar."

The child grinned and happily grabbed the money. Then he bought himself a Snickers. On his way back to his mother he paused briefly, touched the old man's knee and said, "Thanks."

I'm not one of those idealistic dreamers who believes the time is near when skin color will no longer matter and all people will be treated equally.

We — and that includes people of all races — have a long way to go in that area.

But for a few fleeting moments on Wednesday, a small black child and an old white man did their part.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Spring Interim available for those who move quickly

By H.A. Tuck

Act quickly, as the Spring Interim is available tomorrow ... then it's gone.

Students can earn three hours of credit in just three weeks, but the only time to register is tomorrow at 8 a.m. in the multipurpose room at the Student Center. Classes begin as quickly as registration ends, with instruction from 9 a.m.-3 p.m. Monday through Thursday. The session ends May 30.

There are classes in computer, information systems, economics, English, government, history, legal assistant, music, office education, psychology and reading.

Midland College begins its summer operational hours tomorrow through Aug. 22. Administrative offices will be open from 7 a.m.-5 p.m. Monday through Thursday with lunch from 12-12:45 p.m.

Among other reasons, this is a good energy saver since most of the air conditioning and lights are turned off for an extra day each week.

You still can phone Midland College's Cityline for constant information. The number is 560-2400, extension 1835, to access nine lines of information 24-hours per day.

Summer Session I early counseling and permit to register begins Tuesday in the Student Services area of the Student Center. Registration will be June 3, with classes beginning June 4 and ending July 9. These classes also meet Monday through Thursday, but for shorter periods of time.

Summer Session II starts July 11 and finishes on Aug. 15.

Tuesday marks one of the most delightful of annual events at Midland College. It's Senior Citizens Day at Chaparral Center from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. with lots of music, dancing, singing, renewal of friendships, and laughing. There's no cost, entertainment will be provided all day by local and area senior citizens' groups, and a free barbecue is served at noon.

Ranked first in the nation, the Midland College women's tennis team is headed for Tyler and the 17th annual National Junior College Athletic Association's national tournament. The MC women are the defending national champions and have won the NJCAA title six times.

They'll play Monday through Thursday in a new team format championship rather than individual flights of six singles and three doubles. The team make-up is the same, but entire teams advance and the head-to-head battle is over when one team wins five matches.

After the team championship, there will be competition for individual singles and doubles titles.

The women's team hasn't lost a match against any junior college or university team in more than two years. They are tough and coach Joe Williams has them well-prepared for the tournament.

The men's team, also ranked first in the country, has its NJCAA tournament in Tyler May 21-27.

College trustees this week resume interviews with candidates to become the third president of Midland College. Interviews are slated on May 13 and 16 this week, May 21 and 23 next week, and the final one on May 30.

Resurfacing and repair of the original 12 tennis courts has been completed and the courts really do look nice. They were repainted with a beige color outside the court boundaries and green inside, which matches colors on the six new courts.

The out-of-bounds areas had been red since the courts were constructed in 1976. The new color scheme is less heat-reflective and a bit easier on the eyes.

H.A. Tuck is public relations director at Midland College.

land College. Angelo, a senior at Lee High School with a 4.12 grade point average, is a member of the National Honor Society, Business Professionals of America, Bio-Med, and participates in varsity basketball. His future plans include attending The University of Texas at Austin to major in business after which he hopes to attend law school.

Stasia Goddard, daughter of Linda and Richard Goddard of Midland, has been named a member of the Texas Tech University Chapter of Alpha Lambda Delta National Academic Honor Society for freshmen college and university students.

The Lee High School team of Todd Giese, Kris Raney, Sanjay Patel, Eric Wagenspack, Omar Balaz, Amit Agrawal, and Kim Wong took first place honors in the recent UIL district science competition, held at Odessa High School. The first place win advanced the team to regional competition, held at Texas Tech University.

Schools participating in the district competition represented the cities of Abilene, Odessa, and San Angelo.

In individual ratings, Raney ranked second among UIL district participants.

At the regional meet, the Midland team placed second in overall competition, missing a state berth to first place winner Lubbock High School. Midland's region includes the areas between El Paso, Fort Worth, and Lubbock.

Lee's team was coached by science teacher Pam Bryant and math teacher Barbara Jennings.

Douglas Runkles, son of Wayne Runkles and Linda Runkles, both of Midland received the master of divinity degree from Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary.

Irresponsible conduct charge against student editor is withdrawn

DALLAS (AP) — A Southern Methodist University student newspaper editor will not be disciplined for publicizing an on-campus rape case, although administration officials said Friday they will examine the newspaper's relationship to the school.

Daily Campus editor Mitch Whitten had been scheduled to go before the student judicial council Friday to defend himself against charges he violated the private school's Student Code of Conduct by publishing the articles.

But an hour before the hearing, school officials called a news conference to announce that the student who had filed the irresponsible conduct charge against Whitten had withdrawn it.

The controversy, which has drawn attention from national professional news organizations, centered over articles published last fall that detailed the student judicial council's disciplinary action against an SMU sophomore accused of raping a female student after a fraternity house party.

The Society of Professional Journalists and the Student Press Law Center in Washington expressed concern over SMU's handling of the situation and had offered Whitten and The Daily Campus financial and legal support.

The school's judicial panel, composed of students, faculty and administrators, found the sophomore guilty of rape. No criminal charges were filed by the woman.

The Daily Campus never identified the victim or the accused, but Student Body President Jonathan Polak claimed Whitten had violated the student code by even mentioning the case and the council's decision.

Polak, a frequent target of the Daily Campus and a fraternity brother of the accused, agreed Friday to withdraw the charge, said James Caswell, vice president for student affairs.

"I think that the whole situation was unfortunate," said Whitten, a senior.

"The university made the right decision in deciding not to pursue these charges," he said, but "I wish I had heard more rhetoric about them wanting to protect the free student press on the campus as is provided in the student code."

Whitten said he had "no idea" whether Polak had been pressured to withdraw the complaint.

Caswell would not say if the university had encouraged Polak to withdraw the charges but said Polak "agreed to withdraw them" after conversations with school officials.

Polak's campus telephone number is not listed and he was not at Friday's news conference.

Caswell said he received no outside pressure to drop the matter.

Caswell said Polak realized the student judiciary was not the right forum for the complaint in light of conflicting language in the student code.

One section of the code provides for a free student press while the other section prohibits the publication of the outcome of judicial hearings pending final disposition. The sophomore accused of the rape has appealed the council's still-sealed finding.

A committee to be established later will examine the conflicting code sections as well as the future relationship of the newspaper and the university, Caswell said.

"The whole issue of the context in which the media relates to the university is what we will be analyzing," he said.

"We've had a good relationship and the press has been free on our campus and we hope that it will continue that way," he said.

But Les Hyder, president of Student Media Co., the private corporation chartered in 1930 that runs The Daily Campus, said: "When they say they are going to review other issues related to the student press to the university we are concerned about what that means."

Paul McMasters, SPJ's national chairman and deputy editorial director of USA Today, said SMU's decision to examine the independent newspaper's role is troubling.

"I'm delighted that the charges against Mitch were dropped, but I'm sobered and not surprised by the news that they will still threaten the integrity and the independence of the newspaper," he said.

Hyder said the incident will not affect the newspaper's editorial decisions.

Students earn academic recognition

Staff Report

Eighteen Midland seventh-grade students have been recognized for their outstanding academic achievement by the Duke University Talent Identification Program.

Two students have been tapped for national recognition and 16 students for state recognition.

National honorees are invited to participate in special ceremonies, June 2, at Duke University in Durham, N.C.

State honorees can participate in ceremonies in Austin.

Midland Independent School District national honorees are Trevor Robinson of Goddard Junior High School and Jared Jensen of San Jacinto Junior High School.

To be eligible for national honors, a student must score a minimum of 600 on the math portion of the SAT and 550 on the verbal portion of the SAT or a combined score of at least 1,000. A similar score by a high school student would gain the test-taker acceptance into several major colleges.

State honorees are: Samantha Bates, San Jacinto; Roger Belzair, Goddard; Cory Chandler, Goddard; Sean Clements, Goddard; Nathan Cooley, Alamo; Dawn Davis, Goddard; Zachary Ham, Goddard; Susan Miles, Alamo; Stephanie Norton, Alamo; Ivy Orr, Alamo; Zachary Pierce, San Jacinto; Dwayne Reynolds, Goddard; David Rhoads, San Jacinto; Regine Rusk, Goddard; Eric

Stevens, Goddard; and Robert Weidmann, Goddard.

Eligibility for state recognition requires a minimum score of 500 males and 450 for females on the math section and a minimum score of 430 on the verbal section.

The Duke University Talent Identification Program aims to enhance student self-awareness of skills and abilities, recognize the achievement of outstanding students, and offer high achievers enrichment activities.

Publication features student's artwork

Staff Report

The artwork of Will Childress, an eighth grade student at San Jacinto Junior High School, was featured in the May 3 issue of VOICE, a publication of Scholastic, Inc.

Childress' artwork depicted a jungle scene.

His artwork was included as recognition for his success in the Scholastic Awards program.

Scholastic, Inc.'s Scholastic Awards is the largest and oldest program honoring the creativity of America's young people. The writing awards were established in 1923 and the art awards in 1927. This year, more than 22,000 pieces of writing and more than 200,000 pieces of art were submitted for recognition and publication.

"It is quite an honor to be selected for publication from the hundreds of finalists and honorable mention winners from this year's national winners," said Chuck Wentzel, director of the Scholastic Awards Program.

The awards program is co-sponsored by Smith Corona, M.R. Robinson Foundation, Hallmark Cards, Ricoh Cameras and Video, and Strathmore Paper Company.

Childress is the student of Janet Haney, art teacher at San Jacinto Junior High School.

Groups offer free eye check-ups

Staff Report

Senior citizens are invited to attend a free preventive eye care check-up from 9 a.m. to noon Tuesday at 10 Desta Drive, Suite 190.

It is being conducted by the Tolia Eye Clinic and the Diabetes Center of the Southwest.

The free service is being provided as a part of National Sight Saving Month.

Glaucoma screening, vision screening, cataract screening, a blood pressure check and a blood sugar check will be available.

Persons can call 687-2020 for a preferred time.

Abilene Christian names president

ABILENE (AP) — Dr. Royce Money, vice president and provost of Abilene Christian University, has been named the 10th president of the school.

The announcement came during Saturday afternoon commencement ceremonies at Abilene Christian, a private school of about 4,300 students affiliated with the Church of Christ.

Money will assume his duties June 1, the beginning of ACU's fiscal year, school officials said.

Money will succeed Dr. William J. Teague, who will become chancellor after 10 years as president. The present chancellor, Dr. John C. Stevens, will become chancellor emeritus.

"That's before they paid any of their overhead," Turbeville said. "If you figure that out, it's roughly one family in five in America signs up to fly. And that would never happen."

"It's over. That's what we wanted. And we didn't want them to get the benefit of any money and be an example to other people who might want to promote a lottery or sweepstakes."

Turbeville said he thought the agreement was the fairest resolution to the controversy.

"These were two very enthusiastic, well-intentioned young men who had relied on some bad advice," he said. "They had a written opinion from an out-of-state lawyer telling them it would be legal. The lawyer was wrong."

Mayer said the company still has a contract with the Soviets but would not elaborate on how they might fulfill it.

"We're still working on seeing how we can make a rather interesting spaceflight take place," he said. "At this point we really can't say anything about it."

Space Travel Services a few weeks ago opened an office in Omaha, Neb.

"I can't get into that right now," Mayer said. Mayer said, "Asked if he had any regrets, he replied: 'Oh sure. You can look back and say I wish it didn't quite work that way. And there's things we probably could have done better and things we could have done worse. You don't get very far if you spend too much time just worrying about things you didn't like that happened. We look back at it as objective as we can and think it was a pretty good job.'"

"We don't think we did anything wrong. There's no way we could resolve that without going through a lengthy and an exceedingly expensive trial."

With much fanfare last December, Mayer and Davidson announced "The Ultimate Adventure," a sweepstakes promising the winner a seat on a Soviet spaceship and a week long stay aboard the Soviet space station Mir. To enter the random drawing, people were told to dial a 900 telephone number for a fee of $2.99 or enter the contest for free by mail.

The contest resulted in Mayer and Davidson getting charged with operating an illegal lottery in Texas. Turbeville said the sweepstakes had drawn about 10,000 telephone calls before it was halted after 24 hours.

100th anniversary of Fort Union's abandonment May 15

By Richard Benke
Associated Press writer

FORT UNION, N.M. — This shell of a frontier fort, with its topped walls and lonely chimneys, never saw attack. All man did was abandon it to the wind and rain 100 years ago, and nature did the rest.

Fort Union, founded on the Santa Fe Trail in 1851, was the largest supply depot in the Southwest, says Harry Myers, superintendent of Fort Union National Monument. Its quartermasters sent clothing, ammunition and other goods to the scattered forts and communities of New Mexico Territory.

In 1880 when the railroad came to Santa Fe, 60 miles west of here, the Santa Fe Trail from Missouri became redundant, and traffic diminished at the bypassed fort. The Army abandoned it a hundred years ago this week, on May 15, 1891.

"They said, 'Let the prairie winds and whatever else take over,'" Myers said during a tour of the ruins in the teeth of a gritty 30 mph wind.

In the next 65 years, stucco and fixtures disappeared from the walls, wooden door and window frames rotted and wind-driven rain dissolved the adobe, leaving rows of unbuttressed chimneys poking skyward from the rubble like the skeleton of a fallen Conestoga ox.

The National Park Service took over the fort in 1956, saying the ruins probably wouldn't last another 100 years.

"But we're a conservation agency, and we're here to preserve them as long as we humanly can," Myers says. He sees his job as trying to help the fort outlast its 100-year prognosis.

The park service continually caps the remnant walls with a protective coating of adobe mortar and props up structures where needed.

"It's almost a never-ending task," Myers says.

Visitors are allowed to wander among the walls, stopping at interpretive signposts to hear tape-recorded tidbits of history. Ruts from several different Santa Fe Trail approaches are also marked.

The ghostly ruins north of Interstate 25 may be more inviting than an intact fort, Myers says.

"The visitors have to use their imagination, but that little extra effort really makes them enjoy the place," he says.

A museum displays artifacts from the fort, depicts examples of frontier life and sells memorabilia.

At one time the fort, with its immaculate white-trimmed territorial style buildings, had been considered elegant.

"I think the territorial style developed here," Myers says.

If it weren't for the wind, people still might live here.

"Many ladies greatly dislike Fort Union," reads an 1894 letter from a former resident, Mrs. Ormus B. Boyd. "It has always been noted for severe dust storms."

Troop strength reached its high point during the Civil War with 1,600 soldiers. The fort averaged 200 to 400 in the years before and after. The civilian population peaked at nearly 400 in 1868.

Fort Union troops participated in the Civil War battle of Glorieta Pass, 40 miles southwest of here, cutting off the Confederate march to the gold fields of Colorado.

Kit Carson led Fort Union soldiers against Kiowas and Comanches in 1864. Bluecoats from the fort also battled Utes, Navajos and Apaches. But the fort itself was never attacked, Myers says.

Fort Union meant commerce and sustenance for outlying communities such as Mora, 20 miles west, which never quite recovered after it closed.

When the Santa Fe Railway decided against building a Mora spur line in 1901, the handwriting was on Mora's adobe walls.

Mora's population, which peaked between 1910 and 1920 at nearly 14,000, is now about 4,200, says local historian Mike Montoya, a Mora grocer.

"The coming of the railroads was probably the biggest single blow," he says, and closing the fort was "the second hit."

Merchants pulled out, "and we were left with nothing but agriculture for subsistence because our markets were gone," Montoya says. "Our young started leaving to find jobs."

"Fort Union was to Mora what Kirtland (Air Force Base) is to Albuquerque," says Montoya, who has a bachelor's degree from the University of New Mexico in psychology and philosophy and a master's in education from the University of Northern Colorado.

The park service will mark the anniversary of the fort's closing with a ceremony at the ruins at 7 p.m. Wednesday. Historian Michael Olsen of New Mexico Highlands University in Las Vegas will speak.

The ceremony will close by recalling the way the Army shut down Fort Union in 1891 — a band will play retreat and the flag will be lowered.

Permian Toyota's Body Shop is now part of a Nationwide Network of PPG Certified Paint and Body Repair Shops. What this means for Permian Toyota's Body Shop customers is greater satisfaction in knowing the paint repair is guaranteed for 3 years and is good at all PPG Certified Shops Nationwide. The Guarantee also covers rental car fees in the event of a claim. We urge you to check with Permian Toyota Body Shop before you have any collision repairs or repainting done!

PART-TIME INCOME AVAILABLE

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with qualified, responsible individuals.

OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current carrier force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:

- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a carrier, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a carrier?

Depending on the size of the distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!

How long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carriers choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!

RESERVE YOUR DISTRIBUTORSHIP NOW!

Homes and Classified

Home sweet, cozy, beautiful, home

First

impressions mean a lot and this lovely five bedroom, three bath in coveted Trinity Meadows impresses one with feelings of "home, sweet home" from the time the beautiful double front doors are entered right on through the two living areas, two dining areas, kitchen and spacious master bedroom suite.

Leaded glass in the windows of the front doors adds a special charm as do the bricked flowerbeds and landscaped front yard.

Ceramic tile in the entry and hall ways is another extra special feature of this Robert Graham built home.

High ceilings and lots of large windows with transoms above add to the home's light, spacious atmosphere. Located on each side of the entry way are the formal dining room and formal living room. Double french doors separate the formal dining room from the kitchen. Beautiful custom wall paper with wainscoting and coordinating custom window coverings give the rooms that decorator's touch.

A large den with a fireplace has windows which face the covered patio and nicely landscaped back yard. It opens into the kitchen and breakfast area providing a perfect place for family gatherings.

Kitchen cabinets of ash coordinate beautifully with the wallpaper. Florescent lights overhead and under the cabinets brighten the room while the corner sink, breakfast bar and built-in desk and book shelves will brighten the spirits of those who spend so much time in the room. Other amenities in the kitchen include the built-in range, oven and microwave.

A sequestered master bedroom with a raised ceiling and lovely master bath is another outstanding feature of this home. Double doors open from the spacious bedroom into the master bath where a large tub is located in the center with vertical opaque windows stretch from ceiling to tub level. A double vanity, large double walk-in closets and an extra large shower provide luxurious touches to the home.

Families will love the floor plan. Two roomy bedrooms with large closets and a bath with double vanity are located on one side of the home while two more roomy bedrooms and another spacious bath are located on the other side.

The utility room has built cabinets and plenty of room for a freezer or extra refrigerator. Thoughtfully, a window has been added to what is sometimes a dark, dreary room. A three-car garage provides extra room for vehicles and storage.

Located on a quiet street in a neighborhood of young families, this home was built to be lived in and enjoyed.

Other amenities include a security system, sprinkler system, intercom and insulated windows.

This home is offered by Langston Realtors for $179,000.

Mother Knows Best

Today is Mother's Day, a day set aside to honor the woman who gave you birth, fed you, took care of you, taught you, loved you, reassured you, comforted you ... the list could go on and on. She is the one you looked up to, listened to and knew you could turn to in time of need. She was always there to offer advice, whether you asked for it or not.

Advice is something all mothers seem to be good at giving. Almost everyone can remember some tidbit their mother passed along to them during their childhood or young adult years.

In fact, some motherly advice seems to be universal. Every child is told the same thing by their mothers, all across the United States.

Some of the more famous universal pieces of advice from moms the country over include:

■ "Always wear clean underwear, just in case you're in a wreck."

■ "Don't ever get into a car with (talk to) strangers."

■ "Never pick up hitchhikers."

■ "Don't pet stray animals."

■ "Dress warm or you'll catch your death."

■ "Always say 'please' and 'thank you.'"

■ "Respect your elders."

■ "Eat everything on your plate."

■ "You don't have to do what everyone else does. If John jumped off a cliff, would you jump off the cliff too?"

■ "Don't lie, or someday when you're telling the truth no one will believe you. Remember the little boy who cried wolf."

All of these sayings offer good advice; advice that should be heeded. In fact, when several Midlanders were asked what was the best advice their moms ever gave them, many responded with, "If I'd listened to her advice, I would have been better off."

A few responses from Midlanders about the "Best advice my mother ever gave me" follows:

■ "My mother never gave me any lectures or anything," said Lana Cunningham, communications director for United Way, "but she let me know that I needed a college education and that I could do anything I wanted to do."

■ "The best advice my mother ever gave me was to look at the big picture. Not to look at the small pieces, but look at how everything fits together," said Jody Sneed, senior executive director for the Boy Scouts of America.

■ Linda Bond, director of development and marketing for Midland Community Theatre, said the best advice her mother ever gave her happened after the family had spent the weekend on a ranch in West Texas.

"We were on our way home and were covered with mud. We stopped at a restaurant to eat and I absolutely refused to go in because I was covered with mud. My mother looked at me and said, 'Linda, people don't care what you look like, they care what they look like.' That advice really has helped me," Ms. Bond said.

HAVE YOU HEARD?

'Project Graduation' celebration planned

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

A familiar sight on our TV screens each evening are the words, "It's 10 p.m. Do you know where your kids are?" with an accompanying voice over.

With high school graduation just a few weeks away, all parents are going to know to know their students are safe and just where they are and what they are doing.

Project Graduation, Midland's chemical free celebration, is in its final planning stages. It will take place May 30 at The Midlander health club. The success of the party the last two years has already made this a tradition for students at both Midland and Lee High Schools. It keeps the kids off the streets for the evening when heavy drinking and serious and often fatal accidents traditionally take place. In addition, it brings the graduates together as a group one last time and also makes them eligible for some wonderful prizes, including cash and tickets donated by American Airlines.

A Parents' Steering Committee headed by Susan Askins and Penny (Mrs. Ernest) Angelo has been working with a group of students in planning the event. Parents who would like to serve on one of the numerous committees may contact Susan at 682-2913 or Penny at 694-6034.

CONGRATULATIONS AND BEST WISHES to Liz Hight and Gayle Koeninger, who became Mr. and Mrs. in a two o'clock ceremony the afternoon of May 4 at St. Nicholas Episcopal Church.

The Rev. John W. Setzer Jr., interim associate of Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity, officiated, and music was provided by Darryl Knapp, organist; David Lewis, guitarist, and Judy Morris, flutist. Attending the couple was Gayle's 10-year-old daughter, Katie.

A lovely reception in the courtyard of Midland Community Theatre followed the ceremony.

On the eve of the wedding, a rehearsal dinner was held at Venezia Restaurant.

The couple were honored with a pre-nuptial party at the home of Marilyn and Neal Allen. Also hosting were Lynn Layman and the MCT Singers, of which Liz and Gayle are members.

In lieu of gifts, the couple requested food donations for their favorite charity, Blessings for Obedience, some of which was designated for Costa Rica's Earthquake Relief.

Now at home in Midland, Liz is with William Petroleum Consultants, and Gayle is with El Paso Natural Gas Co.

TO CELEBRATE SPRING, Ramona and Jack Black hosted a brunch last weekend. Held poolside by their condo, the delightful affair featured an array of casseroles, ham, hot biscuits, strawberries and dip, a table of desserts, coffee and juices.

Among the guests were Vernie (Mrs. Waymond) Townsend, Barbara and Hugh White, Deanna and Chuck Pearson, Mary and Tom Burger, Virginia and Bill Bean, Kristen and George Bennett, Patti and David Kinzelman, and Berdella and Travis Peyton.

MARILYN (MRS. E.R. "TEX") FILLEY had a special thrill recently when she was reunited with her cousin, Don Hammond of West Chester, Pa., and his wife, Martha. The cousins had not seen one another in 62 years.

B.J. was accompanied to the airport by her daughter, Marilyn Milor, to greet the pair. "Marilynn carried the sign that identified us," B.J. says, "and it was mutual attraction immediately."

One of the highlights for the Hammonds was learning to eat fajitas, which they had never tasted before. They enjoyed the Mexican dish at Chili's Restaurant, where it is one of the specialties of the house.

A retired DuPont executive, Don and his wife are world travelers and had many interesting stories to relate.

B.J. enjoyed a visit with Marilyn and her husband, John, prior to her cousins' arrival. The Milors received their private pilots' licenses last year and flew down in their plane from Wichita Falls.

GAYLE and DOC DODSON are in College Station this weekend for the graduation of their daughter, Kelly, from Texas A&M University. Also present is Gayle's mother, Pete (Mrs. D.K.) McMullan, also of Midland.

They have been house guests of Eileen and David Kent, godparents of the Dodsons' two daughters, Kelly and Jamie. Former tennis coach at Midland High school, David is now head tennis coach at A&M.

Kelly was recently inducted into Kappa Delta Psi, educational honor society. She was one of 10 recipients chosen from the Education Department to receive this honor.

Kelly's degree is in elementary education. She is a 1987 graduate of Midland High School and a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority.

MEMBERS OF THE RANGLAND Hills Country Club Ladies Association and their guests enjoyed a program on "Creative Accessorizing for Spring" at the May luncheon meeting.

Chris Newman, community relations director for Midland Presbyterian Homes, was the guest speaker. She included a demonstration on unique methods of scarf tying in her presentation.

The margarita social hour was followed by a luncheon featuring Glazed Chicken Breasts and Lemon Meringue Pie. Tables were centered with geraniums "dressed for spring" and later given as prizes.

Among those seen in the crowd were Betty (Mrs. Bud) Dole, Beth (Mrs. Tom) Mitchell, Thelma (Mrs. Roy) Gardner, Marguerita Ramirez, Ardis (Mrs. Wendell) Smith, Charlene (Mrs. Larry) Nagy, Ruth (Mrs. Ed) Aldridge and Christine (Mrs. Eugene) Clements.

Marilyn McKnight-Harrison is social columnist for the Reporter-Telegram.

MOTHER: Special lessons are learned throughout life

(From 1E)

"The best advice my Mother ever gave me? Oh, that's a hard one. There are so many things she told me at different stages in my life," said Eliva Hernandez, president of the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce. "I guess overall, it was to always be close to the family and be good to your own," adding that sometime the "family" includes your friends, neighbors and community. "Also, did you know that Mexico's Mother's Day is always May 10, no matter what day of the week it comes on," she added.

"My mother trained me several different ways with her advice, like don't lie and don't steal. But the best advice she gave me was probably to eat my vegetables. At lunch, someone was joking about maybe the president should have eaten his broccoli, then he would be OK," said Mayor Carroll Thomas. "Moms give all kinds of good advice, but I've enjoyed good health and a lot of that is from good eating habits my mother taught me."

Children can treat mom to breakfast fruit salad

NEW YORK (AP) — Mother's Day Raisin-Fruit Salad is a dish the kids can make themselves. A dinner knife is used to cut the strawberries and the bananas; the melon is scooped out with a melon baller.

The fruits are tossed with raisins, and the salad is topped with vanilla yogurt and granola cereal. This recipe makes 4 servings, so Dad and the kids can enjoy breakfast with Mom.

MOTHER'S DAY
RAISIN-FRUIT SALAD

1/4 cup orange juice
1 tablespoon honey
1 cup strawberry halves
1 cup red and-or green seedless grapes

1 cup melon balls (honeydew and-or cantaloupe)
1 banana, sliced
1/4 cup raisins
1 cup granola cereal
1 cup vanilla yogurt

Mix orange juice and honey in a large bowl. Add strawberries, grapes, melon, banana and raisins; toss gently. Spoon fruit mixture into four bowls, dividing equally. Top each bowl with 1/4 cup granola and 1/4 cup yogurt. Garnish with whole strawberries, if desired. Makes 4 servings.

Container gardening is 'grand' on small scale

By Deborah A. Bengé

Not everybody wants to farm 40 acres, but almost everybody likes to grow something, even on a small scale.

Small-scale gardening can take on grand proportions by gardening in containers.

Gardening allows you to use a creative flair by planting in plastic, stone or clay — found or made — because they're the practical answer to a great variety of today's garden landscape needs.

Petunias in the bird bath, marigolds in old copper wash tubs, salvia in the motorcycle side car, impatiens and coleus in hanging baskets — your imagination is your only limit.

Flower gardens or vegetable gardens can be planted in small spaces by containerized gardening. Gardening in containers is a form of gardening that can fit the needs of all ages and types of gardeners.

Consider the special places where containers fit: balconies, patios, decks, doorsteps, at street side or poolside.

Annual color that is used in the landscape in traditional ways can be repeated in the patio, doorway or stairway. The same color that is used in drifts in the landscape can be repeated in the outdoor living areas or placed where they can be seen from indoors to give your landscape a very polished look.

Flower containers can be as simple as a mass planting of a single flower such as the colorful petunia, or it might be a mixed bouquet composed of many flowers, combined with the same or similar colors: yellow, lemon yellow, golden yellow, yellow-orange; or combinations of pink, rose, mauve and lavender; or tones of red; or blues from the color of dawn to the deepest twilight shades.

Changing foliage textures is another way to provide variation within the containers. Combine the fine feathery foliage of Achillea with the strong, sturdy foliage of the zinnia. Or try marigolds with their finely divided deep green leaves in contrast to their bright yellow or orange blossoms.

Flower shape is another way to vary the container garden. Daisy-shaped flowers, star-shaped, spikes covered in small flowers, dragon head-shapes and all kinds of flower shapes will make your container garden much more interesting.

Here are some suggestions for container plantings:

■ Plant plants closer together than you would in the ground.

■ Fertilize with a balanced fertilizer at the manufacturer's recommendation.

■ Water frequently. Container plants dry out more rapidly than those growing in the ground. Overhead containers and hanging baskets will dry out faster than those growing on the ground.

■ If you have many containerized plants you may want to look into drip systems. Several are on the market to choose from.

■ Try to locate your containers where they get a little protection from the wind.

■ Make sure there is good drainage in the containers.

■ Mix sun-loving plants together; use shade-loving or shade-tolerant plants together also.

■ Mix plants which bloom continuously with plants which bloom in flushes. Salvias tend to bloom in flushes. Marigolds and petunias produce blossoms continuously.

You can plant a container like an artist, picking from a palette of plants for changing forms, colors and textures. When many different plants are combined, their natural growth habits may vary a bit from the normal. By growing them together, they will tend to grow upward and outward, creating an appearance of great abundance. And if they have the least tendency to flow downward, they'll trail over the edge of the container for added beauty.

So, whether you live in an apartment or a house surrounded with grounds, containerized gardening will add zest to your outdoor living areas. For a list of outstanding summer annuals to grow this summer, pick up a copy of "Texas Earth-Kind Landscape and Gardening Guidelines" at your participating garden center.

Home horticulture update will be presented 7 p.m. Thursday at Midland College's Student Union Building. This two-hour program will present the latest information and techniques involved in home horticulture. Extension specialists will discuss pest control and water and fertilizer needs for pecans, fruit, vegetables and lawns. For more information call 687-1351.

Deborah Bengé is the extension horticulture agent for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in Midland and Ector counties.

Tips improve odds of surviving hotel fire

N.Y. Times News Service

Household fires are frightening enough, but hotel fires can be even worse because guests are generally unfamiliar with the building's layout and don't know how to escape. Here are some safety tips to improve the chance of surviving a hotel fire.

■ When You Check In: Find out if the hotel has smoke detectors and sprinklers and how the fire alarm sounds. By law, hotels must post a floor plan on the door inside each room. Locate the exits on the map and find out where they are in relation to your room. It is easier to find exits in the dark if you have previously counted how many doors away they are from your door. Learn the emergency telephone numbers for the hotel and city you are in.

■ If Fire Breaks Out: Touch the door handle before leaving your room. If it is hot, it probably means that the fire is nearby, so do not open the door. Keep your room key with you in case you have to go back to the room quickly. Do not try to ride the elevator.

Stanton couple celebrates anniversary

James Lee "Jim" and Luci Box of Stanton celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary May 4 at Charlie's in the Midland Hilton Hotel. Hosts for the reception and family dinner were Wayne and Mona Bourke and Deidra Goode.

Box and the former Lucille Jordan were married May 1, 1941, in Rankin. They have two children, Mona Bourke of Edmond, Okla., and Deidra Goode of Austin, as well as four grandchildren.

The couple has lived in Iraan, California, Colorado, Midland, Odessa and Stanton. Box attended Baylor University and North Texas State University, and served four years in the U.S. Army Air Force during World War II. He retired after 24 years with the Highway Department. He is past master of Masonic Lodge and Eastern Star. Mr. and Mrs. Box are members of First Baptist Church in Stanton.

LIFESTYLE POLICIES

Policies for publication of announcements in the Lifestyle sections of the Reporter-Telegram are:

Information for Sunday pages must be in our office by 5 p.m. the preceding Monday. For publication in a weekday paper, we must receive the information by noon two days before the information is to be published. For example, an item for Wednesday's paper must be received by noon Monday.

Engagement announcements must appear at least two weeks before the wedding date. Wedding announcements must appear within one month of the event. Anniversary announcements — 25th or higher — must be published within one month of the anniversary date.

Announcements of pageant winners will only be published for teenage pageants and older. Photographs will be published only for winners, not runners-up. These announcements are published Thursdays. Deadline is 5 p.m. Monday.

All articles must be submitted in writing. Forms for weddings, engagements and anniversaries, only published Sundays, are available in the Lifestyle office. All materials must include the signature and telephone number of the person submitting them.

We cannot mail forms to persons in Midland. Pictures must be picked up in the Lifestyle office within one month after publication. To have a photo returned by mail, include a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Unclaimed photos are discarded after a month.

Photographs may be submitted with wedding and engagement announcements, and anniversary announcements of 50 years or more, but are not required. A portrait of the bride-elect or of the future bride and bridegroom together may be submitted with engagement announcements. Portraits of the bride only or of the wedding couple may be submitted with wedding announcements. A different photo must be submitted for the engagement and wedding announcements.

Photos should be vertical, black and white, glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but quality reproduction cannot be assured. Snapshots generally are not acceptable and Polaroid shots are not accepted. The MRT reserves the right to deny publication of any photo due to quality or content.

There is no charge for publication of photographs and stories.

Alphabetical bridal party is newest craze

By Carol Cutler
Copley News Service

On a recent afternoon I ran into a friend in the kitchenware department of a major store. Her eyebrows were knitted and her mouth was pursed. She was really concentrating.

"What are you looking for," I asked. "Something special?"

"Oh, yes," she replied. "Something in J."

J? It seems there is a new kind of bridal shower being given. Guests are assigned a letter of the alphabet and must buy a gift incorporating that letter. This may seem like a bit of reaching, but upon reflection, one realizes that it makes good sense. It certainly erases any chance of the bride receiving six toasters.

Have fun with the invitation. Invite guests for a Red Letter Day when you are honoring a girl who knows her ABCs. And, of course, everyone comes with a letter-perfect gift tucked under her arm.

Are there unfair letters in this scheme? At first one might think so, but even J proved not beyond imagination. There are jars that could even be filled with jelly beans. Or what about a Jell-O mold with a few boxes of Jell-O tucked inside? There also are juicers, jelly-roll pans and jelly thermometers. My friend bought the Jell-O mold. Let's examine other possibilities:

A. Apple corer, appliance, alcohol burner, alphabet cutters and, of course, anything automatic.

B. Baking sheet, ball cutters (as in melon), basters, beaters, bowls, blenders, boning knife, brushes, butter curler, broom.

C. Candy thermometer, cake rack, cake-decorating stencil, carving knife, carving board, chafing dish, champagne bucket or cork, cast-iron skillet (my favorite piece of kitchen equipment), cheese board, chef's knife, cherry pitter.

D. Decanter, deep-fat fryer, double boiler, drum sieve, salad dryer.

E. Egg beater, anything electric, escargot (snail) utensils, espresso machine, egg timer.

F. Fish poacher, fish scaler, flame-tamer, fat skimmer, fondue pot, food warmer, forks of many kinds, freezer thermometer, frying pans, Food & Wine, flag.

G. Graters, garlic press, grapefruit knife, gratin dish, griddle, grinder, goose-feather pastry brush.

H. Ham slicer, heater, hinged pate mold, hot plate, House Beautiful.

I. Ice pick, ice bucket, ice cream scoop, instant thermometer, immersion heater, iron skillet (again).

K. Knives, kettle, kugelhopf pan, kitchen shears, kalanchoe plant, antique keys, ketchup bottle holder, bag of dried kidney beans.

L. Lids, layer cake pans, lamb mold, anything by Le Creuset (enameled cast-iron equipment), loaf pan, lobster pincers, lemon zester.

M. Madelein mold, mandolin (a cutting utensil), measuring cups and spoons, meat grinder, meat pounder, meat thermometer, mezzaluna cutter, mixing bowls, molds.

N. Nutcracker, larding needle, nutmeg grater, decorative brass nails, nautical decorations, navel oranges or nectarines (perhaps a crate), Nesselrode.

O. Openers, olive pitter, omelet pan, orange juicer, oven thermometer, oyster forks, oyster dishes.

P. Parchment paper, paring knife, parsley chopper, pastry equipment, pate molds, peelers, pepper mill, percolator, pastry bag and tips, rolling pin, popover cups.

Q. Quiche pan, quince jam, roll of quarters, certificate for a quantity of quilts, queen-size bed linen (if applicable), quartz scale, quilt, lots of quinine water.

R. Roasting pans, rolling pins, rotisserie, anything round, rubber dough scraper, rubber spatulas potato ricer, racks for pans and, for a true gift, a refrigerator.

S. Serrated knives, scissors or shears, scale, scallop shell dishes, flour sifter, shrimp deveiner, sieves, skewers, egg slicers, souffle dishes, anything to do with spaghetti, sponges.

T. Tartlet pans, toaster (singular), toms, trivets, truffle cutters, tureen, tomato knife, thermometers, travel clock, travel iron.

U. Utility knives, ukulele, umbrella, umbrella plant, ultraviolet lamp, or you might try getting away with anything unusual or utilitarian.

V. Weather vane, vegetable peeler, vacuum cleaner, package of valentine cards, a great vanilla, Vanity Fair, ventilator, verberna.

W. Water purifier, waffle iron, whisks, wine, wine bucket, wine cork (these possibilities are endless), wire egg stand, wooden spoons.

X. Now this presents a problem: perhaps a certificate for Xeroxing, or investigate plant life possibilities.

Y. Yogurt maker, anything yellow, a copy of "Yankee Doodle Dandy," yams, yardstick measure, if they have a yacht you are in luck, book on yoga.

Z. Zebra-striped cocktail napkins or linen, Zip-Zap knife sharpener, zippers, anything with a zig-zag pattern, zoological magazine or book, zucchini and zucchini corer, "Zorba the Greek."

These are not all the possibilities, but they give a good idea how much is out there. There is no denying that some letters are easier than others. I didn't tell my friend about her decision since her J choice really is not a Jell-O mold, but a gelatin mold.

Ice-cube tray eliminates water spills

By Ron Gasbarro

Associated Press

Fill an ice-cube tray with water and you will be sure to leave a trail of water from the sink to the freezer.

The Make and Shake Ice Cube Tray does away with all that mess. Because it is a closed container, you fill it with water, cap it and freeze it. When it's frozen, just whack it against the counter to break the ice, unscrew the lid and pour out as many cubes as you need.

Because the container is sealable, your cubes will not have that funny freezer taste. You also can use the frozen trays in your picnic cooler to keep food cold on your way to the beach.

Manufactured by EHI, Inc., of East Hampton, N.Y., the Make and Shake is $3.50. To order, call 1-800-645-1188. New York State: call 516-324-2224.

Mothers, daughters share stories of love

EDITOR'S NOTE — They all know the wall. Even the closest mother and daughter have occasionally plowed into it. It's that place where, so different have been their lives, neither woman can entirely grasp the other's experience. And yet, out of love, they keep on trying.

By Leslie Dreyfous
Associated Press

Richelle Eckles lives next door to her mother — and miles apart. The distance between them has nothing to do with love. It's about reality, living in different worlds.

"My mom is the strongest woman around," said Richelle, 28, who lives in the Augusta, Ga., neighborhood where she was raised. "But there is a definite wall, and I know exactly where it is. She just can't put herself in my place, because she hasn't been there."

Richelle works full-time as a cable company marketing manager, teaches aerobics and studies nights toward a master's degree in business. Married four years, she and her husband are delaying having children for now.

"Her life is very different than mine has been," said Richelle's mom, Frankie Paulus. "I'm one of those prehistoric, stay-at-home moms. And I feel fortunate. I haven't had to make choices, and I can see how difficult it is."

Frankie, 51, says she's loved her life: baking the cookies, leading the Girl Scout troops, making elaborate Halloween costumes.

"But the way her face lights up when she asks about my life, it makes me think she would like to live it too," Richelle said. "I see her wanting things that maybe she could never come out and say. It's part of the wall."

Frankie, like many women of her generation, may find it difficult to express her feelings and needs. Self-help books, therapy and communication have always been part of the world in which Richelle's generation lives.

"But my mom, she was taught to keep a lot inside," Richelle said. "She puts herself through hell so the people she loves — my dad and her kids — will be happy."

VICTORIA & JENNIFER

Victoria Secunda had no choice. She was forced to look at herself in order to understand her own daughter's dangerous pain. Jennifer, then 15, was anorexic and had already cut her wrists once in a suicide attempt.

"It was a huge red flag that I couldn't ignore," Victoria said. "I did not want to see anything other than that I was the perfect, all-knowing mother. (But) it became a matter of life-saving urgency to help her by helping me."

There started Victoria's journey, a psychoanalytic examination of her own feelings as a daughter and the shadows they cast. She'd vowed as a young girl not to be like her mother, who had always seemed cold and distant.

Instead, Victoria went to another extreme: Rather than give too little, she gave far too much. She fretted about whether her daughter's grades were high enough, her social calendar full enough, her clothes fashionable enough.

"I used to call her my smother, instead of mother," said Jennifer, now a healthy, 21-year-old college student. "She was controlling my life. The only aspect that I could control was the shape of my body, sex and suicide."

Jennifer used those weapons to call out, but it was hard for Victoria to hear her daughter's pleas. "Women of the senior generation were taught from the minute they were born that their whole identity was contingent on being a good girl, finding a man, marrying him young and producing children instantly," said Victoria, 51.

"When you're raised to believe that being a mother is everything, denial is a way to keep feeling good ... when your kid hits the skids," added Victoria, author of "When You and Your Mother Can't Be Friends."

But with Jennifer's life on the line, Victoria had to face facts: Daughter was in trouble and Mother was part of the problem. They both sought counseling, and in that step started the healing.

"She told me about her childhood, her regrets, the places she knew she'd screwed up," Jennifer said. "It wasn't an apology. There was no need to apologize. But she was able to look at the pain in her past, and that's where I started to understand my own pain."

JOAN & JENNY

Joan and Jenny Arnold were pioneers, a single mom and latch-key kid in a Detroit suburb during the 1960s.

Today they still live only 10 minutes apart, but they don't intrude on one another. Balance has everything to do with the way their relationship works. They've learned when to share — and when to hold back.

"I don't know if parents and children should be the very best of friends," Jenny said. "They're not able to understand everything that's happened in each other's lives. But you can encourage each other, make each other happy."

Joan, 58, was a newly divorced working mother at the age of 33. Jenny, 31, is still on her own. Jenny accepts that her mom, who recently retired after 29 years teaching elementary school, doesn't quite understand her 14-hour days as a video producer.

And though Joan would love a couple of grandchildren, she is careful not to push.

"I would have enjoyed being a doctor or maybe doing something in the arts, so I remember to be happy for Jenny's opportunities," Joan said. "But as a mother, I can't help wishing for the world's best son-in-law, someone to protect her and share her life."

Whether secretly or not, it's a wish many mothers have for their daughters even though theirs was a generation in which divorce statistics shot sky-high.

"Through our 20s they say, 'Have fun. Learn. Be adventurous. Go for it.' Then you hit 30," Jenny said. "And they start saying you should find a nice guy. I think my mother would like to see me a little more settled. I think it makes her feel like I'd be protected in some way."

BARBARA & TRACY

Barbara Warren's reflexes might lie in the 1950s, but her heart belongs to a woman circa 1991. Like her 27-year-old daughter, mother knows confusion.

She has watched and participated in a social revolution. Her daughter, Tracy Krumm, is part of the generation of women groping with its consequences.

Barbara, 52, was raised with Depression-era values, married young, divorced in the mid-1970s and pursued dreams of working in academia. She eventually remarried her husband — but kept her maiden name.

Tracy is a mixed media artist with a Bohemian bent. She's lived a lot of her young life on the road, chasing the dreams her mom has always encouraged.

"I've done some great things and my mom wants to be able to share in all of them. But she can't," said Tracy, who lives in Washington, D.C. "She has so many questions to answer for herself still."

Embracing across generational change

By Leslie Dreyfous
Associated Press

Mother sees daughter sees mother. Like the image in a funhouse mirror, their perceptions are sometimes distorted and ever-changing: Inexplicably close then miles apart, pleased and pained at once.

Mothers and daughters have always clasped hands across a generational gulf. But that expanse has perhaps never been wider, or more arduous to cross.

"No two generations in history have ever been as estranged as the 50- to 80-year-old mother and her 20- to 50-year-old daughter," said Victoria Secunda, author of "When You and Your Mother Can't Be Friends."

Mothers reared during the Depression and World War II were presented clear-cut roles. Their lives were generally defined by spouses and children, their dreams often deferred.

How different are the lives led by their baby-boom children, products of post-war freedom and plenty. These are the daughters of feminism and consciousness-raising, the heirs of wider choice and its unfolding consequences.

"What we are living is really a revolution and there's mutual confusion," said Evelyn Bassoff, author of the new book "Mothering Ourselves: Help and Healing for Adult Daughters."

"There's fear and a helpless kind of frustration because most mothers and daughters want to be there for each other," Bassoff said from Boulder, Colo. "They just don't know how."

The rules have changed, as have the expectations between mother and daughter. Whether searching for ways to harmonize career and family or forging a life on their own, younger women are making new demands.

But mothers can no longer bind all their daughters' wounds or offer simple recipes for success. It's an uncomfortable reality for this older generation of women, many of them devoted homemakers who had all the answers to childhood questions.

At the same time, many older women have finally emptied their nests after decades of mothering. They're ready to start planning travel, study or a new career.

But the telephone keeps ringing. It's that worldly, independent career woman on the line, bending mommy's ear and often soliciting career counsel or relationship advice.

Marie Burnett, a New York psychologist specializing in women's issues, calls it an emancipation disorder. Because they're not marrying right out of college, women are relying longer on mother's support.

"This is a generation of young women doing very courageous stuff. They've graduated college, left home without partners and taken high-pressure jobs in the city," Burnett said.

"They're emancipated," she said. "But out of fear, many women are clinging to their mothers. The telephone has become a new sort of umbilical cord."

Unfortunately, therapists say, many daughters find the well dry. Though pained by their daughters' confusion, mothers are often either exhausted or limited by their own life experience.

"It also can be incredibly painful," said Secunda, 51, who is currently working on a book about fathers and daughters. "We were raised to believe that we should go to college, find an eligible guy and get married — end of story."

"And along comes this daughter who can have money, travel, a sexual life outside of marriage. The mother unconsciously takes a look at the daughter and sees the choices she didn't have. And the hardest thing for them to do is say 'I blew it. Can we discuss it?'"

Some mothers instead retreat emotionally; others dismissively offer snap advice; still others might bemoan their daughter's lot, the head-spinning choices and attendant confusion.

"But that's not helpful," said Florence Kaslow, a therapist in West Palm Beach, Fla. "The true challenge is finding mutual acceptance ... saying to each other 'Take a look at my world and learn with me.'"

DEAR ABBY

No time like present to cherish mother

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: The following column has been published many times, and a significant number of readers wrote to say that it deserved to be run every Mother's Day, so here it is:

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My beloved mother passed away recently, so I called my minister and asked him for the wording of a prayer I could say for my mother. He said, "I'm too busy — and a lot of good prayer will do her now!"

You see, Mama went to church long ago, but my father never liked to go, so Mama quit going. Abby, I can't believe that heaven is open only to church members. I've called all the bookstores in town, and they say there aren't any prayers for the dead in any of the books they have. I've heard there are places where you can send a few dollars and they will pray for the dead, but I don't know their addresses.

Abby, I'd be so grateful if you'd print a short prayer I could say for my mother before I go to sleep at night. Any faith is acceptable. I can't let you send it to my home because my father looks over the mail first and I'm sure I'd never get it. It means the world to me. Thank you, and God bless you. Sign me ... A PRAYER FOR MAMA

DEAR PRAYER: I found this prayer in my Union Prayer Book. It's the prayer Jews recite on Yom Kippur (the Day of Atonement) to honor the memory of a deceased mother:

IN MEMORY OF A MOTHER
"I remember thee in this solemn hour, my dear mother. I remember the days when thou didst dwell on earth, and thy tender love watched over me like a guardian angel. Thou hast gone from me, but the bond which unites our souls can never be severed; thine image lives within my heart. May the merciful Father reward thee for the faithfulness and kindness thou hast ever shown me; may he lift up the light of his countenance upon thee and grant thee eternal peace! Amen."

CONFIDENTIAL TO ANYONE FOR WHOM IT IS NOT YET TOO LATE: The gestation period of a mother's advice is anywhere from one week to 50 years. Losing one's mother before having thanked her for the many precious things she taught you is one of life's greatest tragedies.

DEAR ABBY: I have four grown children, three married and the other engaged. My oldest has my only two grandchildren, whom I love dearly.

The problem is she swamps me with pictures. I have tried to tell her before that I just want a couple now and then. My other children will have children in time, and I'm sure other grandmothers have this problem. I don't want all these pictures! I won't be able to keep albums for them, either.

How do I get her to understand that I don't want a whole lot of pictures all the time without hurting her feelings? I explained once, but she still brings or sends all these pictures. Any suggestions would be appreciated. — AGRAN

NY IN ROCK HILL, S.C.

DEAR GRANNY: Purchase a shadow box plexiglass frame and use it to display whichever of the photographs you DO like. Return the rest of the pictures to your daughter with the suggestion that SHE make albums using the "extra" pictures, so that the children will each have mementos of themselves while they were growing up.

Hopefully, that way, there will be no hurt feelings.

DEAR ABBY: It is a little-known fact that not one but two major historical events took place when Charles Lindbergh made his amazing non-stop solo flight from New York to Paris in 1927.

I am enclosing a newspaper article from the Minneapolis paper reporting both events. There are pictures showing Lindbergh being greeted by Myron T. Herrick, who was our ambassador to France at the time, and a picture of "Lindy" proudly standing beside his little silver plane, "The Spirit of St. Louis."

Over those pictures was the following headline: "One Triumph of Science Is Used to Tell of Another." Then it goes on to say: "The transmission of pictures by radio, the most recent major triumph of science, was employed to rush these pictures to the U.S.A. from Paris. They were sent by airplane from Paris to London, then sent by radio to New York, then relayed westward over telephone wires!"

Perhaps you and your readers will find this interesting. — JOHN E. RALLS, MINNEAPOLIS

DEAR MR. RALLS: Thank you for a little-known piece of history. I wonder how many people were aware that these two major historical events were so closely related. I wasn't.

By popular request, Abby shares more of her favorite prize-winning, easy-to-prepare recipes. To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: More Favorite Recipes by Dear Abby, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Alaska offers visitors sights from centuries

By Randy and Karen Mink
Copley News Service

The standard Inside Passage circuit begins in Vancouver, British Columbia, or San Francisco, going as far north as Juneau or Skagway. The increasingly popular "Glacier Route" covers a broader swath of territory, venturing beyond the sheltered passage to the Gulf of Alaska's open waters and Anchorage.

"The growth in Alaska cruising is across the gulf," said Max Hall, vice president for public relations of Princess Cruises, which offers the Glacier Route on four of its six ships. "This northern itinerary appeals to the growing number of Alaska repeaters."

Cosmopolitan Vancouver, Canada's third-largest city, makes a good jumping-off point for Inside Passage and Glacier Route cruises.

Victoria, the provincial capital of British Columbia, delights cruise visitors with its English flavor, stately Parliament Building and renowned Butchart Gardens.

A more rustic Canadian port is Prince Rupert, the "Halibut Capital of the World."

Ketchikan, the first Alaskan city on the way north, clings to the velvety green side of Deer Mountain, boasting a colorful waterfront area with houses and restaurants built on stilts.

SIGHTSEEING TOURS reveal its gold mining, salmon fishing and Tlingit Indian history. Alaskan crafts and jewelry shops line the plank sidewalks of Creek Street, once a notorious red-light district.

Totem Bight Park and Saxman, an Indian village two miles away, have impressive collections of totem poles. Active types can opt for a canoeing, kayaking or fishing excursion.

In Juneau, the capital of Alaska, you can pass through the swinging doors of the historic Red Dog Saloon, explore the Alaska State Museum and admire gold-nugget jewelry in the shops on Franklin Street.

On shore excursions, you can go to a salmon bake, pan for gold, fly over Juneau Icefield or visit ice-blue Mendenhall Glaciers.

In tiny Skagway, at the northernmost tip of the Inside Passage, you can step back into the 1890s with a stroll down the boardwalks of this rip-roaring relic of the Old West. Broadway, the main drag, abounds with souvenir shops and art galleries in false-front buildings that recall the days when the hamlet was gateway to the Klondike.

The past comes alive at the Trail of '98 Museum and at Eagle's Hall, where bawdy cancan girls perform and a shootout is staged. The White Pass narrow-gauge railway, a favorite excursion, winds through the mountains to the Yukon border.

Sitka, the former capital of Russia in the New World, preserves its Russian heritage in onion-domed St. Michael's Cathedral, which has rare icons and paintings. Tours feature Russian-dance performances and slices of Indian life.

A day afloat in Glacier Bay National Monument is the undisputed highlight of many Inside Passage cruises. Park naturalists come aboard to give play-by-play accounts of the crystal behemoths that toss massive chunks crashing into the sea.

IF IT'S GLACIERS you want, book a Glacier Route cruise that continues north to — or begins in — the Gulf of Alaska. In Prince William Sound, marvel at Columbia Glacier, an Ice Age monster that covers an area the size of Los Angeles.

Nearby College Fjord, another northern-route exclamation point, has been nicknamed Alaska's "new Glacier Bay." Most of the 16 glaciers are named after Ivy League schools such as Harvard, Yale and Radcliffe, the result of an 1899 research expedition funded by Eastern U.S. colleges. You might sight whales, porpoises,

Offbeat ports on the less-traveled Glacier Route may include Homer, an artists' colony and fishing village set amid snow-frosted mountains on the Kenai Peninsula.

In Valdez you can inspect the terminus of the Trans-Alaska Pipeline. Seward and Whittier serve as ports for Anchorage, a bus or train ride away.

Anchorage, which has a population of 248,000, is the state's largest city and a springboard for pre- and post-cruise journeys.

Fireworks spectacular is Canadian tradition

By Jennifer Merin

MONTREAL (AP) — Boom! The first rocket blasts a streak of red across the night sky then shatters into a spray of gold, green and white sparks that cascade through the darkness and fade to black.

Another rocket soars heavenward and explodes into showers of brilliant white light. But this time, the rocket's report is drowned in a swell of cheers that rises from the crowd gathered to witness what are billed as the world's most spectacular fireworks displays.

This is the Benson & Hedges Inc. International Fireworks Competition. It is staged annually at Montreal's La Ronde amusement park, on Sainte-Helene Island in the St. Lawrence River, in the heart of charming Old Montreal. The fireworks are launched from platforms in the park's lake, and bright overhead displays are beautifully reflected in shimmering water.

In this, its seventh year, the competition takes place May 25-June 19, with "pyromusical" fireworks displays every Wednesday and Saturday night. Each display starts at 10 p.m., lasts about 30 minutes and uses hundreds of Roman candles, rockets, big shells and especially invented pyrotechnical devices.

Displays are compliments of seven of the world's best fireworks companies, invited to compete for trophies presented during the grand finale on June 19.

WHAT'S MOST unusual and splendid about these fireworks displays is that they are accompanied by music from start to finish. The choreography of light and sound is fabulous: As music shifts from double to triple time, trios instead of duets of rockets are released.

Tremendous technical sophistication is required to control and coordinate the light and sound of pyrotechnics. Displays utilize ultra-modern computer technology to precisely sequence timed ignition of explosives.

Several invited companies are family businesses that can be traced back hundreds of years. France's Ruggieri Company, lighting up the skies at the competition's opening night on May 25, can be traced to 1793. This year's Ruggieri presentation is based upon the popular musical, "Phantom of the Opera."

Other companies this year include Spain's dramatic Pirotecnica Zaragoza (June 8), a company founded in 1860, and Italy's romantic Pirotecnica Soldi (June 15), with great Italian musical inspiration ranging from the farandola to Fellini soundtracks.

From the United States, Boston's Pyrotechnology Co. creates "New American Visions," featuring a medley of classical and contemporary hits, on June 1. Holland's JNS Pyrotechnick, May 29, and Canada's Flatlux, June 5, are 'Every company has its own style and technique... We ignite each piece individually to gain more technical and artistic control.'

— Syd Howard

of Syd Howard International Fireworks

also scheduled.

SYD HOWARD International Fireworks is traveling from Sydney, Australia, to present a program with music ranging from Jarre to INXS on June 12. Howard, competing for a second consecutive year, believes Montreal presents a unique artistic challenge.

"Three launching areas are used, and each requires different types of explosives," Howard says. "Every company has its own style and technique. Some utilize one explosion to trigger another, but we ignite each piece individually to gain more technical and artistic control."

"We watch each other, learn from each other, buy devices from each other. But each display is put together very differently. So the variety and competition is tremendous."

The competition's grand finale, this year on Wednesday, June 19, is super spectacular to celebrate the awards ceremony. It is always presented as a gift to the people of Montreal. It is staged by Industria Panzera, under the direction of the great Italian master Giovanni Panzera, the competition's artistic director. This year, the finale's theme is "circus."

The fireworks can be seen gratis from most of the city, with excellent views from the bridges that cross the St. Lawrence River to Sainte-Helene Island. But the best vantage points are inside La Ronde, where the audience's energy level is almost as vibrant as the fireworks.

RESERVED SEATING tickets cost $20 (Canadian) and give all-day access to La Ronde's various rides and attractions.

For tickets, U.S. and Canadian residents can call 1-800-361-4595.

AT WIT'S END

Mothers' virtues are their own rewards

By Erma Bombeck

This is the day we honor mothers who showed up for it. Sometimes they're called moms, stepmothers, dads, Aunt Marthas or grandmas. The name isn't important.

They're the persons who roll out of bed each day to teach, serve, listen, counsel and nurture a child. They're probably the only persons in the world who love you enough to hold you in their arms after you've just said you hated them.

They've been around so long that sometimes they're like a wall that you bump into and don't even see. But they've been there — from the Beav to Bart Simpson, from Dr. Spock to Dr. Ruth, through sagging diapers and soaring achievements.

They've endured being sprayed in the face with strained carrots, having chewing gum spit out in the palm of their hands, using their teeth to take knots out of shoestrings that you have wet on, and serving as a receptacle for nose tissue you have just used.

Mothering is a unique job. They're fired every other day and told they are no longer needed. But nothing changes. They're not going anywhere. When their sons have a hairline like the state of Texas, they'll still be prompting, "Don't talk with food in your mouth."

It's a high-risk profession. We all know that when we go into it. You win some, you lose some. So why do we do it? It sure isn't the money.

I guess it's because I don't know of any other job in the world that brings out the best in people — patience, understanding, compassion, strength, selflessness, caring, forgiveness. They are virtues you never knew were within you until you raise a child. I never knew I could say no when my heart wanted so badly to say yes. I never knew I could tell a child the truth when it hurt both of us so much. I never knew I could put anyone above my own feelings.

If this sounds dramatic, allow me to recount a story I read last week of an Iraqi mother in Safan who approached a reporter and, with tears streaming down her face, surrendered to him a passport, birth certificate and the hand of her child to take with him to America. She cried, "Thank you, mister."

To all who have the courage to raise children, happy Mother's Day.

Erma Bombeck's column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

'Artistic assets' need protection too

Associated Press

After funneling decorating dollars into paintings, drawings and prints, be sure to invest some time and thought in protecting the artistic assets, suggests Better Homes and Gardens magazine.

■ Monitor humidity with a hygrometer (available at hardware stores). The recommended humidity level for works on canvas or paper is 40 to 60 percent. Lower humidity with a dehumidifier, raise it with a humidifier.

■ Place artwork away from doors and windows, and on interior walls. Light can be another of art's enemies, unless its energy is directed properly.

■ Use incandescent rather than fluorescent lights. Fluorescent light gives off damaging ultraviolet rays while incandescent light emits heat, which is easily diffused in a room.

■ On a frame with an attached light, use a bulb of 25 watts or less. Otherwise, the light's heat may fade colors and burn the paper or canvas.

■ Protect works of art from ultraviolet light with conservation-series glass or ultraviolet-filtering acrylic plastic. But beware of using acrylic plastic with pastel drawings because it has a static charge that draws dirt and dust and pastels. Therefore it tends to pull pastels away from the paper.

Moms remembered

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Mother's Day, May 12, is the fourth largest card-sending occasion in the United States.

More than 150 million cards will be sent this year, according to Hallmark Cards, Inc., and many reflect changes in the American family.

More than half of all American mothers work, and about 35 percent of all children now live in so-called "blended" families — thus many of today's Mother's Day cards are sent to child-care providers and others serving a mothering role, as well as grandmothers, stepmothers, teachers, aunts and friends.

If you're considering a trip to the mountains, cut it out!

Exhibit honors lines of jazz

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

'Celebrate the Lines of Jazz!" this month as the Art Institute for the Permian Basin hosts a special exhibit in honor of the 25th anniversary of the Odessa Jazz Party.

"We really have had some of the greatest jazz artists in the world out here," said E.M. Schur, the last of the founders of the Odessa Jazz Party. "Really what we have is a week-long party. We invite the musicians and treat them like our guests. We make them at home for a week and do the same thing with out of town guests."

In the 1960s, Odessa jazz lover Dr. O.A. Fulcher convinced Tom "Pinkie" Roden, W.H. "Uncle Will" Faris, an Odessa CPA, and Schurr, a local banker, to go to Aspen, Colo., to Dick Gibson's jazz party. Several years later, the four decided to hold a jazz party in Odessa. The first year they brought in a combo.

"That was well received so we decided to have a party," said Schur, who played trumpet in high school and listened to what he calls "our original music" in New Orleans long before the first jazz party in Odessa. "We had the first at the Golden Rooster Club in the Inn of the Golden West. It was so well received we moved down to the ballroom."

"Dr. Fulcher passed away a good long while back. All three are gone. It's kind of fallen my lot to keep the party going for at least the time being. I have real good people on the board with me. We have continued to grow and prosper. We probably had about the second party in the country and now there are 150 or more."

Some 15 years ago, the idea spread east to Midland through Max Christenson, who drew his inspiration from the Odessa Jazz Party. Both events feature advance sales of tickets and a ticket price which includes all sets performed.

The 15th annual Midland Jazz Classic, presented by the Midland Jazz Association, is set for Oct. 3-6 at the Holiday Inn Country Villa. Musicians who have been invited to Midland's classic include Clark Terry and Warren Vache, trumpet; Bill Watrous and George Masso, trombone; Scott Hamilton, Flip Phillips and Abe Most, reeds; Howard Alden, guitar; Paul Smith, Ralph Sutton and Buddy Weed, piano; Jack Lesberg, Milt Hilton and George Mraz, bass; and Jake Hanna, Jimmie Smith and Jeff Hamilton, drums.

"It's a beautiful lineup," said Midlander Bobby Cruces, a member of the Midland Jazz Association and a former professional dance band musician. "We have a new face this year and some that haven't been here for at least two years. We feel it's a well balanced lineup."

Some of the same names will be here this month for the Odessa Jazz Party, set for May 21-26 at the Odessa Hilton. The Odessa event features Bob Haggard, Milt Hinton and Jack Lesberg, bass; Peanuts Hucko and Ken Pelmowski, clarinet; Jake Hanna, Jackie Williams and Butch Miles, drums; Bucky Pizzarelli, guitar; Paul Smith, Ralph Sutton and Johnny Varro, piano; Jim Galloway and Flip Phillips, saxophone; Dan Barrett and George Masso, trombone; and Ed Polcer and Randy Sandke, trumpet.

At the same time, the Art Institute's "Celebrate the Lines of Jazz!" exhibit features art by Tony Bennett, acoustic guitarist Marty Grosz and drummer George Wettling, now deceased, as well as some of the players coming to Odessa, such as Haggard, Pizzarelli, Varro and Sandke.

The Art Institute, which is open Tuesday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday 2 to 5 p.m., is located only a couple of blocks from the Odessa Hilton. For more information call 368-7222.

"Bob Haggard is well known for his performances at the Odessa Jazz Party," said Marilyn Basinger, director of the Art Institute. "Art is another major interest in his life. He's shown in galleries around the country and his oils and watercolors are in many collections. He's quite an artist. And there are quite a few people in this area who have bought pieces of his work."

"The works in the exhibition are very diverse in subject and in tone. They range from the most traditional photography and still life and landscape painting to humorous and sometimes almost commercial or cartoon type works of art."

The exhibition is sponsored by Schur and the Connoisseurs. Glenda Young is the underwriter for the poster published by the Institute for the Odessa Jazz Party.

"Celebrate the Lines of Jazz!" would not have been possible, Ms. Basinger said, without the help of Margaret Gillham, a founder and board member of the West Texas Jazz Society, which is dedicated to promoting jazz among young people. The WTJS presents three jam sessions annually and hosts clinics for youth featuring well-known professional jazz musicians who also perform for a paying adult audience while they are here.

Originality, creativity and workmanship were determining factors in juror Norma Webb's choices in this year's Student Art Festival, Secondary Division.

"I thought that the work exhibited overall was typical of the high quality of art in Midland," said Ms. Webb, an artist who received a double major in art and home economics from Texas Tech University. "I would like to encourage each student who participated to continue."

The judging process is threefold. It begins with the teachers in the Midland Independent School District.

"Each teacher picks what art she thinks is best from each of her students," said Ms. Webb, who has been the final juror twice and served on the judging panel once. "After the teacher has picked what she thinks is best, then a panel of jurors goes into each school, in each classroom, and makes selections as to what they think should be exhibited at the museum. That's a difficult process there. Once it gets to the museum the final judge comes in and makes further selections."

Ms. Webb was unable to choose a first through third in each of the nine categories — drawing, painting, jewelry, collage, fiber and textiles, sculpture, commercial art, ceramics and print making.

"Not each category was amply represented so I didn't do that in each category. For example, jewelry was not represented well. Textiles was not represented well. Those were the two main ones. There were just not as many. In jewelry, there were only two entries."

Drawing was difficult to judge for the reverse reason.

"There were a lot of excellent drawings, that was the best category, and it was difficult to determine. Obviously, every piece in the show had some merit or it wouldn't have been there anyway."

The Student Art Festival, which began 30 years ago, encompasses work created by students in kindergarten through the 12th grade and is divided into two divisions — Elementary and Secondary. The Elementary Division, which included more than 800 small drawings, was on display in March.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

Midland artist takes training

Midlander William Schumpert has completed a week of training with cowboy artist David Halback of Graeagle, Calif.

Halback has been a member of the Cowboy Artists of America organization since 1985 and during that time has won three gold medals for watercolor at the annual Cowboy Artists of America exhibit. Schumpert, a native Midlander whose full-blooded Choctaw grandfather moved to West Texas in 1948, said Halback called him "an up and coming new talent on the American West scene."

Schumpert's Indian and western paintings have appeared in exhibitions of numerous museums and galleries from Texas to Montana including a workshop exhibition at the Cowboy Artists of America Museum in Kerrville.

The opportunity to study with Halback was shared by 18 artists from Texas, Oklahoma, Missouri and Colorado. More than 600 professional artists have attended the museum workshops since they began in 1983.

One of the educational goals of the Kerrville museum since it opened in 1983 has been to offer a series of professional level workshops each year for aspiring artists. Instructors for the courses are members of the Cowboy Artists of America, a group founded in 1965 to perpetuate the memory and culture of the West and encourage authentic representation of the life of the American West.

In addition to these advanced art workshops, the museum has added a variety of short courses on the history, music and folklore of the West plus courses for beginning and intermediate artists.

The Cowboy Artists of America Museum is a non-profit organization.

Students join auditions

Around 366 Midland students are participating in the National Fraternity of Student Musicians auditions, sponsored by the National Guild of Piano Teachers, Teacher Division of The American College of Musicians.

Auditions, which began May 8, continue for 16 days at St. Luke's United Methodist Church. Adjudicator is David Hornsby of San Antonio. Hornsby holds a diploma from the Fort Worth Conservatory, a bachelor of music from Texas Christian University, a master's degree in art from Teachers College, Columbia University, New York, and did post graduate study at the University of Colorado, Boulder.

He has studied with Jeannette Tillett in Fort Worth, Howard Waltz at the University of Colorado, and, at Columbia University, he studied with Raymond Burrows and was a performing member of a master class under Ernst Von Dohanyi. In New York, he studied with Edwin Hughes.

Hornsby was named to the Piano Guild Hall of Fame and is a member of the San Antonio Music Teachers Association, Texas Music Teachers Association and Music Teachers National Association. His biographical data has appeared in "International Who's Who in Music."

Hornsby has taught in Fort Worth, Las Marías, Puerto Rico, Boulder, Colo., Cali, Colombia, and currently maintains a private studio in San Antonio.

Students participating in the auditions select pieces chosen from the masters of pianoforte literature written during baroque, classic, romantic and modern periods. Students receive a certificate, a gold, silver or bronze embossed pin, and a year's membership in the National Fraternity of Student Musicians.

More than 116,447 piano pupils in 840 music centers across the country will participate in the annual national piano-playing event. Begun in 1929 at Hardin-Simmons University, Abilene, the music event is still headquartered in Texas.

Mrs. George is the local guild chairman.

Bryan Williams of New York has won the 1991 McLaren Memorial Comedy Playwriting Competition.

Williams' play, "Flyaway Home," will be presented in a readers theater production July 12 and 13 at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave. Ross A. Wilmet will direct.

Mary Lou Cassidy, chair of the competition, said 113 scripts were received from 26 states. Runners-up were Dana Ritter, Odessa; Lou Phillips, New York; Toby Burwell, Fort Lee, N.J.; Chris Shaw Swanson, Rochester Hills, Mich.; David Davis, Doraville, Ga.; Jo Coudert, Calif., N.J.; Gary Williams, New York; Bill Barnett, Hartford, Conn.; and Tom Zuk, Hoboken, N.J.

This marks the second year Midland Community Theatre has sponsored the nationwide contest for original, unproduced comedy scripts. The prize is a readers theater production of the play at MCT, a cash stipend of $400 and accommodations in Midland for the rehearsal period and during the readers theater.

McLaren, who died in May of 1989, was a writer, actor and radio personality who often appeared on the MCT stage. Memorials for McLaren are utilized in the competition and may be directed to the McLaren Memorial Fund, MCT, 2000 W. Wadley Ave., Midland, 79705.

Auditions scheduled

Auditions for Midland Community Theatre's production of "Inherit the Wind" are set for 7:30 p.m. Monday and Tuesday at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

According to Margaret Williams, coordinator of volunteers, this show will be a good one for people who'd like "to get their feet wet" since the cast is large and includes many small parts. Needed are 16 to 20 females and 20 to 30 males, all ages.

Don Bachmann will direct. For more information or copies of the script call MCT's business office, 682-2544.

In addition, auditions for Summer Mommers are set for 7 p.m. today and Monday at the Yucca Theatre, 208 N. Colorado Ave. Summer Mommers olio auditions are set for 5 p.m. today and 7 p.m. Tuesday.

'Nunsense' onstage

"Nunsense," the wild and wacky story of five nuns putting on a variety show as a fund-raiser is on stage through June 8 at the Yucca Theatre, 208 N. Colorado Ave.

The Midland Community Theatre production is not a membership show, but MCT members receive a discount. For reservations call 682-4111.

Quintet plans 2 concerts

The Lone Star Brass Quintet will give two concerts this month.

The Quintet, which is in residence with the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Choral, will perform in Odessa at 8 p.m. May 16 at Crescent Park Baptist Church, 3002 E. University, and at 2 p.m. May 19 at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave. The program includes "Spring" from "The Four Seasons" by Vivaldi and Fanfare in C by Purcell.

Orbison festival set

WINK — Eight acts and seven hours of continuous country and rock and roll music are the program for the third annual Roy Orbison Memorial Music Festival set for June 1 here.

Headliners for the event this year include recording artists Sandi Powell, Ricky Lynn Gregg and Stephen Pride, brother of Charley Pride. Also sharing the stage will be well-known Roy Orbison impersonator, Kenny Morrill.

Morrill, who has made two previous appearances at the music festival, will be joined this year by Barbara Farrell, a Patsy Cline impersonator.

Bands include Wild Country, Bad Brakes and Flash Back.

Tim Thompson, winner of the Putnam Texas Musical Festival for best singer and songwriter, also will make an appearance.

More than 3,000 are expected to attend this year's musical extravaganza which draws Orbison fans from throughout the United States and overseas. Expected to attend this year are Wesley Orbison, Orbison's eldest son who attended the previous two festivals, and members of Orbison's first band, The Wink Westerners, along with members of his first recording band, The Teen Kings. Composer Bill Dees, who co-authored with Orbison many of his later hits including "Pretty Woman," also is expected to come.

Admission is $8 for adults and $5 for children. Those attending the concert are advised to bring stadium chairs and cushions or blankets.

Playhouse takes regional ODESSA — The Permian Playhouse walked away with the best show in the five state Regional Southwest Theatre Festival.

The Playhouse production of "Side by Side by Side" will perform in Overland Park, Kan., in June as one of the 10 productions chosen nationwide. The performances will be a part of the American Association of Community Theatres National Conference June 18-23.

In addition to the production winning the best in the Southwest, Dale Jenkins was one of only four performers named to an All-Star Cast. The adjudicators also chose to honor two directors in the festival — Playhouse director, Coy Sharp, and the director from the Oklahoma production — as Outstanding Festival Director.

The five states participating in the Southwest Theatre Association Regional Festival were Oklahoma, Louisiana, Arkansas and New Mexico.

TV screening set

Bod Dorian, popular host of the American Movie Classics television network, will be in Midland to host a special screening of the classic patriotic motion picture "Star Spangled Rhythm" at 7 p.m. Thursday.

The free screening is sponsored by AMC and Dimension Cable Services in conjunction with Community and Senior Services as part of Older Americans Month.

The event is part of "Stars and Stripes: AMC Salutes the USO," a 50-city tour celebrating the 50th anniversary of the United Service Organizations (USO). Prior to the screening, The Confederate Air Force veterans of World War II, the Korean War, the Vietnam Conflict and Operation Desert Storm will be honored in recognition of their valiant war efforts.

Dorian, who has hosted the classic Hollywood movie network since its inception in 1984, will be introduced by Max Howard of KMND-AM Radio.

Tile exhibit planned

SAN ANGELO — The San Angelo Museum of Fine Arts is celebrating its sixth anniversary with the sixth annual "Monarch Tile National Ceramic Competition" exhibition.

Organized by the museum in cooperation with Angelo State University, the exhibit features 115 works by 108 leading ceramic artists from across the United States and Canada. Juror for the competition was Martha Drexler Lynn, assistant curator, Decorative Arts Department, Twentieth Century Collections, the Los Angeles Museum of Art.

Sponsored by Monarch Tile, this annual competition has been called "the premiere American ceramic annual" by William C. Hunt, editor of "Ceramics Monthly."

A special addition to this year's show are works by invited artist Robin Hopper of Victoria, British Columbia, Canada. A world renowned potter, he is director of the Metchosin International Summer School of the Arts, Victoria.

Hours are Tuesday through Saturday 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Sunday 1 to 4 p.m. Admission is 75 cents for adults and 25 cents for children, senior citizens and military. For more information call 1-688-4084.

'Ugly Duckling' set

"The Ugly Duckling" is being presented at 1 p.m. May 19 at Midland Center, 105 N. Main St.

"Rabbit, Deer, Beaver, Ostrich, Duckling and the other charming forest animals come to life as a young boy, who has run away from home, is lost in the enchanted forest," said a DPSOA Ladies Auxiliary spokesperson. "He is befriended by the mysterious, wise, old Woodsman who, through the story of 'The Ugly Duckling,' shows him that being beautiful inside is what makes you beautiful outside."

Jazz party planned

ODESSA — The Odessa Jazz Association is holding its 25th annual Odessa Jazz Party May 21-26 at the Odessa Hilton.

Musicians who will be performing include Bob Haggart, Milt Hinton and Jack Lesberg, bass; Peanut Hucko and Ken Peplowski, clarinet; Jake Hanna, Oliver Jackson and Butch Miles, drums; Bucky Pizzarelli, guitar; Paul Smith, Ralph Sutton and Johnny Varro, piano; Jim Galloway and Flip Phillips, saxophone; Dan Barrett and George Masso, trombone; and Ed Polcer and Randy Sandke, trumpet.

The event runs from 8 p.m. to midnight May 21-25 and 2 to 6 p.m. May 26. Admission is $150 for the entire event. Buttons may be picked up at the Hilton, May 21 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and at 7 p.m.

For more information call 1-332-7871 or write the Odessa Jazz Association, P.O. Box 7948, Odessa, 79760.

Roy Orbison prediction turns true for Chris Isaak

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Shortly before his death, Roy Orbison traded songwriting tips with Chris Isaak. The sheepish newcomer to music told his hero that he didn't know how to write hits.

"And he said, 'Yeah, you write hits. You just don't know it yet,'" Isaak recalled recently.

"He said, 'that's how I felt until I had a hit. Then you understand it,'" he said. "I kind of didn't understand what he was saying in a way, but I thought, well, if he thinks so, he must be right because he's Roy Orbison."

It turned out Orbison was right, just a little early. Isaak's hit single, "Wicked Game," a moody ballad often compared to Orbison's work, represents one of the most unusual music success stories in years. "Wicked Game," and the "Heart Shaped World" album were two years old and nearly forgotten by Reprise Records when an instrumental track of the song appeared in David Lynch's movie, "Wild at Heart."

A radio station music director in Atlanta heard the music, searched out Isaak's version and ordered his disc jockeys to play the song. Listeners liked it, and other stations quickly followed suit. Within months, both the single and album were in the Top 10, a first for the 34-year-old Isaak.

Isn't success easy? "If I told my mom, 'there's a guy playing "Wicked Game" in Atlanta,' she'd say, 'Well, he should. It's a good song,'" Isaak said. "But I'd say, 'Mom, they fire people for playing my music.'"

Isaak can laugh now, but there's a grain of truth in his joke. It's relatively rare these days for a radio station to go out on a limb and play something from a little-known artist that nobody else is playing.

JAZZ: Midland, Odessa among best lineups

(From 1F)

Texas area," Ms. Bassinger said. "She and I were talking last year about the fact that there were some exhibitions available that had to do with jazz musicians and that maybe we could get some photographs of jazz musicians to have an exhibition during the Odessa Jazz Party. She said, 'I could do you one better. I can get artwork by jazz musicians.' We were very excited about it."

"She set about getting a list of jazz musicians who were also artists, and she contacted many of them personally and talked with them about sending some things. So we have artwork by seven jazz musicians, and one or two works that jazz musicians are the subject of the artwork, such as the Red Norvo portrait."

It was Ms. Gillham who contacted Tony Bennett.

"We had mailed the information to Tony Bennett's office — I had gotten the address — and never heard back from him," Ms. Gill-ham said. "In January I was in New York and was meeting a friend there who was another musician. He was talking to him (Bennett) so I got to meet him and told him about the jazz exhibition and that I had mailed the information. And, he said, 'Well, I'm sure my secretary tossed it out or did something with it. But I would love to send you something.' He had just finished a portrait of Ella Fitzgerald, which belonged to Ella Fitzgerald, but he sent us a signed lithograph of it. It is for sale."

Ms. Gillham finds the lineup of musicians coming to West Texas jazz parties "great. There's a lot of different jazz parties, but Midland and Odessa and three or four others have the best lineups."

WINNERS: Works will be displayed through May 19

(From 1F)

The Secondary Division, which includes around 450 pieces in nine categories, will be on display in the Freda Turner Durham Children's Museum, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., through May 19.

"I'm interested in art," said Shawn Davis, chairman of the event and vice president of Las Manos. "I wanted to get into this project so I could see what types of changes can be made to improve this annual event."

Las Manos is the auxiliary organization for the Museum of the Southwest. Its primary purpose is to raise money for the museum through such fundraisers as Septemberfest. The Student Art Festival is not a fund raising event but rather a service provided to the community by Las Manos, the Museum of the Southwest, the Midland Independent School District and the PTA.

In selecting the prize winners, Ms. Webb looked for three elements.

"It had to be original, had to be creative and the workmanship had to be well-executed."

Ms. Webb, who taught art in the Dallas Independent School District and in the Hurst Bedford Euless school district, has been a working artist most of her adult life. She has her masters in education from the University of Texas at the Permian Basin and has, she said, taken every art course Midland College and UTPB had to offer.

"I don't recall ever not being interested in art," said Ms. Webb, who is a past president of the Midland Arts Association and the Arts Assembly of Midland as well as former director of the Assembly.

Ms. Webb has spent time in the past years participating in another avid interest of hers.

"I've had a my pilot's license for four years," said Ms. Webb, who is currently public relations coordinator for the Confederate Air Force.

"I am so busy I don't have a lot of time for painting, but I still do paint," Ms. Webb said. "And, interestingly enough, this job allows me to use some of my creative ability. For instance, we're looking into exploring the possibility of inviting some artists to do their renderings of World War II airplanes and exhibiting them here."

Movie rights sell for farewell story

ITHACA, N.Y. (AP) — Few people were acquainted with Roberta "Bibi" Lee before her murder, and only a handful — maybe just one — knew her well.

That was a loss too great for Lee's best friend, Melanie Thernstrom — besides losing her friend.

After Lee's murder in 1984 at age 21, Thernstrom began a diary of sorts detailing their time together and the gaping hole Lee's

What began as a therapeutic exercise turned into a "personal memoir, a gesture toward my friend," said Thernstrom, who wrote the first draft as a literary thesis while an undergraduate at Harvard University. Her book, "The Dead Girl," was published recently by Pocket Books. Thernstrom is working on a screenplay for Warner Bros., which purchased the movie rights.

Fine book designers preserve craft

EL PASO (AP) — In an age of throwaway paperbacks, desktop publishing and laser printers, a finely designed book is an anachronism, a masterpiece in a mass media society with fleeting appreciation for a book's composition.

But fine book design and printing are not dead. One expert says the craft, some call it a fine art, is experiencing something of a renaissance.

There still are people, usually book collectors and printers, whose hands tremble when they take hold of printing perfection. They revel in the sensation of caressing a fine book's leather binding, opening its crisp pages to the fragrance of handmade paper, their eyes being led in a waltz across the books pages by its flowing, carefully selected type.

"I consider (a finely-designed book) kind of like producing a beautiful house. It provides the environment for which a piece of literature can be understood and appreciated," said Sandra Kirshenbaum, editor and publisher of Fine Print: The Review for the Arts of the Book magazine in San Francisco.

A book designer chooses the typeface, the size and shapes of the pages and margins, size of illustrations or photos, binding, and colors to enhance the narrative it surrounds. But as computer technology has made such tasks easier and faster, fine books are being produced by those interested in making something by hand.

"In the broader definition of fine printing, it really is producing books of natural limitation because of the fact the material used is superior material and the methods used are very labor intensive," said Ms. Kirshenbaum, who is president of Pro Arte Libri, a non-profit group advocating the values of traditional bookmaking.

"There are a lot of creative decisions being made," said David Hollman, owner of Wind River Press in Austin. "It can take a while to manipulate everything together to what the designer feels comfortable with."

While the book design craft may date to the 15th century when Johannes Gutenberg was the first European to use movable type, many book designers have a greater affinity to the late master printer Carl Hertzog.

Hertzog, who died in 1984, was founder of the University of Texas at El Paso's Texas Western Press and was renowned for his artistry and perfection in printing and book design.

"To Hertzog, printing was really a performing art," said Al Lowman of San Marcos, who is working on a third biography of Hertzog and a bibliography of his work.

One of Hertzog's best known book designs, "Peleliu Landing," was a collaboration with former Time-Life correspondent Tom Lea.

Lea was on the Pacific island of Peleliu during the closing days of World War II and sketched the bloody battle scenes of a U.S. Marine invasion of the island. Lea and Hertzog combined the sketches, Lea's narratives and Hertzog's printing artistry to create "Peleliu Landing."

"There are only two colors used in that book, black and blood red," said Lowman. "They bound the copies in Marine dungaree cloth and that is one of the landmark books in American printing."

When he designed a two-volume book for the King Ranch in South Texas, Hertzog used wide margins to mimic the ranch's expanse, and Centaur type to capture the symbolism of man and horse at the ranch. He had paper specially made bearing the King Ranch brand as water marks. And the book was bound with replicas of the King Ranch saddle blanket.

"He liked to create and build a mood for the reader to be inspired to open the book and begin reading," Lowman said.

"He's the grandpa of Texas fine book printing," said Hollman.

Earlier this year, to recognize Hertzog's work and to encourage work by new and fine book designers, the Associates of UTEP Library sponsored the Carl Hertzog Award for Excellence in Book Design.

The $1,000 prize and a bronze medallion designed by Lea went to Gerald Lange, master printer at the University of Southern California Fine Arts Press. His winning book "Letter of Columbus on His Discovery of the New World."

"In light of the change of technology, in going to desktop publishing, I think it's a very important thing what the associates of the library at El Paso are trying to preserve and promote fine design in book making," Lange said. "There is so much naive among desktop publishing folks. It's a democratic technique in that it's available to anyone."

"There's a danger of a lot of really bad material being produced that people are not aware of as not being very well done."

With a computer, a book maker has available a wealth of typeface and fonts, but a computer does not print nearly to the quality of a letterpress.

"Letterpress will always have that supreme beauty on a printed page. When it prints onto the page, its almost as if a third dimension is created with the light catching the indentation on the paper," Lange said. With a computer, a printer is limited to only two dimensions.

According to Lowman, Hertzog was not adverse to technology. Hertzog, who had done his best work with letterpress and Linotype, learned the intricacies of digital typesetting while in his mid-70s.

"He knew his field would be forever altered by technology, but no matter what the changes, he believed that the printer must respect taste and tradition," Lowman said.

Oscar boosts morale of filmmakers

GENEVA (AP) — The first Academy Award for a Swiss movie director came as a morale booster for the country's film industry.

But Xavier Koller's "Journey of Hope" still has a long way to go before becoming a real box-office hit. His Oscar was hailed in the Swiss press as a historic event. The movie has been sold in 20 countries, more widely than any other Swiss film, and distributors are confident the glory also will boost domestic interest.

However, said the weekly newspaper Sonntags-Zeitung, "Betting on Swiss films for lucrative business is risky."

One obstacle to international fame for Swiss films is that they often focus on domestic issues. Another, in German-language movies, is the frequent use of the local dialect, which requires soundtrack dubbing or subtitles even in neighboring Germany.

Since its first showing last fall, "Journey of Hope" has drawn less than 100,000 viewers among Switzerland's 6.7 million people.

U.S. movies top the list. In addition, German and French films are often preferred by Switzerland's two major language groups over home-grown productions.

In 1989, the last year for which figures are available from the Association of Swiss Movie Theater Owners, Dustin Hoffman's "Rain Man" topped the Swiss charts with 1,008,000 viewers. The most widely seen Swiss film, "Gekauftes Glueck" ("Happiness for Sale"), ranked 47th with 70,000 viewers.

Swiss producer Arthur Cohn won another Oscar this year for the documentary "American Dreams." It was his fifth Academy Award in 28 years, including one for "Dangerous Moves" as best foreign film in 1985. But that movie, about two Russians facing each other in a chess tournament in Switzerland, never figured high in the Swiss movie charts.

Although quite a few have won international attention, Swiss films are largely confined to the art theater circuit abroad. In the 1970s, Alain Tanner, Claude Goretta and Daniel Schmid were among Swiss directors acclaimed for uncompromising films on social themes, but their commercial appeal was limited.

"Economically, Swiss films have been lightweight," Yvonne Lenzlinger, director of the Swiss Film Center, said in an interview. "However, they did quite well at various festivals and were highly valued by critics and by art theater audiences."

"There has never been a real box-office hit. Maybe that will change now."

Rolf Lyssy, whose satirical 1977 "Schweizermacher" ("Swissmakers") was the only domestic film to draw a million-plus Swiss audience, hopes Koller's Oscar will help give other domestic films a "sales push."

But, like Koller, he says the industry remains handicapped by a lack of studios and "almost insurmountable" financing difficulties.

Koller's "Journey of Hope" had a $2.5 million budget, including 400,000 Swiss francs ($281,000) as a government grant.

It is based on the true story of a Kurdish couple who loses their way while trying to cross illegally into wealthy Switzerland over a snow-swept Alpine pass. The son dies of exhaustion and exposure in his father's arms.

The refugee theme is no novelty in critically acclaimed Swiss films. "The Last Chance" by the late Leopold Lindtberg, won a prize at the 1946 Cannes Film Festival, and Markus Imhoof's "The Boat Is Full" was nominated for an Academy Award in 1980.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, MAY 12, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your accomplishments will release you from the past. Take care of any health problem before it becomes serious. A legal settlement will be made in your favor in September. Things begin to come together for you financially as 1991 draws to a close. January 1992 finds you moving in a new career direction. A platonic relationship will intensify early next spring.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: composer Burt Bacharach, baseball's Yogi Berra, comedian George Carlin, actor Emilio Estevez.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Attending church services in a different locale proves inspiring. New faces will add excitement to your day. Your words have greater impact than you know. Be supportive of loved one's efforts.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): An excellent day for communications and travel. Treat other people's secrets as your own. An older person will make wonderful things happen. Together you are an unbeatable combination!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your intuition is your guiding light today. Tune in to your loved ones' feelings. A teen-ager needs loving encouragement. Good employment opportunities are found in the Sunday newspapers.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Self-indulgence could strike today. Although you want to live it up, it may be wiser to pull in the financial reins. A loved one's actions will delight you. Guard your family's privacy.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You have the freedom to pursue some very special interests today. An insight you gain from a friend could turn out to be pure gold. Your hopes and dreams move closer to fulfillment.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your dreams can come true if you are willing to make certain sacrifices. Some people are simply "in love with love." Understand this and proceed with caution. Remember your budget if going out tonight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Today's hectic pace may leave you wishing for greater privacy. Be skeptical when offered unsolicited advice. Someone who appears sincere may have an ulterior motive. Take a brisk walk.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Consider the importance of different kinds of love, and confide in those closest to your heart. They will want to help. Visiting an art gallery or cultural exhibit gives you a brilliant idea.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Do not try to force your loved ones to move at a certain pace today. Let everyone proceed at their own speed! Romance is under highly favorable influences. You could be falling in love.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A sermon or long-sought meeting gives you valuable insights. Do your entertaining at home to help keep expenses down. Family members are supportive. Use any spare time to work on a creative project.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Recognize extravagance for what it is. Do not allow friends to intrude on family affairs. The advice offered by your mate or partner could be a blessing in disguise. Follow it.

News story led to Kurdish drama

NEW YORK (AP) — "Journey of Hope" won the Academy Award this year for best foreign film, and its source was a short article that appeared in 1988 and might have been international news had it come out now.

"Kurdish Family Drama in the Swiss Mountains," the headline read. "Eight year-old Seyit Ali died last night in his father's arms as they tried to illegally cross the border into Switzerland."

The story went on to tell how smugglers in Milan, Italy, had brought 12 Turkish people to the Italian side of the Alps by car, and then forced them to walk on a "dangerous and illegal" path into Switzerland.

"I was in Paris and working on another story at the time when I read the story," recalled Swiss director Xavier Koller, whose other films include "The Frozen Heart" and "Black Tanner."

"But I started to imagine the family and where they came from, what they were going through," he said.

"I couldn't concentrate on my other work. One morning I woke up very early, and again had this image of the family. I felt so guilty and I felt so helpless that I just imagined this story. I wrote it so I could relax. I sat down maybe for six hours, writing from the beginning to the end. I was relieved. For the moment, I had done my duty."

When Koller returned to Zurich, he discovered his version of the story differed little from what actually happened. The director was impatient to get the film made and set himself a deadline: begin production within a year.

But first he had a difficult trip of his own to make. Koller decided to go to the village of Anatolia in Turkey, and talk to Seyit's parents. Not surprisingly, they were in no mood for visits.

"They said they couldn't talk about it because it hurts. They said their wounds were still bleeding and they didn't want to scratch them once more and open them once more," Koller said.

"I asked, 'Would you at least give us your permission to use your story?' And they said they would give permission. The mother said, 'If you do this film, my son gets his voice back and you can hear him cry out for sorrow.' This was echoing through the film."

Koller continued to meet with the family and they eventually became close. Seyit's mother advised the actors and two of his brothers appear in the film, playing the brothers of the boy who dies.

In "Journey of Hope," Haydar Sener is a 35-year-old Kurd who lives in a small Turkish village with his wife and seven children. The film opens with the image of water being poured on hands and cuts to a ceremonial dance, showing a community still held together by ancient rituals.

But when a relative sends them a postcard from Switzerland, telling them of "paradise behind the mountains," Haydar decides to move. After much resistance from his family, he leaves for Switzerland along with his wife, Meryem, and their child, Memhet, an irrepressible 7-year-old.

Koller sets a mood of relentless horror, the family staggering under ominous skies of gray and white that seem ready to swallow them up. At one point, Haydar looks up and desperately asks, "Why this punishment, God?"

Koller used Turkish casting agents to find his actors.

In Turkey, Koller faced the more expected problem of cultural differences.

Conoco's Midland Division has been awarded the Sierra Club's 21st Century Award, which is presented to the company who has made outstanding achievement in protecting the environment.

Conoco, according to Division Vice President Mark Mosely, was cited for its approach to field operations, and its lease keeping efforts. "We put a lot of effort into running operations and with good maintenance so we don't have spills or discharges," he said.

He said the company also tries to build new drilling locations with a minimal impact to the environment.

"I am glad that the oil industry is being recognized for the fact that it can make a contribution to the oil industry," he noted.

American Petrofina Inc., that obscure corporation somehow associated with Fina Oil & Chemical Co., has now officially become Fina Inc., it was announced this week.

Ron W. Haddock, Fina's president and Chief Executive Officer, said the purpose in changing the corporate name to Fina is to eliminate the confusion that existed between the relationship of American Petrofina and its better-known operating subsidiary, Fina Oil and Chemical Co., and Fina the brand name.

Haddock said the cost of changing the corporate name would be minimal because of the present use of Fina as a brand name.

Busted for two joints?

Non-permit haulers may reap big fines

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

Oil operators in the Abilene area are disturbed by a TRC crack down in oil-field trucking regulations that threatens to increase the cost of producing oil and gas.

For years work-over crews and roustabout gangs headed to the field would routinely stop at a supply yard to pick up a pump, several joints of flow line or tubing or whatever was needed to put a well back to pumping.

However, that act, according to the letter of the law of Texas' complicated and highly regulated trucking laws was illegal. Only trucking companies with Texas Railroad Commission permits are able to haul oilfield equipment legally.

As a consequence when one area hauler blew the whistle and made an issue of the matter, highway officials began issuing warnings to crews with equipment on their trucks and TRC began cracking down on oilfield service firms.

"Our association is concerned about the problem of not being able to move oilfield equipment efficiently and economically and we are working in Austin to get some relief from the trucking law which is enforced by the Texas Railroad Commission," said Morris Burns, executive vice president of West Central Texas Oil & Gas Association in Abilene.

The issue came to a head a year ago in West Central Texas when Armadillo Roustabout Service of Abilene was busted on 12 counts for violation of the trucking law, after a Texas Railroad Commission official came to Armadillo's office to check invoices.

The company received a light fine, only $400, from the court, but a strong warning. Future violations the company was told could result in a $10,000 fine for each count.

as: Exxon, Texaco, Chevron, Mobil, Conoco, Shell and Parker & Parsley.

Parker & Parsley? Indeed. It may be the oil company that sounds more like an item off a trendy menu than one of the seven sisters, but in Midland the name Parker & Parsley translates to "major" spender. Because, in terms of drilling and spending, the company consistently manages to out-major many of the major oil companies.

Last year, the company drilled 190 wells and has plans to drill over 200 this year, more than nearly all the majors. With a total of 600 employees — 350 in Midland — and a payroll of over $15 million, it is one of the biggest employers in Midland. Driving the activity is the fact that the company is the nation's largest seller of drilling funds and is able to raise millions in drilling dollars each year.

When the company announced last month that it was a major partner in the purchase of the NCNB Bank Tower, the largest building in town and the former home of First National Bank of Midland, it was a fitting trophy for a company that has grown in one decade from a small lo-

GeoTrace, formerly Daniel Geophysical, says it plans to open a 3D Processing Center in Midland once activity increases.

"This should open up 3D technology to many more independents," said George Underwood, president of GeoStrat. "Before independents have been reluctant to invest in the expensive work stations, which sell for around $225,000 and training for only one or two projects, and major oil companies have been reluctant to make their work stations available on a timeshare basis because of the propri-

JOHN PAUL PITTS

This is the Permian Basin Oil Report

If you have missed all our advertising and ballyhoo, and notice something distinctly different about this issue of the Midland Reporter-Telegram Business/Oil section, let me explain:

What you are looking at here is The Permian Basin Oil Report, an entirely new editorial product — a weekly trade newspaper, if you please — designed specifically for the oil industry of the entire Permian Basin.

Not only will the Oil Report appear in the Sunday edition of the Reporter-Telegram as a regular section, but extra copies will be printed and mailed to every producer, operator and oilfield service and supply firm throughout the Permian Basin.

The Permian Basin Oil Report is an idea whose time has come. It makes too much sense not to be a good idea.

First: The Permian Basin Oil Report will serve to tie together a far-flung oil and gas empire that stretches from Roswell, New Mexico on the east to San Angelo on the west and from Lubbock on the north to the Mexican border.

Within this 100,000 square-mile area of operations are approximately 100,000 oil and gas wells that account for roughly 60 percent of the oil production in Texas and 20 percent of the nation's production.

Described by the Bureau of Economic Geology as the Saudi Arabia of domestic reserves, the Permian Basin, including New Mexico, was producing at last tally approximately 38 million barrels of oil monthly, while the state of Texas produced around 54 million barrels.

To keep the oil and gas flowing, over 40,000 residents of this part of West Texas and Southeast New Mexico are employed in the oil industry.

We think it is about time this vital industry and this oil and gas empire had an oil and gas newspaper of its own. And that is exactly what the Oil Report will do by becoming the informational link for the entire Permian Basin oil industry.

We will provide useful information in the form of news and features about issues, technology, geology, people, places and activities within the Permian Basin oil and gas industry, the state and the nation.

The Reporter-Telegram Business/Oil section will no longer publish drilling activity on a daily basis, but will publish the drilling activity for the entire week in the Oil Report.

This activity will continue to include: wildcat locations, development wells and completions, as well as highlights of significant discoveries, step-outs and strong producers. And it will be categorized for an easy-read, quick overview of Basin activity.

Last but not least, service companies and others doing business with the Permian Basin oil industry will have for the first time a vehicle for getting their advertising message into the hands of those they do business with. Included in the advertising format will be a classified section we feel is destined to become the marketplace for oilfield equipment, leases, deals, jobs and whatever

Red Eagle, Bradmar plan merger

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Red Eagle Petroleum Corp. and Bradmar Petroleum Corp. have announced a plan to merge the two oil and gas companies.

Red Eagle would emerge as the surviving entity if the plan is approved. "We anticipate shareholder approval by our company," said Bradmar president Brian Egolf.

He does not believe Red Eagle shareholders will have to vote on the proposed deal. The merger would be structured as a tax-free stock transaction, involving no cash, Egolf said.

P&P: Parker & Parsley still growing strong cal oil company to the largest publicly-traded oil company based in West Texas.

Parker & Parsley says it intends to become the primary tenant in the skyscraper, which commands the Midland skyline, and that the building will provide all the room the company needs for growth.

Considered one of the best-run oil companies in the business because of its phenomenal growth, some oil companies might have elected to run off to Dallas or Houston once they reached a certain size, but Parker & Parsley has made a deliberate decision to stay in Midland, just as it has stuck by the low risk Spraberry trend that has accounted for much of the company's success.

During some of the leanest years, P&P accounted for a lion's portion of the rig count some months and helped to carry the area through some of its toughest times.

Founded in 1962 by two former Gulf Oil Co. employees, Joe Parsley and Howard Parker, the company has enjoyed phenomenal growth despite booms, busts and buyouts.

Since the company geared up in 1978 to pursue an aggressive drilling program, oil production has gone from 1,500 barrels per day to 23,000 barrels daily, while operated wells increased from 100 to 3,500. Gas production has gone from 2.2 million cubic feet daily to 108 million cubic feet daily. And, since 1988, cash flow has grown from $14 million to $74 million.

The company functioned primarily as a two-man oil company until 1979, when it began to hire some of the present management and entertain ambitions of being an independent with national stature. Capitalized with $2 million, Parker & Parsley began in 1981 to sell public drilling funds, and enjoyed phenomenal success because of a sliding return formula that heavily favored investors.

Said Tim Dunn, chief financial officer: "It was installed in 1985 when there was so much concern about oil prices and remained in effect until 1989. Basically, it allowed that if the price of oil dropped below $20 our promote would go away for 18 months, go to 14 percent after 18 months and 25 percent after three years."

From 1981 to 1984 the new oil company with new ambitions sold over $100 million in public funds, with $40 million coming in a single year, 1983. The sales could have been even higher, but it was the choice of the owners, who were looking to retire, not to sell more.

In 1985, the desire to retire also led the owners to sell the company to Southmark Corp., a Dallas-based holding company, for $30 million. After the sale the owners remained as consultants for six months then headed to Austin and retirement.

At that time, Scott Sheffield, one of the first employees hired by Howard Parker and Joe Parsley when they decided to branch out in 1979, was named president of Parker & Parsley by Southmark.

Only 32 years old, there was some who questioned whether or not Sheffield was experienced enough for the job. But Sheffield had already spent a lifetime in the oil business, and had a background that seemed to destine him to run an oil company.

An oilfield brat, he grew up totally immersed in the oil business in such locals as Venezuela and Iran, where his father was an executive for Arco International. He earned his degree in petroleum engineering from the University of Texas and was only 27 years old when Parker & Parsley hired him as head of engineering.

Now chairman of the board of Parker & Parsley, executives with the company acknowledge that his leadership and management style played a key role in the growth of the company.

"He has a participatory management style that promotes team work. Parker & Parsley could not have grown as fast as it has in as short of time without team work," said Tim Dunn.

Bob Caster, now senior vice president of land and exploration, remembers that he had no intention of helping build a large independent oil company when he came to work for Parker & Parsley in 1979. "I left a good job as head of land at Forest Oil Co. because I wanted to go to work for a small independent. My goal was to drill just 15 wells per year."

After Parker & Parsley was sold to Southmark, it continued to experience rapid growth under the leadership of Sheffield.

In 1987, after forming Parker & Parsley Development Partners, a publicly traded company on the American Stock Exchange, it acquired, through an exchange of units, Boston-based HCW Inc. with oil and gas operations in Midland.

Then in 1988, through another exchange of units in master limited partnership an interest was acquired in Indian Wells Oil Co. and the income and drilling funds of MGF Oil Co., and continued to manage its drilling company until that was sold to Kaiser-Francis in 1989.

The acquisition of 11 MGF limited partnerships and 15 Indian Wells limited partnerships added 37.4 billion cubic feet of natural gas and 2.4 million barrels of oil reserves to the Parker & Parsley inventory.

Even though Parker & Parsley was healthy and growing, its parent Southmark, primarily a real estate development company, was ailing financially as a result of a downturn in the real estate market and high debt created by the sale of junk bonds.

As part of an exit package, Southmark's two top executives were given an option to buy Parker & Parsley. When they failed to exercise that option, a management group led by Sheffield was able to buy the company, with JM Petroleum, an affiliate of Westray Capital Corp. of New York, as a partner. With this stock purchase, all the P&P deals finally came under one roof.

This year Parker & Parsley concluded its biggest acquisition yet, when the company was doubled with the purchase of Damson Oil Co. In the $135 million cash and stock swap deal, P&P acquired all the $500 million in assets of Damson. It also acquired a new dimension to its operations, since about 20 percent of those assets included eight gas plants with a daily throughput of 600 million cubic feet.

But for all its wheeling and dealing in acquisitions, Parker & Parsley still is putting its fortunes with the "one that brought it to the party" — the giant Spraberry oil trend.

Spraberry drilling has been the bread and butter of the company since its inception. Spraberry wells now cost about $400,000 to drill and deliver an average of 90,000 barrels of reserves per well. While there is a long payout of three to five years, there is almost no risk to Spraberry drilling and approximately 30 percent of the reserves are left after payout.

BUST: Illegal haulers hit

(From 1G)

"Since then," says Jerry Teague, manager for the roustabout service, "our business has gone to pot. If we get caught moving a pumpjack or pump for a producer, even a short distance, we can get hit with a $10,000 fine. If one of our crews inadvertently picks up fittings at a supply store, we can be fined $10,000. To move a small pumping unit now requires two trucks, one to lift it and one to haul it."

Well servicing contractors also face the same penalty if they bring pumps or fittings to a well in a company pickup.

Teague calls the law which permits only truckers with Texas Railroad Commission permits to haul an out and out monopoly that is kept in place by the powerful trucking companies in the state.

"They broke up the AT&T monopoly and Mr. Rockefeller's Standard Oil Monopoly, but they forgot about the Texas trucking industry," said Teague. "If TRC requires a permit to haul oil-field equipment, then everyone should be able to get a permit."

However, a bill now before the Texas State Legislature could be a compromise to mitigate the issue that pits truckers against operators and service companies.

The bill is HB 2454, which was worked out as a compromise bill between truckers and the oil industry. The legislation would permit service companies and operators to haul certain equipment under certain circumstances without having to call in a regulated trucking company.

"We think the bill has a good chance of passing," said Cradick. "In essence it means that a roustabout gang could move a gear box, and a technician could deliver a pump without being in violation of the law."

Occidental wins piece of Argentina oil bid

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — A consortium formed by Occidental Petroleum Corp. of the United States and Perez Compania of Argentina has offered the apparent winning bid to develop reserves in the southern province of Neuquen, officials said Thursday.

The consortium was one of two submitting bids Tuesday to collaborate with the state oil monopoly Yacimientos Petroliferos Estatales (YPF) in the Puerto Hernandez area of Neuquen, about 1,165 miles south of Buenos Aires.

The U.S.-Argentine group submitted a bid for $260.8 million. A second consortium, made up of Astra, Capsa and Repsol Argentina, offered $215.7 million.

YPF President Jose Estenssoro said the state firm's board of directors will consider the bids before formally announcing the winner.

Once the winning bid has been determined, YPF will negotiate a contract with the winner to provide for joint exploration aimed at increasing production in the area.

The Puerto Hernandez area, covering approximately 21,489 acres, was discovered by YPF in 1969 and currently contains 535 producing wells.

An earlier offer made by Perez Compania in association with Shell Oil Co. was rejected due to the lack of other bids.

The financial newspaper Cronista Comercial said Thursday the new bid represented a $100 million improvement over the earlier proposal.

I choose newspaper ads to build my business

"In just one week, Diet Center received 12 calls from prospective clients, and 5 of those signed up for the program. I asked specifically how these callers heard about my business, and they said they read about it in the Midland Reporter-Telegram's Business and Industry page article.

With these outstanding results, I have more than paid for my advertising. Advertising in the Midland Reporter-Telegram is extremely cost-effective, and it offers me direct results I can see right away. That's why the newspaper continues to be my choice for building my business."

Tina Blake, owner
Diet Center

Parallel revenues surge

Staff Report

MIDLAND — Parallel Petroleum Corporation has announced that revenues more than doubled and net earnings more than tripled for the Company's first quarter ended March 31, 1991, compared to the same quarter a year ago.

Revenues increased by 143 percent to $846,000 from $348,000 in the year-earlier quarter. Net earnings increased by 255 percent to $316,000, or 3 cents per share from $89,000 or less than 1 cent per share, in the same quarter a year ago.

For the trailing 12 months ended March 31, 1991, Parallel has reported net earnings of $1.2 million or 11 cents per share.

Parallel's net cash flow before working capital adjustments in the first quarter was $495,000, compared to $177,000 in the first quarter of 1990. Oil production increased to 22,558 barrels from 7,452, and natural gas production to 200 million cubic feet from 98 million in the year-earlier quarter.

The production of equivalent barrels of oil, with natural gas converted to oil on the basis of 6 Mcf of gas per barrel of oil, rose to 55,912 barrels from 23,754.

Larry C. Oldham, executive vice president, commented that the company's results "are especially gratifying in view of the severe downward price pressures that have prevailed since midway through the fourth quarter of 1990. The average sales price of a barrel of oil declined by 23 percent to $22.10 from $28.64 in the last quarter of 1990, while the average sales price of natural gas fell by 13 percent to $1.73 from $1.99 per Mcf. On an equivalent-barrel basis, the prices fell by 23 percent to $15.12 from $19.58."

Parallel is an oil and gas production company with operations concentrated in the Permian Basin and Panhandle areas of Texas, the Austin Chalk of South Texas where the company is an active participant in the new "horizontal drilling" technology, and in natural gas production near the Mexican border with Texas.

Harken awards contract for project off Baharain

N.Y. Times News Service

GRAND PRAIRIE, Texas — Harken Energy Corp. of Grand Prairie, teaming up with the billionaire Bass family of Fort Worth in a quest for a big oil strike in the Middle East, has awarded a major services contract for its drilling project in waters off Bahrain.

Harken said it has awarded a $5.7 million contract to Volker Dredging Services of Abu Dhabi, a subsidiary of Volker Stevin Dredging BV of the Netherlands.

Volker is to dredge a 3-mile-long channel — 195 feet wide and 17.5 feet below mean sea level — to an offshore site where an initial exploratory well is to be drilled.

Volker will construct three artificial islands, one of which will serve as the drilling site. The completed channel and island will permit the use of conventional land drilling equipment and provide 24-hour access to the well site.

Pecos reentry yields Strawn gas find

Staff Report

A reentry has yielded a Strawn gas discovery in Pecos County, northeast of the Hershey field.

R.W. Blair reentered the No. 1 Alexander, an abandoned well, and recompleted it for a calculated absolute open flow of 4.4 Mmcfd from perforations 15,380 to 15,709 ft.

The well was cleaned out to 16,400 ft. and a 7-5/8 inch liner was hung from 10,562 to 17,054 ft.

The well topped the Strawn at 15,230 ft. and the Atoka at 16,310 ft. on ground elevation of 3,064 ft. Pay was topped at 15,230 ft.

Location is 1,320 ft. from west and south lines of Section 1, Block 50, T-10, T&P survey, 23 miles west of Fort Stockton.

The well was drilled as the No. 1 Signal "71" Alexander by U.S. Signal Oil & Gas Co. and plugged in 1972.

Dual completion

A reentry in Lea County, N.M. has yielded a dual completion for ZIA ENERGY INC.

The No. 1 Simmons was completed in the Drinkard to pump five barrels of 36.8 gravity crude, 25 Mcfd and seven barrels of water from open hole 6,488 to 6,549 ft. The interval was acidized with 5,000 gallons of 15 percent NeF-HCL acid. Gas-oil ratio was 5,556:1.

In the Drinkard, the well was tested to pump two barrels of 36.8 gravity crude, 10 Mcfd and six barrels of water from perforations 6,062 to 6,163 ft. The interval was acidized with 5,000 gallons of 15 percent HCL acid. Gas-oil ratio was 6,667:1.

The well was drilled to 6,549 ft. and plugged back to 6,275 ft. A 5 1/2 inch liner was hung from 2,835 to 6,488 ft.

Formation tops, on elevation of 3,447 ft., include the Queen at 3,325 ft., Grayburg at 3,597, San Andres at 3,783, Glorieta at 5,070, Paddock at 5,221, Blinberry at 5,520, Tubb at 6,040, and Drinkard at 6,440 ft. Tubb pay was topped at 6,440 ft. Tubb pay was topped at 6,062 ft.

Location is 1,760 ft. from north and east lines of Section 5, T22s, R37e.

The well was drilled as the No. 1 Grizzell by Sohio Petroleum Inc. and abandoned at 6,549 ft.

King pay opener

King Sand gas pay has been opened in the Lonesome Dove II field of Concho County.

SRG OIL CORP. opened the pay with completion of its No. H-1 Jacoby, tested for a calculated absolute open flow of 1.49 Mmcfd from perforations 2,008 ft. to 2,026 ft.

The well was drilled to 2,100 ft. and plugged back to 2,058 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 2,099 ft.

Field reopener

The Flat Rock field of Upton County was reopened with completion of an Ellenburger producer by Three-B Oil Co.

On potential test, the No. 1 Flat-head flowed 146 barrels of 58 gravity crude and 23 barrels of water from open hole interval 10,683 to 10,740 ft.

The well was drilled to 10,740 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 10,683 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,716 ft., include the Yates at 2,020 ft., Spraberry at 6,260, Strawn at 9,416, and Ellenburger at 10,675 ft.

and 660 ft. from east lines of Section 32, Block 3, ULS survey, eight miles east of Rankin.

Tests completed

Two wells have been added to the Broken Bone (Conglomerate) field of Cottle County by GUNN OIL CO.

The No. 1 Majors Unit, a southern extension of the field, was tested for a calculated absolute open flow of 42 Mcfd from perforations 11,078 to 13,225 ft.

Permitted as a 14,500 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 13,600 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 13,499 ft.

Location is 1,320 ft. from north and east lines of Section 5, Block K, R.M. Thompson, eight miles southeast of Paducah.

The No. 2 Brothers, a western extender, was tested for a calculated absolute open flow of 1.74 Mmcfd from perforations 10,651 to 10,824 ft.

Permitted as a 14,000 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 11,136 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 11,120 ft.

Ada Belle Oil goes big time

By Richard Stewart
Hearst News Service

BEAUMONT, Texas — One of Texas' oldest and smallest oil companies has been sold to a company that plans to use new technology to coax more oil out of old wells.

The Ada Belle Oil Co. started operation in the Hardin County boom town of Batson, Texas, during an era of great oil booms on Gulf Coast salt domes. Until Monday, it was owned by descendants of investors from Beaumont and Chicago who paid $80 a share to form the little company in 1904.

Until 1988, most of the pumps on the company's two dozen or so producing wells were powered by one big electric motor driving a massive horizontal wheel in a metal building called the roundhouse. As the big wheel slowly turned around, it pulled steel sucker rods that snaked all over the field, making unearthly "thwanging" noises as they moved back and forth. The rods transferred power to pumps in the wells.

In 1988 the old roundhouse burned down and the company installed individual electric pumps for each well. Some old wooden storage tanks stand alongside more modern metal and fiberglass tanks in the field.

Ada Belle shareholders voted Monday to sell the little company to the Penn-Virginia Resource Corp. Penn-Virginia is based in Philadelphia.

"We knew it was coming sooner or later," said Ada Belle corporate secretary Judy Allen. She said modern environmental rules were going to require the company to spend more money than it had. In the past few years several corporations have made bids to buy the company, she said. Penn-Virginia not only made the most attractive financial offer but recognized the historical importance of the old field, she said.

"We've made a commitment to preserve the historical nature of the company," said Vince Matthews, vice president for oil and gas for Penn-Virginia.

Matthews said his company plans to drill several wells to inject steam into formations in the Batson field to try to extract more oil. He said Ada Belle currently has 27 wells that produce a total of about 40 barrels of oil a day.

Allen said about 60 people owned 1,415 shares of stock in the old company.

She said shareholders were given several options with combinations of present or future payments and interest in a new Penn-Virginia subsidiary that will operate the field.

While Allen valued the company at $1.4 million, the complicated deal appears to be worth less than that.

Founded on a shoestring like hundreds of other oil companies early in the century, Ada Belle almost faced extinction several times. Its second well caught on fire, and employees had to work for subsistence wages for a couple of years, Allen said.

The company later merged with several other local companies. Allen said her grandfather, John C. Allen, got Ada Belle stock when his drilling contracting company merged with Ada Belle. Her grandfather served as the company's field superintendent for years, often getting up in the middle of the night to refuel an old engine that operated the bull wheel.

For years the company barely remained alive and little or no dividends were paid on stock, Allen said.

Oil shortages in the 1970s dramatically raised oil prices, however, and for several years stockholders got yearly dividends of around $80 per share a year — the same amount their ancestors had paid for the original stock.

"In recent times it's become quite the thing to do to go out and see the old field," said Maxine Johnston, another shareholder, who lives near the field.

Ada Belle's corporate records will be deposited at Lamar University's archives in Beaumont.

Phillips opens CNG station

STROUD, Okla. (AP) — Gov. David Walters filled the tank of his official car with compressed natural gas Tuesday during the opening of the first CNG pump at a public gas station on a U.S. turnpike.

The CNG pump was unveiled at the Phillips 66 station off the Turner Turnpike in Stroud, about halfway between Oklahoma City and Tulsa.

Phillips 66 Co., working with Oklahoma Natural Gas, plans to open another CNG pump off Interstate 40 in Oklahoma City later this spring.

A Texaco station in southeast Tulsa began offering CNG to the general public on April 26.

"Phillips 66 and Oklahoma Natural Gas are working together to make alternative fuels more accessible to Oklahomans," said Glenn Cox, president of Phillips Petroleum Co.

"Natural gas is Oklahoma's premier natural resource," Cox said. "It's abundant, secure, reasonably priced and environmentally friendly. All of these benefits make CNG good for Oklahoma."

Walters' car, a Park Avenue, recently was converted to run on CNG.

Earl Bond, manager of the Phillips station, said the governor filled his tank as lawmakers and officials with Phillips and ONG looked on.

Oklahoma Gov. David Walters becomes the first customer at a Phillips 66 station on the Turner Turnpike that sells compressed natural gas for vehicles, the first public CNG station to open on a U.S. turnpike.

Fleet vehicles, such as delivery vans and airport shuttles, are the most common users of CNG. Some state agencies have a fleet of vehicles that run on CNG, and school districts in Tulsa and Enid have buses that use the alternative fuel.

Bond says that while he expects the pump to fill mostly fleet vehicles, the fact that the station is located midway between Oklahoma's two largest cities could encourage more people to convert their cars to run on CNG.

"Anyone who goes back and forth now can burn CNG all the way," Bond said. "They'll be in good shape between Tulsa and Oklahoma City."

One of the drawbacks to CNG vehicles is the range, which is about 150 to 200 miles per tank of natural gas.

Oxy hit with $30 million judgement

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — OXY USA Inc. must pay $30 million in punitive damages for allegedly interfering with a natural gas transmission contract, a federal jury has decided.

The jury, after a three-week trial, also awarded $289,000 in actual damages to Continental Trend Resources Inc. of Enid, Farrar Oil Co. and four individuals — Harold G. Hamm, Gary H. Wright, Cindy Wright and Jeffrey B. Hume.

The plaintiffs claimed that Oxy, a subsidiary of San Francisco-based Occidental Petroleum Corp., interfered with their right to market natural gas under a federal order.

The Federal Energy Regulation Commission rule provides for non-discriminatory transportation of gas on a first-come, first-serve basis.

The plaintiffs claimed they had no way to ship gas to midwestern industrial markets except through a gathering and mainline system owned by Williams Natural Gas Co. of Tulsa.

WNG was cited as a defendant in the original complaint, but later was dismissed.

The plaintiffs alleged that Oxy hindered their ability to sell the gas by saying there was no available means to ship gas flowing through the Rodman Gathering System except by sending it to the Rodman natural gas processing plant.

3D: New 3D work station debuts

a timeshare basis because of the proprietary nature of the business."

Underwood said the work station would be available on a 24-hour basis with a geotech on hand to download processed data from nine track tapes into the station.

He said it would operate on three eight-hour shifts and would be priced accordingly. The prime shift, 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. will cost $100 an hour, while the 5 p.m. to midnight shift will cost $85 an hour. After midnight the cost goes down to $65 an hour.

While the work station is primarily in place to serve independents, Underwood said it would also be available to major oil companies who experience overflow problems on their own work stations.

"The time needed to massage the data on a normal small project is about eight to ten hours," said Underwood, who noted that the GeoStrat also intended to open a night school school to train individuals and company personnel in the use of a 3D work station.

Underwood said it normally takes about two weeks to learn how to properly massage all the raw geophysical data into a 3D project. He noted that 3D capabilities would greatly enhance the ability of independents to plan field development, enhanced oil recovery projects, prospect evaluation and horizontal potential.

Because of the proprietary nature of the information being used in the computer work stations, Underwood said top security measures would be employed to insure that the information was safe in the computer. He said users would have their own access codes and could choose to leave their data in the computer or download it on an 8 mm tape when they leave.

PETROLEUM PERSPECTIVES

Environmental overkill threatens oil industry

By Harry Spannaus

I started to call this short article "Loose Cannons" in Austin but after considerable thought, perhaps the term "Legislature Misfires" would be more appropriate.

Regardless, my comments relate to the 72nd Texas Legislature; a body of 182 men and women of which many are doing their best to raise our taxes, increase license and permit fees, make penalties more severe and bring about new fees and charges to help pay for a state bureaucracy that appears to be out of control.

All of us who live in Texas, especially oil and gas producing West Texas, should be alarmed about what our Austin lawmakers are doing to us, not for us. Of the more than 4,100 proposed bills filed, over 500 are environmental bills, many of which will either put the independent petroleum sector out of business or make business life so intolerable that many will find new and better ways to make a living.

The petroleum industry does not lay claim to being an environmental perfect industry. To the contrary, we have a poor public image in this area, and at time, may be considered selfish, careless and filthy rich J.R. Ewing types. We are blamed for the nation's banking and business failures, and we are charged with taking advantage of situations like Desert Storm to fill our pockets with windfall profits at the expense of the poor consumer.

According to some, we are public enemy number one and even if it means going back to the horse and buggy days, oil and gas must be sacrificed!

We are being flooded by proposed state laws which negate a balance between our energy needs and our care for the environment. Senate Bill (SB) 576, authored by our own Bill Sims (D-San Angelo), in its initial writing, would have outlawed all fresh water for crude oil secondary recovery projects; a disaster in the making which would have eliminated more than 19,000 barrels per day of oil production from the Permian Basin. The bill was written to protect fresh water resources as a sacrifice to the agriculture community. It is difficult to believe that such a sacrifice is justified when between oil and agriculture, the farmers and ranchers consume 99% of all fresh water extracted.

One bill, authored by Railroad Commission Chairperson Lena Guerrero's staff, and sponsored by Senator Sims (SB-1103), which in accumulating revenue for an oil spill fund eliminates the due process of law for the accused; it labels violators as criminals of the state and fines correspondingly up to $10,000 a day.

It allows the Railroad Commission or its agents (whomever they may be), free access to any and all mineral properties with the full authority to cite violators of State law and Commission rules. It provides a total exemption of liability of any kind on the part of the state and provides direct routing of violation citations to the Attorney General for legal proceedings, without notice to lease operators. The system provides no opportunity for correction — just the demand to appear in court at a great legal expense and at being labeled a criminal of the State.

Other bills of concern are SB-405/407 by Senator Lyons (D-Mesquite), which makes it unlawful to store, hold, distribute, etc., any hazardous product or material on a lease or any grounds that may kill any form of wildlife (reptiles, worms, insects included).

It also provides game wardens with the authority to enter upon any property, for the purpose of inspection and detection without reasonable cause, to issue written notice or citations for alleged violations or to discover evidence of wildlife destruction leading to both civil and criminal prosecution and suit by local jurisdiction and/or the Attorney General against lease holders or property owners.

Lastly, Senator Carl Parker (D-Port Arthur) has filed SB-35, which would establish a new Department of Natural Resources (Short title: "Texas EPA") by dissolving the Texas Air Control Board, Water Commission, Department of Public Health, and the Structural Pest Control Board to form one consolidated and centralized body to regulate and enforce all laws currently under the jurisdiction of the bodies to be sacrificed.

While such consolidation may initially appear to be an efficient and effective reorganization, it's anticipated composition will be a huge bureaucracy of questionable value, an ineffective span of control and at added cost to what is already in place and what we believe to be effective departments of state government.

"Loose Cannons" or "Legislature Misfire," regardless of what one labels it, our Austin lawmakers have joined with Washington lawmakers to make the independent operator an endangered species.

It is our hope that through everyone who reads this article, we stampede our lawmakers in Austin with messages of concern and objection in a combined effort to bring about industry enhancement instead of industry decapitation. To paraphrase an old saying, "We may be disappointed if we fail, but we are doomed if we don't try."

Union Pacific announces successful Suez wells

N.Y. Times News Service

FORT WORTH, Texas — Union Pacific Resources Co. of Fort Worth says it and two partners have drilled two highly successful offshore oil wells in the northern Gulf of Suez that could result in large-scale production from a potential "world-class field."

Union Pacific Resources has a 25-percent working interest in the wells, which are in Egyptian waters. Its partners in the project are British Gas, a large firm based in London that has a 50-percent interest in the wells, and Yukong Ltd., a South Korean company with a 25-percent interest.

The three partners announced Tuesday that the Warda No. 2 well, a second well drilled to help appraise the potential of the field, tested at a rate of more than 10,100 barrels of oil per day from six producing zones between 5,000 and 6,200 feet.

The partners had announced in December the drilling of the Warda No. 1, a wildcat discovery well that tested in excess of 7,500 barrels of oil per day from five producing zones.

The wells represent "the best discovery in Egypt in the last 10 years" and are indicators of a possible "world-class field," said William Adams, chairman of Union Pacific Resources.

The field potentially could have recoverable oil reserves of "250 million barrels, plus or minus," he said.

"This makes our foreign program successful," Adams said.

"There are a lot of companies out there that spend a lot of years before they get that good a discovery."

Adams said the three partners will drill a third well later this summer that will help further delineate the potential of the field.

Production from the field likely will begin by late 1993 or early 1994, he said.

Drilling of the third well will help establish whether one or two offshore production platforms will be needed for the field, he said.

Asked how many wells might eventually be drilled in the field, Adams said, "It could be anywhere from a dozen to two or three times that many."

Union Pacific Resources thus far has spent only about $5 million on the Gulf of Suez drilling program, Adams said. Such an expenditure is "peanuts" in terms of international oil exploration, he said.

Union Pacific Resources is one of the largest and most profitable independent oil and gas exploration and production companies based in the United States, but traditionally has confined its operations primarily to North America.

The Gulf of Suez field would be the company's first "commercial" oil operation outside North America in recent years, Adams said.

A commercial oilfield is one that produces sufficient quantities of crude to make it economically feasible to develop.

Union Pacific Resources has an exploration and production budget of $350 million for this year.

Exxon Chemical uses specially trained Labrador retrievers to help locate pipe line leaks.

Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — First came German shepherds, adept at sniffing out anything from explosives to marijuana. Then came Bobby the beagle, a termite's worst nightmare. Now Labrador retrievers are using their sensitive snouts to help Exxon Chemical Co. locate elusive pipe line leaks.

Exxon is pairing the big black beasts with an odorized test fluid called Tekscint developed by a Canadian affiliate to find tiny pinhole leaks in pipelines that carry crude, petroleum products, water and natural gas — leaks that elude conventional methods of detection.

The canine detection method has been used for about a year in Alberta, and Exxon has just begun marketing it in the United States, said Tim Brown, marketing development manager for Exxon Chemical in Houston.

Here's how it works: Tekscint is dissolved in water and sent through the leaky pipeline under high pressure. When the solution comes to a hole, it migrates up through the soil.

"Twenty-four hours later, we bring the dog in and walk the path of the pipeline," Brown said. "Where the dog finds the leaks, he starts digging."

To find out just how sophisticated the dogs' olfactory equipment is, Brown said the Labs took a field trip to a laboratory at Auburn University in Alabama. The results showed that pipeline-sniffing pups have noses that are many, many times more sensitive than the advanced gas chromatograph system that went up with the Mars probe, Brown said.

Coiled tubing offered

Staff Report

Quality Tubing Inc. has made available larger-diameter QT-700 coiled tubing for use as primary and secondary production tubing in oil and gas wells.

Although coiled tubing has been used extensively for remedial service operations, the new sizes are the first coiled tubing products to be manufactured exclusively for permanent production installations.

QT-700 production coiled tubing is available in sizes up to and greater than 2.38 inch diameter with wall thickness of 0.203 inches. QT-700 production coiled tubing has a maximum internal capacity of 4,520 barrels per 1,000 ft.

Coiled tubing offers a number of advantages over conventional threaded pipe. Coiled tubing is faster and easier to run in and out of wells because there are no joints to make up or break apart. In addition, no workover rigs are required to run the tubing.

Various supplies make available a complete line of surface and downhole assemblies for production coiled tubing, including tubing, hangers, pack-off assemblies, bottom hangers, seating assemblies, blowout plugs, no-gos, pump out check valves, centralizers and downhole packers.

GeoQuest markets software

Staff Report

GeoQuest Systems Inc. has signed a marketing agreement with Advance Geophysical Corp. of Denver.

The agreement calls for GeoQuest to market the ProMAX Interactive Seismic Processing System on a worldwide basis in conjunction with GeoQuest's Interactive Exploration System.

This important agreement will further enhance GeoQuest System's continuing success in marketing a broad-based turnkey solution to the petroleum industry by combining the efficient, cost-effective Pro-MAX system for interactive seismic processing with the industry-leading IES geoscience and GeoVisualization interpretation, modeling and mapping system. The ProMAX system has gained widespread popularity in the oil and gas industry as the only truly interactive seismic processing system developed specifically for the networked, graphic workstation environment. Under the terms of the agreement, the two companies will undertake joint development to integrate the IES and ProMAX systems. The combination will allow geoscientists to use a single system to interactively process, interpret, model and map their seismic data, and present resulting prospects to management. Both GeoQuest and Advance are committed to the use of computing industry standards including X-Windows, OSF/Motif and the UNIX operating system.

WHEN YOUR TARGET IS THE PERMIAN BASIN

The Permian Basin is an oil and gas producing empire of 100,000 square miles with an oil well for every square mile. Comprised of 54 counties in Southeast New Mexico and West Texas this far flung industry, accounts for roughly 20 percent of the nation's total oil production.

Yet, a long standing problem has been the lack of a single newspaper to serve the thousands of companies and over 40,000 workers involved in exploration, land, production, drilling, oilfield service and supply, pipelines and construction, refining, and transportation.

But beginning May 12, The Permian Basin Oil Report, published weekly by the Midland Reporter-Telegram, will become the information source for the Permian Basin oil industry.

Packed with information and articles about oil and gas people, products, companies, issues, events, drilling, exploration, and production, the Oil Report will appear each Sunday as a section of the Midland Reporter-Telegram. Additionally, it will be mailed to every producer, operator and oilfield service company throughout the Permian Basin.

If the Permian Basin is your target market, the Permian Basin Oil Report is the way to reach it.

Oklahoma may get gas commission

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Oklahoma may follow the lead of Texas and other gas-producing states by forming a commission to investigate ways to ease the hardship depressed natural gas prices cause for producers.

The Oklahoma House will consider a joint resolution creating the 13-member commission, which would work with similar bodies in other states.

The Senate approved the resolution on Wednesday. The measure is similar to other resolutions introduced by legislators in Texas and Kansas.

Sen. Kevin Easley, D-Tulsa, sponsor of the measure, said he hopes major gas-producing states can cooperate and consider ways to ease the economic crisis facing natural gas production.

The commission would include the governor or his designee, the state secretary of energy, a senator appointed by the Senate president pro tem, a representative appointed by the House speaker and a state Corporation Commission appointee.

The Senate president pro tem and House speaker each would appoint four non-legislative members representing major gas producers, small gas producers, gas royalty owners and natural gas transporters or pipelines.

The commission will try to devise a method of developing reasonable estimates of the state's gas reserves and the cost to find and develop new gas reserves.

Under the plan, the commission would have to recommend to the governor and Legislature by Jan. 31, 1992, its legislative alternatives for relief for Oklahoma gas producers and for protecting gas reserves from wasteful production.

Easley and Texas officials have talked about forming an interstate gas compact commission to explore issues such as "economic waste" of gas.

His resolution does not specifically mention such a compact commission, but does say Oklahoma should work with other gas-producing states to promote natural gas production and use at a price reflecting its fair value.

Some gas industry officials have warned that any interstate attempt to raise gas prices may be interpreted in gas-consuming states as a regional attempt to transfer wealth and as an interference with the free market system.

"Something has to be done," said Patrick Collins, a lawyer and president of Plains Resources Inc. "After drifting steadily downward over the last five years, wellhead prices for natural gas have now reached levels that bear no rational relationship to alternative fuels."

According to the U.S. Department of Energy, the average U.S. wellhead price for natural gas dropped 31 percent between January and August 1990, to $1.54 per thousand cubic feet.

Shell reports significant offshore find

HOUSTON (AP) — Shell Oil Co. and BP Exploration have discovered an offshore reserve that could yield more than 220 million barrels of oil, officials said.

Shell's Mars prospect is a deep-water well located about 130 miles southeast of New Orleans in the Gulf of Mexico. BP Exploration has a one-third interest in the project because of a joint venture agreement with Shell.

"Our Mars discovery is potentially large, and could surpass in estimated volumes our Auger deepwater discovery announced in 1989," said Shell president Frank H. Richardson.

Shell's Auger discovery has a total gross ultimate recovery in excess of 220 million barrels of oil and gas equivalent. Richardson said further engineering studies are necessary and additional wells may be required before total oil volumes at Mars can be estimated.

Sources told the Houston Chronicle the Mars find has potential reserves of at least 300 million barrels and possibly as much as 500 to 600 million barrels.

The Mars discovery is on Mississippi Canyon Block 763 and 807 at depths between 14,500 feet and 18,100 feet. The oil-bearing zones have a combined thickness of approximately 440 net feet of oil-bearing sand.

Shell is drilling its fifth discovery well in the Mars prospect, where exploration began two years ago. Bonuses for the two leases totaled $2.4 million.

Shell is the largest leaseholder in the deepwater Gulf of Mexico, with 35 percent of the leased acreage in water depths over 1,500 feet.

MEETINGS

Permian Basin SPE to host 'Family Night'

The Permian Basin section, Society of Petroleum Engineers, will meet May 21 at the Ranchland Hills Country Club. The meeting begins with social hour at 5:30 p.m. and dinner at 6:30 p.m. The meeting is "Family Night" and members are invited to bring their families.

Guest speaker will be General Richard Ingram, who will speak on "The Exciting Future of the Confederate Air Force." He is executive director of the CAF, taking that post in January. He retired from the U.S. Air Force in 1988 after 39 years service and joined the CAF staff in May 1990.

Cost is $12 per person, $6 for those under 18. Reservations should be made by Friday by calling 686-7329.

SIPES speaker to discuss 3-D seismic survey

Steven L. Roche will be the guest speaker at the Wednesday meeting of the Society of Independent Professional Earth Scientists. The meeting will be at the Midland Country Club beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Roche will speak on "Design, Acquisition and Processing of a Three-Dimensional Seismic Survey of the Dollahide Field, Andrews County." He and his co-worker Chuck Keller, of Halliburton Geophysical Services, worked with Mike Reblin and Greg Chapel of Unocal to design and supervise the project during August 1988 through July 1989.

SPE section to host SPE national treasurer

The Trans-Pecos section, Society of Petroleum Engineers, will meet Wednesday at The Club at Mission Dorado beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Guest speaker will be Ronald E. Watson, SPE Treasurer for 1991. His topic will be "Synergism in Reservoir Development, Evaluation, and Management." He will discuss the need for a coordinated effort between petroleum professionals to maximize petroleum resource development. Geologists, geophysicists, and petroleum engineers are working better together to bring successful and economic solutions in solving problems and adapting to changes in the oil and gas industry.

Cost of the luncheon is $12 per person.

Annual paper to be given at WTGS meeting

Michael Party will present the Annual Development Paper at Tuesday's meeting of the West Texas Geological Society. The meeting will be at Midland Center beginning at 11:30 a.m.

The paper is entitled "Highlights of Exploration in the Permian Basin 1990." Party is a senior petroleum geologist with Wagner and Brown. Cost of the luncheon is $7 per person and reservations should be made by 5 p.m. Monday by calling the WTGS office at 683-1573.

Microcomputer users to discuss software

The Midland Microcomputer User's Association will meet Tuesday at the Midland Room, First City Tower II beginning at 7:30 p.m.

Guest speaker will be Cheryl Danford of MIDA Connecting Point Computer Center. She will discuss the various attributes and pros and cons of popular programs such as Lotus 1-2-3, dBase III+, Paradox, Microsoft Word, Windows and Q&A. Non-members are welcome.

THANK YOU CITIZENS OF MIDLAND

Thank you for your time, talents, money and products that you have given to the "Trace Gipson Fund". The first goal has been reached and we couldn't have done it by ourselves.

We now ask that you lift Trace up in prayer as he undergoes the transplant on May 15th.

May God Bless you mightily in the coming days.

Sincerely,
A Hand Up for Rankin

NORTHWEST PIPELINE CORPORATION, an interstate natural gas transmission company serving seven western states, has a need to fill a unique opening. This position offers an important:

Management Development Opportunity Green River, Wyoming

It is anticipated that the right individual in this assignment could potentially contribute to our long-term management needs. The initial assignment will be in a field supervisory capacity where you will be responsible for the efficient and continuous operation of field gathering facilities. As you successfully refine your business, technical, and supervisory skills in this operating environment, future development opportunities will be considered.

You must have highly developed technical insights and business perspective to deal effectively with external contacts; facilitate the development of effective operating plans; and understand the business and profitability impact of day-to-day operating decisions.

Requirements include a BS degree or equivalent experience in Engineering or Business. An MBA would be a strong asset. Demonstrated leadership, possibly in a previous supervisory role, as well as effective oral and written communication skills are also required.

If you're interested in this unique management development position as well as a competitive salary and benefits package, send your resume to Lynne Kennedy, Northwest Pipeline Corporation, P.O. Box 58900, Salt Lake City, UT 84158-0900, or if you have questions call 1-800-453-3810, extension 6335.
