Congressmen oppose new FBI guidelines

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of Congress say they will challenge the Reagan administration's decision to expand FBI infiltration and monitoring of U.S. groups that allegedly advocate violent social and political change.

Attorney General William French Smith broadened the FBI's authority for domestic spying Monday when he issued new guidelines for FBI domestic security and domestic terrorist investigations.

Smith's new rules, which take effect March 21, replace guidelines issued by Attorney General Edward Levi in 1976 to halt abuses turned up by congressional committees. Levi's rules have come under attack by conservative groups.

The congressional panels found that during the 1960s and early 1970s the FBI infiltrated anti-Vietnam war groups, civil rights organizations and the women's liberation movement, and attempted to disrupt their activities and discredit their leaders, including Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

Although the new rules do not need congressional approval, several efforts were immediately announced in Congress to alter them or at least clarify Smith's intentions.

Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., chairman of the House Judiciary subcommittee on civil and constitutional rights, said the new FBI powers could chill the exercise of free speech. He called on Justice officials to explain them at hearings in the next two weeks.

Sens. Charles McC. Mathias, R-Md., and Walter Huddleston, D-Ky., chairman and vice chairman of the special committee that investigated the FBI's Abscam investigation, said through spokesmen that they and other senators will introduce legislation to restrict the use of FBI informants and infiltrators even more sharply than Levi had.

A leading conservative critic of the Levi rules, Sen. Jeremiah Denton, R-Ala., chairman of the Senate Judiciary subcommittee on security and terrorism, hailed the new rules as "a step in the right direction."

But two Democratic liberals, Sens. Patrick Leahy of Vermont and Joseph Biden of Delaware, said through spokesmen that they would use Denton's March 16 hearing on the rules to question whether Smith had discarded too many protections against government interference in legal political dissent.

A spokesman for Sen. Dave Durenberger, R-Minn., said the Senate intelligence subcommittee on the rights of Americans, which Durenberger heads, also would review the new guidelines.

Outside government, Jerry Berman, legislative counsel for the American Civil Liberties Union, said some of the changes are "detrimental to civil liberties" and could allow the FBI to "slide back into the business of investigating people who engage in heated debate and espouse unpopular ideologies."

Smith said the new guidelines already had been altered this past week in response to some private criticisms from Congress. He said the new rules "clarify the standards governing these investigations and reaffirm the importance of gathering criminal intelligence about violence-prone groups, while retaining adequate protections for lawful and peaceful political dissent."

Smith said using informants and infiltration in preliminary inquiries would enhance the FBI's ability to prevent violence and show that "we are not waiting for the ticking to start" before the government acts.

John B. Hotis, special assistant to FBI Director William H. Webster, said the new preliminary inquiries would have a narrower purpose, focusing on whether crimes were imminent rather than on basic intelligence about the infiltrated group.

But Berman said Smith will allow informants and infiltration "where the bureau may be acting merely on unsubstantiated information and allegations."

Spokesmen for Mathias and Huddleston pointed out the Senate Abscam panel had unanimously recommended tougher, rather than looser, rules for informants and infiltration.

Church leaders urged to take stand on arms

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — President Reagan called on evangelical church leaders today to use their pulpits against opponents of his defense build-up and "those who would place the United States in a position of military and moral inferiority."

He also urged the evangelicals' convention, which will take up proposals calling on the United States and the Soviet Union to freeze their nuclear arsenals, not to ignore "the aggressive impulses of an evil empire."

On domestic issues, Reagan repeated his opposition to abortion, efforts to ban school prayer and attempts to limit an administration rule requiring parental notification when teen-agers receive federally sponsored birth control information or devices.

Reagan also said he was horrified at "the resurgence of some hate groups preaching bigotry and prejudice" and told his audience to "use the mighty voice of your pulpits and the powerful standing of your churches to denounce and isolate these hate groups in our midst."

But Reagan, who has been criticized by conservative leaders for offering what they call "rhetoric" but little other support for anti-abortion and school prayer efforts, made little reference in his speech to the National Association of Evangelicals to specific actions he plans to take beyond submitting proposed legislation and constitutional amendments.

As activists both supporting and opposing efforts to impose a moratorium on nuclear weapons development gathered in Washington, Reagan told the church leaders that "in your discussions of the nuclear freeze proposals, I urge you to beware of the temptation of pride."

He described this as "the temptation blithely to declare yourselves above it all and label both sides equally to fault, to ignore the facts of history and the aggressive impulses of an evil empire, to simply call the arms race a giant misunderstanding and thereby remove yourself from the struggle between right and wrong, good and evil."

"I urge you to speak out against those who would place the United States in a position of military and moral inferiority. I ask you to resist the attempts of those who would have you withhold your support for this administration's efforts to keep America strong and free while we negotiate real and verifiable reductions in the world's nuclear arsenals and one day, with God's help, their total elimination."

In arms talks with the Soviet Union in Geneva, Reagan's negotiators have proposed reducing strategic nuclear weapons arsenals to equal levels before freezing them, while opponents of this proposal have suggested an immediate freeze at current levels and then negotiations to reduce weaponry.

While Reagan has spoken frequently about school prayer and abortion, he has left most of the administration's side of the debate on the parental notification rule to aides.

Forlorn farmers

Solemnly, these Dawson County cotton farmers listen as Department of Agriculture representatives advise them not to grow as much cotton this year as part of the administration's Payment in Kind program.

Farmers learn about 'crop swap'

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

LAMESA — Jump down, turn around, PIK a bale of cotton.

Johnny Cash crooned it two decades ago, while Dawson County farmers have been doing just that for decades: planting, increasing acreage, striving for peak yields.

Now, the federal government wants to pick those bales and leave empty rows in their wake.

Payment In Kind — the Department of Agriculture's controversial "crop swap" program — piqued the interest of more than 100 farmers who gathered Monday at Dawson County Community Building for the annual meeting of Lamesa Cotton Growers Association. On hand to explain the "nuts and bolls" of the program were Washington, D.C. agriculture officials Charlie Cunningham and John Ford.

"The basic problem is surpluses: cotton, feed grains, wheat, rice," said Cunningham, deputy director of the analysis division of Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service

"PIK is an effort to reduce acreage and production in order to get rid of those surpluses. What we're doing is (asking) producers...to agree to reduce their acreage an additional 10 to 30 percent above the regular program or go the whole basis, while PIK will receive — in return for laying that land out — commodities, which everyone will get."

Those commodities, added Cunningham, would be made available "about the same time that crops would have been harvested if they'd been planted, so that we don't thoroughly disrupt the market.... It will help us get rid of those surpluses, which then will permit prices to increase and help the farmers to get back on their feet."

"The higher the participation, the quicker we can get supplies down and prices up."

— Charlie Cunningham

In a taped message specifically directed to the association, Secretary of Agriculture John Block strongly urged Dawson County cotton farmers to sign up for PIK by its Friday deadline.

"In all my years associated with agriculture, never has there been a more crucial (time) for farmers to make the right decision," he said. "If we don't make PIK work then we will be the victims of our own inaction. We must face reality.... We cannot depend on a sudden increase in exports to pull us out.... We cannot gamble on Mother Nature to administer involuntary increase reductions.... The Payment in Kind is a life preserver that we must cling to now."

Farmers, said the secretary, hold "their own destinies in their own hands. We have a chance, a tool, to turn this surplus situation around. I only hope that we are willing to make a commitment to use those tools."

Block originally had been scheduled to speak in person at the association meeting, but decided to remain in Washington and push for PIK signup nationwide through telephone conferences.

Native Panhandle cotton farmer John Ford, now an assistant deputy to Block, delved into his own background to sympathize with any potential resentment toward meddling by the government. "There's a natural instinct, even in these times, even in this condition, for people to want to farm, not to take government programs," he said. "That's why you're in this business, and that's why you like to do it.

"But you have to...come to the realization that too many people in too many different commodities and too many different counties have gotten into farming, and decide how to get these horrible surpluses off our back to make farming profitable.... PIK is no solution to anything; PIK is merely the vital and necessary first step."

In Dawson County, PIK promoters are having to deal with an unlikely problem — voluminous winter precipitation, allowing for the possibility of an excellent crop this year.

Stripling watches as 'Golden Boy' loses his glow

EDITOR'S NOTE: The 1930s and '40s were a period of self-examination for America as the fear of communism spread. This is the third of a six-part series on Midlander Robert Stripling's experiences amid this political climate through two decades in Washington. Today's article deals with the Alger Hiss case.

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

It began with a telephone call one morning in 1947.

"Come over to the State Department today at 10 o'clock and hear the communist," said the voice at the other end.

Receiving the call was Robert E. Stripling, counsel and chief investigator of the House Unamerican Activities Committee, whose focus was on communism.

Using the name Mr. White, Stripling slipped into the State Department auditorium along with a group of students from the Foreign Service School at Georgetown University and found a seat. He soon discovered who the communist was when a man announced that Alger Hiss, who had been the scheduled speaker, was detained because of an important conference.

Alger Hiss! A communist? It was a surprise to Stripling.

Hiss was the government's Golden Boy. A Harvard Law School graduate, he had come to Washington as a clerk to Chief Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes. His career took him to the Senate Munitions Committee, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration (AAA) and into the State Department where he held a high position.

Stripling's Washington

part three

"HISS WAS A brilliant man, a golden boy of the New Deal," recalls Stripling. "He exerted tremendous influence on the Department of State. When (Franklin) Roosevelt went to Yalta, Hiss went with him. The United Nations charter was drawn up by Hiss and he was chief organizer of the U.N.'s founding conference at San Francisco."

That phone call led Stripling into one of the most historic cases in America's 20th Century and an eventual rift with a HUAC committee member, Richard M. Nixon.

Now 70 and a retired oilman who splits his time between Midland and California, Stripling attempted to follow that lead on Hiss but ran into a dead end.

He had heard that a man by the name of David Whittaker Chambers had some information on Hiss, but two of Stripling's investigators failed to get it from him.

The investigation on Hiss was dropped until the next year in August when avowed Communist Elizabeth Bentley told HUAC about government employees and spy rings. "After Bentley testified in 1948, it was pretty hot stuff. What she said was pretty shocking. To verify it, I subpoenaed Chambers," Stripling said.

This time, Chambers — a senior editor at Time magazine — appeared in Stripling's office with an attorney and a three-page statement written on yellow tablet paper. "It was absolute dynamite," said Stripling. "It had the names of Alger Hiss and his brother, Donald Hiss."

SHOWN TO MEMBERS of HUAC in executive session, they felt it should be made public record. "So Chambers testified in public and named Hiss" as a communist.

Hiss had left the State Department and was president of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. When Chambers' accusations appeared on the news that night, Hiss called the committee and asked to be heard, recalls Stripling.

"We heard him on a Friday. He came before the committee and put on a great performance, said he'd never heard of Chambers."

Pontiff in impoverished Honduras

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Pope John Paul II came to Central America's most impoverished country today and was greeted by festive thousands who lined streets in native costumes and jostled for a view of the pontiff.

President Roberto Suazo Cordova, who took office in January 1982, knelt before John Paul after the Roman Catholic pontiff kissed the ground in his traditional arrival gesture.

The pope flew to Honduras from Guatemala City aboard a specially fitted Honduran SAHSA airlines Boeing 727 jet.

Tegucigalpa's airport, in a valley surrounded by low hills, has too short a runway to accommodate the papal Alitilia DC-10, which remained in Guatemala during the 10-hour visit.

John Paul is scheduled to return to Guatemala City this evening after celebrating Mass on the outskirts of Tegucigalpa, the capital, and speaking in San Pedro Sula, the country's second largest city.

On Monday in Guatemala City, the pope committed the church to the defense of Latin America's Indian peasants against injustice and rebuked Guatemala's president for ordering six men executed last week.

Disrespect for life, the pope declared in a Mass before 500,000 people in Guatemala City is "a crime and a grave offense against God."

The pontiff delivered a similar message to Guatemala's Protestant president, Gen. Efrain Rios Montt, during a private meeting before the Mass.

"The pope expressed once again his immense pain and his displeasure ... for the recent capital executions carried out in this country as he was preparing to make a pastoral visit to the people of Guatemala," a Vatican spokesman later said.

"He also reiterated his profound suffering for all the victims of violent death."

Last week, Rios Montt ignored a personal plea for mercy from the pope, sending six convicted terrorists to die before a firing squad.

The pope's message, delivered in separate speeches here and in Quezaltenango, 120 miles to the west, amplified central themes of his week in Central America — that the Christian gospel supports social change and that the downtrodden of Latin America don't need Marxist-provoked class war.

In Guatemala, the pope's decision to speak to a multitude of poor Indian peasants was a powerful message in itself. Indians represent 70 percent of the 6 million population here, but whites have the power.

The pope went by helicopter to an airport in Quezaltenango, 7,900 feet high in western Guatemala, to be with hundreds of thousands of impoverished descendants of Mayan tribes.

He told them the church knows "of the discrimination you suffer, the injustice you must put up with, the serious difficulties you have in defending your lands and your rights...."

John Paul pledged that the church will speak out "whenever your dignity as human beings and children of God is violated."

"It wants to be with you — peacefully as the Gospel demands — but with energy and determination.... I solemnly ask government leaders, in the name of the church, for legislation that effectively protects you against abuses and gives you adequate means for your normal development."

And, he added: "I sincerely ask...that no one ever again confuse evangelization with subversion...and that you not let yourselves be manipulated by ideologies that incite you to violence and death."

Canadian monarchists 'vigilant'

TORONTO (AP) — On the arrival of Queen Elizabeth II in Canada, she could be assured that a band of determined monarchists is ever vigilant against any attempt to dislodge this nation from her realm.

"The queen is entrenched as queen of Canada for the foreseeable future," says Gerry Toffoli, chairman of the Toronto branch of the Monarchist League of Canada. "The question is whether she will be treated as the queen of Canada."

Over the past decade, while Canadians put together a formula for bringing their constitution home from Britain — as finally occurred last April — members of the Monarchist League battled what they saw as a plot by Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau's government to write the queen out of Canadian public life.

The campaign climaxed in 1978, when the government was forced to withdraw a proposal it said only codified current constitutional practice. Monarchists said the plan would have left the queen sovereign only when she happened to be on Canadian soil, and would have made the governor-general effectively a head of state, rather than the queen's representative.

A casual observer might question how much of a role the queen plays in Canadian society as it is, beyond lending her name to an expressway here and a hotel there, or dubbing "royal" such institutions as the ballet company in Winnipeg and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

But there is no question the monarch and her family can draw on vast reserves of fascination and warmth among her Canadian subjects. More than 10,000 of them were expected to turn out today for tea in Victoria, British Columbia, when the queen and Prince Philip arrive by yacht following a 10-day tour of the United States.

The monarchists contend that Trudeau's government has been chipping away at the queen's sovereignty for years, replacing her image with maple leaves on many stamps, assigning her duties to the governor-general and eliminating as many symbolic references to royalty or the crown as possible.

"I think they thought the monarchy was just going to fade away," says Arthur Bousfield, editor of Monarchy Canada, the league's quarterly magazine.

The monarchists are full of ideas for raising Elizabeth II's profile as queen of Canada. Toffoli suggests that she should establish a Canadian residence and commit at least five weeks of every year to living in Canada, in a rotation that would also allow three weeks for Australia and one each for New Zealand, the Caribbean nations and the Pacific islands.

"If she lived here, it would make the point that she's not here for a visit," Toffoli says. "She doesn't visit Canada, because it's her country."

In a Monarchy Canada article, Toffoli offered the opinion that Queen Victoria's failure to establish residence in Ireland in the 19th century "was one of the great mistakes of her reign and undoubtedly a factor in Ireland's slide to republicanism."

The Monarchist League claims more than 12,000 members, including plenty of socialists as well as conservatives and many recent immigrants to Canada as well as descendants of the Loyalists who fled the American Revolution.

Toffoli says he believes monarchist sentiment faltered in the 1950s and '60s, when young Canadians "were very taken by the United States" and Britain was fading on the world scene.

Queen Elizabeth II makes plea for international cooperation

SEATTLE (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II made a plea for international cooperation to overcome the "enormous human problems" posed by technology before sailing for Canada on her royal yacht, ending a rain-marred 10-day visit to the United States.

The British queen and her husband, Prince Philip, waved goodbye Monday as the spotlighted Britannia began its cruise toward Vancouver Island and Victoria, the capital of British Columbia.

Earlier, she capped a five-hour whirlwind tour of Seattle with a seven-minute address delivered in a flag-draped basketball stadium at the University of Washington, saying her visit fulfilled a "longstanding ambition" and "will strengthen the friendship between our two nations."

She said last week's visit to California's "Silicon Valley" of computer marvels showed her "the shape of the world economy and therefore the shape of our individual lives, is being changed beyond all recognition.

"With those changes will come enormous human problems," she said, but added, "I am confident that the people of our two countries will be able to transcend them together."

In her brief time in Seattle, the 56-year-old monarch managed to attend a University of Washington convocation, take tea with university officials, visit Children's Orthopedic Hospital and the site of the 1962 World's Fair, attend a reception hosted by Gov. John Spellman and even take a monorail ride.

Committee's probe of Hiss leads to rift with Nixon

Although Hiss was denying everything, Stripling wondered why Chambers would want to lie: "He had a responsible position at Time. He was under oath when he testified and he would be subject to perjury. You could go to the pokey for 10 years for lying. I couldn't understand why he would stick his neck out like that."

The hearing room packed with the media, Stripling listened closely to Hiss' words. "He never did categorically deny anything. He made you think he said he didn't know Chambers. But he always qualified his statement, saying 'Not at this time.'"

Hiss put on a performance, recalls Stripling. "Everybody just laughed like hell, especially about a photograph of Chambers that was given to Hiss. I asked him if he recognized this man. Hiss said that he looks like a lot of people, 'even looks like the chairman of this committee.'"

HUAC CAME OUT OF the hearing looking foolish, and committee members apologized to Hiss. A Washington Post reporter told Stripling the testimony would ruin the committee.

HUAC already was running into opposition from President Truman, who consistently called the committee and its investigations a "red herring."

Stripling wasn't ready to give in. During an executive session following the session with Hiss he had members read testimony taken by court reporters. "I said, 'If you read the cold, hard facts, you'll find Hiss didn't deny anything.' They read it and said, 'You're right.'"

Taking a subcommittee consisting of Richard Nixon of California, John McDowell of New Jersey and F. Edward Hebert of Louisiana to New York, Stripling and the others pressured Chambers for details.

"I want you to tell us everything you know about Hiss, his relationship with his wife, the inside of his house, all the housekeeping details," Stripling remembers telling Chambers. "He sat there and for three to four hours he rattled off all this stuff. It was obvious he knew Hiss real well. I turned the information over to some women on my staff, telling one to check out the cook, another to check out the dog and veterinarian, etc."

Everything checked out, Stripling discovered.

But the one detail that tipped off HUAC to Hiss' association with Chambers came from a little bird.

Next: Nixon tires of investigation and leaves the country.

Farmers learn about 'crop swap'

"There is no guarantee that even though you've got excellent moisture conditions that you're going to make an excellent crop," contended Cunningham, a Garden City native. "I lived around here long enough...to know that it hails out here once in a while. I can guarantee if you sign up in the PIK program, we can guarantee that crop."

Another situation which could lessen PIK participation, he said, is the recent 3-4 cents-a-pound increase on cotton sales. "Let me caution you that the recent price increases that you've been seeing are mainly the result of the Russian sale flurries. To date, the Russians have bought around 200,000 bales...but nobody knows how much they're going to buy or whether they're going to buy any more...the overall supply and demand situation simply does not indicate that these higher prices can be sustained."

Aware that the price increases might keep Texas producers from signing up, the government has established cotton PIK incentives for participants.

"We intentionally made the PIK program provisions attractive in order to try to get high participation," noted Cunningham. "The higher the participation, the quicker we can get supplies down and prices up.... I firmly believe that this program will go a long way toward getting American agriculture back on its feet."

Thai officials set court date for Americans

NAKHON PHANOM, Thailand (AP) — Thai officials today set a court date for Friday for James "Bo" Gritz and four other Americans arrested in connection with their efforts to rescue U.S. prisoners of war they believe are held in communist Laos.

If found guilty, the defendants could be sentenced to up to five years in prison.

Chief Provincial Prosecutor Manoon Sinthop said he set the court appearance for Friday after reviewing a police investigation report.

Gritz and the others are charged with illegal possession of a high-powered radio transmitter and are currently free on bail in this northeastern town on the border of Thailand and Laos.

Gritz and other adventurers infiltrated Laos last fall to hunt for American soldiers still held there. The search was fruitless, and Gritz has refused to confirm accounts that he recently led a second foray into Laos.

Gritz, a 44-year-old former lieutenant colonel with the Green Berets, claims he has obtained the remains of a U.S. serviceman killed in Laos during the Indochina war. He also says he possesses evidence that some Americans are still being held in captivity there eight years after the victory of Communist forces.

One of the five, Lance Edward Trimmer, said in a telephone conversation that Gritz's brother-in-law, Butch Jones, was bringing the remains from Nakhon Phanom to the U.S. Embassy in Bangkok. Jones recently arrived in Thailand from the United States, reportedly carrying some documents for Gritz.

Asked about the alleged remains carried by Jones, a U.S. Embassy official said, "I don't have the slightest idea what he's got."

The prosecutor set bail for the five at $7,000. It was immediately posted by a local landlord who put up a land deed instead of cash.

The landlord, an ethnic Vietnamese named Loh Tharaphant, is reported to be closely associated with the group.

Police raided a house owned by Log on Feb. 13, seized a radio set, and arrested Trimmer and Lynn Standerwick, the daughter of an American serviceman shot down over Laos in 1971.

Eighteen people demonstrated police violence outside Federal Courthouse in Dallas Monday during jury selection for the trial of seven policemen accused of civil rights violations.

Police trial start possible

DALLAS (AP) — A federal judge said he expected opening arguments to begin this afternoon in the trial of seven New Orleans policemen accused of beating residents during a hunt for their comrade's killer.

U.S. District Judge Jerry Buchmeyer said at the close of court Monday that 26 jurors had been qualified for the panel of 12. More than 60 prospective jurors were summoned on the opening day of the trial, moved to Dallas because of extensive publicity in New Orleans.

Buchmeyer asked prospective jurors if they had seen news coverage of the case and if they had seen protestors in front of the courthouse that morning.

The seven officers are accused of beating and terrorizing black residents of the Algiers section of New Orleans while interrogating them about the Nov. 6, 1980, shooting death of white policeman Gregory Neupert.

Four people were killed during a police crackdown in the Algiers section after the slaying of the 23-year old officer.

Three of the four people, including two men accused of killing Neupert, where shot to death during a pair of predawn police raids. The white police officers said James Billy Jr., 26, Reginald Miles, 28, and Miles' girlfriend, Sherry Singleton, 26, died when they tried to shoot it out with police.

Billy's sister, Sharon, Billy, 24, was among the demonstrators Monday who were shouting, "Jail killer cops now," and carrying placards that read, "Citizens of Dallas bring us justice," and "A badge isn't a license to kill."

Speaker Lewis files revised statement

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas House Speaker Gib Lewis has filed his updated financial disclosure statement and says he plans to check statements he's filed in past years.

Lewis said he will "undertake a complete review" of the statements he has submitted to the secretary of state.

Lewis on Monday filed an "addendum" to his 1981 report, which he admitted last week did not disclose his business dealings with a Fort Worth beer distributor and liquor store owners.

"It was not my intent to not disclose any of the required information. I now know it was a serious oversight on my part when I failed to obtain assistance and advice regarding the manner in which the financial statement was to be filled out," Lewis said in a release.

Renovation planned

AUSTIN (AP) — Sen. Roy Blake, D-Nacogdoches, said Monday that plans for renovating the Capitol probably will be made by a special committee after this session and presented to the 1985 Legislature.

Blake said the Senate Administration Committee was revising its plans for care of the Capitol and Mansion since the fire back of the Senate chamber.

Blake said he thought the Capitol renovation plans would be drawn by an interim committee, aided by an expert curator. "A plan needs to be presented the next Legislature," he said.

Woman shoots spouse

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A San Antonio woman has been charged with fatally shooting her estranged husband after reconciliation talks flared into a heated argument, police say.

Rita R. Morales, 53, was released from the Bexar County Jail after posting $5,000 bond Monday morning.

Jose F. Morales, a 45-year-old general contractor, was found sprawled in the living room of her home Sunday night, shot several times in the upper torso with a .357-Magnum pistol, police Sgt. Robert Tart said.

TV preachers chastised

ABILENE (AP) — The leader of the nation's largest Protestant denomination says he has urged television evangelists such as the Rev. Jerry Falwell to stop competing with local churches.

James Draper, president of the Southern Baptist Convention and pastor of the First Baptist Church of Euless, said Monday he believes Christian evangelists should speak out on moral issues but should not endorse political candidates or causes.

The Baptist leader also said television preachers "pass the collection plate too often."

He cited an example of a preacher who told his broadcast audience that God asks only a tithe, or 10 percent of their income, and then told them to "send the 10 percent to me."

"That was not right; the 10 percent belongs to the local church," Draper said.

Watts to be moved

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Confessed mass murderer Coral Eugene Watts, who rubbed hair lotion over his body and tried to escape from prison through a broken window, will be moved to another Texas Department of Corrections unit, officials say.

Bentsen tells environmental view

WASHINGTON (AP) — An agreement with the U.S. Department of Interior that gives Texas administrative control over 19,000 acres on Matagorda Island is "a sound environmental management proposal" that should receive Congressional ratification, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen says.

The Texas Democrat said Monday he has introduced legislation ratifying the agreement, which would shift control of federally-owned wildlife refuge areas.

The agreement, reached on Dec. 8, was challenged in U.S. District Court here by two environmental groups, the Sierra Club and Defenders of Wildlife.

Spending estimate awaited

AUSTIN (AP) — State Comptroller Bob Bullock today delivers to legislators the long-awaited bad news — a new, lower estimate of how much money they can spend.

The second revised revenue estimate of the legislative session is caused by declining oil prices on the international market. Those are expected to bottom out at about $5 a barrel less than the price on Jan. 10, when Bullock delivered his first revised revenue estimate.

Bullock says that for every dollar the international oil price drops, Texas loses about $40 million in revenues.

Because the Texas Constitution prohibits deficit spending, legislators must follow the latest revenue estimate in doling out state funds.

In January, Bullock reduced the estimated state revenues for the two-year spending period by $1 billion. That meant the Legislative Budget Board's $32.9 billion spending plan was $700 million too high.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby predicted the first state tax increase in 12 years, but Gov. Mark White has said he wants to avoid a tax hike in favor of raising fees. White's proposed budget goes to legislators Wednesday.

Lawmakers are faced with reconciling the decreasing revenues with increasing needs.

Deteriorating highways need billions of dollars' worth of work, according to state officials, and Texas prisons are under a court order to stop overcrowding inmates. And teachers, backed by the governor and many legislators, expect at least a 24 percent pay raise, and other educational groups are demanding additional spending for public schools.

The bridge club had been a quiet place of late and the regulars claimed that the absence of Trump Coup Tommy had been the cause. You all remember him, of course — the fellow who could neither bid nor play except when faced with a bad trump break, which transformed him into a master technician.

But that interlude was over, for Trump Coup Tommy was back at the table and soon showing that he had lost (or should we say gained) nothing during his absence. He sat South on this hand, and his side had the opportunity to use one of his favorite conventions. North's jump to four diamonds showed a good six-card diamond suit and four-card spade support. Tommy knew there would be losers in hearts and clubs, so he was content to sign off in four spades. West's reluctance to double was a tribute to Tommy's skill in these situations.

The play did not take long. West led the king of hearts and continued with the ace and another. Tommy sluffed a diamond from dummy and won in hand. When East showed out on the king of spades, Tommy was in seventh heaven.

He crossed to the ace of clubs, then cashed the ace, king of diamonds and ruffed diamond in hand in order to cash the king of clubs. West was now reduced to nothing but trumps. When Tommy led a club, West could not ruff low because dummy would overruff with the eight, so he trumped with the nine. Tommy countered by discarding dummy's last diamond.

West did the best he could by exiting with the jack of trumps. Tommy won the queen in the closed hand and then took the marked finesse of the eight of trumps to land his game. He lost only two hearts and one trump trick!

Honoring Bentsen

With all the bad news these days about politicians, it's refreshing from time to time to see a reminder there still are good, competent public servants around. U.S. Sen. Lloyd M. Bentsen is just such a man.

During the 17th annual Texas Legislative Conference, to be held Thursday and Friday in New Braunfels, Sen. Bentsen will be honored as Texan of the Year. It's an honor Bentsen has earned during more than a decade in the U.S. Senate. He truly deserves the accolade.

Of course there are those unhappy with the senator's record of service. They say he is too liberal for Texas. But they overlook the fact Bentsen has been an effective spokesman for the state and overall has represented the best interests of this nation during his years in Washington, D.C. The senator has long advocated deregulation of the natural gas industry, an issue currently being revived. And Bentsen has worked to reduce the governmental burden on small oil and gas producers and royalty owners.

Bentsen has been at his best on economic matters. He became chairman of the Joint Economic Committee in 1979 and his efforts have been instrumental in giving that body a sense of direction. In this day of economic concern and a growing trend to cut back on the cost of government, it is vital to have public servants like Lloyd Bentsen on the national front to help conserve tax dollars and to get the most out of every dollar expended.

We join with all Texans in extending a hearty congratulations to Sen. Bentsen for a job well done, recognized through this citation.

Good show, judge

One of the best things the United States Supreme Court has done in recent months is to give the nation's courts more effective weapons for grappling with drunk driver cases. It did so by handing down a ruling stating that a driver's refusal to take a blood alcohol test for intoxication could be used as evidence against defendants.

This blow for greater highway safety was struck by seven of nine judges, with Associate Justice Sandra Day O'Connor writing the decision. She and her colleagues deserve credit for contributing to the national campaign to cut down on the killings and maimings caused by motorists who have downed too many drinks for the road.

The case grew out of a South Dakota Supreme Court decision that went in the other direction. The Dakota justices felt that admission as evidence at a trial that a driver refused to take an alcohol test violated both state and federal constitutional privileges against self-incrimination.

The nation's highest court felt otherwise, however.

No one wants to strip away the appropriate legal rights of American citizens, defending themselves against crimes, including charges of driving while drunk. But let us not forget the rights of those whose lives are threatened each year by tons of steel driven by those whose senses are fuzzed up by booze. It was those rights that Judge O'Connor and her honorable associates remembered as they handed down a decree that adds to the nation's ability to cope with motorists whose behavior turns their cars into vehicles of death and destruction.

Another View:

The untouchables

Practicing a double standard, Congress exempts itself from many laws it compels the rest of us to obey under penalty of fine, imprisonment or both.

The Labor Relations Act, requiring recognition of unions and protection of workers from unfair labor practices, is just one of several laws Congress doesn't obey.

A man who has worked 21 years in the Senate cafeteria and makes $13,000 a year was instrumental in forming the Capitol Employees Organizing Group. He succeeded in getting 60 percent of his co-workers to join. The Senate, however, refuses to recognize the group.

House restaurant employees make $3.65 an hour; Senate restaurant workers make $4.59 an hour. You'd think it would be the reverse because there are 10 times more representatives than senators. Many employees do not get overtime although they are expected to work as late as the House remains in session.

Congress is also exempt from the Civil Rights Act of 1964, which bans discrimination on the basis of race, color, religion, sex or national origin.

Members who back the exemptions say that Congress is a political institution that could not function if its 535 members couldn't select staffs and supporting personnel on the basis of political need. They hold that if a Polish-American legislator from a Polish-American district wants to hire only Polish-Americans, he has the right to do so.

But what if an Irish-American with a business in an Irish-American section of Boston wants to hire only Irish-Americans? He would be labeled a racist and a bigot and could be taken to court. Why? Because he isn't a congressman and only Congress is untouched by the law.

Congressional exemption from federal law is based on Art. I, Sec. 6 of the Constitution, which says of federal lawmakers: "For any speech or debate in either House, they shall not be questioned in any other place." The courts have interpreted this to mean that members cannot be questioned about their personal hiring or about the general hiring of congressional employees.

Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., thinks this situation is a mockery of the liberal element of his party, which claims to be concerned with civil and working class rights. Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., said, "I think we ought to comply with the same rules we impose on everyone else."

We doubt if Congress will vote to eliminate any of its privileges unless a strong grass-roots protest forces it to. But it would be nice if our federal lawmakers stopped making new rules for us — but not them — to obey. Nice, but not likely.

'84 offering looks like Bush, Askew

Speculation about President Reagan's political future has begun in earnest and I might as well toss my own guesses into the pot. I think he has already decided not to run for re-election and to annoint, as best he can, George Bush as his successor.

Charley Reese

The president has remarkably good health, but he will be 74 and that's old. He has not shown the compulsion to remain in the public eye that afflicts some politicians. He seems already satisfied with his efforts regardless of how others may regard them.

More importantly, Mrs. Reagan, unlike her predecessor, seems motivated by concern for her husband rather than a desire to be first lady. I suspect she is counseling him to quit while he is ahead physically and can enjoy his retirement.

If the president were the ideologue his liberal opponents paint him, he probably would seek a second term, but it is clear that for all his rhetoric, Mr. Reagan is an old-fashioned compromiser and pragmatist. He had no desire to impose a world view on the government, he only wanted to tinker with the mechanics of it.

Furthermore, if Reagan had decided to run again, he would have said so. There is no advantage to being coy if you're a first-term incumbent who wants a second term. There is an advantage in announcing your intention to run again early.

From that we can infer that either he has not made a decision or has made a decision to retire. The reason I think he has chosen retirement is that he has begun to push George Bush into the public limelight.

He sent Mr. Bush to Europe on an important and highly visible mission to soothe the Europeans about our arms control positions and then spent five paragraphs of a major foreign policy address saying what a great job Mr. Bush did.

The best thing he can do to help Mr. Bush get the Republican nomination is to delay announcing his own intentions. A vice president already has a running leap on the competition. By not announcing his intentions, Mr. Reagan keeps those potential competitors from getting their campaigns underway.

The game plan then is to push Mr. Bush to the forefront and sabotage his opponents by delaying as long as possible the announcement of Mr. Reagan's intentions. With the exception of Sen. Howard Baker, none of Mr. Bush's likely competitors is acceptable to the silk stocking establishment.

The establishment's strategy has always been to have a horse carrying their colors on both the Democratic and the Republican sides. That way no matter how we vote they win. The silk stocking boys are not always successful in that scheme and when they fail to have both sides covered, they gang up on the non-establishment candidate. In 1964 that was Barry Goldwater and in 1972 it was George McGovern. Both lost by landslides.

In 1980, once they had coupled Bush to Reagan, they rested easily. Their strategy paid off. What we have in the White House is a Bush administration for which Reagan is the spokesman.

The president doesn't seem to grasp this, but the key people all around him are not conservative Republicans but liberal Republicans who opposed him and his policies in the past.

A lot of things can happen before 1984, but just for the fun of sticking my neck way out on a limb, I'll bet that the choice in 1984 will be between Reubin Askew, Florida's former governor, and Bush. Both men will offer you the same program, though dressed in slightly different rhetoric: adapting America to the new world economic order.

Once more the American people will be offered what is billed as a new direction but what they will end up with is the same direction and the same policies that have guided us since World War II.

Make a note of this far-out prediction and let's see if I'm right or wrong. I'm certainly not infallible, but I've observed that you seldom lose if you bet on the horses backed by the big money boys and at this point that looks like Askew and Bush.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Evidence says conference 'rigged'

WASHINGTON — Secret evidence has been gathered that the White House rigged its Conference on Aging in late 1981 — an event that had an impact on the national Social Security debate.

Jack Anderson

It was a defensive damage-control operation, intended to keep the conference from becoming a political embarrassment to President Reagan. But the tactics were reminiscent of those used by the Nixon White House to manipulate the press and influence public opinion.

Some participants in the conference complained that it had been packed with Reagan supporters who controlled the outcome. White House officials stoutly denied the charges. But I can now report that the charges not only were true but that the complainants didn't go far enough.

The General Accounting Office has been quietly investigating what happened. My associate Indy Badhwar has seen the sworn testimony and supporting documents, which are locked in secret files. Here are the highlights:

— During the planning stages, every new member of the conference advisory board was OKed by the White House only after lengthy political screening.

— In the late spring of 1981, 400 additional delegates were appointed. Most were chosen from Reagan campaign donor lists and other politically oriented sources.

— On demand, conference officials surrendered a complete list of delegates in advance to the Republican National Committee, whose top officials were in constant contact with the conference staff. They even used code names for their phone calls.

— A hush-hush telephone bank was installed at conference headquarters to poll potential delegates and predict "how much of a political embarrassment the conference was going to be to the president." According to sworn testimony, White House volunteers asked questions carefully designed to "get a handle on the ideology of the delegates to determine the actual political climate of the conference."

— The telephone polling of the delegates was to be kept secret from conference staff people. The rooms were kept locked and had only one entrance — through a top executives' office. In the reception room in front of these phone rooms was a one-way masking tape on the floor in front of a desk. The tape marked the line which "no one but the conference staff should cross unless specially escorted by a member of the Delegate Services staff."

On Oct. 2, after the first protests about the politicization of the conference, an emergency staff meeting was called. When the participants returned to their offices, they found "a team of men dressed in dark worksuits who were changing the locks on all the doors." One staff member testified that they were sent home early, and added: "We were not allowed to go back to our offices to get our personal belongings. Our purses had been brought to the outer office."

— A member of the work team described himself as part of the White House security force. Yet the conference was supposedly an autonomous operation.

— When the conference staff returned to work the next Monday, they discovered that sensitive political files had disappeared. Shortly thereafter, a senior "political consultant" was assigned to the conference staff by the White House.

Footnote: The White House's manipulative precautions — and even more dubious tactics employed during the conference itself — failed to intimidate the delegates. I will publish more details in a future column.

OUT OF HIS OWN MOUTH: A secret FBI wiretap adds weight to charges that Teamsters Union President Roy Williams had close ties to Kansas City mobster Nick Civella. Williams confirmed the charges in his own words as the FBI listened.

A transcript of the bugged conversations is included in an FBI affidavit dated July 26, 1979. According to a portion of that affidavit, the transcript "concerned a trip that took place the previous May. Present were Williams, Teamsters financier Allen Dorfman, Nevada attorney Morris Shenker and two union pension fund trustees."

Williams, Dorfman and the two trustees were convicted in an unsuccessful attempt to bribe former Sen. Howard Cannon, D-Nev. Dorfman was subsequently murdered.

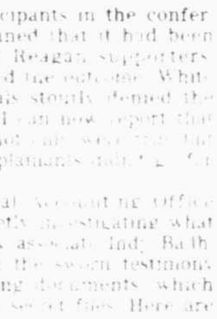
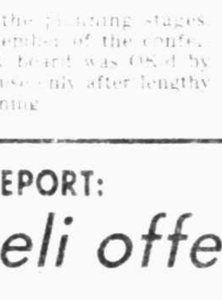
INSIDE REPORT:

Israeli offensive raising questions

WASHINGTON — Israel is using its unmatched influence on Capitol Hill to persuade critics of Zaire's President Mobutu to vote the full $20 million in military aid asked by President Reagan, a unique thrust into U.S. politics designed to further Israel's diplomatic offensive in Africa but potentially unsettling to U.S. security interests.



Rowland Evans



Robert Novak

The thrust may rescue Zaire's aid package, deeply endangered by years of accumulated congressional resentment toward corruption in the strategic, mineral-rich nation that was the Belgian Congo of colonial days. Why should Israel lobby for another country?

Intelligence specialists who deal with Africa told us an Israeli cleanup of Mobutu's tarnished reputation in Congress was the price offered in return for Zaire's diplomatic recognition of Israel last May.

Beyond mere recognition, Jerusalem has in mind broad political and economic inroads in black Africa, where most diplomatic contacts with Israel ended after the six-day war of 1967. If successful with its Zaire account, Israel is likely to broker aid favors for other pariahs on the congressional hit list to enhance its influence. Israel has been quietly pressing administration officials — particularly in the Pentagon and CIA — to relax present U.S. strictures against Ethiopia, Iran and even the Central African Republic.

The unusual prospect of Israel serving as the secret Washington attorney for such clients makes some high officials in the administration worry that the Begin government may use its influence in ways that threaten President Reagan's national security policies. Whether or not such worries are justified, the reality of any foreign government with such influence on Capitol Hill can be disquieting.

President Mobutu's need for help in getting his embattled aid program through Congress was obvious to then-Defense Minister Ariel Sharon long before he went to Kinshasa last year to seal the deal for re-establishing diplomatic relations (which includes Israeli training of Mobutu's presidential guard).

Mobutu has been harshly criticized by members of Congress across the board ideologically for personal and official corruption, the criticism coming from such pro-Israeli lawmakers as New York's liberal Democratic representative Steven Solarz and conservative Republican representative Jack Kemp. Aid to Zaire has been earmarked for heavy congressional surgery that could prove fatal to Mobutu, considering the importance to him of preserving the American tie both for his international standing and his domestic power. Sharon and Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir undertook to strengthen Zaire's bridge to Washington, something beyond Mobutu's capability.

In pushing the overall U.S. aid program (including the Zaire package), Israel safeguards its own aid interests. Congress again this year intends to raise Israel's military grant aid, this time by $300 million over Reagan's request. Both Israel and its congressional allies have been worried that reducing aid to other countries while the Jewish state gets more could backfire.

But the Zaire connection promises much richer rewards for Israel: an intelligence listening post in the center of black Africa (Zaire borders nine countries); a foothold for economic dealings in strategic minerals of immense value; a break in the anti-Israel chain stretched across black and Moslem Africa 16 years ago.

Ramifications of Israel's Zaire connection are beginning to be felt in congressional committees handling the annual aid package — such as the House Appropriations subcommittee on foreign operations headed by Rep. Clarence (Doc) Long of Maryland. Long told us his subcommittee has received a specific request from Israel — but "not directly" — to give Mobutu the full military aid Reagan wants.

"I was a little surprised," Long said. "I'm a good friend of Israel but I would feel perfectly free to vote down aid for Zaire even if Israel wants us to give it." But such staunch pro-Israeli congressmen as Solarz concede that the Zaire package is being helped. "Israel's support is certainly going to be a factor in Congress," he told us.

"They never asked us about playing Zaire's champion," one official complained to us about Israel's new role. But not all officials are uncharitable. One State Department policymaker regards Israel's support for Zaire aid as a "godsend," adding: "Without Israel, Zaire won't stand a chance." Beyond Zaire, Israeli support for the overall military and economic aid program Reagan wants this year from a parsimonious Congress may be indispensable, this official told us, because "without Israel, we'd be dead."

Herein grows a persistent split at the top of the administration and in the permanent national security bureaucracy over short-term and long-term implications of Israel's new role as champion of outcast countries. Short-term, Israel's weight could be decisive in rescuing Reagan's aid plan. Long-term, Israel playing its diplomatic offensive in the corridors of Capitol Hill is an exercise of domestic political power by a foreign nation that poses more questions than it answers.

Alcohol abuse among trainmen is problem

WASHINGTON (AP) — A mile-long freight train derailed last September in rural Louisiana, setting off chemical explosions and forcing 3,000 people from their homes. Later a hitchhiking clerk said she was at the controls because the crew had been drinking.

While the derailment may have had a variety of causes, it clearly highlighted the railroad industry's long-standing problem with alcohol.

Moving to deal with the problem, the Transportation Department is planning regulations to curb alcohol abuse by trainmen.

"The problem deserves immediate attention," declared Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole, saying a proposal aimed at developing new anti-alcohol regulations "is in the final stages of review."

Since the Louisiana derailment, there have been other signs of how widespread the alcohol problem is within the railroad industry:

—In Arkansas, a train plowed into another freight killing the engineer and brakeman. Tests revealed the engineer had alcohol in his stomach showing he had been either drinking on the job or shortly before reporting to work.

—In Washington D.C., an engineer of a packed commuter train was ordered from the locomotive shortly before departure after a passenger complained he appeared drunk. The engineer had a blood alcohol level twice what is considered legally drunk in most states.

While many railroads have embarked on rehabilitation programs and imposed tough penalties, including dismissals, for drinking while on duty, engineers are believed by rail safety experts to be using liquor, marijuana or amphetamines with increasing frequency.

And federal safety officials said the administration's proposal, developed in cooperation with the railroad industry and rail labor unions, may not go far enough.

The National Transportation Safety Board on Monday urged that locomotive engineers, brakemen and other key employees on a train be required to abstain from drinking alcoholic beverages for a certain period, perhaps eight hours, before reporting to duty — just as airline pilots are required to do.

At the same time the NTSB recommended that railroads be required to perform toxicological tests on crew members immediately after an accident and be required to report all incidents involving alcohol or drugs.

Such regulations are "clearly vital to public safety," said board chairman Jim Burnett, warning that a major catastrophe could easily result since railroads carry large volumes of hazardous materials.

Transportation Department officials said privately, however, they doubt the regulations under consideration would go as far as the NTSB recommends.

"The problem is one of effectiveness," said one high-ranking Federal Railroad Administration official. "Just making...a federal regulation is no more than just saying you should not drink on the highways."

The problem, said this official, who spoke under the condition that he not be identified by name, is that railroad crews often work with little direct supervision. Federal regulations would be hard to enforce without cooperation of both labor and management, he continued.

For years, the railroads have had a clear prohibition against being drunk while on duty. But drinking by trainmen has not abated as crew members tended to protect those who have had too much to drink, according to industry and government officials.

Several years ago, the Southern Pacific Railroad ordered Breathalyzer tests on its crews, raising such a protest that the engineers went on strike. An arbitrator said the railroad had gone beyond its bounds.

Last June, Robert W. Blanchette, the federal railroad administrator, warned the industry that if it does not produce a workable plan, the government would issue regulations on its own.

As a result, the railroads and the union suggested a federal regulation requiring crew members to certify that to the best of their knowledge none of the crew members are under the influence of alcohol or drugs.

The Transportation Department is said to be leaning toward that approach in its proposed regulation. One advantage is that each crew member would know that he could be made liable if another crew members is found intoxicated, said one administration official.

"It is essential," said Mrs. Dole in a statement, "that labor and management work together on a practical, workable solution to the problem that can be implemented quickly."

House expected to pass nuclear freeze proposal

Freeze opponents request document declassification

WASHINGTON (AP) — As a House panel considers a nuclear freeze proposal, opponents are urging President Reagan to help their case by releasing classified documents they say will show the threat posed by the Soviet military.

Both supporters and opponents of the freeze planned demonstrations outside the Capitol today as the House Foreign Affairs Committee took up a freeze resolution six months after a similiar measure failed by two votes.

Rep. Edward Markey, D-Mass., who lined up 173 co-sponsors for the resolution, said he expects it to win approval both in the committee and when it comes to a vote in the Democrat-controlled House, probably next week.

On Aug. 5, the House rejected a freeze resolution, 204-202. Markey, however, said enough freeze supporters were elected last November to assure passage this time around.

The resolution calls on the United States and the Soviet Union to discuss "when and how to achieve a mutual verifiable freeze on the testing, production and further deployment of nuclear warheads, missiles and other delivery systems."

Sens. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., have introduced a freeze resolution in the Republican-controlled Senate, where a similar measure failed to reach a vote last year. They have 34 co-sponsors.

Meanwhile, White House spokesmen said President Reagan would consider a request from one group of freeze opponents that he declassify government documents on Soviet strength. Representatives of the National Coalition for Peace Through Strength met with Reagan at the White House on Monday.

Bob Sims, a spokesman for National Security Adviser William Clark, said Reagan would meet with Clark and Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger today "about what can be said about the Soviet military capability."

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said the president probably would agree to declassify some documents if it was "consistent with our intelligence needs." He expressed concern, however, that complete disclosure might reveal intelligence sources.

Rep. William Dickinson, R-Ala., the senior Republican on the House Armed Services Committee and a member of the delegation that met with Reagan, said:

"If the American people know what the true facts are, the threat that we're faced with, the capacity that the Soviet Union has ... they will make the right decision."

Dickinson said information on the accuracy of Soviet ICBMs was an example of the kind of thing that should be declassified.

"I'll tell you right now — I'll declassify it — nobody else has: they (Soviets) have a better accuracy with their SS-18 than we do with our Minuteman III. Substantially," he said.

A student volunteer at Indiana University draws a vial of measles and rubella vaccine during a mass immunization drive. IU is experiencing a measles epidemic.

Measles epidemic hits university

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — A measles epidemic at Indiana University has infected up to 320 people, and health officials say the outbreak is so serious that nonimmunized students may be barred from campus after spring break.

State Health Commissioner Ronald G. Blankenbaker said Monday that 170 cases of measles at the school have been confirmed since mid-January, with another 150 cases suspected.

A mass inoculation program has been ordered at the southern Indiana campus, and 13,000 of the university's 32,000 students were immunized by Monday, he said.

The free immunizations against the rubeola, or "old-fashioned measles," were being continued at a rate of about 175 per hour, college officials said.

But Blankenbaker said that unless more students are inoculated, officials may be forced to ban nonimmunized students from returning to campus after spring break, which begins this weekend.

"These are indeed drastic measures and unprecedented in Indiana," said Blankenbaker, speaking at a news conference in Indianapolis.

"However, the desire is not to prevent students from attending college, but to guarantee that they, and those who associate with them, are adequately protected from a disease which is capable of killing one in every 1,000 persons who contract it."

The federal Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta expressed concern last week that measles cases at the university would threaten the families of students who disperse for spring break.

Harrelson found guilty of lying to grand jury

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — The wife of the convicted killer of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood has been found guilty of lying to a grand jury about the purchase of the rifle used in the slaying.

Jo Ann Harrelson, wife of Charles V. Harrelson, was convicted Monday of lying in her testimony about the purchase of a .240-caliber Weatherby used to kill Wood in San Antonio, Texas, on May 29, 1979.

Sentencing was postponed for Mrs. Harrelson, already convicted of obstructing justice and using a false name to buy the murder weapon. Her husband has been convicted of murder, murder conspiracy and obstructing justice in Wood's death.

Farm protester released from jail

LONDON, Ohio (AP) — A farm protester who fought unsuccessfully to save his 191-acre farm from a sheriff's auction was ordered released from jail after he filed for protection from his creditors.

Doug Dailey, 37, was freed from Madison County jail Monday after a county judge issued a stay of proceedings.

Dailey, who owes the Columbus Production Credit Association about $400,000, had been jailed Jan. 28 for failing to provide records to the association. He said he decided to file for bankruptcy when the association began trying to take his farm machinery to cover some of his debts.

Grandmother coerces girls into sex

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Police say rumors led them to a grandmother who allegedly lured men to her apartment and coerced her two young granddaughters to have sex with them for money.

Martha Lee Saunders, 44, pleaded innocent Monday to three counts of exploiting minors for commercial and immoral purposes and was released on $15,000 bail.

"The grandmother needed the money. She would bring men to her house and the girls would have sex with them," said Detective Lt. Bernard E. Gannon of the city police department's Special Operations Unit.

The two girls, ages 10 and 13, were placed in foster homes Jan. 12.

Senator accused of food stamp fraud

BALTIMORE (AP) — A state senator facing charges of conspiracy and food stamp fraud says he won't resign his seat.

Tommie Broadwater, a 41-year-old Democrat, was released on his own recognizance Monday after being arraigned on the charges of conspiracy and illegally possessing more than $46,000 in food stamps. A taxi driver and two Washington D.C. undertakers were also charged.

A prosecutors' affidavit said the charges stemmed from the sale since January of $46,050 in food stamps for about 40 percent of their face value.

It really rains on students' parade

FALLS CHURCH, Va. (AP) — The Jaguar Marching Band, the pride of Falls Church High School, knows now the meaning of the adage, "When it rains, it pours."

First it rained on the parade, depriving the band of its chance to march down Constitution Ave. in Washington on Feb. 2 to celebrate the Redskins' National Football League Superbowl victory.

To make things worse, as the 140 students stood in the downpour waiting in vain for the signal to march, the yellow plumes atop their hats began wilting.

Some musicians tried to stash the plumes in their pockets, and the yellow dye leaked onto their green coats.

Later, the students discovered their wool uniforms had shrunk.

"The whole uniforms are just ruined," said Anne Coldiron, who instructs the band's rifle and flag team. "They look just horrible."

Man tries suicide after son dies

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — A man convicted of selling his two infant sons tried to commit suicide after his "brain-dead" older boy died of injuries suffered in a foster home, authorities say.

Miguel Angel Ocasio, 28, convicted along with his wife, Luce Milda, 21, of selling the children for $300 each last June, attempted suicide late Monday by swallowing rat poison.

Their son, 2-year-old Oscar, died around 10 p.m. Monday after being disconnected from a respirator at Lee Memorial Hospital, said Leonard Liszewski, a court-appointed attorney for the parents.

Liszewski said he rushed to the hospital after learning of the suicide attempt, but did not ask Ocasio's motives.

"How do you talk to someone who just tried to kill himself?" Liszewski asked. "It's obviously the situation. We've just got one tragedy after another. Hopefully, this is the last one."

Ocasio is serving a one-year jail term for the child-sale conviction, but was released temporarily to decide with his wife — who was sentenced to five years' probation — whether the child's respirator should be shut off.

Oscar "had basically been brain-dead since admission to the hospital March 1," Lee County Medical Examiner Dr. Wally Graves told The Associated Press after completing an autopsy.

"It's my understanding they were waiting for both parents to see the child and to agree that artificial means of life support be terminated," Graves said. "I assume they pulled the plug sometime midmorning."

Later Monday, the elder Ocasio entered the hospital after he ate rat poison in an upstairs room of an apartment near the Fort Myers home he used to rent, said Fort Myers Patrolman Joseph Zublick.

Ocasio was treated at Lee Memorial Hospital and transfered Monday night to the Lee Mental Health Center.

Lee County sheriff's deputies are investigating the accident last week in which the foster mother told police Oscar fell and hit his head on the floor.

He also suffered a broken arm and was scalded by hot water in previous accidents at the foster home, officials said.

Authorities would not release the names of the foster parents.

The father had been released Sunday from Lee County Jail and was to return to jail after the child's funeral.

Man buys dynamite used van

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A man who purchased a used Volkswagen van found 80 pounds of dynamite inside and called police because "he wanted to know what to do," officers said.

Police cleared traffic from eight surrounding blocks in the San Fernando Valley, evacuated 15 nearby houses, moved the van to the middle of the street and burned it.

Los Angeles police units were dispatched Monday to a used car lot near the small, private Whiteman Air Park after the unidentified purchaser reported finding the case of dynamite, said Sgt. Jack Ahrens.

"Nobody knew where it came from," Ahrens said of the explosive, which he characterized as old and unstable.

The police bomb squad was summoned and officers halted traffic near the airport.

PLO leader Yasser Arafat and Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi arrive for the conference of non-aligned nations, being held in New Delhi.

U.N. leader addresses conference

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar expressed dismay today at the lack of progress toward independence for South-West Africa, and indicated the Reagan administration's policies toward South Africa are partly to blame.

"The delay in the realization of the plan is a cause of great disappointment and increasing dangers to the peace and stability of the region," Perez de Cuellar told a conference of non-aligned nations here.

He said the United Nations has a special responsibility to help negotiate independence for the territory.

Last year the United States and four other Western nations actively negotiated a U.N.-backed proposal for independence for South-West Africa, also called Namibia.

But the talks stagnated after the Reagan administration backed a South African demand that neighboring Angola send all its Cuban troops home before South Africa withdraws from the uranium-rich territory.

"I would consider it most unfortunate if at this late stage the process leading to the independence of Namibia were to be impeded by issues extraneous to the question itself," Perez de Cuellar said in an apparent reference to the U.S.-backed linkage attempt.

South Africa rules the territory under a 1920 League of Nations mandate that the U.N. General Assembly revoked in 1966. Black guerrillas of the South-West African People's Organization have been fighting to oust the white South Africans for more than 16 years.

Perez de Cuellar said he conferred last month with leaders of nine African states and SWAPO.

He said he was impressed with their unanimous insistence on a Security Council resolution that would enable Namibia's people "to decide their destiny in a free, fair and democratic manner."

South Africa was denounced in a speech by Mozambique President Samora Machel, who described the apartheid system of segregation as "the Nazism of our times."

Among those in the audience today were more than 70 kings, presidents or heads of government.

The non-aligned movement actually contains 101 members. However, Cambodia's seat is empty becuase of a continuing dispute over who will represent it.

Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi took over the chairmanship for a three-year term Monday. She succeeded Cuban leader Fidel Castro, whose tenure was marked by controversy.

U.S. role urged in Salvadoran talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Saying El Salvador's problems won't be solved by bullets, a spokesman for the nation's Roman Catholic bishops is calling on the Reagan administration to support negotiations to end that country's civil war.

Archbishop James A. Hickey of Washington, D.C. told a congressional panel Monday he was "profoundly disappointed" that the Reagan administration is proposing more military aid and advisers for El Salvador.

"Indeed when parties like the pope and others are urging dialogue and recognition, the policy of the United States seems fixated on military questions," Hickey said.

Meanwhile, Democratic and Republican congressional leaders were to receive a briefing from President Reagan at the White House today on his latest thinking on how best to help the Salvadoran government.

Reagan disclosed last week he wants to send an additional $60 million in military aid to El Salvador this year. A senior presidential aide, Edwin Meese, has suggested nearly doubling, from 55 to 100, the current ceiling on American military advisers.

Hickey, speaking for the U.S. Catholic Conference, an organization of the nation's 300 Catholic bishops, said El Salvador's problems are rooted in decades of social injustice and can only be resolved when the people are given a stake in society and their basic rights are respected.

While he said there may have been some reduction in death squad murders and violence, there can't be any real progress until the injustices are addressed.

Chaps one big step away from nationals

No. 4 rated San Jacinto features high-scoring offense

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

In order for Midland College to gain entrance into the national junior college basketball tournament in Hutchinson, Kan., the Chaparrals will have to defeat San Jacinto in Fort Worth's Wilkerson-Greines Activity Center at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday.

The contest is tagged as a Bi-Regional playoff game, but it is actually a first round play-in tournament game for Hutchinson. Every junior college team has a play-in game every other year. This is a step the Chaps didn't have to face last year when they won the national title.

AND IT proves to be a big extra step this year since Coach Ronnie Arrow's Ravens out of Pasedena are ranked No. 4 in the nation and the No. 4 ranked offensive team in the nation. They own a 30-2 record, having beaten Laredo two out of three times this year. Laredo was the No. 1 ranked team most of the year among junior colleges.

And if it appears to be a big step for the defending national champions, it is an equally big step for the Ravens and Coach Arrow doesn't like the idea of having to meet Midland College in a Bi-Regional game.

"It's totally ridiculous that the state of Texas will be represented by only one team this year," Arrow points out. "I can name six or seven teams in Texas that will be better than most of those who get to the national tournament. It's a real shame that two teams of this caliber have to meet outside of Hutchinson."

Midland College is fresh off three straight Region V tournament victories while San Jacinto defeated Angelina in a best two-of-three Region XIV playoff. "We beat Angelina 89-80 last Tuesday, but had to go into overtime against them Thursday at our place to beat them 77-75. And we were just glad to win that one," Arrow said.

San Jacinto's two losses have come against Jacksonville Baptist and Laredo. "We lost to Jacksonville the second game of the season and we lost to Laredo at their place. However, we beat Laredo twice this year," said Arrow.

"IT'S SOMETHING to play in Laredo. Basketball is the only thing in town with a 29 percent rate of unemployment, the Laredo team is important to the community," Arrow said. "When we played them there, I got a call about five in the afternoon saying that they had started swimming across the border to get to the game. It's really wild down there."

Coach Jerry Stone doesn't like the idea of having to play a Bi-Regional contest either since his team is the defending national champion, but has taken a low key approach about it.

"I don't like it, but we knew this was going to happen when the season started. We knew that there were some great teams in that region and that we would have to play one of them if we got that far," Stone said.

If the Chaps are to regain a national berth, two things will have to fall into place Wednesday. Chester Smith, the 6-7 MC post who won Region V MVP honors, will have to play another great game and the outside shooting of Spud Webb and Nate Bufford will have to be sharp.

The reason is that San Jacinto owns a sky-scraper unit that is averaging 95 points per game. Frank "Spoon" James at 6-8 leads the way with a 19.6 average and Andre Ross at 6-8½ is averaging 17.4 per game.

AS FAR as height, MC is overmatched in this one, but Smith made a name for himself at the national tournament last year by playing every night with taller centers.

But there is even more trouble from San Jacinto since Carey Holland, who stands at 6-7, averages 15.0 and nine rebounds, is also in the lineup with a pair of 6-0 guards Ron Singleton (10.0) and Noland Gibson (12.0). Off the bench, San Jacinto has 6-6 Keith Berry with an 8.0 average.

"After seeing Midland play, I think we may be stronger overall inside, but Smith plays like he is 6-12. Midland is much quicker than we are, and Webb is one of the best guards I've ever seen in junior college." Arrow says.

Smith is coming off a career best shooting performance after hitting 14 of 16 shots from the field for 36 points against McLennan in the Region V finals. Webb and Bufford were both All-Tournament members, so the three main names MC will need Wednesday are playing well.

Jerome Crowe, Ervin Williams and Jackie Phinnessee will all have to go against bigger opponents and they must play well also.

STONE IS naturally concerned about the imposing height of the Ravens, but the Chaps' 5-6 Webb has little regard for what seems to be a big disadvantage for MC.

"From what I hear, San Jacinto is a team with a lot of big guys, but that won't bother this team," Webb said after being named to the All-Tournament team Saturday night in Region V play. "We'll just run and the big guys will get tired. Big guys just can't keep the pace we can. Besides, McLennan was no small team. I don't care who we play anyway. You have to beat them all now."

Birmingham Stallions running back Kenneth Talton gets five yards through the middle as Michigan Panthers nose guard Dave Tipton makes the stop with help from Wes Roberts during United States Football League action Monday night.

Panthers use D to beat Stallions

By The Associated Press

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Coach Jim Stanley had no trouble describing the United States Football League debut of his Michigan Panthers and the Birmingham Stallions, and neither did the 38,352 fans.

"It was a good defensive game first and foremost," Stanley said after the Panthers defeated Birmingham 9-7 on three field goals by Novo Bojovic, two for 49 yards and one for 48.

The hometown fans had only one chance to cheer, when Birmingham quarterback Reggie Collier skirted right end on a bootleg keeper for the game's only touchdown.

Other than that, the most cheering occurred before the kickoff when a parachutist delivered the game ball at midfield.

ALL THE scoring occurred in the first half although Birmingham threatened twice after the intermission. Scott Norwood missed a 27-yard field goal attempt on the first play of the fourth period and later Birmingham drove from its 39 to the Michigan 32 but linebacker Ray Bentley intercepted at the 19.

Bentley was a main reason it was a good defensive game. He had another interception and led his team in tackles with 10.

Linebacker Larry McPherson of Birmingham had 12 tackles and the Stallions' Mike Raines sacked Michigan quarterback Bobby Hebert twice.

"Any win is a good win," Stanley said, calling it "a good football game for both sides."

Coach Rollie Dotsch of Birmingham, however, said, "The disappointment is very severe."

He noted that the Stallions "had several opportunites to win but we failed to take advantage of those opportunities. We will get better. I am confident of that."

Although Collier was the heralded quarterback, Hebert came out better in the air, hitting on 11 of 20 tosses for 131 yards with no interceptions. Collier connected on 6 of 14 for 49 yards and had three picked off. He led Birmingham's runners with 76 yards on 13 carries.

Michigan's Tony Ellis got 74 yards on 20 carries.

The Panthers' No. 1 draft pick, wide receiver Anthony Carter, picked up nine yards on an end-around and returned one punt for 16 yards. He caught no passes.

In the league's other opening games, all on Sunday, it was Boston 21, Tampa Bay 17; Chicago 28, Washington 7; Philadelphia 13, Denver 7; Los Angeles 20, New Jersey 15, and Oakland 24, Arizona 0.

Longhorns' Weltlich seeks no sympathy

AUSTIN (AP) — Bob Weltlich, coach of what is possibly the worst basketball team the University of Texas has ever had, is stunned and disappointed, but he does not want your tears or your sympathy.

All he's asking for is patience.

"This program will be as good as it wants to be. There's no limitation as to how good the basketball program can be," Weltlich said in an interview.

The following night, Baylor, seventh in the Southwest Conference,, whipped last-place Texas by 29 points on the Longhorns' home court, and Weltlich commented, "I'm totally disappointed."

"I haven't ever seen a season like this," said Weltlich in a statement that would qualify him for a Ph.D. in understatement.

Weltlich was hired from Mississippi last March to replace Abe Lemons. In May star center LaSalle Thompson chose to turn pro, part-time starter James Tandy failed to make his grades and transferred, and Weltlich kicked starter Denard Holmes — "a guy who was always creating problems" — off the team. In August, sub guard Tom Douglas quit to concentrate on his studies, and part-time starter Ray Harper transferred.

Weltlich already had enough problems for one year, and the season had not even begun. Texas fans hadn't seen anything yet.

Brett Smith, perhaps the best of several walk-ons, became academically ineligible in December. In January, Weltlich dismissed part-time starter Robert Hughes from the squad, saying merely that it was best for Hughes and the team. Starters Don EHis and Karl Willock and sub James Booker suffered season-ending injuries, and starter Jack Worthington transferred, commenting that the Lord "didn't want me there (at UT)."

Minor injuries hit virtually every remaining scholarship starter, and a call for walk-ons attracted, among others, cheerleader Lance Watson.

But then, many of the walk-ons walked off, some apparently unhappy they were not getting to play enough.

"Walk-ons come to you and they say, 'Coach, I'd do anything to have a chance to play, just be on the team.' About the third day of practice, they wonder why they're not starting, and the fifth day they expect to get on scholarship," said Weltlich.

Texas was so overmatched at guard that the Longhorns often couldn't get the ball across midcourt, with 30-plus turnovers a game a common statistic.

Forward-center Bill Wendlandt, the team's scoring leader, missed 13 consecutive free throws. One SWC player said playing Texas was like playing an intramural game, and another said "we could do pretty much what we wanted."

Season-ticket holders stayed home by the thousands. Coach Eddie Sutton of Arkansas glanced at 12,000 empty seats in Texas' Erwin Center and said, "It looks like the YMCA on a Saturday morning."

Weltlich said school officials decided to report paid attendance, rather than actual attendance, which would reflect a larger crowd. "My feeling is if you have people who buy season tickets and pay to see the game, that's part of the crowd," said Weltlich.

A basketball program that as recently as 1978 had won the National Invitation Tournament championship had hit rock bottom.

"I have no problems with the defections, so to speak," said Weltlich. "The thing that has really been disheartening to me has been the injuries, because the injuries have prevented us from becoming a much better basketball team. I've never seen anything like it. I've never seen the disabling injuries. Those kinds of injuries have really been hard on me."

Some suggested Weltlich's aggressive man-to-man defense might result in more injuries, and he said, "That's so ludicrous it's beyond belief. If that would be the case, all the teams in the Top 20, as hard as they play, would sustain injuries."

"We're not the most talented team in the world," said walk-on guard Doug Moe, a starter averaging under four points a game. "We have no true point guard, no bench, no height.

"If we were doing this bad, and I weren't on the team, I don't know if I'd come to see us," said Moe.

Wendlandt said, "Our (attitude) problem is not before a game. But during a game, the other team will make a little run on us and instead of getting tougher and tightening up on defense, we tend to go 'Uh-oh, here it comes again.'

"It's been hard to find a bright spot this year," said Wendlandt, a junior. "But I'm saving press clippings. I'll be having some paybacks next year."

Weltlich tries to see the bright side of things, although he said in Texas' case, he has to look hard.

"I think of all the things that we've done, if we've done anything well, and obviously our record would indicate we haven't done a lot of things well, I think the underlying theme is the kids have played really hard and have not quit," said the UT coach.

He has eight scholarships to offer for 1983-84, and two high school stars — a California guard and a Texas forward — already have said they will enroll at Texas in the fall. Weltlich, however, says he may not use all eight scholarships.

"I don't have any interest in kids coming here who don't have a chance, because I really am concerned about their future," said Weltlich.

"I don't have any interest in wholesale recruiting — bring them in, roll the ball out, 'You three have made it; you two, we're going to have to get rid of,'" he said.

Even though Texas is mired in the worst season in Longhorn basketball history, and Mississippi — his old school — may make the playoffs, Weltlich says he has no regrets for coming here.

"If I had the same decision to make knowing what I know now, there's be no decision. I'd be here. I thoroughly enjoy it here."

How good can Texas be?

"I only have myself to blame if, in fact, we don't develop this into a top-flight program. I think the long and short of it is, simply, if I don't, I won't be here," Weltlich said. He paused and added, "And I plan to be here."

SMU, Tech to meet in SWC quarterfinals

Mustangs, Raiders struggle to gain narrow victories

By The Associated Press

Southern Methodist and Texas Tech will meet in the Southwest Conference Post-Season Basketball Tournament quarterfinals Thursday night, but there were times in their first-round games that they weren't sure they'd make it.

The Mustangs survived two ice-cold shooting spells and relied on freshman Carl Wright's two free throws and a short jump shot in the final two minutes for a 49-48 victory over Texas.

Texas Tech struggled all the way in Lubbock to nip the Baylor Bears 57-55 and earn a trip to Dallas, where the tournament will be played out in Reunion Arena.

"I thought our guys really came out at the start of the first half ready to play," said Tech coach Gerald Myers. "They wanted to get to the tournament really bad."

IN THE other first round game, Texas Christian's "Killer Frogs" slew the Rice Owls 74-49 and will meet Texas A&M next Thursday at 7 p.m. The SMU-Tech game will follow.

"I think that was the best team game we've played in a long time," said TCU coach Jim Killingsworth. "We ran the offense well, we passed the ball and those are the things we really haven't been doing lately."

The Mustangs, who had finished fourth in the SWC regular season, went almost 13 minutes without without a basket during stretches of the first and second half.

SMU Coach Dave Bliss said the Longhorns' ability to slow the pace — the 45-second shot clock is not being used in tournament games — helped keep Texas in the game.

"The shot clock changed the whole style of play," said Bliss.

SMU GUARD Butch Moore said "The (lack of a) shot clock made all the difference. Texas really made it work for them. They played their game. They outhustled us."

Texas trailed 25-22 at halftime but ripped off 13 consecutive points to start the second half.

SMU, trailing 48-39, scored the last 10 points of the game.

It was the Longhorns' 22nd defeat of the season against six victories, giving the school it worst basketball record ever.

Texas had a chance to win with six seconds to play but Doug Moe's shot bounced away and a tip-in was ruled too late by referee Lynn Shortnacy.

Texas' Carlton Cooper scored a game-high 20 points but missed a vita free throw with 36 seconds to play.

"It will take us awhile to recover from the realization that we aren't playing Thursday night because we feel we should be," said Texas Coach Bob Weltlich.

Brewers using aerobics in training camp routine

By The Associated Press

The Milwaukee Brewers are being put through aerobic exercises as part of their spring training routine, but General Manager Joe McDonald of the St. Louis Cardinals is finding that it takes two to tango where trade rumors are concerned.

Brewers GM Harry Dalton is considering having his team do the aerobic exercises three times a week.

"I think you exercise all muscles more and better," Dalton said Monday after Kathy Borcia of Phoenix, a dance instructor, put the team through a half-hour of the exercises at its Sun City, Ariz., camp. "We'd like to do it three times a week. We're going to see tomorrow (Tuesday) how everyone feels."

Most of the Brewers admitted that the exercises were strenuous, but they got a good reception.

"I kind of like them," said first baseman Cecil Cooper. "It just seemed to go 15 minutes too long."

The American League champs open their exhibition season today against the Chicago Cubs with Pete Vuckovich, Moose Haas, Jerry Augustine and Jamie Easterly scheduled to pitch. Relief pitcher Rollie Fingers, recovering from a torn muscle in his forearm, threw on the sidelines for about 12 minutes Monday and said his arm felt the best it has all spring.

MEANWHILE, OUTFIELDER David Green became the final member of the Cardinals to sign a 1983 contract as rain forced the world champions indoors. The Cards would like to move the 22-year-old Green into a starting role, perhaps by trading veteran right fielder George Hendrick. However, such prospects were described as "slim and none" by Manager Whitey Herzog.

"I'm talking to clubs, but there's nothing hot," McDonald said. "They all have an excess of outfielders."

Elsewhere Atlanta Braves owner Ted Turner says the new five-year, $1-billion television package for major league baseball may have saved Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's job.

"Bowie had a very competent committee working with him on the TV deal, but he had a lot to do with it, too," said Turner, one of five National League owners who voted in November not to renew Kuhn's contract when it expires in August. "This may keep him on the job."

Baseball has signed a $500 million contract with NBC, giving the network half of its television rights for five years beginning in 1984. ABC has the option of matching that $500 million figure for the other half of the package. If ABC does not pick up the option, industry sources say, NBC will put up the additional $500 million to get the entire package.

Montreal Expos outfielder Terry Francona has been benched by Manager Bill Virdon, a victim of his own exuberance. Although his rehabilitation program following major knee surgery is close to successful completion, Francona will not start in the first 10 exhibition games "for his own good," Virdon said.

"We've tried to caution him and warn him to slow down. It seems the only way we can slow him down is to keep him out of some of the games," Virdon said. "He'll continue to work out — he's done everything and more than anyone else here — but we won't start him in games for a while. He's a competitor and gives that little extra in the games."

IN EXHIBITION action, Bill Gullickson and three relievers limited Los Angeles to three hits as the Expos blanked the Dodgers 3-0.

Greg Luzinski doubled with two out in the seventh inning and Ron Kittle singled home pinch-runner Chris Nyman to give the Chicago White Sox a 1-0 victory over the Detroit Tigers as LaMarr Hoyt, Kevin Hickey, Dennis Lamp and Fernando Arroyo combined for a four-hitter.

Rookie center fielder John Shelby had four hits, including a home run and a triple, as the Baltimore Orioles downed the Atlanta Braves 7-3. Shelby also scored three runs, drove in two and stole a base to help the Orioles overcome a 3-0 first-inning deficit.

Lee, MHS home for first time

The Midland Lee Rebels and Midland High Bulldogs will get their first tastes of home town advantage today when they host Lubbock Monterey and Lubbock Coronado starting at 2 p.m.

Lee has the earliest starting time of the two Tall City teams as the Rebels begin doubleheader action at 2 p.m. against Monterey at Lee Field. At 4 p.m. Midland High will host Coronado at Memorial Stadium Field in a single game.

The Rebels are bringing a 3-2 record into today's play while the Bulldogs are looking to improve a 1-4 mark.

On the high school season's opening day, March 1, both Lee and Midland High traveled to Lubbock to play Monterey and Coronado and each team would like to improve on those early performances.

Lee came away with the best record that, 1-1, beating Coronado 10-3 in the opener only to lose 11-0 in the nightcap. The Bulldogs dropped both of their games against Monterrey, 8-4 and 9-5.

The Rebels and Bulldogs will also be home Friday and Saturday when they host Amarillo Tascosa and Monterey in the ninth annual Tournament of Champions at Cubs Stadium.

Palli staggered by win in Samaritan Classic

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Anne-Marie Palli, making a strong comeback on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, admits to being staggered by her triumph in the Samaritan Turquoise LPGA Classic here.

She led throughout the rain-shortened, 54-hole tourney and on Monday finished seven strokes ahead of her nearest competitor.

"I feel like I'm on another planet right now," Palli said after shooting a 5-under-par 68 in the final round of the $150,000 event at the 6,380-yard Arizona Biltmore course.

Palli, a 27-year-old citizen of France, wound up with a 14-under-par 205 over three rounds.

FINISHING A distant second at 212 was Lynn Adams.

Adams, who shot a 71 Monday, said she knew she "was playing for second" after Palli rolled in a 15-foot birdie putt at the 13th hole.

"I saw an exciting game of golf today out of Anne-Marie," Adams said. "Everything she hit was right at the pin. Even if I had hit the shots I should have made, it still wouldn't have been a contest."

Ayako Okamoto fired a hot 4-under 69 in the last round to trail Adams by only two strokes.

Going into the tourney, which was scheduled to start Thursday but was delayed by rain until Friday, Palli was planning to follow up the competition with a visit home to France to see her parents.

But her $22,500 first prize will allow her to buy plane tickets for her parents to visit the United States, she said.

"I hope they come for the (Nabisco) Dinah Shore (Invitational)," she said. Palli's triumph here qualifies her for the March 31-April 3 event.

IT WAS only two years ago that Palli's poor performance caused her to be dropped from the LPGA tour two years after she signed on.

"I couldn't seem to do anything right," she said. "I had lost everything that I had going for me in France."

She credits golf teaching pro Ed Oldfield, who winters in Phoenix, with helping her to get her game back on track.

"This could be just the start for her," Oldfield said. "She's got all the physical tools, and she's always had the confidence that she could win."

Pat Bradley, who won the Mazda Classic in Deerfield Beach, Fla., the tour's opening tournament of 1983, and Janet Anderson, tied for fourth at 215.

Vicki Fergon and Chris Johnson, tied for third place at 4-under-par after two rounds, couldn't keep up the pace Monday. Johnson slipped into a fifth-place tie with four others — all with 216s — and Fergon scored a 217 for a sixth-place tie.

Iowa No. 1 as NCAA wrestling draws near

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Iowa took the No. 1 wrestling ranking from Oklahoma State as the country's best wrestlers prepare for the NCAA championships this week.

The Cowboys had held the top spot awarded by Amateur Wrestling News for 10 weeks after beating Iowa 27-23 on Dec. 18 but fell to second this week.

The new rankings mean Iowa, winner of five straight titles in the National Collegiate Athletic Association, goes into the national championships rated first for the eighth straight year.

Oklahoma also fell from third to fourth, switching places with Iowa State. Nebraska moved up from sixth to fifth in the final rankings.

"I did the top eight individual rankings first, and from those it was obvious that Iowa has to be favored," said Ron Good, editor of the amateur wrestling magazine.

"Going by the NCAA tournament point totals, Iowa had something like 120 points to Oklahoma State's 90. That's a 30-point spread right there," he said.

"Iowa just has more weapons than OSU does. OSU has too many weak weights where they're not going to score much."

Oklahoma State was the last team to be ranked first, besides Iowa, going into the national tournament, which this year starts Thursday. That was in 1975.

In the final rankings, nine of Iowa's 10 wrestlers are rated among the top eight in their weight classes. Oklahoma State has seven ranked wrestlers, followed by Iowa State with six, Oklahoma with five and Nebraska with four.

Iowa and Oklahoma State each have three first-ranked wrestlers. Iowa State and Oklahoma have one apiece. The two remaining No. 1 athletes are from Lehigh and Missouri.

Washington State upsets UCLA, 70-68

Unranked Cougars keep Bruins from clinching title

COLLEGE BASKETBALL

By The Associated Press

The Washington State Cougars don't get much respect. They aren't in this week's Top Twenty despite a gaudy 21-5 record.

And up there in Pullman, Wash., just eight miles from the Idaho border, they don't get many headlines, either.

But the Cougars of the Palouse — that area between the moist forests of the Rockies and the dry scablands of Washington — are 22-5 today after preventing fourth-ranked UCLA from clinching the Pacific-10 basketball crown by upsetting the Bruins 70-68 Monday night on sophomore Bryan Pollard's tip-in at the buzzer.

"Sooner or later, those LA writers will realize we have some talent," said WSU Coach George Raveling. "It wasn't the most thrilling win for me, but 20 years from now when I'm sitting around somewhere, I'll remember it."

Washington State led 68-64 on a pair of dunks by Pollard, but two jumpers by UCLA'a Rod Foster tied the score at 68 with 39 seconds left to play.

The Cougars let the clock run down to five seconds before calling a timeout.UCLA knocked the ball out of bounds on the first throw-in, but the Cougars finally got it in to Chris Winkler, who missed a shot from the baseline and Pollard tipped the ball in at the buzzer.

"At the end, with three seconds left, we didn't have much recourse. I just told Winkler to go to the ball and shoot," Raveling said.

Pollard scored 21 points and grabbed 10 rebounds, but UCLA's Foster led all scorers with 26 points. Washington State kept its Pac-10 title hopes alive with a 14-3 record, just behind UCLA's 14-2. The Bruins are 22-4 overall.

The triumph, the Cougars' 16th straight in Friel Court, sent a school-record 12,422 fans into delirium.

"I've heard the WSU crowd this loud before. They get sky-high for us," said UCLA Coach Larry Farmer. "Their fans really get up for the Bruins and George really does a good job of getting the fans behind the team."

IN THE only other game involving a member of The Associated Press Top Twenty, Patrick Ewing and David Wingate keyed a second-half explosion to lead 15th-ranked Georgetown University past No.20 Syracuse 80-75 at Landover, Md., in a preview of Thursday's Big East Conference tournament matchup.Georgetown, 21-8 overall and 11-5 in the Big East, will meet Syracuse, 19-8 and 9-7, in the first round of the conference tournament in New York.

Wingate scored seven points in the first four minutes of the second half as Georgetown turned a 38-30 halftime deficit into a 46-42 lead.Ewing, who led all scorers with 26 points, controlled the boards, scored four points and blocked two shots during the streak. He finished the game with 14 rebounds and four blocks.

The Orangemen were hampered by the absence of forward Tony Bruin, who was out with a sprained ankle. Bruin is expected to be ready for the tournament. Erich Santifer, the team's high scorer, was slowed by a sprained wrist and scored only six points.Andre Hawkins led the Orangemen with 15.

"I'm pleased as I can be with what went on out there, but there are still a lot of things we do inconsistently," said Georgetown Coach John Thompson. "We've got to play with more consistency because in tournament play one letdown and it's a summer vacation. It's not an advantage to play a team twice in a season and beat them and play them again. Everyone knows the big game is Thursday."

For Syracuse Coach Jim Boeheim, the defeat, following an upset loss to Connecticut last week, was especially hard to swallow.

"I'm very disappointed," he said. "Not only in the way we played, but with the lack of intelligence we showed. You don't win games by taking the ball inside and trying to shoot over Ewing."

At South Bend, Ind., John Paxson scored 20 points to power Notre Dame over Dayton 53-41 in a battle between two independents struggling for a berth in the NCAA Tournament.

At Cedar Falls, Iowa, Brent Carmichael scored 22 points as Northern Iowa knocked Southwest Missouri out of first place in the Association of Mid-Continent Universities Conference 66-60.Northern Iowa never led until Carmichael scored to make it 48-46 with 8:42 left.Southwest Missouri's loss let Western Illinois move into first place.

At Pittsburgh, Craig Helms hit a short jump shot with eight seconds left to give George Washington a 71-70 victory over Duquesne in an Atlantic 10 Western Division first-round playoff game.Mike Brown scored 32 points to lead the Colonials to their first victory in seven years of postseason play.

At Amherst, Mass., freshman John Hempel scored 18 points and pulled down 13 rebounds to lead Massachusetts to a 91-74 victory over Rhode Island in another Atlantic 10 contest.

Phillies get good news: Schmidt's knee injury minor

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP) — Pat Corrales is a stoic type, but you could read the relief on the face of the Philadelphia Phillies manager when he learned that a knee problem of power hitter Mike Schmidt was minor.

Schmidt underwent surgery on his right knee Monday and should be ready to resume spring training in 10 days to two weeks, the Phillies disclosed.

Corrales admitted he had envisioned his best hitter undegoing major knee surgery and being lost for six weeks or more.

"That's the only good thing to happen today," said Corrales after hearing the news from Dr. Phillip Marone, the team physician.

MARONE PERFORMED a two-hour procedure with an arthroscope in which he made three incisions of about one quarter inch each.

Marone did the exploratory operation in Philadelphia and telephoned his findings to the club's training camp here.

He assured club officials there was nothing to worry about.

"It was a routine procedure in which we removed an area of softened cartilage on the (femur) bone," Marone reported.

The surgeon said the knee was flushed to remove little pieces of floating cartilage.

SCHMIDT HAD complained of swelling in the knee. Marone said it was caused by an inflamed lining that resulted from the soft cartilage.

Marone said he bandaged the incision areas and released Schmidt several hours after the operation.

Schmidt was scheduled to return to camp today.

Marone said the third baseman, who last year won his seventh Gold Glove, would undergo therapy under the watchful eye of trainer Jeff Cooper.

The therapy includes isometric exercises to maintain the muscle tone in the area.

Marone said Schmidt should be fine and capable of playing the 1983 season without any further discomfort.

Iran's obstinacy delays full OPEC meeting

LONDON (AP) — Iran's refusal to accept a cut in oil prices is delaying a full OPEC meeting as leaders of the 13-nation cartel seek a compromise to avert an all-out price war.

A full OPEC meeting scheduled for Monday was postponed until today at the earliest after Iranian Oil Minister Mohammad Gharazi said his country would never accept a cut in the official OPEC price of $34 a barrel.

Eight OPEC members at last week's mini-summit, which Iran skipped, reportedly agreed to trim the $34 benchmark price for Saudi crude to a price between $28.50 and $30.

A $6 price cut per barrel of crude oil eventually would translate into a 15-cent reduction in the cost of a gallon of gasoline, economists say.

After a day of private meetings Monday among small groups of oil chiefs at a luxury hotel, United Arab Emirates Minister Mana Saeed Otaiba said there were plans for a full session of OPEC's 13 members today. But he added, "We might change it."

Algerian Oil Minister Belkacem Nabi and Ecuador's Oil Minister Gustavo Galindo said a meeting today was still in doubt.

"I think we have to continue our bilateral contacts," Nabi said.

Saudi Arabia and other Arab members have insisted that the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries reduce its official price in order to stimulate sales. OPEC's market has dropped nearly 40 percent in two years to about 14 million barrels a day.

Iran repeatedly has vowed to fight any price cuts, even though it is reported to have been discounting its oil by as much as $8 a barrel for more than a year in a bid to increase sales to finance its war with Iraq.

Despite Iran's obstinacy, several ministers remained hopeful that OPEC could break the deadlock.

"Optimism is still there," said Indonesian Oil Minister Subroto. "We are still discussing. Everything is negotiable. Otherwise, we do not come here."

Kuwaiti Oil Minister Sheik Ali Khalifa Al-Sabah added: "I am still hopeful. Why not?"

But the official Qatar News Agency said Monday night there were increasing grounds for pessimism, and Iraq's Oil Minister Oassim Hassan Taqi was quoted by the Iraqi News Agency as accusing Iran of "plotting to blow up OPEC."

Venezuelan Oil Minister Humberto Calderon Berti said Iran had requested the postponement of Monday's meeting so Gharazi could consult with his government about "the two main issues — the price problem and production quotas."

On prices, Gharazi insisted to reporters: "Iran will never come down, never."

He also said Iran did not intend to bargain on the level of its production, which has increased over the last year to an estimated 2.7 million barrels a day, aggravating the world oil glut.

Iran and Saudi Arabia are at loggerheads over their shares in a production ceiling — which the mini-summit reportedly agreed should be around 17.5 million barrels a day.

OPEC sources said Gharazi demanded Monday that Saudi production be held to 3 million barrels a day, down from a current estimate of 4 million. The Saudis, OPEC's largest exporter, are reportedly demanding up to 6 million barrels daily.

The price issue is especially critical because Nigeria, one of OPEC's largest producers, broke ranks last month and slashed its price by $5.50 to $30 a barrel.

Nigeria's unilateral cut opened the door for a possible price war among OPEC members eager to boost sales in a glutted market.

The Saudis and their allies on the Arabian peninsula — Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates and Qatar — have warned they will reduce their prices unilaterally if OPEC does not reach agreement soon.

Industry analysts have predicted such unilateral Arabian cuts could trigger a price war among OPEC and non-OPEC producers and send prices plunging to $25 a barrel or lower.

February building activity slow

By JIM PRESNELL
Energy-Business Writer

Midland construction of both residential and commercial buildings remained slack through February, according to lists of city permits.

In commercial construction, the number of permits remained about the same as the first two months of 1982, but the value was less this January and February because much smaller projects are being built.

Permits were granted during February for five signs, one meeting room (at Hogan Park), one restaurant, two warehouses, and an office. Not counting the signs, dollar value of February commercial permits to build was $274,000. Alterations to commercial properties cost more than permits, at $365,000.

Included in alterations are First National Bank's new ATM (automated teller) — Resource — that cost the bank $45,000 for two locations. Also in this figure are office interiors to be completed in the new Dinero Plaza building for Citigroup, Centurion Oil, and Dinero Operating — all to be done by Area Builders.

The highlight of new commercial construction was a restaurant begun by Tabor Construction. The new eatery, in the Agora III shopping area, was expected to cost $150,000.

The Agora III is a retail shoping center being developed by San Antonian Larry Lumpkin. The development is located at N. Garfield and Loop 250, and contains one Colonial convenience store, already open, and space for several more shops, including the new restaurant.

Residential building dropped to low levels in February, from January totals that were half of 1982 building for homes and apartments.

Total new residential permits in January 1983 was $10 million. February residential building amounted to $4.2 million.

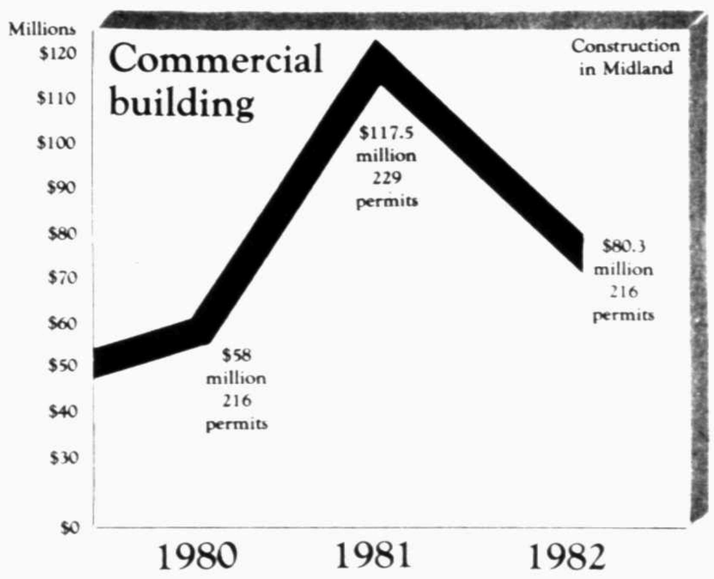
Highlighting residential permits were five houses to be built on Shell by Old Glory, a builder. Total construction value for the five houses was placed at $200,000.

Sun Builders' $110,000 Crestridge home, and Cable Construction's $300,000 Trinity Drive house and $200,000 Los Alamitos home helped to make the February list for residential building.

The quarter of a million in new commercial permits in February contrasts sharply with the previous month. January '83 new commercial valuations were nearly $1.6 million.

And more indicative of the current slowdown in commercial permits is the year-ago January figure — near $8.7 million in valuations granted during this city's building boom. From 1981 to the first month of 1982, Midland builders added more than 1.035 million square feet of new office space.

Several large buildings are still planned, developers and builders say. Area Builders has three large projects still under wraps in Midland, and I. David Porras and The First National Bank of Midland are still planning sizeable office structures.



Delegation lobbies for gas price rollback

By the Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Complaining that monthly natural gas bills for many households have climbed higher than their mortgage payments, a delegation of more than 250 people from 11 states lobbied members of Congress Monday for a rollback of gas prices to 1978 levels.

As part of the lobbying effort, individuals also appealed for support at a meeting on Capitol Hill that was hastily called by Rep. Philip Sharp, D-Ind., chairman of the fossil fuels subcommittee of the House Energy Committee.

"Many (people) stand before me and they cry — for the more they try to conserve, the higher the bills go," said Kay Gozony of Oakland, Calif., who works in a drugstore where many poor people pay their utility bills. "When I see people dig into their pockets and purses for their money — sometimes carefully wrapped in Kleenex and tied with rubber bands — I am good and angry."

Sharp's subcommittee, which handles natural gas legislation, will begin formal hearings next week on a proposal by the Reagan administration to remove all federal controls on natural gas prices by 1986.

At Monday's informal meeting, the speakers voiced support for a proposal by Rep. Cardiss Collins, D-Ill., to roll back natural gas prices to 1978 levels. Such a step would reduce monthly bills by 33 percent for the average household, said Tom Fox of National People's Action, the hgroup that coordinated Monday's lobbying campaign.

Carol Banobcik of the Ohio Action Coalition cited the case of a woman in Lorain County, Ohio, who pays almost half of her $400 monthly hincome for gas heat and "has literally been faced with the choice hof paying for heat or paying for insulin."

Donald Fonville of Richmond, Va., said he had turned up the heat after his daughter cried "Daddy, I'm cold," and then received a $284 bill for a single month this winter. "I can pay my house note twice and still have something left with that kind of money," Fonville said.

Collins, who attended the meeting, said the current system of regulation "doesn't make any sense. Natural gas is in surplus, demand is down, yet prices are rising."

Another plan, offered last week by a coalition of 22 Democrats and four Republicans, would push prices back to their 1982 level.

The current system of federal controls has permitted substantial price increases for gas under a complex pricing system.

Love, melted ice cream inspire business success

Copley News Service

The inspiration for the outboard motor came from melted ice cream, of all things.

It seems that Oley Evinrude, the impoverished son of a Norwegian immigrant, embarked on a romantic picnic one hot summer day in 1907.

He collected his oars, his picnic basket and his sweetheart, and off he rowed across Lake Okauchee in Wisconsin.

Then, as he watched in helpless dismay, the warm sun began to soften their ice-cold treat. Though he strained at the oars to hurry, the ice cream melted completely by the time they arrived at the picnic site.

This frustration caused the wheels of invention to begin turning in his tinkerer's brain.

Upon their return, he rushed into his workshop. Over the next several weeks, in an historic fit of creativity, he constructed the first outboard motor. He dubbed it "the 1½-horsepower, two-cycle, vertical shaft, detachable rowboat motor."

Recently the invention was named an engineering landmark by the American Society of Engineers. They presented the award to Oley's son Ralph, who has taken the business over from his father and built it into the giant Outboard Marine Corp.

MGF Oil announces cutbacks, restructuring

MGF Oil Corporation has announced further cutbacks, dramatic restructuring of its drilling unit, and continued negotiations with its lenders in anticipaition of a fourth quarter loss of between $40 and $50 million.

R.O. "Jack" Major, chairman and president, said Friday he anticipates a fourth quarter loss of at least $40 million for the oil and gas and contract drilling concern.

He said the loss was due mainly to a $30 to $40 million additional provision for depreciation, depletion and amortization to reduce net capitalized costs of MGF's oil and gas properties to the estimated present value of future net revenues. The loss also was caused by a continued depression in the contract drilling industry and to increased interest expenses as a result of the company's debt.

For the nine months ended Sept. 30, 1982, MGF reported a loss of $21.7 million on revenues of $83.4 million. Included in that loss was a $5.7 million write-off for bad debts.

Although MGF expects a slight increase in the present value of estimated future net revenues in 1982, the cost to acquire or find oil and gas reserves increased significantly.

MGF has been negotiating with its banks and other lenders to restructure its debt. Major said the company has recently retained a national investment banking firm to help with the debt restructuring plan.

"We remain optimistic that a suitable plan for all concerned can be worked out in the near future," Major said.

Because of the company's continuing poor financial results, Major said MGF has dramatically reduced the number of employees as well as its total general and administrative expenses. Since October 1982, corporate officers have taken two 10 percent reductions in salary.

Major said general and administrative expenses have been reduced by about 50 percent on an annualized basis compared to 1982 levels.

There has been a dramatic reorganization of MGF's contract drilling unit as well. MGF plans to stack about 75 percent of its 46-rig fleet in the next 30 to 60 days. The remaining operations will be concentrated in the Permian Basin, Gulf Coast of Texas and Louisiana, and in the Rocky Mountains.

"While we are reducing the number of active rigs in our fleet, we are not eliminating our contract drilling business," Major said. "We will actively monitor the market in hopes of returning to full strength in the next two or three years. By suspending the operations of approximately 75 percent of our rigs, we can reduce our fixed overhead to a level which we believe will make us more competitive."

During 1982, MGF participated in 94 wells, 46 of which have been completed as oil and/or gas producers. Thirty wells have been plugged and abandoned and 18 are still being drilled or completed.

MGF does not plan to offer a public drilling fund in 1983, and it is concentrating on evaluating its oil and gas leaseholds and prospects for sale to industry partners. The company does not plan to spend any significant amount of money in 1983 for exploration or development; however, it does expect to gain exposure through drilling of wells on existing acreage at little or no cost, depending upon its suceess in marketing its prospects.

Portraits of China

Landscape painting has for centuries served a two-fold purpose in China. It has been central to the Chinese concept of art as well as serving to quintessentially express Chinese philosophy.

Its theme revolves around expressing the belief in an inner harmony and balance among all things in the world by creating a feeling of union between the human spirit and energies created by the wind, water, mist and mountains. As early as the 3rd or 4th century A.D., the art of landscape painting was practiced in China, reaching its golden age during the Sung dynasty, 960-1279.

But its history goes much farther back in time.

This genre grew out of the spirit of Taoism, which holds that the ch'i, or energy within things, is their most fundamental essence.

Taoism itself refers to a Chinese religion which began sometime around the 100's B.C., as well as to a philosophy which appeared during the 300's B.C. Throughout the centuries that have followed, the Tao philosophy has influenced numerous Eastern and Western artists and writers.

Today the landscape tradition is once again being carried on in China in a 20th century art form — photography. A special exhibition which reflects this artistic mode is on display through April 10 at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave.

Guided tours are being provided Sundays at 3 p.m. In addition, the museum is hosting guest lecturers, including Georgia Chamley-Brevik, who will speak at 7:30 p.m. Thursday on "Chinese Landscape Painting: T'ang Through the Ching."

The museum also is providing free movie showings, beginning with the 7:30 p.m. March 17 presentation of "The Adventures of Marco Polo."

Organized by Willa Percival, curator of the International Photography Society, Washington, D.C., in conjunction with the Embassy of the People's Republic of China and the Chinese Exhibition Agency, Beijing, China, this exhibit is traveling under the auspices of the Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition Service.

"China From Within" seeks to affirm a continuity of the Chinese artistic and philosophical tradition that predates post-World War II East-West relations.

Chosen by the Chinese government, these photographs reflect that government's purview. All were taken by members of the Chinese Photographers' Association, the central agency created by the government to support and direct photography in China.

Membership in this organization is mandatory for professional Chinese photographers. Strict codes governing photographic subject matter are enforced by the processing labs in China.

Another vital aspect of the Chinese landscape tradition which is visually apparent in "China From Within" is the idea that certain categories of things carry symbolic significance.

"This interest in symbols dates back to the 'Book of Changes' or 'I-Ching,' a highly stylized visual code encompassing an ancient cosmology," states Sandra Matthews in the Smithsonian's accompanying brochure.

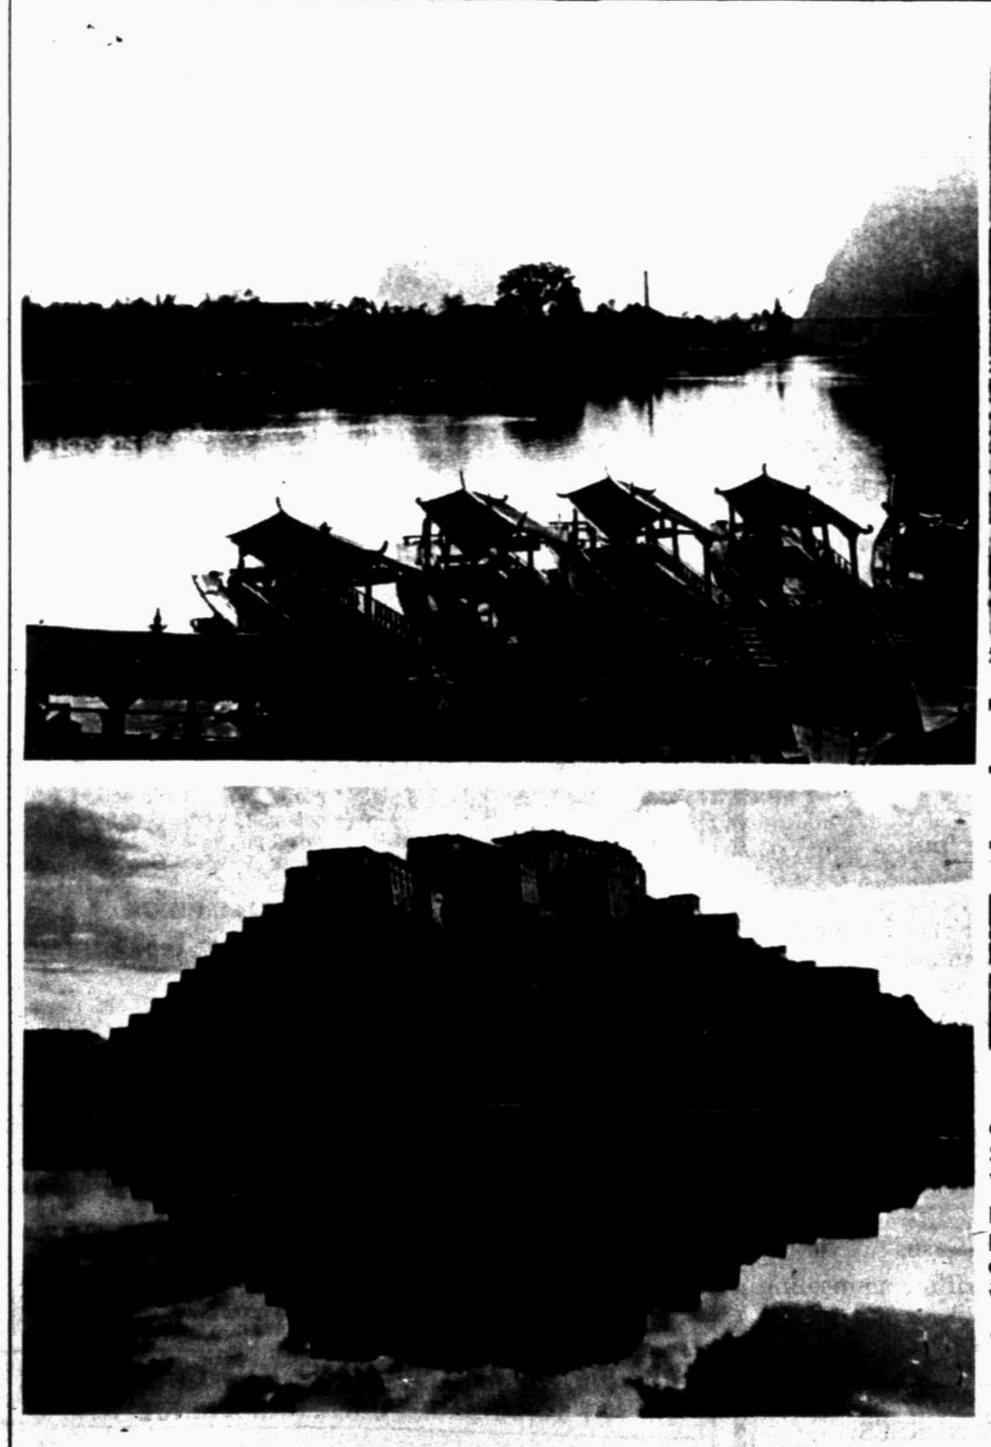
Certain natural elements, believed to have metaphysical power, receive preeminent treatment in this genre.

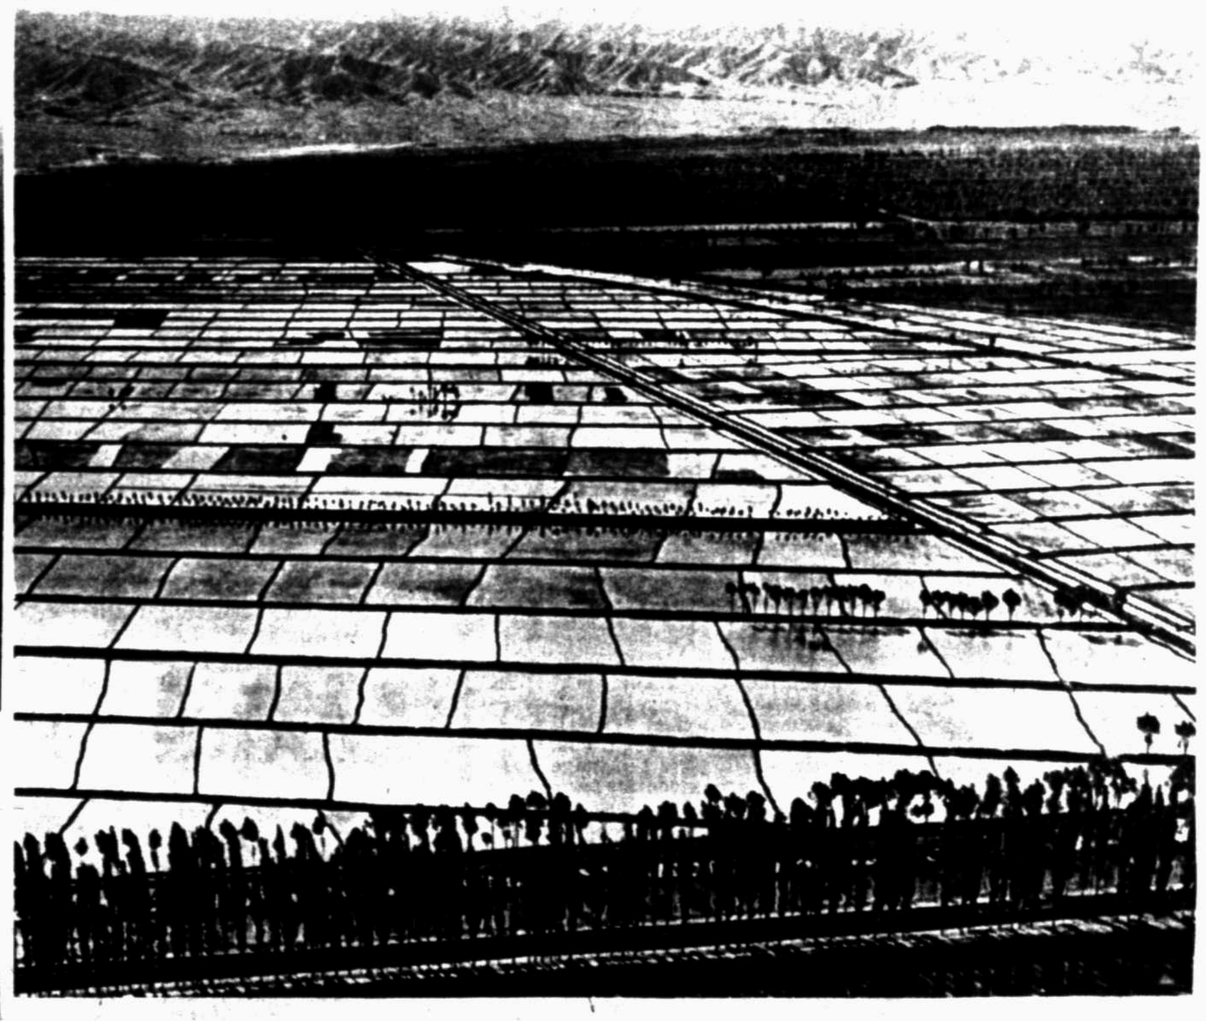
For example, stone, the Earth's bones, and water, the Earth's blood, are the most fundamental, states Ms. Matthews. "Mist functions as water in the form of breath, in addition to allowing the presentation of multiple views that appear to float together in a single image."

"The Chinese view of nature — a concept of place in the cosmos — utilizes a system of intuitive, natural perspective keyed to the character of the land," Marilyn Wong Fu states in the same brochure. "A mountain with a frontal emphasis would illustrate the theme of height (called a 'tall distance,' gao-yuan); a series of horizontal land masses would illustrate the theme of lateral extension (called a 'level distance,' ping-yuan)."

To succeed in the tradition he has embraced, the Chinese photographer must move beyond all the requisite techniques involved in mastering the camera.

He must see, as Ms. Wong Fu states, "the product as a vehicle to convey the transient but timeless aspect of nature, making of it an expression of human feelings rather than a record of mere fact."





The top photo is a rare example in the Museum of the Southwest's "China From Within" exhibit of a landscape painting which reflects Mao's philosophy of downplaying the environment while emphasizing workers. Middle left, a representative example of Chinese landscape photography which combines the elements of man and nature — water, boats and mountains. Also representative of the genre is the human's small size. Bottom left, water, considered the earth's blood by the Chinese, plays a vital role in Chinese landscape tradition, as in this photo of Potala Palace, Tibet. Above, "Skillfully Embroidering the Earth" reminds the viewer that the farmer is the most enduring of artists.

Even Ozzy can't avoid the flu

Singer cancels Odessa show

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

Now that the show is on, Ozzy Osbourne is a no-show.

After weeks of what seemed months of controversy, the Ector County Commissioners' Court appeared hopelessly mired between opposing forces — the Odessans for Decency, who were against Ozzy's Ector County Coliseum concert, and the Ozz Patrol, which wanted the concert allowed.

Feb. 7 the Commissioners' Court, rather than barring Osbourne from his Odessa show (which had a signed contract to back it up), voted 5-0 to lateral the decision to U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton — whose decision not to decide dropped it back into the commissioners' none-too-eager hands.

After all that...Well, it's hard to believe, but it's reportedly true.

Sorry fans, but Ozzy got bit.

No, it wasn't a retaliatory bat. (For those who don't know, Osbourne bit the head off a bat at a concert. That trick cost him rabies shots. It has been reported that Osbourne said of the incident he didn't know it was a real bat.)

It seems the English rock star, whose actions — supposed and otherwise — have caused such a maelstrom of local controversy, is not impervious to the garden variety flu bug.

The news came to Ector County Coliseum around 3 p.m. Monday. Bill Martin, the coliseum's manager, said, "As I understand, he has the flu."

When asked how he felt about the no-show, Martin said, "I don't feel negative or positive about it. From the beginning it was just another show. And now it's just another cancellation of a show. Those things happen."

Approximately 3,000 tickets had been sold. Martin said he figured the concert would have heavy walk-up traffic, which is not unusual for rock concerts. He felt the coliseum would have sold 5,000 to 6,000 tickets and "might even have sold out."

Refunds will be made at the point of purchase. And this time ticket holders have an option. They can use their tickets for the April 6 Hall and Oates concert — same price, same promoter, Stardate.

Randy Sheldon, promoter for the Ozzy concert, was unavailable for comment.

Since the Odessa concert finished up Ozzy's current tour, the gig was cancelled outright rather than postponed, Martin explained, adding that Osbourne might play Odessa during his next U.S. tour.

That statement was followed with a pause.

Then he quipped, with the hint of a chuckle in his voice, "Or he might even play Midland."

Osbourne creates concern in Baton Rouge

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Councilman Jim Marshall was so upset by heavy-metal rock star Ozzy Osbourne's weekend concert that he wants Alcohol Beverage Control Board investigators at future events where liquor is sold.

Marshall, who attended the concert with ministerial association head Rev. Doug Ainsworth, said he saw several violations of the agreement under which the Jaycees were permited to hold the concert.

Marshall said he saw instances where no proof of age was required to buy beer, where cash was accepted for beer instead of prepaid tickets, and where customers were allowed to purchase unlimited quantities of beer.

Osbourne, known for such stage antics as biting the heads off small animals, repeatedly urged his audience of about 18,000 to "get high," Marshall said.

"It is apparent Ozzy Osbourne violated the law," Marshall said.

"He used vulgar language on numerous occasions and several times asked the crowd to get high like he was.

"I cannot understand why we must let this go on in Baton Rouge. We are very fortunate the youth of Baton Rouge are exceptional, with only a few heeding the performer's request," Marshall said.

Jaycees president Robert Vigil said he was aware of Marshall's allegations.

"We've gotten relatively few complaints, considering someone as controversial as Osbourne," Vigil said. "We've had 99 percent positive comments and 1 percent bad comments."

The concert went off without incident, although Osbourne had asked promoters to search concert-goers entering the Fairgrounds, saying he feared an attempt on his life.

Judge OKs location change for Sharp trial

KERMIT (AP) — Prosecuting and defense attorneys have one week to choose a site for the trial of Michael Eugene Sharp, accused in the June stabbing death of a Kermit woman, Brenda Kay Broadway.

State District Court Judge James Clack granted a change of venue Monday for the capital murder trial. Sharp was convicted in Lubbock of murdering 8-year-old Christie Michelle Elms, Mrs. Broadway's daughter.

Mrs. Broadway and her two daughters were abducted from a Kermit car wash the same day as the killings. Selena Elms, 15, managed to escape from her abductor, but her mother and younger sister were stabbed to death.

Clack granted the motion filed by Sharp's lawyer, Glen Williamson, and gave both sides one week to decide where the trial should be held. Clack agreed that Sharp probably could not receive a fair trial in Kermit.

Williamson had presented affidavits from two Kermit residents stating that pretrial publicity in Winkler County precluded Sharp getting a fair trial there.

District Attorney Mike Fostel opposed the change and had three affidavits signed by Kermit residents stating that prejudice against Sharp in Winkler County "would not deny him a fair and impartial trial."

Sharp was arrested June 16, 1982, five days after the bodies of Mrs. Broadway and Miss Elms were discovered in rural Winkler County.

Selena Elms is expected to testify at this trial.

Sharp was brought under heavy security from the Andrews County jail to Kermit shortly before court opened.

Legislator wants to legalize 'unproven' heart therapy

AUSTIN (AP) — A legislator wants to legalize "chelation therapy" for heart patients, but the Harvard Medical School says the method is not proven effective and any patient who chooses it is a "guinea pig."

Houston Rep. Senfronia Thompson introduced a bill Monday to legalize the drug ethylene diamine tetracetic acid, or EDTA, for use on heart disease. EDTA is given intravenously in "chelation treatments" that can last several hours.

The term "chelation" derives from the word chelate, a chemical term used to describe an agent that forms bonds with certain metals and then carries them out of the bloodstream.

The drug is believed by its users to unblock arteries clogged by calcium deposits, but some medical authorities believe it is unsafe and ineffective.

Ms. Thompson said her bill is needed because the therapy is not covered by insurance due to its questioned status.

"I'm convinced chelation therapy has particular potential to extend the lives and remove disabilities of our older citizens — all at a much lower cost than present treatments that are largely ineffective anyway," said Ms. Thompson.

The spring-like weather was too much for 7-year-old Robbie McCullough and 4-year-old Debra Warner to resist Monday, so they went to Waco's Cameron Park and tried out their balancing skills on a swing built for one.

Legislators say quality education will cost

AUSTIN (AP) — Two legislators sponsoring a $1.6 billion proposed salary increase for Texas teachers say that if officials want excellence in schools, they are going to have to fund a 30.7 percent pay raise, even if it means new taxes.

"In this state, the people who hold public office are either going to have to put up or shut up," said Senate Education Chairman Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur.

"Either find the money or quit talking about excellence in education. You can't have a Cadillac system on a Model T budget," Parker said.

The Texas State Teachers Association wage proposal was announced Monday at a news conference by TSTA President Barbara O'Neal and bill sponsors Parker and Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin.

Under the TSTA plan, a beginning teacher with a bachelor's degree would make $14,500 next year instead of the current $11,110. A teacher with an master's degree and 30 years experience would make $27,250 next year instead of $21,100.

The plan "increases beginning teachers' salaries dramatically to attract the brightest minds into the teaching profession," said Ms. O'Neal, "and realistically rewards our experienced teachers so they can afford to continue to teach."

Added Parker, "To have superb, quality education, you have to have superb, quality teachers, and you will not get them paying 30 percent less than they can get in the private sector."

Convict granted wish to be in federal prison

A convicted bank robber who told U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton that he preferred to be confined in a federal penitentiary rather than a state prison so that he might earn a higher education on Monday was granted his request.

Along with it came a 20-year prison term, which was the punishment Bunton gave the 31-year-old defendant, Robert Max Macklem, for using a 12-gauge sawed-off shotgun in holding up the Odessa Savings Association last May 13 and fleeing with $3,911.

Since then, Macklem has been convicted in Tennessee following a kidnapping and a planned bank heist. He was serving a state sentence there when he was brought to Midland on the federal charge, to which he pleaded guilty.

"I'd like to spend my time in the federal pen, where I'd have the opportunity to do some college work," Macklem told the judge prior to sentencing. Maximum penalty for the federal offense is a 25-year prison sentence and a $10,000 fine.

His court-appointed attorney, Brian Martin, told the judge that Macklem is "a personable person."

"His mother still believes in him and believes that he has potential in his future...He wants to be rehabilitated."

Bunton didn't deny that the defendant has potential. But he noted that Macklem "took the law in your own hands" and said that there is no way the court "could condone anyone sticking up somebody with a sawed-off shotgun...

"You could have killed somebody."

But the judge did cite two "redeeming" facets of Macklem's life: his military service and his attempt to gain an education.

Man placed on probation

A 26-year-old Fort Stockton man who pleaded guilty to concealing knowledge of a felony by not reporting the transport of illegal aliens from Mexico into Texas last Aug. 24 on Monday was placed on a five-year supervised probation and was fined $500 by U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton.

The judge had sentenced the defendant, Jesus Jose Calderon, to three years in prison but suspended that term.

Before the judge sentenced him, Calderon, in speaking through his bilingual attorney, Tony Chavez of Odessa, told the court that whatever the judge decided on punishment "will be the right decision."

"He has been through quite a bit," Chavez told the court. "He asked for it."

Last month, when Calderon had pleaded guilty to the offense, his attorney told the judge that Calderon "knew that transporting illegal aliens was against the law" but that he was unaware that "not reporting it was against the law."

Return home of adult children often stressful

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

In many households today, adult children have returned to their parents' homes because of economic or marital reasons; others have never left the nest. Avoiding friction that can result from the parent-grown child relationships often calls for a change of "house rules."

Both parents and offspring should follow a more realistic rule structure, agree to talk about their problems, understand the needs of all concerned and, if need be, accept compromises, says Arthur Maslow, a family therapist and clinical staff member of the Ackerman Institute for Family Therapy in Manhattan. This is especially true if the "child" already had left home once and is now a returnee, Maslow says.

That the number of adult children living at home has increased is acknowledged by various surveys. A sample survey in 1980 by the U.S. Census Bureau of 60,000 households in New York City and Long Island concluded that the number of children over 18 living with their parents rose from 11 percent to 12 percent from 10 years ago.

SOME OF THE more common problems and rules needed to solve this relatively new kind of parent-child relationship are discussed by Maslow in his book, "Family Connections: Parenting Your Grown Children," coauthored with nonfiction writer and editor Moira Duggan. Published by Doubleday (217 pages, $14.95), it attempts to help parents of older children deal positively with negative behavior, respond to different sexual mores, improve communication and banish guilt in parent-child relationships.

"The main problem is (recognizing) that kids can be on their own," Maslow said recently during a break in his schedule at the Ackerman Institute. "They can be talked to, without being given advice. They can also be as talkative about a subject as I can be. What I and other parents have to offer is more experience in life, and that advice should be given only when wanted. Don't volunteer. Wait until they come to you."

Maslow bases this advice on personal experience as well as educational training. The father of two grown children and stepfather of two more, he has had to cope with many of the problems faced by all parents, including the sexual mores of children sharing their homes with live-in friends.

AS FOR THE AGE break between child and grownup, Maslow believes it's closer to 16 than to 18 or 21. "I consider children 16 to 30 grown up," he said. "They're getting close to leaving home."

For those young adults returning home, he believes that old parent-child rules can no longer exist. Though they may always be your "children," no matter how old they are, it's important they be treated as adults, he said. One example Maslow gives is that of the adult child who has returned home. Parents can no longer insist that he or she be home by 11:30 p.m. But they can say, "Don't come in when you would wake me up. I'm a terrible sleeper."

"Living With Adult Children," by Monica Lauen O'Kane, a mother of eight, also offers advice on dealing with problems tht might arise. Published by Diction Books (172 pages, $9.95), it uses personal experience, the results of 196 questionnaries, and other reference material to make its points.

O'Kane, who lives in St. Louis with her husband, Hugh, a vice president of a municipal bond company, married at the age of 20, worked as a secretary and is now a volunteer for La Leche League International. With five grownup children and three still in elementary and high school, she has been faced with having some of them leave and return periodically.

"MY OLDEST MOVED back and forth five or six times after graduation," she said. "Another moved out (and then came back) after an argument with my husband, who feels he's and authority figure. I admit I was surprised when they came back. I had thought of an 18-year commitment. I liked having the family around, but wanted more freedom and room. So, it's been an adjustment for me, too."

In working toward an adjustment, Maslow said, "Parents and children don't talk enough. They argue. Adults can use their senior years to show children they should not argue. Kids are like champion district attorneys. They can argue for days. Tell them you have heard enough."

Ross Smith prepares a window for painting as Susan Blassingame assists. Both are members of First Methodist Church of Midland's single's group, who are shown here working for Christmas in April repairing some of Midland's homes.

Christmas In April set April 30

Christmas In April, Midland's volunteer housing repair project, is set for April 30, according to Bobby Trimole, president. "We schedule the workday the last Saturday in April of each year. This will be our 11th year to work on houses of the elderly and handicapped in Midland."

Teams of volunteer surveyors are already screening homes of persons who have been approved for the 1983 program. Qualifications to be a recipient of Christmas In April are the following: over 60 years of age, own their own home, handicapped if not elderly, and of low income. "We already have 62 houses on the list," said Trimble, who received the President's Volunteer In Action Award in April, 1982.

Persons wishing to request help are asked to call the Christmas In April office, 694-4907. The next step is that a volunteer from the program will visit the home to ensure qualification.

Christmas In April utilizes volunteer labor to repair homes. During the 1982 project, approximately 130 homes were repaired while $70,000 was raised to pay for the materials to make the repairs. Approximately 2500 Midlanders participated in the event.

CIA is an independent, non profit organization. All donations are tax deductible. Send contributions to Christmas In April, Inc., P.O. Box 3744, Midland 79702. Please make out checks to Christas In April.

According to Trimble, the selection date for houses by groups of persons wishing to work on the project will be April 7, at 7:30 p.m. in the First National Room on the second floor of First National Bank. Each home that qualifies for the program will have a detailed list of the repairs that are needed plus a picture of the home and a little information about the recipient(s).

Since 1973 CIA has repaired over 1,000 homes in Midlnd. Two other CIA's have started as a result of the Midland program — Christmas in May, held the first weekend in May in Cisco, and a new program beginning this in year Washington, D.C.

For further information call Christmas In April, 694-4907.

Chinese seek rich husbands

SHANGHAI, China (AP) — What the ambitious marriage-minded women of Shanghai want is a man with "52 legs" who serves in the "light cavalry" and can provide a life of "all-duck, all-chicken."

That means, at a time of rising expectations and unabashed consumerism, that brides-to-be want the good material things of life and have coined quaint, cynical phrases to say so.

On the eve of the traditional spring festival wedding season, many less aspiring Chinese brides still are satisfied with the old "24 legs." That refers to the legs of furniture needed to set up a newlywed's household: bed, wardrobe, table and other standard items.

Shanghai women, however, have upped the ante. They now want "52 legs," including a night stand, woman's dressing table, writing desk, sofa, dining table, dish cabinet, coffee table, chairs and other trappings of success.

They also want "three things that go 'round and one that ticks," or a bicycle, sewing machine, electric fan and wristwatch.

A husband in the "light cavalry" (qing qi bin) is a man with a motorcycle, and the mobility it provides is highly prized.

Brown bag lunch Wednesday

"Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission: What's It Doing for Us?" will be the topic of the Midland Health and Welfare Association's noon brown bag luncheon and program Wednesday at Hope Lutheran Church. Charity Ball scheduled

The Charity Ball scheduled for March 11 at the Midland Center will be the 32nd annual Charity Ball held in Midland. The Ball is one of the major fund-raising events of the Junior League of Midland Inc. All proceeds for the Ball are returned to the community through League projects.

Over the years various themes have gone into the decorations for the Ball. The Ball of 1951 had a Valentine's theme. The Ball of 1957, the first Charity Ball held in the current Midland Country Club, featured a Grecian theme.

Oriental decorations were featured in the Ball of 1960, the year the location was moved the Midland Center.

Like the Ball of 1952 a classical Greek theme will be in this year's Charity Ball. This theme will feature 24 columns, 16-feet tall and 2-feet in diameter. A sculptor, Medi Miromoeni of San Antonio, was commissioned to do four classical statues of Greek goddesses. Art committee members have painted a mural depicting an evening scene of the distant hills of Greece on fabric, which will be hung on the walls of Midland Center. Small classical statues, baskets of fruit and ivy and hundreds of candles will complete the decorations.

This year's Charity Ball chairman is Mrs. Joe Gifford. Decorations chairman is Mrs. Jim Salners, assisted by Mrs. George Thomas. The art chairman is Mrs. Spencer Beal, and the construction chairman is Mrs. Michael Morse.

DEAR ABBY

MS diagnosis upsets woman

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: A friend told me that a couple of years ago you ran a letter from a woman who had just learned that she had multiple sclerosis and was debating whether to tell her young daughter, fearing it might upset her. My friend said you responded by printing a very helpful letter from another woman who had faced the same problem. Abby, please find that letter and run it again. I need it because my sister has just been diagnosed as having MS, and she's in the identical situation. Thank you. — CONCERNED SISTER

DEAR FRIEND: With pleasure.

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to "Prepared for the Worst," the woman with MS (multiple sclerosis) who was told by her doctor that eventually she would be paralyzed and confined to a wheelchair. How right you were to tell her not to accept her doctor's gloomy prognosis. She was debating whether to tell her 13-year-old about her disease in the hope that she might be more cooperative and understanding — yet she didn't want to frighten or upset her younger children.

I think ALL her children should be told.

She should also contact her local MS society. Members will invite her to meetings, put her in touch with other MS victims and provide her with a lot of helpful information.

"Prepared for the Worst" should also read "The Pursuit of Hope," an excellent and inspiring book by Miriam Ottenberg, a journalist with MS.

I know firsthand about MS because I have it, too. My 8-year-old daughter and 11-year-old son were told what I have and how they can help. They are among my greatest assets. Without their help and my husband's constant assurance, I wouldn't be able to do the things I do today. I'm a substitute teacher, Brownie leader, team mom for my son's baseball team and active in my church and PTA.

I manage to keep my home going and keep up a moderately active social life. I realize that someday I could be paralyzed and in a wheelchair. But right now I am not, and I intend to use to the fullest everything I have. Every day I fight to keep my body on its feet and walking. It's a struggle, but it's well worth the effort when I see what I can still accomplish. — PAT HERMAN, OXNARD, CALIF.

DEAR PAT: Thank you for a wonderful letter. I received hundreds of letters from those with MS, and all were in complete agreement that no one should expect the worst and resign him/herself to a wheelchair. They also told me that telling the children and asking for their help will bring the family closer together.

For those who want more information about MS, write to the National MS Society, 205 E. 42nd St., New York, N.Y. 10017. It is a non-profit organization, so please enclose a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

DEAR ABBY: I read with interest the letter signed "Prime." She's the woman who was reluctant to submit to a premarital sex performance test to be "graded" like a side of beef.

PRIME has a CHOICE, and it's not GOOD. This fellow is very COMMERCIAL and there is no UTILITY in keeping him. She should CUT and CAN him.

Sign me ... HIGH GRADE

DEAR HIGH: You have a legitimate beef. T'would be a pleasure to meat you.

DEAR ABBY: I was married for 28 years, then I got a divorce. He married again but I never did. He just passed away, and I was wondering if I'm a widow now, or am I just a divorcee?

This is very important to me. My husband's wife is still living if that makes a difference. — DALLAS

DEAR DALLAS: You are a divorcee. The woman who was married to your ex-husband at the time of his death is his widow.

(Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple "do-your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's new booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (37 cents) envelope to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

AT WIT'S END

Guilt still handy tool

By ERMA BOMBECK

It should be of some comfort to parents to know that in this age of sophisticated communication and premature independence, you can still lay a little guilt on your kids.

Not a lot. Most of the old tried-and-true threats have fallen by the wayside, but there's still one phrase that gets 'em every time: "Never mind! I'll do it myself."

I have seen a kid pull himself up from the last 15 seconds of a Super Bowl game when the score is even and his team is kicking for a field goal to grab the garbage from his mother and head for the door, just because he had just heard, "Never mind! I'll do it myself."

The phrase works for several reasons. It's a last resort and both of you know it. You know he's not going to do it the first time you ask, so you build to a climax.

Here's the way it works. You say, "You clear the table this minute or those dishes will never come clean." (He's been sleeping in the same socks all winter. You know he's not going to get too choked up over a little tomato sauce.)

Your second volley: "You clear the table now or you will never watch TV again/go on a vacation with us/receive an allowance/be allowed to grow up." (So what's so terrible about being dropped from a family? You've done it before.)

This one is spoken with feeling. "Okay, I've had it. I'm only telling you one more time. Get to those dishes or I'll come in there and you'll wish I hadn't." (Mom has a history of non-violence. She's faking.)

Finally, it comes: "NEVER MIND! I'LL DO IT MYSELF."

It never fails. Bodies scurry, plates are scraped and water begins to run somewhere.

A lot of it is delivery. It has to combine the resignation of St. Joan of Arc, the commitment of St. Theresa, the suffering of a thousand women in labor and the eye contact of Jessica Savitch.

Guilt is hard these days to sustain. I don't know why. Maybe it's because the mystery is gone out of parenting. Kids learn too much too soon and we have no surprises left.

One thing for sure, there is still a mystique around: "Never mind! I'll do it myself." Maybe it's because no one has ever dared to imagine what would happen if she did.

My mother is 72 years old and I still don't know.

Sada Cumber, owner of Foto-Makers, is glad to help customers with questions about photography, and give them tips on using their cameras more effectively. Sada is a certified photographic counselor, and invites photographers to come to Foto-Makers in the Imperial Shopping Center, Midkiff at Wadley any Saturday for photo tips. Foto-Makers is open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Saturday.

Foto-Makers for more than film processing

Sada Cumber, owner of Foto-Makers, believes in doing more than just developing film for his customers. As a certified photographic counselor, certified by Photomarketing Association International, he is available at all times to help you with advice about your camera and how to get the best possible shots from each roll of film you shoot.

When film is processed at Foto-Makers, it is done with one thought in mind–quality. Each morning, the computerized printers are checked for utmost color clarity by the plant manager, Jack Henry. With 26 years of color processing experience, Jack can quickly ascertain whether the color is of the highest quality, and if it isn't, the machine is adjusted. This attention to detail means your flesh tones will be true-to-life, colors will be bright and natural, and no green or pink tones will dominate your print.

Quality control procedures such as these follow your film from the minute it enters the processing lab right on through to packaging. This is where Sada personally inspects each package of prints to assure that each print you get back will be as good as it can possibly be.

If a print isn't up to par, Sada notes the problem and sends it back to be reprocessed. If there is no way that the print can be improved, Sada sends a copy of Foto-Makers monthly magazine along with a notation for the customer to come in on Saturday and bring his camera so that Sada can advise how to improve the overall quality of the customer's photographs.

This monthly magazine is a free publication which has many helpful articles for photographers. Whenever you're in the shop, just ask for a copy. Articles coming up include taking photos at graduations, sports events or other special events, and taking shots from television. Sada, of course, is always available to answer your questions concerning photography, but he encourages customers to bring their cameras and come on in on Saturdays and learn more about photography.

Foto-Makers is a new name for an old business, Rapid Color Photography, and is the oldest photo lab in Midland as well as the largest. It is located conveniently in the Imperial Shopping Center, Midkiff and Wadley. There are also two drive-in locations at 4321 W. Illinois and 1408 N. Big Spring. Foto-Makers guarantees one-day service on all color and black-and-white processing. If the film is in by 9:30 a.m., it will be out by 4 p.m. Of course, this quick, one-day service is an important feature of Foto-Makers, especially when you need to have your prints in a hurry. But Sada emphasizes that even with this one-day service, quality is never sacrificed. "We have 110 years of color processing experience combined among the employees of Foto-Makers," says Sada, "and the most important thing, as far as we are concerned, is making sure our prints are consistantly of the highest quality." Foto-Makers gives you bigger prints, too. Their prints are 37 percent bigger than others on 35 mm negatives. All work, including enlargememts, are done on premises.

Something new is coming to Foto-Makers in the next three weeks–a new E-6 Ecktachrome slide processor, which is also the latest in Kodak computerized equipment. As Sada says, "We pay a lot for our equipment, but we want only the most professional computerized equipment, so that our customers know they will be getting professional quality prints."

This new machine will enable Foto-Makers to process color slide film in just two hours. Foto-Makers uses only Kodak paper and printers, as well as the recommended Kodak procedures for processing film.

Another plus for customers of Foto-Makers is the Discount Club Card. This card is free and entitles you to a discount on film, as well as one free processing after you have paid for seven. For example, film which regularly sells for $3.30 a roll is $2.83 with the Club card. And of course, all film is fresh, stored under refrigeration.

Foto-Makers' specializes in restoration of old photographs, and also can blow up your photographs to any size you wish. If you need frames, here is where Foto-Makers has the edge. They have a selection of fine oak, teak, acrylic, beveled glass and gold-tone frames which cannot be duplicated in Midland. These frames right now are on sale for 25 percent off the regular price, and come in all sizes.

So for personalized service and the finest quality film processing, come by any of the three convenient locations and see the difference Foto-Makers can make. All locations are open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Saturday.

At least 75 Turkish miners killed

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Two gas explosions killed 75 coal miners and injured 86 in a mine in northern Turkey Monday, and 20 more miners were believed trapped more than 1,100 feet underground, the local governor Galip Demirel reported.

Demirel said 223 miners escaped without injury following the explosions that collapsed the roof of the mine in Zonguldak province, on the Black Sea.

Demirel said the blasts were caused by a buildup of methane gas.

The governor explained that the explosions occurred at 4:30 p.m., half an hour after the 4-to-midnight shift started and half an hour before roll call. He said 406 miners were supposed to be working the shift.

Israel eases withdrawal demands

KHALDE, Lebanon (AP) — Israel today scaled down its demand for full trade relations with Lebanon as a condition for withdrawing its invasion troops.

There was no immediate Lebanese response to the proposal, and the troop withdrawal talks remain stalled on more substantive issues such as security arrangements.

Chief Israeli negotiator David Kimche told the 21st plenary session of withdrawal negotiations today that his government would settle for "a very limited trade exchange" as a symbol of the two nations' post-war relationship.

Court upholds arson sentences

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The South Korean Supreme Court today upheld the death sentences given two dissidents for their part in arson at the American Cultural Center in Pusan a year ago.

Sentenced to death are Moon Bu-shik, 23, and Kim Hyon-jang, 32, accused of plotting the arson attack which killed one Korean student, injured three others and caused extensive damage to the center.

Roman Catholic Cardinal Kim Sou-han and more than 1,300 clergy had signed an appeal calling for leniency. President Chun Doo-hwan now must decide whether to confirm or commute the death sentences.

American kidnapped in Colombia

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Four men in a stolen Mercedes kidnapped American oil executive Kenneth Bishop by killing his two bodyguards and pulling him from his car as he rode to work, police and witnesses reported.

As of this morning no one had made a ransom demand or claimed responsibility for Monday's abduction — the 83rd kidnapping in Colombia this year.

Other abductions have been blamed on leftist guerrillas, a right-wing death squad, drug traffickers and other common criminals.

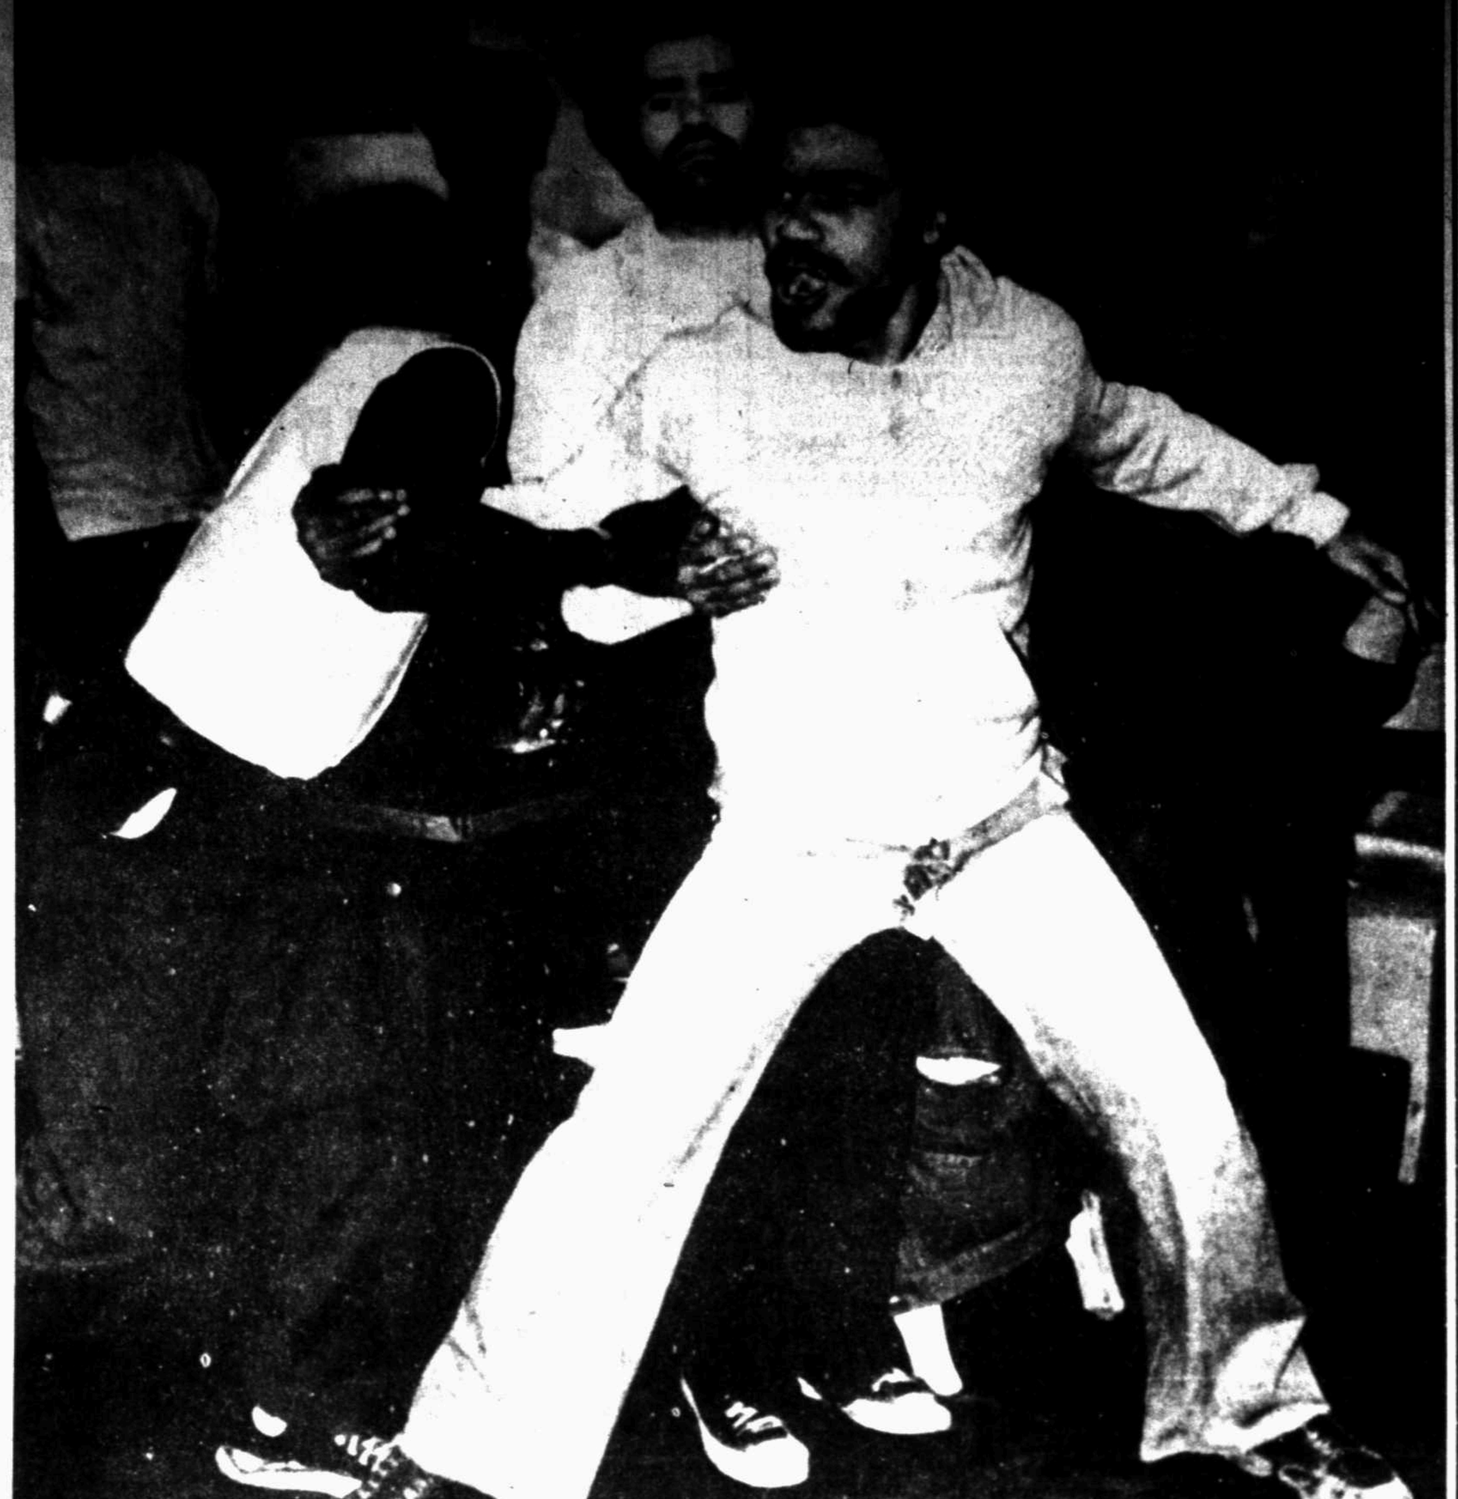
Playing behind bars



Joseph Bigsby, 26, an inmate at Stateville Correctional Center at Joliet, Ill., is a member of the prison's Con-Artistes drama group. He is rehearsing a scene in the play "Twelve Angry Men." Bigsby plays the last juror to change his vote.

When "Twelve Angry Men," a play about a murder trial and its tense jury deliberations, opened, the response was so thundering that the lights had to be turned on to end demands for curtain calls.

It was understandable. Half of the actors and a fair number in the audience were themselves convicted murderers.

One-hundred of the 2,200 prisoners at the Stateville Correctional Center, in Joliet, Ill., 43 miles from Chicago, belong to a drama troupe called the Con-Artistes. The men can empathize with a play in which 11 of the 12 jurors vote guilty, then one by one change their minds to innocent.

"Half of us are convicted of murder. A lot of us wonder just how well the facts were deliberated in our case," said Nathaniel Brown, who plays the guard who oversees the jurors.

But Con-Artistes is more than convicted men feeling vindicated by a play in which jurors grudgingly decide to acquit.

The men say it is a schooling, a way toward loving each other, loving themselves, staying "clean" and gaining the respect of law-abiding people.

"You have an active theater group in the belly of a maximum security prison," stage manager Carl Tillman, 26, said at a recent rehearsal. "We all come from different backgrounds, but we have the talent and dedication to come together. And we do get the job done.

"A lot of us shouldn't be here," Tillman continued. "If the jury hadn't been in such a hurry to get home to that lasagna dinner the wife cooked, we might not be.

"Don't get me wrong. I did what I was convicted of," added Tillman, who was found guilty of three murders, an attempted murder and armed robbery. "But the main thing is, we want to be the biggest and the best thing that ever happened in the prison system in this country — and I think we're on our way."

Brown, 23, who is serving 50 to 90 years for murder said, "The first thing when people hear 'Stateville' is the negative connotation. And when we (perform for outsiders), they see 12, 14 guys, half of 'em been lifting weights — and they look pretty tough.

"But then we begin to act. We be actors. They forget about it...and then they ask for our autographs."

Joseph Bigsby, 26, who plays a juror, said he's been in prison so long — serving 100 to 200 years for murder — that he has learned all the skills he has there: welding, carpentering, small engine repair and now acting.

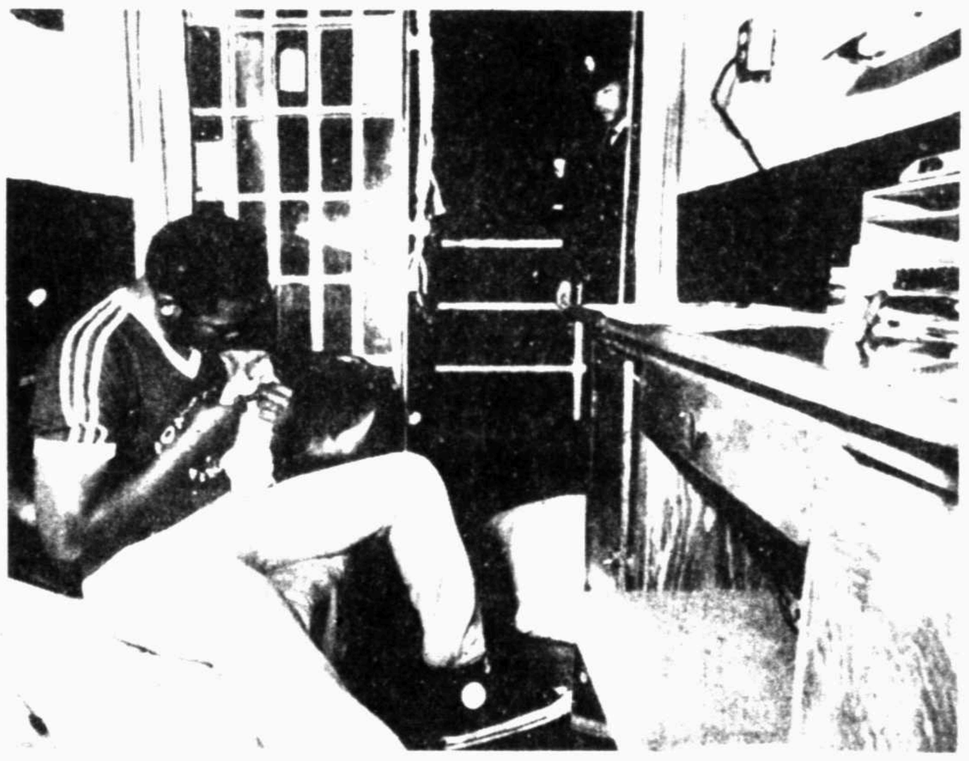
Of all of them, acting has pleased his mother most, Bigsby said. "Families almost go to prison with you. They're in a kind of prison too," he said.

"But I begin to notice a change in my mother's face when she read about me in the papers. 'Well, my son's doing something good down there,' she says. Being involved in this program's not only good for me, but for my family," Bigsby said.

"We're trying to expand the program by training these guys to train and teach," said Vera Cunningham, the prison's cultural arts supervisor. "We have two classes under way. Our goal is to have a whole theater school here, from the history of theater on up."

Saul Colbert, 42, serving 40 to 80 years for murder, plays a juror and says he hopes to be as great a Shakespearean actor as Paul Robeson.

"All the frustrations we have, we leave in the cell. When we step into the Con-Artistes workshop and shut the door — we are different," Colbert said.



Phillip Byas, 31, serving 40 years at Stateville Correctional Center for a double murder, plays with his cat, Baby, in his cell. In "Twelve Angry Men," Byas portrays the one juror who is convinced of the murder suspect's innocence.

The Con-Artistes have a playbill advertising their productions.

Three of France's high-class restaurants 'catch a falling star'

PARIS (AP) — The gastronomic ax fell on three of France's finest restaurants when the Michelin Guide lopped off one star each, reducing the exalted three-star ranks of French cuisine from 21 restaurants to 18.

The Michelin Guide — supreme arbiter of what is good on the table and often the maker or breaker of reputations — demoted Raymond Oliver's Le Grand Vefour and Claude Peyrot's Vivarois, both in Paris, and Francois Bise's Auberge du Pere Bise in the Alpine village of Talloires, near Geneva.

The bad news Monday was compounded by the fact that no new third stars — symbols of "one of the best tables in France, worth a special trip" — were awarded in the 1983 Michelin Guide, which goes on sale March 16.

A spokeswoman for Michelin, as is always the case, refused to comment on the decisions of the guide's anonymous food inspectors. She would only say that some of the establishments involved have had some problems, including illness.

That is the case at Talloires, where Bise has been ill for several years. The Auberge du Pere Bise had carried the prestigious three stars since 1951 and was considered among the finest of the provincial restaurants.

Bise was not available to comment on his demotion to two stars, and his wife said: "Really, we don't have a reaction."

The Paris establishments also had little to say about their chastisement by the publishers of the red guidebook.

"We are not going to discuss a decision of Michelin once it has been made by competent people," said Francois Mesnage, who has run Grand Vefour since the 73-year-old Oliver retired.

Mesnage noted that Le Grand Vefour — established in 1785 and reputed to be the place where Maximilien Robespierre and his cronies plotted the French revolution — had had three stars for 30 years and said the restaurant would be working hard to get the third one back.

He said the coveted third star usually is awarded for the person who is at the head of the restaurant, in this case, Oliver, and that his absence no doubt played a role in the restaurant's demotion. But he said his team at the Grand Vefour was still doing a good job.

"We hope our customers will judge us," said Mesnage, who has worked at the restaurant for 23 years and managed it for 14.

Asked if the demotion was a catastrophe, he responded: "Why? Vefour dates from 1785 and we have seen a lot of things happen. We will try to be worthy of the tradition since 1785."

He said the only consolation to the loss of the star was that one went to Michel Oliver, Raymond's son, at the Bistro de Paris. The guide awarded a first star to the Bistro, which some gastronomes consider to offer equal, if not better and more refined dining than Grand Vefour.

Jacqueline Peyrot, wife of the owner of the luxurious Vivarois, appeared to take the news as a challenge.

"It's difficult, but not a catastrophe," she said. The loss was a warning intended "to wake us up. We will have to try to get it back."

It was the first time since 1978 that Michelin had pared a star from the top echelon of restaurants. The last time was when the famed Maxim's came tumbling down from the summit after 25 years. Maxim's then demanded it be withdrawn from the guide altogether.

Comedian Bill Cosby sued by two boyhood chums

Bill Cosby

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Comedian Bill Cosby, whose gags about his boyhood in a poor section of Philadelphia prompted a libel suit by some of his childhood chums, has asked for a jury trial.

Cosby was sued by two friends of his youth — Walter Whitehead of New York City and Eugene "Poppy" Whitehead of Philadelphia.

The brothers filed a complaint in U.S. District Court against Cosby in October, charging that Cosby had made references to the brothers during a monologue he delivered on "The Tonight Show" in October 1980. Cosby on Monday requested a jury trial in the case.

In their suit against Cosby, The Tonight Show, the National Broadcasting Co., and Carson Productions Inc., the Whitehead brothers charged that the comedian described how he learned about sex with the assistance of Poppy Whitehead.

The suit charged that Cosby's monologue damaged the brothers' reputation in his description of certain incidents which took place in the Whitehead family home in Philadelphia.

Debbie Reynolds

NEW YORK (AP) — When the curtain rises on tonight's performance of Broadway's "Woman of the Year," star Debbie Reynolds is expected to be back in the lead, kicking up her heels.

Miss Reynolds, who nearly collapsed on stage during a matinee at the Palace Theater on Saturday, was to be released from Roosevelt Hospital today, press representative Merle Debuskey said.

The 50-year-old actress underwent more tests Monday in an effort to pinpoint what was ailing her.

Exhaustion was believed to have contributed to her condition, Debuskey said, noting that Miss Reynolds stepped into the lead in "Woman of the Year" on Feb. 22 on relatively short notice after her predecessor in the role, Raquel Welch, left because she was pregnant.

Miss Reynolds felt faint during Saturday afternoon's performance, became confused and began missing cues. She was taken to the hospital in an ambulance.

Debuskey said "there was no indication anything was wrong" until just before the intermission Saturday afternoon, when "she began losing her place."

Robert Mitchum

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Robert Mitchum, called a "Jew hater" by the Jewish Defense League for his remarks in Esquire magazine, says he was just joking with the interviewer — but he'll apologize anyway.

"It was just sort of an academic debate with me playing the coach and him (the interviewer) playing the wounded journalist," Mitchum said Monday from his home near Santa Barbara. "I was just putting him on. I couldn't believe that he didn't understand."

In a Monday news conference, the JDL called for a public apology from the 65-year-old actor, calling him a "Jew hater" for "anti-Semitic" statements he made in the magazine's February issue.

JDL spokesman Irv Rubin said the organization took exception to Mitchum's comments on the number of Jews killed by Hitler during World War II. Mitchum made some of the comments during an interview for Esquire with journalist Barry Rehfeld.

Mitchum disputed that 6 million Jews were killed in Nazi concentration camps, and made a flippant reference to Adolf Eichmann, who was hanged in Israel in 1961 after he was tried for overseeing the extermination of Jews during World War II.

Mitchum's latest credits include the World War II television epic "The Winds of War" and the film "That Championship Season."

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Measles exposure won't hurt fetus last three months

Dear Dr. Solomon: My niece had contact with someone a few weeks before she gave birth and she later found out that the person had German measles. When she told her obstetrician about it, he didn't seem too worried. As things turned out, she had a healthy baby. But I always thought it was dangerous for a pregnant woman to be near someone with German measles. Am I mistaken? — Mrs. V.I., Minneapolis, Minn.

Dear Mrs. I.: The fetus is at greatest risk of damage as the result of exposure to the rubella (German measles) virus during the first three months of pregnancy, although exposure during the second three months can also result in serious defects. According to Dr. Hamid A. Hadi, of the Medical College of Georgia in Augusta, there are no known adverse effects associated with exposure to rubella during the last three months.

During the first trimester, about half of all pregnant women who are exposed to rubella will abort spontaneously. The remaining fetuses are prone to cardiac and other serious defects. Deafness is one of the defects associated with exposure to rubella during the second trimester.

As you can see, the more mature the fetus, the less susceptible it becomes to damage as a result of exposure to rubella.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My mother has started wearing a wig because her hair has become very thin. She hates the wig but feels she looks better in it. Anyway, since she started wearing it she has been complaining of headaches. If she is so upset over wearing the darn thing that it gives her headaches, wouldn't she be better off throwing it away? I can understand that looks are important regardless of a person's age, but getting headaches is no fun. — Sherri, Dallas, Texas

Dear Sherri: A specific answer to your question would require knowing a lot more about your mother. However, before you conclude that her headaches are the result of her being upset over the need to wear a wig, I suggest she examine the wig itself. There has been at least one report of poorly fitted wigs producing trauma to the scalp and resulting in headaches. If this is the case, simply having the wig refitted can eliminate the problem while satisfying your mother's desire to improve her appearance.

Country music cable channel debuts

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music fans nationwide got their first glimpse of a cable television channel produced just for them called the Nashville Network.

A five-hour live show kicked off programming Monday night on the new cable TV network from the stages of the Grand Ole Opry and an Opryland Hotel nightclub in Nashville as well as clubs in New York, Chicago, Denver, Los Angeles and Austin.

"Years from now, people will remember March 7, 1983, just like they do Nov. 25, 1925, the day the Grand Ole Opry went on," said county singer Bill Anderson. "A hundred years from now, they'll be talking about us."

Nashville Network is a joint venture of WSM Inc. of Nashville and Group W Satellite Communications of Stamford, Conn. Officials said 800 cable systems reaching an estimated 7 million homes were initial subscribers to the advertiser-supported network.

The network begins with 21 shows aired 18 hours a day, seven days a week. Expansion to 24-hour-a-day programming is being planned, network officials said.
