Talks set to ban all nuclear testing

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter declared today that Israel's legalization of three settlements on the West Bank of the Jordan River poses obstacles to peace. He also announced progress toward negotiating a ban on all nuclear tests.

At a nationally broadcast news conference, Carter acknowledged that he had not discussed the granting of legal status with Prime Minister Menahem Begin on his visit here last week. He called it "an oversight" on his part.

However, Carter said he had advised Begin that the establishment of new settlements "would be a difficult thing for public opinion to accept here and in Arab countries."

Still, Carter was hopeful about prospects for new negotiations on the Arab-Israeli conflict. He said the legalizing of the three settlements was an obstacle that could be overcome.

Carter opened the session with reporters by announcing the completion of preliminary negotiations with the Soviet Union and Britain on a comprehensive nuclear weapons test ban.

While a number of problems must be resolved, Carter said, "the results are sufficiently promising that the three countries can begin formal negotiations Oct. 3."

He said he hoped they could arrive at a treaty that would be signed by other countries as well.

On the domestic side, Carter said he expected to have new welfare proposals ready next week.

He said the search for a new director of the FBI was "proceeding very slowly, very methodically and with the prospect of good results."

Assessing his first six months in office, Carter said he had made mistakes "in minor things" -he declined to list them - -and said the White House's relations with Congress has been improved.

Carter said the major stumbling block to reconvening of the Geneva conference on the Mideast is the Palestinian issue. Howvever, he said untilthe Palestine Liberation Organzation gives up its commitment to the destruction of Israel the administration will not support PLO participation in the peace talks.

Carter rejected any notionthat he is biased either toward Israel or the Arab countries. And he called on the leaders on both sides to try to cool down the situation in the Middle East by not being so adamant about their positions.

Carter said he had discussed the settlements with Prime Minister Menahem Begin during his visit here last week. However, Carter said Beginhad not given him advance notice that the Israeli government would recognize the legitimacy of three new setlements, as it did this week.

Carter declined to castigate Begin on the settlements. He said he recognized that Begin had campaign commitments. Besides, Carter said, Israel has not made the settlements permanent.

"I think we have a good chance to go to Geneva," Carter said. "There are obstacles to be resolved."

Dollar's future brightens

LONDON (AP) — The dollar lost ground to the British pound today but improved against other European currencies amid reports the U.S. government would move soon to halt the dollar's recent slide against major world currencies.

Within the first hour of money-market trading in London, the pound was marked at just over $1.74, up from Wednesday's closing $1.7395, which was the highest since mid-September last year.

This represented a rise of two cents this week, a considerable gain for the pound sterling, which has fluctuated very little recently. The pound's lowest closing this year was $1.7042 on Feb. 15.

The dollar was mostly higher against other European currencies. Part of the rise was believed to result from dollars being used to buy pounds.

In early dealings today in London, the dollar rose to 2.2635 West German marks from its overnight 2.2560, to 2.3930 Swiss francs from 2.3905, and to 4.8280 French francs from 4.8225.

Monetary experts in London said they expect the U.S. government to move soon to support the dollar in an effort to halt its slide against major world currencies.

British financial commentators said the West German government is pressing for an urgent meeting with American, British and French leaders to discuss the dollar's decline.

The European Commission, a joint executive of the nine Common Market countries, today called for an increase or at least a stabilization of the value of the dollar on international markets. The dollar's price against the German mark has dropped about 4 per cent in the last month — a rapid change in world money market terms.

It means an American car priced at $10,000 a month ago can be bought now with West German marks worth only $9,600 at the time.

Renato Ruggiero, chief spokesman for the European Commission, told reporters he hopes the U.S. authorities will intervene to keep the rate in line with the American economy, which is recovering faster than most West European nations from the recession of recent years. He said stabilization or improvement of the dollar must be expected.

Common Market officials named three main reasons for their concern about the fall of the dollar:

—It makes American goods cheaper and more competitive with European goods on world markets.

—It threatens the arrangement called "the Snake" that links the West German mark, the Dutch guilder and the Belgian franc with the currencies of Scandinavia. Collapse of the Snake, so named because of the way it looks on a graph, would endanger the joint farm policy of the Common Market countries, which depends on a complex adjustment of prices to the fluctuation of currencies.

—By threatening the value of the dollars that the oil-producing countries get for their product, it could encourage oil producers to raise prices.

In Bonn, West German Finance Minister Hans Apel said he was concerned about the dollar's decline in recent weeks and felt continued fluctuation could threaten global economic recovery.

"The rapidity of the devaluation is extremely alarming," he said in a television interview.

Some British financial writers reported growing European suspicions that the United States is deliberately encouraging the dollar's devaluation to make U.S. exports more competitive in foreign markets in an effort to narrow America's increasing trade gap.

But Apel said he did not believe the United States was trying to gain an unfair trade advantage by allowing the dollar to weaken.

The dollar slumped against the British pound Wednesday in London, sterling gaining nearly two cents in hectic trading and closing at 1.7395 pounds to the dollar, its highest mark against the U.S. currency since last Sept. 16.

Washington announced Wednesday a record $2.8 billion trade deficit for June, the 13th consecutive monthly shortfall and more than double the May deficit of $1.2 billion.

Economists blamed the surge on increased imports of costly foreign oil.

Visitor bugs House

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some 150 members of the House found themselves competing for attention with unwitting lobbyists — about a dozen cockroaches and smaller varieties of bugs.

During a debate Wednesday on permitting strikers to get food stamps, a man in the visitors gallery shouted "You cockroaches," and hurled a paper bag full of bugs onto the chamber's floor.

None of the bugs hit any House members because the bag landed in the aisle behind the seats of the chamber.

Capitol police said someone quickly stepped on two or three of the bugs and "an officer took the bag out and stepped on some others." Authorities said the remaining six to eight bugs in the bag were sprayed and killed.

Police said they arrested Richard Saks, 23, of Jersey City, N.J., and Thomas George, 22, of New York City.

Capitol Police Chief James Powell said the two men told authorities they were part of a group called Youth for Action, which had a permit to demonstrate for more food stamps. He said about 50 persons were demonstrating outside the Capitol when the disturbance occurred.

Powell said the two men would be charged with disrupting Congress while in session, a misdemeanor that carries up to $500 in fines and up to a six-month jail term. He said they could post a $100 collateral and then forfeit it in lieu of going to court.

The House eventually rejected a move to bar food stamps for strikers.

Lawyer blasts police

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff

A Pampa attorney blasted the Pampa Police Department this morning for illegally possessing marijuana which he said enticed his client, Steven Damaris Brooks, 20, Pampa, to cut the screen at the police station and take three plants of marijuana.

Brooks pleaded guilty to burglary charges in connection with the offense which occurred July 9.

"Here we have a situation where the police department under our criminal code, can be charged with possession of marijuana," Bob McPherson, local attorney who represented Brooks told Judge Don Cain in 223rd District Court.

"I compare it with an individual who leaves the keys in a car and someone steals it," McPherson added.

He later said the only provision under which a law enforcement agency can hold marijuana is for evidence in a case.

Harold Comer, district attorney, in defense of the police department, said it is true there are no exception to provide for possession of marijuana. However he noted in this case the department was using the plants for instructional purposes.

Judge Cain, on recommendation from McPherson and Comer on a plea bargain, granted Brooks a five-year probated term and assessed a $250 fine.

Brooks said he cut the screen at about 12:30 on the morning of July 9 and reached down and took the plants.

"Several had told me they were there and another said he was going to take them at 11 p.m. the night before, but didn't," Brooks said.

He testified that he dried the three plants out and they made five joints.

In other court business this morning, Bobby Lee World, 22, of North Carolina and Arnold Lee Younger, 23, of Virginia were granted five-year probation terms and assessed $250 fines each after they pleaded guilty to theft of motor vehicle in McLean on June 24.

The vehicle was owned by George Terry.

The men testified they were en route home after a visit to California and had tried to find jobs, but couldn't.

Younger said they took the truck to get the CB radio. They later were arrested near Sayre, Okla.

Their sentence was recommended to the court as a result of a plea bargain between Comer and McPherson.

Farm women send pennies to pres

PERRYTON — Wheat growers, their wives and those who depend on related industries for their livelihood hope a last - minute letter writing campaign will persuade President Jimmy Carter not to veto the Senate's omnibus farm bill.

Members of the Women Involved in Farm Economics (W.I.F.E.) were gathering signatures and supporters in Perryton stores and businesses Wednesday.

Mrs. Mary Barnett, president of W.I.F.E. here, said the organization is requesting people write the President and enclose three cents in each letter. The pennies represent the value of the wheat in each loaf of bread.

With wheat prices hovering near the $2 per bushel mark, the Texas Association of Wheat Growers cites production costs of about $3.80 per bushel on dryland and $4.10 per bushel on irrigated wheat.

The President is reportedly not pleased with the Senate's farm bill which would provide higher target prices for wheat than those proposed by the administration.

The "pennies to the President" tactic has been adopted by farm groups in Nebraska, Kansas and Iowa and Mrs. Barnett said the Perryton group has received support from as far away as Clovis, N.M. and Weatherford, Okla.

Plans are for the letter to be mailed Friday.

In a separate campaign, members of the Texas Farmers Union are sending shoe boxes full of wheat to the President.

Pay up or lose gas, Lo-Vaca tells city

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Crystal City has until Aug. 26 to pay its back gas bill of $720,765 or lose its gas supply, says Lo-Vaca Gathering Co.

"We don't have any choice on the thing," Lo-Vaca President Bill Greehey said Wednesday. "If we don't discontinue service to Crystal City, we are not going to get the revenue to pay for gas purchases and all our customers are going to suffer."

Crystal City Mayor Francisco Benavides was away from the city on business, a family member said. Mayor Pro Tem Blanca Gamez refused official comment.

'It's going to be hard on the people. They just can't afford that kind of money," said Crystal City Councilman Victor Lopez. He indicated LoVaca's notice apparently will catch the city without any emergency plans for action to replace the lost gas. Lopez said about 2,000 families, many who are poor migrant farm workers, will be affected.

The council was huddled this morning apparently in an effort to seek a solution to the crisis.

The South Texas town buys gas from Lo-Vaca, puts it in the city-owned distribution system and sells it to business and residential customers.

For the past 28 months, Crystal City has refused to pay the interim rate set by the Texas Railroad Commission, recognizing only the contract rate of 36 cents per 1,000 cubic feet (mcf).

Lo-Vaca now gets slightly more than $2 per mcf from all of its other customers.

"We cannot buy gas for $2 and sell it to the city's system for 36 cents," Greehey said at a news conference, which followed his meeting with Crystal City's lawyers.

The Texas Supreme Court has ruled that Lo-Vaca legally can charge Crystal City the interim rate and the town of 8,000 persons must pay or risk losing its gas supply.

Lo-Vaca said it mailed a letter Wednesday to Benavides, telling him of the impending cutoff.

"Human needs" — defined as protection of life — will not suffer from the decision, asserted Lo-Vaca Vice President Don Newquist.

Asked about the "human needs" of sanitary dishes, pots and pans washed in hot water, Newquist said alternatives, such as electric, butane or propane hot water heaters and stoves, were available.

Crystal City obtains its electrical power from Central Power & Light Co.

Asked about the possibility of people freezing in their homes this winter, Newquist said, "That is a city policy decision, meaning that the gas will come back on when the city pays up."

Crystal City's schools are heated by electricity and it has no hospital, he added.

Paying the interim rates would increase gas rates in Crystal City by 600 per cent, not counting the amount needed to retire the $720,000 debt.

The town's major industries will not be affected because they obtain gas directly from Lo-Vaca and not through the municipal system.

Greehey said Lo-Vaca had unsucessfully tried at least twice to reach a settlement with the town.

He said he told Crystal City's attorneys Wednesday that it would take "a substantial cash payment" of 20-25 per cent of the back bill before he would recommend any settlement now. He said Crystal City had asked for 10 years to pay what the courts say it owes Lo-Vaca.

Paris heist nets $3 million

PARIS (AP) — Robbers today seized a semitrailer truck containing 17 million francs ($3.54 million) in coins in a holdup near a Paris railroad station, police said.

The coins were being sent to the Bank of France from Bordeaux. A truck ordered by the bank had picked up the container and was leaving the Gare de Lyon railway station when three or four armed men stepped in front of it and forced the chauffeur and a guard to get into a car which had carried the gangsters, the authorities said.

One of the men got into the truck and drove away. Another man drove the guard and truck chauffeur a few miles away and set them free, the police said.

Phillips to seek Sherman seat

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff

Mel Phillips, 31, of Amarillo, a real estate investor, announced his candidacy this morning for the state senatorial race to fill the vacancy to be created by the resignation of State Sen. Max Sherman.

Sherman, who has held the post for 6½ years, will assume duties as president of West Texas State University by Sept. 1.

He told the Pampa News this morning from his Austin office that he has no plans to endorse anyone.

"I will be working very closely with whomever is elected," Sherman said.

The list of candidates who may run, both Democratic and Republican, may be lengthy, but Sherman said that procedures call for a run-off between the two top vote - getters if no single candidate polls a 51 per cent majority.

"In other words," he said, "the run-off, if one is necessary, could be between two Democrats or two Republicans." It must be from 15 to 25 days after the election, expected to be set Nov. 8.

Joe Curtis, 31st District Republican Committeeman, said today no Republicans had officially announced.

Top Republican prospective candidates include Bob Close of Perryton, state representative; Bob Price of Pampa, former U.S. Congressman; Jim Brandon, Amarillo attorney; Dick Brooks, Amarillo businessman; and Kenneth Ford Perryton businessman.

"We expect announcements after another Republican executive meeting on Aug. 7," Curtis said today.

Phillips, no stranger to the political arena, was U.S. Senator Lloyd Bentsen's 1976 campaign coordinator. His wife, Becky, is Senator Bentsen's niece. Her father is Don Bentsen of McAllen.

In his announcement, Phillips promised to do everything possible to keep taxes down.

He said his first speaking engagement will be in Pampa at 7:30 p.m. Monday at the Senior Citizens Center. He will be featured at a salad supper at the Top 'o Texas Democratic Club.

"I will also run as a Democrat," Phillips said, "because I believe that the Texas Democratic party represents the best interests of the farmer, small business man, oil and gas producer and the average citizens who is interested in living his life and raising his family free from unnecessary government intervention.

"In the next few weeks I will be visiting each of the counties ... and I know I will gather many useful ideas and suggestions about how I can best serve the people as state senator," Phillips said.

"We are united, however, by one common idea — the Panhandle is worth fighting for!," Phillips emphasized. He said the area must have strong and effective representation in Austin.

"I feel that I can give the area the capable persuasive voice we need in that area — I will approach each issue by asking four fundamental questions:

"—What will be the effect of this law?

"—Is it fair?

"—Do we need it?"

"Is it worth raising your taxes?"

Phillips said each service Texas provides must be paid for by taxes — directly or indirectly on the state's people.

"Our taxes are already too high. I will dedicate my service in the senate to finding ways to reduce spending and to reduce numbers of rules and regulations that affect our lives. We must preserve and protect those things that have made the Panhandle of Texas the greatest place on earth to live, work and raise our families."

Mr. and Mrs. Phillips have one daughter, Abbey, 3.

Mack Whittenburg, an Amarillo attorney, announced his candidacy last week. He, too, will run as a Democrat.

Hasty about Cuba

Fidel Castro is a man of patience, an uncommon trait among revolutionaries. Perhaps patience has come to him in later years, after the fires of revolution have simmered and the waters of his own administration have been known primarily for their backwash.

He threw out the old Cuban regime and replaced it with his own men, his own ideas. Along the way, he developed a hybrid type of hatred for the United States. This country represented the zenith of imperialism; his country the best of all Communist worlds.

A long-standing friendship between neighbors was broken. Cuba became a Russian satellite, sold its soul to Moscow.

At the moment relations between Cuba and the United States were served, a new bond was orn that united Cuba and Russia. It was a calculated move, with most of the calculations springing from the minds of Russians.

Recent years have seen no weakening in the Moscow - Havana relationship. Those same years, however, have seen a softening in the attitude between Cuba and the United States. The United States, in particular, has made strong overtures for a resumption of friendly relations between the two countries. Various politicians have made well publicized trips to Cuba, were wined and dined by the Cuban dictator and came home with glowing reports on the affability of Fidel.

Freedom denied is freedom killed, whether it be by order with accompanying firing - squad gunfire in the desolate wilds of Siberia or on some secluded former football field near Havana.

Fidel Castro's intentions are the same now as they always have been since he became dictator: he wants the world to become communistic and he plans to wage a continuing battle to accomplish that end. It might take bodies and bullets at times and it might take patience and words at other times.

For the moment, he is using patience and words. And about the only expense he has is a good cigar now and then to some visiting dignitary, such as Sen. George McGovern.

Sometimes our own system of government grows faint on its experimental journey, but people in this country, by and large, still maintain a portion of their freedom.

It would behoove our political leaders to walk mighty carefully as they endeavor to build a bridge from the southern shores of this country to the northern shores of Cuba 90 miles away.

Midwest Exodus

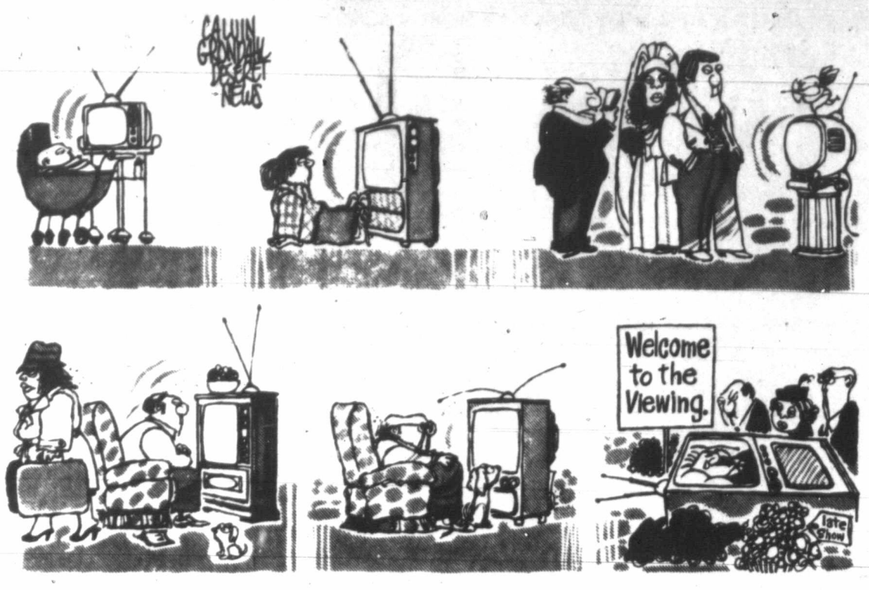

Although the Midwest's industries remain strong, people have been moving out of the region. One reason is that productivity in the Midwest is increasing faster than the market for its goods. The result: jobs there pay more every year, but they are becoming relatively scarce, according to a Conference Board analysis.

Watch on Washington

SBA boondoggling disclosed

By CLARK R. MOLLENHOFF

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The hearing on the operations of the Small Business Administration's program to help minority businesses has disclosed a horror show of political boondoggling and incompetence.

When Chairman Lawton Chiles (Dem., Fla.) characterized the program as "a disaster which has cost the taxpayers $1.5 billion" there was only a muttered protest from the twg officials from the Washington SBA office that "it wasn't all wasted."

From the files of SBA, Chiles reviewed dozens of little horror stories of the manner in which wealthy white businessmen used poor blacks as fronts to milk the program of millions of dollars.

But more shocking than any of the individual scandals was the attitude of the SBA officials who admitted that their own files had for years disclosed evidence of false and fraudulent representations relative to the financial status and participation of the blacks who had no managerial responsibilities and were frequently treated as janitors.

The long overdue investigation by Senator Chiles and his government operations subcommittee of federal spending practices also was an indictment of the Senate and House Small Business committees, whose members had permitted the corruption and mismanagement to fester and grow worse at least since 1971 and 1972.

The SBA's minority assistance program has grown from eight contracts valued at $10 million in 1968 to the present 2,800 contracts valued at $400 million.

The program was enacted to help minority enterprises and minority businesses get started in the highly competitive business world. SBA monies are provided to help establish the operation, and minority firms are given preferential treatment in bidding for government contracts.

"If the original aims of the program were being carried out it would be a good program," Chiles said, but he charged that its operation has been "built largely upon fraud, misrepresentation and political pay-offs.

"We are not going to continue to be a silent and willing partner to the fraud being perpetuated by the Small Business Administration," he added in an unusually hard slap at the Senate and House Small Business committee members who have oversight responsibilities.

It is unfortunate that the Senate and House Small Business committees too often have used their positions to obtain favored treatment for friends and political supporters and have not performed even a routine oversight function.

Even casual curiosity by the Small Business Committees' staffs could have unearthed many of the scandals that have been festering for years.

Although the SBA's investigations of its own operations left a great deal to be desired, a few conscientious and competent people prepared reports on the evidence of illegal and questionable activities.

The evidence they developed was ignored by SBA superiors over a period of years, and the regular Small Business committees of the House and Senate exhibited no interest in the kind of tough and aggressive inquiry that was needed.

Although the Nixon Administration had major responsibility for the "naked political influences" that in some instances distorted the SBA program to help minority businesses, through laxity a Democratic Congress failed in its responsibility to police the operations.

The program as devised in 1968 had the potential to be a good one in supplying federal dollars to help disadvantaged minority citizens to start their own businesses.

When the companies were formed, the SBA was to guarantee them enough government business, through non - competitive, contract set - aside programs, to help them gain the expertise to later compete on a professional basis with established firms.

If any reasonable standards had been established for qualification as "a disadvantaged minority citizen" the result might have been different. Senator Chiles commented as SBA officials tried to explain the qualification of a $36,000-a-year, college - educated White House staff member in one SBA - approved project. It was one of a dozen equally ludicrous examples of SBA's "disadvantaged."

Another man with five successful businesses in operation used the SBA minority program to push still another business entity with the competitive advantage that assured a government - subsidized success.

Washington SBA officials blamed the situation on the regional officials who were given nearly absolute discretion in the approval or disapproval of applications under the minority business development program.

Winford Smith, director of the office of business development, and his deputy, William Stephens, protested that they could not order or direct a regional SBA head to do anything.

Chairman Chiles asked if the administrator of the SBA was powerless to move against the regional heads, and Smith and Stephens acknowledged that the administrator could have directed correction of many of the problems.

It appeared that Smith and Stephens had on a few occasions called some of the defects in the operation to the attention of the assistant administrator, but they had not followed it up with demands for swift action even when it appeared there were false financial statements or inconsistent representations on some other relevant issue.

"The Small Business Administration," Chairman Chiles declared, "has either got to clean up its shop or it's going to cause the death of what was designed to be one program to help — not cheat — minorities...

"It must not be used, as it has been in the past, to further benefit persons who are not disadvantaged now and never were disadvantaged in the first place," Chiles said.

He called for clear guidelines as to who is or is not eligible, competent SBA employees to supervise disbursement of more than $300 million a year, equitable treatment of all persons applying for the program, and an end "to reliance on the whim of individual SBA employees."

It is unfortunate that the laxity and "criminal negligence" which Senator Chiles found at the SBA is too typical of conditions in a large number of federal agencies where those who try to stop the mismanagement and corruption find themselves labeled as "whistleblowers" or "trouble - makers" because they "do not go along" with political deals.

Your Birthday

July 29, 1977

Go out of your way this coming year to be helpful to persons or causes you truly believe in. Happy results are likely if you follow this advice.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Put forth your best effort today to work on enterprises you're very enthusiastic about. If you can channel your energies in this direction, you can really move things.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You treat those you meet today in a warm, friendly manner. Numbered among this group is someone who'll be impressed and later do you some good.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) It's important today to envision the outcome of events in a positive, optimistic manner. Try it — the results may surprise you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your instincts for selling yourself or a product are honed to a fine edge today. You're particularly fortunate if you can deal with the top dog.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your formula for striking good bargains today is to lay all your cards on the table. The more honest you are, the better the results you can expect.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Lady Luck will catch up with you today, but you have to exert yourself and be assertive. This is especially true careerwise.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Play the humble role if you want to be a success today. You'll be surprised at how others are attracted to you when you keep a low profile.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Something for which you have had high hopes looks like it will work out. Keep the faith and don't give up now.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Aim high today. You're capable of achieving major goals. It would be a shame to waste your time and talent on trifles.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Personal gain is a strong possibility for you today. You can grasp the whole picture. You know where the pieces fit, even if others don't.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Put a fair price tag on your contribution to a venture today. You certainly deserve half the proceeds, or perhaps even the lion's share.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Persons you deal with on a one-to-one basis today will do more for you than you do for them. It would be nice if you'd reciprocate later.

Midwest Exodus

Although the Midwest's industries remain strong, people have been moving out of the region. One reason is that productivity in the Midwest is increasing faster than the market for its goods. The result: jobs there pay more every year, but they are becoming relatively scarce, according to a Conference Board analysis.

This may prove to be a confusing year for taxpayers in Pampa.

Property owners are subject to taxing from three entities: city, county and school.

And so far, two of the three want more money.

Pampa Independent School District trustees have called a $2.2 million bond issue for Aug. 18. They want the money to repair schools and try to insulate them to conserve energy.

But board members hope that supporting a bond issue and footing the bill to pay teachers and maintain schools won't burden the taxpayers more. Several have indicated that they want to lower the tax rate.

School administrators seem to think that will be feasible because of a possible windfall from Senate Bill 1 passed this month which could return nearly half a million dollars to the school coffer.

For the school district, present tax rate is $1.50 on 60 per cent ratio of assessment. The ratio was changed from 40 to 60 per cent last August.

Now the city commissioners have tentatively decided to hike taxes in Pampa ... from $1.95 to $2.13 per $100 based on 40 per cent of the accessed values.

That, plus the hike in water and other service fees which the commissioners are considering would make living in Pampa more expensive next year.

Taxes for some will be going up no matter what happens.

Each year the city reassesses a third of Pampa — or 3,100 residences — in an effort to keep valuations up to date.

Those with homes in the north part of Pampa have already received notices of new valuations and in most cases higher taxes.

The city, county and school all use the same valuations.

Henry Urbanczyk, who lives southwest of Pampa, was in New York during the recent black out.

He said he and Mrs. Urbanczyk had to carry their bags up to the twelfth floor of their Manhattan hotel. No electricity, no elevators.

The hotel lobby was filled with people who stayed there instead of trying to climb the many stories to their rooms.

Urbanczyk was amazed at the looting and burning which took place in New York during the time when the electricity was out.

"Something like that brings out the good in good people and the bad in bad people," he commented.

Congratulations to all those who made the Miss Top of Texas Pageant Saturday such an impressive event.

Chairman was Ramona Hite who Emcee Donna Axum, former Miss America, called the most efficient pageant chairman she has ever seen. Miss Axum has worked with more than 70 such contests since she received her crown in 1963.

The show was well organized without a minute wasted. Entertainment, that provided by Miss Axum and Miss Texas as well as local singers and dancers, was timed to keep things lively.

Miss Axum and Lori Smith, Miss Texas, added professionalism to the pageant. They are top entertainers.

This was the first year for the local contest to be affiliated with the Miss Texas and Miss America pageants, an affiliation which brought the two beauty queens and talent competition to the M.K. Brown stage.

A great improvement. A smart move. A feather in Pampa's cap. A job well done.

Kite in wires blamed for $50 million fire

By ROGER GILLOTT
Associated Press Writer

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — A young man flies a kite on a soft summer evening. A gust of wind wafts the kite into high-voltage power lines. It flutters flaming to the ground.

Result: 385 homes and other structures destroyed or damaged; $50 million in damage; 3,000 persons evacuated; 22 persons injured, 740 acres of brush destroyed.

"I shall always regret the part, however innocent, I have had in this tragic matter," the unidentified young man said late Wednesday as firefighters worked to contain one of the worst fires in this scenic community's history. "I am deeply shocked and saddened by the great loss and suffering which has resulted from the fire."

Santa Barbara, a wealthy community of mission-style homes whose red-tiled roofs lend a Mediterranean flavor to the parched Pacific coast some 100 miles north of Los Angeles, became a panicked city Tuesday night as sheets of flame tore through the drought-dried brush of the Santa Ynez Mountains.

Fire storms leaped erratically from canyon to ridge, leaving a patchwork of destruction across the city's richest neighborhoods, where some home values start at $250,000.

Fire officials estimated that 250 expensive homes were destroyed and another 135 homes and other structures were damaged. Three thousand persons fled as the flames, driven by "sundowner" winds, raced through the chaparral brush that covers southern California's mountains.

Seven evacuation centers were set up, but relief workers said few of the financially secure refugees stayed there. Most elected to stay at the 78 hotels and motels in Santa Barbara, a major tourist area.

Dist. Atty. Stanley Roden said the kite flyer, identified only as a man in his 20s, was in Sycamore Canyon when his kite was blown into a 16,000-volt power line. He said the string of the kite caused an electrical arc, which "either set the brush immediately below on fire or sent a shower of flammable material to the ground, which set the brush on fire." Authorities had first believed the blaze was the work of an arsonist.

Although small by California standards, the 740-acre blaze left an uncommon trail of tragedy. Many of those whose homes were destroyed were wealthy; others were not.

Although the fire was declared encircled by late Wednesday, firefighters would not say when the blaze would be extinguished. They kept a careful watch lest the hot, dry evening winds come up and fan the blaze into renewed life.

Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. declared a state of emergency Wednesday and deployed 500 National Guard troops to help firefighters from the U.S. Forest Service, the Santa Barbara county and city fire departments and nearby communities.

Adult bookstore gets one 'yes', one 'no'

HOUSTON (AP) — Adult bookstore and theater owners in Houston have broken even in two court decisions — obtaining a favorable ruling from one judge and an unfavorable one from another.

A federal judge issued an order Wednesday that temporarily enjoins the city of Houston from enforcing an ordinance that would close 19 adult bookstores and theaters.

U.S. District Court Judge Ross Sterling set an Aug. 5 hearing date for the city to oppose a preliminary injunction, which would prohibit enactment of the ordinance until the case reaches trial.

Earlier, U. S. District Court Judge Robert O'Conor denied a request from the owners of an adult bookstore that Houston vice squad officers be prohibited from interferring with the operation of the business.

O'Conor ruled that the owners, James D. Cagle and Jim D. Chappell, had failed to prove sufficient police harassment.

Sterling said in his ruling that the bookstore and theater owners would suffer "irreparable injury" if forced to close today, the day the law would become effective.

The ordinance, passed last month by the city council but opposed by Mayor Fred Hofheinz, would prohibit the operation of an adult commercial establishment within 2,000 feet of a school, church or other educational or charitable institution.

The city legal department indicated that during the 10 day injunction period the city will not move against remaining adults establishments not protected by the federal order.

City Atty. Otis King said he felt it would be "bad faith" on the city's part to proceed against those not named in the suit.

City council member Frank Mancuso said he regretted Sterling's decision and speculated the council may find other ways to control pornography.

"Whatever needs to be done, I'm hopeful we can come up with an ordinance that will be effective," Mancuso said.

Attorney Rick Young, who represented the plaintiffs, called the temporary restraining order a "temporary victory" for the shop owners and "a victory for the Constitution."

In the request before Judge O'Conor, attorneys for Cagle claimed police were "harassing and intimidating employes and patrons." The store has been raided 11 times since April.

Attorneys representing the policemen named in the suit, said each of the raids resulted in arrests for public lewdness, prostitution, homosexual conduct and indecent exposure.

The number of radio stations in the United States rose from 906 in 1945 to 4,900 in 1970.

Judge fines 11 persons

Fines were set for 11 persons who entered pleas this week before Gray County Judge Don Hinton on misdemeanor charges which ranged from theft over $20 to driving while intoxicated.

Among those sentenced after they entered pleas on DWI charges were John Wesley Snow, 23, of Pampa; Mark Allen McBride, 17, of Pampa; Harold Lin Engle Jr., 28, of Pampa; Janice Willis Edwards, 28, of Pampa and Jerry Anton Gordzelik. Fines were $200 each plus costs and 30 days jail probated to six months.

Others who pleaded on DWI charges were Jimmy Lee Mayden, 22, of White Deer, whose fine was $50, court costs and three days in jail; Walter Franklin Miller, 38, of Pampa and Evelyn R. Smotherman, 53, of Pampa whose fines were the same as that of Mayden's.

Frank Jeffery Walker, 22, of Pampa was fined $300 after he entered a plea to charges of theft over $20 and under $200. He received 180 days probation.

Two persons entered pleas on charges of driving with license suspended. James M. Randon, 22, of Pampa was fined $200, court costs and granted a six month probation term.

Edward Earl Holt, 26, of Pampa was assessed the same penalty on charges of driving while his license was suspended.

Chamber offers reward for rapist

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — An elusive rapist who has terrorized the Polytechnic area of this one-time cattle capital now has a price on his head.

A spokesman for the Black Chamber of Commerce here said the group is offering $1,000 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the man police believe has raped or assaulted at least 10 women, most of them elderly, in the last 3½ months.

"The women are scared out there," a chamber spokesman said. "It was suggested that I remain anynymous because I'm afraid of possible vengenance against my wife."

Police say they have had extra units in the area for several weeks now but thus far all efforts to catch the man have failed.

The man, dubbed the "Poly Rapist" by local newsman and police, struck again Monday wounding 54-year-old Theda Dill Jones. Mrs. Jones was in serious condition at a local hospital early this morning with a bullet wound in her head.

Early last Saturday, police believe the same man was responsible for an attack on Mrs. Gladys Maxwell, 65. The woman said she awoke to find an intruder standing over her bed. Officers said Mrs. Maxwell told them she managed to scare her attacker off when she opened fire with a pistol.

"This has got to stop," said the spokesman. "This man will probably kill somebody."

Feds bail out urban areas

WASHINGTON (AP) — Efforts to aim billions of dollars in federal aid at urban "hardship" areas such as Newark, St. Louis and Philadelphia, are right on target, say Brookings Institution researchers.

The government's economic stimulus programs for the next fiscal year are sending an unprecedented $82 billion in federal grants to states and localities, the researchers told the Joint Economic Committee today.

"Partly by accident and partly by design," they said, the money has been funneled to the areas where unemployment and poverty is most pervasive.

"The average rate of increase" in the amount of federal dollars going to the cities compared to three years ago "is 135 per cent," according to an analysis by the Brookings associates.

"While all major cities receive sizable increases" in the next federal budget, "cities which are experiencing particularly severe problems will be the primary beneficiaries," they added.

The huge windfall is expected to provide some measure of fiscal relief for cities still reeling from inflation and declining tax bases.

However, many of the programs causing the big increase in spending are due to expire, or have "trigger" mechanisms that will suspend funding if economic conditions improve to a certain level.

"When the Congress turns next year to the question of whether and when to allow the Economic Stimulus Package to turn off, you will face conditions in which a decision could cause a precipitous drop in the funds available to some of the nation's most troubled big city governments," they told the congressional panel.

Brookings studied federal money going to 15 cities and discovered that the worst off on the institution's "hardship" index will receive big increases in federal spending. Newark is to receive a 400 per cent boost; St. Louis 247 per cent, Buffalo 154 per cent and Philadelphia and Chicago 150 per cent and 145 per cent respectively.

Even cities which rated well on the Brookings index will see healthy boosts in federal spending. Los Angeles, for example, is to receive a 162 per cent hike and Phoenix and Houston both will get about 90 per cent more money than three years ago.

"It would be a disaster" to many of these governments if the new federal aid should end overnight, as could happen if the programs are allowed to expire or do not take effect, says economist Richard Nathan.

Bodies may return

WASHINGTON (AP) — State Department officials expect Vietnam to return the remains of 22 Americans listed as missing in the Indochina war and hint that Hanoi may be preparing to reveal the fate of other missing U.S. citizens.

Senior state department officials told a House subcommittee Wednesday they expect the bodies of 20 U.S. military men and two civilians to be turned over by Hanoi by the end of September.

The 22 bodies include 15 identified by Hanoi officials in a Paris meeting with U.S. representatives in June, plus five listed as unknown, and the two civilians about whom queries had been made.

The subcommittee, headed by Rep. Lester Wolff, D-N.Y., scheduled a closed-door meeting today with Nguyen Cong Hoan, a Vietnamese legislator who says he has information about missing Americans.

Hoan, who escaped from Vietnam last March, arrived in the United States this week. Questioned by another House panel Tuesday, he said his information was based on "rumors" but came from a trustworthy source, who would be in danger if identified. He indicated there are Americans living in jails in Vietnam.

Richard Holbrooke, assistant secretary of state for East Asia, told Wolff's panel Wednesday that there was special significance in the fact that, for the first time, the Vietnamese had offered to return bodies which had not been the subject of specific inquiries.

But a congressman who twice led U.S. delegations to Hanoi to seek information on missing Americans says he doubts Vietnam will ever account for all MIAs.

Rep. G.V. Montgomery, D-Miss., told the subcommittee that some American pilots shot down during the war were lost at sea or in remote jungle where their bodies were never recovered.

"There is no way the Vietnamese could give a full accounting," Montgomery said.

About 2,500 Americans are unaccounted for from the Indochina war, 1,800 are presumed dead and 700 listed as missing in action. Many were lost in Laos and some in Cambodia, neither of which has furnished any information to U.S. officials.

Federal order stops oil from ending trip

VALDEZ, Alaska (AP) — North Slope crude oil, for 38 days on a trouble-scarred road to the trans-Alaska pipeline's southern terminal, has been stopped for the fifth time, this time by a federal order just 15 miles short of its destination.

The cause: 14 questioned welds on pipe sections inside the terminal here.

The U.S. Department of Transportation claims the welds are faulty and don't meet federal standards. Officials of the Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. reacted angrily to what one called a "last-minute order" and said the welds are sound.

Alyeska had intended to deliver the Prudhoe Bay crude to storage tanks here Wednesday — well within the Aug. 1 deadline the firm imposed on itself three years ago.

The town's two hotels are crowded with industry representatives, reporters, tourists and government observers who came for the announced arrival of the first oil.

Headed north to Valdez are two tankers — the 120,000-ton ARCO Juneau and the 80,000-ton Sohio Intrepid. The Juneau, expected to arrive Saturday, will be the first ship to carry Alaskan oil to the west coast, putting in to ARCO's refinery at Cherry Point, Wash., early next month. The Intrepid is expected to reach California a few days later.

But for now, the oil is still, waiting in Keystone Canyon 15 miles away.

Transportation officials said Wednesday that Alyeska was notified about 11 claimed flaws on July 21. Since then, they said, three more faulty welds have been found — all made during final preparations to receive the oil.

Several top Alyeska executives, who asked to remain unidentified, called the order unnecessary. They said the questioned pipe sections had withstood pressures 2½ times what would be expected in normal pipeline operations.

Opposes welfare cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. is opposing a cut in welfare benefits for tenants of subsidized housing because of the political battle it would entail, a government paper shows.

After a two-week struggle with the housing industry, the Department of Housing and Urban Development, mayors, governors, civil rights and labor groups, Califano wrote President Carter, "My best political judgment is that the misery is not worth the fight."

But two new controversies broke out over Califano's 60-page welfare reform proposal, parts of which The Associated Press has seen.

Carter is meeting privately today with several Cabinet members to discuss the paper. He plans to unveil his welfare reform by Aug. 4.

At a joint news conference Wednesday night with Califano, five big city mayors accepted the HEW secretary's turnaround on the tenants' issue. But they said they are dissatisfied with his unspecific promises that the federal government will increase the 50 per cent share of welfare costs it pays. States, counties and some cities pay the rest.

A second dispute brewed over Califano's proposal to shift $550 million from housing subsidies to welfare payments. Government sources said the Department of Health, Education and Welfare argues its welfare program will increase the rents paid for subsidized housing by that amount, allowing a similar reduction in government subsidies for these units.

Sources said the welfare proposal on Carter's desk claims HUD agreed with the $550 million figure, but HUD officials vehemently denied that and said no detailed calculation had been made.

But the dispute over Califano's original plan for cutting welfare benefits for subsidized housing tenants appeared at an end.

In one section of the welfare outline, Califano listed such cuts as an option but ended his discussion of them by writing, "I do not recommend this course."

The skeptical mayors who appeared with him at the news conferece said they still were trying to get assurance the welfare plan would fulfill Carter's campaign promise of a federal assumption of welfare costs.

Califano said there would be relief for state and local governments, but the mayors complained he would not tell them how much. Mayor Abraham Beame of New York City, which is paying $485 million in welfare this year, said that if the program is not satisfactory "we'll keep up the pressure."

BRIDGES, BELLS AND BATTERIES

NEW YORK (AP) — Door bells, flashlight batteries and the Verrazano-Narrows Bridge, the world's largest suspension bridge, all have something in common. They owe their existence to Andrew Wittman.

Wittman, a surveyor, is believed to be the first American to have made zinc metal. In 1845, he produced two ounces from ore discovered on a farm four miles south of Bethlehem, Pa. Now a mine, owned by Gulf & Western's New Jersey Zinc Company, the "farm" produces 2,000 tons of zinc ore each day.

US moves closes to selling arms

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration, responding to "new situations and new requests," is moving closer to approving arms sales to Egypt and Sudan, two of Russia's arms customers in the past, a spokesman says.

The State Department made two announcements Wednesday about the developing sales:

—Administration officials are consulting with Congress about possibly providing Egypt with additional C130 transport planes and other equipment.

—The President is prepared to open a military supply relationsip with Sudan and a nine-member survey team will visit the strategic East African country in early August "to determine Sudan's legitimate defense requirements."

The announcements, by spokesman Hodding Carter III, followed by one day word that the administration is prepared in principle to provide military assistance to Somalia, which is engaged in an African territorial conflict with neighboring Ethiopia.

Arms sales to any of the three nations has implications for U.S.-Soviet relations, since the Russians in the past have provided military supplies to each of the countries.

But the Soviets now are providing arms to Ethiopia, Somalia's foe, relations between the Russians and the Sudanese government have deteriorated in recent years and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat has ended his arms dependence on Moscow.

During his campaign for the presidency last year, Carter often was critical of U.S. arms sales overseas. An administration study launched shortly after he took office resulted in a six-point program unveiled in May.

While the program was aimed at reducing arms sales abroad, the President said, "We will continue to use arms transfers to promote our security and the security of our close friends.

U.S. officials said Saudi Arabia was likely to play a major role in financing the purchases by all three countries.

Mrs. Mondale urges money for arts

DALLAS (AP) — Federal jobs programs can aid unemployed singers, dancers, artists and actors in the same manner they aid other unemployed Americans, says Joan Mondale, wife of the vice president.

Mrs. Mondale made the suggestion in a brief news conference here Wednesday before ending a two-day tour of Texas. The news conference was held after Mrs. Mondale toured the Dallas Museum of Fine Arts with director Harry Parker.

Earlier, Mrs. Mondale made appearances at Houston, San Antonio and Austin.

Of her position as unofficial "arts advocate" of the current administration, Mrs. Mondale said, "I hope to put the spotlight on art, to focus attention on the arts."

Mrs. Mondale said that although she says she doesn't believe the federal government is doing enough for the arts, it would help if the government jobs programs could be used to assist unemployed performers and artists. "They can be included in programs for the unemployed just like other persons," she said.

After the tour of the museum, she announced that the Dallas museum will coordinate an exhibition of contemporary art works from the Southwest to be shown next year in the vice president's home in Washington, D.C.

Mrs. Mondale said, "This home belongs to the nation, and in its official capacity offers an opportunity for us to spotlight the achievements of these contemporary American artists."

The work of women, black and Spanish-American artists should be included in the exhibit which she said will include various types of art.

Mrs. Mondale and Mrs. Lady Bird Johnson, widow of former President Lyndon B. Johnson, toured the Johnson Library at Austin earlier in the day.

Mrs. Mondale and Mrs. Johnson stopped in front of a blown-up picture of Mrs. Johnson and her husband taken about 50 years ago.

Mrs. Johnson said, "That's what I looked like at the time we got engaged. We really ought to have a better picture of him. He really was handsome," Mrs. Johnson said.

Names in the news

MOSCOW (AP) — To hear the Soviets tell it, rock star Elvis Presley is now a broken and forgotten man demonstrating to the world the heartlessness of the American system of exploitation.

Aging and overweight, the former "king of rock" has been "mercilessly tossed onto the scrap heap of those who have gone out of fashion," the Literary Gazette, a Soviet journal, said Wednesday.

The newspaper did not mention Presley's pink mansion, fleet of cars or the fact that he is a millionaire many times over.

"The Western show business industry is constantly manufacturing new trends and concocting new stars and idols, and it pitilessly dumps all those who have gone out of fashion," the newspaper said.

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — With attorneys and a judge gathered around his hospital bed, 86-year-old comedian Groucho Marx has accepted the appointment of his grandson as his conservator.

Superior Court Judge Edward Rafeedie, emerging from the room at Cedars-Sinai Hospital in Los Angeles on Wednesday, said the ailing Marx nodded and responded softly, "Yes," when asked if he would accept Andrew Marx as his permanent personal conservator.

The appointment ended a lengthy court battle between Groucho's son Arthur and Erin Fleming, Groucho's longtime companion. Arthur filed suit last April to remove Miss Fleming as Groucho's personal conservator. Groucho had appointed her.

JERUSALEM (AP) — Former president Gerald Ford will visit Israel next spring as guest of Prime Minister Menahem Begin, Begin has said.

Speaking in Parliament Wednesday, Begin said he telephoned the invitation to Ford in California when he was in Washington last week.

"Ford is a friend of Israel," Begin said. "We want to show that we know how to thank our friends, even when they are not in power."

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Sen. John McClellan is improving and does not suffer from any critical heart problems, a cardiologist said after examining the 81-year-old lawmaker.

Dr. Edward Massie visited McClellan at the Baptist Medical Center, where the Arkansas Democrat has been resting since Friday night.

Massie said McClellan should be released from the hospital within a week and would be able to return to his duties in the Senate.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Billy Carter says hot and dry weather is hurting his peanut business, but his service station still has "more business than we can take care of.".

"We're realy dry," said Carter, who was attending a benefit party Wednesday at country singer Tom T. Hall's Nashville home. "The crop is almost gone this year."

Hall said receipts from the $50 per person affair would go to the Nashville Humane Association.

Yarbrough grabbed cameras, tv man says

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston television station was attempting to get back a cameraman's equipment that a station spokesman said former Texas Supreme Court Justice Donald B. Yarbrough grabbed and took into his house.

Bill Gilmartin, news director of KHOU-TV, said the altercation occurred Wednesday when cameraman George Ellis attempted to take pictures of Yarbrough's Houston residence.

Yarbrough was not available for comment but his wife said neither she nor her husband would have any comment.

A real estate agent said the Houston Yarbrough home sold for $125,000. The report of this sale and a report from an Austin real estate agent that Mrs. Yarbrough had entered an ernest money contract to buy a home there prompted Ellis to go to the Houston home, Gilmartin said.

Gilmartin said that while Ellis dismantled his equipment on the sidewalk in front of the Yarbrough home, the former Supreme Court justice "came out of the house in a very concerned state of mind."

Gilmartin said Yarbrough grabbed Ellis' camera, camera recorder and equipment dolly and took them inside the house. Ellis said Yarbrough made no physical threats and no one was hurt in the incident.

Gilmartin said the equipment was valued at between $5,000 and $8,000.

"We called Mr. Yarbrough and asked for our equipment," Gilmartin said. "The best way I can describe his answer is that he politely and very definitely demurred and he told us to contact his attorney, Mike Maness."

Contacted by the Houston Post, Maness said, "I have no comment to make in connection with anything that has happened with Channel 11 (KHOU)."

Yarbrough's wife, Julie, said, "We have no comment. He (Yarbrough) has no comment, either, thank you."

Gilmartin said Ellis was able to eject the video-tape cassette and retrieve it as Yarbrough went into the house. He said the pictures had no people in them and and added that he knew of no other witnesses to the incident.

Yarbrough, who resigned from the Supreme Court June 15, faces trial in Austin in October on forgery and perjury charges. A disbarment trial is scheduled in Houston Sept. 5.

Defense probes Korea payoffs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department is conducting its own investigation of the Korean influence-buying scandal in an effort to determine whether payoffs and gifts flowed to the Pentagon as well as to Capitol Hill.

In response to queries, the Pentagon acknowledged on Wednesday that it began its own investigation earlier this month.

A Pentagon spokesman said the investigation was ordered "because of information that there have been improprieties."

Meanwhile, Justice Department officials told a group of congressmen Wednesday that "a very few" indictments are expected as a result of the department's investigation of the scandal on Capitol Hill.

Assistant Atty. Gen. Benjamin R. Civiletti told congressmen no final decision has been made to seek indictments against anybody, although he said several cases are at the point where a decision will be made shortly.

Speaker of the House Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., said earlier this week that he understood five persons would be indicted soon. Sources said the five would include former congressmen, but no one now hoding office.

But Civiletti said the probe has not even produced enough "evidence of a chargeable crime" to take action against South Korean rice dealer Tongsun Park, who has been the central figure in the scandal.

But after Civiletti's cautious assessment at the unusual briefing, Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell told the congressmen, "There are some people that will be prosecuted.

"Others will be absolved," Bell continued, "and there will probably be some in the middle that your own committees will want to deal with from the standpoint of ethics and propriety."

The two Justice Department officials told the meeting of about 100 congressmen they could give no details on their findings.

Civiletti said an obvious problem in the investigation is that Park has fled to London and the Justice Department would need "evidence of a chargeable crime" to extradite him.

Judge Ellis retires

Chief Justice James A. Ellis of the 7th Court of Civil Appeals in Amarillo will lay down the law and retire Aug. 31 following a legal career which spans 34 years.

He made his announcement Wednesday on the sixth floor of the Potter County Courthouse, where his office is located.

"There comes a time even in the career of a judge when he ought to lay down the law for if he waits too long, quite frequently the laws of biology will take precedence over his productivity in the civil law," Judge Ellis said.

He plans to participate in a pilot legislative program where retired appellate judges will be assigned to preside over settlement conferences in cases which have reached the appellate level — a procedure designed to decrease the backlog of cases in metropolitan areas.

Judge Ellis was appointed to the appeals court in 1971 by Gov. Preston Smith. He was re-elected in 1972 without opposition. His term will end Dec. 31. Gov. Dolph Briscoe will appoint a successor for Ellis.

The 7th Court of Civil Appeal area covers 46 counties, including Gray.

Texas weather

By The Associated Press

Riproaring thunderstorms and occasional tornadoes lashed parts of Texas during the night, and deluges of rain filled the streets in places.

Sheriff's officers reported one twister struck one mile east of Granburg in the area south of Fort Worth and unroofed a farm house. There was no other word of damage there or from other tornadoes sighted near Sealy, which is in the Houston vicinity, and in Hood County near the middle of the state.

One of the heaviest downpours dumped more than two inches of rain at Alief, just west of Houston. Flooding of streets occurred at several points in that part of the state and also near Fort Worth.

A bumper crop of thunderstorms ripped through the south part of the Texas Panhandle into the South Plains, and marched eastward through much of North Central Texas while others belabored much of East Texas.

Appreciable rainfall brought some further relief from the protracted July heat wave at many points. Moisture measurements elsewhere included Dallas-Fort Worth 1.08 and Lubbock .92 inch.

By early morning occasional fog and low clouds covered much of Northeast Texas and it was at least partly cloudy everywhere else.

Forecasts promised scattered thunderstorms again late in the day from the Permian Basin and the South Plains eastward across a broad stretch of the state.

Temperatures near dawn ranged from 66 at Marfa and 68 at Lubbock up to 80 at Del Rio and Palacios, and 81 at Galveston. Wednesday's top marks went as high as 102 at Dallas and Junction and 105 at Waco.

National weather

By The Associated Press

A cooling trend continued in the Northeast overnight while much of the nation was experiencing mild weather.

Lows early today ranged from 40 degrees at Greenville and Houlton in Maine to 100 at Needles, Calif. Early morning temperatures ranged through the 40s and 50s in New England and much of the Northeast to the 50s and 60s in the Upper Midwest and northern Plains. In the Southeast temperatures were near 80 along the Gulf of Mexico coast.

Scattered showers were reported in the Rockies, the northern Plains and into the Upper Mississippi Valley, and from the southern Plains across the Gulf states and the Southeast. A few widely scattered showers were reported in the Pacific Northwest.

Skies remained clear over the intermountain region through much of the Pacific Coast and temperatures continue mild.

The National Weather Service predicted scattered showers and thunderstorms extending over the east portion of the southern Plains, the Lower Mississippi Valley and through the south Atlantic Coast states to the Gulf Coast from Texas to Florida.

Some early morning temperatures and conditions around the nation:

Eastern U.S.:

Atlanta 68 rain, Boston 61 clear, Chicago 63 clear, Cincinnati 58 clear, Cleveland 53 clear, Detroit 57 clear, Indianapolis 61 clear, Louisville 64 clear, Miami 82 clear, Nashville 71 cloudy, New Orleans 78 foggy, New York 64 clear, Philadelphia 61 clear, Pittsburgh 54 clear, Washington 61 clear.

Western U.S.:

Anchorage 56 clear, Denver 61 partly cloudy, Des Moines 65 partly cloudy, Fort Worth 73 cloudy, Kansas City 64 clear, Los Angeles 69 clear, Minneapolis-St. Paul 65 clear, Phoenix 94 partly cloudy.

Advice

Dear Abby
By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I just read in a magazine that one of the most unusual letters you ever received was from a woman who said that on her honeymoon her husband wanted her to lie in a tub of cold water for 20 minutes, and then come to bed and "pretend" she was dead.

Boy he IS weird! I would have been satisfied if on our honeymoon my wife had taken a hot bath and came to bed pretending she was ALIVE!

OPPOSITE PROBLEM

DEAR OPPOSITE: The wife of the weirdo who likes 'em cold and lifeless wrote to my sister. Not me.

DEAR ABBY: I was raped almost two years ago and something has been bothering me ever since. I was a virgin before I was raped, and now I won't be able to wear a white wedding dress because white stands for purity, and I'm not pure anymore.

I don't have a boyfriend and I may never get one, but in case I do I'll have to tell him the whole story and he may not even believe me.

Or do you think because I couldn't help myself I can wear white?

TROUBLED AT TWENTY-ONE

DEAR TROUBLED: Even though you may not be a virgin technically, you are still morally "pure." However, white gowns are not reserved for virgin brides only. Any bride who has never been married before may wear white.

DEAR ABBY: I recently attended a wedding with a male friend of mine. Although the invitation was sent to him, he asked me to accompany him. I accepted and we had a wonderful time. To my amazement, my friend received a bill for $25 for "taking a date."

In the past, my friend and I double-dated several times with the bride and groom, so I was no stranger to them. My friend and the groom had even been roommates for a while.

I'm in my 30s and have attended many weddings (myself taking a date, or vice versa) and I have never heard of being "billed" for my guest.

The parents of the bride are supposedly "upper crust" society. Is this proper? Have you ever heard of it before?

SAN FRANCISCAN

DEAR SAN: It is not proper, and I've never heard of it before. You fail to mention whether your friend asked if he could bring a date. If he brought you without asking, perhaps this was their way of punishing him. In any case, it was a chintzy stunt.

Ask Dr. Lamb
By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I need your opinion and any information you can give me. What causes the parathyroid glands to malfunction and form an excess amount of calcium that flows into the blood stream? How harmful is this excess? It was suggested that all dairy products, liver, fish and vitamins A and D be eliminated from my diet. What can be done to avoid this excess calcium?

DEAR READER — The parathyroid glands are on each side of the thyroid gland around your trachea (wind pipe) in your throat. The hormone they form causes calcium to be mobilized from the bones and does increase the calcium content in the blood. The glands do not form calcium themselves. They work with vitamin D and your calcium intake to help regulate your blood calcium level.

Over active parathyroid glands produce too much hormone that can mobilize calcium from your bones. That results in a high blood calcium and may cause your bones to fracture easily. The excess calcium may also cause kidney stones, and may increase the acid digestive juices from the stomach causing digestive complaints. This combination has led doctors to say the hyperparathyroid state is a disease of bones, stones and groans.

Sometimes this overactivity is caused by some other disease in the body. Some forms of kidney disease and diseases that interfere with the absorption of calcium from your digestive system are examples of underlying diseases that may cause an over active parathyroid gland.

Other cases are caused by a small tumor (rarely malignant) that causes over production of the hormone.

The ideal treatment depends upon the cause. If there is a small tumor of the parathyroid glands the treatment is surgical.

If the over activity is secondary to another underlying disease the treatment is directed toward trying to correct that abnormality.

I am a bit puzzled by your dietary advice. Cutting down your calcium intake will not help. If surgery is not needed or the underlying problem is not completely correctable then it is usually wise to direct treatment efforts toward replacing lost chemical salts which may even include replacing calcium and phosphorous. Most important of all it is advisable to drink plenty of fluids every day, spaced throughout the 24 hour period to ensure a continuous passage of dilute urine. This will help prevent kidney stones.

I think you would be wise to ask your doctor to refer you to an endocrinologist for a consultation. I see from your address that the city you live in has a university medical center. You could be referred to the endocrinology section there. Management of such cases is often complicated and they may be able to help your doctor with your case.

Polly's pointers
By Polly Cramer

DEAR POLLY — After reading the newspaper I can wash the black ink off of my hands but my blouses are being ruined and none of the detergents I have used will remove these ink stains. Hope someone can help me. —MRS. L.T.

DEAR POLLY — I have ink from the newspaper all over my pretty and quite expensive plastic tablecloth and I have tried to remove it with toothpaste, hair spray, bleach and lots of other things but nothing works so hope you can tell what will remove this. —DOROTHY.

DEAR Mrs. L.T. and Dorothy — A U.S. Department of Agriculture booklet suggests the following for removing mimeograph and printing ink. Sponge with turpentine until stains disappear and, while wet with the solvent, work detergent into the spots. Put article in hot water and soak overnight and then wash thoroughly. Of course, this if your fabric will take to the treatment suggested. —POLLY.

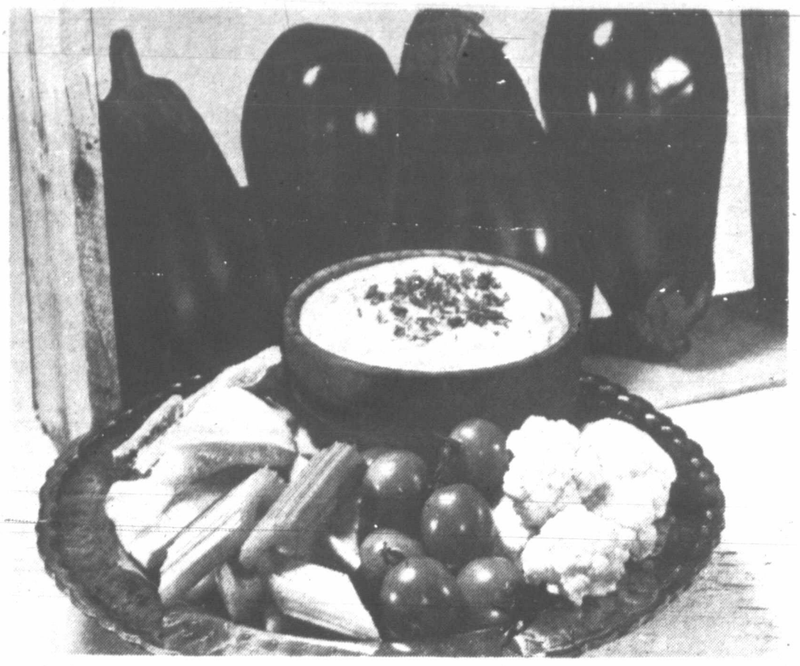

DEAR POLLY — Keep a first aid kit in your car and be sure to add several dimes to have ready in case an emergency telephone call has to be made.

I have a large garden, so to space the rows I push an empty thread spool on each of the end teeth of my gardening fork, go down the spaded ground with this and the rows will be evenly spaced.

Living alone, one pie is too much to make so I have found the following a good idea, especially for fruit pies. I roll out two crusts, line the pie pan with one add the fruit on only one side, fold the other half of the crust back over it and crimp the edges. The same is done with the other crust in the other half of the pan using a different kind of fruit.

Earrings for pierced ears are easier to find and do not get separated if fastened through the holes of buttons.

Keep a magnifying glass in the glove compartment of your car so it is ready for reading the small print on road maps. —MRS. R.L.

Baba Ghanoush is a delightful appetizer made with eggplant and sesame paste that may be served with cherry tomatoes, celery wedges and cauliflowerets.

Dip into eggplant mix

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Recipe-watchers like myself are always interested to note when certain dishes "catch on."

Take Baba Ghanoush, a delicious cooked eggplant and sesame paste appetizer served with pita, individual disks of flat bread easily split open, or with raw vegetables.

A recipe for Baba Ghanoush appeared in "Good Food From The Near East" published over 25 years ago. It surfaced 12 years later in "The Best of Near Eastern Cookery." The first book was written by a woman with an international background; the second by two New Yorkers who consulted culinarians at various missions to the United Nations.

But Baba Ghanoush didn't catch on until recipes for it appeared in "A Book Of Middle Eastern Food" and "Middle Eastern Cookery," both published in the last five years. The first book was issued by a New York publisher, the second by a publisher in California. Nowadays you'll find Baba Ghanoush served in both restaurants and homes. Its recent popularity may be attributed to the fact that these days sesame paste is more available than it once was.

One note about the spelling of this interesting appetizer. We have found it spelled baba gannoj, baba ghannouj and baba ghanoush. We have used the last spelling as given in "A Book of Middle Eastern Cooking" by Claudia Roden who grew up in Egypt and who has thoroughly researched Mideastern culinary and literary matters.

BABA GHANOUSH

- 1 large or 2 small eggplants (about 1½ pounds)
- 2 cloves garlic
- ¼ cup lemon juice
- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- Sesame Paste, see below
- Salt to taste
- Minced parsley

Cut eggplant in half lengthwise; place cut side down on a foil-lined broiler pan minus the rack. Broil about 6 inches from high heat, turning as necessary, until the skin is charred and the eggplant is very soft; this may take as long as 45 to 60 minutes but check often because broilers vary considerably. Cool eggplant slightly; scrape pulp away from skin and discard skin. In an electric blender whirl together until smooth the eggplant pulp, garlic, lemon juice, olive oil and ¼ cup sesame paste; add salt and more sesame paste if you like. Cover and chill. Before serving sprinkle with parsley. Serve with wedges of hot pita or with cherry tomatoes or such raw vegetables as celery wedges or cauliflowerets. Makes about 2 cups, depending on how much sesame paste is used.

Sesame Paste: Labeled Tahini, it may be bought in some supermarkets, in health and food specialty shops and in stores featuring Middle Eastern products.

WEEKDAY DINNER
Stuffed Zucchini
French Fries Green Peas
Fruit Pudding Beverage

STUFFED ZUCCHINI

Only half a pound of ground beef is called for.

- 2 zucchini, each ½ pound
- Butter or margarine
- ½ of a small onion, minced (about 2 tablespoons)
- ½ pound ground beef
- 4 thin slices (⅜-inch) bread, decrusted and crumbed (1 and 1-3rd cups)
- Several sprigs parsley, minced
- ¾ teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper
- ½ cup grated cheddar cheese

Cover whole, unpared zucchini with boiling water and boil in a covered saucepan for about 8 minutes. Cut in half lengthwise and scoop out flesh leaving shells about ¼-inch thick; turn shells flesh side down to drain. Drain scooped-out pulp and cut up fairly fine. In a little hot butter in a 10-inch skillet cook the onion and beef, crumbling the meat with a fork until it loses its red color; stir in the pulp, half the bread crumbs, the parsley, salt and pepper. Pile into shells. In a small skillet melt 1 tablespoon butter; off heat stir in the remaining crumbs and the cheese; sprinkle over meat mixture in shells. Bake in a very shallow foil-lined pan in a preheated 350-degree oven until browned — about 25 minutes. Makes 4 small or 2 large servings.

Potatoes plus pickles

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

In Czechoslovakia cooks usually put pickles in their potato salads — or so we heard. Sure enough, when we looked into "The Czechoslovak Cookbook" by Joza Brizova (Crown) we found that both the recipes given for potato salad called for just that savory addition.

Then Blanka Kmoch, who now lives in New York but who received a degree at the Home Economy Institute in Kolin, Czechslovakia, confirmed the addition. Blanka gave us another good idea: "In America potato salads are usually served with ham or turkey on a cold buffet. In Czechoslovakia we serve them with hot dishes: fried fish fillets, roast chicken or breaded pork chops."

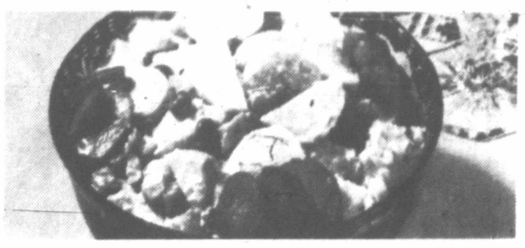

CZECH POTATO SALAD A LA BLANKA

- 4 pounds potatoes
- 2 medium carrots
- Salt
- 2 cups mayonnaise
- ⅛ teaspoon white pepper
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- 3 tablespoons dill pickle liquid
- 3 tablespoons cider vinegar
- 2 tablespoons salad oil
- ½ cup finely diced dill pickle
- ½ cup finely diced onion
- ½ cup finely diced celery
- ¼ cup minced parsley
- ¼ pound finely diced cooked ham (generous 2-3rds cup)
- 2 hard-cooked eggs, finely chopped
- ½ cup cooked green peas

In a large saucepot bring 4 quarts water and 2 tablespoons salt to a boil; add the scrubbed, unpeeled potatoes and carrots. Boil, covered, until tender when pierced with a fork. Drain. Remove skins from vegetables. Slice potatoes — there should be about 2 quarts. Dice carrots — there should be about ½ cup.

In a large bowl or refrigerator container stir together the mayonnaise, pepper, sugar, pickle liquid, vinegar, 3 tablespoons water and the oil. Add potatoes, carrots, dill pickle, onion, celery, parsley, ham, eggs and peas. Toss thoroughly but lightly. Serve at room temperature or chill. Garnish with sliced hard-cooked egg and dill-pickle slices.

Makes 12 servings.

CZECH POTATO SALAD—Pickles are a "must" ingredient, and the salad is often served with fried fish fillets.

Toffee Souffle Parfaits

To prepare combine 1½ cups frozen and chopped chocolate - covered Heath English Toffee candy bar with ¼ cup water in small saucepan. Place over low heat and cook slowly, stirring constantly until most of the toffee candy is melted, six to eight minutes. Cool. Combine 1 envelope unflavored gelatin, 2 tablespoons sugar, ¼ teaspoon salt, 1½ cups milk and 2 egg yolks. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until mixture coats spoon. Stir in ½ cup chopped toffee, one teaspoon vanilla, and ½ teaspoon rum extract. Chill until mixture begins to set. Beat 2 egg whites until they hold soft peaks. Gradually add 2 tablespoons sugar and continue beating until stiff and glossy. Fold into gelatin mixture and sauce into parfait glasses or dessert dishes. Chill. Makes six servings.

Roy Peden limped home with a five - over - par 76 for a 36-hole score of 144, but still has a two-stroke lead in the championship flight of the Tri-State Seniors Golf Tournament at the Pampa Country Club.

Peden's opening-round lead of four strokes was whittled to a pair, as previous winners Doug Roush (1974) and Web Wilder (1972, 1976) came in with scores of 146.

Defending champ Wilder and Harold DeLong tallied one-under 70s for the lowest rounds of the day. DeLong, the 1971 and 1973 champion, is three strokes back with Carroll Weaver, and C.L. Duniven at 147.

Bob Muir of Canyon burned the course with a 71 and is at 148, one stroke ahead of Canadian's Oliver Waters.

Nineteen of the original 32 golfers made the cut of 152 to continue in the championship flight. The other 13 players will finish the tournament in the president's flight.

Pampans Ed Myatt (151) and H.C. Grady (152) made the championship cut, while local golfers Clinton Evans (158) and Chester Darnell (154) dropped to the president's group.

Peden, who won the prestigious United States National Seniors in Palm Springs last year beating 62 pros and 338 amateurs, was somewhat perplexed at his round.

"Until I got to No. 7, I honestly was playing so well I thought I could beat the 68 I got Tuesday. But it took me three putts to get down from 12 feet, and after that I lost my concentration. I really didn't make another shot all day," Peden said.

"I'll just have to get out here early tomorrow morning and hit a bucket of balls to get my swing in shape. But I'm still up there at the top. At least it's made a better tournament, hasn't it?"

J.B. White, who along with Peden was considered to be the tourney favorite, played in the first foursome with the leader and echoed similar sentiments about his 77.

"I just didn't play good golf today. I'm putting terribly even though the greens are in great shape. But I'll give it another go tomorrow," White said.

Tri-State veteran Wilder just shook his head and smiled when asked about his sparkling round of 70.

"You know, golf is a funny game. I actually think I played better golf and made better shots Tuesday when I shot a 76, but I just didn't sink the putts then. The 70 looks a lot better on the scoreboard, but I didn't play any better," Wilder said.

"At least I'm in the running now," he said.

The Texas team of Roy Peden, J.B. White, Doug Roush, H.C. Grady, Carroll Weaver, Fred Fike, and Boyd Stephens won the aggregate score trophy for Texas during Tuesday's qualifying round.

Age group winners were:
50 and below: Roy Peden
60-64: Fred Fike, Otis Garner, Duniven, Eddie Smith
65-69: Boyd Stephens, Carroll Weaver
70-74: H.L. McMahan, Haskel Graves, Hal Warner, Leo Daniels
75-79: Al Schrock, Charles Linton, Truman Webb
80 and above: Frank Day, Roy Allen, Ray Allen

The championship flight teed it up at 9:04 this morning, while the president's flight was scheduled to begin at 8:32.

Del Rio stars rally past Pampa

By TOM KENSLER
Pampa News Sports Editor

Del Rio broke open a close ballgame Wednesday with four runs in the bottom of the fifth to beat host Pampa, 6-1, and advance undefeated to the fourth round of the West Texas Babe Ruth Tournament held at Optimist Park.

In other action, Lamesa eliminated Dumas, 8-2, and Littlefield sent Graham home, 7-3.

Del Rio held a narrow 2-1 lead, and each team had but one hit, when Rio left fielder Ralph Guerra started off the fourth stanza with a single.

Pampa starter Chris Dixon threw one ball to the next batter, Martin Cardenas, and was taken out in favor of reliever Mark Qualls. Qualls then beaned Cardenas with a fastball that cracked the right fielder's helmet.

The pitch seemed to shake Qualls, and the next three Del Rio batters rocked the 14 - year - old with run-scoring singles. A walk to Joe Aguire and a left - field single by Gilbert Huerta accounted for the fourth and final run of the inning.

Pampa's Keenan Henderson and Mark Jennings poked singles with one out in the sixth, but were stranded when Mickey Bynum and slumping Loyd Remy failed to hit safely.

Qualls was saved from possible disaster in the sixth when heady catcher Clyde Coffee threw an infield - fly - rule ball to third base to nail Ralph Guerra for an unusual double play. Earlier, Cardenas was hit in the helmet again by Qualls, but shook it off and trotted to first.

Keith Stone kept Pampa's hopes alive with a one-out double in the top of the seventh, but after Qualls wiffed, Stone was caught attempting to steal third for the game's final out.

Hard-throwing lefty Larry Molini, who beat Graham in 102 degree weather Monday, picked up the victory while limiting Pampa to four hits.

In games today, Pampa will try to rebound against Littlefield at 5:30 p.m. Pampa beat Littlefield on Tuesday, 7-2. Del Rio is pitted against Lamesa at 8 o'clock.

Salinas layup ices win

DALLAS (AP) — Taunted, frustrated, scoreless and saddled with four fouls, young giant Gilbert Salinas showed a touch of class Wednesday night in the Texas schoolboy All-Star basketball game with the final outcome on the line.

The 6-foot-11 Salinas of San Antonio Burbank, who chose Notre Dame over some 200 other schools offering him a scholarship, scored his only nine points in the final 5:58 minutes of the game for a 101-97 victory by the South over the North.

When Salinas finally scored his first points on two free throws to narrow the South deficit to 90-87, he was given a loud Bronx cheer by the North players.

But the only harrahs at the end were from the South partisans in the Dallas Convention Center.

Salinas hit a go-ahead tip-in for a 94-92 lead with 3:30 to play and nailed two free throws as 24 seconds remained for a 99-97 lead. Then he hauled down a rebound and fed Chuck O'Neall of Houston Milby for a layup that iced the North.

"I got frustrated because the officials called too many fouls and I let it get to me," Salinas admitted. "My shooting was off (one for eight from the field) and I guess all the people were disappointed in my play because of all the pre-game publicity."

Vernon Smith of Dallas Carter, a 6-foot-6 jumping jack who will attend Texas A&M, did a superb job of guarding Salinas and connected on 9 of 18 shots from the field and four free throws for 22 points.

Smith, who was awarded the Most Valuable Player award, said "I was really psyched up to go against Salinas because he'd been getting all that good ink.

"He's no better than any other big man in Dallas.

Tourney set

A women's fast pitch softball tournament will be held Aug. 5-7 in Borger. Entry fee is $30 and must be turned in by Monday, Aug. 1. Trophies will be awarded to first, second, and third place teams.

For more information contact Derk Brittain, 306 Dolomita, Borger, 79007, 273-3657, or Linda Thurman at 273-7238.

Football stars clash

DALLAS (AP) — There could and likely will be some surprises in the lineup for tonight's Texas High School football All-Star game in the Cotton Bowl.

Doctors have ruled out All-American linebacker Billy Don Jackson of Sherman for the North team. Jackson suffered a pulled hamstring muscle Tuesday and it has not responded well to treatment.

Jackson, an awesome physical specimen at 6-3, and 240-pounds, was the center of a bitter recruiting war between Southern Methodist and UCLA before he opted for the California school.

Yet another stunner is that Scott Smith of Dallas Highland Park will get the starting nod over heralded Darrell Shepard of Odessa Permian at quarterback in the North backfield. Smith has been sensational in North workouts and head coach Tommy Hudspeth feels Smith deserves to start.

Shepard is under investigation by the Southwest Conference and the NCAA regarding an automobile loan after he signed with the University of Houston. Only days earlier Shepard had said he was going to Texas.

The North, which won 10-8 last year, will have to generate plenty of offensive firepower to combat the South which has such nifty quarterbacks as Mike Mosley of Humble and Richy Ethridge of Port Neches-Groves.

A low-scoring game is predicted because of the likes of the North's 278-pound Hosea Taylor of Longview, a punishing lineman, and the South's Alvin Ruben of Baytown Lee.

Al Dennis of Baytown Sterling is the head coach for the South.

Officials refuse to predict a turnout for the 7:30 p.m. kickoff but a crowd between 10,000 to 15,000 was expected. Heavy rains Wednesday night helped cool down the Cotton Bowl which had been subjected to 100-degree heat for almost two weeks.

The University of Texas and Baylor each will be represented by seven players in the game while Texas A&M has six and Houston five.

Bethea fails to show

NACOGDOCHES, Tex. (AP) — Defensive end Elvin Bethea failed to show up for practice at the Houston Oilers' training camp Wednesday for the fourth straight day.

The action could cost Bethea $2,000 as he reportedly is being assessed a $500 fine each day he misses practice.

Bethea is involved in a contract dispute but neither he nor officials of the National Football League club will comment on the specifics of the disagreement.

"I don't know what he's going to do," said Head Coach O. A. "Bum" Phillips. "He thinks he's right. We think we're right. He can't win unless he quits football, and then we all lose."

Bannister out 21 days

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Astros pitcher Floyd Bannister, the team's No. 1 draft choice last year, has been placed on the 21-day disabled list.

Bannister, who had posted a 4-7 record, had returned to Houston from the current road trip and team physican diagnosed a left elbow problem as tendinitis. He was placed on the list Wednesday.

Replacing Bannister will be Tom Dixon, a righthander who has a 13-4 record at Charleston, S.C. Dixon was to join the team today in Pittsburgh.

Bad week for Cowboys

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — It's been a bad week for running backs in the Dallas Cowboys training camp as several have suffered apparently minor injuries. Heisman Trophy winner Tony Dorsett became the center of more concern Wednesday when he bruised his right knee in the same area where he suffered a slight sprain last Thursday in a scrimmage. Doug Dennison, Charles Young, Scott Laidlaw and rookie Fred Williams are also injured.

And the Cowboys were playing musical lineman Wednesday, particularly at right tackle where a man who was filling in for a player injured earlier was himself felled for about two days by a neck sprain.

Jim Eidson, a second-year tackle, who had been filling in for injured All Pro Rayfield Wright, suffered a neck sprain and is expected to miss several days of practice.

The cornerstone of the Treasury Building in Washington supposedly contains a lock of hair from President Jackson's granddaughter, Mary Donelson, who was born in the White House.

Congressmen complain

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House is receiving so many complaints from members of Congress about the difficulty of getting constituents on "VIP tours" of the White House that a new method of distributing tour tickets is being adopted.

Rejected, at least for the present, is a suggestion from the office of Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., that the early morning tours — not to be confused with regular public tours — be abolished.

Instead, tour office director Nancy Willing met Monday with Frank Moore, President Carter's assistant for congressional liaison, and decided to try a new system of ticket distribution that hopefully will make it easier for senators and House members to claim their weekly allotment of tickets.

Roy Greenaway, Cranston's administrative assistant, said the old system was inequitable and required time-wasting letter writing and phone calling between Capitol Hill and the White House.

Instead of soliciting individual ticket requests, Moore and Miss Willing said, each congressional office now will fill out request forms once a day, which will be picked up daily by White House messengers. On the following day the messenger will return with names of constituents being given tickets, along with a notation of the day and time they will be expected at the White House.

This should sharply reduce the flow of letters and phone calls, Moore said, and give Miss Willing's staff more time to deal with special requests over and above each Congress member's weekly allotment.

House members routinely get 10 tickets a week, senators 15 to 20. They are coveted because they convey an element of status. Moreover, ticket holders do not have to stand in long lines and, once inside the White House, receive better guide service than regular visitors. They also see the China Room, named for its display of dishes from many administrations, which is not included on regular tours.

Miss Willing said an average of 1,300 visitors a day take the VIP tours, Tuesday through Saturday. The tours were initiated during the presidency of Dwight D. Eisenhower.

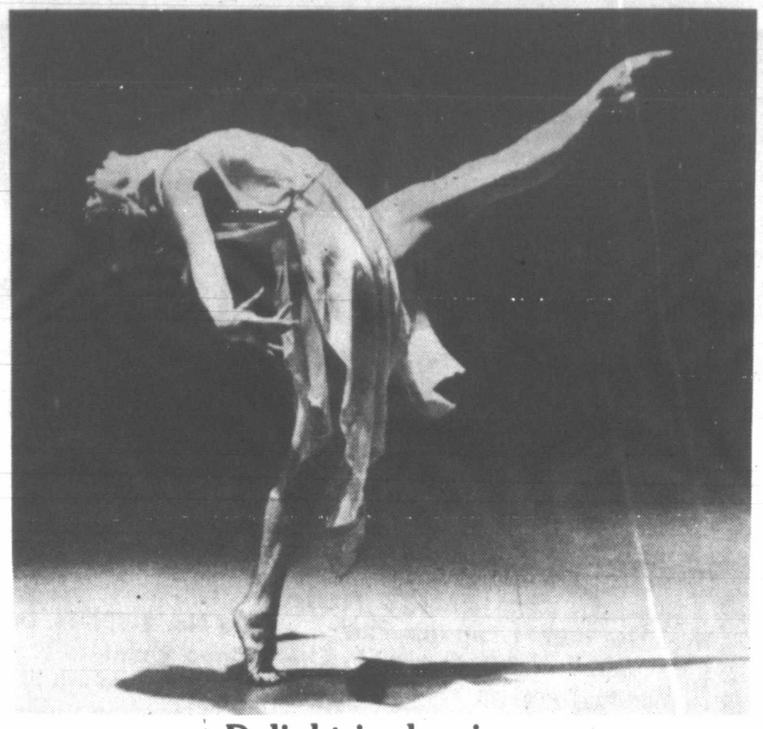

The Moore-Willing solution may not eliminate one problem of which Greenaway complained. He said there is such ticket demand from Californians that July tickets were parceled out in March.

Rep. Elwood Hillis, R-Ind., wrote Carter about his own ticket problems, saying his constituents "indicate there has been a vast curtailment in the number of visitors" admitted for both VIP and regular tours.

Miss Willing said there has been no cutback, and reported that on some days the number of visitors has exceeded the year-earlier figure.

Vice President Walter F. Mondale is known widely to enjoy more influence, and wield greater responsibility, than most men who have held the office. Indeed, perhaps more and greater than anyone else.

J.B. "Whizzer" White golfing in Pampa.

Golfer "Whizzer" White- a late-starting star

By TOM KENSLER
Pampa News Sports Editor

Unlike the other "young bucks" at the Tri-State Seniors Golf Tournament, 56-year-old J.B. "Whizzer" White is a relative newcomer to golf.

While several of the seniors teed it up during the days of Bobby Jones and Walter Hagen, White didn't swing a club until 1950 when he was the ripe old age of 30.

Before that, White's sports interests were confined to baseball and basketball; two sports which he lettered in at Texas Tech.

"Those two sports took up all my time, and I really didn't have an interest in golf," White said.

"But after college I was looking for a sport that I could play as I got up in years, and decided to give this game a try."

As with many natural athletes, White seemed to take to the links with almost immediate success. He started shooting in the mid 80s from the beginning, and soon he was the club champ at Hillcrest Country Club in his hometown of Lubbock.

"I think I have sort of a baseball swing, but I've learned to adjust with it. Also I've been told that I use a lot of wrist action, which probably comes from basketball," White said.

While walking among the groups of seniors talking in the club house, one constantly hears, "Hey, did you see Whizzer White hit that drive. Man, he can hit it a mile." White acknowledges that driving is his strongpoint, a skill he attributes to basketball.

"It's all in the wrists. The longest hitter I ever saw was Rick Barry, the pro basketball player. He can really smack it," White said.

The other facets of his golf game were clicking Monday when White shot a two-under-par 69 practice round — the first time he had ever played the Pampa Country Club 18.

However, his first two tournament rounds have left him disappointed. His score of 73-77 — 150 was six strokes back of co-favorite Roy Peden at the midway point.

"It's just one of those things. I don't know what to say because I really like this course," White said. "The greens are in super shape, and the layout of the course is very fair for seniors."

White says he is enjoying himself here at his first Tri-State, and plans on adding it to his yearly schedule of seven or eight amateur and senior amateur tournaments. Last year he won the 55-58 age bracket of the prestigious West Texas — New Mexico Senior Amateur Tournament when it was held at Vista Hills in El Paso.

But even more impressive was his finish in the top 16 of the USGA National Seniors Tournament at Cherry Hills in Denver last September. He qualified for the championship by winning the only slot allotted to the upper West Texas area.

And he's aiming for this year's nationals at Sutton, Mass. "Oh yea, I want to give it another try. First I have to qualify at Lubbock, though. But I'll be back."

With confidence like that, you can bet he'll make it to Sutton.

Oil burns in Liberty

Probe in Houston yields no charges

HOUSTON (AP) — Mayor Fred Hofheinz says he has been injured by a county grand jury which investigated alleged criminal activity by an unidentified high city official.

The panel completed its five-week probe Wednesday but returned no indictments. It announced it had found no evidence of criminal acts having been committed by the official.

Hofheinz was never formally cited as the subject of the investigation but he said Bill Vawter, the grand jury foreman, used his name in tape-recorded interviews.

"I have been injured here in a way that no action, no statement of the grand jury, no apology from anybody is going to be able to repair," Hofheinz said.

In mid-June Vawter said the investigation had been prompted by widespread rumors about a May 3 police raid in which several persons, included a high official, were alleged to have been arrested. The panel retained Bob Scott, a former assistant district attorney, as an outside prosecutor to assist in the probe.

Hofheinz told newsmen June 16 he had no knowledge of what the investigation was about and said he himself had never been arrested.

Hofheinz is serving a second two-year term as mayor and announced June 9 he will not seek a third term in the Nov. 8 city general election.

One grand juror contacted by the Houston Post indicated there was an attempt to use the jury as a political tool.

"Fred Hofheinz has all my respect," said the juror, who refused to be quoted by name. "Frankly, at first I thought the grand jury was being used. . . . I felt we were still being used all the way through."

Asked if this meant it was Hofheinz who was being investigated, the juror would only comment, "It's all spelled out. I spelled it out for you. It's all written there. Can't you read between the lines?"

However, other grand jury members interviewed by the Post denied there was any political manipulation of their probe and most generally followed the lead of Vawter in repeatedly referring to the final paragraph of the panel's report.

That paragraph stated, "It is unlawful for a grand jury to disclose any evidence that has been brought before the grand jury during any investigation. Therefore, it would be improper to comment on any of the facts concerning allegations considered."

Hofheinz stressed that he believed the rumors were the result of an organized effort but he said he does not plan to discuss publicly those he believes responsible for starting them. He also said he might pursue the matter in court.

"Because I am interested in protecting my private rights, I am cautious about making broad accusations," he said. "But this is a political year and, obviously, the first people to look for guilt are those who have a direct interest in tarnishing the reputation of the mayor."

He said he decided not to seek re-election long before the rumors began spreading through the city and that he views the matter as a private rather than a political question.

"Any and all public reactions to this vicious slander might have impact on anything I choose to do privately about it," he said. "When and if I choose to accuse guilty parties, it will be because I believe that they have slandered me in a way I can recover damages in a court of law."

The mayor said if he decides to file suit it probably will be after the Nov. 8 election.

"It would be a mistake, I think, to do it (file suit) — if done — in the contex of a political campaign," he said. "I do not want my response to be political. There is a deep personal injury that has been put upon me, and if I see recompense for that personal injury, I might damage my chances by making it a political issue.

"In my mind, it is not a political matter. It is a personal matter. And I am mad."

He said he frequently loses battles with such bodies as the city council or the press and "somehow you don't mind losing " those battles.

NAACP director blasts Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — NAACP director Benjamin Hooks, ignoring President Carter's warning against criticism of his domestic programs, says Carter should remember that when he meets his maker, he'll be judged on whether "he fed the hungry."

In a speech that brought cries of "Amen," Hooks placed the nation's largest civil rights organization "four-square" behind Vernon Jordan of the National Urban League, who said earlier this week that Carter's policies are inadequate for black and poor people.

Following Hooks' speech Wednesday to the Urban League, Jordan said civil rights leaders are "together" and will continue pressuring Carter despite the President's statement that criticism of his record damages "the hopes and aspirations of poor people."

Just as labor and business leaders lobby Carter for their concerns, "We cannot expect black people and poor people to suffer silently the daily outrages of their lives, to complacently accept joblessness and poverty," said Jordan.

Hooks put in his last day at the Federal Communications Commission on Wednesday and, as incoming head of the NAACP, joined a growing chorus of civil rights leaders petitioning Carter for new policies.

Explaining that as a Baptist preacher he believes Carter has been born again, Hooks told the Urban League: "I believe he has a conscience that can be reached. It's our job to reach it starting here and now.

"I will remind him that when he shall have finished the work that he has been given to do on this earth and he stands before the pearly gates ... he will not be judged on the fact that he was an atomic engineer, nor will Peter be concerned about the fact that he was a successful peanut farmer, or a governor of Georgia, or even a president.

"But they will ask him, Brother Jimmy:

"I was hungry, did you feed me?

"I was naked, did you clothe me?

"I was in jail, did you come and see about me?

"I'm not concerned about whether you thought I was a beggar.

"But I'm concerned about whether you handed the help to the poor brother that used to be my little one."

Carter told Jordan on Monday that criticism of his administration's domestic record is damaging his attempts to aid the poor.

Judge rules against teacher

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — A federal magistrate has ruled that Janet Berry, a University of Texas art teacher, was not discriminated against because she was a woman.

Judge Joseph Leonard of San Antonio reported his findings to U. S. District Court Judge Jack Roberts who will make a final determination in Mrs. Berry's case.

Mrs. Berry's longstanding sex discrimination complaint seeks $500,000 in damages or an injunction to stop alleged harassment by UT-Austin.

Beware of skunks

Pampa city residents were warned to "beware of skunks" today by Elmer Young, chief sanitarian for the city health department.

"A skunk is born with rabies," he warned. "And once in a while we get a call saying skunks are moving to town, usually during harvest season. People need to stay away from them if they can. They are considered dangerous."

He explained that persons exposed to rabies must take a series of shots which costs between $400 and $500 each.

He called attention to a rabid pet skunk which exposed at least 27 persons in an eastern Oklahoma town recently to rabies.

The skunk was obtained at a fair in Canton, Tex., called Canton Trade Day.

You just can't lick a good vacation unless you're a dog. Then you'd likely be better off left in a veterinarian's kennel. That way you won't get in the way of your master's good time and you won't be hounding him for all those food, water and rest stops.

A dog gone on vacation can be a dog gone for good

By JEANNE GRIMES
Pampa News Staff

Veterinarians agree the picture of the family pet pining away for a vacationing owner is usually nothing more than a bittersweet fantasy indulged in by people who miss their pets.

"Leaving a pet at the kennel is sometimes harder on the owner than the pet," Dr. Kenneth Royse of Royse Animal Hospital, 1238 E. Frederic, said.

"I let the owners see how content the animals are in the cages," he added, "and they say 'yes, but not my pet.'

"They're wrong. I contend when a pet has been here for 10-30 minutes, it has really forgotten about the owners."

"I think that's probably true," Dr. M.W. Horne of the Gray County Veterinary Clinic, 1329 S. Hobart, said. "But there again it depends on the animal. I think they enjoy being around other dogs, especially if they have been kept in a yard away from other animals."

Boarding the family pet during vacation time is only one of the options open to pet owners.

"I think there are basically four groups of people," Dr. Royse said. "One group takes their pets with them on vacation, one gets a neighbor to care for the pets, one board the pet with a veterinarian or kennel and one group doesn't do anything. They just go off and leave the animal to fend for itself.

"People just don't want to spend the money to pay for professional boarding. Every day I get calls from someone caring for a neighbor's pet and the animal has run away or been hit by a car or gotten sick. Then the owner is out more money to repair the pet than they would have been out by boarding it in a kennel."

"It just depends a lot on the pet which route to go — boarding or traveling," Dr. Horne said. "It can depend on how much a pet has traveled or if a pet gets real hyper. Pets are usually better off boarded if the kennel is a reputable place.

"Here at my office I don't really try to push the boarding. It's a service to my clients, really."

Dr. Horne said he has space for 18-20 dogs and cats at his facility and Dr. Royse's clinic has 30 permanent cages and some portable cages for use during the holidays when more pet owners board their animals.

A new boarding facility has been constructed at Hendrick Animal Clinic, 1912 Alcocok. A spokeswoman at the clinic said the kennel, which has space for an estimated 120 animals, has a high occupancy rate during the summer and on holidays.

"I think he (Dr. Ron Hendrick) prefers to board animals," she said. "When traveling, animals may get too hot or get sick."

"Some pets adapt to travel and some don't," Dr. Royse said. "You see dogs riding on the seat back behind the driver or sitting up and looking out the window. Those dogs like to travel."

And apparently the travel - loving pets are going places with pet - loving travelers.

"There are probably more people who travel with their pets than there were five years ago," Dr. Royse said.

For the family that can't bare separation from their pet, travel guides offering information on hotels, motels, campgrounds and resorts that accept pets are available.

Some vacation establishments will accept any pet while others are more selective and place restrictions on the animals they will accept. Others do not allow any pets on the premises. Pets are barred from some state and national parks and they must be kept on a leash in others.

An animal may belong to the entire family, but Dr. Royse said it is rare for everyone in the family to share the workload or responsibility of taking a pet on vacation.

"When I'm on vacation, I see this all the time," he said. "Someone has to take care of the pet on the trip and 99 times out of 100 that someone is Mom. The kids always say they'll look out for the pet on a trip, but it's the mother who ends up feeding, watering and walking the dog."

Lost pets are another problem to be coped with when traveling with animals. Dr. Royse said one Pampa family spent "about five days" in eastern Oklahoma trying to locate a runaway pet.

"They came back to Pampa," he said, "and then got a call from Tulsa and had to go back to get their pet.

"Animals become frightened and confused in strange environments and run away. I've known a lot of people who stay an extra four or five days in one town trying to locate a lost pet.

"Some pets just won't get lost no matter where they are," Dr. Royse said, "and others are lost if they get more than 30 feet from the owner's car. There's never a year goes by that I don't see large rewards offered for runaway pets."

Dr. Horne said even an animal with good car-manners can create travel problems.

"Cats usually travel pretty well," he said. "However, when you stop, there's always a danger of a cat bailing out of the car and they are pretty hard to catch."

Tranquilizers may help a nervous pet make a trip, but Pampa veterinarians disagree on using the calming drugs.

"It's usually not good to tranquilize a pet," Dr. Royse said. "I particularly don't like to tranquilize a normal animal."

Dr. Horne said he recommends dogs – "especially if they get hyper" – be tranquilized.

The spokeswoman for Hendrick Animal Clinic suggested pet owners try to tranquilizers out at home first "to see how they affect the animal." Tranquilizers, she said, often produce an opposite reaction in cats, making the animal more nervous.

Dr. Royse said people who decide to board pets rather than travel with them should keep two criteria on selecting a kennel in mind.

"Look for someone who keeps a clean kennel," he said, "and for someone who won't let your pet run away."

Boarding at the veterinary kennels in Pampa ranges in price from $1.50 to $3 per day. Cost is determinded by the size of the animal.

Though a pet owner may expect to pay more to board a pet than to travel with one, the feeling is that it is worth it.

Where an animal's welfare is at stake, Dr. Royse said, "pet owners are generally conscientious."

Tips on traveling with pet

Just a few simple items can make a pet on the road as comfortable as if it were curled up at home on the living room sofa. Be sure to pack the following items if you're planning to travel with a pet:

—ample supply of the pet's favorite food
—bowls for food and water
—pad
—leash and collar with identification tag
—immunization papers
—brush and comb
—special diet supplements and-or medications
—flea and tick collar
—a favorite toy or blanket

If your animal is not fully housebroken, you should prepare for the worst and pack a supply of newspapers, a roll of paper towels and a bottle of spray cleaner. Also include a scooper and plastic bags.

Plan on your rest and meal stops being dog stops, too. A brisk walk at every stop with the pet on a leash will help relieve travel tensions in both human and animal.

Many seek adventure in the wild rapids

LONG CREEK, S.C. (AP) — This is the wild river James Dickey wrote about in his 1970 novel, "Deliverance" — the untamed Chattooga now protected from such profanities against nature as dams and factories.

The popularity of Dickey's novel and the ensuing movie probably helped in getting the federal government to declare the Chattooga a wild and scenic river. But the same popularity that helped save it also drew 20,000 people to the river last year to make the "Deliverance" trip.

While you still underestimate the river at your peril, on a summer weekend you'll find canoes, rafts and kayaks piled up in a gunwhale-to-gunwhale traffic jam at the approaches to the big rapids.

Some are artists with their boats, cutting precise paths through the rapids. Most are novices who have come, at least in part, to savor the titillating knowledge that some people — not many, but some — have died on this river because their wits and strength were not enough.

The run begins at a highway bridge in a forest glade where only ripples disturb the surface and the river is, as Dickey wrote, "not dangerous-looking, but sprightly and vivid."

It remains that way for a couple of miles, long enough to bore even novices like us: two newsmen, a school teacher and a college student. But the river taught us its first lesson very quickly.

You can hear a big rapid before you can see it. There is a rumbling in the distance that grows louder and deeper as the current swee you close'd us that we were being swept toward the river's first major rapid, Big Shoals.

Canoeists rate rapids on a scale of one to six. One is a ripple in a stream; six is a swirling maelstrom of boulders and falls and white water that stands in permanent fury around a canoeist's ears. Big Shoals, by Chattooga's standards, is not so bad: Class Three.

The riverbed is blocked by boulders, some as big as trucks. The only passage is on the right, and it seems clear enough. You enter along the tongue of clear water between two rocks. Then, amid the froth and foam of white water, you jam the canoe 90 degrees into a chute to the left, then pivot to the right and slide down a twofoot drop to the eddy below.

We hit the entrance right, but suddenly we were in trouble. The current was too strong, and before we could make our sharp left turn, we were swept into some rocks and pinned there by the foaming water. Within seconds, the canoe was swamped. We could not move it, and it began to bend. The river was capable of breaking it in half and leaving us stranded.

Deliverance arrived in the form of three more canoes. Eight people waded into the current, braced themselves, and managed to pry our canoe loose. We paddled on, preferring not to think what might have been had not help arrived.

The river is not always so lenient. The federal government has fished 11 bodies from the water since it assumed control of the river in 1974. Other people, like Stacey Lange, an 11-year-old from Savannah, Ga., escape with only a bad scare.

Stacey and her mother followed us over the Slide, a sixfoot drop off a sheer ledge. They made the mistake of hitting the falls at an oblique angle instead of head-on. They flipped over, stacey's leg was caught in some loose ropes inside the canoe.

The current swept the overturned canoe downstream with Stacey pinned beneath, screaming. Fortunately, she was wearing her life jacket. It kept her head above water until she could wriggle her legs free.

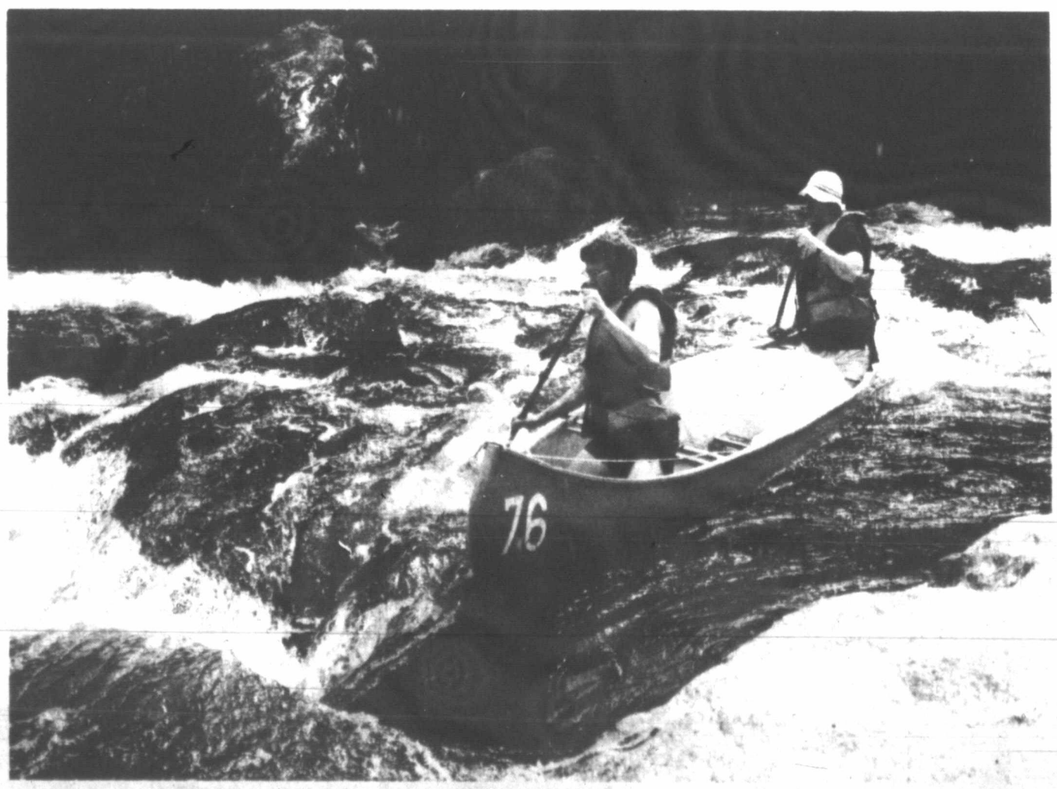

We grabbed their canoe and pulled them to shore. Stacey lay on the beach, sobbing and trembling, for a full five minutes.

But a run down the Chattooga need not always be frightening. The river rises in the Appalachians of western North Caro- 19 miles to Lake Tugaloo. Along the way, it forms the border between South Carolina and Georgia.

The countryside is backwoods America. Billboards and bumper stickers proclaim the gospel. Shotgun blats pockmark the highway signs. In the novel, the natives were worm-eaten and murderous, but that was pure fiction.

The people are friendly. Louise Coldren, for example, runs the Dillard House restaurant in Clayton, on the Georgia side. River runners come by the scores for her nightly buffets of fried chicken, fresh vegetables and pudding. All you can eat for $2.50.

The Nantahala Outdoor Center's Chattooga outpost will rent canoes for $15 the first day and $10 the second, but you aren't allowed to take them on Section Four.

Nation learns economic lesson

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — To recall the icy days of last January and February might serve to keep you a bit cooler, but there is an economic lesson to be learned also.

You should have little difficulty remembering the mood at the time. Factories were shut down. People were forced to stay indoors, away from the stores. Fuel bills soared and, it was said, prevented homeowners from spending on consumer goods.

Soon after the quarter ended, however, the statistics showed that things were a lot better than we had believed. Car and housing sales were especially strong, but a whole list of other goods showed gains too.

The Gross National Product increase for the quarter was reported at a 6.9 per cent annual rate, not just strong but downright lusty. And yet it was understated. On review, it was raised last week to 7.5 per cent, a torrid pace for any quarter.

Since then the pace has simmered down some. The rate of GNP increase in the second quarter was said to be a strong 6.4 per cent, seasonally adjusted, and again, subject to almost certain revision, most likely upward.

The two quarters add up to one of the brightest economic performances in years — even though the views of some professionals, and surveys of consumer moods, indicated the performance would be a good deal grayer.

The lesson all of us can learn from this is most revealingly posed as a question: Why is it that we can generally tell where we have been, and claim to know where we are going, but seldom know where we are, economically speaking?

Marshall McLuhan has an observation that might be as appropriate as any. "Anybody's total surround, or environment, creates a condition of nonperception," said the social analyst and critic. We are blinded by our involvement.

This being so, stock market advances often are well under way before they are perceived, automobile sales might be soaring for several weeks before we realize they aren't an aberration, housing might be recovered while we continue to speak about the terrible conditions in the housing market.

In 1932 Amelia Earhart Putnam became the first woman in history to make a solo plane flight across the Atlantic Ocean.

What's Up In religion

Most Americans are members of a church or congregation, which doesn't necessarily mean most Americans attend the church or synagogue of their choice regularly. Here, at any rate, is a list of the congregations having the most members, according to The World Almanac

Denomination	Membership
1. Roman Catholic	48,881,872
2. Southern Baptist Convention	12,513,378
3. United Methodist Church	10,063,046
4. Lutheran churches	8,194,426
5. National Baptist Conv. USA	5,500,000
6. Jewish congregations	3,700 000
7. Protestant Episcopal	2,907,293
8. United Presbyterian Church	2,773,555
9. Latter Day Saints (Mormon)	2,683,573
10. Churches of Christ	2,400,000

The smallest known denomination listed in the Almanac is the Church of the Revelation, with 10 churches and 750 members.

Highway toll one

The Texas Highway Patrol investigated 25 accidents on rural highways in Gray County during the month of June, 1977 according to Sergeant James Powell, Highway Patrol supervisor of this area.

These crashes resulted in one person killed and 21 persons injured.

The rural traffic accident summary for this county during the first six months of 1977 shows a total of 101 accidents resulting in four persons killed and 59 persons injured.

The rural traffic accident summary for the 60 counties of the Lubbock Department of Public Safety Region for June, 1977 shows a total of 558 accidents resulting in 15 persons killed and 355 persons injured as compared to June, 1976, with 560 accidents resulting in 10 persons killed and 338 persons injured. This was two less accidents, five more killed, and 17 more injured in 1977 at the same period of time.

The 15 traffic deaths for the month of June, 1977 occurred in the following counties: Six each in Wise; One each in Bailey, Hale, Lubbock, Parker, Young, Collingsworth, Foard, Gray, and Wilbarger.

Doctor tackling virus

Treatment of a deadly viral infection in newborn infants is the subject of a March of Dimes birth defects research grant to Dr. Samuel Baron, professor of microbiology at the University of Texas Medical Branch in Galveston.

Herpes simplex viruses are widespread and tend to cause recurrent, annoying sores of the mouth and genitals of infected adults. "In newborns," Dr. Baron says, "herpes simplex infection is an unusually severe disease resulting in death or lifelong disability in most cases."

When the mother's birth canal is known to be infected, cesarean section may be performed to protect the child, but this procedure carries some risks and its effectiveness has not been established.

Studies in mice have offered hope that newborn treatment with antibodies, which are proteins produced as part of the natural immune response, could be effective. Dr. Baron will try to work out the optimum timing and dosages of antibodies given in combination with other anti-viral compounds to herpes-infected newborn mice. He will also seek human donors with high levels of herpes virus resistance and determine whether it is feasible to extract and concentrate their anti-herpes antibodies for treatment of human infants.

What's up at the UN

Each of the 12 smallest members of the United Nations has fewer people than Alaska, the loast populous state in the U.S. Yet each of them has the same one vote as the U.S. in the General Assembly and in most of the specialized agencies, such as UNESCO or the International Labor Organization. The 12, according to The World Almanac:

Nation	Population	Nation	Population
1. Seychelles	60,000	7. Bahamas	210,000
2. Sao Tome & Principe	80,000	8. Iceland	220,000
3. Qatar	90,000	9. United Arab Emirates	220,000
4. Grenada	100,000	10. Barbados	250,000
5. Maldives	120,000	11. Bahrain	260,000
6. Samoa	150,000	12. Cape Verde	300,000

India has 10,000 times as many people as Seychelles, but they each have one vote. Only the Soviet Union controls more than one vote — it has three, thanks to Stalin's postwar demands.

Arizona man creates with cacti

By BOB RAST
Associated Press Writer

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Fred Harvey designs tables, lamps, planters and other similar objects from the skeletal wood of dead saguaro cacti. No two of the desert leviathans are alike.

The 28-year-old Morristown, N.J., native moved to Arizona nearly 10 years ago seeking a degree in psychology from the University of Arizona. But he became disenchanted and sought a creative outlet at which he could earn a living with his hands.

"Saguaro is a semihard wood, trunk-shaped and formed of a series of interlocking ribs," Harvey explained. "You start by scanning the desert on private property, with the owner's permission because it's illegal to remove cacti from public lands.

"When I see a piece of wood," he went on, "I know exactly what it's going to be used for. The arms are often legs of tables. I use everything. There's no waste.

"For my trough planters," he said, "I inlay the ribs on the side to close it off. I use only saguaro wood and I don't use metal on any of my pieces except for lighting fixtures."

The desert giants can reach heights of nearly 70 feet and weigh as much as five tons. Rodney Engard of Phoenix' Botanical Gardens says it's not uncommon to find specimens with more than 50 arms.

"Since they don't form tree rings, there is no absolute way of telling, but the oldest ones are estimated to be about 250 years old," Engard said. "They often take 10 years to grow their first couple of feet and don't mature and produce seeds until they're 80."

Harvey exhibited a dining table which he said is his dinest work to date. Finding the right skeleton was a stroke of luck, he said, after four years of looking. He's been offered $1,200 for the result.

"I'd been looking for one with four evenly spaced arms since I started working with saguaros and I stumbled on this one in the desert west of Tucson where some land was being developed," he said. "The bulldozers were just going to plow it all under."

Harvey sandblasts the skeletons then sprays on urethane varnish with an air-gun to seal the finish.

One of his more interesting pieces is a standing planter. A lamp hidden inside radiates through the ribs of the six-foot-tall skeleton yielding a soft indirect light.

Roller coasters more terrifying than ever

Thrill-seekers flock to new heart stoppers

THE "SCREAMIN' EAGLE," a roller coaster in Eureka, Mo., is the meanest in the world. For three quarters of a mile, riders reach speeds up to 62 miles per hour as they contemplate eternity. And yet the riders keep coming back and back.

By Tom Tiede

EUREKA, Mo. — (NEA) — When the feature attraction was built here at the Six Flags Over Mid-America amusement park, it took 100,000 man hours of labor, 105 miles of timber, and 50,000 pounds of bolts. But patrons say it's worth it. The "Screamin' Eagle" roller coaster is the longest, fastest, and meanest in the cosmos.

Its visual bulk is startling. Its ride is the stuff of stomach upset. Customers are dragged to a dead stop 100 feet in the air, then the bottom drops out. For three quarters of a mile riders reach speeds of up to 62 miles per hour as they contemplate eternity, at times virtually weightless, during 50 seconds of unlicensed aerobatics.

Yet smashing as it is, the "Screamin' Eagle" is merely one of an awesome new generation of thrill rides now operating in America's mechanical playgrounds. Amusement industry engineers are turning people upside down, sometimes inside out, as never before. And nobody is happier with the super rides than the paying customers.

Long lines file up to the roller coaster entrance here. Often, the wait is a half hour or more. Most of the patrons are wary, many end the trip ashen and dizzy, but officials say much of the business is repeat. "There's a crazy attraction to it," says a park employee, once you do it you must do it again to prove it was so awful."

The same may be said about a ride called the "Corkscrew," a 1,250-foot series of barrelrolls currently operating in 11 U.S. parks. The ride turns patrons upside down not once but twice, at speeds of 45 mph, and still the customers love it. More than two million people have ridden it at California's Knott's Berry Frm.

Also, there is the vertical "Loop," a 50 mph structure that sends people through a 56-foot circle, and then, for good measure, repeats the process backwards. Loop customers at Magic Mountain Park in California have been known to leave the ride only long enough to get sick, then return for "just one more" non-chemical high.

Perhaps the most frightening of all is the "Great American Scream Machine" at Six Flags Over Georgia. It's designed to lift riders up a 105-foot tower and then drop them like stones. Park attendants are told to advise anyone with heart conditions to beware. "It's like falling out of an airplane," says one awed observer.

For those who get lightheaded halfway up a stepladder, the amusement park trend is noxious. But for park officers it is clearly good business. "People love to be scared," says 70-year-old John Allen, who has been building roller coasters (including the "Screamin' Eagle") for 43 years. The more they're scared, he adds, the better the business.

Allen's comment is an ancient one in the amusement park industry. France gave birth to the notion in the early 1800s when, borrowing a suggestion from Russian ice slides, French entrepreneurs sold tickets to the world's first bobsled on a track. That concept was the predecessor of the roller coaster and came to the new world in the 1870s.

American ingenuity lifted the "artificial sliding hills" out of the technological backwaters. New Yorkers built coaster cars on a winding double track in 1884, and by the 1890s the figure-eight design was added. A quarter century later Americans were riding dozens of variations at mostly scruffy parks throughout the nation.

Even then, the rides tended to get bigger and bigger and faster and faster. But the parks remained scruffy. After World War II, with the onset of other amusements, park attendance skidded into decline. Thrill ride manufacturers went broke. Rides remained in unsold inventory. The 1950s were particularly slow.

Then came Disneyland, with an entirely new formula for carnival fun. Walt Disney insisted that park attendants be clean and courteous, and that rides be more spectacular, if safer, then those that had gone before. An immediate success, Disneyland has been copied by dozens of like-minded amusement park corporations.

Today there are 30 big parks, and business is unprecedented. Twenty-six of the parks draw in excess of 1 million people annually. The total attendance for all parks, big and small, is expected to be 100 million this year, and 150 million by 1985. Presently the industry attracts more than $1 billion a year in energetic commerce.

Many of the ticket buyers are lured by the super rides. Jim Sheldon, whose Arrow Development Corp. is responsible for the "Loop" and the "Corkscrew," says that the American character is fascinated with adventure. Just as many people want to be artificially frightened in the movies, he says, many like the personal sensation as well.

Of course, people of other nations ride scream machines too. Japan owns a Corkscrew and some roller coasters: Germany has created remarkable structures of its own. But only in America is the action given cultural status. One species here called "Coaster Crazies" is said to travel the nation in search of the ultimate thrill ride.

Is there an ultimate thrill ride? John Allen says there is not. Jim Sheldon agrees, adding that even unsafe thrill machines have not yet satisfied the public appetite.

The grounds of the Capitol in Washington, D.C., include more than 120 acres.

Dropped out to candle world

EDITOR'S NOTE — Like some other big city achievers, Bob Hill decided that maybe the game wasn't worth the candle. So he dropped out, retreated to rural Vermont and found after a while that candles were worth the new game.

By GEORGE ESPER
Associated Press Writer

LONDONDERRY, Vt. (AP) — Bob Hill burned with ambition. There it was, that glittering corporate world. His father pointed out the road to the top through sales and marketing.

Bob Hill took that road. His father was proud of him, and he was proud of that. Five major companies, 10 homes and 20 years later, Bob Hill began to wonder whether the anticipation of success wasn't more satisfying than success itself.

Here he was, age 44, a $50,000-a-year-plus vice president of the CBS Communication and Technology Group. He had an offer — at a six-figure salary — to head another firm as president. There were two Cadillacs in his garage, and his 25-foot boat could sleep five.

That was four years ago and Bob Hill realized he was at a crossroads.

"I asked myself, 'Do I want to keep challenging myself or spend the rest of my life enjoying my family and having fun?'

"I was tired of crawling on and off airplanes, the harassment and hassle. I had enough of board meetings and staff meetings and all that hoopla that goes with it."

So Robert P. Hill quit his job, turned down the new one, sold his Cadillacs, his boat and his Stamford, Conn., home. He packed up his wife of 21 years, Mary Jane, a former airline hostess, and his 14-year-old daughter Cathleen, and headed for Vermont's greenery and a new way of life.

But Hill didn't intend to retreat to the woods and live on nuts and berries. A rustic hardware store seemed a nice compromise between the need to make a living and a new, more carefree way of life.

After about a year, though, he found himself back in a sizable business again, as the New England distributor for Price's Candles of London. And he plans to set up similar distributorships in the rest of the United States.

Hill has been distributing candles from the basement of his hardware store, but he's giving up the store and plans to move into a 2,000 square-foot warehouse.

So is the dropout dropping back in? Not the way Hill sees it.

"I'm absolutely happier now even though I'm making less of everything. I'm independent, with nobody to answer to. The pressures you make in this business are your own.

He says he will be making one or two trips, but there is no way he will be traveling as much as he did. He, Mary Jane and Cathleen work as a family — just as hard as ever, sometimes seven days a week — but there are few separations.

"I'm with them all the time now," he says. "We're working and living together. My daughter works in the store, also. You don't even have to wear watches up here. You don't even look at the clock. You're your own boss. You set your own pace."

At times, the Hills simply close their store and do what they want. Signs have been posted on the door, "Watching the parade," "Going fishing," and "Went to the beach, see you tomorrow."

Customers?

"They'll wait, they'll be there tomorrow," says Hill.

"It's an easy life," says his wife. "I used to give a lot of formal dinner parties, but no more. I had enough of it. It's nice to get away from it. There are no social pressures here."

The Hills have lived in their modified log house, with four bedrooms, a living room, two baths and all the modern conveniences, longer than in any other home during their marriage.

It sits in this valley surrounded by three major ski slopes. Hill and his wife can walk leisurely to work down a country road in five minutes.

During the summer, the sliding doors of their cabin open onto a marble chip patio and two acres of wooded land. Not another house in sight.

A garden blooms with petunias, chrysanthemums and begonias. There is a bicycle trail leading from the back door through the woods. In the winter, it takes them to a pond for ice skating.

Instead of cocktail and dinner parties, there are backyard cookouts, badminton and croquet.

"The people are entirely different," says Hill. "A lot more is done on a handshake. There is a sense of security."

Hill is wearing a blue pullover sweater and jeans. Once he had closets full of suits and ties, but there is little need for them here. He seems in top shape and Mary Jane, also 48, is attractive and slim.

At wit's end

By ERMA BOMBECK

As a woman who is married to an amateur camera freak, I respectfully suggest that some kind of legislation be passed requiring a permit to carry a loaded camera.

I don't mean to overreact, but I live in fear that someday my husband will point that thing at me, forget he has taken off the lens cap, and click click! I'll end up another statistic at Photomat.

I have been photographed walking out of a public bath house in a Michigan campground wearing a nightgown, curlers, and rain slicker ... fishing around in my mouth with my fingers trying to remove a fishbone ... and there are 30 prints floating around somewhere of me on my side in a bathing suit that I would give up my next unborn child to get the negatives.

The other day he was flipping the camera around carelessly when I said irritably, "Is that thing loaded?"

"Look," he said, "how many accidents have I had with this camera?"

"There was the time you snapped Fred at the office Christmas party trying to Xerox Miss Frampton. He threatened to rearrange your nose. Then, there was the time exposure when you nearly broke your leg trying to get back into the picture ... and the birthday party where ..."

"All right, so join the camera lobby and try to get them off the market."

"All I'm saying is cameras shouldn't be made available to the man on the street — only professionals who know how to use them. The way it stands now, any child can walk right into a camera store and buy a Sunday Afternoon Special right off the counter — no questions asked. The next thing you know some innocent person is staring into the eye of an Instamatic."

"C'mon. You're making a big deal over nothing. I don't use the camera all that much. I just feel kinda important when I have a camera riding back there in the window of my pickup truck. Besides, it's sorta fun watching people's reactions when you point it at them." He grabbed the camera and trained it on my hips, which look like I'm carrying two U.S. mail pouches for the Pony Express. I hear the button click.

"Fooled you. The camera isn't loaded."

One of these days, he'll push me too far. There isn't a woman jury in this country that would find me guilty.

"You know, we've got such a good place here with great pizza and terrific people, I've got a feeling we're going to do very well. I think we need a slogan."

"How about 'Leave the cooking to us!'"

"I have a feeling I heard it before."

"What about 'The proud pizza with the golden crust?'"

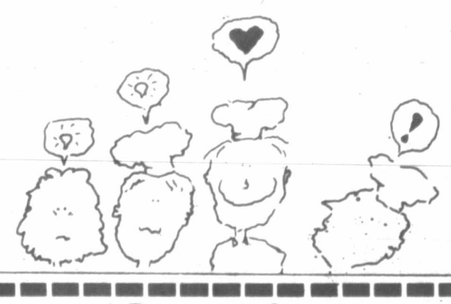

"That feels a little uppity. We wanna say something nice and simple like

'We've got a feeling you're gonna like us.'

But how can we say it?"

"?????????????"

"Well, keep working on it."

Texas Recipes

Piney Woods Hush Puppies

2½ cups yellow corn meal
1 teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons Imperial Granulated Sugar
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
1 tablespoon baking powder
1 egg, beaten
2 cups buttermilk
1½ cups cooking oil, about

Mix all dry ingredients; beat milk and egg together and combine with dry ingredients; batter should hold its shape when picked up in spoon. If it is too soft, add more cornmeal. Drop by mounded tablespoonful into 350°F. fat and cook about 1½ minutes; turn and cook on second side 1 minute. Allow oil to heat a few seconds after removing a batch. Delicious freshly cooked and hot; however, leftover hush puppies freeze well. When ready to serve frozen hush puppies, place on oven rack in preheated 250°F. until very hot and crisp. Makes about 48 hush puppies 2" round.

Hints on frying: Using a small diameter heavy saucepan allows using a minimum of oil; a 5 or 6 inch pan with oil 1½ inches deep and heated to 350°F. will cook three hush puppies in about 2½ minutes. When batter consistency is correct and oil is at 350°F., hush puppies will become firm, round shapes almost as soon as they enter the hot oil. If they are cooked in oil that is too hot, they will not cook in the center.

Serving Suggestion: Especially good served with fried catfish, trout, shrimp, oysters, chicken or chicken-fried steak.

32 IN THE SHADE

WASHINGTON (AP) — This summer, don't be surprised if the thermometer hits a steamy 32 degrees in the shade.

That's what the reading will be on the Celsius scale, as opposed to Fahrenheit. As America moves into the metric system, it will begin to use the thermometer invented by the 18th-century Swedish chemist, Anders Celsius, which placed the freezing point of water at zero and the boiling point at 100 degrees.

With the Fahrenheit thermometer, perfected in 1714 by the German physicist Gabriel D. Fahrenheit, water freezes at 32 and boils at 212. Zero represented the coldest temperature that anyone could produce in those days, by mixing snow with salt.

Today more than half of American households have thermometers, many of them dual scale. Many weathermen broadcast the temperature in both degrees. To convert Celsius to Fahrenheit to see how hot you'll be at 32 degrees C, multiply by nine, then divide by five and add 32. When the temperature Celsius is below zero, subtract 32 instead of adding.

Part IV: past mistakes, future perils

Nuclear facilities target of attacks

EDITOR'S NOTE: The global spread of nuclear power leaves the risk of gunmen as well as governments laying hands on atomic triggers. There have been threats of attack on nuclear facilities, and there are fears that toxic nuclear fuels could be hijacked in transit. A drive is on to tighten security. In the fourth of a five-part series, AP diplomatic correspondent Arthur L. Gavshon tells of past mistakes and future perils.

By ARTHUR L. GAVSHON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — An effort is under way in many nations to tighten the security of nuclear facilities against dangers of attack, sabotage and hijacking.

The United States has taken the lead at a time when world trade and traffic is expanding rapidly in nuclear plants and in fuels 20,000 times more poisonous than a cobra's bite.

Antisabotage precautions have been upgraded at every military and nuclear installation in this country during the past year.

This is being done partly as an overdue precaution and partly as an example for foreign users of nuclear power.

"Without offering gratuitous advice or intervening in national security systems, we are making much of our techniques, our instrumentation, our training available," Gen. Edward Giller said in an interview.

Giller is chief of the safeguards section in the Energy Research and Development Administration. He went on: "Here we are installing more and more automated systems for measuring, weighing, recording materials. These include tamper-proof devices, sensors which can detect even the tiniest particles of radioactive substances which people might try to smuggle out of a plant."

Training in nuclear security techniques has been greatly expanded by the United States recently for Americans and foreigners. Members of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Central Intelligence Agency are forming special squads to work on matters involving the whole range of nuclear security. Inspectors from the Vienna-based International Atomic Energy Agency and officials from the 30 countries which have bought U.S. equipment and fuel come here to learn the newest development in safeguard technology.

Through the 1970s, there have been between 55 and 65 acts of international terrorism a year. There already have been some incidents involving nuclear power or facilities.

—On Oct. 27, 1970, a 14-year-old schoolboy in Orlando, Fla., sent a letter to city authorities demanding $1 million and threatening to blow up the city with an H-bomb. He enclosed a diagram of what experts said was a workable bomb. Local police were set to deliver the money when the youngster was found and arrested. It was a hoax; there was no bomb.

—Trotskyite urban guerrillas temporarily occupied Argentina's Atucha reactor in 1973 while it was being built.

—A would-be saboteur, protesting the proposed establishment of a nuclear reactor in Massachusetts, wrecked a meteorological tower on the site in 1974.

—Two workers at a reactor in Bradwell, England, were reported in 1974 to have been discovered tossing 20 fuel rods over the perimeter fence.

Unidentified groups thought to be separatists exploded bombs in 1975 at French nuclear plants at Fessenheim and at Mt. D'Arree.

—In 1976, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission sent formal warnings to 58 nuclear plants that it had received word of threatened attacks by two terrorist groups. Precautions were redoubled. Nothing happened.

—Through the 1960s and 1970s, various U.S. corporations, including Kerr-McGee and the Nuclear Materials and Equipment Corporation — Numec — reported losing track of either plutonium or highly enriched uranium over a period of years. Geller says nuclear material often is out of sight temporarily in reactor systems and the missing items cannot be assumed to have been stolen.

There has been no loss of life so far in any of the incidents directed against nuclear facilities. Threats have proved empty.

Yet, spreading nuclear power and all that goes with it has deepened concern and turned attention to four interlocking questions:

1. Will terrorists turn to the nuclear sector?

On Feb. 28, West Germany fired one of its leading nuclear physicists, Klaus Traube, fearing he might pass secrets to terrorists with whom he allegedly maintained "intensive contacts."

Existence of some sort of "Terrorist International," with radical aims, is known to Western governments. A rough device, one-hundredth the strength of the obsolete Hiroshima bomb of 15 kilotons — 15,000 tons of TNT — could kill up to 5,000 people in a city setting, mostly by radiation. And terrorists need not use bombs for their deadly work. Eight ounces of plutonium powder fed into an air conditioner would menace the lives of everyone in a 20-story building by spreading lung fibrosis.

2. Will there be another Arab oil embargo? And anyway, are oil supplies running out? The five-fold hike in oil prices already has spurred a global search for new sources of energy with nuclear power high on the list of priorities for nations able to pay.

3. Who, the big powers are asking, will be next among the developing nations to detonate an atomic device — and what will its neighbors do?

The coded message telephoned to Indira Gandhi on May 18, 1974, said crisply: "The Buddha is smiling." It meant a nuclear device had just been fired successfully underground in the Rajastan desert. The political fallout from the first-ever test by a developing country exceeded its explosive yield. There were strong demands then for tightened safeguards against what was taken to be India's misuse of equipment and material supplied by the United States and Canada. India insisted no weapon had been fired, only a device intended for "peaceful purposes."

4. West Germany and France in 1975 and 1976 clinched deals to sell Brazil and Pakistan facilities for enriching uranium and producing plutonium. U.S. criticisms of the deals thus far have been resisted and rejected. If the deals are not modified, Carter wants to know, can there be any hope of an organized, worldwide understanding among the powers to head off a free-for-all dash toward nuclear weaponry?

Few authorities today dispute that President Dwight D. Eisenhower, through his 1953 "atoms for peace" plan, opened the gates to a lightly controlled spread of nuclear technology. It was the first stage toward a weapons spread. U.S. firms were permitted to share and to sell their long-secret nuclear know-how and plants to foreigners.

U.S. firms collared the market in reactors and nuclear fuels. For 20 years until the early 1970s, they kept up to 90 per cent of the orders. But in recent years the U.S. share has been halved, as European competitors mounted a challenge. In most cases, the U.S. government subsidized the sale of reactor systems to help U.S. corporations, paying half the price for the reactors and lending the rest of the money at low rates of interest.

A Library of Congress handbook shows U.S. firms capturing more of the 287 reactor sales — reactors either working, building or planned — than all foreign competitors combined. The Energy Research and Development Administration estimated U.S. export earnings from reactor and related services run to $2.3 billion yearly and by the year 2000 will add up to about $100 billion.

Dr. Fred C. Ickle, former director of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, has acknowledged that the United States oversold the "atoms for peace" plan. Not enough safeguards were written into sales contracts.

Some 40 countries around the world using nuclear reactors are filling up their stopgap depositories for waste fuel to the bursting point for want of safe and sure locations to store the radioactive materials, which will stay toxic for at least 24,000 years. All the sites and systems they are using could be targets of terrorist attack that could, if carried out, imperil millions.

Five years ago, a physicist named Hannes Alfven wrote on safety in the Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists:

"Fission energy is safe only if a number of critical devices work as they should, if a number of people in key positions follow all of their instructions, if there is no sabotage, no hijacking of transports, if no reactor fuel processing plant or waste repository anywhere in the world is situated in a region of riots, or guerrilla activity, and no revolution or war — even a 'conventional one' — takes place in these regions. The enormous quantities of extremely dangerous material must not get into the hands of ignorant people or desperadoes. No acts of God can be permitted."

Covered wagon headin' east

Thirty-seven Boy Scouts of the Adobe Walls Council left this morning on their way to the National Boy Scout Jamboree at Moraine State Park in northwestern Pennsylvania. The Scouts took with them a cut-out covered wagon which will be part of a 200-yard "gateway" to the South Central Region campground. The region includes Texas, Oklahoma, New Mexico, Arkansas and Louisiana and each council in the region is bringing a cut-out covered wagon to add to the entrance display. Ray Williams, left, president of the Pampa Noon Lions Club, designed the wagon and donated materials to build it. Accepting the wagon is Tom Dunn, Jamboree scout master. Attending from Pampa will be 14 Scouts and six Scouts from Spearman will make the trip. Fritch is sending five Boy Scouts and three boys from Perryton will attend the Jamboree. Two Boy Scouts each will attend from Amarillo, Borger and Guymon, Okla., and Memphis, Clarendon and Wheeler will send one Scout each. The group will be back Aug. 13.

House sets vote on funds for abortions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The congressional dispute over spending federal funds to pay for abortions is returning to the House and Senate after the failure of a conference committee to reach a compromise on the issue.

The House is scheduled to vote first on the abortion issue, which is part of a $60.1 billion appropriations bill for the departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare.

The conference committee, appointed to reconcile differences in the House and Senate versions of the bill passed earlier, was able to agree on all issues except abortions.

At a meeting Tuesday, House members of the panel voted 10-1 against accepting the Senate-passed provision that federal funds could be used to pay for abortions in cases of incest, rape or medical necessity. Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, was the only House member of the panel willing to accept the Senate's terms.

The other House members objected that the phrase "medical necessity" is so vague that it leaves open the possibility that federal funds could be used to pay for most abortions performed on poor women.

Last week Senate members of the conference committee refused to accept a more restrictive House provision permitting federal funding for abortions only when the life of the woman is in danger.

The same provision was written into law in 1976.

Rep. Daniel Flood, D-Pa., chairman of an appropriations subcommittee on the departments of Labor and HEW, said he will recommend that the House adopt an identical provision when the bill comes up for a vote, possibly on Friday.

33,000 troops to be withdrawn

TOKYO (AP) — Defense Secretary Harold Brown said today the United States intends to remain "a strong Pacific power" despite the planned withdrawal of 33,000 U.S. troops from South Korea.

Brown met with Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda and other Japanese officials to brief them on agreements reached in two days of talks with South Korean leaders on the plan to phase out virtually all U.S. ground forces in Korea.

In a statement issued before departing for the United States, Brown said he made clear to the Japanese "the intention of the United States to remain a strong Pacific power, recognizing that our national security in a very real sense derives from peace and stability in Northeast Asia."

He said he told the Japanese the withdrawal would be made "in a careful and considered fashion."

Besides Fukuda, Brown also met with Foreign Minister Iichiro Hatoyama and defense agency Director-General Asao Mihara.

In Seoul, the South Korean news agency Hapdong, quoting an unnamed Korean official, said South Korean President Park Chung-hee had asked Brown Monday for a public commitment from the United States to use nuclear arms to protect South Korea if North Korea attacked.

U.S. sources said the defense secretary told the Japanese that "neither the Soviet Union nor the People's Republic of China wishes renewed conflict" on the Korean peninsula.
