Waste well threatens oil, opponents claim

Earl Smith

By PAUL PINKHAM
Senior Staff Writer

A parade of farmers and ranchers testified Thursday that a Hoechst Celanese waste well project east of Pampa would disrupt oil and gas production and rob them of royalty payments.

The group — which included Gray County Commissioner Jim Greene and Hoover farmer John Spearman, chairman of Panhandle Ground Water Conservation District No. 3 in White Deer — also expressed concern over how a potential accident could contaminate the Ogallala Aquifer, a major underground source of water in the Plains.

But a Texas Water Commission geologist testified that the Celanese permit application exceeds state safety standards, as the two-day hearing before TWC examiner Duncan Gordon drew to a close.

Gordon will now have about six weeks to make a recommendation to the water commission on a $28 million Celanese proposal to build three hazardous liquid waste disposal wells three miles east of Pampa and two miles north of U.S. Highway 60.

The company would transport waste to the 10,000-foot dump site via a 13-mile pipeline that would travel a route taking it about five miles south of the city limits.

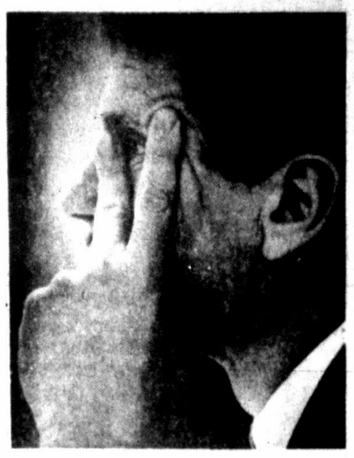

According to the chemical company's permit application on file with the water commission, treated waste dumped down the wells at the rate of about 855 gallons per minute would consist of 99.5 percent water, 0.4 percent salts and 0.1 percent hydrocarbons, resulting from chemical production and other activities at the plant five miles west of Pampa.

The wells would replace solar evaporation ponds at the plant, which are being outlawed by the federal government next year. Celanese officials testified Wednesday that the injection wells are crucial to the plant's survival and that there was little or no chance of oil and gas production in the area immediately surrounding the well site.

But surrounding landowners and an Amarillo geologist testified Thursday that oil and gas wells have been leased in the area. The landowners said they are concerned that the liquid waste will flow under their properties and displace whatever untapped mineral reserves may be there.

"We know that the hazardous wastes from these wells will sometimes be under our property," Pampa farmer Earl Smith said. "The volumes to be injected will disperse for miles around in all directions in the many zones

Lefors adds two women as trustees

By LARRY HOLLIS
News Editor

LEFORS - The Lefors school board installed two new trustees, elected officers and approved a reorganization of a pep squad during their regular meeting Thursday night.

Following the canvassing and approval of the April 4 election results, Virginia Archer, former school business manager, and Karen Lake, a postal clerk, were administered the oath of office by Superintendent Earl Ross. The two women outdistanced their five male opponents in last week's elections to gain spots on the board of trustees for the Lefors Independent School District.

After Archer and Lake were sworn in, board President Arnold Story welcomed them, asking them to dedicate themselves to improving the educational system and facilities in Lefors.

"We work as a team, and we want you on our team," Story said.

Following the administering of oaths, the board re-elected Story as president and Joyice Cotham as secretary and elected Leon Goldsmith as vice president.

In business following an executive session, the board approved reorganizing a pep squad for Lefors High School and buying T-shirts for squad members.

Story said the move is aimed at "trying to get a little more school spirit around here."

The board also approved a plan to pay for transportation of the school cheerleaders and pep squad to out-of-town games, with the school paying for cheerleaders' meals while pep squad members will be required to pay for their own meals.

Trustees, however, decided to leave the number of cheerleaders at four with one mascot despite a

J.P. orders vehicles returned to Mitchell

By PAUL PINKHAM
Senior Staff Writer

The list of items that Crossroads Auto Salvage owner Woody Mitchell says Gray County owes him is down to 107 after a justice of the peace ordered four vehicles returned to Mitchell on Thursday.

Gray County Justice of the Peace Wayne Roberts ruled that Mitchell, 44, 1105 Christine, should retain ownership of three trucks and a Jeep Wagoneer frame currently stored at Bob's Wrecker Service, 900 E. Frederic.

The vehicles were seized by Department of Public Safety officials when Mitchell's salvage business at 120 S. Hobart was shut down late in 1985 for alleged participation in an auto theft ring that authorities stretched from the Panhandle to the Dallas-Fort Worth suburbs.

DPS auto theft investigator Larry Koceruk of Hurst charged that vehicle identification numbers were being stripped off wrecked vehicles at the salvage lot and placed on vehicles and vehicle parts reported stolen from the Dallas suburb of Garland.

Roberts also ruled that Mitchell will have to pay storage costs on the vehicles. Bob Garner, Mitchell's Amarillo attorney, estimated storage costs to be about $2,300.

The ruling came two days after Mitchell pleaded no contest in a Canyon courtroom and received a five-year deferred sentence for a charge of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle.

Mitchell had also faced seven similar charges in Gray County until they were dismissed in December due to insufficient evidence.

Following the dismissals, Mitchell sent a letter to Gray County officials asking payment

McLean on the prowl for purr-fect cat policy

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

McLEAN — City council members say they have no purr-fect way to keep cats from prowling city streets and residents' yards.

But until they find a policy that's the cat's meow, city officials say it's up to cat owners to fend for their felines and to keep them off other people's property.

City council members announced this "owner-responsibility" policy Tuesday at their regular meeting.

Newly elected Mayor George Green said Thursday that council members have decided it's up to cat owners to take care of their own cats and that the offended property owners "can do anything legal to protect their property" from prowling pusses.

According to Green, the council's decision came after residents caterwauled about neighborhood cats prowling about their yards and hopping onto their cars with their dirty paws.

But, with no city ordinances controlling felines, city council members found themselves in a cat's cradle.

Green said city workers enforce the dog control ordinance, picking up strays in traps and keeping them for three days before unclaimed dogs are put to sleep. That keeps McLean workers busy, and Green said there's not enough money in the city kitty to afford an animal control officer.

"And cats are very hard to control," Green said.

Still, other area cities have found there's more than one way to skin a cat.

Pampa and Groom include nine-lived creatures in their animal control ordinances, but city spokesmen say enforcing the ordinances has been nearly catastrophic.

Said Pampa animal control officer Dave Smith: "It's not the same with cats as it is with dogs. Cats are harder to catch.

"We do have cat traps that don't hurt the animals, and we offer these traps to residents having stray cat problems," Smith said.

Castrate sex offenders, Whaley argues

Whaley

AUSTIN (AP) — Rep. Foster Whaley says, given a good knife, he would be glad to go through the state prisons and castrate repeat sex offenders.

But Whaley said he knew courts would frown on that. So, instead, he offered a proposal for "chemical castration" of some repeat offenders. The plan on Thursday drew a majority vote in the House, but failed to get the two-thirds vote it needed for approval.

Whaley offered the chemical castration proposal as an amendment to a bill establishing a counseling program for sex offenders in the Texas Department of Corrections. The bill was approved after initially being rejected by the House.

"Quite frankly, I would like to put mechanical castration in there with a darned good stock knife, but I don't think that would stand up in the courts. And if they don't have anybody down in Huntsville that knows how to do that, I'd be glad to show them," said Whaley, D-Pampa.

"Fact is, I'd volunteer as the executioner," he said in floor debate.

The House vote on Whaley's amendment, which would have made chemical castration a requirement for probation for repeat sex offenders, was 65-64. It failed because it takes a two-thirds vote to add amendments to House bills on final reading.

The bill, written by Rep. Bob Melton, would allocate $400,000 of TDC funds to set up the counseling program. Under the bill, parole officials could consider the results of the counseling and whether the sex offender refused to participate in the program.

Supporters said the program is needed because sex offenders eventually leave prison.

"If they serve their time they are coming out. If they have not had that counseling we are in a world of hurt," said Rep. Mark Stiles, D-Beaumont.

Melton, D-McGregor, said sex offenders have a high rate as repeat offenders and that that could be changed through counseling.

The measure, tentatively approved Wednesday, was initially defeated 73-58 Thursday. However, it was brought back to the floor on a motion to reconsider, and was approved 80-54, sending it to the Senate.

Whaley led the opposition attack on the value of counseling.

"These people are beyond counseling," he said.

Rep. Gerald Geistweidt, R-Mason, offered another solution, tied to Rep. Ron Wilson's bill that would allow Texans to carry handguns.

"Mr. Melton asked me earlier how I would feel if my wife or my mother or someone close to me were raped by one of these people after getting out of prison and not receiving counseling. My suggesion to Mr. Melton is he should vote for Mr. Wilson's handgun bill. We'll blow them away," Geistweidt said.

After the bill was approved, Melton told the House, "Members, thank you very much and welcome to the 20th Century."

Melton later returned to the microphone and apologized for the remark.

of $170,000 for 111 items he said were missing from the salvage lot, or risk a $1.25 million federal lawsuit. The four vehicles returned Thursday were among the items listed.

Koceruk testified Thursday that two of the vehicles — a 1985 Jeep Wagoneer frame and a 1980 Ford pickup truck — were being held only for evidence in the former cases against Mitchell. He did not protest their return to the salvage lot owner.

But Koceruk did protest releasing the other two vehicles — a 1979 Chevrolet wrecker and a 1975 Chevrolet wrecker — back to Mitchell. Koceruk alleged that, although the wreckers was registered to Crossroads, identification numbers on parts of the vehicle had been removed or altered.

"This is the type of a person that is involved in the theft of vehicles and (in) salvage switches," Koceruk said.

But attorney Garner noted that liens against both vehicles were held by Citizens Bank and Trust Co. in Mitchell's name. The lawyer also provided what he said was proof of ownership by Mitchell.

"The dreams and expectations and desires of Mr. Koceruk have just not panned out on this one," Garner told Roberts.

Koceruk said during a break in the hearing that he would abide by Roberts' decision. He said the decision closes the book on cases involving Mitchell.

"We've put our time in on (this case) and we're just up here to finish it up," Koceruk said.

Garner said he disagreed with Roberts' decision requiring Mitchell to pay storage costs before he can have his vehicles back and said he may sue in district court. He said the state should pay the storage fees.

The defense attorney said he plans to meet with Gray County commissioners in an effort to reach a settlement concerning the $170,000 claim letter. He said he was told by the county's insurance company this week that it will not pay the claim.

Cats

He added that, despite the myth that one cannot "bell a cat," residents' cats should be licensed and tagged.

Groom city secretary Pat Ashford said cats and dogs are specifically mentioned in their animal control ordinance. But she admitted the ordinance has not been enforced as strongly with cat owners.

In other business Tuesday, McLean city council members:

- authorized city resident Robert Gibson to seek members for a park beautification committee;
- authorized the volunteer fire department to buy reflecting paint for city fire hydrants; and
- agreed to tear down a brick wall and shrubbery at the fire station after deciding that the wall and bushes created a blind spot on the highway.

request by present cheerleaders to increase the number of cheerleaders by two.

Cheerleader Tracy Reeves appeared before the board with a proposal to add two more cheerleaders, citing a number of reasons why the additional ones would be beneficial.

Reeves said two more cheerleaders would raise a higher spirit, enthusiasm and pride. The additional members also would make more cheerleaders available during the basketball season when most of the cheerleaders are also on the girls basketball team.

The student said the two new members would also free the mascot from cheers and routines to mingle more with the crowd in efforts to raise spirits. A larger cheerleading team also would allow quicker work in preparing for pep rallies and other activities, Reeves said.

Principal Bill Crockett said he supported the concept of organizing a new pep squad to work together with the cheerleaders and help with projects.

But pep squad members should be expected to work as a group throughout the year with projects and activities instead of "just jumping on the bus to get a trip" to out-of-town games, Crockett said.

The trustees later rejected the proposal to add more cheerleaders, noting six members and the mascot would be about 10 percent of the student body. A pep squad could help attract more students into helping with school spirit activities, they noted.

approved most of the bills but had questions on some of them.

Lake and Archer had asked what minimum amount for expenditures was required before authority from the board was needed. Archer said she had understood the amount was $100, but others indicated they thought it was $500. Lake said she had tried to find the minimum amount in minutes but had not been able to locate it in board minutes back to 1975.

Archer said more definite limits should be set on expenditures requiring board approval, especially on capital outlay items.

The board also approved Ross, Crockett and Cotham as members of the Career Ladder Committee. Ross said the committee will have to look at finances carefully to see what funds would be available for the career ladder supplement.

Celanese

which contain oil, gas and saltwater in our area."

Smith said oil and gas withdrawal has left underground gaps, which the Celanese waste would flow toward, polluting underground minerals.

"There is no way that Celanese or anyone else can contain this hazardous wastewater under their own property, and I cannot believe this commission will allow anyone to pollute this entire area with hazardous waste just because it is underground and out of sight," Smith said. "If these chemicals were to be wasted into the air, the people would not stand for it, so why should you let them hide it underground?"

Spearman, who leases a well about 3.5 miles from the proposed well site, said his main concern is that oil and gas reserves will be ruined "irrevocably." He said he was testifying on his own, not on behalf of the groundwater conservation district.

"I am not against the injection permit being granted, except I do not agree with injection in the known productive formations," Spearman said. "Without further testing, no one can prove that my production will not be flooded. There are plenty of unproductive formations available, so why take the chance?

"I do believe in individual property rights, so long as they do not infringe on another individual's rights."

The landowners also enlisted the services of Amarillo geologist G.E. Hatton, who said the possibility of oil and gas within four to five miles of the site is strong. He said oil companies who have leased mineral rights in the area must have some reason to believe oil and gas exists "or they wouldn't be holding the leases with the oil condition the way it is at this time."

"There's only one way to find out whether there's oil or gas in the ground, and that's to drill a hole," he said. "After all (the research), it still goes back to drilling a hole."

Celanese attorney Al Axe of Austin challenged that oil companies would have showed up to protest the well site if they were concerned.

Celanese presented two witnesses Thursday — Gene Ford, senior engineer from Golden Strata Services in Houston, and Vern Halter, from Williams Brothers Engineers in Tulsa, Okla.

Ford said no oil and gas was encountered during the drilling of a test well that he supervised at the site last year.

Halter testified to the safety of the 13-mile pipeline.

Also testifying was TWC geologist Ben Knape, who said the wells as proposed exceed TWC standards. He noted that the wells will have an extra layer of protective steel and concrete casing.

"These wells have a stronger or better design than most permitted wells," Knape said.

He also produced a letter from the Texas Railroad Commission stating that the proposed wells wouldn't endanger any "known oil and gas reserves."

Knape said Celanese's track record in complying with water commission regulations has been good, although there have been occasional lapses in record-keeping in the past.

Ruben Velasquez, an engineer with the Texas Air Control Board, also testified. He said the proposed wells and pipeline meet state air control standards.

"The potential for adverse health effects is very low," Velasquez said.

After hearings examiner Norton makes his recommendation in about six weeks, both sides will have an opportunity to file final objections before the water commission issues a ruling.

In an interview, Smith said he doesn't expect to block construction of the waste wells, but added he hopes to convince the water commission to require additional safeguards.

HCA says takeover bid 'not in best interests'

DALLAS (AP) — Three investors' $5 billion bid to buy the largest hospital management concern in the country is not in the best interests of the company's shareholders, a Hospital Corporation of America spokesman says.

The Dallas investors proposed to pay $47 a share for about 81.8 million outstanding shares of Nashville, Tenn.-based HCA, the company said Thursday.

HCA owns Pampa's Coronado Hospital.

The bid came in a letter from Charles R. Miller, former Republic Health Corp. president; Richard E. Ragsdale, a former Republic chief financial officer; and attorney Richard L. Scott, a partner with Johnson & Swanson in Dallas.

It offered no details on how the offer would be funded, HCA said, and two analysts who follow the health care industry said they question the three men's ability to raise the money.

The proposed stock acquisition is worth about $3.85 billion, said HCA spokeswoman Mita Gaertnier. In addition, she said the company has about $1.2 billion in outstanding debt.

"HCA management does not believe that this proposal is in the best interest of the HCA shareholders but intends to discuss the proposal with the HCA board of directors and respond in due course," company spokesman David McFadden said.

The next board of directors meeting is scheduled for April 17, immediately following the annual shareholders meeting.

"The issue will be addressed then, I'm sure," McFadden said.

In composite trading on the New York Stock Exchange, HCA fell $1 a share to $38.12½ Thursday. The company disclosed the proposal after the stock market closed, McFadden said.

Ragsdale and Miller, who founded the Dallas-based Republic, left to start Community Health Corp., a Dallas-based private company which owns eight hospitals and two nursing homes. Ragsdale is chairman of Community Health and Miller is a director.

Members of the investor group could not be reached for comment late Thursday.

Last year, HCA approved an elaborate "shareholder rights plan" designed to protect the company from a hostile takeover, but industry analysts differ on whether or not a takeover is possible.

Health care analyst Eugene Melnitchenko with Eppler, Guerin & Turner in Dallas, said the investor group probably would need the cooperation of HCA's board to succeed.

"I believe it will be impossible for these guys to acquire HCA without the management's consent," he said.

According to the HCA statement, the three told the company they were "highly confident that the financing for this transaction can be arranged." But the letter did not specify whether any financing arrangements for the deal had been made, HCA said.

Randall Huyser, an analyst with Montgomery Securities in San Francisco, questioned the group's ability to raise the necessary money.

"I think the key issue is whether or not they have the financing. If they do have the financing, I think they could pull it off," he said, adding that "I don't think it has has a strong likelihood of getting done."

Joel Ray, who has followed HCA for five years as an analist at J.C Bradford & Co., said he has no doubt about the sincerity of the offer.

"They've got a long track record for operating hospitals and have good contacts in financial circles, but I question their ability to raise it (the money)," he said.

Founded in 1968, HCA owns, manages or has consulting agreements with 488 hospitals with 73,624 beds in the United States and six other countries, McFadden said. The company employs about 75,000 people in the United States.

HCA posted a profit of $174.6 million on revenue of $4.93 billion in 1986.

Senate approves junkyard bill, not fake ID measure

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate has voted to allow counties to screen junkyards outside city limits, but held up a bill that would make it a felony for teen-agers to use a fake driver's license to buy alcoholic beverages.

Sen. Ted Lyon sponsored a proposal that would allow county commissioners to require junkyards and auto salvage yards to be screened from view.

Salvage yards in business by this past Jan. 1 would be exempt from the proposed law, which was sent to the House on voice vote Thursday. Cities already have the authority to regulate salvage yards, said Lyon, D-Rockwall.

He said there has been a "proliferation of salvage yards — they just go out there and dump cars" in rural counties near Dallas.

Sen. Hector Uribe, D-Brownsville, withrew his measure on fake IDs after Sen. Craig Washington questioned the "burning necessity" for the penalties in the bill.

The proposal would make it a misdemeanor, punishable by 180 days in jail, to make a false statement to obtain a driver's license. People who give false information to the Department of Public Safety pertaining to the suspension, reovcation or denial of their driving privileges could be jailed for one year.

A minor who used a falsified driver's license to try to buy alcoholic beverages could face a third-degree felony charge, punishable by up to 10 years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

This section of the bill also would apply to people using a fake ID to cash a hot check.

"Isn't that pretty strong?" asked Washington, D-Houston.

"I don't think so, senator," Uribe said, "especially when you consider that fraudulently obtained driver's licenses are used to pass hot checks. It is a significant problem. I don't think a third degree felony is so heavy a penalty."

But after Washington said the penalties were like "killing a mosquito with a shotgun," Uribe withdrew the bill and said he would try to work out a compromise.

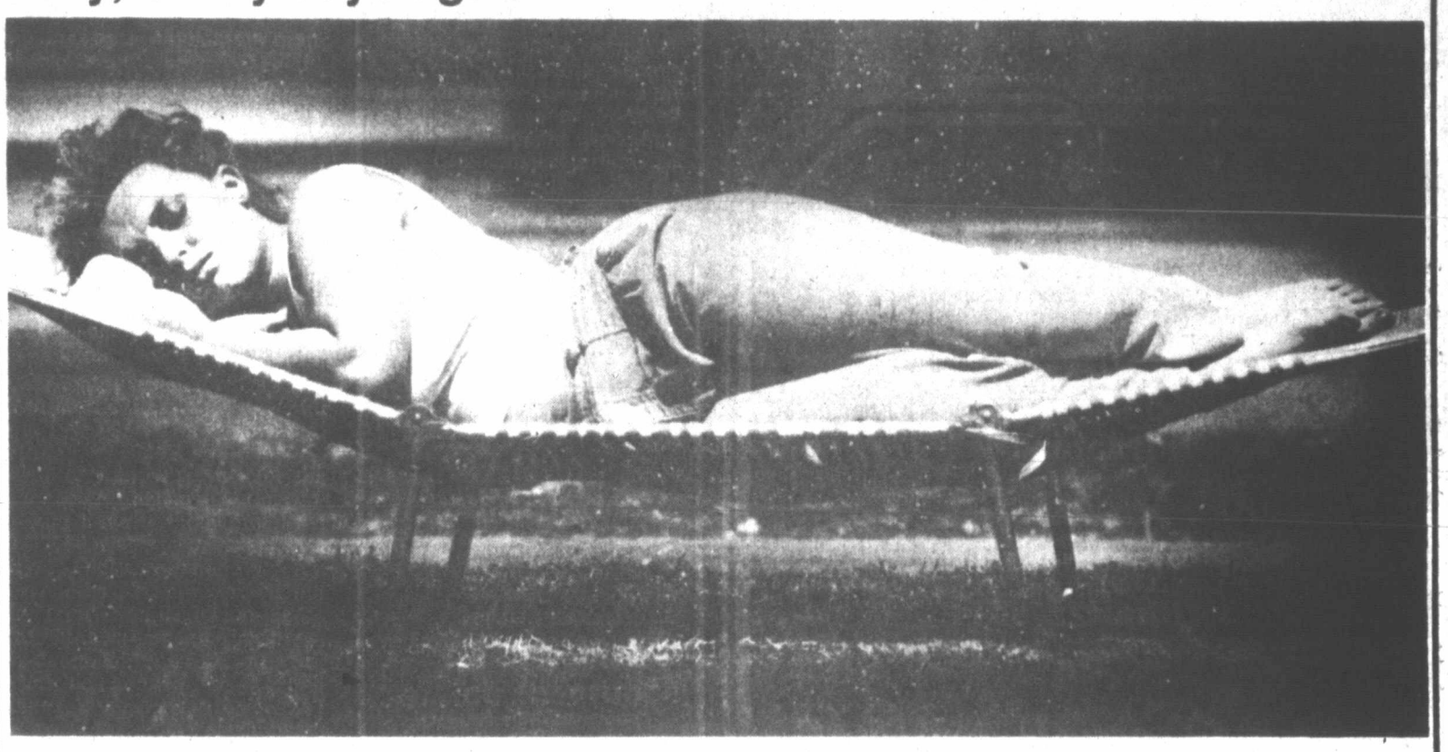

In other action Thursday, the Senate approved a resolution that would establish a 12-member commission, appointed by the lieutenant governor, to recommend ways to attract additional space science industry to Texas.

Another resolution adopted on voice vote would require state agencies, primarily the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, to develop a program to save sea turtles without using "Turtle Excluder Devices" — a device that includes a large metal box.

The Senate approved and sent to the House bills that would:

- Allow counties of over 125,000 that do not have a purchasing agent to employ such an agent.
- Authorize the sale of 75 acres of land currently used for the Austin State School Annex if the land is not needed for other state use.
- Provide various means, such as fines, for discouraging "public nuisances."
- Give the state treasury broader investment authority.
- Provide for certification of certain institutions as special care centers for persons with Alzheimer's disease.
- Revoke the authority of the Railroad Commission to regulate the trucking of sugar or potato products still in the possession of the original producer, as well as cottonseed and cottonseed hulls.

Lazy, sunny days again

Tricia Smith lazily sleeps away the afternoon Thursday at her yard at 1617 Hamilton. Though spring began with a blizzard, the still-melting piles on street sides and hillsides attesting to the heavy snowfall left behind, residents can take hope that spring truly has arrived, with more lazy and sunny days just around the corner.

Good Friday holiday approved by House

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas House plans to celebrate Easter by taking three days off, but it took two votes to get the House to support a half-day off for state workers.

Rep. Bob Richardson's resolution calling for a half-day holiday on Good Friday was initially rejected Thursday, but was approved and sent to the Senate after it was brought up on a motion for reconsideration.

Lawmakers have traditionally granted the half-day holiday. In years when the Legislature is not in session, governors have approved the time off.

Rep. Bill Ceverha, R-Richardson, said Thursday that state workers already get enough holidays — 17. He also said he opposes establishing the holiday in a separate resolution and not as part of legislation that sets up other state holidays.

Richardson, R-Austin, initially fell five votes short of the two-thirds majority he needed to bring the motion up for a vote.

"They're not even going to let them off to go pray for help now," he said after that vote. "It's a direct kick in the teeth."

His motion later came up on a motion for reconsideration, and was approved on voice vote after Ceverha added an amendment that said state offices could not close Friday afternoon. Richardson said skeleton staffs would remain on the job.

Ceverha said the amendment satisfied some of his concerns about the half-day holiday, but added, "I still think it's a lousy idea."

The House and Senate will not meet next Thursday or Friday. They also will take off the Monday after Easter.

Also Thursday, the House gave final approval to measures that would:

- Require the State Board of Insurance to check accident-prevention programs offered by insurance companies that sell workers' compensation coverage. The bill goes to the Senate.

Clarification of speed limit views

Off Beat

By Jimmy Patterson

A point of clarification needs to be made in this week's Off Beat.

It was in this space last week that I so boldly made my statement concerning the new 65 m.p.h. speed limit that had, in effect, passed the day before in the Senate.

I want to reiterate that I am not against a 65 limit. Again, I say that I feel that drivers drive too fast at a 55 limit and now need to take the 65 m.p.h. signs literally.

In his Sunday column, my co-worker Paul Pinkham pointed out his favor of the raising of the speed limit, saying it struck "a blow for freedom and states' rights."

Here! Here!

I grant you, Paul's views tend to be a bit different than mine.

Paul also made it quite clear that he is against mandatory state vehicle registration and seat belt laws.

Am I in favor of motor vehicle inspection laws? Sure.

Look on the streets of Pampa, the highways and byways of Texas.

I'd be willing to venture a guess that at least 75 percent of those cars are old, worn-out clunkers that shouldn't be on the road in the first place were it not for inspections.

Three quarters of the cars I've ever driven were on their last leg.

I know, I know, Paul. That's what you'd call "convoluted logic."

But what about your opposition to the seat belt law?

That bill, too, makes sense.

At times, our government does need to legislate common sense, because not enough people in our country have it.

I'll be the first to admit that before the law was passed, I seldom wore a protective belt.

But, I'll be darned if I was going to be saddled with a $200 fine. So, I started wearing it.

It was a pain for a while. About a week, to be exact.

Now, thanks in part to the legislature, I wouldn't drive without it.

But, there are thunderclouds on the horizon.

Dear ole Governor Bill has openly expressed the law leaves a bad taste in his mouth.

So, I'm sure before his tenure is over, he'll make a staunch effort to throw it out. If the Legislature agrees with the Guv, we'll again have to make up our own minds.

And, there will be more deaths on the highway because of it.

What about your feelings on the mandatory minimum liability insurance, Paul?.

Okay, it is there I concede agreement with you.

It's always the people who don't have insurance that cause the accidents anyway, isn't it?

Speaking with Senator Phil Gramm's press secretary on the phone earlier this week, I learned it was Gramm who wrote the proposal to up the speed limit.

After the bill passed through conference, and, no doubt, all sorts of other red tape, Gramm, who originally had voted in favor of the highway bill, changed his vote.

This past Thursday Gramm voted to sustain the President's veto of the bill.

"As a result of the bill in its present form, Texas, in effect, lost $28.8 million dollars that it would have gained had the law passed in its original form," Press Secretary Larry Neal said.

As much as the senator wanted to vote for the highway package, he couldn't because of the economic torment it would have wrought upon his home state.

Another clarification needs to be made.

The new bill, when enacted this summer, will not mean you can legally drive 65 on Highways 60, 70, 152, or any other state highway or farm road.

Only on rural interstates, I-40 and I-27 for example, will the speed limit be changed.

So now I can continue to poke along in my car as I travel down the long, boring stretches of roadway.

But it is I who will be smiling as I pass by the state trooper pulled over at the side of the road, red lights flashing.

I may arrive at my destination slower than anyone else, but I'll have forty more dollars in my pocket than the guy who got caught.

No drug lab found in raid

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Authorities searching a rural house where a man died during a police raid found no evidence of a drug laboratory, officials say.

Small amounts of what are believed to be marijuana and methamphetamines were found at the house, Walker County Chief Deputy Ted Pearce said Thursday.

When authorities from Walker County, the Texas Department of Public Safety and the FBI rushed the house Wednesday night, someone fired at the officers and they returned fire, Pearce said.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Contracts enforce basic human rights

The Supreme Court's ruling in favor of the Santa Clara County, Calif., Transportation Agency, which promoted a woman over an "objectively" more qualified man, is being hailed as a victory for affirmative action programs. Actually, it raises more questions than it answers about the government's meddling in such manifestly subjective contracts as those between an employer and an employee.

Paul E. Johnson was denied promotion in 1980 when a road dispatcher job went to Diane Joyce, even though, Johnson contends, he scored two points higher than she on an oral examination for the job. Joyce got the job because of the agency's affirmative action program, which the Justice Department, siding with Johnson, has called "casual social engineering heedless of individual rights."

Now, casual social engineering is pretty bad stuff, especially if it doesn't heed individual rights. But an employer has the right to implement a casual social engineering scheme in his own shop, fatuous and trendy and inefficient as it might be, if he wants to. We suspect the framers of the Constitution, on whom we do not rely exclusively to make such an ethical assertion, would have agreed, even though they clearly would have recoiled at mandatory affirmative action plans.

Writing in support of the transportation agency, Justice William J. Brennan said, "Voluntary employer action can play a crucial role in. . .eliminating the effects of discrimination in the workplace." No argument there, but Brennan also waxed liberal about the case — inappropriately so, describing as he did the promotion of more women as a legitimate effort to overcome "a conspicuous imbalance in traditionally segregted job categories."

He should have kept silent on that point, for the legitimacy of such programs, in a free society, should be decided only by the owner or employer, whose concerns must remain impervious to political coercions. But then, according to the wire service, the case did not raise constitutional issues in the first place. Which is puzzling: If the Court was not weighing the constitutionality of the issue, why was it wading into the matter at all?

Further complicating things is the nature of the employer, the Santa Clara County Transportation Agency, which does not have an owner per se except the taxpayers. It is subject to all manner of political and legislative pressures to enact and enforce afirmative action plans, and the Justice Department was therefore misguided in confusing its hiring policies with what might be expected of private firms.

Still, the Justice Department was right, in a wistful sort of way, in expecting a private paradigm for government hiring practices and the Supreme Court has lost sight of its lodestar, which ought to be the reverence for contracts as described in Article I, Section 10. And the terms of contracts, as understood in 1787, were not dictated by fanciful notions of political progress. Human progress was best promoted through, never by, the enforcement of contracts.

Attitudes fuel AIDS crisis

In the face of the AIDS epidemic, the first impulse is to demand that the government do something — finance research on a cure or a vaccine, press efforts to educate people about the threat, carry out mass testing for the AIDS virus. What is usually overlooked is how the government could help by doing less — that is, by not doing things that tend to exacerbate the crisis. AIDS breeds intolerance, but intolerant policies have been the friend of the disease.

AIDS is spread by two principal means: Sexual contact and the sharing of hypodermic needles. The sexual contact is usually homosexual, but anyone who has sex with multiple partners — or with someone who has had multiple partners, such as prostitutes — is at risk. Sharing of hypodermic needles is common among intravenous drug users.

Looking at the connection between certain types of illicit behavior and the spread of AIDS, a lot of Americans have the urge to try to stamp put the behavior. But that's the wrong approach. Homosexuality, prostitution and drug addiction pose dangers partly because of government policies against them, which impede measures to minimize the risk.

Consider each in turn. Homosexuals have been persecuted for centuries, both by legal sanctions and social ostracism. Today, though the law generally tolerates private, noncommercial, consensual sex, homosexuals are still penalized by policies that obstruct stable, monogamous relationships. As a rule, they cannot legally marry; they cannot provide their partners with such benefits of marriage as employer-paid health insurance; they frequently are frustrated in trying to bequeath property or life insurance benefits to their lovers.

The result — not dramatic but not trivial either — is to discourage gays from practicing monogamy. Permanent relationships are hard enough to sustain under the best of circumstances, and what homosexuals face are the worst of circumstances. Combined with religious and social attitudes that promote not just rejection of homosexuality but hatred of homosexuals, the pressures are too much for any but the most committed partners.

It's also safe to assume that some of the pathological hyper-promiscuity of some gay men grows out of guilt and shame about violating such a fierce social taboo. The self-loathing that persecution fosters is bound to contribute to behavior that, given the threat posed by AIDS, can only be described as suicidal.

Laws against prostitution, which might be thought to dampen the threat, likewise exaggerate it. A man who picks up a prostitute on a street corner has no way of knowing whether she is infected, and it's strictly buyer beware. In the famous legal Nevada brothel, the Chicken Ranch, by contrast, the women are tested monthly for the virus, and those found to be using drugs (which present the risk of infection through dirty needles) are fired.

That's no guarantee, since the virus may not show up for months after being contracted, but it's better than nothing. The tight screening also makes it easier to induce customers to accept another Chicken Ranch policy, which requires the use of condoms. Preventive measures like this stand a chance only in legal markets, where unfettered communication is possible. Forced underground, fearful prostitutes and customers both find it harder to protect themselves, and unscrupulous ones find it easier to get away with behavior that endangers their partners.

Then there are the drug users. Granted, heroin addicts are not known for being excessively fastidious, and when it's time for a fix, many of them probably use the nearest available needle. But the tendency is aggravated by laws that make needles legally available only by prescription. The resulting shortage of sanitary, unused syringes gives addicts little option but to reuse those they can get. If disposable needles could be bought over-the-counter, no questions asked, some users would exercise greater caution, thus throwing up new barriers to the proliferation of AIDS.

None of these policies can be regarded as a huge contributor to the epidemic, but each has to be recognized as fundamentally at odds with the effort to contain it. Our vice laws are defective on another ground too: They infringe on peaceable transactions among consenting adults, whose behavior directly affects no one but themselves. But the rise of AIDS means that policies that once were merely repressive are now deadly. If we're serious about fighting the most dangerous epidemic of our time, we ought to admit that these attempts to instill morality by force are a luxury we can no longer afford.

Other side of today's youth

On the northwest side of Chicago, Belmont Avenue near Meade, a woman's car broke down. It was 7 p.m. and dark.

The only nearby place of business still open was a tavern. She went there to telephone her parents. They told her to take a bus home.

A man, drinking at the bar, overheard her phone call, offered to take her home. She declined.

She left the bar. He followed.

And pulled her into an alley-way and began to attack her.

A boy named Tony Carreon was walking down Belmont Avenue on his way to choir practice.

The woman was screaming and fighting the man off.

When the boy arrived at the end of the alley, the attacker knocked the woman to the ground, grabbed her purse and ran.

The boy followed him.

He chased the man on foot to the corner of Belmont and Austin when the man jumped onto an eastbound bus. The boy -- Tony — followed him on the bus.

Young Tony Carreon told the bus driver, "That man just robbed a woman; call police."

But before the bus driver could call, the man jumped off the bus and ran -- dropping the purse as he ran.

The boy picked up the purse and continued the chase — chased the fleeing man until he entered another tavern.

Young Tony ran across the street to a public phone, but before he could dial 911 he saw a cruising police car. He flagged down the police car and told the officers what had happened.

The officers went with him into the bar where he identified the man and where the police found the man in possession of money and things the woman had in her purse.

Police arrested the man.

The victim has identified him.

He has been charged with robbery.

The history of legal leniency in Chicago is such as to suggest that a conviction is unlikely and any punishment will be minimal.

But two gallant people did all they could.

The woman who is willing to testify.

And Tony Carreon who has been nominated by the Chicago Police Department for a Citizens' Award.

When this happened — as I think I mentioned — Tony was on his way to choir practice.

And after that to a family party. For it was also his 16th birthday.

They're not all delinquent.

Policy fails to stimulate Caribbean trade

By Robert Walters

ORANJESTAD, Aruba (NEA) — "There are very few examples of success," says Henny Eman, the popular prime minister of this island nation, when asked about the Caribbean Basin Initiative. "It hasn't worked; that everyone knows."

Barbados Prime Minister Erroll Barrow bluntly explains that CBI has produced "no visible benefits" for his country. Jamaican Prime Minister Edward Seaga says, "The United States has opened the window of opportunity — but not very wide."

Newly independent Aruba ought to be a prime candidate for CBI assistance, but qualifying to participate has been frustrating for the small, struggling Caribbean nation ever since President Reagan proposed the program in early 1982.

"They exempted exactly the products the Caribbean has to offer," Eman says in explaining the disappointing performance of a crucial component of the CBI program — a 12-year period of duty-free entry into the United States for all Caribbean goods.

To protect domestic producers, Reagan excluded all clothing and textiles from the list of products eligible for preferential treatment. Congress then added a host of other exceptions that undermined the intent of the program.

When the CBI measure was finally enacted into law, exceptions to the duty-free list included not only garments and fabrics but also crude oil and petroleum products, watches and watch parts, shoes, handbags, luggage, work gloves, canned tuna, frozen citrus juices and other items.

Cut flowers were not excluded, but after Costa Rica, Jamaica and other Caribbean nations initiated ambitious efforts to grow and export them to the United States, the Commerce Department (in response to pressure from domestic growers) late last year imposed a stiff tariff on imported flowers.

Reagan's initial proposal also called for a 10 percent tax credit for U.S. firms willing to invest in new plants in the region. Congress, however, replaced that substantial benefit with a trivial provision allowing U.S. citizens to take income tax deductions for expenses incurred while attending conventions in the region.

CBI implementation also has been frustrated by difficulties within the Caribbean. Many of the 22 nations eligible for participation in it cannot sustain contemporary businesses because they lack a modern physical infrastructure, an adequate work force, a stable political system or a sound economy.

Aruba has none of those liabilities. It boasts of an international airport capable of handling the largest planes, a deep-water port, an extensive network of paved roads and a sophisticated telephone system.

The country's currency remained stable even after it severed its ties at the beginning of 1986 with the five other Caribbean islands that comprise the Netherlands Antilles.

The literacy rate within its population of 60,000 is 98 percent — far higher than in the United States. Indeed, many of Aruba's citizens speak four languages — Dutch, English, Spanish and the native Papiamento.

Aruba is anxious to mobilize those assets within the CBI framework to establish manufacturing that would rely upon raw materials from South America or Europe.

But shipping the finished goods to the United States can be very difficult, says Eman, because the market there is "quite protective." As a result, he adds, "CBI has not had the success expected or hoped for it."

Unless Washington policy-makers make a renewed commitment to a workable CBI, the region will remain trapped in its traditional roles — as a mecca for wealthy winter tourists and as a haven for shell corporations established by foreigners to conceal their assets.

Parkinson's patient undergoes transplant surgery

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A 42-year-old woman was in stable condition today after doctors tried to curb her symptoms of Parkinson's disease by grafting adrenal gland cells onto her brain in the first such surgery in this country.

Dickye Baggett underwent five hours of surgery Thursday at Vanderbilt University Medical Center.

"This development in the treatment of Parkinson's disease may usher in a new era of transplantation of tissue into the brain," said Dr. George S. Allen, the hospital's neurosurgery department chairman who led the medical team.

Parkinsonism is a degenerative neurological disorder often characterized by tremors, rigidity or loss of balance.

The disease, which affects nearly 1.5 million Americans, results from the loss of brain cells that produce a substance known as dopamine, which allows nerve cells to transmit messages to one another.

Cells from her adrenal glands were used in the transplant because they also produce dopamine.

Similar operations were performed with some success in Sweden and in Mexico.

"We have high hopes for this research," said Allen.

Drugs can control symptoms, but their effects can be sporadic and complications sometimes include psychological disturbances and impairment of movement.

"Current drug treatment of parkinsonism is directed toward reversing the symptoms and does not halt the progression of the disease," said Dr. R. Stanley Burns, a member of the surgical team who is also associate professor of neurology and psychiatry and director of the Vanderbilt Parkinson's and Movement Disorder Clinic.

Hospital officials said Mrs. Baggett lived near Nashville, but would not be more specific.

Wayne Wood, a spokesman for the medical center, quoted Mrs. Baggett as saying before the operation that the surgery was "a risk I'm willing to take," even though it might not work.

"The possibilities that could come from it are very real, maybe helping in some ways myself and other people too," she was quoted as saying. "All along I felt like the good Lord gave me Parkinson's disease for some reason. Maybe this is the reason why."

"My muscles just don't move the way they're supposed to," Mrs. Baggett said. "I have to think 'move.' When I write my name, I have to think each letter."

Mexican doctors who performed similar surgery on a 35-year-old patient in March 1986 said he showed improvement without medication. A second man, a 39-year-old who had the surgery in October, continues to show a reduction in what had been an incapacitating tremor, said researcher Dr. Rene Drucker-Colin.

Eight later surgery patients also seem to be showing gains, he said.

Reagan, despite 'outrageous' Soviet behavior, will send Shultz on trip to Moscow

LOS ANGELES (AP) — President Reagan, despite his own belief that Soviet intrusion at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow is "outrageous," is insisting his secretary of state go to Moscow to pursue an arms accord.

Reagan, who planned to examine the state of U.S.-Soviet relations in a speech today, also predicted the sex-and-spying scandal will not hamper attempts to reach an arms pact.

"I don't see that there is very much distance between us," Reagan said Thursday when asked about chances for a U.S.-Soviet agreement on medium-range nuclear weapons in light of the spy scandal.

Despite Senate passage Thursday of a resolution calling on Shultz to cancel his round of talks or find a secure place to hold them, Reagan's aides said the president wanted Shultz to hold talks in Moscow next week.

"While the president is sympathetic with Congress' intent, he feels that there is just too much at stake right now to cancel the trip," said a senior White House official traveling West with Reagan aboard Air Force One.

The president was queried about the allegations and counter-allegations of U.S. and Soviet espionage during a stop in Indiana at Purdue University on his way to a 12-day California visit.

The official said the president believes there are "a wide range of issues that need to be discussed," such as arms control, human rights and regional issues like Afghanistan.

Reagan does not intend to renege on his invitation to Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev to come to a summit in the United States. "The invitation still stands," the official said.

The official, who demanded anonymity, said the president has been assured "the necessary precautions" have been taken inside the embassy to ensure Shultz is protected from Soviet eavesdropping during his talks next week.

The president, speaking with reporters before boarding his plane in West Lafayette, Ind., refused to comment directly about the charges and countercharges of U.S. and Soviet bugging. Three U.S. Marine Guards have been arrested for allegedly allowing Soviet spies to enter U.S. diplomatic posts.

"Nonetheless," Reagan said, "I can say that what the Soviets did to our embassy in Moscow was outrageous and we have protested strongly. We're conducting a full investigation and will take whatever corrective action is necessary because our diplomatic establishments must be secure from Soviet spying."

Reagan, who strolled over to reporters to denounce the Democratic budget approved by the House of Representatives, was asked whether Shultz was carrying any new proposals to the Soviets.

The president said Shultz was "going there with pretty much" what has been discussed with the Soviets.

"There are some details around the ends that have never been negotiated at all," Reagan said.

Earth's center hotter than sun

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The center of the Earth is hotter than the sun's surface, with temperatures thousands of degrees higher than once thought, say scientists who used diamonds and guns to mimic pressures at the planet's core.

Earth's inner core has a temperature of about 12,420 degrees Fahrenheit, compared with previous estimates of 4,900 to 6,700 degrees, scientists from the University of California at Berkeley and the California Institute of Technology reported today in the journal Science.

The surface temperature of the sun is about 10,400 degrees Fahrenheit, said Thomas J. Ahrens, a co-author of the study and geophysics professor at Caltech in Pasadena.

The researchers used diamonds, rubies, laser beams and special bullets to compress and heat iron so they could determine the melting point of iron in Earth's inner core, where pressure is 49 million pounds per square inch, or 3.3 million times Earth's atmospheric pressure at sea level.

The finding is surprising because it suggests the core, not the overlying mantle, is the source of much of the heat that makes huge plates of the Earth's crust slide over its surface in a process called continental drift or plate tectonics, Ahrens said.

"Thus, the forces that drive the plates and give rise to earthquakes and volcanoes have their origins in the Earth's core," he said. "This provides us strong insight into how the Earth works."

Earth's outermost layer, the crust, is about 4½ miles thick below oceans and 25 miles thick beneath continents. Under the crust is the mantle, which is about 1,780 miles thick.

Below the mantle is the molten iron outer core, which is about 1,410 miles thick. The inner core, which is solid despite high temperatures because it is under so much pressure, has a diameter of 1,500 miles, Ahrens said.

The scientists calculated temperatures of about 12,420 degrees for the inner core, 11,900 degrees for the boundary between the inner and outer core and 8,640 degrees for the outer core-mantle boundary.

Baker assails 'scope and extent' of Russian spying

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's chief of staff says that while the United States may keep tabs on Soviet diplomats, the "scope and extent" of Russian spying on Americans is clearly an invasion of U.S. sovereignty.

And the Senate, in an expression of anger and frustration over alleged Soviet bugging of the American embassy in Moscow, has voted 70-30 against Secretary of State George P. Shultz traveling to the Soviet capital next week for disarmament talks.

The vote is not binding on Shultz, and he planned to go anyway.

As the furor continued Thursday over the alleged espionage by Moscow- and Leningrad-based U.S. Marines entrapped by Soviet agents, Western reporters in Moscow were invited to view a display of photographs and bugging devices supposedly planted in Soviet diplomatic buildings in the United States by American agents.

Among the items shown at the foreign ministry's security service were hairbrushes and pencils that allegedly contained spy devices, along with other espionage items found in rooftop beams, bricks and cinderblocks of Soviet missions.

President Reagan, on a trip to Purdue University for a speech, declined to comment on what he termed "United States intelligence activities."

"Nonetheless, I can say that what the Soviets did to our embassy in Moscow is outrageous and we have protested strongly," the president said. "We are conducting a full investigation and will take whatever corrective action is necessary. ... Diplomatic institutions ... can and must be secured from Soviet spying."

On the issue of alleged U.S. spying, White House Chief of Staff Howard H. Baker Jr. said, "I assume that we have intelligence capability related to Soviet installations, but I don't know that. I don't think the United States would do what the Soviets have done.

"The scope and extent of it really represent an invasion of our sovereign rights. And that, after all, is what an embassy compound is — a piece of sovereignty in another land. But I would certainly be disappointed if the United States didn't have counterintelligence capabilities of our own — in our country and abroad."

In its resolution, the Senate called on Shultz to either cancel his planned talks with Soviet officials next week or find another country where they can be held with a degree of security.

Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., sponsor of the non-binding resolution, said there is "something horribly degrading" in the thought that Shultz might have to hold his private discussions with aides in a special communications van outside the U.S. Embassy because mission security has been compromised.

"The president obviously wanted it to go forward, considering the high stakes involved," Baker said.

Four of 10 highway bridges need repair

WASHINGTON (AP) — While federal officials acknowledge four of every 10 highway bridges are deficient and need repair, the Transportation Department is proposing to scale back bridge inspection requirements to save money.

The proposed change, which would require that many bridges be inspected every four years instead of every two years as now required, was quietly unveiled this week in an entry in the Federal Register.

Widespread deficiencies in the nation's highway bridges have been known for years, but the subject has gained renewed attention since the collapse Sunday of a major four-lane bridge in upstate New York. The collapse of the Interstate 90 bridge across the swollen Schoharie Creek 35 miles west of Albany is believed to have killed at least 10 motorists.

According to the latest estimates by the Federal Highway Administration, 243,646, or 42.3 percent, of the nation's 575,607 bridges of at least 20 feet in length are in need of repair.

The government last year authorized $2 billion for bridge repairs, but that amount was rolled back as part of an overall effort to reduce the deficit. The highway bill approved by Congress last week calls for $1.63 billion a year over the next five years for bridge repair.

Pope to face heated criticism

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Pope John Paul II left a warm reception in the rural countryside to face some heated criticism in the capital and to meet today with unionized workers.

The pontiff returned here Thursday after three days touring eight cities from windswept Patagonia to the semi-tropical north. He won applause from citizens of the interior, including Indians, recent immigrants and cowboys who flocked from the countryside to see him.

But human rights activists in the capital accused him of failing to prod the church into denouncing abuses from the harsh military rule that lasted from 1976 until democracy was restored in 1983.

"The sooner he leaves the better," said Hebe de Bonafini, leader of the Mothers of the Plaza de Mayo. The group is made up of mothers who lost their sons and daughters during the so-called "dirty war" the military waged against suspected leftists.

Emilio Mignone, head of the Center for Legal and Social Studies, said he resented the pope for touring the country preaching peace when the conservative Roman Catholic church of Argentina never spoke out against the country's military excesses.

According to a government investigatory commission, 9,000 alleged "subversives" — including Mignone's daughter and two of Ms. Bonafini's children — vanished without a trace under rightist military rule. Human rights groups say the actual number is 30,000.

The pope planned today to hold a morning Mass for about 40,000 religious leaders at Velez Sarsfield Stadium, then go to the Central Market to speak to about 1 million workers affiliated with the powerful General Confederation of Labor.

Labor leaders have become increasingly upset over the long economic crisis in Argentina, where inflation is nearing 100 percent a year and the foreign debt of $52 billion is third largest in the developing world behind Brazil and Mexico.

Later today he was to meet with Ukrainian and Polish community leaders in what religious observers say is a continued attempt to lay the groundwork for a possible papal visit to the Soviet Union and Poland.

His 1979 visit to his homeland of Poland is credited with helping establish the independent trade union Solidarity.

Thursday night, he met with representatives of 2,000 local Jewish leaders who said they were unhappy with the Vatican for failing to recognize Israel formally as a state. Israel became an independent state in 1948.

Dollar sinks to record low against yen after monetary officials meet

TOKYO (AP) — Disappointment over a meeting of international monetary officials sent the dollar plunging to a record low against the yen today despite heavy intervention by Japan's central bank.

Traders said the U.S. currency's plummet also was a response to a speech by U.S. Treasury Secretary James Baker who on Thursday told the International Monetary Fund that the dollar's decline had been orderly and had improved prospects for reducing the U.S. trade deficit.

Traders said the market interpreted Baker's comment as meaning the United States wasn't interested in seriously supporting the dollar.

In what traders described as massive dollar selling, the U.S. currency fell below 143 yen within 20 minutes after the start of trading on the Tokyo Foreign Exchange Market.

The dollar began sinking further in the afternoon, trading at midafternoon at about 142.35 yen, far below the 144.70 yen it reached on March 30, its previous lowest level since modern exchange rates were set in the late 1940s.

The Bank of Japan had begun buying dollars as soon as the market opened with the dollar at 143.75 yen in an attempt to prop up the U.S. currency, and continued to intervene heavily throughout the day.

In New York Thursday, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks closed at 2,339.20, down 32.96 points. Declining issues outpaced advancers by a margin of more than 7-to-2.

The new low for the dollar in Tokyo came after monetary officials of seven major industrialized nations agreed in Washington Wednesday night that the current exchange rates were "broadly consistent with economic fundamentals."

The meeting included officials from the United States, Japan, West Germany, Britain, France, Canada and Italy.

Japanese government and business leaders today expressed concern that the agreement seemed to accept what they said was too low a level for the dollar against the Japanese yen.

Hajime Tamura, Japan's minister of international trade and industry, told a Cabinet meeting: "I have trouble understanding the outcome of the Washington meeting, which failed to come up with any concrete measures" to stop the dollar's decline, news reports said.

De la Madrid seeks peace

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — Mexican President Miguel de la Madrid said Thursday the destiny of Latin America is at stake in the Central American crisis and called for a peaceful solution to be found without outside intervention.

"In the crisis of Central America, the legitimate interest of the region's people and the destiny of Latin America are at stake," he said in a speech to the national congress.

"It is a matter of affirming and consolidating the relevance of our political culture, of the elementary rights of an international public order, and of the principles of independence and sovereignty," de la Madrid said.

De la Madrid is on the second day of a three-day official visit, the first by a Mexican leader to Guatemala in more than a decade.

He said the Central American crisis "will be resolved only with the use of peaceful methods to solve the differences, respecting scrupulously non-intervention of peoples."

Mexico is a member of the Contadora group that has been trying for four years to forge a peace treaty for the five countries of Central America.

Sheriff maintains innocence

RANKIN (AP) — Upton County's ousted sheriff continues to maintain his innocence in the face of five indictments and allegations that he ordered a deputy to plant marijuana inside a suspect's residence.

Glenn Willeford was indicted for aggravated perjury and delivery of marijuana, third-degree felonies. Other indictments allege official misconduct; official oppression; and tampering with or fabricating physical evidence, all Class A misdemeanors, District Attorney J.W. Johnson Jr. said.

"An indictment is not a conviction," said Willeford, who is accused of ordering a deputy to plant marijuana in a residence six miles east of McCamey prior to a raid last Aug. 26.

The deputy, Scott Taylor, was indicted on a charge of aggravated perjury and possession of marijuana. Two other deputies, including Taylor's brother, Sam Taylor, and Don Pennington, were indicted on charges of official misconduct and official oppression.

Acting Sheriff Danny Brown said he fired all three deputies following the grand jury's action Wednesday.

"I'm disappointed," Willeford said about the indictments. "But we'll have our day in court."

House advances bill to protect the names of deceased personalities

AUSTIN (AP) — The "Buddy Holly bill," aimed at protecting the names of deceased personalities, has won tentative approval in the Texas House.

Rep. Al Granoff's bill would allow survivors of entertainers and other personalities to hold rights to the deceased's name, voice and likeness for 50 years.

The measure, won preliminary approval Thursday on voice vote, advancing it to a final House vote that would send it to the Senate.

The need for the measure was brought to Granoff's attention by Maria Elena Holly Diaz, widow of rock singer Buddy Holly.

At a House committee hearing last month, her lawyer said numerous businesses, including pizza restaurants and auto dealers, have been using Holly's picture in their advertising campaigns without seeking permission. Mrs. Diaz also testified in favor of the bill.

Under current Texas law, there is no restriction on the use of names and pictures of dead people, Granoff said.

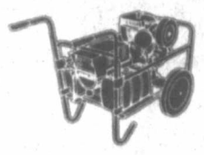

"What we're doing is following a California statute, to some extent, and establishing a property right so that when a famous person dies their name is not just commercially exploited," he said.

Granoff, D-Dallas, said his bill doesn't cover journalistic accounts about famous deceased people.

The bill would allow survivors of personalities to register with the Secretary of State's office in order to protect rights to the deceased person's name, voice, signature, photograph or likeness. The rights would last for 50 years after the personality's death.

Granoff pushed his bill as helpful in the Texas effort to increase its share of the show business industry.

Austin city manager OKs psychological testing

AUSTIN (AP) — The Austin city manager has authorized psychological evaluations — at a total cost of more than $150,000 — for 234 candidates for city jobs or promotions.

City Manager Jorge Carrasco says the evalutions are "an extremely valuable tool that corporate America has embraced for many years and that I believe municipalities all over the country are embracing."

The Austin American-Statesman reported Wednesday that a total of $158,501 was paid for expenses and assessments performed by Dr. David K. Wasson between July 1984 and March 18, 1987.

The evaluations cost $500 or $600 each, and the newspaper said Wasson also charges an additional fee to brief Carrasco or his assistants on the findings.

Wasson said that from 1984 to 1986, he charged $100 for those briefings, and this year increased the fee to $125. One briefing often covers all finalists for a vacancy, officials said.

Wasson said the higher briefing fee accompanied a Jan. 1 increase in the charge for individual assessments from $500 to $600.

He said his evaluation technique is essentially "a one-question interview, that is, 'Tell me your life story.' " He said interviews last four to six hours and include several follow-up questions.

The majority of the interviews, 211, involved candidates for executive openings. The remaining 23 involved "management development" for existing staff members, said Assistant City Manager Libby Watson.

Carrasco said there typically are three to five finalists for an executive opening, and Wasson interviewed each of them.

The city has paid private firms more than $722,000 to conduct 44 searches for people to fill executive openings.

Carrasco said the psychological evaluations provide information about "the kind of demands that the position may have and the match between the position and the different applicants that may be considered."

LOVING COMPANIONS

The girl and her kitten, the boy and his dog, look to each other for close companions. They play together, and sleep together. Close association brings about love and trust. A closer walk with God gives you peace, love, and trust that cannot be equaled. Attend church.

EVERYONE IN THE CHURCH — THE CHURCH IN EVERYONE

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: Do not store up for yourselves treasures on earth, where moth and rust destroy, and where thieves break in and steal. But store up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where moth and rust do not destroy, and where thieves do not break in and steal. For where your treasure is, there your heart will be also. (Matthew 6:19-21)

A young couple began married life with a systematic plan for accomplishing their dreams.

The first thing on their agenda was a nice house. Using their natural flair for decorating and carefully selecting items, they turned their home into a decorator's delight.

The husband's job required that they entertain, and they strove to impress the "right" people with lavish parties. They maintained a fully stocked bar and furnished mixed drinks in expensive crystal. They served catered cuisine on fine china.

They drove luxury cars and had motorcycles stored in the garage and a motorboat parked in the driveway.

However, the culmination of their accomplished goals was coupled with their divorce. They succeeded in acquiring all the possessions they desired, but they lost each other.

My middle daughter has been a competition gymnast for seven years. Gymnastics has been her driving force; her entertainment; her physical and emotional conditioning; and, because she is dyslexic, her therapy.

Not a natural gymnast, she has worked hard to achieve a degree of proficiency. And eventually her hard work was rewarded with a state championship win.

Since she will graduate from high school this spring, the '86-'87 competition season was her last chance to compete in the junior olympics program. She entered the season with enthusiasm and determination to make her last year a winning year. However, in the middle of the competition season she was toppled by injuries. The well-conditioned and trained body she depended on failed her in the clinch.

A beautiful young bride married in the middle of her college education. As a pretty high school student, she had been exceptionally popular, winning various popularity honors. She moved to a college dorm with several of her friends and again enjoyed campus popularity.

When she married, she moved away from her friends and the social flurry of college and into the relatively secluded life of a housewife.

An attempt to register at a new college where she was unknown caused her such discomfort and despair, she returned home, tearful and unregistered. The next few years saw her struggle despondently into mature adulthood.

When she left behind the popularity that had sustained her through her youth, she lost her identity.

Earthly treasures are deceptive and fleeting. But a life submitted and committed to the Lordship of Jesus Christ has a safety net of infallible spiritual strength and resiliency. It is a divinely guaranteed soul security for eternity.

Lefors church sets communion service

LEFORS - The Lefors United Methodist Church will observe a Holy Week candlelight communion service at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday for a special Easter week service.

There will be special Easter music, with Mrs. Joe Watson at the organ and pastor Rev. Gene Louder delivering a short message.

Rev. Louder encouraged all members and friends of the church to attend the special pre-Easter service.

Religion Roundup

NEW YORK (AP) — An Orthodox Jewish leader says young American Jews are becoming more Orthodox and "unlike past years, they no longer merely formally identify with Orthodoxy," they practice it.

Rabbi Milton H. Polin, president of the Rabbinical Council of America, also says there is a trend of Jews from small towns, particularly in the Midwest, to move to larger cities.

Because of the movement, he says, "we may soon have major problems" taking care of small-town Jewish institutions such as Jewish cemeteries "because there is no one there to do so."

Rockin' preacher belts out message

By JOHN KELSO
Austin American-Statesman

TEMPLE (AP) — Howard L. Grant, the high-energy, holler-and-shout preacher of the Deliverance Temple Holiness Church of Jesus Christ, has a favorite message: people need a good brainwashing with God's word.

"I Am Accused of Brainwashing," is one of the favorite works of this pastor of a small downtown church of more than 100 members. Grant says he's a a good brainwasher who helps to save people.

"It's a different type of brainwashing," Grant says. "It's to get the people to the point where they'll humble themselves before God."

Grant, 35, says he never had any formal religious schooling, but he says he figures he has read the Bible six or seven times.

If it says so in the Bible, Grant believes it. And there's a chance he'll talk about it on his Sunday morning radio show "It's Time to Tell the Truth," on KMIL-AM in Cameron, a small town about 30 miles southeast of Temple. The program has been on the air for seven years, most of the time consisting of tapes of Grant's sermons to his church, an assemblage made up of poor people — the sort of people, Grant says, who have to "get up and get it." But from time to time Grant has switched to a live, talk show format in hopes of gathering a larger listening flock.

"You want the response from the media. You want the response from the people. If I'm to continue, I want to hear from them. I'll preach to nobody, but I have to feel like somebody's listenin'."

Under his talk show format, people can phone in, Grant says, and ask him any question they want about the Bible.

They ask whether Eve really ate an apple in the Garden of Eden and if there really used to be giants on the earth.

"Well, it wasn't yesterday," Grant said of the giants. "But you may remember reading about one of the last giants that was slain by a little man named David. Goliath really was a big fella. He was about 9 feet tall. So there was actually giants on the Earth. There wasn't no giants that had feet 50 feet long. But the Bible said in the Book of Genesis that there were men on the Earth that were almost abominable."

Grant, a squarely built man who enjoys deer hunting and Chinese food, lives in Belton with his wife, April, and their four children.

When he isn't on the radio, he's preaching at his church, an old, rented brick building in downtown Temple. The church, which sits cater-cornered from the Empire Seed Co. and next to the World Finance Corp., used to be a store, Grant said.

When Grant preaches, he can go on for hours and frequently does. Most of his preachings, he says, can fill up a 90-minute tape. And during all this, he gives sinners the dickens. He marches around onstage with his mike and handkerchief in hand. And when he comes to a point he wants to emphasize, he leans into the mike and squeals — James Brown style.

"It's stirred up, I think," Grant says of his church and his style. "It's an excited church. We preach loud and hard."

Then there is the high-energy music. Grant's church has a jump-and-shout rock 'n' roll band, "Kingdom," made up entirely of church members. They make "The Who" sound like the Mills Brothers.

The all-electric band consists of a lead guitar played by Grant, a rhythm guitar, a bass guitar, tom-toms, congas, bongos, and a saxophone. April Grant and two other women sing and play tambourines.

A large pile of amplifers, a sound mixing board and a couple of big speakers sit in the church room. A sign on the wall behind the preacher's mike contains reads: "Holy Honky Tonking."

"We just stuck that up there because people call us the honky-tonking church, because people be shouting and praising God," Grant explained.

When the band plays, which it usually does at the beginning of services, the parishioners stand up and dance to songs with religious lyrics. Grant writes some of the band's songs, such as, "I'll Never Be a Hypocrite" and "This Is the Day of the Gospel."

Some might find a rock sound inappropriate for a church service, but Grant points to the Bible.

"The Bible teaches us that God used music when David played on the harp and drove the evil spirit from Saul," says Grant, who talks about the band making a record one day. "We have Bible proof that you can take music and drive out devils, cast out evil spirits and cause people to be confident. You don't have no Bible proof that you can playeth on an instrument and cause a devil to get in a person. That's strictly speculation."

Grant, who says he found the Lord in 1973 after a bout with drug abuse, was not always a man of the Bible.

He was reared in a tiny black neighborhood in the Houston area, known as Lily White, he says, because it was surrounded by the predominantly white suburb of Spring Branch.

Grant says he felt a lot of pressure as a black youngster growing up in the 1960s, a time of school integration busing and racial unrest.

He says he was about 14 when he first encountered drugs. After high school, Grant says he continued using drugs — black Mollies, speed, white crosses, crank, all the various forms of amphetamines that were popular back in the 1960s and 1970s.

"I did it with both hands," Grant says. "I eventually got strung out on heroin. I started off snortin' coke, and I liked the coke, but I couldn't get coke. So I got strung out on heroin. But God delivered me, thank God."

In high school, Grant never thought of preaching, aspired to be a stand-up comedian, because he liked to tell jokes at parties and make people laugh.

"I wanted to be an Eddie Murphy or a Redd Foxx," Grant says.

In 1973, Grant says, his cousin, Paul Grant, began talking to him about religion. Soon afterward, he quit drugs and began preaching.

He become pastor of his current church after a visit from a couple of church members in 1979. At the time, he was working at a carbon black company in Conroe.

Grant doesn't always stay inside the church when he wants to deliver his message. The church owns a 40- by 80-foot tent, and sometimes Grant and the Kingdom band hit the road and hold revivals. They have been to Warren, Taylor, Cameron, Killeen, Houston and several towns in Louisiana.

The revivals, he said, attract people who ordinarily might not come to church.

"They feel like, 'Well, I don't have the clothes to go out, I don't feel like I should go today,' " Grant says, "But we're out there playing loud in a tent, and they're just drawn. They're drawn to the edge of the tent. And then they end up coming in and sitting down in blue jeans, T-shirts. ... It's a much more relaxed atmosphere."

Harrah to hold spring revival

Harrah United Methodist Church, 639 S. Barnes, will be conducting a spring revival and holding a special Easter season service next week

The spring revival will begin Sunday and continue through Tuesday, with services daily at 7 p.m.

Rev. Gene B. Louder, pastor, will be delivering the messages. Special music will be sung by the church choir, with Mrs. Earl Black as director and Mrs. Nola Wylie as pianist.

On Saturday afternoon beginning at 1 p.m. and continuing until 5 p.m., members and friends of the church will have the opportunity to go to the church at their convenience to offer prayers for the success of the revival and for the church.

Rev. Louder encouraged members and friends to attend the special revival services.

On Maundy Thursday, April 16, there will be a special Holy Week communion observance at the church, with the candlelight service beginning at 7 p.m.

Mrs. Black and Mrs. Wylie will be in charge of the special Easter music. Rev. Louder will deliver a short message.

The pastor invited members and friends to attend the special Easter week service Thursday night.

Briarwood Church to present musical

The musical drama, The Day He Wore My Crown, will be presented by Briarwood Full Gospel Church, 1800 W. Harvester, on three days this month.

The musical will be performed at 7:30 p.m. Friday, April 17; 7 p.m. Sunday, April 19, and 7:30 p.m., April 20.

"With a cast of 65 presenting Christ's resurrection story, we believe you will be touched by God's spirit as you witness the agony of betrayal and witness the miracle of resurrection and ascension by the living Lord," Pastor Gene Allen said.

Pastor Allen said he and the congregation "warmly invite you to share with us in this worship experience."

Briarwood is formerly Lamar Full Gospel Assembly.

Witnesses to have memorial service

"Keep doing this in remembrance of me."

Those words of the Lord Jesus Christ, found in Luke 22:19, were spoken at the time when Jesus instituted the memorial of his death.

"It is Jesus' death that opened to humankind the prospect of attaining everlasting life in paradise conditions," said Elmer Reed, local minister for Jehovah's Witnesses.

"So his death is something we must remember," Reed continued.

More than 7 million people worldwide will assemble with Jehovah's Witnesses at the annual event, which is the only celebration observed by the denomination.

The observance will be on Sunday, April 12, this year, which corresponds with Nisan 14 on the Bible's lunar calendar, Reed said.

The Pampa congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses will memorialize the event at 8 p.m. Sunday at the Kingdom Hall, 1701 Coffee, with Douglas Cullins presiding.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Make the best of situations today, even activities that spark little enthusiasm for you. Don't spoil the fun for others.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) There could be more disruptions in your household today than usual. Don't let small frustrations get blown up into something serious.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If someone does something today that disturbs you, try to shake it off instead of taking your ire out on innocent associates.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Some legitimate demands may be placed on your purse today. Don't compound matters by buying things you don't need or can't afford.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If you try to be all things to all people today, you're likely to end up not pleasing anyone and making yourself unhappy in the process.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Problems that develop for you today are apt to be of your own making. If you are aware of this, it will help you avert complications.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Let controversies between pals today be resolved among themselves. If you try to step in as the arbitrator, they may all come down on you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Even though you may be reluctant to do so, give yourself a day of rest today. Relax and get away from the serious concerns of making a living.

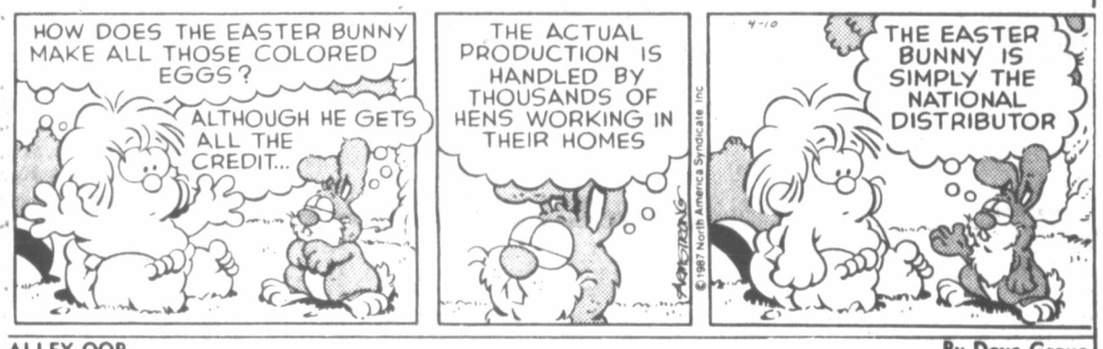

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Today you may feel the need to champion an unpopular issue. However, your possibilities for winning new converts appear rather slim.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Let your better judgment guide you today if someone you know who is a poor risk wants to borrow money you can't afford to lose.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Decisions shouldn't be made out of frustration or anger today. If your emotions are rattled, they'll have a negative effect on your judgment.

Wishing well is weekend project

By BOB SAWYER

Even if I don't win the TEN MILLION DOLLARS, I, MR. SAWYER, am going to retire in luxury — by placing wishing wells in strategic locations around town.

It all started when I built a wishing well for my yard. One day, while avoiding mowing the lawn, I glanced down inside.

Money! There was money inside!

Complete strangers, or besotted guests, were making wishes on my lawn decor...and paying the lawn fairy to get better odds.

Even if you don't collect any money, for a really attractive yard decoration in good taste, you can't beat this wishing well.

It stands 6 feet tall and has a hexagonal base (six sided), about 38 inches across. Made of pine 2x4s and 2x2s, waferwood or plywood and shingles, it is surprisingly inexpensive to build.

The wishing well is an easy weekend project. It you need additional information, our detailed plans include a materials list, plus complete, illustrated cutting and assembly instructions.

Also available are plans for our rubbish rickshas, handy rolling carts that keep your garbage cans upright, safe from dogs and wind. Tey are also a terrific help with yard work.

To order the plans, specify Project No. 2060 for the wishing well; or No. 2099 for the rubbish rickshas. Send $4.95 for either plan, or save a dollar and order both for only $8.90.

Mail to: Backyard Builder, Dept. 79065, P.O. Box 1000, Bixby, Okla. 74008-1000. Add $2.95 for a catalog with discount coupons.

To build the well, you'll need ½-inch waferwood or exterior plywood, pine 2x4 and 2x2, ¾-inch dowel rod and shingles.

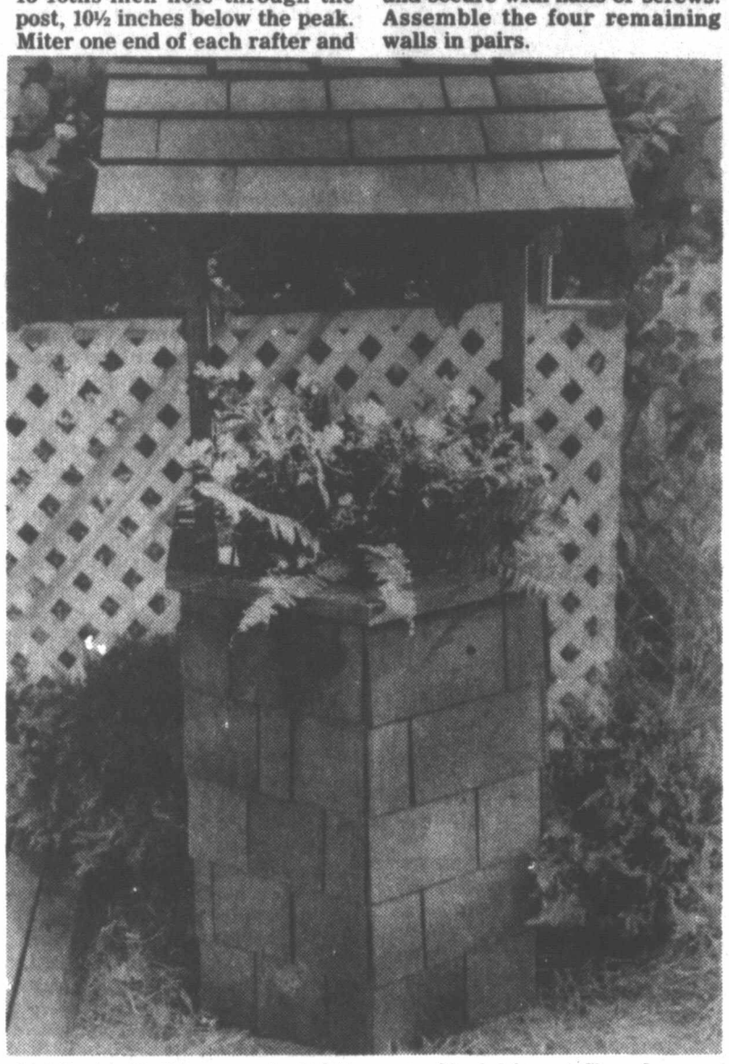

Cut from waferwood: six walls, 15 x 36 inches; and two roofs, 21 x 33 inches. Bevel both long edges of each wall at a 30-degree angle toward the same surface.

Cut the following lengths of 2x4 lumber: two posts, 72 inches; four rafters 18¼ inches; four braces, 13 inches; and six rails, 16⅝ inches.

Cut a peak at the top of each post, at 30-degree angles. Drill a 13-16ths-inch hole through the post, 10½ inches below the peak. Miter one end of each rafter and both ends of each rail and brace at a 30-degree angle.

Cut from 2x2 six 36-inch lengths for the corner supports. Bevel one edge of each support at a 30-degree angle.

Glue two walls together along the beveled edges. Glue a corner brace along the inside of the joint, and secure with nails or screws. Assemble the four remaining walls in pairs.

At 6 feet tall, this easy, build-it-yourself wishing well makes a handsome lawn decoration.

Assemble the three pairs of walls to form the hexagon shape, using the three remaining corner supports to secure the joints.

Attach two rafters to opposite edges of a post, butting the mitered ends of the rafters against the post so that the peak angles line up with the top edges of the rafters. Toenail to secure.

To further support the rafters, nail a brace bertween each rafter and the post. Attach rafters and braces to the second post.

Secure one post inside the base, centered along a wall. Attach the second post inside the opposite wall.

Place the rails on top of the walls, matching mitered ends to form a neat frame around the top. You will have to notch two of the rails, to fit around the posts.

Glue and nail the roof sections to the rafters and posts — the gap along the roof peak will be covered with shingles. Shingle the base and roof in overlapping rows, working up from the bottom.

You may want to hang an old wooden bucket over the well, for which you'll need a crank and shaft. Cut a 28-inch length of dowel for the shaft. Drill a ¾-inch socket into it, close to one end.

For the handle, cut a 7-inch length of dowel and drill a socket, as you did for the shaft. Glue the handle into the shaft, with the socket in the handle facing the closer end.

Use the remaining length of dowel as the grip; glue it into the socket in the handle.

Make a pair of wooden washers by drilling a ¾-inch hole through the center of a 1-inch dowel. Cut two ¼-inch-thick slices from the drilled dowel.

Slide a washer up to the handle end of the shaft. Insert the shaft through the holes in the two posts, and slip the second washer over the end. Glue the washers in place, so that there is enough play for the shaft to turn easily.

Bill Hite, left, 1987 American Cancer Society Crusade chairman for Pampa, and Dick Stowers, president of ACS' Gray-Roberts Unit, plan the fund-raising crusade, which will be held this month.

Hite named chairman of '87 Cancer Crusade

Bill Hite of Pampa has been named chairman of the American Cancer Society's 1987 Crusade in Pampa, according to Dick Stowers, president of the Gray-Roberts Unit of the Society.

"We couldn't have selected a better chairman," Stowers said, citing Hite's history of community service. "Considering his dedication and commitment to the Society and the health welfare of our community, I am sure this year's Crusade will be a huge success."

The Cancer Crusade in Pampa will be held during April, which is Cancer Control Month. The annual campaign not only raises funds for the Society's research, service and education programs, but also includes a door-to-door residential education drive.

"This year, over 100 volunteers will be visiting their neighbors with good news for the women of this community," Hite said. "We'll be distributing a folder entitled, 'Now, Breast Cancer has Virtually Nowhere to Hide.' In it, there's a lot of valuable information on how women can find breast cancer when it is the size of a freckle — when chances of survival are almost 100 percent."

Hite added that he expects to raise monies through this year's Crusade that will be used to support programs right here in Pampa for prevention, early detection and treatment of cancer and to provide assistance to cancer patients.

The 1987 Cancer Crusade in Pampa is part of a statewide and national effort involving more than 2.5 million American Cancer Society volunteers.

The door-to-door drive will be April 20-30. Commercial donations are being coordinated by Jack Skelly, and Stowers wil handle special gifts. The co-chairmen of this year's Crusade are Dr. Moss Hampton and Phil Gentry. Memorials are being taken by Johnnie Thompson, 100 W. Nicki, phone 665-1705.

Cartoons, quotations and bits of family traditions add to a family history. The chronological information can make very dull reading and character sketches can be just the thing to get everyone interested in the family. The following two items were published in August 1986 Roots Digest:

A sign seen on an empty cabin in the Texas panhandle in 1886:

200 miles to the nearest post office
100 miles to wood
20 miles to water
6 inches to hell
God Bless Our Home!
Gone to live with the wife's folks.

A family historian who was writing up his family history was dismayed to find that one of his ancestors had been publicly hanged. In a moment of inspiration, he wrote, "He died during a public ceremony when the platform upon which he was standing collapsed beneath him."

Remember, you will usually find some truth in oral family history. The above is an excellent example of how the facts can be disguised and yet be true. Verify your "family lore" to see what has been changed, added or deleted, depending on the author.

"Before most people start boasting about their family tree, they usually do a good pruning job." —— O.A. Battista

Has your family been pruned? If you find something in your research that others chose to keep hidden, respect the privacy.

Perhaps instead of "pruning" the tree, someone decided to "graft" branches — an addition that has not been proven but that has been a part of the verbal history for such a long time that is has become "fact." Prove your lineage and CITE THE SOURCES to avoid the pruning or grafting to your tree.

Doctors of law add degree of confusion to issue

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Recently a "Dentist's Wife in Utica, N.Y." took you to task for your reference to "all of the doctors and dentists," noting that dentists are doctors — doctors of dentistry, and should be recognized as such. You agreed with her, and so do I.

About 20 years ago, most law schools began to award their graduates the doctor of law (jurisprudence) degree. So since the majority of attorneys now hold a doctor of law degree, why shouldn't attorneys also be called "Doctor"?

ATTORNEY'S WIFE,
MACON, GA.

DEAR WIFE: It's all right with me. Some lawyers get to the scene of an accident before a doctor. And with the threat of malpractice suits so common, fewer physicians are volunteering as "Good Samaritans." So an accident victim might be better off with a lawyer.

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for assuring a reader that it is perfectly all right to send a note of sympathy and flowers to someone who has lost a beloved pet. There is yet another way:

After I lost my beloved "Sophie" — an aged terrier — I received a lovely card from our animal shelter advising me that a contribution had been made in honor of "Sophie" from a thoughtful friend of mine. As an animal lover, I thought that this was an especially loving gesture on the part of my friend, and want to pass it along to you, hoping you will share it with your readers.

VIRGINIA GRANDFIELD,
DEERFIELD, ILL.

DEAR VIRGINIA: I heard from many other animal lovers suggesting that a contribution to the local humane society in memory of the deceased pet would be a fitting way of expressing condolences. And by the way, the amount of the contribution is never disclosed.

Cook shoots 69 to lead Masters

By ED SHEARER
AP Sports Writer

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Australian Greg Norman put it best.

"The speed of the greens was the crux of the matter," Norman said Thursday after an opening round of the 51st Masters golf tournament that brought mixed reviews from the players.

Tom Watson loved the firmness of the greens. So did Jack Nicklaus.

West Germany's Bernard Langer, however, thought they were too quick, and Norman was concerned with the pin placements. .

"I cannot imagine the greens being any faster than they are now," said John Cook, who posted a 3-under par 69 early in the afternoon, good enough for a one-shot lead over Augusta native Larry Mize.

"They are so smooth," said Cook, who hasn't won a tournament since the 1983 Canadian Open. "If you miss, you just go hit it again."

"The greens were good," Norman said. "It was just that they were very quick. There were some places where you couldn't put the ball close to the hole."

Norman, the pre-tournament favorite coming off 10-victory worldwide performance in 1986, said the first-round pin placements made the biggest difference.

"If the pins were in the right places, you wouldn't notice the severity of the speed," he said after opening with a 73.

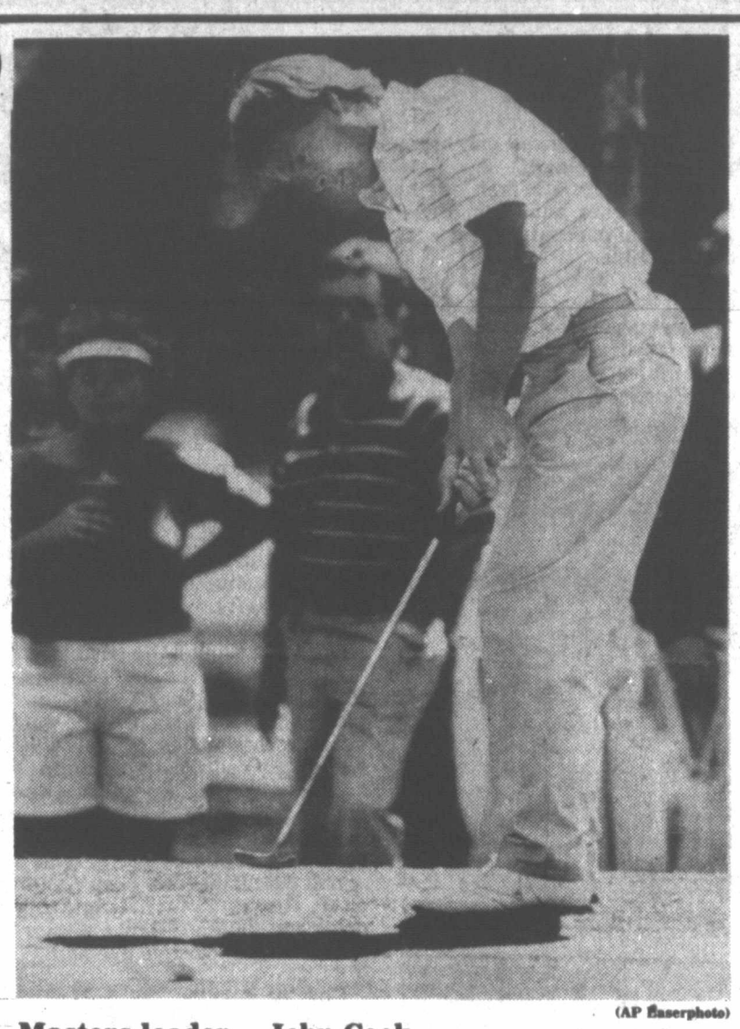

"The greens are very good, the best they've ever been" Watson said. "Firm. It really makes you think around the golf course."

Watson, winless during the last two seasons, was one of only eight players to break par on the 6,905-yard, par-72 Augusta National Golf Club course.

He shot a 71 and was tied with five others — Calvin Peete, Curtis Strange, Langer, leading money-winner Corey Pavin and Payne Stewart.

"The golf course is a defensive golf course," Watson said. "There are certain places on the golf course you simply can't be and expect to make par."

Watson compared the conditions with those of links course in Great Britain, saying one couldn't shoot for the flags, but instead had to run shots onto the hard greens.

Final Bambino tryouts today

Final tryouts for Optimist Bambino baseball will be from 5:30 p.m. to 6 p.m. today at Optimist Park for boys 11-12, Jack Gindorf, National League president, announced Friday morning.

"We had had nearly 80 new boys sign up this year," Gindorf said. "Each team will carry a roster of about 13 players. We have more than 100 boys who will be back from last year's programs.

"In order to be eligible to play, the boys must try out no later than today," Gindorf emphasized. "Every player will be assigned to a team by tonight."

This year the Pampa Optimist program adopted Bambino baseball, the junior version of the Babe Ruth program, for boys 10-12. The program is divided into the American League and the National League with both leagues having eight teams.

Dean LaRue heads the American League program. Both leagues get the season underway May 4.

All teams have a 14-game schedule with the winner of the first half playing the winner of the second half for the league championship.

After the regular season ends, all 16 teams will compete in a double-elimination City Championship Tournament. Both leagues will field all-star teams which will play other communities hoping to land a spot in the Bambino World Series.

Signups are scheduled Saturday for the T-Ball and 9-year-old intermediate leagues.

Signups begin at 9:30 a.m. and will continue until 12 noon.

Boys and girls between the ages of 7 and 9 interested in playing in either league should report to the Optimist Boys Club building. Signup fee is $15 per child.

To be eligible, each child must be 7 years old on or before July 31, 1987. Teams will be organized the week following the signup.

Practice begins the week of April 20 and the first games are tentatively scheduled to begin May 9.

Foe bitter over golf course passage

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Editor

Mrs. M.E. Hatfield of Lefors is a lady who believes in speaking her piece, even when all hope seems gone. The 82-year-old Lefors pioneer has been one of the outspoken critics of the controversial Pampa Public Golf Course issue. She still believes taxpayers will suffer the consequences after voters approved Gray County participation in the construction of the $300,000 project in last week's election.

"We're going to be required by law to build a new county jail and there's just not going to be enough money to go around," Mrs. Hatfield said. "I live on social security and I've seen my taxes raised enough."

Construction funds for the course will come from the $2.9 million sale of Highland General Hospital, a county-owned facility. Interest from the hospital sale has boosted earnings to $4.6 million.

Mrs. Hatfield, who ran an ad campaign opposing the project, said the course should be constructed strictly through donations.

"If the big boys want to play, let them pay," she added.

Voters in Lefors, as well as Grandview, McLean and Alanreed, defeated the proposal (479 to 134). However, Pampa residents made up for the deficit, voting in favor of the golf course 1,722 to 1,017.

"If Pampa wants it, let them have it," said Mrs. Hatfield. "How are they going to maintain the course. It's going to cost thousands of dollars just to keep it maintained."

However, Pampa Public Golf Association President Buddy Epperson is confident there won't be a tax hike because of increased donations once the project is underway. Epperson said in an earlier statement that the golf association has pledged to donate $100,000 in money and manpower to help build the course.

Epperson said the possible tax increase clause on the ballot made the voting much closer.

"I felt like it was an incongruous statement. What if the commissioner candidates had something negative said about them on their ballots?," Epperson said.

Epperson said the association's next step is to meet with the city commissioners to discuss water provisions and site location for the course. The city would provide land and water for the course, according to an association proposal, and assume ownership once it's built.

"We'll approach the city on this matter after the new commissioner takes office," Epperson said.

The new commissioner will not be sworn in until May because of a runoff election between Richard Peet and W.A. Morgan.

Epperson said a majority of the commissioners support the golf course proposal.

Horner headed for Japan

DALLAS (AP) — Free-agent Bob Horner has agreed to terms on a one-year contract with the Yakult Swallows of Japan, a newspaper reported today.

Horner's agent, Bucky Woy, said he would meet with Swallows president, Kazuo Souma, today in Dallas to finalize details, The Dallas Morning News said.

Horner turned down a three-year $4.5 million offer from the Atlanta Braves at the end of last season to become a free agent.

After Horner failed to receive an offer from any other major league team, Woy proposed a one-year deal with a base of $800,000 to the Texas Rangers in mid-March, but the Rangers rejected the offer.

"When the thing fell through with the Rangers, we decided to go a different direction," Woy said.

Both Horner and Woy live in Irving, a Dallas suburb.

Terms of the Japanese baseball contract were not disclosed, but it is believed that Horner will receive "well in excess of $1 million," the News said.

Septien better off on another team

Kicker pled guilty to child molestation

DALLAS (AP) — Finding a city where he could start life over would be the best thing for Dallas Cowboys placekicker Rafael Septien, the team's kicking instructor says.

Septien pleaded guilty Wednesday to a felony charge of indecency with a child. He admitted fondling a 10-year-old girl who was a friend of his roommate's daughter.

Cowboys kicking instructor Ben Agajanian said Thursday that the kicker would be better off playing for another team and should ask for a trade

"I was a kicker. If you were a kicker, and you had been through what he's been through, wouldn't you want to go to another city and start all over?" Agajanian said.

In Long Beach, Calif., where Agajanian tried out six kickers, the coach said he was deeply disappointed by Wednesday's developments.

"I haven't talked to him (Septien) since February, but I told him then that if he was guilty, he needed help and I didn't want to associate with him," Agajanian said. "But I said if he was innocent, I would stand in his corner.

"But he never called me again, and he never told me anything. It's a tremendous disappointment to me. His dad, before he died, said, 'Take care of my boy, he's very naive.' I tried. The last two years, I was very patient with him, working with his physical condition."

As a result of a plea bargain, Septien received 10 years' deferred probation, a $2,000 fine and a directive to undergo psychiatric counseling.

Cowboys President Tex Schramm and coach Tom Landry issued brief statements Wednesday that indicated Septien could return to the team.

Septien, in a statement Wednesday, said he was relieved the matter had been resolved but did not elaborate on his plans.

Back problems have hindered Septien the past two seasons, and the Cowboys drafted kicker Max Zendejas in the fourth round of the 1986 draft. But Septien beat him out and the Cowboys released Zendejas before the season began.

Agajanian is taking a second look at Max Zendejas' brother, Luis Zendejas, a former Arizona State kicker who was released last summer by the Minnesota Vikings.

The Cowboys have already signed four kickers and might sign two more before the July 19 opening of training camp in Thousand Oaks, Calif., officials said.

At last week's minicamp, Septien said he was having no problems with his back. He had the team's third-fastest time in the 880-yard run, finishing in 2 minutes, 21 seconds.

A Mexican native who has not obtained U.S. citizenship, Septien joined the Cowboys in 1978 after attending Southwest Louisiana.

He was the 10th-round draft choice of the New Orleans Saints in 1977, but was released in training camp and signed by the Los Angeles Rams. He was later released by the Rams after the final preseason game of 1978 and was immediately signed by the Cowboys as a free agent.

'Knucksie and Lefty Show' gives strong performance

The Knucksie and Lefty Show had the Toronto Blue Jays talking to themselves — and Silent Steve Carlton talking to the media.

For the first time in baseball history, two 300-game winners pitched for the same team and the ancient arms, with lusty support from some young bats, led the Cleveland Indians to a 14-3 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Phil Niekro, 48, notched win No. 312, allowing three runs and seven hits in five innings. Carlton, 42, winner of 323 games, pitched four scoreless innings for his first save since 1968. The relief outing ended Carlton's record string of 544 consecutive starts.

"It felt strange, absolutely strange," said Carlton, who usually refuses to talk to the media. "I'm not accustomed to warming up like that and then coming in trying to get groundball outs."

Another 300-game winner didn't fare as well. Don Sutton yielded a pair of home runs to Seattle's Dave Valle as the Mariners beat the California Angels 7-2.

In other American League games, it was Milwaukee 12, Boston 11; Minnesota 5, Oakland 4; Chicago 6, Kansas City 0; Detroit 9, New York 3, and Baltimore 8, Texas 6.

Almost as unusual as Carlton's relief appearance was his post-game speech pattern; he talked so much it was hard for reporters to get a word in.

"I'm not chopped liver," he said with a wink after allowing four singles, walking two and striking out one. "I feel too good to retire. I'm having too much fun and I love the game too much to retire. After doing the same thing for 22 or 23 years you just don't quit because things don't go right."

Cory Snyder's grand slam, one of four Cleveland homers, highlighted a six-run Cleveland first inning against Joe Johnson. Julio Franco and Joe Carter hit two-run homers for the Indians while Tony Bernazard had a solo shot.

Mariners 7, Angels 2

Valle snapped a scoreless tie with his first homer leading off the third inning and added a two-run shot in the seventh to make it 3-0. Both homers came off the 42-year-old Sutton. Meanwhile, Scott Bankhead held California to one run over 6 2-3 innings. Steve Shields earned his first major-league save despite a home run by Jack Howell in the ninth.

Brewers 12, Red Sox 11

Rookie catcher B.J. Surhoff led of the bottom of the eighth inning with his first major league home run as Milwaukee swept the season-opening three-game series from the defending AL champs. The winning homer came off Steve Crawford after Boston's Danny Sheaffer's first major-league homer with two out in the seventh inning tied the game 11-11.

Twins 5, Athletics 4

Pinch hitter Dan Gladden's bases-loaded two-run single capped a three-run rally in the bottom of the ninth that gave Minnesota a three-game sweep. With one out, Gary Gaetti doubled and Tom Brunansky singled off Oakland relief ace Jay Howell to cut the Athletics' lead to 4-3.

Roy Smalley doubled and Howell intentionally walked pinch hitter Mark Salas before Gladden's game-winning hit. Juan Berenguer pitched one-hit ball over the final three innings to earn the victory. Mike Davis drove in three runs for Oakland with a homer and double.

White Sox 6, Royals 0

Jose DeLeon and Bobby Thigpen combined on a three-hitter and Greg Walker tripled home two runs to lead Chicago. DeLeon yielded a leadoff bunt single to Willie Wilson in the first inning but did not permit a runner to second until he issued one-out walks to George Brett and Frank White in the seventh.

'Playoffs' begin for tracksters

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

This weekend is the first of the "playoffs" in the world of high school track and field.

Four district meets are set for area teams in the first round that will eventually find the best at their events at the state meet in Austin, May 16.

The 1-2 finishers in this weekend's events will travel to Levelland for the regionals, May 2

Groom will host a district meet, where McLean, Lefors, Miami and the Tigers will compete.

Stratford will host White Deer; Kelton and Wheeler will participate in the district finals in Booker; and, Canadian will be at Shamrock, along with the Irish.

If all goes as planned, area coaches hope to have as many as 30 student track athletes in the Levelland regionals.

That may be overstating it a bit.

Broken down school-by-school, here are the athletes that have a realistic chance at furthering themselves in track competition:

WHEELER

The Mustangs will probably wind up sending the largest contingent to South Plains College the first weekend in May.

Track Coach Ronnie Karcher sees the brothers Smith, Richard and Bubba, qualifying in the high jump, shotput, and discus.

Bubba also has a healthy chance at making it in the high hurdles and long jump.

Karcher is also looking for Hale Hughes to win the 800-meter dash and Danny Benefield to qualify in the high jump and intermediate hurdles.

"It's a weak district we're in, I can't kid anybody," Karcher said. "Follett and Booker will be our main competition, but we should do real well this weekend."

Karcher feels Chad Bentley, David Jones, Todd Helton and the school's mile relay team has a chance of winning their events this weekend.

WHITE DEER

White Deer Doe coach Derryll Friday lists five girls that have a chance to go to the regionals.

"Monica Vigil has a chance to advance in the 400 and as a member of the 400- and 800-meter relays," Friday said.

Other relay members are Stacy McConnell, Jennifer Germany and Ruth Hinds.

Donna Wessner is expected to advance in the shot and discus.

McConnell has a chance in the high jump.

The White Deer Bucks, meanwhile, also hope to send a handful of competitors to the regionals.

Their best bet is Joe Don Brown.

Brown has the best mark of anyone in the state in the high jump, with a leap of 6 feet, 9½ inches. That mark is also the best of Brown's career.

Last week, in the White Deer Invitational, Brown also competed in the long jump for the first time.

His jump of 20-11½ would not fare very well compared with other jumpers in the area, but it was good enough for a first-place finish by almost 8 inches at the meet.

Mike Snyder is the Buck usually responsible for excelling in the long jump.

He did not compete last week, but his 21-4 mark earlier this year is good enough to be the sixth best in the Panhandle.

"I'd like to see Snyder win the long jump," Buck Coach Gary Richardson said. "And possibly Brown do well in that event."

"Snyder also has a good chance to hit in the 100.

"And our sprint relay team will also do well. Ladd Lafferty, Snyder, Travis McIntosh and Brown have a chance at going to regionals," Richardson said.

GROOM

In Groom, coach Frank Belcher also feels many of his Tigerettes have a chance to advance to Levelland.

Belcher said Karen Bohr has a chance to do well in the 100 and triple jump. Her 12.4 in the 100 is fourth best in the area.

Belcher is banking on Erin Eschle to finish high in the 400, and the triple and long jumps.

Eschle is sixth best in the area in the 400 with a time of 62.0.

Belcher is confident that Jowannah Ruthardt and Jill Brown will do well in the 800 and 100 hurdles, respectively.

Groom's 400- and 1600-meter relays also could go to Levelland.

MIAMI

Miami's best chances lay with Shane Bridwell in the 400. Bridwell had a first-place finish of 52.6 in last weekend's Booker Kiowa relays.

In the girls events, Coach Jerry Boyd sees hope for Alane Dinsmore in the 1600 and 3200-meter runs; Johnna Hinton in the 400 and high jump; Autumn Walls in the 400, triple and long jumps; and Alicia Walls in the long jump.

CANADIAN

Canadian's biggest hopes lay with senior Wendi Burns in the triple jump. Her 37-8 mark is best in the Panhandle.

Her 64.21 finish in the 400 at last weekend's White Deer Invitational was good for third place.

Canadian also has a chance in the boys 100. Shawn Wright and Dan Dockray both have times good enough to win, not to mention Jeff Kirkland, who finished third last week in White Deer.

OTHER

Kelton's Michelle Keelin has a chance to advance in the 3200 and 1600.

Wheeler's Tammy Helton could compete in the long jump. Her mark of 16.3 in the event is tenth best in the area.

Shamrock's Paige Pasley also has hopes in the high jump.

Gentlemen:

We have examined, in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards, the balance sheets and the statements of revenues, expenditures/expenses, and changes in fund equity of the funds and account groups of the City of Pampa as of September 30, 1986, and for the year then ended (not presented herein); and in our report dated October 21, 1986, we expressed an unqualified opinion on the financial statements that were therein presented.
