Heavy Rains Deluge Area; More Due

ISOLATED thunderclouds that roamed the South Plains Monday, dumping more than two inches of rain in some areas and causing flooding in Post and Colorado City, may redevelop today.

The National Weather Service, which issued numerous flash flood warnings across the area Monday, is calling for a 60 percent chance of rain today, diminishing to 20 percent tonight.

Eight inches of rain inundated Colorado City, prompting the closing of about 20 streets Monday night.

Police Chief Fred McWhorter said that up to three and a half feet of water coursed through several intersections and that concrete on some streets was being washed away.

Although there had been no evacuations as of 9 p.m., McWhorter said he had received about a dozen calls about water entering residences.

The rain in Colorado City lasted most of the day, falling in sporadic bursts and persistent drizzles.

The sheriff's office at Post reported that the more than two inches of rain that fell there in less than two hours Monday night washed out a portion of US Highway 207 five miles south of town.

However, a highway department spokesman said the standing water began to recede about 9 p.m.

Running water about eight inches high flooded downtown streets in Post, spilling over curbs. A sheriff's department spokesman said the water had not entered any homes as of 9 p.m., and added no streets officially had been closed to traffic.

No injuries or heavy damage was reported in either Post or Colorado City.

More Flooding Feared

The NWS predicted the rain would continue sporadically across the South Plains most of Monday night, adding to the possibility of flash floods and high water in some areas.

As the clouds and showers, which began building near the Texas-New Mexico border during the afternoon, moved northeast at about 20 miles per hour, they dropped mostly slight amounts of precipitation on land already saturated by persistent rains over the past week. Isolated heavy showers were reported in open areas between towns.

Other than Post and Colorado City,

Truckers Use Farm Tactics In U.S. Capital

By The Associated Press

A CONVOY of 18 growling trucks circled the nation's Capitol and other rigs blockaded truck stops around the nation Monday as threats of a nationwide truckers strike grew louder.

At many stops, independent truckers simply shut off their engines and refused to budge.

The independents, who own and operate their own rigs, say they are at the end of the road unless something is done about the cost of diesel fuel.

"We might be here two days, two weeks, or two months," said Henry Douglas, 40, operator of one of about 20 tractor-trailer rigs that parked at Boswell's Truck Stop on U.S. 67 at Newport, Ark. "We can't leave. When you're out of money and out of fuel, you're in trouble."

As some truckers organizations were calling for a nationwide shutdown late this week, a convoy led by Colorado trucker Robert Somers wheeled into Washington, D.C., with a police escort to try to draw the attention of politicians and bureaucrats.

There were no traffic snarls and the convoy rolled away without incident, leaving behind Somers and two other drivers to meet with congressmen and representatives of the Department of

Gene Leroy Hart Dies In Oklahoma

MCALESTER, Okla. (UPI) — Gene Leroy Hart, acquitted in March of the sex slayings of three Girl Scouts, died of a heart attack Monday in the Oklahoma State Penitentiary. He was 35.

Corrections Department officials said Hart was pronounced dead at 7:25 p.m. CDT at a McAlester hospital. A prison spokesperson said Hart was exercising in the prison yard when he collapsed at 6:42 p.m.

Hart was serving time for rape and escape convictions at the time of his death. He was found innocent March 30 of the bloody sex slayings of three Girl Scout whose bodies were found at an encampment near Locust Grove, Okla., June 13, 1977.

Hart had escaped from the Mayes County jail 10 months prior to the slayings and was at-large when the bodies were found. A week after the slayings, warrants were issued for his arrest, initiating one of the biggest manhunts in the state's history.

YOUNG STOCK MARKET WHIZ — Carson Levit, 13-year-old stock market whiz, discusses his next investment with his San Francisco broker, Alan Baer. Carson, who plays his hunches, saays "...my mom says you have to go with what your feelings tell you." (AP Laserphoto)

Youth, 13, Sweetens Paper Route Nest Egg Playing Stock Market

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Thirteen-year-old Carson Levit wasn't satisfied with his $1,000 in paper route earnings, so he says he ran up his nest egg to "about eight times" that over 14 months by playing the stock market.

"It's not that hard," says the youth who has become something of a legend among the ticker-tape watchers in San Francisco. "You let your profits run and cut your losses."

Spurns Blue Chip Stocks

Levit, who lives with his family in a comfortable Marin County community a short ride across the San Francisco Bay Bridge, just wrinkles his nose when the talk turns to Blue Chip stocks. He says he prefers lesser-known investments.

"Carson is a very aggresive investor," says his broker, Alan Baer. "You have to be. If you end up with nothing but losses, it's great for your tax bracket, but you're broke."

Carson says his first big buy was stock in a well-known bottler of spring water. He bought in at 8⅞ and sold out three months later at 12⅝ at a total profit of $157.50.

"I felt it was going to be a fad," Carson said. "And my mom says you have to go with what your feelings tell you."

Confers Frequently With Broker

His mother is actually the legal guardian of the account Carson has with a downtown brokerage firm. But Carson calls the shots, telephoning his broker as much as three times a day.

Secretaries at his school let him use their telephones during recess periods and his broker regularly puts aside his $5 million corporate accounts when Carson calls.

"You want to do anything in Canadian oils?" Baer asked Carson during one personal visit the youth made to his 32nd floor office. "It's money in the ground."

Carson settled into a chair, sneakers untied and pondered advice about Canadian oils, electronics and a Tennessee life insurance firm. The broker made some routine telephone calls. After a few minutes, the youth bought 100 shares of the Tennessee firm at 29⅞.

Influence Scandal Forces Vorster Out

Propaganda Fund Leads To Downfall

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — President John Vorster, a dominant figure in South African politics for decades, resigned in disgrace Monday as an investigatory commission accused him of trying to cover up a multimillion-dollar government scandal.

The resignation of Vorster, a key architect of this country's policies of race segregation, was announced in Parliament by a somber Prime Minister Pieter W. Botha.

The allegations relate to Vorster's 12 years as prime minister, an office he resigned last October, purportedly because of ill health.

Vorster was believed to be in Cape Town and his office would only say all his appearances were canceled. He was replaced by Marais Viljoen, president of the Senate, in the largely ceremonial post of state president.

Vorster 'Knew Everything'

The 72-page commission report, presented Monday to Parliament, said that as prime minister Vorster "knew everything" from the outset about a secret fund of $60 million to $120 million established to improve South Africa's image in the world with media support.

The report, by a government-appointed commission headed by Judge Rudolf Erasmus, officially confirmed a year-long tide of revelations that a top-secret information team had for six years operated a worldwide propaganda campaign riddled with political maneuvering, blackmail and cover-ups.

Among the biggest expenditures in the secret fund, according to the report, was $11.35 million allegedly loaned to Michigan publisher John P. McGoff for efforts to buy the Washington Star, the Sacramento (Calif.) Union and a half-share in UPI-TN, a London-based television news firm operated in conjunction with the news service United Press International.

The Star bid failed, but McGoff did buy the Union and the half-share in UPI-TN. McGoff was not immediately available Monday for comment, but in the past he has denied any South African funds were involved in his attempted purchase of the Star.

Dubbed "Infogate" by South African newspapers, the scandal began peeking out last year, making tighter and tighter circles around the 64-year-old political veteran Vorster.

The commission's first interim report appeared to exonerate him, supporting his protestations of innocence, but a second was more critical and the one released Monday said he knew all about the secret-project campaign — aimed at assuaging international criticism of the country's separatist racial policies.

High Officials Resign

When the scandal first surfaced, Vorster stepped down as prime minister and his former information minister, Connie Mulder, and the director of the South African Information Department, Eschel Rhoodie, resigned. Rhoodie, now wanted here for fraud, is believed hiding in Europe. It was through their department that some of the funds allegedly were funneled.

The report said McGoff refused to testify before the commission, and it went into detail about how loan funds allegedly were channeled to him through a Swiss bank.

McGoff, 54, of Williamston, Mich., is president of Panax Corp., which runs seven daily and 25 weekly newspapers in Michigan, Illinois, Florida and Virginia. He is also president of Global Communications, which owns the Union, and other newspapers in California and Texas, along with UPI-TN.

The commission claimed that $8.35 million of the loan he allegedly received from the South Africans was still outstanding, and that the government should try to get money back from Mulder and Rhoodie.

The report concluded Botha and Finance Minister Owen Horwood had "vir-

Hospital District To Seek Tax Hike

By KIM COBB

DIRECTORS OF Lubbock County's fledgling teaching hospital, prepared "to get some heat," will ask county commissioners today for a tax increase to keep the facility's doors open.

A re-examination of an audit report by Lubbock County Hospital District board members Monday failed to provide answers for the myriad of financial problems at Health Sciences Center Hospital.

With the hospital in its second year of operation, staff members predict that the teaching facility for the Texas Tech School of Medicine will go in the red around September, with or without the cost-cutting measures which have been put into effect in recent months.

The hospital's bill collection rate has not reached the expected level and the amount owed the hospital for patient services is around $7 million, including those debts written off as "uncollectable." Executive director Gerald Bosworth has said repeatedly that area physicians have not given full support to the new hospital and state aid for teaching needs has not materialized.

Listing those problems as insurmountable at the present time, LCHD board members meet today at 1:30 p.m. in Commissioners Court to outline their bid for more county funds.

LCHD attorney Charles Galey explained the county can take two routes in raising more tax revenue for the hospital district, which currently receives 75 cents per $100 at a valuation of 40 percent:

— The commissioners could increase the county-wide assessed value from the current 40 percent level to around 60 or

DIPLOMAT DIES IN CRASH

WASHINGTON (AP) — An early morning car crash Monday claimed the life of a diplomat from the African nation of Sierra Leone, Maryland authorities said. Montgomery County police said Raymond Baami-Caulker, first secretary of the Sierra Leone embassy, was pronounced dead on arrival at Suburban Hospital in Bethesda, Md.

School Officials Fear Agency's Encroachment

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

THE PROPOSAL for a separate federal Department of Education is an invitation for increased federal bureaucracy and decreased local controls according to Lubbock school administrators.

The bill to create the 13th cabinet-level agency barely passed the House Government Operations Committee and will go to the House floor on Wednesday. A similar measure already has passed in the Senate.

The bill would transfer education programs administered by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to a separate department.

Several programs, however, such as Head Start, child nutrition and education for Indians and veterans, would remain scattered throughout other departments.

Critics See Encroachment

Critics see the department as an encroachment upon the terrain of local school entities and as a costly escalation of bureaucracy.

Proponents say the department would better coordinate educational responsibilities and would give education the recognition and emphasis it has been lacking.

The arguments against such a department are on the minds of some local administrators and most school board members.

"I don't see the need for a separate department," said Ed Irons, superintendent of public schools. "It would emphasize or enlarge government's role in public education."

Irons suggested that programs not under the umbrella of HEW could be brought under that department "to streamline their organization" so that education programs could be centralized and improved without creating a separate department.

Dr. E.C. Leslie, assistant superintendent for administration, said he sees both the pros and cons of the proposal, but has some doubts as to whether the department would benefit education.

He said he would favor the proposal if the creation of a department of education would remove some of the regulatory requirements imposed by HEW.

Dr. Leslie said "another positive side" of the department is "if it would be a step toward general financial support by the federal government rather than categorical support."

He explained that along with federal

FBI Confirms Manhunt Here

By KAY BELL

(c) 1979 A-J Pub. Co.

THE SPECIAL agent in charge of Lubbock's FBI office Monday confirmed that agents here are searching for a man wanted by federal authorities in San Antonio.

"He is wanted for questioning in San Antonio," Bernie Brown told The Avalanche-Journal.

"We've been looking for him since almost a week prior to (federal judge John H. Wood's May 29) death," Brown added.

Lubbock County law enforcement agencies "have been very cooperative," Brown said, in the FBI's attempt to locate the man, a member of the Bandidos motorcycle club, but not affiliated with the Lubbock chapter.

"He has been in Lubbock," Brown said. "There's no question about it." He added that authorities think the man still is in the Lubbock area.

Brown also confirmed that the FBI and Lubbock County Sheriff's Office combined forces Sunday night for a stakeout of the local Bandidos clubhouse near Lubbock.

A sheriff's department dispatcher was overheard about 8 p.m. Sunday broadcasting a watch at the club's trailer house northeast of the city. A person with the sheriff's office was overheard saying the watch was in connection with the "deal out of San Antonio."

"What we were trying to do was locate (the man wanted for questioning)," Brown said. "We got a report that he was out there."

Also Monday, Lloyd Harrell, special agent heading the Dallas FBI office's part of the investigation into Wood's slaying, told The A-J he believes the publicity surrounding the Lubbock search may endanger the life of the man being sought here.

"We have to use extreme caution in what we say," Harrell said. "I certainly wouldn't want to be the federal prosecutor who endangered the life of an individual we need to talk to."

Meanwhile, in San Antonio, FBI agents continued their search for two men wanted for questioning in connection with the assassination. Those men were seen by several witnesses around Wood's condominium the morning he was shot.

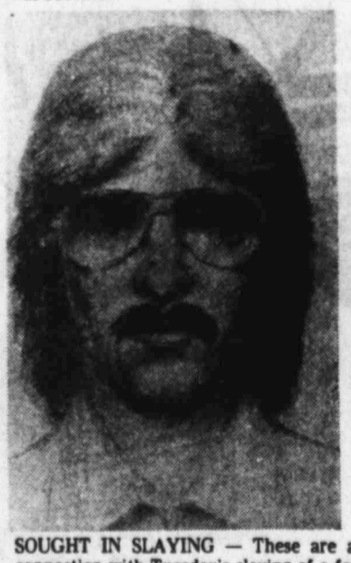

Composite sketches of the pair were released by the FBI Friday. The drawings show a man with long brownish hair and a mustache and a clean-shaven man with light hair. Both wore glasses and appeared to be in their late 20s or 30s.

San Antonio agents have not named the men as suspects in the shooting, saying only "we're just trying to identify who these men are."

Sunday in San Antonio, officers confiscated 30 pounds of marijuana, an assortment of hashish, methamphetamines and other drugs, $5,588 in cash, eight pistols, a rifle, several knives and ammunition in a raid on the residence of a San Antonio Bandido.

Two persons were arrested in the raid. Luis B. Bonilla, 37, identified as a member of the Bandidos, posted a $15,-

Cool Spring Temps Trail Tough Winter

The biting winter of 1979, the coldest on record in the United States, spawned a spring season in its image, at least across the South Plains.

According to the National Weather Service, the 1979 spring season was cooler and had more rain than anticipated.

Across the South Plains this spring, Big Spring was the hottest spot and Dimmitt the coolest. Silverton was the wettest and Plains the driest.

Lubbock was an exception to the chilly weather pattern in one respect — its average temperature of 61.3 degrees was nearly two degrees warmer than normal, the NWS reported.

Spring rains in the city and across the area surpassed those of recent years, and the 4 inches Lubbock caught in May made the season one of the wettest in the city's history.

"It's hard to say if we'll set a precipitation record," said Loren Phillips of the Lubbock office of the National Weather Service. "The spring has been wet, but May, June and July are our big months. If the rest of the year is about normal, we could."

Through June 3, Lubbock recorded 10.28 inches of rain.

For the three-month spring season, Lubbock recorded 8.07 inches of rain. Only Silverton, with 8.60 inches, logged more.

At the low end of the precipitation spectrum, Plains received only 1.43 inches for the three months. Lamesa, with 2.34, and Seminole, with 2.92, also occupied the dry side of the weather service's rainfall charts.

Abernathy, north of Lubbock, led the South Plains in rainfall received in May with 4.85 inches. Silverton, with 4.15 inches, was second, and Lubbock's four inches placed third for the month.

Plains, which had the least amount of rain for the spring, also had the least amount during May. Its reading of .90 of an inch made it the only South Plains location to record less than an inch of moisture during May.

Morton, with 1.06, and Tulia, with 1.15, were the second and third driest South Plains towns in May. Other area towns reporting less than two inches of rain in the month were Friona with 1.32, Lamesa with 1.35, Post with 1.35, Dimmitt with 1.46, Crosbyton with 1.71, Muleshoe with 1.77 and Seminole with 1.96.

Those above-average readings played a big role in keeping the spring temperatures below normal, Phillips said.

In Lubbock, the average temperature for March, April and May was 61.3 degrees, the result of a three-month average high temperature of 74.2 and an average low of 48.4 degrees. That average was the second warmest in the South Plains.

Big Spring, with a 64.1 degree average, was by far the warmest South Plains city during the spring. That town had the highest average high temperature, 77.3 degrees, as well as the highest average low temperature, 50.8 degrees.

Lubbock's 61.3 and Lamesa's 61.0 rounded out the top three warmest cities in the area this spring.

The highest average maximum temperatures belonged to Big Spring and Lamesa, with a 76.6 each, and Seminole, with 76.3. The three coolest average highs for the spring were in Silverton, which noted a 68.2 average high, Hereford, with a 68.4 average, and Friona, with a 68.9 average.

The warmest average lows this spring were recorded in Big Spring, Lubbock and Matador, with a 47.2 average minimum. Big Spring's 50.8 degree average low was the only average higher than 50 degrees in the South Plains.

Texas Fliers Ending Ordeal In Colombia

BOGOTA, Colombia — "I want a hot bath, a good meal a doctor to get this bullet out of my back," said William Spradley, one of two Houston men who paid fines totaling $40,000 Monday to clear the way for their return to Texas.

Spradley, a Houston firefighter, and Roy McLemore, an aircraft salesman, paid $20,000 each in fines for illegally entering Colombian space and a total of $10,000 more in legal fees and hospital bills, their lawer said in a telephone interview from Riohacha on the Caribbean coast.

The Texans, who said they were bound for Venezuela on April 29 to pick up oil-drilling bits, claimed they had to make an emergency landing in Colombia's Guajira peninsula, from which most of Colombia's marijuana is smuggled to the United States.

Both deny they were flying to Colombia to pick up marijuana.

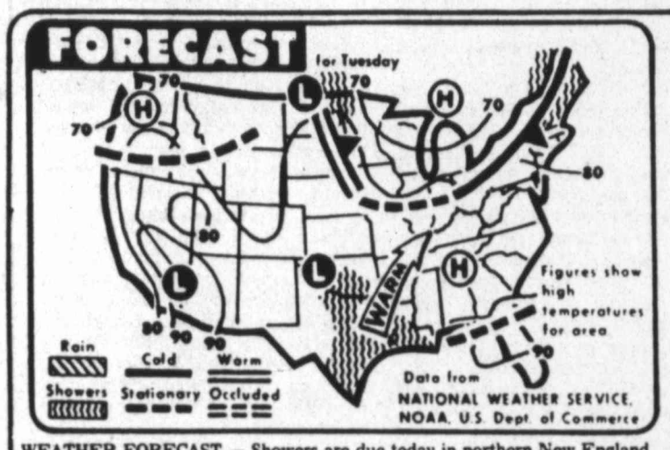

Spradley says he was shot by hoodlums who met the plane and was left to die on a desert airstrip. McLemore says he was kidnapped by gangsters who held him for $100,000 ransom.

McLemore escaped 16 days later with the aid of a plan devised by a Houston fire department official who came to Colombia to help Spradley.

The lawyer, Manuel Ballesteros, said the only obstacle to the men's departure for the United States is an official immigration procedure, which was expected to be taken care of Tuesday. He said the men would be driven to Barranquilla, another port city about 160 miles southwest of Riohacha and that they probably would be put on a plane Tuesday.

Spradley has a bullet lodged 1½ inches from his spine, but says he is up and around. McLemore, taken to an army jail and then to a public jail after the army helped him escape from his kidnappers, wound up in the Riohacha hospital with complications resulting from an operation two months earlier, he said.

A single bullet pierced Spradley's right forearm, entered his right side and lodged close to his spine. Doctors in Riohacha say hospital facilities there are not adequate for an operation to remove the bullet.

WEATHER FORECAST — Showers are due today in northern New England, northern Minnesota and North Dakota, according to the National Weather Service. Baby Deaths Decreased Last Year

Preliminary figures released Monday by the Texas Department of Health in Austin show a 1978 Lubbock County infant mortality rate of 16.3 per 1,000 live births and a 1978 City of Lubbock infant mortality rate of 14.3.

The 1978 Texas infant mortality rate has been calculated to be 14.2 and the estimated 1978 national rate, based on National Center for Health Statistics research, is 13.7.

In 1977 the Lubbock County infant mortality rate was computed to be 20.3 in comparison to a rate of 14.7 for Texas.

The infant mortality rate measures the annual number of deaths of babies from birth to age one.

Preliminary 1978 infant mortality rates released today for selected Texas cities comparable in size or location to Lubbock show the following trend: Galveston, 13.4; Corpus Christi, 15.9; Austin, 10.4; El Paso, 11.8; Odessa, 18.2; and Amarillo, 13.2.

Board Defeats Lach Request For Parole

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Convicted scalpel murderer Benjamin Lach, a former Texas Tech University student serving time for the 1967 murder of a Tech cleaning woman, Monday was rejected for the third time in his bid for parole.

LACH

The Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles in Austin announced that his application for parole had been reviewed and action postponed until May 1980.

Possible parole for Lach was first considered in 1977 but has been "set off" each year since then.

Lach, 34, now editor of the Huntsville prison newspaper, was a Tech graduate student when cleaning woman Sarah Alice Morgan was killed Dec. 4, 1967, in a science building laboratory after the lab had been closed for the night.

He was convicted of murder with malice by a Fort Worth jury after the case was moved on a change of venue from Lubbock. He was sentenced to 40 years in prison on Nov. 9, 1970, but gained credit for a third of his sentence and thus became eligible for parole with 60 days' credit for each 30 served in his status as a prison trusty.

As it has each year for the past three years, the possibility of Lach's being paroled aroused vigorous oppostion from past and present Lubbock County law enforcement officials.

Criminal District Attorney John T. Montford wrote a letter of opposition to the state board, and former Criminal District Attorney Alton Griffin traveled to Austin last month to meet with board members and argue against paroling Lach.

Former District Attorney Blair Cherry told The Avalanche-Journal in an interview this spring that he asked the death penalty for Lach during the Fort Worth trial because he was afraid Lach otherwise one day would be paroled.

Cherry said psychiatrists here and at Rusk State Hospital for the Criminally Insane, where he was sent after he was apprehended, said Lach probably would be a model prisoner but would kill again if released from a structured environment.

Welfare Services Survey To Begin

A Department of Human Resources Survey aimed at assessing the delivery of welfare services throughout Texas will begin in Lubbock County June 11.

DHR staffers will visit some 1,500 residents of Lubbock County during the 10-week-long survey.

The information they gather will be used to determine the needs of the population, identify barriers which prevent citizens from participating in programs for which they are eligible and to determine the effect of program changes on citizens.

The data will also be used by DHR in making its 1982-83 legislative appropriations request.

It is the first survey of its kind conducted by DHR. They expect to cover 112 counties and visit 28,285 homes across the state.

Clinic Might Ease Infant Death Rate

By TOM GRIESS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Few parents soon forget their grief over the death of a baby.

GRIESS

There is a deep sense of loss, of months of love and tender care suddenly gone for nought, compounded by the regret over the snuffed-out potential of a young human life.

In Lubbock County the tragic scene has been repeated again and again — much too often, health authorities agree — but remedies for the problem have proven elusive.

The county's infant mortality rate, measuring the deaths of children from birth to age one, soared in 1977 (last published figures), and explanations have been many and varied.

It may be attributed to widespread ignorance of proper bodily health care, insufficient health care funding and facilities, general lack of concern about the situation or, more likely, a combination of all three.

Fortunately for county residents, however, a new resolve appears to be emerging among local, state and federal organizations to attack the problem squarely.

Within the next few weeks, the Lubbock Health Department will open a clinic for the newborn to complement its maternity clinic. The United Way Well-Baby Clinic has already acquired services of Texas Tech Medical School resident physicians five days a week, and local health agencies have worked with the Texas Department of Health to adopt an infant health care proposal that could bring more than $100,000 annually to the county during the next four years.

Moreover, recently released statistics from the Health Sciences Center Hospital neonatal intensive care unit show the sophisticated facility to have admitted 402 "high risk" babies for care from Feb. 1, 1978, to Jan. 1, 1979.

The 1978 Lubbock County infant mortality rate statistics, soon to be published, may or may not reflect much improvement from the preceding year, but a flock of officials ranging from local agency directors to the community health development chief of the Dallas office of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare will await future years' results with considerable interest.

A good bit of that interest has its roots in what happened in the mid-1970s and, particularly, what happened in 1977.

Three months after her February 1978 arrival in Lubbock to assume the position of director of the city health department, Dr. Marjorie Orr told a Lubbock League of Women Voters audience that the department's maternity clinic operated only three days per week, thus creating a six-to-eight week waiting period for the clinic to see new patients.

The maternity clinic had been operated on a three-day schedule during the preceding years, but Dr. Orr said she intended to shift funds within the budget to provide for expanded hours by July 1978.

She also told the audience that she hoped to open a child health clinic in the 1979 fiscal year, with the funds to be provided by a hefty budget increase she would likewise request.

The child health clinic would complement the work of the Well-Baby Clinic, which provided but one-day-per-week check-ups of babies by volunteer physicians.

Commenting recently on the development of those plans into the perinatal program begun this spring, Dr. Orr and several of her clinic staff pointed to the significance of the October 1976 split of the city-county health department.

During the 14-month-period prior to her February arrival, Dr. Orr said the department home visiting program was entirely dormant, and not until this year has it begun to be implemented as designed.

Paul Blackwell, the health department medical programs coordinator, said of the home visiting program: "It's been really poorly supervised in the past. What they've been doing in the past is taking the birth list (in Lubbock) and trying to get to as many as possible, but you must understand that there were only two community nurses."

The depleted community nurse staff in recent years bore witness to the most serious ramification of the city-county split — a cut in health department funding.

First In A Series

According to a November 1975 Avalanche-Journal survey of health department programs, the home visiting program consisted of six nurses, and the department also provided family planning and some medical care of newborns.

Following the city-county divorce, staff reductions and what Dr. Orr called "poor management" by local authorities prompted the state health department to seize control over the family planning program. In addition, what newborn medical care had been provided before the city-county schism was conspicuously lacking as the present perinatal clinic staff arrived.

The protection of babies' lives turned dramatically downward. The county's infant mortality rate, which had improved from almost 25 per 1000 live births in 1973 to 15.0 in 1976, soared to 20.3 in 1977.

The blame could not be placed solely on the rural areas of the county outside the city of Lubbock, either.

Although those areas have lacked full health department coverage since the 1976 split, statistics provided by the health department show that the number of infant deaths in Lubbock, after steadily declining from 73 in 1973 to 45 in 1976, jumped to 70 in 1977.

Dr. Norma Porres, for almost 20 years a Lubbock family practitioner and a member of the Lubbock-Crosby-Garza County Medical Society, said recently that the setback in 1977 occurred because the state failed to fully compensate the city for the loss of county funding.

"All the health services provided to the public (throughout Lubbock County) suffered," she said of the city-county split.

But some observers discerned a causal factor more basic even than inadequate funding and facilities.

High infant mortality in Lubbock County had been a problem for decades, not simply during the mid-1970s. In 1960 the county rate was 43.5 compared to 29.1 in Texas and 26.0 in the United States. In 1965 the county rate was 34.0 compared to 26.1 in Texas and 24.7 in the U.S. By the early 1970s, however, the county had managed to achieve parity with the state and national averages — only to collapse in 1977.

Addressing the South Plains Perinatal Association in June, 1978, Dr. Orr said: "My assessment at this time is that many people in Lubbock, including some influential ones, did not know the difference between public health preventive services and medical care. They thought of public health as providing a free service to people who did not work. They did not seem to know that preventive medicine is much less expensive in terms of both tax dollars and hum an suffering and much more productive than crisis medical care."

In short, too many people were either ignorant of a neglected aspect of the health department — that it saved money as well as lives — or unconcerned with what could be easily forgotten.

Woman Recalls Sequence Of Assassination Events

DALLAS (UPI) — A little girl who was running beside the presidential limousine while gunshots rang out in Dealey Plaza never was called to testify about the assassination of John F. Kennedy, but 16 years later Rosemary Willis vividly remembers the scene — And what seemed strange about it, even to a 10-year-old.

Taken out of school by her parents so they could watch the motorcade pass through downtown Dallas, Rosemary took off running as the president's car drew near. She ran alongside the car even after it turned the corner in front of the Texas School Book Depository building.

Her white coat made her clearly visible in the famous Zapruder film used to document the events of the assassination, and an amateur assassination detective studying the frames 12 years later was startled by the girl's abrupt halt and turn toward the Texas School Book Depository.

David Lui, studying the assassination for a special project at his Beverly Hills, Calif., high school, realized the little girl's actions — perhaps a response to the sound of gunfire — came too early in the film, before any shots were believed to have been fired.

Lui believed that if the little girl had stopped and turned in response to the sound of gunfire, he could refute the numerous conspiracy theories being advanced, since the girl's actions came early enough in the film to give a single assassin enough time to fire all the shots.

Lui managed to track down the little girl, Rosemary Willis, now 26, in 1975. The story of his search was published in a copyrighted Los Angeles Times Syndicate story Sunday.

Miss Willis made told him she had stopped running when she heard the shot. But rather than refuting conspiracy theories, she is convinced Kennedy's death was the result of a plot.

"I heard three shots and they all came from across the street from the direction of the book depository," she said Monday in an interview. "Oswald was up there as clear as could be. I Think he was up there on purpose to make people think he was the one.

"I remember standing while everyone else was falling to the ground. And in my (peripheral) vision I saw three other figures standing. I saw a man with an open umbrella and beyond him a man behind a lattice-type wall.

"And I saw either one or two people on the railroad trestle above. I glanced at the president again for a split second, then when I looked up, the umbrella was down and the man behind the wall had vanished." c

"The sounds I heard came from the book depository but they weren't necessarily the shots that killed him. Someone with a gun with a silencer could have been in the gutter where they later found shells, or on the railroad trestle or behind the wall."

Miss Willis' father, Phil, agrees.

"There's no doubt in our mind the final shot that blew his head off did not come from the depository. His head blew up like a halo. The brains and matter went to the left and the rear.

"The policemen behind had Kennedy's brains all over his white helmet and windshield. There's no damn way it (the fatal shot) could have come from the depository" located to the rear of the motorcade.

Willis, who like Zapruder had been photographing the scene, immediately took his family to a Kodak plant to have the film developed.

"Zapruder — and the FBI — Were already there," Miss Willis said. "Certain photos we saw then clearly showed two figures on the railroad trestle. The FBI took the photos and when they returned them, the two figures were no longer in the photographs."

The Warren Commission later visited the family.

"They talked to me but nothing I said was in their report. There are a lot of discrepancies in the commission's report. I know they changed some of the things my parent told them, even to the point of putting 'yes' where they said 'no.'

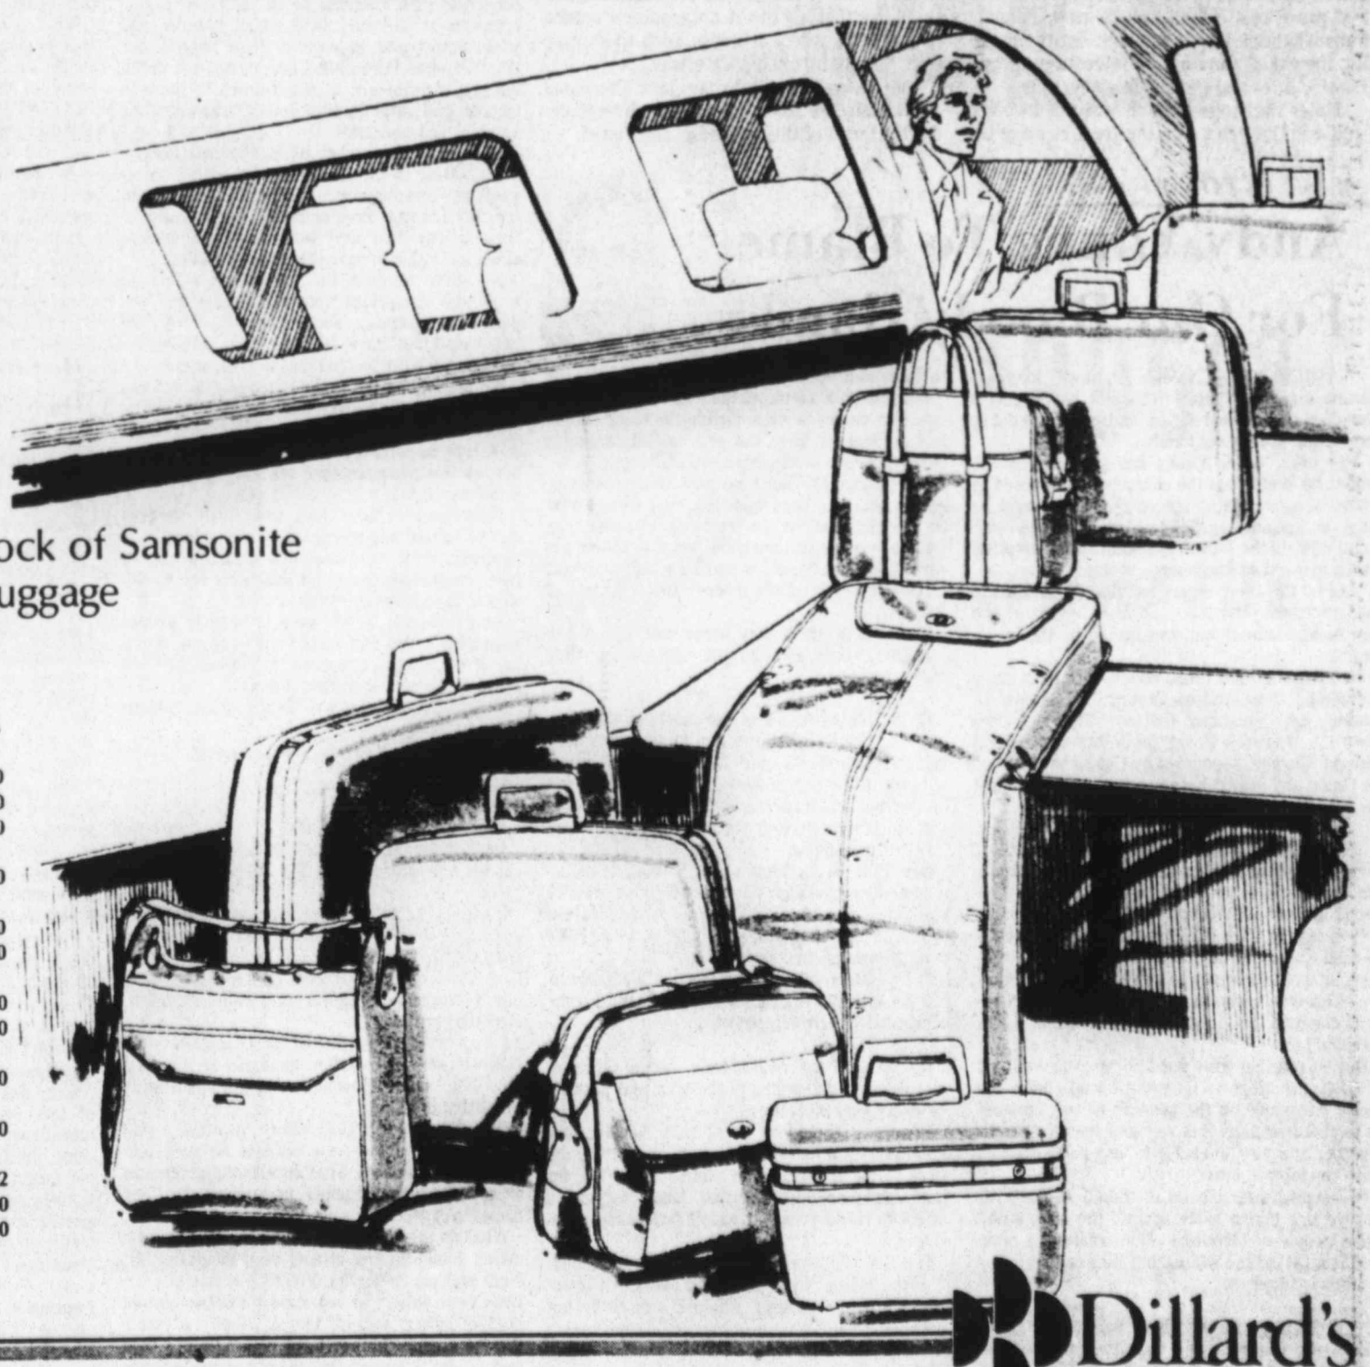

"The Warren report was just something to write on paper to satisfy the people's demands for an answer. The whole experience has made me real conscious of political things. It makes me realize how really easy Watergate was I how easy it is to pull off something like that."

Holland is famous for tulips — but, according to annual sales figures, the nation's top blooms are roses, followed by freesias. Tulips are in third pace.

Feds Botch Progressive Case

HEAVY-HANDED behavior by the Departments of Energy and Justice could prove to be the undoing of federal efforts to ban the publication of a controversial magazine article on the hydrogen bomb.

There was surprising popular support for the government's position in March, when its attorneys went into federal court in Wisconsin to win a pair of judicial orders prohibiting the feisty Progressive magazine from printing the disputed story.

Although freedom of the press was a central issue in the court case, many of the nation's leading newspapers were publicly critical of the Progressive's position.

Indeed, an affidavit submitted to the court by the writer of the Progressive article implies that he is possessed of a consuming curiosity about precisely how fusion is triggered—hardly a process of compelling public interest.

BUT, THE PROJECT for Open Government, a Washington-based public interest organization, according to syndicated columnists Martha Angle and Robert Walters, says it learned that the Justice Department has summoned the FBI into the case.

While departmental attorneys are pursuing a civil case, FBI agents are conducting a criminal investigation, interviewing those suspected of having a copy of Progressive reporter Howard Morland's manuscript.

Undoubtedly, the FBI's criminal probe could have a "chilling effect" on those inclined to aid the Progressive and Morland in their defense.

Furthermore, there is the possibility that material gathered by the FBI in its criminal investigation will wind up in the hands of the government lawyers conducting the still-pending civil case—clearly an inefficient utilization of FBI resources.

THEN THERE'S the matter of the Energy Department's ex post facto classification of a report publicly available for almost four years on the shelves of the library at the Los Alamos (N.M.) Scientific Laboratories.

The government displayed incredible insensitivity to the concept, at least, of a free press by proposing that a federal bureaucrat rewrite the story to conform to the government's vague national security criteria.

On March 9, government attorneys told the court they objected to 2,190 words in the proposed article. On March 14, only five days later, they called for the excision of only 1,322 words. Angle and Walters say now the number is down to around 100 words.

Proceeding true to form, the government is well on its way to dissipating the benefit of doubt given to it by those initially bothered by the troublesome aspects of publicity discussing the technical aspects of nuclear weaponry.

AN EDITORIAL:

Panama Canal Debate Take II

OLD PRESIDENTIAL campaign issues seldom die. Usually they hang around for years, reviving just in time to snarl proceedings as another presidential race warms up.

Take the Panama Canal. Or, as one side of the current debate prefers it, don't let Panama take it.

Revision of the treaty arrangements appeared to have carried the day in the 1976 presidential nominations (Ford, for; Reagan, against), the election (Carter, for), and Senate (approval by two thirds vote, plus 1).

But not in the House, or a potent segment thereof now being heard from.

THERE ARE actually two Panama Canal treaties. The first authorizes the U.S. to operate the canal until the year 2000. The second vests the U.S. with permanent responsibility for the protection of the canal against threats to its neutrality.

The signed and ratified treaties take effect automatically this October. Still required, however, is legislation implementing key provisions establishing a new Panama Canal Commission as the U.S. entity operating the canal, funding the relocation of military facilities and establishing new tolls.

Enter the House, which was not involved in the initial debate on the treaties since the Senate is vested Constitutionally with the powers of advise and consent on such Executive Branch acts.

However, expenditures of U.S. funds and other matters involved in the enabling legislation are its business. As shaped in the House, the enabling bill would substantially alter key treaty provisions, requiring that an American military commander head the new commission and revising formulas for Panama's share of revenues.

THE OBJECTION is that not only is Panama being given the canal, it is being paid to take it.

The costs to be borne directly by the U.S., set at $42 million a year, involve American military requirements and the relocation and retraining of American personnel as they are gradually replaced by Panamanians in the operation of the canal.

The House rewriting need not precipitate a return to the bad feelings and sporadic violence that marked the pre-renegotiation years. Neither should it antagonize Panama to the point where it might seek to shut or seize this vital strategic waterway.

Still, it is difficult to see how the canal will be any easier to operate or defend under the terms of the treaties as negotiated.

M. STANTON EVANS:

Andy Young To Blame For Our Bloody Hands

WASHINGTON—UN Amb. Andrew Young says lifting sanctions against Rhodesia would get us involved in Southern Africa, and that if we did so we would "bloody our hands."

For once, Amb. Young has got the scenario right; he simply has the characters transposed. A more accurate statement of the case would be that, by keeping sanctions on, we are "involved" right now on the side of the Communist terrorists who are invading Rhodesia.

And by this involvement we already have blood on our hands—the blood of black civilians who are being maimed and slaughtered by the invaders.

In achieving this result, nobody has been more influential than Andrew Young. He, above all others, has demanded that we align ourselves with the "Patriotic Front" of Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe, supported by Cuba and the Soviet Union and armed to the teeth with Communist weapons.

THERE ARE no sanctions on the terrorists, of course; keeping the embargo on against Rhodesia, therefore, is taking sides against the government, in favor of the invading Marxists.

It is also to take sides against a democratically elected government, and in favor of those who seek to shoot their way to power. The vast majority of observers who were in Rhodesia for the recent one-man, one-vote election agree that it was free and fair.

But even if that were not the case, the very fact of such a multi-party balloting would confer the moral advantage on the government, as opposed to terrorist factions that spurned the election altogether and vow to create a "one-party Marxist state" by force of arms.

By keeping sanctions on, it should also be noted, we are taking sides against the six million black people of Rhodesia. The situation is none too pleasant for the whites, but they can adjust to it, and have done so.

IT IS THE blacks who have worked on farms and in the factories who bear the brunt of the embargo. I found this out on a recent trip to Rhodesia, when I talked with the new Prime Minister, Bishop Abel Muzorewa, and numerous blacks throughout the country.

The universal theme of the people whom I met was that sanctions were hurting the black people badly, throwing them out of jobs and causing a sharp reduction in their standard of living.

To continue the sanctions now that a majority government has been installed, they said, would be especially unjust. In terms of economics, as well as in terms of the vicious warfare of the terrorists, Andrew Young would have us inflict still further suffering on the innocent black people of Rhodesia.

Young and others also argue that to lift the sanctions would escalate the war. Again, they have it backwards.

IT IS THE existence of the sanctions that prolongs the war—by suggesting to waverers that Mugabe/Nkomo are the handpicked favorites, not only of the Communists, but of the U.S., and by creating a host of unemployed youthful blacks who often sign on with the guerrillas as an easy way to make a living.

Gen. Peter Walls, head of the Rhodesian security forces, pinpointed this second factor when I questioned him about the sanctions. Despite the problems created by this policy, he said, the Rhodesian forces can make do.

The problem with the sanctions is their role in causing unemployment, creating a fertile breeding ground for terrorist recruits.

ON WHAT I saw in Rhodesia, ending sanctions would speed the ending of the war, and possibly do so in a very short time.

Finally, it should be noted that the sanctions themselves are flatly illegal, quite apart from the issue of the elections. The pretext of the UN for imposing sanctions was that Rhodesia was a threat to world peace—a patent falsehood on the face of it.

The U.S. should not be party to that falsehood. If anybody is a threat to "world peace," it is not the people of Rhodesia, who ask only to be left alone, but the Communist-backed invaders from Zambia and Mozambique.

By supporting these invaders, as Andrew Young demands, we will have "blood on our hands" for sure.

Lubbockite Offers Defense Of Planned Parenthood

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

Ten years ago when the Sexual Revolution began threatening the world, I joined Planned Parenthood. It seemed humanity was headed towards disaster.

Time has proved that things would get much worse than we ever thought possible.

While sexual license topples moral barriers, the family is reeling. No longer can parents control their children. Divorce splits millions. Drugs have become fashionable. Venereal diseases have reached epidemic stages. Abortions are so widespread they create world controversy. Never before has our planet gone on such a binge!

If children can no longer communicate with their parents and churches no longer convince people that the Bible's precepts rule out sexual license and immorality, who is going to offer first aid assistance?

Planned Parenthood has had to step into the breach in a desperate attempt to stem the tide.

Taking a positive approach and cooperating with more than 100 nations, Planned Parenthood is working hard to make this a better world. We cooperate with churches of all faiths, with governments at all levels, with school systems, and with groups and individuals that request our help. Planned Parenthood has earned the credibility that enables it to reach down to those in trouble and offer compassionate understanding and practical assistance.

The great majority of us in Planned Parenthood believe in the teachings of the Bible as regards sex and marriage. We pray that the need for abortion may be eliminated, not through futile legal bans that drive women to extreme measures, but rather by sane preventive methods.

We strive to show the young people how to avoid the ravages of venereal disease and unplanned pregnancies. Today's youths act very sophisticated but have all their facts and values mixed up. We can talk to them and help them.

We are among the first to stand up in defense of the family. We believe that churches should be strong and relevant to modern problems. Until such time as parents can reassume their responsibilities, we advocate that sex education be offered in schools.

Those parents who think their little darlings will be tainted and corrupted by such educational programs must be living in a dream world; in most cases, their sons and daughters are worldwise to an unbelievable degree.

Ignorance has never been a virtue. Proper knowledge of sex can lead to a better understanding of moral values that we must re-establish to make the family the bastion of society.

Writer Defends Program, Better School Sex Plan

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

On Monday, May 21st, a local television station carried a program called "The Human Body: The Sexes."

If this is the sort of sex education the Rev. Mr. Judd and others advocated in their letter to The A-J (May 13th), then they are to be commended. It was one of the finest, well produced and memorable programs to appear on commercial television in a long time.

I hope those opponents of sex education, especially those whose letters appeared in The A-J May 20th, availed themselves of the opportunity to see that program.

One should reject their efforts to make a religious debate of the issue because no such religious question exists. That done, nothing remains except the unenlightened negativism that one comes to expect from such people.

What do these people want? Surely the sex education found in the streets is inadequate. Mr. Judd and his co-signers offered a viable alternative. Your writers in last Sunday's paper offered nothing better; indeed, they implicitly advocate the status quo. If they have nothing more than that to add, I suggest that they have made themselves a part of the problem.

Communists 'Getting Help' In Burying U.S., He Says

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

You won't believe it! And surely it isn't true, but it is. Some churches in America are following and assisting in the Communists drive to disarm and defeat the U.S. One way in which they are doing it is by pushing for ratification of SALT II.

The Communists have used and are using a world-wide peace offensive. And unless this movement is exposed many will continue to be taken in by it. More then 28 years ago the House Committee on Un-American Activities released a 166-page report on this campaign entitled "The Communist 'Peace' Offensive—A Campaign to Disarm and Defeat the United States."

In part this most important report said: "Communists want to sap American morale and secure converts to treason. Soviet strategy aims to take full advantage of the fact that there are many well-meaning Americans who, in their deep detestation of war, may be misled..."

In trying to disarm us, the Reds have not the slightest intention of disarming themselves. They never live up to their agreements, they never have and they never will unless they can further their conquest by doing so.

What is so sad especially here in America is that so many clergy have been misled and are actually supporting the Soviet cause. Clergy and churches alike need to study the objectives of the NCC and WCC and in doing so will get out of those groups. Churches then will not be aiding and abetting the enemy. They will not be taken in by treaties such as SALT II or any other political scheme to delude the American church people and the nation as a whole.

Individual Christians and other citizens will urge their senators to defeat SALT II and other plans to disarm America. We urge all Americans to help defeat this treaty.

He Cites His Own Findings On School Sex Education

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

In a letter by Dalton and Dorris Myers titled "Former Teachers Take Issue With Sex Education Critic," statistics were given concerning unwed mothers.

To justify a sex education program, they stated that 1,000,000 unmarried teenage girls become pregnant each year producing 600,000 babies. I have researched the matter and found that there were 600,000 unwed teenage pregnancies in 1978.

Comparing this to 294,000 in 1974 we have an increase of over 100 percent in four years. I would like to remind you this increase took place with sex education programs in public schools and with over 50,000,000 of our tax dollars every year going to Planned Parenthood.

You can easily see that since our government assumed this responsibility the percent of unwed teenage mothers has increased much greater than our population growth rate. Our sex education programs seem to be much more effective in stimulating experimental desires than effectively controlling teenage unwed pregnancies.

Far too many of us believe that educating our youth in contraception coupled with a short course in anatomy will surely solve the problem. This type of teaching telegraphs to the child that it is alright to have pre-marital sexual relations, but don't forget to use contraception; that pregnancy out of wedlock is bad, not the act.

Some day we will all realize that the root cause of this so-called epidemic is a severe moral breakdown in our society. Children will not assume any kind of moral responsibility if they are not taught in the home. It is impossible for the state to successfully do this because it is a God-given responsibility of the parent. All the well-intentioned government subsidized bureaus and organizations such as the National Alliance of Optional Parenthood, Zero Population Growth, Population Control, the Sex Information and Education Council of the United States, and Planned Parenthood will never change a thing except spend hundreds of millions of our tax dollars on something that can't work.

VIRGINIA PAYETTE:

A 'Street' Watcher

THESE WORDS come to you today from the letter G—for Gillian, Granny and G-whiz they're after "Sesame Street" again.

It happens every now and then. Educators, who should get down on their knees at the very mention of Big Bird, can't seem to get comfortable with the Children's Television Workshop.

They admit it's got something. Why else would nine million moppets sit glued to the antics of muppets Burt and Ernie every week? But they keep picking at it, analyzing it, "studying" it and worrying about it.

It's enough to make you wonder if they ever just sat down and watched it.

At our house we're making our third trip down "Sesame Street" and the old magic is still there.

I COULDN'T begin to guess how many hours I've logged with Amanda (almost 9 now, and on to higher things, like "The Brady Bunch"), Heather (who's 8 and into the Flintstones), and Gillian, the 3-year-old who is my current excuse for turning on "Sesame Street."

Outside of Walter Cronkite, there's no other program I've watched that faithfully for the past seven years. And I will take on anybody who says it doesn't get kids excited about learning. (Besides, I'm secretly in love with Mr. SnuffleUpagus.)

From where I sit, the only negative thing you can say about "Street" is that it has made kindergarten almost obsolete. Which, if they ever had an attack of the honests, is probably what makes teachers so nervous about the show.

THERE'S NOT much doubt that "Sesame Street" has moved in on turf that used to be dominated by schools.

Both Amanda and Heather were reading on their own by their fourth birthdays, and while I'm willing to admit they inherited superior genes from their maternal grandparents, I give Children's Workshop director, Joan Ganz Cooney, most of the credit.

By her figures, the nine million kids who watch "Sesame Street" regularly get 130 hours of preschool education a year. What she may not realize is that a lot of toddlers almost double that.

Gillian will watch Big Bird in the morning and catch him again in the afternoon and who cares if it's the same show?

EDUCATORS MIGHT call this "positive reinforcement"; she calls it fun. And she'll probably be just as bored in kindergarten as her big sisters were. Who needs to work on "reading readiness" with a generation that grew up on "Sesame Street"?

The latest potshot comes from another "study," this time by psychologists at Yale University and the University of Bridgeport. They have found that "Mister Rogers' Neighborhood" is more beneficial than "Sesame Street."

Seems according to a comparison of both shows with other films about nature and health, Mister Rogers and Big Bird were better—but Mister Rogers was the best.

His low-key, slow-paced approach had a "more positive effect" on the learning and behavior of 58 white, middle-class nursery-school students than the jazzy, show-biz atmosphere of "Sesame Street."

KIDS MAY pay more attention to Big Bird, but they didn't learn or remember any more than they did after watching "Mister Rogers." And they were "less cooperative with adults." (That's probably psychology talk for, "They wouldn't help mop up their spilled juice.")

"If anything," the report says, "the rapid pace and clutter of material in 'Sesame Street' may have impeded learning."

Well, big deal. "Mister Rogers" (which is also a "must" on our schedule) comes on right after "Sesame Street," and nothing short of the Good Humor bells would lure most kids away from him.

So they get stimulated and then calmed down; what's wrong with that? And where does it say 58 kids represent nine million, anyway?

THAT'S NOT the only recent attack on "Sesame Street." The professional muckrakers are getting into the act, too.

Seems the Children's Workshop, and I quote, is "spending too much of the taxpayers' money on exhorbitant expense accounts, inflated salaries, noncompetitive contracts and other wasteful practices."

Under question is a continuing grant from the Office of Education which, in the past 11 years, has totaled $42,290,000. There are some folks out there who think "Sesame Street" is getting rich enough on its toy sales and program fees to support itself now.

Mrs. Cooney denies all the charges and says that, without outside funding, the Workshop couldn't meet the $7.6 million annual production tab for "Street."

NOT TO mention the costs of "The Electric Company," the upcoming $9.6-million science series, and the new 52 "health minutes" for Latin-American audiences. Last year's total budget came to $24 million.

So Big Bird is definitely Big Business. But the folks at CTW think the government is "getting it's money's worth," and even the educators admit it beats "Penelope Pitstop"...or "Fangface."

At our house the feeling is that "Sesame Street" goes a long way toward taking the boob out of tube.

L.M. BOYD:

...Pass It On

BEAVERS BUILT a dam. It made a big lake that put too much pressure on the dam. So they went upstream and built a small dam, seemingly to slow down the creek. Still too much pressure.

They went upstream farther and built another minor dam. Wasn't sufficient. Farther upstream, they built a third little dam. That did it. They returned to the main dam, leaving the auxiliaries to serve no purpose other than to safeguard their headquarters.

If they can't think, how do they manage to execute such remarkable pieces of engineering? Who knows?

There are 81 kinds of eggs, other than hen's eggs, that are edible. How many can you name? Not all? Neither can I.

Q. How often should you bathe a cat?

A. How about never? A cat's fur has no oil in it, so water does it more harm than good. At least, that's what the vets contend.

Clements Signs Tax Relief Amendment

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements has signed into law the bill that puts into effect the Tax Relief Amendment approved by voters in November 1978, his office said Monday.

Parts of the bill are effective immediately and other portions are not effective until 1980 and 1981.

A compromise bill worked out by a 10-member conference committee was finally approved by the Senate and House the last night of the 140-day regular session on May 28.

Immediate provisions of the bill includes one that each residence homestead will be exempt from $5,000 in school district taxes. Since the act is retroactive to Jan. 1979 the exemption will be on the 1979 tax notices that most taxpayers received in October. In addition, those over 65 and disabled will be eligible for another $10,000 exemption in school taxes on their homestead property. After qualifying for the elderly exemption, school taxes on a home would be frozen for the person's lifetime.

Also effective immediately is the exemption from property taxes, state, county and school, of all non-business cars owned by a family. However, a city council or school board could re-instate the unpopular car taxes, now levied in several Texas cities, if it wishes to face the voters.

Intangible property, such as stocks, bonds and bank accounts, would be exempt from local taxation, except for those now taxed.

A new system of setting valuations on farm, ranch and timber land exclusively on its ability to produce cash crops would become effective this year also, unless local agencies vote before this July 15 to postpone the start of the new evaluation methods until the 1980 tax year.

The signing of the bill was the climax of a process that began last summer when Gov. Dolph Briscoe called a special session on property taxes shortly after California voters approved Proposition 13. The constitutional amendment that resulted from the special session was overwhelmingly approved last November.

Fortenberry Case Delayed

FLOYDADA (Special) — A pretrial hearing for Larry Carnell Fortenberry, once convicted in the slaying of Motley County Sheriff Jalmar "Jinks" Wilson, has been postponed until Friday.

The hearing, originally set for 10 a.m. today in the Floyd County Courthouse, was postponed Monday when two of the attorneys involved said they would not be available until later in the week.

At the hearing, prosecutors were to have requested a change of venue from Motley County.

A Hale County jury sentenced Fortenberry, 30, of Mount Herman, La., to death in 1977.

The conviction was overturned in March by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals, which ordered the case retried because District Judge George Miller failed to instruct jurors properly on the corroboration needed to convict a suspect on the basis of an accomplice's testimony.

That ruling was made in reference to testimony against Fortenberry by Stacy Albert Carter, who was Fortenberry's alleged companion when Wilson was killed. Carter testified that Fortenberry knew Wilson was a sheriff when the defendant produced a shotgun and shot the sheriff twice.

The higher court ruled the district judge should have told the jurors that Carter's testimony was not sufficient evidence to prove that Fortenberry knew Wilson was a law officer.

Lubbock Woman Charged In Death By Stabbing

Annie Fay Williams, 21, was charged Monday with voluntary manslaughter in the Saturday night stabbing death of William H. James.

Miss Williams, of 3002 Fourth St., No. 62, was arrested shortly after the 11 p.m. incident.

The Criminal District Attorney's Office recommended a $15,000 bond for Miss Williams, who remained in the county jail Monday night.

James, a staff sergeant at Reese Air Force Base, was found in a car by two base security guards. The vehicle was in a ditch off West Fourth Street about two miles east of FM 179.

Shallowater Justice of the Peace Dardie Williamson pronounced the 29-year-old serviceman dead at the scene. She ruled the death a homicide, the county's fifth of the year.

While deputies were investigating the crime scene, they received word that a woman was at a nearby convenience store and that she was admitting killing James.

The woman, who met deputies at the store, said she and James had been fighting and that she stabbed him. The suspect was taken into custody late Saturday and transported to the county jail.

Sheriff's Capt. Alton Hobbs said James had been stabbed five times in the chest. A blood-stained knife blade, with the handle broken off, was found on the back floorboard of the auto.

Reports indicate that the woman handed deputies a handle which fit the seven-inch blade.

James' wallet, containing $115 cash, was found on the body.

The body of the 9-year veteran of the U.S. Air Force was taken to Henderson Funeral Directors. The body was to be transported Monday to John H. Shaw funeral home in Wilmington, N.C. James was a native of Leland, N.C.

Bee Contestant In Washington

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Michelle Evatt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Billy Ray Evatt of Ralls, is in Washington, D.C., this week to compete in the National Spelling Bee. She represents The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal in a contest involving 109 spellers and 106 newspaper sponsors.

The spellers have come to Washington from as far as Alaska, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands. It has been estimated by competition officials that more than eight million students have participated in the spelling bee at some level this year.

This year, there are nine spellers from Texas in the contest.

Activities the group will enjoy today includes a trip to the Capitol Building, the Lincoln and Jefferson memorials and the White House. A tour of the History and Technology Building of the Smithsonian Institution may be made.

Spelling competition will begin Wednesday in the Mayflower Hotel. The spelling bee will be conducted all day Wednesday, and final rounds will be held Thursday.

Final rounds will continue until a winner is named.

Thursday afternoon and Friday morning will be used for sightseeing.

Scheduled excursions include a trip to Arlington Cemetery, Mount Vernon and the Air and Space Museum of the Smithsonian Institution.

The week's activities will end with an award's banquet honoring the spelling bee champions.

The spellers will return home Saturday.

Amelia Earhart Putnam became the first woman in history in 1932 to make a solo plane flight across the Atlantic Ocean. The flight from Newfoundland to Northern Ireland took 15 hours and 15 minutes.

Alcoholism Seminar Scheduled

BIG SPRING (Special) — The 39th alcoholism seminar sponsored by Big Spring State Hospital and Howard College will be Friday in the auditorium of the state facility.

Dr. Ken Schiweck, director of the El Paso Center for Hypnosis, will be the consultant for the seminar, which is designed to interest those working with alcoholics as well as the general public.

Registration is at 8 a.m., and the general session will begin at 9 a.m. A $1 registration fee will be charged, and an additional $1 will be charged for those who want to receive the Continuing Education Units from Howard College.

Additional information can be obtained from Clyde J. Alsup, training officer of the alcoholism and drug abuse program at Big Spring State Hospital.

Solar Power Reports Area Weather

A-J Correspondent

BIG SPRING — Solar-powered weather devices, including one at the U.S. Experimental Station north of here, have been installed in a 60-mile radius of Big Spring.

The 25 devices, which weigh 110 pounds each, measure air temperature, wind speed and rainfall, relaying the information hourly via antenna to a satellite over the equator.

The satelite then transmits the information to a Department of Energy office in Wallops Island, Va., which then forwards it to a Bureau of Reclamation office in Denver, Colo.

The information gathered from the $262,900 worth of equipment in the Big Spring area will be analyzed by a weather modification team operating under contract to the Colorado River Municipal Water District.

BIG SPRING — Two Army helicopters, trapped in a dense fog, were guided to a safe landing by a local law enforcement officer early Sunday.

Bud Summers, a reserve deputy for the Howard County sheriff's office, saw the helicopters circling in the fog south of Big Spring, and guided them to the campus of nearby Forsan High School, where they landed.

The helicopters were en route from the Corpus Christi Naval Air Station to a military installation at Cheyenne, Wyo., when grounded. They were taken to Big Spring and serviced before continuing their flight to Wyoming.

Outpouring Of Emotion Shown By Pope, Poles

The visit of Pope John Paul II to his native Poland has been a joyous occasion for both the Polish people and the pontiff. Cheering crowds have greeted the pope on each stop of his visit, which is in its fourth day today. In the photo at left, Pope John Paul, overcome with emotion, wipes away a tear during a Mass he celebrated at the Jansa Gora monastery Monday in Czestochowa. Below, he holds a little girl while riding in an open car en route to the monastery. Below right, the pope grimaces and grins as he talks with thousands of young people who had gathered under the balcony of his residence. Pope Leads Poles In Prayer For Peace, Justice

Celebrating an outdoor Mass at the Shrine of Mary, part of the 17th-century Jasna Gora Monastery, the pontiff blended his prayers for "religious unity" with references to human rights and world peace.

John Paul, the first pope to visit a communist nation, asked for the Virgin Mary's guidance "to serve the individual and humanity" and enmeshed his remarks with allusions to religious freedom in Eastern Europe.

In a veiled criticism of Poland's communist government, the pontiff declared "how much Pope Paul VI wanted to come here in pilgrimage." To Poles the reference was an obvious swipe at the government, which refused to grant Pope Paul's request to visit Poland.

"He was the pope who did so much for the normalization of the life of the church in Poland," John Paul said.

The pope declared it was his own goal "To serve the great cause of freedom of the church," not only in Poland but throughout the world.

"How (are we) to protect justice and peace in a world continually threatened on various sides," the pope asked, invoking the name of the Virgin Mary in a prayer during the three-hour service, which he conducted from a platform beneath a red-and-gold canopy alongside the medieval monastery walls.

"How greatly I desire on the occasion of our meeting today to entrust to you all the difficult problems of the societies, systems and states — problems that cannot be solved with hatred, war and self-destruction, but only by peace, justice and respect for the rights of people and of nations."

His visit to the shrine came on the third day of a nine-day homecoming trip to Poland, a communist country whose population of 35 million is at least 80 percent Catholic. Each day of the trip has brought carefully worded comments aimed at the communist governments of Poland and the rest of Eastern Europe.

"There are people and nations, Mother, that I would like to say to you by name," the pope said from the podium, as the yellow-and-white Vatican flags fluttered in a strong summer breeze.

"I entrust them to you in silence," he said. "I entrust them to you in the way you know best."

As the pope raised the communion host on his platform overlooking the crowded hillside and the town below, the hundreds of thousands of faithful dropped to their knees on the dusty ground.

At times John Paul, returning for the first time since he became pope to the district he served as Cardinal Karol Wojtyla, departed from his prepared text, once to sing a hymn and another time to joke about his approach to papal masses and the length of his sermons.

He told the crowd he imagined other prelates saying: "What are we going to do with this Polish pope? This Slavic pope? What can we do?"

The pope described the Jasna Gora Monaster Black Madonna shrine which legend says was painted by Saint Luke — as a place where the Polish people can "hear the heart of the nation beating in the heart of the mother."

The pope also recalled how Jasna Gora, which means "Bright Mountain," became a symbol of Polish Catholicism when its monks successfully resisted a Swedish siege in 1655. King Jan Kazimir proclaimed the Virgin Mary as Queen of Poland the following year at the hilltop site.

The pontifical Mass opened for the pope a three-day stay in Czestochowa, his former archdiocese. On Wednesday, he was scheduled to return to the old Polish capital of Krakow, where he served as archbishop and cardinal before his election to the papacy last October.

Later in the week, he returns to his southern hometown of Wadowice to celebrate a Mass. He also will celebrate a Mass at the site of the infamous Nazi concentration camp at Auschwitz.

Another trip will take him to the Polish highlands to celebrate a Mass for Poles who came to know him through his skiing and mountain hiking expeditions.

The papal homecoming is scheduled to end on Sunday after a final outdoor Mass in Krakow honoring St. Stanislaus, a Polish saint who has become a symbol of opposition to unjust government.

The pope was the moving force in setting up this year's celebration of the 900th annniversary of Stanislaus' death.

Tourists Say Pope's Visit Ruined Trip

CZESTOCHOWA, Poland (UPI) — Some American tourists complained Monday that the visit of Pope John Paul II to Poland and the massive crowds turning out to see him were spoiling their vacations.

Three middle-aged women — Two Americans and a Canadian — sat in a Czestochowa restaurant in a mood that strikingly contrasted to the joy being expressed all around them by Poles celebrating the pope's presence in the country's holiest city.

"Our trip has been ruined," said one of the Americans, "but don't quote me."

None of the women would give her name but each made it clear there were just too many people for comfort.

Czestochowa is a city of 225,000 inhabitants. An estimated 1 million people crowded the city to listen to the pope's first address.

Other Americans admitted being inconvenienced but were good-humored about it.

"The pope has almost the identical schedule we have," said Ted Gurka, a retired letter carrier from Chicopee, Mass.

"Yeah," agreed Stanley Oldakowski, a process engineer for Ford Motor Co. in Dearborn, Mich., who lives in nearby Allen Park.

"Well," interjected Oldakowski's wife Helen, "don't put it that way. It doesn't sound right."

"You know what I mean," he said.

COUNTING CHINESE — Their twins in place, a Chinese family gets ready for a portrait in Tsinan, capital of Shantung province. On the children's bibs is the slogan "I'm a little successor to the revolution." There are an enourmous number of Chinese, but no one really knows how many. (AP Laserphoto)

No One Knows, Says Peking, How Many Chinese We Have

PEKING (AP) — It used to be said, "Every time you breathe, a Chinese is born or dies" — meaning there were an enormous number of them. But to this day no one really knows how many.

A Chinese official recently created some attention by telling some visiting Americans that there were 960 million, including the 16 million on Taiwan. And the Japanese news agency Kyodo last week quoted an unnamed Chinese agency as saying there were 945,350,000.

But an official in a position to know discounts such figures. "It's just guesswork," he said. "We really aren't able to say."

He cites the late Communist Chairman Mao Tse-tung to prove his point.

It should be easy, observed Mao, to figure out how many Chinese there are. Every person in a family has to have a rice ration card. New ones are issued when a child is born.

Of peasant stock himself, Mao knew the ways of the countryside. How many people, he asked rhetorically, would be likely to report the death of a ration card holder?

That suggests there are uncounted numbers of Chinese no longer of this world who laudably continue to contribute to family livelihoods. But officials are doing nothing to sort out the confusion over how many are still around.

In 1977, the Population Reference Bureau in the United States, which keeps tabs on this sort of thing, estimated China's population as at least 850 million. The Chinese themselves in public speeches and statements have been clinging to 800 million, a figure bound to be inaccurate since it has been in use for several years.

The guesses are like a wildly swinging pendulum. Some begin at 750 million and others go up to a billion. A modern industrial nation like France or Britain could fit comfortably in between.

The only way anyone is going to find out, of course, is to hold a census. Some people say one is going to be carried out next year. But the same Chinese who are skeptical of the figures say they aren't so sure. A lot of money, planning and time are involved which may not be available.

The Chinese dilemma is that without population statistics, China's ambitious plan to leap into the forefront of industrial nations could be jeopardized. If you are going to produce goods you have got to know if you are aiming at a billion people or 800 million.

The last census was in 1953. It listed 602 million Chinese, 12 million living abroad. That was almost twice the 375 million estimate of 1911, when the imperial system was overthrown.

Since 1949, improved hygiene, the conquest of famine and the eradication of some diseases combined to raise the population level as well as life expectancy. But political turbulence caused by Mao's many purges made it next to impossible to determine accurately how many people there were.

Some sort of stability began to be restored only last year, hardly enough time to come up with an accurate nose count.

What is certain is that the Chinese leadership is convinced of the need to keep China's population down. The communists are aware that where people are concerned, more means less and less means more.

The argument that family planning was needed to safeguard the health of over-burdened mothers has been shelved. The leaders now say that with a smaller population there will be more to go around, a better chance to raise the standard of living.

This not only appeals to the Chinese but it fits the modernization plan. Mechanization will mean machines which do the work of thousands of workers in fields and factories. Surplus, idle populations historically spell political trouble — and everyone knows it.

While China remains the world's most populous nation, representing at least a quarter of the 3.8 billion people on earth, it appears to have made progress in curbing its population growth.

Its growth rate now is said to be below the two percent world average. Recently, in Zhejiang (Chekiang) Province, one county reported a 1978 growth rate of only 0.75 percent.

The Chinese are waging the family planning battle on all fronts. Contraceptive devices, sterilization, abortion, and rewards for small families and late marriages all are used.

In March, China announced it had developed a contraceptive drug for males which is 99.89 percent effective. Made from yellow secretions in cotton seeds and roots, it was first uncovered in Mao's native Hunan Province where many male commune workers, it was noted, became sterile after eating food cooked in cotton seed oil.

It did not say how the new product is introduced to the body.

In delayed marriages the key number is 50. As a rule, if the combined ages of the pair reach that total, they are free to marry.

The problem is that China has a very young population with two out of five people said to be under 18. How long they can be persuaded to be celibate — premarital sex is frowned on — remains a question.

Heating Oil Subsidy Proposal Worries French

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jean Francois-Poncet, foreign minister of France and president of the Common Market, expressed to President Carter on Monday Europe's concern over an administration plan to subsidize imported heating oil.

Asked whether he was lodging a protest of the plan by which the government would contribute $5 for each barrel of oil, Francois-Poncet said he had shown "an expression of a worry."

The Energy Department subsidy would be retroactive to May 1 and would run through Aug. 31.

The Europeans fear that the subsidy would make it more economic for American oil importers to pay higher prices, which would also boost prices paid in Europe.

Francois-Poncet, making his first trip to Washington as foreign minister, conferred for about 15 minutes with Carter.

Anti-Terrorist Success Marks Day For Israel

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The Israeli navy blasted a Palestinian guerrilla boat out of the water off the northern coast and Israeli troops attacked the homes of five suspected terrorists in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River, the military command announced Monday.

In Ismailia, Egypt, Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan met with President Anwar Sadat, briefly discussed upcoming Israeli-Egyptian talks on Palestinian autonomy and spoke with his counterpart on opening the border.

The Israeli military said navy gunboats intercepted a "terrorist gang" in a speedboat attempting to reach Israel's northern coast late Sunday and sank it.

The guerrillas aboard apparently drowned, the army said, without indicating how many. A statement said the craft was headed for the town of Rosh Haniqra on the Israel-Lebanon border, five miles north of Nahariya, where four Israelis were killed in an attack by seaborne guerrillas on April 22.

In the Israeli occupied town of Ramallah, five miles north of Jerusalem, one house was demolished and four residences were sealed.

The army said three female teachers were arrested and accused of membership in "one of the most dangerous" Syrian-trained guerrilla cells.

Four Israelis were killed and about 50 wounded in terror bombings attributed to the cell this year, the army said. It identified the cell leader as Jamal Ahmed Hassan Zayid, 24, a graduate of a Ramallah teacher's school and a student at Bir Zeit University in the West Bank.

Zayid, who has not been arrested, "held the dual role of commander-dispatcher as well as active participant in terrorist attacks," the army said.

Palestinian guerrillas, stepping up their campaign to undermine the Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty, have claimed responsibility for last Friday's assassination in Gaza of Sheikh Hassem Huzandair, a Moslem leader who voiced support for the treaty.

Authorities said the slaying was intended to dissuade Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza from cooperating with the Israeli-Egyptian talks on Palestinian autonomy. The talks, aimed at partial self-rule in the two occupied areas, started 10 days ago, and resume Sunday in Alexandria.

In Ismailia, Dayan discussed the talks briefly with Sadat, and met with Minister of State for Foreign Affairs Butros Ghali to discuss procedures for opening the border, declared open May 27 by Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

After the meeting with Sadat, Dayan said the Egyptian president is convinced peace treaties between Israel and other Arab nations will come "and that he is taking the right way."

Ghali said much remained to be discussed, but Dayan's visit opened "a direct line" between the nations' foreign offices.

Iran's Envoy Demand Turned Down By U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The frayed relationship between the United States and Iran worsened Monday as the State Department rejected an Iranian demand that the United States name a substitute ambassador to Tehran.

The administration is standing firm on its intention to send career foreign service officer Walter Cutler as the new U.S. ambassador, said department spokesman Hodding Carter.

Carter disclosed that the Iranian government had recently reversed its initial approval of Cutler and decided he was unacceptable.

Cutler was named in April to succeed ambassador William Sullivan, whom the new Iranian government believed had been too close to the deposed shah. Cutler has been confirmed by the Senate.

The Iranians last month publicly urged the United States to delay sending Cutler to Tehran until relations between the two countries improved. Foreign Minister Ebrahim Yazdi accused the United States of interfering with the Iranian revolution, and Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini called the United States "a wounded snake." The administration insisted it was not interfering in Iran.

Department officials said they were unsure of the motives for Iran's rejection of Cutler. One official said it seemed to be a reflection of anti-American sentiment in Iran rather than personal objections to Cutler.

Department officials said the Iranians conveyed their rejection of Cutler to the embassy in Tehran last week. The Americans waited for Secretary of State Cyrus Vance's return during the weekend from a two-week tour of the Middle East and Europe.

Carter said that unless Iran changes its mind again and accepts Cutler, "we anticipate a substantial delay in resolving the question of ambassadorial representation," meaning there would be no ambassasdors in Washington or Tehran.

The Iranian embassy here is headed by a charge d'affaires, Ali A. Agah. Diplomatic relations continue, but the absence of ambassadors is generally a sign of profound disagreement between governments.

U.S. officials said the administration is resigned to a period of bad relations with Iran as the nation struggles through its post-revolututionary phase.

In the long term, the officials said, they believe Iranians will recognize they have an interest in good relations with the United States, both as a market for their oil and a counter-balance to the Soviet Union.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Here is another bad luck hand for the ordinary declarer.

West fails to open a spade, but starts by leading ace and another diamond. South draws trumps, leads a spade from dummy and finesses the jack. West takes his queen and leads back the 10. Spades fail to break so South must lead a club toward his king and is down one when West produces the ace.

South could have run out all his trumps. On the last trump lead West would have been forced to blank his ace of clubs in order to protect his spade nine whereupon South could make his club king good.

The trouble with that play is that it would fail if East held the club ace.

Expert South finds a neat safety play to insure the contract. When he leads a spade he plays the eight, not the jack. Now West is endplayed.

A spade lead gives South three spade tricks and the chance to get rid of a club. A club play makes South's king good and a diamond lead gives South a ruff and discard.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY
DR. PAUL E. RUBLE

Dear Dr. Ruble: If a person falls asleep in a bath with the water running, is that narcolepsy? This happened to me just once. What can you tell me about narcolepsy? What happens if it is not treated? — E.H.S.

Stop worrying. A single sleep attack does not narcolepsy make. You may have been overly fatigued and succumbed to the relaxation of the moment. True narcolepsy is the frequent recurrence of unpredictable sleep episodes beyond the control of the person. It is four times more common in men than women, begins usually in late childhood or early adulthood and continues through life. If you have had subsequent episodes, then you need to be examined.

Attacks can come several in a day, but normal night-time sleep is not disturbed. In a typical attack the eyes close, the muscles relax, and the person appears to be in a deep sleep, but can be awakened by the slightest noise. I have known some to lapse into sleep while standing and speaking with a friend.

The narcoleptic should be treated with amphetamines during the daytime for obvious reasons — the danger of falling asleep at the wheel of a car, for example. Imipramine had been found helpful, but it is not to be used with amphetamines.

While this is a lifelong problem the number of attacks tend to lessen with age. Most narcoleptics live with their problem without even close friends knowing about it. There are no reliable tests, such as brainwave studies, to confirm the condition, which we know very little about. It's diagnosed strictly from a patient's history of sleep episodes. The narcoleptic is not mentally deficient or psychologically disturbed.

Dear Dr. Ruble: Recently I've noticed my toenails have taken on a pretty bad appearance. My doctor, a general practitioner, says it's a fungus infection and I have been taking medicine by mouth for three weeks. I don't see how it has helped me. The doctor says it takes time. How long should it take? The medicine is griseofulvin. Does it take longer for toenails than for fingernails? I notice you mentioned this as a cure for fingernail fungus. — Mrs. T.V.

It's effective for both kinds of nails. The toenails take longer because they take longer to grow out. The improvement shows in the new nail, not in the old nail, whioh was the one infected with the fungus. Same with fingernails. I can't say how long it will take, because this varies with individuals, but it may be many months, more than a year in some cases. You may need the medicine for four or five months, but you should be aware of side effects, including skin rashes and stomach upset. You'll find a discussion of this form of ringworm in the booklet, "Solving Your Nail Problems." If you want a copy, send 35 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Ruble, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

When my daughter had her first baby and I was visiting her, she started to give the baby a bath.

Remembering what my own doctor had told me about not haing the bath water too warm, I told her about it.

She listened and certainly meant to be careful about it but, when she put the baby into the water, it cried out.

I have heard several pebple say their babies didn't like to have a bath, and I now believe it was because, without realizing it, a lot of mothers have the water too warm.

It should be tested with the elbow, not the hands. The hands are so used to warm or hot water that they are not a good judge of temperature.

Thanks for listening. — Mildred Pearce

And thank you, Mildred, for reminding us of this important hint.

We test the warmth of baby's formula on our wrist, the bath water with our elbow.

I'm sure there are a lot of new mothers out there who are very grateful to you. — Hugs, Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

I've bought several pairs of rubber thongs (those summer sandals) but the strap that fits between the toes always pulled out. My husband came up with a solution.

He took one of those little square bread wrapper holders and slipped it over the strap on the underside of the shoe.

It may have to be replaced every so often, but it sure helps the shoes to last a little longer. — Marguerite Belanger

DEAR HELOISE:

If you have ever wondered what to do with leftover pie crust trimmings, I have a good solution.

I put all the trimmings together in a bawl and knead it a little to blend into a smooth dough.

I then roll it out as if making another crust. Spread butter lightly over the dough and then sprinkle a little sugar and cinnamon on it.

Roll this into a "jelly roll" and slice. Place the slices on a cookie sheet and bake along with the pie until golden brown.

Delicious! — Mrs. Karen Carter

DEAR HELOISE:

My children delight in collecting bugs and things. But I dislike having to give up my jars and have their lids poked full of holes to hold these creatures.

Then I remembered hearing about someone making a holder out of a milk carton.

Just cut a window in two sides of the carton (opposite sides). Any necessary provisions oan be placed in the bottom — grass, water, etc.

Now take an old nylon stocking and pull it over the carton. After placing the collection in the carton through the opening at the top, and making sure everything is inside that belongs inside, tie a knot in the stocking close to the top of the carton.

Now the bugs have plenty of light and air but can't get out (thank goodness) and can be easily seen. — Kathy Walsh.

DEAR HELOISE:

I have two daughters who are 18 months apart in age and I often make matching outfits for them.

It has always been difficult to keep these outfits separate since they are so close in size.

I finally came upon a solution. I cut small squares of fabric and stitch it to the back of each garment.

I always use the same color each time for the same child. Saves time and trouble, especially if we're in a hurry. — Shirley Stock

2 cups (7 oz.) elbow macaroni, cooked, drained
2 tbsps. margarine, melted
1 tsp. salt
½ tsp. onion salt (or garlic salt)
¼ cup milk
2 eggs, beaten
Paprika

Combine cheese, macaroni, margarine and seasonings; mix well. Spoon macaroni mixture into greased 8-inch square baking dish. Combine milk and eggs; pour over macroni mixture. Sprinkle with paprika. Bake at 425 degrees, 15 to 20 minutes or until set. Makes 4-6 servings.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I married a divorced man who has a five-year-old son. My daughter by a previous marriage is nine. The boy stays at our house weekends. The problem is that his mother sends him over here whether he is sick or well — and usually he is sick.

My daughter has caught his coughs and colds, which creates a real problem because she is susceptible to earaches which last for several days. I finally decided to call the child's mother even though my husband asked me not to. She screamed into the phone, "When the boy is sick his father should take him to the doctor."

I'd like to put the question to you, Ann: How many times should a father have to take his child to a doctor? — Playing Nurse In Bethesda

Dear Beth: It's obvious that your husband's ex-wife is no candidate for Mother of the Year. A sick child should never be sent anywhere. But this careless woman has repeatedly sent the boy to your home when he has been ill and she will continue to do so regardless of your resentment.

In answer to your question, "How many times should a father have to take his child to the doctor?" the answer is: "Whenever he is sick." And there should be no counting.

Dear Ann Landers: Our married daughter and her husband think it is perfectly all right for children to sit in on adult discussions, no matter what the topic.

The grandchildren hang around when we talk, eyes as big as saucers, ears like mice — taking in every word. They even interrupt with, "Say that last part again and explain it."

I don't believe children should be permitted to hear everything adults say. My daughter and son-in-law think nothing should be withheld from children — that being included in grown-up conversation will make them more mature.

Both my husband and I dislike it when our grandchildren plop themselves down and horn in with questions about things that are beyond their years. Are we wrong? — Love Them — But . . .

Dear But: No, you are not wrong. The only way you can control the situation is by refusing to discuss "adult topics" when the children are present. If your daughter and her husband get on such a subject, simply say, "We will talk about that at another time."

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a freshman in college and get along quite well with everybody. But — there are two things I do not care to discuss with anyone. They are my salary and my grades.

How can I politely tell someone, "It is none of your business," when I am asked, "What did you get on your English mid-term?" Or — "How much was your paycheck last week?"

Please come up with an effective and snappy comeback. — Needing A Turn-Off For Clods

Dear Needing: I'm fresh out of snappy comebacks, but an effective answer need only to be simple and direct. The language is right in your letter: "There are two things I do not care to discuss with anyone — my salary and my grades."

Are drugs OK if you learn how to control them? Can they be of help? The answers are in Ann Landers' new booklet, "Straight Dope on Drugs." Lowly Potato Adds Nutrition, Variety To Meals At Low Cost

Potatoes haven't become one of the world's favorite foods without good reason. They are always low cost and are an excellent nutritional buy. One dollar spent on potatoes provides more thiamine (vitamin B1) than a dollar spent on any other food. Also, potatoes are second after citrus in vitamin C per dollar; second in niacin; and second in iron yield per dollar.

Now is a particularly good time to take advantage of the nutritional benefits of potatoes, since they are in plentiful supply, according to U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) marketing specialists. For best results in preserving the potato's valuable nutrients, USDA recommends the following tips on preparation:

— Gently scrub potatoes under running water with a vegetable brush or cellulose sponge to clean.

— When boiling potatoes, use as little water as possible to prevent loss of important nutrients.

— Steam potatoes to conserve their nutrients.

— If the potatoes are peeled before cooking, use a vegetable parer, keeping peelings as thin as possible, since many of the potato's nutrients are found close to the skin.

— Peeled potatoes turn dark if not cooked right away.

— To protect their whiteness, toss them with ascorbic acid (Vitamin C) mixture or a little lemon juice. Soaking potatoes in a bowl of cold water to protect their whiteness can result in some vitamin loss.

— Potatoes retain nutrients better if cooked whole. However, they may be halved, sliced or diced before cooking if a shorter cooking time is desired.

READ WHAT A LUBBOCK WOMAN
Has to say about PAT WALKER'S
For several years I had slowly been gaining weight, thinking of course, I could lose it by myself anytime. BUT I found out it's not that easy to do by yourself! When my husband started making comments about my figure I knew it was time I found professional help. Having already read many things about the Pat Walker Program, the idea of being able to lose both weight and inches where I really needed them off, plus not even messing my hair or even having to change my clothes, while doing it really appealed to me. I am so pleased with the success I have had with the Pat Walker Program. Pounds and inches came off to give me a new figure I can be proud of! I can really say I'm glad I did it. VIVIAN RODGERS

Reimbursement From Carter Campaign Sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Election Commission, after a 2½-year audit, is asking President Carter to reimburse taxpayers for $50,202.94 spent during his 1976 general election campaign.

The commission determined Monday that Carter's campaign committee owes:

— $27,080.69 in interest it earned on taxpayers' money deposited with various telephone companies.

— $15,207 in cash "get-out-the-vote" payments made by individual Carter campaign workers around election day in Michigan, California, Pennslyvania, Illinois, Tennessee and Georgia.

— $7,915.25 in miscellaneous travel, entertainment, lodging and office expenses for which the FEC found insufficient documentation.

During the general election, Carter's campaign received nearly $26 million from the Treasury under a law providing for public financing of presidential elections.

Monday's FEC decision gives Carter 30 days to supply additional documentation to support the contested items, but White House spokesman Rex Granum said the full amount probably will be paid. Granum said it is often more expensive to supply the documentation than to pay the questioned expense.

Granum said the money in question amounts to one-tenth of 1 percent of total expenditures in the 1976 general election campaign. He said he understood this is about the same percentage that has been questioned in other campaigns.

Granum said the Carter campaign had been entitled to an additional $250,000 in matching funds, but did not apply for the money because it was not needed. He said Carter would ask the FEC to let him use that money now to pay off the debt.

The FEC completed an audit of former President Gerald R. Ford's general election campaign more than a year ago and billed Carter's 1976 Republican opponent for $33,359.42.

The sum included $700 in parking tickets which the FEC said should not have been paid with taxpayers' money, $30,472 in interest earned on deposits similar to the Carter phone deposits, and $2,187 in unused funds.

The commission auditors originally wanted to bill the Carter campaign for $82,070.72, but the six election commissioners, divided along party lines, blocked much of that on a tie vote.

With the three Democratic commissioners siding with Carter and the three Republicans on the other side, the commission deadlocked on the auditors' recommendation that Carter be billed for $25,320 in "get-out-the-vote" cash payments made through a number of political committees independent of the Carter campaign.

An identical tie vote blocked a move to bill Carter for $3,313 in bad debts owed to the election campaign, mostly by reporters who failed to pay their share of chartered air fare while traveling with the candidate. The committee wrote off the debts as uncollectable but the auditors urged that Carter be billed for them.

On a 5-1 vote the commission also decided against having Carter pay another $3,234.78 for checks the campaign issued, but which were never cashed. Auditors wanted uncashed checks considered as contributions, but only commissioner Max Friedersdorf, a Republican, sided with the auditors.

The commissioners who voted to back Carter on the disputed items had the FEC staff lawyer on their side. The FEC general counsel issued a written opinion that Carter's campaign should not be billed for get-out-the-vote payments made to committees, for bad debts by reporters or for the voided checks.

In a footnote to the audit report the commission said "certain issues relating to the committee's reporting of debts and obligations" were referred to the commission's general counsel.

No details were given. The action raises the possibility that Carter will be billed for a greater sum later, or possibly that the campaign will be subject to legal action.

The audit report said the Democratic National Committee already had agreed to pay, on behalf of the Carter campaign, the more than $27,000 in interest earned on telephone deposits.

The Carter campaign deposited nearly $1.5 million for telephone service during the general election. The telephone company paid interest on the deposits, which the FEC said had to be repaid to the Treasury.

The more than $15,000 in "get-out-the-vote" money was paid to a number of Carter campaign workers, including $3,552 to Maxine Waters in Los Angeles, $3,575 to Elmer Cooper in San Francisco and $1,500 to Frank Smith in Illinois. The commission said it found too little documentation to prove that the money was spent in support of Carter's election.

Mrs. Waters, for example, submitted an affidavit saying her money was distributed "to election day workers" to get out the vote in south-central Los Angeles. "Where are the individual receipts? They should be on file," she wrote.

The audit report released Monday related only to Carter's general election expenditures and receipts. An earlier audit dealt with his primary campaign expenditures and receipts.

Agency Probing Oil Industry Activities

WASHINGTON (AP) — Justice Department officials, stoutly denying charges of a cover-up, said Monday that federal prosecutors are pursuing 39 cases of suspected criminal wrongdoing in the oil industry.

"Based upon our experiences to date, these matters can result in multi-defendant indictments involving individuals and companies," Deputy Assistant Attorney General John C. Keeney told two House subcommittees.

In addition, there are "potentially 70 cases in the pipeline right now," meaning they are under preliminary review by Energy Department auditors, said a second official, lawyer Richard Fishkin.

Appearing before House panels on crime and energy and power, Keeney strongly rebutted allegations made last week by an Energy Department lawyer who said federal officials are helping cover up white collar crime in the oil industry.

Testifying before the same two panels, attorney Joseph D. McNeff had said:

"I think I could get a jury to convict the oil companies and certain individuals in government of conspiracy."

But Keeney and other officials said McNeff was interviewed repeatedly by FBI agents, and his allegations have been presented to a federal grand jury.

"There have been no indictments returned," FBI inspector Dana Caro said.

McNeff, the star witness at last week's session, sat among spectators at Monday's follow-up hearing, taking notes as Keeney said: "There is absolutely no evidence that we've found — credible evidence — in the allegations made by Mr. McNeff."

At the request of Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., Keeney agreed to turn over to the subcommittees records of FBI interviews with McNeff and related documents.

In response to a question from Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., Keeney and Francis Mullen of the FBI said oil industry fraud can be expected to increase as long as the nation suffers oil shortages.

Keeney and other Justice Department and FBI officials testified at a hearing into white collar crime in the oil industry.

Several subcommittee members complained that the departments of Justice and Energy had been slow in prosecuting suspected crimes. But Rep. James Collins, R-Texas, said "Congress is trying to find a scapegoat" for a shortage of gasoline and a steadily rising tide of oil imports.

JOHN C. KEENEY

Keeney conceded under questioning that there were problems in the past between the two departments, but assured the panels the difficulties have been solved.

Turning to ongoing investigations, Keeney said Justice Department lawyers and attorneys in various U.S. attorneys' offices are looking at 39 cases already referred for prosecution by the Energy Department.

Kenney also told the panels that in the majority of instances, prosecutors "have been proceeding toward felony prosecutions" involving conspiracy, mail or wire fraud or making false statements.

In a very few cases, he said, "referrals have been made for purely regulatory violations of (Energy Department) pricing regulations constituting misdemeanors. These have involved gasoline stations."

He said attorneys assigned to a special energy unit within the Justice Department's fraud section are directing investigations in Atlanta; Pittsburgh, Pa.; West Palm Beach, Fla.; Chicago; Wichita, Kan.; Oklahoma City, Okla.; and New Orleans.

In addition, he said, the staffs of U.S. attorneys are working on cases in Houston; Tampa, Fla.; Denver, Colo.; Oklahoma City; Los Angeles and Brooklyn.

Keeney gave the subcommittee a list of 45 cases that have been referred to the Justice Department by the Energy Department, a few of which were dropped as not warranting prosecution.

Some suspected cases involve so-called "daisy chains," in which crude oil or a refined product goes through the hands of several companies before finally reaching the consumer at an inflated price.

Other cases involve false certification of wells to qualify for a higher price for oil or reselling crude oil between companies, which results in an illegally high price being charged.

YOUR PERSONAL BIORHYTHMS

By Bernard Gittelson, Author of "Biorhythm: A Personal Science"

The personal science of biorhythm can tell you how your day will go. Now you can judge the highs and lows of not only yourself, but loved ones and friends, and celebrities and stars. Biorhythm, our newest scientific discipline, is the study of the built-in natural cycles that powerfully influence our behavior.

BIORHYTHMS FOR JUNE 5, 1979

Enter your own permanent numbers in the chart in the bottom right-hand corner. To figure your own permanent numbers, follow these three steps:

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Step 3: In the figure chart, enter your day of birth three times, one each for Physical (P), Emotional (E) and Intellectual (I). (If you were born on April 3, for instance, place a 3 in each column.)

Add the three columns to derive your permanent biorhythm numbers for your Physical, Emotional and Intellectual cycles. Now you can refer to today's rhythms.

These numbers are yours permanently. Check them each day for your biorhythm reading.

Hansen Twins Removed From Critical Status

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Separated Siamese twins Lisa and Elisa Hansen were taken off the critical list Monday, but doctors cautioned that the 19-month-old girls remain gravely ill.

The twins — joined at the tops of their heads at birth — had been in critical condition since two teams of doctors at the University of Utah Medical Center separated them in 16½ hours of surgery that ended early Wednesday.

Hospital spokesman John Dwan said Monday the twins were now listed in serious but stable condition. The operation that separated them was described as the first of its type to be successful.

"Doctors want to emphasize that while progress obviously has been made since separation surgery last Tuesday and Wednesday, the girls are still acutely ill and there are many factors which could lead to a future possible deterioration of their condition," Dwan said.

There were hopeful signs, however.

Both girls were eating by mouth two days after surgery and there were no signs of infection, which doctors said posed the most immediate threat.

Dwan said skin grafts placed on the heads of the twins to cover the openings left by surgery appeared successful. The grafts were taken from the girls' heads and legs.

Still, doctors believe it "may be weeks or months before a definitive prognosis can be made," particularly as to possible brain damage, Dwan said.

During surgery, neurosurgeons were surprised to find the girls' brains joined in the rear near the bottom portions. They had thought the brains were separate and that the twins shared only blood vessels.

Those blood vessels were tied off during four preparatory operations. In all, Lisa and Elisa were hospitalized 15 times.

Atahualpa, the last Inca ruler, was put to death in 1533.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The daytime is fine for thinking out ways to have increased abundance in the days ahead. This is not the time to strut and attempt to impress others with new ideas.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You have excellent judgment today and can easily gain your aims. Handle a civic affair in a clever way and gain the benefits.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Take time today to study your home situation and know how to have everything to your liking. Clear up whatever is in error.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Your talents are working more efficiently now and you can accomplish a great deal. Strive for greater prestige in public life.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You need to economize more and build up a reserve to be free of worry. Your hunches are accurate at this time.

LEO (June 22 to Aug. 21) Helping associates to gain their aims brings fine returns for you, also. Find a better way of being more productive at work.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Study your financial status well and know where to make changes. Contact a most successful person who can give you good ideas.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Don't do anything that could jeopardize your fine reputation. Avoid one who is detrimental to your best interests.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Study whatever has been puzzling you lately and gain the support of associates. Come to a better understanding with your mate.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to dec. 21) You are tempted to be too extravagant now, so take steps to control this urge. Take no risks with your health at this time.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Attend to those outside tasks early in the day for best results. Not a good day to engage in a new interest.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You have fine ideas that should be put in operation quickly for good results. Sidestep one who is very tricky.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20) Plan how best to handle important obligations before carrying them out. Strive for increased harmony with the one you love.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY -he or she will have charisma so teach to use this quality to help make conditions better in the world, otherwise much of the fine promise here will be lost. There is musical ability in this chart which should be trained early in life.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Lula Ballard

Services for Lula (Mae) Ballard, 74, of Quaker Villa Nursing Home are pending with Sanders Funeral Home.

Mrs. Ballard died at noon Monday in Quaker Villa Nursing Home following a lengthy illness.

She had lived in Lubbock since 1955, moving here from Texarkana. She was a Baptist.

Survivors include two daughters, Jean Wallace of Lubbock and Ann Phipps of Pensacola, Fla.; a sister, Lizzie Knox of Sunnymeade, Calif.; six grandchildren; and six great-grandchildren.

Edgar Butler

Services for Edgar Butler, 58, of 3308-A 81st St. will be at 11 a.m. today in W.W. Rix Chapel.

The Rev. I.D. Walker, associate pastor of the First Baptist Church, will officiate. Arrangements are being handled by Rix Funeral Directors.

The family suggests memorials to the American Heart Fund or the Texas Tech Ranching Heritage Center.

Butler died Sunday morning at Methodist Hospital following a sudden illness.

A Quanah native, he moved to Lubbock from Tyler in 1962. Butler, who was employed by the Philadelphia Life Insurance Co., was a member of the First Baptist Church and the Downtown Bible Class. He married Edna Fitzgerald in Tyler on April 17, 1960.

Survivors include his wife; three sons, Daron of Austin and Mike and Sloan, both of Lubbock; a brother, Jim of Tyler; and two sisters, Daphine Shelton of Lubbock and Maxine Baker of Childress.

Emma Cassady

CLOVIS, N.M. (Special) — Services for Emma Cassady, 73, of Texico will be at 2 p.m. MDT today in Steed Memorial Chapel in Clovis, N.M. The Rev. J.W. Doke will officiate, assisted by the Rev. Gerald Woods, pastor of the First Church of Nazarene here.

Burial will be in Sunset Terrace Cemetery at Farwell under the direction of Steed-Todd Funeral Home in Clovis.

Mrs. Cassady was pronounced dead at the scene of a two-car collision at 10:15 p.m. Saturday 15 miles northeast of Clovis.

The cars collided in a dense fog. The crash threw Mrs. Cassady from a vehicle driven by Roy E. Ford, 70, of Broadview, N.M.

A native of Mineral Springs, Ark., Mrs. Cassady moved to the Texico-Farwell area in 1941. Her husband, Carey Cassady, died in 1974.

Carter Successful At Evading Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has slipped out of the White House at least 10 times — to dine in local restaurants, to attend private parties, to go cross-country skiing — without being spotted by the press, Newsweek magazine reports.

Carter has aides make the dinner reservations in their own names, then inform the restaurants who the main guest really is only an hour before he arrives.

The president avoids his black limousine on these occasions, the magazine said, and has no police escorts. "He stops at red lights and gets stuck in traffic, just like you and me," said a staffer.

Man Attempts To Stop Fight, Gets Slashed On Hands, Chest

A Levelland man was in satisfactory condition Monday at St. Mary's Hospital with injuries he suffered after he tried to break up a fight at Eighth Street and Avenue A about 11:30 p.m. Sunday.

John Robert Clewis, 31, told police that when he tried to halt a fight between two men, one of them pulled a knife and cut him in the chest and on both hands.

The victim described the suspect as black, 26 to 35, thin and of medium height.

A 17-year-old Lubbock man was treated at West Texas Hospital Sunday night and later released after he suffered a gunshot wound in the right thigh.

Luis Gutierrez Jr. of 507 Quirt Ave., No. 1, told police he was hit when three men stopped their car near his residence and began firing.

A 20-year-old Lubbock woman reported Monday that her ex-boyfriend forced her to have sex with him Saturday night.

The woman said that she was leaving a pool hall in the 700-block of 13th Street with another man Saturday afternoon when her ex-boyfriend began fighting with the man.

After the three were thrown out of the pool hall, the woman said her ex-boyfriend pulled a knife on her and forced her to go to his house, where he later made her have sex with him. The woman said the man did not release her until noon Sunday.

Pancho Hernandez of 1802 Zenith Ave. complained that someone took a two-month-old goat, valued at $35, from a pen in his backyard sometime between 9 p.m. Sunday and 9 a.m. Monday.

Janet Staggs reported thieves carted off $400 worth of goods, including frozen meat, flatware and small electric appliances, from Krow's Kitchen at 3030 34th St. sometime late Sunday or early Monday.

Deann Sander of 3624 56th St. told police Monday that someone took $2,250 worth of her property, including cash and jewelry, sometime between February 18 and March 4.

Juan Zamora of 4612 47th St. said someone stole his $3,000 car from the 300-block of Avenue S sometime Monday morning.

In vehicle thefts, James Harlan Wright said someone took $619 worth of goods, including a CB radio, hats and a tire, from his pickup truck, which was in a parking lot in the 1100-block of 58th Street sometime Monday morning.

Daniel Lester Richmond of Greencastle, Pa., reported burglars removed a CB radio, cassette tapes and watch, valued together at $500, from his van which was parked at the Ramada Inn sometime between 11 p.m. Sunday and 9 a.m. Monday.

A 14-year-old deaf mute, who was found about 10:30 p.m. Sunday crying in a Lubbock convenience store, indicated that he had been beaten by his father.

Reports indicate the boy was suffering from a large welt on his arm.

The attendant at the store, located at 47th Street and Avenue H, told officers the youth came in and, by writing and framing words with his lips, told the attendant he had been beaten by his father and asked to be hidden.

Police questioned the youth's father and were told the boy suffered his injuries as a result of throwing a tantrum at his residence. Police were continuing their investigation Monday and the boy had been turned over to Child Welfare authorities.

In other activity, a 39-year-old Lubbock woman said she was assaulted about 1:30 a.m. Monday by a man in front of a supermarket at Indiana Avenue and 50th Street.

She said she was getting into her car when the suspect, described as a young Mexican-American wearing a white shirt, jerked open the car door and grabbed her by the neck. He allegedly told the woman, "Don't scream, this won't take long."

The woman said she struggled with the man, who pulled her hair and struck her in the face. The assailant soon pushed the woman back into her vehicle and fled north on foot, according to reports.

Benito Hignojos Jr., 19, of 4308 30th St. told police a Mexican-American woman, driving a red two-door vehicle, attempted to run over him about 7:45 p.m. Sunday.

Hignojos said the woman had followed him and a companion for about 30 minutes. Reports indicate Hignojos got out of his car in the 2400-block of Avenue Q and confronted the woman.

The suspect allegedly told Hignojos, "You are not going to get away with it. You have done too much hurt and I'm going to get even."

When Hignojos turned to walk back to his car the woman tried to run over him, he said. No one was seriously injured in the incident.

A 17-year-old man said he was assaulted about 1:30 a.m. Monday by three men after attempting to break up a fight in front of a club in the 300-block of North University Avenue.

Leroy William Duran of Abernathy said the men struck him several times in the stomach with a crowbar. He was treated at Methodist Hospital.

Crop Duster Walks Away From Demolished Aircraft

GUTHRIE (Special) — A Mercedes man, whose crop duster apparently caught fire during takeoff near here Monday morning, was treated at Lubbock's Methodist Hospital for injuries he suffered in the mishap.

Marvin Lee "Lefty" Gardner, 58, who walked away from the burning plane after he made an emergency landing, was taken by private plane to Lubbock International Airport and then to Methodist by EMS ambulance at 11:45 a.m.

He was released from the hospital following treatment.

King County Sheriff Harmon "Babe" Oliver said Gardner's crop duster apparently caught fire while taking off about 10 a.m. at a dirt airstrip about five and a half miles east of Guthrie.

The sheriff said Gardner managed to get out of the burning plane, but added that the crop duster was burned completely before Guthrie volunteer firefighters reached the scene.

Gardner, owner of the Gardner Aerial Spraying Co., was doing contract spraying for the Pitchfork and 6666 ranches.

Washington Has No Doonesbury

WASHINGTON (AP) — As if all the other troubles of the world weren't enough, Washington now has to do without Doonesbury.

The Washington Post, which was due to lose the popular comic strip June 24, decided to kick Doonesbury out early without so much as a word to its readers. The afternoon Washington Star, which acquired the strip in a merger of two syndicates and announced its triumph with a banner headline, can't use it for another three weeks.

"I was going to keep running it until we lost it," said Ben Bradlee, executive editor of the Post. "When the Star started promoting it, I said the hell with it."

"It came as a surprise to us when the Post chose not to put it in the paper," said Colleen Mueller, director of promotion for the Star. "We will not start running it until the date agreed on."

She said she doesn't know how, or whether, the Star will help readers catch up with three weeks worth of Doonesbury.

MAYORS TO HEAR POLITICOS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Walter Mondale and three members of the Carter Cabinet will attend the U.S. Conference of Mayors' meeting in Pittsburgh that will tackle issues ranging from double-digit inflation to urban policy. The mayors also expect to hear from leading Republican candidates for president.

Navigation Pioneer Dies In Maryland

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Capt. Philip Van Horn Weems, a pioneer in sea and air navigation who worked with Charles A. Lindbergh and Richard E. Byrd, has died at age 91.

He died Sunday at Anne Arundel General Hospital after a short illness.

In addition to helping Lindbergh in his pioneering flights, Weems developed some of the charts and instruments used by Byrd in his 1929 flight over the South Pole.

Later in his career, he turned his attention to the space program and developed a mathematical formula that helped astronauts determine their position in the heavens within seconds by visual sighting.

The developer of a number of widely used navigational devices, Weems wrote the "Line of Position Book" in 1927. Its altitude tables became a standard tool in navigation courses.

Weems, who retired from the Navy in 1946 with the rank of convoy commodore, founded Weems Systems of Navigation Inc. The Annapolis company, now operating as Weems and Platt Inc., develops and distributes navigational literature and equipment, conducts research and operates an international correspondence school.

He is survived by his wife, daughter and three grandchildren.

Sen. Short Visits Area Cities Today

State Sen. E.L. Short of Tahoka will meet with citizens at four South Plains cities today to discuss issues.

Short will be available for questioning at 9 a.m. at Ison Insurance Company in Idalou, at 11 a.m. in Lorenzo and at 1:30 p.m. at the Ralls Chamber of Commerce.

He also will attend a public meeting at 3 p.m. today for comments and questions from Crosbyton citizens in the city's Senior Citizen Center.

Youths Attending Boys State Meet

AUSTIN (Special) — Four local posts of the American Legion are being represented by 19 area youths at the 39th annual Boys State Convention this week at the University of Texas.

Delegates participate in a mock legislature, passing bills and working in committees. Each delegate today will serve in his district legislator's office.

Delegate for Whiteface Post 534 is Kelly Kim Dennis.

Iran Said Cheating On Oil Contracts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The new Iranian government appears to be cheating on its own new contracts with foreign oil firms in an effort to boost profits, Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., charged Monday.

Aspin said information he has received from the Energy Department indicates that the National Iranian Oil Co., has been cutting sales under contracts it has signed since the revolution, late last year.

Aspin said the Iranians, by holding back on contracted supplies, can devote as many as one million barrels a day to sale on the spot market where crude commands prices frequently 50 percent higher than long-term quotations.

Aspin said he is writing Hassan Nazih, chairman of the board of the National Iranian Oil Co., seeking an explanation for Iran's sales policies.

U.S. Economy Seen At Mercy Of Other Nations

WASHINGTON (P) — There was a time when the economic policies of the Western world could have been stamped, "Made in U.S.A." No more.

In the decade of the 1970s, the American economy is being hurt by decisions made abroad, and there is very little the United States can do about it, in the short-run at least.

It can be seen in long gas lines, colder houses, in inflation, and in unemployment. The American standard of living will shrink as a result, U.S. experts say.

Americans still look to their leaders to solve these problems, and the leaders often promise solutions. But the reality is that most of the rest of the world is suffering from similar ills and there is little that one country can do on its own to solve them.

Recognizing the need to develop joint solutions to common problems, U.S. presidents have attended annual economic summit conferences with leaders of six other industrial nations since 1974. President Carter will attend the fifth summit in Tokyo on June 28-29.

"We in the United States have been slow to realize the extent to which the economic health of our own nation depends on the economic health of the world as a whole," Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal told a congressional committee last week.

"The age where the United States could get its way in the world by imposing its will militarily or by economic pressure is past, if it everexisted," he said later.

The steady increase in oil prices by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries is the most glaring example of how Americans are affected by decisions elsewhere. But there are others:

—Inflation was worse and the dollar was weaker last year because Japan and Germany refused to follow the U.S. lead in promoting greater economic growth.

—Agreessive and successful exports by other nations and dominating American products in markets around the world, including the U.S. market. The United States had a record trade deficit last year of nearly $29 billion, of which $12 billion was in trade with Japan.

—There are more U.S. dollars — $600 billion by one estimate — circulating outside the United States than inside the country. Misuse of even a small share of this money, which is beyond the reach of U.S. banking and currency regulations, could undermine the dollar.

The United States has always been influenced by other nations' economic policies, of course. But in the years after World War II, the U.S. economy was so strong that it was rare that other nations took actions that ran counter to U.S. interests.

However, the four-fold increase in oil prices in 1973 and 1974 shattered the image of the United States as self-sufficient and exposed a major weakness in the U.S. economy, as well as in the economies of other major industrial nations.

"The industrial nations are all too dependent on a small group of countries for energy, and that dependence threatens the health of our economy and imperils our national security," Blumenthal says.

The vulnerability of the U.S. economy is underscored by two major developments in the post-war period. The first has been the rise of other nations, notably Japan and Germany, as economic powers with domestic needs that often conflict with those of the United States.

The second development has been the growing reliance of the United States on imported oil to meet its energy needs. The U.S. economy had been structured to function on low-cost oil, most of which was available from domestic wells.

But oil became high-cost after U.S. oil production began to trail consumption earlier in this decade, and OPEC took advantage of that to drastically increase oil prices. Nearly half of U.S. oil needs are now imported — at a cost of $40 billion last year alone.

Even though OPEC nations invest much of their earnings in this country, there is still a net loss of wealth to Americans since the oil nations retain control over their investments and reap the profits that result.

The enormous cost of the war in Vietnam has also been a factor contributing to the economy's instability, especially since some economists blame it for starting the current inflationary spiral.

The United States, with a 14 percent annual rate of increase in consumer prices so far this year, isn't the only country suffering from inflation. Most other nations are experiencing inflation rates of near 10 percent, or higher.

Alfred E. Kahn, President Carter's chief inflation adviser, says Americans must accept lower standards of living in order to control inflation, in part because of the need to adjust to higher oil prices. "All we can do is adapt to that," he says.

The increase in oil prices is only part of the problem. Inflation already was serious enough by 1971 that the President Nixon imposed wage and price controls — two years before the OPEC price hike.

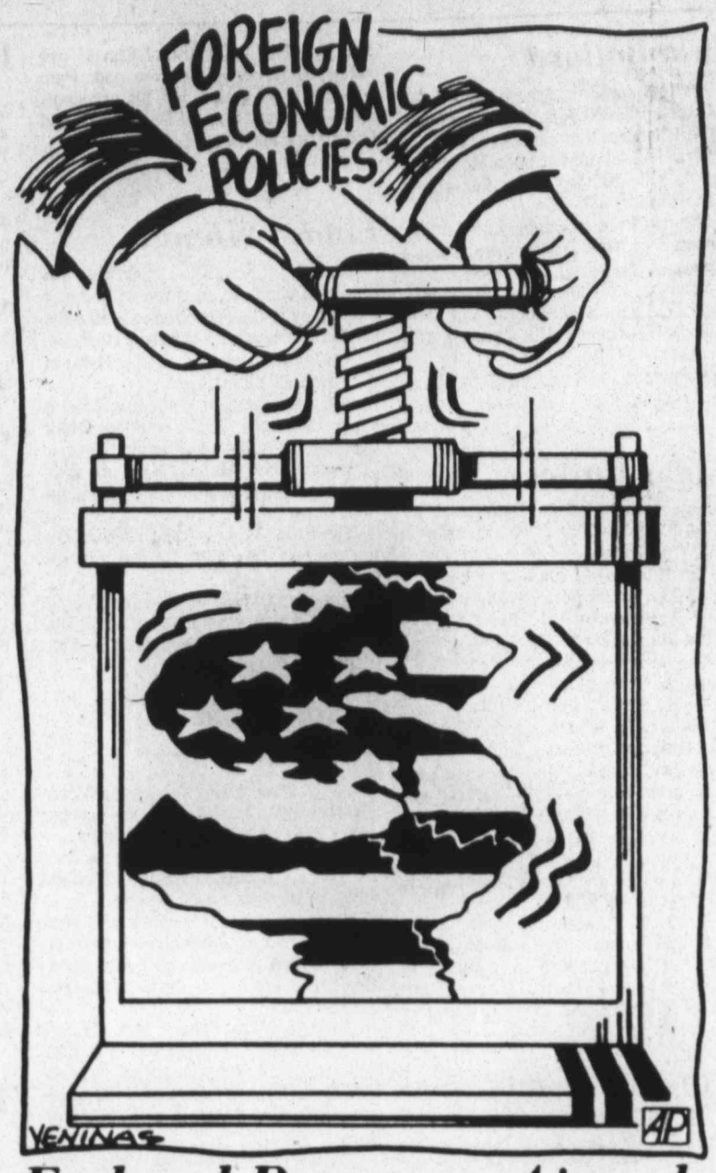

There were official devaluations of the dollar in 1971 and 1973, in part because of trade deficits.

Henry C. Wallich, a Nixon appointee to the Federal Reserve Board and a specialist in international economics, believes the United States has been "out-maneuvered and out-competed" by other trading nations and favors a more aggressive export policy.

He also laments that the United States "has a dismal record on productivity" in relation to other nations. The causes of lagging productivityare complex, and not entirely understood, although most economists focus on a slowdown in investment as the major factor.

Wallich predicts that the world will grow more interdependent in years ahead, but he argues this won't be all bad for the United States because that will force it to exert greater discipline over its own economy and to live within its means.

"I think our policies have been a great deal worse than those countries with good policies, especially Japan and Germany," he said in an interview.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. You advised two children, ages 12 and 13, to "steer away from Series E U.S. Savings Bonds. Savings accounts are far more suitable."

Through the years, we have been buying — at $18.75 — an E bond for every son, daughter, nephew, niece and grandchild at births, birthdays, graduations, etc. A savings account pays 5 or 5½ percent interest. An E bond receives 6½ percent and is less likely to be cashed in than a savings account.

How do you explain your logic?

A. With one unfortunate word — "taxes."

Unless there has been some careful planning done on behalf of each family member to whom you have made an E bond gift, you have more than likely presented each of them with a future, unexpected federal income tax bill.

This isn't your fault. The blame lies with the present administration of the U.S. Treasury Department, which has decreed that there will be no further "extended maturities" on older E bonds. As a result, E bonds issued between May, 1941, and November, 1965, will stop aocruing interest anywhere from 40 years to 37 years, nine months, after their issue dates.

As each E bond reaches its final maturity, its owner will be required to report and pay federal income tax on the bond's unreported accrued interest or exchange the E bond for the new HH bond — which comes in $500 minimum denominations. By exchanging Es for HHs, the tax on the accrued E bond interest would be postponed until the HHs are cashed.

Meanwhile, the HHs will pay interest — subject to federal income tax — every six months. So, assuming those "kids" hold the E bonds you bought for them until their bonds reach final maturity, and the "kids" are in reasonably high tax brackets, your gifts could result in fat federal income tax liabilities.

Q. We have been buying Series E U.S. Savings Bonds for our granddaughter, as a college education fund. Isn't there any way we can see to it that she never has to pay federal income tax on the interest accruing on those bonds?

A. You can — up to a point.

First you have to see to it-that the child has a "taxpayer identification number" — a Social Security number.

Make sure the E bonds are issued in "beneficiary form" — in the child's name, "payable on death to" another name, usually the mother or father. Don't use the "co-owner form" — with the child's name "or" another name.

Then, see to it that a federal income tax return is filed in the child's name — listing the interest accrued on the bond as income. No tax will be due, as long as your granddaughter's total income does not exceed her "personal exemption" of $750 a year.

U.S. Treasury Department literature on this subject says, "Filing such a return the first year of bond purchases establishes the intent, and no further returns will be necessary unless total income in any year exceeds the exemption."

But the Internal Revenue Service points out that, once her so-called "unearned income" from such things as dividends and interest — including accrued E bond interest — reaches $750 a year, she must file an annual tax return.

Your granddaughter would, in effect, s declaring her E bond interest each year — as it builds up — rather than waiting and declaring all her interest when she cashes in the bonds or when the bonds reach final maturity.

All E bond holders can do that. But, because of the complications involved, very few do. Very few E bond holders know how much interest accrues on their bonds each year.

Q. Wasn't there an error in your list of the final maturity dates of older E bonds?

A. Yes. Some gremlins got into the typesetting process. E bonds issued from February, 1957, through May, 1959, will reach their final maturities and stop accruing interest in 38 years, 11 months — not 48 years, 11 months.

Federal Program Aimed At Young Job Seekers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Labor Department said Monday the government is investing $75 million in a partnership with business to find private-sector jobs for some 100,000 economically deprived young people.

Labor Secretary Ray Marshall said the money will be used to encourage private business to train and employ the hard-core unemployed, thus relieving the government of full responsibility for creating work for the jobless.

"Four out of every five jobs are located in the private sector," Marshall said in announcing that funds had been secured for the Private Sector Initiative Program.

"If we are ever going to solve the problem of unemployment, we need to provide the skills and training that will allow the unemployed to get and hold meaningful jobs in their local communities," he said.

Te secretary described the program as the "missing link' needed to transfer the disadvantaged from public jobs under CETA — the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act — to private jobs.

Under the new program, local private industry councils will be set up to advise local CETA authorities on the jobs and job training programs needed in a community.

The councils -- made up of business, union and community leaders — would then find local employers willing to train and hire the young people, with the training costs paid by CETA. Firms that retain the disadvantaged in jobs also would be eligible for tax credits.

The future of the program, which is being co-sponsored by the National Alliance of Businessmen, is dependent on Congress approving an additional $325 million subsidy in the 1980 budget, said NAB President Lloyd N. Hand. Otherwise, the $75 million appropriated for this year "will be counter-productive," he said.

Jane Alexander Stars In 'Brubaker'

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Actress Jane Alexander will co-star with Robert Redford in "Brubaker," a 20th Century-Fox film about a fictional reform-minded prison warden.

Miss Alexander will begin work in central Ohio this week, where the film is already under way, Jack Hirshberg, spokesman for 20th Century-Fox said Monday.

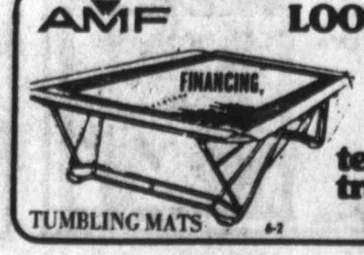

The actress, who was nominated for an Academy Award for her role in "The Great White Hope," is also known for her portrayal of Eleanor Roosevelt in the television movie "Eleanor and Franklin."

She previously appeared with Redford in "All the President's Men" in a role for which she was also nominated for an Oscar.

In "Brubaker," Miss Alexander will play the governor's aide who recruits Brubaker, played by Redford, as prison warden.

Stock Mart Shows Gain

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market inched higher Monday, with energy, real estate and gambling issues highlighting an otherwise lackluster session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off by 15.07 points in last week's trading, gained .69 to close at 821.90. New York Stock Exchange volume dropped to 24.04 million shares from Friday's 24.56 million as advances held a 7-6 edge over declines among Big Board-listed issues.

"Energy stocks are alive and well," said MKI Securities analyst Charles Jensen as rising oil and gas prices continued to boost independent producers.

Charter Co., which said it couldn't acount for Monday's gains, rose 1⅞ to 19¾ in active trading. On the American Stock Exchange, Dome Petroleum gained ⅞ to 40⅛, Ranger Oil added 1⅜ to 22¾, and Imperial Oil class A was ahead 1⅛ at 29⅜.

The Amex gains helped push the exchange's market value index up 1.25 points to a new high of 189.25. The NYSE's composite common-stock index gained .10 to 56.13

New York (AP) — Monday's national prices for New York Stock Exchange issues as of NYSE close. Prices and volume consolidated for securities also traded on other markets.

CBS To Rebroadcast 'D-Day Plus 20 Years'

NEW YORK (AP) — Fifteen years have passed since Walter Cronkite and Dwight D. Eisenhower strolled through the American cemetery overlooking Omaha Beach on the coast of Normandy.

They paused at several gravestones, Cronkite reciting the inscriptions. "I think there's some 9,000 boys who lie here," the correspondent said.

Eisenhower then recalled his own son's graduation from West Poit as Allied forces began the assault on Europe that would lead to the end of World War II, and referred to "these young boys, so many of them, over whose graves we have been treading ... they were cut off in their prime.

"They had families that grieved for them," Eisenhower said, "but they never knew the great experiences of going through life like my son can enjoy.

"I devoutly hope that we will never again have to see such scenes as these."

Eisenhower — by then, that military hero had completed two terms as president — was obviously moved by the somber setting, and his memories, and his plea for peace made a fitting conclusion to "D-Day Plus 20 Years," broadcast by CBS June 5, 1964. It will be shown at 7 p.m. today on Channel 13.

CBS has revived "D-Day Plus 20 Years: Eisenhower Returns to Normandy," for rebroadcast Tuesday night, the 35th anniversary of the offensive that began the morning of June 6, 1944.

"D-Day Plus 20 Years" follows by a month ABC's successful broadcast of "Ike," a three-part miniseries based on Eisenhower's war years, and the "CBS Reports" special surely will capitalize on that dramatization, which starred Robert Duvall.

"About half the country's population has been born since D-Day," said one CBS spokesman, "and for many people, this rebroadcast will be their first real exposure to this historic event."

Indeed, CBS has been examining previously broadcast news specials, with an eye open for those with some current attraction, the spokesman said.

"D-Day Plus 20 Years" originally was broadcast in 90 minutes. The current version has been cut to an hour, with a new introduction by Cronkite.

Eisenhower was over-all commander for the invasion by American, British, Free French, Polish and Canadian soldiers, and Cronkite covered the operation for United Press.

For the news special, they returned to headquarters for the invasion at Southwick House near Portsmouth, the Portsmouth Naval Yard where much of the assault was mounted, and several sites in Normandy. They stood on the beaches — Gold, Sword, Juno, Utah and Omaha — where thousands of soldiers were killed by the defending Germans.

"D-Day Plus 20 Years," even 35 years later, offers an intriguing slice of history, as Eisenhower and Cronkite reminisce, sometimes passionately, on this most significant of modern military operations.

The rebroadcast is interesting in another aspect. William S. Paley, CBS' founder and the network's current board chairman, as well as Bill Leonard, then Paris bureau chief and now president of CBS News, and Fred W. Friendly, then executive producer of "CBS Reports," accompanied Eisenhower and Cronkite to Normandy, though they do not appear in the film.

IKE AT NORMANDY — The late Dwight D. Eisenhower stood in the American Cemetery at Normandy in 1964, during the making of the CBS special "D-Day Plus 20 Years." The special will be shown at 7 p.m. today, the eve of the 35th anniversary of the invasion, on Channel 13.

Sex Education Experts Hear TV Promoted

RACINE, Wis. (AP) — Sex counselors, researchers and sociologists concerned about the high number of teenage pregnancies should consider using television to increase public awareness of sexually related issues, a Population Institute lobbyist said Monday.

"Everybody watches TV ... (It) is the most powerful tool for raising awareness in the history of mankind," said Norman Fleischman, an institute staff member who is based in Los Angeles.

About 50 experts have gathered here for three days to discuss the issues of adolescent sexuality and sexual health care.

An estimated 1 million pregnancies occur each year among teen-agers in the United States. Conference organizers say that more than half of U.S. teenagers have sex before they're 19.

Describing himself as an entertainment lobbyist, he said his job was to try to persuade often-reluctant television producers and writers to deal with such issues as teenage sex, pregnancy and abortion.

Fleischman said those attending the conference should urge parent-teacher organizations and other grass-roots groups to put pressure on the commercial networks to change the networks' reluctance to deal with controversial issues.

"The airwaves are like the national parks," he said. "They belong to the people. You can control the airwaves. You can talk to the networks. The communications media is willing to listen."

The show showed a conflict on how parents should inform children of the facts of life.

Some persons at the conference expressed reservations over the way the show was handled, and what one called "the conception that sex education is a conversation between a parent and a child."

Jack Haley Satisfactory

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Actor Jack Haley Sr., best known as the Tin Man in "The Wizard of Oz," was reported in fair condition Monday at the UCLA Medical Center coronary care unit after suffering a weekend heart attack.

Spokeswoman Bonnie Whitham said doctors determined that Haley suffered a heart attack when he collapsed at his Beverly Hills home Saturday. Family members said earlier that the 79-year-old performer was seriously ill and has suffered from circulatory problems for nearly six months.

Haley is a veteran of 50 movies, most of them musicals and comedies. He was active on the Broadway stage decades ago and spent his early years in vaudeville.

"Wake Up and Live" was his personal favorite of all the movies in which he appeared. But he is best known to millions for his 1939 role as the Tin Man who wanted a heart in the MGM film "The Wizard of Oz."

Haley, who retired from films years ago, became wealthy through real estate and has been active in raising money for down-and-out entertainers.

Haley's last film was "That's Entertainment," a 1970s review of MGM's musicals.

Haley has been married to former Ziegfield follies dancer Florence McFadden for 52 years.

Their son, film producer Jack Haley Jr., and the late Judy Garland's daughter, Liza Minnelli, were divorced last year after 4½ years of marriage.

Juvenile Correction Film Draws Fire From House Witnesses

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two participants in the film "Scared Straight," a documentary made to shock youths into avoiding crime, told Congress Monday their experiences frightened them into staying out of trouble.

However, another witness told a House subcommittee the film contains "hyped" claims of success and leaves a false impression about intimidation as a behavior-changing tool.

Jerome Miller, president of the National Center on Institutions and Alternatives, said the Academy-Award-winning film suggested the 17 students it featured were hard-core delinquents. Instead, he said, 13 came from an upper middle-class, suburban community and had minor or no brushes with the law.

He also cited a Rutgers University study disputing claims of an 80 percent to 90 percent success rate for the program at Rahway State Penitentiary in New Jersey.

But Lori Miick and Ron Shaw, who live in Ridgefield Park, N.J., said the tough, forceful warnings given by inmates at the prison were effective for them and probably for others in their group as well.

"Stuff I used to do, I don't do no more. That helped a hell of a lot," said 18-year-old Shaw. He said he had been convicted in connection with a bomb scare before the filming a year ago but that he hasn't had any brushes with the law since then.

Lori Miick said she had committed offenses — she didn't say what kind — before the film was made, but she was never caught.

A local police detective who knew she might end up on the wrong side of the law asked her to participate in the film, she said.

"Ever since that picture was filmed, I don't even hang out any more, not with the same people I did," she said.

Her mother, Mrs. Marie Miick, agreed.

And she said living in "a nice little suburban town" like theirs is no protection keeping young people out of trouble.

"The kids can go out of it. They have the transportation and the money."

The film records a session in which convicts serving life sentences at Rahway, using profanity, gestures and threats, describe their lives in the prison to the juveniles. Thirteen of those youths came from Ridgefield Park.

This session is part of the Lifers' Juvenile Awareness Project which has had more than 14,000 young participants.

Rep. Ike Andrews, D-N.C., chairman of the Education and Labor subcommittee, said Congress is studying whether the program should be copied in other states.

Miller said there is little evidence to support the idea that hardened criminals can browbeat youngsters into leading "straight" lives, because too many elements of delinquency — poverty, education, peer pressure among them — are not touched by the program.

Deaf Youth Makes Mark As Mime

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — David Bond doesn't come close to having the best grades in his own high school, let alone in all the city of Portland.

He isn't the president of his student body or the editor of his school paper or year book. He is not an athlete.

So what is David Bond doing as one of Portland's representatives to "the Gathering of the Greats" — the American Academy of Achievement's three-day conference of 400 of the nation's most outstanding high school students?

David's counselor at Jackson High School, Ken Bates, put it this way when he nominated David for the honor: "We submit his name as a young man who is in the process of fulfilling the American Dream by communicating in an artistic form higher than speaking or writing or listening.

"David communicates on an emotional level making his audiences feel happy or sad, wistful or lonely, or exhilarated or any of the other emotions in the range of most people's experience."

David, who has been deaf since birth, is a mime.

He is not just a high school-level performer but an accomplished professional mime who brings standing ovations from audiences who know nothing of his handicap. He won first place in the Oregon State Mime Contest and played the mime in a Portland Opera Association production of "La Boheme."

Bates said, "We who do know his handicap sometimes wonder how much more artful David would be today had he had the advantage of normal hearing. And perhaps David has this talent because he has learned to feel people's emotions rather than to listen what they are saying."

His mother explained: "Ever since he was young it's been, 'Here I am, world. Let's go.'"

Italian Communists Post Election Loss

ROME (AP) — Italy's Christian Democrats emerged victorious Monday in national elections, derailing the powerful Communist Party's bid to gain a foothold in the government of this NATO nation.

It was the first time the Communists lost ground in national balloting. The Christian Democrats slipped slightly in the two days of voting, but were assured continuance of their rule, uninterrupted since World War II.

Communists suffered losses in both the 315-seat Senate and in 630-member Chamber of Deputies, which has the legislative power.

Communist leader Enrico Berlinguer conceded defeat and attributed the "considerable loss" to a "massive and systematic" anti-Communist campaign.

Governments in Washington and other Western capitals counted the results with relief. They had feared a strong Communist showing might lead to Communists in the Cabinet of a compromise government and thus jeopardize military secrets of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

With the Senate tally nearly complete, the Christian Democrats polled 38.3 percent, six-tenths of a percent behind their showing in the last general election three years ago. The Communists slumped from 33.8 percent to 31.5.

For the lower house, with 68,952 of 76,466 voting stations reporting, the Christian Democrats drew 12,494,110 or 38.2 percent, compared to 38.7 percent in 1976. The Communists, with 10,035,935 votes, slipped from 34.4 to 30.7.

Third-place Socialists had 3,208,420 moving to 9.8 percent from 9.6, while the fourth-ranked neo-fascist MSI Party was losing ground, dropping to 5 percent from 6.1 with 1,630,916 votes. Five minor parties were getting less than four percent each.

One of those was the Radical Party, a civil rights-oriented party whose firebrand leader Marco Panella attacked both the Christian Democrats and the Communists. The Radicals had polled 1,100,005 votes for 3.4 percent, more than tripple their 1.1 percent in 1976.

Loss Forecast

National Television projections said the Christian Democrats would win 260 seats in the lower house for a loss of two, Communists would lose 16 seats and drop to 206, and parties of the center and non-Communist left would all score gains.

"The country has said 'No' to the Communist blackmail," the Christian Democrat Party organ Il Popolo headlined.

Communists, who govern most of Italy's municipalities including the major cities of Rome, Turin, Florence and Naples, had been steadily edging toward the top in elections in recent years.

They promised to keep Italy in NATO, disavowed subservience to the Soviet Union, and said only a "government of national unity" including Communist ministers could deal with political terrorism and economic woes.

Allies Take Low Profile

Polls had predicted the Communists would lose strength. America and other NATO members maintained low profiles during the campaign. But a three-day visit by Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance last week — including an audience with Pope John Paul II — was seen as a gesture of support for the Roman Catholic-based Christian Democrats.

Italians voted Sunday and Monday in peaceful polling despite terrorists threats to disrupt the election. The military maintained tight surveillance around voting stations and metal detectors scanned those entering the Interior Ministry.

Christian Democrat Party President Flaminio Piccoli expressed his "profound satisfaction" at the results, saying, "The Communists turned the election into a referendum on entering the government."

The elections were held two years ahead of schedule after a breakdown of a Communist-Christian Democrat coalition in Parliament led to the dissolution of two governments.

Ploy Fails

In 1976, after their best showing ever in a national election, the communists agreed to support the dominant Christian Democrats, who lacked a parliamentary majority. They withdrew their support last December after the Christian Democrats rejected a demand for Cabinet posts.

Political analysts said the Communists apparently lost some of their own militant supporters because of that policy.

The Communists had steadily increased their strength in previous elections, moving from 19 percent in 1946 to 34 percent in 1976 — only 4 percentage points behind the Christian Democrats.

The losses could induce the Communists to stay in the opposition, jeopardizing Berlinguer and what had been his soft line of cooperation with the Christian Democrats.

Pre-election polls had the ruling Christian Democrats scoring gains, apparently partly in sympathy with the terrorist kidnapping and murder of Aldo Moro, the party president and former premier.

Despite terrorist threats, 90 percent of the 42 million eligible voters cast their ballots. That was 3 percent below the 1976 election.

Senate ballots, for which the voting age is 25, were tabulated first. Voting age for the Chamber is 18.

Education Agency's Bureaucracy Feared

money, school districts are told how and where to spend that money. He said he would be in favor of the department if the government "gave us x amount of dollars and let the school board determine how the money is best spent for the Lubbock Independent School District."

But, he added, "I have my doubts that that's what will happen."

He said that leaving some education programs where they are "makes me doubt that a department of education would be created with the principal interest of getting money to people who need education."

Others Share Views

Other administrators throughout the state apparently share the skepticism of Lubbock's school administrators.

Dr. Charles Matthews, executive director of the Texas Association of School Administrators, said its parent national organization, the National Association of School Administrators, officially endorses the department.

"But in Texas we have some reservations," he said. "We're lukewarm. It could give certain elements of the educational arena undue influence."

He said the department could create "more bureaucracy" and said that it "would probably give NEA (National Education Association) too much influence."

NEA endorses the creation of a separate education department, as does its local organization, the Lubbock Educators Association.

Newly elected LEA president Glenna Lane said "We feel the department is a good thing because we feel education needs to have a more important position than just as part of health and welfare.

"A separate department would cut down on some local bureaucracy with one department focusing on one area only and not branching out in other areas," she continued.

Local school board members who spoke to The Avalanche-Journal, however, are solidly opposed to the proposal for a separate department.

Budget Upsurge Feared

Trustee Giles M. "Buddy" Forbess predicted the budget for education could triple with the creation of such a department. "So many people think more programs make smarter students," he said. "I don't know that we need more money. We need more parents with an interest in education."

Said board vice president Montie Hasie, "My basic philosophy is that people in this country are depending too much on the government to solve their problems."

Board president Charles Waters said that the National Association of School Boards had endorsed the bill, but that he is opposed.

He speculated that the NASB backs the measure because it feels that "education is not being fully recognized by Congress. Congress is not assuming responsibility for education."

He said he thinks the bill will pass the House, but said he is concerned about increased federal control. "I would rather forego the federal money and maintain local control," said Waters.

Trustees Harold Harriger, Jose RAmirez and Brad Crawford Jr. also oppose the bill.

"The bottom line is that it will ultimately cost more to administer" programs under a separate education department, said Harriger.

Close Vote Predicted

"It could go either way," he told The Avalanche-Journal.

Hance said his own decision on the bill is contingent upon the various amendments that will be brought up on the floor.

He said that we would not vote for the measure if through debate and amendments the department would appear "to increase the number of employees and amount of federal intervention in local educational matters."

But he said he would support the bill if a separate department "would cut down on bureaucracy and make federal education more responsive to local interest."

Hance said he will introduce his own amendment that would require the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to lose one employee for each employee the Education Department would acquire.

Tax Boost Plea Set By LCHD

70 percent.

— Or the Board of Equalization could continue assessing the county at 40 percent, while raising property assessments to a higher level. This would require voter approval.

Hospital Cutting Costs

Bosworth said that getting the funds needed to run the hospital will mean "not less than doubling" current revenue from taxes. He said administrators and hospital staff are already cutting costs. However, that action also is reducing the hospital's capabilities as a teaching facility.

Board member Don McInturff expressed his discomfort at asking for more tax money in light of problems the hospital has faced in managing its billing department.

"I'll say I'm embarassed to go, as a member of the board. This doesn't indicate good stewardship of the taxpayers' money," McInturff said.

"We better be prepared to get some heat," he added.

"Have To Situation"

But asking for a tax increase is a "have to" situation, according to board chairman Jack Strong. Without additional tax revenue, he said, "The last one out can close the front door" of the hospital sometime next year.

The accounting firm of Pratas, Smith and Moore detailed it's audit of the year ending Dec. 31, 1978, during Monday's work session. But the audit report revealed little which had not been discussed previously.

Accountant Wendell Moore said the report did not necessarily say anything new about the hospital's financial status, adding that some of the suggestions they made to smooth operations have already been adopted.

Moore's associate Randy Wright outlined 23 specific suggestions made by the firm to make the hospital's accounting procedures more efficient. The most common suggestion from the lengthy list was to "reconcile" records of business transactions with actual dealings more often than had been in the past.

For example, Wright suggested that bank statements be reconciled once a month instead of twice a year.

Bosworth reacted sharply to board member McInturff's questioning as to why certain procedures hadn't been reconciled more often, saying such procedures should have been followed and he didn't know why they hadn't.

Bosworth added that associate director for finances Bill Stinnett would have a written reply to all suggestions and questions brought up in the audit. Stinnet was ill and did not attend Monday's meeting.

"Timeliness" of bill processing also was mentioned by the auditors as a point of concern in hospital business dealings. Bosworth countered, saying the auditor's remarks were acceptable as of Dec. 31, 1978, implying the slowdown in billings is no longer a problem.

In other business, the board voted to direct outpatient bills for amounts under $100 directly to the patient, to avoid the paperwork involved with direct billing to an insurance company. This will not eliminate direct insurance company billing for outpatient services under $100, but would require the patient to pay a $5 fee if the service is requested.

000 bond and was released from jail early today.

Carol Ann Quirk, 20, who listed the same address as Bonilla, posted $5,000 bond and was released on a marijuana charge.

Bonilla brought to 13 the number of persons arrested during the past three weeks in an announced crackdown on Bandidos in the San Antonio area.

Numerous other members of the motorcycle club also have been subpoenaed to appear before federal grand juries in San Antonio, Midland and El Paso.

However, no Bandidos have been subpoenaed by the Lubbock panel.

Clark Government Forms In Ottawa

OTTAWA (AP) — Progressive Conservative Joe Clark took the oath of office as prime minister Monday and presented his 29-member Cabinet, including the first woman ever to serve as Canada's foreign secretary.

An hour before Clark was sworn in, Liberal Party leader Pierre Elliott Trudeau resigned as prime minister and quietly left the office he had occupied for 11 years. As he climbed into his Mercedes sports car, the 59-year-old Trudeau told reporters, "I feel free."

Ceremony Televised

Clark, who led his Conservatives to victory over Trudeau's Liberals in the May 22 elections, was sworn in by Governor-General Ed Schreyer in a 35-minute televised ceremony in the ornate ballroom of Government House.

He heads a minority government — six short of a majority in the 282-seat House of Commons.

His Conservatives have 136 seats, Liberals 114, New Democrats 26, and Social Credit 6.

Clark passed over most veterans of the previous Conservative government of John Diefenbaker, prime minister from 1957-63.

The 83-year-old Diefenbaker, who attended the installation ceremonies, told reporters he did not have "complete enthusiasm" for Clark's selections.

Quebecois Scarce

They are two of the four Cabinet members from Quebec, the secession-minded French-speaking province with a quarter of Canada's population. Clark has said he hopes to eventually recruit more Cabinet ministers from Quebec.

Only two of the 136 Conservatives in Commons are from Quebec, while about two-thirds of the Liberal legislators are Quebecois.

Levesque and his Parti Quebecois plan a provincial referendum this fall or next spring on whether Quebec should become independent while maintaining close economic ties with Canada.

Clark's other Cabinet members are 12 from Ontario, five from the Atlantic provinces, four from the prairie province, three from British Columbia and one from the north.

Their average age is slightly under 48.

Crosbie, a lawyer and economist from Newfoundland, will be responsible for a new federal budget next fall with promised tax cuts and a reduction of federal spending.

Walter Baker, 48 and from Ottawa, is the new revenue minister and government leader in the House of Commons that will convene in October.

Clark gave the industry, trade and commerce portfolio to Robert de Cotret, 34, while former Toronto Mayor David Crombie, 43, will head the health and welfare department.

U.S. Anti-Nazis Say More Mail Bombs Slated

NEW YORK (AP) — With powerful parcel bombs already delivered in New Jersey, Illinois, Nebraska and suburban Washington, an anti-Nazi group claiming responsibility for the mail-bomb campaign promised Monday that "more are on the way."

As of midday Monday, police said bombs had been received through the mail by a Nebraska man connected with a German neo-Nazi group, a former Nazi SS officer living in Paterson, N.J., and at a branch of the National Socialist White People's Party in Cicero, Ill.

None of the parcel bombs had exploded. Each contained similar explosives and detonators, and each was accompanied by similarly worded message, winding up by saying, "Heil Hitler and White Power."

Late Monday afternoon, Chicago bomb squad personnel inspected a package being held at a post office for Frank Collin, head of the National Socialist Party of America. Like the others, it was a cigar box containing black powder explosive. "It was made to kill or maim the person who opened the box," said Donald Kennedy of the Chicago Bomb and Arson unit. Collin had threatened last year to hold a Nazi march in the heavily Jewish community of Skokie, Ill., but it never came off.

A caller to the New York bureau of The Associated Press claimed on Saturday that bombs had been "sent to Nazi war criminals across the United States." The caller said the first would go to Tscherim Soobzokov, a former Nazi SS officer, who received a cigar-size bomb Friday at his Paterson home.

On Monday, a man — who like the caller on Saturday claimed to represent the International Committee Against Nazism — called the AP about "four more bombs," mentioning Cicero, Chicago, Lincoln and Arlington, Va.

tually inherited" the scandal and secret projects and were not responsible for any of the irregularities.

The commission detailed several cases of fraud and massive theft by top officials of the Information Department, including Rhoodie, his wife and two brothers and J. Van Zyl Alberts, former publisher of the secretly funded "Citizen" newspaper and "To The Point" magazine.

"The biggest problem the commission had in its investigation was the tendency of the witnesses to cover up and to spin a web over unpalatable facts in a variety of ways.

"....Because he (Vorster) did not reveal irregularities that came to his attention, concealed them from the Cabinet and delayed, for this considerable period, taking purposeful steps to put an end to this wrong state of affairs, he is jointly responsible for the fact that the irregularities continued, including the 'Citizen.'"

The report also suggested that in his attempts to cover up the scandal, Vorster may have been blackmailed by Rhoodie, who according to another witness "threatened to bring the government down if action was taken against him."

The commission failed to shed any light on claims made by Rhoodie abroad that he had paid money out to politicians and labor unions, including unnamed ones in the United States.

The clouds and high humidity today will make Lubbock's expected afternoon top temperature of 80 seem even warmer. Tonight's low will be near 60 degrees. The high Wednesday will be 85.

Elsewhere in Texas, a funnel cloud was sighted near Big Bend National Park east of Lajitas. A radar report indicated the storms near the cloud were of an extreme intensity. However, no damages or injuries were reported.

A severe thunderstorm with damaging winds struck Presidio Sunday afternoon, destroying three trailer homes and damaging numerous others, as well as houses.

The storm was accompanied by lightning, thunder and three inches of rain, which left unpaved roads badly damaged.

An upper-level disturbance approaching the South Plains from the west will maintain the threat of showers and thunderstorms through tonight.

Truckers Gather In Capital

Transportation and Interstate Commerce Commission.

In addition to rolling back the cost of fuel, which they say has soared as high as $1.14 a gallon in some areas, the truckers want guaranteed 100 percent fuel allocations. Other sore spots are weight limits that vary from state to state and the 55 mph speed limit.

But while many dissidents were urging a shutdown, Mike Parkhurst, president of the Independent Truckers Association, said, "We have not come to the point that we are going to organize a nationwide truckers shutdown.

"I can't see dropping a bomb on Bora Bora when you can put in a landing party where the guys are armed with spears. But unless something happens soon, it's going to be absolute hell out there on the highways."

The Independent Truckers Association has about 30,000 members, Parkhurst said, some 30 percent of all the independent owner-operators.

About 350 truckers from 13 states vowed Sunday in Sioux City, Iowa, to park their rigs indefinitely. All the major truck stops in Tulsa, Okla., were shut down Monday, either voluntarily or involuntarily, and another was blockaded in Oklahoma City.

Between 30 and 40 tractor-trailers blocked the pumps at the Calumet Union 76 Truck Stop at South Holland, Ill., allowing only emergency vehicles to enter or leave. Police were on hand and an attendant said the protest was peaceful, although business was "at a standstill."

"Those drivers who are out on the road have until midnight Wednesday to get home," said Jim Archer, president of the Colorado Independent Truckers Association.

"We're going to try to get as many truck stops as possible to go along with us this time. If they do, any trucker out there on the road after Wednesday may have trouble finding fuel."

Another truckers' organization called the Independent Double-O Union of America, which claims 2,500 members, mostly in the southeast, had set a strike deadline for midnight Friday.

Anti-Samoza Guerrillas Press Attack

Sandinista National Liberation Front guerrillas reportedly controlled Chichigalpa, 85 miles northwest of Managua, and were fighting the national guard in Leon, the country's second-largest city five miles south of Chichigalpa.

Heavy fighting was reported in the south along the border with Costa Rica, where the guard said it had launched a major offensive to crush the rebel drive.

There were no casualty reports.

Scattered clashes were reported in Managua, where the usually bustling streets were quiet because markets, taxis and bus drivers heeded the strike call.

Cities to the south and southeast of the capital were deserted and all stores were closed, witnesses said, but it was not immediately known if all cities were heeding the strike call, similar to one last fall that caused economic chaos in this Central American nation.

The Sandinistas led a two-week national rebellion last year to overthrow Somoza, but despite the general strike then, and national battles that left an estimated 1,500 dead, the guard prevailed.

The opposition newspaper La Prensa said its correspondent in Chichigalpa managed to send a note out with someone leaving the city saying it was still under the control of Sandinistas Monday morning.

The rebels were reported controlling all parts of the city except the national guard compound. Somoza told reporters the city had been recaptured by guard forces late Sunday.

Ex-Politico May Lose Parole

WASHINGTON (AP) — A unanimous Supreme Court ruling raised the possibility Monday that former Newark, N.J., Mayor Hugh Addonizio may have to return to federal prison after two years of freedom.

The high court ruled in Addonizio's case that a sentencing judge's expectation of how long a convicted criminal will serve cannot override the decision of parole officials.

In essence, the justices said Addonizio should not have been released after serving five years of a 10-year prison term for extortion conspiracy just because the sentencing judge had not anticipated a denial of early parole.

U.S. Attorney Robert Del Tufo in Newark said he planned no further action in Addonizio's case until he hears from the U.S. Parole Commission. A commission spokesman in Washington said a hearing most likely would be held, but that no date had been set.

The court's decision limiting a federal judge's post-sentencing powers also raised the possibility of a return to prison for two other former New Jersey public officials, former Jersey City mayor Thomas Whelan and former City Councilman Thomas Flaherty.

In other cases Monday, the justices took these actions:

—Ruled unanimously in an Illinois test case that a person who breaks two laws with one crime may be prosecuted under the law carrying the more severe penalty.

—Decided, on a 5-4 vote, that a New York state law allowing prosecutors to charge all persons in a car with possession of any dangerous weapon found in it was valid in the case of three men arrested along the New York Thruway in 1973. The ruling reinstated the men's convictions for gun possession.

—Left intact a lower court's ruling that unions may not expel members for espousing communist doctrine.

—Agreed to decide whether the California brewery industry must defend itself against a lawsuit charging that it discriminates against blacks.

—Refused to hear arguments by the Formica Corp. aimed at blocking the government's taking away its "Formica" trademark. The cancellation proceedings now will continue, while the trademark remains intact.

—Rebuffed an Alabama prisoner's contentions that his religious beliefs as an Orthodox Jew were violated because prison officials forced him to shave and cut his hair.

Addonizio was freed from prison in 1977, five years after he began serving a 10-year term for his role in a conspiracy to extort about $241,000 from contractors doing business with the city of Newark.

Addonizio, a member of Congress for 14 years, served as Newark's mayor from 1962 to 1970.

He was released from prison on the ground the sentencing judge had expected that the former mayor would be paroled after serving about one-third of the maximum term.

U.S. District Judge George Barlow, who has since died, set aside his original sentence and two years ago resentenced Addonizio to the five years and two months he had served in the federal penitentiary at Lewisburg, Pa.

The judge's action was taken after the U.S. Parole Commission refused to release Addonizio, citing the severity of his crime.

Whelan and Flaherty, who were convicted on corruption charges in an unrelated case, won their freedom in 1978 after serving seven years of respective 15-year terms.

They had been convicted of extorting at least $1.2 million from Jersey City contractors.

The Parole Commission also refused to free them from prison, but U.S. District Judge Vincent P. Biunno, in effect, overrode the commission's ruling.

Writing for the Supreme Court, Justice John Paul Stevens said, "The judge has no enforceable expectations with respect to the actual release of a sentenced defendant short of his statutory term."

Justices William J. Brennan Jr., a former New Jersey Supreme Court member, and Lewis F. Powell Jr., who missed arguments in the parole cases because of illness, did not participate in Monday's decision.

U.S. Plans To Propose Whaling Moratorium

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States will propose a worldwide moratorium on all commercial whaling, the U.S. commissioner of the International Whaling Commission said Monday.

But such a move would not affect Alaskan Eskimos, who are allowed to catch a limited number of whales for their subsistence.

Richard A. Frank, in testimony before a House Merchant Marine and Fisheries subcommittee, said the commercial moratorium would be put before the commission's next meeting in July. Passage, however, will not be easy, he acknowledged.

He added, the United States has not officially offered such action because of attempts to reach a compromise between countries favoring strong protection for the mammals and the whaling nations.

The United States permits no whaling within its 200-mile ocean zone.

Another witness, Alan Macnow, the public relations representative of the Japan Fisheries Association, said he opposes any moratorium on whaling.

"I am afraid that a moratorium on whaling, even though accompanied by severe penalties for violations, would only serve to enrich the outlaw whalers and encourage their proliferation," said Macnow.

Japan, one of the 19 countries in the International Whaling Commission, has come under criticism for buying whale products from non-member nations that allegedly violate conservation programs set up by the commission.

About 87 percent of all known whaling is conducted by commission members.

Frank said there are indications Chile and Peru will join the commission shortly, and if that happens the catch by non-members will be less than 10 percent of all whales taken.

Frank said the United States has supported the idea of a 10-year commercial whaling mortorium at every commission meeting since 1974. Frank said the moratorium, if approved by the commission, would be in effect until several conditions are met, including the ability to gather accurate data which assures that whale stocks are not in jeopardy.

The moratorium would also remain until member countries of the commission no longer import whale products from non-members, Frank said.

The commission, which started in 1948, tries to save the diminishing whale populations by limiting how many of the mammals may be harvested.

HI THERE, PAL! — Joe Davis, superintendent of mammals at the Brookfield Zoo, near Chicago, holds a rare, male, spot-necked otter, which he is hand raising. The 8-week-old otter is one of seven in the United States, and a member of a breed that is headed for the endangered species list. Davis is raising the otter, a native of Africa, in hope of learning to breed them in captivity. (AP Laserphoto)

Zoo Superintendent Baby's 'Otter' Mother

BROOKFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Ghuba, a baby spot-necked otter, is considered so rare at Brookfield Zoo that a superintendent takes the little fellow home every night for bottle feedings and other mother otter responsibilities.

Joe Davis, superintendent of mammals, has been studying behavior patterns of otters for 14 years. He says the seven spot-necked African otters at the zoo are the only ones in captivity in the United States. They are kept next to Davis' office and are not on public display.

Ghuba was born two months ago and Davis soon became its babysitter.

"It has given me a chance to make a thorough study of such an otter from babyhood, and I plan to continue the personal study through his adult life," Davis said Monday. "The little fellow is fed every two hours during the day while I am at work. I take him home at night and give him his last bottle feeding of the day at midnight while watching television. It lasts him until 7 a.m. He takes about 8 ounces of a special formula every day."

Davis, who lives alone, said Ghuba has begun to follow him around and "is at the stage of knowing I am a person and a friend."

"He is playful. I hand-wrestle him in the evenings. I'm trying to teach him to swim. He is dog paddling, but it won't be long until he is swimming like other otters. Baby otters know how to swim, but they don't know they know how to swim," Davis said.

He said the spot-necked otter is headed for the endangered species list and his "socializing process" with Ghuba will help in efforts to learn how better to breed the animals.

When Ghuba grows up he will weigh from 15 to 20 pounds and be about 3½ feet long. The American otter weighs up to 30 pounds and is 4 feet long.

"Otters are very smart but stubborn," said Davis. "Several years ago I had one in my home that I tried to break from making a latrine under my bed. Nothing seemed to work. Finally, I growled at it and she growled back. I had established communication. And through variations of growls we got along much better. She became house broken.

"But that was a South American otter," said Davis. "I'll have to learn the African growl to communicate with Ghuba."

Truck Driver's Trial Delayed

COLORADO CITY (UPI) — The involuntary manslaughter trial of a Snyder man, charged in connection with last December's truck-school bus crash near Roby that resulted in five deaths, was delayed Monday by another trial.

Courthouse officials said a rape case, scheduled for trial the same day as the trial of William Clarence Dixon, 22, took precedence over Dixon's trial and would be heard first.

A May 29th change of venue order by 32nd District Judge Weldon Kirk of Sweetwater moved Dixon's trial 40 miles southwest of Roby, the site where it had been scheduled.

On May 8, Kirk denied a defense motion for a change of venue, but when prosecution opposition to that motion was lifted May 29, Kirk ordered the trial moved to Mitchell County.

Kirk told prospective jurors in the Dixon case Monday to be ready at 9 a.m. Wednesday should the rape trial be concluded. If Dixon's trial is delayed beyond next week, one court source said, it might not be rescheduled until next month.

Kirk has ordered attorneys and courthouse personnel to refrain from discussing the case with reporters.

Dixon is charged with three counts of manslaughter in connection with the Dec. 8 collision of an oilfield service truck and a McCaulley High School bus that occurred 11 miles west of Roby on U.S. 180.

Four persons — all students — were dead at the scene of the wreck at FM 611 and U.S. 180, and 21 others were injured. A fifth student, 16-year-old Kathy Wilkerson, died three weeks after the crash in an Abilene hospital.

In addition to criminal charges, the young truckdriver faces 16 civil suits filed by the families of survivors and the parents of the four girls and one boy who died in the crash.

The Caribbean island of Aruba is about 20 miles long and six miles wide. It had 262,000 visitors in 1978.

MX Missile Decision Due

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter met Monday in an unannounced session with his military advisers, moving toward a final decision on whether to build the MX mobile missile.

And his national security assistant, Zbigniew Brzezinski, said in a news conference the president and his aides "hope to move on this matter expeditiously but also responsibly."

Another senior White House official predicted an announcement of the president's decision would be made before Carter confers with Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev beginning June 15 in Vienna.

Carter's meeting Monday, confirmed by a White House official who asked not to be identified by name, was kept off the president's public schedule. Defense Secretary Harold Brown and Gen. David Jones, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, attended the meeting.

Another such session is likely, perhaps as erly as Tuesday, the White House official said. Both Brown and Jone will accompany Carter to Vienna, an indication that the talks there, where Carter and Brezhnev are to sign the new strategic arms limitation treaty, will deal heavily with military matters.

Under the arms treaty, the United States will be allowed to produce one new missile system.

The MX, which could be installed in underground railroad cars or moved about into hidden, underground silos, is a leading candidate.

Airliner's Tires Explode

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A Los Angeles-bound American Airlines Boeing 727 made an emergency stop at nearly full takeoff speed, Sunday, when two tires under its left wing exploded and burst into flames, authorities said.

Three of the 114 persons aboard Flight 119 were treated for minor injuries sustained during their evacuation from the plane's emergency chutes. Following the 5:55 p.m. incident at Will Rogers World Airport here, most of the passengers were taken to a terminal to await the arrival of a substitute plane.

Airport firefighters extinguished what they said was "a small fire" following the accident.

Riley Fitzhugh, American's district manager, said the use of the emergency chutes is a standard procedure in such instances.

Airline officials had not determined the cause of the tire blowouts late Sunday, he said.

"It shook the soup out of us," said David Kirchman of Bartlesville. "We were very fortunate it blew when it did."

The plane had nearly reached takeoff speed when the tires exploded and it began to shake violently, according to members of emergency ground crews who witnessed the accident.

Because firefighters had seen the blowouts occur, emergency equipment was on the scene.

Dear Henphills,

Dad has this one pair of shoes that he loves to wear when he comes home. They're comfortable, he says...sure they are, I say...because they're absolutely falling apart. They look terrible. Mom says they've overstayed their welcome. Isn't there a man's shoe that's casual, comfortable and still reasonably good looking!

Signed,
For Feet's Sake

Dear For,

Here's the perfect answer for an old softie ... Florsheim's crepe soled, golden, waxed, glove leather casuals. They're specifically designed to be nothing but comfortable and still manage to look great. 51.95

The Sooner
The Better

DICK TAMBURO LOOKED across his desk at the young man and asked, "If we were to work out a deal, when could you come to work?"

The man looked at his watch, then replied, "I guess in about five minutes."

"Well, I'm offering you the job; how about going to work Monday?"

And, Jim Garner said Monday as he sat in his new office, "It was that quick. And I thought I was going to Colorado."

well acquainted with Southwest Conference athletics and its people and who had to travel only 110 miles south to come to work.

There could have been a touch of continuity in Tamburo's question about coming to work, as Garner replaced Johnny Owens, whose last day on the payroll was last Thursday. The Tamburo-Garner, question-and-answer session was Friday afternoon.

And by Monday afternoon, Garner had settled into his office in the business building-lettermen's lounge at the north end of Jones Stadium. Although he had work in front of him, he had difficulty keeping his eyes off the AstroTurf layout to the south of him.

HE SWUNG AROUND from the stadium setting: "I can't stop looking at this stadium. The guy who designed these floor-to-ceiling office windows, I'll buy him a steak. This is a beautiful layout," said the new assistant AD. "I just hope I can get some work done."

What work Garner will be doing has to do with the business part of the Tech athletic department.

When Tamburo came in last summer, he indicated that he would add one or two assistant ADs. After taking over, he designated John Conley as assistant AD and later added the title for Owens, who had been, first, academic counselor, then director of the stadium option sales.

Later, the duties were divided, with Conley overseeing the athletic facilities and Owens the business affairs with his office in the new ticket office.

GARNER HAD SPENT nine years as sports information director at TCU, then after leaving the TCU campus, had latched onto a combination SID-promotions-administrative post with the West Texas State athletic department.

But, last winter, Garner suddenly found himself without a job, as the WT Board of Regents eliminated his position as well as that of athletic director.

The AD, Dick Dietl, is on the WT payroll through this summer, but Garner's pay stopped in February. At that decisive winter meeting, Garner, two football assistant coaches and two employes in the business-ticket office were dropped.

"About that time, I got some feelers about a job at Colorado State," Garner commented Monday. "And, I probably would have taken it. But, they kept dragging their feet. Then, I heard about Johnny Owens' resignation at Tech, and a few weeks later, I just decided to write Mr. Tamburo. I thought, all it will cost me is a 15-cent stamp. So, I wrote him, and then just about forgot it."

"Two weeks ago today (Monday), Mr. Tamburo called and said he would like to visit. And that's the way it was."

"IT'S SOMETHING THAT, even while I was at TCU, I was impressed with Tech. Even though I was raised in East Texas (graduating from Tyler Lee High School), I had worked for newspapers at Lamesa (sports editor and then managing editor), Abilene, and Fort Worth before going to TCU.

"So, West Texas (the area) was in my system. And I see Tech as having the potential of an Arkansas or Nebraska, kinda having its own area for drawing fans.

"I had wanted to stay in athletics, and Dick Dietl had given me a chance to handle some administrative duties at WT. Last fall, he was gone two weeks during football season when I ran the show. So I got a little taste of setting up travel and accomodations. I liked it," said Garner.

The new Raider official said he

CONNORS POWER — A powerful backhand from Jimmy Connors of the United States sends Spain's Manuel Orantes running during the final set of their match at the French Open in Paris Monday. Connors defeated Orantes 4-6, 6-1, 6-3, 6-1 to advance to the quarterfinals. (AP Laserphoto)

Connors Leads Net Hopefuls

PARIS (AP) — Jimmy Connors warmed up after a slow start Monday to defeat Manuel Orantes of Spain 4-6, 6-1, 6-3, 6-1 and became the third American to reach the quarter-finals of the French Open Tennis Championships.

Vitas Gerulaitis and Eddie Dibbs were also in the last eight, and Gene Mayer was still battling for a place. So the United States had high hopes in a tournament which no American has won since Tony Trabert did in 1955.

Dibbs played a patient baseline game on the slow clay of the Roland Garros Stadium and outlasted Wojtek Fibak of Poland 4-6, 6-4, 6-1, 1-6, 6-4.

Jose Higueras of Spain won a long see-sawing match aginst young American Eliot Teltscher 6-3, 6-4, 3-6, 1-6, 6-3. Victor Pecci, the big hard-hitting player from Paraguay, crushed Harold Solomon, one of America's best slow court specialists, 6-1, 6-4, 6-3.

The quarter-finals lineup had top-seeded Bjorn Borg going against Hans Gildemeister of Chile, Connors against Dibbs, and Gerulaitis versus Higueras.

Pecci was to meet the winner of a match between Gene Mayer and Guillermo Vilas of Argentina.

The torrid heat of Sunday gave way to cooler weather Monday. The Connors-Orantes match began brilliantly in the late afternoon, with the Spaniard serving well and delighting the 17,000 fans on the center court with his stylish strokes.

But the evening became chilly and Orantes visibly weakened. After the first set he put on a sleeveless sweater.

His first service disintegrated and he slowed down as Connors warmed up. The match turned around in the fourth game of the second set, when Connors broke service for a 3-1 lead.

That game went to three deuces, and Orantes got only one first service in. It finished with the Spaniard standing still as Connors stroked a forehand down the line.

Orantes never recovered his mobility or the sparkle of the first set. Connors raced about like a greyhound, grunting and roaring as he hit the ball harder and harder.

Orantes was battered into submission. He dropped service at the start of the third set with weak forehands from his baseline as Connors forced him back.

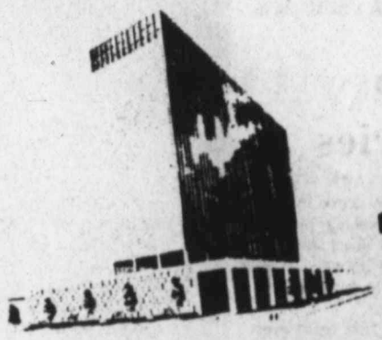

The Spaniard came to life briefly at the start of the fourth set, breaking service with a fine running forehand pass. But Connors won every game after that.

Bosox Wallop Texas; Astros Shutout Phillies

By The Associated Press

Jim Rice and Carl Yastrzemski triggered an eight-run fifth inning with consecutive homers and Rick Burleson capped the explosion with the first grand slam of his career Monday night, powering the Boston Red Sox to a 13-5 victory over the Texas Rangers.

Rice, who also had a double and a triple, drove in three runs and scored three. Yastrzemski also had three RBI with his 391st career homer, a sacrifice fly and a grounder.

Burleson, who started Boston on the way to a three-run first inning, unloaded his bases-loaded homer over the lft field screen off Dave Rajsich, the third Teas pitcher in the fifth.It was the Boston shortstop's third homer of the season.

The Red Sox, who had only five homers and a .233 team batting average on a 5-6 road trip completed Sunday, broke loose for 13 hits, including three by Fred Lynn and two each by Burleson, Yastrzemski and Carlton Fisk. Every Boston starter, with the exception of the pitcher, scored at least once.

Dock Ellis, 1-4, was pounded for eight hits, including the homers by Rice and Yastrzemski with one out in the fifth.

Mike Torrez, 5-3, got the victory, pitching the first seven innings, allowing eight hits, including a homer by John Ellis. Reliever Jim Wright finished up, surrendering a two-run homer to Johnny Grubb in the ninth.

ASTROS 3, PHILLIES

Houston's Jose Cruz and Craig Reynolds smashed run-scoring hits in the fourth inning and rookie Randy Niemann hurled a six-hitter as the Astros defeated the Philadelphia Phillies 3-0.

It was the seventh straight triumph for the hot Astros and the eighth loss in nine games for the slumping Phillies.

Terry Puhl led off the Houston fourth with a double and Reynolds singled to score Puhl. Cruz then gave the Astros a 2-0 lead with his fifth triple of the season to the right-center field fence.

Houston added a run in the seventh when rookie Jeff Leonard doubled down the right field line and scored on a two-out single up the middle by pitcher Alan Ashby.

Niemann, 2-0, retired 16 of the first 18 batters he faced. It was his second victory since joining the Astros May 18.

BREWERS 6, WHITE SOX 0

The shutout was the third of the season for Caldwell, 6-4, in 12 starts. He has nine complete games.

Paul Molitor began the game with a triple off Ross Baumgarten, 5-3, and Cecil Cooper walked. Molitor was erased in a rundown when Sal Bando grounded to Baumgarten, but Sixto Lezcano walked to load the bases and Oglivie blasted his 11th homer of the season into the lower deck in right field.

METS 6, REDS 2

Joel Youngblood cracked a home run and scored three times as the New York Mets beat the Cincinnati Reds and Tom Seaver 6-2 Monday night behind Crai Swan's five-hitter.

Youngblood, who hit his home run in a three-run ninth, had scored twice earlier as the Mets got three runs off Seaver, 2-5, who went seven innings — his longest stint since injuring his back April 19.

EXPOS 8, BRAVES 1

Lee, 6-2, struck out only one batter in reaching the milestone and handed the struggling Braves their seventh defeat in eight games.

Gary Carter drove in three rus with a pair of run-scring singles and his 10th homer of the season. Rodney Scott had a two-run double.

ORIOLES 3, TWINS 2

Lee May's tie-breaking single in the 10th inning gave the Baltimore Orioles a 3-2 victory over Mike Marshall and the Minnesota Twins Monday night.

Mark Belanger drew a leadoff walk from Marshall, 8-5. With Ron Jackson charging in, anticipating a bunt, Ken Singleton ripped a single off the first baseman's glove.

DODGERS 4, PIRATES

Rookie Rick Sutcliffe pitched a four-hitter and Joe Ferguson rapped a two-run homer to lead the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 4-2 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates Monday night in a regionally-televised game.

Sutcliffe, 6-3, notched his fifth victory in his last six decisions as the Dodgers rebounded from three straight defeats over the weekend in St. Louis.

Ferguson's second-inning homer off loser Jim Rooker, 2-1, followed a two-out walk to Dusty Baker. It was Ferguson's eighth homer of the season.

In the Los Angeles third, Dave Lopes singled, took third on a single by Reggie Smith and scored on Steve Garvey's double.

YANKEES 8, ROYALS 3

Tommy John became the first 10-game winner in the major leagues Monday night, pitching the New York Yankees to an 8-3 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

John, 10-1, scattered six hits and benefitted from a seven-run Yankee explosion in the sixth inning against Rich Gale, 5-4.

Willie Randolph's bases-loaded triple was the big hit in the Yankees sixth. Graig Nettles, who had two hits in the inning, started it with a double and scored the first run of the burst on the third double of the game by Chris Chambliss. That run put New York in front 2-1.

Following the triple, which made it 6-1, Randolph scored on a wild pitch.

Lipscomb Takes Series

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Outfielder Mike Cunningham drove in four runs and reliever Kal Koenig pitched three strong innings as local favorite David Lipscomb College defeated High Point 5-4 Monday night to win the 23rd annual NAIA World Series.

David Lipscomb, the first team ever invited to the NAIA tournament, captured its second national baseball crown in three seasons. The Bisons also won the tourney in 1977.

Cunningham doubled home a pair of runs to snap a 1-1 tie in the fourth and his two-run double in the sixth gave Lipscomb all the runs it needed.

Koenig, selected to the all-tourney team and chosen most valuable player, relieved Lipscomb starter Tim Pardue with two on and no out in the seventh. He gave up two runs in that frame but struck out five of the six batters he faced in the final two innings.

'The Ted Turner System' Called Wave Of Future By Media Panel

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The Ted Turner system of owning the sports teams and the television stations that show their games is the wave of the future, David Klatell, a professor of journalism at Boston University, predicted Monday.

And it will mean "the NBA as we know it will be gone," Klatell warned during a panel on television sports at the Associated Press Sports Editors Convention.

Also on the Monday morning panel were Jack Whitaker, a broadcaster for CBS, and Sid Pike, vice president and director of television operations for Turner Communications in Atlanta.

Turner owner of the Atlanta Hawks in the NBA and the Atlanta Braves in baseball, also owns WTCG, which shows games of the Atlanta teams and feeds them into a national cable system reaching 3.5 million homes.

"It's called vertical integration," Klatell said. "Turner owns the product, the teams and the station that broadcasts them. He takes money from one pocket and puts it into another pocket. That's much better than putting it into someone else's pocket."

The result of this type of cross-ownership, Klatell said, is that these local entrepreneurs are more concerned with their own teams than the overall league and discourages cooperation and aid.

"So the system of the strong teams supporting the weak teams will fall by the wayside," Klatell said. "Instead of a network TV package that financially bolsters the weak teams, all the teams will then have to fend for themselves."

Klatell figured out that if the Los Angeles Lakers, for example, put all their home and away games on the cable and charged $5 a month, they would have to reach only 600,000 homes to make the same revenue that the whole NBA currently takes in on CBS' contract with the league.

Klatell predicted that Milwaukee, New Orleans, Indianapolis and Cleveland would be out of the NBA in five years.

"No national network is going to compete for the NBA," Klatell said. "Those franchises that have survived from network money will be gone."

Whitaker said that pro basketball, which got very low ratings this season, may be like pro hockey.

"It may not be a national sport."

Whitaker agreed that cable television was on its way but said: "The networks are far from finished."

He said the commercial networks do a good job of broadcasting the live events themselves but often get caught up in trash (made for TV) sports and too many technological tricks.

"The production end has not kept pace with the technical end," he said. "The production people are humans. There are good creative minds and bland minds. We have overkilled on replay and slow motion. Sometimes all we do is show off our hardware."

He said, for example, the hours devoted to the Superbowl pregame are a joke.

"There's no creative reason and no content reason for it," he said. "We do it because we need commercials to get back our financial investment in the event."

Pike explained that his Atlanta "superstation" is free cable, deriving its money from advertising dollars because its programming now reaches a national audience.

He predicted that international competition would be the next revolution in television sports.

"The Olympics generated the need for international sports," Pike said. "Soccer will have to become the next major sport on television. Internationally, there would be no language barrier. It would be the greatest thing in terms of peace in the world."

would be working with promotions, and merchandising as well as the travel-accomodations-ticket work. And, for a change, he's looking forward to working with a winner.

He laughed. "You know, I've been in intercollegiate athletics for ten years, and only once in that time did I have a chance to work with a football team that had a winning record.

"I've never worked where we sold out a home game.

"We're going to do that the first game against Southern Cal, and I think I'll see another winning record this fall."

As he spoke, he gazed back out at the empty football stadium. He was making plans already

HAPPY NOEL — Lubbock High second baseman Noel Jaime grins broadly as he signs a national-letter-of-intent Monday to play for Lubbock Christian College. Jaime To Play At LCC

Noel Jaime, a two-time all-city and all-district 4-AAAA second baseman at Lubbock High, has become the fifth Lubbock Christian College baseball recruit of the season, reported LCC coach Larry Hays.

Jaime, a 5-6, 140-pounder, batted .517 as a junior and .411 as a senior. He also stole 25 bases this year.

Jaime is the third LHS player to sign with the Chaparrals in the last four years. Presently, Kenny Toney (Class of '76) is the starting third baseman and Ernest Day, who played for the Westerners last spring, was redshirted this year.

Jaime will be having plenty of newcomer help with the LCC baseball team. And one of the things that students will be asking around the campus is: Can an all-America javelin thrower develop into a pitcher?

Hays apparently thinks so. He signed two-time junior college all-America trackster Ricky Coskrey of Odessa College to a baseball scholarship scholarship also Monday.

Hays also inked a pair of Ranger Junior College outfielders, Danny Hemphill and Jimmy Durham, to bring to five the number of signees this summer. The first recruit was southpaw pitcher Rodney Green of Jal, N.M.

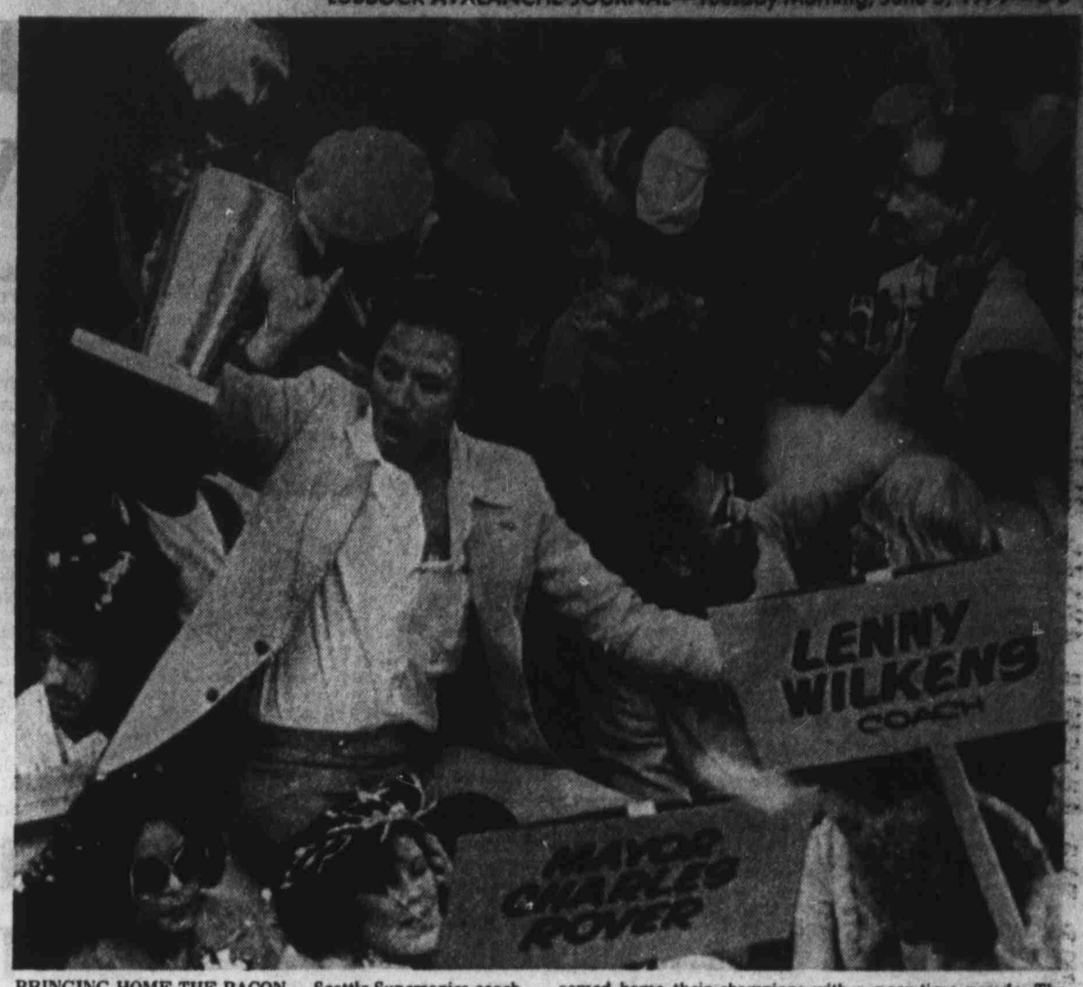

Coskrey, a 6-2, 210-pounder, is a graduate of Odessa Permian. He didn't enter college immediately after high school, but when he did, he was recruited for the javelin out of a physical education class and made all-America both years.

He tossed the javelin 209 feet as a freshman and finished fifth in the national meet at Eugene, Ore., as a sophomore last month. But, in baseball, because of his strikeout work in semipro leagues around Odessa, Coskrey received offers from Texas A&M and Pan American.

Durham and Hemphill played on teams with a 103-34 record in two years. The 1978 Ranger JC squad finished with a 60-19 record and won the national championship.

Durham is a 5-9, 155-pound centerfielder from Houston Madison. "He has excellent speed," Ranger coach Jack Allen says. "He's undoubtedly the quickest player I've ever had in my 16 years here. He can run a 6.2 60."

Hemphill, a 6-0, 170-pounder, hit .330 as a freshman. He missed two-thirds of the '79 season after suffering an ankle injury while making a catch in the opening game. He hit .317 this year but his stolen bases dropped from 31 to five.

Mariners Go First In Baseball Draft

NEW YORK (AP) — The Seattle Mariners reportedly will be looking for an outfielder with some offensive potential Tuesday when they pick first in baseball's 15th annual summer free agent draft.

Most prominently mentioned among the candidates has been Brad Komminsk, a 6-foot-3, 195-pound first baseman-outfielder from Shawnee High School in Lima, Ohio. Komminsk was on a list of players made up for consideration by Mariners director of player development Hal Keller.

That list also included right-handed pitcher Tim Leary of UCLA, and several other high school players. In addition, newspaper reports in Seattle said the Mariners were looking at outfielder Al Chambers of Harrisburg, Pa.

The draft will be held in two phases by conference call to the commissioner's office in New York from the 26 major league teams' headquarters. The regular phase, for players not drafted within the past 13 months, begins Tuesday and continues on Wednesday, if necessary.

It will be followed by the secondary phase, primarily for players previously drafted but not signed. The order of the secondary draft was drawn by lot, with Boston leading off followed by San Francisco, the New York Yankees and Philadelphia.

Seven teams — Los Angeles, Cincinnati, Oakland, San Francisco, Chicago White Sox, Detroit and San Diego — have two picks each in the first round of the regular phase, which goes five rounds. They acquired the picks as compensation for players lost in the re-entry draft.

Last year's No. 1 pick was by the Atlanta Braves, who chose National League Rookie of the Year Bob Horner.

"If we had the No. 1 choice in 1978, we could have just started looking for No. 2," Keller said. "Bob Horner of Arizona State was head and shoulders above the crowd last year. Right now, there are no Horners out there, and, unfortunately, you can't manufacture them."

McCray Inks With Tech Fem Cagers

Texas Tech women's basketball coach Gay Benson Monday announced the recruiting of one of El Paso's most versatile athletes as Gwen McCray accepted a Tech basketball letter-of-intent.

A 2-AAAA all-district basketball player for four years, Miss McCray won city and district Most Valuable Player awards and was an all-state selection last season while representing El Paso Parkland High School. She averaged 19 points, 11.4 rebounds and five assists on a team which compiled a 32-4 record.

Miss McCray, who stands 5-8, won three consecutive Class AAAA state high jump titles, and set the state record of 5-9. She has been named to the El Paso Hall of Fame for her track and field accomplishments.

However, Miss McCray announced she will only play basketball at Tech.

She is Tech's third signee, joining junior collegians Nodia Vaughn of Western Texas and Christie Newman of Amarillo College.

"Gwen is the best all-around freshman recruit we've ever signed here at Tech," Mrs. Benson said. "She has tremendous jumping ability and quickness. She has the potential for becoming an outstanding college basketball player.

"I don't know if she'll play guard or wing next year, but the way she jumps, she could even play post," Mrs. Benson said.

"Gwen played point guard, wing and center in high school," said her former coach, Larry Vanley. "She played against many six-footers, but there wasn't a girl in the city that could outjump her."

Myricks Gearing Up For Olympic Bid In Long Jump

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Larry Myricks tried the long jump in high school "just for the heck of it," and now he's only 2 feet, 2 inches away from the ultimate goal of his athletic career — the world record.

"I've jumped 27 feet, 1¼ inches and the world record in the long jump is 29-2," Myricks said Monday. "That means I'm 2 feet, 2 inches away from the record."

Myricks, who graduated from Mississippi College last month, said he would enter several meets in the coming months, running under the banner of a Gainesville, Fla., track club and to begin serious training for the 1980 Olympics in Moscow.

He climaxed his collegiate career last week by taking first place in the NCAA meet in Champaign, Ill., with a jump of 26-7. Earlier, he took NCAA Div. II honors with a leap of 26-9.

Myricks, who is 6-foot-2 and weighs 175 pounds, said he's thinking of the world record but that he has not reached the point where he can seriously challenge it.

"I know everything has got to be perfect, my speed down the runway and my technique off the board," he said. "I really think it can be done and that's my ultimate goal."

Bob Beamon set the record in the 1968 Olympics in the rarefied air in Mexico City.

Myricks said he was satisfied with his jumping, but "I'm also looking to improve. Everything looks good for the Olympics if I can stay healthy and stay in shape."

Myricks had his first chance for Olympic gold in the 1976 games in Montreal but a broken ankle during a warmup for the finals sent him home early.

"I broke my right ankle and that was the end of it," he said. "I had broken my left ankle in high school but these problems are behind me now."

This summer he plans to enter the National AAU, is committed to the World University Games and will join his track club in July for a tour of Russia and Europe.

Myricks said he experimented with the long jump in the ninth grade at Forrest Hill High School in Jackson and after a few jumps that impressed the coaches, "it dawned on me that I was pretty good. I started taking athletics seriously and now it's a pretty big part of my life."

"It takes a lot of work to become good at anything and that's particularly true in athletics," he said. "I work out an average of two hours each day and I'll be stepping that up in the future."

Myricks also handled running chores at Mississippi College and he said that training for these events had hindered him somewhat in preparing for the long jump.

"I was doing so much stuff I couldn't concentrate on the long jump but I'd have to say these other events helped give me a good background," he said

ENMU Golfers Try At Nationals

PORTALES, N.M. (Special) — Eastern New Mexico University golfers will be competing in the NAIA (National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics) National Championship today in Greensboro, N.C. The tournament ends Friday.

Thirty-four teams will be competing in the tournament, and ENMU coach Carl Richardson says he expects his team to finish in the top ten. ENMU reached the national playoffs by defeating 12 teams in District VII.

Guy Owen, a senior four-year letterman from Roswell, N.M. who won the District VII individual title by 10 strokes, will be competing for ENMU. Joining Owen will be Carlton Blewett, a junior from Roswell, N.M. who was also named to the all-district team, James Williams, a senior from Deming, N.M., Ron Harman, a freshman from Portales, N.M., and Mark Saxton, a freshman from Lovington, N.M.

Covert Takes Junior Tourney

Steve Covert of Lubbock fired a 77 to win the 16-18 years' age bracket of the Junior Tournament at the Lubbock Country Club Monday.

Brad Simnacher, also of Lubbock, won the 14-15 bracket with a 78, and Richard Ashton of Denver City captured the 12-13 bracket with an 81.

16-18
1 — Steve Covert, Lubbock. 2 — Chad Davis Crosbyton 3 — Trai Kelley, Midland

14-15
1 — Brad Simnacher, Lubbock. 2 — Grady Rogers, Lubbock. 3 — Rick Alexander, Lubbock

12-13
1 — Richard Ashton, Denver City. 2 — Grady Sanders, Lubbock. 3 — Chuck Hodges, Lubbock.

UNDETERRED — Spectacular Bid and exercise boy Robert A. Smith don't let the heavy rain and mud deter them as they work out Monday at Belmont Park Racetrack in Elmont, N.Y. Bid will be in the running for the third jewel of racing's triple crown at Saturday's Belmont Stakes. (AP Laserphoto)

Bid Prepares For Race Works Out In Mud, Rain

NEW YORK (AP) — Spectacular Bid, winner of the Kentucky Derby and Preakness, worked a mile in 1:39 over a sloppy main track Monday in preparation for this Saturday's Belmont Stakes.

After the workout, under a steady drizzle that began early in the morning, trainer Bud Delp said: "The Bid went good. He tired, but it was a tiring track."

As it shapes up now, Hawksworth Farm's Spectacular Bid could face as many as eight rivals in his quest to become the third consecutive Triple Crown winner. However, it appeared very unlikely that all those mentioned as starters actually would go to the post.

Also mentioned as entries were Bert Firestone's General Assembly, Oldknow and Phipps' Golden Act, Flying Zee Stable's Screen King, Che-Bar Stable's King Celebrity, Vila Sommer's Gallant Best, Mrs. M. Valentine's Evasive John and Harbor View Farm's Picturesque. In addition, LeRoy Jolley, who trains General Assembly, said Monday he might start Sir Ivor Again.

Delp said he planned to send Spectacular Bid out for a light gallop today, and give him a blowout toward the end of the week "because he is a big eater."

Exercise rider Bobby Smith called Monday's workout beneficial, adding: "It was just what the doctor ordered." In the 1½-mile Belmont, Spectacular Bid will be ridden by Ronnie Franklin, who was aboard in the Derby and Preakness.

Some of the more probable Belmont starters are Golden Act, second in the Preakness and third in the Derby; Screen King, third in the Preakness and sixth in the Derby, and General Assembly, second in the Derby and fifth in the Preakness. Golden Act will be ridden by Sandy Hawley, Screen King by Cash Asmussen and General Assembly by Angel Cordero Jr.

King Celebrity, who passed up the Preakness but was fourth in the Derby, still is at Monmouth Park, and his owners have not made a firm decision yet.

Trainer Frank Martin said Monday that Gallant Best would be entered only if the 111th running of the Belmont draws a small field, and Jose Martin, trainer of Picturesque, said he was still waiting final word from the Wolfsons, who own Harbor View Farm.

William Cocks, who trains Evasive John, said Mrs. Valentine was considering entering her colt in an allowance race on grass at Belmont Saturday instead of running him in the $200,000-added Belmont Stakes.

It also appeared unlikely that Jolley would enter Sir Ivor Again, who won his last race at Belmont on May 26, unless the field was quite small.

Spectacular Bid's main competition in the Belmont should come from General Assembly, a Secretariat colt who worked the mile over a fast track in 1:36 2/5 over the weekend.

General Assembly dueled Bid to the wire in the Derby. In the Preakness, he was caught in an early battle of speed with Flying Paster before falling off the pace.

Golden Act probably will breeze a half mile today, and Screen King's trainer, Luis Barrera, said his colt "couldn't be better."

Fullerton Ends Arizona Season

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Tim Wallach belted a three-run homer and a run-scoring single and Sam Favata rapped four hits as Fullerton State eliminated Arizona 16-3 Monday night in the College World Seres.

Mississippi State met Pepperdine in another elimination game later Monday night.

Fullerton, which has a .329 team batting average, broke loose for the first time in the series and collected 17 hits off three Arizona pitchers.

Wallach hammered a 3-0 pitch from loser Jeff Morris (4-5) over the right field wall in the fifth inning, his 23rd homer of the season. A .400 hitter on the year, Wallach was only 2-for-10 in the series when he connected, scoring John Christensen and Favata ahead of him to break a 2-2 tie.

Wallach also contributed a run-scoring single in Fullerton's five-run eighth inning, raising his RBI total for the year to 100. Ester Kurt Kingsolver started the scoring in the eighth by stealing home.

WBC Names Scholarships

PLAINVIEW (Special) — Wayland Baptist College has announced a number of scholarship agreements in the past week.

Tim Ross of Miami has signed to attend WBC on a track scholarship. Ross finished second in the state meet this year in the Class B 800-meter dash. His best times are 1:56.8 in the 800, 23.2 in the 200 and 50.2 in the mile relay leg.

Tommy Worsham of Carlsbad, N.M. has accepted a tennis scholarship from WBC. Worsham teamed with Tracy Peterson to finish fourth in New Mexico's Class AAAA doubles' competition this year.

Connie Crowell of Groom has signed to play basketball for the Flying Queens.

Miss Crowell, a 5-4 guard, is Coach Dean Weese's third signee this year. She joins Terri Henry of Hale Center and Chris Kennedy of Groom.

This year Miss Crowell averaged 24.1 points, six rebounds and six steals a game. She connected on 52.3 per cent of her field goal attempts and 61.2 per cent of her free throws. During her high school career, Miss Crowell averaged 23 points a game, 51.4 per cent from the field and 66.5 per cent from the line.

Mike Rhodes, a 6-6 center who earned all-region honors while at Round Rock High School, has signed to play basketball at WBC. Rhodes, a sophomore at Southwest Texas State University, will come to WBC in the fall. He will become eligible to play after 16 weeks of school and will have two years of eligibility.

Kern Honored By League

NEW YORK (AP) — Texas Rangers relief specialist Jim Kern, who had a hand in eight of his club's 17 victories in May, was named the American League's Pitcher of the Month, it was announced by league President Lee MacPhail Monday.

Kern won four games during the month and saved an equal number, without a loss, pitching 29.2 innings. He appeared in 14 games, allowed 18 hits, three runs — two earned — struck out 31 and walked nine.

The right-handed fireman's earned run average of 0.61 for the month gave him the edge over Chicago starter Ken Kravec, who was the runner-up in the voting. Kravec was 5-1 for May, with a save, in seven games. He pitched 49 innings, allowed 27 hits, 11 earned runs and had an ERA of 2.02.

Other pitchers who received votes were Rich Gale of Kansas City (5-1, 1.83 ERA, one shutout); Bill Travers of Milwaukee (3-1, 1.28 ERA, 2 shutouts); Dick Drago of Boston (1-1, 3 saves, 3.38 ERA); and April Pitcher of the Month Tommy John of the New York Yankees (5-1, 4 complete games, 2.31 ERA).

Horner Ruling Issued By Judge

ATLANTA (AP) — It may have cost young slugger Bob Horner $1 million, but the real effect of arbitrator Raymond Goetz' decision will be felt during major league baseball's amateur draft later this week, according to Horner's agent, Bucky Woy.

The Braves contend it will only effect those few players who, like Horner, would have have gone directly from amateur baseball to the major leagues without a stop in the minors. Woy claimed it would have effected "two or three dozen" players who signed major league contracts but were assigned to the farm teams.

On Monday, Goetz issued a preliminary decision in Horner's contract dispute with the Atlanta Braves, ruling that Atlanta had to include most of Horner's $160,000 1978 bonuses along with his $21,000 minimum salary into the contract offer for 1979. That means the Braves will have to pay the second-year player 80 percent of his income from the club last year. Woy said that makes Horner "the highest paid second-year player in the history of baseball."

It was the first time a player ever had contended that his bonus should be considered part of his salary, Woy said.

But Goetz denied Horner's request that he be declared a free agent and ruled that he must remain with the Atlanta club.

Woy called the decision "a hollow victory," but added that it would change the way teams handed out bonuses. "There will be a lot of teams looking at signing bonuses differently than they did in the past," Woy said in an interview from his office in Dallas, Tex.

Woy said Horner could "easily have gotten $1.2 million to $1.5 million for three (years) if he had been declared a free agent.

"There was no tampering, but we got phonecalls from half a dozen people who were in a position to know," Woy sid. "If w had been declared a free agent, I would guess that at least two dozen ball clubs would have been in the bidding."

Baseball will begin its free agent draft of high school and college players on Tuesday. It was in this draft a year ago that Horner, then a star third baseman from Arizona State, was the No.1 selection by the Braves.

He signed with Atlanta, stepped directly into the major leagues and went on to win National League Rookie of the Year honors, batting .266 with 23 home runs and 63 runs batted in while playing in just 89 games.

Horner said he was disappointed by the decision but "glad the whole thing is over."

"What we were fighting for was upheld," he said. "We fought for what we thought was right. We won everything we were fighting for."

Although he didn't look very happy, Horner said "basically I'm happy with the decision. I have to live with it."

The youngster, who was batting .297 with 5 home runs and 16 runs batted in after missing 31 games with an ankle injury, admitted he was a bit disappointed at the decision.

Brock Named NL Star of May

NEW YORK (AP) — Lou Brock of the St. Louis Cardinals, who hit .433 during the month of May, has been named National League player of the month, league President Chub Feeney announced.

Brock had 29 hits in 67 at bats, nine RBI and scored 11 runs during May in one of the best starts in his career. He needs only 54 hits to become the 14th player in major league history to reach the 3,000-hit plateau.

Brock also had three homers and stole three bases in May.

Beef Producers Study Markets

The decisions that men and women like Jack Maddux and Louise Ahart make today will determine the price of steak on your table more than two years from now.

Maddux, of Wauneta, Neb., and Miss Ahart, of Marysville, Calif., are cattle ranchers. They and their colleagues, thousands of them, are responsible for the supply — and the price — of beef. When business is profitable, ranchers expand production. They are beginning to do that right now.

But when cattle ranchers lose money — the way they say they did during much of the period from 1974 through 1978 — they cut back their herds. That leads to a decrease in supplies and the kind of increased prices consumers are seeing at the supermarket.

The cycle takes time. The calves that were born on Maddux' ranch this spring will not be ready for slaughter until early in 1981.

Maddux, who raises livestock and some corn on the farm his grandfather founded in 1881, said the ups and downs of supply and demand can be traced "back to the Civil War ... We tend to look at this as a normal process."

The ranchers say they are subject to inflation just as much as, if not more than, other Americans. "We have no guaranteed income, no cost-of-living benefits, no guaranteed price for the products we sell and no government subsidies," says Miss Ahart who is following her family in the cattle business.

Interest rates, now at high levels, are a key factor. The cattle business, said Maddux, is "capital intensive. It takes a lot of money to run a few cattle. Almost everyone borrows."

Maddux said he had several "loss years" from 1974 to 1977 when it cost him more to raise his animals than he got for them.

Profit and loss figures vary from rancher to rancher. They depend on things like the weather, on what aspect of the business the rancher is in, on whether the cattle are fed on grass or fattened on corn.

The National Cattlemen's Association says that total operating losses for the industry from 1974 to 1978 were $15 billion. The association says the average cow-calf operator, who raises calves to be sold to a feedlot, lost $261 per animal from 1975 through 1978. The situation has turned around this year but profits have not yet offset past losses; the average profit for a calf sold in the first quarter of this year was $113, the association says.

Maddux provided a look at some of the economics of the industry, starting with a calf born in the spring. (Note: These figures are examples only; prices and practices vary widely.)

A newborn calf weighs about 60 pounds; the rancher's investment in the calf — in the mother cow, in feed, in his or her land, in interest payments — is $200 at the time of birth.

The calf is nursed by its mother until October when it weighs about 400 pounds. "Weaning is traumatic," said Maddux. "There are tremendous added costs in terms of death, sickness and weight loss." By the time the weaned calf is sold to a grower, the farmer's investment in the animal is $275 to $300.

The grower feeds the calf on roughage during the winter and then on grass through the spring and summer, adding another 300 to 350 pounds in weight. The cost to the grower is about $125 to $130, Maddux said.

When the calf is a year and a-half old, the grower sells it to a feedlot operator. The total investment in the animal up to this point is $400 to $430, up to $60 of which may be interest paid by the farmer and the grower, according to Maddux.

Next comes the feedlot operator. His profit or loss depends partly on the cost of corn, which was high in the early 1970s, but has declined in recent years. Maddux said the calf remains in the feedlot for four or five months, gaining between two and three pounds a day at a cost of about $200.

The investment in the steer sold for slaughter is $630. At present prices — choice, grain-fed steers now are selling for nearly $800 — the business is profitable for the calf raiser, the grower and the feedlot operator. But Maddux is quick to point out that the profits have to be reinvested if ranchers want to stay in business. And if ranchers do not stay in business, supplies will continue to decrease and prices will continue to increase.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

COTTON'S ECONOMIC OUTLOOK has improved considerably in recent months with prospects now pointing to an 18-year high in exports and a strong finish in domestic consumption.

This was reported to National Cotton Council directors at the spring board meeting last week in Memphis.

Dr. Arlie Bowling, the council's economics director, said total export commitments could well exceed 7 million bales before the season's end July 31. If actual shipments continue at the same pace averaged during the past 10 weeks, the season's exports would top the U. S. Department of Agriculture's 6.3-million-bale estimate by about 100,000 bales.

"This would be the highest level of U. S. cotton exports since 1960-61," Bowling said.

IT ALSO WOULD MEAN THAT EXPORTS would match domestic consumption for the first time in 40 years, said David C. Hull, director of the council's foreign operations. He outlined activities underway to keep cotton's momentum going in overseas markets, including the recent opening of Cotton Council International's new office in Hong Kong, increased visits by U. S. cotton trade teams, and orientation tours of the U. S. Cotton Belt by foreign customers.

On the domestic side, council economists believe consumption may reach 6.4 million bales this season despite disappointing rates in February and April caused by mill shut-downs due to snow and holidays.

— A better competitive price situation.

LOOKING AHEAD, THE ECONOMISTS SEE favorable prospects for exports in the 1979-80 season and good indications that cotton's improved competitive position in the domestic market will continue.

Bowling pointed out, however, that cotton demand prospects are clouded by economic uncertainty. "It's hard to sustain growth when consumer purchasing power is being eroded by inflation, as it has been in recent months," he said.

Another uncertainty hanging over cotton's future is the outcome of court suits testing the stringent dust standards issued by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration. Gaylon Booker, the council's assistant economics director, said an appeals court ruling on the general industry standard could come as early as this month or as late as next year.

Booker reported that an encouraging development occurred last week when the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans ordered a stay of the gin standard pending judicial review. He said this was especially good news since the standard's burdensome medical surveillance and respirator requirements would have become effective Sept. 4.

While a date has not been set for oral argument in the ginning industry suit, Booker said it probably would be scheduled for some time during the July-September period.

IN A SERIES OF OTHER WIDE-RANGING reports, council directors heard that:

— Five new cotton insecticides already have been registered this year, compared with none in either 1977 or 1978.

— The Producer Steering Committee's recent two-day meeting in Washington helped to bring about favorable developments in several key legislative areas affecting the cotton industry.

— Chances are good that Congress will restore cuts in federal cotton research and make other changes to strengthen agricultural research and related activities.

— A hard-hitting program is being carried out by the council's public relations department on the need to get more reason into the way government regulations are issued and applied.

— High priority is being given to identifying sources of bale contamination and to developing more uniform bales that are compatible with textile mills' automatic feeding equipment.

COTTON FUTURES AT NEW YORK closed higher Monday in near July but other contract months were off and were generally near lows.

July rose 22 points, closing on a range of 63.45-70 cents and settling at 63.58 cents after a high-low range through the session of 63.85-62.84. New-crop December dipped 73 points and settled at 62.68 after a high-low range of 63.35-62.60.

The July-December spread went to a 90-point premium on July. Floor brokers said July appeared form on speculative short covering, while hedge selling contributed to pressure on December. Spreading activity — lifting of some bear spreads and establishment of some new bull spreads — also reportedly had an influence.

Certificated stocks — cotton certificated for possible delivery against futures — totaled 184,761 bales as of June 1. A total of 1,072 bales awaited certification while 3,994 awaited decertification.

Trading increased Friday on Telcot and totaled 3,073 bales. The basis was steady. Prices to farmers averaged 51.74 cents, or 918 points over loan values.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Soybean and grain futures set new season's highs in some contracts Monday on the Chicago Board of Trade, partly on talk of adverse weather for this year's crops.

Reports that wet fields in Southern wheat-growing areas may interfere with harvest of the winter wheat crop helped wheat futures gain up to 4½ cents in more distant contracts, which set new life-of-contract highs.

Soybean contracts covering new crop months also set new season's highs. Talk that dry weather in the Midwest could curb growth of the new soybean and corn crops played a role, analysts said.

The difference in price between nearby and more distant, or new-crop, corn contracts widened sharply, with 24¼ cents separating the price of corn for delivery this July and July 1980. Exporter buying in the more distant contracts, plus concern about growth of the new crop, were cited as factors.

House Panel Alleges Iowa Beef Misdeeds

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A House committee Monday alleged that the world's largest beef packer has restricted competition by cornering cattle supplies in the Pacific Northwest, potentially harming other packers and consumers.

In a telephone survey last month, Small Business Committee investigators found that about 70 percent of beef slaughterers in Washington, Oregon, Montana and Idaho reported difficulties buying cattle for slaughter and making a profit on beef sales.

Chairman Neal Smith, DIowa, said it was highly unusual for packers to have trouble marketing beef. They are "being undersold in that area" by Iowa Beef Processors Inc., he said.

Smith said that if the "very unhealthy situation" continues in the Northwest, it will "result in an elimination of competition in the area and eventually it will hurt both producers and consumers."

Smith ordered a survey of 43 slaughterers in the four states after receiving conflicting testimony on the impact of Iowa Beef's joint venture to buy up all the cattle fattened by six feedlots for five years.

Defending the Agriculture Department's decision to drop its charges of anti-competitive activity against Iowa Beef, Secretary Bob Bergland told the committee on May 1 that "anticipated adverse economic effects" did not occur.

Two weeks later Jay Spivak, a Denver meat packer, contradicted Bergland with a report that there were serious economic problems in the Northwest.

Committee economist John Helmuth reported that 81 percent of slaughterers surveyed said the beef packing business in the area was unhealthy.

They complained of Iowa Beef's advantage gained from paying lower wages to workers.

Live Cattle Futures Close Lower

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 140 to 150 points lower with all contracts except distant August sellers over at the limit decline Monday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. The move was the second consecutive limit decline and the sixth consecutive limit move. Sales totaled 24,162 cars.

Prices tumbled to the lowest since Febraury, off 10.20 cents from the recent high. Some traders were looking for a decline of much as six cents or more from present levels. The cash connected commission house was a buyer at times on the scale down. Selling followed weak cash cattle and beef.

Wholesale beef was off 2 to 2½ at 101½ to 102 cents a pound, f.o.b. river points, which is a three-month low. Cash cattle were off $1 to $3. Slaughter was 121,000 head. About 12,000 head are expected at the major markets today.

Feeder cattle futures closed the daily limit of 150 lower with sellers over across the board. Volume was 1,397 lots with thousands of unsold offerings.

Prices skidded to the lowest since February and were down 13.70 cents from season's highs. Local and commission house selling was triggered by weakness in cash cattle and beef. Prices fell to three-month lows with beef down eight cents in just over one week. Traders were looking for several cents more loss before the market stabilizes.

Cash feeder cattle were steady to off $2 with the best top $130 per hundredweight at San Antonio. The major terminals are expecting about 1,700 head today.

Hog futures closed 65 higher to 25 lower on 6,709 contracts. Distant June was up the most at the day's high with October off the most. Earlier, December fell 60.

New season's lows were posted in October, December and April as prices slumped to the lowest since July. Selling spilled over from limit lower cattle futures and also reflected sizeable kill last week. Support was generated by light hog runs and mostly higher prices although pork products were sharply mixed at noon.

Wholesale hams were unchanged to off 2½ at 62 to 67½ cents a pound, f.o.b. river, which is the lowest since April 1977. Cash hogs were up $1 to off 50 cents with the best top $44 per hundredweight at Peoria. Kill was 324,000 head. Receipts at the major markets today are expected to total 32,000 head.

Pork belly (bacon) futures closed 95 lower in distant July to 75 higher in nearby July on 5,919 cars.

The market was down 105 to up 80 in erratic trade. New lows were posted across the board.

Selling was influenced by limit lower cattle futures which forced prices to the lowest since March, 1978, off 29.50 cents from highs.

SAVE THE GOLD AND THE GREEN
We think anyone who has been in business 50 years should say "thank you" to their customers in a special way. So, in addition to the saving-of-the-green values you always get during our Anniversary Sale, you'll receive on the keyring of your Scoggin-Dickey car, New or Used, the 1" commemorative medallion illustrated. At this time, it has a gold market value in excess of $20.00.

U.S. Publisher Accepted African Loans

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Michigan publisher John P. McGoff received $11,350,000 in loans from a secret South African propaganda fund to buy into U.S. newspapers and a British television news service, a government report said Monday.

The final report of the government's Erasmus Commission into the "infogate" scandal led to the resignation Monday of President John Vorster, a major architect of white-ruled South Africa's policy of racial separation.

It said $6,350,000 of the loans to McGoff were missing and "no one knows what happened" to the money, but it apparently was used to buy the Sacramento (Calif.) Union and 50 percent of the shares in UPI-TN, a London-based television news firm. Other shareholders of UPI-TN are United Press Interntational and Independent Television News.

McGoff could not be reached for comment. He has said before that no South African money was used in an unsuccessful attempt to buy the Washington Star.

UPI-TN issued a statement in London saying McGoff's holdings "in no way affected the control of the editorial policy of the agency."

According to the Erasmus Commission, a slush fund of $60 million to $120 million was set up by the now-defunct Information Department to improve South Africa's international image.

In a chapter dealing with McGoff, it said he was given an initial loan of $10 million in 1974 to support his bid to buy the Washington Star, with the money passed in the guise of a loan from a Swiss bank.

The Star deal fell through, and the report alleged McGoff apparently used $6 million to buy the Sacramento Union.

It said McGoff later received another loan of $1,350,000 to buy 50 percent of UPI-TN.

McGoff, 54, of Williamston, Mich., is president of Panax Corp., which owns seven daily and 25 weekly newspapers in Michian, Illinois, Florida and Virginia. He also heads Global Communicatios, which owns the Sacraento Union and other newspapers in California and Texas and the share in UPI-TN.

In Washington, Justice Department spokesman Robert Stevenson said the FBI was conducting a preliminary inquiry into the case and a copy of the Erasmus report has been requested. He said the inquiry involves the Foreign Agents Registration Act, which requires any U.S. citizen acting as an agent for a foreign government to register with the Justice Department.

JOHN P. MCGOFF

According to the Erasmus report, McGoff first visited South Africa in 1968 as a guest of Les de Villiers, an Information Ministry official, and "discovered an affinity with South Africa and her people."

It described McGoff as a friend of former Presidents Richard M. Nixon and Gerald R. Ford and said he arranged a meeting between former South African Information Minister Connie Mulder and Ford when Ford was vice president.

In the section on the Washington Star, the commission report said that in 1974 McGoff and the Information Department made an agreement that South Africa would provide $10 million and McGoff $15 million for the bid.

It said the $10 million was transferred in September 1974 to the Union Bank of Switzerland in Zurich and moved through Thesaurus Continental Securities Corp., a Union Bank subsidiary, to Global Communications.

Before the Star deal collapsed, McGoff visited South Africa and talked to Eschel Rhoodie, head of the Information Department projects, who fled when the scandal broke last year and is now abroad, the report said.

It claims McGoff discussed using some of the $10 million to buy the Sacramento Union, and Rhoodie advised the commission he agreed only to let McGoff use interest from the loan.

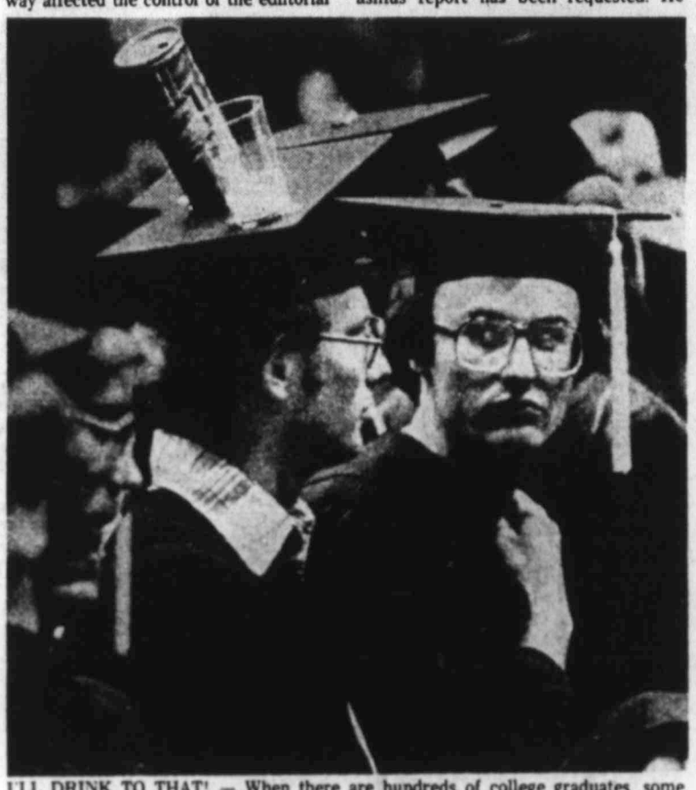

The commission said that at a meeting in Montreal in September 1976 attended by Mulder, Rhoodie and McGoff, the publisher disclosed he had used the entire $10 million for the Sacramento Union. It reported Mulder and Rhoodie said they told McGoff to sell the Union immediately and repay the money.

In the meantime, the commission said, another loan of $1,350,000 had been given McGoff to buy into UPI-TN.

Several months after the Montreal meeting, McGoff became involved in a court case that required him to reveal his assets and liabilities, and he decided to sever his ties with South Africa, the commission said.

It reported the loan was written off for $5 million and South Africa incurred $500,000 in administrative and other expenses.

The commission concluded the "lax and negligent" loan arrangements were "incredible" and said that while McGoff now owns the Sacramento Union and half of UPI-TN "there is no clarity as to whether South Africa has any right to these assets."

Many Seek Polio Immunization In Eastern Pennsylvania Area

LANCASTER, Pa. (AP) — A heavy turnout at special polio immunization clinics on Monday forced state officials to keep some of the clinics open well past their scheduled 9 p.m. closing time.

"If there are people waiting in line, we're not going to tell them to go home," said Wayne Hummer, a state health department spokesman.

"One clinic that we checked vaccinated 1,800 in four hours Sunday, and tonight the same number of people were vaccinated at the same clinic in two hours," Hummer said.

Monday was the third day of the immunization program. Health officials have called the recent polio outbreak the worst since 1972.

Nearly 87,000 free doses of pinkish vaccine were administered at 21 special clinics during the first two days of the immunization blitz, organized after the disease spread to the heart of Amish country.

The disease has paralyzed four Pennsylvanians and sickened two others since January. A total of four other active cases were reported in Wisconsin, Iowa and Canada.

All 10 of the active cases involved members of the isolationist Amish religious sect or people who had contact with the Amish, a group susceptible to the highly contagious virus because they traditionally view immunizations as an intrusion of modern technology.

Only two Amish families were among those flocking to the clinics this past weekend. But health officials have operated separate and more private clinics, immunizing about 4,000 of Lancaster County's 12,000 Amish.

The two most recent active cases were found in Lancaster County. The outbreak began in Franklin County last January when a young Amish woman was left partially paralyzed.

The Pennsylvania Department of Health conducted earlier immunization programs in Franklin County and later in Mifflin County, where three people developed active cases.

Health officials say that for every active case, there are probably up to 100 people who are carrying the polio virus and can infect others.

At the Lancaster County clinics, 30,081 people were immunized on Saturday and another 56,452 received the vaccine Sunday.

The last major outbreak of polio in the United States also involved a closed religious community that generally avoids modern medical technology.

That was in 1972, when 11 students at the Christian Science Boarding and Day School at Greenwich, Conn., came down with active polio.

The outbreak is the worst in Pennsylvania in the 16 years since 110 people cotracted the disease. The state's last documented polio case was in 1975.

The Amish maintain the doctrines and customs established at the time they separated from the main body of Mennonites in Switzerland in 1690, including refusal to take oaths, bear arms, or take human life.

Because they put their trust in God, the Amish do not insure property. That faith has been cited by some Amish to explain their reluctance to rely on man-made vaccines for the prevention of disease. They are not averse to medicine, and Amish who become ill readily visit doctors and hospitals.

And on Monday night, Dr. Albert Sabin, who developed the oral polio vaccine which bears his name, said in Pittsburgh, "Perhaps the Amish are beginning to realize that it's not the will of God that they remain unprotected."

The outbreak, he said, "shows what happens when you have a community as large as the Amish community which is unprotected."

Cracks Detected In Engine Mounts Of Airliners

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration ordered a number of DC-10s grounded Monday night after discovery of similar engine-mounting cracks in two American Airlines DC-10s and the jet that crashed last month, killing 274 people.

The cracks were found during inspections ordered by the FAA after the Chicago crash of American's Flight 191, which went down after an engine fell off. On March 30, that DC-10 had undergone the same "engine removal and reinstallation procedure" that apparently led to the cracks in the other two planes, the FAA order said.

The engine removal and reinstallation on all three planes was part of routine maintenance, it said.

Ed Slattery, spokesman for the National Transportation Safety Board, said it was conceivable the "pre-existing crack" could have caused the failure of the pylon assembly holding the engine to the wing on Flight 191, but he said the board has not yet reached a conclusion on a specific cause.

Only those U.S.-registered DC-10s which have had their engine pylons removed and reinstalled after completion of the most recent FAA-ordered inspection are affected by the directive, said FAA spokesman John Leyden. He estimated that fewer than 20 of the 137 DC-10s may be covered by the action, the third grounding in a week for some of the aircraft.

The cracks were found in the aft attachment points of the pylons, or engine mounts. Slattery said he does not believe the Chicago accident was triggered by the crack discovered on the pylon of the downed plane, but he said board members were concerned enough to recommend inspections.

Investigators found a 10-inch crack in the aft attachment point of the pylon that separated from the engine that fell from the American Airlines plane that crashed in Chicago May 25. Similar flaws were found in the other two planes.

The safety board said the cracks on the latter two planes apparently were caused during routine maintenance because personnel used improper procedures, removing the engine and its pylon in one section. It urged immediate inspection of all planes handled in this manner and recommended that in the future, the two sections be removed separately as prescribed in manuals.

The FAA complied with that recommendation and issued a maintenance bulletin to U.S. operators of 137 DC-10s, calling for them to use approved procedures in removing and replacing engines.

As a result of the Chicago crash, the worst in U.S. aviation history, the FAA already has twice grounded DC-10s operated by U.S. airlines. During the groundings, most for short periods, the planes were inspected for cracks and other flaws in the engine mounts.

All but two of the big jets were flying again Monday.

The safety board said a service bulletin from McDonnell Douglas, manufacturer of the DC-10, specifies that during maintenance the engine should first be removed and the pylon taken down separately from the wing.

"American Airlines' procedures for removing and reinstalling the pylon consisted of lowering and raising the pylon with the engine still attached, by supporting the entire assembly by a forklift placed under the engine," the board said.

Board investigators found that the forklift operator had limited control in the precise placement of the aft fitting during reinstallation of the pylon. They said slight misalignment could cause a flange on the aft fitting to strike a wing attachment, causing the flange to crack.

The board said it believes this happened to both the American Airlines' planes checked on the ground and found to have cracks in the aft mounting attachment. One plane, on which this type maintenance was last performed Dec. 7, 1978, had a two-inch crack. The other, which had engines removed March 19, had a five-inch crack.

Investigators said such cracks are difficult to detect during a routine check.

The board said it believes several DC-10 operators use the same procedure as American does for removing engines and pylons. American has 29 DC-10s.

"The safety board is particularly concerned that other aircraft in the DC-10 fleet may have been damaged and that additional aircraft will be damaged as a result of actions which are presently being undertaken to correct deficiencies during the latest required inspections," the board said.

Hunts Fail To Block Hearings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seven members of the wealthy Hunt family of Texas lost a bid Monday to have the Supreme Court block a commission's hearings intended to determine whether soybean commodity exchange laws had been violated.

Only two of nine justices voted to hear the Hunt appeal that the Commodity Futures Trading Commission's plans for administrative proceedings "undermine the integrity of the judicial process." Four votes were necessary for the court to review the case.

The high court also declined to hear the appeal of Pedro Cruz Muniz, on Death Row for the 1976 murder of a Georgetown, Texas, woman.

Lawyers for Muniz argued that the sentence was improper because a psychiatrist was allowed to testify during the trial's punishment phase about their client's "future dangerousness."

Carol Bickham was dragged into an abandoned building and beaten to death after an attempted rape. Muniz was 19 when the crime took place.

The commodity commission filed suit in April 1977 against the seven Hunts and an affiliated company, Hunt Holdings Inc., seeking to stop them from holding too many soybean future contracts.

The suit charged that the Hunts had been exceeding the commission's limit of three million bushels of soybean futures contracts that any person or affiliated group may hold.

A federal trial judge ruled that the Hunts had violated commodities law but did not issue an injunction against further excessive holdings, saying thechance of future violations was slight.

The commission then decided to start administrative proceedings aimed at halting any overspeculation in soybeans.

The Hunts argued unsuccessfully before a trial judge and the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals that the commission could not use its authority to start administrative hearings because it had gone to court.

Lawyers for the Hunts, in seeking Supreme Court review, argued: "The commission's duplicative administrative enforcement action undermines the integrity of the judicial process and impinges upon constitutional due process of the law and separation of powers."

Government lawyers said, "The court of appeals concluded that the Hunts' suit is premature because they have not exhausted their administrative remedies."

The family members who joined in the Supreme Court appeal are N.B. Hunt, W.H. Hunt, Douglas Hunt, Houston Hunt, Elizabeth Hunt Curnes, Ellen Hunt Flowers and Mary Hunt Huddleston.

Justices Lewis F. Powell Jr. and Harry A. Blackmun cast the two votes to review the case.

Lebanon Leader Escapes Assassination By Bomb

One civilian was killed in the blast, 14 were injured and four cars were burned, rightist sources said.

AFTER EXPLOSION — Pierre Gemayel, 74-year-old, right-wing Christian leader, was in a hospital, Monday, after narrowly escaping assassination when a remote-controlled bomb exploded as drove past. He and 10 pedestrians were injured. (AP Laserphoto)

His party has been feuding with other Christian factions, and enmity remains between Gemayel and he alliance of Moslems and Palestinians his forces fought in the 1975-76 Lebanese civil war. His two sons, who are Phalangist political and military leaders, were the targets of assassination attempts earlier this year.

A booby-trapped car exploded near Gemayel's American-made white Buick as he drove on the coastal highway 10 miles north of Beirut, the party's "Voice of Lebanon" radio said.

"A fire started in Gemayel's car but luckily he only suffered minor wounds in the face and the back of the head," it said.

Taken to a nearby hospital, Gemayel later declared in a radio broadcast from his bed, "I appeal to my comrades, colleagues and supporters to practice self-restraint. I call on you to forgive whoever wanted to assassinate me."

Witnesses said armed Phalangist militiamen took to the streets of the 800-square-mile Christian enclave. Traffic on the northern coastal highway came to a standstill as soldiers of a nearby army checkpoint sealed off the area and began a search.

Along the tense "Green Line" dividing Beirut into Moslem and Christian sectors, jeeps loaded with policemen patrolled major crossing points and advised non-Christians to avoid driving through the Christian sector.

The Phalangists have feuded with the rightist "Giants" brigade of former President Suleiman Franjieh, with the Armenian population of East Beirut and with the 22,000 Syrian peacekeeping troops in Lebanon.

Wage-Price Controls Considered

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of the Carter administration's chief inflation-fighters, Barry Bosworth, says mandatory wage and price controls could be "a potential option" next year if industrial wages and prices get out of hand.

Even though his statement was highly qualified, it was the first time that a high-ranking administration official has suggested publicly that controls could be an option in dealing with the current problem of inflation.

In April, Carter's top inflation adviser, Alfred Kahn, did say Americans could find themselves with mandatory controls or recession if the present voluntary anti-inflation program fails.

President Carter has said he would resort to controls only if there were a national emergency, such as an outbreak of war. Other officials, including Bosworth, also have repeatedly declared their opposition to mandatory wage and price controls.

But in an interview with the Bureau of National Affairs last week, he said in response to a question that he would be willing to reconsider his opposition to controls if "the general public would support them" and if they were necessary to combat an explosion of wages and prices in industry next year.

The Bureau of National Affairs is a business-oriented reporting and research firm. The firm said the interview will be televised at a later date by the Public Broadcasting Service.

A spokesman for the Council on Wage and Price Stability, of which Bosworth is director, said Bosworth was not discussing administration policy during the interview, but that his remarks were made in the context of "an academic discussion."

In the interview, which was lengthy and covered a wide range of subjects, Bosworth said "wage and price controls in the past have been effective for short periods of time to prevent an explosion of industrial wages and industrial prices."

"You can make them work for a period of time," he said. "That is a problem that's coming for the next year."
